Reagan holds course on missiles, Marines

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, standing firm in two key foreign policy areas, says the United States will "deploy on schedule" its modernized nuclear missiles in Europe, and that if Syria thinks it can wear him down by delaying peace talks in Lebanon, "they're going to be disappointed."

Reagan, calling Syria "a roadblock" to peace in Lebanon, said at a news conference Wednesday night the 1,600 Marines deployed in a multinational peacekeeping force will remain "as long as there's a possibility of making the overall peace plan work."

"We have made great progress there," he said.

The president said that the United States was trying to make the Marines' positions on low ground near the Beirut international airport safer. Seven have been killed, including two hit by sniper fire since Friday.

"I know the Syrians are dragging their feet" in Lebanon, Reagan said, adding that about 7,000 Soviet advisers and technicians in Syria

"are contributing to the disorder and the trouble."

But, he said, "if they're doing it with the idea of wearing me down, they're going to be disappointed."

The president said the Soviets were conducting "a great propaganda effort" in Europe to "persuade our allies to turn back and not ask us for the deployment of intermediate-range weapons."

"Well, we're going to deploy, and deploy on schedule," Reagan declared. "And once they see we're going to do that" and not disarm, "I think they're going to see that the best thing for them is to negotiate with us and in good faith."

Under a 1979 NATO plan, the United States is scheduled to deploy the first of 572 Pershing 2 and land-based cruise missiles in Western Europe in December, unless U.S.-Soviet arms talks produce an agreement on controlling medium-range weapons.

Reagan said the Soviets "may do some things, they may try, as has been rumored, (to) walk out and things of that kind. But we'll just wait at the table, and I think they'll come back."

The president said he hoped that an agreement could be reached by the end of his current term, 16 months from today.

During the nationally broadcast news conference, Reagan gave no hint about whether he will seek a second term. A re-election committee was formed with his approval on Monday, although he refuses to announce his candidacy or bow out of the race.

Quarterly deposits decrease

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

Midland bank deposits on Sept. 30, end of the third quarter, were approximately $1,381,010,000 — down $561 million from a year ago and down $320 million since last quarter.

Last year at this time, $1,942,000,000 in deposits were reported. In the second quarter this year, deposits totaled $1,701,958,000. Local bank deposits hit their highest point in history, $2,088,590,000, nine months ago.

Figures are approximate because the biggest bank in the totals, First National Bank of Midland, which recently failed, did not file a third-quarter 1983 statement. FNB figures in this report are not quarterly call numbers, but are taken from a Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. audit of FNB two weeks after the quarter's end.

Other banks did report totals for the quarter — and seven of the nine banks reported increased deposits.

Western State Bank, ClayDesta National Bank, RepublicBank Midland and First City National Bank of Midland reported $8 million, $10 million, $12 million and $19 million increases in deposits, respectively, compared to June 30.

Before it closed, First National Bank of Midland had $1.4 billion in assets, down from $1.54 billion in the previous quarter. Net loans (loans minus discounts and loan loss reserves) were $1 billion — down $360 million from a year ago's $1.36 billion and down $100 million from the previous quarter's $1.1 billion.

From $1.3 billion in deposits in the last year at this time — and $966 million in deposits last quarter — First National had $600 million in deposits remaining at the close of business Thursday.

First City National Bank of Midland showed increased deposits, up to $422.7 million from $353 million a year ago and $404 million last quarter. It has $471 million in current assets. Its $278.5 million in net loans, are down from $282 million a year ago and down from $284 million last quarter.

At Texas American Bank, deposits were $141 million for the third quarter, down from $144 million a year ago but up from $140 million last quarter. Total loans fell to $83 million from $93 million a year ago and $87 million last quarter. TAB's assets are $155 million.

Western State Bank had deposits of $65 million, up from $50 million a year ago and up from $57 million last quarter. Its expanding loan portfolio was worth $50 million, increased from both the $37 million year-ago figure and the $44 million figure last quarter. WSB assets total $72 million.

Area celebrates 'beautiful' rain

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

"It's beautiful," Midland rancher Button Estes said this morning.

For area farmers and ranchers, the long-awaited rain will be helpful — although much of the damage caused by the drought is irreparable.

"It's not running off," Estes, who received close to four inches northwest of town, said. "It's going to be a big help."

As far as being a benefit in growing grass for cattle feed, Estes said "it depends on when we have our first frost."

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, the 2.85 inches received overnight increased the monthly total to 4.04 inches. For the year, the area has now received 8.45 inches.

Between three and five inches of much-needed moisture fell north of Midland, according to Mrs. Bobby Matthews, who said she received 3.5 inches.

"Some of our neighbors north of us got almost five inches and I heard Andrews and around there got almost 7 inches, so it sounds good."

At the Andrews County Airport, the official total was 2.31 inches. In north Martin County, unconfirmed reports of up to 7 inches of rain were received at the sheriff's office.

Big Spring reported some 2.8 inches in the city while reports of up to six inches were received west of Lamesa.

Rankin rancher Dwayne Lindsey said the 2.5 inches recorded in his area, "is going to help a lot.

"It'll start some winter wheat for the sheep — that will be a tremendous help. It's awful late to help with the feed for cattle, but we don't have much cattle around here anyway."

For area farmers, the rain will help loosen the dry dirt but hail received in southeast portions of Midland County has hurt some.

"We had hail Monday afternoon that wiped out about 50 percent of the cotton that was ready to strip," Mrs. Jerome Hoelscher, who lives in Upton County, said. Ironically, she added, they "could have used the hail just for moisture" on their ranch, which received only 1.10 inches as of Wednesday.

"But then it rained all night long," she said this morning. "That'll help get the small grain up because it was just laying in the ground dormant.

"We've still got about 300 head of cattle left so we're still holding on. Surely, we'll get one fast grazing off of it."

Although the cattle won't get much feed, Mrs. Hoelscher said the cattle do "need the vitamins and minerals in the green stuff."

With 4.5 inches received at Midland Farmers Co-op, Hoot Leonard said "everybody's pretty tickled over it."

Leonard, who lives in east Midland County, said he received four inches, while the Wallace grocery store north of East Highway 80 received 5.25 inches. "It'll help for plowing, but it's too late as far as the cotton goes."

Vernon Chandler, who farms south of Midland Air Terminal, said he received almost three inches. Although he doesn't have crops planted right now, "the good part of this rain is you can plow the ground and that'll cover up the sand and keep it from blowing," he said.

"That'll be the main benefit of it," Chandler said. "But it'll help in storing up moisture for next year's crop. Most of it should be there in the spring."

More wet weather is expected with a 30 percent chance of rain and thunderstorms tonight and a 20 percent chance of more Friday.

Cool temperatures will continue, according to the NWS, with the low tonight dipping into the upper 40s and the high Friday climbing into the middle 70s.

Winds will be northerly at 5-15 mph tonight and should shift northwesterly Friday.

Elsewhere in the state, sheets of rain inundated Lubbock for a second day, forcing the evacuation of a nursing home, closing streets and area roads, and stalling numerous cars.

Weather officials said the rains would continue today, and portions of West Texas, South Texas and North Central Texas were under flash flood advisories.

The storm dumped 5.85 inches of rain on Lubbock for the 24 hours that ended at 7:17 p.m. Wednesday, the most precipitation the West Texas city has ever received in a 24-hour period. The previous record was 5.7 inches on June 7, 1967.

Reagan will accept 'symbolism' of King holiday

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the country will have to wait to learn whether slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. was a communist sympathizer. Meanwhile, Reagan says he will sign legislation creating a holiday honoring King.

Reagan, speaking at a televised news conference hours after the Senate approved the bill 78-22, made it clear he would have preferred something less than a formal national holiday. But he said he believes "the symbolism of the day is important enough that I will sign that legislation."

Reagan's comments touched on a bitter Senate debate in which conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., had claimed King was a communist sympathizer and sought to delay action on the bill until secret FBI files were released.

Asked whether he he agreed with Helms about King's alleged communist links, Reagan said, "We'll know in about 35 years, won't we?"

Actually, the FBI files won't be opened until 2027, 50 years after a federal judge sealed the files, which dealt with wiretaps of King's telephone conversations. The files were sealed after King's family sued the FBI over its activities.

Reagan added he doesn't fault Helms' "sincerity with regards to wanting the records opened up."

But at the same time, the president said there is "no way" the records can be unsealed because "an agreement was reached between the family and the government" to keep them secret another 35 years.

Reagan's commitment to sign the bill caps a 15-year struggle in Congress to honor King, who was assassinated on April 4, 1968. The final act was played out before a hushed gallery, with King's widow, Coretta Scott King, looking on.

■ Helms' stand may hurt re-election bid

Although King's birth date was Jan. 15, the holiday will be observed the third Monday in January beginning in 1986. Federal workers will have the day off, with many state and local governments and private employers expected to follow suit.

After the vote Mrs. King appeared at a news conference that resembled a locker room victory party, with dozens of cheering supporters and nearly as many television cameras crowded into a small room near the Senate chamber.

Surrounded by her son Martin III, King's sister Christine, singer Stevie Wonder, civil rights leaders and congressional backers, Mrs. King said: "We want his birthday to be more than a day of fun and games. It must be a time when all Americans and peace loving peoples all over the world reflect on the man and his principles, which ring as true today as ever."

Among those with Mrs. King as she spoke was Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., who has sponsored a King holiday bill each year since King's death in 1968.

"Every year for 15 years there were those who thought he would fade away as a temporary hero," Conyers said of King. Instead, he said, "We have the most incredible symbol that knocks down the wall of segregation."

The boisterous crowd after the vote provided a sharp contrast to the solemnity of the Senate chamber when Vice President George Bush, who was presiding, announced passage of the bill. Before he gave out the tally, he reminded spectators of the Senate rule prohibiting any display of approval or disapproval.

The House passed the bill Aug. 2 by a whopping 338-90 margin.

Before Mrs. King arrived, Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., bitterly attacked the two staunchest opponents of the bill — Helms and Sen. John East, also R-N.C. East had expressed anger with King's speeches against the Vietnam War.

Bradley, pointing to the corner gallery where he sat as a college student and watched the 1964 Civil Rights Act pass, said of Helms and East: "They are playing up to old Jim Crow and all of us know it. This holiday is their cutting issue.

"This is the one that gets the people aroused and to their feet cheering. But which people ... those who believe that America is one nation under God or those who believe that it should be two, separate and unequal. I sense it is the latter group that will rally to the call from the senators from North Carolina."

Bank deposits down $320 million

RepublicBank Midland, formerly Texas National, reported $59 million in deposits, increased from $34 million a year ago (before its acquisition by RepublicBank Corp.) and from $46 million last quarter. Assets were $64 million at the end of the quarter. Total loans in the RepublicBank Midland portfolio were up to $13.6 million from $10 million a year ago and $12 million last quarter.

ClayDesta National Bank deposits this quarter were $55 million, increasing from $45 million last quarter. The bank did not exist a year ago. It had gains in loans, also, to $31 million from $23 million last quarter. Its assets total $59 million.

Mid-Cities National Bank is making its first report, as successor of Metro Bank, which was also closed recently. Deposits at Mid-Cities were $22.6 million at the quarter, $8 million less than MetroBank's last statement. Net loans were $7.2 million — MetroBank had net loans of $26 million. Assets totaled $25 million — $10 million smaller than MetroBank.

Security National Bank, with $14 million in assets, had deposits of roughly $12 million; that is up from $2.4 million a year ago and up from $10 million last quarter. Net loans were $10 million, up from $1.5 million a year ago and up from $8 million last quarter.

Midland American Bank, with assets of $5.6 million, increased to $4.6 million its deposit total — from $2.3 million a year ago and $3.4 million last quarter. Its loan portfolio shrank $300,000 to $3.0 million, from $3.3 million last quarter. That figure is still up from $1.6 million in loans a year ago.

Robert Southerland, Texas American Bank president, said in April after city deposit totals began to drop: "If you compare everything to the peak, you're only kidding yourself, because you peak only once in any business cycle."

Bill Franklin, president of First City National, said Wednesday "Because of the lull in activity in the energy business, our business is somewhat slow. Many of our customers are building bank accounts, which contributed to our deposit increase."

Franklin noted loan demand is "very soft" with many businessmen in town having sufficient cashflow without borrowing. So loans, which would be deposited in accounts at First City for the most part, haven't been in demand and thus have not augmented deposits.

Consumer and business accounts are following the trend of the local economy, Franklin said. "They're very, very cautious."

Gemayel calls for Geneva talks

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Amin Gemayel is asking Lebanon's warring leaders to meet in Switzerland for a peace conference canceled before it could convene this morning at Beirut's airport, official sources said today.

The sources, who requested anonymity, said the United Nations complex in Geneva now appeared to be the most likely site acceptable to the eight leaders invited to discuss with Gemayel a new formula for peacefully dividing power between Moslems and Christians.

The main three opposition leaders, who are backed by Syria, rejected the airport as an unsafe site for the reconciliation conference that is intended to end eight years of civil turmoil in Lebanon.

Their rejection, announced Wednesday, was accompanied by widespread violations of Lebanon's 25-day-old civil war ceasefire in southern Beirut's Shiite Moslem neighborhoods and the Druse-populated mountains overlooking the capital. Both Shiite and Druse militiamen, with support from Syria, had battled the Lebanese army and rightist Christian militias during the civil warfare.

The hostilities Wednesday subsided when the government canceled the conference at the airport, where 1,600 U.S. Marines serving with the multinational peacekeeping force are stationed.

Police reported "isolated sniping incidents" today in a street separating the Shiite neighborhood of Chiyah and the Christian neighborhood of Ein Rummaneh, where one Lebanese soldier was reported killed and another wounded.

Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan said one Marine received a slight head wound Wednesday and three others suffered lacerated eardrums or face and hand cuts when a car bomb exploded as a convoy of four U.S. military vehicles passed the Kuwait Embassy on Beirut's southern edge.

He described all the injuries as minor. State radio said a Lebanese police guard at the embassy also was wounded.

Witnesses said the bomb, planted in a blue Mercedes, shattered the windows and flattened the front tires of a 2½-ton truck in the convoy.

The area is across from the Palestinian refugee camps of Sabra and Chatilla, and Jordan said Palestinian women and old men ran to help the Marines.

The car bomb attack brought to 60 the number of Marines injured in Beirut since the first contingent arrived in September 1982. Six Marines have been killed in combat and one was killed while disarming a mine.

Police said eight people were killed, including six civilians, and 27 injured as the Lebanese army and Druse and Shiite militiamen exchanged artillery and rocket fire in mountains east of Beirut and the shantytowns south of the city.

State-run and private radio stations said Druse and Christian militiamen fought day-long battles in the Kharroub region, just north of the Israeli army's defense line in southern Lebanon.

The reconciliation conference was called for in a September 26 cease-fire agreement that reduced but did not end heavy fighting that began three weeks earlier. Beirut has been wracked by almost continual fighting since its 1975-1976 civil war.

Bickering over a proper site so far has prevented the conference. At least 14 sites have been suggested.

U.S. Middle East envoy Richard Fairbanks and Saudi Arabian mediator Rafik Hariri are trying to break the deadlock, and state radio said they planned to fly to Saudi Arabia to consult with King Fahd.

in Washington, President Reagan left open the possibility that the Marines in Beirut might be allowed to go after snipers who attack their positions.

Asked at his Wednesday night news conference whether the Marines would be allowed to "sally forth" from their encampment around the airport, Reagan replied: "I can't answer that question right now."

Earlier, Pentagon sources said the Reagan administration was considering broadening the authority of the Marine contingent to counteract snipers who have been shooting at them from houses as close as 100 yards from the Marine perimeter.

So far, the Marines have been limited to firing back at the snipers from the present U.S. positions.

Possibility remains that Marines may pursue snipers

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is leaving open the possibility that U.S. Marines on peacekeeping duty in Lebanon might be allowed to go after snipers who attack their positions. Two leathernecks have been killed by sharpshooters in the last week.

Asked at his Wednesday night news conference whether the Marines would be allowed to "sally forth" from their encampment around the Beirut International Airport, Reagan replied: "I can't answer that question right now."

In response to another question, Reagan said, "We're looking at every option and everything that we can do that can leave us in a position to carry out the mission for which they (the Marines) were sent and at the same time make their lives safer."

Earlier, Pentagon sources said the Reagan administration was considering broadening the authority of the 1,600-man Marine contingent to counteract snipers who have been shooting at them from houses as close as 100 yards from the Marine perimeter.

"We aren't going to stand by and let our men be picked off," said one source.

Officials refused to discuss the options under study in any detail, but it was understood there was a possibility the Marines might be allowed to go after sniper nests outside the Marine perimeter around the Beirut airport.

So far, the Marines have been limited to firing back at the snipers from the present U.S. positions. After Marines were killed last Friday and again on Sunday, Marine snipers were brought in and officers at Corps headquarters say they believe between four and six of the attacking gunmen were killed.

In all, seven Marines have been killed in Beirut, including one in 1982.

Reagan said most of the threat to the Marines now is from what he called "sniper-type fire" from "civilians, from radicals, coming from residential neighborhoods where we always refrain from using artillery cover or anything of that kind."

The Marines are permitted to call in gunfire from the battleship New Jersey and other U.S. warships offshore, and to use their own artillery to strike back at hostile mortars and guns in the hills overlooking Beirut.

While airstrikes are permitted, officials said this is only done where naval gunfire and Marine artillery cannot reach.

U.S. commanders have refrained from using heavy firepower against snipers hiding out in houses that Marine officers here describe as close to the Marine perimeter.

'We're trying to keep the response at the same level as the attacking fire," said one Marine officer who declined to be identified.

Marine sources said the leathernecks have curtailed jeep and foot patrols into populated areas outside the perimeter because of the rising danger of their being ambushed and being attacked by snipers.

Among other things, officials said they would like to see the Lebanese army become more active in suppressing sniper fire against the Marines.

Helms' stand may create political pain

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. — Black leaders predict Sen. Jesse Helms' bid to block a national holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr. will badly hurt his re-election effort, but Helms' strategists say the black vote has scant impact on Republicans in North Carolina.

Ignoring Helms' charge that King had ties to "far-left elements and elements of the Communist Party USA," the Senate voted 78-22 Wednesday to designate the third Monday in January a national observance of the slain civil rights leader's birth.

North Carolina's popular Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt, who is expected to run for Senate next year and leads Helms in several polls, had not commented on the controversy and does not plan to use it as a campaign issue, the Hunt Exploratory Committee said.

But state Democratic leaders expect "thousands of white voters" to align themselves with blacks against Helms in his race for a third term, said party spokeswoman June Milby.

"When an elected representative chooses to ignore an entire segment of the population, all the people are threatened," Ms. Milby said. "Sen. Helms' actions have outraged a lot of people besides blacks and that will be apparent at the polls on election day."

"I think his unpopular stand (on the King holiday) may indicate that he has very, very serious political troubles," said Merle Black, a political analyst at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. "I think he took the tack he did to try to rouse conservative whites and get them to join together.

"But what he did may be self-defeating. It may be that he just encouraged enough blacks to register to vote to vote him out of office," said Black, predicting Helms would need 60 percent of the white vote to win re-election.

About 451,000, or 22 percent, of North Carolina's registered voters are black, and the Rev. Jesse Jackson visited the state in May to launch a drive aimed at signing up 200,000 more. About 505,000 of the state's eligible blacks are not registered.

"This has forced blacks to take a look at what Sen. Helms really stands for," the Rev. Leon White, director of the state Commission for Racial Justice, said Wednesday. "This will cost him at least 100,000 votes next year."

However, said Claude Allen of the Helms for Senate committee, the GOP traditionally gets only 2 percent to 3 percent of the black vote in North Carolina.

"How much impact can there be when Republicans in North Carolina only get 3 percent of the black vote at best?" Allen said. "We don't expect this to have any effect at all on Sen. Helms' campaign."

Helms has no Republican opposition so far. In 1978 he defeated Democratic state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, 619,151 votes to 516,663. Helms' campaign cost $7.4 million, then a record for a Senate bid. Ingram, who planned a press conference today to announce his Senate candidacy, spent $217,000.

Helms' aides have estimated he is trailing Hunt by 7 or 8 percentage points. Recent polls by the University of North Carolina's journalism pitting the two candidates show Hunt preferred by 50 percent of registered voters to 35 percent for Helms, with the rest undecided.

The House had already approved making King's birthday a holiday and President Reagan has said he will sign the legislation.

Helms has denied race was the issue in his stance, saying King's possible communist ties and the cost of another federal holiday were his concerns.

Helms said, "I just want to get the facts out. I am not a racist. I am not a bigot. Just ask any black who knows me whether I am or not."

House to decide on undercover CIA aid to Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although President Reagan says covert actions are "part of governments' responsibilities," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. wants the United States to "oppose aggression in any form" by halting undercover aid to Nicaraguan rebels.

O'Neill's remarks came as the House prepared to vote today for the second time in three months on a bill to terminate CIA aid to the rebels. An earlier House-passed cut-off bill died when the Republican-controlled Senate did not consider it before the start of the new fiscal year Oct. 1.

Reagan, in a nationally televised news conference Wednesday night, refused to comment specifically on reports that the CIA was involved in attacks on Nicaraguan oil installations.

But he added that "I think covert actions have been a part of government and a part of governments' responsibilities for as long as there has been government.

"I'm not going to comment on what, if any, connection such activities might have had with what has been going on or with some of the specific operations down there" in Central America, he continued, "but I do believe in the right of a country, when it believes its interests are best served, to practice covert activity."

House Democratic leaders predicted Wednesday that the House will again vote to eliminate the covert aid and replace it with $50 million in open assistance to help pro-U.S. nations in the region stop leftist gun-running. The first vote, on July 28, was 228-195.

"I believe that the best U.S. policy in Central America is to set the best example: to oppose aggression in any form," O'Neill, D-Mass., said in urging support for the cut-off proposal.

Reagan administration officials, however, have claimed that pressure from the CIA-backed rebels has encouraged Nicaragua's Sandinista government to endorse peace terms proposed by the so-called Contadora nations — Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela and Panama.

In letters this week to O'Neill and House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., Secretary of State George P. Shultz said a House vote on the 1984 intelligence authorization bill to cut off the covert aid would "undermine the cause of peace and democracy."

"It is essential that the House of Representatives not enact provisions in the intelligence authorization bill that would give the Sandinistas a unilateral assurance that the United States will withhold support from the Nicaraguan resistance movement," Shultz said.

In a preliminary action on the new cut-off proposal Wednesday night, the House voted 232-179 to approve a Democratic-backed rule for the debate that would permit only two amendments to be offered to the bill.

Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass., House Intelligence Committee chairman, said he expected a "much closer" vote on the key amendment to bar additional U.S. aid to the rebels and provide instead $50 million in open assistance to friendly governments.

Official: Pilots want salaries subsidized

HOUSTON (AP) — Pilots striking Continental Airlines are seeking to scrap a system which has saved passengers $3.1 billion in five years in favor of regulations which would support artificially high salaries, the chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board says.

Dan McKinnon said Wednesday that pilots are asking for salaries which are out of line with "realities of the marketplace."

"What the pilots are asking is for the American public to subsidize their high wage scales," McKinnon said.

That was one of the problems the 1978 deregulation of airline fares and routes was designed to end, he said.

Continental Airlines imposed a contract Sept. 27 which pays pilots and flight attendants about half their former salaries. The airline had temporarily shut down operations the previous weekend and asked a court for protection from creditors under federal bankruptcy laws.

A Continental pilot captain made $89,400 before the reorganization, but is now paid $43,000.

The Air Line Pilots Association filed a $100 million suit in federal court Wednesday, stating that Continental had illegally abrogated the contract and bargained with them in bad faith.

What the pilots are asking for, McKinnon said, is a return to the "good old days" of regulation when airlines routinely operated with bloated expenses and high-priced labor contracts.

Under regulation, he said, airlines had monopolies on routes. He said they were not required to hold down operating costs because if they failed to make profits they merely asked for fare increase approval from the government.

"Under deregulation, the marketplace will determine what sort of service is provided and at what cost," he added. "All the airlines now are looking for ways to cut cost."

McKinnon said the deregulation "shakedown" of the nation's airlines — which has seen two declare bankruptcy and others hovering on the brink — will continue until the carriers bring their costs of operation down to what the market will bear, McKinnon said.

In addition to Continental's actions, McKinnon noted that Braniff went into bankruptcy and is about to emerge as a small regional carrier; American Airlines has imposed a hiring freeze; and Western is offering employees a stock option instead of a raise.

The current survival scramble "shows that regulation was a considerable failure," McKinnon said. "It allowed the costs to get out of line with what the marketplace was."

Ford says Reagan must focus on women

DALLAS (AP) — Former Republican President Gerald Ford says John Glenn would be President Reagan's most formidable opponent in 1984, but predicted the Ohio senator would fail to win the Democratic nomination.

Ford, who was at Southern Methodist University Wednesday for a series of seminars on American government, also said Reagan would have to improve his image with women if he hopes to win their support in the 1984 election.

"Glenn is construed to be more moderate. (Former Vice President Walter) Mondale has to defend his participation in the Carter administration and that is a heavy load to carry. Mr. Glenn doesn't have that load," said Ford.

However, Ford said he did not believe Glenn would win the nomination.

Ford, who said said he did "reasonably well" with women voters in 1976, and, who unlike Reagan, was "always a strong supporter of Equal Rights Amendment, said Reagan must make an effort to attract women voters for the 1984 election.

"President Reagan will have to indicate more effectively that he cares about women and women's issues," said Ford.

The former president also repeated a suggestion Wednesday he had made during a speech before a crowd of 2,000 Tuesday night, that some legal restriction be placed on the length of presidential campaigns.

"Campaigns of 18 to 24 months will eventually bore American voters and cause less and less participation" in the electoral process, he said.

He favors placing a legal limit on the length of time for contributing to a political campaign, allowing donations to be accepted the January of the election year, but not before.

"Money is the mother's milk of politics," Ford told the SMU audience Tuesday. "If we turn off the spigot we will have less politics."

Recently, Ford has been critical of the Reagan administration's record deficits, including a $200 billion deficit last year. But during his visit to Dallas, he tempered his attacks, placing more of the blame on congress.

He suggested easing the country's debt by holding domestic programs to their current levels, spreading defense spending over six instead of five years and raising taxes.

"President Reagan has advocated a standby tax, but tragically, congress won't even consider this," he said.

'Phone users shouldn't pay for Bell technology'

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell is trying to get residential telephone customers to bankroll investments in new technology that has little to do with talking to a friend on the telephone, say consumer activists.

Two consumer groups and a Mexican-American organization filed a 30-page brief with the Public Utility Commission on Wednesday, urging the regulatory agency to reject the telephone company's request for a $1.36 billion rate hike.

"The residential ratepayers of Texas are being asked to bankroll the birth of a new era," said the brief, filed jointly by Consumers Union, the Texas Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now, and the League of United Latin American Citizens.

Hearings in the telephone case, expected to last at least eight weeks, are set to begin Monday. After that, the three-member commission is not expected to issue a final ruling before March.

Consumers Union attorney Carol Barger said the "major aspect" of the rate case was the "technological revolution in telecommunications."

"We believe Southwestern Bell is asking the average ratepayer to finance this revolution, and the beneficiaries, who are largely businesses, are not paying near their share," she said.

Ms. Barger said 81 percent of the proposed increase falls on residential rates, with the rest falling on businesses.

Telephone company spokesman Dale Johnson said, "The residential ratepayer benefits extensively from all investments Southwestern Bell puts into the telephone system.

"Every time we install a new switching center, put in a new cable, connect a new residence or business — that extends the opportunity for the residential user to use the telephone service," Johnson said.

The brief asked utility commissioners to reduce the cost of a pay phone call from 25 cents to 15 cents, end all charges for directory assistance, disallow Bell's charitable contributions in the rate formula and limit Bell's advertising expenses, lower the cost of "lifeline" minimal service to $2.50 a month and reduce connection charges.

Ms. Barger accused Southwestern Bell of painting a "rosy picture" to Wall Street investors "and a very different picture down here."

The brief said, "To subscribers and regulators, Southwestern Bell may speak of high costs and unstable situations, but to its investors, it sings of reassuring statistics and of net income up almost 20 percent from the second quarter of last year."

Inspector: Poor maintenance cause of state fair accident

DALLAS (AP) — The company that manufactured a spinning carnival ride that threw three men onto the Texas State Fairgrounds, killing one of them, says faulty maintenance or operation caused the accident, not a structural deficiency.

An investigation Wednesday by inspectors for Heinr, Wilhelm Huss & Coin, a West German company, revealed that tie rods that stabilize the ride at high speeds were missing, according to a statement released by a spokeswoman for the company in Clearfield, Utah, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

The News said the woman who issued the statement would not give her name or answer questions and that questions addressed to the company in West Germany were referred to the Utah representative.

"The cause of the accident is not known," the statement said. "The investigation did reveal that several metal tie rods were not present on the ride at the time of the (Wednesday) inspection."

Fair officials could not be reached for comment about the company's statement late Wednesday, the News said.

Meanwhile, an amusement ride inspector who works for the State of Maryland was summoned to head an investigation into an accident at the accident that killed 19-year-old Allen man, seriously injured his brother and a companion, and caused less serious injuries to 14 other people.

Fair officials said a thorough probe led by Dan Dudley, supervisor of amusement ride inspections in Maryland and a recognized expert in the field, would get underway today.

Fair officials had said that a support rod that connected a car to the frame of the ride tore through its metal casing about 8:05 p.m. Monday and sent the car hurtling into the midway crowd 50 feet below.

"It actually broke out the metal when it came off," said Wayne Gallagher, general manager of the fair. "We won't know why until the engineers study it. We don't know if it was under undue stress, pressure put on the metal or if we had fatigued the metal."

The manufacturer's statement did not mention the support rod.

The popular European ride revolves in a circular motion while rising to an 80-degree angle. The Enterprise was going full speed and at its maximum angle when the car began pulling free from the frame, witnesses said.

Dudley inspected the same ride last month at the Oklahoma State Fair in Oklahoma City as part of a training session for amusement ride inspectors in that state, and found it safe, the Dallas Times Herald reported.

"The Enterprise is one of the better constructed rides on the midway. It's always had a good reputation, so it surprised me when I heard about the accident," Dudley told the Times Herald.

Federal authorities began their investigation Wednesday.

"Our job is to come up with an answer as to why this accident happened," Larry Blend, acting regional director of Consumer Products Safety Commission, told the Dallas Morning News.

Blend said the agency's first tasks were interviewing witnesses and trying to obtain all safety inspection reports pertaining to the Enterprise.

Killed was William Phillips, 19, of Allen, Texas, one of three passengers in the car that tore free. He died of head injuries.

His brother, Marion T. Phillips, 23, was listed in serious condition Wednesday at Parkland Memorial Hospital with various fractures and a concussion. Michael Olivarri, 15, also of Allen, was reported in serious condition at Parkland with a back injury.

From his hospital bed, Phillips told the Dallas Times Herald that the three men screamed at the operator to stop the ride when their car came loose and started banging against other cars on the ride.

"After it snapped, we went around two or three time," Phillips said. "We would pass by the booth and scream for the attendant to stop the ride. I knew any time we were going to fly off and kill a bunch of people."

Court overturns rape conviction

AUSTIN (AP) — A defense lawyer who argued that his client's rape conviction made it illegal for unmarried mentally retarded Texans to have sexual intercourse has won a reversal.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals on Wednesday ordered the acquittal of Anastacio Hernandez Garcia of El Paso, who had been sentenced to 18 years in prison for the 1979 rape of a woman whose IQ was 55.

Under state rape law, a man cannot legally have intercourse with a woman if "he knows" she has a "mental defect to such extent that she is incapable either of appraising the nature of the act of sexual intercourse, or of resisting it."

The appeals court said there was not sufficient proof that the woman was mentally retarded, and, if she was, that Garcia knew it.

Defense lawyer Robin Norris argued it's unfair to make it a crime, in all cases, to have intercourse with a retarded person.

"While such relations may, at first, seem shocking to many of us, they should not be," Norris wrote.

He said he is a friend and legal counsel for 50 to 60 mentally retarded adults.

"Many are sexually active, competent users of various birth control devices, and well-adjusted to their intimate personal relationships," he said in a brief.

Garcia was convicted of rape in an April 10, 1979, incident with a 26-year-old woman at his home. The woman testified that Garcia warned her not to tell her mother about the incident.

Court records showed she has an IQ of 55, placing her in the mentally retarded range.

Prosecutors argued that Garcia planned the assault and knew the woman was retarded. He "very quickly set the stage before (she) could fully comprehend the act and resist it," said a brief filed by District Attorney Steve Simmons of El Paso.

Garcia "knew he could take advantage of a retarded girl and the evidence indicates he never hesitated to do so," Simmons said.

Whale dies of blood disorder

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Researchers said a pygmy killer whale which died after beaching itself last week suffered from a blood disorder which made its kidneys fail.

Tootsie, a 300-pound whale at Galveston's Sea-Arama Marineworld, experienced a breakdown of red blood cells which led to the renal failure, Dr. Raymond Tarpley said Wednesday.

Indonesians wait for sunny skies to darken with rain

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Anxious eyes scan the sunny skies above Indonesia's rice bowl these days in search of seasonal rains that hold the promise of a bumper rice crop.

Drought followed by erratic rains when the monsoon finally arrived last year and insect damage hurt the vital wet season harvest and forced Indonesia to import rice.

This mainstay crop usually goes into the ground starting in October when the rains begin and is harvested about four months later. Normally it accounts for two-thirds of the country's output.

Rice is the staple food of Indonesia's 150 million people and provides about half of their dietary intake.

The country counts on five rice harvests every two years. Drought and the delayed monsoon wiped out one of the five in the current two-year cycle, one commodity dealer said. The loss of another crop would force Indonesia to seek still more grain on the world market, at a time when it is trying to cut back on foreign purchases.

Commercial grain sources and foreign agricultural specialists expect Indonesia to import 1.5 million metric tons this year in contrast to 332,000 tons in 1982 and 543,000 tons in 1981. A metric ton is 2,204.6 pounds.

Stockpiles are adequate and famine is not a threat, but large-scale imports are in the offing after several bountiful years when self-sufficiency seemed at hand.

About 1.4 million tons was in government warehouses in early October, according to an Agricultural Ministry spokesman. These reserves are likely to dwindle to about 1 million tons by the end of the year if current consumption patterns hold. This conrasts with 1.7 million tons at the end of last year and 2.3 million at the end of 1981, the spokesman said.

About 14 million farmers grow rice, and 60 percent of it comes from Java, Indonesia's most heavily populated island.

The National Food Logistics Agency, known as Bulog, buys about 10 percent of the domestic crop at harvest time for stockpiling and releases this reserve onto the market when supplies are short. It also handles imports.

U.S. and Indonesian officials confirmed that Bulog will take about 65,000 tons of U.S. rice this year under the 1980 "Food for Peace" program. Bulog stopped taking rice in 1980 when the goal of self-sufficiency seemed reached.

Thailand, Burma, Taiwan and to a lesser degree, Pakistan, are Indonesia's usual suppliers in times of shortage. Slightly less than 50 percent of last year's imports came from Thailand.

Saudis spend $13,000 a pupil

DAMMAM, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The Saudi government is pouring huge amounts of oil income into education — $7.8 billion this school year, or about $13,000 per student.

Education has been a priority item over the last decade and as a result it is not uncommon to find a nursery owner with a master's degree in botany or a mid-level technocrat with a doctorate in philosophy. Some Saudis hold several advanced degrees from such institutions as the kingdom's own University of Petroleum and Minerals, Harvard or Oxford.

The government pays for the academic careers of promising or motivated young citizens for study at home or abroad.

For the current school year, which started in early October, the government estimated total enrollment from kindergarten through university at 1.7 million students. Saudi Arabia's population is about 8 million — 60 percent native and the remainder foreign workers.

Just under 5 percent, or 84,600 students, are studying at colleges or universities at home or abroad. Yet 33 percent of the kingdom's $7.8 billion education budget this year is allocated to higher education.

Since 1969, when the country's education budget was just under $173 million, overall spending on education has increased 4,500 percent. The bulk of these petrodollars goes to educate primary, secondary and intermediate students.

In terms of gross domestic production, the government's education outlay amounted to 5.5 percent in 1982-83, up from 4.9 percent the previous year, according to education officials.

This year, however, the education budget was cut 14 percent — from the $9.2 billion allocation in 1982-83. But the current education budget, announced April 13, represents 10.4 percent of the country's general budget of $74.8 billion, compared with 10 percent last year.

The government has built nearly 13,000 schools, including 3,300 for adult education.

Schools for males outnumber those for females by 2-to-1.

More than a million students, or nearly 60 percent of the total, are in grades one through six. Eighty-five percent of all students in the country are Saudis and 62 percent are males.

At the college level 48,600 men are studying in the kingdom, 14,000 women in segregated programs at local male-only institutions, 9,000 women at domestic women-only colleges, and about 13,000 students studying abroad.

The number of women studying abroad has not been officially reported. But the government has announced that starting this year women will be allowed to pursue college degrees only within Saudi Arabia. It said one reason for this is that local institutions provide all necessary facilities for women.

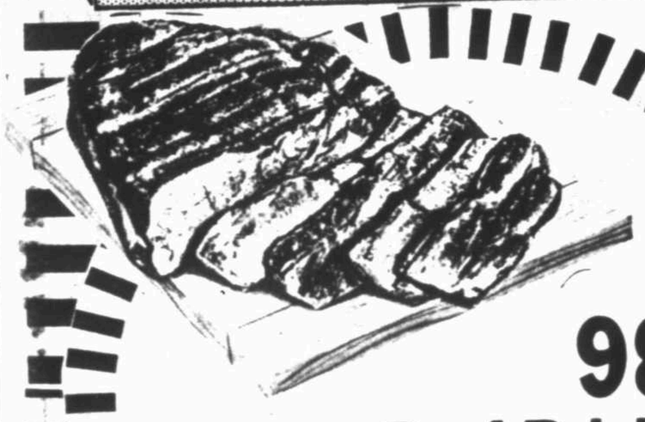

The kingdom has seven major universities, with women authorized to study at five of them in segregated programs, and more than 60 affiliated colleges and institutions. There are 10 women's institutions.

Fenwick finds sense of purpose as reprensentative to U.N. agency

ROME (AP) — One of the first things former U.S. Rep. Millicent H. Fenwick did as the first U.S. Ambassador to the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization was to give up a Cadillac limousine that comes with the job.

"You just can't drive up to an agency that helps the poor in a big car that's a symbol of conspicuous consumption," said Mrs. Fenwick, a New Jersey Republican who represented one of the richest districts in the United States.

She gets around in a small Ford sedan.

And to save on hotel bills, she has been living at a friend's home while she is looking for an apartment.

Since she took up the post in late August, Mrs. Fenwick, 73, has been sending out signals that she has a "dual constituency" to serve — the poor in the Third World "at the very base of society" and the working people in developed countries giving money to the U.N. aid agencies.

The FAO, a U.N. specialized agency of 152 countries, undertakes various projects for the development of agriculture, fisheries and forestry.

The United States pays 25 percent of its regular $220 million-a-year budget. Washington was represented at the FAO and the International Fund for Agricultural Development, also based in Rome, by a lower-level official until Reagan named the four-term congresswoman as ambassador, after she lost a Senate race in New Jersey.

In an interview at her spacious but sparsely furnished office across from the U.S. Embassy on Via Veneto, Mrs. Fenwick said she has found "great comradeship" and a sense of purpose at the world organization.

Mrs. Fenwick said she firmly believes that the FAO and other international aid programs should move away from big "technology-oriented" projects and concentrate on small, practical projects to develop the ability of the "humblest, the smallest farmers who have very little land and are trying to survive."

She quoted the late Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India as having once said: "Progress in Asia is giving a man who has a wooden plow the opportunity to get himself a metal plow."

"Now that is profoundly wise," Mrs. Fenwick said, lighting her now-famous pipe. "You don't barge in with a tractor. It's not going to do him any good. He can't run it, can't pay for the tires or gas. His holdings are probably too small to make it worthwhile."

She said helping poor countries build their economy is in effect stimulating U.S. exports to them.

"About 20 percent of all jobs in America are related to exporting or exported items. We have 40 percent of our trade with the underdeveloped countries, the ones where the money's going, and we have about a third of our products sold to these countries."

Educator emphasizes advanced work

WASHINGTON (AP) — High schools should be restructured to emphasize more personalized instruction and help "adolescents learn to use their minds," a former Harvard dean of education concludes after a four-year study of secondary schools.

Theodore R. Sizer, former dean of the Harvard School of Education, proposed that no one be allowed to enter high school "who has not clearly mastered the basic educational requirements of...literacy, numeracy and civic understanding."

Sizer, writing in the October Bulletin of the National Association of Secondary School Principals, previewed the recommendations of his study, which was co-sponsored by the principals association and the National Association of Independent Schools.

It is the latest in a series of eight major school reports issued by blue-ribbon panels in the past six months. The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching report also called for major changes in high schools.

Sizer, who was once headmaster of Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass., said, "Secondary school studies should focus on more advanced work. No citizen should be compelled to pursue these studies, but all citizens should be guaranteed free access to them for six years, to be taken at any point during their lives."

He said the practical effect would be that any student who misbehaves could be expelled "with the clear understanding that he can return when he later gets his act together."

"The high school should focus on helping adolescents to learn to use their minds," he said.

"The program of study must be simple and universal," eliminating what Sizer called "the complexity and confusion of the existing curriculum." One possibility would be to cluster all courses into four areas: philosophy and history, math and science, literature and arts, and inquiry and expression.

Sizer said high schools should set a tone of "unanxious expectation...The primary burden for learning should be squarely on the students, and they and their families should be unequivocally clear about this."

Also, he urged, teaching and learning must be personalized to the greatest extent possible. "No high school teacher should have responsibility for more than 80 pupils."

And Sizer urged that local principals and teachers be given control over their own school's program.

Sizer and his colleagues will publish three books in 1984 that grew out of this study. The first, written by Sizer, is called "Horace's Compromise: The Dilemma of the American High School Today," and will be issued in January. It will be followed by separate volumes on the history of American high schools since 1940 and a study of 15 secondary schools next fall.

Sizer said that while students on the honors track, athletes, those in special education and "even the persistently troublesome kids get relatively intensive individual attention" in today's high schools, "the unspecial majority... often remains anonymous and relatively unchallenged."

Mondale, Glenn battle growing harsher

"John Glenn has cast himself as the Democrat who is anti-Democrat and as the defender of the same man — Ronald Reagan — he claims he wants to remove from power."
—Walter Mondale

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Glenn says Walter Mondale must share the blame for the nation's economic troubles during the Carter administration and for the Democrats' losing the White House and the Senate in 1980.

Former Vice President Mondale, in turn, attacked the senator from Ohio for being an "anti-Democrat" because he voted for President Reagan's tax and spending cuts.

Thus the rhetoric in the battle for the Democratic presidential nomination grew harsher Wednesday as both men readied for the next pre-primary media event, the straw poll at the Florida state party's convention this weekend.

The argument continued in the terms of the last two weeks even though the heat of the debate has risen. Mondale says he is the traditional Democrat who provides a clear choice from Reagan, while Glenn defends his votes for Reagan's policies and says he is looking to the future, not to the past.

"MONDALE CONTRIBUTED to the economic conditions that gave rise to Reaganomics," Glenn said in a statement issued Wednesday by his campaign office. "Mondale contributed to the political defeat that drove the Democratic party from power and turned the Senate over to Republicans."

"And if he has his way, I believe that Democrats will face a defeat in the 1984 elections as disastrous as that of 1980," the Ohio Democrat added.

"Mondale wants to debate the past. He wants to defend the past, and I am afraid he wants the Democratic party to represent the past," Glenn said. "I want to lead the Democrats into the future."

This latest exchange was prompted by a Mondale letter to uncommitted delegates in the Florida straw poll. Mondale wants a good showing in the vote, even though home-state favorite, former Gov. Reubin Askew, is expected to win the essentially meaningless tally. Glenn has said he will make no special efforts to win straw votes.

"John Glenn has cast himself as the Democrat who is anti-Democrat and as the defender of the same man — Ronald Reagan — he claims he wants to remove from power," Mondale's letter said.

"GLENN VOTED in favor of the Reagan tax bill of 1981 — which was special-interest legislation at its greatest extreme...It was the most compelling time in recent history for a Democrat to stand up against the special interests and vote no. But John Glenn voted yes."

Glenn called Mondale's attack vicious and dishonest.

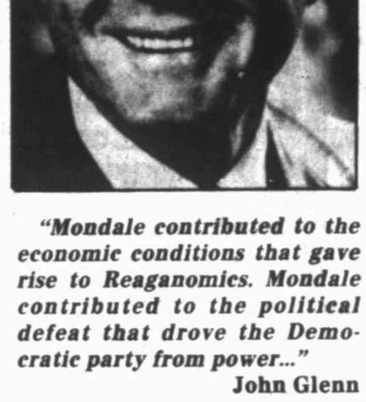

"In the name of Democratic unity, Walter Mondale has launched a vicious and dishonest attack against myself, Sen. Lawton Chiles, Rep. Claude Pepper and eight other Democratic members of House from Florida," Glenn said. "Mondale knows neither I, nor any other Democrat who voted for the some part of the Reagan economic program in 1981 'favored' Reaganomics."

Florida's importance to the nomination fight goes far beyond the straw poll.

Its primary on March 13 will choose the most convention delegates of any of the primaries on that early "Super Tuesday," featuring 10 primaries and caucuses. That day will have a heavy southern flavor, with voting in Georgia and Alabama as well as Florida.

GLENN HAS more strength in the polls in the South than Mondale, meaning any strong showing by the former vice president would take on added importance.

"The time for you to give me your support is next weekend, so I can expand my credibility in a leading Southern state," Mondale wrote the delegates.

"Mondale contributed to the economic conditions that gave rise to Reaganomics. Mondale contributed to the political defeat that drove the Democratic party from power..."
John Glenn

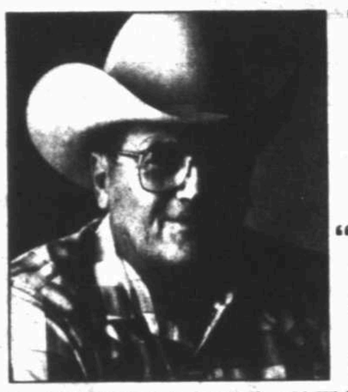

Reagan: Club doesn't discriminate

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he knows of nothing discriminatory in the bylaws of the Augusta National Golf Club, where he plans to spend the weekend.

Reagan was asked during a Wednesday night news conference why he decided to golf at the well-known club, which is the site of the prestigious annual Masters Golf Tournament. A questioner described the club as "very exclusive," with no black members.

"I don't know anything about the membership," Reagan replied. "But I know that there is nothing in the bylaws of that club that advocates any discrimination of any kind. I saw, in a recent tournament down there, a national tournament, I saw blacks playing in that tournament on that course."

Hord Hardin, club chairman, confirmed the club has no black members, but he said it has no discriminatory policies.

Engineer feels he was wrong to sell secrets

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A globe-trotting American accused of selling defense secrets to Polish agents feels he "did a great wrong" and wants to help investigators ferret out more espionage in high technology, his lawyer says.

"He wants to set it straight," attorney William Dougherty said Wednesday of his client, engineer and computer consultant James Durward Harper Jr.

Harper, 49, is hoping for a reduced sentence in return for helping federal investigators find other espionage in California's high technology region known as the Silicon Valley, Dougherty said.

U.S. Magistrate Owen Woodruff denied bail Wednesday, saying Harper's life had been "a mobile one ...and there is an awful lot of money involved." He told Harper there were "no terms or conditions which assure the court of your presence should you be released on bail."

The FBI alleges Harper put secrets about U.S. missiles and plans for America's survival in a nuclear war into Soviet hands through the Polish intelligence service. In one transaction, he received $1 million, according to investigators.

The complaint under which Harper was arrested Saturday said that during a seven-year period, the consultant flew frequently to Switzerland, Austria, Mexico and Poland for the transactions. Since 1981 he had tried unsuccessfully, using Dougherty as a go-between, to surrender in return for immunity.

"He felt he did a great wrong to his country," Dougherty said at a news conference Wednesday. He said Harper "is cooperating with the government so the effects of his activities can be assessed."

Meanwhile, federal sources in Washington, who asked not to be identified, said they were making good progress in the espionage investigation and expected to make more arrests soon.

Dougherty, asked if Harper would plead guilty, noted that no charges had yet been made. Charges must be filed within 30 days to ensure his right to a speedy trial, Woodruff said.

Woodruff scheduled a preliminary meeting on Nov. 10 after Dougherty asked to continue discussions with U.S. Attorney John Gibbons.

Dougherty rejected the phrase "plea bargaining," adding, "Let's say we will be negotiating a sentence."

He also said the sentence "will depend upon the quality of cooperation. There would be major benefits to cooperate or I wouldn't have recomended it," Dougherty said.

'Saturday Night Massacre' remembered

Turning point in Nixon presidency

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten years ago today, the "Saturday Night Massacre" ended an extraordinary clash of wills between the president of the United States and the special Watergate prosecutor to whom he had pledged "total cooperation of the executive branch."

The events of that Oct. 20, 1973, marked a turning point in the presidency of Richard Nixon through an outpouring of outrage from the American public. Watergate became more than a dispute over who did what and who knew what and who concealed what. Now it was a constitutional fight: Could a president ignore a court order? Was the president above the law?

A U.S. Court of Appeals decision on Oct. 12 set the stage. The court, exempting national security secrets, ordered Nixon to turn over White House tape recordings subpoenaed by a federal grand jury at the urging of Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox. The president was given five days to comply.

Cox wanted the tapes as evidence in his attempts to convict Nixon's closest aides of crimes in the Watergate affair.

The White House tried to cut a deal. Attorney General Elliott Richardson and Nixon Chief of Staff Alexander M. Haig looked for a compromise. Richardson proposed to Cox that a third party listen to the tapes and decide what portions involved Watergate and should go to the grand jury. The White House candidate was Sen. John Stennis of Mississippi, an aging Democratic conservative.

No dice, said Cox.

"You appointed me and I pledged that I would not be turned aside," Cox wrote Richardson. "Any solution I can accept must be such as to command conviction that I am adhering to that pledge."

After a flurry of conversations and letters between the White House, Cox and Richardson, Nixon told his attorney general on Oct. 19 to order that Cox "make no further attempts by judicial process to obtain tapes, notes, or memoranda of presidential conversations."

Richardson replied that Nixon's instruction "gives me serious difficulty."

The next day, Saturday, Nixon ordered Richardson to fire Cox. The attorney general resigned, saying "circumstances leave me no alternative."

Haig called Deputy Attorney General William Ruckelshaus. This is Haig's version of their conversation:

"As you probably know, Elliott Richardson feels he cannot execute the orders of the President."

"That is right, I know that."

"Are you prepared to do so?"

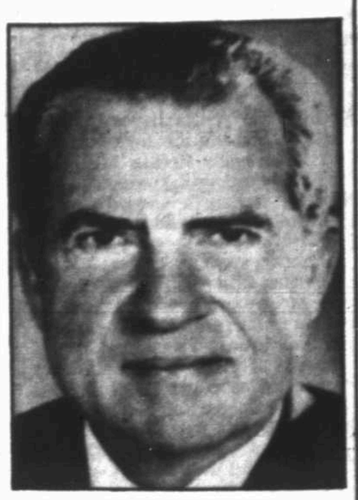

"No."

"As I recall, I said, 'Well, you know what it means when an order comes down from the commander-in-chief and a member of the team cannot execute it."

"He said, 'that is right.' And I think we both understood at that moment he was neither fired nor resigned but somewhere in between with a happy mutual term that I haven't developed."

Ruckelshaus resigned, and Haig called on Solicitor General Robert Bork, the No. 3 man in the Justice Department to do the deed. Bork accepted the title of acting attorney general and fired Cox.

On Oct. 23, as the public outcry about the firings heightened,

Richard Nixon

Nixon lawyer Charles Alan Wright told U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica that Nixon would turn over the tapes. "This president does not defy the law," Wright said in court.

On Oct. 26, Nixon announced that Bork would appoint a new special prosecutor.

President Reagan points to a large cake during a celebration at the Air and Space Museum Wednesday in honor of the 25th anniversary of NASA. Astronauts Robert Crippen, center, and John Fabian join in the cake cutting.

NASA celebrates 25th birthday

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has wished NASA a happy 25th birthday without giving the space agency its fondest birthday wish — the approval to build a permanent manned space station.

Two weeks ago, National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials felt confident Reagan would use the anniversary celebration Wednesday to approve startup funding for a permanent orbiting station. But the White House since has decided to evaluate two reports before making a decision on the space station and the direction of the space program.

Reagan held out hope, however, when he told NASA employees Wednesday the success of the manned space shuttle proves "there is never a time when we can stop moving forward, when we can stop dreaming."

Officials consider Cuban hotline

MIAMI (AP) — Officials are trying to set up a telephone hotline as "an alternative to hijacking" for homesick Cuban refugees desperate to return home, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman says.

FAA spokesman Jack Barker said Wednesday that Cubans have resorted to hijacking because there is no legal way for them to return to Havana. Several agencies are working on setting up a 24-hour, toll-free hotline to listen to such people's problems, he said.

Workers injured in explosion

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — A refinery worker suffered head and neck injuries and 36 other people were slightly injured in two explosions at the Gladieux Refinery, company officials said.

The first of Wednesday morning's blasts occurred when the main power transformer blew, sending black smoke hundreds of feet into the air. Officials said the second explosion, which may have been caused by overheated vapors from a nearby jet fuel tank, occurred about 90 minutes later and may have ruptured another tank.

Refining operations will be suspended for at least two months because of the explosions, said President James M. Gladieux.

Bodies of youths found in desert

QUARTZSITE, Ariz. (AP) — Autopsies are expected to show that four youths who apparently became stranded in the desert during "the hottest-ever August around here" died of exposure, authorities said.

The bodies, believed to be those of four youths aged 15 through 20 who were reported missing in August, were found Sunday and Monday near an abandoned truck in a remote area of the Army's Yuma Proving Ground. A statewide search in August failed to find them.

Pilot skids airliner to halt

MIAMI (AP) — The pilot of a Northeastern International Airways 727 did a "beautiful" job of skidding the plane on its nose to a stop after its forward landing gear failed to descend, passengers and officials said. No injuries were reported.

Capt. Robert Brush diverted the Fort Lauderdale-to-St. Petersburg flight to Miami International Airport on Wednesday after a landing gear indicator flashed in the cockpit, said Guy Tirrano, Northeastern's senior vice president for marketing.

Soldiers kill Grenada's prime minister

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — An army commander says soldiers killed Grenada's Prime Minister Maurice Bishop and three Cabinet ministers during a showdown at army headquarters and warned citizens to stay at home today or risk being shot on sight.

Witnesses said Bishop, leading a crowd of supporters, had put his hands up in surrender before troops at the headquarters started firing Wednesday afternoon. The followers were part of a crowd of some 3,000 that 2½ hours earlier stormed the prime minister's residence to free Bishop from a week of house arrest.

The army had said Bishop was put under house arrest because he refused to share power with hardline leftists in the socialist government.

Gen. Hudson Austin said a "revolutionary and military" council had been established to rule the Caribbean island and all schools and business would stay shut until "normality is returned."

The general said that under a curfew imposed until 6 p.m. Monday, no one would be allowed to leave home and troops were ordered to "shoot anyone who seeks to disturb the peace."

"Anyone violating this curfew will be shot on sight," Austin warned.

Maurice Rupert Bishop

Austin identified the Cabinet members slain Wednesday as Foreign Minister Unison Whiteman, Housing Minister Norris Bain and Education Minister Jacqueline Creft. He said a union leader and another man were killed and many others wounded.

Austin announced the killings and the military takeover Wednesday night on Radio Free Grenada, the government station, in a broadcast monitored on the neighboring island of Barbados.

He said Bishop and the ministers were killed after they led a crowd on Fort Rupert, the army headquarters, disarmed officers and soldiers guarding the fort and gave weapons to the crowd.

"They declared their intention to arrest and wipe out the entire Central Committee (of the ruling New Jewel Movement) and senior members of the party and the entire leadership of the armed forces as well as to smash the Revolutionary Armed Forces," Austin said.

He said Bishop and his crowd of supporters fired upon a company of soldiers sent to retake control of the fort, killing two soldiers.

"The Revolutionary Armed Forces were forced to storm the fort" and Bishop and the others were killed, Austin said.

The general said the Central Committee had offered Tuesday night to let Bishop continue as prime minister but that Bishop put off a decision.

The general, who helped Bishop seize power in 1979 from Prime Minister Eric Gairy, accused Bishop of having "linked up openly with counter-revolutionaries."

Bishop, 39, was reported under house arrest last week Thursday, and reports began to circulate that Bernard Coard, his deputy, had taken over.

Coard, a Marxist, thought Bishop was moving too slowly to implement the party's socialist policies and offering private industry too big a role in developing the economy.

Richard Burt, assistant U.S. secretary of state for European affairs, said today the Grenada's army has taken control and that Coard was in charge. Coard has "very close ties to Cuba and very close ties to Moscow. We are obviously concerned about the situation."

Whiteman said on Tuesday that Coard and his Jamaican-born wife Phyllis were "running the show single-handedly."

Prime ministers Edward Seaga of Jamaica and Eugenia Charles of Dominica said they would not accept the new regime in the Caribbean Community, a group of 13 former British colonies.

Sources in Grenada said Bishop supporters took to the streets of the capital, St. George's, on Wednesday morning and stormed his official residence to free him from house arrest.

Indian peasants protest living conditions

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A top government official met with leaders of more than 560 Indian peasants who marched from their home state of Chiapas to protest conditions there, the government newspaper El Nacional reported Wednesday.

Agrarian Reform Minister Luis Martinez Villacana, met with 32 peasant leaders to discuss their complaints of harrassment and discrimination in Chiapas, El Nacional said.

The protesters say they want legal clarification of ownership rights.

Bishop wanted 'new civilization'

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — Maurice Rupert Bishop was a man of energy and intellect who led the first coup in the English-speaking Caribbean and then moved his tiny, formerly quiet island onto the international stage.

Before he was killed Wednesday by government troops, Bishop, who was 39, had alarmed his neighbors and the United States by establishing a socialist government with ties to Cuba, Nicaragua and the Soviet Union.

Caribbean leaders such as prime ministers Tom Adams of Barbados and Edward Seaga of Jamaica criticized Bishop's refusal to call elections following his March 13, 1979, coup. Two U.S. administrations tried to isolate his government, which President Reagan called a bearer of the "Cuban-Soviet virus."

But even Bishop's fiercest critics conceded the 6-foot-3, bearded politician had unquestionable drive and intellect — and tremendous magnetism.

He was a tireless worker and traveler, often putting in 14-hour days. He had been in Hungary and Czechoslovakia just before a rift in his government became public last Thursday.

In an interview in July, Bishop said he wanted a "new civilization," free from corruption, exploitation and oppression, for his country.

"I've always looked at Grenada as the place where I'm going to live and die, regardless of the situation," he added.

He was born May 29, 1944, on the nearby Dutch island of Aruba, where his businessman father had temporarily moved. The family soon returned to Grenada, a 133-square-mile island of 110,000 people known for its exports of nutmeg and other spices.

From the beginning, he was a brilliant student and leader.

In his final year at Grenada's Presentation College, he was president of the historical club, debate team, student council and editor of the school newspaper. He continued his studies at the University of London and earned a law degree.

During his seven-year London stay, he tuned in nightly to the British Broadcasting Corp. and read London newspapers and magazines for news of the civil rights struggle in the United States and the independence movement sweeping the black colonies in Africa and the Caribbean.

He returned home in 1970 with a plan for a political challenge to Prime Minister Sir Eric Gairy, a former peasants' hero who had become a self-styled mystic and flying saucer expert.

Bishop and law partner Kenrick Radix in 1972 formed the Movement for Assemblies of the People, soon after economist Unison Whiteman started the JEWEL — Joint Endeavor for Welfare, Education andLiberation.

The next year, they united in the New Jewel Movement.

Italian premier 'pleases' U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Italy's first post-war socialist premier, Bettino Craxi, has pleased the Reagan administration with his initial foreign policy moves since assuming office two months ago, a senior administration official says.

Craxi, who is in Washington on an official working visit, planned to meet with President Reagan at the White House today and was expected to provide assurances that Italy is unwavering in its commitment to deploy U.S. medium-range nuclear missiles to offset Soviet European-based missiles.

Reagan was scheduled to hold a working lunch for Craxi. The Italian leader also was to meet with Secrtary of State George P. Shultz and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, and later host a dinner for Vice President George Bush at the ambassador's residence here.

A senior administration official, who briefed reporters on Craxi's visit, said Washington has applauded recent foreign policy moves by Italy.

Craxi, who became prime minister at the head of a five-party coalition in August, represents at age 49 a new generation of leadership in Italy's recent turbulent political history. He is only the second person outside the Christian Democratic Party to head an Italian Cabinet since World War II.

"The change in generations that Craxi symbolizes is reflected in the evolution of Italian foreign policy in recent years which has seen Italy adopting a more active and from our standpoint more responsible role in international affairs," said the senior official, who insisted on anonymity.

He noted that Italy was the first of the NATO allies to agree to accept U.S.-made intermediate range missiles as part of a 1979 NATO agreement. He said it was also among the first to join a border observer team in the Sinai and it was the first to join the United States in providing troops for the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon.

More recently, since Craxi assumed office, Italy has agreed to provide additional troops to monitor the ceasefire in Lebanon.

The official who briefed reporters on the visits sought to make clear that although Craxi is a socialist, this has not posed any difficulty for Washington. He said there has been continuity in the foreign policy of the new government from the previous one.

"The Italian government changes frequently, but personnel in the government tend to remain quite stable," he said.

He said the most important item on the agenda for Craxi's talks with Reagan and other officials is the status of the U.S.-Soviet talks in Geneva, Switzerland, aimed at an agreement to limit deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe. He said U.S. officials expect Craxi to provide assurances that barring an agreement, Italy will go ahead with deployment of missiles on its territory by the end of the year.

Missiles also are to be deployed in West Germany and Britain by the end of the year. The official discounted published reports that there may be a delay in deployment of missiles in Italy until early next year.

He said that a written reply by Craxi in recent days to a letter from Soviet leader Yuri Andropov amounted to "forceful and eloquent statement of the alliance's position" on the European missile issue and placed the responsibility for the lack of progress on Moscow.

Craxi's "response to Andropov was quite clear that deployment will go forward," the official said.

> "The change in generations that Craxi symbolizes is reflected in the evolution of Italian foreign policy in recent years which has seen Italy adopting a more active and from our standpoint more responsible role in international affairs."

Comptroller investigates possible overspending

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico City's comptroller is investigating possible overspending last year on subway construction, a newspaper reported Wednesday.

Adrian Mora, the comptroller, said the overspending may be responsible for the city's large debt, which stands at $466 million, the English-language News said.

Mora said the investigation doesn't mean the government is accusing that the funds were not used properly, but that the public accounts are being reviewed to determine if there were any improprieties.

Iran says Iraqi planes kill 18

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran says Iraqi warplanes killed 18 people and injured more than 30 in bombing raids on two border towns in northwest Iran.

Iraq, in a communique broadcast by Baghdad radio, said its jets bombed Iranian troop positions Wednesday in the northern section of the 500-mile war front. It gave no exact locations.

The Iranian state news agency IRNA, in broadcasts monitored in Nicosia, also said Iranian forces killed or wounded more than 100 Iraqi soldiers in a hit-and-run raid on a garrison in northeastern Iraq.

Trapped submariner rescued

ABERDEEN, Scotland (AP) — The pilot of a one-man submarine working in Britain's North Sea oilfield was rescued today after being trapped in his craft on the sea floor for eight hours, the Amoco Oil Co. reported.

An Amoco spokesman said the rescue effort began Wednesday night when a cable connecting the submarine to an oil rig became tangled beneath the water about 100 miles east of Aberdeen.

He said a diving support vessel was dispatched to the rig, which Amoco operates, and lowered a diving bell with three divers in it down to the submarine 300 feet below the surface. Once on the seabed, the divers in the bell entered the water and were able to free the submarine's cable, which the rig then used to hoist the craft to the surface.

Alleged spy must remain jailed

NEW YORK (AP) — A Bulgarian charged with buying U.S. nuclear secrets must remain in jail while awaiting trial because "any country that is an enemy of the United States is a possible haven" should he flee, a federal judge has ruled.

Penyu Kostadinov, 41, who has been in prison since his arrest Sept. 23, was denied bail Wednesday by U.S. District Judge David Edelstein, who wrote that "a spy would undoubtedly have access to many exit routes and to places which would afford him sanctuary as a hero and not a criminal."

Juarez officials suspend school

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Authorities suspended classes at all public schools in this border city after violent confrontations between students and police, the government newspaper El Nacional reported.

More than 100 students and members of their families were injured in the fighting, the paper said. Eighteen students were arrested and charged with property damage and illegal possession of buses. The students said the buses were loaned to them by officials of the bus lines.

The disturbances began Monday when city officials tried to stop students at a public agricultural school from distributing protest flyers. Classes were suspended Tuesday.

North Korea 'warns' South Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chun Doo-hwan issued a "stern warning" to North Korea today that there would be strong retaliation for another action such as the bombing in Burma that killed 17 South Koreans, including four Cabinet members.

Burmese authorities investigating the bombing, which also killed four Burmese, have said three Koreans were involved. They have not said whether the three were North or South Koreans.

"We are near the end of our patience," Chun said. "I now serve a stern warning to the Kim Il Sung (president of North Korea) clique of North Korea that this is the last point of endurance which our peaceful resolve and brotherly love can hold. Should such a provocation ever recur again, they shall expect, without fail, a corresponding retaliation in strength."

Police may need to use force

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Bonn's police chief says his men will use force and mass arrests if necessary to keep anti-nuclear activitists from blockading government offices when a 10-day nationwide protest concludes this weekend.

Protests so far have been scattered and small, but Police Chief Hans-Wilhelm Fritsch said authorities expect up to 300,000 demonstrators to gather for the climax of the nationwide drive against NATO plans to deploy new U.S. missiles in Western Europe.

Welcome change

The age-old lament is though everyone talks about the weather, alas, no one does anything about it.

While that may be true to a large extent in West Texas and the Permian Basin, where the recent past has been exceedingly dry, the talking has even taken on a dullness that comes from repetition. Well, now West Texans have something more interesting to talk about regarding the weather: The rains of Tuesday night and Wednesday were the refreshing change.

Several points throughout the area received good rains, including parts of Midland, Lamesa, Andrews and various other outlying communities. The rain was more than appreciated, coming on the tail end of what has been an extremely dry year and at a time when heavy rains normally don't fall. In fact, Midland typically receives only 2.88 inches of rain for the period from Oct. 1 through the end of January. As of early Wednesday morning, though, the Tall City had already received 1.53 inches of rain in October and late in the afternoon a steady, moderate rain was still falling.

Visitors to this area might find it odd that residents can get so "worked up" about rain. Of course, those visitors may have never lived in an area that receives so little rain and, therefore, not acquired an extraordinary appreciation of nature's cleansing wonder.

They can get the full picture if they'll just ask a farmer or rancher for his views on the recent rains. Chances are he'll tell them in no uncertain terms that the rains we're receiving are too late for this growing season, but still money in the bank because they're building the underground moisture for next spring.

West Texans don't even want to "do something about" the weather we're having now; it's long past due. But it sure does give us something nice to talk about for a change.

Ode to slide rule

Some of us remember the day we discovered the miracle of the slide rule. For youngsters who had spent years in grade school filling sheets of paper with figures to do multiplication or division or search for square roots, it seemed almost sinful to solve problems with a slide rule. Move the slide to the right spot and read the answer — just like that!

You could tell a high school math student by the slide rule sticking out of his hip pocket. For a college engineering student, a slide rule was as essential as a toothbrush. In the 1960s, slide rules were the items turning up in the largest numbers at the lost-and-found office.

But today, not a single slipstick is to be found. What the closet is bulging with is electronic calculators.

English mathematicians in the 17th century are credited with inventing the slide rule, or its prototype, by adopting logarithmic principles to a rather clumsy mechanical device for doing multiplication and division. It was another 200 years before a French artillery officer named Amedee Mannheim devised the first modern slide rule, and not until the 20th century was the accuracy of reading slide rules improved by the addition of an indicator with a hairline cursor.

The inexpensive hand-held electronic calculator began insinuating itself into the slide rule's territory barely a decade ago, and where the classroom is concerned, it looks like a rout. A tool that took centuries to develop has been cast aside almost overnight.

Those who appreciate the beauty of mathematical relationships could look at the numbers and intervals on a slide rule the way an art connoisseur admires the composition of a Renaissance painting. Students, scientists and engineers who never use a slide rule will be missing something. Unless they're turned on by the symmetry of a calculator's keyboard.

As only the seventh woman Nobel laureate in science among more than 350 winners since the prizes were inaugurated in 1901, Barbara McClintock is truly an inspiration. Young women now have one more wonderful reason to believe that they can make a mark in the male dominated world of science — if they're persistent.

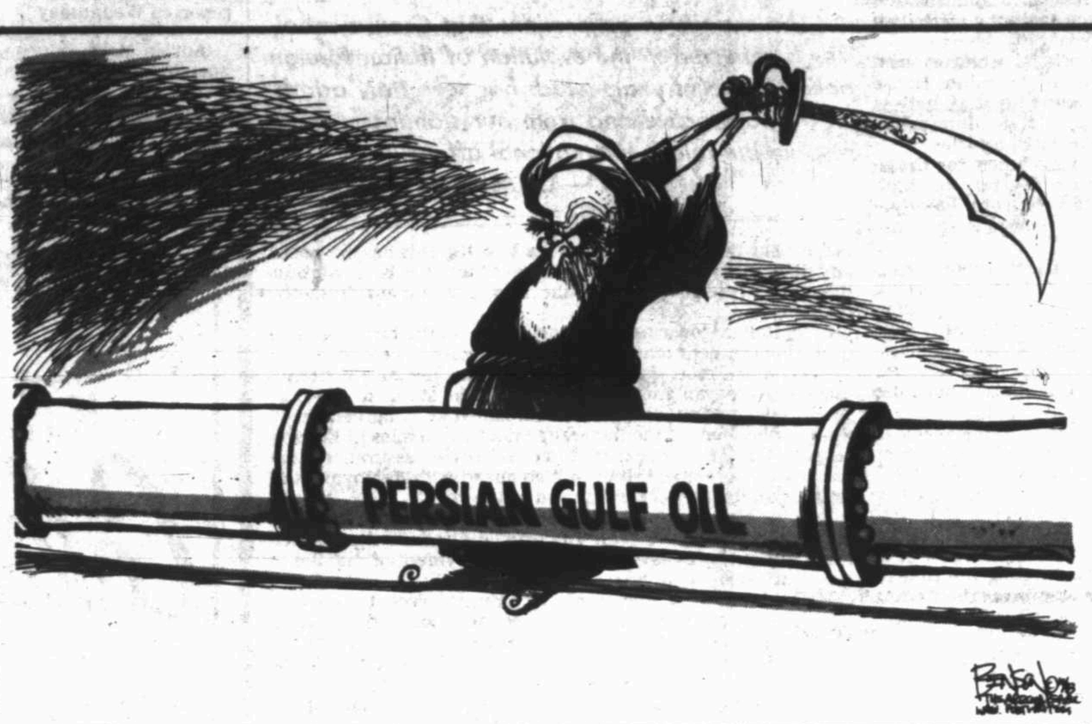

Unfortunately, McClintock's award came 30 years after her discovery that genes can move from one spot to another on the chromosomes of a plant. Scientists had once assumed that genes were held firmly in place on chromosomes. The discovery has led to a greater understanding of some human diseases.

McClintock, 81, joins the distinguished ranks of Marie Curie and Dorothy Hodgkin, the only other women to win unshared Nobel prizes in science. This prize, in combination with Sally Ride's achievements as the first U.S. woman in space, should help convince more schoolgirls to consider careers in science, a field needing brilliant minds.

Moreover, McClintock's down-to-earth approach toward life, work and the winning of the prize should be an inspiration to men and women alike. The charming scientist said: "It might seem unfair ... to reward a person for having so much pleasure over the years, asking the maize plant to solve specific problems and then watching its responses."

What a nugget to pack away for times when problems seem insoluble and work seems void of pleasure. Apparently, joy and answers about life's perplexities can be found most anywhere — even in a lowly cob of corn — if a person is determined to search.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

NATO hopes cuts mute protests

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Anti-nuclear agitators are trying to blow up a hurricane of protest powerful enough to stop the deployment of Pershing and cruise missiles in western Europe.

This is causing considerable consternation in the backrooms of Washington.

In what is probably a vain hope of defusing the controversy, NATO officials meeting in Ottawa on Saturday will announce a 25 percent cutback of the short-range nuclear weapons already deployed in Europe.

The presence of these tactical nuclear weapons has been an accepted fact of life for years; they have been all but ignored in the hullabaloo over the scheduled December deployment of medium-range Pershing II and ground-launched cruise missiles.

Indeed, the only recent controversy over the tactical nukes involved their nomenclature. For years they were known as "theater nuclear forces," which offended some Europeans. So the Reagan administration obligingly lists them now as "non-strategic nuclear forces."

But a nuclear bomb by any other name is still a deadly piece of hardware, and the tactical nuclear weapons in Europe are now being upgraded, many of them to handle neutron bombs.

The number of these weapons is impressive, too. The Kremlin is fully aware of the grim figures. There is no reason not to let the American people in on the somber secret. My associate Dale Van Atta has seen top-secret Pentagon reports which describe the deployment of U.S. nuclear weapons around the world.

There are 346 of these doomsday weapons in Guam and South Korea, 1,426 aboard U.S. warships and 3,193 in arsenals at home. Slightly more than half our tactical nuclear weapons — 5,840 — are deployed in Europe.

The expected decision in Ottawa will reduce that number by 1,500. The hope is that this will blunt the protests over deployment of 572 Pershing and cruise missiles.

The tactical weapons, which are ready for action in Europe, include air-delivered bombs and Pershing 1A missiles, short-range 8-inch and 155mm howitzers, Lance and Honest John surface-to-surface missiles, Nike Hercules anti-aircraft missiles, nuclear land mines and naval weapons.

West Germany, which has the largest and most vocal anti-nuclear protest movement, also has the greatest number of U.S. tactical nuclear weapons systems on its soil: 594 155mm howitzers, 84 8-inch howitzers, 72 Pershing 1A launchers and 24 Lance launchers.

In second place is the United Kingdom, with 36 155mm howitzers, 12 8-inch howitzers and 12 Lance launchers. The breakdown for other NATO allies includes:

— Belgium: 36 155mm howitzers, eight 8-inch howitzers and four Lance launchers.

— Turkey: 32 8-inch howitzers and 16 antique Honest John launchers.

— Greece: 24 8-inch howitzers and eight Honest Johns.

— Italy: 16 8-inch howitzers and six Lance launchers.

— Netherlands: eight 8-inch howitzers and six Lances.

These are just the weapons systems, not the actual bombs or warheads. Each howitzer and launcher would have several rounds.

All these tactical nuclear systems are being modernized — which means the Pentagon might have been planning to withdraw the 1,500 obsolete bombs anyway. New artillery shells for both size howitzers are already in production, and they'll include some neutron ("enhanced radiation") warheads.

The Pentagon will spend nearly $70 million for about 800 new shells for the 8-inch howitzers, the weapons system common to all the allies. Each shell will have a maximum yield of 1.1 kilotons — one-sixth the size of the Hiroshima bomb — plus another .8 kilotons of enhanced radiation.

The new nuclear artillery shell will also travel 29 kilometers (18 miles) compared to the present round's 14-kilometer range (8.7 miles).

No neutron-bomb warheads will be deployed in Europe initially. By December, at least 340 of them will be stockpiled in this country. And any decision to deploy them abroad could come only after close consultation with the allied "host" and explicit approval from the president.

Footnote: There will be no demonstrations in East Germany, of course, against Soviet nuclear weapons. Yet the Soviets have deployed more of the horror weapons threatening western Europe than the other way around.

GEORGE F. WILL

Daniel: A libel of America

WASHINGTON--The corporation (Gulf & Western) that collaborated in making the movie "Daniel," a libel of America, is probably innocent of intellect and guilty only of the morals of the marketplace. The president of Paramount Pictures, a Gulf and Western subsidiary responsible for "Daniel," says the managers of movie companies "respond to a director who wants to make a particular film. If we feel that particular film is wise financially, we'll do it."

George F. Will

The perpetrators of "Daniel" (Daniel is the son of the "Isaacsons," a thinly fictionalized version of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg) richly deserve the rotten luck of releasing the movie just as a new book demolishes all attempts to do what the movie attempts--to assert that the Rosenbergs were not spies. When Ronald Radosh and Joyce Milton began writing "The Rosenberg File," they believed that the Rosenbergs, executed in 1963, were victims of a government frame-up.

Now they believe the judge and prosecutor used questionable tactics, and that the death penalties were disproportionate, especially for Ethel. But they establish beyond doubt that Julius was at the core of an important Soviet espionage ring and that Ethel "was almost certainly his accomplice."

The book is a work of history that also is a historical event: It closes an argument--or would if Rosenberg partisans were not impervious to evidence. They live in a closed circle of paranoia, like those who believe the CIA killed John Kennedy. (Those persons say that the utter absence of evidence is conclusive evidence of how diabolically cunning and comprehensive the CIA conspiracy was.)

Fortunately, the movie is bombing at the box office. Unfortunately, many fewer persons will read the Radosh-Milton book than will see the movie, which conveys the idea that (in the words of The New Yorker's film critic, Pauline Kael) "the Rosenbergs were killed because they were Jewish and because they believed in social justice."

The new book obliterates a 1965 book, "Invitation to an Inquest," by Walter and Miriam Schnier, who still argue, with manic inventiveness and increasing desperation, that the Rosenbergs never committed espionage. The fun in the continuing controversy is in counting the ludicrous things Rosenberg apologists will believe to avoid believing the demonstrable, and to have the joy of believing that America is hydrophobic.

Radosh and Milton report that a couple thought to be Rosenberg acquaintances fled after the Rosenbergs' arrests and were convicted in Britain in 1961 as Soviet spies. Since the publication of the Radosh-Milton book, there has been new evidence of the pattern of flight after the Rosenbergs' arrests.

A science historian at Harvard who emigrated from the Soviet Union in 1975 concludes, after interviews with other scientists and engineers who recently left the Soviet Union, that two Rosenberg associates who disappeared from Ithaca, N.Y., and Paris fled to Leningrad, where one still lives. The other, who died in 1979, became important in the development of Soviet military computers. This pattern of flight is just one of the pebbles comprising a mountain of facts that Radosh and Milton assemble, and beneath which the Rosenberg lobby is buried.

Buried, but not, alas, suffocated. As Radosh and Milton write, "...Belief in the Rosenbergs' innocence has become part and parcel of an entire value system."

For example, the Fund for Open Information and Accountability, Inc., the lobby devoted to rehabilitating the Rosenbergs, has attacked the Radosh-Milton book with a pamphlet that the New Republic calls a "smear" and "left-wing McCarthyism." Fund supporters include the usual suspects--Chomsky, Commoner, etc.--including the irrepressible actor, Edward Asner, who in "Daniel" plays the Rosenbergs' lawyer. He plays him as Santa Claus. Justice William Douglas believed that the lawyer's notorious incompetence was actually, in part, deliberate sabotage "because the Communist consensus of that day was that it was best for the cause that the Rosenbergs pay the extreme price."

"Daniel" is a "docu-drama," a genre with no rules. It often is smash-and-grab history, a form of literary looting whereby writers or film-makers use just enough facts to lend a patina of specious authenticity to tendentiousness. At the one point where the movie rings true, it does so inadvertently.

In the final frames (filmed at the Central Park "peace" rally in 1982) Daniel, happy at last, because immersed in left-wing politics, wanders among signs denouncing "Amerikkka." This is supposed to symbolize fidelity to his parents' "idealism." That is about right.

ART BUCHWALD

Who says there aren't any heroes?

Who says there aren't heroes left in America any more?

Art Buchwald

Just the other day, in a surprise ceremony, the CIA awarded CIA Director William J. Casey the Distinguished Intelligence Medal, the agency's highest award.

Casey was cited for outstanding leadership and for restoring the credibility of the CIA and bringing imagination to our operation.

In the past a decoration of this magnitude was usually reserved until the director retired or resigned from the job. But apparently the people who work for Mr. Casey couldn't wait. I am not privy to how these awards are made, but I know they're not easy to get. They must have an awards committee out at Langley that goes over every one of the citation nominations to make sure the person is deserving of the honor.

"Gentlemen, our first nominee is James Blickstein, who, in a clandestine operation, dropped behind enemy lines in Afghanistan and delivered needed radio equipment to the rebels. He then walked barefoot 500 miles across Russian-held territory back to Pakistan."

"Does he get a medal? He's paid to do that. Why should he get an award? If we give out the 'Distinguished Intelligence Medal' to every Tom, Dick and Harry involved in a clandestine operation, it will deflate its value."

"Okay let's forget Blickstein. The second nominee is Hiram Cope, who managed to go over the wall at the Soviet's submarine base at Murmansk and steal all the U.S.S.R.'s naval codes. He then swam in a frog suit to Norway."

"Big deal. I'll admit it wasn't a bad operation, but is it worth a medal?"

"All in favor say aye — all against, nay. The nays have it. Scratch Cope."

"We now come to Nicaragua and Honduras. Our man down there, T.L., managed to get around all the restrictions the congressional Committee on Intelligence laid down for covert operations, and got his people to bomb Nicaraguan soil. He should get a medal. But do we want to give him the highest one?"

"I don't think we do, because we have to make him the fall guy in case Congress starts raising a ruckus. Let's give him the CIA's Good Conduct Award. We can always give him the biggie just before we fire him."

"We're all agreed then on T.L. Now I have a CIA person that I am proud to nominate. I propose that we give the 'Distinguished Intelligence Medal' to none other than our revered director, William J. Casey."

"I have no quarrel with that. The man certainly has gone beyond the call of duty. You won't hear a nay from me."

"He's the bravest of the brave. The smartest of the smart. His outstanding leadership has made this organization what it is today. If it wasn't for his imagination I don't know where we'd all be today."

"I take it then there is no opposition to awarding the director our highest decoration."

"I've still got five years to go before retirement."

"You won t hear any objection from me."

"Good. Then I'll write up the citation and we'll get Deputy Director John McMahon to present it to him in a full-fledged formal ceremony, with the CIA Undercover Band. It's the least we can do for the old man."

"No one in the CIA deserves it more. ow did you ever think of it, Willoughby?"

"When you're in the intelligence business you HAVE to think of everything."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Oct. 20, the 293rd day of 1983. There are 72 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 20, 1964, the 31st president of the United States, Herbert Hoover, died in New York, more than 31 years after leaving office. He was 90 years old and had lived longer than any other president except John Adams.

On this date:

In 1853, Benjamin Harrison married Caroline Scott; he became president and she first lady in 1889.

In 1910, a cork-center baseball was used for the first time in the World Series.

In 1918, Germany accepted U.S. terms to end World War I and ordered its submarines back to their home bases.

And in 1968, former first lady Jacqueline Kennedy married Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis.

Ten years ago: In the so-called "Saturday night massacre," President Richard Nixon fired special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox and Deputy Attorney General William Ruckelshaus, and Attorney General Elliot Richardson resigned in protest.

Five years ago: The Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. agreed to the largest tire recall in history, 10 million Firestone 500 steel-belted radials.

One year ago: The St. Louis Cardinals beat the Milwaukee Brewers 6-3 to win the 1982 World Series in seven games.

Today's birthdays: Radio and TV personality Ariene Francis is 75. Columnist Art Buchwald is 58. Baseball Hall of Famer Mickey Mantle is 52.

Thought for today: "A good many things go around in the dark besides Santa Claus." — Herbert Hoover (1874-1964).

Marriage may be just what doctor ordered

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Mary Tyler Moore has picked up a marriage license to wed cardiologist Dr. S. Robert Levine after the city kept its license bureau open late for their convenience.

Moore

Miss Moore, 45, got the license at the city clerk's office Tuesday night after asking it to stay open late to accomodate the schedule of Miss Moore's intended, a busy heart specialist, city clerk David Dinkins said.

The actress has been married twice before, most recently to Grant Tinker, with whom she founded MTM Enterprises, which produced the "Mary Tyler Moore Show." They were divorced last year.

Levine is a heart specialist at Mount Sinai Hospital and at the Bronx Veterans Administration Hospital. Dinkins said he and Miss Moore could marry within 24 hours of getting the license.

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Harold Washington sent out the alarm: $31,000 worth of lithographs were missing. Now 11 of the art works have been discovered in a most unusual place: former Mayor Jane Byrne's apartment building.

Washington

Jay McMullen, husband of the former mayor, said he was rummaging around the couple's storage vault Tuesday looking for his winter clothes when he ran across 11 of the 31 missing lithographs.

Byrne

Real estate tycoon Arthur Rubloff said he paid $1,000 each for the turn-of-the-century scenes before giving them to the city as a gift.

Mrs. Byrne has said the lithographs were given to her as a personal gift, but said Tuesday she was relinquishing all claim.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — The law firm of renowned attorney Louis Nizer has gone to court — this time on its own behalf — seeking compensation for "thousands of hours" spent on the divorce case of socialite Ethel Scull.

Phillips, Nizer, Benjamin, Krim and Balloncin contends Mrs. Scull, granted a divorce in May 1979 from her husband, Robert, operator of the Sculls' Angels taxi fleet, owes it $1.4 million in attorney fees.

Mrs. Scull's current lawyer, Raoul Felder, says of the amount sought by the firm of the 81-year-old Nizer, "If that's what he charges to lose a case, we'd be curious to know what he charges to win a case."

According to the Nizer complaint, filed in state Supreme Court Tuesday, the firm was paid $58,500 to represent Mrs. Scull from 1975 to 1982.

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Former Gov. Preston Smith was listed in satisfactory condition in Lubbock General xhospital after complaining of headaches that started after he fell last weekend.

The 71-year-old Smith, governor from 1969 through 1972, fell and struck his head in Del Rio on Sunday and was flown to Lubbock by private plane Tuesday night, undergoing tests at the hospital on Wednesday.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Protest singer and activist Joan Baez accepted a peace prize from the SANE Education Fund on a day she said held special significance.

The award has "meaning for me in that it points to a new future for peace and non-violent social change on the day that Congress recognized Martin Luther King's birthday as a national holiday," she said Wednesday night after accepting the organization's Peace Award before 400 people at a dinner.

Ms. Baez worked with King until his assassination in 1968. The SANE Education Fund said it was recognizing Ms. Baez's efforts to "heighten public awareness about nuclear disarmament and the importance of non-violence in building a more...just world."

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Little green houses and little red hotels are prime property for real estate agent Greg Jacobs, an Australian who won the 1983 World Monopoly Championship and then invested half his $10,000 prize in the company that made it possible.

Jacobs, whose real-life occupation mirrors his Monopoly mania, went on a restrained shopping spree Wednesday afternoon along posh Worth Avenue — buying a scarf for his wife, books for his son and stocks and silver for himself — after the two-day tournament ended.

With Monopoly money in hand and dozens of reporters and spectators in tow, it took Jacobs about 2½ hours to spend the loot. Contest rules required it be spent by midnight.

At a local stockbroker's office, the 32-year-old Jacobs bought $5,000 worth of stock in General Mills, the parent company to Parker Brothers, which makes the Monopoly game. He also spent $4,700 on silver investments.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Carson slipped a catty retort into his "Tonight Show" monologue after his estranged wife's request for $220,000 in monthly support payments was made public.

Radio show gets color — live from London

By WILLIAM S. COWLES
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — Big Ben's gonging fades out as the radio host's drawl cuts in: "Radio KRBE Houston and Weaver Morrow here, bringing you the morning news, weather, traffic, sports and features — live from London."

KRBE Houston's morning show has moved to London for a week "to take back some of the character and color of Britain to our listeners who've been here or have always wanted to go," said station manager John K. Dew.

"In Houston where there are 36 radio stations, you tend to specialize," he said.

"Our audience is upper income, well-educated and well-traveled 25- to 55-year-olds. They get a kick out of this sort of thing."

Based on a picnic table on the back patio of the London docklands' Prospect of Whitby pub on Wednesday, KRBE-London's 12-strong crew fed short interviews down the phone to Houston on cue from their soft rock and information station back home.

The Prospect, a popular tourist spot built in 1543, claims to be the oldest surviving inn on the River Thames.

The morning show's features, on topics suggested by Houston listeners, included interviews with actors from British comedian Benny Hill's television show, a London Bobby, the former editor of London's gossipy Tatler magazine and a salesman at uppercrust Fortnam and Mason's department store.

KRBE moved its pile of tape recorders and headsets that serve as a studio from the lobby of the Gatwick airport Hilton hotel on Tuesday and on Thursday plans to move into the lobby of London's central Britannia Intercontinental hotel, Dew said.

He said the project got started when British Caledonian Airways and the hotels decided to give them transportation and housing as a promotion gimmick.

"We knew it would work based on the success of a similar two-day trip we did to Caracas, Venezuela, last July," Dew said.

KRBE producer Cathy Cason said: "Our whole intent is to promote tourism in Britain, and give our listeners something a little different on their way to work.

"We're having a great time. Doing the early morning show from London has its advantages: when its 6 a.m. in Houston it's noon here."

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Cause of 'crib death' still unknown

Dear Dr. Solomon: Have doctors learned any more about crib death? There used to be a lot in the newspapers about it, but I don't see so much about it anymore. Is it still being studied? — Mrs. G.D. Muskegon, Mich.

Dear Mrs. D.: Unfortunately, the cause of the sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS) is still unknown. What is known is that it is the leading cause of death of infants between one month and one year of age, that infants two to four months of age are most affected, and that it is not common after six months of age. The disease seems to occur most often during the winter months, to children of young mothers, and to children born into poor socioeconomic conditions.

It is generally believed that SIDS is not hereditary, it is not contagious, and it is not the result of suffocation. Usually, the baby shows no sign of illness.

Additional research is needed before the answer to the cause of SIDS will be found, and this research is continuing.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son is being treated with Antabuse for alcoholism, and I thought he was doing OK. But the other night he had a reaction. When I asked him about it, he swore that the only thing he had to drink was some cough syrup. Is it at all possible that cough syrup can cause such a reaction? — Mr. D.S., Boston, Mass.

Dear Mr. S.: Patients who use alcohol while being treated with Antabuse may develop symptoms that include nausea, flushing, and dizziness. Since some cough syrups contain alcohol, they may also cause the same kind of reaction.

Dear Dr. Solomon: An aunt of mine fractured a hip after a fall. The doctor said it was because her bones had become thin, and that this happened to older people fairly often. Can you tell me what can be done to keep bones from getting thin? — Mrs. A.N., St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Mrs. N.: Dr. Sandra Kammerman, of the New York University Post-Graduate Medical School, says that nothing can be done to replace bone once it is gone; however, prevention is possible. She suggests that women at risk eat a proper diet that includes calcium and get an adequate amount of exercise.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Why is it that so much fuss is made about sodium, but hardly anything is said about other things found in food? Wouldn't it be helpful to have other things besides sodium listed on food labels? — Corinne, Carlsbad, N.M.

Dear Corinne: I agree that sodium is not the only important element found in food. Some people would benefit from having the potassium content of foods included on the label. For example, in some conditions, such as chronic renal disease, both potassium and sodium intake must be restricted.

In other situations, such as among individuals who are using antihypertensive medication, an increased intake of potassium may be advisable. Having this information included on the package label would permit a more intelligent use of foods.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My niece has been hospitalized for anorexia, but I know that this isn't always done. Why is it necessary to put some of these patients in a hospital and others not? — Mrs. M.G., Stockton, Calif.

Dear Mrs. G.: According to Dr. Arnold Andersen, of the Eating and Weight Disorders Clinic of the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, the hospitalization of patients with anorexia is indicated for those who have reached an extremely low weight or who have not made progress during outpatient treatment. Attempted suicide or the presence of other serious emotional problems are other reasons for hospitalization. However, treatment of the psychological problems can be started only after proper nutrition has been restored. If these problems are not resolved, it is almost certain that the patient will relapse.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been trying to lose weight by exercising instead of by cutting down on my eating. In this way I figure I can really have my cake and eat it too. But I'm losing very slowly. Shouldn't I be able to lose weight by exercising without having to go on a diet as well? — Mr. G. O'M., San Francisco, Ca.

Dear Mr. O'M: Any increase in the expenditure of calories, such as through exercise or physical work, should result in weight loss. I am not certain what you mean when you say that you are losing weight very slowly; for most people, the loss of a pound or two a week would be considered sufficient.

It is possible that you are expecting too much from your exercise? For example, even if you were to run for an hour at a speed of 8 to 10 miles an hour (which not too many people can do), you would only expend from 800 to 1,000 calories. You have to expend 3,500 calories to burn off one pund of fat.

I don't know how much you have to lose to reach your ideal weight, but it may be that you are simply a little too impatient.

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I think of mono, I think of college kids. But one of my buddies called in sick the other day and said he had mono. Usually I would think that he was just goofing off for the day, but why would he pick on mono for an exuse? Is this possible in a guy in his forties, and how serious is it? —Frank, Bronx, N.Y.

Dear Frank: Infectious mononucleosis is indeed possible in older patients although, as you note, it is generally thought of as restricted to patients in their teens and early twenties. However, the symptoms in older patients are often different

Dr. A. David Ginsburg, of Queen's University Faculty of Medicine in Kingston, Ontario, says that an older patient with infectious mononuculeosis may have an enlarged spleen as the only symptom. In general, it is a benign condition and the prognosis for the majority of patients is good.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What is your opinion of the pills that are being sold that help a person get a tan? I have read that too much sunlight can cause skin cancer, and I would like to know if the pills would be safer. — Pam, Madison, Wisc.

Dear Pam: Dr. Alain Rousseau, who heads the department of ophthalmology at Laval Universitaire in Quebec, advises individuals who use tanning pills to see their physicians on a regular basis. He explains that some users of the pills have developed deposits in and around the inner layers of the retina of the eye. Although their vision remained normal, there is always the possibility of adverse long-term effects, and Dr. Rousseau and his associates have not ruled this out.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Some guy I know says that men can examine themselves for cancer of the testicles the same way that women examine themselves for cancer of the breast. Is there anything to this? And if there is, how does a person go about examining himself? — Melvyn, Glen Burnie, Maryland

Dear Melvyn: Testicular self-examination is a simple procedure that takes only a few moments. It is most easily performed after a hot bath or shower when the scrotal muscles are loosened. Each testicle should be rolled between the thumb and fingers in an effort to detect any lumps. Checking in fromt of a mirror may reveal any obvious lumps or swelling.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Suppose a woman is on the pill but forgets to take it and she thinks she may be pregnant. Should she begin using the pill again? — Fran, Philadelphia

Dear Fran: Dr. Jennifer R. Neibyl, of the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in Baltimore, says there may be a risk to the fetus if a pregnant women uses an oral contraceptive.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I took my mother to her doctor because she seemed to becoming confused and disoriented, and I thought he would refer us to a psychiatrist. However, he found that she was having some problem with her thyroid, and referred us to an endocrinologist. Have you heard of anything like this before? — Ms. J.C., Los Angeles, California

Dear Ms. C.: Patients who suffer from some form of thyroid dysfunction may appear to be bothered by a variety of psychiatric disorders. If the condition is not diagnosed properly, the patient may be subjected to inappropriate treatment; on the other hand, proper early treatment can prevent complications.

A number of patients that I see initially complain about being nervous, or being easily distracted, or not being able to think clearly. If the problem is one of thyroid dysfunction, proper medical treatment, rather than psychotherapy, can resolve their problems.

Dogs lose Wellborn

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland High Bulldogs were dealt a hard blow this week when it was learned quarterback James Welborn was lost for at least two games and possibly the rest of the season due to a knee injury suffered in Friday's Odessa High game.

Welborn went into arthoscopic surgery Wednesday to check the extent of damage to his right knee. A torn lateral meniscus was found (cartlidge on outside of knee) but there was no damage to ligaments.

"He could be back for the Lee game," said MHS coach Pat Culpepper.

But, that's at season's end and Friday night the Bulldogs have a major task at hand when they travel to San Angelo to take on the Bobcats at 8 p.m. in a District 4-5A encounter.

JUNIOR QUARTERBACK Jeff Alsup is slated to step in for Welborn and Culpepper has confidence in his ability to get the job done. He also believes his coaches have their work cut out for them.

"We have a system here and our coaches and players have confidence in that system," said Culpepper. "We believe Alsup can do a good job. It's on the coaches shoulders to see that it gets done. We're going to find out if we can coach the passing game."

A key to Alsup's success for the Bulldogs Friday will come from the protection he receives from his offensive line and from the talents of Allan Foret and Todd Shiplett at wide receiver and Darrell Davis at tight end. The more they get open, the easier his job will become.

TWO OTHER Midland players are on the disabled list for the San Angelo game. Linebacker Tommy Hudson is out with an injured shoulder and Kenny White has a "heart murmur and the doctor is holding him out," said Culpepper.

"We're going to take players that are healthy and go to San Angelo and play aggressive football. We're 4-3 right now (2-2 in 4-5A play) and we have three more games to play this year.

"This is a pivotal game for us," continued Culpepper. "If our players have any intentions of doing something while they're seniors, this is one game we've got to have. We're going to have to do it with a green quarterback and we're going to have to go after them if we're to win. That's a challenge we have to face."

Alsup has some playing time this season, though not much. The Bulldogs have gone almost exclusively with Welborn. In seven games, Alsup has thrown only one pass and that one was picked off.

If Welborn's knee injury has ended his season at Midland High, he's still going out with some pretty good statistics: 89 completions in 202 attempts for 1,352 yards, 16 touchdowns and 17 interceptions.

SAN ANGELO is in the same situation as Midland High, a little beat up and desperate for a victory to keep its playoff hopes alive. Both schools are among four tied for third place in the 4-5A at 2-2. Both are coming off tough losses — MHS to OHS, 34-13 and San Angelo to Abilene High, 12-0.

"The first one off the canvas could win the ball game. They took a knockout punch from Abilene High last Friday," said Culpepper. "Their quarterback (Greg Thomas) is injured and their fullback (Bevins Hoffman) hasn't been playing much."

According to the latest lineup out of San Angelo, Thomas and Hoffman are both scheduled to play but there are a couple of changes on defense. Hoffman is penned in at linebacker for Mark Hill while Michael Becker is slated to start at defensive end.

"San Angelo will be in a 4-3 type defense but they've switched their personnel around up front quite a bit so it's hard to tell who's going to be up there," said Culpepper.

The Bulldogs have made some defensive changes of their own, especially in the defensive secondary.

Jeff Pulley, who was the starting fullback before suffering a thigh injury, has stepped into the defensive halfback slot for White while Ronnie Hernandez has moved over to safety and Keith Byrd and cornerback. Kyle Kitto will start for Hannon at linebacker.

"(Randal) Swindell will go at fullback again for Pulley," said Culpepper. "He was a pleasant surprise against Odessa. We were also pleased with Mike Stanton at the defensive end postion. He's a junior and he did a real good job for us. He'll see some playing time against San Angelo.

"I'd like to say I think the defensive team is going to play three good games from here on out simply because we have 11 hitters on the field," said Culpepper who feels the 1983 Bulldogs might be closing in on the performance set by the '82 team."

DiLouie gets serious

Upset win over top-seeded Tarr result of new dedication to game

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

By the time Jai DiLouie was 21 years old, he had expereinced more success in his career than most people have in a lifetime of striving.

As an amateur tennis player, DiLouie was an awesome figure. From the time he gave up baseball to take up the game at age nine until the time he graduated from W. T. White High School in Dallas, DiLouie won an amazing seven national titles.

Many college tennis programs were interested in the Dallas prodigy, but DiLouie, wanting to stay in Texas, went to SMU. A factor in that decision was DiLouie's coach, Warren Jacques. And, DiLouie wanted to help give the state of Texas an equal tennis standing with rival tennis producer California, not to mention the fact that "SMU had a top five program."

Indeed they did, and DiLouie's addition was helpful. In his first three collegiate seasons, DiLouie was selected All-American, and SMU finished fourth, third, and fifth nationally in the polls in that time span.

APPARENTLY, A rosy picture, one that would indicate a great future. Yet, DiLouie's tennis career since leaving SMU has not been as meteoric as before. DiLouie is now 25, and after kicking around with professional tennis, he has made a decision. DiLouie has a renewed desire to play the game, and is pushing himself into competitive shape.

It is a very long way to the top of the professional tennis world, but DiLouie's efforts seem to be paying off. Tuesday he flattened Derek Tarr of South Africa, 6-1, 6-1, in the opening round of the USTA's Texas American Bank Masters Classic at Midland College.

The tournament is the USTA's final Texas stop of the 1983 season. When the unseeded DiLouie ousted Tarr Tuesday, he eliminated the tourney's top seed.

The tennis world might be wise to take notice. DiLouie has only gotten his game together in the last two months after an extended break from competition. Against Tarr, he was masterful and in control from the start to the end.

In addition, DiLouie and doubles partner Rolando Vazquez chewed up their first round opponents, Juan Farrow of St. Louis and Bruce Foxworth of Los Angeles, 6-1, 6-4.

Why is DiLouie a comeback candidate?

"I've never really played the circuit 12 full months," DiLouie said Wednesday during the rain delay. "I've always played during the summer but never all year around."

Not that DiLouie really wanted to make a career outside of tennis. "I never had a good financial backing in the game, so I always had to come up with a little bit of money myself," said DiLouie. Taking on the rigors of the pro tour isn't something for the light of stomach - or checkbook. With tournaments all over the country and around the world, money soon becomes a critical factor.

DiLouie got his pro career off to an auspicious start when he signed with an agent in Dallas. The agent's financial support dried up and DiLouie got taken for a swift ride. "I probably could have sued the guy," said DiLouie, "But I didn't know how to go about it. I didn't do anything. He kind of left me on the hook."

DiLouie didn't sour on the career, but the setback slowed him a bit. He took a job as the assistant coach at his alma mater in the Spring of 1981, and pondered his future.

THIS SUMMER, DiLouie made the decision to give it his best shot, without the hassles of outside interference. Now he is concentrating solely on what he does best: play tennis. "I'm thinking about my career now. I haven't made any money out of the thing," he said, "But then again I haven't given my tennis a fair shot.

"I think I can go pretty far up the rankings. Hopefully, things will work out so I can keep playing."

Slumps, problems, and worries are handled professionally. DiLouie now administers to his game like a doctor to a patient. When he beat Tarr, he avenged a lopsided setback in his home town three weeks ago. Tarr had plastered DiLouie 6-1, 6-0.

"There's always tomorrow," reasons DiLouie. "Tomorrow's different. I can't just dwell on a lost match or a bad tournament or a bad week."

That collected, reasonable attitude evidenced himself in his first round doubles win. Vazquez, DiLouie's partner, had made a few errors and was obviously unhappy with his performance. Vazquez slammed a few balls into the wall, and then sailed his offending racket. DiLouie calmly stood at the net, waiting for the serve, deep into the match.

Naturally, they won easily. "When I've gotten the doldrums, I go out and work real hard. It pays off."

DiLouie thinks he has as strong points his overall head for the game, his versatility, and a certain level of consistency. However, consistency is a goal, as DiLouie is still a long way from where he wants to be. "Tennis is a weird game," DiLouie said. "It's hard to be satisfied. No one's ever going to play a perfect game. So you keep practicing and practicing."

As for his forgotten career hitting the non-furry balls, meaning in this case baseballs, DiLouie still loves baseball.

"I keep up with it," he said. "I was very disappointed in the Rangers the second half."

With leap in gate, changes needed

District 4-5A seems to be going through a revival of football interest in 1983. Fans are pouring into league stadiums in record numbers.

This is not to say that interest ever left the Friday night scene. It's just an indication that football — West Texas style — is more popular than ever.

We have already seen two crowds in excess of 17,000. The San Angelo-Odessa Permian game drew somewhere around 20,000 and the Midland Lee-Permian contest attracted around 17,000. Attendance is also up in other league cities over last year.

ALTHOUGH MIDLAND will never draw the type of crowds mentioned above with the facility of Memorial Stadium, attendance is also up in Midland.

Good teams and close races have something to do with this rise in fan appeal. Big Spring, for instance, has become competitive in the league. And there was finally the feeling that some of the teams could play on even terms with Permian, the yearly championship shoo-in.

Lee proved the point last weekend with a 20-7 win over Permian. San Angelo also felt like they had a shot and no team in the district is a push-over. Odessa High is better. Midland High's passing game alone makes the Bulldogs an attractive team to watch with high scores promised almost weekly.

The Abilene schools are down somewhat from powers they possessed in the past, but the signs in the Key City say that they are not far from jumping back in the picture. After all, Abilene Cooper upset Odessa High and Abilene High messed up the entire picture with a stunning victory over previously state ranked San Angelo.

WITH THIS surge of interest, it is time that the District 4-5A Executive Committee take some bold and innovative measures to insure continuance of this popularity. The committee must keep in mind the total interest of the fan.

There are a couple of changes in the district format that would be a blessing to all 4-5A fans.

First and foremost, the committee should seriously study the possiblilty of changing district game times from 8 to 7:30 p.m. Individual schools should have the option on non-conference games where heat can be a factor early in the season.

The reasoning for years has been that a fan in Odessa can't get to Abilene for a 7:30 p.m. game. My experience in this league says that very few fans drive from home to stadium for an out-of-town game. Most of the people traveling out-of-town leave with time to eat and most tell me that they would go more on the road if they could get home a little earlier.

Four years ago a district game rarely, if ever, went past 10 p.m. Now many games go as late as 10:50 p.m. The reason is that some rule changes, such as stopping the clock after a first down, have increased the length of games. Take a team like Midland High, which passes a lot, and the games become very long.

Both Lee coach Spike Dykes and MHS coach Pat Culpepper have shown an interest in 7:30 p.m. games. Both think it would be a good thing for the district.

Even if the committee feels that the Odessa-Abilene matchups need an 8 p.m. start, why force the rest of the district to the late starts? The Odessa-Abilene games could still be played at 8 p.m. if that is the common feeling among those schools. However, don't penalize the rest of us.

THE DISTRICT media representatives have been working for years to get the 8 p.m. format changed. The late games produce deadline pressures and ultimately cheat the fans watching TV for district scores at 10:20 and Saturday morning when they want to read about the games.

Another thing the committee should consider is allowing the Midland and Odessa schools to play games on Thursday and Friday nights. There is so much interest in these Petro-Plex battles that fans often feel cheated in having to choose which game they see.

Ratliff Stadium could have seated more fans than showed up for the Lee-Permian game last week. There is a good bet that 1,000 more tickets, at least, could have been sold if Midland High and Odessa High hadn't played on the same night. And there is no doubt at all that the MHS-OHS battle would have drawn more fans if they didn't have to compete on the same night.

Tradition is wonderful if it is not just for the sake of tradition. There is nothing sacred about having to have all games on Friday night. The fans of West Texas should be able to see the games they want to see and the Executive Committee is at liberty to make these changes. Make them for the good of us all.

Scientists probe big game fish

KAILUA-KONA, Hawaii (AP) — Like athletes, big game fish are being poked, probed, subjected to stress tests and otherwise examined by Hawaiian scientists.

"It's sports medicine for fish," said Dr. Carol Hopper, an associate of the Pacific Gamefish Foundation.

The fish being studied are dead.But the goal is to understand how the marlin and tuna that inhabit nearby offshore waters live and to help the species survive, said Dr. Charles Daxboeck, scientific director of the foundation.

The non-profit foundation was formed in 1977 by the Hawaiian International Billfish Association, which conducts one of the world's largest sportfishing tournaments here every August.The association remains the foundation's main sponsor.

The week-long tournament draws not only some of the world's top anglers but also some of the world's leading scientist in the study of fish, and it provides an abundant supply of fish for examination.

After each marlin or tuna caught in the tournament is weighed and photographed with its angler, it moves to a dockside "operating table," where Daxboeck and his associates remove various organs for laboratory study.

These studies include examination of blood, organ and muscle samples to determine how the fish handles stress. The data is correlated with details on the length of the fight — the time from hookup to boating of the fish.

The studies are aimed at determining if the fish would survive if they are tagged and released after being caught.

Very few marlin caught in Hawaii have been tagged and released for study of their movement and lifespan because of their economic importance, Daxboeck said.All fish caught during the tournament are sold for human consumption.

"We want to be sure that if we take food from someone's mouth, we have good reason to do it," Daxboeck said. This also is the reason scientists can not take whole fish to the nearby laboratory for further study.

Other laboratory studies involve the reproductive study of marlins to determine how many are being born and to learn about their early life stages.

"To conserve and manage these animals we need to know how many there are, how often they reproduce and how long they live," said Hopper.

"Hawaii is the best place in the world to do these studies because the fishing grounds are close to shore and fresh animal samples are available," said Dr. Ian Johnston of the University of St. Andrews in Scotland."Most of the world's sportfishing ground are far off-shore, and blood and tissue samples aren't that fresh by the time they return to shore."

Texas, Penn State, Michigan get nod in big ones

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Kansas Coach Mike Gottfried has this comment on the ups and downs of college football:

"One week the band's waiting on you, then you play another game and the dog's barking at you."

The band hasn't played for West Virginia against Penn State since 1955. In the intervening 27 years, Penn State has won 26 times, including 24 in a row since a 14-14 tie in 1958.

This may come as a shock to those Rip Van Winkles who have been dozing for the last two decades, but times have changed and West Virginia, 6-0 and ranked No. 4 nationally, is a 3½-point favorite for Saturday's game at State College, Pa., against the defending national champions, who are 4-3 and unranked, but own a four-game winning streak.

"This is my fourth year (at WVU) and most of the time we've been a 15-to-20-point underdog (against Penn State)," says Mountaineer Coach Don Nehlen. "But kids today don't live much for what happened in the past. They weren't even born in 1955. All they know is that this team hasn't beaten Penn State."

However, Penn State Coach Joe Paterno says he'll be "very disappointed if we don't play our best game of the year. We're healthy and ready to play."

When Joe speaks, you gotta believe . . . Penn State 24-21.

Last week's score was 40 right, 13 wrong and one tie for a percentage of .755. For the season, it's 208-86-4—.706. Against the spread, last week was 10-16-3—.385; on the year, 61-70-3—.466.

No. 2 Texas (favored by 8) at No. 9 Southern Methodist: The Longhorns have met every challenge thus far (Auburn, Oklahoma, Arkansas), but this may be the toughest yet . . . Texas 20-17.

No. 12 Iowa at No. 10 Michigan (7): The Wolverines haven't allowed a point in two games, but Coach Bo Schembechler wasn't satisfied with last week's 35-0 rout of Northwestern. An ill-tempered Bo usually means bad news for the opposition . . . Michigan 24-14.

Colorado at No. 1 Nebraska (no line): The Cornhuskers start piling up big numbers again . . . Nebraska 63-0.

Mississippi State at No. 5 Auburn (21): The Tigers just might be sneaking a look at next week's Southeastern Conference shootout with Florida . . . Auburn 28-14.

East Carolina at No. 6 Florida (no line): This was supposed to be a breather for the Gators, but East Carolina is 5-1, its only loss by one point to Florida State . . . Florida 21-13.

Kentucky at No. 7 Georgia (15): At 5-1, UK is one of the nation's surprise teams. One more win should get the Wildcats a bowl bid. Wait 'til next week . . . Georgia 27-10.

No. 8 Miami, Fla. at Cincinnati (no line): Since dropping their opener to Florida 28-3, the Hurricanes have won six in a row by an average of 24 points . . . Miami 38-7.

No. 11 Illinois (10) at Purdue: The Illini are coming off a big win over Ohio State and looking ahead to Michigan. Surprise, no upset here . . . Illinois 27-13.

Washington State at No. 13 Arizona State (19): The Cougars lost but didn't embarrass themselves against Southern Cal or UCLA, but three in a row may be too much to ask . . . Arizona State 35-10.

No. 14 Washington (9) at Oregon: The Ducks are coming off upsets of California and Arizona. They say good things come in threes. Upset Special of the Week . . . Oregon 27-21.

Duke at No. 15 Maryland (20 1-2): Too many points with the Terps looking ahead to North Carolina . . . Maryland 35-27.

Iowa State at No. 16 Oklahoma (19 1-2): It took the Sooners more than three periods last week to realize that Marcus Dupree isn't one of them any longer . . . Oklahoma 37-13.

Michigan State at No. 17 Ohio State (24): The Spartans have fallen on hard times since beating Notre Dame five games ago . . . Ohio State 35-7.

LA must keep 49ers in place

From wire reports

Although the 49ers-Rams clash Sunday is an NFL West showdown, Rams Coach John Robinson says his team must keep the game in perspective. "It's round eight of a 16-round fight... I still think the most important game of the season will be the last one — we play New Orleans and the 49ers play Dallas."...

New Orleans Breakers' were approved for the move from Boston for 1984 by the USFL's 18 owners. The main reason the Breakers wanted out of Boston was their home stadium, Boston University's 20,535-seat Nickerson Field...

Rutgers Coach Frank Burns says no one told him his job is in jeopardy following a 2-4 start this season that included a 20-12 loss to Army. An unidentified source predicted the coach would be fired "at the beginning of November." "I think in any situation where a team is not winning, you're going to get rumors. I guess it happens throughout the country. We're not winning, so I guess that's why it's happening (the rumors)."...
Rutgers is 2-0 against 1-AA opponents, but 0-4 against schools in its classification — Division I-A....

BASEBALL—Willie "Puddin' Head" Jones, 58, longtime member of the Philadelphia Phillies, has died from cancer of the lymph glands in Cincinnati Tuesday. Jones played third for Cleveland and the Phillies from 1947 through 1960 and retired after playing the 1961 season with the Cincinnati Reds. He ended his career with a .258 average, 190 homers and 812 RBI. In 1950, when the Phillies won the pennant, Jones averaged .267 with 25 homers, 100 runs and 88 RBI...

USC baseball coach Rod Dedeaux will coach the U.S. team in the '84 Olympics. His assistants are: John Scolinos of Cal Poly-Pomona, Art Mazmanian of Mount San Antonio (Calif.) Community College, Jack Stallings of Georgia Southern, Tom Hofmann of Grand Rapids (Mich.) Junior College, and Dave Bingham of Emporia State (Kan.) University...

Former minor league outfielder Gerry Berthiaume is new GM of the Britain Red Sox of the AA Eastern League, succeeding Ed Kenney Jr., who on Sept. 18 was given an executive job with parent Red Sox....

BOXING—A 15-round WBA title fight between welterweights Donald Curry of Fort Worth and Marlon Starling of Hartford, Conn., has been announced for Nov. 26 at Fort Worth's Will Rogers Coliseum. Curry is the hampion, having taken the title from Starling last Oct. 23 in Atlantic City, N.J., in a split decision that marked Starling's first professional defeat...

GOLF—Masashi "Jumbo" Ozaki shot a 4-under-par 68 to lead the Ciba (Japan), Bridgestone by one stroke after one round. One stroke back were Hale Irwin, defending champion Hsieh Min Nan of Taiwan and Japanese pros Hideo Ishii, Yasushi Katayama, Katsuji Hasegawa and Norio Adachi...

Texas A&M defensive end Ray Childress was named AP SWC defensive player of the week for his five solo tackles, two sacks and interception against Baylor in a 13-13 tie Saturday.

Dupree enrolls at Hattiesburg

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — Running back Marcus Dupree, after enrolling at the University of Southern Mississippi, hinted that he may try to buck NCAA rules that would prohibit him from playing college football again until 1985.

"You never know what might happen here," the 19-year-old said, shortly after he enrolled Wednesday. "There's always the possibility of going to court."

NCAA rules require an athlete who transfers to sit out one calendar year before he can compete again.

Dupree, who abruptly left the Oklahoma Sooners last week because, he said, he wanted to be closer to his Philadelphia, Miss., home, appeared a little annoyed at the attention his registration at Southern Mississippi had caused.

With his mother, Celia Dupree Conners, at his side, Dupree said that although he had been contacted by Georgia in the past few days, his real choice was between USM and Mississippi State.

He said he looked at the future football schedules of both schools and at the players on both teams before making his choice. "I think Southern has the better players and the better people," he said, adding that "I like Southern and I think it's an upcoming school. I want to be part of it."

Asked if he thought he still could be a candidate for the Heisman Trophy, Dupree replied, "If you perform well on the field, it really doesn't matter what school you're at."

USM officials confirmed Wednesday that Dupree had been given a full athletic scholarship.

Dupree said he did not know the specific courses he would take at Southern, although he had signed up for so-called "QQ," or accelerated, courses, which run half a semester in length.

The college sophomore appeared genuinely pleased at knowing that his studies will be resumed. He spoke of maintaining close to a 3.0 average at Oklahoma, where he was a communications major.

"I figured I needed to get into classes and start back to school because I didn't want to fall behind academically," he said.

He later added, "Academics always come first with me. To me, it's just as important, if not more important, to make an 'A' in class as it is to gain 200 yards in a football game."

Fights

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Bruce Curry, 139¾, Fort Worth, Texas, scored a split decision over Leroy Haley, 138¾, Las Vegas, Nev., 12, to retain his World Boxing Council super-lightweight title.

Crane, McCamey, Stanton face key league tilts

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Area football teams in the Permian Basin have one sure thing to guard against when they resume action Friday night. The problem is one facing coaches almost constantly, and if a coach doesn't face the problem, it usually means his team is out of the running.

The problem? How to keep a team from overlooking business at hand and thinking about future big games.

Crane, McCamey, Stanton, and Greenwood are all potential candidates. All four teams have important games standings-wise Friday, but the games due a week hence are crucial.

As the regular season draws towards a finish, teams have a tendency to base their enthusiasm on the schedule ahead. Unbeaten teams hink of unbeaten seasons. District leaders look to dates with top contenders.

In short, the situation is ripe for an upset.

A look at week seven's area games:

Ozona (3-4, 0-2) at Crane (7-0, 2-0): The Cranes have been the power team of district 6-AAA, but there isn't yet room for celebration. Ballinger is still in the way.

Ballinger, like Crane, is unbeaten on the year. The two teams square off in the biggest 6-AAA clash on Oct. 28. Both are potential upset bug victims, but Crane has a particularly deadly draw when they meet Ozona's Lions. The Lions have dropped three straight, and are on the hot seat. A loss to Crane would end their hopes for a playoff seat. Crane must be careful not to let the Ozona offensive machine rolling. Before district play, Ozona was averaging almost 25 points a game. But the Ozona defense has been suspect, allowing 138 points this year, worst in the district.

If the Cranes aren't thinking too soon about Ballinger, and the Vasquez brothers show up, Crane should have too much stuff for the Lions.

Miles (1-6, 0-2) at McCamey (4-3, 1-1): The Badgers have had some hard knocks, losing a tough 7-0 game to 8-AA leader Wall last week. The Badgers need to rebound against Miles. Miles, as the record indicates, hasn't exactly ripped through the competition.

The Badgers can't afford to overlook Miles, even though the record is bad. Only Stanton and the Hawks are up on McCamey's 1-1 district showing. In a district this small, anything can happen, and the Badgers are aware that they are tied for second with Eldorado, next week's opponent.

Reagan County (1-6, 0-2) at Stanton (3-4, 2-0): This game is especially intriguing. Both teams have been highly enigmatic in getting to their respective district 8-AA positions.

Stanton has been on a year-long roller coaster. The Buffs dropped four straight games by embarassing counts before taking their first two district battles. Stanton's offense, non-existent in the losing streak, has produced 55 points in its district matchups.

As for Reagan County's Owls, the Big Lake team has never gotten off the ground. A slow start last year was reversed in time for Reagan to go 2-1 in the playoffs. This year, everyone waited while the Owls stumbled through non-district.

It's become a habit. Reagan County haslost two heartbreakers, 8-7 to McCamey, and 8-7 to Eldorado. Now the Owls are practically out of it, but Friday's winner will decide a few things in the district. If it's Stanton, the Buffs are back and on their way to a big game Oct. 28 at Wall. Stanton must win one at a time.

The Owls, conversely, need a win for pride and also to stay alive. Something must give.

Greenwood (5-2, 4-0) at Bronte (5-2, 3-1): Quite simply, Greenwood could virtaully guarantee the district 7-A crown with a win at Bronte. The Rangers are red hot winners of five straight, and only Bronte and Eden are within striking distance.

Now for the bad news. Greenwood faces those same two schools this week and next. Two wins equals undisputed championship, two losses throws the 7-A race into complete chaos.

Bronte has gotten to 5-2 by playing get-by ball. Bronte's statistics aren't overwhelming, except for one: winning games.

Greenwood has been awesome against district foes. The Rangers have outscored their four opponents by 101-35. Leading the way is the offensive tandem of running backs Todd Foris and Roger Smith along with soph hurler Chad Longley. The Rangers' Oct. 28 game with Eden looms as large as life on the schedule, but coach Joe Longley should have his team in the ballgame.

Balmorhea (0-5, 0-3) at Rankin (1-5, 1-2): Remember all those jokes about bad matchups? This is one. It's the battle for last place in district 6-A.

Rankin should win it, even though the Devils are having a Devil of a time winning games this year.

Rankin at least has a capable coach in Dwayne Turner and has shown improvement as the year progresses. Balmorhea is suffering through a long nightmare, and scored their first points of 1983 last week in a 12-8 loss to Fort Davis, not exactly a powerhouse. Balmorhea has been on the short end of some lopsided counts and are allowing an average of 33 points a game.

Andrews (4-2, 1-2) at Sweetwater (6-0, 3-0): Sweetwater is very wary of the Mustangs. Andrews is too good a team to be in this shape, having dropped their first two district games before knocking off Fort Stockton last week, 17-0. Sweetwater is good, but there are not many teams in district 2-AAAA that can manage an unbeaten season. If Andrews is back, and against Stockton they were, Sweetwater could be in for a whale of a game.

Lamesa (2-4, 1-2) at Pecos (3-3, 2-1): Pecos has been a surprise, but lost for the first time in district last week to Lake View. Pecos now is faced with reasserting itself. Lamesa has been very much better this year, and should test the Eagles. Nevertheless, if track records mean anything (they don't), Lamesa could pull a few surprises themselves.

This week's area game: Reagan County at Stanton.

Tide's Ray Perkins doesn't miss pros

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Halfway through his first season as a college head coach, and despite losing his last two games, Ray Perkins says he is "having too much fun" to miss the National Football League.

"The fun is seeing a young guy make progress and improve daily and weekly and become a good football player," Perkins said. "That's the No. 1 thing — the satisfaction and being around a bunch of young men who want to play, who enjoy playing, who want to work and improve and who have a great attitude.

"Maybe I'm selfish, but it's harder to get the same personal intangible-type things from professional players. College football is a lot more exciting. There's a lot more spirit and atmosphere on a college campus. In the pros, it's more of a business approach by the players. College football is a big business, but on-the-field coaching isn't approached that way."

Perkins is sitting in a very hot seat, having left the New York Giants to succeed the late and legendary Paul "Bear" Bryant as Alabama's head coach and athletic director. Although he did a thorough housecleaning in the athletic department and says he has shaken off the funny feeling he had before his first game as Bryant's successor, the memory of Bryant still abounds.

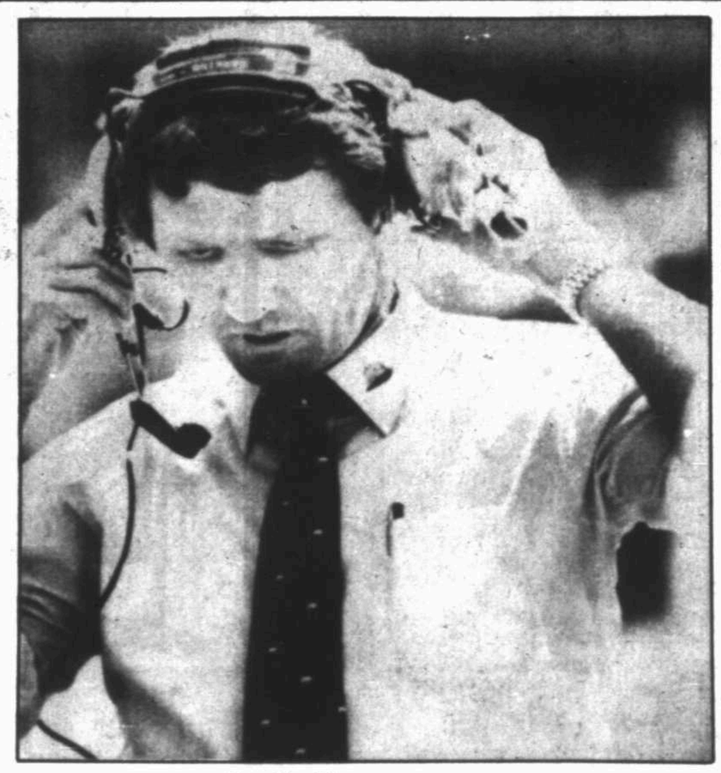

Perkins had said before the opener that he felt funny sitting "in his (Bryant's) seat" on the bus and walking "on his field."

"Getting on the bus from Bryant Hall, I had that feeling. But the feeling has worn off," he said. "It was just a one-game feeling. I don't think about that sort of thing any more, although I think about him quite often. His picture is on the wall across from me. His memory is still here; it will always be here."

Perkins is similar to Bryant in some respects. Like Bryant, he will have a quick lunch at his desk, and he owes everything to the game of football.

"In the sixth grade, I had a leather helmet which I'd fold in four sections and put in my back pocket," he recalled. "But I quit school after the seventh grade to work and make my own money, buy my own stuff. I was a little punk. I knew it all. I didn't need to go to school. It was one of those stages.

"My junior high school coach came and got me while I was mowing the grass one day and put me in his car and literally carried me to summer football camp. That's what got me started in football. Evidently he saw something in me."

Ray Perkins
...likes college atmosphere

By contrast, Perkins saw something during last year's NFL strike which he didn't like.

"I think the pro players should make what they deserve to make," he said. "But it becomes a matter of getting so caught up with it that they tend to lose sight of why and how they got there. If there were no game, they wouldn't be making all that money.

"During the eight-week strike, you never heard one thing said or saw one thing printed about the game of football. I thought that was mighty strange. I care very much for the game."

Rain no delight for tennis fans

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Midland finally got a taste of some rain Wednesday, but there were some people that weren't too thrilled about it.

The USTA Texas American Bank Masters Classic almost got washed out, but a few quick phone calls and the help of the Midlander Health and Racquet club got the tournament going again, at least a little bit.

The Midlander donated free-of-charge the services of their indoor courts, helping the USTA out of a jam and keeping the tournament alive instead of forcing a one-day delay.

The rains that wiped out the Midland College site for the second round of the USTA still created a few problems. Only doubles matches were played Wednesday at the Midlander, so eight singles matches were rescheduled for today. If the weather permits, Masters play will double up and get back on schedule.

If the rain continues, the tourney will scramble again.

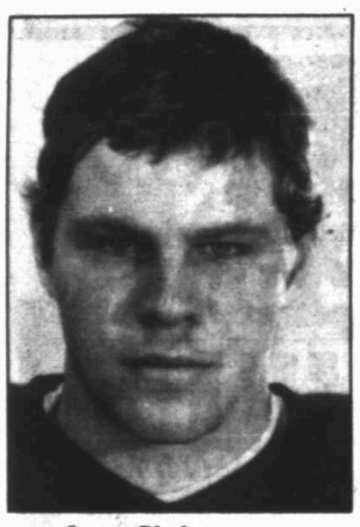

In the afternoon matches, the top-seeded team of Leif Shiras of Milwaukee and David Schneider of South Africa survived a challenge from Joe Leytze of Cincinnati and Richard Akel of N. Little Rock, 6-1, 3-6, 6-4. Shiras was the aggressor in the match, and is the third-seeded singles player. The rain postponed his scheduled second-round match against 13th seed Tom Csipkay of Wycoff, N.J.

Csipkay, too won an opening doubles match with partner Bud Cox of Atlanta. Cox and Csipkay, unseeded in doubles, jolted past the third-seeded team of Ben Testerman of Knoxville and Alvaro Fiilol of Chile. Cox and Csipkay won by taking a tiebreaker in the final set to eliminate their opponent 7-5, 3-6, 7-6.

Elsewhere in opening round doubles play, sixth-seeded Jai DiLouie of Dallas and partner Rolando Vazquez pulverized Juan Farrow of St. Louis and Bruce Foxworth of Los Angeles 6-4, 6-2. DiLouie awoke the tourney field on day one with a 6-1, 6-1 elimination of top-seeded Derek Tarr.

The 2nd-seeded team of Gary Donnelly and Tarr struck back with a 6-4, 7-6 wipeout of Mark Tappan of San Diego and Tony Trear. Like Tarr, the 16th-seeded Donnelly was a singles upset victim, falling to Juan Farrow 7-6, 6-1.

Fourth-seeded Paul Kronk of Australia and Howard Sands of Los Angeles disposed of Larry Barnett and Bill Siebel, 7-5, 6-1; fifth-seeded Randy Nixon of Coronado, Ca.and Walter Redondo of National City, Ca., knocked off Matt McDonald of Charlotte, N.C., and partner Mark Witsken of Carmel, In., 7-5, 7-6; seventh-seeded Tom Kieffer of Lakeland, Fla., and Tom Mallinckrodt, 7-5, 6-3; and eighth-seeded Cary Stansbury of Tiburon, Ca., and Jeff Etterbeck of Holland, Mi., eliminated Andis Luters of Trabuco Canyon, Ca., and Brian Joelson of Portland 7-6, 6-3.

James Phelps
...lost 50 pounds, hair

Footballer beats cancer

By BILL HART
Abilene Reporter-News

ABILENE — James Phelps has a big smile on his face these days and it's not entirely because his McMurry football teammates are having an excellent season in the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

James Phelps, a freshman from LaMarque who is the starting center for the Indians, is just happy being alive and seeing the sun shine.

In the spring of 1981, the doctors told him he had cancer of the lymph nodes and six months to live.

That was the last thing he had figured to hear because he "had never been sick a day in his life."

He only went to the doctor in the first place because he had been hit in the stomach with a soccer ball. When he doubled over, he felt a lump and didn't know what it was. Treatments followed and the 200-pounder lost 50 pounds and his hair. However, he didn't lose his competitive edge and that perhaps, more than anything, helped him win out.

"I was shocked when I first heard the news and there was a lump in my chest the size of a baked potato," he said. "The doctors removed the tumor and I was scared for a while. But a doctor at M.D. Anderson (Hospital in Houston) told me to stick to the treatments and have the pride to beat it."

Phelps had a lot of people in his corner. School officials told him he didn't have to come back to school for the final month because of his 87-average, so he didn't have to worry about his school work. His family, friends and high school coaches visited him regularly and tried to cheer him up.

"No one tried to bury me, they always encouraged me, so it was always in the back of my mind that I'd beat it," he said. "That summer, a guy gave me a job as life guard at the swimming pool and he told me if I didn't feel like working to not show up. That helped, too, because I didn't want to sit around the house and feel sorry for myself or just look at the four walls."

In November, a month after his "six-months-to-live period," he walked out of M.D. Anderson with a clean bill of health and with permission to play football.

"After the third or fourth treatment, the spot went away, the doctor couldn't explain it," Phelps said. "I've learned to live with it and I live everyday to the fullest, knowing I've beaten the odds...I made it."

McMurry Coach Rodney Murphy, who had tried to recruit Phelps when he was a senior in high school, was the only college coach to keep up with him after the malignancy was discovered. So, when he got his clean bill of health, Phelps called Murphy to tell him he was coming to school at mid-term.

"I didn't have my hair back, so I wore this Marine cap all the time on campus. I think most of the students thought I was an ex-marine, not a football player," he said. "I didn't tell very many what had happened to me."

He weighed 170 when he came to school, but he went on a weight-lifting program and now weighs over 200 pounds and has been starting at center. If overcoming cancer wasn't enough to cope with, Phelps had another scare this summer when Hurricane Alicia hit his hometown of LaMarque and his house was destroyed. He even had to carry his sisters to safety in waist-deep water.

"The storm totaled our house, but we rode it out," he said. "We went to the second story of our house, but when the storm took off the roof, we went downstairs. The water was waist deep, that's when we went across the street to some friend's house."

Phelps missed the first football workout this fall because he stayed at home to make sure everyone was all right after the storm. Anyone who could outlast a serious illness and then a hurricane shouldn't have too much trouble with defensive linemen and linebackers.

Koch deplores U.S. win-it-all attitude

NEW YORK (AP) — America is caught up in "an ugly winning is everything" frenzy, says Nordic skier Bill Koch, the United States' best hope for a cross country medal at the 1984 Winter Olympics, and he wants no part of it.

All around him at a news conference, U.S. Ski Team officials talked optimistically Wednesday of the team's chances for collecting medals in unprecedented numbers at Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, and Koch's name was prominent in the heady talk.

"We'll be a power to be reckoned with," Koch agreed, "and that's a nice feeling."

He made it clear, though, he would not be goaded by a desire to win medals, gold or any other kind.

"Winning is not the most important thing in sports. What is important, is striving for excellence," he said. "I can get more excited about that than I can about winning."

Koch blamed the public and the press for inflicting the "winning is everything" philosophy on athletes.

"It would so much healthier for kids growing up to participate in sports for healthy reasons, not this ugly attitude that kids are bombarded with and imbued with these days," he said.

Koch, 28, became the first American to win an Olympic medal in Nordic skiing when he finished second in the 30-kilometer race at the 1976 Games, and, in 1982 he was the first American to win the overall Nordic World Cup title. He also is the only American to win a Nordic World Championship medal.

Koch said he gets no joy from his collection of medals and trophies.

"I get my personal happiness from knowing that I have put everything on the line. The act of striving for excellence is what should give a person inner happiness."

Raiders to start Wilson Sunday

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Although the Los Angeles Raiders have won five of their seven National Football League games this season, they'll have a new starting quarterback Sunday night when they face the unbeaten Dallas Cowboys.

Coach Tom Flores announced Wednesday that Marc Wilson, a 6-foot-6, 205-pounder in his fourth NFL season, will replace Jim Plunkett as the Los Angeles signal-caller.

"We made a change for obvious reasons," said Flores. "We just felt that the way things had been going the last few weeks, it would be for the good of everybody, for the team, and for Jim, to take some of the pressure off him.

"He's been pressing, trying to come up with the big play and forcing the ball. This will give him time to sit back in retrospect and recover from this."

Plunkett had his worst game last Sunday since the Raiders moved south from Oakland before the 1982 season. He turned the ball over five times on three interceptions and two costly fumbles and was sacked eight times in a 38-36 loss to the Seahawks at Seattle.

The loss was the second in the last three games for the Raiders, who were beaten 37-35 by the Washington Redskins on Oct. 2. The following Sunday, Los Angeles strugged to beat Kansas City 21-20.

"You can't attribute it all to one position," said Flores, referring to the last three weeks. "When you make a change, it looks like you're pointing fingers, but it's not all Jim's fault.

"We're not doing it just for the sake of change. It's a change we think will help our team and put us back on the winning track."

Flores said the switch was not a temporary move.

Plunkett has started all 16 regular-season games the Raiders have played since their move to Los Angeles. The club has a 13-3 record in those games.

Wilson said he and Plunkett had not discussed the change.

"As excited as I am to play, I can sense the disappointment in Jim," said Wilson.

Plunkett admitted it was a tough situation, but "maybe Marc can give us something we haven't had, which is consistency."

In practice this week the Raiders have focused their attention on the elimination of mistakes.

"It's easy to pinpoint," Flores said. "When you have six fumbles and lose five, three interceptions, and eight sacks, you shouldn't have too many wins — even if you're playing the poorest team in the league, which we weren't."

Despite losing to Seattle, the Raiders are still in first place in the American Football Conference's Western Division. The Seahawks and Denver Broncos, both 4-3, are one game behind.

Wilson's first start of the year comes against the NFL's only unbeaten team.

This request was previously a part of the considerations in Docket 5141 and now has been re-docketed as Docket 5420.

On January 1, 1984, all of the Customer Premises Systems presently provided by Southwestern Bell Telephone Company will be transferred to a subsidiary of AT&T and that subsidiary of AT&T will be almost exclusively responsible for the charges pursuant to the proposed tariff on January 1, 1984. After January 1, 1984, customers who purchase their Complex Customer Premises Equipment and do not purchase, but continue to use, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's inside wire will be subject to the charges proposed in the tariff.

The proposed effective date for these new rates is January 1, 1984.

Persons interested in intervening in this matter should file a written motion expeditiously with the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Austin, Texas 78757, as the Hearing on the Merits in Docket 5420 is set for November 21, 1983.

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — A high school teacher, claiming John McEnroe verbally abused him and then threw sawdust in his face at the U.S. Open, has filed a $6 million lawsuit against the tennis star.

Chris Schneider, a teacher and also a high school varsity basketball coach, said he had a courtside seat at the August match and was supporting McEnroe's opponent, Trey Waltke.

"I was cheering and applauding for Trey Waltke, and only at the appropriate times and not when John was serving," Schneider said by telephone Wednesday.

Browns to keep McDonald

BEREA, Ohio (AP) — Although the Cleveland Browns' Paul McDonald has played only four downs at quarterback all season, he's decided to stay with the National Football League team instead of jumping to the rival United States Football League and getting more playing time.

It was announced Wednesday that McDonald, a fourth-year pro from Southern California, had agreed to a two-year contract with the Browns, passing up a three-year pact with the USFL's Los Angeles Express.

McDonald cited the prestige of the NFL, his respect for the Browns and Coach Sam Rutigliano and the warmth of Cleveland fans as reasons for deciding to stay, even though he'll still be backing up veteran Brian Sipe.

McDonald, 25, took the starting job away from Sipe late last season and led the Browns into the playoffs. But Sipe, 34, won it back in training camp this year.

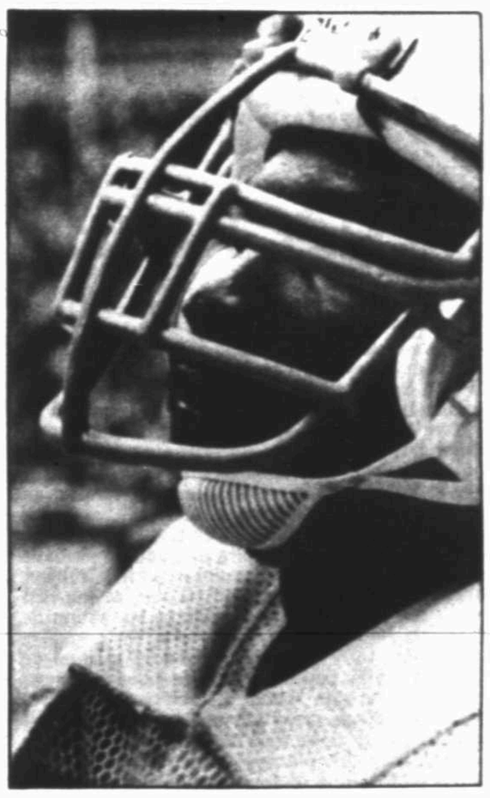

McDonald, whose agent had negotiated with the USFL's Denver Gold as well as the Express, agreed to a two-year pact retroactive to the start of this season.

Terms were not disclosed, but McDonald said the money offers from both teams were good and that his decision was not financial.

"I wanted to play with the best, and that's the reason I'm here," he said.

He called Art Modell the best owner in the league, said he had "immense trust" in Rutigliano and praised the offensive system installed this year by Larrye Weaver, the team's new offensive coordinator.

"I came here in 1980 and I later moved here, bought a home here, moved my wife out here, went to school at Case Western, got a dog out here," he said.

The bird, a vulture, perhaps, in a Gilded Cage.

NFL players ready to make USFL jump

HOUSTON (AP) — Player agent Howard Slusher says six to 10 National Football League players could jump to the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League if he can successfully complete negotiations with Generals owner Don Trump.

Slusher told Radio Station KIKK Wednesday night that the deal was only in the talking stages but added that its consumation would "rock the foundations of the National Football League.

"This would be the biggest deal that has ever been made in sports by anyone, any club, any attorney or any representative," Slusher said. "The players are Pro Bowl players with the exception of one. All are in the prime of their careers. The numbers extend into the millions of dollars."

Slusher declined to name any of the players but among those rumored to be involved include Kansas City safety Gary Barbaro, Washington cornerback Jeris White and New England cornerback Mike Haynes.

"I don't know that a deal has ever been made involving six to 10 players and I don't know if a club ever stocked its team overnight like this," Slusher said.

"The concept would be that all of these players or most of these players would be signed by Mr. Trump to contracts with the Generals," Slusher said. "He might trade one or two of the players or he might keep them all."

Slusher said he presented a list of players he represents to Trump and asked which players the owner might want to sign and then contacted the players on Trump's list and told them he would negotiate a package deal.

"I told them that there would be X amount of money and we would have to divide that up and if one player couldn't agree, then he would have the option to get out."

Slusher said he thought Trump wanted to complete the deal but he felt some of his associates did not want the deal.

"I'm afraid they may think this might start an all-out war," Slusher said. "What it would do is give the USFL instant credibility."

Barring Mantle called ludicrous

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Outgoing baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's decision to bar sluggers Mickey Mantle and Willie Mays from working for major league teams because of their ties to the casino industry is "ludicrous," the New Jersey attorney general says.

The state's top law enforcement officer, Irwin I. Kimmelman, told the Casino Control Commission on Wednesday that the commissioner's ruling constituted an attack on New Jersey's ability to police the gaming industry.

Kuhn "is, at the very least, impugning the integrity of the state of New Jersey in the operation of the casino gaming business," Kimmelman told the commission, which granted Mantle a casino service industry license during the meeting.

"On this issue, the commissioner is way off base," Kimmelman said.

Mantle, who celebrates his 52nd birthday today, will work for the Claridge Hotel and Casino as a "goodwill ambassador," playing golf and rubbing elbows with the gaming hall's biggest gamblers.

Mays has held a similar post since 1980 at Bally's Park Place, another casino hotel in this seaside resort.

The casino commission voted 4-0 — one commissioner was absent — to grant Mantle's license. As a casino employee, state law prohibits the 18-year baseball veteran who retired in 1968 from betting in the gaming halls.

When Kuhn received word of Mantle's contract with Claridge in January, he immediately banned the former superstar from working for a major league team. Kuhn imposed a similar ban in 1980 against Mays, who played for the New York and San Francisco Giants and the New York Mets in a career that spanned three decades.

Mantle will receive approximately $100,000 a year for about five appearances a month for the Claridge. Mays has a 10-year contract to make about 10 appearances each month at Bally's. He is being paid about $100,000 a year for his services.

"Organized baseball will not be hurt by permitting Mickey Mantle and Willie Mays to be officially affiliated with organized baseball at the same time they are associated with casinos in Atlantic City," Kimmelman said.

Kimmelman called Kuhn's decision over concerns of sports betting "a gross overreaction to a phantom that has no chance of materializing."

"Does anyone really think these two could ever be corrupted by anyone, or, that they would use their efforts to corrupt a professional sport in which they have universal respect?" he added. "To even raise the suggestion shows little faith in their integrity, which has long since been demonstrated for all to see."

College football can be cold-hearted business

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN

Once again we have an example of just how cold and hard the business of college football can be in the Southwest Conference.

Ray Alborn is the latest victim.

Last year it was F.A. Dry.

Get another tombstone ready. The blanks will be chiseled in at a later date.

The forced resignation of Alborn at the end of this season appears particularly harsh.

THE RICE OWLS dumped a man who was a Rice Owl to the very core of his soul.

Alborn played football at Rice where he was a captain on the 1961 Bluebonnet Bowl team. His wife, Sue, incidentally, was a cheerleader that year.

For the last 12 years, Alborn has either been an assistant or head coach at the school.

He lived and breathed Rice football. He understood its academic restrictions. He fought the recruiting handicaps hard. After all, he was an Owl. It was his school.

But the bottom line was only thirteen victories in five and one-half years.

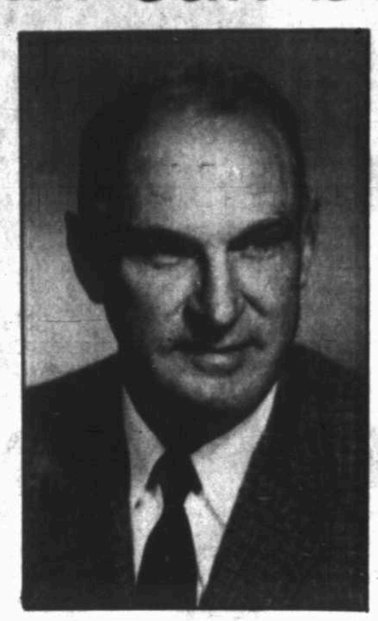

Loyalty and competency meant nothing to Rice; not the friends Alborn made for the university, not the occasional big upset, nor the character he molded, nor the players he encouraged to graduate on time.

"The personable redhead has done a phenomenal job for Rice while bucking big odds to get the Big Blue back in a top competitive status in the powerful Southwest Conference,"reads a paragraph in the 1983 media guide.

Sure.

Thanks for the memories, Ray, and be sure to have your desk cleaned out by Dec. 1.

Alborn resigned because some factions of the Rice alumni demanded scoreboard success. Period.

Jess Neely

Ray Alborn

What these deep-thinking alumni should have suggested was for Rice to get out of bigtime football. Period.

Leave the SWC and field a team in a lower classification or the club level. That's what should have come down.

How dare they expect a winning season from Alborn.

There hasn't been one at the university since 1963.

DOESN'T TWO DECADES of futility tell anyone at the university anything?

What makes Rice alumni think the tiny school can EVER handle a schedule of Texas, Arkansas, Baylor, Texas Tech, Texas A&M, etc, and win the league championship again like they did way back in 1957 when Jess Neely was still coach?

Do some of them still flip through the 1961 college issue of Street and Smith magazine and read the story about the Owls being preseason favorites for the national title?

Will the $300,000 they are going to pitch into the athletic kitty next year help? Or new business-related courses designed for the athletes?

No. Because Rice is never going to get enough athletes to win consistently. They might occasionally and accidentally land a Michael Downs or Earl Cooper; or once in a harvest moon spring an upset over Arkansas.

But 99 per cent of the time the Earl Campbells and Edwin Simmons and Eric Dickersons are going places where the offensive lines are two-deep and the defensive talent is strong.

The Rice alumni are living a dream more far-fetched than Don Quixote's famed fictional jousts with windmills.

Just ask Bo Hagan, Bill Peterson, Al Conover, and Homer Rice.

Those are the coaches since Neely and before Alborn who couldn't bat over .500.

Their composite record was 36-80-4.

NOW, THE OWL "dreamers" have launched a search for a "name" coach who is going to turn all this around.

He's supposed to walk into 70,000-seat Rice Stadium where the Owls are lucky if they draw 10,000 fans and become magic.

He's supposed to overcome the small enrollment, the academia, and the near quarter century of futility.

Please spare us the agony of watching.

It's time for the school to do the thing they forced upon Alborn: Resign.

Pete Rose gestures to reporters as he announces his decision to leave the Phillies.

Pete hits the road

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pete Rose took his unconditional release by the Philadelphia Phillies with his usual homespun philosophy, but made it clear he intends to remain in the majors.

"If it's the best thing for the Phillies for me to hit the road, and the best thing for me, then hit the road," said Rose, 42, who was dropped Wednesday after refusing to accept the status as a parttime player.

"I don't like to play parttime," said the player who is among the top five in almost ever major league offensive category.

"I've been an everyday player for so many years it is hard for me to play three days a week. I'm sure there are some teams out there who want me."

Rose turned down the role the Phillies offered because he wants to break Ty Cobb's all-time career major league hit record. He has 3,990, just 201 short of Cobb's mark of 4,191. He needs just 10 to become the second player in major league history to record 4,000 hits.

He said he had not talked with any other clubs, debunking a report that he had agreed to play for the Atlanta Braves who have a spot in the outfield. There also have been reports he would return to his native Cincinnati, where he played 16 years for the Reds, to finish his career.

Rose's agent, Reuven Katz, who attended the news conference disclosing Rose' unconditional release, said: "Any rumors are false rumors. We haven't had any conversations with anyone. We didn't know until an hour ago what the Phillies had in mind."

Drug haul emphasizes hard truth

AP Special Correspondent

It was ironic timing that prompted a United States attorney to use the six euphoric days of the World Series to haul some of America's best known ball players into court on drug charges.

Two highs — first, the national exhilaration during the process of determining the world baseball championship; secondly, the kind of heady spiral into space induced by sniffing an illegal substance known as cocaine.

The coincidence further emphasized a hard, cold truth. Sports heroes are not, and never have been, gods. They are a segment of society, subject to the same temptations and frailties as the rest of us ordinary blokes — perhaps less immune than most.

Largely, they are pampered and pushed as teens by doting parents. They are given kid glove treatment in high school, proselytized and protected in college, many allowed to get degrees on athletic ability alone with meager education.

Then they are plunged into the professional world — a jungle of feuding club owners grappling for their services, widespread TV exposure, celebrity status, agents and lawyers, cascades of gold running through their fingers in contracts which reach into the millions.

The professional athlete — baseball, football, basketball, tennis or whatever — not only has greater opportunities and temptations than the average guy but also more of the wherewithal to indulge his vices.

This doesn't give him an excuse. On the contrary, as a sports figure in the public eye, he and his profession are under greater pressure to avoid such sordid influences.

Within the past week four former and present Kansas City Royals — Cy Young Award winner Vida Blue, Willie Aikens, Willie Wilson and Jerry Martin — all pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges of either possessing, as in the case of Blue, or attempting to possess cocaine.

THEY THUS joined a long parade of fan idols in almost every major sport whose reputations have been tarnished in one way or another over recent months.

Four National Football League players were suspended for four games each for offenses having to do with cocaine. Five members of the Dallas Cowboys, "America's Team," were involved in a federal cocaine probe but not indicted. They are still playing.

Steve Howe, the Los Angeles' Dodgers relief pitching ace, missed more than a month of the season because of a cocaine problem. Leading jockeys were called to testify on alleged race-fixing although only one was found guilty.

Billy Cannon, onetime Heisman Trophy winner and leading ball-carrier in the NFL, was sent to jail for his part in a counterfeiting scheme. Art Schlichter, a young quarterback out of Ohio State, has seen a bright pro football career damaged by the confession he was a compulsive gambler.

A RANKING junior middleweight boxer, Tony Ayala, was sentenced to 35 years for aggravated sexual assault and other abuses. Police blotters are filled with less serious reports of top athletes punching cops, breaking into department stores and driving while drunk.

One of the greatest shocks occurred when competitors in the Pan American Games in Caracas, Venezuela, were found using illegal steroids. A large number of the U. S. track and field team abandoned the Games rather than subject themselves to tests.

These athletes represent the cream of the Olympics, supposedly the epitome of purity.

The anethema of all bigtime sports is use of and trafficking in drugs — mainly marijuana and cocaine, which have penetrated modern society.

Old-line retailer bankrupt

"Closed for Inventory" signs on the paper-covered store windows of Grammer-Murphey were replaced this week with "Contents of These Premises in Custody of the U.S. Bankruptcy Court."

The store filed Chapter 7 bankruptcy this week, for liquidation of assets to satisfy creditors. Roughly $1.1 million in debt is owed to Texas American Bank, principal creditor, and $400,000 in aggregate debt to trade creditors, said El Paso attorney John C. Akard.

Akard is handling the bankruptcy schedules and filings for John W. Murphey, who is the principal owner of Grammer-Murphey. Murphey, contacted at home, said he would have no statement for the media unless his attorney made one.

In an April interview, Murphey said late-1982 was a depressed time for his store's sales, but things were picking up in early 1983. "It pretty much moves parallel with the ups and downs of the oil business," he noted.

Ken Holt, Midland bankruptcy trustee, said he took control of the specialty store's assets from Murphey, the store owner, after a conference Tuesday, and changed the signs to indicate the fact that same evening.

The petition for Chapter 7 is expected to arrive in Holt's office within the next few days. Bankruptcy schedules have yet to be filed.

"The business had been losing money and wasn't able to continue," Akard said. "This is a traumatic experience for the principals involved."

Roughly 60 employees were told they no longer had jobs at a meeting last week.

The 38-year-old Midland firm was started by John Grammer and Henry Murphey in 1945 and moved to its present location, The Village shopping center at Andrews Highway and Wall Street, in 1956.

Oil companies plan merger

HOUSTON (SWN) — Minden Oil and Gas Inc. (MOGI) and Patton Oil Co. have reached an agreement in principle to a transaction in which Patton will become a wholly owned subsidiary of MOGI. Under the proposed terms of this transaction, each Patton shareholder will receive one share of MOGI stock for each present share of Patton stock. Patton currently has 2,541,890 shares outstanding. MOGI has 7,180,064 shares outstanding.

Patton has proved reserves of 1.3 million barrels of oil and 2.5 billion cubic feet of natural gas. The production is primarily in West Central Kansas. Daily net production is approximately 225 barrels of oil and 415 Mcf of natural gas.

E. Barger Miller III, president of MOGI stated, "This transaction will enable MOGI to establish a base of operations in Denver from which to manage the company's growing presence in the Rocky Mountain and mid-continent producing areas. Patton offers a strong foundation upon which to build. Assets are good and cash flow is positive. The company has substantial proved undeveloped reserves which can quickly be developed into profitable production. Harold Patton has agreed to stay with the company for at least one year and contribute his considerable expertise to the development program. We believe that both Patton and MOGI share-holders will benefit by the values which will result."

The final agreements are subject to approval of both boards of directors and the shareholders of Patton as well as appropriate reg-ulatory agencies and involved financial institutions.

Patton Oil Company is a publicly traded (NASDAQ symbol PATT) oil and gas exploration and production company headquartered in Englewood, Colorado.

MOGI is a publicly traded (NASDAQ symbol MOGI) oil and gas exploration and production company headquartered in Houston. The company is the result of a merger earlier this year between MOGI, Centura Energy Corporation and the acquisition of assets of Mintex Oil Company.

Entrepreneurs change America

Hearst News Service

Backed by $10 billion in venture capital provided by hundreds of conservative financial institutions, by government soall business loans and by grants from private sources, entrepreneurs — creative men and women who start new businesses on their own — are changing the face of America.

The entrepreneur's green touch is evident everywhere today, Science Digest rep rts in the November issue. His, and her, hands are behind the phenomenal growth in the computer, biotechnical and telecommunications industries, and in mail and overnight package delivery, movies, consumer electronics, fashion, restaurants and more.

German-born Joseph Schumpeter, an economist who taught at Harvard, gave the movement its impetus in the mid-1930s. "Profit arose from change, Schumpeter wrote, and change was the work of innovative businessmen. For him, entrepreneurship was 'simply thehdoing of things that are already being done ... but in a new way.'"

Since 1978, with venture capital behind them, the entrepreneurs have come into their own, Science Digest says.

A. David Silver, whose specialty is investment in new high-tecanology firms, says "the fact has been lost on no one that entrepreneurs appear to make more valid contributions to society than corporate managers do. Certainly entrepreneurs contrast sharply with the power-hungry corporate sharks who find it necessary to detach their heads from their hearts in order to move up within the organization."

Science Digest asks: "What marks entrepreneurs off from the ordinary run of businessmen?" And answers: "For one thing, they seem to have more fun than other people." And quotes Silver: "As a friend of mine put it, 'It's the most fun you can have with clothes on.'"

'Domesticity allowance' may be answer

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst European Correspondent

PARIS — Is a "domesticity allowance" the answer to mass unemployment?

The idea of paying a husband or wife to stay at home while the other adult member of the household goes out to work is gaining ground among economists and politicians in Western Europe.

It was put forward at this week's Conservative Party conference in Britain, and in France it is currently under study at the ministry of labor. Some authorities view it as a "successor" to shared work as a concept for reducing chronic unemployment in the industrialized West. The latter idea has been tried with only middling effect in countries of high unemployment like France and the Netherlands.

The latest advocates of the scheme, like Professor Jean Bourrouse of Paris University, emphasize that it possesses a number of advantages, at least theoretically, beyond cutting the number on the unemployment rolls.

"It would provide a much-needed boost to family life and undoubtedly save the state money in the end by reducing delinquency among the young since children would have someone in the home to supervise them," he said. "In a nation like France, it would also very substantially reduce the amount of public money that is now spent on subsidizing nurseries for working mothers."

Critics say the proposal is bound to run into heated opposition from feminists, who see it as a modernized version of the belief that a woman's place is in the home. Bourrouse emphatically rejects this.

"In the first place, it recognizes the claim that household duties are just as much of a job as being employed in an office or factory and should be paid for," he pointed out. "Women have demanded this for years. Secondly, nothing in the scheme would compel the wife to be the one who remains at home. It could just as well be her husband. That would depend on individual circumstances."

Purely on economic grounds, the scheme's proponents explain that it is free of the built-in disadvantages which burden the concept of putting more people to work by having each work shorter hours. France's Socialists were highly favorable to that idea when they came to power two years ago, and introduced legislation to reduce the work week progressively to 35 hours.

"In the present economic climate, employers have been hesitant to add more staff," Jean-Marie Cardinal of the labor ministry admitted. "They have been inclined to make do with fewer man-hours."

Many companies complain also that the shorter work week has lessened productivity and added to manufacturing costs, thus making it even less feasible for them to hire more people. Instead, they say, it leads to situations in which the decision to be weighed is not whether to hire but whether to fire.

Whatever the proposals, it is clear to politicians, businessmen and economists alike that even an improvement in economic conditions in the near future will do little to reduce unemployment in Europe, now well over 12 million in the 10 Common Market countries. Projections by the Paris-based Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development suggest there could be 35 million jobless in the top two-dozen industrial nations of the world before the end of this decade.

AT&T hit with double-barreled blast of bad news

NEW YORK (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co., in a double-barreled round of bad news, said profit fell 27.7 percent in the third quarter and that earnings for all of 1983 would be reduced by $5.2 billion because of accounting changes as it prepares for its splitup in January.

In response to the two separate announcements Wednesday, AT&T stock fell $1.375 to close at $62.875 a share. Almost 6 million shares changed hands, making AT&T the most active issue on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said the earnings report for the July-September quarter was the biggest disappointment.

"It was a shock," said Donna Meidinger, an analyst who follows AT&T for the St. Louis investment firm A.G. Edwards & Sons Inc.

But she was less troubled about AT&T's plans for the huge writedown against earnings at year's end, saying, "I don't view that as anything worthy of alarm."

Charles Brown, AT&T's chairman, said accounting changes to reflect the company's shift from a regulated utility to a competitive telecommunications business would reduce earnings by about $5.50 a share, more than the per-share profit for the first nine months of the year.

Asked why AT&T decided to take such a huge charge against earnings at one time, Brown said: "It is generally considered more comfortable to take the dog's tail off all at once than an inch at a time."

But Brown added he did not expect a loss for the year and emphasized that the writedown against earnings would have no impact on the company's ability to pay bills, invest new funds into its business or make dividend payments to shareholders.

He also said the change in accounting practices would not have any impact on the assets or income of any Bell System telephone company that will be divested. He said it is reasonable to assume the divested companies, which will remain regulated utilities, would not adopt similar accounting changes.

Bradford Peery, an analyst at the San Francisco investment firm Sutro & Co. Inc., said that as long as the accounting change does not affect rates for AT&T long-distance telephone service, "the impact is negligible."

AT&T said profit in the third quarter fell to $1.46 billion, or $1.51 a share, from $2.02 billion, or $2.32 a share, a year earlier. Revenue rose 5.4 percent to $17.5 billion from $16.6 billion in the third quarter of 1982.

Brown said the results "do not constitute a trend but, rather, are the product of cross-currents in the economy, in our operations and in our efforts to ready the Bell System for diverstiture."

"The lingering effects of recession are still with us," Brown said. "Long distance volumes are up only 3 percent over a year ago. Western Electric sales to the Bell companies are substantially below forecast, reflecting tight control of capital budgets and vigorous expense control measures."

A strike in August also reduced sales by Western Electric, he said.

For the first nine months of the year, AT&T earnings fell 11.4 percent to $5.12 billion, or $5.41 a share, from $5.78 billion, or $6.76 a share, in the same period last year. Revenue climbed 7 percent to $51.8 billion from $48.4 billion.

On Jan. 1, 1984, AT&T is scheduled to give up its 22 wholly owned local telephone companies as part of a settlement of government anti-trust charges.

That will leave it with AT&T Communications, its long-distance service; Western Electric Co., its manufacturing arm; Bell Laboratories, its research unit; AT&T Information Systems, its advanced communications business; and AT&T International, its international sales and communications business.

In preparation for the breakup of the Bell System, Brown said AT&T was changing its accounting practices.

As a result, he said that at year's end, AT&T would:

—Write down about $7.3 billion of its $23 billion in telephone equipment assets, reducing earnings by about $3.8 billion.

—Establish deferred income tax credits related to the equipment, totaling about $360 million.

From Wire Reports

BankAmerica Corp. reported a sharp decline in its third-quarter earnings Wednesday and disclosed that it had contributed another $50 million in capital to Seafirst Corp., the troubled bank holding company in Seattle that BankAmerica acquired in July.

San Francisco-based BankAmerica, holding company for Bank of America, said it earned $76 million in the three months ended Sept. 30, down 29 percent from its profit of $107 million in the same period of 1982.

Net income for the first nine months of 1983 was $338 million, down from $380 million during the same period a year ago.

The third-quarter earnings decline would have been even greater if Seafirst's loss for the quarter of $34.6 million, also reported Wednesday, had been fully accounted for. Officials said that adjusting Seafirst's assets and liabilities to fair market value at the time of the merger reduced BankAmerica's income by only $100,000 in the third period as a result of the Seafirst loss.

Although securities analysts had been expecting a poor earnings performance by BankAmerica, the decline in profits was sharper than expected. Earnings were hurt not only by problems at Seafirst, but also by recession-induced loan losses and the continuing world-debt crisis.

BankAmerica officials acknowledged that, like other major banks, it had placed certain Latin American loans in its non-performing category because the borrowers have stopped making principal and interest payments. But officials refused to provide more specific details.

BankAmerica said that its net loan losses in the third quarter, excluding Seafirst, were $165 million, well below the $215 million of the second period but 46 percent larger than the year-ago period.

BankAmerica said non-performing loans, excluding Seafirst, were $2.4 billion, up from $2.1 billion on June 30. Seafirst said that its $34.6 million loss was due primarily to loan losses in its energy portfolio. The Seattle bank was forced to find a strong merger partner earlier this year after a number of borrowers in the energy industry defaulted on loans. Seafirst has lost $325.8 million thus far in 1983, and the bank set aside another $80 million in the third quarter to cover future loan losses.

The Seattle bank said Wednesday that it had classified $1 billion in loans and leases as non-performing, out of total loans and leases of $6.8 billion.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market closed broadly lower for the second straight session in heavy trading today.

Prices rebounded from their lows of the day, however, and the Dow Jones industrial average pared a 13-point decline at midsession to about 4 points.

Shares of Digital Equipment and other computer makers again fell in the aftermath of Digital's surprise announcement Tuesday that earnings were falling well short of expectations.

Adding to the negative sentiment was American Telephone & Telegraph's report today of a 28 percent decline in third-quarter profit, analysts said.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 4.06 to 1,246.75, its lowest level in two weeks.

BUSINESS MIRROR

'No-load' funds shifting the burden

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It's a common precept in the game of mutual-fund investing that smart players concentrate on "no-load" funds.

This breed of fund is distinguished by the fact that it imposes no sales charge at the time of purchase. All the money you put up goes to work for you.

With a "load" fund, by contrast, as much as 8½ percent of your investment is diverted as sales commissions.

This can be a significant drawback. One typical load fund was offered early this week at a price of $23.02 a share, while its net asset value was quoted at only $21.06. So buyers that day started off nearly $2 a share in the hole.

All other things being equal, this might appear to be an unnecessarily steep admission fee. But all other things aren't always equal.

Some investors, by temperament or necessity, may prefer dealing with a salesperson, who may also serve as an advisor, rather than going the do-it-yourself route of no-load funds.

In addition, the record shows that there are some load funds which have done very well by their customers. In the latest rankings by Lipper Analytical Services Inc., a firm that tracks mutual-fund performance, no fewer than seven of the top 10 funds over the past five years were load funds, with gains ranging from 288 percent to 462 percent.

Obviously, it would have been a rewarding decision to buy into any of these funds in 1978, willingly swallowing the cost of the sales charge.

For investors contemplating the load vs. no-load question today, Richard Curry, an analyst at the investment firm of Prescott, Ball & Turben, has come up with a suggested strategy for cutting the effective cost of the "load" by as much as 50 percent.

Writing in the Cleveland-based firm's monthly publication "Investor News," Curry suggests picking a likely candidate from a fund group that offers switching privileges within its "family" at no charge once you are on board.

Suppose the family includes an aggressive growth fund, a more conservative growth and income fund, a taxable bond fund and a tax-free municipal bond fund. It's the aggressive growth fund (Fund B) you're interested in, but that's not the one you buy. Instead, you start with the growth-and-income fund (Fund A), selling for $10 a share with a sales charge of 85 cents per share.

You wait 30 days, to meet the standard of the tax rules covering "wash," or sham, transactions. Then you switch your money into Fund B.

For the sake of illustration, assume that there has been no net change in either fund's net asset value over the 30-day waiting period. Your investment in Fund B is worth $9.15 a share, just as it would have been if you had bought it directly.

But your purchase and subsequent sale of Fund A has created a short-term capital loss of 85 cents a share. The loss is deductible on your tax return against any short-term capital gains you may have or, within the limits set by the tax laws, against your ordinary income.

"If you're in a 50 percent tax bracket, you've essentially cut your commission in half," Curry says.

It should be noted that this strategy isn't risk-free. It's just possible that Fund B could fare much better than Fund A during the obligatory 30-day wait, reducing the benefit you get.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

IRAs a varied investment

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My husband wants me to close the individual retirement account I have in an insurance company annuity and open an IRA at a bank, because the "summary benefit statement" I received from the insurance company shows that, for the first eight years, the total premiums I would pay would be greater than the guaranteed cash value or the total cash value.

Does this mean my money would not be earning interest for the first eight years, or just that I would not get any interest if I draw it out during that time?

Doyle

A. It means neither. The money credited to your account would earn interest at either a low guaranteed rate or whatever higher current rate the insurance company is paying. Almost certainly, it would be at a higher rate.

What that statement does mean is you would come out a loser if you withdraw your money within eight years. That's because of the commissions and-or other charges levied on your IRA.

Some insurance companies have "front-end loads," which take commission bites out of early annuity premiums — leaving less money to be credited and earn interest. Others have "rear-end-loads," which reduce withdrawal values and give financial kicks in the rump to annuity holders who cancel out within designated periods of time — eight years, in your case.

Q. Aren't all individual retirement accounts regulated by the federal government and, therefore, the same — except for interest rates?

A. Not for one minute. All IRAs must meet the requirements of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 and subsequent federal legislation. Past that, the terms and conditions can vary all over the place.

You can open an IRA at such different places as banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions, money market mutual funds, stock and bond mutual funds, insurance companies and brokerage firms.

Each IRA sponsor can set its own commissions, initial and annual fees and withdrawal charges. Because of the wide variations, it's smart to shop around before opening an IRA.

Core Labs earn more

DALLAS (SWN) — Core Laboratories Inc. reported increased net income on lower revenue for the third quarter of 1983, compared to 1982 results, noting that domestic drilling activity improved steadily during the last three months.

Revenue for the recently ended quarter was $24,199,000, compared to $27,636,000 for the third quarter of 1982, a decrease of 12 percent. Net income for the third quarter increased from $181,000 in 1982 to $1,003,000 for the comparable quarter in 1983, and earnings per share increased from three cents to 17 cents. The third quarter of 1982 was charged with a $778,000 loss due to the devaluation of the Mexican peso. This was the equlivalent of 13 cents per share.

For the nine months ending September 30, 1983, revenue was $73,887,000, down 17 percent from the $88,813,000 reported in the comparable period for the previous year. Net income dropped from $3,170,000 to $1,111,000, a reduction of 65 percent, for the first nine months of this year compared to the similar period in 1982. Earnings per share were off a similar percent, from 54 cents to 19 cents. The Company's previously announced $1,423,000 reserve, amounting to 24 cents per share, in connection with the possible disposition of surplus assets, had an obvious impact on year-to-date results.

The increased U.S. drilling activity is substantiated by a recent count that indicated active rotary drilling rigs numbered 2,283, up 26 percent since the low point of the year in April, and four more than were active a year ago.

Unit coordinators have the best of both worlds

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

They aren't secretaries — but they're not nurses.

Health unit coordinators have the best of both.

"We're part of the health care, but we take care of the clerical duties, therefore releasing nurses so they can get out on the floor," explained Sidney Best, Midland Memorial Hospital health unit coordinator.

Sidney Best

C. Robards

"The job description says you have to have a high school diploma and you have to be personable and be able to get along with people," C. Robards, president of the Midland Area Association of Health Unit Coordinators, said. "You're surrounded by people all day."

ACCORDING TO Ms. Best, unit coordinators were established in hospitals during World War II, when there was a shortage of nurses.

At first, those who performed the tasks of ordering supplies and statistics and running errands were called floor secretaries. The title was changed to ward clerks to ward secretaries to unit secretaries.

"But that really did not describe our jobs," Ms. Best said. "We coordinate more than we are a secretary."

Besides coordinating supplies between doctors, nurses and other floors and departments of the hospital, the unit coordinators act as receptionists and often are the first ones to see family and friends who come to visit a patient.

"WE DO HAVE more contact with the family than with the patient," Ms. Robards said. "A kind word sometimes can settle folks down."

"The station can be as smooth as ice or as rough as cobblestone," Ms. Best added, "it depends on the unit coordinator. Regardless of how busy you get, how busy you may be, you can make it all come out in the end."

The eight-hour shifts can be hectic for unit coordinators at MMH, the two agreed. But the formation of the National Association of Health Unit Coordinators in 1980 has provided inservice training and pushed for continued education for unit coordinators.

The Midland Area Association of Health Unit Coordinators, established a year ago, has made big strides in these areas. Health unit coordinators from Ozona to Amarillo have attended workshops, received informative brochures and asked questions about how to begin their own associations.

"EVEN THOUGH they are bigger hospitals than we are, they don't know anything about the National Association of Health Unit Coordinators or how to establish their own association," Ms. Best said.

But the Midland group of unit coordinators has plans for further development. Presently, only two colleges, one in San Antonio and one in Galveston, have degree programs in health unit coordination. Tentative agreements are being made to add an associate degree program in the field at Midland College.

"We'd like to stop up a lot of the loopholes," Ms. Best said. "We feel like if we could get an educational program, we'd really accomplish something. As we move into professionalism, we can say, 'Hey, our jobs are really important and worthwhile.'"

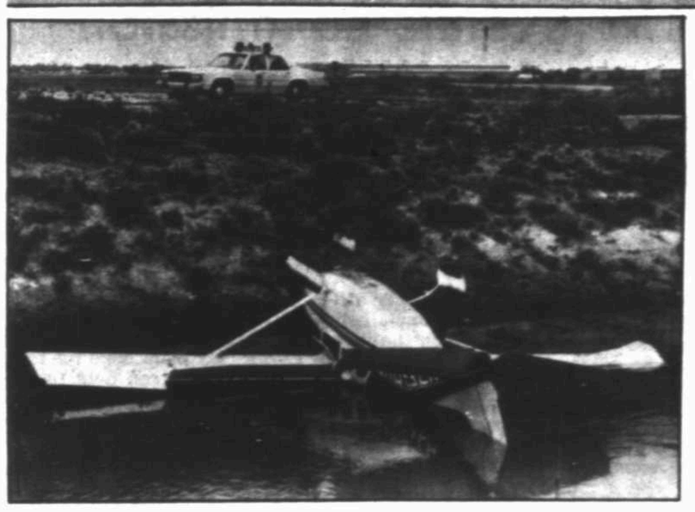

"Some students can get an associate degree and then go on up and get a bachelor's degree in unit coordination and even become an administrator," Ms. Robards said.

"THAT'S WHY we'd like to have an educational program here," Ms. Best agreed. "I'm too old to climb that hill but I'd like to see young people have a choice and get into health care in a way besides being nurses."

One move toward professionalism for unit coordinators at MMH is a three-week training program, followed by two weeks of on the floor training with a unit coordinator. The final step is passing a certification exam, which is given in May.

High waters

Years of interest in justice system pays off for commission appointee

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Ten years ago, articles on the country's justice system caught Lois Carpenter's attention.

Her interest grew and she read more. By the late 1970s, she had worked her way onto the League of Women Voters state board in charge of studying the criminal justice system.

She now has a chance to put her thoughts into action after being appointed and approved to the Juvenile Probation Commission.

"I got interested in justice issues 10 years ago from things I had read," said Mrs. Carpenter, 46. "I became concerned about our system of handling justice."

In 1973, the Midland High School graduate who had returned to the city with her husband and family, was sent as a delegate to a Houston conference sponsored by the Association of Junior Leagues. "There were many nationally-known authorities in the justice area at that meeting. I learned a lot and became more interested in the topic."

She noted in the mid-1970s that leagues of women voters in the north Dallas area were studying juvenile justice in their counties.

"I helped promote it as a study for the state league," she said. After serving as state secretary, Mrs. Carpenter took over the entire state portfolio on justice. "We spent five years studying it; two on the adult system and the rest on juveniles. We took it from the time a person was arrested up through incarceration and parole."

She continued work on the justice system with the league. It resulted in two additional positions: vice president of the Texas Coalition for Juvenile Justice and state president of the Texas League of Women Voters.

From its research, the league suggested the state set up a separate commission on juvenile justice or establish a section under the adult probation commission. The state opted for the first choice and in 1981 the commission was established.

Nine board members were appointed who turned to the chore of hiring a director and staff. That accomplished, the commission began holding hearings around the state on what standards should be set for juvenile offenders.

"It had been up to each individual county," said Mrs. Carpenter. "There were no statewide standards that had to be met. Some had no services for the juvenile."

Lois Carpenter has been studying the justice system and how it pertains to juvenile offenders for 10 years. It led to her recent appointment to the state's Juvenile Probation Commission and a stack of materials to read.

Crime prevention unit presents safety tips program to children

GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

The Crime Prevention Unit of the Midland Police Department completed its efforts to keep Midland children safe.

Sgt. Ron Benton showed a film and talked to Washington Elementary School children about strangers and dangers.

The 20-minute program — safety films and tips — is presented to all elementary school children, according to Benton. Washington was the last presentation.

"There are no children missing in Midland and I think the reason is because of this program," he said.

Also, Midland's PTAs have the Helping Hand, which is a volunteer program, where residents place a green-hand poster in their windows for children who are in trouble. Benton said there are 2,000 participating hands.

"By the time these kids reach the sixth grade, they've seen and heard about the films and the helping hand program," Benton said.

"If you see a green hand in the window, this is a safe house," Benton told the youngsters. "But its only for an emergency. Don't go up to the house to use the restroom or get a drink."

The first film, "Dangerous Strangers" which was geared toward the kindergarten through second grade children, advised children not to accept rides, gifts or talk to strangers. They were instructed to avoid lingering in parking lots and around parked cars. And never, never hitchhike.

In addition, the children were told never let a stranger put an arm around them, or touch them in a way they would not want to be touched.

"If you remember all that, it's pretty hard to get into trouble," Benton said.

"I don't want to see some of you little ones hanging around any parked cars," Benton said. "If you're bothered by a stranger, you need to find the house with the helping hand. You should know where these houses are located to and from school."

He stressed the importance of each child knowing his parents' names, his own name, address and telephone number.

"We see kids, especially at the mall, who wander off and don't know their parents' names," he said.

The film, "Better Safe Than Sorry," for third through sixth grade children was more sophisticated. In the film, kids discussed potential "dangerous" situations. The theme stressed throughout the film instructed children it was better to be safe than sorry.

"They know what to do by this age," Benton said. "Last year we had two fifth graders who were approached by a man. The kids ran back and told their principal and we caught the ol' boy."

Benton told the older children that they were "old enough to know what a person, car and license number looks like. If we've got something to go on, we can pick those guys up. Try to help the little ones. Look out for them. If there in trouble, get help. You know what to do."

As the film set up situations for the older children, it asked the children to come up with the answers.

Tips included: don't accept anything from a stranger; don't get into anybody's car and don't hitchhike.

Benton also told the children who are alone in the afternoon not to let anybody in or give out any information on the phone.

"I'd rather you be safe than sorry," Benton said.

Life is like waves — either you're up or down

It's drought or deludge. Boom or bust. Rich or poor. Euphoria or melancholy.

Life ever is warring in extremes. That's when the state of living becomes pronounced. You're either living high or dying.

For most of the year, West Texas was caught up in another dust bowl. It was tenacious, and the outlook was bleak. Crops, if they broke through the crusted earth at all, withered and died or just looked puny. Blades of grass making up the range land lost their color. Cattle bellowed, and suffering ranchers thinned out their herds. About the only green around was the mesquite, which is as hardy as a cowboy's boot heel.

Now, the heavenly clouds pour out their wondrous nectar. It soaks the good earth and brings relief. The earth sighs and smiles. The streets are over run with water. Farmers and ranchers wonder why it took the rain clouds so long to form over West Texas and break open. That's just nature's wiles, and they don't argue with the Rain Maker.

Of late, equilibrium has been rare. Its forerunner is thunderous and unsettling. As it has done before, Midland went through an onward-and-upward boom. Prosperity reigned; money flowed as freely as a Louisiana rain pours. Bank accounts fattened. Vaults swelled. Banks lent, and people borrowed without thoughts of a reckoning. Oil was gushing, gas was bursting from the earth's crevices, and drillers were eager to exploit the earth's minerals even more. There was nothing but silver linings in the clouds. Indeed, that rainbow which Judy Garland sang about in the "Wizard of Oz" was forming over Midland and the Permian Basin.

Midland was Atlantis.

The fun ride over the ocean waves was over; Midland crashed.

Today, the city and its environs are in turmoil and are groping for that equilibrium — for a settling out and for a balance. For now, the inhabitants want peace and serenity. Meanwhile, the movers and shakers are eager to rush into time until the next boom hits. Many — ever forgetful — again will board the Good Ship Prosperity, put out their antennae, flare out for the wealth, throw out their grapples and dragnets and hunt for gold. They think the journey for them will never end. They take not a moment to consider the sinking of the Titanic. That was yesterday's folly.

The quest for romance and adventure is another boom-to-bust experience. The thrill comes in the search, the exploration and in the cries of "Eureka!" Poems and songs have been written about the journey and the exhilaration of having arrived. Once there, a settling out occurs. But is contentment everlasting? For many, the peace and serenity turns into boredom and into the proverbial "lovesick blues." Disillusionment sets in, and the impulse is to launch out again in the quest for more high adventure.

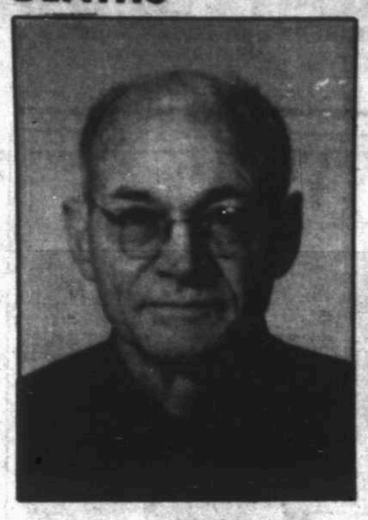

There are those who are blessed, cursed or endowed with the eternal search for the peaks in life. In their quest, they gamble and hit paydirt or rock bottom. They soar and crash. They ride the sine waves of life.

Others try to find the quiet streams. Theirs is a no-hassle adventure in life and a contentment and confinement which the boom-or-bust gamblers find utterly boring and without vim. Even then there are narrow extremes. They are lackluster and lack the depth, the risk, the excitement and the rewards — or busts — of adventure.

The adventurer thrives on the extremes or else he fades away.

Californians claim 'Texas Red'

DALLAS (AP) — A group of Californians, contending they hold the world championship rights to the fiery state dish of Texas, have filed a federal lawsuit against a founders and organizer of the annual Terlingua Chili Cookoff.

The California-based International Chili Cookoff Society contended in its suit filed Wednesday against Frank X. Tolbert that it owns service mark, or trademark, for the phrase "World's Championship Chili Cookoff."

The phrase is similar to the name of Tolbert's non-profit Texas Corporation and, until this year, the name of the annual cookoff of "Texas Red" in Terlingua, a ghost town located near the Big Bend National Park in far Southwest Texas.

Coordinators work in best of both worlds

Nationally, only 600 unit coordinators were expected to apply to take the certification test last year. Of the 4,300 who showed up, three-fourths passed.

AT MMH, 11 of the 30 unit coordinators are certified.

"We hope the rest of the unit coordinators will feel they need to go for certification," Ms. Best said. "It helps us know exactly where our skills are."

The skills have changed since the two began working as unit coordinators.

Ms. Best said she became one in May 1968.

"It was a tragedy in my family that brought me to the hospital," she said, explaining that following her husband's death, she asked Lucille McCoy, director of nursing, if she had a job for her.

"EVERYONE SAID she was so hard and tough," Ms. Best said, "But she was so kind to me. They gave me my first opportunity and put me on 3-West, orthopedics, all on my own.

"I had had very little sailing by myself. That was back when we did everything by longhand," she remembered, adding with a giggle, "Then we got adding machines — my, we thought we were really uptown."

Ms. Robards said she had been working in the laboratory at the hospital since 1973. "I just wanted to do something more, so I transferred from the laboratory into nursing services as a unit coordinator." That was in 1978.

TODAY, the unit coordinators also help train new nurses, Ms. Robards said.

"We train them on the computers so they can do things like order all of the patient's lab tests, order all of the diets, all of the respiratory therapy things and the other functions that a patient has to have. We're always needing tubes or something — and sometimes, the only way to get someone's attention is through a computer."

"But we were here back in the horse and buggy days," Ms. Best said, smiling.

Carpenter appointed to juvenile commission

Standards have been established and "counties now are working to comply with those," she noted. "The only standard that has caused a concern in some parts of the state is they now require juvenile probation officer to be paid as much as the adult probation officer."

In some counties, the juvenile officers are paid less, she explained. This often has resulted in the juvenile officer moving up to the adult probation level to receive the higher salary. Another problem with requiring equal pay will mean the probation officer will receive more money than the juvenile judge, she said.

Some counties had no juvenile board, and these now are being formed. These boards will set the budget for local juvenile departments, taking that authority from the county judge or commissioners.

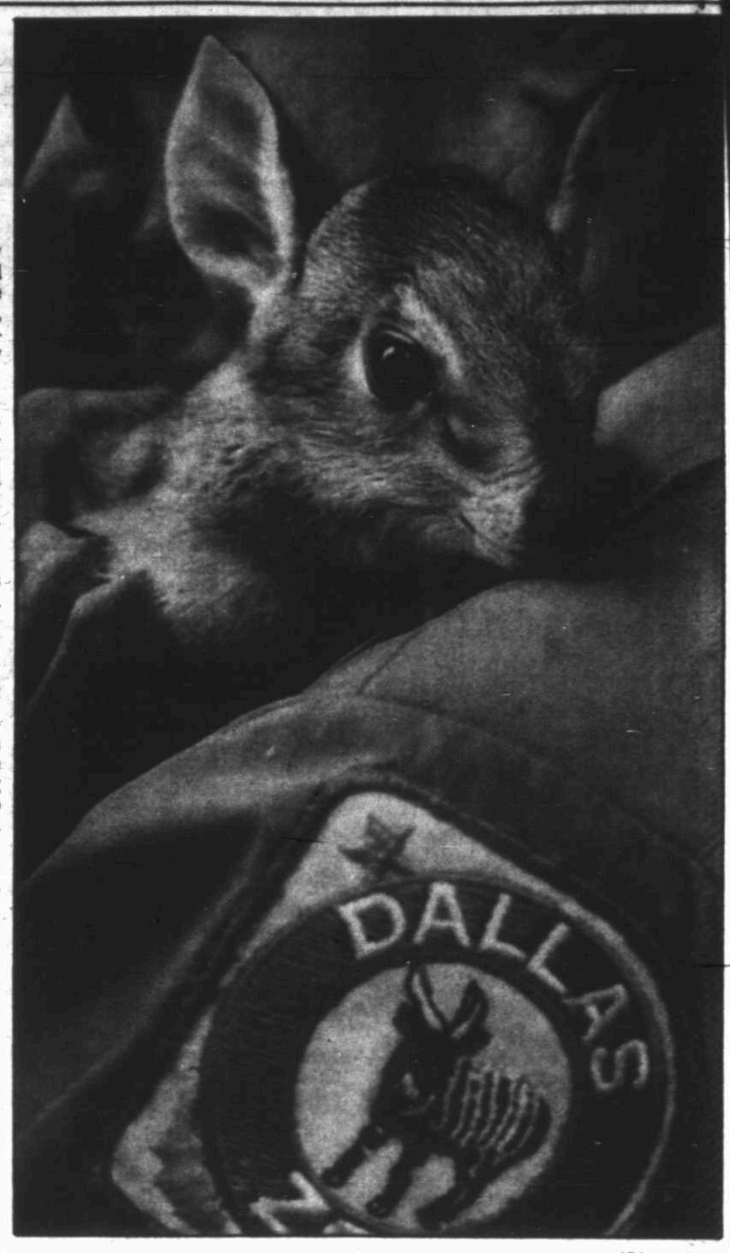

"One thing we're working on is a jail removal study," said Mrs. Carpenter. A federal grant has been received for this and the study should be completed in December 1985. According to a federal law, after that date no juveniles should be kept in an adult jail.

Midland, she noted, has a juvenile detention center known as Culver Youth Home. "We shouldn't need to put juveniles in jail. Federal law says it's forbidden," Mrs. Carpenter said.

The juvenile problem will be increasing as the state's population grows. "My main hope for the commission is we can help turn these kids' lives around so they won't continue to get in trouble with the law as they become adults. We would like to decrease the flow into the juvenile system."

She's hoping to see some good come out of the commission as well as spending part of her time finding out from the public about juvenile justice problems.

Juvenile justice, Mrs. Carpenter said, "is an area I care about. I'm anxious to serve on the commission and I regard it as a listening job as well as a doing job."

Desert Inn night clerk robbed at gun point

The night clerk at the Desert Inn at 3101 Bankhead Highway was robbed early today by a blue-capped man after he asked the clerk for change for a $1 bill, then pulled an automatic pistol on her and demanded money from the cash register, according to police reports.

"I want the money, all the money. Hurry, hurry," the night clerk told Midland police the robber ordered. "I want it all."

The robber, who was wearing dark sunglasses, put the motel's money in a papersack which he had furnished, told Ms. Huffman "Don't try anything or I'll blow your brains out" and fled the motel on foot, said Midland Police Detective Capt. Billy Ray.

Amount of money taken in the holdup was not determined, he said. The robbery was reported about 12:50 a.m. today.

Wise gets Midland, San Angelo route

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Aeronautics Commission gave formal approval Tuesday to an interim order which allowed San Angelo-based Wise Airlines to fly between Midland Regional Airport and San Angelo.

The interim order was issued in August and the airline began operations Sept. 1, a commission spokesman said.

The interim order was based on a favorable staff recommendation regarding the airline.

Wise Airlines has a certificate of operating authority for service between Midland/Odessa and San Angelo, according to the commission.

Ten women named as America's most influential

Hearst Feature Service

They are women of private courage and public concerns, and individually each of them has come to symbolize something substantial. Whatever they do and say — even how they dress — influences all of us. They make us aware of the pressing domestic issues that still confront us, broaden our cultural horizons and bring clarity to the contradictions of the world at large.

A number of women may fit this description but from that group the editors of Harper's Bazaar have named 10 as the most influential women in America. Here are the choices as listed in the magazine's September issue:

Correta Scott King
Civil rights activist

Dianne Feinstein
Mayor of San Francisco

Barbara Walters
TV commentator

Jeane J. Kirkpatrick
Ambassador to the U.N.

Beverly Sills
Opera administrator

Sandra Day O'Connor
Supreme Court Justice

Jacqueline Onassis
Editor

Nancy Reagan
First Lady

Elizabeth Dole
Secretary of Transportation

Gloria Steinem
Women's rights activist

—NANCY REAGAN. She was chosen because of her strong support of the Foster Grandparents program, involving mature citizens and handicapped children, and her equally important role in the battle against drug and alcohol abuse. Says Mrs. Reagan: "One of the advantages of being First Lady is that you have the opportunity and the platform to try to do something about serious problems."

—SANDRA DAY O'CONNOR. As the first woman ever to serve on the Supreme Court in its 193-year history, Justice O'Connor holds a position of almost unmatched clout and stature. Perhaps the biggest and most controversial headlines she's made since her appointment in July 1981 came last June when she wrote an opinion that strongly disagreed with the court's pro-abortion rulings: "Potential life is no less potential in the first weeks of pregnancy than it is at viability or afterward."

—JACQUELINE KENNEDY ONASSIS. She has been part of the public consciousness for nearly a quarter-century and, on a variety of levels, has influenced American thought, taste and trends. In the White House, she showed that style counts — in the arts, architecture, interior design and fashion. Today as an editor for Doubleday she is respected in publishing circles for the works she has helped produce. She says of her job: "What I like about being an editor is that it expands your knowledge and heightens your discrimination. Each book takes you down another path. Hopefully some of them move people and some of them do some good."

—CORETTA SCOTT KING. She has painstakingly created a living monument to her husband — the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change. Headquartered in Atlanta, it is visible, vital proof that civil rights activism has not lost sight of its ultimate goals. "I was always an activist," she tells Bazaar. "More so than Martin when we met. I didn't learn commitment from him. But he gave me an opportunity to strengthen it."

—ELIZABETH DOLE. President Reagan's Secretary of Transportation and the first woman to hold this cabinet-level post, she administers a $27 billion budget and some 102,000 employees, spread among nine different sub-departments. "The challenges are really exciting because of the many kinds of things I'm working on," says the wife of U.S. Senator Dole. Example: the $9 billion program that will upgrade the country's air traffic control system to make it "the safest possible."

—BARBARA WALTERS. Her title is ABC-TV news correspondent, but that hardly captures the breadth of expertise the public has come to expect of her. Watching her, millions know she'll ask the very question they want the answer to. Poised, confident, she says "I'm not afraid when I'm on television. There's a certain kind of security in that. Certainly when you're doing an interview you are the one who's in charge." Real life is somewhat different, she admits. "I don't have that utter confidence or security in my private life. When it comes to personal relationships or raising a teenage daughter, I think I have the same doubts as anyone."

—BEVERLY SILLS. In 1979, at the height of her fame as a world-renowned opera singer, Sills switched gears to assume her present post, a desk job as General Director of the New York City Opera. The singer who showed that temperament isn't always an accompaniment of talent is now dispeling another set of myths — that artists don't make good administrators; that women can't tough it out in the competitive search for funds; that in opera only the classics are box office. Asked about her abrupt career shift, says Bazaar, she answers, "I didn't become a singer because it was a marathon race — to see if I could last longer than anybody. I had sung everything I wanted to and every place I wanted to. It was a nice time to get out."

—DIANNE FEINSTEIN. As San Francisco's first elected woman mayor she's been working hard for her city. Witness her track record. She's managed to reverse the city's $127 million budget deficit and send a once-alarming crime rate plummeting. Such progress is hard won. "I have found this job to be bond-crushing," she says. "Being mayor of a big city is no picnic."

—GLORIA STEINEM. Think back. Not so long ago there was no organized feminist movement, no tacit acknowledgement of equal-pay-for-equal-work and no awareness of the importance of non-sexist language. Today there are all of these things, and one of the people responsible for them is Gloria Steinem. As a key organizer in the fight to have states adopt the Equal Rights Amendment, she wielded great influence. Did she, then, take defeat personally when time ran out for ratification? "No, I felt angry. I would have felt a personal sense of defeat if 60 percent of Americans everywhere had not supported it. But in truth the majority did support ERA and it was a handful of aging white males who kept us from having it."

—JEANE J. KIRKPATRICK. The first woman to serve as chief U.S. representative to the United Nations. The former Georgetown University political science professor has demonstrated thoughtful intellect, direct manner, a low but forceful voice and a witty sense of humor. She's not one to belabor her place in history. "I'm told that I am the first woman to head a delegation at the UN, not only for the U.S. but for any Western nation," she says. "The significance of this is not much different from any other first. Even after domestic affairs in government had been opened to women, foreign policy remained an exclusively male field. Someone had to demonstrate that a woman as well as a man could participate in foreign policy."

Astronaut's job not what it once was

Hearst Feature Service

PALO ALTO, Ca. — Being an astronaut isn't what it used to be.

It used to be that astronauts got their pictures on the cover of Life magazine and rode through New York City in ticker-tape parades.

Authors wrote best-selling books about their adventures, and the books were made into major motion pictures. People told them that they ought to run for president.

These days, though, astronauts are likely to be low-key astronomers or geophysicists, unknown to the public before or after their space missions.

A group of them came to here recently to inspect an ultra-sophisticated solar telescope being built for the upcoming Spacelab 2 mission by Lockheed Missiles and Space Corp.

Among those who will be carrying it aloft will be astronaut Anthony England, a 40-year-old mission specialist who realizes his name will never be mentioned in the same breath as John Glenn's.

"It doesn't bother me that I won't be famous," England said. "That's not what I got into this for. I got into it for the scientific adventure."

England, a geophysicist who has waited since 1967 to make his first space flight, said he doesn't like the way astronauts are portrayed in Tom Wolfe's book "The Right Stuff."

"It's a one-dimensional view, and it makes them seem like stunt men who are only in it for the thrills and the glory," he said. "I don't think I'll go see the movie."

Chinese female author outspoken

Copley News Service

PEKING — After more than two decades of persecution — including banishment to the countryside, hard labor and imprisonment — China's foremost woman writer still is unafraid to criticize the socialist government, but fears too many of her literary colleagues are.

"I'm not afraid to speak out when there are any problems or mistakes," said Ding Ling, who at 79 is still writing and still outspoken. "The thing that worries me at the moment is that there are not many criticisms."

Ding spoke through an interpreter and at times the translations of her comments were rough. However, the essence of her ideas came through.

She blamed the situation on a chilling effect on writers resulting from past periods in China's history in which writers, intellectuals and those believed to carry dangerous ideas were persecuted. Her own career has risen and fallen with those political tides.

"Since the leftist ideas dominated the past few years, there are many limits on one's thinking, so people adopted the attitude not to criticize the government too much," she said. "Even now some people think it's better not to speak out."

Today, Ding's appearance belies the troubles she has had. A Shanghai journalist called her "a very tough woman" who has "suffered a lot."

She appears in good health and her voice is strong. Gray hair frames a kindly, grandmotherly face that peers through tinted eyeglasses. When she speaks, she emphasizes points by gesturing with a curled finger.

Her apartment in a high-rise residential complex in Peking is large and comfortably furnished. Books are crammed into shelves.

Ding Ling, 79, is mainland China's top woman writer.

She serves tea and Japanese crackers to visitors.

Ding began writing short stories in 1927. An early work, "Diary of Miss Sophia," startled China's readers because it dealt with a young woman's awakening sexual desires.

In 1932 she joined the Communist Party and worked as a propagandist, but was arrested by the then-ruling Kuomintang government for her leftist activities.

In 1951, she received a Stalin Peace Prize for her novel, "The Sun Shines Over the Sanggan River," which described China's land reform movement in which farms were seized from property owners and turned over to the peasants. By then, the communists had taken control after a long and bitter civil war.

But she ran into trouble again as China swung into the radical years of the 100 Flowers Movement in the 1950s and the Cultural Revolution of 1966-76.

During the 100 Flowers Movement, the communist government at first invited criticism of bureaucrats and cadre officials and then clamped down on its critics.

Ding, who under the Kuomintang government was persecuted as a leftist, now was accused of being a "rightist." She resigned from the national writers union and was dismissed from her party posts.

The situation only got worse as China moved into the Cultural Revolution, a violent period in which intellectuals were persecuted and killed.

From 1958 to 1970 she was exiled to the countryside and ordered to work on a farm. From 1970 to 1975 she was imprisoned for being a counterrevolutionary and spent much of the time in solitary confinement. And from 1975 to 1978 she was banished to a small village.

It wasn't until 1979 that she was able to resume her writing and was reinstated as vice president of the writers union.

Since then, she has published four books, including essays on contemporary problems and her personal experiences. She recently visited the United States and now is writing a book on her trip.

One might expect her to be bitter about her country after all these years. If so, she didn't express it.

Ding did say that Jiang Quing, the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung's wife and an architect of the Cultural Revolution, "was very bad" and had "committed crimes."

Parrot picks winning Coke tabs

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Young Merlin has probably won more Olympic pins, caps and M&Ms in Coca-Cola's "passport to the Olympics" contest than anyone in this city.

And while child prodigy stories are uncommon enough, Merlin's story has an additional twist: he's a yellow-naped baby Amazon parrot who's just learning how to talk.

Leo Schneider, Merlin's owner, says the parrot somehow is able to pick winning cans — and winning cans only — out of a six-pack, from two six-packs or even a case of Coke — without fail.

"He's become rather notorious," said Schneider, an Orange County Fire Departsent dispatcher. "I think the people at Coke thought I was some kind of nut when I called to tell them that Merlin taught me to crack the code.

"Now I don't even need him," Schneider said, claiming he's picked up the bird's ability to somehow choose bonus cans without seeing the underside of the tab, on which the winning codes are printed. "I can just go into the stores and pick out the winning cans myself." The tabs can be redeemed for prizes in the contest aimed at stirring up enthusiasm for tle 1984 L.A. Games.

Seemingly, no one at Coca-Cola's Los Angeles headquarters believes the story of Schneider and Merlin — and even fewer have heard about it.

"It sounds pretty far-fetched, especially when you bring the parrot into it," concouded Jackie Bostwick, public affairs officer for Coca-Cola. "No one around here (in the public affairs office) knows about it."

But John Gabriel, Coca-Cola's legal representative, knows. After Schneider told Coca-Cola officials he planned to auction off Merlin's secret, Gabriel was told to arrange a meeting.

Merlin first revealed his secret talent four weeks ago while Schneider was unpacking groceries in the kitchen of his Santa Ana home. The bird jumped from atop his cage and began pecking furiously at the plastic on a six-pack of Coca-Cola on the counter.

The bird separated one can from the rest and played with it for about a half-hour. When Schneider took the can from the bird, he discovered it was a winner in the "Passport to the Olympics" contest.

Insulation important in remodeled attic

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

When finishing an attic to serve as sleeping or full living quarters, insulation is necessary to keep the space comfortable in cold or hot weather.

In many cases, there already is some insulation in the attic floor which, in a sense, is the ceiling of the room or rooms below. That insulation was installed to prevent hot air from the first level from going through the ceiling and the attic floor, warming an unoccupied area and wasting money.

If the existing insulation is 3 inches or less, which is usually is, you should add enough to bring it to 6 or 8 inches. You can use fiber glass or rock wool in blankets or batts. Fit them between the joists. There is no need to staple them, but be sure they do not have a vapor barrier.

If you already have blankets or batts with vapor barriers, remove those barriers or slash them freely, placing the insulation with the slashed surface down. Loose insulation can be used in places where it is inconvenient to install the batts or blankets.

The rest of the insulation should be placed between the sloping rafters, collar beams and knee walls and, if there is a dormer, in the dormer walls and ceilings. There also should be insulation between the joists of the floor that extend outside the living space. To insulate a wall, fit the end of a blanket snugly against the top piece of framing.

Working down, staple the flanges to the sides or faces of the studs. Space the staples about 8 inches apart, cutting the blanket to fit tightly against the framing at the bottom. If more than one piece of a blanket is used in the same stud space, butt the ends together tightly. The vapor barrier always should face the side of the wall that is heated in cold weather.

If the stud spaces are narrower than normal, cut the insulation about an inch wider than the space to be filled. Staple the remaining flange, then pull the vapor barrier on the other side to its stud and staple through the barrier.

If you use unfaced blankets, provide a separate vapor barrier, which may be polyethylene sheeting of foil-backed gypsum board. Always read the directions that come with the insulation to find out which types require a covering of some sort.

Remember, insulation fibers can cause temporary skin irritation, so wear work gloves and a long-sleeved shirt. And don't smoke while you are working. Install insulation behind pipes and ducts and behind electrical boxes, but treat electrical wires with care. Don't try to pull or bend them out of the way.

Here are some other tips when installing insulation in the attic:

American couples surveyed

Hearst Feature Service

"All happy families resemble one another; every unhappy family is unhappy in its own way." So wrote Leo Tolstoy.

Maybe yes, maybe no.

How two people work out the balance of power between them is what really determines the success or failure of a relationship, two sociologists found.

Pepper Schwartz and Philip Blumstein asked 6,000 American couples about their money, work and sex lives. The answers are contained in the pair's 656-page "American Couples."

"What brings long life and/or pleasure — they aren't necessarily the same thing — to couples?" Schwartz asks. It's a timely question as the value of marching two-by-two resurfaces in the conservative 1980s.

Of the three areas — money, work and sex — where the balance of power was, or was not, worked out, money was the hottest, most controversial by far.

"You could ask them absolutely anything about sex. But they were furious if you asked how much money they made," Schwartz and Blumstein said in Schwartz's office on the University of Washington campus in Seattle.

The two authors were relaxing for just a moment. Six years of research, analysis and writing lay behind them.

They talk about the problems they found among couples, but they won't provide answers.

"We're not therapists. We don't describe 10 ways to save your marriage or three ways to find happiness," Blumstein said.

"Life is too complex for that," Schwartz added.

Do you pool your paychecks? Read what happens to other couples who do. Read what happens to couples who keep their money separate. One couple even keeps its silverware separate.

Do both of you put your careers first? If both partners did that, Schwartz and Blumstein found, the union was often headed for trouble. In most couples one partner, at least, served as a kind of caretaker for the relationship. Couples where both partners put the relationship first were happiest and most committed.

More than half the couples who answered the sociologists' nation-wide appeal for subjects back in 1975 were married and had been for an average of 14 years. The rest were cohabiting (an average of 2.5 years), gay (together an average of six years) and lesbian (3.7 years together).

From the original 6,000 couples (12,000 questionnaires), 300 couples were selected for exhaustive personal interviews in the Seattle, San Francisco and New York City areas.

To doublecheck their findings, Schwartz and Blumstein queried about half the couples 18 months later. Married people were, mostly, still together. Lesbian couples had the highest record of breakups, to the surprise of Schwartz and Blumstein, who had been told that lesbians had more stable relationships than gay men.

Most of the foundering couples had always argued a lot about how money was to be managed.

Chocolate cookies

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

They are easy to bake.

1 cup fork-stirred unbleached all-purpose flour
¼ cup Dutch-process cocoa
¼-pound stick butter (½ cup), cut in thin pats
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon vanilla
½ cup walnuts, chopped medium-fine

On wax paper thoroughly stir together the flour and cocoa. In a medium bowl, with an electric beater, cream the butter, sugar and vanilla; at low speed, gradually beat in the flour-cocoa mixture until blended. With a spoon, stir in the wainuts. If necessary, cover tightly and chill until firm enough to handle. Using 1 level measuring tablespoon of dough for each, shape into balls; place about 1 inch apart on ungreased cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until set looking and lightly browned — 12 minutes. Let stand several minutes before removing with a wide spatula to a wire rack to cool completely. Cookies will flatten. Store in an airtight container. Makes about 2 dozen.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Living room can be indoor garden

By ELVIN McDONALD

The other day one of my students asked how to turn the living room of a city loft dwelling into an indoor garden that would suggest an outdoor patio. This is exactly what I've done in a high-rise apartment, with windows on only one wall, fortunately half-sunny, and the usual 8-foot ceilings. Here are some ideas:

Use evergreen foliage plants in large clay pots and wood planters as the indoor garden's foundation, as common or as rare as you like. Set into this seasonal displays of flowering plants, bouquets, cut branches, baskets of fruit and vegetables, maybe a pile of pumpkins and winter squash in autumn — whatever brings color and good smells.

Closest to the windows I have ficus and Schefflera arboricola trees. In bright light but little or no direct sun there are ceiling-high dracaenas and the related pleomeles, hedges of tall sansevieria and pothos wrapped around wire circles, and "ground" cover in the form of low aglaonemas or Chinese evergreens.

I train various Hedera Helix ivies into topiary shapes that stand out against the plain greenery. These have a whimsical appearance that never fails to amuse me and they also ofer a regular dose of soul-satisfying gardening.

My newest such project is to direct climbing plumosus asparagus-fern into a tree shape. Here's how:

Attach a 14-inch wire globe (bent from clothes hangers or two wire hanging baskets tied together) on top of a sturdy wood stake trunk, 24 inches tall. Anchor this in the asparagus-fern's pot, 10 inches or so in diameter.

Climbing asparagus is a good indoor plant.

Now gently coax the fern's shoots up the stake trunk, possibly weaving them loosely, braid-style. The fine-laced fronds of plumosus will soon extend through and beyond the wire cage.

This idea for training an old plant may seem new; in fact it is from a turn-of-the-century magazine and appears in the April 1983 issue of "American Horticulturist" ($20 a year including membership in the American Horticultural Society, Mount Vernon, Va. 22121.)

(My notebook newsletter called "Vine Tricks" sketches many other timely training projects for container gardens, indoors and out. For your copy send 50 cents coin and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope with "Vines" written on the back flap to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, P.O. Box R, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14305.)

Q. What can I do for a lipstick vine that seems to be dying a slow death?

A. Make cuttings of the most promising 6 inches or so of tip growth. Set them to root in moist vermiculite; transplant after a few weeks to African violet soil. A half-sunny window is ideal, with soil kept evenly moist to slightly dry.

Quick Take: Ten of the best and easiest growing oriental vegetables, with cultural brochures and recipes, are available for $7.00 postpaid from the Urban Farmer, Inc., 22000 Halburton Rd., Beachwood, Ohio 44122.

Q.T.: The "Hudson Guardian" advises burying banana peels, torn or cut in small pieces, near rosebushes as a source of potash. A friendly barber might alo provide hair clippings to bury under them for nitrogen since six or seven pounds contain as much as 200 pounds manure. (For a free brochure on home sprayers, write H.D. Hudson, 500 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60611.)

Cocaine deaths increase

Hearst Feature Service

No one questions any longer that the use of cocaine has soared. It's become the "in" drug among middle- and upper-middle-class people who can afford the $90- to $130-a-gram prices.

It has been made even more fashionable because famous celebrities, Hollywood actors, professional athletes and high rollers such as John De Lorean have been associated with it.

The death rate from cocaine use has also gone up. Nationally there were 204 cocaine deaths last year, although that figure does not include New York City, which alone listed 79 in 1980 and has far more today.

A 1982 National Institute of Drug Abuse survey found that 8.6 percent of all people over 26 have tried cocaine at least once, nearly double the 4.3 percent in 1979.

For the entire population, said Carol Sussman of NIDA, 21.57 million people had tried cocaine as of last year.

Dr. David Smith, founder and director of the Haight Ashbury Free Clinic in San Francisco and a national authority on cocaine addiction, says there is "a serious cocaine addiction epidemic in the United States."

"Of every 100 people who touch cocaine once," Smith said, "about 30 will abuse it, which means at one time in their life they will have some dysfunction. And 10 of those 30 will develop cocaine addiction: a compulsion to use the drug, loss of control and adverse effects."

Those adverse effects can destroy careers as people lose interest in work and spend all their money on the drug; can ruin family life as users alienate loved ones and undergo drastic personality changes; and can mean withdrawal into a world in which their only contacts are other coke users and their only interest is getting more.

"In 1965," said Smith, "cocaine was perceived as a dangerous drug, limited to the drug culture. Now it has been redefined as a safe, benign drug used throughout the culture."

It's hardly benign.

Because cocaine is a powerful central nervous system stimulant, prolonged use often leads to nervousness, irritability, anxiety, loss of sleep and weight, pacing, teeth grinding, increased blood pressure and heart rates, nausea and extreme paranoia, including hallucinations.

Experts say 1.2 grams an hour — perhaps several dozen "lines" — can be lethal, but it depends on individual metabolism. Most people who get into trouble either inject the drug or freebase it, a process in which it is reduced to its essence and then smoked.

Cocaine stimulates the pleasure centers of the brain, inducing euphoria and a heightened sense of vigor. Studies have shown that monkeys, given a choice between cocaine and food, choose cocaine every time, even if it means starving to death.

In addition to the growing number of cocaine-related deaths, the number of people admitted to hospital emergency rooms and drug treatment programs has escalated dramatically. In the United States last year, 6,190 people were admitted to emergency rooms with cocaine-related problems, a 30 percent increase from the year before.

"The first three deaths from cocaine were reported in 1891," Smith said, "and yet after (actor) John Belushi died (from a cocaine-heroin overdose), I was flooded with calls from media and consumers saying, 'I didn't know you could die from it.'

"Clearly, medicine has known for 90 years, but the culture has lost that information. And if anything, the pattern of cocaine abuse has become more toxic at the same time the culture has been redefining it as less toxic."

Anthropologist studies human 'love signals'

Copley News Service

Research anthropologist David Givens hasn't said a whole lot these past few years. It was enough for the 39-year-old bachelor to sit in airports, salad bars and watering holes and scribble notes while watching the world go 'round.

But he's crossed his last "t" and dotted his last "i" on cocktail napkins. Now he's on the road promoting his edited and typed observations published in a book titled "Love Signals: How to Attract a Mate" (Crown Publishers, $12.95).

Givens set out to study just how people are getting acquainted in the 1980s. He wanted to know if the mating rituals which prevailed in the '60s are the same as today. He wanted to know if the human mating ritual was any different from the animal mating ritual.

"There are many similarities between animals and humans," he said in an interview. "All animals seem to go through the same five-stage sequence; each sequence has its own signs and signals that are traded. It's pretty much a trading of submissive cues — signs of harmlessness because that lets the other sex come closer without fear."

Statistics show there are more single people in this country than ever before. Millions of single people are looking for the right mate.

"And attracting a mate can be a harrowing experience," Givens said. "The whole idea of courtship is to win a mate who is right. And knowing the signals of love can give you an edge."

His philosophy of love goes something like this: "By understanding which signals tell when a prospective mate is interested, a person will have more insight into the matter of whom to woo."

Among the issues Givens is apt to include in a short dissertation of his finding are:

— The five stages of human courtship.

— The signals given off by body language.

"Cues speak louder than words," he said. "There are five stages that take you from the status of stranger to that of lover — attention, recognition, speech, touch and lovemaking.

"Getting attention is the first step. Your eyes meet across a dark, noisy bar. It may have been a striped shirt that activates the edge receptors in your eyes. Maybe it's clinging clothes or a plunging neckline. Maybe it's the color of the other person's hair."

Next comes recognition: "The person attracted is usually not yet conscious that he or she is moving in on another person. There is a need to observe body gestures and eye movements.

"He might turn his body toward her AND, without looking directly at her, he might gaze back and forth across her field of view. She might gaze at him curiously. Their eyes meet ... she tosses her head and then looks away."

Toys stay together

Are bathtub toys scattered here, there and everywere? To avoid this problem take a tip from "Family Circle" magazine and buy a plastic bicycle basket and put the toys in. Attach the basket to the soap-dish bar.

Museum used as design showcase

By The Associated Press

Empty mansions are often turned into decorator showhouses to raise funds for worthy causes in many American cities.

Recently, however, a small New England museum changed the formula by putting its collection into storage and turning itself into a decorator showhouse for a month to raise money for needed repairs and improvements.

The Historical Museum of the Gunn Memorial Library in Washington, Conn., also used the occasion to refurbish the museum itself.

The curator of the museum, which is in a home built in 1781, stipulated that all paint, wallcoverings, flooring and window treatments selected by the decorators should be in keeping with the period of the house.

These would remain when the showhouse was dismantled and the original collection of furniture and artworks was once more installed in the 13-room home.

Gillian Edwards, curator, noted that most of the 17 designers who volunteered their efforts elected to furnish their rooms in early 19th-century style. Some even borrowed museum pieces to use in the rooms.

As a result, visitors to the house had a rare opportunity to see how 18th- and 19th-century decorating styles can be employed in rooms that meet the needs of 20th-century residents.

According to several of the designers who helped in the transformation, the 18th and 19th centuries have a great deal to offer modern homemakers in terms of charm and comfort.

Among the decorative methods used, stenciling, comb painting, unusual window curtain treatments and draped tables were singled out as particularly useful today.

Health program advised

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — "The American way of life may be hazardous to your health," said Jerid Fisher, a University of Rochester Medical Center psychologist and the developer of a "self-health" program called "SKYS."

The SKYS acronym of Fisher's new health program stands for "Stop Killing Yourself Slowly."

People have been led to give up responsibility for their own well-being, Fisher has claimed.

Nine of the 10 leading causes of death in 1900 have now been replaced by more modern diseases of stress and excess — such as heart attacks, strokes, and cirrhosis, according to Fisher.

He urges attention to diet, exercise, and stress management and an immediate end to such "life-robbing" habits as smoking, excessive smoking, excessive drinking, and overeating.

Allergy causes, treatments now better understood

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

A couple is dining in a restaurant. Candlelight, soft music, romance ... a nice little white wine, a crisp salad, lobster tails ... Suddenly one of the diners becomes ill.

No, he is not choking, his date quickly ascertains, but he develops severe abdominal pain, seems to be having trouble breathing, may be going into shock, perhaps even losing consciousness.

Later, in the hospital emergency room, a physician must determine quickly if the ill person is having a heart attack, is a victim of food poisoning (perhaps the deadly botulism or poisonous mushrooms) or if he is suffering from an allergic or hypersensitive reaction to one of the components of the dinner — and if so, to what.

IS HE, THE doctor may ask, an allergic person? Is he asthmatic? Sensitive to aspirin?

Well yes, his date may recall, he does have hay fever. She isn't sure about aspirin, but he gets a lot of headaches.

Just that little knowledge might be enough to save her dinner partner's life. It can significantly help the doctor reach a diagnosis.

He knows, for example, that people who are allergic to pollen or to animal dander are more likely to be allergic to one food or another than those who have no allergies. And some persons who are aspirin-sensitive seem to be especially sensitive to a particular yellow dye (FD&C Yellow No. 5).

MOREOVER, allergists and immunologists are beginning to realize that a common agent used by stores and restaurants to keep salads and vegetables (among other foodstuffs) fresh and crisp, and to prevent discoloration and bacterial growth in many wines and beers, actually may be fatal to some people.

Even in small amounts, in sensitive people, sodium bisulfate and a group of related chemicals, can cause anaphylactic shock, a life-threatening condition similar to that caused by insect stings. (As many as half a million Americans may be sensitive to these ubiquitous chemicals, and many more unidentified chemicals may be causing reactions in some people.)

THE FACT THAT lobster was a part of the dinner is another clue for the doctor. Lobster, crabmeat and shrimp are a relatively common source of food allergy.

Scientists have made great strides in identifying some of the ways allergic reactions occur and for devising protective procedures against allergens in dusts, molds, pollen and insect venom, for example.

They know that most allergies are caused by antibodies formed by their immune systems in response to an "invasion" of, for example, ragweed pollen.

The antibodies, identified in most cases as Immunoglobulin E (IgE) exist on the surface of certain cells — the so-called mast cells - and, in the face of an allergen, cause the mast cells to discharge chemicals like histamine that in turn cause the sneezing, wheezing and almost any other kind of allergic reaction from hives to anaphylaxis.

'Relatives' of some foods may also be dangerous

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Allergic individuals may not realize that if they are sensitive to one member of a food family — peanuts, for example — they also may react to peanut cousins such as green peas, beans, soybeans and licorice.

Here are some other potential trouble foods. If allergic to:

—Tomatoes: potatoes and green peppers.

—Brussels sprouts: radishes, cauliflower, mustard and broccoli.

Also, pears and apples are in the same family. Pumpkin, cucumber and cantaloupe are related.

THE FORMATION OF antibodies to these allergens represents an inappropriate response by the patient:s immune system, a possibly inherited, but still incompletely understood, malfunction.

"Probably, says Dr. Dean D. Metcalfe "there is some kind of defense mechanism against parasites or to help wounds heal which, in allergic people, is misdirected."

Metcalfe is a senior clinical investigator in the Allergic Diseases Section of the Laboratory of Clinical Investigation of the National Institutes of Health.

ONE OF HIS specialities is in food allergies, and he has just completed a chapter on "The Diagnosis and Treatment of Food Hypersensitivity" in a forthcoming textbook on allergies.

"In fact," says Metcalfe, "There is a tremendous amount known about (food allergies), but there is so much notknown that one tends to think we know very little."

Moreover, says Metcalfe, the field has become somewhat controversial because of the growth of so-called "alternative" medicine. many practitioners, some of them with medical training and some without, have begun to apply the term "'allergy' to any reaction or perceived reaction to almost anything. At the same time, many are using diagnostic techniques that are either unproven or have been shown to be irrational."

FOOD ALLERGIES are especially susceptible to misdiagnosis, even by trained clinicians, Metcalife says, because they can imitate so many other ailments and because sometimes the reactions are delayed for hours or even a day or two after the offending substance has been eaten.

They are, in fact, relatively rare. The Asthma & Allergy Foundation of America estimates that around 35 million Americans are allergic to one thing or another or combinations of things — pollen, insect stings, food, drugs, chemicals.

And of them, perhaps 5 to 10 percent may become sensitive to foods. Sometimes the sensitivity is a food-drug interaction or only occurs when two kinds of food are taken together.

"Some people will eat a handful of peanuts or some seafood and have a classic allergic reaction including such things as hives, swelling of the throat, perhaps a lot of gastrointestinal symptoms — the classical sort of allergic reations — usually within minutes of eating," says Metcalfe.

IN OTHER SORTS of food allergies, gastrointestinal symptoms that look like inflammatory bowel disease may show up a few days after eating wheat products, for example.

"In children," says Metcalfe, "the situation is complicated because the gastrointestinal tract is immature, and they may develop sensitivies — to cows' milk, or soy-based formula — that are often transient, that may disappear as they grow older."

Even though this food allergy occurs in probably no more than 1 percent of infants, it is one reason why pediatricians urge breast feeding, especially in families where allergies exist.

"But then," says Metcalfe, "into this setting comes another group of individuals who have as their 'allergic' symptoms such things as abdominal distention, vague abdominal pains, tension, fatigue, headaches, depression, trouble concentrating. These individuals are led to believe, or have led themselves to believe that these problems are due to foods.

"And usually they make a couple of statements which make the whole very difficult to disprove."

FOR EXAMPLE:

—The symptoms occur with 10 or more foods. (Making it virtually impossible to keep away from the foods that precipitate the symptoms.)

—The symptoms do not always, consistently result from eating the food. (Chocolate may cause depression on one day but not the next.)

Says Metcalfe, "What if really means is that anybody eating a normal diet experiencing depressing would fall into this group. And that, of course, can actually include almost everybody." Indeed, he notes, "Of people who have come to us at NIH for treatment for food allergies, we have found about 20 to 30 percent who were suffering from something quite else."

FOR THOSE WHO do have food allergies, treatment is not as simple as for hayfever. There are no "shots" to immunize against food allergies. Sensitivities are usually established, first by eliminating any other disorder that may be causing the symptoms, and then by a series of carefully tested and proven techniques.

Heart checkups for young people advised

CHICAGO (AP) — Greater attention to family patterns and more examinations of young people could lead to better control of heart disease, researchers reported.

Researchers at the University of Cincinnati and the University of North Carolina said that if screening for coronary heart disease focused on the families of heart patients rather than on the general population, heart ailments would be detected more quickly.

To the extent that blood levels of fatty substances vary with such family patterns as eating habits, modifying habits to reduce risks of heart disease "may be most successful when it occurs throughout the family environment," said the researchers, led by Dr. John A. Morrison of the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine.

Their findings were published in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Converted family room maximizes space

By Barbara Hartung
Copley News Service

Q. We are converting the lower story of our home into a family room with kitchen and bath facilities.

Our house is on a canyon with the living room, dining room and kitchen on an upper level. Bedrooms are above that. So our lower story has been a sort of catch-all basement.

After we no longer need it for a family room, we might want to rent out these quarters. Please advise us on how to plan for present and future use. — W.B.

A. For use as a family room and for rented quarters, you'll want to start with well-finished walls and a good easy-care floor. I'd opt for as open a plan as you can, without dividers or bearing walls except where necessary. This gives the greatest flexibility in room arrangement. Consider a wood floor rather than a vinyl one to give you more quality — and it will enhance the room when you want to rent it. For both your present and future use, install a wall of shelves with brackets so you can adjust for height and lower cabinets for storage. This can work well for television, stereo and entertainment needs now.

Q. I wish to decorate a room used as a den and office. The room is 12-by-12 feet with an 8-by-3-foot window facing east. The other wall has medium wood closet doors. The carpeting is a beige and brown cut loop pile. The room has cream walls and is drab. I considered paneling but feel it might be too dark. Furniture consists of a walnut desk, filing cabinet, sewing machine and beige print loveseat. I wish to replace the curtains and do something with the walls, preferably traditional or Oriental, but not modern. I would appreciate some suggestions. — F.H.

A. Why don't you choose a small-print wallpaper that is interesting to go with your beige loveseat? You might select a print with several shades of beige and brown plus gold, blue, shrimp, rose or whatever.

CNS Photo

Large open space in this modern setting is given special interest through the curved shape of the carpeting, repeating th curves in the bookshelves and lower storage cabinets at right. Anso IV nylon carpeting in light blue is from Masland. Architect Stanley Tigerman, AIA, designed the room to take advantage of each inch of space.

Sewing hobby

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

If we are to be successful, we are told, we must have a role model, someone who displays the virtues and talents we nurture in our heart of hearts. Over the years, this role model can change.

I have reached the "empty nest" segment of my life but my role model is myself. I want to be me, just me, with wishes,abilities and frustrations that are uniquely mine.

What does this have to do with sewing? Everything. If we are to do those things we want to do most, we must first know what those things are.

Make a new dress if you want to. Not because you need it, but just because you want to make a new dress for yourself.

Let sewing be something that flows with you and your moods. Do it today, don't do it tomorrow.

Musicians back on bottom rung

They used to be on top

ENTERTAINMENT

LOS ANGELES — They came here recently to play their second gig as a newly formed but unmistakably aging rock 'n' roll band. They were energetic, eager, playing their hearts out, straining against their electric guitar or horn or drums to fill the dark little bar with sound.

Their forceful music, blaring out on the street, sounded loud and aggressive and dangerous enough to draw a crowd had anyone been on the boulevard.

But nobody was outside. And next to nobody was inside.

Still, The Teddy Bears brought their audience — five patrons — to their feet, stomping and whistling for more in the lonely Cafe Orleans.

Little wonder. The drummer, Dallas Taylor, has seven gold records and two platinum records on his wall from his days with Eric Clapton and Crosby, Stills and Nash.

The singer and lead guitarist, Jerry Zaremba, portrayed Eddie Cochran in the popular movie "The Buddy Holly Story" and played most of the guitar licks for the film's star, Gary Busey.

The bass player, Doc Schwebke, has played with such blues legends as Buddy Guy and Junior Wells and the band Chicago, and the saxophone player, Otis Hale, has played with another contemporary blues artist, Johnny Winter.

But that was history, all of it far more impressive than the sight of four men, three of them 35 years old, the other 37, playing in painful obscurity, trying to break in as a new rock 'n' roll band, starting on the bottom rung, competing with kids only half their age.

"I could be diggin' ditches," said Zaremba, who writes most of the band's songs and sprinkles each show with rousing rock 'n' roll classics like "Johnny B. Goode" and "Rip It Up."

Zeremba, a short, muscular one-time amateur boxer, wiped his brow with a towel during a break in the performance.

"I look at this like a spiritual experience," he said. "Like dancing with the gods...whether it's for one person or a million out there...you go out and do it, 'cause if you don't you die, you know?"

Drummer Taylor, who said that he had seen millions of dollars and three Ferraris slip through his life like fine sand through fingers during his career, agreed with Zaremba but emphasized his hopes to make a comeback in the music business.

"This is the best band I've ever been in," Taylor said. "We've only been playing together for a few weeks...it takes time...we're getting there. We'll play for 10,000, I know it."

MC to celebrate Brahms' birthday

The 150th anniversary of Johannes Brahms' birthday will be celebrated at Midland College Tuesday with an 8 p.m. recital by the college music faculty in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium.

"The music written by Brahms has long been regarded by musical scholars and critics as some of the finest examples of musical genius in Western civilization," Dr. Charles Stewart, chairman of MC's fine arts division, says in a news release. "The music faculty members are excited about celebrating Brahms' birthday in this manner."

The program will include piano selections from Opus 118, performed by Dr. Betty Morris; the Sonata in F minor for Clarinet and Piano, performed by Dr. Donald Grant and Ms. Morris; the "Vier Erste Gesaenge," Opus 124, performed by vocalist Dr. Michael Jordan and Ms. Morris; and the Piano Trio, Opus 114, performed by Grant, Ms. Morris and cellist Walter Osadchuk.

A reception in the McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building, will follow the performance. Contributions to the Midland College Music Scholarship Fund will be accepted during the reception.

'Taxi' guest will play villain

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Christopher Lloyd, who recently won an Emmy Award for supporting actor in a segment of "Taxi," plays the archvillain Kruge in "Star Trek III: The Search for Spock."

Lloyd, who is noted for his offbeat roles, will be "barely recognizable" in his "Star Trek" role, said a spokesman for Paramount Pictures.

Leonard Nimoy, who has been Spock, is directing the new movie, due for release next June. Spock disappeared at the end of the second in the "Star Trek" series and everyone has been mum about his fate.

Little hopes 'mud slinging' of election will provide material

By Hearst Feature Service

Rich Little feels it's too early to begin working on an impression of presidential candidate John Glenn. However, he's hopeful next year's election and the accompanying "mud slinging" will be a boon for political satirists.

"Right now, except for (President Ronald) Reagan himself, there's not much else going on. One doesn't imitate Shultz or George Bush," said master impressionist Little.

"You really have to stick with people that are in the limelight and that people can identify with. If they see Reagan speaking almost every night on the news, it's a good voice to do. I'm very lucky to be able to be doing that, and I don't think anybody else is."

Imitating the famous and the infamous has its ups and downs, like everything else. Some periods in history provide riper material than others, he said.

"I'm still doing (former President Richard) Nixon. I mean, I will be stuck with that forever. I think the public wants to see it," said Little.

"The Nixon administration was great because he was a great impression for me," he said. "I think Watergate was the best time. Politics was on everybody's mind. I put out an album at that time that did very well.

"Gerald Ford was tougher because he was a nice man, but a little bland and not too colorful. Then Jimmy Carter came in, and that was a great time. There was so much material with Carter, his brother and his family and his peanuts and everything. That was a good time politically."

"Right now I'm doing a Reagan press conference. You can put a lot of current things into that."

Newspapers. They bring a new precision to audience measurement

Newspapers have just invested $2 million in a major research effort to measure and define the medium for advertisers. Simmons and Scarborough carried out 225,000 interviews in markets that account for 66% of the U.S. population ... 67% of retail sales. Data are available by 24 demographic measures, far more than are available on local TV or radio audiences. These studies are supplemented by CAN DO, the Newspaper Advertising Bureau data bank that provides audience estimates for every daily and Sunday newspaper in the country. If you're tired of guesstimates and want greater media buying precision, contact Uldis Grava, vice president, marketing services, Newspaper Advertising Bureau, 485 Lexington Ave., New York, NY 10017, (212) 557-1854. THE BETTER HALF

"Stanley will be late for work today! He and the alarm clock are re-enacting World War II."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, October 21, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This was the birthdate of Swedish inventor-industrialist-philanthropist Alfred Nobel, for whom the peace prize was named. Also sharing your birthday: jazz genius Dizzy Gillespie, actress Carrie Fisher and Los Angeles Dodgers veteran shortstop Bill Russell. You are a maverick in business and attract a special type of following. Someone with wealth and influence approaches you about a job. You may be offered the financial backing you need for a pet project. An intense new romance could sidetrack you early in 1984. Be careful not to get in over your head. Tackle major work assignments one at a time.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Optimism is high as the work week ends. You find you have secret supporters among your colleagues. Use your clout where it will do you the most good. A financial decision is vital.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A special meeting or business event offers you inspiration and fresh ideas. A romantic rival makes you aware of what you must do. Weekend travel proves interesting and fun.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your social status is linked to the way you handle an invitation. A business turnaround is near. Others find you better company. Count on a special sum of money being paid on time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Other people's mistakes create new job opportunities. Your financial acumen helps you succeed in a business venture. Long-term commitments are possible. Postpone signing papers until an expert advises you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A half-hearted attempt to grab a leadership post will work against you. Go all out! You have talent but lack patience. Happy romance depends on your ability to be fair.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Open new lines of communication to someone who has been helpful in the past. You get a second chance if you want it. Your foes succumb to pressure. Stop pleading.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Give yourself credit for a job well done. You need to cut overhead expenses to maximize profits. Return phone calls promptly or a money-making opportunity could go by the boards.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): End a feud before it does permanent damage. A new assignment will prove to be right up your alley. Those who work hard will be winners. Performance counts more than pure talent.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A raise will come in time. Do not press. Certain "temporary" changes are about to become permanent. A pet helps you deal with everyday pressures. Romance enjoys favorable influences.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your satisfaction will be great when you speak or are honored at a social event. A delightful gift has no strings attached. Your special talents make a big difference in someone's life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may have to dip into savings in order to pay some pressing bills. A transportation snafu could interfere with business. Call if you are going to be late.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your vulnerability in one area could affect your performance in another. Sidestep a delicate issue until someone's wounds have healed. A student receives good news regarding financial aid or grades.

Sweater symbolic for Rather

NEW YORK (AP) — Unmistakable signs of cold weather's arrival: the World Series' final out, the weather maps' first flakes and Dan Rather's new line of fall sweaters.

Rather, anchor and fashion plate on the "CBS Evening News," now has seven pullovers in his closet, three more than he had last winter. Maybe he's expecting a stiff ratings challenge from new solo rivals: Tom Brokaw of NBC's "Nightly News" and Peter Jennings of ABC's "World News Tonight.'

"Some people around here have suggested that I wear bib overalls," said Rather. "Actually, I'm not really that much into fashion."

Rather contends that wearing sweaters has had no real impact on the public perception of him or his popularity, even though his rise to ratings dominance seems to date back two years, to when he first started sporting an extra layer of warmth.

He's right, of course. But as a symbol, the sweater confirms that the viewers' reasons for watching and paying attention to a newscast and its anchor-celebrity often have nothing to do with reporting and communicating.

In the recent heavy barrage of promotion for Jennings, with full-page ads and heavy on-air kudos stressing words like "unique" and "distinguished," he's being sold in much the manner of a prime-time star.

Roone Arledge, president of ABC News, may have said it best on a "60 Minutes" appearance last month: "I think anchoring is something that, unfortunately, many times doesn't have a lot to do with journalism."

So instead of contending that viewers might be better informed by watching Jennings' newscast and going about proving it, ABC, in its ad campaign, stresses the man. He's seen, in shirtsleeves and cufflinks, hard at work.

It's unlikely that this campaign is going to change many minds or dials, particularly in homes that watch Rather regularly. "The core audience is the hardest one to take away," said David Poltrack, CBS' vice president for research.

For the four-week period beginning Aug. 29, CBS Research measured the loyalty of the viewers of the evening newscasts. Eighteen percent of the nation's dinnertime news viewers watched the "CBS Evening News" exclusively, 15 percent watched only ABC's "World News Tonight" and 12.5 percent were faithful to NBC's "Nightly News."

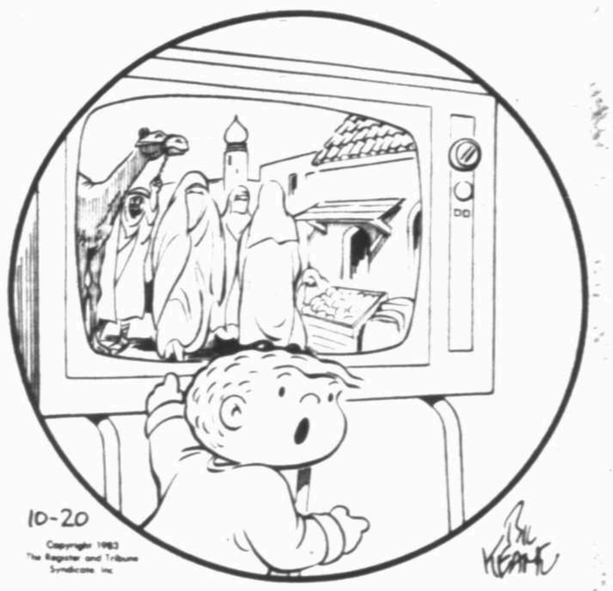

This correlates with the recent measurement week that ended Oct. 9, in which the "CBS Evening News" had a 12 rating, meaning 12 percent of the nation's 83.8 million TV homes were watching. "World News Tonight" had a 9.4 rating and NBC's "Nightly News" 9.3.

4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♣.

Because they make the opening lead, the defenders are usually a step ahead of declarer in setting up tricks. Declarer can sometimes neutralize that advantage by controlling which defender wins a trick.

The auction was simplicity itself. With a minimum opening bid, South had no aspirations beyond game, and there the matter rested.

West led the queen of clubs, and we wager that many declarers would go down quickly. They would make the reflex play of covering with the king of clubs from dummy. East would win and return a club to his partner's ten. A heart shift from West would guarantee that the defenders eventually collect two heart tricks, and a sound game contract would go down to defeat.

The sound technician plays a low club from dummy to the first trick. If West continues with a club, declarer is safe. When East wins the ace of clubs he cannot attack hearts and West has no entry to lead that suit through dummy.

Declarer wins any return, draws trumps and ruffs a diamond in dummy. He gets back to his hand with a trump to take the heart finesse. That loses, but East is end played. He must either yield a ruff-sluff or lead a heart into dummy's tenace. In either case, declarer loses only two club tricks and a heart.

Best defense is for West to shift to a heart at trick two. Declarer counters by grabbing the ace of hearts. He then draws trumps, eliminates the diamonds from his hand and dummy, and throws East on lead with the ace of clubs.

East is faced with the same Hobson's Choice as in the other line. If he cashes the king of hearts, he sets up dummy's queen; any other return allows declarer to sluff a losing heart from his hand while ruffing in dummy.

Unmanned jets being revived, reports Jane's

LONDON (AP) — Unmanned remote-control planes, used with devastating effect by the Israelis in Lebanon last year, are having a revival as the cost of combat jets soar and missile defenses become more lethal, the new Jane's Avionics yearbook reported last week.

Michael Wilson, editor of the authoritative annual on electronic equipment used in aviation, said the remote-piloted vehicles, or RPVs, could "add a new dimension to future wars."

The accelerated development of airborne high-technology and microchip miniaturization of controls means RPVs now have "capabilities undreamed of" when they first appeared 20 years ago.

The possibilities include unmanned planes that could "think" for themselves and perform suicide missions like suppressing deadly ground fire around key targets, saving both pilots' lives and costly fighter-bombers packed with secret equipment.

"They can be made cheaply enough to be considered expendable," Wilson wrote in the introduction to the 1983-1984 Jane's.

"For the first time RPVs can adapt their missions and flight paths to suit prevailing circumstances, without having to be so commanded from the ground," he said.

"Thinking" RPVs would be vital where an enemy used electronic jamming to disrupt command signals to the planes, Wilson said. In that event, the RPV's system "switches itself off from any ground signal and simply continues to act as an intelligence transmitter."

Wilson said there was a "surprising number" of RPVs in Europe, but noted an "absence of specific U.S. commitment" to the unmanned planes.

However, he said the U.S. Senate Armed Services Committee was eager to speed up development of the Lockheed Aquila RPV. The U.S. Army began developing the Aquila in 1979, but does not expect to have it operational until 1987.

Wilson said: "A flood of electronics technology, along with new lightweight materials, has...arrived to lift RPVs from the economic riverbed."

The unmanned planes, smaller than ordinary jets, were developed from the drone used by air forces in the 1950s for gunnery practice.

RPVs were first used by the U.S. Air Force in Vietnam as the bombing campaign against the North intensified with mounting losses of manned aircraft and a political outcry over the fate of their captured crews.

"(RPV's) can be made cheaply enough to be considered expendable. For the first time (they) can adapt their missions and flight paths to suit prevailing circumstances, without having to be so commanded from the ground."

—Jane's Avionics

RPVs flew 3,400 photographic reconnaissance missions and "showed promise" as a "precision weapon carrier against heavily defended tactical targets."

The U.S. Air Force disbanded its last RPV unit in 1978 as interest waned.

But Wilson said that attitude changed when the Israelis used their own Scout RPVs in a series of air strikes that obliterated Soviet-made Syrian surface-to-air missile batteries in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley in June 1982.

Wilson said the Scouts were "brilliantly integrated" with Grumman E-2C Hawkeye early warning planes, Boeing 707 communications jammers and U.S.-made F4 fighter bombers against the Syrians supporting Palestinian guerrillas opposing Israel's invading force.

He said videotapes from the Scouts' cameras showed how the planes picked out targets among the Syrian batteries.

These included "an artillery emplacement under fire from an Israeli position, in which a ranging shot is corrected (on information beamed back from the RPV) and the site destroyed."

Wilson said other Israeli RPVs carried "electronic echo-augmentation devices" to make them look like larger manned aircraft on Syrian radar screens.

These flew over the radar-controlled missile batteries which where activated and then pinpointed by the Israelis who launched surface-to-surface missiles to knock out the Syrian "eyes."

Once that was accomplished, manned Israeli jets swooped down to knock out the missile sites "blinded" by the loss of their radar-guidance systems.

'T-patchers' remember Salerno assault

Invasion was turning point in WWII

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Military tacticians have designated D-Day — June 6, 1944 — as the greatest amphibious landing in the history of modern warfare.

But the techniques that made the key invasion of German-occupied France a smashing success were learned by trial and error during other invasions — the one on Salerno, Italy, for example.

It was at Salerno that U.S. Army forces in the European theater first tested the mounting of an amphibious assault against stiff resistance — a full nine months before D-Day.

Salerno also marked the Army's first foray into Hitler's "Fortress Europe."

IT WAS A decisive point in the war, a juncture at which the United States and its allies began to turn the tide against the Nazis.

Sept. 9 marked the 40th anniversary of the Salerno invasion.

The date is of particular significance in Texas because the first unit ashore early on the morning of Sept. 9, 1943, was the 36th Division, a Texas National Guard unit that had been mobilized three years before.

The men call themselves "T-patchers," after a distinctive emblem depicting the letter "T" against an arrowhead-shaped shoulder patch.

"T-patchers" who survived the ordeal of Salerno now are men in their 60s and 70s. They are lawyers, mechanics, insurance salesmen. Many are retired.

MORE THAN 1,000 live in the San Antonio area, a fraction of the 70,000 or so who served in the division throughout the war.

Henry W. Gonez, a San Antonian who is president of the 36th Division Association, said 1,038 veterans attended a recent 40th anniversary bash in Dallas.

In terms of human life, the invasion's cost was high. Hundreds lost their lives in the face of intense German machine-gun fire and tank and artillery shells. Memories are necessarily bittersweet.

"There's no doubt that the lessons we learned were put to good use at Normandy," said Charles Beachum, a 69-year-old lawyer who served as a company commander, was wounded by shrapnel and went on to earn the Distinguished Service Cross.

Expecting light resistance, the 36th went in under darkness without naval bombardment of the Salerno shoreline.

ALTHOUGH ALLIED forces eventually secured the beach head and moved inland, resistance was unexpectedly stiff and casualities were high.

U.S. military planners had to re-evaluate their strategy.

Charles Beacham, left, and Mac Acosta look over maps while reminiscing about the invasion of Salerno, Italy, during WWII. A Texas National Guard unit was one of the first ashore during the Sept. 9, 1943, assault and the survivors call themselves the "T-patchers."

"Not long after Salerno, they realized that landing at night wasn't the best," Beachum said. "They found out darkness just adds to the confusion, that you could land easier during the daytime with a smoke screen.

"Also, we went in there cold, with no naval gunfire," he said. "At Normandy, you can bet they softened the shoreline plenty, and they landed during the day."

Mac Acosta, a 62-year-old retired civilian worker at Kelly Air Force Base, slogged ashore at Salerno as a 22-year-old buck sergeant. It was the place where he first faced the horror of war.

"IF I HAD known what was coming, I would have joined the Air Force," he said, only half-jokingly. "In the beginning, I was a John Wayne — until I started seeing the dead."

Acosta's squad was one of the first on the beach at Salerno.

The suspicious quiet that greeted them when the front of their landing craft went down soon turned to a blaze of tracer bullets and artillery blasts.

"All hell had broken loose," he said. "It was like we had the 4th of July headed right toward us."

Acosta's squad advanced over the beach to seize its objective: a bridge some 2,500 yards from the shoreline. As things turned out, the sun rose and set that day with the squad pinned down by German tanks and howitzers.

"WE CRAWLED to the bushes and started digging," Acosta said. "When you're under fire, you'd be amazed at how fast you dig."

He recalled that later, after his squad withdrew back to the beach under cover of darkness, he was ordered to help remove the body of a dead GI washed up on the shore.

At first he stalled, telling the major who had given the order that the soldier still might be alive.

"I knew I'd have to do it, but I didn't want to," Acosta said.

Removing the dead soon became commonplace. Acosta learned the technique of straightening the twisted bodies of recently killed fellow soldiers before rigor mortis had a chance to set in with their remains in undignified positions.

HE ALSO recalled seeing an Army truck rolling by with American dead piled high "like a lot of cordwood."

"Feet, heads, hands were all protruding from every corner," he said. "I lost of a lot of friends. Once you were over there, you knew the only way out of a rifle company was to be carried out."

For Acosta, the war ended the following February at the battle of Monte Cassino.

Hit by bullets in the left knee and right thigh, he was kept in Army hospitals until November 1947, more than two years after the war's end. He was operated on 10 times, he said.

His kneecap still bears the disfiguring marks of the bullets' impact. He walks with a twisted limp. His awards from the government amount to a purple heart and 80 percent disability from the Veterans Administration.

"Now that it's over, I guess I wouldn't have wanted it any other way," Acosta said. "If I had done anything else in the war, I don't think I would have been as proud."

New board members appointed

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White on Wednesday appointed John Carroll III of El Campo, Eleanor Conrad of Dallas and Ray Clymer of Wichita Falls to the Texas College Coordinating Board for terms extending to Aug. 31, 1989.

Carroll, 36, is replacing Marshall Formby of Plainview, whose term expired. Mrs. Conrad, 59, is replacing Wayne Thomas of Hereford, whose term expired, and Clymer, 58, is replacing Charles Butt of Corpus Christi, whose term also expired.

White also appointed Leopoldo Palacios of Pharr to a new position on the Finance Commission of Texas for a term extending to Feb. 1, 1985, and Regelio Martinez of McAllen to the Crime Stoppers Advisory Council for a term extending to Sept. 1, 1985.

New university directors named

AUSTIN (AP) — Blas M. Martinez, Laredo businessman, and Gilbert Acuna, Kingsville pharmacist, were named Wednesday as new directors of the University System of South Texas.

Martinez, 47, replaces William H. Baker, Laredo, whose term expired.

Acuna, 41, rekplaces Henry William Finck, San Antonio, whose term expired.

Taxes increase by 7.4 percent

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas received 7.4 percent more in taxes from the sale of mixed drinks during the third quarter of the year than it did for the same period last year, Comptroller Bob Bullock said Wednesday.

Bullock said the state collected $37.2 million from the 10 percent tax on mixed drinks during the three months with 15 percent of that or $10.7 million being returned to the 219 counties and 416 cities where mixed drinks are legal.

The remainder of the tax, $26.4 million, went to the state's general revenue fund.

State sues five employers

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox said Wednesday the state has filed suit against five employers seeking $1,000 fines for failure to file reports of on-the-job accidents.

Under state law, employers must file reports of accidents that happen at work with the Texas Industrial Accident Board.

The firms named in the suits were Temar Inc., Marble Falls; Scurlock Oil Co., Houston; Raytheon Co., Tulsa, Okla.; Leroy Lange Drilling Co., Big Lake and Holiday Inn-DFW, south of Dallas.

The suits alleged that employee accidents at two of the companies resulted in injuries that caused employees missing more than 60 days of work.

'Group taking wrong direction'

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — President Robert Hardesty of Southwest Texas State University said Wednesday a state teaching commission is taking the wrong direction in teacher education.

Hardesty said if the Commission on Standards for the Teaching Profession gets its way, the professional education of teachers would be strengthened "at the expense of their general education and at the expense of skills in the very subjects they teach."

Hardesty said the commission and the State Board of Education "ought to be increasing the requirements (for teachers) in English and math and the sciences and foreign language study, rather than increasing the number of hours students should spend in education methods courses."

Mitsubishi officials visit Texas

Later the group will go to Houston and Dallas.

Car lover restores vehicles

GAINESVILLE (AP) — Opulent cars that once turned heads and transported the wealthy usually end up as hunks of metal rusting beside their more humble cousins in junkyards. Or they are hidden in garages where they molder away, victims of neglect.

But some vintage vehicles are more fortunate. They are placed in Bob Smith's care and are restored to their former beauty, once again to turn heads.

Smith, who parlayed his love for automobiles into a thriving car restoration business in Gainesville, Bob Smith's Coachworks Inc., laughed as he recalled starting his business with only $50.

Fifty dollars of his own money, that is. His dad, grand-dad and a bank loaned him $4,650 in 1978 to help get his business going.

His first job was to restore a 1958 Edsel to its former, rather dubious beauty.

Since that time, he has restored Rolls and Bentleys, and earned a respectable reputation around the country for his talent and expertise in taking shells and pieces of once-glorious automobiles and returning them to their "original condition."

"I'm a working boss," Smith said. When any of his workers have questions, Smith is right there to answer.

When one of his men "messes up or has a problem," Smith tells them, "Don't get mad. Fix it."

Smith emphasized that he was not just the owner of the shop and the boss. He was his employees' friend. "They can always come to me," he said.

Some of his men who now sand, buff and paint, or upholster or do metal work or any of the other jobs associated with restoring cars started out as high school students sweeping up the floors and doing other odd jobs. But Smith saw their potential and hired them.

There are three ways to do a job, Smith said. "You can do a good job, or a better job, or the best job possible."

Bringing a car to 100 percent show car restoration — which is what Smith's company mainly does — is not an easy task. Every inch and each detail of the car must be considrered. But it is a task Smith enjoys.

Smith views his work as an art. His latest masterpiece is a 1931 Marmon V-16. "Over 5,000 man-hours went into the job," Smith said. With the restoration complete, the car is now worth more than $200,000. Smith said it was the biggest challenge he has undertaken in his five years of business. The car was taken to Pebble Beach, Calif., to compete in a major show car competition.

Each restoration job is different, he said, because it depends on what the car owner wants done. Before Smith begins a job he has to get answers: Does the owner want the original color of paint? Is this going to be a "street car" or a "show car"? Are there any mising pieces that will have to be found? How much detail will go into the work? How long is the car owner willing to wait for the job to be complete?

Most cars that pass through Smith's shop have stories behind them. For instance, he is grooming a car once owned by the late actress Ingrid Bergman.

The car, a 1953 Ferrari 212, was given to the actress as a wedding gift by her husband, Roberto Rossellini.

The car now belongs to Smith and a friend. Smith got the car when he "heard it was available."

Smith draws his business mainly from the Dallas-Fort Worth area — about 60 percent. The rest comes from other parts of the state and the country.

Standard tests to offset high grades

HOUSTON (AP) — Teachers are handing out so many high grades that Houston schools have decided to require students to pass standardized tests in key subjects or be forced to repeat the classes, superintendent Billy Reagan says.

District-wide testing in 14 subjects last spring reveals there is "little correlation between grades and knowledge obtained," Reagan said Wednesday.

"The startling evidence that comes forth is how many students are making A's and B's but yet are failing the departmental exams," he said at a student press conference at the High School for Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice. "It is really a shocking situation."

Reagan said school-by-school scores from the sample testing of students last spring will be released within the next 30 days, after the district has determined the cutoff points for passing scores.

The school district board members have approved requiring the tests beginning this spring.

But the policy may have to be instituted with modifications to grant some leniency for this year's high school juniors and seniors, Reagan said.

"We're going to have to make some adjustments or we're going to have a lot of kids failing," Reagan said. "There is grade inflation everywhere. The problem is far greater than we had anticipated."

Students at all Houston high schools were tested last spring with the newly developed departmental exams in order to validate the tests and evaluate the questions. Those scores will have no effect on students' grades.

About 22 percent of the 2,000 questions were thrown out as invalid, some as possibly racially biased, said Michael Mauldin, executive director of student assessment.

Dad given custody of 'dead' child

HOUSTON (AP) — Robert Wayne Deane has been made the official guardian of the 6-year-old son his estranged wife falsely told him had died of leukemia, Deane's attorney said.

State District Judge Robert Baum made permanent a temporary court order which placed the boy in Deane's care a year ago, attorney E. Stanley Topek said Wednesday.

Deane's wife disappeared with the child in August 1981, and later that year the toddler was put in protective custody here after a report he had been physically abused.

"As I recall, she told him the child had died sometime in the first part of September last year," Topek said. He said the boy had been in the care of the Harris County Child Welfare Department for several months by that time.

"She had been periodically calling the husband but not telling him where the child was," Topek said.

Deane contacted the woman's mother, who told him where to find the child, Topek said.

"He was a lucky person, I'll tell you," Topek said. Topek said he had not spoken with Deane, but added the ruling would come as no surprise to him.

Topek said he did not know the mother-in-law's name and would not reveal Deane's estranged wife's name.

Deane and his son, Robert Wayne Deane II, have been living in Orlando, Fla., for the past year, Topek said.

Nation toughens requirements

Foreign doctors seeking to qualify to practice medicine in Australia are going to have to pass a more comprehensive test of their skills in the English language.

Earlier requirements have been toughened to go beyond simple comprehension; now they will specify reading, writing, understanding and speaking English. These tests must be passed before applicants can proceed to examination of their medical knowledge and ability.

What will and what won't change when the Bell System splits up.

When Southwestern Bell Telephone separates from the Bell System and becomes a separate company, you can be sure your local telephone service will continue working the way it always has. We're committed to keep providing high quality, dependable local telephone service at rates that are affordable for everyone.

In short, one thing that won't change is our commitment to keep your local phone service the best—and the most economical in the world.

But there will be some changes in the way you do business with us, from how to handle telephone repairs to the way you're billed. Here's a quick look at what will and what won't change:

LONG DISTANCE.
Beginning January 1, Southwestern Bell Telephone will still provide long distance service within your surrounding area. But calls outside this area will be handled by several other long distance companies. Since there will be more competition in the long distance market, there will be more choices for you as a customer.

TELEPHONE SETS.
Between now and the first of the year, you have the option of buying telephones in your home from Southwestern Bell Telephone. If you decide to continue leasing your telephone sets, ownership of this equipment will be transferred to AT&T January 1. Of course, you'll still have the option of purchasing new telephone equipment from a variety of suppliers. Pending a Federal Communications Commission decision, Southwestern Bell Telephone may also offer new telephone equipment for sale in 1984.

TELEPHONE REPAIR.
If you continue to lease the telephones now in your home, repairs will be handled by AT&T at no additional charge beginning January 1. Telephones purchased from Southwestern Bell Telephone before the end of the year also will be serviced by AT&T, but you'll be charged if your set is out of warranty. Of course, repairs of telephones purchased from companies other than Bell should be referred to the store or manufacturer.

BILLING.
You'll continue to receive one bill for all services previously provided by the Bell System, except purchases of new equipment from AT&T. But each company's charges will be shown separately on your monthly bill. For example, long distance calls placed within your surrounding area and handled by Southwestern Bell Telephone will be shown on one page, while long distance service provided by other companies will be shown on another. Telephone numbers of each company will be featured on your statement in case you have questions about your bill.

LOCAL TELEPHONE SERVICE.
Southwestern Bell Telephone will continue to provide the network for completing local and long distance calling. In other words, you'll still get a dial tone from Southwestern Bell Telephone.

WE WANT YOU TO KNOW.
At Southwestern Bell Telephone, we want you to know about these and other changes that will affect the way we do business together. Watch for more details in the months ahead in ads like this and in your monthly bill insert. In the meantime, if you'd like to learn more about these changes, call us at 1 800 555-5000, toll-free, and we'll be glad to answer your questions.

Japanese imports selling at your Dodge dealer? Absolutely. We're out to give you some of the best values on wheels, imported wheels or not. And we're delivering with Colt, Conquest and Vista... imported for Dodge. Just sit yourself into one of these and feel the quality the master car builders of Japan have to offer. Looking into the specifics, you'll discover the MCA jet engines, standard in Colt and Vista. The Conquest is a turbocharged street performer. Vista is the new way to be a wagon. Fits up to seven grown-ups or 2 people and 58.5 cubic feet of cargo. But, look at it this way, you haven't seen all the imports until you've seen your Dodge dealer. That's Revolutionary.
