Church Wants End To Martial Law; Accord With Solidarity

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's Roman Catholic bishops issued a strongly worded statement today calling on Communist authorities to end martial law and seek a national accord with Solidarity to avoid catastrophe.

At the same time, Poland's Parliament resumed a two-day session devoted to economic and social reform and to ratification of the martial law crackdown initiated Dec. 13 by Gen. Wojecich Jaruzelski.

The bishop's statement, drafted during a two-day meeting that ended Friday, is the church's strongest plea to date for a swift end to military rule.

The bishops also called for the release of the 4,000 people detained without charges under martial law, and amnesty for members of the now-suspended independent Solidarity union who were imprisoned for illegal union activities.

"The situation in which the country and nation find themselves bears all the markings of a true moral, social and economic catastrophe," said the statement, which was signed by more than 60 bishops.

"Those now in hiding should be allowed to come out safely and no one should be fired (from their jobs) for membership in trade unions," the statement said in reference to martial law requirements that employees renounce their union ties or lose their jobs.

It was the first meeting of the episcopate since martial law and since primate Archbishop Jozef Glemp met earlier this month with Polish-born Pope John Paul II at the Vatican.

Glemp, spiritual leader of Poland's more than 32 million Catholics, has spoken out frequently against the crackdown but today's statement places the power of the hierarchy behind the drive to end martial law.

The episcopate meeting, described by some church sources as "stormy," came one week after the state-run media lashed out at some clergy members for criticizing martial law authorities.

Church officials said the statement would be read from the nation's 18,000 church pulpits, but that it was probably too late to have it read this Sunday. It was distributed to reporters by the church, but has not been published by the official media.

The Sejm, Poland's Parliament, will also consider establishing a special court to try former government and Communist Party leaders blamed for the nation's economic and social chaos, Radio Warsaw said.

Several former officials were among more than 5,000 people detained by authorities when Jaruzelski imposed martial.

At Friday's opening session of the two-day meeting of the Sejm, eight bills were passed aimed at rescuing Poland's shattered economy from chronic shortages of food and raw materials and a crippling foreign debt estimated at $28 billion.

The deputies also echoed the Communist Party Central Committee's earlier hard-line endorsement of the martial law decree.

"The economic reform can only be effectively introduced under conditions of calm and social and economic balance," deputy Zbigniew Gertych said. "Martial law creates indispensible conditions for that."

WTC Foreign Student Studying Police Work

By Shirley A. Gorman

Samuel Inyang (pronounced Yong) of Nigeria is a very determined young man. He arrived in Snyder last month and is presently enrolled in the law enforcement program at Western Texas College. Committed to the two year program, Inyang will probably not see home, family, or friends for the duration.

This foreign student is somewhat shy, but once drawn out he becomes a very animated speaker who can regale any listener with his experiences upon arriving in America.

There is no doubt that the decision to come here to study for two years was a very important one for the 30-year-old to make. Certainly he has found life to be quite different here, bt when asked if he had any regrets, Inyang answered unhesitantly, "If you are determined there can be no regrets. I am learning more and getting along fine."

Inyang first began unraveling the red tape that would eventually let him come to WTC in 1980. Since he had decided he wanted to study in America, he consulted a college directory in the office of his country's Commissioner of Education and ultimately read about WTC.

"I liked what I read. I liked the law enforcement program offered," Inyang explained. WTC is also a fully accredited junior college and that influenced his decision as well.

Being accepted as a foreign student is a lengthy process. Among other things, Inyang had to make arrangements for the fees to be paid and he had to demonstrate that he was proficient in English. He also had to arrange to take the ACT test at a Nigerian university.

Even though the loneliness is inescapable, it is made bearable through correspondence with loved ones in Nigeria.

Inyang is a native of Eket in the state of Cross River in Nigeria. He was actively employed by the state as a juvenile investigation officer in the Ministry of Youth. Inyang explained his duties as investigating complaints pertaining to youth sports. He had held that position for three years.

Inyang is studying here at his own expense and with the approval of his government. Even though he is on an unpaid leave of absense, he maintains his job senority. While the position he had held for three years will be available upon his return, Inyang said he naturally hopes for advancement; perhaps even to a position in the governor's office.

"I came here to improve my efficiency," Inyang explained. "When I return I will teach others what I have learned."

Nigeria is patterning their new government after the United States. They are using the pyramid structure.

This is Inyang's first adventure in the United States, but he has traveled to other countries with friends for short jaunts. Even though traveling outside his own country was not entirely new to him it never quite prepared him for arriving in New York City.

Coming from a warm climate, Inyang was dressed in summer like clothes, only to be greeted with a viscious blast of a New York winter. Looking out-

Homestate Savings To Open Here On Monday

Officials of Homestate Savings Association have announced that they will have their new Snyder office open for business Monday morning, March 1.

Homestate's new offices are located in the old Production Credit Association building at 3405 College Avenue. In charge of the Snyder office of the Sweetwater based institution will be two women already well known to many Snyder residents.

Branch manager for Snyder will be La Nelle Joplin. She will be assisted by Debby Farmer who will serve as assistant branch manager.

Joplin comes to Homestate from the Snyder National Bank where she has served as teller for several years. Farmer was the payroll and personnel manager for Northern Electric for the past two years.

Assisting Joplin and Farmer for the first few weeks of business in the new Snyder location will be John Davis of Sweetwater. Davis is a vice-president of the savings association in charge of the company's branch operations.

The opening of the Snyder office will bring the total of Homestate's branch operations to eight. The association is headquartered in Sweetwater with branch offices in Rotan, Hamlin, Abilene, Roscoe, Colorado City, Big Spring and now Snyder.

According to Davis, the association will be able to provide Snyder customers with a full range of savings and loan services. They are ready to assist local customers with their financial needs including checking accounts, loans of all types and they are able to handle all of the available savings plans and certificates.

Although they will be open for a full day of business beginning Monday, Davis says they are planning a formal grand opening celebration for the third week in March.

Say Officers Are Linked To Murders

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Institute for Free Labor Development says it has evidence linking "high-ranking" Salvadoran security officers to the murders of two Americans who were assisting in El Salvador's land-reform program.

"We can tell you right now that this evidence implicates high-ranking officers of the security forces," said William C. Doherty, executive director of the AFL-CIO affiliate, told the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee Thursday. He did not identify any suspects.

The SDN Column

A week ago we had a story about the Texas Employment Commission re-opening its office in Sweetwater. Now, we hear that there is a possibility that the TEC will have an office in Snyder again.

Jerre Howard, manager of the Sweetwater TEC office, called Friday to advise that all TEC records for this area are now in Sweetwater, and that they are prepared to serve the area again following a brief shutdown. Eventually, she said, they hope to have an office in Snyder again, although there is nothing brewing immediately.

This is good news to those who use TEC services, and we understand that many people in this area do use it. But we must wonder about the decision to shut down several dozen TEC offices around the first of the year in the interest of economy. How much extra is it costing to move back into the offices and get them into operation again after closing them for a few days?

This appears to be another case where someone, or some group, fired from the hip and then decided that it was a mistake. Such procedure seems to be more prevalent today than at any other time in our memory. To us, it indicates that either some of our governement officials have worked themselves into a frenzy in an effort to cut expenses, or else they are simply not giving much thought to some of their actions.

These incidents make it more difficult to "sell" carefully designed, long-range plans. There always are those waiting in the background to leap out and say "I told you so" when a rash move begins to bear bitter fruit.

The regular schedule of basketball games has been exhausted, except for the professionals who actually know no season. And if basketball is nearly over, can football be far behind?

We have been fortunate enough to see our share of basketball this season in person and on the tube, and there are some things about the game this year that worry us. For one thing, it appears that there is no such thing as a blocked shot anymore, except in the professional ranks. No matter how "clean" a block may appear to the fan, the men in the striped shirts do not seem to tolerate such things any more. There's got to be a foul when a shot goes awry, they seem to be telling us. If someone complains that only the ball was touched, they say "he got him with his body." This may be true occasionally, but we believe we have seen more Mickey Mouse type fouls called on blocked shots and rebounds than ever before.

Also, we long for the day when the colleges and high schools adopt the shot clock. Some say it will degrade strategy during waning moments of close games. But one of the college conferences experimented this year with a 45-second shot clock (we think that's too long) until the last four minutes of the game at which time the clock was turned off. It will be interesting to see if this catches on.

Petroleum Course Revision Set

Western Texas College is revising its petroleum technology curriculum to offer students a broader base of training, David Higgins, engineering technology instructor, has announced.

Students at WTC can earn the associate in applied science degree in engineering technology by completing the required 71-hour curriculum.

"We are making the program more general," Higgins said, "And have divided the course matter into materials dealing with equipment associated with the well itself and materials dealing with surface facilities."

The new curriculum will become effective with the 1982 fall semester. Students planning to enroll for the petroleum technology course can, however, begin their studies in the summer session starting May 27.

Persons wishing details about engineering technology are invited to contact Higgins, Jerry Gilmore, or the office off Dr. Gene McClurg, dean of occupational education and technology at 573-8511.

Serving on the advisory committee for the petroleum technology program at WTC are Bill Lemen and Jay Pryor of Chevron, Neely Wright of Union Oil, Eddie Epley of Mobil Oil, Howard Robinson of Superior Production Logging, Joe Michie of Oil Well Supply, R. P. Foust of Sun Gas, Gary Kern of Texaco, Frank Osborne of Petco in Breckenridge, and Geroge Stewart, a retired employee of CE Natco.

The revised petroleum technology curriculum for the first semester freshman calls for basic electronics, petroleum geology, technical writing, college algebra, general college physics and orientation. Second semester courses are electronic devices, computer fundamentals, petroleum recovery methods, college trigonometry and general college physics.

First semester sophomore courses are computer applications, drilling mechanics I, production methods I, engineering graphics and business and professional speaking. Second semester sophomore courses are petroleum economics, production methods II, drilling mechanics II, management seminar, and an approved technical elective.

Play To Have Live Ads

LONDON (AP) — When the stage play "Wyre's Cross," described by its authors as a "soap opera in four parts," opens in May, it will feature a new concept in stagecraft: live commercials.

FERTILIZING HOME ORCHARD TREES

When properly used, fertilizers promote better plant growth and increase yields. Improperly used, they may be wasted or do more damage than good.

Remember, fertilizers cannot correct poor soil structure, adjust an unsuitable soil pH, or compensate for poor plants or unadapted varieties.

Organic or inorganic fertilizers yield good results if used at recommended rates. Organic fertilizers are products of living things, such as manure and fish meal. However, use no more than 10 to 20 pounds of poultry or rabbit manure per 100 square feet of soil around trees or small fruits. These types of manure contain high nitrogen concentrations.

As a general rule, never put commercial fertilizers in the hole when planting. Allow the root system to become established and the plant to grow before fertilizing the first year. Never apply fertilizer after June because late applications stimulate growth, thus promoting winter injury.

For peach, plum, apricot and nectarine trees, use approximately one pound of fertilizer per one inch of trunk diameter. For apples, persimmons and pomegranates, use half the amounts suggested for peaches. Do not fertilize pear trees, unless new growth is poor.

High pH soils need annual applications of iron chelates to prevent iron chlorosis. Trees suffering from iron chlorosis have yellow leaves (like nitrogen deficiency) with green veins. Make a soil application of one tablespoon of iron chelate such as Sequestrene Fe-138 per inch of trunk diameter when symptoms develop.

Pecans require one pound of ammonium sulfate per inch of diameter of tree trunk on established trees. Fertilizers containing zinc are of little benefit in alkaline soils; add zinc to tree foliage by spraying zinc or NZN solutions.

When applying fertilizers to large fruit trees, normally it's not necessary to dig holes in which to place fertilizer. A surface application of fertilizer applied in bands at the tree dripline is sufficient. It's advisable to lightly cultivate and break the soil surface and then to water in fertilizer if rainfll is insufficient. When applying a fertilizer around trees in which lawn grass is growing, apply a little extra to take care of the grass.

Gas Decontrol Not Likely Until Next Year

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says election-year politics apparently will keep Congress from acting on natural gas decontrol this year.

"I look for action to take place next year when the political climate will be better, particularly in the U.S. House," Clements told a news conference Friday.

Clements said he made his prediction after talking with other governors at the recent National Governors Association meeting and with members of the executive branch and Texas members of Congress. He said he did not talk with Reagan personally.

"The non-producing states are saying if we have decontrol then there must be a windfall profits tax," Clements said. "I just think we are not going to get any legislation this ..."

Four Injured In Major Traffic Mishap Friday

Snyder police officers investigated one major traffic mishap around 11:45 p.m. Friday.

Involved in the accident at the intersection of 34th St. and College Avenue were a 1978 Ford driven by Martha Lynn Kirkpatrick, Rt. 3 Snyder, a 1979 Oldsmobile driven by Mandy Lee Turnbo, Rt. 2 Snyder, a 1979 Buick driven by John Tracy Loyola of 127 20th Pl. and a light pole owned by the Texas Highway Department.

Kirkpatrick, Loyola, and a passenger from each of their vehicles were transported to Cogdell Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries suffered in the accident. Kirkpatrick and both of the passengers from the accident were treated for minor injuries and released from the hospital. Loyola was admitted to the hospital for observation having suffered head injuries in the mishap.

No injuries were reported to the occupants of the Turnbo vehicle. Moderate to extensive damages were reported to the Kirkpatrick and Loyola vehicles.

Local officers also investigated one criminal mischief complaint received Friday morning and investigated four minor traffic accidents.

Around 10:40 a.m. Friday, George Byerly called police and reported that someone had let the air out of a tire on his 1971 Pontiac and torn a seat in the car in seven places. This incident occurred while the Byerly vehicle was parked at Snyder High School between 7 a.m. and 9 a.m. Friday.

Around 10 a.m. Friday, officers investigated a hit and run accident in the 4000 block of Jacksboro. An unidentified vehicle struck a fence owned by D. B. Lyle of 3600 40th St. Damages to the fence were estimated at $170.

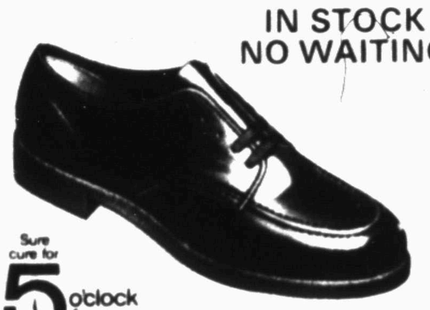

The second minor accident of the day occurred around 1:50 p.m. in the 700 block of East 37th St. Involved in the mishap were a 1978 Chevrolet driven by Billy Guynes of Snyder and a parked 1982 Chevrolet owned by Charlotte Barrett of 700 East 37th St. Only minor damages were reported to both vehicles.

The parking lot of Munden's Discount Center was the scene of Friday's third minor accident around 2:30 p.m. Involved in this mishap were a 1980 Ford driven by Anita Jane Williams of 2806 Avenue Y and a 1980 Chevrolet driven by John Bradford English of Snyder. Again, only minor damages were reported to both vehicles.

The last accident of the day was reported around 12:17 a.m. Saturday on Farm Road 2763 near WTC. Involved in the accident was a 1965 Chevrolet driven by Adam Varga of Volca Texas. No injuries and only minor damages were reported in this mishap.

Dear Abby

Woman's Pregnant Past Bears Lively Record

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago, a woman in Jonesboro, Ill., wrote: "Dear Abby: I gave birth to three babies in 25 months and one week. Dates of birth are July 19, 1956; June 21, 1957; and Aug. 26, 1958. I was wondering if I'd broken a record. — Busy Mom"

Your response was: "Dear Mom: Perhaps a mother who has delivered twins or triplets may have topped you, but for individual births, I'd say you were out in front again."

Well, Abby, I have that lady beat. Is there a prize? I gave birth to three babies in 23 months and one week. Dates of birth are: Aug. 23, 1959; June 25, 1960; and Aug. 15, 1961. My real name is Nina Beckman, but you can sign me ...

EXHAUSTED IN PLATTSMOUTH, NEB.

DEAR EXHAUSTED: Unless someone else writes in to top your record, you win. There's no prize, but if I were to offer one, it would be a two-week vacation at your local Holiday Inn. Alone!

DEAR ABBY: I'll bet you never heard a problem like this before. I've been married for 26 years. I am 45 and my husband is 55. We have three grown children. I was a model and still do some modeling in addition to holding down a part-time secretarial job.

A few years ago, my husband started to go bald, so he used some of my dark-brown eye makeup to cover the bald spot. The balder he got, the more makeup he used to cover it up. It became more and more obvious until people began to look at him and snicker. It's terribly embarrassing to me, but he thinks it looks better than a bald spot.

I hate to go anywhere with him because he looks so foolish. Last year he started to lose his teeth! Now he has only one tooth left in his mouth! Abby, can you imagine a man going around like that in this day and age? He has insurance where he works, but he won't go to a dentist. With no teeth, he looks like an old man.

Our son announced last week that he is getting married later this summer and he asked his father to fix himself up for the wedding. (Quit painting his head and get some teeth.) My husband flatly refused, saying, "I'm happy. Why should I?"

I love my husband, but I can't go on this way. Please give me some suggestions.

NOWHERE TO TURN

DEAR NOWHERE: Let your husband know that you love him and want to be proud of him, and if he wants to hide his baldness, there are some wonderful hairpieces available. Also tell him that going toothless is bad for his general health and makes him look old and unattractive. Beg, plead, bargain, do whatever you can to convince him. If he turns a deaf ear, please get him to a doctor for a complete physical checkup.

Nigerian Studies Here

side the air terminal he saw "white stuff" covering the ground and wondered what it was. It was some time before he could sum up the courage to confront what he later learned was called snow.

Another strange sight was watching people talking and seeing "smoke" coming out of their mouths.

"The people at the airport I talked to all acted very strange because I did not have any heavy clothes on," he laughed. "Everyone was always in a hurry. If I tried to ask someone for directions or information they always answered me on the run."

Another fact of big city life which Inyang quickly learned was that he never got back any change when paying for a cab or a meal etc. Of course, that was not an entire surprise to him as he had attended an orientation session prior to arriving in America. The instructor had alerted him to that fact of life.

Eventually Inyang found his way around the large airport and when he finally got booked on a flight to Dallas he found he had only five minutes to catch his plane.

Eventually he arrived in Lubbock with only a small personal bag. The rest of his luggage had arrived earlier and had been stored in another part of the Lubbock Airport. It was quite disheartening at first to see all the luggage "going round and round" and yet his piece never materialized.

Eventually, though, he found his luggage, (it had been placed in a separate storage room) but temporarily misplaced the receipt so that airport personnel were not going to let him have it. Ultimately, he found the ticket in his shirt pocket.

By this time it was the wee hours of the morning and Inyang still had almost 100 miles to go before arriving in Snyder. One airport employee was going to help Inyang lease a car until Inyang said he had never driven in this country before. The bus station was the next logical answer.

Arriving in Snyder in the early morning hours was another desolate experience for the Nigerian student who had traveled so far and still had not quite reached his destination.

Based on experiences in his native country, Inyang asked the bus driver to direct him to either the police or the army barracks since in Nigeria when you are stranded that is where you go. Ultimately the police were called.

"The officer was looking me over and I in turn was doing the same thing to him," Inyang explained. But he did drive him to the college and eventually Inyang settled in.

Food was a major problem at first. The cafeteria line was stocked with all kinds of dishes that Inyang was not familiar with and for the first day he could not eat. Then he discovered bread and ate his fill of that.

Later Inyang's roommate arrived and gave him a few helpful hints about cafeteria food. Now, however, he says everything is "very nice" and "I am getting on well."

Inyang is well versed in Nigeria history. His country has had five governments in the last 20 years, obtaining independence from British rule in 1960. A civil war erupted in 1966 and the presidential system of government began in 1969. There have been two military coups since 1969. The present president, Alhaji Shehu Shagari, is a civilian and is in the third year of his term.

Nigeria has 19 states and a population of 72 million people. The country consists of 265,000 square miles.

Inyang is well versed in the English language as it is the basic language in Nigeria. He speaks very well, but the British influence is evident. It takes a moment or two to realize that "box" means luggage and "dresses" refer to clothes.

Cloud Seeding Boosts Area's Cotton Crops

The Colorado River Municipal Water District's weather modification efforts continue to build a statistical case for agricultural enhancement.

The extent to which cloud seeding results in increased runoff, however, is not so clearly defined. There are indications that this factor, which is the CRMWD's prime goal, may be linked more to intensity and length of a particular system.

The statistical case for effectiveness of cloud seeding on increased cotton yields is strengthened in the 1981 precipitation enhancement report by Pat Jones, the district's meteorologist. Donald C. Couvillion coordinates the program with the Texas Department of Water Resources and is chief pilot. CRMWD began its cloud seeding and research in 1971 and has operated the program continuously since. This makes it one of the longer case studies in the nation.

Jones related the program to cotton yields in 12 counties which include the four-county target (Borden, Scurry, Howard and Mitchell) and the contiguous counties. Crop yield response for the 1971-80 period in the four-county target area shows a 10-year yield increase over the base of 52 percent. This exceeds by 46 percent the increases in the four-county upwind area (Lynn, Dawson, Martin and Glasscock) which is least likely to be affected by the cloud seeding operations. However, in the downwind counties (Garza, Kent, Fisher and Nolan), which are in the direction of the cloud or storm drift, the percentage of increase was 47, or only five percent less than the target area.

From tables which compare cotton yields per acre from the 1941-80 period with that from 1971-80, Jones concluded that in the latter interval, "distinct changes in crop responses are evident. During this period a complete reversal becomes evident.

"In seven of the last 10 years, cotton production for the cloud-seeded counties has surpassed cotton production for both upwind and downwind counties. Historically, this had never occurred before. In the years following 1941, there were only three occasions (1941, 1950 and 1970) when cotton produced in the target areas exceeded that produced in the other areas.

In some years of the past decade, the target area counties sometimes exceeded other areas by as much as 70 pounds of cotton per acre. Moreover, the pattern of yields appeared to be more consistent for the target than for the outside counties.

In drought years, the picture follows somewhat the same trend, but differences are not as marked. This seems to be logical because seeding effectiveness depends first of all upon presence of clouds to seed. Nevertheless, in 1980, which had one of the most punishing summer droughts on record, the target counties produced more cotton in pounds per acre than did the upwind and downwind counties.

Precipitation impact is evidenced by this calculation: Increasing rainfall over the four-county target area by one inch represents an additional 192,000 acre feet of water; increasing two inches represents an additional 384,000 acre feet. (Lake J. B. Thomas capacity is 204,000 acre feet; Lake E. V. Spence 488,000 acre feet.)

Other highlights from the Jones report:

The 1981 season was only "fair" so far as seedable opportunities are concerned. Due to high pressure aloft in June and July, the seeding missions were held to 22 for the year. The decade average is 35 per year. There was an unusual departure last year in that April and August produced moisture; usually, May and September are more productive.

On April 13, a strong line of thunderstorms was seeded from near Lamesa to Gail and Lake J. B. Thomas received about 15,000 acre feet of water.

For the seeding season, the heaviest cumulative rainfall was 18 inches in north central Mitchell County, almost in the center of the target area. Sixteen inches were received over most of the south central part of Mitchell County, also along the Scurry, Kent and Fisher County common corner.

The time of duration for storms approximated five hours for the season, but a few, which were regarded as statistical accidents, collapsed after three-quarters of an hour. One storm persisted for a remarkable 42 hours.

Jones said that experience indicated that purely convective clouds, which result from heat pushing air and moisture into cold altitudes, are most likely to occur in July and early August. These must be seeded just as the storm begins to form. Longer lasting and faster moving systems, however, can be seeded effectively as they grow. Lingering slow-rain systems do not lend themselves to seeding.

The district has two aircraft for seeding, but after the HIPLEX program, a research venture in cooperation with the Texas Department of Water Resouces and the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation, was suspended at the start of the season, only the Aztec plane was used for seeding the base of clouds with silver iodide crystals. Results of the operations were checked by a system of 106 recording and 81 fence post rain gauges spaced over the target area but concentrated near the target center. Wesley Cox regularly checks the gauges and always on the day or after a tain.

Hijacked Tanzanian Jetliner Leaves Athens

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A hijacked Tanzanian jetliner, with about 90 hostages aboard, left Athens today for an undisclosed destination, leaving two unidentified passengers behind.

Airport officials said the Air Tanzania Boeing 737 left with sufficient fuel for 5½ hours' flying time. Some officials here said it might be headed for London. The British Embassy in Athens confirmed the hijackers had spoken to an embassy official, but would give no details.

Earlier reports had said the plane might fly to Copenhagen or Rome.

Two passengers — a Belgian missionary and a Somali man, who were sent by the hijackers to confer with Greek authorities — were left behind when the plane departed, airport officials said.

The hijackers, who claimed to have killed at least two of their captives, are demanding the ouster of Tanzania's socialist president.

After arriving in Athens, the hijackers requested that a doctor be sent aboard, officials said. A Greek doctor, Vassilios Thomas, said he treated a man for a bullet wound in the lower back. He said the injury was not serious.

Athens air controller Stephanos Evanghelatos said the hijackers had requested and received aspirin and painkillers, as well as food, cigarettes and candy.

The plane was hijacked Friday night on a flight from Mwanza to the Tanzanian capital of Dar es Salaam and the pilots were forced to land in neighboring Nairobi, Kenya. After six hours, the craft was ordered back into the air and it touched down at Jidda airport in Saudi Arabia, where it was refueled.

The pilot radioed the control tower at Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital, and said the plane carried 93 people, including passengers, crew and presumably hijackers.

Kenyan Foreign Minister Robert Ouko, who led the negotiations with the hijackers in Nairobi, said the leader of the group demanded that the plane be refueled and backed the order with the threat of blowing up the plane. The leader then said two of the hostages had been killed and the co-pilot would be shot.

"I told him if he wanted the plane to leave he would need the services of the co-pilot," Ouko told reporters.

The plane was refueled and five passengers — three women, a man and a child — were released, Ouko said.

The official Kenya News Agency later quoted the freed passengers as saying no one was shot aboard the plane.

KNA said the leader of the hijackers demanded the resignation of Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere. The socialist president, who returned to Dar es Salaam on Thursday from a conference of developing nations in New Delhi, has been criticized because of his government's handling of the country's economic problems.

One of the hijackers was believed to be a Tanzanian.

By BILL McCLELLAN

You can believe it, Cindy Maddox remembers.

A year ago Western Texas College battled Howard County in quarterfinal play of the women's Region 14 Basketball Tournament. Howard took advantage of a cold Duster shooting night to knock WTC out of the tournament, winning 62-50.

Maddox, who played wing for Western at the time, remembers the game well.

"I think about that a lot," she said earlier this week after workouts. "I was real cold (shooting) and couldn't make anything. That's one of the reasons we lost the ballgame. I wasn't confident, and I wasn't hitting."

She's been moved to point-guard this season and her duties are less concerned with filling the hoops, despite averaging 6.9 points a game.

"I was hesitant about moving to the point, but Coach (Joe) Cushing said we needed some leadership there this season, so I did," said the 5-7 sophomore from Amarillo, who dreams of facing Howard in this year's tournament. Should WTC and Howard win their first-round games Monday, that rematch would take place at 8 Tuesday night.

"I'd like to play them - and beat them. I really don't care who we play as long as we get there, but it would be great to play them again. The important thing right now is just to take them (the regional playoffs) one game at a time."

Maddox need not have worried about moving to the point. She's done well. In fact, in Cushing's eyes, she's the best.

"Cindy is the best point guard I've had since I've been here. Stella Bickley was a great one for us, but I believe Cindy has been the best," he said. "She's a very intelligent player. She's got a lot of floor knowledge and a lot of leadership capability. She just does a super job of running things on the floor."

That appears obvious when it's revealed the 5-7 sophomore has already surpassed the school season and career assist records. Maddox has 328 career assists going into the tournament, slashing the previous record of 200 set by Katie Fisher. And her 176 this year has passed Stella Bickley's single-season record of 172.

She'll be the quarterback who coordinates the Duster game plan on the floor. And she knows what she has to do to help make WTC a winner.

"My main role is setting up whatever offense or defense Coach wants us to play - and get the ball inside to the big girls. I have to keep my head when the other team starts pressing, and do as good a job defensively as I can."

Despite defeating South Plains here Thursday night, Western will be going into the tournament without a big winning streak down the stretch. But that doesn't bother Maddox, who believes team attitude will play a major factor through the playoffs.

"I don't think we've lost any momentum. We lost to Midwestern (State University) but we were more concerned about the regional tournament," said the Amarillo native, who attended high school at Canyon. "I think as long as everyone (on the team) realizes how important this tournament is, and if we play to the best of our ability, we'll win."

Says Joe Cushing...

Regionals: What It's All About

Regionals is everything, at least until you've won it. After that, well...first things first.

"You have to approach it from the standpoint of this is what you've worked for all year long," said Coach Joe Cushing, who will be taking his WTC Dusters against Cisco Junior College in round one of the Region V Basketball Tournament Monday. "If during the season you have some bad games, you can make up for those games here (at the tournament). I guess one incentive is that if you don't win the conference, you can play well in the tournament and overcome that, whereas during the regular season you've got each game you're playing for...and that's about all you're playing for."

Western Texas finished in a tie for second place in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference, and is seeded third in the tournament, which began today (Sunday) with playoffs in the fourth and fifth positions. The Dusters vie against the No. 2 Northern Junior College Athletic Conference team, Cooke, at 4 p.m. Monday. The tournament is being held in Dorothy Garrett Coliseum at Big Spring.

Proving yourself as the best team in your conference isn't the only highlight to the tournament.

"You've got the possibility in the regional tournament of advancing to the national level. That's got to be the biggest incentive," noted Cushing. "And, at a tournament like this you get coaches from major colleges congregating there. You get a chance to have your girls stand out."

Western has played all of the teams attending the regional tournament, except Cooke County. WTC's record against the tournament contenders is 11-5; 4-1 against the NJC schools, and 7-4 against those in the WJCAC.

But Cushing said past games mean little at this point.

"You can't compare teams at this time of year. If you lose now, you're out, and everybody (all the teams) knows it. It's not the same as a regular game," he said.

But the Dusters do have a couple of advantages which could help. One comes into focus only if they get past Cooke on Monday.

"I think our depth could be a decided advantage, not so much in this first game as in the third game," said the coach, who usually plays 10-11 players against even the toughest opponents. "Playing three games in three days takes a lot out of your players. For that reason I'm glad our players will be sleeping in their own beds rather than in a hotel room. I also think our fans will help us. We're getting a good following of fans this year who are excited about the team, and believe me, it makes a difference. I really feel like we're going to have better support than any other team there," he added. "But I would like to encourage some people to come out to our 4 o'clock game Monday. I realize it's at a bad time, but we need a couple of busloads of our people there to help us out."

Cisco Now WTC Foe

The latest word handed down from Region V Tournament directors is that Western Texas College will play Cisco Junior College instead of Cooke County in quarterfinals playoff action Monday at 4 p.m. in Big Spring.

Though The Snyder Daily News was informed Friday morning that Cooke County would be WTC's quarterfinals opponent, it was learned Saturday that a change had been made.

Cooke and Cisco tied for the Northern Conference championship and apparently there were problems as to which team would get the No. 1 seed in the tournament. According to scources, the two squads held a coin toss late yesterday afternoon, and Cooke won, thus gaining the top seed.

Cisco is 22-9 for the season and was 14-2 in conference play. The Lady Wranglers lost to WTC twice early in the season, 67-61 and 78-67.

Dusters coach Joe Cushing was in Big Spring working his team out this morning, and was unavailable to comment on the sudden switch of opponents.

Former Assistant Is Back...

Nolan Joins Up With Pokes Again

DALLAS (AP) - Dick Nolan's first coaching job in the National Football League was with the Dallas Cowboys, as an assistant to Tom Landry.

Friday, Nolan came full-circle.

After serving as a head coach in San Francisco and New Orleans and acting as defensive coordinator last season for the Houston Oilers, Nolan joined former Chicago Bears head coach Neill Armstrong as Landry's newest Cowboy assistants.

"We feel very fortunate to get people of such quality for our staff," Landry said. "We have been equally fortunate in the last couple of years in adding young coaches like Al Lavan and John Mackovic. We thought it was important now to balance youth with experience -- and these men are very experienced."

Nolan, 49, will be the Cowboys' receiver coach and will work with Mackovic to coordinate the team's passing game.

Armstrong, 55, will assume the duties of Ermal Allen, a heart attack victim last season who will become a special assistant to Landry.

"Because of Ermal's heart attack," Landry said, "we had to curtail his workload. He will work with me on special projects. Right now, he'll be training Armstrong. Then, he'll be working with me on the college draft."

Ironically, Armstrong became available when he was fired by Bears' owner George Halas and replaced by former Dallas assistant coach Mike Ditka. Armstrong had coached the Bears for four years.

Joining the Cowboys, said Landry, "was a major decision for Neill, because he had a number of opportunities around the league. We're delighted he decided to make a choice of Dallas."

Nolan's association with Landry goes back to the mid 1950s, when they both played in the New York Giants' defensive backfield. Nolan was an assistant to Landry in Dallas from 1961 through 1967.

Landry said he may add yet another coaching assistant, to be in charge of special teams and the kicking game.

"I'll be working on that next week," Landry said.

Caldwell Leads Tigers

Larry Scott completed his first year as head basketball coach here with some impressive figures, compiling a 23-7 record and defeating the No. 1 ranked team in the state.

The cage season concluded the high school career of nine Tiger seniors; Brad Robertson, David Rios, John Wilson, Randy Burrus, Keith Wallace, Quent Gilbert, D.W. Lofton, Riley Kitchens and Mark Shaw. Curtis Gafford and James Caldwell will be the only crewmen back from the 1981-82 season.

Snyder ended up third in the District 2-AAAA standings, giving way to champion Andrews and runnerup Odessa Ector. The Tigers averaged 52 points a game, and had an 11-4 conference record.

Caldwell led the team in scoring, rebounding and in steals. The 6-3 junior averaged 11.5 points and nine boards a game and had 44 steals. Lofton was the second leading pointmaker on the squad with a 10.08 average. Riley Kitchens, who missed most of the second half of district play with a broken bone just above the ankle, averaged 10.04 points. Kitchens also pulled down 4.7 rebounds; Lofton averaged 4.6.

Another key scorer for the Tigers was Wilson, who averaged 7.18 points and 3.8 boards.

Others leading in steals were Lofton with 43 and Wilson with 40.

Gafford led the team in assists with 143 for the season. Wilson had 90; Robertson 66 and Lofton 61.

Townsel, Perceval Lead SHS Girls For 81-82 Season

Snyder High School girls concluded the 1981-82 basketball season with an 11-13 record under Coach Ken Housden, averaging 51 points a game and giving up 47.

Leading the Tigers in scoring was 5-7 senior Michelle Townsel, who averaged 15.3 points an outing while shooting 48 percent from the floor and 54.9 from the line. Townsel - a two-time all-district selection - also averaged 8.4 rebounds.

Another senior, 5-9 Pam Perceval, pulled down an average of 9.5 rebounds a game. She also averaged in double scoring figures with 12 points a game as was the team's most accurate freethrow shooter at 63 percent.

Brenda Anderson and Tracey O'Day, also seniors, averaged 7 points, 3.5 boards, and 4.7 points, 3.8 boards, respectively.

Perceval led the team in steals with 61. LaDonna Halford had 56 steals and Townsel had 53.

NTSU To Join Southland League

DENTON, Texas (AP) - The Southland Conference is one team larger today, following a meeting by the North Texas State University board of regents here.

The board voted Friday to accept an invitation to join the SLC for athletic competition, starting next fall with cross-country.

Regents Chairman Winfree Brown said financial concerns made the move necessary, particularly since NTSU has been dropped from the NCAA's major-college division in football.

"The university will share in the revenue for TV coverage of Southland Conference games and travel expenses will be reduced," Brown said.

"Our reduced athletic budget will require us, as never before, to look to other than university sources for the financial support of our athletic program."

"I'm excited about today's decision," said NTSU football coach and athletic director Bob Tyler. "I think it will be a very popular decision ..."

SLC Commissioner Dick Oliver said NTSU would not compete for the league's football title during its first year of membership, but would in all other sports, beginning with cross-country.

However, as a condition to joining the conference, NTSU will be required to upgrade baseball to a varsity-level sports, Oliver said.

North Texas, an independent, competed last year in the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Division I-A for football.

However, failure to meet NCAA attendance standards for the major-college division resulted in the school's being demoted to Division I-AA for next football season.

Records Tumble At Meet

NEW YORK (AP) - Evelyn Ashford, Joan Hansen, Chandra Cheeseborough, Veronica Bell and Stephanie Hightower led the way at the USA-Mobil Indoor Track and Field Championships with record-smashing performances.

Ashford won the women's 60-yard dash in 6.54 seconds, beating arch-rival Jeanatte Bolden, and eclipsed the accepted world indoor best of 6.60 seconds, set last month by Bolden.

Hansen took the two-mile in 9 minutes, 37.03 seconds, cracking the world indoor best of 9:38.1, set last year by Francie Larrieu.

Hart Withdraws From Position

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has agreed to withdraw the nomination of B. Samuel Hart to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission after the controversial black evangelist requested that his name be dropped, the White House says.

White House spokesman Mark Weinberg announced Friday night that Reagan "will comply" with Hart's request, which came about a day before publication of reports that he was thousands of dollars behind in loan repayments.

Hart, 50, had been opposed by women's, civil rights, and homosexual groups. The Philadelphia radio evangelist had said he was opposed to the Equal Rights Amendment and busing to integrate schools and he did not consider that homosexuals have a civil rights cause.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Hart claimed his stand against legalizing homosexuality in Philadelphia in 1974 hurt his case.

"They (homosexuals) are found in areas of the press, in the media, and that's fine," he said in an interview from his home.

"But when somebody comes up that is known to have stood against them or against their legalization and they happen to have some reason or some measure of control over the press, then you can understand that that person is not going to get a fair shake," he said.

Hall Injured In Mishap

Rex V. Hall of Roby was taken to Cogdell Memorial Hospital by units of Scurry County EMS following an accident at the intersection of Farm Road 2763 and Round Top Road around 10 a.m. Saturday.

Hall, an employee of Midwest Electric Co-Op, was injured when a 1974 Chevrolet driven by Beverly Paulk of Snyder struck a power line lying across the roadway.

Hall was thrown to the ground and was complaining of possible shoulder injuries. His injuries were not, however, thought to be serious.

A Midwest crew was in the process of building a new power line at the location of the accident when the Paulk vehicle, west bound on 2763, struck the line.

Harrell, Voss Exchange Solemn Vows

Kathlyn Ellen Harrell and Vance Layne Voss were married Jan. 16 at 5:30 p.m. at Colonial Hill Baptist Church. Rev. Miller Robinson officiated the double ring ceremony.

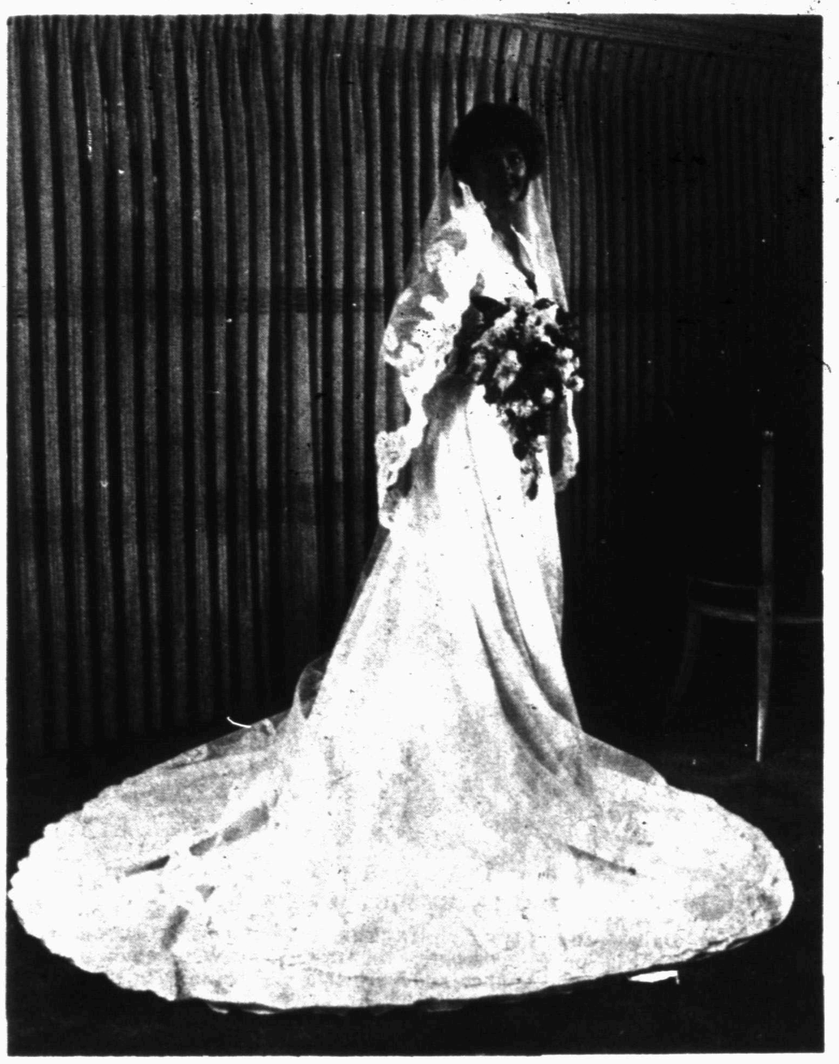

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles William Harrell of Hermleigh and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Voss Jr.

The altar was centered with a pedesdal bouquet of long stemmed pink and red roses complimented by a pair of brass seven-branch candelabra. The choir rail was accented with plumosa and springeri fern entwined around votive candles. The pews were marked with arrangements of pink roses, baby's breath and ribbon loops.

Mrs. Wayne Bethel, organist, and Mrs. Scott Clark, soloist, presented musical selections. "Walk Hand in Hand," "Twelfth of Never," "Love Makes the World Go Round," "I'll Never Stop Loving You," and "All I Do Is Dream of You" were presented as the guests were seated. Grandparents were seated to "Wedding Prayer" and parents to "Sunrise, Sunset." "Endless Love" was sung by Mrs. Clark and "Bridal Chorus" was presented as the attendants, bride and groom entered and "May the Lord" was sung to the tune of "Edilweiss." "Wedding March" was the recessional.

The bride's father gave her in marriage. She wore a gown fashioned of white silk organza and re-embroidered Alencon lace encrusted with tiny seed pearls and sequins. It featured a lace bodice, portrait neck and long cuffed bishop sleeves. Scalloped lace scrolls bordered the pyramid skirt and unpressed pleats swept to a wide cathedral train. The cathedral length mantilla of English net was bordered by Alencon lace. She wore the blue garter worn by her mother in her wedding and carried a cascading bouquet of pink roses, cymbidum orchids, baby's breath and frenched carnations with touches of miniature carnation buds in red and satin picot streamers with love knots.

Becky Harrell of Hermleigh was maid of honor. She wore a red taffeta halter dress with a short jacket, high round neckline and long fitted sleeves. A wide ruffle enhanced the jacket and extended from the waist to hem. She carried a bouquet of pink roses, red miniature carnations and baby's breath with pink and red satin streamers.

Flower girls were Lisa Ward and Jamie Beck. They wore short dresses made of pink moire taffeta with white lace bertha collars and wide sashes tied in large bows in the back. Halos of red roses and white baby's breath adorned their hair.

Vaughnie Voss served as best man and Ty Springer and Eicke Perry seated guests.

A reception was held at the Snyder Country Club following the ceremony. A commode draped by an antique runner and flanked by pink begonias stood at the entrance. The registration table was draped with a Parisian lace cloth over ivory moire.

The ballroom was given a garden mood by tall plants and baskets of cascading begonias hanging from the chandeliers. Round tables were draped with a pink or red moire cloth with squares of lace over the top. Handmade antique lace fans and bouquets of red and pink sweetheart roses with pink and red lace bows centered the tables. The same arrangements were used on smaller tables in the card room for additional guest seating. Pink and red moire bows decorated the white buffet cloths.

Against a backdrop of tall palms and weeping figs, the bride's table was covered with a white tiered cloth bound in white satin ribbon with picot edging. It held the cake which was tiered and decorated with pink and red flowers, a very tall silver epergne and cut glass bowls containing pink and red sweetheart roses. Sherry Williams, Debbie Vining, Shana Smith and Mrs. Mark Duke presided.

A gazebo tent stood to the right of the bride's table. Inside the tent was a silver champagne fountain which was flanked by floral nosegays. The table was draped with a pink taffeta moire cloth and the sides of the tent were tied back with pink and red tiebacks with bows.

The groom's table was draped with a red taffeta floor length cloth. Large brass candlesticks of varied heights were used as accessories. Kim Harlin, Sherry Neves, Mrs. Dwain Collier, and Mrs. Lane Folyten presided at this table.

Mandy Tubb and Mrs. Connie Taylor registered guests in the bride's book and Tammy Voss passed out rice bags.

Following a wedding trip to Ruidoso, the couple is at home northeast of Snyder.

The bride is a 1979 graduate of Snyder High School and attended San Angelo State University. She is employed by Chevron.

The groom graduated from Snyder High School in 1975 and is engaged in farming and ranching.

Members of the house party were friends of the bride's parents.

Out of town guests were from San Angelo, Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth, Abilene, Lubbock, Marfa, and Lamesa.

The groom's parents hosted a rehearsal dinner at the Shack.

The bride was honored with several parties preceding the wedding.

KELLYE ELROD

DENTON—Kellye Elrod of Snyder has been selected to perform in the annual spring dance concert at Texas Woman's University in Denton March 4-6. The concert combines the talents of the two performing troupes sponsored by the dance department, the Dance Repertory Theatre and the International Folk Dance Company. Texas Woman's University's dance department rates among the nation's most outstanding. Chairman Aileene S. Lockhard is consulting editor and editor of approximately 200 books with the William C. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an original design gown of ivory organza and French Chantilly lace. The Queen Anne neckline was accented with a dainty ruffle. The lace bodice and long tapered sleeves were accented with pearls and the A-line skirt was edged in lace and pleated organza and swept into a full train. Heart Healthy Recipe

BEEF STROGANOFF

1 pound beef tenderloin, lean beef round or sirloin	2 cups beef broth
freshly ground black pepper	2 tablespoons tomato paste
½ pound mushrooms, sliced	1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 onion, sliced	½ teaspoon oregano
3 tablespoons oil	¼ teaspoon dill weed
3 tablespoons flour	2 tablespoons sherry
	½ cup low-fat yogurt

Remove all visible fat from the meat and cut into thin strips, about 2 inches long. Sprinkle with pepper and let stand in a cool place for 2 hours.

In a heavy skillet, saute mushrooms in oil until tender. Remove from skillet, and saute onions in the same oil until brown. Remove from skillet.

Brown meat quickly on all sides until rare. Remove and set aside.

Blend the flour into the oil in the skillet and gradually add the broth, stirring constantly until smooth and slightly thick. Add the tomato paste, dry mustard, oregano, dill weed and sherry. Blend well. Combine the sauce with the meat, mushrooms and onions in the top of a double boiler. Cook for 20 minutes. Beat yogurt (to prevent it from curdling) Blend in the beaten yogurt 5 minutes before serving.

Yield: 6 servings. Approx. cal./serv.: 275 (or 375 with ½ cup rice or pasta)

Quick tips

Here are some time-saving ideas for today's busy woman who wants to look her best. Organize your beauty tools by type. For example, store all brushes together, whether they're for lips, cheeks, contouring or eyes. Do the same with eye makeup, such as mascara, eye pencils, shadow and concealer. That way all your choices are clearly laid out and you won't waste time sifting through a hodge-podge of various cosmetics.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Pakistan's last bit of bad luck came on board No. 91. At table one the American South passed and eventually became declarer at a super-conservative three spades. At table two Mahmoud opened with one of those weak two bids.

North's two no-trump was a force that asked South to describe his hand. The three-spade rebid said that he had a poor, weak two bid with fair spades so North simply bid six.

With both major suits breaking nicely seven would have wheeled in. With the bad spade break it took a club lead to beat declarer and Eric Rodwell got off to that club lead. He knew he had a trump trick and hoped to find his partner with the ace or queen of clubs.

Mahmoud won the club lead. He played dummy's ace of spades and led a second spade to his king. When East showed out things appeared hopeless, but Mahmoud saw one slight chance and gave the hand the old college try.

If West just happened to hold queen-10-small of hearts the slam could make. Mahmoud led his jack of hearts and let it ride.

Unfortunately, East produced the queen and the set was three tricks. Of course, the difference between two and three down was unimportant. It cost just one extra IMP.

Snyderites Named Outstanding Young Women

The Board of Advisors for the Outstanding Young Women of America awards program has announced that several local women have been selected for inclusion in the 1981 edition of "Outstanding Young Women of America."

The Outstanding Young Women of America program is designed to honor and encourage exceptional young women between the ages of 21 and 36 who have distinguished themselves in their homes, their professions and their communities. Accomplishments such as these are the result of dedication, service and leadership — qualities which deserve to be recognized and remembered.

This is the goal of the many leading women's organizations, college alumni associates and public officials who nominate deserving young women to participate in the program. Serving as chairman of the program's Advisory Board is Mrs. Dexter Otis Arnold, honoraray president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

The women listed, along with approximately 23,000 fellow Outstanding Young Women of America from across the United States, have been presented in the prestigious annual awards volume. In addition, they are now being considered for one of the fifty-one state awards to be presented to those women who have made the most noteworthy contributions in their individual states. From these fifty-one state winners, the Ten Outstanding Young Women of America will be chosen. The ten national winners will then be honored at the annual awards luncheon to be held this fall in Wasington, D.C.

Insurance FACTS
by Tom Deffebach

Medical payments insurance in a standard auto policy pays medical and hospital bills and expenses of victims of auto accidents regardless of fault. If this coverage is purchased, those covered usually include anyone riding in your car. It also includes you and others in your family if you are injured while traveling in another car or are hit by another car. The medical-payments coverage in such a policy usually pays your hospital and medical bills, even if they are already covered by other medical insurance. Your insurance professional will be familiar with state requirements, if any, typical state court judgments that have been handed down, potential medical costs and the like. He will then be able to recommend proper coverages for you and your family.

Let us recommend proper coverage on all types of insurance. You'll find our staff at THE DEFFEBACH AGENCY, College Heights Shopping Center, 3201 College Avenue, 573-5611 willing to sit down and discuss your needs and then suggest the right policies. Livestock Hotel Caters To Pets

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Marvin Gasho knows how messy travelers can be. His "hotel guests" are real animals.

Gasho runs a livestock hotel. Besides pen and hay, the services offered at the Buckaroo Cattle Rest east of Tucson include gathering stray animals for local ranchers, training cow horses, shoeing horses, dehorning cattle, and feeding livestock.

During the four to eight hours they usually stay, the guests have a chance to fatten up a bit. The cattle rest is about 100 yards off the north Interstate 10 frontage road, behind a bar. Gasho, 22, owns the cattle rest and hopes one day to buy the bar, which his father once owned.

He grew up on several local ranches, and attended the University of Arizona, planning to become a veterinarian, until he "starved out."

Running the business is a "24-hour-a-day job," and Gasho does it primarily by himself, he said. He gets occasional help from his wife, Ruth Ann, who works in downtown Tucson at a savings and loan association.

The Gashos live next to the 10-acre business in a mobile home.

When business is slow, Gasho may find work as an "extra," doing "whatever they need on horseback" for movies and television shows, such as NBC's "Father Murphy." He said he had also worked as a security guard for the Tucson Open golf tournament, among other jobs.

And he tends to the few head of cattle that he and his wife own.

About 126,000 road-weary cattle and 950 stiff-legged horses have stretched their legs at the Buckaroo since Gasho took over the operation in April 1981.

The 30 pens, some of them covered with netting for shade, can accommodate up to 3,000 head. His busiest day occurred when 15 trucks showed up at one time, with more than 1,500 head of cattle, Gasho said.

Sometimes the drivers help Gasho with the unloading and loading, he said. But for thd most part, they have no knowledge of cattle, just trucks, and are tired from driving, so the work is all his.

Of The Holocaust...

Class Studies Literature

FOREST GROVE, Ore. (AP) — "Most of the students couldn't even spell Auschwitz at the start of the class, but now the word has real meaning for them and they have some understanding of a brutal period which is foreign to most Americans, especially of the younger generation."

This is the way Dr. Michael Steele of the Pacific University English Department reflects on his Literature of Minorities class which has the Holocaust in all its "gruesomeness" as its topic.

Steele, an assistant professor of English at Pacific, feels that the course may be "consciousness-raising" as the class becomes acquainted with the horror and the courage. "Americans haven't felt anything like this," he says.

The Modern Lanugage Association on a national level has debated whether literature of the Holocaust should even be taught, notes Steele, who responds with a strong "yes."

In fact, the student might even be taking it better than the professor. "It's tough, but I should teach it," he reflects emotionally. He recalls that there was one student in his class who had never even heard of the Holocaust.

Steele favors teaching the course because of its value in informing "sheltered American young people and because students today have an interest in moral questions. They are not tired of moral considerations like they were a few years ago because of so much Watergate and Vietnam."

He does think that in the future the course could combine literature with another discipline, such as history, so that the subject matter can be taught in a broader context.

One of his students, Susan Kiehn of Spokane, Wash., says she started a conversation about the Holocaust in her dormitory one night with a nonclass member. "We talked for two hours about the Holocaust and moral issues. It was a great discussion."

"I have been forced to face reality and to wonder if we are trying to hide from man's capacity for brutality," she continues. She thought, too, that it was "positive to learn that some good things were going on then, too, in efforts to save the Jews by the Danish, for example."

Chris Carley of Boise, Idaho, says that it is "an intense and emotional class — more than I thought it would be, but that has made it more interesting, too."

Another student, Carol Pritchett of Tucson, Ariz., agrees that is is "an emotionally charged class" and points out that during the term something "touches" each class member in some way. "It depends on the individual background and perspective, but all are reached," she says.

Early in the class the students began asking, "Could the victims have done more to protect themselves? Could they have gone to their deaths differently — with more resistance?"

Steele asked the students to take the part of a Jewish father and consider, would it be better for the father to console his child who was about to be killed or about to see his parents killed, or better to "lash out at the S.S."

"Do you fight back or maintain dignity? It is the American perspective versus the European Jewish perspective," he tells them.

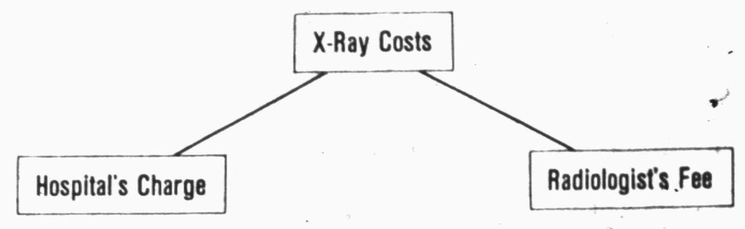

During the class the students role-play a Jewish family at the time of the Holocaust to further seek a closer understanding of what happened and to better comprehend the Jewish mind and the reactions at the time.

From a literary sense, the class looks at the reading as examples of writing as therapy and a way of relieving tension, and as literature to recreate in the reader how people have gone through a certain tragedy.

WHY THE RADIOLOGIST'S BILL IS SEPARATE FROM THE HOSPITAL BILL

The radiologist is a private physician specializing in the use of x-rays and radioactive substances used in medial diagnosis and therapy. Your physician requested the services of the radiologist in interpreting the results of your recent examination in the X-ray Department.

The hospital bill will include a charge for x-ray to cover the use of its equipment, the films, supplies, and technical personnel. The bill from the radiologist is for his professional consultative services. (Reading your films, which is done in the hospital.) Which is requested by your physician.

surplus of lawyers

In Washington, there has been no mad dash of Justice Department lawyers wanting to resign.

They were told that they could do so—if they wanted—after 100 of the 170 lawyers in the civil rights division signed a letter of protest over a recent decision to reverse a government policy denying tax exemptions to racially biased schools.

Bob Jones University in South Carolina and Christian Day School in Goldsboro were the focus of that uproar. The two (along with over 100 others) had been given tax exempt status only to see it ripped away when President Reagan decided to throw the flap into the lap of Congress.

What had happened, apparently, is that the Internal Revenue Service had established a policy of denying a tax exemption on the basis of what it believed was racial discrimination.

Bob Jones says it does not discriminate, that it admits people of all races. But it doesn't allow interracial dating and marriage within the religious institution. That, school officials say, is part of their religion and has nothing to do with discrimination.

What the administration was saying is that if Congress wants such a law, then it ought to pass it. That, theoretically, would mean that this is what the voters want. Just because a bureau comes up with a new rule doesn't necessarily make it a law. If a law is needed and wanted, then let that law be passed by Congress.

So, it was this action that brought on the portesting lawyers and it was the protesting lawyers who brought on the suggestion by the chief spokesman for the Justice Department that they could quit if they desired.

One wonders what would happen if 95 percent of the lawyers in Washington were to quit.

Would the mechanism of government creak and groan and wobble to a painful, debilitating halt? Would there be sobs and cries of pain across the land as the news spread?

It's doubtful.

"What might happen, we suspect, is that the men and women who were elected to represent the people then would be able to sit down together and talk without having to go through dozens of mouthpieces and many other legal obstacles before getting to the core of a problem.

There are 170 lawyers in the civil rights division of the Justice Department. Why?

It is obvious that many of these are holdovers from other administrations and that they do not agree with the change of policy directions. If they feel strongly, then they should leave. Their effectiveness is diluted. They probably are not happy. They would be better off somewhere else.

The problem is that, anywhere else, it is a cold, cruel world.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "If you wish upon a star, first make sure that the show hasn't already been cancelled."

Now that professional football is over, the television networks must resort to odd-ball competition in order to fill the apetite of the avid sports fan.

On any given Sunday afternoon, you may find the gridiron superstar leaping over a ditch, rowing a boat or doing the arm-wrestling bit.

We remember one recent competition where the wives of the the World Series teams--the Yankees and the Dodgers--were in Yankee Stadium in a tug of war.

When the weather gets pleasant, we try to find a reason to leave the house and not be subjected to the tube. We suspect that there is an audience, because those national advertisers continue their sponsorships.

Speaking of sponsorships of athletic events, the beer companies still win the award for the most original and clever commercials.

Just think of the numerous superstars who have picked up a few extra bucks for their endorsement of the product. One of our favorites is Bubba Smith looking for those fast "birdies" on the golf course. The fellow that overlooks Billy Martin also is tops in our books.

It was bound to happen, however, and a savings and loan firm in Minneapolis, the home of the Minnesota Vikings, has taken the lead.

Instead of hiring one of the team's super stars to do a TV commercial, the financial firm advertised for a bench warmer–a fellow who is not a household word.

Surely you've heard of Bob Lurtsema, a reserve defensive end. He describes himself as tall and ugly, having a square jaw and receding hairline.

On the S&L commercial, he protrays a slightly dull-witted, slow-talking character who is the butt of the joke. In his first commercial he tells viewers, "You probably don't recognize me with my helment off...come to think of it, you probably don't recognize me with my helment on either."

One of his favorite commercials is "Bob Lurtsema Day" honoring his retirement. As the camera pans the empty stadium, he laments, "You'd think at least my wife and kids would show up."

The followup reveals that the bench-warmer approach appeals to folks since the majority of us in life are second stringers.

Although we don't get to see the commercials in this area, we understand that one of the national advertisers is considering Lurtsema for next season.

We also read recently that Tom Landry, popular coach of the Cowboys, is going to do some public-service spots in an effort to counter-act some of the glamor portrayed by professional athletes and their endorsements of alcoholic beverages.

Even though we enjoy the humor of some of those spots, Tom probably has a point in the manner in which it influences our youth.

Agrees To FTC Request

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chrysler Corp. has agreed to a Federal Trade Commission request that it notify 700,000 owners of Plymouth and Dodge cars and trucks about a potential oil filter replacement problem.

A statement issued Thursday by the FTC said the situation involves 1971-80 models with 1600cc engines and 1974-80 models with 2000cc engines. Specific models are the Dodge Colt, Challenger, Colt hatchback and D-50 pickup and the Plymouth Arrow, Sapporo, Arrow pickup and Champ.

john dunnam

Did you ever consider what a nuisance oil must have been before Chrysler invented the gas guzzler? Think about it. Oil is messy. Its nasty-looking, foul-smelling, sticky and worst of all it stains your tee-shirts.

Is it any wonder that in its natural state it is known as "crude oil?"

Oil is no new thing, you know. It's not something Exxon dug up just to sell us unfortunate souls born into what historians will no doubt refer to as the Car-Age. Oil has been known to mankind for thousands of years. People always suspected the gooey stuff was good for something and experimented with it for centuries before finally inventing the automobile.

As early as 3000 B.C., the Babylonians utilized oil's stickiness by using it as a building mortar and for fixing jewelry into place.

The Chinese accidentally discovered an oil field in their salt mines. I'm sure a lot of perfectly good salt was ruined before they discovered how to use oil for lighting and for cleaning silk.

The Chinese and American Indians used oil as a medicine, which also proves it is foul-tasting.

Even ablaze, oil served man. During their wanderings, the children of Israel were guided by "day in a pillar of cloud...and by night in a pillar of fire", an apt description of what happens when an oil seepage catches fire.

Marco Polo reported burning oil springs in one of his travels to an island in the Caspian Sea. For 1,200 years there had been a fire worshiping cult around the "eternal fires," an oil seepage that had been ignited, probably by lightning. Had Red Adair lived then, he might have had trouble getting work. And can you imagine a pool of oil burning for 1,200 years! They must have wasted enough oil to have kept Dallas going for a week.

What exactly is this icky stuff anyway and where does it come from? Oil is believed to be derived from the decomposed remains of countless billions of tiny aquatic plants and animals and a few dinosaurs. That explains why this area is so rich in the mineral. We all live where the waves of the Permian Sea once lapped at the shores.

Over the ages, these fossil remains changed into oil with the help of the weight of rock above them. Oil is found underground only where there is a perfect seal of rock above to keep it in place. These elusive resevoirs are what the wildcatters so zealously search for. But with all their sophisticated techniques, drilling an oil well is still a hit and miss gamble at about a million dollars a shot.

Even pumping gas out of a known underground tank into your car at the corner gas station is no cheap operation.

letter to the editor

To The Daily News:

The people of Scurry county have exemplified what I believe the true American spirit is.

Saturday (Feb. 20), at the Scurry County FFA and 4-H Stock Show, the people who were there to help the youngsters of your county really were super. I have attended many auctions of this type, but never has there been such a display of rewarding youngsters for their hard work and discipline.

The grand champion exhibitors are always supposed to be highly rewarded by those who purchase their animals at a premium, but so were those who "barely got into the sale." It was impressive.

My being there, of course, was because some of your fine people had offered to donate animals to Girlstown U. S. A. for the purpose of helping feed our girls. We were overhwelmed by the response and generosity.

Three steers, sixteen hogs and six lambs were donated to Girlstown. We will personally thank each buyer who donated, but I am sure there are many people who deserve our thanks who worked long and hard to make the show a success.

The parents, the show officials, the auctioneer, the bookkeepers, the 4-H and FFA leaders and everyone who makes this type training and experience available are due a special thanks. C. A. McCown and Max von Roeder were our contact people and everyone who helped are truly special people.

It was a great day to live in America.

The world's first adhesive stamp, the penny black, went on sale in England in 1841. The penny black and the two-penny blue stamp — both bearing the portrait of Queen Victoria — were an immediate success and printers worked night and day to keep supplies available. The use of stamps spread and in 1843 Brazil became the second government to issue them.

Find Old City...

Couple's Find Changes View Of West Africa

HOUSTON (AP) — Susan Keech McIntosh found her work last summer so riveting she fell into an odd routine — most days at lunchtime, she would climb out of the pit where she worked and faint.

"I'd get so interested in what we were doing I'd forget to drink," said the Cambridge-educated Rice University professor of anthropology. That can be a hazard for someone doing manual labor in West Africa's 115-degree heat.

What fascinated Mrs. McIntosh, 31, and her 30-year-old husband, Roderick McIntosh, also a Rice professor with degrees from Cambridge, were the ruins of a city they discovered in 1977 — archaeological evidence they say has changed the way the world views the development of African civilization.

Their find was Jenne-jeno.

"It is the oldest known city in sub-Saharan Africa," McIntosh said. The McIntoshes say the town was established by 250 B.C. "And it is the earliest walled town that we know of."

The wall, they say, was massive — it had a circumference of more than a mile and a half and was three feet thick.

McIntosh said further study of the data they gathered in their eight-month 1981 dig confirmed what they had theorized four years earlier.

Contrary to previous beliefs, the McIntoshes say, complex civilizations existed in Africa south of the Sahara long before the Arabs spreading the word of Mohammad took over trade networks in the area after 1000 A.D.

"We came up with this really magnificent gold earring, right under the city wall, that dated to 600 A.D.," McIntosh said. "Mohammad was just a babe in swaddling clothes then."

Their work has also turned up funerary urns and the skeletons buried in them, pottery, structural remains of houses and a terracotta statuette which the McIntoshes theorize was a protective household spirit.

"We found a lot of different pieces that we're fitting together to get the big picture," Mrs. McIntosh said.

The lack of progress in the area has helped them do that. Many of the artifacts are similar to items still in use.

"There's a terrific continuity between Jenne today and Jenne-jeno 1,000 years ago," Mrs. McIntosh said. The present-day city of Jenne, in what is now Mali, was built a few miles from Jenne-jeno when the ancient city was mysteriously abandoned about 1250 A.D.

"It's like you stood on a corner in downtown London for 15 centuries," said Mrs. McIntosh.

The McIntoshs' observation post last year was centered in a mud brick hut. They battled blistering heat and contended with a variety of parasites in the food and water that gave them dysentery.

Their work, done on an $80,000 budget which included transportation costs for the couple and four graduate students, served to establish that Jenne-jeno "was much larger and more complex than we originally thought," McIntosh said.

He said he now estimates the 60-acre town may have held 20,000 people in the 6th and 7th centuries A.D.

"The town was supported by and grew because of the gold trade," he said, citing the gold earring and other pieces as evidence.

The nearest gold mines, he said, were at least 500 miles away, indicating a complex system of trade routes.

Mrs. McIntosh said the couple's next expedition, which will probably not take place for several years, will concentrate on Timbuktu, Jenne-jeno's sister city 300 miles away. She said they would seek evidence of trade between the two.

She is sure they'll find it.

"For one thing, Timbuktu cannot feed itself," she said. "Jenne-jeno was in the granary of Africa. Traditionally, there shouldn't have been a Timbuktu without a Jenne-jeno."

In the meantime, the McIntoshes hope anthropological interest in Africa picks up. Of 250 applicants for an opening in Rice's anthropology department recently, only 10 had done work in Africa, he said.

"The money is there and, God knows, the work is there," McIntosh said. "The Niger River Valley civilization is not a freak."

He said he knows of at least two other sites in West Africa where he believes similar societies existed.

Enjoying Mini-Boom...

Ironworkers Job Dangerous

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Ironworker Bill Bereznicki treads warily on the slender beams of a growing skyscraper. A safety line his umbilical cord, he avoids looking down and never wears trousers with cuffs.

"Out of all the crafts, it is definitely the most dangerous," Bereznicki says after a day on the iron at One Oxford Center, a 46-story office tower and retail complex under construction.

"We work up in the air a lot, carrying beams, sledgehammers and impact wrenches. With all that heavy-duty equipment, it's fatiguing, and you have to be agile.

"But for me working up in the air is like being on the ground," he says. "You have to learn to respect it. Accidents happen fast. One time and it can all be over. I've seen it."

Bereznicki was on the job when fellow ironworker Mike Grant died in a fall from the framing of the Oxford project last summer. "We were best friends," he says. "We worked together three years."

This is a prosperous time in Pittsburgh for workers like Bereznicki. Four major office buildings are in various stages of construction, one has just been completed and several others are being renovated.

"We're enjoying a pretty nice boom for construction workers," says Leo Puma, president of Iron Workers Local 3, one of the largest in the country with 2,500 members.

Puma says downtown projects billed as part of a multibillion-dollar construction program called "Renaissance II" will provide steady work for 500 in his union.

PPG Industries is building a complex of six buildings in the city's Market Square. On Grant Street not far from the Oxford construction, the U.S. Steel Corp. is building a 46-story headquarters for the Dravo Corp. that will rise 725 feet above the ground.

"The ironworker is the first one there," says Puma. "He puts up the house before the rest of the trades can start working."

American Bridge, a division of U.S. Steel, was contracted to erect the steel framing for Oxford and the PPG and Dravo headquarters.

The actual construction of a skyscraper starts with the raising gang, ironworkers who "hang" the metal frame. "They put it together and put enough bolts in it to make it safe," says American Bridge construction manager Don Fink.

The next crew, the plumbing gang, uses cables, wedges and levels to make sure the structure's frame is exactly vertical before all the bolts are tightened and the final joints welded.

"Once the building is in its final position, when you have all the floors poured, it's a stable structure. But when we're putting up the bare steel, it's a different animal," Fink says.

"With just the bare steel, you're depending on the bolted and welded connections at every point, which we have to figure out exactly," he says. "We can't just throw up a few pieces of steel."

There are crews of ironworkers to raise the steel, plumb it, tighten bolts, weld and add detail like handrailings and reinforcing rods for concrete flooring.

"Ironworkers come in all sizes and shapes. You can be small or tall. It's just like anything else," says Mack McGuffey, 13 years on the job as crew chief on a raising gang. "But some people take to it better than others.

"Connectors — there's something special about them guys. They got a knack. It's harder work. They don't get paid no more. It's more or less pride."

Connectors do just what their name implies. They connect one beam to another. But it can be dangerous because they aren't always tied to a safety line.

"They got to be mobile," says Fink.

The connectors work in pairs and grab dangling beams as they're hoisted by crane, muscle them into place with a tool called a spud wrench and throw in a bolt or two to hold the steel together.

"They're on top of a column waiting for the beam. If it swings their way, they gotta move. You can't be hampered with a safety line," says Puma.

"The young kids love the glory. I've been in this business 44 years. I used to love it. But when you get a little older, you slow down," Puma adds.

Bob Means, an ironworker for 14 years, says, "I didn't have any trouble getting jobs." But, he says, he'd be happy if his own sons did something else.

"I'm not in love with the job. The money's good and the freedom's good," he says. "But sometimes it gets old after 14 years."

Man Arrested In Shooting

MIAMI (AP) — A man who allegedly shot and wounded his son after being beaten by the boy has been arrested after police surrounded his houseboat in a 3½-hour standoff, authorities said.

The gunman, identified as Charles Vermillion of Miami, was charged with attempted murder in the Sunday shooting, police spokesman Mike Stewart said. His son, Mark, 29, was in serious but stable condition with a bullet wound in the abdomen.

Jacques Guy Derive, a family friend, said the elder Vermillion decided to shoot his son because he was beaten in an argument Saturday night. "They're always beating on each other," Derive said. "He (the elder Vermillion) told me, 'I'm going to shoot him. I'm not going to kill him, but I'm going to shoot him.'"

Are Dying Breed Today...

Lay Judges Needed During Pioneer Days

GLENDALE, Ore. (AP) — Gerald K. Snyder is a purveyor of justice without a law degree, a modern-day version of the frontier judge — from the lapels of his Western-style suit to the toe of his finely stitched cowboy boots.

Snyder, a justice of the peace in this rural pocket of southwestern Oregon, is not only the judge but frequently the jury and legal counsel for those accused of crimes in these parts.

Justices of the peace like Snyder are a dying breed across the United States. In recent years, about 20 states have asked lay judges to turn in their robes. Fifty years ago there were about 200 justices of the peace scattered through Oregon, compared with 39 today. Texas has about 1,500 nonattorney judges, but in Washington, their numbers have dwindled from about 200 to about 70, according to the National Judges Association.

The National Center for State Courts in Williamsburg, Va., reports that in 1979 about half the judges in the country's state courts, or about 13,300 judges, were not lawyers.

Lay judges handle only misdemeanors, the most serious — assault or menacing, for example — punishable by up to $2,500 in fines and a year in jail. In Oregon, justices of the peace also have authority to issue felony arrest warrants.

Critics of lay-judge courts claim they are a relic of pioneer days, rife with inconsistent rulings, underqualified judges and good-ol'-boy justice.

"I'll be the first to admit, I'm a 'good ol' boy,'" says Snyder. "But I've sent my best friend to jail. He's still my best friend."

The 49-year-old Snyder, an ex-Marine and former deputy sheriff, is a vocal defender of lay judges. He is the past president of the Oregon Justices of the Peace Association and in 1981 was named the best lay judge in the nation by the National Judges Association, a group that represents non-attorney judges across the country.

His office is a converted mobile home with an air conditioner that rattles and a roof that leaks. But Snyder is proud of his forum for justice, with antique bottles and pictures lining the room and a jury box packed with plush, leatherbound chairs.

Rx HEALTH TIP from DEAN

SIDE EFFECTS
Patients ask why they sould take medicines that cause side effects. All medicines, even aspirin, have some degree of risk. They are not prescribed, however, unless the physician believes they will do more good than harm. Modern drugs like cortisone, drugs for high blood pressure, irregular heartbeat, and cancer may cause several unpleasant side effects nearly every time they're used. Without them, the patient would experience even more suffering from the untreated illness. This is knows as a "favorable risk-versus-benefit ratio."
