Congress expected to support B1 halt

By TERENCE HUNT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is expected to go along with President Carter's decision to halt production of the B1 bomber, but not without a fight from supporters of the costly plane. "I believe Congress will uphold my decision," Carter told reporters today. He said he thought the reaction to his decision was "pretty good."

Defense Secretary Harold Brown said today production of the B1 bomber would have been a more attractive alternative than the cruise missile if the plane had been about 30 per cent cheaper. Brown told a news conference that Carter's decision to scrap the B1 in favor of the cruise missile will save

"many billions of dollars."

He said the precise saving can't be determined now because it will depend on the cost of outfitting B52 bombers to carry the cruise missile.

Brown said he was convinced the B1 could penetrate Soviet defenses but that he was "even more convinced we can penetrate Soviet defenses with the cruise."

He said the cruise missile would be an effective weapon into the late 1980's, adding that he doesn't rule out its effectiveness beyond that date. As Soviet defenses improve, he said, so will the cruise missile.

The secretary said the United States still needs manned bombers, a position challenged by some critics of the B1.

Bombers "can be recalled. They can deliver weapons accurately and they present a different kind of planning problem to the Soviet Union than do intercontinental ballistic missiles or sea-launched ballistic missiles," he said.

"Both the B1 and the cruise missile offer high assurance of survivability and penetration," Brown said, "but the President and I are convinced that the cruise missile will provide more certainty for our defense."

But congressional supporters of the B1 pledged to resist efforts to delete funding for the plane.

"The President has the right to make recommendations, but under the Constitution, Congress has the responsibility for the defense of the country," said Rep. George Mahon, D-Texas.

Teen set loose, suspect nabbed

By LORRAINE CICHOWSKI

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Charlotte Grosse, who was dragged screaming from a Girl Scout campground two days ago, was found safe today and a suspect was arrested, authorities said.

The 15-year-old called home about 10 a.m. and told her anxious parents that she was free after more than 52 hours of captivity. She called from Siesta Key, a beach area off Sarasota and only about 13 miles from the state park where she had been camping.

The call was monitored at the sheriff's office and within minutes Charlotte had been picked up and taken to Sarasota Memorial Hospital. Relatives said she was in good shape and had with no cuts or bruises.

"At this point we don't know if she broke away. She left of her own accord. She was told she could go out a window and apparently did," Sheriff's Cpl. Ray Pilon said. "We don't know what it's all about at this point. We're trying to piece it together."

The suspect was apprehended shortly afterward in the same area of the beach and brought to the sheriff's office, slouched in the back of a patrol car with his hands cuffed behind him.

He was identified as Wilfred Arthur Bannister, 33, of Siesta Key.

A six-footer with brown straggly hair, he was expressionless as he was hauled out of the car and hustled through a door of the jail.

Charlotte's parents, Richard E. and Carol Grosse, rushed to be with their daughter.

"They're ecstatic," a friend said by telephone from the Grosses' home in Nokomis, just south of Sarasota. The teenager was abducted at dawn Wednesday by a heavy, gruff-voiced man who ripped through the back of a three-man tent and pulled her out by her long brown hair.

Galleries ushered out for warhead debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Clearing its galleries for an unusual secret session, the Senate today debated whether the United States should build neutron warheads, which kill solely by radiation and leave buildings and other structures intact.

The closed-door session marked the first secret Senate meeting in 18 months and the 17th such session in 14 years.

At issue was a motion by Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., to eliminate an undisclosed amount of money for the warhead from a $10.3 billion public works bill containing funds for nuclear research and controversial water projects.

The neutron warhead is designed to kill without inflicting widespread property damage. Its supporters say it is sufficiently small, safe and controllable to avoid the risk of triggering a general nuclear war.

Other atomic weapons derive their destructive power from a combination of radiation, blast and heat.

In prepared remarks circulated in advance of the debate, Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., said, "I am afraid that to perpetrate death by neutron radiation smacks of the sort of chemical and biological warfare which has historically outraged civilized nations and which the United States has at times strongly condemned."

Heinz urged the Senate to debate the issue in open session to the extent that national security would allow.

Youth's hearing recessed

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

After telling attorneys involved he did not understand "why you had this big problem," U.S. District Judge D. W. Suttle Thursday recessed a hearing on a 16-year-old youth's petition for writ of habeas corpus until 9 a.m. Saturday.

The youth, detained in the reported rape of a north Midland woman and a reported burglary at another address, had requested the federal court to postpone a hearing in juvenile court scheduled for 9:30 a.m. this morning.

That hearing, which Suttle said could go on as scheduled, was to determine whether the youth should be tried as an adult or as a juvenile.

The petition for writ of habeas corpus also said the youth had been illegally detained, in part because the state had not shown probable cause that the youth is likely to abscond before his hearing.

In postponing the hearing, Suttle said that by Saturday the attorneys might be able to resolve the case, or the issues might resolve themselves.

He said the petitioner is entitled to a hearing, but "you just can't get instant Postum when you want it in this court" because there are too many priorities facing the court.

Suttle said he could not have an evidentiary hearing Thursday because he was in the final stages of an antitrust case. He also told the attorneys he will not be in Midland next week because of a "staggering docket" in San Antonio.

Suttle said he doesn't know why the attorneys for the youth and the attorneys for the county and state attorney general weren't able to resolve the issues. He said if the proceedings had initiated in his court, "I guarantee you I'd have worked it out."

He said he had to be very careful before interfering in a state matter and could not do it unless it was absolutely necessary. He could not make a ruling on the basis of information available Thursday afternoon, he said.

The petition for the writ named Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith as the person that has custody of the youth while he is in jail, and state Attorney General John Hill as respondents.

A brief filed Thursday by Assistant Attorney General James Parker said the court should reject the petition. It also asked the question, "Why the attorney general?"

"We are at a loss to understand why the attorney general of Texas has been named as a defendant in this case," the brief said, because the attorney general or his office does not have custody of the youth or control the county officials connected with the case.

Also filed Thursday was a motion to postpone the federal hearing until after today's juvenile hearing. In that motion, County Attorney Leslie Acker said if the case is transferred to

Jury indicts Yarbrough

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough has been indicted on forgery and aggravated perjury charges, adding the threat of prison to the legal burdens facing the young jurist who claims God told him to seek the office.

The Travis County grand jury returned the indictments Thursday.

The indictments came one day after Harris County Dist. Atty. Carol Vance said he had tapes of conversations linking Yarbrough to a plot to kill Victoria banker Bill Kemp, a witness against him in another proceeding.

If convicted, Yarbrough could go to prison for 2 to 20 years on each of two forgery counts and 2 to 10 years on the perjury charge.

Dist. Atty. Ronald Earle said he had not decided which case to prosecute first.

A former justice says Yarbrough probably is the first member of the state supreme court to be indicted for a crime.

Yarbrough, 36, already is the target of a disbarment action and more than a dozen civil suits.

The State Judicial Qualifications Commission, which can investigate alleged misconduct of judges and recommend their removal by the supreme court, meets Saturday to discuss Yarbrough.

'Junker' views himself as first-rate operator

Among junkers, Buster Welch views himself as a top-line dealer in a scavenging world.

"I'm not bragging, but I consider myself a professional," said Welch, who has been dealing in scrap iron, brass, copper and other highly-prized discards since 1950.

He returned to Midland, as he has done many times before, to do some ripping, salvaging and selling.

This time, he came to gut the old downtown Post Office Building, which soon will be razed along with some other older buildings on the same block.

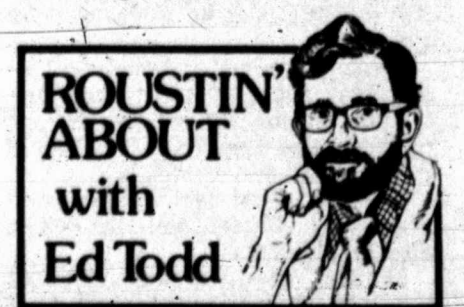

The scheme is to turn most of that block into a "people park" and an exhibit center.

Welch's scheme is to turn a heap of cash out of the deal.

He came over to Midland from Andrews last Saturday to see if it would be worth his while to do some bidding in a City of Midland auction.

It was. So, come Monday morning, ol' hawk-eye Welch cranked up his '73 red-and-yellow one-ton pickup truck, latched onto his helpmate and spouse, Betty, and made the Andrews-to-Midland drive.

His chore was to strip the 41-year-old post office building for all it was worth . . . to him. The city, which, in a windfall, had gotten control of the old mail house from the U.S. government, gave Welch two weeks to salvage the innards of the stalwart brick building. "If I can't get it (all the goods by then), that's my problem," Welch said. "But I bought it according to what I could do."

Welch laid down about $355 for his right to violate the forsaken building. Someone else would bring her on down, finish her off, wreck her, pass her on into memories.

The doomed building was built back in 1936, when James A. Farley was postmaster general and Midland was a town of less than 10,000 souls. (Somewhere between the 5,494 folks

Fireworks demand proper attention

By GEORGE H. JOHNSTON

Despite a 20-year-old city ordinance prohibiting them, fireworks continue to be discharged within the city limits of Midland, causing bodily injury and threat of fires, according to Midland Fire Chief Melvin Little.

In fact, Little has determined that the bottle rocket type fireworks was responsible for the fire Wednesday evening that heavily damaged the residence of Mr. and Mrs. James Ashwood of 3404 Bedford.

All types of fireworks are a fire hazard, Little said, but the bottle rockets are the worst type.

"The rockets are so light that the wind can move them in any direction. Anything that goes up into the air is a fire hazard to roof tops," Little said.

Several spent bottle rockets were found in the yard and on the rooftop of the Ashwood residence by firemen after they extinguished the fire.

Little also expressed concern that unless the Midland area gets more rain between now and Monday, more fires like that at the Ashwood residence will take place.

"Last year we were fortunate in that it rained for a couple of days before Independence Day, but two years ago we had all of our equipment and men out at times because of the dry weather," he said.

"If it comes up real dry Sunday and Monday and the humidity drops, then we are in real trouble," Little added.

According to the city ordinance, no one can discharge or even possess fireworks within the city limits, including 5,000 feet outside the limits. The fine for violating that ordinance is $100 to $200.

Little said everyone in the city is going to have to help enforce the ordinance because the police cannot be everywhere at once.

"If people can't stop the practice in their neighborhood, then they should call the police. People are going to have to protect their property by preventing fireworks from being discharged," Little said.

"Unless something is done, we are going to have more like this (the Ashwood fire)," he added.

Midland Police Major Sid Corley said the police department filed on

Bikes, trikes feature of July 4th parade

Bicycles and tricycles will be the mode of transportation July 4 for the 15th annual sidewalk parade sponsored by the Col. Theunis Dey Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Registration for the parade, which will begin at 10 a. m., will be held at the corner of Harvard and A Streets between 9 and 10 a. m.

The parade will feature patriotically decorated bicycles, tricycles and other sidewalk vehicles. Prizes will be given in three divisions, preschool, grades one through three and grades four through six. Children should register in the grade they were in prior to school ending.

Bill Cormack, coordinator of fine arts for the Midland public schools, will be master of ceremonies.

Presentation of parade winners will follow the parade. Jeff Robnett, Midland High School student, will give a patriotic speech, with an old fashioned sing-along afterwards, conducted by Cormack.

Games will be directed by the five people early this week for discharging fireworks within the city limits.

"We have already had numerous calls concerning fireworks in the city," Corley said.

Along with the fire danger, fireworks can cause serious injury to anyone using them carelessly. "I am as patriotic as the next man but these things are dangerous," Corley said.

According to a report from the Texas Society for the Prevention of Blindness, nine children were blinded last year by carelessness with fireworks.

The release report goes on to say, "Ironically, the greatest number of accidents were reported in the major cities of Texas, where it is illegal to have fireworks within the city limits."

According to the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, Inc., injuries from firework accidents—particularly eye injuries—are showing an ominous upswing.

The society advocates federal and state regulation of all fireworks with the only use being licensed public display.

"It seems paradoxical that we are so ready to leap into action against an unproven health threat like saccharin, but look the other way as hospital emergency rooms file actual reports of fireworks casualties," said Virginia S. Boyce, the society's executive director.

Fireworks control legislation has been enacted into law in 28 states. However, Texas is not one of those states. So far, only cities and local governments regulate fireworks.

Little said he thinks trade negotiations with nations that manufacture fireworks has hampered federal regulation.

"Some fireworks are made in the United States, but 99.9 per cent of them are made in countries like Japan and China," he said.

Congress started to ban the use of fireworks except for public display in 1975, but pressure from groups wanting public use of fireworks for the Bicentennial stopped the ban.

Midland Kiwanis. The Kiwanis will also run the refreshment stand.

Members of the Joseph Black Society, Children of the American Revolution, will participate in the parade. Tami Lane, majorette at Robert E. Lee High School, will lead; Andy Britton will be flag bearer, and Chrissie and Leaf Faller will carry the parade banner.

Hospital presents new budget

ODESSA — Medical Center Hospital administrator W. Sam Glenny presented a 1978 fiscal budget of $14,782,638 to the hospital board of managers Thursday night.

Hospital Affiliate representative Bill Patterson, explained to the board the fiscal year would run from Oct. 1, 1977 to Sept. 30, 1978. This schedule will coincide with the county's new budget system. Patterson said the estimated budget was projected on the total patient revenue for that specified period.

Hospital managers also said Medical Center Hospital lost $472,853 this year. The projected loss for 1978 is $257,852. Glenny said the hospital would seek financial aid from the county to offset the projected loss. The fund operating deficit is in lieu of room rate increases, Glenny said. He said if the county refused to offset the deficit, the only alternative would be to increase the room rate by 12 to 15 per cent. He said he hoped the rate increase would not be necessary.

Preliminary injunction sought by commission

The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission is seeking in Midland federal court a preliminary injunction against a former Odessa petroleum engineer.

Commission attorneys contend William T. Speller made $4.8 million in fraudulent and unregistered sales of oil and gas leases. The injunction being sought would restrain Speller and Speller Oil from further business.

The motion seeking the injunction also alleged Speller and Speller Oil Corp. failed to maintain an accurate set of books and records and that they did not pay for a portion of the interests in the leases which they had agreed to purchase.

The motion alleged that Speller, then living in Odessa, began in May 1973 selling to the public unregistered securities in the form of fractional undivided working interests in oil and gas leases in Oklahoma, most of them in Kingfisher and Garfield counties.

The SEC said Speller was replaced by his Odessa area investors as operator in May 1976, but he then formed Speller Oil Co., with its operational office in Oklahoma City, and has been following a similar pattern of activity since then.

The documents filed in court alleged that oil and gas ventures formed by Speller called for an initial payment by the investor to start the drilling of a well and additional later payments to cover the actual cost to finish drilling the well.

The violations to the Securities Exchange Act of 1933, the SEC alleged, are failure to register securities and offering fraudulent securities through interstate commerce in the mails.

Speller was not available this morning for comment on the allegations.

No date has been set for a hearing on the request for the preliminary injunction.

July 4th fare includes Lions' barbecue menu

The Tall City Lions Club will stage its annual Fourth of July weekend barbecue Saturday and Sunday at Hogan Park.

Barbecued beef, goat and hot links, with side dishes of potato salad, red beans and relish, will be served. Tickets for the benefit barbecue are $2.50 per plate for adults and $2 for children. The barbecued cabrito plates are 50 cents extra.

Food will be served all day Saturday, beginning at 11 a. m., and until 4 p. m. Sunday.

Proceeds from the event will be used by the Lions Club to finance its charity and civic projects during this year.

The Lions again this year scheduled their barbecue in connection with the staging of the Men's State Slow-Pitch Softball Tournament this weekend at Hogan Park.

Tickets are on sale at Tom's Pharmacy, 204 N. Lee St., and in the lobby of the Midland Hilton.

of 1930 and the 9,352 of 1940.)

By 1974, the office-town that is Midland had already hit the big time. And a new, sprawling Federal Building and Post Office complex was built in downtown Midland and was dedicated that year.

And the Roosevelt-era post office was abandoned, deserted, locked up. Apparently having no more use for the building, the feds simply gave the aging facility and its plot of land to the city. The "condition" of the gift was that the city get rid of the edifice and convert the plot of land into a park for the city's 72,000 people.

That time is fast coming.

Just last Saturday, the city sold the insides of the building for $1,709.

Under the prompting of McKinney auctioneer Rene Bates, bargain-hunters became owners of certain furnishings and fixtures.

There was nothing sacred left.

The vault went for $85, the antique, milk-glass-like light fixtures were sold for $10 and $15 apiece; four cage windows were auctioned off at $11 each, and some bulletin boards and tables, too, went for rock-bottom prices.

On the outside, two lamps on either side of the marbled front steps were sold for $175 each. And the flagpole, at $25, possibly became a treasure for someone.

What remained, including the plumbing, boiler and steam radiators, the incinerator, the woodwork, and the brass and copper and "the rest of the building" went to Welch.

"He got a good deal," commented J. Robert Massengale, the city's director of finance.

For $355 plus sales tax, scrap-iron dealer Welch was told "to get what you can out without tearing the walls down," Massengale said. A wrecking crew would do that.

"There's a lot of sentimental value" to the old building, opined the lanky scrap-iron dealer. He was wearing a black vented cap that bore the patch "That's a big 10-4."

Welch, who's now 56 and is thinking of retiring, got into the scrap business in Brownwood in the mid-1930s.

He was 12 and had just been yanked out of an orphanage in Dallas.

"I started hustling brass just as soon as I got out," he said. But he didn't pursue a career in that line, at least not then.

Eventually, he landed in the "insurance racket," and came to Midland from Longview in East Texas around 1948 to peddle in-district court bail will be set immediately and the youth may be released on bond.

If the case is retained in juvenile court, another detention hearing will be held immediately, Acker said, and the youth may be released, in either of those situations, release would occur within 24 hours.

If the youth is not released, Acker said in the motion, Smith will voluntarily return the youth to federal court for a hearing.

Although he postponed the hearing, Suttle did not rule formally on the motion.

Hung jury ends trial

The trial of Carl Dean Hubbard, who lists his address as the 1900 block of West Tennessee Avenue, for alleged securities law violations ended Thursday with a hung jury.

After deliberating from about 9:30 a. m. to almost 6 p. m., the jury reported to District Judge Vann Culp that it had been unable to reach a verdict and a mistrial was declared.

Prosecutor Timothy Ann Sloan said the case will be retried, probably beginning July 11. Hubbard will remain in county jail until then unless he posts bond, she said.

Coyonosa suffers tornado

COYONOSA — A trailer house was reported to have been completely demolished by a tornado that struck Coyonosa at approximately 8:25 p. m. Thursday.

Coyonosa is approximately 24 miles southwest of Monahans.

A church and store also received some damage, with the roofs being blown off. Other structures received light to moderate damage, according to a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety in Pecos.

Electric and telephone service were disrupted in the storm.

No injuries were reported, and there is no estimate of damage yet, according to the BPS.

Rain fails to appear

Storm clouds, thunder and lightning promised quite a bit but delivered only a trace of rain in Midland last night. The storm was part of line that spawned at least one West Texas tornado.

Chances of thunderstorms continue through Saturday, with partly cloudy skies. Probability of rain is 30 per cent today, 30 per cent tonight and 20 per cent tomorrow.

Tower to talk about donation

ODESSA — U.S. Senator John Tower is expected to comment on the American G.I. Forum's contribution, to minority businessmen when he addresses the Forum at 10 a. m. Saturday at the Inn of the Golden West in Odessa.

More than 500 members from 100 Texas chapters of G.I. Forum are expected to attend the three-day convention.

Attorney General John Hill and Secretary of State Mark White were scheduled to address the Forum today.

Cruise missile seals Carter's B1 decision

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Flashing through the air above the California desert, the gleaming white B-1 looks as sleek as a fighter plane and performs aerial gymnastics that no other bomber in the world could match.

While three test models were showing off their dazzling technology above Edwards Air Force Base during the past three years, however, government accountants in Washington were growing steadily more concerned about a potentially fatal illness — the B-1 was fat and getting fatter in its costs.

Nevertheless, the B-1 might have survived a bit longer in spite of a price tag that had climbed above $100 million per plane if it had not been for a stubby rival — the cruise missile — which was undergoing preliminary tests at the same desert proving range.

In announcing his decision to cancel the B-1 project, President Carter said cruise missiles, launched from existing B-52 bombers, could do the same job as the supersonic bomber at a fraction of the cost.

For almost 20 years, the United States has maintained three separate types of weapons — manned bombers, intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBMs) and submarine-launched ballistic missiles — to deliver nuclear bombs to distant foreign targets. Each system has unique advantages not possessed by the other two.

White House can keep secret

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was one of the best-kept secrets in town. The reason was that very few people knew what Jimmy Carter had decided about the B-1 bomber before he told the world.

Those privy to the President's secret numbered no more than a half dozen, according to a member of that exclusive fraternity.

The presidential recommendation to make the B-1 the B-zero followed four weeks of intensive discussion among Carter and his most trusted advisers.

The difficulty of the decision prompted Carter to: —Leave the office early, about 2:30 p.m., on at least two occasions so he could take his option papers to his private living quarters to read and ponder.

—Confine his official reading during his Father's Day weekend at Camp David, Md., to more B-1 documents, one an inch-thick "eyes only" Defense Department analysis of the bomber's merits and shortcomings.

—Draw up, on a yellow legal pad, a handwritten list of 49 points for and against the B-1, which he then used as a point of reference in weighing complex options.

—Declare at one point: "I'm in a quandary about it."

The adviser Carter relied on most often, says

White House Press Secretary, Jody Powell, was Defense Secretary Harold Brown. Sometimes by phone, sometimes face to face, the President consulted Brown "continually and intensively... dozens of times," Powell related.

"They sort of arrived at the same conclusion," he said. "They were back and forth with each other all the way."

By Powell's account, Carter also received analyses from the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Air Force, the Office of Management and Budget and the National Security Council.

An NSC spokesman said his agency coordinated the written submissions.

When did the President make up his mind?

Carter was quoted as saying he couldn't pinpoint the time. However, he spoke of being in a quandary as recently as Tuesday morning and reportedly told at least one associate, Hamilton Jordan, on Tuesday night that he had made up his mind.

Powell learned the decision when he attended a meeting between Carter and Brown on Wednesday morning.

Industry loss said long-term

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Cancellation of the B-1 bomber program dashed hopes Thursday in corporate boardrooms from Long Island to Los Angeles, and threatened to put thousands of people, who had been designing everything from wings to wheels for the supersonic transport, out of work.

But many of the companies which had been planning on a share of the $100 billion-plus program — including Rockwell International, which as main contractor has the most invested in the plane — said termination would have little effect on earnings this year.

The big loss for Rockwell and dozens of other contractors will be in terms of what might have been. "The company will lose the long-term potential production would have offered us," a Rockwell spokesman said.

Trading in Rockwell stock was suspended for four hours Thursday after President Carter's announcement. The stock price had risen slightly early in the day, reflecting speculation in the morning papers that the project would be approved.

When trading resumed, the price had dropped $4.75 to $32, but that was the low for the day. The stock closed at 32 3/8. Market analysts predicted the stock had slipped as much as it would in response to the B-1 decision, and observed that termination of the project may even prove to be a positive factor for Rockwell in the long run.

"It's certainly not a disaster for Rockwell," said John Simon, an aeronautics industry financial expert with the Los Angeles-based brokerage firm Crowell, Wheedon & Co. "Maybe now the company management will stop all the politicking and put some of its top people back to work building up other divisions, such as Admiral."

Rockwell had about 16,000 persons working on the B-1 project, including designers and engineers at a plant in El Segundo, Calif., machinists at an assembly plant in Palmdale, and avionics experts at Edwards Air Force base where three prototype aircraft built by the company have been undergoing tests. Since 1970, when Rockwell won the B-1 contract, more than $2.8 billion has been spent on the program.

A spokesman for the company said 10,000 persons will have to be laid off as a result of the cancellation, about 8,000 of whom are in the Los Angeles area. The entire corporation has about 115,000 employees.

Nationwide, more than 30,000 will be directly affected by Carter's decision.

Searchers hunt hard for killers of town lawman

MAGAZINE, Ark. (AP) — Searchers pressed a hunt today in a 50-mile circle of this western Arkansas village for two gunmen who killed a town marshal, wounded a park ranger and apparently abducted the ranger's partner.

The search of this heavily wooded area by a 125-man posse, airplanes and a helicopter was suspended at dark Thursday, but roadblocks were maintained through the night, said John Kelly, the FBI agent in charge of the search.

"There's sufficient information to maintain the same general area of concentrated search," Kelly said at end of the first day spent in seeking the two unidentified men.

"Because of the density of the forest, we haven't had time to cover it all that we want to. Essentially we are in a groove, just waiting for something to happen."

He said all-points bulletins have been issued in three neighboring states — Oklahoma, Texas and Louisiana — for the pair.

Earlier Thursday, the FBI said the pair was linked to the disappearance of two Louisiana fishermen who were feared dead near a river 350 miles southeast of here.

"They are real killers. These are real bad folks," Kelly said. The FBI released composite sketches of the two that were prepared from information provided by the wounded ranger.

Marvin E. Richie, 42, the marshal of this town of 677 persons, was shot to death Wednesday in the trunk of his police car. He was handcuffed to wounded part-time U.S. Corps of Engineers ranger David Small, 27, who is a high school principal at Plainview.

The ranger's partner, Opal James, 58, was apparently abducted by the two men and the three left in the Corps' pickup truck. Authorities said the rangers were unarmed.

The wounded ranger was listed in stable condition with a gunshot wound to the right shoulder. The marshal was shot once in the back of the head.

The link with the Louisiana fishermen was made through a car found abandoned here on Wednesday. The marshal had gone to investigate the car and the two men in it. He was not heard from until he was found shot to death in the trunk.

The car was registered to Alton Wilson, 66, of Franklinton, La., Wilson and his companion, Ray Jones Sr., also of Franklinton, who were last seen Tuesday when they left to go fishing. Washington (La.) Parish Sheriff Willie Blair said the Bogue Chitto River area was being searched for bodies.

The rangers were patrolling an area of Blue River Reservoir when they noticed the marshal's car and went to investigate, authorities said. The U.S. Corps of Engineers operates water recreation areas across the country, including eight in Arkansas.

Authorities said the two were believed armed with .357-magnum pistols and a .44-magnum pistol. They were described as in their early 20s and wearing blue jeans.

Here is an account of the events leading up to the abduction of the marshal. The sequence was pieced together from a series of interviews:

A thunderstorm had blown through Magazine Tuesday night, and Wednesday dawned with the town filled with talk of the weather.

About 9 a.m., Earnest Hart, who lives just outside this Logan County town was traveling down a dirt road taking his daughter to a babysitting appointment. Hart noticed two men fixing a flat tire.

He stopped and asked them if they needed help or a ride into town.

Although the man apparently had no spare tire, they told Hart they didn't want help. Later Hart saw Richie and told him about the men. As strangers to a small community, the pair aroused suspicion.

Hart had copied the Louisiana license-plate number from the car. Richie telephoned the Booneville Police Department with the information and requested a routine check for outstanding warrants.

Authorities say Booneville Police told Richie that car was not stolen and had no outstanding warrants. Still intrigued, Richie apparently decided to look into the matter further. He was not heard from for at least three hours.

About noon Richie's wife Catherine grew worried because her husband had not arrived home for lunch, as was his practice.

She called the Booneville police department which attempted to locate Richie through the police radio. Booneville Police, aided by sheriff's deputies, then began patrolling the heavily wooded Ouachita National Forest around Blue Mountain Reservoir.

Deputies passed by the Ashley Creek Overlook twice without seeing anything suspicious. On the third trip, a Logan County Sheriff's deputy spotted Richie's police car about 50 yards off the road and down an embankment.

Authorities said the deputy forced open the trunk of the car and saw Richie and Small stripped from the waist up and shot.

State Police Trooper Steve Spurlock described the scene as "incredibly bloody." He said Small was a "great help to law enforcement officers even though he was severely wounded." Small provided police with descriptions of the suspects and background on what led to the shooting.

According to Small's description, he and James had approached the men and the men pulled guns on them. James was told to lie down in the dirt.

The men then stripped the shirts from Richie and Small, handcuffed them together and forced them into the trunk of Richie's police car. The men then fired twice into the trunk, slammed the lid and left.

One of the shots struck Richie in the back of the head and the other struck Small in the right shoulder. Small was alive but badly injured when he was found by deputies four hours after the shooting.

Funeral services for Richie are planned here Saturday. Survivors include the marshal's widow and two daughters.

Legislators may try impeachment

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Houston area legislators say they plan to introduce a resolution in the upcoming July special legislative session calling for Texas Supreme Court Justice Donald Yarbrough's removal from office.

Reps. John Whitmire and Herman Lauhoff said Thursday such removal could be accomplished by a two-thirds vote of both the House and Senate.

Yarbrough could remain in office while fighting and possibly appealing charges that have been filed against him, Whitmire said.

The legislators said such a resolution is sanctioned by Article XV, Section 8 of the Texas State Constitution.

Section 8 provides that judges may be removed by the governor "on the address of two-thirds of each house of the Legislature, for willful neglect of duty, incompetency, habitual drunkenness, oppression in office or any reasonable cause which shall not be sufficient grounds for impeachment."

Chile decides to reject U.S. financial aid

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Chile has become the sixth Latin American country this year to reject U.S. financial assistance because of the Carter administration's attempts to use foreign aid as a lever in human rights disputes.

State Department officials confirmed Thursday that they received a diplomatic note formally spurning the proposed $27.5 million economic aid package on Tuesday.

Ironically, that was the same day that the department announced its intention to hold up $9.3 million of this package for 30 to 60 days to express disapproval of human rights violations by the Chilean government of President Augusto Pinochet.

The Pinochet regime seized power from Marxist President Salvador Allende in a bloody 1973 military coup that saw Allende killed. Since then, thousands of Chilean exiles have accused the regime of systematically killing, imprisoning and torturing persons that it regards as its enemies.

Chilean embassy sources said Thursday night that Pinochet's decision to spurn U.S. aid was made before the State Department revealed that the loan for programs to aid Chilean farmers would be held up. By an odd coincidence, the sources added, the Chilean note was delivered almost simultaneously with the department's public announcement of the loan delay.

In yet another coincidence, Tuesday also was the day when visiting Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez lavishly praised President Carter for his strong stance on human rights questions. However, as the Chilean action indicated, there is a wide gulf between the attitudes of Perez, one of Latin America's few democratically elected leaders, and the military regimes that dominate most of that region's countries.

The dispute with Chile marked what State Department sources characterized as the first case of economic aid being withheld for humanitarian reasons. Earlier this year, though, five other Latin American countries — Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, Guatemala and El Salvador — all rejected U.S. military assistance on the grounds that Washington's pressures over human rights questions were an interference in their internal affairs.

Argentina and Uruguay said they would not accept U.S. aid of any kind. Brazil, traditionally the staunchest U.S. ally in South America, also cancelled its 25-year-old military assistance treaty with the United States.

The aid package for Chile, already approved by Congress as part of the fiscal year 1977 budget, included $15 million for surplus wheat sales and $12.5 million for a variety of development loans and grants. These included the blocked loan, which was to finance an irrigation project and other small agricultural programs.

State Department sources Thursday denied reports that the loan had caused a controversy between department human rights officials, who wanted it withheld, and officials of the Latin American bureau and the Agency for International Development, who reportedly favored going ahead with the loan.

The sources said there had been much discussion about whether economic assistance intended to help poverty-stricken farmers should be used as a weapon in the human rights debate. In the end though, the sources insisted, the diplomatic and AID officials in the Latin American bureau agreed that the loan should be withheld as a gesture of disapproval.

The development loans involved in the dispute are described as the last U.S. aid currently planned for Chile, which formerly was the largest Latin American recipient of U.S. financial assistance. Congress voted last year to limit economic aid to Chile and barred military assistance on human rights grounds.

Scout probe draws blanks

LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — The FBI has drawn a near-blank in its search for an escaped convict who is charged in the sex murders of three Girl Scouts, it has been learned.

Source said the number of agents assigned to the case was reduced today to about eight, they were unable to develop "positive information" in the case.

The sources said, however, that there was "no indication that he (Hart) has left the area."

Federal agents have been going door-to-door showing photographs and drawings of Hart to residents, asking if he had been seen. The FBI entered the case on a large scale shortly after a ground and air search was called off last weekend.

"I have never been lied to so much in my life ... just absolutely no cooperation from the people we interviewed," one agent said.

Officials have searched the residence of Ella Mae Bucksin, 51, Hart's mother, and have kept it — and others in the area — under surveillance.

The FBI believes Hart was in the area the day before the June 13 murders near here and within several days later.

"We might have driven the guy deeper underground with all of our interviews," an agent said. "It looks like he hasn't been contacting as many people in the area."

Federal agents said Hart was on his mother's front porch June 4 as several friends tried to persuade him to go to church with them.

It could not be learned whether Hart did go to church that day, or whether the FBI thought Mrs. Bucksin was present.

"My boy didn't do it," Mrs. Bucksin said Thursday.

"God gave me a vision," she said. "He told me what was happening and he showed me that my boy ain't even in this state. He's never even been in my house. It's been four years since I've seen him and when he left, I was living in town."

Mrs. Bucksin said the last she heard from her son was a letter nearly a month after he escaped the Mayes County jail in September 1973. It was postmarked from the town of Calgary in the Canadian province of Alberta.

The Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation has obtained the letter.

The last of four SWAT (Special Weapons and Tactical Squads) teams operated by the Oklahoma Highway Patrol also left the area Friday.

Sheriff Glen "Pete" Weaver moved his operation base from Camp Scott, scene of the deaths, back to his office in Pryor.

Nursery rhyme may help guess

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Sometimes you have to guess which opponent has a key ace or a key king. Many bridge players decide such matters with the aid of a nursery rhyme that starts "biddy bibbetty"

West dealer North South vulnerable NORTH Q73 Q75 Q106 K964 WEST EAST J95 A10 K83 9642 AK7 8543 J753 Q108 SOUTH K8642 A J10 J92 A2 West North East South Pass Pass Pass 1 4 Pass 1 NT Pass 2 Pass 3 All Pass Opening lead - 0 K

The bidding is not recommended, just reported. North should raise to two spades, or South should pass 1 NT. South actually got to three spades, and West began with three rounds of diamonds.

South saw that he could limit the trump loss to one trick if either opponent had A-x of trumps, by leading a low trump through that opponent. The opponent would play low, whereupon declarer would win and play low trumps from both hands at the next trick.

But how does one discover which opponent has A-x of trumps? Oddly enough, you find out about the ace of spades by leading dummy's queen of hearts for a finesse. You lose the heart finesse to West's king, and now you know that East has the ace of spades.

DISCOVERY By this time you have discovered that West started with A-K of diamonds and the king of hearts. If he also held the ace of spades he would have opened the bidding instead of passing. Hence East must have the ace of spades.

For this reason you must get to dummy with the king of clubs to lead a low trump through East. When East plays low, you win with the king and return a trump, playing low from dummy.

DAILY QUESTION Partner opens with one heart, and the next player passes. You hold: SJ95, HK83, DAK7, CJ753. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two clubs. The hand is too strong for a raise to two hearts, but not strong enough for a trump to three hearts. Bid your suit, such as it is, and raise hearts later to show your in-between values.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Acupuncture makes sense

Dear Dr. Solomon: I had always thought that the whole business of acupuncture was a gimmick, Chinese or no Chinese. But when I was at the dentist the other day, he happened to mention that it perhaps does make sense medically. Is this something that has been proved, do you know? Does anyone have any idea just how it does work—if it does?—Susan M.

Dear Susan: Dr. Bruce Pomeranz of the University of Toronto has come up with some very interesting new information on how acupuncture may act as an anesthetic. Earlier theories were that acupuncture might simply be a psychological distraction or a form of hypnosis or a means of short-circuiting pain in some way. But Dr. Pomeranz, on the basis of laboratory experiments with animals, offers another hypothesis.

His theory, presented at a recent meeting in Toronto, goes like this: The acupuncture needle stimulates certain specific nerves deep in the muscles, and this sets off a chain reaction in the brain. A message goes to the brain's pituitary gland, which then releases a pain-killing hormone called endorphin into the blood. The endorphin is carried to brain cells that react to pain, and this deadens the response. Anesthesia results.

In his tests, Dr. Pomeranz measured the electrical activity of pain cells in the brain of anesthetized animals. When the animal's paw was pricked with a pin, the cells fired rapidly, but after acupuncture the pin produced only slow firing. In about an hour and a half, the effect wore off, and the animals were reacting normally.

What Dr. Pomeranz now hopes to get is some definitive proof that his hypothesis is correct—by measuring the blood's endorphin content before, during, and after acupuncture. This requires very delicate instruments able to detect a millionth of a millionth of a gram. Dr. Pomeranz says he is not promoting acupuncture as a treatment, and he hopes his work won't encourage vast numbers of doctors and patients to jump on the acupuncture bandwagon once again. But he does feel he has an effective animal model for studying acupuncture. And he would like good scientists to get into this field.

I do think it will be interesting to see what the results of Dr. Pomeranz's new experiments will be.

To J. A. St. Louis, Mo.: Chills are a mechanism for raising body temperature to a new level set by the "thermostat" in the hypothalamus of the brain. Pneumococcal pneumonia and gram-negative germs causing blood infections are two conditions characteristically associated with chills. However, these are not the only conditions and chills may be seen with fever due to allergic reactions, transfusion reactions, viral infections, and malignancy. In a patient with fever, ingestion of aspirin may also cause chills.

Security Council OKs Mozambique resolution

UNITED NATIONS. "material assistance" to Mozambique's defense against Rhodesian border attacks. The African resolution adopted Thursday also asked U.N. members to provide financial and technical aid to compensate Mozambique for the severe economic losses it claims to be suffering because of the Rhodesian raids.

One U.S. diplomat said the measure amounted to only "a statement of moral support."

"In terms of actual contributions of weapons or funds, I wouldn't put too much stock in it," he said.

The Security Council in March, 1976, pledged $385 million to compensate Mozambique for economic hardships resulting from its closing its border with Rhodesia in accordance with U.N. sanctions. But less than a fourth of the total, about $100 million, was contributed, and most of it came from the United States and Britain.

Ethiopia faces more pressure

By BRIAN JEFFRIES

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ethiopia's Marxist government was reported under new pressure today from "hostile elements" occupying a town in the western part of the country and 15,000 Somali troops massed on the southeast frontier.

Kenya charged Thursday that 10,000 Somali troops invaded northeast Kenya last weekend near its convergence with Somalia and Ethiopia, and 5,000 more were poised on the border. Foreign Minister Munyua Waiyaki told a meeting of the Organization of African Unity in Gabon that the invaders told the local population they were going to use the area as a base for attacks on Ethiopia.

Somalia's ambassador to Kenya, Hussein Ali Dualeh, denied that any Somali soldiers had crossed into Kenya. He suggested the invaders were Ethiopian soldiers or guerrillas fighting the Ethiopian military government headed by Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam.

Meanwhile, Western diplomats in Addis Ababa said missionaries along Ethiopia's western border with Sudan reported "people in uniform" occupied the town of Beica two or three days ago. Beica, in Worrega province, is 23 miles from the Sudanese border and 300 miles due west of Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital.

The Norwegian foreign ministry said Norwegian missionaries in Beica reported the town had been taken over by Sudanese troops. But the diplomats in Addis Ababa told a telephone caller from Nairobi they had not learned whether they were Sudanese or Ethiopian rebels.

Guerrillas of the rightist Ethiopian Democratic Union have been active in the Gondar region of western Ethiopia and have the open support of the Sudanese government. But there have been no previous reports of guerrilla activity in Worrega province. There was no comment from either the Sudanese or the Ethiopian governments. The Ethiopian government has accused the Sudanese government of trying to undermine it, and last Friday it charged that Somalia was sending uniformed soldiers into the Ogaden area of eastern Ethiopia to aid local guerrillas fighting to unite the area with Somalia.

Approval of air bags expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is expected to approve a Transportation Department decision requiring automakers to build air bags or automatic safety belts into new cars, beginning with the 1982 models.

By 1984, all new cars sold in this country would be required to have the devices, which Transportation Secretary Brock Adams says could save 9,000 lives a year.

The key to the program's chances is that Adams is giving the companies plenty of time, phasing in the program over three years.

Congress has 60 days to review the plan. Unless the program is then rejected, it will become law.

There appeared to be no general opposition on Capitol Hill. Within an hour of Adams' announcement, however, Rep. Bud Shuster, R-Pa., an outspoken opponent of air bags, introduced a resolution to overturn the decision.

Shuster said there is "no hard evidence that air bags will save lives and it could cost American consumers over $20 billion."

Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., introduced a separate opposing resolution and told the Senate: "Secretary Adams' decision will put Big Brother in the front seat of every American automobile. It's both ironic and appropriate that his target year to finish the job is 1984."

New water legislation includes use penalty

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Carter Administration Thursday proposed legislation to penalize cities and towns across the nation that fail to reduce their water use by 15 per cent.

In a carrot-and-stick approach, the Environmental Protection Agency could withhold partial funding of multimillion-dollar sewage plants unless cities enact water conservation ordinances.

The ordinances, which would come into effect as cities receive sewage treatment grants over the next 10 years, would require homeowners to install toilet dams and special shower heads to save water. Industries could be forced to alter manufacturing processes and recycle water.

In proposing water conservation measures to the Senate Environment Committee Thursday, Assistant EPA Administrator Thomas Jorling said, "In a nation that is facing increasing problems of water scarcity, within a world environment never removed from the grim specter of famine, conscientious public policy demands no less."

Jorling also said the agency will continue to insist that communities charge sewage user fees keyed to the amount of water consumed. Cities such as Chicago that finance sewer plant operations through property taxes have been fighting EPA's user charge requirement. Other cities prefer that industry subsidize residential use or vice versa.

EPA's water-conservation carrot is a $45 billion program to finance 75 per cent of municipal sewage plants over the next 10 years. But if cities don't cut down water use, EPA proposes to fund only 70 per cent of the plants — a penalty that could amount to millions of dollars for some financially strapped communities.

Water conservation represents a new emphasis in federal policy although some localities, especially in drought-plagued California, have already enacted strict conservation measures. Washington is among many Eastern cities, including some in Florida and Georgia, that have recently become aware of water shortages.

Jorling said EPA will also try to change the types of sewage plants cities build. "Municipal treatment technologies have become hide-bound," he said, accusing the agency of "inertia" in promoting recycling of sewage water for irrigation and land treatment systems to use sludge for fertilizer or mulch.

Such innovative systems should receive priority funding, Sen. Wendell R. Anderson (D-Minn.) suggested Thursday.

Despite lobbying by cities and industries, the administration declined to recommend any delay of water cleanup deadlines. Seventy per cent of cities and towns will violate the 1977 standard for 85 per cent cleanup, which takes effect today. Jorling said the agency will ask for extensions on a case by case basis, but will take recalcitrant cities to court.

Coffee blamed for high bills from grocers

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Coffee takes the blame for sharp price increases for supermarket shoppers, who found grocery bills rising at a much faster rate in the first six months of 1977 than in the same period a year earlier, an Associated Press marketbasket survey shows.

The one encouraging sign was an indication that spiraling coffee prices for the brew may be easing.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and since has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

The latest survey showed that prices for the marketbasket at the checklist stores increased an average of 9 per cent from Jan. 1 to July 1. When coffee was removed from the totals, however, the six-month increase was only 1.4 per cent.

In 1976, the AP survey showed the marketbasket totals at checklist stores went up 1 per cent during the first six months of the year. Not counting coffee, the marketbasket totals dropped 1 per cent.

The government has predicted that retail prices for food purchased at the grocery store and eaten away from home will rise about 6 per cent this year, compared to an increase of 3-1/2 per cent last year.

Officials said much of the increase will be due to higher prices for imported items and products not produced on U.S. farms, including coffee, cocoa and seafood.

Wholesale coffee prices, which had topped $4.50 a pound, have been declining recently, reflecting lower prices for unroasted beans.

Congress expected to support B1 halt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is expected to go along with President Carter's decision to halt production of the B1 bomber, but not without a fight from supporters of the costly plane.

Democratic leaders in the House and Senate quickly expressed support for Carter's surprise decision to scrap the B1, and the President predicted his verdict would be endorsed on Capitol Hill.

Carter said he had the support of Defense Secretary Harold Brown, who scheduled a news conference today to discuss the decision.

But congressional supporters of the B1 pledged to resist efforts to delete funding for the plane.

"The President has the right to make recommendations, but under the Constitution, Congress has the responsibility for the defense of the country," said Rep. George Mahon, D-Texas, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. He vowed to fight for B1 money.

The congressional battle over the plane will focus on a $110.6 billion defense appropriations bill containing $1.5 billion for production of five B1s.

The measure was approved Thursday on a 333-to-54 vote in the House just hours after Carter said the United States does not need the B1 and its production should be halted while testing and research continue.

Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., claimed there were enough House members willing to change their stand and reverse a vote Tuesday that kept the B1 money in the bill. But Addabbo, who sponsored the unsuccessful effort earlier in the week, said he decided to let Senate Democrats chop out the funds rather than ask House members to change their votes.

Carter said he thought many congressmen who voted for the B1 funds on Tuesday believed he was going to urge production of the bomber. Prior to his decision there had been widespread speculation that the President would authorize a limited production of the B1.

Instead, Carter recommended deployment of cruise missiles, which represent a weapons technology in which the United States is believed to lead the Soviet Union by about five years.

A defense spokesman said the Pentagon envisions arming about 250 of its existing B52 bombers with cruise missiles, which have a range of up to 1,500 miles.

A cruise missile breaks the surface of the Pacific Ocean following a subsurface launch. President Carter says he thinks the pilotless missile is an adequate enough strategic weapon that B1 bomber production can be halted. (AP Laserphoto)

Senate to vote on neutron bomb

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is preparing to vote on a measure that would furnish money to produce neutron warheads, designed to kill people by radiation without damaging buildings or other weapons.

The Senate put the item on its agenda for today as it continued work on the $10.3-billion public works bill containing funds for nuclear research and several controversial water projects.

President Carter is still studying whether to approve the new generation of nuclear weaponry, but an administration official said Carter wants Congress to approve the funds to give him "maximum flexibility" in making his decision.

The neutron-bomb warhead is designed to kill without inflicting widespread destruction. Its supporters say it is sufficiently small, safe and controllable so as not to risk starting a general nuclear war.

It would kill people with massive doses of radiation, just as conventional nuclear weapons operate.

Death could take as long as several weeks, although anyone within a half-mile of the explosion would die within a day or two.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., said the matter would be taken up in closed session. Other Senate sources said this was being contemplated.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, the Oregon Republican, made a move to eliminate the neutron warhead in a public works subcommittee meeting two weeks ago. The bid was rejected.

Hatfield said Thursday he would again take his motion to the floor because the weapon poses an unacceptable risk of nuclear devastation.

"Given the added psychological impact of being attacked by a nuclear weapon, I do not believe a country's response to a nuclear attack can be predicted accurately," he said.

If an enemy retaliated with a larger nuclear warhead, he said, "we would find ourselves in the position of trying to decide whether to raise the stakes and show our determination with a still more powerful weapon."

Grand jury indicts Justice Yarbrough

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough has been indicted on forgery and aggravated perjury charges, adding the threat of prison to the legal burdens facing the young jurist who claims God told him to seek the office.

The Travis County grand jury returned the indictments Thursday.

The indictments came one day after Harris County Dist. Atty. Carol Vance said he had tapes of conversations linking Yarbrough to a plot to kill Victoria banker Bill Kemp, a witness against him in another proceeding.

If convicted, Yarbrough could go to prison for 2 to 20 years on each of two forgery counts and 2 to 10 years on the perjury charge.

Dist. Atty. Ronald Earle said he had not decided which case to prosecute first.

A former justice says Yarbrough probably is the first member of the state supreme court to be indicted for a crime.

Yarbrough, 36, already is the target of a disbarment action and more than a dozen civil suits.

The State Judicial Qualifications Commission, which can investigate alleged misconduct of judges and recommend their removal by the supreme court, meets Saturday to discuss Yarbrough.

Suttle recesses hearing

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

After telling attorneys involved he did not understand "why you had this big problem," U.S. District Judge D. W. Suttle Thursday recessed a hearing on a 16-year-old youth's petition for habeas corpus until 9 a.m. Saturday.

The youth, detained in the reported rape of a north Midland woman and a reported burglary at another address, had requested the federal court to postpone a hearing in juvenile court scheduled for 9:30 a.m. this morning.

That hearing, which Suttle said could go on as scheduled, was to determine whether the youth should be tried as an adult or as a juvenile.

The petition for writ of habeas corpus also said the youth had been illegally detained, in part because the state had not shown probable cause that the youth is likely to abscond before his hearing.

In postponing the hearing, Suttle said that by Saturday the attorneys might be able to resolve the case, or the issues might resolve themselves.

He said the petitioner is entitled to a hearing, but "you just can't get instant Postum when you want it in this court" because there are too many priorities facing the court.

Suttle said he could not have an evidentiary hearing Thursday because he was in the final stages of an antitrust case. He also told the attorneys he will not be in Midland next week because of a "staggering docket" in San Antonio.

Suttle said he doesn't know why the attorneys for the youth and the attorney for the county and state attorney general weren't able to resolve the issues. He said if the proceedings had initiated in his court, "I guarantee you I'd have worked it out."

He said he had to be very careful before interfering in a state matter and could not do it unless it was absolutely necessary. He could not make a ruling on the basis of information available Thursday afternoon, he said.

The petition for the writ named Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith as the person that has custody of the youth while he is in jail, and state Attorney General John Hill as respondents.

A brief filed Thursday by Assistant Attorney General James Parker said the court should reject the petition. It also asked the question, "Why the attorney general?"

"We are at a loss to understand why the attorney general of Texas has been named as a defendant in this cause," the brief said, because the attorney general or his office does not have custody of the youth or control the county officials connected with the case.

Also filed Thursday was a motion to postpone the federal hearing until after today's juvenile hearing. In that motion, County Attorney Leslie Acker said if the case is transferred to

Teen-age girl set free

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Charlotte Grosse, who was dragged screaming from a Girl Scout campground two days ago, was found safe today and a suspect was arrested, sheriff's officials said.

Screaming, "Please don't take me!" the 15-year-old girl was dragged from her tent at the camp on Wednesday.

Today she called the sheriff's office about 10 a.m. to say her abductor had kept his pledge and set her free on Siesta Key, the beach area off Sarasota, Sheriff's Cpl. Ray Pilon said.

Charlotte had been allowed to make her first call to her parents on Wednesday night to tell them the kidnaper "just wanted to get rid of her," Pilon said.

Officers rushed to pick up

Charlotte, and shortly afterward apprehended a suspect in the case in the same beach area, he said.

There were no immediate details of where the girl had been held or the identity of her abductor.

Her parents, Richard and Carol Grosse, had heard from her 17 hours after the abduction and had been told that she would be freed.

'Junker' views himself as first-rate operator

Among junkers, Buster Welch views himself as a top-line dealer in a scavenging world.

"I'm not bragging, but I consider myself a professional," said Welch, who has been dealing in scrap iron, brass, copper and other highly-prized discards since 1950.

He returned to Midland, as he has done many times before, to do some ripping, salvaging and selling.

This time, he came to gut the old downtown Post Office Building, which soon will be razed along with some other older buildings on the same block.

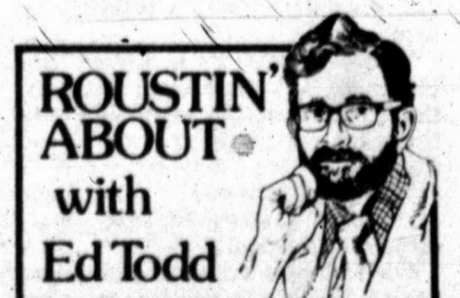

The scheme is to turn most of that block into a "people park" and an exhibit center.

Welch's scheme is to turn a heap of cash out of the deal.

He came over to Midland from Andrews last Saturday to see if it would be worth his while to do some bidding in a City of Midland auction. It was.

So, come Monday morning, ol' hawk-eye Welch cranked up his '73 red-and-yellow one-ton pickup truck, latched onto his helpmate and spouse, Betty, and made the Andrews-to-Midland drive.

His chore was to strip the 41-year-old post office building for all it was worth . . . to him. The city, which, in a windfall, had gotten control of the old mail house from the U.S. government, gave Welch two weeks to salvage the innards of the stalwart brick building.

"If I can't get it (all the goods by then), that's my problem," Welch said. "But I bought it according to what I could do."

Welch laid down about $350 for his right to violate the forsaken building. Someone else would bring her on down, finish her off, wreck her, pass her on into memories.

The doomed building was built back in 1936, when James A. Farley was postmaster general and Midland was a town of less than 10,000 souls. (Somewhere between the 5,484 folks

Nursery rhyme may help guess

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Sometimes you have to guess which opponent has a key ace or a key king. Many bridge players decide such matter with the aid of a nursery rhyme that starts "Ibety bibety" and goes on very intellectually from there. Surer methods are available.

- West dealer North South vulnerable NORTH Q73 Q75 Q106 K964 WEST EAST J95 A10 K83 Q642 AK7 Q8543 J753 Q108 SOUTH K8642 AJ10 J92 A2 West North East South Pass Pass Pass 1 Pass 1 NT Pass 2 Pass 3 All Pass Opening lead - K

The bidding is not recommended, just reported. North should raise to two spades, or South should pass 1 NT. South actually got to three spades, and West began with three rounds of diamonds.

South saw that he could limit the trump loss to one trick if either opponent had A-x of trumps, by leading a low trump through that opponent. The opponent would play low, whereupon declarer would win and play low trumps from both hands at the next trick.

But how does one discover which opponent has A-x of trumps? Oddly enough, you find out about the ace of spades by leading dummy's queen of hearts for a finesse. You lose the heart finesse to West's king, and now you know that East has the ace of spades.

DISCOVERY

By this time you have discovered that West started with A-K of diamonds and the king of hearts. If he also held the ace of spades he would have opened the bidding instead of passing. Hence East must have the ace of spades.

For this reason you must get to dummy with the king of clubs to lead a low trump through East. When East plays low, you win with the king and return a trump, playing low from dummy.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one heart, and the next player passes. You hold: SJ95, HK83, DAK7, CJ53. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two clubs. The hand is too strong for a raise to two hearts, but not strong enough for a trump to three hearts. Bid your suit, such as it is, and raise hearts later to show your in-between values.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Acupuncture makes sense

Dear Dr. Solomon: I had always thought that the whole business of acupuncture was a gimmick, Chinese or no Chinese. But when I was at the dentist the other day, he happened to mention that it perhaps does make sense medically. Is this something that has been proved, do you know? Does anyone have any idea just how it does work—if it does?—Susan M.

produced only slow firing. In about an hour and a half, the effect wore off, and the animals were reacting normally.

What Dr. Pomeranz now hopes to get is some definitive proof that his hypothesis is correct—by measuring the blood's endorphin content before, during, and after acupuncture. This requires very delicate instruments able to detect a millionth of a millionth of a gram.

Dr. Pomeranz says he is not promoting acupuncture as a treatment, and he hopes his work won't encourage vast numbers of doctors and patients to jump on the acupuncture bandwagon once again. But he does feel he has an effective animal model for studying acupuncture. And he would like good scientists to get into this field.

I do think it will be interesting to see what the results of Dr. Pomeranz's new experiments will be.

Pneumococcal pneumonia and gram-negative germs causing blood infections are two conditions characteristically associated with chills. In a patient with fever, ingestion of aspirin may also cause chills.

Security Council OKs Mozambique resolution

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The Security Council unanimously OK'd a resolution calling on U.N. members to give "material assistance" to Mozambique's defense against Rhodesian border attacks. The African resolution adopted Thursday also asked U.N. members to provide financial and technical aid to compensate Mozambique for the severe economic losses it claims to be suffering because of the Rhodesian raids.

One U.S. diplomat said the measure amounted to only "a statement of moral support."

"In terms of actual contributions of weapons or funds, I wouldn't put too much stock in it," he said.

The Security Council in March, 1976, pledged $385 million to compensate Mozambique for economic hardships resulting from its closing its border with Rhodesia in accordance with U.N. sanctions. But less than a fourth of the total, about $100 million, was contributed, and most of it came from the United States and Britain.

Ethiopia faces more pressure

By BRIAN JEFFRIES

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP)—Ethiopia's Marxist government was reported under new pressure today from "hostile elements" occupying a town in the western part of the country and 15,000 Somali troops massed on the southeastern frontier.

Kenya charged Thursday that 10,000 Somali troops invaded northeast Kenya last weekend near its convergence with Somalia and Ethiopia, and 5,000 more were poised on the border. Foreign Minister Muryua Waiyaki told a meeting of the Organization of African Unity in Gabon that the invaders told the local population they were going to use the area as a base for attacks on Ethiopia.

Somalia's ambassador to Kenya, Hussein Ali Dualeh, denied that any Somali soldiers had crossed into Kenya. He suggested the invaders were Ethiopian soldiers or guerrillas fighting the Ethiopian military government headed by Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam.

Meanwhile, Western diplomats in Addis Ababa said missionaries along Ethiopia's western border with Sudan reported "people in uniform" occupied the town of Beica two or three days ago. Beica, in Worregea province is 23 miles from the Sudanese border and 300 miles due west of Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital.

The Norwegian foreign ministry said Norwegian missionaries in Beica reported the town had been taken over by Sudanese troops. But the diplomats in Addis Ababa told a telephone caller from Nairobi they had not learned whether they were Sudanese or Ethiopian rebels.

Guerrillas of the rightist Ethiopian Democratic Union have been active in the Gondar region of western Ethiopia and have the open support of the Sudanese government. But there have been no previous reports of guerrilla activity in Worregea province.

There was no comment from either the Sudanese or the Ethiopian governments. The Ethiopian government has accused the Sudanese government of trying to undermine it, and last Friday it charged that Somalia was sending uniformed soldiers into the Ogaden area of eastern Ethiopia to aid local guerrillas fighting to unite the area with Somalia.

Coffee price gets blame for high grocery bills

By LOUISE COOK

Coffee takes the blame for sharp price increases for supermarket shoppers, who found grocery bills rising at a much faster rate in the first six months of 1977 than in the same period a year earlier, an Associated Press marketbasket survey shows.

The one encouraging sign was an indication that spiraling coffee prices for the brew may be easing.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and since has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

The latest survey showed that prices for the marketbasket at the checklist stores increased an average of 9 per cent from Jan. 1 to July 1. When coffee was removed from the totals, however, the six-month increase was only 1.4 per cent.

Air Force report denies B52 mutiny allegations

By ERNEST VOLKMAN
Newspaper

The Air Force has denied that B52 crews mutinied during the 1972 bombing of North Vietnam over what they considered "inept" tactics by the Strategic Air Command.

In a statement issued Wednesday at Air Force Headquarters in Washington, the Air Force said that no "major breaches of discipline occurred among SAC crews during the December 1972, Linebacker II operations." "Linebacker" was the code name for the bombing campaign over North Vietnam, Dec. 18-29, 1972.

The statement was in response to a Newday article last Monday reporting that a former B52 pilot, in a forthcoming magazine article, charged that B52 crews refused to participate in any further missions at one point during that period because of high losses from what they considered to be faulty tactics dictated by SAC. Further, the ex-pilot, Dana Drenkowski, alleged that the crews were enraged by SAC's refusal to change the faulty tactics and that SAC gave in only after the crews mutinied.

However, the Air Force statement did not address a number of specific allegations in the Drenkowski account. The statement did acknowledge one case of a B52 officer refusing to fly a mission. An Air Force spokesman said the reference was to Michael Heck, who Drenkowski says was part of the mutiny and was court-martialed for his role and discharged in an effort to break the mutiny. The Air Force statement made no mention of court-martial, saying, "later, administratively discharged, the B52 pilot gave his reason for refusing to fly as 'a matter of conscience.' Heck could not be reached for comment.

The Air Force statement did address two specific allegations by Drenkowski — one, that SAC would not listen to advice from combat-experienced crews, and two, that the actual losses of B52s was higher than officially acknowledged. The statement said that "air crew feedback was solicited and the vast majority of the changes in operational procedures were based on air crew recommendations." As for losses, the statement said that the loss rate "was slightly over 2 per cent."

Asked how the 2 per cent figure was calculated, the Air Force spokesman said that there were 729 sorties, with 15 B52s "lost to the defense." However, Drenkowski charged that at

Approval of air bags expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is expected to approve a Transportation Department decision requiring automakers to build air bags or automatic safety belts into new cars, beginning with the 1982 models.

By 1984, all new cars sold in this country would be required to have the devices, which Transportation Secretary Brock Adams says could save 9,000 lives a year.

The key to the program's chances is that Adams is giving the companies plenty of time, phasing in the program over three years.

Congress has 60 days to review the plan. Unless the program is then rejected, it will become law.

New water legislation includes use penalty

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Carter Administration Thursday proposed legislation to penalize cities and towns across the nation that fail to reduce their water use by 15 per cent.

In a carrot-and-stick approach, the Environmental Protection Agency could withhold partial funding of multimillion-dollar sewage plants unless cities enact water conservation ordinances.

The ordinances, which would come into effect as cities receive sewage treatment grants over the next 10 least 27 B52s were shot down, with many losses written off as "accidents"

The Air Force spokesman said he could not go beyond the statement.

The Air Force said that B52 crews carried out the 1972 bombing campaign over North Vietnam "with a high degree of skill and discipline, assertions to the contrary are simply incorrect." In his article, Drenkowski praised the B52 crews — some of whom, he said, worked 36 hours straight during the height of the bombing — but added that they were victimized and many unnecessarily killed because SAC commanders "blundered."

Meanwhile, two former Air Force members involved in the Linebacker operation gave differing reactions Wednesday to the Drenkowski assertions. One, George Dempsey of Denver, Colo., a former B52 navigator, called Drenkowski's account "ridiculous." In an interview with UPI, Dempsey said, "I don't know of a single crew that refused to fly the missions."

However, Richard Craft of Atlanta, Ga., a former intelligence specialist with B52 bomber operations, said the account of the mutiny was "generally true." In an interview with Newday, Craft said, "Those SAC generals were so thick-headed, you could cry, they just wouldn't listen to anybody. I'd say that their stupid tactics wasn't the only reason for the mutiny. Another part of it was they wanted so many planes operating, the mechanics couldn't keep up. As a result, guys were killed because the damn planes just fell apart."

years, would require homeowners to install toilet dams and special shower heads to save water. Industries could be forced to alter manufacturing processes and recycle water.

In proposing water conservation measures to the Senate Environment Committee Thursday, Assistant EPA Administrator Thomas Jorling said, "In a nation that is facing increasing problems of water scarcity, within a world environment never removed from the grim specter of famine, conscientious public policy demands no less."

Jorling also said the agency will continue to insist that communities charge sewage user fees keyed to the amount of water consumed. Cities such as Chicago, that finance sewer plant operations through property taxes have been fighting EPA's user charge requirement. Other cities prefer that industry subsidize residential use or vice versa.

EPA's water-conservation carrot is a $45 billion program to finance 75 per cent of municipal sewage plants over the next 10 years. But if cities don't cut down water use, EPA proposes to fund only 70 per cent of the plants — a penalty that could amount to millions of dollars for some financially strapped communities.

Water conservation represents a new emphasis in federal policy although some localities, especially in drought-plagued California, have already enacted strict conservation measures. Washington is among many Eastern cities, including some in Florida and Georgia, that have recently become aware of water shortages.

Jorling said EPA will also try to change the types of sewage plants cities build. "Municipal treatment technologies have become hide-bound," he said, accusing the agency of "inertia" in promoting recycling of sewage water for irrigation and land treatment systems to use sludge for fertilizer or mulch.

Such innovative systems should receive priority funding, Sen. Wendell R. Anderson (D-Minn.) suggested Thursday.

Despite lobbying by cities and industries, the administration declined to recommend any delay of water cleanup deadlines. Seventy per cent of cities and towns will violate the 1977 standard for 85 per cent cleanup, which takes effect today. Jorling said the agency will ask for extensions on a case by case basis, but will take recalcitrant cities to court.

Cubs rip Sox, 19-2, host Diablos tonight

Tony Pepper...terror at plate

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

The controls on the Midland Cubs spinning Merry-Go-Round went berserk at Cubs Stadium Thursday night, and all that extra motion on the base paths left the Amarillo Gold Sox a bit gimpy in the knees—and in the loss column.

Midland's play ground rowdies riddled four Amarillo hurlers for 23 hits, including three homers, to end the five game stand with Amarillo, 19-2.

The Cubs won four of the five contests with the San Diego farm hands to protect their one-game second half lead in the Texas League's West Division. El Paso, the first half champs, come to town today for a Two-Bit Beer Night contest, and Thursday's bombardment should also usher in an omen for the first half nasties.

THE CUBS' bats just went daffy in this one, and every player in the lineup hit safely. The Cubs must have set some kind of record in the sixth inning when they scored 10 runs on 11 hits. The first eight batters in the frame got hits as Amarillo pitchers Marty French and Bill Joseph looked a bit like the center of a banging pin ball machine. Balls were flying all over the place—only the bells were missing.

It would be hard to pick a hero. All 374 fans in attendance probably had a different hero to take home.

Of course, there was Tony Pepper again. He had his fourth homer of the series and a double to drive in six runs. Pepper's homer was a grand slam in the third off loser Galen McSpadden that erased a 2-1 Gold Sox lead. Yes, the Cubs even had to come-from-behind to win.

PEPPER ENDED the series with a .409 batting average in the five games while driving in 15 runs. His four homers gave him 10 for the year.

Second baseman Kurt Seibert went on a four-for-four binge, scored four runs and drove in three in a perfect night. Seibert also had a two-run double in that big sixth frame. Two of his hits came in the sixth.

Moving right along, shortstop Steve Davis had his best night as a Cub with five hits in six trips, one a towering two-run blast to deep left center in the fifth that gave Midland a 7-2 lead. He also had an unbelievable play in the field.

"I've waited a long time for a night like this," Davis said after the game. "Man, this is fun."

AND YOU can't forget Karl Pagel, who had three hits in five trips and three RBI. Pagel drove in two runs in the big sixth on a double and single. Aaron Randall drove in two runs with both of his key hits in the sixth.

And then there was catcher Duane Gustavson, who hit his fourth homer of the year, a two-run liner in the sixth that was propelled over the left field fence.

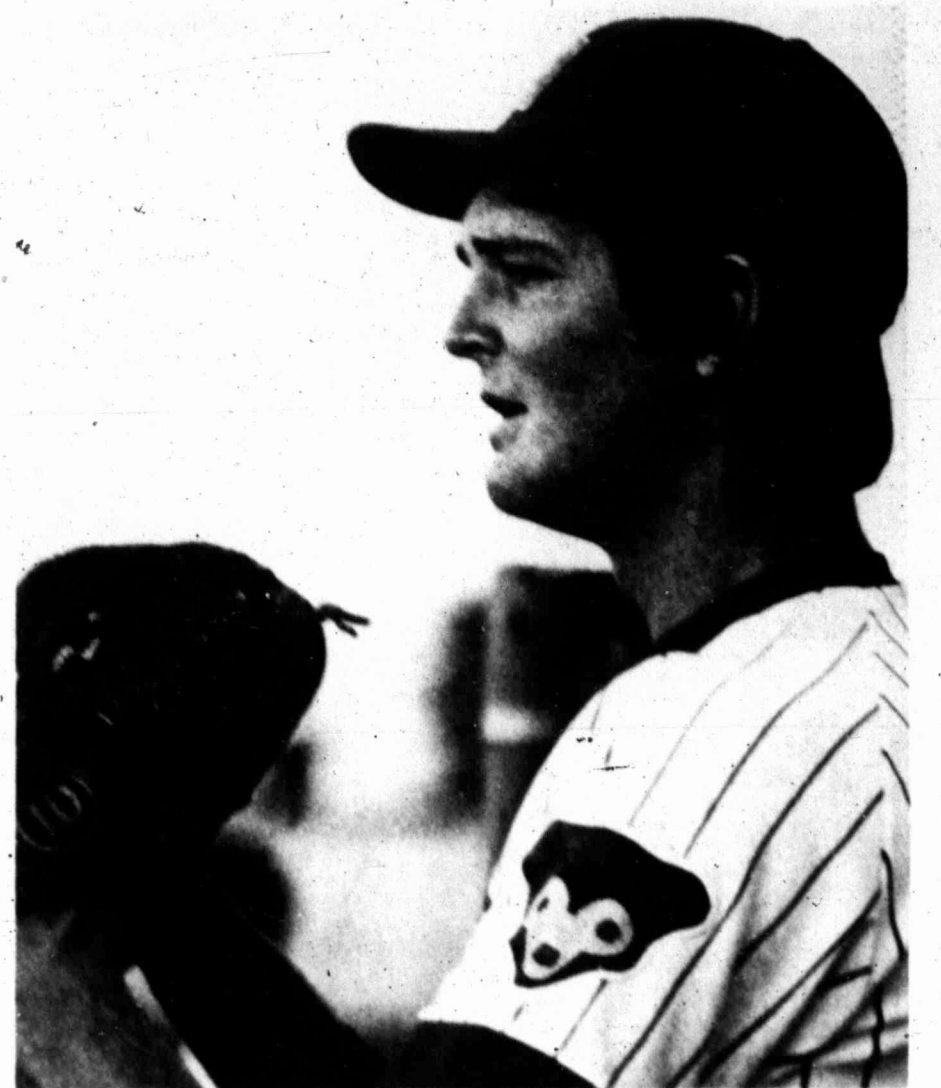

"Yea, it was a line drive," Gustavson said. "It just went further than most line drives. I think it was a fast ball, but who cares." Such was the mood of the Cubs.

Scott Boras had two hits and drove in a run. Add all that together, and you have what you call major league offense. Amarillo just has a pain in the neck.

WITH ALL of those balls sailing to right, left and center fields, and some even out of the park, it is easy to forget winning pitcher Larry Groover, but Groover was in his best groove.

Larry went the distance to even his record at 3-3. He gave up only six hits, and one of the two runs he allowed was unearned. He was a little shaky through the first three innings, but he didn't have a whale of a lot of pressure after that.

CUB PAWS: Tonight's opener against El Paso is 25 cent beer night, and Jack Ledbetter will be on the mound for the Cubs. Amarillo's Tony Castillo was fined and suspended for three days after an

Colleges test IRS TV-radio income ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lawyer for a group of colleges says he is optimistic the Internal Revenue Service will continue the tax-exempt status of income derived from the broadcasting of college sports.

Involved are millions of dollars which colleges across the country take in from radio and television broadcasts of sporting events. The colleges say the tax-exempt status is crucial to the survival of some sports. "I think they're going to rule favorably," said Sheldon S. Cohen, an attorney representing some of the colleges, met for three hours Thursday with IRS officials and IRS commissioner during said afterward, "I was the Johnson administration."

Connors, Borg clash Saturday

WIMBLEDON (AP) — Fittingly, the men's singles final in the century Wimbledon has come down to Jimmy Connors against Bjorn Borg.

They are considered the two best players in the world.

They are the top seeds, Connors at No. 1 and Borg No. 2.

They are former Wimbledon champions, Connors in 1974 and Borg last year.

And they do not like each other much.

But they offer the finest tennis in the game today, and their title match Saturday on Wimbledon's famed center court should provide an appropriate climax to the 100th anniversary of the sport's most prestigious tournament... a tournament that this year has been packed with excitement and drama.

The woman's final, between Virginia Wade, trying to become the first Britisher to win the title since 1969, and Betty Stove, the first player from The Netherlands to reach the last round, was to be held today, with Queen Elizabeth II among the spectators.

While the woman's championship match was a battle between two steady, consistent veterans—Miss Wade is 32 and Miss Stove 31—the men's final was expected to be a classic between two, hard-hitting, flawless youngsters—Connors is 24 and Borg 21.

The controversial Connors, from Belleville, Ill., playing with his fractured right thumb heavily bandaged, needed 2 hours, 40 minutes to beat gritty, 18-year-old phenom John McEnroe of Douglaston, N.Y. 6-3, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 in Thursday's opening men's semifinal.

Then, the thin, cat-quick, long-haired Borg outlasted tough Vitas Gerulaitis of Howard Beach, N.Y. 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, 3-6, 8-6 in a sizzling 3 hour, 10-minute duel that was considered one of the best matches on the All-England Club's center court in years.

The results set up the eagerly awaited Connors-Borg confrontation, the 10th meeting between the court masters, but their first ever at Wimbledon. Connors leads the series 7-2, including a victory in last year's U.S. Open final at Forest Hills.

Borg, seeking to become the first man to win two consecutive Wimbledon titles since Australia's John Newcombe did it in 1970-71, called his match against the game Gerulaitis the best he had played since beating Rod Laver of Australia in five sets in the 1975 World Championship Tennis final at Dallas.

Both players agreed that the turning point came in the final set and Gerulaitis ahead 3-2 after breaking the Swede's service and leading 40-30 in the next game. But Borg rallied and won the point, tying the score.

"If he had won that point, I think he would have won the match," Borg said.

Phils' Schmidt equals June homer mark, 14

By The Associated Press
The Philadelphia Phillies fans really gave it to Mike Schmidt this time—but it was bouquets instead of boos.
Accustomed to jeers at Veterans Stadium earlier this season because of a poor start, Schmidt got a standing ovation for a change Thursday night.
He earned it by tying a National League home run record for June with his 14th homer of the month as the Phillies beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-1.

The rare ovation for the third baseman caught him short.
"I was in the dugout and didn't even have a hat on," said Schmidt, explaining his delay in responding to the fans' noisy salute.

WHEN HE finally came out, it was worth the effort.
"It was a big thrill," said Schmidt, more concerned about the audience response than about the record.

"The record doesn't concern me," Schmidt insisted. "It's good for reporters to write about and the fans can talk about it. Maybe when I'm out of baseball, it will be a big thrill."

For the record, though, it was a heroic accomplishment Schmidt tied the mark set by Ralph Kiner of the Pirates in 1947. The major league record of 15 is shared by Babe Ruth (1930), Bob Johnson (1934) and Roger Maris (1961).

The Phillies helped left-hander Steve Carlton to his 10th victory against four losses with a four-run first inning, keyed by Bake McBride's leadoff triple and a two-run homer by Garry Maddox. Larry Bowa singled home McBride, took third on Schmidt's single and scored on a sacrifice fly Schmidt tallied on Maddox' seventh homer.

Phil Garner's seventh homer cut the lead to 4-1 in the third, but the Phillies scored twice off Pittsburgh starter Odell Jones in the third and got two more runs against Larry Demery in the fourth on Schmidt's homer.

Cardinals 2, Cubs 1

Ken Reitz' grounder scored Tony Scott from third in the ninth inning, lifting St. Louis over Chicago. Scott singled with one out off Chicago's Willie Hernandez and raced to third on a hit by Ted Simmons before Keith Hernandez was intentionally walked loading the bases.

Paul Reuschel relieved Hernandez against Reitz and the St. Louis infielder hit a grounder to second baseman Manny Trillo on which the Cubs just failed to convert into an inning-ending double play.

Braves 5, Dodgers 4

Darrel Chaney's run-scoring single off Los Angeles relief ace Charlie Hough in the bottom of the ninth boosted Atlanta over the Dodgers.

Gary Matthews had tied the score 4-4 by leading off the ninth with his 10th homer of the season. With one out, Jeff Burroughs walked and went to third on Biff Pocoroba's double, setting up Chaney's winning hit off a Hough knuckleball.

"I figured he'd throw me a knuckleball with first base open," said Chaney. "He generally throws knuckleballs all the way. I haven't faced Charlie that much, but I don't remember getting too many hits off him."

Mets 4, Expos 3

Lee Mazzilli streaked home from third with the winning run on Mike Vail's roller in the ninth inning as New York came from behind and defeated Montreal.

Mazzilli, who entered the game as a pinch runner in the seventh, led off the ninth with a double off Montreal's Steve Rogers, advanced to third on Joel Youngblood's sacrifice and scored as pinch hitter Vail grounded out slowly to third.

Reds 11, Giants 5

Dan Driessen drove in four runs and Joe Morgan scored five times, leading Cincinnati over San Francisco. The hot hitting Driessen, who has driven in 12 runs in his last 10 games, raised his average to .309 with three singles and a walk.

Morgan walked three times and also reached base on a fielder's choice and an error. George Foster doubled in two Cincinnati runs in the fourth and took over the NL RBI lead with 69.

House to probe TV sports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has decided to find out if television sports shows are honest.

The House communications subcommittee will hold a hearing, most likely in August in New York, into network relationships with professional sports.

Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin, D-Calif., chairman of the House subcommittee on communications, announced Thursday the appointment of Philip R. Hochberg, a Washington attorney, to be special counsel for the investigation into the relationship between the TV networks and professional sports.

The primary interest of this subcommittee will be NBC's involvement with the 1980 Olympics in Moscow. ABC's involvement in the promotion of boxing championships and the CBS handline of the "winner-take-all" tennis matches.

"In general, we will try to determine whether the networks have become so involved with arranging, promoting and scheduling sports events that they, in effect, have come to control those events," Van Deerlin said at a news conference.

Rod Carew...besieged by autograph hounds.

At last, Twins' Carew emerges from shadow

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — After years in the shadow of home run king Harmon Killebrew and slugger Tony Oliva, Minnesota's Rod Carew is relishing the national fame he considers long overdue.

"I don't really think I've gotten the proper recognition over the years, but there's nothing I can do about it," said Carew, who is making the strongest assault in nearly four decades on the hallowed 400 mark in baseball.

Carew, 31, has won a spot on the American League's starting All-Star team in each of his 11 seasons, but post-season honors have eluded the five-time A.L. batting king.

"I KNOW what's coming now," continued Carew, who carries a .411

Speedbowl decides first half titles

ODESSA — Odessa Speedbowl will hold its first half championships tonight with time trials at 8 p.m. and races for the stock and modified stock competition scheduled to begin at 8:30 p.m.

Drivers from Lubbock, Amarillo, and Altus, Okla., will join West Texas drivers Saturday at 8 p.m. in a race card that will offer a $2,500 purse.

Sunday night the same drivers move to Lubbock for races beginning at 8 p.m.

average into the Twins' game at Chicago tonight. "It's great, the publicity and everything, but there's just so much I can do."

Although reporters from Time, Newsweek, Sports Illustrated, People and television networks have swarmed the ranks of journalists besieging Carew, Twins' Manager Gene Mauch isn't worried that his star player will be distracted by the commotion.

"It won't clutter up his mind," said Mauch. "Rodney can handle this thing very well."

Even if he buckles momentarily under the daily pressures of trying to maintain his 400-plus average, Carew has built such an extraordinary lead that he's practically assured of a sixth batting championship.

In fact, if he somehow went hitless in the 18 games prior to the All-Star break, Carew probably would still lead the league in hitting. Figuring on an expected 58 times at bat, a hitless Carew still would have a .343 average. On the other hand, he needs 20 hits in the projected 58 attempts to carry a 400 average into the All-Star Game.

BETWEEN GAMES, the Panamanian-born Carew escapes the limelight at every opportunity. He took advantage of a day off Thursday to picnic with his family.

"I'm not going to sit around during all of this," said Carew.

Johnson's three homers pace Yanks over Jays

TORONTO (AP) — "Happiness," says Cliff Johnson, "is going to the plate four times a night."

So it would seem that going to the plate five times, as he did Thursday night, would make Johnson absolutely giddy. Not so.

"I'm not gonna get too high when I'm going good or too low when I'm going bad," Johnson said after slamming three home runs, including a record-tying two in an eight-run eighth-inning as the New York Yankees pounded the Toronto Blue Jays 11-5.

"Three home runs doesn't mean anything if you don't come back the next night and help the club," Johnson said.

JOHNSON, ACQUIRED June 15 from Houston for two minor leaguers and a player to be named later, will get plenty of chances to help the Yankees this weekend when they return home to face three left-handers in four games against Detroit.

His three homers came as a designated hitter, but Johnson has played first base and the outfield and done some catching during his career. And, says Manager Billy Martin, Johnson will be the DH against certain right-handers.

Johnson was hit by a pitch from loser Jerry Garvin in the second inning, hit a solo homer in the fourth, walked in the sixth, homered starting his eighth and capped the eight-run inning with a two-run homer off Jerry Johnson after the Toronto reliever brushed him back with a high inside pitch.

"I WENT up there that time tipping in," Johnson said, meaning he expected to be knocked down. "I played with him in Houston. He's pretty hard-nosed, but we were good friends, not because we have the same last name but because he's a likable character. I thought he might brush me back, but I don't think he was trying to hurt me."

"I was just trying to move him back off the plate," said Jerry Johnson. "He said, 'I didn't hit you. No, I didn't say anything to him after the home run. It was too late then.'"

But not too late for Cliff Johnson to explain a few things to catcher Alan Ashby as he crossed the plate.

"I told him, 'Don't ever knock me down,'" he disclosed.

Johnson thus became the 18th player in major league history to hit two home runs in one inning, and the first Yankee to do it since Joe Pepitone in 1962. The last American League was California's Rick Reichardt in 1966.

The Yanks' big inning also included a solo homer by Lou Piniella and a three-run shot by Thurman Munson, who drove in the game's first run with a sacrifice fly. Meanwhile, Catfish Hunter scattered seven hits and allowed only one run until the Yankees built a comfortable 10-1 lead in the eighth.

But it was Cliff Johnson's show, and he said, "I really had fun tonight. But I always do. I'm a fun type person. I didn't really get upset at the brushback pitch. That's baseball. Jerry did what he had to do... and I did what I had to do."

Rainbow Derby next

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Two New Mexico horses, Real Wind and My Easy Credit, are the favorites for the 13th running of the $36,600 Rainbow Derby at Ruidoso Downs.

The second leg of the Triple Crown for 3-year-olds will be run Sunday as the 11th race, and the winner will get $130,403.3.

Other qualifiers for the 440-yard Sprint include Southern Streaker, Bar Face Kid, Roll A Coin, More Better, Divine Liz, Shawne Bug, Wee Dream and The Bulldogger.

Real Wind, winner of last year's Rainbow Derby and All American Futurity, has total earnings of $493,000. Gary Sumpter will be aboard the horse that has a record of 13 wins, one second and two thirds in 17 starts.

My Easy Credit, Real Wind's stablemate, has taken seven wins in a row since last August. The colt has won $115,758 so far, and is the only 3-year-old in contention for the Triple Crown with a win in the Kansas Derby last month.

Rangers fans can relax

For those who might have trouble concealing a knowing smirk at the Texas Rangers' most recent managerial pratfall while wondering aloud how long the latest might last, rest easy.

We understand Billy Hunter is more eager to manage the Rangers than any pilot they've had since, since, well, Eddie Stanky.

Amarillo Gold Sox pitcher Greg Wilkes, when asked if he was trying to brush back Midland outfielder Karl Pagel when he beamed him at Amarillo two weeks ago, replied, "I wasn't pitching the night before when he hit two home runs, so I didn't feel involved. After all, I didn't give them up."

"In fact," Wilkes goes on, "I wasn't even trying to pitch inside. Karl has a tendency once in a while to chase a high pitch, so with 0-2, I was just trying to throw a high fastball."

He demonstrated with two fingers tight together, "I cut it when I released the ball and it just took off on me."

may be an Achilles Heel as the season progresses, GM Bob Kennedy is watching Wichita to see if Steve Hamrick, with Midland in 1975-76, is ready for the big club. The plan is to have him to move reliever Willie Hernandez into the starting rotation and use Steve in long relief.

However, right now, with the Cubs boasting the best winning percentage in the majors, worrying about the lack of a lefty is like the football team that marches 80 yards on the ground only to arrive at the opponents' 10 and hadn't thrown a pass.

Strangely enough, the Midland Cubs' pitching staff is the only one in the Texas League still without a shutout, yet the Cubs have more complete games than any team in the TL.

college I was an outfielder and could run pretty good. Then I tore up my knee and they decided to make an infielder out of me."

Cubs win

(Continued from 1D) altercation with an umpire after Wednesday's game, a 6-5 Cubs victory. Amarillo manager Larry Duensing was suspended earlier in the week. You might say that Amarillo is a little down in the dumps at this point.

Groover, Pagel and Davis made outstanding defensive plays Thursday. Groover made a belly sliding catch on a grounder by Bobby Mitchell, and threw him out in a prone position. Davis robbed Steve Smith of a base hit when he went behind second base for a hot grounder, and Pagel hauled down a long fly by Juan Eichelberger in the third for an inning end.

Eichelberger, a pitcher, played centerfield. That could tell you what kind of shape Amarillo is in with suspensions and injuries.

El Paso wins, 12-2

In Texas League games, El Paso whipped San Antonio 12-2 and Shreveport beat Tulsa 6-2.

El Paso's Bob Ferris, 6-3, pitched a five-hitter to San Antonio with relief help from Jerry Quigley. Joe Beckwith, 1-1, picked up the loss as El Paso scored six unearned runs.

Indians' Duffy leads way

CLEVELAND (AP) — It proved an entertaining evening for the home fans as Cleveland shortstop Frank Duffy turned power hitter and Baltimore outfielder Pat Kelly auditioned as a comedian.

Cleveland's millionaire pitcher Wayne Garland, winner of five of his last eight outings, stopped the Orioles on five hits and the normally light-hitting Duffy backed him with a pair of solo homers as the Indians grabbed a rain-shortened 4-2 victory.

Duffy's feat had his teammates calling him "slugger" and "Babe" in mock deference to his new-found power.

Armstrong wins in 80

It was the third time in his career Duffy has hit a pair of homers in a single game, but his current season total of four already has surpassed the three he slammed in each of the last two years.

"It's really odd, but I've had all my two-homer games here (in Cleveland Stadium)," Duffy said. "I don't hit good here."

"I see the ball much better on the road," added Duffy, who started the night batting .199.

"There's something about the background and the lights, but I never have a consistent hitting string here."

"It seems like we go on the road and I get things together, have a couple of two-hit games, then come back here and lose it," he added.

DEAR ABBY

Photos, stories of old girlfriends reassure husband, but hurt new wife

By Abigail Van Buren DEAR ABBY: I was recently wed to a wonderful man in all respects except one. He insists on keeping the pictures of all his previous girlfriends, and he has had quite a few. He has them all neatly mounted in a large picture album, which he insists on leaving on our coffee table, along with our wedding album.

good friends, but he's never asked me for a date. He's 19 and I'm 18. He is quite handsome and by no means shy, but he hasn't dated much. I'm a little bit overweight, but have been told that I have a pretty face and a good personality.

idea?—CINDY DEAR CINDY: No, he'd probably get the RIGHT idea. DEAR ABBY: How does one forget someone he loves? I can't seem to get over her. It's not true that time heals. The pain seems to be getting worse as the days and weeks go by.

as there is still love (and there is, as much now as ever), is it possible to forget? Can you kill love? If so, tell me how.—PIECES

I voluntarily destroyed all the pictures I had of myself and previous acquaintances, and I think he should do the same.

When we have friends over, to be sure they don't miss it, he starts going through the album, bragging about all the chicks he's had.

The other night we were sitting on my front porch, and he asked me to get him a date with a good-looking girl. He said he could take a girl to the movies, hold her hand and talk sweet to her as well as any other boy.

I have even thought about moving to another city, but no matter where I go I'll see the kind of car she drives, and every time I turn on the radio I'll hear the songs we both liked. I'll still think of her when I see her favorite color, or actor, or television program.

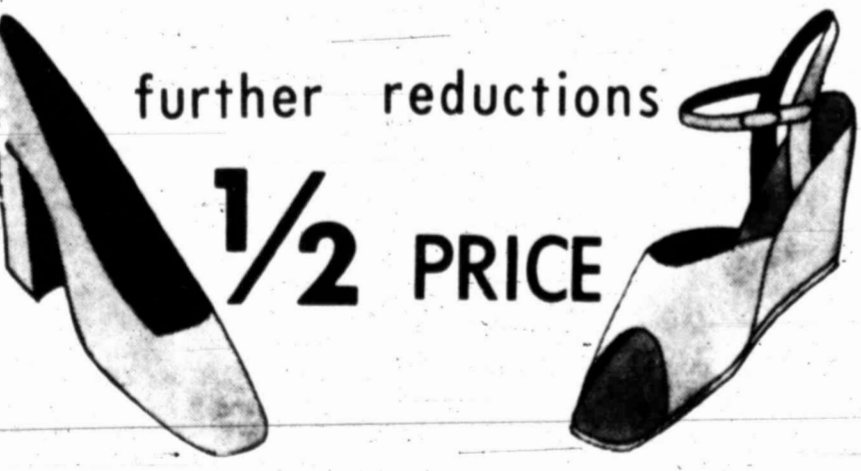

DEAR PIECES: You can't "kill" love, but you can let it die quietly from malnutrition. Don't permit yourself to dwell on thoughts of her. The moment they come into your mind, drive them out with another thought about something else.

Children of imprisoned parents learn to relate their feelings

By DAVID BEHRENS
Newspaper

NEW YORK — Danny, who is 10 years old, was talking about his father. The other children, sitting around a long table, listened. Some doodled absent-mindedly. All of them have fathers who are in jail or were recently released.

Last year, Danny's father was arrested for assaulting the boy's mother. He was jailed, let out on bail and is now awaiting trial. He probably will be placed on probation, Danny thinks. But he does not know why it all happened. Bright and cheerful, he comes from a comfortable middle-income family. He often tugs at his New York Mets baseball cap and he talks in a piping little-boy voice, often slightly plaintive.

"Right now," he began, "my father is living with my grandmother, and my mother is living with me." Danny giggled because it sounded funny.

"Why don't you see him?" asked Herb Bardavid, a psychiatric social worker, sitting across the table. Twice a month, Bardavid meets with this children's group, all between 8 and 13 years of age, all with one thing in common: One of their parents has been in jail. Sometimes as many as a dozen attend the evening rap session. "Do you see him at all?" Bardavid asked again.

"No," Danny said. He let out a big sigh. "He writes me letters." There was another sigh. "He has all this time to see me, but he doesn't."

"Why?" Bardavid asked.

"What should I say... hmmm... because he's crazy?" Danny giggled again at his own joke. "Nomentally ill... He tried to kill my mother."

Danny hid behind his Mets cap for a moment. His mother, he said, was attending college classes one night and his father drove to the school, hid in her car and when she came back to the car, pulled a knife. It is not clear as yet what motivated the attack. His mother was not hurt.

"I wrote him letters," Danny said. "I gave him five questions. And the first one was why you did it?" So he wrote, "I cannot tell you right now, because your mother might use it against me in court."

Danny laughed a silly laugh.

"I used to write him letters," Danny murmured. "I'm angry at him. So he sometimes writes me. 'Why are you still angry at me?'" Danny shrugged, pulled his Mets cap over his face again and stacked a little pile of pennies he had in his hand.

"Why are you angry?" Bardavid asked.

"Cause of what he did to my mother," Danny said.

"Do you miss him?" the counselor asked.

"Danny paused.

"Yes and no," he said. "No I don't miss him because I don't want to be near him. I don't want to see him or anything." But how about before, he was asked.

"Oh yeah. We'd play ball in the backyard, you know. Lots of good things. And the part I don't like... I'm angry at him... oh, I told you that..." he trailed off.

Sometimes, his friends ask where his father is. Danny says his father is living with Danny's grandmother. "I tell them my mother and father had a fight, and my father tried to kill my mother, and she's trying to get a divorce. I don't mind telling that. I mean, I don't tell them what time it happened and all that."

"What makes you feel like crying?" Bardavid asked.

"When I hurt myself, like when I bump my finger," he said.

"Is it okay to cry?" the counselor asked.

Danny shrugged. "I cried sometime when me and my mother talked, about why my father do it. Like why did he leave and like that. My mother said I'd have to ask my father."

Danny sighed again. "He had all this time to phone me. Then he says the lawyer says he shouldn't phone. He's just telling the lawyer to say that. That's what my mother says. I trust my mother." He giggled again. "I think the lawyer is crazy too." Danny said.

Extra bedroom turns into guest room, den

By ADELE FAULKNER
Copley News Service

In most two-bedroom and three-bedroom apartments, one of the extra bedrooms becomes a combination guest room, den and home office.

Seldom spacious enough, the double-purpose second bedroom requires careful planning, with scale being a prime consideration.

Measure the room carefully and make a floor plan showing the room to scale, using a quarter-inch for one foot.

On paper, place the furniture in the room, paying particular attention to traffic patterns. Lightweight pieces and tranquil receding colors such as misty blue or buff make the room seem more spacious.

Depending on the carpeting, the color of the walls should be keyed to a lighter tone of the floor covering. The neutral shades also make selection of fabrics easier because many different prints and patterns blend well.

In lieu of draperies for this room, shutters, shades or blinds might be considered since they aren't as bulky as heavy fabric.

Combination wall units or custom cabinets on one wall help to unify the room visually. Many of these wall units contain space for books, a drop-down desk, drawers and a platform for the television set.

If the closet space is not essential, the doors could be removed and it could be reworked as a built-in storage wall to hold the TV, dry bar, desk and perhaps file cabinets and other home office equipment.

By consolidating things in the wall unit, more space has been created for other furnishings. If the room is to be used by the family as well as guests, it should be both comfortable and functional.

A comfortable lounge chair, ottoman, reading lamp and table can provide a retreat for adult members of the household. There are even some new chairs on the market which unfold and provide a bed.

There are a number of other combinations of sleeping units which work well in dual-purpose rooms. The customary sofa bed comes in a wide variety of sizes and shapes from the love seat (five feet long) which makes into a double bed lamp and table can provide a retreat for feet long which fold out

Foreign designers, producers penetrate Japan's trade market

By SAM JAMESON
The Los Angeles Times

TOKYO — Many foreign entrepreneurs' enviously eyeing Japan's $11 billion trade surplus last year, still consider it an impenetrable market — but not the overseas designers and manufacturers of women's clothing.

Their trade with Japan is booming, up 46 per cent in 1976 while overall department store sales rose only 8.1 per cent.

Diane von Furstenberg, one of the most recent to introduce a line of fashions, admits she never considered doing business in Japan until "they sought me out."

Motomi Soga, president of Inter-mode Inc., which invited Ms. Von Furstenberg, explained:

"Speaking of maturity in fashion, France is 40, America is 30 and Japan is about 15 to 20 years old.

"To be 'fashionable' a dress must have been designed in France. No Japanese is capable of real fashion design — at least that's what Japanese women think.

"The attitude will keep the sales of imports high for at least 10 years."

Already annual clothing imports have multiplied 6.4 times from 1971 to 1976 — from $123.3 million to $788.4 million — while all of Japan's imports, excluding petroleum, increased only 2.7 times.

Soga noted that Japan's own top designers — Hanae Mori, Isse Miyake and Kenzo Takada — found it helpful to establish salons in Paris. He said their acceptance in Europe boosted their sales in Japan.

In addition, 20 Japanese firms handle dozens of foreign designer lines, produced here under license, paying fees which do not show up in trade statistics.

Mitsukoshi, Japan's largest department store, estimated that imports constituted 5 per cent of its sales in 1976 and expects that percentage to increase to 10 per cent by 1979.

Recent surveys conducted by Mitsubishi Rayon and Shiseido, Japan's biggest manufacturer of cosmetics, showed that the fashion taste of Japanese women has both broadened and become more individualized. Inflation also has driven up prices of Japanese-made fashions enough that the still higher-priced foreign goods retain a prestige value, but no longer appear to be an outlandish extravagance.

The idea of fashion and non-kimono clothing came into being only about 10 years ago, Inter-mode's Soga said. "Of course, Japanese women weren't walking around streets naked before then," he said. "But they were wearing only kimonos, skirts and blouses, and dresses with a style that remained the same year-in and year-out."

Then the market was stimulated by three developments, Soga said: — women's and fashion magazines proliferated, all of them writing about clothes and filled with fashion advertising.

— Women also began to venture more outside the home — particularly those at work who had to dress every day. — And families started owning cars and going out for a drive, for dinner, and for vacations.

Overseas travel particularly — at new development for Japanese in the last five years — "necessitates a whole new kind of wardrobe," Soga said.

During the big spending days before the 1973 oil crises, attractive designs and smart colors in Japanese ready-made clothing had become available. Concerned more with quantity than quality, they were content with Japanese fashions. Paris haute couture was simply a "come-on" used in advertising.

Now, sobered by inflation and lower annual wage increases, the Japanese buyer is looking for quality.

"Imports have prestige or status-symbol value," said Kinji Tajima, economics professor at the Tokyo Institute of Technology.

Exhibit features painting aids

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Visitors to a current show at the Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Collection in Williamsburg will see a reconstructed model of a camera obscura and will have an opportunity to trace one another's silhouettes by using the device.

The show, "Making Faces: Aspects of American Portraiture," includes a display of the various techniques, conventions and mechanical aids used by 19th-century portrait painters. It will be on view until Dec. 4.

The camera obscura was built by folk art curator Don Walters according to the 1826 directions given by Rufus Porter, an itinerant Yankee inventor and painter of murals and portraits. The device was long used to obtain the guidelines needed to create cut, drawn or painted portraits and was the ancestor of today's photographic camera.

Other mechanical devices and artists' aids featured include the pantograph, profile templates, printing techniques, collage techniques, drawing manuals and preliminary artists' sketches.

Many of these devices became outmoded in the 1940s with the introduction of photography, which had begun to fulfill the need for inexpensive, lasting images of friends and family. The change put out of work hundreds of portrait painters who could not compete with the realism of the camera, Walters notes.

Cut silhouettes, drawn and painted profiles, full-face likenesses on paper and ivory, pastel and graphite portraits and full-scale images in oil on canvas or wood are surveyed in this show in the context of what was known about the artists themselves and the methods they employed.

Gag on military

The recent summoning of Lt. Gen. Donn A. Starry to the Pentagon carries to the extreme the limits on what an American officer may say concerning military and foreign policy matters. Before last month's incident involving Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub, high ranking military officers usually could explain publicly about defense policies if they did so discreetly before final decisions were reached.

The exceptional case was of Gen. of the Army Douglas MacArthur, and it is instructive to recall that he disobeyed a direct order to clear policy statements. Neither Gen. Singlaub nor Gen. Starry disobeyed the President. Their errors, deemed such by the White House and the Pentagon, were if anything less grave. Gen. Singlaub said war would result if U.S. forces were withdrawn from Korea. Gen. Starry told a Frankfurt high school class, among other things, that there will be a war between the Soviet Union and China, and that it likely will involve the United States.

Prior to Jimmy Carter's elevation to the White House, it is unlikely that either episode would have provoked presidential reaction. According to Secretary of Defense Harold Brown, Gen. Singlaub erred in making statements inconsistent with American foreign policy; hence his removal from command in South Korea. This humiliation, it is well to note, occurred despite Gen. Singlaub's promise to obey the order to withdraw gradually American forces from Korea.

By contrast, Gen. Starry made no statements contravening American foreign policy. His remarks were, at the one extreme, idle musings; at the other, dire prophecy.

When Gen. Singlaub was brought to Washington, dressed down, and then reassigned, the officer corps effectively was told that it must not disagree publicly with official foreign policy. In the case of Gen. Starry, the gag is being pulled more tightly: the officer corps must not muse or prophesy, or even, as may have been the case, sketch a realistic scenario.

What general is next, and even how far down the chain of command this will go, are important questions. But most significant is whether military officers again can so much as say that someday there will be a war and that the United States likely will be in it. We are hardly a military nation, but we necessarily need military opinions.

Let's give this matter serious consideration.

A strong economy

It is interesting to note that Texas sales tax collections increased more than any other state from 1975 to 1976, except those states which changed their tax rate or base.

The Lone Star State ranked sixth in the U.S., with an 18.3 per cent increase in tax collections.

The top five states, all underwent tax base or rate increases during 1975 or 1976.

The report from the comptroller's office is based on a nationwide study of consumer taxes by the Federal Tax Administration.

The increase indicates that Texas is prospering as few other states, but it is noted, without surprise, that Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico and Oklahoma all placed in the top 10 of states keeping the same tax bases and rates.

People in the Southern Region are spending more, incomes are rising and populations are increasing.

Texas sales tax collections, based on figures for the calendar years, totaled $1.5 billion during 1976. This is a lot of money and represents a tremendous volume of sales.

Taxes on tobacco products and motor fuel both showed a seven per cent boost over 1975 figures in Texas.

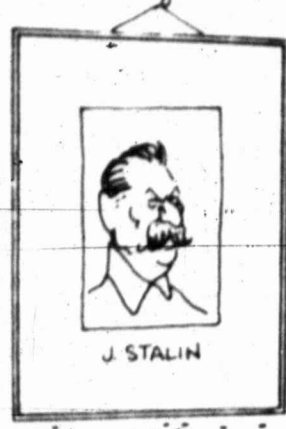

Based on the sales tax collections, we certainly will agree with State Comptroller Bob Bullock, who says, "This points up what we've been saying all along — that the Texas economy is as strong as an acre of wild onions."

And that's pretty strong, indeed.

NEWS ITEM: BREZHNEV NAMED PRESIDENT OF SOVIET

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

No coal means cold winter

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — The bleak news is out. Americans can expect a worse natural gas shortage next winter. Not mentioned in the government warnings, however, is the principal reason. The federal authorities have botched President Carter's order to convert factories from gas to coal.

So Americans must endure another winter of cold homes, closed schools and idle factories. More than a million homes may be deprived of vital gas for heating. More schools and factories may also be forced to shut down, depending on the severity of the weather.

Yet the President's coal conversion program, if it had been pushed, could have prevented another crisis. In fact, the FEA should have started ordering the switch to coal three years ago. Yet not one drop of oil nor cubic foot of gas has been saved by coal conversion.

This is the shocking conclusion of the House Energy and Power subcommittee, which has conducted a confidential investigation. The investigators found the FEA's coal conversion office in shambles, with staff members pointing accusing fingers in all directions. Some hold their predecessors responsible; others blame one another.

The real reason for the fiasco, however, has been a simple failure of nerve. Federal officials have been unwilling to stand up to the corporate giants and the private utilities. The officials in charge, Robert Hanfling, said his predecessors were afraid to order the expensive conversion to coal. "Industry would come in here and cause a commotion about it," he explained.

The energy officials solemnly assured us that the program will become successful under President Carter. Yet some of the bureaucrats appear more interested in taking trips than in saving energy.

Six members of the coal conversion staff, for example, recently flew to San Francisco. The official justification for the trip: to hold hearings compelling ten Chevron and Shell plants to convert to coal. Yet all ten plants use portable boilers, which cannot make the switch from oil to coal.

Moreover, the agency was fully aware that the portable boilers couldn't be converted. Nevertheless, the footloose officials led by Joseph Senkow, jetted off to California with Hanfling's blessings.

On the way back, according to insiders, Senkow and one aide stopped off in glittering Las Vegas.

Footnote: Hanfling insisted that the California hearings were "useful." But the agency refused to disclose how much the San Francisco junket cost. Senkow did not return our calls.

ART BUCHWALD

A house is not a home, 'buyer' finds

WASHINGTON — Something weird is going on with real estate prices in this country. I didn't realize how wild the prices of homes had become until a month ago.

Tolkin, who lived in a house that he bought for $20,000 ten years ago, rushed in to see me one night and said, excitedly, "I've been offered $90,000 for my house."

"That's great," I said. "What are you going to do?"

"Sell it, of course," he said breathlessly. "The poor dope who is buying it may change his mind."

"Where are you going to live?" I asked him.

"I'm going to buy myself the $90,000 house that I've always dreamed of; one with a large lawn and a garden in the back and maybe a swimming pool or tennis court to go with it. I don't have to worry about keeping up with the Joneses any more because I'll be Jones."

"I'm very happy for you Tolkin," I said. "Every man should have his dreams come true. Maybe you better find such a house before you sell yours."

"Are you crazy? When you've been offered $90,000 for a $20,000 house you don't wait for lightning to strike twice. I'm signing the papers tomorrow."

"I envy your upward mobility," I told him. "May God go with you."

A month later I ran into Tolkin. His face was drawn and his shoes rather scruffy.

"Where are you living now?" I asked him.

Art Buchwald

"We're still looking for a place," he said sadly. "You can't believe what they're offering for $90,000 on the real estate market these days. They're shacks. They're not worth more than $20,000. I looked at one yesterday. It had a foot of land in the back and a foot of land in the front."

"It sounds like your old house," I said.

"I had a good house," he replied defensively. "The walls were thick and the brick was solid. It didn't look like much from the outside but after what I've seen, the guy who bought my home got a steal. He played me for a sucker. They don't build houses like the one I sold any more."

"I guess not," I said. "Maybe you should have kept it."

"And lose a $70,000 profit? That's the best business deal I ever made."

"But what good is it, Tolkin, if you have to pay $90,000 for another house that isn't as good?"

"I was afraid you'd ask me that," he said.

"Why don't you offer to buy your old house back for $90,000 and forget the whole thing?"

"Because the guy I sold it to wants $125,000 for it."

"That's a lot for that house," I said.

"It's still better than the ones we've looked at," Tolkin said. "It may not have much of a yard but the basement is completely paneled and it does have a wet bar."

"Then you're thinking of buying back for $125,000?"

"I've offered him $120,000, and he said he'd think it over."

"That's a good deal," I agreed. "You lose $30,000 on it, but now instead of a $90,000 house, you'll have a $120,000 one, and that's nothing to spit at."

"I never thought of it that way," Tolkin said. "In a few years it will probably be worth $150,000 and then if I sell it I'll make $100,000 profit."

"The big question is will the buyer sell it?"

"Sure he will," Tolkin said. "As soon as he discovers the furnace doesn't work."

Mark Russell says

One hundred-dollar-a-plate political dinners quickly gave way to one thousand-dollar-a-plate dinners. With today's prices, they will soon graduate to five thousand dollars a plate. However, these will include an extra pat of butter.

To cut expenses at a five thousand-dollar-dinner, someone will come up with the idea of bringing your own food. But you get to keep the plate.

The party faithful don't mind paying a thousand dollars a plate. Even if they see a truck parked outside with golden arches on it.

But protocol demands that the folks at the head table get cheese on their quarter pounders.

Politicians will gladly pay that kind of money for a meal if the President shows up. To get a picture shaking hands with him, they would hock their wives and kids.

U.S.-MEXICO RELATIONS:

Plenty of problems; Washington has no easy answers

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

Mexico, just about everyone agrees, is important to the United States.

But there seems to be no agreement on what the United States can and should do to help the neighboring republic out of its current difficulties.

The U.S. State Department pointed out recently: "The February, 1977, visit of President (Jose) Lopez Portillo, the first foreign head of state to meet with President Carter, illustrates the importance the new U.S. administration attaches to our relationship with our closest Latin American neighbor."

Relations with Mexico are friendly and harmonious, the State Department said.

"Across a common border of almost 2,000 miles, the two nations conduct extensive trade, and tourists move freely back and forth."

"There is cooperation on bilateral flood-control projects and in the use of irrigation waters, and several joint cultural and scientific programs are also under way," the department said.

But then it listed the outstanding problems between the two countries. Trade, narcotics, U.S. prisoners and illegal immigration were mentioned.

With reference to trade, it was pointed out that Mexico is the United States' fourth largest customer. Statistics show that the United States is Mexico's biggest market.

The United States buys some 65 per cent of Mexico's exports and Mexico purchases about 63 per cent of its imports from the United States.

But the balance of trade is heavily in favor of the United States. According to the State Department, Mexico's deficit in trade with the United States was $1.4 billion in 1976. The official Bank of Mexico has reported that the Mexican deficit amounted to almost $2.5 billion the year before, in 1975.

Mexico has been pressing the United States to grant it greater access to U.S. markets. But, said the Department of State, "granting additional types of preferences would conflict with existing multilateral trade agreements and the necessity to protect U.S. jobs and U.S. producers."

In other words, the U.S. government does not feel it can do any more to help Mexico with its trade problem.

On the matter of narcotics, the department declared that "Mexico has become the chief conduit of illegal drugs entering the United States." It is estimated that 70-80 per cent of the heroin seized by narcotics agents is "Mexican brown," and that "most of the marijuana" and "much of the cocaine smuggled to the United States from South America passes through Mexico."

The two countries have been working together to stem the flow of illegal drugs and there are signs that the traffic is being reduced.

That, of course, has given rise to a third problem: the number of Americans serving sentences in Mexican jails.

About 80 per cent of the approximately 600 American prisoners were convicted of narcotics violations.

They fell into the hands of Mexican law as the result of the crackdown that the United States demanded Mexico make on illegal drug trafficking.

A treaty has been drafted that will allow the United States and Mexico to exchange lawbreakers so that they may serve out their terms in their own homelands.

Mexico ratified the treaty in 1976, but the U.S. Congress, where protests against mistreatment of Americans and the miserable living conditions in Mexican jails were loudest, has not.

According to the State Department, one of the major bilateral issues between the two countries is the flow of illegal aliens to the United States.

Although spokesmen for the Carter administration have been talking about amnesty for illegals and other possible solutions, the State Department does not sound optimistic.

It acknowledges that some Americans and Mexican government spokesmen maintain that the undocumented workers perform unskilled labor that most Americans will not do. But it points out that organized labor in the United States alleges that the aliens take jobs from unemployed citizens. The department says that the illegals are an unfair burden on U.S. taxpayers who support the social services they require.

However, the department states that "a major reason for the Mexican government's laissez-faire attitude toward Mexican aliens in the United States is financial — the money they send home to relatives in Mexico helps to bolster the Mexican economy."

In short, to judge by the State Department paper on U.S.-Mexican relations, the United States recognizes the existence of problems between the two countries. But Washington has no easy answers for them.

Clinics changing legal practices

By STUART AUERBACH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Walk through the door of the plain, frame building in nearby Riverdale, Md., and enter the world of supermarket law.

Unlike most law offices, the prices are posted on the wall for all to see: uncontested divorces, $150; simple wills, $35; court appearances, $125 — all far below the average for the area.

The office is the most recently opened branch of the Baltimore-based Legal Clinics of Cawley, Schmidt & Sharrow, the latest wrinkle in attempts to provide moderately priced legal services for the American middle class.

Started last August in Baltimore's Fells Point neighborhood, the clinics now have six branch offices, five in the Baltimore area and the one on Kenilworth Avenue in Riverdale. The partners plan to open a seventh clinic in Washington next month.

This new method of providing legal services received the seal of approval of the United States Supreme Court on Monday when it struck down bar association bans against lawyers advertising the availability and price of routine legal services.

The Supreme Court case concerned a similar clinic in Phoenix, Ariz., and the Maryland Bar Association had filed a "friend of the court" brief opposing the Cawley, Schmidt & Sharrow clinics.

It is one of about 20 such legal clinics around the country. On the basis of the number of practicing attorneys associated with it (14, of whom six are partners) and branch offices, it is considered the largest. According to the founding partners, it was the first to open on the East Coast.

Its practice is aimed clearly at middle Americans and its philosophy is firmly stated in the printed brochure available in the clinic waiting room: "In our society of high priced law firms and no-cost legal aid programs, only the rich and the poor have ready access to lawyers. People in the largest sector of our society — the middle income — must either without lawyers and give up their rights or, when lawyers cannot be avoided, pay much more than they can afford."

Although this view may sound radical, it echoes an American Bar Association study quoted in Monday's Supreme Court decision, which said "the middle 70 per cent of our population is not being reached or served adequately by the legal profession."

William R. (Rick) Schmidt III, 28, one of the founding partners, said the Supreme Court decision will result in "a general lowering of fees. Because of the large number of lawyers there will be competition, and competition will result in more accountability and more accessibility. The partners are preparing newspaper advertisements now. Until the Supreme Court decision, they had depended on brochures, newspaper and magazine articles and word of mouth to attract clients.

The Cawley, Schmidt and Sharrow clinics are geared to handle clients unaccustomed to dealing with lawyers. The first consultation is free — and fees are posted on the waiting room wall and listed in the brochure. The clinics are open evenings and weekends so clients don't have to take a day off work.

Moreover, they accept Master Charge and BankAmericard, and even allow payments on the installment plan — something more traditional law firms avoid.

"It's a winning idea for the middle class consumer," said Schmidt, who graduated from the University of Maryland Law School in 1975 with Linda Cawley, 28.

She said the first thought of the idea of providing low cost legal services when "I needed a divorce I couldn't afford." But the idea really became "cemented" during classes on legal ethics that discussed the large number of Americans who cannot get legal services.

They joined with Ronald Sharrow, 42, who already had a successful law practice, to set up the first clinic in Baltimore.

Since last August they have seen about 3,000 persons, and about half have signed on as clients. Most come in for divorces, for which they are charged $150 if it is uncontested, there are no children and there is no property settlement. Children and property raise the fee for an uncontested divorce to $250.

Canada plans party

OTTAWA, Canada (AP) — The Canadian government is spending $3.5 million to celebrate Canada's 110th birthday today in hopes it will help to undercut the growing movement in Quebec to secede.

A $500,000 national birthday party, televised nationwide tonight from Parliament Hill in Ottawa, will include entertainment by leading Canadian performers, the unfurling of a 145-foot Canadian flag on the clock tower of the Parliament building and a giant fireworks display.

A crowd of 100,000 is expected on the hill while millions watch on television.

Local celebrations range from a mule derby in Miami, Manitoba, to a flag-waving demonstration in Vancouver at which Prince Andrew, second son of Queen Elizabeth II, was named "heir of the world" by the Algonquin Indians. That ceremony was taped Thursday for broadcast today.

MC seeks nursing applicants

August 15 is the deadline for applications to begin the new fall training program in the Department of Vocational Nursing at Midland College.

Graduates who complete the one year course, designed to provide instruction in bedside nursing care, and who maintain a grade average of 70 will be qualified to take the state board examination, according to Virginia Land, Midland College instructor of Vocational Nursing.

If they pass, they will receive their licenses to practice as Licensed Vocational Nurses.

Persons interested in making application should call 684-7951, ext. 186, Mondays through Thursdays between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m. Applicants should be high school graduates or have a GED certificate.

"The course will begin with 17 weeks of preclinical training in the classroom. It will be augmented by 35 weeks of alternate classroom-hospital training," said Land. "Classes will include lectures, audio-visual presentations, demonstrations of procedures and practices."

The course costs approximately $400, which includes tuition, books, uniforms and incidentals. Financial assistance is available in some cases.

Training is conducted in cooperation with Midland Memorial Hospital, where students observe medical procedures and practice under supervision of registered nurses, physicians, surgeons and para-professional medical personnel.

Canoeing lessons offered

Always want to learn how to handle a canoe but never known anybody to show you how?

Excuses are over.

Canoe lessons will be given from 7 to 9 p.m. July 12 and 13 at the Hogan Park pool, under a program offered by the Midland Parks and Recreation Department. Instructor Linda Odom will conduct the course which covers canoeing techniques along with safety skills.

Interested persons may come to the Parks and Recreation Department to register. The $5 fee includes the use of pool canoes and paddles.

MC seeks nursing applicants

August 15 is the deadline for applications to begin the new fall training program in the Department of Vocational Nursing at Midland College.

Graduates who complete the one year course, designed to provide instruction in bedside nursing care, and who maintain a grade average of 70 will be qualified to take the state board examination, according to Virginia Land, Midland College instructor of Vocational Nursing.

If they pass, they will receive their licenses to practice as Licensed Vocational Nurses.

Persons interested in making application should call 684-7951, ext. 186, Mondays through Thursdays between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m. Applicants should be high school graduates or have a GED certificate.

"The course will begin with 17 weeks of preclinical training in the classroom. It will be augmented by 35 weeks of alternate classroom-hospital training," said Land. "Classes will include lectures, audio-visual presentations, demonstrations of procedures and practices."

The course costs approximately $400, which includes tuition, books, uniforms and incidentals. Financial assistance is available in some cases.

Training is conducted in cooperation with Midland Memorial Hospital, where students observe medical procedures and practice under supervision of registered nurses, physicians, surgeons and para-professional medical personnel.

Canoeing lessons offered

Always want to learn how to handle a canoe but never known anybody to show you how?

Excuses are over. Canoe lessons will be given from 7 to 9 p.m. July 12 and 13 at the Hogan Park pool, under a program offered by the Midland Parks and Recreation Department.

Instructor Linda Odom will conduct the course which covers canoeing techniques along with safety skills.

Interested persons may come to the Parks and Recreation Department to register. The $5 fee includes the use of pool canoes and paddles.

Virginia Wade defeats Stove

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Virginia Wade, the vicar's daughter from England, won the women's singles title at Wimbledon today, beating Betty Stove of The Netherlands, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1.

With Queen Elizabeth and a packed center court looking on, Miss Wade became the first British woman to win the title since Ann Jones beat Billie Jean King eight years ago.

As Miss Wade netted a volley on the last point of the match, the crowd rose in excitement to applauded Miss Wade, who has been trying for 16 years to win a Wimbledon title.

The cheers grew as Queen Elizabeth came down from the royal box to present Miss Wade with the giant silver salver. After the presentation, the crowd broke into song. "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow," they sang as Miss Wade held up the salver for all to see.

Miss Wade, who gained the final by beating top-seeded Chris Evert, started off shakily. Miss Stove broke service three times in the first set, once in the ninth game to love, and served for the set. But in the second set, Miss Stove's service began to falter.

Miss Wade got off to a 3-0 lead with a quick break in the second set. A couple of backhand volleys—plus a disputed line call in which the umpire overruled the line judge and ordered a let to Miss Stove—gave the Dutch woman her first break of the set and brought her back to 2-3.

After two sets of error-titled, apprehensive play, only in the final set did the match really come alive.

Miss Wade, the packed center-court crowd of 14,000 behind her every shot, was never as good as when she beat Miss Evert in the semifinals Wednesday.

But she managed to overcome her errors better than the Dutch woman, who looked every bit an upset victor until that eighth game of the second set. That was the turning point.

By the end of the match, Miss Stove had double-faulted nine times and had suffered consistent problems with her first service. She saved many points with an effective second serve and her aggressive net play.

In the final set, Miss Stove's volleys began going into the net.

The 6-foot-1 Miss Stove put up a bitter battle to get back into the match in the fourth game of the final set. The game went to deuce when Miss Stove hit a forehand down the line past Miss Wade. But another netted volley lost her that game and put her behind 4-0.

Rangers fans can relax

For those who might have trouble concealing a knowing smirk at the Texas Rangers' most recent managerial pratfall while wondering aloud how long the latest might last, rest easy.

We understand Billy Hunter is more eager to manage the Rangers' than any pilot they've had since, since, well, Eddie Stanky.

Amarillo Gold Sox pitcher Greg Wilkes, when asked if he was trying to brush back Midland Outfielder Karl Pagel when he beamed him — at Amarillo two weeks ago, replied, "I wasn't pitching the night before when he hit two home runs, so I didn't feel involved. After all, I didn't give them up."

"In fact," Wilkes goes on, "I wasn't even trying to pitch inside. Karl has a tendency once in a while to chase a high pitch, so with 0-2, I was just trying to throw a high fastball."

He demonstrated with two fingers tight together, "I cut it when I released the ball and it just took off on me."

EL PASO General Manager Jim Paul, at Midland CC last Saturday night for the marriage ceremony of Elizabeth Freedman and former Midland Cubs infielder Mike Umfleet, said the Diablos attendance goal, "With 30 more home dates is to hit 210,000."

As for the second half pennant race in the Texas League, Jim warns, "Beware of San Antonio. I think they have some of the best talent in the league and if they put it altogether..."

On Midland, Jim adds, "I'd rather play the Cubs in Midland than in El Paso. They are much tougher at our park. I think our crowds start the adrenalin flowing. You can see it really gets to them."

Midland Manager Jim Saul is another who thinks the Dodgers have the potential to be worrisome in the second half.

SCOTT BORAS last winter received his doctorate in industrial pharmacy from the University of Pacific, and is one Cub who really appreciates Midland after two years in the humid climes of St. Petersburg, Fla., and Little Rock, Ark., when he was a St. Louis Cardinals' farmhand.

"St. Petersburg not only was hot, but I fielded 600 ground balls a day. In college I was an outfielder and could run pretty good. Then I tore up my knee and they decided to make an infielder out of me."

Pacific also is the alma mater of former Midland Cubs infielder Rob Sperring, now with the Houston Astros, and former M-Cubs GM Stoney Feeney, now with the San Francisco Giants organization.

With the Chicago Cubs feeling the lack of a lefthanded starting pitcher Tower is now out of the tournament.

Western will face Eastern today at Henderson Park, and the winner will face Central in the finals Monday at 6 p.m.

T. Davis picked up the victory for Central while W. Davis hit a home run in the easy win. Teddy Terrazas absorbed the loss.

Jose Carrasco was the winner for Western while Tom Vasquez took the loss for Tower.

Filmmaking painstaking, not glamorous, business

By JOHN SINOR
Copley News Service

swirled across the high desert country, laying yet another layer on the squinting, sunburned truck drivers standing on the edge of an old country highway. "Damn," muttered one.

"What's the matter?" said another. "Don't you dig glamour, man?"

A burly man in a cowboy hat, sweat and dust streaked, with blood running from a lip cut, the badge of a recent fight, climbed into the cab of his truck without a word.

A small, gray-haired man climbed up on a flatbed directly in front of the truck cab — attached to it, in fact — and lay down in a folding chair.

Twelve other men climbed up on the flatbed to join him.

"OK," said director Sam Peckinpah. "Let's try it again."

This is the "glamour" business of America, the making of major motion pictures.

This movie is "Con-vo-y," an action drama based on the lives of what Peckinpah calls, "the last of the cowboys — the American truck drivers."

It is based loosely on the song by C.W. McCall about a huge string of trucks of all sizes ripping across the country, through toll gates, police barricades and National Guard troops.

It stars Kris Kristofferson as "The Rubber Duck" and Ali McGraw as "Charlie," the girl he picks up.

The bleeding driver who crawled into the cab was Bert Young, who plays Kristofferson's pal, "Pig Pen."

According to the script, he got his nickname because he is hauling "go girls" — a citizen band lingo for a load of live pigs.

And while I don't doubt that it will be exciting on the screen, the business of watching it being made is about as thrilling as watching wheat grow.

This is because the

process of moviemaking is so dreadfully slow. At most, the picture will probably run about two hours.

Imagine listening to somebody take several months to deliver a two-hour speech and you can get some idea of the pace.

John Gill, a local stuntman, driver and wrangler whose job on this picture is to drive

Young's motor home set to set, said, "I've learned a brand new trick on this picture."

He said: "I used to have to lie down and close my eyes to sleep. But now I have perfected going sound asleep standing on my feet with my eyes wide open. It sure comes in handy."

Another driver on the set answered: "Yeah, it sure is interesting how boring it is."

You have seen shots similar to the one Peckinpah was making with Young, Straight on through the windshield on the face of a moving driver.

But it's an illusion, and here is how it is created.

A brace of pipes is built up around the front of the truck for mounting a head-on camera and a side-view camera, and a set of lights. A microphone is installed in the cab to pick up the driver's dialogue.

Then the whole business is attached to another truck with the flatbed holding the director, script girl and a variety of technicians.

Young doesn't even have to drive. He and his rig are pulled by the other truck. (You can't have gear switching getting in the way of line cues.)

The truck pulled out and down the stretch of highway.

The dust swirled again around the people still standing by the side of the road.

Jackson D. Kane, who plays "Big Nansy" in the film, walked by munching a nearly melted ice cream bar — his fourth in the last 30 minutes.

Donnie Fritts, a composer and one of Kristofferson's musicians who usually appears somewhere in his pictures, shook his head and wandered over to the lemonade barrel.

Another driver lay down on the ground in the shade of a truck cab, pulled his hat over his face and began softly whistling. "There's no business like show business."

Remembrance of things past with Cat Stevens

By ROBIN WELLES
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Stephen Demetri Georgiou, born on July 21, 1948, in London, wanted to become a famous painter when he grew up.

Instead, he became Cat Stevens, famous musician.

Not bad for a youngster who dropped out of regular school at age 16 to enroll himself and his guitar at Hammersmith Art School. Hammersmith was not impressed and shortly told the fledgling artist to go elsewhere, another classic case of teachers' renowned ability to identify and encourage talent.

The exotic music that Cat sings today had its origins in his boyhood surroundings.

His mother is Swedish and his father is a Cypriot and they owned a restaurant called "The Moulin Rouge" near the British Museum.

Cat spent his teen years hanging around the clubs and alley bars of Soho.

He still was a teenager when he got some friends to finance his first single, "I Love My Dog." It was an instant smash — and so was Cat with that soft, insinuating voice.

Hanging around the damp London streets at night caught up with him eventually, however, and he developed tuberculosis. It took him a year to recover, but when he did he stepped right back to the top of the music world. And there he remains.

The latest Cat album for A&M Records is called "Izito," and again Cat skims back to the memories of things past in that gentle rhythm and poetic cadence that he has made his own. Seen through the right filter, remembrance can be magic.

Also hearing applause: BETTE MIDLER — Live At Last (Atlantic) — Midler occupies some pretty big footsteps left by other great, all-around performers like Fanny Brice, Sophie Tucker and Ethel Merman.

Exuberant and sometimes R-rated in her banter with audiences, the singer-comic was taped for this LP during a performance at the Cleveland Music Hall.

Although her material is predominantly modern, Midler dips into the past for "show tunes" like "Lullabye of Broadway" and "Around the World."

If you've never met Midler, this is as good a place as any.

JOHN COLTRANE — Afro Blue Impressions (Pablo) — Coltrane carried the development of modern jazz onward after the fabled Charlie Parker put down his horn one last time. A tough act to follow, but Coltrane pushed on to the new frontier of technical and harmonic exploration. This two-record set was compiled from sessions in various cities during Coltrane's European tour in the 1960s.

HELEN REDDY — Ear Candy (Capitol) — Another superb LP put together by the Australian import whose voice and style have captivated American music lovers. Reddy does it all, from rock to tender ballads, and the orchestral support is, as usual, imaginative and precise. Reddy is at the top of her career.

ALVIN CROW — High Riding (Polydor) — Crow and The Pleasant Valley Boys have wowed country fans in beer halls around Austin, Tex., for a good many years. Yet Crow is only 26, and just building his national country star reputation. A fiddler and addict of pure country music Hank Williams-style, Alvin recruited his boys from the Texas Panhandle. Good ol' boys, every one.

ALICE COOPER — Lace and Whiskey (Warner Bros.) — The master of shock-and-rock is bending heavy metal again in a "concept" album built around the theme of Sam Spade and super sleuthing. Mr. Bizarre usually tosses in a moment of contrast and on this LP it is the soft and sensitive ballad hit, "You and Me." Otherwise, Cooper grinds it out the way devotees like it: hard, basic rock.

Souvenir warning

NEW YORK (AP) — A live souvenir from abroad can be dangerous, warns the Air Transport Association.

Bringing forbidden plants or animals into the United States may seem innocuous at the time, but even a couple of destructive parasites can multiply to epidemic numbers in a new environment that contains none of their natural enemies, said the ATA.

In 1966, two African snails brought into Florida from Hawaii multiplied into more than 100,000 vegetable and house-paint-eating mollusks that took six years to eradicate.

Congressmen make use of library's surplus books

By T. REID
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Library of Congress distributes about 1 million surplus books every year to schools, libraries and public agencies around the nation. With book prices zooming, the free program is a considerable boon to those budget-starved institutions.

But it is not quite the boon it might be, because members of Congress have decreed that they, too, are entitled to the free books. And Congress has established a priority system that lets its members take their pick before the books are made available to schools and libraries.

Library of Congress officials say about half the members of Congress draw regularly from the ever-changing surplus stacks, but the library refuses to reveal which ones do so, or how many books they take.

Wednesday, however, the Cleveland Plain Dealer reported that Rep. Charles J. Carney (D-Ohio) has taken more than 60,000 free books from the library over the 2½ years, including history texts, popular novels and sets of encyclopedias.

The Plain Dealer said Carney had sent some of the books to his relatives and kept thousands in his personal libraries here and in Youngstown, Ohio.

The congressman said late Wednesday that the story was "overblown." He said he had taken 62,131 free books from the library — not 64,076 as the Plain Dealer reported — and had sent almost all of them to schools and libraries in Ohio.

"I go through the ones we're sending to Ohio, and if I see a couple of books I want, I take them out," Carney said. "When I've read them, I send them to the district."

Nathan R. Einhorn, an amiable, white-haired bibliophile who runs the Library of Congress' Exchange and Gift Division, said Carney, who once took more than 1,000 volumes from the surplus stacks in one day, is the champion congressional recipient of the free books.

But Einhorn said more than 250 members of Congress take advantage of the surplus arrangement, as do officials from other federal agencies. Einhorn noted with a chuckle, that he has never had an order from the White House.

The books from which Carney and the others choose are among more than 1 million volumes, some used and some duplicate copies of new titles, that the library declares "surplus" each year.

The library, which receives copies of every publication copyrighted in the United States, every government publication and shiploads of foreign books, takes in about 25,000 more books and scholarly journals each week than it can use.

The surplus books are stored in stacks in the library's annex building, and each day during business hours eligible recipients come by to see which titles they would like to claim.

Among the regular browsers are congressional aides dispatched to find books for their employers. To assure that they will have the pick of the lot, Congress and the library have established a three-tiered priority system governing disposition.

PRIORITY I — which gets first pick over books newly declared surplus — includes Congress and the executive agencies.

PRIORITY II — which gets to the books after they have been available to top-priority takers for two weeks — includes book dealers, who must pay or trade for the books they receive.

The third priority cover schools, libraries, and state and local governments.

Wednesday, the stacks for Priority I included 1977 editions of several reference books and fiction by leading authors. The stacks for Priority III seemed to include little current fiction, but did offer "Who's Who in Malaysia, 1968" and a 1958 bound volume of Motor Engineering Magazine.

Group suggests trimmed LEAA

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Justice Department task force said Thursday the much-criticized Law Enforcement Assistance Administration ought to be "saved," but its work should be streamlined.

devoting more attention to researching national crime problems.

The task force presented its recommendations to Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell, who asked for a study of the LEAA, which administers about $700 million a year in crime-fighting assistance for state and local governments.

Bell said he has "come to no conclusions about its recommendations." The course he finally adopts could have a major impact on the way states and cities share in federal crime-fighting funds administered by LEAA.

The agency was formed nine years ago to help states and cities plan and carry out more effective strategies against crime.

Critics of the LEAA, led by President Carter and Bell, have complained that a lot of the money has been wasted on expensive and ineffective hardware for police departments.

There also have been complaints that the LEAA failed to determine which projects succeeded and which did not, and that the agency and Congress spun a tangled web of red tape that frustrated state and local officials and may have actually discouraged effective planning and innovation.
