Budget plan hard to sell; Oilmen finding it favorable

■ With incentives that could stimulate oilfield activity and tax measures that favor the industry, the compromise budget likely will please Texas oilmen, an analyst says.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

The $500 billion compromise budget approved Sunday by President Bush and congressional leaders is expected to be generally favorable to the oil industry, said an industry tax specialist.

"Generally, I think the industry will be pleased with the tax measures," said Bob Avant, resident tax specialist with the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

Avant added that he expects the incentives will also stimulate activity in the oil industry.

The compromise which contains a 12 cent tax on gasoline, in addition to the current 9 cents, also contains $4 billion in drilling and production tax incentives for the oil industry. The exact tax incentives were not spelled out in news accounts Sunday, because the final touches have not been added, said Avant.

He noted that a reinstatement of incentives for tight sand will be in the package.

He expected the rest of the package, which will be hammered out in the next few days, to include incentives for drilling, enhanced oil recovery and marginal properties.

■ Amid other election-year concerns, Congressmen are finding it difficult to convince their constituents the budget compromise is necessary.

By Alan Fram
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Bush and congressional leaders of both parties began the tough election-year task Monday of selling their painful $500 billion deficit-reduction compromise to wary rank-and-file lawmakers.

Democrats said the task of building support for the package of tax increases and spending cuts would be helped greatly if Bush would deliver a television address explaining to Americans why the nation's ailing economy needs such bitter budgetary medicine.

"We in Congress can't prepare them," said Sen. Wyche Fowler, D-Ga., a participant during most of the four months of budget bargaining this year. "It is only the president going on national TV who can convince the public it is in their long-term best interest. ... If he convinces them of that, it will pass."

Democrats had asked Bush at the White House Sunday to

Bush hints at settlement of conflict

■ Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait could be the catalyst to conciliation of the Arab Israeli conflict, President Bush indicates.

By Jocelyn Noveck
Associated Press Writer

President Bush assailed Iraq on Monday for invading Kuwait, but hinted an Iraqi withdrawal could lead to settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict. Israel warned its response to an Iraqi attack would be "harsh and painful," and said it was giving out gas masks to all citizens.

America announced it was sending two batteries of Patriot air-defense missiles to Israel to help defend against an increased threat from ballistic missiles in Iraq.

In Baghdad, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein ordered the release of nine French nationals believed to have been held at

On Sunday, he urged a peaceful international dialogue, and mentioned France as a possible negotiating partner.

U.S., French and British officials said Monday they wouldn't talk until Iraq withdrew from Kuwait.

Also Monday, Iran's official news agency said the foreign ministers of Iran and Saudi Arabia met Sunday in New York for the first such high-level talks since the nations broke diplomatic ties 2½ years ago.

No progress was reported, but the meeting was the most positive sign yet the two countries may be moving toward a rapprochement. A reconciliation would help draw Iran into the anti-Iraq camp and intensify Saddam's isolation.

Saddam has been courting Iran, its war enemy from 1980-88, for help in puncturing the U.N. economic embargo imposed after Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2.

Lake patrol

New West Texas lake opens

DOOLE — The lake is swelling.

The fish are growing.

And the locals are wary, but accepting, of strangers filtering into their old land, which is being turned into a lake.

"It's pretty hard to take," said Doole rancher Dan Taylor, "when they take good farms and ranches and bury them under water."

In the lake, the surviving fingerlings (1.25 million small fish were set free into the lake) are growing into keeper-size bass, catfish and crappie. Many of the fish unwittingly will be enticing fishermen to hook 'em, clean 'em, bread 'em, and fry 'em. The not-so-hungry sportsmen just will hook by bait or fly, smile, unhook, and toss 'em back alive.

Water-skiers are waiting for the lake — by whatever name, Ivie, Leaday or even Stacy — to spread and deepen and for logs, branches and other debris to settle out before they hazard the water sports.

Court won't reinstate Odessa murder conviction

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to reinstate the murder conviction and death sentence of an Odessa man who has spent more than seven years on death row.

The justices, without comment, let stand a ruling that threw out John Skelton's conviction "because the evidence does not exclude every other reasonable hypothesis."

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, the state's highest, overturned Skelton's conviction in 1989 and ordered him acquitted. Skelton remained behind bars pending review of the case by the Supreme Court.

Skelton was convicted by a jury and in July 1983 sentenced to death in the murder of Joe Neal, who died when a bomb blew up his pickup truck on April 24, 1982, in Odessa.

Prosecutors said Skelton had vowed to kill Neal because the victim had stolen tanks from Skelton's steam cleaning business.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals said the evidence against Skelton did not prove his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

"Although this court does not relish the thought of reversing the conviction in this heinous case and ordering an acquittal, because the evidence does not exclude every other reasonable hypothesis, we are compelled to do so," the state court said.

The state court said it relied on a 1979 Supreme Court ruling in a death penalty case from Virginia.

Texas prosecutors said the Texas court misinterpreted the 1979 decision.

The high court said then that a federal appeals court must overturn a conviction only if it determines that, based on the trial evidence, no rational jury could have found proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

The Texas prosecutors said "it is an ineluctable conclusion" that the Supreme Court in 1979 specifically rejected the theory adopted 10 years later by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Skelton's case.

The case is Texas vs. Skelton, 90-139.

Chinese crash

HONG KONG (AP) — A Chinese passenger jet traveling between two southern provinces crashed Tuesday near Canton, apparently after the Boeing 737 was hijacked, officials said.

Airport officials at the Guangzhou international airport said the flight apparently originated from the Fujian city of Xiamen, which is north of Guangdong province, and crashed near Canton.

An airport official and a reporter for the Guangdong People's Broadcasting Station said they believed the plane, owned by China's state airline CAAC, was first hijacked before it crashed.

No further details were immediately available.

PARROTT, Va. (AP) — A 10-year-old Indiana boy who was planning a trip to his grandparents' home but couldn't find their town on a map helped make Parrott one of eight towns added to Rand McNally's newest atlas.

The western Virginia town of 800 people thanked Chris Muncy for its newfound recognition by designating Sunday as Chris Muncy Day. The 1991 atlas appeared nationwide Monday.

"I was helping my mom and dad plan our trip to my grandparents', but Parrott wasn't on the map," said Chris, of Mishawaka, Ind. Chris's maternal grandparents and great-grandmother live in Parrott.

Chris wrote last year to Rand McNally asking that it include the town, which is about 35 miles west of Roanoke.

Catherine Mosbacher to speak

Staff Report

ODESSA — Catherine Mosbacher, the wife of Republican candidate for lieutenant governor Rob Mosbacher, will speak at the 11:45 a.m. Odessa West Lion's Club meeting on Wednesday.

Mrs. Mosbacher will greet club members and discuss her husband's campaign and issues facing the state in the 1990s.

Mrs. Mosbacher, an attorney, is a member of the Bars of Texas and the District of Columbia. She practiced law from 1976 to 1987, and served in the U.S. Senate Legislative Counsel's Office in Washington, D.C., and in corporate Government Relations for Texas Energy, a Houston energy company. She also has served as an adjunct law professor at the University of Houston Law Center.

OIL: Budget may boost activity

(From 1A)

"There will also be some relief from the alternative minimum tax," said Avant, "but we don't know exactly what."

U.S. senators from Texas, Lloyd Bentsen and Phil Gramm, have stated that the tax on gasoline which would include a five-cent increase in December, a five-cent increase in July and a two-cent refinery tax would do the most harm to Texas, but Avant said it will be best for the industry.

"If there has to be an energy tax it is better to get it as far away from the wellhead as possible. IPAA has always maintained that any energy tax should be placed on the consumer and not the producer," said Avant. "We see the gasoline tax as a better option than one of the proposals which was an ad valorem tax on energy."

He added that there was some industry concern that the two-cent refinery tax might be passed back to the wellhead.

Avant noted that October 19 will be the deadline for adding resolutions to the compromise budget.

In other developments:

■ Oil prices tumbled $3 per barrel to $36.10 following Bush's speech at the United Nations, which was seen as raising hopes of a diplomatic solution to the 2-month-old crisis. As oil fell, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 63 points to 2,515.84. Gold prices fell $15.90 an ounce, to $386.60, on the New York Commodity Exchange.

■ Saddam addressed a message to participants in a U.N. summit on children, telling them U.N. sanctions are depriving Iraqi children of milk and food — "a matter of deep concern and regret."

■ Iraq denied responsiblity for a grenade attack Thursday on a Djibouti cafe in which a French child was killed. French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said France would retaliate if Iraq was found responsible.

■ Britain announced it is sending a 3,500-strong support force, including a 400-bed field hospital, to the gulf to back up an armored brigade, the Desert Rats.

In his address to the General Assembly, Bush echoed his previous harsh line against Iraq but tempered it with talk of a diplomatic solution.

Iraq "has plundered Kuwait, terrorized innocent civilians and held even diplomats hostage," Bush said.

■ The State Department has set up a hotline for people seeking information about the safety of American relatives and friends in Kuwait and Iraq. The number for the 24-hour telephone bank is (202) 647-0900.

Aligning himself with remarks last week by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, Bush said Iraq and its leaders "must be held liable for these crimes of abuse and destruction."

A British U.N. briefing quoted Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher as saying on a talk show Monday, "You can't go in and cause all that damage and desolation and damage to life ... without expecting to have to pay some compensation. ... Nor can you go and have your soldiers do some of the things that have been done without expecting them to be brought before the court and be answerable for their terrible deeds."

In Bush's demand for unconditional Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait, he suggested this could lead to a resolution of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

"In the aftermath of Iraq's unconditional departure from Kuwait, I truly believe that there may be opportunities," he said.

"For Iraq and Kuwait to settle their differences permanently; for the states of the gulf themselves to build new arrangements for stability; and for all the states and peoples of the region to settle the conflict that divides the Arabs from Israel."

The Bush administration has rejected Saddam's attempts to link his pullout from Kuwait with a simultaneous Israeli pullout from the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Bush, who has praised the United Nations for its handling of the crisis, also promised to pay the $521.9 million in U.S. arrears to the U.N. budget.

Shevardnadze called Bush's speech "brilliant." Iraq's ambassador said his government "disagreed with everything," but took positive note of Bush's mentioning a desire for a peaceful solution.

A spokesman for Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said he did not see Bush's speech as linking the gulf crisis to Israel's conflict with the Arabs.

"I don't think that is a linkage," Avi Pazner said. "He said similar things before."

The Israeli army announced it will begin distributing gas masks next week to all its 4.7 million citizens, including Jews and Israeli Arabs.

Saddam has repeatedly threatened to attack Israel, at one time threatening to burn half the Jewish state with chemical weapons.

Officials said the distribution plan was developed long before the gulf crisis.

The 140,000 Arabs living in annexed east Jerusalem will be issued gas masks. The government said the 1.7 million Palestinians of the West Bank and Gaza will have to pay the purchase price of $100-plus per kit because they are not covered by Israeli national insurance.

Each kit contains a gas mask, a syringe with a nerve gas antidote and purifying powder. Instructions will be in Hebrew, Arabic, English and Russian.

Gas masks will be available for tourists at hotels, officials said.

At the United Nations, Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy said Israel "will know how to defend itself if attacked and its response will be harsh and painful."

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak was quoted as saying on the French La Cinq television network on Monday that Saddam has had secret contacts with Israel during the gulf crisis. Israel denied it.

make the speech, participants in the meeting said. Bush told reporters in New York that he had not yet decided whether to go on television.

"But if it would help, I would be glad to do that," the president said.

Initial public reaction in one poll's data showed a 2-1 margin against the pact.

Bush, meanwhile, signed a stopgap spending resolution to keep the government going for five days while more work is done on the budget. He called the compromise "the right package at the right time" and "our best chance to get the deficit under control."

The leaders' sales effort was dealt a blow when one of Congress' leading conservatives, Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., announced he would oppose the proposed tax increases and spending cuts. Gingrich had left the White House Sunday shortly before Bush and congressional leaders announced their five-year agreement.

Gingrich complained on Monday that the plan — the largest deficit-reduction package ever — would enact permanent tax increases while leaving spending cuts up to Congress to enact in the future. He was also upset that the plan did not contain enough measures to help businesses.

"We can do better for America," said Gingrich, the No. 2 House Republican. "This package will lose jobs, raise taxes and deepen the recession."

The plan's $134 billion in new taxes on gasoline, alcohol, tobacco, airline tickets, incomes of the wealthy and other items have angered many Republicans. They also complained that defense cuts of up to $182 billion were too deep, and that domestic programs were not pared enough.

Numerous Democrats don't like the package's $105 billion in spending reductions for benefit programs such as Medicare and the fact that many of the taxes — such as those on gasoline and alcohol — take a deep bite out of poor peoples' incomes.

Lawmakers of both parties expressed anger that home heating oil was among the petroleum products that would be subject to a 2-cent-per-gallon tax.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said he insisted at the last minute that the heating oil levy be included as a matter of regional equity, since Westerners would pay much of the higher gasoline tax.

Proposed Budget Package

The Bush administration and congressional bargainers announced that they had forged a compromise package of tax increases and spending cuts designed to make a five-year, $500 billion dent in the federal deficit.

Taxpayers who earn more than $100,000 annually—either as individuals or couples—will have their deduction reduced by 3 percent. In addition, upper income taxpayers will pay more to support the Medicare program. The government now takes 1.45 percent from paychecks to finance Medicare up to an annual limit of $51,300. That ceiling will be increased to $73,000.

The toughest cuts would affect the military: $10 billion in the new year and up to $182 billion in over five years.

The federal gasoline tax would increase from 9 cents to 19 cents a gallon. All fuels would also be hit with a new tax based on their energy content. This would apparently provide another 2-cent increase for gasoline.

The elderly and disabled, who now pay $28.60 per month for Medicare coverage of doctors' expenses, would see that premium increase to about $34.30. Overall, half the savings in benefit programs—$60 billion—would come from Medicare, split evenly between recipients and providers, such as doctors and hospitals.

Luxury items ranging from furs to fancy cars would have new 10 percent taxes. Cigarette taxes would be increased gradually by 8 cents per pack from its current 16-cent level. Alcohol taxes would also go up.

Farm support programs would be cut $12 billion over five years. Payments to civil servants and retirees would be reduced by $14 billion.

LAKE: Residents adjusting to recreation area

(From 1A)

And the old country lanes and farm-to-market roads, heretofore accustomed to the occasional traffic of farmers' and ranchers' pickup trucks, are getting the bustling weekend business of city-registered cars, campers and Suburbans pulling boat trailers.

This ranching countryside is changing. And it's more than just the 30-section lake basin that's swelling with recent rains and runoff. The folks at Doole don't seem to be overly impressed with the cash-flow prospects of a new lake or the increased traffic which recreational waters bring.

The lake, which is about 175 road miles east of Midland, officially opened to boaters, fishermen and campers last weekend. Though allowed, water-skiing is discouraged until the lake deepens and more debris is cleared.

Stacy, the name of a dying community near here, for years has been used to denote the site of a proposed dam to impound water at the confluence of the Colorado and Concho rivers.

But before the $69-million project, including $30 million for the dam and spillway, was dedicated last May 19, the Colorado River Municipal Water (CRMWD) directors decided to name the lake the O.H. Ivie Reservoir and the dam the S.W. Freese Dam.

Ivie, general manager of the CRMWD, headed the project, which is to supply water to West Texas cities, including Midland, Odessa, San Angelo, and Abilene.

The dam was named in honor of S.W. Freese, the late Fort Worth engineer and designer of dams throughout the state.

CRMWD owns the lake as well as Lake J.B. Thomas near Snyder and Lake E.V. Spence at Robert Lee. Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, and Stanton get their surface water from those two lakes.

The old-line traditionalists around here aren't overjoyed with the "progress." They are leery of what a new lake will attract: honest people or city thieves. Some, maybe most, it seems, don't want to sell their land. Then again, they won't decline money in exchange for seasonal hunting rights.

And some diehards, such as Salt Gap rancher Bill Rice and Doole rancher Dan Taylor and his wife, Berva Dawn Taylor, just want their heritage recognized when it comes to the 30-square-mile lake and two-mile-long dam.

"I don't care about the traffic," said Rice. For historical and sentimental reasons, he wants the old name "Stacy" affixed to the damn.

"Stacy is still down here," said Rice, who lives on Brady Mountain. "That mountain is me," he said, just before he pulled out of Oscar Betsill's Feed & Seed Store in Doole. "It's a nothing town. It's gone. At one time, they had hotels and everything. It was a big town."

Like the Taylors, Rice said he wanted — and still wants — the dam to be called Stacy and the lake called Leaday after a rural settlement, now abandoned, in the lake basin.

The rancher said he hopes that the lake will benefit the area.

"I hope it gives us drinking water," he said. "That drinking water has gotten to be a precious commodity." Someday, he said, "We may want (good) water more than oil."

Like Stacy, Doole was bigger than it used to be. Today, it's got a post office, a few homes, and the feed store, which was an old Red & White grocery store "a long time ago," said 65-year-old Margreete Dickinson, who, with Betsill, co-owns the store. Years ago, Doole had a theater, tailor shop, pool hall and a barber shop.

Jinks Jamison, a 57-year-old farmer and rancher who lives "across the (Colorado) River" from Doole, was apprehensive that the lake may "bring a lot of bad in."

But there are positive sides to the lake.

"We might want some of that water," said Jamison. "They already got it (the dam) built. Nothing we can do about it."

Bobbie Shelton, who manages the Ballinger Chamber of Commerce across the lake from Doole, is expecting economic benefits from the lake.

"I don't think there's a bait stand out there yet," she said. "I don't know if we've had any benefits yet. We will, of course."

Mike Whitworth, who lives at Brady, figured that among benefits of the lake will be appreciation of land values.

"We have a (rural) lifestyle everybody thinks they want," he said.

Charlie Koonce, a San Angelo and former Midland developer, has 124 home-site tracts to sell near the lake.

"I hope it (Lake Ivie) does real good," Koonce said.

Question is how, not whether, to study more cultures

By Sharyn Wizda

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Black children begin school only slightly behind their white classmates in educational levels, according to the Children's Defense Fund.

But by the third grade, they have slipped six months behind. By the sixth grade, they are a full year behind. By the eighth grade, they have dropped two years back, and by twelfth grade, they have fallen more than three years behind.

Broadening traditional curricula to include African-American culture could bridge that racial gap, educators told the Subcommittee on Select Education.

But, they emphasized, more research is needed to determine the best way to expand multicultural education for blacks, as well as other minority groups.

For example, studies have shown that failure to teach black history breeds disinterest among black students. But, said Purdue University education professor Geneva Gay, "What has not been researched is the related claim about the effects traditional and revisionist textbook materials have on students' self-concepts and subsequent performance achievement."

Several different approaches — such as supplementing pre-existing curricula with separate black culture units, having special events such as Black History Month or even completely transforming traditional "Euro-centric" lesson plans — have been suggested for including minority cultures in public education, Gay said.

But, she added, the merits of each approach must be determined by carefully designed research studies.

Warren Simmons, director of Equity Assurance Programs for Prince George's County Public Schools in Maryland, told the subcommittee that the county's administrators and parents already endorse the idea of a broad-based multicultural curriculum.

"What we thirst for is guidance on the whereabouts of strategies, materials and tools that will help us get the job done in our community and schools," Simmons said.

Subcommittee chairman Major Owens has proposed creating an Institute for the Education of At-Risk Students, which would conduct the research educators like Gay and Simmons are asking for.

He approvingly quoted Gov. Wallace Wilkinson of Kentucky, as saying, "There's nothing wrong with the kids we put in our system. There's something wrong with the system we're putting our kids in."

Without waiting for further research, other witnesses suggested ways to create a multicultural educational experience.

School systems should hire more teachers from racial minorities, said Barbara J. Holmes, director of policy studies for the Education Commission of the States. In 1987, she said, 10 percent of teachers were members of a minority group, compared to 20 percent of school age children. By 1999, only 5 percent of teachers will be minorities, while one-third of the students will be.

"Because schooling provides the earliest near-daily exposure of children to life outside their homes," Holmes said, "a diverse teaching force allows all students to understand people who come from backgrounds different from their own and to see persons of different cultures in leadership positions."

Shirley M. McBay, president of the Quality Education for Minorities Network, suggested developing a pilot group of residential academies for minority junior high and high school students from low-income families.

Criticism of proposed federal budget widespread

NATION

Associated Press

The new taxes in the proposed $500 billion deficit-reduction compromise drew a few cheers and lots of jeers around the country Monday.

The plan's $134 billion in new taxes would hit gasoline, alcohol, tobacco, airline tickets, incomes of the wealthy and other items. It also has $105 billion in spending reductions for benefit programs such as Medicare.

The taxes would be used to dig politicians in Washington out of "a hole which they dug through fiscal irresponsibility," said Virginia Gov. L. Douglas Wilder.

"The individuals who will bear overwhelmingly the burden of this 'agreement' are the majority of Americans — the hard-working middle class — and Americans in need, the poor among us," the governor said.

Mando Guerra, a patron at Midtown Lounge in El Paso, Texas, saw both sides of the coin. He shrugged at the increased alcohol taxes.

"It's a necessity," Guerra said. "I'll probably still go out and have a few beers now and then. I think they've got to do something because of the deficit. But I don't think they should cut Medicare."

Guerra said his grandmother receives Medicare benefits.

"It's going to hurt a whole lot of old people," he said.

Other people complained about that, too.

"The ones that can least afford it are most affected by the crunch," said Charles R. Stowell, director of Allegheny County Department of Aging in Pittsburgh. "People are going to be at the point pretty soon where they are trying to decide whether they pay their heat, whether they pay their rent, whether they eat."

The agreement to boost the federal gasoline tax from 9 cents per gallon to 21 cents by next summer really grabbed some people's attention.

"I don't like it. Look at this — I'm already paying $1.66," said Richard Coleman, a printer from West Haven, Conn., who was pumping his own premium unleaded at a station in New Haven. The state has the nation's highest state tax at 22 cents a gallon.

"They're hitting the middle class again."

Sherri Steele, assistant manager at a paint store in Ottumwa, Iowa, said she is opposed to increasing taxes, "especially on gasoline. With gasoline, everybody has got to use it. It's not a luxury anymore."

She also said she is opposed to luxury taxes being increased, such as new fees on expensive cars and boats. "I've always been opposed to luxury taxes. To me, it's like being slapped on the hand for succeeding," she said.

Truckers cried foul.

Tax hike hits poorer families hardest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Poorer, younger, non-urban families, who generally spend a greater share of their earnings on gasoline, cigarettes and beer than do other groups, would be hit hardest by tax increases in the new deficit-reduction plan.

Other parts of the plan target fliers; state and local government employees; workers whose wages exceed $51,300; taxpayers with incomes over $100,000, and anyone with a taste for expensive cars, furs and jewels.

There's also a a brand new 2-cent-per-gallon tax on all kinds of refined petroleum products — gasoline again, home-heating oil, diesel — that are not used in farming or manufacturing.

Just in case anyone is left out, the plan calls for the Internal Revenue Service to step up audits and collections enough to squeeze an extra $9.4 billion out of reluctant taxpayers over the next five years.

But unlike the 13 other tax increases that have been enacted since 1981, the impact this proposal will have on individuals at various income levels is hard to determine. That is because it contains no broad changes in income taxes but relies instead on a potpourri of excise taxes and on payroll taxes that affect relatively few people.

There is little question, however, that excise taxes on such commodities as fuel, alcohol and tobacco have a greater impact on lower-income people.

Significantly, families headed by a person under the age of 30 spent a greater share of their incomes on all three commodities than did other age groups.

Model airplane 'attack' damages Goodyear blimp

AP Laserphoto

Pilot L.J. 'Nick' Nicolary stands in front of a Goodyear blimp with a patch showing on the letter "D" at Goodyear Airship Operations Center in Carson, Calif. Monday morning. Nicolary was piloting the blimp Sunday when a man used a remote-controlled model airplane to puncture the blimp. John W. Moyer, 28, of Redondo Beach was booked for investigation of assault with intent to do bodily harm.

CARSON, Calif. (AP) — A Goodyear blimp punctured by a radio-operated model airplane may not be repaired in time to help televise the American League baseball playoffs next week, a company spokesman said Monday.

But the blimp Columbia, which suffered a 3-by-3-foot tear and leaked helium Sunday, will be on hand when the World Series opens, said spokesman Bob Urhausen.

The Columbia was scheduled to fly with a temporary patch to the Marine Corps Air Station at El Toro on Thursday for repairs expected to take nearly a week, Urhausen said. He said Goodyear would rent a hangar at El Toro.

"We hope to make it for the playoffs. It's going to be tight," Urhausen said.

Urhausen said Goodyear had a non-binding agreement with CBS to use a blimp as a camera platform for televising both the playoffs and the World Series. The playoffs are scheduled to open Oct. 9 in Oakland. The World Series opens Oct. 16 in the hometown of the National League champion.

The Columbia, one of three blimps Goodyear operates, was ripped Sunday when the model plane collided with it. The airship, which was carrying seven Goodyear corporate customers on a promotional flight, made a hasty but safe landing at its base in Carson, 10 miles south of Los Angeles, Urhausen said.

The model plane had a wing span of 4 feet, investigators said.

John W. Moyer, 28, of Redondo Beach was booked for investigation of assault with intent to do bodily harm, authorities said.

No one was injured, but the 192-foot blimp's tail section and gondola had minor damage.

"This is real strange. We've never had an encounter like this. I would say it's a freak accident, although the police say apparently this person intended on hitting the blimp," Urhausen said. "Somebody would have to go out of their way. It's not like you don't see it coming."

He said there had been no danger of a crash.

"It would take a considerable hole to create a major problem. And as this was, it really became more of an inconvenience because we were on our approach anyway," he said.

Goodyear's other blimps are based in Pompano Beach, Fla., and Houston.

Military launches rocket Monday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An unmanned Delta rocket blasted into space Monday with a $65 million navigation satellite designed to guide U.S. war planes, ships and other military craft with extreme accuracy.

It was the Air Force's third attempt in four days to launch the rocket.

Thunderstorms had been predicted again for Monday, but the weather cooperated and the rocket roared from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station at 5:56 p.m.

Liftoff was delayed 25 minutes because of the need to wait for an aircraft to clear the area, and to regain contact with a command backup transmitter at Bermuda.

The NAVSTAR satellite separated from the booster about 25 minutes into the flight and settled in an orbit 12,532 miles above Earth.

U.S. interests are paramount

Jordan's King Hussein has addressed the American people, asking their understanding for his support of Iraq and calling for the removal of all American troops in the Middle East.

It is well to recall that the king and his country have long been among the favorite stepchildren of the U.S. State Department. State has battled for decades to give the Jordanians more aid in every form — from money to agricultural aid and other assistance.

Throughout that time, Hussein has played the United States against the Palestine Liberation Organization, other terrorist groups and his "brothers" in other Arab states. Yet State has bought his line in the name of Mideast stability. Why? Because the king has always cultivated and enhanced the role of U.S. diplomats in the Arab world who have long tried to set U.S. policy on their own.

Hussein now faces perhaps the most desperate time of his long reign. Saudi Arabia has cut off oil shipments — half of Jordan's need, stopped trading with Amman and expelled 20 Jordanian diplomats. The king is also caught between his big benefactor, the Americans, and those who will determine whether he will survive — the Palestinians and local terrorist groups. Forced to choose, Hussein has sided with Iraq, the Palestinians and the terrorists who could bring him down.

The king says Americans must leave the land of the Moslem world's two holiest shrines. For someone with Hussein's private reputation, that is indeed a hypocritical call. But Hussein has led an entire life of hypocrisy.

It's possible that terrorist gangs could take over Jordan if the king were deposed and then go after their true target, Israel. If they do make such a move, it would be better for Israel to fight them now rather than later. This country might well be drawn into such a fight, but war against the terrorists may well be inevitable.

The American people should reject the U.S. State Department and the king and all their hypocrisy. America's interests should be paramount — not theirs.

Congress skirts financial disclosure

WASHINGTON — Over the past two years, Rep. Clyde Holloway, R-La., fell behind in his taxes, so the Internal Revenue Service was forced to seize some of his campaign funds. And, Holloway co-signed a huge loan for a venture that later defaulted.

Anderson

But those setbacks have not shown up on the personal financial reports that Holloway, as a member of Congress, is required by law to put on file for public inspection. Instead, his reports simply hint at a few losses in his plant nursery business back home.

Holloway's case points out the holes in financial disclosure rules imposed on Congress. Some financial problems, such as tax delinquencies, aren't required to be reported on the disclosure forms, according to the House Ethics Committee.

The result is that members of Congress go through the motions of telling the public about their personal business deals, but keep the full truth to themselves. Voters must find out through the grapevine if the lawmaker is up to something that might be a conflict of interest.

Since members of Congress can't seem to make ends meet on their salaries, they have a right to make a living on the side, but a growing number of them have gotten in trouble mixing business and politics without telling the voters.

Rep. Denny Smith, R-Ore., now faces an ethics inquiry over his role in the savings and loan scandal. The focus of the probe will be Smith's efforts to keep the government from going after himself and other directors of a thrift that later collapsed.

Rep. Curt Weldon, R-Pa., has been accused by Democrats of using his position in a public-private economic development partnership to funnel federal money to developers who were also Weldon's political supporters.

Even the Democrats' golden boy, Sen. Robert Kerrey, D-Neb., has fallen into the trap. We reported in July that Kerrey was taking heat back home over his ties to a failed S&L and to a company that was promoting a nuclear waste dump project in Nebraska.

You won't find the details on a financial disclosure form. The rules require only a vague accounting of each member's business dealings. The fine print has to leak out.

That's what happened to Holloway. In 1988, the IRS filed a lien against him for $76,000 in delinquent payroll taxes for his business, Holloway Nurseries. The IRS even seized a large chunk of money from his campaign funds, and he was forced to take out a loan to pay back the campaign.

Also in 1988, Holloway co-signed a $1 million line of credit for some of his political supporters who were going into the vegetable processing business. The company defaulted on the loan, but the bank never came to Holloway to collect. Holloway told us that he insisted that his guarantee of the loan stay on the books as proof of his integrity. He now admits that he made a mistake in backing the deal, but he said he thought the vegetable business would be good for his district.

"I guess I may be a totally different politician than anybody you ever met," Holloway told our associate Scott Sleek. "I don't look for anything in return in politics." He did admit, however, that the people he backed in the vegetable business had once sponsored a political event for him.

Holloway's mixing of personal and federal business includes the $500,000 emergency business loan he qualified for from the Farmer's Home Loan Administration. His nursery, like others in Louisiana, suffered setbacks from a freeze last winter.

But unlike the other nursery owners, Holloway sits on a congressional committee that oversees the Farmers Home Loan Administration. He told us he never used his influence to get the loan.

RE-ARMING JAPAN — Demands from the United States for more Japanese funding of the Persian Gulf forces have given Japan an excuse to talk about rearming itself. The Japanese postwar constitution bans the use of Japanese forces in international disputes. But Japan relies heavily on Persian Gulf oil and the Bush administration wants Japan's money if not its forces to fight for that oil. Hard-liners in Japan would like to restore their country's military might, and they are beginning to argue behind closed doors that Japan must build up its defense forces to defend its new wealth.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Let's hope RICO will get bumped

"Mama mia," gasps the mortally wounded Edward G. Robinson in "Little Caesar," "is this the end of Rico?"

The end of Johnny Rico, racketeer, yes. The end of RICO, the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, has been more prolonged, but, for all that, may be at hand.

Let's hope so.

Murchison

One reason to hope so is the case of John M. Spear, a Washingtonville, N.Y., newspaper editor. Last month the Rutherford Institute, a civil and religious liberties organization, filed suit in Spear's behalf against the town officials of West Hartford, Conn. The suit crystallizes the problem with RICO. This high-minded and well-intentioned piece of federal legislation is impossibly vague. It's being deployed against people who manifestly aren't racketeers by any common-sense definition of the word.

Spear, editor of the Orange County Post, wrote an editorial wherein he blistered the police for their conduct during an April 1989, protest at a West Hartford abortion clinic. Pro-life protesters marshalled by Randall Terry's Operation Rescue had, in Spear's opinion, been unnecessarily roughed up by police. Spear titled his editorial "Northern Rednecks." He smote his adversaries hip and thigh, in the great, robust tradition of American editors since John Peter Zenger.

First Amendment or no First Amendment, the Town of West Hartford and the abortion clinic sued Spear under RICO, arguing that his editorial was an attempt to "extort" from police a guarantee of better behavior when smashing future protests.

The town and the clinic must have decided, in the sober light of day, how ridiculous this would look; thus they withdrew their charges against Spear. But Spear and his attorneys are not appeased. Their suit asks damages, attorneys' fees, and a formal declaration to the effect that Spear was within his constitutional rights in publishing "Northern Rednecks." As far as one Southern journalistic colleague is concerned, the court should award him the keys to the city.

But this does not dispose of the problems raised by RICO; it only makes RICO look scarier.

Still very much part of the RICO suit in West Hartford are Operation Rescue and the protesters who acted under its direction. These, too, are charged with racketeering. Racketeering! As if they were double-breasted mafiosi with violin cases, belching garlic, and threats to muss youse guys up a little bit, see?

RICO has been used likewise in prosecutions of securities firms, banks, even lawyers. What has any of this to do with racketeering as properly understood?

Four justices of the U.S. Supreme Court — William Rehnquist, Antonin Scalia, Anthony Kennedy, and Sandra Day O'Connor — have suggested (H.J. Inc. v. Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. 109 S. Ct. 2893) that RICO may be so vague as to be untenable.

RICO dates back to 1970. Its targets were legitimate businesses run by organized crime. If the government could prove that a "pattern of racketeering" had influenced the "conduct of an enterprise's affairs," the boom could be lowered.

This sounds fine. The problem is linguistic vagueness. A racketeer might be presumed to understand his liability under the law, but how is a newspaper editor to see himself as a potential racketeer? In the H.J. Inc. case, the Supreme Court contented itself with restating its requirement that prosecutors prove "relationship" and "continuity." Yes, yes, but these are amorphous words. What do they really mean?

Rising through the lower courts are various cases that will present the High Court the chance to effect the end of RICO by challenging its vagueness. The Second Circuit has two such cases.

Does this mean we're about to empower the chalkstripe-and-violin-case set? Hardly. There are ways — there have to be ways — to get at the mob without endangering the liberties of ordinary folk.

CHARLEY REESE

The distinct odor of repression in the air

I've arrived at a rather radical departure from my previous thinking. I now believe we should legalize drugs. The so-called drug war is being used as a cover to turn this nation into a de facto police state, which no American who values liberty should tolerate.

Reese

The operative word is legalize, not commercialize. I do not think addictive or hallucinogenic drugs are healthy, but if we wish to preserve our free society, if we wish to put an end to illicit fortunes, violence, and public corruption then we should legalize the drugs and treat drug use as a medical problem, not a criminal problem.

The addict is not the crime problem, though some poor addicts necessarily resort to theft to finance their habit. This, however, has been exaggerated and, at any rate, is caused by the legal prohibition which keeps the price high and the sources illicit.

The crime part, especially the violence, relates to the business of supplying the drugs. It is warfare between competing businesses for market share. It is paying bribes. It is robberies of suppliers and money stashes.

But in all cases the driving force behind the crime is not drug use, but greed for profits.

In one stroke, legalization would put the drug cartels and dealers out of business. They cannot sell at high prices what is readily available at cheaper prices.

The only part of the alleged drug war that has had any effect has been the educational campaign which seems to be changing people's minds. This should be continued. Tobacco is not an illegal drug, but a very effective public educational campaign is reducing its use.

Furthermore, we can legalize drugs without allowing private enterprise to commercialize and market them. Those advocates of legalization whose thinking is dictated by saving money and taxing the drugs are wrong because if you tax the cost of the drugs up high, then an illicit market will still function. Nor do you want someone in this business ever seeking to expand the market.

Drugs are a health problem and they should be approached from a public health, not from an economic or legalistic, point of view.

Obviously, the law enforcement aspect of the drug war is a flat failure, no more effective than it was against bootleggers of Prohibition. But what has finally been the decisive turning point in my thinking is a bill making its way through the Congress. Called the National Drug and Crime Emergency Act it is the most blatant assault on the Bill of Rights to come down the pike in the last 50 years.

Clearly, too many people in this country — both Republicans and Democrats, both conservatives and liberals — are developing a lust for authoritarian government. Such people, impatient of a free society and distrustful of the people, always need some alleged emergency as an excuse for their power grab.

Liberals are using the drug war as an excuse to undermine the Second Amendment's guarantee of the people's right to own firearms; conservatives are using it as an excuse to vastly expand the police powers of government and to undermine protection against illegal search and seizures and the right to due process.

The health problems caused by using narcotics or hallucinogenic drugs are not nearly so dangerous to the nation as erosion of liberty. So, let's stop this move toward a police state and the financial boondoggle of a phony drug war at the same time. We can do both by legalizing and regulating the sale and distribution of these drugs, by continuing the educational campaign against their unhealthy effects, and by providing treatment to addicts, free from any criminal labeling.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Playing cowboy's the name of the game

The three mothers, all with boy children still with single-digit ages, became concerned because all their kids did anymore was sit in front of the TV and play Nintendo.

Grizzard

"They never went outside anymore," one of the mothers, a friend, was telling me. "They just sat and Nintendo-ed all day." The three mothers were concerned that their boys were going to grow up to be pale wimps with bad eyes and become accountants.

"Not that there's anything wrong with becoming an accountant," said my friend, "but have you ever met an accountant that reminded you of Mel Gibson?" I haven't. My accountant sort of reminds me of a cross between Don Knotts and Henry Block.

He's a great guy to have around when you're looking for a way to write off a weekend trip to the Bahamas with your gorgeous new secretary as a business expense, but he wouldn't be a lot of help if you got into a saloon fight with a couple of guys wearing black hats.

So, the mothers came up with an idea.

"We went to a local department store," my friend explained, "and we bought our three boys toy guns, holsters and cowboy hats."

I thought toy guns, holsters and cowboy hats went out with pogo sticks and Chinese checkers.

And the results? "The boys haven't looked at Nintendo in weeks," she said.

"They're outside all day playing cowboy. They call themselves the Three Amigos. They look a lot healthier, their appetites have picked up, and they've all asked for ponies for their birthday."

I consider this great news. For some time I have worried that we are raising a generation of little boys who would never know the joys playing cowboy brings.

Oh, to be back astride my mother's broom, a make-believe horse I named Midnight. To pull my toy gun out of my holster and shoot Danny Thompson, who always played fair and fell when you shot him.

Some of my other friends wouldn't fall.

"I shot you," I would say.

"You missed," they would argue. "I did not," I would say, tears of anger welling in my eyes. Cowboys do occasionally cry, just not when there are girls around.

I decided to write this in hopes that other mothers of small boys would realize their children are spending far too much time Nintendo-ing and should be introduced to playing cowboy.

I would like to see cowboys come back in this nation. I believe it would help little boys learn to cope with all the problems they will face as young men, such as the federal deficit, a war between Iraq and whoever it happens to be invading at the time, and the fact women will probably be playing in the National Football League.

Playing cowboy got you outside. It got you exercise. It told you who your real friends were. It made you want to grow up to be a jet pilot or a fireman or a horse thief instead of wanting to grow up to be somebody's bean counter.

The only negative involved with playing cowboy is no matter how much you ask, your parents will never really come through with a pony and all your birthdays will come to another year and still no pony.

But the positives far outweigh that one negative. Hop-along Grizzard wouldn't give you a bum steer.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Leaders agree on release plan

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Beirut newspaper Ad-Diyar reported Monday that presidents Hafez Assad of Syria and Hashemi Rafsanjani of Iran have agreed on a step-by-step plan to free Western hostages in Lebanon.

The conservative daily, citing unnamed diplomatic sources, said Assad worked out the accord in talks with Rafsanjani last week in Tehran.

Hours later, the South Lebanon Army, an Israeli-backed militia, announced it freed 40 Shiite Moslem detainees to mark the birthday of the Prophet Mohammed, founder of Islam.

Shiite kidnappers holding most of the 13 missing Westerners, including six Americans, have repeatedly demanded the mainly Christian South Lebanon Army free the 340 Moslems it holds in exchange for releasing their captives.

In New York, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the United States welcomes the move and said it is "consistent with our position that for humanitarian reasons, all persons being detained without legal basis in the Middle East should be released immediately.

"As President Bush has indicated, the release of American hostages would help improve our relations with countries contributing to that release."

Other Westerners held are four Britons, including Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite; two West Germans and an Italian. Most are believed held by Shiite factions linked to the fundamentalist Hezbollah, or Party of God. It is Tehran's main ally in Lebanon.

Flight inquiry opens

DUMFRIES, Scotland (AP) — American and British relatives watched a video recording Monday of the last radar blips of Pan Am Flight 103, in which their loved ones were killed by a terrorist bomb.

"It was like watching them being killed," one said.

The start of the first public inquiry concentrated on events of Dec. 21, 1988, when the Boeing 747 exploded over the nearby town of Lockerbie, claiming 270 lives.

As family members watched video screens in the courtroom, air traffic controller Alan Topp traced the final moments of the square blips on a green radar screen that indicated Flight 103 until the moment the plane exploded.

This single square gradually multiplied as the radar picked up separate pieces of the disintegrating aircraft falling to earth 31,000 feet below.

"The replay was horrible," said Dr. Jim Swire, who heads the group of British relatives.

"From the moment the bomb went off, all hell must have broken loose. We know the plane turned on its left side and went into a vertical dive. What we don't know is how long they survived. That's what's worrying us," he said.

Job program halted

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India's Supreme Court ordered the government on Monday to halt its controversial job quota program, and appealed for an end to protests against the policy that have killed dozens of people.

"We hope that the law and order situation will immediately improve," Chief Justice Ranganath Mishra said after issuing the ruling.

The court's temporary injunction remains in effect until the panel rules on the legality of the quotas. Press Trust of India said the court could begin to hear arguments on the affirmative action program as early as Oct. 25.

At least 70 people have died in a rash of riots and student suicides since Prime Minister V.P. Singh announced Aug. 7 that almost half of all government jobs would be reserved for lower-caste Hindus.

Quake shakes island

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — An earthquake of moderate intensity shook houses and buildings across Puerto Rico on Monday, but there were no reports of injuries or damage.

The quake registered 4.5 on the Richter scale and was centered near the coastal city of Humacao, 30 miles southeast of San Juan, according to the U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo.

The Seismological Survey in Cayey, Puerto Rico, said the temblor struck at 2:36 p.m. EDT, lasted five seconds and was felt as far away as St. John in the U.S. Virgin Islands, 50 miles east of Puerto Rico.

It was strongest in Puerto Rico, particularly the San Juan metropolitan area, said Allan Smith, director of the Seismological Network of Puerto Rico at the University of Mayaguez.

Germans ready for party of century

By Kevin Costelloe
Associated Press Writer

WEST BERLIN — Germans on Monday got ready for the nation's party of the century — a celebration of unity that could be disrupted by thousands of radical street-fighters in Berlin.

In Hamburg, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said the powerful new country will have to take on a greater international role.

"Everyone must know that there is no withdrawing into a comfortable niche of world politics," Kohl told a convention of his Christian Democratic Union.

In other developments:

■ East German authorities began releasing some prisoners under an amnesty program designed to make amends for sentences imposed by the Communist system.

■ Tens of thousands of Poles flooded into West Berlin, on one last, wild shopping spree before visa requirements are imposed on unification day.

When the clock strikes midnight Tuesday, the two German states will become a single, sovereign nation, ending more than 45 years of postwar separation.

What started with church-sponsored protests in the gritty East German industrial city of Leipzig last year has led to the merger many had considered only a nostalgic dream.

The result: an economic powerhouse of nearly 78 million people in the heart of Europe.

Kohl is given much of the credit for bringing about unification less than 11 months after the opening of the Berlin Wall. The chancellor was able to calm Polish and Soviet fears enough to remove potentially sticky obstacles coming from the East. That included an unusual agreement to let Soviet troops stay in what is now East Germany until 1994.

At the same time, Kohl joined with President Francois Mitterrand of France in pledging an even greater push for European integration in the West.

Kohl will lead the celebrations starting Tuesday night in front of the Reichstag, the historic German parliament building that still bears the scars of fighting between Soviet and German soldiers at the end of World War II.

Police were bracing for trouble from thousands of leftist and rightist radicals.

The mass-circulation Bild newspaper said that 10,000 leftists were expected to go on a rampage, breaking store windows and looting merchandise. Police fear they will clash with rightists who have also vowed to march through Berlin.

WWII victors suspend rights

NEW YORK (AP) — The four victorious powers of World War II decided Monday to suspend their rights over Berlin and Germany, allowing the divided nation to become fully sovereign from the moment of reunification this week.

Foreign ministers of the United States, Soviet Union, Britain and France signed a document suspending operation of the rights they have exercised in Germany since the war ended in 1945.

The rights will formally terminate when all four powers have ratified a Sept. 12 Moscow treaty that paved the way for reunification Wednesday.

"Those strokes of a pen bring to an end an era of discord and division," said President Bush at the opening of a two-day, 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

"We rejoice with the German people that their nation is united once more and we will soon welcome a united Germany into (the conference's) community of states," Bush said.

The conference is an outgrowth of the 1975 Helsinki conference on European security that the nations intend to use as a framework for cooperation in the post-Cold War era.

Bush speech raises hopes for settlement

By John Wallach
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

UNITED NATIONS — President Bush's overtures to Iraq in a speech to the United Nations raised new hopes Monday that the Persian Gulf crisis can be settled without a war.

The Iraqi ambassador to the United Nations, Abdul Amin Al-Anbari, called the U.S. leader's remarks "hopeful" and canceled a U.N. address scheduled for later Monday. Al-Anbari said his superiors in Baghdad had ordered the speech delayed pending further instructions.

"We are studying the (Bush) speech. It's moving now," he said, referring to the diplomatic stalemate that developed after Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2, triggering a large-scale U.S. military deployment in Saudi Arabia.

In an interview with Hearst Newspapers, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said Bush's U.N. address was a "positive, strong speech" and that the U.S. leader's pledge to "seek a peaceful outcome — a diplomatic outcome" had provided a new opening to test whether Iraq is seriously interested in a settlement of the crisis.

His remarks were echoed by Jordan's foreign minister, who said Iraq "is looking very seriously" at a peace initiative suggested last week by France.

Shevardnadze said "we've got to give it two to three weeks" to see if Iraqi President Saddam Hussein now responds constructively to the new American overtures.

"We cannot expect results overnight. We have to build this brick by brick," said the Soviet foreign minister.

Shevardnadze said "what I found important was that your president mentioned the possibility of Iraqi-Kuwaiti negotiations and also mentioned the need for negotiations on all the issues of the Middle East, not just Kuwait." Bush, in his speech, called on Iraq and Kuwait "to settle their differences permanently," in effect conceding that Iraq had some legitimate grievances against Kuwait.

In an Aug. 12 "peace" initiative, issued 10 days after Iraqi forces invaded Kuwait, Iraq linked negotiations over Kuwait with demands that Israel end its occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Bush has repeatedly declared that the issues of Kuwait and the Palestinian problem cannot be linked without seeming to reward Iraq for its aggression.

While Bush repeated Monday that "the world's key task must be to demonstrate that aggression will not be tolerated or rewarded," he also underscored that "in the aftermath of Iraq's unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait, I truly believe there may be opportunities," among them "for all the states and peoples of the region to settle the conflict that divides the Arabs from Israel."

Shevardnadze also said that Saddam Hussein should be encouraged by Bush's assertion that America does not intend to keep its forces in Saudi Arabia "for one day longer than is necessary."

Poll finds Americans divided on response

By Ruth Sinai
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Americans are about evenly divided on the question of how strong the U.S. military response should be if Iraq attacks American forces in the Persian Gulf, according to a poll released Monday.

Of the 1,000 people surveyed, 49 percent said the United States should respond with the limited force necessary for defense, while 47 percent said it should launch an all-out war. Four percent said the United States shouldn't respond with force.

But a majority — 69 percent — said the United States should give the international economic sanctions against Iraq time to work before considering war. Twenty percent said the United States should not start war under any circumstances.

The survey was commissioned by Americans Talk Security, a bipartisan organization of pollsters who gauge attitudes to matters of national security.

Forty percent of those polled said U.S. forces should remain in the gulf region a year or more; 22 percent said they should remain "as long as it takes;" and 6 percent said U.S. troops should start leaving immediately.

If U.S. forces start to leave, 66 percent of the respondents said the United States should negotiate an agreement with Saudi Arabia and other Gulf states to have a permanent deployment of American troops in the region.

Israel to distribute gas masks to nation's 4 million residents

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel will start distributing gas masks to its entire population of 4.7 million citizens next week following Iraqi threats to attack the Jewish state with chemical weapons, the army announced Monday.

Each kit contains a gas mask, a syringe with a nerve gas antidote and purifying powder. Instructions will be in Hebrew, Arabic, English and Russian.

The announcement followed assessments of an increased threat of war in the Persian Gulf and foreign reports suggesting that Israel has decided to absorb Iraq's possible first strike without taking preemptive action.

Distribution was advanced by two months and ended a heated public debate. Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Dan Shomron said Sunday it was originally planned to issue gas masks in December.

Officials had feared an immediate distribution of gas masks could panic the Israelis or send Iraq an incorrect message that Israel planned an attack.

The army sought to allay public concern, saying "distribution of gas masks in no way whatsoever constitutes a change to an emergency status."

"The purpose ... is to transfer the kits to citizens' homes to shorten the time of distribution, should a need arise."

Young law school graduate overcomes trials of new job

By David Morris
Staff Writer

L.A. Law it's not.

Danna Reynolds, assistant city attorney, readily admits that being a prosecutor in Midland Municipal Court — traffic court — does not exactly smack of glamor.

But it entails more than imposing fines on speeders and jaywalkers, she is quick to point out.

"We did have a cow-at-large case one time," she said. "I went around joking for days that it must have been a moo-ving violation."

Not as spine-tingling, perhaps, as sending serial killers and drug kingpins to the Big House. But it's a start.

"One of the reasons that I thought this position was so attractive was because it allows you to get a lot of trial experience real fast," she said. "I think I'd been here two weeks when I did my first jury trial by myself. It's kind of 'sink-or-swim.'"

Ms. Reynolds, 26, decided to take the Midland plunge nine months ago. A 1988 graduate of the University of Texas at Austin School of Law, she received her attorney's license last fall after working several months as a legislative aide. The next step was to find a position as a prosecuting attorney.

Midland City Attorney David Reagan had one to offer, and doesn't regret his decision to give it to Ms. Reynolds.

"Since she's come to work for me, Danna has proved herself to be an outstanding attorney," he said. "She has an excellent working knowledge of the law and a very good ability to communicate with and get along with people" — even those facing prosecution.

"A criminal proceeding is not always a pleasant experience for people in our community — it's something they don't cherish having to go through, and Danna is able to handle these situations very well."

Reagan said he didn't have to "sell" Ms. Reynolds on the idea of coming to Midland to start her legal career, but she said she hesitated before making the decision.

"I thought, 'who wants to move to West Texas?'" she said. But Midland's friendly atmosphere soon convinced her that this was the place to be.

"It was the people at first," she said. "I thought the place would be something I would just endure, but it hasn't been bad at all. The weather's great."

And she doesn't even miss Austin — with its trees and lakes — where at the University of Texas she also earned her undergraduate degree.

"Midland is a more conservative town (than Austin), and I like that," she said. "And it's got an airport. What more can you ask for?"

Well, job satisfaction, for one thing.

And Ms. Reynolds seems to have plenty of that.

"It's a lot of fun," said Ms. Reynolds, who is one of two Municipal Court prosecutors. "There's always something new coming through — somebody's always got a different story to tell."

For example, the teen-agers cited for illegal possession of beer who explained that they should be let off the hook because the brew was flat.

"Like that was supposed to make a difference," she said. "Kids are the worst because they've just taken Government and they think they're big law experts."

"What we're looking for is convictions," she said. "That's the bottom line. We're here to make sure no violations of the law go unpunished."

Traffic tickets, Class C misdemeanors and violations of the city code — she prosecutes them all.

"There are enough ambulance chasers already," said Ms. Reynolds, who added that she hopes to someday prosecute felony cases. "I feel like criminal prosecution is one area of the law where you can really make a difference. For me, that's the attraction of it.

"And let's face it — you're never going to be out of work. There's always going to be bad guys."

Midland bests state with crime decline

■ Midland's overall crime rate fell just over 14 percent from January 1989 to January 1990 — more than three times the decrease reported statewide.

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Led by a 35 percent decrease in reported burglaries, Midland outpaced statewide crime trends with an overall 14.4 percent decrease in its crime rate, the Texas Department of Public Safety reported Monday.

In figures that compared crime reports during the first six months of this year with the same period in 1989, Texas enjoyed a two percent crime rate decrease overall, but also saw worrisome hikes in violent offenses.

The local figures were first released by Midland law enforcement agencies in July. The figures then were forwarded to the DPS which compiled the statewide report.

In addition to the Midland numbers, the DPS reported an overall 3 percent decrease in Odessa's crime rate. Within that statistic, burglaries were down from 1,474 to 1,319 and thefts decreased from 4,007 to 3,947. However, assaults were up from 119 to 214.

Statewide DPS reports indicated that murder was up 7.7 percent, incidence of rape increased 12 percent, robberies increased 14.7 percent and aggravated assault rose 14.6 percent.

DPS Director Joe E. Milner called the increases "unsettling."

"There is always speculation as to why crime tends to go up and down," he said. "Many variables enter into statewide crime patterns, but in the final analysis, no one really knows."

In Midland, some violent crimes showed slight increases. Twenty-three rapes were reported in 1989, compared to 26 this year. In addition, 129 assaults were reported last year, compared to 143 this year.

However, two murders were reported during the first six months of this year, compared to three during the same period last year, and robberies were down from 57 to 49 during the two periods.

Police Chief Richard Czech said the 35 percent decrease in burglaries, down from 1,059 to 694, is the main reason for Midland's good showing compared to statewide figures.

He said the police department has made "a real concentrated effort" to address the city's burglary problem. "We have managed, in cooperation with the county attorney and the judges here to put some people away for a while," he said.

While attributing more than 90 percent of Midland crime to drug users or sellers, the chief stopped short of declaring the drug problem over in the city.

"I hate to be too optimistic," he said.

The police chief said he had discussed the positive statistics with Sheriff Gary Painter recently, "and we both felt a little bit like we may be seeing a little daylight."

Czech also attributed the decrease to heightened public awareness of crime, pointing out that service calls on the Midland Police Department are up.

In other categories of crime, Midland saw a slight decrease in the number of theft reports, from 1,567 to 1,484, and a slight increase in motor vehicle thefts, from 157 to 167.

Federal employees spared

By David Morris

Local federal employees breathed a little easier Monday upon learning that their paychecks — for the time being at least — were not going to fall victim to the Gramm-Rudman budget ax.

Having arrived at a compromise budget agreement, Congress approved a stopgap spending measure Sunday which postponed federal budget cuts required by the 1985 Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law.

Those cuts — up to $179 billion — would have gone into effect Monday and required federal offices nationwide to furlough employees in order to save costs.

Patricia Petosky, air traffic manager at Midland International Airport, said she and the 24 other FAA employees there had been prepared for the worst.

"Everybody who was going to be on furlough (Monday) knew it," she said, adding that she wished leaders in Washington would not have taken until the 11th hour to reach a budget compromise.

"The closer it got to the deadline, the less confidence we had that there would be an agreement," she said.

She said FAA furlough plans called for all employees to take off one day per week without pay until budget reduction goals were met. The cutback in hours was expected to cause reductions in commercial air traffic at the country's major airports.

Marcy Blauvelt, supervisor of Midland International administrative services, said she had a "feeling all along that it (a budget

By Myra Lee Salcedo

By 10 a.m. Monday, the downstairs area of First United Methodist Church (FUMC) is filled with the aroma of fresh baked muffins and coffee. The room is hopping with the lively sounds of turn of the century favorites from the Gay 90s era and brightly colored bowling pins are set up in anticipation of bowling enthusiasts.

While the homey atmosphere, which features live musical entertainment, appears to be in readiness for a senior citizen social, it is actually the setting for an unusual day care for adults.

The church, 305 Baird, is the site of an Alzheimer's/Related Disorders Care Program every Monday from 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m. The program not only offers care givers a weekly respite to run errands while someone else tends to their loved ones, it offers persons who are not capable of independent living a chance to socialize.

"This is the only place my mother has been since I began taking care of her in November," said Elizabeth Knight. "I've been bringing her here since the first day it opened (Sept. 10). She's loves coming here and doesn't want to leave once we get here."

Idell Gunnin, Ms. Knight's mother, an impeccably dressed woman with her gray hair cut stylishly short, is known as the dancer of the group. As soon as she enters the room she greets everyone with a smile, hands her daughter her cane and steps lightly to the music.

"At home my mother won't walk three steps without her cane," Ms. Knight said. "Once we get here, she forgets all about it."

Karen Reed — a licensed nurse, program director and health care administrator — said several of her charges have become more physically active since participating in the program. The church's day care offers guided activities for persons who are mentally confused or experiencing memory loss — some of the effects of the Alzheimer's disease.

Brad Kisner, director of music ministries for the for the church, accompanies Ms. Olsen on piano. Ms. Olsen said even when she forgets the words of songs, she can remember the tune. The Alzheimer's/Related Disorders Care Program is offered 9:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. on Mondays. At right, Ms. Olsen later tries a few dance steps as she participates in the social program. Backers of state's governor candidates use meeting to air out classroom views

■ Clayton Williams' spokesman says his candidate would abolish the state's 'ladder' system of merit raises for school teachers.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Gubernatorial candidate viewpoints on education were presented by representatives of Ann Richards and Clayton Williams Monday at Bonham Elementary School.

The presentation followed the Midland PTA-City Council meeting, which hosted the forum to air the candidates' views concerning education.

Mike Morrow, a former educator representing Clayton Williams, said he was proud to be permitted to speak for "the next governor of Texas."

Morrow said Williams is a family man, "not a career politician."

"Clayton does not pretend to have all the answers," Morrow said. "He knows the importance of meeting a payroll, however, and how to prioritize in the public and private sector."

He said Williams was intent on restoring local control to school districts and "stopping mandates from Austin." He said Williams' position is to cut through all the red tape produced by "too many committees" in the "Austin arena," including the House Education Committee, the Senate Education Committee, and the State Board of Education.

Morrow said Williams wants to see the state's teacher career ladder (a merit bonus program established in 1984 to identify and reward quality teachers) abolished and parental school choice implemented.

Pat Cole, Ann Richards' representative, said Ms. Richards would want the career ladder abolished only if it can't be adequately changed "to do what it set out to do."

Morrow said Williams is backing vouchers — state tuition checks to students so they can attend the school of their choice.

Ms. Cole said the issue of school choice should be left to the individual school district. "It's a local issue and shouldn't become a state-mandated issue," she said.

Ms. Cole also said that federal law would still require the public schools to provide for the education of children with disabilities, even if they attended private schools.

She said allowing all children to attend public or private schools on vouchers would take money from the public schools.

"Taxpayers' money should pay for public education, not private education," she said, "particularly when public schools are in a financial crisis."

She said that rather than putting a cap on the amount of money rich school districts may spend, or giving solely to poor districts, there should be a compromise between both rich and poor districts.

"We should also look at tax reforms before raising property taxes," Ms. Cole said. "We should look at the franchise tax and reforming other taxes before increasing the burden on local property owners."

Morrow said, "Williams is going to veto any new tax bill that comes up. He is going to challenge the status quo, and he really means it."

Ms. Cole said, "Ann Richards will not look you in the eye and tell you that she will veto every bill which comes across her desk. But she will not — and does not —

Bayoud active in 'Feel the Power' campaign

AUSTIN (AP) — A voter turnout campaign aimed at young people was launched by Texas Secretary of State George Bayoud and other leaders.

"People all over the world are putting their lives on the line for the right to self-government. In Texas and the United States, we need to be a role model when it comes to electoral participation," said Bayoud. "We need to stress to our young people the importance of participating in the democratic process."

"Feel the Power Week" was touted Monday by Bayoud; Joe M. Rodgers, former U.S. ambassador to France; Travis County voter registrar Cecelia Burke; and C.J. Silas, president of Phillips Petroleum.

Alzheimer's disease, which attacks the brain, results in impaired memory, confusion and behavior patterns which may socially isolate persons with the disease.

Persons with related forms of dementia may exhibit the same symptoms of confusion and disorientation. Because of this, persons with these disorders need constant supervision.

"My mother can't be left alone," Ms. Knight said. "She can't remember what she has done 30 seconds ago. She has a tendency to fall and get hurt if she is left alone. She fell and broke her jaw before she came to live with me."

Although persons with Alzheimer's disease, in certain stages of the disease, may need supervision, they still are capable of participating in games and sing-alongs.

Ms. Reed said the social activities help to "draw people out and keep active."

Jimmie "Judge" Harris, a former Midland justice of the peace, has a direct aim when it comes to tossing bean bags. When President George Bush comes on the television screen, however, he is the first to sit down to watch the broadcast.

"Judge is still very politically-minded," Ms. Reed said. "He is always polite and enjoys socializing with everyone. He was up and dressed in his suit at 5:30 a.m. this morning since he knew it was Monday."

Ms. Knight said her mother also knows the program is offered on Mondays. "Every day she asks: 'Is it Monday?' "

Caring for a parent with Alzheimer's disease reverses the parent-child role, according to Ms. Knight, who is reluctant to leave once she brings her mother to the day care. "She gets frightened when I leave," she said.

Ms. Knight stays until her mother is settled in, watching entertainers Mary Proctor and Cindy Hammond play guitar and sing. While Ms. Knight is still hesitant to leave, she admits she has "a list of things to do" in her purse. She said she likes to see her mother "enjoy herself."

"This day care gives Mother a chance to be with people her own age," Ms. Knight added. "She can get a cup of coffee in the morning. It's just like being at home for her, but it gets us both out of the house."

Cost of the Monday day care is $18. Lunch is included. The day care facility has a full kitchen and a screened-off area with a bed. It is staffed by Ms. Reed and trained volunteers. The ratio of patients to staff is no more than three-to-one. The activities offered also include a rest time and the facility has elevator access. The staff is prepared to handle personal care services, but cannot accommodate those who are violent or bedridden.

"We are very happy that it did," she added, saying that airport operations are expected to continue as usual.

Tom Kirspel, Midland's senior resident FBI agent, said he had not shared Ms. Blauvelt's confidence.

"I was quite concerned," he said. "We had been instructed by the Department of Justice to anticipate furloughs."

Another Department of Justice employee, Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery, said he didn't believe Congress would have allowed Gramm-Rudman to go into effect.

"It's happened in the past," Beery said of threatened furloughs. According to the President's Office of Management and Budget, Gramm-Rudman has not triggered any furloughs in its five-year history.

John V. Wright, meteorologist-in-charge at Midland's National Weather Service office, said he was pleased that Congress did not allow the cuts, which he said would have been "disastrous."

NWS officials had predicted that the cuts would have required reducing operating hours in Midland by half — leaving the region without severe weather information.

"It would cause so many problems I really didn't think that Congress would allow Gramm-Rudman to go into effect," said Wright, who oversees 14 employees.

support raising state taxes."

Ms. Cole concentrated on Ms. Richards' ability to manage finances, and the importance of working with legislators to draw up a school reform plan before the courts step in Sept. 1. Morrow concentrated on issues concerning providing quality education.

"We don't need to keep throwing more money into the current system," Morrow said. "Massive consolidation may not be acceptable to us, but we must talk in terms of change. Clayton Williams is a new kind of leader for new times in Texas."

Ms. Cole said, "Ann Richards, as state treasurer, has earned more than $2 billion of interest for Texas. She understands the budget and says she works to get five quarters worth from every dollar. She wants to stem the drop out rate and the teacher drop out rate by paying all teachers the average national salary."

Morrow said Williams would probably select a Commissioner of Education who is "not bound by tradition."

Ms. Cole countered, "I've heard Williams say myself that he would endorse a Republican who is a proponent of open choice. Ann Richards will endorse someone experienced with the education system who will listen to parents and teachers, not a bureaucrat."

Both representatives said their candidates were concerned about drug problems and social issues affecting students' ability to perform well in school.

Before the representatives spoke, Joe Baressi, Midland Independent School District superintendent, announced that with the purchase of additional property near Lee High School, "all the conditions are in place for a closed campus."

Baressi said even though a contract had been signed, processes to transfer ownership are not complete. "My recommendation is that we plan to close the campus," he said. The superintendent said Midlanders would have a chance to express their views in a public forum before the school board.

Texas delegation split over federal budget

By James R. Owen
Hearst News Service

STATE

WASHINGTON — Texas lawmakers of both parties, like most of Congress, found plenty to be unhappy about Monday in the budget agreement forged between the White House and congressional leaders Sunday.

Democrats complained that the accord favors the wealthy and hurts the working and middle classes, while Republicans insisted that the agreement doesn't cut federal spending deeply enough.

Most Texans on Capitol Hill said they were leaning against the accord, but had not made up their minds about whether to support the package of $134 billion in new taxes and widespread cuts in federal programs.

The state's two senators, Democrat Lloyd Bentsen and Republican Phil Gramm, were key negotiators in the frantic negotiations that led to the last-minute budget accord Sunday, and thus are both supporting it, even if reluctantly.

There was bipartisan consensus in the delegation on some issues: most Texas lawmakers opposed the accord's sharp increase in gasoline taxes, which they said would hurt Texas. But most favored the agreement's proposed $4 billion energy incentive package, which would grant tax credits and incentives to the state's beleaguered oil and gas industries.

But consensus broke down after that.

Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, was one of several Republicans who said he would oppose the current package on the House floor.

"This is the largest proposed tax increase in American history," he said. "There's no justification for it, and they ought to go back and do it over altogether."

Republican colleagues Dick Armey of Denton and Larry Combest of Lubbock also denounced the pact, saying they could not support it in its present form.

"This package reminds me of an old country-and-western song, the Democrats got the gold mine and we got the shaft," Armey said.

Many Democratic lawmakers said they were still studying the agreement, but conceded they were leaning against it.

"I have deep reservations about this proposal because I feel that as presently written, it is unfair and unjust," said Rep. Jack Brooks, a Beaumont Democrat who chairs the House Judiciary Committee. "I think we have a lot more work to do."

Brooks said domestic spending cuts in Medicare, unemployment insurance and agriculture entitlements would hit poor and elderly Americans the hardest.

Medicare reform emerged as one of the more controversial elements of the accord, which would force Medicare patients to pay more of their doctor bills. The annual deductible would double in two years from $75 to $150; coverage for clinical testing would drop from full to 80 percent; and monthly premiums would rise from $28.60 to about $34 next year. By 1995, they would rise to about $54 a month.

The proposed hike in gasoline taxes, a gradual increase from 9 cents a gallon today to 21 cents by July 1, was attacked roundly by Texas lawmakers.

"Our state will be the hardest hit by these new energy taxes," said Rep. Jack Fields, a Houston Republican.

"With a recession coming up against us, it's a terrible time to be raising fuel taxes," he said.

Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, was more cautious about the controversial accord, whose impact on Texas agriculture was his foremost concern.

The budget proposal would slash $13 billion from farm-support payments to farmers nationwide over five years. Texas farmers, who get nearly 11 percent of all federal agricultural subsidies, can be expected to absorb much of the cuts, particularly wheat, rice and cotton farmers in Texas, Stenholm said.

But, he said, "I'm keeping my powder very, very dry. Let us not forget that we still have sequester hanging over our heads at midnight Friday. We've got to look at this package versus the alternatives."

Black chamber backs bond

The Midland Black Chamber of Entreprenuers (MBCE) Monday night heard a report on the upcoming Midland Independent School District's 24.49 million bond issue from MBCE vice president James Fuller, who also serves as president of the MISD board of trustees.

"We are supporting the school bond issue," Fuller said. "It is badly needed and there has been standing room only at the PTA meetings we've attended. There is a lot of support for the issue."

Fuller said he believed more people were supporting the proposal than opposing it.

He added that the proposal was scaled down from $30 million to $24.49 million, which is "the bare bones" of what is needed to ease some overcrowding at Midland schools.

In other business, the tickets for the Alvin Ailey Repertory Ensemble, which will perform at the Yucca Theatre February 22 at 8 p.m., are set to go on sale Sunday, October 7 at the MBCE office, 2707 N. Big Spring.

Tickets can be purchased for $22.50 each from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. on a first-come, first-serve basis. "It's best to get the tickets early, because they will sell fast and we probably won't have them back for another five years," said MBCE president Robynne Fuller. A reception is being planned after the performance.

The Chamber is also planning a Texas Instruments (TI) procurement program seminar on October 27. The program will consist of a primary speaker from TI who will discuss TI's procurement program. There are two additional speakers planned, Jeff Ware and Dolores Connor. "We extend an invitation to all the surrounding chambers to come and hear the program," Mrs. Fuller said.

Assault suspect held on $100,000 bond

Staff Report

A man arrested Sunday has been charged in connection with the rape last week of a Midland woman, officials said Monday.

Darrin Lin Coffin, 31, was charged Monday with aggravated sexual assault and ordered held on $100,000 bond by Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine.

Midland Police Department Lt. Jerry Morris said Coffin is the suspect in a rape which occurred Sept. 27 at the Autumn Chase Apartments, 3814 N. Holiday Hill Road.

According to reports, the 24-year-old victim was entering her apartment around 3:50 a.m. last Thursday when a man approached her and asked her if a particular person lived there.

After the victim said no and turned to open the door, the man reportedly forced her inside at knife-point and sexually assaulted her, officers said.

Police arrested Coffin at 3:15 a.m. Sunday after receiving reports of two attempted sexual assaults at apartment complexes in northwest Midland. Officers located Coffin based on a description of his vehicle provided by the father of one of the intended victims, reports indicated.

Coffin was charged Sunday with two counts of attempted aggravated sexual assault and bond was set at $50,000 on each count, according to reports.

Coffin remained in the Midland County Jail Monday evening, jail officials said. They said Coffin is serving a term of probation in Ector County on an unknown conviction.

Odessa escapees apprehended

Staff Report

ODESSA — Police reported that the second of two men who escaped last week from the city jail has been returned to custody.

Humberto Briones, 29, turned himself in to probation officers in Roswell, N.M., at 11:39 a.m. local time Monday, Odessa police officials said.

Briones was being held in Odessa as a fugitive from New Mexico justice when he escaped on Sept. 26. Escaping with him through the chain-link roof of an exercise enclosure was Michael McMurray, 25, police said.

McMurray was captured Sept. 27 at an Odessa residence.

An Odessa Police Department spokesman said he wasn't sure whether Briones would be returned to Odessa to face escape charges.

Clements sees strides made in drug war

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas is making big strides in the war against illegal drugs, Gov. Bill Clements said Monday.

"Clearly, our state is in a far stronger position in the war on crime and drugs than it was four years ago," Clements said.

"We have made tremendous progress in the past four years ... And believe me, much remains to be accomplished. We cannot relax our vigilance," he said.

Speaking to a leadership conference of the Texas War on Drugs organization, the governor said his administration has made crime fighting a top priority since taking office in 1987.

He said the state's prison system has been expanded significantly, noting that a federal court finally ended years of monitoring the prisons. Some 30,000 prison beds are being added to the system.

In addition, he said, the Legislature has approved a number of initiatives that reduce legal technicalities in criminal cases and enhanced organized crime laws.

Career matters will progress smoothly throughout November. The financial picture shows real improvement in January 1991. Although employment or labor difficulties may slow you down at times in early spring, romance will provide many fun moments. Married life has its stresses, but nothing you and your mate cannot handle. Plan a very special trip for two!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get together with influential people who can steer business your way. Make a special effort to settle your recent differences with mate or partner. A blowup should be avoided at all costs.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A close friend points out your need to brush up on certain skills. Do not take offense. This person has your best interests at heart. Member of opposite sex's motives may be questioned.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Settle a financial matter early so you will not be distracted during later business negotiations. It may be difficult to extricate yourself from a romantic entanglement. Be diplomatic!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Idealism is at the center of a business decision. Those who work behind the scenes could hold the trump card. Proceed at your own risk. Enjoy the arts, music and at-home entertainment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Pace yourself to keep up with increased demands. Your instincts work in your favor. An attractive member of the opposite sex holds the key to greater financial or emotional security.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Showcase your creative talents to impress prominent people. You will be honored for the way you handle yourself in a crisis situation. Travel will give you a wonderful new perspective.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your ambitions could shift dramatically, giving you new freedom. Treat an authority figure as a friend, not a foe. Religion and philosophy suddenly become more important to you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Those who work in offices will need all their powers of concentration today. A lunch date may have to be postponed. Steer clear of high-strung people. Evening social activities are inviting.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Face a difficult situation head-on and you will find a solution more quickly. A relative or friend comes to your aid in a meaningful way. Stick to your diet and exercise resolutions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Finishing routine tasks early in the day will put you into a more productive state of mind. Avoid acting on impulse! Your loved ones expect you to make constructive decisions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Guard against haste and carelessness today. Love and romance dominate your thoughts. Psychic phenomena hold new interest. A timely idea or hunch could prove very profitable.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Listen to those who are in a position to know what they are talking about. You can save yourself financial woes by checking your bank balance. A nice surprise is in store!

Norway, led by a fine young talent in 20-year-old Geir Helgemo, won the 1990 European Junior Championship held in Neumunster, West Germany. Israel finished a distant second. Helgemo won the brilliancy prize for this effort as South against Finland.

South's two-club opening was artificial and forcing, and West's two-no-trump overcall showed an undisclosed two-suiter. The rest of the auction was normal. Note that South displayed fine judgment in selecting three no trump as the final contract, rather than looking for an 11-trick contract in diamonds, which had no play as the cards lay.

West led a low club to East's jack. Declarer held up the ace one round, but took it when East woodenly continued with the queen. (East should have shifted to a high spade.) Declarer now had nine tricks if the queen of diamonds was guarded no more than once, but the auction made that unlikely. So declarer chose to come to nine tricks via five diamonds, two hearts and two black aces.

To accomplish that, declarer needed to force an entry to dummy, so at trick three Helgemo cashed the ace of hearts and then led a low diamond to the nine! Now South could not be stopped from getting to the table with the jack of diamonds to cash the king of hearts, and then return to his hand to cash the rest of his tricks.

To cash even one high diamond first would have led to defeat. When declarer then concedes a trick to the queen of diamonds, East could shift to the king of spades and continue the suit if necessary. Declarer would then either have to give up his entry to the king of hearts or be shut out of his hand.

Professionals selected to portray Lucy and Desi in television movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Despite nationwide casting calls for unknowns to portray the late Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz, a pair of professionals were introduced Monday as stars for CBS' "Lucy and Desi: Before the Laughter."

Following auditions of "a couple thousand" Lucy lookalikes and desiring Desis, producer Larry Thompson said he selected Frances Fisher and Maurice Benard to play the famous husband and wife.

Miss Fisher, who bears little resemblance to Miss Ball without makeup, has appeared in the television movies "Cold Sassy Tree," "Home" and "Broken Vows."

Benard, who plays Nico Kelly on the soap opera "All My Children," looks somewhat like a young Arnaz. He said he had a conga that he was learning to play at home.

"There are a lot of talented people who wanted to be Lucy and Desi," Thompson said of the search for the lead roles. "'I Love Lucy' is more than a title."

The heavily publicized casting calls in Los Angeles, Miami and New York, he said, were not a public-relations stunt but helped "form what we were looking for."

He said one actor discovered in one of the calls will play a band member in the film, due to be broadcast in February.

Miss Fisher and Benard told reporters they were not concerned about playing two of the best-kown actors in television history. They added that they were not bothered by concerns about the CBS project expressed by Lucie Arnaz, Lucy's and Desi's daughter.

Thompson said he was close to signing another pair of actors to play Fred and Ethel Mertz.

LONDON (AP) — Sir David Lean, the 82-year-old director whose films have won 27 Academy Awards, is planning to marry for the sixth time, his lawyer said Monday.

Lean will wed 51-year-old interior designer Sandra Cooke before Christmas, said attorney Michael Gee.

The couple met five years ago in the frozen-food department of Harrods department store where Ms. Cooke went up to Lean and asked when his next film was due, said The Daily Mail's columnist Nigel Dempster.

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Scott Heimdal, who was held kidnapped earlier this year while working in a South American jungle, has married his Ecuadorian girlfriend and is settling back into a life "as normal as can be."

Heimdal, 27, married Sandra Durango on Saturday. Other than the groom forgetting his dress shoes on the way to church, the wedding went off without a hitch. The bride's family traveled to Peoria from their home in Quito, Ecuador.

Frances Fisher and Maurice Benard pose in front of a poster featuring themselves as Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz at a news conference in Los Angeles Monday morning. They were chosen after an extensive talent search to portray Lucy and Desi in the CBS movie "Lucy and Desi: Before the Laughter."

Heimdal was working for a mining company when he was taken captive April 28 in the jungle along the Colombian-Ecuadoran border. He was released two months later after his parents bought his freedom for $60,000, raised in a frantic four-day fund drive.

"Life is as normal as it can be, getting married and all," he said. But he was having trouble finding a job.

"I'll stay in Peoria if I can," said Heimdal, who specializes in computers. "With getting married, it's very frustrating not being able to find work in Peoria."

MARCH AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Air Force Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, the "Iron Eagle" who relayed the order to drop atomic bombs on Japan and directed the Berlin Airlift, died Monday. He was 83.

Lemay

LeMay, who was once quoted as threatening to bomb North Vietnam "back into the Stone Age" and ran for vice president in 1972 as George Wallace's running mate, died of a heart attack at the 22nd Strategic Hospital, said Sgt. Steve Mahnke.

"He was one of the real American heroes of World War II," Wallace said.

The former four-star general who built the Strategic Air Command into a global strike force would have been 84 on Nov. 15.

Panel wants restaurants to disclose nutrition content too

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposals to require food manufacturers to disclose the nutrition content of their products should be extended to restaurants, a committee of experts recommended last week.

The Institute of Medicine panel also said nutrition labeling should be required for fresh and frozen meat and poultry.

Food-labeling proposals on Capitol Hill and by the Food and Drug Administration already include many of the provisions the panel recommended for packaged food, seafood and produce, but neither the pending legislation nor the draft regulations addresses meat, poultry or restaurants.

The institute is an affiliate of the National Academy of Sciences, the congressionally chartered private body established to provide scientific advice to government agencies.

The National Restaurant Association quickly registered its opposition to the committee's recommendations, saying most fast-food and full-service restaurants already provide nutrition information voluntarily.

"As restaurant operators we firmly believe our customers have a right to know what nutrients are in the foods they eat," said association President Mike Hurst. "Our concern is not with providing such information. Rather, it is with how the information is conveyed."

Officials at the Department of Agriculture, which regulates meat and poultry, had said they were waiting for the report before making any labeling proposals.

Jim Greene, a spokesman for the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said officials had not yet read the report but "we plan to evaluate the specifics and plan what course to take in the near future."

FDA spokesman Jeff Nesbit said the agency planned to consider nutrition-content disclosure for restaurants some time in the future, but "grocery stores are our higher priority."

Last July, the FDA, part of the Department of Health and Human Services, proposed regulations that would require nutrition labeling for nearly all packaged foods, and fresh produce and seafood. Under its proposal, labels would have to show the number of calories from fat, the amount of saturated fatty acids, cholesterol and total dietary fiber. Listing of some vitamins would become optional and serving sizes would be standardized.

Currently about 60 percent of supermarket foods have nutrition information of the label, much of that done voluntarily. Labeling is not required except when a manufacturer makes a nutrition claim or adds nutrients.

The experts applauded the efforts of some restaurants and fast-food chains that have begun providing nutrition information voluntarily, but they said these efforts should be required by law.

"All restaurants serving standardized menu items should be required to provide easy consumer access to nutrition profiles of standard menu items, either by posting the information or printing it on containers," said Richard A. Merrill, committee chairman and a law professor at the University of Virginia. Other restaurants should have nutrition information for items on their menus available for consumers on request, he said.

Hurst said a National Restaurant Association survey last year showed that three-quarters of the 39,000 restaurants polled offer nutritional information to patrons who request it.

Frozen turnover receives mixed reviews

By Linda Anderson

While making one of by frequent visits to the neighborhood supermarket (I'm nearly always out of something), I was surprised to see the familiar Quaker Oats Quaker smiling at me from the frozen food section instead of the cereal aisle.

Anderson

Turns out the Quaker Oats Company has entered the frozen food market with a new line of Oven Stuffs, which are basically variations of frozen sandwiches. Oven Stuffs come in three varieties — Deli Melts (sandwich meats and cheeses melted on some kind of bread or crust), Turnovers (meats, cheese and veggies in a turnover crust), and Stuffed French Rolls (sort of like French bread pizzas).

We bought a package of Oven Stuffs turkey and Swiss turnovers to check out for taste, price and advertising accuracy. Oven Stuffs come two to a package, which is exactly the number I needed.

Our 9.5 ounce two-serving package cost $2.69, or about $1.35 each.

The turnovers can be heated in a regular oven or zapped in a microwave. In fact, label advertising claims the turnovers are "Perfect for Microwave." Our turnovers were claimed to be made with "Turkey ,White Meat in a Mild Swiss Cheese Sauce Wrapped n a Flaky Crust."

Nutrition label shows that one turnover contains 340 calories, 16 g protein (all that turkey, you know), 34 g carbohydrate, 16 g fat (too many for those closely watching their dietary fat intake), and 680 mg sodium.

Quaker Oats Company also lists an address on the package label, for consumers to write to if they have questions or comments: Consumer Response — 150STS, Quaker Oats Company, P.O. Box 9003, Chicago, Ill. 60604-9003.

The taste-test was mixed. At first neither taste-tester liked the turnover. And while the younger never did warm up to Oven Stuffs, the older one decided that (1) she liked the pastry crust, but not the filling; then (2) well, OK, she like the filling after all.

Myself, I like the turnovers — but next time I'm going to heat them up in the regular oven because the microwave made the crust a little too tough (in spite of the "crisping sleeve" each turnover comes with).

Book written to help clarify insurance for consumers

NEW YORK (AP) — Here's a chance to learn about insurance — from someone who's not trying to sell it. Barbara Taylor, vice president of consumer affairs for the Insurance Information Institute, has written "How to Get Your Money's Worth in Home and Auto Insurance." Published by McGraw Hill in September, the paperback book is available in bookstores for $12.95.

According to the institute, a nonprofit educational organization, Americans spend $100 billion a year insuring homes and cars yet many have little understanding beyond what agents tell them. Among Taylor's tips: By raising the deductible on your home policy to $500 from the standard $250, you can reduce your premium by between 5 and 10 percent.

The book is also available for $12.95 from I.I.I.'s Publications Service Dept., 110 William Street, New York, N.Y. 10038.

Recall on bicycle urged

N.Y. Times News Service

Federal safety officials are being urged by Consumers Union to recall a bicycle because, the group says, its brakes are unsafe.

Consumers Union found in tests that the brakes on the Fuji Vantage CX can lock the front wheel at speeds as slow as 5 miles an hour. As a result, the rear wheel lifts off the ground. At 15 mph, the lockup can throw a cyclist over the bike's handlebars, Consumers Union said.

The Vantage CX, which sells for about $300, is a hybrid bicycle, one that combines aspects of a lightweight touring bike and a rugged mountain bike. The style has become extremely popular in recent years.

Lance Camisasca, the vice president of marketing and sales for Fuji America Inc., in Oakland, N.J., said the company is investigating the matter and intends to provide any necessary replacement parts if a problem is found.

"We will stand behind the bike," he said.

The company has not received any complaints about the bike from either consumers or distributors, he said.

Fuji America is a division of Toshoku Ltd. of Tokyo.

Consumers Union, publisher of Consumer Reports, said it had asked the federal Consumer Product Safety Commission to recall the bicycle.

Ken Giles, a commission spokesman, said the agency did not comment on recall requests until a decision is made.

Professionals leaving rat race find benefits

By Michele Stanush
Cox News Service

AUSTIN, Texas — It was the merry-go-round that clinched it.

Austin attorney Mark Browning had taken a rare day off to celebrate his daughter's second birthday. Waiting for him back at the office was an important bankruptcy case about to go to trial in California — a complicated project with a maze of 350 exhibits.

But for the moment he just watched Elyssa, long blond hair flying as she rocked up and down on a golden horse, begging to go around again and again and again.

Soon after, Browning did something he'd been contemplating for a while. He quit his job. A job he liked. A job he made lots of money at. But a job that chomped 11 to 12 hours out of weekdays plus Saturday mornings, occasional slices of Sunday, and hunks of most holidays.

Instead, the father of two young daughters turned around and took a position with the state attorney general's office. In at 8 a.m. Out at 5 p.m. No weekend work. State holidays off.

His income was sliced by a hefty 75 percent, but that, he says, is just part of the trade-off.

"(Now), if I leave on time, I can catch that last 15 minutes of "Sesame Street" every day," he says.

Is Browning part of any sort of trend? Is there, in a broad brush-stroke sort of way, a new shift in American values? Is the workaholic generation starting to take a new look at what they are sacrificing for their careers and the Almighty Dollar?

Could be.

Only a few days after he'd told his office he was going to pack up his files and leave, Browning remembers seeing an article in the Wall Street Journal that made him feel as if he had company.

The article — headlined "Careers Start Giving into Family Needs" — gave the results of a recent poll by an executive recruiting firm that showed more than half of 500 men queried would cut their salaries as much as 25 percent to have more family or personal time. About 45 percent said they'd probably turn down a promotion if it cut into the time they spent with their families.

And, Yankelovich Clancy Shulman, a research firm, reported a shift in a yearly survey it does on American values and lifestyles. Both men and women, it said, are beginning to "reassess" the trade-offs between work and family.

Not everyone with more family time had to wrest it from busy work schedules.

Many have gotten it without asking as their regions or industries hit a dip in a roller-coaster economy.

But even a forced lull can help throw a new spotlight on the family.

Real estate developer John C. Smith, for example, found his Austin business in poor repair after the Texas bust. But rather than launch into a new career, he took the opportunity to become a Mr. Mom — taking care of the family's three children, one of whom was adopted this fall.

"It (the bust) did have a silver lining — to give me an opportunity to do something that I probably wouldn't have done if the situation had been different," says Smith. "The priority is on our family."

But the Smiths also have a luxury of a healthy income stream; Smith's wife, Jean, is president and chief executive officer of Healthcare International Inc.

Indeed, money is often a pivitol factor in the decision to restructure careers. Just how much of a cut can a family afford to take?

"I've decided that just because you make a decision that money is less important, that doesn't make money become unimportant," says Glenn Karisch, who recently quit a lucrative job with a corporate law firm in Houston.

"It's easier said than done living on a smaller salary."

A year ago, Karisch decided to move his wife and two children to Austin, where he now works as an attorney for the Texas Methodist Foundation — a job that pays a little more than half his former salary.

The change has meant some adjustments. The Karisches rent, rather than own their home. They've cut down on their clothes-buying. They've postponed purchasing a new car. They avoid going on expensive weekend trips.

The juggling is more difficult because they also are doing without a second income. Karisch's wife, Suzanne, a former nurse, quit work to raise the two children — Julie, 5, and Augustus, 21 months old. (She is now thinking about going back to work one day a week.)

But the new job pays Karisch in other ways. For one thing, he feels as if his job with the Methodist foundation is of more benefit to society than his work with a resource-rich law firm. His new, leaner hours also give him more time to spend with his family.

Leaving the corporate world has taught him that options are available — albeit with a financial price tag.

"It makes me realize I'm not trapped in anything, and that there are a lot of alternatives available to me. It's easy to feel like if you've been on a track to becoming a partner in a law firm, that if you're on that track, you can't get off of it."

When he gets home from work, he often goes go hiking with Julia. Because Suzanne is at home also, she's able to take care of Augustus — giving both children individual attention.

"When Augustus is there, Daddy has to make sure he doesn't fall off a big cliff or something," says Julia, a quiet 5-year-old with dark hair and wide clear hazel eyes. "Me and Dad are careful about ourselves. We pretend that we're animals walking through the forest. Like deer maybe."

In some cases, the switch can even have career benefits.

Peg Ferrier, a technical development coordinator for a state agency, planned to go back to work full time after having her first baby.

But after she had the baby in May, she changed her mind.

"It was hard because I enjoyed my job very much," she says. "(But) I didn't want to miss a lot of the day-to-day goo-goo stuff."

Instead, Ferrier started a records management consulting practice with a couple of colleagues — an at-home business with flexible hours that allows her to "play" all morning and work in the afternoons. She hired a part-time nanny to care for the child from noon to 6.

The business, she says, has been doing suprisingly well and Ferrier expects it to someday bring in more income than her full-time job. But that's simply a pleasant result of a decision based on other criteria.

"We decided if the business didn't go well and I wasn't making as much money, then that was OK. ... It was a quality of life trade-off."

Countdown, a digital toaster with a "time display panel," promises to make toast just the way you like it. And instead of the pop-up feature, it has a microchip that controls a bread elevator. Thus, your toast is gently lowered and raised and browned to perfection.

The toaster, by St. Gallen of Mount Kisco, N.Y., also warms croissants and defrosts bagels without browning them.

At $129, this is strictly for the gadget freak. Available from Chef's Catalog, 1-800-338-3232.

If you are hosting a party and busy with munchies, music and mingling, snapping pictures gets lost in the shuffle. Konica USA now has a still camera that automatically takes photos in response to party sounds.

When set in its sound-activation mode, The Kanpai — Japanese for "cheers" — listens for laughter. With a motorized connector, it rotates on a tripod and pans randomly for the next shot.

It has a lot of good features like date-time imprinting on each photo. Trouble is, it responds to sounds other than laughter. You may want to put a lampshade over this one.

The Kanpai is $216. Call 1-800-MY-KONICA.

All you used to need was a full-length mirror or the bathroom scale to tell if you were overweight.

Now there is a $300 device called the Futrex 1000 that measures body fat.

"Body fat absorbs infrared light. Lean mass — like bone and muscle — reflect light," says Bob Rosenthal of Futrex Inc. "By plugging in your height and weight, the machine gives you the percentage of body fat in your body."

While taking routine readings may make you more prudent in your calorie intake, better you should skip the morning doughnuts, buy a $20 scale and do 10 sit-ups every day.

The device from Futrex Inc., Hagerstown, Md., is available through Sporting Edge catalog, 1-800-468-4410.

Dear Abby

'Just say no' is better advice than 'I said yes'

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a beautiful baby girl. Naturally I want to do the best job possible of raising her to be a fine girl and woman. There is one question in my mind.

Van Buren

At some time in her life, I will have to sit down and talk to her about the importance of staying away from drugs. I need to know if I should ever use myself and my own experiences as an example. Abby, I have experimented with a variety of drugs and have learned first-hand how devastating they can be.

What influence do you think it would have on my daughter if she knew? Do you think she would be more determined never to use drugs? I have been "clean" for a number of years now, but I was heavily into drugs as a teen-ager. How much should I tell her? — SERIOUS IN SARATOGA

DEAR SERIOUS: Yours is a very intelligent question. I would not recommend using yourself as an "example." Your daughter might believe that because you have experimented with drugs and were able to rehabilitate yourself, it might justify her going that route.

If she asks you if you have ever experimented with drugs, don't lie; but don't volunteer your own experiences as a deterrent. It could backfire.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please tell me how long a married couple can correctly take to thank their friends and family for a wedding gift? A friend of mine who is supposed to be very knowledgeable on matters of etiquette said that a couple can take one year to send their thank-you notes for wedding gifts and still be considered within the range of good manners. She said, ideally, they should acknowledge their gifts as soon as possible — perhaps within a month after returning from their honeymoon, but they have a whole year in which to do it.

If you confirm that a year is acceptable, then I will not complain. — STILL WAITING IN WHITTIER, CALIF.

DEAR STILL WAITING: A year? Outrageous — unless the lucky honeymooners were able to take six months off to go around the world.

Well-mannered newlyweds will have their wedding gifts acknowledged anywhere from one to three months after they return from their honeymoon, depending on the number of gifts there were to acknowledge.

DEAR ABBY: Some dear friends of ours are being divorced after 13 years of marriage. They have two wonderful children, a cozy home, and he runs his own business. Sounds like the perfect American dream, doesn't it?

Well, it's coming to an end soon. They filed for divorce over a year ago and are still trying to settle in court. Everyone is wondering what happened to this perfect marriage. I think I know. They didn't believe that old tradition that it was bad luck for the groom to see his bride's wedding dress before the ceremony. Well, he had to see it, because he made it for her! He's a professional designer.

Abby, what can be done to break a bad-luck spell? — HER FRIEND IN IOWA

DEAR FRIEND: The old "tradition" you refer to is merely a superstition, an old wive's tale, and has no basis in fact.

To believe that a marriage failed — after 13 years — because the groom saw the bride's gown before the wedding is sheer nonsense.

Window of opportunity hard to cover

By Erma Bombeck

This problem isn't right up there with the Mideast, but did you ever think that what this country really needs is a universal window?

Bombeck

Think about it. Have you ever had a pair of curtains or draperies that fit anything other than the window they were made for?

Servicemen's wives tell me it's a global problem. They lug boxes of old window dressings all over the world, only to have them fit nothing. A mother from Lima, Ohio, who danced up and down on a water bed trying to make a pair of draperies fit the window in her son's college dorm, complained she had never seen such oddball windows in her entire life.

A universal window is one of the last holdouts toward restoring mental health in this country. There are standard bed linens, ironing board and toaster covers. Toilet seats are well on their way to standardization. So are shower curtains. But windows are left to the whim of architects who think nothing of penciling in a little recessed glass opening in the bathroom 4 ½ inches by 8 feet 2 inches and smiling, "This is a fun window."

I know all of this isn't going to turn around overnight or have the impact that international traffic signals and road signs have, but even if all rental properties were required to have standard windows, it would break new ground.

Do you have any idea of the odds of a pair of draperies on a sale table fitting anything? The same as Donald Trump passing a mirror without smiling.

Eight years ago when we built our house, I took one look at the weird sizes of windows and glass doors and made a monumental decision. I would have no curtains anywhere except in the bathroom. (My husband said if I left them open, instant justice would be served.)

Each morning I look out and see a panorama of trees and flowers and sky. Everyone who visits stands there squinting from the natural light and saying, "So, when are your draperies getting back from the cleaners?"

I'm not saying a uniform window is the only goal in life, but I do think about it from time to time. Remember the scene in "Gone With the Wind" where Scarlett pulls down the green draperies with the golden cords from the windows and tells her maid she is going to make a dress out of them? Every time I see it, I shudder and think, "Big mistake, Scar ... we're not talking Sears ready-mades. This impetuous act will cost you a bundle to replace!"

'Route 66' restores, preserves Route 66

AMARILLO (AP) — If highways could talk, Old Route 66 would have a million stories to tell, says Delbert Trew, a director of the newly formed Old Route 66 Association of Texas.

A wide variety of people, including bank robbers, soldiers hauling German prisoners of war and honeymooning couples put their wheels to the pavement of the historic highway during its heyday.

The highway ran from Chicago to Los Angeles and was officially dedicated in 1938, records show.

Trew estimates that 90 percent of the 178 miles of Old Route 66 in Texas is still in use.

Trew said the new statewide organization, headquartered in McLean, publishes a quarterly newsletter, stays in contact with legislators and helps local chapters develop Route 66 preservation and promotion projects.

"We learned about six months ago that Texas was one of the few states that didn't have a state organization," Trew said.

Amarillo's Sixth Street Merchants Association will be dissolved, and the group will form the core of the new Amarillo Chapter of the Old Route 66 Association of Texas, said Chuck Starr, Sixth Street Merchants Association president.

'We feel that 66 is the most promising tourist attraction that we have in the Panhandle.'

— Delbert Trew, Old Route 66 Association of Texas, director

Membership in the old organization was limited to merchants along Sixth Avenue in Amarillo. The new organization is open to anyone interested in preserving and promoting Old Route 66, Starr said.

The Old Route 66 Association of Texas has been busy collecting artifacts, researching the highway's history and informing cities along what Trew calls "The Mother Road" about the new organization and its functions.

"We feel that 66 is the most promising tourist attraction that we have in the Panhandle," Trew said.

Sierra Club endorses Richards

AUSTIN (AP) — Democrat Ann Richards picked up the endorsement of a leading Texas environmental group Monday, as the Sierra Club said Republican Clayton Williams would be an "environmental disaster."

Sierra Club officials said Richards has a long record of action on the environment, while Williams has all but ignored the issue.

"Clayton Williams ... has only recently produced an environmental platform, and so far it seems to be the best-kept secret of his campaign," said club spokesman Ken Kramer.

The Republican's campaign shrugged off the endorsement, noting that the Sierra Club has backed only Democrats in statewide races.

"The Sierra Club is a partisan political operation that has a miserable record of understanding the need of balancing legitimate conservation efforts with the legitimate need to maintain economic growth and job creation," said Gordon Hensley, Williams' press secretary.

Kramer acknowledged that only Democrats have received endorsements in statewide races so far this year, but he said the Sierra Club is nonpartisan. The club backs Democrats Bob Bullock in the lieutenant governor's race, Garry Mauro for land commissioner and Jim Hightower for agriculture commissioner.

"We have a whole list of candidates that we have endorsed for the state Legislature, too, and the majority of those are Democrats. But we have endorsed several Republicans in that list also," Kramer said.

'Clayton Williams' major attention to environmental issues in the campaign has been his characterization of Big Bend Ranch State Natural Area as a suitable place to send drug offenders....'

— Ken Kramer, Sierra Club spokesman

"We are a nonpartisan group. We've endorsed Republican candidates in the past for positions such as Railroad Commissioner. And we try to view each election on the basis of who has the better record or the better potential," he said.

In throwing support to Richards, the Sierra Club said she long has been concerned about the environment and early in her campaign developed a comprehensive plan for action.

Kramer said the Democrat "has produced the strongest environmental platform ever put forward by a major party gubernatorial candidates in Texas."

Williams, however, refused to answer questionnaires from environmental groups, didn't respond to newspaper inquiries on the environment and has shown a disregard for groundwater in West Texas by pumping extensively for agricultural use, Kramer said.

"Clayton Williams' major attention to environmental issues in the campaign has been his characterization of Big Bend Ranch State Natural Area as a suitable place to send drug offenders rather than the unique ecological area it is, and his celebrated attempt to use the Mega-Borg oil spill as a press opportunity," Kramer said.

"Either we can make substantial progress with Ann Richards as governor or we can turn back the clock to a time when there was less concern about the environment — a time period in which Clayton Williams seems to be mired," he said.

Williams' spokesman said the Sierra Club's state chapter president backed Richards' rival, Jim Mattox, in the Democratic primary and that "undermines the group's credibility and signifies (that) the endorsement smacks of politics."

In other developments Monday:

— Williams issued a plan to reform state government ethics, saying more emphasis is needed on officials' conflicts of interest, financial disclosure and limiting campaign contributions.

"If elected governor, I want to see a greater effort made in making elected officials more accountable to those they represent," he said.

Among his proposals: A one-year waiting period before government officials could work as lobbyists; prohibiting honoraria payments for speeches; requiring officeholders, while on the state payroll, to report the time they spend campaigning; limiting to $5,000 lawyers' contributions to judicial candidates; limiting political action committee contributions to any candidate to $10,000 an election cycle, and prohibiting elected officials from soliciting money for a PAC.

— Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Hugh Parmer criticized the federal budget deal reached in Washington and being supported by his opponent, Republican Sen. Phil Gramm.

STATE IN BRIEF

$75,000 bond set for suspect

PECOS (AP) — Bond was set at $75,000 Monday for a man wanted in Kansas on rape and kidnapping charges.

Authorities searching the West Texas mountains Sunday arrested Mitchell Wayne Thomas, 31, near Toyah.

Thomas had fled on foot toward the mountains Saturday after authorities confronted him in a routine traffic stop near Van Horn, about 120 miles east of El Paso.

Thomas was charged Monday with aggravated assault in connection with the Ward County abduction and sexual assault of a woman late Friday night.

Kansas police allege Thomas attacked women motorists after following them in his car. They say he tricked them into stopping on the road by flashing his headlights.

Lubbock on deadline

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Racing Commission on Monday gave Lubbock Downs two more months to arrange its financing or face loss of its Class 2 horse racing license.

The commission's horse section voted 3-0 after Lubbock Downs board member Louis "Bud" Farr said the track would voluntarily surrender its pari-mutuel permit if financing can't be fully arranged by Dec. 1.

"I want it understood that December ... is it," said Commissioner Hugh Fitzsimons.

The track has been struggling to secure financing for more than a year.

So far, only two Class 2 tracks have conducted pari-mutuel racing — Bandera Downs north of San Antonio and G. Rollie White Downs near Brady. Bandera Downs is racing, but G. Rollie White lost money and didn't reopen this year.

Also Monday, officials of Manor Downs and the commission decided to delay that track's opening date from Friday until Oct. 11.

Capitol chief fired

AUSTIN (AP) — Capitol Police Chief Robert S. Williams has been fired, although a recent investigation found no racial or sexual discrimination as alleged by several groups, a state official said.

"Although investigators found no basis to support the allegations of discrimination, the investigation did point out some management problems wfthin the department," said Lias "Bubba" Steen, executive director of the State Purchasing and General Services Commission.

The Capitol Area Police Union, Austin chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the Texas Women's Political Caucus in July accused Williams of discriminating against black, Hispanic and female employees.

Three die in collision

ABILENE (AP) — Three people were killed and seven injured in a collision between a car and van Sunday night near here.

The car, carrying three Abilene teen-age girls, crossed the center line, crashing into the van carrying an Arlington family.

The Department of Public Safety identified the dead as 16-year-old Tanya Lynn Hall of Abilene, 28-year-old Janell Ramsey, and the woman's father, 60-year-old Billy Dan Watson, both of Arlington.

The car apparently spun out of control and broadsided the van, the DPS said.

Seattle's John L. Williams (32) is brought down by Cincinnati's Kevin Walker (59) during first half action of Monday's NFL game in Seattle as the Seahawks took a 10-6 halftime lead.

Seahawks join win column

■ Seattle shakes its winless image with a 31-16 upset victory over the Cincinnati Bengals.

Associated Press

SEATTLE — Derrick Fenner scored three touchdowns, Dave Krieg passed for two and Rufus Porter inspired the defense as Seattle became the last NFL team to win a game, beating previously unbeaten Cincinnati 31-16 Monday night.

Porter, who had two of Seattle's three sacks, was all over the field as the Seahawks, ranked next-to-last in the league in defense entering the game, continually thwarted Boomer Esiason and the Cincinnati offense. The Bengals were limited to just three Jim Breech field goals until Mitchell Price returned a punt 66 yards for a score in the fourth quarter.

Krieg, meanwhile, had dinked and dunked the Seahawks to a 17-9 lead after three quarters as Fenner scored on runs of three and four yards.

Then on the first play of the fourth quarter, he suddenly found Tommy Kane deep on the left sideline behind Rickey Dixon and hit him in stride for the clinching score. Krieg had thrown only one TD pass in his three previous games and his longest completion had been 28 yards.

Porter played just as big a role as the Seahawks improved to 1-3 and Cincinnati dropped to 3-1.

On one pivotal series with Seattle leading just 10-6 early in the third quarter, Porter deflected two passes and sacked Esiason, incurring a personal foul penalty for throwing the Cincinnati quarterback to the ground.

But even that had a positive effect, firing up the Kingdome crowd of 60,135 to a noise level that made it almost impossible for Cincinnati to get a play off. Esiason completed just 10 of 23 for 128 yards and fumbled three snaps.

Then, on the next series, the Seahawks went 56 yards in five plays, capped by Fenner's 3-yard touchdown run to make it 17-6. The drive was marked by John L. Williams' 22-yard run in which he reversed his field and got blocks from Krieg, among others, to put the ball at the 16.

After Price's return, Krieg marched the Seahawks 80 yards for the final score, the key play a 52-yard, third-down connection with Jeff Chadwick.

Seattle took a 3-0 lead 10 minutes into the game on a 51-yard field goal by Norm Johnson, who last week missed 39- and 44-yard attempts that could have beaten Denver, one as time ran out in regulation, the second in overtime. The score was set up by Dwayne Harper's interception of an Esiason pass, which negated an earlier interception by Cincinnati's David Fulcher.

Breech tied it 1:30 into the second period with a 34-yarder after a 12-play, 64-yard drive by Cincinnati.

Seattle then went 80 yards in 14 plays, using up 8 minutes, 45 seconds to take a 10-3 lead. Krieg hit four of five passes for 34 yards in the drive and ran twice for 19 before Fenner took it in from four yards out.

Breech cut it to 10-6 at halftime with a 26-yarder after a defensive holding call against Seattle's Terry Wooden gave the Bengals a first down on a fourth-and-23 punt.

Mebane churns out numbers

■ Greenwood's quarterback rushed for 247 yards and four touchdowns against Alpine last week, but it may not have been his best game.

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

GREENWOOD — As great as Greenwood quarterback Cody Mebane was last Friday, his coach said it may not have been his best game.

Mebane rushed for 247 yards and four touchdowns in the Rangers' 28-7 win over Alpine that pushed Greenwood's mark to 4-0. Still, Ranger coach Bob Purser could think of a brighter moment.

"Last year against Kermit was his biggest game," Purser said. In Greenwood's 30-20 win over Kermit last November, Mebane rushed for more than 200 yards, threw a touchdown pass and even caught a TD pass on a trick play.

Mebane

Friday, he just ran...and ran...and ran. The 195-pound senior scored one runs of 60, 14, seven and one yards, mostly off the Rangers' well-executed option attack.

Mebane more than doubled his season rushing total against Alpine. He had rushed for 144 yards on 26 carries during the Rangers' first three games.

The 16-year-old senior said off-season work has helped him excel.

"I'm stronger and a little quicker," he said. "I'm also 15 pounds heavier than last year."

In other words, Greenwood has a quarterback who is bigger than most opposing linemen and faster than many other backs, with a 4.8 time in the 40-yard dash.

But sheer speed isn't really Mebane's strength, Purser said.

"He's not really fast until he gets going," the coach said. "But he's stronger and he's matured a lot. He's making good decisions on the option and he's a leader in the field."

Under normal circumstances, the Rangers would have Mebane back for yet another year next season. But Mebane isn't a normal high school student.

For one thing, he skipped a grade in elementary school because of his outstanding academic potential. And, since he's involved in many school and church-related activities, he has a lot more going for him than his ability as a football player.

Despite Mebane's youth (he won't turn 17 until Nov. 4), Purser still thinks his quarterback can play in college, though probably not as a quarterback, since Mebane has only completed about a third of his pass attempts this season.

"There's no telling what he could be," Purser said. "He played defensive end for us as a junior.

"He could probably play defensive end or linebacker in college, or maybe even fullback at a smaller school."

Mebane, who now stands 6-1, could be 6-3 and 220 pounds as a collegian.

But Purser said his star quarterback may opt for a different route after high school.

"He's an outstanding student, so he may think academics are more important than playing football at a small college."

Teaff smiling, but remembers Coogs

With this strange behavior coming immediately after a 66-10 thrashing, had the mild-mannered coach finally snapped beneath the pressure of big-time college football?

"I was just laughing coming off the field because I was thinking this is the most ridiculous thing I have ever seen," Teaff recalled Monday. "I had a big smile on my face, but it wasn't funny. What can you say about something so ridiculous?"

While the Cougars are putting up some Andre Ware-like numbers this season despite the Heisman Trophy winner's absence, Teaff said that last year doesn't have anything to do with this year.

"We gave them too many turnovers," Teaff said. "I was thoroughly embarrassed and humiliated. Golly, I would sure like to play better this year."

Coming into Saturday's affair with the Bears, 13th-ranked Houston (3-0 overall and 2-0 in the SWC), behind David Klingler, is fourth in the nation in total offense.

The Bears (2-2 and 1-0) are last in total offense and passing offense in the SWC. Baylor is, however, third in the conference in rushing, thanks mainly to Edwin Raphel's 243 yards.

On the defensive side, Houston is on the bottom in total defense, while Baylor brings up the rear in rushing defense. The Cougars churn out 523 yards a game on offense, but surrender 435 per game — 270 of that through the air.

After senior quarterback Brad Goebel was likely lost for the year after breaking his right wrist early in the first half, redshirt freshman J.J. Joe guided the Bears to the victory, passing for 77 yards and running for 34 more.

"That ranked as a four-P in my rating system," said Teaff. "Preparation, patience, poise and perseverance. I guess you could even add a fifth P, persistence. It tested every aspect."

Joe was listed fourth in the spring, but will start Saturday.

"J.J. is a very heady youngster," Teaff said. "He has steadily moved his way up."

Despite a teaming of the conference's best and worst on offense, Teaff hasn't discounted the most obvious strategy in beating Houston.

"I haven't ruled out outscoring them," Teaff said. "That's in the back of my mind."

Bucs will take World Series in seven

Reruns of "Leave It to Beaver" would have gotten a better share of the American television audience than a World Series between Toronto and Montreal, but a late fade by the Expos averted that devastating scenario from the mind-set at CBS where smiles suddenly prevail.

Wyatt

Toronto could still make it to the October showdown, but that would lend a healthy international flavor to the Series, much to the delight of the network executives.

More likely, though, is a matchup between the Oakland Athletics and the winner of the National League Championship Series (NLCS). And since Cincinnati and Pittsburgh lie roughly — if not squarely — in the Midwest portion of the country, it would be a very appealing and very watched best-of-seven that pits an acknowledged West Coast super power against an upstart from the heartland.

Should Pittsburgh win the NLCS, a very good possibility since the playoffs begin in Cincinnati and the Bucs — 46-35 on the road this season — swept the Reds the last time they visited Riverfront Stadium, then I will go with the upstarts to beat the super power in seven games.

As decided underdogs, the Pirates have won all three of the World Series they've entered since World War II. Each time it took seven games to get the job done.

Pittsburgh downed the mighty Yankees in 1960 — the Mickey Mantle, Roger Maris, Whitey Ford Yankees, despite being outscored 55-27.

The Bucs eked out seven-game victories against the Jim Palmer, Brooks Robinson, Boog Powell Orioles in 1971 and 1979, coming from an unheard-of three-games-to-one deficit in the latter. There was another Robinson, a guy named Frank who wasn't bad either.

Gone are Roberto Clemente and Willie Stargell, but neither of those greats hit 30 homers and stole 50 bases in the same season as Barry Bonds has done this year. In fact, only Bonds and Eric Davis of the Reds have ever accomplished that particular baseball feat. Davis is not on such a pace this year.

And Bonds and Bobby Bonilla make up Pittsburgh's first-ever tandem of 30-homer hitters in the same season. Between them, they have more RBI than the remainder of the division has victories.

Add Cy Young favorite Doug Drabek (22-6), and what you probably have in Pittsburgh is a team that has a better on-paper chance of winning this thing than the three Pirate teams teams that actually did it last.

The Reds, in a commanding position at the All-Star break, are a team that went into Monday's game with a 40-42 record since July 7. They clinched the West on a day that both they and the Dodgers lost. The Pirates won seven straight games to clinch the East Sunday, and their record since July 7 was 47-34 entering play yesterday.

Rickey Henderson and Jose Canseco will hit their homers and swipe their bases. The Robinsons and Manties did. And Dave Stewart and Bob Welch will fan a good many Buc batters, just as Palmer and Ford did in the past.

But when the championship trophy is tucked safely away in Pittsburgh, ironically captured with the help of a pitcher named Walk, stop by and I'll tell you how I bet on Denver in the last Super Bowl.

Georgia Tech back with nation's ranked elite

■ The Yellow Jackets move to No. 23 in the AP Top 25 poll while BYU falls out of the Top 10.

Associated Press

ATLANTA — There was a time when Georgia Tech frequently occupied a spot among the nation's elite in The Associated Press poll.

That was during the days when Bobby Dodd was compiling a 165-64-8 record in 22 years. But when he left after the 1966 season, Tech's football program tumbled.

His team achieved one goal Monday, moving to No. 23 in The AP's nationwide poll of sports writers and broadcasters. It was the first time Tech appeared in the poll since 1985, when the Jackets were ranked as high as No. 12 and ended the season 19th with a 9-2-1 record.

"There's not any real special significance being ranked for the first time since I've been at Tech," said Ross, who left Maryland in 1987. "I think it's a nice honor. The goal is not to just get there, but it is to stay there and show a consistency in there, not only in this season but in the years to come."

Only three times since Dodd left has Tech been ranked in The AP poll at the end of the season, never higher than No. 13.

The Jackets moved into the poll this week with an impressive 27-6 victory over South Carolina, which fell from No. 25 out of the rankings.

Tech visits Maryland Saturday, concerned that quarterback Shawn Jones may not be ready because of a sprained right arch that had him on crutches Monday.

"Obviously if we don't beat Maryland, we won't stay there," Ross said of the ranking.

The Fighting Irish, who beat Purdue 37-11, received 49 first-place votes and 1,489 points. Florida State got 10 first-place votes and 1,420 points following a 39-28 comeback victory over Virginia Tech.

The only other first-place vote went to Virginia, which moved from seventh to No. 4, one spot below Michigan, which was ranked sixth last week. Virginia beat William & Mary 63-35 and Michigan beat Maryland 45-17.

The only team that fell out of the Top Ten was Brigham Young, dropping from fourth to 11th after a 32-16 loss at Oregon. Florida became the newcomer, moving up seven positions to No. 10 after beating Mississippi State 34-21.

Two Southeastern Conference powers fell slightly after playing to a 26-26 tie Saturday night — Auburn dropping from third to fifth and Tennessee from fifth to sixth.

Oklahoma climbed two positions to No. 7 with a 31-17 victory over Kansas, and Nebraska remained No. 8 after beating Oregon State 31-7. Miami moved up one position to No. 9 with a 48-21 triumph over Iowa.

Colorado made the biggest move, jumping eight spots to No. 12 after a 20-14 victory over Washington.

Arizona State, 21st last week, lost to Missouri 30-9 and was the only team other than South Carolina to drop out of the poll.

NEW YORK (AP) — The end of the season could also mean the end of an era for the New York Mets.

"There's going to be a lot of changes here," pitcher David Cone said. "But first we have to clear the air."

After their elimination from the National League East race on Sunday, several Mets made vague references to some players who wanted to win and others who didn't. Nobody wanted to point any fingers, though.

"You're not going to get me to say anything negative," said Howard Johnson, one of the team leaders. "I just know there are some guys in this room who would do anything for this team."

New York finishes the season with a meaningless series in Pittsburgh, and the Mets clubhouse should be an interesting place for eavesdropping. Manager Bud Harrelson likes to call it "chirpping."

The Mets have been baseball's winningest team since 1984, but the farm system is drying up and Darryl Strawberry is leaning toward signing with another team. Strawberry doesn't have much to say at the moment other than "call my agent."

"I think he's gone," Johnson said. "I don't know anything, but the way he's been treated, he's had it up to here."

"We underachieved and we were all guilty," Harrelson said. "Players, manager, front office ... we all made mistakes."

Ron Darling and Bob Ojeda shifted between the starting rotation and the bullpen most of the season. Now, they're in limbo. In April, both said the Mets' glut of starters would become a problem and both were right.

"It's up to (GM) Frank Cashen," Darling said. "I live here, so I'd like to stay. But I have to pitch. Things can change so I'm not going to worry about it.

"We didn't lose this in September. We lost it in April and May when Davey (Johnson) was fired. We just weren't a good enough club."

Strawberry, Darling and Ojeda, key members of the 1986 World Series champions, could all be gone by next season. So could Kevin McReynolds and Kevin Elster.

Associated Press

David Cone pitched a three-hitter, struck out 12 and hit two run-scoring singles as the New York Mets beat the National League East champion Pittsburgh Pirates 4-1 Monday night.

Cone (14-10) improved his career record against the Pirates to 6-0. He has had at least 10 strikeouts in nine games this season and leads the National League with 233.

The second-place Mets, who were eliminated from the race on Sunday when the Pirates beat St. Louis, won their 90th game, a level they've reached in six of the last seven seasons. The streak was interrupted by last year's 87-75 record.

The Mets, who began this season-ending three-game series trailing by five games, scored two unearned runs in the fifth against Zane Smith (12-9), who had beaten them three times this year.

The loss was just the second for Smith since joining the Pirates from Montreal in an Aug. 8 trade. He won six games for the Pirates and had a 1.30 ERA in his 11 starts with Pittsburgh. He was 6-7, 3.24 in 21 starts with the Expos.

Reds 4, Astros 3

Cincinnati's Ron Oester scored from second on Houston shortstop Rafael Ramirez's throwing error in the bottom of the ninth inning, giving the National League West champion Reds a victory over the Astros.

The Reds ended a three-game losing streak with the unearned run off Brian Meyer (0-4), who walked Oester to start the ninth. Todd Benzinger sacrificed and Billy Hatcher hit a grounder to the hole at short. Ramirez fielded the ball but threw it past first into the Reds' dugout.

Starter Tom Browning was erratic in his five-inning tune-up for the playoffs. He gave up three runs, eight hits and three walks in five innings and failed to hold a 2-0 lead.

Browning, who is scheduled to start the second playoff game on Friday against Pittsburgh, was relieved by Keith Brown in the sixth. Browning is 3-3 in eight starts since coming back from an Aug. 17 ankle sprain.

Phillies 7, Cubs 6

Sandberg's two-run homer in the third inning made him the third player in major league history to hit 40 home runs and steal 25 bases in a season. The others were Hank Aaron of the Atlanta Braves in 1963 and Oakland's Jose Canseco in 1988.

However, Sandberg's homer wasn't enough to prevent the Phillies from taking a two-game lead over the Cubs with two games left in the race for fourth place in the NL East.

Philadelphia's Jose DeJesus (7-8) allowed four hits and three runs in the six innings. Loser Kevin Coffman (0-2) gave up six runs and seven hits in four-plus innings.

Expos 15, Cardinals 9

Tim Raines' grand slam highlighted a seven-run seventh inning as Montreal, who had scored only 16 runs in their previous 11 games, used two seven-run outbursts to defeat St. Louis.

It was the switch-hitting Raines' ninth homer of the season and fifth grand slam of his career. All his grand slams have been hit right-handed.

Raines' blow offset four home runs by the Cardinals, two by Milt Thompson. It was the first time since April 11, 1987, the Cardinals hit four homers in a game.

Trailing 9-7, the Expos' seventh inning rally began when Delino DeShields, Tim Wallach and Larry Walker hit consecutive singles against Ken Dayley (4-4), who was relieved by Mike Perez.

Andres Galarraga singled to score DeShields and Otis Nixon walked, forcing Wallach home with the tying run. Frank DiPino took over and Spike Owen forced Walker at the plate.

Dodgers 2, Padres 1

Ramon Martinez capped his first full season in the major leagues with his 20th victory and Eddie Murray singled home the winning run in the ninth inning.

In becoming the second-youngest 20-game winner in Dodgers history behind Ralph Branca (1947), Martinez, a Dominican-born right hander, recorded his major league-leading 12th complete game with a five-hitter that included two walks and three strikeouts.

Braves 5, Giants 3

Smoltz (14-11), who was 0-2 in four starts since his last victory on Sept. 5, held the Giants to two runs and three hits in seven innings.

Boston clinches AL East tie

Associated Press

Boston clinched a tie for the American League East title Monday night as Dwight Evans snapped an eighth-inning tie with a run-scoring single to give the Red Sox a 4-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

The win moved the Red Sox two games ahead of Toronto with two games left for each team. The Blue Jays lost to Baltimore 6-3 and will be eliminated on Tuesday if the Red Sox win or they lose.

The Red Sox won the AL East in 1988, but have not won a World Series title since 1918.

Jeff Reardon (5-3) got the victory by bailing out Larry Andersen in the eighth. Blanked on five hits for seven innings, Chicago rallied to tie the score 3-3.

Kiecker managed to escape in the first although 12 of his 16 pitches in the inning were balls and two of the strikes went for a single and a double. The 29-year-old rookie then settled down and checked the White Sox on three hits for the next six innings.

The Red Sox took the lead in the third with an unearned run off Greg Hibbard (14-10). With two outs, Jody Reed reached second on a two-base throwing error by third baseman Ventura and scored on Carlos Quintana's single off the left-field wall.

Greenwell led off the fourth with a line drive which hopped into the right-field seats for a ground-rule double. Greenwell took third on Evans' single and scored as Tom Brunansky forced Evans at second on a grounder to short.

Orioles 6, Blue Jays 3

Toronto moved within one game of elimination in the American League East as Baltimore beat the Blue Jays 6-3 behind the strong pitching of rookie Jose Mesa.

The Blue Jays, who have lost five of their last six games, entered the day trailing the Boston Red Sox by one game.

Mesa (3-2) gave up four hits and three runs in 7⅔ innings for his second victory over the Blue Jays in 19 days. Kevin Hickey got one out and Gregg Olson finished for his 37th save.

Baltimore trailed 3-1 in the sixth before rallying for three runs against David Wells (11-6). Billy Ripken walked and Mike Devereaux followed with his 12th homer, one pitch after Toronto pitching coach Galen Cisco went to the mound for a talk with Wells.

Baltimore added a run in the seventh against reliever Frank Wills when Craig Worthington doubled and scored on a single by Billy Ripken. Sam Horn hit a pinch homer in the eighth for the Orioles' final run.

Rangers 4, Brewers 2

Julio Franco walked and Rafael Palmeiro singled him to third with one out in the eighth off Ron Robinson (12-5). But when Sierra hit a hard grounder to first baseman Rob Deer — who started the game in the outfield — Deer stepped on the bag and did not attempt a play at second or the plate as Franco scored.

Tigers 2, Yankees 0

Rookie Travis Fryman, not Cecil Fielder, homered for Detroit and Frank Tanana pitched three-hit ball for 7⅓ innings.

Fielder went 0-for-4 and stayed stuck at 49 home runs. He struck out three times, increasing his major league-leading total to 179 and grounded weakly to the mound.

Fielder has gone 16 at-bats without a home run and has just two games left in his bid to become the first player to hit 50 since George Foster in 1977, and the first American Leaguer to reach the mark since Roger Maris and Mickey Mantle in 1961. Rookies Mark Leiter and Steve Adkins are scheduled to start the last two days for the Yankees.

Twins 7, Mariners 5

Scott Leius had a two-run double in a five-run second inning as Minnesota defeated Seattle.

Kevin Tapani (12-8) won for the first time since July 30 despite giving up four runs on 10 hits in six-plus innings. Tapani, who has been bothered by a variety of injuries since mid-July, was 0-3 in his previous six starts.

Seattle starter Russ Swan (2-3) lasted just two innings. Swan allowed five straight hits, including three doubles, in the Twins' five-run second inning. Two of the five runs he allowed were unearned.

Angels 2, Athletics 0

California rookie Joe Grahe capped his climb from Midland's Texas League Class AA Angels to the big leagues this season with three-hit ball in 8⅓ innings for a shutout victory over Dave Stewart and AL West champion Oakland.

Grahe (3-4), a University of Miami star last year, walked seven but pitched out of jams in the second and sixth innings. Bryan Harvey, a former Midland Angel, got the last two outs for his 25th save.

Stewart (22-11) was hit hard early after being named the AL pitcher of the month in September for winning all five of his starts during the month. He gave up two runs on 11 hits for his 11th complete game. Stewart's next start will be Game 1 of the AL playoffs, scheduled for Saturday.

AL Roundup

AREA: Garden City didn't try to run up score

(From 1C)

Alpine players was an embarrassment.

The melee started immediately after the game, when players from both teams are supposed to be shaking hands.

"From what I understand, there was a lot of talking back and forth the whole game," Purser said. "After the game, there was some pushing and it (the fight) just broke out."

No injuries were reported as a result of the brawl, except to Purser's pride.

"Unfortunately, I've been in that situation before. It just embarrasses the coaches and the schools," Purser said.

"When you have that kind of problem, it indicates to people that you don't have much discipline," Purser said.

"Who knows whose fault it was?" Purser said. "It's something we talk about with this group of kids, because they are so aggressive."

ELSEWHERE, Garden City coach Sam Scott insists his Bearkats were not trying to run up the score on Wink in last week's 76-7 win.

"I know it's hard to believe," Scott said. "I had to tell the quarterbacks to quit checking off at the line of scrimmage. I told them to run what I called, so we could run out the clock."

The Bearkats averaged almost 10 yards per offensive play on Friday (67-563), while Wink was held to 122 total yards — thanks to 13 tackles for loss and two quarterback sacks.

Offensive stars included quarterbacks Shae Scott and Allen Hoelscher, who combined for 303 passing yards and six TD's; wingback Richard Morales, who caught four touchdown passes and ran back an interception for another score; and tailback Mario Aguilar, who led 'Kat rushers with 98 yards on 15 carries.

Soles is perhaps better known as the tailback who gained almost 2,000 yards as a sophomore last season. This year, with the emergence of Aguilar as a running threat, the 'Kats have needed him more on defense.

"He would have been one of our best defensive players last season, but he ran the ball so much we didn't feel like we could run him both ways," Scott said.

Chap women host OC Wranglers today

Staff Report

The women's tennis teams from Midland College and Odessa College meet today in a dual match on the MC courts at 2:30 p.m. in the first home appearance for the MC squad this season.

MC coach Joe Williams has just four players on his women's squad this fall, but at least two of them probably rank in the top five in the nation.

"Both (Janneke) Garos and (Myriam) Berthe should be ranked very high when the first Volvo ITCA ratings come out," Williams said.

These two also pair in doubles, where they suffered their first defeat in the Wal-Mart finals. Garos won the Rolex ITCA National Small College Indoor singles and doubles events last February, but suffered a knee injury which kept her hobbled most of the spring.

Caroline Reynolds of England and Toni Yates of Brandon, MS, are playing three and four singles and number two doubles. Williams will add two or three players in the spring semester to complete the squad.

Midland and Odessa will be joined by Cooke County in the women's division of the Rolex Small College Regional Tournament, which is being played on the MC courts Friday and Saturday. The men's division includes Midland College, Odessa College, and New Mexico Military Institute.

The MC women's program gained more accolades this week with the announcement of the ITCA (Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association) Volvo All-American Tennis Team for the 1989-90 season.

Sharla Barone, who captured the NJCAA number one singles championship, gained the number one singles ranking, with teammate Janneke Garos rated number two. Barone and Garos were ranked number two in doubles. Alison Bradford was listed sixth in singles and number three in doubles with partner Maria Vago, who was listed tenth in singles. Mara Lencina was 32nd in singles and ranked 14th in doubles with Maria Jimenez. Jimenez was ranked 43rd in singles and Missy O'Neill was 41st in singles.

"This was an exceptionally strong showing by a single team and shows the depth of this group of young women," Williams said. "Garos started out very strong at number one, but had a knee injury that slowed her down. That's when Sharla came forward and took over the top spot for us."

NL suspends Clark for one game

SAN DIEGO (AP) — National League President Bill White suspended San Diego Padres first baseman Jack Clark for one game and fined him an undisclosed amount for his base-throwing tantrum Sept. 26 at San Francisco.

The disciplinary action was announced Monday in New York by the National League office. Clark is to serve the suspension on Tuesday.

The Padres were in Los Angeles on Monday to open a season-ending three-game series against the Dodgers.

Rice-TCU set for TV

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest Conference and Raycom Sports and Entertainment have announced that the Texas Christian University-Rice University game Oct. 13 will be televised as the SWC-Raycom regional football game of the week.

Kickoff for the contest has been changed from 7:00 p.m. to 12:07 p.m. Air time is noon.

Oil takes dive

NEW YORK (AP) — The volatile price of oil took its second-sharpest fall of the Persian Gulf crisis, tumbling more than $2 per barrel Monday as traders thought they saw glimmers of peace.

Light sweet crude for November delivery dropped $2.42 to $37.09 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Crude was down as much as $3.66 per barrel in light trading Monday afternoon, but regained part of that ground late in the day as some speculators bought futures to avoid being short on oil overnight.

Oil opened lower on a weekend statement from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein that was viewed by traders as being more conciliatory than usual. Oil then fell sharply around midday, when President Bush told the U.N. General Assembly he hoped there could be a diplomatic solution to the Mideast turmoil.

Dollar weak

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell against most major foreign currencies today after a U.S. deficit-reduction agreement reignited fears of interest rate cuts. Gold prices also moved lower.

Traders said the agreement could inspire the Federal Reserve to lower U.S. interest rates.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.80 yen to a closing 137.15 yen. Later in London, it was quoted lower at 137.00 yen. In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.8890.

Fords recalled

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. on Monday issued three safety- and emissions-related recalls.

The automaker said it would replace heavy-duty steel wheels on the 1990-model Taurus police cars because they could break apart.

The company also recalled about 144,000 1989-90-model Ford Bronco and F-series super cabs with tip-slide seats to reinforce the floor pan under the seats.

Ford said it was recalling about 228,000 1986 Ford Thunderbird, Mustang, LTD and Mercury Cougar, Capri and Marquis cars with 3.8-liter engines because of potentially excessive hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide exhaust emissions.

East Texas allowable won't be raised

■ The Texas Railroad Commission voted Monday not to raise production in the East Texas field, saying the extra oil isn't needed.

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Railroad Commission on Monday decided not to increase oil production in the East Texas Field, as one commissioner said the extra oil is not needed to replace embargoed Mideast oil.

"There is no shortage of oil on the market anymore. The only thing hiking the price of oil is the New York Mercantile Exchange, based on rumor," Commissioner John Sharp said.

Sharp and Commissioner Jim Nugent voted to keep East Texas production at 86 percent of the maximum after independent oil producers expressed fears that more production would jeopardize full recovery of the estimated 600 million barrels left in the field.

They outvoted Chairman Kent Hance, who made the motion to increase production to 100 percent of the maximum production, which would increase production by approximately 10,000 barrels a day.

"It was a small amount, but I think that we're going to have some shortages this winter, and we need everything that we can get," said Hance, the only Republican on the commission.

Federal energy officials in August asked oil-producing states to increase production to help replace the 700,000 barrels previously imported from Kuwait and Iraq.

After more than a month of study, Sharp said the potential gain was not enough to risk the full recovery of the East Texas Field. "All of the oil that was stopped from Kuwait and Iraq has been replaced either domestically, by Venezuela or by Saudi Arabia," he said.

The commission on Aug. 30 authorized a three-month increase of production in other areas of the state to the maximum efficient rate, which resulted in an increase of 20,000 barrels daily.

Most of the additional oil comes from the Pearsall Field in South Texas, where new horizontal drilling techniques have increased production in the Austin Chalk Formation.

Texas produces 1.7 million barrels of oil a day, compared with 3.36 million a day in 1974 and 2.55 million a day in 1980.

Commissioners delayed a decision on the East Texas Field after independent oil producers in East Texas warned that higher production levels would deplete the reservoir pressure and could cause most of the remaining oil to remain trapped in the ground.

Major oil companies supported the increase in East Texas production, and the commission staff said they believed producers would be able to recover the 600 million barrels over the next 37 years, whether or not they increased produc-

Manufacturing economy still on decline

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's manufacturing economy declined in September for the third straight month to its lowest level in nearly eight years, according to a widely followed business survey released Monday.

In another sign of a troubled economy, the National Association of Purchasing Management said the decline put the manufacturing sector at a level not reached since the first month of the current economic expansion in December 1982.

The group said its indexes for production, new orders, imports, inventories and employment all dropped sharply last month. Meanwhile, its price index shot up to its highest level since September 1988.

"Coupled with sharply rising prices for petroleum-related products spawned by the Middle East crisis, the immediate outlook appears to be the worst of all combinations, a declining economy with rising inflation," said Robert J. Bretz, chairman of the group's business survey committee.

The group's Purchasing Managers' Index fell to 44.4 percent, down sharply from 47 percent in August. A reading below 50 indicates the manufacturing economy is declining.

Heirs, P&G clash over El Salvador

By Katherine Rizzo

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gamble and Gamble are taking on Procter & Gamble in a clash of corporate rights, social conscience and government policy.

Brothers James and Robert Gamble, great-great-grandsons of one of the giant company's founders, are leading a proxy battle to try to stop Procter & Gamble from buying coffee grown in El Salvador.

At the brothers' instigation, shareholders will vote in Cincinnati next week on a proposal to have Procter & Gamble stop buying coffee until Salvadoran leaders negotiate an end to civil war.

"I think (Procter & Gamble) could play a very critical role in speeding up the negotiation process," James Gamble said in an interview. "It was one of the leaders in the South African divestment issue."

But there is a significant difference between South Africa, the target of U.S. economic sanctions because of its anti-black apartheid system, and El Salvador, a country to which the United States this year gave $315 million.

The White House, recognizing the importance of coffee sales to the Salvadoran economy, specifically asked Procter & Gamble to continue buying the beans.

■ Only more government projects kept construction spending from falling in August as economists detect a lack of confidence among builders.

By John D. McClain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction spending stalled in August following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait after posting its first gain in four months in July, the government said Monday. Only an increase in government projects kept overall spending from declining.

"Confidence is the major problem we have across-the-board right now," said Daryl Delano, an economist with Cahners Economics in Newton, Mass. "Confidence is certainly at the lowest point we've seen in a long time."

The Commerce Department said residential, non-residential and government spending was virtually unchanged at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $442.5 billion following a revised 0.3 percent increase in July.

The often-volatile government spending jumped 6.1 percent, offsetting declines of 1.2 percent in residential construction and 4.3 percent in non-residential outlays.

"The residential sector was very weak," Delano said of the $186.9 billion spending rate for single- and multi-family buildings. "It's consistent with everything we've seen in that sector."

Residential spending has fallen for five straight months.

Single-family spending was down 1.3 percent to an annual rate of $108.5 billion following a 1.2 percent loss a month earlier. Apartment construction was up 1.1 percent to $19 billion after a 0.5 percent gain in July.

But non-residential spending, which advanced 4.2 percent in July, fell 4.3 percent to annual rate of $104.8 billion in August and more than erased the gain. Industrial spending, which jumped 16.2 percent in July, slipped back 12.7 percent.

"There's a lot more weakness to come," Delano said. "It's consistent with a lack of confidence and a wait-and-see attitude."

Government spending totaled an annual rate of $115.1 billion following a 2.7 percent decline the previous month. Spending on highways and streets led the advance with a 9.0 percent gain.

The 0.3 percent increase in construction spending in July was the first advance since a 0.4 percent gain in March. Spending fell 2.8 percent in April, 0.2 percent in May and 0.6 percent in June.

In addition to consumer caution over the state of the economy and the Persian Gulf crisis, analysts have attributed the general weakness in the construction industry to high interest rates, tight lending requirements, and, in some areas, overbuilding resulting in high vacancies.

The weakness has been illustrated in recent Labor Department reports showing the loss of nearly 100,000 construction jobs in the past three months. This included 40,000 jobs, after a seasonal adjustment, in August, the sixth consecutive monthly decline.

JANE BRYANT QUINN

Limited partnership, risky for retirement

By Jane Bryant Quinn

NEW YORK — What is the worst investment you can make if you're middle-aged or near retirement? Answer: a limited partnership. These deals are risky even if (surprise, surprise) they turn out to be profitable.

Quinn

On the surface, a partnership sounds tempting. You're promised a steady income now and a capital gain when you retire. The "anticipated" holding period may be five to eight years, after which the property will be sold and the proceeds distributed. Or the sponsor may "expect" to issue shares in two years that can be sold in the open market.

But nothing binds the sponsor to those exit dates. When the time comes to sell, he may decide not to. Perhaps he thinks prices are too low. Perhaps the properties aren't salable. Perhaps he doesn't want to surrender the fat fees he takes every year for managing the investment. Whatever his motive, you may not get your money back when you expected.

Similarly, the sponsor may decide not to list the properties for public trading, because there's not enough profit there.

So you won't have that money to live on, after all. And your troubles get worse, if you made the investment through an Individual Retirement Account, Keogh plan, 401(k) or other retirement account.

Under the law, you must make substantial annual withdrawals from the plan after you pass age 70 1-2. The withdrawals are designed to exhaust the account over your expected lifetime or the lifetimes of you and a beneficiary (like a spouse).

If you don't take out the money on schedule, you'll be socked with a 50 percent penalty on the difference between what you actually took and what you should have received. The IRS says no exceptions are made for investors whose funds are tied up in a limited partnership and can't be withdrawn.

What's more, your broker may put a valuation on the partnership that is unrealistically high. "In some cases, sponsors are just telling people that their units are worth what they paid, because they don't go out and value it," says Spencer Jeffries, who tracks partnership performance for Partnership Profiles in Dallas.

If you try to sell your units through one of the partnership exchanges, you'll probably get a much lower bid or none at all. Yet, for purposes of an IRA or Keogh withdrawal, the broker's valuation is gospel. If penalties are owed, they'll be based on what the broker says the account is worth.

Investors with more than one IRA have an escape hatch. You're allowed to withdraw extra money from your other IRAs to cover the funds that should come from the one that's tied up.

But that doesn't work with Keogh plans or 401(k)s. Even if you have more than one plan, you have to withdraw the proper amount from each one individually. Otherwise, penalties apply.

Chicago attorney Herbert Beigel has just filed a class-action lawsuit against Prudential Bache on behalf of an older client trapped in a partnership. Anthony J. Molica, a retiree, bought Prudential's Summit Insured Equity Limited Partnership in 1986 with his 401(k) money. According to his wife, Angela, the broker said that the partnership was "no-risk."

Amoco to spend $11 million drilling in Hockley County

Amoco Production Co. announced it will drill 37 infill wells in Hockley County to increase production and the ultimate recovery of oil reserves located there.

Drilling, which will begin during October using a maximum of four rigs simultaneously, will be concentrating in the southwestern part of the 16,340 acre Levelland Unit. Amoco said the majority of the wells should be completed by the end of the years.

The program will also include a conversion of 18 current oil wells to water injection wells. The 37 new oil producers and 18 conversions will increase well density in the unit and follows a 72-well infill program completed in 1988.

Once the new drilling program is completed, water will be injected into the converted oil wells to push more oil to the newly drilled wells and other producing wells nearby.

The wells, with an average depth of 4,900 feet, will be drilled to the San Andres Formation. Cost of drilling and conversion program will be about $11 million.

"This new program is a result of Amoco's ongoing efforts to increase production and recoverable reserves from existing fields while realizing acceptable, long-term financial returns," says D.D. Gilliam, Amoco Production vice president in Houston.

The Levelland Unit — in the eastern part of Levelland Field — currently has 494 oil producers and 449 water injection wells. Current oil production from the West Texas producing property is more than 14,500 barrels daily.

Amoco has an 85.1 percent working interest in the unit. Other interest owners include Texaco, Dekalb Energy Co. and Chevron.

Mayor dreams of casino for his town

By M.R. Kropko

LORAIN, Ohio (AP) — Mayor Alex Olejko can look out his office window at sea gulls gliding over piles of iron ore, a reminder of this Lake Erie port's industrial past.

He also can see the remains of the once bustling American Shipbuilding Co. yard that shut down in 1983.

But he has a vision of the mostly barren 54-acre site transformed into a $300 million casino resort that would spur development along the Black River and bring jobs to this blue-collar city.

He hopes to take the first step toward that dream Nov. 6, when Ohio voters decide whether to let Lorain hold an election on allowing a casino.

If the state's voters give their OK, and Lorain voters follow with their own approval, the city will become Ohio's first site for an experimental casino. If the venture was deemed successful after three years, the state could eventually have seven other casino-resort districts.

The proposed constitutional amendment was put on the ballot by a petition drive after the state Senate rejected the idea. It has drawn opposition from religious leaders as well as Gov. Richard Celeste and the mayors of Cleveland, Cincinnati and Columbus.

"If they don't want to gamble that's fine. I don't like to gamble either. But don't deny me my choice. Just like if I want to have a beer, that's my choice. That's what America is all about — freedom of choice," the mayor said.

Gambling opponents say the "right to vote" argument is a ploy to have the casino issue decided only in Lorain, where it is most likely to pass.

"Their Let Us Vote campaign ... uses a slick public relations theme to somehow portray that if anyone is against Issue 3 they are somehow un-American or unpatriotic," said the Rev. John Adams of Lorain, who heads a coalition opposing the casino plan.

Colorado and North Dakota are among several other states that have ballot measures on gambling this year.

In Lorain, Olejko, a former steelworker, said the casino-hotel would be a great tourist destination and would create 3,000 to 7,000 jobs.

Lorain's steel and auto industries are prone to severe setbacks when the nation's economy slumps, and the mayor said employment has been declining over the years at Lorain's Ford assembly plant and the former USX Lorain Works, now the USS-Kobe (Japan) joint venture.

The city's population, estimated at 80,000 in 1980, has fallen to about 75,000.

Adams, pastor of Lake Breeze Revival Center, a non-denominational church, said his opposition is not based on religious or moral values.

"Casinos don't deliver what they promise, plain and simple," he said. "There is a certain element of wanting something for nothing that comes along with pulling the handle of a slot machine or making a bet. People may think they will get a lot more out of it than they actually do get."

Wal-Mart agrees to buy Texas distributor

BENTONVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Wal-Mart Stores Inc. has reached an agreement in principle to buy McLane Co. Inc., a distributor headquartered in Temple, Texas.

The announcement Monday by Wal-Mart said McLane shareholders will be offered the option of receiving cash or shares of Wal-Mart Stores Inc. common stock.

McLane is in the specialized distribution industry, serving more than 26,000 stores throughout the United States. It supplies its retail customers with grocery and non-grocery products, including perishable, non-perishable and general merchandise items.

Paul R. Carter, executive vice president of Wal-Mart, said McLane primarily supplies convenience stores and has been a supplier for Wal-Mart for several years.

"Distribution to Wal-Mart is important and this acquisition will complement our present distribution network," he said. "McLane will continue to run autonomously and will continue to serve its present base of customers."

David Gross, Wal-Mart's president and chief executive, said McLane Co. will operate autonomously as a Wal-Mart subsidiary.

McLane employs about 4,300 people in its 14 distribution centers in 11 states. It had total net sales of more than $2.6 billion for the year ended Jan. 26, 1990.

"The acquisition of McLane Co. will provide a solid specialized distribution network complementing our existing capacities, as well as offer many opportunities for growth," Glass said.

"This merger with Wal-Mart represents a tremendous opportunity for the shareholders and employees of McLane Co. and will permit McLane Co. to continue its long-term strategy of growth in the grocery and retail distribution industry," said Drayton McLane Jr.

Drayton McLane will remain president and chief executive officer of McLane and will be named a vice chairman of Wal-Mart.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Safe, tax-free investing

By Bill Doyle

Q. I am a 68-year-old widow, working part time to make ends meet. My assets consist of my home worth about $140,000, $15,000 in a savings account and the $35,000 I invested in a mutual fund. The fund was supposed to be a blue chip, but its per share value is below the price I paid.

Should I put some of my savings in certificates of deposit? Should I pull out of the mutual fund before I lose more or should I hang in there? Can you suggest safe tax-free investments for me?

Doyle

A. Shifting some of your assets into CDs would be a wise move. You should keep some money — say, $5,000 — in your savings account as an emergency reserve. Move the rest of what you have in the savings account to CDs, where you will get higher interest.

That mutual fund clearly is a bummer and has to be counted as a risk. That's something you can't afford to take. For safety sake, redeem your mutual fund shares and put the proceeds you receive into CDs.

Forget about tax-free investments, such as municipal bonds. Those investments pay lower interest than taxable investments and are suitable only for people in the 28 or 33 percent federal income tax brackets. Since you need to work part time to keep body and soul together, I have to assume you are in the 15 percent federal income tax bracket. Even after paying income tax, you get more keeping money from the higher interest paid on CDs than you would from lower tax-free interest.

Q. In school and throughout my business career, I was taught that a contract is a binding agreement. I had a CD with a favorable interest rate at a financially troubled savings and loan association. A CD is a contract. A larger S&L took over the S&L at which I had the CD and notified me the interest rate was being reduced. That's an obvious breach of contract.

Did Congress legislate that right to allow a S&L with $40 billion in assets to exercise its greed at the expense of me and other senior citizens?

A. Although Congress didn't phrase things as you do, it did pass the S&L law. One provision of that massive legislation does permit an institution taking over a failing S&L to lower CD interest rates or even cancel the CDs issued by the busted S&L.

Your unhappiness is understandable. But what happened was not a breach of contract. Your CD contract was with a failing S&L. That contract ended when that S&L was closed and its operations and assets were taken over by the larger and financially healthy S&L.

You now have a new CD contract with the larger S&L. Under the terms of the S&L bailout law, that institution was required to give you two weeks notice of its intention to cut CD interest rates. You could have pulled your money out of the CD during that 14-day period, without any early withdrawal penalty.

with a big return and liquid in two years." Prudential had originally planned to list the partnership for public trading, but subsequently decided not to.

The Molicas' investment has been up for sale for a year with no takers at any price. Yet their January, 1990, statement from PruBache values the units at $15,500-exactly what they paid.

Next year, Mr. Molica will reach age 70 1-2 with a frozen IRA and tax penalties in prospect. He is suing for damages. A spokesperson for Prudential Bache says that the allegations are "without merit and we intend to vigorously defend it."

In another case, against two partnerships sponsored by Hutton Real Estate Services in 1983 and 1984, the properties were to have been sold within five to eight years. But Shearson Lehman Brothers, which took over Hutton, doesn't want to sell now and Beigel is suing to force it. A spokesman for Shearson says the sale was intended within eight years "from the time properties were acquired," and they weren't acquired until 1985. Makes you wonder what was happening to the money for the first two years.

CLASH: Firm caught between brothers, government

(From 4C)

In a letter to the company, White House Chief of Staff John Sununu called a 10-month-old boycott of Salvadoran coffee a "misguided attempt to cripple the Salvadoran economy" that will "do nothing to advance the peace process, democracy or human rights."

Procter & Gamble says it views the conflict as a dispute between peace activists and U.S. foreign policy and would prefer to stay out of that disagreement.

In a position paper distributed to shareholders, the company pointed out that El Salvador's Catholic bishops oppose the coffee boycott because lost sales would harm farmers and workers.

"Our biggest concern is to publicize the human rights abuses in El Salvador and try to bring about a change," Robert Gamble said from his home in Canada.

He said he didn't know how much stock he controlled. However, James Gamble owns 24,806 shares — worth more than $2 million, but a pittance compared with the 346,425,304 voting shares.

"It was an accomplishment for us to get the resolution officially on the ballot," James Gamble said from Massachusetts. "We don't have an illusion of actually winning the vote, but if we're able to win 3 percent this year then the resolution stays on the ballot for next year.

"Hopefully we can make Procter & Gamble think about their business decision," he said.

Procter & Gamble said Salvadoran beans make up about 2 percent of the coffee used to produce its Folgers blend, but that's not the issue.

"We could very easily replace the Salvadoran coffee with coffee beans from other countries, but this isn't an economic decision for us," said company spokesman Donald Tassone.

In its most recent fiscal year, Procter & Gamble had $24.1 billion in total sales.

"As a company, we can't let a very small but vocal group inject us into their dispute with the U.S. government, no matter how well intentioned it might be," he said.

Skulls, bones make up nationwide business

By Bill Johnson

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Jay Villemarette thought it was time to open a shop when the skulls started filling up all the closets. And anyway, his wife was getting tired of pushing them off the kitchen table when it was time to eat.

Now the skulls, animal teeth, horns and "just about any other animal by-product" hang on walls, rest on shelves and otherwise take up most of the space of a small building in southside Oklahoma City.

There are horns in a basket by the door, bear claws in a case on the counter. Another case contains fossil shark teeth. Human skulls grin from a lower shelf, a hippopotamus skull rests on the floor near the skull of a giraffe and tiny, fragile-looking bird skulls look as though a breath could blow them to the floor.

What he doesn't have in stock, he says he probably can get — except for an elephant skull.

Villemarette emphasizes that no animals are killed just to supply his business. "Everything we deal in is a by-product," he says.

Although it originally dealt exclusively with museums and educational institutions, a hefty part of the business now caters to the interior decorator or homeowner looking for the Southwestern touch or artists needing a bit of nature to help a work along.

"A lot of Indian artists in town try to re-create the traditional forms of art," Villemarette says. "They use bones, deer teeth and antlers and the like."

While there is a market for every type of skull, he says it is different for each one. He sells 600 and 700 beaver skulls a year, but no more than 40 or 50 domestic dog skulls are sold.

"We have over 100 specimens in stock," says Villemarette, a 25-year-old native of New Jersey who moved to Oklahoma 13 years ago. Size ranges from a tiny sub-species of field mouse to a hippopotamus. Prices also range as widely, starting at "$5 for a third-quality mink skull to $1,500 for a hippopotamus skull.

"Before trading in elephant products was stopped, an elephant skull ran in the $4,000 to $6,000 range."

Villemarette said he had an estimated 15,000 skulls of one kind and another in stock and produces "4,600 skulls a month."

He said his interest in bones and skulls was piqued when he found a dog's skeleton in the woods when he was 8. A few years later he found the skeleton of a cat "and that's when my obsession went nuts," he said.

He started his own collection and, before long, was trading and selling skulls as a pasttime while doing auto painting and body work.

"When the Oklahoma economy got so bad, I decided I could make as much money doing this as I could at my trade, so I started this fulltime," Villemarette said.

That was four years ago, and the move from home-based business to a shop is the latest indication his decision wasn't wrong.

"I'm working on a new catalog, a little bit more jazzed up to appeal to the average consumer instead of just the museums and educators," he says. "Educators don't care what a catalog looks like. They just want to be able to see the scientific name."

Many of the natural bone human skulls and skeletons he deals in are what he calls recycled, purchased from medical schools or doctors who no longer need or want them, refinished and then resold. Such a skeleton sells for $2,600, he said.

He also has human skeletons, skulls and bones made of plastic.

Will Willmon's Custom Affects window tinting beats sun's glare

Although for the most part, summer's searing temperatures have passed, more and more Midlanders are turning to cooling window tinting to beat the heat throughout the year. One new business has the answer to help you cut the glare and the heat out of your life. Will Willmon's Custom Affects specializes in quality auto, residential and commercial glass tinting.

Not only can you have the windows of your car professionally tinted, but you can take advantage of Willmon's expertise in applying tinting to home and mobile home windows and boats. With five years of experience in custom window tinting, Willmon has what it takes to get your job done in a prompt, professional manner.

Call 687-0233 for a free estimate. "If I am away from the phone, delivering a car, for example, please leave a message on my answering machine," said Willmon. "I'll return the call as soon as possible." Cars receive same day service, and pick up and delivery are offered at no extra charge.

Custom Affects is an authorized dealer for Sun Specialties tinting film. Choose the amount of tinting — 35 or 20 percent — and choose the color — smoke, bronze, green, red and more. Willmon can find practically any color of your choice for the job.

Willmon is committed to giving his customers a quality job at a fair price. In fact, he goes the extra step on taking the door panels off to put the film on underneath the rubber so the film won't peel off. Carpets are also taped and each job is handled with professional care.

Call 687-0233 today for more details on the Custom Affects summer special. Everyday prices are standard cab minitrucks for just $67.95. Suburbans and Jeep Cherokees can be tinted for $145-$160 and most small two door cars for $105-120. Full-size standard cabs, Ford and Chevy pickups for $75.00.

Cooling window film does much more for you than reduce the temperature in your car or home. It helps save on energy bills and helps keep your interior from fading. As a safety feature, window tinting film helps keep your glass from shattering.

Custom Affects store hours are Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday hours are by appointment.

Custom Affects is located at 1600 Cotton Flat Road — the corner of Francis and Cotton Flat. Call 687-0233 for more information.

Fox Floors announces recent move to South Midkiff Street location

Now it's easier than ever to find the Fox Floors showroom. Fox Floors has recently moved to 1308 South Midkiff, #201, in the Midkiff Business Center, just south of the railroad tracks.

For 15 years, owners James and Renee Fox have specialized in the sales and expert installation of high quality flooring, counter tops and other home decorating products.

Turn to Fox Floors for any commercial or residential need such as:

- carpet
- wallpaper
- ceramic tile
- plantation shutters
- hardwood floors
- vinyl floors

James Fox has acquired 30 years of local experience in floor, Formica and counter top installation. He is a specialist at the newest, most popular addition to Midland homes — the beveled edge counter top. James is one of only two qualified beveled edge installers in this area. His customers like the beveled edge counter top because it gets away from the traditional black edge where the Formica meets at the 90 degree angle.

At Fox Floors, you can always count on something being on sale. Whatever savings are passed on from the companies and their distributors, Fox Floors passes them on to you. Furthermore, because Fox Floors has a significantly lower overhead than other similar businesses, James and Renee can keep prices down and work harder for their customers.

Fox Floors offers a large selection of carpets, tiles, vinyl and wood flooring in a variety of price ranges, but it all comes down to one word: quality. In the showroom are many sample books for you to browse through. Renee, who has worked with builders and realtors for years, can help you select the perfect color or texture for the job at hand. Comet Cleaners: Professional alterationist, silk presser on staff

Friendly, professional service is a Comet Cleaners trademark, and owner Billie Jo Corbell is proud of her employees and the hard work they do for their customers.

Bring in your hems and zippers by 9 a.m. Monday through Friday and they will be ready the same day. In addition, she is an expert at suit tailoring, party dresses, western wear, ties, and fitting wedding gowns.

"Mary is a gem," said Billie Jo. "We are so lucky to have her and our customers tell us that! She is really one of the best alterationists in the area."

Another Comet employee is head silk presser Maribel Villa. She has been with Comet for eight years, almost from the first day Comet opened. She specializes in party and wedding gowns, silk garments, ultrasueds, wools and pleats. "Maribel is very good at stretching garments, too," added Billie Jo. "We are thrilled to have her on our staff."

Eight years ago, on Sept. 3, 1982, Billie Jo opened her first Comet Cleaners at 2606 N. Midland Drive. That was the beginning of "Drop your pants" specials. After many years of Midlanders dropping their pants at Comet, there are now four locations to choose from.

Billie Jo offers some cleaning hints for you to remember as the seasons begin to change. Have your summer things cleaned before you put them away for the winter. The longer the stains and soils are left in the garments, the greater the probability of their becoming permanently set. Consider waterproofing your clothes, also.

Also, insects will go straight to stains for their lunch. Check your winter wools when you take them out of storage. In some cases you can see the damage but sometimes the damage is not detected before the item is drycleaned. Flexing of the fabric during cleaning causes the weakened yarns to break and fall out, resulting in a hole.

The customer may be inclined to blame the dry cleaner, but this type of damage cannot result from drycleaning. The insect got there first.

Comet Cleaners dry cleans on Saturdays until 11 a.m. for your convenience and stays open until 5 p.m.

Other Comet Cleaners specials and services include:

Dental implants can improve quality of life, restore natural feeling

Missing teeth and a tax audit are both looked upon as truly bothersome irritations. In addition, both are much less of a problem, as long as they happen to someone else! In fairness to the tax auditors, it could be said that at least they leave you a chance for a refund, but not so with teeth! It is estimated that 38 million people in this country have lost all their teeth.

In addition, it has been stated that among those over 65 years of age, over half are without their natural teeth.

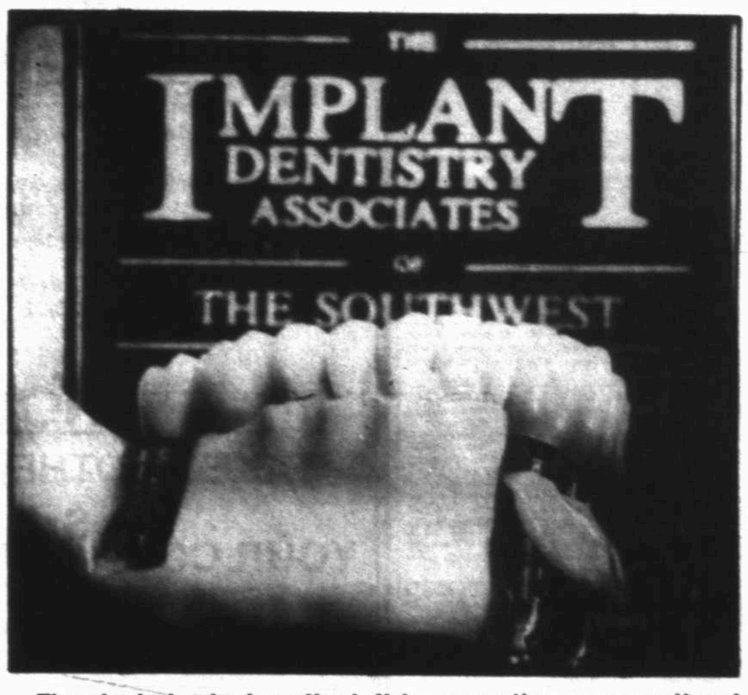
This represents a considerable impairment of chewing function, considering that a properly fitted new denture, placed upon an ideal jaw ridge, can at best, exert only 12 percent of those chewing forces generated by natural teeth. The result of this reduced chewing function upon the digestive process is indirect, but nevertheless immediate.

Proper chewing is the first and critical step of digestion. One need only look at the number of products that are marketed as denture adhesives and digestion aids, to see that there is a serious, and significant problem for those people affected.

Fortunately, there are now different answers. Dental implants can offer many benefits such as beautiful, natural looking teeth replacements without the constant inconvenience and discomfort of unanchored, removable dentures.

Dental implants can provide a method to anchor individual replacement teeth, or serve to replace a partial or full denture with fixed bridgework. That is to say, dental implants can replace a single tooth or several teeth, even teeth that have been lost through athletic or industrial injuries.

The overall quality of life is felt to have improved by many who have experienced the reduction of frustrations associated with dentures or removable bridgework. They also feel that dental implants not only improve their chewing ability, but also restore a feeling of more natural tooth function.



The single implant on the left is supporting a conventional "fixed" replacement bridge that is cementable to place using standard dental techniques. On the other side, the multiple implants are carrying replacement teeth, which are "fixed" by screws that are "detachable" by the dental implant team at The Implant Denistry Associates of the Southwest. This has been called a "Fixed-Detachable" type."

If you are missing one, a few, or even all of your teeth, doesn't the placement of dental implants deserve your consideration?

For your implant treatment program, the Implant Dentistry Associates of the Southwest is a group of dentists who affiliate, or work together as a team, in the delivery of comprehensive care in the field of Dental Implantology.

These dentists share neither corporate or formal unity, nor any financial relationship. They are united only by common values and a deep, firmly held devotion to the best long term interests of the patient.

Each team dentist holds a personal commitment and interest in the field of dental implantology as well as a professional appreciation for the direct and practical benefits that dental implants can provide for the patient.

In addition, each dentist has an overall willingness to share knowledge with other dentists whose orientation and interests are compatible and coupled with a willingness to work cooperatively.

It is also important to know these dentists are sufficiently experienced to understand that no one single type, from any manufacturer's so-called "implant system" will best serve the long term interest of all patients.

These dentists have freely associated together in their studies of dental implantology and continue to actively share a knowledge base as they cooperatively develop and execute the comprehensive treatment programs: however, as noted previously, there is a cooperative team approach but there is no sharing of costs or fees. Those matters are handled directly with the specific dental office involved.

This selected group of dentists have been referred to as The Implant Dentistry Associates of the Southwest and the founder and director of this group is Dr. Millard J. Kimery, who is a specialist in the field of periodontics. He has maintained a practice in the Permian Basin that is now in its 18th year.

Throughout that time Dr. Kimery has continued an intensive program of post-doctoral studies in order to deliver the latest in technological advances. It may be of interest to note that he is one of the very few periodontists providing techniques in laser surgery as well as dental implantology.

Periodontics is a field of dentistry that is especially concerned with preserving the natural teeth, or dentition. This orientation, coupled with the required background field of study, uniquely qualifies the periodontist for the work in dental implantology.

From the earliest onset of training, the graduate student in periodontics is steeped in the concepts of cellular physiology, metabolism, tissue integrity and their ongoing maintenance.

The preserving of the natural dentition is the overriding, long term goal. Such orientation has been contrasted to other fields of study in which those concepts seem to be, at best, given only indirect attention. It has also been said that still other fields seem more orientated to prompt removal with as little trauma as possible.

Dr. Kimery's interest in the field of Dental Implantology had its origin in the late 1960s. Dr. Kimery has successfully completed an intense, comprehensive written examination provided by the American Academy of Implant Dentistry and has achieved over 450 post-doctoral credit hours of training in the study of dental implants.

In summary, if you are considering dental implants and are concerned about the adequacy of comprehensive training, please call The Implants Dentistry Associates of the Southwest. Dr. Kimery can be reached in Midland at 683-6384 and in Abilene at (915) 698-6426. The staff will be most happy to provide you with a copy of an informative brochure on how and what dental implants can do for you.

Tell about your company on Business & Industry pages

Ever wished you could see your company's name in the headlines? Every business has a story to tell, and yours can too!

The Business and Industry pages, published each Tuesday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram, give you the perfect opportunity to tell your story.

The Business and Industry pages offer advertisers a unique format. The articles and pictures on the pages let readers know what various businesses have to offer.

Both advertisers who offer services and those who are selling a product have been very satisfied with the response they have received by advertising on the Business and Industry pages.

What's really amazing is that your business can be on these pages for a remarkably reasonable rate. Prices for ads start at just $19.58 (gross) per week.

All it takes to begin advertising on the Business and Industry pages is a call to the retail advertising department at 682-5311.

Ads on this page are set up on a contract basis. The number of articles and pictures an advertiser gets is determined by the size of the ad that is run each week on the pages.

The advertiser pays only for the ad, thereby spreading the cost out over a 13 or 26 week period.

Advertisers do not have to worry about writing the articles or taking the pictures themselves. Janice Ford, the Midland Reporter-Telegram's advertising feature writer, will take care of that.
