African Crisis Talks Open Today

INDIANA CONGREGATION STOCKPILING FOOD, WEAPONS

Church Group Prepares For War Against Witches

ZIONSVILLE, Ind. (UPI) — A California evangelist has convinced some members of a fundamentalist Baptist church congregation they must prepare for a war against witches conspiring to conquer the world.

Those members are stockpiling food, buying weapons and even considering the purchase of property in Christian retreats, according to Gev. H. Eugeme Riker, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Zionsville, a community near Indianapolis.

The moving force behind it all is evangelist John Todd, a self-styled "born again" Christian, who claims he once participated in the high decision-making councils of a group of witches called the Illuminati.

Todd, 28, said he was born and raised in witchcraft, but six years ago was "saved" from the pagan religion.

"John Todd has spurred folks to draw nearer the heart of God," explained Riker. "He's stirred people more than any speaker we've had.

Riker said Todd has preached at his church on several occasions — the last in late March — and will return in September. He added Todd also has engagements at several other Indiana communities this fall.

Todd preaches that the Illuminati has plans for creating a major crisis as early as 1980 through disruptive strikes of the food and transportation systems.

The base for Illuminati in the United States is the Council on Foreign Relations, according to Todd. He charged the financial backing is from David Rockefeller and the Standard Oil Co.

The evangelist says the strategy to combat the witches is to stockpile food for three months to a year, have firearms for self-defense and, if possible, purchase land and move to "almost impregnable Christian retreats."

He also has suggested socalled "Jesus gardens" in the backyards and Riker explained that some members have torn up the yards to plant food.

Most of those reacting to the talks appear to be middle-aged or older members of the congregation. Some younger persons reportedly are at odds with parents because of their actions in response to Todd.

Soviet Role Study Set By Allies

PARIS (AP) — Experts from the United States and four European countries meet here today to discuss alleged Soviet-inspired "destabilization" in Africa and organize backing for a French-sponsored Pan-African defense force for Zaire.

The representatives from the United States, France, Britain, Belgium and West Germany will conduct "an in-depth analysis of recent events in Africa" during their two-day meeting and make recommendations to their governments, a spokesman for the French Foreign Ministry said.

Removing Paratroopers

The U.S. planes also are scheduled to fly out the 600 French paratroopers who were dropped into Kolwezi more than two weeks ago to drive out the rebels who had invaded Zaire's southern Shaba Province. The legionnaires were to be flown back to their bases in Corsica.

French sources, who declined to be identified, said most of the legionnaires will be replaced by midweek with 1,500 Moroccans and eventually 500 other African troops. The most likely contributors are Gabon, Togo, Senegal, and possibly Ivory Coast, the sources said. The force will be led by French officers and armed by France, which already has 14,000 troops in and around Africa, the sources said.

France Provides Leadership

France took the lead in convening the meeting because President Valery Giscard d'Estaing believes Western interests throughout Africa are threatened by Soviet-inspired disruption of pro-Western African governments. The French sources said the main focus of the meeting will be on how to continue economic development in African countries threatened by military and political turmoil.

The Soviet Union criticized the Paris meeting Sunday and charged that NATO members are making "aggressive plans" to expand their military intervention in Zaire through a Pan-African force.

The Soviet news agency Tass, in a Moscow dispatch, said the Pan-African force would cover up NATO military operations in Zaire and act "as a prop of the Kinshasa regime" to ensure Western business interests and to be used agaist national liberations movements.

Five-Man American Team

Rene Journiac, Giscard d'Estaing's top aide on African affairs, was in West Africa last week, reportedly lining up support for the peace force which first was proposed by President Omar Bongo of Gabon. Journiac and Jean Soutou, the Foreign Ministry's No. 2 man, head the French delegation to the Paris talks. David D. Newsom, undersecretary of state for political affairs and former chief of the State Department's Africa section, leads a five-man American team.

Newsom met informally with French officials Sunday, sources said. Washington apparently has bowed to French insistence that the meeting cover African security — particularly Zairian security — as well as economic aid.

"With troop movements and planes in the air, I don't see how they can avoid talking about it," said a diplomat who declined to be identified.

Originally, the meeting was called to prepare for a conference in Brussels, Belgium, later this month on Western aid for economically ravaged Zaire. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said last week in Washington that is all he wanted Newsom to talk about. But Vance apparently relented after France insisted that economic aid meant little unless security could be guaranteed.

The bulk of Zaire's export earnings come from sales of copper, cobalt and zinc mined in Shaba Province and most

Drug Sales Cronyism Uncovered

WASHINGTON (AP) — An internal HEW probe of the National Institute on Drug Abuse has disclosed "a substantial appearance of impropriety" in the way contracts worth several million dollars were awarded to friends and relatives of institute officials.

But the report released Sunday by HEW's inspector general, Thomas D. Morris, said there were "no provable violations of law."

Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of health, education and welfare, said, "I am deeply disturbed with the loose management practices and evidences of cronyism which (Morris') report reveals."

He ordered his department chiefs to make sure that "the contract and grant practices of NIDA are impecabble, free from favoritism or cronyism."

Travel Restricted

Califano also instructed HEW lawyers in a two-page memorandum "to determine whether any further action, including recovery of government funds, is warranted." And he said no NIDA officials are to travel overseas without special permission.

Califano ordered the investigation after columnist Jack Anderson, in a series of articles last January, charged that the $260 million drug abuse agency was run by "a clutch of cronies" who helped friends get big government contracts and frequently went on junkets overseas.

"The Anderson allegations are, in large measure, based on fact. It does not follow, however, that actionable improprieties were committed," Morris concluded.

Four Contracts Received

The report said there was "continuing concern" about the relationship between NIDA and Richard Katon Associates, a firm that has received four contracts from NIDA totaling $2.1 million since 1975.

The only one still in effect is a $1 million contract now up for renewal.

Califano said he wants a special study made on whether to continue that contract or to have the work done in-house.

Record Growth Set By Arson

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Arson is now the most destructive and fastest-growing crime in America, the government reported Sunday, yet it gets little attention from police or the FBI.

During 1975 alone, the government report said, arson — motivated most often by a desire for revenge or by teenage vandalism — killed 1,000 Americans including 45 firemen, injured 10,000 and caused $1.4 billion in property damage.

Incidence of arson increased 325 percent in the decade ending in 1975, outstripping the increases in all the serious crime categories reported each detection and investigation," it said.

Many suspicious fires do not get investigated, the report said, and some experts believe at least half the fires classified as having "unknown causes" in fact involve arson.

Arrest and conviction rates are also low, the report said — an average of only nine arrests and two convictions per 100 known arson fires that occurred during the four-year study period.

Arrest studies showed insurance fraud was the motive in omly about 5 percent of the cases, while revenge was the motive of adults in 55 percent.

Other motives included concealing another crime and pyromania — a psychotic urge to set fires.

Juveniles Arrested

About 60 percemt of those arrested were juveniles, the report said. Among them, vandalism was the motive 80 percent of the time.

The study said arson investigators face special problems: Witnesses are rare. The fires destroy much of the evidence. The investigator begins without even knowing whether a crime has been committed. And his job is both tedious and dirty.

The replies included requests for more and better-trained investigators; a computer data bank to help spot repeat offenders and "professional torches;" more research into the residue characteristics of used arson materials; better laboratory tools, and more cooperation from insurance companies.

New Storm Siege Due Over Area

A-J News Services

TORNADO, large hail and flash flood watches were posted for almost every South Plains county Sunday as storms that left a trail of hail 12 inches deep to the north and heavy rains to the west, began drifting across the region.

Forecasters said the storms, scheduled to plague the region through Tuesday, could bring as much as one-half of an inch of rain to most area cities by early today.

A 60 percent chance of showers is forecast for this afternoon, decreasing to 30 percent tonight.

Lower Temperatures Due

Overcast conditions should keep temperatures in the 70s and lower 80s most of the week. Highs today should be in the upper 70s, dropping to near 60 tonight. Highs Tuesday should reach near 80.

Late Sunday the heaviest storm activity was centered over Bailey, Lamb and Hockley Counties. Amarillo Department of Public Safety troopers reported minor flooding along highways in that area.

A severe thunderstorm warning was posted at 11 p.m. for Lubbock County as winds gusting to 33 mph and rain hit the Hub City.

Warnings were issued about 4:45 p.m. Sunday for virtually every county of the South Plains and the Panhandle after storms that dumped 12 inches of hail on Boise City, Okla., and caused flash floods in other areas, began moving southeastward.

Childress reported some street flooding from heavy rains, and police noted scattered reports of marble-size hail and winds near 40 mph.

Funnel Clouds Sighted

Storm activity Saturday night and early Sunday caused minor flooding in the Palo Duro Canyon area and sent waters over the banks of the Tierra Blanca Creek in Deaf Smith County. No damage was reported.

Dalhart police also reported funnel

'Da' Sweeps Tony Awards

NEW YORK (AP) — Hugh Leonard's "Da," in which an Irishman is forced to come to terms with the memory of his father, won best play, best actor, best direction and best featured actor in the 32nd annual presentation of Broadway's Tony Awards Sunday night.

The award for featured actor went to Lester Rawlins, the stern, moralistic businessman in the Irish drama.

Lubbock Men Perish When Trailer Burns

By PAT TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

TWO YOUNG Lubbock men died Sunday morning when fire swept through a mobile home in far west Lubbock.

By the time retired fireman J. W. Hough ran to Harold Ray Martin's burning trailer about 7:50 a.m. Sunday, flames already had engulfed the mobile home.

Inside were the bodies of 22-year-old Martin and his overnight guest, Ted "Bubba" Hancock, 21, of 4206 51st St.

The fire, which may have begun an hour earlier, gutted the older, 12-by-50 foot mobile home, located on space 38 at the Camelot Village trailer park, 6001 W. 34th St.

Trailer Completely Engulfed

"I could tell (the trailer) was completely engulfed (inside) and had been burning a long time," Hough, a 20-year firefighter said. "Glass from a little kitchen window already had popped out on the grass," he added.

Moments before, Hough and his wife had stepped outside their trailer, two spaces away from Martin's, on their way to choir practice at the Highland Baptist Church.

But what Hough first believed to be fog turned out to be smoke and as he ran for the trailer, his wife sought out her neighbor, Gary Goff, who phoned the fire department.

Six units and about 20 firemen arrived by 7:52 a.m. and the fire was out 11 minutes later.

AID ambulance attendants arrived to remove Hancock's body, which was found slumped in the charred kitchen area, and Martin's, which was found beside his bed.

Fire Marshal A. C. Black said the fire may have been caused by a dropped cigarette on a living room couch.

Locks Block Entry

When he arrived at the burning trailer, Hough unsuccessfully tried to rouse the men but was frustrated by locked doors, red-hot doorknobs and the trailer's small windows.

"I saw (fire deaths) happen many times, being a fireman," Hough said later. "And it still gets to me."

A neighbor's dog reportedly had been barking loudly for some time, Mrs. Hough said, and the dog's owner could not understand her pet's behavior.

Later, the woman told the Houghs the dog must have smelled the foul smoke billowing out of Martin's trailer.

The death of the two young men brought to three the number of persons killed in fire-related incidents this year.

On March 4, 77-year-old Jewell Mae Williams died from smoke inhalation at her fifth floor room in the Pioneer Retirement Hotel, 1204 Broadway. She had been smoking in bed, investigators said later.

Services for Martin, a Monterey High School graduate and Lubbock native, will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Ford Memorial Chapel of the First Baptist Church with the Rev. J. T. Bolding, a retired Baptist minister, officiating.

Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Sanders Fu-

Environmental Lobbying Group Names 'Dirty Dozen' Solons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two senators and 10 representatives were named by an environmental lobbying group on Sunday as the 1978 Dirty Dozen, an election-year list of congressmen the group feels should be defeated because of their records on environmental issues.

The list, which has been issued each election year since 1970, seeks to target congressmen deemed both anti-environmentalist and vulnerable at the polls. Of 41 congressmen named in past years, 25 have been defeated and six have retired.

Of the 12 named this year, several said in response that they regarded themselves as sympathetic to environmental issues or even as environmentalists, but that they are required to consider other factors that the sponsors of the Dirty Dozen list either ignored or did not understand.

A few said they were honored to be on the list, which is compiled by the political arm of the lobbying group Environmental Action.

The 12 named were Sens. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and Reps. William Armstong, R-Colo.; Garry Brown, R-Mich.; Samuel Devine, R-Ohio; Willis Gradison, R-Ohio; George Hansen, R-Idaho; Jerry Huckaby, D-La.; John Myers, R-Ind.; Ted Risenhoover, D-Okla.; Ray Roberts, D-Texas; and Jamie Whitten, D-Miss.

A. Blakeman Early, a spokesman for the Dirty Dozen campaign, said the list was based primarily on 14 Senate and 19 House votes, including amendments to air and water pollution control laws, strip mining controls, auto emissions and water projects.

The group particularly cited Armstrong's opposition to clean air legislation; Whitten's opposition on the House Appropriations Committee to environmental program appropriations; and Roberts' promotion of water development projects and opposition to water pollution controls.

"The Dirty Dozen have consistently cast their votes to weaken air and water pollution control standards," Early said. "These legislators are clearly not looking out for their constituents' best interests."

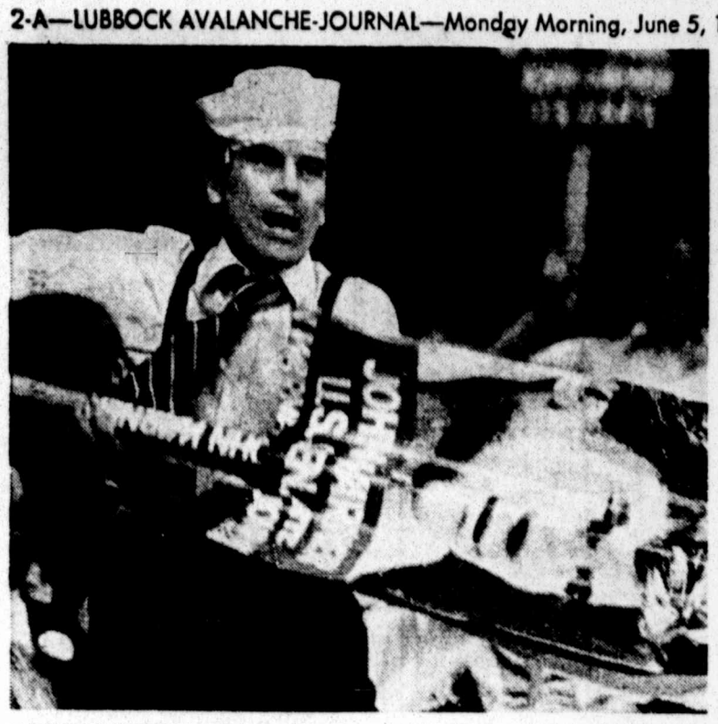

But several of the congressmen on the list said their constitutents' interests, in jobs and security, were exactly what they considered.

"Environmental Action is an ultraliberal political outfit which couldn't care less about unemployment or inflation," Helms said Sunday. "If Environmental

Long Wait For Votes Rewarded

RICHMOND (UPI) — It took six ballots and almost 10 hours of voting for Richard Obenshain to beat back the strong challenge of former Navy Secretary John Warner, husband of actress Elizabeth Taylor, and gain Virginia's Republican U.S. Senate nomination.

A welling cheer rose from the Obenshain ranks at 11:49 p.m. Saturday with the realization that the 7th Congressional District totals had put the Richmond attorney over the top for a chance to succeed retiring Sen. William L. Scott, R-Va.

Obenshain, 42, former national GOP co-chairman, entered the convention the frontrunner but had to hold off a furious charge by Warner, who worked along with Miss Taylor in a last-minute bid for delegates.

Obenshain captured the 24 votes he needed and then some when Nathan Miller, a state senator from Bridgewater, bowed out before the sixth ballot.

Warner conceded defeat and pledged himself to support Obenshain, who he said "will be the next U.S. Senator."

Obenshain praised each of his three opponents, former Gov. Linwood Holtom, Miller and Warner, a man of "grace, charm and strength."

The winner pledged a campaign that would focus on the bread and butter issues that "are the essential failure of Jimmy Carter's administration."

Obenshain led on all six ballots, but his support faltered slightly on the fifth ballot, as Warner closed to within 134 votes. Miller's withdrawal then provided him with the votes he needed for victory.

Shortened Tax Form Causes Less Errors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans apparently found it easier to fill out their remodeled 1977 income tax returns, making fewer serious errors than in the past, the Internal Revenue Service said Sunday.

IRS statistics compiled from the 84.6 million returns processed also showed the average refund this year hit a record high of $476.85, surpassing last year's $446.50.

IRS statistics showed that the error rate on the short form was 4.9 percent this year compared with 11.8 percent last year — a 58 percent reduction.

For the long form, the error rate was 5.7 percent this year, one third below the previous year's 8.5 percent.

The IRS introduced the revamped forms this year with much fanfare and claims almost 70 million hours of paperwork would be saved.

Federal tax collectors also hoped to see a substantial reduction in mistakes because the 1040A "short form" required no multiplication and the number of lines to be fill out were reduced from 25 to 15.

The 1040 "long form" also was reconstructed. In the past, taxpayers had to flip the form back and forth to complete it properly. The new form allowed taxpayers to progress straight down the front page, turn it over to the back, and complete their calculations.

"The new forms were a smashing success," an IRS spokesman said. "Anytime you can design a tax form that requires less paperwork you greatly lessen the chance of mistakes."

The spokesman said virtually all of the 1977 returns have been processed by government computers.

The IRS expects to receive about 4 million additional forms from those persons who were granted extensions and from Americans who were out of the United States on April 17, this year's filing deadline.

The government has paid out $29.1 million in refunds so far compared with $27.4 million at this same time last year, the IRS said.

Turks Accept Non-Agression Pact Idea

NEW YORK (UPI) — Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit said Sunday he was willing to accept Greek Prime Minister Constantine Caramanlis's proposal for a non-aggression pact as a step in improving strained Greek-Turkish ties which have weakened NATO's southern flank.

In an exclusive interview before leaving for Turkey, Ecevit said:

"We would accept the idea of such a non-aggression pact, although we must admit it would be somewhat of an anomaly considering that we are two allies.

"But, if Greece thinks it would help, we would certainly be prepared to discuss it. But obviously it should be discussed within the framework of our problems ... because without trying to solve the problems it's no use.

"Within that context, we are willing and ready to discuss a non-aggression pact with Greece."

Caramanlis presented his proposal for a non-aggression pact in an interview with UPI on Suturday.

Both the Greek and Turkish leaders are completing their visits to the United States Monday. Caramanlis was scheduled to address the U.N. disarmament conference, while Ecevit was flying to Washington to meet with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Commcttee.

Ecevit and Caramanlis met in Washington last Monday to renew their summit dialogue, begun in March at Montreux, Switzerland. While they resolved no issues, they agreed to schedule high level follow-up talks in Ankara, July 4-5.

"I am pessimistic about the possiblity of solutions either to the Cyprus or the Aegean sea problems as long as the (U.S. arms) embargo exists because it is obvious to me that as long as the embargo exists the Greek intransigence will continue," Ecevit said.

"But when and if they lose the hope of exerting American pressure over Turkey, then they may become more conciliatory," he added.

Ecevit said he was pleased President Carter was moving energetically to persuade Congress to repeal the embargo.

"We had a very frank conversation with President Carter," he said. "I use the word 'frank' in a positive sense. Friendly and frank.

"And I was given to understand that President Carter would put his personal weight behind this matter (of lifting the embargo). And I was happy to see that he did so very promptly right after the NATO council meeting in very clear and convincing terms."

Ecevit, who plans a visit to Moscow later this month, was critical, however, of suggestions Turkey may be loosening its bonds to the West by improving its ties with Russia.

He stressed Turkey has no intention of leaving NATO.

"Now we have never become suspicious or expressed concern when a U.S. president or secretary of state visits the Soviet Union which they very often do; when they discuss matters between them which are sometimes even kept secret from allies; when they meet with them in the Soviet Union, in the United States, or up in space," he said.

Ecevit is expected to sign a document of friendship with the Soviet Union that has aroused concern in Europe and the United States.

"I am often asked," he said, "with some concern about the political document that we may be signing with the Soviet Union, whereas such a document with some substantial content was signed by the United States and the Soviet Union way back in 1972."

No Celebration For Anniversary

REXBURG, Idaho (AP) — Two years ago Monday, a crack in the 305-foot-high Teton Dam opened up and unleashed 80 billion gallons of water that left 11 persons dead and caused $1 billion in property damage.

"I guess you could say we're not doing anything for the anniversary," one resident said. "My guess is that everybody would just like to forget it."

The floodburst left hundreds of families homeless and damage to potato and sugar beet farmlands, homes and businesses was put at $1 billion.

Since that Saturday morning, most residents of the southeastern Idaho towns caught in the path of the vicious water have tried to return to normal living.

Farmers planted spring crops on land that had been awash with silt and gravel and scraped nearly to bedrock. Families put up new homes and businesses were re-established.

Shortly before the dam broke, police rushed door to door, shouting the word to evacuate. Emergency sirens sounded and volunteers shuttled people to high ground.

The 15-foot-high wall of water splintered everything in its path, before fanning over the eastern Idaho plains.

About 180 square miles were flooded, more than 4,000 structures devastated, 112,500 acres of farmland covered, and 16,500 cattle, other livestock and poultry drowned by water from a dam designed for irrigation, recreation and flood control.

Soviet Jews Stage Shortened Protest

MOSCOW (AP) — A group of Soviet Jews seeking permission to emigrate to Israel demonstrated in downtown Moscow Sunday night but were led away by police after only eight minutes.

Among the 11 Jews who gathered in Trubnaya Square were Boris and Natalya Katz with their eight-month-old baby Jessica. The baby has become the focus of international attention because she suffers from a rare illness known as malabsorption syndrome and is unable to digest needed nutrients.

A spokesman for the group said police "politely" ended the protest and took Katz, his wife, eight other women and Jessica to the nearest police station, with Mrs. Katz pushing the baby's carriage. They were freed four hours later, the spokesman said, and apparently no charges were filed against them.

Mr. and Mrs. Katz want to take Jessica to Children's Hospital in Boston where doctors have developed special treatment for the illness. But Soviet doctors have said they have done everything possible for the child and authorities have refused to grant exit visas for the baby and her parents.

Puerto Ricans Celebrate In NY

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifth Avenue took on the lilting ring of the Caribbean as the city's Puerto Rican community staged its 20th annual parade here Sunday.

Tens of thousands marched and danced to the tunes of 25 bands while an equal number of floats symbolized the Puerto Rican culture and contributions to the development of America.

They were led by Mayor Edward I. Koch and Deputy Mayor Herman Badillo, the first native of Puerto Rico to be elected to Congress.

A bright sunshine kept temperatures near 70 degrees as the parade stepped off from 44th Street and marched past St. Patrick's Cathedral to 86th Street and then turned east to Third Avenue.

Sen. Byrd Seeks End Of Labor Law Filibuster

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd, determined to reach a vote on union-backed changes to federal labor laws, will try this week to crack a filibuster which has stymied the bill's almost-certain passage.

After allowing the issue to brew for two weeks, Byrd has scheduled an initial attempt to stop the filibuster Wednesday.

He intends to keep trying every day until the opposition, consisting of a southern-conservative coalition, buckles.

There is no assurance that backers of the bill — despite help from organized labor — can round up the 60 votes needed to kill a filibuster. Most observers feel the goal can be reached, but only after a number of tries.

And opponents may propose a series of time-consuming amendments after that in further efforts to delay voting on the legislation that would make it easier for unions to organize and provide new penalties for anti-union actions by employers.

While the Senate remains stymied by the labor law reform bill, the House at midweek begins a 10-day period during which it hopes to complete action on all appropriations bill.

Among the first to come up — Thursday and Friday — is funding for the Health, Education and Welfare Department. The bill reported to the House is slightly under $58 billion and another $17.6 billion in programs was deferred pending authorizing legislation.

The amount is certain to provoke a fight and the Labor-HEW money bill once again carries the seeds of a Senate-House showdown on the question of federal funds for abortions for poor women.

The language in the bill, certain to be adopted as it has been in the past, limits federally funded abortions to cuses where the mother's life is at stake. The Senate has taken a more liberal position.

The compromise reached last year, after months of wrangling, allows abortions in cases of rape or incest if the victims report the attacks or if severe physical damage would occur if the pregnancy is carried to full term.

The Senate ethics committee meets Thursday with two problems on its hands — Sens. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., and Edward Brooke, R-Mass.

The committee has launched a preliminary investigation into Talmadge's long-standing practice of accepting small cash gifts for day-to-day expenses, free clothing and hotel accommodations. It has since also been disclosed that Talmadge was reimbursed nearly $27,000 for campaign expenses in 1973 and 1974, although his report to the Senate said there were no expenses.

Voters In Midland Turn Out For Bush

By The Associated Press

Bush rode a partisan turnout in his hometown to victory by a 6,737-to-5,322 margin. Bush received garnered 55.87 percent of the vote. Reese picked up 44.13 percent.

In other Democratic congressional runoffs, Marlin's Marvin Leath defeated former State Rep. Lane Denton of Waco for the Dist. 11 nomination vacated by Bob Poage with 40,210 votes, 55.86 percent to Denton's 33,095, 45.14 percent.

'SENTIMENTAL JOURNEY' — For his last area story for the A-J, Tanner Laine, retiring reporter, made a "sentimental journey" back home to Spur, to do a piece on the museum in his old home town.

MINIPARK — The little ranch town of Spur, down below the Caprock, has several attractive mall-like miniparks in its downtown sector. These are located where old buildings were torn down, leaving unsightly scars. With grass and trees flowers and shrubs, benches and shaded tables, the parks make a pretty picture in the heart of the little town that did something about its unattractive downtown area when vacant buildings began to show up..

Museum At Spur Portrays Sweep Of History

By TANNER LAINE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

SPUR — A long, long time ago, back there 180 million years, give or take a century or two, the Caprock foothills emerged from waters of the deep.

It was not known at that time, of course, when the dinosaurs and giant reptiles sloshed about in that vegetated lake area this would become one of the greatest cattle ranching and later farming areas in the world.

Within recorded history, first came the buffalo. And the shaggy ones roamed in great herds near the Caprock.

Next came the Indian and he fed on the buffalo, and depended on the animal for fiber as well as food.

Came the cowmen with their great herds and the stage was set for one of the thrilling eras of the West.

And now another chapter is being written by the "nester," the settlers, farmers and urban residents.

All this has been well preserved by present-day residents in the first-class Margaret Elliott Museum at Spur.

This facility, named after a daughter of one of the Spur Ranch hands, "Scotch" Bill Elliott, is made possible by a lot of unselfish persons, not afraid to work and work hard, and who don't care who gets the credit, so long as the world can come here and see what their heritage is.

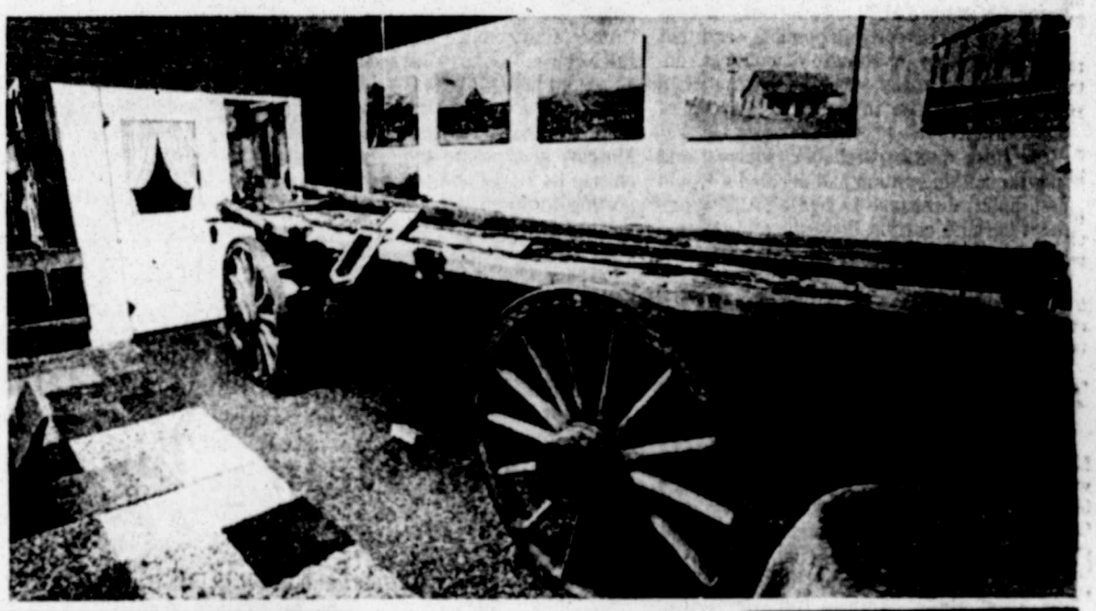

The Margaret Elliott Museum is located in downtown Spur, nestled between two attractive "miniparks," where trees and grass and shrubs and flowers make an attractive mall-like appearance. These little parks are located where vacant business buildings have been torn down, and where unsightly gaps were left.

The museum was opened Sept. 2, 1976, and it is a privately-funded museum, dedicated to the preservation of the history of Dickens County area from pre-historic times through the "Roaring Twenties."

The displays and exhibits follow a chronological sequence of historical events beginning with displays of pre-historic skeletal remains. This display is followed by exhibits displaying artificats of the area's first human inhabitants, the Indians.

The Indian exhibits are followed by displays depicting the "white man's" entrance into the area, including the buffalo hunters, the open range era, the coming of the "sod-buster," and finally, the settling of towns and villages.

TESTING THAT 'FLAT IRON' — Through an old-fashioned window of an a pioneer-day kitchen when flat irons were heated on the wood-burning stove, Lillian Grace Nay of Spur can be seen wetting her finger in her mouth and testing the flat iron in a museum exhibit to see if it is hot enough to press clothes.

DRAY WAGON — When the Stamford and Northwestern Railroad train pulled into the little ranching town of Spur for the first time in 1909, the late John Hazelwood met it with this dray wagon. And for years, he hauled goods and freight as Spur grew to be a town. Now the old dray wagon is resting in the Margaret Elliott Museum at Spur, along with many other historical items.

Recipes For Chicken Compete

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Picnic Peanut Chicken, Lemon-Pepper Chicken and Chicken Salad Supreme won out over Easy Cheesey Chicken, Seedy Chicken and Chicken Amaretto in the 31st Delmarva Chicken Festival.

There were chicken-flying and chicken-plucking contests, a plastic egg hunt, beauty pageants, and trade shows during the festival, which ended Sunday on the Delaware State College campus here.

But the featured event was the annual chicken recipe cookoff Saturday among 30 finalists from Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

The field of 22 women and eight men included students, a former CIA employee and a chiropractor competing with recipes ranging from The Pasha's Curried Chicken with Peanut Sauce to Siamese Chicken with Cabbage.

The Maryland winner was Ruth E. Dykes with Chicken Salad Supreme.

And Winifred G. Martin won the Virginia title with her recipe for Lemon-Pepper Chicken.

The three state winners will go to a national contest in Tampa, Fla., next month.

Kurt A. Goszyk, an electrical engineer, became the first cookoff participant to use a microwave oven. He explained to onlookers, as he prepared his Easy Cheesey Chicken, that the secret was not to overcook it.

"How do I turn on the oven," Allen asked a utility company workman who was standing nearby to aid the chefs in case of trouble.

Robert C. Foley, now a regional director for International Services Agencies, picked up his recipe for Siamese Chicken with Cabbage while he was on assignment for the CIA in Bangkok, Thailand.

AN EDITORIAL:

A SALT Delay--Why Not?

PRESIDENT CARTER, like many of his predecessors, is learning the hard way that he is not immune to the intense spotlight of the media or public opinion.

And, like many of those before him in the White House, he has reacted. Whether it was an over-reaction or not remains to be seen.

The latest Washington flap involving the President has to do with a published report in The Washington Post that Mr. Carter has frozen U.S. talks on limiting strategic arms with Russia because of political considerations at home and abroad.

In an unusual action of calling newsmen into his oval office, Mr. Carter blasted The Post's report as "totally inaccurate" and "damaging to our country and our credibility."

The President, carrying a copy of the paper, personally castigated The Post's editors and asserted that "I think it damages the prospects for continuation of the basic policy of our government which has not changed since I came in office, that is, to proceed aggressively with SALT negotiations, to conclude a treaty as early as possible—and that is without delay or because of political consideration—to make sure the treaty, when concluded, will be in the best interests of our country."

The Post, quoting "reliable" sources, said that the administration had decided it would be a political mistake to sign a SALT agreement because current domestic and international problems make ratification of such a treaty unlikely.

THE PAPER said that the net effect of the U.S. stance was to reject any new Soviet proposals at this time.

Aside from the fact that we find it interesting that Mr. Carter reacted so swiftly, some other aspects of the incident bear scrutiny.

In the first place, we have felt all along that Mr. Carter's "credibility" would be improved if he answered some of the media and public criticism and questions himself rather than let his press secretary, Jody Powell, front for him. There's nothing like hearing it from the top man.

In the second place, if Mr. Carter is looking for an "out" in case the talks do bog down, then he could blame them on such things as the Post story.

OF FAR MORE importance, however, is what Mr. Carter and his negotiators have done, or seemed willing to do, as regards the SALT negotiations.

The President has, to our way of thinking, leaned over backward and gone two extra miles in efforts to appease the Russians at a time when Moscow was doing everything possible to undermine Detente. The Soviets' invasion-by-proxy of Africa was enough to break off all talks long ago.

Instead, Mr. Carter for whatever reasons, killed the B1 Bomber, cut back on the Cruise Missile range and has put a hold on the Neutron Warhead, all seemingly to reach an accord with Moscow.

For us, we would not be upset in the least with a freeze on further SALT talks until Moscow gives some indication it plans to change its stated and practiced policy of exporting International Communism—even at the point of a Cuban soldier's Russian-made gun.

Perhaps The Post, for once, has done the nation a service if the story does result in a delay. Maybe Mr. Carter and others will have time to come to their senses during the interim.

One Woman's Cry For Help

PERHAPS IT was a futile gesture, but the New York woman who used her life savings to rent a public hall to vent her frustration and anger about crime in the streets says something...

About American society and the mood of the people.

It seems that Mrs. Marianne Hoffmann, a grandmother and German immigrant used her family's life savings of $6,000 last week to rent a 4,500 seat Felt Forum to speak out against crime. What happened was interesting, to say the least.

IN THE FIRST place, only about 500 persons showed up and paid the $1.50 admission fee.

In the second, no one came up with an answer as to what might be done about making it safer for the average, innocent citizen to survive in today's asphalt jungles.

Mrs. Hoffmann promised to stage the rally two years ago while praying for an elderly neighbor stabbed to death by an 18-year-old.

During the rally, Mrs. Hoffman criticized judges who "allow criminals to walk out of the courtroom and do the same thing again," and called on politicians to enact tougher legislation.

"THERE ARE a lot more law abiding citizens than criminals, thank God," Mrs. Hoffman said.

Her listeners applauded, shouted "Bring back the death penalty," and offered encouragement.

What did Mrs. Hoffman accomplish for her efforts and life savings? Well, she got some attention, even of politicians. One would have thought the Forum would have been filled to the rafters. And that too says something.

If the rest of us, including law enforcement officials and especially elected officials, won't join the Marianne Hoffmans and answer the cries of "Help!" from the victims of crime, then we will eventually join the victims.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Oil Brings Excitement, New Hope To Scotland

ABERDEEN, Scotland—This is a country of amazing hope and excitement—anticipation charges the air. After generations of insuperable financial difficulties the Scots are staying home to make good in the Scotland they love so well.

The magic word is oil.

Aberdeen is a teeming city facing the North Sea. The first whisper of oil came from beneath the dangerous waves of the northeast coast. Then oil explorers found immense stratas throughout the northern regions' entire area, including even the far-off Shetland Isles. And they discovered additional oil down the west coast to Argyll.

These findings mean one of the world's major oil fields.

A BARREL, rather than a ton, is the industry's standard statistical measurement. Three sections are producing: The Piper Field yielding more than a million barrels a day; the Brent Field about 600,000; the Forties Field about 500,000. This totals 2.1 million barrels a day—big by any standards.

Before long, Britain will have enough oil for its needs. And the magic effect on the balance of international payments and the pound needs no elaboration.

I find the investment very high. For example, investment in the Brent Field alone is now more than $2 billion. Or, using another measure, experts estimate that national oil activity will be at least five billion pounds by 1982—only four years from now. This five billion pounds is more than the 1975 government revenue from all sources.

BUT EVEN ON that five billion pounds assumption, such a sum could only relieve the trade balance pressure for a few years, given Britain's propensity for imports. Any upturn in imports could lead only to the trade balance's deterioration, a plunge of the pound and added inflation.

I find that these tremendous fields combine with other energy blessings. Scotland has substantial coal reserves and the Scottish Highlands have seen large hydroelectric plants as well as nuclear-powered generating installations built in the last 30 years.

In fact, the country's nuclear generators provide 20 percent of the electric power and, within 10 years, this should be doubled.

NEVERTHELESS, Scotland is a small country; east to west only about 100 miles and north-south 200. No point is 50 miles from a coastline.

This coastline is an amazing 8,000 miles long and promises new major ports in one of Europe's best deep-water interfaces. Deep river estuaries, sea lochs, etc., offer places for power plants, chemical works, etc.

But Britain's $6.9 billion investment in the United States, in turn, is the largest in any foreign country. The Netherlands is the next largest investor, followed by Canada's $5.4 billion.

A FULL 22 million Americans of Scottish descent reside in the United States—making vital contributions to America's strength, character, well-being and leadership.

Their contribution goes back to the Founding Fathers. About 75 percent of President George Washington's first Cabinet were Scotsman. And all this information is brought together by the distinguished American-Scottish Foundation under the leadership of the Lady Malcolm Douglas-Hamilton.

Scotland's relationship with the United States is vital. About 3,500 U.S. corporations control some 25,000 foreign affiliates. In 1957, only 2,800 parent companies had 10,000 affiliates. In the last decade, U.S. investment abroad has doubled to more than $80 billion and sales have more than tripled.

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

Carter Plays Illinois

NOVAK

CHICAGO—President Carter finally made an old-fashioned partisan speech to the late Mayor Richard Daley's Cook County Democratic organization, but he scrupulously protected his own downstate political interests in a flashy display of ambiguous Carter-style politics here last week.

The ambiguity was both typical and intentional. With his huge strength in Chicago's teeming black wards a political constant ("Jimmy has a mystical link with blacks," one white legislator from Cook County told us), the President had little need to woo the once-impregnable Daley organization.

Now weakened and facing more troubles in the future as Daley's former lieutenants fight for power, the country's last political machine is perceived by Jimmy Carter's political aides as not quite superfluous but surely as of declining value.

CARTER IS A different political breed from such predecessor national leaders as Sen. George McGovern, the late Hubert Humphrey and former President John F. Kennedy.

He is not "persona non grata" downstate, where antipathy for the Chicago Democratic machine is expressed in language unfit for the family dinner table.

Having passed up last year's annual fund-raising dinner here hosted by Cook County chairman George Dunne, Daley's successor as party chairman, Carter allowed Dunne's invitation to this year's May 25 dinner to languish unanswered on his desk for weeks.

That infuriated outspoken chairman Dunne, and led to juicy stories about the President's White House staff work, notoriously sloppy, and his failure to appreciate how dependent he is on Dunne's party organization.

IN FACT, however, the long delay in accepting Dunne's invitation was deliberate, an indication of the high importance given by the White House to the Baptist belt in downstate Illinois, full of twice-born Christians far removed from Chicago's racial polyglot.

Reflecting the White House mood was the reply by a presidential aide when we asked him about fractured relations with Dunne. "The only trouble with George Dunne," he told us, "is George Dunne."

Indeed it was not until he arrived here that the President finally decided to give the frankly partisan speech wanted by Dunne for his $100-a-plate fund-raising dinner, packed with organization leaders (and a sprinkling of Republican businessmen long allied with Daley).

Twice discarding speech proposals portraying himself in a more presidential image, Jimmy Carter at the last minute chose to dish out partisan red meat only slightly disguised by his bland delivery.

FOR THE FIRST time in his administration he also departed from his anti-pomp-and-ceremony campaign to give specific approval for the playing of "Hail to the Chief"—a stirring symbol dear to the hearts of Cook County patriots.

But just 12 hours later, addressing a joint session of the Democratic-controlled legislature, President Carter played a different tune.

"I am a very conservative Southern businessman by circumstance," he said in the course of a long, affirmative reply to a legislator's question as to whether he intended to push the labor reform bill through Congress.

Such a self-description would have been heresy the previous evening; downstate, it reminded Illinois farmers and small businessmen that Jimmy Carter, like them, is a small-town Southerner.

"He wants to remind them that he has a rural background, too, and isn't in with that Cook County crowd," one prominent Democrat told us.

LIKEWISE, BY unannounced pre-arrangement, he was asked a question about the Middle East arms deal by a Jewish legislator. In a long, careful reply, Carter defended a Mideast policy that is under emotional attack in Cook County but has enthusiastic approval in conservative downstate.

He counts on their voting for him in 1980 with or without Dunne's Cook County machine. Practicing the politics of diffusion may be risky, but Carter displayed a deft touch here.

He departed the state more confident than when he arrived, convinced that the only way he could carry Illinois in 1980, after losing it in 1976, is to keep a certain distance from chairman Dunne and the Democratic machine.

ANDREW TULLY:

So Happy Flag Day

WASHINGTON—There was dancing in the streets. After a meeting with Representatives of the gasoline and tourist industries and organized labor, President Carter announced the biggest paid holiday "weekend" of them all. Five wonderful days, from Saturday through Wednesday, to celebrate Flag Day on June 14.

Carter had just estimated that it would cost less than $1 billion to give federal, state and local government employes this glorious vacation when, mercifully, I woke up.

But I am still in a cold sweat. It really could happen here. National holidays, both patriotic and religious, no longer are "celebrated" on fixed dates but on the day that creates the longest weekend.

FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT started it all when he proclaimed that Thanksgiving Day be observed on the third Thursday of November, to give storekeepers an extra week to peddle Christmas gifts. This year, Independence Day falls on a Tuesday. It will, of course, be observed on Monday, July 3.

Tradition indeed! A young tourist from New York City knew it was called Memorial Day, but no, he didn't know what was being memorialized. "Something about the olden days?" he asked.

In a way, he guessed right. In the "olden days," Americans observed Memorial Day in honor of, and in gratitude to, our war dead. That sounded square to the 21-year-old New Yorker. "Hey man," he said. "I don't go for that war stuff—Vietnam, bombing hell out of women and children, you want me to say we were heroes?"

I SUPPOSE NOT. But after all, some Americans had to fight our wars, whether they believed them just or simply a necessary evil. If you're 21, you might even be grateful that the war ended before you had to change into a uniform and maybe wind up as a dead non-hero.

Anyway, on Memorial Day, although we decorate no graves, we might remind ourselves that the holiday also honors those who gave the nation its independence, those who died to preserve the Union, and the men who fought Hitler in a conflict waged to safeguard international human rights.

It is curious that the professional ideologues who fill the air with their harangues on the rights of mankind ignore Memorial Day, for it was instituted to honor the Civil War dead. True, that war was a national tragedy, but the men on both sides laid their lives on the line for their beliefs instead of carving peaceful and profitable careers out of civil unrest.

AND IT IS relevant to note that very few who wore the Confederate uniform were cotton planters. They fought for the concept of states' rights.

For my part, it is possible to think well of a grandfather, a shoe factory worker who moonlighted as a public school English teacher. John Tully was wounded at Antietam and came back to fight at Gettysburg with the 15th Massachusetts Volunteers. He was a quiet but fervent abolitionist.

Thus, whenever one of those chic, white civil-righters tells me I should feel guilty about the blacks' long despair, I turn away in nausea. Had it not been for his war wounds, Grandpa might have lived long enough for me to know him.

So I wish I had said to my young tourist: No, men who go to war are not always the stuff of which heroes are made. But a lot of them died doing a job most of them abhorred, and it's sad that even one American has to ask what Memorial Day is all about. Happy Flag Day!

JAY HARRIS:

Story Of A Pro...

AN ERA OF sorts ended at The Avalanche-Journal the past weekend.

A man who has helped record the comings, goings and sayings of hundreds of West Texans—the big, small, VIPs, all—retired after almost four decades as a newsman's newsman.

We refer to Tanner Laine, a man who made the Face of A Cowboy famous, who has penned five books on area history and the people who helped make it, whose work was his vocation and avocation.

Tanner came to The A-J way back in 1952. He had enrolled at Texas Tech in 1935 and graduated four years later, back when there were more tumbleweeds than vice presidents on the campus.

AFTER A BRIEF stint in Las Vegas, N.M., Tanner went to The Midland Reporter-Telegram as sports editor, where he remained until moving to Lubbock, with four years out for military duty in the Air Force in Europe.

Tanner's main forte in some 26 years with The A-J was his zeal in covering West Texas folklore, his sharp eye for the human interest story, the offbeat tales of man and animal.

To say that Tanner Laine got a kick out of his life as a reporter would be the understatement of the century. To him, each day was a new challenge. And he faced many of them, both personally and professionally, and came up with a big grin each time.

He also came up with some of the best yarns to appear in this paper down through the years. And he made friends for himself and the paper and Lubbock as well. In brief, he loved every minute of it.

IN THE PROCESS, Tanner not only wound up as a good newsman, by any standard, he also became an observer of the human scene. And a philosopher.

Never one to mince words, Tanner has some ideas of what makes people tick, both the young and old and those in between. But, his views, like his life and his writings, are sprinkled with both wisdom and warmth.

"The best thing about my work," he says, "has been the chance to meet all the wonderful people...

"I guess you have to say that there are two things which stand out most. I have enjoyed putting out the Church pages I think more than anything else. And second, the trips I made over West Texas to the ranches and pioneer reunions long ago convinced me that the people in this area are the greatest in the world!"

As for Lubbock itself, the native of Spur says: "I've been to practically every groundbreaking they ever had in this town from some of the first buildings at Tech to the Civic Center. I have seen it all and been proud to be a part of it..."

BUT, IF TANNER has been a part of chronicling and help build up Lubbock and West Texas, he also has helped boost the morale and abilities of many an embryo newsman along the way.

It was Tanner, who when a new hand would arrive, would always greet them with, "Hi, I'm Tanner Laine. Let me know if there's anything I can do to help you..."

And he did, even to teaching classes and making talks at Texas Tech.

But, Tanner, like some of the rest of us in this business, perhaps can shed a tear for "the good old days" and young men and women who worried less about the time and more about the job done.

"Too many young people today," Tanner says, "are more concerned in turning in the time than in turning in a good day's work...I never walked out of this place without knowing in my heart I had done the very best I possibly could..."

"BACK WHEN we started," he reminisces, "if it took a little longer to do it right, then we did it, by golly..."

Of course, Tanner as an observer of the changes government and bureaucracy has wrought, is quick to note that it is federal regulations and a "new attitude" in the schools that is responsible for some of the problems.

"A newspaper's function is not to tear things down but to help build, to have a role of public service and responsibility," Tanner observes. He has little patience with the "activist" journalist who thinks only of the scalps he can nail to the wall, of writing "to make things happen."

"Too many young people today want to start at the top," he says. "I always tell the youngsters that in learning to do the routine, they prepare themselves for the 'big ones.' And if they do the routine as well as they would the big ones then they will be ready for the 'big ones' when the opportunity comes along..."

LACK OF SELF discipline, a surge of independence after World War II, the fact too many look at a job as a time deal, not work—all these things he sees as weakening the moral and mental fiber of a nation.

But, Tanner, who has known both the good and bad times, who has rubbed shoulders with and quoted and shot the pictures of some of the nation's great and near-great, still has faith in humanity.

"We'll make it," he says, "if we keep our faith in God and our sense of humor..."

Tanner Laine has an ample helping of both.

As he presided at his retirement party for a newsroom full of friends Friday, he quipped: "I almost took a wrong turn back there when I came to Tech. I started to go to barber college instead of journalism school."

The newspaper profession, and indeed all of West Texas is better for having had the likes of Tanner Laine take the path he did...

Time More Than Big, Little Hand

EDITOR'S NOTE — The day after Oct. 4 in the year 1582 was Oct. 5, right? Wrong. It was Oct. 15. The reason was a matter of time, something all of us may have on our hands — or our wrists — but it's a good bet you don't know what time it is, really. Or why.

By SID MOODY

Like much of what Albert Einstein said, it's not that simple.

For instance, what time is it? Take your pick. You can have sidereal time, solar time, Greenwich Mean Time, daylight time, Ephemeris Time, local time, Coordinated Universal Time, not to mention good, hard and Early times.

Most Americans couldn't care less so long as they get to the church on time. But time, today, is of the essence. Without precise, split-second time, power blackouts could proliferate, TV screens would look like unraveled sweaters, phone calls would be gibberish and computers would talk garbage.

To make sure that doesn't happen, the Time and Frequency Division of the National Bureau of Standards spends $3.5 million a year. It keeps the country on time with a $300,000 atomic device that is accurate to within one second in 370,000 years and is kept up to date by a staff of 60 including 20 Ph.D.s.

The device not only tells time but broadcasts it. For the best of times you can dial (303) 499-7111 and check your clock against one of the most remarkable radio stations in the world, WWV in Fort Collins 50 miles north of here. In Hawaii, it's WWVH on Kauai (808) 335-4363.

WWV, in a very real sense, is the heartbeat of the United States.

Yet, as often as not, there's no one at the transmitter except for a rabbit which likes to roost under a bench by the front door. The time announcer, one of the world's most listened to, has never been to the station and lives in Atlanta. The station reaches 40 percent of the globe but hasn't sold all its commercial time.

As we said, time isn't so simple. To explain requires a trip back in time.

Philosophers have spent considerable time trying to define time. Of St. Augustine it has been said: "He knew perfectly well what time was as long as he didn't have to explain what it was he knew." Einstein, considering two clocks passing each other at high speed in space, decided time curves.

Time, if you think about it much, can get out of hand very quickly.

The main trouble with time — clock time — is that it is based on the spinning of the earth on its axis and around the sun. But the earth wobbles as it spins and it doesn't spin at a uniform rate. It speeds up in the summer and slows down in the winter. The wobble moves the poles as much as 15 meters — not enough to confuse Santa Claus but enough to throw clocks off by as much as 30 milliseconds or thousandths of a second. This adds up.

Furthermore, the earth is slowing down. In 600,000,000 B.C., a day was 21 hours. Only 1,000 years ago the workaday world had 16 fewer milliseconds to do its business.

Because the earth takes slightly more than 365 days to orbit the sun — 365.2422 currently — calendars get out of whack. That's why we have leap years. And that's why in 1582 Pope Gregory XIII reformed the calendar and decreed that the day after Oct. 4 would be Oct. 15 to make up for lost time.

It didn't use to matter much. Time was relative — Einstein again. Crusaders didn't have to catch airplanes, serfs didn't punch time clocks and bed time was when it got dark.

Even for those few who cared, time was a hassle. Sundials didn't work on cloudy days. Water clocks froze in winter. Early mechanical clocks were so inaccurate some didn't bother with minute hands.

But as he began roaming about his planet, man learned more about time. When Juan Sebastian del Cano in 1522 completed the circumnavigation begun by Magellan, he thought it was Sunday and wondered why the church bells ashore weren't ringing.

'Simple math shows there are 86,400 seconds in a day. But with the earth spinning so erratically, some seconds are longer or shorter than others.'

He overlooked that he had gained a day on the sun, a miscalculation shared by Phineas Fogg in "Around the World in 80 Days."

Early explorers steered pretty much by guess and by God because they lacked accurate timepieces to tell them longitude from the predictable movements of the stars. When John Harrison finally invented an accurate clock, the chronometer, in the 18th century, a grateful British government gave him 20,000 pounds. Clockmaking reliability leaped ahead, and in 1889 a pendulum clock was made that was accurate to one one-hundredth of a second a day.

By then trains were crossing continents where each town kept local time based on the noon passage of the sun. There were some 300 different local times in the United States alone. Travelers had to constantly reset their watches.

Common sense asked why not divide the country into four time zones of about 15 degrees of longitude each, the distance traversed by the sun in an hour. Common sense prevailed, and at noon Nov. 18, 1883, the U.S. Naval Observatory telegraphed the time of its master clock to major cities across the country. We were thence on zone time to the horror of farmers who predicted cows would stop giving milk and hens would stop laying eggs. Daylight time came along during World War I to save fuel.

Since it doesn't help much to tell time without telling it to the people who use it, the National Bureau of Standards, those folks who tell us how long a yard is and how much of a pound weighs a pound, opened WWV in Washington in 1923 to announce the hours, minutes and seconds in accord with a master clock.

Why? Because crusaders now were beginning to catch planes. Serfs were punching time clocks. Being "on time" — for school, work, movies, trains — was important. Time had become money. It became that and more as technology burgeoned.

Today, power grids feed electricity to each other at 60 cycles a second. If the cycles aren't precisely in phase, ruinous surges can develop. Keeping the cycles in strict cadence also means your electric clock keeps correct time.

TV stations need calibration of their frequencies as precise as one part in 10 billion to keep neighboring channels from interfering with each other's picture, producing spaghetti-like chaos. Phone cables carry multiple calls that have to be timed like eye-blink traffic lights to keep words from smashing into each other. Computers can't do their split-second thing without a master Toscanini timing their thinking. Without finely tuned navigational systems, an Air India flight, say, might end up in Swaziland instead of Bombay.

The earth, however, insists on marching to a different drummer what with the wobbling and all. Earth time, also called Universal Time, just varies too much to keep "60 Minutes" from blipping into "Charlie's Angels."

This error, however, can be measured by predicted movements of celestial bodies. This is Ephemeris Time, but it takes observations over a nine-year period to make it accurate to within 0.05 seconds. Too much time to get the right time. What the world needed was a better second, the basis of time.

Simple math shows there are 86,400 seconds in a day. But with the earth spinning so erratically, some seconds are longer or shorter than others. So in 1956, by which time UT was some 30 seconds behind ET since 1900, science came up with the Ephemeris Second. This was adopted at an international conference, international because it makes no sense to know the time in New York if it isn't also the time in Paris. The Ephemeris Second is based on the so-called tropical year which is about 20 minutes shorter than the sidereal year which will only confuse you, but don't say you weren't told.

But what sort of clock would tick off perfect Ephemeris Seconds, tropical year in and tropical year out? One that had neither main spring nor wobbling earth as its base but something in nature well respected for its being on time.

Since the 1920s, scientists had been studying the natural frequencies emitted by atoms and molecules under particular circumstances. Anything that does this is a potential clock, which is, after all, but a dial attached to something that pulses or ticks in a regular cadence. Einstein, yet again.

So NBS developed such a "counter" using atoms of cesium. The "bureaucrats of time" held another international meeting in 1967. These are learned men from such earthly bodies as the International Polar Motion Service and the Consultative Committee for the Definition of the Second as well as the top dog of all time, le Bureau International de l'Heure (BIH) in Paris which, mes enfants, began beaming radio time from la Tour d'Eiffel in 1910.

'He knew perfectly well what time was as long as he didn't have to explain what it was to others.'

The world's clockwatchers thereupon determined that a second would be the time it took a cesium atom to make 9,192,631,770 oscillations which a cesium atom will do every time if you treat it right. We now had Atomic Time (AT).

There remained one more step to adjust UT to AT. This was the leap second to be added to UT. Generally one has been needed every year although in 1972, a leap year, two leap seconds were added, making it the longest year on record.

"Atomic clocks are now one million times more accurate than the spinning earth," says Dr. James A. Barnes, chief of time and research for NBS and whose digital watch was only one second off from his latest two-year-old cesium "standard" counter. "We began keeping atomic time Jan. 1, 1958 and set the clock to coincide with earth time. Earth is now 17 seconds slow. People have suggested this is due to tidal friction, slippage of the earth's mantle or wind patterns."

But it's nothing a few leap seconds can't take care of.

The United States is one of three nations — Canada and West Germany are the others — that maintains a "primary, atomic frequency standard," an exact, conforming device. Many nations and companies have their own atomic clocks as well which can be compared against the standards.

WWV is the voice of the American standard, broadcasting short wave on 2.5, 5, 10, 15 and sometimes 20 megaHertz. Special pulses accurate to better than one part in a 100 billion also go to utilities, the telecommunications industry and computer users.

Scientists studying the drift of the continents measure movement to within three inches by timing via WWV laser beams bounced off the moon back to earth. Navigators at sea wondering where on earth they are regard WWV's voice broadcasts of time the sweetest sound this side of the late Guy Lombardo.

Clock makers listen to WWV for obvious reasons as do musicians for less obvious ones. They tune their instruments to the hourly beep which is exactly 440 Hertz, or cycles per second, or A above middle C.

Probably more rabbits know WWV is in Fort Collins than do local residents. The station moved here in 1966 at the foot of the Rockies because the soil was well grounded for short wave transmission. Hams, of course, knew what was coming and raced to get in their QSL cards telling WWV they had picked up its first signals. The winner was a radio buff tuned in in the Fort Collins post office parking lot who legged his card to the mail drop at the first beep.

WWV announces the time (that is, Coordinated Universal Time, the old Greenwich Mean Time which is also Universal or Earth Time corrected by leap seconds to coincide with Ephemeris Time and Atomic Time — no one said this was going to be easy) every minute by voice as well as a distinguishing bleep. After every hour it also announces atmospheric radio conditions as well as storm warnings for the Atlantic and Pacific. The Weather Bureau used to make the announcements via WWV from its Washington area headquarters but now weathermen at National Airport in D.C. do it, by recording. The airport weathermen enunciated much better than the headquarters people.

WWV has time available for other such announcements in its cycle at several thousand dollars a year but so far has no takers. The station also receives some 30,000 phone calls a week (at the callers' expense) to its time service which are plugged into the voice transmission. Accuracy is within 30 milliseconds, easily sufficient to time a boiled egg.

The voice of WWV is Don Elliot Heald. That of WWVH is Jane Barbe, also of Atlanta. A woman's voice was chosen for the sister station to avoid confusion.

Heald, 54, is a vice president of Cox Broadcasting and manager of WSB-TV who makes time and temperature recordings on the side for Audichron, an Atlanta firm which supplies such announcements to radio stations and phone companies. Mrs. Barbe, who used to sing with the Buddy Morrow band, also records for Audichron. Heald's voice gives the time — and the state — of the day in more than 300 cities by pre-recording all the possible number combinations on tape.

Robbery Gang Member Released From Prison

LONDON (AP) — Bruce Reynolds, a convicted member of Britain's Great Train Robbery gang, has been released from prison after serving 10 years of a 25-year sentence.

The British Home Office said Reynolds, 46, was freed Friday and must live for six months in a halfway house. He was caught five years after the August 1973 heist.

Authorities still are looking for most of the $7.2 million stolen in what is reputed to be England's biggest robbery ever. Three of the 13-man team were never caught.

School Children Given Mortuary Tour

GREELEY, Colo. (UPI) — "There's nothing here to frighten you in any way," the undertaker told the children.

It was a sunny spring morning and the sixth and seventh graders of Chappelow Middle School were in the Adamson Mortuary on a field trip.

They filed into the wooden pews of the mortuary's chapel: fidgeting, chewing gun and whispering among themselves.

"I'm a licensed funeral director," Bob Hansberry was saying at the podium. "The casket is placed on this bier between the lamps." The rustling continued in the pews, and a girl in the second row fooled with her hair.

Hansberry was explaining the practical details of death: "The hospital calls us, gives us the ward and floor — we immediately send a man to pick up the body. It's brought back here and embalmed." More whispering in the pews.

"Embalming is a process of disinfection, preservation and restoration," said Hansberry. "Decomposition starts immediately after death. In restoration, we try to make the body as lifelike as possible. We try to give the family — in an old mortuary term — a good memory picture.

"Any questions?" he asked. Very few at this point.

Off they went, behind Hansberry, to the mortuary's business office for some talk of death certificates and burial permits.

"There's quite a bit of government paperwork involved," said the undertaker. "That's all taken care of in these offices." Still no questions from the kids.

Up a flight of stairs, and the kids were at the door of the casket display room. "If there's anybody who doesn't want to go in there, that's fine," said Hansberry. Not a sound from the students. "There are basically four types of caskets: cloth-covered wood, hardwood, and the sealing and non-sealing metals," the mortician said amidst the coffins. "The sealing metal caskets are hermetically sealed. They're vermin proof, moisture proof; nothing can get in, nothing can get out."

Hansberry kept talking: "The price you see on the caskets are not just for the casket. They include all service charges." The questions came quickly now:

"Why do you put pillows and blankets in here?" asked one small boy.

"Humm, nobody ever asked that before," said Hansberry. "They're made to look similar to a bed."

"Three thousad dollars," said the undertaker.

"Gee," said a girl in a green sweater and blue jeans.

"Do they make caskets for babies?" said a tiny voice from the group.

"Yes, they're upstairs," answered Hansberry. "Would you like to see them?"

"Yeah," came the collective response, the first sign of intense interest.

"What is this about?" said an adult in the crowd.

"Well, a lot of them have little brothers and sisters," said Gary Colley, a health teacher who coordinates the school's field trips.

It was Colley who took a suggestion from science teacher Cliff Bartlett and added the mortuary to his list of field trips. Bartlett and another science teacher had prepared the students by including in their classes lessons on death and dying.

"We stock baby caskets from two feet to three feet," said Hansberry. "And we have one 3 1/2 feet long. We can order larger caskets from Denver."

"Poor babies," whispered one girl holding an instamatic camera.

"Follow me downstairs to the embalming room," said Hansberry.

"Yeah," the kids said again.

"I'm not going in there," said a boy with glasses.

"Chicken," said his friend.

"This is our preparation room," he said inside the clinical-looking chamber. "We can embalm two bodies at the same time. The tables are stainless steel. This is our embalming machine; it's a stainless steel tank and a pump. The blocks are for holding the head in position. After death, there is no muscle tone. The body is limp, and it has to be held in position."

The kids stared, and several girls clutched their large plastic combs with both hands. Someone accidently kicked a trash container, and the children started.

Hansberry held up a brown plastic container.

"This is 15 percent formaldehyde. We dilute it with eight ounces to a gallon of water. That makes it 1 1/2 percent formaldehyde solution. We use the same circulation system the body normally uses."

He pointed to his neck. "We inject into the carrotid the embalming fluid. This goes around the body and comes out the jugular vein. There are six points where we shoot into the body. A good embalmer hopes he won't have to shoot more than one point, but sometimes you do."

Birthday Gifts Under Scrutiny

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate ethics committee will broaden a preliminary inquiry into the financial activities of Democratic Sen. Herman Talmadge to check reports the Georgia millionaire received unreported tax-free gifts of money from his annual birthday parties, the committee counsel said Sunday.

C. Braxton Valentine said a preliminary investigation authorized by the panel would examine evidence the 22-year Senate veteran received but did not report thousands of dollars in gifts received from the "Talmadge Birthday Party Committee."

The Georgia group annually throws a birthday party for the state's senior senator and powerful Agriculture Committee chairman, charging men $25 a ticket and women $15.

Proceeds from the affair, that has been conducted almost every year since 1946, are given to the senator after expenses for the dinner are paid.

Senate rules in effect at the time required members to report gifts of $50 or more from one source. Serious rules violations could lead to censure or expulsion, although only one senator — Thomas Dodd of Connecticut — has been censured.

"It's just a gesture of respect and appreciation to him for what he's doing for us," Judge Edwin R. Johnston of the Atlanta city court told the Washington Star. "He doesn't need the money for money's sake, but we want to give him a gesture of our appreciation."

The birthday affair traditionally draws up to 400 people. Planning already is under way to mark the senator's 65th birthday Aug. 9.

Asked if the panel would complete its review of the birthday gifts in time for the forthcoming party, the committee counsel said, "I certainly would hope so."

Valentine said the committee only has authorized a "preliminary inquiry into what the facts are" and it was not likely the panel would have the information to act at its Thursday meeting on the latest reports of Talmadge's financial activities.

Reports of Talmadge's receipt of birthday gifts appeared in the Sunday editions of the Washington Star and the Washington Post.

Earlier reports that prompted the ethics committee's initial investigation said Talmadge had received thousands of dollars in "pocket money" from supporters. Some details of Talmadge's finances surfaced in bitter divorce property settlement proceedings with his ex-wife Betty.

Records show Talmadge received a total of $6,600 from the birthday parties in 1973, 1974, 1975 and 1976, the Star said, with the senator reporting the gifts for the first two years to the Comptroller General but not for the last two years.

The senator contends the rules requiring reports on gifts of $50 or more from one source did not apply to the checks from the birthday party committee.

Corporate Marriage Snags

DETROIT (UPI) — American Motors Corp. and Renault of France are finding a corporate marriage can be a complex proposition.

The two firms missed their May 31 target for a final agreement on a proposed "affiliation" intended to bolster AMC's declining passenger car business and widen Renault's market in North America.

They now say it may be several weeks before details of the arrangement are worked out and the papers are signed.

"As complex a marriage as this one is not that simply consummated," a Renault spokesman said. "I think we were a little optimistic when we said May concerns in mind."

An AMC spokesman said the negotiations, which began in late March, were "still progressing." But he declined elaboration.

Much more delay could jeopardize the companies' initial plans to begin marketing Renault's subcompact "Le Car" at AMC dealerships this fall — the first step in an arrangement that eventuully would lead to the assembly of Renault cars at AMC's U.S. plants.

"It still could be possible for some AMC dealerships this year, depending how soon we can train the personnel and make service parts available," the Renault spokesman said. "It won't be an overnight thing where all AMC dealers will have them immediately."

Top officials of the two firms on March 31 announced an "agreement in principle" on the arrangement they said would be short of a corporate merger.

The plan calls for the sale of Le Car by AMC dealers and the distribution of AMC's Jeep vehicles through Renault's worldwide markets; collaboration between the two companies in developing future products, and the production late next year of Renault's new R-18 sedan at AMC's Kenosha assembly plant.

AMC sought out Renault in an attempt to stave off the demise of its money-losing passenger car operation. The small profit AMC turned in 1977 — its first since 1974 — was attributed to its lucrative Jeep operations and the sale of other products by AMC subsidiaries.

VA Urges Use Of Education Benefits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Veterans Administration is urging Vietnam era veterans to use their GI bill education benefits while there is still time.

VA chief Max Cleland said "Operation Boost" encourages eligibles to use the GI Bill for job training or formal education, especially in 11 states where fewer than 50 percent of eligible veterans have taken advantage of GI education benefits.

Veterans can use the bill for education only within 10 years from the date of their military discharges, he said.

The administration now pays a monthly allowance of $311 to a single veteran going to school full-time, Cleland said, $370 to a veteran with one dependent, $422 to a veteran with two dependents, and an extra $26 for each additional dependent.

Under the program, veterans may be eligible for free counseling and tutoring assistance, extra pay for work-study programs, and low interest VA educational loans, he said.

Veterans also are paid VA allowances to complete their high school educations and remain eligible for pursuing advanced studies, he said.

The 11 states where veterans have taken little advantage of GI education benefits are Vermont, New Jersey, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Ohio, Maryland, New Hampshire, Iowa, and Illinois, Cleland said.

Mileage Gains Costly

DETROIT (AP) — Domestic car companies will invest $78.5 billion by 1985 to modify cars to meet federal mileage standards, the trade weekly Automotive News reports. The publication said Friday that General Motors Corp. is probably the only automaker that won't have to borrow money to complete the task.

Chrysler Corp. and American Motors Corp. have already started looking for outside money sources, and Ford Motor Co. might also have to borrow, it said. Most of the money will be spent on redesigning entire fleets to average 27.5 miles per gallon by 1985. The standard goes up annually until then from the current 18 m.p.g. requirement.

Inflation Forcing Lifestyle Changes

By The Associated Press

For James and Angie Peters of Dallas, Ga., inflation is:

—Eating less meat.

—Wearing last year's clothes.

—Trading an American-made car for a Japanese pickup truck that gets more miles to the gallon.

It is, says Peters, "a general cutback in most everything."

The Peters family — James and Angie, both 27, 2-year-old Erin and a bull terrier named Prilla — are not alone.

Cutting back is now the American way of life for many. The Peters family has its ways of cutting back. Other families have other ways.

For some, today's annual inflation rate of 10 percent means pinching pennies on a champagne budget to splurge on a stamp collection. For some, it means pinching pennies on a beer budget to have enough to pay the electric bill. For all, it means trying to spend less. Here is how the Peters family and some others get by.

James is a truck operator for the Georgia Power Co.; Angie is an eighth-grade math teacher. Together, they earn $20,000 — almost one-third more than the U.S. median family income. They are trying to earn more by growing worms on the 4½ acres surrounding their house.

Two-income families are common today. In two out of five married couples, both husband and wife work, the Labor Department says. In 1950, the proportion was about one in five.

"We raise food and can a lot," said Peters, who is known as Butch. "We started our garden primarily because of inflation."

So did a lot of people. The Agriculture Department says almost half the households in the 48 contiguous states have food gardens. Better quality and lower costs are the reasons most often mentioned.

Dick and Marilyn Schnelz of Seattle, Wash., have an income twice as large as the Peters family. But the extra dollars don't seem to make things easier. "I think we have a feeling of desperation," said Schnelz, 50, a structures designer for the Boeing, Co. "Every time I bring a pay check home, Marilyn will say, 'It's all already spent.'" The Schnelzes' eldest son Jeff, 19, will start at the University of Washington in the fall. "I would have liked to go to the University of Colorado, but it's five thousand bucks," he said.

College costs are rising everywhere. The College Board says it will cost about 6 percent more to go to college this year than last.

Mrs. Schnelz, 48, who works as a home economist, said, "The real crunch is that it is awfully hard to put anything in a savings account."

The difficulty is reflected in government statistics showing that Americans saved only 5.1 percent of their after-tax income in 1977, compared to 7.5 percent a decade earlier.

Marv and Nancy Ballentyne consider themselves lucky to have bought a three-bedroom home north of Denver for $25,000 six years ago. "Our house payment is very low," said Ballentyne, 37, who earns about $25,000 as head of the appraisal department for a savings and loan organization. "I can't imagine how people buying a house today survive."

Although the median price of new houses is near $60,000, the U.S. League of Savings Associations says most people manage to find homes for less. Half the 1977 homebuyers spent less than $44,000.

Susan Coronado, 30, earns $24,000 as manager of inventory planning for the Bell Howell Co. consumer products group in Chicago. Still, she said, "I'm spending everything I can get my hands on." Mrs. Coronado, who is divorced, is supporting her 9-year-old son, Anthony.

Her situation is not unusual. As of 1974, says the Labor Department, women headed one family in eight, compared with one in 10 in 1964.

Inflation affected Anthony's lemonade stand. "His $5 worth of lemonade made $3.98 because he didn't pass on his cost increases to the consumer," said Mrs. Coronado. It also has affected the family dog. "I've just switched to buying unbranded dog food," said Mrs. Coronado. "It's cheaper."

Jewel Cos., a Chicago-based chain, started testing "no-name" food items 16 months ago. Today, so many supermarkets offer the generics that canners have trouble keeping up with demand for the lower-quality fruits and vegetables used in the products.

Marvin and Emelie Snyder of the Kansas City area say inflation has not changed their life, but has made them more value conscious. Snyder, 52, who earns $30,000 to $40,000 as a research manager for the buildings division of Butler Manufacturing Co., carries his work to lunch, partly because he enjoys using the time to catch up on reading, partly because of inflation. "We're more aware of the cost per pound of, say, a can of peaches," said Mrs. Snyder, 51, who works part time for a market research firm. "You read the labels."

Mrs. Snyder has company. Two-thirds of those questioned by the USDA said they checked labels before buying a food for the first time.

A baby — 3-month-old Matthew — has helped inflation change life for Leroy and Barbara Kelly who have an income of about $25,000 and a three-bedroom home in North Wales, a Philadelphia suburb. "We don't have a lot of money to do what we want to," said Mrs. Kelly, 28, who is on leave from her job as a teacher. "We just use it to pay the bills ... Last year we went to Europe," said Mrs. Kelly. "This year we're going to visit my family."

The U.S. Travel Service estimates the number of Americans going abroad this year will be only 3 percent higher than last year; in the late 1960's, the year-to-year increase was 14 percent.

Hoax Starts Mail Flood

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Communications Commission mailroom has been overwhelmed with an avalanche of nearly 8 million letters protesting a non-existent petition to ban religious broadcasts.

The letters were triggered by a rumor — which has no basis in fact — that the ban is being sought by atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair, one of several parents who obtained Supreme Court rulings that states may not require religious observances in public schools.

The FCC did, however, receive a petition in December, 1974 from two California promoters for a review of a policy of licensing religious broadcasters to use education channels. That petition, which stopped far short of seeking a ban on religious broadcasts, was denied Aug. 1, 1975.

Before the FCC officially rejected the Californians' petition as unconstitutional, the commission had to read some 750,000 letters — two storage rooms full.

Mrs. O'Hair, a crusader for atheism, said she has tried to stop the letter writing, as have the FCC and religious leaders.

But the FCC said the letters still pour in — about 12,000 a day.

Art Ginsburg, chief of the FCC's complaints and compliance section, told UPI "close to 8 million" have come in and handling them is "time consuming and clogs up our mail room."

"This is really a terrible hoax to perpetrate on the public because it goes to the root of their most cherished religious beliefs and causes them totally needless concern and worry...," said FCC spokesman Samuel Sharkey.

"In the early days, most came from 'evangelicals' and 'fundamentalists' but in the last two years a great many have been coming from Catholic parishes," said Sharkey.

Catholic officials told UPI they have tried repeatedly — without success — to convince church members there is no move by Mrs. O'Hair or anyone else to abolish religious broadcasts.

The Rev. Patrick K. Sullivan of the U.S. Catholic Conference said he is concerned about a "psychological disposition" that prevents many persons from accepting church, FCC and media assurances that the O'Hair rumor is false.

Sharkey said form letters discovered anonymously urge people to write the FCC.

One said: "It is time to get out your signing pen again as Madalyn Murray O'Hair is at it again! This time she is on the move to censor the religious message being carried on radio and TV.

"Remember that she made it illegal to read the Bible and pray in public schools and she protested the decision of the astronauts to read the Bible broadcast from their spacecraft...."

The form letter adds the false statement that the FCC says it "must receive no less than a milliom letters to keep religious programs on the air."

Federal regulations require the FCC to hold all public letters three years and then send them to the U.S. Archives.

Diplomacy Way To Go, Young Says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Diplomacy instead of military or covert activity is the way to blunt Cuban activites in Africa, says U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young.

"Almost anywhere we have worked militarily we have produced limited results," Young said in a U.S. News and World Report interview released Sunday.

"And almost everywhere we have moved covertly we have failed miserably and have produced results that are often counterproductive to our interests."

Young said there is "almost no Cuban presence" in areas where the United States takes the diplomatic initiative.

"Had we been able to move diplomatically in the Horn (of Africa), we could have prevented the Cuban presence there," the ambassador said.

Young warned against reacting emotionally to the presence of Soviets and Cubans in Africa.

"I think we ought to have concern, but when concern is translated into panic by others, I don't think it serves the U.S. interest," he said.

Young noted the administration has already succeeded in one instance in inducing the Cubans to pull back in Africa.

"We made it clear to them (the Cubans) that we would take it as a serious breach of principle and a violation of territorial integrity had they gone into Somalia — and they stopped at the border.

"I think we can get them (Cuba) to work toward a peaceful solution with us in Namibia, because I think it's in their interest," he added.

But he expressed concern about constant attacks on Angola from the dissident National Front for the Liberation of Angola and the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola.

"I'm afraid that there will be so much chaos that we will not be able to have an intelligent, negotiated relationship to keep our mineral supplies coming and to establish markets," he said, noting the U.S. relationship with Africa is "much more economic than it is strategic."

Young also said slowing down the Strategic Arms Limitations Talks is not the way to obtain Soviet cooperation in Africa.

"We should signal our displeasure in any way that does not hurt us. It hurts us to slow down SALT," he said.

Citizens Helping Baker To Rebuild

HOUSTON (AP) — Sebastian Monte's bakery in the little shopping center in the near Northside barrio is charred and boarded over. A month ago he spent Monday morning dumping out trays of water-logged pan dulce and shoveling squashed chocolate cakes off the sidewalk. He was a ruined man.

Monte's 20-month old Nuevo Leon Bakery was one of several businesses set to the torch in the shopping center during a rampage following a fight May 7 at a Mexican-American fiesta in a nearby park.

A Cuban who came to the United States in 1966, Monte had no fire insurance "because someone was always in the shop." He had built the bakery calculated his loss at $60,000, including equipment and the remodeling work he had done.

But Monte did not count on the neighborhood he had supplied with Mexican sweet bread and crusty rolls.

"I have faith and good health and my wife and three children, and more friends than I ever believed I was lucky enough to count on," he said.

Some of those friends are children from the St. Francis Episcopal Day School. They have raised $700 for the man who treated them when they visited his bakery as part of a project on Mexico.

And some of the friends are members of the Houston Mexican-American Chamber of Commerce who have set up a fund for Monte at a neighborhood bank where contributions have already reached $12,000.

Store Robbery, Rape Case Top Weekend Crime Tally In City

Lubbock police Sunday were seeking two, young Mexican-American men following the city's latest reported robbery, and officers had a 26-year-old man in custody after an alleged rape.

Attendant Edith Quinney said two young men entered the Preston Milk Store, 1101 34th St., about 3 a.m. Sunday, then approached the counter for change.

While one of the suspects waited for his change, the other reportedly made a fist and told the woman he'd hit her unless she lay down on the floor.

Before leaving, one of the men grabbed a carton of cigarettes and the pair fled out the door and ran north on Avenue J, according to a witness.

The take was estimated at $33, reports indicate.

It was the 118th such incident in the city this year and the holdup occurred less than 12 hours after a purse-snatching robbery Saturday.

The victim said the 17-year-old black man grabbed her purse, which contained about $80, and fled.

A 21-year-old woman managed to leave an East Lubbock motel room surreptitiously early Sunday, before she phoned police to tell them she'd been raped.

When officers arrived at the motel in the 400-block of Idalou Road they found the alleged 26-year-old rapist asleep in a rented room.

The woman said she'd gone to several clubs Saturday night before meeting a man introduced to her by her brother-in-law.

The woman, her acquaintance and another man then drove away. Soon, the eventual suspect reportedly began asking the woman to go to a motel. She reportedly refused.

Eventually, the woman told police, the third member of the party pulled in front of the Idalou Road motel and let the woman out to buy a pack of cigarettes.

While she was making her purchase, the suspect reportedly rented a motel room. Moments later, he allegedly forced the woman to the room, where he demanded that she remove her clothing.

When the woman reportedly refused, the suspect allegedly picked up a nearby chair and struck her on the legs and hip with it.

After the alleged assault, the woman said she remained with the man for about three hours until he fell asleep on the bed. That's where police found him about 8:15 a.m. By 8:30 a.m. the suspect was being booked into the county jail.

R. C. Garrett, an 81-year-old retiree, said he had not checked the Cloverlake Dairy building, 406 N. University Ave., during the two weeks he's been away since May 20.

On Sunday, Garrett discovered about $2,600 worth of restaurant equipment, including a large grill, griddle, sandwich table, two deep fryers and a malt machine, missing.

As a 30-year-old Lubbock man attempted to wheel into the parking lot of a North Lubbock restaurant Saturday, he reportedly came face to face with the barrel of a shotgun.

As the victim tried to turn right into the parking lot, a man in a 1976-model Vega reportedly opened his driver's side door and levelled the gun on the 30-year-old. The suspect reportedly also loaded a round of ammunition and used profane language, before he drove away.

Police have the name of an out-of-town suspect.

Motel owner Sanco Nash III said six black men pulled up across the street from his E. Broadway lodge early Sunday and began firing their guns toward his business.

Nash reportedly returned the fire, then watched as two of the men threw lighted firebombs at a business next door.

When police arrived, three businesses had been damaged slightly, though the firebombs had been extinguished.

Nash, who reportedly has an interest in all three businesses, estimated the damage at $400.

Gschwend also found himself temporarily saying good-bye to more than $1,100 worth of his personal property, including six firearms and some jewelry.

Police later recovered the property and had the 43-year-old man in custody.

Gary Lovett of 2408 Auburn Ave. said he arrived at his mobile home about 3 a.m. Sunday and was confronted by two burglars who began assaulting him until he allegedly lost consciousness.

After he awoke, Lovett called police and told them he could not remember anything after the alleged assault took place. He knew one thing, though. His television and stereo, valued together at $200, were missing.

Area Manhunt Nabs Childress Prisoner

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — Members of the Childress County Sheriff's office were joined by Department of Public Safety officers and city policemen in an early morning manhunt Sunday.

Authorities were searching for a prisoner who fled from custody while being booked on public intoxication charges.

The subject was identified as Benny Whitner, 25, of Childress, who was arrested on the intoxication charge by DPS officers.

After being booked at the office of Sheriff J.E. Benham, he scuffled with deputies while being taken to his cell and managed to flee the courthouse.

Authorities said Whitner, who is six foot six and weighs 195 pounds, made his escape after deputies had disarmed themselves to take him to his cell.

About an hour and a half after Whitner's 5:30 a.m. getaway he was spotted running along the rail tracks in downtown Childress where he was apprehended by a DPS officer and returned to the county jail.

Authorities say additional charges are expected to be filed against Whitner today.

Language Students Get Scholarships

ACUFF (Special) — Two Roosevelt High School Spanish students have received scholarships to study in Mexico.

Soylo Fuentes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fuentes, is the recipient of the Meda Baker Honea scholarship, which is intended to promote understanding between Hispanic and Anglo persons by means of travel and study in Mexico.

Terry Flores, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jessie R. Flores, has been given the E.K. Hufstedler Jr. Memorial Scholarship.

The Roosevelt Spanish Club is sending Domingo Lopez and Angela Flores to study at the Instituto de Filologia Hispanica in Saltillo, Coahuila, Mexico.

Lopez is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Heriberto Gaona, and Miss Flores is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jessie R. Flores. Both are third-year Spanish students at Roosevelt.

Blind Musicians Enjoy Band Slots

MANSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Marco and Suzanna Maroder play the sousaphone not because of its sound, but because the instrument can be played with one hand. That leaves the other hand free for reading music.

The teen-agers have been blind since birth. They make up two-thirds of the sousaphone section at Edwin O. Smith High School.

The brother and sister perform with the band even when it's marching, although that takes a little planning.

Other marchers keep within reach so they can touch Marco and Suzanna on the shoulder to guide them through the turns.

Deputies Hold Plainview Man In Murder Case

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Hale County sheriff's deputies had a 70-year-old Plainview man in custody Sunday for investigation of murder in connection with the Saturday night death of Luther Brinsfield here.

Deputies arrested the man just after being called to the Brinsfield residence just outside the city limits here about 9 p.m. Saturday.

Brinsfield had been shot four times with a .22-caliber revolver, deputies said. He was pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Glenn Stone at the scene.

Witnesses told deputies Brinsfield and another man had gotten into an argument two hours earlier. Officers arrested the man sitting outside the Brinsfield home in a parked automobile.

Stone is withholding a ruling on the cause of death pending completion of an autopsy today.

Survivors include his wife, Vera; three daughters, Elizabeth, Goldie and Elaine, all of the home; a son, Dewaine of the home; a step-daughter, Pam Humphrey of the home; a brother G.W. "Bud" Brinsfield of Matador; and a sister, Mrs. Margie Taylor of Tulia.

Clear Sailing Predicted For Gas Price Measure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said Sunday compromise legislation to deregulate natural gas prices will not add to the cost of living, and he predicted it will pass both houses of Congress by "significant margins."

In an interview on NBC's "Meet the Press" program, he also said there is a "50-50 chance" left for passage of a crude oil tax — the last remaining part of President Carter's proposed energy bill that is still awaiting congressional consideration.

Despite the probability of a Senate filibuster to delay action on the conference, Schlesinger said he expects it to be adopted, "and I would think there would be significant margins."

He said chances of getting the equalization tax on crude oil imports — a key element of the energy package — "have been improving in recent weeks.

"It has acquired additional support," Schlesinger said. "I think the sheer rationality of the tax, given our present oil position in the world will overcome the opposition ... If we are to have less dependence, we have got to cease subsidizing imports."

He was asked whether the compromise legislation providing for natural gas price deregulation in 1985 after phased rises would undercut the administration battle against inflation.

"There will be some small increase in energy prices, in gas prices, relative to what they had been before," he said. But since natural gas is a cheaper fuel than are all the alternatives, such as imported oil or liquefied natural gas, he said, and since more gas will flow into the interstate market under the legislation, "the consumer will not be damaged by the action.

"I would think the impact on the cost of living for consumers would be negligible," he said. "It might even be beneficial because more gas which is cheaper will flow as compared to imported fuel oil."

He said if the crude oil tax is not passed, the administration will accept the other four parts of the bill — natural gas pricing, coal conversion, conservation and utility rate reform as a "major first step" toward establishing a national energy policy that could save up to 3 billion barrels of oil a day.

He rejected the notion that there is a surplus of oil, and said only a major depression would create that kind of situation.

He said the fact that the first hole drilled in the Atlantic turned up dry — with no oil discovered — "contributes to a view that American oil production in the 1980s is not likely to be any higher than it is at the present time. Therefore we must get down consumption."

'Grace Period' Precedes Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Canada agreed to a 24-hour "grace period" Sunday during which fishermen violating territorial waters will simply be warned of their trespass.

After noon local time on Monday, Canadian fishermen working in U.S. waters will be subject to arrest, said Charles Shapiro, a State Department spokesman. Canadian officials said trespassing U.S. fishermen could have their catches impounded and be fined $5,000 to $25,000.

Canada abruptly announced on Friday that it would no longer honor a fishing agreement between the two countries and ordered U.S. fishermen out.

The United States responded in kind. Both orders went into effect at noon Sunday, local time.

The abruptness of the announcements led to the grace period. Shapiro said some fishing boats probably have been at sea since before the break, and skippers may be unaware they are fishing illegally.

The sudden break also caught the State Department off guard. Shapiro said the department erroneously passed the word that sportsmen and Great Lakes commercial fishermen were not affected by the dispute. The department since has found that they are, he said.

But Canadian officials say they plan no action against recreational fishermen unless the United States takes such action against Canadians.

Canadian and U.S. fishermen, hunting salmon off the West Coast, redfish off Nova Scotia, and cod, haddock, scallop and pollock off New England, have operated in the other country's waters under a provisional agreement while the two nations tried to negotiate a long-term pact.

The talks broke down in a dispute over protecting fish stocks.

Canada complained that the United States had failed to restrict its harvest from the Georges Bank off New England.

The United States argued that Canada had failed at the Swiftsure Bank off British Columbia to protect salmon that spawn in U.S. streams.

In U.S. waters, the Coast Guard is enforcing the ban. Coast Guard spokesmen in Boston, Seattle and Cleveland reported no incidents in the early hours of the ban.

Douglas Johnston, Atlantic director-general of the Canadian federal fisheries department, said no incidents had been reported in Canadian waters.

Newsman Recalls RFK's Death

(EDITOR'S NOTE: On June 4, 1968, AP movie columnist Bob Thomas took time out from his Hollywood schedule to pitch in on a routine political assignment. He was to staff an election-night victory party. The candidate was Bobby Kennedy, and the story turned out to be one of the biggest of his career.)

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jimmy Breslin, then of the New York Post, sat down at the next typewriter and muttered to himself, "Pretty dull story; what can I write about?"

It was mid-evening on June 4, 1968, in the Ambassador Hotel press headquarters for Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. He was running for the Democratic nomination for president in the California primary, and election night seemed as routine as when I covered other candidates: Adlai Stevenson, Richard Nixon, Ronald Reagan, George Murphy.

The Embassy Room rocked with the same noisy hoopla. The band played "California, Here I Come."

Film stars orating about the New Camelot. The crowd cheering the returns as Kennedy pulled ahead of Eugene McCarthy.

Toward midnight a press aide came into the press room to announce that Kennedy would be coming downstairs to deliver a victory speech, then would answer reporters' questions in the press room.

Should I return to the Embassy Room to report the speech? I decided to wait for the press conference rather than risk getting caught in the crowd. The AP office could cover the speech on TV, while Kennedy's comments to the press would not be televised.

At the end of the speech I waited for the candidate's arrival at the door of the kitchen through which I had passed all evening.

Then screams.

I rushed into the kitchen.

In the nightmarish scene I perceived athletes Rafer Johnson and Rosey Grier struggling with someone. Shouts and wails reverberated through the room. A cluster of people huddled in a circle, and I couldn't see over their heads.

I jumped atop what I thought was a table (later I discovered it was a stack of kitchen trays) and peered down at what caused their horror.

After watching the scene for a few seconds, I jumped down and ran to the press room. The telephones didn't work!

I knew the hotel layout, and hurried to the telephone booths in the lobby.

"Kennedy has been shot."

With some difficulty I convinced him it was no hoax and began dictating an account of the assassination.

Midway through the story I heard an uproar in the lobby. Leaning out of the booth, I could see a score of police hurrying a swarthy young man down the marble staircase. I dictated a description of the presumed assailant.

It is 10 years later, yet I can still remember the events of that night as clearly as yesterday's interview.

Ford Denies $2 Million Bribe Planned

NEW YORK (AP) — A Ford Motor Co. subsidiary planned a bribe of nearly $2 million to an unnamed Indonesian general in 1975 to obtain a telecommunications contract in that country and although top Ford officials discovered and scotched half the payoff, the other part went through, the New York Times said Sunday.

Ford has denied that any improper payments were made in connection with the deal, but the Times said the company now knows that one of the contracts involved was suspiciously backdated.

The first million dollars was supposed to be passed through a subcontractor, but when top Ford management officials discovered it in August 1975, they ordered it stopped, the Times said.

However, in September, the Ford subsidiary amended a contract it had with a second subcontractor, inflated it by $900,000 and then backdated the new contract to June, when the original was signed, the newspaper said.

The extra $900,000 became the payoff to the general, the Times said. It said Ford denies it, but that the American company actually does not know for sure whether the subcontractor, the Indonesian goverment-owned Electronika Nusantara, passed along the alleged bribe.

The extra money was paid by Philco Overseas Services Inc., a subsidiary of a Ford subsidiary then known as Aeroneutronic Ford and which has since been succeeded by Ford Aerospace and Communications Corp., the Times said.

Ford Aerospace is among a number of American companies under investigation of a federal grand jury in Washington that seeks to find out whether bribes were paid for contracts to build a domestic satellite communications system for Indonesia, the Times said.

It said Ford had a $30 million slice of the contract and other pieces included $29 million for International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. and $71 million for Hughes Aircraft.

Seminary Embroiled In Gay Controversy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new controversy in theological education centers on seminary students who — no matter how good their academic standings — will never be eligible to be ordained.

The issue was raised at a United Methodist seminary in Chicago when two first-year students, who originally had been recommended for advancement, announced they were homosexual.

The faculty of the Garrett Evangelical Theological Seminary responded by refusing to readmit the pair.

The two students had been in good standing academically and were on a list of students recommended for advancement before they sent letters to their bishops, annual conference officials and the seminary dean announcing they were gay.

But the faculty majority apparently acted on the basis of United Methodist Church teachings which "preclude the ordination of self-proclaimed homosexuals to the ordained ministry" of the denomination.

The school's dean, Carl Marbury said he recommended against advancement of the two "for professional reasons" — implying the issue of whether the two could be ordained was central to the case.

"The issue is a student's right to a theological education," said Dr. Rosemary Radford Reuther, a Roman Catholic theologian on the Garrett faculty.

Dr. Reuther pointed out that if the issue of "ordainability" were applied to all students. It would rule out Roman Catholic students who might be planning on a ministry in the Metropolitan Community Church, a gay denomination with churches across the country.

Last month, the United Presbyterian Church in the United States voted overwhelmingly to reject avowed homosexuals in the ordained ministries of the denomination, and other Protestant bodies are fiercely debating the issue.

The decision of who is and who is not to be ordained is lodged in various places among protestant bodies with differing forms of church structure, but the increase in interfaith seminary training makes the seminary's decision on "ordainability" a crucial one.

James Will, theology professor at Garrett, criticized the faculty action in a sermon, saying it "reflects institutional legalism grounded in anxiety over future economic support for the school."

The United Methodist gay caucus, Affirmation, also raised the question of denomination financial support for the seminary as a possible motive behind the faculty majority's action.

The Methodist Book of Discipline states that no board or agency shall give United Methodist funds to "any 'gay' caucus or group, or otherwise use such funds to promote acceptance of homosexuality."

NUTRITION ATTITUDES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are interested in nutrition but don't want the government telling them what to eat, according to a study discussed at a conference here on nutrition and the food system. "They want to make their own decisions," Tim Hammonds of the Food Marketing Institute, told the conference. Donald Kennedy, commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, said this country needs more information on what people are eating and the degree of regulatory control from the government that is needed. He noted that more than half the food that people eat now is processed.

Bangladesh General Elected President

DACCA, Bangladesh (AP) — Maj. Gen. Ziaur Rahman, elected president of Bangladesh by a landslide vote over the weekend, now faces what many observers say will be six months of tricky political maneuvering.

With more than 98 percent of the voting centers reporting, the 42-year-old martial law administator and commander of the armed forces had 15.6 million votes to 4.5 for his chief opponent, retired Gen. Mohammad Ataul Ghani Osmani. Eight other candidates received only minor support.

Slightly more than half of the 38.5 million eligible voters cast ballots Saturday in the country's first direct presidential elections. The balloting appeared to go smoothly with no reports of violence, though the opposition claimed rigging and irregularities.

About 1,000 supporters flocked to the presidential palace Sunday shouting "Zia zindabad!" — up with Zia — and presented flowers.

Zia told newsmen the elections had moved Bangladesh several years ahead politically and described the balloting as "the fairest possible." He stressed economic betterment as the major task ahead and said the "law and order situation will further improve."

Zia promised during the campaign he would abolish remaining martial law decrees and said parliamentary elections would be held in December. Until then, he has said he will govern with a cabinet and the existing government machinery.

The question remains whether Zia's six-party Nationalist Front coalition, which includes the conservative, pro-Pakistan Moslem League and the pro-Peking National Awami Party, will stick together and whether the battered opposition or elements in the always volatile army will allow him the remainder of the year to consolidate his power base.

Zia is expected to retain his neutral stance toward the major powers, leaning somewhat to the United States and the West and toward fellow Moslem nations in the Middle East. His most urgent foreign policy task will be talks with neighboring Burma about repatriation of Moslems who have fled that predominantly Buddhist nation.

A Red Cross official was quoted by a West German radio station Sunday as saying 200,000 Burmese Moslems have streamed into Bangladesh in recent weeks, and many face starvation and disease in overcrowded refugee camps.

David Bedford told the station in Baden-Baden, West Germany, the "overwhelming majority" of the refugees are children under 12.

"Cholera has already broken out," he said. "Each day children are dying."

The Rangoon government claims they are illegal aliens and Bangladesh currently is burdened with keeping them alive in the border camps.

Opposing Zia in the elections was Osmani's Democratic United Alliance, which included his own small Janata Party and the Awami League, the main force in Bangladesh politics during the the days of Sheik Mujibur Rahman who led the fight for nationhood and was killed in an August 1975 military coup.

The 60-year-old Osmani had been commander-in-chief of liberation troops in the 1971 war in which East Pakistan pulled away from West Pakistan and became Bangladesh. Zia emerged as a hero in the war and seized power in late 1975. He has silenced opposition since then by jailing and executing some, but gradually he has allowed a measure of political expression.

The opposition criticized Zia for allowing only 23 days for campaigning and throwing the weight of the government apparatus behind his own candidacy. The major, government-controlled newspapers and radio station were allowed to cover the opposition camp but most of the news centered around Zia's grouping.

"Zia would have won anyway, but it would have been closer if the opposition had been given more time to organize and campaign," said the editor of one independent newspaper.

"Losing Hair? Try This At No Risk"

HOUSTON, Texas—If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss...and grow more hair.

For years "they said it couldn't be done". But now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for both men and women, that is not only stoping hair loss...but is really growing hair!

They don't even ask you to take their word for it. They invite you to try the treatment for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself.

Naturally, they would not offer this opportunity unless the treatment worked. However, it is impossible to help everyone.

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in the family," it is certainly not proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and many other conditions can cause hair loss. If you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead, you are beyond help. So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop your hair loss and grow more hair...now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc., will supply you with treatment for 32 days—at their risk—if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially, by mail. Adv.

Heartline: I am a veteran of World War II. My wife and I are contemplating moving to a foreign country. Can you tell me anything on veterans living abroad? — M.A.

Nearly 60,000 veterans, receiving VA benefits, live overseas, according to VA records.

Veterans Administration reported also that if you are a veteran planning a vacation or permanent move overseas, you should check on how your VA benefits might be affected — before you leave the United States.

It may be a shock to find, after you have moved overseas, that certain VA benefits are not available. For instance, loan guarantee is not available outside the United States.

Veterans with service-connected disabilities will find medical care available in many overseas locations, but only if they have a disability statement from the VA office which maintains their medical records.

With that statement the veteran can obtain emergency hospitalization-paid for by the VA — when it and proper application for medical benefits are presented to a United States embassy or consular office in a foreign country.

Application should be made within 72 hours of need, the VA advises.

The Veteran Memorial Hospital in Manila is the only overseas hospital where VA-paid care is available to veterans with nonservice-connected disabilities. That hospital will admit nonservice connected veterans on a space-available basis, but only if they cannot afford other hospitalization, the VA emphasized.

Veterans retired from the military service may obtain care at overseas military hospitals and clinics.

The VA also explained that certain VA education benefits are available overseas to eligible veterans, their spouses and children. The VA also will mail compensation or pension checks to most overseas locations.

Information on benefits and service available to veterans traveling or living overseas may be obtained at any VA office, or by checking with a national veteran organization representative.

You will be eligible for Medicare when you are 65 years old even though you are still working. You should sign up for this three months prior to your 65th birthday. Dancer Reflects Cuban Culture

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Alicia Alonso, Cuba's acclaimed ballerina, says her country is a happy place, defying the image in which some people hold it. She tries to reflect her Cuban roots in her dancing.

"Yes, I tell you," she said in an interview. "To be able to grow a style, to be able to have something to say that would reflect a culture, you have to belong — your roots — to a place, a country."

It has been her theme from the time she starred in the Ballet Theatge in New York in the 1940s until today while she leads the Ballet Nacional de Cuba in its first performances in the United States.

A fragile woman at 56, she danced with the grace and feeling that befit her years, but still with the verve and gaiety that tell her heritage. The effect is perhaps as powerful as the leaps and spins of Mikhail Barishnikov, now king of the dance world.

"Once you develop your way of saying, your style, because it is influenced by everything around you, you get something from whatever your roots are," she said in sometimes faltering English. "You will give something to others."

Alonso was born in Cuba. She left the Ballet Theatre in 1940 to return to Cuba to set up her own ballet company, yet she felt as if she had never left Cuba in the first place.

"I never left my roots," she said. "I gave my art (in New York), but I could only give my art by having my roots."

"Every Cuban has a very gay character. It's one of the typical things about us ... If we knew why, we would share with everyone."

Presentations of Alonso's company in the Kennedy Center through June 11 and New York later are the latest cultural exchange between the United States and Cuba. Ironically, as Alonso was rehearsing last week, President Carter was a Alonso is dancing Giselle several times. The company also is doing several Cuban premieres here which will show American audiences the distinctiveness of Cuban ballet.

She spoke slowly in a Spanish accent, often gesturing deliberately.

"There is a school of ballet of Cuba," she said. "It has been influenced by our way of living, of thinking, our culture, our different races that we have, the weather in our country ... everything has helped to develop the way of expression. our choreographers have been very much influenced by our folklore and our character.

"You will hear rhythm, very much Cuban. You will feel it. A sense of humor, you will see it, too. Very much, in the choreography. A new way of trying to say and do new things."

Alonso said that art is universal in the sense that all humans experience love, hate, despair, hope. But the expression of these themes vary from place to place.

"We give a lot of volatility to life itself, to happiness," she said, "the expression of happiness, we are a very happy country, we really are.

She began dancing at 8.

"I always liked dancing. I was like those little girls, whatever expression they felt, whatever they felt out of life, they expressed by movement, by dancing. I never saw a ballet before in my life. I just expressed by dancing, by movement."

She went to Spain with her family and was influenced by Spanish dancing. When she took her first ballet lesson, "that meant for me my whole life, it meant everything.

"It was the most rich thing. For me there was no party, there was nothing i liked as much as ballet. I guess I was one of those fortunate children who found her way, her career, her life existence. I think there is a very tragic moment in the certain age of a chcld when he doesn't know what he wants or where he wants to go, you know?"

Alonso was interviewed on the condition that no political questions be asked. But she did respond to a comment by ABC television correspondent Barbara Walters that Fidel Castro was the most charismatic person she had ever interviewed.

"He is," Alonso said. "He is full of life. If I would say he loved art, I would not say it correct. He loves the things he knows we need ... culture, agriculture, art, education."

Saudi Woman Mixes Culture With Work As Correspondent

But Naila Al-Sowayel, who calls herself an "evolutionary," has created a quiet, one-woman revolution in Saudi Arabia's communications.

She is the first full-time Saudi Arabian correspondent in the United States, the first Saudi woman to appear on her country's television screen without a veil, the first Saudi woman to interview King Hussein of Jordan.

Naila, 25, is the daughter of a former Saudi ambassador to the United States — a woman who moves with grace between the conservative, religious world of her country and the modern, competitive world of Washington journalism, and accepts the differences.

She drives a car in Washington but is banned from driving in Saudi Arabia as are other women.

"Even if I could drive in Saudi Urabia, I wouldn't because the roads are so bad. I don t drive in Mexico, either," she said.

Once on the plane home, however, she disappears into the rest room in midflight and re-emerges with the full Saudi veil over her face, which she wears in public until she makes the flight back.

She finds no contradiction in her two worlds.

"As far as I'm concerned, our country should move quickly into the modern world when it comes to hospitals and schools. But I think we should maintain our religious customs. Being western doesn t mean you have to act like something out of Hollywood."

In some ways, she said, discrimination against a woman in the West is more unfair than in Saudi Arabia.

"At home, we are restricted from certain things, but the men realize this and they say we will do it for you," she said.

When she worked at the World Bank in Washington, she "found that women had to be at their jobs for 25 years before they got a chance at some of the interesting assignments that men were getting right away."

When she applied for admission to Harvard Law School, an official who turned her down said: "When you graduate, you'll get married and put your law degree in a drawer somewhere."

She expects to finish her Ph.D. in international relations at Johns Hopkins University in about six months.

She created her own job by persuading the Saudis to give her a few writing and television assignments. When her father was ambassador, she began to become fascinated with the power of the American press "to make and break things."

She thinks the Saudi hierarchy "accepted me because they knew I had some experience with the West and I could handle the changes."

As long as she keeps her life in separate compartments, and maintains the Saudi traditions, the government officials who pay her are understanding and encouraging, she said.

"A couple of years ago, Americans didn t know where Saudi Arabia is. Then they learned where it was, but they thought we were Palestinians or bomb throwers. Now they accept us as Arabs. That's a real change."

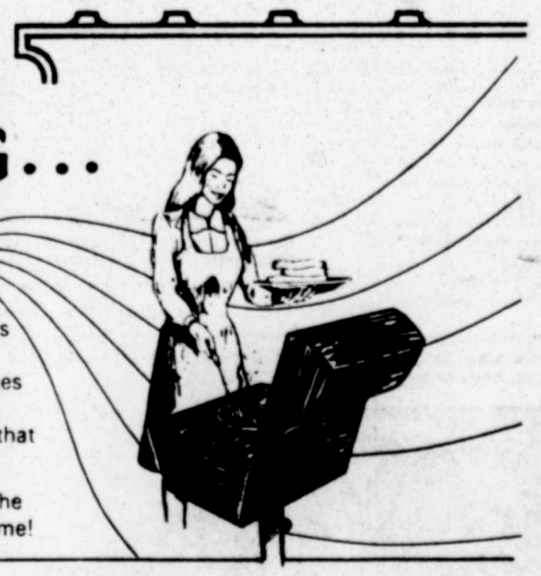

FIRE BURNS BATHERS

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A boiler explosion started a fire that seriously burned 38 women and children Saturday in a Turkish bath at Shiraz, southern Iran, a newspaper reported. The Ettelaat newspaper said the victims, many naked or clad only in towels, fled into the street and were rushed to hospitals in the city, about 400 miles south of this capital.

What... heats, broils, roasts; simmers, sizzles, broasts; grills, bakes, stews; panfries, and even barbecues?

GAS COOKING... OUTDOORS!

Gas cooking outdoors sure makes sense in the summertime. It keeps the heat out, so your house stays cool. You save on air conditioning. Plus there's no charcoal or lighter fluid to buy, and no wait. Gas reaches cooking temperature fast and cooks full family dinners, everything your inside range and oven can cook, with that great outdoor flavor.

Take the heat out of the kitchen. Install a gas grill on the patio. It sure makes sense in the summertime, or anytime!

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a problem with dizzy spells and nervousness. My heart starts beating fast and I get all sweaty and nervous. It happens mostly when I go places. It is especially bad when I am on high places. I've had this since I was 12 and I'm 24 now. It doesn't seem to be getting any better. Sometimes I feel like I am losing my mind. Everytime I go someplace or am around people it starts, but as long as I'm home I'm fine. I've been to doctors but that doesn't help. Any suggestions? Please send your booklet on reducing. — G.

This sounds like one of the commonest of phobias — agoraphobia, anxiety caused when leaving familiar settings, such as the home. It is most often seen in women between the ages of 20 and 30.

For most people normal anxiety subsides after repeated exposure to cause of the phobia. In others, like yourself, it becomes chronic and, indeed, may tend to become more exaggerated with time. The person may eventually withdraw and become more or less a prisoner in the home. Studies have uncovered some interesting and instructional facets to the problem. For example, one anxiety may reinforce another. Thus, a domestic disturbance will tend to make the primary phobia more pronounced.

Early diagnosis is important. In single phobias the outlook is usually good. The person learns to adjust lifestyle to either avoid the cause (heights, animals, etc.), or to live with it.

Physical symptoms, like palpitations and sweating, are not uncommon. Sometimes, actual physical causes can be found, such as hyperthyroidism or tachycardia (rapidity of hearbeat).

It is revealing that you have had this since childhood. The onset of such phobias is often gradual, and may begin with something as seemingly innocent as extreme blushing in youngsters. I might also speculate on the significance of your asking for my reducing booklet. An anxiety about an unattractive figure can lay the groundwork for unrelated phobias.

But it serves no purpose for me to attempt to psychoanalyze you long distance. A psychologist or psychiatrist should be able to help you. Often, understanding the problem is sufficient to allay the fears. Psychotherapy techniques have been used successfully. One of them is a kind of desensitization, the purposeful exposure to feared situations on a controlled, gradual basis. Group therapy organizations, where you will meet others with similar problems, may help. One of these is Recovery, Inc. There might be a branch where you live.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been told my hearing loss is caused by otosclerosis in the ear. What is this? Is it true that nothing can be done about this? — Mrs. W.T.

Otosclerosis is the formation of extra "spongy" bone in the labyrinth of the ear. It is a common cause of conduction deafness as opposed to nerve deafness.

About a tenth of the adult population may have some degree of otosclerosis, but of that number only about 10 percent have hearing loss attributed to it. The stapes, a stirrup-shaped bone in the ear, is often affected, causing the hearing loss. New surgical techniques (microsurgery) allow removal of this bone and replacement with an artificial one. In most cases hearing is restored. If the rest of your hearing mechanism, including the eardrum, is still intact, you may be a candidate for this.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How much would one have to pay to have a total hip replacement? — G.L.

Quite a bit. This remarkable surgery can cost anywhere between $5,000 and $10,000 depending on the complexity. An acquaintance had total hip replacement done at a cost of $7,000. He can now walk around normally, so it was worth it. The success rate is quite high in carefully selected candidates — better than 80 percent. The usual reason for it is, of course, arthritis.

• • •

Arthritis sufferers can be helped. Dr. Thosteson's booklet discusses many types of arthritis and related joint diseases as well as effective treatments and medications. For a copy of "How You Can Control Arthritis," write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Alan: "North wants to be in a grand slam if South has two aces and the king of trumps. He can't find this out by normal bidding methods but modern experts have at least two ways to get to the grand slam safely."

Oswald: "Which way do you favor?"

Alan: "I favor a modification of the grand slam force. The bidding in the box shows North asking for aces by means of Blackwood and then bidding six clubs. Five notrump in that spot would ask for kings. This bid of a new suit asks partner to bid seven if he holds two of the top three trump honors."

Oswald: "It certainly works here and is simple enough so that any established partnership can use it. Let's formalize it."

Alan: "OK. A partnership using this convention agrees that if a player who uses a Blackwood four notrump follows up with a bid of six in an unbid suit, he guarantees all the aces and asks his partner to bid seven with two of the three top trump honors."

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K7 ♡852 ◇J10952 ♣AQ8
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	3 ♠	4 ♡	?

What action do you take?

A.—Nothing is clear-cut. However, over the long run a raise to four spades should work out advantageously. First, it's unlikely that you can beat four hearts. Secondly, there are many hands where you might make four spades, and finally, a sacrifice at four spades shouldn't prove expensive. After all, partner did make a vulnerable preempt at the three-level.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠982 ♡AJ1095 ◇8 ♣AK93
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 NT	3 ♠

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. We wouldn't quarrel with a double, but it is probably wiser to let partner make the decision. A double might not work out all that well if partner's two no trump bid includes three-card support for your suit and scant spade values, so you should let him clarify his holding.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A8 ♡J2 ◇KQJ854 ♣Q105
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	1 ♠
Pass	Pass	3 ♠	3 ♠
Pass	Pass	4 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner has announced a strong hand, and though you have told him that you have a minimum, he doesn't know that you have a good six-card suit and first-round control of East's suit. You can get both messages across by cue-bidding four spades—partner won't play you for more than you have.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ52 ♡AQ1095 ◇7 ♣K82
What is your opening bid?

A.—Holding four spades and five hearts, it is sometimes correct to open one spade to leave yourself with a convenient rebid. However, this is not the hand for that action—your heart suit is so much better than your spades. Open one heart, and should partner respond two diamonds, rebid two hearts. You are not strong enough to reverse into two spades.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠9763 ♡AQ852 ◇Q76 ♣3
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?

A.—Bid two clubs, the Stayman Convention, asking partner to bid a four-card major if he has one. If partner rebids two hearts or two spades, raise to game. If partner rebids two diamonds, denying a four-card major suit, you can bid two hearts. That shows a five-card suit and forces partner to bid again.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♡AKJ873 ◇AKJ92 ♣83
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East

What do you bid now?

A.—Despite the fact that partner could not do more than raise to two hearts at his first turn, there are definite chances for slam. A cue-bid of four spades will alert your partner to your ambitions, and could give you the opportunity to highlight your club weakness later in the auction.

Q.7—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠5 ♡K ◇1097652 ♣107432
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	Pass	Dble.
Rdble.	1 ♠	?

What action do you take?

A.—In terms of high cards your hand is not worth much, but distributionally it offers considerable offensive potential. Partner has shown a good hand with his redouble, so we would start looking for a minor-suit fit. Bid two diamonds.

Q.8—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠982 ♡Q103 ◇AQ962 ♣KJ

A.—What would you like to do? The bidding has been opened in your best suit and you don't have the values for a no trump overcall, which would show 16-18 points. Your support for the unbid suits could not be called robust even in the most polite circles. Pass, and see how the auction develops.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: While I'm writing this letter I'm crying my eyes out. Mom and I just had a hellish argument. I yelled a lot of terrible things at her and when I walked out of the room she was in tears. I've got a real big mouth for a 14-year-old kid and I'm ashamed of myself.

I really love my mom a lot and when I think of all the neat things she's done for me I feel rotten. I'd like to say a few things to her through your column if it's all right with you, Ann.

Mom, I know sometimes I get on your nerves and when you yell at me, it's for my own good. When I yell back, I really don't mean the awful things I say. I'm just being defensive. I love you, Mom. You are the greatest.

I'm begging you to print this, Ann. It will help a lot of moms to know how their daughters really feel. — Off My Chest In Dearborn, Mich.

Dear Dear: Here's your letter, Sweetie. It could have been written by any one of a million 14-year-olds. Thanks for being honest.

P.S. I hope this column gets taped to thousands of moms' makeup mirrors with the message scribbled across the top — "Me, too."

Dear Ann Landers: Please, just one last word to "Happy Wally," the guy who figured he laid out $3,300 over 22 years to his wife by giving her $10 each time they made love. (She gave him $5 for every refusal. Almost always, it was a "headache.") Your readers faulted Wally for ringing up a sale only 15 times a year.

As I figure it, Wally was a budding economist who did quite well. Assuming he was "interested" 360 times a year, they made love 130 times and did not on 230 occasions, or about one night in three. This means a cash flow of approximately $1,300 per year with the net balance of payments only $150. Wally did a pretty good job of balancing his budget. (Our country should do half as well!)

Others interested in the economics of this problem should note that if Wally paid only $5 and received $10 from his wife, books would be balanced if they made love on two out of every three occasions. Even better, an outlay of $2 and an income of $10 would yield results five out of six times.

My own solution to the problem is to achieve a perfectly balanced budget by making no payments at all. The best things in life are free. — Math Prof

Dear Prof: I hate to burst your bubble, Bub, but NOTHING is free. Everything in life costs something. You pay either going in — or coming out. I'll sign this — No Cynic, Just Realistic

Dear Ann Landers: Settle an argument, please. I can't believe you said in a column that Princess Grace didn't have class.

My husband (who has never been wrong in his entire life) says you did. True or false? — Fur Flying In Florence

Dear Fur: Sorry to spoil Mr. Infallible's perfect record, your husband is wrong. What I said was as follows: "Class is grace under pressure." A reader then wrote and suggested "the perfect example." His illustration: "Princess Grace...smiling...while wearing a tight girdle."

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible

Matt. 28:19-20, Mark 1:1-4

19 Therefore go and make disciples in all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit,
20 And then teach these new disciples to obey all the commands I have given you; and be sure of this—that I am with you always, even to the end of the world."

MARK
CHAPTER 1

1 Here begins the wonderful story of Jesus the Messiah, the Son of God.
2 In the book written by the prophet Isaiah, God announced that He would send His Son to earth, and that a special messenger would arrive first to prepare the world for His coming.
3 "This messenger will live out in the barren wilderness," Isaiah said, "and will proclaim that everyone must straighten out his life to be ready for the Lord's arrival."
4 This messenger was John the Baptist. He lived in the wilderness and taught that all should be baptized as a public announcement of their decision to turn their backs on sin, so that God could forgive them.
5 People from Jerusalem and from all over Judea traveled out into the Judean wastelands to see and hear John, and when they confessed their sins he baptized them in the Jordan River.
6 His clothes were woven from camel's hair and he wore a leather belt; locusts and wild honey were his food.
7 Here is a sample of his preaching: "Someone is coming soon who is far greater than I am, so much greater that I am not even worthy to be His slave.
8 I baptize you with water but He will baptize you with God's Holy Spirit!"
9 Then one day Jesus came from Nazareth in Galilee, and was baptized by John there in the Jordan River.
10 The moment Jesus came up out of the water, He saw the heavens open and the Holy Spirit in the form of a dove descending on Him.
11 And a voice from heaven said, "You are My beloved Son; You are My Delight."
12,13 Immediately the Holy Spirit urged Jesus into the desert. There, for 40 days, alone except for desert animals, He was subjected to Satan's temptations to sin. And afterwards the angels came and cared for Him.
14 Later on, after John was arrested by King Herod, Jesus went to Galilee to preach God's Good News.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Have you seen where the new Cadillacs are offering a digital trip computer on their dashboards?

It's an instrument panel which you program like a computer just before you start the trip. Then, as you drive, you press a function button and instantly, the lights illuminate to reveal your average speed for the trip, how many miles before you need gas, how long you've been on the road, how many miles to your destination and what time you will arrive.

Boy, if that little goodie were a standard part of family compact cars and station wagons, it would be the greatest boon to parents traveling with kids since they started selling dart tranquilizers over the counter without a prescription.

Think of it! An instant answer to all those long-playing mouths in the back seat. "When do we get there? When we gonna have lunch? How long is it going to take? How many more miles?"

Of course, it's the same old story. The expensive cars have all the children's features that should be in the economy cars. Like the limousines with their sliding glass panel that throws the back seat into a pit of silence and spares the driver the agony of sound.

Everyone knows the economy cars need the twirling bucket seats where a mother can whirl around and give the kids a rap without standing on her knees and impaling herself on the head rest to reach the bratee.

They need the electric windows that are controlled by the cockpit crew so that you don't have a child's tongue curving around your no-draft.

Economy cars should have the electric locks on all the doors that keep the adults in the front seat in control, especially when you stop for gas and discover you have to drive through the homemade fudge and the gift shop to check it out.

Of course, it's understood that the digital computer would have to be set with a few different responses to a car carrying children. But if we've come this far, it may not be too crazy to imagine that someday, station wagons would come equipped with standard buttons on a panel that would illuminate the following answers just by touching the button:

Are we lost? (Yes or no.)

Miles covered per day. (You're not going to believe this.)

Hints from Heloise

DEAR FOLKS:

Getting tired of a cluttered cupboard?

Seem like you never have enough room to put all the glasses away?

Try turning every other glass upside down on the shelf.

Obviously this doesn't make any difference with glasses that are straight — and have a top and bottom that are the same size.

I use this trick mainly where I keep my large wine glasses. I have quite a few and it was always a problem to store them. Now I just turn every other one upside down and I can get almost twice as many on the shelf. — Heloise

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

The prewash spray we use on our clothes before laundering is excellent for removing grease spots on the driveway.

Just wet the driveway where the grease spots are, spray them with the spot remover and let it stand for two or three minutes.

Only takes about five minutes for the whole process and doesn't harm grass along the driveway. — Theresa C.

• • •

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

I have tried several of the ideas in your column, and my four children have put up with me so far. But when I decided to try your "chore distributing suggestion," my youngest thought that was too much.

"Why does that Heloise have to put all those ideas into your head?" he exploded.

But that's all right...keep those hints coming. I love 'em! — Phyllis

Will do my best! Love you for writing! — Heloise

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

We use hair shampoo that comes in a plastic tube. To always have it handy, my husband takes a plastic clothespin with an attached hook, clips the clothespin to the bottom of the shampoo tube, then hangs the hook over the shower curtain rod.

The shampoo is always at the top of the tube (or opening) and ready to use, and the tube is always handy but out of the way. — Louisea Hall

Brilliant, brilliant. — Heloise

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

I have found a very good use of those extra powder puffs.

I have very sensitive ears, so when I wash and roll my hair, I put a net over it, then place a powder puff inside the net — one puff over each ear.

I can then dry my hair in comfort. — Elsie

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

I sew a great deal. After using a pattern, I tuck a scrap of the fabric used inside the envelope.

If I have made alterations or changes I note those on a slip of paper, along with the date, and staple the scrap of fabric to the note.

Surely helps if I want to repeat a garment, or if something needs changing the next time.

I usually put the garment made and the date on the front of the pattern envelope, then can see at a glance what I used that pattern for. — Marian White

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

Upon returning home, baby's traveling diaper bag should be repacked for the next trip.

Remove soiled diapers, etc., and replace with clean ones. Make sure you have everything needed for next time. Then hang the bag in the closet.

Sure saves a hassle for mother with so many things to remember when taking baby out. — Doris Swann

Manpower Problem Faced By Russians

EDITOR'S NOTE — A secret analysis of trends in East-West relations was considered last week by NATO summit leaders. It forecast profound changes in the Soviet Union with far-reaching social, economic and military implications. Here, an American scientist who contributed research for that study tells of Soviet manpower problems.

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
AP Diplomatic Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. government scientist says a serious labor shortage in the Soviet Union is posing problems for Kremlin leaders that will intensify through the 1980s and 1990s.

"Regional differentials in birth and population growth rates will have a major impact on both the size and nationality structure of the Soviet armed forces," says Dr. Murray Feshbach, a Commerce Department researcher in foreign population trends.

Unless changes are made in terms of military service and in other aspects of manpower allocation, the Soviets may have to consider cutting their air, land and sea forces, he says.

Feshbach, 49, who speaks Russian and is trained in Soviet economics, has visited the Soviet Union eight times. He is a member of five groups set up under the Soviet-American Agreement on Science and Technology. One group, on manpower research, is to visit Moscow June 26 to wrap up a joint five-year study on the use and training of engineers and technologists.

Feshbach said in an interview last week that by the year 2000 one-third of the Soviet military personnel will come from Asian and Transcaucasian republics along the southern tier of the Soviet Union. That compares with about one-fifth in 1970.

At the same time, the potential supply of 18-year-old conscripts will drop from 56 percent to 44 percent.

"These changes mean that the military will need to train increasing numbers of less trustworthy, non-Slavic, primarily rural recruits from the border regions in the Russian language and to adapt them to the technology of modern armed forces," Feshbach said.

That is not the only major impact Feshbach foresees resulting from shifting Soviet birth rates and nationality structures.

A parallel situation, approaching crisis proportions, is building up in the Soviets' major industrial production centers. These are located mainly in the Russian Republic and other non-Asian areas where declining birth rates are reducing new sources of labor, especially skilled labor. At the beginning of the 1970s, the Russian Republic produced 62 percent of the gross value of Soviet industrial goods. But that proportion probably will decrease over the coming 15 years, Feshbach said.

Language Barrier

On another aspect of the Soviets' developing manpower shortage, Feshbach points to a low level of migration from the central Asian republics to the big industrial centers. One factor cited by Soviet analysts for this has been the language barrier. The 1970 census showed the number of non-Russians who do not speak Russian had grown.

To help reduce labor shortages in certain areas, Feshbach said, the Soviets have been importing foreign labor from such countries as Finland, North Korea and Italy.

Figures Compiled

— The Soviet population as a whole may be expected to reach 308 million by 2000 from a 1950 level of 180 million. This is about 40 million less than Soviet estimates of 10 years ago.

— In contrast, the five central Asian republics of Kirgiziya, Tadzhikistan, Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan and Kazakhstan will about double in population, from a 1970 level of 33 million to 64 million.

— The Soviet birth rate has dropped by more than 30 percent since 1950. By 2000, the national average is expected to be about 16.1 per 1,000. And the expected death rate in an aging population in the same year will be 10.6 against a 1976 level of 9.5 per 1,000.

There has been "an astonishing increase in infant mortality." And there has been "a very significant increase in mortality rates of males aged 20 to 45...due largely to alcoholism."

Action had its way, the American people would starve and freeze to death in the dark.

"I think most citizens agree with me that there must be a reasonable balance between environmental concerns and the desperate need to control inflation and create more jobs," the senator added.

Armstrong, who is running for the Senate from Colorado, said he regards himself as an environmentalist, "although I feel I have a balanced view. I voted for strip mine legislation and for the Alaska wilderness bill, which is probably the most important environmental legislation of the century... Protecting the environment is an obligation we have as citizens, and even more so as congressmen."

Whitten, contacted in Mississippi, said he considers himself an environmentalist, "but not an extremist... I believe in improving the environment. So many of these extremists don't want to do anything to it." Hansen said his environmental voting record was "very practical, very proper and serves the best interests of my people and the nation."

A spokesman for Huckaby said the Louisiana Democrat "doesn't consider himself anti-environmentalist."

"Concern For Land"

"He's a farmer, and he has a great concern for the land," the spokesman, Alan Stonecipher, said of Huckaby. "But he has to consider economic factors when making his votes."

Risenhoover, contacted in Oklahoma, said he was "honored and pleased to be included among that group that is fighting the irresponsible and discriminatory legislation proposed by most of the environmental groups in America."

He said environmental laws have "been perverted to hold industry and jobs and economic growth captive. My district cannot locate good industry because of the unrealistic air quality and water quality standards that have been imposed upon us."

"They're myopic," complained Brown, the Michigan Republican. "Their evaluation is just one view of things, with no balance and no moderation. Maybe I should consider it a plus to be so named."

Depending On Voters

Myers said in Indiana that his being named "to this elite group is more a tribute to the extreme liberal running against me than it is to my own record... I believe the people will support my record in favor of jobs and an adequate water supply."

Roberts' office said the Texas Democrat would have no immediate comment. Thurmond, Devine and Gradison could not be reached for comment.

Allies Meeting Today On African Problems

mining operations have been curtailed because of the rebel invasion of the former Belgian colony.

French officials say Giscard d'Estaing rallied President Carter to back his idea of a joint Western response to African troubles during their discussions over dinner 10 days ago in Washington. Carter has emphasized, however, that American troops would not participate in the peace force.

Previous Invasion Crushed

Last month's invasion by about 4,000 Lunda tribesmen was the second such invasion of Shaba Province in a year. Last spring, more than 1,200 Moroccans crushed a similar rebel invasion.

After the latest invasion, King Hassan II announced his troops would participate again only as part of a multinational force. Diplomatic sources in Rabat said the king now is satisfied there is sufficient consensus on such a force among moderate African governments.

Giscard d'Estaing has dispatched French planes and troops to Mauritania and Chad to bolster beleaguered pro-French governments there and French troops are stationed permanently in Senegal, Gabon, Ivory Coast and Djibouti. All six countries are former French colonies.

French sources said France ultimately might ask moderate African governments to take over the combat role of French forces in Mauritania and Chad.

"We have no desire to continue playing the role of African policeman," one French diplomat said.

Railway Town Recaptured

Meanwhile, the official Zairian news agency AZAP reported Sunday that 350 Zairian troops recaptured the strategic railway town of Mutshatsha in Shaba Province. AZAP said President Mobutu Sese Seko had refrained from ordering the recapture of the town in the hope of not endangering the safety of 60-75 European civilians taken hostage by the rebels as they fled Kolwezi.

But the agency said intercepted radio communications indicated the hostages were ordered killed eight days ago.

Peace Talks Debate Opened By Israelis

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli cabinet opened a long-delayed debate Sunday on a U.S.-sponsored bid to restart the stalled Mideast peace drive, but put off final decisions for at least another week.

Cabinet Secretary Arieh Naor said the cabinet met for four-hours. He refused to give details of the talks, saying only that no proposals were raised to amend existing Israeli peace proposals.

The United States has asked Israel to reply to a series of questions on the future of the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, the Gaza Strip in northern Sinai and the 1.1 million Arabs living there. U.S. mediators hope they can find a key in Israel's answers to unblock Egyptian-Israeli peace talks that stalled in January.

One of the main stumbling blocks was Israel's Israel rejection of Egypt's demand for an independent Palestinian state in the West Bank and Gaza. Instead, Israel is offering limited autonomy under an Israeli military umbrella during a five-year transition period.

The American questions focus on Israeli proposals for the Palestinian enclaves after the five-year period. Washington also wants Israel's suggestions on how the Palestinians can participate in deciding their own future.

Israel Radio said Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance cabled Jerusalem last week, urging Israel not to delay its replies any longer.

The cabinet debate was twice postponed, once to allow discussion of America's decision to sell warplanes to Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Israel. Jerusalem opposed the three-way sale on grounds the planes for Saudi Arabia might be used against it in a future Mideast war.

The second delay came last Sunday, when Prime Minister Menachem Begin was ordered to bed by his doctors because of a fever.

Begin returned to his office for the first time in 10 days to lead Sunday's discussions. Aides said he had recovered from the fever, which officials said was not related to his history of heart trouble.

Earthquake Shakes West Coast Area

POMONA, Calif. (UPI) — A mild earthquake lasting only several seconds shook parts of Los Angeles and Orange counties Saturday night and was felt by the crowd of 34,228 in the baseball stadium at Anaheim where the Angels were playing the Boston Red Sox.

The quake was centered about eight miles south of Pomona which is 25 miles east of central Los Amgeles. The seismology laboratory at Cal Tech in Pasadena said the tremor registered 3.6 on the Richter scale.

Drug Sales Cronyism Uncovered

chard Katon. Dogoloff's wife, Mary Lou, was paid a total of $46,900 by Katon and other NIDA contractors for work as a technical writer from 1973 to 1977. She also got an expense-paid trip with her husband to a drug conference in Bangkok, Thailand, authorized by Dr. Robert L. Dupont, NIDA's director. Dupont has run the agency since it was created by the Nixon administration in 1973.

Dogoloff said he could not comment on the report because he had not yet read it and did not know "who is raising the concern or what the basis of the concern is."

Katon could not be reached immediately for comment.

The report found that numerous overseas trips of Dupont and other staff members from July 1974 through last January were in line with the agency's mission. "However, we did not assess the need for trips of this extent and frequency," the report said.

Dupont traveled on 59 trips for a total of 201 days at a cost of $27,156, usually at the invitation of "the State Department, foreign governments and others," it said.

Informed by a reporter Friday of the report and Califano's memorandum, Dupont said, "I'm a little stunned."

He said he had not seen the inspector general's report, dated May 26, and wanted to discuss it with his boss, Gerald N. Klerman, head of HEW's Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration.

Denies Management Slipshod

Dupont denied that the management of his agency was slipshod, or that he was to blame for any problems.

Asked if he felt he could stay on as NIDA's director, Dupont replied, "It doesn't say anything about me...Any implication of any wrongdoing is shared broadly. The buck doesn't stop here."

IN PLEA FOR FUNDS

Pounds Tossed For Art Sake

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — "Big Joe" Wilfer is eating up all the attention he's getting, but that's okay. It's beer and cheesecake he has to watch out for.

The 5-foot-8 director of the Madison Art Center, who weighed in June 1 at 215 pounds, vowed to lose at least 50 pounds by Sept. 1 — more than four pounds a week for 12 weeks. He's challenged area residents to pledge the non-profit arts center any amount from a penny up for each pound he sheds to help expand the center building fund.

Wilfer said Sunday he has already gathered about a dozen pledges for $1 a pound. The art center's newsletter announcing Wilfer's challenge is being mailed out to the center's 1,400 members on Monday.

Runs, Jumps Rope

Two days after the weigh-in, Wilfer had peeled off 12 pounds by exercising, running, jumping rope and cutting down his food intake.

"I love beer. I really do," he said. "But there's two pork chops in every can."

It's the first try at dieting for Wilfer, a Racine tavern keeper's son who weighed 120 pounds when he graduated from high school.

"I've been wanting an excuse to go on a diet," he said. "It's a selfish motive, but it's a good idea for the art center."

Wilfer checked with his doctor, a member of the center, before starting his diet. He said his doctor okayed the plan but urged Wilfer to take out a life insurance policy first — naming the center as beneficiary.

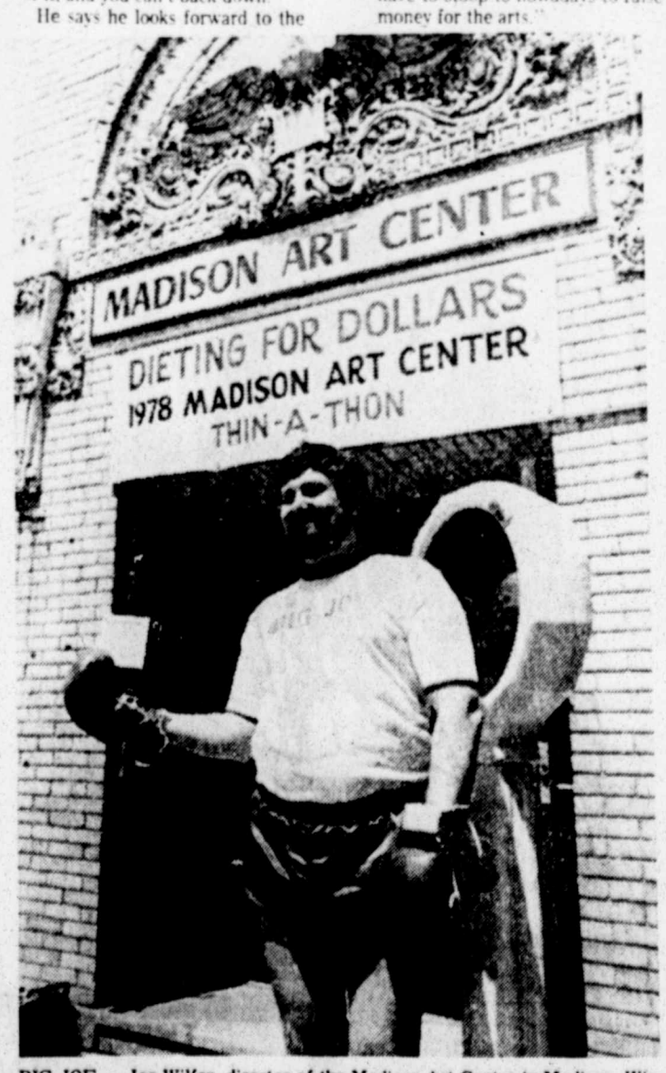

Dietician Plans Menus

A dietician on the center's board of directors is planning menus for the diet. Wilfer, who has a 43-inch waist, admits he prefers cheesecake, cookies and beer to "natural foods."

"I'm not a health nut," he said. "I hate all health foods ... I love to eat."

But he says being the focus of attention here will keep him on his diet. "You make a big deal out of it, and you can't back down."

He says he looks forward to the time his nickname will be "Little Joe," but he jokes: "I think it's interesting what low-level directors have to stoop to nowadays to raise money for the arts."

Welfare Workers Confront Reality

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Welfare. For some it's help along the way to a better life. For countless others, it's a way of life. Nationally, it costs $40 billion a year and employs some 300,000 workers. Here's how it works, or fails, through the eyes of caseworkers in one county.)

By KAY BARTLETT

DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — Jennifer Wright, 29, a slight brunette with deep brown eyes, carts an armful of manila folders this Tuesday morning, folders that hold the bureaucratic details of lives that depend on her.

She rides down from the fourth floor of One Calloway Square, a white, sterile building where people come to pick up their license plates, pay their taxes — and get on welfare.

Mrs. Wright, college-educated, married with an 18-month-old son, is an eligibility worker, one of the many foot soldiers who administer this vast system that most taxpayers complain about, that Congress always wants to reform, a system that costs $40 billion a year, a system that doesn't make Mrs. Wright's life easy.

She and the 300,000 like her are the front line of defense against abuse. They are the sympathetic ear, the explainer of forms and regulations, the person who knows what resources are available, the counselor and the paper shuffler.

Mrs. Wright is probably better than most. So is her department, the DeKalb County Department of Human Resources. In 27 states, only a high school degree is required for this complex work. Georgia demands a bachelor's degree, even if it is in music. In 11 states, home visits like Jennifer is about to make are not required.

This rather affluent county, a bedroom community of Atlanta, is not burdened by the mammoth inner city problems of a New York, Philadelphia or Washington, D.C. It ministers to less than 500,000 people, some 15,000 to 20,000 of whom are on relief.

Jennifer's caseload is under 200. In some states, workers are overwhelmed with twice that. But the problems, the frustrations of this apparatus, are evident, even in the best of systems.

The DeKalb welfare department is run by Louise Purdom, the county director and a 62-year-old widow who's been in the system since 1949. She runs a tight ship for the head office and its four branches, with a staff of about 180 and a payroll of nearly $2 million.

The staff includes supervisors, caseworkers and clerical help in Aid to Families with Dependent Children, child welfare, food stamps and other programs — the AFDC contingent, with 46 caseworkers and seven eligibility supervisors, is the largest — and they decide how $14 million in federal, state, and county monies are spent each year.

Mrs. Wright loads everything into her 1974 gray Toyota and sets off for an average day of seven to eight home visits, something she does twice a week. The other three days she's bogged down in paper work, interviews, emergencies.

Her first stop is a housing project to see a new mother, 13 years old, who's asking for money under AFDC — the program that receives the brunt of the public's criticism and is synonymous with welfare.

The address is wrong. There's no such street, she's told after wandering around in the red clay, littered with beer cans, pop bottles and toys. Mrs. Wright rechecks the small print from the myriad of forms. She finds the right address, spreads her road map over the hood of her car and recharts her course.

"I hate to waste time like this," she says in her soft Southern accent. "It's the most important thing we have."

She finds the place and meets her newest client. The girl, a seventh grader, is in her robe, hair uncombed, hunched over the dining room table. Her mother has been on welfare and food stamps before.

Mrs. Wright is gentle as she fills out the forms, forms that might make a Philadelphia lawyer cringe, forms that take a caseworker from six months to a year to master.

They are out of the ken of this child-mother. Mrs. Wright, following procedure, asks her among other things to take pen in hand and check off 17 items about real and personal property and 12 more about income. She waives six more about work-related expenses. That's one of a half-dozen forms the client signs this Tuesday (four or five more were completed at the hospital where the baby was born).

'I hate to waste time...it's the most important thing we have....'

The girl signs that she has no prepaid burial contract, turpentine holdings, or railroad benefits. Each time she's supposed to read something for her signature, Mrs. Wright asks if she should read it to her. The answer always is yes.

The forms completed, Mrs. Wright asks to see the baby. "I just love to see new-born babies," she says. Nobody would know that Mrs. Wright is required to make sure the infant is living in this house.

The baby is perspiring under layers of blankets. Mrs. Wright takes off one blanket and suggests that maybe the baby is too warm.

The baby is cleared for AFDC — $66 a month (the national average is $108). The infant's mother isn't eligible, because of her own mother's income.

Duncan Cottrell is anything but gentle. He'd just as soon not talk to a woman in the food stamp program. She says she doesn't know the landlord of her building. Cottrell says the telephone cross directory for Decatur lists her as the landlord's wife. But the landlord's brother contends she is the wife, and that Cottrell has a deed showing the property is in her name.

"I don't understand that," he says with sarcasm.

"I don't either," the woman replies, face frozen.

After she leaves his office, Cottrell dials the number she had given as her own and asks for the man in question. A teen-ager answers that he isn't home from work yet.

Cottrell, member of a three-man fraud unit, is delighted. "I hope you enjoyed that as much as I did," he tells a visitor. What will happen to the woman?

"It's petty," says Cottrell. "She probably won't apply for food stamps again. She's been on to the system a long time, and it's time she got a good scare."

• • •

At the office, caseworker Dixie Wade is doing intake this rainy, foggy morning and because of the weather, business is slow. Intake is the first step. A lot of questions have to be asked. In this case, of a pregnant teen-ager.

Name of the father? The 17-year-old gives it and says he's living in a common-law marriage and has a child. She also says he's boasted about fathering five children by five women.

"He says it isn't his baby," she mumbles.

"Are you sure it is?" asks Mrs. Wade.

"Yes."

"You didn't have relations with anyone else during that time?"

"No."

"I'm sorry I have to ask all these questions, but the feds require it. I'll have to try to locate this man. He's legally responsible for support. Can you get him to sign the birth certificate?"

"I don't think so."

The interview is conducted in a cubicle this day. When things are busier, the questioning is out in the open amidst a sprawl of pea green desks, ringing telephones, unruly children and perhaps an irate client threatening mayhem if money is cut off.

The young girl is no fount of information. She has no address for the father, no place of employment, knows his mother's whereabouts but not her name, nor the name of his common-law wife.

"You're not making this easy for me," Mrs. Wade says, but while bad memories are sometimes just convenient, she believes this girl really doesn't know. The father's name turns up in the cross files. At least one of the five women he claims children by is on AFDC.

Caseworker Linda Porter, on a busier day, works her way through eight applicants, which take about an hour each plus two hours of paperwork on each application later.

Mrs. Porter, a tall blonde with a Farrah Fawcett-Majors cut, tells one girl, "You've been pregnant for nine months. What plans have you made for the baby?"

"I planned to go on welfare."

"Some of these kids look on welfare as the end-all," says Chris Jones, a 30-year-old caseworker. "With $66 a month they can be pretty high rollers. They don't think of food and housing. They just think of that check."

On one home visit, he interviews a 17-year-old who lives in a $30,000 suburban split level. The girl is getting welfare for her baby although, Jones says, the teen-ager's parents could easily foot the bill.

The child's father is in college, the mother, a high-school senior, plans to go to college — but she'll be eligible for welfare so long as her parents pay the college bills directly and put no money into her hands.

Caseworkers find this a big frustration. "For those who really need it, the money isn't enough," says one. "But those who really don't need it get the same amount."

Rates under AFDC vary by state. The national average is $291.50 for a family of four. Georgia's basic grant is $141 a month. Chauncey Alexander, of the National Association of Social Workers, says the national fraud rate is less than 1 percent, but it's certainly there. Mrs. Wright was about to go to court in the case of a client who was collecting in both DeKalb County and Atlanta (Fulton) since 1974.

Plain fraud is seen as less of a problem than the "error rate" which was 16.5 percent nationally in 1973 and now is 8.6 percent. Georgia's is 10.5 percent

'Some of these kids look on welfare as the end-all...With $66 a month they can be pretty high rollers. They don't think of food and housing, they just think of that check.'

(there are no separate figures for DeKalb).

Still, cheating and fraud rankle. Ken Harnak started the fraud unit in DeKalb last May, though both he and Mrs. Purdom, the director, conceded it hasn't done much good so far.

"I thought it would be a way of making everything fairer," says Harnak. "When you're out in the fields you see two families living side by side. The family reporting all its income sees its grant going down and the price of food stamps going up while nothing changes for a neighbor, who's doing the same things but not reporting the extra income."

The fraud unit is often called off to do regular casework. "When we became inundated, it's a luxury we can't afford," says Cottrell.

The system and its workload make it tough to detect chiseling. Caseworkers seldom make unannounced visits, so it's easy for cheaters to get the children back into the home, even if they don't live there, and to get the father out, even if he does.

"Even if I walked in on a woman with 20 small children in the house who's obviously running some sort of day care center, she could always tell me she's just helping out as a favor," says Jones.

• • •

Attracting the right sort of caseworkers — and keeping them — isn't easy. Those in Georgia start at $9,102 annually, though in DeKalb Mrs. Purdom uses county money to start them slightly higher.

'When you're out in the field you see two families living side by side. The family reporting all its income sees its grant going down and the price of food stamps going up while nothing changes for the neighbor, who's doing the same thing but not reporting the extra income.'

"It's a job through which many people enter the employment force," says Gladys Fincher, a supervisor. "You have to like people one day and hack the paperwork the next. A lot of them get disillusioned quickly. They come in thinking they'll be taking little children to doctors, and that's not the job at all."

Caseworkers also are called on for practical advice.

Mrs. Wright tells one young couple, complaining of a high utility bill, how to read their gas and electric meter. She helps a woman get papers needed to become legal guardian for her two orphaned grandchildren. Linda Porter suggests that a young woman take in a boarder to help make ends meet.

Turnover is high. The work can be unpleaant — even dangerous in some neighborhoods. The caseworker — the troop in the trenches of the welfare system — sometimes takes abuse from clients who blame them for rules they can't understand. Almost everybody objects to the massive paper-shuffling (8,000 different forms in DeKalb alone).

And even the dedicated ones sometimes wonder about a system that seems impervious to real change. "You don't really want to hear what I think of it," one veteran caseworker says.

CANADIAN URANIUM

MONTREAL (AP) — A local research institute predicts the United States will probably turn to Canada for uranium supplies within a decade. The C. D. Howe Research Institute in a study forecasts that both Canada and the United States will have to substantially increase their dependence on nuclear energy in the latter part of this century. But government estimates show that while Canada has "sizeable reserves" of uranium, American resources may not prove sufficient to meet the needed expansion.

Defense Head Relaxes SALT Stance

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown, in an apparent relaxation of a hard-line American negotiating position, said Sunday American proposals in the Strategic Arms Limitation talks with the Soviet Union were not "cast in concrete."

Brown's remarks may signal new flexibility in the U.S. bargaining position in the SALT talks in a shift from the tough posture outlined by administration officials in recent days.

"I think it is a misinterpretation to say that our proposals are cast in concrete," Brown said on the CBS program "Face the Nation."

"I have said again that we have recast them a number of times and I would not bar recasting them again."

Brown, at another point in the half-hour interview, said the United States' offer to the Soviet Union made in recent meetings between Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko was "fair. But that's not to say we are not willing to make adjustments to it. We've made adjustments in the past."

Brown's statement was in contrast to a remark last week by national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski who said the latest U.S. proposals were fair and, "We will wait until they are accepted."

The administration's position sparked suggestions President Carter had clamped a virtual "freeze" on the SALT talks in a move that precluded any agreement this summer.

Carter Friday angrily denounced reports his administration had lost interest in an immediate SALT accord. The United States will "proceed aggressively with SALT discussions to conclude a treaty as early as possible and without delay because of political considerations..." Carter said.

One U.S. official said the United States had not made a counter offer to the latest Soviet proposal because officials hoped to improve chances for Senate ratification for a SALT accord by winning an accord more in lines with the U.S. position.

Sticking points in the SALT discussions include restrictions on testing of new missiles, geographic restraints on bases to be used by the Soviet Union's Backfire bomber and restraints on the U.S. cruise missile.

U.S. relations with the Soviet Union were to be discussed Wednesday by the president in a commencement address to graduates of the U.S. Naval Avademy in nearby Annapolis, Md. "Obviously it is going to be something related to that," a White House spokeswoman said Sunday.

Brown said a SALT accord was in the "common interest" of both sides and should not be held up to "to demonstrate unhappiness with Soviet actions in Africa."

"I think inevitably African adventurism on the part of the Soviet Union would make it harder to get a SALT agreement approved by the Congress," he said.

And at some point, the impact could spill beyond Africa, he said.

"I think if the Russians and Cubans are not checked in Africa and continue to try to change large numbers of governments, it will have a serious effect and not be limited to Africa," Brown said. "It would be a real risk of cold war in that case."

Brown said intelligence reports documented Cuban training and support for the Kantangese invasion of Zaire from neighboring Angola, but there was "no convincing evidence" Cubans actually entered Zaire.

"There's nothing like a Cuban cigar picked up in Zaire..." Brown said. But intelligence establishes a "pattern of evidence that to me is quite convincing."

Evidence suggests, too, that East Germany provided some training for the Kantangese, but Brown said the evidence was "less certain."

Colombia Gearing Up For National Election

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Security agencies mobilized 200,000 men to patrol Bogota and other major cities Sunday as Colombians went to the polls to choose a new president for one of the few remaining democracies in Latin America.

Authorities said two small bombs exploded in the capital, causing no casualties, and a student was killed in a village 350 miles north of the Bogota after he reportedly attacked a policeman guarding a polling station. There were no immediate details of the incidents.

Sporadic demonstrations, mainly over rising prices, have erupted here in the three weeks prior to the vote, but election day took on a carnival air. Streetcorner salsa bands blared their heady rhythms across the capital and some residents were dancing in the streets.

Liquor and handgun sales were banned for the day and radio and television stations were ordered not to broadcast unofficial returns.

Since gaining independence from Spain 168 years ago, this coffee-rich country on the northwestern shoulder of South America has been governed almost without interruption by the Liberal and Conservative parties, still the biggest and most powerful political forces in Colombia.

This nation of 26 million has 13 million eligible voters, but traditional political apathy was expected to cut into the turnout. After voters cast their ballots, their right index fingers were dipped in a red dye to prevent them from voting twice.

In a field of six presidential contenders, analysts say only the Liberal and Conservative candidates have a chance to win. The Liberal, former U.S. Ambassador Julio Cesar Turbay Ayala, 62, was considered the favorite.

His election would end 20 years of coalition rule between Liberals and Conservatives. The Conservative candidate is Stanford-educated Belisario Betancur, 56, who, like Turbay Ayala, is considered a pro-Washington moderate.

The two parties signed a coalition agreement in 1958 following the overthrow of dictator Gustavo Rojas Pinilla. The agreement helped end more than a decade of bloody violence between members of the two parties that left more than 200,000 people dead.

The current government of President Alfonso Lopez Michelsen, a Liberal, includes Liberals and Conservatives in the cabinet. But Turbay Ayala has said if he wins he will appoint only Liberals to top posts.

The darkhorse in the race was former army chief Gen. Alvaro Valencia Tovar, 60, head of the recently formed rightist National Renovation Movement. Analysts said he has gained support among the upper and middle classes because he campaigned on a strong law and order platform.

The left fielded three candidates, including Socorro Ramirez, a 26-year-old former nun turned Communist activist and the second woman ever to seek the Colombian presidency. The first was Maria Eugenia Rojas, daughter of Rojas Pinilla, who ran unsuccessfully in 1970. The other two candidates were Julio Cesar Pernia, 60, a pro-Moscow Communist, and Jaime Pedrahita Cardona, 56, a Communist who supports Peking's policy.

Report Praises, Scores Conrail System Progress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consolidated Rail Corporation (Conrail) made some progress during 1977 but is still falling behind its plan to rehabilitate the giant rail system serving the northeast, the United States Railway Association said Sunday in its annual report to Congress.

The report praised Conrail's progress in rehabilitating track and initiatives in maketing and line analysis, but it said the system's overall operating and financial performance is falling behind the congressionally approved rehabilitation plan.

"The coming year will be a crucial one for Conrail," the association said. "This report for 1977 details problems of service deterioration, productivity which must be resolved or else the goal of self-sufficiency cannot be achieved.

"If Conrail has not demonstrated that these problems are being solved by its third anniversary, on April 1, 1979, then the association will be prepared to present alternatives for congressional consideration" it said.

The alternatives, the report says, could involve changes in Conrail's plant size and configuration, its market structure and its equipment utilization.

External factors such as the harsh winter, strikes and the Johnstown flood interfered with Conrail's operations, the report says, but of greater significance was the fact that "key operational and service improvements did not materialize."

The association's second annual report also suggests that Conrail will need far more than the $1.283 billion in federal assistance originally projected in its five-year plan to become financially self-sustaining.

The association now says the final figure will range between $1.1 billion and $3.8 billion.

Other points in the report included:

— Conrail has the biggest track rehabilitation of any U.S. railroad by far. The company laid 1,017 miles of rail in 1977.

— Poor car distribution was a major contributor to Conrail's costs and poor service. It is estimated that some 600 cars are misrouted daily with an average delay of five days.

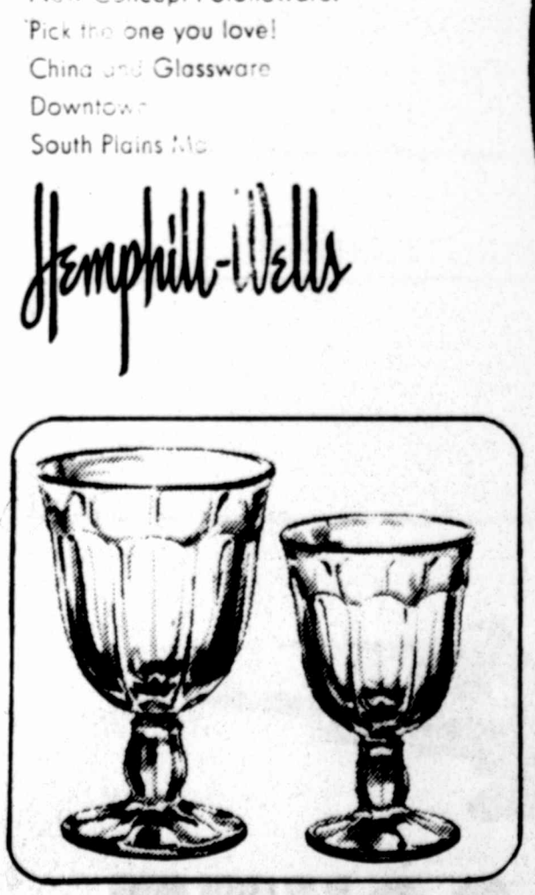

— Performance and reliability of the line's locomotives declined significantly in 1977. On an average day, 51 trains were ready to move but were held up for lack of power. An average of 817 yard and road diesel locomotives, or 19 percent of the fleet, was out of service per day.

Conrail is a private corporation created by the association to operate a rail system comprised of the bankrupt Penn Central Railroad and several other troubled lines in a consolidated system. The association is a non-profit government corporation created by Congress to oversee the reorganization.

Wallace Offers Reasons For Not Seeking Post

WASHINGTON (UPI) — George Wallace says his decision against seeking a Senate seat "isn't an irrevocable goodbye" to politics or to his long battle with poimty headed liberals. It is just a "so long" for now.

The Alabama governor, in an article written for Sunday's Washington Post, said the decision was "both easy and difficult."

It was "easy because I simply concluded that I did not want to live and work outside my native state," he wrote, "and difficult because it meant closing a chapter, if not the book, on both an avocation and an occupation that I modestly believe has been useful to the people and their political system."

Wallace's term as governor expires next January, amd under law he will not be able to seek another consecutive term. He said he had been considering "for two or three years" whether to run for the U.S. Senate, and he made a final decision when he went to the resort of Gulf Shore to prepare a speech.

"I spent a whole day in the sun and inside thinking and writing notes and suddenly I just decided I did not want to go to Washington and live," he said. "All of the circumstances involved were more than I could accept."

Wallace noted a 1972 assassination attempt that left him paralyzed from the waist down "was the beginning of the end of my career in national politics."

After that, the cameras "focused on the spokes of my wheelchair" and "many cited my condition as a reason to vote against me."

He said it was ironic his downslide was the opportunity for Jimmy Carter to emerge into national politics.

"Many have said that had I come along at a later time, as President Carter did, after the racial problems had been more or less resolved, and the stigma of being a southern governor was not so scary, my quest for the presidency would have been different," he said.

"Perhaps so. But even without that advantage, I still think ... I would have been on the Democratic national ticket had I not been shot."

In any event, he said, "I take leave for the moment of my old friends the pointed heads, the professors who flunked bicycle parking, the faceless regulators with their huge briefcases and all the other bizarre specimens that gave zest to my work.

"It isn't an irrevocable goodbye, just 'so long' while I take a rest under the 50-mission rule of rotation."

Wallace said his decision to bow out now was made easier by "encouraging signs in many areas of a return to good sense."

He credited Carter, for instance, with "lambasting the bureaucrats and regulators", and the Supreme Court with signifying that previous courts "had gone too far in exalting their notions into law."

He said his legacy to the nation was "the long-due recognition of the middle class as the forgotten infantrymen of this country.

"Raising the cry against government indignities has borne fruit — not enough, but more than we once saw," he said.

Wallace called the Post's request for a article "an unexpected feast of amiability" but included some digs at the media, mentioning The Post as "barking at my feet and sinking its chihuahua teeth in my ankles."

"Much of the press," Wallace said, "not least the chihuahuas of The Post, professed to see something racist and ugly in my espousal of relief and rescue for the middle class and in their swelling response to my attacks on their abandonment."

House Republican Group Hits Defense Priorities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Republican Research Committee has called for a rearrangement of priorities in U.S. defense spending because, it said, the Soviet Union has seized the lead in some areas of strategic weaponry.

The committee maintains that the United States has shortsightedly "placed most of its strategic eggs in one basket" by relying too heavily on sea-based missiles.

The concentration on submarine weaponry is considered dangerous because sea-launched strategic missiles would be less effective against all Soviet population centers, according to the analysis.

The committee also said reliance on sea-based missiles leaves too little protection for the U.S. strategic arsenel from Soviet technological breakthroughs in anti-submarine warfare.

The analysis, prepared by a task force on defense, said the military picture has changed markedly since the United States and the Soviet Union signed the first strategic arms limitation treaty in 1972.

"When SALT I was signed, the opportunity for Soviet advantage was merely potential. Now the Kremlin has converted this potential into reality by seizing the lead in many areas of strategic weaponry," the task force's summary statement said.

It cited Soviet deployment of three new MIRV-ICBM systems which are several times more powerful than their U.S. counterparts and enhance the Soviet first-strike capability.

The report referred to Soviet Backfire bombers which the task force asserts are capable of reaching targets within the continental U.S. despite disclaimers by the Russians.

And a surge in submarine-lauched ballistic missiles is mentioned. The report said the Soviets have staioned such missiles with a 4,200-nautical-mile range all around the globe.

American defense spending in constant dollars has been declining since 1964 while Soviet defense spending has been expanding at a three percent annual rate, the task force said.

It recommended that Congress support full scale development of the M-X missile, the Trident missile and the cruise missile.

The report called for the United States to upgrade its conventional hardware and general purpose forces. It said there are 8,500 U.S. tanks to 45,000 Soviet ones, 21,000 American personnel carriers to 35,000 Soviet ones, 7,272 U.S. combat aircraft compared to 9,240 for the Soviets.

Match-Ups Set For November

By The Associated Press

Texas Democrats ousted Rep. John Young, embroiled in a controversy stirred by allegations of a payroll sex scandal two years ago, and chose a state legislator as their nominee for retiring Rep. Barbara Jordan's seat in primary runoff elections over the weekend.

Texas Republicans chose the son of a former CIA director as their nominee for another House post, and Virginia Republicans rejected Elizabeth Taylor's husband as their U.S. Senate nominee.

Miss Taylor accompanied her husband, former Navy Secretary John Warner, to the rostrum at the Republican nominating convention in Richmond on Saturday to congratulate former Virginia GOP chairman Richard Obenshain on his victory in the U.S. Senate nomination race.

"Join me in making this great convention unanimous on behalf of Richard Obenshain," Warner told 8,500 delegates and alternates to the convention after Obenshain's sixth ballot tally was announced.

Obenshain, a 42-year-old Richmond attorney, had 1,579 votes, with 1,540.51 needed to win the nomination. Warner had 1,270 votes, with nine of the 10 districts announced before he made his statement.

Warner, 51, said earlier that his marriage to Miss Taylor helped keep his name in the public eye, but he was unable to overcome Obenshain's lead in early balloting. Two other candidates withdrew — former Gov. Linwood Holton after the third ballot and state Sen. Nathan Miller after the fifth.

Obenshain will be the GOP nominee for the Senate seat being vacated by Republican Sen. William L. Scott, who is retiring after one term.

Virginia parties choose conventions or primary elections to pick nominees for federal office. Republicans usually hold conventions and Democrats primaries. This year, Democrats opted for a convention.

In Texas, Young was the second incumbent congressman to be dumped this year. Rep. Dale Milford was unseated in the May 6 primary.

State Rep. Joe Wyatt won the Democratic nomination over Young in Saturday's runoff and will face GOP nominee Joy Yates in November for Young's House seat. During the campaign, Wyatt accused Young of failing to reflect the wishes of his conservative constituency.

Wyatt did not concentrate on allegations by Young's former secretary that she was kept on the congressman's payroll partly for sexual favors. Young repeatedly denied the accusation, and the U.S. Justice Department cleared him of any criminal wrongdoing.

In Houston's inner city district, Democrats chose state Rep. Mickey Leland over state Rep. Anthony Hall in another runoff. Leland, 33, a black, will have no GOP opposition in the general election to replace Miss Jordan, the only Southern black woman in the House. She said earlier she would not seek re-election at the end of her third term.

In the only Republican runoff in Texas, George W. Bush, son of former CIA director George Bush, won the nomination over former Odessa Mayor Jim Reese to seek retiring Rep. George Mahon's post in November. Bush faces state Sen. Kent Hance in the general election.

Runoffs between the top two vote-getters in primary elections are required if no candidate receives more than 50 percent of the vote.

In other Texas primary runoffs, all Democratic:

—Texas A&M University economist Phil Gramm defeated former television weatherman Ron Godbey to run for retiring Democrat Olin Teague's House seat in November. He will face GOP nominee Wes Mowery.

—Marlin businessman Marvin Leath won the nomination in retiring Rep. Bob Poague's district over former state Rep. Lane Denton and will face Republican Jack Burgess in the general election.

'Internal Agreement' Alters Rhodesia

Analysis

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Whites still run the military, the police, the courts and the economy, but Rhodesia has changed in the three months since agreement was reached to end nine decades of white-minority rule in this former British colony.

Racial barriers are coming down in all public places. Blacks are seen more often in shops and offices. They share power with whites in the transition government set up March 3 under what is known as the "internal agreement." And formerly outlawed black political groups are holding mass rallies.

Under the agreement signed by Prime Minister Ian Smith and three black moderates, one-man, one-vote elections will be held and a black majority government will take power by Dec. 31. Smith and the three black moderates are members of a council that will govern the country until then, and nine blacks jointly run ministries with whites.

But the guerrilla war that has plagued Rhodesia for six years goes on and the massive military and economic problems — created by international sanctions — that drove Smith to an accord with internal moderates are still there.

The leaders of the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance, Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, did not participate in the internal agreement and have vowed to continue the war from bases in neighboring black nations, including Zambia and Mozambique.

Western countries believe no agreement can be successful without participation of the guerrillas and American and British envoys are coming to Salisbury again this week to make another attempt at finding a way to satisfy Mugabe and Nkomo.

Observers feel that unless there is a sharp reduction in the fighting it will be difficult to hold the elections as scheduled.

Officials say they intend to register voters in this country of 6.7 million blacks and 263,000 whites, but it is uncertain whether blacks, particularly in areas where the guerrilla presence is strong, will want to be seen registering. That could be risky in the face of guerrilla pledges to thwart the elections.

Blacks in the transition government acknowledge that moves to dismantle remaining discrimination have been slow — most residential areas still are segregated as are schools and hospitals. But they are aware that their supporters are looking for more than freedom to chant nationalist songs, and they complain that critics do not give them credit for the fundamental changes that have been made since the accord was signed.

They point to an end to the hanging of convicted guerrillas, the release of an estimated 700 to 900 political detainees, and the lifting of a ban on the two guerrilla movements — The Zimbabwe African People's Union and the Zimbabwe African National Union.

But discrimination is easier to tackle than the economy, which has been hit by trade sanctions, a war that costs about $1 million a day, and loss through emigration of skilled whites.

Emigration has declined in recent months. In 1977, about 900 persons left every month. Now the figure is about 560, and observers believe many whites are waiting to see what life will be like under black rule.

"You're getting down to the dichards now," said one white businessman. "You could call us the intrepid, the loyal, or the financial prisoners."

Business & Industrial Review

FOR FINE REEL MOWERS, AND MORE — Sid Chance, right, and Denzil Flood at Chance's Lawn & Leisure display two Trimmer mower models, one with Briggs & Stratton engine and other with a Honda motor. These and other products and services make Chance's especially appreciated during the summer season.

Chance's Scores With Newest Sale, Lease Items, Services

Lawn and garden demands, now and for weeks ahead, call for added attention...and work. Right?

So...turn to Chance's Lawn & Leisure, 3604 50th St., a firm that stocks just as the name implies, affording sale and lease merchandise for outdoor activities.

The current stock there is especially complete, with quality merchandise at economical prices.

Trimmer mowers ("which we consider the very finest reel mower") are stocked in both homeowner and commercial sizes, equipped with either Briggs & Stratton or Honda motors.

Also Toro, in side or rear bag; the Lawn Boy rear or side bag; and Jacobsen riding mowers, too.

Also there are the Yazoo heavy duty commercial mowers.

John Deere comes out with a new rear-bag, self propelled model that will be available soon; and other John Deere models are in stock now.

Then there is the "best homeowner or commercial gasoline edger", the Power Trim models, stocked at Chance's.

A full line of the gas and electric Weed eaters is stocked at special low prices. Toro and Spin Trim nylon weed cutters are also stocked and recommended.

Sprinkler Needs

Select, also from Nipak or Ferti Lome fertilizers, replacement parts for mowers, garden hose, even sprinklers. Chance's stocks the Rain Bird do-it-yourself sprinkler equipment for underground installation, even making available a rental ditcher.

A full line of Suhl, John Deere and Homelite chain saws is stocked, with the firm offering service as well as sales.

Chain saw sharpening is expertly done.

Limited supply of John Deere bicycles presently is on hand, and one should select early.

Good, used, reconditioned equipment is available at economy prices, including mowers, edgers, and some tillers formerly used as rental units.

There are auto repair tools, small hand and electric tools for the handyman and builder, floor care equipment, cement working equipment, lawn and garden tools, plumbing and even woodworking equipment.

Dollies and other moving accessories;

Camping Needs

And now a new line of camping equipment for rent, including stoves, lanterns, sleeping bags, tents, catalytic heaters and more. What a benefit for the camper.

Chance's Lawn & Leisure maintains a large repair department, and early attention to mower and other needs is advised as there no doubt will be a big rush as the season progresses.

Hair Jammer, In Southwest Lubbock, Arranges 20 Per Cent Saving Offer

For a limited time, one can bring in the Hair Jammer ad on these pages to the popular Hair Jammer, 5601 Aberdeen, and receive 20 per cent discount on any service there!

(This includes any permanent, for boys and girls, men and women, too.)

Some people may not have realized the expert unisex hair cutting in which the Hair Jammer specializes.

Others may not have realized that they are served at the Hair Jammer by a highly trained staff under direction of Roger Thompson, long appreciated on the Lubbock beauty and hairstyling scene.

And some may have recognized all this but just couldn't find the Hair Jammer!

The Hair Jammer, offering complete beauty service, is located at 5601 Aberdeen, phone 793-3134. This location means that the Hair Jammer is just north of South Plains Mall, one block west of Slide Road. It is really easy to find and easy to reach, once one realizes that it fronts Aberdeen, and where Aberdeen is located! There is lots of off-street parking, and everything is arranged for the customer's convenience.

The Hair Jammer opened late last year under co-ownership and management of Roger Thompson.

Roger is known by many through his former ownership of the Mademoiselle Hair Fashions in Briercroft Center, his former staff capacity with Jessie Lee's, and through his present service on the state board for the Texas Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association.

He emphasizes that a hand-picked staff is on duty at the Hair Jammer, with all trained extensively in Dallas by the Hair Jammer organization specialists before assuming their duties. Also Hair Jammer authorities periodically visit the Lubbock facility to bring the staff up to date on newest trends, etc.

Mothers, dads, brothers, sisters, kids and all are invited to the Hair Jammer where finest haircutting and all beauty services are available.

Thompson points out the precision cutting and really economical prices as two of the key advantages one can expect at the Hair Jammer, where no appointment is necessary.

Long Hours

Hours are from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m., Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, with longer 9 to 9 hours on Tuesday and Thursday, and Saturday hours of 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Visa and Master Charge are honored.

For coloring, perms, styling and all that goes with complete beauty service, Hair Jammer is said by many to be well ahead of the field. Won't you come in and find out for yourself? Roger Thompson and staff would consider it an honor.

House Of Shades & Lamp Repair Aids New Look For Any Room, Any Season

New lamps and/or shades can do a lot for brightening the home for spring and summer, so why delay?

A visit to the House of Shades and Lamp Repair, 2710 50th St., can be the convenient solution.

Even for those familiar with the House of Shades and Lamp Repair, a visit there at this time will reveal added services, newest shades and a full staff to afford every customer consideration.

Unique lamps of distinction, quality lamp shades, replacement lamp parts and glass, expert lamp repair, custom building, re-wiring, re-design and re-finish (to make your lamp a shade better) in essence comprise the business scope of this better lamp house.

Some months ago the House of Shades and Lamp Repair made giant strides, doubling its floor space, as example, to better serve. Consequently, more merchandise was stocked and more convenient display was enabled.

From an outsider's viewpoint, it is noted that actually the expansion in physical facilities was simply another step in many progressive moves at this popular Lubbock firm.

"Come on out and let us personally thank you for your trade and confidence that has made our steady growth possible."

Even at its beginning, this Lubbock firm recognized the needs in its field, and stocked and served accordingly. Since that date, even more has been learned of customer preferences, and consequent growth and expansion has followed. Yes, the House of Shades and Lamp Repair is here to stay!

Owners Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Houchin report that continually they are able to get more and better stock.

The House of Shades has complete facilities for lamp wiring, repair and rebuilding. One's favorite antique, bottle or vase can be professionally converted to a lamp to specifications. "We'll make a lamp out of any old thing!"

Mr. and Mrs. Houchin point out:

Shades, though a most important part of any decor, do get soiled and worn. A new shade or repairs on present ones present the solution.

"Now, when we say 'lamp shades', we are not talking about only the conventional hardback or stretched shade as many people might think. There are glass shades in many sizes and colors, ball shades, small shades for chandeliers, wooden, silk, metal shades, etc. We have them all."

"Simply bring us your idea and we will do the rest."

'Affordable And Right' Father's Day Gift Items Pinpointed At Maxey Firm

For Father's Day gift selection, the smart thing to do is buy at the source that dad depends upon ....at Maxey Home Improvement Center, 120 N. University Ave., phone 765-7736!

Selection there comes especially advantageous now, with a special sale underway on Skil power tools...always a great gift.

Skil Sale Prices

There are circular saws (7 1/4-in.) at $49.85; variable-speed 3/8 in. drills at just $19.99; orbital sanders at $16.99; and jig saws at $16.99....all by Skil and all a definite value.

Or maybe a beautiful, functional storm door would be the "ditferent" gift father would enjoy.

Or a gift certificate.

Genie Features Pinpointed

In selection of Genie, by Alliance, one can be assured of such features as latest in residential design, popular price and incorporation of many features of more expensive units.

With Genie, you just touch the button on your portable transmitter, and Genie opens the door, turns on the light and lets you drive right in. An exclusive new light option switch allows you to choose whether the light stays on for two minutes 16 seconds and then automatically turns off after the door is opened or closed, or remains on as long as the door is open.

The AT 55 transmitter has a personal code card inside to lock in the secret signal.

(There are many more features of the Genie automatic garage door opener system; the folks at Maxey Home Improvement Center welcome the opportunity of going over these with you.)

Storm Doors

Values continue in storm doors, with prices as low as $89.95 (no speakers) and $109.95 with speaker. Installation and delivery charge in the Lubbock city limits is only $1! These doors are available in 14 models on display, with gold, bronze or white finish, safety glass, heavy extruded corners and other features. (Also ask the Maxey salesman about a complete line of storm windows.)

Special prices are now in effect for all lighting fixtures, 3-wire extension cords for those outdoor Summer needs, marble top vanities, TCI paint, tub enclosures, and more.

For any building and hardware need, chances are that one-stop shopping at Maxey Home Improvement Center and the Maxey Lumber firm on the 100-block N. University Ave. will meet the need . . . in selection, quality, service and economy.

Maxey makes special effort to stock the "hard to find" but needed items, with full attention of particular needs of the season.

"Are you having trouble with CB units or other signals operating your garage door?"

"If so, a wise suggestion is to contact Maxey Home Improvement Center, 120 N. University Ave., phone 765-7736, and find out how conversion can be made at a nominal fee . . . ending this irksome problem. It is just that simple."

Many other items and services from this Lubbock firm can be of equal benefit.

Skylights

"Did you realize that skylights are stocked, in both single and double dome, in white or bronze, for residential or commercial use?"

"Maxey Home Improvement Center, 120 N. University Ave., wants you to have the very best at a price you can afford!"

Hence, the firm not only "holds the line" on prices throughout its stock, but it arranges specials whenever possible, such as those now in effect to greatly aid in most every home improvement endeavor.

Look at some of the items that likely are coming in for one's special consideration at this time:

And Skil and Black & Decker power tools.

The center is open every week day, from 8 a.m. until 5:30 p.m., Mondays through Fridays, and until 5 p.m. Saturdays.

Beautiful Facility, Handpicked Staff Excelling At Elisabeth's

Elisabeth's Swedish Hair Design is outstanding!

Even upon first visit and first impression there, the message comes through that here is a salon that is "different."

Add to this the expertise of the experienced staff, and the modern beauty services offered, and one readily sees why patronizing this southwest Lubbock salon can become an anticipated habit.

Opened two years ago by Elisabeth Pyron, a Jessie Lee graduate who later served as stylist at the Jessie Lee Salon, the shop has met with remarkable acceptance.

Seven operators comprise the staff, and all have attended Jessie Lee's, with six graduating there, and the other graduating in Germany.

Staff To Appreciate

Meet this handpicked group:

There is Pat Durham who is exceptionally good at manicures and the new Superior nail extension — the new method and with no damage to the nails;

Angel Smallwood is from Germany, and worked there for seven years before her tenure here;

And Anita Shearer, Tina Ramirez, Gay Sperry, Theresa Cox and owner Elisabeth Pyron.

Facials

Complete facials are a specialty of Angel Smallwood who draws upon her European training to render a really superior service. A quiet, relaxing separate room is provided for the facials.

A complete line of make-up is stocked for retail sale, with the same line utilized in the salon's services.

Both men and women are welcomed.

"For a really exhilarating experience, for modern hair care by skilled, proven staffmembers, for all the best in beauty services, make acquaintance of Elisabeth's Swedish Hair Design at earliest convenience. You'll be glad you did."

MAXIMUM SERVICE TO REGION — James O. Davidson, certified hearing aid audiologist, is shown with staffmember secretary Agnes Vanderveer at the Better Hearing Aid Center in Redbud Square, inviting inquiries regarding the firm's services in sales and repairs at its Lubbock and Clovis Centers and in periodic Plainview visits.

'Better Hearing Aid Center' Serving With Dual Facilities

The services of James O. Davidson, certified hearing aid audiologist, not only are available at the Better Hearing Aid Center in Lubbock, but also at the Clovis Hearing Aid Center, and in Plainview.

A lot of people in the region have depended on the Better Heaering Aid Center, No. 30 Redbud Square in Lubbock, for a long time.

Now, the area of services reaches still furthur, and with greater convenience to the customers out from Lubbock. For friends in New Mexico and the western Panhandle and South Plains, Davidson has provided the Clovis Hearing Aid Center at 117 E. 7th St., phone 793-6900, in Clovis.

Schedule Told

"So take your pick of the center and service most readidly available to you. James Davidson renders the same great service at each location. He is in the Lubbock center on Mondays, Wednesday and Fridays, at Clovis on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturday mornings; and in Plainview the first Wednesday of each month.

"We are indeed appreciative of the friends, the customers and the benefits of years past, and we trust that with our new arrangement, we can serve you even better in months and years to come."

More about the Lubbock center:

Located about midway between 4th Street and 19th Street on Slide Road, the firm is a multi-line dealer, specializing in all-in-the-ear models. Service and repairs on any make of hearing aid is expertly rendered.

Not only can one purchase the best in hearing aids at the Better Hearing Aid Center, but James O. Davidson, certified hearing aid audiologist there, is most helpful in assisting one "after" the purchase. A few months ago he announced the helpful C.A.R.E. program for this assistance, with the program including a video unit with a series of tapes that explain graphically how to enjoy and use one's aid to the fullest. It helps, among other things, in "learning how to listen," in adjustment of the aid, and even helpful hints on "attitudes."

In West Lubbock

"If you hear . . . but do not always understand . . . maybe all you need is the custom-made, all-in-the-ear hearing aid from Better Hearing Aid Center, Redbud Square (on Slide Road), phone 792-0507.

Learn about the convenience and utility of the tiny unit that fits all in the ear, helping nature help you hear better.

For hearing loss suitable to correction and improvement through amplification, a "Contour" hearing aid by Dahlberg offers a special kind of hearing help for mild, moderate or moderately-severe hearing impairment.

Starting with an exact impression of your own ear, a plastic shell is formed which duplicates the contours of your ear. Dahlberg's evaluation committee then analyzes your hearing loss supplied by your hearing aid specialist and selects the most suitable degree and type of amplification. Dahlberg's manufacturing staff then assembles the electronic components specified and makes your "Contour" to order within your own contoured shell . . . providing your personal hearing aid.

"Individually made to order for you, no two are alike."

Davidson, a Lubbock resident since 1948 and an area native, is most sincere — and qualified — in his invitation to call 792-0507 or come by the center for professional assistance. He is most enthused, and rightly so, about the two custom-made, all-in-the-ear aids (1) the Miracle Ear and (2) the Contour all-in-the-ear model, both from Dahlberg.

Protection Plan

Davidson and customers alike express enthusiasm for the related "Dahlberg Consumer Protection Plan" in which a 30-day money-back privilege is afforded (with exception of custom made ear-molds and dispensing fee).

Long-Established Policy

"See your doctor first, then see us," long has been the sensible suggestion of Davidson, multi-line dealer service 22 counties in Texas and eastern New Mexico, a policy initiated without prompting of goverment regulations.

Miracle Ear

"Our new variable compression settings enable fitting the hearing aid to your individual loss. We have numerous models, one of which will parallel your hearing loss.

"Mild nerve deafness? Then 'Miracle Ear' may be all you need to hear clearly again. It fits entirely in you ear and is ideal for the majority of persons who can still hear but have trouble understanding words.

"If you hear sounds but don't always understand words (a classic symptom of nerve impairment), our recommendation is Miracle Ear, developed and patented by Dahlberg Electronics, Inc."

Aids Electronically Tested

"Do not hesitate to visit or call (phone 792-0507, or residence phone 799-0333). Likely Jim Davidson, hearing aid audiologist, can help you, too."

All Items Now Discounted At Art Gallery

This includes quality oil paints, stretched canvas, canvas boards, some brushes, and even quality original oil paintings by award-winning area artists.

Marjorie Hitch, director of the Cactus Alley Art Gallery, emphasizes that "not only do I enjoy providing 'paintings to appreciate' for my Lubbock friends, but I am glad to report 'affordable prices' always, and now even greater discount prices on everything in stock."

Not only are original oils, acrylics, pastels, watercolors and pen/inks featured, but the gallery has limited-edition prints and other desired art items. Marjorie Hitch has a number of her own paintings on display and for sale, as well as others of artists "one knows and can appreciate".

Wide Selection At Lynch Hat Works Greets Demands Of Straw Hat Season

'Tis straw hat time, so let's do something about it...go right down to Lynch Hat Works where an excellent selection of straw hats (and others, too) is provided in a variety of sizes, shapes and prices.

After all, hats are the entire business of Lynch Hat Works, and if anyone knows area needs and preferences, knows how to please the customer, how to stock hats that are unquestionably "quality", how to price sensibly, it should be Lynch.

The impressive straw selection includes dress hats, western types, work straws, a variety of shapes and creases, with panamas among the hats that bear the personalized Lynch Hat Works label, a mark of value.

Many Services

"Students, new residents to Lubbock — whatever your occupation, we hope you'll soon learn something that old-timers here have known for a long time — that Lynch Hat Works can perform services for you found nowhere else!"

Since 1923 Lynch Hat Works has been on the job, under a single-family ownership, serving hat needs throughout the southwest.

Now, with a new season of the year, one surely wants to be ready for all the rodeos and outdoor activities, wearing a hat of which he or she can be proud ... one that says "West Texas"!

Then, Lynch Hat Works, 1106 Ave. J, should enter the picture, for it has a most comprehensive service — new hats from stock, custom built hats "just for you" and hat renovation and styling.

It all is at Lynch's, with its time-proven capabilities . . . where a friendly atmosphere prevails, together with the best of hat attention, antique machinery but modern technology.

Lynch Hat Works qualifies in every sense of the word, as it has the distinction of serving superbly in the same location in Lubbock for 45 years . . . a pioneer business in the center of downtown, serving even a multi-state area (mail service is given, too).

Renovation is a specialty, with the complete cleaning, blocking and styling processes utilized.

Hats at Lynch Hat Works are "made to fit your head." No two heads are alike, as one may be longer, wider, thinner in front or back, a bump on one side, etc.!

Sizes can be changed.

Accessories are available to make one's hat something special . . . such as fan feathers in assorted colors, feather bands, leather bands, small feathers, etc., or bring in your own ribbon and Lynch's will be happy to put it on.

"Keep your hat looking nice with a hat brush, hat cleaner, hat saver in which to put your hat in the car or pickup and keep it clean, keeping its shape, and even rain hat covers.

"To make your hat the right size, we have hat stretchers."

Let Lynch Hat Works even change the look of the hat, changing the crease, installing a new band or re-doing the edge.

Gift certificates are afforded any time of the year for any amount. Layaways are welcomed.

Service Still The Rule

Throughout the years the sincere word from Lynch Hat Works has been:

"It always is our pleasure to serve you."

Yes, Lynch Hat Works was founded back in 1923 and has continued as Lubbock home-owned and home-operated hat works within the same family. The same service that was acclaimed by early-day cattlemen and farmers still is the rule at Lynch Hat Works.

"We would be most pleased to serve you in any of your hat needs and to visit with you," Mrs. Virginia Lynch emphasizes. "Or maybe we could assist you in some way by phone, at 765-7171. You will always find friendly faces and willingness to help you in your needs. We are open from 8:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m., Mondays through Saturdays."

POM POMS AMONG ITEMS ON SPECIAL AT A-1 NURSERY

"Bargain Time" has a most definite meaning at A-1 Nursery!

Present price reductions prove an early-season bonanza for area gardeners and for landscape care, simply take advantage of the "pick up at nursery" prices at A-1, 7500 82nd St., just five minutes from South Plains Mall.

Top quality in every item, with selection including shade trees, bedding plants, fruit trees and all . . . these are among the values to shout about.

Examples Given

Note thse among the Bargain Time specials.

Pretty hanging baskets, planted, at only $2.49.

All balled and burlaped shade trees are 40 per cent off and include sycamore, silver maple, honey locust, sweet gum, weeping willow, red bud, purple leaf plum, sunburst locust, marange locust and green ash.

Fancy leaf caladiums, regular $2.99 6-in. pots, are now $1.98 each, with 3-in. pots at 69 cents or $6.50 dozen.

One-gallon crepe myrtles, regular $4.95, are sale priced at $2.88, or 10 for $25.

Giant bearing-size peach trees, 8-9 ft. tall, regular $14.95, are on sale for the current event at $5.88 each!

Japanese boxwood is 79 cents, or 10 for $7.

Cushion mums, regular 59 cents, are 39 cents-or 10 for $3.50.

Also select from live oaks, poodles and pompoms, and more, all at fantastically low prices.

(Vegetables and bedding plants, regular 20 cents, are sale marked at 12 cents!)

There are outstanding geraniums in bloom, priced for the sale at $1.69.

Plus much, much more as outlined in the A-1 Nursery ads (or better yet, come on out and see for yourself just how very much A-1 has to offer in quality and savings, to say nothing of a tremendous selection).

Long Hours

Remember, A-1 Nursery, at 7500 82nd St., is open weekdays 8 a.m. until 6 p.m., and on Sundays from 1:30 p.m. until 5 p.m.

A-1 has a tremendous selection in its every depoartment . . . well worth the drive to view and select . . . and save!

Area residents long have benefitted from the landscape design, installation and maintenance services of A-1, and these and other services still are available — plus the special benefits of the new shipments and the unheard-of sale here at beginning of the season.

For more than 20 years, area folks have been assisted by the services of Winfred Self, owner and operator of A-1 Nursery, since 1973 at its present expanded quarters.

Everything at the modern nursery is coordinated for the very best in service. A complete line is stocked including trees, shrubs, vines, fertilizers, insecticides and the numerous other nursery supplies.

The "know how" of Self and his experienced staff possibly is the biggest asset of A-1, however, as hundreds of customers can attest to the superior help there through the years.

"Come on out during the big sale this week and see for yourself how A-1 Nursery can meet your individual needs, at a price you'll appreciate. Just as your neighbor likely already is an enthusiastic A-1 customer, you, too, can benefit from the experience, the interest, the products and the prices of this firm that knows how to get the most into a South Plains landscape."

Spring Crest Draperies Emphasizing Difference, Simplicity Of Product

Regarding draperies, this should be noted:

"If you are searching for something pretty, something better of value, and for convenience in maintenance, then draperies from Spring Crest Draperies of Lubbock, 5302 Ave. Q, are the solution."

Opened last July by the very knowledgeable and personable husband-wife team, Ben and Brenda Powell, this home-owned and home-operated firm has much that is new in this area.

This relatively new but well received drapery store is exclusive dealer for the quality Spring Crest hardware in the Lubbock region. It is a franchise dealership and consequently passes on the advantages of mass buying power and the 18-year experience of nationally-known Spring Crest to its customers.

'Difference' Outlined

Why is Spring Crest different?

"Actually, Spring Crest Spring-Pleated Custom Draperies are the neatest hanging drapes in the world because they hang from a steel spring inserted in the top hem, with no crinoline headers to get soft and fall apart.

"They are inexpensive to clean, in comparison with the pinch-pleat drapes, one can readily understand. They keep their shape through numerous cleanings, with no pleats to press in, without the tendency for cracking."

Furthermore, aside from their beauty and simplicity, they are competitively priced.

Fashion Colors

The firm has House & Garden fashion colors, being officially enrolled in the House & Garden color program.

Spring Crest Draperies of Lubbock is open every weekday, including Saturday hours of 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.

Credit terms are available, and Master Charge and Visa use is welcomed.

Woven wood shades and the Riviera mini-blinds are further products and services of the Lubbock firm in the Briercroft Shopping Center, with shutters and laminated shades also provided.

Free estimates are gladly given.

No Long Wait

It is pointed out that only three to four week delivery time is involved for the custom-made drapes.

"No matter what your style, Spring Crest can dress your windows better; these custom draperies add elegance to the most formal setting, but also can be the perfect finishing touch to a casual room. May we show you?"

Limited Openings Available In Plaster Painting For Children

There still are some openings in the children's classes in "Painting on Plaster," commencing June 7 (Wednesday), presented free of tuition charge by Rhea's Crafts in Lubbock!

"Are there young people in your family who will have idle time this summer...who would enjoy participation in delightful hobbies?"

Then, note this:

At Rhea's Crafts, 2831 34th St., children's classes in Painting on Plaster will commence June 7.

Classes will be divided into the 10-12 age group and the 12-16 age group.

Classes will be from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m., with another schedule from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m.

Instruction Free

There is absolutely no tuition charge! The only expense will be for supplies that are available at Rhea's.

Rhea Abbott will personally instruct the classes.

Come by Rhea's Crafts, 2831 34th St., or phone 795-2655 for full details.

Exceptional Store

Rhea's Crafts, long and favorably known for its craft supplies and ideas for the creative person, has other situations of interest:

Fresh, new stock augments the already-huge selection.

Always-ready assistance is a big factor in the services rendered at Rhea's Crafts, with individual instruction absolutely free when one purchases there.

The long-standing rule is that anyone buying supplies there is welcomed and even encouraged to come in, sit at the big work-table and even use the big spray paint room, completing the selected project without any further charge!

Personal Assistance

Rhea's has a full selection of pastel chalks, some may not yet realize.

Macrame Supplies

Of course, there are macrame supplies for every need.

And Mirro-Magic, too. With this process, one can open "windows" in mirrors to display and frame cherished prints, photographs, decorative paintings or those special mementos.

With this technique, mirrors become frames to reflect and protect fine prints, heirloom photos or decorative painting. All materials are available at Rhea's.

Check also regarding the multiple ways to finish plaster, including antiquing, bronzing, marbelizing, acrylics and pastel chalk.

Rhea's not only has ideas by the scores, but stocks all necessary supplies in kit or individual piece form.

Spray paints and base coats are included in the wide stock.

Glass beads, bangles, etc. are provided.

Business & Industrial Review

'CHILDRESS CAN HELP IN YOUR OWN SAFETY SITUATION'

Security Hardware, Tools For Home, Builder, Yard Provided

Whether one's immediate concerns and needs involve gardening and yard tools and supplies, security via quality mortise locks, or even the unusual hardware items, likely the first and only place necessary to check is at Childress Hardware, 902 Main St. in downtown Lubbock.

A glance into the show window properly hints of the assortment within. Note the water coolers, gasoline cans, sprinklers, spades, spreaders, spading forks, even a hibachi, scythe and pitchfork!

"Security" is very much in the minds of most people today. And properly so.

It would be foolish, and likely impossible, to seriously consider security for the home or business without attention to the locks . . . such as dead bolts, etc.

And this is where Childress Hardware comes in, for Childress for years has stocked the finest in security hardware. The knowledgeable personnel there will be glad to discuss one's door fastener needs, providing the right lock for the situation at hand.

Not only at this time when crime seems to dominate in so many news reports, but for the entire past half-century, Childress Hardware, at 902 Main, has stocked needs for every season, the practical hardware items appreciated throughout the region.

Outdoor Tool Needs

"It also is pointed out that just as soon as inclement weather abates, most of us are anxious to turn attention to the challenges for house, yard and garden improvements; a busy outdoor time of year has arrived!

The correct tools and equipment can be the big item in convenience and accomplishment, whether the task is lawn and garden work or even a remodeling job for the home."

This is a store that meets the season's needs.

For example, do these items have a function in your plans:

Pruning saws, garden hose, sprinklers (from the smallest to the most elaborate), reels for the garden hose, fertilizer spreaders, walking garden plows, rakes, hoes and spades, shears, trimmers, hose, etc.

For Home Improvement

Then for the home handyman or even the professional builder who appreciates good hand tools, there is a wide stock, including the respected name of Stanley, Crescent, Thorson, Nicholson, Bluegrass, Disston, Lufkin, Plumb and others long associated with quality and integrity in tool-making.

On and on the list could go in enumerating the lawn and the building needs provided at Childress Hardware, but suffice it to say that "if it is in the hardware line, you can get it there.

One can purchase an old-fashioned sprinkling can or a lawn watering device that negotiates your yard; a well pulley or a lamp chimney; actually more than 10,000 different items.

Childress Hardware continues as a popular place with carpenters and craftsmen, who make if headquarters for nails of all sizes, as well as a wide range of other fastenings including stove bolts, capscrews, carriage bolts, machine screws, metal screws, wood screws and brass screws, chain, rope — you name it, for home, industrial or farm use.

Cabinet Hardware

The Fred Childress Hardware also stocks one of the most extensive line of cabinet hardware in the city, with latest designs in hinges, pulls and latches attractively displayed. Here again brands such as Stylecraft, Christensen, Phylrick and Pfanstiel are indicative of top quality and design.

Hughes Services 'Goes Second Mile' In Fullest Assistance To Customer

For full janitorial services with "plus-benefits that we like to prove", the name to know in Lubbock, Amarillo and throughout the South Plains and Panhandle is Hughes Services, Inc., 101 Sherman Ave. in Lubbock!

(And for purchase of professional maintenance supplies, at the same Lubbock location, there is HUCO Products. Co., taking pride in stocking the very best in equipment and related needs.)

Hughes and HUCO each "go the extra mile" in assisting the customer, helping in maximum benefits from both the services and equipment selection and use.

Customers have long profited from the learning and experience, plus capacity for service, of the Hughes and HUCO personnel. Offices are maintained in both Lubbock and Amarillo, and counties throughout the area are well served by Hughes (with current accounts noted in Levelland, Slaton, Hereford, Canyon, Plainview and other area points.)

"Are you included?"

Assistance That Counts

Hughes Services has a record of customer assistance . . . such as supervision to assure the right procedures and results for each account.

"If your building has a problem in janitorial servicing, there is no charge from Hughes for an in-depth survey and recommendations."

And if a housewife has a problem on floor care within the home, we are glad at Hughes and HUCO to tell what use and how it should be used.

All this is made possible by "the right products, the devotion to service, and the training that is a continuous procedure for all staffmembers."

Demonstrations, films, on-job training — all are part of the Hughes and HUCO concept of fullest service, and in keeping with a record of foresight and achievement that might be dated from establishment of Hughes Service back in 1954 and the addition of HUCO Products in 1970, with numerous additions to products and services marking the intervening and ensuing years.

"We believe a professional wants strictly professional merchandise; hence any product we sell is used in our own professional maintenance business; we have tested it before recommending and selling it, for sure."

Among the products available from HUCO are Hillyard floor treatments including gym finishes and concrete seals. (One can run a new slab and just as soon as it is dry for walking, a spray seal can be applied to keep it from ever getting stained. How great for a commercial building, or even for the home owner who can seal the garage or even the residence floor before carpeting.

All types of hospitalization chemicals are stocked.

Plus National Super Service floor machines.

(Be sure and learn of the electric powered 20-in. buffer with brush speed of 1,070 rpm, three times as much as usually expected for buffing units. And it is simple enough and easy enough for any woman to run. Imagine, buffing 10,000 sq.ft. per hour! And the finishes last longer with a "wet look" finish that resists scuffing.

Actually, for finest in cleaning equipment and related products, all thoroughly proven, one can with assurance depend upon the progressive HUCO Products Co., 101 Sherman Ave. in Lubbock.

Specifics Cited

Briefly, eight prime reasons are itemized here to be considered in knowing the Hughes firm better:

(1) Hughes services banks, school office buildings, manufacturing plants, churches, public utilities and more.

(2) As the oldest janitorial service company in Lubbock, Hughes has been in business since 1954 — 24 years of service.

(3) Free estimates at no obligation are gladly given.

(4) A maintenance program "for you" can be professionally and correctly planned by the qualified staff.

(5) References are gladly furnished.

(6) Hughes Services, Inc., is insured and bonded.

(7) Employees are thoroughly trained by demonstration, training films and regular rigid inspection.

(8) And not the least of the considerations is equipment: Hughes has the best equipment and cleaning supplies to be found.

"Get the idea?

"Hughes wants to have a part in your future."

At Hughes, one can be assured of such benefits as all labor, all supervision, all cleaning equipment, all supplies, all machines, all payroll taxes, insurance, etc.

Hughes crews are at work most every day throughout the area, even to the Oklahoma border. With more than 100 employees, Hughes has the manpower and financial strength to serve well.

Hughes is equipped and manned to take care of any type residential or business cleaning and maintenance need or problem.

Business & Industrial Review

Gemini Carpets Utilizes Huge Multi-Store Buying Advantage

"Gemini Carpets proves that it wants and deserves your business and confidence!"

Opened early this year at 2541 34th St., Gemini Carpets is West Texas owned and is managed by Travis Castleberry, long on the Lubbock carpet scene.

As one of the eight Gemini stores in West Texas, a tremendous buying power is thus afforded, and these savings consequently are passed on to you, the Gemini customer.

Specials On Drapes, Spreads

Example of some of these savings:

Throughout June, as a special way of saying, "We appreciate you," a whopping 20 per cent off is arranged on all custom draperies and bedspreads.

And there are carpet values including a special selection of kitchen prints at only $3.99 per yard (installation not included).

Decorating Service

Gemini offers a complete home decorating service, including carpets, vinyl flooring, formica counter tops, ceramic tile, wall covering, laminated shades and mini-blinds.

Both residential and commercial business is welcomed.

An interior decorator is on the staff and lends her very qualified services at no cost or obligation, with only charge being for materials and installation.

Estimates are free, of course.

Gemini Carpets, at 2541 34th St., phone 793-5014, is open from 8 a.m. until 6 p.m., Mondays through Saturdays. Visa and Master Charge purchases are welcomed.

Longtime Lubbock residents and with some 15 years carpeting experience, Travis and Velton Castleberry are understandably enthused about the type store and service provided at Gemini. A lot of customers will agree . . . that this is a carpet store worth special consideration. Value, selection, service and low pricing, with a genuine consideration of the customer, combine to make a really good store.

"May we have the pleasure of your visit and inspection of Gemini Carpets?"

Newest Units, Pickup Toppers Among Vacation Items From Davis R.V. Firm

"The outdoor season can start right, and continue right, with the very able assistance of Davis R.V. Service Center!"

Together with the several prestigious lines of recreational vehicles already stocked by Davis, announcement now is made that Custom Craft pickup shells, or toppers, are stocked and installed by Davis.

Custom Craft toppers are one-piece molded fiberglass, insulated, with multi-colored interior, with fiberglass encased mounting rails, interior light, double spring-loaded door props, tinted slider safety glass side windows, and locking rear door, available in white and 22 other colors to match one's truck!

"Custom Craft has been America's standard of quality since 1961 and is now stocked at Davis R.V. Service Center, 220 Paris, near downtown Lubbock.

Not only does Davis bring quality lines to Lubbock, but the firm is quite strong on service, and this can be a big assist in preparing one's RV unit for summer vacationing. But don't delay!

To help one get started right, Davis also has a very large accessory stock to make travel more convenient, enjoyable and economical.

Wilderness Units

Jamboree

Also everyone here is excited about the 1978 Jamboree mini-home with a floor plan one will "fall in love with", and with built-in quality that is most evident.

Prestigious Avion

And look at this: the Avion mini-home, "the shape of things to come"! From its aerodynamic styling, aircraft construction to its extended range cruise system, interior beauty and function, to gorgeous exterior, Avion is in a class by itself.

Davis is Avion travel trailer dealer for 16 area counties and stocks accordingly. For a new experience in travel trailer value and enjoyment, see units from the line at Davis R.V. Service Center now.

Golden Falcon

In any event, Davis stocks all these great lines for one's selection and enjoyment for seasons to come.

The Davis firm (located east from Avenue Q and the Clovis-Amarillo "Y") stocks and presents exceptional values in every department.

Service is a big asset there, and now is an ideal time for many to have their recreational vehicle units checked before the rush sure to come within just a few days.

Storage is available, too.

Aside from the R.V. units, Davis stocks the needed accessories that make for vacation and trip comfort and convenience.

"See us for your needs in camper and trailer jacks (hydraulic, tongue, stabalizer and stack types): for air conditioners by Frigiking . . . and for awnings by A & E Systems."

"From the moment it is installed, an A & E awning becomes a beautiful and functional extension of your R.V., ready to provide shade and shelter wherever you go! Select a size to meet your specific need."

Equalizer hitches are stocked and installed. Installation also is available on air conditioners and awnings.

The Davis firm services any make or brand of recreational vehicle, and it is wisely suggested that the units be kept in top condition for ready use as vacation and trip opportunities avail themselves.

"Come by and learn the absolute truth . . . that Davis R.V. Service Center has everything for the person who appreciates the out-of-doors . . . everything for the recreational vehicle owner.

"Meet owners-operators Mr. and Mrs. Boots Davis and Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Davis and profit accordingly. They opened the center back in mid-1973 and have consistently given their personal attention to every sale and service."

Woolco Men's Wear Department Spells Out 'Appreciated Gifts'

"We are stocked and ready to serve the needs for dad...for a very special Father's Day...and all at Woolco's special advantageous pricing."

"Woolco always presents the finest quality at low Woolco discount price, but this year for Father's Day, we are featuring many special reductions that are way below discount price!"

Among the features are those dressy items for the businessman dad, such as vested suits, slacks, sport coats, dress shirts, ties, etc.

For the fun-loving casual dad, we at Woolco have those warm-up suits, tank tops, jogging shorts, novelty tee shirts, walk shorts, cut-offs, sport shirts and any other attire required and desired for casual wear.

"Woolco is going to make Father's Day great for dad...and easy on you!"

Diamond Rings, Pen Sets, Choices In Watches Ease Father's Day Selection

Woolco's fine Jewelry Department offers a complete merchandise assortment including gift items ideal for Father's Day.

Diamond Values

"One such suggested item is a diamond ring. Woolco diamond rings are great values because they come directly from the manufacturer to Woolco where a low mark-up policy assures you, our customer, the best possible buy."

A diamond is a gift of love; the quality never diminishes; it is a gift for all time.

Free Engraving

"We also carry a full line of personalized jewelry, and the engraving is free."

Cross pen sets are available in the jewelry area, and these make excellent gifts, especially when personalized.

Popular Watches

The Woolco watch selection not only includes the popular LED and LCD digital watches, but also 17-jewel selections by Waltham and Elgin. (And of course we feature the ever-popular Timex watches.)

Electric razors also are available in the jewelry section.

"Come in to Woolco and let one of our friendly salespersons help you with your gift selection for Father's Day."

LILLISTON ROLLING CULTIVATOR

- cultivates at speeds up to 10 mph — pre-emerge to tool bar height.
- mulches tough crusts and aerates the soil — also helps to retain moisture.
- incorporates pre-emerge or post-emerge chemicals — well into the soil.
- builds beds, bars off, lays by — won't harm tender crop root systems.

IT'S LIKE LOOKING FOR A "NEEDLE" in a haystack, trying to find a 3 bedroom 2 bath with fireplace and refrigerated air, that you can afford!!! We've got it and in great condition, yours for only $31,950.00. Let us help you.

NEAT AS A "PIN" really describes this nearly new 3 bedroom 2 bath home with living den, fireplace, Refrigerated air, and all the appliances. Great location, 5209 71st, and you'll like the price. Please Call.

SHARP AS A "TACK" this giant 2 bedroom home at 3612 42nd, even a fireplace in the "Conversation Pit". Buy and rent it out or remodel. Great neighborhood. Hurry it won't last.

HARD AS A "NAIL" yes it is hard to find this prestige 3 bedroom 2 bath home at 8005 Dover, because it's on a traffic controlled street, giving you more privacy, and protection for the kids. (The kids will love the pool in the backyard) Nail this one down, don't let it get away.

Sign Up For Independence

When young people sign up for newspaper route work, they are really signing up for independence. The kind of independence that goes with earning your own money, running your own business and dealing with people on a one-to-one basis.

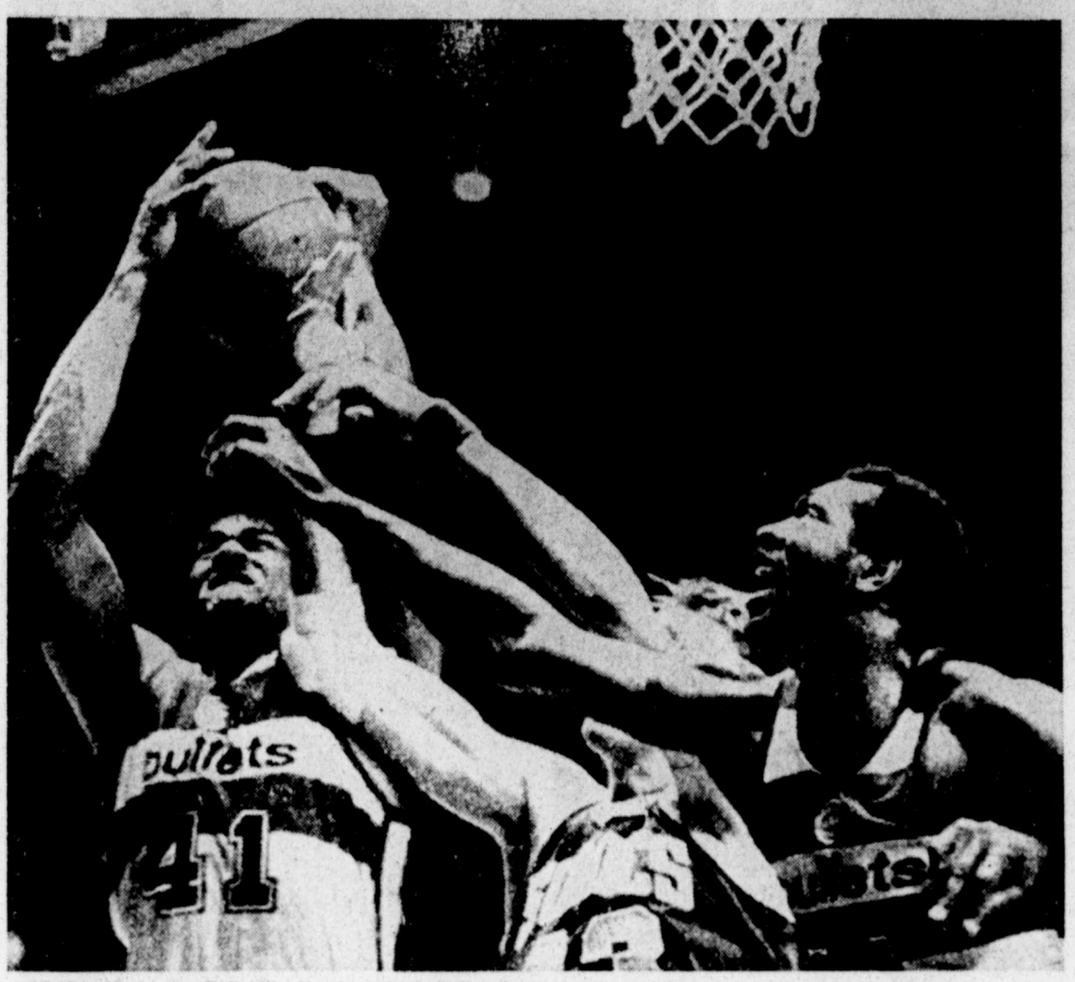

Our carriers are young business men and women. They provide a vital service, handle their own finances and reap a handsome profit from their efforts. What better training to prepare them for the future?

If you are interested in stepping into the business world and declaring your own independence, contact our carrier manager right now. He'll give you all of the important facts about carrier work. Then, if you are still interested, he'll provide the pen and show you where to sign . . . even if your name is John Hancock.

Bullets Force Final Showdown Tilt

GOT IT — Washington Bullet Wes Unseld grabs the ball under the backboard away from Seattle Supersonic Jack Sikma (43), while Bullet teammate Elvin Hays (11) gets into the action second-period play of the NBA championship series. Washington won the game 117-82, forcing the series into a seventh and final game. (AP Laserphoto)

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The Washington Bullets evened the National Basketball Association Championship Series at three victories apiece by routing the Seattle SuperSonics 117-82 Sunday, the most one-sided game in the history of the playoff finals.

The decisive game of the best-of-seven series will be played Wednesday night at the Seattle Center Coliseum, where the Sonics have won their last 22 starts.

The margin of victory in the first five games of this series was just 21 points. But Sunday's 35-point margin bettered by one the NBA record set on April 2, 1961 when Boston beat St. Louis 129-95.

Elvin Hayes led a balanced Bullets attack with 21 points and 15 rebounds as Washington outrebounded Seattle 83-59.

"This is the way the Bullets have to play," said Hayes. "Maybe we needed a game like this to bring out what kind of team we are."

Will the one-sided margin have any carry over affect on the seventh game?

"They have to think about it," said Hayes. "They have to think about a lot of things."

Among them is Washington's aggressive defense that limited the Sonics to the lowest point total in the playoff finals since April 7, 1955, when Fort Wayne defeated Syracuse 74-71.

"Our defense was good, but their shooting was poor," said Washington Coach Dick Motta, noting that the Sonics' percentage from the field was .337.

Washington's reserves, who scored just eight points in the fifth game of this series, accounted for 63 on Sunday.

"The credit for this victory has to go to the guys on the bench," said Hayes. "They came in running and rebounding and got us going."

Needless to say, Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens was not a happy man.

"This was the worst game we've played in a long time," he said. "We just didn't play well. We didn't generate anything. We were totally out of synch."

Forward Bobby Dandridge added 19 points for Washington.

Washington took control of the game in the second quarter, outscoring Seattle 28-14 to forge a 47-35 halftime lead. The Sonics could convert only five of 21 shots from the field in the second period, and the Bullets took advantage of this by loading their lineup with four front-court men and dominating the rebounding.

Seattle closed the gap early in the third period. But with a capacity crowd of 19,035 at the Capital Centre roaring with every play, Dandridge ran off eight straight points and Hayes converted an offensive rebound to give Washington a commanding 67-48 lead with 6:25 to go in the third quarter.

Seattle came no closer than 15 points after that as Washington scored virtually at will off its fast break in the final period, pulling away to its 35-point final margin.

Mitch Kupchak also scored 19 points for the Bullets and Charles Johnson, getting more playing time than ususual because of a wrist injury to starting guard Kevin Grevey, added 17.

Fred Brown led Seattle with 17 points and Gus Williams scored 16.

Seattle led throughout the first quarter but never could open any breathing room as Hayes hit nine points for the Bullets. Seattle led 21-19 at the end of the period.

Washington moved in front for the first time with 11:07 remaining in the second period when burly center Wes Unseld ripped an offensive rebound away from Seattle's Jack Sikma and layed it in to make the score 23-22.

Washington broke the game open by outscoring the Sonics 15-4 in the final 5½ minutes of the first half. Dandridge scored six points and rookie Greg Ballard added five in that burst, most of which came while the Bullets were using their alignment of one guard and four big men.

The Bullets clinched the victory with a 37-point third quarter, the highest scoring period of the playoff finals. Dandridge got nine points and Hayes eight as Washington built an 84-61 lead going into the final period and coasted home.

Bean Nabs Kemper Win By Five Shots, Fires 66

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Andy Bean cut loose with five birdies and dropped a 40-foot eagle putt Sunday as he rolled to a five-stroke victory in the $300,000 Kemper Open golf tournament.

Forging a 6-under-par 66 on the 7,160-yard Quail Hollow Country Club course, Bean bogeyed the 17th hole but still easily outdistanced Mark Hayes and Andy North, who tied for second.

Bean, whose best finish on the PGA tour this year was second place in the Houston Open, went in to the final round at 9-under-par. With three straight birdies and an eagle in his first nine holes and two more birdies near the end of his round, Bean grabbed the $60,000 winner's share of the purse.

Defending champion Tom Weiskopf suffered three bogeys late in his round to finish nine strokes behind Bean. Rookie Alan Pate, who held a 1-stroke lead going into the final round, opened with a birdie Sunday but faltered with four bogeys and fell out of the battle.

Arnold Palmer, who led midway through the 72-hole tournament, could come no closer to Bean than 10 strokes.

Bean sent a 40-foot putt over a ridge and into the cup on the par-5, 543-yard fifth hole for an eagle on his way to a 273 total.

Pate, who had to win $4,500 within two weeks to stay on the PGA tour, missed a 20-foot birdie putt on the 18th and finished 7 strokes behind Bean.

But Pate, whose best previous performance had been a tie for 36th in a PGA secondary tour event, finished in a six-way tie for sixth place and won $9,525.

"I've struggled hard almost the whole year since I've been out here," said the 23-year-old from Mobile, Ala. "It seemed like the harder I tried, the less it showed, but things sort of turned around for me this week," added Pate, who had won only $500 in his first year on the tour.

His bogey on the par-3, 202-yard 17th

BowsherCruises To Texas Win

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — Gary Bowsher took over the lead when Bobby Allison dropped back with overheating problems, and the 21-year-old from Springfield, Ohio, drove on to an easy victory in the wreck-marred sixth annual Texas 500 stock car race Sunday.

The race was red-flagged to a stop after only eight laps when six cars smacked into a blazing chain-reaction pileup that was the worst in recent memory in stock car racing.

Three drivers were hospitalized briefly, but miraculously there were no serious injuries. Five cars were destroyed.

The wreck started when Bob Keselowski spun in front of a pack of cars, sending them careenwng in all directions. Ricky Otts spun and clipped the wall while trying to avoid Keselowski. Ken Rowley spun backwards into Ott and both of their cars exploded and were enveloped by flame as the fuel tanks in the cars were crushed in the impact.

A fireball 100 feet high billowed into the sky, reminiscent of the fatal Eddie Sachs-Dave MacDonald holocaust in the 1964 Indianapolis 500. Rowely managed to bail out of his moving ball of flame and was nearly run over by it. Ott also got out under his own power.

The fire spread to the infield grass and before it was extinguished, one firefighter was overcome by smoke and hospitalized.

Ott of Houston was treated and released from St. Joseph's Hospital in Bryan for first-degree burns on the face, neck and shoulder. Rowely of Normal, Ill., suffered cracked ribs and first-and second-degree burns on his face and neck. He was also released from St. Joseph's after treatment.

MHS Seeded In Tourney

AUSTIN (Special) — Duncanville and Monterey, each two-time state baseball champions in the past seven years, received the two top seeds for the class AAAA state tournament Sunday.

Duncanville will open the tournament Thursday night at 7 p.m., while Monterey plays at 9 p.m. University Interscholastic League officials will draw this morning to determine the semifinal opponents for the top seeds. Either Corpus Christi Moody or Houston Belaire will face Monterey in the semifinals consequently.

The tops seeds where also announced for the class AAA tournament. Mount Pleasant drew the top seed and will play at 1 p.m., while Jasper will compete at 3 p.m. Officials will draw between Burkburnett and Brazosport this morning to determine the semifinal pairings.

Borg Wins, Advances In Open

PARIS (AP) — Top-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden moved a step closer to his third French Open title Sunday with an awesome, 6-0, 6-2, 6-2 rout of Italy's Paulo Bertolucci.

Borg's next opponent will be American Roscoe Tanner, who beat Australia's Colin Dibley 7-5, 7-6, 6-4 in another third-round match in the $400,000 competition.

Italy's Corrado Barazzutti also moved into the 16-man fourth round with a 5-7, 6-4, 7-5, 6-4 victory over France's Patrice Dominguez in a 3-hour battle of strategy and nerve.

But, as has been the case throughout the first week of the 14-day tournament, the unruffled 21-year-old Borg stole the center court show before a capacity crowd at Roland Garros Stadium.

USC Triumphs In CWS Action

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Doug Stokke and John Wells had two hits apiece and drove in two runs in the first inning to lead Southern California to an 11-3 triumph over Michigan Sunday night in the second round of the College World Series.

The loss dropped Michigan into a losers' bracket game Monday night against North Carolina, which eliminated St. John's 9-5 earlier Sunday.

Sunday / Ruidoso Results

RUIDOSO, N.M. (Special) — Gentlemen's Feature, a 19-1 outsider, came on in the final strides and pulled out a brilliant nose win in Sunday's grand final of the Kansas Quarter Horse Futurity at Ruidoso Downs.

The gross purse of the first leg of the quarter horse triple crown was $499,000. Geral and Darlene Blue of Amarillo, the winning owners, collected $164,502.

New York Met manager Joe Torre played three positions for the National League in All-Star competition, catcher, first base and third base.

Andy Bean Blazes To Kemper Victory

came after he landed in a bunker. But Bean and everybody else on the course knew nothing short of an earthquake could destroy his lead.

"When the shot went in the bunker, I said 'Oh, no,'" said Bean, whose earnings Sunday put him at $137,509 for the year and $275,583 during his three years as a pro.

"But Andy said 'Don't worry about it — just get it up on dry land and hit it in.' Bean said, referring to playing partner Andy North.

"You might say I got off tho a pretty good start," he joked. "I was very fortunate with what I shot this week."

Hayes said he thought he had started off well with two birdies in the first four holes.

"But I looked at the leader board and Andy Bean had me four or five (strokes) and I kept wondering when he was going to quit," said Hayes who joined with North in winning $27,750 for their second-place tie.

"Mark was watching the leader board but I was playing with him (Bean)," said North. "He played absolutely perfect in the first eight holes. He was so far ahead at the end that he just played to get in," North said.

Carner Wins LPGA Event

TORONTO (AP) — JoAnne Carner fired a course record 9-under-par 64 Sunday to win a $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament by eight strokes over Hollis Stacy.

She quickly went to the front with a spectacular 5-under 31 on the front nine of the par-73, 6,265-yard St. George's Golf and Country Club layout. She finished at 278, 14 under par.

Carner, the winner of the tournament when it was last played at St. George's in 1975, won $15,000. The tournament in 1975 was tougher to win, that victory coming after a playoff against Carol Mann.

Rangers Manage To Clip Blues Jays' Wings 9-5

WE SHOULDN'T MEET LIKE THIS — St. Louis Cardinal second baseman Mike Phillips was out at home plate as he tried to slide through Houston Astro catcher Reggie Baldwin during the fifth inning of play Sunday afternoon in the Astrodome. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press

Al Oliver drove in four runs with a single and double, Juan Benuquez hit a 2-run homer and Toby Harrah scored three times as the Texas Rangers dumped the Toronto Blue Jays 9-5 Sunday.

The Rangers staked starter Dock Ellis, 4-2, to a 6-0 lead after two innings off loser Dave Lemanczyk, 1-9, and then held on as the Blue Jays moved to within two runs on a solo homer by Rick Bosetti in the fifth and a 2-run shot by John Mayberry in the sixth.

The Rangers struck for three runs on just one hit in the first as Lemanczyk walked the first three Texas batters. Oliver scored Harrah and Mike Hargrove with a single to right and, after a sacrifice moved the runners up, Zisk delivered Bump Wills with a ground out to short.

In the Toronto second, Dave McKay tripled in one run and Rick Cerone singled for another.

BREWERS SWEEP TRIBE

Sixto Lezcano slammed a 3-run home run, Paul Molitor hit a 2-run shot and Sal Bando added a solo homer, leading the Milwaukee Brewers to a 9-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians to complete a doubleheader sweep.

The Brewers broke a 4-game losing streak by winning the opener 12-7, as Dick Davis belted his first major league bases-loaded home run and Gorman Thomas' three-run shot capped a six-run seventh.

O's 4, MARINERS 1

Ken Singleton drove in all four runs with a 2-run home run, a double and a single and left-hander Mike Flanagan won his seventh game to lead the Baltimore Orioles to a 4-1 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Singleton staked Baltimore to a 1-0 lead in the first with his two-out RBI single. He followed with a 420-foot homer to straight away center field in the third, scoring Eddie Murray ahead of him. Murray had singled with one out.

ROYALS 13, CHISOX 2

John Wathan and Al Cowens drove in three runs apiece and Darrell Porter collected five hits as the Kansas City Royals romped past Chicago 13-2 to end a 7-game White Sox winning streak.

PHILS 9, DODGERS 4

Slump-plagued Greg Luzinski drove in two runs in a 5-run, second-inning batround that triggered the Philadelphia Phillies to a 9-4 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Dodgers had scored two runs off Jim Kaat, 2-0, in the first, thanks to an error by second baseman Jim Morrison. The first run scored on Steve Garvey's grounder and the other on the error.

CUBS 6, BRAVES 4

Heidy Cruz, one of five subs in the lineup, drilled three hits and drove in two runs to lead the Chicago Cubs to a 6-4 victory over the Atlanta Braves and a sweep of their 3-game series.

The Cubs took a 3-0 lead in the first on Larry Bittner's sacrifice fly and Cruz's two-run double.

TIGERS 6, TWINS 4

The Detroit Tigers scored two unearned runs in the sixth inning, then got a 2-run homer in the eighth from Steve Kemp to defeat the Minnesota Twins 6-4.

Kemp's homer, his third, came off reliever Mac Scarce with two out and scored Aurelio Rodriguez, who had reached on a single.

Detroit trailed 3-2 going into the sixth. Alan Trammell opened with a single and Rodriguez bunted, Trammell reaching second when the throw there was late.

CARDS 4, ASTROS 2

St. Louis rookie Silvio Martinez won his second straight major league game and the Cardinals roughed up Houston starter J.R. Richard with three runs in the fifth inning for a 4-2 victory.

Martinez, who fashioned a 1-hit victory over the New York Mets last week, yielded a run-scoring single to Reggie Baldwin in the second and a sacrifice fly by Enos Cabell in the seventh, when he needed relief help from Buddy Shultz.

PADRES 5, METS 2

Derrel Thomas and Bill Almon drove in two runs apiece in San Diego's 4-run sixth as the Padres defeated the New York Mets 5-2 with Gaylord Perry earning his 250th career victory.

Perry, 4-2, is the second-ranking active pitcher in career victories behind Philadelphia's Jim Kaat, who has 255 career wins. Perry scattered six hits, striking out five and walking two before needing relief help in the eighth from Bob Shirley and Rollie Fingers, who gained his 15th save.

San Diego's rally in the sixth came against Jerry Koosman, 2-7. Thomas had a two-run single and Almon's double produced two more runs.

A's 6, YANKEES 4

Page's game-winning hit broke a 3-3 tie and came off Sparky Lyle, the Yankees' third pitcher of the game. Lyle relieved Rawly Eastwick, 2-1, with two out and runners on first and third.

ANGELS 4, BOSOX 2

Frank Tanana extended his string of consecutive scoreless innings against Boston at home to 42 before getting last-out relief help from Dave LaRoche and Ron Jackson and Ken Landreaux homered to give California a 4-2 victory over the Red Sox.

The victory, the first for Angels Manager Jim Fregosi, snapped a 7-game losing streak for California. Boston had won 10 of its last 11 games.

GIANTS 3, EXPOS 2

Vic Harris led off the 10th inning with a home run to power the San Francisco Giants to a 3-2 victory over the Montreal Expos.

Randy Moffitt, 5-1, earned the victory in relief of San Francisco starter Bob Knepper. Mike Garman, 0-2, the third Montreal pitcher, took the loss.

BUCS 4, REDS 1

Bert Blyleven, who had a perfect game until the sixth, combined with Grant Jackson for a 4-hitter and John Milner had four singles and two RBI as the Pittsburgh Pirates downed the Cincinnati Reds 4-1.

Blyleven, 4-5, making his first career start against the Reds, retired the first 15 batters he faced before issuing a leadoff walk to Mike Lum in the sixth. One out later, pinch-hitter Dave Collins singled up the middle to ruin Blyleven's bid for his second career no-hitter.

Andretti Wins Grand Prix

His Swedish teammate, Ronnie Peterson, fought through the field from a poor start to give the JPS-Lotus team its second 1-2 sweep in two weeks.

Both were driving the new "ground effect" Lotus model 79. Andretti won the Belgian race two weeks ago in the first outing for the new car, with Peterson behind him there in the older model 78.

Andretti covered the 75 laps of the twisting Jarama circuit in torrid heat in 1 hour, 41 minutes, 47.06 seconds, an average speed of 93.531 miles per hour for the 158.72 miles. Peterson was timed in 1:42:06.62.

"I think now I could win the world championship," said a beaming Andretti. "Our next race is at Anderstorp in Sweden, and that's another track where our cars should have a big advantage. I could really get way ahead on points there."

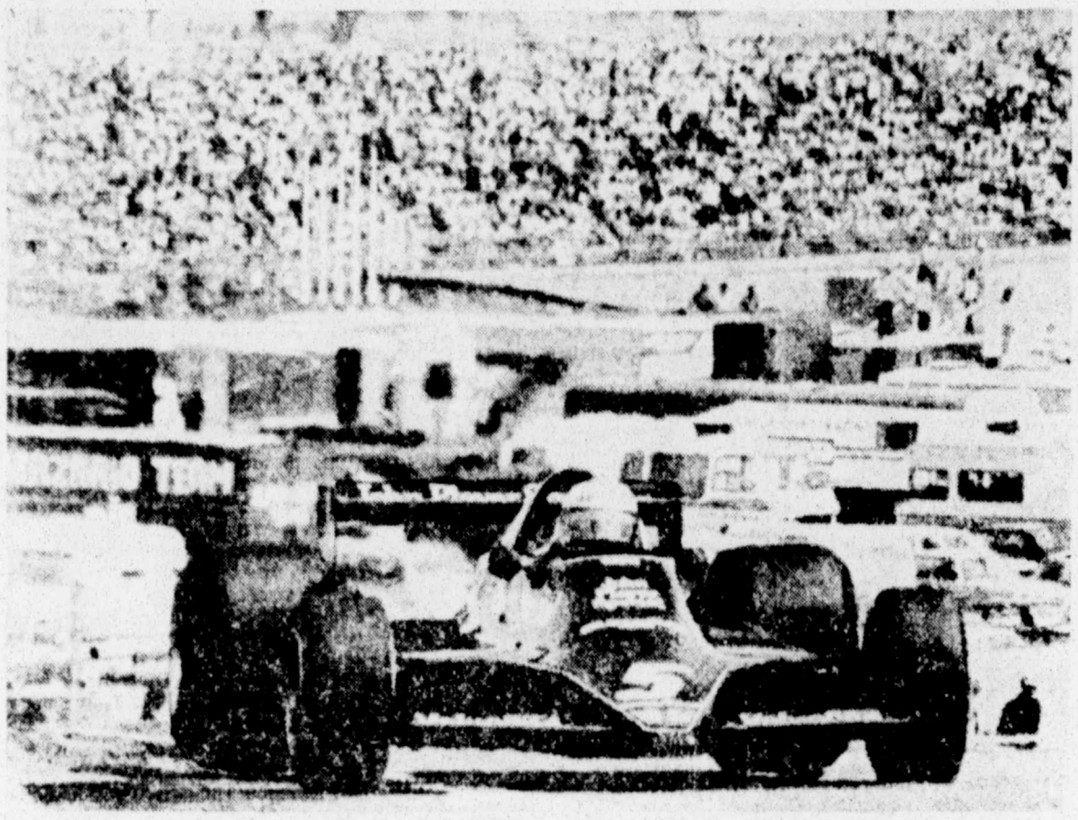

In the only accident, Argentina's Carlos Reutemann plowed into catch fences in his Ferrari, apparently when the accelerator stuck open. He was shaken and underwent a medical checkup but a Ferrari spokesman said he suffered no apparent injury.

Peterson now is second in the world standings with 26 points to Andretti's 36. France's Patrick Depailler is third with 23, Reutemann fourth at 22, and reigning champion Niki Lauda of Austria fifth with 16 points.

Depailler never was better than seventh and abandoned the race, while a blown motor put Lauda out when he was living fourth around the three-quarter distance.

Andretti was taken by surprise by the starting light and Britain's James Hunt went into the lead from the second row in his McLaren. Peterson, alongside pole-sitter Andretti, said he was screened by Spanish police standing too near the trackside.

Andretti had no trouble picking off Hunt within six laps, then won as he pleased. Hunt held in second for 52 laps, but the gap to Andretti steadily increased. Hunt was passed by Peterson, then Jacques Laffite of France and Lauda. The Briton made a pit stop for new tires on the 60th lap and dropped to sixth.

N.M. Men Dominate Speedway

Hobbs drivers invaded Lubbock Speedbowl Saturday night and carried off the bulk of the prizes, although local competitors got something in return.

After Roger Davis — whose Lubbock forays consistently have been productive — carried off both the semi and the main in the modified division, two Idalou car owners, Sonny Shackelford and Duane "Bubba" DeBusk, teamed up to buy Davis's "Hustler" Camaro.

No driver assignment has been announced, but there was speculation that Larry Johnson would fall heir to the newest addition to the Shackelford stable.

In yet another occurrence of possible far-reaching consequence, points leader Jimmy Bilbrey blew the engine in his Mustang during hot laps. Bilbrey expects to be ready to go again by next week, though.

Trophy girl was Sabrina Gschwend, who passed out awards to Bill Penick of Hobbs in the modified division, Ed Bryant, street stocks, and Bilbrey, who finished the evening driving the family VW.

The summary:

MODIFIED STOCK CARS

Caulkins Leads Swimming Meet

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Tracy Caulkins, the 15-year-old swimming sensation from Nashville, Tenn., has won two events — the women's 100-meter butterfly and the 200-meter individual medley — to lead the annual swimming tournament held at Westside Park Pool in Greenville.

Caulkins, who holds national records in four events, captured four individual titles in the swimming meet a year ago. She started this year's event by winning two.

She captured the 100-meter butterfly with a time of 1:03.29. A short time later she won the 200-meter individual medley with a time of 2:21.77. She also swam the second leg of Nashville Aquatic Club's victorious 400-meter relay team.

Kim Lineham of Sarasota, Fla., YMCA set a new record in the women's 400-meter free style with a time of 4:16.06. Australian Mark Kerry of Indiana University broke a record by swimming the men's 100-meter backstroke in 58.99.

All American Bill Glastetter of Southern Methodist University won the men's 100-meter butterfly with a time of 57.35, finishing just ahead of Greg Jagenburg of Long Beach State.

Grafton Avenges Earlier Net Loss

PORT WASHINGTON, N.Y. (AP) — Charlene Grafton of Gulf Breeze, Fla., retained the 45-year division title in the National Indoor Senior Women's Tennis Championships Sunday by beating top-seeded Nancy Reed, of Winter Park, Fla., 5-7, 6-4, 6-3.

Grafton avenged a loss to Reed in the National Clay Court Championship final last month by rallying to take control of the match after Reed led 5-3 in the first set.

Favorite Judy Alvarez of Tampa, Fla., won the 35-year singles championship with an easy 6-2, 6-2 victory over Susan Anawalt of Montesereno, Cal. Alvarez won six straight games from 3-2 in the first set to 3-0 in the second.

Both losers, however, shared on the doubles championships.

Anawalt teamed with Arlene Cohen of San Francisco to beat Alvarez and Marlene Poletti, Los Gatos, Calif., 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, in the 35-year final.

Reed and Marianna Plant of Winter Park, Fla. won the 45-year final, defeating Gladys Heldman and Leslie Creekmore of Houston, Tex., 6-2, 4-6, 6-4.

Yarborough Takes Flag At Music City

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — It was Cale Yarborough versus the other guys, and the only suspense in Saturday night's Music City 420 Grand National stock car race involved who would wind up in second place.

Yarborough paced the late-model pack all the way, becoming only the third driver in NASCAR Grand National history to lead a race from start to finish.

The victory, worth $7,500, was enough to propel Yarborough past Benny Parsons in the point lead for the national driving championship. The Music City win gives Yarborough his third Grand National victory of this season and 52nd of his career as he bids for an unprecedented third straight driving title.

Yarborough, 38, of Timmonsville, S.C., was locked in a tight battle with Darrell Waltrip, of Franklin, Tenn., until Waltrip went out at the half-way point with rear-end trouble in his 1975 Chevrolet.

"It was one of the easiest races I've ever won," said Yarborough. "I never had a problem. Waltrip wasn't a threat; he wasn't any competition."

He said his only close call came on the 319th lap when Sterling Martin, 20, who was driving in relief for his father, Coo Coo, slammed into a wall.

"I looked up and all of a sudden Sterling was sideways on the track in front of me. I ducked low and missed him just barely. Other than that, I never even was near a hint of trouble."

Lorenzen Cited

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Former driver Fred Lorenzen, one of the early superstars of stock car racing's major league, has been voted into the National Motorsports Press Association Stock Car Racing Hall of Fame.

Association President Benny Phillips of High Point Enterprise said Lorenzen, a real estate agent in his hometown of Elmhurst, Ill., will be the media group's only inductee this year.

Wilson Eyes Bengals

CINCINNATI (AP) — Mike Wilson says he plans to stay within the contract rules to protest the Toronto Argonauts' insistence on keeping him. He would like to join the Cincinnati Bengals.

Wilson, an offensive guard, said he will exercise a clause in his contract which allows him to report to the Canadian Football League team's training camp 10 days late.

"I'll be there on the 15th day," Wilson said Friday in a telephone interview from his home in Gainesville, Fla.

"We play our first exhibition game June 17, two days after I get there. They'll probably play me, but if I don't know the plays."

"I have made no commitment to the Cincinnati Bengals and they haven't offered me a contract. This whole thing is a little premature," Wilson said.

Mike Brown, Bengals assistant general manager, was also present at the session in a Gainesville law office.

"It certainly brought back a lot of memories. Of course, I'm referring to the Bill Bergey trial. Law suits of this kind are a lot of trouble," Brown said.

"You get anxious. You get diverted from your daily business and you spend a lot of money for what little you gain. It's just not good business," Brown said.

The Bengals lost a suit in 1974 against Bergey to stop the now defunct World Football League from signing players still under contract in the NFL. Bergey, now with the Philadelphia Eagles, had signed a future contract with the Virginia Ambassadors.

Publisher Releases Book On Cauthen

NEW YORK (AP) — Dreams are big part of a teen-ager's makeup. But in the case of Steve Cauthen, reality has beaten dreams by many lengths.

He's a smooth-cheeked 18-year-old who in two years of riding race horses has become a major sports celebrity. The degree of his stardom can be measured in that he already is in danger of being misunderstood.

Pete Axthelm tries to understand in a Bantam Book entitled "The Kid" which will be put on the market next Saturday, the day Cauthen tries to win the Triple Crown on Affirmed in the Belmont Stakes.

Axthelm knows racing and racetrackers — he also has done his bit at the mutuel windows to "improve the breed" — and his book not only provides insights into the Cauthen phenomenon, it places the reader inside an insular world of high hopes, broken dreams, hard work, triumphs and more characters than anywhere outside the tight game.

But Axthelm doesn't attempt to explain the magic Cauthen has brought to racing, indeed to sports. If he could, it wouldn't be magic.

"The joy of watching a champion derives in part from the knowledge that thousands of other horses and people have ensured similar abilities and inspired similar hopes only to fall short," writes Axthelm. "The quality that sets the champions apart — whether it is buried deep in the heart of a race horse or exuded magically through the long fingers of a bemused rider — is all the more tantalizing because it defies precise description."

Cauthen's agent Lenny Goodman told trainers, who were still unsure about the then apprentice jockey when he first arrived in New York, "But you're getting an old rider along with it." And Axthelm quotes Hall of Fame jockey Johnny Longden as saying, "Every now and then in every sport, a natural comes along. You can see this kid was born to it."

Cauthen was born to it—his father was a trainer and is a blacksmith, his mother was a trainer from a race-track family. It's what he lives for, and this single-minded dedication to his chosen profession has often been misunderstood as aloofness, especially by members ov the news media.

"I guess that reporters come in different levels of class, just like horses," Cauthen says in the book. "Some of them show that they understand the business and they respect your privacy and your need to concentrate. But others keep pushing at you with their questions of careers until you want to burst. I mean you want to yell at them to just leave you alone. But of course, you don't want to get folks mad or sound like a spoiled kid. So you keep it inside you and it can drive you crazy."

Axthelm, whose attempt to tell about what's inside Steve Cauthen is a true stakes effort, suggests that some misunderstanding between the press and the kid, who as a 12-year-old told his father he wanted to be a jockey, stems from the fact this his accomplishments are played down by the kid.

Writes Axthelm:

"Steve seems to enjoy a built-in sense of perspective about the strange business of sport that is throughbred racing — a calm understanding of the fact that one young man's historic milestone may be for thousands of horseplayers an immediate matter of what it means at the $2 cashier's window.

"To concentrate, because my mind was always on horses. I realized that learning was important. But what I wanted to learn about was horses.

Bulls' GM Continues Hard Work

CHICAGO (AP) — Rod Thorn says he's spent a busy three weeks as general manager of the Chicago Bulls. And the impending selection of a coach won't mean he can slow down.

There's the college draft next Friday, perhaps some trades, and a continuing drive to bring the Bulls back to respectability after a 40-42 season in which they failed to reach the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Thorn said he met Friday with the Bulls' executive committee and recommended a coach. He said the panel had not told him if it had accepted his choice, whom he refused to disclose publicly.

Former Milwaukee Bucks Coach Larry Costello, who ~~met with~~ Thorn Thursday in Chicago, reportedly is the leading candidate for the job. He was a scout for the Houston Rockets last season.

Thorn, who left his assistant coaching job with the New Jersey Nets to become general manager May 12, said he hoped a new coach could be named Monday or Tuesday. Arthur M. Wirtz, a Bulls' owner and a member of the executive committee, said it might be later in the week.

"It's been very tough on me to decide on a candidate because we had so many good ones," said Thorn, who interviewed six persons but refused to name any.

Besides Costello, the others reportedly included three NBA assistant coaches — Jerry Sloan of the Bulls, Stan Albeck of Los Angeles and Chuck Daly of Philadelphia — and former 76er Coach Gene Shue.

Asked if he wanted a coach who favors a running game, Thorn said it depends on the kind of players a team has. "What might be the best coach for our team might not be the best coach for another team.

"It's very nice to get transition baskets because the kind of sag defense used today makes it hard to grind it out."

The Bulls ended the season with a mixture of rookies, former free agents picked up during the season and a nucleus of steady players. Former Coach Ed Badger, who left the last day of the regular season to become head coach of the University of Cincinnati, had criticized some players for not hustling.

"I don't think we need any housecleaning," Thorn said in an interview in his hotel lobby after he returned from the Bulls' offices Friday night. "I think any team can stand some additions."

This year's potential draftees are "not a great crop. I would say anybody drafted in the first 15 could be rookie of the year," said Thorn. The Bulls draft ninth in the first round.

Thorn said that Costello was one of the first persons he interviewed for the coaching job.

Weather OK With Sprinter

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Clancy Edwards, the sizzling sprinter from the University of Southern California, was hoping for hot, sunny weather at the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships at the University of Oregon.

He got his wish, and during the three-day meet that ended Saturday, there was no athlete "hotter" than the 22-year-old senior from Santa Ana, Calif.

He lit the fuse for the Trojans' 27th title in the meet's 57-year history by blazing to victory Friday in the 100-meter dash in a meet record time of 10.07 seconds.

He fueled the flame Saturday by running a leg on Southern Cal's 400-meter relay team that dashed to victory in 39.31.

For his "hero" efforts, particularly his burst of speed after notoriously slow starts, the man who calls his style "the Clancy Classic," was named the meet's outstanding athlete.

Edwards ran a total of nine races — trials, semifinals and finals in each of his three events — during the meet, and he or his team finished first in eight of them. His only non-winning showing was a second-place finish in a trial of the 200.

"He doesn't crack under the pressure," said Southern Cal Coach Vern Wolf after his team had won the title with 59 points. It was the eighth NCAA championship for Wolf in his 15 seasons as coach and made him the second winningest coach in meet history. The leader with 12 titles is Dean Cromwell, who coached the Trojans from 1909-1913 and 1916-1948.

Remarkably, Southern Cal scored in only six events — the 100, 200 and 400-meter dashes, the 400-meter intermediate hurdles and the 400 and mile relay.

"We've always been pretty much of a speed-oriented team — the sprints, the hurdles and the relays," said Wolf. "It (speed) always has been good to us, so we don't want to desert it."

Off the weekend's results, they won't. In addition to Edwards's 20 points in the two sprints and his combining with Kevin Williams, Billy Mullins and James Sanford to win the relay for another 10 points, the Trojans got 10 points in the 400 on a victory by Mullins in 45.33, eight in the hurdles on a second place by Rich Gravbehl, another six in the 200 as Sanford placed third, four for a fourth-place finish in the mile relay and another point in the 100 on a sixth-place finish by Williams.

"I can't remember any of our championship teams being as thin as this one," noted Wolf. "But we're very flexible, except for Clancy. I think the only lap he ever jogged was that victory lap he jogged today (after the 200). And he didn't even look good doing that.

"I can't say we were too surprised at what the kids did," said Wolf. "They've never let us down."

"All right, we're going 1-3," he said enthusiastically.

At that point, only two events — the 5,000-meter race and the mile relay — remained, and Southern Cal had 55 points, with UCLA and Texas-El Paso tied for second with 50 each. UCLA had no entries in the 5,000 and its mile relay team had been disqualified during the trials for causing a California runner to drop the baton.

Champ Defends Title

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Junior lightweight champion Alexis Arguello of Nicaragua had little difficulty defending his World Boxing Council crown for the second time against Diego Alcala of Panama.

Arguello sent his opponent to the canvas with 1:56 gone in the scheduled 15-round fight Saturday. Alcala made an unsuccessful attempt to hold himself up on the ropes. Referee Roberto Ramirez of Puerto Rico then counted him out.

Staged at a neutral site at Roberto Clemente Coliseum, the Arguello-Alcala fight also was shown Saturday in the United States on delayed television by ABC.

"He (Alcala) made a mistake with his timing," the champion said after the fight. "He came just a bit too close and I was able to connect with a solid left to the head. The rest you know." The rest was another left and two rights to the chin.

The 26-year-old Arguello, who weighed 129 pounds, pushed his record to 56-3. He has not lost a fight in four years. Alcala, 31, now has a 37-4 record. He weighed 130.

Arguello first won his title in Puerto Rico last January when he stopped Alfredo Escalarea of Puerto Rico. The Central American champion successfully defended his title against Ray Tam of the Philippines in Las Vegas, Nev., April 23.

The champion said he was considering giving Escalera a chance to regain the title, perhaps later this year. Escalera, whose upper lip was split open in losing the title to Arguello, made a successful first appearance on the same card Saturday with a decision over Rogelio Castaneda of Mexico.

Leonard Gains Experience During Bout

BALTIMORE (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard has crossed the "psychological barrier" of fighting a 10-round match, his manager said after the Olympic Gold Medal winner won his 12th consecutive bout.

Leonard was proclaimed the victor Saturday after his first 10-round welterweight bout against Rafael Rodriguez. It was a unanimous decision.

"The big thing we gained was Ray getting over the psychological barrier of going 10 rounds" said Angelo Dundee, Leonard's manager. "Even if a fighter is in shape, there's always that doubt in his mind when he hasn't done it before.

"I had worked with Rodriguez myself in the past and knew he had a concrete chin. I would have been the most surprised person in the world if Ray had knocked him out," Dundee added. "I knew he was a crafty fighter, but I did think Rodriguez would jump in right at the start and carry the fight."

Apparently that's what Rodriguez's trainer thought, too.

"I don't know what Rafael's problem was," said Alonzo Johnson, a former heavyweight contender who became Rodriguez's trainer this year. "You can't stand back and let Leonard do his thing. He'll punch you to death.

"I kept telling Rafael, 'Take it to him,' but he didn't fight Leonard the way he trained," Johnson added. "He waited much too long and played right into Leonard's hands."

Rodriguez, 21-9-1, said he was fooled by Leonard's tactics.

"Every fight I've seen him on TV, he took the fight to his opponent," the loser said. "I kept waiting for him to come to me so I could counter. He fooled me. He stayed back most of the time and did a lot of dancing."

Referee Tom Kelley scored the fight 50-41, judge Harary Cecchini had it 50-42 and judge Larry Barrett had it 48-45.

Movie Distributor Bets Bucks On Formula

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Can a film producer from Cincinnati find success at the box office with a movie based on a 10-year-old song?

Phil Borack, a booking agent who found too few films to please his Midwest audience, is betting millions that he has found the formula to fill theaters with his first feature, "Harper Valley PTA."

Reluctantly, Borack had come to Hollywood to promote the film, which opened in 425 theaters across the nation over the Memorial Day weekend.

"It is unprecedented for an independent to have that many important theaters set across the country for a holiday period," Borack says.

"This may be proof that an exhibitor can go out and make his own pictures and distribute them himself," he says. "You don't have to be in Hollywood."

If the picture succeeds, Borack says it will show a new desire for simple, old-fashioned fare — the qualities that made "Harper Valley PTA" a hit in 1968.

Remember the song? It told, in country-music style, the tale of a widowed mother who is reprimanded by the PTA at her daughter's school for wearing short dresses, drinking and "a-running 'round with men and going wild." The mother contronts the PTA ladies with a lecture on their own hypocrisy.

That's the story Borack has expanded into a movie starring Barbara Eden, Nanette Fabray and Ronny Cox.

"It's an old fashioned movie. But it could happen any time," he says. "There's been hypocrisy for centuries."

Borack, 42, is head of Tri State Theater Service, the Midwest's largest movie booking company. He began dabbling in film distribution a few years back, acquiring two music-based movies, "Pink Floyd" and "Emerson, Lake and Palmer." Their moderate success inspired Borack to make his own music-related movie.

"I went out and got the top 100 songs for 15 years and I went over and over them," he recalls. "Two songs stood out — 'Ode to Billie Joe' and 'Harper Valley PTA.'"

"They're both classics," he says. "They're both Americana, and they tell a story."

"Billie Joe" already was a film. Borack settled on "Harper Valley," and within a month had raised several million dollars from private investors.

Although the film was shot in Lebanon, Pa., Borack recruited his writer, director and cast in California. "You cannot walk away from Hollywood talent and Hollywood equipment," he admits. Borack handled distribution from his Cincinnati base.

He concedes that "Harper Valley" isn't likely to become a favorite of film buffs. But he doesn't care.

"They are not making enough movies for the average person," Borack says. "Personally, I loved 'The Turning Point.' But there are more people out there who want to see 'Smokey and the Bandit' and Harper Valley PTA."

Poland has an area of 120.7 million square miles, about the size of the state of New Mexico.

Top Greek Moviemaker Excels At Documentaries Of Homeland

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — For Basil Maros, one of Greece's top moviemakers, specialization in documentaries after making a number of successful features was "a choice for freedom."

"Producing a documentary offers freedom from the prototypes forced upon artists by money. One can handle one's subject one's own way and present it to the ever-increasing audience of television viewers," said the 49-year-old film director.

Maros was sitting on a slab of marble on the Acropolis of Athens. It was only 8 in the morning, but he had just finished shooting for the day on a BBC great dancer who came to Greece in 1903 at the age of 25 to seek her ideal form of dance through the expressive movements of the ancient Greek dancers.

To show the majesty of the ancient ruins that inspired Isadora, Maros started shooting at 6 a.m., as the first rays of sun struck the top of the marble monuments of the Acropolis and as the director said "set them on fire."

Isadora learned the movements of ancient Greek dance by studying the dancers on ancient vases and marble reliefs, and Maros is spending time photographing the vases.

"I will try to show movement from still pictures. It can be done because the paintings on ancient vases have their own movement," he said.

The documentary, part of a BBC series on dance, will also be shot in England, Munich and Delphi, where the great dancer inspired the late Greek poet Angelos Sikelianos and his American wife, Eva Palmer, to turn the ancient sanctuary of Apollo into an international center radiating an ecumenical Greek spirit.

Before applying himself to the Isadora project, Maros completed a 50-minute color documentary on the island of Crete, which was shown on Greek television.

It was a very unusual travelogue, based on the life and death aspects of life in Crete and using poems about Crete and its life as part of its script.

Kazantzakis, Seferis, Ritsos and other past and contemporary poets contributed to the script which Maros wove.

"I couldn't get better script writers," said Maros, who also used American expatriate author Charles Haldemann and the late journalist David Holden.

Maros, after working on a number of feature films as a cameraman or assistant director, made his first documentary in 1960. It was a 45-minute takeout on the late actress Katina Paxinou and the ancient theater.

A year later, he put together the Aegean Tragedy, an 85-minute film from old newsreels about Greece's suffering in the war against Turkey in 1922 and the expulsion of over 1.5 million Greeks from Turkey.

His first international success came two years later with a 20-minute documentary on the life of the Greek sponge fishermen of Kalymnos, which won silver medals at the Milan (1966) and Toulon France (1968) film festivals.

In that short documentary, Maros showed how he can dissect a subject and observe it in depth. The life of the islanders who leave their homes every spring to dive for sponges off the north African coast, was shown as a Greek tragedy — where man fights against his fate, but also accepts it.

After Kalymnos, Maros worked at the rate of one documentary a year producing for the BBC or Bavarian television "Greece Without Columns," "Mount Athos," "The Fire Walkers," "Heinrich Schliemann," "Mount Sinai," the "World of Icons," and "Bouzouki: A People's Music," winning prizes at international film festivals for most of them.

Cookbooks Help Solve Problems Of Poor Diet

She also is the author and publisher of two cookbooks for children that have changed her life — and her cooking habits.

Four years ago, Mrs. Lansky, with the help of five other mothers, created "Feed Me! I'm Yours" to help parents get their infants off to a nutritious head start.

The result is "The Taming of the CANDY Monster," published this year, which gives appealing alternatives to parents whose children crave Continuously Advertised Nutritionally Deficient Yummies (CANDY).

"I'm a mother first," says Mrs. Lansky. "I never wanted to be a working mother. I don't see myself as a writer. I write like I'm talking over a cup of coffee. To me, that's not writing, that's sharing.

"'Candy Monster' shows how I have come to deal with the food problem. If this helps you too, that's great."

The book includes both recipes and nutritional information.

Mrs. Lansky — who has a bachelor's degree in art history and met her husband, Bruce, while working in retailing in New York City — says she is not an expert on nutrition and doesn't try to be.

"But I have learned an awful lot. I read everything I can get my hands on," she says. "I'm kind of a middle-of-the-road person, and my books are too."

In "Candy Monster," Mrs. Lansky's chief targets are refined sugar and salt and she advocates a moderate approach to eliminating as much of both as possible from the diet.

"You don't have to give up everything," she says. "Look at your total diet and make reasonable choices. Everyone is looking for the perfect food and the perfect diet, and it's just not there."

The book, which has topped several best seller lists recently, has a sprinkling of humor throughout, as in Mrs. Lansky's favorite dessert recipe:

"NOTTO HAVEONE"

0 cups sugar

0 teaspoons salt

No dash of anything

However, for those who want more taste and texture there are other recipes.

Mrs. Lansky says she and her husband, who together founded Meadowbrook Press to publish her first book, don't totally deprive themselves and their children of sweet and salty foods.

"But we work at it," she says. "My kids usually don't get sodas when we go out because they have to limit themselves to one sweet treat. If they have soda they can't have dessert."

Mrs. Lansky says nutritious snacks don't have to take a lot of time to prepare. "There are always carrots, raisins, nuts, dried fruits and yogurts. I don't stock my house with recipes from my book. They're just for special treats when I feel like it."

Alaska Bush Challenges Television Engineer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Most television engineers work with power lines, transmitters and relay stations. In the Alaska Bush, they also contend with bears, tall trees and glaciers.

Paul Davis recently toured the Kuskokwim River Valley to examine the system used to relay programs from public TV station KYUK in Bethel. And because there are no roads connecting the 24 villages served by KYUK, Davis conducted his spring survey in a Cessna 206 piloted by the TV system's installation and maintenance contractor, Don Porter.

They covered 1,300 miles in two days, conducting fly-by exams of seven sites and on-site inspections of seven others in the system.

KYUK is the only television station in the country licensed to carry programs offered by all three commercial networks. And as a member of the Public Broadcasting Service network, it's the only non-commercial station that carries commercial programming.

The station is on the air during the school year from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. with educational fare. During the rest of the year it broadcasts a mix of public and commercial shows from 3 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

A typical program day in May included "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood," "Sesame Street" and "Austin City Limits" from PBS, news in the Eskimo language, the "NBC Nightly News," and "Little House on the Prairie," "Happy Days," "Hardy Boys-Nancy Drew Mystery Hour" and an NBC Big Event, "The Moneychangers," from commercial TV.

It's the only TV available to the 7,000 people in the villages served by KYUK, making Davis' tour that much more important.

The translator at the Barometer Mountain site had not been working because of a power line failure. Power to the site runs through seven miles of wire laid between the mountain and the town of Red Devil.

The problem was resolved when Porter routed the line around the glacier. But that didn't alleviate another problem — bears.

Davis said he was told the difficulty was "self-compounded by the fact that a trail which he had to clear through the willows on the way up the mountain for power line access now is also heavily used by bears in the fall."

Davis said the beastly traffic would not be much of a problem, except that the bears notice the line and chew on it.

At Kalskag, Davis saw what Porter had done to prevent damage from vibration caused by constant winds. The problem had been a constant one, he said, because "the elements of antennas for those (low-band) channels are just big enough to cause them to catch the wind and vibrate themselves to death.

"To design them with heavy enough structure to avoid vibration, on the other hand, would make them too heavy and difficult to be erected in the field without incurring more costs than are usually allowable," he said.

Davis said Porter had solved the problem "by simply tying willow branches to the antenna elements. The branches provide good vibration damping while retaining high flexible strength under all the environmental conditions encountered."

Little-Known Spot In Wales Site Of Ancient Roman Mine

PUMSAINT, Wales (UPI) — Now it is a steep green hill pitted with holes. Once it was the Klondike, the Mother Lode, the ancestor of all gold rushes in the 1,900 years since its heyday.

This was the second largest gold mine in the whole Roman empire. Now it is an eerie place, a puzzling relic whose solitude mocks the massive enterprise operated here by the legions which conquered Wales.

of Pondon, explains Roman mining methods and provides guidebooks to the mines. A map directs you up a short footpath.

You come out onto a wide flat platform with steep rock walls forming a rough U-shape. The righthand wall has a tunnel into its base. Hollows pockmark the slope. Gradually you make out other tunnels among the trees.

That seems to be all.

But suddenly it becomes apparent that this is actually the Roman gold mine itself.

The flat U-shaped area is an "opencast" gash hacked out of the hillside by Roman miners. The tunnel is Roman, the pits and hollows in the slopes are Roman.

Close study of the guidebook reveals that this extensive gash is barely the fringe of the Dolaucothi gold mines. The more you investigate the clearer it becomes that this was an industry of astonishing size.

Like Alaska's Klondike or California's Mother Lode, the Dolaucothi gold mines changed history's course. Historians think they were one main reason why the Romans conquered Wales in about A.D. 75.

"Mineral rights were vested in the emperor," a mines guidebook says, and gold was the army's responsibility. This meant no expense or effort was spared. Dolaucothi employed the "most advanced mining techniques" then known.

It takes some steep scrambling and perhaps a little imagination to appreciate this today. Dripping man-made caves and a flock of tunnels add atmosphere — two Roman tunnels can be safely entered. Yet the very scale of the mines — their pits and opencast workings spread over two hills — makes them difficult to comprehend.

The key to Roman mining techniques was water. What Dolaucothi displays is a vast tangle of hydraulic remains.

Roman miners dug four wide aqueducts to this spot, one of them seven miles long. Some sections of the aqueduct ditches along the hillsides still can be followed.

The aqueducts fed water into huge rectangular tanks, dug from the slopes. There are at least 11 remaining reservoir pits, one with a natural "wall" 55 feet thick to hold back its tons of water.

Romans used jets of water to wash away topsoil and loosen goldbearing rocks. Or they breached a storage tank wall and water flooded down the slopes to expose more ore. Some scars now visible probably were made this way.

Gold-bearing ore recovered from the surface or from underground tunnels was pulverized by hand, then sluiced to wash away powdered rock and leave the heavier gold behind.

More than a ton of rock had to be pulverized to recover one ounce of gold, which was then sent to imperial mints in Lyons and perhaps Rome. The labor involved was enormous.

So the Romans built "a substantial settlement" for the miners, complete with "various industrial sites," in the valley below the mines. Nothing can be seen now, but archeologists say this mine town was "in existence shortly after 75 A.D.," when the Romans marched into Wales.

The Dolaucothi mines were worked twice more after the Romans left. Some relics visible today are from these periods, 1870 to 1910 and 1934 to 1939 — although modern miners mostly used Roman entrances and galleries.

"But the present shape of the mines," the guidebook says, "goes back substantially to the Roman period, and has been little affected" either by modern mining or by 19 centuries of time.

AUTOMOBILE ARBITRATION

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. says it will experiment with binding arbitration to settle disputes between customers and dealers in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area. The Better Business Bureau of Minnesota will attempt to settle customer-dealer squabbles through mediation and if it fails, will supply a panel of arbitrators. The parties will agree on one, whose decision will be final. The No. 1 automaker follows Ford in testing the idea.

Violence: Can Health, Nutrition Be Causes?

(EDITOR's NOTE: A 2-year-old whirling dervish; a 13-year-old who stabbed and killed a playmate weren't only difficult, destructive, antisocial children — they both had health problems. In this exclusive three-part series, current research along with case studies about the effects that health and nutrition are having among children and adults across the country are examined in-depth — yielding some surprising results.)

By JONATHAN WINER

The notion that health, like nutrition, may be a factor in juvenile to treatment of these profound social problems. It is easier to improve a person's health than to improve many of the other aspects of his environment. If each factor (usually in combination with other factors) contributes to antisocial behavior, simply improving health and reducing malnutrition could make profound changes in American social illness.

That concept also makes clearer the place of medication in the treatment of delinquents and children having problems in school. Delinquents subject to psychomotor epileptic attacks may improve their behavior rapidly when given anti-epileptic medication. Delinquents who have suffered repeated head injuries may be able to perceive reality better with medication. Students who do badly in school may learn much better when helped by drugs which increase their ability to focus attention and concentrate as normal students do.

MIT's Richard Wurtman believes that future biochemical research may suggest special diets that could help brain-damaged people. "If early traumas or malnutrition have in fact reduced the number of neurons in the brain," he said, "it may be possible to use certain diets to cause surviving neurons to work extra hard."

This procedure is already used in treating Parkinson's disease. Patients with the illness are given L-Dopa, a chemical precursor to the neurotransmitter dopamine, causing those neurons which survive to compensate for the ones no longer operating.

Wurtman is careful to note that theoretical applications of biochemistry are just that — theoretical. There is no evidence that proves that any given person's violence or learning problems can necessarily be treated biocemically.

"Early malnutrition may reduce neurons," Wurtman explained. "So might head trauma, or an inadequate social environment. But no one has shown that yet."

Nevertheless, stimulated by this and other concepts linking health, nutrition and behavior, the Ford Foundation committed $500,000 in 1976 and 1977 to researchers investigating these connections.

Moreover, it has become increasingly obvious that changes in American public policy toward medical care could make profound changes in the opportunities available to juveniles like Travis or Gail whose behavioral problems can be treated only after their physical problem are recognized.

Given the notion that health and behavior are interrelated, two Boston child psychiatrists who have studied both child development and public policy have strong criticisms of the present public health programs in the United States.

"We are very paternalistic as a society about taking care of children from the ages of 5 through 18," Melvin Levine of Harvard University and Children's Hospital noted. "But we have zero control from ages 0 to 5. Perhaps we should be more liberating later and more concerned with health care and proper education in the primary years than we are now."

Leon Eisenberg, also of Harvard and Children's Hospital, concurred. "It is unfortunate that the United States expends so little energy to insure good prenatal nutrition and neonatal care," he said.

Eisenberg noted further that even general early health screening is inadequate to insure public health when there is no backup service that treats people for their problems. He commends the British home care visitor system as the model of a community outreach program because, "If you follow up through the early years, you can make quite a difference in overall health.

Last In A Series

In the past, such public health programs in the United States have seldom related health to social behavioral problems. Food interventions such as school lunches or food supplementation for women and small children have rarely been evaluated for their effects on behavior.

However, one Federal nutrition program for low income pregnant and lactating women, infants and children up to 5 years of age (acronymed WIC), which gave food and nutritional education to one million persons last year has already been effective in reducing the rate of iron deficiency anemia and hence the kind of learning deficits found by MIT nutritionist Ernesto Politt.

Politt himself is now conducting a study that will seek to determine whether eating breakfast or not eating breakfast makes a difference in how a child performs each day in school.

According to Dr. Donald J. Cohen of the Yale Child Study Center, health factors, nutritional factors and social factors can all add up to cause serious behavioral problems like violence even if each one alone might have no such effect. A mild learning problem which has no ultimate influence on the life of a middle-class child whose parents give him extra training may become a potent factor in the flunking out of school of a child with a bad home life. A brain defect that encourages impulsive action may make one child a little wild — and another, with untavorable cultural and sociological factors to contend with, a violent delinquent.

Studies comparing the medical histories of delinquent children with those of non-delinquent children from the same background undertaken by fellow Yale psychiatrist Dorothy Otnow Lewis support Cohen's multi-factor theory.

Dr. Lewis found that delinquents went to the hospital an average almost twice as often as non-delinquents. They had more accidents, more head injuries, were more often abused as children (and thus physically battered) and had more psychiatric symptoms.

In fact, according to a still-unpublished study by Lewis, the more violent the delinquent, the more likely that the delinquent has serious physical problems.

It is common for delinquents to be dismissed as sociopaths after they have committed a series of violent acts. But Lewis considers the term to be an inappropriate diagnosis in most cases.

"Many of these children have severe perceptual problems, others have psychomotor epilepsy, some may be eminently dangerous, but they are not wicked. They have been physically injured and may have impaired control of impulses. That's very different from the premeditated wish to get even. Furthermore, it's treatable," Lewis said.

• • •

More than two-thirds of a century ago, one of the first and greatest modern students of human behavior said that "we must never forget that the mental is based on the organic."

Sigmund Freud remains convinced of this view, although his own career never brought him close to understanding the mechanics of the relationship between behavior and health.

Today, our own medical, criminal and educational researchers are only beginning to move toward that very view. While biology may be destiny, it is also true that we are what we eat. And what we were yesterday, we need not be tomorrow.

Top Presidential Aide In Limbo

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once upon a time, an obscure politician from upstate New York, the daughter of a Sicilian sausage maker, was named assistant to the President of the United States.

Her name was Margaret Costanza, known to most everyone as Midge.

She worked long hours and spoke her mind freely. Seventeen months later, she was bumped from a prestigious office next door to the president to a cubicle in the White House basement. Her title and $56,000-a-year salary remained intact. But her immediate staff was stripped to one secretary, and her duties, which once included a myriad of special interest and minority groups, assistants, former and current staffers, constituents and Miss Costanza herself, is one of a president and chief aide who find it almost impossible to fire someone; of a senior advisor who is viewed by many as loyal but politically ineffective; and of a woman, who for reasons both political and personal, refuses to quit.

Miss Costanza defends her performance, denies she is being demoted and says the president has never criticized her work — and that it's his judgment that matters.

Yet, top staffers say she has ignored repeated signals to quit and that in her new job as head of a women's task force, she is being given one last chance.

Some White House staffers say Miss Costanza would have been fired had the administration not feared a backlash from women's groups. Others insist that Carter is being compassionate by finding another place for her in his administration.

"If she were a banker, a lawyer, a doctor or some other professional with a career to fall back on, we may have let her go back to private life," one key aide said.

Both women's movement activists who support Miss Costanza, and those who don't, share a common resentment: she has lost clout in the White House and has been restricted to "women's issues."

The move comes at a crucial time for the women's rights movement. The Equal Rights Amendment has only nine months to be ratified and a blueprint for action on many issues adopted by the National Women's Conference in Houston last fall awaits implementation.

"The perception is that the president is downgrading a strong commitment to the equality and advancement of women," said Mildred Jeffrey, head of the National Women's Political Caucus.

Miss Costanza herself argues that by letting her keep an office in the White House, however small, Carter is making it clear that he is not putting women's issues aside.

"The president told me, 'Midge, I need you.'" Miss Costanza said. "He assured me my access will be the same as it's always been."

However, aides say she has rarely used what access she has, and that she doesn't have the political sophistication or personal security to know when it's important enough to ask to see Carter.

"It takes guts to walk in and say, 'I need five minutes of your valuable time,'" concedes one staffer. "With Midge, there is a sense of insecurity."

Several of Miss Costanza's associates say also she usually skipped the weekly senior staff meetings where problems of the day are discussed. She sent an aide instead.

The result, aides say, is that she became increasingly isolated from the flow of White House information, that she sometimes didn't know when key decisions had been made until Carter announced them publicly.

Last March, minutes before Carter addressed women's leaders at a White House ceremony, Miss Costanza told reporters the president had not yet decided whether to create a high level task force on women. Five minutes later, Carter announced he had.

A source familiar with both Miss Costanza and Hamilton Jordan, Carter's unofficial chief of staff, said Carter's chief aide gave Miss Costanza repeated signals to quit.

"She told people in the White House that if they limited her to women's issues, she'd quit," the source said. "So they limited her to women's issues. She told people that if they moved her office, she'd quit. So they moved her office. She said if they moved her to the EOB, she'd quit. So Hamilton said she'd be moving to the EOB."

Jordan denies this. "We didn't try to send her signals," he said. "There was never any talk of how to get rid of Midge. I didn't want her to quit, and the president didn't."

However, others said that even after her duties and staff were stripped, Miss Costanza did not take her case to Carter until informed she would be moving. After she argued that the public might conclude that he was putting women's issues aside, Carter agreed to let her keep a small office in the White House. But her six staffers have been detailed to the Labor Department where they are considered 60-to-90 day consultants.

Many agreed that Miss Costanza's forte has been show-and-tell: giving informal White House tours, delighting campus audiences and press club crowds with "inside" White House stories, pleasing liberals by publicly criticizing Carter's anti-abortion policy. And she has been roundly considered gutsy by being the first of his top aides to call for the resignation of Carter's budget director, Bert Lance.

But many who have worked with her add that she lacks the ability to translate her enthusiasm into action and that she hasn't mastered the substance of some of the key issues she deals with.

"I don't think she is sensitive to political reality," said Rep. Cleta Deatherage, a Democratic state legislator from Oklahoma. "She doesn't know enough about where we are in the women's movement and the ERA."

A former member of the International Women's Year Commission put it this way: "She doesn't know the issues and has chosen some of the wrong things to speak out about and let some of the important economic issues go by."

There are two sides to Miss Costanza, who was vice mayor of Rochester, N.Y., before being plucked from virtual obscurity to become one of six top presidential aides. There's the irrepressible Midge: witty, irreverent, wisecracking, street-smart and frequently profane.

Most agree she has succeeded in opening the White House door to dozens of groups who previously felt ignored.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. — We accumulate substantial amounts of our employer's stock — mostly at much higher prices. Should we consider selling it and taking a tax loss even though we feel it may come back?

A. — I don't see why you shouldn't take advantage of that loss for tax purposes, assuming there are no company plan restrictions on selling stock. However, if you feel recovery chances are good, why not wait until the year's end to sell and then buy back (after a 31-day interval).

Q. — How long may we keep E bonds we bought in 1941 and 1942? What interest do we get on them?

A. — As of the moment, your bonds won't mature finally until 1981 and 1982. In the meantime they grow at their rate of 6 percent a year.

Q. — I was hoping you would print some advise for me (widow of 72) about some 10¾ percent bonds I took in exchange for other bonds. I'm worried about them.

A. — A high coupon bond selling at a deep discount from par is by definition a high-risk situation. Beyond that I will not discuss specific high-risk investments in this space because I have found in the past that such mention is often interpreted as endorsement.

Sorry.

Q. — Please tell me how to figure the yield of Republic Steel. I acquired 33 shares some years ago at 35¾.

A. — The price at which you acquired the stock has no bearing on its present yield. Republic Steel last year paid a dividend of $1.60 a share. On the day your letter arrived, it sold at 24 1/4. If you divide 160 by 24 1/2 you get a yield of 6.35 percent.

Q. — I am 28 years old with $25,000 to invest for a short time — two or three. I will be getting married then and will want the money to buy a home. Should I plan on making a large or small down payment?

A. — If you want the money in two or three years, I think the only place for it is in an insured savings cerificate maturing when you think you will want it.

When you do get around to buying, put down a modest payment — borrow the rest on a mortgage. Over the many years ahead for you, you'll be paying off that debt in cheaper dollars.

Q. — You once wrote about preferreds, so I bought some. Now I've been told that they may be called in, paid off.

A. — I've stressed the possibility of a redemption every time I've mentioned preferreds as an investment. If you fear a redemption, don't buy a preferreds selling above the call price.
