Chinese reformer stripped of power

BEIJING (AP) — China's hard-line leaders stripped Communist Party chief Zhao Ziyang of his post and placed him under house arrest in a purge of officials who supported demands for political reforms, sources said today.

Zhao lost power in a bitter fight with Premier Li Peng, Chinese and diplomatic sources said. Li last week ordered a crackdown on students occupying Tiananmen Square to press demands for a freer society and cleaner government. Soldiers are deployed on the outskirts of Beijing, but tens of thousands of citizens have prevented them from entering the city by surrounding the convoys and setting up barricades. The soldiers have retreated to nearby barracks.

■ Related story, Page 12C

The student occupation of Tiananmen entered its 14th day today. An overnight rock concert by some students contributed to a festive atmosphere.

According to sources, officials who have worked under Zhao to chart political and economic reforms will face disciplinary action, and some will lose their jobs. Those reported in trouble include the party's propaganda chief, Hu Qili, and Vice Premier Tian Jiyun.

The reports could not be officially confirmed.

Although the number of students in Tiananmen Square has dwindled to 20,000, leaders said those remaining were committed to continuing their occupation.

"It's going to get more complex. We cannot ascertain what the leaders intentions are, but we will not leave the square," said a student leader from Qinhua University who gave only his last name, Xin.

Zhao has been a leading proponent of market-oriented economic reforms championed by 84-year-old senior leader Deng Xiaoping, but the two differ over political change. Zhao has expressed sympathy with the student protesters, whose campaign evolved into a nationwide movement involving millions of people.

President Yang Shangkun, a Deng ally, told top officials Thursday Zhao's actions "had a very bad effect" on the nation, a government source said.

Chinese and diplomatic sources said Zhao was under house arrest. A document circulated today to county- and district-level party officials said Zhao was no longer head of the party, according to a diplomat who has proved reliable in the past. No successor was named in the document.

Sources said conservatives accused Zhao of heading an anti-party clique, splitting the party, instigating disturbances, revealing party secrets, corruption and taking credit for Deng's achievements during the past decade of economic reform.

Point of order derails four-year status for UTPB

By RICK BROWN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A point of order from a Midland representative Thursday stymied, at least temporarily, legislative efforts to add lower-level classes to the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Rep. Tom Craddick, who opposes the expansion because of potential adverse effects on two-year Midland College, raised the question while the House was considering a similar proposal for the University of Texas at Dallas.

The amendment's author, Rep. Gary Watkins, D-Odessa, had told the chamber that "we feel like we deserve this four-year institution more than anybody in the state, but we feel like we can earn it on its merits."

If the amendment had survived, any expansion would have required assent from the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board and the University of Texas Board of Regents and could not have taken effect until September 1991.

Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, had attached the UTPB proposal during Senate consideration of the UT-Dallas bill, but the House Higher Education Committee, of which Watkins is a member, removed it.

Watkins had arrived late to a committee meeting and was unable to protect what he told the House was "one of the most important reasons" he sought election.

Craddick's point of order Thursday asked House Speaker Gib Lewis to rule the UTPB proposal was not germane to a bill that by that time was intended to help only UT-Dallas, a point Lewis upheld.

Craddick said later that a four-year UTPB remains an active proposition because of Montford's earlier Senate action.

Now, "They have to go back to the Senate and concur" on the House changes, Craddick said. "If it goes to conference committee ... they could get it back on."

Montford Thursday said he had been "hopeful" that Watkins would be successful in the House, "but I knew the speaker was going to take it out on a point of order."

In the final days of the session, "anything can happen," said Montford of prospects for eventual success. He guessed Senate consideration could come as soon as Saturday.

"I'm not a fillibustering sort," said the senator, "but if I feel I'm being run over, I will.

"And I don't appreciate the way that Gary was treated in (the Higher Education) committee," he said.

While Craddick was unsure of Senate prospects, Watkins said expansion has "a 50-50 shot."

After his amendment was thwarted, Watkins attempted to have the entire bill scotched by raising at least seven other points of order.

Lewis upheld none of them, but Watkins felt he had to try the maneuvers because UTPB and UT-Dallas are "sister institutions" that were created the same year, he said.

Any attempt for one to go four-year should include the other "at the same time," he said.

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A fire sparked in a dry field of mesquite spread quickly through a vacant mobile home, barn and two storage buildings in south Midland before it was contained by dozens of weary firefighters working in Thursday's 104-degree heat.

Two firefighters overcome by thick black smoke from a pile of burning tires were treated for smoke inhalation at the scene, officials said.

No other injuries were reported from the blaze, which broke out about 4 p.m. south of Francis Street, and just east of the East Industrial Loop. A police officer spotted the smoke and turned in the first alarm, according to reports.

The fire may have been set deliberately, Fire Marshal Jerry Petree said today.

"It is very possible," Petree said. "Last Friday, we had five separate fires that were set intentionally. It happened again Thursday. We are just having too many fires that are breaking out simultaneously."

Along with the Francis Street fire, grass fires were also reported at about the same time at Loop 250 and U.S. Highway 80, and at Midkiff and Interstate 20, adding to Petree's suspicion.

Bush may offer troop reductions at summit

ROME (AP) — President Bush began a four-nation European trip today, declaring the United States wants a "stronger and more united Europe" as he headed to a NATO summit where an arms-control dispute threatens allied unity.

With the North Atlantic Treaty Organization embroiled in a major dispute about nuclear weapons policy, The Washington Times reported that Bush planned to use the summit as the stage for announcing a reduction of up to 10 percent in U.S. troop strength in Europe, "as many as 34,000 troops."

White House officials declined immediate comment.

"Anything we have to say, we'll say in Europe," said spokesman Bill Harlow. The chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Sam Nunn, told CBS News that a 10 percent reduction "is the probable amount of reduction that would occur if the Soviet Union accepted the NATO proposal on conventional arms control which is now tabled."

A senior NATO official, asked by reporters in Brussels about the report, said "our delegations here on the spot have not been apprised of this." He spoke on condition of anonymity.

West German government spokesman Herbert Schmuelling said in Bonn, "We have no official word of such a decision." Some 250,000 U.S. troops are stationed in West Germany.

In his departure remarks, Bush provided no hint of a significant American counter to recent Soviet arms proposals. He said, "The importance of the alliance and its democratic underpinnings is the message I now take to Europe."

Bush, upon arriving at the first stop of his trip in Rome noted that, "Since ancient times, the saying goes, "All roads lead to Rome" and it's still true. It is fitting that here I begin my first trip to Europe as president of the United States."

Bush praised U.S.-Italy ties of friendship and said "The United States welcomes a stronger and more united Europe." He said he plans to be "actively engaged in Eastern Europe, promoting measures to encourage political and economic liberalization in Poland."

Slow down, buckle up for safety, DPS says

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Drivers preparing to hit the road for the long Memorial Day weekend should buckle up and avoid the deadly mix of speeding and alcohol, area law enforcement agencies warn.

"We don't have that many people traveling, but it is the traditional start of the vacation season," said Awilda Cartagena, safety and education trooper for the Department of Public Safety.

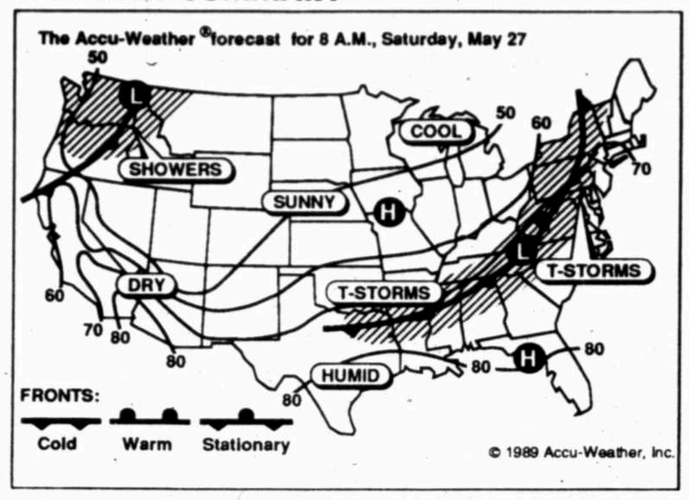

"Our normal enforcement program is in place. We will be watching for excessive speed, DWIs and seat-belt violations."

The safety belts are especially important, and not only because this week is "Buckle Up Texas" week, according to officers.

COOL

From Staff Reports

The National Weather Service is calling for more pleasant weather by Saturday as Midlanders begin to observe the Memorial Day holiday weekend.

Unlike Thursday's high of 104 degrees — which capped the sixth consecutive day of 100-degree or more temperatures — forecasters said today's high would only climb to the mid-90s.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms are possible through tonight in West Texas. Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s, with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. Winds will be easterly at 10 to 20 mph.

Saturday, skies are expected to be mostly cloudy, with cooler temperatures and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. The high will be in the mid-80s, with easterly winds at 10 to 20 mph, becoming southeasterly by midday.

Forecasters say temperatures will begin to warm again by Sunday and continue through Monday under sunny skies.

So far, the month of May has seen eight days where the high temperature exceeded 100 degrees, according to NWS headquarters at Midland International Airport.

Thursday's high of 104 broke the 36-year-old record of 101 degrees, set on May 25, 1953. The overnight low of 66 was 18 degrees warmer than the record of 48, set on this date in 1950.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms are possible through tonight in West Texas east of the mountains and in extreme northern portions of North Texas.

But forecasts are calling for more pleasant weather for the entire state by Saturday as Texans begin to observe the Memorial Day holiday weekend.

Forecasts are calling for clear to partly cloudy skies for the remainder of the holiday weekend.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s, ranging from the 50s in the Panhandle to the 70s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Highs Saturday will be in the 70s and 80s across West Texas and in the 80s and 90s over the rest of the state.

Skies were mostly clear at dawn across West Texas and mostly cloudy over the rest of the state.

A low pressure center was located at the surface near Midland at dawn today and a frontal boundary extended from the low eastward to near Abilene and Paris.

NATION

Scattered severe thunderstorms extended from the lower Great Lakes into the Ohio Valley early today, hours after a wave of thunderstorms caused flooding and tornadoes in Indiana and Ohio.

Six people suffered storm-related injuries in central Indiana Thursday, including a Markleville woman who injured her leg when a tree crashed through the living room of her mobile home, authorities said.

Elsewhere in the state, a tornado touched down in Portland Mills, and strong thunderstorm winds blew down a barn and trees in Jay County and knocked out windows at a courthouse in Rockville. Golf ball-size hail pounded Gaston, Fishers and northern sections of Indianapolis.

By early today, up to 5 inches of rain had fallen across central Indiana since Thursday afternoon. People had to be rescued from their cars because of flooding along creeks in northwest Indianapolis and flood waters were waist deep in Carmel.

Heavy rain also fell across parts of west-central Ohio, and roads were flooded across parts of northeast Ohio.

A tornado in northwest Ohio in Fayette, about 30 miles west of Toledo, damaged buildings, ripped the tops off trees and turned around cars and blew out their windows early Thursday, authorities said. No injuries were reported.

Black smoke boils up from the scene of a grass and junk fire in south Midland Thursday that took hours to extinguish. The smoke, aided by gusty winds, was visible across a wide area of Permian Basin.

FIRE

Streets several blocks from where the fire started were blocked off by police, and along with 20 firefighters, at least seven pumpers and a 2,000-gallon tanker from the Midland Fire Department, volunteers from the Greenwood department and Northeast Midland County rushed to the scene.

City and county officials, and representatives from the Texas Railroad Commission also responded.

The blaze, whipped by swirling 20 mph winds from the southwest, cut through the six-foot high mesquite and brush and had reached a tire pit and collection of junk cars by the time firefighters arrived.

Police — who initially reported toxic fumes in the area — began warning area businesses.

"It has already jumped Cloverdale Road," said police Sgt. Richard Faulkenberry at the hectic scene. "I don't know what it is, but I've been told to tell people to think about leaving."

Other officers at the scene said they had been told the Environmental Protection Agency had classified the burning material as "hazardous."

No evacuations were ordered, but firefighters had a hard time keeping up with the blaze, which spread about two miles before it was halted. An estimated 15,000 gallons was used by city trucks alone, but at times the supply of water was short.

At the western edge of the burn area, fire inspector Emmett Roch discovered a half-dozen tires and two mattresses. The fire may have started at that spot, he said.

By 7 p.m., the fire was contained and trucks began returning to their stations.

Sherrie Vogel of 2002 Cottonflat Road said "God saved our home." Fire surrounded her mobile home shortly after Mrs. Vogel and her two children had evacuated the area.

"It was a miracle," she said, describing the blackened earth which extended under her home. The intense heat melted a portion of the skirting around the home, but the house itself stood unscathed, "it isn't even smoke-damaged."

DPS

Several recent deaths from traffic accidents could have been prevented if safety belts had been worn, Ms. Cartagena said.

In one of the most recent accidents, Brian Allen Semple, 19, of Midland, was killed April 16 in a one-vehicle accident. According to the DPS, Semple lost control of his vehicle on State Highway 191, and when the vehicle flipped over, he was thrown through a window.

He was not wearing a safety belt.

"We want people to buckle up, slow down, and please don't drink and drive," Ms. Cartagena said.

Police also will be watching for violators, spokesman Cpl. Jim White said.

"Slow down and wear your seat belts," he said.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said his officers — who don't normally enforce traffic laws — will be on the lookout this weekend.

"We usually assist DPS, but if the officers see a violation, they can take action," Painter said.

With the recent hot spell and a three-day weekend for many Midlanders, calls to all public safety agencies are expected to increase.

"The calls do go up," the sheriff said. "Anytime you give people more time to drink, you see more action out there."

The DPS also has noted the heat, and is offering tips to drivers who may be planning to cover long stretches of road.

"The condition of the vehicle should be checked before you get out on the road," Ms. Cartagena said. "Drivers should take frequent breaks, and if possible driving duties should be rotated."

The afternoon heat and long, flat segments of highway — combined with a heavy meal — can also make the most seasoned driver sleepy, she added.

Safety belts seem to be the concern of most agencies this time of year, and as if to emphasize the point, crash test dummies Vince and Larry visited the DPS Midland office on Thursday.

When the state seat-belt law went into effect, driver compliance was estimated by the DPS at about 15 percent. Now, 60 percent of Texas drivers are buckling up.

"We still have 40 percent we have to get to," Ms. Cartagena said. "But we are number one in the nation as far as wearing safety belts is concerned."

Foley to succeed Wright; Battle brews for second slot

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats, anticipating a historic resignation next week of Speaker Jim Wright, are making plans for quickly promoting Majority Leader Thomas S. Foley of Washington to the powerful speaker's post.

But intrigue is brewing for filling in the rest of the party leadership slots as some Democrats worry that Rep. Tony Coelho, Foley's likely successor, could hurt the party because of questions about his own financial dealings.

Foley, talking with reporters Thursday in Seattle, said he spoke to Wright earlier in the day and the speaker "repeated his desire to have an opportunity to state his case, his side of the case, to the widest possible audience, and he's determined to take that opportunity at the first time that seems appropriate."

"I assume that will be with either next week or shortly thereafter."

Leadership sources in the Capitol said arrangements were being made for Wright to make a resignation address to the House next Wednesday, but the speaker himself had not yet decided on his precise course of action.

Wright, D-Texas, remained secluded in his office Thursday, but he released a statement making clear he no longer was seeking any "plea bargain" with the House ethics committee.

One of the most serious charges made by the ethics committee was that Wright's wife, Betty, was given a no-work job by Wright's friend and business partner, George Mallick. House rules prohibit gifts from people with interest in legislation, and the committee said it believed Mallick, a Fort Worth developer, had an interest.

NATO

In his departure remarks at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington, the president said, "NATO has been a success by any measure but success breeds its own challenges. Today, dramatic changes are taking place in Europe, East and West. For us, those changes bring new challenges and unparalleled opportunities."

Bush expressed hopes to see a Europe "that is truly free, united and at peace" and repeated his desire to move beyond the Cold War policy of containment "to integrate the Soviet Union into the community of nations."

Bush added: "We welcome the political and economic liberalization that has taken place so far in the Soviet Union and in some countries of Eastern Europe. We watch hoping that more changes will follow."

In Rome, the president planned a two-night stay and talks with Pope John Paul II as well as with Italian leaders.

Manfred Woerner, who is NATO's chief executive, said failure to settle a dispute over nuclear weapons would be "a rather unfortunate situation but it would not be a crisis or a catastrophe."

Amid growing doubts in Washington that a settlement was near, Woerner said in Brussels he would like the allies to reach an agreement "and avoid the impression of being split in an important matter."

Setting the stage for the NATO meeting, Bush will deliver a speech Sunday at an American cemetery in Nettuno, on Italy's seacoast 39 miles south of the capital. Later Sunday, the president will arrive in Brussels where leaders of the 16-nation alliance will begin two days of formal talks on Monday. From Brussels, Bush will go to West Germany and Britain.

The summit, called to mark NATO's 40th anniversary and its success in keeping the peace in Europe, was thrown off track in advance by a dispute over short-range nuclear missiles in central Europe.

The chief players in the argument are West Germany, which is demanding East-West negotiations soon to curb the missiles, and the United States and Britain, which oppose such talks as long as the Soviet Union maintains a major advantage in ground troops, tanks and other conventional weapons.

The missiles, with a range of less than 300 miles, are largely deployed in West Germany and would be used there in the case of war.

The Bonn-Washington dispute is aggravated by a tide of disarmament sentiment in West Germany, fanned by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's promises to reduce conventional and nuclear forces.

On the eve of his departure, Bush received a message from West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, the latest in a series of proposals and counterproposals. However, the White House said the two sides remained at an impasse.

"Our attitude from the beginning has been that we would like to reach an agreement on this before the summit, but if not, we'll discuss it there," said Bush's press secretary, Marlin Fitzwater. "If it's not resolved there, we'll discuss it in follow-on consultations."

Emphasizing that the dispute will not shake the foundations of NATO, Fitzwater said, "We don't believe it will overwhelm or dominate the summit and it should not and will not be allowed to."

In Brussels, Woerner said, "This alliance has lived with differences of opinion all through its very successful lifetime, and if this question is not solved today it will be solved tomorrow."

The West German government also is resisting a joint U.S.-British effort to more than triple the range of Lance missiles to just below 300 miles. However, a decision on modernizing the weapons has been put off until 1992.

Bush's trip, his first to Europe as president, is seen as an important step as he tries to establish himself as a world statesman and attempts to counter Gorbachev's success in projecting himself as a peacemaker.

"It's nothing new that a new president faces a test from Moscow," said Burton Pines, senior vice president and director of research at the Heritage Foundation. "The first test of Bush is not coming from Moscow. It's Bonn which is testing the new president."

Two sources said National People's Congress Chairman Wan Li was under detention in Shanghai, and one source said a member of the party's decision- making Politburo was also under house arrest.

Leaders of the tens of thousands of students still in Tiananmen Square said they had not changed their resolution to stay, despite the latest reports.

"It's going to get more complex. We cannot ascertain what the leaders' intentions are, but we will not leave the square," said a student from Qinhua University who gave only his last name, Xin.

The reports were not the first time top leaders were said to be in trouble during the power struggle, but the official media have indicated the conservatives are winning the battle for power.

The official People's Daily newspaper reported today that all seven of the nation's military districts were backing Li's martial law decree.

State-run newspapers Thursday prominently displayed a letter from military commanders supporting the crackdown.

Li appeared on nationwide television Thursday for the first time in six days and defended martial law.

Zhao has not appeared in public since May 19, although a Foreign Ministry spokesman said Thursday that Zhao retained his post.

President Yang — speaking to Politburo members, retired revolutionary leaders and Beijing delegates of the national legislature — said troops surrounding Beijing eventually would assume control of the city's streets, the Chinese source said.

The 81-year-old president said the army would not move immediately "in order not to worsen the situation," according to the source.

Two sources said Wan Li was under detention in Shanghai after being prevented from returning to Beijing on Thursday. The official Chinese press said he was staying in Shanghai for "medical treatment."

Wan rushed back to China after cutting short a trip to the United States, where he praised the students as leading a patriotic movement.

The fate of Hu Qili, one of five members on the Politburo Standing Committee — the pinnacle of party power — was less clear. He recently was reported to have backed Zhao.

One source said Hu, who has been in charge of propaganda, was under house arrest. The other members of the standing committee are Li, Zhao, Yao Yilin and Qiao Shi.

Yang, a former general, also indicated that Communist Party members who have participated in the demonstrations will be punished. Among the huge crowds protesting with the students have been party members from state-run media, research institutes, government ministries and factories.

Hong Kong newspapers reported today that a researcher for China's official Xinhua News Agency who urged Li to resign had gone into hiding after escaping a kidnap attempt.

Dogs can get 'jowl tucks' now

DALLAS (AP) — Dogs with drooping jowls take heart: modern veterinary science can provide that needed facelift.

There's even hope for the doggone funniest looking pets, says veterinarian Dr. Bill Sanders.

"There are medical reasons and reasons like they just don't look pretty. People don't want to be apologetic for their pets' looks," says Sanders, who performs makeovers on cats and dogs in his Aardvark Etc. Veterinary Hospital.

"The most common (request) is to remove something that is unsightly," such as a cancer surgery scars, said Sanders. "It's amazing what you can do with animal skin that you can't do with a person's."

The veterinarian also has repaired broken jaws and crooked legs and permanently removed unwanted patches of white hair, but he makes sure to discuss requests with owners to ensure they are best for the animal.

"Sometimes, the animal doesn't need cosmetic surgery," Sanders said. "It's wonderful that so much can be done with just good grooming."

Gasoline pipeline explosion kills three

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — A gasoline pipeline exploded and killed three people just days after residents were assured it had not been damaged by a runaway train that plowed through the same neighborhood two weeks ago.

"It looks like a bomb went off over Duffy Street," City Attorney James Penman said after the Thursday morning blast that sent flames 300 feet skyward and produced heat so intense that pets and corn stalks were singed two blocks away.

Thirty-one people were injured in the explosion that also destroyed 10 homes and 18 cars. About 300 people were ordered to leave their homes for the night, and the pipeline break cut off Las Vegas' chief source of gasoline and diesel fuel.

"It's like a nightmare," said Delores Jones, whose house was destroyed by the fire. "I haven't slept since the train wreck. It's come back to haunt me."

The National Transportation Safety Board is investigating the explosion, but Calnev Pipeline Co. manager Ken Seal said there was a "very good possibility" the company's 14-inch pipeline was damaged by the train accident.

The city and an attorney for more than 100 residents announced plans to file lawsuits against the Las Vegas company. The residents also plan to sue the city and the rail line, Southern Pacific.

"We did not feel in the first place they should have started up that railroad as quickly as they did. And we particularly tried to get the pipeline shut down. Now look what happened," said residents' attorney James H. Davis, who was hired after the train wreck.

The neighborhood was evacuated for several days after the train jumped the track because of fears the pipeline might have been weakened. The city was assured the line was safe when it reopened several days ago, Penman said.

The body of a woman killed in the blast was found in the back yard of a home, pinned to a chain-link fence. The other two fatalities, an adult and child, were found next door.

"A woman said she ran out of her house, she left behind her sister, her cousin and a 6-month-old baby inside, and she looked back, and the house blew up behind her," said Councilwoman Valerie Pope-Ludlam.

Just before the blast, a fountain of gasoline spouted above ground, said Paul Allaire, a city information officer. "It was up in the air — high pressure — like a geyser," he said.

The pipeline carries gasoline, diesel and jet fuel from a tank farm in Colton, several miles from the blaze site, to southern Nevada, supplying the Las Vegas Valley.

It was buried 6 feet deep near the spot where the train derailed.

On the eve of the Memorial Day weekend, Las Vegas was left with less than a week's supply of gasoline and only a couple of days worth of diesel fuel. Gas was being trucked into the city, and spot checks this morning showed no immediate signs of panic-buying by motorists.

Once the explosion occurred, the flow of fuel through the pipeline was shut off, said Jed Robinson, Calnev's general manager in San Bernardino. But fuel remaining in the shattered pipe continued to burn fiercely through much of the day. Robinson said up to 12,000 gallons of gasoline burned.

There was no immediate evidence, however, that sparks from the passing train triggered the blast.

House panel blasts Pierce for program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Housing Secretary Samuel Pierce provoked anger and disbelief among members of a congressional panel that questioned him about a housing subsidy program which investigators say was riddled with favoritism.

Pierce, who is now a New York lawyer, told congressional investigators Thursday that he wasn't directly involved in deciding which projects received grants under the program. He said a committee of his subordinates at the Department of Housing and Urban Development selected the winners, and his approval was a rubber stamp.

Pierce said he wasn't influenced by well-connected Republicans and former HUD officials who obtained a large portion of the multimillion dollar subsidy projects, acting as consultants or developers.

"Perhaps we should have watched the program closer than we did," Pierce said, in the closest he came to acknowledging any blame. "But we've got a whole department (to run)..."

Pierce's appearance before a House Government Operations subcommittee marked his first public comment since an investigative report sharply criticized the management of a HUD program that provided indirect subsidies for rehabilitation of privately owned low-income housing projects.

Current HUD Secretary Jack Kemp has suspended further awards under the program pending a review.

Pierce, who headed HUD for eight years under former President Reagan, testified that he recommended Congress kill the so-called mod-rehab program.

But his remarks stirred strong reaction among members of the subcommittee, which questioned him for more than two hours.

When Pierce suggested that Democrats had also profited from the program, a near-shouting match erupted with Rep. Barney Frank. The Massachusetts Democrat charged that Pierce was trying to "deflect some of the blame" by making "irresponsible statements" he could not back up.

At one point during their exchange, Pierce said, "I don't think..." and did not complete his sentence. Frank shot back, "Well, that has been clearer and clearer."

Subcommittee Chairman Tom Lantos, D-Calif., told Pierce the suggestion that the Republican-appointed inspector general was protecting Democrats was "difficult to fathom."

Rep. Bruce Morrison, D-Conn., told Pierce that despite eight years in the Cabinet job, his remarks suggested "you don't really today understand how this program works."

"I did not have hands on," Pierce responded.

HUD Inspector General Paul Adams said an audit he conducted found a pattern in which former department officials and other well-connected Republicans received an inordinately large share of project awards. Among those cited was former Interior Secretary James Watt, who was reported receiving a $300,000 consulting fee on a Maryland project.

Pierce acknowledged that department officials used their own discretion in awarding subsidies, but said that was because Congress in 1984 waived requirements specifying fair-share allocation procedures.

Subcommittee Chairman Tom Lantos, D-Calif., read from a memo that he said the inspector general sent Pierce in 1988 warning him of problems in the program.

Pierce said by then he had altered the selection process. He said he did not respond to the inspector general's suggestion because those changes needed time to work.

"The inspector general is not God," Pierce said.

Rep. Margaret Roukema, R-N.J., and the subcommittee's chairman, Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., expressed surprise at Pierce's reaction to Adams' memo — which Lantos called "a very, very dramatic recommendation."

Pierce responded that he did not remember the memo, and added, "Well, there were a lot of fights going on."

Pierce said he met with Watt on the Maryland project but referred him to the appropriate office at HUD and told him that "we'd look very carefully at his project."

"No promises were made to him," Pierce said.

LA teachers return to class today

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Teachers return to classrooms today with higher salaries and more authority in the schools after approving a three-year contract to end a bitter strike in the 594,000-pupil district.

The teachers approved a pact Thursday that increases pay by 24 percent over three years, gives them greater curricula control, and reduces outside classroom duties such as yard supervision.

"Things in the Los Angeles Unified School District, as far as teachers are concerned, have changed for all time," proclaimed United Teachers-Los Angeles President Wayne Johnson before the agremeement was approved by the union's members in a voice vote at the Sports Arena.

Teachers lost on the issue of recovering pay that had been docked because of job actions that preceded their May 15 walkout. Many teachers had refused to patrol school yards or work on grading after school.

Board members also approved the pact, reached by negotiators at 1 a.m. Thursday.

"I look forward to healing, not only on the board but in the district as a whole," said board President Roberta Weintraub.

One board member, Rita Walters, criticized the $600 million salary plan as a drain on other parts of the budget.

"There is money being taken away from the children by the district, from other workers in our district in order to support the teacher raise. I think that's unconscionable," she said.

The teachers carved out a site-management program under which they share power with parents and administrators in overseeing curriculum and discipline.

The union represents 22,000 of the Los Angeles Unified School District's 32,000 teachers, counselors and librarians.

Salaries under a contract that expired in July 1988 range between $23,440 and $43,319 a year, depending on experience and education. The pact raises salaries in the first year to between $25,316 and $46,594 and at the end of three years to between $29,529 and $53,938.

Teachers will receive a retroactive pay raise for the past school year, during which they worked without a contract.

NATION IN BRIEF

Murderer who stole presents executed

ATMORE, Ala. (AP) — A man who killed a widow and stole her Christmas presents was executed in Alabama's electric chair early today as inmates in nearby cells protested and one yelled, "Murderers, murderers."

Michael Lindsey, 28, was pronounced dead by two doctors at 12:10 a.m. at Holman Prison near Atmore. The execution was the fourth in Alabama and the 111th in the nation since the U.S. Supreme Court allowed states to resume use of the death penalty in 1976.

"He had made peace with his maker," said the Rev. Robert Smith, who was in the room adjacent to the death chamber and spent time with Lindsey earlier in the day.

Lindsey was sentenced to death for the 1981 stabbing and shooting death of Rosemary Zimlich Rutland, 64, of Mobile, who was bound, gagged, stabbed and shot. Prosecutors said Lindsey killed her because she recognized him.

Tot thrown out of window

NEW YORK (AP) — A mother angry that an air conditioner fell out of her fifth-story window threw her 2-year-old daughter out after it, killing the girl, police said.

The mother, Jessica Sanchez, told police that the tot tumbled out accidentally after the air conditioner fell Wednesday. But detectives did not believe her and she was charged Thursday with murder.

Two-year-old Rachel Sanchez died Wednesday night at Bronx Lebanon Hospital of a fractured skull and other broken bones, said Capt. James J. Campbell.

Mrs. Sanchez, 29, and her husband, Thomas Sanchez, 33, were also charged with endangering the welfare of the child, because two other children, ages 1 and 3, showed signs of abuse, police said.

They were turned over to state welfare authorities. The couple also have three older children who live with relatives.

400 attend health hearing

ST. LOUIS PARK, Minn. (AP) — The nation's health care system is "expensive, bureaucratic and often cruel," an elderly woman told more than 400 people at the first of several hearings by a congressional commission.

"As one who has faced the problems associated with paying for the acute care of my husband and the nursing home care for my mother, I know first-hand the complexities and costs of our present system," said Grace Nelson, 80, of Edina.

Nelson represented the Minnesota Long Term Care Campaign, a coalition of various community services organizations with chapters in 26 states, as well as the Minnesota Senior Federation and the Minnesota Health Care Coalition.

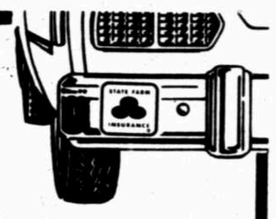

Network leader charged

CHICAGO (AP) — A Canadian woman conspired with dozens of computer hackers across the United States, some as young as 14, in a scheme to steal as much as $1.5 million in goods, services and cash, authorities said Thursday.

Leslie Lynn Doucette, 35, was charged with conspiring to steal telephone and computer service, the U.S. attorney's office said. She was charged with trafficking in illegal credit cards and telephone calling-card numbers on corporate and government voice-mail computers.

Ms. Doucette, arrested Wednesday in Chicago, is from Toronto, and was convicted in Canada in 1987 of telecommunications fraud, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Bill Cook.

Book gives Cyprus queen during Renaissance new 'tough' image

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Caterina Cornaro was a pawn in superpower intrigues five centuries ago, but she ruled as queen of Cyprus for almost 16 years and won a lasting reputation as a fascinating Renaissance personality.

Caterina, a Venetian aristocrat, inspired dozens of portraits as a dark-eyed beauty, a string of biographies and five operas, including one by the Italian composer Gaetano Donizetti.

Her life story reads like a pulp romance, starting with a short-lived marriage at 18 to James the Bastard, king of Cyprus, and ending with retirement near Venice presiding over a glittering salon of poets, painters and musicians.

But a new book published to mark the 500th anniversary of Caterina's enforced abdication in 1489 avoids depicting her as a tragic heroine.

Instead, she comes across as a tough survivor, maneuvering to stay alive in an maelstrom of violence and political treachery between Greeks and Italians on this east Mediterranean island.

According to one of the three contributors to "Caterina Cornaro, Queen of Cyprus," the chroniclers' references to her as "la bella donna" (the beautiful lady) probably were inaccurate.

"She must have had what we would call charisma, but I don't think she could be considered beautiful...more a woman of character," Terence Mullaly, a British art critic and Renaissance specialist, said in an interview.

"She was certainly hard-headed and realistic, and not the sad deposed queen of the sentimental legend."

Mullaly said that none of the portraits of Caterina as a young woman were definitely contemporary. The only one that dates from her lifetime, by the renowned Venetian painter Gentile Bellini, shows a plump matron "with shrewd eyes and a capable air," he said.

Caterina rose to fame when she sailed to Cyprus in September 1472 to marry James, a ruthless but popular king who seized the throne from his half-sister Charlotte, the legitimate heir.

But James died suddenly nine months later, apparently of dysentery, and so did Caterina's infant son, both in suspicious circumstances, according to Joachim G. Joachim, a Cypriot historian who also contributed to the book.

"I'm convinced that both James and his son were poisoned, and the Venetians are the prime suspects," Joachim said in an interview.

The historian, who researched Caterina's life in libraries around Europe, added: "It was their favored method of assassination. They had professional poisoners on the state payroll...and they benefited most from James' death."

Cyprus had been ruled for centuries by French-speaking kings descended from the Crusaders who fought in the Holy Land. The island was coveted by Egypt, Turkey and Venice as an important trading post for merchants dealing in silks and spices from the Orient.

Caterina succeeded to the throne. But she was hemmed in by her Venetian relatives and advisers who accused her of spending extravagantly. They also blocked her plans to marry Prince Alonzo of Naples, when she was 34 and he was 22.

Caterina fought back, writing letters to Venice complaining that her counsellors spoke to her rudely and failed to consult her on financial and judicial issues.

In one letter, she begged the Doge of Venice to strictly enforce legislation protecting Cypriot peasants from being kidnapped and forced to row Venetian galleys.

Soviet 'peace bread' comes to America

NEW YORK (AP) — A millionaire with a hankering for Russian pumpernickel has struck a deal with the Soviet Union to fly 2,000 loaves a week to New York consumers.

"I thought it was an interesting metaphor — breaking bread with the Russians; I call it peace bread," said Fred Kayden, 58, of Harrison, who describes himself as a "retired multimillionaire."

Kayden grew to love Russian bread during his business travels, and always brought home a few loaves. "It's like old-fashioned bread, with no preservatives," he said.

Two months ago, he began talks with Valery Saikin, chairman of the Moscow city council, who arranged the venture with help from Aeroflot and the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economic Council.

The bread will be served at the Waldorf-Astoria and New York Hilton hotels, and sold at 15 Zaro's Bread Basket stores in the metropolitan area at a price of $4 to $5 for a 2-pound loaf.

Department gains popularity after reintroduction of moose

Hearst News Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — People like moose. Michigan found that out, and now New York is learning that bringing the big-antlered critters back to the woods is as good as having "Bullwinkle" on its public-relations staff.

"People love us for bringing back the moose," says Ed Langenau, big game specialist for Michigan's Department of Natural Resources. "It used to be that our officers couldn't go to the upper peninsula and sit in a restaurant without having the air let out of their tires and nobody would sell them gas up there. Now they affectionately call us the Moose and Goose Division."

This about-face of public opinion is the result of Michigan's successful reintroduction of the moose, the first state in the nation to pull off the difficult feat. Moose became extinct in Michigan in the 19th century due to logging and over-hunting.

New York state's moose suffered the same fate and moved out of the Adirondacks more than 100 years ago.

A study from State University of New York College of Environmental Science and Forestry in Syracuse (ESF) researchers found that the Adirondacks now can support a moose population.

Thomas C. Jorling, commissioner of the state Department of Environmental Conservation, expressed enthusiastic support for trapping 40 adult moose in Canada or New England and transferring them to the Adirondacks. The moose could start moving in within a year.

"Everyone's been happily surprised at how well the moose are doing. All the numbers are much higher than we were led to expect from the scientific literature."
— Ed Langenau, game specialist

ESF researchers have projected that bringing in 40 adult moose could result in boosting the Adirondack moose population to 1,400 in 25 years.

From their experience in Michigan, Langenau says he would not hesitate to tell New York to move ahead with the moose project.

In less than two years, starting with 60 adult Canadian moose, the Michigan population stands at 125 moose today. Langenau says Michigan biologists are optimistic they will reach their goal of 1,000 moose by the year 2000 — at which time the beginning of limited moose hunting would be considered.

"Everyone's been happily surprised at how well the moose are doing," Langenau says. "All the numbers are much higher than we were led to expect from the scientific literature."

Langenau says that about 95 percent of the cows (female moose) are reproducing and 30 percent of those cows are bearing twin calves. The offspring are hardy, and only about five percent of the calves die in the first year.

"The Canadians said they just can't believe black bears haven't figured out that moose calves are good food," Langenau says. "We've got a lot of coyotes, wild dogs and black bears and they just haven't gone after the moose calves."

The Michigan researchers have learned other lessons as the first state to attempt large-scale reintroduction of moose, which weigh about 1,400 pounds and are the largest member of the deer family.

The more the merrier seems to be the moose's motto.

Before trapping and transferring the moose from Canada, Langenau says, just three or four moose wandered inside Michigan's borders each year, primarily males, and there was almost no reproduction.

Now, with the imported herd of 125 moose, and growing fast, some 75 other moose have wandered into Michigan — making the total population in excess of 200 moose.

There have been some setbacks, but those were to be expected, Langenau says. Of the 60 moose brought in from Canada, eight died in the past two years. One was hit by a car, one was killed in a fall from a cliff, one broke a leg during the fall "rut" (mating season), one succumbed to a liver infection and one cow died while giving birth to twin calves. The other three died from "brainworm," a parasite carried by white-tailed deer that attacks the central nervous system of moose and kills them.

So far, there has not been a single moose poaching incident. Shooting a moose is illegal in Michigan and carries a $5,000 fine.

Although 75 percent of the moose have remained within a 20-mile radius of the release site, where their survival chances are best, one bull (male) moose wandered several hundred miles from one end of the upper peninsula to the other.

The public opinion toward the moose seems to be the best of the lot among Michigan's restoration efforts.

In the 1970s, Michigan tried to reintroduce the wolf and brought in five wolves. "The locals either shot or trapped every single one," Langenau says. "It was a big disaster."

Ditto for the elk restoration. "Bringing back the elk has been a real headache, especially for farmers," Langenau says "We've had constant problems with crop damage from the elk. The elk population has been up around 1,500 and we're trying to reduce it to 850."

Adds Langenau, "Moose haven't been a problem at all. They don't like people and they stay away from civilization. But people always ask us where the moose are. There's been a lot of tourist interest. People want to see a moose. Everyone seems to like them."

Congress launches measures to lower infant mortality rate

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — With progress in reducing the infant mortality rate in the United States seemingly stalled, Congress is considering a host of new measures intended to address what has become a notorious symbol of national failure.

Most of the measures being considered, and in some cases already being acted upon, involve increasing Medicaid coverage among the young poor — the budget Congress passed last week included increased funds for that purpose — for it is in inner cities and rural Southern counties that the problem is most acute.

With 38,891 babies a year — 10.4 for every 1,000 live births — dying before their first birthday, the United States ranks 18th in the world in infant mortality, behind Japan, Sweden, France, Canada and East Germany, among others.

The infants most likely to die tend to have been born prematurely, and to weigh less than normal babies; their mothers, often in their teens, tend to have had little or no prenatal care.

Former Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, chairman of the National Commission to Prevent Infant Mortality, a 15-member group, said that recognition of largely ignored social problems is likely to prompt action this year on infant mortality.

"Twenty or thirty years ago the government decided that every senior citizen was entitled to access to health care," Chiles said. "We have never made that decision about pregnant women and children."

In inner cities and rural counties in the South, infant mortality rates are "worse than those in such developing countries as Cuba, Costa Rica and Panama," said Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas.

As chairman of the House Select Committee on Hunger, Leland is a chief sponsor of legislation that would extend Medicaid coverage to more poor women and infants with the aim of reducing infant mortality.

For black infants, who are twice as likely as white babies to die in their first year of life, the mortality rates did not show a statistically significant decline in 1985 or 1986, the last two years for which figures are available, according to the National Center for Health Statistics.

In 1986, the most recent year for which figures are available, the black infant mortality rate stood at 18 per 1,000 live births compared with 18.4 in 1984. By contrast the rate among whites fell from 9.4 to 8.9 in the same period.

"In this decade, the rate of progress has slowed or nearly disappeared," said Joseph Liu, an associate with the Children's Defense Fund, a Washington-based advocacy group specializing in children and family issues.

"For a nation as wealthy as ours and with as much attention as we say we want to give to our children, it's sort of odd that we do worse than East Germany and Ireland in our infant mortality rate."

In a report last summer, the Chiles commission recommended that the government print maternal health and child-care handbooks and distribute them to all pregnant women. It also urged states to set up centers for "one-stop shopping" for medical examinations and information on nutrition.

Many recommendations of the panel, whose members include Health and Human Services Secretary Louis W. Sullivan, have been incorporated into the Healthy Birth Act of 1989, sponsored by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J.

Experts say that some provisions of the bill are likely to be enacted this year as part of broader health care legislation.

In addition, Bradley and Leland introduced bills to expand Medicaid, the federal and state-financed health insurance for the poor that now assists less than 40 percent of eligible adults and about half of the nation's eligible poor children. Some money for this was included in the 1990 budget.

The measure would require states to expand Medicaid coverage for pregnant women and infants in families whose family income is less than 185 percent of the federal poverty level and to phase in health care coverage for children up to age 18 in families below the poverty level.

By contrast President Bush has called for an expansion of Medicaid for women and infants with incomes less than 130 percent of the poverty level, which for a family of three is $9,700.

Bradley, who is also a member of the infant mortality commission, said that if Medicaid is not broadened the United States is unlikely to meet a 10-year federal goal to reduce the infant mortality to 9 deaths per 1,000 live births by 1990.

The goal, set in the final year of the Carter administration, was largely ignored during the Reagan years.

Earlier this month, House and Senate budget negotiators agreed to increase the spending for that purpose by $200 million in fiscal 1990.

This would provide expanded Medicaid coverage for children and pregnant women whose families' income is up to 185 percent of the poverty level.

About $35 billion has been appropriated in the current fiscal year. Congress has also approved increased spending in the WIC program — a special supplemental food program for women, infants and children — by $150 million over current levels, after inflation.

Chiles characterized the response in Congress to the infant morality issue as "totally different" from past efforts. "Children's issues are good to be on now," he added. "Conscience and convenience can cross on this one."

Group pushes Duke for surgeon general

HOUSTON (AP) — Dr. James H. "Red" Duke, a country doctor turned big city trauma surgeon, says if offered, he would accept the position to succeed Dr. C. Everett Koop as surgeon general.

Duke

Duke's television reports on medical topics from the University of Texas Health Science Center have made him something of a folk character in Texas, and his reputation even inspired a television show "Buck James" starring Dennis Weaver.

Despite his acknowledged surprise at local efforts to appoint him to the national post, Duke said it could be a valuable position from which to address public health issues, particularly trauma.

"I don't know why this country chooses to ignore the epidemic of injury in this nation that runs rampant all the time, killing more people on the highways every year than we did in the entire Vietnam war," Duke said at a Thursday press conference.

"Why we choose to ignore that, I don't know," he said. "But one of my favorite sayings about that is: Denial ain't a river in Egypt."

Duke, who stepped off a plane and into the press conference, admitted being a little bewildered by the growing movement within the Houston medical community about him becoming the next surgeon general, but said he would accept the position if it were offered.

"I haven't been in town much since this thing got started a little over two weeks ago," said Duke, dressed in blue jeans, a western belt and boots.

On May 4, Koop announced he would resign July 13, prompting the idea of nominating Duke for the post, said Dr. Bruce D. Browner, chief of orthopedic surgery at the UT Medical School at Houston.

Browner said Thursday he has forwarded Duke's credentials to Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

"It just struck me that C. Everett Koop has redefined the job of surgeon general as one that is clearly that of a public communicator — somebody who puts the medical issues before the public and tries to stir them p," Browner said.

"He's been outstanding in his activism and he's been very outspoken, and I thought to myself, 'Who would be a good successor to (Koop) in that role?' And the thought immediately popped into my head that we have right here in our own back yard the ideal candidate to fill that role."

House passes bill regulating pickup riders

By RICK BROWN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — It only goes to show that you can't discount the power of persuasion, especially if the power is in Sen. Carl Parker's hands.

The House Thursday reversed a late-hour vote against the Port Arthur Democrat's bill to regulate children riding in pickup beds after previously rebuffing it with a narrow, non-record vote.

"I think a while ago maybe some people got a little over-anxious and a little rambunctious," said Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, after the later 66-44 tally in favor.

"The very fact," said Stiles, that Parker could have "taken some action over in the Senate probably had something to do with it."

"It's about time for Parker to pull his raging bull act," he said.

With the session in its final days, Parker might have "tagged" his opponents' bills to keep them from reaching the Senate floor.

An angry Parker after the first set of nays called on Texans to start a "Child's Deathwatch" because "the House of Representatives...has sentenced a minimum of eight to 10 little children to their deaths."

"It's especially disconcerting because it's the same House that earlier this year mandated that adults have to wear motorcycle helmets," he said.

But the measure's House sponsor, Rep. Larry Kubiak, D-Rockdale, said he had to agree that members wouldn't go on record in order to bring the bill out of the House Calenders Committee.

The bill would impose fines of $25 to $200 on drivers who allow children under 12 to ride in the back of open-bed pickup trucks or on flatbed trailers.

"I thought it was a cinch when I amended it to 40 mph," said Kubiak, who had raised the upper speed limit with which the measure would take effect from Parker's original 15 mph. "I had to make some concessions to get it to the floor," he said.

One opponent who had spoken against the bill, Rep. Dick Waterfield, R-Canadian, called the measure "useless."

"It just gets back to private individual rights. Somewhere we have to draw the line," said Waterfield.

Prior to the final vote, Waterfield successfully attached another amendment to exempt people whose only vehicle is a pickup truck, which he said would help large families.

The senator afterward said he is "pleased that they have addressed the issue," and that he would "try to reason with the folks who did have some concerns over the next couple of days."

AUSTIN — While legislators have battled in their chambers to assemble a comprehensive AIDS bill, another war — this one more theatrical — has been waged in the hallways and on porches and sidewalks of the Capitol complex.

The soldiers in this fight wear black, hold death masks to cover their faces and stand solemnly on the steps outside the House chambers. They hiss when certain Legislators walk by.

They've staged an "AIDS Freak Show" on the Capitol steps, including a "Soak a Queer" booth and an "AIDS Death Camp."

Members of AIDS Coalition To Unleash Power, or ACT UP, say they use satire, street theater, parody and hyperbole to draw attention to the state's refusal to treat AIDS the way the group sees fit.

"I don't think our actions do anything but bring it (the AIDS problem) to light and make people think about it," said Michael Marinez , a spokesman for the 80-member group.

Legislators and Capitol observers disagree. Take Wednesday, for example.

As Rev. Chris Steele made an 11th-hour effort for changes in the AIDS bill, Rep. Alan Bunnell stepped up to her in the Capitol hallway.

Steele, chairman of Legislative Task Force on AIDS, wanted lawmakers to delete perceived anti-gay bias from the bill. Junnell, a moderate Democrat from San Angelo, was one of 141 legislators who voted for the more conservative language in the bill.

"There are some of us — who aren't on one side or another — who recognize that something needs to be done about AIDS," Junnell said, relating the conversation. "And I do not condone what they (ACT UP members) do. Their conduct irritates me. It's (bothersome) to the extent that it might cause some (House) members to vote against a good AIDS program."

Once on the steps, they interrupted an anti-drug news conference being staged by the parents of Mark Kilroy, the University of Texas student slain by a drug and torture cult in Matamoros, Mexico, to stage their own press conference.

Junnell called the crucifix protest blasphemous, but ACT UP says it was just intended to shock observers.

"It represents what we think is the House of Representatives' attitudes toward people who have AIDS," Robert Lowe, an ACT UP leader and one of the cross-bearers, said as he trudged up the sidewalk. "It's a crucifixion. We think the Legislature, specifically the House, is looking to put people with AIDS on a cross."

ACT UP members threaten to continue the activities.

But Junnell said the group is just hurting itself.

"To be effective politically, you have to reach someone," he said. "I don't know who they think they're reaching. They're getting attention, but it's all negative."

Countered Lowe: "We think that's political nonsense.

What's burning? Could be Midland!

Are the stars out of alignment or what? This definitely isn't August and the last few days have not been the "dog days" of summer, which traditionally occur in late August and are characterized by hot, dry days with a noticeable lack of air movement. They've just felt like them.

Of course, Midlanders are accustomed to hot weather ... with a capital H. In fact, Midland and the rest of West Texas share a well-known reputation around the state for being both, hot and dry!

But this hot? And this dry? Wednesday the daytime temperature soared to a blistering 108 degrees and if you happened to be out-of-doors the term "blistering heat" took on new meaning.

That high mark broke by one degree the all-time high temperature for a May in Midland, and weather forecasters were saying the record high for any month of 109 degrees is also in jeopardy and, judging from this record-setting hot spell, could fall.

The severe heat has created problems for some residents of Midland. Salvation Army officials say they are receiving five to 10 calls a day from individuals requesting refrigerators, fans, air-conditioners and so forth that the agency loans in emergency situations. Calls for help are also being received by Casa de Amigos and other agencies, but a Casa spokeswoman said those calling Casa are being referred to other local agencies, such as St. Vincente de Paul and St. Andrews Presbyterian Mission, because Casa is out of funds for that type assistance.

When will the hot weather end? Good question, say officials at the National Weather Service. It could continue another six to 10 days, with the city's traditionally "hot" part of the summer still ahead.

But, say the weather forecasters, a cool front is in the offing and could drop the temperature down to 95 degrees or so — bringing a wave of much-needed relief from the oppressive heat.

Phew! When it's 108 out, 95 really doesn't sound all that bad!

JACK CASSERLY

NEW YORK — Lottery players die broke.

That's the wisdom of my 93-year-old mother. She said the same thing of horse players 50 years ago.

Jack Casserly

Mom never gambled — not even at the bookie in back of McNamara's pub where my father was a Friday night regular — betting the old Irish sweepstakes. She was afraid of winning.

Mom said that, if she won the record $115 million Pennsylvania lottery, she wouldn't know what to do with the money. She wouldn't buy a yacht. It would be too much trouble paying the crew, maintenance, and thinking up places to go when the weather was nice. She just wants to walk two blocks to the park. The fresh air, benches and birds are free.

Not even a big new house with a swimming pool. Who needs a cleaning woman, a gardener and pool service? What a headache, she told me over her favorite lunch — chicken noodle soup.

Why buy a Jaguar? she asked. She likes Fords. Not Henry Ford II. He was a jet-setter. Henry Ford I. Now there was a real man. She doesn't like Jaguar showoffs. So why spend $50,000 for any car when you can buy the best of Ford for about half the price?

Mom really rattled her cane when she heard people were buying 30,000 tickets a minute — 1.8 million an hour — during the Pennsylvania lottery. And when my sister told her that people were flying to Pennsylvania from faraway states to bet on the record lottery prize, she said she would have made them walk.

Mom became upset and poked a hole in the backdoor screen when one of the old biddies in the neighborhood told her Americans are now wagering about $240 billion a year. She said that the annual U.S. budget was only a fraction of that when she was a girl.

Mom calls it "betting madness." Everyone is doing it, she says. Rich and poor, black and white, Christian and Jew, even American Indians. She says we're corrupting the Indians again.

She told her share of widow and orphan stories about men who gambled the family food and house payment away. They couldn't quit the horses or the "friendly" poker games. And, finally, they lost everything — food, house and family.

It's worse winning, Mom told me. A million dollars today is peanuts. You buy a new house, new car, new clothes, a world trip and what do you have at the end? More bills.

Mom laughs at all the plans to curb gambling. Like laws that would close down check-cashing agencies near race tracks. She says if someone is smart enough to place a bet, he is nimble enough to cash a check somewhere else.

Or laws that would increase the distance between casinos and bank-teller machines. Gambling is like drinking, she said. You're going to find a place to do it if you want it. She remembers Prohibition and thought it was a bad joke. Mom never took a drink in her life, but had whiskey in the house "for anyone in trouble."

If Mom won a lottery and a million dollars were forced on her, she would put it all in long-term federal Treasury notes for her grandchildren. She wouldn't spend a dime. She noted that this country has the lowest savings rate of any industrialized nation.

Mom never thought she was poor although people today say her part of the country was a poverty area. She got damn mad at them. It was the only time I ever heard her use strong language. She is furious that more and more states are starting lotteries, claiming they will help wipe out poverty and other social ills. Mom says lotteries are just another form of taxes.

Mom's philosophy of life is that each day is a victory. The only worthwhile gamble is life itself — your daily choices. She still doesn't think money is important. Mom says real wagering is when you bet your life on a farm, business or marriage.

Mobil's S. Africa pullout no surprise

WASHINGTON — Mobil Oil raised plenty of eyebrows last month with its surprise decision to sell its operations in South Africa. But it was a surprise only to those who haven't followed Mobil's game plan.

Jack Anderson

We disclosed last year that Mobil had a blueprint for the pullout and at the same time was talking a convincing line about staying in South Africa for the good of the country.

While anti-apartheid groups were pressuring businesses to sever their ties with South Africa, Mobil claimed it was giving good jobs to oppressed blacks there and was encouraging an end to the racist form of government. Publicly, the company insisted that it was staying, despite pressure from Congress and the public to get out.

But secretly, Mobil was discussing contingency plans more than a year ago to bail out of South Africa. Mobil officials even considered transferring their South African subsidiaries to an island in the English Channel, which would have allowed the company to avoid a capital gains tax on the proceeds from a future sale of those holdings.

That strategy was outlined in a 1987 internal letter from Mobil President Richard Tucker to Chief Executive Officer Allen E. Murray. We obtained that memo from a source inside the company through the Interfaith Center for Corporate Responsibility, an interest group pushing for American companies to dump their South African holdings.

Mobil, the largest U.S. company remaining in South Africa, blamed Congress for the decision to bail out. A 1987 law killed a tax break for American companies that were also taxed by the South African government. Mobil also had been under pressure from anti-apartheid protesters who advocate complete economic sanctions against South Africa.

Mobil lobbied hard against economic sanctions in Congress and even used some controversial tactics to woo supporters. Our associate Scott Sleek discovered that Mobil was one of several companies that secretly helped organize a coalition of black American ministers to lobby against the sanctions. Critics say the idea was to get influential and highly credible blacks to speak out on the side of businesses.

The ministers, calling themselves the Coalition on Southern Africa, appeared to be acting independently and didn't publicize their ties with U.S. companies doing business in South Africa. Anti-apartheid groups worried that the companies had suckered COSA into a massive lobbying campaign against sanctions.

Mobil was also instrumental in forming another organization to push for corporate America's continued presence in South Africa. That group, Industry Support Unit Inc., has its offices in Mobil's headquarters in New York. Sal Marzullo, Mobil's vice president of intergovernmental affairs, has served as its chairman.

DOUBLE DIPPING — Researchers are cashing in on the marketing of medical advances that they pioneer under federal research grants. Normally, researchers split royalties with the federal government if their new drug, for example, is patented and put on the market. Universities usually sell the license to market their advances to private companies.

But investigators for the Health and Human Services Department tell us that at least one university gave the rights to market a drug right back to the researcher who developed it. That kind of practice raises questions about the objectivity of further research when the scientist's personal wealth is tied to the outcome.

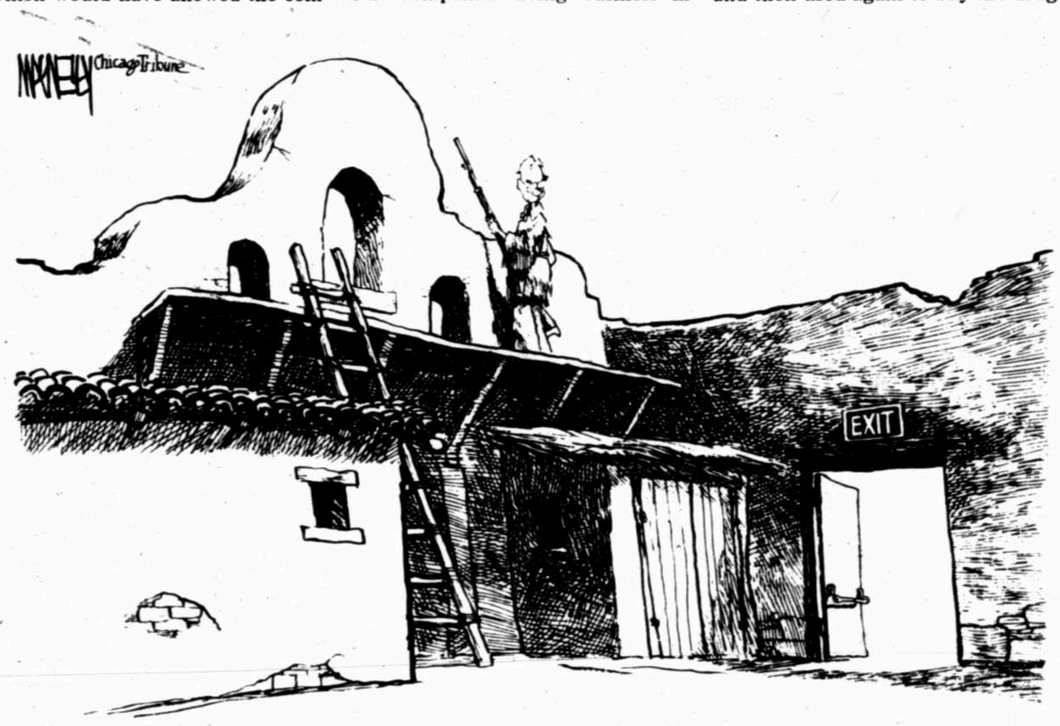

The researcher's drug company then charged the university full price to experiment with his drug. That means government research money was used to develop the drug, and then used again to buy the drug at a premium price for more research.

Moreover, further experimentation by the researcher led him to conclude that the drug he had invented and was marketing was successful in treating a major disease. He became rich overnight and raised new ethical questions that government officials are only beginning to sort out.

TWO-TIME LOSER — There was universal outrage when it was recently revealed that the Bush administration tampered with the findings of a government scientist working on the greenhouse effect. But it was not the first time. The Office of Management and Budget has twice censored the work of James Hansen, a climatologist for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. In the summer of 1987, Hansen's testimony on the greenhouse effect to a congressional committee was altered by the OMB. A Chicago magazine, "In These Times," recently reported that the OMB deleted Hansen's recommendations for increased research funding. Sources tell us that Hansen did not complain to Congress the first time he was censored. Why did he blow up last week? Because he had simply lost his patience with laymen number crunchers trying to alter his findings and opinions.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Country music holds aces on poetic lyrics!

Even if you don't particularly enjoy Country music, you've got to admit some of the titles, lyrics and thoughts are wonderfully poetic.

Lewis Grizzard

For years, there was something that circulated called "The List." It included the very best Country music titles and lyrics. Remember these titles:

■ "My Wife Just Ran Off with My Best Friend, and I Miss Him."

■ "I Gave Her a Ring and She Gave Me a Finger."

■ "We Used to Kiss on the Lips, but It's All over Now."

■ "Every Man Must Leave His Footprints in the Shifting Sands of Time, but I'll Just Leave the Mark of a Heel."

■ "How Come My Dog Don't Bark When You Come Around?"

■ "I've Got Tears in My Ears from Lying on My Back Crying All Night over You."

And these equally impressive lyrics:

■ "If your phone don't ring, it's me."

■ "Ain't only one thing in this ol' world worth a solitary dime and that's old dogs, and children, and watermelon wine."

■ "If you're waitin' on me, you're backin' up."

■ "Has anybody here seen my sweet thang?"

■ "The work we did, it was hard, but we slept at night cause we was tard." (That may be a paraphrase, but it's close enough — from Loretta Lynn's "Coal Miner's Daughter.")

Country music can be used in real-life situations. A friend was telling me how, when he asked his wife for a divorce, she refused and demanded they go to a marriage counselor.

At the last session with the counselor, the counselor asked my friend's wife, "Is there any song that really sums up your feelings for your husband?"

She responded, "Each time I hear Johnny Mathis sing, 'Until the Twelfth of Never,' I think of him."

"And what about you?" the counselor asked my friend.

"Is there any particular song that sums up your feelings for your wife?"

"Absolutely," he replied. "Roy Clark's immortal, 'Thank God and Greyhound She's Gone.'"

My friend got his divorce.

I bring all this up because of a new Country song I heard recently by George Jones. For those who are not familiar with Mr. Jones, he's been around for years and is a notorious drinker.

On one occasion his former wife, Country singer Tammy Wynette, left their Nashville home to go on tour. She had all the liquor removed from the house, and left George with no car.

No problem for George. He was last seen heading to the nearest bar, driving the couple's lawnmower.

Despite his drinking problems, George Jones is recognized by many as the best Country singer ever. His voice has the same tone as a steel guitar when he sings of love — lost and found.

And his latest: There's this guy, and his baby has gone, and he's sitting at home and darkness has come and he's got the hurt-all-over blues.

He turns to drink as the answer. He pulls off the shelf a decanter of bourbon that is in the image of the late Elvis. He's got to have something to drink the bourbon from, so he locates a Fred Flintstone jelly jar.

He pours out the jelly, steams the label off the jar and pours himself a drink out of Elvis.

And he sings:

"Yabba Dabba Do, the King is gone, and so are you."

CHARLEY REESE

Congress makes it tough on small business

Congress can enrich individuals — including themselves — at the expense of other individuals but it cannot create one penny's worth of new wealth in the United States.

Charley Reese

We would do well to remember that as Congress, in another burst of union-sponsored phony philantrophy, sets out to raise the minimum wage.

Now, I am personally in favor of everybody becoming as wealthy as they can. Nor do I have much use for employers who exploit their employees. Trouble is while Congress can produce many cubic feet of hot air with the smell of methane it is not yet discovered how to make money multiply itself.

Every small business, and large ones too, will have exactly the same gross income the day after Congress, by law, decrees that they increase the amount they pay bottom-rung employees as they did the day before. Congress, unlike private business, never balances the books. It will increase the expense side of the accounting equation but not the asset side.

In a business, income minus costs equals capital. Therefore if government by law increases costs, then the end result is less capital. In practical terms, an increase in the minimum wage will have the following effects:

■ Unions will demand higher pay, arguing the gap between minimum wage and their pay scales must be maintained. That's why unions back minimum wage increases. Any union whose members are working for minimum wage is no doubt corrupt. No bargaining unit is necessary to get employees what the law mandates anyway. It's not minimum wage employees unions are concerned about — it's using the minimum wage as lever in their own bargaining.

■ Costs for consumers will go up. Business has no source of income other than the revenue derived from sales, so if you increase the costs of doing business either by minimum wage laws, mandatory benefits or taxes, those costs necessarily are passed on to the consumers.

■ Jobs will be lost. Small businesses have little flexibility in terms of increasing their prices. Most of them are struggling as it is to compete with giant corporations who want the whole pie for themselves. The small business, the main generator of entry-level jobs, will have no choice but reduce its labor force, either by layoffs, elimination of jobs, or by reducing full-time jobs to part-time.

■ More pressure toward automation will be added and it is the giant corporations that have the resources to do this. When you visit a two-acre-size department store and find it devoid of visible employees save for a few cashiers, you are witnessing the result of U.S. policy that makes jobs so expensive.

Someone said that the beginning of wisdom is the realization that it is impossible to do just one thing. Each act sets off a chain reaction of cause-and-effect. Wise people try to anticipate as many links of that chain as possible before they act. The foolish, which includes the congressional majority, never looks past the first link.

It is not a good idea to be on the bottom rung of the economic ladder, even as a teenager, for Congress is making that position more and more untenable.

On the one hand, with its phony philanthropy, it is increasing the costs of hiring people and thus advancing automation and off-shore capital investment as well as reducing the number of entry-level jobs. At the same time, with its inflationary policies, it makes it increasingly difficult to live on entry-level salaries. But the mischief-misery recipe is not yet complete. Congress also opens the borders to hundreds of thousands of immigrants, legal and illegal, to compete with native Americans for that shrinking supply of entry-level jobs.

Hobby results in top holster line

IDAHO CITY, Idaho (AP) — While her husband was flying Navy planes during World War II, Bonnie Sparks bought a handicraft kit for a leather purse to help pass lonely hours in their New York City apartment.

When Milt Sparks came home, he was intrigued by his wife's hobby, which he developed a quarter-century later into the business of making high-quality holsters sought by gun enthusiasts and police around the world.

Wiley Clapp, feature editor of Guns and Ammo magazine and owner of several Milt Sparks Holsters, calls them "the very, very best," the first choice of many knowledgeable pistol owners.

"I'm sure in the days of Stradivarius there were other violin makers," Clapp said. "But the virtuoso used a Stradivarius."

The dirt-road outskirts of this former gold boom town provide a natural location for Sparks' shop. The town's wooden sidewalks would make an Old West gunslinger feel at home.

But Sparks said the Wyatt Earps of yesteryear wouldn't stand a chance in a modern-day showdown.

"I think that any modern pistolero could clean out the OK Corral before they could get their guns out of their holsters," he said.

All holsters are not created equal, it seems.

"A holster can quite simply be a matter of living or dying," said Mike Waidelich, a Bakersfield, Calif., detective. "When you use it 40 hours a week, it needs to be very serviceable. It needs to be right."

Three years ago, Waidelich convinced Bakersfield's 235-member police force to make the Sparks standard equipment although it cost about 50 percent more than the holsters they were using.

Before strapping on a Sparks, Waidelich once had his pistol fall out of his holster while chasing a suspect. Another time he spent 15 minutes coaxing his weapon out of a poorly designed holster, he said.

A Sparks holster is crafted to hold the weapon snugly as an officer runs or climbs over a fence, but relinquish it when it's needed, Waidelich said.

Tony Kanaley, Sparks' shop manager, estimates that 60 percent of the company's business is from police officers. Clients also include such celebrities as Hank Williams Jr. and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

Sparks starts with a stiff piece of vegetable-tanned cowhide. Kanaley grades and cuts all the leather, and an individual worker is responsible for finishing the job.

Sparks said his motto is: "Do it right."

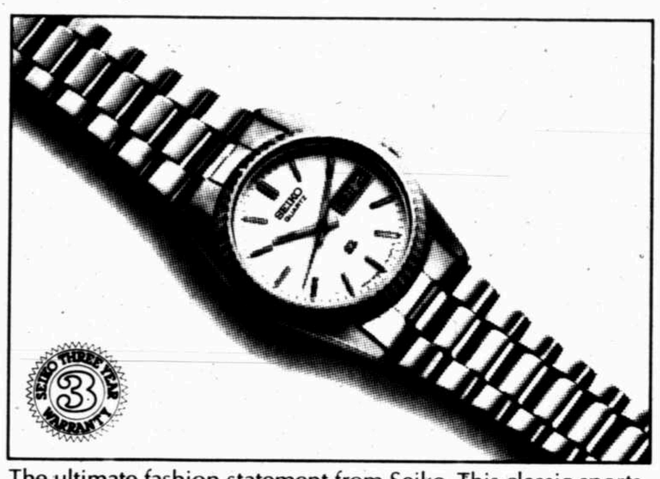

"Don't sacrifice your integrity to make money," he said. "If it's not right, if it doesn't save a man's life in a pinch, then don't do it."

In the beginning, satisfaction in a job well done was Sparks' sole reward. "Now, I want to make a little money," the 72-year-old Sparks said.

Recently he has been able to leave many day-to-day duties to Kanaley and his three-person crew, freeing him to travel, participate in shooting competitions and promote his products.

Sparks, a former charter pilot and flight instructor, worked briefly during the late 1940s for a Boise belt and holster maker, but did not become serious about his craft until 1971 when a fellow pilot asked him to make a holster.

Couple celebrates family history through antiques

OLD OCEAN, Texas (AP) — It seems only natural that John and Nancy Bannister make and repair furniture from the 1800s and sell antiques of all sorts at their store, the Old Post Office.

John Bannister's family tree, like the cypress he sometimes uses to construct a raw fireside chair, is deeply rooted in South Texas history.

"I don't try to make anything fancy. I like to make them primitive," he said.

John Bannister's great-great-grandfather, John Sweeny Sr., who helped settle thousands of acres of land in the early 1800s in what is now southern Brazoria and Matagorda countjes, received land deeds from Texas patriot Stephen F. Austin.

The John Sweeny Jr. Plantation, located just down the road from the Old Post Office, was established by John Bannister's great-grandfather and it is the last plantation in Brazoria County still owned by the descendants of the original owner.

Indeed, the city of Sweeny, just four miles southeast of Old Ocean, was named in the late 1800s after the Sweeny family, particularly John Bannister's great-uncle, Will Sweeny, an influential postmaster at the time.

Probably with Will Sweeny in mind, John Bannister's well-known mother, Catherine, appointed herself postmaster of Old Ocean and built the tiny post office that is now the town antique shop. Catherine constructed the post office in 1943 and remained postmaster until 1968. In 1973, a larger post office was built across the street.

John Bannister said his mother was told by the government she had to be appointed to the position, but she was stubborn and persisted with her ambition nonetheless.

"It wasn't that she needed a job, she just wanted something to do," John Bannister said. "She could sit in the window and talk to people all day. The clerks did all the work and my dad wrote all the reports. She had it made."

Today, the post office and all of Old Ocean is dominated by a maze of pipes and smokestacks that make up the Phillips 66 Co. The Sweeny family sold more than 500 acres of land to Phillips for production purposes during the past four decades.

But John Bannister, who retired from the Houston oil business in 1981, and his wife prefer to surround themselves with antiques.

Their shop and adjacent home are dominated by restored antiques. The couple thrives on buying items from estate sales and by saving furniture that would otherwise be thrown into the fire.

"I like to salvage any old piece of furniture that is on the verge of being destroyed," said John Bannister. "I don't like to see old furniture thrown away. People think, 'Oh, it served its purpose, throw it away.' I like to make it useful again."

The Bannisters' store and home are filled with thick brown wooden cabinets, once used to cool freshly baked pies. Other furniture includes fireside chairs — some constructed from scratch — and heavy window shutters saved from ruin.

Juveniles sentenced to term papers

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Municipal Court Judge Robert J. Gonzalez has added a new twist to terms of probation for juvenile offenders — term papers.

Typically, juveniles charged with petty theft, simple assault, possession of alcohol and other minor offenses were assessed fines and given convictions.

But Gonzalez decided to use his broad discretion in defining punishment to try an idea: requiring the juveniles to write term papers on how to get into college.

"I've decided that instead of just a straight fine, we ought to put the juveniles on probation and have the young person write a 30-page paper," Gonzalez said.

Since instituting the novel punishment method about 10 months ago, Gonzalez said, he has received about 40 papers and that every one of the teen-agers expressed some interest in college.

"We take a juvenile who has engaged in delinquent activity and turn him or her into a college-bound young person," Gonzalez said.

The idea of requiring the juveniles to write college papers came to Gonzalez when he tried to find a creative and more effective means of disposing of cases.

"I know of no other judge doing this, but I believe it's a great alternative to a straight fine and a conviction," Gonzalez said.

While working as a prosecutor at the county attorney's office, Gonzalez said, he was involved in numerous probation cases and learned that creative thinking was encouraged in some cases.

"I can't think of a better way to help get these kids out of this situation than to write a paper on how to prepare for college," Gonzalez said.

Paul Donnelly, chief probation officer of the Nueces County Juvenile Probation Department, said he supports new concepts of punishment such as Gonzalez's.

"I think it's great," Donnelly said. "I think we should try anything that'll work."

Donnelly said he had heard of judges requiring juvenile offenders of Class C misdemeanors to write papers regarding particular crimes they committed, but never about how to enter college.

"We're always supportive of any effort by any judge to try out something new," Donnelly said.

The papers emphasize different areas of study, the choice of universities, dorms, campuses, financial aid and the pre-admission tests.

The teen-agers have 90 days to complete the papers.

Gonzalez said he's continually surprised with the papers he receives. Some were written on computers at the child's school and one paper written by a 13-year-old included discussion of the importance of critical thinking in college studies.

Initially, Gonzalez required juveniles to write papers about prison life, but he switched to the emphasis on college after realizing it would be better to promote something positive rather than something negative.

"What I'm trying to do is plant a seed in the child's mind and the results have been great," Gonzalez said.

Teen-agers who had never written papers longer than two or three pages "are coming back with excellent papers."

Many of the juvenile offenders in Gonzalez's court are from single parent homes in which no other family members attended college.

"College was an impossibility in their mind," Gonzalez said, "because many of the kids have no role models.

The judge said his work with urging the college alternative for the teen-agers doesn't end with requiring them to write the paper.

18 seniors fail fourth try at TEAMS test

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

After four shots at mastering the exit-level Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills, a total of 18 12th-graders in Midland and Odessa face summer remedial classes to sharpen their academic skills and gain their diplomas.

Of the 32 Midland Independent School District seniors taking the TEAMS math section and 22 tested in language arts, three at Lee High School and six at Midland High School failed. Those students will not receive their diploma until they pass the test and have accumulated all their high school credits.

Twenty-six MISD seniors passed the math section of the test while 16 passed language arts testing in May.

Students take the exit-level TEAMS in October of their junior year. Those who fail only need to retake the failed test portion the following May and have two more chances during their senior year. If students still fail, they can take summer remedial course and retake the test in August.

Only five of last year's MISD seniors were left without diplomas because of their TEAMS performances in May.

"In terms of the overall results of the (exit-level) TEAMS, it would appear we've done well in bringing the students along toward receiving their diploma," said Maridell Fryar, executive director of instructional services. "But it's our goal for 100 percent of students to pass."

Fryar said that after October exit-level testing, both juniors and seniors who fail one or both sections are placed in remediation classes.

Of the 203 MISD 11th-graders retested in math, 138, or 68 percent, passed, while 96 of 132, or 72.7 percent, mastered the language arts.

MISD's overall mastery for both grades at MHS and LHS dropped from 71 percent last year to 68 percent this year in math and rose from 67 percent to 73 percent in language arts.

Compared to last year, this year's passing rate at LHS decreased from 75 percent to 67 percent in math and rose from 76 percent to 82 percent in languange arts; MHS rose from 66 percent to 69 percent in math and 61 percent to 67 percent in language arts.

Among 11th- and 12th-graders in both Ector County Independent School District high schools, 178 of 256, or 69.5 percent, passed the math section, while 85 of 111, or 76.6 percent, mastered the language arts.

MISD first-graders improve all TEAMS subjects

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Possibly the last group of Midland first-graders having to tackle the Texas Educational Assessment will go out with an academic bang, scores released Thursday show.

Midland Independent School District pupils showed overall improved mastery on all three TEAMS sections — math, reading and writing — with six of 21 schools improving by more than 10 percentage points in at least one area. Only three schools showed a 10 percentage point or more drop on a section on the April-administered test.

Compared with 1988 scores, first-graders districtwide rose from 93 percent passing to 94 percent in math, 84 percent to 85 percent in reading and 85 percent to 90 percent in math.

"Teachers have worked in in-service sessions on how to teach students how to take the test," said Frank Marlow, executive director of primary schools. "I think the instructional staff and teachers have made a concerted effort to improve the scores."

Overall, 82 percent of MISD first-graders passed TEAMS, with 10 percent failing one section, 5 percent failing two and 3 percent, three. Last year 77 percent passed the t , 10 percent failed one section, 7 percent failed two and 4 percent, three.

But school officials may never know how MISD's 1989-90 first-graders will perform if Senate Bill 40 becomes law. Acting on criticism by local and state school officials, teacher organizations and the State Board of Education, lawmakers in January introduced legislation to eliminate the first-grade TEAMS.

The bill is pending before a House conference committee, who's members were appointed Thursday.

In January, Rep. Ciro D. Rodriguez, D-San Antonio, filed a House bill, while Sen. Gene Green, D-Houston, filed a Senate companion document. The Senate in March voted 31-0 to eliminate the test.

"I would be delighted if they dropped it," Marlow said. "At this point (first grade) it's difficult to asses the children in certain areas. We feel first grade is not the appropriate group to assess with TEAMS.

"I think most administrators and teachers will be happy if it's dropped."

But for now, MISD educators can revel in the improvement by the 1988-89 first-graders.

Fannin Elementary School has shown 100 percent math mastery since 1987, while this year's group from last year improved from 97 percent to 100 percent in writing and stayed at 98 percent in reading.

De Zavala, Jones and Pease elementaries showed at least a 10 percentage point gain in reading and writing, while Crockett Elementary School improved by at least that much on all three sections. Washington, Scharbauer and Houston elementaries showed as high a gain on in least one area.

West Texans tickled with ostrich farming

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The two-toed, eight-foot bird that runs straightaway with the grace of a race horse, dances like an exotic warrior when mating and has the kick of 100-proof moonshine is roaming parts of the West Texas plains.

Ostriches are a West Texas adventure into agriculture. Traditionally known for plumes that become dusters and adorn dancers and hats, the birds also are cultivated for their hide which is tanned for cowboy boots, and their beef-like leg meat.

But right now, the bird is imported and bred in the United States for high-dollar breeding sales — not yet farming.

"It's still a speculative sport," mused Dr. Fred Thornberry, a poultry specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

In some cases, a trio of the breeding birds has sold for $65,000 or a pair for $50,000. And investors who think they sense a high-dollar return are considering sinking money into the birds.

Some who have, lost their savings on the wild birds; which — if not properly treated and tamed in captivity — use their 325-pound bodies as battering rams and do themselves in.

And, as ostriches' popularity grows as a meat-hide-plume commodity and their number multiply, they could drastically drop in value and quickly absorb a tidy bankroll.

"It's your money," Thornberry recently told a group of Texas ostrich producers and would-be bird farmers.

In his years of working with breeders, Thornberry has witnessed enthusiastic producers "fall by the wayside" after prices dropped or their expertise in handling animals was lacking.

"I think this ostrich situation will be no different unless you are in it as a hobby," he said.

Ostrich buffs were ferreting out clues on raising the birds, incubating the fertile eggs, raising the chicks, and marketing the yearlings and grown birds, which, at 14 months old, are in their prime for harvesting.

The ostrich, called a "camel bird," is "about the closest living animal...to the dinosaurs," noted veterinarian Dr. Karen Hicks.

The bird, which can move at a 45-mph lion-eluding clip, has keen eyesight. But "the ostrich doesn't have much of a brain," said the veterinarian.

A contrary to the myth, the ostrich doesn't attempt to "escape" danger by burying its head in sand.

"They would suffocate," she said.

And the veterinarian cautioned breeders to protect the bird from predators, particularly dogs.

In ostrich farming, "Exercise is equally important as diet," Hicks said.

Just what is the ostrich's proper diet on the farm is still in the experimental stage. In the wild, ostriches eat just about anything — from lizards to grain — they can swallow. On the farm, they may be fed monkey chow, chick starter, dog-food, game-bird feed and turkey chow.

But, noted the veterinarian, it is certain that ostriches, like humans, "need roughage — high fiber" — in their diet.

Wildlife specialist Dale Rollins, who suggested that humans would fare quite well if they would be as cunning and adaptive to situations as is the coyote, noted that production will not get ostrich producers "in a bind.

"It's marketing that's becoming our Achilles' heel," he said.

Cooper Campbell is a race-horse breeder turned ostrich nursemaid. He can coach a prize mare through the birthing process with ease but when ostrich egg hatches following a 42-day incubation period, he becomes extremely nervous and excited.

Campbell manages the Yellow Rose Ostrich Ranch near Odessa. The ranch, owned by John and Rachel Sheets, once raised thoroughbred race horses.

"Race horses went the same way (boom to bust) the oil-and-gas business went," he said. And most "horses are scared to death" of ostriches, but cattle seem not to be bothered by the big birds.

What Campbell called his experience of eating ostrich "unfortunate" because of the death of a high-dollar bird. Otherwise, he said, the meat is excellent — high in protein, low in cholesterol and "very marketable to health-conscious people."

Midland man indicted for shooting of wife

From Staff Reports

A 39-year-old Midland man has been indicted by a grand jury for the April 16 shooting death of his common-law wife, District Attorney Al Schorre said.

Melvin Burton III, 1307 E. Maple, is charged in the indictment with killing Stephanie Wilson on April 16 at the home they shared.

Burton has been free on $20,000 bond since the day after the shooting, according to court records.

Burton, who reported the shooting to police, was arrested at his home. The weapon believed used in the shooting, a .38-caliber pistol, was found just inside the residence near the front door, according to police. It had been fired twice.

The woman was found lying face up just outside the door. She died during emergency surgery at Midland Memorial Hospital.

A storm door was found shattered, and investigators said the woman was shot through the door by someone who was in the home at the time.

Neighbors told police the couple had lived together for some time, and had been arguing for several hours.

When police arrived at the scene, Burton "appeared to be scared and upset," reports said.

From Staff Reports

Leaders of four Texas cities planned to brief U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, today following a tour of the proposed Superconducting Magnetic Energy Storage Site near Monahans.

The senator, who has been working with local, state, federal and industry leaders to promote the West Texas site, was to take an aerial tour of the property before joining four West Texas mayors at the briefing.

Gramm said the Monahans site "would be an excellent choice" for the $150 million project that uses superconducting magnets to store electricity — much as a giant battery does — for strategic and commercial application.

The project is expected to bring in more than 150 construction jobs during a two- to three-year period, with an annual payroll of $7.5 million to $10 million.

Church buys B Street

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

The public no longer is permitted to drive on B Street between Texas and Illinois avenues now that the First Presbyterian Church has purchased the thoroughfare's easement for $40,000.

The city of Midland abandoned the easement and sold it to the church because it "wasn't in the public interest to continue to maintain that portion of the street," City Attorney David Reagan said today.

The church initially asked the city to abandon the easement in return for the money, Reagan added.

The purchase of B Street was a long-range planning move for the church, explained Jack Howard, assistant to the pastor.

While some unrelated remodeling plans are being discussed with architects, Howard said the church may not do anything with the B Street area for up to five years.

Abandoning easements is something the city does "all the time," Reagan said. Often the city will release control of the easement for the convenience of the school or hospital district, Midland County or a private landowner, he said.

When an easement is abandoned, property owners on either side receive half the right of way. The church owns the property on boths sides of B Street.

The entity which gains ownership is required to pay the city "just compensation," under the Texas Constituion, Reagan added.

Midland High School Principal Jimmie Kelly said today he foresees no problems with the closure of the street directly south of his campus.

"We've always had a good relationship with the church," Kelly said. "I don't feel the closing of the street will affect our operation at all."

A public hearing isn't required to abandon an easement, Reagan added.

Hospital directors approve neonatal intensive care unit

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Seriously ill Midland newborns, which currently would face a trip to a neonatal intensive care unit in Odessa, Lubbock or even Fort Worth, may soon have to go no farther than 2200 W. Illinois Ave.

Hospital district directors Thursday approved a $106,000, three-month budget for development of a neonatal intensive care unit.

The unit, which would not open before July, could care for up to 10 babies, said J.R. Kendrick, MMH senior vice president and chief financial officer. Kendrick, though, said many details still need ironing out.

"Just because the board approved it doesn't mean we're going to do it," Kendrick said, adding that it could take as long as six months to open the facility.

The unit likely would house only three to six babies at a time, he said.

Kendrick said a 1985 hospital study determined that this area needed a neonatal care unit. However, physicians and accompanying staff for the facility were then unavailable, Kendrick said.

At least two area doctors, he said, have since expressed interest in working with a future unit, and other staffing is available.

Board President Margaret Purvis agreed that Midland needs a neonatal unit.

"We do have babies born who need special care," Ms. Purvis said. "Most of them are low-weight born babies."

Purvis said a baby staying in an intensive care unit for several weeks could cost as much as $150,000. She said it would cost a comparable amount for a stay in the proposed Midland unit, although transportation costs would be eliminated.

Museum offers different kind of horn

BIG SPRING (AP) — While the Heritage Museum's unique Longhorn collection has brought notoriety to the West Texas institution, another type of horn will be the focus of an exhibit opening in June.

Forty-six phonographs — many featuring rare and unusual horns — were recently donated to the museum by Big Spring resident Woffard Hardy.

The exhibit, valued at more than $60,000, officially opens June 17; it includes phonographs dating from the late 1800s to the 1920s.

"The collection is certainly unique to the Southwest and may be one of the top collections in the country," said Angie Way, museum director.

Hardy, a member of the museum's board of trustees, began collecting the phonographs in the late 1960s after moving from Big Spring, where he was born and raised, to Ohio.

A retired labor negotiator for a private Ohio telephone company, Hardy returned to Big Spring in 1984. But he found that acquiring rare, vintage record players in Texas was extremely difficult because of limited interest in the hobby.

"There was no movement in the (phonograph) market down here," Hardy said. "And (the collection) was just locked up in my house with nobody looking at it. I thought it would be better to get it somewhere where all the people could see it and enjoy it."

The collection — which features an eclectic assortment of phonographs made by companies such as Edison, Victor and Columbia — has already drawn considerable interest from museum visitors, said Way.

"Lately a lot of people have made comments about the collection. They usually say how they remember hearing the phonograph play at their grandparent's house."

Eventually, the exhibit will be placed in its own room that will be dedicated in the memory of Hardy's mother, Ruth Johnson Hardy.

But for now the collection is displayed near the museum lobby.

"As you can see it as an eye-catching exhibit," said Way. "I think it will definitely be one of the most, if not the most, popular exhibits in the museum.

Many of the phonographs are extremely rare, with some valued at more than $3,500 each. The older models play cylinders instead of disk records. The cylinders play songs of either two or four minutes in length.

The phonographs dating from the late 1890s typically play 78 RPM disks. Many of these record players were called gramophones or graphophones.

One of Hardy's favorites is a Victor 6 model that features a mahogany horn, and an emblem depicting Nipper the dog tilting his head toward a phonograph — Victor's classic logo. He describes it as "the Cadillac model" of the Victor series, adding, "This one was extremely hard to get. Those wooden horns are almost impossible to find."

Most of the phonographs were sold with metal horns, he said. The wooden horns were considerably more expensive, and produced a smoother sound.

Another phonograph, for which Hardy has particular affection, is an Edison model with a huge horn that was used in concert halls.

"This really is rare," said Hardy. "It's probably the rarest Edison that I've got here."

After Edison invented the first phonograph in 1877, other companies began producing their own versions, many of which never caught on with the general public.

Hardy's collection includes brands such as the Zon-o-phone, Busy Bee and Kurtzmann. The Kurtzmann model in the collection is made primarily of glass, and Hardy said, "This is only the second one I've seen in my life."

Several Edison standards — the initial, no-frills phonographs — are in the collection, as is an Edison Diamond, the first model with a diamond needle, and an Edison "shaving machine," which was used to shave the cylinders so a new song could be recorded on it.

Phonograph horns of all shapes and sizes are in the exhibit, some handpainted in bright colors, others wooden and many simply gold or silver colored.

Also on display are the late 1800s version of the portable radio — Edison Gems, which according to Hardy, were small phonographs made for taking to the beach.

While the collection is worth a considerable amount of money, Hardy, who is now devoting more time to acquiring railroad antiques, has no reservations about choosing not to cash in on the phonographs.

"I'd hate to work years and years putting this together and then sell it out," he said. "I'd rather have it here, where I can come up and look at it."

Police say wife abducted, beaten by ex-husband

From Staff Reports

A 35-year-old Midland woman was abducted from her apartment by her ex-husband and beaten before she escaped late Thursday, a police spokesman said today.

The woman, who was not identified by police, was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital and released, spokeswoman Sue Ristom said. A preliminary police report said the woman may have suffered a broken jaw and nose, cuts to her face and bruises.

When the woman arrived at her residence at Quinten's Walk Apartments, 3100 Caldera Blvd., the man was waiting in her apartment, police Cpl. Jim White said.

The apartment showed no signs of forcible entry, White said.

The man then forced the woman to his car, and the two drove off.

"While they were driving around he stopped the vehicle and beat her. She jumped out on the passenger-side," White said.

The woman ran to Kenny's Lounge, 4400 N. Big Spring St. and an employee there called police and an ambulance.

"We have a suspect, but he is not under arrest," White said.

Canned hams recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says a Cedar Rapids, Iowa, food processor, Cedarrapids Meats Inc., has voluntarily recalled an estimated 800 canned hams distributed in 13 states, including Texas, because the meat may be undercooked.

Lester M. Crawford, administrator of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service, Thursday said the hams — a total of about 9,000 pounds — could cause trichinosis if eaten. However, he added, no illnesses have been reported.

The hams were distributed to consignees in Arkansas, Florida, Iowa, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont and Virginia. Those may have sold the hams to customers in other states.

The product was described as canned 11-pound, 4-ounce hams labeled "Wilson Continental Deli Ham, Water Added." The establishment number, "Est. 111" is printed inside the USDA inspection seal on the label.

Crawford said the hams can be idenfified by the code number 0898D embossed on the end of the can. The hams are generally sold as a food service item to establishments such as delicatessens, hotels, schools and restaurants. No other products are involved in the recall.

"As a precautionary measure, we are encouraging all food service establishments who purchased these hams to return them to their distributor," he said. "We are also encouraging consumers who may have purchased this product in sliced form to contact their delicatessen."

Consumer groups blast House Speaker Lewis

AUSTIN (AP) — House Speaker Gib Lewis defended his parliamentary ruling that consumer groups said blocked amendments to an insurance bill that would have placed the insurance industry under tighter regulations.

"The legislator who is most responsible for sticking the people of Texas in the next few years with unfair, large insurance bills is Gib Lewis," John Hildreth, director of the southwest regional office of Consumers Union, said Thursday.

But Lewis, D-Fort Worth, responded, telling reporters, "The way that you all reported it, I can understand why they would say that."

"I thought that was the poorest example of reporting a bill and ruling that I've ever seen in my life," he said.

On Wednesday, Lewis ruled that amendments not related to the caption of an omnibus insurance bill would not be considered.

Lewis' parliamentary ruling denied House members, wanting to strengthen regulation of the insurance industry, a chance to bring up their amendments for consideration.

"The speaker went too far. The sad truth is that the speaker's version of insurance reform has been blurred by the hordes of insurance company lobbyists," Hildreth said.

Tom Smith, of Public Citizen, said "fairness and truth make no difference in the House."

Rebecca Lightsey, of Texas Consumer Association, said, "It is now clear that the speaker abused his power and ruled against every insurance policyholder in Texas."

But Lewis defended his decision, saying amendments must be germane to the bill in order to prevent legislators from trying to sneak unrelated bills through the House.

"What I'm doing is following the House rules, and I'm doing it for the protection of the membership and for the protection of the integrity of the piece of legislation," he said.

The House tentatively passed the bill 98-0, but 48 legislators registered present, but not voting as a protest to the bill. On Thursday, the bill was finally passed on a non-record vote.

But the consumer groups said the amendments were relevant because they restored tougher reforms adopted by the Senate.

OSTRICHES

Of the approximately 100 pounds of meat on a 325-pound bird, "at best" up to 20 pounds could be turned into fillets, Thornberry had noted. Most meat comes from the legs, since the bird's breast is mostly bone and cartilage. The rest would ground into hamburger. At the market, ostrich meat could range from $2 to $15 per pound.

Ostrich farming has the potential of being "very lucrative," said Campbell, but is fraught with "lots of pitfalls."

"There are very few get-rich schemes," he said.

While Thornberry, Hicks and Campbell discussed with the trials and risks of raising ostriches on the farm, Midlander Joyce Low figured birds in the wild do quite well.

"You know," she mused, "nature has a way of doing things right."

Mrs. Low and her husband, Carl Low, are experimenting in ostrich farming at the Yellow Rose Ostrich Ranch.

At the ranch, ostrich-hand Bobby Silvas observed that the bird has a powerful kick and a fast trot.

When the run they really "fly," he said. "They can turn on a dime."

SCORES

Reading, the only area districtwide with mastery below 90 percent, gave the pupils the most difficulty, with 10 elementaries showing a drop. Bowie, Long and South elementaries had a more than 10 percentage point loss on the reading section. Only five campuses in math and five in writing showed a drop.

Peggy Holland, coordinator for reading, said she will be looking into individual campus scores and even specific pupil scores to determine why reading scores dropped at some schools. Teaching strategies for last school year and this year also will be compared, Mrs. Holland said.

"Generally, it looks like we did super," she said.

Marlow said that even if legislators eliminate the first-grade TEAMS, MISD educators will still use the 1989 results as a tool to develop next year's curriculum for the pupils.

Without the TEAMS, school officials will use California Achievement Test results to develop future teaching strategies and objectives for first-graders. The CAT is administered in the spring.

UNIT

Directors also approved a $168,000 budget for a 17-bed skilled nursing unit to open possibly in mid-June. Kendrick said the unit would be for patients who are nearly well but not ready to leave the hospital.

"They still need some care, but they don't need the care that they are getting in a regular hospital room," Kendrick said.

Also approved was $260,000 for purchase of equipment for the hospital's heart surgery program. About $70,000 of the allottment was donated by the MMH Hospital Auxiliary for a heart-lung machine.

The remainder of the budgeted funding for the program would cover heart monitors and other accompanying equipment.

In other action, the directors elected new officers. Ms. Purvis will serve as president, Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld as vice president and Pat Estes, secretary. Judy Farris will continue her duties as assistant secretary.

TEAMS

Of the 17 seniors who took the math and 14 who took the language arts, seven and three passed, respectively, leaving nine who failed at least one section and do not qualify for a diploma.

"We'll always have some kids who will not master minimum skills," said Elayne Hunt, ECISD coordinator of guidance and testing. "They just can't get that piece of paper (diploma)."

Hunt said some students have taken the exit-level test as many as six times and still failed.

Native Plant Society offering seminar

From Staff Reports

The Native Plant Society of Texas will present a seminar on gardening, xeriscaping and native Texas plants at the Sibley Learning Center at Hogan Park, 1407 E. Wadley, at 9 a.m. Saturday.

Featured speakers will be landscape designer Sally Wasowski, president of the Native Plant Society of Texas and author of two books on using native plants in home landscapes, and Benny Simpson, Texas A&M researcher and developer of many common horticultural varieties.

Ms. Wasowski will address an ideal Midland landscape — how to design and install it, what plants to use and how to maintain them. Simpson will discuss the native ranges and horticultural uses of native Texas trees.

Mary Buchanan of Texas Star Nursery will speak on the propagation of plants, particularly raising from seed. Local society member Burr Williams will close the program with a discussion of riparian — waterside — ecology in the Guadalupe Mountains.

Weather permitting — less than blistering heat — and with enough interest, the group will tour several native plant gardens at 3 p.m.

During the 10:30 a.m. break, Simpson and Ms. Wasowski will signs their newest books at an autograph table sponsored by Pages & Prints.

'Designer' barnyard animals predicted

AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cows will still say moo and pigs will go oink in the 21st century, but some Agriculture Department scientists say barnyard animals will have vastly different life styles.

For example, cattle may carry hereditary genes that make them naturally resistant to disease. And steers headed for consumer meat counters may be able to thrive on low-grade crop residues and fibrous plants that are barely digestible now.

Chickens may be grown in closed, disease-free environments, breathing filtered air and eating pasteurized semi-liquid rations.

The predictions are part of a project by the department's Agricultural Research Service to highlight some of the possible changes that agency scientists see over the next 25 to 50 years. Some were described Wednesday in a preliminary report.

"Of course, there are no guarantees that what the scientists envision will become reality," said R. Dean Plowman, administrator of the research agency. "But based on the research they're involved in right now, it's certainly within the realm of possibility."

One of the prospects is a computerized listing of genetic codes for producing livestock with specific characteristics such as disease resistance, says Robert J. Wall, an animal physiologist at the agency's reproduction laboratory at Beltsville, Md.

Researchers already have the chemicals for the basic gene structures and have a machine that can recreate the desired gene, he said. The missing ingredients are the blueprints for putting them together, the genetic codes that determine all living things.

"We can read the alphabet of specific genes, although only in the last 10 years have we been able to do this with genes from higher organisms," Wall said. "We know the words, but we don't know the syntax of the sentences. There may be 100 genes involved in eye color. We have to learn not just what they are, but how they work together."

The report said growing broiler chickens in a closed environment would eliminate infectious diseases in the flock and boost the growth efficiency of the birds, since none of the feed energy would be needed for warmth.

Steers might be able to thrive on woody plants and forages if researchers can find a microorganism that can break down the lignin, or binder that holds fibers together. Or they might be able to "borrow a gene from termites and insert it in a microbe that already lives in the ruman (stomach) of cattle," the report said.

In the poultry sector, breeder hens might be developed which could "double their current rate of 140 chicks per year" through artificial insemination, it said. Also, the industry might use dwarf breeder hens to lower feed costs.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Preliminary signup figures released by the Agriculture Department show that farmers are putting millions of idled

Under this year's programs, farmers will idle 29.2 million acres, little more than half of the 54.2 million acres contracted to be taken from crop production under the 1988 programs, officials said Wednesday.

To be eligible for federal price supports and related benefits, farmers are required to take a percentage of their base acres from crop production and put the land in conservation uses that help protect the soil.

Last year's drought cut production severely, triggering higher grain prices and a drain on U.S. stockpiles. The department eased idling requirements for this year's crops in an effort to rebuild inventories.

The idled or "diverted" acres signed up for 1989 included: corn, 10 million acres, down from 28 million signed up for 1988; sorghum, 2.8 million acres, down from 4.1 million; barley, 2.1 million acres, down from 2.9 million; and oats, 300,000 acres, unchanged.

Crops, livestock prices higher than anticipated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices for crops and livestock have edged higher than Agriculture Department analysts expected and may boost farmers' cash income prospects for 1989 by at least $2 billion from the forecast of just a month ago.

Greg Hanson of the department's Economic Research Service said figures for the fourth quarter of 1988 showed that cash receipts for sales of major commodities produced on the nation's farms "were stronger than forecast" initially and that the momentum continued into the first quarter of 1989.

"Our crop receipts are projected to set an all-time record in 1989," Hanson said Monday in an interview. "There has been price strength in both crops and livestock."

The latest projections put 1989 cash sales of livestock at around $81 billion, with sales of crops at $76 billion. But expenses are rising, too, as farmers put more cropland back into production and direct federal payments to farmers decline.

Nationally, including all farm-related cash receipts, the gross cash income of farmers could be in the range of $168 billion to $173 billion, compared with about $170 billion in 1988. Expenses are forecast at $115 billion to $119 billion, compared with $113 billion last year.

As a result, Hanson said, farmers this year could see net cash income in the range of $50 billion to $55 billion. That would be down from the 1988 record of $57.7 billion.

Just a month ago, the agency forecast 1989 net cash income at $48 billion to $52 billion.

Net cash income is the annual difference between gross cash income and cash operating expenses. As defined by the agency, it is the amount of money farmers have available to pay debts, make purchases and pay for family living expenses.

Rain eases drought, but no help for wheat

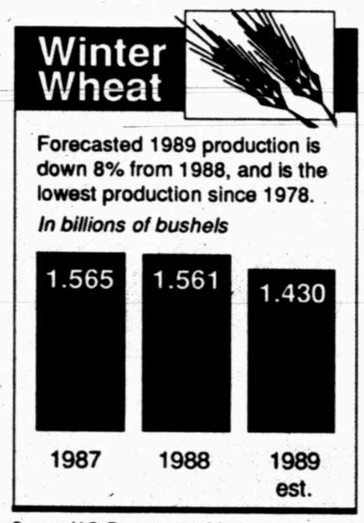

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rain has helped take the edge off persistent drought conditions in the central and southern Great Plains and has slowed field work in the eastern Corn Belt and the Delta region, say government crop watchers.

But despite the rain, the outlook for winter wheat in much of the plains continues to be poor. Harvest is under way in several states, including Texas and Oklahoma.

On Capitol Hill, lawmakers are putting together a 1989 version of last year's huge $3.9 billion drought aid package. Although no firm cost estimate has been tied to the current package, it would contain many of the financial aid features of last year's measure.

The latest report by the Joint Agricultural Weather Facility said corn planting nationally was 84 percent complete by the end of the May 15-21 survey week, lagging the normal pace by only two percentage points. However, in the wetter areas of the eastern Corn Belt, planting of the new crop lagged far behind.

"Planting was complete in Texas and nearly complete in Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska," the report said.

But in Ohio, where 85 percent of the corn acreage is usually planted by now, only 24 percent was seeded, the report said. In Pennsylvania, 19 percent of the corn was planted by May 21, compared with 62 percent in normal years.

The weather facility, operated by the Agriculture and Commerce departments, said the 1989 soybean crop was about 39 percent planted, only two percentage points behind normal. However, plantings lagged sharply in some areas, including Ohio, where only 6 percent of the estimated soybean acreage had been planted, compared with a normal 56 percent.

Cotton plantings, at 60 percent, were nine points behind the usual rate. Although planting was complete in California, it lagged in the Delta and Southeast.

A related report by the USDA's 1989 drought task force headed by Undersecretary Richard Crowder said that "timely rains in the Corn Belt are promoting rapid germination and establishment of this year's crop."

But the report added that the impact of recent rain in winter wheat areas will depend, in part, on future weather.

"If another (weather) front brings more rain as predicted, moderate improvement in crop conditions could occur," the task force said.

The National Weather Service calls for "moderate to heavy rain in the Great Plains and Corn Belt in the next 5 to 10 days," it added. "The outlook through mid-June still calls for cool, wet weather in the South and East, and warm, dry weather from the eastern Dakotas into the central Corn Belt."

A new 30- and 90-day weather outlook is scheduled to be issued by the Weather Service next week.

Meanwhile, leaders of the House Agriculture Committee agreed Tuesday to push through a broad package of assistance this week for farmers suffering crop losses from continuing drought.

The committee, under the agreement worked out by Democrats and Republicans, will act on the legislation at a session Thursday.

Monthly report form confuses producers

The Texas Beef Industry Council recently enclosed a monthly report form with its fiscal year 1987-88 annual report that was mailed to 85,000 Texas cattle producers. In the country, some cattlemen assumed that, because the Beef Promotion Monthly Report Form was enclosed, they had to turn it in or were required to make an annual sales summary. This form was enclosed for private treaty transactions.

Kiker

If you buy a bull in the country you are responsible for checking off $1 per head and remitting these funds to the Texas Beef Industry Council.

Some producers are confused over whether private treaty sales should be checked off. The answer is "yes." All cattle sales must be checked off. In private treaty sales, it is solely the buyer's responsibility to deduct the $1 per head. These checkoff funds and a monthly report form must be received in TBIC offices by the 15th of the month following the sale. This form, when received in TBIC offices, fulfills the seller's obligations as well.

For more information, contact the Texas Beef Industry Council at 8310 Capital of Texas Highway N., Suite 440, Austin, Texas 79731; (512) 345-3531.

Pima cotton crop booming, gets top prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whether it is called Pima cotton or extra-long staple cotton, the fiber ELS is a rapidly growing crop that is demanding top prices from discriminating textile manufacturers around the world.

In the United States, market prices for ELS have been high enough the last two years so that the Agriculture Department hasn't had to make "deficiency payments" to growers.

For example, last week the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service announced the average market price for ELS cotton was $1.15 per pound. The target price for 1988 ELS was 95.7 cents per pound, meaning growers won't get any price subsidies.

Upland cotton, which accounts for most U.S. production, averaged 56.5 cents per pound last year, well below the 1988 upland target of 75.9 cents — which meant millions of dollars in deficiency payments to farmers.

The USDA generally calls it ELS but notes that American Pima is the better-known name. Everyone agrees that Pima, or ELS, is a special kind of cotton having a fiber lint measuring generally 1-3/8 inches to 1-3/4 inches long. The International Cotton Advisory Committee traditionally defines extra-long staple as 1-3/8 inches or longer.

From a total cotton production standpoint, ELS is puny. The U.S. cotton harvest last year was about 15.4 million bales, with more than 15 million bales of that comprised of upland cotton, the shorter-staple fiber that is grown commercially in at least 17 states from Georgia to California.

But the 338,200 bales of ELS cotton in 1988 was a record output.

Farmers, ranchers urged to see officials for losses

AUSTIN (AP) — To help speed up the process of obtaining federal disaster aid, farmers and ranchers who suffered losses in the recent tornadoes and flooding are being urged to contact local officials.

The Texas Department of Agriculture said Monday that producers should report damages to their county judge, county extension agent and the county director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service as the counties work on applications for federal disaster declarations.

During the past few weeks, 19 tornadoes were reported in Texas, from Del Rio in the south to Amarillo in the Panhandle.

Flooding was reported in 26 communities, according to early estimates by the state Division of Emergency Management.

Officials in several counties are applying for federal disaster aid, which would make the counties eligible for a variety of programs, including emergency loans from the Farmers Home Administration, plus emergency funds for rebuilding stock tanks, irrigation ditches and terraces and cost-sharing on livestock feed.

Compiling preliminary dollar estimates of damage is particularly difficult and time-consuming for local officials seeking such declarations, said Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

"You can help yourself by helping local officials," Hightower said.

Hearst News Service

There's hope for breaking into the lucrative Japanese rice market, despite two unsuccessful attempts, said an official with the Houston-based Rice Council.

A visit by a Russian delegation has sparked speculation that the Soviet Union may soon be buying American rice, said Jim Willis, the council's vice president for foreign market development.

China has turned from a seller to a buyer of rice.

And at home, U.S. consumption of milled rice has jumped approximately 14 percent in three years. Rice cakes and rice bran are the latest boom products.

Exports, though, continue to be crucial for the rice industry, which needs to sell at least half its output of rice to remain profitable. And recent developments suggest that the export market will be strong.

World stockpiles have shrunk to a month and one-half supply.

Thailand has a potentially good crop ready for harvest, but its main crop is harvested in November and December; and the size of the harvest will depend upon this fall's monsoons.

Thailand is the United States' toughest competitor. Thai farmers' low labor costs give them an edge on U.S. farmers.

In Japan the biggest problems are political ones.

The second attempt by the Rice Millers Association and the Rice Council to force trade sanctions against Japan for its restrictions on American rice resulted only in a strongly-worded warning from the U.S. trade representative.

Rice prices in Japan are several times higher than in the United States.

The group is fighting to hold onto its share of the European Common Market. The U.S. rice industry there is battling a proposal to raise levies, already as high as the price of the rice. In addition, a new EC policy encourages attempts to grow long grain rice in Spain by offering large subsidies.

A Russian group that last week toured Arkansas, the nation's largest rice-producing state, was seen as a major step toward sales.

"I've never seen a delegation so interested in our industry or our product," said Willis. There were rumors of sales but none has been confirmed. The Soviet Union consumes almost as much rice as the United States.

Iraq is presently this nation's largest rice market. Every dollar spent on promotion and advertising in the Middle East returns more than $20, said Willis.

The Rice Council's far-flung promotion effort includes sponsoring a women's professional basketball team in Senegal. And, in what is considered a breakthrough, Saudi Arabia has been allowing the American rice industry to advertise on television.

Even Vidalias can drive researchers to tears

The lab technician at the University of Georgia's Coastal Plain Experiment Station peels and grinds samples of Vidalia onions and then conducts chemical tests that may someday enable consumers to identify the strength of an onion.

The gourmet onions have a reputation of being the sweetest, mildest in the world, but when there are 50 to 60 Vidalias to slice in a day, her lab fills with eye-burning fumes and a pungent odor.

"I have to wear a mask and goggles," Mrs. Hayes said. "Otherwise, my eyes burn and my sinuses throb."

She and horticulturist Doyle Smittle are collecting information on sugar and pungency levels in Vidalias.

"We're trying to develop a rapid, objective method of measuring quality in onions," said Smittle. "We'd like to have a technique...simple enough that a grower or group of growers could measure the quality in at least every field of onions they have."

This summer, food scientist Robert Shewfelt will convene a taste panel at the Experiment Station in Griffin to sample some of the same onions that have been tested.

Smittle, who has been studying the compounds in onions since the mid-1970s, hopes to establish a relationship between the chemical composition of Vidalias and the onions preferred by the taste panel.

Onions have virtually no odor until their tissue is damaged by slicing. At that point, an enzyme triggers a chemical reaction that produces ammonia and other substances that cause tears.

Chemical tests give a good indication of an onion's pungency, but they're too complicated and costly for routine use by growers, said Smittle.

El Paso mayoral runoff 'muddy'

EL PASO (AP) — The El Paso mayoral race once turned on subjects such as economic development and crime, but now the debate is about the personal finances of one candidate and her husband.

Ed Elsey says he won't appear at any more campaign forums until fellow City Council member Suzie Azar reveals how much she and her husband Dick earn from businesses they own on property near the airport that they lease from the city.

Mrs. Azar accuses Elsey of trying to divert attention from more substantial issues. Elsey says Mrs. Azar could face a conflict of interest in votes on airport matters. The city owns the property the airport is on.

Under Elsey's prodding, Mrs. Azar issued a statement saying she and her husband had a net worth of about $3.7 million. But she has not revealed how much she and her husband earn from property near the airport, calling Elsey's questions a smoke screen. Elsey, owner of a medical supply business, lists his net worth at $378,875.

Legislators hopeful of pact

AUSTIN (AP) — House and Senate conferees remained far apart trying to reach a compromise on workers' compensation, but were hopeful they could complete their job before the end of the regular session.

"I think there's reasonable people on both sides. I think we'll be able to work out a compromise piece of legislation that does exactly the things that we're all interested in doing," Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, said Thursday.

Meanwhile, Gov. Bill Clements reiterated his vow that if lawmakers fail to pass an "acceptable" reform to the system of compensating injured workers, they will face a special legislative session.

The workers' comp conference committee quickly found itself at odds on the issue of resolving disputed claims between injured workers and the insurance carrier.

"I hope very much we can reach accommodation...but I don't underestimate the size of our task," said Rep. Richard Smith, R-Bryan.

With four days remaining in the session, the conference committee will try to settle major differences between Senate and House proposals.

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Scientists released 800 Kemp's Ridley sea turtles into the Gulf of Mexico off Padre Island as part of a continuing program to help the species survive.

Last year, about 1,500 turtles were released into the Gulf, 1,150 of which were Kemp's Ridleys, the most endangered of the world's oceangoing turtles. The rest were loggerheads and several rehabilitated turtles.

Strong winds made the expedition rough, said Tony Amos, research associate with the University of Texas Marine Science Institute in Port Aransas, which donates the use of its research ship "Longhorn" to release the turtles.

"We try to keep track of where they go. We watch them as they take off and try to get an idea, but it's difficult," Amos said.

To help, researchers released a number of "drift cards" with the turtles to determine where currents might carry them.

Parent advocacy groups battling for relief, help

By LENA WILLIAMS
New York Times News Service

A parents' movement is astir in the United States. Unlike other recent social movements, this one is not a battle for rights or equality, but for relief.

Increasingly criticized by educators, social workers, the clergy and law-enforcement officials for the way they rear their children, parents are joining forces in a patchwork of self-help groups, community programs, referral services and lobbying campaigns for increased family services.

More than 2,000 of these sometimes informal programs exist nationwide as against only 50 in 1983, according to the Family Resource Coalition, a private Chicago-based social-services organization.

Many of the parents share a belief that government, employers and institutions should do more to help families deal with daily burdens and stresses. As a result, some sociologists see these new parent-advocacy groups as part of a trend toward citizen-activist politics across the ideological spectrum.

The leaders of the emerging movement, which tries to deal with dramatic changes in family life and work patterns across a broad range of social and economic levels, view it as an extension of earlier social movements, in particular the women's movement. Women, both mothers who hold jobs and full-time homemakers, are the most visible members of the support groups and their umbrella organizations.

In the five years since Lora Lag, a 36-year-old mother of three in Evanston, Ill., joined the Family Focus Center, a non-profit parent support program run the Family Resource Coalition, she has helped form a reading club, a mother's support group and raise $50,000 for the center.

"These programs are giving parents more self-esteem," said Mrs. Lag, a former elementary-school teacher whose husband is a lawyer. "And that's giving us the confidence to take on larger issues affecting community, children and family."

SHE RECENTLY joined Parent Action, a five-month-old nationwide group that hopes to have the same impact on family issues in Congress and state legislatures that the American Association of Retired Persons has on issues affecting older Americans.

Emilia Davis, a 40-year-old single mother of five children, 6 to 23, credits the Committee for Boston Public Housing, a family-service program for residents of city-owned housing in that city, with rebuilding her confidence and her family's confidence in her ability to cope.

"Now, when I feel like I'm going to scream, I have people at the day-care center or at the committee that I can call or turn to for help," she said.

Mrs. Davis is also attending Northeastern University with the help of financial aid the committee helped her get.

Mrs. Lag and Mrs. Davis are two of thousands of parents who, as part of a movement that cuts across racial and economic lines, are building partnerships in programs like these:

- Parents as Teachers, a state- sponsored project in Missouri that helps about 50,000 families of all income levels with in-home counseling on child care and monthly meetings where parents share child-rearing experiences.
- Drop-in centers in Evanston and several other cities where parents can socialize and exchange ideas. A majority of the families enrolled are middle class and white. Special efforts to attract low-income, minority parents are under way.
- The Parent Leadership and Training project in Seattle. Two programs, one for low- and middle-income parents, the other for migrant families, train parents to work with school officials on educational and child-care issues and to develop an understanding of parental rights and responsibilities. Each of the programs has a component intended to attract the growing numbers of immigrants to the area from Asia.

Child-care experts like Drs. Benjamin Spock, T. Berry Brazelton and Penelope Leach, pediatricians who for years counseled parents on everything from toilet training to how to explain the prospects of nuclear war to their children, are now telling them that many of their problems cannot be resolved without outside help.

THEY SAY that only by changing how governments and other institutions deal with families will they be able to do an adequate job as parents.

"It's time for parents to get mobilized around issues like quality affordable day-care, parental leave, flexible work schedules and well-paid part-time work," said Brazelton, clinical professor of pediatrics at Harvard University. "There is enough criticism in the air to make them want to band together to get mutual support on issues that affect all parents."

A survey in 1987 of 3,001 families by the polling concern Louis Harris & Associates, concluded, "There is a growing recognition by society that families have been severely weakened in the past two decades due to divorce, broken homes and a rise in single-parent households; that families can no longer be expected to do an effective job as parents without support networks."

Earlier this year, Parent Action, a non-profit group financed through membership fees and services and by private and corporate donations, opened offices in Washington and 16 states. The move comes as lawmakers are considering nearly 20 bills dealing with child care and other family issues.

"We want to teach parents that they are powerful," said Mary Conklin, executive director of Parent Action. She cited the example of the AARP in helping retired Americans. "Despite the diversity of such a group, they were able to find common ground on issues like Medicare and Social Security."

Leaders of Parent Action say they hope to rally parents around two issues that affect the nation's 39 million families: child care and parental leave. They say their cause has the support of a growing segment of the American public.

A survey this year by Louis Harris on child care, a follow-up to the 1987 one, showed that of more than 4,000 people polled, 73 percent of the parents and 64 percent of other adults believed the "Federal Government should establish and pay for programs to set up child-care centers to provide quality day care for children."

The second poll, which was conducted by Harris for the Philip Morris Cos. Inc., partly to understand changing consumer desires, surveyed 2,009 households with children age or younger and 2,041 adults who are not parents or who have children older than 6.

It found that 97 percent of the public believes that "in order for parents to feel confident about the care their children receive, parents must play an important part, their wishes should be listened to and their values and cultural differences respected."

THE POLL, taken by telephone from December 1988 to February 1989, has a margin of sampling error of plus or minus two percentage points.

Although groups like the Family Research Council in Washington, and Focus on the Family in Pomona, Calif., want to broaden the legislative agenda to include issues like pornography, discipline and teen-age sex, Parent Action and other organizations prefer to focus on less controversial interests.

Leaders of Parent Action, whose founders include Brazelton and Susan DeConcini, a social worker and mother of three whose husband, Dennis, is the Democratic senator from Arizona, believe that the movement toward a broad-based parents' coalition might founder on attempts to legislate moral and social values.

Yet the other organizations agree with Parent Action in the need for government help for families.

"We are strongly pushing for a $1,000 tax credit that will go to all families under certain income levels with children under a certain age," said Gary L. Bauer, president of the Family Research Council, an advocacy group. His organization also hopes to see child-care benefits provided to grandparents, aunts or uncles who care for children, as well as parents who choose to place their children in child-care centers.

Parents say that besides such tangible benefits, they want respect and understanding from a society they feel blames them for problems beyond their control.

"Sometimes, you do feel a little like Rodney Dangerfield," said Tracey Nicholas-Bledsoe, a corporate executive who is divorced and lives in Hackensack, N.J., with her 9-year-old daughter. "Parents aren't getting respect.

"But everyone is coming up short when it comes to families, from schools to politicians to parents themselves. Instead of pointing fingers, everyone should be sitting down, trying to cooperate."

Her attitude is reflected in the many parent-support programs that have sprung up across the nation. Typical is the Family Focus Center in Evanston.

Much like the youth centers of the 1960s that served as social havens and forums for community involvement, this parents' center offers among its services child care, professionally run workshops and an occasional respite from the pressures of family life.

"These institutions are acting as extended families," Mrs. Lag said. "It helps me as a parent that there is a helping network."

FAMILY MATTERS

Parents rally against teenage drinking

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR FAMILY: Your recent article about parents providing motel rooms and alcohol for their children struck a chord. These parents really anger me. We have two (children) in high school and another nearly there. Peer pressure from irresponsible friends is tough enough without adults compounding the problems.

Some parents have apparently adopted the position that they are just providing a safe place to drink, since the kids will drink anyway. How safe is a drunken motel party? How safe are the kids once they get in their cars?

Other parents host drinking parties in their homes. Are they coldly calculating that it is better to send their child's friends out to their cars a little inebriated, than to have someone else do the same to theirs? These parents are sending strong signals to their kids that they only need to obey the laws they want to obey, and that the parents want their kids to drink.

Texas laws now extend the liability for the drunk's actions to the provider of the alcohol. Jury awards have never been higher. In this legal environment any adult who provides alcohol to minors cannot be using his mind.

I hope you follow up with another column. The senior graduation drinking season is here. CONCERNED PARENT

DEAR FAMILY: I got really angry when I read your column on parents letting their teens have parties and not properly chaperoning them. How can parents do that? What is wrong with them? Don't they know that they are responsible for what happens in their own house?

I am trying to raise two senior high boys by myself and it is hard enough without other parents doing things like that.

I have talked and talked to my sons about drinking and they still come in sometimes with alcohol on their breath. They get mad at me for checking, but I am going to keep doing it. I am not going to stand by and see them turn out like their father. His parents let him drink at home from the time he was 16 and now he is an alcoholic.

What can I do to stop them from going to parties like the one in your letter? I showed them your column and one of them said that it happens all the time. That is so depressing. What can a parent do? WORRIED SICK

DEAR FAMILY: Just a note on your letter about teen parties. We did it when we were in high school in Midland. It was wrong then and it is wrong now. I didn't think so at the time, but now that I have teenagers I really do. Both my husband and I work hard to keep our son and daughter away from these parties. I just wish other parents would too. OLDER AND WISER

DEAR READERS: These letters are a few that were written in response to a letter from a parent concerned that other parents were renting motel rooms for prom parties and not supervising teen parties in their homes. Such activities seem to be common in Midland.

Senior high students are not the only teens involved, either. Several parents of freshman school students told me about similar parties that their teens have attended.

Parents must teach their children about the dangers of alcohol, a mind-altering drug that is illegal for teens. Some parents choose to not notice what is going on — the alcohol on the breath, the stupor, the beer bottles, etc. They accept the argument that "everyone does it." Why would an adult accept such an argument from a child?

Tragically, some parents just don't care. If their teens are not creating direct problems for the parents, then everything else is permissible.

It is wrong to let teenagers drink, or to allow the teenager to believe that he or she can get away with drinking. It is very imortant to respect teens, but it is also important to be vigilant for dangerous situations. Teens are highly susceptible to peer pressure. Parents must provide a safe refuge against such pressure — "I don't care what other parents permit their kids to do, I love you and simply will not permit you to go to that party." I strongly encourage parents to stand firm against teen drinking.

DEAR ABBY

Sitter who lost temper loses client

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 17-year-old girl who has been baby-sitting since I was 13. I've had a lot of problems with one family in particular. (I'll call them the Joneses, which is not their real name.)

One Friday night, Mrs. Jones called and said her husband would pick me up at 9 o'clock the next morning. I was all ready and waiting at the door at 9 a.m. when Mr. Jones drove up at 9:45! I got into his car and slammed the door hard, then I looked straight out the window to let him know I was angry.

He said, "My, aren't we in a bad mood this morning. What's the matter, did you break up with your boyfriend?"

I ignored his question and asked, "Do you know what time it is?" He looked at his watch and said, "It's 9:45."

I said, "You were supposed to be here at 9 and I got up early to be ready. I've been waiting for you for 45 minutes!"

Well, Abby, that was three months ago, and the Joneses have been calling my younger sister to baby-sit ever since. They told her to tell me that if I ever wanted to baby-sit for them again, I would have to change my attitude.

Abby, for two years I've been bathing their kids and changing their diapers, and they dropped me because I reminded Mr. Jones that he kept me waiting for 45 minutes. Do you think I was wrong for saying what I did? — ANGRY SITTER

DEAR ANGRY: It wasn't what you said, it was probably your tone and the manner in which you "reminded" Mr. Jones of his tardiness. You would do well to learn from his criticism and change your attitude to a kinder and gentler one.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a readaholic. Since he has retired, the only time he isn't reading is when he's sleeping, driving the car or in the shower. He doesn't communicate (talk) hardly at all; he's too busy reading newspapers, magazines, books — anything handy.

Can you tell me if this is some kind of affliction, compulsion, obsession or what? I would sure like to know if I should accept this kind of behavior cheerfully. Please help me. This is something new. — LONELY IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR LONELY: Write your husband a note and ask for an appointment to speak with him. Tell him you will make it any time it's convenient for him. This man is clearly shutting you out, escaping behind the printed word.

If this behavior is something new, perhaps he needs a physical checkup. A sudden change in behavior should not be ignored. It could be a symptom of a more serious problem.

DEAR ABBY: I am a high school senior (girl) who has never had a real date. Is there anything wrong with a girl taking the initiative and asking a boy out? (She could even offer to go Dutch.)

Answer in your column. I'm sure lots of other high school kids would like to know. I can't sign my real name, so sign this ... FLORENCE FROM TORRANCE

DEAR FLORENCE: There was a time when I would have said, "A lady never takes the initiative" — but no more. In case you'd like to see what a high school senior (male) had to say on the subject — here's a letter from my files. (I thought it was a keeper.)

DEAR ABBY: I am a high school senior, and about 75 percent of my dates have come about because the girl asked ME. As a matter of fact, it was the girl who asked me out on my first date.

It's a common practice for girls in high school to make the first move. Of all the girls I ever went steady with, they all made the first move.

Most guys lack self-confidence, so there's nothing wrong with the girl making the first move.

One day in school I received a "secret admirer" note from a girl who said she had seen me at a football game and would like to know me better. Because she took the initiative, I dated her and we became very good friends and we date every so often. If it weren't for her making the first move, I would never have met her.

I say, if a girl wants to know a fellow better, let him know it. She has everything to gain and nothing to lose. — C.W.G. IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR C.W.G: I say, right on!

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS, how to prevent unwanted pregnancy and how to handle the pain of growing up. It's all in Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

Weekends no more relaxing than weekdays

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ninety percent of Americans feel no more energetic at the end of the weekend than they do on Friday, according to a recent survey.

The survey for Hilton Hotels Corporation by R.H. Bruskin Associates found that Americans spend 14 hours each weekend doing chores, and women spend more than an hour more than men at such labors (2½ hours more if cooking time is included).

If there are children in the household, even more weekend work is in store.

People with children spend 66 percent more weekend time cleaning, 43 percent more time cooking and 52 percent more time doing laundry than those without children.

"Because of our schedules, there is less time for chores during the work week, so we spend the weekend catching up ...," says Dr. Peter G. Hanson, a stress expert who analyzed the data based on 1,000 interviews.

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

Occasionally, when the boredom of working from my home gets to me, I think of the good old days when I went to an office.

I remember the excitement of a day when I had something new to wear. There was the stimulation of being around other people and the luxury of having a rest room with a key. And then I remember the down side of working in an office: Seven hours of snacking with an hour off for lunch!

That workplace was like a giant cookie. I didn't work at a desk; I worked at a buffet table. The filing cabinets were china closets. The desk lamps were warming lights. I grew at a faster rate than the company.

Every morning when I arrived, I had to run the course between two rows of desks that groaned under the load of doughnuts, sweet rolls and coffee cakes. The out-baskets were lined with Danish. It was worse than facing the Notre Dame backfield. I knew if I made it to my desk, I was safe until coffee break.

Deep breath. First, I had to make it past Mother Mildred, who couldn't stand to see anyone miss breakfast. Breakfast was her answer to irregularity, a bad marriage, deep depression, early menopause, bad skin or a dead car battery. If you refused juice and coffee, she spread rumors about your sexual preference.

Next, there was Shirley, who weighed 85 pounds (30 of that was hair). I dubbed her Meal on Heels. She never ate anything herself, but insisted you "just taste" some new, exotic dish she had made the night before in her experimental kitchen.

Every office has a Cake Queen. Ours was Charlotte, who baked, decorated and torched a cake not only on everyone's birthday, but also for every other occasion you could imagine. I once refused a slice of cake in honor of the first anniversary of her dog's hysterectomy, and she was cool to me for two weeks.

You had to admire the adventurous spirit of Wanda the Wonder Worker, who turned office cooking into an Outward Bound exercise. She begged for challenges. If you had two raw potatoes that needed baking for lunch, Wanda made a solar oven on the windowsill out of the tray that held paper in the copier and foil from a thousand packs of chewing gum. She once served lamb shish kebabs on a letter opener over a fire set in the wastebasket. You don't want to know where she chilled the wine for Lois' baby shower.

One day I took stock of the giant tins of popcorn, boxes of candy bars, crackers, jars of peanut butter and cheeses. Our whole office building could have been under siege for three months, and we still would have gained weight.

I work from my home now, where the only distractions are a microwave, two ovens, a full refrigerator, freezer and pantry of fast foods.

To this day, I cannot answer a phone without automatically shaking the cookie crumbs out of the mouthpiece before I say "hello."

Doodles show personality of doodler

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Doodles are fugitives of the unconscious.

That's what graphologist Alice Weiser calls those squiggles, wriggles, triangles and checks that flow into consciousness via your pen. They happen when your telephone call is on hold, your meeting has stalled or your college professor drones into the ethereal plane.

In other words, when your mind wanders, so does your pen. If you are thinking about what's on the page, that's drawing, and it doesn't tap the unconscious in the same way.

In some cases doodles may be more interesting and revealing than the class notes or phone messages they surround. They may tell you things about yourself even your mother doesn't know.

Weiser, who analyzes handwriting to screen job applicants for employers and potential jurors for lawyers, cannot offer hard, scientific proof of the connection between doodles and personality. Her observations, based on her training in handwriting analysis, link certain common doodling motifs with relatively broad personality characteristics.

She prefers to analyze a sample when the subject is present because she gets other clues from body language and information about them. But she often makes recommendations on jurors and potential employees she has never seen.

Weiser said you cannot tell the sex, age or which hand is used from handwriting. Everything else, from disposition to work habits, may be discerned in certain doodles. A figure must have been repeated at least six times to be considered as part of your personal expression.

There are some extremely common figures that doodlers use repeatedly. The circle, for instance, represents concern with family. Stars denote desire to explore one's creativity. Dots indicate tension and concentration. Spirals can mean a person is deceitful or, if the spiral becomes progressively larger, that the doodler is feeling trapped.

Not all doodles are so simple. From a sample of three squiggly pigs with spiral noses and a fourth holding a four-leaf clover, Weiser characterized the doodler as a person with a sense of humor who was more complicated than she would like others to think, and as a person protective of family.

Large swirls or sweeping curves indicate imagination and the flow of memory. Flowers and hearts, though, are common symbols for happiness or romantic dreams.

The geometric figures like checks, squares, rectangles, straight lines and arrows are more everyday indications of rational thinking. People who doodle triangles are in a highly rationalistic frame of mind. Squares and rectangles are about handling complexities. Drawing geometric shapes and dividing them into separate units denotes rhythm and organization. Horizontal lines express enthusiasm; vertical lines indicate determination. Add an upward arrow to a vertical line for optimism and the reverse indicates pessimism.

People's doodles change over time, just as their signatures do, said Weiser. They vary according to changes in personality and mood. Choice of writing implement is also significant. People who use a pencil don't want to make a commitment. She said those writing in ball point pen are middle-of-the-roaders and felt-tip pens are for those who want the most mileage with the least work.

Placement on the page tells Weiser of other aspects about a person. Doodles that fill a page show that a person has confidence and is "filling the whole space of their life." Doodles in the left corner indicate a person who is clinging to the past. When doodles show up at the bottom of the page, Weiser knows the person lives by his own rules and wants to be in control. Those who doodle on the right are eager for new experiences.

The value of doodle interpretation is dependent on the experience and training of the graphoanalyst.

"Most often they agree, but on occasion their interpretations are dissimilar," said Weiser, who is certified by the Institute of Graphoanalysis in Chicago. Weiser compares any discrepancies to those that exist in ink blot interpretation and dream analysis.

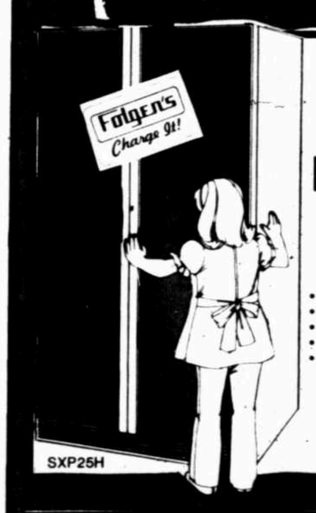

Though Weiser often analyzes handwriting and doodles for serious purposes, she said it can also be done for fun. Cruise ships frequently employ her as part of the entertainment package. On one trip she noticed the proliferation of dollar signs and precisely drawn numbers of one doodling sample. It belonged to the croupier in the ship's casino.

She sees both positive and negative characteristics about people in their doodles. She tells both.

Mears to set Indy speeds

By STEVE HERMAN

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rick Mears says the pole position in a 500-mile race is more a responsibility than an advantage.

"You can win from any seat in the house," said Mears, who will start from the pole in Sunday's Indianapolis 500. "There's a lot of time to work your way through traffic. The big thing, for me, is it's a little safer starting up front at the beginning.

"I can set a pace, if we can lead the race at a pace that I feel is comfortable on the car, on the tires, for the conditions, then we'll do that," the defending champion and three-time winner said.

Mears, who owns a record five poles at Indy, was criticized by some drivers for setting too slow a pace at the start of the 1982 race. Just before the leaders approached the starting line, Kevin Cogan's car veered to the right, clipped A.J. Foyt and bounced back in front of Mario Andretti. Foyt's car was repaired and ready to go when the race was re-started, but Andretti was eliminated.

Andretti blamed Cogan, and Cogan blamed Mears.

"That was to my advantage," Mears said, recalling the slow 1982 start. "I'm the pole-sitter. I'm sup-

Peters' streak over

Pitcher loses for first time since '85

HOUSTON (AP) — Jon Peters' stomach told him something wasn't right, a sensation he hadn't felt before any of his national record 53 consecutive high school pitching victories.

"When I woke up this morning I had a bad feeling about this game," Peters said. "I've had butterflies in my stomach all day."

Peters, who last month set the scholastic record of 51 straight wins, lost for the first time in his high school career Thursday when Brenham was no-hit 3-0 by West Orange-Stark in a Class 4A regional semifinal.

Eric West and Kyle Free allowed eight walks but combined to hold Brenham hitless in the second game of a best-of-three series. Brennam, 27-2, won the opener 5-2 on Wednesday. The final game is tonight.

Peters allowed five hits in seven innings. He struck out eight and tied a career high with five walks. He also threw a wild pitch in the second inning, allowing the Mustangs to score their first run.

Brenham also committed five errors.

"In a way I'm relieved the streak is over, but I'm sorry it had to happen like it did," Peters said.

He said the loss won't tarnish what had been a perfect four years.

"It's not a sin to lose a game," Peters said. "I feel like 53 is something to be proud of. I wish I could have won some more, but that's baseball."

Peters was 13-0 as a freshman, 15-0 as a sophomore and 14-0 last year. He fell to 11-1 with Thursday's loss.

Peters, who will attend Texas A&M, had not lost since the final game of his Little League career when Brenham lost to Taiwan in the semifinals of the 1985 Little League World Series.

West Orange-Stark took a 1-0 lead in the second inning. Kevin Smith led off with a single, stole second and went to third when the catcher's throw sailed into center field. He scored on Peters' wild pitch.

In the fifth, David Fregia singled to left and was safe at second when Mark Lockett missed the throw. The Mustangs loaded the bases when Jason Lingo walked and Bruce Aven singled. Fregia scored when Free hit into a fielder's choice at second.

Rebs play hide-and-come-seek in scrimmage

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

If you left Memorial Stadium Thursday night after the annual Maroon-White spring scrimmage with the feeling that you really hadn't seen the real Midland Lee Rebels, you were probably right.

What you got was some basic vanilla. Oh, the hitting was a vintage Rebel performance and there was a glimpse or two of offensive brilliance, but this isn't what you will see next fall.

For the record, the White beat the Maroon by a 26-14 margin, scoring twice in the fourth quarter to take the scrimmage title.

But, for the most part, this was straight-up wishbone with 21 backs taking turns toting the pighide. The Rebels only rarely broke the 'bone and seldom used the "I" formation. In other words, no chocolate sprinkles for this vanilla attack. And it was designed by Lee coach Earl Miller.

"All we were trying to do is let a lot of kids play football," said Miller. "We wanted everyone to leave spring training with a good taste in their mouth. We had a good spring. I'm well pleased and this will help us come back next fall with a good attitude.

"We stuck with the basic wishbone and didn't use much 'I.' We just wanted to see a lot of kids play."

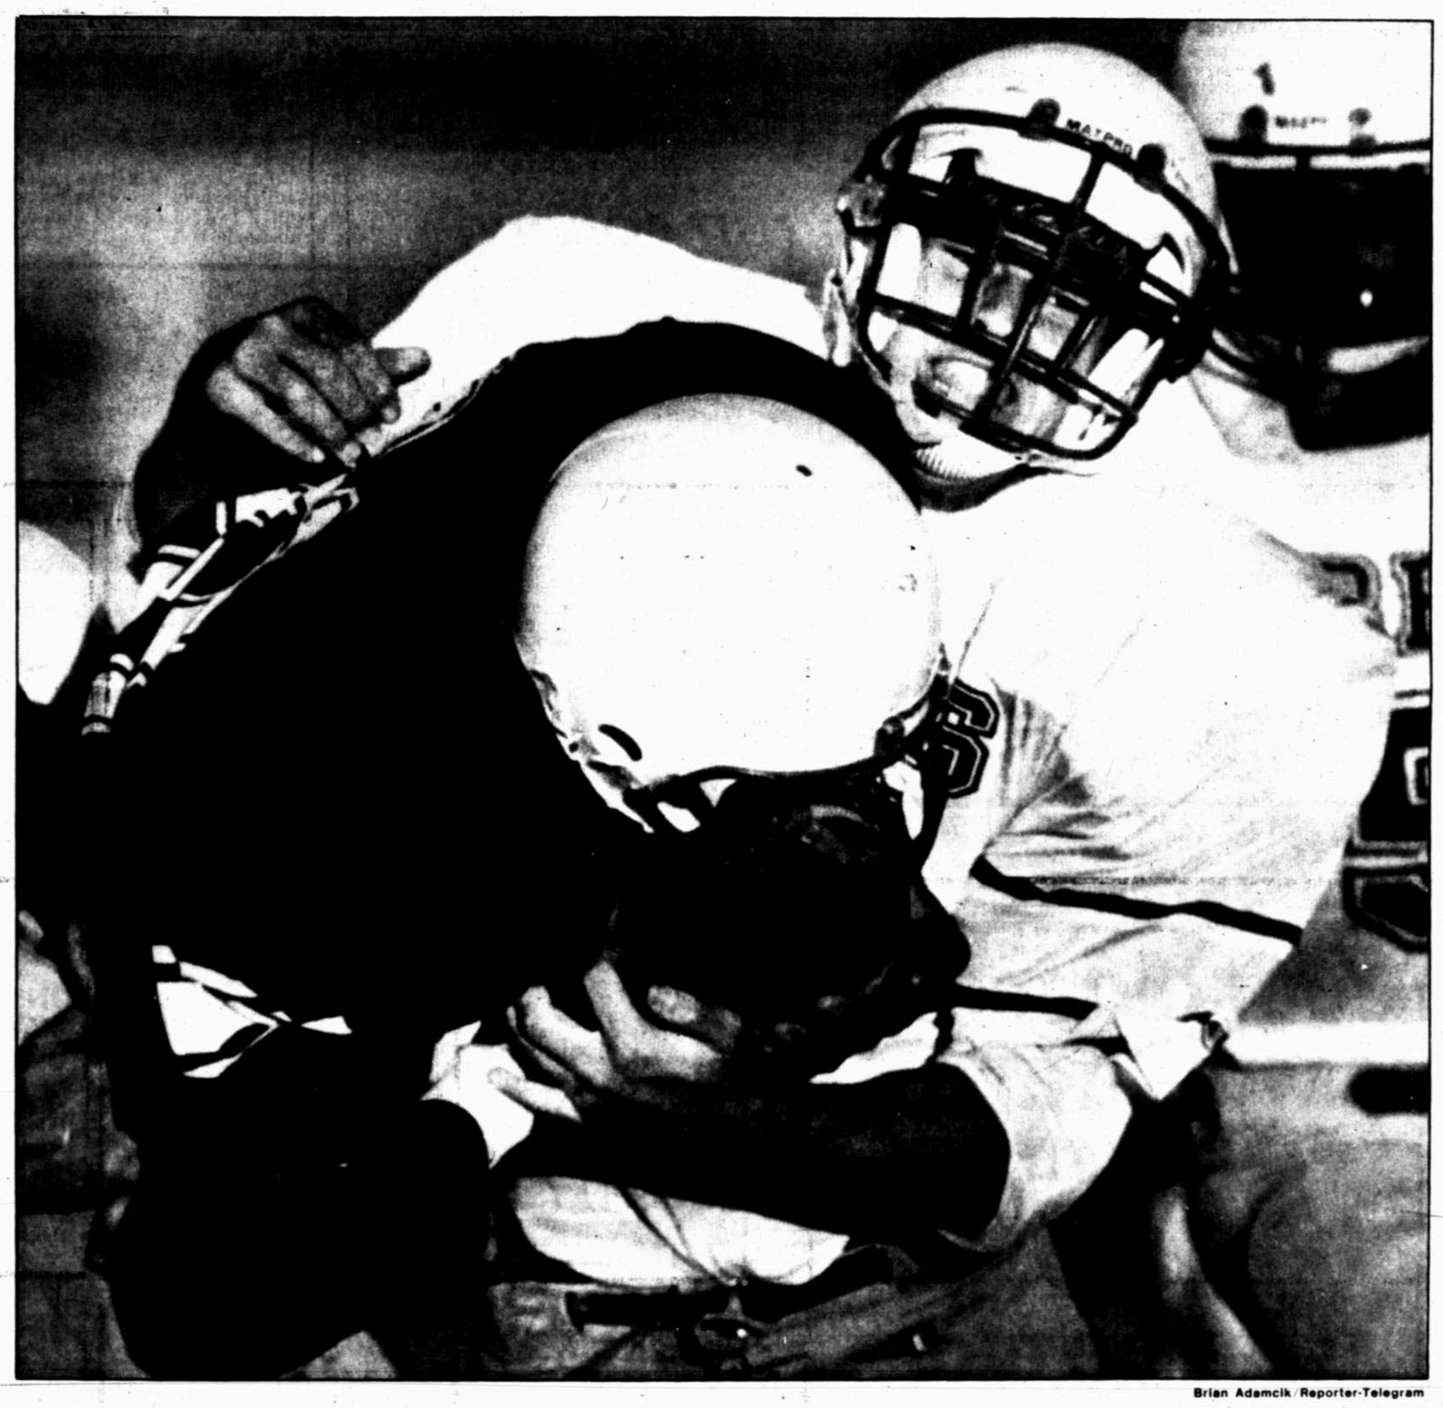

Star running back Farris Strambler, who is heading into his senior season after rushing for over 1,200 yards last year, carried 19 times for 140 yards, producing an average of 7.4 yards per carry. You might see him touch the ball 19 times in the first half in some games next year.

Strambler played for the losing Maroon team. He did score on one run of six yards. It was the four and six yard fourth quarter TD runs by Reggie Webb that produced the victory. The White trailed 14-12 going into the final period.

But there were some unusual offensive heroes. And that alone should give Lee opponents some nightmares through the summer.

The first three touchdowns came from quarterbacks and none are scheduled to be starters next fall. Mark Jacobs, a senior-to-be, got the White off and running with a 35-yard TD romp. Then the Maroon's Derrick Turner, a junior, recovered a White fumble from a defensive linebacker post to set up his own 24-yard TD run. Junior White quarterback David Sullivan then raced 59 yards to give the White a 12-8 lead. Sullivan ended the scrimmage with

Phoenix coach honored

By WALTER BERRY

PHOENIX (AP) — Fifteen months ago things weren't so funny for Cotton Fitzsimmons.

In the middle of his first year as Phoenix's director of player personnel, he swung a controversial five-player trade with the Cleveland Cavaliers that brought the Suns three eventual starters — guard Kevin Johnson, center Mark West and forward Tyrone Corbin.

In return, the Suns gave up All-Star forward Larry Nance, the team's captain and most popular player, plus reserve forward Mike Sanders.

Fitzsimmons can laugh about it now since he was selected the NBA's Coach of the Year on Thursday for the second time in his 16-year career.

"The media condemned the trade in both cities and the fans didn't like it either," Fitzsimmons recalled Thursday. "The fans here wanted me taken out on the next train leaving town. And not on the train, under it!

"It goes to show what the fans and the media know because it was a good trade for both teams. I don't see how it could turn out any better for us."

Cotton Fitzsimmons

Phoenix, 28-54 last year under John Wetzel, went 55-27 this season for a plus-27 turnaround — the third-best in NBA history and the second-highest victory total in the Suns' 21-year history.

It also was the first 50-win season of Fitzsimmons' career and helped Phoenix make the playoffs for the first time since 1985.

Flames make history in Stanley Cup win

By ROBIN FINN
New York Times News Service

MONTREAL — Not tradition, not place, not sentiment, and not even the tacit patent the Canadiens had held on games where defense was the star stopped the Calgary Flames from capturing their first Stanley Cup championship Thursday night in Montreal.

The Flames, as they learned to do in this series, nursed a one-goal lead all night at the Forum, then held off a desperate third-period charge by the Canadiens to end the series with a 4-2 victory.

The Flames won the series, four games to two, and Al MacInnis, the first defenseman in National Hockey League history to lead in playoff scoring, won the Conn Smythe Trophy as the most valuable player in the playoffs. He had 7 goals and 24 assists for 31 points.

The Canadiens were 7-0 when facing elimination at the Forum before and had prevailed in the last nine championship rounds in which they appeared.

Montreal secured its most recent Stanley Cup in 1986 at the expense of a younger and less determined collection of Flames, whose rookie goalie, Mike Vernon, couldn't keep apace with Montreal's own rookie and playoff MVP, Patrick Roy, in that go-around.

"We are a better club than we were then," Vernon said when this series was tied, 1-1. "And I'm a better goalie, and we're going to show them."

The margin of difference between the clubs Thursday night, as it had been all series long, was slight and the outcome uncertain until Doug Gilmour whisked the fourth Calgary goal into the vacant Montreal net with 1 minute, 3 seconds left.

Calgary had taken a brief 3-1 lead midway through the third period when Gilmour whacked his own rebound out of the air and into the net past Roy at 11:02.

But the Canadiens stormed back only 51 seconds later when Rick Green's low shot flew beneath the glove of a fallen Vernon, just after the goalie had been shoved to the ice surreptitiously by Claude Lemieux at the edge of the crease.

The Canadiens continued to batter Vernon, but he and his teammates kept their composure long enough to insure a celebration in Calgary and deal a stunning blow to Montreal's crusade for its 24th Stanley Cup.

Throughout the series, the Canadiens had said they played best when they played scared. If so, they had a novel opportunity to be petrified, for not yet in the playoffs had they come close to facing elimination. And not once, through two

From Staff Reports

TYLER — Midland College, fresh off its "official" national men's tennis championship, marched through two opponents here Thursday to reach today's semifinals in the unofficial team championship. The Chaps routed Brunswick College, Georgia, in the first round of the 16-team event, 5-1, and then ousted Jefferson State (Ala.) College, in the second round, 5-2.

MC was scheduled to meet Anderson (S.C.) in the semifinals at 1 p.m. today. Finals are slated for Saturday.

The team tournament currently is used by the NCAA. Teams are placed in brackets and the first team with five wins proceeds to the next round, the loser is eliminated. Under that format, every player is active in each round although the doubles teams may not even get on the court. That was the case in the win over Brunswick, as the Chaps took five of six singles meetings. Against Jefferson State, MC was up 4-2 after the singles, so all three doubles teams took the court. When Midland won a doubles match, the other two matches were suspended immediately.

In a minor upset, Palm Beach, Florida, defeated Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College (Ga.), 5-1. ABAC finished fourth in the regular NJCAA tournament and was seeded fourth in the team event.

"The players have been dropping like flies because of the heat and humidity," Williams said. "After the emotion of the regular tournament, it's hard to get up for these matches, but as long as we're playing we've decided we'd like to be the first team to win both titles in the same year."

Slaught leads Yanks, inspires ailing mother

By RICK WARNER
AP Sports Writer

Slaught had four hits, including a tiebreaking double in the seventh inning, as the New York Yankees beat the California Angels 8-6 Thursday night.

After the game at Yankee Stadium, Slaught called his mother, who had a cancerous kidney removed Wednesday in California.

"I said 'Way to go' and she said 'Way to go,' " Slaught said.

The catcher said he was distracted by his mother's operation during Wednesday night's game, but was able to regain his concentration Thursday.

"I came out of my fog," he said. "It's your priorities. My mom comes first."

"Isn't it nice to see some tallies and some hits and some runners running around the bases?" New York manager Dallas Green said.

Elsewhere in the American League, Detroit beat Cleveland 9-5, Milwaukee downed Oakland 4-1 and Boston routed Seattle 10-0.

Slaught, who raised his average to .278, doubled to right, singled to left and had an infield hit in his first three at-bats.

Angels reliever Willie Fraser, 1-3, walked Ken Phelps with one out in the seventh and the game tied 6-6. After Barfield popped up, Pagliarulo singled and Slaught blooped a double just inside the right-field line to score Phelps.

"I've hit just about every spot," Slaught said. "In fact, I got a blooper just over the pitcher's head. It just landed in the right spot."

Tommy John, making his 700th career start, allowed six hits and five runs in 5 1-3 innings. The 46-year-old pitcher has given up 42 hits in his last 28 1-3 innings and is winless in five starts since April 17.

"He's an enigma," Green said. "I don't know if he can get big-league hitters out on a consistent basis anymore."

Dale Mohorcic, 1-1, allowed one run in 1 1-3 innings and Dave Righetti finished for his seventh save. California starter Mike Witt struggled, giving up eight hits and five runs in 2 2-3 innings. Witt has only one win in his last six starts.

"I think it's something mechanical," Angels pitching coach Marcel Lachemann said. "Obviously, there's something that needs to be worked out."

Brewers 4, Athletics 1

Stewart, 8-2, was removed in the eighth inning after giving up nine hits, including five doubles, and all four runs. He entered the game with a 9-0 record against the Brewers.

"When a guy beats you that many times, you're certainly aware of it," Yount said. "I'm not saying you go into the batter's box with it on your mind. But it's nice to finally beat him. If you play long enough the odds are in your favor."

Tigers 9, Indians 5

Gary Pettis' leadoff triple triggered a three-run first inning for Detroit, which also had six doubles and two home runs. The Tigers finished their homestand 8-2, their best long stay at Tiger Stadium since 1984.

Red Sox 10, Mariners 0

Mike Smithson pitched his first shutout since 1986 and Mike Greenwell had four hits and four RBIs as the Red Sox completed a three-game sweep of the Mariners.

Razorbacks stunned in Northeast opener

Associated Press

WATERBURY, Conn. (AP) — Arkansas starter Mike Oquist equaled his season strikeout high with 10 and got help from his offense's 12 hits but could not stop scrappy LeMoyne College here Thursday as the Dolphins handed the No. 1 seed Razorbacks a 7-5 upset loss in game one of the NCAA Northeast Regional baseball tournament.

LeMoyne, 26-5, now advances to meet the loser of the Illinois-Pennsylvania game Friday at 1:30 p.m. Arkansas, 46-14, plays the loser of the Arizona State-George Washington game Friday at 10 a.m.

The Razorbacks continued to be plagued by a lack of timely hits in suffering their first loss as a top seed in an NCAA playoff game. Eleven Hog hitters were stranded, including the tying run in the ninth, despite the fact Arkansas outhit the Dolphins, 12-10.

"I thought LeMoyne did an outstanding job," said Arkansas head coach Norm DeBriyn. "They battled hard. At times, we had the chance to string some things together but we never got the key hits."

Dolphin starter Matt Stevens went the distance and moved to 8-1 on the year with the win. His teammates gave him a 3-2 lead in the fifth he never relinquished as the underdog ECAC tourney champs from Syracuse, N.Y., kept Arkansas at arm's length all day.

LeMoyne scored two in the third after going down in order in the first two frames. A one-out single by Chris Cergol and a sacrifice bunt by Kevin Collins put Cergol in scoring position for Ken Harring's single to left.

LSU, A&M open with wins

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Nevada-Las Vegas had all of its luck working against Louisiana State in the NCAA Central Region baseball playoffs.

But LSU coach Skip Bertman's gamble paid off and it helped the second seeded Tigers rally twice to beat the Rebels 12-10 Thursday in the tournament's opening game.

Bertman decided to pull his ace starter, Olympic gold medalist Ben McDonald, who had a slow start, and replaced him with Paul Byrd.

Byrd slowed the quick-starting Rebels and the Tigers finally won it on Craig Cala's two-run single in the seventh inning, capping a combined 27-hit game.

Top seeded Texas A&M hammered sixth seeded Jackson State 23-3, highlighted by a 12-run fifth inning in which Jim Neuman drove in five runs with a two-run double and a three-run home run.

NCAA Central

Third seeded South Alabama blew an 8-0 lead to Brigham Young but the Jaguars rallied for an 11-10 victory in the 10th inning when Jim Shaver hit a two-run homer and pitcher Ed Zenter walked in the winning run.

Thursday's results set up today's schedule that starts with Nevada-Las Vegas facing Jackson State followed by Brigham Young and Texas A&M and Louisiana State against South Alabama.

Nevada-Las Vegas victimized McDonald for four runs in the first inning and it looked like a luckless day for the Tigers.

Giants go from boom to bust in run column

Associated Press

The San Francisco Giants were the highest scoring team in the National League on Tuesday. They haven't scored since.

The Giants' scoreless drought reached two games and 19 innings when the Montreal Expos shut them out 2-0 Thursday. The runs were just enough to make the Expos the NL's new top run producers with 187 to the Giants' 185.

The Expos blanked San Francisco 1-0 on Wednesday night.

"I'll stake my paycheck that we won't get shut out twice in a row again the rest of the year," said loser Mike Krukow, 3-2, who had a one-hitter with one out in the seventh when he gave up a single to Mike Aldrete. Tim Wallach followed with his third homer, snapping an 0-for-16 slump.

In the only other NL games, it was Los Angeles 7, Philadelphia 6; San Diego 2, New York 1; Pittsburgh 7, Atlanta 3.

NL Roundup

"Martinez never leaves the corner," San Francisco's Will Clark said of the veteran Montreal right-hander, who walked one and struck out eight.

Martinez said he attacked the Giants with his fastball, got the benefit of a wind that was blowing in the batters' faces and making the ball move and mixed in a few change-ups and breaking balls.

"I remember Tom Seaver said if you go with velocity, movement and good location, if you get two out of those three, you'll win a lot of ballgames," Martinez said.

Dodgers 7, Phillies 6

Eddie Murray triggered Los Angeles' biggest first inning since 1985 with a three-run double and the Dodgers needed all seven runs to hold off Philadelphia.

Winner Tim Belcher yielded all the Philadelphia runs and nine hits in 7 1-3 innings and won for the first time this season without pitching a shutout. Jay Howell, the third Los Angeles pitcher in the eighth inning, put down a Philadelphia rally and earned his eighth save.

The Dodgers chased Don Carman, 1-7, after only 29 pitches. The seven runs were the most in the first inning by Los Angeles since Sept. 7, 1985, at San Francisco.

Pirates 7, Braves 3

Doug Drabek allowed two runs and six hits in six innings to snap a personal five-game losing streak and Pittsburgh extended its longest winning streak of the season to four games.

Pete Smith, 1-6, yielded four runs and seven hits in six innings. The Braves have lost five straight and 10 of their last 12 games and have scored only 13 runs in their last nine games.

The Pirates broke a 1-1 tie in the fourth when Benny Distefano's second double of the game drove in Glenn Wilson, who singled. They scored again when Junior Ortiz led off the fifth with a single, stole second, was sacrificed to third by Drabek and scored on Barry Bonds' single. In the sixth inning, Wilson hit his seventh home run for a 4-1 lead.

Padres 2, Mets 1

Ed Whitson combined with Mark Davis on a eight-hitter for his fifth straight victory and Tony Gwynn doubled home the tie-breaking run in San Diego's two-run third inning.

Whitson, 7-2, worked 7 2-3 innings, yielding six hits, including Darryl Strawberry's 11th home run in the second inning. Davis fanned Strawberry to end the eighth and earned his major league-leading 15th save.

Travellers fell Angels

From Staff Reports

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — The Arkansas Travelers used a six-run sixth inning to pulverize the Midland Angels, 9-2, Thursday night in Little Rock.

The Travs batted around and belted out six straight hits — three consecutive singles followed by three straight doubles to bring in five of the six runs in the inning. The Travs final run of the frame came on a sacrifice fly by Barnard Gilkey.

The loss drops the Angels to 27-19 as Midland's grip on first shrunk to just three games after Wichita swept a doubleheader over Shreveport. The win moved Arkansas (24-23) over the .500 mark. The Travs are 5½ games out of first in the Texas League's Eastern Division.

Midland scored its first run in the sixth when, with two out, Scott Cerny doubled to drive in Everett Graham, who had reached on a single.

Angel starter Kevin Trudeau continues to have bad luck, going winless in the month of May. Trudeau, who's only non-loss start was a no-decision in a 19-inning game earlier in May against San Antonio, is now 3-4 after starting the year at 3-0.

Lewis leads track and field boycott

HOUSTON (AP) — Carl Lewis and other American Olympic medalists in track and field disgruntled with The Athletics Congress say they are boycotting the national outdoor championships next month.

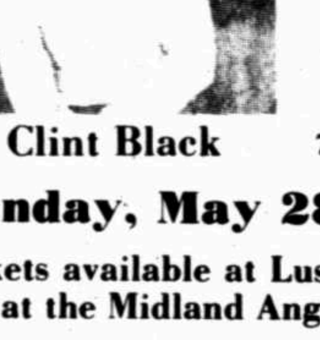

"We cannot continue to be put in this position because the TAC is killing track in America. They are holding back funds, they are misappropriating situations and making it very difficult for athletes to compete here," Lewis, a six-time Olympic gold medal winner, said Thursday.

Lewis said he'd like TAC to establish a plan to pay the top 10 athletes in every event, instead of the current process of paying only about 10 to 15 athletes, including Lewis, while "everyone else gets dogged."

with the players, assistant coaches and the rest of the organization because without them responding to the challenge, there's no winning season, no award, no nothing," Fitzsimmons said. "I realize this award usually goes to the coach of the team that improves the most. The Phoenix Suns are the most improved team this year. I accept it in that vein."

Don Nelson, who coached the Golden State Warriors to a 23-game improvement, finished second with 26½ votes. Cleveland's Lenny Wilkens was third with nine votes, followed by Chuck Daly of Detroit with five, Wes Unseld of Washington four, Rick Pitino of New York two, and Del Harris of Milwaukee and Pat Riley of the Los Angeles Lakers one each.

Fitzsimmons is the fourth two-time winner of the award, which was started in 1963. The others are Nelson (1983 and 1985), Bill Fitch (1976 and 1980) and Gene Shue (1969 and 1982).

Fitzsimmons, who started his pro coaching career with Phoenix in 1970, also was named coach of the year in 1979 after leading the Kansas City Kings to the Midwest Division title.

"I think I did a better coaching job in Kansas City when I won 30 games (in 1981-82) with a roster full of young players. I still don't think I'm the best coach this year, but I'll take it," he said. "I cherish this one a little more because it's for us older guys."

"All the pressure is on us," Roy said after the Canadiens lost their second consecutive game of the series on Tuesday. "But we don't mind pressure. We mind losing more."

The pressure the Canadiens exerted on the Flames in the opening period, where the Flames fired just two shots in the first 18 minutes, was anticipated and repelled. Vernon and his defensemen made no mistakes, and all nine of Montreal's shots were forced aside.

But just as the period seemed destined to end in a scoreless stalemate, a scenario in Montreal's favor, Dana Murzyn's dump-in, turned out to be not so harmless when Colin Patterson snatched the puck up in the slot and slid it above Roy's spread-eagled right pad at 18:51.

Patterson's goal, his first in 13 games, came on Calgary's third shot of the night, and placed the low-scoring Canadiens in the unnerving predicament of knowing they needed at least two goals to force a seventh game.

STREAK

Lingo made it 3-0 on Jason Canizaro's squeeze bunt.

"The people didn't think Peters could be beat," said Free, who picked up his third save after entering the game in the fifth inning. "But we proved it. We did the unbelievable."

"I made a goal I wasn't going to get beat," said West, who walked six in improving his record to 9-0.

On April 28, Peters broke the record of 50 consecutive victories by Tim Moore, of McColl, S.C, who attended the record-breaking game.

Moore set the record in 1977-80, pitching for McColl, but didn't know he had a national record until last year when Peters' streak was publicized nationally.

Peters tied Moore's record April 21 when he pitched a two-hitter against Katy Taylor, striking out 12 batters and retiring the last 15 in a row.

His high school record of 53-1 is two wins shy of the Texas record for total career victories set by Duncanville's Keith Creel, who won 55 games in 1974-77. Creel later pitched in the major leagues with Kansas City.

REBS

Vince Henderson and Ty Chambers, the two quarterbacks who shared the starting role last year, put up only fair numbers. Henderson was the more impressive of the two with 17 yards rushing and 44 yards passing, completing three of six attempts. He completed two passes to John Valles and one to Webb.

Webb and Mantry Dedrich led the White rushing attack with Sullivan aside. Webb, a halfback, had 57 yards rushing to go with the two TDs and Dedrich had 63 yards from the fullback position, where Lee is looking for help. Fullback Alandis Chambers didn't compete in the scrimmage due to a broken foot.

The Lee passing attack was not sharp. Six Lee passers completed only four of 15 passes for 54 yards. Turner had the other completion of 10 yards to Strambler. Henderson started the scrimmage 0-for-3 in the air before hitting three straight in the second half.

The Maroon marched easily for a third quarter score behind the strong running of Strambler, but that was about the only series of plays where the Maroon moved the big back around in different sets.

"We went to some other formations on that drive to help the Maroon catch the White," said Miller, then joked, "I guess Coach (Van Tom) Whatley was afraid his offense wasn't going to score any points."

Defensively, the White got two fumble recoveries from Greg Rich and another from Brad Brunson while Anthony Sims had an interception. Linebacker Enrico Colombus had the hit of the night, meeting Strambler head-on for no gain.

Turner, Robert Manley and Cory Munson recovered fumbles for the Maroon and Turner also had a couple of big hits in the game. With all the fumbles, you can see that some hitting was taking place on both sides of the ball.

Two sophomores-to-be will probably end up on the varsity. Casey Jones looked good at center while Keith Boyd looked good at guard. Both are over 6-feet and 200 pounds.

In the sophomore game, the Maroon and White tied 12-12. Michael Jones scored on runs of 33 and one-yard for the White while Roy Robinson had a 22-yard TD and Jevon Bascus and eight-yard TD for the Maroon.

Lee didn't exactly unleash the weapons it possesses, which is kind of scary. Something special might be in the works before the 1989 season is over.

MEARS

posed to pace the race at what I feel is right. I felt I could get a better jump at that speed, in that particular gear, and get to the corner before the other guys. That's really my prerogative to do that. But everybody hollered about it so much, I figured I just might as well pick it up and go whatever."

This year, Mears was the fastest driver in practice at more than 226 mph and the fastest in qualifications at record speeds of 224.254 for one lap and 223.885 for four laps. He doesn't think those make him the favorite on Sunday.

"Everybody has more faith in me than I do, I guess," he said. "In 1986, the car never bobbled all month long. But on race day, the car couldn't do anything. We just couldn't balance it. When we got in traffic, we couldn't go anywhere. So you just never know about this place until you see the checkered flag."

Mears also said the close competition — six cars were qualified at more than 220 mph and five others were above 218 — makes a pre-race prediction meaningless.

"The cars are getting so well refined, you don't have to work as hard or search to get the car balanced. That alone, along with better teams, better organizations, means a lot of cars out there have a legitimate shot at it."

The only thing he will predict is that the race will be fast.

The two-hour final practice on Thursday lent credence to that opinion, with eight drivers turning faster laps than the 215 that Mario Andretti led with in last year's "carburetion day" practice.

Al Unser, Mears' teammate, was fast at 217.407, followed by Andretti at 217.286, Teo Fabi of Italy at 217.233 and Mears at 216.710.

"Just from what I've felt in practice, the kind of numbers we've been seeing from everybody ... these speeds should hold fairly true," Mears said. "I think you'll see some pretty quick laps on Sunday.

"Everybody realizes you can lean on the car pretty hard. That's something everybody is going to have to keep in mind, to be able to set a pace that's slow enough to finish and fast enough to win."

All 33 starters practiced on Thursday, turning a total 941 laps on the 2½-mile oval. There were no accidents.

Other fast drivers in the last track action before the start of Sunday's race included Scott Brayton at 216.658, Fittipaldi at 216.450, Michael Andretti at 216.206 and Danny Sullivan, another Mears' teammate, at 215.982.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You could be asked to make decisions that will affect the destinies of many. Be sure to choose sound, loyal people to assist you. October will be an especially sensitive month for career matters. Those who work in the communications industry must shoulder some sobering responsibilities. You alone will pay for any mistakes, but you will also receive the kudos for any victories. Be bold in your thinking.

Opening lead: King of ♠ Don't frown on a hand because you think it's unprepossessing. You never know what untold riches you might be able to harvest.

Since two-suited hands are notoriously difficult to bid, if you play weak two-bids with two clubs as your only force, South decided, correctly in our opinion, to open one club, then showed his strength with a jump in hearts. After North's club preference, South cue-bid his ace of diamonds and then leaped to the grand slam when his partner felt obliged to cue-bid hearts in response.

West led the king of spades and, with a 2-1 trump break, declarer would have been able to claim his contract. Even if hearts were 5-2, he would be able to draw trumps, discard dummy's diamond losers on the hearts and ruff a diamond and a heart on the table. But what if the breaks were unfriendly?

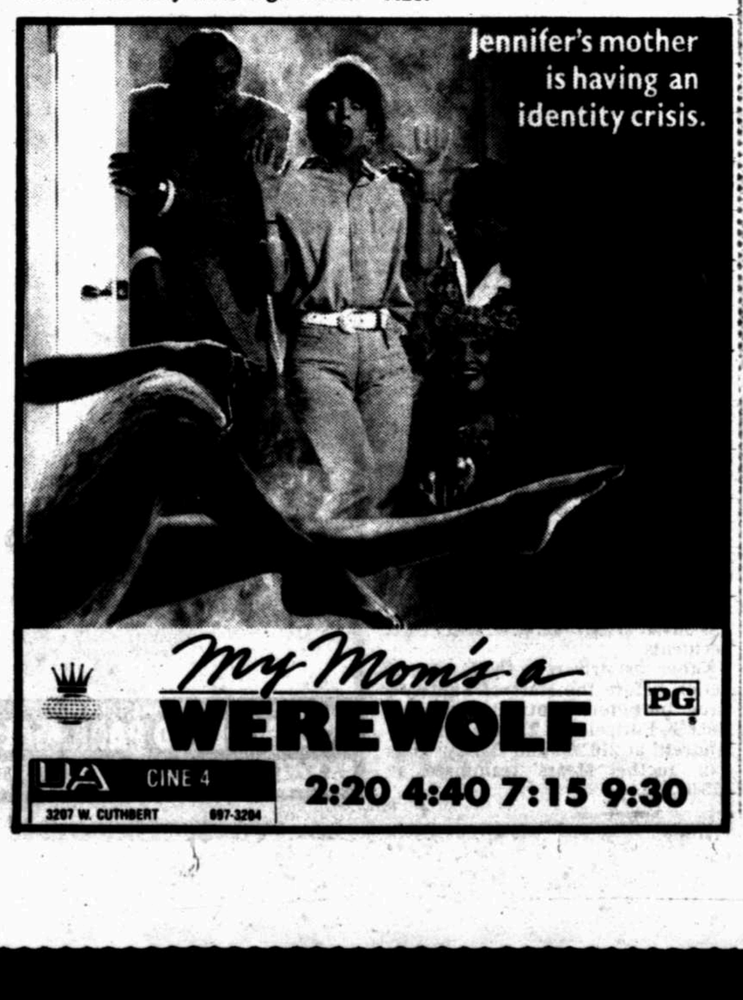

Declarer made his first fine play when he ruffed the spade lead high. A trump to the board's seven revealed the break, but South had an elegant counter—a dummy reversal.

Declarer ruffed another spade high, crossed to a trump and ruffed a third spade high. The king of hearts provided the entry to ruff a fourth spade with declarer's remaining trump. The rest was easy.

Declarer crossed to dummy with a heart ruff and drew the last trump, discarding a diamond from hand. He had left only three high hearts and the ace of diamonds.

So the grand slam came home thanks to dummy scoring five tricks—the king of hearts and four trumps! Those, together with four spade ruffs, three hearts and the ace of diamonds in the closed hand brought declarer's total to 13.

Bob Hope serenaded on aircraft carrier

MOUNT PLEASANT, S.C. (AP) — Comedian Bob Hope was serenaded with a chorus of "Happy Birthday" sung by 3,000 people on the flight deck of the aircraft carrier Yorktown.

"Age doesn't mean a damn thing," said Hope, whose 86th birthday is on Monday. "When I wake up in the morning, I don't feel my age — in fact I don't feel anything till noon ... then it's time for my nap."

Hope visited this Charleston suburb Thursday to play a round of golf at the second annual William Westmoreland Open at Patriots Point Links. Organizers hoped to raise upwards of $20,000 for the Vietnam Veterans Institute.

The retired general introduced Hope as a man of "exceptional character and burning patriotism."

"There is nobody that any veteran — particularly the veterans of Vietnam — know and respect more than Bob Hope," said Westmoreland, who noted that Hope made eight trips to Vietnam to entertain troops.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jayne Meadows was a rising Hollywood star until she married Steve Allen in 1954, but she doesn't blame him for her lost career.

Her husband still feels guilty, but she says in the June issue of Lear's magazine: "He's not to blame. My anger is really directed at me. I allowed it all to happen. I say to myself, 'How could you have been so trusting? So naive? So stupid?' "

She says their marriage was strengthened when they did "The Steve Allen Show" together in the early 1960s, although she says Allen became involved with a singer on the show.

They went into therapy together, and Meadows says, "The whole experience brought us closer. ... I took off the rose-colored glasses."

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — The Toledo Zoo's cheetah cubs have chased away a rabbit — Eddie Rabbitt.

His June 2 concert at the zoo's amphitheater was postponed because the cheetahs, born earlier this week, need quiet, zoo officials said.

The amphitheater is next to the cheetah den, and officials fear the noise from the country singer's concert might bother the cubs' mother, Samantha, said William Dennler, zoo executive director.

"We don't want to risk getting the mother upset. If you get the mother upset, there's a chance she might harm the babies," Dennler said.

BOSTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, accompanied by Jacqueline Onassis and her two children, Caroline Kennedy Schlossberg and John F. Kennedy Jr., announced the creation of the John F. Kennedy Profile in Courage Award.

It was created to honor the late president and promote individualism among the nation's public officials, the senator said, speaking at a news conference Thursday at the John F. Kennedy Library.

"Too often, contemporary elected officials are captives of popular opinion and public opinion polls," he said. "They're unwilling to resist partisan or regional pressures or offend powerful interest groups."

The award's name is based on Kennedy's book "Profiles in Courage," which won the Pulitzer Prize in 1957.

"Ever since then, he has been closely linked in the public mind with that idea," said Kennedy. "We feel that the concept of political courage captures the essence of President Kennedy's enduring appeal, his vision of public service, and the continuing challenge of elective office."

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Rep. Claude Pepper, the ailing oldest member of Congress, received the Presidential Medal of Freedom late Thursday in a brief but moving ceremony at Walter Reed Hospital.

Pepper, 88, received the medal from President Bush as first lady Barbara Bush and several members of the Florida congressional delegation and House Rules Committee looked on. Also attending were Pepper's brother, Frank, and niece, Claudette Hallam. The surprise 20-minute ceremony was held in the living room of Pepper's hospital suite about 6:30 p.m.

Pepper has been hospitalized since April 6 with an undisclosed stomach ailment. He sat in a wheelchair as the president and others formed a semicircle around him.

Bush told Pepper that he wanted to present the medal before departing for Europe and the NATO summit meeting Friday and while some members of Congress were in town before starting their Memorial Day recess.

U.S.-Japan trade war heats up

TOKYO (AP) — Japan angrily refused today to negotiate to avoid trade sanctions under terms set by the United States, and it warned it may haul Washington into international trade court.

The United States on Thursday named Japan, Brazil and India as unfair traders that must negotiate to remove barriers within 18 months or face possible sanctions, including tariffs of up to 100 percent on selected goods.

The Japanese Foreign Ministry summoned U.S. Ambassador Michael Armacost today to explain the government's position, said ministry spokesman Taizo Watanabe.

"The government of Japan has no intention of entering into negotiations with the United States under the conditions imposed under Super 301," Hiroshi Mitsuzuka, minister of international trade and industry, said in a statement.

"Super 301" refers to the provision of the 1988 U.S. Omnibus Trade Act allowing the United States to target countries and practices that block American exports.

The European Community and Japan and other countries have said the unilateral nature of the U.S. law may violate the provisions of the international General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, or GATT.

If sanctions are imposed under Super 301, Japan may bring a complaint before GATT, which is supposed to help resolve trade disputes, Watanabe said.

Watanabe was not as confrontational as Mitzusuka, however. Although Japan will not negotiate under terms of the U.S. law, it may propose "quiet talks and joint cooperation" that may "coincide with" the negotiations Washington demands, Watanabe said.

Foreign Minister Sousuke Uno called the U.S. action "extremely regrettable," and said it was designed to draw attention away from a large source of the trade imbalance, the U.S. budget deficit.

"As a result of many market-opening measures that have been taken to date, the Japanese market has now become a widely open market," Uno told reporters.

"The U.S. itself maintains import restrictive measures and practices to a considerable degree," he said.

Japan is launching five U.S. communications and broadcasting satellites this year, "which proves our satellite market is open to foreign companies," said Posts and Telecommunications Minister Seiichi Kataoka.

The United States charges that Japan's policy of encouraging a domestic space industry prohibits the purchase of foreign satellites if they interfere with "indigenous development objectives," effectively limiting U.S. access to the market.

Japan will buy eight U.S. supercomputers within three years, the government announced earlier this month.

The United States says that through a variety of exclusionary practices, Japan has "thwarted the open procurement process" of supercomputers.

The U.S. statement also said Brazil's import licensing system "inhibits its market access and creates uncertainty for U.S. exporters." It criticized India for requiring government approval of all new or expanded foreign investment.

Oil prices continue lower

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil prices continue lower, influenced by speculation about the outcome of an upcoming OPEC meeting.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, July contracts for West Texas Intermediate were down 14 cents to $19.35 at midmorning.

WTI fell 18 cents Thursday, closing at $19.48. The crude had risen 62 cents on Wednesday.

Among refined products traded on the exchange, wholesale home heating oil for delivery in June slid 0.56 cent to 49.05 cents a gallon after rising 2.11 cents in the prior session. The June contract for unleaded gasoline fell 0.22 cent to 66.61 cents a gallon following Wednesday's gain of 2.59 cents.

Analysts said gas and other petroleum futures prices rallied early when report of a gasoline pipeline explosion in San Bernardino, Calif. raised speculation about a possible supply disruption.

But Mary L. Haskins, assistant vice president at Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., said the buyers bailed out after awhile, possibly because they were reluctant to accumulate significant holdings ahead of the meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries that begins in Vienna on June 5.

There has been speculation that the 13-nation cartel may decide to boost their output limits.

Dollar off sharply overseas

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was down sharply in moderate European trading today, a trend analysts saw as an expected correction after a strong surge. Gold prices rose.

Analysts said the dollar remained fundamentally strong, but that it needed to come down to about 1.9620 marks before another rise could be anticipated. The dollar traded at 1.9648 against the West German currency this morning.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed down sharply at 140.85 yen, dropping 1.95 yen from Thursday's close. During the Tokyo trading day, the dollar moved as low as 139.90 yen. Later, in London, the dollar drifted lower to 140.15 yen.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $365.75 a troy ounce, up from $364.75 late Thursday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $367.20.

Stock market slips 1 point

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market stalled Thursday in a mixed response to the newest data on the state of the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 1.28 to 2,482.59.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 839 up, 630 down and 515 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 154.47 million shares, down from 178.60 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 187.29 million shares.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Corporate after-tax profits decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Corporations' after-tax profits fell 1.7 percent in the first quarter of 1989, the biggest decline in more than a year, the government said.

In a report indicating earnings are slowing along with the economy, the Commerce Department said Thursday after-tax profits dipped to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $171.6 billion during the first quarter, down from $174.5 billion during the previous three-month period.

Higher rates slow existing home sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rising mortgage rates slowed the sale of existing homes in April to the worst pace in 14 months, the National Association of Realtors reported.

The trade group said Thursday sales of single-family homes declined last month to an annual rate of 3.36 million units, down 1.1 percent from March, off 4.3 percent from a year ago, and the lowest figure since February of 1988.

Salomon Brothers cited for short-selling

NEW YORK (AP) — Salomon Brothers Inc. became the first investment firm sanctioned by the government for violating laws governing short-selling during the 1987 stock market crash.

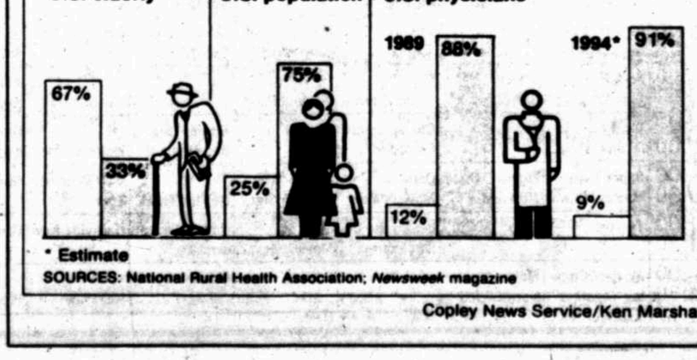

Without admitting or denying guilt, Salomon agreed Thursday to be censured to settle Securities and Exchange Commission allegations regarding its short sales, which are a type of speculation aimed at profiting from market declines.

SEC to let exchanges to compete

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission authorized exchanges to compete against one another in trading stock options, a move designed to benefit customers but opposed by many of the exchanges.

Trump: 'Shuttle will be a gem'

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The sky is no longer the limit for Donald J. Trump.

With his $365 million purchase of the Eastern Airlines shuttle approved by a federal bankruptcy judge, New York's guru of glitz promised Thursday to make the shuttle "a true, magnificent diamond."

Trump will rename the 28-year-old air service, like most of his assets, after himself. It will be known as Trump Shuttle. And he says he will give it an infusion of money and style.

At a news conference in the Grand Ballroom of his Plaza Hotel, Trump promised to spend "millions of dollars" to refurbish each of the shuttle's 21 Boeing 727s and its terminals in New York, Washington and Boston.

"They are not only going to be the safest planes in the air, but they are going to be magnificent to look at," Trump said. "The fares will stay the same. Everything else will be thousands of percent better."

Although Trump will begin operating the shuttle when the sale closes in about two weeks, he said the refurbishing will take months.

Once that is done, the billionaire, who has gobbled up Fifth Avenue real estate like Pac Man and played monopoly with the real Atlantic City, N.J., has another plan.

Trump said he eventually wants to run a shuttle to the shuttle: flights in luxury 44-passenger helicopters between midtown Manhattan and the shuttle terminal at La Guardia Airport.

AP Laserphoto

Trump said he also will consider adding flights to Atlantic City, where he has vast casino holdings.

While the shuttle will be stylish, the emphasis will be on service and reliability, said Trump Shuttle President Bruce R. Nobles. "What's important is not champagne and caviar," he said. "It's a service that will work. And it will work very well."

But before Trump can soar, he must deal with some down-to-earth problems.

Although Trump has negotiated temporary union contracts to hire 168 Eastern pilots and 240 flight attendants, the author of "The Art of the Deal" has yet to make one with the Machinists union, which will represent the shuttle's 237 mechanics and ground service workers.

The contract Trump signed with Eastern last October called for him to hire union workers at the wages Eastern was paying them on the day the deal closed. However, since members of the pilots, Machinists and flight attendants unions walked off their jobs March 4, Eastern has slashed the Machinists' wages.

Nobles said Trump Shuttle is offering wages somewhere between what the Machinists used to make and what Eastern is now paying strikebreakers.

"We hope they're going to be modestly reasonable," Trump said of the Machinists. "They don't have to be totally reasonable."

New firm to add 75 jobs

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Sure Value, a manufacturer of replacement windows for the wholesale market, annouced today that it would relocate to Midland from Big Spring and would employ approximately 75 workers.

Jim Anderson, president of the company, said hiring for the new fabrication plant would begin within a week and the new fabrication plant would be ready to crank out orders by the first of July.

"It will take us about six months to bring the facility up to full speed and full employment," said Anderson.

The 40,000 square foot plant which will manufacture steel and vinyl windows for the remodeling industry will occupy the former location of Midland Home Lumber Co. at Loop 250 and highway 80.

"We made a tremendous buy on the property from FDIC, and that was one of the factors that influenced our moving to Midland," said Anderson.

He also noted that Midland was well-located with an interstate that provided easy access to markets to the east and west, and easy delivery of raw materials from Dallas. "Only about two to three percent of our orders will come from Midland the rest will come from markets in Tuscon, Phoenix, El Paso, Albuquerque, Amarillo, Lubbock and other towns in the Southwest," said Anderson.

He added: "We also needed to relocate to a city of about 100,000 where it would be easy to attract employees." Anderson said he gave Jim Crider, economic development director and the Midland Chamber much credit in influencing the move to Midland. "We had some awfully lucrative offers to relocate to other cities that offered to provide free rent for up to five years and pay for moving costs, but we couldn't pass up the deal Midland and the FDIC made available to us."

Anderson said there was a tremendous market for replacement windows and that anticipated sales for Sure Value should reach $10 million within 18 months. "This is a $13 billion industry," he said. The firm also expects enter the prime window market for new construction.

Strong season seen for airlines

Associated Press

From labor travails to terrorist threats to rising fuel prices to aging planes, the nation's airlines face daunting challenges as their busiest season begins with the Memorial Day weekend.

Nonetheless, industry analysts and travel agents expect a strong summer for air travel as stable fares at home and a more valuable dollar abroad lure vacationers.

"I think it's going to be a record summer," said Louis Marckesano, an airline analyst for Janney Montgomery Scott Inc., a Philadelphia securities firm.

The airline industry has been turned on its head, with competition growing fiercer and takeover raiders swarming over profitable Northwest Airlines.

But the industry's biggest trauma this year, a bitter labor strike at Eastern Airlines, hasn't resulted in the mass inconvenience to travelers that originally was feared.

PBPA hosts Interior director

From Staff Reports

Williamson

Former Midlander Barry Williamson, director of the Department of the Interior's minerals management service, will be the featured speaker at the June 9 meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association directors and advisors.

Williamson, recently selected for his position by Secretary of the Interior Manuel Lujan and appointed by the White House, is responsible for managing the Outer Continental Shelf oil and gas leasing program and the royalty management program, which annually brings billions of dollars into the federal treasury.

He was previously director of the office of policy, planning and analysis at the Department of Energy. Prior to moving to Washington from Midland in February 1988, the Midalnder owned Williamson Oil Properties.

Williamson is a graduate of the University of Arkansas law school and member of the Texas and Arkansas state bar associations.

The luncheon will be at the Petroleum Club beginning at noon. The luncheon, costing $15, is open to the public and reservations should be made through the PBPA office.

Hispanic Chamber honors four

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Hispanic Businessman of the year is Ruben Vargas, who has taught marketing at Lee and Midland high schools for 17 years. He received his bachelor's degree in marketing from Angelo State University and his master's degree in mid-management from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. In addition to teaching Distributive Education at Midland High, he and his wife Polly own Trendy Tees (formerly Designs by Computer) in Midland Park Mall.

Hispanic Businesswoman of the year is Louisa Valencia, who is also Midland County's newest County Commissioner. She and her husband Domingo started Valencia Upholstery and Draperies in 1968 in a one-car garage to help put their son through college. "My husband worked downtown and I worked half-days at a dress shop and evenings upholstering," she recalls.

Her business eventually grew so that, during the oil boom years, she moved to a 4,000 square foot building

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Investor's statement proof of ownership

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My husband and I began investing in a mutual fund in 1960. Recently, we decided to inquire what our securities are worth and telephoned the service center where the records are kept. The clerk there said he could find no record of our ownership in the computer.

Upon his request, we sent a photocopy of our last statement, which lists our ownership of 1,796.575 shares. To date, we have not heard from them. What should we do now?

Doyle

A. Start by not fretting. That statement is your proof of ownership. The statement most likely also shows the value of each share and the total value of your investment — per share value times number of shares — as of the statement date.

To get an up-to-date value, simply open your daily newspaper to the business section and find your fund in the table of mutual fund quotations. The first column in that table lists the fund's net asset value per share — the price you will get if you redeem your shares — unless the fund has a redemption charge, which would reduce your cash-out value.

If you have your account directly with the mutual fund, that service center's records most certainly should show your ownership.

Since the computer listed that information, you probably invested though a brokerage firm and that firm is recorded on the computer as the "owner of record," while you are the "beneficial owner" — the real owner.

Assuming that is the case, you should contact the brokerage and have things explained to you. If it is not the case, you'll have to deal with someone other than the phone clerk, by going higher up in the mutual fund's chain of command, to get things straightened out.

Hang on to the statements you have received from the fund, the service center and/or the brokerage firm. Those "confirmation statements" are proof positive that you own 1,796.575 shares.

Q. We receive $2,100 per month from pension and Social Security benefits. We have $35,000 in certificates of deposit, a $50,000 single-premium life insurance policy on my husband, $80,000 in limited partnerships returning $1,400 quarterly and $40,000 in a bond mutual fund paying 12.5 percent taxable interest.

We lost $40,000 in the October 1987 crash and are afraid to invest in stocks again. We now have $180,000 to invest and are thinking of a municipal bond mutual fund, where our principal would be secure and from which we would receive tax-free interest. Would this be a wise move?

A. Based on the information you provide, you'll be in a high income tax bracket, no matter where you invest the $180,000. That makes tax-free investments suitable for you.

Just two points.

You can't count on an investment in a municipal bond mutual fund being absolutely "secure." The value of shares in such a fund can rise or fall, depending on market conditions. The same thing applies to other types of bond mutual funds, as you undoubtedly have already learned.

Mutual funds do not pay interest. They pay dividends.

Q. My deceased husband and I invested in a mutual fund 30 years ago, reinvesting our dividends and capital gains distributions to buy additional shares.

Six years ago, I chose to receive the dividends and capital gains distributions by check.

When I redeem all the shares of this fund I now own, as I intend to do, how do I figure my "basis" — cost for tax purposes — in view of the fact that I've been taking dividends and capital gains in cash for six years.

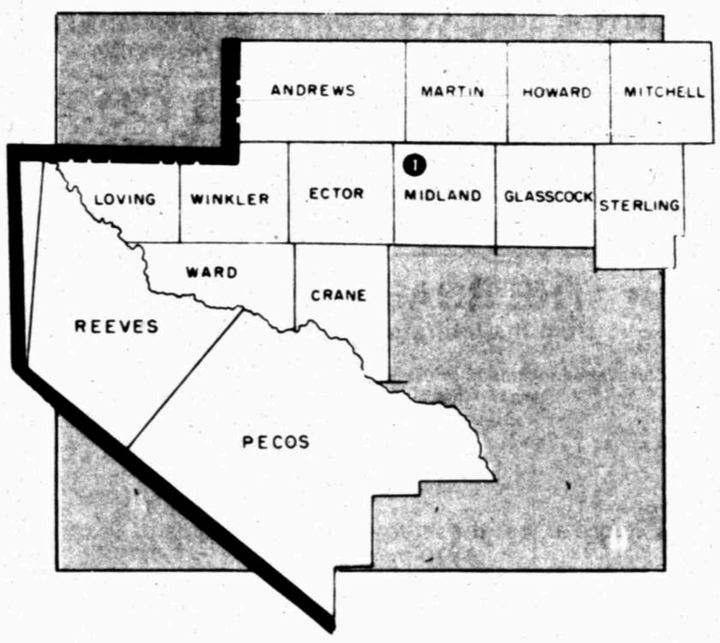

A. Simply ignore the dividends and capital gains distributions for which you have received checks. Your total basis is the money you invested in that fund to buy shares, plus all the dividends and capital gains you reinvested to purchase additional shares.

The difference between that total basis and the amount you receive when you redeem all your shares will be your profit or loss, which you are required to report as a capital gain or capital loss on Schedule D of your Form 1040 federal tax return.

Cliffs Drilling finals sale of three offshore rigs

HOUSTON (SWN) — Cliffs Drilling Co. has completed the sale of three offshore drilling rigs to Loews Corp. The sale price of $22 million consisted of $15 million cash and a three-year promissory note for $7 million. In connection with the sale, the company entered into bareboat charters with Loews for the three rigs for two years.

The company expects to report a pre-tax gain on the sale of approximately $4.5 million. Approximately $10.3 million of the proceeds will be used to pay indebtedness which was incurred when the rigs were acquired from Marlin Drilling Co., Inc., a subsidiary of Tenneco Inc.

Oryx Energy reports gas find near Houston

DALLAS (SWN) — Oryx Energy Co. has announced a gas discovery near Houston that flowed more than eight million cubic feet (MMcf) of gas and 300 barrels of condensate per day.

The Arco number 1, located in the Jose Delgado Survey A-177 in Liberty County, flowed 8.3 MMcf and 333 barrels of condensate per day from perforations between 10,480 and 10,495 feet in the Yegua Ey Formation. The well was tested through an 11/64-inch choke at a flowing tubing pressure of 6,814 pounds per square inch. The discovery well was drilled to a total depth of 10,800 feet. One offset well is currently planned.

Oryx Energy has a 50-percent working interest in the discovery; Arco Oil and Gas Company, the operator, has the remaining 50-percent.

Normandy Oil secures financing commitment

FORT WORTH (SWN) — Normandy Oil and Gas Co. Inc. has secured a commitment for a permanent financing facility in the amount of $1.7 milion primarily for use in funding four groups of acquisitions, including three gas gathering systems and one group of producing oil and gas properties.

Two of the projects, both gas gathering systems, have already been acquired, as announced in the company's press release dated May 11, 1989. The two additional projects, for which funding is committed, are in the final stages of closing. Roy T. Rimmer Jr., president of Normandy, stated that since the latter two projects have not yet been acquired, there is no assurance that these projects will be acquired.

Rimmer noted that these acquisitions were a continuation of the company's efforts to concentrate on the acquisition of gas gathering projects in those areas where the company has on-going operations. Rimmer also noted that these four acquisitions, if all are consummated, would more than triple revenues.

Trade gap falls in first quarter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit improved sharply in the first three months of the year, narrowing to $27.6 billion, the smallest quarterly imbalance in four years, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said the imbalance between imports and U.S. exports fell by 13.7 percent from a fourth quarter deficit of $32.02 billion.

Imports also hit a new record of $116.13 billion, but the 3.4 percent increase was smaller than the pace of export expansion.

Today's report on merchandise trade as calculated on a balance of payments basis confirmed an improvement already noted in the Commerce Department's monthly merchandise trade reports.

Those figures showed only a slightly different quarterly total, reflecting the fact that today's report excludes military sales by the U.S. government to foreign governments.

Analysts have been heartened by the improvement in the trade deficit during the first three months of the year, saying it may mean that America's trade improvement, which had been stalled out since last summer, is finally beginning to resume.

The Bush administration is counting on further growth in exports this year to spur domestic growth with the continuing prosperity expected by the administration to bring in enough revenues to lower the budget deficit without the need to increase taxes.

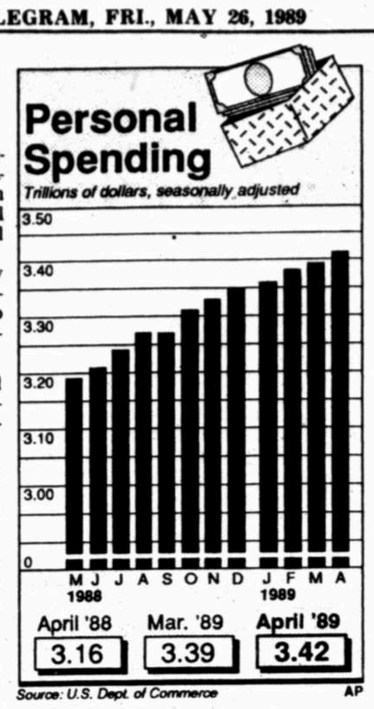

The big jump in exports reflected increases in sales of industrial products, consumer goods and farm products. The 11 percent advance in farm exports put American agricultural sales at $10.9 billion, the highest level in almost eight years.

The rise in imports came entirely from an increase in petroleum imports, which shot up 18 percent to $10.8 billion, with the advance coming from the higher cost of oil.

Non-petroleum imports declined by $1.2 billion to $105.3 billion, reflecting a drop in demand for consumer goods and autos.

The improved trade performance put the quarterly deficit at the lowest level since a $25.7 billion imbalance in the first quarter of 1985.

The deficit with the countries of Western Europe fell to $1.02 billion, the lowest level in almost six years.

Travelers still fly despite concerns

DALLAS (AP) — Turmoil within the airline industry has some passengers a little nervous, but they're still flying and generally want the government to stay out of the business.

Random interviews with travelers by AP reporters at big airports nationwide suggested the underlying demand for airline seats remains strong as the country heads into the traditional Memorial Day summer kickoff.

At the same time, there's a high level of awareness by the traveling public on issues confronting the airline industry. There's a bitter Eastern Airlines strike, Northwest Airlines is on the auction block and aging aircraft is a frequent topic.

Flying "is probably less safe because some of the jets are a lot older," said Mike Osborne, a St. Louis businessman passing through Chicago's O'Hare International Airport this week. "Structurally they're beginning to have problems, I guess."

Many carriers are rushing to buy airplanes to expand and replace their fleets. This past Tuesday, the National Transportation Safety Board reported an "industry-wide deficiency" in the inspection of the popular but aging Boeing 737 airplanes.

"Everybody's on strike," Richard Siska, a St. Louis businessman said in Chicago. "You've got management doing work that they're not qualified to do, and it's the passengers who take the risks."

Despite the concerns, "flying is still safer than driving," said Jason Manning, a jewelry salesman traveling through Seattle-Tacoma International Airport.

"It's safer than driving a car," said Jeff Reistroffer, 32, a Fairbanks, Alaska, resident arriving at Los Angeles International Airport on Wednesday.

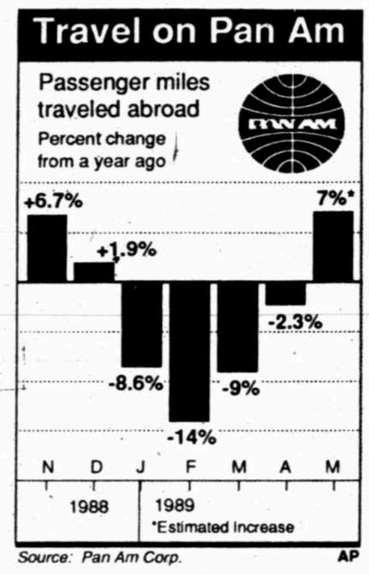

"If you're going down the freeway, two cars at 50 mph, one driver sneezes, it's all over. A pilot can sneeze and he can go all over the place — there's a lot of leeway."

Employees, meanwhile, have mixed feelings about the changes in their industry.

"I haven't noticed any difference in the attitude here at Northwest," said one pilot in Atlanta. "My job has not changed one iota."

But a Northwest flight attendant in Chicago said, "I feel secure that Northwest wants to stay in the airline business, but buyout possibilities make me a little nervous."

An American flight attendant in Chicago said, "I make less money because of deregulation. The girls who have been flying for more than 10 or 15 years are making 30 to 40 (thousand dollars a year), and those who've been flying for 10 years or less only make 10 to 20 (thousand)."

Spending up 1.1 percent during April

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer spending shot up 1.1 percent in April, the biggest advance in nearly a year, outpacing a 0.4 percent increase in personal income, the government reported today.

The combination of a strong spending increase and the sluggish income gain produced a sharp reduction in the personal savings rate, which dropped to 5.3 percent last month from a three-year high of 6.3 percent during the previous month, the Commerce Department said.

The April increase in personal income was the smallest gain since income fell 0.2 percent last November. Personal income had risen a strong 0.8 percent in March and 1.0 percent in February.

Last month's increase in personal income, to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $4.37 trillion, would have been stronger were it not for decreases in farm subsidies over the past two months, coupled with bonuses for autoworkers and retroactive Social Security benefit payments that inflated March's figure.

Excluding those special factors, personal income advanced a strong 0.8 percent in April after rising 0.7 percent in March.

The 1.1 percent increase in personal consumer expenditures, to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $3.42 trillion, was the biggest advance since a 1.3 percent increase was registered last June.

Expenditures had risen just 0.3 percent in March and 0.4 percent in February, causing analysts to attribute part of the current slowdown in economic growth to slackening consumer spending.

and employed 12 to help with upholstery and drapery-making. She says she is fortunate that during the boom she was able to pay off her building and equipment. "Now my only expenses are utilities, payroll and groceries."

She acknowledges that business has been a struggle since the oil economy went bust, and it has been difficult juggling both a business and the county commission. But she says it's worth it, "because my son got a good education."

Ciro Sanchez, Member of the Year, insists the chamber has a lot of hard-working members and he was just fortunate to be singled out this year. He has been active in the chamber since it was first formed, and was one of the first four members of the Eastside Economic Development Task Force. When he's not working at chamber projects or with the task force, the retired Realtor oversees the sale and rental of his personal properties. He and his wife Berta donated the building at 1410 Lamesa that has become the chamber's permanent home.

Community involvement has long been one of the goals of Permian Distributing Inc., Corporate Member of the Year. Vice President Tony Valadez notes that "we try to associate with organizations that are result-oriented, that put together programs that benefit the entire community."

PDI and Adolph Coors have worked with the chamber's Women's Council, its Step Up to Success program and was heavily involved in last year's state Texas Association of Mexican-Amercian Chambers of Commerce convention in Midland.

Valadez points out, though, that PDI also works with charity and cultural organizations that aren't aimed at the Hispanic community. "We get involved with every phase of the community, and it's not tied into beer sales."

He says MHCC Executive Director Elvia Hernandez has been instrumental in forming a partnership between PDI and the chamber. "They have a strong supporter in us, and I know we have a strong supporter in them."

He adds that being chosen Corporate Member of the year is an honor not because it recognizes PDI's work with the MHCC but because the MHCC has become one of the most respected chambers in the state, if not the nation.

TRUMP

The strike against the airline was sparked by Eastern's inability to come to terms with the Machinists. But LeRoy Washington, a Machinists union general chairman in New York, said he expects a contract with Trump to be signed within two weeks.

In all, about 800 of Trump Shuttle's 1,000 employees will be former Eastern employees, both union and non-union.

SEASON

Delta Air Lines, American Airlines, Pan Am Corp. and USAir Group Inc., especially, are reaping profits from the woes of Eastern, which has been in Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection since March 9.

Together, the rivals have captured an estimated $6 million to $7 million a day in revenue lost by Eastern, which has been virtually grounded by the walkout that started March 4.

The extra profits have given many big airlines a cushion against surging fuel prices, sparing them from increasing fares, Marckesano and others suggested.

Eastern's sister carrier Continental Airlines announced last month that it was raising its "MaxSaver" discount fares by up to 18 percent. But Continental, often a price leader, recently retracted the fare increase after other carriers failed to match its initiative.

That could signal an end, at least temporarily, to what had been a trend of rising fares. Air tariffs have increased as much as 20 percent this year over 1988, some analysts say.

"I don't think there are going to be vast increases in fares," said Andrew Geller, who follows the industry for Provident National Bank in Philadelphia.

The halt to the fare spiral has occurred despite a dramatic rise in prices of jet fuel caused partly by the oil spill in Alaska and expectations of possible short oil supplies.

Jet fuel, one of the biggest costs in the airline industry, has jumped to about 65 cents a gallon from 58.7 cents in February, before the March 24 Exxon tanker spill that delayed shipments of crude oil to refineries.

Stock Market Rallies

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market ran up a broad gain today, encouraged by new declines in interest rates.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 828 up, 419 down and 554 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 78.14 million shares at noontime, up from 73.50 million at the same point Thursday.

Activity was expected to taper off through the day as many traders got an early start on the long Memorial Day weekend. The markets will be closed on Monday.

Interest rates fell in the credit markets today. Prices of long-term government bonds rose more than $5 for each $1,000 in face value, reducing their yields to the 8.6 percent-8.65 percent range.

Sea Containers Ltd. jumped 9 to 57. The European companies Tiphook PLC and Stena AB made a $50-a-share offer for Sea Containers, and traders quickly bid up the price in anticipation of a possible higher offer.

Gainers among the blue chips included General Electric, up 1¼ at 54; Ford Motor, up 1 at 48; DuPont, up 1 at 111¾, and McDonald's, up ½ at 58⅝.

Dallas bank fails

DALLAS (AP) — Liberty National Bank of Dallas on Thursday became the 58th bank in the state to fail this year, with federal regulators selling its deposits and liabilities to Cornerstone Bank.

Liberty National's sole office will open Friday as a branch of Cornerstone Bank, which also is based in Dallas and assumes $69.2 million in 5,800 deposit accounts from the failed institution.

Cornerstone will also purchase $62 million of the failed bank's $72 million in assets.

The FDIC is helping with the transaction by advancing $9 million to Cornerstone and retaining Liberty National assets with a book value of about $10 million.

Liberty National was chartered in 1980 and became a concern to the Comptroller of the Currency during a November 1985 examination. The comptroller noted excessive concentration of loans in the real estate industry at that time.

Then in December, the comptroller's office found transactions between Liberty National and an affiliate, Texas Acceptance Corporation, that it said led to the bank's insolvency.

The bank is the 87th to fail in the United States in 1989.

WORLD

BEIJING (AP) — Zhao Ziyang, the man who represents China's new, progressive leadership, apparently has been purged by an old guard intent on retaining its lock on power and crushing a student movement for democracy.

Several sources said today that Zhao, 69, has lost his post as general secretary of the 47 million-member Communist Party, making him the most powerful man in China after senior leader Deng Xiaoping.

The sources said Zhao has lost a power struggle with the more conservative Premier Li Peng. They said he was under house arrest today and that the party had accused him of fueling student unrest with a conciliatory stance.

Although Deng is Zhao's mentor in economic reforms, the two differ sharply on political reform and Zhao's sympathy for the students apparently was unacceptable.

If Zhao's fall is permanent, he would be the second general secretary in two years to fall from Deng's good graces and be sacked for being too sympathetic to pro-democracy student demonstrators.

In January 1987, Hu Yaobang was forced to resign as general secretary after being accused of being soft on students seeking a freer China. It was Hu's death on April 15 that sparked the far larger student movement of today.

Zhao ended a seven-year term as premier when he was named head of the party in November 1987. At the same time he was appointed first vice chairman of the Central Military Commission — Deng is chairman — giving him the needed authority with the military to cement his claim as Deng's successor.

But Zhao became the target of criticism in mid-1988 when the government, hit by an inflation rate of more than 30 percent and panic buying, began worrying that it had lost control of the economy.

Conservatives such as Premier Li blamed the rapid pace of market-oriented reforms associated with Zhao, and imposed a two-year austerity program and freeze on new reforms.

While tens of thousands of students occupied Tiananmen Square earlier this month, Zhao told Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev that political and economic reform should proceed at an equal pace and that Chinese should enjoy "genuine democracy" under the Communist Party.

He later expressed sympathy for the student demands for democratic reforms and advocated negotiations with the protesters to end the crisis.

Deng has permitted only token political liberalization, and he reportedly gave the orders for declaring martial law in Beijing.

Zhao has been a role model for the new-style Chinese leader. Suave and articulate, he is at ease with the leaders of the socialist and Western worlds. He wears immaculately tailored Western suits, and regularly plays golf, a sport once condemned in China as a bourgeois luxury.

Zhao was born in October 1919 to a land-owning family in central China's Henan province.

Unlike the previous generation of party leaders, he did not take part in the 1934-35 Long March, the 7,700-mile trek to the northwest to escape the Nationalist government troops in eastern China.

A student demonstrator uses a statue commemorating the Chinese revolution to hold his jack as he and his companions seek shade during the hot afternoon in Beijing's Tiananmen Square today.

Soviet reformers nominated to law-making body

MOSCOW (AP) — Maverick Boris N. Yeltsin and several prominent reformers in the new congress were nominated today for a smaller, full-time legislature, but some charged that senior officials rigged the nominee list to stay in power.

Lithuania threatened to boycott the elections to the new legislature if delegates from other republics are allowed to vote on the Lithuanian slate.

The Lithuanians and other Baltic reformers want to protect their small reform slates from being lost in an all-congress vote. President Mikhail S. Gorbachev called the boycott threat "a crisis situation."

The moves came during the second day of debate in the 2,250-member Congress of People's Deputies, the first competitively elected national assembly and the latest step in the Soviet experiment with democratic reform.

Only one member of the ruling Communist Party Politburo appeared on a congressional list of nominees for the smaller law-making body, the Supreme Soviet, assuring an overhaul of its traditional makeup.

Procedural bickering today mirrored the disputes that slowed the first day of activity in the congress, which was elected this spring in the first nationwide multicandidate balloting in 70 years.

"The party apparatus is once again asking us to elect the Supreme Soviet according to the old system," complained deputy Vladimir Shevlyuga of Rostov.

Vladimir Zolotukhin of Tashkent said top party and government officials in Uzbekistan had themselves nominated without consulting other deputies from the republic.

Reformers lost an attempt to force top party officials to choose between their party jobs and serving in the Supreme Soviet, as a way of easing the grip of the party bureaucracy on the country's legislature.

The congress adopted a measure calling for Supreme Soviet members "as a rule" to be freed from other jobs to concentrate on lawmaking — far short of the outright ban sought by delegates.

Meanwhile, the Lithuanian delegation announced through deputy Vytautas Landsbergis it would boycott planned elections to the Supreme Soviet if deputies from other republics are allowed to vote on the Lithuanian slate.

Leftist insurgents attack San Salvador army base

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist insurgents attacked parts of the capital a week before a rightist party takes power, and authorities said six guerrillas were killed.

Authorities said the 1st army brigade headquarters was the main target of the guerrillas' offensive on Thursday night, and five members of the National Police, one army soldier and three civilians were wounded.

Staccato rifle fire, mortar and grenade explosions resounded throughout the northern sector of the capital in the heaviest combat in San Salvador in years.

Arena is the Spanish acronym for Republican Nationalist Alliance, the rightist party that is to take power Thursday.

The guerrillas have pledged "to make the country ungovernable" by stepping up attacks in the days leading up to the inauguration of President-elect Alfredo Cristiani, who is to take office from centrist Jose Napoleon Duarte, a Christian Democrat.

Col. Orlando Zepeda, commander of the 1st brigade, said that about 30 insurgents took part in the attack, including four men aboard a jeep who fired U.S.-made M-79 grenades and Soviet-made RPG-18 rocket-propelled grenades into the brigade headquarters at dusk.

At least six projectiles landed inside the base perimeter and caused property damage but no casualties, Zepeda said.

"We knew the level of violence had to increase. We're ready to repel anything they try to do," he told reporters at brigade headquarters.

Authorities said six guerrillas were killed in the fighting.

An estimated 7,000 Marxist-led guerrillas are waging a 9-year-old revolution against the U.S.-backed government. The war has killed about 70,000 people, most of them civilians.

Zepeda said combat in the neighborhoods of Zacamil, Mejicanos and around Transit Police headquarters resulted from clashes between troops and retreating guerrillas.

Rebel spokesmen called local radio stations to say the strike included coordinated attacks on four military and police posts, including the 1st brigade.

Zepeda said security forces will search the offices of leftist unions and farming cooperative organizations in the city. The armed forces contend such organizations are guerrilla fronts.

The rebels periodically call transport bans and enforce them with threats and sabotage. The previous ban, during the March 19 presidential election, virtually paralyzed travel among the provinces.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Syria reinforces troops in Lebanon with tanks

JERUSALEM (AP) — Syria has reinforced its 40,000 troops in Lebanon with an armored tank brigade, and Syrian fighter planes flew over Christian positions today, Israeli and Lebanese media reported.

Israel's Cabinet met in special session to discuss the troop moves, Israel radio said. An Israeli official, who requested anonymity, confirmed a special Cabinet session was convened Thursday night but refused to give details.

Israeli officials said they were watching the situation closely but saw no reason to interfere as long as Israel's northern border was not affected.

"As long as we don't feel directly threatened, there is no way Israel is going to intervene," said Foreign Ministry spokesman Alon Liel.

It was not immediately clear how the Syrian moves would affect the fighting in Lebanon. More than 350 people have been killed and nearly 1,400 wounded since Christian and Moslem forces began shelling each other's positions March 8 in the latest round of fighting in Lebanon's 14-year-old civil war.

Two U.S. missionaries killed

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Two Mormon missionaries from Utah were gunned down and killed in La Paz, and left-wing terrorists who claimed reponsibiliity threatened a "war to the death" against "Yankee invaders."

Todd Ray Wilson, of Wellington, and Jeffrey Brent Ball, from Wanship, were returning to their home in a poor suburb late Wednesday when unidentified men shot them with machine guns. One of the victims died immediately, the other on the way to a hospital. Both were 20 years old.

The radical Zarate Willka Armed Liberation Front claimed responsibility shortly after the shootings. It is the same group that last summer tried to kill former Secretary of State George Shultz when he was visiting La Paz.

The slain missionaries lived in a neighborhood around the corner from a church that was seriously damaged by a bomb explosion last year, local church president Stephen R. Wright said in an interview.

Two other bombs have been planted in the past nine months, he said. One damaged a church and another was discovered before it exploded.

"We are being targeted unfairly and inappropriately as being imperialists," Wright said. "We have been targeted because we have a high profile, our missionaries wear shirts and ties and we have nice churches."

U.S. diplomats expelled

"This shows the United States government is committed to disobeying the norms of civilized coexistence and is pledged to destabilizing governments, such as the one in Nicaragua, that demand respect," Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto said.

In Washington, State Department press officer Dennis Harter said the charges were "totally false and without any credible foundation."

He said the two diplomats had been engaged in normal activities fully compatible with their positions.

"Clearly the government of Nicaragua is embarrassed by the fact that teachers in Nicaragua are on strike against conditions in that country," Harter said.
