Court challenge

AUSTIN — The nation's largest Hispanic civil rights organization said Wednesday it will challenge the way judges are elected in seven state appeals courts, claiming the at-large voting system intentionally discriminates against minorities. The complaint will be filed in U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton's court in Midland, according to Rolando Rios, an attorney representing the League of United Latin American Citizens and the Mexican American Bar Association.

Baltic alert

MOSCOW — Hundreds of Lithuanian demonstrators, some singing songs and waving nationalist banners, guarded the Baltic republic's parliament Wednesday after Kremlin troops made a show of force and then withdrew, an official said. Rita Dapkus, a parliament spokeswoman, said the armed troops left after dusk. She said Kremlin soldiers also withdrew without incident from the republic's television station. Also Wednesday, troops in armored personnel carriers and buses rolled through the neighboring Baltic republic of Latvia. The republic's government said it was told the troops were on high alert and would start unspecified military action Thursday.

DC-9 inspection

WASHINGTON — National Transportation Safety Board officials, citing their investigation of last month's fatal Detroit runway collision, urged Wednesday that hundreds of DC-9 jets be inspected for broken or cracked rear exit handles. They also said the McDonnell Douglas Co., manufacturer of the DC-9 and its successor, the MD-80, should redesign the tailcone emergency exit system on both aircraft "to correct its propensity for damage and malfunction." However, a spokesman for McDonnell Douglas, John Thom, said, "In 25 years of service by the DC-9, we have had no other instances reported of a broken handle."

Julio's 'Hey' day

Singer Julio Iglesias mingled with fans and playfully cringed while listening to one of his old recordings Tuesday at the start of a court case challenging the authorship of one of his songs. The trial is being held in Manhattan federal court, where an Alabama scientist has filed a lawsuit claiming the music for "Hey" was copied from a melody he wrote in 1978.

Initiative swings to U.N.; peace mission planned

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said Wednesday he will go to Baghdad to meet Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in a last-minute peace mission before the Jan. 15 deadline for Iraq to leave Kuwait.

The U.N. chief made his announcement hours after Iraq and the United States ended, without success, their first high-level talks on the Persian Gulf crisis. Neither Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz nor Secretary of State James A. Baker III reported progress in their Geneva talks.

The approach of the U.N. deadline added to the pressure to avert war. Perez de Cuellar's mission begins just five days before the U.S.-led force in the Persian Gulf is empowered to take action to dislodge Iraq from Kuwait, which was invaded Aug. 2.

Perez de Cuellar said he would leave New York tonight, flying first to Geneva and then to the Iraqi capital on Saturday morning.

He said he will hold "personal, direct talks with the president of Iraq and the Iraqi authorities."

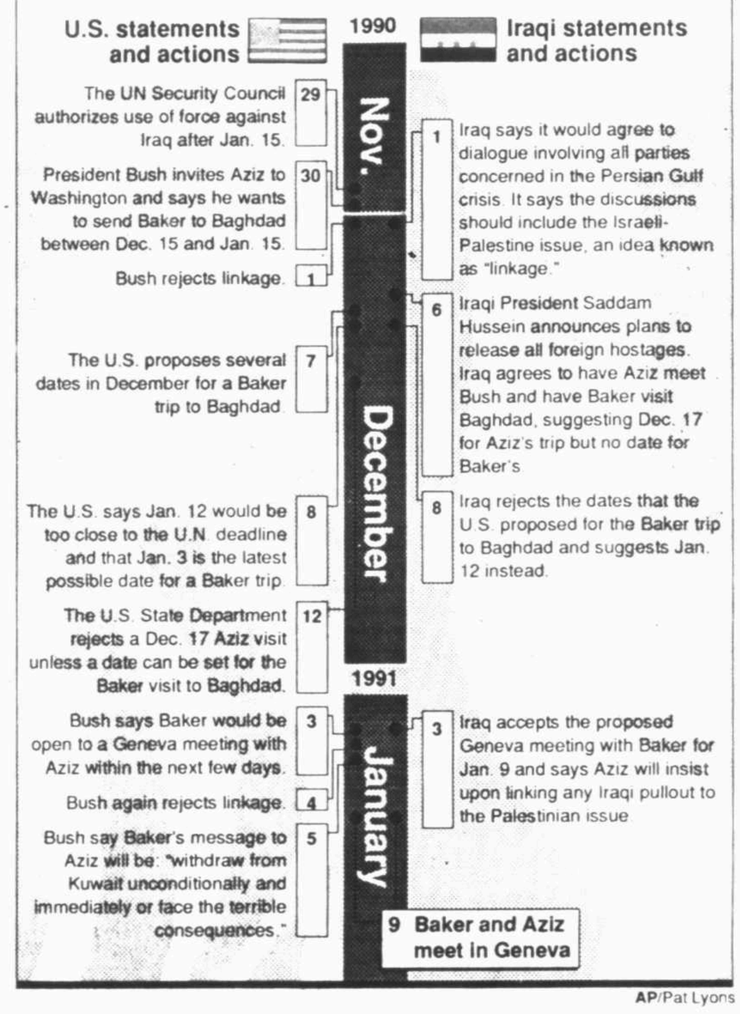

"Now I feel it is my moral duty as secretary-general of the United Nations to do everything in order to avoid the worst," Perez de Cuellar said. "I will go with my moral authority," he added, but declined to discuss details.

The U.N. chief made his announcement to reporters at U.N. headquarters after holding separate meetings at short notice with the Iraqi and Kuwait ambassadors to the United Nations.

Diplomatic Wrangling Over Talks

It took Iraq and the U.S. more than a month of haggling before they could even agree on a date to talk about solving the Gulf crisis. Here is a chronology of the steps leading up to the meeting between U.S. Secretary of State James Baker and Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz in Geneva on Wednesday.

GENEVA — Secretary of State James A. Baker and Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz met for six hours on Wednesday but failed to defuse the Persian Gulf crisis that threatens war in the Middle East. "The time for talk is running out," Baker said.

President Bush, in Washington, accused the Iraqis of "a total stiff-arm, a total rebuff," and refused to rule out launching the first attack if Iraq doesn't withdraw from Kuwait by next Tuesday's deadline set by the United Nations.

Aziz blamed the United States for the crisis and said, "We will not yield to threats" demanding Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait.

Baker

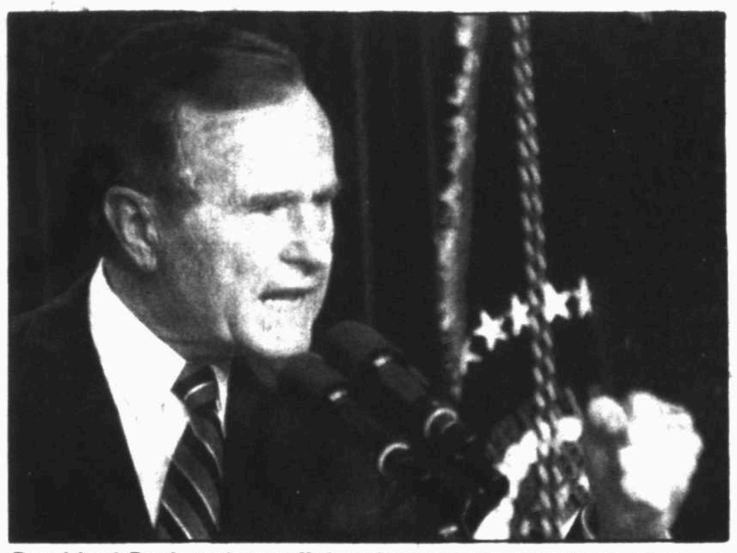

Baker said the United States and its allies possess the "power and the will" to evict Iraqi forces, and some members of Congress said the outcome of the talks would make it easier for Bush to win congressional backing for such action.

The standoff in Switzerland seemed to leave UN Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar as the man with the best chance for forging a peaceful solution. U.N. officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he would travel to Baghdad in the next few days on a journey blessed in advance by both Bush and Aziz.

The Baker-Aziz talks were the first high-level discussions between the two nations in the five months since Iraq invaded Kuwait. The two men sat across a blue-draped hotel conference table, with the world eagerly awaiting the outcome of their conversations.

Oil prices fell sharply in early trading as word spread that the talks had not broken apart abruptly, then soared within moments of Baker's pessimistic report of his session. Stock prices moved in the other direction — climbing as the talks wore on; plunging

Mood of foreboding grips D.C. as 'big clock' ticks

■ Administration seems to be edging beyond coercive diplomacy and starting the countdown toward using force.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A mood of foreboding settled over official Washington Wednesday night with the failure of talks between the United States and Iraq in Geneva and highly public signs that the administration was moving the United States toward a war footing.

With the United Nations deadline for Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait less than a week away, the bleak outcome of Secretary of State James A. Baker III's meeting with Tariq Aziz, the Iraqi foreign minister, seemed finally to have convinced many skeptics that war was now likely if not yet inevitable.

At a news conference Wednesday afternoon, President Bush said at first, "I am hopeful still," but he later conceded his disappointment and added, "I'm not sure I have great hope."

In openly expressing discouragement, the president seemed to be edging beyond coercive diplomacy and starting the countdown toward using force in the Middle East.

Saddam threatens to make Americans 'swim in blood'

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraqi news media reported Wednesday's talks between U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz without comment, and Saddam Hussein said Americans will "swim in their own blood" if war breaks out in the Persian Gulf.

A Western diplomat said that "most likely all American diplomats will quit (Baghdad) by Jan. 12," three days ahead of a U.N. deadline for Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait or face war.

Six American diplomats remain in Baghdad, including Charge d'Affaires Joseph C. Wilson IV. The comment by the diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity, could not be confirmed.

The official media did not elaborate on the outcome of the Aziz-Baker talks in Geneva. They underlined statements by Aziz that Iraq would not

Oil prices take wild ride on market speculation

In one of the wildest trading days in the history of the New York Mercantile Exchange, oil slid to its lowest point since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, before shooting up $7.65 midday and settling back again.

Poll: Most in U.S. find war justified

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans see war with Iraq as justified but half are not ready to attack if Saddam Hussein fails to get out of Kuwait by the Jan. 15 deadline, an Associated Press poll has found.

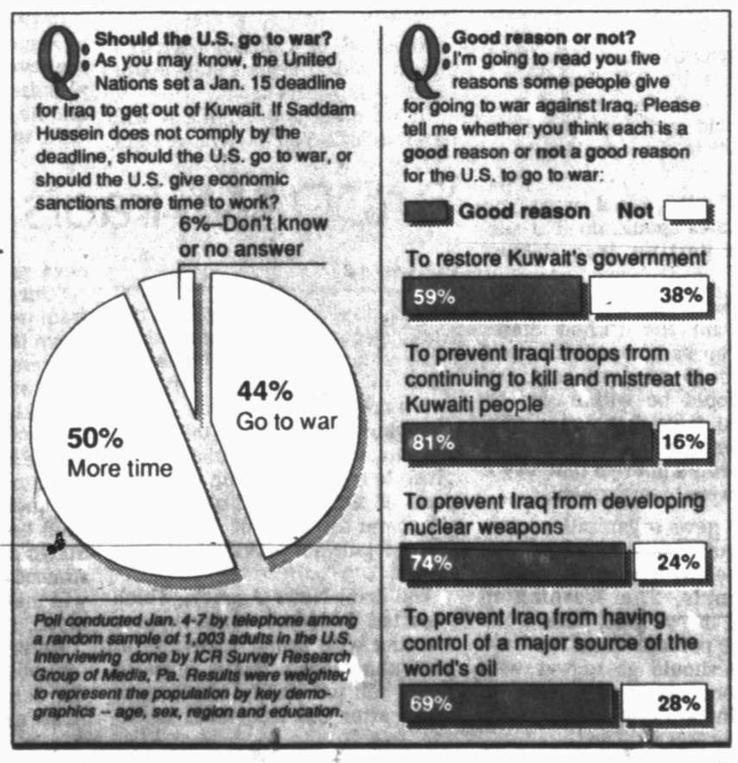

The poll was conducted Friday through Monday when hopes were still pinned on talks in Geneva. It found 93 percent saying that at least one of five arguments raised for using force against Iraq is a good reason for the United States to go to war.

The direct objective of restoring Kuwait's government is a good reason for 59 percent of Americans. An interest closer to home, preventing Iraq from having control of a major source of the world's oil, persuades 69 percent.

Even more Americans see a good reason for war in the life-and-death arguments: 81 percent to prevent Iraqi troops from continuing to kill and mistreat the Kuwaiti people; 74 percent to prevent Iraq from developing nuclear weapons and 71 percent to eliminate Saddam's war-making ability.

President Bush raised these arguments before requesting Tuesday that Congress pass a resolution backing the use of force to drive Iraq out of Kuwait if it fails to withdraw by Jan. 15.

STATE

Heavy showers and thunderstorms prompted some flooding in Central Texas on Wednesday and forecasters warned of more high water through the end of the week because many areas are already saturated with rainfall.

Up to 8 inches fell at Elgin near Austin, with isolated heavy rains of up to 3 inches in East Texas, the National Weather Service said.

Skies were mostly cloudy statewide, with heavy rainshowers stretching from Corsicana to Toledo Bend Reservoir and from Abilene to Wichita Falls.

Authorities said some ponding of water has occurred in Palestine, where about 2 inches of rain fell, and other areas of Freestone County. About 2 inches also fell in Waco.

NATION

Up to 7 inches of rain fell on parts of Texas on Wednesday, and bands of rain and snow stretched across the nation from the Southwest into New England.

Thunderstorms over southern Texas produced locally heavy rain with some flooding of streams and low-lying areas.

Elgin had gotten 7.50 inches of rain and 6.66 inches fell in eastern Travis County, the National Weather Service said.

At midday, light snow was falling across much of the lower two-thirds of New England and over parts of New York state, Michigan, Illinois, Minnesota, South Dakota, North Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Colorado, and New Mexico. Snow also fell on parts of Utah, Nevada and Montana.

TALKS: Aziz refuses to carry letter to Saddam

(From 1A)

after Baker's statement.

In the Saudi Arabian desert, across the border from Iraq's occupying army, the massive American military force went about its business. Bush has ordered more than 400,000 troops into the region, backed by sophisticated aircraft, a huge armada and hundreds of tanks.

Aziz, whose nation invaded Kuwait last summer, pledged it would not attack first in the current crisis. But, in the event of a war, he said Iraq would "absolutely yes" attack Israel.

Bush, asked if he would make the same commitment, answered curtly, "No."

"It's not too late" to resolve the crisis short of war, he said, but added that he was discouraged by the day's events.

Baker told reporters his meetings with Aziz were diplomatically polite — no table-pounding or yelling. Yet he said Aziz refused to carry back to Baghdad a letter from Bush to Saddam. American diplomats will be leaving the Iraqi capital on Saturday, he added, three days before the deadline for possible attack.

Aziz said the letter contained language inappropriate for an exchange between heads of state. Asked about that, Bush said the letter was "not rude" but direct, an attempt to make sure Saddam clearly understands the U.S. position.

Baker told reporters, "Regrettably, I heard nothing today that suggested to me any Iraqi flexibility" on a withdrawal from Kuwait. Aziz did not once bring up the subject of Kuwait during his news conference, outlining instead Iraq's call for a conference to address the rights of Palestinians.

Optimistic assessments of the talks were hard to find.

"It's the dialogue of the deaf," said Sen. John Glenn of Ohio. "They're just talking past each other."

Each side said it was up to the other to prevent war.

"Let us all hope that the (Iraqi) leadership will have the wisdom to choose peace," said Baker.

Said Aziz: "That's up to the American administration to decide."

Meanwhile, the five-month war of nerves was unabated.

The president issued an executive order giving the government authority to get priority delivery of any needed food or industrial material, and stepped up his campaign for a divided House and Senate to grant him unfettered authority to wage war. Some lawmakers said the outcome of the talks made it more likely that Bush would win the support he's seeking.

"It might change some minds," said Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said he was weighing whether seek presidential authority to keep reservists on active duty for up to two years under legal provisions that would permit him to call up a million reservists — something he said he has no intention of doing. Without a new presidential proclamation, tours of reservists in support units would expire after 180 days, for most of them in mid-February.

Said Bush in issuing his executive order, "The United States must have the capability to rapidly mobilize its resources in the interest of national security."

Bush said at the White House the talks had not advanced hopes for peace "one inch" unless Aziz returns to Baghdad and tells Saddam of U.S. determination to press for a withdrawal.

CLOCK: 'Odds have shifted markedly toward war' fateful decision to initiate offensive military action if President Saddam Hussein failed to withdraw voluntarily from Kuwait, there was a strong sense here that such a determination was approaching.

(From 1A)

A businessman with close links to the Persian Gulf commented, "You can hear that big clock ticking all over town."

Bush's decision in November to send more troops to the Middle East was described then by his aides as part of a plan to put muscle behind the search for a diplomatic solution. That search came to an abrupt end on Wednesday, at least as far as the direct leadership of the United States was concerned.

"The odds have shifted markedly toward war in the last 24 hours," commented one of the president's principal confidants on Capitol Hill.

"It was a very discouraging day," said Rep. Lee Hamilton of Indiana, a leading Democratic spokesman on foreign affairs. "I'm not totally downcast, and I hope that other avenues will be explored. But today's event offered some concrete hope of progress. Now there's no event on the schedule for us to look forward to."

Some analysts have believed from the start that some third party would have to broker a peaceful solution if there was to be one, and there was widespread discussion Wednesday about the possibility that Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar of the United Nations or perhaps Algeria or some other Arab nation might now play that role.

Some other experts on the region have never expected Saddam to make any significant move until the very last minute.

"Both sides have delivered their messages directly now," said Richard W. Murphy, a former assistant secretary of state. "In that sense, the meeting fulfilled its purpose. Now I think they will start looking for a middle man. But it all depends on whether the big boss in Baghdad really wants a settlement or not, and I must say that he has already carried us all much closer to the brink than I had anticipated."

An intermediary might still be able, where the United States is not, to give "the necessary winks and nods" to enable Saddam to pull out without losing face, said William E. Colby, a former director of central intelligence.

But whoever takes command of the search for peace will have to work very quickly. As Baker said, "The time for talk is running out."

Wednesday was filled with dark symbols, headed by the deadlock in Geneva. Adding to the gloom were the disclosure that all remaining U.S. diplomats in Iraq would be pulled out on Saturday, Aziz's refusal to accept Bush's letter for delivery to Saddam or even to address the question of withdrawal from Kuwait, and his defiant declaration that "yes, absolutely" Baghdad would attack Israel if Iraq itself was attacked.

In addition, there was the news that call-ups of U.S. reserve forces were to be extended and an announcement putting wartime procurement procedures into effect.

INITIATIVE: U.N. chief to leave for Baghdad tonight

(From 1A)

Iraqi Ambassador Abdul Amir Al-Anbari said after the meeting that Perez de Cuellar "is a man of peace, and he thinks that he should make his contribution and try his luck."

Kuwaiti Ambassador Mohammad Abulhasan said, "We hope that the trip will serve the cause of peace, but personally I don't carry any further hope under the Iraqis, because we had expected that the meeting between Secretary Baker and Tariq Aziz, which lasted more than six hours, could have yielded positive results.

"But we were shocked to see that the result was so negative, to the point that the Kuwaiti occupation was not addressed at all by the Iraqis," he said.

Earlier Wednesday, Aziz told reporters in Geneva that "several days ago, our representative in New York met with Mr. Perez de Cuellar and informed him that he would be welcomed in Baghdad if he wishes to come. This position is still there."

Aziz spoke after holding the six hours of fruitless talks with the American secretary of state.

Baker said he found no flexibility in Iraq's position, but that he too would welcome intercession by Perez de Cuellar.

"Perhaps there might be a way that the secretary-general of the United Nations can use his good offices here in the remaining six or so days that we have left," Baker said. He was referring to Tuesday's U.N. deadline for Iraq to get out of Kuwait.

"We would welcome any or all diplomatic efforts," Baker said.

In Washington, President Bush said he had talked to Perez de Cuellar on Wednesday. Bush said the United States "would have no objection" to a peace mission by the U.N. chief.

"It doesn't need to be a bilateral negotiation here. We tried that, and we were stiff-armed by an intransigent foreign secretary," he said, referring to Aziz.

Bush said that perhaps Perez de Cuellar, or some other diplomatic mission, could still convince Saddam Hussein "that he's up against an immovable force. He's up against something that is not going to yield. He is up against a situation under which there will be no compromise.

MIDLANDERS: 'U.S. has set itself up for war' compromise, the United States has no alternative.

(From 1A)

"We've made a stance and now we have to stick with it. If we back down, it will kill any credibility we have with the rest of the world," Wodyard said.

Wodyard

Even though he believed America will go to war, Wodyard said the government should be more concerned about problems at home than those overseas.

George Bernal, 33, a picture framer, agreed that the United States already has set itself up for war.

"We need to let people know we stand behind what we are saying. We have a lot to lose" by not going to war — namely America's reputation, Bernal said.

The fine line between the reputation of the United States, as a result of its presence in the Mideast, and the reality of war concerned most Midlanders as it did Wodyard.

Mike Hall, 43, a Midland sheriff's deputy, said America's stance will have lasting effects.

"If we do or if we don't, it will be a Catch-22. You have more than 400,000 troops over there and we'll have them over there from now own," Hall said.

Despite the no-win situation, Hall said, the war choice doesn't agree with him.

"I think you should have a real good reason and I don't think at this time oil is a good enough reason to kill 25,000 people," Hall said.

The public doesn't have enough information, he said, to make a qualified decision about whether to go to war.

The Midlanders interviewed were disappointed that those familiar with the Iraqi situation and in a position to make a compromise were unable to come to terms at Wednesday's talks.

Gee

"I wished something more" came from the talks, said Louise Gee, 53, a church business administrator, who opposed using force against Iraq.

"The possibility of war scares me. I think we should find a peaceful solution," Ms. Gee said.

David Burkett, 49, an oil company senior clerk, who believed current events point to war, said compromise may be too late. Burkett said he supported the use of force.

"If they are going to prevent a war now, someone is going to have to give a little bit . . . but it looks to me that both countries are passing up all opportunities," Burkett said.

Dallas Lann, 19, an oil field worker, agreed.

"It's been going on so long. If they were going to come to a solution, they would already have," Lann said, adding that the United States was not going to give in and that the talks were America's way of saying "last chance."

Gus Harper, 46, an oil field gauger, who is staunchly against war, said he believed there still is time for compromise.

"I don't think we understand Saddam and he doesn't understand the problem he made for everyone else," Harper said. A mediator who can relate to both Western and Arab thinking is needed, Harper said.

Harper

Harper said he is optimistic that Arab counterparts will strive to quell a war. The misunderstanding is "more of a Bush-Hussein thing than an America-Iraq thing," Harper said.

If war does break out, however, it won't be an easy solution, the Midlanders said.

"I don't believe war has ever been a solution; it just creates more problems," said Gerard Lopez, 36, a retail store manager.

But Eric Johnson, 36, a computer analyst, said he believed not going to war could create more problems.

"I think people are afraid of war . . . but they haven't looked at the alternatives" if there is no war, Johnson said. People need to consider Iraq's potential detriment to the world if no action is taken, Johnson said.

"If nothing is resolved, we should carry out what we said."

The Midlanders overwhelming said that if the nation goes to war that President Bush should seek congressional approval to do so.

"It's in the Constitution. Congress is the only body to declare war," Michael Russell, 41, a student, said.

"I think Congress will probably go along with it but it will be a close vote," Russell said.

Although most Midlanders interviewed said they thought war was a serious possibility, not all agreed.

One dissenting opinion came from Laura Cosby, 20, a receptionist.

"I don't think we'll ever go that far . . . it's uneconomical," Ms. Cosby said, adding that the deadline for Iraq to pull out of Kuwait is just a ploy to evoke action.

Ms. Cosby, like some who foresee war, didn't believe the United States should be in the Mideast to begin with.

POLL: Public split on timing

(From 1A)

If Saddam does not comply, 44 percent said the United States should go to war, while 50 percent favored giving economic sanctions more time to work.

An expert who has analyzed several months of gulf polls said an American president could not expect more support for combat than Bush is getting.

"The idea that approximately half of the population declares itself prepared for war immediately is an unprecedented finding in public opinion research," said Everett C. Ladd, director of the Roper Center for Public Opinion Research. "There's never been that high a proportion."

In a substantial gender gap, 55 percent of the men and 35 percent of the women backed war. Support for war also plummeted among the over-65 respondents, to 33 percent, and those in households earning less than $15,000, to 27 percent.

In telephone interviews with 1,003 adults by ICR Survey Research Group, 64 percent said Bush should get approval from Congress first if he decides to go to war.

The AP also asked what the United States should do if it succeeds in getting Iraq out of Kuwait.

If Saddam remains in power, 49 percent said the United States should keep its troops in the gulf area, and 45 percent said the troops should be withdrawn. Of those who favor keeping a military presence, about three in eight say they would not feel that way if Saddam were overthrown.

Several news organizations conducted gulf polls at about the same time, with varying results. For example, The Washington Post-ABC News Poll this week showed 63 percent think the United States should go to war with Iraq to force it out of Kuwait "at some point after Jan. 15."

SADDAM: Iraqis stayed glued to radios

(From 1A)

yield to pressure, and reported the Iraqi delegation had refused to receive a message from President Bush to Saddam, also without elaboration.

During and after the talks, Iraqis throughout Baghdad were glued to radios, listening to broadcasts of the British Broadcasting Corp. and the Voice of America to learn details not provided by Iraqi media.

The Iraqi News Agency, which reported Saddam's remarks at a meeting with senior members of his ruling Arab Baath Socialist Party, did not clarify whether he spoke after U.S.-Iraqi talks in Geneva ended in failure.

"Our armed forces and the great Iraqi people are ready for a showdown that will defeat the forces of aggression and infidelity," Saddam was quoted as saying. "With the help of God, unequivocal victory will be ours."

"We are not among those who yield to pressure," the news agency quoted him as saying. "You shall see what a trap the United States will fall into. Should the Americans become embroiled, we will make them swim in their own blood, God willing."

He praised his army's readiness for what he termed "a battle in the defense of the dignity of the Arab nation."

Baker told reporters after the talks that Aziz had shown "no flexibility whatsoever" in Iraq's position that it will not withdraw its forces from Kuwait.

The Iraqi foreign minister refused to accept a letter from President Bush for Saddam, saying it contained offensive language.

In Baghdad, a city of about 4 million, motorists and taxi drivers lined up in front of gas stations, filling up their tanks.

"This is just a precaution," said a motorist. "Who knows whether the talks may fail. Maybe they will fail, so we are getting ready to face the eventuality."

Otherwise, Baghdad was like any other day.

OIL: Supplies sufficient, Energy Department says

swings based solely on rumor.

As "the meeting between Secretary of State Jim Baker and Iraq Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz went on ... NYMEX traders speculated they were talking peace and prices soared. When they broke up, the price dropped. The price changes were not based on fact," said Collins.

Before Baker talked to reporters after the talks in Geneva, the contract for February delivery of crude skidded to $23.35 per barrel, a low point for the gulf crisis. From the moment Baker spoke the word "regrettably" to describe the outcome of the meeting, the contract leaped more than $7 to a peak of $31, then settled back as traders sold to take profits from the dramatic runup.

Collins said the oil price swings affected the posted price, which in turn affect real people with real jobs.

If there is war, the independent oilman said he does not expect it will last very long, and that impact to oil supplies could be minimal if the Saudi oil fields remain undamaged. He noted that the U.S. had about 90 days of oil stocks and Venzuelan contacts that could mitigate shortages if Saudi fields are damaged.

The Energy Department said Wednesday that current oil stocks would offset supply disruptions caused by a war in the Persian Gulf, but an official refused to predict how much prices would rise, saying that's classified.

A noted geologist and energy authority, however, predicted that prices probably would go no higher than $40 a barrel.

"The idea that the price would go up to $50 or $100 per barrel is just folly," said William Fisher, director of the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Texas at Austin. Fisher said a peaceful resolution of the Mideast crisis would likely result in a worldwide glut of oil that would drop prices into the lower teens.

Fisher said Wednesday that the world has excess crude oil supplies, and it is unlikely that military attacks on major oil facilities in Iraq, Kuwait or Saudi Arabia would drastically change the worldwide supply.

"There is no oil shortage ... and the U.S. and its allies have the capability to respond to any further disruptions," John Easton, assistant energy secretary for international and energy emergencies, told a House committee.

"There is so much oil in the world that we will probably be able to get along without even the Saudi and United Arab Emirate oil temporarily," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

Easton said he based his optimism on the fact that there are high levels of petroleum stocks as well as petroleum products in inventory and in tankers at sea. He estimates that there are about 100 million barrels of unsold oil in tankers at sea. Easton said the DOE has examined a number of scenarios that include additional losses of oil production capacity and concluded there would be no serious shortages.

He also discounted the likelihood that a war would extensively damage Saudi fields. "The Saudis have a variety of contingency plans. ... We do believe there certainly is no military threat to those facilities," he said.

However, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the Energy and Commerce Committee who chaired the hearing, said he was concerned that the administration has not planned for the possibility of a longer war. "A prolonged conflict could cause serious energy disruptions," said Dingell.

Other committee members, especially those from the Northeast where increased heating oil prices already have strained the finances of many families, raised concern about oil prices in case of a war.

Many energy analysts have predicted an immediate sharp spike in the price of crude oil — perhaps more than $60 a barrel — if fighting in the Persian Gulf begins. But some have suggested prices are likely to ease within a few days because of current supplies if reports from the field indicate no serious damage to Saudi fields and no indications of a drawn-out war.

"The impact (of a war) on price unfortunately is still anybody's guess," Easton said when pressured further on the issue.

Collins said there was some concern in the Permian Basin about the price of oil collapsing to $15, following a resolution of the Gulf conflict, but noted that will probably not be the case.

"It is not to the best interest of Saudi Arabia and other OPEC nations to let prices fall below $20," he said. "The only OPEC member who was unhappy with $21 oil was Saddam Hussein." Collins said he thought $20 was a legitimate floor for oil prices.

DOE officials say strategic reserves, which hold 506 million barrels of oil and have a capacity of providing as much as 3.5 million barrels a day. U.S. demand, should be sufficient to prevent any disruption. In December, U.S. crude oil demand was approximately 14 million barrels. The Persian Gulf accounted for 22.8 percent of the demand, with total imports accounting for 54 percent.

Lithuanians guard parliament

MOSCOW (AP) — Hundreds of Lithuanian demonstrators, some singing songs and waving nationalist banners, guarded the Baltic republic's parliament Wednesday after Kremlin troops made a show of force and then withdrew, an official said.

Rita Dapkus, a parliament spokeswoman, said the armed troops left after dusk. She said Kremlin soldiers also withdrew without incident from the republic's television station.

Also Wednesday, troops in armored personnel carriers and buses rolled through the neighboring Baltic republic of Latvia. The republic's government said it was told the troops were on high alert and would start unspecified military action Thursday.

The developments came two days after the Defense Ministry ordered army paratroopers to help round up draft resisters in Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, Armenia, Georgia, Moldavia and the Ukraine.

The Baltic Council, comprising the presidents of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia, said in a statement that the (Kremlin) troop deployments to enforce the draft were a pretext for starting a wider crackdown.

Ms. Dapkus said Lithuanian officials have received unconfirmed reports that three youths were grabbed off the streets for failing to obey draft notices.

The Latvian Women's League said two young men performing alternative service were picked up by military authorities Tuesday in western Latvia.

The Kremlin actions have aggravated the already tense situation in the Baltic states, where leaders have maintained the Kremlin would use force to suppress their independence movements. No troop movements have been reported outside the Baltics.

The Baltic Council, comprising the presidents of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia, said in a statement that the (Kremlin) troop deployments to enforce the draft were a pretext for starting a wider crackdown.

"The Baltic Council expressed its protest over the new action by the U.S.S.R. Armed Forces. We have reason to believe that these and other actions will be carried out, and in the final course will lead to suppression of the Baltic people's striving for freedom."

Five military vehicles, each carrying about 20 Interior Ministry troops, had been parked near the Lithuanian republic's library adjacent to parliament building from midday until 6 p.m., Ms. Dapkus said.

Seven armored personnel carriers and about 100 troops were posted at Lithuania's main television station until about 5:30 p.m., she said.

Another armored personnel carrier was seen at the republic's main printing plant, the pro-independence news agency ELTA reported. Ms. Dapkus said Lithuanian officials could not confirm the report.

Marcoses' silver headed for block

Hearst News Service

NEW YORK – If you thought former Philippine First Lady Imelda Marcos had merely cornered the market on shoes, consider some samples from her silver collection:

Eight mustard pots, 12 salt cellars, four cake baskets, 22 wine coolers, nine soup tureens, one toasted cheese dish and an Italian perfume burner. Not to mention dozens of plates and entree dishes, flatware, and enough candlesticks to crush a Volvo.

All of this now is owned by the Philippine government, which can't find a reason to keep it, and which, with $28 billion in foreign debt, is in desperate need of cash.

So, today and Friday, mustard pots, et al., together with 97 old-masters paintings, will be auctioned at Christie's on Park Avenue to those interested in history, celebrity and – of course –art.

Paintings by the Renaissance painter Raphael, Titian, Tiepolo and Tintoretto and others will be on the auction block with hundreds of pieces of antique British silver.

From this sale, the Philippine Presidential Commission on Good Government hopes to raise between $8 million and $12 million – to be used for land reform and for victims of the earthquake that hit the Philippines last July.

But $12 million is but a drop in the Marcos regime's silver bucket.

Since the Marcoses hastily left Manila on the eve of revolution in February 1986, the commission has tried to track down and sell all of their worldwide catalog of opulence.

The commission estimates that the Marcoses stole between $1 billion and $10 billion from the Philippines during their 20-year reign -- depending on which accountant you believe. The so-far-acquired items include four Manhattan skyscrapers, a Long Island manse, and unknown numbers of secret Swiss bank accounts as well as the silver and paintings.

Nearly five years after the revolution, the commission has collected about $400 million.

In addition to the precipitation, residents have faced dense fog.

Tiny town going, going

DONNAN, Iowa (AP) — This may be the last time you read a story with this dateline. Donnan, Iowa's smallest town, is being wiped off the map.

Tired of passing around city council jobs and tending to municipal paperwork, the seven residents of Donnan in northeast Iowa voted 6-1 this week to disincorporate.

Fayette County will now take over maintenance for Donnan's streets and the state will handle the town's final bills.

Donnan's fortunes have dwindled since the 1940s, when traffic declined on the two railroad tracks that intersected there.

NOTICE OF CONSERVATORSHIP OF SIR LLOYDS INSURANCE COMPANY

Pursuant to Article 21.28-A of the Texas Insurance Code, the Commissioner of Insurance issued an official order, No. 91-0003 effective January 3, 1991, placing Sir Lloyds Insurance Company, Dallas, Texas, in a state of conservatorship. This company is an authorized domestic Lloyds insurer authorized to write property and casualty insurance.

The Commissioner of Insurance finds that pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 5, Texas Insurance Code, the company has requested and consented to the appointment of a conservator. Supervision is inadequate to accomplish rehabilitation of the company.

Under the order, the Conservator will assume control and operation of the company and will take all steps and legal measures necessary to preserve, protect, and recover the assets and property of the company. Efforts will be made to rehabilitate the company for the protection of its policyholders and the public.

If you are a policyholder of this company, your insurance coverage continues in effect for as long as you pay your premiums. If the company is rehabilitated, your coverage will continue as though nothing had happened. If the company is not rehabilitated, it may be placed into receivership or its business reinsured, and you will be so notified. In either event, contractual claim obligations will be paid by the company, by the reinsurer, or by the guaranty fund subject to the limitations provided in law. The guaranty fund provides protection for covered claims up to the amounts specified in Article 21.28-C, Texas Insurance Code.

Courses of action available to policyholders include continuation or cancellation of their policies. Policyholders who wish to continue their coverage need do nothing more so long as their premiums are paid. If premiums are due, policyholders should continue to pay them in the same amount and manner as in the past in order to keep their coverage in force.

To avoid possible loss of coverage, policyholders must continue to pay premiums unless and until similar insurance can be obtained from another company. Policy provisions with respect to filing claims remain in force and must be observed.

Claims will continue to be handled in the standard process as specified in the insurance contracts issued by the company. Policyholders will be notified if there is any change in claims processing or handling.

Policyholders' rights are governed by the Texas Insurance Code, State Board of Insurance rules, and by policyholders' individual contracts of insurance. Policyholders with specific questions regarding policy provisions should seek independent legal advice. No action is required by policyholders under Commissioner's Order No. 91-0003. If any action should be required in the future, policyholders will be notified.

This notice is published pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 5A, Texas Insurance Code (Acts 1989, 71st Legislature, Ch. 1082, Sec. 4.02, eff. September 1, 1989).

Greenwood test results impress

Students, parents, teachers and administrators at Greenwood Independent School District in eastern Midland County have a reason to smile. The students' scores on the new state test — TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) — were significantly higher than the state averages in every category at every grade level.

In fact, Greenwood students overall achieved an 84 percent mastery on the TAAS test, which replaced the older TEAMS (Texas Assessment of Minimum Skills) test. This was the first year for Greenwood students to take the TAAS test. That fact says, clearly, that Greenwood Independent School District is doing something (and probably a lot of things) correctly.

The community, located in a primarily agricultural area 12 miles east of Midland, has long been noted for the quality of its schools. Students in the schools have regularly done well on state academic tests in recent years, but the results on the new TAAS test were impressive in that the district's students scored better than the state averages at every grade level.

According to Greenwood Superintendent of Schools Quentin S. Burnett, credit for the success should go to teachers, principals and parents. "There is an overall commitment to quality education in Greenwood," noted Burnett. "The people of Greenwood want outstanding schools and are willing to pay for them."

Greenwood community has the added advantage of being nearly totally centered around its school system. The community is not incorporated and most functions revolve around the school. Parents and others in that community have striven to keep the school district meeting the educational needs of the people of the community and the school district's enrollment has grown along with the community until today it stands at about 1,300 students in grades kindergarten through 12.

It's good to see that concern, hard work and dedication truly do pay off in the education of school students.

All should help pay indigent costs

Texas law requires Midland County citizens to pay for indigent care. Whether or not the voters roll back the taxes, we are still faced with the fact that those patients at Midland Memorial Hospital who cannot afford to pay must still have care from the hospital. Last year more than one-half of those receiving indigent care at Midland Memorial Hospital were infants and children.

The vote on Saturday, Jan. 19, will decide who will pay these costs. If we vote against the rollback proposal, we all will pay our share of the costs. If we vote for the rollback, we shift our responsibility to the paying patients at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Costs for indigent care are high. However, Midland's indigent care costs are a lower percentage of the hospital budget than those in Lubbock, Amarillo, Corpus Christi, El Paso, Dallas or Houston.

Midland Memorial Hospital uses its money from operations to reinvest in up-to-date equipment and services. If this money is used on indigent care, services and equipment must be scaled back.

Midland Memorial Hospital is not allowed by law to make a profit. It is required by law to pay for indigent care. Let's pass the costs along to everyone.

Mary Jane Young
Midland

Tax rollback would increase patients' cost

Nobody likes the thought of a tax increase, no matter how small, but let's look at the facts and alternatives.

Fifty-two percent of indigents receiving care at Midland Memorial Hospital were children whose care accounted for 62.6 percent of the total cost of indigent care.

The proposed rollback of the hospital district taxes would shift the obligation of indigent care from all citizens of the county to only paying patients and their employers who provide health care insurance.

Funds would have to be shifted from the hospital operating budget to make up the deficit, resulting in a reduction of quality care.

The proposed rollback would save the average Midland homeowner only $8 to $12 per year, but would increase the patient's cost an average of $20 per day.

If the rollback is successful, I hope no one is stricken suddenly as I was a few years ago with an illness (the cause of which is not yet known) called Guillain Barre' Syndrome and have to spend three months in the hospital with increased cost and reduced quality care.

I therefore urge every citizen who has a vote to consider the facts of the rollback very carefully before voting.

Watkins' merry band doing some good

WASHINGTON — Energy Secretary James Watkins didn't like some of the people he got stuck with when he took office in 1989. The crew assigned to monitor the safety of nuclear weapons plants had been producing unreliably rosy information.

Anderson

Watkins, a nuclear buff himself from his days as an admiral in the nuclear Navy, is no raving environmentalist when it comes to nuclear issues. But even he was skeptical enough about the people he inherited from the Reagan administration that he made some changes.

Watkins recruited his own band of faithfuls — a team of sleuths to unearth chronic safety risks at nuclear weapons plants. It is one of the few encouraging moves Watkins has made to get a handle on nuclear safety.

The Energy Department supervises the nation's network of nuclear weapons plants run by private contractors. At the tail end of the Reagan administration, reports surfaced of lax safety precautions, poor management, inadequate training and poor equipment throughout the network of 17 plants. Many of the facilities had to be shut down.

Watkins formed a new Office of Nuclear Safety and charged it with the responsibility of protecting the public and the nuclear plant workers from radioactive materials.

Before Watkins created the team, he went to Congress and testified that some of the people he had inherited from the previous administration had no technical skills to supervise weapons plant operations. He complained that the lack of expertise made it difficult for him to solve the highly publicized safety problems at the plants. Watkins said he was forced to involve himself in every decision because he was getting unreliably optimistic information from his staff.

Watkins' new safety office is headed by Steve Blush, formerly with the National Academy of Sciences. Congressional sources who oversee the Energy Department say Blush was a good choice. Under his leadership, the National Academy of Sciences produced a report that was highly critical of safety in the nuclear weapons plant complex. So Blush is no good ol' boy.

His nuclear safety office has already started taking some swings. The investigators found that Energy Department contractors knew for nearly 13 years about a hydrogen buildup in nuclear waste tanks at the Hanford plant in Washington and failed to take action. The findings, submitted to a Senate panel headed by Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said that the risk of an explosion at Hanford was one of the biggest problems staring the Energy Department in the face for years.

The safety problems have not gone away under Watkins. Employees are still exposed needlessly to radiation. Security checks have been inadequate. Serious crimes, including drug dealing and theft of classified documents, are all too common at nuclear weapons plants. So Blush's staff has its work cut out.

And Watkins has a lot of work to do to restore the credibility of the Energy Department when it comes to nuclear safety. Congressional overseers complain that some of Watkins' aides are too stingy about sharing information with Congress on nuclear safety issues. And there is some indication that Watkins lets aggressive staffers run all over him.

"The man himself has his heart in the right place and has considerable integrity," one congressional source told our associate Scott Sleek. "But I think he's just not able to control his department."

Congress must legitimize use of force

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Baker, pausing at a television studio en route to his plane, gave a crisp and historic answer — "more helpful" — to the crucial question: Would a congressional vote of approximately 60 percent for and 40 percent against authorizing the president to use force in the Persian Gulf be more helpful or less helpful than no vote at all?

Will

With those two words, and others that Speaker Tom Foley lingered in ABC's green room to hear — words welcoming congressional debates and votes — Baker signaled that he did not want to compound a diplomatic and military crisis with a constitutional crisis.

Whatever Congress passes before or after Jan. 15 will be short of a declaration of war. And even that need not mean the immediate collision of armed forces. Britain and France declared war on Germany on Sept. 3, 1939, two days after Germany invaded Poland. But by mid-November, the only two nations engaged in combat in the European theater were Finland and the Soviet Union. The first ground combat between British and German forces did not occur until April, 1940, in Norway.

Jan. 15 is commonly called a deadline, the date by which Iraq was required to leave Kuwait. But it really is a starting line: Starting then, the use of force is credible because authorized by the United Nations. But that authorization has never by itself sufficed to make the threat of force credible. When the United States joined the U.N., it did not repeal any part of the Constitution. A U.N. vote cannot legitimize a president's initiation of a war.

This is a learning experience, an occasion for learning more about constitutional language. Article I, Section 8, listing Congress' powers, includes: "to declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal. ..." The obscure points make the large point clear: Initiating armed conflict is Congress' prerogative.

In the 18th century, undeclared wars were called "imperfect," meaning incomplete, wars. Governments often conducted them by issuing letters of marque to private vessels and letters of reprisal to public naval vessels, authorizing them to take hostile actions against other vessels. The issuance of such letters indicated the commencement of "imperfect" war. Note that the Constitution gives Congress primacy in initiating even such gray-area warfare.

Developments in nuclear and guerrilla warfare have fostered the expansion of presidential autonomy. For years, presidents have been followed by a military aide carrying the "football," the satchel containing codes for launching nuclear attacks. It has been a symbol of the hair-trigger world of ICBMs and missile-launching submarines off America's coasts. A threat of sudden attack made Congress feel marginal, tentative and passive about possible warmaking against the nation's principal enemy.

Guerrilla warfare blurred several distinctions: What constitutes war rather than another form of violence? What is the political and legal status of war that is not quite civil war and not tidily war between sovereign states — massed armies crossing international borders?

The difficulty of America's responses to violence in such a blurred context (as in Indochina), and the fact that an obliterating war has been just minutes away, led President Johnson's under secretary of state, Nicholas Katzenbach, to tell Congress in August, 1967, that, "The expression of declaring war is one that has been outmoded in the international arena." With Baker's words encouraging congressional action, the administration backed away from a position similar to that.

Baker did not go beyond asserting that, "The president has not wanted to ask for a resolution unless the leadership of the Congress could assure him that such a resolution would be forthcoming, because your hand would be weakened were it not forthcoming." Wrong. The hand that holds the sword would be not merely "weakened" but tied. In a military situation such as this, absent a congressional authorization there can be no legal use of, hence no credible threat of, force.

A 60-40 split among the people's representatives is not the kind of consensus presidents prefer. But a 60-40 vote would be recognized by 100 percent of thinking citizens as fulfilling 100 percent of constitutional propriety.

No profit in refusing to mourn bank's loss

They said goodbye to the Bank of New England this week.

When a bank dies there is no ceremony, no tears are shed and few mourn. It gets buried with only a small obituary in the local paper.

This is wrong. A bank is a loss to everyone when it dies and the least it deserves is a eulogy.

Buchwald

Something like this:

Dearly Beloved:

We are gathered here today to bid farewell to the National Bank That Couldn't, which passed away in its sleep just days ago when it ran out of funds.

This is a sad moment for those of us who knew the Bank That Couldn't over the years and was befriended by it time and time again.

The Bank That Couldn't did not die because it couldn't get a money transfusion. It died of a broken heart, when the people it loaned money to told the bank to shove it. People say that the bank had only itself to blame for its demise. But it is cruel to speak this way about the dead. Sure, it made mistakes, but no more than Chase, Citibank or the Bank of New England. It invested its depositors' savings in the future at a time when there was no future there.

I'm not here today to talk about the bad things that happened to the Bank That Couldn't. I'd like to say something good about it. This was a happy bank. Even when its loan officers made grievous errors you could still hear singing in the back rooms.

I remember one time walking into the bank and I saw Jed Tobin, the vice president, sitting behind his desk, splitting his sides.

"What's the joke?" I asked.

"We were holding $30 million in junk bonds and the department store chain defaulted on them."

"What's so funny about that?"

"The investment bankers who sold us those bonds offered to sell us $30 million more."

"I still don't see the humor."

"The bank's officers bought them."

There was never a dull moment at the Bank That Couldn't. This valiant institution not only invested in our little town but in Argentina as well. If you deposited more than $50,000 you got a calendar of Evita Peron. Everyone had faith in the bank because its marble floors were cleaned twice a week, and the bronze bars on the tellers' cages were polished every day. The bank even paid to put up a Christmas creche on its roof.

When it was in serious financial trouble it did not cry and whimper — like a savings and loan. It went to its senators and said, "We will finance your campaign if you get us out of this jam." Few senators could say no.

Why, many of you are asking, did the Bank That Couldn't pass away? It died because it lost the will to live. It was driven to its death by heartless examiners and federal insurance accountants who cared more about the bank's books than they did about the people who owned its stock.

When it could not take the pain any longer, it pulled down the blinds, closed its eyes and stuck its head in a 24-Hour Deposit Box.

We will all miss the Bank That Couldn't.

Perhaps the money is gone, but as we all know there is more to life than a bank having money.

Let us pray for the Bank That Couldn't and hope that it will find eternal peace in the big Chapter 11 in the sky.

NTSB inspectors urge checking of DC-9 jets' rear exit handles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal safety officials, citing their investigation of last month's fatal Detroit runway collision, urged Wednesday that hundreds of DC-9 jets be inspected for broken or cracked rear exit handles.

The National Transportation Safety Board also said the McDonnell Douglas Co., manufacturer of the DC-9 and its successor, the MD-80, should redesign the tailcone emergency exit system on both aircraft "to correct its propensity for damage and malfunction."

A spokesman for McDonnell Douglas, John Thom, said, "In 25 years of service by the DC-9, we have had no other instances reported of a broken handle."

The recommendations went to the Federal Aviation Administration.

Jim Miller, a spokesman for Northwest Airlines, which operated both planes in the Dec. 3 collision at Detroit, said the airline expects the FAA to issue a formal order Friday requiring the checks.

Eight people died aboard the DC-9 when it collided with a Boeing 727 on a foggy runway at Detroit's Metropolitan Airport.

The safety board recommendations stemmed from the fact that two of the dead, one a flight attendant assigned to the DC-9's rear jumpseat and the other a male passenger, were found near the plane's still-closed tailcone evacuation slide and its manual release handle. Both had died of smoke inhalation.

The safety board said its investigation had found "serious deficiencies" with the release mechanism.

The mechanism is designed to jettison the DC-9's tailcone assembly, automatically activating an evacuation slide or folding stair and providing an emergency route for passengers to leave the plane.

McDonnell Douglas said in a statement that it has already called on DC-9 operators to examine the suspect release handle. It said many of the devices already have been inspected and none has been found to be defective.

NATION IN BRIEF

Report on passive smoke released

DALLAS (AP) — Passive cigarette smoke kills 53,000 non-smoking Americans each year, making it the third-leading preventable cause of death, the American Heart Association reported Wednesday.

Researchers at the University of California-San Francisco established a link between passive smoke and the development of heart disease, said an article in today's editions of Circulation, a journal of the Dallas-based heart association.

"Passive smoking is a much bigger problem than anyone thought," said Dr. Stanton Glantz, the article's author and an associate staff member of the Cardiovascular Research Institute at UCSF. "This is the first clear statement that passive smoking causes heart disease."

Smoking advocates rejected the study, saying it lacked scientific basis.

"He (Glantz) has been putting this forth since 1984," said Thomas Lauria, a spokesman for The Tobacco Institute in Washington. "Every couple of years it is regurgitated in a different form. We rejected it outright in 1984 and we reject it now."

Lauria said passive smoke never has been shown to be harmful.

Woman dies in subway

NEW YORK (AP) — Maybe sentiment, or self-respect, made Grace Cheng fight back. She'll carry the reason to her grave.

Cheng, a 31-year-old waitress, was mangled by a subway train Tuesday while defending a blue wallet that held $1 and some credit cards. Two good Samaritans pulled her from the tracks, but she died at a hospital.

"Who knows, maybe there was a picture in there, something of sentimental value," Sgt. Bob Valentino, a transit police spokesman, said Wednesday.

Or maybe Cheng just didn't want to be a victim.

"The bottom line," said Valentino, "is this woman is dead; it's sad."

Woman goes to son's aid

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman jumped in to help her son wrestling with gunmen on her front lawn, foiling a robbery and giving her son a chance to disarm and kill one of the bandits, authorities said.

Doretha Hall, 47, was confronted outside her home Monday by a gunman who ordered her inside, said sheriff's Lt. Derry Benedict. Inside was her 21-year-old son, David, who intervened after a second intruder began choking his mother.

"They smacked my mother. I'm not going to let anybody do that," said Hall, who lunged for the gun-wielding intruder, forcing him outside, where they fought for the weapon.

The second bandit then joined the fracas, and Mrs. Hall jumped onto the pile to save her son, authorities said. Her son was shot in the leg, but managed to get the gun and shoot the would-be robber, Benedict said.

Richard Maragh Jr., 18, of Los Angeles, was shot to death, and the second man fled, the lieutenant said.

Mother, baby reunited

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A woman was reunited with her 6-month-old daughter Wednesday after FBI agents recovered the baby at a motel and arrested the husband of a baby-sitter charged with the infant's abduction.

"I missed you so much," Sheena Holloway told her daughter Dana Christine, one of her three children, as she took the child into her arms at FBI headquarters in suburban Maitland.

Her former baby-sitter, Patricia Shaw, 23, is accused of taking the baby the day after Christmas from the Holloway home in Seale, Ala.

Ms. Shaw was arrested late Tuesday at her mother's home in Columbus, Ga., and told officers where the child was.

FBI agents found Dana in the custody of Akbar Salemi, 37, of Miami, at a motel in nearby Kissimmee shortly after midnight. Salemi was charged as an accessory.

ăk'rə-mō'nē-əs

acrimonious (adjective) Acrimonious means full of sharply biting hostility or bitterness. The term can be traced to the Latin root word "acer," which means sharp, and is often used to describe arguments or disagreements that become heated. For example, speeches made by members of Congress concerning issues that sharply divide the membership, such as the national budget or the crisis in the Persian Gulf, may become acrimonious.

LULAC renews challenge to judicial system

■ The complaint, to be filed in Midland's federal court, seeks to have appeals court judges elected from single member districts.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The nation's largest Hispanic civil rights organization said Wednesday it will challenge the way judges are elected in seven state appeals courts, claiming the at-large voting system intentionally discriminates against minorities.

The complaint will be filed in U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton's court in Midland, according to Rolando Rios, an attorney representing the League of United Latin American Citizens and the Mexican American Bar Association.

"The integrity of Texas' judicial system is at stake and we call upon the Legislature to correct this problem and to correct it now before the whole system is taken over by the federal courts," Rios said.

Rios is seeking to have appeals court judges in Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, Austin, El Paso and Waco elected from single member districts. There are two appeals courts in Houston.

Currently those judges are voted into office in countywide elections.

Of the 51 judicial positions in those courts, 48 are held by Anglos and two by Hispanics, Rios said. One is vacant.

In those cities, the minority population ranges from 21 percent to 58 percent, Rios said.

Rios said the countywide election method in those judicial races dilutes minority voting strength. By dividing the county into smaller districts, minorities would be able to elect candidates of their choice, he said.

Reps. Henry Cuellar, D-Laredo, and Sylvester Turner, D-Houston, said they will introduce legislation next week that would establish single-member districts for trial and appellate courts.

After their election, those judges would then face countywide retention elections, under the plan.

"I don't think anybody is advocating an outright quota-type system," Turner said. "The representation should be much better than what it is now. The way the system is presently structured, it is simply not a fair system. It simply does not reflect the community," he said.

Rios said he had not seen the legislation. "We want straight single-member districts, but we would be happy to look at whatever proposals the Legislature brings forward," he said.

The newest legal action will be an amendment to another lawsuit that challenged the creation of several district courts that the U.S. Justice Department said had not been approved.

A panel of three federal judges ruled against that challenge last month, and it is now being appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

District lines may change

1990 census data may require redrawing of districts

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Election district boundaries for local governmental bodies could change after 1990 census data is analyzed this year, Midland officials said Wednesday.

City, county, hospital and school officials also said they might work together to draw similar voter district boundaries between the four entities.

City Attorney David Reagan said he is researching a number of Texas demographic consulting firms for the laborious task of breaking down 1990 census information.

The study would determine where and if Midland's minority populations have shifted during the past decade, Reagan said. The city's census information is not expected to be released until April, he said.

He said the city, school district, county and hospital district might hire the same demographic firm in order to ensure identical data and reduce consulting costs.

Two other options — conducting an in-house study or turning the job over to a law firm — also are being considered by the city, Reagan said.

"What I'm attempting to do is gather enough information on the options so the council can pick the option that's not only the most advantageous but the most economically feasible," he said.

The possibility of conducting an in-house census has not been ruled out, but Reagan said that option probably would involve too much staff time.

"The redistricting process is a very complicated and very time-consuming process," he said.

If it was an in-house study, one or two city employees would be assigned full time for up to a year, Reagan said.

"Then we would have to pay for training," he said. "If we did it in-house, there would be a lot of time spent on learning the process."

In addition, he said the city would purchase computer software needed to analyze the information.

Reagan said that if the study reveals major minority population shifts, city attorneys then would iron out legal aspects of changing election boundaries.

Another option, he said, is hiring an outside law firm that specializes in single member district cases.

"They would do the demographics and the legal portion," Reagan said. "They would do everything."

However, he said contracting a demographic consultant is favored because it would cost less than hiring a law firm and consume less time than an in-house study.

"They (consultants) also have been through the process many, many times," he said. "They are experts. You know you're going to get some good work out of them."

Although the city, county, school district and hospital district each would have a contract with the consultant, it would cost less than each entity hiring a different firm, Reagan said.

He said the fee for each entity would be lower because the consultant could apply the same information to all four bodies.

"We also could coordinate our district boundaries and, in as many instances as possible, use the same election boundaries," Reagan said.

He said using the same boundaries would eliminate confusion among voters, who often use separate polls from election to election.

A proposal on which firm to hire could be submitted by the city to school, county and hospital officials next week, Reagan said.

A proposed option for the city would go before councilmen for vote no later than Feb. 5, he said.

The city is under a 1984 federal court order mandating single member district representation. Redistricting plans must meet U.S. Justice Department approval before implementation.

Cancer seminar set for Saturday

■ The seventh annual conference allows local doctors access to the latest information on the treatment of various kinds of cancer.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

When the West Texas Cancer Conference convenes in Midland Saturday, Permian Basin health care professionals will have an opportunity to learn the latest developments in the detection, treatment and prevention of cancer.

Sherry Parker, cancer program coordinator for the Allison Cancer Center, said the seventh annual conference will cover topics including breast, cervical, skin, prostate and colorectal cancer, sexually transmitted diseases and oncology services.

"They will be talking about everything from the diagnosis of cancer — Dr. Bessman will speak on colorectal cancer detection when someone presents with anemia — to sexually-transmitted diseases — in Jenny Broering's talk — and how they might relate to gynecological cancers," Parker said.

She said one advantage of bringing physicians from major hospitals and universities throughout the country to Midland is that they have experience treating large numbers of patients with a specific cancer. Physicians in West Texas may treat only a few patients with that type of cancer.

"The speakers can say what works in x-number of cases," Ms. Parker said.

"This is important because physicians and other cancer caretakers need to be able to have access to the latest information, technology, support and care for cancer patients.

"The more information we can provide in a regional setting, the better off our patients are going to be," she said.

The conference, which will be held at Midland Community Theatre from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, will include a keynote address by Dr. Jay Harris of Harvard University on detection and treatment of early breast cancer.

Dr. Marsha McNeese of M.D. Anderson Cancer Center will discuss radiation in early stage breast cancer. Dr. George Peters of Baylor Medical Center-Dallas, president-elect of the Texas Division of the American Cancer Society, will talk about the Texas Breast Screening Project.

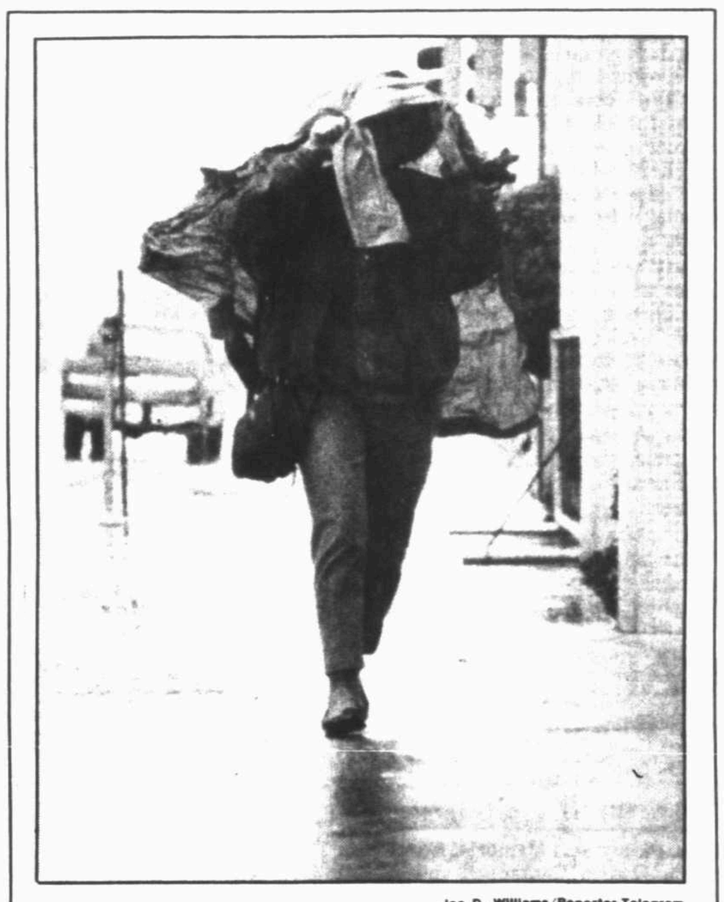

Over lunch, Jack Franklin, director of the Texas Cancer Data Center and president of the Texas Cancer Council, will give an update on oncology services.

Dr. David Shneidman, a dermopathologist from Seattle, Wash. and formerly of Midland, will discuss non-melanoma skin cancer detection. He also will speak on vehicular accidents based on his experience with the King County Coroner's Office at 7 p.m. Friday.

Jenny Broering, a nurse-practitioner with the Department of Family Health Care and Department of Pediatrics at the University of California-San Francisco, will discuss the relationship between HPV and cervical cancer in adolescents.

Dr. E. David Crawford of the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center in Denver will talk about hormonal management of advanced prostate cancer and Dr. David Bessman of the University of Texas Medical Branch-Galveston will discuss screening for colorectal cancer.

Forecasters once again are calling for an end to the soggy weather which has gripped the area since last week. Erica Titus used a makeshift raincoat to stay dry on a trip to the Midland County Library Wednesday.

Latest front expected to be moseying on

Staff Report

Midland skies are finally expected to begin clearing up today, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

"We've had three different fronts in the last week — one about every two days," a NWS spokesman said.

The most recent moved in Wednesday morning and brought drizzle and rain to Midland.

"It looks like it should start moving to the northeast this morning and start clearing all West Texas by this evening,"

Popular local chef waits for transplant

Abundio "Bruno" Reyes knows his customers.

Reyes

But for the pastmonth, the customers at Luigi's Restaurant wonder, where's Bruno?

Last week the Reyes family was informed by doctors at Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas that their father has been placed on a waiting list for a new liver — a process that could take days or weeks.

He remains in serious but stable condition.

Reyes became ill Dec. 1 while at work. He was later taken to Physicians and Surgeons Hospital where doctors diagnosed him as having a liver disease.

"He had been seeing one doctor about a month before that, but I don't think my father realized just how ill he was," said Reyes' daughter, Helen Mata. "We've had a lot of people asking about him."

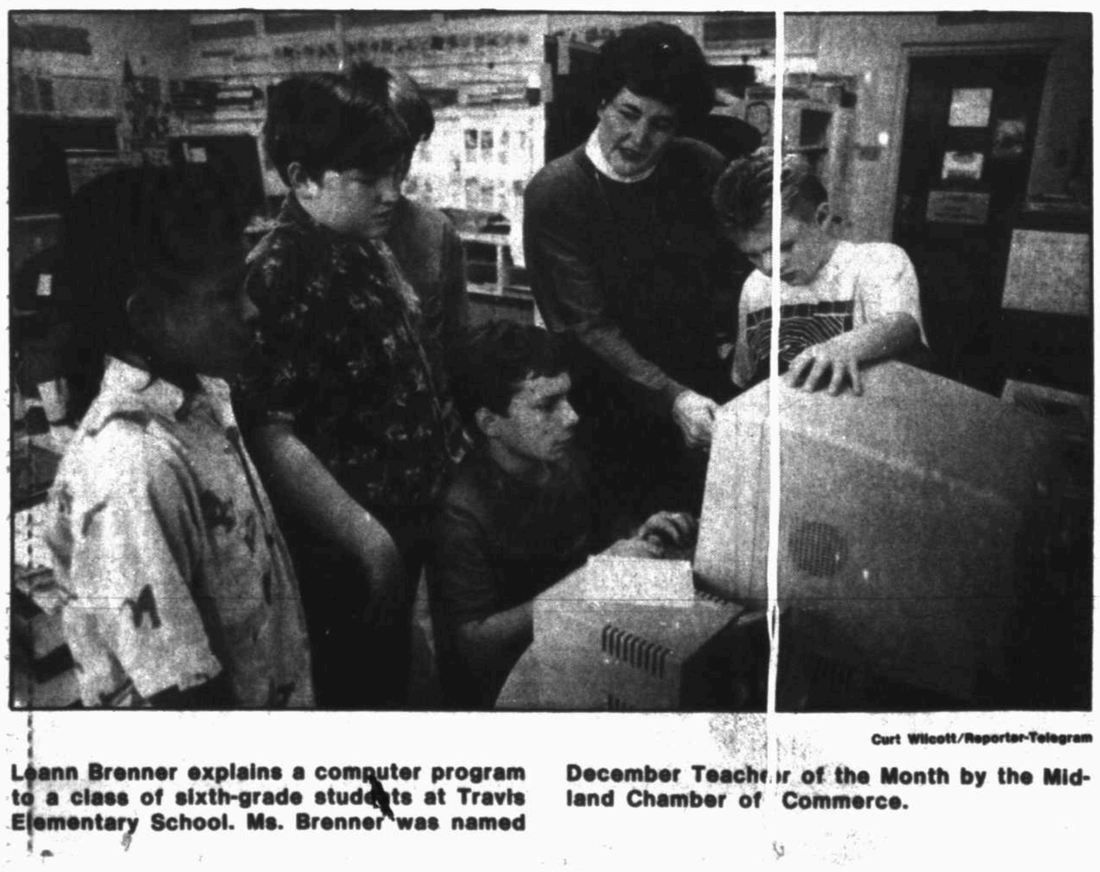

Reyes, who has worked 22 years as head chef at the popular downtown restaurant, is described by friends as a jovial person who brightened their dining experiences.

Three weeks after he became ill, the 55-year-old Midlander was airlifted to Dallas when his condition deteriorated.

"The thing about my dad is he has a great heart," said his son Bruno, a manager at Harrigan's restaurant. "He's the type of guy who would go out of his way for people and not expect anything in return."

As word filtered around town about Reyes' condition, Bruno said a lot of people began working behind the scenes to raise money for anticipated medical expenses. One

Elementary school teacher inspires students to succeed

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

'The mediocre teacher tells. The good teacher explains. The superior teacher demonstrates. The great teacher inspires.'
— William Arthur Ward

To teach is to inspire, a concept Leann Brenner says she has taken to heart.

"Motivating students is my biggest challenge," said Leann Brenner, who was selected as Teacher of the Month by the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

Ms. Brenner, a teacher at Travis Elementary School, said her drive to motivate students stems from the fact that she teaches children with learning disabilities. Many of her students have had negative experiences in school because of their disabilities.

Ms. Brenner describes LD (learning disabled) children as those who "have average or above average intelligence, yet do not learn by conventional methods in the classroom."

"When we start school, I have all my students write a short biography," Ms. Brenner said. "Nine out of 10 students will begin their biography with the same sentence: 'I hate school.'"

In order to combat poor attitudes about school and learning, Ms. Brenner has set herself up as a one-woman positive motivational force.

Ms. Brenner's supervisor, Jan Murdock, wrote in a letter to the chamber, "Leann's philosophy of education is to teach all children as she would want her own children taught. ... She uses reinforcements such as stickers, computer time and praise, praise, praise."

And sure enough, "smiley face" stickers, colorful achievement charts and positive messages abound in Ms. Brenner's resource room. "If you teach children that they can achieve, they will remember the lesson for life," Ms. Brenner said.

But behind the positive daily messages, rewards of computer time, stickers, and prizes, is a highly structured classroom.

"LD children can't have a lot of free time without getting into trouble," Ms. Brenner said. "They

DEATHS

Jesse Mendenhall

TYLER — Services for Jesse L. Mendenhall, 80, were held Tuesday at Trinity Baptist Church of Tyler with the Revs. James E. Duncan Jr. and Eric Seay officiating. Services were under the direction of Lloyd James Funeral Home.

He died Monday at his home in Tyler.

Mendenhall was born Jan. 28, 1910, in LaFlore County, Okla. He was employed with Permian Oil Corp. in Midland and retired in 1970. He was a member of Trinity Baptist Church.

He is survived by his wife, Helen Mendenhall of Tyler; two sons, C.L. Mendenhall of San Antonio and Robert Mendenhall of Pineville, La.; four daughters, Mintie Ruth Mendenhall of Goosecreek, S.C., Jestine Duncan of Tyler, Virginia Kencholoe of Fort Worth and Margaret Jones of Little Rock, Ark.; 20 grandchildren and 22 great-grandchildren.

The family requests that memorials be sent to Hospice of East Texas.

Joe Wayne Fesler

Services for Joe Wayne Fesler of Anchorage, Alaska, are set for 3 p.m. Saturday at the Ellis Chapel. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

He died Wednesday at a local hospital.

Raymond Saldana

ODESSA — Graveside services for Raymond V. Saldana, 64, of Midland are set for 4 p.m. today at Sunset Memorial Gardens with the Rev. Robert Bush officiating. Services are under the direction of Frank W. Wilson Funeral Directors.

He died Tuesday at a local hospital.

Saldana was born Nov. 19, 1926, in Laredo, Mexico. He moved to Midland-Odessa from Victoria in 1957 and worked as a self-employed tile setter.

Saldana was a Catholic.

Survivors include: two daughters, Marie Montoya of Dallas, and Z. Gonzales of Odessa; three sons, J. Ray Saldana of New Orleans, Raymond Saldana Jr. of Odessa, and Gilbert Saldana of Nashville, Tenn.; seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

of those efforts organized was a fund-raiser held Sunday at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church.

Zelda Hochman, whose husband Louis owns Luigi's, said all of the regular restaurant customers knew the elder Reyes by name, making a point to converse with the chef behind the counter when they came to eat. "He's just very popular with all the customers," she said.

Last week, doctors accepted Reyes as a transplant candidate, placing him on a list with other Type B (blood) patients awaiting donors. "But because of his blood type, the list isn't as large, so doctors think it should arrive soon."

If and when a donor becomes available, Ms. Mata said it's possible her father will also need new kidneys.

Ms. Mata, who returned from Dallas Monday night, said her father has grown "very weak" since becoming sick. "He still recognized who I was, but he wasn't talking much."

Reyes' son said he was somewhat taken aback by the outpouring of concern Midlanders have shown for his father.

"The number of people who have come up to me and asked about him has been unbelievable," said the younger Reyes. "It's overwhelming just how many care. He is still a young man who has a lot to live for."

Ms. Mata said she continues to pray for her father and is thankful for those at Baylor who have shown him exceptional care. "I have so much confidence in the people I saw at Baylor. They've given us a lot of hope and optimism."

Earlier Tuesday, the family, with the assistance of friends, was able to establish a trust fund in the name of their father.

Contributions can be sent to: The Bruno Reyes Medical Fund at Community National Bank, P.O. Box 3903, Midland, 79702. Attention: Irma.

CARE: Doctors, nurses can get credits for conference

(From 1B)

Ms. Parker said Memorial Hospital and Medical Center was able to bring in the speakers with the help of grants from the Texas Medical Association's Physician Oncology Education Program, the Texas Cancer Council and several pharmaceutical companies.

The conference has been approved for Continuing Medical Education credits for physicians, Texas Nurses Association credits and continuing education units through Midland College.

Approximately 150 health care professionals have signed up to attend the conference and space is available for late registrants.

For more information, call Ms. Parker at 685-1560 before 2 p.m. Friday.

FRONT: Damp spell not unusual

the spokesman said.

The latest arctic front was situated predominantly to the north of Midland.

Lubbock experienced sleet and Clovis, N.M., received snow as the front moved through.

The barrage of storms was not highly unusual though, according to the NWS.

"It's not unusual. It happens like this just about every year," the spokesman said of a prolonged damp, cold spell.

Today's forecast calls for cloudy skies with a 50 percent chance of rain early in the day, becoming partly cloudy later in the day. The high will be in the mid-40s with winds from the south at 5 to 10 mph.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with temperatures dipping to a low near 30.

Friday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-50s.

After an overnight low of 42, Wednesday's high was 45 compared with the record high for that date of 79 in 1948. The record low for this date was 5 set in 1952.

TEACHER: Structure helps students do not handle free time well. I keep them busy at all times."

She teaches her 23 students in small groups. "My largest class group this year is six students," she said. "I do a lot of one-on-one teaching and specialize in individualized attention."

Despite a lot of undivided attention, Ms. Brenner said that she is careful not to "become a crutch" for her students.

"My students correct their own papers," she said. "Often, going back over their own papers they understand their mistakes and are astonished that they can make the corrections themselves. It improves their self-esteem."

Ms. Brenner also employs other tactics to improve self-esteem such as eliminating red pens from the classroom. "Students can use any color but red to correct a paper," she said. "These children have received too many papers marked up in red. Having a paper with green corrections is less devastating."

Aside from correcting their own work, Ms. Brenner said LD students are given more time to complete assignments.

"I don't give students homework, except for sixth-grade students, since they have so much homework from other classes. They can, however, finish class assignments during lunch," she said.

The teacher says she discusses her students' progress with their parents as often as possible. "The more you can meet with parents, the more progress you will see in a child," she said.

Ms. Brenner said a common problem of LD students is that their families are transient. "They move often," she said. "And when you move a lot you get behind in school and end up in a resource room."

Another contemporary problem that has cropped up in the past three to five years, according to the teacher, is drug and alcohol abuse among students.

"I teach at-risk students. They tend to be followers rather than leaders. By the time they get to junior high the drug problems and peer pressure are the worst, and students may follow a bad group," she said.

Aside from trying to build the self-esteem which makes leaders, Ms. Brenner has a DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) officer visit her classes in the second semester of sixth grade. Ms. Brenner also has attended training sessions and workshops designed to teach substance abuse awareness and intervention from Clearview Hospital and Community Intervention.

Aside from her work with LD students, Ms. Brenner — an educator for 22 years, 14 in Midland — has taught deaf children. She is a former officer of Council for the Deaf, and Midland Association for Children with Learning Disabilities and is a current member of Council for Exceptional Children.

The teacher said she likes working with all types of children. "Every child is unique and every child can be successful at his own pace," she said.

"It's my job to work myself out of a job and get these children back into the mainstream as soon as possible," Ms. Brenner said. "I feel good when I motivate students and they come back and tell me they are doing well in school and plan on attending college. That's what motivates me."

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Sentencing

Staff Report

A Midland judge sentenced a 48-year-old man Wednesday to 16 years in state prison on an aggravated robbery conviction, court records show.

Robert Mike Lewis pleaded guilty Wednesday before 238th District Court Judge John Hyde to robbing a woman at knifepoint last February in the Walgreen's Drug Store parking lot, 215 Andrews Highway.

Lewis was indicted after his March arrest on one count of aggravated robbery. Because of previous convictions, Lewis faced a minimum of 15 years in prison for the offense, District Attorney Al Schorre said.

The maximum sentence for aggravated robbery, a first-degree felony, is 99 years or life in prison.

Investigators said Lewis got into the woman's car and threatened her with a knife on Feb. 20, 1990. The woman jumped out of the car and ran for help while her assailant fled with her checkbook, according to police.

Injury accident

A Midland woman remained in Midland Memorial Hospital Wednesday evening with a broken left leg after being involved in a pedestrian-vehicle accident, police and hospital officials said.

Patsy Bennett, 20, of 4007 W. Illinois Ave., was accidently struck by a vehicle driven by Megan Mabry, 20, of Odessa about 5:40 p.m., police said.

According to reports, Mabry was driving south on Delmar Street when she stopped for the stop sign at 4000 W. Illinois Ave.

Mabry proceeded through the intersection at the same time Bennett was attempting to cross the street. The women apparently did not see each another, police said.

LINES: Districts may be coordinated

(From 1B)

Any changes would not be made before the May 4 council election, Reagan said.

Elvia Hernandez, executive director of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, said Hispanic populations have shifted substantially since 1980.

But the majority of Hispanic and black citizens, Ms. Hernandez said, still live in east and south Midland.

"If we get real lucky, we might be able to pick up an extra district on the east or south sides," she said.

Robbyne Fuller, president of the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, said voter boundaries should be changed to reflect the rising number of blacks in the community.

"We don't have representation at the city level like we do at the school," said Ms. Fuller, whose husband, James, serves as a Midland Independent School District trustee.

MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi said enrollment data shows that minority populations have spread throughout the city.

A number of minority families live in apartments in north Midland along Midland Drive and Loop 250, Baressi said. "It's not a high number, but there has been some movement to those areas."

An overall population boom in northwest Midland also may require redrawn school election districts, Baressi said.

Whether MISD will agree to hire the same demographic consulting firm as the city will depend on cost among other factors, he said.

Six Flags auditions set for weekend

Staff Report

ARLINGTON — Auditions for Six Flags Over Texas' 1991 musicals will be Friday and Saturday.

Tryouts will be at the Sheraton CentrePark Hotel, Arlington. Auditions for dancers will begin at 10 a.m. each day, with singers auditions beginning at 1 p.m.

A special call will be held for prospective actors in the park's gunfight show at 10 a.m. Saturday.

Minimum age for performers in the theme park's shows is 16. Auditions will be limited to two minutes.

Singers must bring music in their key and may be asked to dance. Dancers will be given a combination by Six Flags' choreographer and need to be prepared to sing. No a cappella auditions are permitted, nor can there be recorded accompaniment. A piano and accompanist will be available.

Six Flags will be premiering new shows in both the Southern Palace Music Hall and the Crazy Horse Saloon when the park's 30th anniversary season begins March 9.

GS cookies go on sale

The traditional Girl Scout Cookie Sale gets under way Friday as Scouts throughout the community will be offering seven varieties of cookies for $2.50 per box.

Girl Scouts in the Permian Basin have been selling cookies for more than 40 years. In 1990, more than 275,000 boxes were sold. Proceeds from the cookie sale are used by troops for local service projects, field and camping trips, career exploration programs, and the nationwide "Need to Read" service project.

The cookie sale also benefits the Permian Basin Council in helping to provide facilities and services to the nearly 4,000 girls and volunteers who participate in the Girl Scout program.

Cookies will be delivered from Feb. 12-25.

If a Girl Scout does not contact you during the sale period, call 563-0634 to place an order.

Debate coverage set

ODESSA — KOCV-TV, the public broadcasting station in Odessa, will provide live and continuing coverage of the House and Senate debates on the Persian Gulf crisis beginning at 10 a.m. today.

The coverage is expected to continue today, Friday and possibly into the weekend.

Normal programming will be pre-empted, KOCV officials said.

A deadline of Jan. 15 has been set for Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait. Otherwise, President Bush has said the use of military force against Iraq is possible if the deadline is not met.

MCHD voting continues

Absentee voting for the Midland County Hospital District rollback election continues through Jan. 15, said Pat Eastup of the Election Administrator's Office.

As of noon Wednesday, 821 people had cast their ballots since absentee voting began Jan. 2, Ms. Eastup said. She said turnout had been light.

The election, which seeks to roll back the district's 19.6 percent tax increase to an 8 percent increase, will be held Jan. 19 from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

People wishing to vote absentee can go to the Election Administrator's Office at 709 W. Washington Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Mauro readies new regulations

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Do-it-yourselfers may have to stop pouring their old crankcase oil on the ground when they change their oil, and service stations may have to recycle and dispose of used motor oil under new state regulations.

That is only one part of a six-point environmental program that Land Commissioner Garry Mauro announced here Wednesday after he was sworn in for a third term as head of the Texas General Land Office.

Mauro said his program is designed to make a connection between protecting the environmental and economic growth.

It includes proposals for oil-spill response, expansion of the state's parks system, coastal management, recycling, disposal of household hazardous waste, and environmental education.

Mauro said do-it-yourself mechanics improperly dispose of enough used motor oil every year to equal 35 Exxon Valdez oil spills.

Texas House rejects dozens of tries to limit speaker's power

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas House of Representatives Wednesday overwhelmingly rejected a dozen attempts by two legislators to reduce the House speaker's authority and to base House leadership positions on seniority.

Rep. Al Price, D-Beaumont, and Rep. Paul Moreno, D-El Paso, got little support in their effort to change the House rules during the 72nd regular session that started Tuesday.

Price, a 14-year House veteran, proposed that committee assignments be based upon seniority, but Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, complained that such a rule would mean younger legislators would have to wait years before they qualified for a major committee assignment.

"You'd have to serve 20 years before you could be a committee chairman," said Wilson, who also has served seven terms.

Moreno, a 23-year House veteran, tried to base redistricting committee assignments on seniority, which he said would allow more minority members to serve on the committee that will redraw legislative and congressional district lines.

Moreno, a lawyer, said the lack of minority participation would be used in a potential voting rights lawsuit challenging whatever plan the redistricting committee comes up with.

The House tabled Moreno's motion on a 131-7 vote.

On a non-record vote, the House also tabled Price's amendment that would have required future speakers to step down while under indictment for any felony, ethics violation, or an offense involving moral turpitude.

The House also killed amendments by Price that would have allowed each member to get two committee assignments based on seniority; would have clarified conflicts of interest; and would have removed the provision that committee chairs serve at the pleasure of the speaker.

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, House Republican Caucus chairman, voted to re-elect Lewis on Tuesday and to support the speaker's authority on Wednesday.

"I think he's been a fair, nonpartisan speaker," Craddick said of Lewis.

Craddick was a member of the "Dirty 30," a coalition of liberal Democrats and Republicans that rebelled against then-Speaker Gus Mutscher in 1971, but Craddick said he sees little comparison between that time and today.

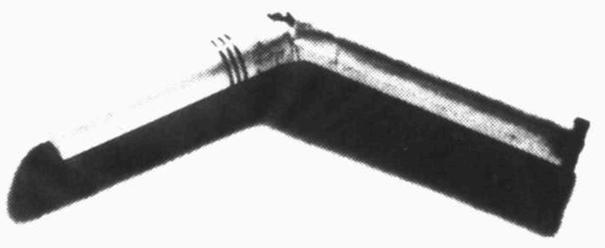

"The House is much more open today," he said. "Back then, just the chosen few could pass legislation. Now virtually everybody is included in the process."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be extra careful about whom you confide in today. Your mate is your best ally. Get all financial and employment agreements in writing. Focus on projects you can complete on your own.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your work load may be more taxing than usual. Do not despair — current challenges are the stepping-stones to greater financial rewards in the near future. Attend to an older person's needs.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your intuition is right on target today. Let your feelings be your guide. Finishing a tough job brings great satisfaction. Give a prima donna a wide berth.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An uneasy truce with a family member needs reinforcement. Money could be at the root of your differences. Take steps to establish or maintain a good credit rating.

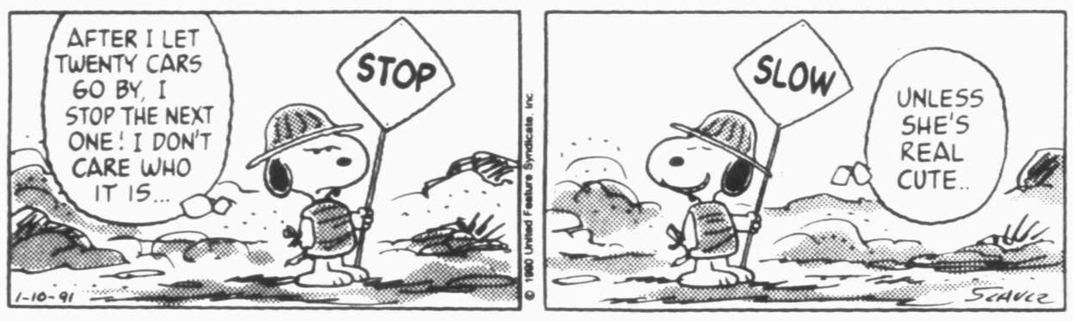

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Hopes raised early in the day could be dashed later on unless you proceed with caution. Do not allow friends to distract you from your work. Save the socializing for evening hours.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Concentrate on completing routine tasks today. Smooth things over with loved one while your rapport is at a peak. A social event will benefit from your organizational skills.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The emphasis today is on tying up loose ends. Others will understand if you maintain the status quo. Complete projects already under way. A parent-child relationship becomes more rewarding.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are happiest when surrounded by family. They will go to great lengths to maintain upbeat relationships with their relatives. Born joiners, these youngsters will especially enjoy being in a Scout troop or 4-H group. Although adult Capricorns prefer to work by themselves, they are very sociable after hours.

You don't have to be a math genius to play bridge well. But there is no denying that knowledge about which combinations are more likely is a considerable boon. Stir in a bit of logic, and you have the makings of a solid declarer.

South's hand was perhaps a whisker light for a demand bid. North had an unpleasant choice at his third turn, and he did well to opt for the four-level major-suit game despite the fact he held only a singleton heart and doubleton club.

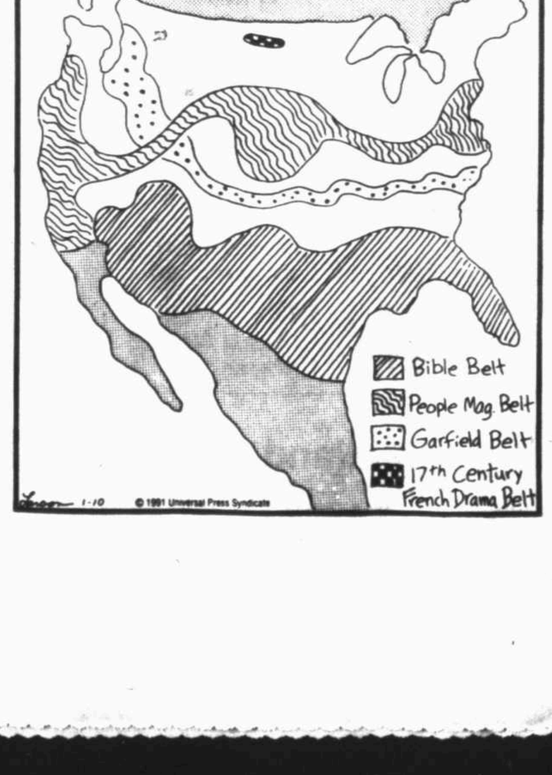

West led the king of diamonds and continued with the ace, ruffed by declarer. South was reasonably pleased with his contract—if he had no trump loser, he could afford to lose two club tricks and still get home. So declarer cashed the ace of clubs and continued with another. East won and shifted to a trump. When it soon became apparent that declarer had to lose a trump trick, he went down one even though clubs were 3-3.

Declarer's line would have succeeded had West held a doubleton king of clubs. However, chances of finding three clubs to the king in the West hand are almost twice as likely as finding a doubleton king. More important was to try to keep West on lead, because then dummy's trump could not be removed without the defenders sacrificing a trump trick if that was their due.

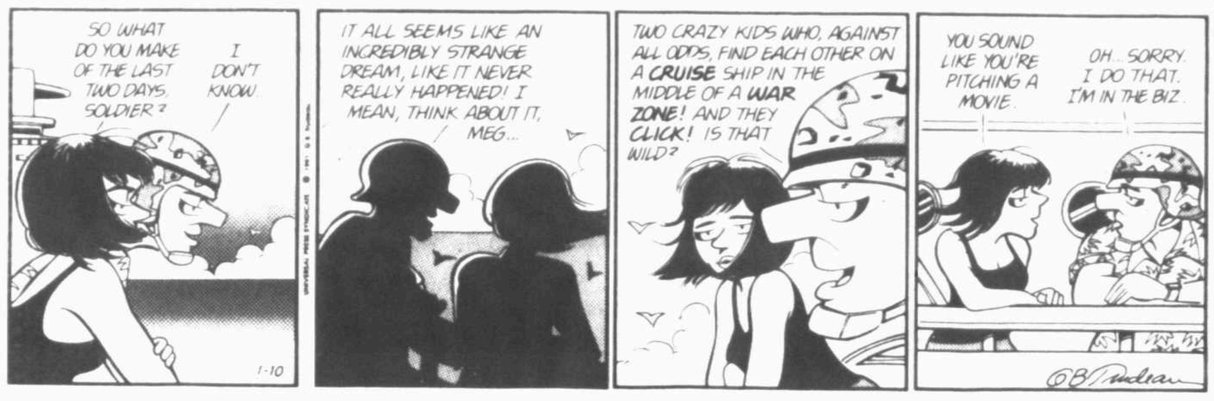

Instead of continuing with a low club after cashing the ace, declarer should have led the queen—West will hold the king 50 percent of the time. In with the monarch, West would have been helpless as the cards lay. A plain suit return would allow declarer to set up the clubs with one ruff, and to extract dummy's trump would cost a trump trick. Declarer would lose either a club and a trump or two clubs, depending on the defense, to go with the diamond trick the defenders had already banked, but that's all.

TV's Roseanne builds arsenal against National Inquirer tabloid

LOS ANGELES — Actress Roseanne Barr has gone back to court with more ammunition in her racketeering lawsuit against the National Enquirer.

The tabloid pays security guards, hospital personnel and others to hand over medical records and take unwanted photos of celebrities, says her amended lawsuit filed Tuesday.

Barr

The star of "Roseanne" alleged the tabloid has paid individuals to purloin property of such stars as Elizabeth Taylor, Tom Hanks and the late Lucille Ball.

She filed the amended version of her $35 million racketeering lawsuit after the tabloid's attorneys challenged her initial claim, saying it failed to meet requirements of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act.

Miss Barr alleges four of her love letters were stolen and published in exchange for "money or other things of value worth in excess of $5,000."

She and her husband, Tom Arnold, filed the original lawsuit in October.

Enquirer attorneys said the new filing does not change their position. Richard Borow said officials of the Lantana, Fla.-based publication have done no wrong.

LA CROSSE, Wis. — Comedian Jay Leno was meant to be a treat for employees at a hospital preparing to celebrate its 100th anniversary.

But some Gundersen Clinic physicians say the cost of his planned Feb. 2 appearance is too high and the money should be donated instead to a community cause.

The comedian is said to draw $60,000 to $80,000 per appearance, but the clinic's marketing director, Mark Thompson, said: "We got him for considerably less."

Leno's publicist, Dan Klores, contacted Wednesday in New York, declined to give a specific figure but confirmed the Gundersen gig to entertain some 1,500 employees was far below the usual fee.

"Mr. Leno accepted the invitation of the hospital because of the wonderful work that they do," Klores said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country singer Lynn Anderson's ex-husband has filed a motion asking her to undergo a psychiatric examination before a trial to determine who will have custody of their children.

Ms. Anderson's ex-husband, Harold "Spook" Stream III, said in court documents that he wants to determine her fitness as a parent for their son, 11, and daughter, 9. A hearing is scheduled Friday.

Ms. Anderson gained custody when she and Stream, a wealthy oilman from Lake Charles, La., divorced in Louisiana in 1982. He obtained temporary custody in April, alleging she and a boyfriend had abused the children.

Department of Human Services investigators said they could not substantiate the allegations.

Ms. Anderson is perhaps best known for her 1970 hit record "Rose Garden."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Eleven country music stars, including Roy Acuff and Loretta Lynn, gathered on the Grand Ole Opry stage to reminisce about their careers.

The gathering, taped Tuesday for broadcast next Tuesday, was part of a CBS-TV special, "The 65th Anniversary of the Grand Ole Opry."

"I look around here and I'm in total awe," said Roy Clark.

Quipped Minnie Pearl, who is 78: "I've been through so many wars I remember our boys in gray."

The other stars were Chet Atkins, Little Jimmy Dickens, Grandpa Jones, Pee Wee King, Bill Monroe, Earl Scruggs and Kitty Wells.

LOS ANGELES — Actress Sharon Gless enjoys her new dramatic series, "The Trials of Rosie O'Neill," but confesses she misses her days of sharing the load with "Cagney & Lacey" co-star Tyne Daly.

Gless

"There's good news and bad news. Sometimes it's easier to carry a show alone. I do miss Tyne very much," Miss Gless said in an interview published this week in Entertainment Weekly magazine.

"The bad thing here is that you don't have anyone to share the work with," added the actress, who won two Emmy Awards for her role as the tough but tender cop Christine Cagney. In "Rosie O'Neill" she plays a public defender.

THOMASVILLE, Ga. — Country music star David Allan Coe has been upgraded to good condition, five days after major abdominal surgery.

Coe, 51, underwent emergency surgery Friday to repair a hernia. He "is progressing well in his recovery," and was upgraded to good condition Wednesday, said Rick Ivey, a spokesman for John D. Archbold Memorial Hospital here.

Type of fat in diet may be critical, new data suggest

By Jean Carper

Carper

Eat too much fat, and you are more predisposed to colon and breast cancer. That's the scientific dogma. But now some odd facts are emerging suggesting that the type of fat may be critical.

Two new studies condemn meat fat as a culprit in these two cancers — but not dairy fat. In fact, a recent large-scale study in Finland by National Cancer Institute researchers hinted that high amounts of milk and dairy products in the diet (or carbohydrates) might lower breast cancer risk by 60 percent!

Another recent look at 90,000 women by Harvard researchers discovered that the more red meat and meat fat the women ate, the greater their risk of colon cancer. Women who ate a daily main meal with beef, pork or lamb were two and a half times more likely to face colon cancer than women eating red meat less than once a month. However, eating dairy fat, as in milk and butter, had no influence on whether they got colon cancer.

Salmon for the heart

Eating oily fish like salmon changes the blood in ways likely to discourage heart disease. So finds a new study by U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists in San Francisco.

For 100 days, nine healthy men ate about a pound of salmon a day as part of a tightly controlled balanced diet. Within about three weeks, researchers noted several favorable blood changes, known to suppress the risk of heart disease.

Notably, the fish acted as a kind of anticoagulant. The men's blood platelets were less likely to stick together, lessening the possibility of clots that can trigger heart attacks.

As expected, total blood cholesterol did not go down. But detrimental LDL-type cholesterol did sink.

Eating disorder of the elderly

Does food taste metallic or salty? Are you more sensitive to sour and bitter tastes? Do you favor sweets? You may have a common but little-recognized condition known as "dry mouth" or xerostomia. Studies show that about 20 percent of all older adults do.

And dry mouth is often linked to poor nutrition, says Dr. Nelson Rhodus, at the University of Minnesota Schools of Dentistry and Public Health. His new studies find that older people with dry mouth typically lack the critical nutrients — potassium, vitamin B-6, calcium and zinc.

"It's a vicious circle," he says. The lack of such nutrients probably helps cause dry mouth. But dry mouth also discourages eating nutritious foods. Older people with dry mouth are three times more likely to have difficulty swallowing foods like fresh fruits, fibrous vegetables, breads and cereals, than others their age, he finds.

Dr. Rhodus favors vitamin-mineral supplements to help combat dry mouth. But first see a physician, he advises, to find out if the dry mouth is partly due to medications or underlying disease. Also, he says, sucking on sugarless candy may stimulate saliva flow.

Tax rollback facts, fallacies

By Dr. Jim Humphries

Humphreys

Rollback.

Those of you who read "Readers' Views" in the newspaper Sunday, Jan. 6 saw several letters explaining the implications of a successful rollback of the Midland County Hospital District tax rate. Earlier editions of the Reporter-Telegram contained the letters from those espousing the rollback.

Briefly, the rollback election scheduled for Jan. 19, if successful, would cause a reduction in the MCHD tax rate from 16.62 cents per $100 valuation to 15.0 cents. The consequent loss of tax revenue plus the cost of underwriting the election and mailing of amended tax statements amount to an estimated $750,000. The hospital would have to absorb this shortfall in operations, because it is not possible to achieve an immediate reducation of MCHD expenses by that amount.

Ongoing debate about the merits of a tax rollback has brought to light several misconceptions about MCHD and hospital funding of indigent care. The complexity of the subject makes these misconceptions no surprise. Some of them deserve a closer look.

■ The hospital should not show a profit, but rather use the excess of revenue over expenses to fund indigent care.

Actually, the hospital has absorbed millions of dollars of indigent care expenses over the past several years because the MCHD tax rate was too low to cover them. The ability to borrow money at a reasonable interest rate and the ability to stay current with services, wages and equipment depend on a fiscally sound operation.

■ MCHD buys real estate with tax money.

This one just won't go away. The hospital purchases real estate from operations as needed for legitimate business reasons. Clearview has demonstrated its value as an investment by generating a positive cash flow in excess of $300,000 since its purchase in January 1989.

■ Bad debt from out-of-county patients gets charged against MCHD tax funds.

Not true. Bad debt differs from indigency, and bad debt from whatever source gets charged against operations, not MCHD taxes. Only Midland County residents who can demonstrate eligibility receive MCHD relief. Patients who need to make payments on large accounts are allowed to do so.

■ MCHD could decrease the number of indigent patients by stiffening residency requirements.

Laws pertaining to residency as a prerequisite for medical care or other services deal more with intent rather than duration of residency. An arbitrary time limit imposed as a residency requirement appears to be illegal.

■ Indigent patients constitute a major burden for our hospital and community.

One would not expect the $2,000,000 difference between the costs of indigent care and the tax revenues for fiscal year 1990 to be that significant. However, it becomes significant when added to the real revenue shortfall resulting from Medicare and Medicaid patients (mostly Medicare).

Reimbursement to hospitals for Medicare and Medicaid patients comes from a fixed payment system, which barely covers complicated illnesses and falls far short for the rest. During fiscal year 1990 ending Sept. 30, the hospital budgeted a $13,000,000 shortfall for Medicare and Medicaid. The actual shortfall was more than $17,000,000.

The ability of hospitals — ours and others — to absorb shortfalls like these depends on how many patients the hospital has whose payments match their charges. Once the patients who do not pay their share outnumber those who do, the hospital may be on its way to insolvency.

■ Proponents of the tax rollback are unchristian and against helping indigent patients.

I have not heard this opinion voiced in any hospital meeting.

The referendum Jan. 19 concerns the direction of local health care more than it does local taxes. We the voters need to decide whether we will share the burden of indigent care fairly with the hospital. If not, we risk the decline and fall of our only full-service medical facility.

Cold not sole culprit of colds, doctors say

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Jack Frost takes the heat for the sneezing and hacking that winter seems to bring, but doctors say the thermometer plunge alone isn't to blame for the common cold.

Common-cold sufferers often blame a sudden weather change or their shifting from heated rooms to the cold outdoors. But doctors say colds can occur only after a virus invades the body.

"Temperature changes do not cause colds, but the virus thrives in a cold temperature," said Dr. H. Timothy Dombrowski, director of the Center for Health Promotion and Wellness at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey in Newark. "If the temperature of the nasal area is cool, it will provide a favorable environment for the virus to grow."

Adherents to the cold-makes-you-catch-a-cold theory are not helping themselves much by bundling up. Layers of clothes may protect against hypothermia or frostbite but are not necessarily effective virus fighters. But scarves or face masks can help keep noses warmer, and viruses don't like warm places.

"I don't think bundling up excessively is necessarily a big help," Dombrowski said.

Dryness, which can come with a cold spell or when the Santa Ana winds kick in, is a more likely factor than a temperature drop to wear down healthy bodies, said Dr. Victor L. Kovner of Saint Joseph Medical Center in Burbank. Dry weather dries out the nose membranes and decreases resistance to infections, he said.

"A thin mucus blanket over the respiratory passages is a big factor in protecting against infections," Kovner said. "When there's a lot of drying, this mucus blanket doesn't work too well."

But the cold, along with the busy holiday season, can wear people down.

Panel eyes firm's marketing practices

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional subcommittee wants to know if a large pharmaceutical company is trying to protect its market by thwarting other manufacturers' efforts to copy the popular hypertension drug Dyazide.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich. and chairman of the House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee, said in a letter released Tuesday that the panel believes SmithKline Beecham is discouraging generic versions of Dyazide.

Big bucks, fewer offspring take Japanese on fashion highs

TOKYO (AP) — The girl, hair neatly coiffed, wore a petite pearl choker by Mitsukoshi, black velvet dress by Renoma and white lace gloves. Her escort, in top hat, sported a double-breasted tux by abs d'absorba.

Ready for the prom? Not quite. That's still years away for the two pint-size models photographed for a magazine in outfits worth more than $3,500.

The Japanese penchant for designer brands and other luxury goods has brought some tots into the world of high fashion.

Japan's ultraperfectionist parents and doting grandparents have more money than ever, and fewer children to spend it on. The average number of children per family has dropped from about five in 1945 to 1.5 in 1989.

"There are six pockets — the two sets of grandparents and the parents — who can be counted on to spend money on every child," said Toshiro Niizaki, planning director for Seibu department store's children's section in Tokyo.

Highly competitive department stores have encouraged the trend by building special kids sections stocked with designer goods.

Sunday department store outings and the custom among status-conscious Japanese of giving expensive gifts have done wonders for the boom in kiddy luxury goods.

When special occasions come up for youngsters, it often is the grandparents who foot the bill for the gold-threaded silk kimonos that have become de rigueur for ritual shrine visits.

The visits start with the 100-day-old child's first blessing. A kimono worn only for that excursion can cost well over $1,000. Subsequent visits during a girl's third and seventh year and a boy's fifth require new kimonos or Western suits.

Trend watchers say young parents fond of sports cars, fur coats and diamond rings are willing accomplices.

"When parents themselves are wearing designer clothes, they want their kids to have things that are just as nice," said Niizaki, a father of two.

"Young mothers are especially fashion conscious, since they grew up during a 'fashion era' introduced by teen magazines in the 1970s," said Hideo Takayama, director of the Children's Survey Research Institute in Tokyo.

"They've got the tiresome habit of comparing themselves and their children with others. They want their kids to have the best so everyone will see their kids as being good," he said.

To get their children into the best schools possible, parents send toddlers as young as 1 to preschools.

Analyst: Some food is recession-proof

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans might put off buying a new car or stereo until the economy improves, but will they be shopping differently at the supermarket?

Yes, no and maybe, food industry analysts say.

"Food in general is pretty recession-proof compared to durable goods. Even higher-priced items do well," said Max Busetti, editor of the Food Industry Newsletter in Alexandria, Va. "People who want to treat themselves will buy Dove Bars and cut down on more expensive durable goods."

Pastas, soups, cereals, potatoes and beer are considered classic recession-proof food items. To this list Busetti adds a '90s update: budget-priced convenience foods.

The past decade witnessed a surge in carry-out and convenience foods, and Busetti said there's no going back to scratch.

"People don't have time for scratch," he said.

Sierra to fight for 'Woody'

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Environmentalists are preparing to battle with the U.S. Forest Service over the agency's plan to develop a campground that serves as home to the endangered red-cockaded woodpecker.

The recreational area is a 190-acre tract along the eastern shore of Lake Conroe in the Sam Houston National Forest, where 75 unimproved campsites already exist.

Sierra Club members contend that further development of the Cagle Campground area in this Southeast Texas town as a year-round recreational spot — with paved roads, sewer lines, waste dump stations, electrical hookups and other conveniences — will obliterate the rare woodpecker colony.

Forest Service environmental studies of Cagle Campground indicate only four of the woodpeckers are in the colony, but those four already have forced the federal agency to scale down its proposal and limit further development to two of the three camping sections.

One camping area is being closed on the recommendation of biologists from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Department, because that's where at least one woodpecker has nested, according to Ranger Tim Bigler.

But limiting camp development to the areas just outside the camping loop that have trees in which the woodpeckers have drilled holes doesn't satisfy the environmentalists.

Even the small number of birds that might be directly affected is too great a risk, according to George Russell, chairman of the Sierra Club's forestry practices committee.

"We cannot afford to lose any in a species as endangered as the red-cockaded woodpecker," he said.

Russell contends that biologists have warned that the presence of large numbers of people will endanger the woodpeckers' ability to forage, requiring them to fly longer distances to find food for their young.

The cumulative effect of Forest Service practices in other areas of the forest's Raven District — which lies in Walker, Montgomery and San Jacinto counties — has destroyed an undetermined number of the birds, Russell says.

Urology

Q. During my previous marriage, I had a vasectomy done. Since then, I have divorced and remarried. We would like to begin our own family. Can vasectomies be reversed, and if so, how successful are they?

A. Yes. Vasectomy reversals (called vasovasostomy) are commonly performed using an operation microscope. The procedure takes 2-4 hours and requires anesthesia. It is, obviously, a much more difficult and complicated procedure than a vasectomy.
Depending on whether sperm are found at the time of the surgery, the success rate varies from around 60-90%. The best results occur in men who had their vasectomy less than 10 years prior to the reversal.

Weight Management

Q. What Medical Problems are associated with being overweight?

A. Patients who weight in excess of 20% above their ideal b weight are at increased risk for several medical problems.
Obesity has been found in the famous Framingham study to be the number one cause of high blood pressure in adults.
Diabetes Mellitus is three to six times more common in obese patients. Both of these disorders usually respond dramatically to weight loss, often allowing medications to be tapered or withdrawn by the patient's physician. Other medical problems associated with being overweight include cardiovascular disease (heart attack), gallbladder disease, high cholesterol, osteoarthritis of the hips and knees, increased surgical and obstetrical risks and increased risk of certain types of cancer.

Ophthalmology

Q. I have recently been diagnosed with diabetes. My doctor told me to also see an Ophthalmologist, why?

A. Regardless of what type of diabetes you have, you may now have or may later develop a complication called Diabetic Retinopathy. Diabetic retinopathy is a change inside your eyes that can threaten your vision. It starts without symptoms and may worsen over time. leading to partial or total vision loss.
Diabetes can weaken or cause deterioration of the blood vessels in the body and the yes. The location of the weakened blood vessels in the eye determine what part of your vision is lost and how weaker the vision loss becomes.
You can protect and preserve your eyesight by following your doctor's treatment plan, and have your eyes check at least once a year by an Ophthalmologist.

Ophthalmology

Q. So, what about contact lens?

A. It has been said recently, that the field of contact lenses has become so sophisticated that if your eyecare professional tells you that you cannot wear a contact lens, you should probably consider finding another eye care professional. Although theoretically that may be true, practically speaking it is not the case.
Factors including ease of handling, wearing time, lens costs and maintenance schedules all make up part of the worthwhile effectiveness of wearing contact lens.
These factors must be presented so that the expectations regarding a contact lens is in line with the actual performance of the lens. This evaluation and the more critical observations of eye health are areas that must be monitored carefully to insure immediate and long term success. Proper contact lens evaluation and adaptation can only be accomplished thoroughexamination and consultation.

Cosmetic & Reconstructive Surgery

Q. What is a forehead lift?

A. A forehead lift does just what it says -- lift the forehead, and with it the brows and tissues around the eyes, to give patients a more rested, alert, youthful appearance. Today, however, the rapid progress in plastic surgery has make the forehead lift a relatively simple procedure that promises significant results and can last 10 years or longer.
A forehead lift is most often used to improve such facial characteristics as drooping eyebrows, "hooding" or dropping tissues at the outer part of the eyes, furrowed forehead and frown lines at the top of the nose. The desired result is a more alert and less tired appearance, smoother forehead skin and softer lines between the eyes.

Cosmetic & Reconstructive Surgery

Q. What are facial implants?

A. The two most underutilized surgical procedures in plastic/cosmetic surgery are cheek and chin implants. Recent advancements in the design of facial implants by Drs. Hinderer of Madrid, Whittaker of Philadelphia, and Terino of Los Angeles, have allowed surgeons to make small incisions, generally nonvisible, and place a variety of implants in the face. Cheek implants are used to enhance the cheekbones or to overcome a flat looking face from the eyes down. Chin implants are used over the tip of the mandible for correction of weak or recessive chins in either men or women. The implants are made from either hydroxyapatite, a form of coral, or vulcanized-rubberized silastic. The surgery is most commonly performed under local and IV anesthesia as an outpatient. Swelling and bruising generally abate within five to seven days.

Cardiology

Q. What causes a heart attack?

A. Coronary artherosclerosis causes heart attack. It is a slow process that can go on for years without causing any symptoms. Fatty deposits build up along the inner walls of the arteries to the heart. Just like lime deposits forming in a water pipe, atherosclerosis coats the inside of the artery channels and gradually narrows them. The fatty buildup reduces the flow of the blood from the artery to an area of the heart muscle. When the blood flow stops due to an obstruction, a heart attack results.

MC hosts Clarendon tonight

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

■ Midland College Chaparrals vs. Clarendon College Bulldogs, 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Al G. Langford Chaparral Center

The Midland College Chaparrals, 10-6 entering the spring portion of the conference basketball schedule, couldn't hope for anymore optimism than they have now.

The Chaps are coming off the most-impressive and encouraging — not to mention the most controversial — win of the season, a 77-76 victory over Westark, Ark. last Saturday at Chap Center. The decisive shot came on a buzzer-busting shot by freshman guard Tom Brown.

"It's a win, and I'll take 'em anyway I can get 'em," an elated assistant coach George Walker said after the game. Walker coached the Chaps through a doubleheader win last weekend while head coach Reggie Franklin was in Houston after the death of his father. Franklin returns to the MC bench for the Clarendon contest.

In other conference games Thursday, Western Texas travels to New Mexico Military; New Mexico Junior College will be at South Plains; Odessa College will play at Howard, Frank Phillips is idle.

In the latest rankings, the Western Junior College Athletic Conference has two representatives in the Top 20: Second-ranked South Plains and No. 3 Howard. Those two teams, incidentally, play in Levelland Jan. 24.

MC is expected to again be with not only the services of Frankllin, but also sophomore post Charlie Craine. Craine missed last Friday game against Hill College with severe tonsilitis and played only sparingly in the win over Westark.

The MC-Clarendon game is the 35th in the 14-year history between the schools. MC holds a commanding 32-2 series edge with the Bulldogs' last win a 62-61 outcome in December of 1983.

MC has won four of its last six games with losses to Frank Phillips (conference) and San Jacinto (non-conference).

Clarendon, a longtime doormat of the WJCAC is 1-6 overall, 0-3 in conference with losses to South Plains, Howard and NMMI.

■ Three more seeded players fall in day two action at The Midlander.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Wednesday's second day of action in the United States Tennis Association's Women's Circuit of Midland saw the loss of the No. 2 seed in singles play and two of the top four doubles seeds survive scares.

In the completion of the singles first round at the Midlander's indoor courts, second seed Deidre Herman was defeated handily by Jessica Emmons 6-3, 6-3. That came on the heels of fourth seed Joannetta Kruger and eighth seed Pam Jefferies falling Tuesday.

Three other singles seeds in action Wednesday, though, did come through unscathed. No. 3 seed Limor Zaltz of Israel beat Emily Leonardi while No. 5 Jana Stranadova downed Laura Hudson and No. 6 Luciana Reynares defeated Gina Niland.

In doubles play, Zaltz teamed up with Lihini Weerasuriya — a princess from Sri Lanka who is also the No. 1 seed in singles — as the top seeded pair, but were taken three sets in the opening round. Julie Kaczmarek and Jill Waldman battled Weerasuriya and Zaltz to a tie-breaker in the first set before losing 7-6.

In the second set, the upstarts from the U.S. claimed a 6-4 win, but were finally handled in the third by a 6-3 count.

Zaltz, who made two USTA doubles finals with Ilana Berger in 1990, said her newly-formed partnership with Weerasuriya still needs to have a few bugs worked out.

"I thought it would be an easy match, but it was the first time we have played together. I didn't know how she played, but after one match I know a lot more," she said.

Because of this week's constant rain and drizzle, tournament play was moved from the Midlander's outdoor courts to the indoor facility. But Zaltz said she preferred playing inside.

"Indoors is faster and I like a fast surface."

Also in doubles play, the fourth-seeded Czechoslovakian sister tandem of Jana and Nicole Stranadova almost stumbled, but came away with a 7-6, 4-6, 6-3 victory over Mercedes Fernandez-Verdin of Mexico and Yugoslavia's Tanja Cerne.

A man of many jackets

■ Midland geologist George Gibson has fond memories of his pro football playing days 60 years ago — and still carries with him boxes of priceless memorabilia.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

In 1930, George Gibson received a total salary of $3,900 as player-coach of the Minneapolis Red Jackets and Frankford Yellow Jackets. Since America was in the midst of a depression, and he and his wife had a grocery bill of a mere $19 a month, Gibson thought himself lucky to be making even that much.

Considering Gibson's meager earnings of 60 years ago, it's a little surprising to hear the 85-year-old Midlander defending today's skyrocketing professional football salaries. But, Gibson theorizes, it is what the public wants, and the fans, he feels, apparently don't mind paying more for their entertainment.

Gibson has come a long way since his days as Bronko Nagurski's college roommate at the University of Minnesota. One of the senior-most petroleum geologists in Midland, Gibson still reports to work at his Wall Street office every day.

And his life story would captivate even the most casual football fan.

A Midlander since 1941, Gibson likes to relate to others the story of how he made pro football history.

"I tell everybody I was the only player-coach who worked for two teams that both went bankrupt in the same year," Gibson says.

In 1930, Gibson was a player-coach for the Minneapolis Red Jackets. When the club folded, he was hired by Frankford, the professional team in suburban Philadelphia. On the train ride to Pennsylvania, Gibson looked forward to his days as strictly a player.

"I got off the train in Frankford and they told me they'd fired their coach," Gibson says. "So I became player-coach there, too."

Unfortunately, the Frankford franchise went belly-up a short time later.

Collegiate rules and regulations being obviously more lax during the '20s and '30s, Gibson was allowed to moonlight as an assistant coach at his alma mater during his tenure with the Minneapolis pro team.

Before his short stint as player-coach, Gibson was captain of the 1928 Minnesota Gophers team and a two-way starting guard and All-America at his position. His roommate was the legendary Nagurski.

Nagurski, himself an All-American, and later an All-Pro running back with the Chicago Bears was the most

NCAA slashers continue their swath through athletics

Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The powerful Presidents Commission kept its reform blitz rolling through the NCAA convention on Wednesday, winning overwhelming approval of plans to cut scholarships in all sports and shorten playing seasons before finally losing its first convention battle.

"It's like scoring a bunch of unanswered touchdowns and then missing one extra point," NCAA executive director Dick Schultz said.

Watering down a series of measures to toughen the requirements for Division I, delegates voted 175-149 to let the aid which athletes receive from their school to count as athletic aid. That would make it much easier for smaller schools to meet the new financial commitment necessary to remain in the top division — and also defused a possible controversy. That it marked one small stumble in the march to reform by the commission and the NCAA Council was hardly noticed.

"I think it was more important to get it passed as amended rather than not get it passed at all. There is no question this strengthens Division I," Schultz said.

Delegates devoted the afternoon session to a complicated commission formula for slashing time demands on athletes and shortening the playing seasons. Broken down to its simplest components, athletes will be required to spend no more than 20 hours per week on their sport during its season, with one day off guaranteed. In the off-season, athletes can spend only eight hours per week at their sport and be guaranteed three days off.

"You can't overstate the importance of the time-reduction proposal for the benefit of the student-athletes," said Donna Lopiano, director of women's athletics at Texas. "I was hopeful we could take even some more pressure off kids. The hour-per-week limit and mandatory days off are long overdue. It's terrific for the kids."

The proposal to trim the seasons and time demands carried by a vote of 299-28 in Division I and 166-24 in Division II.

At first it was thought that as many as 50-70 schools might be forced out of Division I under the restructuring package, but the softened proposals quelled the fears of many smaller schools. It's the fourth time since 1973 the sensitive restructuring issue has come before the NCAA membership. The big schools' ba-

Baseball's Hall of Fame was founded in 1936 and established in Cooperstown, N.Y. in 1939. The first selections were Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, Honus Wagner, Christy Mathewson, and Walter Johnson. The Baseball Writers' Association of America, several years later took over the voting following specified guidelines:

- Ten years of major league experience
- Seventy-five percent of the votes
- Retired for a minimum of five years

(After minimum retirement, a player is on the ballot for 15 years; if not elected during that time, the name is dropped from ballot. Once dropped, the Veterans committee takes them into consideration.)

NFL's Gulf Policy

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The NFL is discussing what their plans might be in the event of war in the Gulf at the time of the Super Bowl on Jan. 27.

"All we're going to say," said league spokesman Greg Aiello, "is that there have been preliminary discussions about what would be a proper response from the NFL in the event of heightened conflict in the Persian Gulf."

While Aiello said no decisions have been made, he noted history favors the game being played. "We've played 24 Super Bowls and all of them have gone off as scheduled."

During World War II, the games went on even though some teams were depleted by the military draft. NFL officials often said football was an important diversion that boosted the nation's morale.

CHICAGO BEARS with "RED" GRANGE

Football games were commonly referred to as "thrillers" in the sport's heyday of the '20s and '30s, above, while a team's schedule not only featured the opposing team, but also the star of that team, as in "Nagurski-Grange Chicago Bears", in bottom photo. Gibson is also shown in bottom photo, middle left.

GIBSON: Nagurski tales still the most memorable memorable on-field character Gibson says he ever met, not to mention a Sigma Chi fraternity brother.

From 1C

"Nagurski started out as a tackle," Gibson remembers. "During my senior year, Nagurski, who was a year behind me, worked out prior to a game at fullback for the first time.

"When we got the Wisconsin game, they were undefeated, Nagurski scored and we went on to win 6-0. The first game he had played at fullback. It was the last game I played at Minnesota."

THE MEMORIES, be they of football or geology, seem mostly to be fond ones for Gibson, whose descendants arrived from Scotland in the 19th century. The family settled in New York state before moving to Medford, Okla., in 1910, when Gibson was five.

Born on Oct. 2, 1905, Gibson played his high school football at Medford. He left for the University of Minnesota in 1925, earning his undergraduate degree in geology in '29.

After playing and coaching professionally for a short time, Gibson returned to college, earned his doctorate in geology at Minnesota in 1934, then taught and coached at Carlton College, in Northfield, Minn., until 1938.

In 1938, his career goals changed, and Gibson exited coaching for the more lucrative geology field.

With Mobil Exploration, known in '38 as Socony Vacuum, Gibson departed for Egypt and two of the more fascinating years of his life.

Gibson says he and his fellow geologists "tried to figure out the way of the Isrealites," in biblical times, "and we think we did. We saw the flight of the quail, the mannah from heaven and Moses' spring."

Gibson returned to the states and moved to Midland in 1941, and like many others, expected to stay for only a short while.

WHEN GIBSON had returned to college to earn his doctorate in geology, he was serious about not returning to professional football. He did, though, receive offers from E.L. "Curly" Lambeau, president of the Green Bay Packers,

Moon receives AP's top offensive honor

Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — After six spectacular seasons in the CFL and another six good years in the NFL, Warren Moon still wasn't getting much notice. So he did something about it.

Moon didn't shoot off his mouth, as many of his Houston Oilers teammates have done. He didn't demand contract renegotiation or a trade.

No, the classy quarterback found a better way. Moon went onto the field, masterfully guided the run-and-shoot and had his best year ever. For doing so, Moon was voted the Offensive Player of the Year by The Associated Press on Wednesday.

"It is something I'll think about later, but right now the only thing that I can think about is the team," Moon said. "The only thing you are really judged by is whether or not you made it to the big game. You will always have doubters until you do that."

The Oilers didn't make it beyond the first round of the playoffs, but Moon could not be blamed. He was sidelined with a dislocated thumb when Cincinnati bounced Houston.

In 15 games, however, Moon put up some sensational statistics. He led the league with 362 completions in 584 attempts for 4,689 yards and 33 touchdowns. His 527-yard outing at Kansas City was the second biggest passing day in league history.

"I think I'm respected by my peers and that's where you want to be respected, by your peers and coaches," he said. "I think I've learned to be more patient over the years. You have to take what the defense gives you and not try to push everything downfield.

"Critics are my motivating factor, but I'm my own worst critic, so no matter how hard someone else is on me, I'm harder on myself."

Residents of Midland County:

With the beginning of this new year we each again run the risk of becoming a victim of crime. Let's all make a commitment to ourselves and our families to do all we can to protect our lives and property from criminals. Here are just a few suggestions;

1. Get a free Home Security Survey. You could get a 5 percent reduction on your homeowner's insurance premium.
2. Operation I.D. - Mark all your valuables with a personal identification number.
3. Join a Neighborhood Watch Group or start one in your area.
4. Be more aware of your surroundings. Don't put yourself in a position where you may become a victim. Many victims unintentionally give the criminal the opportunity he needs to commit the crime

Jordan hits a milestone

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Michael Jordan scored 40 points, including the 15,000th of his career, as the Chicago Bulls defeated the Philadelphia 76ers 107-99 Wednesday night.

Jordan scored 28 points in the first half and reached the 15,000th plateau on a free throw with 25 seconds left in the first quarter. He reached the milestone in his 460th game, faster than anyone in NBA history except Wilt Chamberlain, who did it in 358 games.

Celtics 110, Bucks 102

The Boston Celtics lost all but two points of a 28-point lead Wednesday night before Reggie Lewis and Brian Shaw led them past Milwaukee, snapping the Bucks' eight-game winning streak.

Timberwolves 111, Magic 103

Pooh Richardson had 30 points and 14 assists and the Minnesota Timberwolves used a 20-6 fourth-quarter run to beat Orlando.

The Timberwolves led by 15 in the first quarter, then trailed by four in the fourth before the decisive spurt put them back in control.

Mavericks 109, Trail Blazers 99

Rolando Blackman and Alex English each scored 24 points and the Dallas Mavericks snapped a nine-game losing streak to Portland with a 109-99 victory Wednesday night over the Trail Blazers.

Suns 113, Cavaliers 105

Jeff Hornacek scored 23 points and Kevin Johnson had 10 of his 16 in the final 6:42 as the Cavaliers suffered their ninth consecutive loss.

Tom Chambers added 22 points and Xavier McDaniel 18, while Mark West had 10 rebounds and Johnson 12 assists for the Suns, who won their fourth straight home game.

Cleveland lost its seventh road game in a row despite Brad Daugherty's 27 points and 14 rebounds. Craig Ehlo had 19 points for the Cavaliers, who have dropped 16 of their last 18 games overall.

The Cavaliers led 94-90 with 9:41 to play after Darnell Valentine came off the bench to score seven points in a 9-2 run.

Johnson hit a baseline jumper with 6:42 remaining and a layup 26 seconds later to put Phoenix ahead to stay at 100-96.

UH nips Rice

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Derrick Daniels scored a career-high 33 points that included streaks of 8 and 14 straight points as Houston won its 16th consecutive home game with a 80-73 Southwest Conference victory over Rice.

The Cougars extended their record to 39-3 over the Owls, including four in a row.

TCU 80, Texas A&M 72

Texas Christian scored the game's first 10 points and held off a late Texas A&M rally, winning behind the 22 points of Michael Strickland.

TCU improved its record to 2-0 in Southwest Conference play and 10-2 overall, the Horned Frogs' best start since going 11-2 in 1985-86.

SMU 88, UT-San Antonio 86

Mike Wilson's driving layup with 23 seconds left in overtime lifted Southern Methodist over UT-San Antonio at Moody Coliseum.

After Willie Newson's layup put the Roadrunners ahead 86-85 with 33 seconds left, Wilson drove the lane and scored as UTSA forward Albert Tilman was called for a blocking foul, his fifth.

NCAA: Reforms continue

sic gripe has remained constant — that small schools have the same one-school, one-vote privileges as the majors.

"Division I is too big to be effective. There is enormous frustration on the part of many institutions," Tom Hansen, executive director of the Pac-10, said. "We were trying to get a reasonable position for membership in Division I that might prevent the largest and most frustrated institutions to leave Division I or the NCAA.

"Programs with budgets of $15 million to $20 million look over there and the 50 or so schools who just voted against you, put together, don't match your school's financial commitment. That's very frustrating."

Dean Smith wins 700th of career

Associated Press

Dean Smith collected his 700th career coaching victory as fifth-ranked North Carolina routed Maryland 105-73 behind a career-high 25 points by Hubert Davis.

The 59-year-old Smith became the sixth Division I coach to reach the 700-victory plateau and did so in the shortest time. He is 700-204 in his 30th season, breaking the mark of Kentucky's Adolph Rupp, who got his 700th victory in his 33rd season.

The victory in its Atlantic Coast Conference opener, was the 10th straight for North Carolina (12-1). Maryland, which shot 24.3 percent in the opening half, fell to (7-5, 1-2).

No. 11 Kentucky 89 Mississippi St. 70

Freshman Jamal Mashburn scored 24 points and Kentucky's press forced 31 turnovers as the 11th-ranked Wildcats coasted over Mississippi State.

Kentucky (11-2 overall, 3-0 SEC) used a 17-4 run, led by Mashburn's three baskets, to pull ahead 23-12 with 12:02 remaining in the first half.

No. 18 Nebraska 97 Mo.-Kansas City 78

No. 18 Nebraska got 18 points from Carl Hayes, one of four players in double figures, and won its 13th straight game, defeating stubborn Missouri-Kansas City.

The Huskers (15-1) were unable to shake the Kangaroos, 7-8 after their fifth straight loss, until late in the game.

Missouri-Kansas City was led by freshman Tony Dumas with 22 points, 15 in the first half. Ronnie Schmitz added 20 points for the Kangaroos, including five 3-point baskets.

Freshman Eric Piatkowski led a first-half Nebraska surge with nine points as the Huskers jumped from a 10-9 lead to 25-15 with 8:29 to play. Missouri-Kansas City never got closer than nine points thereafter.

Seton Hall 74, No. 10 St. John's 62

Terry Dehere scored 21 points and Seton Hall used a smothering defense to stop Malik Sealy as the surging Pirates beat No. 10 St. John's.

The victory was the fourth in five meetings for Seton Hall (10-2, 3-1) against its Big East Conference rival. The Redmen (10-2, 1-2) had won 15 straight games between the schools until the Pirates began their recent run.

Sealy, a 6-foot-8 junior forward, entered the game averaging 24.6 points on 58-percent shooting from the field. Shackled throughout the game by Gordon Winchester, Sealy managed a 3-for-13 effort and finished with 11 points.

CONTRACTS: Players paid game-by-game and Harry H. Snyder, president of the Portsmouth Spartans.

From 2C

The contracts and offers of employment Gibson still possesses today reveal a great deal about how football has changed in almost 60 years.

In a contract dated May 4, 1932, Snyder, trying to convince Gibson to return to the NFL with the Spartans, writes, "The Club management furnishes the sweater, socks and helmet. The player furnishes the balance of the equipment at his own cost."

In the next paragraph, the contract states, "The National League season this year will open about the middle of September. We are not certain whether it will be the 11th or the 18th, probably the 18th."

The Spartans' letterhead came complete with the unique saying: "Offering Post Graduate Football in the Ruhr Valley of the U.S.A."

Lambeau offered to pay Gibson $115 for each regularly scheduled game played, but said in an additional correspondence that "this amount will be increased after our third league game if your playing warrants more money, and you can certainly rest assured of fair treatment.

"From experience," Lambeau continues, "I have found this a better method of arriving at a permanent salary and to date have not had an argument with any player."

THE WORDING of contracts is not the only thing to have changed in pro football over the years.

When Gibson played, players were two-way starters, the ball was larger and harder to throw, the quarterback had to be one yard behind the center when the ball was snapped, and had to be five yards behind the line of scrimmage if a pass was attempted.

Gibson says he prefers the version of the game he played rather than the running and shooting of today's contests.

"My criticism of the game today is that it has turned into such a passing game," Gibson says. "The wide receiver is the most important player on the field. It gets kind of dull when you pass play after play after play."

Gibson does admit that Notre Dame receiver Raghib "Rocket" Ismail, Dallas Cowboy running back Emmitt Smith and Irish coach Lou Holtz would have been prominent figures in their respective roles had they played during his time.

As for Smith's million dollar salary, and what Ismail will doubtless rake in, Gibson defends it all, but does add that player salaries may be on their way to getting a bit out of hand.

"It's getting to be," he says. "But its because of television. When television came in, that's when all these high salaries started. Television created more interest.

"But I have nothing against them getting these salaries. The public's the one paying for it."

USTA: Former MHS star falls

From 1C

In other doubles action, Kruger and Cindy Summers beat Debbie Ladig and Adrian Isaza, while Emmons and Betsy Somerville dropped Midland College's Seiko Ichioka and Emily Leonardi.

Other singles action of note on Wednesday included former Midland High player Susan Cromwell, who took an early exit from the tourney by falling to Kristine Kurth 6-0, 6-0.

Play resumes at 9 a.m. today, when seventh-seeded Virginia Humphreys-Davies faces off against Kurth in singles action on Court 1. Also at 9 a.m., Weerasuriya takes on Jackie Van Wijk on Court 2.

Back problems put Larry Bird out indefinitely

Associated Press

BOSTON — Larry Bird will be sidelined indefinitely with back problems in the first complication for the Boston Celtics this season.

Bird missed Tuesday night's game in New York and Wednesday night's home game against Milwaukee. He also is expected to sit out games Friday night against the Los Angeles Clippers and Saturday at Washington.

Dollars soars

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar jumped sharply Wednesday on an unexpectedly pessimistic assessment by Secretary of State James A. Baker III of his last-ditch diplomatic bid to avert a war with Iraq.

Gold also soared, but the increase barely offset an earlier plunge in response to hopes of a more positive outcome from the peace talks. The precious metal rose 90 cents a troy ounce in New York, closing at $391.20 on the Commodity Exchange.

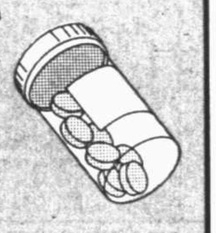

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday's rates, included: 1.5400 German marks, down from 1.5420; 1.2925 Swiss francs, down from 1.2965; 5.2195 French francs, down from 5.2330; 1,158.00 Italian lire, down from 1,159.25; and 1.1522 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1523.

Silver was unchanged in New York, closing at $4.127 on the Commodity Exchange. But the precious metal fell in London, closing at a bid $4.12 a troy ounce from $4.18 late Tuesday.

Kodak expansion

N.Y. Times News Service

In the latest trans-Atlantic alliance in the steadily consolidating worldwide drug industry, Eastman Kodak Co. and Sanofi SA of Paris are pooling resources to create a new company. People familiar with the deal said the company would have $3 billion in combined pharmaceutical sales.

Kodak and Sanofi, which is controlled by Societe Nationale Elf Aquitaine SA, on Tuesday confirmed French reports that they were discussing an alliance.

New Tokyo route

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — American Airlines may purchase a Seattle-Tokyo route from Continental Airlines, the government said Wednesday.

The Department of Transportation approved the $150 million purchase the day after it gave the nod to American's $110 million bid for a Trans World Airlines route between Chicago and London.

Fort Worth-based American, the nation's second-largest carrier, agreed to buy the Tokyo route last month when Houston-based Continental filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

Local firm may close, 140 jobs are at stake

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

A Midland financial institution could be closing within the next few weeks leaving about 140 unemployed.

Officials for HSA Mortgage Co., 9930 West Highway 80, said Wednesday they were looking at a number of options for the company and one of them includes "shutting the doors." Employees have already been informed of company intentions.

Barry Marks, president of HSA, said the institution, which finances single family residences and mobile homes, had failed to remain profitable, because some of the business the firm counted on had gone away.

Marks said officials from AmWest Savings were in Midland appraising the situation and could determine by the end of the month whether or not to keep the company operational.

"One of the options is also to keep the company operational," said Marks. He said it would unfortunate for a "lot of good people" and the communities of Midland and Odessa if the mortgage company was liquidated.

Mark Mesec, senior vice president and general counsel for AmWest Savings in Dallas, the parent company of HSA, said options for the company included: liquidating it, selling it or continuing operations. He said the final decision would be made with the approval of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC).

Mesec emphasized that AmWest Savings was in no way affected by HSA operations. "AmWest Savings is a healthy and profitable company."

"We will submit to FDIC a detailed business plan for HSA," he said, "but no plan has been submitted thus far." He added that the assets of HSA had been purchased from FDIC and that AmWest was under strict obligation to FDIC to

Oil prices take rollercoaster ride

By Dirk Beveridge
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil futures prices were shocked back from a 5-month low Wednesday when diplomatic talks raised then dashed hopes for a peaceful resolution to the Persian Gulf crisis.

In one of the wildest trading days in the history of the New York Mercantile Exchange, oil for next-month delivery slid to its lowest point since Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2, as Secretary of State James A. Baker III met for six hours with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz.

But within minutes of Baker's bleak assessment of the meeting in an early afternoon press conference, the market reversed course and shot above $30 per barrel before easing back to $27.26.

In the end, the February contract was up 9 cents from the previous day's close.

"You had what in some years might have been six months of movement, and compressed it into a very, very brief period of time, like 15 minutes," said Peter Beutel, an oil analyst with Pegasus Econometric Group Inc.

Before Baker talked to reporters after the talks in Geneva, the contract for February delivery of crude skidded to $23.35 per barrel, a low point for the gulf crisis. From the moment Baker spoke the word "regrettably" to describe the

News from Geneva sends markets gyrating

■ A lack of progress from talks between the U.S. and Iraq in Geneva sent markets reeling Wednesday as the stock market, up 40 points before the news broke, plunged 50 points in 10 minutes.

By Chet Currier

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market sold off sharply in late trading Wednesday, wiping out a strong early gain after talks on the showdown in the Middle East produced no progress toward a negotiated settlement.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 40 points at its midday peak, closed with a 39.11-point loss at 2,470.30.

That brought the average's drop over the first six sessions of 1991 to 163.36 points, or 6.2 percent.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 578 up, 945 down and 478 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 191.10 million shares, up from 143.39 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 226.81 million shares.

Traders on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange react to the day's activities as pessimistic news from Geneva sent markets reeling.

Stock, bond and commodity markets gyrated widely as news broke from talks in Geneva between Secretary of State James Baker and Tariq Aziz, the foreign minister of Iraq.

Early in the day a U.S. description of the talks as "substantive" seemed to encourage traders, who apparently began the day with modest hopes for the meeting.

But that optimism abruptly deflated when Baker emerged from the meeting to report, "I heard nothing that suggested to me any Iraqi flexibility" on the issue of its occupation of Kuwait.

Aziz later spoke of "grave differences" between the two sides.

Oil prices soared on that news and interest rates rose, reversing an early decline.

Most retailing issues also fell after hopes for a boost to consumer confidence from Geneva went unfulfilled.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $26.52 billion, or 0.89 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped 1.64 to 170.97.

Standard & Poor's industrial index fell 4.26 to 364.90, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 3.41 at 311.49.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market slipped 1.55 to 357.45. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 298.12, down 1.66.

Long recession could ruin major banks

■ FDIC head L. William Seidman warned a Senate committee that a prolonged recession could cause more major banks to fail.

By John Diamond

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the nation suffers a prolonged and deep recession more major banks like the Bank of New England could collapse, a top banking regulator told a Senate committee Wednesday.

"The banking system in New England is under great stress," Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Chairman L. William Seidman told the Senate Banking Committee. "But it's not a situation that resembles the Great Depression."

Seidman stuck by his prediction that some 180 banks across the country would fail in 1991, up from 169 in 1990. He predicted none of the magnitude of Bank of New England based on current economic forecasts for a mild recession ending by mid-year.

But if the recession lasts longer, Seidman said, bank failures could increase drastically — and include more big banks.

"It depends entirely on economic conditions," Seidman said. One of the most important conditions, he said is the free flow of credit. "The credit crunch will put us in a long and deep recession if we don't deal with it."

Some lawmakers suggested that Seidman and Comptroller of the Currency Robert L. Clarke were too lenient and waited too long to take over the Bank of New England. Others praised the federal action and urged regulators to ease up on banks and get credit flowing again.

"I've never seen in 15 or 20 years such a sense that there's nothing to break this free fall," said Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., a committee member. "Everybody's squeezing. The painters aren't painting, the roofers aren't roofing, the plumbers aren't plumbing."

Clarke, the Bush administration's top banking watchdog, said he planned to

SCOTT BURNS

Personal credit management not an easy job

By Scott Burns

Q. I have a credit union loan of $11,000 at 9 percent and have shares pledged which draw 6 percent interest. Would I be ahead to pay off the loan? My payments are $202 a month.

Burns

A. With consumer interest no longer tax deductible personal credit management is a major activity in the '90s. The first thing you should know is that you have made a good deal relative to what is available.

You aren't paying 21 percent on store credit charges, as millions are.

You aren't paying 18 percent on bank credit card interest, as millions are.

You aren't paying high personal loan rates of 13 percent, as millions are.

So relative to most people you're way ahead.

Your loan has two cost components; the nondeductible cost of the interest and the taxable interest you earn. While the interest rate you pay is low, so is the interest you are being paid on the savings you are using as collateral. This works to your advantage by reducing your tax bill.

You can understand this by comparing it to two other methods of financing.

MARKET RATES. Suppose you borrowed through a personal loan at 13 percent. At that rate $11,000 would cost you $1,430 a year if the balance remained constant. You could earn about 7 percent in secure investments such as money market funds or short term U.S. Treasury obligations so your money would earn $770 a year. If you were in the 28 percent tax bracket, you would pay $215 in federal income taxes on that money. This means your borrowing would cost you a net of $875 out of pocket.

AT YOUR CREDIT UNION. As you have it now you are paying $990 a year in interest on your loan and receiving $660 in taxable interest on your deposit which means income taxes of $185 and a net cost of $425 a year.

NO BORROWING. If you don't borrow and pay cash you don't earn interest, pay taxes, or pay interest. The out-of-pocket cost is $0.

The only way to change this is to borrow so that the interest paid is seen, for tax purposes, as interest paid to support an investment position. Under current tax law you can deduct interest you pay from the earnings of investments that are used as collateral for investment loans. Suppose, for instance, you had $11,000 in U.S. Treasury notes earning 8 percent and used them as collateral to borrow $11,000 (in actual practice you would need more collateral, the amount depending on what was pledged). If you paid interest at 11 percent you would pay $1,210 a year while earning $880 a year. With investment interest deductible against investment income, you would have a nondeductible net loss so your interest income would, in effect, be tax free. This means your net cost would be $330.

Note that this method, while not costless, is less expensive than what you are paying through your credit union loan.

Is there any reason not to pay cash and avoid a loan and its costs altogether?

Yes.

All of us need access to cash in emergencies. If you pay off your loan and don't have any other money, you will be vulnerable to sudden expenses: an accident, God forbid, or the loss of your job. You should only pay cash for large purchases AFTER you have accumulated a cash fund. Remember that it is relatively easy to borrow money or obtain credit when you have a job; it is almost impossible to get if you don't have a job.

Q. I paid into Social Security for about 40 years. Mostly low paying work, such as dry cleaning shop clerk, nurses aide, restaurant worker, etc. The result is that my Social Security based on my own earnings will be minimum.

You have written several times concerning a divorced woman's entitle-

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices fell sharply this afternoon, wiping out a strong early gain following word of no progress toward a settlement of the showdown in the Middle East.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 40 points at its midsession peak, was down 5.69 points at 2,503.71 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers maintained a 2-1 lead over losers in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 996 up, 479 down and 449 unchanged.

Traders in stock, bond and commodity markets were keeping a close eye on any news from talks in Geneva between Secretary of State James Baker and Tariq Aziz, the foreign minister of Iraq.

Early in the day a U.S. description of the talks as "substantive" seemed to encourage traders, who apparently began the day with modest hopes at best for the meeting.

But that optimism abruptly deflated when Baker emerged from the meeting to report, "I heard nothing that suggested to me any Iraqi flexibility" on the issue of its occupation of Kuwait.

Oil prices soared on that news and interest rates rose, reversing an early decline.

Among actively traded blue chips, Philip Morris rose ½ to 49¼; International Business Machines was unchanged at 109; DuPont fell ⅝ to 34, and American Telephone & Telegraph lost ⅛ to 29¾.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 1.01 to 173.62.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numberical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key(*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key(*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

BURNS: Benefits are 'skewed'

(FROM 5C)

ment to one half of her former husband's Social Security amount provided the marriage lasted 10 or more years.

My husband and I were married on May 15, 1976 and legally separated on April 10, 1986. However the divorce was not final until June 4, 1986. Do I qualify under the 10 year rule?

A. A separation agreement, even one in contemplation of divorce, is not the same as being divorced. I suggest you visit a Social Security office and give the officials there the date of your wedding and the date your divorce was final. You should be eligible.

Don't, however, expect a bonanza. Social Security benefits are "skewed" so that the benefits are proportionately larger for lower income workers. Workers who earned an average pre-retirement income of $10,000 a year, for instance, can expect Social Security benefits to replace about 70 percent of their income. Workers who earned $20,000 can expect Social Security to replace about 42 percent of their income. If your former husband earned twice what you earned, half of his benefit would be 21 percent of his income or 42 percent of your income — much less than the 70 percent replacement rate you can expect based on your own earnings record.

In the extreme case that your former husband has always earned near the maximum, he can expect Social Security to replace about 24 percent of the Social Security wage base maximum, now just over $53,000. You would be entitled to half or 12 percent of his amount which is about 5 times $10,000. Therefore, Social Security would replace about 60 percent of your income.

Scott Burns' column is syndicated by King Features, and appears on the Reporter-Telegram business pages each Thursday and Sunday.

BANKS: Big banks could go if recession lingers

"play it down the middle" between encouraging banks to extend credit while scrutinizing over-aggressive lending.

The banking industry is adjusting in response to the problems that brought down Bank of New England. The takeover of the bank last Sunday will cost the FDIC an estimated $2.3 billion making it the third largest federal bank rescue.

"A lot of those banks with high levels of real estate loans have taken some big hits," Clarke said. "But for the most part, those banks have begun to recognize their problems and have taken steps to manage the downturn. There's a lot of equity in the system out there."

Clarke told the committee that for regulators to stop bank failures like the collapse of the Bank of New England would require putting the brakes on lending when times are good.

Clarke defended the government's handling of the Bank of New England case, saying that only drastic intervention as long ago as 1987 could have prevented its demise.

Sen. Donald Riegle Jr., D-Mich., the committee chairman, questioned the fairness of the FDIC's decision to honor all deposits at the Bank of New England Corp.'s three subsidiaries — Bank of New England in Boston, Connecticut Bank & Trust Co. in Hartford, Conn., and Maine National Bank in Portland, Maine. He also asked whether regulators had waited too long before seizing Bank of New England.

outcome of the meeting, the contract leaped more than $7 to a peak of $31, then settled back as traders sold to take profits from the dramatic runup.

Crude sold off steadily through the morning and early afternoon as the Geneva discussions continued much longer than expected, encouraging speculation that Baker and Aziz were defusing the worldwide crisis.

But one sentence from Baker detonated an explosion of buying that sent prices up in increments of $1 in a matter of minutes.

"Regrettably," Baker said, "I heard nothing today that suggested to me any Iraqi flexibility."

HSA: HSA has long history

(From 5C)

keep losses at a minimum.

HSA Mortgage, was formerly a subsidary of Home Savings Association, which later changed its name to BancHome. When BancHome failed in 1988, all of the assets were acquired by AmWest.

Home Savings Association was owned by John Bushman, who headed a mobile home empire throughout the Southwest.

Statewide Mortgage had been rumored to be a potential buyer for HSA, but the sale never materialized. Statewide is also rumored to be looking to set up operations in Midland.

N.Y. Times News Service

It was Princess Yasmin Aga Khan's fifth and final fitting of the skin-tight silk taffeta gown she would wear to an Alzheimer's Foundation benefit.

Its designer, Arnold Scaasi, said the finished garment would account for 20 days of painstaking assembly by three full-time workers and cost $9,600 in labor alone.

Irene Daria, a writer, was curious to see the complicated creation.

"She's very private," said Mr. Scaasi before ushering Ms. Daria into a fitting room, where she came face to face with the startled princess, who had no idea who the stranger was, why she was there or why she was taking notes.

For one year, Ms. Daria, 30, was allowed such rare, behind-the-scenes views by Scaasi, Bill Blass, Liz Claiborne, Donna Karan and Adrienne Vittadini to observe them as they conceived, constructed, showed and marketed their 1989 spring collections.

Her book "The Fashion Cycle," published by Simon & Schuster, tries to strip away the glitz surrounding the fashion world, revealing its nonglamorous nuts and bolts and depicting designers' lives as relentlessly grueling and high pressured.

"But you can't feel sorry for them," said Ms. Daria. "They make a fortune."

The book is in a diary format because, Ms. Daria said, "time is so important in the fashion industry."

BUT SOME people in the fashion industry are concerned.

Scaasi wrote to Simon & Schuster, stating, "I do not scream in fabric showrooms."

When Ms. Daria saw Ms. Karan recently, the writer said, "She was very cool to me."

Ms. Daria added that she was baffled by her subjects' reactions.

"When I first approached them," she recalled, "I said, 'I'm going to be spending an inordinate amount of time with you. People are going to know what you do for a living and what your life is really like.' What did they think I was doing there with my note pad for all that time?

"They're upset because the fashion business is all image. They come across as ordinary Joes who really have to struggle and who slog through the production details. But that's what I admire in them most."

Ms. Daria, a former reporter for Women's Wear Daily, tells in her book who said what, where, when and how.

That includes how co-workers snipe at one another the moment an office door is closed; how, at meetings, blame for errors is usually attributed to others, and how sarcasm is often the expression of choice.

"Fashion is a catty, nasty, bitchy business, as are fashion magazines," said Ms. Daria, who until recently was a beauty and fashion editor for Harper's Bazaar.

"I was 23, a pipsqueak, when I started out at Women's Wear," she recalled. "I grew up in front of these people. They helped to educate me.

"All designers complain like characters on 'Thirtysomething.' Only Liz Claiborne ever initially questioned what effect building a fashion empire would have on her life."

THE DESIGNER and her husband, Arthur Ortenberg, recently retired from actively managing Liz Claiborne Inc.

The designer, who made her mark in the '70s with clothes for working women, is quoted as saying the growth "prostituted my talent."

"Celebrities and high-profile socialites often don't pay full price for a designer's creations," Ms. Daria said.

"When they're seen and photographed at the right places, it literally means hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of free publicity for the designer."

Staying in the public eye is a priority for Scaasi. He and Blass can seem to spend nearly every evening at one charity event or another.

"That's where their customers are," Ms. Daria said. "The more expensive the designer's clothes, the more he or she has to socialize."

In the midst of starting up DKNY, a lower-priced line, Ms. Karan is quoted as saying, "I'll be a guilty mother until I die," after calls from her teen-age daughter, asking, "Where are you, Mommy?"

"Once they get going, it's hard to stop," said Ms. Daria.

Long days are usual. Production deadlines and creative demands combine to form a treadmill.

Successful designers frequently affix their names to accessories like perfumes, linens and car interiors.

BLASS WAS approached once to lend name his to a line of coffins. "Licensing agreements are what bring the big money in," Ms. Daria said.

Designers can be in the midst of a frenzy over last-minute details of a spring collection and then have to squeeze in the selection of fabrics for the fall collection.

"Fabric comes before design," Ms. Daria said. "It inspires, and must be ordered well ahead of time. Deciding on a silhouette is the next step."

Knitwear, an Adrienne Vittadini speciality, is jobbed out to factories even further in advance than clothes of woven materials.

Because of contract commitments, Ms. Daria researched and wrote "The Fashion Cycle" while working at Harper's. "I essentially had two full-time jobs, which I'll never do again," she said. "I didn't have a life."

A two-week vacation was spent in Hong Kong watching Mrs. Vittadini edit down 1,000 items, which the designer was seeing assembled for the first time, to 600.

"It was numbing," said Ms. Daria.

The writer, who lives in Manhattan and Amagansett, N.Y., was interviewed in the East End home that she and her husband of three months, Carey Wiener, 35, recently purchased.

WORKING IN the fashion field, Ms. Daria said, has taught her "to ignore what the fashion press tells you."

She said women were becoming more secure by "wearing what they feel comfortable in."

"That's why the industry hasn't been doing so well lately," Ms. Daria said.

For her next book, "One Day in the Life of a Four-Star Restaurant," Ms. Daria, who was born in Queens and who majored in journalism and English at New York University, will be going behind the scenes at Lutece.

"Books like these," she said, "allow me careers within my career."

Comfort key in skiing attire

Associated Press

A high-status Bogner jacquard and faux fur ski parka in lilac, burgundy and spice may be the latest word if you're hankering to see and be seen on the slopes in Aspen, but it'll set you back $798. Add $1,698 for the ski suit to match and count Ivana Trump among those wearing Bogner.

Skiwear tends to be expensive because it's not just clothing, it is equipment for your body, says Hollis Brooks, fashion editor of Skiing magazine.

It should enable you to stay outdoors in sub-zero temperatures in the rain, wind and snow. Considering it is, ideally, constructed to be lightweight, unconfining, colorfast and long-lasting, the dollars add up.

But you can spend wisely, Brooks says, by selecting skiwear with extra mileage. Zip-out liners and removable sleeves transform a cold-weather parka into a spring shell or vest.

If you're a novice skiier, avoid deep-pocket investments since it's a trial period, says Barbara Owen, promotions director for Obermeyer, the Aspen-based skiwear manufacturer.

But don't cut corners by wearing jeans. They'll get soaked. On the other hand, you don't have to have matching boots, gloves, sunglasses and other accessories to be fashionable.

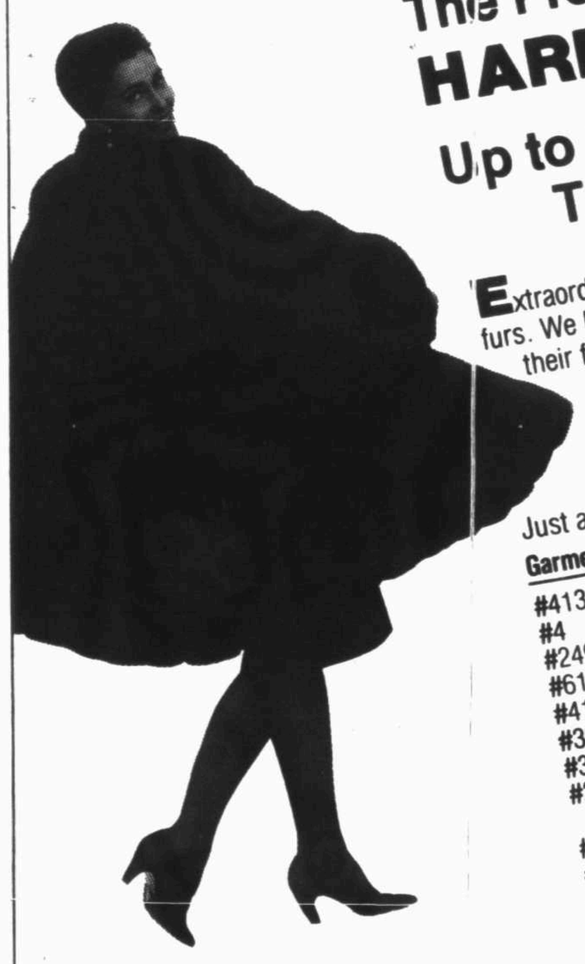

"It used to be the rule that everything had to match .... But now the rule is that there are no rules," Brooks says. "There's a carefree mix of colors."

To stay comfortable, select fabrics that are lightweight, water repellent and breathable, says Sally Chase, a public relations director for Lord & Taylor. Look for details like zipper flaps that keep water out. Front zippers and pocket zippers without flaps are perfect conduits for water and melting snow.

Layer your clothes to stay dry. Wear long underwear under your ski clothes, preferably a blend of cotton and synthetics that will breathe more easily and repel moisture from the skin, Brooks says.

Underwear plus outerwear, she says, gives you a "one-two punch that keeps you comfortable as the layer next to your skin wicks away moisture and the outerwear lets it evaporate."

Young designers form organization for their future

By Woody Hochswender
N.Y. Times News Service

Young designers are facing especially tough times, as stores cut back on existing collections and are less willing to experiment with new ones.

A plethora of young-designer labels is already vying for attention from retailers, journalists and investors.

With an eye toward promoting themselves, some New York designers in business from one to five years have formed their own organization, the Next Generation.

The name may sound a bit like a 1970's pop group, but the organization reflects serious concerns, including what it perceives as elitism on Seventh Avenue and nervousness among retail buyers.

"One of the biggest problems in retail now is stores buying narrow and deep," said Jamie Herzlinger, a designer who led efforts to organize the group, referring to retailers' buying a lot of merchandise from just a few fashion companies.

Among the 30 desigers who have paid $250 for six-month memberships are Pamela Dennis, Betsy Gonzalez, Gerard Yosca, Emo Pandelli, Jeanette Kastenberg and James Purcell.

But one designer who helped organize the group, Randolph Duke, said that he had decided not to participate. Duke said that although he supported the group, he felt he was already better established than many of its members.

Ms. Herzlinger said the goals would be to generate camaraderie and make the members better known. "In this market you need to make a fuss and have fun."

Fashion trends spotted at show

By Woody Hochswender
N.Y. Times News Service

The International Fashion and Boutique Show, as notable for what is worn in the aisles as for what is shown in the booths, opened at the Jacob K. Javits Convention Center over the weekend. Pink sweat suits with rhinestones, Pucci-patched T-shirts and embroidered metallic sweaters filled the aisles as boutique owners searched for trendy merchandise.

Among the booths, there was a certain "Dances With Wolves" influence, with designs in beaded suede from a company called Sway'd. Distressed jeans seemed big, including "shotgun washed" products of Jensen Smith, a Chattanooga, Tenn., company that has attained notoriety for blasting its garments with a 12-gauge shotgun.

Business was brisk at Stanley DeSantis's booth, where silk-screened T-shirts of celebrities covered the walls.

DeSantis, an actor who had a nonspeaking role in "Postcards From the Edge," is known in the boutique business for the shirt that gave him his start. "Every day," it said, "I wake up and give thanks for my unique ability to accessorize."

This season the hot sellers are T-shirts from the film "Edward Scissorhands" and a 60's-era shirt of Nancy Sinatra with banana-blond hair, which says on the back: "Are you ready boots? Start walkin'."

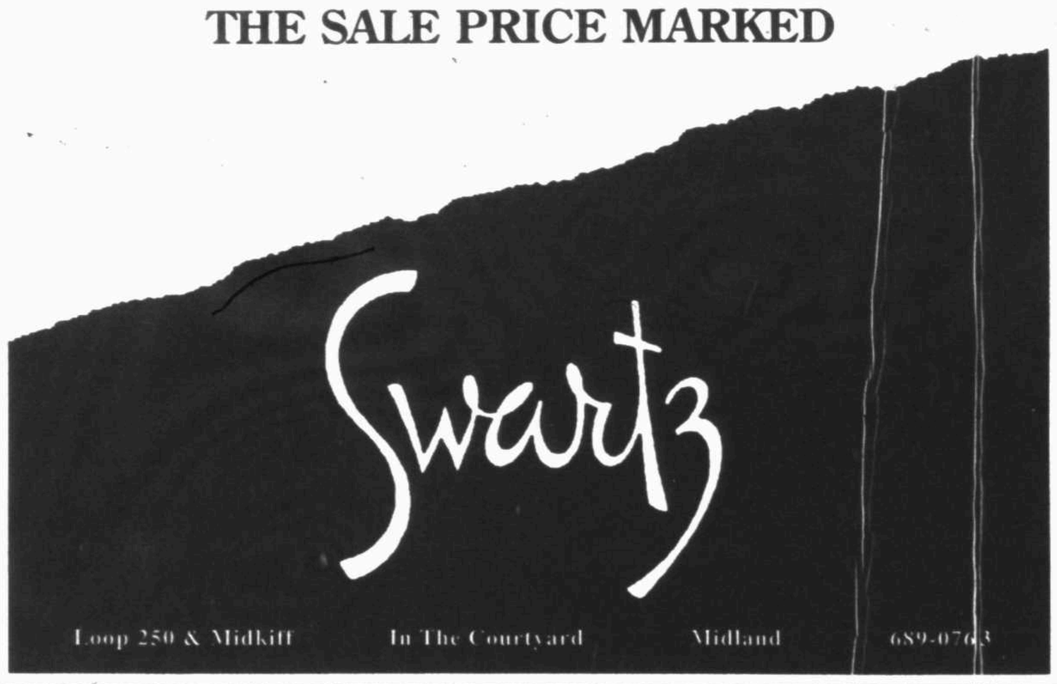

Many vendors were encouraged by the turnout.

"A lot of people bought absolutely nothing for so long," said Leah Levin, an executive of Reminiscence, a New York boutique that also has wholesale lines. "They eventually had to buy."

Student comes to defense of his generation

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter from "Shocked on the U.S.S. O'Brien," the sailor in the Persian Gulf who criticized the spelling in a letter he had received from a high school student. He quoted the following: "I now you are doon your best to pertek our nation fum them and I want you to no we are prowd of you." Then "Shocked" went on to say, "God help America if our kids are graduated from high school spelling and writing the way they do!"

Van Buren

Abby, I, for one, don't appreciate the generalization. I assure you that America will not fall apart when our generation comes of age.

On behalf of all the educated high school students of America, I would like to express my sincere appreciation to all the brave men and women now serving in the Persian Gulf and many other places around the world, prepared to give their lives if necessary in the service of our country. Sign me ... EDUCATED IN INDIANA

DEAR EDUCATED: Thank you for writing. I know that you speak for many teen-agers. Read on for another reaction to the letter from "Shocked" — one I had not considered:

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter signed "Shocked on the U.S.S. O'Brien":

Perhaps it never occurred to "Shocked" that this young high school student who made so many mistakes in his letter may have had a learning disability.

As a parent of a child with a learning disability, it was very easy for me to understand what the writer was trying to say. Perhaps one should not be so quick to criticize how a person expresses himself, but be thankful instead that the child took the time, effort and courage to write to a service member in the Persian Gulf. — T.G. IN ALTOONA, PA.

DEAR ABBY: Recently you published a letter from a serviceman in the Persian Gulf bemoaning that high school students writing to him lacked writing skills. I am a high school teacher, and I was not surprised at his comments. Let me tell you why Johnny can't write:

Johnny is in a class of 45 average students. I see Johnny only 50 minutes each day, during which time I must take roll, deal with discipline problems, correct papers, try to quiet disturbances in the hall, fill out forms and try to teach. Johnny, like most average students, hates school, so he is hard to teach. I will try to get him to learn anyway, but he never has a pen, paper or textbook with him. If he does manage to borrow supplies from another student, I must stand over him and try to get him going. Then, I must move on to the other 44 students.

Too soon, the bell will ring, and Johnny will have written nothing on his paper.

Well, tomorrow's another day, and I'll try again to get Johnny to write. Somebody's got to do this job. — A DISILLUSIONED TEACHER IN CHATSWORTH, CALIF.

Parents' hotline puts children in hot water

By Erma Bombeck

These are dark days for latchkey children. For years, they've enjoyed an independence most of us didn't get until we moved away from home. No one to check their coming or going. No one to stop them from ruining their dinner with unlimited snacks. No one flipping off the TV and assigning them chores. They were in charge to the point of controlling all communications between the school and home.

Bombeck

Until now.

Technology has finally caught up with them. A handful of schools in the Midwest have initiated a parent hotline. All that parents have to do to find out what their kids are doing or not doing at school is punch in a code for each child's teacher and prepare to be enlightened.

For too long, parents have had to rely on their children to interpret what is going on during the day. That is like asking Zsa Zsa Gabor to sell tickets to the policemen's ball.

The children of the '80s haven't been in school; they've been visiting Camelot – a wonderful, magical place where, according to them, homework is never assigned and no one cares if they're late or if they take a day off. There is no dress code, they can sleep during class if they want to, and all adults are encouraged to stay off campus and not get in the way.

Who among us has not had to translate Childrenese into English?

"My teacher doesn't like me." (The kid is flunking.)

"For no good reason she sends me to the office." (The substitute teacher for English was airborne for 30 seconds.)

"There's no reason for you to come to school." (There's at least one, maybe more.)

"Miss Pruet doesn't believe in homework." (She doesn't believe in Santa Claus, either, but she passes out gifts.)

"Mr. Harwood thinks I can do better." (He knows you can't do worse.)

"Everybody else's mother doesn't call to check on him. She trusts him." (Everybody else's mother has an unlisted phone number and no name.)

The parent hotline could be the wave of the future. Just by lifting the phone, a parent could learn if her child has homework and what it is, when school is really canceled, when school pictures are being taken so her child will not end up looking like a wino, when he's tardy or didn't show up, when he should get a good night's sleep for achievement tests.

The price tag for parent hotlines is expensive ... but wouldn't it be worth it to be in control again?

Journalists new fashion trend setters

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Now the truth is out: Journalists are fashion trend setters, too. But you have to have a multimillion-dollar salary to impress the American public.

In a survey for Express, the European-styled division of The Limited, newscaster Connie Chung was selected as the best-dressed newscaster by 31 percent of the survey's respondents.

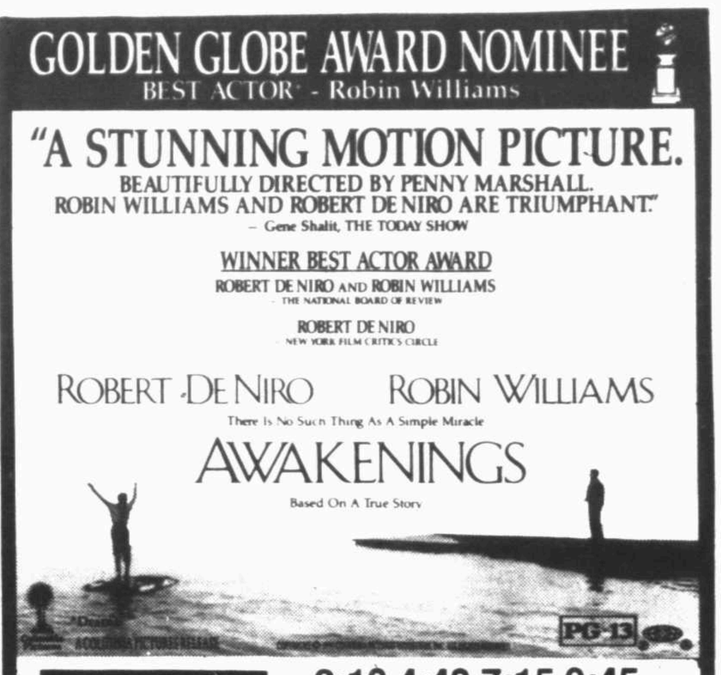

You also don't have to be petite to be a favorite: 27 percent of those polled thought Oprah Winfrey was the best-dressed woman talk-show host.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 65% adult and 35% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $200 to $600 monthly! Some motor routes make even more. Although no motor routes are expected to be available, depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 AM Monday - Friday and 7 AM on Saturday and Sunday

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR ROUTE NOW!
