Gaining time

WASHINGTON — It's payback time for that hour of sleep much of America lost April 2 when daylight saving time began. The extra hour — a boon to everyone except those working the night shift — arrived at 2 a.m. today as most of the nation returns to standard time.

Makings of disaster

FOX RIVER GROVE, Ill. — Teen-agers were hollering, a radio was blaring and the school bus driver was late when she pulled up to the railroad tracks and looked down the line. There was no way for the harried driver or the rowdy kids to know that a 620-ton commuter train was speeding toward them at nearly 70 mph. It was over seconds later. The train, whistle blowing and brakes locked, slammed into the bus, tearing the cabin from the chassis and depositing it on the ground, facing the opposite direction. Seven teen-agers died; more than two dozen others were injured. Page 9A.

One lucky ticket

AUSTIN — One ticket bought in San Antonio correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $10 million. The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 1, 14, 15, 38, 41 and 42. Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $4 million.

Clinton reaffirms plan to reject budget bill

■ President insists he has no intention of negotiating compromise until Republicans move his way.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Hours after the Senate approved a sweeping budget bill, President Clinton on Saturday made his strongest warning yet to the Republican Congress, saying not only that he would veto the bill but that "there is nothing for us to talk about" until money is restored for health, education and the environment.

By a vote of 52-47 shortly after midnight, the Senate approved the huge revenue and spending measure, which would cut taxes by $245 billion over seven years, sharply curb the growth of outlays for Medicare and Medicaid and turn over to the states broad new responsibility for caring for the poor.

Negotiators must now reconcile it with a similar bill approved by the House by 227-203, probably late next month.

During a session of almost 15 hours beginning Friday morning, the Senate adopted a number of proposals, demanded by moderate Republicans, that veered away from the more conservative House version.

But the president insisted Saturday that he had no intention of negotiating a compromise until the Republicans moved his way, even if they tried to force his hand by refusing to extend the government's borrowing authority so it could keep paying its bills during a stalemate — a threat Clinton called "blackmail tactics."

"Hear this: Before or after a veto, I am not prepared to discuss the destruction of Medicare and Medicaid, the gutting of our commitment to education, the ravaging of our environment, or raising taxes on working people," Clinton said in his weekly radio address. "So I say to the Republican leaders: Back off your cuts in these vital areas. Until you do, there is nothing for us to talk about."

Hospice hopes plight of Odessa institution won't cause confusion

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

In light of unflattering news reports about the financial condition of the Hospice of the Southwest, the unrelated Hospice of Midland doesn't want their image tarnished through any confusion by the public.

"We just want to clarify we are a separate entity than the Hospice of the Southwest," said Kay Bates, president of the board for Hospice of Midland.

> 'We just want to clarify we are a separate entity than the Hospice of the Southwest.'

> — Kay Bates, board president, Hospice of Midland

Hospice of Midland serves primarily Midland County while Hospice of the Southwest, headquartered in Odessa, covers 19 counties. Midland hospice officials said they don't want people to be misled — because of the regional name of Hospice of the Southwest — that the organizations are affiliated in any way.

"We know there's a lot of confusion in Midland about if that mess over there includes us," said Carol Armstrong, executive director for Hospice of Midland. "I just want people to know without a shadow of doubt, that's not us ... The people of Midland have not been betrayed."

In addition to the general concern for its reputation before the community, Hospice of Midland officials don't want any confusion to jeopardize the organization's only fund-raiser of the year.

November is National Hospice Month and that's when the Hospice of Midland, a non-profit organization, holds its annual fund-raising effort consisting of letters sent to community members outlining

Cold War dream

Russian blows up U.S. missile silo

WHITEMAN AIR FORCE BASE, Mo. (AP) — It was a Russian's Cold War dream. Pavel Grachev triggered an explosive charge Saturday that destroyed a U.S. missile site that once housed a rocket ready to deliver a nuclear payload to his country.

"The first foreigner to blow up a U.S. missile silo is the minister of defense of Russia, how about that?" said an obviously elated Grachev as a cloud of gray smoke billowed from the earth a quarter-mile away.

"This is one of the most memorable days of my life," he said. "Not only my children, but my grandchildren will be talking about this event for many, many years to come."

Defense Secretary William Perry also participated in what he called "an act of great symbolic significance."

A cold wind blew across the corn field and whipped the blue cloth that covered a small round table. On it was a yellow plastic detonator, wires connecting it to the explosive charge. To set off the explosion, Perry pressed one button and held it down. Then Grachev pressed another button that triggered the blast.

The two men were in a celebratory mood and for good

Fast-paced Ortiz trial could go to jurors by week's end

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

AMARILLO — Henry Lopez Ortiz's capital murder trial is moving at a brisk pace and could go before the jury by this week's end.

The trial began Monday; the state rested its case on Thursday, and the defense started its case on Friday.

Ortiz, 42, is charged with capital murder in the Feb. 10 kidnapping, sexual assault and murder of Julianne Powell. The child's body was found nude in a laundry hamper in Ortiz's apartment.

Ortiz pleaded not guilty and has remained in jail without bond. The trial was moved here because of extensive publicity. The state is seeking the death penalty in the case.

Jury selection in the case began Oct. 3 and was completed on Oct. 20. Testimony began on Oct. 23 and will continue Monday.

The following are highlights from last week's testimony.

■ Monday, Oct. 23

Lynn Fisher, the 44-year-old mother of Julianne, told the jury about the last day her daughter was alive.

She testified that her child was a lively 10-year-old with two close friends and a cat, Snickers.

Milosevic — Is he really man transformed?

By George Jahn
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — It was a black day for Serbia, but a ray of light pierced the gloom of defeat. President Slobodan Milosevic said he would do anything to stop the Yugoslav wars he helped start.

The date was Aug. 11, and Serbia's Croatian Serb allies had just been routed by Croatia's army. Milosevic had a chance to escalate the war by sending Serbian troops to help the rebels.

Instead, he sat in his luxurious office, listening and nodding as Vuk Draskovic, a leader of the Serbian opposition, painted his vision of Serbia's future.

"Our nation must be transformed. Serbia must model herself on the United States," Draskovic, who opposed the wars in Croatia and Bosnia, recalls telling Milosevic. The president responded: "I agree with you 100 percent."

The idea that Milosevic, an authoritarian socialist, had decided to give Serbia peace and democracy was startling. Most opposition politicians and Milosevic watchers in Belgrade, capital of Serbia and Yugoslavia, say he is not to be trusted beyond striving for his only goal — staying in power.

With the constitution preventing him from running again in 1997 for Serbia's presidency, he is said to harbor plans to become Yugoslavia's president and transform that figurehead post into one of uncontested power.

But in a post-war Balkans monitored closely by the United States and its allies, Milosevic might have no choice other than being more democratic if he wants to remain on top.

Along with the presidents of Croatia and Bosnia, he has signed on to a U.S. peace plan for Bosnia and plans to negotiate its details on behalf of rebel Serbs at talks opening Wednesday at a U.S. Air Force base in Ohio.

Draskovic, who has held three long meetings with the reclusive Milosevic in recent years, says Milosevic is ready to recognize Bosnia-Herzegovina as an independent state at those talks.

Revealing details of his Aug. 11 meeting with Milosevic, their most recent, Draskovic also said Milosevic agreed to recognize Croatia's independence — if the West guarantees that more than 150,000 Serbs who fled the Croatian army in August can return and reclaim their property without fear for their lives and rights.

Milosevic hopes his rejection of the "Greater Serbia" dream he nurtured in the late 1980s will lift the ruinous economic sanctions imposed on Serbia by the United Nations in May 1992. He also wants to cement his status as a regional powerbroker.

Dropping the goal of an expanded Serbia angers radical Serb nationalists like Vojislav Seselj, a former ally of Milosevic who now accuses him of betraying the Serbs of Croatia and Bosnia. And Serbia will not gain anything from caving in to the West, he says.

"Milosevic is counting on the possibility of being America's main man. This is his serious mistake," Seselj told The Associated Press. "The Americans won't forget that up to yesterday they called him the 'Butcher of the Balkans'."

Draskovic, a more moderate Serb nationalist who once staged anti-Milosevic rallies and was badly beaten and jailed at Milosevic's behest, believes the president has changed.

"He never was a nationalist," said Draskovic, who has tuned down his own message of Serb rights above all and now favors a more egalitarian approach for all the ethnic groups of former Yugoslavia.

He says Milosevic is now genuinely convinced he erred in his methods, if not his aim — to forcibly hold together a Serb-dominated communist Yugoslavia breaking apart because of ethnic nationalism and economic disparities among its republics.

"He was like a boy who tried to keep the girl he loved by beating her. He tried to keep Yugoslavia by force and didn't realize that war would tear it apart," Draskovic said.

Many would take the opposite view: that Milosevic consciously embraced nationalism as communism went out of style, engineered the break-up of Yugoslavia's Marxist system and then armed and organized Serbs to fight to retain Serb domination.

Whatever the case, Milosevic seems certain to remain the most powerful man in Serbia and what is left of the Yugoslav federation.

Mercurial and secretive, Milosevic, 54, has run Serbia since 1987 and has faced no serious challenge since March 1991, when Draskovic organized anti-government rallies. Tanks were sent to disperse about 100,000 demonstrators.

Although Serbia has been untouched by actual fighting, its economy is in shambles. The jobless rate is officially 40 percent, but it really is much higher because many people work only a fraction of the day. State-run factories have no raw materials or buyers for their products.

"He's a huge loss for Serbia," said Branko Petrovic, one of 10,000 steel workers demonstrating earlier this month for more work and better pay.

Opinion polls say Milosevic is widely unpopular, particularly since ethnic Serbs were driven from Croatia in August. But most Serbs can think of no one who could lead them better.

Milosevic has many advantages. He controls television, the trade unions and the police.

Milosevic hopes his rejection of the "Greater Serbia" dream he nurtured in the late 1980s will lift the ruinous economic sanctions imposed on Serbia by the United Nations in May 1992.

Conservationists work to save ancient Paraguayan forest

YGATIMI, Paraguay (AP) — Thirty miles north of this dusty outpost, along a bumpy and treacherous dirt road, an ancient forest stands as a Berlin of sorts, a green island amid a sea of deforestation.

It's a forest that is fighting back. The owners and friends of the Mbaracayu Nature Reserve say it is a model for conservation, an attempt to thwart civilization's advance on eastern Paraguay's dwindling forests.

Nearly 400 square miles of forest are lost to loggers every year in this California-size country. To make matters worse, forest land is set ablaze daily by farmers and ranchers to create more open space, producing smoke that impairs visibility and air quality for hundreds of miles.

"The pressure here against saving these forests from destruction is tremendous," Frank Fragano, an environmentalist with the U.S. Agency for International Development, said during an aerial survey of the reserve. "We want to avoid making this place an island."

Owned by two conservation groups, Mbaracayu is a dense, subtropical mix of hardwoods, grasslands and wetlands, home to thousands of species of plants and animals, some extinct or severely endangered in other regions. These include jaguars, tapirs, peccaries, giant armadillos, and the bush dog. Birds like the king vulture, large macaw and bare-throated bellbird nest there.

The park is also the traditional hunting grounds of the Ache Indians, primitive hunters and gatherers whose way of life, until the 1970s, had changed little for 10,000 years.

But the flora and fauna of the 220-square-mile reserve remain little changed, and its lush canopy is a small reminder of the vast, primordial forest that covered much of eastern Paraguay and Brazil.

To save the reserve, Mbaracayu officials plan to expand the park's borders, and they are showing nearby settlers how to farm the land without cutting down or burning trees.

Officials also have enlisted the help of the Ache to maintain the reserve — while helping the Indians protect their culture against modern man's onslaught.

"This is the largest tract of interior Atlantic forest in Paraguay and the reserve is the most important conservation area in Paraguay," said Alberto Madrono, a field biologist who lives and works on the reserve.

"But the situation around here is really serious," he added. "It's appalling that most of this forest has disappeared in the last 50 years when it took thousands of years to create."

In the 1970s, a series of business misfortunes saved Mbaracayu from destruction. A forestry company that owned the land defaulted on a World Bank loan and the bank, as part of its new policy to help preserve wildlands, protected the parcel and sought an appropriate buyer for about decade.

In 1991, the U.S.-based Nature Conservancy and the Moises Bertoni Foundation, a private Paraguayan conservation group formed to manage the reserve, bought the property for $2 million with help from private sources and the U.S. government.

Until then, Paraguay had been largely neglected by international conservation efforts. While the government has set up a small national park system in response to accelerated deforestation, private interests have assumed the task of saving the country's wildlands and created Mbaracayu in the process.

The Paraguayan government, still grappling with democracy after 35 years of dictatorship that ended only five years ago, has supported the reserve as have the country's urban middle-class and news media.

Some landowners see the reserve as a way to make their own land more valuable. They say they can make more off the land by growing an herb called mate and harvesting palm hearts.

Complaints about the reserve have been few. Mostly they come from the poor farmers who have settled near the park, said Alan Randall, the Nature Conservancy's director of program development.

Struggling to feed their families, some of the farmers have difficulty understanding why they cannot hunt or log in the reserve, Randall said. Others see the reserve as just another plaything for overbearing foreigners.

"Rather than preaching to the locals about conservation, we are providing a leadership model" to show ways of living with the forest, he said. "And they are not particularly bothered by it."

Creating Mbaracayu could not have happened without the Ache, considered among South America's most genetically pure and socially isolated Indians. The Moises Bertoni Foundation was able to secure their support for the reserve by donating land to enlarge the Ache's nearby reservation.

The Ache, some of whom live outside the reserve in scattered huts without electricity and running water, consider Mbaracayu the heart of their territory. Throughout the 1960s and 1970s, large numbers of the nomadic tribe were killed by ranchers, sold into virtual slavery or died of disease.

The Ache have been given exclusive hunting rights in the reserve — as long as they use only bows and arrows — and they are free to forage for wild honey, fruits and insect larva. That is expected to help them overcome a decline in health from the sedentary life in their nearby reservation.

Yeltsin remains in stable condition, begins paperwork

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin, hospitalized for heart trouble, remained in stable condition Saturday under close medical supervision and was able to do paperwork, a spokesman said.

The president, 64, was rushed to Moscow's Central Clinical Hospital in a helicopter Thursday with his second apparent heart attack in four months.

Following tests Friday, doctors pointed to problems with blood supply to Yeltsin's heart muscles, but reported no signs of heart failure.

"Yeltsin's condition remained unchanged and stable" Saturday, said the chief presidential spokesman, Sergei Medvedev. "His temperature is normal and doctors are continuing the scheduled treatment."

Medvedev's statement added that Yeltsin was not well enough to receive visitors yet, but was working on documents sent over from the Kremlin.

Aides say Yeltsin will have to stay away from the pressures of the Kremlin until December. He may stay in the hospital or go to the Barvikha government resort outside Moscow where he recuperated from heart troubles in July.

He has canceled trips to Norway and China next month. A summit he planned to hold Tuesday with the presidents of Bosnia, Croatia and Serbia was postponed.

His ailment came just seven weeks ahead of parliamentary elections Dec. 17, and was expected to play into the hands of the president's hard-line and nationalist foes, who are already making significant gains.

Yeltsin has said he is waiting for the parliamentary results to decide whether to run for re-election. The presidential vote is slated for June.

On Saturday, Communist Party leader Gennady Zyuganov said his followers will not take advantage of the president's illness to try to topple him — but then immediately lashed out against Yeltsin.

"All the Russians are aboard a ship which is gravely sick but is not being treated at all," Zyuganov told the Interfax news agency.

"Yeltsin should have offered his resignation after his previous heart attack, and elections would have taken care of what remained to be done."

Yeltsin became Russia's first popularly elected president in 1991. His popularity has plummeted in the last two years over his erratic leadership style, the war in Chechnya and economic troubles.

He fell ill two days after a trip that included summits with President Clinton and French President Jacques Chirac. Aides blamed the relapse on overwork.

After his July attack of acute ischemia, a condition that restricts the flow of blood to the heart, Yeltsin convalesced for almost a month and then took a long holiday.

Yeltsin has been dogged by health problems for years. Since 1987, he has suffered heart problems and was treated for back pains in Spain in 1990.

BUDGET: Clinton says he will not compromise

(From 1A)

In the Republican response, House Speaker Newt Gingrich warned Clinton to "think twice about vetoing the balanced budget and jeopardizing long-overdue revolutionary change" and said the president "promises to be a roadblock."

Senate majority leader, Bob Dole of Kansas added: "America cannot afford to continue on this destructive course."

Saturday morning's vote sets the stage for a new round of high-stakes wrangling between Capitol Hill and the administration that White House aides acknowledge could well result in a series of vetoes of the individual appropriations bills as well as the budget package passed this week and a virtual stalemate through the end of the year.

They say that is a risk Clinton is prepared to take to preserve what he can of his priorities and build a record for his re-election campaign next year.

Congressional Democrats have worried that Clinton, whose propensity for compromise is celebrated, will be too quick to bargain, and his tough language Saturday seemed intended to help allay those fears and to portray himself to the public as the true defender of middle-class interests and what he on Saturday called "national values."

"You say your principles are a balanced budget, a tax cut, extending the life of the Medicare trust fund," Clinton said, addressing the Republicans. "I want all those things. They are my principles, too. But there are other important principles, the one that I have outlined. They are morally right for America, and they are good for our economy."

Repeating his refusal to let the Republicans pressure him into an agreement by holding up an extension of the federal debt limit, which expires next month, Clinton warned, "I am not about to give in to that kind of blackmail."

"If they send me a budget bill that says simply, 'Take our cuts, or we'll let the country go into default,' I will still veto it," he added.

In the coming weeks, Republican negotiators from the House and Senate will not only have to iron out the differences between their bills but in the face of Clinton's veto threat might make accommodations to win White House support.

The Democrats' remaining strength in Congress virtually assures that Clinton's vetoes on budget bills will not be overridden. But what would happen after such a veto is far less clear. The consensus view in the White House is that a compromise will eventually be reached, but no one any longer believes that will happen soon.

"Don't assume that when Newt says this is all Kabuki theater that we're all just playing along to a compromise after a ritual veto," one White House aide said Saturday. "We're sticking with these principles all the way through."

Both the president and the Republicans stand to lose in the end if the public perceives them as contributing to the government gridlock that, from different perspectives, each has pledged to end.

Gingrich sought to make that argument in his response to the president's address: "Without a doubt, this week was a true crossroads for America's future. Down one road was the status quo, big government, rising deficits, high taxes, a bankrupt Medicare program and a destructive welfare system. Down the other road was historic change and a better future.

"This is the road Republicans chose for America," he added. "Unfortunately, President Clinton promises to be a roadblock."

Dole sought to recast some of the issues on which Clinton criticized the bills, saying Republicans had "kept our promise to cut taxes so that you could keep more of your hard-earned money."

"And we kept out promise to preserve, protect and strengthen Medicare," he said.

Friday morning, the Senate made a number of changes in the bill, voting to drop a provision that would allow corporations to withdraw billions of dollars in surplus assets from their pension funds, retain the federal guarantee of Medicaid coverage for pregnant women, children under 12 and the disabled and keep federal regulations on nursing homes.

Making use of a Senate rule that prohibits amendments to the budget if they have no effect on the deficit, Democrats also forced the Republicans to strip from the bill 46 provisions, including several relating to welfare.

Those proposals would have allowed states to deny cash assistance to children born to unmarried women under the age of 18 or to welfare mothers of any age who have additional children.

HOSPICE: Officials fear confusion over facilities

the agency's work and soliciting donations.

The fund-raiser plays an important part in the services provided by Hospice of Midland, Ms. Armstrong said.

Fund-raiser dollars, coupled with general contributions, pay for non-funded care, she said. Non-funded care — for dying individuals who could not afford the care otherwise — accounts for about 20 percent of all patients seen by Hospice of Midland.

Out of the $1.3 million budgeted by Hospice of Midland last year, $267,000 was allocated for non-funded care. Of each dollar budgeted, 87.6 cents goes directly to patient care.

Hospice of Midland employs about 20 people full time and 20-plus part time. In addition, Hospice receives the help of about 125 volunteers — contributing about $123,000 in time and services, according to the agency's annual report.

Simply stated, Hospice of Midland's mission is to provide a caring environment and the physical and emotional needs of the terminally ill. The organization cares for about 65 people a day, on average.

Hospice of Midland was formed 15 years ago, four years before the start of Hospice of the Southwest. "We have worked since 1980 in the community to do very good work," Ms. Armstrong said.

The recent concern about any confusion between the two hospices was prompted by reports by the Odessa American that Hospice of the Southwest ended its last fiscal year $300,000 in the red and cited alleged lavish spending practices.

The debt was reported in an independent audit of Hospice of the Southwest, the newspaper stated.

The most recent independent audit of the Hospice of Midland, conducted by KPMG Peat Marwick, gave the agency a clean bill of financial health.

"In our opinion, the financial statements ... present fairly, in all material respects, the revenues collected and expenses paid and charges in fund balances of Hospice of Midland, Inc. as of and for the years ended April 30, 1995 and 1994 ..." the report stated.

"We have worked very hard to be squeaky clean," Ms. Armstrong said.

reason. The silo in the corn field about 65 miles from Kansas City once held a Minuteman II missile, its single nuclear warhead targeted on the Soviet Union.

Across the communist nation, similar missiles sat targeted on the United States. "All of my adult life, I have lived with the threat of nuclear holocaust," said Perry. "Now we are in the process of actually eliminating these fearsome weapons."

All of the 150 ICBMs in the Whiteman area have been removed and with Saturday's blast, 18 of the silos have been destroyed. Eventually they all will be filled in and covered. Each missile site occupied an acre, most of them in the middle of fields where local farmers grew crops around these symbols of nuclear armageddon.

Currently, Russia has almost 7,000 nuclear warheads and a total of 1,540 missiles and long-range bombers to deliver them. The United States has more than 8,000 warheads and 1,690 missiles and bombers. Under the START I treaty, both countries will reduce their arsenals by December 2001 to 6,000 warheads each and 1,600 missiles or bombers.

Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, presented the detonator to Grachev. Shalikashvili called it "an insignificant gadget" that enabled the two countries to take "another step to make this world safer."

Before Perry and Grachev went onto the field to set off the explosion, they were briefed on how the detonator worked.

"It will be very interesting to see if these two can push the right buttons," quipped Shalikashvili.

"There's always some other guy next to me who will push the right button," responded the Russian defense minister.

"If this doesn't work it will not be the fault of you or me," said Perry.

"If it doesn't work, all these people in the press will let the world know and we'll have to retire immediately," Grachev replied.

The previous day, Perry and Grachev announced an agreement under which Russian troops would play a support role in any peacekeeping mission in Bosnia.

But even that bit of progress also made it clear they remained apart on the issue of whether the Russians could participate in peacekeeping in Bosnia if they refuse to place their forces under NATO command.

Reflecting the upbeat mood at the missile site, Grachev predicted that Russia and the United States would join in peacekeeping "in the various little corners of the world, no matter where they might be."

Upon his return to Washington, Perry said, "I couldn't be happier with the results of the meetings I had with Minister Grachev."

Perry said he and Grachev reached "a meeting of the minds" on a compromise to resolve Russia's difficulty complying with the Convention Forces Europe treaty.

The agreement sets limits on the forces countries can deploy on their borders. Because of unrest in neighboring former Soviet republics, Russia exceeds those limits on its borders with Georgia and Armenia.

Perry said the United States would support a proposal Russia will make at the next meeting of signatories of the CFE treaty. He declined to give details of the compromise.

ORTIZ: Capital murder trial could go to jury this week

(From 1A)

Ms. Fisher, who was off from work that Friday, ran errands and watched a movie that day, she said.

She arrived home about 4:25 p.m. and noticed things weren't right. She said the door was closed but unlocked, Julianne's shoes were on the floor, her keys were on the television and there was a half-glass of milk.

She searched the apartment and spoke with Julianne's friend, Ashley Mead. The apartment complex where she and her daughter lived was searched before the police were called.

Ashley told Ms. Fisher she and Julianne had a phone conversation, which ended about 4:15 p.m.

Ashley told her Julianne was on the phone when the man who lived downstairs, later identified as Ortiz, came by to borrow some cheese and the cat.

Ms. Fisher said she went to Ortiz's apartment and knocked repeatedly before he finally answered the door looking "disheveled like he had been interrupted."

Ms. Fisher testified she asked him if he had seen her daughter. She described the girl to him and then told him she knew he had been upstairs to borrow some cheese.

Ms. Fisher said she noticed a freshly bleeding cut on his forehead and asked him about it. She said he stammered and said he did it when he put on his glasses.

Ms. Fisher said that as she continued looking around for Julianne, Ortiz approached her in the breezeway of the building where they both lived.

Ms. Fisher said Ortiz said he felt "like this is all my fault. If I had known she was alone I would have stayed with her' ..." She said he then hugged her.

The police arrived a little later and she suggested they speak with Ortiz and told them about the phone conversation and the scratch on his head.

Ashley testified about her phone conversation with Julianne when Ortiz came to the door. She said Julianne told her Ortiz wanted two pieces of cheese and to borrow the cat.

Ortiz's wife of 25 years, Julie Ortiz, testified about the couple's background and the day of the murder. She said that when Ortiz came home from work that day at about 11 a.m., he was angry about things going on at work.

She said she went to a funeral in Pecos that day.

She also testified that about 15 years ago Ortiz had "brain surgery" after he was hit in the head playing baseball. She did not specify what type of injury he suffered.

Mrs. Ortiz said her husband underwent surgery in Odessa and had speech problems and a personality change following the surgery. She said she never believed Ortiz fully recovered from his head injury, except emotionally.

Sgt. Lindy Therwanger was one of several officers who arrived at Ortiz's apartment for information on the report of a missing child. Therwanger said the first officer's request to look around was granted and then withdrawn. He said he left another officer in the apartment and conducted another search of the area. Later, after the body was found, he assisted in removing the body from the hamper and securing the scene.

■ Tuesday, Oct. 24

Jurors saw the photos of the nude body of Julianne that showed how she was "crammed" into a laundry hamper in Ortiz's home.

Four police officers — who responded to a call of a missing child after Julianne disappeared — testified Tuesday.

Officer Ken Carter said Ortiz had told him that he had been to the girl's apartment to borrow some cheese for a sandwich and that he was "sorry if he left the door open and caused anything to happen."

Carter also testified he found a block of cheese in Ortiz's refrigerator.

Officer Richard Edens testified about finding the body and calling out to the other officers. He said when he opened the hamper he felt a "rush of heat come up and hit me in the face and a pungent odor hit me in the face."

He said he saw the child's red hair and her knees up over her head. With his voice quivering, Edens said it was a "traumatic moment for me" and after the arrest of Ortiz he went outside because he was upset.

All the officers said that they saw no signs that Ortiz had been drinking alcohol.

Police Identification Specialist Karen Hare said she gathered evidence and took photographs at the crime scene and helped remove the child's body from the hamper.

She identified photographs that showed how the child's body was positioned and how the body was removed.

Ms. Hare said the child's knees were over her head and she was "crammed into the laundry hamper."

Julianne was in the hamper with a plastic bag, like those used in the fruit section of a grocery store, directly against her face, Ms. Hare said. The child had been frothing from asphyxiation, Ms. Hare said.

Ms. Hare said the hamper bulged with the child's body in it and called it a "tight fit."

■ Wednesday, Oct. 25

Dallas County medical examiner Dr. Juan Zamora told jurors that Julianne was probably already dead when she was stuffed into the hamper.

Zamora testified about the autopsy he performed on Julianne the day after she was killed. He said she appeared to have been suffocated. Julianne's chest and abdomen were compressed into the hamper, so there was no way for them to expand to take a breath, he said.

He also identified a graphic photo of the child's vagina showing where she had been raped. Zamora said a contusion in the area indicated that the child's heart was still beating when the injuries occurred.

He said there was no evidence the child had been sodomized.

Zamora said he found no other injuries, except for one that occurred after death. He said a ligament that connects the head to the neck was torn after death. He said the injury was caused by quickly forcing the child's head down into her chest.

The child weighed 97 pounds at her death and was 4 feet, 8 inches tall, Zamora said.

He said Julianne's body still felt warm to police when they found her because her body was probably retaining heat from being confined and covered with clothes.

Defense attorney Jacqueline Allen asked Zamora about his medical background and had him explain to the jury that he is not board-certified in pathology but will take the exams next month. He said he had taken the test once before and failed one section he had not been trained in and would retake the exams.

■ Thursday Oct. 26

A trace evidence analyst from the Southwestern Institute of Forensic Science in Dallas testified that four hairs from Julianne's head and one of her pubic hairs were found in the bedding from Ortiz's bed.

She said the four hairs had "force applied in their removal" but she couldn't speculate on how they were removed. A pubic hair from the girl was found on Ortiz's shirt as well.

A serologist from SWIFS testified that the fluid found on Julianne's chest and in her vagina was semen.

Carolyn Van Winkle, the DNA analyst from SWIFS, explained to the jury how DNA works and how it is tested. She said every person, except identical twins, has different DNA, which is based on chromosomes.

Ms. Van Winkle said the blood on Ortiz's bed comforter matched Julianne's blood and the semen found in the child's vagina matched DNA from a sample of Ortiz's blood.

She said the chance that another Hispanic male could be responsible for the semen is one in 28 million; the chance that a white male could be responsible for the deposit is one in 100 million.

■ Friday, Oct. 27

Elizabeth Todd, a toxicology expert from SWIFS, testified that her staff performed blood test screenings for alcohol and drugs in Ortiz's blood.

She said the blood-alcohol level in Ortiz's blood was 0.04 milligrams per liter of blood; the legal limit for intoxication in Texas is 0.10. She said he had no drugs in his system but had caffeine that equaled about a cup of coffee.

Earlier testimony indicated Ortiz's blood was drawn about 9:30 p.m.

Ms. Todd said alcohol in the blood is eliminated about 0.01 to 0.02 milligrams per liter of blood an hour. So assuming no alcohol was consumed after 5:30 p.m., he would have eliminated between 0.04 and 0.08 before the blood test, indicating his blood-alcohol level was about 0.08 to 0.12 at 5:30 p.m.

She said an average person with a blood-alcohol level of 0.08 would show impairment in judgment and motor skills.

After repeated questioning from Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre, Ms. Todd said an average person with a blood-alcohol level of 0.12 would show some outward signs of intoxication, but some people will not.

WORLD IN BRIEF

■ Radio personality tricks queen into going on air

LONDON — Queen Elizabeth II was tricked into going on the air with a radio host impersonating the Canadian prime minister largely because of a foul-up in Ottawa, Buckingham Palace said Saturday.

After Montreal radio host Pierre Brassard asked to speak to the queen, Buckingham Palace checked with Canadian officials. An official in Prime Minister Jean Chretien's office said the Canadian leader probably wanted to update the queen on Monday's separatism vote in Quebec.

The queen then spoke with Brassard for 17 minutes because he is "a skilled impersonator," a palace spokesman said on customary anonymity.

The spokesman said Buckingham Palace would review procedures for screening the queen's telephone calls, but said Brassard's hoax "happened against an entirely plausible scenario."

Chretien's office has refused to comment on Thursday's incident.

Brassard spoke with the queen about subjects ranging from her Halloween plans to the Quebec referendum. The queen voiced her support for Canadian unity, agreeing with Chretien that Quebec residents should vote against separation.

■ World condemns France's latest blast

PARIS — Environmentalists opposed to France's nuclear tests in the South Pacific swamped the main post office Saturday with hundreds of bundles of petitions addressed to President Jacques Chirac.

Worldwide, nations condemned the underground blast Friday on Mururoa Atoll in French Polynesia — France's third nuclear test in a series that began in September. On Thursday, Chirac said there probably would be six tests in all, down from eight originally planned.

About 50 Greenpeace activists took the main post office near the Louvre by surprise Saturday, depositing what the group said was 2 1/2 tons of protest petitions with 7 million signatures from all over the world.

The packages of letters, sent by registered mail, were all addressed to Chirac at the Elysee Palace.

The hundreds of packages amounted to a huge headache for postal workers. And for the government, too: In France, no postage fees are required for letters to the president.

"We expected Chirac to finally listen to the world protest," Greenpeace spokeswoman Fransce Verdeuzeldonk said from the group's Dutch office. "Apparently he is deaf to that ... and here behind me are 7 million witnesses who are, together with us, very angry."

■ Storm hits central Philippines, kills four

MANILA, Philippines — Tropical storm Zack killed at least four people when it slammed into the central Philippines on Saturday, overturning a ferry, toppling trees and electric poles and causing extensive flooding.

Swollen rivers forced hundreds of families to evacuate in the island of Cebu, 350 miles southeast of Manila, disaster officials said.

Coast guard officials said the MV Diamond, an 88-ton inter-island ship, capsized shortly after noon as it tried to take shelter from strong winds off Isabel port on Leyte island, east of Cebu.

Disaster officials said all four fatalities were reported in Cebu, which was directly in Zack's path when it hit, packing 65 mph winds.

One victim was an 18-year-old woman who was hit by a falling mango tree in Manduae, police said.

A 60-year-old man drowned in floodwaters in Cebu City. Two other fatalities were reported in Talisay and Naga towns.

■ Archaeologists find canal, believed world's oldest

CAIRO, Egypt — Archaeologists have found what they believe is the world's oldest paved canal, built about 4,500 years ago near the pyramids of Giza, an Egyptian scholar said Saturday.

The canal was probably used to carry water from the Nile for the ritual bathing of the body of pharaoh Chephren, whose pyramid is the second largest of the three at Giza, said Zahi Hawass of the Egyptian Antiquities Authority.

Chephren's pyramid is also the most comple[illegible], and includes an associated temple complex. Hawass said the discovery of the canal and a nearby tunnel will broaden knowledge of how the pharaoh was prepared for burial.

The archaeologist, in charge of the Giza plateau for the Antiquities Authority, said the canal's walls are lined with limestone, making it the oldest paved canal ever found. About 50 yards have been excavated so far.

Archaeologists have long theorized that such canals were used in connection with the burial of the pharaohs, but this is the first physical evidence for the theory, he said.

The discovery of the tunnel, which runs under the Valley Temple, could also be a "very exciting" but researchers have yet to determine the tunnel's use, he said.

Excavators also found small holes and a basin indicating a tent may have been set up for purification rituals in front of the Valley Temple, which is connected by a causeway to Chephren's pyramid.

The canal was found accidentally by workers tearing down an outdoor theater built about 30 years ago.

Chephren ruled from 2558 B.C. to 2532 B.C. His pyramid is about 136 yards high. The Valley Temple is located southwest of the Sphinx.

Stark choice faces Quebec as vote nears on split from Canada

By David Crary
Associated Press

MONTREAL — Vive le Quebec. Or save Canada. The choice is stark.

In a referendum Monday that is too close to call, 5 million Quebec voters will decide whether one of the world's richest, most tolerant democracies should be torn in two — with a new, sovereign French-speaking country implanted defiantly in its midst.

Canadians outside Quebec are distraught and baffled at the realization their compatriots might leave. Quebec's nationalists are equally frustrated, saying other Canadians fail to understand their desire for a land where their French heritage can flourish unhindered.

The climatic moment has taken most Canadians by surprise, despite decades of fruitless wrangling over constitutional reforms intended to appease the separatists.

The separatists lost an independence referendum in 1980 by a 60-40 margin. Most Canadians had expected a similar result this time — until recent polls showed that this contest could go either way.

"Within the last week, Canadians woke up and said, 'My God, my country is at stake,'" said David Cameron, a University of Toronto professor.

Canada faces protracted turmoil no matter who wins. The separatists vow to keep pursuing independence even if they lose, while a separatist victory plunges both Quebec and Canada into a great unknown.

The prospect of losing a vast province of 7.3 million people — a quarter of Canada's population — so appalls the federal government that its leaders have refused to say what they would do if the "Yes" side triumphs.

If the separatists win, independence will not come instantly. The separatists have offered to negotiate for up to a year on a new economic and political partnership between Canada and an independent Quebec.

The federal government could try to fight back with a legal challenge or by calling a second referendum, Canada-wide or in Quebec. But separatist leader Lucien Bouchard says any such attempt to thwart the will of Quebec's French-speaking majority would trigger an unprecedented backlash.

"They have no intention of giving up until they get what they want," said Tom Ackerman, a retired Saskatchewan farmer. "And I don't think anybody in this country is willing to give them everything they want."

Many Canadians wonder exactly what it is the Quebeckers want. They already enjoy varying degrees of autonomy in education, immigration and foreign policy, and have laws making French the province's sole official language.

The Quebec nationalists reply in a chant heard in rally after rally: "We want a country." History is alive here: Quebeckers still resent defeats, snubs and repression suffered at the hands of English speakers 200 years ago.

Bouchard has likened sovereignty to a magic wand that would remedy Quebec's problems. The separatists' campaign posters — some with neo-hippy peace signs — echo that theme: "Yes, and it all becomes possible."

But if they get their wish, they could also get some headaches.

"Apart from those who indulge in mental hocus-pocus, we all know that Quebec and the rest of Canada would lose out in the operation," said Prime Minister Jean Chretien, a Quebec native who has led the campaign for unity.

Many economists have forecast a bleak short-term future for a sovereign Quebec, including a budget deficit quintupling to more than $13 billion and the possible exodus of 350,000 non-French speakers.

The pain could spread to the rest of Canada. Some financial experts predict a "Yes" victory would push the Canadian dollar below its all-time low of 69 U.S. cents, reached several years ago. The current rate is 73 cents.

Sporadic violence could break out between French- and English-speakers.

There are also more drastic predictions: that the Maritime provinces — cut off by an independent Quebec from Ontario and western Canada — might petition for admission to the United States, or that the western provinces might be tempted to contemplate their own secession.

If negotiations between Canada and Quebec did get started, they could well be a nasty affair focused on dividing the national debt. Many Canadians would feel bitter toward Quebec, especially after last week's rallies for national unity. Candlelight vigils were planned for Sunday night.

"Thousands of tears will fall if they separate," said Lynn Kerr at a unity rally in Nova Scotia. "It will be devastating."

Bouchard, unimpressed by the rallies, said that if English-speaking Canadians love Quebeckers so much they should be ready to sit down and forge a partnership after a "Yes" vote.

"It's nice that they love us. Now they have to respect us as a people," Bouchard said Friday night.

Out in Alberta, farmer Bert Brown had a message of his own, plowing these French words into his field: "C'est Mieux Ensemble" — It's Better Together.

Mass killings may not have ended with Srebrenica

Stephen Engelberg and Tim Weiner
N.Y. Times News

WASHINGTON — On the afternoon of July 10, soldiers of the Bosnian Serb army began storming Srebrenica, a city of refuge created by the United Nations, where more than 40,000 people sought shelter from war. A U.N. officer in the town hunched over his computer and tapped out a desperate plea to his leaders in Geneva:

"Urgent urgent urgent. BSA is entering the town of Srebrenica. Will someone stop this immediately and save these people. Thousands of them are gathering around the hospital. Please help."

Nobody did. The eastern Bosnian city was overrun, and what followed in the towns and fields around Srebrenica is described by Western officials and human rights groups as the worst war crime in Europe since World War II: the summary killing of perhaps 6,000 people.

As recounted by the few Muslims who survived, the killing was chillingly methodical, part mass slaughter, part blood sport.

The Muslim men were herded by the thousands into trucks, delivered to killing sites near the Drina River, lined up four by four, and shot. One survivor, 17-year-old Nezad Avdic, recalled in an interview last week that as he lay wounded among the dead Muslims, a Serbian soldier surveyed the stony, moonlit field piled with bodies and merrily declared: "That was a good hunt. There were a lot of rabbits here."

Serbian civilians interviewed last week in the villages around Srebrenica confirmed for the first time the mass killings carried out in their midst.

They pointed out the schools that were used as holding pens for the doomed Muslims — including the schoolhouse in Karakaj where young Avdic said he was taken. They reported seeing bodies all along the roads and fields outside Srebrenica. One man said he had been stopped by soldiers who asked for help loading the bodies onto trucks for burial.

A reconstruction of the fall of Srebrenica and the ensuing massacres, based on survivors' accounts, NATO and U.N. documents and interviews in Bosnia, Serbia, Washington and New York, leaves little doubt about what happened. The question of Serbian accountability promises to haunt the Bosnian peace talks that are to begin at an Air Force base in Ohio on Wednesday.

Before the Serbian conquest of Srebrenica, some calls for help were ignored, some rejected. Gen. Bernard Janvier, the U.N. commander for Bosnia, vetoed the air strikes that Dutch peacekeepers in Srebrenica requested to defend the town. U.N. officers said he had little enthusiasm for protecting an enclave widely viewed as an indefensible impediment to ending the war.

After the town was overrun, the Dutch soldiers failed to relay crucial information to the United Nations, including a threat by the Bosnian Serb commander, Gen. Ratko Mladic, to massacre the Muslims.

U.S. officials say they had no warning the town would fall and no way to save its people. After the Serbs swept in, they did little more than urge Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic to restrain the Bosnian Serbs and allow relief supplies to reach Srebrenica.

A U.S. reconnaissance satellite photographed hundreds of Muslim men held in fields at gunpoint on July 13 — evidence of a crime in progress. But those riveting photos, and shots taken by a U-2 spy plane two weeks later of freshly turned earth in the same fields, were first shown to President Clinton's top advisers Aug. 4, long after the victims were dead and buried.

Those advisers said that they had no options short of sending the 82nd Airborne, and that seeing the satellite photos of Muslim men in fields the day they were taken would not have changed their minds.

The deaths of thousands gave life to a moribund diplomacy. The testimony of despairing refuges from the enclave caught Clinton's attention. Pushed by the United States, NATO adopted a more aggressive military stance and staged the most punishing air strikes of the war. A new U.S. peace plan became the basis for a cease-fire and the Ohio talks.

But the mass killings may not have ended with Srebrenica. This month thousands more men and boys captured by the Serbs in and around the town of Banja Luka have disappeared. There is no word yet on their fate.

Law officers worry about three-strike felons fighting back

By Doug Willis
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Two-time loser Joseph Calloway wasn't about to make it three times.

The parolee was recognized recently by San Francisco police, allegedly behind the wheel of a stolen car. Rather than pull over, Calloway roared through a quiet neighborhood, squad cars in pursuit. Calloway crashed the car, shot at police and fled over fences and rooftops.

Calloway escaped, so no one can say if the dangerous chase was prompted by the state's Three Strikes law, which mandates a sentence of 25 years to life for a third felony conviction. He already has more than three strikes, with six past convictions for robberies, one for burglary and one for attempted burglary.

But law officers say such street confrontations are increasingly common, and they fear that a law intended to make California safer has actually made life more dangerous for police and jailers.

"There's a higher escape risk and a higher propensity to resist arrest or assault an officer, because they have less to lose, and everything to gain," Merced County Sheriff Tom Sawyer said.

"They will take their chances on the street rather than give up if they know they are going for the third strike," said Sawyer, head of a law enforcement panel studying the new sentencing law.

Not every officer is convinced. Police Chief Richard Gregson in Manteca, some 50 miles east of San Francisco, said even if the Three Strikes law provokes more suspects to resist arrest, it still makes California safer by taking criminals off the streets.

"With or without Three Strikes, we've always had people who don't want to be taken in by our officers," Gregson said. "That's always a part of the business."

'There's a higher escape risk and a higher propensity to resist arrest or assault an officer, because they have less to lose, and everything to gain.'

— Tom Sawyer
Merced County sheriff

Sawyer, however, insists there's a difference. Now, he says, even suspects arrested for nonviolent crimes must be handled like the most dangerous criminals — just in case. State law holds that something minor like petty theft will be considered a third strike if the thief has two prior felony convictions.

"You get a guy who just stole a pizza," Sawyer said. "You treat him like a petty thief, but he knows he's a three-striker. He's got a different mindset."

Because the law has been in effect only 19 months, statistics are far from conclusive.

Justifiable homicides by officers, considered an indirect measurement of how many suspects opt to shoot it out with police, have declined 9 percent since March 1994, when Three Strikes became law.

Assaults on street cops are up in some areas, down in others. Statewide, assaults on police officers declined by 3.3 percent since enactment of Three Strikes, for an overall decline of 18.6 percent since 1990.

For jailers, however, the picture is grimmer. One study of 18 county jails found that assaults by inmates against jail staff jumped 26.7 percent — from 333 to 422 — in the first nine months after Gov. Pete Wilson signed the law, compared with the same period in 1993.

"There is a feeling that with people facing much longer terms, it is changing behavior in a number of situations," said Thom McConnell, executive officer of the state Board of Corrections.

Sawyer said law officers often have no way to know if they are dealing with a Three Strikes candidate.

"We don't know his record unless the guy is a local and we have local records," Sawyer said. "I probably have a few people who are in my jail right now who are three-strikers, and only they know it."

Fresno police have seen a 48 percent increase in assaults on officers in the last year — from 151 to 224 — including three shootouts with suspects on a single August weekend, Lt. Tom Frost said.

"More people are trying to get away from us because they know the potential penalties will be quite severe," Frost said. "They figure they have nothing to lose, so why not take the cop out?"

Attorney General Dan Lungren, a strong advocate of the Three Strikes law, contends it is too early to identify any significant trends in crime statistics.

"We certainly don't hear that violence is up or that people are trying more to resist officers," Lungren spokesman Matt Ross said. "We hear career criminals are talking about leaving the state. They're afraid of 25 years to life."

Rowdy bus, slow light, speeding train: It was over in seconds

By James Webb
Associated Press

FOX RIVER GROVE, Ill. — Teen-agers were hollering, a radio was blaring and the school bus driver was late when she pulled up to the railroad tracks and looked down the line.

As she crossed the tracks and stopped for a red light, the rear of the bus hanging above the rails, there was no way for the harried driver or the rowdy kids to know that a 620-ton commuter train was speeding toward them at nearly 70 mph.

It was over seconds later. The train, whistle blowing and brakes locked, slammed into the bus, tearing the cabin from the chassis and hurling it on the ground, facing the opposite direction.

Seven teen-agers were dead or fatally injured; more than two dozen others had injuries. The driver "never knew what hit her," one investigator said, and probably couldn't have avoided the train if she'd seen it.

Details pieced together from investigators, eyewitnesses and students on the bus paint a picture of a tragedy that day that was destined to happen — a horrible combination of bad timing, malfunctioning equipment and dangerous design.

At about 6:40 a.m. Wednesday, Charlie Ward pulled his semi-tractor and gravel rig across the double set of railroad tracks on Algonquin Road and inched up to the red light at the intersection with Northwest Highway in downtown Fox River Grove.

In front of him were the four lanes of the highway. Behind him, 46 feet from the lip of the intersection, were the railroad tracks.

Then the crossing bell went off, the red lights flashed and the crossing gates started to drop.

Ward inched his 30-foot rig forward, almost into the steady stream of traffic going by about at 35 mph on the highway, to get as far away from the tracks and the gate as possible. Forget about staying on the stop line — that would leave him in the path of the express train, sticking out 2 1/2 feet from the rail as it blows by.

AP Laserphoto

This is the view along the train tracks in Fox River Grove, Ill., on Friday that school bus driver Patricia Catencamp would see before crossing the tracks and stopping at the traffic light on the other side.

Finally the green light came and he turned, with the train only a few hundred feet away. Too close, as usual, Ward thought.

"I go across there every morning, and it's the same routine. And I kinda watch, because those lights come on and gates come down, and that train is here."

About 30 minutes later, bus driver Patricia Catencamp pulled up to the tracks and prepared to cross over to the spot where Ward had his close call.

Catencamp, a veteran safety official for the Cary-Grove school district's transportation department, was a part-time driver filling in on an unfamiliar route. One of the kids was giving her directions, and she was running late, students said.

But when she got to the tracks, she followed the law — stopping the bus, opening the door, looking and listening for an oncoming train. Nothing.

She crossed the tracks toward the red traffic light and stopped the 38 1/2-foot bus with its nose covering the white stop line. That's a traffic violation, but Catencamp knew she had a long bus.

From where she sat, with the bus slanted down on the slight incline toward the intersection, the rear of the bus may have looked clear of the tracks in the rear view mirror. But the last three feet of the bus were not.

If she looked out her left window, west along the gradually rising tracks, her view was obstructed by trees, parked cars and the railroad station a block away.

The train tripped sensors 3,080 feet from the intersection as it barreled forward, beginning the process that flashes the warning lights and lowers the crossing gate at the intersection. It's also supposed to start the cycle that changes the traffic light to green for vehicles in the crossing area.

There was chaos — normal chaos — as playful 14- and-15-year-olds shouted and gabbed on the bus. A radio was playing. The rail crossing guard hit the back of the bus, and some students thought that was funny. Then they saw the train. Students screamed; at least one ran forward.

She never recognized the students' warnings, never saw or heard the train grinding toward her, Catencamp told investigators. If she had, the red light in front of her meant she would have had to pull into a near-certain collision with other vehicles to avoid the train.

At best, 20 seconds elapsed between the time the train tripped the sensor and it smashed the back three feet of the bus at 7:11 a.m.

"As the train went flying by us you could see the bus bouncing," said Jim Homola, who was sitting in his pickup truck behind the bus and across the tracks.

He ran to the battered cabin of the bus, saw bleeding children lying in the grass, not moving. He saw more bodies in the wreckage and helped kids who could move get off the bus.

One student said the bus driver tried to radio for help after the crash, then opened the still-working-door to let kids off.

"The bus driver came around to the back of the bus and saw the kids and just started screaming 'Oh my God!'" Homola said.

"I saw her face, and she was going 'Oh my God! Oh my God!" and crying."

Shaken base tries to return to its routine

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Still stunned by a sniper's ambush that left one dead and 18 wounded, paratroopers of the Army's 82nd Airborne Division tried to shake off their shock and get back to work Saturday.

Investigators, soldiers and the victims' families wondered how it could have happened.

"My heart goes out to the person because he was obviously distraught," said Diane Badger, whose husband, Maj. Stephen Mark Badger, was killed. "What drives a man to do that? To turn on his fellow man? I don't know ... I can only have compassion for him and hope he gets the help he needs."

The suspect, who was tackled by a group of soldiers exercising nearby, is a member of the unit that was fired on early Friday — the 2nd Brigade Task Force. Late Friday night, Sgt. William J. Kreutzer, 26, was sent to the military jail at Camp Lejeune Marine Base in Jacksonville.

Kreutzer, an infantry squad leader assigned to Company A of the 4th Battalion of the 325th Airborne Infantry Regiment, might not be formally charged for several days, said Maj. Rivers Johnson, the division spokesman.

No information on his military record, including disciplinary problems, has been released.

The gunman opened fire on the 1,300 paratroopers as they set out in the fog and dark on a four-mile run. The sniper hid in a stand of pine trees overlooking the flood-lit exercise field.

As the shots rang out, soldiers dashed for cover and some screamed "Incoming!" as the wounded soldiers fell.

On Saturday, soldiers returned to their routine along Ardennes Street near the site of the attack. Some got their hair cut at the division barber shop and others bought cigarettes and soft drinks at the PX.

A wedding party, including some soldiers in dress blue uniforms, gathered at a nearby chapel. A jogger in red pants ran on the outdoor track where wounded were being tended the day before.

"It still hasn't set in yet," said Sgt. 1st Class Robert Shively, who stopped to look at two bouquets placed on the name plaque of the field. "I can't believe anyone would do it. It shows anybody can go off their rocker."

Shively was running on Ardennes Street and heard shots, but wasn't in the formation on the field Friday.

The tradition of running is basic in the airborne infantry because of the physical conditioning the job requires. Exercise sessions are called PT, for physical training.

"PT is the last place you think you would be fighting for your life," Johnson said. "Division PT time is sacred. The tempo we go at requires it."

Badger, a 36-year-old native of Salt Lake City, had been a captain on the promotion list for major when he was shot in the head, Johnson said. He was promoted after his death.

Mrs. Badger, 49, said she and her husband had been married 2 1/2 years. They met at a Mormon church conference. Between them, they had eight children from previous marriages, aged 8 to 21. His four children live with his ex-wife.

"He's my best friend," Mrs. Badger said. "It's hard to imagine life without my best friend. He was kind and gentle and loving and compassionate. He was a neat man. He was a quiet leader. He really loved his religion."

'My heart goes out to the person (sniper) because he was obviously distraught. What drives a man to do that? To turn on his fellow man? I don't know...I can only have compassion for him and hope he gets the help he needs.

—Diane Badger
wife of man who was killed

Badger's mother, Maurine Badger, said her son's death has been hardest on his wife, whose oldest son was killed a few years ago during a Marine training exercise at Camp Pendleton in Southern California.

"She was almost over her own son when this happened," Maurine Badger told reporters at her home in Salt Lake City. "I feel worse for his wife than anyone else. She had him for such a short time. They were so happy."

At her home in Fayetteville, near Fort Bragg, Mrs. Badger said it was difficult to recall early Friday morning, "kissing him goodbye to go to PT and not knowing it would be the last time."

She said a memorial service probably would be held Monday or Tuesday.

Poll: Powell could jump to lead of GOP race

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Colin Powell entered the Republican presidential race he would cut deeply into Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole's support and could become the immediate front-runner, according to a new national poll.

And if he won the GOP nomination, Powell would be favored over President Clinton by 50 percent of those polled, with 38 percent preferring Clinton, the CBS News-New York Times poll found.

In contrast, Clinton would lead in a two-way race if Dole were his opponent, by 49 percent to 43 percent, the poll indicated.

In a Republican primary race against Dole, the front-runner, and the eight other prominent GOP candidates, Powell would earn 34 percent support to lead the field, the poll said. Dole's support would be cut from 45 percent to 29 percent, placing him second.

Others were far behind in single digits, with or without Powell included in the question.

Powell's lead over Clinton exceeded the poll's overall margin of error of three percentage points. Powell's lead over Dole was less statistically significant because it was within a five-point margin of error for the smaller sampling of GOP primary voters.

Dole would fare better against a challenge from House Speaker Newt Gingrich, the poll found. Against Gingrich, Dole holds a strong lead, with 32 percent support among GOP primary voters, and 10 percent support for Gingrich. Gingrich has not ruled out the possibility of entering the field.

One in four Republican Party voters remained undecided about the current field, and with Powell in the race, 16 percent still said they were undecided.

Powell, a retired Joint Chiefs of Staff chairman, is weighing whether to join the field, and is expected to announce a decision by Thanksgiving.

Confidants he consulted last week were left with the impression that he intends to run. Others said they still believe that after weighing his wife's opposition and other considerations, Powell may well decide against subjecting himself to the risk and scrutiny of an uncertain campaign.

All signs are that if Powell enters the race, he will seek the GOP nomination rather than run as an independent. The poll indicated that in a three-way race, he would tie with Clinton at 32 percent, with 26 percent supporting Dole as the hypothetical Republican nominee.

The telephone poll, conducted Oct. 22-25 among 1,269 randomly selected adults, found Powell's popularity remains high among Democrats, Republicans and independents, with a 66 percent overall favorability rating and 22 percent unfavorable. Self-identified Republicans comprised 418 of the 1,269 people surveyed.

Other Republicans who are well known enough to elicit opinions fare poorly among Democrats and, except for Dole, not as well as Powell among Republicans.

Powell's support of abortion rights has left conservative Republicans divided over his possible candidacy. But among GOP primary voters in the survey, 76 percent said the Republican platform should avoid endorsing a constitutional amendment to outlaw abortion.

With more imports, FDA questions safety of drugs, ingredients from overseas

By Christopher Drew
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — As the American medical system rushes to control costs, imports of discount drugs and their ingredients are rising. And that is causing concern about how well foreign manufacturers meet American standards aimed at preventing toxic contamination and poor quality.

Over the last three years the Food and Drug Administration has doubled the number of its inspections at foreign plants, and it has been rejecting or detaining more products.

In the last year alone, the agency has found serious manufacturing deficiencies, from contaminated water supplies to lax quality controls, in 35 percent of its overseas inspections, in countries as varied as Switzerland and China, compared with 19 percent at domestic plants.

But policing this far-flung trade is daunting, given the barriers of language and distance. Interviews and a review of dozens of FDA documents raise questions about whether the agency, known as a tough regulator at home, will be able to keep defective drugs from slipping through.

Top FDA officials and other drug experts say they are confident that nearly all imported products reaching consumers are safe and effective, and that there is little chance an individual will receive tainted drugs. But concern is rising as pharmaceutical companies, under pressure to help control medical costs, increasingly look to lower-priced suppliers abroad.

And more foreign pharmaceutical companies have begun to sell finished drugs in the huge U.S. market.

The safety concerns are "a legitimate worry," said William F. Haddad, chairman of Mir Pharmaceutical Inc. in Brewster, N.Y., and the head of the international committee of the Generic Pharmaceutical Industry Association. "I'm not so sure FDA has the manpower. The trade is expanding quicker than their ability to respond to it."

Ronald G. Chesemore, the FDA's associate commissioner for regulatory affairs, said top agency officials felt that "we've done a tremendous job of beefing up the foreign inspection program" and that American consumers remained safe.

The agency has increased the number of foreign companies inspected to 325 this year, from 156 in the 1992 fiscal year, and it is training agents better and increasing the length of the inspections, he said.

But James G. Phillips, a former special assistant to FDA Commissioner David Kessler, who examined the program before he left the agency a year ago, said, "This thing is like a ticking time bomb that could explode at any time."

An episode at one Canadian plant illustrates the problems. In 1991, an anonymous warning arrived in the mail at the FDA's headquarters. Neatly typed, it came from a "fed-up employee" at Novopharm Ltd., a Canadian company that makes discount generic drugs.

The letter said raw batches of some of the company's products did not always "work the way they are supposed to."

The tipster also indicated that the company might have shipped bad products to the United States, including batches of a children's antibiotic that were too potent and could possibly destroy bacteria that might help, as well as those that might harm, an ill child.

The letter bounced around the FDA. When it finally sent inspectors to the plant 10 months later, they confirmed that some of the blending processes had once been, to use the words of an FDA memo, "out of control."

Company officials told the FDA that they felt certain they had detained the bad batches at the plant and that no Americans were harmed, but they agreed to quit shipping the antibiotic to the United States temporarily.

THE CONCERNS: Tainted Ingredients And Poor Drugs

As cut-rate suppliers proliferate in less-developed countries like China and India, U.S. drug makers say they have begun receiving — and rejecting — more shipments of powdered chemicals and other ingredients that are contaminated with bacteria or fail other tests.

The FDA has additionally detected an increase in counterfeit drug ingredients — supposedly made at an FDA-certified plant but actually from somewhere else.

What also concerns some people, given the barriers of language and distance, is what the U.S.-based agents might be missing in inspections that usually last just a few days.

A House oversight subcommittee is examining a three-year saga of the FDA's dealings with a plant in a remote part of China that illustrates how hard it can be for the inspectors to get to the bottom of suspicious circumstances.

It also shows how the agency sometimes has to make decisions about letting products — in this case, a key ingredient for some anti-leukemia drugs — into the country on sketchier information than it would have on drugs made in the United States.

In general, the concerns are greater with generic products than with branded drugs, because the largest brand-name companies either make their own ingredients or have locked up some of the most reliable foreign suppliers.

Generic drugs, the heavily discounted copies of brand-name medicines, now account for 40 percent of the prescription drugs sold in the United States, up from 24 percent a decade ago. Though few people realize it, 70 to 80 percent of the key ingredients in American-made generics come from foreign suppliers. So do about 60 percent of the components in brand-name drugs.

Industry officials estimate that a small but growing percentage of finished drugs — possibly 10 to 20 percent — are also being imported.

Dr. Arthur H. Kibbe, chairman of the pharmaceutical sciences department at Wilkes University in Wilkes-Barre Pa., said more serious defects, like deviations in the size of powdered particles or exposure to moisture through manufacturing mistakes, could change the rate at which drugs dissolve in the body.

He said this could cause elderly or other high-risk patients to receive too much or too little of critical medicines like heart and chemotherapy drugs, and could even be fatal.

In one example that has come to light, at least 15 Americans suffered epileptic seizures, and 2 died, in the late 1980's after taking a generic drug intended to prevent seizures.

According to FDA documents, a now-defunct Colorado company that made the drug suspected that defects in an ingredient from Italy made the medication far less potent than it should have been.

Around the same time, more than 30 Americans died and 1,500 were stricken with blood and muscle disorders from chemical contamination in L-tryptophan, a Japanese-made dietary supplement that was used to treat insomnia and was not subject to FDA regulation.

Budget debate: Historic, maybe even meaningful, but far from over

By Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — It was revolutionary. It was historic. It may even wind up making a difference.

Washington thought it felt the ground tremble last week, but couldn't be sure. What House and Senate wrote, in massive bills — 1,754 pages in the House, 1,949 in the Senate — was dramatic, all right, but it was only Act III, Scene I.

Act I got the Republicans in charge of Congress for the first time in 40 years. Act II got their ideas on the table. Act III will get them enacted, or not.

A veto is waiting and that will only clear the stage for negotiations over the ultimate outcome.

Before that, just getting the Republican House and the Republican Senate to agree in coming weeks on a compromise to send to the president will be a struggle. The Senate bill is less sharp-edged.

What happened in the Senate Thursday shows that: While the bill was being debated, a Senate committee held a hearing on one small provision, relieving states of the need to enforce federal standards on nursing homes.

A witness, Gloria Messerley, held up gruesome photographs. They showed bedsores on the body of her mother, who had been sedated and restrained in a nursing home bed.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, blanched. "How is this possible in today's world?" he asked. He took the pictures to show colleagues. Even before he got there, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole had agreed to moderate Republican senators' demand to back off from deregulating the nursing home industry.

So now House and Senate negotiators will have to work out their differences on nursing homes — and hundreds of others, far more substantial.

Even then, President Clinton's veto almost certainly awaits. He has promised one. He says the Republican Congress is going too far in cutting back on social programs.

Vetoing gives him leverage to negotiate a final bill more acceptable to him. Vetoing may be good 1996 politics for him, too, casting him as the defender of traditional Democratic interests — retirees, students, environmentalists, small farmers, the medically indigent.

Republicans knew that, and showed their nervousness. When The New York Times ran a front-page story about a poll on Thursday, saying two-thirds of respondents would rather preserve Medicare than balance the budget, House Speaker Newt Gingrich exploded: "Deliberately rigged questions that are totally phony," he said.

When the newspapers quoted both Dole and Gingrich as expressing antipathy to Medicare — Dole recalling his vote against it in 1965, Gingrich seeming to suggest that he has in mind getting rid of it ("We think it is going to wither on the vine...") — both insisted they had been misinterpreted.

Finally, another set of realities: the 104th Congress cannot bind the 105th or any future session to stay on its "glide path" to a balanced budget in 2002. Nor can Congress legislate the future of the economy, which may have more to say than any law about whether the budget balances.

For all that, revolutionary was not too wild a word to describe what happened. Entitlements, the sacred cows of politics, have been corralled.

And that was too much even for Pat Buchanan. A candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, he ran radio ads in New Hampshire in Iowa that asked, "Before we cut Medicare for senior citizens, why don't we cancel the $50 billion bailout for Mexico?"

Act I got the Republicans in charge of Congress. Act II got their ideas on table. Act III will get them enacted, or not.

Beyond curbing Medicare, "The Seven-Year Balanced Budget Reconciliation Act of 1995" would do much to dismantle government as the country has known it.

The Republican plan — it also could be called the Gingrich plan — would cut taxes for families, individuals, businesses. It would turn Medicaid, health care for the poor, and welfare, over to the states, ending the federal guarantee of basic economic support and health care, two more entitlements.

It would abandon farm programs in place since the 1930s. It would trim civil service pensions and veterans benefits. It would make education loans costlier. It would turn school lunch programs over to the states.

These provisions wrap up a year's worth of "Contract with America" legislation. Gingrich called House approval "the most decisive vote on the direction of government since 1933."

In 1933, in the midst of a Depression, the country abandoned its understanding that the conditions of the citizenry — health, working conditions, housing, old-age security — were of no federal concern.

Now Congress and the country are rethinking those decisions. But the verdict is far away. Call last week a start, not a finish.

Residents fight high water bill

■ City officials determined that incorrect reading was caused by manufacturer's defect in the meter's digital display .

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Greg and Meg Muhlinghause and their two small children live in a three-bedroom home at 1001 Sinclair Ave. They water the lawn and use a reverse osmosis system. Their monthly water bill usually runs around $50 — until recently.

Three weeks ago the couple received a $713 water bill — reflecting 284,000 gallons consumed — for the period between Aug. 15 and Sept. 14. That's enough water to fill about 15 residential-size swimming pools.

Ms. Muhlinghause reported the questionable billing to the city of Midland's customer service department. Instead of the chuckle she expected to hear, Ms. Muhlinghause was told to pay up.

"If they showed it going through our meter, we were wrong and they were right," she said.

After having their meter inspected and several talks with city officials — to no avail — the Muhlinghauses finally proved the city was in error. The couple, using a hose and buckets, measured water and monitored the meter as a city worker observed.

City officials determined the problem was caused by a manufacturer's defect in the meter's digital display.

Normal meters have a fixed "0" at the far right to designate less than 10 gallons. To the left of the static "0" are two black digit displays that indicate tens of gallons and hundreds of gallons. Four white digit displays to the further left measure thousands of gallons, tens of thousands, hundreds of thousands, and single-digit millions.

Meter readers only pay attention to the white displays because the city only charges for water in the thousands of gallons. "You ignore the black ones because those are less than 1,000 gallon increments," Assistant City Manager Rick Menchaca said.

Closer inspection of the Muhlinghauses' meter revealed only one black digit display. As a result, meter

Boo Humbug makes his debut Tuesday when Texas Best presents "A Halloween Carol (or 'Boo Who?')" during its free "Tricks 'n' Treats in the Tall City" family event set for 6-8 p.m. at Centennial Plaza, Loraine Street between Wall Street and Texas Avenue.

"Jimmy Patterson and I had worked together on the idea of expanding 'Summer in the City' to include a safe, family-centered event for children on Halloween," said Linda Bond, coordinator of Texas Best and director of the Arts Assembly of Midland. "And then we decided maybe a play that would appeal to children would be a good thing around which to build the evening."

The one-act play was written by Patterson.

Starring as Boo Humbug is Darrel Ward, known for his villainous portrayal of numerous wrongdoers in Midland's annual Summer Mummers.

"Boo Humbug has some redeeming qualities as opposed to the (Mummers) villain who is truly evil, wicked and nasty," said Ward, an on-air morning

Historic marker commemorates rancher's home

IRAAN — O.W. "Ollie" Parker, who found chasing wild horses and ranching more appealing than farming and working in cotton gins, settled in the plains, plateaus and canyons along the Pecos River early in the 1900s.

"He came out a'horse-trading and catching wild horses, taking them back to San Antonio to sell," said Dickie Dell Ferro, granddaughter of Parker and his wife, Mildred.

Ms. Ferro lives on the old Parker Ranch headquarters site, which is a three-acre oasis of windmills and groves of trees highlighted by the elegance of the Spanish colonial revival-style stucco-tile Parker house.

A Texas Historical Commission marker was dedicated at the headquarters Saturday and she hosted a celebration there.

"This was always home to me," said Ms. Ferro, who lived with her grandparents after her mother was widowed. When she was older, she left to be with her mother, who was a teacher.

"That was my first beginning of living away from home" along the Pecos River, recalled Ms. Ferro, who has long since returned to the ranch following the death of her grandparents.

"He was a big, tall man," Ms. Ferro said. "He had a great sense of fun — sense of humor. He was big, and I could rely on him for anything."

Parker, who was born in 1876 in South Central Texas and was orphaned at age 4, worked on relatives' farms long enough to take a disliking to farming and working in cotton gins.

By the turn of the century, Parker had moved to San Angelo. He got into rounding up horses, serving as wagon boss and making 17-day cattle drives up the Goodnight-Loving Trail from West Texas to the railhead at Portales, N.M.

When he first rode the Pecos River country horseback, Parker said that the "grass was knee-high in some places, and the wild flowers in bloom made the country beautiful," recalled Lynda Haile, Ms. Ferro's cousin.

Parker married Mildred Ellis in Leesville in 1907 and they traveled by train to Comstock and then by stagecoach to Ozona, said Mrs. Haile, who

Volunteers seek to make a difference

Midlanders turned out in force Saturday, carrying out a wide variety of community service projects with one goal in mind — to make a difference.

Saturday was the fifth Make A Difference Day, a national day of community service sponsored by the Points of Light Foundation and USA Weekend. Make a Difference Day is "a national day of doing good," said Pam Brown, Make A Difference Day editor for USA Weekend.

Midland efforts were plentiful and varied for the event, bringing people together from many groups and organizations to complete a multitude of projects. The same could be said for much of the state, Ms. Brown said.

"We've had an amazing response from Texas. There is a lot going on there," Ms. Brown said.

Among the many Midland Make A Difference Day projects was Lamar Elementary's all-out offensive at Garrett-Brown Park.

About 22 students and eight Lamar staff members and their spouses joined to refurbish the park, explained coordinator Ron Moss, a counselor at Lamar.

The park was cleaned of litter and parts of its facilities repainted during the morning hours Saturday. Four trees were planted at the park as well, Moss said.

"We also had our kids deliver cookies to all the neighbors around Lamar," Moss said.

GARY OTT

'Gary story' is appropriate for grandmother's funeral

We buried my grandmother last Tuesday.

Ott

MaMa was a 91-year-old woman who had never been sick a day in her life. Then about a week or so ago she began to feel poorly. So on Saturday she laid down, closed her eyes and went to sleep. For good.

We should all be so lucky.

Indeed, the funeral was more of a celebration than anything else. We laughed. We remembered. We hugged. We even cried a little. But they were happy tears.

After all, MaMa was one of those brutally blunt women who told you exactly what was on her mind. She didn't mince words. If she didn't like the way you were dressed, she told you so. If she thought you had gained a few extra pounds, she told you so. If she was disappointed that you didn't remember her birthday, she told you so.

Actually, that's not quite right. She wouldn't tell YOU. She would tell someone else who would then tell you. That way more family members would know about your particular screw-up, and, as a result, the episode would forever be known in family circles as "a Gary story" or "a Bob story" or "an Angie story."

Then, years later, when everyone gathered, the stories would start to flow and everyone would have a big laugh as we all recalled our past misdeeds, at least misdeeds in the eyes of MaMa.

That's why it was so appropriate that we had one final "Gary story" at MaMa's funeral.

And that last one, if I do say so myself, was a real doozy.

I got lost in the funeral procession as we were going from the church to the cemetery, thus causing the four occupants of my car, all of whom happened to be grandchildren of the deceased, to miss the actual burial.

Impossible, you say?

Think again.

Here's what happened:

The church service, which was simple and quite touching, had concluded and we were all out front "mingling," which, as you probably know, is an integral part of any funeral, particularly one held in the Deep South as this one was. Then, at the gentle but persistent urging of the funeral director, we all got in our cars and headed for the cemetery, which was located on a twisting two-lane rural highway some 20 miles from the church.

The vehicle I was driving was situated somewhere near the middle of the pack.

One by one, the cars took off and headed north, each following the one in front of it.

About five miles later, the car in front of me turned right.

I followed.

Unfortunately, that car was not bound for the cemetery. Its driver had decided to forego the burial service and was headed home to Augusta, Ga. That's why he had turned, with me following, onto the interstate instead of continuing toward the cemetery.

(NOTE: It is an extremely helpless feeling to glance over your left shoulder and see your funeral procession going north while you are heading east on an interstate with no crossover in sight.)

As our view of the procession slowly faded away, we continued east desperately looking for a way to get to the other side of the interstate. There was none.

So I looked at the others, who were not terribly impressed with me OR my driving skills at this point, and said, "Hey, it's not my car. I'm going to give it a try."

Slamming on the brakes, I whipped the steering wheel sharply to the left, gave it the gas and attempted to bump our away through a deep grassy ditch that stood between us and the westbound lane.

After much wheezing and spinning of tires, we made it.

There were cheers all around.

"Which way?" I yelled to the others.

Silence.

It was at this point that we came to the unfortunate realization that none of us knew where the cemetery was located.

"We're actually going to miss the burial," my oldest sister said. "And, we're the GRANDKIDS. We're suppose to be on the FRONT row."

I could feel three sets of eyes burning a hole in the back of my head.

"Look," I said. "They're probably only going 45 mph. Maybe we can catch them before they turn off the main road."

"Yeah, right," someone said.

"We have no choice," I replied.

So doing my ultimate "Smoky and the Bandit" imitation, I put the pedal to the metal and did some serious hauling. Taking curves at 80 mph, we did our best to locate the others.

No luck.

"We're actually going to miss the burial," my oldest sister repeated for the 45th time.

And the hole in the back of my head kept getting larger and larger.

As we approached the tiny town of Appling, Ga., someone spotted a police car in front of the courthouse. "Run in there and ask someone how to get there," my middle sister shouted.

Forty-five seconds later, armed with directions, we were making a U-turn, hoping against hope that we just might have enough time to make it.

"We go through the first intersection and then take a left at the second one," our messenger said.

"No problem," I replied, watching the speedometer zip past the 75 mph mark.

Ten minutes later, a voice from the backseat said, "I think we should have turned at that last intersection."

"No, that was just the first one."

"No," the backseat voice countered. "I think we were suppose to count that intersection we passed when we first left the city limits."

"I don't think so."

"Well, I do," the backseat voice said. "We're obviously going the wrong way now."

"How do you know?"

"I just do. It doesn't take a brain surgeon to figure it out."

"We're actually going to miss the burial," my oldest sister said for the 75th time, as the hole in the back of my head grew another inch or two.

"Look!" my youngest cousin exclaimed. "There's a man in that front yard over there. Ask him!"

We whipped into his gravel driveway and skidded to a halt inches from where he stood.

"Do you know how to get to Shiloah Methodist Church?" I shouted out the window.

He was what you would call a slow-talking southern gentleman. "Yeeeaaah," he drawled, while hitching up his trousers. "What yooooou doooo, is taaake a leeeft up theeeere at thaaaat roooad ..."

"Look," I said. "We're late for a funeral. You want to speed this up a little?"

He didn't, but eventually we got the information we needed.

And off we went again.

"I told you we weren't supposed to count that first intersection," my middle sister crowed.

Finally we spotted the church cemetery.

Making the turn on two tires, we roared to a halt, hopped out of the car and made a mad dash to where the others were gathered. As we approached, all heads were bowed and all eyes were closed as the preacher recited the final line of the Lord's Prayer.

"Amen," he said.

"Amen," the mourners said.

And with that, the service ended.

Then all eyes turned to me.

"MaMa," I said, looking to heaven. "This final 'Gary story' was just for you. May you rest in peace."

Amen.

Awareness week counterattacks harmful effects of pornography

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Pornography that invades "the sanctity of American homes" is being counterattacked through Pornography Awareness Week, which begins today.

"This is not victimless, because, in fact, the availability of it for susceptible minds has, indeed, caused violence," said the Rev. Nicholas Marziani, associate rector of Saint Nicholas' Episcopal Church.

Marziani is committed to increasing the awareness of pornography and its guileful nature that harms morals, attitudes, and lives.

"The insidiousness of it — although it may not seem in a particular instance to be causing a direct incident of violence — is that (pornography) lowers our threshold for what we understand to be right, good, decent, and reasonable," Marziani said.

"It affects the sense of our respect for human beings, for ourselves, for our families, and just for human sexuality in general."

Midland Mayor Bobby Burns recently acknowledged "Pornography Awareness Week" by signing a proclamation warning of pornography's growing tentacles through the airwaves, telephone lines and on film and videotape.

"In this era of escalating violence, pornography features and promotes sadomasochism, rape and incest, and children are increasingly sexually molesting other children in imitation of what they've seen," Burns said.

Burns noted the necessity of honoring state and federal anti-obscenity laws that are designed to "protect public safety, public morality, and public health."

"It's important for us as a people to return to the morals, values and ethics of our grandparents' generation," Burns said. "It's important to understand that pornography is out there and to not accept it and to put it in its place and for our community to say that's not what we want in our city."

For people who recognize their addiction to pornography and who want to control their prurient interests, Marziani said that the American Family Association operates a pornography hotline for people who want "to break free" of the addiction.

The Pornography Addiction HelpLine is 1-601-844-5036.

The heightening of pornography's influence is "to simply get people's awareness up in that there is a problem and people don't have to be stuck in that problem," Marziani said.

SERVICE: Community volunteers make a difference

(From 1B)

"It was just to thank them for being good neighbors of the school," he said.

Also, a canned food drive by the students at Lamar concluded Saturday. More than two cans per student were collected. "That was real successful too," Moss said.

Another project by the Big Tootsie Tennis Club expanded on a previous effort to keep Midland College tennis courts in playable condition.

Because the ground is shifting beneath some of these courts, large cracks have appeared.

To extend the life of these courts, Big Tootsies have organized patching projects that bring together the by-products of burrowing ants and prairie dogs and the muscle power of kids in the organization, according to organizer Bob Cornell.

The fine sand and dirt from prairie dog mounds and ant hills is collected and packed into cracks in the tennis courts. "After depositing the free materials into the cracks, a latex composition fills the cracks, hardens overnight and is painted," Cornell said.

At the Boy's & Girl's Club of Midland, a host of young people had a sleep-over at the club late Friday. When the sun came up Saturday, the youth went to work on "all sorts of projects," Ms. Brown said.

At Community & Senior Services of Midland, another group of people gathered to carry out helpful projects at the homes of the city's elderly.

Several different organizations joined hands at Casa de Amigo and left in organized squads to clean the homes of many of the city's elderly or handicapped residents.

The Greenwood National Honor Society sponsored a very successful blood drive at the Greenwood High School, according to a spokesman for the Permian Basin Regional Blood Center.

There are probably more Midland programs that are buried in the mass of applications in Washington, D.C., Ms. Brown said.

National organizers of Make A Difference Day will be reviewing all of the applications to determine which will be awarded prizes.

This year's effort nationwide is expected to surpass last year's 560,000 active participants, Ms. Brown said.

Center to offer workshop series on parent-teen relationships

From Staff Reports

Surviving their teen-agers can be one of the toughest challenges for a parent. A series of workshops addressing problems between parents and their teens is being offered in November by Centers for Children and Families.

"Skills for Parents and Teens" will discuss teen-agers' emotional needs and provide practical ways in which parents can combat peer pressure, resolve conflict and establish communication and negotiations with their teens.

The workshops will be held from 7-9 p.m. on Nov. 7, 14, 21 and 28 at Centers for Children and Families, 1031 Andrews Highway, Suite 200. Fee is based on a graduated scheduled determined by a participant's ability to pay, with a maximum charge being $10 per session.

"Teen-agers are the hardest age for parents to handle because teens have a desire to be independent, but they don't have the life skills and resources fully developed to manage well on their own," said Debbie Lindsay, parent education manager at the centers.

"If teen-agers don't feel a sense of belonging at home, they will go and get it anywhere they can. This often is the underlying cause for teen violence and teen pregnancy that are on the rise today," she added.

Parents will learn about level communication, a technique designed to help them communicate on an equal basis with their teens instead of talking down to them. "This is really important because teens need to feel respected. Even if a parent does not agree with the teen, the young adult needs to have their feelings and thoughts acknowledged and considered," Mrs. Lindsay said.

It is not necessary to attend all four sessions, she added.

For additional information, call Mrs. Lindsay at 699-4262.

WATER: Couple battles city to correct meter reading, large bill readers mistook the far right white display as measurement of thousands of gallons used when in reality it indicated hundreds of gallons used.

"It's a fluke. It's the only one in our warehouse, the only one in the field," Menchaca said.

City employees traced the whereabouts of a recent batch of 80 residential meters purchased from the Badger meter company, Menchaca said. No others exhibited the wrong display coloration, he said.

The city has since notified the manufacturer and adjusted the Muhlinghauses' bill.

Meanwhile, Ms. Muhlinghause feels the city shouldn't be so quick to lay blame on customers. "They don't listen to what you have to say," she said.

Although the situation has been rectified, Ms. Muhlinghause said she remains concerned about the accuracy of other meters, and insulted by the rudeness and lack of apology from customer service representatives.

Ms. Muhlinghause said city officials insisted — after the meter was inspected — that the reading was accurate. And after a meter reader supervisor said there didn't appear to be a water leak at the Muhlinghauses' home, other city officials blamed the high water bill to a continually running reverse osmosis system, Ms. Muhlinghause said.

Menchaca said the meter did pass a performance test and there have been occasions where unseen leaks with sprinkler and reverse osmosis systems resulted in high bills.

When the Muhlinghauses monitored their meter with and without the reverse osmosis system there was no significant difference. "We were using normal water consumption," Ms. Muhlinghause said.

The Muhlinghauses reported their findings to the city. They were told the meter was not being read properly, Ms. Muhlinghause said.

The couple then decided to measure gallons by filling buckets and seeing if the meter reflected water flow. It did.

A meter reader supervisor took note when the demonstration was repeated for him.

City officials admitted that a "flow check" performed earlier by the city — which essentially does the same as the Muhlinghauses' bucket test — should have revealed the problem.

Although the situation has been rectified, Ms. Muhlinghause said she remains concerned about the accuracy of other meters, and insulted by the rudeness and lack of apology from customer service representatives.

"My husband and I were made to feel like we were stupid," Ms. Muhlinghause said. "They have put themselves in the position of demigods. They have the water switch and can turn you on and off. And everyone needs water."

City officials said they have safeguards in place for misreadings. For example, a reading entered into a hand-held electronic device will not be accepted on first try if a high/low variance more than 70 percent from previous readings is found.

To maintain the city's 30,000-plus mechanical water meters, about 4,300 are replaced yearly in keeping with a seven-year (or 2 million gallons) replacement cycle.

"It is unfortunate the Muhlinghauses' experienced this," Menchaca said. "We'll be reviewing our policy and procedures on high/low variances by seeking a partnership with our customers in finding solutions to high consumption water bills."

"We take customer complaints very seriously and will do our very best to resolve the concern," he said.

Parks service names historian to Trans-Pecos area

ALPINE — Neil Mangum, 47, has recently been named Trans-Pecos Historian at Fort Davis National Historic Site.

He will work on history-related projects for six national parks in the Trans-Pecos region — Fort Davis, Big Bend, Amistad, Chamizal, Guadalupe Mountains and Carlsbad Caverns. His office will be at Sul Ross State University.

Mangum has been historian with the National Park Service for more than 26 years. Before arriving at Fort Davis, he served for six years as the regional historian at the National Park Service's Southwest Regional Office in Santa Fe.

He was chief historian at Custer Battlefield National Monument, now Little Bighorn Battlefield National Monument from 1979 to 1988. He also served as historian at Ozark National Scenic Riverways in Missouri, De Soto National Memorial in Florida and park historian at Petersburg National Battlefields in Virginia.

Mangum is the regional coordinator for the American Battlefield Protection Program, a park service undertaking designed to identify the nation's historically significant battlefields, determine their relative importance and condition and assess threats to their integrity and recommend alternatives for preserving and interpreting them.

He is working on preserving Civil War, Indian War, and Mexican-American War battlefields in Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas, and New Mexico.

Mangum is the author of more than 20 articles on the Civil War and Indian Wars and has written a book on the Sioux War of 1876-1877, "Battle of the Rosebud: Prelude to the Little Bighorn." He is the former editor of Greasy Grass, an annual publication for the Custer Battlefield Historical & Museum Association.

Neil and his wife, Debbie, and their two daughters, Sarah and Libbie, will live in Alpine.

Eagle Scout receives award at Court of Honor ceremony

From Staff Reports

David Lanham, son of Bob and Nancy Lanham and a member of Troop 80, received his Eagle Scout award at an Eagle Scout Court of Honor ceremony Saturday at St. Stephens Catholic Church.

Lanham

He began scouting as a Tiger Cub in September 1986 and worked his way up the from Bobcat, to Wolf, to Bear. He earned two Gold Arrow points and 18 Silver Arrow points. As a Webelo Scout, he earned 20 activity pins and then received his Arrow of Light in May 1990.

He entered Boy Scouts and made his way through the ranks of Scout, Tenderfoot, Second Class, First Class, and Star Scout. He was elected to the Order of the Arrow in January 1993 and progressed from Star Scout to Life Scout to Eagle Scout on Sept. 5.

Lanham attended campouts at Buffalo Trail Scout Ranch in the Fort Davis Mountains, Hughes Aquatic Base at Colorado City Lake and Camp Wehinahape in New Mexico. He attended the National Jamboree in 1993 at Washington, D.C., and Fort A.P. Hill W. Va.

He served as a merit badge counselor for Trail to Eagle and Lifesaving at Hughes Aquatic Base. He attended Philmont Scout Ranch in northern N.M., and Florida Sea Base in the Florida Keys.

He has held the positions of assistant patrol leader, patrol leader, scribe, troop guide, quartermaster, assistant senior patrol leader and senior patrol leader. He has earned 35 merit badges, 12 of which are required for Eagle.

His Eagle project was to re-roof, paint and install new facet boards for a house in the Christmas in April program.

He is a sophomore at Lee High School and was a member of the National Junior Honor Society, Texas Scholar, serves on Teen Court, Youth in Government and active in his Church youth group.

MARKER: Ranchers' home is striking in desert lives in San Antonio.

"They traveled by buggy and by foot, as there was no buggy road off the mountain rim along the Pecos Valley," said Mrs. Haile, who affectionately called her grandparents "Big Daddy" and "Mom."

Her grandmother once wrote that she didn't "expect to ever get out of those canyons unless the 'aeroplanes' should come there," Mrs. Haile told about 150 Parker relatives and guests at the dedication of the historical marker.

The Parkers raised four children: Colton Sidney Parker, Oliver Wendell Parker II, Meda Parker and Vera Dell Parker.

Following the discovery of the Yates Oil Field in Pecos County in the mid-1920s and the subsequent development of the Iraan township near the Pecos River, Parker and his wife had a home built on the east side of the Pecos River in Crockett County.

Their 28-section ranch was out of range of the prolific oil field. Their brand was the "T4."

'The house could be easily found in a nice, older neighborhood in San Antonio or maybe in California. However, for the rural area of Crockett County, this Spanish colonial revival-style home is unique and striking against the desert scenery.'

— Lynda Haile of San Antonio

"The house could be easily found in a nice, older neighborhood in San Antonio or maybe in California," said Mrs. Haile. "However, for the rural area of Crockett County, this Spanish colonial revival-style home is unique and striking against the desert scenery."

While ranching, Parker also served as a director and then president of the First State Bank of Rankin. He died at age 86 in 1962. His wife, who was an avid gardener, died at age 85 in 1970.

Jack Parker said that his grandfather was "fairly strict. He expected you to work hard. He had a good sense of humor."

His grandmother "used to get all 10 of us (grandchildren) out here and take care of us," recalled Parker, who lives in Rankin.

Geniece Childress, a Pecos River-country rancher who is chairman of the Crockett County Historical Committee and director of the Crockett County Museum in Ozona, said O.W. and Mildred Parker had "fortitude, ... tenacity, and lastly, they had faith in the future."

Cousins Dickie Dell Ferro, left, of Iraan and Lynda Haile of San Antonio, embrace at their grandparents' historic Crockett County ranch, the headquarters of which received a Texas Historical Commission marker Saturday.

Execution date to be postponed, state judge says

LONGVIEW (AP) — A December execution set for one of East Texas' most notorious criminals likely will be postponed by federal appeals, according to the state judge who set the date.

Jerry Walter "Animal" McFadden, 47, was convicted in the beating death of 18-year-old Suzanne Denise Harrison, one of three young Hawkins residents found dead in May 1986 in Upshur County.

State District Judge Lauren Parish on Thursday set McFadden's execution date for Dec. 15, but added his appeals options will probably delay the sentence from being carried out.

Ms. Harrison had last been seen near Lake Hawkins the day before she was discovered near Gilmer on May 5, 1986.

Police continue search for suspects involved in couple's abduction, assault

DALLAS (AP) — Police continued to hunt Saturday for three men responsible for a brutal attack in which a couple were abducted and robbed and the bound man helplessly watched as his wife was repeatedly raped.

Authorities were tight-lipped about their two-day-old investigation, but said there had been no arrests.

"We've got a lot of people saying they've seen suspicious people, but that's about it," Dallas police detective J.E. Tremain said.

The 3 1/2-hour ordeal began Thursday night as the couple entered their rear-entry garage and ended in a Collin County field where the assailants dumped the nude victims, police said.

'I can't remember the last time we had a case like this. This is very, very serious.'
— Lt. David Goelden of the Dallas Police sexual assault unit

"I can't remember the last time we had a case like this," said Lt. David Goelden of the sexual assault unit. "This is very, very serious."

Police spokesman Sgt. Jim Chandler called the rape "extremely brutal," saying the trio assaulted the 30-year-old woman in front of her 34-year-old husband.

"Her husband was there, but he was bound and couldn't do anything," Chandler said.

The couple had just entered the garage around 8:30 p.m. when they were confronted by the three gunmen wearing ski masks, police said.

Investigators believe the attack could be related to others in which people returning home were attacked and robbed. However, in the other three incidents this month, none of the victims was abducted or sexually attacked, although one was shot.

"There are some similarities in suspect description, weapons and a few other things," Chandler said. "We're looking into the possibility that the same suspects are involved."

In the latest attack, the assailants seized the man's wallet and the woman's purse, took their automated bank machine cards and demanded the code numbers. The couple were then bound with duct tape and thrown into the trunk of a car, which the suspects drove to three ATM locations and apparently withdrew money, police said.

After the couple were driven to a remote field and ordered to take off their clothes, the three gunmen took turns beating and sexually assaulting the woman, police said.

Afterward, the man and woman were put back into the trunk and driven to Lake Lavon, where they were dumped on a road just east of the town of Lucas.

The couple managed to walk to a nearby house and called the Collin County Sheriff's Department about 11:30 p.m.

Schepps Dairies has offered a $10,000 reward for information leading to arrests and indictments in the case.

Chem-Dry® Of Midland

Chem-Dry® Of Midland is proud to offer a new concept in carpet cleaning to residential and commercial customers throughout the area. They are your local authorized franchise for Chem-Dry®, known worldwide for their unique carpet cleaning and stain removal system.

Chem-Dry® employs a patented carbonated cleaning solution that penetrates carpet fibers, literally bubbling dirt to the surface for easy extraction. This solution removes soaps, detergents, petroleum cleaners and other sticky chemicals from your carpets. Since this method reaches the deepest ground-in soil and dirt, carpets cleaned the Chem-Dry® way will stay cleaner and fresher longer. With Chem-Dry®, your carpet will be clean, dry and traffic-ready within one hour. Chem-Dry® is non-toxic, it's baby and allergy safe and won't leave unwanted, sticky dirt attracting more residues or chemicals. Be sure to ask about Red-Alert. This exclusive stain and spot remover can lift even the toughest stains. Other services available include paint, gum, wax, hair and tar removal as well as CCP for soap residues and P.U.R.T. for pet urine removal.

Conventional carpet shampoos leave soapy residue that actually attracts soil. Steam cleaning introduces large amounts of water into carpet, dries slowly, and can result in decay of carpet fibers and floor surfaces. Chem-Dry® is Dupont approved so it's easy to see why it has become the method of choice for value-conscious consumers. For your best value in carpet cleaning and preservation, you can do no better than to call Chem-Dry® Of Midland. They can be reached by dialing 699-3037. Your satisfaction is always their first concern.

personality and general sales manager at K-LITE-FM, and a member of the Storm Tracker Team at NewsWest 9. "It's kind of refreshing not to get run over by a train or shot at the end."

Unlike the villains Ward normally portrays, Boo Humbug experiences a change of heart, just as his genesis character, Scrooge, does in Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol." It is upon Dickens' poignant story that Patterson based his short comedy.

"It's fun to get to do something with a little more dimension to it," Ward said. "Boo Humbug started out as a jolly sort who liked to have fun on Halloween and give candy to the kids.

"Later on in life, he became a stingy, mean old man. But, as in 'Christmas Carol,' he's shown the error of his ways by the ghosts of Halloween past, present and future, and finds it in himself to become once again the generous, happy fellow that's willing to give the candy to the kids and give them some fun on Halloween, like when he was younger."

Unlike the villains Ward normally portrays, Boo Humbug experiences a change of heart, just as his genesis character, Scrooge, does in Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol.".

Susan Sexton, an account executive at K-LITE, plays the Ghost of Halloween Past. "I'm real glad to be a part of it because I've got kids, and it is a safe way for them to enjoy Halloween."

The performance marks Ms. Sexton's first since the third grade when she played a handicapped girl in a school production. "I'm really looking forward to it. There's not much pressure. It's a real good cast. With Darrel Ward leading it, it can't mess up."

Attorney Mary Lou Cassidy, of Stagnasia fame, who has long been a favorite of Midland Community Theatre audiences, plays the Ghost of Halloween Future.

"I was recruited to do Stagnasia as a character in my previous life TV personality, but Stagnasia has permanently retired," Ms. Cassidy said of her role in "A Halloween Carol." "We are using the Summer Mummers character that I use in the olio, and I take pride in the fact that it is my character that finally scares Boo Humbug into reforming."

Others in the cast are Mary Ann Smith as the narrator and Diane Faulkner and Kim Young as the Ghosts of Halloween Present.

Also in the production are four Pickwick Players, MCT's youth performing troupe. Special appearances will be made by dancers from the Cherry Jones Studio, La Petite and Studio One as well as the Rusk Elementary School Honor Choir. Stage manager for the play, which will be presented at 6:30 and 7:30 p.m., is Diane Adkins.

Candy and other treats will be given away by such friendly Midland mascots as Juice the Moose. Local high school and freshman school, TU Electric, Chic-Fil-A and McGruff the Crime Dog mascots will also be on hand. Oops Alley Clowns will also help distribute candy and spread Halloween cheer.

Horses and carts will be furnished by Clawson Pipkin, who will give rides on Loraine and Texas streets, which will be closed for the event, sponsored by Western National Bank, the Reporter-Telegram, Walgreens, KWES-TV and KGEE-FM.

Fun, free fortunes will be told by gypsies. Desserts and coffee, as well as sandwiches, hotdogs and "Monster Mash Punch" will be available for purchase at Sonny's in the Park.

The event, which will be emceed by Mike Lawrence and Dana Carroll of KGEE-FM, also includes a costume contest. Children 13 and under are eligible to win the grand prize of admission tickets to Six Flags. Local media members will judge the contest.

"'Summer in the City' was such a success that some of the volunteers pitched in to create this autumn event," said Ms. Bond, who gave credit to Sue Buck, Karen Patterson, Donna Northcutt, Linda Jost, Lori Rice, Mary Hardin, Pam Allen, Jami Owen, Geri Ann Green, Sharon Hollis and Denisa Marston. "What they have come up with meets our criteria perfectly. It's free. It's fun. And there's something for the young-at-heart regardless of their age."

Nationwide hunt for double-murder suspect ends in Corpus Christi

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A nationwide search for a man accused of shooting his sister-in-law's family in Montana, killing two people, ended Saturday when he was arrested near a Corpus Christi beach, authorities said.

Carl Sidney Race, 49, of Woodland, Wash., was taken into custody without incident at about 4 a.m., said Corpus Christi police Capt. Gene Frobish.

Race was the subject of an FBI manhunt after the Oct. 21 shooting deaths of Rita Wyman, 55, and her son, Paul Wyman, 28, at the family home northeast of Miles City in eastern Montana.

Ms. Wyman's husband, Claude, and another son, Jeff Wyman, 32, also were shot. Race, who apparently blamed the family for the breakup of his marriage, is accused of pouring kerosene over the four bodies and setting the house on fire.

Claude and Jeff Wyman survived the attack but were listed in critical condition with gunshot wounds and burns. Custer County sheriff's officials have kept their whereabouts secret to protect them.

Authorities had thought Race might be on his way to Battle Ground, Wash., where his estranged wife, Nancy, lives. Police in Michigan, where Race once listed an address, also were alerted.

Frobish said Corpus Christi police received word from the FBI late Friday that Race could be in the area, driving a 1978 Buick with Washington license plates.

The FBI bulletin described Race as armed and dangerous and "maybe in possession of dynamite," Frobish said.

A Nueces County sheriff's deputy spotted the vehicle and a man matching Race's description along a Padre Island beach before dawn Saturday. Police, including SWAT teams, and FBI agents decided to wait until daybreak to make the arrest.

Shortly before 4 a.m. CDT, Race left the beach and attempted to get on State Highway 361.

"He was surprised to see all the units, so he got out of the (car) without any fight and was arrested without any further incident," Frobish said.

Race was being held in the Nueces County Jail on Saturday.

He is charged in Montana with two counts of murder, two counts of attempted murder and one count of arson.

Nancy Race filed for a legal separation from her husband in January, according to court records in Washington state. She also asked the court for a restraining order, alleging Race had physically abused her.

Promise Keepers celebrate Christ

IRVING (AP) — Tens of thousands of men descended on Texas Stadium this weekend, not to cheer on the Dallas Cowboys but to celebrate Jesus Christ.

"We Love Jesus, Yes We Do," chanted the Christian men who call themselves the Promise Keepers.

During the emotional two-day gathering, scheduled to end Saturday, men sang, prayed and committed themselves to practice their Christian faith at home, in the workplace and in the community.

Almost 60,000 men took part in the event Friday, each paying $55 to attend the rally, officials said.

"I found it real encouraging that so many men have come together to profess the Lord as their savior," Steve Luchye of Topeka, Kan., told Dallas television station KDFW. "I think sometimes men hold back and don't want to say where they stand."

"It's real encouraging to see 60,000, 70,000 men that are willing to stand up and make a difference," Luchye said Saturday.

Randy Phillips, president of the Denver-based organization, said he understands why so many men gathered.

"This is not caused by some corporate mid-life crisis among men," Phillips is quoted as saying in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "It's caused by the heart of God. It's a miracle."

Although major efforts have been made to bring all ethnic groups into the movement, the Promise Keepers crowd was mostly white.

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARIES

By Sandra Wegner

Librarians call it "dial up access." It means if you have a computer with a modem and communications software, you can view the on-line computer catalogs of the Midland County Public and Midland College Libraries from your home, school or business.

The telephone number is 688-8900. The settings for your communications software are baud rate of 2400 or higher; data bits at 7; stop bits at 1; parity at even; and emulation at VT100.

After the County Cat screen comes up on your computer, your next choice will be whether to view the county libraries (branch and main libraries combined) or the college library catalog. Make your selection with the proper number. Follow the on-screen instructions to view the catalog and log off later as your software indicates.

For more information, pick up the County Cat flyers at the downtown or Centennial Branch Library at Midland Park Mall.

To verify the presence of a book or item on the shelf at the libraries, please call 688-8991 for the main library and 697-8113 for the branch.

The staff is excited about this latest service to the public. We hope individuals, schools and businesses will take advantage of this convenience.

The cataloging staff has been working since 1991 to enter a computer catalog record for every item in the collection. There are still some genealogy and petroleum materials that were acquired before 1981 that are not yet listed on the database. Patrons may call the library at the above number and ask for Special Collections staff to check on those materials.

It's a little celebration for a little library, but sincerely made. Centennial Branch Library located in the Midland Park Mall will officially celebrate its 10th year of operation on Nov. 9. Centennial Branch Library serves its purpose well: to be a source of children's books and popular adult fiction and non-fiction materials. Its users are loyal and very appreciative of the service given by the branch library's staff.

In the past year, books on tape and magazine references on CD-ROM have been added to the library's services.

George Webster, the branch director, says they will be serving cookies and punch to celebrate. Every 10 years, one gets to ignore that "no food, no drink in the library rule." Patrons are invited to join the celebration.

The Friends of the Library Used Book Sale and the Midland Genealogical Society Trash to Treasures sale this month were record-breaking successes.

The Friends took in more than $32,000 in sales and the society made more than $2,300. The Friends' total is more than $3,600 over last year. Both of these sales benefit the Midland County Public Libraries. The society buys genealogical materials for the Redfern Research Center and Friends' money buys a wide variety of items from children's publicity materials to computer hardware.

Sales like this don't happen easily, no matter how well organized. It takes lots of good publicity, people willing to donate items for sale and people to buy. Mostly it takes lots of work. Fran Harrington, Friends' board secretary, told me that more than 3,000 volunteer hours were logged over the past year to make this sale possible.

Congratulations to Kari Wilson on her first year as sale manager.

The Arts Assembly of Midland has granted $1,500 to the library for its art print collection during the year of 1996. This and past grants have helped enhance the library decor and allowed the library to make additions to our circulating collection, plus the replacement of out-of-date and damaged art prints.

If you haven't checked out an art print to enjoy at home or work, there is no charge, and you may admire the art for two months.

The library also appreciates the opportunity provided by the Arts Assembly to honor member organizations' outstanding volunteers of the year. Ed Gorence received the library award for 1995. He faithfully arranges all those magazines that the public donates and buys in the main library entrance.

The Children's Department will have craft time 2:30 p.m. Saturday. Boys and girls, ages 6 and older, get to make "Fantastic Funny Faces." Craft times are always free of charge on a first-come, first-served basis.

The main library has made several additions to its collection of the writings of J. Evetts Haley, Jr., the late, well-known author. Included in the new acquisitions are "Rough Times-Tough Fiber," "The Alamo Mission Bell" and "A Cowboy Memoir of When School Was Out." Haley edited with notes and wrote a historical introduction for the "Diary of Michael Erskine." "What a World of Wonder" is a collection of essays compiled and edited by Haley. All of these and books already in the collection may be enjoyed in the main library.

Why Replace Your Air Conditioner Now When Summer Is Over?

Dear homeowner, who needs a quality air conditioner...and wants as little as possible for it?

Is you air conditioner more than twelve years old? Is your air conditioner in need of repairs or on it's last leg? Are the recent increases in your utility bills eating you alive? If you answered YES to any of these questions, this may be the most important money saving news you'll get in 1995.

It's true, I'm creating a program in the Permian Basin Area you can't afford to pass up.

YOU SAVE 3 WAYS...

What if you could own a new air conditioner which would (1) provide you with trouble-free comfort for years to come, (2) lower your utility bills at least 36% guaranteed and (3) you wouldn't have to make a payment until next Spring! You'd want to know about it, wouldn't you?

READ ON - HERE'S MORE GOOD NEWS

My program will even do more for you. How? Well, next year when you might have to replace you old inefficient air conditioner or want it repaired, it will cost you 1996 prices (which will probably be higher). With my plan, you will be getting a brand new air conditioner now at a discount, and you can have it installed at your convenience, plus, I won't start your warranties until next March 1, 1996.

LIMITED SUPPLY - ACT NOW

I'll probably sell out by the first of November, so call Carol, my assistant now at 561-9440 for a no obligation appointment to hear the details of my plan. The only risk you have is waiting too long.

Sincerely

Memories inspire Pulitzer Prize-winning Texan

By Fritz Lanham
Houston Chronicle

WHARTON — Horton Foote directs his visitor to a book high on a shelf in his study.

"I think this pretty much sums up what I'm trying to tell you," he says as the book is retrieved and put in his hands.

He's been talking about how, as a boy, he absorbed the stories told by his elders and how those stories percolated through his mind and memory and gave him the material he's been transmuting into art for 55 years.

The book is Elizabeth Bishop's "Collected Poems." In his soft, Southern accent, the 79-year-old playwright begins to read from "The Moose," from a passage in which the narrator, on a long-distance bus trip, overhears two old people sitting in the back, talking quietly:

... uninterruptedly
talking, in Eternity:
names being mentioned,
things cleared up finally;
what he said, what she said,
who got pensioned:
deaths, deaths and sicknesses;
the year he remarried;
the year (something) happened.
She died in childbirth.
That was the son lost
when the schooner foundered.

Foote reads in a practiced voice, hitting the cadences exactly right, evoking the crystalline clarity of Bishop's verse. It's the voice of an actor, a man of the stage.

He took to drink. Yes.
She went to the bad.
When Amos began to pray even in the store and finally the family had to put him away.
He closes the book.

"They never hid anything from me," he says, of his elders. "That was another extraordinary thing. They never said leave the room. They never shielded me from things they didn't think a child should hear.

"So I got educated early."

Outside, the summer day is overcast and muggy, but Foote's study is dark and cool. The rectangular room is actually the enclosed back porch of the 78-year-old Foote family home in Wharton, a Gulf Coast farm town 60 miles southwest of Houston, off U.S. 59. The playwright was raised in this large two-bedroom wood-frame house — he was 1 when his parents moved in.

As a young man he wrote his first full-length play in the living room. In the back yard of the house next door stands a 300-year-old pecan tree whose branches he scrambled over as a boy. These days he spends about six months of the year in Wharton, living the rest of the time in a Greenwich Village apartment.

The study is furnished simply. At one end is a large wooden desk where he often writes. On the wall are books — poetry on the left, plays on the right. Two vinyl-covered stuffed chairs fill the other end of the room, and it is here Foote sits today, talking about his life and long career. In a corner, next to the window, stand his two Oscars, both for best screenplay: "To Kill a Mockingbird" (1962) and "Tender Mercies" (1983).

Foote is affable but with a reservoir of polite reserve — "courtly" is the adjective often and accurately applied to his manner. He's medium height, with bushy white eyebrows and a square face topped by white hair. He moves slowly, but speaks with vigor.

No, he says, his life hasn't changed much since winning the Pulitzer Prize for drama last year. That honor had one excellent result, though. It set his Pulitzer-winning play, "The Young Man From Atlanta," which had its premiere at the small Signature Theater in New York in January, on the road to Broadway. That journey will take it first to Boston's Huntington Theater, where it opens this month, and to Houston's Alley Theater, where it will run Feb. 16-March 16, 1996.

In addition to working closely with director Peter Masterson on the Broadway-bound production of "The Young Man," he's mulling over a screenplay for a film based on William Faulkner's short story "Old Man."

Foote has written more than 40 plays and seems as active as ever. In addition to working closely with director Peter Masterson on the Broadway-bound production of "The Young Man," he's mulling over a screenplay for a film based on William Faulkner's short story "Old Man." Foote adapted the story for television in 1958.

Actor Eddie Murphy's production company has commissioned him to write an original screenplay based on the experiences of blacks in the Wharton area. And Foote hopes to continue filming his "Orphans' Home Cycle," nine plays based loosely on his parents' early lives. Small, independent films of four of the nine — "1918," "On Valentine's Day," "Courtship" and "Convicts" — have been made during the past 10 years.

Foote is one of those writers whose work is rooted in a sense of place. He doesn't write about New York or New Hampshire, both places he's lived much of his adult life, but about Wharton (called Harrison in his plays). He writes about the moral and existential conflicts of mostly ordinary people, about broken dreams, love gained and lost, courage in the face of disappointment. There's nothing flashy or histrionic about his work, but it is invested with a deep humanity.

"Early on I said to myself that I would like to write a kind of moral and spiritual history of a place," Foote says. "I don't often say that because it sounds a little pretentious, I know. But that's really what I set for myself."

Foote is a fifth-generation Texan, with deep roots in Wharton and the state. On his father's side of the family, there were the Hortons and the Footes. The Hortons came to Texas in 1834 and had a large plantation outside Wharton. When Texas was admitted to the union in 1846, Albert Clinton Horton became the state's first lieutenant governor, serving as acting governor for some months while James Pinckney Henderson was fighting in Mexico. The Footes came to Galveston sometime before the Civil War and owned shipping fleets. Both families lost their fortunes during the war.

"It was very hard on the males because there was so little to do. My uncles were just never very ambitious, and they had difficult and tragic lives in many ways.'
— Horton Foote

Foote's mother's family had better luck. The playwright's maternal grandfather bought a large amount of cotton farmland around Wharton after the Civil War. Foote's father ran a clothing store just off the town square and managed the farms his wife had inherited. The couple had three sons. If not rich, the family was well-to-do.

"We had our ups and downs, typical of a small-town family in those days," Foote says of life in the extended family of his boyhood.

"It was very hard on the males because there was so little to do. My uncles were just never very ambitious, and they had difficult and tragic lives in many ways. Most of them inherited land, but they never farmed it; they had people working it, so they didn't have much to do.

"My aunts, on the other hand, were extraordinary women, very strong, and all had very fulfilled lives."

Foote's father told stories, and he heard men spinning yarns when he helped at his dad's store. But the women were the great storytellers of the family, he says. One aunt — Louisiana Texas Patience Horton — "could really make the hair of your head stand up." They talked about their own lives, about their neighbors, about the past and the present, about "what he said, what she said," as Elizabeth Bishop put it.

Foote learned about point of view, about how the angle from which events are seen can be as interesting as the events themselves. "Sometimes it was almost like a riff," he says, drawing a term from jazz. "They would tell the story, and then tell it the next night with variations."

At the time the young Foote didn't know how he would use the stories he was hearing. But he did decide, at the age of 11, that he wanted to be an actor. Why is something of a mystery to him even today. It wasn't as though Wharton in the 1920s was some hotbed of the dramatic arts.

The best Foote can say is that, like an East Texas preacher, he "got the call." He resolved that after graduating from high school he would go off and become an actor. On graduation day, he would be just shy of 16.

His parents were remarkably supportive about the whole thing.

"Oh, my God, when I think back now, I don't know what they must have thought in their hearts," Foote says, laughing.

"If a 15-year-old child of mine had said to me 'I'm going to be an actor,' I'd have tied him to the bed. But they didn't. They said, 'Well, you're awful young, and we think you better wait for a year until you're 17. Then if you want to do it' — this is the Depression, you know — 'we'll try to help you get off to dramatic school.'"

And that's what happened. When Foote turned 17, he got on a bus to California, bound for the Pasadena Playhouse to study acting. Before that day he'd been to Dallas and Houston and New Orleans, but no farther. He saw his first mountain through the window of the Los Angeles-bound bus.

After a year in Pasadena, Foote moved to New York and studied acting with Tamara Daykarhanova, a protege of Konstantin Stanislavski, the Russian founder of "the Method" school of acting. That emotionally and intellectually demanding regimen would prove a valuable preparation for a dramatist.

Foote acted in a number of roles in the late 1930s and early 1940s, among them the patriotic musical "Yankee Doodle Comes to Town." His decision to take up the pen came about almost by accident. He was a member of the American Actors Theater, a group committed to performing the work of American dramatists. He and his fellow actors often engaged in improvisations, drawing on their individual experiences, and Foote naturally drew on his memories of people in Wharton.

Actress Agnes de Mille happened to be in town and saw Foote performing one of these roles. "She said, quite casually, 'Do you ever think about writing?'" Foote recalls. "I said no. She said, 'You should.'"

He did. He wrote a one-act play called "Wharton Dance," which American Actors Theater staged in the fall of 1940. He played the lead. The response was positive enough that Foote saved his money and returned home to Wharton to write his first full-length play, "Texas Town," which was staged the following spring. He had launched his career as a dramatist.

He also started a family. In 1945 he married Lillian Vallish, and the couple had four children: Hallie and Horton Jr., both of whom grew up to be actors and have performed in their father's plays; Walter, an attorney; and Daisy, a playwright and screenwriter.

Lillian Foote died three years ago, and her husband's voice softens when he mentions her. Since her death, he's found it difficult to go back to the New Hampshire house where the couple lived for many years, although he still owns the place and, at the moment, his daughter Daisy is up there working on a screenplay.

The early 1950s saw Foote writing for the New York stage and for the new medium of television. His first job for NBC involved rewriting episodes of "The Gabby Hayes Show," a half-hour western children's series, but soon he was writing teleplays for the network's "Television Playhouse," a weekly prime-time anthology.

The first script he wrote for "Television Playhouse" was "The Trip to Bountiful," a quietly moving story about an old woman who feels trapped in the Houston apartment she shares with her son and shrewish daughter-in-law and who embarks on a bus trip back to her beloved hometown of Bountiful. Lillian Gish starred in the drama, which aired in March 1953. It proved a big hit, and Foote expanded it into a three-act play that had a two-month run on Broadway late that year.

The network anthologies couldn't afford big stars so they made stars of the writers, who included not only Foote but Paddy Chayevsky, Gore Vidal and Rod Serling.

Thirty years later, Foote rewrote the story a third time for the screen. Geraldine Page won a best-actress Oscar for her performance in the 1985 film "The Trip to Bountiful." Foote's friend Peter Masterson directed; Foote's screenplay was nominated for an Oscar.

During 1953 and '54, Foote wrote 10 plays for NBC, among them "A Young Lady of Property," "The Midnight Callers" and "The Death of the Old Man." This was the "Golden Age" of television, when serious, live drama found a place along with lesser fare on the tube. Actually it was a "partly golden" time, Foote told one reviewer.

There were lots of talented young actors hungry for roles. The network anthologies couldn't afford big stars so they made stars of the writers, who included not only Foote but Paddy Chayevsky, Gore Vidal and Rod Serling. "We felt pampered and wanted," Foote told one interviewer. He continued to write for television into the 1960s.

He was also writing for the stage. In 1954 "The Traveling Lady," about a small-town Southern wife married to a violent husband, opened on Broadway and made a star of Kim Stanley in the title role. And he turned to movies. In 1962 he adapted Harper Lee's best seller "To Kill a Mockingbird," about a black man accused of raping a white woman in Mississippi. Nominated for an Oscar, Foote didn't think he had a chance to win and didn't bother to attend the ceremonies.

He made a point of being on hand when he won his second Oscar, for "Tender Mercies." That film, about a famous country singer trying to beat the bottle and begin a new life with a new family in a small Texas town, also won an Oscar for Robert Duvall for best actor. Duvall and Foote had known each other for years. When Foote finished the screenplay for "Tender Mercies," he immediately realized it would be a good part for his friend. Duvall agreed after Foote read him a handwritten draft.

Foote's other screen credits include "Baby, The Rain Must Fall" (1965), based on his play "The Traveling Lady." It starred Steve McQueen and Lee Remick and was filmed in Wharton.

With the 1970s came changes in Broadway. The kind of plays Foote wrote fell out of favor. "Hair," with its celebration of sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll seemed to be the new wave. Foote moved his family to a farm in New Hampshire. One account refers to this period as a "semiretirement," but Foote takes issue with that description.

"That really wasn't true. Everything was in such a state of flux and transition — the New York theater was changing. The Broadway that I had known was just collapsing, and off-off Broadway was beginning to flourish. It was the time of the drug culture and the use of language that had not been permitted in the theater before, for good or bad.

"I was interested in all that but did not feel a part of it. I wanted to continue writing my plays and felt that if we could live more modestly as a family, then that would be the best solution."

During this period he began his "Orphans' Home Cycle." He also wrote "Tender Mercies." "I was working very hard," Foote says. "I just wasn't being produced."

He also got occasional assignments. One of them was to write a screenplay based on a Faulkner short story. That became the film "Tomorrow" (1973) starring Robert Duvall (who thinks it's his best work, Foote says). Made for just $400,000, "Tomorrow" introduced Foote to small-scale, independent filmmaking. "It just opened a whole new world for me," he says. "I thought, if I do films, this is what I want to do."

He began shooting film versions of his "Orphans' Home Cycle" in part to capture the performances of his daughter Hallie, who is sometimes described as the leading interpreter of her father's works. A Tad Hershom photograph of a smiling Foote on the rural Louisiana set of "Convicts" has a prominent place in Foote's study and suggests his pleasure in moviemaking.

Foote plans to continue writing for screen as well as stage, although this past year has reminded him how much he loves the latter.

The off-off Broadway Signature Theater in New York staged "The Young Man From Atlanta" and three other Foote plays — "Talking Pictures," "Night Seasons" and "Laura Dennis" — during a seven-month period that ended last spring. The plays were mounted in a small, 75-seat theater, and despite playing to near-full houses, only 1,700 people saw "The Young Man From Atlanta" during its four-week run.

"You can't get too involved with the theater because you'll get your heart broken if you do," Foote says with a philosophical air. The statement seems to sum up the tenuous state of serious drama in America.

Writing is a strange process for Foote. "I've learned that you can't use your will," he says, describing how he puts himself into a quietly receptive frame of mind to court the Muse.

"Laura Dennis," first staged last spring, was something Foote had started in the late 1970s and then set aside. He was going through his archives, preparing to send them to Southern Methodist University, and came across the unfinished manuscript. He liked what he read, but still didn't know how to finish it.

In Wharton he took a ride one day and passed an old, boarded-up house.

"I suddenly realized that was one of the houses I was using (in the play)," he says. "I began to think about the life in that house and what it had been like when I was a boy, and it just opened up the whole thing for me. I was able to finish the play quite quickly."

There's really no pattern to how a Foote play gets started and finished. He usually has several projects going at once, and when he temporarily runs out of steam on one, he turns to another.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Luncheon planned

St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, 2900 Princeton Ave., will host Church Women United for a program and covered dish luncheon Friday on World Community Day.

World Community Day is an annual event that unites protestant, Roman catholic, orthodox and other Christian women in a common experience. This year's ecumenical service lifts up children and motherhood as fruits of God's labor.

The program begins at 10:30 a.m. Lunch is at 11:30 a.m. A nursery will be provided.

For more information call Teresa Kent, 697-4777.

Open house set

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 4805 Gateway, Midland, and 2011 N. Washington, Odessa, invite the public to an open house at 7 p.m. Sunday.

The evening will begin with an informal social. Various booths will display resources, ideas and activities to help strengthen individual spirituality and family values, said a release from Barbara Hales.

A video focusing on the life of Jesus Christ will be shown entitled "Whom Say Ye That I Am?" Former Brigham Young University president, Jeffrey R. Holland, narrates the video.

The open house also is intended to provide an opportunity to visit and ask questions about church beliefs. Spanish-speaking church representatives will be available at both locations.

Conference offered

ANDREWS — Our Lady of Lourdes Church is sponsoring a Conference for Women in Spanish Nov. 4.

The conference will start with a welcome and no cost registration at 9 a.m. The conference will end at 4:15 p.m.

At 10 a.m. there will be a speaker from Generations Home Care that will speak about the care of those homebound because of sickness or age.

At 11:15 a.m. Selma Falcon will speak on the public school system.

After a lunch provided by the women of the parish at a nominal cost,. Jacqueline Gordon of the batter Women's center will speak.

Dr. Estaban Martinez, psychiatrist of Glenwood Hospital, will talk about the treatments available for alcoholism and drug addiction and their value.

The day will end with a "Go Forth" by Mary Jaramillo of Odessa.

Festival scheduled

Greenwood United Methodist Church will host its first Annual fall Festival for 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Nov. 4.

Lunch will be served from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and features brisket cooked on the church grounds at 7909 Farm to Market 307. Accompanying the brisket will be homemade potato salad, beans and desserts. Cost of lunch is $5 per person and $3 for children 12 and under.

Entertainment for children will include game booths, pig bingo, face painting and a clown. Children also will be able to make their own individual servings of ice cream.

A live band will perform. The event includes a craft show.

For those who dislike cooking for the weekend, barbecued chicken, port ribs and brisket will be available for take-home orders.

Seminar offered

ODESSA — Vineyard Christian Fellowship of Odessa is sponsoring a "Let the River Flow" Seminar Friday through Nov. 5.

The seminar will be held at the AIM High School cafeteria, Plaza Boulevard and JB Shepperd Parkway, Odessa. The speaker will be Dale Walker, pastor of Vineyard Christian Fellowship of Northeast El Paso and area pastor for the Association of Vineyard Churches in far West Texas and Southern New Mexico. A ministry team which includes a worship band, college drama team and children's ministry team will accompany Walker.

Times are 7:30 p.m. Friday, 7 p.m. Nov. 4 and 10:30 a.m. Nov. 5. The seminar is casual. For more information call 550-4505.

Art classes set

First Baptist Church of Midland once again is presenting art classes taught by Virginia Whitten of Big Spring.

Classes are for all levels from advanced to beginner. Various mediums will be offered each year and the class meets from 1 to 3 p.m. Wednesdays. For more information or to sign up call the church, 683-0647.

Conference set

Best selling author and well known speaker Steve Farrar will conduct his Men's Conference entitled "Equipping Men for Spiritual Leadership" Nov. 17-18 at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

The conference will be held that Friday from 7 to 10 p.m. and that Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Registration is $40 before Nov. 3 and $50 after that date. Lunch that Saturday will be provided by Chick-Fil-A.

Farrar, who is president of Men's Leadership Ministries, Dallas, also will be the keynote speaker for the sixth annual Community Thanksgiving Celebration at 7 p.m. Nov. 19 at Chaparral Center, Midland College campus. He holds an earned doctorate from Dallas Theological Seminary and is a featured speaker at Promise-Keeper events across the country.

For more information call 694-8836 or 1-800-Men-Lead.

White to speak

Tom White, U.S. director of Voice of the Martyrs, Inc., Bartlesville, Okla., will be speaking at several churches the first weekend in November.

He has been working with the Rev. Richard Wurmbrand and VOM for nearly 20 years. He was imprisoned in Cuba in 1979 for distributing Christian literature when his plane crashed on a Cuban highway due to extreme weather conditions.

White now travels and speaks at other offices are the world sharing the voice of the persecuted church. He also talks about how people can take part in mission work.

He will speak to youth at Christian Life Center at 7 p.m. Nov. 4, at Church of the Dayspring, 100 W. Oak, at 10:30 a.m. Nov. 5 and at Living Way Church, 415 Alta, at 6 p.m. Nov. 5.

Captain Frank's can make a fresh seafood chef of anyone

By Pat Knight

Okay, okay, I know Captain Frank's isn't a restaurant, although they do make dynamite Cajun seafood gumbo and shrimp bisque. They don't even have chairs, let alone tables, in this place.

But if you can boil rice and operate an oven, they can turn YOU into a great seafood chefs.

Just tell them how many you're cooking for and what cut of fresh fish you want. Co-owner Larry Burdette will take the fish you request and combine it with olive oil and herbs like basil, thyme, oregano and garlic. Then he'll wrap it all in foil and write the cooking time and temperature on the foil. If you call ahead, he can have it ready for you to pick up.

All you have to do is bake the fish according to the time and temperature listed, and you'll come out with a perfectly taste-tempting delight. Cleanup consists of just tossing the foil.

I couldn't wait to try their fish, so I got a pint each of Cajun seafood gumbo and shrimp bisque. In the gumbo Larry puts shrimp, blue crab meat, scallops, crawfish tail meat and whitefish. He leaves out oysters and okra due to popular demand.

I could tell right away that the shrimp was fresh because it was very tender, not rubbery like it gets after being frozen. The whitefish was flaky, as well as tender.

The key ingredient in the sauce is Savoie's Roux, a genuine New Orleans Cajun product. Larry uses enough to make the gumbo spicy, but not enough to blow your ears off. That's also by popular demand.

What I noticed first about the bisque is that the shrimp are whole, not chopped up. Larry says there are 12 medium size shrimp in every pint. The sauce was smooth and creamy, with a distinct and delicate aroma. I understand that, being seafood, this is all low in cholesterol.

Everything about the bisque is homemade, from the stock to the cream sauce. As with the gumbo, the fish are fresh.

To maintain the freshness of their fish, Captain Frank's receives them by air freight daily, from places like the gulf coast (shrimp, oysters and redfish), Oregon (salmon), the Atlantic coast (swordfish), Florida (swordfish, red snapper and tuna) and other places.

They only carry true red snapper at Captain Frank's. Larry said there are other fish called snapper that are different in taste and quality. These shouldn't be confused with red snapper.

Although they have a lot of fresh fish every day, their best selection is usually Wednesday through Saturday. By Tuesday they know pretty much what varieties they'll have for the rest of the week, based on orders from the restaurants they supply. If you call a week in advance they can special order just about any fish.

If you just want to enjoy really fresh fish without even boiling rice, Larry will tell you which restaurants they supply. Larry and his partner, Hans Zelisko, own their own restaurant, Zucchi's, in Odessa.

Do try this at home. They put together swordfish kabobs with marinated swordfish, bell peppers and cherry tomatoes, that you just take home and grill.

It can't get much fresher or easier than that!

Captain Frank's Seafood Market is located at 3205 West Cuthbert, in the Tierra del Sol Shopping Center. Their hours are 10 a.m.- 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 12-4 Saturday. The phone number is 520-3474

A special meet-the-artist reception will be held from 7 to 10 p.m. Nov. 3. Tickets for this reception are $15 per person or $25 per couple. Reservations need to be made by Nov. 1 by calling 1-915-362-2329.

On Nov. 4 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Nov. 5 from 1 to 6 p.m., Pena will hold an open show, sale and print signing with free admission to the public.

Play opens Nov. 3

The British farce "It Runs in the Family" opens Nov. 3 in Davis Theatre I, Cole Theatre, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Dr. David Mortimer (Michael Frost) is rehearsing the lecture he will deliver to fellow neurologists when Jane Tate (Sherry Engstrom), with whom he had a brief dalliance 18 years ago, arrives with the news that their son, Leslie (Todd Manning), is downstairs looking for his long-lost father.

The swinging doors of the common room admit in quick order Mortimore's dignified wife, Rosemary (Wendy Linde), the apoplectic hospital director, Sir Willoughby Drake (Greg Alexander), the Matron (Tracy Alexander), a colleague, Dr. Mike Connolly (Mike Farrell), the patient, Bill Lesley (Andy Salcedo), a police sergeant (Les Reik) and the punk-haired son.

The Sister (Karen Young) is helping with the medical staff's preparations for the annual Christmas pantomime, which provides opportunity for cross-dressing, slapstick, innocent double-entendre, and dialog like Dr. Booney's (G. Thomas Harlow) "Ahoy in front and a vast behind" as he follows the Matron across the room. Dr. Booney's mother (Sharon Petty) arrives, bringing refreshments for the party.

Directing this Cooney comedy is Steven Cole, an instructor of theater at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. The stage manager is John Glover. Paul Fiorella is designing the British sets and Edward W. Taylor is designing the lighting and special effects. Mae Dawson is the costumer.

The show will be on stage Nov. 3-25. Tickets are $10 Friday and Saturday and $8 Sunday through Thursday. For reservations call 682-4111. The comedy is rated PG. The box office opens for members Wednesday and for non-members Oct. 28. Co-producer is Chevron.

Gallery shows art

The works of Peggy Catlett are being presented in the gallery at Cole Theatre, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The showing is sponsored by ACT IX, Midland Community Theatre's woman's auxiliary organization.

Ms. Catlett, has paintings hanging in the Governor's Mansion and the capital building in Oklahoma City, Okla., as well as in galleries in Amarillo and Corpus Christi.

The show will be on display during the run of the comedy "Crimes of the Heart," which closes Oct. 28. The works are for sale.

Crafts bazaar set

IRAAN — The annual Arts and Crafts Bazaar here will be from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Nov. 10 in the Iraan Community Center.

This annual event is sponsored by the members of the Ladies Christian service of the Iraan Christian Church.

Reservations for tables are now being accepted at a cost of $15 per table. The event is open to clubs, individuals and organizations in the surrounding cities.

For more information call Mary Rogers, 1-915-639-2417. Reservations may be mailed to Rose Mary Rogers, Ladies Christian Service, P.O. Box 204, Iraan, 79744.

Paintings featured

"Painted Wheels: Cars and Art" will be on view through Nov. 30 at Gallery 1114.

The show features the work of three painters: Travis Beckham of Midland and Polly Jackson and Jane Shea, both of Santa Fe, N.M.

Ms. Shea paints small, pristine car portraits. She exhibits in Santa Fe and will be in a show in New York this month.

Ms. Jackson, who grew up in Midland, captures the character of post-war classics she finds around New Mexico. she is having shows in Austin and Alpine this year.

Beckham uses cars in paintings of atmosphere and expression.

His work was featured in a one-man show in McCormick Gallery at Midland College last autumn.

Gallery 1114 is a co-operative center for contemporary art located at 1114 N. Big Spring St. New gallery hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Friday through Sunday.

Needlework shown

Now on display at the Museum of the Southwest, the exhibition "Needlework: Blending Art & Craft" spans the history of stitchery and looks at needlework in its various forms.

This exhibition, which will remain through Nov. 30, features needlepoint, cross-stitch, smocking, knitting, crocheting, tatting and quilting. Traditional work is seen as well as contemporary pieces.

For more information call the museum, 683-2882. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Ceramics taught

"Festive Ceramic Plates," a Big Kids Kourse for adults, will be taught at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., Nov. 4 and 5.

Participants in the two-day class, which will be taught by ceramic artist Cindy Crow Whiteside, will design and glaze plates for everyday or special occasion use. Class time is 1 to 3 p.m. that Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. that Sunday.

Fee for the class, originally scheduled for Oct. 7 and 8, is $35 for museum members and $45 for non-members.

Pianist to perform

Pianist Wladimir Jan Kochanski will perform in concert at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 2, at the First Presbyterian church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

Described by critic Richard Chon as a "warm and witty eminently cultivated man," Kochanski treats his audiences to insightful and humorous narration in addition to the great music of the masters.

A graduate of the Juilliard School of Music, Kochanski brings to the stage a background of the finest technical training. He has been a guest on major radio and television programs including the Voice of America, Good Morning America, Hour Magazine, the 700 Club and has released 13 recordings which comprise the Kochanski collection. In 1982, he was honored with the bestowal of Knighthood in the Order of Polonia Restitua by the president of the Polish government in Exile in London.

A highlight of his career was a command performance for Pope John Paul II in Rome.

The concert is sponsored by the Pennington Foundation for the Arts. General admission is $10 in advance and $11 at the door. children, under 12, are $6 in advance and $7 at the door. Families are $30 in advance and $35 at the door.

Tickets may be purchased at M and M Music Services and Jones Piano and Organ, both in Midland, and Permian House of Music, Odessa, or by calling Sue Eakin, 699-0571.

Lavender critical

EL CENTRO, Calif. — Joe Lavender, a cornerback who played for the Washington Redskins in the 1983 Super Bowl, was in critical condition Saturday after crashing his car while allegedly driving drunk.

The accident occurred Thursday as Lavender was driving east on Interstate 8 near Coyote Wells in the Ocotillo area.

Lavender, 45, who lives in El Centro, was driving at a high rate of speed, according to a report from the California Highway Patrol.

His 1993 Cadillac convertible ran into the center divider and overturned several times. No other vehicles were involved in the crash and Lavender had no passengers.

The police report alleges Lavender was in an intoxicated condition when the accident occurred. Officials at El Centro Regional Medical Center would say only that Lavender was in critical condition.

Lavender played for the Philadelphia Eagles from 1973-75 and the Washington Redskins from 1976-1982. He played college football at San Diego State.

Mavs beat Lakers

DALLAS — Jamal Mashburn scored 28 points and Jason Kidd had 16, including key baskets on consecutive possessions in the final minute, and the Dallas Mavericks rallied from a 23-point deficit for a 102-97 exhibition victory over the Los Angeles Lakers on Saturday night.

Rookie Cherokee Parks added 14 points and 11 rebounds for the Mavericks (2-6), who won their last two exhibition games.

Cedric Ceballos scored 17 points and Sedale Threatt added 16 for the Lakers (3-5).

Mashburn's basket with 8:20 remaining gave the Mavericks a 80-79 lead. He added a 3-pointer and a three-point play and Scott Brooks added a 3-pointer with 5:42 to play to push Dallas' lead to 94-85.

But the Lakers answered with a 12-2 run, capped by Elden Campbell's tip-in, to take a 97-96 lead with 1:05 left.

Kidd's layup with 52 seconds left put the Mavericks ahead by one and he added a jumper from the top of the key to make it 100-97 with 15.6 seconds left.

Dallas' largest deficit was 49-26 in the second quarter. The Mavericks opened the second half with a 21-9 run, sparked by three 3-pointers from Luckious Harris.

Bravo, Atlanta! Champs at last

■ David Justice's homer in the sixth inning brings Atlanta its first world championship, defeating the Cleveland Indians four games to two.

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

ATLANTA — Chokers no more, the Atlanta Braves are World Series champions at last.

Five years of frustration ended Saturday night when Tom Glavine pitched one-hit ball for eight innings and David Justice homered, bringing the city of Atlanta its first major sports title with a 1-0 victory over the Cleveland Indians in Game 6 of the World Series.

"This has been a long time coming," Glavine said. "This organization and this group of guys has worked so hard to get here and we've come up short.

"That bitterness of losing the World Series games is real fresh in everyone's mouth."

Now, the sweet taste of champagne.

"We've been close before, but we finally got it," Braves manager Bobby Cox said. "Our players, from day one, wanted to win this thing."

Glavine and Mark Wohlers combined on the fifth one-hitter in Series history and first since Jim Lonborg for Boston in 1967, allowing only a soft single by Tony Pena starting the sixth inning. Glavine reprised his win in Game 2 by again using his changeups and breaking balls to fool the best-hitting team in the game, and was voted Series MVP.

More than anything, that was the theme this October — great pitching stopping great hitting. Cleveland, which led the majors in batting, scoring and home runs, was held to a .179 average by Atlanta's aces.

MIDLAND COLLEGE CHAPARRALS: A LOOK AHEAD

Stars, keys and Hutch

■ Star players like D'Juan Baker and Devon Phillips hold the key to Midland College's run to Hutchinson, Kan. for the national championship.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Sports Writer

A season after the Midland College men's basketball team's ride stalled out on its way to Hutchinson, Kan. for the National Junior College Athletic Conference National Tournament, second-year coach Pat Rafferty says the Chaparrals have fined-tuned that machine and that a trip north in March might not result in a rescue call to the auto club.

The Chaparrals, who open the season Friday with a matchup against McLennan Community College in Levelland followed by a game Saturday against host South Plains College, had a 13-0 record in Region V first-round games snapped last year in a 97-85 loss to Temple Junior College. There would be no return to "The Hutch" for the Western Junior College Athletic Conference's most valuable player Kevin Rice.

But Rafferty, who replaced Steve Green last year after Green led the Chaparrals to the national tournament, says the current installment of MC Basketball should be a much better overall team than last year's because of several factors.

"Of course we were disappointed about losing in the regional tournament but there's only one team in the country who doesn't say that at the end of the season," said Rafferty. "Especially because it was a game we should have won.

"But, in a nutshell, last year was very helpful to me about what's required to win a league championship, about what's needed to win a regional championship," added Rafferty.

Three factors which affirm Rafferty's belief in his team's ability to improve are three strong returning sophomores, a talent-laden recruiting class and a second confidence-building year under the coaching staff.

The three sophomores — preseason all-America D'Juan Baker, a guard from Arlington Martin, Devon Phillips, a guard from Chicago, and post Mike Carrasco from Crane — have helped Rafferty and the rest of the coaching staff orient the 11 freshman, an advantage they didn't have last year.

"We've only got three guys back but you have to consider that fact with a

MC golf team back at home for Invitational

After losing a second-team all-American and dropping its first tournament of the fall season, what the Midland College golf team might need is a little home cooking.

The defending national champs wild find that Midland cuisine Monday as they host 12 teams at the Ranchland Hills Country Club Invitational that will be held at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

"It's always an advantage to be in an environment that you are accustomed to," said Midland College golf coach Delnor Poss. "We'll know the shots we need to make to play the course well."

The Chaps come home to Ranchland Hills where they will face the 6,560-yard course. To say Midland College has the home course advantage at the Ranchland Hills would not be an exaggeration, but the confines of the Par-70 lay out is even more friendlier to Midland College's Josh Jacobs, who is a RHCC member. Jacobs, who is a product of Midland High, says he will get a boost from playing at home.

"I have been looking forward to this tournament for a long time," said Jacobs. "I think our team has a major advantage. We haven't run away with a tournament all year. That's what we have to do to get some confidence."

Cigar wins Breeders' Cup Classic

ELMONT, N.Y. — Cigar rolled majestically, historically, to his 12th straight victory on Saturday when he won the $3-million Breeders' Cup Classic in the mud at Belmont Park by two and a half lengths over L'Carriere, clinched the title of Horse of the Year, and completed one of the most dominating seasons in modern racing.

"He's done everything to rank him with the all-time greats," said Bill Mott, who trains the 5-year-old bay for Allen Paulson. "He is a super horse."

Jerry Bailey, who rode Cigar in every race during his year of success, ended the season with a winning streak of his own: He has won the last three Classics and four of the last five. And he lavished praise on his horse, the grandson of the great Seattle Slew, after he rode back to the winner's circle to lusty cheering from

Atlanta faithful finally get World Series celebration

By Russ Bynum
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — There was Justice after all for Atlanta fans.

They erupted in a celebration that was four postseasons in the making after the Braves beat the Cleveland Indians to win the World Series.

The crowd of 50,000-plus exploded in a roar that nearly drowned out the boom of fireworks over Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

Beer, plastic cups and unraveling rolls of paper rained on fans as they raised their hands in the tomahawk chop. Hundreds of flashbulbs flickered in the stands. A few fans dared a dash for the diamond, rolling in the infield dirt before surrendering to security guards.

"It's about time," said Jennifer Waters of Augusta, waving a white banner that read: "The Indians are Gone With The Wind in Hotlanta."

The Braves lost the World Series in 1991 and 1992, and failed in the NL playoffs in 1993.

"It's about time that the South has a world championship team in its home territory," said Hamilton Boone of Atlanta, who was dressed in full Indian attire, had his face painted with warpaint and waved a 7-foot tomahawk. "This championship is for Georgia, but also for the Southern states."

Stanley Osterhoudt of West Palm Beach, Fla., a former Atlanta resident, had come back in 1991 and 1992, the last times the Braves were in the Series.

"I lived here 27 years, moved to south Florida six years ago, and I had to come back because I knew it was going down," Osterhoudt said.

The Braves' David Justice, whose solo homer provided the only scoring in the 1-0 game, chastised Atlanta fans for a lack of enthusiasm after seeing the crowds at Jacobs Field in Cleveland.

"I'm not going to be able to talk. I know that. Regardless of what Justice said about the fans, he's wrong — we are fanatic. We love our Braves here. We've been waiting for this for years," said Chuck Jones of Atlanta.

Wahoo turns to boo-hoo for inexperienced Tribe

By Chuck Melvin
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — They had hitting. They had pitching. They had fielding.

The Cleveland Indians had everything but postseason experience.

"We think we have a better team than them, but they've been here three times. This time, they won," Cleveland second baseman Carlos Baerga said Saturday night after the Indians' remarkable season ended with a whimper — one hit, no runs, eight strikeouts in a 1-0 loss to Atlanta's Tom Glavine.

The best-hitting team in baseball all season, the Indians often looked like scared rookies once they got to the playoffs, hitting .219 against Boston in the AL division series and .257 against Seattle in the championship series.

They were numbers that didn't bode well for them when they finally ran into the world's best pitching staff in Atlanta. The Braves held them to a .179 average and 19 runs in six games, an average of 3.2 runs by a team that scored nearly six per game during the regular season.

"We never had this experience before in the playoffs and World Series," said Baerga, whose fly ball to center fielder Marquis Grissom ended it. "This is going to be good for us."

The Indians posted such incredible numbers during the regular season, their failures in the postseason were that much more glaring.

They led the majors in hitting (.291), scoring (840 runs) and home runs (207) this year. The home run total beat the old team record by 20, in spite of a season shortened to 144 games.

Yet the only hit Glavine allowed in eight innings Saturday was a soft flair to center field by Tony Pena, the weakest hitter in the lineup other than the pitchers.

The Indians had their moments, most notably a 5-4 victory in the rematch against Maddux on Thursday night in Cleveland. They had hoped that victory would send them back to Atlanta with the confidence they needed to get past Glavine.

But the left-hander simply never let them get started.

Justice finally finds power

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — After stirring the fans with his mouth, David Justice won the World Series with his bat.

Justice, whose power had been AWOL for the entire postseason, finally put Atlanta over the top Saturday night. His sixth-inning homer off Jim Poole made the difference as the Braves beat Cleveland 1-0 to win their first World Series title since 1957.

"It was really a nerve wracking day for me," Justice said. "I've never felt so much pressure in my life as I did today."

His mouth had caused most of the pressure. On Friday, while raindrops fell on the tarp at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium, the outfielder with the movie star wife decided to give a dramatic soliloquy of his own. The Braves' fans, he said, were all wet.

"If we get down 1-0, they will probably boo us out of the stadium," he said. "You would have to do something great to get them out of their seats. Shoot, up in Cleveland, they were down three runs in the ninth inning and they were still on their feet."

Justice's mouth was the talk of the town all day. And when the Braves took the field, the cheers were noticeably louder than last weekend, when Atlanta swept the Indians in Games 1 and 2.

"I did it because I wanted our fans to prove me wrong," Justice said when it was all over. "They proved me wrong. They definitely proved me wrong tonight."

Starting the night, Justice had been in a 1-for-15 slump. He hadn't gotten an extra-base hit in 42 postseason at-bats and hadn't homered since Sept. 22. Braves manager Bobby Cox could have filed a missing person's report.

When Justice was watching Fred McGriff bat in the first inning, he knew his remarks had been noticed.

"They were all over me in the on-deck circle," he said. "I've been booed so much here. I just look for the one or two clapping."

But Justice's bat was as sharp as his tongue. He walked in the second, then doubled to left-center in the fourth. When he led off the sixth, he drove Poole's 1-1 pitch deep to right field, just under the "Priority Mail" sign. Suddenly the scoreless tie was broken.

"When I hit it, I knew I got it," Justice said.

He had struggled in the '91 and '92 Series, too, going 7-for-27 (.259) against Minnesota and 3-for-19 (.158) against Toronto. Given his performance, his speech Friday seemed shrill.

"If we win, it's for the 25 guys in here, the coaches and Bobby," he had said. "It is for us. Like the song 'Against the World.' It's us against the world. I'm the only guy who will sit here and say it."

Sounding a bit like the Helen Reddy song, he challenged the fans and himself. And when it was put up or shut up time, both came through.

"It's everything that we've dreamed of," he said, "everything that we've worked so hard for."

In the glow of victory, it was easy for Justice to admit his remarks were a mistake.

"It's my own fault," he said.

His intended message was: "Don't cheer when something's going good. Cheer when nothing's happening."

Instead, it sounded like he was trying to say, "Don't blame us if we lose."

As soon as he woke up Saturday, hardt, who will start alongside pole-winner Bill Elliott in the front row of the 44-car field.

The precocious 24-year-old Gordon goes into the 500-kilometer (312-mile) race on the one-mile oval holding a 162-point lead over seven-time champion Earnhardt, 44.

Gordon can wrap up his first major racing title by gaining 23 points on Earnhardt, finishing the race with a lead of at least 185. If he loses no more than 11 points to Earnhardt, finishing with at least 151, all the youngster will have to do to take the championship is start the season-finale on Nov. 12 at Atlanta Motor Speedway.

If the two contenders wind up on the same lap and within sight of each other, it is very likely that Gordon will collect the $1.3 million that goes to the series champion.

"We're going to race like we always do, hard," Gordon said. "There's no strategy or anything like that.

"It's so easy to have an easy day, and it's so easy to have a bad day," added Gordon, who has finishes of 30th and 20th since having his string of 14 consecutive top-10s broken.

"That's just the way this sport is. There's nothing we can do now that we haven't done all season," he said. "When things go your way, great things happen. Sometimes they don't go your way. How you react when those bad things happen, is important. I think we've done an excellent job."

Earnhardt, who has gained 140 points on Gordon in the last two races, remains hopeful that he can at least carry the championship battle to Atlanta.

"This isn't the first time I've been in a championship battle on the lower side," Earnhardt said. "The (No.) 24 car (Gordon) is going to be good, but they're going to be on the radio to him to be careful.

"We can't control what he does, so we'll go for the win, regardless of where he finishes. Winning is what we're here for. We've got a good engine combination."

Earnhardt said he expects defending race champion Terry Labonte to be his main competition for the win.

BRAVES: Take series with 1-0 victory

(From 1C)

Justice, who had criticized Braves fans for being too quiet, gave them reason to cheer when he homered leading off the sixth against reliever Jim Poole.

"I was really a nervous wreck coming in today because I'd been in this situation before, where you're up 3-2," Justice said. "I was never so nervous in my life.

"I really had a good feeling that it was our time. We had suffered enough. It was time for our club and time for our city."

Series losers in 1991 and 1992 and NL playoff losers in 1993, Atlanta won its first title since moving from Milwaukee to open the 1966 season. The Braves also became the first franchise to win the World Series in three cities, having done it as the so-called Miracle Braves in Boston in 1914 and in Milwaukee in 1957.

Fittingly, it was Glavine who ended the elusive quest. He'd been with the Braves longer than any player on their postseason roster, beginning his career in 1987 at the start of a four-year span in which Atlanta was the worst team in baseball, averaging 98 losses per season.

Glavine struck out eight and walked three. Wohlers, filling the closer role that had been the Braves' biggest bug-a-boo in postseasons past, finished it out, retiring the side in order.

The crowd was on its feet for the ninth inning, a lot with their tomahawks chopping. As soon as Marquis Grissom caught Carlos Baerga's fly ball to left-center, a few fans took to the field but they were quickly escorted by police as the rest of Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium stood and cheered to the song "We are the Champions" by the group Queen.

Properly, perhaps, the Braves won by a 1-0 score. In 1991, in their first try at clinching the title, they blew a three games to two lead over Minnesota, dropping Game 7 by a 1-0 score to Jack Morris in 10 innings at the Metrodome. That was the last 1-0 game in a World Series.

Five of the games were decided by one run, a record for a six-game Series.

For the Indians, who dominated the majors with 100 wins in a strike-shortened season, the loss finished out a Series in which they could never really catch up with Atlanta's awesome pitching staff. Cleveland seemed to solve three-time Cy Young winner Greg Maddux in winning Game 5 a Jacobs Field, but did not figure out how to hit Glavine's off-speed stuff.

The Indians remained without a World Series title since 1948, when they beat the Boston Braves. Cleveland's last Series appearance was 1954, when it got swept by the New York Giants.

"I told them they played well and they're champions," Cleveland manager Mike Hargrove said. "We played hard and they should feel good about that.

"We pitched well enough to win. It just didn't work for us. We've got to get ready to dedicate ourselves to do it again."

Justice, without an extra-base hit in 42 at-bats during the expanded playoffs this season, doubled off Dennis Martinez in the fourth.

Poole bailed out the Indians in the fifth, but Justice tagged him for a deep drive on a 1-1 pitch to start the sixth, his first homer since Sept. 22 and his fourth in World Series play.

While Glavine was keeping Cleveland hitless for five innings, Indians starter Dennis Martinez was working in and out of trouble.

The surest sign that Martinez was struggling — and the best signal that this was a big game — came in the bullpen. Rookie Chad Ogea, who had not pitched in the Series, began warming up three batters into the game, Ken Hill and Poole began throwing in the second, Eric Plunk got up in the fourth and Alan Embree was tossing in the sixth.

Helped by one of the prettiest double plays in a long time, plus some relief by Poole, Martinez kept the game scoreless through the fifth.

Martinez struck out Fred McGriff with two runners on to end the first, but walked the first two batters in the second. An out later, Rafael Belliard hit a bouncer that two-time Gold Glove shortstop Omar Vizquel fielded behind the bag and flipped, with his glove, to second baseman Baerga, who barehanded the toss and completed the double play.

In the fourth, with runners on first and second, Martinez pitched carefully to Javier Lopez, who hit a key home run off him in Game 2. Lopez drew a walk that loaded the bases and brought up the light-hitting Belliard.

In Game 5, Cox pinch-hit for Belliard in the fifth inning of a tight game. This time, he let him hit, and Belliard dropped to 0-for-14 in the Series with an easy fly ball.

Atlanta threatened again in the fifth with a two-out walk and an infield single by Chipper Jones that sent the rookie tumbling over first base. Hargrove brought in the left-handed Poole, and he did his job by striking out the left-handed McGriff on three pitches.

CUP: Cigar wins 12th straight race the crowd of 37,246 in a sport that has been hungering for a hero horse.

"He overcame everything," Bailey said. "He overcame the wet track, the wait in the paddock, the 10 hole in the starting gate."

Cigar not only overcame everything, he did it with grace and regal bearing. He had never before raced or even trained on a muddy track. He was challenged in the saddling ring by another trainer, who suspected that his horseshoes contained illegal spikes, or turndowns. He had to start from the No. 10 slot in a gate that held 11 horses.

But with all that, he took the final strides toward a season that made history.

He ran the mile and a quarter on a muddy track in 1:59 2/5, breaking the Breeders' Cup record by close to one second. He became the first major horse to go through an entire year undefeated since Spectacular Bid won all nine of his races in 1979. He broke the earnings record for one year with $4,819,800 when he won $1.5 million in the richest race in America and passed Sunday Silence, who won the Classic six years ago and banked $4.5 million as the 1989 Horse of the Year.

He stalked Star Standard at the start, ran third and fourth when L'Carriere took the lead and was still less than a length behind after one mile. He would not let the front-runners run loose. Then, as they entered the turn for home, Bailey asked him to make the move that had won 11 other races at six other tracks — and Cigar burst forward. He pounded down the homestretch in front and, at the wire, he had two-and-a-half lengths on L'Carrier, who in turn had one length on Unaccounted For.

"He had his game face on," Bailey said. "He was eager. He wanted to get the race going. He's as great a horse as I've ever ridden, or even seen."

Cigar gave his great performance in the 12th running of the Breeders' Cup, the "day of days" created in Kentucky to promote the breeding of thoroughbreds by bestowing $10 million on the winners of seven races on the valedictory day of an arduous campaign.

It was staged for the first time in mist and some rain after a stormy night. But after the Distaff, the third of the Cup races, a rainbow arched across the sky behind the backstretch, drawing cheers from the crowd.

nament two years in a row, will be lead by Andrews' native and NJCAA all-American Derrick Pursley. The medalist runner-up at the 1995 national tournament has a 74.6 stroke average for the first four tournaments of this fall. Pursley and freshman Steven Young, who has a 73.25 stroke average, provide a one-two punch that has been hard to beat. Young has international experience with a third place at the Junior World Championships and wins at the Scottish, Irish and United Kingdom Junior Championships.

However, with the loss of Euan Little, the Chaps are also counting on the pair's big-time tournament experience to provide the leadership needed to make a run not only this week but down the line.

"Derrick is a good leader and Steven has good experience," said Poss. "We have a nucleus of experience. We just need our sophomores to step up their game."

Poss also look for that boost from Jeremiah Luttrell, another MHS product, Monahans' native Scotty Wade and sophomore Michael Lofdahl to for that boost. Former Midland Lee Rebel K.J. Sanchez, sophomore Blair Buttar and Shawn Reeves are the others Poss is looking to elevate their game.

The Chaps come into this week's tournament with victories at the Links at Sierra Blanca and at the Odessa College Invitational, where the Chaps defeated Odessa College in an one-hole team playoff. Following the loss of Little, the Chaps put together a come-from-behind win at the Grayson County College Invitational in Pottsboro.

The Chaps made up six stroke on the final day for their straight tournament.

Last week, the streak of 17 straight wins came to a screeching halt as the Chaps fell behind by 11 strokes on the first day and couldn't get out of the hole despite outshooting the field by four stokes on the tournament's second day.

Getting the players back on track will be hard but Poss says the players have the ability to make it a little easier.

"I don't think the confidence is gone," said Poss. "They have the confidence. Golf is just an unusual game that it is a matter of executing what you do. If you don't execute, you will not be as successful as you need to be."

Midland College will host a 12 teams from the Southwest.

Teams expected to contend include MC, Paris College, Weatherford College, New Mexico Junior College and Odessa College.

Kansas State shows its true ability in 41-7 beating of No. 6 Kansas

The Associated Press

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Kansas State gave Kansas and the critics a whipping.

The 14th-ranked Wildcats, angrily rebounding from an embarrassing 49-25 loss to defending national champion Nebraska, took all its frustration out in a 41-7 rout of No. 6 Kansas on Saturday, dominating almost totally the most meaningful game in the rivalry's 93-year history.

"We definitely had something to prove," offensive tackle Scott Heun said. "People wrote us off. They bashed us. They said we were a fluke. We just felt like we had to come out and show people what kind of team we are."

Against a Kansas team that was averaging 232 yards rushing, the Wildcats (7-1 overall, 3-1 Big Eight) gave up only 19 yards on the ground while rolling up 335 rushing yards themselves.

Matt Miller's two touchdown passes gave Kansas State a quick lead and the Wildcats went on to post their first victory over a Top Ten team since 1970 and their biggest margin of victory over Kansas (7-1, 3-1) since 1955.

Never before in a series in which last place in the Big Eight was the traditional stake had both teams been ranked so high, or had so much to play for.

Fittingly, the crowd of 44,284 was a KSU Stadium record.

"I didn't think anybody could shut our offense down like that," said coach Glen Mason, whose Jayhawks came in as one of five unbeaten major-college teams. "I don't care if we ran or passed or whatever. But we didn't do it very well today. I hope this is inconsistent. I'd hate to have to stand on the sidelines through three more games like this this year."

Eric Hickson ran for 121 yards and Mike Lawrence for 118, giving the Wildcats two 100-yard rushers for the first time since 1979.

Breakdowns in Kansas' nationally ranked punting game led to the first two scores for the Wildcats, who've beaten their state rivals three in a row for the first time since the mid-1950s.

Darrin Simmons, who came in as the nation's No. 3 punter, failed to handle a bad snap in the opening minutes and the ball rolled through the end zone for a safety.

A few minutes later Simmons again had to handle a bad snap, and Joe Gordon blocked the kick, giving K-State the ball on the Kansas 39. Six plays later, Miller floated a 14-yard touchdown pass to Kevin Lockett.

Kansas' only offensive thrust came on the next series when Mark Williams hooked up with Isaac Byrd on a 61-yard touchdown play, the longest play from scrimmage for Kansas this year.

Miller caught the Kansas defense off guard on fourth-and-2 a few minutes later when he faked an inside handoff and snapped a 20-yard scoring strike to Lockett, who beat Dorian Brew in the end zone.

"Probably a stupid call," Kansas State coach Bill Snyder said.

Kansas wide receiver Isaac Boyd catches a touchdown pass thrown by Mark Williams while Kansas State's Joe Gordon tries to cover him.

Snyder wasn't buying the excited declaration by K-State president Jon Wefald that this was the biggest win in Snyder's seven years as coach.

"Jon's speaking for Jon," Snyder said. "I speak for me. And I don't know if that's the case. It may be."

Brian Kavanaugh hit Mitch Running with a 22-yard scoring pass late in the fourth period and they combined again for a 2-point conversion.

Percell Gaskins intercepted Williams' tipped pass in the final seconds of the first half, setting up Martin Gramatica's 32-yard field goal for a 27-7 halftime lead.

Lawrence went around left end on a 2-yard touchdown run in the third period and Hickson capped a six-play, 63-yard march with an 8-yard scoring sprint in the fourth.

The crowd broke the stadium attendance mark of of 44,165 set for the 1993 Kansas game.

Frazier leads Nebraska romp over Colorado

■ Nebraska quarterback throws for a career-high 241 yards as the No. 2 team in the nation romps over No. 7 Colorado.

The Associated Press

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — To inspire his team, a Colorado player beat a war drum before Saturday's game against Nebraska. The gimmick didn't work.

Tommie Frazier threw for a career-high 241 yards and two touchdowns and ran for a score as the second-ranked Cornhuskers continued their domination of the No. 7 Buffaloes with a mistake-free 44-21 victory.

Ahman Green ran for two touchdowns and Kris Brown kicked three field goals for Nebraska, which beat Colorado for the fourth straight year and extended the nation's longest winning streak to 21 games.

"The seniors stressed that we haven't lost to these guys, so we didn't want to lose this one," said Frazier, who completed 14-of-23 and ran 13 times for 40 yards.

The Cornhuskers, who never trailed after Green raced 57 yards for a touchdown on their first play from scrimmage, moved closer to a fifth consecutive Big Eight title and a chance to play for a second straight national championship in the Fiesta Bowl.

Colorado (6-2, 2-2 Big Eight) was hurt by 12 penalties and two interceptions, while Nebraska (8-0, 4-0) played a nearly flawless game with no penalties or turnovers.

"We had to play with emotion and we did. We had to play hard and we did. But we also had to play mistake-free and we didn't," Colorado coach Rick Neuheisel said.

It was the first penalty-free game for Nebraska since 1976. The Huskers haven't committed a turnover in their last three games.

"No penalties and no turnovers, I've never heard of that," said Colorado offensive guard Heath Irwin, who recovered a fumble in the end zone for a touchdown. "You've got to give them all the credit."

Nebraska played without star running back Lawrence Phillips, who was reinstated to the team Tuesday following a suspension for hitting his former girlfriend. Phillips didn't make the trip to Boulder, but is scheduled to play next week against Iowa State.

The Huskers didn't need him against Colorado, which came up with a surprise move before the game even started.

Instead of coming out through the tunnel, the Buffaloes walked through the student section of the stands on their way to the field. Then they gathered at midfield, raised their gold helmets and pointed toward the north end zone, where Colorado fullback Sulu Petaia was beating a Samoan war drum. Petaia, who is from American Somoa, is out for the season with a knee injury.

But it was Nebraska that got off to a fast start before a record crowd of 54,063 at Folsom Field.

After forcing Colorado to punt on the opening series, the Huskers struck on their first play when Green took a pitch from Frazier, turned the left corner and sprinted down the sideline untouched.

After the Huskers built a 17-point halftime lead, Colorado pulled to 31-21 when John Hessler threw a 49-yard TD pass to James Kidd on a fourth-and-2 play in the third quarter. But the Huskers pulled away on two field goals by Brown and Frazier's 2-yard TD run with 2:46 left in the game.

Hessler was 21-of-43 for 276 yards and two TDs, but threw two interceptions that led to 10 Nebraska points.

Colorado tied it 7-7 in the first quarter on an 18-yard TD pass from Hessler to Phil Savoy, but Nebraska scored twice near the end of the period to take a 21-7 lead.

After Terrell Farley's interception set up Green's 1-yard TD run with 2:52 left, Colorado couldn't move the ball and had to punt. On the next play, Frazier connected on a 52-yard TD pass with Clester Johnson, who made a leaping catch at the Colorado 25 and went in for the score.

Colorado pulled to 21-14 in the second quarter when Lendon Henry's fumble at the goal line rolled into the Nebraska end zone and was recovered by Irwin, nephew of golfer Hale Irwin.

No. 4 Ohio State makes case for nation's No. 1 spot with 56-35 drumming of Iowa

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Eddie George rushed for four touchdowns, Bob Hoying ran for one and passed to Terry Glenn for two and Shawn Springs returned an interception 60 yards for another — all in a record 56-point first-half sprint — as fourth-ranked Ohio State beat No. 25 Iowa 56-35 Saturday.

The victory kept the Buckeyes (8-0, 4-0 Big Ten) a half-game back of No. 8 Northwestern in the conference. The Wildcats beat Illinois 17-14 Saturday.

If the teams tie for the Big Ten title, Ohio State would go to the Rose Bowl according to conference tiebreaker rules because it was unbeaten outside of the conference and Northwestern went 2-1.

Ohio State is 6-0 against ranked opponents this year.

Iowa (5-2, 2-2 Big Ten) hadn't trailed by 56 points in a game — let alone the first half — since losing to Nebraska 57-0 in 1980.

A 55-yard pass from Hoying to Glenn on the Buckeyes' first play from scrimmage set up George's 3-yard run on the next snap. Hoying later hit Glenn, who had three catches for 149 yards in the opening half, for TDs of 38 and 56 yards.

George, with 110 yards on 15 carries in the half, also scored on runs of 9, 10 and 3 yards. It was his seventh 100-yard game in a row.

No. 3 Florida 52, Georgia 17

The Gators, playing in Sanford Stadium for the first time in 63 years, routed the Bulldogs (5-4, 3-4 Southeastern Conference) with Danny Wuerffel passing for 242 yards and five touchdowns in less than three quarters.

No. 5 Tennessee 56, South Carolina 21

Peyton Manning threw for four scores and the Volunteers got two touchdowns off field goal attempts to beat South Carolina.

Joey Kent caught two TD passes to lead host Tennessee (7-1, 5-1 SEC) to a 35-7 halftime lead over the Gamecocks (4-4-1, 2-4-1).

No. 8 Northwestern 17, Illinois 14

■ Top 25 Roundup

Eric Collier's interception of a desperation pass stopped Illinois' final drive with seven seconds left as Northwestern overcame a 14-0 deficit against Illinois (3-4, 1-3 Big Ten).

Darnell Autry gained 100 yards for a ninth straight game and scored on a 1-yard, fourth-down run with just over six minutes left.

The victory kept visiting Northwestern (7-1, 5-0) atop the conference.

No. 9 Michigan 52, Minnesota 17

Brian Griese matched a school record with four touchdown passes and Tshimanga Biakabutuka ran for two scores and 196 yards.

Griese was 14-of-19 for 271 yards for Michigan (7-1, 3-1 Big Ten) and became only the sixth quarterback in school history to throw four TD passes.

Arizona St. 35, No. 10 Oregon 24

Jake Plummer directed two touchdown drives in the final five minutes as the Sun Devils dealt a near-fatal blow to the host Ducks' (6-2, 3-2 Pac-10) chances for a return to the Rose Bowl.

The Sun Devils (4-4, 3-4) went ahead 28-24 when tight end Steve Bush made a diving, fingertip catch of a 3-yard touchdown pass on fourth-and-1 with 4:12 to play.

Arkansas 30, No. 11 Auburn 28

The host Razorbacks (6-2, 5-1 Southeastern Conference) led 27-0 at halftime, but Auburn made it 30-28 with 18 seconds left and recovered an onside kick at its 47.

Pat Nix completed an 18-yard pass to Willie Gosha, but the Tigers (5-3, 3-3) were out of timeouts and Matt Hawkins' 52-yard field goal attempt missed.

No. 12 Notre Dame 20, Boston College 10

Marc Edwards rushed for a career-high 167 yards and scored two touchdowns for Notre Dame (7-2) at South Bend, Ind.

Boston College (2-6) had a chance to tie the game at 17 with 12:30 left, but Mark Hartsell was intercepted by Lyron Cobbins at the Notre Dame 2.

No. 13 Southern Cal 21, No. 17 Washington 21, tie

Southern California scored in the final minute to tie Washington (5-2-1, 4-0-1 Pac-10), overcoming a 21-0 fourth-quarter deficit.

The visiting Trojans (6-1-1, 4-0-1 Pac-10) didn't attempt a 2-point conversion after Brad Otton's 2-yard touchdown pass to Jimmy Williams with 33 seconds left.

No. 16 Penn St. 45, Indiana 21

Aaron Collins and Terry Killens converted turnovers into touchdowns against Indiana, the team with the worst turnover margin in the Big Ten.

The host Nittany Lions (6-2, 3-2) converted turnovers on four straight Indiana possessions into 17 first-half points. Indiana (2-6, 0-5) had five turnovers and also had a punt blocked.

No. 18 Alabama 38, North Texas 19

Brian Steger rushed for 97 yards against visiting North Texas, but the Crimson Tide (6-2) did not secure the victory until Freddie Kitchens hit Chad Key for a 7-yard touchdown pass that made it 31-13 with 9:02 remaining. North Texas (1-7) added a late touchdown on Jason Mills' 63-yard pass to Troy Redwine.

No. 23 Oklahoma 13, Missouri 9

Jerald Moore caught a 72-yard touchdown pass from Eric Moore with 6:20 to play, and finished with 117 yards on 26 carries, his fourth 100-yard day of the year and third in a row.

No. 24 UCLA 33, California 16

Karim Abdul-Jabbar gained 217 yards on 33 carries and Tommy Bennett returned a fumble 22 yards for a touchdown on the first play of the second half as the host Bruins snapped a five-game losing streak to Cal (2-6, 1-4 Pac-10).

CHAPS: Coach says Chaps are better

Baker

Phillips

Carrasco

Tolliver

1995-96 Chaps Faces

Returners

D'Juan Baker, 6-foot-5, 195-pound, soph., guard: A preseason all-American by two publications, the Arlington Martin grad averaged 16.7 points, 3.5 rebounds and 2.8 assists as a freshman ... "He can play the point, he can shoot the ball, he can guard anybody — he's a player," said Rafferty.

Devon Phillips, 6-2, 170, soph., guard: The Chicago native was second in scoring for the Chaps at 16.1 points a game, averaged 1.9 rebounds, 1.4 assists ... "Phillips gave us some quality time there even though he was a freshman."

Mike Carrasco, 6-8, 220, soph., post: Coming from Class 3A Crane, Carrasco (4.2 points, 2.9 rebounds) "has brought some needed stability to the front line," Rafferty said.

Jerome Tolliver, 5-9, 160, fresh., guard: Baton Rouge native redshirted last year so is more familiar with the system than the other freshmen ... was a four-sport letterman at Broadmoor High School.

McCauley

Newcomers

Joe McCauley, 6-0, 165, fresh., guard: Durham, N.C. native averaged 21 points and six assists as a senior ... will be one of three guards in the new class to help add depth to the returning corps.

Todd Jones, 6-0, 165, fresh., guard: Levelland star was first team all-region and all-state and was nominated to the McDonald's All-American team ... another guard who will add needed depth in the running game.

Lamont Young, 6-6, 192, fresh., guard: Miami native broke his high school's 3-point record in a half with eight ... was H.S. teammate with freshman Larry Jackson ... "as a 3-point shooter, he has as much ability as anyone on the team," Rafferty said.

Vincent Serbantez, 5-10, 155, fresh., guard: Walkon from Greenwood averaged 18 points, six assists, six rebounds for the district and bi-district champ Rangers.

Joe McLendon, 6-5, 210, fresh., forward: Detroit native will be academically eligible to play next semester ... "He's a real blue-collar type and we'll need him to get in there and rebound," Rafferty said.

Larry Jackson, 6-4, 210, fresh., forward: Miami classmate of Lamont Young. Jackson is ... "adjusting well and he ought to give us some good minutes at forward," Rafferty said.

Silvester Kainga, 6-11, 210, fresh., post: Comes from Kapsabet, Nairobi and should boost a weak Chap frontcourt ... "Silvester has big-time shot blocking abilities," Rafferty said.

Ceedric Goodwyn, 6-7, 217, fresh., post: Lubbock Coronado product was all-everything for the Mustangs including all-state ... is so versatile, "he could end up playing three positions for us," said Rafferty.

Danny Brown, 6-10, 285, fresh., post: Phoenix native averaged 16 points, 12 rebounds ... "We needed to get bigger up front and Brown and Kainga fulfill that need," said Rafferty.

grain of salt in junior college," Rafferty said. "Every year you reload half your team. But those three guys will be a big asset just from the fact that they know the system already. It was new to everybody last year and Baker, Phillips and Carrasco have been outstanding in their leadership."

Baker said the familiarity of the system has allowed he and his classmates to develop a better chemistry with the newcomers.

"There is a lot more discipline on this year's team," said Baker, who scored a team-high 25 points in the season-ending loss to Temple as a freshman. "The freshmen came in a really adapted to the system. This year, people are playing together and there is a good chemistry on the team."

Lubbock Coronado standout Ceedric Goodwyn, a 6-foot-7 post, leads the pack of recruits that Rafferty hopes will make the adjustment from high school to college ball by the time Western Junior College Athletic Conference action begins Jan. 15.

"We met some very, very obvious needs," said Rafferty. "As good as Kevin Rice was, and even though they were freshmen Baker and Phillips gave us some quality time there too, but there was still a need for some more depth and talent in the backcourt. But we've got that with Todd Jones (Levelland), Milton Palacio (Los Angeles) and Joe McCauley (Durham, N.C.)

"We also needed to be bigger up front and Sylvester Kainga (Nairobi, Kenya) and Danny Brown (Phoenix, Ariz.) fulfill that need," added Rafferty. "And Ceedric Goodwyn, as a front-line guy, he's his own entity. He has so much ability and as he learns how to play at this level and gains some maturity or experience, there's no telling what he will be able to do."

Phillips sees the recruiting class as a boost to the Chaparrals' depth on the bench.

"This year we can go deeper on the bench," said Phillips. "Last year, sometimes when we went to the bench, it hurt us. But it won't matter which five go in the starting lineup, we won't skip a beat."

Other freshmen are Jerome Tolliver from Baton Rouge, La., Lamont Young from Miami, Vincent Serbantez from Greenwood, Joe McLendon from Detroit, Mich. and Larry Jackson from Miami.

"It is a big change from high school," said Goodwyn. "Just the physical competition is so much better and the play is very aggressive. In high school I played against a lot of people who were not as good but I think I'm adjusting well."

After being out rebounded 36 to 28 by Temple to end the season, Rafferty knew improvement in that statistic was one of the most important needs of his recruiting year.

"I like this team. I like its components," said Rafferty. "This team has a lot of versatility which is important in order to be able to play at various tempos. Last year we really couldn't do that. With our size (or lack of) we had to run. But the game is simple, no matter what level you're on and it comes down to the fact that when you don't rebound, you're in trouble. We got out rebounded in every game last year."

But don't think the Chaparrals are going to abandon that speed and quickness they relied on last year.

"Another think I like is if we need to get small and quick, we can do that," said Rafferty. "We've got the personnel."

Last year's disappointing finish also showed Phillips and Baker how important leadership is among the upperclassmen.

"Knowing that we were going to have some many freshmen, it made Devon and I work even harder over the summer," said Baker. "I didn't feel like we had the sophomore leadership that we needed last year so we're trying to set the example for the team on and off the court."

There were only four sophomores on last year's team and while Rice pulled off the most valuable player award, more of the freshmen, including Baker and Phillips, had to carry a lot of the load in Rafferty's first season. And only three returned from that freshman class.

Baker will undoubtedly have to live up to his preseason billing for the Chaps, Rafferty said.

"He's grown up a lot in the last six months," said Rafferty. "He may not lead the league or the nation in scoring every night but he has learned to be a complete player. But Kevin Rice only scored 14 points a game and he was the MVP. It was a lot of other things that Kevin did that made him an overall great player and D'Juan's the same way.

"He can play the point, he can shoot the ball, he can guard anybody — he's a player," continued Rafferty. "There may be someone out there who adds more numberswise, but they're not going to bring as many qualities to the table as D'Juan does."

He and Phillips, who will run the offense the majority of the time, will be important in leading the team along in the early part of the season.

"Our guards are going to have to carry us early and Ceedric is going to be able to be there and contribute even though he's a freshman," said Rafferty. "What needs to happen in non-conference is for us to learn how to play (together). The big guys have to come along and once that takes place, the wins will take care of themselves.

"I think we'll be a good basketball team when it means something in January," continued Rafferty. "Not to say I don't think we're going to be good in the early part of the season but I say that because we're so young on the front line and realistically, when you've got youth and inexperience, some of these freshmen who may be playing great at the time could very easily have some off nights."

Like the women's team, the Chaparrals are picked to finish second in WJCAC play by the league's coaches. Last year's nemesis New Mexico Junior College is the top pick and got all six first-place votes. Odessa College is third while Howard College, South Plains College, Frank Phillips College and New Mexico Military Institute round out the bottom four. Baker and Goodwyn are the Chaps preseason picks as top sophomore and freshman.

Eldridge wins free skate

DETROIT (AP) — Todd Eldredge skated a near-flawless long program to win the men's free skate Saturday at Skate America International at Cobo Arena.

In pairs, Russia's Marina Eltsova and Audrey Bushkov successfully completed their long program to win the gold, beat Americans Jenni Meno and Todd Sand, who had to settle for silver. Kyoko Ina and Jason Dungjen were the second-best American pair, finishing fourth.

Eldredge earned three marks of 5.9 out of a possible 6.0 for technical merit and five more 5.9s for artistic presentation.

"Honestly, I can't remember skating this well," Eldredge said. "The only other performance that could compare would be the '91 Worlds as far as technical goes."

Stars beat Sharks 4-3, San Jose still winless

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — The players keep changing for the San Jose Sharks, but the results stay the same.

Despite an offense revitalized by this week's acquisitions of Ray Sheppard and Owen Nolan, the Sharks remained winless as Trent Klatt's tie-breaking goal gave the Dallas Stars a 4-3 victory.

Dallas won its third straight and is undefeated in its last five games. The Sharks fell to 0-5-3.

"The intensity was there and the emotion. We got everybody on the same page, which is something we haven't always had this season," said Jamie Baker, who scored a shorthanded goal for the Sharks. "Now we've got to find a way to win and get some confidence."

Klatt knocked in a rebound with 15:12 left in the game to break a 3-3 tie the Sharks forced just 22 seconds earlier on Ray Whitney's goal.

"I went and stood behind the net and I was all alone. It was an easy goal," Klatt said. "It's important to turn the momentum back in your favor when your opponent scores, and we did that."

Mike Donnelly, Greg Adams and Mike Kennedy also scored for Dallas, which knocked Sharks starting goalie Arturs Irbe out just 8:04 into the game with two goals on its first three shots.

Sheppard got his first goal since being traded to the Sharks on Tuesday while San Jose had a two-man advantage early in the second period.

Donnelly opened the scoring 5:51 into the game on a shot from the top of the faceoff circle in the first period.

Aggies pound Cougars

By Michael A. Lutz

COLLEGE STATION — It didn't come down to the final second of the game this time, but Texas A&M's home winning streak, the longest in the nation, got another scare before the defense saved the day.

Andre Williams returned an interception 5 yards for a late third quarter touchdown, opening the gates for a 31-7 victory over Houston on Saturday, as the 19th-ranked Aggies (5-2, 3-1 Southwest Conference) won their 30th straight at Kyle Field.

The Cougars (1-7, 1-3), who had five turnovers, remained close enough for a comeback until Williams' grabbed a pass from Chuck Clements with 4:23 left in the third quarter to give the Aggies a cushion.

"He was eyeing the receiver the whole time and as soon as he cocked his arm, I broke on the ball and basically he threw it right to me," Williams said.

Linebacker Keith Mitchell contributed to the turnaround play by chasing Clements into the Houston end zone and forcing him to make a hurried throw.

"I thought I got it (Clements' pass) blocked but he got it off," Mitchell said. "I saw it coming, Andre high-stepping into the end zone."

The Aggies had early trouble against Houston, which ranks 96th in the nation in total defense, but Corey Pullig completed touchdown passes of 18 and 13 yards to Hayward Clay in the second quarter for a 14-7 halftime lead.

The Aggies had a bigger scare on Oct. 14, when Pullig had to throw a touchdown pass on the final second of the game to beat Southern Methodist 20-17.

"I felt the offense was making some plays but then we were killing our drives with penalties," Pullig said. "That was very frustrating. That tempo really hurts an offense, especially in the first quarter.

The Aggies played the second half without Leeland McElroy, who strained his back in the first half and finished with 13 carries for 50 yards.

Owls outlast Mustangs, 34-24

By Jamie Aron
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Adrayll Askew turned the second reception of his career into a 53-yard touchdown midway through the fourth quarter, allowing Rice to shake off a Southern Methodist rally and take a 34-24 victory Saturday.

The Owls (2-5-1, 1-3 Southwest Conference) won for the first time since their opener, ending a span of six winless games and snapping a three-game losing streak. It was their seventh victory in a row over the Mustangs.

SMU (1-7, 0-4) lost its seventh straight, despite having turned a 21-10 second-quarter deficit into a 24-21 lead early in the third quarter.

Although Rice's offense had stalled since its last touchdown, the Owls were still just one play from the lead.

They got it on a third-and-6 from their 47 when quarterback Chad Nelson hit Askew in the center of the field at the SMU 45.

Askew, a senior whose only previous reception came three weeks ago, knew what to do with the ball.

After he turned to head for the end zone, he began veering to his right at about the 30. The move allowed teammate Yoncy Edmonds to take out SMU's Cornell Parker at the 15, clearing a path for the go-ahead score with 8:56 to play.

The Mustangs hurt their hopes for another comeback with a stalled offensive drive and a 14-yard punt. Rice drove 25 yards and got a 37-yard field goal by Mike Ruff to make it 31-24 with 2:43 left. Ruff also hit a 32-yarder with 1:35 to play.

SMU's comeback was aided by its ability to briefly slow Rice's running attack. The Owls still ran for 326 yards on 75 carries, one shy of the school record.

Had the Mustangs won, the player of the game would've been James Whitmore. He caught a 64-yard touchdown pass from running back Kelsey Adams and a 24-yarder from quarterback Derek Canine.

Georgia on Deion's mind in Dallas debut

By Ed Shearer
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Deion Sanders returns to his "house" for the second time Sunday to face his old team in his debut with the Dallas Cowboys.

The two-sport star has picked some pretty good teams to play for on his return since leaving the Atlanta Falcons as a free agent after the 1993 season.

He had a 93-yard interception return on which he high-stepped past the Atlanta bench last year to give San Francisco a 28-3 lead just before halftime on its way to a 42-3 victory.

After that game in the Georgia Dome, Sanders said, "This is my house. I built this house."

Sanders was cleared by the NFL to play on Sunday, even though the league has ruled his contract invalid.

A sellout crowd of just over 71,000 gobbled up all the tickets to see this one even before Sanders signed with the Cowboys.

■ On TV: noon, FOX

A faster-than-expected start by the Falcons makes this a game of division leaders. The Cowboys (6-1) are setting the pace in the NFC East and, at 5-2, Atlanta is tied with San Francisco and St. Louis in the NFC West.

Sanders, last year's NFL Defensive Player of the Year, has been recovering from ankle surgery he had following his baseball season with the San Francisco Giants.

Coach Barry Switzer said he'll start him at his familiar position, right cornerback.

"There's very few plays he's going to be involved with offensively and in the kicking game," Switzer said. "It doesn't mean we'll use him this week at all," other than defensively.

"He's trying to shake off the rust, the cobwebs," Switzer said. "At some point and time, he will return kicks. He's not ready for the total package yet."

Fumble return sparks Texas Tech to victory

By Pete Herrera
AP Sports Writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Texas Tech linebacker Zach Thomas made the hit, saw the ball on the ground and caught sight of teammate Marcus Coleman. He knew what to expect.

"Marcus was coming full speed and I knew they'd never catch him," Thomas said Saturday in reliving Coleman's 92-yard fumble return that launched the 22nd-ranked Red Raiders' 34-7 victory over New Mexico.

With New Mexico driving for a go-ahead touchdown late in the first half, Thomas stripped Lobos quarterback Scott Peterson of the ball at the Tech 2. Coleman, whose four career interception returns for touchdowns is one shy of the NCAA record, scooped up the ball and raced untouched the other way with 1:21 left in the second quarter.

"They came out in the option and Zach made the hit," Coleman said. "I just tried to get to the ball as quickly as I could and get it into the end zone."

New Mexico (4-4) couldn't recover from its biggest mistake of the season, and Texas Tech (5-2) kept up the pressure in the second half to win its fourth straight.

Safety Dane Johnson returned an interception 23 yards for a score with 53 seconds gone in the third quarter and quarterback Zebbie Lethridge capped an 80-yard, 10-play drive on the Red Raiders' next possession to make it 31-7 midway through the third.

Texas Tech's defense was the difference as New Mexico finished with 404 yards, but also gave up a season-high five turnovers.

"That was a real momentum breaker," Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes said of Coleman's fumble return. "You'd have to say it was a 14-point turnaround."

New Mexico coach Dennis Franchione saw it the same way.

"That was a devastating swing," he said. "It looks like we're going to go up 14-10 or no worse than 10-10. We've been pretty protective of the football, and you can't turn it over against Texas Tech and win."

Trailing 10-7, New Mexico put together an impressive drive. A 45-yard run by tailback Winslow Oliver and a Peterson-to-Pagador pass, both on third down, kept it going.

Facing another third down inside the Texas Tech 5, Peterson ran the option and was hit hard by Thomas. Peterson lost the football and Coleman picked it up on the run and easily outran Oliver, the lone pursuer.

McNair, Dilfer taking different paths

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Trent Dilfer and Steve McNair are two young NFL quarterbacks living under different philosophies.

Dilfer played early and often for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. McNair is still waiting to take his first regular season snap with the Houston Oilers.

Dilfer showed enough in five games as a rookie last season to allow the Bucs to trade Craig Erickson and although he's struggled, Dilfer will be the starter on Sunday when the Oilers host the Buccaneers in the Astrodome.

McNair, the Oilers' No. 1 pick last April, is being routed down another path. He's being spoonfed by coach Jeff Fisher and offensive coordinator Jerry Rhome for his rookie season.

Dilfer is in the spotlight in Tampa Bay's offense. McNair scrambles for reps in practice that go mostly to Chris Chandler and backup Will Furrer.

■ On TV: noon, NBC

Dilfer is glad he's getting to play and the experience is helping him get better quickly.

"The next level for me is to make some more plays as the quarterback and play a little more schoolyard football instead of being so methodical and robotic," Dilfer said. "At this stage, my job is to not lose football games, just get the ball in the hands of our good player and let them work.

"The next level for me is when you go out and make some of those plays. You might take a few more chances, be a little more confident in forcing the ball. I'm not there yet. I'm in a frame of mind to do what I'm supposed to do and let others make the plays."

Dilfer had a problem with interceptions early this season but he now has a string of 123 passes without a theft, the third longest current streak in the NFL and 14 short of the club record.

"Interceptions are going to happen but the ones you want to eliminate are the blatant, stupid throws," Dilfer said. "The four interceptions in Chicago were stupid, ignorant throws. Those are the ones I want to eliminate."

Tampa Bay's offense ranks 27th in the NFL in total yards gained and the Buccaneers defense has been largely responsible for a four-game winning streak and 5-3 record but coach Sam Wyche hasn't regretted going with Dilfer.

"Trent Dilfer is a young quarterback but he does a lot of things that it takes veteran quarterbacks years to learn," Wyche said. "When you start making suggestions to hone some aspect of his game to improve, it improves and pretty quickly."

McNair says he doesn't look with envy at Dilfer's playing time. He's happy running the scout team and taking a few reps each practice learning the intricate Oiler offense. Then he stays after practice and works with Rhome.

"Everybody has their own philosophy about rookie quarterbacks," McNair said. "I've got to live with that. I don't get involved with thinking about what other quarterbacks do.

"I practice every day as if I'm going to play and I'm learning and getting better. That's all I can do."

McNair is trying to catch up to the speed of the game.

"That's my biggest problem right now, making all the decisions a quarterback has to make," McNair said.

Baylor topples TCU

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

WACO — Andre Davis didn't play but Jerod Douglas did and the results showed what a good running back can do for a team.

Douglas rushed for a 149 yards yards and scored two touchdowns and safety Adrian Robinson made the big defensive plays Saturday as Baylor stayed alive in the Southwest Conference race with a 27-24 homecoming win over Texas Christian.

Baylor, which lost 24-9 to Texas A&M last week, increased its overall record to 5-2 and 3-1 in SWC play. The Horned Frogs dropped to 5-2 and 2-1.

TCU played without starting tailback Davis who was declared ineligible because of a possible NCAA rules violation. Davis was the SWC's leading rusher.

"TCU deserves a lot of credit for playing as well as it did without Davis," said Baylor coach Chuck Reedy. "We did what we had to do to win. We needed it. This was a game we had to win after the A&M game last week. Now, we're still in good shape for the conference race."

Douglas scored twice in the first half as the Bears built a 21-10 lead at Floyd Casey Stadium.

"Jerod really ran hard, and Jeff Watson had a consistent performance, the kind we need," Reedy said.

Quarterback Watson threw a touchdown pass and ran 9 yards for a touchdown, and Robinson intercepted two Max Knake passes for the Bears.

Knake threw two touchdown passes, including a 3-yarder to John Washington with seven seconds left, but the turnovers killed the Frogs.

Douglas darted 28 yards for a touchdown the first time Baylor had the ball. He cut back against the defensive flow and just made it to the end zone before the pursuit caught him at the goal line.

The sophomore from San Antonio, one of the nation's most highly recruited running backs three years ago, ran 50 yards in the second quarter to set up a 12-yard Watson to Pearce Pegross touchdown pass. Pegross had 8 catches for 123 yards.

Knake hit 27 of 46 passes for 265 yards. He had only three interceptions for the year coming into the game.

MHS, Lee improve x-country times

SAN ANGELO — The Midland High and Midland Lee cross country teams had a number of personal-best times Saturday at the District 4-5A Championships, but fell to the winning teams from San Angelo Central.

The Midland High boys, who placed fifth behind the Bobcats, were lead by Jeff Lea, who finished 21st with a time 17: 51. Other Bulldogs to have best times were Andrew Hancock and Michael Pickell.

The Midland High girls didn't enter a full team but the Lady Bulldogs got their top performance from Stephanie Burden, who took 20th. MHS' Malin Fransson also had a season's best time.

The Lady Rebels got personal-best times from all their runners, and leading the way was Marisa Beck. Beck ran a 12: 39 to finished in 12th place, 24 seconds behind Ashlee Espinoza of Abilene High. Shannon Moore finished 26th with a 13: 34.

The Lee boys were lead by David Bernal's 24th place finish. The 18: 03 was just two minutes under behind King Pope of Central High School. Eliazar Hernandez ran a 18: 51, his best time of the season.

Only the Midland High boys brought enough runners fill a full team. However, Larry Pitts, coach of the MHS and Lee cross country teams, is seeing the improvement in the runners and in the sport's interest. He hopes that combination will translate into successful programs down the line.

"They had a terrific season," said Pitts. "When you run those miles and cut the time that they did, it shows they are working.

"We're definitely going to be there, and next year is a good year to start. They want to be the best. It is promising to be a good season."

Central did win the boys' and girls' titles. The Central girls had a rough time with the Abilene High, winning by a margin of five places. The boys, however, had no problem winning their title, placing the race's top three runners. Central's Pope won the boys' title with a time of 16: 04 for the three miles while Abilene High's Espinoza won the girls' title with a time of 12: 15 for two miles. Both runners won their races by less than five seconds.

Results from the District 4-5A Cross Country Meet held Saturday in San Angelo.

Team Standings (Girls): 1. San Angelo Central, 35; 2. Abilene High, 40; 3. Abilene Cooper, 77; 4. Odessa Permian, 83; Odessa High, 128. Midland Lee, Midland High didn't field full teams.

MHS looks good in practice match

Midland High racked up 30 kills behind what coach Terri McColloch called the best overall performance by the three Lady Bulldog setters as they warmed up for the Class 5A volleyball playoffs Saturday with a 15-12, 15-8 win over Class 3A Seminole.

Valerie Anderson led the setters with 17 assists while Christy Trautman had 10 and Becky Salgado had eight as MHS came out on top of "a very exciting and fun match," in which "both teams played well," said McColloch.

It was a good warmup for the Lady Bulldogs, who open the playoffs with a bi-district game versus Amarillo Palo Duro at 8 p.m. Tuesday night in Brownfield. It also represented their 20th win of the season against nine losses.

"Especially because we went up there last year and embarassed ourselves," said McColloch. "We did not do that this year."

Toya Zachery, Elesceeya King and Sara Pritchett led the way with 10 kills each while Jamee Stennett had five. Defensively, Stennett finished with 23 digs and five blocks, Anderson and Zachery had 10 digs and five blocks each, King had 16 digs and four blocks while Pritchett had 22 digs. MHS had four serving aces: Stennett had two, Zachery and Anderson had one each.

Mander leads UNO to win

NEW ORLEANS — Former Midland Lee volleyball standout Tera Mander, a 5-foot-11 sophomore middle hitter for the University of New Orleans, garnered six kills and a match-high tying five blocks as the Privateers whipped Southwestern Louisiana in straight games Saturday, 15-13, 15-9, 15-10.

Mander, who leads her team with a .268 hitting percentage for the season, also had six digs and a serving ace. UNO's next match is Friday at Western Kentucky. The Privateers are 13-16 overall, 4-3 in Sun Belt Conference play.

Tennis Invitational comes to Tall City

The Texas Tennis Association will hold its Championship Excellence Invitational Tennis Tournament November 4-5 at the Racquet Club and Midland Country Club.

The state's top 30 players in each division have been invited to compete in the last of the year's three Junior Excellence tournaments. There are three age groups (14's, 16's, 18's) and organizers expect 100-150 players to attend.

Play will begin at 8 a.m. on Saturday and run through 5 p.m. Sunday's action will go from 8 a.m. to finish. The tournament is a non-elimination event and weighted on state rankings.

Players qualified for the tournament through state rankings warned in major zone, sectionals and other tournaments.

TAM players invited to play include Sarah Scharbauer and Lindsay Hanlon (Girls 14); Audra Wagner, Debra Smith, Marci Holland, and Abby Coatney (Girls 16); Douglas Scharbauer, Spencer Ritchie, Matthew Gray, Clayton Morgan (Boys 16)' Bryan Sheffield and Nathan Lawrence (Boys 18).

Abell wins, ends 7-0-1 for season

The Abell eighth-grade football team defeated Odessa Nimitz 26-8 on Saturday in the team's season finale.

Abell, 7-0-1 for the season, got two touchdowns of 56 and 8 yards from Clint McNutt. Autry Pryor contributed a four-yard run. Jarrod Calabreeves had a seven-yard touchdown and a catch on a two-point conversion.

On defense, Jesse Guzman had seven tackles and an interception while Calabreeves had 10 tackles. Jimmy Pearson had seven tackles.

In other action, Alamo beat Odessa Hood 36-14 to raise its record for the season to 6-2.

Tremaine Howell had 207 yards in total offense. Howell had 132 yards rushing with three touchdowns on the ground. Howell also had a 75-yard kickoff return for a score in the Alamo win.

Justin Gonzales had one-yard touchdown run.

Two-point conversions for Alamo came from Howell, T.J. Chandler and Josh Perez.

Defensively, Tony Zarate, Shane Barnett, Mike Hayden, Curtis Prater and Gonzales stood out.

Alamo Maroon wins conference

The Alamo Maroon football team won the American Conference title with a 42-14 win over Alamo Gray on Saturday in seventh grade football action.

Maroon, 7-0 for the season, got over 250 yards rushing and four touchdowns from Allen Griffith, who also had two, two-point conversions. David Dakil had two touchdowns and a pair of two-point conversions.

Michael Lenz and Bill Joe Bill had touchdowns for the Gray.

The Maroon had good performances defensively from George Duarte, Grffith, Tyler Webb, Wendell Smith, Jesse Machucha and Rusty Defer.

In other action, the Alamo Red football team defeated Abell 28-8 in seventh-grade National conference action Saturday.

The Red, who finished the season at 4-2 and in second in the conference, got two offensive touchdowns from George Renteria. Shane Avery added a fumble return for a touchdown and Marado Avila had an interception return for a score.

The San Jacinto White football team defeated San Jacinto green 8-6, in American Conference action on Saturday at San Jacinto.

White, 3-3-1 to end the season, got a touchdown on a quarterback sneak from Jason Nix. The following two-point conversion from Nix to Jason South gave the White the win.

Tony Esslinger led the White in rushing yards while defensively, Dustin Truitt had an interception to seal the game. Jesse Daurighty had fourth-down sack in the game's final quarter.

In other American conference action, the White beat the Blue 12-0 in a battle of Abell seventh-grade football teams in Saturday's season finale.

The White, 4-2-1 for the year, recorded its fourth shutout of 1995, with Charlie Vaughn leading the defensive charge with an interception.

Travocie Jackson had two touchdowns for the White. Blue finishes the season 1-6.

MCJH beats Trinity, 39-9

The Midland Christian junior high football team beat Trinity 39-9 Thursday at Midland Christian to go undefeated for the 1995 season.

Midland Christian, 6-0, got two touchdowns from Kody Matthews who had a 50-yard punt return and one rushing touchdown. Midland Christian quarterback Tim Philbeck had touchdown passes of 20 yards to John Paul Usery and of 45 yards to Kurt Corely. Defensively, Philbeck had two interceptions.

Midland Christian's John Robert Moore scored one rushing touchdown and Brandon Tobins had a 55-yard kickoff return.

Smead aces

Ed Smead got a hole-in-one on the No. 11 hole at the Midland Country Club Thursday.

The 7-wood from 153 yards was witnessed by R.F. Madera, Ike Lovelady and Rudy Berg.

French Open champ Muster upsets Sampras, heads to Eurocard finals

ESSEN, Germany (AP) — Thomas Muster, the French Open champion, upset Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion Pete Sampras in the semifinals of the Eurocard Open Saturday, delaying the American's climb back to the No. 1 ranking.

Muster rallied from a 4-1 deficit to beat Sampras 7-6 (8-6), 6-2. In Sunday's final of the $2.1-million tournament, the third-seeded Muster will meet MaliVai Washington, who beat Arnaud Boetsch 7-5, 6-2 in a match of unseeded players.

Sampras, seeded second and ranked No. 2 in the world, dominated early against the Austrian clay-court specialist.

But Muster, No. 3, tamed the American's serve, broke back and turned the match around to post his first victory over Sampras after six defeats.

Muster has won 11 titles this year and at one point had a 40-match unbeaten streak, but all of his tournament wins came on clay.

On the indoor surface of Gruga Hall, Sampras was the favorite. And with his serve-and-volley game, Sampras quickly seized the lead by breaking Muster for a 3-1 lead and going up 4-1. But Muster broke back in the seventh game.

In the tiebreaker, Sampras again led 4-1 before Muster evened at 4-4. Sampras saved one set point with an ace, but dropped his next serve and Muster took the set when Sampras netted a weak return off Muster's second serve.

After falling behind 3-1 in the second set, Sampras briefly revived his game by breaking back, but Muster hit a superb passing shot on the run to gain another, this time decisive break.

The defeat delayed Sampras' ascent to No. 1 in the world.

Sampras, who lost the No. 1 spot to Andre Agassi April 10, now will have to wait until the end of next week and the Paris Open to climb back atop the rankings.

Agassi, who strained a chest muscle during his loss to Washington here, will miss the Paris Open and will relinquish the No. 1 spot to Sampras when the new rankings come out after the tournament.

Washington beat Boetsch with a strong game at the decisive point of the match.

The match went with serve until Washington broke Boetsch to win the first set.

Debatable wolf program unwise

Ranchers in far West Texas, New Mexico and Arizona are understandably upset over the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service's plan to reintroduce the Mexican wolf into its former range, which now is extensively used as grazing range for cattle and sheep.

Their concerns are justified by their intimate knowledge of predations by the wolf years ago, before an extermination program carried out by the ranchers and the government pushed the wolf from the affected area. The ranchers understandably fear the resurgence of the wolf problem and are fighting the reintroduction program.

While it doesn't seem to make a great deal of sense for the government to spend money to eradicate a problem that a few decades later it spends money to renew, there is no doubt there is a mood in the nation today that encourages protection of the environment, including plants and animals that may be harmful to man.

We, too, favor efforts to protect the environment — within reason. Yet in this region of the country where ranching and oil constitute the bulk of our industry, the wolf program appears to be akin to the government sanctioning (and protecting) your business's worst competitor. It just doesn't seem fair or reasonable.

Maybe the solution would be for the federal government, which is so enamored with this questionable wolf reintroduction plan, to guarantee to reimburse ranchers 100 percent of the fair market value of animals lost to the Mexican wolf. Even the suggestion of such a logical alternative should put the Mexican wolf debate in a more reasonable light.

ANOTHER VIEW

Medicare landscape painted into corner

It's not nearly as pure of heart as the sponsoring Republicans say, nor will it lay waste to the landscape, as the Democrats assert. But this can be said of the Medicare bill that passed the House on (Oct. 19): It wouldn't have been what it is if Congress had been more responsible earlier, and it will hurt a lot of Americans.

If you set out to slow the rate of cost increase in Medicare, the choices are few. What can be done is what this bill does: increase the amount that beneficiaries pay for this insurance coverage and squeeze the amounts that hospitals and doctors can receive for treatment under Medicare.

The strategy, however it is candy-coated in anybody's legislation, is to cut the federal budget by folding health maintenance organizations and other nontraditional providers into the Medicare mix and by accepting the risk that health care for senior citizens will be effectively rationed.

The Republicans are right in saying that something had to be done. The Democrats are right in saying that the Republicans' insistence upon also cutting some people's taxes makes it look like more surgery was performed on Medicare than actually was required.

But the bottom line is this: If Congress is only going to address Medicare, without addressing healthcare reform in general, the options taken in this bill are the only ones available.

The tragedy is that the previous Congress (with Republicans loudly in opposition and the administration messing up an opportunity) missed the chance to change the entire health-care landscape and not have to put all the burden of cost controls on the people — elders and their children — who benefit from Medicare.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Oct. 29, the 302nd day of 1995. There are 63 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 29, 1929, "Black Tuesday" descended upon the New York Stock Exchange. Prices collapsed amid panic selling and thousands of investors were wiped out as America's Great Depression began.

On this date:

In 1618, Sir Walter Raleigh, the English courtier, military adventurer and poet, was executed in London.

In 1682, the founder of Pennsylvania, William Penn, landed at what is now Chester, Pa.

In 1901, President McKinley's assassin, Leon Czolgosz, was electrocuted.

In 1911, American newspaperman Joseph Pulitzer died in Charleston, S.C.

In 1923, the Republic of Turkey was proclaimed.

In 1940, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson drew the first number — 158 — in America's first peacetime military draft.

In 1947, former first lady Frances Cleveland Preston died in Baltimore at age 83.

In 1956, during the Suez Canal crisis, Israel launched an invasion of Egypt's Sinai Peninsula.

In 1956, "The Huntley-Brinkley Report" premiered as NBC's nightly television newscast, replacing "The Camel News Caravan."

Team of 'psychic spies' call CIA home

WASHINGTON — More than a decade after we first told the story, the Pentagon continues to employ a highly classified team of "psychic spies," who use a form of extra-sensory perception to help gather intelligence in foreign countries.

Anderson

It was called "Project Grill Flame" when we first reported this strange story in April 1984. Since then, the program has fought off several external and internal threats to its existence, changing its name to Center Lane and Sunstreak, among other appellations.

But it continues to exist, albeit in scaled-down form. It's also been moved from its longtime headquarters at Fort Meade, Md., which gave the unit a comfortable "hideout" because it was home to a much larger spy outfit — the National Security Agency.

The unit was launched in the early 1970s, when the CIA became concerned about a "psychic gap" with the Soviets, who were heavily involved in investigating psychic phenomenon. The precursor of the current project, called "remote viewing," was put together in part by two respected academics — Harold Puthoff, once with the NSA, and Russell Targ, associated with the Stanford Research Institute in Menlo Park, Calif. For a time, in fact, SRI was under contract to run the program for the CIA.

The group was first called "Project Scanate," which stood for "scan by coordinate." Program managers recruited subjects who demonstrated psychic abilities and placed them in darkened rooms, where they were given longitude and latitude coordinates and asked what they "saw." The CIA and Pentagon soon found that it could be a useful tool in the intelligence mix, though they have never relied on it exclusively for intelligence gathering.

Its successes have won key converts inside and outside the intelligence community:

■ One remote viewer described an airfield, complete with details — including a large gantry and crane at one end of the field. The CIA was impressed, but critical. There was indeed an airfield at the given map coordinates — the Soviet Union's ultra-secret nuclear testing area at Semipalatinsk. But the CIA knew of no gantry or cranes at the site. They were later stunned when the next satellite photos revealed both the gantry and crane, which had recently been moved there.

■ Another test involved a Soviet Tu-95 "Backfire" bomber, which the CIA knew had crashed somewhere in Africa. They were eager to find it before the Soviets did, so they could take photographs and perhaps purloin secret gear from the wreckage. So one of the remote viewers was asked to locate the downed bomber, which he allegedly did within several miles of the actual wreckage.

■ In yet another instance, a remote-viewer was asked to focus on a KGB colonel caught spying and being interrogated in South Africa. He "saw" that the spy had been smuggling information using a pocket calculator modified into a communications device, and that the South Africa assignment was his last before returning to Russia. The "suggestion" to question him on this was shared with South African intelligence, and it allegedly caused the spy to break down and cooperate — because of its accuracy.

■ Remote-viewers have been employed in most international crisis over the last two decades. During the Gulf War, knowledgeable sources told our associate Dale Van Atta, remote viewers fingered the secret location of Iraq's Saddam Hussein, though this was never verified by conventional means. The unit's two biggest congressional defenders — Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., and Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C. — have long since been convinced of the program's effectiveness.

The Achilles heel of the project has been its misses — which have raised the ire of many critics over the years. Remote-viewers have produced as much bad information as good, intelligence sources admit. But the program's defenders say this is no different from the rest of the CIA, where human spies have also been known to make major blunders.

"We were always able to survive," one of the remote-viewers told us, "when we stuck to what we did best. It seems to work enough times to make it valuable as a 'tip,' if you will, to where the CIA's folks, or our satellites, should be looking."

GEORGE WILL

Powell faces tough questions in political life

WASHINGTON — Colin Powell, his literary life completed, has gone to earth with advisers to ponder a political life. These advisers, for whom he is a ticket to the circus and who therefore will urge him to run, should quickly help to equip him with answers to questions like:

Will

During Nelson Rockefeller's 14 years as New York's governor, the top income tax rate more than doubled and state and local taxes more than tripled. Not surprisingly, the growth of private sector jobs was four times faster in the nation as a whole than in New York, which experienced a 1,000 percent increase in welfare spending. The state had fewer than 400,000 welfare recipients when Rockefeller became governor but had 1.4 million when he left. You call yourself a "Rockefeller Republican." Why?

You say you are in the "sensible center." Does that mean people to the right of center are not sensible?

Your friend Bob Woodward, the reporter, writes that after you watched the Conservative Political Action Conference convention on C-SPAN you said to a friend, "Can you imagine me standing up and talking to these people?" What is it about "these people" that makes talking to them hard for you to imagine?

Reviewing your book in The New Republic, Nicholas Lemann notes that in 600 pages you do not "display the tiniest hint of wanting fundamentally to shake up the political system, or any system." Are you fundamentally content with the status quo?

Which parts of the Contract With America do you consider "a little too hard, a little too harsh, a little too unkind"?

You call yourself "a fiscal conservative with a social conscience." Who else would you describe that way? How would your social conscience express itself in fiscally conservative policies?

In a Jan. 31 story about one of your public appearances, The New York Times reported that your "ideas sometimes seem so inclusive as to be contradictory," giving as an example the fact that "while discussing 'the need to recreate the American family,' he said, gesturing to a person in the audience who had criticized the military's policy on admitting homosexuals, 'It doesn't even have to be a two-gender family.'" Could you elaborate?

You opposed lifting the ban on gays in the military, citing the military's unique nature and mission. However, in 41 states it is legal to fire a person because of his or her sexual orientation. Should it be? If not, should there be a federal law making discrimination regarding sexual orientation akin to racial discrimination in hiring and housing?

Who lied, Anita Hill or Clarence Thomas? Who more closely resembles your idea of the ideal Supreme Court justice, Thomas or Earl Warren? Should Robert Bork have been confirmed?

You favor some forms of affirmative action. What about the federal program of racial set-asides for minority ownership of television and radio stations, under which you and some partners acquired a Buffalo television station? To Henry Louis Gates Jr., who was writing about you for The New Yorker, you said, "But it's black owned. If you got a bunch of white guys with a brother fronting for them, get rid of it. That doesn't serve any purpose for us." What public purpose is served by government granting to affluent investors racial entitlements to communications media?

As president, would your budget include money for public television and the arts and humanities endowments?

You object to the use the Bush campaign made of Willie Horton in the 1988 campaign. Do you know who first raised the issue of Horton and the Massachusetts furlough program? (Hint: he raised it during the Democrats' New York primary and is now vice president.) What exactly was objectionable about citing Horton and his rape victim as a consequence of that prisoner-release program?

After the O.J. Simpson verdict you said, "It is a racist society. All you have to do is listen to Mark Fuhrman." Does that mean most, or a great many, Americans resemble Fuhrman? Or that racism is the principal impediment to African-American advances? Professor Glenn Loury of Boston University, a leading African-American intellectual, has said that if with a magic wand you changed the color of the skin of the people on Chicago's south side or in south central Los Angeles you would not appreciably change their life prospects. Do you disagree?

There. Twenty-two questions. Twenty-two more, on request.

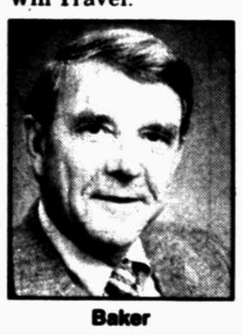
RUSSELL BAKER

Modern hired guns seem to be everywhere

Hired guns are suddenly everywhere. What's worse, they are now heroic, like Paladin, whose card said, "Have Gun, Will Travel."



Baker

Paladin, as played by Richard Boone back in television's Bronze Age, was the pistolero as nice guy. To take him seriously you had to be gullible enough to believe frontier America was roamed by dead shots who killed only to elevate the moral tone of the Old West.

Though he was good TV fun on the surface, Paladin deep down was an implausible stiff. A genuine hired gun — Jack Palance in "Shane," for instance — would probably have killed Paladin as a disgrace to the profession.

The hired gun as anything other than a workman who does it for the money is a creation of sentimental fiction. If Jack Palance didn't think it worth wasting bullets on such milksops, many a literary critic would doubtless do the job with gusto.

In John Huston's film "Prizzi's Honor," a mob hit man balks at killing his wife until his father explains, "It's just business, Charlie."

Doing it for the money is as American as a hit man. Suggesting that there ought to be a more virtuous reason for doing it is offensive to our masculine culture. Why? Because it reveals a mushy, soft-nosed attitude toward the vital importance of getting the job done.

So we come to three real-life hired guns who typify this growing and increasingly honored profession: the baseball pitcher David Cone, the football place-kicker Eddie Murray and President Clinton's latest political strategist, Dick Morris.

Cone and Murray both travel from town to town at the summons of sports executives who need a big job done fast. Cone is usually brought in near the end of the baseball season to help pitch some contending team to a championship.

This year it was the Yankees who hired him when their pennant prospects looked good. Until then he had been parked with an unsuccessful Kansas City team waiting for the call from a contender. Doubtless he will end the 1996 season trying to win the big one for yet another team willing to pay.

Eddie Murray is playing for the Washington Redskins this year, though he helped Philadelphia beat them last year by kicking a winning field goal. He has also played for Dallas, Kansas City and Detroit. Last Sunday he helped Washington beat Detroit with a last-second field goal.

It's just business, Charlie.

In an interview with David Sell of The Washington Post, Murray spoke of living alone in a hotel all season, suggesting the loneliness of the hired gun's life with a terseness worthy of Hemingway:

"Sometimes living in a hotel is easier. The remote is mine. I can do anything I want. If I want to sit around and watch TV in the nude, I can do it."

Messrs. Cone and Murray are both men from outside the sports communities they fleetingly visit. This apartness from the group is characteristic of the life of the hired gun. They ride into town for a brief stay, maybe become heroes for a day or two, then ride to the next job.

Well, many professional athletes ride that big-money range nowadays. Free agency means every team can start every season with a substantially new group of peripatetic players. Very few players ever become identified, as Cal Ripken has in Baltimore, with the "home team."

Truth is, there isn't any home team anymore. Owners choose up whole new teams of hired guns with each new season. Hometown fans everywhere, with touchingly human refusal to face heartbreaking fact, adapt blithely to the reality that the home team is a fiction by simply refusing to believe it.

Dick Morris, President Clinton's latest adviser on how to get re-elected, is this season's emblematic political gunslinger. He is widely credited or blamed — take your choice — for the continuing meltdown of Clinton's political identity. Is the earth round or flat? Morris can teach it either way.

He is no Paladin do-gooder, but the genuine unsentimental Jack-Palance-certified article. In his time he has worked to defeat Clinton and he has worked to elect Clinton. Principle has nothing to do with it. He is a workman.

Just business, Charlie.

Take time to kill nuclear waste issue

The nuclear energy plants in some eastern states want to store their nuclear waste on the Mescalero Apache Reservation in New Mexico.

The Department of Energy (DOE) is seeking public input about the storage of high-level waste! Scoping hearings are going to be held in Nevada, Illinois, Colorado, California, Texas, Utah, Maryland, New York, Georgia and Missouri. Please note: None in New Mexico! At these hearings, the DOE will receive public input concerning impacts and problems with site construction, operation, transportation, etc. They also offer a "No Action Alternative," that means if no action is taken, the power companies would have to store their own waste or close down. This is what we hope will happen.

The DOE has provided a short form asking for your comments on this subject. Please call (915) 682-4422 for a copy of this form. Please take a few minutes to help kill the nuclear waste issue.

Hospice allows death with dignity

many trips to the hospital, we were unable to "make him well," but with Hospice's help we were able to grant him that wish. Hospice of Midland gave him that opportunity with care and comfort and dignity, but even more — a loving friendship relationship — like being nursed by family.

Since January 1995, I have had the privilege of serving on the Hospice board and I can assure you that our utmost interest is in the patient — not only those currently under care, but reaching out to those who need but do not know about us or our services. This board has many professionals who give Hospice their time because this is an organization that they care about. We meet at noon (eating a lunch prepared or furnished by a fellow board member) and much of our time is devoted to discussing ways to invest funds safely to assure that Hospice always will be able to meet the needs of the community.

Please do not let the problems of hospices in neighboring communities cause you to have concerns about Hospice of Midland.

Don't judge black person's credibility

Lately, everyone seems to be making an issue that O.J. Simpson got an acquittal because he and the majority of the jurors were black. If this is so, are we to believe that every white person who's been on trial and has received an acquittal by a majority of white jurors did so because of their race? No! Of course not! Then why be so quick to judge the credibility of a black person's judgment? K.E. Berry in a letter in the Oct. 15 Reporter-Telegram stated that it was "disgusting" to him and many other Americans that the majority of everyone involved in the O.J. trial was black and that he received an acquittal. Well, the fact that a tape proved four white policemen attacked one black man and received an acquittal was disgusting to me and many other Americans. But now, had the situations been reversed and four black men attacked one white man, all of white America would have demanded "justice" and all four men would have received a conviction. Many whites may think that many blacks have a chip on their shoulders. Well, if they had been rejected since grade school all the way to adulthood merely because of their race, and in many instances told it was because of their race, they would carry a chip also. Now, I can't say if O.J. killed his wife or not because I was not there, nor am I the Almighty Judge. But anyone should see that there was too much doubt for a conviction. Especially with a crooked cop in charge of the investigation, who admitted on tape that basically he is a racist.

Use Morales' quote for next ballot

I thought all the thinking Midlanders would get a "kick" out of our Texas Attorney General Dan Morales' recent quote regarding our parenting abilities and rights and that those same thinkers Independent School District case that "parents do not have a fundamental right to direct the education and upbringing of their children." What do we think about that sinister view? Why don't we call him at (512) 463-2100 or write to him in Austin and let him know how his quote has helped us better know him and we plan on using that information the next time his name hits a ballot!

Thanks for support during pageant

I would like to express my sincere appreciation to the great people of Midland, friends and acquaintances and the Reporter-Telegram for all the support and encouragement I received as I participated in the Miss Teen USA Pageant. Even though I did not place as well as I would have liked I gained so much from the experience. I made new friends, met many wonderful people and basically had the experience of a lifetime! I am now looking forward to many new experiences at Midland College as a recipient of the Abell-Hanger Foundation Scholarship. Again, thank you, Midland, for allowing me to be a part of this wonderful community.

Rebel fans are rude at band festival

I have just returned from the Tall City Marching Festival where all four junior high bands, both freshman bands and both high school bands performed for mostly band parents and friends. It was great to watch all these enthusiastic and talented students. The only downfall to this evening was having to watch and listen to the horde of people leave after the Lee High School band finished and before the completion of the two remaining bands, Goddard Junior High School and Midland High School.

I grew up in Midland and graduated from Lee High School and had always felt proud to be "a Rebel." I realize now how arrogant and rude Lee High followers can be. Not only did they not have the courtesy to watch the other bands, but they stampeded out so loudly that the introduction of Goddard Junior High School could not be heard.

The Midland High band, although small, is a very talented and hardworking group of students. They deserved as much courteous listening as the Lee High band.

I never realized the imbalance between the two schools, but I can see an obvious difference in the way each school is treated. I can't understand why the Lee High band is twice the size of the Midland High band. Aren't the two schools supposed to be equal in numbers of students or am I on the wrong track? Or have the Midland High bands, football teams, etc., through the years been so downcast that the enthusiasm to join these groups has declined?

If we want our children to treat everyone as an equal, we as adults need to conduct ourselves in the same manner.

Readers' views on: Open-campus lunch

Open lunch doesn't cause trouble

I am writing in response to Bryan Broughton's letter, printed Oct. 15. I am in high school and have an open-campus lunch hour. I am insulted that Broughton would stereotype all students, making us all sound like troublemakers. Also, that all of us are to be blamed for the conflicts that the "respected, educated, family-oriented" people have at lunch. Sure fast-food restaurants may be more crowded than if we weren't there, but it's not like we are in every restaurant. Can't you find somewhere else to eat?

As far as responsibility, we learn responsibility by having to be back at school on time. Also, about littering, you can't honestly tell me that high school students are the only ones who litter. Everyone of every age has littered at some time.

Also, what on earth does having open-campus lunch have to do with a good education and are you trying to say that since you had closed campus it has made you a better person? If so, something is wrong with our society.

Adrian Nobles
Midland

Young generation isn't in prison

In response to Broughton's letter concerning lack of responsibility from high school students like myself: Broughton has brought it to my attention that according to this "closed-campus rule," many students have chosen to stick to this schedule and go on leading their lives in state prisons. In other words why do we have such overcrowded prisons in America today? It isn't our generation sitting in a cell. Therefore how can Broughton and supporters imply that we are the ones with bad morals stereotyped to us?

I am proud to be in a school today where they don't keep us chained to the school grounds during lunch. Lay a little responsibility upon us to "Buy The Basin" which boosts the economy tremendously; do the math.

Ryan Dodd
Midland

Open lunch helps

I am responding to the letter in the newspaper that Bryan Broughton wrote about teens not being responsible. If we had closed lunch then we wouldn't have any lessons on being responsible. We have to be back in time for class so we have to learn to budget our money and time. I believe he was totally wrong and not all teens are bad at lunch.

Sarah Luehring
Midland

On-campus lunch requires security

Regarding Bryan Broughton's letter of Oct. 15, I'm aware of the fact that he is against off-campus lunch. I support this position. The first goal to work toward for on-campus lunch to operate is to build fences around the school and place security guards and gates at every exit. Not allowing students to leave would destroy the problems with students coming back to school drunk or high. The accident rates around the school would decrease because of less traffic. The attendance record for the students also would improve. If all the students ate lunch at school, the trash would be off the streets. The students might be cut shorter. One negative problem with closed-campus lunch would be the extra tasks that would be required, such as: security, more taxes, non-free time for students. By stating my position I hope I have encouraged a stop to open-campus lunch.

Damion Sanders
Midland

Leaving campus gives needed break

I'm writing in response to the letter written by Bryan Broughton. Since when did eating in the cafeteria or eating a sacked lunch make students more respectable, educated and family-oriented? Working people don't have to schedule their lunch in a 50-minute interval between 11:50 a.m. and 12:40 p.m. Also, most working people don't go to lunch at fast-food places. If you do, I'm sorry that you have to stand in line behind a high school student.

Open campus allows thousands of dollars to enter into the community. Going out for lunch teaches students responsibility in how to manage money and return to school on time. How can leaving school for lunch interfere with a good education? Leaving gives students a break from the hassles of school.

Open campus may cause traffic that is caused by all the working people when they get off work?

Please, give us a break and get over it. How is open campus harming you?

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being resubmitted.
- We do not publish 'open' letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, TX 79702.

SPEAKING OUT

Hospice provides support for terminally ill, families

By Dr. James Corwin

The articles in the Odessa American and television reports this past week about Hospice of the Southwest remind those of us involved with Hospice of Midland that a large number of people in our community may not be aware of our organization or its mission. Further, we recognize that the community at large may be confused as to whether Hospice of Midland and Hospice of the Southwest (and other hospice organizations) are separate entities or work together as one organization. The events that have taken place in Odessa remind us that it is part of Hospice of Midland's job to communicate to the people of Midland County the mission and purpose of the Hospice of Midland, while at the same time informing our community of the scope of services available to them.

Hospice of Midland is a separate, independent organization established in 1981 to provide hospice care to terminally ill individuals in Midland County and is not affiliated with any other hospice organization in the Permian Basin or elsewhere. It is a non-profit organization, and in its early days was supported solely by donation. Over the years, the ability to be reimbursed from insurance, Medicare, or Medicaid has provided additional financial support for Hospice, but donations are still essential.

Dr. James Corwin, medical director of Hospice of Midland, is a clinical associate professor for the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center. Previously he served as a clinical associate professor for the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio, a member of the Cancer Therapy and Research Center advisory board and a lecturer in radiobiology.

The Hospice of Midland mission clearly stated is, "To provide physical, emotional and spiritual support to terminally ill patients, and thereby enable them to live as fully as possible as long as possible." It is a mission that clearly recognizes the inability to prevent the death of a terminally-ill individual, and the responsibility to allow a patient to live and die in comfort and dignity. In our high-tech society, with new drugs, new devices and perhaps unrealistic expectations, many of us fall prey to the expectancy that death can be prevented or delayed, and that one should never stop aggressive treatment of the underlying disease process, whether it be heart failure, cancer, Alzheimer's disease or old age. That is an unrealistic expectation. Dying is the final step in the path of life. While it is possible to prevent unnecessary early death from processes such as heart disease and diabetes, and possible to cure some patients with cancer or delay their deaths, inevitably the patient, family, physicians, nurses and other people involved in the patient's care must come to realize that death is inevitable.

At a certain point, Hospice of Midland may become involved in the patient's care. This can consist of emotional, physical, economic and medical intervention for the dying individual and support for the family. The scope of Hospice care is provided by a team which includes the patient's primary physician, Hospice nurses, home health aides, social workers, the patient's clergy or the Hospice chaplain, music therapist and volunteers. None of these services would be possible without the support of the office staff and board members of Hospice.

It is the goal of Hospice of Midland to provide for all patients, regardless of their ability to pay, and to provide care that is compassionate and realistic for that patient's needs. Part of that care requires educating the family and sometimes the medical staff that dying is part of the living process, and that it should be looked upon as a natural event and made as comfortable as possible for all involved.

As a member of the board of Hospice since 1990, the medical director of Hospice since 1989, and a member of Midland's medical community since 1987, I have referred a number of patients to Hospice of Midland over the years. I feel that the quality of care fulfills my expectations both as a physician and a human being. The administrative staff and board of directors of Hospice of Midland are extremely conscientious with regard to the appropriateness of care delivered and that ethical and sound financial practices be followed. As a member of the Hospice care team, as its medical director and as a primary care physician, I can assure you that the day-to-day operations are responsive to the patient's needs. As a member of the board of directors, I can assure you that the fiscal affairs are managed very well by our executive director, Carol Armstrong, and her staff.

The support for Hospice of Midland clearly indicates a recognition by this community that the services are needed by the people of Midland County. With continued support of a responsible board of directors, and farsighted, careful administration, Hospice of Midland will continue to provide compassionate care to all citizens of Midland County in the years to come. If you, members of your family or friends have other questions about Hospice of Midland, or hospice care in general, the administration of Hospice of Midland is available to answer your questions at anytime.

Rate & Credit Policies

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classified categories require payment in advance. Credit applications are also required for business accounts. Yearly contract agreements are available. The Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to correctly classify and edit all copy or to reject or cancel any advertisement at any time.

Cancellations

The price of your ad will be based on the number of days published according to our rate structure. Call (915) 682-6222 - ask for your cancellation number. This is your record of cancellation and it is important that you have it in the event of any misunderstanding or adjustment. "Super Seller" and "Real Wheel Deal" ads may be cancelled, but are non-adjustable and non-refundable.

Errors and Adjustments

Please check your ad the first day that it appears to be sure that all of the information is correct. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. Call us the first day if you find an error at 915-682-6222. To report an error in Saturday's edition call Saturday morning between 8a.m. and 10a.m. Errors in Sunday's edition should be reported on Monday morning after 8:00 a.m. We must limit our financial responsiblity, if any, to the charge for the word or space, and cannot be held responsible for incorrect ads after the first day of publication.

Omissions of Ads

The Midland Reporter-Telegram assumes no financial responsiblity in an ad beyond the cost of the ad itself, and no responsiblity for the omission of an ad.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS
NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals addressed to the Honorable Mayor and City Council of Midland, Texas, will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas until 10:00 A.M., Tuesday, December 5, 1995 for furnishing all necessary materials, machinery, equipment, superintendence, and labor for constructing certain improvements at Midland International Airport, Midland, Texas. These improvements are contained in the plans and specifications entitled, "City of Midland, Texas, Midland International Airport, Demolition of Buildings and North Service Road Realignment for New Terminal Complex, " dated October 1995.

Immediately following the closing time for receipt of bids, proposals will be publicly opened and read aloud. Any bid received after closing time will be returned unopened.

The principal items of work are set forth in specific detail in the proposal section of these specification; however, the work items may be generally described as: the demolition and removal of six buildings and structures, including asbestos abatement, lead paint removal, utility removal; the construction of approximately 4,700 square yards of new bituminous pavement and related items of work.

The work will also include other miscellaneous materials, equipment, machinery, superintendence and labor for constructing these improvements for the Midland International Airport, Midland, Texas.

A bid proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is hereby expressly understood and agreed the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or, if successful in securing the award therof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance bond and payment bond. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, acceptable to the City of Midland and accepted according to the latest list of companies holding certificates of authority from the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States of America. Proposals submitted without bid guaranty in the form of cash, certified check or bid bond for 5% of the maximum bid will not be considered.

The successful Bidder will be required to furnish a Performance Bond and a Payment Bond each in the amount of the contract, written by a responsible Surety Company authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and satisfactory to the Owner, as required by Chapter 2253 of the Texas Government Code, as amended.

All lump sum and unit prices must be stated in both script and figures. The Owner reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive formalities. In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating the prices in the bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most advantageous construction thereof or to reject the bid. Unreasonable (or "unbalanced") unit prices will authorize the Owner to reject the bid.

Bidders are expected to inspect the site of the work and to inform themselves regarding all local conditions.

This project is an AIP Project. The proposed contract is under and subject to Executive Order 11246 of September 24, 1965, as amended, and to the equal opportunity clause contained in these specifications. The Bidder must supply all the information required by the proposal form.

The successful bidder will be required to submit a Certification of Nonsegregated Facilities prior to award of the contract, and to notify prospective subcontractors of the requirement of such a Certification where the subcontract exceeds $10,000. Samples of the Certification and the Notice to Subcontractors appear in the specifications.

In all areas of employment women and men will be afforded equal opportunity for employment. The employment of women shall not diminish the standards or requirements for the employment of minorities.

Minimum wages and labor rates for the construction of the proposed work have been established by the Secretary of Labor. A schedule of labor classifications and wage rates to be paid are included in the specifications and will be made a part of the contract. The bid form shall contain a statement that the prices bid are based on such wage rates.

This project is subject to Equal Opportunity, Affirmative Action, Minority Business Enterprise Contract Provisions, and other requirements stated in the Instructions to Bidders and other sections of the project specifications and contract documents.

Policy. It is the policy of the Department of Transportation (DOT) that disadvantaged business enterprises as defined in 49 CFR Part 23 shall have the maximum opportunity to participate in the performance of contracts financed in whole or in part with Federal funds.

All bidders and proposers shall make good faith efforts, as defined in Appendix A or 49 CFR Part 23, Regulations of the Office of the Secretary of Transportation, to subcontract 10.0 percent of the dollar value of the prime contract to small business concerns owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals (DBE). In the event that the bidder for this solicitation qualifies as a DBE, the contract goal shall be deemed to have been met. Individuals who are rebuttably presumed to be socially and economically disadvantaged included Women, Blacks, Hispanics, native Americans, Asian-Pacific American and Asian-Indian Americans. The apparent successful bidder (proposer) will be required to submit information concerning the DBE's that will participate in this contract. The information will include the name and address for each DBE, a description of the work to be performed by each named firm, and the dollar value of the contract (subcontract). If the bidder fails to achieve the contract goal as stated herein, it will be required to provide documentation demonstrating that it made good faith efforts in attempting to do so. A bid that fails to meet these requirements will be considered nonresponsive.

Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the Director of Airports, Midland International Airport, Midland, Texas, and at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5214 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703, phone (915) 697-1447.

Copies of the plans and specifications may be secured at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5214 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703, (915) 697-1447, at a cost of $50.00. The cost for the plans and specifications is NON-REFUNDABLE.

KIA

It's about time everyone had a well-made car.

Introducing the Kia that makes roads an option.

If you've heard that Kia only makes sensible cars, drive the new Sportage 4x4 off your favorite road. It has a tough 2-liter single overhead cam engine (or available 130-horsepower DOHC engine), shift-on-the-move 4-wheel drive, coil spring suspension and full-box ladder frame. Not to mention "a junior Range Rover feel" according to Road & Track's Open Road.† But even with all these features, the Sportage SOHC still has a price tag that starts at only $14,895.* So come to think of it, maybe all we make is sensible cars after all.

Introducing the Sportage 4x4. Starting at $14,895.

Kia's special introductory offer: Cash rebate of up to $1,250 on select Sportage models.

Kelly Grimsley Kia, 2603 East 8th Street, Odessa (800) 580-0441

†Used by permission. Reprinted from Road & Track's Open Road, June, 1995. *MSRP $14,895 for 1995 4WD SOHC Sportage with manual transmission, rear ABS and alloy wheels. Includes freight. Excludes registration, taxes, title and options. Actual prices set by Dealer may vary. Always Tread Lightly! on public and private land and always wear your seat belt. Limited time offer on new 4WD Sportage EX automatic DOHC's. Dealer participation may affect cost. Dealer sets actual prices. See Dealer for details. © 1995 Kia Motors America, Inc.

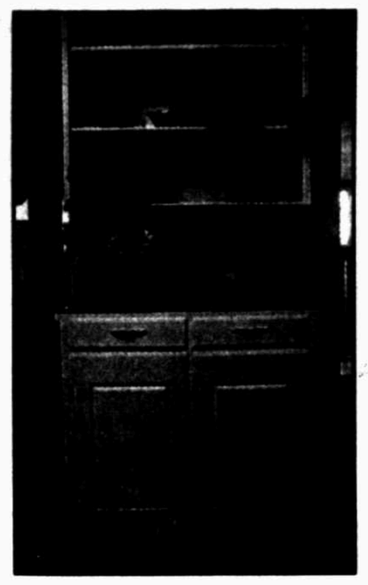
Red brick



Photographs by Joe D. Williams, Story and Design by Kes Gilhome

The red brick exterior, mature trees and quiet location all combine to produce a property that is very attractive, in a peaceful setting

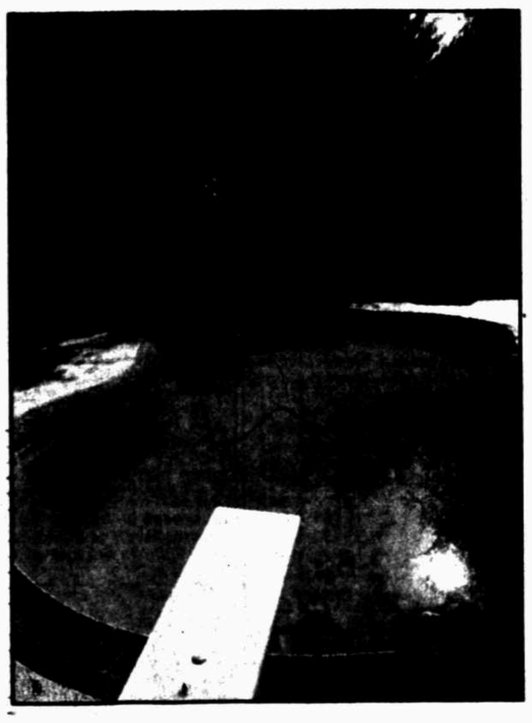
Tucked away in a quiet, convenient cul-de-sac is this charming family home at Number 10 Belfield.

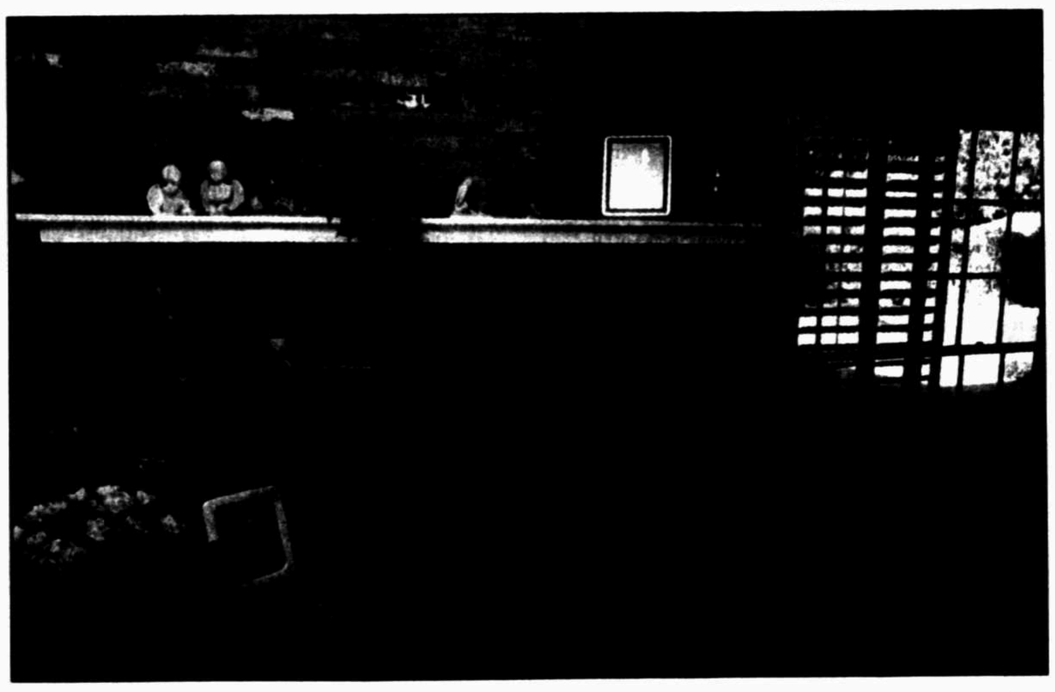
Set at the end of the road - the quietest - the house offers a number of features which the discerning home hunter is sure to appreciate. For example, the kidney shaped pool with accompanying hot tub in the yard is a definite plus and is perfectly designed for summer soirees.



One of the principle attractions of the house is the very flexible floor plan. Although nominally a three bedroom home the second story adds possibilities. This attic space already contains a large room which could be used as a game room. As there is a half bath and a second, smaller room over looking the front of the house this space could easily be converted into a fourth bedroom using the smaller room as a large closet.

Alternatively, the large room could be the game room with the smaller as a guest room or study.

Downstairs the house has been thoughtfully laid out with lots of space and practical features. For example, the kitchen and adjacent breakfast area are large, pleasantly tiled spaces with masses of amenities. The kitchen offers fully built-in appliances including a sizeable double oven and has recently been renovated with new cabinetry and porcelain fixtures.



Plantation shutters, a brick and brass fireplace and elegant mantlepiece help to make the family room extra special.

The breakfast area offers an attractive chandelier and charming views over the pool and patio area through the large picture window.

Three bedrooms are located on the ground floor. Two of them share a bathroom in the east wing, making this space perfect for children whilst the master is sequestered in the west wing.

For more information about this house, either stop by the open house (which is being held this afternoon by Carol Henson of Carriage Company Realtors) or call their offices at 689-3920.

Number 10 Belfield is listed for $134,500 and will be open between three and five o'clock this afternoon.

NOW HIRING FOR OUR NEW KENT KWIK ON WADLEY & LOOP 250

KENT KWIK
CONVENIENCE STORES

How Does Your Job Stack Up Against Team Kent?

SALARY
Our minimum starting salary is $5/hour, Manager trainees can start at $300 a week or more (depending on experience.) We also give you a SIGNING BONUS of $200 ($100 for part-timers) at the completion of your first week!

SECURITY and FLEXIBILITY
Kent Kwik offers stable employment year-round. If you aren't getting enough hours (at least 40) at your current job, WE CAN GIVE THEM TO YOU! If you want to work part-time, we can work with you to tailor-make a schedule that meets your needs! Our stores are open 7 days a week, with many open 24 hours a day. We have some hours available for all shifts. Full-timers work a five day week!

BENEFITS
We offer medical, dental and life insurance to our full-time Team Members. We also have paid vacations, a sick pay plan, college tuition reimbursement ($300 a semester), several bonus plans, and a profit sharing plan. In addition, all Team Members are covered by a $150,000 accidental death life insurance policy!

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES
95% of our Managers started at the entry-level and received the training necessary to become successful at running a small business. We offer continual classroom education in customer service and personal leadership skills. You can tell the difference high-quality training makes when you come into one of our Kent Kwiks.

SO HOW DO WE MEASURE UP?
Where will you be one year from now if you stay with your present company? With Kent, the chances are very high that you could be running one of our locations, making $20,000 or more, plus bonuses! If all of this interests you, the first step is to pick up an application at any one of our Kent Kwiks, complete it, and bring it to our Midland area office (3314 No. Loop 250) between 8 A.M. and 3 P.M. Monday - Friday. If you live in Odessa, we take applications at 809 So. Crane Hwy. On Tuesdays at 9 A.M. and Saturdays at 10 A.M. You will then take a battery of tests and questionnaires which give us the information we need to determine if you have the customer service attitudes, math skills and work ethics required to be successful in our business. We also do criminal and credit background checks, and a drug test is required. Relocation within our operating areas may be available.

Setting the Standards for "Home" Value

We understand that value is a personal combination of:
- The right neighborhood
- Superior quality construction
- Exceptional customer service
- A design that fits your lifestyle
- All at a reasonable price

If a house is built with just the right combination of these features it becomes a "Home" which you will value for years to come. Visit us today and let us help you build that "Home" of your dreams.

To Haiti, with love

Two weeks in Haiti might be a vacation for many people, but for Midland College teacher Carmen Edwards, it was an opportunity to extend her teaching skills beyond borders. It was also an opportunity to profess her faith while being of service to people in need.

"There are all kinds of things I could do on vacation for two weeks. I decided to do something for God," Ms. Edwards said.

The MC Associated Degree Nursing faculty member and RN said she did everything from digging ditches, to climbing scaffoldings, to developing a a physical therapy program for a child with polio.

Instead of stretching out on the beach, she opted for hot and sweaty work in impoverished sections of Haiti.

"And I'd do it again in a heartbeat," Ms. Edwards said. "Our presence made a difference. People couldn't believe Americans cared enough to come help. They hugged us and thanked us. It was a wonderful experience."

Her journey in Haiti began with standing up in the back of a truck for 7 1/2 hours from Les Cayes to Port-au-Prince.

"Haiti is the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere," Ms. Edwards said. Realizing her skills in nursing and teaching could be of value to people, she signed up for Short-Term Evangelical Missions.

"You don't have to have any skills to go," she said. "Just a love of the Lord and a heart for people. This is the kind of thing a whole family could do."

Ms. Edwards said she saw a serious lack of medicine and people with physical deformities.

"Some babies are abandoned if they are not born perfectly. People believe they will bring bad luck," the educator said.

Due to lack of medicine and medical facilities, Ms. Edwards said, "It was like going back in time, like where the United States might have been in the 1940s. There was no medicine, no pain killers for minor surgeries and sterility was a real problem. The hospital windows were screenless and flies were everywhere. There were no sheets or chairs. One woman had been visiting her husband in the hospital for four months and she had no place to sit. She just stood by his bedside. We take so much for granted (in the United States), especially the quality of our health care."

She befriended one 14-year-old, Jova, who had suffered from polio. "He had never had a wheelchair or therapy and drug himself around on the ground, which caused physical deformities."

Ms. Edwards developed a physical therapy program for Jova. "He's bright, and I think he can become physically able to use crutches. If he can use crutches, then he could attend school," she said.

The nurse and educator also particpated in a program to get immunizations to Haitian children.

Mindful of the customs of the area, where women all wear dresses, Ms. Edwards laughed when she recounted American women climbing a scaffolding in a dress to paint a Baptist church in Les Cayes. She said despite poverty, even in the most destitute areas of the Caribbean island, citizens dressed neatly — men in slacks and shirts and women in dresses.

She said the missonary team was there to provide mercy and ministry services. She was encouraged to go by her pastor, the Rev. Robert Walter of Our Savior's Lutheran Church, who also participated on the mission in Haiti

THE MISSION experience was not a new one for Walter, who went on a mission to China for 11 months, He said two weeks doesn't provide participants with a lot of visable results.

"But you do see that the needs are great and that you are planning a lot of seeds," he said. "The value for me as a church leader is seeing that one person can make a small dent. I think if we went and completed our task, we would return complacent."

Ms. Edwards said some of the smallest moments were most important. She said she was touched by a woman in Haiti who had been praying for months for a Bible, "when I have seven at home."

SHE SAID, because of other religions and voodoo, there are a lot of "first-generation Christians" in Haiti. "We showed a film about Jesus, on a sheet hanging on the back of a building and with a projector running on its own generator."

She said many of the missionaries had seen the film and had heard the story of Jesus so many times, it had become second nature.

But seeing Haitian's reactions to the film — clapping in joy as Christ was born, and booing Judas — "brought a freshness of the Gospel to all of us."

Walter said showing the film "was a real highlight. Even though the film was in Creole, we understood the story and we enjoyed sharing the message."

PEOPLE PARTICIPATING in the short-term mission brought enough of their own food for two weeks "in a 64-pound suitcase filled with granola bars and small containers of applesauce. We didn't want to take the food out of anyone's mouthes in a country where it is scarce," Ms. Edwards said.

She said furniture was also scarce. Some people might have a chair or a table in their home, but seldom had both.

Other than being a teacher, a Midlander, a nurse, and a nursing instructor, Ms. Edwards said she sees herself as a "world Christian."

"God loves people in Haiti as much as he loves us. I could have been born in Haiti," she said.

Walter said Ms. Edwards "has a calling. She has considered going to Bosnia."

MS. EDWARDS said, it is a consideration, when the political climate makes the country safer.

She said she is grateful to work in a college that supports faculty endeavors outside of the classroom.

Even more, when she came back to the States, she said, "I thanked God for everything I have, for a healthy family, electricity, food, cars, refrigeration, and even a chair."

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Prudential Insurance Company of America, in partnership with the National Association of Secondary School Principals, is offering Spirit of Community awards to middle-level and high school students.

Awards will be made to students who have made outstanding, self-initiated contributions to their communities.

The Spirit of Community awards will recognize students selected through schools across the country. They will be recognized as young people who are setting inspiring examples of community service.

The top two students in each state, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico will receive national awards at a special ceremony in Washington, D.C.

Information may be obtained from public and private school principals.

Each participating school may select one honoree for every 1,500 students. Deadline to solicit nominees is Nov. 30. Winners will receive a trip to Washington, D.C., in May 1996, a silver medallion and $1,000.

Winners will be announced in February 1996. Of 104 state winners, 10 will be selected to receive $5,000, a gold medallion and a trophy for their school.

Nominees must be age 11-18 or in grades 6-12 as of Nov. 30. Their community service activity must have taken place since September 1994. Activities will be judged on various criteria.

For more information contact school principals.

Batmans, Barbies and cows favored Halloween costumes

NEW YORK (AP) — The treat is venturing into the night disguised as the Caped Crusader, the beautiful princess, the comic cow. The trick is finding the right costume to do it.

When the frost is on the pumpkin, the pressure is on at Rubie's Costume Co. — the largest manufacturer of Halloween costumes in the United States.

Rubie's sells magic and fantasy to Wal-Mart, Toys R Us, Party City and about 8,000 other stores, including local pharmacies. It ships embroidered satin "Princess Bride" costumes to F.A.O. Schwarz — where they retail for about $65 — and sends simple $7.99 witch suits to Pathmark.

It makes bib-and-bonnet costumes for infants, Samurai warrior outfits for men weighing 280 pounds. Each of its 230 rubber masks drips more blood and gore than the next. Wigs start with Elvis, go on to Cleopatra, and end with Lady Godiva, blond strands down to the floor.

An adult could enter their showroom and not come out for days. A second-grader could go in and never come out.

Rubie's is serious about Halloween.

The word this year? Two words, actually — Batman and Barbie.

To date, Rubie's has sold 300,000 costumes related to the movie "Batman Forever," including 27 different renditions of Batman, Robin, The Riddler, Harvey Two-Face and Catwoman.

And that's just for children. Adults have nearly a dozen versions of their own.

"The kids love Jim Carrey," John Kearns, head of Rubie's design department, said of the rubber-faced comedian who played The Riddler.

Other costumes never get old. This year — Barbie's 36th anniversary — Rubie's has sold 200,000 of her outfits in 16 different styles, from "Rappin' and Rockin' Barbie" to the traditional "Wedding Fantasy Barbie."

"Kids want to be pretty," said company spokeswoman Terry Goldkrantz. "Some things do not change."

BUT EVEN Rubie's can be surprised by a hit. This year's unsung winner: cow costumes with udders. The company made more than 100,000 for kids, 60,000 for adults.

"Don't ask me why on that one," laughed Kearns.

His team has already finished dozens of costumes for 1996, but don't try to sneak a peak — they're under wraps until next year's Toy Show, when they'll be unmasked to the industry.

"Every year we have mothers coming in — they want the costume we are making for next year and they don't care what it costs," Goldkrantz said. "They go home without it."

Halloween generated more than $30 million in sales for the company in 1994, and demand in the last five years has been strong.

IN ONE ROW, mounds of orange and yellow tulle were being sewn together into a deluxe "Pumpkin Princess" costume. In the next, a light-gray quilted material was being transformed into a "Robocop" chest protector. Down the hall, boxes upon boxes were being filled with costumes for angels, harem girls, pirates, witches and ninjas.

"I love this job," said packer Sabie Venkatasami. "Different colors, different costumes every day."

Rubie's also rents top-of-the-line costumes for adults, and snaking lines of customers form around the block as the deadline approaches for getting a Halloween outfit that will knock the socks off the neighbors.

"The showroom turns into a madhouse. For us, it's murder, but they are all having a ball." said Goldkrantz.

Storytelling an art form used in school classrooms

From Staff Reports

The ancient art of storytelling offers another dimension to reading and writing, according to representatives of the West Texas Storytelling Guild.

"Storytelling not only teaches, but also fascinates, and uses imagination for creativity to its fullest ... to learn," said storyteller Ritzie Williford, known to youngsters as "Mother Goose." Ms. Williford said "presentation makes all the difference in our more sophisticated society. Storytelling brings our children an understanding of ourselves and others around the world."

The West Texas Storytelling Guild offers programs for classrooms and organizations.

"Today, from early childhood centers to high school classes, we are teaching our children about their cultures and the cultures of others," Ms. Williford said. "Education is coming alive today, with the addition of the ancient art of storytelling."

The West Texas Storytelling Guild strives to perserve and perpetuate the oral tradition of storytelling.

Polo benefits MC

From Staff Reports

Chukkars, hooks and ride offs are just a few of the words heard around a polo game. But diehard fans and newcomers to the sport are all invited to today's 2 p.m. tournament which will raise money for Midland College's Veterinary Technology Program.

Morning Star Farm and the Midland Polo Club have agreed to donate proceeds from the tournament to the MC program.

Fajitas and soft drinks will be available at the event, located on the Midland Polo Club grounds at the end of Polo Club Drive in north Midland.

Cost is $5 per carload and dress is casual. The event will feature a "candy drop" for children.

Today's match is the last polo tournament of the season.

Proceeds from the event will provide funds for equipment and supplies for the MC veterinary program. The two-year certificate program trains students in lab procedures and surgical assistance procedures, parasitology, pharmacology, immunology and nutrition.

The public is invited to attend.

Polo features players on horseback attempting to drive a small white ball through goalposts. The teams of four players each play six periods or chukkars of seven minutes.

Griffin honored

Larry D. Griffin, MC Division Chair of Fine Arts and Communication, is the recipient of a Citation of Merit from Northeastern State University in Tahlequah, Oklahoma.

Griffin graduated from NSU in 1973 with a degree in English. He received a master's degree in 1975 and a Ph.D. in 1989. Griffin has authored several books of poetry, criticism and short fiction.

Writing course scheduled

West Texas author Nancy Robinson Masters will present "Getting Paid to Write" 9 a.m.-3:30 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 4 in a workshop at Midland College.

Masters, who makes her living as a free-lance writer, will bring her self-described "hard-core facts of life" as a writer to a one-day writing workshop at Midland College.

Masters will teach beginning writers how to turn their words and creative ideas into marketable pieces of writing that will sell. She focuses her workshops on how to write for a specific market and how to sell what you write.

Students are encouraged to bring anything they've written—inspirational, poetry, fiction—and learn how to turn ideas into stories that sell.

Please call Midland College's Continuing Education Department, 685-4518, for more information.

Veterinary Update planned

The Permian Basin Veterinary Association, Midland College Health Sciences Continuing Education and the Midland College Veterinary Technology Program will present "Veterinary Update," 2-9 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 11 in the MC Scharbauer Student Center Roadrunner Room. The program will be presented by Darryl E. McDonald, Jr., D.V.M., M.S of Dallas Veterinary Surgical Center, Dallas, Texas.

Registration is required by Nov. 6. The course fee is $50 for D.V.M.'s and $25 for veterinary technicians. There is no charge for MC students.

MAA Fall Exhibition

The Midland Arts Association 18th Annual Fall Juried Art Exhibition will continue at the McCormick Gallery at Midland College through Nov. 3.

Gallery hours are 8 a.m.-10 p.m., Monday-Thursday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m., Friday, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday and 1-5 p.m. Sunday.

Chukkers, hooks, Vet Tech

Polo tournament benefits MC program

Chukkers, hooks and ride offs—for those unfamiliar with polo, the game can be confusing and chaotic but today, the goal is clear for both the fans and the players: to raise money for the Midland College Veterinary Technology Program.

Today's match is the last polo tournament of the season and Morning Star Farm and the Midland Polo Club have agreed to donate the proceeds to the Midland College Veterinary Technology Program.

Event organizer and Veterinary Technology advisory board chair Barbara Magruder said she is enthusiastic about the tournament because it will help raise money for the program and bring in new people to watch the sport.

Dr. Kerry Coombs, director of veterinary technology, said the game will provide funds for equipment and supplies.

The Veterinary Technology Program is a two-year certificate program that trains students in lab procedures and surgical assistance procedures, parasitology, pharmacology, immunology and nutrition.

"The students are excited to be involved in supporting their program," Coombs said.

According to "Pony Up: A Guide for Beginners" in Polo on the Prairie, the idea of polo is simple: "Get a small white ball through two goalposts set eight yards apart. The teams of four players each have six periods or chukkers to accomplish this. Each chukker lasts seven minutes; a tie-breaking chukker lasts 7.5 minutes."

> "The students are excited to be involved in supporting their program."
> —Kerry Coombs, Director of Veterinary Technology

While spectators learn the game, there is plenty of food—fajitas, iced tea and soft drinks—and fun—there will be a candy drop for children. The dress is casual, and the price is right at $5 a car.

The tournament is set for 2 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 29 at the Midland Polo Club Grounds at the end of Polo Club Drive in north Midland.

Midland College plans contest, workshop, poetry reading

The next six weeks offers local writers of poetry several opportunities—the Hilda Simmons Levitt Eighth Annual Poetry Competition and a poetry workshop conducted by well known writer Charlotte Renk—to hone their skills.

The Hilda Simmons Levitt Poetry Competition was established by Stanley Levitt in memory of his wife. Mrs. Levitt died in 1994 and the couple's daughter, Carol Schwartz, is continuing to underwrite the contest.

The contest is as prestigious as any national poetry contest because of the recognition and prize money the winners receive. The first prize winner will receive $500, second place, $200 and third place, $100.

Any student registered for Midland College English classes or anyone who has been registered in English courses at MC within the last year is eligible, except for previous first-place winners. Eligible students may submit as many entries as they choose, but no contestant will be awarded more than one prize. Any poem which has placed in any other contest is not eligible.

Entries will be accepted by any Midland College Department of English faculty member or lab instructor. No entries will be accepted after Nov. 13. Contest winners will be announced at an awards ceremony 9:30 a.m., Thursday, Dec. 7 in the Midland College Scharbauer Student Center Faculty Lounge.

Along with the contest, a poetry workshop will be conducted by contest juror, Charlotte Renk.

Renk, a member of the English faculty of Trinity Valley Community College in Athens, Texas, is a poet and writer of fiction. "This is the first time we have offered a workshop in conjunction with the competition," Glenda Lindsey-Hicks, contest coordinator, said. "The poetry workshop is an opportunity for the community to explore its most compelling issues," Hicks said. Hicks also notes that Renk is particularly qualified to teach this type of workshop since she is well acquainted with the diversity present on community college campuses. "Ideas, gender, generations, race—everything and everyone comes together in the process of creative writing," Hicks said.

The workshop is free to students eligible to enter the Hilda Simmons-Levitt Competition. There will be a $10 fee for off-campus participants. Scholarships will be available and preregistration is encouraged due to limited enrollment. The workshop will be 1-3 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 7.

Ms. Renk will also present a reading of her work 7 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 7 in the MC Scharbauer Student Center Faculty Lounge. For more information concerning the contest or workshop, contact Glenda Lindsey-Hicks at 685-4627.

Elise Coombes is public relations director for Midland College.

Black cats have long been associated with Halloween and bad luck. However, this stylized porcelain kitty (below) adds an elegance to any seasonal decor. While jack-o'-lanterns are a favorite for Halloween, this beautiful large pumpkin topped with a fall arrangements of silk flowers is the perfect touch for any time during the fall. Both items are from The Ivy Cottage.

This life-like scarecrow, right, from Hobby Lobby, is the perfect Halloween or autumn decoration. He looks right a home nestled in a pumpkin patch from Expressions.

It used to be a holiday referred to "fright night" filled with haunting spirits, grizzly monsters and blood-sucking vampires. But this year, Halloween seems to have taken on a new face, a "boo"tiful face, if you will. And it is becoming almost as big a deal as Christmas when it comes to decorations.

If you've been in a store or driven down almost any Midland street lately, you may have noticed Pumpkins, "friendly" ghosts and scarecrows dot the lawns of many homes.

Stores as well have loaded up on Halloween paraphernalia, and these items go far beyond the typical costumes, spider webs and candy. Specialty stores, gifts stores, department stores, grocery stores...they all feature decorative items of some sort, ranging from

Concert brings back memories of '30s, '40s Big Band sounds

By Marilyn McKnight-Harrison

Today's channel surfing is really a throwback to the Big Band era and the switching of the radio dial, said local radio personality Max Howard in a clever introduction of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Swing Orchestra at its recent concert at Midland Center. He alluded to other memories of that era, before the group played its re-creation of Big Band sounds of the '40s.

McKnight-Harrison

Led by Rob Hunt, the symphony's conductor, the band and Symphony Pops Singers performed music by Glenn Miller, Duke Ellington, Count Basie, benny Goodman and others. Later, the audience was invited to take the floor and dance to the big band sounds.

An old-time Midlander at our table remarked how the program brought back memories of the '30s and '40s when big bands traveling from coast to coast would make Monahans their stopping off point. "They played at Tubb Hall, a combination dance hall and bowling alley," she said. Although Midland was not large enough to attract the big names then, area musicians entertained in the Hotel Scharbauer ballroom, as well as the Settles Hotel in Big Spring, and Permian Basin residents would make the trek to both towns for the live entertainment.

Among those enjoying last weekend's fun event were Frances and Jack Brown, Kim Young and Ben Wilcox, Janis Chapman, Ruby Graves, Martha and Brent Womack, and Betty and Wilie Basham.

THE MIDLAND LAW WIVES hosted a casual get-together recently at Murray's Delicatessen, with a menu straight from New Orleans.

Among those enjoying the Cajun buffet were this year's president, Yvonne Tighe and her husband, Mike; Julie and Judge Royal Ferguson, Laura and Tom Scott, Dolores and Judge Al Walvoord, Schatzie and Charles Tighe, Rosemary and Max Wright, Stehanie and Judge Louis Guirola, Margie and Mike McKinney and Ann and Jack Wilhelm.

HARRIS KERR described his recent hunting trip to Canada as "the experience of a lifetime." The party of ten included two other Midlanders, Dick Lowery and Albert Metcalfe, and three Odessans, Jim Blaine, Brian Dickerson and Jerry Lee.

Their adventures began in Edmonton, the capital city of Alberta, Canada. "Since it is an oil town, we felt on home territory," Harris told us. From there, they went to Yellowknife, a diamond mining boom town in the Northwest Territories, and a float plane then took the group to Courageous Lake. With Canadian guides, they hunted for caribou, wolves and wolverines.

The beautiful, isloated country is 150 miles south of the Artic Circle and is known as "The Barren Grounds." "The word to describe it is 'muskeg'," Harris said. "It is similar to tundra but not permanently frozen."

IF YOU HAPPENED to be watching the local news a recent Thursday evening, you might have been surprised to see Dr. James H. "Red" Duke live. The renowned trauma surgeon and television personality from Houston, who hosts the nationally syndicated "Texas Health Reports" thrice weekly on KMID-TV, was in town to address an assemblage at the Confederate Air Fore Hangar, and he graciously appeared on both of the station's evening broadcasts.

Approximately 400 persons gathered for the Samaritan Counseling Center of West Texas's "Family of the Year" banquet, which featured Dr. Duke's speech.

In his inimitable manner, Dr. Duke gave his "Prescription for Stress Reduction." Acknowledging that life is difficult, Dr. Duke stated, "My secret is to try and have a good time in whatever situation I am in." Laughter being his main Rx for stress, he used humor as a means of conveying his message, and related how he handles his demanding responsibilies and hectic schedule.

In a special presentation before the dinner, Joyce and Bruce Ryan and their daughters, Tracey and Melissa, were honored as Midland's "Family of the Year."

A reception in the CAF's Museum gave benefactors an opportunity to meet Dr. Duke prior to the dinner.

Among those seen in the crowd were Shirley and Clark Butts, Paula and Jim Henry, Fran and Bob Dawson, Wyvonne and Keith Spradlin, Millowee and Carvel Mills and Joyce and Cliff Sherrod.

Trick-or-treaters say, 'Just candy, please'

By Darlene Superville
Associated Press

NORTH POTOMAC, Md. — Ghosts and goblins may not frighten trick-or-treaters this Halloween as much what they could find inside their goody bags: healthful snacks instead of sugary candy.

Non-candy snacks — including Cream of Wheat and instant oatmeal — are being talked up this year as healthier alternatives to candy for that ghostly holiday, but sweet-toothed youngsters won't hear of it.

"They should give out candy, not breakfast," said 11-year-old Michael Bergamini, who shook his head in disgust. "Everyone likes candy. Not Cream of Wheat or oatmeal or raisins."

But non-candy snack foods are becoming a new Halloween tradition, says the Snack Food Association, which has joined the National Potato Promotion Board to push them as an alternative to sweeter treats.

"The popularity of pretzels in particular, with their excellent nutritional profile, has made them an excellent choice for handing out at Halloween," association spokeswoman Jane Schultz said.

"We promote snacks as fun foods, and Halloween is a fun holiday so we feel like snacks fit very well with Halloween," Schultz said.

BUT KIDS BELIEVE it's their right to have candy on Halloween.

"It's like a special day and you should get stuff you like — like candy," said 8-year-old Thomas Bergamini, brother of Michael.

Edith Hogan of the American Dietetic Association — noting that the government recently found that the number of overweight children had more than doubled in the past 30 years — said Halloween is a perfect time to teach youngsters about good nutrition.

"You can make a difference with kids, even at Halloween, with what you give them," said Hogan.

Hogan, who said she loves to pass out single-serving packages of instant oatmeal or Cream of Wheat, said bagels, raisins and sunflower seeds make healthful treats, too.

"It's nice to have something other than your 25th Snickers bar," said Bonnie Liebman, director of nutrition for the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a consumer advocacy group.

Candy companies, naturally, called their products a Halloween tradition that should not be disturbed, however well intentioned the motive.

Some candy on Halloween night will not harm a child's diet, provided that diet is balanced and varied, said Susan Smith, spokeswoman for the Chocolate Manufacturers Association and the National Confectioners Association.

Parents should spread the loot out over several days, rather than letting children eat it all at once, she suggested.

"I think you'd have some pretty disappointed kids if they went out and didn't get a piece of candy for Halloween," said Marlene Machut, spokeswoman for the M&M-Mars Co. of Hackettstown, N.J.

Sweatsuits can make great Halloween costumes

By Mia B. Moody
Associated Press

WACO, Texas — With Halloween just around the corner, most children have started the mad scramble for the perfect costume.

Pint-size trick-or-treaters often want something that is flashy and trendy, while their parents prefer something that is original, safe and inexpensive.

That's where the battle begins.

It's hard to convince a child that a ghost made from an old white sheet is just as cool as an expensive Power Ranger costume.

Costumes made from sweats are the perfect compromise.

To appeal to kids, they can be used to make almost anything with a little imagination and patience. On a more practical side, they are inexpensive, warm and can be used again after Halloween.

Here are some ideas on how to make costumes using sweats and other materials:

NOTE: Before beginning, prewash sweatsuits without fabric softener. When you're done, let them dry flat for 24 hours. Wait 72 hours before laundering, then wash inside out in warm water only.

STRAWBERRY

Materials: Red sweatshirt and sweatpants, white fabric paint, black fabric paint, green ski cap, glue gun, one yard of green netting, 1 yard of green ribbon.

Directions: Using white paint, make tear-shaped, pea-sized dots all over the sweatsuit, then outline each dot in black. To make the leaf, glue gathered netting using a glue gun between the fold of green ribbon. Leave enough room on each side to tie ribbon in the back. Top off the strawberry with a green ski cap.

BUMBLEBEE

Materials: Yellow sweatshirt and black sweatpants, 12 strips of black utility tape long enough to wrap around sweatshirt, a black headband, round styrofoam balls painted yellow, two 12-inch pipe cleaners.

Directions: To make the body, adhere black tape (spaced evenly) in horizontal stripes to the sweatshirt. To make an antenna, wrap the pipe cleaners around the headband, letting the ends stick up. Push the yellow styrofoam balls onto the ends of both pipe cleaners.

LION

Materials: Yellow sweatpants and a yellow hooded sweatshirt. About 1½ yards of brown felt that has a sticky backing, a long-strip of yellow felt, semi-permanent velcro, glue gun, enough brown fur to trim the hood, sleeves and tail.

Directions: Cut an egg-shaped piece of the brown felt about the size of your child's stomach and stick it to the front of the hooded shirt. Attach two round pieces of brown felt to knees of pants. Cut yellow felt to desired length of tail, then safety-pin it to the seat of the sweatpants. Use velcro tape to adhere fur trim around the hood and arms of the jacket and tail.

For parents who have a little more time and money to spend on Halloween costumes, here are two ideas offered by Jerzees American Activewear and Tulip fabric paints, using sweats and paints.

INDIAN PRINCESS or CHIEF

Supplies: 1 forest green full-length apron, 1 light oxford or birch youth crewneck sweatshirt and matching pants, 1 painted seashell with a hole near the top, black or forest green thread, different shaped sponges, fabric paints (colors: teal, true red, golden yellow and precious metals quicksilver).

Directions: Paint a true red armband on one arm of the sweatshirt and legbands on both legs of the sweatpants. Paint a necklace design on the sweatshirt (fill in with true red, golden yellow and teal, outline in quicksilver). Attach the shell to the necklace with thread. Cut fringes at the bottom of the apron and use sponges to put diamond, rectangle and squares on it. Paint rectangles red, then add teal diamonds and golden yellow squares. With quicksilver, draw a diamond outline around each teal diamond. Use a piece of fabric to make a headband, then paint the same design on the headband as on the apron. For an Indian chief, omit the necklace and use a waist-only apron.

BALLERINA

Supplies: 1 white youth crewneck sweatshirt, 2½ yards of pink ribbon, 1½ yards of bias tape double fold, 2 yards of pink netting, clear jewels (assorted sizes), sponges, 1 sheet of white fun foam (9x12), white plastic headband, glue gun, fabric paints (colors: heather, peach blush, purple, pink, brilliant jewels silver agate and amethyst).

Directions: Sponge-paint a purple camisole tank on the front and back of the white sweatshirt and panties on the white Jerzees sweatpants. Then, lightly sponge over the purple with peach blush. Outline the camisole and panties in silver agate. Sponge hearts on sweatshirt and pants with pink and purple paints. Outline hearts in amethyst. Add jewels by swirling pink and purple paints on bottom of jewels, then placing them on shirt outline. Also add swirl paints on backs of jewels before applying to shirt for necklace.

Create necklace by outlining from jewel-to-jewel with silver agate. To make a ballerina's skirt, glue gathered netting using a glue gun in between folds of bias tape. Leave a couple of feet at both ends for tying on skirt. Glue about two yards of ribbon on each leg, then crisscross around calf and tie below the knee. For headband, cut crown shape out of white fun foam. Sponge silver agate on back of large jewel before applying to crown. Outline jewel and add decoration to crown with silver agate, purple pearl and pink slick. When dry, glue to plastic headband.

BOO: Halloween takes on a more decorative face simple autumn colored candles or elaborate floral arrangements to porcelain black cats and wood cutout jack-o'-lanterns.

You also may notice that most of the decorations this year are steering away from the haunting ghouls, goblins, skeletons and monsters of yesteryear and instead, have focused on more friendly — or possibly politically correct — images for the holiday.

One of the most popular decorative items scattered around town are the orange jack-o'-lantern or white ghost plastic bags which are stuffed with newspapers and tied off. They come in all sizes, from small ones that hang from trees to large, waist-high bags that sit on the lawn. These bags are inexpensive and, if placed carefully, can be saved to use again next year.

WOOD CUTOUT decorative items also are popular. These have a wide range of sizes as well; from small table decorations to large lawn ornaments. Many of these wood cutouts are hand painted, so each has its own personality and charm. Jack-o'-lanterns, pumpkins, ghosts and scarecrows are just a few of the seasonal styles available. One scarecrow, found at Expressions, is made in pieces with small ropes holding him together so all his joint areas move somewhat like a rag doll.

Instead of wood, some people prefer a more realistic approach. At Hobby Lobby, a scarecrow about half the size of real-life one is decked out in green corduroy pants and burlap hat with raffia for hands, hair and feet. His clothing is in bright fall colors, making him perfect for guarding the porch [illegible] autumn.

[illegible] traditional Halloween [illegible] showing up with a new twist. Instead of the mean witch with a green face and a wart on her nose, or the stark white face of the Vampire hungry for dinner, Hobby Lobby whimsically dressed Teddy bears as these characters and placed them in arrangements. Dreamsicles, Precious Moments and other collectible lines also have "critters" dressed as Halloween characters.

ONE OF THE newest items for Halloween is the Pumpkin Impostor, available at various locations, including The Ivy Cottage. Any parent who has have the chore of cleaning a pumpkin for the carving of the jack-o'-lantern will appreciate this new design. The Pumpkin Impostor looks like a real jack-o'-lantern, complete with flaws on the pumpkin's spongy skin that even feels like a real day old pumpkin. It comes already carved with a face and has an electric light inside instead of a candle, which usually is blown out in the West Texas wind anyway.

For a more sophisticated look, some floral designers are creating beautiful arrangements with pumpkins and other gourds, corn and fall foliage.

THERE EVEN even is an abundance of clothing and jewelry with Halloween motifs that have caught the eye of the seasonally fashion conscious. From socks and neckties to knitted sweaters and embroidered shirts, Halloween clothing may be approaching the popularity and variety of the Christmas season status. And the greeting card section seems to be continually increasing the variety of cards available for what once was a "night of the living dead."

So as Halloween approaches Tuesday, just look around and see how "boo"tiful a holiday can be.

Fall best time for some planting

By Deborah A. Benge-Frost

Fall does dazzle us with some gorgeous weather, sights and colors. We can work with the season, enhancing what the Creator has done for us at this beautiful time of year by adding some unusual but outstanding fall blooming perennials to our landscapes. Fall blooming asters, obedient plant, Maximillian sunflower and Mexican mint marigold can add spice to your fall garden.

Benge-Frost

The ever-popular mum overshadows some of these beautiful plants, but make a place for the show-stopping asters. Their stunning beauty makes them worthy of a place in your garden. These gorgeous perennials are intriguing from a distance and are just as engaging when viewed from up close. Their many slender-petaled flowers have a starry quality that adds to the enchantment of the plant.

There are many types of asters, ranging in size from 6 inches to 6 feet tall. Flower size varies too, but the most common types have a 1 1/2 -inch flower in white, blue, pink, lavendar or purple, with most having a yellow center. Most bloom in late summer and fall, while some will bloom in spring too.

Full sun sites with soils that have excellent drainage are best for the asters. Average care for most asters will yield great-looking flowers. Some of the taller ones will tend to flop, especially if they get too much water and fertilizer. Try altering this with early season pinching or plant them where they can spill out on the ground without creating problems. Asters are prone to powdery mildew, so, again, full sun and good air circulation can help. Vigorous asters will need to be divided once a year, fall or spring, and slower-growing asters will need dividing once every two to three years.

There are many species and varieties of asters, but two outstanding ones are Aster frikartii and A. oblongifolius.

The frikartii aster is a hybrid and has the longest bloom period of all the species. Not as hardy as some of the other asters, it needs mulching; avoiding wet winter soils also is advisable. The frikartii is widely adapted, has a hairy leaf, lavender flowers, grows to 2 to 3 feet and may need pinching early in the growing season. It blooms from summer to fall and blooms best when deadheaded.

Aster oblongifolius is an autumn aster that does very well in our location. A little more difficult to find, it is worth the search. This aster has excellent drought tolerance and is covered with 2-inch-wide lavender flowers in October until the first freeze. It grows to a 2- to 3-foot height and, if in full sun, will need no staking. Dr. William Welch, state extension horticulturist, says it looks great when growing in the same border with yellow-gold flowering Mexican mint marigold.

Obedient plant or false dragonhead, Physostegia virginiana is another great-looking fall bloomer that's easy to grow. This plant has a tall, straight, narrow form with flower stalks covered in lavender, pink or white flowers in August through October. The flowers look similar to snapdragons and are obedient — that is, if you move them to the right or the left, they will stay in that position.

Physostegia is a good "leaky faucet" plant, since it likes moisture, so locate it in a moist bed. East or north exposures are good. It can tolerate a dry spell, but will do much better if you keep the soil moist and mulched. Tip-pruning in May or June can help keep plants stocky, although I've not seen laying over as a problem. Height, depending on the species or cultivar, is from 2 to 4 feet. Clumps spread rapidly with a moist soil, so division can take place in fall or spring. Varieties "Vivid," a more compact cultivar with rose-pink flowers, and "Summer Snow," a white cultivar, are not as aggressive. This plant is neat in appearance and growth habits, although it can be a little aggressive.

Maximillian sunflower, Helianthus maximiliani, is a delightful, tough-as-a-boot, fall-blooming perennial. A large plant that can be a little overpowering in height and size, it is best used in the back of a border, against a fence or even in the alley in full sun, but it will do pretty good in partial sun too. Staking may be necessary, especially if it gets too much water and nitrogen. This plant can grow 10 feet tall, and will spread in clump diameter each year. It blooms in the fall with traffic-stopping, brilliant yellow 3-inch diameter flowers that cover the top fourth of the tall stems. Clumps can be divided in fall or spring. It is showy and easy to grow with very little care.

One other fall bloomer worthy of our attention, mentioned previously with the autumn blooming aster, is the Mexican mint marigold, Tagetes lucida. Sometimes used as a substitute for French tarragon, this herb makes a fine fall blooming perennial. This plant bears clusters of golden-yellow, single flowers that occur from mid-fall to frost. Plants form attractive many-branched mounds if it is grown in full sun site and in soils with good drainage. It seems to be drought tolerant, so it is especially good for our dry climate. This neat plant doesn't seem to have the serious leaf hopper and mite problems often seen with other marigolds and keeps a neat form throughout the season. It develops a larger clump each year and can be divided in spring to increaes or take cutings in the growing season.

These are just a few, not your run-of-the-mill, fall blooming perennials that have excellent performance in area landscapes. Add more color to your fall plant pallet with some of these plants. Remember, fall is an excellent time to be planting perennials, so don't let this excellent opportunity pass without planting some of these fall-blooming beauties.

Smocking arts classes planned

Staff Reports

The Tumbleweed Chapter, Smocking Arts Guild of America, in conjunction with the Arts Assembly of Midland and Texas Commission on the Arts, will present classes with Debbi Lashbrook Nov. 2-4 at First Baptist Church's Activities Building in Midland.

Ms. Lashbrook is owner of Homespun Treasures in Plano. She earned a master of science degree with honors in home economics, textiles and clothing from the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. She has teaching experience with various sewing, design and fitting classes in association with Bernina Sewing Center of Plano, Great American Cover Up Quilt Shop of Plano, and Savoy House of Fabrics in Savoy, Ill., and was an instructor at the University of Illinois from 1973-1981. She has taught in several other cities including teaching Creative Sewing Schools during the summer of 1992. From 1981-1990, she also was a custom dress maker.

A member of the North Dallas Needles Smocking Guild since 1985 — and serving a president during 1987 and 1988 — Ms. Lashbrook is the author and designer of the booklet "Time-Saving Smocking Construction." She has 27 applique patterns, nine smocking/garment patterns and two col-

AT WIT'S END

If the shoe fits, probably not mine

By Erma Bombeck

Just when I thought our cultural legacies could never exceed the Bra Museum in Los Angeles, along comes the Bata Shoe Museum in Toronto.

Bombeck

For those of you already calling your travel agent, there are 10,000 shoes awaiting you.

The oldest shoes in the collection are wooden sandals from an Egyptian tomb, estimated to be a staggering 4,800 years old.

The silliest are a pair of French chestnut-crushing clogs equipped with evil-looking iron spikes that were designed to crush nuts, which in turn were used for tanning hides.

Big deal! I wore a pair just like them to my prom.

I've got shoes in my closet older than dirt. There are pumps that were never designed to fit a human foot. There are shoes with built-in blister attachments.

And my personal favorite, a pair of chartreuse sandals that look like a dog threw up on them.

The collection is extensive and comes from not throwing away a shoe since I was born.

I will buy anything. If it fits, all the better. On a trip to Ireland, I bought a pair of blue suede boots with toes like rockets. I could barely stand up in them, but I figured if I bought a long black skirt and black sweater and a blue scarf, no one would notice that I needed assistance to get from chair to chair.

I don't like to be dramatic, but to throw away a pair of shoes is like wrenching a crying baby from my arms.

The idea of selling tickets to my collection never occurred to me. It's not as if my shoes are as famous as Elton John's 4-inch, blue-sequined platforms that were sold at a Sotheby's auction for $25,000.

However, I am in possession of the most potentially dangerous pair of shoes ever manufactured. They have 5-inch heels and cover your feet with clear Plexiglas that makes the top of your foot bleed. A strap goes around the back of your ankle and meets in the front, where it cuts off circulation to the rest of your body. Sitting in them causes severe chest pains.

I bought them because they made my ankles look thin.

If the people at the Bata Shoe Museum knew what a trove of treasures I have in my closet, I know they would make me an offer.

They wouldn't be as tacky as the Bra Museum, which sent my contribution back — with regrets.

Helping others took all man's own money

LYME REGIS, England (AP) — Sometimes helping others can make you broke.

Thomas Coram, born here in 1668, became a ship's captain, took up farming and boat-building in Massachusetts and later became active in philanthropy on both sides of the Atlantic.

In 1739, Coram established the London Foundling Hospital for orphans and was associated with various other charities and settlements in Georgia and Nova Scotia.

In carrying out his philanthropic work, Coram finally spent nearly all his own money.

At the end, an annuity of 170 pounds sterling was raised for him by public subscription.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and articles.

Twisting river gives meaning to word

Associated Press

ISTANBUL, Turkey — How did the word "meander" originate?

It comes from the Maeander River in Western Turkey. This river rises near Dinar and flows west for 250 miles in a winding, twisting, wandering manner. The waterway's course as it flows to the Aegean Sea perfectly describes "meandering."

ANNIVERSARIES

Hinshaws celebrate 50th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen C. Hinshaw of Midland celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Tuesday.

Hinshaw and the former Dorothy M. Heaton were married Oct. 24, 1945, in Mourmeleon La Petite, France. He was a corporal in the 101th Airborne Division and she was a first lieutenant in the U.S. Army Nurse Corps.

After World War II, the couple lived in Lawrence, Kan., while Hinshaw completed his studies. They then moved to Bartlesville, Okla., where Hinshaw was employed with Phillips Petroleum Company. In 1950, Phillips transferred the family to Midland, where Mrs. Hinshaw went to work for Midland Memorial Hospital.

Hinshaw has worked for various companies in the Midland area. He is a consultant geologist for the exploration of oil and gas. His wife is retired and has served in several staff and supervisory positions at MMH. She was Nurse of the Year in the early 1970s and was instrumental in creating the position of admissions nurse. She was a vocational nursing student instructor affiliated with Midland College, and served as director of nurses for Trinity Tower Nursing Home.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen C. Hinshaw

She is a member of the Red Cross.

The couple has five children — Stephen Curtis Hinshaw of Dallas, Frances Marie Phillips of Lively, Danny Michael Hinshaw of Midland, Patricia Ann Roper of Abilene and Mark Joseph Hinshaw of Midland — as well as nine grandchildren.

Couple's anniversary marked with party

Mr. and Mrs. Ennis Cox celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a party Oct. 21 hosted by their daughter, Debra Hansen, and Alta Franks.

Cox and the former Lucille Morgan were married Oct. 21, 1945, in El Dorado, Kan. They have two children — Eugene Cox of Colorado Springs and Mrs. Hansen of Austin — and one granddaughter and one great-granddaughter.

Cox is retired from Exxon USA.

DEAR ABBY

Bored teen advised to pitch in and help

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently I attended a family picnic. My 13-year-old granddaughter came up to me and whined, "There's nothing to do."

Simultaneously, my adult children replied, "Rake the leaves, visit the sick, help the needy ..."

We all burst into laughter; they were quoting from an old column of yours which had been posted on our refrigerator in the late '60s and early '70s.

It obviously made a lasting impression on my family. Will you please run it again? — KATHRYN GIBBINGS, SAN DIEGO

Van Buren

DEAR KATHRYN: If this isn't the most-requested letter to be rerun, it's a close second.

The letter you're referring to was written by Doris Burville of Olympia, Wash., and was titled, "An Open Letter to a Teen-Ager." Here it is:

"Always we hear the plaintive cry of the teen-ager, 'What can we do? Where can we go?' The answer is, go home!

"Hang the storm windows, paint the woodwork. Rake the leaves, mow the lawn, shovel the walk. Wash the car, learn to cook, scrub some floors. Repair the sink, build a boat, get a job.

"Help the minister, priest or rabbi, the Red Cross, the Salvation Army. Visit the sick, assist the poor, study your lessons.

"And then when you are through — and not too tired —read a book.

"Your parents do not owe you entertainment. Your city or village does not owe you recreational facilities. The world does not owe you a living. You owe the world something. You owe it your time and energy and your talents so that no one will be at war or in poverty or sick or lonely again.

"In plain, simple words, GROW UP; quit being a crybaby. Get out of your dream world and develop a backbone, not a wishbone, and start acting like an adult.

"You're supposed to be mature enough to accept some of the responsibility your parents have carried for years. They have nursed, protected, helped, appealed, begged, excused, tolerated and denied themselves needed comforts so that you could have every benefit. This they have done gladly, for you are their dearest treasure. But now, you have no right to expect them to bow to every whim and fancy just because selfish ego, instead of common sense, dominates your personality, thinking and requests.

"In heaven's name, grow up and go home!"

DEAR ABBY: In reference to your recent column on the subject of hell for this and hell for that — you might inform the lady who wrote to you that there is a small community in Michigan called Hell. It's located about 50 miles west of Detroit and four miles southwest of Pinckney. (Maybe she would like to go to Hell sometime.)

A few years ago, I saw a sign outside Apache Junction, Ariz., which read: "Apache Junction, Arizona — 90 million miles from Heaven and two feet from Hell." — ROBERT E. VERNON, NEWARK, OHIO

DEAR ROBERT: Thank you for a helluva letter. Although I heard from several readers who claimed authorship of a poem titled "The Hell You Say!" it was copyrighted by Harold Clark in 1964.

DEAR ABBY: This is in regards to "Gets Lost a Lot." I have the same problem, which I believe I inherited from my mother.

Once on a road trip, we missed the entire state of Arkansas. We did have a nice dinner in Mississippi, though. I have often ended up in dark alleys or other strange places.

I don't believe a lousy sense of direction reflects on one's intelligence, but a good sense of humor and written instructions have gotten me out of a lot of hairy situations.

By the way, I am a sales representative for one of the fastest-growing newspapers in the nations. If I were unintelligent, I wouldn't be able to hold this position. Sign me ... TINA "LOST" ASHER, PHOENIX

DEAR TINA: Having a poor sense of direction is no reflection on a person's intelligence. Most drivers get "lost" because they are preoccupied and are not concentrating on where they are going and how to get there.

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Children scare themselves 'silly' with books for Halloween

By Carol Deegan
Associated Press

Judy Sierra's "The House that Drac Built" is a Halloween version of a familiar cumulative rhyme about the house that Jack built and is one of the best books of the Halloween season.

As the story progresses, the inhabitants of a haunted house get increasingly agitated: "This is the cat that bit the bat that lived in the house that Drac built."

Then a group of children, fearless trick-or-treaters, sets things right.

Will Hillenbrand's illustrations are stunning. His werewolf, monster and mummy from days of yore seem to leap off the pages (Harcourt Brace, $14). For ages 3 to 7.

With poems by Eve Merriam and illustrations by Lane Smith, "Halloween ABC" has got to be one of the scariest alphabet books ever (Aladdin Paperbacks, $4.95).

From A is for Apple, wormy and squirmy, rotten inside, to Z is for zero, each illustration is a masterpiece; a perfect match for Merriam's poems.

Smith has filled the book with a sharp-fanged bat, a wicked-looking jack-o'-lantern and a brooding witch.

Susan L. Roth's "Creak, Thump, Bonk!" (Simon & Schuster, $13), written in the spirit of Halloween, takes readers on a hilarious hunt as children prowl the house at night, in search of the origin of scary noises.

Roth's cut-paper illustrations seem to come to life as the children creep and crawl from page to page; the rhyming text is simple, but effective.

If it's big, fat, orange pumpkins you want, "Very Scary" (Harcourt Brace, $13) has them.

Written by Tony Johnson and illustrated by Douglas Florian, this is a book filled with the pumpkins; big, beautiful orange pumpkins.

One pumpkin comes to life as a very scary jack-o'-lantern!

For laughs, don't miss "The Hallo-Wiener" by Dav Pilkey (Scholastic-The Blue Sky Press, $12.95).

Oscar is a dachshund who plans on wearing a scary costume on Halloween. But his mom has a surprise for him — a giant hot-dog bun costume, complete with mustard. So Oscar shows up for trick-or-treating looking quite frank.

Fortunately, the story has a happy ending.

Another amusing book: "Piggie Pie!" by Margie Palatini and illustrated by Howard Fine (Clarion Books, $13.95).

In this story, Gritch the Witch makes a trip to Old MacDonald's Farm in search of eight piggies for Piggie Pie.

Other good books for Halloween: "Halloween Mice!" by Bethany Roberts, illustrated by Doug Cushman (Clarion Books, $12.95); "When the Goblins Came Knocking" by Anna Grossnickle Hines (Greenwillow Books, $15); "Rattlebone Rock" by Sylvia Andrews and illustrated by Jennifer Plecas (HarperCollins, $13.95); "Big Pumpkin" by Erica Silverman, illustrated by S.D. Schindler (Aladdin Paperbacks, $4.95);

"Grandma's Smile" by Elaine Moore and illustrated by Dan Andreasen (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Books, $15); "Celie and the Harvest Fiddler" by Vanessa and Valerie Flournoy, illustrated by James E. Ransome (Tambourine Books, $15); and "The Pumpkin Man from Piney Creek" by Darleen Bailey Beard, illustrated by Laura Kelly (Simon & Schuster, $14).

POEMS, POP-UP AND LIFT-THE-FLAP BOOKS

■ "Who Said Boo?" is a collection of Halloween poems for the very young by Nancy White Carlstrom and illustrated by R.W. Alley (Simon & Schuster, $14).

■ "Creepy Crawly Critters" by Nola Buck is filled with Halloween tongue twisters (HarperCollins, $14.95).

Quick, say "plump pumpkins play" as many times as you can! The illustrations are by Sue Truesdell.

■ "What's in the Closet?" is a "spooky" pop-up book by Ruth Tilden (Simon & Schuster, $9.95). Young readers search for Kitty, an orange-and-yellow striped cat who is lost in the closet. Look out for the mice!

■ "Scare the Moon" is a lift-the-flap book by Harriet Ziefert that's filled with lively pictures and pop-out surprises (Candlewick Press, $12.95).

The illustrations by G. Brian Karas are charming.

■ "Corduroy's Halloween," a lift-the-flap book based on the character by Don Freeman, is written by B.G. Hennessy and illustrated by Lisa McCue (Viking, $10.99).

HarperCollins has packaged a board book featuring a nursery rhyme for Halloween and washable terry cloth doll in "My Little Pumpkin" and "My Little Ghost," both by James Young ($7.95).

SnapShot Books has two books for Halloween: "Halloween Stickers" and "Halloween Stickers" (Dorling Kindersley, $3.95 each).

FOR OLDER READERS:

Question: How do you fracture a fairy tale?

Answers: (1) Make the villain a hero. (2) Make the hero a villain. (3) Tell what really happened. (4) All of the above.

Youngsters, ages 10 and up, will enjoy "Tales from the Brothers Grimm and the Sisters Weird" (Harcourt Brace, $17). Vivian Vande Velde has taken 13 popular stories and retold them upside down, sideways and inside out.

For example, in one story, "Rated PG-13," the author lists fairy-tale endings readers are not likely to see.

Among them: the Gingerbread Man turns out to be carnivorous and eats the fox; the Emperor orders the execution of everyone who's seen him naked.

"Hob and the Goblins" is the story of a friendly spirit named Hob. Hob works when he lives in a house.

He tidies away abandoned things, like scraps of quarrels or pieces of spite.

Willia Mayne is the author and Norman Messenger is the illustrator (Dorling Kindersley, $12.95).

"Chills Run Down My Spine" is a collection of nine eerie tales guaranteed to scare the daylights out of even the most skeptical of readers (Dorling Kindersley, $12.95).

Author Jackie Vivelo gives ghost stories a subtle twist as she explores deeper and darker secrets and emotions.

Tired of being scared? Sid Fleischman is the author and Peter Sis is the illustrator of "The 13th Floor: A Ghost Story" (Greenwillow Books, $15).

This is a many-mirrored tale of ghosts, witchcraft, razzle-dazzle treasure and the mischief of illusion and delusion.

ALSO OF INTEREST:

Jane Yolen, Peter Straub, John Jakes and Anne McCaffrey are among the contributors to "Great Writers & Kids Write Spooky Stories" (Random House, $17).

Illustrated by Gahan Wilson, the book is a collaboration by various authors, their children and grandchildren.

Dan Witkowski has created an "R.I.P. House Haunting Kit" for Halloween (Random House, $14.99).

The kit includes a 96-page "How to Haunt a House" book, a cassette tape of "terrifying" sounds, fake blood and a fake spider-creepy cobweb combo.

Twelve holograms illustrate "Journey to the Haunted Planet: An Interstellar Adventure" written by A.J. Wood and illustrated by Wayne Anderson (HarperFestival, $14.95).

In this tale, Prof. Sponge, his grandchildren Max and Lucy, and Lucy's dog, Soap, take off for outer space.

What they find is a haunted planet full of ghostly aliens.

■ "Raw Head, Bloody Bones: African-American Tales of the Supernatural" selected by Mary E. Lyons (Aladdin Paperbacks, $3.95).

Fifteen of the scariest monsters you'll ever meet are brought together in one book.

■ "Enter If You Dare!" by Nicholas Stephens and illustrated by Sergio Martinez contains five scary tales from the haunted mansion (Disney Press, $3.50).

■ "Don't Give Up the Ghost" edited by David Gale features three dozen ghost stories; some chilling, some funny, all surprising.

Authors include Joan Lowery Nixon, Gary Soto and Walter Dean Myers (Dell, $3.99). And Don't Forget:

Make sure children's traditional Halloween trick-or-treating is safe

By Dr. Jeffrey Fine
Associated Press

On Halloween, keep your young goblins, witches and ghosts safe while they haunt the neighborhood.

The first factor to consider is not the candy that youngsters collect but the costumes they wear.

Most injuries sustained by children on Halloween are a result of falls.

Paying attention to costume fit and design can prevent many of these accidents. For example, parents can tape hems in place or pleat a costume's extra material under the arms.

Avoid long, trailing items, such as scarves. These accessories can lead to injuries if they get snagged or caught on doors.

A mask narrows a child's view. This can increase the potential for falls. If masks are worn, improve the view by enlarging the eyeholes.

Apply minimal amounts of makeup around the eyes. Instead of masks, use face paints or cosmetics to complete a costume.

And don't forget footwear! Children should wear sneakers or walking shoes. The right footwear can prevent falls and keep young feet more comfortable.

Door-to-door trick-or-treaters must be made visible to motorists. Parents can start by using light or brightly colored clothes for their children's costumes.

Use of reflective tape can also be helpful. This can be attached to costumes, the arm of a jacket, across backpacks or on treat bags.

Flashlights are another important tool. They can help children see where they are going and may also enable motorists to see them better in the dark.

Drivers need to use extreme caution on Halloween. Children are often too busy collecting candy to concern themselves with traffic safety.

Trick-or-treating, while a traditional form of fun, may not be the safest way to spend Halloween. As an alternative, parents may consider hosting a Halloween party.

Youngsters who insist on trick-or-treating should be accompanied by a parent or baby sitter.

Children should walk only in familiar areas on prior established routes. They should stop only at houses that have their lights on. Children should not enter houses unless the resident is a friend of the family.

Those expecting young tricksters need to be sure that the exteriors of their homes are safe. Lawn equipment, furniture or other obstacles should be removed from areas that children may use.

Jack-o'-lanterns are often lit by candles and can be fire hazards. Keep them out of reach of children and away from paths, porches or other areas that children will use.

Do not allow children to eat the candy they have collected until they have returned home and it has been inspected by an adult.

Parents should discard any foods with broken seals or fruits that show signs of tampering.

Junior Woman's Association wins award

Staff Reports

The Junior Woman's Association of Midland has been selected to receive the Outstanding Philanthropic Organization Award by the Permian Basin Chapter of the National Society of Fund Raising Executives. Presentation of the award will be made at the chapter's second annual National Philanthropy Day Celebration Nov. 14. at the Odessa Country Club.

"The Junior Woman's Association of Midland demonstrates the very best in public service," said Linda Rust, assistant director of Memorial Foundation of Memorial Hospital and Medical Centers. To qualify for this award, a civic or service organization must demonstrate outstanding commitment to the community through financial support and through encouragement and motivation of others to take leadership roles toward philanthropy and community involvement.

"As a civic organization, we are committed to supporting the needs of Midland's greatest assets — our children — and have proudly done so for over 26 years," said Sharon Ryan, president of JWA. The club's members host an annual fashion show and luncheon which usually brings in around 500 supporters. The proceeds of the event benefit the Pediatric Ward of Midland Memorial Hospital and Midland's Children's Community Clinic.

To date, over $150,000 has been donated. The funds have been used to purchase lifesaving equipment for the Hospital's Pediatric Ward and for the operating expenses for the Children's Community Clinic.

Association members also volunteer at the Cerebral Palsy Center's Christmas party; provide gifts, clothing and food to families in need during the Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter holidays; and participate in outside activities for children at Hearthstone House — a temporary shelter for troubled children in need of a family-oriented structured environment.

The upcoming fashion show and luncheon will be staged at the Midland Center at 11 a.m. Feb. 12, 1996. It will feature the latest fashions by Swartz Clothing and Gifts and be catered by Murray & the Frenchman.

The 1995-96 JWA board of directors are Ms. Ryan, president; Michelle Tobias, first vice president; Jessica Carlile, second vice president; Sabrina Statton, recording secretary; Pat Weaver, corresponding secretary, and Deb Solari, treasurer.

For more information about the fashion show, call 685-7302 or 699-5001.

Hemingway's house in Florida preserved as it was in 'Papa's' time

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Here, at 907 Whitehead Street, America's Nobel Prize-winning author Ernest Hemingway lived from 1931 to 1961 and wrote many of his best-known books. The spacious mansion, where Hemingway lived with his second wife, Pauline, and their two sons, is preserved today complete with cats descended from the 50-odd felines who lived here with "Papa" Hemingway.

It was here that the author wrote "A Farewell To Arms," "Death In The Afternoon," "To Have and Have Not," "The Snows of Kilimanjaro," "For Whom The Bell Tolls" and other works. On view to the public is the loft study where he worked. Hemingway, born in 1899, died in 1961.

The Changing FACE of horror

Stories by Georgia Temple

Design by Missy Hallmark

OCT 29 1995

"A flash of lightning illuminated the object, and discovered its shape plainly to me; its gigantic stature, and the deformity of its aspect, more hideous than belongs to humanity, instantly informed me that it was the wretch, the filthy daemon to whom I had given life."

— "Frankenstein" by Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley

Wrathful storms, disquieting nights, perilous days, fitful dreams, chilling encounters, supernatural beings and man-made creations gone awry are only a few of the tools lying in the storehouse of horror. These implements, whether pounded with a workman's hammer or carved with a sculptor's expertise, allow the reader or the viewer to settle back in his chair or theater seat, uneasily of course, and be assured, with a contented sigh, that great calamity lies ahead.

"Horror is any fiction that's intended to frighten or unsettle the reader," said Lawrence Watt-Evans, president of the Horror Writers Association, Gaithersburg, Md. "There can be science-fiction horror or psychological horror or supernatural horror. Most people use the term mostly for supernatural horror, but that's really just one piece of the whole."

Agent Don Cleary of Lane Rotrosen Agency, New York City, which represents author John Saul, also offered a broad definition for horror.

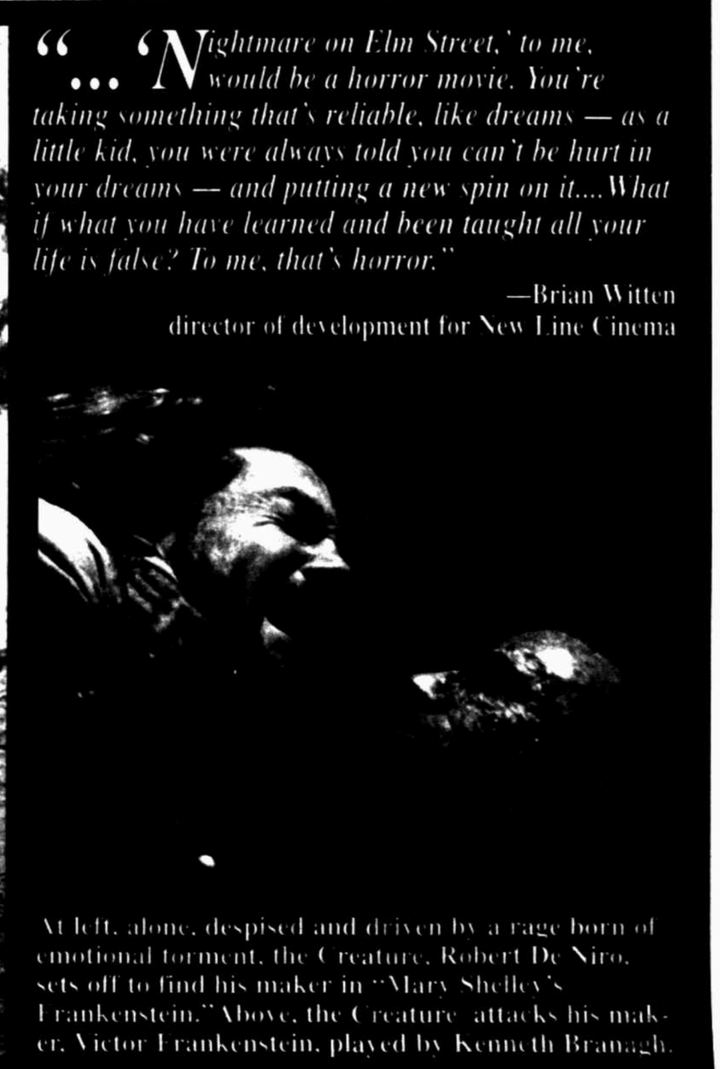
Please see SCARE/2G

Daniel Van Baren stars as Nix, the powerful and evil cult leader in "Lord of Illusions."

At right, Max von Sydow portrays Leland Gaunt whose arrival in town unleashes a rash of unspeakable violence in "Needful Things." Below is a scene from "Ghost in the Machine."

"... 'Nightmare on Elm Street,' to me, would be a horror movie. You're taking something that's reliable, like dreams — as a little kid, you were always told you can't be hurt in your dreams — and putting a new spin on it.... What if what you have learned and been taught all your life is false? To me, that's horror."

—Brian Witten
director of development for New Line Cinema



At left, alone, despised and driven by a rage born of emotional torment, the Creature, Robert De Niro, sets off to find his maker in "Mary Shelley's Frankenstein." Above, the Creature attacks his maker, Victor Frankenstein, played by Kenneth Branagh.

SCARY: Central element of horror: 'being out of control'

(From 1G)

"When you think of horror, you think of something to do with the supernatural — werewolves, ghosts, witches," said Cleary, who is a fan of horror books and stories. "But there are other types of demons, and they are all around us.

"Technology has been the demon in a given (Saul) story. You can find different aspects of our lives that you can distill — make them horrifying.

"But the basic truths of horror remain the same, which is that notion of arch drama or melodrama, of taking things beyond their realm, taking them an extra step. There's still a human story. It can't just be technology. It's got to be people who are caught in these arch situations."

Horror is, for Brian Witten — director of development for New Line Cinema in Los Angeles County and a fan of horror — "Anything that is extraordinary and horrific in nature. In a way, you could almost say that (New Line Cinema's) 'Seven' is like a psychological thriller with horror elements meaning the deaths and killings.

"It's not a horror movie, but (New Line Cinema) 'Nightmare on Elm Street,' to me, would be a horror movie. You're taking something that's reliable, like dreams, that most people have. And as a little kid, you were always told you can't be hurt in your dreams. And putting a new spin on it. What if there was this person in your dreams and you got cut in your dreams and when you wake up, there's the cut."

Witten said using an established concept people relate to, like dreams not being able to harm someone, and "putting a different angle on it" can lead to something frightening.

"Taking that idea and saying, 'What if you could be killed in your dreams? What if what you have learned and been taught all your life is false?' To me, that's horror."

Ginjer Buchanan, executive editor of Berkley Publishing Group, New York, had a more limited definition of horror, particularly as it is categorized by the publishing industry. "My strict definition of horror is it has to be something inexplicable, supernatural, occult. Not a mad scientist gone array. Something genuinely inexplicable."

In today's publishing market, category horror is not a hot seller, Ms. Buchanan said. "Things go in waves. When it was hot, everybody was doing horror. What's hot now is mysteries and that will run into the ground.

"It's just the cycle. The only thing consistent is romances. The number of women who buy books is enormous compared to the number of men. Even in romances, the specific sub-genre of what's hot has changed. Romance as a category has remained pretty consistent."

Beverly Lewis, senior editor at Bantam Books, New York, confirmed the temperature of the category horror market. "It's been a very chancy market except for a handful of writers. We don't actively go after horror. We don't have an editor (assigned to horror)."

Watt-Evans, author of the fantasy books "The Legends Ethshar" and "Out of This World" on Del Rey Books, agreed that the category horror market is soft. "In the late '80s, there was a craze for this. The market was flooded and collapsed. It's starting to bounce back a bit now but in general sales are still low.

"However, horror stories that are not published as category horror are doing very well. Particularly the young adult horror is selling phenomenally well.

"R.L. Stine is currently the best selling author in the world," said Watt-Evans, calling Stine's Goosebumps series and Fear Street series the "most popular books in any age group now."

Of Stine, Watt-Evans said, "He's outselling Danielle Steel. He's outselling Stephen King."

Another popular author of horror category for young adults is Christopher Pike.

"The absolutely biggest boom in young adult publishing has been in the horror category, being read, by and large, by boys," Ms. Buchanan said. "The phenomena started with Christopher Pike, who for a while was the main writer in that field, then the R.L.

Stine books just captured their readership in an enormous way. They all have young protagonists, and they are the book analogy to the very successful movies.

"The big audience for the B-movies is teen-agers, too. Horror is really strong in young adults. And that's the same market that 'Friday the 13th,' 'Freddy,' 'The Puppet Master' things done straight to video, that's the same audience. The people that are going to see those movies are late adolescents, college, and younger boys who are sneaking in.

"What they are reading is Fear Street and Christopher Pike. They're not reading anything published as adult horror. They may also be reading John Saul. He tends to have a lot of young protagonists."

Some publishing houses, such as Zebra and Tor, still actively acquire horror.

Kensington is among them. This publishing house handles such writers as Noel Hynd, Guy N. Smith, C. Dean Anderson, Scott Ciencin, Rick Hautala, Roxanne Longstreet, David Darke, Ronald Kelly and Michael Cecilione.

"We do have a definite horror program," said Karen Haas, consulting editor for Kensington, New York. "We are very pleased with it, and we do very well with it."

Established authors Stephen King, Dean Koontz, Anne Rice, Peter Straub and Clive Barker remain popular.

Often, the quality of the writing and not the subject matter attracts publishing houses to authors, said Jennifer Richards, publicity manager for the paperback division of Ballantine Books, New York.

"We publish Anne because she's a great writer," Ms. Richards said. "We publish John Saul because he's a great writer. Same with Dean Koontz. It just happens to be what they write about.

"We're very author driven here. We don't really go in for series type books. If we like the authors' writing, we will publish them."

Anne Rice is generally not considered a horror writer, said Ms. Buchanan. "She was never published as a horror writer. If you go far enough back, you might find that on King and Koontz. They have never written what I consider horror. They are mainstream writers who happen to deal with supernatural subjects."

Koontz was president of Horror Writers of America (now Association) when it was incorporated in 1987, noted the current president, Watt-Evans. Until then, it had been called the Horror and Occult Writers League, which was formed by Joe R. Lansdale and Robert McCammon in 1984.

"Horror as such got such a bad reputation when there was that flood of books with black covers and red lettering in the late '80s that a lot of writers prefer not to be associated with the label any more, even though what they are writing is by any sensible definition still horror," said Watt-Evans, who received a Hugo Award for short story in 1988 in the category of science fiction.

At left, America's favorite horror host, the Crypt Keeper, makes his big "scream" debut in "Tales From the Crypt Presents Demon Knight." Below, Billy Zane plays the Collector, a sinister but charismatic figure who commands the forces of darkness in "Demon Knight." Photos for this horror package were curtesy of United Artists, TriStar Pictures, 20th Century Fox, Castle Rock Entertainment and Universal Pictures.

The "body count" movies, said Watt-Evans, "are just one little sub-genre, and thinking of them as the entire horror field would be like thinking every science fiction story had to have a robot in it or every mystery has to be in an English country house."

The HWA, which gives an annual set of awards called the Bram Stoker Awards, recognizes the debt it owes to Stoker for "Dracula" and to Mary Wollstonecraft Shelly for "Frankenstein." "Bram Stoker is the father of us all, and Mary Shelley is the mother," Watt-Evans said of writers of horror.

The recent movie version of Stoker's "Dracula" received mixed reviews as did the newest "Frankenstein." Watt-Evans, who saw the former but not the latter, said he knew "a lot of people, including other horror writers" who didn't like "Dracula," which did take liberties with the original story. He felt differently. "I liked it a lot. It was a really stylish movie."

He also enjoyed Anne Rice's "Interview With the Vampire," and called it "a real horror movie

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A restrained approach to spending will serve you best. Focus on creating or recognizing new opportunities to make money. If eager to accumulate savings, scale back your lifestyle. Someone who has lived alone for a long time may find it difficult to suddenly share a home. Be willing to compromise for the sake of domestic harmony. Old friends of the family play a major role in your future happiness. Lend a sympathetic ear to a young person just starting out.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Richard Dreyfuss, actress Kate Jackson, singer Melba Moore, political cartoonist Bill Mauldin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Reading the want-ads could reveal a possible moneymaker. Purchase a few items for your home. A short trip could delight you with an unexpected bonus. Candid discussions help heal an emotional wound.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Forget business matters today and concentrate on your private affairs. Get together with people you seldom see. A younger person shows true loyalty; you gain an ally. Do not let a romantic fire die out.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good news sets the stage for a happy day. An out-of-town visitor adds a touch of adventure. Breeze through routine chores with lightning speed. Plan on splitting expenses if you go out tonight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Reach a compromise with family members about today's activities. Casual entertainment will create a warm, homey atmosphere. Send out for food to eliminate cooking and kitchen clean-up.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Defer to loved one's wishes regarding recreational activities. You can choose next time! Catch up on neglected correspondence or try out a new recipe in the afternoon. The social scene looks fun this evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Forget about a recent disappointment. An amiable attitude is magnetic, drawing fun people to your side. Try to keep your cool in romance. Demanding too much too soon could backfire.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not decline a social invitation because you feel that your clothes are inadequate. Your personality is what is important, not your outfit. A friendship deepens.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Diplomacy and courtesy are a winning duo. Avoid appearing dictatorial. Rephrase critical comments into tactful suggestions. A sudden hunch could bring big financial rewards.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Some of your plans could bog down. Try not to worry. The future looks bright! You will be able to triumph over recent restrictions. Family contentment could entice you to stay home this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec.22-Jan. 19): An interesting newcomer appears on the scene. Look and act your best. Keep the conversation lively but avoid sounding flippant. You do not want to give the impression you are shallow. Tend to family obligations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Self-discipline helps you handle a restless mood. Limit money spent on entertainment. Seek inexpensive diversions or the company of rarely seen friends. One-on-one conversations enjoy highly favorable influences. Emphasize the positive.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Heed the wishes of a family member. Take a constructive, conciliatory approach to a complicated situation. Evaluate a financial decision honestly. You could face a battle between your head and your heart. Maintain your integrity.

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

When you play a suit contract, trumps are the marines of your fighting force. They block powerful suits from running hog-wild through your infantry, and win battles because of the special gifts bestowed on them. Use them wisely.

The bidding is among the worst we have seen anywhere. Both North and South had ample opportunity to bid no trump somewhere along the line. Playing at three no trump, there were at least 10 tricks available to North-South.

After West led the jack of hearts against four spades, South had visions of an overtrick. The ace of hearts captured the first trick, and declarer tried three rounds of trumps. When that suit followed the percentages and split 4-2, declarer started on diamonds. Unfortunately, East ruffed the third diamond, and declarer had no way to avoid losing two hearts and two clubs into the bargain — down two.

Declarer played the hand as badly as it was bid. A rather simple play at trick two would have permitted 10 tricks to be taken in comfort.

Suppose South had led a low spade from dummy at trick two and ducked in hand, allowing the defenders to win the trick. No harm can then befall declarer. If the defenders persevere with hearts, dummy's low trump controls the third round of the suit. If they play anything else, declarer wins, draws the outstanding trumps in three rounds and then cashes five diamond tricks for a total of 10 — five diamonds, three trumps and the aces of hearts and clubs.

ISSUE: Horror needs memorable characters to work because it deals with one of the things horror is about. Characters trapped in a situation beyond their control."

The concept of "being out of control" is a central element in horror films, Witten said, citing numerous examples including "Rosemary's Baby," "The Exorcist," "Halloween," "An American Werewolf in London" and "Alien."

"Horror really is losing control," said Witten, who is an executive on the upcoming New Line Cinema project featuring Freddy vs. Jason. "In 'Nightmare' they're losing control. 'The Exorcist' - being possessed, losing control. The notion of losing control of your body to someone else, that to me is horrific. Even in 'Friday the 13th,' it's about this sort of being they can't stop, they have no control over. 'Halloween,' too. Another bogeyman."

Characters make or break a good horror story. The success of a scary story depends upon "good, solid characters," said Watt-Evans, who has made his living as a writer since 1977. He has written horror since 1988.

"Horror depends on emotion rather than reason, so the most important thing isn't the plot or the setting or anything that's external," Watt-Evans said. "It's the internal life of the characters. If the characters don't come alive for the readers, the story doesn't work."

Cleary also spoke of the importance of creating memorable characters. "Then you place them in some kind of arch danger. Not just danger, but an arch danger of some kind because the bad guy isn't just a bad guy. In a horror novel, he or she is a fiend."

Wit and pacing also play a role in a successful horror story, Cleary said, citing John Saul's books as containing both. "I find them (Saul's works) very witty, and I find them exciting and tingling to read. The way John paces out his stories, there's an ever accelerating race toward a catastrophe of some kind. You wonder who's going to live and who's going to die. He always, for me, manages to tap something that we are all really afraid of."

Whether a new author writes horror or not, it's difficult for an unknown talent to get published in mainstream fiction, Ms. Haas said. "There are more books being published for fewer slots in the stores.

"Every company is putting out more books than it used to in all areas. Some of the stores have cut down on the space they have for books or are only buying lead titles. And lead titles are almost always by someone who has published before and has a track record and is known to the audience. It takes a lot of word-of-mouth to get a new author in the stores."

Authors like Anne Rice are a known commodity. "Anne Rice just continues to get more and more popular," said Ms. Richards, who has been on the road with the author. "She's gotten to the point where she gives these book signings, and they just can't be contained because she has so many fans. The closest thing you could compare it to is going to a rock concert."

Ms. Richards attributes Anne Rice's popularity to her historical detail and her characters. "Whether it's the witches saga or the vampires or the mummy, she just brings different periods to life for people. Then she combines that with writing from the heart. Her characters are so engrossing you just feel for them.

"I think she's taken horror just a step beyond. She's definitely not doing these two-dimensional horror movies that you would see on a Saturday afternoon movie."

A movie that horrifies adults may not be classified in the category of horror, said Ms. Buchanan, who considered "Silence of the Lambs" such a film.

Then there are horror films that aim for the mainstream adult audience and fall short of the goal. Ms. Buchanan suggested Clive Barker's "Lord of Illusions" was possibly such a film. "The box office would seem to indicate it didn't work.

"It disappointed the people who love the gross-out stuff — 'Hellraiser' and 'Candyman' — and didn't quite work for the adult intelligent audience. It's a supernatural detective story. Clive's core audience likes Pinhead, likes to be grossed out. Clive virtually is a national hero in Japan."

Imitation, which has been called the greatest form of flattery, has spawned numerous horror films. Few are the caliber of the inspiration that helped create them, Watt-Evans said. "People remember the wrong thing when they see a good slasher movie, and there are good slasher movies."

He cited as an example the first "Halloween." "People remember the relentless maniac with the knife and the dead bodies scattered about, but what actually makes the movie work is the characters played by Jamie Lee Curtis and Donald Pleasance.

"People who imitate a successful slasher movie then use the parts they remember because it's easier to spread fake blood all over the set than to write and cast a good character."

There are those in the serious business of creating horror and other genres of film for their own pleasure and edification. Such features as "Girls School Screamers," "The Toxic Avenger," "Screamplay," "Class of Nuke 'Em High" and this summer's re-release "Blood Sucking Freaks" belong to Trona Inc., presided over by Lloyd Kaufman and Michael Herz. Together these two Yale graduates created the Troma Universe.

"Working for Troma Films, we perfectly understand what horror is," said David Shultz, director of Los Angeles operations for Troma. "But we're able to laugh at horror. That's how we look at things here."

Troma doesn't take their films, horror or otherwise, too seriously, he explained. Then he spoke of "Blood Sucking Freaks" and called it "one of the more horrific movies ever made.

"People find it to be a sadistic horror film, but it's a black comedy," Shultz said. "You just have to be able to have a good sense of humor and to understand the characters."

"Blood Sucking Freaks" is "a unique mosaic of dark humor, tongue-in-cheek torture and satirical sadism" and a "legendary" film in the grind-house circuit (drive-ins and small theaters across the country), said Shultz, who plugged the company's video label release "Femme Fontaine Killer Babe For the CIA," which will be in stores Halloween.

Schultz also referred to the concept of "being out of control" in what he called an increasingly controlled society as fertile ground for horror films.

"You feel like you have no control over what's going on in society," Schultz said. "Like the Toxic Avenger (Trona, Inc.), created out of toxic waste — one of the uncontrolled things in our society. He turned into this super hero, grotesque on the outside, but basically a provider of good. Clean up society in the figurative sense and in actuality he's cleaning up the town of Tromaville from criminals kind of tongue-in-cheek."

Horror films are, Schultz said, "A roller coaster ride of peril and doom." Of course, he pointed out, they only last 90 minutes or so and people are watching them from the safety of a darkened theater or their own room.

Or are they? Sweet dreams, Freddy.

In Midland, horror bombs in theater, does OK in bookstores; renters can't get enough of it

by Georgia Temple

"How can I put you at ease? Shall we begin like David Copperfield? I am born. I grew up. Or shall we begin when I was born to darkness? As I call it. That's really where we should start. Don't you think?" Anne Rice's "Interview with the Vampire," Geffen Pictures, Warner Home Video

Whether the threat be from a supernatural force, science gone mad or some other terrifying vision, some local audiences still appreciate the chance to be figuratively scared out of their wits.

"Most of the crowd that I see coming in here looking for horror films are probably teenage crowds, but the newer horror films, like 'Interview with the Vampire,' which are so much different than the old-style horror, are getting everybody back into the horror category and not just the younger crowd," said Ken Horton, video manager at Hastings Books Music & Video. Horton, who is a fan of horror stories, included Bram Stoker's "Dracula" and Mary Shelley's "Frankenstein" as appealing to an older audiences. He cited John Carpenter's "In the Mouth of Madness" as another "good one" and an example of the newer horror films he's seen being released.

"It's like a cross between science fiction and horror," Horton said of "In the Mouth of Madness." "What we're doing is getting away from all the slash-'em-up horror films — see how much blood we can get into this movie — and into the story-filled horror." The number of new releases isn't keeping up with the local demand for videos. The horror genre films are, Horton said, "More popular then they are putting out right now. We have people coming in, 'What's your latest horror film? Oh, I've seen those. Do you have anything else coming out?' It just seems people want more than what's currently coming out."

Even the slasher films are still popular on video with the younger crowd. When told that New Line Cinema has plans to put Freddy of "Nightmare on Elm Street" and Jason of "Friday the 13th" together in a movie, Horton said, "I bet it will rent. I bet it will rent real well."

The "Nightmare," "Friday the 13th" and "Halloween" films are "still renting," said Horton, who noted that the "best running title by far" of the "old style horror' is the original "The Exorcist."

The number of horror films Horton sees being released on video in relation to the total video market is around 3 to 5 percent. He is including the "new style of horror films" in this percentage.

"It just doesn't seem to be enough for what the customers want," Horton said. "What we've got in the store may be a little more than that — maybe up to 6 or 8 percent. I'm not sure. But it seems that everybody wants horror."

Blockbuster Video also finds horror films to be popular rentals.

"Especially during this month, and we normally buy extra," said Carlos Reyes, district manager for Blockbuster Video. "Right now we have a special — rent two videos and you can purchase the movie 'Halloween,' for $2.99, while supplies last," Reyes said. "It's not a bad deal. 'Halloween' the movie, has been on moratorium for quite some time. That means they take it off the market. Now, it's available on video."

The popularity of a movie depends upon the actors and actresses starring in it, said Joyce Hollowell, assistant manager of Northpark Cinema.

"I know 'Interview with the Vampire' was sold out the opening night," Ms. Hollowell said. "We had people sitting in the aisles. It's who is in the movie as much as what the movie is about. 'Interview with the Vampire' had Tom Cruise and Brad Pitt. How better can it get?

"With books, it's who the author is. I know some people just read strictly some authors. There are a lot of moviegoers (who) go to see specific actors."

Another popular horror film which showed at Midland Park Mall, also owned by General Cinema, was "Wolf," with Jack Nicholson and Michelle Pfieffer,Ms. Hollowell said. "It was busy. They had some business with it."

Horror movies "would have more appeal if they weren't R Rated," Ms. Hollowell said. "We turn a lot of kids away that really would like to see those movies. And the reason they can't see them is not because they are scary."

Sales at B Dalton Bookseller and Waldenbooks indicate there is a market for horror in Midland, particularly among the young.

"People do enjoy the horror, not as much as people enjoy romances or the regular fiction, but they do enjoy it," said Stephanie Trout, manager at B Dalton.

The most read author of horror for the young market is R.L. Stine, said Ms. Trout. "He is classified as a young adult thriller, and he does very well. They are very popular."

Stine's Goosebumps series, which has a release each month, is for preteens, 8 to 10 years old, Ms. Trout said. He also has several series, including Fear Street, for young teens 12 to 14 years old.

"The last time I saw a best seller list for children, eight of the top 10 were in this Goosebumps series," said Rick Broughton of Waldenbooks.

Another popular writer for the young is Christopher Pike. "He's popular, but not as popular in this area," Ms. Trout said. "And that's simply because the kids grow up on (Stine's) Goosebumps and continue reading his writing."

Adult readers also have specific writers that draw their interest. "They usually go to the authors they already know," Ms. Trout said. "Children are just the same. They're probably more likely to go to a new author than an adult, but it's kind of an exception."

At B Dalton at Midland Park Mall, Ms. Trout said author John Saul is "not as popular as the major horror writers like Dean Koontz or Anne Rice and Stephen King." Broughton of Waldenbooks at Midland Park Mall finds the "adult readers in this area are getting away from Stephen King. He still sells, but not the way he did eight years ago or so. Dean Koontz and John Saul, people like that, are doing better actually than Stephen King."

He attributes the fall in King's popularity to burnout. "King is really getting very abstract. He's trying to get very psychological rather than your old just scare you to death. For example, the one he did called 'Gerald's Game,' involved a man and a woman being intimate. She's handcuffed to the bed, and he has a heart attack and dies. The door's open, and the dogs start coming in and eating the man. He's on top of her. It's really strange. A far cry from the way it used to be as far as horror goes." Broughton also said that the young and adult readers have their specific writers they select over and over again.

"Anne Rice does well," Broughton said. "Her vampire series - of course, the movie helped her - and her witching hour series. I understand they are going to be doing (movies of) more of hers.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Play presented

ODESSA - The Globe of the Great Southwest, Odessa College campus, will present "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown" Nov. 3-4, 10-11 and 17-18.

The musical is based on the comic strip "Peanuts" by Charles M. Schultz. Music and lyrics are by Clark Gesner. The production is being directed by Tony Parris.

Curtain is at 8 p.m. A 2:30 p.m. matinee is planned for Nov. 12. For reservations or more information call the Globe office, 1-915-332-1586.

Singer performs

ODESSA - Grammy Award winning entertainer Julio Iglesias performs Nov. 28 at Ector County Coliseum.

To date, Iglesias has recorded 69 albums and sales have exceeded 200,000 million. The popular entertainer has been awarded more than 1,500 gold and platinum records worldwide.

Tickets are on sale at Ector County Coliseum. His West Texas performance is sponsored by K-LITE 100.3, KWES 9 TV, The Odessa American and KMRK.

Bazaar planned

McCAMEY - The McCamey Rebekah Lodge will be sponsoring the McCamey Christmas Bazaar from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Dec. 2 in the McCamey Park Building, 212 W. 7th St.

Cost for a booth is $20. Cost for a food booth is $25. To obtain a booth write Debbie Jones, Box 942, McCamey, 79752, or call Debbie Jones, 1-915-652-8044, Aileen Waters, 1-915-652-3687, or Joni Brazell, 1-915-652-8202.

Topic to be writing

"The Art of Writing While Earning a Living at Something Unrelated" will be the topic of Rick Hamby's talk at the West Texas Writers Association November meeting.

Hamby, who lives in Big Spring, has been the district attorney for the 118th Judicial District for the last 19 years. Midlanders are familiar with his play, "Gargoyles and Scarecrow Sins," which was produced during Midland Community Theatre's regular subscription season in 1994. This play and "Maggie's Dance" won awards in the MCT McLaren Comedy Play writing Competition in 1993 and 1994.

The meeting is set for 2 p.m. Nov. 4 at Midland County Public Library, downtown.

West Texas Writers, a group for writers, editors, journalists, photographers and illustrators, invites all interested parties to attend. The meeting and talk are free. For more information call M.F. Beverley, 684-6122.

Fall concert set

ODESSA - The Odessa College Choir and Community Choir will be presenting their annual fall concert at 7:30 p.m. Monday at Immanuel Baptist Church, 4020 E. University Boulevard.

The concert will feature music from England, Russia and America. Featured student soloists will be Cindy Smith, Leslie Wilkerson, Matt Bird, Crystal Sarakas and Stacey Johnson.

Highlights of the concert will be a set of early American tunes including "Saints Bound for Heaven," "Amazing Grace" and "Hark, I Hear the Harp's Eternal."

Admission is $3 for adults with students and OC faculty free.

OC Choir members have been raising funds for two years to pay the entire cost of a concert trip to England during the 1996 spring break. Fund-raisers include selling concert programs advertisements and concert tickets.

The trip, which will be the fourth overseas for the OC Choir, is scheduled for March 9-17. While in England, the choir will visit historical locations and perform in cathedrals and concert halls with stops in London, Bath, Ruthin and Stratford.

OC choral director is Randy Talley.

Crafts fair set

FORT STOCKTON - Plans are underway for the 22nd annual Arts and Crafts Fair, sponsored by the Fort Stockton Women's Division of the Chamber of Commerce.

The fair will be held Nov. 18 at the Civic Center, West Highway 285. Booth reservations may be made through Nov. 14. Set-up for exhibitors is Nov. 17 in the afternoon.

Reservations may be made to Josephine Falcon, P.O. Box 1415, Fort Stockton, 79735.

Shows scheduled

Public showings for both children and adults are scheduled at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium of the Museum of the Southwest Nov. 3 and 4 with a telescope viewing, sky party set for Nov. 10.

"Earth Watch," set for 8 p.m. Friday and 1 p.m. Saturday, examines conflicting reports of global warming and ozone depletion in addition to the possibilities of more catastrophic events such as the impact of massive objects from space.

"Young People's Astronomy" with "Larry Cat in Space" is the feature for children ages 4 through 7 to be shown at 11 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 4.

The telescope viewing at 8:30 p.m. Nov. 10 is co-hosted by the West Texas Astronomers. The Astronomers provide telescopes and binoculars and assistance for those unfamiliar with viewing the skies. There is no charge for this event that includes an orientation session in the Planetarium. The moon will be three days past full on this date.

Planetarium admission is free for museum members and for non-members is $2 for adults and $1 for children ages 12 and under. Children age 12 and under must be accompanied by an adult.

Reservations are necessary for groups of 10 or more. Tickets are available 30 minutes before show time.

The Planetarium is in the museum complex at the intersection of K Street and Indiana Avenue. For more information call 683-2882 or 570-7770.

Luncheon planned

ODESSA - The 1994-95 Volunteer Luncheon at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin is set for 11:30 a.m. Monday.

Glenna S. Bell, Marvin Stevenson and Doris Schiller will be receiving recognition for Volunteers of the Year. Additional awards will be distributed to those whose contributions helped make 1994-95 a success.

Lars Takla, Permian Basin regional manager for Phillips Petroleum Corp. in Odessa, will make a presentation of an Arts Challenge Grant check in the amount of $5,000 from Phillips Petroleum Foundation, Inc. This grant helped to match a Texas Committee for the Humanities matching grant for the Russian dissident art exhibitions and lectures.

In order to maintain and expand its active programming and services to the community, the Art Institute relies on its cadre of 75 to 100 volunteers to serve as gallery attendants, museum shop attendants, docents, prep crew members, committee members and board members.

LOCAL: Horror sees changing audiences

(From 4G)

"And the movies helped Stephen King. Every time a new movie comes out, everybody sort of rediscovers King for a little while." Although the few movies made of Koontz's books have helped him as well, Broughton said, "He does well all the time anymore. His new book out in paperback, 'Dark Rivers of the Heart,' is currently No. 2 on the paperback Best Seller List."

For Waldenbooks, the best selling category is hardcover fiction, which includes mysteries, science fiction, western, horror, general novels, thrillers, etc., "lumped together," Broughton said. "There is such a small amount of horror fiction actually being published. As compared to the overall market, horror holds a very small percentage. If you include the Goosebumps in there, probably one percent. And Goosebumps really helps it a lot." Ms. Trout, who has been an avid reader for years, has seen the popularity of horror fiction wane among adults since the late 1980s. "For the adult readers, it was more popular in the '80s than now. There were a lot more horror movies, I think personally, and a lot more horror books. But now they're centering more on children. This is where the future is. If you can get the kids interested in this stuff, it will make a comeback. But I don't think it's as popular to the adults as it is to the children." John Barnett, assistant manager at UA Cine' 4 Theatre, also feels horror doesn't have the appeal for adults it has for teenagers. "Typically, it's basically teenagers," Barnett said. "Horror movies aren't popular in this town at all. Teenagers come basically to scare their dates. I think when it all really comes down to it, I think nobody really likes them at all except maybe a few." When he said horror movies aren't popular, Barnett was referring to the current choices in horror films. We carried 'Halloween 6,' which we have right now, and it didn't do very well,' Barnett said. "It's a sequel film, and that's why they're not very popular. They're not making enough of them - enough good ones, real horror films. "Basically, what I'm saying is, all the horror films that come into the theaters these days are a sequel from the same film, like 'Halloween 6.' Nobody comes to see those anymore. Nobody wants to see 'Friday the 13th,' Part 9. They want to see something Part One.

"The ones that do well like 'Jurassic Park' and 'Species' have more of a science fiction feel to them. The slasher films don't do well anymore, and that's what we would consider real horror."

A slasher film may do well at the video stores and not at the theaters because, Barnett said, "Nobody wants to spend $5.50 to go see it, but they will spend a lot less to watch it at home. It's just common sense, I guess."

Vampire movies, on the other hand, have experienced a different fate than the slasher movies. "Vampires are a totally different subject," Barnett said. "When you are dealing with vampires, they are more popular than they have ever been. And I believe that started when Bram Stoker's 'Dracula' was released."

He attributed the success of vampire movies to the romanticized view as portrayed in such movies as Bram Stoker's "Dracula," Anne Rice's "Interview with the Vampire" and even Mary Shelley's "Frankenstein." "Those are the only popular horror movies, besides the science fiction which aren't really horror," Barnett said.

Even "Alien," Barnett wouldn't classify as horror. "It's scary, but that doesn't make a horror movie. 'Last House on the Left' was scary, but that doesn't make it a horror movie." For Barnett, horror movies portray "the dark side of one person's imagination. Science fiction is aliens, space and the future. Horror movies deal with more darkness, death. Death is the main thing of a horror movie. A horror movie amplifies death."

A fan of the horror movies of the 1950s and 1960s that played to audiences that Barnett described as actually scary, Barnett said he sees as a problem in the horror genre, "People aren't afraid of anything anymore because nobody uses their imagination.

We figured everything out. We think we have. Nobody wants to watch a monster movie because it isn't real, or so nobody thinks. Nothing scares anybody anymore. It's all been done 100 times." Yet, Barnett, like other fans of horror tales, had a request for the inspired film maker - "Hey, make some horror movies."

Midland Arts Association jurors give Awards of Merit, Honorable Mention

by Georgia Temple

Bright colors and contemporary themes fill the paintings lining the walls of Midland College's McCormick Gallery during the 18th annual Midland Arts Association Fall Show.

"The fall show always leans toward a contemporary theme because normally the judge is selected from a university or museum," said artist Cynthia Wolfe, who is a member of MAA.

"They're always up to date in the field of art and have a different outlook on judging an exhibition when they choose a piece of artwork than the working artists we select for the spring show. The spring show generally includes more realism."

With this approach, Ms. Wolfe said, area artists have an opportunity to compete whether their subject matter is presented in an abstract or realistic style.

"During the whole year, we try to touch every single base of art," Ms. Wolfe said.

For the past 30 years, MAA has been exhibiting the works of area artists. Unlike the spring show, the fall show, which was partially supported by the Texas Commission on the Arts and the Arts Assembly of Midland, does not offer first, second and third place awards in various categories. Instead, the juror decides on Awards of Merit and Honorable Mentions.

This year's show, which closes Nov. 3 in the Allison Fine Arts Center, was judged by Kathleen Luchar, who selected 100 pieces of art from 270 entries.

"Spending a day with the diverse group of entries submitted to the 18th annual Fall Show Art Exhibition was a most enjoyable experience," said Ms. Kuchar, of Hays State University, Hays, Kansas. "There was an incredible variety of styles and subjects with many exciting images.

"It was a long process to select the exhibition. When it came time to decide on prize winners it was a great pleasure to concentrate on choosing my favorites. It was then that the high quality of the overall exhibition became more apparent. Since there were so many pieces of equal merit I refrained from awarding Best of Show."

Honorable Mentions went to Daniel Birdsong for his mixed-media "Oleo," Ramah Bosecker for her oil "Snail Trails & Chicken Tracks," Cathy Creel for her pastel "Self Portrait," Georgann Harben for her ceramic "Hooray for Salad," John McBurney for his ceramic "Celtic Warrior Vessel," Nina Green for her acrylic "Cars," Brandon Borchert for his acrylic "Bodhisattva Bugs," Nancy Hoover for her oil "Universal Language," Cynthia Wolfe for her watercolor "Tony's Circus Tale" and Karen Hembree for her raju ceramic "Desert Path."

"I am always amazed" at the number of "creative ideas shown through the expression of an artist," Ms. Wolfe said. "It's a wonderment. Everyone is creative. Everyone sees the world differently and can interpret their world through their art."

Also presented was the Paint and Palette Award for Beginning Artists. This award, made possible through the Paint and Palette art supply store, went to Nina Green and Nancy Hoover.

Other sponsors for the Fall Exhibition are Mr. and Mrs. Jack E. Brown, Tom Brown, Inc., Henry Petroleum Corp., Kerr, Fitz-Gerald, Kerr LLP (Attorneys at Law), Yale E. Key, Inc., Elizabeth Locker, Parker & Parsley, Permian Production Equipment, Inc., Norwest Bank Midland, Jack Sherman Chevrolet-Geo-Buick-Mazda, Southwest Royalties, Inc., Coastal Management Corp. and Discovery Operating, Inc.

"Without our sponsors, the Midland Arts Association could never be as successful as we are now," Ms. Wolfe said. "The community does help promote art. And our shows grown bigger and bigger every year."

COMING in December CO2 In The Basin

PERMIAN BASIN OIL REPORT

bIM
SWA

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1995 SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

BRIEFING

Drilling is looking up in the Permian Basin, according to latest Baker Hughes Rotary Rig Count figures.

Drilling steady

Drilling activity was mixed for the week ended October 20, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

The Permian Basin rig count slipped two to 123 for the week but remains above year-ago levels. A year ago the count was 108.

Eddy and Lea counties, N.M. were the most active in the Basin with 18 rigs each. Midland County had 11 rigs working.

Nationally, the rig count rose two to 765 for the week, below last year's tally of 819.

Among major producing states, Oklahoma gained 11 rigs, while California, Kansas, Louisiana and New Mexico each lost three rigs.

DOE conference

The course of energy cooperation in the Western Hemisphere will be mapped out beginning today when energy ministers, senior government officials, business leaders and energy experts representing 34 nations hold the Hemispheric Energy Symposium. The meeting will be co-chaired by U.S. Secretary of Energy Hazel R. O'Leary and Venezuelan Minister of Energy and Mines Erwin Arrieta.

Participants at the event, to be held at the Stouffer Mayflower Hotel, will examine issues such as regulatory and policy principles, private sector investment, project development, information and training, rural electrification and environmental cooperation.

A driller makes an entry into the rig log.

Prices improve

Crude futures received a boost late in the week on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

After lingering near $17.25 much of the week, West Texas Intermediate for December delivery jumped to close at $17.55 late in the week, boosted by concerns about European fuel supplies and worries about the health of Russian President Boris Yeltsin, whose country is the world's second largest crude producer and major supplier to Europe.

The posted price was $15.75 a barrel. Natural gas futures closed at $1.83 per thousand cubic feet.

Clean Air seminar

Midland College will present a two-day air compliance seminar November 6-7 through its continuing education department.

The seminar provides a concise overview of air compliance requirements in the Permian Basin and is designed for environmental professionals, plant engineers and others.

The course will be presented by William F. Priddy, environmental coordinator at the San Angelo office of Rhone-Poulenc Ag Company. Topics will include Texas Air Control Board and Environmental Protection Agency regulations, permitting, emissions inventory and a mock air compliance audit.

Cost is $595 before Oct. 30, $650 after. Classes will be held from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. both days. For more information or to register, contact Midland College's Continuing Education Center.

CO2 conference marks turn for Basin

All Upcoming conference believed to be largest ever held in U.S.

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

The largest ever U.S. conference on CO2 recovery is scheduled for December 4-6 in Midland, marking what industry spokesmen call a turning point in CO2 recovery in the Permian Basin.

"For many oil properties in the Permian Basin, it is now or never," said Chuck Fox, in charge of CO2 marketing for Shell Oil Co. "As some of these mature waterfloods reach their economic limit, operators will be forced to make the decision to pursue CO2 or begin plugging wells." He noted, however, that lower CO2 costs, lower completion and operating costs, favored the CO2 option.

Since a wide range of Permian Basin properties are owned by oil companies based in Houston and elsewhere, Fox said he expected a large contingent of spectators from around the nation to show up for the two-day conference, which is being sponsored by Shell Western E&P, Mobil Exploration and Production, Center for Energy and Economic Diversification (CEED), Permian Basin Chapter of Society of Petroleum Engineers and the Midland Reporter-Telegram Permian Basin Oil Report.

Craig Moody, who is coordinating SPE efforts on the conference, said a first ever forum would target engineering and operations personnel who are currently working on or are planning CO2 projects.

"The focus will be on sharing case history information on downhole and surface operations that have worked — and not worked."

While major oil companies will continue to be a part of the CO2 scene in the Permian Basin, but a larger share of the responsibility is expected to fall upon independent oil companies, many of who have bought properties from major oil companies.

Said Fox: "This conference will provide independents a road map for installing CO2 floods, and give them the benefit of 20 years experience by major oil companies.

The conference will also dispel the myth that CO2 is too expensive for independents. Not only are the costs way down, but some majors are now willing to help finance CO2 projects, either through production payments or other means."

To acquaint producers with the new cost structure of CO2 operations, CEED will offer a two-day short course, that will deal primarily with the installation and maintenance of CO2 projects. A spokesman for Amoco noted recently that the "Cadillac" approach originally favored by major oil companies in CO2 floods, may not have been the most cost-effective method.

There will also be a wide variety of exhibitors at the conference to demonstrate the newest technology and applications in CO2 hardware and services. Some of the vendors will be giv-

A custom designed injection heater was used in Shell's low-cost Bennett Ranch CO2 project. Majors are not only willing to pass on 20 years experience in CO2 floods, but will also finance projects through production payments.

O&G Journal feature touts Basin CO2

The lead feature in the Oil & Gas Journal for the week of October 23takes a detailed look at the Permian Basin and the new CO2 oppportunity.

According to a paper written by Chuck Fox, Chia-Fu Hsu, and Rena L Koinis of Shell E&P, which discusses the technological advances in CO2 project design, there are about 40 CO2 floods underway in the Permian Basin, served by a pipeline infrastructure that delivers more than 1 bcfd of CO2.

The feature notes that the industry now has a firm understanding of the factors that govern a successful CO2 flood, and can accurately predict performance and risk. The authors note that enhanced oil recovery will account for about 25 percent of the ultimate primary and secondary recovery.

New CO2 projects are designed using parameters from other projects and computer programs that manipulate volumes of information and 3-D seismic information.

Midland firm makes major acquisition

■ Titan-Anadarko deal could be larger than Costilla-Parker & Parsley sale.

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Midland-based Titan Resources L.P. has completed what may be the biggest acquisition this year in the Permian Basin.

The company announced Friday that it has purchased interest in 18 West Texas fields and 6 New Mexico fields from Anadarko, for an undisclosed sum, but speculation has the Permian Basin purchase larger than the Costilla-Parker & Parsley sale, which went for over $50 million and included properties in the Rocky Mountains.

Net production to Titan from the acquisition is 2,000 barrels of oil and 10 million cubic feet of gas daily.

"In terms of Permian Basin properties, I would have to say this is one of the most significant acquisitions this year," said Tom Moore, vice president and Chief Operating Officer for Titan. "It is certainly a foundation purchase for our firm, and we will use it to build around."

Moore said it was the first major purchase for Titan and all in the Permian Basin where the company wanted to operate. Moore said he expected the purchase would be a spring board for other purchases. "We haven't identified it yet, but one of our company goals is to complete a similar purchase by early 1996."

Moore said he could not release the purchase price or the names of the fields until the acquisition closes on December 1, 1995. He noted that most of the properties were long life reserves that would lend themselves to CO2 recovery in the future. One field is already under CO2 and eight others are under waterflood.

"The CO2 candidates are operated by Amoco, Shell and Conoco, which are on top of the CO2 game," said Moore. He added that Titan would operate 15 of the 24 properties, and that the properties were equally divided between gas and oil. "I would have to say, however, that most of the upside potential is for natural gas."

Titan Resources L.P. was officially formed in March of this year to capitalize upon oil and gas opportunities in the Permian Basin. The company is owned by Titan Management and Natural Gas Partners L.P. and Natural Gas Partners II L.P., both of which are companies owned by Fort Worth investor Marvin Rainwater. Rainwater was recently named in Fortune Magazine as one of four heavy weight investors who had pulled out of oil, but were now coming back in anticipation of another boom. Marvin Davis, Carl Ichan and Phillip Anschutz were named as the other investors.

The management team of Titan Resources include: Jack D. Hightower, president and CEO: George Staley, executive vice president; Tom Moore, vice president and chief operating officer; Dan Colwell, vice president land; Rodney Woodard, vice president drilling and production; John Benfatti, vice president accounting; Susan Rowland, vice president corporate affairs and Bill Vaughn, senior advisor.

In addition to the acquisition Titan has four wells planned for this year and says it will no doubt be drilling new wells and workovers on the new acquisition.

WTGS sets prospect Expo, Symposium

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Organizers of the West Texas Geological Society Fall Symposium and Prospect Expo, say the event could be the catalyst for stimulating new activity in the Permian Basin.

To date, 31 prospect exhibitors have bought space at the three-day affair which gets under way November 1, with representatives from 58 major and independent oil companies already signed to attend. In addition another 30 service companies will be exhibiting during Expo.

The Expo will last one day, and will be followed by a two-day symposium focused on using new technology for finding new oil and gas fields in the mature Permian Basin. More than 500 are expected to attend both the Expo and Symposium.

It is the first prospect expo to be held in the Permian Basin, and those behind it say it could be the first of many to follow. "This is a low-cost, no-frills event with the Permian Basin as the prime focus," said Mike Party, expo chairman.

Party said the prospect was designed to give the small operator and producer in Midland a chance to get their deals on the table without having to fly to Houston, get a hotel room, and pay up to $750 for a booth.

A booth at the WTGS Expo, including one pass to the Symposium, will cost only $75, and additional passes to the Symposium will only be $25 each day, said Robert Martin, chairman of the Symosium. Attendees can register on either day of the Symposium.

"The two things Permian Basin oilmen need in this day and time are education and access to capital. We want to give them both in one meeting," said Martin. "Hopefully, the Symposium will give operators new ideas they can use in their own fields, and get them moving in the direction of drilling more wells."

Topics for the Symposium include: 3-D technology exploration, the use of computers in log analysis and reservoir simulation and basic geological studies. In all 18 presentations will be made, and Clayton Williams will be the keynote speaker.

Symposium pre-registration is $85; on-site registration is $105, and the fee for a booth and both events is $135. Additional information can be obtained by calling (915) 683-1573.

Party said prospect expos have become popular in recent years, because there is more trust and openess in the oil industry. "People are not as afraid to show their seismic or other data."

Westbrook discovery well marks 75 years

■ Fina, guests celebrate a piece of Permian Basin's petroleum history.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

At the same time the Permian Basin Petroleum Pioneers Association gathered for its biennial reunion, another contribution to the Permian Basin's petroleum history was celebrated.

Fina Oil and Chemical Co. Friday hosted a barbecue and dance to mark the 75th anniversary of the No. 1 W.H. Abrams, certified by the Petroleum Museum as the first commercial well in the Permian Basin.

"This defined the area and gave everyone the idea that they ought to drill in the Permian Basin," said Mark Palmer, manager, corporate communications for Fina.

Recognizing the well's 75th anniversary was but one purpose of Friday's celebration, Palmer said.

The second purpose is to celebrate the production of the 100 millionth barrel from the Westbrook field in Mitchell County, a landmark reached this past June. The Abrams well turned 75 in July and continues to produce as the No. 701 Westbrook Southeast Unit when the field was unitized in 1968.

Current and past Fina employees attended the celebration, along with elected officials and interested residents of surrounding cities. Among those attending was Fannie Bess Silvers, who witnessed the coming in of the well.

Of the 100 million barrel-producing Westbrook field, Palmer said, "The whole field means a lot to Fina. We have a refinery in Big Spring that is a big part of Fina's success in the downstream business. It's an excellent refinery that the Westbrook and a lot of other fields in the Permian Basin have supplied with crude over the years. As far as keeping the local economy going, it's been very important to us and to the people of West Texas, especially considering that the well and more specifically the field have been so dynamic and vibrant for the last 75 years."

The No. 1 W.H. Abrams was first shot with nitroglycerine on July 16, 1920 and potentialed for 129 barrels of oil per day. But for most of its existence, it has lived in the shadows of the No. 1 Santa Rita, popularly considered the Permian Basin's first, though it began flowing three years after the Abrams.

Mitchell County began its march towards oil production when Colorado, Texas - now Colorado City - resident L.W. Sandusky, lawyer and member of the chamber of commerce, read several papers on the "Marathon Fold" as it extended toward Mitchell County in 1916. He tried to get a test well drilled by Sieman Oil Co. in 1918, but Sieman Oil backed out and Humble Oil lost interest when new management took over. In 1919 he and oil scout Sam Sloan convinced Travelers Oil to drill a test on one of two prospective structures, which turned out unsuccessful. Sandusky also persuaded Stephen S. Owen, an agent of Underwriters and Producers Refining Co. of New York to drill a test on the other structure.

Leases for the Abrams was secured from the Texas and Pacific Land Trust and assigned to Underwriters in April 1920 and the well was spudded on February 8, 1920. It took teams of horses pulling wagons loaded with cable tool drilling equipment two weeks to transport all the equipment to the location as mud from heavy rains bogged the wagons down.

DISCOVERY: Well continues to produce

The well was drilled to total depth of 2,528 ft. with shows of oil in early June. In July the open interval between total depth and the bottom of the fifth casing string - 6-5/8 inch - set at 2,45 ft. was shot with nitroglycerine. Oil shot up to the crown but quickly bridged at 900 ft. and choked the flow of oil. Two days later, the cleaned-out well potentialed for 129 barrels daily from what is known as the Upper Clearfork, quickly declining to 20 barrels a day. Most of the early production was used as boiler fuel for surrounding rigs. In 1924, the well was deepened to 3,050 ft. and completed in the more prolific Middle Clearfork. Over the past 75 years the well has produced an estimated 157,000 barrels of oil.

As notable as the well is for opening commercial production in the Basin, the Abrams brought about another first for the Permian Basin. Production from the Abrams and its offset the No. 2 Morrison prompted the Rio Grande Oil Co. to lay a two inch line from the wells to the Texas and Pacific railroad tracks near Westbrook to load and transport oil to Rio Grand 's refinery in El Paso. When the first barrels of crude were transported in April 1922, the Abrams became responsible for the first commercial oil pipeline in the Permian Basin.

CONFERENCE: Should attract CO2 experts

ing scheduled presentations.

"We feel it is important " said Fox, "that those who are considering CO2 projects, make personal contact with the firms and individuals who have the necessary expertise and equipment." He said supplier and contractors to CO2 projects had learned many valuable lessons over the years and were anxious to pass them on."

Fox said the Midland conference should be the biggest gathering of CO2 knowledge ever concentrated into one place.

Hanover, Western Resources merging compressor rental units

Staff Reports

HOUSTON - Hanover Compressor Co. and Western Resources Inc. have executed an agreement and plan of merger providing for the acquisition by Hanover of Western Resources' natural gas compressor rental subsidiary, Astra Resources Compression Inc. in a stock transaction valued at approximately $55 million.

Pending necessary approvals, the merger is expected to be complete by year-end. Upon completion of the transaction, Western Resources would own about 20 percent of the privately-held Hanover. The combinationof Hanover and Astra would create the second largest player, on an aggregate basis, in the growing natural gas compressor rental industry.

"The combined company becomes one of the most dynamic organizations in our industry, with the depth of financial management, technical capabilities and customer relationships to tackle the most demanding compression and gas handling projects in this country and around the world," said Michael A.O'Connor, chairman of the board of Hanover.

"We believe firmly in the future of natural gas and the stable growth prospects of the natural gas compressor rental industry," said John E. Hayes Jr., chairman, president and chief executive officer of Western Resources. "The Hanover transaction demonstrates Western Resources' ability to deliver significant value to its shareholders through the development of our own portfolio of businesses as well as a conviction that we can make a valuable contribution to Hanover Compressor as that company executes its own growth plan."

Following the merger, whichis expected to close by year-end, Hanover will operate almost 400,000 horsepower of rental compression equipment, serving the major energy producing basins in the U.S.with a branch network throughout the Southwesternand Rocky Mountain states.

In addition to its U.S. operations, the combined Hanover/Astra also will be among the leaders in rapidly growing international gas compression markets. Through its acquisition in September of Proyecto Gas Natural P.G.N., C.A., a major Venezuelan compressor rental company, Hanover has become one of the largest such companies serving the Venezuelan natural gas industry. Astra Resources is a major factor in the Argentinian compression and gas handling market.

Hanover Compressor has more than tripled its annual revenues and cash flow in the past three years while, incorporating the Astra merger, the company's equity capital base has increased five fold. The company had been created primarily to provide a compressor leasing option for the independent gas and oil field developers. Through its dedication to customer service and a series of strategic acquisitions, Hanover steadily increased its market range and the scope of its products and services.

"Our customer service and problem-solving orientation led us to enter the compressor fabrication business in 1991 and the oil and gas production equipment fabrication and rental business in1993 and we now have become among the largest players in each of those highly competitive businesses," said Michael McGhan, president and chief executive officer, adding, "Hanover's further expansion into the contract compression segment of our market and broadened international position as a result of the Astra Resources Compression transaction are natural step-outs for us which should enable us to better serve our customers' full variety of compression and natural gas handling needs both on a domestic and international basis."

"We believe that Western Resources' development of Astra Resources Compression has resulted in an operation that provides an important building block to Hanover's management as they take the combined coimpany to the next level," Hayes said. "We are very pleased to become a significant partner in Hanover's further develoment and believe that the merger represents a significant economic opportunity for Western Resources shareholders."

Based in Houston, Hanover Compressor is owned by a group of investors which includes key members of its management team and GKH Investments L.P. The general partners of GKH are investment entities controlled by Chicago-based investors, Jay and Tom Pritzker; Mel Klein, an attorney and successful private investor based in Corpus Christi; and Dan Lufkin, co-founder of the New York investment firm of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette. Other shareholders of Hanover include the family of William E. Simon, former U.S. Secretary of the Treasury; Alvin Shoemaker, former chairman of First Boston Corp. and his family; and several independent energy producers.

Western Resources, based in Topeka, Kansas, is a $5 billion diversified energy company. Its utilities, operating in Kansas and Oklahoma, provide natural gas service to approximately 650,000 customers and electric service to approximately 600,000 customers.

Astra Resources, a wholly-owned subsidiary headquartered in Houston, provides natural gas marketing, gathering and processing services in the continental U.S., the Gulf of Mexico and offshore.

Parallel completes three discoveries

MIDLAND — Parallel Petroleum Corp. announced the completion of three natural gas discovery wells in Wharton and Jackson Counties onshore the Texas Gulf Coast utilizing data developed by three-dimensional seismic imaging.

The wells had calculated open flow potentials ranging from 12 million to 24 million cubic feet per day. The operator of all three wells, privately held Cox & Perkins Exploration, Inc. of Houston, is currently producing the three wells at an aggregate rate of 2.5 million cubic feet per day. Parallel's working interests in the three wells range from 17.5 percent to 20 percent.

The Couey No. 1, completed in the Frio formation of Wharton County, is currently producing 1.3 million cubic feet of gas per day, with flowing tubing pressure of 1,760 pounds per square inch (psi), from perforations made between 4,928 and 4,944 feet. The well had a calculated open flow potential of 24 million cubic feet per day. Parallel owns a 20 percent working interest and 15 percent net revenue interest in the well.

The Stockton No. 2, completed in the Catahoula formation of Wharton County, had a calculated open flow potential of 15 million cubic feet of gas per day. The operator is currently producing the well at a rate of 400,000 cubic feet per day, with flowing tubing pressure of 1,300 psi. Perforations were made between 3,265 and 3,276 feet. Parallel owns a 20 percent working interest and 15 percent net revenue interest in the well.

The Yearwood No. 1, completed in the Frio formation of Jackson County, is currently producing 800,000 cubic feet of gas per day with flowing tubing pressure of 1,770 psi. The well had a calculated open flow potential of 12 million cubic feet per day. Perforations were made between 5,022 and 5,028 feet. Parallel owns a 17.5 percent working interest and 12.75 percent net revenue interest in the well.

Pennzoil loses $275 million, cut costs

HOUSTON (AP) — Pennzoil Co. said it lost $275.3 million in the third quarter on a $265.5 million accounting charge and outlined a cost-cutting program that will eliminate an undetermined number of jobs.

Pennzoil said continuing low natural gas prices helped prompt it to slash general and administrative expenses by $40 million a year, on top of a similar $35 million reduction already under way in the oil and gas division.

Most of the reductions will be implemented by the first quarter. The company said it expects charges of less than $20 million in the fourth quarter for severance and other related expenses.

"Given the competitive pressures in the industry and declining real commodities prices, we undertook these actions to provide our shareholders with attractive returns and solid financial performance, even in a difficult price environment," chairman and chief executive officer James Pate said in a news release.

Houston-based Pennzoil also lowered its quarterly dividend from 75 cents per share to 25 cents per share, another in the series of moves aimed at strengthening operating performance, improving financial flexibility and freeing capital for projects. The dividend reduction will save $92 million a year.

In addition, Pennzoil is changing the way it figures the book value of its assets. That accounting change will boost profits by reducing depreciation, depletion and amortization by $42 million a year over the next several years.

Combined, the cost-cutting steps are expected to add $76 million to future annual profits and $152 million to yearly cash flow, Pennzoil said.

The company's third-quarter loss equaled $5.95 per share. In the third quarter of 1994, Pennzoil lost nearly $299.8 million, or $6.51 per share. Revenue dropped 5 percent, to $600 million from $631.7 million.

The results for the just-ended period included one-time charges and writeoffs of $271.2 million, including the charge to adopt the new accounting standards. Without the charges, Pennzoil lost $4.1 million. The year-earlier quarter had $303.8 million in charges, including a $208.1 million charge for a settlement with the Internal Revenue Service.

Aside from the accounting charge, the third-quarter loss was mainly because of lower natural gas prices, Pate said.

For the first nine months of this year, the company lost $277.3 million, or $6 per share, on revenue of $1.88 billion. The company lost $277.2 million, or $6.03 per share, on $1.91 billion during the same three quarters of 1994.

Dual Drilling names firm to assist in boosting value

DALLAS — Dual Drilling Co. announced that its board of directors has approved the appointment of the Houston-based investment banking firm of Simmons & Company International to provide assistance and advice regarding strategic alternatives to maximize shareholder value. Such alternatives may include the potential sale or merger of Dual. The company noted that no negotiations concerning any such transactions have commenced and no specific party for such a transaction has been identified.

L.H. Dick Robertson, president and CEO, stated, "As previously disclosed, the Dual board has been considering various options to maximize shareholder value. The engagement of Simmons & Company to assist with this process is a further step toward pursuing this goal."

Dual Drilling is a leading international drilling contractor providing worldwide offshore drilling services through a fleet of 20 premium offshore rigs.

Mesa posts larger third quarter loss

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Mesa Inc. reported a wider third-quarter loss, partly due to a fight for control of the natural gas company run by Boone Pickens.

The company lost $32.5 million, or 51 cents per share, in the three months ended Sept. 30. Irving-based Mesa lost $25.9 million, or 40 cents per share, in the third quarter of 1994.

Revenue rose 7 percent, to nearly $49 million from $45.7 million.

Mesa made $219,000 in operating income for the quarter, compared with a nearly $2.1 million operating loss in the year-earlier period. Gas prices slipped, but Mesa actually boosted its combined average price over the year-earlier quarter through hedging.

However, Mesa also lost $627,000 from futures and securities investments, on which it gained $8.5 million in last year's third quarter. In addition, interest expense for the company, which has $1.2 billion in debt, increased to $33.5 million from $31.6 million.

General and administrative expenses rose from $7.5 million to $9.2 million.

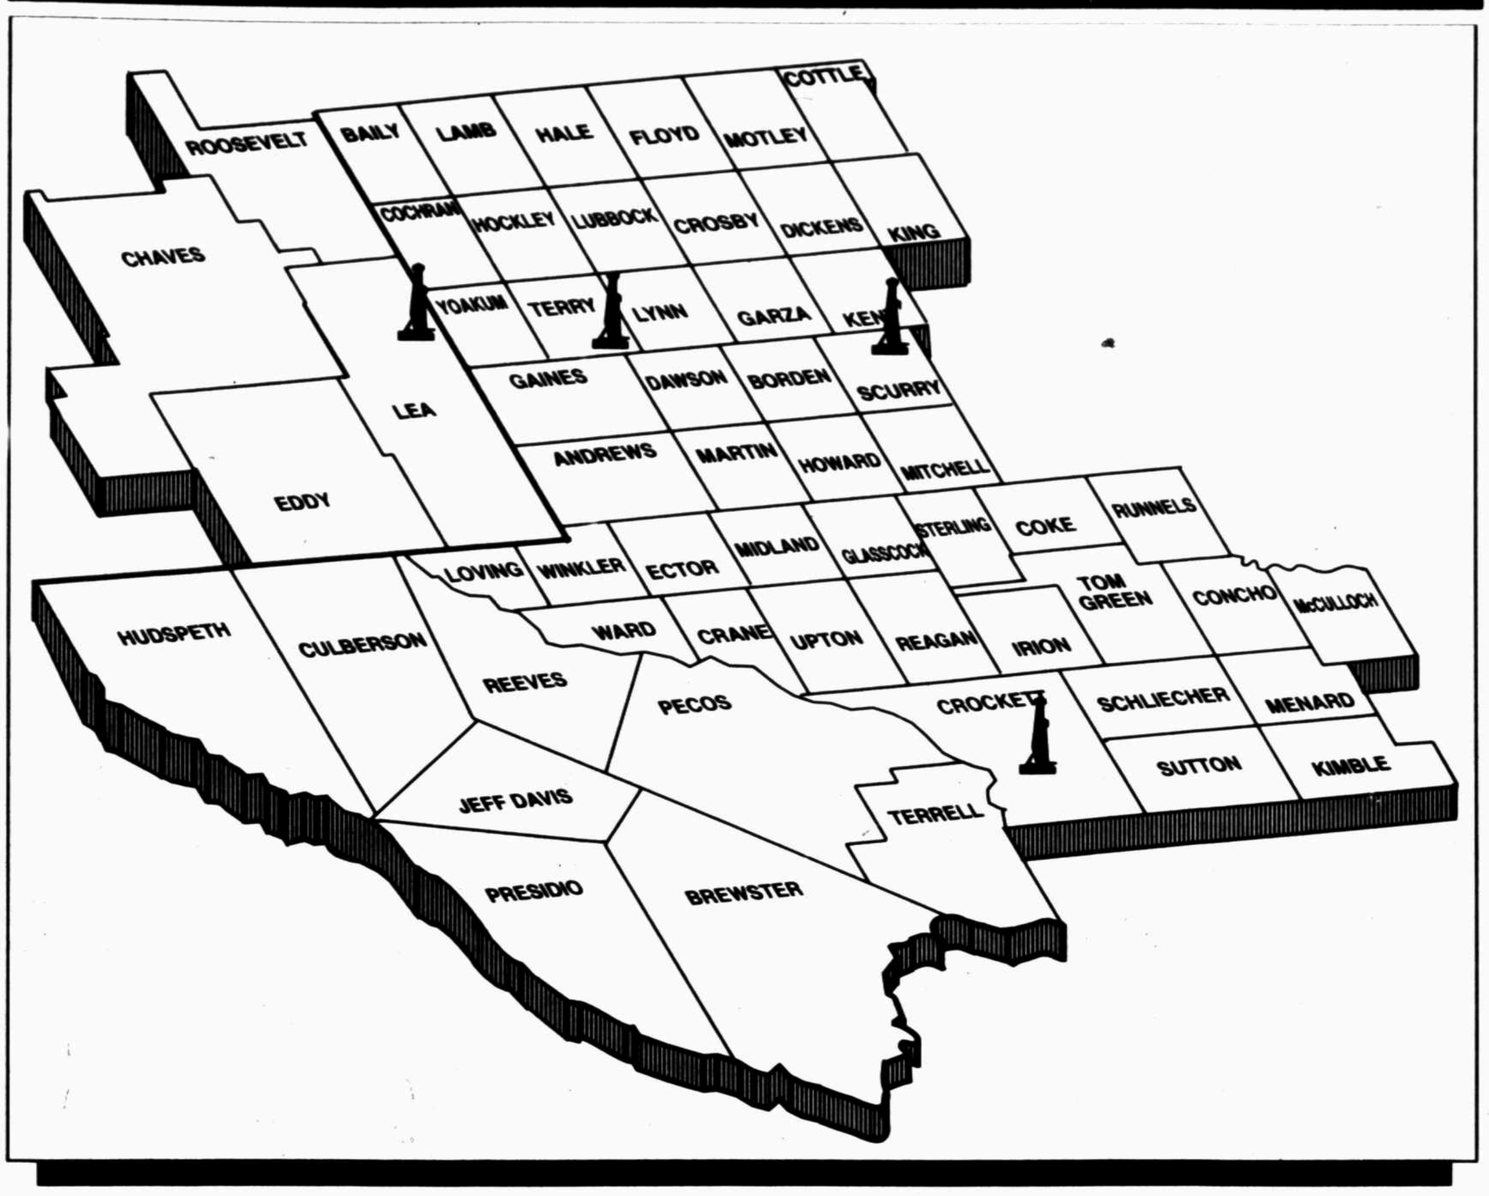
ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS



The rigs on the map above show counties in which significant drilling activity has taken place, as reported in the Activity Highlights below.

Wolfcamp discovery flows 683 barrels oil

Staff Reports

A very strong Wolfcamp discovery has been recorded in Lea County, N.M., two miles northeast of the King field, six miles southeast of Gladiola.

MARALO INC. potentialed the No. 1 Lowe "20" to flow 683 barrels of crude, 900 Mcfd and 729 barrels of water on a 48/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 250 psi. The well flowed from perforations 9,754 to 9,861 ft., no treatment reported.

Drilled to 12,537 ft., the well was plugged back to 12,365 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 12,470 ft.

Location is 350 ft. from north and 1,556 ft. from east lines of Section 20, T13s, R38e.

Canyon reopened in Scurry County field

Canyon Lime 3rd production has been reopened in the Mattie Mae field of Scurry County, southwest of the depleted discovery well, nine miles northeast of Snyder.

GAIL D. LATIMER ENTERPRISES tested the No. 1 Joel to pump 36 barrels of 38 gravity crude, 22 Mcfd and 10 barrels of water from perforations 7,120 to 7,126 ft. The interval was acidized with 250 gallons of NeFe acid.

Permitted as a 7,600 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 7,550 ft., where 4-1/2 inch casing was set.

The well topped the Glorieta at 2,205 ft., Fuller Limestone at 5,084 and Strawn at 7,298 ft.

Location is 1,700 ft. from north and 1,500 ft. from east lines of Section 266, Block 2, H&TC survey, Abst. 2036.

The field was opened in March 1981 with completion of Davis Oil Co.'s No. 1 Mattie Mae Wilson.

Terry field gets Penn reopener

ROBERT E. LANDRETH has reopened Pennsylvanian production in the Corrigan North field of Terry County with recompletion of a former Fusselman producer, offsetting an earlier Strawn discovery, 12 miles east-southeast of Wellman.

The No. 2 Mathie was recompleted to pump 25 barrels of 35.4 gravity crude and 6 Mcfd from perforations 9,383 to 9,400 ft. The interval was acidized with 200 gallons of 15 percent acid.

Originally drilled to 11,583 ft., the well was plugged back to 9,986 ft.

Formation tops include the Yates at 2,995 ft., San Andres at 4,550, Spraberry at 7,455, Strawn at 10,010, Atoka at 10,612 and Fusselman at 11,524 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from south and 1,852 ft. from west lines of Section 2, Block C-38, PSL survey.

Dual producer tested in Crockett

UNION PACIFIC RESOURCES has completed a dual producer in the Ozona (Canyon Sandstone) and Lita (Clearfork) fields of Crockett County, 30.5 miles southwest of Ozona.

From Clearfork interval 1,944 to 1,992 ft., the No. 5307 Clegg tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 1,135 Mcfd.

From Canyon Sandstone interval 5,935 to 6,523 ft., the well tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 319 Mcfd.

The well was drilled to 7,000 ft. and plugged back to 6,955 ft. One string of 2-7/8 inch casing was set at 2,353 ft. and a second string at 6,986 ft.

On kelly bushing elevation of 1,957 ft., the well topped the Clearfork at 1,408 ft. and Canyon Sandstone from 5,349 to 6,753 ft.

Location is 806 ft. from south and 1,390 ft. from west lines of Section 53, Block Q2, D&SE survey, Abst. 2019.

Midland Resources to redeem all warrants

HOUSTON - Midland Resources Inc. announced it will redeem all of its warrants to purchase common stock at $2.50 per share at the redemption price of 5 cents per warrant from holders of record November 17, 1995. Redemption will occur at the offices of the warrant agent, Stock Transfer Co. of America, 17770 Preston Road, P.O. Box 796277, Dallas Texas 75379. The warrants may be exercised for shared of common stock at any time through November 10.

Tom Brown registers to sell 4 million shares

Tom Brown Inc. has filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission relating to the proposed sale of 4 million shares of common stock. In addition, the company has granted the underwriters an option to purchase an additional 600,000 shares to cover over-allotments, if any.

The company will use the net proceeds of the offering to retire all of its outstanding long-term debt and for general corporate purposes.

Schroder Wertheim & Co. Inc.; Howard, Weill, Labouisse, Friedrichs Inc.; Petrie Parkman & Co.; and Salomon Brothers Inc. will serve as managing underwriters of the offering.

Clayton Williams shareholders buy offering

Clayton Williams Energy Inc. announced that all 1,598,971 shares of common stock offered to its shareholders have been purchased, resulting in the company receiving gross proceeds of $3,901,489.

Clayton W. Williams Jr., president of the company, reported that holders of approximately 78 percent of the company's common stock had exercised their basic subscription privilege to purchase the common stock offered to them. The remaining shares were purchased by shareholders, including parties affiliated with Williams, indicating an interest in increasing their ownership in the company. Williams said, "We view this level of participation as a vote of confidence in the company, its management and the company's future. We are extremely pleased with the response."

The company intends to use the proceeds obtained from this offering to reduce its outstanding indebtedness on the company's secured bank credit facility.

Weatherford, Enterra complete merger

HOUSTON - Weatherford International Inc. and Enterra Corp. announced completion of the merger of the two companies and a name change to Weatherford Enterra Inc.

Shareholders of both companies approved the merger and Weatherford shareholders also approved a one-for-two reverse stock split, the name change and various other matters.

The merger was structured as a tax-free pooling of interests. Pursuant to the merger, all outstanding shares of Enterra common stock, approximately 28 million, were converted into approximately 24 million shares of Weatherford Enterra common stock at a ratio of 0.845 of a share of Weatherford Enterra stock, after giving effect to the reverse stock split. Following the merger and the reverse stock split, Weatherford Enterra will have approximately 51 million shares outstanding.

After the merger, the significantly expanded company will operate through six core business: rental and fishing services; tubular handling services; gas compression products and services; cementation products; pipeline construction products and services and energy products and services.

Union Texas Petroleum earnings increase

HOUSTON — Union Texas Petroleum Holdings, Inc. announced 1995 third quarter earnings of 13 cents per share, compared to 17 cents per share in 1994's same period. Net income for 1995's third quarter was $12 million, versus $15 million a year ago.

For the first nine months of 1995, the company's earnings were 89 cents per share, compared to 57 cents per share for the corresponding period in 1994. Net income for 1995's first nine months was $79 million, up from $50 million in 1994's same period.

Coastal quarterly results increase 66 percent

HOUSTON — The Coastal Corp. reported a 66 percent increase in quarterly results with earnings of $44.2 million, or 38 cents per share, for the quarter ended September 30 compared with $26.6 million, or 21 cents per share, for the same period last year.

Nine-month earnings were $159 million, or $1.39 per share, up from $150.8 million, or $1.31 per share, for the same period a year earlier.

Third-quarter operating profit increased to $151.4 million, up from $132.3 million during the same period last year. Operating profits were $521.4 million for the nine months compared with $511.3 million in the prior year.

Halliburton sees substantially higher earnings

DALLAS — Halliburton Co. reported substantially higher earnings of $68.8 million, or $.60 per share, from continuing operations for the 1995 third quarter compared to $49.5 million, or $.43 per share in the 1994 third quarter. Continuing operations consist of the company's core business segments Halliburton Energy Services and Engineering and Construction Services.

Discontinued operations consist of the company's insurance services business segment. During the 1995 third quarter Halliburton announced plans to spin-off its Highlands Insurance Group, Inc. subsidiary to Halliburton shareholders by the end of 1995. In connection with the planned spin-off, in the 1995 third quarter Highlands increased reserves for claim losses and related expenses and provided for certain legal matters of the discontinued business. These charges, together with certain other provisions associated with Halliburton's complete exit from the insurance business and the operating results of Highlands produced an after-tax loss of $67.7 million, or $.59 per share, by the discontinued insurance business in the 1995 third quarter compared to income of $2.2 million, or $.02 per share, in the year earlier period.

The combined net income of both continuing operations and discontinued operations for the 1995 third quarter was $1.1 million, or $.01 per share, compared to $51.7 million, or $.45 per share, for the 1994 comparable quarter.

Special charges reduce Chevron net income

SAN FRANCISCO — Chevron Corp. reported that special charges reduced third quarter net income 34 percent to $282 million, or $.44 per share, from $425 million ($.65 per share) reported for the third quarter of 1994.

Excluding special charges, 1995 third quarter results were $504 million, a 24 percent increase from adjusted earnings of $407 million for the prior year quarter. Special charges totaled $222 million and included a $168 million provision related to the company's recently announced decision to dispose of its real estate development operations.

Phillips Petroleum income rises in quarter

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. —Phillips Petroleum Co. reported third-quarter net income of $136 million, or 52 cents a share, compared with $119 million, or 45 cents a share, for the same period last year. Total revenues were $3.4 billion, versus $3.3 billion a year ago.

After adjusting for special items, net operating income was $151 million, versus $141 million a year earlier. Third-quarter 1995 special items of $15 million consisted of charges for severance benefits and other miscellaneous adjustments.

Strong chemicals profits benefited earnings for the quarter, according to Wayne Allen, chairman and chief executive officer.

Apache Corp. posts earnings of $7 million

HOUSTON — Apache Corp. reported third-quarter 1995 net income of $7.0 million or 10 cents per share, down from $12.4 million or 18 cents per share in the prior-year period. Cash from operations amounted to $84.7 million, versus $87.6 million in the third quarter a year ago.

Earnings for the first nine months of 1995 totaled $11.7 million or 17 cents per share, compared with $33.5 million or 48 cents per share in the year-earlier period. Nine-months cash flow increased to $260.1 million from $251.2 million in the prior-year period.

Tesoro sees earnings up from year-ago loss

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — Tesoro Petroleum Corp. announced third-quarter net earnings of $36.8 million, or $1.47 per share, compared with a loss of $3.3 million, or $.13 per share, in the 1994 third quarter.

Included in the 1995 third-quarter results was an after-tax gain of approximately $33 million from the sale of certain interests in the Bob West field, partially offset by approximately $5 million of after-tax charges related to employee severances and restructuring initiatives. Third-quarter operating profit, including gain on sales of assets, rose to $53.8 million from $7.1 million.

Excluding the gain on sale of Bob West field properties, the significantly enhanced third-quarter results were attributable to improvements within both the Refining & Marketing (R&M) segment and the Exploration & Production (E&P) segment.

Schlumberger earnings up 25 percent

NEW YORK — Schlumberger reported net income was $169 million and earnings per share were 70 cents, a gain of 25 percent compared to third quarter 1994. For the quarter, operating revenue was $1.92 billion, 17 percent above the prior year. Operating revenue for the first nine months was 13 percent above the same period last year, while net income was up 26 percent.

Pogo posts earnings, increases budget

HOUSTON —Net income of Pogo Producing Co. for the third quarter was $722,000, or 2 cents per share, on revenues of $36,967,000, compared to net income of $7,433,000, or 22 cents per share, on comparable 1994 revenues of $46,452,000, it was announced by Pogo chairman, Paul G. Van Wagenen.

Discretionary cash flow in the third quarter of 1995 totaled $26,484,000 and $79,436,000 for the first nine months of the year. This compares to discretionary cash flow of $29,115,000 in the third quarter of 1994, and $84,955,000 for the first nine months of 1994.

Van Wagenen also said that Pogo's Board of Directors increased the 1995 capital and exploration expenditures budget from $100 million to $115 million.

Western Atlas posts earnings gains

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. —Western Atlas Inc. reported that its strong earnings growth continued in the third quarter.

For the three-month period ended Sept. 30, 1995, net earnings rose by over 35 percent compared to the same period a year earlier.

Improved profit margins in the oilfield services segment, coupled with lower corporate and interest expenses, more than offset the increase in the number of shares outstanding, and resulted in an earnings per share growth of over 17 percent for the quarter.

Net earnings for the third quarter increased to $29.2 million compared to $21.6 million in the previous year, while earnings per share grew to $0.54 from last year's $0.46, based on 54.0 million and 47.1 million shares, respectively. Revenues for the three-month period were $569.4 million, compared to $559.9 million for last year's third quarter.

Union Pacific Resources net income rises

FORT WORTH — Union Pacific Resources Group Inc. reported operating revenues and net income for the quarter ended September 30, 1995, of $331.3 million and $76.7 million, respectively. For the same period in 1994, operating revenues and net income were $353.4 million and $75.6 million, respectively.

Smith International reports quarterly results

HOUSTON — Smith International Inc. reported its results for the third quarter ended Sept. 30, 1995.

The company earned net income of $11.7 million, or 30 cents per common share, in the third quarter of 1995 on revenues of $229.4 million compared with net income of $9.3 million, or 24 cents per common share, on revenues of $181.5 million in the third quarter of 1994.

Revenues and net income for the third quarter of 1995 increased by more than 25 percent from the third quarter of 1994 although the worldwide oil and gas drilling rig count declined by 3 percent.

Company president tells why D-Jax Corporation is prospering

By Dee Mills
Founder and President,
D-Jax Corporation

There are many reasons why D-Jax is doing well, but only one accounts for our success, our customers.

While there are only ten of us here in our Midland operation, there are many other people involved that are working constantly to get the D-Jax Penny Pincher message out any place in the world where there are beam-pumped oil wells.

"While our marketing efforts, especially in South America and Canada, are doing well, it's still the Permian Basin where we are having our greatest success at the present time."

Dee Mills, president and founder
D-Jax Corporation

While our marketing efforts, especially in South America and Canada, are doing well, it's still the Permian Basin where we are having our greatest success at the present time.

Like any other equipment manufacturing and sales organization, we would not have survived had it not been for the loyalty of our customers.

The dependability and user-friendliness of our equipment, especially the Penny Pincher pump-off control, as well as the attitude and training capabilities of our technical staff, consisting of Alton Teague, Joe Mills, Wayne Whitaker and Bob Hill, accounts for an awful lot of that customer loyalty.

Jim Patillo heads up our local sales efforts. There is no end to how far Jim will go to accommodate his customers, both old and new, and to satisfy their needs. Jim has been with D-Jax for six years.

Billie Mills, who has semi-retired, has handled bookkeeping and a few other chores for 23 years since D-Jax opened their doors. Her greatest contribution has been her unwavering support and inspiration that Dee has always been able to rely upon. Without Billie's help and inspiration, Dee would probably still be pumping in the oilfield.

Joe Mills has been working here for more than 20 years. In July of this year his wife, Dianne Mills, came aboard to take over the bookkeeping responsibilities among other chores. She has had no problem whatsoever blending into our Midland operation.

Wayne Whitaker came aboard in 1985. Like Joe, he has a handle on just about all phases of our operation and both are invaluable to D-Jax. Wayne's wife, Kathy, who is also Dee and Billie's daughter, is learning the business while filling in part time in both assembly and in the office.

Amy Arenivas, Dee's secretary and everybody's "crutch," handles invoicing, accounts receivable, shipping and just about anything else asked of her except working on our pickups. Amy has been with D-Jax more than ten years.

Bob Hill, our short timer, came aboard in February of this year. A former production foreman for Sohio for 24 years, he knows a lot about beam pumping and beam pumping problems. For that reason, he is developing into a very knowledgeable technician. D-Jax is fortunate to have him on our team.

Alton Teague is our design engineer, software engineer, and, in general, a jack of all trades. We have not found many things that Alton cannot do. He has more usable knowledge than most other electrical engineers twice his age. Dee believes if he can dream it up, Alton can design and build it. Alton is beginning his ninth year with D-Jax, hopefully, with many more years to follow.

Innovation and hard work will be the key to continued success at D-Jax, and we promise plenty of both.

Founded in 1972 by Dee Mills, D-Jax Corporation builds and markets pump off controllers and dynamometers worldwide. They can be reached at 683-5710 or 1-800-446-DJAX.

D-Jax staff members demonstrate how quickly the Penny Pincher POC adds up savings on lifting costs.

THE D-JAX "Penny Pincher" Advantage!

The inexpensive "PennyPincher" Pump-off Control will: Greatly reduce your lifting cost on marginal wells. Increase the economic life of stripper wells.

The "PennyPincher" takes advantage of changing fluid entry levels. It will also: Reduce rod parts and tubing leaks caused by Pounding fluid. Cut energy costs by not operating a partially filled pump. Maximize production while minimizing costs.

MEETINGS

Chaos and natural gas prices topic for SPE

Ed Capen will be the guest speaker at Tuesday's luncheon meeting of the Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers. The meeting will be at the Petroleum Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Capen

Capen's topic will be "Chaos and Natural Gas Pricing." Chaso and complexity have emerged as one of the most exciting branches of science over the last 20 years. Capen will introduce the concepts, show traps that easily catch the uninitiated, let the audience try to outguess a chaos machine, and end up looking at how to apply what is learned to predicting prices for natural gas.

Capen joined Arco's Research and Development Laboratories in 1957 as a research physicist. He retired from Arco in 1992 and now teaches petroleum risk management with PetroRisk Partners and does consulting work through his company, Vadcon.

Cost is $12 and reservations can be made by calling 686-7329.

SPE study group to discuss Clean Air Act

The Environmental Study Group of the Society of Petroleum Engineers will meet Thursday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Nick Woronstoff with Mobil Exploration & Production Inc. will discuss the Clean Air Act Title V Status and general air control compliance and exemptions in the oilfield.

Cost is $10 and reservations can be made by calling 686-7329.

El Paso to host Clean Energy week activities

EL PASO - Solar activity will flare up in El Paso in mid-November with a series of events during Clean Energy Week, featuring workshops, exhibits, a solar cookoff and three major events including the Texas-Mexico Border Energy Forum II.

U.S. and Mexican energy policy leaders will meet in El Paso Nov. 16-17 for the Texas-Mexico Border Energy Forum II to continue a dialogue seeking common solutions to future energy needs for the border area, said Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro.

The forum, sponsored by state and federal government agencies, environmental groups and universities from both sides of the Texas-Mexico border, will be held at the El Paso Civic Center.

"As energy needs grow in Texas and the nation, we are emphasizing the role energy sources like natural gas and renewables can play in a future requiring clean energy for our region," Mauro said.

"Environmental challenges span the globe as population and economic growth strain the capability of traditional energy sources to meet growing demand," Mauro said. "The Texas-Mexico border region is no exception as it undergoes dramatic increases in population, industry and commerce."

Sponsors of the forum are bringing representatives of key organizations to the table to continue last year's dialogue on energy issues that will open doors to future energy solutions and important information and technology exchanges.

This year's Texas-Mexico Border Energy Forum II is being held in conjunction with the Texas Renewables '95 conference on renewable energy sources like wind and solar and the inauguration and signing ceremony for the Paso del Norte Clean Cities Program for Alternative Fuels.

On Nov. 14, a tour sponsored by the Texas General Land Office, Lower Colorado River Authority and Kenetech will mark the start of the Culberson County Wind Power Project. The ceremony to be held in Van Horn will put wind-generated electricity into the Texas electrical grid from a 35 megawatt wind power plant in the San Gabriel Mountains.

"I just drank water - the only by-product - from a bus 'tailpipe' in Austin from the Ballard Fuel Cell Bus that produces clean electrical energy to power a city bus from mixing hydrogen and oxygen," Mauro said. "Now, I'm looking forward to tripping a switch that will bring clean, abundant, sustainable wind-generated electricity on line for Texans - as well as produce an income for the schoolchildren of Texas.

"These clean, sustainable forms of energy are what we will be talking about in El Paso in November," he said. "Renewable resources, sustainable power without pollution, alternative fuels to clean up our air are especially important as we move into the next century. We must plan and prepare a sustainable way of living for our children and their children so that they will be able to enjoy a clean, healthy world."

"That's what Clean Energy Week is all about - the future of Texas as a leader in sustainable economies with partners from across all our border," Mauro said.

University Lands schedules lease sale

Staff Reports

The Board for Lease of University Lands will hold Sealed Bid Sale No. 88 on November 14 at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification.

The regular oil and gas lease sale is comprised of 158 tracts in Andrews, Martin, Crane, Upton, Reagan, Crockett, Irion, Pecos, Loving, Ward, Winkler and Schleicher counties and includes a total of 44,628 acres. Minimum bonus requirements and standard University lease terms will apply as previously announced. The applicable royalty is 25 percent but a reduction to 20 percent or 22.5 percent for each lease may be earned by fulfillment of specified timely development stipulations.

In conjunction with the lease sale, the board is holding its frontier oil and gas lease sale, offering 168 tracts in El Paso and Hudspeth counties that include 460,217 acres. Special terms include $2 acre minimum bonus, 10-year primary term and an initial royalty of 1/8th. Eighteen tracts are available in Terrell County and include a total of 11,594 acres. Special terms include $20 an acre minimum bids, five-year primary term and an initial royalty of 3/16th.

All bids should be sealed and addressed to Manager of University Lands, Oil, Gas and Mineral Interests, P.O. Box 553, Midland Texas 79702-0553. The envelope should be marked "Sealed Bid for Mineral Lease, November 14, 1995" and received no later than 5 p.m. Nov. 13 at the Midland post office or at the office of University Lands, 808 W. Wall, or no later than 10 a.m. Nov. 14 at the sale site.

Texaco tests new drilling technologies

HOUSTON — Texaco has successfully applied new directional drilling technologies resulting in profitable new reserves and production in two mature oil fields some 1,000 miles apart, it was announced by Clarence P. Cazalot, President of Texaco Exploration and Production Inc. (TEPI).

The technologies were applied in TEPI's Aneth Field in Utah and the Cote Blanche Island Field in South Louisiana.

In Utah, TEPI recently completed the world's first quadri-lateral, short radius, horizontal well drilled with articulated downhole motors. An articulated downhole motor acts like an elbow and bends to allow a drill bit to rapidly turn from vertical to horizontal.

The well, Aneth Unit F114, is a horizontal re-entry located in San Juan County, Utah. It tested 547 barrels of oil and 1,207 barrels of water in 24 hours which is six times better than the average of a vertical infill well in the same field. The four horizontal laterals penetrated layered formations from 5,686 to 5,768 feet in depth and ranged in length from 927 to 1,697 feet.

TEPI has drilled 16 laterals out of seven vertical wells since late 1994 at Aneth. Four are water injection wells and three are producing wells resulting in 800 barrels of oil and 480 thousand cubic feet of gas per day of new production. Upside potential for more than 60 additional horizontal wells that may be drilled over the next five years is under evaluation.

"We are expanding the role of horizontal technology to include secondary and tertiary recovery projects, said Douglas K. Carriger, TEPI's Denver Division Manager. "Proper placement of horizontal laterals in both producing and injection wells will improve waterflood performance and enhance oil recovery by increasing sweep efficiency. Also, multiple short radius laterals, such as in Aneth Unit F114, penetrate more of the reservoir at a lower cost. These actions combine to enhance our return on investment and in turn, shareholder value. Re-entering existing wells, and drilling horizontal instead of new infill vertical wells, results in fewer locations, roads, flow lines and power lines."

The Aneth Field was discovered by Texaco in 1956, and the Aneth Unit was formed Sept. 1, 1961. Texaco has 68.8 percent working interest in the unit and is joined by partners: Chieftain International, Inc., Mobil Exploration and Production U.S. Inc, Helbing and Podpechan, Reynolds Metals Co., Medallion Production Co., Marathon Oil Co., and JN Exploration & Production LP. Cumulative production from the unit is 135 million barrels of oil and 114 billion cubic feet of gas.

TEPI used innovative directional drilling technology and 3-D seismic imaging to complete three oil and gas wells under a salt dome overhang in South Louisiana.

The wells on State Lease 340 are adjacent to a massive salt dome 20 miles southeast of New Iberia, La., in Cote Blanche Island Field in St. Mary Parish. Texaco has a 100 percent working interest in 8,500 acres in the field.

The wells are producing approximately 2,000 barrels of oil and 21.2 million cubic feet of natural gas per day. A fourth well is in the process of completion and a fifth is currently drilling.

The Cote Blanche Island Field, located in West Cote Blanche Bay in the Atchafalaya Basin estuary system, was discovered in 1948. Texaco's cumulative production from the field since its discovery totals more than 91 million barrels of oil and 213 billion cubic feet of natural gas.

Forcenergy finals Gulf of Mexico wells

MIAMI — Forcenergy Gas Exploration Inc. announced that it has successfully completed three exploratory wells and one development well on its South Marsh Island Block 106/115 property in the Gulf of Mexico.

These wells are producing approximately 2,000 barrels of oil per day and 5,000 Mcf of gas per day. The latest exploratory well completed, the A-5 ST, encountered approximately 55 feet of pay and is currently testing at a rate of approximately 1,000 barrels of oil per day, 400 Mcf of gas per day and no water. FGAS has a 100% working interest in these wells.

FGAS has estimated that the drilling to date on the South Marsh Island Block 106/115 field has added approximately 1.8 million barrels of oil and 4.7 billion cubic feet of gas to the company's reserve base.

Currently, two additional exploratory wells are being drilled in the SMI 106/115 field and, if successful, are expected to be completed during 1995. Further drilling is planned on these blocks during 1996.

FGAS's development program is proceeding on schedule at its South Pass Block 24 field. A total of eight development wells have been drilled and should be completed and producing prior to year-end.

Columbia Gas intends to sell exploration, development unit

WILMINGTON, Del. — The Columbia Gas System Inc., announced its intent to sell Columbia Gas Development Corporation, its wholly owned southwest U.S. oil and gas exploration and production subsidiary.

Columbia Gas Development, headquartered in Houston, Texas, has in excess of 200 billion cubic feet equivalent of proved oil and natural gas reserves located in the Gulf of Mexico and on-shore continental United States.

"With innovations like market hubs, futures trading and the application of information technology in natural gas markets, the strategic value to Columbia of drilling for oil and gas in the Southwest has diminished," said Oliver G. "Rick" Richard III, Chairman and CEO. "We would rather use our capital in the future to expand the use of these technologies and new market mechanisms to meet our customers' ever-diversifying needs."

Columbia said it expects to emerge from bankruptcy by the end of the year. "As Columbia emerges from bankruptcy, we have an opportunity to redefine ourselves strategically. We are employing value-added criteria to assist us in this process. Southwest oil and gas exploration doesn't serve our customer base as well as other priorities. Consequently, Columbia needs to focus its energies and capital expenditures elsewhere."

Columbia does not expect to leave the E & P business entirely since it will retain ownership of Columbia Natural Resources, Inc., an exploration and production company located in the Appalachian area. "Columbia Natural Resources' production is much closer to our customers and is spread across our principal pipeline company 7/8s service territory," noted Richard. "We see a better strategic fit between Columbia Natural Resources and the rest of Columbia's assets."

Columbia Gas has retained the investment banking firm of Salomon Brothers Inc. to advise it in connection with the possible sale.

The Columbia Gas System, Inc., is one of the nation's largest natural gas systems. Its subsidiaries are engaged in all aspects of the natural gas market, from production through the storage, transmission, and distribution of natural gas, as well as the generation of electricity. Columbia Gas serves, directly or indirectly, more than eight million energy users in 15 states and the District of Columbia.

DEVELOPMENTS/7H

Helping you increase your success ratio on retreatment of pumping wells.
WOOD GROUP PRODUCTION TECHNOLOGY
Helping you by:
- Selecting the best candidates for retreatment
- Determining the presence and degree of wellbore damage
- Evaluating the effectiveness of both initial treatment and retreatment
- Measuring physical and effective fracture lengths to provide a means of comapring the effectiveness of one type of treatment with another.
- Providing a data base to compare a well's performance over time.

How do we do this?
By running a simple, cost effective Accoustical Build-up

Occidental restructures worldwide operations

LOS ANGELES — Occidental Petroleum Corp. announced plans to consolidate its worldwide oil and gas operations into a single operating company with headquarters in Bakersfield, California, under David R. Martin, president and chief executive officer of Occidental Oil & Gas Corp. This action is the latest in a series of corporate-wide steps begun in 1991 to maximize shareholder value.

A comprehensive review is currently underway to work out the final details of the plan. By mid-January 1996, announcements will be made regarding relocations, work consolidations, system redesigns, asset redeployment and separations. Occidental expects to recognize a charge against fourth quarter earnings as a result of the reorganization.

With the integration of OXY USA and Occidental International Exploration & Production Co. into Occidental Oil & Gas, Tulsa, Oklahoma will become the site of the Mid-Continent region office in early 1996. The operations from the current Mid-Continent region office in Oklahoma City will be transferred to Tulsa. The Occidental Petroleum corporate data center, tax and audit departments, will remain in Tulsa.

The Occidental Crude Sales office in Houston is being closed and the function is being consolidated in Bakersfield under a newly formed worldwide marketing group responsible for marketing crude oil and natural gas. Occidental Engineering Services Company located in Bakersfield will be integrated into the newly formed International EOR & Engineering group. The reorganization also could affect selected foreign offices.

Combining all oil and gas activities into a flatter organization builds on the company's strengths as a low cost oil finder while improving its competitive posture in developing new growth opportunities in international EOR.
