Hope Reigns Cease—Fire Pact May Revive Laos Conference

HARVEST TIME IN PANHANDLE — Wheat harvest begins in earnest in the Panhandle this week. It's the season of combines in the fields and activity at the grain elevators. Shown here is 70-year-old Roy Tinsley, a veteran wheat farmer who has seen Gray County harvest seasons come and go for 45 years. He has seen good crops and bad ones. This year he expects a 'fair' one. Tinsley was photographed as he stood among the wheat on his farm, four miles east of Pampa. Incidentally, the first load of harvested wheat was unloaded yesterday at a grain elevator in Kingsmill. (Daily News Photo)

Allied-Russian Accord Looms, Diplomats Say

GENEVA (UPI) — Western diplomats said Saturday they fully expected British Foreign Secretary Lord Home to break the Geneva conference deadlock Sunday when he flies here for talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, co-chairman of the conference on Laos.

Home was reported so sure of success he did not change his plans to fly on to Washington Tuesday for a four-day visit. It was generally believed the conference would resume on Monday with both Russia and Britain calling for a firm cease-fire in Laos.

A compromise formula for ending the deadlock was reported worked out Friday by U. S. Ambassador Averell Harriman and Gromyko in compliance with President Kennedy's and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's Vienna statements that they agreed the fighting in Laos should end.

Western diplomats also hoped Gromyko would relent and let the co-chairman of the conference send new instructions to the three-nation International Control Commission in Laos on policing the oft-broke cease-fire there.

Western conference officials said they would be willing to resume the conference if even a "minimum accord" is reached by Home and Gromyko.

The United States, Britain and France have been boycotting the conference since midweek because of "flagrant violations" of the truce by Communist supported rebels in Laos. They were joined later by Thailand and South Viet Nam.

All expressed willingness to take their seats again in the big conference room of the Palais des Nations once fighting is under control in Laos.

Quiet seemed to have settled over the battlefields of Laos with no new reports of grave infractions of the truce within the past 4 hours. A Vientiane dispatch said monsoon rains had grounded most planes in Laos and that no fighting and no artillery fire has been reported since Wednesday.

Adlai Plans Attempt To Woo Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — Ambassador Adlai Stevenson flew here Saturday to confer with President Janio Quadros whose overtures toward the Soviet Union and Communist China have been a cause of concern in the United States.

Stevenson's mission was to connedy's Latin American program will save the hemisphere from communism.

Quadros, a strong-willed politician who took office last January, will receive Stevenson Sunday in Sao Paulo at the presidential summer palace. Stevenson Saturday met Foreign Minister Afonso Arinos and Finance Minister Clement Mariani.

Stevenson, in an arrival speech, said the American nations must find the resources to improve conditions in Latin America and establish social justice in the southern hemisphere.

He told a small group at Galeao Airfield he was here to discuss Kennedy's "alliance for progress" aimed at joining the Latin American countries in a "concerted and sustained attack on the basic conditions which hold back economic development and social justice inherent in the rights of every people."

He said the program was built on a strong foundation laid by the Brazilian initiative for "operation Pan America"—a plan for close collaboration of the American republics in support of their common objectives.

His main purpose in visiting Brazil, Stevenson said, is to discuss these means of mobilizing resources against "rural stagnation, illiteracy, ill health, inadequate investment and low productivity."

How these efforts will jibe with Quadros' own aims remain to be seen. Quadros has instituted monetary reforms and made many economic changes.

Dr. Bratcher has served five years as Pampa District superintendent and for eight years was pastor at St. John's Methodist Church in Lubbock. He also served the McCollugh Methodist Church in Pampa as well as other pastorates.

Search On For Federal Agency Aide

WASHINGTON (UPI)— A clerk at a super-secret government intelligence agency who vanished after a day at the races was still mysteriously missing Saturday.

An East Coast search by military intelligence agents and police failed to turn up any trace of 28-year-old William Hyter Covington. A Defense Department spokesman acknowledged that Covington, a $6,500-a-year employe of the National Security Agency (NSA), had limited access to classified secrets.

He has been missing since last Tuesday when he was reported to have gone to the horse races at Charles Town, W.Va. He worked for the same agency that employed Bernon F. Mitchell and William H. Martin who defected to Russia last year.

Covington's wife reached at their home in Laurel, Md., told newsmen: "I can't talk now. I have nothing to say now."

The FBI said they were not actively participating in the case and for the time being had no jurisdiction for taking action. State and local police were cooperating with military authorities.

A spokesman for the NSA at Ft. Meade, Md., said that Covington held a "fairly low" position in the hush-hush agency but reported he did have permission to see secret files on a "need to know" basis.

A Pentagon spokesman said that Covington returned to work last week after having taken sick leave for nearly two months. Before his disappearance, he had asked his supervisors for further sick leave, ostensibly to have a cyst removed from his neck.

He telephoned in Monday and Tuesday to say he would not report because of illness but a Pentagon spokesman said that the missing man told his wife that he worked both days.

Covington is a native of Bowling

Kennedy Asked To Bare Stand On Housing Act

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A Republican congressman has challenged the administration to endorse, or disown, Democratic efforts to increase spending on two federal programs $1,250,000,000 above the level recommended by President Kennedy, it was disclosed Saturday.

The issue — on which the administration probably would prefer to remain silent—was raised in a letter which Rep. William B. Widnall, R-N. J., mailed last Tuesday to Kennedy's budget director, David E. Bell.

Widnall pointed out that Kennedy only two weeks ago appealed to Congress to "refrain" from adding funds to any of his programs.

So far Widnall has received no reply.

Specifically, he asked Bell where the administration stands on two budget raising provisions of a $5.7 billion housing bill which is tentatively scheduled for House action in about 10 days. The bill contains most of the housing legislation sought by the administration.

Neither of the two disputed provisions is contained in the multi-billion-dollar housing bill on which the senate plans to finish action Monday. The Senate measure is closer to the version proposed by the administration.

Tractors Group Plans Visit To Cuba Monday

DETROIT (UPI)— Four American representatives of the "tractors for freedom" committee will fly to Havana Monday to arrange an exchange of farm tractors for prisoners taken in the April invasion of Cuba.

But there still remained a possibility that Fidel Castro could once again upset the complicated negotiations.

Havana Radio said Friday night the bearded Cuban dictator would not permit the committee delegation to decide what type of tractors Cuba would take in the proposed exchange.

The committee, headed by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Walter P. Reuther and Dr. Milton Eisenhower, has offered Castro 500 tractors, but all of a type suitable for agricultural use.

A committee spokesman said Saturday that 500 of the type of machines demanded by Castro would cost about $20 million.

He said 500 of the farm-type tractors offered by the committee would cost only between $3 million and $3.5 million. The heaviest equipment offered by the committee was 15 "D-6" type tractors, also suitable for land clearing, which weigh about 18,000 pounds. The "D-8's" requested by Castro weigh about 48,000 pounds each.

Castro said he would permit the committee delegation to come to Cuba to negotiate the exchange, although he had suggested earlier that committee members themselves—preferably Mrs. Roosevelt and Dr. Eisenhower—should come.

The delegation, leaving from Miami International Airport Monday afternoon, includes: Duane P. Greathouse, a United Auto worker Union vice president; Prof. Roy Bainer, of the agricultural engineering at Michigan State University; and J. B. Liljedahl, professor of agricultural engineering at Purdue University.

He also asked that the committee "express to us through the delegation its reply to the alternative we have proposed—the release of an equal number of Americans, Spaniards, Puerto Ricans, Nicaraguans and Guatemalans imprisoned for political reasons in exchange" for captured Cuban invaders.

First '61 Load Of Gray County Wheat Reported

First wheat of the 1961 harvest in the Pampa area was unloaded early Saturday at the Wheeler-Evans grain elevator in Kingsmill.

The first load was delivered to the elevator by D. W. Swain, whose farm is three miles south of Kingsmill. Swain said it tested 60 pounds to the bushel with 15 per cent moisture and averaged 20 bushels to the acre.

First 1961 barley was unloaded by Jess Hatcher from his farm three miles south of Pampa. Hatcher brought 30 bushels of barley to the Barnett-Wilkinson Grain Co. in Pampa. It tested 13 per cent moisture.

Roy Tinsley, who has been farming in Gray County for 45 years, said his wheat and barley yield this year would be only fair because of damage caused by green bugs to the young plants early in the Spring. Tinsley has 346 acres of wheat and barley on his ranch four miles east of Pampa. He said, weather permitting, he plans to start combining Wednesday.

Cecil Regis, assistant agricultural agent for Gray County said most local farmers should get combines moving into the fields by Wednesday.

"The wheat is ready," Regis said, "but the farmers simply can't get into the fields."

Regis said he believes this year's wheat yield will have one of the biggest variations in history. He estimates that it will vary in places from as low as seven bushels per acre to a probable high of around 30 bushels per acre.

The varied yield, according to the agricultural agent, is due to

County Defense Unit Activated

Gray County's Civil Defense Organization was put on an active basis at the second of a series of meetings held Friday night in the county courtroom of Gray County Courthouse.

William Leonard, the county's new civil defense director, said the local Civil Defense unit is being rebuilt and patterned to local needs.

The Friday night meeting was well - attended by representatives of various organizations and committee heads.

Various phases of civil defense which received attention included communications, public works and utilities and police and police auxiliary. The latter two, to be handled by city, county and state employees, with help from the Junior chamber of Commerce in the form of Auxiliary Police. The Jaycees have volunteered for extra duty and classes in police work will be held later by Police Chief Jim Conner.

Cooperation also has been promised by the Red Cross and committees have been formed to handle such phases of civil defense as: fire fighting, rescue service, emergency medical service transportation, industry cooperation, manpower, agriculture, control and public information.

A local civil defense warning system was discussed at length and a plan set up for testing what is now regarded as an inadequate system. A study will be made to determine what will be necessary for a good warning system, and recommendations will be made to the city to improve the present system.

The Gray County Civil Defense Organization is patterned after the Federal Civil Defense Organization with modifications which apply to the local area.

Civil Defense Officials here, Leonard said, are more concerned at present with natural disaster than anything else, because of the severe weather recently experienced in the Panhandle.

If it comes from a hardware store we have it. Lewis Hdwe.

Today's Weather Due To Be Cloudy

No weather fronts are approaching Pampa and vicinity but today's weather will be partly cloudy, the Weather Bureau reported last night. The temperature will continue warm with a high today of 95.

There is a chance of widely scattered showers in the late afternoon or evening.

Practically the same trend is expected to prevail Monday.

Car Wreck Fatal At Wichita Falls

WICHITA FALLS, Tex. (UPI) —Carlton O. Jordan, 30, died early Saturday in a one-car wreck in south Wichita Falls.

Jordan's car went off the road and hit two utility poles, investigators said. A passenger received slight injuries.

Protests Involving Civil Rights Filed From All But Two States

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Civil Rights Commission has received complaints about racial discrimination from every state except Vermont and North Dakota and the most from Louisiana and Alabama.

Several southern states, but by no means all of them, have produced an overwhelming majority of claims by Negroes that they cannot vote, a United Press International survey shows.

Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and North Carolina between them have produced 496 of the 621 voting complaints filed since the commission's inception in 1957.

On the other hand, Californians have filed 54 voting complaints, more than filed by all but three southern states.

South Carolina and Virginia each list only three complaints of voting irregularity but no claims that any Negro has been denied the right to vote.

The commission's voting breakdown lists sworn and unsworn voting complaints and complaints about irregularities where some restraint or hardship was imposed.

In other phases of discrimination which the commission is investigating, the southern states produced fewer complaints than New York and some northern and western states.

New York, with 53, led in the field of administration of justice which includes discrimination in jails, parolees and police brutality. California was second with 38, Ohio third with 33. In all, the commission has received 568 such complaints, second only to voting.

Georgia had the most education complaints, 6; Alabama the most housing, 9; and Alabama the most transportation, 3.

The commission has received a grand total of 1,246 complaints but these include informational types, anonymous and crank letters, and illegible communications.

The top 10 states in the number of complaints are Louisiana, 256, Alabama, 252, California, 147, New York, 122, Mississipvi, 117, Florida, 87, North Carolina 77, Ohio and Illinois, 58, and Texas, 55.

Tests To Precede Attempted Space Flight To Moon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States expects to send several early versions of a pre-man space ship to the vicinity of the moon by 1965 in preparation for landing men there a year or two later.

The interim goal was stated today in a National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) summary of information concerning its new launching site at Cape Canaveral, Fla., for the super powerful Saturn rocket.

The $43 million launching complex was built by the Army engineers in two years, and was turned over to NASA in ceremonies at Cape Canaveral early this week.

The civilian agency said the first Saturn, standing 160 feet high and four times more powerful than any rocket yet fired by the United States, will be tested at the 45-acre site later this year.

"A series of large rocket test flights is expected to lead by 1965 to the launching of tons of instruments to the moon and Mars, and to the launching of early versions of the pre - man Apollo (lunar) space craft," the agency said.

The space craft will be unmanned in early flights, a spokesman said, but will "ultimately be used for manned lunar landings." The present target is for a landing in 1967.

The first Saturn will be capable of lifting 10 tons into orbit. Later improvements are expected to double the payload.

President Kennedy said in his message to Congress May 25 that "this nation should commit itself to achieving the goals, before this decade is out, of landing a man on the moon."

Billboard Foes Gird For Scrap

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Senators who like their scenery free of beer and baby food ads mounted a determined drive Saturday to ban billboards along the nation's growing network of interstate highways.

The fight over the anti-billboard provision is expected to spark debate next week when the Senate takes up House-passed legislation authorizing $11.56 billion more for construction on the 41,000-mile superhighway program.

Another battle may develop over congressional cuts made in higher taxes sought by President Kennedy to help finance the program on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Sen. Maurine Neuberger, D-Ore., plans to sponsor an amendment to expand the provision of federal bonus payments to states which agree to bar outdoor advertising from the sylvan right-of-way of interstate routes.

Her husband, the late Sen. Richard Neuberger, was the original architect of the provision, with Sen. Thomas Kuchel, R-Calif. It was written into the federal highway act in 1958 after a lengthy senate fight.

Under the bill as passed by the House and approved without a change by the Senate Public works Committee, the bonus program expires June 30.

Mrs. Neuberger said her amendment would extend the existing program of one-half per cent bonus payments for another two years.

First Lady, Clad In Shorts, Strolls About Greek Island

DELOS, Greece (UPI) — Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy went water-skiing Saturday in the deep blue water off this legendary birthplace of the Greek God Apollo after officials chased other tourist boats away.

The first lady sailed into this port aboard the yacht North Wind on the third stop of her vacation cruise among the Greek islands after she changed her mind about going to the island of Mykonos. Mrs. Kennedy is being accompanied on the "get-away-from-it all" cruise by her sister, Princess Lee Radziwill.

Reporters waiting on Mykonos rushed to Delos in time to see Mrs. Kennedy emerge on the North Wind's deck clad in shorts and then take a leisurely stroll among the ancient relics on this uninhabited island.

Two Greek tourist officials showed the first lady through the architectural excavations here and said she was deeply impressed by the island's mosaic sidewalks and hube marble lions.

After breakfast, Mrs. Kennedy went for a brief swim and a ride on water-skis. She had the island all to herself.

The first lady and the princess sailed to this ancient island from the isle of Hydra, where the entire population of 2,500 had turned out Friday night to watch Jackie lead a group of native dancers at a restaurant dance hall.

Onlookers burst into applause as Jackie jumped from her seat to join a dozen dancers in native costume and skirted trousers in the rhythms of folk tunes played on violins.

The impromptu dance climaxed a day of sailing, swimming and sightseeing, and delayed Jackie's departure for six hours. The first lady also went shopping and bought two wooden boats for the Kennedy children.

Russians Given Television View Of Life In England

MOSCOW (UPI) — Russians crowded around their television sets for their first glimpse of royalty Saturday since the Czars were ousted in 1917.

They watched Queen Elizabeth review her birthday parade 1,500 miles away in London through a B. B. C. hookup with Eurovision, the Eastern European television network.

"She's so young," was the typical comment of one grandmother here as she watched the 35-year old monarch review England's proudest troops. Russian men seemed fascinated by the spectacle of brightlyclad soldiers in parade formation.

It started with a 40-minute film of London which featured man-on-the-street interviews by a Russian announcer in Trafalgar Square.

The announcer's first subject was a bank clerk who spoke in Russian. Another mentioned the desirability of Soviet trade and tourism, and one young man said he was leaving soon for a trip to the U.S.S.R.

But the ordinary Englishman almost stole the show away from his queen.

"They really do wear those hats and carry walking sticks," exclaimed one delighted Russian viewer as his companions grinned.

"I liked it," commented one young Russian. "It is our first opportunity to see British traditions, though we have heard about them. though we have heard about them."

'Iron Hand' Rule Retained Over Dominican Republic

EDITORS NOTE: Under Generalissimo Rafael Trujillo, the Dominican Republic was a land of iron-fisted dictatorship, isolated from its sister American states and with a people that for more than 30 years had known nothing else. A United Press International reporting team composed of Leo H. Petersen, T. M. Fagrell and photographer Frank Beatty went to Ciudad Trujillo immediately after his death. Their assignment was to fill in the information gaps left in the official announcement of Trujillo's assassination and to make some assessment of the feeling of the Dominican Republic as a new government took over. This is their report.

CIUDAD TRUJILLO (UPI)— Most of the little people of Ciudad Trujillo have kind words for their slain dictator and many sincerely mourn him.

That assassinated Generalissimo Rafael Leonidas Trujillo was a dictator mattered little. World affairs, even those of the surrounding Caribbean make little impact here, and many of the Dominican Republic's three million people never knew anything else than his rule.

By their standards they prospered during his 31 years.

They know that "El Benefactor" is gone, but somehow they feel that they will continue to prosper even though their country slowly is starving. Signs proclaim:

"God and Trujillo will take care of us."

Most are not even aware that the land upon which they live has become a key pawn in the Caribbean power struggle.

Under Trujillo, this was an island of iron-fisted rule, false pretense and intrigue. It still is that today. They are followers and willing to be led. When and if a new leader emerges, they will go along whatever path that leader decides to follow.

Right now the country is being run by two men — the one-time playboy son of the generalissimo, 33-year old Rafael Jr., and the figurehead president under his father, the 53-year-old Joaquin Balaguer, a poet, lawyer and diplomat.

To outsiders the impression is that Rafael, Junior, is like his father in only one way — his love of beautiful women. To him, that apparently came first. To his father, the love of women was second to his love for power.

The betting among these outsiders is that whether he wants the job or not, Rafael Jr., will run and be elected president when elections are held on May 16, 1962.

Rafael, Jr., has nothing to say on the subject. He reiterates and emphasizes two things:

—"I am not anti-American and never have been.

—"I am commander in chief of the armed forces which is not and will not ever be in politics. President Balaguer has and will continue to have my full support and the full support of my armed forces."

Balaguer won't talk about the possibility of running for president again either. These are uncertain times for him like they are for all the peoples in the republic. He doesn't know whether he is to have more power or will continue to be the figure-head he was under the generalissimo.

Be it Rafael, Jr., Balaguer or someone else, the little people don't seem to care. They are going about their business as usual, still mourning the loss of "El Benefactor."

"He was good to us," they say of their departed leader. They are sure that whoever emerges as their new leader will be good to them, too.

The Dominican Republic has its show places for visitors from abroad. It has its slums for the masses. Under the generalisimo the twain never met.

A modern four-lane highway leads from the airport 25 miles away into the capitol city of Ciudad Trujillo. Another four-lane highway leads out of Ciudad Trujillo to the old town of San Cristobal where the generalissimo lies buried, the victim of a one-time friend and next-door neighbor. Or at least, that is what government officials would have you believe.

Those highways and the modern buildings and luxury hotels which line them are the show places of the island.

Two blocks off those highways are the thatched bohios which house most of the population. For every modern home on the island there are 1,000 of these huts.

For every man of wealth there are 100 persons on relief. For them one dollar a week buys the bare essentials of living. There is no complaint from them. Early in the generalissimo's regime it was established beyond doubt that complaints were one commodity in which he did not deal.

The Dominican economy has been going down hill rapidly ever since last Aug. 20. That was when the OAS adopted a resolution calling on the hemisphere's nations to sever diplomatic relations with the Dominican Republic and impose economic sanctions. On Aug. 26, the United States broke off diplomatic relations, and on March 31 President Kennedy signed a bill stripping the republic of extra sugar sales which otherwise would have been available as a result of the U.S. embargo on Cuban sugar.

Only one of the luxury hotels, most of them built just before the 1955-56 world's fair, is open — El Embajador (The Ambassador). It has 310 rooms, a gambling casino, a luxurious outdoor swimming pool and everything it takes for comfortable tropical living.

The Dictator Trujillo came to his end along George Washington Boulevard in a night soft with moonlight.

But the full story of his assassination, the intrigue which preceded and followed it, has not and may never be told.

From a mass of conflicting statements has come the indication that, in part at least it was an inside job.

The general who turned "traitor" — that's the way Rafael Jr. described him — could not have done the job without the help of someone from the inside.

That someone may have been 1st. Lt. Amado Garcia Gurrero one of the assassins killed attempting to evade capture.

On Tuesday May 30 he was on active duty in the headquarters of the adjudant general's office just outside the walled estate in which the generalissimo lived. Apparently the information that Trujillo would drive to his farm near San Cristobal that night came from him.

It was the eve of "Corpus Christi" a religious holiday and it was customary for the generalissimo to visit his farm at such a time.

Someone knew too that the general and his trusted chauffeur of 18 years army Capt. Zacarias would drive in his 1957 Bel Air Chevrolet four-door sedan rather than in his bullet-proof black Cadillac.

At 10 p.m. the car left the generalissimo's home in Ciudad Trujillo and started the 28-mile journey. Leaving the grounds the car turned onto the fourlane George Washington Boulevard bordering the Caribbean leading toward San Cristobal.

The chauffeur first reported dead but later disclosed to be recovering from seven bullet wounds and a fractured left ankle noticed nothing unusual until they were about eight miles out of town. Suddenly a car from the rear drew up behind the Chevrolet and let go with a fussilade of sub machine gun bullets.

"Stop, I have been wounded" the generalissimo sitting in the back seat shouted to the chauffeur.

"It is better we turn around and go back to Ciudad Trujillo so I can save your life" the chauffeur suggested. The generalissimo turned him down.

"No we will stop and fight" he replied drawing his .38 caliber revolver and firing as he opened the door of the car to get out.

The chauffeur armed with a sub machine gun got out too.

Soon Trujillo fell mortally wounded. Then the chauffeur fell. The seven assassins left the chauffeur lying alongside the road, stuffed the general's body into the trunk of their car and speeded toward San Cristobal. At 5 a.m. security police found the car and the body in the driveway to the home of the traitor general Juan Thomas Diaz — just two blocks from the United States consulate.

A passing taxicab picked up the chauffeur and took him to the hospital.

"It was all over in a matter of between eight and 10 minutes" he said. "They shot us down like dogs."

At a press conference for he foreign press at the San Isidor air force base bristling with armed soldiers, tanks, anti-aircraft guns and weapons of all descriptions, Rafeal Jr., said Diaz turned traitor because his father dismissed him from the armed forces when he reached the retirement age of 55 He insisted that was the only motive for his father's assassination.

Little credence is given to this version by veteran observers in Latin America. They say age was not the reason for Diaz discharge.

One story is that one of Diaz' nephews joined an organization which the generalissimo later accused of communistic and anti-Trujillo leanings. At this point the generalissimo reportedly lost his trust in his old time friend.

There are some who wonder if the body in the coffin placed in the crypt of the San Cristobal Church last Friday actually was that of the generalissimo. They poin. out that the coffin never was opened and there are no pictures of his body.

One report said that his face was so badly mutilated by bullets that his widow issued an order not to open the coffin.

There is curiosity over why, if Diaz masterminded the plot as charged, he had the body brought to his home. There even is speculation that perhaps the generalissimo died a natural death and that the government he left behind dreamed up the assassination plot so they could rid the country of his known enemies.

In any event, intrigue and mystery surrounding the new government continue to deepen.

hail and green bug damage in widely scattered places.

Harvest throughout the Panhandle is being delayed a few days because of the heavy rains of last week, but is expected to get under way generally by Tuesday or Wednesday, wheat farmers said.

County Agent Vic Joyner in Roberts County said his county is expecting a good wheat crop — not as big as last year, perhaps, but better than average.

Quite a few farmers over the area began cutting Friday and yesterday, but others say ripening has been delayed somewhat by the cloudy skies and rain of the first eight or nine days in June. Ochiltree, Wheeler, Hutchinson and Gray Counties also are expecting better than average crops.

County agents also reported that there seems to be no shortage of men and combines for the harvest. Combines and machines already have pulled into many areas waiting for the harvest to begin.

'Freedom Riders' Reach Mississippi Via 'Local'

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI)— Eight "Freedom riders" who missed bus connections at Memphis arrived in this segregation stronghold Saturday on a "local" that took them through some of the most rural sections of Mississippi.

The group of five whites and three Negroes set out from Nashville, Tenn., early Saturday. They missed an express out of Memphis when a Greyhound bus driver refused to wait while they had breakfast.

Five members of the group are "graduates" of a "freedom riders training school" in Chicago. Three additional riders joined the group at Nashville.

While the 'freedom riders" continued their assault on Mississippi, attorneys for several integration groups sponsoring the rides filed motions Saturday in Montgomery seeking to quash a restraining order that in effect bans further "freedom riders" from Alabama.

The attorneys asked relief from the restraining order issued by Federal Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. on the basis that the "freedom ride" sponsors named in the order do not do business in the state.

One of the organizations named in the order was the Congress of Racial Equality — chief sponsor of the rides.

The bus driver who left the group of riders behind at Memphis said the station dispatchers called the departure of the bus. He said the riders had not finished eating and requested that he wait.

He said he replied, "I have a schedule to make," and pulled out of the station leaving them behind. Bus officials in Memphis said they were not aware that anyone had missed the bus.

Soviet Demands German Treaty

BERLIN (UPI)—Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev told President Kennedy at their Vienna meeting that a German peace treaty "must be concluded," the Communist East German news agency ADN reported Saturday.

The texts of memoranda which Khrushchev was said to have given Kennedy in Vienna last weekend were released Saturday by the official Soviet news agency Tass and reported here by ADN.

Summaries of the memoranda also were broadcast to Britain, Poland and Hungary Saturday night by Moscow Radio.

"From a realistic estimate of the situation, the Soviet Union advocates the immediate conclusion of a peace treaty with Germany," Khrushchev was quoted as saying.

"Such a peace treaty must be concluded," he added, asserting it was long overdue for reasons of Soviet security.

ADN reported that Khrushchev was uncompromising on the Soviet attitude towards Berlin as well as on disarmament.

The Soviet premier's memorandom on a nuclear test ban rejected a control authority directed by one man and reaffirmed Soviet insistence on a three-power (Western-neutralist-Communist) control, according to the ADN report.

He said Western contentions that the Soviet Union wanted the right to veto a test control authority's decisions was not true.

"We want equal conditions for all and will not allow ourselves to be put in an unequal position," he was quoted as saying.

The East German agency said Khrushchev called Allied occupation rights in Berlin "outmoded." He repeated Russia's demand for conversion of West Berlin into a "demilitarized, free city."

The Russian leader said West Berlin today is a center of "provocations dangerous to peace."

Khrushchev, in a proposal certain to be rejected by the West, demanded the reduction of the 11,000-man Western Allied garrison in Berlin to a symbolic contingent" and the stationing of Soviet troops in West Berlin.

He said neutral troops under United Nations control also could be stationed in West Berlin to "guarantee" the free city.

Warrants for two murders in Illinois, one in Kansas, one in Tennessee and one in Colorado were being drawn up, the sheriff said.

Albania, Smallest Soviet Satellite, Beset By Woes

GENEVA (UPI) —Communist Albania, smallest of the Soviet European satellites, is reported in serious internal trouble.

Communist sources at the 14-nation Geneva Conference disclosed that the Balkan nation has been caught in the tug-of-war between Russia and Red China over who is to control its destiny.

The death sentences for "traitorous" navy, army and party officials announced by Tirana Radio last weekend spotlighted the troubles faced by the regime of Enver Hoxha and Mehmet Shehu, both hard core Stalinists.

They were charged with being implicated in a plot "engineered by Yugoslavia, Greece and the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean" to overthrow the Hoxha regime. It was the first official admission of anti-regime moves in the tiny but strategic communist country on the Adriatic.

Earlier reports from Yugoslavia, which keeps a close eye on its antagonistic neighbor, said major purges have been in progress for some time and that thousands are in prison on supicion of anti-regime activities or leanings.

Death sentences were given to Rear Adm. Teme Sejku, Russian-trained commander of the Albanian navy; Tahir Demi, president of the Communist Council of the District of Elbasan, and other army and party officials.

The secrecy that surrounds Albania has obscured the facts.

With the exception of France and Italy, none of the Western nations have diplomatic representatives in Tirana, and even these are hampered in their observation of the internal scene by unusually strict limitations of their movements.

But the little information that has seeped through the iron curtain of Albanian security has left no doubt of the crisis conditions in that country.

Some fresh light on the Albanian internal scene has been thrown by Communist hints here, revealing that Albania has become the focal point in Europe in the silent but bitter struggle for influence between Moscow and Peiping.

At present, the signs are that Red China's influence in Albania is getting the upper hand, with Russia hitting back to maintain her foothold — important to Moscow for both political and strategic reasons.

Hoxha, who openly came out on the side of Red China in the Sino-Russian ideological struggle at the Moscow Communist summit last December, has provoked the personal wrath of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

The Hoxha regime, the last firmly pro-Stalinist in Europe, backs the hard line of Peiping. Peiping recently gave Albania a $126 million loan to strengthen its grip on the country. Significantly, the offer came soon after a Soviet loan was granted to Tirana. Peipings's offer outdid the Russian effort considerably, both in size and in its generous terms.

For Russia, the Albanian move towards Peiping has serious implications.

'Safe At Home' Not Accurate Statement

NEW YORK (UPI)— "Safe at home" may be a comforting expression but it isn't an accurate one: Few places actually are dangerous.

In 1959 statistics show there was a disabling home injury every eight seconds and an accidental death every 20 minutes. It is estimated 41 per cent of the 46 million accidents that occur each year are suffered in the home.

With a little thought and effort there is much the homeowner can do to increase home safety. A good starting point is paint. Proper use of paint can do much to reduce the accident toll around the home.

For instance paint and proper lighting can help to make stairs less treacherous. Experts of the paint, varnish and lacquer association suggest painting stripes on basement stairs, using eye-catching orange and black, yellow and black or black and white stripes.

Step the lighter color, using wear-resistant floor enamel. When this has dried, make a striped pattern with masking tape and paint the exposed area black. If you feel such a bold pattern will detract from the appearance of finished basement room, the next best thing is to enamel the bottom step in a light color that fits in with the basement color scheme. And don't forget to provide adequate lighting on cellar stairs — no weak 25-watt bulb!

Walls of dark, enclosed stairwells anywhere in the house should be painted white, ivory or yellow—colors with the highest reflective power — and, of course, should be well illuminated.

In a house with older persons, who are most often the victims of falls, it is a good idea to call attention to thresholds, often a strumbling block. They can be enameled in a light color, perhaps a tint of the room's wall color.

Low pipes in basements and garage doors that side up and into the roof can produce concussion and skull fractures. Wave a bright red or yellow "flag" as a danger signal by painting them in one or the other of these colors (yellow has higher visibility). Or you can use a striped pattern.

Driveways that are not lighted can be made more visible at night by outlining them with rocks painted white or with a luminescent paint. Gates and fences should have the same treatement.

Remember that painted wooden surfaces are less likely to rot. Be sure to paint porch steps, porches and railings regularly to protect them from the elements. This is true, too, of metal railings that can rust away to the point of weakness unless protected by an anti-corrosive primer and tough exterior enamel.

One thing they shouldn't paint, however, is a ladder. The opaque coating could hide cracks or breaks in rungs or rails. Instead, protect ladders with varnish.

And, further caution, use paint with safety precautions in mind. Keep open flame away from solvent-thinned paints and from turpentine and paint thinner. Keep all paint products out of reach of children. Rags saturated with paint thinner or sealer should be disposed of at once, or stored in closed metal containers where they cannot ignite spontaneously.

The Denton centr would serve as the coordinating and directing point for federal agencies in five states—Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana and New Mexico—in case of an atom or hydrogen bomb attack.

Red Germans Found Failing To Deliver To Customers

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI) — East Germany's proud boast that it would overtake West Germany's consumption in every day goods was proved a lie by the report of a Communist trade official who recently fled to the West.

The report on the drab picture of East Germany's supply of consumer goods was published by the private fact - finding organization Information Bureau West (IWE) in Berlin. The former Communist trade functionary, whose name was withheld, gave a detailed description of the short-comings in East Germany.

The former leader of the district trade organization of Wolgast, a town on the Baltic Sea coast, revealed a clear picture of the sad state of supply of basic foodstuffs.

According to planned figures, the Wolgast district was entitled to 28 tons of butter a month, the functionary said, but in January the district received only 18 tons, in February, 18.6 tons, and in March, 19.2 tons. For political reasons the state-run retail shops were forbidden to ration the butter.

During the first three months of 1961 the supply of meat was just as bad, the report said. Of the 260 tons of meat, provided for in the plan, only 180 tons had been delivered by March 20.

The choice of vegetables offered to East Germans, according to the IWE report, was limited to cabbage and occasionally to cauliflower and carrots. Despite extensive trade between East Germany and African states, no orangss or bananas were available. Canned vegetables on sale consisted only of prunes, peas and apples.

The customers practically fought battles for what little textiles and shoes were available, the functionary reported. The public demand was set by 60 per cent for adults, while children-size clothes and shoes were only available at a rate of 40 per cent. Only 50 per cent of last year's promised suplies of woolen underwear were on the market, the trade official said.

Delivery of household china, one of the main export products of East Germany, was rationed to $30,000 worth of goods in 1961. The trade official said the supply was enough to cover the needs of one shop only, while a total of 14 shops in Wolgast had to share the supplies.

According to the report, the amount of furniture in Wolgast was cut by $100,000 for 1961.

Soap flakes were expected to be available only at a rate of 25 per cent of public demand, while liquid soap would not be for sale at all. A recent import ban on foreign perfume essences halted the production of three luxury soap brands.

The lack of detergents was further sharpened by the lack of packing material. Production of cardboard and plastic containers fell tremendously short of planned figures, TWE reported. A recently opened plant for the production of plastic boxes in Schwerin delivered only 146 boxes instead of the planned 3,000 pieces a month.

ROAD GARGANTUA — This 40-wheeled truck trailer is the world's largest. Made by Trailmobile for use in Iran, it is shown with a test load in excess of the 110-ton load it is designed to carry. Trailer body is raised hydraulically to clear road contours or lowered to clear underpasses. A crew of four communicates by telephone.

Industry Can 'Enjoy' Operations In France

NEW YORK (UPI) — An American tourist can enjoy himself in Paris — and an American born industry can enjoy itself and give a boost to the economy of the Gallic nation too.

How the industry was able to do this in the closely regulated limits of what was described as "one of the world's most mature economies" is set forth in a National Planning Association study of the activities of IBM-France, a wholly owned subsidiary of the IBM World Trade Corporation.

The story was made somewhat unique, explained NPA Director of Research Eugene W. Burgess, by its contrast to more widely known tales of how some U.S. business enterprises have helped economic growth in countries less developed economically than the United States.

Since the late 1920's, the company has had exclusively French management. For many years, it was limited to marketing and servicing imported equipment; the equipment came to be partly or entirely assembled in France; and finally an electric verifier was put into production in 1932. From then on, save for the interruption of World War II, progress was rapid.

The first IBM venture into France was set up in July, 1914, a month before World War I broke out. It centered in a Paris office employing 10 persons. In 1960, what now is IBM-France employed 6,200 persons.

Boyd France, now foreign affairs correspondent in Washington formerly chief of the Paris bureau of McGraw-Hill Publications, wrote the study. For businessmen interested in all kinds of overseas activities of industry, he emphasized that "French social and labor legislation probably sets the highest legal requirements" for pay and protection of workers in the world.

Yet, IBM-France pays workers better than average seniority for Business Week magazine and bonuses, overtime pay, sick leave benefits and pensions. There is no law requiring employe life insurance in France, but this company has a plan for it.

Nearly 1,000 children of employees can go to camp each summer. Parents pay about 75 cents a head, the company pays the rest.

Men called into the armed services get a half month's pay as a sendoff, and a small monthly allowance during service.

The center of production for IBM France is a factory at Essones — the first in Europe to employ a data processing system for production control.

Management has programs to help employes get better housing; to train them for management and for better jobs; to educate them, even in the humanities and in liberal arts; even to help them out of acute family problems.

Income Increase In Europe Lures U.S. Investors

NEW YORK (UPI) — A New York bank examining the European market reported today that United States firms investing there have a head start in some fields, but it won't last forever.

It's a big, and growing, stake that the American investor has in the crowded field of Western Europe. He has trebeled the amount between 1950-1960, from $2 to $6 billion, and the figure is likely to rise, the Chase Manhattan Bank reported.

The figure is less than 1 per cent of United States domestic investment, but it is increasing at a faster rate, the bank reported. Particular incentives were offered by the creation of the European economic community by six nations, Western Germany, France, Italy, The Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg, and by the formation of other trade groups within Europe.

Some firms moved their production into the common market area to avoid tariffs; others have been attracted by the prospect of a big market with rising income.

The development has placed "a premium on the kind of experience that U. S. firms have gained by operating in the American mass market," the bank found. These included know-how in getting products to market, getting them around to buyers, and getting them out in volume.

Such things as supermarkets, and big stores with ready-made clothing, still are comparatively new to Europe, although the techniques of running them are familiar here.

Operating costs may sometimes be lower in Europe, the bank report said. Wage scales are considerably lower and many governments offer help in low-interest loans or grants.

Looking at the report possibilities, the report found that despite the increased industrial activity within Europe, U. S. manufacturers and exporters in the long run can expect an increased demand, but not in all fields.

Italian fliers were first to use bombs dropped from planes dropping cans filled with nitroglycerine over Tripoli in 1912.

'Exodus' Role Causes Jordan To Bar Actor

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Sal Mineo's part as a Jewish boy in "Exodus" has cost him a role in a picture being filmed in Jordan where he was refused a working permit by that nation's government.

Sal is an Italian-American and a Roman Catholic. To further confuse matters, he was to play the part of an Arab in "Lawrence of Arabia" with shooting scheduled for Jordan.

However, the Jordanian government wouldn't give him clearance to enter the country, Sal said.

"There was a role in Lawrence of Arabia that I was interested in," he said. "But, before we got into definite negotiations, producer Sam Spiegel said we would have problems.

"He called my agent and said the government wouldn't let me into Jordan. The Jordanian officials said I not only apeared in a pro-Jewish picture, played a sympathetic Jewish boy, but I also shot four Arabs in the film."

Apparently shooting Arabs was the straw that broke the camel's back and lost Sal his Arab followers.

"I have a feeling it's worse on me because I'm not Jewish but played a Jewish character," he said. "They would understand if a Jewish boy played the role. It's a compliment in a way that my performance was that believable."

The portrayal was so believable that it earned Sal enemies in the ranks of official Arabdom.

Mineo has run into roadblocks attempting to get into other Arab countries.

"I tried to go to Beirut and Cairo after we finished shooting "Exodus," but couldn't get in," Mineo complained. "I don't understand it, all I wanted to do was see the sphynx.

"I finally dropped the idea because I figured if they were making such a point of it why look for trouble. If I went under those circumstances, I would be an unwelcome guest and wouldn't like that."

Government officials might have stopped Sal from going into Jordan to play an Arab, but he's determined. So, Mineo is now getting ready for an Arab's part in "Escape From Zaharain" with Yul Brynner.

However, Mineo will have to settle for desert sands located far from Arab countries. The picture will be filmed in a desert near Barstow, Calif., not too far away from Hollywood.

I'm sure the Jews won't mind."

"Now that I'm playing an Arab, said Sal, "Maybe the Arabs will get mad though."

TV's Ice Show Skater Provided Amazing Moment

By FRED DANZIG

NEW YORK (UPI) — Maybe it was the presence of Hugh Downs as the announcer for "Summe. On Ice — 1961," but I detected a definite scientific push behind this annual NBC-TV special Tuesday night.

Item: Our astronauts, we were told, learned from the spectacular skating of Ronnie Robertson that it is possible to spin at 420 revolutions per minute and suppress dizziness.

Item: It is possible for an Englishman to brush gently against hipster jargon and still emerge smiling, unembarrassed and alive Peter Lawford, parttime host for the show, demonstrated.

Item: Peggy Lee dispelled the notion, current in jazz circles, that her voice can melt ice. Tuesday night, Miss Lee, attired in skin-tight wardrobe, put the torch to "St. Louis Blues" and "Hey, Look Me Over." A few puddles appeared but the rink did not dissolve giant swimming pool. tinoa- into a giant swimming pool.

These were just a few of the unexpected bits of information gleaned from the 21st anniversary special of the "Icecapades" troup. The greatest reward came howeyer, at the end, as the closing credits crawled up the TV screen. I noticed that the unit manager for the program, which was sponsored by the U.S. Brewers Association has a fellow named Lloyd Bockhaus.

The hour had something for everyone as it skidded along with music ranging from opera — "Tannhauser," "La Travia'a" "Il Trovatore" — to rock 'n' roll.

The skating of Ronnie Robertson continues to amaze and delight, as does the slapstick comedy of the three bruises. Other pros who come up wit hfresh patterns and stunts are Cathy Machado, Hans Leite and the team of Barbara Wagner and Bob Paul.

On the demerit side we find the banal chatter forced upon Lawford and Lee between numbers, the lacklustre contributions of the Kirby S one Four, the static camera work, the outof sync pre-recorded songs and the awkward applause scenes that Lee and Lawford were obliged to smile through. These amateurish production touches were out weighed by the talents of the skating stars.

Dialing and Filling: NBC's Sander Vanocur, back in Washington aftr following the recent displays of dimple diplomacy, or dimplomacy, in Europe, showed during an airport interview Tuesday morning that he has acquired the Kennedy hand gestures when emphasizing a point. Guess he stayed close to his man during the trip.

Sponsor conflicts, which kept David Brinkley and Chet Huntley on the sidelines for much of the NBC-TV news specials abcount J. F. K. in Europe, also eliminated Walter Cronkite from CBS-TV's Monday night wrapup.

Woman Writer Gains Fame Via TV Show

NEW YORK (UPI)—After 17 years of putting words into other people's mouths, Selma Diamond has started uttering them herself before an audience, and the response has her pretty well overwhelmed.

"I get letters from all over the country and Canada," she said. "It's fun. I'm not going to make a career of it, but it's fun to get all kinds of offers and stuff. Now I'm making a record album.

"But I've got a job, and it's the way I make a living, and I'll be right back here working next year"—she waved her hand at the scatterment of rehearsal of the Perry Como show, on which she is a writer. "And besides, if I get into too many things I'll have to give up the most important part of my life — sitting and staring."

Miss Diamond, a topnotch TV and radio comedy writer and the only woman to make a career of writing for a long succession of star comedians, started in the broadcasting business as a writer for Groucho Marx 17 years ago ("I was 7 years old then").

In radio she did such as Marx, the Durante-Moore show, Duffy's Tavern, Rudy Vallee, Ozzie and Harriet, the Big Show, with Bankhead and Allen; on TV she's worked the Berle and Caesar shows; and throughout there have been comedian guest shots—Jessel, Hope, and others.

It was Jack Paar, an old friend from the days she worked with him when he was substituting for Jack Benny on radio, who got her onstage recently, and now she's made five appearances on his show. That did it.

"The impact of Paar is terrific," she said. "I mean, like the next day, the reaction started. I've been in this business so long that everybody knows me but they never made any offers before. I think every record company in the business made me an offer after that first appearance. I said, "Don't get excited, gents, I may just be a morning glory."

"They say it's me," said Miss Diamond, swinging her head as if trying to survey herself. "But I haven't figured out what's me yet. I'm just a normal American girl, with a luxurious apartment on Sutton Place and three mink coats.

Miss Diamond has never written a line for herself. On the Paar show and the new record album she just sits and does unrehearsed talking: "I talk about my work and why I'm not married. If they wanta listen, I'll talk. When you write, it's for a personality. I'm editing my record now and when I play those tapes I don't know who the girl is. Maybe I'll find out someday. Or maybe I'll have to hire a writer."

Van Heflin Wins Acclaim Abroad As Movie Actor

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Peculiar things have happened to movie stars now that Europe is importing more Hollywood actors than are exports to Flickertown.

Take the case of Van Heflin.

In the past three years Heflin, highly respected for his craftmanship as a performer, has made only one picture here — "They Came to Cordura." A poor record for the local scene.

But he has become the hottest box office attraction in Europe. Ergo, Van makes movies in Europe. In three years he has starred in four Italian movies, latest of which is "The Wastrel."

Other stars, finding themselves in Heflin's position, take advantage of the situation by copping out on the 18-month tax dodge.

But not Van.

He's saved his money and is oblivious to slipping the taxes Uncle Sam throws his way.

"It would have been to my advantage to stay abroad between pictures," he said. "But I don't love money that much.

"I started out in Hollywood and I owe a certain amount of loyalty to both the American movie industry and this country. I certainly don't approve of American actors who go to Europe and run down Hollywood."

Heflin, who won a best supporting Oscar in 1942 for his role in "Johnny Eager," has several explanations for his popularity abroad.

"First of all, a lot of the 45 pictures I made in Hollywood were successful over there and not too overwhelming in this country.

"I was a 'name' in Europe because the type of picture I appeared in and the characters I played had a special appeal for them. Once the Europeans become interested in you they make it a point to learn everything they can about your personal and professional life.

"My popularity increased when I went over there to work. Usually my costars were Italians, and this impressed them, too.

"They are primarily interested in their own stars, and associate me with them. I speak a little bit of Italian; so the natives rarely speak to me in English now."

Heflin may be returning to Italy later this year for still another foreign movie.

"I like to think I'm enjoying the best of two worlds," he said. "My children are being raised in the American tradition, but they also have the advantage of a European education.

"When I retire, though, it will be right here in Southern California. A man must have roots. And mine are right here."

Scots Win Two PGA'S

DUNEDIN, Fla. (UPI) — Although the Scots are credited with inventing golf, only two natives of Scotland have ever won the PGA championship. Jock Hutchison Sr., born in St. Andrews, took the title in 1920. Tommy Armour, born in Edinburgh, won in 1930.

The United States has about 1,600 manufacturers of scientific apparatus.

Director Likes Films Over TV And Tells Why

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Boy geniuses never die. They just grow up and confess they weren't geniuses to begin with.

So says John Frankenheimer, television's boy genius of 1954. At the tender age of 24 he was directing live video dramas here and in New York.

Because of his original directorial style with such shows as "You Are There," "Danger," "Climax" and "Playhouse 90" — all defunct, incidentally—John was acclaimed a genius.

VERSATILITY — Rosalind Russell goes offbeat again. First it was "Wonderful Town," then as "Auntie Mame." Now, back in movies again after her Broadway successes, she plays a Jewish character—"Mrs. Jacoby"—in "A Majority of One."

Just who hung the tag on him is not exactly clear. But Frankenheimer is resentful, none-theless. Mostly he blames the press.

"Boy genius is a ridiculous phrase," he said unhappily.

"In the first place I'm not a genius, and I am no longer a boy. The title has its drawbacks. When it first started I thought I might burn myself out before I was 30, or be unable to top myself with succeeding shows. But that wore off after 125 shows."

Grandpappy of show biz wonder boys is Orson Welles, who came out of the starting gate like Citation but looked more like Francis the mule in the stretch. He's now playing character roles.

Frankenheimer probably will escape Orson's plight. He doesn't act and he's swiched from the TV medium to movies.

"I'm a better director now than I was six years ago," he said. "And I've found artistic freedom making movies. That's something that cannot be found on television.

"In pictures you don't have to worry about the networks or Madison Avenue agents and sponsors looking down your throat.

"You spend half your time in TV fighting with people and the other half directing. There is nothing good left in TV in the 90-minute form, so movies are the answer."

Frankenheimer recently completed "Birdman of Alcatraz" starring Burt Lancaster, and soon will begin shooting "All Fall Down" at MGM studios.

VIVIAN AND NORMAN WARMENSKI
. . . Win State 4-H Championship

White Deer Girl And Brother Win Top State Honor At Annual Meet

A brother and sister team from Carson County, Norman and Vivian Warminski of White Deer, captured another state championship at the annual 4-H Roundup at A & M in College Station last Wednesday. They were declared state winners in the Vegetable Use and Preparation Demonstration contest. This is the fourth State championship for the White Deer team, an all-time record. They were state champions; 1957-Poultry Method and marketing, 1958-Farm & Home Safety, 1959 Soil, water and range conservation and in 1960 won third place in Farm cooperatives. Their demonstration this year consisted of preparing a teen-age patio supper. They competed against twenty three other district winning teams. Norman was named high point individual in the contest.

They were awarded an all expense paid trip to the South Texas Vegetable Exposition in San Antonio next fall where they will present their demonstration at the convention. They have also been invited to appear on a television program in Amarillo next month.

Both Norman and Vivian have had highly successful 4-H careers. Vivian is president of the White Deer Community Club, chairman of the Carson County Girls Council, vice-chairman of the District Council and member of the State 4-H Council. Norman is a past district president and State 4-H Council member. He is a member of the White Deer 4-H Community Club and the Collegiate 4-H Club at Oklahoma State University. Norman and Vivian are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Warminski of White Deer.

New Book Reports On The New-Time Religion

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new reformation is changing the church in America and the world, but whether it should be spelled with a capital R is for historians to decide.

This is a conclusion drawn in "The New - Time Religion," a report on the current upsurge in religious activity in the United States, written by Claire Cox, veteran United Press International correspondent and writer of a weekly UPI column on religion.

"The New - Time Religion," published today (June 1) by Prentice-Hall, ends with a discussion of "Reformation U.S.A.," in which the author says that whether history decrees the mid-century upsurge a "reformation," there is no doubt that there has been a realignment of religious forces and a reassessment of their roles, with a growing emphasis on unity and cooperation.

"Businesses and industries have gone through a merger era since World War II, and so have Protestant denominations," Miss Cox writes. "Bigness has became an ingredient in both spiritual and industrial survival in the 20th Century, with its ever-rising costs and keen competition."

Other major points made in "The New - Time Religion" include:

—The Bible is the world's best-seller but far from the best-read book. Americans in general do not read the Bible as much as their forefathers did, but in the early days of the country, there was little else to read.

—"The Old Rugged Cross" and other so-called gospel hymns are favorites for group singing, but they have lost status as church hymns and are being left out of many new hymnals, which are looking for verses based on world unity, family, youth and other uplifting themes.

—Jesus routed the money changers from religious temples 2,000 years ago. Now the churches are active in the temples of finance. Religion has gone to Wall St. — not for converts, however, but for cash.

—The modern pulpit is wherever the minister is — walking a picket line protesting slum housing, sitting on a lunch counter to protest racial segregation, or testifying before a congressional committee.

—The minister — and his wife — are two of the loneliest persons in town. They are much sought after at time of need but are left out of many a social invitation on the theory that they are too prudish. It is at just these affairs they are likely to meet the people who need them most.

The matter of church statistics also comes under scrutiny in "The New Time Religion.

Miss Cox writes:

"Organized religion in America has a mathematical problem that not even UNIVAC could solve: How many persons are affliated with churches and synagogues?

"There is no doubt of record religious activity. An estimated 60 million Americans turn up in church on any given Sunday, and that is a lot of people to be doing the same thing at approximately the same time.

"But where are the 120 million other Americans when weekly worship time rolls around?"

They, the author concludes, are simply "AWOL."

matter of FACT

Benjamin Franklin was still making discoveries at the age of 79. That's when he discovered a talent for sleeping while afloat. On a visit to England he stopped off at a salt water hot bath. Floating on his back, to his amazement he slept nearly an hour without sinking or turning over. Ben's delighted comment: "Water is the easiest bed that can be."

Takes Unanimous Decision

Ancient Archie Whips Rinaldi

NEW YORK (UPI) — Archie Moore, the ring's grey-haired miracle man, kept his share of the world light heavyweight championship Saturday night by moving forward persistently from his "rocking chair" stance and turned the tables on young Giulio Rinaldi of Italy by battering him bloodily for a unanimous 15-round decision.

Archie of San Diego, Calif., the oldest active champion in ring history, gave 26-year-old Rinaldi such a thorough battering that he was bleeding from cuts under the left eye, at the corner of the right eye, nose and mouth.

Giulio, champion of Italy, was bleeding so profusely in the closing rounds that his gloves were soaked with blood and it would spatter on the few occasions when the agile, black - haired Italian managed to land effectively.

Moore, making his first title defense in 22 months, weighed 174½ pounds to Rinaldi's 173¾, as the patriarch from California established a new record by defending the 175-pound title for the ninth time.

The champion, who claims to be 44 years old but whose mother says he is 47, went into the ring favored at 2 to 1 because most of his admirers figured he would knock out Rinaldi, since Archie is boxing's all-time knockout king with 130 kayoes to his credit.

Instead, Moore amazed the experts by not only lasting the 15 rounds but by giving the young Italian a thorough licking in most of the sessions after the third.

The three ring officials favored the champion unanimously as follows: referee Ruby Goldstein, 11-3-1; judge Ardie Aidala, 11-4 and judge Tony Castellano, 9-5-1. The United Press International had Archie ahead, 10-4-1.

Qualifying For City Tourney Is Postponed

Today's scheduled qualifying for medalist honors in the Pampa City Golf Tournament has been postponed until Sunday, June 18, Grover Heiskell, Tournament chairman, announced today.

The death of the wife of club pro Hart Warren caused the shift in dates, Heiskell said.

Heiskell said the tournament deadline dinner would be held tonight at the Country Club." Pairings will be drawn up at this time," he said.

Malcom Douglas is defending champion but will face stiff competition from the likes of Dr. Foster Elder, and Max Hickey.

Negro Track Stars Face Suspension

HOUSTON (UPI)—The immediate past president of the national Amateur Athletic Union said Saturday he considers 19 Negro track and field men subject to suspension for withdrawing from the annual meet of champions because of a segregation dispute.

The former AAU official, Kellum Johnson, said in a statement issued in Dallas, "If the athletes received expenses to go to Houston and then withdrew without just cause, they are subject to suspension."

Negro athletes, including Olympians John Thomas, Ralph Boston and Stone Johnson, refused to cross picket lines set up by a local Negro organization at the stadium.

Most of the athletes did not notify meet officials of their withdrawals until shortly before the meet began.

The boycott prompted meet director Johnny Morriss to say that sponsoring University of Houston might ask for return of some $2,000 in expense money. But Saturday, meet officials had not made a demand for refund of expenses.

Johnson said in Dallas that a protest would have to be filed before the AAU considered any action on the case.

He said he felt some discussion of the matter would come at the next AAU meeting later this month.

Colavito, Cash Carry Tigers By Tribe, 2-0

DETROIT (UPI) — Back to back home runs by Rocky Colavito and Norm Cash in the seventh inning carried the second place Detroit Tigers to a 2-0 victory over Cleveland Saturday and cut the Indians' first place margin in the American League to a half game.

Before Colavito and Cash socked their 16th and 14th homers respectively, the game had been a fierce duel between Tiger hurler Jim Bunning and the Indians' Gary Bell.

Bell had allowed only three Detroit runners to reach base — on singles by Chico Fernandez and Bill Bruton and a walk to Colavito.

Bunning had faced only the minimum of 18 men over the first six innings. The only hit off him to that point was a fourth inning single by Jim Piersall who was erased in a double play.

Bunning was still going strong and had allowed only three hits until the ninth inning when, with two out, Piersall and Tito Francona singled.

Tiger manager Bob Scheffing, not taking any changes, called in Bill Fischer to relieve Bunning.

The victory gave the Tigers an even split in their four game series with Cleveland.

Reds Edge Cards, 4-2

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Joey Jay, with a ninth-inning assist from relief pitcher Bill Henry, notched his seventh win of the season against three losses Saturday, as the Cincinnati Reds defeated the St. Louis Cardinals, 4-2.

Don Blasingame and Wally Post gave the Reds their big batting punch, with Blasingame going four for five with two RBIs and Post blasting his fifth home run of the season.

Jay was lifted in the ninth after Joe Cunningham singled, advanced on an infield out and scored on Jim Schaffer's single. Pinch-hitter Curt Flood kept the rally alive with a single off Henry but the relief hurler got the next two batters to end the game.

Braves Belt Chicago, 9-5 On Home Runs

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Milwaukee Braves belted four homeruns Saturday to beat the Chicago Cubs, 9-5, and bring their home run total to a record-matching 14 in the last three games.

Lew Burdette, Frank Bolling, Lee Maye and Eddie Mathews each homered to give the Braves a 7-5 lead in the fifth inning and Don McMahon pitched scoreless relief ball for 4 2-3 innings to gain the victory.

Ford Wins 9th Over Kaycee

NEW YORK (UPI) — Southpaw Whitey Ford of the New York Yankees staggered slightly when he gave up two homers in the third inning Saturday but pulled himself together to hurl a five-hitter for his ninth victory of the season, 5-3, over the Kansas City A's.

Keough's Clout Nips White Sox

WASHINGTON (UPI)— Marty Keough's two-out homer off Russ Kemmerer in the 15th inning gave the Washington Senators a 4-3 victory and a sweep of the three-game series with the Chicago White Sox Saturday.

Hansen's Homer Sinks Twins

BALTIMORE Md., (UPI)—Ron Hansen's sixth home run of the year, with a man on base in the fourth inning, propelled the Baltimore Orioles to a 4-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday in a game delayed an hour and 10 minutes because of rain.

Angels Pound Red Sox, 10-5

BOSTON (UPI) — The Los Angeles Angels unleashed a home run barrage for their biggest single inning of the season Saturday to defeat the Boston Red Sox 10-5 in the windup of their five-game series at Fenway Park.

Pirates Lose

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —Mike McCormick, ending a personal three-game losing streak, blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates for the second time this season Saturday while hurling the San Francisco Giants to a 5-0 victory.

Williams Pitches Pampa By Borger Braves, 11-3

Kippy Williams fired a brilliant three - hitter here Friday night as the Pampa Colts tomahawked Borger's Braves, 11-3, before a sparse crown at Optimist Park.

Williams, his strikeout pitch working to perfection, was backed up by a lusty 14-hit attack in winning his second game of the season. He has lost one.

The Colts, in raising their exhibition mark to 4-2, jumped off to a 7-0 lead in the first three innings and were never headed.

A five run outburst in the bottom of the third put the game on ice.

Roy Don Stephens, hard hitting left fielder, capped the outburst with a three-run home run clout off losing pitcher E. Jarrett. Stephens also drove in the Colts first run with a booming triple.

Helping Stephens share the batting laurels were second baseman Ruben Strickland, 2-for 5; Ken Parker, 3-for-4; Bob Stephens, 2-for-5; and Bob Seitz, 3-for-5.

DUAL PROPULSION

Walker Expected To Hurl Opener

Jimmy Walker was expected to draw the starting assignment here this afternoon when the Pampa Colts makes its Tri-State semi-pro debut against Liberal's Bluejays at Optimist Park. Game time is 2 p.m.

"We've got the greatest collection of players in Pampa's semi-pro history, said co-manager Newt Secrest on the eve of the opening game.

Secrest, not one to hide his teams obvious talents under the "proverbial "bushel," added: "We've got eight or 10 boys capable of playing Double-A ball or better."

If hustle, or attitude is proof that the team will go places—then we should have a winning ball-club."

Secrest, who co-manages the team with Henry Stephens, felt that Woodward would probably be the team to beat in the league.

The '61 Colts present an excellent blend of youth and experience. Only four of the players are 27-years-old or better. The rest of the lineup would balance out at approximately 19-years of age.

Secrest said Friday he would probably go along with the same nine that have started most of this season's exhibition games.

That would have Raymond Dean behind the plate, Tommy Snow at first; Ruben Strickland at second base; Larry Powers at short stop and Kenny Parker at third. Patroling the outer gardens would be Roy Don Stephens in left field, Bob Stephens in center field and Bob Seitz in right.

"I may start Teddy Haralson behind the plate and Dean in left field — or vice versa" Secrest said. I'm not sure."

Bobby Nutt, a smooth -fielding shortstop, could also draw the nod over Powers.

Meet The Colts

TOM SNOW

—First baseman. This 27-year-old Terrell product was a tremendous performer at the initial sack for the University of Texas. Snow, a handsome six-footer, has played one year of pro ball for San Jose, Calif. (Boston Red Sox) and semi-pro ball for Alpine, Sinton, Victoria and Rapid City, South Dakota.

RUBEN STRICKLAND

BOBBY NUTT

—5'10", 150) A regular Marty Marion with the glove, this 19-year-old shortstop swings an equally proficient bat. At Edmond, Okla., he averaged .412 in two seasons before transferring to Pampa, where he hit .250 for Coach Deck Woldt's nubbins. He also played for the Roadrunners last summer.

KENNY PARKER

—(5'9", 165) A line drive hitter, Kenny plays a mean third base for the Colts. After three years of high school ball at Mangum, Okla., he lettered one year at Sayre Junior College.

JAMES WILLIAMS

—(5'8", 155) A perfect complement to Williams, this gritty little righthander has a real live fast one. He turned in a 7-3 record last year for the Roadrunners, and was a fine hurler on the Harvesters nine for two seasons.

NICKY DON CURTIS

—Probably the most experienced of the Colts mound corps, Nick turned in a 11-2 record for Oklahoma Natural Gas Co. last summer, a semi-pro team out of Oklahander, who lettered as a freshhoma City. The fireballing rightman at Oklahoma State, had a high school career mark of 21-2 to Mangum, Okla.

GRAYDON LANTZ

—(6'2", 190) This ex-Classen (Oklahoma City) baseballer, who flings them from the portside, is a veteran of two seasons in Pampa semi-pro ball. Previous experience includes a 5-1 record for H. J. Jeffries Trucking company.

Veeck, Greenberg Sell ChiSox Stock

CHICAGO (UPI) — Bill Veeck and Hank Greenberg Saturday sold all of their stock in the Chicago White Sox to their former partner, Arthur C. Allyn Jr.

Greenberg will remain with the club as general manager and executive vice president, but as a salaried employe.

Veeck, Allyn said, needs rest and his decision to sell was dictated primarily by his illness.

"Bill can't own anything and rest at the same time," Allyn said.

Allyn, who joined with Veeck and Greenberg in buying majority control of the White Sox, 54 per cent of the stock, on Feb. 17, 1959, said he began the negotiations to buy out Veeck and Greenberg Friday.

"We accomplished it today," he said.

Allyn said the CBC corporation, which was formed by Veeck and Greenberg with Allyn to hold the Sox stock, would be owned completely by himself and his brother John.

"Together we will have 100 per cent of the CBC corporation," he said.

Allyn said, however, he personally had bought out Veeck and Greenberg, thus acquiring approximately 90 per cent of the corporation himself.

"Veeck has announced his retirement temporarily," Allyn said "and I regret making this announcement."

He said that Veeck could return to the corporation at any time he desires in the future.

Allyn, 47, said he probably would become president of the club.

AFL Talks To Include Rule Changes

DALLAS (UPI)— Proposed rule changes and minor problems of procedure and policy will be the main matters on the agenda for an American Football League executive committee meeting at Buffalo, N. Y., June 22-23, AFL commissioner Joe Foss said Saturday.

The meeting will be held in conjunction with the American Football Coaches Association all-star game June 23 in Buffalo.

Foss said that the league's eight club presidents would consider a proposed change on sudden-death playoff games to permit each team at least one offensive possession to offset the advantage gained by the team which won the coin flip.

Another proposal would make the scoreboard clock the official timer. The league considered this matter prior to the inaugural 1960 season, but failed to adopt it.

Player Who Checks Brain At Gate Now Has Electronic One

BELMONT PARK, N. Y. (NEA) —Theodore Worner, the eminent Broadway philanthropist, was seated on the paddock lawn at Belmont Park, twiddling the dials of an impressive gadget.

"Keeping in touch with the Dominican situation by short wave?" he was asked.

"Nope," he said, flipping dial No. 2 three notches to the left.

"Perhaps you're taking an electrotherapy treatment?" it was hinted.

Worner, who, as proprietor of the annual Kentucky Club Derby Contest, gives horses away for the naming of them, shook his head and pushed a button. A red light came on.

"Drat, golly and darn!" he exploded. "It does that to me every time.

"All hoss players check their brains at the gate," he continued. "This is an electronic brain to help them make selections. The hoss player's finally got a brain, but all it keeps telling me to do is 'Don't bet!' I've handicapped every horse in the last six races and have yet to get a green light. Still I have lost $45. What this electronic handicapper needs is a gimmick handcuffing the player and putting a padlock on his pocket with the red light."

The electronic handicapper's guide book advises players not to try to analyze maidens, which is something oldtimers knew many years ago.

The electronic handicapper is a small computer operated on a single cell dry battery. It contains five switches through which information is fed into a printed circuit. Dials are marked elapsed days, maximum lengths behind, number of wins, class change and last race data, giving you a rough idea. After setting the dials, all the player has to do is press a button. Never mind the washing machine, mother, just get me an electronic handicapper.

"It doesn't have a dial for jockeys being out on the town the night before," pointed out Worner, "or for a run-down battery, but this gadget would be tremendous if you could only get a few green lights."

"Often the electronic handicapper will select more than one eligible in a race," read the instructions. "Each of these, then, would have the capability of finishing in the first three positions.

"In such cases personal judgment in relation to all other conditions should be the determining factor. The electronic handicapper will predetermine for you those horses having the best capabilities. Your own judgment in further determining the timeliness in relation to other factors will have the greatest chance of success."

"Now, there you go," concluded Ted Worner. "Just when we thought we had this thing licked, they put us back on our own. Oh, well, maybe it's just as well not to take the sporting chance out of racing.

"And for entertainment, this gadget has solitaire beat to death."

Molberg Stops Hoover, 10-1

Mohawk Signs, behind the one-hit hurling of Gary Molberg, pounded C. R. Hoover 10-1 in a little league game Friday night at Optimist Park.

Molberg fanned 13 and issued only two walks. Gary Butler was the winner.

In addition, the young moundsman was the games batting star — going 4-for-4. Teddy Phillips singled for the only hit surrendered by Molberg.

Windsor Raps Dixie Parts

Windsor, winning its sixth game without a setback, defeated Dixie Parts 2-1 Friday night in an Eastern League game at Optimist Park.

P. D. Stone was the winner, whiffing 12. B. Davis took the loss.

Dickie Henley, H. D. LaRue and Billy Hawkins rapped doubles for Windsor, with Hawkins's timely blow driving in the winning tally tally in the sixth inning.

Two Tie In Ladies Golf

The Pampa Ladies Golf Association has come up with a new twist for its "Play for a Day."

It's called "bingle - bangle-bungle" and is scored like this:

Points are awarded to the golfer who comes closest to the green, or cup; for the longest drive and so forth.

Barbara Dobbin and Lil Hall tied for top honors in the unique golfing venture Thursday afternoon. Betty Garren was second and Will Beck won consolation honors.

READY FOR WORK—After indoctrination with the Yankees, Jake Gibbs is ready to play third base for the New York club's Richmond branch in the International League. He was Mississippi's All-American quarterback.

'Par' Golf May Win PGA Championship

CHICAGO (UPI)—The 1961 Professional Golfers' Association championship may be an oddity in tournamen golf, according to p edictions by two of the best, Arnold Palmer and Jay Hebert.

The event could be won by par or close to par for the 72-hole test on Olympia Fields' north course, they agreed.

Palmer, the defending National Open champion, and Hebert, the defending PGA champion, played the tourney course this week in the "Round of the Champion," a feature of National Golf Week.

"Anything under 280 will win the tournament," Hebert said. Palmer anticipated that 279 or 280 would win.

Par for the course is 70, and thus 280 would be even par for the distance. Last year Hebert won at Akron, Ohio in 281, one stroke over par.

But most tournaments these days go to the swingers who can put together four sub - par rounds to wind up anywhere from four strokes under to perhaps 10 or 12 under.

"They shouldn't do that on this one," Hebert said. "I played it two consecutive days and the wind shift made it play like two different courses. One day the wind was behind you or against you, and the next it was a cross wind all day."

Hebert's scores alone demonstrated the difference. With the wind blowing north, up and down most fairways, he had a three under par 67. With the wind coming from the east, across most fairways, he tallied a 73, to give him 140, even par for 36 holes.

Palmer praised the layout as a "good golf course."

"It's a good course," he said. "It will reward good shots. If you play good, you'll get good results. At Firestone (site of last year's tournament), you could play good and get a bad score."

Both Palmer and Hebert believed that the numerous fairway traps on the 6,722 yard course would bother a lot of the pro's in the tournament. In their round, Palmer hit one of these on the 17th, but he used an iron for a tremendous escape, carrying nearly to the green on the 410 yard hole.

"It will play a lot harder when the ground gets harder," Hebert said. "I'll play shorter, but harder. Then weather will make a difference. If the wind switches around, everybody will have trouble.

"Pin placements can make it tough too. Each green has some little knolls to put the flag in, and every one of them will be different."

Schale 4th In Bowling

Mike Schale, 15, is a young bowler on the move. "Man, I'd love to turn professional," says Pampa's outstanding junior bowler.

The Pampa High school product has just returned from Austin, where he placed fourth in a select field of 24 in the National junior elimination scratch bowling tournament.

Mike, a bowling neophyte (only three years experience) racked up the pins at a 183-plus clip in the tourney won by John Bond of Houston.

Wayne Matney, another top junior bowler, also participated in the bowling meet.

Gil Burgand accompanied the bowling twosome.

Drive To Success

Stevedore Who Loved Horses Gambled Everything On Track

WESTBURY, N. Y. (NEA)—Pat Iovine is one man who chucked everything for the horses — and made it pay.

Just eight years ago he came home to Brooklyn from an evening of $2 punting at Roosevelt Raceway, woke his wife and said: "Jean, like a flash it came to me!" From now on I'm going to make my living off harness racing."

The pretty young mother of two small children, who was expecting another, just giggled. She thought Pat was kidding. He wasn't.

The next morning he quit his job as a stevedore on the Brooklyn waterfront and started considering ways and means of getting a foothold in his new profession. All he knew about horses was that he loved them.

"As a kid I was always hanging around livery stables," he said after a race at Roosevelt.

"The horses weren't much, peddlers' nags and goats like that, but they looked good to me. I loved horses like some kids are crazy for dogs or baseball. Used to save my money and blow it all at once at $1.50 an hour on riding stable hacks. They weren't much, but I felt like a king riding them."

Through "a guy who knew a guy who knew a guy," Iovone finally got his big chance at the races. He got a job as a groom, for no pay. After six months, he decided he knew enough about the business.

"As a kid I dreamed of being a jockey, until I realized I was going to grow too big," said the stocky, 185-pound son of a boss stevedore. "Then I discovered harness racing and it dawned on me that weight was no barrier to driving."

Iovine's savings were running low, but he still had enough to go halvers on three standardbreds with a doctor friend who decided Pat's interest in horses, if nothing else, warranted the investment.

"We picked up a pacer named Ensign Scott that was beautifully bred, but so crummy looking none of the big owners would buy him," Iovine recalled. "Paid $3,000 for him. I nursed him along and won about $6,000 a year with him for quite a while.

"The first race I ever drove was behind Ensign Scott, who went to the post at 25 to 1. We started from the eighth position and finished third, but I started by winning three out of my first four races."

Iovine now owns four horses and trains 19.

Before he discovered harness racing, Iovine was a tenor sax player and was sporting what the boys around the track call a Royal Air Force mustache.

"Played club dates and stuff like that," he reminisced. "By the time I was drafted in 1944 I had my own 13-piece band and was doing very well."

Pat served all through Europe for 18 months as a sergeant in the Army's G-2, Military Intelligence. After his discharge, he went to work on the Brooklyn docks with one brother and his father.

"I just did what so many men want to do — and should do," explained Pat Iovine.

"I chucked everything I didn't like and got into the one thing I wanted."

BOWLING SCORES

The Coffee Cup League, a new women's bowling group, was organized Thursday afternoon at the Garden Lanes bowling alley, a spokesman announced.

"This is a two women team handicap league and we feel it should go over real well," the spokesman said.

Officers of the league are Betty Brown, president; Joe Ann Knutson, vice president, and Betty Alexander, secretary - treasurer.

14 Champs Return To Defend Titles

NEW YORK (UPI)—Fourteen of the 20 national AAU track and field champions crowned at Bakersfield, Calif., last year are expected to defend their titles in the 73rd annual American championships at Downing Stadium, June 24-25.

The National AAU championships, being held in New York for the first time since 1945, will serve as final tryouts to determine the U.S. team which will meet the Soviet Union, West Germany, Great Britain and Poland in four dual meets in Europe this summer.

Entries for the championships close this week, but the National AAU Track and Field Committee will have a more flexible closing date for athletes who may qualify in the NCAA championships at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, next weekend and the worldwide Air Force championships scheduled for the same time at Sheppard AFB, Texas.

Listed as likely defenders are Otis Davis in the 440; Jim Cerveny in the 880; Jim Grelle, mile; Hayes Jones, 120 yard high hurdles; Phil Coleman, 3,000-meter steeplechase; Rudy Haluza, 2-mile walk; John Thomas, high jump; Hank Visser, broad jump; Aubrey Dooley, pole vault; Ira Davis, hop, step and jump; Parry O'Brien, shotput; Al Oerter, discus; Al Cantello, javelin, and Harold Connolly, hammer.

Olympic champions among this group include Davis, who set a world 400-meter record of 44.9 at Rome, and Oerter, 1956-60 discus winner.

The nationals were held in metric distances last year, but return to the English system of measurement this year.

Not defending because they have turned pro, are hurt, or are temporarily retired are Ray Norton, a double sprint winner a year ago; Bill Dellinger in the 3-mile; Al Lawrence in the 6-mile. Richie Howard in the 220-low hurdles and Glenn Davis in the 440 hurdles. Norton, Howard and Davis turned pro as football players, Dellinger is taking a year's leave from track, and Lawrence is injured.

WHAT A SEASON . . . . this week, about the only topic of conversation anywhere in Pampa is the weather . . . . seems most of us are returning to the days of the cave-dwellers . . . . or at least back to the days of the dug-outs in the Panhandle . . . think half the population of Pampa has spent a lot of time this week in storm cellars . . . overheard Tommie Nichols saying they held "open cellar" one night this week . . . about 21 people attended . . . ham, cookies and coffee were served between the hours of 1:30 a.m. and 5:30 a.m. . . . might start a new club in Pampa (as if we needed one) . . . . the Cellar Social Club . . . or, for the non-cellarites, the Society of Cloud Watchers . . . . . only good thing about it is that we may get it all over with at once!

MORE PLEASANT THOUGHTS . . . school is out . . . . and for the many graduates, life is rosy, with nothing but adventure ahead . . . too bad more of us can't keep that youthful outlook . . . that life is a big adventure . . . but too often we get bogged down in "just plain living" . . . attended one graduation where the theme was "climb the highest mountain" . . . imagine some are aspiring to do just that . . . . a lot of young people are home from school . . . among them is Kay Layne . . . who is getting ready to depart again . . . to work in a girl' summer camp . . . Shane Wilbanks was home from TCU, but returned for summer sessions . . . as did David Scarberry . . . . Craig and Coyle Winborne were home from college . . . believe both are taking summer jobs, with Craig to work around Pampa . . . and Coyle around Odessa . . . also heard Rosamond Winborne's mother from South Texas is a guest in her home.

SUMMER VACATIONS and short jaunts are in the wind . . . Martha and John Holt and girls are getting ready for a vacation trip to East Texas . . . A BOOST FOR PAMPA could come if the Chamber of Commerce Improvement Committee comes up with a favorable report . . . and if it leads to successful action . . . on the matter of Junior College for Pampa . . . seems this has been in the wind off and on for many a moon . . . the attendance at the extension classes offered here this winter should indicate some sort of a need for Pampa . . . Smiley Henderson is in charge of the C of C committee . . . and they are really doing an extensive study of the need ond procedures . . . Pampans should rally round this as one of the most worthwhile civic endeavors of the year!

ROUND AND ABOUT . . . sure hate to see Woodrow Adcock and his charming wife, Grace' leave our fair city . . . . they have added much while they have been here . . . . but we are glad for Rev. Adcock's promotion . . . . spied redheaded, always-poised Juanita Paden going into the Central Baptist church the other day . . . she is busy these days with vacation Bible School . . . getting our vote as a very attractive Pampan is Cleo Worley . . . and so nice, too . . . Bertha Hinton is busy these days with her work in one of the Pampa Garden Clubs . . . the dedication of these women is wonderful . . . believe they have a drive in progress for funds to help beautify Pampa . . . a worthy endeavor . . . won't be long before we can call Pampa the garden spot of the Panhandle . . . thanks to these women's efforts.

FASHION COMMENTARY . . . aren't those new culotte fashions wonderful? most of the time you can't tell if they're a dress or a culotte . . . we can remember as a child being so proud of a pair of culottes . . . too bad we grew . . . and wore them out . . . with their coming back into style . . . and aren't the new puff-style sleeves pretty? . . . make us look and feel so feminine . . . we pretty well approve of the fashions this year . . . even the skirt lengths, as long as they don't get any shorter! now, if they'd improve the shoe styles . . . relieve the pointed toes . . . to give our poor bunions a rest!

In the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. Wagoner and their sons, Jim and John. They were assisted in receiving guests by Messrs. and Mmes. Paul Bowers; Melvin Munn; and Carlton Nance.

The refreshments table was appointed with silver bowls, trays and compotes complementing the sterling silver service. An epergne holding a sweeping array of white chrysanthemums and snapdragons was peaked by tall white tapers to form the centerpiece. The Star light Room was transformed into a home-like setting with conversation corners devised with attractive furnishings.

Assisting with the reception were Mmes. Robert Wagoner and Joe Wagoner of Hereford, Carlton Nance, Glenn Radcliff, Mary Dunn and Paul Bowers alternating at the coffee and punch service. Mmes. Joe Wells, Milton McKinney and Jerry Boston were guest registrars.

"It's a long way from the Top o' Texas to the Top o' Illinois, but it was even further in 1932," a wedding reception guest reminisced in reference of the Wagoner courtship and marriage, "but it was even farther in 1932. That was the year William Arthur Wagoner, son of a prominent Groom farm and ranch family, first called on Helen Frances Hastings in her home in Bloomington, Ill."

The wedding of Miss Hastings and William Wagoner was one of the outstanding events of the social season in Bloomington on June 5, 1936. The ceremony was conducted in the First Presbyterian Church, whose pastor, a close friend of the Hastings family, read the marriage vows. Soon after their wedding and honeymoon, the couple took up residence on ranchland twenty miles south of Pampa.

James Arthur Wagoner, the first of two sons, was born August 20, 1938 and the second son, John William Wagoner arrived Oct. 6, 1941. Both boys spent their younger days on the family ranch attending the Grandview School before the family moved into Pampa in 1951.

Jim, who was graduated from the University of Denver, is projectionist for one of Denver's leading motion picture houses. He flew in from Denver especially for the anniversary observance. John, a sophomore at McMurray College in Abilene, is in Pampa for the summer months.

Fill Dad's Shoes With Dad On Father's Day

HELEN HENNESSY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Each June dad can look forward to the one day a year when his family says, "Here, dad," instead of "Gimme. . ."

And since you know that no one can fill dad's shoes, why not tell him so literally this Father's Day, with a gift of handsome summer casuals.

Men's featherweight leather shoes are built for cool comfort, in tapered styles to keep pace with the new slim look of summer slacks, shorts and suits.

A gal likes her guy to look casual but not sloppy when shirtsleeve weather rolls around. And one way to send those broken-down sneakers into oblivion is to replace them with casual shoes that are just as comfortable but a lot better looking.

The trend towards dressier leisure wear has brought the styled-up moccasin into the limelight. You'll find it in two-and three-eyelet ties, slip-ons, and with strap and buckle closures. The buckles are discreet antiqued brass or silver medallions. The glove-soft uppers and lightweight but tough soles make them comfortable walking shoes on pavement or grass.

The leather slip-on is designed for easy - at - home wear. But it doesn't stay at home. Versatile and handsome, it is styled for street wear, with elastic collar or smart side gores that keep the shoe snug on the foot. And its sturdy sole offers support even as it gives a close-cropped finished look.

If pop is an active man, you might put a little spice into his casual wardrobe with a brushed or grained leather chukka. These ankle-high shoes complement the season's newest high-rising slacks, and combine style with practicality.

Most men prefer muted slacks, and the new casual shoes lend the needed color support. You'll find burnished olive, brown, and brown with black in antiqued and hand-stained leathers, as well as light tan, loden green and gray in brushed, smooth and pebbled textures.

If you're not sure of his shoe size, smuggle out an old brogue and take it to your local shoe or department store. A helpful sales clerk will interpret the jumble of

He has only one pair of shoes? Oh well, a gift certificate will do numbers stencilled on the lining, the trick nicely.

LOW NOON

There was peanut butter, jelly,
bologna, toasted cheese,
But they stuck up their noses,
as stubborn as you please.
Cried, "Tuna fish, or nothing!
It's tuna fish we want."
I held my ground, "Then nothing!
This is no restaurant."
So out the door they hurried,
to neighbors down the street.
"Can we have lunch at your house?
There's nothing home to eat."

Don't Accentuate Negative

If your nose is longer than you'd prefer, be sure you never part your hair in the center. It will only accentuate the difficulty.

—Brush That Hair

Brushing is vital to healthy hair. Contrary to belief, it does not make the hair oily. It distributes the natural oil from the roots to the outer tips of your hair.

They're No Substitute

Well - fitted foundation garments will disguise your posture faults, but don't depend on them to the point where they become a substitute for good posture habits.

★ Polly's Quiz ★

By Polly Cramer

Strolling through the linen department of a large store, it occurred to me that the new percale sheets are far too pretty to keep under cover. Blue, pink, orchid and yellow roses scattered over white percale; multicolor stripes or solo stripes in green, pink, blue, yellow, beige or orchid with white —take your pick! There is always a solid color to team up with a design.

Any of them could be the inspiration for a summer bedroom scheme. Percale is long wearing and, when it is used for curtains, needs no lining. Easy to launder, too. The length of a sheet is usually long enough for curtains. When it is too short, add top and bottom bands cut from a solid color sheet or use patterned bands on plain curtains.

Percale is sturdy enough to make a fresh-looking slip cover for a boudoir chair, too. There are fewer seams in dust ruffles cut along the length of a sheet. With your sewing machine, quilt a diamond design on a bedspread made from one of these pretty sheets.

Dear Polly: I would like to know if room dividers are still in style. I'd like to use one near the front door in the entrance hall. Would it look all right to put part of a sectional just under a picture window and the rest of it next to a divider?—Mrs. H. S.

Dear Mrs. H. S.: Room dividers are being used in many new houses and probably will be with us for quite a while. Your suggested sectional sofa arrangement should work nicely. The divider might be a planter (about the height of the sofa back) filled with growing green plants.

Dear Polly: My small living room has light green walls, gray rug and rose sofa. One chair is beige; curtains and lamps are white. I want to buy a pair of open arm chairs. What color? What color can I paint a storage chest on an enclosed white porch that is the entrance to the house? Please, how can I screen a water heater? —M. E.

Dear M. E.: Your room might be more interesting if the beige chair had a slip cover: rose flowers and green leaves on a white background. The new open arm chairs could be covered with narrow green and gray stripes. Paint the hall closet leaf green. A three-panel louvered screen, painted to match the walls, could be placed around the water heater.

Dear Polly: We want to redecorate part of our living room. The carpet is Kelly green and the divan is Ming blue and green. What color for occasional chair, drapes —and walls? — Mrs. C. J. G.

Dear Mrs. C. J. G.: Try white walls and woodwork and very full, semisheer white curtains with a delicate, spray-like design in metallic gold. The new chair could be covered with a bold print in blue, green, gold and white.

'Understanding Heart' Forms Installing Theme

"An Understanding Heart" was the theme for the installation of new officers for Pampa Chapter No. 65, Order of the Eastern Star conducted on June 3 in the Masonic Hall, 420 W. Kingsmill.

Mrs. J. B. Huntington was installed as worthy matron and Rue Hestand was installed as worthy patron.

The ceremony opened with a piano prelude by Coy Palmer. Miss Ginger Hestand, daughter of the worthy patron, presented the Holy Bible.

Mrs. Guy Andis was introduced and welcomed as the installing officer. She introduced her assistants, who were Mmes. I. E. Byars, past matron, as installing marshal; Mrs. Bob McCabe, past matron, as installing chaplain Mrs. Oscar Shearer, past matron, as installing secretary, pro team; Coy Palmer, worthy patron. Top o' Texas Chapter 1064, as installing organist.

Officers to be installed, dressed in aqua lace floor-length formals, entered the hall led by the installing marshal, Mrs. Byars, and were presented with pink carnation corsages by Mrs. Huntington.

In addition to the worthy matron and patron, other officers installed were Mrs. W. Ewing Cobb, associate matron; W. D. Priest, associate patron; Mrs. Crystal Hankhouse, secretary; Mrs. Ed Railsback, treasurer; Mrs. W. F. Mulanax, conductress; Mrs. E. N. Pierce, associate conductress; Mrs. J. A. Meek, chaplain; Mrs. R. J. Lynch, marshal; Mrs. C. J. McNaughton, organist; Mrs. Howard E. Brown, Adah; Mrs. Rue Hestand, Ruth; Mrs. N. A. Briden, Esther; Mrs. L. K. Tomlin, Martha; Mrs. T. A. Mastin, Electa; Mrs. A. J. Collins, warden and Mr. Howard Brown, sentinel.

In n acceptance speech, Mrs. Huntington assumed office in a reverent manner and exprssed setiments for the opportunity of serving the chapter as worthy matron. She chose scripture for the year, I Kings 3:9 "Give therevore thy servant an Understanding Heart."

In referring to her theme "An Understanding Heart," she stated, "Most of life's troubles come from misunderstandings. If we know each other, we shall understand each other; if we understand and trust, we shall work together in unity of purpose and there is nothing worthwhile we cannot accomplish. Then if we have an understanding heart, we will be governed in thoughts, words and deeds by the Golden Rule."

Rue Hestand, worthy patorn, expressed appreciation for the honor of being selected and presented the worthy matron with a gavel.

Mrs. Oscar Shearer, representing the installing officers, expressed gratitude for being selected by the worthy matron to serve in this capacity and presented her with several pieces of her chosen crystal.

The soloist for the evening was Mr. Palmer, who sang "How Great Thou Art" and "Just a Closer Walk With Thee." Mrs. Elbert Walker accompanied by James Shelton presented "Poems For Every Day Living."

The benediction was given by Mr. Huntington, husband of the worthy matron. The chapter room was profusely decorated with garden flowers with a large pink heart centered with the word Understanding in glittered letters which (See UNDERSTANDING, Page 23)

Dear Abby...

Girl Too Young To Answer Yes

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend of the opposite sex who is a little bit younger than me. This person does not have much of a home life. We have been very close for over a year. He asks me questions about sex. So far I have just answered "yes" or no," but haven't gone into any more detail than that. Lately he has been asking questions that need more than a "yes" or "no." Should I answer them? I know I am the only person he confides in. I am 15 and he is 14.

TONGUE-TIED

DEAR TONGUE-TIED: Your young friend needs more information than you can give him. Encourage him to seek it from a mature male. (A teacher, clergyman or relative.) And if he asks you to discuss sex with him again, tell him "NO!".

DEAR ABBY: Six months ago my son and his wife had their first child after nine years of marriage. Naturally they were happy. My daughter-in-law has never been a good housekeeper, and she hasn't kept up her own appearance as long as I've known her. But since the baby came I am just heartsick to see him in dirty undershirts, sweaters, and wrapped in dirty blankets. I don't think she has ever washed these things. There is no excuse for it as she has a new washing machine. It's not only unhealthy for the baby, but downright disgusting. I can't understand how my son can see this and not step in. I don't want to be a meddling mother - in - law, but how can I call this to her attention?

NO ADVICE MOTHER-IN-LAW

DEAR NO: Do not mention this to your son. But tell your daughter-in-law that if her washing machine is out of order, she may use yours to launder the baby's things until it is repaired. Oo offer to do the baby's laundry for her.

DEAR ABBY: Is it out of line to ask your daughter to hang her good clothes up so they will look better, and not like they have been slept in? Who is to blame? Heaven help the man she marries unless he can provide her with a personal maid. It's no joke. I have yelled at her for years, and she never improved.

HER MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: It's your fault, mother. Yelling rarely accomplishes anything. But if you had confiscated her good clothes when they were not where they should have been, she would have "learned" by now.

DEAR ABBY: Ever since I was a little girl I can remember my mother making sacrifices so that my two older sisters could have nice things. My sisters are married now, and both are very comfortably situated. But my parents could be living on the moon for all the attention my sisters pay them. Why is it that grown children only appreciate their parents after the funeral?

I hope I live long enough to see my nieces and nephews grow up and treat my sisters the way they are treating Mamma. Yours truly,

RUTH MILLETT

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Going through today's mail I came across an ad that made me sit up and take notice. "We're out looking for new customers," it said.

Like most folks, my mailbox is usually half-filled with direct mail advertising. Catalogues, letters, postcards, folders, coupons — all from people wanting to sell me something.

But do they come right out and say that they have something to sell or that I am a prospective customer? Nope. They all want to "give" me something, or do me a great big favor, or let me in on a very special deal, or make me a member of a club, or give me a very special break.

They don't want anything from me — no indeed. They want to lead me to an easier life. They aren't interested in making money. They're just interested in me.

So it was a real — though pleasant — shock to get an ad from somebody who comes right out and says, "We're out looking for new customers." For that rare honesty and frank approach they're going to get a new customer, too. . .me.

Frosting Welfare Cake

Major spending programs now proposed in Congress would cost at leat $21 billion over a four year period — an average of $5¼ billion beyond existing spending — according to some who favor them. Others put the figure much higher. Senator Goldwater, for instance, estimates the four - year cost at between $7½ and $10 billion. And these programs, let it be remembered, do not include the multitude of Congressional bills which have no chance of passing. They include only the seriously-regarded ones, with influential backing.

For the most part, the programs have nothing to do with the national defense or related matters. Much of the money would be used to extend the welfare-state idea.

The question is just how all this could be paid for. One way is to increase taxes — but the burden of taxation is now a very serious barrier to economic growth, industrial investment, and the creation of the new jobs the country needs. Another way is through deficit financing and a swelling federal debt, inevitably leading to a new wave of inflation and further degradation of the dollar.

Even those who support the ever-growing power of the central government — at the expense of state and local rights, obligations, and independence — should think twice about such programs as these. It is no longer a question of what some or many of us may think desirable — it is a hard-rock question of what we can afford. And, the world situation, being what it is, we simply can't afford to add more frosting to the welfare cake. Survival is going to take all the energies and resources we have to spare.

Important Reading

Not for light reading, but for information purposes, we recommend the eleventh edition of "Facts and Figures on Government Finance," just published by Tax Foundation, Inc., 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20, N.Y.

A careful study of this 275-page book is recommended for all Americans who are concerned with the growth of government. It does no editorializing, but just lists tables showing trends in taxation and other data affecting all the American people.

For instance, in 1929, the total of all federal, state and local taxes was $10,276 millions, or 10.7 per cent of the net national production. In 1959, the total of state, national and local taxes was $124,-393 millions, or 28.2 per cent of net national product.

In 1902 ALL federal, state and local taxes amounted to $9 a person. In 1913 (when the federal income tax was adopted) the per capita total tax was $24 a year, of which $7 was federal, $3 was state and $14 was for local operations. Until 1942, local and state taxes were more than federal tax collections. That year the per capita tax bill totaled $172 a year, of which $100 was federal. For 1960, the per capita tax bill was $715, of which 70 per cent of $499 was for federal expenditures.

In 1902, federal, state and local governments combined owed $3,285 million, of which $1,178 million was federal, $230 million was state and $1,877 million was local.

By 1942, the total debt was $92 billion, of which $72.4 billion was federal. In 1960, total government debt was $355.8 billion of which $286.3 billion was federal. Today for every man, woman and child in the country, the total debt of all governments amounts to $2,-010, of which $1,617 or 80.5 per cent is federal.

There are some interesting school figures too. In 1929-30, slightly more than $2 billions of dollars were spent on public elementary and secondary schools in the entire United States, of which 82.7 per cent was local taxes, 16.9 per cent was state taxes and four-tenths of 1 per cent was from federal funds. In 1957-58, the total bill was 12.1 billion of which 56.4 per cent was local, 39.6 per cent was state and 4 per cent was federal.

Here's one that interested us particularly. In 1899-1900, there were 21,573,000 children 5 to 17, of whom 15,503,000 were in public schools and 1,352,000 in non-public schools. By 1959-60, there were 43,-324,000 of schoolage population, of whom 36,170,000 were in public schools and 6,752,000 were in non-public schools. In other words, enrollment in non - tax - supported schools has increased about 400 per cent, while those in tax-supported school just about doubled.

Everybody's Money

By MERYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

The financial world, operated by a profit motive, provides the typical American with tools which can help him achieve a nest egg for himself and his family.

But to the amateur the multiplicity of services offered makes for confusion. There is a feeling among the unsophisticated that each money specialist tends to plump unduly for his own financial wares.

Thus, a professional man, after thirty years, writes this column that he thinks it high time to "think in terms of me, my futue, and future security."

The reader continues: "Now the problem is what to do about my estate. The problem was presented to the Trust Department of my bank and they did a fine job —the answer being to leave everything to the insurance companies! Two different financial experts also did a fine job — the answer being to learn everything in investments with them!

"Where in this area may I find a firm composed of experienced counsellors who, for a fee, will advise what is best for my particular estate? They must have tax experts, finacial experts, insurance experts, etc., with nothing to sell but good, sound advice."

The mood of the questioner, though a bit naive, represents that of many unsophisticated persons who are floundering in a morass of financial uncertainty.

Before telling the reader how to contact a reputable investment counsellor, it seems desirable to suggest to the seeker after guidance some rudimentary principles about the art of taking advice. Sincere professional advice which deals with future probablities and risks obviously cannot be guaranteed. The remark of the eminent publicist, the late Carl Byoir, whose advice was sought by Harrison Williams, the public utility executives, should be recalled. Although the client wanted him only for a one time shot before a Senate investigation, the publicist said that he worked for a minimum retainer of 30,000 a year, adding "that's the fee, even if you ask for my counsel only once during the year, and even if my advice proves to be wrong."

Even the prudent man cannot find a foolproof assurance that his plans for the future will fulfill his hopes. There is risk inherent in making present decisions concerning future events. What may seem to be sagacious today may be rendered untimely in the future by inflation, a deterioration of the quality of management in an enterprise, the impact on the national economy of war, and of future inventions which make present methods obsolete.

The reader — a physician—can get investment advice on a fee basis from qualified investment counsellors (such as those who belong to the Investment Counsel Association of America, Inc., located at 100 Park Avenue in New York). In addition, in the larger cities, the trust departments of fiduciary institutions and of some investment dealers will give counsel on an annual fee basis. Moreover, competent and dynamic trust companies will relieve the estate builder of all details in handling funds if he elects to set up a living trust.

Another alternative is to participate in a common trust fund, operated by a bank or trust company, in behalf of a group of beneficiaries. The Publication, Trusts & Estates, 50 East 42 Street New York, periodically publishes lists of fiduciary institutions which operate common trust funds.

Now as to whether the fellow in competition who wans to hog the business, as the doctor's letter charges, is right or wrong, it should be made clear that the various avenues for money management are not mutually exclusive. In these tense times when the buying power of the dollar has been falling, prudence dictates the wisdom of a balanced investment diet consisting of equities (stocks, small businesses and real estate) as well as fixed dollar commitments (such as high grade bonds, life insurance and annuity contracts, and savings accounts.).

Until a family head has sufficient other assets, there is no substitute for life insurance which instantly creates a contingent estate whenever the current premium has been paid. With the uncertainty as to how long a particular individual will live, the insurance company's averaging of risks is indispensable. However, the type of policy, whether embracing investment features, such as endowment and limited payment life policies or pure insurance, such as term policies, will depend on appraisal of expectations as to what the future buying power of the dollar will be.

The uninitiated does not need to make his own selection of stocks, but can invest through specialists by buying financial packages, including open-end mutual funds (including the "no - load" funds) and closed - end investment company shares. Where the individual prefers the cafeteria basis investing on his own, he can obviate the hazard of trying to guess stock price fluctuations through following the technique of "dollar averaging." This entails a plan to invest exactly the same number of dollars monthly, quarterly or annually in precisely the same seasoned and tested securities.

A Logical Question

Allen - Scott Report:

House Works on Compromise Membership Gain Of 3-4 Seats; 4 States Could 'Save' a Seat

ROBERT S. ALLEN — PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives is apparently going to be increased after all.

Following months of backing and filling on this politics-charged question, Speaker Sam Rayburn and the other Democratic leaders have decided to throw their weight behind an expansion of three or four members — for a permanent total of 438 or 439.

The exact number will be agreed on later this month.

The proposed additions would "save" one seat each for Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Missouri.

Under the 1960 census, in the Congress elected next year, Massachusetts is slated to lose two seats, from 14 to 12; Pennylvana three, from 30 to 27; Illinois one, from 25 to 24, Missouri one, from 11 to 10.

Twelve other states also will lose seats; eleven, one each, and New York two. Nine states will gain seats; seven, one each; California 8, and Florida 4.

The backstage decision to seek a three to four increase in the permanent size of the House was headed by Speaker Sam Rayburn. reached at a stategy meeting headed by Speaker Sam Rayburn. Two main factors were behind this compromise:

A "small" expansion could be justified on the ground that two seats already have been temporarily added to provide representation for the new states of Alaska and Hawaii. A larger increase, strongly favored by the states due to lose House seats, might provoke hostile public reaction against the Democrats in next year's elections.

So to play it safe, Rayburn and the other leaders agreed to limit the expansion to four seats at the most.

Whether they can get away with that remains to be seen.

MUCH STILL UNDECIDED — This plan has won the support of two influential opponents of a big increase — Democratic Floor Leader John McCormack, Mass., and Representative Emanuel Celler, N. Y., chairman of the Judiciary Committee. The have signified their approval of the compromise.

But Republican leaders, who weren't consulted at all, may have different ideas. They have still to learn about this unannounced proposal and what they do about it is conjectural.

Meanwhile, the required legislation is already being drafted.

Representatives Basil Whitener, D- N. C., and John Lesinski, D-Mich., have bills to raise the membership to 438. And Representative Francis Walter, D-Pa., chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee, has a measure to make the total 439.

The last permanent increase, to 435, was voted in 1913.

Whatever Congress does about the size of the House, it will still be up to the states that lose and gain seats to reapportion them. So far, only a small number have done that.

Unless the others do, that could have spectacular political repercussions.

In that event, in the states losing seats, all House members would have to be elected by statewide ballot. In the states that gain, this would apply only to new seats.

With some 150 such seats at stake, the Democrats could lose control of the House.

They now have an 88-vote margin. But with a large number of seats up for grabs in statewide election throughout the country, a Republican trend in 1962 could result in stunning political upsets.

Leaders of both parties might have to run at large, foremost among them Floor Leader McCormack. Mass., and former Speaker Joseph Martin, R-Mass.

The Constitution does not specify how House members are to be elected. The district system did not come into existence until 1842 when Congress voted that. In the present House, Republicans represent the largest and smallest districts.

Representative James Utt, in California's 28th district, has the largest, with 1,014,460 population; Representative John Bennett, 12th Michigan district, the smallest, with 177,431.

UNDER CAPITOL DOME — Inside reason for the House's delay until after June 19 of consideration of the Senate-passed aid-to-education bill is that two of its chief backers are in Europe. Representative Adam Clayton Powell, D-N.Y., chairman of the Labor Committee handling this legislation, is visiting Paris, and Representative James Roosevelt, D-Calif., chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the measure, is in Geneva. Roosevelt is attending an international conference. Powell's mission to Paris is less clear. One House leader who asked a Labor Committeeman about it was told with a laugh, "Oh, you surely have heard of that 'Gay Paree Committee' ". . . Alice Dunnigan, veteran negro Washington correspondent, has been named a staff member of the Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity, headed by Vice President Johnson. . . . Representative William Miller, N. Y., newly elected chairman of the Republican National Committee, is due to become a father for the fourth time in October. Mrs. Miller disclosed this after her husband won the GOP chairmanship. "Seems as if everything is happening at once," she said. "Our daughter, Libby, is graduating from the Convent of the Sacred Heart, and we're expecting our fourth child in October. He'll make a nice playmate for our two-year-old son, Bill Jr." Mrs. Miller also revealed that she and her husband are ardent golfers and bridge players. She likes to cook, and her husband's preferences are chicken, steak and spare-ribs, in that order.

UNIONS HAVE PRECEDENCE

Cmdr. Alan Shepard's recent successful space flight was a tremendous shot in the arm for the American people. It was a boost for national morale that had sunk low after the Kennedy administration's bungle in Cuba.

But in cheering this brave astronaut's exploit, the U.S. public should not forget to ask: Why was the United States second in the space race? One answer to that question is the outrageous record of labor strikes in the missile field. Strikes and slowdowns were at least partially responsible for this nation not being the first into space — an event that would have done much to raise U.S. prestige abroad.

An investigations committee headed by Sen. McClellan (D-Ark) clearly showed that union-promoted strikes, slowdowns and walk outs delayed the nation's missile progress. And what was the aim of the unions in holding up U.S. defense progress? It was to get more money through overtime pay. Some workers at Cape Canaveral earned more than $650 a week in overtime pay because the National Space Agency and the armed services had to push ahead to make up for lost time. Another shocking aspect of this is that Cmdr. Shepard earned not much more than this in an entire month!

Here we have a situation where unionists, using unethical, indeed un-American methods, greedily grabbed every dollar they could while the man who had to risk his life worked long hours every day without asking or expecting a cent in overtime.

This is a shameful situation. And if the country had any real leadership in the White House, the President would go to the people and tell them the whole ugly story of union holdups of national defense.

Several weeks ago, while a prominent American editor was visiting a missile site in the West, a strike was called by one of the unions on the missile base construction site. Below the earth, service men worked away at important jobs in an underground headquarters. They were on guard protecting the country against a sneak attack. But up on the surface unionists carried signs calling for higher wages. The strikers showed contempt for their country's security.

Why doesn't the President do something about this situation? If he is the President of ALL the people, not simply of union members, he should diplay leadership of the kind the country needs. Of course, he needs to rid himself of liberal-leftists in the palace guard.

Of interest in the connection was a recent photograph published in the press that showed Mr. Kennedy watching Cmdr. Shepard's take off from Canaveral. Behind the President in his White House office stood two of his closest advisers—Prof. Arthur Schlesinger Jr. and former Harvard Dean McGeorge Bundy. The presence of these types in the White House is one very good reason why there isn't presidential leaderhip against union obstructionism in the defense field. Prof. Schlesinger, for example, is one of the closest political allies of Auto Workers boss Walter Reuther and other labor chieftains. As an official of the leftwing Americans For Democratic Action, Prof. Schlesinger had been in the forefront of those fighting to give unions more power over American life. If the ADA had had its way at every point, if Prof. Schlesinger's counsel had prevailed in Congress in recent years, American industry today would be so snarled in red tape and so much under the thumb of Big Unionism that this country never would have launched a missile.

Government, after all, is no more than the personnel in Washington. If officials are socialist in outlook, if they are biased in favor of all - powerful unionism, government won't act to move the country ahead and to make necessary reforms. This is the trouble in Washington today. Union interests come ahead of national interests.

The Almanac

By United Press International

Today is Sunday, June 11, the 162nd day of the year with 203 more to follow in 1961.

The moon is approaching its new phase.

The morning stars are Jupiter, Venus and Saturn.

The evening star is Mars.

On this day in history:

In 1859, Henry Tompkins Paige Comstock laid claim to a silver deposit in Nevada. He later sold his rights for $11,000, unaware that the Comstock Lode was to be the greatest silver bonanza discovered by man.

In 1920, Senator Warren Harding was summoned to a smoke filled room in Chicago's Hotel Blackstone and told he would be the GOP presidential nominee.

In 1927, Charles Lindberg was welcomed home in the nation's capital after his historic flight across the Atlantic Ocean.

In 1950, Ben Hogan won the U.S. Open golf championship in a miraculous comeback. He suffered near fatal injuries in an auto accident 16 months earlier.

Thought for today: American inventor Thomas Edison said: "There is no substitute for hard work."

Americans In Italy Wait For Peace Corps

By HENRY McLEMORE

ROME, Italy — We Americans in Italy are counting a lot on the new Peace Corps, and only hope it won't be long before the energetic young men and women, loaded with American know-how, reach these shores.

I have no idea how many are coming to Italy, but we need droves of them. Every American family could use two or three, maybe more.

I don't want to be selfish, but there couldn't be a home in Italy more in need of American know-how than my own. There are a thousand things that need fixing, as the first Peace Corps member will discover when he rings my doorbell.

It's an Italian doorbell, and it gets stuck every time it's pushed, and rings and rings and rings for about five minutes. The concierge has done his best to fix it, and I have beat on it with hammers and yanked at it with pliers, but it continues to get stuck.

What a blessing it will be to have the Peace Corps youngsters fresh from America and itching to help backward folk, open his Peace Corps kit of tools and straighten that fool bell out.

Once the bell is in order, I'd like the Peace Corpsman to make straight for the laundry room and give the benefit of his know-how to our washerwoman, Italia. We have equipped her with the latest in detergents, and a 1961 model washboard, but she'll have none of them.

She was taught to wash in a running stream, and to pound clothes clean on rocks and boulders, and we haven't been able to bring her around to any new-fangled powders. She has rigged herself some rocks, over which the garden hose plays a stream, and on quiet mornings the sound of my shirts slapping the rocks can be heard blocks away.

The clothes come out whiter than while, all right, but also frayder than frayed. I trust the Peace Corps fellow will lay down the law to Italia and, using his most sympathetic approach, get her to put the rocks back on the rock pile. It would be nice to wear a shirt again that didn't look like a tattered ensign, or something one had bought to wear to a costume party as a shipwrecked sailor.

There's work for the Peace Corps fellows to do at the dry cleaners, too. Italian dry cleaners use more gasoline on a suit than a DC-8 does to fly across the Atlantic, and when a man puts on his suit he doesn't dare smoke a cigarette for three or four days lest he cause a flash explosion.

The Peace Corpsman assigned to me has a week's work in our bathroom alone. For one thing, he can change all the water taps around. As they are now, the hot is on the wrong side, and the cold, too. As a result, we are always either scalding or freezing ourselves.

Oh, if it's work the Peace Corps fellows are looking for, we Americans in Italy can keep 'em busy. They won't find a more backward lot anywhere. And with us Americans they'll eat the food of the land, as they are supposed to. We'll give 'em spaghetti and veal until it runs out of their ears, and pizza and espressor in abundance.

They can learn the language along with us, and also the native customs, such as tipping half the people in town on every holiday of which there are upwards of five a week.

Hurry boys and girls. We Americans need you.

Looking Sideways

By WHITNEY BOLTON

NEW YORK — Never mind that bit if you sit at a sidewalk cafe on the Rue de La Paix long enough you will see everyone you ever knew pass by. If you sit long enough in Sardi's in 44th Street on a rainy afternoon, you will wind up with a story. The story that walked in was Steven Hill, actor. Why was Mr. Hill a story? Because for quite a long time and in several places Mr. Hill was known as a rebellious, militant, difficult young man who gave directors fits. The reputation did not keep Mr. Hill fully employed nor did it do a thing to fatten his larder and his purse.

He sat down alongside me and faced a glass of orange juice wide enough and deep enough to swim in and he said that things were going just fine at "A Far Country," in which he plays Dr. Sigmund Freud, and he hadn't had a verbal donnybrook with anyone in years.

"I'm a meek guy," he said. "It's less wearing."

What brought about the docile condition?

"Well, in those days, I was a working rebel, you know," he said. "Brando, Dean and Hill. The three must-get-theirs of the Actors Studio. James Dean is dead, Brando is rich and I'm working."

"Look," I said, "you don't have to recite the Rebels' Creed for me. I know what you were. But why were you?"

He took a long pull at the orange juice, studied the ceiling for another long minute and took a deep breath.

"Fear," he said, at last. "Cold, icy, shaking fear. Everyone thought it was just because I was a practicing smart alec. Untrue. I was a scared kid to whom good things were happening fast and I didn't have the maturity or equipment to meet them headon. I began to turn chicken inside and rather than confess it or show it, I covered up by being difficult. I had no background for what was happening to me, no preparation. I was a graduate of the University of Washington in Seattle, a young graduate, with a Seattle boy's average background. I came to New York, got off the train, looked around at the towering buildings and the swarming people and said: 'Steve, you can't lick this. They'll grind you down.' Then I got some jobs and felt I could not do them well. Between the pressure of gigantic New York and the pressure of being a candidate for Broadway, I folded. Instead of folding in tears I folded in snarls. End of analysis."

What one thing caused him to have confidence, to stop fighting and buckle down to serious, sincere work?

"Responsibility," he said. "Marriage and three wonderful kids. It was not a surge of I've got to make good for these people.' It was more 'They like me and I can't let them down, I can't fail them.' Call me an average joe. You love a wife and you love your children and realize you owe them something—so you change. If that's being a square, mail me a membership card. I'm a paid-up member in good standing. I'm from Squaresville if a decent sense of responsibility is being square."

About confidence?

"Oh, well, movies did that. Oddly, movies and a man most people in Hollywood considered some kind of a monster. I loved him, drew from his strength, responded to his faith in me and learned my acting trade. The late Harry Cohn, a rough guy when he wasn't for you, sure. But he loved people who worked with him and were on the level with him. I was lucky — I did it that way and he gave me opportunities. Those opportunities taught me my trade. Don't ever let anyone tell you working for movies is a cinch. It's the hardest kind of work."

Did he think Method actors still were, at base, rebellious and militantly individual?

"Yes and no," he said. "I think the Method principle has been abused by youngsters who misconstrue it as a license to bad personal and professional attitudes. The more sober and mature players are helped by it. It helped me, although in the beginning I was an addled maverick, too."

Steven Hill — serious, honest actor.

GOING TO ST. LOUIS — The Handbell Choir of the First Methodist Church will attend the National Convention of the American Guild of English Hand-Bell Ringers in St. Louis, beginning June 14. The choir, directed by Tom Atkin, will be one of sixty such groups attending from nine states. The chartered bus will leave early Tuesday morning. The group will be guests at the Sunday morning service of the second Presbyterian Church, playing the prelude and offertory music. In the picture are, left to right, front row; Terry Watson, Carolyn Richardson, Karen Richardson, Diana Edminister, Kay Chapley, Cheryl Dosier, Susan Carr. Second row; Ronnie Bray, Price Dosier III, Dean Evans, David Cain, Keith Griffith, Konnie Oler and Roddie Bray.

Unprecedented Challenge Said To Face Nation

Greater spiritual alertness is needed to meet the unprecedented challenges and oportunities presented by the tremendous upheaval in the world today, The Christian Science Board of Directors said in a special message to the Annual Meeting of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, held in Boston, Mass., on June 5. The directors call for renewed vigilance on the part of all who cherish freedom, brotherhood, and truth.

"Among the stirring headlines of our day," they said, "there is no more vital news than the Christianity which our Master taught and practiced. In an age of political tyranny and ecclesiastical despotism, of turbulence, unrest, and hatred. Christ Jesus came preaching that the kingdom of God is at hand. He wielded a power which the might of materialism could neigher parallel nor resist."

In our own age, material limitations are yielding to the free-domgiving power of God, infinite Spirit, the directors maintained.

"Humanity is crying out," they said, "for freedom. Peoples are clamoring for liberty; nations are being born; the barriers of time and space are crumbling. . . .In the fields of religion, government, education, discovery, invention, industry, and medicine, matter is slowly yielding to Spirit."

Named president of The Mother Church was Mrs. Mary Lee Gough Nay, a Christian Science teacher and paractitioner of Boston, Mass. She succeeds Arthur W. Eckman, General Counsel of The Mother Church.

A native of Texas, Mrs. Nay received her education at Ward Seminary, Nashville, Tennessee, the University of Texas, and the University of Chicago. She withdrew from a musical career in 1918 to devote her entire time to the practice of Christian Science healing in Chicago. She became an authorized teacher of Christian Science in 1946. She will serve as president for one year.

Science Services Schedule Mental Fatigue Subject

The mental nature of fatigue will be explained at Christian Science services today in a Lesson-Sermon on the subject "God the Preserver of Man."

Isaiah's comforting assurance of divine strength will be read from the Bible (Isa. 40): "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint."

A correlative selection from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy states in part: "The xcien tific and permanent remedy for fatigue is to learn the power of Mind over the body or any illusion of physical weariness, and so destroy this illusion, for matter cannot be weary and heavy-laden."

The Golden Text is from the first chapter of Joshua: "Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be than dismayed: for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest."

Revival Center Plans Services

Ruby Burrow, pastor of the Revival Center, 1101 S. Wells, announces revival services will be conducted at 7:45 o'clock each night through June 17.

Mrs. J. A. Whitley and the Harvestime Trio from Dequene, Ark., will be special guests.

Baptists Honor Dallas Woman

DALLAS (Spl) — A 76-year-old woman who has devoted a lifetime to missionary efforts and temperance work has been named winner of the 1961 Texas Baptist Elder Statesman Award.

Mrs. Olivia Davis of Dallas was selected for the honor and cited "for long and untiring service in the Texas Baptist Woman's Missionary Union and outstanding leadership in civic and temperance organizations."

The award will be presented at the annual meeting of the Independence Homecoming Association Saturday at the Independence Baptist Church, the oldest Baptist church in the state.

Dr. Gordon Singleton, Baylor University professor and president of the association, said the award, which goes to a woman for the first time this year, is designed to recognize individuals who have recorded long years of devoted service to Christianity and the Baptist denomination. It is sponsored jointly by the association and the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

Mrs. Davis served for 20 years as office executive and treasurer of the Texas Baptist Woman's Missionary Union before retiring in 1945. She worked for nearly 27 years in some official capacity with the Baptist woman's organizations.

After her retirement, Mrs. Davis continued to write and speak, heralding the causes of temperance, work with juvenile delinquents, anti-gambling and women's rights through the Women's Temperance Union.

She served for 14 years as director of the Christian Citizenship Department for the National Women's Temperance Union, and for nine years in the same capacity for the World's Women's Temperance Union.

Mrs. Davis has also been one of the top leaders in the United Daughters of Confederacy, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Dallas Patriotic Association, and is active in the work of the Woman's Missionary Union circle in her home church, First Baptist Church of Dallas.

National Fuels Policy Tangle Likely Monday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The oil FUELS ¼ ¼ ¼ ¼ ¼ and coal industries come to grips in Congress Monday over establishment of a government-backed national fuels policy.

Coal, hurt by oil and natural gas, wants one badly. Oil and gas don't and will marshal all their strength against it.

Forum for the clash will be the Senate Interior Committee. It opens a two-day hearing on a resolution sponsored by 63 senators and endorsed by President Kennedy. The measure would set up a special nine-man Senate Committee to investigate and determine whether a government - enforced conservation policy is necessary.

The committee—six Democrats and three Republicans — would have power to subpena witnesses and records. It could suggest but not originate legislation. It could spend up to $200,000 a year and hold hearings in either the co or oil country. It must report by the time the 88th Congress convenes, Jan. 2, 1963.

Coal wants a policy that would enable it to "compete equitably" in the fuels market. This, according to the oil and gas people, envisions an "end use" policy, which would squeeze oil and gas out of free competition and also deprive consumers of a free choice of fuels.

The feud has been smouldering for years, with oil and gas coming out on top in every congressional test. But they're now likely to be on the defensive, with no assured victory in sight.

Depression has hit most coal-producing areas and coal - state senators want something done about it. So does Kennedy who appointed a study task force after seeing conditions first-hand during his election campaign. He and his sponsors have won sympathetic support from almost two thirds of the Senate.

The issue is equally hot in the House but Speaker Sam Rayburn, from oil - producing Texas, like other Texans harbors a suspicion the real purpose of the study is to give coal a government-enforced break over oil and gas.

Rayburn, who wields tremendous influence, jerked the rug from under a move to set up a joint Senate-House study committee but did consent to formation of a 15 - man House comittee. The legislation for this, however, is stalled in the Rayburn - controlled Rules Committee where it probably will repose indefinitely.

U.S. Economy Declared Cause Of Joblessness

Not technological progress, but rather fluctuations in the level of the nation's economic activity, are the primary cause of unemployment in the steel industry, R. Conrad Cooper, United States Steel's Executive Vice President — Personnel Services, asserted recently before a sub-committee of the House Education and Labor Committee that is studying unemployment and the impact of automation.

"While it is true that there is no over-all long-term technological unemployment problem in steel," Mr. Cooper said, "specific instances of employment dislocations due to technological improvement do and must occur in any progressive enterprise, and do pose serious problems of a human relations nature for the individuals involved."

Cooper related to the sub-committee measures U. S. Steel takes to alleviate employee displacement, resulting from technological advance. Among these measures are utilizing personnel turn - over to absorb employees affected by that advance; transfer of employees to other jobs; retraining of employees either for jobs on the new unit, or providing on-the-job training where required in cases of transfer to previously - existing jobs of different kinds than those the employees had been performing; limiting the hiring of new employees where feasible; and carrying out systematic efforts to find job placements outside U. S. Steel, if necessary.

As a case-study-in-point, Cooper related what had hapened to 1,346 employees when, between late 1956 and about the start of 1960, U. S. Steel effectuated the replacement of old structural mills at South Chicago Works with modern, up-to-date mills. About 71 per cent, or 953, having received a substantial amount of retraining, are now working in the new mill. Another 109, about 8 per cent, were transferred to work in other operating departments of the plant, including four who have been promoted to the management group. Of the remainder, only one is on layoff, and 29 are on sick leave. The other 254 individuals involved are accounted for by retirements, voluntary termination, discharge for violation of plant rules, death, and leave of absence.

In another case he presented—the discontinuation of an open hearth shop and blooming mill at Vandergrift, Pennsylvania—it was not possible to achieve as thorough going placement of employees. The experience there was that of the 1,373 employees involved, 492 were employed in that or other plants, 293 retired on pensions, 282 elected severance allowance and termination, and 306 had to be laid off.

On the whole, Cooper said, the steel industry's rate of employee attrition exceeds the rate of increase in output per man-hour due to all improvements in productive efficiency, which obviates over-all long-term technological unemployment as a problem in steel.

Oil Imports Danger Recognized In 1955

Back in 1955 the President of the United States, the President's Cabinet Committee on Energy Supplies and Resources Policy, and the Office of Defense Mobilization recognized the danger to the American economy from excessive oil imports. Paul R. Schultz Jr., president of the Blackwell Oil Company, Tulsa, and chairman of the Import Policy Company of the Independent Petroleum Association of America pointed to these facts to a committee of Congress this past week.

Continuing his statement to the committee, Schultz said:

In order that the mandatory import program may achieve its basic objectives, the Independent Petroleum Association of America urges the following recommendations which were officially adopted in May 1961.

1 — That the Government improve the method of determining the import level in District I-IV so that allowable crude imports will be based on the demand for crude oil rather than the demand for refined products. Specifically, it is recommended and urged that the base for determining allowable imports into District I-IV (excluding residual fuel) be changed from 9 per cent of the total demand for petroleum products to 10 per cent of the total demand for crude oil in those districts. It is emphasized that this recommended change contemplates that all imports (excluding residual fuel oil) be included within this 10 per cent limitation, and that any imports, such as exempted imports, be deducted in determining imports subject to import allocations. It is further recognized that it may be necessary to reduce the ratio of imports to domestic production if the suggested 10 per cent does not accomplish the basic objectives of the program.

2 — That overland imports of crude oil, finished products, and gas liquids be deducted from overall permissible imports into Districts I-IV as is being done in District V.

3 — That constant surveillance of overland imports be exercised to the end that their exemption not defeat the purposes of North American Continental security. We endorse and support the statement made by the Secretary of the Interior on February 2, 1961, to the effect that if exempted imports have a marked and abrupt adverse effect on the domestic petroleum industry, such action would call for a reconsideration of this exemption. While recognizing the preferential position of overland imports as contrasted with other imports from the standpoint of security of the United States and the North American continent, it is of utmost importance that this treatment does not result in these imports having a preferred position over domestic production with no resulting benefits to the security of either the United States or the North American continent.

4 — That products for military use in the United States be supplied from domestic oil.

5 — That there be no provision for the importation of unfinished oil. Such importations were negligible prior to the establishment of the Voluntary Oil Import Program, and developed as a means of circumventing the intent and purposes of the Voluntary program.

6 — That the present recognition of the impact of inter-district shipments on the effectiveness of the program be continued to the end that such shipments not be permitted to increase imports.

7 — That the Association re-affirm its position that exemption of the asphaltic content of imported crude is unnecessary and would tend to undermine the overall objectives of the program.

8 — That the administration of the Import Program, as it pertains to Puerto Rico, be such as to prevent increases in shipments of crude oil or any products from Puerto Rico into the Continental United States.

9 — Without discriminating in any manner against imports from Mexico as such, that we condemn the present method of using the in-bond and over-land exemption to bring Mexican oil into the United States in clear circumvention of the intent and spirit of the import program, and call upon the Government to take immediate corrective action.

10 — The program in District V has been improved. The inclusion of exempt imports as part of supply and the elimination of excessive inter - district shipments as part of demand have helped, to strengthen it. We believe that it is basically sound and that it be continued as an aid in restoring a healthy petroleum industry.

11 — That the Association reaffirm the position adopted by the membership at the October, 1960 annual meeting that in the interest of equity we support the principle of allocations to all refiners and urge the elimination of historic allocations.

12 — That the above recommendations are designed to accomplish the stated purpose of the program, which is to insure the security of the United States through the maintenance of a healthy and vigorous domestic petroleum industry, which requires a substantial reduction in the present level of imports.

Seismograph's Income Climbs

TULSA, Okla., — The highest first quarter income in its history and a 10 per cent increase in net income over 1960 was reported today by Seismograph Service Corporation.

In a quarterly report to stockholders SSC President G. H. Westby said gross income for the three months ended March 31 totaled $5,421,082, compared with $4,970, 271 in 1960. Net income was $108, 594, as against $97,430 for the same period in 1960.

Westby pointed out that the company's first half net earnings usually are low, with the highest net earnings coming in the last three months of the year.

In his report Westby said SSC should begin to receive income from products which have been in the development stage for several years, including the Seiscor voting machine and the Telepath communications system. He said plans to have the voting maching certified for use in various states are proceeding favorably.

The Seiscor Division of SSC had Lorac radio positioning equipment in use at Cape Canaveral and down range on the Atlantic Missile Range for the Project Mercury manned space shot May 5.

Westby said the first foreign "VIBROSEIS" seismic crew should commence operations in Libya this summer, and he emphasized that SSC's exclusive license for "VIBROSEIS" is "a most important asset and one which will in the future substantially increase our gross income and profits."

Westby added that from present facts "we are firmly convinced that 1961 should be a most profitable year for SSC."

CIVIL WAR ALBUM

First Successful Union Campaign

THE BATTLE OF PHILIPPI, on June 3, 1861, launched the first successful Union campaign and Gen. George B. McClellan's rise to prominence. In late May, General McClellan, in command of the department of Ohio, on his own initiative, dispatched a small force of Indiana, Ohio and Virginia volunteers across the Ohio River into western Virginia at Philippi. By early June, his men had dispersed the Confederates, won the battle of Philippi and managed to secure enough territory to help separate a State of West Virginia from the Old Dominion (Virginia). General McClellan became so popular that he was dubbed "Little Mac: the Young Napoleon." McClellan, a graduate of West Point, was a railroad executive in Cincinnati when war broke out. He volunteered his services to the Union and was commissioned as a major general. McClellan went on from Philippi to lead an advance toward the Confederate capital of Richmond as commander of the Army of the Potomac. He was later relieved of his command, and never given another, after failing to engage the Confederates in full battle in Maryland in the fall of 1862, notably in the fight at Antietam Creek. In 1864, McClellan became the Democratic presidential candidate on a platform that denounced the war as a failure and proposed negotiations with the Confederacy.

TV 'Brainchild' Receives Brand As 'Delinquent'

By DICK WEST

WASINGTON (UPI) — Even the Senate juvenile delinquency subcommittee probably would agree that television producer Richard Lewis turned in a brilliant feat of creative thinking.

So if his idea didn't pan out too well when reduced to the 21-inch screen, then so much more's the pity.

It was Lewis who conceived, in a flash of inspiration, the basic plan of combining the TV western format with the TV detective format to produce a single new all-purpose series.

When you consider the scope and originality of this concept, it fairly takes your breath away. Such a program could have filled a great void in the lives of the nation's multitude of tube-watchers.

I mean, if there is one thing that we have all been waiting for, it's a private eye with saddle sores.

Alas, however, and alack, what finally resulted from Lewis' touch of genius was a program called "Whispering Smith," which recently made its debut on the NBC network.

Judging from the sample episode that was eviewed by memsode that was reviewed by members of the juvenile delinquency subcomittee, I would have to say that Lewis' brainchild has itself become a delinquent.

The subcommittee took a look at the film as part of a new study of the impact of televised crime and violence of youthful viewers. Then it called up Lewis for questioning.

Among the topics discussed was how many lashes with a blacksnake whip a normal mother would give her son if he balked at gunning down the deputy sheriff who had shot the boy's old man.

Lewis said he and his associates settled on five lashes as being about right. He explained that any number above that might have looked "ludicrous."

I would recommend this as a good rule of thumb for other TV producers to follow in filming a flogging. Possibly the five-lash flagellation will become standard in the industry.

Personally, I have always given my own children 20 lashes, a figure I picked up years ago from a book about pirates. However, I am willing to conform to the new pattern.

I am a firm believer in life imitating art. Besides that, I certainly wouldn't want to appear "ludicrous."

Lewis contended there was no danger of children being led astray by a program such as this because law and order prevailed in the end.

During the climactic gun duel, the boy missed the deputy, and his mother, who also was a poor shot, accidentally hit her own daughter in the back.

In my opinion, the only thing wrong with the program was that it went beyond Lewis' original western-detective concept. Somehow or other, this combined format got mixed in with another type of TV serial — the situation comedy.

Castro Tractor Deal Gets Big Plugs Over TV

By FRED DANZIG

NEW YORK (UPI) — Don't be surprised if Jack Paar beats out Fred W. Friendly and Irving Gitlin for the next Emmy in the "public affairs" category.

Since May 31, Paar has staked out large portions of his nightly NBC-TV rear-guard action to help raise funds for the "Tractors for Freedom" committee. Seldom has one issue been explored with as much persistence and intensity on TV.

Paar has virtually turned the show into a telethon. He has presented Eleanor Roosevelt and Walter Reuther to bolster his arguments. And, to rebut them, he has presented Clare Boothe Luce and Sen. Barry Goldwater. Richard Nixon wired his regrets.

Goldwater, in a 20-minute appearance Thursday night, evoked brisk applause with ringing statements about the dangers involved in submitting to Communist "blackmail." Paar, in putting the issue on a basis of reuniting families, went for the heartstrings, but didn't get as much applause.

In a business where performers are reluctant to voice strong opinions on controversial matters, it is understandable when Paar tells viewers that he is out on a limb in this cause, backing an unpopular movement. (Frankly, I'm inclined to think that President Kennedy has more at stake.)

Every performer who has attracted some front page attention seems to get caught up in a cause, and Paar is following that tradition with his tractile tractor pitch. Most of the TV stars, however, join the battle against juvenile delinquency, or crabgrass, or disease.

There are drawbacks in having Paar pursue a political issue: viewers may tend to discuss, not the issue, but Paar's role in it. (His role in this one has been quite emotional. There are times when the campaign, as set forth by Paar, can be called, "tears for tractors.") Some viewers say he should stick to entertainment.

But I hope Paar ignores such criticism and sees fit to present public figures in informal debates about vital issues. The feature carries with it a distinct brand of stimulation and strikes me as an inevitable development in TV's growing process. And Parr's growing-up process, too.

Calmness Hints Dominican Rule May Be Relaxed

CIUDAD TRUJILLO (UPI)—Inter-American investigators said Thursday night the Dominican Republic seems "calm, tranquil and orderly," creating the possibility that sanctions imposed last year may be relaxed.

The fact-finders sent here by the Organization of American States conferred Thursday with President Joaquin Balaguer and Foreign Minister Porfirio Herra Baez. They were to talk today with Gen. Rafael Trujillo Jr., son of the assassinated Dominican strong man.

Requiem masses Thursday in most Dominican churches ended formal mourning for the elder Trujillo, shot down on a seafront highway near here last week.

The official radio, which had played only mournful classics for the past 10 days, resumed normal programming and hotels prepared to reopen gambling rooms closed since the dictator's death.

Augusto Arango, Panamanian chief of the investigating team, told newsmen Thursday night that the OAS group expects soon to visit "some place where political prisoners are confined."

Arango said the investigators probably would make their inspection without Dominican officials or newsmen present so the prisoners would not be afraid to speak freely.

Kiwanians Hear Rev. Martinez

Pampa Kiwanians were addressed Friday noon by Angel Martinez, evangelist, who is concluding a week's engagement at the First Baptist Church today.

The speaker stressed the importance of placing the spiritual side of life ahead of the material.

"Too many of us believe that money will get us anything," the Rev. Mr. Martinez said.

"However," he added, "character is more important than cash. God is more important than gold, and money may buy acquantances but not friendship."

Rev. Martinez winds up his evangelistic series at the First Baptist Church tonight.
