

Court considers move to restore confidence in DA

By Juanita Stepp

In an attempt to bring to a close the on-going controversy regarding the financial records of the local district attorney, the Floyd County Commissioners are considering engaging in an independent audit of all records originating in the 110th Judicial District Attorney's office.

Meeting in a called session on Wednesday, August 1, 1990, the Floyd County Commissioners Court reviewed a resolution calling for an independent audit of all financial records, both local and state, of the 110th District Attorney, Becky McPherson.

The resolution was prepared following the submission of a written request by McPherson.

The Commissioners Court, if the resolution is approved during regular session on August 13, will request an audit be prepared within 60 days by the accounting firm Davis, Kinard & Co., the regular auditing agency of Floyd County. The Commissioners Court considers the audit to be "an imperative public necessity" to "restore public confidence in the office of the District Attorney."

A motion by Precinct 2 Commissioner Floyd Jackson tentatively approved the resolution, pending publication and a final vote on August 13. Precinct 1 Commissioner Connie Bearden provided the second and the motion passed by unanimous approval at the morning session.

The resolution will be published in the Floyd County Hesperian on August 9, 1990, and placed on the agenda of the regular August session of Commissioners Court on August 13. At that time, a final vote will be taken determining if the audit will be ordered.

The possibility exists, according to County Judge Bill Hardin, that no additional audit will be necessary if the 110th District Court orders an independent audit prior to August 13. A district court order appointing an accounting firm other than the one currently under appointment by Judge David Cave would negate the necessity of the audit considered by the resolution stated Hardin.

Other action at the called session was the approval of a farm contract for J.T.

Myrick as submitted by Ted Anderson. This was approved on a motion by Bearden, seconded by Precinct 4 Commissioner Kay Crabtree.

Present at the session were Judge Hardin, Commissioners Bearden, Jackson, Crabtree and George Taylor and the Hesperian reporter.

Punkin Day Committee begins planning

Plans are off and rolling for 'Punkin Days' 1990. The Centennial celebration promises to be bigger and better than ever.

Still a young celebration for the county, the committee for this fourth 'Punkin Days' party is already busy planning activities and organizing committees.

New games have been added to the old favorites, to keep the fun going on and the visitors in town longer. The 'Punkin Day' committee has been blessed with many people willing and eager to work on the festival.

The biggest change for this year's 'Punkin Days' is the scheduling of the costume contest and decoration contest. Because the football team will be playing in Friona on October 26, the committee decided to have the costume judging contest on Wednesday, October 31. The committee also hopes this date will enable the schools to participate more in the costume contest. Hopefully students will be allowed to dress up in school on that day, and can then come to the contest afterwards.

The judging of the best decorated business and home will also take place on October 31. The judging will be handled by Bill Gray. The games and arts and crafts will still be on the last Saturday, October 27.

A new sign, paid for by pumpkin growers, is in the making and will be placed on the Ralls Highway, on Steve Brown's property, across from Scott Faulkenberry's "pumpkin patch."

New black and gold T-shirts, and green and gold T-shirts have been ordered by the committee. Sweat shirts and green coaches jackets will probably be on sale 'Punkin Days' and later on in the fall. Due to the lack of immediate funds, the committee will have to wait to order the popular sweat shirts and jackets and may have to make special orders only.

T-shirt, sweat shirt and jacket sales will be handled by Kellie Williams and T.L. Holland on 'Punkin Day'.

The committee also heard a report that Ronnie Graham, Tommy Assiter and Heptad Vegetables have purchased "pumpkin stickers", to be placed on pumpkins being shipped out of the county. These stickers will be similar to the stickers used on "Chiquita Bananas", and will help publicize Floydada during the pumpkins travels.

Any pumpkin grower who would like to purchase some of these stickers should contact the Chamber of Commerce or Heptad Vegetables.

Floydada youngsters are already busy growing their own pumpkins, competing for the biggest pumpkin grown by October 27. The seeds provided by the Floydada Chamber of Commerce were planted earlier and will hopefully produce many large pumpkins for the contest. Johnny Summers, manager of Pay-N-Save, will once again arrange the prize of a dirt bike to the child with the largest pumpkin.

Many new games will be tried out on adventurous participants, the Saturday of 'Punkin Days'. Included in the new games will be a Cow Patty Bingo. Lucky organizers of this event are Kathy Himes, Lin Tipton, Becky Emert, Debra Graham, Ann Jones, Nettie Ruth Whittle and Layne Kirk.

Kyle Smith and Eric Cornelius are chairmen of the games committee and promise to bring back the popular wheelbarrow race and the carving and drawing contest, besides a lot of new games for all ages. Joining them on the committee are: Bill Smith, Nick Long, Bobby Gilliland and Becky McPherson.

Monte Williams and Larry Ogden are once again in charge of the pumpkin rolling race. They will be joined by helpers Dennis Ross and Kathy Ross. Penny Ogden will be in charge of the popular jail and will be helped out by jailers Marty Lucke, S.D. Himes and Lennie Gilroy. The trustee will be Howell Farnsworth.

The 5k and Fun Run will return for the energetic and healthy. Anne Carthel heads up this committee, and is joined by Kay Brotherton, Daphna Simpson, Joyce Owens, James Hale and Clar Schacht.

Hulon Carthel will be helped with the Guess The Weight Contest, clean-up and props by committee members Joe Jones, Ronnie Graham, and Brent Crossland.

Arrangements for the arts and crafts booths will be handled by Dawnell Smith, Neta Marble, Deedie Covington, Brenda Heflin and Vickie Norrell. The charge for the booth rental is $10.00 each. Registration forms can be obtained by contacting Dawnell Smith, at 983-5522. Space under the pavilion will be on a first come first serve basis.

The Women's Chamber will once again sponsor a costume dance on Saturday night, October 27. The Convertibles, a country-western group from Lubbock, will perform.

Anyone who would like to serve on a committee should contact Julianne Cornelius. Eager workers will always be welcomed and appreciated.

NEW DEPUTY--Darin Smith joined the Floyd County Sheriff's Office as a deputy on Aug. 1. Smith, a native of Childress, put himself through the Panhandle Regional Law Enforcement Academy, Amarillo. He is 24 and single. He is replacing eight-year veteran David Hart, who resigned July 31 as an active duty officer, but will still be serving as a reserve deputy while pursuing his photography career in video. --Staff photo

Governor appoints Towery to Texas Judicial Council

Governor Bill Clements this week announced the appointment of Ken Towery, owner of The Floyd County Hesperian and The Lockney Beacon, to fill one of nine "citizen member" positions on the Texas Judicial Council. The appointment is to a term ending June 30, 1995.

The Council is charged with the duty of continuously studying "the organization, rules, procedures and practices, work accomplished, results, and uniformity" of the discretionary powers of state courts. The Council is also charged with the responsibility of recommending methods for improvements in the named areas of study.

It must file a complete report annually to the Governor and the Texas Supreme Court concerning its activities and recommendations.

The Council is made up of 19 members, 10 of which are "ex-officio", and nine of which are appointed to specific terms by the Governor. Of the nine "citizen members" appointed by the Governor, seven must be licensed attorneys in Texas, and two must be "non-attorneys." One of the two must be a journalist, and it is that position to which Clements appointed Towery.

The "ex-officio" members include the Chief Justice of the Texas Supreme Court, the Presiding Judge of the Court

By Alice Gilroy

I was asked a question last week that really made me stop and think. I've been thinking about it ever since.

I was telling someone my work history and how I came from police work into this business. They asked me what I would be doing if I had not come to work here. I was at a loss for words (if you can believe that).

What would you say? If you would be somewhere else—why aren't you? Are you happy doing what you're doing? Would you change your lifestyle?

The only answer I could come up with was if I wasn't working at the paper, I would be a full time mommy. So why aren't I a full time mommy. There is another good question.

I feel guilty when I'm at work because I'm not at home. I feel guilty when I'm at home, because I'm not at work. It's the Mother's Guilt Syndrome. Only mommy's get it. There is no cure. Your children see to that.

I do know that I would not be a uniformed police woman anymore. If I had had my kid while I was a cop I might have felt different, but now I would be too scared to be a cop.

That might sound like a silly confession but it is true. If I was in uniform and got a call to search a dark building after a burglar alarm, or had to fight with a drunk or drugged out crazy person, I feel like I would have my kid on my mind the whole time.

I would be worried about what would happen to him without his mommy to take care of him. You can't be worried about those things when you answer your calls.

I don't know how daddy policemen do it. I guess they think different than mommys. Daddy's know that mommy will take care of things if something happens to them.

This is nothing against mothers in the police business. Many of them are supporting their families alone without a husband. I admire them and respect them, but my heart goes out to them.

It's funny how you change your ideas as you get older. When I first started in police work in '76 there were very few women in the business. Hardly any of them were in the patrol division. I thought I was pretty neat stuff.

When I went to get my first uniform, they didn't have women's slacks so I wore mens that didn't fit right. The uniform company had trouble finding a Sam Browne (that's the gun belt) that would fit me. They gave me a meter maid hat and I wore dorky looking black loafers.

When I went to work the first day in uniform my first partner took me into the back room and laid down the law. "Get rid of that hat or you'll ride by yourself. I'll give you two days to get yourself some boots."

Well at least he was honest. He also never gripped about a female partner.

I trained for some time with a partner, before I was ever allowed to go on a call by myself. The hardest thing I had to do at first was get over the silly feeling I got every time I talked on the walkie talkie.

The first call I took when I was alone was only given to me because my partner thought it was nothing. It was an alarm call in a room in the basement of a building. The alarm was always going off. We had checked it a million times.

Well my partner had to answer the call of nature at the office. The burglar alarm call came in and he told me to go get it and come back to pick him up afterwards. I was excited that I got to go alone and excited that I found the building by myself.

Down in the basement I went. I walked confidently up to the door of the room, sure that I would just reach down and rattle the door to find it locked. But as I came up to it I noticed it cracked open and I could see part of three fingers from inside the dark room holding the door closed and just slightly ajar. Obviously someone was hiding behind the door.

I slammed myself up against the wall and I have to admit I got scared. I remember the tight feeling in my stomach. The first thought was, "SOMEONE SHOULD CALL THE COPS!" Then it dawned on me that that was ME! That's what I was there for. That's why I went to an academy. I was supposed to be trained.

I mentally started down my checklist of what to do. First thing was call for backup. I grabbed my walkie talkie and it wouldn't work down in that deep basement. GREAT!!! I'M GONNA KILL MY PARTNER IF I LIVE THROUGH THIS!!

To make a long story short, I did what I was supposed to do and got him out, searched, handcuffed and back upstairs into the back of the patrol car. It took quite some time for my heart to quit racing. Thank goodness the burglar didn't know he was my first.

After a few months in the business I learned that I didn't have to put up fronts for the men I worked with. I learned that their hearts raced too after stumbling over burglars, etc. They got scared too. This wasn't TV, this was real life. They had nightmares just like me. The only ones who seemed to understand were other cops or ex-cops.

It wasn't until I got out of the business, nine years later, that I realized how much stress I had been under. A brick wall had been lifted off of me. I could breathe and I liked meeting nice people again.

The problem about leaving police work at first was another guilt feeling. I felt like I was a deserter during war. I didn't want other cops to think I was giving up or running off.

My chief made me feel better about the change when I told him what I was going to do. He said, "So, you're going to lay down the sword and pick up the pen."

Maybe that's why I work here. I know I like what I'm doing now, and I liked what I was doing then. I just wish I could be a full time mommy too.

Father-daughter exhibit graces bank

A most unusual and interesting exhibit of art is being displayed throughout the month of August at the First National Bank of Floydada. A shared exhibition by Kathy W. Whitley of Crowell, Texas, and her father, Ralph White of Austin, Texas, promises to be a rare artistic experience for this area.

Born in Austin, K. W. Whitley has always nurtured a combined appreciation of horses, nature and art. She was continuously exposed to artistic creativeness as her father, a fine artist and professor of fine art at the University of Texas for 36 years, stressed and encouraged his children to express themselves through art.

Whitley's work displays strong emotion and vital realism stemming from years of experience as a horsewoman. Her works present an artistic portrayal of contemporary cowboy and ranch life. Technical knowledge was gained through attendance of the art school at the University of Texas. A thorough working knowledge of art was honed during six years practicing her craft in illustration, ad design and art direction.

Among the awards Whitley garnered during that time are Merit Awards from the New York Art Director's Club, New York Creativity Show, Houston Addys, Austin Addys and Print Magazine. Career recognition gave way to the yearning to be in close proximity to horses, uncluttered horizons and nature's moods, bringing Whitley and her husband, Gary, to move to Crowell.

Residing in this area, Whitley is able to visit such ranches as the 6666 and the Y Ranch, finding an abundance of authentic working material to absorb and narratively redefine with paintbrush and pencil. Enconced in a new studio with western and southern exposures open to vast plains and mesquite, Whitley spends her time painting, riding and exploring the foundational history of Foad County.

Whitley shares the stage this month with her Father, Ralph White. White was born in Minneapolis, Minnesota, and studied art at the Minneapolis School of Art, the University of Minnesota and Pratt Institute. As an Army Air Corp cadet in training during World War II, White met Ward Lockwood who had left university teaching for active military duty. It was through Lockwood's invitation that White came to Texas. From 1946 until retiring in 1982, White taught at the University of Texas at Austin.

Through the years, White's paintings have reflected his experiences. Among his artistic efforts are drawings from his time as an Army Air Corp cadet and paintings brushed during a summer as a fire guard in Glacier National Park in Montana. Early in his career, White painted representational works depicting rodeo images.

Since the 1960s, White has filled his canvasses with concentric rings of color made with swirls of paint. Based on the varied Texas landscape, these works were, in White's words, influenced by "observing for twenty years the rising sun from our hilltop home west of Austin." One of his best known works titled "Sky Song" is representative of this aspect of his work.

The current exhibit at the First National Bank of Floydada includes large watercolor paintings completed during recent travels through Ireland, Spain, Italy and Mexico.

In keeping with the tradition of offering the best to the community, the First National Bank of Floydada is proud to present this unique display during regular banking hours through the month of August.

Memorial brings rain and ropers together

By Marisue Potts

Smiles were the order of the day when the roping competition of the 1990 Burleson Memorial, July 20-22, was delayed due to a welcomed rain. The much-needed moisture relieved the high temperatures and persistent winds of July which had rendered the Caprock region tinder dry.

For the past seven years the proceeds from the Memorial Roping, which takes place on a ranch between Flomot and Whiteflat, has provided twenty-two scholarships for the Ranch Management division of Clarendon Jr. College. In addition, seven high school students and six 4-H members from Floydada have been awarded scholarships.

According to sponsors, Teen and Lou Burleson, the six different categories of Team Roping drew 503 entries with the roping, interrupted by rain, continuing far into the night at the lighted arena.

From Lockney, Clinton Ware and his partner Dickie Garrison of Smithville, earned the beautiful gold and silver engraved buckles made by Frontier Trophies, New Mexico, in the One Over Forty division. Other header and heeler buckle winners were Dale Smith, Quitaque, and Brent Whitaker, Matador; Guy Elliott and Scott Stone; Buddy Adair, Lubbock, and Cloyd Condon; Randy Crump, Hedley, and Scott Stone; Kirk Brock, Levelland, and Dickie Garrison, Smithville.

For the fourth time in seven years, the Hedley team of Jr. Crump and Andy Wheatly, captured the Pasture Roping title, winning prize bits made by Wade Brannon of Silverton. In this event a steer is given a running head start into a wide open pasture before the barrier pops and the header gallops after him. Following close behind, even when the steer heads for the watching crowd, pickups, and trailers parked at a "safe" distance on a hill overlooking the action, is the heeler. With a bit of luck and lots of skill, this team stretched out their steer in the fastest time.

Forty six entrants vied for three sets of coveted bits made by Jim Bo Humphreys of Dickens, with one set donated by Turner and Turner of Flomot and another by D.M. Cogdell of Floydada. Paducah's Keith Slover on "Dee Misty Bar" won the Open Cutting division. Billy Max West, Snyder, on "Oklalena" was first in the Novice Cutting contest. Todd Wilson's steer, "Dandy's Prescription," with Jim Slover up captured the Ranch Cutting Horse prize.

Attempting to cut out three very independent flop-eared bovines, drive them away from the herd and pen them without a "wreck" in a diminutive corral in the middle of the arena, were thirty-nine teams. The team of captain Walt Mayberry posted the best time, walking away with a set of Quitaque Saddle Pads, one of which was donated by Rocky Vinson, Matador.

In the colorful new event of Team Branding, Teresa Whitaker chalk-branded a calf delivered to her by husband Brent Whitaker and flanked by Dickie Garrison and Dennis Gaines. A cash prize was the reward for their efforts.

The Lockney team of Cummings and McQuhae tossed a surprise victory in the washer pitch contest, winning a set of buckles made by Frontier Trophies of New Mexico.

One of the highlights of the three day affair is the Youth Playday. The friendly competition, sometimes marred by tears, was kicked off by a stick horse race for the very young. While Colt Brock, son of Kirk and Beverly Brock, Levelland, and Matt McPherson, son of Steve and Becky McPherson, Lockney, posted winners, sweet little Sage Brannon, daughter of Brent and Tammy Brannon, Whiteflat, was left at the starting gate. Her beautiful mount forgot to run.

Winning the Junior Barrel Race was Dana McCandless, daughter of Don and Lanell McCandless of Floydada. The cowgirl placed sixth in the stake race. Dana's little sister Lana made a good showing with a second in the PeeWee Stake Race and two fifth places in the flag race and barrel race.

Other local youth winners who placed in the PeeWee Division were April Fortenberry, daughter of John and Cindi Fortenberry, with a third in the PeeWee Stake Race; Velvet Johnson, daughter of the Carlton Johnsons of South Plains, fourth (and a sixth in the barrel race); Matt McPherson, son of Steve and Becky McPherson of Lockney, fifth.

In the Junior division, Lindy Probasco, daughter of Mitch Probasco of Floydada and Tana Miller of Lubbock, earned a third in the Potato Race as well as the Stake Race. Carson Johnson, brother to Velvet, came in second in the flag race.

First place winners in the stake races included David Whitaker, Matador; Andy Paul Jones, Roaring Springs; and Jody Scott, Matador. In the potato races where the object is to deposit a spud in a barrel as the horse circles and then race to the finish line, winners were Tony Thomas, Plainview; Dusty Whitaker, Matador; Lacy Parks, Roaring Springs.

Flag race division winners were repeaters Tony Thomas; Dusty Whitaker; and Lacy Parks. Barrel race division winners were David Whitaker, Matador; Dana McCandless, Floydada; and Lacy Parks.

Jody Scott, son of Johnny and Debra Scott of Matador, won the prize headstall made by Alvin Durham of Roaring Springs for the boy's top youth award. The girl's top award, also a headstall made by Durham, went to Lacy Parks, daughter of Harold and Barbara Parks of Roaring Springs.

"Tekka," mount of David, Dusty, and Brent Whitaker, took the All Round Horse award in both adult and youth divisions earning two breast collars handtooled by Durham, the Roaring Springs craftsman.

For their efforts in the playday events, despite the ratings, the ribbons, or the trophies, the Burlesons declared all the youthful competitors as "winners." To all those who donated prizes, money, the use of cattle, or their time and sweat to the running of this year's memorial, they extend a grateful "thank you" on behalf of the present and future scholarship winners.

BUCKLE WINNERS--Clinton Ware (left) and Dickie Garrison were named winners of Burleson Memorial Roping buckles in One Over Forty division of team roping on July 21.

PTA group organized at R.C. Andrews Elementary

Fifty-six members were enrolled at the PTA organizational meeting held at R.C. Andrews Elementary on Monday, July 9. This new PTA will begin its year in August when school starts. Preparations are being made at this time for programs and projects to be held during the school year.

Mrs. Ellen Enriquez, school principal, called the meeting to order. Lance McHam led the group in the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag. The Rev. Melvin Smith followed the pledge with a word of prayer.

Mrs. Enriquez then stated that the purpose of this meeting was to organize a PTA unit at R.C. Andrews school. She introduced guests from Lubbock who were representatives of District 14 PTA. They were: Nancy Neal, District 14 Field Representative; Bobbe Crawford, District 14 President; and Diane Pierce, District 14 Regional Vice President.

Diane Pierce spoke to the group about PTA. She explained some of the programs done through PTA and gave information on the PTA itself. She also mentioned some of the projects and programs that PTA supports.

Mrs. Enriquez gave her support in organizing a PTA unit at R.C. Andrews and explained how she felt that a lot of good things would come from having a local unit at this school. She then asked for a motion to organize as a PTA. Sherry Hale made the motion to organize and the second came from Judy Lloyd. The motion was carried.

Debra Jo Fawver presented the by-laws for discussion and approval. These by-laws were adopted. At this time a break was taken for refreshments and for enrollment of members.

Following the break, Angela Hollowell read the nominating committee's slate of officer nominees. This slate of nominees were elected as officers.

The new officers are President, Debra Jo Fawver; 1st Vice President, Ilda Vasquez; 2nd Vice President, Judy Schacht; 3rd Vice President, Patty McHam; Treasurer, Barbara Anderson; Secretary, Leah Lackey. Polly Campbell was appointed as historian.

Mrs. Fawver told the group about some ideas which had been presented for the PTA to consider. Some of these included: book fair, Halloween carnival, newspaper drive, aluminum can drive, school yearbook and concession stand on play day.

The scheduled meeting dates for the school year are: October 22, December 3, January 28, March 11, April 29, and May 13. The dues for membership are $2.00, single membership; $3.00, couple's membership. The membership theme is "Grow With Your Child Through PTA."

Any questions about this PTA can be directed to any of the above officers or Mrs. Ellen Enriquez, principal at R.C. Andrews.

Lake Mackenzie Fishing Report

Officials at Lake Mackenzie have had reports of "Crappie still being caught at the mouth of the creek on minnows at about 18 to 24 feet deep."

July 26, Dolores Rossi of Tulia caught a 10 lb. 5 oz. blue cat, which is a new lake record. She was using dough bait and fishing at Tule Creek.

David Frizzell of Lockney caught a 3 lb. 10 oz. largemouth at Cope Creek on July 27 using an artificial rat.

July 28 a 1-1/2 lb. largemouth was caught on minnows at the second boat ramp, by James Steffey of Spade.

Carl Lemon's News & Views From Cedar Hill

WEATHER

The MONSOON season is upon us! The week has been a virtual carbon copy of the week before, even to the light shower Saturday afternoon followed by a heavier rain during the early hours of Sunday morning. Only 1.08 at the Listening post compared to 1.10 a week ago, but not all of last week's moisture was gone so this rain was more visible; a little even stood in the cotton middles for a short time.

Rainfall was much heavier, from 2.0 to 2.5 inches, along the old community boundary between Fairview and Cedar Hill. Earlier, on Friday afternoon, they had gotten nearly another half inch that the rest of us missed altogether. On the other side of the community, along the rim of the canyons north of the old Woods/Finley place, now the Burleson Ranch, and Lindsey Lackey's place, then on westward to the Silverton highway, 0.70 to 0.90 were the usual readings.

Yep! Some of those Fairviewans must be living right! Now don't be skeptical because there are still people living in old Fairview. Three families are clustered not far from the old school-site at the end of FM 786: Lee Burton and daughter Carolyn live where Stick Brown's Country Store used to stand; the Brian Sanders family live in the old Earnest Walls house; the Shirley Moore Family live where Clyde Irwin raised his family; and the Les Nixons, on further south near the old Fairview and Campbell school district border, call themselves Fairviewans too. There must be nearly a baker's dozen of them still in there showing folks what Cedar Hill will be like ere long. Evidently just a few people's living rightously is enough to open the windows of heaven and pour out a goodly portion of rain.

Come to think of it Edna Gilley has a few cattle on the old Neff place in north east Fairview, and she has sown some hay over there. She seems to be Cedar Hill's chief rainmaker so that may explain the heavy rains in that area. But, since she didn't exactly get washed away on her home place, we must give the credit to that "dandy dozen" good people over in Fairview.

Any way the week's temperature has been wonderful; days, hot but bearable; and the nights cool enough to make a light covering feel very good for sleeping.

CROP COMMENTS

COTTON will once again be king of the crops on Cedar Hill's irrigated farms in 1990. A little more hoeing, and finishing out this time across with the water, should put and end to this year's production costs. Of course the boll worms may send spray planes across the fields again. If that happens growth inhibitors to aid boll set and limit stalk size will undoubtedly be included in the spray mix. However night time temperatures are already flirting with that sixty degree low which many entomologists tell us renders worm eggs infertile. The unhappy paradox of that situation is that when it is too cool for worms to hatch it is also cool enough to slow, or virtually halt, the maturing of the cotton plants.

The name "King" may also apply to cotton on the county's dryland farms, but on those farms it will not be a term of such great distinction. Dryland cotton stood proud and tall early last week, but by Thursday the layer of surface moisture had soaked down, blended, as it were, with the dry soil beneath until cotton roots could no longer extract enough water to meet the demands of the growth above. It had already wilted and once again was looking very sad by the time the week-end showers arrived. Nature will have to meter water to our dryland cotton on a timely basis and in precise amounts or the crop will result in a great disappointment. Rains for our dryland cotton must travel a perilous path that runs between too little and too much or net returns will be low.

HAY: The outlook for the 1990 hay crop has made a drastic change for the better. The rains of the past two weeks have presented most cattlemen with a vertible roller coaster sensation. In mid-July ranchers were in the depths of despair and giving serious thought to their options: either purchase hay for their winter needs, if indeed any could be found, thereby adding to financial burdens that were already too heavy; or sell off a portion, if not all, of their herds. Now, in early August, their roses of hope are in bloom again; roses with very few thorns!

Hay drills were rolling by Tuesday, July 24, even though the ground was still partly black. Some ranchers managed to seed as much as 100 acres per day and by Saturday morning they were doubling back to catch the spots that had been too wet on their first pass.

Others, moving at a more deliberate pace, had their drills oiled and ready to start last Monday morning. The week-end rains delayed those plans so that most Floyd County hay will now have to be classed as "August seeded hay."

Comparing to a year ago, the Aug. 3, 1989, issue, N&V related that some fields had gotten up ragged stands of hay with many large spots that had dried out. Rains later that month germinated those dried-out seeds and a very irregular growth pattern resulted. The 1989 hay crop was adequate, but just barely, and produced a below average tonnage. At present the 1990 hay is booming out of the ground; not having been stunted, it is full of vigor and ready to romp! All it needs are warm sunny days and a soaking rain :: or two :: and a favorable frost date.

WHEAT: Wheat prospects for '91 continue to improve; last Sunday's rain came so quickly behind the previous one that no plowing could be sandwiched in between. That allowed a much better germination and emergence of the seeds and plants that needed to be destroyed. Now farmers will be able to accomplish more with one plowing than they sometimes do with two.

It is hard to imagine a more contrasting picture than is presented by the moisture situation here in Floyd County. In mid-June, when wheat harvest had been completed and cotton began to show it's first signs of moisture stress, farmers moved in with their plows to work up their wheat stubble. Some found that the ground, having been well protected from wind and sun by the straw, still had wet spots from the May rains and needed more time for drying. Finally they were able to finish their first plowing, but now, with dryland cotton remaining under moisture stress, wheat farmers are back to twiddling their thumbs, waiting, once again, for it to get dry enough to plow.

PEOPLE: THE LEANING CEDARS

The Leaning Cedars of Cedar Hill are going defunct! The regulars have all graduated, temporarily that is; and no new ones have enrolled. We stepped over the line into Fairview, thought we might borrow somebody from over there to put under the canopy of our Leaning Cedars. At the outset of a visit with Carolyn Burton she said, "I'm fine", so there went one prospect. As we talked it soon became apparent that Fairview didn't have enough citizens, leaning or otherwise, to get into the people lending business. At the end of the conversation Carolyn was asked again, "Are you sure you are O.K.?"

of Criminal Appeals, plus the chairman and immediate past chairman of the Senate Jurisprudence Committee, the chairman and immediate past chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, two justices of the court of appeals designated by the Governor, and two presiding judges of the administrative judicial districts designated by the Governor.

Towery currently owns The Floyd County Hesperian and The Lockney Beacon, The Crosby County News-Chronicle, and The Belton Journal. He also now serves as Chairman of the Board for the Corporation of Public Broadcasting. He was appointed to that Board by former President Reagan in 1981 for a five-year term, and reappointed to that position by the President to a term expiring in 1991.

Towery told the Hesperian he was looking forward to service on the Council.

"It's another of those non-paying jobs, and I need that like I need another hole in the head. But as anyone who has read my writing over the years knows, I have long had an abiding interest in the Texas judicial system. I don't think any of us ought to turn down a chance to do our bit, however small, to at least try to make improvements," he said.

This time the response was sharp, even a little testy, "Of course I'm fine!" :: Well, we tried!

In lieu of something current, let's move back exactly twelve months to the first Thursday in August of 1989. We read there that Edna Gilley got fed up with being waited on hand and foot, raised her hackles and announced to the world that she had resolved to go it alone. From henceforth she would take care of herself alone or she would go uncared for. She made good on it except for the time when she had a totally unrelated operation on her knee.

FROM THE POST YARD

The Fortenberry reunion, always held on the first Saturday in August, has gotten too big for a one day affair. This year it will kick off at the Massie Activity Center in Floydada around five or six o'clock in the evening on Friday, August 10. The evening activities will feature a cook-out, and numerous games and activities suitable for the different age groups. After a few hours pause Friday night, Saturday will begin with gravy, biscuits, bacon or sausage, and eggs at around six thirty A. M. :: Y'all come!

Just arrived at the good parts and been hit by that deadline again!

Good Business

The reason people pass one door To patronize another store, is Not because the busier place Has better silks or gloves or lace Or cheaper prices, but it lies In pleasant words and smiling eyes; The only difference, I believe, is In the treatment folks receive!

There is alot of truth in that message.

Noland earns awards at basketball camp

Aaron Noland attended Mark Adams Basketball Camp at West Texas University July 22-27 at Canyon. This was a week of intense drills and basketball skills. There were intramural games daily.

There were several awards given in each age group during the week. Aaron received a first place trophy for the Free Shot Competition, 2nd place in Hot-Shot Award and the Hustling Award.

Highlight of the camp was a visit from Eastern New Mexico basketball coach. He was the coach that drafted Larry Bird at Indiana State several years ago.

Advertising may bring a customer in for the first time- but repeat shopping visits are determined, to a great extent, by the treatment received.

Most businesses give good treatment to their customers. They understand the value of good customer relations. Still, Chambers of Commerce often receive calls from those who believe they have been wronged by a business, and they want to pour out their complaints on someone's shoulder.

Of course, the Chamber hears only one side. Many of these complaints are unjustified. Others seem to be legitimate but often the result of the misunderstanding. In such cases, we advise them to take the matter direct to the owner or manager and see if the problem can be settled in a manner satisfactory to both parties. What bothers me is when the caller says he or she has tried all avenues—without any satisfaction and then states: "Well, I'm going to tell my friends about this store and as for me- I can get the same item or brand in (nearby town), so in the future I will be shopping there."

Our businesses deserve the patronage of local residents and they also need the continued patronage of residents in nearby counties. Good customer relations is a must if we want more people to shop at home.

Water seminar set for August 15

Managers and operators of Panhandle-area water systems utilizing groundwater from the Ogallala Aquifer are invited to attend a free, one-day seminar on water loss reduction and water meter application sizing, beginning at 8 a.m., August 15, at the Sheraton Inn, 505 Avenue Q, in Lubbock. The seminar is sponsored by the Texas Rural Water Association.

"Water utility customers expect their systems to be operated efficiently and economically. System managers attending this one-day seminar will learn how to undertake a comprehensive water audit. Using the information obtained from the audit, water utilities can implement cost-effective solutions to reduce unaccounted-for water, reduce underground leakage, and improve meter reading, billing and record keeping," says Larry Brown of the TRWA.

He adds that the Texas Department of Health has authorized seven hours of credit toward operator water licensing requirements for attendance at this seminar.

The seminar will be presented by James B. Smith, president of JBS Associates of Houston. Smith has been actively involved in water system accountability and water conservation programs for 17 years. He has developed and presented training programs for the American Water Works Association, the National Rural Water Association, the American Society of Civil Engineers and numerous state organizations.

For more information or to register for the free seminar, contact the Texas Rural Water Association, 6300 La Calma, Suite 120, Austin, Texas 78752 or call (512) 458-8121.

Floyd County listed as number nine cotton producer in 1989

Official figures just received by Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. show the 25 PCG counties surrounding Lubbock in 1989 produced 1,608,200 480-pound net weight bales, less than one-half the 3.234 million grown the previous year and only 72 percent of the area's 10-year 2.226 million average.

Acreage and production totals of all counties in Texas are published each year by the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service (TASS), an agency of the National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS).

The figures in the past have been released in late May or early June, but according to a TASS official were delayed this year by a re-ordering of "due dates" for final reports on the various crops.

Last year's High Plains production still accounted for a normal 56 percent of all Texas Upland cotton, but only 13.2 percent of U.S. production, compared to the 20.6 percent of national production in 1988. Planted acres in the 25 counties in 1989 totaled 2.813 million, of which only 2.12 million remained for harvest, an abandonment of 24.6 percent.

Area-wide per-acre yield came to 364.1 pounds compared to a 10-year average of 353.4 pounds.

PCG's analysis of separate irrigated and non-irrigated figures in the TASS report indicates that about 402,000 of the 692,000 abandoned acres were classified as irrigated, primarily cotton lost to hailstorms. The remaining 290,000 abandoned acres, in the report's dryland section, for the most part failed for lack of rainfall.

An additional indication of drought conditions is the 237-pound per harvested acres yield from dryland versus the 497-pound irrigated yield. Also, dryland planted acreage made up a little

Of Texas' top 10 cotton producing counties in 1989, only Hidalgo County, in tenth place, is found outside the High Plains area. Ranking from one through less than 53 percent of the area's total in 1989, a surprising departure from the 60 percent of acreage planted on non-irrigated acres in both 1987 and 1988.

nine, in order, are Gaines, Lubbock, Lynn, Hockley, Terry, Crosby, Lamb, Dawson, and Floyd.

The following chart shows 1989 planted and harvested acres, yields per harvested acre and total production in 480-pound net weight bales for each of the 25 PCG counties.

Agriculture plays important role in everyday lives

Remember those stories you heard as a child about milking an uncooperative cow, picking crops by hand at harvest time, or how anything could be repaired with a strand of baling wire? We have all heard members of our families reminisce about the experiences they had while living on or visiting a farm.

Unfortunately, as America's population continues to shift from rural to urban areas, there are fewer opportunities to experience farm life and learn about agriculture. As a result, our understanding and appreciation of agriculture's role in our daily lives has declined.

Webster's Dictionary defines agriculture as "the science or art of cultivating the soil, producing crops, and raising livestock and in varying degrees, the preparation of these products for man's use and their disposal (as by marketing)."

However, agriculture is more than just food and fiber. It is forest products, tobacco, greenhouse and nursery products, the cattle industry, the horse industry, lawn and grass seeds, pet food and much more. Approximately 21 million people assist in the production, preparation and distribution of agriculture and its products.

Agriculture plays a major role in our national economy. According to the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service in Austin, some national benefits of agriculture are as follows:

- * Agriculture accounts for 17 percent of the nation's Gross National Product (GNP), and each $1 billion sale of agricultural products provides jobs for 30,000 to 35,000 people and adds $2 billion to the GNP.

- * Agriculture creates a vast support industry to help farmers and ranchers with their production. Each year, American producers spend $10 billion for tractors and other agricultural equipment; $6 billion for the operation and repair of farm vehicles, machinery and buildings; $6 billion for fertilizer and lime; and $5 billion for fuel and oil. These production outlays account for $27 billion per year.

- * An American farmer provides food and fiber for 114 people—92 in the United States and 22 overseas. That 114 person figure is up from 73 in 1970 and 46 in 1960.

- * On the average, a farmer spends about $484 to produce food and fiber for one person. For his efforts, the farmer receives 25 cents out of the consumer's dollar spent for food. This is down from 32 cents just 20 years ago.

- * Agriculture helps satisfy the appetite of the American consumer, who ate an average of 82 pounds of beef and veal; 58 pounds of pork; 73 pounds of poultry and 314 pounds of dairy products during 1986.

- Also, individuals consumed an average 157 pounds of flour and cereal products; 91 pounds of fresh fruit; and 79 pounds of fresh vegetables. America's sweet tooth accounted for an average consumption of 152 pounds of sugar and sweeteners in 1986.

In addition to the above national and international benefits, agriculture production is the mainstay of local economies on the Texas High Plains.

Approximately 25 percent of the United States' cotton crop and 56 percent of the cotton produced in Texas is grown on the High Plains. During the three-year period from 1987 to 1989, an average of 457 pounds of cotton lint was produced per acre. Given the area's two million acre cotton base, this crop production has a value of $122 million per year, or $366 million for the three-year period. Using a multiplier effect of three, local economic activity has totaled about $1.098 billion as a result of the cotton harvest from 1987 to 1989.

Grain sorghum grown on the Texas High Plains is manufactured into livestock feed and distributed all across the United States.

Soybeans have proven to be a reliable alternate crop selection when cotton or other crops receive weather damage. In addition, soybeans produced on the High Plains are used for a variety of other products, such as animal feed and cooking oil.

Livestock feeding operations have proven to be a major industry since their inception on the High Plains in the 1950s. Approximately 70 percent of the cattle fed in Texas are located in High Plains feedlots. This is 17 percent of the fed beef in the United States, or about 5.5 million head per year.

Vegetable production continues to increase each year within the region. Potatoes, asparagus, onions, beets, black-eyed peas, green beans, peppers, pumpkins and watermelons are among some of the alternate crops being grown by High Plains producers.

However, a large portion of the agricultural activity on the Texas High Plains could not be sustained without the groundwater resources of the Ogallala Aquifer. Approximately 90 percent of the groundwater pumped within the 5.5 million acre High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 service area is used for agricultural production.

More than 46,000 water well drilling permits (not including domestic wells and pre-District wells) have been issued by the High Plains Water District since 1953. Water yields from these irrigation wells range from less than 100 to more than 1,000 gallons per minute.

It is important to realize the major role agriculture still plays in our lives. Although the number of people living in the rural way has declined, the food and fiber they produce is vital to us all.

For additional information on the use of groundwater in agriculture, contact the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 2930 Avenue Q, Lubbock, Texas 79405 or call (806) 762-0181.

The lights begin to shine in Floydada in 1916

By Will Martin

Most of us are aware of the fact that nothing in nature or life in general ever stands still. Things are either going forward or backward, changing shape or whatever. We can see this by watching things about us and studying history.

I think that most change or progress comes about by people discovering some things by experimenting and some things even by accident. I think that I told in a previous writing how Michael Faraday invented the electromagnet and he and other scientific people took his idea and invented or discovered the forerunner of many things we take for granted today. There were such things as the electric generator, electric motor and many other things.

There was the telephone that worked on the principal of the electromagnet. The telegraph was another and I could name others, but let us go back to electricity that has so many uses that are so useful to the advancement of mankind.

I would think that the early power lines were very short that would cause an electric dynamo to put out its power on the other end of the line. The friction on the wire would cut down its efficiency too much to let it be practical.

Different scientists perfected a wire that was not slowed by friction and the dynamos were perfected to raise voltage so that power could be transmitted possibly a hundred miles or more.

Now they can transmit an electric current of thousands of volts and watts two or three hundred miles from a given dynamo with booster stations ever so often. I don't know how they work or why. I remember a few years ago of a snake getting in the wires of a booster set up. It shorted out all the electricity running from those lines. I never heard how much damage was done.

I had started this writing before I received my copy of the Floyd County Centennial book. I almost backed out finishing my writing. But I said to myself, "Will, if everyone that compiled that wonderful book gave up we would not have such good history of Floyd County for members of future generations to know what it was like in 1990 and many things before. So I said see if you can remember anything the Centennial people didn't have time or space to put in even though they were wonderful with what they did."

I read that electricity first came to Floydada in 1916. I had forgotten the date, but I remember them bringing the poles and wires from the west just a quarter of a mile north of our house. They had run the power line about straight south of Lockney, turning east and reaching Floydada on the northwest corner of town near Emmet Henry's home where they branched off to different parts of town.

In those days they did not have modern machines that we have today. For instance, no machines to dig the holes for the poles. They were hand dug with two long handle devices. One had a sharp pointed digger to dig up the dirt. The other had a curved shovel like end to lift the dirt out of the hole. It usually took all of a day to dig a post hole as deep as they had to dig a hole. They told me the digger received $5.00 per hole.

In those days they didn't have a truck with a crane as now, so they picked up a pole about the middle of the pole and started one end of the pole and let the chain drop it in place. In the early days they put the bottom end where it would, by help of a man, be guided in the hole. About three men would lift it as high as they could by hand. Then they would take long poles with spikes to keep it from turning out of place.

By pushing the pole straight up it would fall in place having a cross arm on top with insulators on top for the wires to be tied too. Of course the cross arms had to be lined up properly the way the high line was going before the pole had dirt filled in and tamped tight. Then men would climb the poles with iron spikes wrapped on their legs to keep from turning an ankle or other injury. I don't remember how they strung the wire from pole to pole. Probably with some sort of wire stretchers. They still use the pole climbers in high lines and telephone work in certain conditions.

The closest power plant to Floydada that I knew about in the early days was Tuco, straight west of Petersburg, just before anyone goes on the Lubbock to Plainview highway. I don't know if it furnished power to Lubbock and Plainview or if these places had booster places in each town. It was owned by the Texas Utilities Power Company.

I always thought that our power in Floydada came from Tuco by way of Plainview and Lockney and on down to Floydada. Tuco had a row of pretty brick houses along the Petersburg road. These were for the employees to live in. The houses are all gone now.

The Texas Utilities Company bought out the New Mexico plant. As things expanded so much that Tuco became too small for their business, they did away with the plant. There is something over there now but I don't know what its purpose is now.

The book says SPC has eight plants in Texas and New Mexico now. One can just imagine the large machines that are powered by electricity, such as gins, manufacturing plants and all things that require a great amount of power. There are the lights that take so much electricity both day and night.

As I mentioned in the starting of this article of the importance of light. I shall try to tell what I remember of two more light and power plants in Floyd County.

First I want to say that Floydada put in its own electric plant but I don't remember just what year.

We moved to town in 1945 and received our electric power from Floydada Light and Power and have been very well pleased all these 45 years. Some of those early years just at World War II's end, we were hard pressed for money and had lots of sickness in the family. We were treated at the office as the same as we paid on the tenth of every month, especially by Jimmie Lou Stewart. She knew I would pay my bill as soon as I possibly could. Times have changed so a person can hardly trust his own grandpa to keep his word.

I was building a room at a time on my little house and the line boys were very patient, helpful and kind to me and watchful of my welfare. I don't know how I would have fared if the city force had not done more than their share in those trying times.

The coming of electricity to the rural part of Floyd and other counties was more important to the counties than I know how to express it. The city way of living came to the country and the country home had every convenience their city cousins had. They had automatic washing machines, automatic clothes dryers, electric carpet cleaners, can openers in the kitchen as well as food mixers and other electric gadgets. Lights all over the house as well as yard lights, patio lights. All this was about the same as in town.

In the country there were lights outside, lights inside the barn, motors of many uses, powered by electricity such as grinders, saws, drills and other things. Lots of irrigation wells were powered by electricity.

Of all the things run by electricity that I have named many of our readers can think of more and can think of the hard labor and worries these things take the place of.

OBITUARY

BRYAN HARDIN

Services for Bryan C. Hardin, 94, of McAdoo were at 2:30 p.m. Friday, July 27, 1990, in First Baptist Church with the Rev. Glynn Willis, pastor, officiating.

Burial was in McAdoo Cemetery under direction of Adams Funeral Home of Crosbyton.

Hardin died Wednesday, July 25, 1990, in Crosbyton Hospital after a lengthy illness.

He was born in Hill County and moved to McAdoo in 1922. He married Nellie Pearl Hodges April 18, 1916, in Hill County. She died in 1989. He was a retired farmer and member of First Baptist Church.

Survivors include five sons, Bryan C. Jr. of Portales, N.M., Eugene of McAdoo, Billy of Floydada, Wayne of Cuero and Bob of Crosbyton; a daughter, Neva Merrell of McAdoo; 13 grandchildren; and 24 great-grandchildren.

Grandsons were pallbearers.

I want to go back in time and describe just one thing I hated to do, that the use of modern electricity has taken the place of, and that is wash day.

On a morning that looked like it was going to be a pretty day, mama would say "get up from there, help with the milking, stop the hogs and other early morning chores and get things ready for a wash day." Papa and Henry would take their teams and go on to plow in the crops. Will would carry water in buckets as large as he could carry and fill up the cast iron wash pot. We had a 50 gallon pot that was used to heat water in for washing clothes. On different occasions it was used to make lye soap and other times to boil the fat out of hog meat scraps, that was called rendering lard. In all these processes our neighbors had their own ways of doing whatever they were doing.

After Will filled the pot with water he would gather up scraps of lumber, pile part of it around the pot, pour a little coal oil on the lumber and set it a fire. After it got the water really hot, mama would dip some of the water out and pour in a No. 2 or No. 3 galvanized wash tub, put her lingerie with our Sunday shirts and other delicate things.

Mama said she would wash those delicate things, wring them out through the hand turning wringer and run them through the rinse tub of water. Run them back through the wringer and hang them out on the clothes line. All this time Will was busy carrying water and keeping the water hot in the pot.

Here comes Will's turn at the rub board. First mama would fill the pot full of overalls and heavy work shirts. She would have me take a broom handle and punch them to knock some of the dirt out of them. I would take them out one at a time and rub them clean just like mama did the delicate things. Some people hand wash on the rub board and sun dry even today. But I don't think very many use the old time cast iron wash pots.

How many today ever tried to wash bed sheets and light quilts and wring them as dry as possible before hanging them on the clothesline to finish drying. Don't the modern washer and dryer save lots of labor and time?

As far as I know most washing machines and dryers have electric lights and are powered by electric motors. Electricity is a great source of power and light. It rivals lots other sources of power used by mankind.

It is mentioned in the Bible more than once, both in spiritual and material. I am talking about light:

- Genesis, Chapter 1
1. In the beginning God created the Heaven and the Earth.
2. And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.
3. And God said let there be Light; and there was light.
4. And God saw the light, that it was Good; and God divided the light from the darkness.

For lack of space to write in this piece may the kind readers please finish the reading of the seven days of creation where there is more about light.

I keep a night light in our bedroom and another in the bathroom. This is for two reasons, one is so two old people can see how to get around at night and try not to hurt themselves. This was not practical in oil lamp days only for sickness or some other dire need. The last reason was that I love light, although I know God has a purpose for darkness.

I haven't traveled much to see the pretty bright lights of the big cities. Albuquerque, New Mexico, is where I have seen the most beautiful array of lights I have had the pleasure of ever seeing. We were going from the Army hospital that is upon the hill of the valley of the Rio Grande River. There is a highway just on the crest of the hill that divides the two parts of town going from north to south.

We were on that road coming to my brother-in-law's house down in the valley. Those lights in the valley, in all colors, shapes and sizes, were the prettiest manmade thing I ever saw. All electric of course. But the light of God is greatest of all.

I forgot to mention the first night the street lights came on in Floydada. Of course, they had told us the night they would be turned on. But my what a sight and contrast to a few scattered lights in houses the distance of 2-1/2 miles away.

Texas school district budget statistics for 1989-90 released

Last year trustees in the 1,052 Texas school districts adopted budgets totaling $14-1/4 billion and increased local property taxes by another half a billion dollars. School budgets were 2-1/2 times as much in 1990 as the $5.7 billion at the beginning of the decade, and school property taxes were three times as much.

The figures are gleaned from the latest issue of Bench Marks 1989-90 School District Budgets in Texas, an annual publication of the Texas Research League, an Austin-based educational corporation engaged in governmental research.

Statewide averages of $3,542 per student for current operations were budgeted last year plus $302 for repayment of debt and $461 per student for capital outlay.

Floydada Independent School

District's budget provided $4239.75 per student for current operations, $76.16 for debt service, and $83.43 per student for capital outlay based on the 1270 students enrolled in Floydada schools for the fall semester of 1989.

The average salary for classroom teachers paid by FISD in 1988-89 was $23,417.00 plus supplements for the career ladder.

In FISD, the average salary for administrators was $38,400, and $26,494 for other professional support employees (librarians, counselors, nurses, supervisors, etc.).

Four dollars out of every five were spent for salaries. Statewide payroll expense averaged $2,895 per student, as compared to $3313.79 in FISD. Payroll expense is calculated on a combination of salary levels and staffing patterns.

Taxpayers provided one teacher for each 13.8 students in FISD while the statewide pupil-teacher ratio was 16.6 to one. Because of the existence of small classes, especially at the high-school level, and abbreviated teaching schedules, many other classes statewide have more than the average number of students.

To fund higher school budgets with a declining tax base, school trustees in most districts have raised tax rates. The average school district imposed a property tax at the rate of $1.01 per $100 of appraised value, which value average 97.6% of market value (selling price). The "true tax rate" was 98.6 cents ($1.01 times 97.62%) statewide. Locally, the FISD imposed a rate of $0.72 while property was appraised at 125.3% of its market value making the true rate $0.902 per $100 of market value (selling price).

The report points out that the calculation of a true tax rate based on market value rather than on appraised value enables a valid comparison of tax levels with other schools. In 1989, the true tax rate exceeded $1 in half of the school districts in Texas.

The tax on a house that would sell for $80,000 in FISD would have been $517. If the homeowner were eligible for homestead exemptions, the tax would have been $481, and if owned by a person 65 years or older, the tax on an $80,000 house in this district would have averaged $409, or less if subject to a tax freeze. That compares with statewide average tax bills of $806, $712, and $543 respectively for an $80,000 house.

Last year FISD's revenue from the property tax increased by 8.1% percent for 1989-90 as compared to a 9.1 percent increase statewide.

Local property taxes plus state aid was $3303 per student in FISD as compared to $3,386 statewide. The primary purpose of state aid is to equalize state and local tax resources among schools. The 153 districts with 10% of the students in Texas and a large tax base had 44% more tax funds to spend on each student than 75 property-poor districts also with 10% of the students.
