Early vote deadline

Last day to vote early in the Aug. 10 joint Constitutional/County Education District (CED) election is Tuesday. The ballot will include two constitutional amendments and three CED propositions. "As many people voted Monday and Tuesday as voted all last week," said Pat Eastup, Midland County elections clerk. Ms. Eastup said 111 citizens had voted absentee by Friday and 251 had voted by early afternoon Tuesday. Absentee voting began July 22. "We had 109 vote on Monday and 127 vote Tuesday," she said. The elections clerk said about 35 percent of voters are expected to cast their votes early. Persons may vote early in the elections office at 709 W. Washington. For information on combined polling places or registration status call 688-1222.

Carts to add up

DALLAS — Some Dallas-area shoppers may soon be less worried about whether they have enough money once they get to the checkout counter. That's because Tom Thumb, Dallas' largest grocery chain with 61 stores in the area, will add calculators to 15,000 grocery carts by early to mid-August, a Tom Thumb representative said Tuesday. Solar-powered Shoppers Calculators, patented by Texas Instruments, will be bolted to cart handles to help customers compute their purchases.

Thatcher's duties

LONDON — Margaret Thatcher, the former prime minister, has been appointed chancellor of the University of Buckingham, Britain's only university that does not accept government funds. As chancellor, Mrs. Thatcher's duties will be limited to handing out degrees and leading some meetings of the university's governing body. The University of Buckingham opened in 1976 in the town of the same name, 40 miles northwest of London. It has 860 students and runs solely on student fees and private donations.

Board votes new MHS principal

■ Trustees select Goddard Junior High Principal Jane Carrens from three finalists.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Goddard Junior High School Principal Jane Carrens will fill the position vacated by Jimmie Kelly as the new principal of Midland High School.

Midland Independent School District trustees voted unanimously on awarding the high school principalship to Ms. Carrens following a four-hour executive session Tuesday night.

Trustees went into executive session following a special, abbreviated board meeting.

"I am absolutely delighted and honored," Ms. Carrens said. "I certainly have wonderful expectations for Midland High School. It will be a real responsibility but I am excited about the challenge."

Midland school board trustees went into executive session at 5:15 p.m. Wednesday to interview the three finalists culled from a list of seven candidates. Other finalists were Midland Freshman School Principal Neil Richmond and Lee Freshman School Principal George Cooper.

Other candidates were Jack Ratcliff, Gene Isaacs, David Adams and Karen Wentworth. Candidates were screened by a committee consisting of superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr., Tom Holland, executive director of human resources; Bill Denton, assistant superintendent; Ricardo Torres, executive director of secondary education; and Maridell Fryar, executive director of instructional services.

Trustees emerged from the executive session to vote on the candidate who would step into the vacancy left by Kelly.

Bush hails rivalry's end President promises Moscow trade benefits

■ Gorbachev withstands embarrassment of Boris Yeltsin's snub.

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — President Bush, declaring Tuesday that "a new age of promise" had dawned in superpower relations, pledged American support for the forces of reform in the Soviet Union and announced he would lift decades-old restrictions on U.S. Soviet trade.

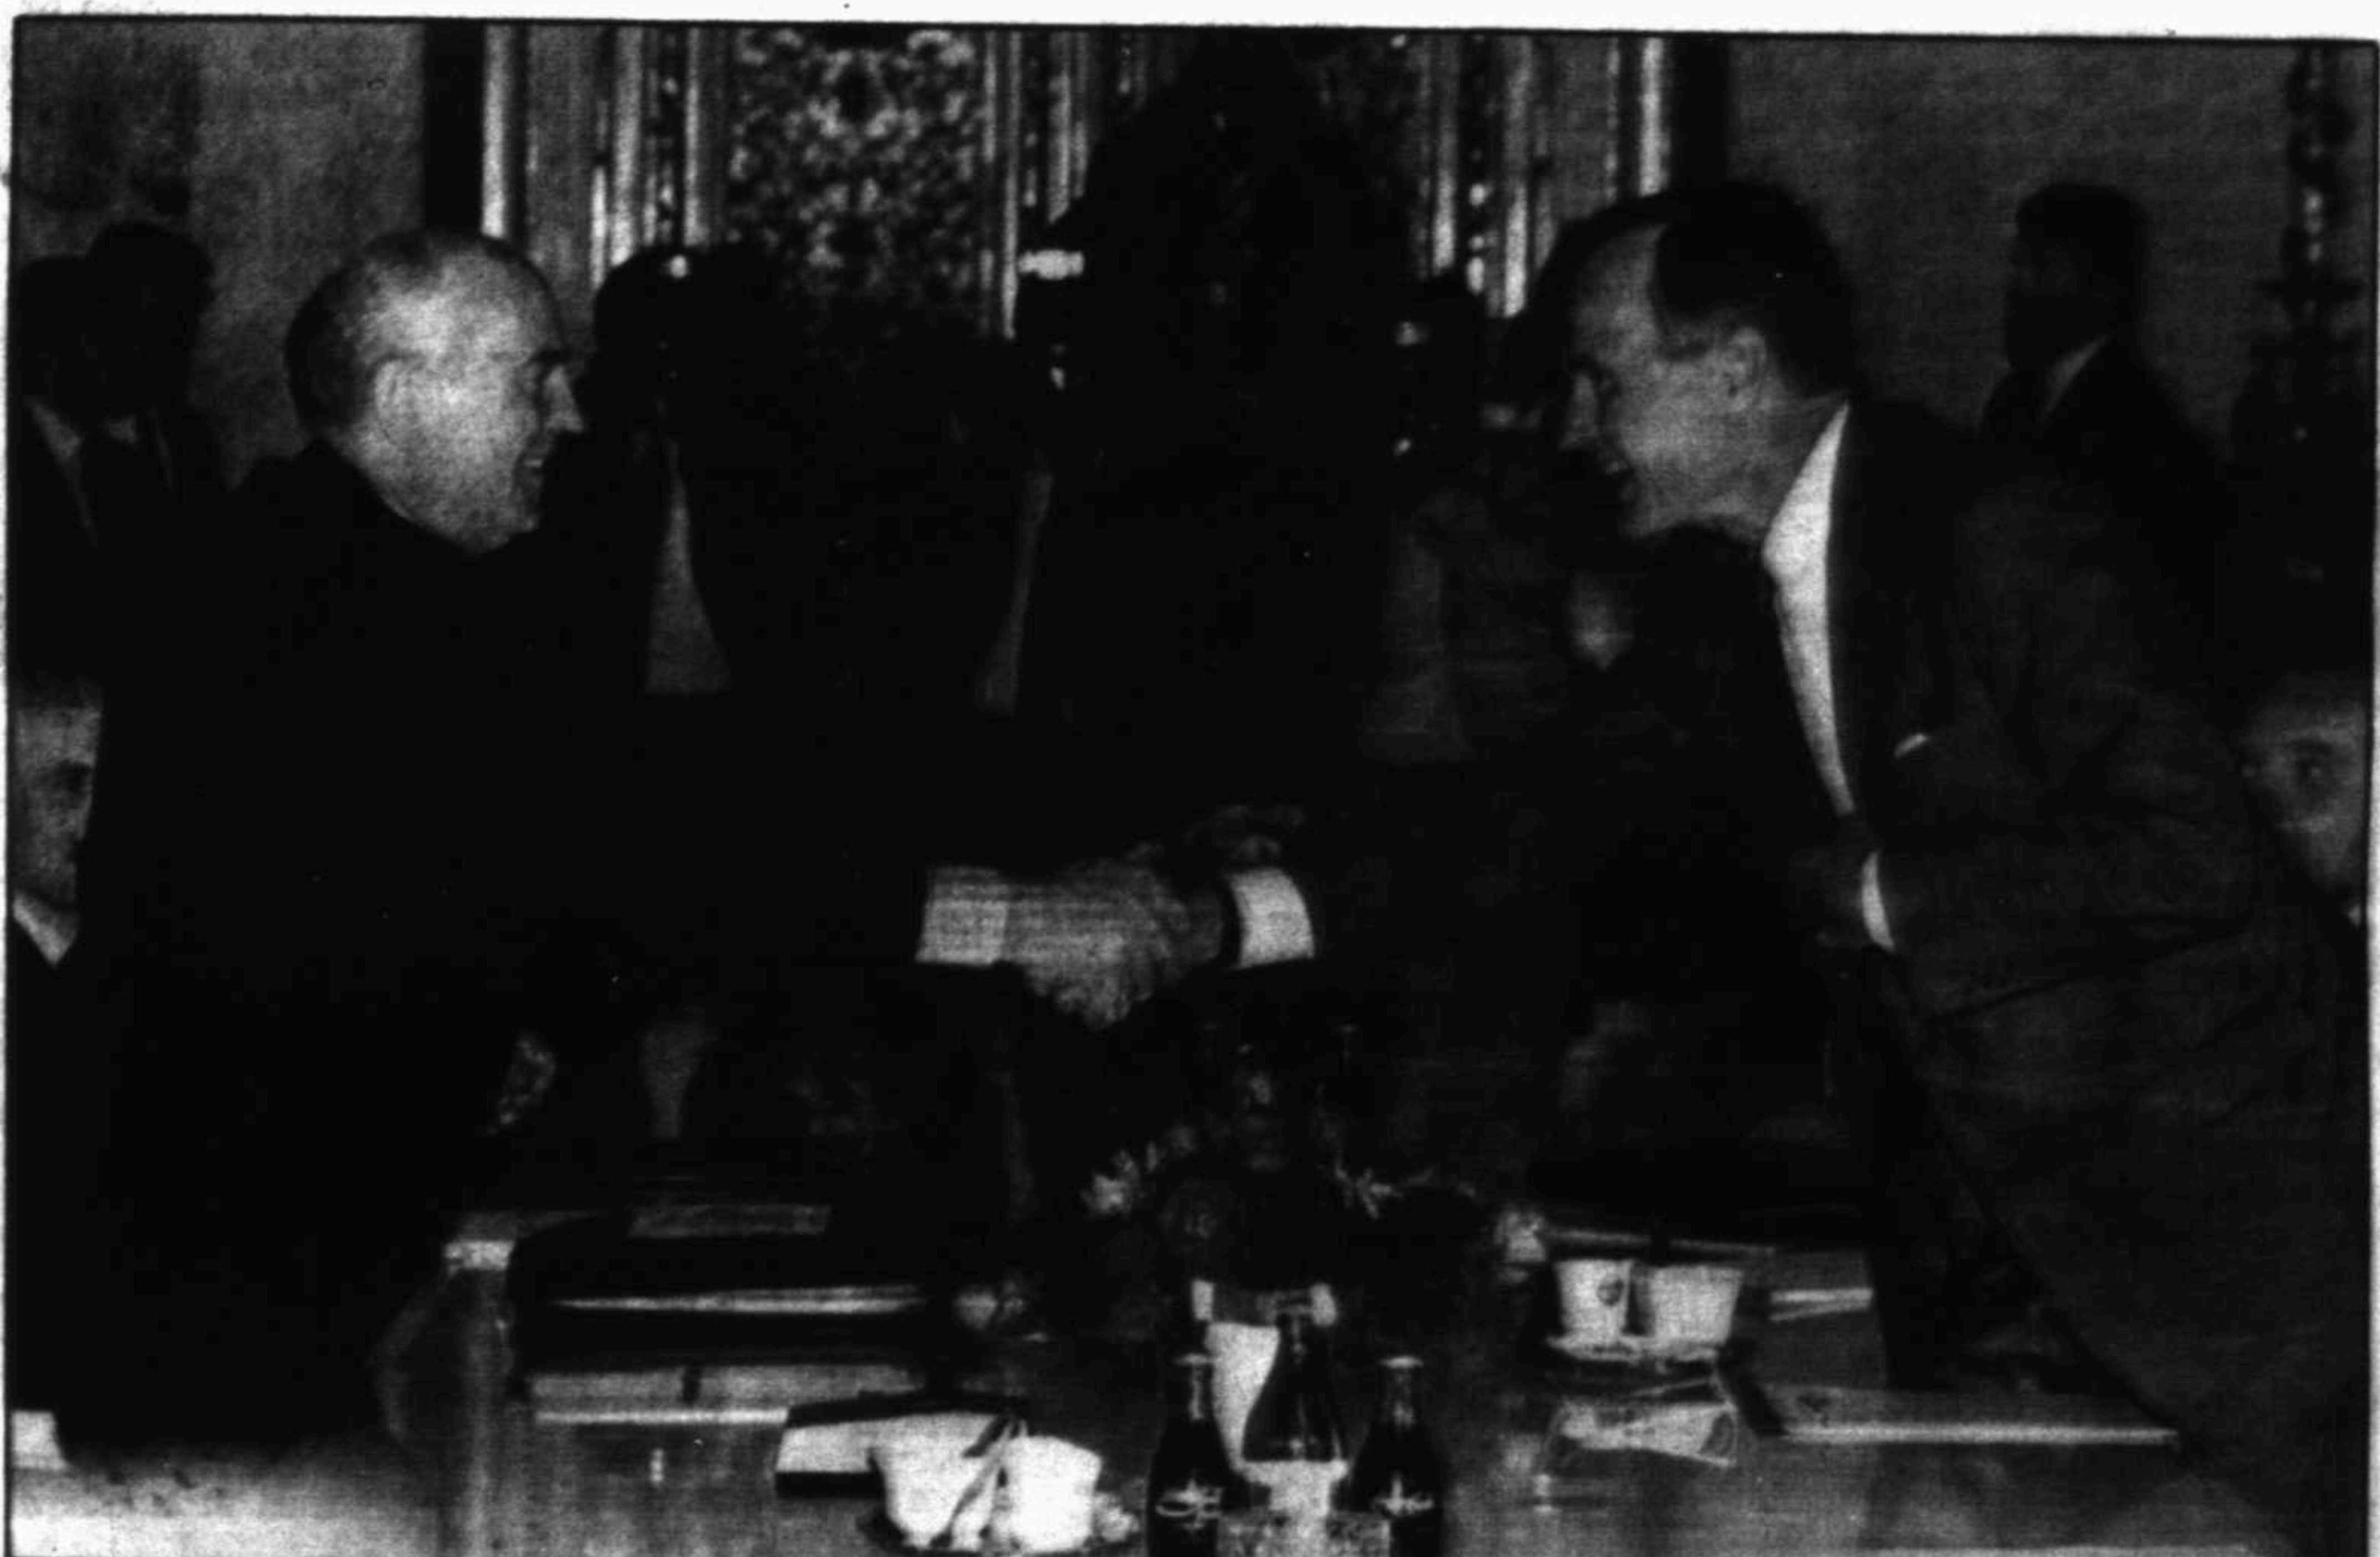

At a summit designed to set the course for the post cold war, Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev prepared to sign a nuclear arms pact today that symbolizes the relaxation of the arms race. For the first time, the two nations have agreed to reduce their stockpiles of long-range missiles.

"The risk of global war stands lower now than at any point in the postwar era," said Bush in a speech Tuesday following long, cordial meetings with Gorbachev.

However, Bush delivered an unexpectedly tough message to his summit partner by twice reminding the Soviets of two longstanding U.S. complaints.

"Obstacles do remain," Bush told an invited audience at the Moscow State University for International Affairs. He cited continued military aid to Fidel Castro's Cuban government and the demands of the Baltic states of Lithuania,

'FDR' call kicks off United Way drive

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

United Way of Midland volunteers declared war on poverty, abuse, illiteracy and other social ills at a funding drive kickoff luncheon Tuesday.

UW board of directors president Max Holman, in the persona of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, administered an oath of office to a roomful of volunteer coordinators and agency representatives preparing for the annual funding campaign. Holman's character was part of the drive's World War II theme: "Allied for Victory — the United Way."

"I today declare as of 12 noon in Midland, Texas, a state of war shall exist... until our 17 agencies and programs eliminate forever all of those human needs that are so pressing on us today," said Holman, waving an FDR-esque cigarette holder at the audience.

The luncheon marked the beginning of the group's "pilot campaign," a drive involving 21 local

"We hope to raise 25 to 30 percent of our overall goal with this group," said K. Michael Conaway, chairman of the funding campaign. "This drive gives momentum to the other folks."

He said he was pleased with attendance at the luncheon, calling it "a terrific way to start this year's campaign."

NAACP draft report is critical of Thomas

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The staff of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has drafted a report strongly criticizing Judge Clarence Thomas for his views on affirmative action and his commitment to enforcement of civil rights laws.

Some NAACP board members predicted Tuesday that the report would be the basis for an announcement by the group to-day that it would oppose the black appellate judge's nomination to the Supreme Court.

The document, prepared by the NAACP's Washington office, stops short of recommending that the nation's largest civil rights group oppose Thomas' nomination. But in its tone and its analysis of Thomas' speeches and his record as an official in the Reagan and Bush administrations, the document leaves little doubt that its authors believe he should not join the High Court.

The report seems to reflect the mood that prevailed among many of the 64 board members

U.N.: Iraq holds huge chemical-arms stash

■ Reports give further evidence of Iraq's reluctance to come clean on its nuclear, chemical, ballistic, biological programs.

Associated Press

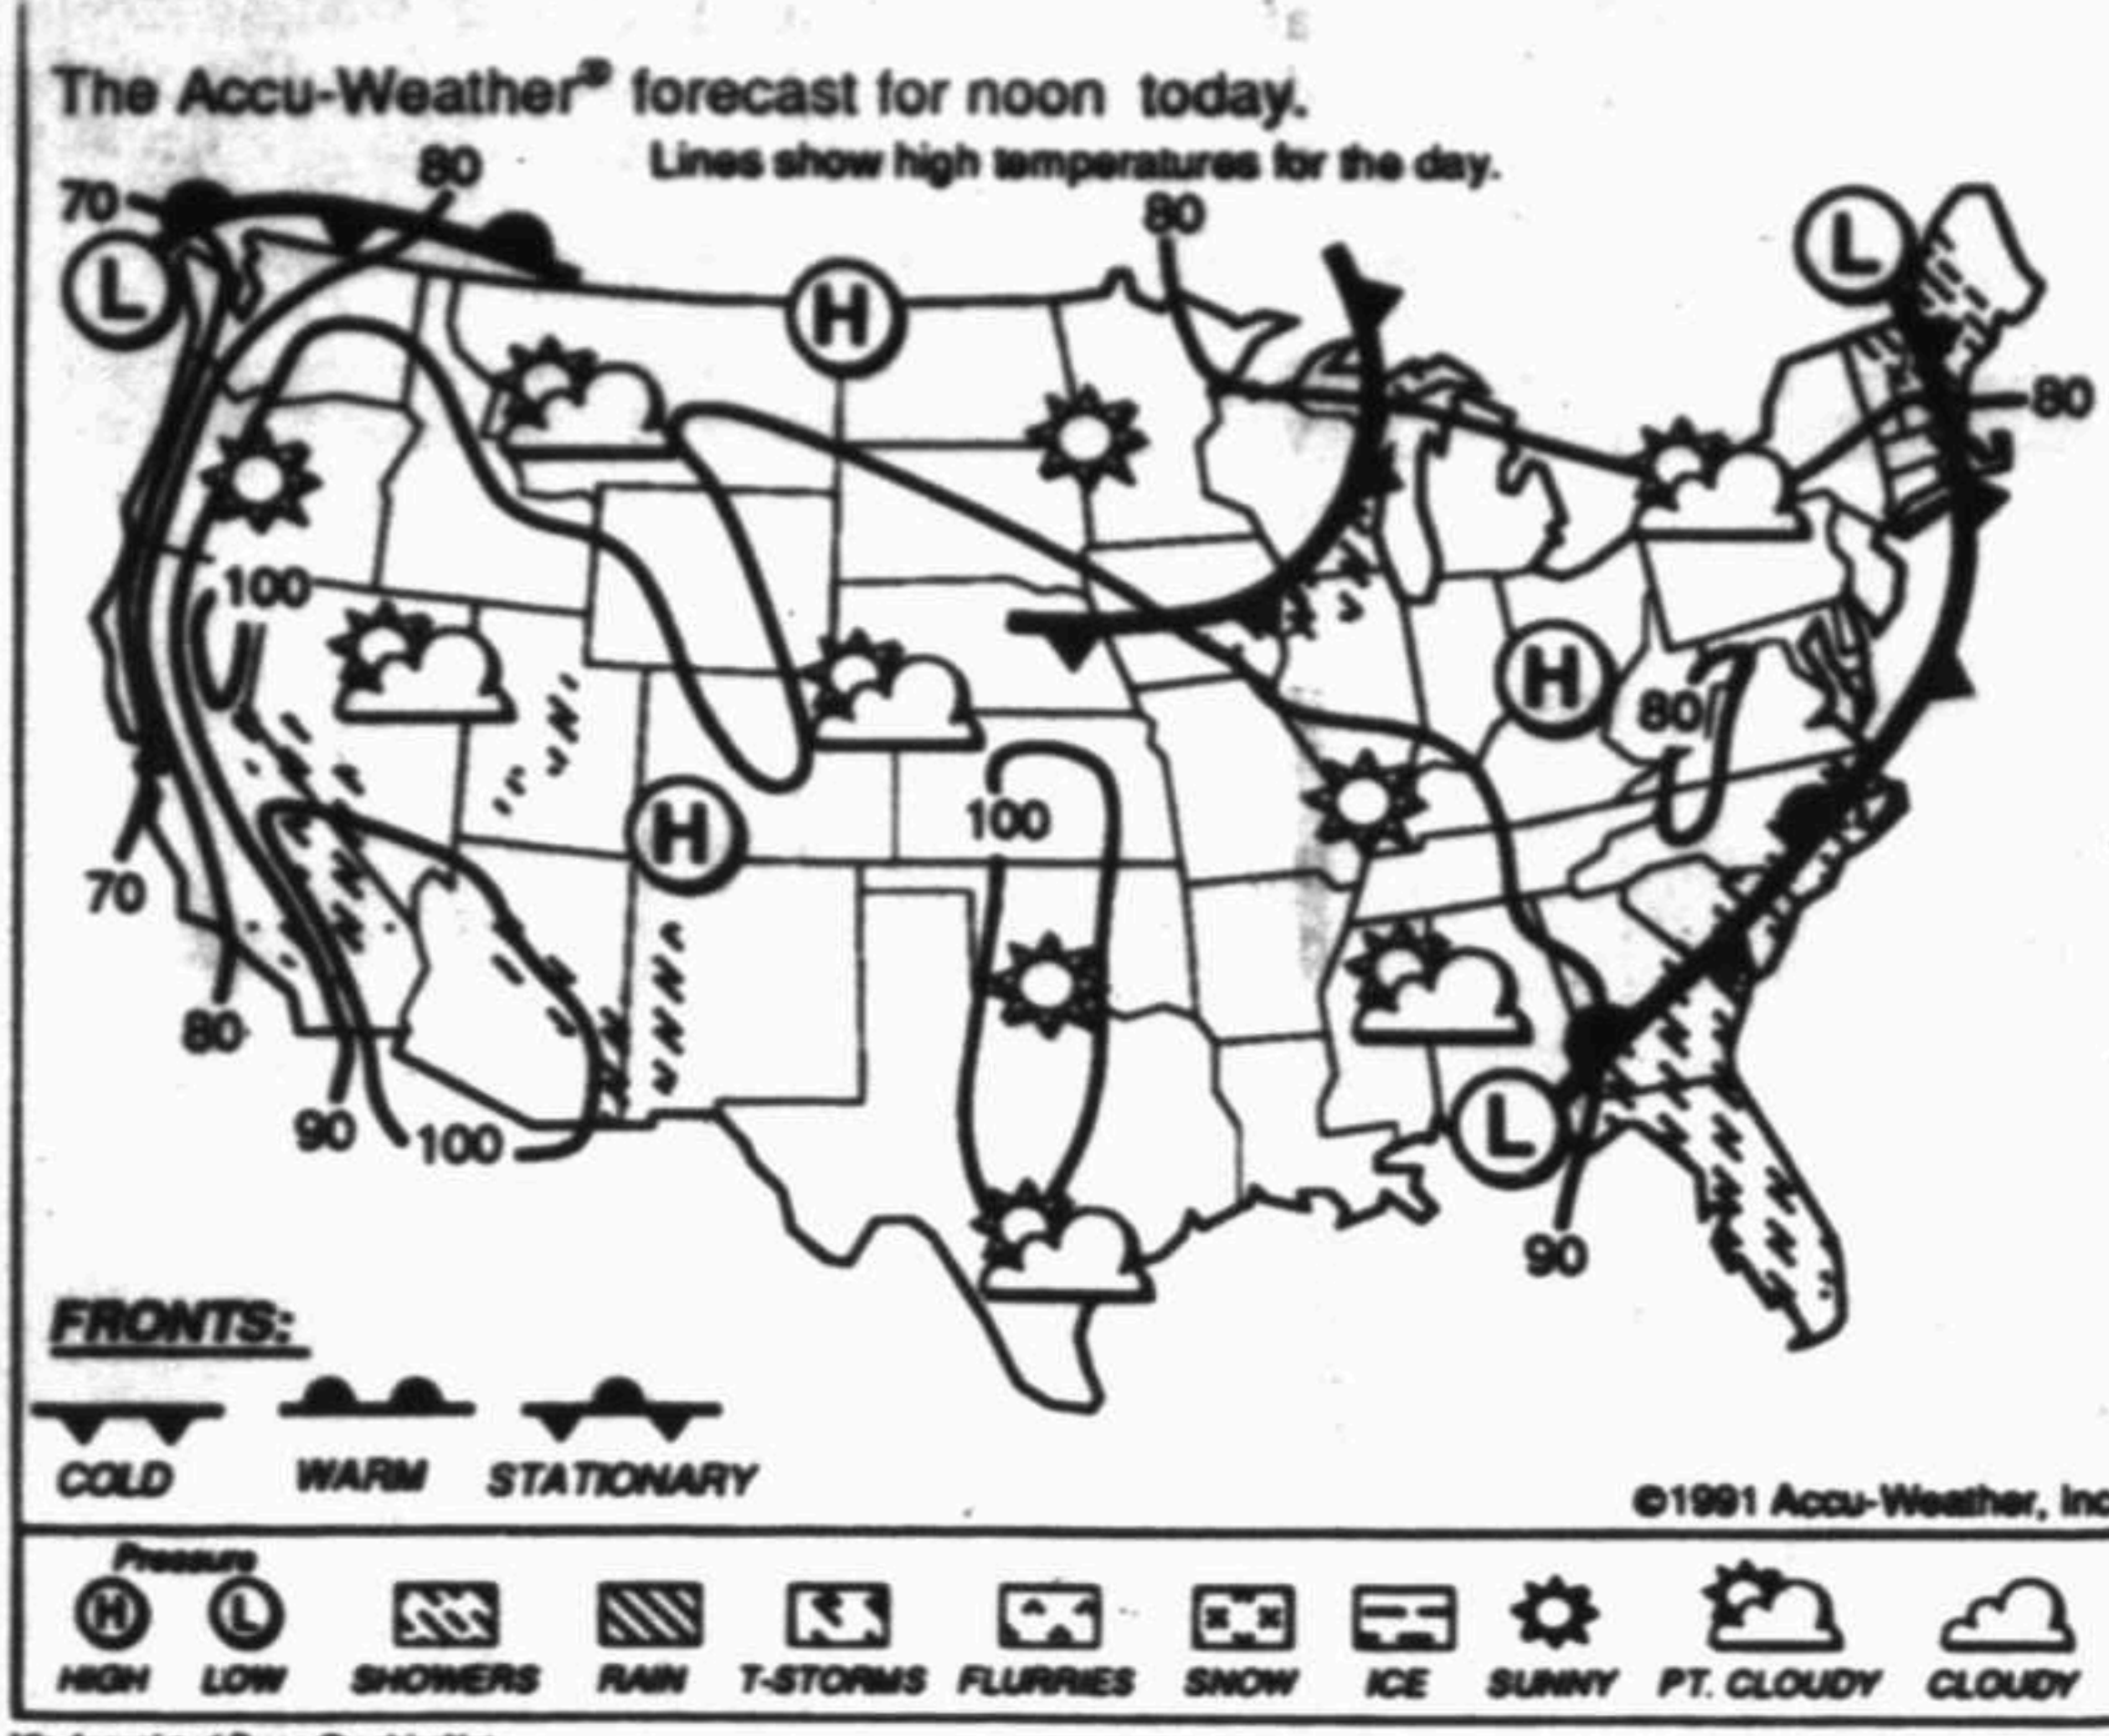

UNITED NATIONS — Iraq has four times the chemical weapons it had admitted to previously, and its stocks of supplies to make them are nearly five times larger than acknowledged, U.N. weapons experts said Tuesday.

Rolf Ekeus, chairman of the U.N. commission charged with eliminating Iraqi weapons of mass destruction, said at least five more chemical inspections are planned, including one to begin in September at a massive weapons plant at Samarra.

The inspection at Samarra alone could take up to two months and require 70 inspectors, Ekeus said. The work

WEATHER SUMMARY

Temperatures to near norms

Staff Report

Temperatures are expected to be nearer seasonal norms as July comes to an end, according to forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Under partly cloudy skies, today's high is expected to reach the upper 90s, more in line with the average high for the date of 95 than recent peak temperatures. Late July is typically the hottest time of year in Midland, NWS said.

On Aug. 1, the average high slips a degree to 94, according to NWS records.

Tonight should be average for the season with a low in the upper 60s under mostly fair skies.

Fair conditions should linger Thursday as the high again peaks in the upper 90s.

After an overnight low of 67, Tuesday's high was 91, 15 degrees off the record high for July 30 of 106, set in 1937. The record low for today's date is 60, set in 1971.

STATE

Sunshine soaked most parts of the state Tuesday as the mercury began inching back toward the 100-degree mark.

While the majority of West Texas basked in the sunny skies, scattered showers and thunderstorms fell over southwest sections. Some of the storms were accompanied by heavy rainfall.

Isolated showers also developed in the southeast sections near a weak cold front that brought north to northeasterly winds across most of North Texas.

However, southerly winds blew at 10 mph just south of the front near Lufkin, which reported an afternoon high of 98 degrees.

In West Texas, winds blew from the south to southwest at 10 to 20 mph. Winds were variable and under 10 mph in other sections.

The sunshine will hang around North Texas through Thursday with highs in the upper 90s to near 100. Lows will stay in the low 70s.

Partly cloudy skies and isolated afternoon and evening showers will continue over West Texas through tonight. Highs will range from the 80s in the mountains to near 102 along the Rio Grande.

The isolated showers and thunderstorms will continue to pop up in South Texas today as the afternoon highs drift into the 90s to near 100 degrees in the west.

NATION

Rain was scattered over much of the East on Tuesday, with locally heavy rain in North Carolina and a tornado in Florida.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended from Florida northward to Delaware and the southeastern half of Virginia; from Georgia westward across Louisiana and east-central Texas; and over eastern Tennessee, eastern Kentucky, western West Virginia, eastern Ohio, western Pennsylvania and western New York state.

A tornado touched down briefly at Naples, Fla., at about noon, but only minor damage was reported, the National Weather Service said.

A flood watch was posted in North Carolina's northern and central coastal plain, where as much as 4 inches of rain fell from Monday morning to Tuesday morning.

Elsewhere, showers and thunderstorms developed in southeastern Nebraska, south-central through northeastern North Dakota and northwestern Minnesota, central Colorado, and southern Arizona.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SUMMIT: Presidents to sign nuclear arms pact

Estonia and Latvia for independence.

He called on the Soviets to return the disputed Kurile Islands to Japan.

Also, Bush offered some stern advice for fixing the troubled Soviet economy. The key to transforming the economy is to convert production of tanks and missiles into the manufacture of consumer goods, a move that would "help fill the shelves of your stores," he said.

"It's time to reduce military spending," said Bush.

Bush dashed any possible lingering hopes for an infusion of cash to steady the Soviet economy. Sounding like a parsimonious Yankee businessman, Bush told the Soviets that their own political system destroyed their economy and that only the Soviets themselves could save it.

"In the economic sphere, the transformation must come from within," he said.

"Only through real reform can the Soviet Union abolish the counterproductive command economy — only through real reform can the Soviet Union unleash the ingenuity, the energy and the entrepreneurial potential of its people," he said.

Bush said that U.S. backing "will keep pace" with changes inside the Soviet Union. As a reward for lifting restrictions on emigration by Soviet Jews, Bush said he would send to Congress a year-old U.S.-Soviet trade treaty.

With that move, the Soviet Union would be granted most-favored-nation trade status, which essentially normalizes commercial ties. The United States has granted that status to about 100 nations, who pay the lowest possible U.S. tariffs.

For the Soviets, the importance of the trade status could be largely symbolic, since the $4 billion in annual U.S.-Soviet trade is relatively small by world standards.

Gorbachev, who greeted Bush in the ornate St. George's Hall of the Kremlin, hailed the "beginning of a new era in history" as his nation undergoes changes. But he acknowledged that the strains of the new era have been "a tough test."

Amid the strains of independence movements in the Soviet republics, Gorbachev had to withstand the embarrassment of having the popular president of Russia, Boris Yeltsin, snub his personal invitation to join summit sessions Tuesday.

Gorbachev had issued a last minute public offer to allow Yeltsin to attend some of the meetings, but the Russian president didn't show up, preferring to meet in private with Bush later.

Another key republican leader, President Nursultan Nazarbayev, of oil-rich Kazakhstan did take up Gorbachev's invitation. Among the major economic topics was ironing out a stalled agreement by which Chevron will help the Soviet oil industry with technology to make better use of its vast resources.

Chevron's offer of a joint venture has snagged on disputes over whether the central government or the republic owns the oil.

Even as the talks continued inside the thick fortress walls of the Kremlin, nearby there was noisy evidence of continuing unrest in Gorbachev's huge nation. Several hundred protesters from Asian republics angrily shouted and waved signs calling for independence for their homelands.

"The land is sick and tired of the Soviets," one young man said.

"There's no work," said another.

At separate meetings, Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh signed a series of accords aimed at giving the Soviets more technical assistance — but no aid.

THOMAS: Report might portend opposition

during the group's annual convention in Houston earlier this month.

At that time, according to some members, the board voted overwhelmingly to oppose the nomination, but the majority then acceded to the wishes of the minority that no formal action be taken until an assessment could be done of Thomas' speeches and writings and of his work as head of the Office of Civil Rights in the Education Department and as chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

"There was a clear majority of people who wanted to act at that time," said William Lucy, an official with the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees and a member of the board. "But people felt there was some wisdom in getting the full record."

There is especially hazardous because of unexploded ordinance dropped by the Gulf War allies, he said.

Ekeus and Hans Blix, director of the U.N. Atomic Energy Agency, spoke to reporters after briefing the Security Council on the latest mission of inspectors to Iraq.

Their reports gave further evidence of Iraq's reluctance to come clean on its nuclear, chemical, ballistic and biological programs, despite growing hardship caused by a U.N. economic embargo and the threat of military attack if Baghdad fails to comply with U.N. demands.

The weapons experts said Iraq had 46,000 "field chemical munitions," compared to the 11,000 to 12,000 Iraq had declared according to the April 3 U.N. cease-fire resolution that ended the Persian Gulf War.

The munitions could include shells, canisters, warheads and grenades, Ekeus said, but added that it was difficult to tell exactly what was at the 25-square-mile Samarra site, 88 miles north of Baghdad, because of damage from allied bombs and dangerous

Thomas did receive support Tuesday from a group of women, a number of whom hold positions in the Bush administration, who announced the formation of Women for Judge Thomas.

"We know him," said Heather Graddison, who was head of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the Reagan administration. "We know of him; we've worked with him for him because we admire him and what he stands for: individual rights and equal opportunity for all Americans."

Later in the day a group of residents of Pin Point, Ga., where Thomas was born, were scheduled to arrive in Washington to lobby on his behalf.

The opposition of the NAACP would be a setback to the administration's effort to avoid a divisive battle like the one in 1987, when President Ronald Reagan nominated Judge Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court.

Of all the predominantly black civil rights groups, only the NAACP has the resources and political clout to mobilize black voters, especially in the South, to effectively press moderate Democratic senators to vote against the nomination.

The NAACP board will meet Wednesday to make its decision and hold a news conference in the afternoon to announce it.

The group's decision comes as both the administration and Thomas' detractors are marshaling their forces for the Senate fight over the nomination.

Tuesday, two liberal groups made it plain that they would undertake efforts to persuade the Senate to reject the nomination. The groups are People for the American Way, which was formed by the television producer Norman Lear and others in 1980 to counter the influence of conservative Christian organizations, and the Women's Legal Defense Fund, a litigating and lobbying group on women's issues.

On Monday, the Alliance for Justice, a coalition of liberal public interest law groups, announced its opposition to the nomination.

But without the NAACP on their side, predominantly white groups opposing the nomination will have difficulty countering the feeling among many blacks that the defeat of Thomas will only mean the nomination of someone who is equally as conservative, and white.

The report is an internal document intended to help the board reach its decision. It was provided to The New York Times by NAACP members who opposed the nomination of Thomas.

there is especially hazardous because of unexploded ordinance dropped by the Gulf War allies, he said.

"Obviously there are great problems," Ekeus said. "We feel we still lack sufficient cooperation from the Iraqi side."

The weapons experts said Iraq had 46,000 "field chemical munitions," compared to the 11,000 to 12,000 Iraq had declared according to the April 3 U.N. cease-fire resolution that ended the Persian Gulf War.

The munitions could include shells, canisters, warheads and grenades, Ekeus said, but added that it was difficult to tell exactly what was at the 25-square-mile Samarra site, 88 miles north of Baghdad, because of damage from allied bombs and dangerous conditions.

He said inspectors found chemical warheads for Scud missiles, but said the exact number was not known. A large number of chemical weapons were for "relatively harmless" tear gas, he said.

Ekeus also said inspectors turned up 3,000 tons of deadly chemicals and precursor chemicals used to manufacture arms. Iraq had declared only 650 tons.

Meanwhile, France on Tuesday circulated a draft proposal at the Security Council that would lift the embargo enough to permit limited Iraqi oil sales. These would fund the purchase of food, medicine and other relief supplies, amid fears of massive hunger and disease in Iraq.

Western diplomats at the United Nations said French representatives discussed the ideas with the other four permanent members of the Security Council — the Soviet Union, United States, Britain and China.

Under the French proposal, Iraq would be allowed to sell a fixed amount or value of oil. The revenues would then be placed in an escrow account controlled by a special U.N. commission. None of the funds would be available to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Distribution of the purchased supplies inside Iraq would be handled by U.N. representatives.

VOTES: Carrens becomes Midland High principal controversy involving the high school's commencement ceremony — was hired as the district's newly created director of compliance and administrative services.

Kelly will be charged with coordinating federally funded programs, compliance and state and national accreditation mandates, and external funding programs.

When trustees emerged from the executive session at 9:15 p.m., school board president Ken Marks said, "We had a lot of very good candidates... We had to pick one over the others."

Marks said all the candidates were qualified for the position and the other six candidates were "not losers."

"The decision we made does not reflect on them," he said.

"We had a number of talented people," Baressi said. "It was important for the board to come to a unanimous agreement on this," he said.

"It was a hard decision," school board trustee Jackie Hamilton allowed.

Ms. Carrens had served as principal at Goddard since 1989. She was assistant principal at Lee High School from 1987-1989. She has been with MHS since 1965 and was a teacher in other districts from 1961-65. Her 26 years with the school district included teaching at MHS for two years and serving as English Department chairperson at Edison Freshman School, now Midland Freshman.

Her education background includes a masters in education administration from the University of Texas at the Permian Basin.

In other action, board members unanimously approved designating a portion of the general operating fund balance to reflect contingent risks.

The recommended plan budgets $1 million for compensated sick leave, $750,000 for health self-funded insurance, $450,000 for workers compensation, $50,000 for unemployment and $250,000 for casualty losses. The total designations amount to $2.5 million.

Of $9.6 million of the total general operation fund, $6 million will be left undesignated. About $1.1 million is invested fund equity in warehouse inventory.

"Six million dollars may sound like a lot of money," said MHS Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr., "but it is less than one month's operating funds."

Board members approved the tax collection report which indicated that almost 12 percent of 1990-91 taxes were delinquent. About 96 percent of taxes were collected from Sept. 1, 1990 through June 30, 1991.

Soviets see few changes

MOSCOW (HNS) — While President Bush was praising Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev for having "instituted reforms that changed the world," a number of Muscovites said Tuesday that changes in their own lives are spotty.

A school teacher here observed, "Now we can see programs from Leningrad on Moscow TV, and you can buy books by Sigmund Freud and Franz Kafka."

But the woman, while noting greater freedom of expression, gave only her first name, Natasha, and asked that her last name be withheld because she said she still fears the KGB, the Soviet secret police.

There are real changes, she insisted. "Fifteen years ago when you applied for a job, the first question was 'Are you a Communist?' Today it is vice versa. Now if you're a Communist, you can't get a job," she laughed.

Glasnost, or openness, is only skin deep, she said, like the restored Metropol Hotel, which has reopened with opulent, turn-of-the-century Russian Empire rooms. The bathrooms have been furnished with gold-plated faucets — but they have no hot water.

Free enterprise has brought almost as many woes as benefits for the ordinary Russian.

Prices have skyrocketed, and products are not more plentiful. A lawyer named Tatyana Kolodzei said that at the farmers markets, which traditionally have offered better meat, fruit and vegetables than their state-owned cooperative competitors, the cost of a chicken has gone up 10 times in the last six months.

Kolodzei said that if she fixes dinner for four — "a soup, a salad and a little meat, I need to spend at least 100 rubles at the farmers market," she said. The average monthly salary here is between 500 and 600 rubles, she added.

Gift brings abrupt stop to El Al flight

JERUSALEM (AP) — An Israeli airliner made an unscheduled stop in Istanbul on Tuesday after a Swedish passenger told a flight attendant that she had received a gift from an Arab friend before boarding the flight.

Ninety minutes after the El Al plane took off from Tel Aviv, the woman told the attendant about the present and admitted she had lied to Tel Aviv airport security about it.

All passengers departing from Tel Aviv undergo lengthy questioning, and any gifts are usually checked thoroughly.

After the plane landed at Istanbul, the nearest airport, the woman's suitcase was searched and the present turned out to be harmless.

Floods wreak havoc across NE Romania

BAČAU, Romania (AP) — Residents of northeast Romania who survived flash floods and a dam burst described fleeing to the hills when roaring waters awoke them, then watching the flood sweep away their homes and kill what lay in its path.

Tuesday the survivors mourned their dozens of dead and collected the scattered remnants of their lives. Entire villages were washed away, crops were flattened and bridges and highways were destroyed.

Authorities could not yet provide a firm figure on casualties. One official said at least 118 people were reported dead or missing after the dam burst early Monday and additional floods elsewhere.

Maria Ghiurca stood crying, ankle-deep in mud covering what used to be her kitchen in the village of Fundu Vail Racaciuni, 200 miles north of Bucharest, the capital. Of the furnishings, only two beds and a table remained for her 10 children.

"We have no animals, no clothes, no food, no nothing," said her husband, Grigore.

More rain was feared as dark clouds gathered in the evening.

Ethnic violence mystifies Croats

SISAK, Yugoslavia (NYT) — Terror still creases the faces of the Croatian villagers of Struge as they described how their Serb neighbors rounded up dozens of their kinsmen five days ago and used them as human shields for a methodical march of death and destruction.

"It was a human wall," said Melita Blazeovic, a 20-year-old Croat who Tuesday described how she was pulled from her house by Serbian schoolmates, beaten and forced to join a procession of townspeople prodded forward by knives and gun butts.

The Serbs, she and other witnesses said, steadily fired a heavy machine gun mounted atop a truck toward Croatian police who were trying to maintain authority in a region of Croatia where Serbs outnumber Croats. Police defenders were reportedly paralyzed by the sight of their families held hostage and did not return fire.

"We were all together, walking in front," Miss Blazeovic recalled, "and they were walking behind us, house by house, shooting at the houses."

Miss Blazeovic's account was confirmed by two other villagers and in two separate reports by Yugoslav journalists who witnessed the events Friday in Struge, a rural community about 60 miles south of Zagreb, the Croatian capital.

She and other witnesses said the Serbian advance was finally halted when a Croatian policeman jumped atop the truck and detonated grenades he was carrying in what was apparently a suicide mission.

Though lacking a formal declaration, the mounting conflict and increasing violence in Croatia is increasingly looking, feeling and smelling like an old-fashioned Balkan war.

There are no smart bombs or laser-guided weapons to keep the conflict impersonal or the adversaries at a distance from each other.

Instead, the struggle between the republic of Croatia and the Serbian guerrillas is being waged village by village with classic infantry weapons — automatic rifles and mortars — and the savagery of the battles is already evoking this country's brutal history of inter-ethnic conflict.

Croatia's state-run television and security officials have been portraying the battle for Struge as an atrocity. The television reported that nine policemen had been killed in the fighting there, and it broadcast footage Sunday night that showed some of the bullet-riddled bodies with their throats slit.

It was unclear how many civilians died in the fighting. Witnesses spoke of at least two, including Manda Begic, a 70-year-old woman who lay wounded and screaming for help on the main street for more than an hour before she died.

Some historians estimate that more than a million people died in Yugoslavia during World War II, about half in clashes with Axis forces, while the remainder were machine gunned, thrown into caves, knifed or set afire by their fellow Yugoslavs. Thousands of Serbs, Jews and gypsies died in concentration camps set up by the Nazi-installed government of Croatia. Croats were also hunted and killed in large numbers by Serbian guerrilla forces.

Iraq soldiers rob with permission

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Robbery, theft and even murder — crimes once rare in Iraq — have increased markedly since the Persian Gulf War.

Shortages, high prices and unemployment are blamed for much of the lawlessness, but university professors and other commentators view the plunder of Kuwait as a turning point in the values of Iraqi society.

Done mostly by army soldiers and widely known by the public, the plunder appeared as officially condoned theft.

"The values have changed," said Fathia Jumaily, a professor of sociology and criminology at Baghdad University. "It (Kuwait) was a turning point for the thinking of the people."

Although Baghdad is still safe compared to many Western cities, crimes like robbery and homicide have become issues in the state-controlled press.

Because of conditions left by the war and United Nations economic sanctions, many people find it increasingly difficult to make ends meet and resort to crime.

Outside the capital, businessmen have been robbed and murdered on the road to Jordan by highwaymen armed with machine guns.

Dahmer admits killing 17

BATH, Ohio (AP) — Investigators found more than 50 pieces of bone near Jeffrey L. Dahmer's boyhood home Tuesday as they searched for remains of a man who may have been his first victim.

In Milwaukee, police said Dahmer now has confessed to 17 slayings.

The bone pieces were found as investigators raked debris from the ground on the first day of their search of the property in Bath, an Akron suburb, said Summit County Coroner William A. Cox.

He said as many as 70 percent of the bones were human, and some appeared to be skull fragments. "We may very well be able to put together who those bones belong to," Cox said at a news conference.

Dahmer told authorities that Steven Mark Hicks was hitchhiking to a rock concert in 1978 when he accepted a ride to the house. There, Dahmer strangled Hicks with a barbell and dismembered him, authorities said.

Dahmer said he buried and dug up Hicks' remains several times, "ultimately scraping the flesh off, smashing the bones to bits with a hammer and scattering them in a ravine between his parents' land and two other properties. He drew authorities a map of the heavily wooded, 1.7-acre property.

Summit County Sheriff David Troutman said the bone pieces were found where Dahmer told authorities they would be, in a tree-covered, rocky area behind the house.

"Jeffrey Dahmer has been very truthful in what he has related to us and Milwaukee police," Troutman said.

Cox said investigators also found blood and bone fragments in a crawl space under the house where Dahmer may have dismembered the body.

Investigators ended their search for the day but planned to resume it Friday.

Cox said authorities hope to extract genetic material from the bone fragments to determine whether it's similar to the genetic makeup of blood from Hicks' parents. He investigators also could compare it with pieces of Hicks' hair that his parents saved.

NASA sets for launch Thursday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA Tuesday declared space shuttle Atlantis and its cargo fit to fly as countdown No. 2 proceeded toward a Thursday liftoff.

"We're not tracking any problems," said test director Mike Leinbach. "The ship is clean. The crew is ready, and we're anxious to get on with this launch."

A launch attempt last Wednesday was canceled just hours before liftoff because of a failed engine computer. The unit was replaced.

Mission commander John Blaha and his crew used the extra week to get in more shuttle simulator training. The five astronauts returned to Kennedy Space Center on Tuesday.

"We're glad to be back," Blaha said. "Hope all of us see a launch on Thursday."

The weather outlook was in NASA's favor. Forecasters said there was an 80 percent chance of good weather Thursday.

Once in orbit, Blaha and his crew will release the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite.

Crime figure wins lottery

BOSTON — A reputed organized crime leader from South Boston strolled into Massachusetts State Lottery headquarters on Monday along with three other people to claim a share of the Massachusetts State Lottery's $14.3 million Mass Millions jackpot last Friday.

The winning ticket was claimed by four men, including James J. (Whitey) Bulger, a local crime figure with suspected ties to drug traffickers, who was a partner with the buyer of the ticket.

It was purchased on Dec. 11 by Michael Linskey, a South Boston resident and associate of Bulger's. The other partners were Kevin Weeks of Quincy and Patrick Linskey of Hanover, who is Linskey's brother.

After 25 percent in federal and state taxes was withheld, $537,396 check was presented to Linskey. He will collect half of that, in the first of 20 annual installments. His three partners will split the other half.

The winning numbers were 8-15-32-35-40-42, with a bonus number of 46.

Rains welcome despite hassles

Last week's rains brought a refreshing change to the Tall City, which was starting to bake under the hot July sun. But the resulting flooded streets and drowned-out vehicles were less than appreciated.

Some longtime Midlanders compared the flooding to that experienced in 1968.

Before the week was out, grouchy Midlanders were actually starting to complain about the showers that had lingered over the city for several days.

Thank goodness, and the Almighty, that the rains came. Less than two inches of rain had been recorded in July and less than eight inches in 1991 before the rains began. By the time the last shower ended Saturday evening, the total rainfall for the month of July stood at 8.50 inches and the total for the year was 14.60 inches. That puts the Midland area in good shape on rainfall, with the year-to-date total already nearly an inch ahead of last year's accumulation.

The rain lifted the spirits of most Midlanders and gave structures and streets and much-needed rinsing. Area farmers and ranchers also were jovial, saying that the rains came just about right for this year's crops as well as to rejuvenate pastures. Of course, they also noted that to be really effective a follow-up rainfall will be needed in about two weeks. If that follow-up rain fails to materialize, the Midland country will be back in fairly desperate straits by mid-August.

Farmers and ranchers talk about rain because they live by the weather. When a high wind blows in from the west and flattens a crop or drought sucks the life out of a dryland farm, the businessman in question feels the effects of that loss personally. So, naturally, they talk about the weather, although there are others who are removed from the agriculture scene are less than understanding at times.

Occasionally we hear rumblings from two of the state's most populous cities — namely, Dallas and Houston — that Texas society is urban now, and that there's nothing west of the Metroplex that is even worth considering.

Well, we'll concede that this state is strikingly more urban than it was three decades ago and likely will grow more so in coming years. But we believe there are more than a few Texans in this forgotten part of the Lone Star State who still comprehend the importance of our agribusinesses to the Texas economy and more specifically to our lifestyle. Even most of the city-folks in this part of the state are still close enough to the soil to recognize that without agriculture little else would be possible — even in Dallas and Houston.

And we still understand that the importance of rainfall, although it is inconvenient and complicating on the few days it falls each year. Even the grouches agree to that!

Proposed tax is one that all can dislike

A new tax is proposed by the Andrews-Midland County Education District to be voted on Aug. 10th. A new tax proposal distresses me, but I am pleased to note that this one has something for every voter to dislike, without regard to his or her age, sex, race, creed, color or ethnic origin. I mean that every "rich man, poor man, beggarman, thief... doctor, lawyer, merchant chief" can be against this tax.

This proposal will tax all tangible personal property in the education district not held for the production of income. The only exception will be manufactured homes. The proposal will tax nearly everything you can think of and many things you can't think of. For example, consider this: it will tax a family car, the household furniture and furnishings, a grandmother's dentures, a grandfather's hearing aid, a dad's trophies and awards, a mother's wedding ring, a baby's teething ring, a collector's collections, a sports person's equipment, a hobbyist's shop studio and paraphernalia — simply it will tax everything a person holds dear.

Can you imagine a tax agent entering your home to enforce such a tax? Where would that person likely start the inventory? Wherever he or she might start would certainly be intimate and personal as to the taxpayer, who would surely object to such an invasion of privacy.

I think this proposed tax should be defeated.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, July 31, the 212th day of 1991. There are 153 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 31, 1777, the Marquis de Lafayette, a 19-year-old French nobleman, was made a major-general in the Continental Army after offering his help to the rebelling American colonists. Lafayette later played a role in the British defeat at Yorktown.

On this date:

In 1492, Christopher Columbus discovered the island of Trinidad.

In 1556, St. Ignatius of Loyola, the founder of the Society of Jesus, died in Rome.

In 1875, the 17th president of the United States, Andrew Johnson, died in Carter Station, Tenn., at age 66.

In 1948, President Truman helped dedicate New York International Airport at Idlewild Field. (The airport was later renamed John F. Kennedy International Airport.)

In 1972, Democratic vice-presidential candidate Thomas Eagleton withdrew from the ticket with George McGovern following disclosures Eagleton had once undergone psychiatric treatment.

JACK ANDERSON

Cannon proves environment, profit mix

WASHINGTON — Most small boys dream of hitting a grand slam in the World Series, scoring a touchdown in the Super Bowl, starring as a movie hero, or soaring to Mars. Young Joe Cannon wanted to own a steel mill.

Before he turned 40, he made his dream come true, but he took a strange route — through the Environmental Protection Agency where he enforced clean-air laws during the Reagan administration. Now, as the owner of the Geneva Steel works in Provo, Utah, Cannon, a Republican, is thinking about going back to Washington, this time as a senator.

Some might consider working in the Reagan EPA as good training for the steel industry, but Cannon is a certified environmentalist who, during his tenure at EPA, worked to clean up the air that steel mills pollute. As head of the EPA's air-quality division in the early 1980s, he is credited with getting the lead out of gasoline and tightening the rules on emissions from industrial smokestacks.

His success story deserves to be told in an era of economic bad news and environmental pessimism. We normally devote this space to delivering that bad news and pinpointing those who are responsible for it. Today we recognize someone who is going against the tide.

As a steel magnate, Cannon is striving to remove the pollutants from his own smokestacks. His first move after taking over the Geneva furnaces was to appeal to his blue-collar workers to help him clean them up. They showed him how it could be done, and then helped him do it with an enthusiasm that he infused.

Not only has Cannon introduced environmentalism on the factory floor, he is installing equipment that will dramatically reduce the soot billowing out of the plant. These environmental accommodations will cost more than $80 million — almost double the original purchase price of the mill.

Yet, Cannon is transforming an old smoky plant into an environmental model without short-changing his stockholders. Not only has Geneva Steel generated a profit every month since he took over, it also is swimming against the tide of imports coming to the United States from Japan. Cannon sells steel to the Japanese at cheaper rates than they can produce it themselves.

The distinguished British publication The Economist wrote of Cannon's acquisition of the old mill, "America's Geneva Steel (is) one of the few steel makers in the world with a good environmental reputation — and one of the world's most profitable."

Cannon is nothing like the hard-eyed tycoon that one might expect to be sitting in the executive offices of a steel mill. He is an amiable fellow, round-faced, blinking through glasses, with the knowing look of an owl. There is also an unpretentious, next-door neighbor quality about him. He dropped by our office, unannounced, for a visit. Because all the chairs were taken, he sprawled on the floor while we talked politics for two hours.

He said he wouldn't mind returning to Washington as the next senator from Utah to fill the spot of retiring Republican Jake Garn. This summer he is testing the waters, not by polling, but by biking with his son from the top to the bottom of Utah, thus combining political probing with physical fitness and a father-son outing. Last week, Cannon announced he was stepping down from running the day-to-day operations of Geneva while he explored the Senate race.

LOOSE ENDS — The Central Intelligence Agency is trying to finish the job that U.S. troops weren't allowed to finish in Iraq — the overthrow of Saddam Hussein. Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf wanted to close the trap on Saddam's Republican Guards, but was ordered by President Bush to end the war. The Republican Guards escaped with most of their weapons, and they used those weapons to crush an uprising by the Kurds and Shiites.

Jack Anderson's and Dale Van Atta's column is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

ART BUCHWALD

Save juries, let newspapers do the job

We were on a sailboat which, without wind, wasn't going anywhere, when the topic of the summer came up again: rape, date rape, statutory rape — and miscellaneous rape. I thought we had thrashed it out for good on land when Gilhooley said, "There is no way of getting a fair trial for a well-publicized crime in the United States. The courts are not equipped to handle it anymore."

"What do you suggest?" asked an angry Gina Gilhooley. "We take it away from the courts and let the man in the street vote on someone's guilt or innocence. He has a lot more resources available to him than jurors do. Americans are the most well-informed people on crimes of passion in the world. They study every publication sold in the supermarkets for hours. They buy People magazine from the newsstands, and they see schlock gossip shows on TV simulating what really happened at the scene of the crime. With all this information we can decide guilt much better than an ignorant jury."

Buchwald

I was not against the idea, I just wanted to know more. "Are you proposing that we eliminate the judge and the jury and mail in our verdict on Willy Smith?"

"Yes. His fate should be in the hands of The New York Post because they have all the facts."

Simplon said, "Where would we find the ballots to send in our votes?"

"They'd be inserted in the publications like subscription cards. The reader would check Guilty, Not Guilty or Hang Him. We could hire Price Waterhouse to count the ballots and perform the execution."

Gina Gilhooley was not so sure. "How do you get a fair trial out of it?"

"Who said anything about a fair trial?" her husband asked. "The people have to make up their own minds based on what they saw on TV or read in the newspapers. For example, the world now knows that three women have come forward to say that Willie attempted to rape them. No charges were ever filed, nor was anything disclosed before the present legal proceedings. Those are the facts, and we the public must read them in the press before we can decide any issue beyond a shadow of a doubt."

"How do we do that?" asked Shoney, who was at the helm.

"By reading the headlines, dummy. You can judge most sexual assault cases in this country by perusing the front pages of the tabloids at any checkout counter."

"I wouldn't like to be tried by the press," I said, "and I am one of them."

"Admittedly it's not very pleasant if you're the defendant, or even if you're the accuser. But our forefathers believed that it was possible to combine a free press and justice with the same stroke of the pen," Gilhooley added. "Are you advocating that William Smith be tried in the press?"

"He has been already," said Gilhooley. "The public is ready to vote today."

Gina Gilhooley remained unconvinced and announced, "I think that Willie deserves his day in court."

"What on earth for?" Gilhooley wanted to know.

"On the off chance that he might get a fair trial."

Gilhooley said, "That's fine for him, but don't the readers of the National Enquirer count for anything?"

Murdered artist, kitten make top spy tale

A talented and beautiful artist is murdered on the towpath along the canal in Georgetown. She is the former wife of a CIA station chief and the illicit love of the president of the United States.

Partly to investigate what he suspected may have been Soviet complicity in the murder (unsolved to this day) but primarily to protect the president's reputation, the chief of counterespionage for the agency — an angular warrior who reads poetry and raises orchids — rushes to her home ahead of the police. He searches for, and at last finds, the woman's diary. He slips it into his pocket, later to read its private revelations and then to consign it to a fire. He starts to leave, but then is startled by the sound of crying.

A hungry kitten appears. Rather than let the victim's pet starve, the cadaverous counterspy scoops it up and takes it with him into the night.

How's that for a grabber of a lead? I was drawn to write it, and you were hooked to read it, by our mutual fascination with espionage — a surreal but real world replete with mystery, violence, hall-of-mirrors deception, the suspension of morality and the interplay of human intelligence.

The 1962 episode above — at least 90 percent true — was called to mind by a book and television show attacking the record of James Jesus Angleton, the longtime protector of our intelligence system from the Soviet penetration agents that riddled other Western agencies, and his most trusted KGB source, the 1961 defector Anatoli Golitsin.

Nothing splits our spooks like the matter of Golitsin. If you believe his story and adopt his strategic vision, as Angleton did so fiercely before he was fired in 1974 by Director William Colby, you see the Soviets embarked on a long campaign of disinformation. It began with the dispatch of a possible "dangle" — the supposed defector Yuri Nosenko, who arrived after the Kennedy assassination to dissociate Moscow from Lee Harvey Oswald — and continued through the cold war, misleading the FBI's J. Edgar Hoover with the U.N.'s "Fedora," who supported Nosenko's story.

On the other hand, if you disbelieve Golitsin, you see the late James Angleton as a paranoid counterspy, ruining careers of loyal spies on misplaced suspicion and even returning real defectors to their death. Most Langley bureaucrats, and all those driven out of the service and seeking vengeance, hold that view today. Their mindset gains credence by the kooky-sounding assertion by Angleton and Golitsin that the whole Sino-Soviet split was part of a master deception.

Overly suspicious Jim Angleton was, but in one former intelligence chief's words, "no Soviet penetrations took place on his watch," and he was right to suspect the Brezhnev detente. Since his kindred spirit, Golitsin, was being pronounced "clinically paranoid" by a former CIA shrink with a curious set of medical ethics, I asked to see the defector, who has never given a press interview.

We met the other day. I can't say where because he still thinks the Russians are after him. He reminds you of the actor Akim Tamiroff after a rough night. Amiable manipulative, he refused to answer such direct questions as "Was there ever a mole in the CIA higher up than Larry Wu-tai Chin?" He'll save that for his memoirs but expounded freely on the continuing strategy of Moscow maneuvering, making me feel like a euphoric Gorbamaniac, which is not easy.

My new source Anatoli remains on the CIA payroll, contributing anti-conventional memos that are read by analysts holding them with tongs, and must be useful: only a few years ago, he was secretly awarded the U.S. government's Medal for Distinguished Service; added to Britain's CBE, that makes him history's most decorated defector.

Does he ever think of Jim Angleton and the cold war days of debriefings and roses?

"He once gave me a kitten," the defector mused, "said he saved it from starvation. Such a picky eater it was, we named it Gourmand. That cat lived with us for 16 years. Still miss her."

Correction: In a column about BCCI, I applied the code name "Tumbleweed" to a former Saudi spymaster; investigators say it refers to a banking operation.

Swaggart defendant: Gorman had two affairs

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Evangelist Jimmy Swaggart did not coerce rival Marvin Gorman into leaving the pulpit after Gorman admitted having a sexual affair with another preacher's wife, Swaggart's longtime attorney testified Tuesday.

William Treeby, a board member of Swaggart's ministry and a co-defendant in Gorman's $90 million defamation lawsuit, said Gorman voiced his intention to quit during a meeting at Swaggart's home on July 15, 1988.

The meeting came after reports surfaced that Gorman had engaged in adulterous affairs. Treeby testified, adding that during the meeting Gorman confessed to having two affairs.

Swaggart "asked him what he was going to do and Marvin Gorman said one of the things was to resign his church," Treeby said.

In the lawsuit, Gorman claims Swaggart schemed to take over his New Orleans-based ministry and forced him to resign as pastor of the First Assemblies of God church.

In 1988, Gorman provided pictures of Swaggart with a New Orleans prostitute, leading to Swag-gart's ouster from the Assemblies of God.

Treeby testified that he became involved in the case after another Assemblies of God minister, Michael Indest, said Linda Savage, the wife of minister David Savage, had told him of a sexual affair with Gorman, from whom she had sought marital counseling.

Treeby said Indest asked him for advice about what to do about the report. Treeby said he consulted with Swaggart, initially without using any names.

Treeby and Swaggart further consulted with Indest by telephone during a Swaggart crusade to Costa Rica, Treeby said.

After their return, a meeting was arranged at Swaggart's home that included Gorman, Savage, Treeby, Indest, and Swaggart's co-pastor Jim Rentz, Treeby said. During that meeting, Gorman confessed to two affairs, Treeby said.

When Swaggart asked Gorman if the report about Ms. Savage was true, Gorman said it was, but added: "You don't understand. Linda has problems," Treeby said.

Savage had previously met with Gorman and forgiven him for the affair, Treeby said.

Treeby described the meeting as quiet.

"He (Gorman) was to be dealt with gently, he was to be dealt with with love. He was to be dealt with according to the scriptures," Treeby said.

Gorman, who at the time negotiating a $20 million loan to expand his ministry and buy a television station, asked the group if a public revelation could be delayed until after his finished his financial talks.

Hi, I'm Willard Weaver and I work for TU Electric. You may not know, but often there are power lines buried underground, as well as overhead... sometimes even in your own yard! I'm telling you this because every year a number of serious injuries or deaths are caused by people accidentally digging into buried power lines.

Electrical safety is a priority.

These types of accidents can easily be avoided. If people would just think before they dig. Know the location of underground electric lines before you dig. If you're not sure, call us at TU Electric.

Lawmakers contemplate 8-cent gasoline tax increase

AUSTIN (AP) — An 8-cent-a-gallon increase in the gasoline tax is being contemplated by lawmakers struggling to balance the budget, but a higher sales tax might be avoided, state leaders said Tuesday.

Legislators in the House hope to get by with revising the state franchise tax, increasing the gasoline tax and raising some fees, Speaker Gib Lewis said. A proposal to revamp the franchise tax includes a levy on business income.

"I think it's possible, I really do," said Lewis, D-Fort Worth. "Of course, you all know I'm very optimistic on all these things."

A $4.8 billion shortfall was estimated for lawmakers called into special session earlier this month to write a state budget for the next two years. But State Comptroller John Sharp has outlined budget cuts and fee increases to whittle down that figure.

"I have felt from the outset that if we did the cuts that we needed to do, and if we did the budget that we needed to do, then when we started talking about revenues we would be looking at the lottery, a reorganization of the franchise tax and perhaps 8 cents on gasoline — 5 cents to the state, 2 cents to the cities and 1 cent to the counties," Gov. Ann Richards said. "I believe from the tracking we're doing (on cuts and spending), that's about what we're looking at," she said.

Rep. James Hury, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, said he was unsure how much the gas tax increase being discussed would bring the state. He also said lawmakers might set aside revenue from 2 cents of the tax for cities, and 1 cent for counties.

The state's current motor fuels tax is 15 cents a gallon. Each penny yields about $100 million, including gasoline and diesel, said state highway department spokesman Roger Polson. Of that money, three-quarters is dedicated to highways and the rest to education.

Hury, D-Galveston, said the overall tax increase needed depends on the spending level approved by lawmakers.

A sales tax increase would be considered "in the event that you needed a great deal of money, and I would qualify $3 billion as a great deal of money," said Hury.

However, he said, "I don't anticipate right now that we will need sales tax money. I'm hoping we don't."

Dissension marks Harris County GOP

HOUSTON (AP) — Republicans in George Bush's adopted hometown, on Tuesday were threatening to split away from the Harris County party chapter because of a growing "religious right" faction, according to published reports.

Members of "Republican Leadership '92," a group of about 25 Harris County Republicans led by precinct chief Jerry Smith, say they will boycott Wednesday's executive committee meeting in a move to delay appointments of some party activists to precinct chairs before the March 1992 elections. The appointments need the approval of the majority of the elected precinct chairmen.

Republican Leadership '92 is opposed to county Chairwoman Sherry Johnson, who they say is encouraging an extremely conservative element in party leadership.

"The county party machinery is being controlled by a group of people who espouse beliefs in special interest areas like gay rights and abortion," Judith Jones, vice chairwoman of the new group, told The Houston Post. "I've been active in the pro-life movement, but it doesn't control my life. All these people care about is their special interest."

"It's gone too far. We have to take back control of the party."

Ms. Jones said the basic message to members is "if you're not a member of the Southern Baptist Church, you're not welcome in the county party."

But Ms. Johnson, who is seeking re-election as Harris County party chief after four years in office, denies showing favoritism toward any party faction.

Ms. Johnson, citing the election of Republicans to county positions last fall, said Monday she continues to work towards grooming candidates and attracting voters to the GOP.

"When you start an aggressive policy of growth, there will be some people who are displeased with some of the decisions that are made," she said.

Houston Republicans and city leaders were able to attract the Republican National Convention for Aug. 17-20, 1992.

Former state Rep. Charlie Hartland, who is bidding to replace his wife as a precinct chairman this year, said a liberal wing of the GOP is trying to splinter the party over the abortion issue.

Johnson's opponents "apparently have identified anybody as pro-life as the religious right," Hartland said.

Andy Abboud, executive director of the county party, said dissension is expected among large groups and does not mark the splintering of the organization.

"There's never going to be 100 percent unilateral support for anyone," Abboud said. "Whenever you make progressive changes like we've done, you're going to upset some people."

Woman drives into sinkhole

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston postal worker escaped serious injury Tuesday when a downtown street gave way beneath her car.

Becky Benson told police she thought her car had a flat tire as she started to drive into the parking lot of the downtown U.S. Post Office.

Suddenly her car was teetering on three wheels over the edge of a 20-foot-deep by 25-foot-wide sinkhole.

"The pavement just gave way," an officer at the scene said. "We tried our best to get a crane over here and get it (the car) out."

Rescue crews helped turn the wheels of the car and try to back it out.

Ms. Benson, who bumped her head as she fled the car, was taken to a hospital but officials said she was not seriously injured.

District Fire Chief Jerry Walker said a broken sewer line may have caused a cavern to form beneath the street.

BBB warns against phone card scams

■ President of Permian Basin BBB says consumers should be leery of giving out their personal access numbers.

Staff Report

Phone calling card numbers should be treated with respect, just like credit card numbers, according to local and state Better Business Bureaus.

The annual bill for telephone scams directed at consumers is estimated by industry experts at $1 billion nationwide.

Thousands of American consumers are being scammed every day by telephone con artists who trick them into revealing their calling card numbers or accepting long distance charges, according to the BBB in Dallas.

"It's a variation of the old credit card deal," said John Schmidt, president of the BBB of the Permian Basin.

Schmidt said persons should be leery of giving out any personal access numbers.

The BBB is offering tips to consumers on how to avoid becoming a fraud victim.

Consumers are advised to be on the lookout for calling card number thieves in public places and to hang up on suspected telephone scam artists.

The best defense against toll fraud is education, according to AT&T.

The two most prevalent types of phone fraud, according to information from AT&T is calling card and third-number billing scams.

Telephone toll fraud occurs when someone places an illicit toll call by 1) charging the call to a stolen calling card number, or 2) tricking an innocent victim into accepting the toll charges.

Calling card thieves usually find their victims in busy public places such as a bus, train or airline terminals. The victim can be any unsuspecting caller who makes a calling card call from a public phone.

The annual bill for telephone scams...is estimated...at $1 billion nationwide.

Frequently, card number thieves simply stand close to their victim in order to watch the calling card digits being entered on a touch-tone phone. If a caller verbally provides calling card information to an operator, the thief tries to listen in.

A thief may even use binoculars to scan the numbers from the calling card or to watch as the victim punches in the calling card digits on a touch-tone phone.

Some unwary customers may receive a call at home from a fraud artist posing as a phone company or law enforcement investigator. The fraud artist requests the customer's calling card number and provides a phony explanation of a supposed toll fraud investigation or problems with the company's database that require investigators to "activate" the customer's calling card number.

Customers should know that no telephone company — including AT&T, other long distance companies, and local phone companies — would ever ask a customer for a calling card number or personal identification number (PIN) over the telephone. Phone companies already have that information.

After stealing calling card numbers, the thieves usually find an available public phone form which they sell discounted long-distance calls to locations around the world.

Third-number billing fraud involves what AT&T officials have labeled the "Just Say Yes" scam, in which victims are convinced to accept charges for calls made by someone else.

A thief impersonating an investigator calls the victim at home and asks for the customer's cooperation in a telephone company investigation. The thief always has a plausible explanation, such as a criminal investigation or service disruption problems.

The victim is then asked to "just say yes" when the operator calls them to accept charges for a series of international calls. The imposter reassures the customer that they won't be billed for the calls. In some cases, victims are promised substantial credit or cash payment as an incentive to cooperate.

If the customer is reluctant to cooperate, the imposter may try intimidation by threatening to cut off phone service.

Customers should always protect the security of their calling card numbers. Customers should also know they are responsible if they willingly accept third-number charges.

AT&T offers the following tips to avoid calling card fraud:

■ Make sure no one can see you keying in your calling card number or overhear you reading the number to the operator. Whenever possible, use a phone that reads your calling card automatically.

■ Beware of individuals who call you at home requesting telephone calling card number verification. AT&T and other telephone companies will never ask you for your card number over the phone. Your long distance and local phone companies already have that information in their billing records.

■ If you suspect that your telephone calling card has been lost, stolen or otherwise compromised report this immediately to your long distance company. The company will immediately cancel your calling card number and issue you a new card.

■ If you receive a call from anyone claiming to be a phone company or law enforcement investigator asking you to accept charges, simply hang up immediately.

Telephone companies or law enforcement officials will never call customers and ask them to accept collect or third-party charges as part of an investigation.

■ If you suspect you are a victim of third-number billing fraud, you should report this immediately.

Odessa hospital may get more funds

■ Medical Center Hospital could receive more than $6 million under new Medicaid program.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Hospitals that serve a large number of poor people could get about $1 billion more in federal money over the next two years under a bill signed into law Tuesday by Gov. Ann Richards.

The bill means a potential windfall of more than $6 million for Medical Center Hospital in Odessa.

"What it means is that the 24 largest hospitals in the state will receive a significant amount of money for enhancement of their programs," said Rep. Jack Vowell, R-El Paso, sponsor of the measure.

The bill would not be effective if the federal government rejected the plan, or if federal funds were not available.

It was approved 141-0 by the House Tuesday, after Sunday passage by the Senate.

"Now more Texans in need of health care will receive it and the burden on local and state governments will be reduced," Richards said in a statement after signing the bill.

Under the measure, two dozen hospitals that have an above-average load of Medicaid patients would pay the state 1.25 percent of their inpatient, non-Medicaid income.

The estimated $585 million in fee revenue would be matched by the federal government, yielding about $1 billion.

Most of the money would go back to the 24 hospitals, and 5 percent would be set aside for rural hospitals that treat a disproportionate number of low-income patients, Richards' office said.

Under the plan Odessa's MCH will be assessed a state tax of $9.8 million in exchange for $16.6 million in federal funds for a net gain of $6.8 million.

Vowell said the additional federal money —

Post office to be named after Hyde

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

The Midland General Mail Facility will be renamed to honor 46-year postal veteran Carl O. Hyde, U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith's office announced Tuesday.

Legislation renaming the facility at Midland International Airport — H.R. 2347 — has been signed by President Bush, said Smith, whose congressional district includes Midland. Construction of the facility was the final project Hyde initiated before his death in April 1988.

The bill signing ends a three-year campaign by supporters that included the Midland City Council, Chamber of Commerce, County Commissioners and numerous local civic groups and organizations.

"Carl O. Hyde dedicated the majority of his adult life to the postal service in Midland," Smith said in a prepared statement. "It is fitting that this mail facility be named for Mr. Hyde who worked diligently to make it a reality."

Hyde's widow, Lou, said Tuesday she was "very excited and thankful" about the renaming. She said Smith had called her with the news.

"I could not thank him enough," Mrs. Hyde said. "He's worked so hard on it."

The San Antonio Republican had proposed a bill in May 1989 to rename the facility, but it failed to pass the Senate after receiving House support.

Stan Sartain, customer services manager for the U.S. Postal Service in Midland, said Hyde was an "extremely lovable man" who deserved the honor.

"I worked with him for 11 years and he gave it his all every day," Sartain said. "He was one of those employees who was always an ambassador for the postal service."

Mrs. Hyde said her husband had been dedicated to his career. "He loved his job. He didn't want to retire," she said. When he died at age 70, Hyde was nearing his planned retirement date.

The announcement of the naming of the Carl O. Hyde General Mail Facility Tuesday coincided with a 20th anniversary open house at the post office, celebrating the reorganization of the U.S. Postal Service. Three-year-old Allen Baker and his mother Dusty Baker were among those enjoying the celebration, which featured tours, refreshments and entertainment.

Rankin boy loses battle with leukemia

■ Trace Gipson, who has been the focus of several fund-raisers and benefits, died Tuesday at a Fort Worth hospital.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

RANKIN — Trace Gipson fought the best he could.

At age 7, he lost his battle to overcome leukemia, despite the support of his home town and communities throughout West Texas and despite the gift of a life-sustaining bone-marrow from his 3-year-old sister, Trista.

The boy, who has been the focus of prayers and benefits that raised $186,000 toward the costs of the bone-marrow transplant, died Tuesday morning in Cook-Fort Worth Children's Hospital where he had received the transplant.

"He never gave up," said Barbara Whatley, a neighbor of the Gipson family and a fund-raiser.

"It's just one of those things," lamented Dean Nicholson, the Rankin businessman who headed up "A Hand Up for Rankin," a recently organized local charitable group.

"It (the transplant) didn't happen to work on this even though they had a compatible donor," Nicholson said. Still, "we'd do it again" in a similar situation, he said of the fund-raising efforts.

Trace, son of Rankin minister Randy Gipson and his wife, Vickie, received marrow from his 3-year-old sister, Trista at the Fort Worth hospital at mid-year. Trace also is survived by another sister, Tori, 11.

As Trace progressed, he came home to Rankin to recover. But the cancer reappeared.

And physicians told the Gipson family toward the end of June that Trace only had "a limited amount of time" to live.

The family left Rankin, a town of about 1,001 people 55 miles south of Midland, to take Trace on vacation and to visit in Nevada and Utah where the family lived prior to coming to Rankin 2½ years ago.

"They opted for some quality life, family life," said Nicholson. Trace, Nicholson had observed last spring while fund-raising efforts, were at their peak. "Is a fine young, little boy."

"He's just full of energy (when the leukemia is in remission), just an average, normal, healthy, rambunctious child."

Even as the boy's life was waning, fund-raising efforts were — and still are — planned to cover costs of the transplant and associated treatment and hospitalization.

"Everybody was behind the fund-raising and prayers for him and all," said Nicholson. Now, he said, the community is in mourning over the boy's death.

Mother to be bone marrow donor for son

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Neal Brenner, a 5-year-old who stands at the crossroads of life and death, is choosing life through his innocent trust in medical science and in his mother's gift of life-sustaining bone marrow.

"It's a miracle itself that a mother can even be a donor," said Neal's 33-year-old father Mike Brenner.

His son, who suffers from leukemia, is to undergo a bone-marrow transplant at Cook-Fort Worth Children's Hospital.

The blood-generating marrow will be taken from his mother, Patsy, in early August when the timing is right. The boy's cancerous marrow will be destroyed, then replaced with marrow from the mother's pelvis injected into the boy's bloodstream.

Introduction of compatible, healthy marrow into a diseased body may cause rebirth of healthy marrow.

ber, said he, like so very many others, was "very disappointed that it (the transplant) didn't work, but I'm glad that we took a shot at it."

The transplant was "the only option" Trace had if he were to live. "There were no guarantees on the thing," Johnson said. "We would have liked for a better outcome."

Even when the outcome was uncertain, fund-raising efforts continued: barbecue feeds, car washes, rodeos, sports games, country musical concerts, bake sales, and, among other benefits, an uptown-country dinner and talk by West Texas novelist Elmer Kelton.

Another benefit is coming up on Aug. 17 to help cover costs of Trace's treatment. Bone-marrow transplants, including hospitalization and before- and after-care treatments, may be as costly as $300,000.

Most of the $186,000 to benefit Trace was raised in about two months, Johnson noted of the "tremendous support" for the Gipson

Trains collide

MAGNOLIA (AP) — A freight train collided head-on Tuesday with a smaller train spraying weeds, seriously injuring one person.

The accident occurred shortly after 4 p.m. on a curved section of track about seven miles north of Magnolia, which is about 40 miles northwest of Houston.

Authorities said the larger freight train was traveling at about 40 mph, charging toward a smaller work train that was spraying pesticide on weeds along the side of the tracks. The freight train apparently had permission to be on the tracks.

One person was flown to Hermann Hospital in Houston with serious injuries. His condition was not immediately known. Three other people were treated on the scene for cuts and bruises.

College students may now register for TASP test to be offered Aug. 17

Staff Report

College students who have not met requirements of the Texas Academic Skills Program (TASP) can begin registering today for an additional summer-time administration of the test. Aug. 17 will be the last time students can take the test before the fall semester begins.

State law requires students to pass all sections of the test before enrolling in upper division courses beyond 60 credit hours.

The TASP test is required of all students entering Texas public colleges and universities. The test identifies students who need additional help in reading, mathematics and writing to do college-level work.

Students who do not pass the test must enroll in remedial programs.

Students can register for the Aug. 17 administration of the test by calling (512) 926-6746 between 8 a.m. and 7 p.m. today, July 31 and Aug. 1, 2, 5, 6, and 7.

The test will be offered at six sites: El Paso Community College, Texas Tech University of Lubbock, Collin County Community College of Plano, Houston Community College, the University of Texas at San Antonio, and the University of Texas-Pan American.

Students must bring a money order for $65 on the day of the test, a completed TASP registration form and two forms of identification (one which has a photograph of the student).

Some students may qualify for waivers, available from the student financial aid office of the institution they plan to attend, to cover part of the cost.

Test results will be mailed to the students on or about Sept. 7.

NEAL: 5-year-old needs transplant

(From 1B)

Without the transplant, Neal has about a 10 percent chance to live. But with a successful transplant, his life is all but guaranteed.

The extreme expense, up to $300,000, of the bone-marrow transplant is of much concern to Brenner.

"It's high. But I'm not worrying about the future as far as the money. That's the last thing on my mind."

The family's insurance carrier, after some debate, agreed to pay the first $100,000 toward cost of the operation.

His concern is his son's survival. Neal's odds of surviving a bone-marrow transplant are increased since his mother is the compatible donor.

But because she was pregnant when Neal's leukemia was discovered last November, the transplant was postponed.

On June 24, Neal's sister, Tracy Lynette, was born.

And less than a month later, the family was off to Fort Worth on a life-saving mission.

"We have a lot of faith in God," said Neal's grandmother, Leann Brenner of Midland, "and live one day at a time. We feel like it (the transplant) will be successful," she said, "but we need everybody's prayers. It will be a long ordeal."

Her grandson, however, "really doesn't understand what's ahead of him."

"He just knows he's going to the hospital," Mrs. Brenner said.

"They say children do better than adults, a lot of times," reflected the grandmother. "And I think one of the reasons is they don't know what's ahead. Adults worry, and they live in 'what-ifs.'"

"I pray to God every morning and evening that He will take care of Neal," she said.

Neal's mother "feels real fortunate that she is giving him life twice," the grandmother said.

Symptoms of Neal's illness first appeared last November, recalled the mother. He bruised easily, experienced frequent nose bleeds, and tired easily.

By then, she was two months pregnant with Neal's baby sister. And blood tests indicated that she, of all family members, was the ideal donor of seed marrow.

"Of course," Patsy Brenner said, "it was a shock when we first found out (about Neal's leukemia). But 'talking with the doctors,' the family learned that 'there is so much more they can do for leukemia victims.'"

Cures are possible. Neal's mother said that she feels "good that I might be able to save his life" by donating a portion of her bone marrow, which will regenerate.

"I have faith that it (the transplant) will cure him," she said. "They don't know what caused it, but it's amazing they can cure it."

"Everybody has prayed for Neal," Patsy Brenner said. "I really think he will come through this with flying colors."

Ground chicken is taste-tested

By Linda Anderson

For several years now meat producers (or maybe I should say poultry producers) have marketed lower-fat ground turkey as a substitute for higher-fat ground beef. Now they have begun marketing ground chicken for the same reason.

Ground chicken, like ground turkey, is usually found in one-pound rolls in the frozen meat section of the supermarket. You have to read the label to make sure that's what you're getting because its package is the same size and shape as packages of sausage.

I have used and liked ground turkey for quite a while now, so I couldn't resist buying some ground chicken to check it out for taste, price and advertising accuracy — and also to see how it compares to ground turkey.

The ground chicken I have found here in a local supermarket is from Lake Lanier Farms. It cost 99 cents for a one-pound pre-packaged roll.

Label advertising is limited to claims of this "Finely Ground Chicken" as having "No Additives" and "No Preservatives," and instructions to "Use as you would ground beef or pork."

On the back of the package are instructions for handling/thawing, and recipes for using ground chicken. The recipe on the back of my package was for Mexican Style Chicken Loaf. I read the recipe, and decided it sounded just like meatloaf with green chilies. Nothing unusual there.

For the taste test, I browned a package of the ground chicken, which is just like browning ground beef. After years of cooking ground turkey (which renders out a little fat and a lot of water), I was surprised at the amount of fat that rendered out of the ground chicken. It didn't seem to be as low-fat as I would have liked.

One young taste-tester and I did the actual tasting part of the test. She said it was OK, and that it tasted just like chicken. I thought it was a little greasy, like ground beef.

Other than the price of the ground chicken being a little lower than ground turkey, I can't see any advantages to having ground chicken instead of ground turkey. They both tasted similar and the ground turkey seems to have less fat (although I don't know for sure since there was no nutrition information on the label of the package of ground chicken). And prices vary so much, ground turkey is bound to be on sale sometime.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Price at other locations may vary.

Keep salads fresh but 'restrained'

NEW YORK (AP) — "If I had to pick one food that I couldn't live without," writes cookbook author Viana La Place, "it would be a salad, since it can revive, refresh and satisfy me in a way no other food can."

La Place grew up in an Italian family where fresh vegetables and salads were served at every meal. "I badgered everyone at the table for the tasty heart of their artichoke, ate tomato sandwiches spiked with oregano after school, and dipped my bread into the vinegary juices in the bottom of the salad bowl," she writes in her new cookbook, "Verdura: Vegetables Italian Style" (Morrow $22.95).

The cookbook's salad section includes recipes for leafy salads, "little" salads and salads as a main course. Among her creations: Tomato and Peach Salad, Tender Mixed Salad and Summer Holiday Rice Salad.

What is most important in making a salad? The freshness of ingredients, La Place says. Be sure to handle fragile lettuce gently and dry all lettuces well, since water will dilute the strength of a dressing.

It's also important, she says, to keep salad ingredients to a "restrained" number; too many will create a confusing jumble.

Creative cooks can use simple ingredients for elegant dinners

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Does what's left of last night's grilled meat and vegetables need a little inspiration?

Relax, we all have nights like that. With a few eggs, milk and seasonings, you'll soon have a satisfying, appealing dinner for the whole family.

OMELETS

For each omelet, beat together 2 eggs, 1 tablespoon water and a dash of salt. Cook in a buttered small skillet, lifting edges and letting uncooked portion flow underneath. Fill the omelet with hot or cold leftover filling ingredients. A 2-egg omelet will comfortably hold about 1/2 cup of filling. (Be sure to chop any large filling ingredients so they won't tear the omelet.)

FRITTATAS

For 3 servings, combine 6 beaten eggs and about 1 cup chopped leftover ingredients. Cook on your range-top in a little butter in a broilerproof skillet. When almost set, sprinkle with Parmesan cheese and broil until golden.

QUICHES

For 6 servings, whisk together 3 beaten eggs and 1 1/2 cups each milk, cheese and chopped leftover ingredients. Add desired seasonings. Pour into a prebaked 9-inch pie crust and bake in a 325-degree F oven for 35 to 40 minutes or until a knife inserted near the center comes out clean.

STRATAS

For 6 servings, layer about 5 cups bread cubes and 1 1/2 cups shredded cheese in an 8x8x2-inch baking dish. Combine 4 beaten eggs, 2 cups milk, 1 cup chopped leftover ingredients and desired seasonings; pour over layers. Cover and chill for several hours or overnight. Bake, uncovered, in a 325-degree F oven for 45 to 50 minutes or until a knife inserted near the center comes out clean.

Raitt donates concert profits to environmental crusaders

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. — Bonnie Raitt will donate some profits from her Sept. 1 concert to environmental groups battling a proposed coal-burning power plant in upstate New York.

The Grammy Award-winning singer set aside 200 tickets from her concert at Saratoga Performing Arts Center, said actor Christopher Reeve, who owns a home near the plant's proposed site in Half-moon north of Albany.

Those tickets will sell for $75 each, with an optional reception afterward costing an additional $50.

The proceeds will help cover legal costs for the Creative Coalition, the Sierra Club and Concerned Citizens for the Environment. The groups are fighting a coal-burning power plant Inter-Power of New York Inc. wants to build.

After expenses, the groups hoped to raise up to $10,000 from the ticket sales.

NEW YORK — Fashion designer Mary McFadden broke two ribs in a celebrity tennis tournament when she was accidentally hit by her doubles partner, actor Ian Ziering of "Beverly Hills 90210."

McFadden and Ziering were playing against Robin Leach, host of "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous," and actor Judson Mills of "As the World Turns" in Sunday's tournament.

Ziering swung at the ball and struck McFadden's right side with his racket. "McFadden made the final serve before she left the tennis court," said her spokesman, Matthew Rich.

She won the set 6-3. She is under the care of a private physician, he said.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Comic Jay Leno borrowed a few tools and got down and dirty at the Beverly Hills Celebrity Car Show, slipping beneath a troublesome Lamborghini Espada sports car to solve a cranky hood.

Collector-car analyst Bill Gillette's $50,000 Lamborghini overheated during the charity show Saturday and he couldn't get the hood open. Luckily, Leno walked by.

The "Tonight Show" starring Johnny Carson's heir, who owns a similar Espada, coolly asked for tools and proceeded to get down on his back to analyze the problem. Ten minutes later, he had the hood open. "Where should I send the check?" Gillette asked.

Leno, a collector of vintage cars and motorcycles, spent 15 more minutes giving Gillette a crash course on diagnosing Lamborghini problems.

DETROIT — Eddie Kendricks, a former Temptations singer, was briefly jailed for the second time in three months on charges of failing to pay child support.

Wayne County Circuit Judge Charles Kaufman ordered the singer jailed Monday. Kendricks was freed later in the day after posting a $1,000 bond.

According to court documents, Kendricks owed his former wife $35,000 in overdue child support, which the judge ordered him to pay beginning in June in $1,000 increments each month. Kendricks' son is in his mid-20s.

In June, Kendricks was arrested at the funeral of former Temptation David Ruffin and charged with failing to pay a former girlfriend for support of another child.

CINCINNATI — Singers Gene Pitney, B.J. Thomas and the Shirelles are entitled to a total of $643,209 in royalties from two companies that owned or distributed their recordings, a federal appeals court ruled.

A three-judge panel of the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Monday unanimously upheld a Tennessee court's ruling in favor of the singers.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Higgins in Nashville ruled July 2, 1990, that G.M.L. Inc. and Gusto Records Inc. owed Pitney $187,762 in royalties plus interest and Thomas $177,299 plus interest, and the appeals court agreed.

Shirelles members Shirley Owens Alston, Doris Coley Jackson and Beverly Lee, and Vernon McFadden Jr., the widower of group member Addie Harris McFadden, should be paid $119,537 each, plus interest, Higgins said.

G.M.L. purchased master recordings of the entertainers' songs in the mid-1960s, while Gusto sold copies of them for the retail trade.

The songs at issue included some of the entertainers' best-known recordings: Thomas' "Raindrops Keep Fallin' on My Head"; Pitney's "Only Love Can Break a Heart" and "A Town Without Pity," and the Shirelles' "Dedicated to the One I Love," "Soldier Boy" and "Will You Still Love Me Tomorrow."

DEAR ABBY

Getting out of marriage is harder than getting in

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 21½ years old and was married when I was 20. I thought at the time I was doing the right thing, but now, after a year and a half of marriage, I realize it was a mistake. I was too young to get married.

Van Buren

My husband and I disagreed on too many things, so now we are getting a divorce. He doesn't want it, but he says if I pay for it, he will sign all the required papers. We have nothing to divide. No house, no car, no money and no kids. Nothing to fight over.

Now for my problem: I went to a legal clinic and they told me there wasn't any "no-fault divorce" in Cook County, Ill., which is where we live. This means I will have to go to court and claim "mental cruelty."

Abby, there was no mental cruelty, so why do I have to go to court and lie — especially since my husband agreed to cooperate? Isn't there someplace that we could go and just sign some papers and be divorced? Why must I point a finger of blame at a perfectly nice man? The marriage was MY mistake.

Also, I would like to know why a divorce should cost so much? I was quoted a figure of $970. There is nothing to divide up, and my husband is not going to contest the divorce. Isn't there a cheaper and easier way? — NOBODY'S FAULT

DEAR NOBODY'S FAULT: A cheaper divorce would be available through your legal aid society — only if you are unemployed.

According to Dorothy B. Johnson, attorney at law and chairperson of the Chicago Bar Association Matrimonial Law Committee:

"Since July 1, 1984, there has been another ground for dissolution of marriage in Illinois, which you and your spouse may find more suitable: 'irreconcilable differences.'"

"As for the cost of your divorce, the rate you were quoted is not out of line for the greater Chicago area."

DEAR ABBY: The letter from a woman who had witnessed a father abusing his young son in a department store, and she didn't know what to do or say, bothered me. You seemed to be sympathetic with the abuser and suggested that she could have said, "I know how you must feel — shopping with children isn't easy," which would seem to give approval to the father's actions.

The other day, I witnessed a similar situation involving a young mother in a checkout line in a su-

Crispy chicken made without fat of frying

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

It's true. You can enjoy crispy, golden chicken without the fat of frying. First, remove the skin because that's where a big share of the fat hides. Next, dip the pieces into egg white rather than whole eggs. Then, roll the chicken in a Parmesan and whole-wheat flour coating. Bake in a hot oven without turning, so the top gets nice and crisp.

PARMESAN CHICKEN
1 2½- to 3-pound broiler-fryer chicken, cut up
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
¼ cup whole-wheat flour
1 teaspoon paprika
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
2 slightly beaten egg whites
2 tablespoons milk

Remove skin from chicken; rinse and pat dry. In a plastic bag combine Parmesan cheese, flour, paprika, salt and pepper. In a shallow dish stir together egg and milk.

Dip chicken into egg mixture. Place 2 or 3 pieces at a time in the plastic bag; close bag and shake to coat chicken with cheese mixture. Repeat with remaining chicken. Place chicken in a 13x9x2-inch baking pan. Bake in a 375-degree oven for 45 to 55 minutes or until chicken is tender. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Sassy ravioli primavera is a breeze to prepare in microwave

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Relax! This sassy pasta dinner for two is a breeze to fix, thanks to your microwave oven. While the pasta's simmering on the stove, your microwave oven is cooking the chunky fresh vegetables and creamy basil sauce. After only 10 minutes of cooking, you'll have plenty of time to linger over a cozy evening meal together.

RAVIOLI PRIMAVERA
1 9-ounce package refrigerated or frozen cheese-stuffed ravioli or tortellini
1 cup fresh asparagus cut into 1-inch pieces
1 small yellow sweet pepper, cut into ¼-inch pieces (½ cup)
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
¼ cup halved cherry tomatoes
1 3-ounce package cream cheese

¼ teaspoon fresh snipped basil
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ cup milk
¼ cup cashews or walnut pieces
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
Freshly ground pepper

In a large kettle bring water to boiling. Add uncooked ravioli or tortellini; cook according to package directions. Drain and cover to keep warm.

Meanwhile, in a 9-inch microwave-safe pie plate arrange vegetables. Start with asparagus in a ring along the outside rim. Next add yellow pepper in a ring, then mushrooms. Cover with microwave-safe plastic wrap; vent by folding one corner back. Cook on 100 percent power (high) for 4½ to 5 minutes (low-wattage ovens: 6 to 7½ minutes) or until tender, giving dish a half-turn once. Add tomatoes to center of plate; cook on high for 30 seconds (low-wattage ovens: 30 to 60 seconds) or until heated through.

For sauce, in a 2-cup glass measure soften cream cheese, uncovered, on high for 15 to 30 seconds (low-wattage ovens: 30 to 60 seconds). Stir in basil and garlic powder. Slowly add milk, stirring until smooth. Cook, uncovered, on high about 2 minutes (low-wattage ovens: 2½ to 3 minutes) or until sauce is thickened and heated through, stirring once.

Transfer ravioli or tortellini to 2 dinner plates. Drain vegetables and arrange on top pasta. Drizzle with sauce; sprinkle with cashews or walnut pieces, Parmesan cheese and pepper. Makes 2 servings.

Gender tests

LONDON (AP) — Physical examinations for verifying the gender of athletes will be introduced at next month's world track and field championships in Tokyo, the sport's governing body said Tuesday.

For years, the International Amateur Athletic Federation has used saliva samples to confirm gender. But the IAAF said the saliva test "proved to be scientifically unreliable and has caused ethically unacceptable problems for several athletes."

As a result, the IAAF decided to introduce a new system of physical tests starting with the Tokyo competition.

Ryan DL bound?

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers plan to decide today whether to place Nolan Ryan on the disabled list for the second time this season because of a shoulder injury.

Ryan will miss at least one start and may throw only twice in the first two weeks of August because of muscle spasms in his right shoulder, the Rangers said Tuesday.

"He has not been placed on the disabled list. He will be re-evaluated when he gets to Chicago," Rangers spokesman Larry Kelly said. "At that time, if there's no improvement in his status, it's unlikely that he will pitch on the current road trip."

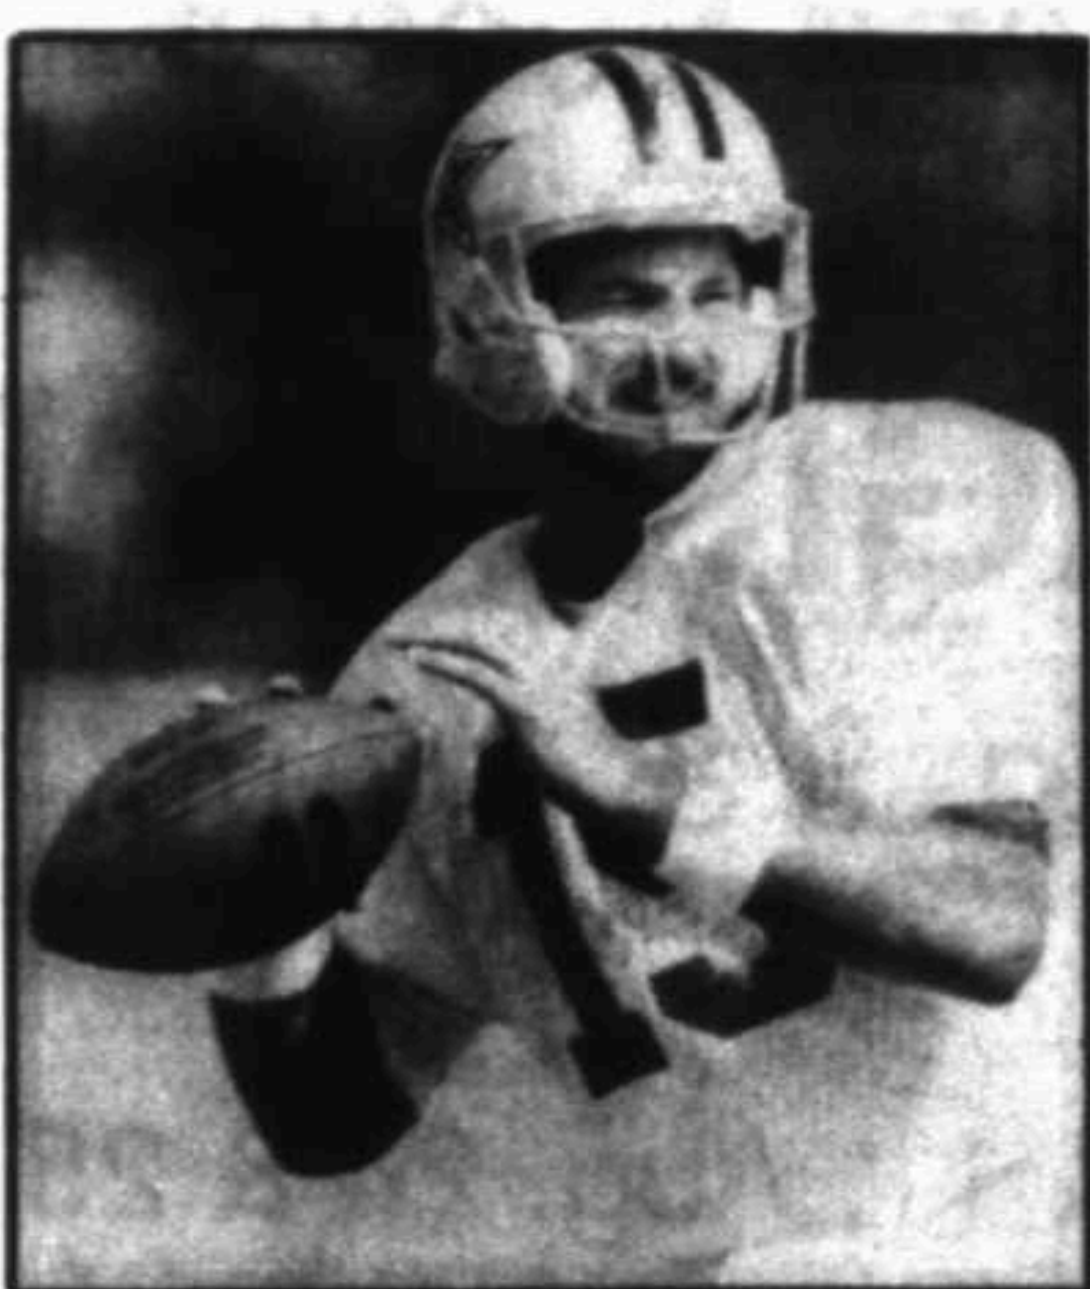

The Rangers closed out a two-game series Tuesday with Boston and will play at Chicago today.

Babe Laufenberg was cut by the Cowboys Tuesday.

Pokes cut Laufenberg

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Babe Laufenberg, a fan favorite who lost his appeal with the coaches when he failed in the final season game against Atlanta last year, was released by the Dallas Cowboys on Tuesday, the eighth time he has been cut in his NFL career.

Laufenberg hadn't taken a snap in two scrimmages against the Houston Oilers in training camp and said last week "you'd have to be a blind man not seeing the handwriting on the wall."

Quintana drains Oil Can

Bosox outfielder ties record with six RBI in one inning

Associated Press

BOSTON — Carlos Quintana provided more offense in one inning than the Boston Red Sox have been getting in most games lately.

Quintana tied the major league record with six RBIs in one inning as the Red Sox beat Texas 11-6 Tuesday and ended their longest home losing streak in 64 years.

"I feel good, I'm happy when we win," Quintana said. "I tried to hit the ball up the middle. Our team looked better today. I hope we can continue to play good."

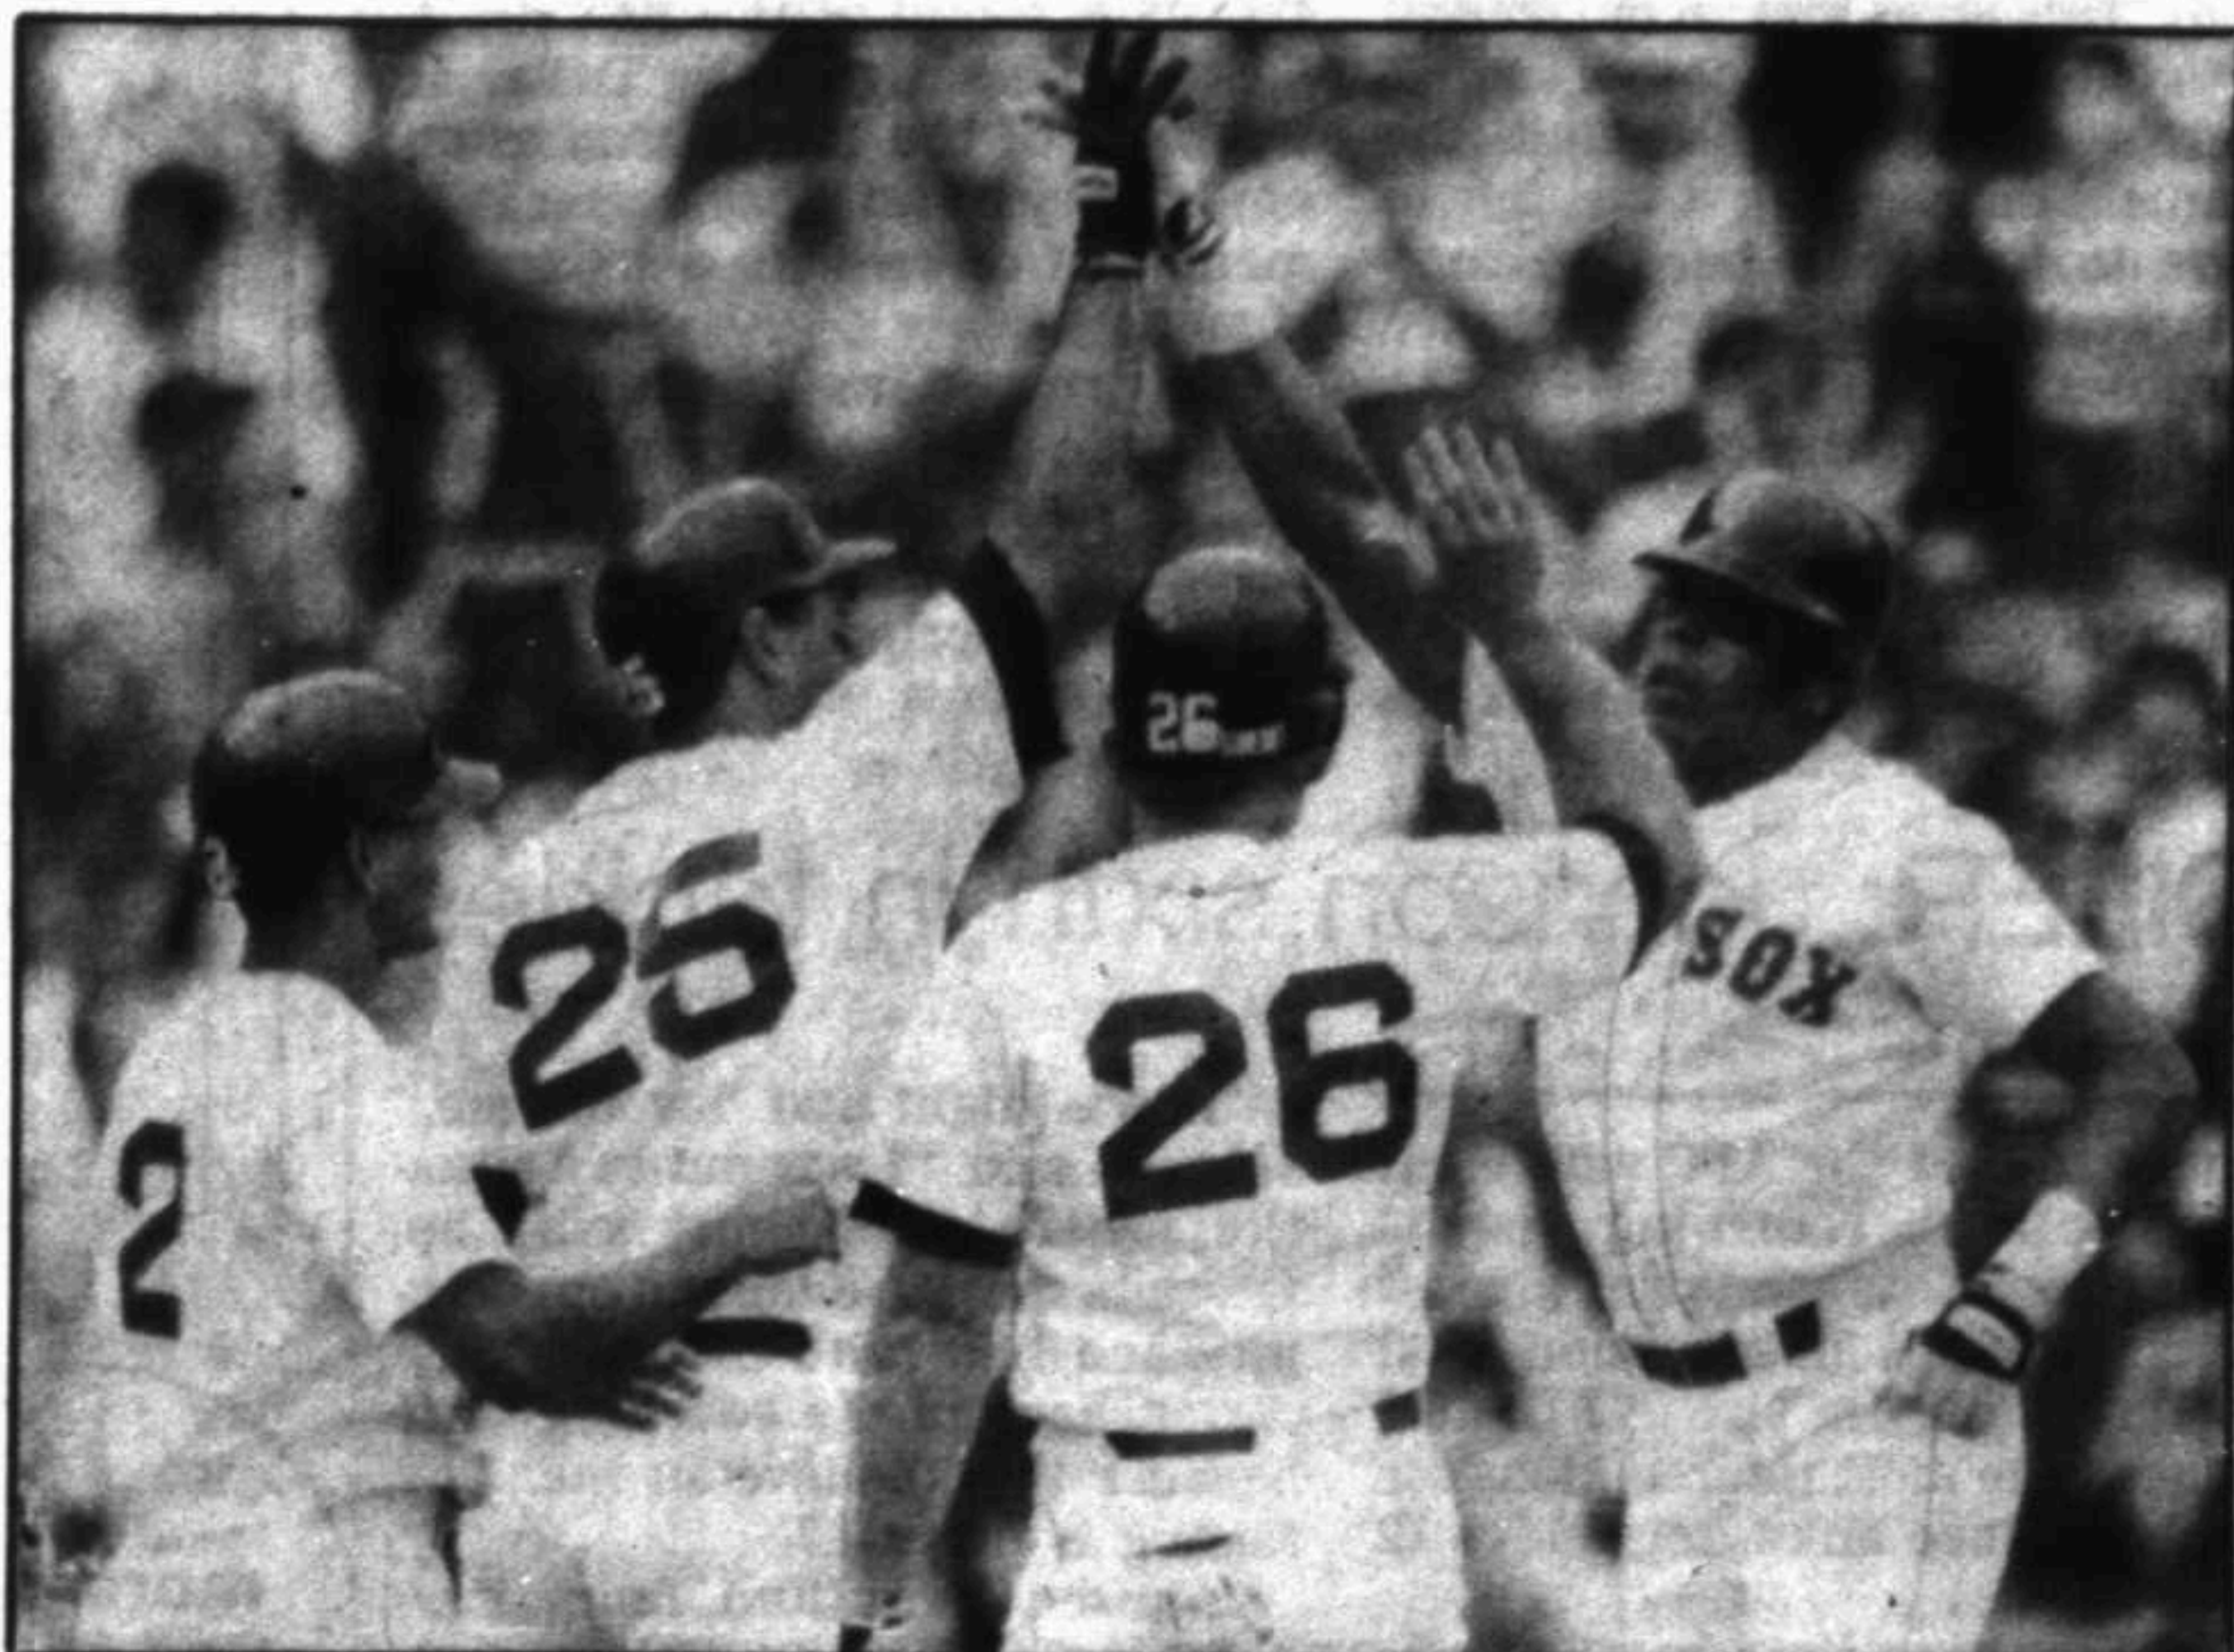

Quintana hit his first career grand slam off Oil Can Boyd (0-2) and a two-run double off Wayne Rosenthal as the Red Sox scored 10 runs in the third inning and went on to halt their nine-game losing streak at Fenway Park.

"You never know when he's going to get hot," Boston manager Joe Morgan said. "And it's certainly nice to break out with some hits at the right time. It's been a pretty long dry spell."

Quintana became the 11th player to drive in six runs in one inning, the first since Atlanta's Dale Murphy in 1989. The last American Leaguer to do it was Jim Lemon of the Washington Senators in 1959.

"Basically, the volcano exploded," said Wade Boggs, who had three hits. "It's been building for a while. The top just blew off."

Boston, which had averaged only 2.7 runs per game since the All-Star break, ended its longest Fenway losing streak since 1927. The Red Sox, who had lost 10 of 11, sent 14 batters to the plate in the third and scored at least 10 runs in an inning for an AL-record 24th time. The last time the Red Sox did it was Aug. 21, 1986, when they scored 12 runs in the sixth inning of a 24-5 victory over Cleveland.

Rookie Kevin Morton (2-2) got the victory despite allowing four runs and eight hits in 6 1-3 innings. Dennis Lamp pitched 2 2-3 innings, giving up RBI singles in the eighth to Brian Downing and Kevin Reimer.

Downing, Juan Gonzalez and Rafael Palmeiro hit solo homers for Texas.

Raburn strikes fast on first day

■ Newcomers vying for the Midland Women's City Golf Championship must deal with the defending titlist, who breezed in Tuesday's first round of match play.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

The prevailing question at this year's Midland Women's City Golf Championship is whether experience will give way to youth.

With three school-age players in the championship flight, this would indeed seem to be changing-of-the-guard time.

But there's one little problem standing in the way of any of these new wave hopefuls: Marna Raburn.

Raburn, the tournament's defending champion, eliminated Jane Koch, 8 and 7 in Tuesday's first round at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

It wasn't so much the quick victory which Raburn enjoyed, but rather the way her fallen opponent, Koch, described Raburn's success in the match play tourney.

"She played a beautiful game," Koch said. "It was like watching Jack Nicklaus on Monday. It was just fun to watch."

"I told her today's her practice round, tomorrow it gets serious."

Two of the three newcomers to the tournament — 16-year-old Paula King, and Midland High graduate Jenny Hyde, proceeded to the second round after first-day wins in the championship flight.

King, a junior at Midland Lee and a member of the Lady Rebel golf team, defeated Janelle Glashof, 4 and 3, while Hyde, a member of the University of Texas women's golf team who red-shirted her first season, defeated April King, 2 and 1.

April King, no relation to Paula, is a graduate of Andrews High golf now living in Midland. She is also a member of the Texas Tech women's golf team.

Kristen Arnold, who defeated Jo Dickson in the one remaining championship flight match, 4 and 2, will meet Paula King in today's second round.

Hyde has pulled the tough duty of meeting Raburn in today's second round.

Seniors get to state final

Midland American Jr. Leaguers eliminated

Staff Report

WACO — Midland American's defense turned four double plays to highlight their 4-2 win over San Antonio McAllister Park in winner's bracket action at the state Senior League tournament in Waco Tuesday.

In Junior League action, Midland American was eliminated from the state tournament following an 11-3 loss to Washington County.

SENIORS: American's win over McAllister Park enables them to move into the state championship game against Northwestern Austin today at 11 a.m.

Two of the American double plays went from pitcher Brian Cordova to shortstop Alex Hale to first baseman Brian Henderson. In addition, third baseman David Romero knocked down two would-be line drive singles to help preserve the shutout for Cordova, the winning pitcher.

Jeff Pursley and Cordova both had triples for American. Cordova finished with two hits in three at bats.

JUNIORS: A six-run fourth inning for Washington County spelled doom for the Midland American Junior Leaguers, eliminated from their division after the thumping.

The Tuesday loss followed a 4-3 opening round defeat at the hands of McAllister Park.

Clay Johnston, who suffered the pitching loss for Midland, did score a run, along with Jay Silva.

Days in doghouse over for Oiler cornerback

■ Richard Johnson, Houston's first-round pick in 1985, never had much of a chance under former coach Jerry Glanville, but that has changed under Jack Pardee.

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — After his 1990 performance, Houston Oilers cornerback Richard Johnson could have said, "I told you so."

But he didn't. It was enough to get out of former coach Jerry Glanville's doghouse and prove he could play in the NFL.

"I don't look at it like 'I told you so,' it's just a matter of going out and taking advantage of the opportunity," Johnson said. "I wouldn't say I was surprised. I knew I could excel in this league. It was just a matter of getting the chance to show it."

"It's just unfortunate that I had to wait five years to get a chance to get out there."

Johnson was the Oilers' first-round selection in 1985 but missed his rookie training camp because of a contract dispute. Johnson was never able to impress Glanville and spent five years languishing on special teams with an occasional start.

New coach Jack Pardee took a fresh look at Johnson and gave him a fulltime chance at cornerback to demonstrate his skills. The results have been pleasing, team officials say.

Pardee lets veterans sleep in

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Houston Oilers coach Jack Pardee, apparently responding to player complaints that he has been working them too hard, gave some of the more experienced veterans the morning off Tuesday.

Pardee said Monday he did not feel his workouts have been overly strenuous. But Tuesday, he let some players sleep in.

"This allows us to get a better look at the players who need the most work," Pardee said. "At the same time we rest some of the older players, give them a chance to rest their legs."

Among those getting the morning off were receiver Drew Hill, guards Mike Munchak and Bruce Matthews and tackle Dean Steinkuhler.

Quarterback Warren Moon indicated he had the option to sit out, but instead went through the workouts in preparation for Saturday's preseason opener in San Diego.

"I felt I needed some more work," Moon said. "I'm going to play some Saturday. I guess about the same I have the last couple of years in the first two preseason games."

Moon might see a little more action because backup Cody Carlson is still holding out. Tuesday marked the 15th day of Carlson's holdout.

over rookie Bill Musgrave in the competition for the role as Troy Aikman's backup. Johnson said he may keep only two quarterbacks this season.

Johnson said he released Laufenberg, whose only Cowboys start was a 26-7 thrashing by the Atlanta Falcons in Dallas' final game of the 1990 regular season, because Laufenberg had no chance of making the team.

"We felt it would be in Babe's best interest, because he wasn't getting a lot of work," Johnson said. "This gives him an opportunity to catch on with another club if there's an opening around the league. I didn't think it was fair to Babe to have him here in camp not working just for insurance purposes."

Johnson said the backup job is Stoudt's to lose.

"It wasn't anything that Babe didn't do," Johnson said. "In the final analysis, it was the performance of Cliff Stoudt."

Stoudt completed 11 of 16 passes for 134 yards and two touchdowns in last Thursday's 30-30 scrimmage tie against the Houston Oilers.

Laufenberg said it became apparent early in camp that he was the odd man out.

"This is just a formality," Laufenberg said as he prepared to leave the Cowboys' camp at St. Edward's University. "I wasn't getting time in practices or the scrimmages. I wasn't competing for a job so maybe it's just as well."

Laufenberg has been with four different teams since he was drafted by the Washington Redskins in the sixth round of the 1983 draft.

Stoudt was signed by Dallas at the close of the 1990 season as an emergency quarterback after Aikman went down with a separated shoulder.

He dressed as Laufenberg's backup in the finale against Atlanta as Laufenberg struggled through a 10-of-24 afternoon. The defeat was a crippling blow to Dallas' hopes for a wild card playoff spot.

games and led the AFC with eight interceptions, returning one 30 yards for a touchdown against Cincinnati. His interception total was second in the NFL and marked the most interceptions for an Oiler since Mike Reinfeldt's 12 in 1979.

Johnson was sixth on the team with 70 tackles and tied with cornerback Cris Dishman for the team lead with 16 passes defended.

"Last year was a rookie year for me, playing 16 games and not knowing what to expect," Johnson said. "This year I know what to expect. The confidence level is higher and I'm ready to go."

An improved coach-player relationship made the difference, he said.

"It was night and day for me," Johnson said. "I was put in a situation where a coaching staff believed in me, gave me the opportunity and had faith in me."

"I believe in the coaching staff because they believe in me. The feeling is mutual."

Johnson benefited from Pardee's move from a 3-4 alignment, which placed greater pressure on the cornerbacks, to a 4-3 defense.

"We went through a big transformation from one defense to another style," Johnson said. "I think it took us awhile to get used to the new coaching system and the way they ran their program."

"I think toward the end of the season we got familiar with what they wanted and they got used to the personnel they had."

GOLF: Raburn vs. Hyde today

(From 1C)

Hyde said while some of the younger players may be more gung ho, that doesn't necessarily make them instant front runners.

"The girls that have played for more years definitely have an advantage," she said.

Paula King, though, had her own thoughts on the matter.

"I think we (the younger players) have a really good chance because we're young," she said. "I do take it seriously. I want to try to make it (professionally) one day."

King was up by four strokes on Glasshof before hitting a bunker on Ranchland's 13th hole. She finally ended her match after 15 holes, up by four strokes.

Raburn, meanwhile, finished early enough to watch how her upcoming opponents were faring.

"It's fun to see all the new faces," she said of the 56 women fielded, up from 40 just a year ago. "It makes it tougher."

Raburn, who moved to Midland three years ago from Anchorage, Alaska, was a second-round loser two years ago in her first tournament before winning it all last year against Dickson.

Playing in the second flight, Marge Bassett recorded a hole-in-one on the 121 yard, No. 4 hole, using a five wood. Bassett's opponent, Billie Fowler, witnessed the feat. Bassett, incidentally, went on to defeat Fowler, 4 and 2.

In today's second round at Hogan Park, Raburn and Hyde tee off at 8:30 a.m. Arnold and King follow at 8:35 a.m.

Final round play concludes Thursday at Midland Country Club.

ers manager Bobby Valentine said. "Our pitchers got behind too many hitters. It was a surprise coming from Oil Can. You don't expect that from him. He usually has more control with his breaking balls."

Texas took a 2-1 lead in the third on a double by Ruben Sierra, a wild pitch and a balk. But then the Red Sox hammered Boyd, making his first start in Fenway since Boston released him after the 1989 season.

Twins 9, Tigers 7
MINNEAPOLIS — Scott Erickson failed to become baseball's first 15-game winner, but Minnesota still beat Detroit behind Shane Mack's first career four-hit game and Carl Willis' sparkling relief.

The Twins, 13-5 since the All-Star break, battered five pitchers for 17 hits, including three in each of the first four innings. The Tigers allowed 33 runs in losing the final four games of a five-game road trip, two to Texas and two to Minnesota.

Erickson (14-3) lost the American League ERA lead by allowing five runs on seven hits in three innings, his shortest outing of the year. He's now at 2.34 compared to Tom Candiotti's 2.32 and has yielded five runs or more in three of his last five starts.

Angels 4, Indians 2
CLEVELAND (AP) — Kirk McCaskill won for the first time since June 25, and Wally Joyner and Dave Parker drove in runs as California took the lead in the eighth inning and beat Cleveland.

McCaskill (8-13) ended his five-game losing streak, allowing two runs and six hits in seven innings as the Angels won their third straight. Bryan Harvey struck out all four batters he faced for his 25th save in 28 chances.

Cleveland lost its third consecutive game and for the sixth time in eight games.

A's 6, Yankees 5

NEW YORK — Jose Canseco hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning as Oakland beat New York.

Canseco was the object of verbal abuse during the two-game series. Fans threw trash and an inflatable doll at him in right field Monday night and continued to taunt him about his friendship with pop star Madonna.

He was the designated hitter Tuesday and came through with Oakland trailing 5-4. Dave Henderson singled off Wade Taylor (5-6) and Canseco followed with his major league-leading 28th home run. Curt Young (3-2), the second of five Oakland pitchers, was the winner and Dennis Eckersley pitched a hitless ninth for his 27th save in 32 chances.

White Sox 8, Jays 7

TORONTO — Frank Thomas broke a seventh-inning tie with a two-run homer as Chicago beat Toronto.

Chicago took a 5-0 lead in the first behind home runs by Dan Pasqua and Ron Karkovics. Toronto, which has lost eight of 10, came back to tie with a run in the fourth and four in the fifth.

With the score tied at 6, Ben MacDonald (2-1) walked Robin Ventura in the seventh and Thomas hit his 19th home run of the season. Joe Carter hit an RBI single in the bottom of the inning.

Brewers 9, Royals 3

MILWAUKEE — Paul Molitor got his 2,000th career hit and Darryl Hamilton drove in four runs as Milwaukee beat Kansas City.

Don August (8-5) allowed three runs and seven hits in six innings and Dan Plesac finished with one-hit relief for his eighth save.

Bret Saberhagen (7-5) gave up seven runs and eight hits.

Woman claims A's Henderson assaulted her

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A woman claimed Oakland Athletics outfielder Rickey Henderson slapped her during a disagreement in his hotel room early Tuesday.

Sandra Salarinatin, 23, of New York, filed an assault complaint against Henderson, traded to Oakland by the New York Yankees in June 1989.

Henderson, the all-time stolen base leader, was voted the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1990. He played for the Yankees for four seasons until he was traded.

"Neither she nor her husband want him arrested," police spokesman Lt. Bob Nardoza said.

Salarinatin, who told police she had been drinking heavily, said she was in Henderson's room at the Grand Hyatt Hotel in Manhattan at about 3 a.m. when the incident occurred, Nardoza said.

Henderson and the woman had a disagreement, and she told police "he gave her a back-handed smack, causing a bruise over her left eye," Nardoza said.

Salarinatin went to a nearby bar and found her husband, who returned with her to the Grand Hyatt at 9:15 a.m. and informed the hotel manager, who called police, Nardoza said.

Home runs lift San Francisco to 10th straight victory

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Will Clark and Matt Williams each homered twice as the San Francisco Giants beat the Montreal Expos 10-3 Tuesday for their 10th straight victory.

The streak is the Giants' longest in a decade. The last time they won 10 in a row was Aug. 3-11, 1982.

Tuesday's victory also capped the Giants' eight-game homestand, only the fifth perfect homestand of six games or more since the team moved here from New York in 1958.

There were six homers among the 19 hits in the game, including two by the Expos' Ivan Calderon. Trevor Wilson (7-9) survived the two homers by Calderon to get the victory. He allowed five hits and three runs while striking out eight and walking two in seven innings. Francisco Oliveras and Bryan Hickerson finished.

The homers by Clark and Williams accounted for six runs.

Astros 7, Cardinals 5
HOUSTON — Mark Davidson hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning, the fifth home run of the game, to give Houston a victory over St. Louis.

The Astros won their third straight game after losing seven in a row.

Casey Candaele walked and scored on Davidson's second homer of the season on a 2-1 pitch from Cris Carpenter (7-3). Al Osuna (6-3) got the victory with two innings of relief.

It was the second time this season for a combined five-homer game in the Astrodome.

Phillies 2, Padres 1
PHILADELPHIA — Jose DeJesus overcame wildness to pitch eight strong innings as Philadelphia snapped a seven-game losing streak.

DeJesus (7-4), who has not allowed more than one earned run in four starts since the All-Star break, got the victory despite walking seven. He scattered seven hits and struck out two. Mitch Williams pitched a scoreless ninth for his 19th save.

The Phillies took a 2-1 lead in the seventh on a walk to leadoff batter Jim Lindeman, a single by Dave Hollins and John Kruk's one-out double off Dennis Rasmussen (3-8). Rasmussen last won on June 15.

Reds 6, Cubs 5

CINCINNATI — Paul O'Neill and Bill Doran hit solo homers in the 10th inning to rally Cincinnati past Chicago.

The Cubs took a 5-4 lead into the top of the 10th, but Chuck McElroy (5-1) gave up a leadoff homer to O'Neill, his 17th, and a one-out homer to Doran as Cincinnati won for only the fourth time in 19 games.

Rob Dibble (1-1) got the win despite giving up a go-ahead sacrifice fly in the top of the inning to George Bell.

Braves 10, Pirates 3

ATLANTA — Pittsburgh lost its season-high fourth straight game as Atlanta rallied late behind the hitting of Terry Pendleton.

The first-place Pirates were coasting 3-0 behind Paul Miller, making his major league debut, when the right-hander lost his control in the sixth inning, loading the bases with no one out.

Gastineau ordered to stand trial

Associated Press

PHOENIX — Former New York Jets defensive end Mark Gastineau was ordered on Tuesday to stand trial Oct. 15 on a felony charge of possession of dangerous drugs.

Police had said last week that they were seeking Gastineau after tests indicated that a package he allegedly picked up at an airport contained amphetamines. Gastineau had been detained at Sky Harbor International Airport the night of April 9, when he allegedly took possession of more than 200 capsules.

That night, Gastineau was interviewed and released pending testing of the capsules, which police Sgt. Kevin Robinson said last week turned out to be a type of amphetamine used to control appetite.

M. Paul Fischer, a lawyer for Gastineau, declined to comment about the charge facing his client.

Gastineau, who in recent years had lived in suburban Scottsdale, retired from the Jets in 1988. He made his debut as a boxer with a 12-second knockout of Derrick Dukes, a pro wrestler, on June 9.

Prices advance

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy futures prices advanced in light trading Tuesday on technical factors and rumors of refinery fires that proved to be unfounded.

The September contract for West Texas Intermediate rose 7 cents to $21.42 a 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Refined products traded on the exchange closed higher after falling in early trading.

Analysts said traders were buying product futures to adjust their positions in advance of the contract expirations.

After the close of trading, the American Petroleum Institute released its weekly tallies of fuel stockpiles.

The trade group said crude oil inventories fell about 1.6 million barrels to just under 347 million barrels. Gasoline stocks fell about 3 million barrels to 210.8 million barrels, and heating oil inventories rose 1.4 million barrels to 120.4 million.

Stocks climb

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted a broad advance Tuesday as investors emerged from the sidelines despite a growing sense that the economic recovery may be flagging.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 31.08 to close at 3,016.32. Gaining issues outnumbered declining ones by about 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Some analysts said that investors, who are fast losing confidence that the much-heralded economic has taken hold, have turned their attention to traditional growth stocks.

Hibernia moves

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Louisiana's largest bank holding company Tuesday reported a $33.2 million second quarter loss, said that it's actively seeking outside investors or a merger and announced the appointment of a new president and chief executive officer.

Hibernia Corporation, with $7.3 billion in assets, also said that it planned to reduce its current 3,700-member staff by 10 percent, restructure its Louisiana operation and sell its Texas operation. Hibernia National Bank of Texas.

The losses pushed Hibernia's capital below the minimum federal requirements.

Trading was halted late Tuesday afternoon, about the time the corporation's announcement was made.

Martin C. Miller retired Tuesday as chairman of corporation and Sidney W. Lassen, chairman of the Executive Committee of the corporation was chosen as the new president and CEO.

Natural-gas price shows signs of rally

By Kyle Pope
Hearst News Service

■ On the New York Mercantile Exchange, natural-gas futures have risen about 2 cents in the past week, 10 cents since late June.

HOUSTON — For the first time in more than eight months, there are faint signs of a turnaround in the price of natural gas.

Experts who track the fuel say gas prices for delivery in August rose more than 10 percent in cash trading last week, wiping out a July decline that had sent prices to their lowest level in 15 years.

"Right now, you're talking about a good 20-cent gain over the last month," said Carol Freedenthal, a principal at Jofree Corp., a Houston energy consulting firm.

"To a degree, you might say we've bottomed out and are on the way back up."

"The question is whether it will last."

Freedenthal said gas sold for as much as $1.25 to $1.30 per 1,000 cubic feet at the end of last week, up from about $1.05 July 22.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, natural gas futures have risen about 2 cents in the past week and 10 cents since late June.

Still, gas is about a dime below last year's prices and far below where most analysts guessed the fuel would be trading.

While the price drop has been severe this summer, experts say the fall actually began in January, when a double whammy of unusually warm weather and a wave of new supplies sent prices plummeting.

Since then, a continuing drop in the price of the fuel has haunted the entire oil patch: The drilling rig count is down, major energy companies are laying off workers, and a skeptical Wall Street has hammered the stocks of some of Houston's largest corporate players.

In addition, companies that find and produce gas have been faced with the agonizing choice of either selling their product at a loss or shutting down their wells and waiting for the market to improve.

Though no precise figures are available to indicate the amount of shut-in gas, it apparently is enough to help nudge up the price, Freedenthal said.

"The demand is still there, but supply has been curtailed by people shutting in," Freedenthal said. "Everyone and his brother is out there trying to buy gas."

While the shut-in gas is good for prices, it can be trouble for gas producers. Experts say the process of curtailing production — usually little more than twisting a valve on the "Christmas tree" web of pipes that sits atop a gas well — can damage some marginal gas formations.

In addition, shut-in wells limit a producer's access to oil and other hydrocarbons in the hole, many of them more profitable than natural gas.

TWA strikes bankruptcy agreement

NEW YORK (AP) — TWA announced an agreement with creditors Tuesday that will temporarily bring it to bankruptcy court and strip chairman Carl C. Icahn of majority ownership.

The agreement will make Trans World Airlines the fifth big U.S. airline to be placed under federal bankruptcy court supervision since December. TWA has been struggling for months with high debts and slack business.

Under the pact, TWA would give creditors much of its equity while Icahn's holdings will shrink from the 90 percent to between 20 percent and 45 percent.

The deal calls for TWA to file what is known as a "prepackaged bankruptcy," under which the company and its creditors agree to a reorganization plan before they go into court.

The arrangement envisions TWA filing for protection under Chapter 11 of federal bankruptcy law in early 1992 and emerging from it soon after, when a judge approves the deal.

Under Chapter 11, a company gets a reprieve from debts and time to reorganize.

Icahn, a takeover investor who acquired control of TWA in 1986 in a complicated debt-financed deal, has missed some debt repayments and has been fending off impatient creditors. TWA owes about $1.37 billion.

The airline's agreement with creditors, announced in a statement, would elimi-

Wages outpace inflation again

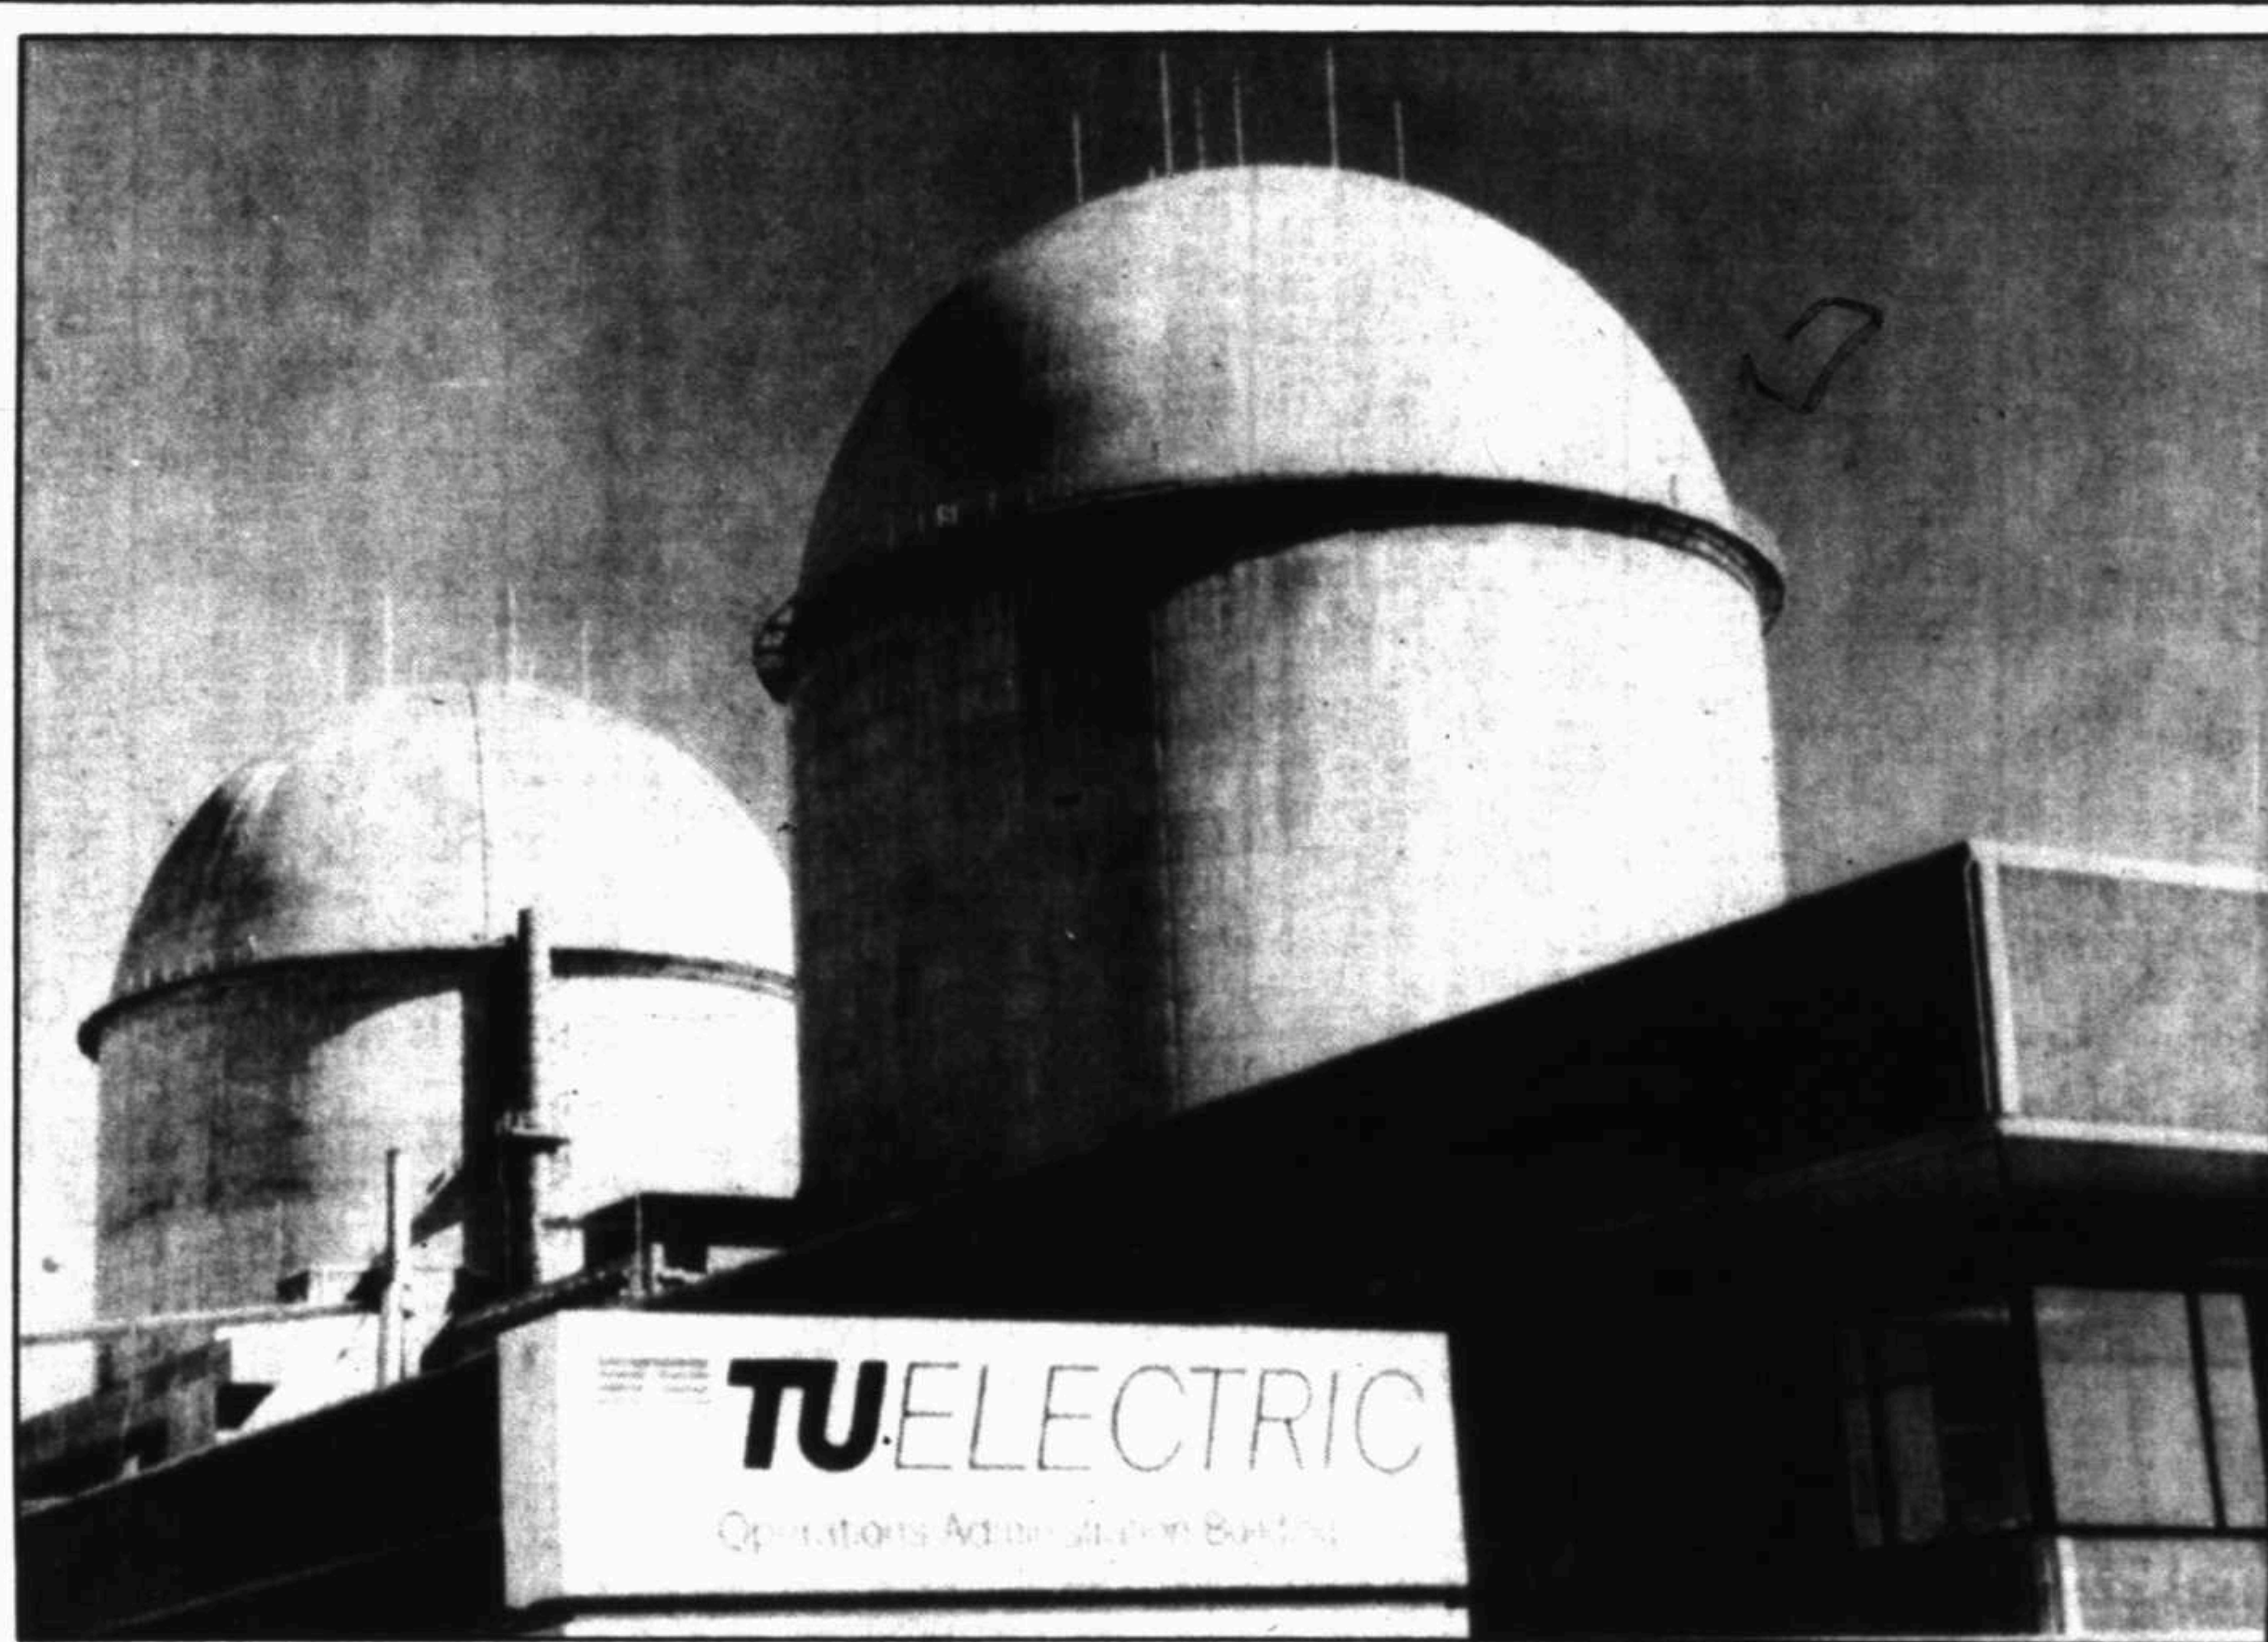

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' wages and salaries rose at an annual rate of 4.1 percent over the last three months as workers' paychecks grew faster than inflation for the second straight quarter, the government said Tuesday.

It was the first time since 1986 that Americans enjoyed back-to-back wage gains outpacing increases in the cost of living, the Labor Department reported.

Analysts said the improved buying power could help buoy an economic recovery.

In other bright news, new home sales resumed their rebound, jumping 7.4 percent. Sales advanced in every region except the South, where they slipped 0.5 percent, according to the departments of Commerce and Housing and Urban Development.

On a negative note, a survey on consumer confidence found that Americans remained uncertain about the economy in July, an indication that the recovery may be far from robust.

The Texas Public Utilities Commission today begins Utilities' Comanche Peak nuclear power plant, deciding how much consumers should pay for Texas

PUC decision at hand for Comanche Peak

DALLAS (AP) — Paying for the nation's last new nuclear power plant pits the wallets of 2.1 million Texans against one of the country's most profitable utilities.

Today, the Public Utility Commission begins deciding how much consumers should pay for Texas Utilities' Comanche Peak nuclear plant. The power station near Glen Rose has cost the utility $9.1 billion since 1972.

The three commissioners expect to take two or three days to vote on the more than 100 issues in the utility's 10.2 percent rate increase request, its first since 1984.

Their key decisions are how much of the rate increase to approve and how much of the cost of Comanche Peak to allow in the utility's rate base.

In addition to setting rates in one-third of the state, the PUC's decision will shape Texas Utilities' bottom line.

"It is the single most important development that is being monitored by the financial community with respect to that company," said Paul Parshley, utility analyst for Shearson Lehman.

"It's been something that has been in everyone's sights for quite a while."

"Very few investor-owned utilities go seven years without a rate increase," said Tom Marshella of Moody's Investor Service. "That's a testament to TU's size, the health of its service territory and acumen of its management. Do they need this? Certainly it is important. You don't go this seven-year period without a rate increase without some erosion in financial indicators."

The utility, considered one of the nation's strongest, has paid dividends to investors throughout its 45-year history and survived its roughest management challenge in the construc-

Study: Contract workers' jobs dangerous

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the most risky and hazardous work in the petrochemical industry is being assigned to inexperienced and uneducated contract workers who may have trouble understanding English, said a study Tuesday prompted by a plant explosion that killed 23 people.

"The least prepared workers in the petrochemical industry are often performing some of its most dangerous work and experiencing a significantly higher proportion of injuries than their more experienced direct-hire counterparts," the study said.

Conducted by the John Gray Institute of the Lamar University System in Beaumont, the study described contract workers as younger, less educated, less experienced in the petrochemical industry, and lower paid than direct-hire employees.

The study also found that contract employees are more likely to be Hispanic and to have English language or communications difficulties. Contract workers also receive less safety training.

Contract employees are hired by engineering and construction companies under contract to the petrochemical plants. The study said the contract employees are used to perform major renovations, specialty work, maintenance and repairs, or during periods of peak production.

The use of contract workers has been increasing and is likely to continue to rise, the study said. Contract workers performed an average of one-third of the work in the nine industries studied.

PLANT: PUC to vote on rate increase request

(From 5C)

tion of Comanche Peak.

The plant was virtually rebuilt after citizens protested the quality of construction in 1984. When first proposed in the early 1970s, Comanche Peak's estimated cost was $779 million.

The first of Comanche Peak's twin 1,150-megawatt units became commercially viable last August. The second unit is due for completion in the mid-1990s, a target that hinges partially on the outcome of the rate case.

About half of Comanche Peak's cost is covered by the current rate request. The rest will be covered by another request later.

"If this rate case goes well, the next one is a carbon copy," said Ed Tirello, analyst for Smith Barney.

The company's stock has been trading near its year-high 39 in recent weeks, closing at 37 1/2 Tuesday. But its bond rating is down to just above speculation grade and the utility hopes a favorable ruling from the PUC will shore up its borrowing ability.

Its principal subsidiary, TU Electric, filed the rate request 19 months ago, seeking $442 million more in annual revenue based on a June 1989 estimate.

The utility implemented the increase last

August pending the PUC's decision, raising the bill for a residential customer who uses 1,500-kilowatt hours a month to $117, from about $106. Money received since that action is subject to refund if the PUC does not uphold the entire increase.

An independent auditor, PUC-appointed examiners, PUC staff members, the Office of Public Utility Counsel, citizens groups and the company have filed thousands of documents and spent hundreds of hours testifying about the case.

The examiners recommended an 8.2 percent hike and said consumers should not have to pay for $472 million in Comanche Peak-related management costs and $975 million for repurchasing a stake in the plant from minority owners.

The staff recommended the full 10.2 percent hike but also said costs nearly equivalent to those cited by the examiners should not be passed on to consumers.

The Office of Public Utility Counsel, a separate state agency that is the leading consumer representative in utility matters, recommended an approximately $100 million decrease in Texas Utilities' rates.

"We found a reduction in their current rates is justified," said Clarence Johnson, chief economist in the office. He said the utility's current rates include federal taxes that no longer exist and the rate hike request includes billions in imprudent costs for Comanche Peak.

For Texas Utilities, all three recommendations are too low.

"Our position all along is we've asked for what we needed. It was a bare minimum request," said spokesman Dick Ramsey.

But he said the utility would rather accept a smaller rate increase than absorb a large amount of Comanche Peak-related costs they are disallowed from passing on to customers.

"A disallowance is investment that you can never get any return on," he said.

The $1.49 billion disallowance recommended by the hearing examiners would be the nation's second-largest associated with an operating nuclear plant, according to Edison Electric Institute. The largest, more than $1.7 billion, was spread around several utilities that own the Nine Mile Point 2 plant in New York.

The Texas PUC in 1988 set aside for further review $600 million in costs incurred by Gulf States Utilities Co. for its River Bend nuclear power plant in Louisiana. That decision sent the Beaumont-based utility, hobbled by the plant's high costs, the commission and intervenors into legal sludge over procedure.

STUDY: Risky work goes to ill-prepared workers

(From 5C)

But in two of the facilities, contract employees outnumbered hourly workers, comprising 57 percent and 54 percent of the total workforce.

The study, requested by the Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration, said the petrochemical industry should be more responsible for training and overseeing safety practices of contract workers to reduce the risk of injuries and deaths in refineries and chemical plants.

The study recommended that OSHA establish and implement safety and health training standards for all petrochemical industry employees.

OSHA officials did not return telephone calls seeking comment.

In a letter to President Bush, Rep. Tom Lantos and Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont, called for the Labor secretary to bring together "the highest level of petrochemical industry leadership—corporate and labor—in a national task force to address safety issues in petrochemicals production."

"This is a dangerous industry. We have got to see to it that every single person who works in that industry is trained to the maximum possible extent. We have to have uniform training, uniform procedures and a single focus of responsibility," said Lantos, chairman of the House subcommittee on employment and housing.

The study was prompted by the Oct. 23, 1989, explosion and fire at the Phillips 66 Houston Chemical Complex in Pasadena, Texas. Twenty-three people died in the explosion, including four contract employees, and 232 others were injured.

"It is certainly unacceptable that a couple of these tragedies, fully preventable, create a loss of life comparable to the war in the Persian Gulf," said Lantos, D-Calif.

"There is no excuse for this and we strongly urge the manufacturers association and all other management people to recognize the problem, to sit down cooperatively with the union, and to work out mechanisms and procedures... that will erase this blot on the face of American capitalism," Lantos said.

Lantos said the costs of the additional training would be "infinitely less than looking in the eyes of a young widow who lost her husband because the training was lousy or non-existent or shoddy or cheap."

"These people are putting their lives on the line every time they go into that plant," Lantos said. "By their very nature these are dangerous plants... this is not an arena where you want to get by on the cheap and cut corners."

TWA: Icahn to lose control

(From 5C)

nate about $1 billion of that debt and leave the airline with about $400 million in cash.

Earlier Tuesday, a federal judge agreed to postpone a court hearing at which senior secured note holders were set to call in their collateral, which could have crippled TWA's operations.

It remained unclear exactly when and where TWA would file its bankruptcy petition. The airline is headquartered in Mt. Kisco, N.Y. and incorporated in Delaware. Its main domestic operation is in St. Louis.

Other big U.S. airlines that have taken bankruptcy refuge since December are Pan Am, Continental, Midway and America West. All fell victim to high debt costs and a slowdown in business, partly due to the recession and a falloff in travel during the Persian Gulf crisis.

TWA's announcement came as the airline tries to persuade Pan Am's creditors to accept a $310 million offer for pieces of Pan Am. It wasn't immediately clear how a TWA bankruptcy would affect that negotiation.

Under the agreement between TWA and its creditors, holders of secured notes, whose collateral included takeoff-landing rights and spare parts, will receive 32.5 percent of the face value and the rest in a new secured note that yields 8 percent in five years.

Holders of a different class of debt securities that pay 16 percent and 17 1/2 percent interest will get 65 percent of the face value, a new debt security that yields 8 percent interest and some TWA stock. Holders of lower priority TWA debt securities and preferred stock will also get stock or warrants to buy stock instead of full cash repayment.

Summer camp teaches West Texas students water conservation

By Wendell Edwards
Associated Press Writer

MONAHANS — About 25 junior high and high school students have been learning a lot about a critical subject in West Texas — water.

The students, from several counties, spent the past week at the first annual Water Conservation Camp in this West Texas town.

"We're teaching conservation," said C.J. Fawcett, soil conservation service director in Monahans. "We have a severe water problem in Texas. Experts project Texas will be out of water by the year 2010." Students between the ages of 11 and 18 were taught at the camp the concept of saving the water that is so important to society, he said.

Fawcett said the idea for a water camp came about last year as he and new county extension agent Weldon Floyd were trying to think of a way to help people become aware of the critical issue of wasting water. They decided to start raising the consciousness of young people, and "we went to work from there," Fawcett said. "We were looking for a way to educate people all over the state," he said. "And why not through their kids?"

The idea was approved by the county agency's board of directors and Monahans selected as a site because its access to five different types of water use — agricultural, municipal, industrial, domestic and recreation.

"Some people were asking, 'Why have the camp way out in Monahans?'" he said. "Because," he said, "We're 70 miles from each type of water use we have." The campers toured the Texas Utilities Plant in Monahans, where water is used to generate electricity. They saw the Balmorhea State Park's swimming pool, where water provides a welcome oasis.

Also in Monahans, the students got an up-close view of an individual conservation effort in Lefty Christian's collection of windmills. "Lefty's home tour fit right in with our program," Floyd said.

"Not too many people have a windmill collection like this right in their back yard."

The main idea that the students learned, he said, is that water quality and water conservation are important to their lives.

"I've learned a lot. It's amazing how much water we waste," said Shannalea Grubb of Fort Stockton, who will be attending Texas Tech University in the fall. "This is a great opportunity to see what I've lived around all my life. We need to be aware of the water problem in West Texas now, so we can conserve it for the future."
