ARGUMENT OVER REMOVAL OF HALL BRINGS REBUKE

ACTION FOLLOWS ATTACK MADE ON SPLAWN IN PUBLICATION

(By Associated Press.)
AUSTIN, June 30.—W. Grady Woodruff, student manager of Brackenridge Hall, University of Texas men's dormitory, and Sam C. Johnson, editor of the Daily Texan, student newspaper, have been notified by President W. M. W. Splawn, to either apologize for statements made concerning President Splawn, or to prove the charges. The President's ultimatum was presented to the students through the faculty discipline committee, after the Daily Texan Tuesday had printed resolutions by B Hall students protesting the conversion of the historic dormitory into a chess room. The resolutions declared that President Splawn had not acted in good faith in keeping the proposed conversion of the hall secret, and that he was making of the University of Texas a "rich man's school."

Apparently Mr. Woodruff and Mr. Johnson today were undecided upon the course which they will follow. Both few candidates for degrees at the University and at the attempt to prove the charges made by B Hall students, and printed in the Daily Texan, they must do so before the discipline committee composed of faculty members.

The fight to prevent remodeling of the dormitory into an office building will be carried forward, Mr. Woodruff said. Former students and residents of the hall from all over the state, including a contingent from Dallas, are beginning to arrive in Austin to aid students in their fight, it was stated. Apparently President Splawn is to stand by the order of the Board of Regents, which provided for the renovation of the building.

EXPLOSION IN GAS STATION IN OKLAHOMA FATAL TO THREE; FIVE CHILDREN ON LIST OF DEAD

TWO SMALL CHILDREN DIE AFTER GAS BARREL USED AS PLAYTHING EXPLODES; THREE OTHERS DIE IN MINE BLAST

A series of explosions at various places over the United States late yesterday and today took a toll of eight lives, with injury to several others, and destruction of considerable property, Associated Press dispatches to the Daily Journal reveal.

Three men were killed in the destruction of a gas station of the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation near Shamrock, Oklahoma when the plant was wrecked by an explosion. In Iowa, two children, 5 and 4 years old, both of the same family, died today as a result of injuries received when a gasoline barrel being used as a plaything by a group of children exploded after one of the children had stuck a long stick into the barrel and set fire to it for a torch.

Three Die in Oklahoma

SHAMROCK, Okla., June 30.—(AP)—COLLEGE STATION, Texas, June 30.—Women have progressed so far from the time when Amazons fashioned corsets for their bodies from the skins of wild beasts that now even a house dress has a certain definite psychological effect on the wearer, Mrs. Dora R. Barnes, clothing specialist at the Texas A. & M. College extension service, said.

"Too many women," she said, "fail to realize the importance of suitable and appropriate costumes for all occasions, therefore take their old worn out Sunday clothes for their house clothes, regardless of whether they are suitable."

"There is a feeling of great satisfaction in knowing that you are attractively and appropriately attired. The well dressed woman chooses her costumes with reference to appropriateness of material for the work to be done, color, harmony, design, durability and cost. These principles can be applied to all costumes whether house dress, street costume or party frocks."

The characteristics of a house dress, however, she advises, here "should be its fitness for the work to be done. It must be comfortable, allowing freedom of action for every part of the body. It must be durable, easily laundered and simple in construction. It should be beautiful and becoming in line, texture and color. It should require the minimum of time for putting on and fastening. No collars and cuffs to tuck and pin in place and no hunting for a belt and no ties to dangle in the food while it is being prepared."

Because it will have hard wear, she said, its colors should be fast and its quality good, whether it beingham, chambray, percale, calico or English prints, the material should frequently used. The design should bring out the wearer's own originality and personality.

Bright colors, she added, are possible if chosen wisely and "may be a bit of sunshine in the brightening influence in the home."

POTASH BILL IS LAUDED HIGHLY

Appropriation Brings Success To First Major Attempt Of Texas Organization

DALLAS, June 30.—Approved by president Coolidge of a bill providing $100,000 a year for potash explorations brings success to the first major work of the Society for the Development of Texas Natural Resources, John M. Spellman, of Dallas, president, said here today.

The society, which was organized a few months ago, has labored unceasingly for the bill which Mr. Spellman said would make Texas the greatest potash producing territory in the world.

Among Texas counties which are believed to contain potash and which Mr. Spellman said would feel the initial benefit of the appropriation: Potter, Randall, Midland, Dawson, Ward, Glasscock, Loving and Reagan.

DUGGAN SAYS HE WILL SEEK PLAN OF TAX REVISION

SERIES OF MEETINGS IN INTEREST OF WORK BEING PLANNED

Already swamped with invitations to address various meetings and conventions and buckling down to his program of making the West Texas Chamber of Commerce a bigger, better and more useful organization, Arthur P. Duggan, Littlefield, newly chosen president of the largest sectional Chamber of Commerce in America, was in Lubbock yesterday attending to business and visiting with friends and relatives here.

According to Mr. Duggan he will stress equalization of taxation in Texas and will meet with every district convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce while he is the organization's chief executive. Mr. Duggan will follow the lead of Col. R. Q. Lee, Cisco, 1925 president, in making regular visits to the various sections of West Texas.

Abilene Meeting Scheduled
The first meeting of importance in connection with the present year's work will be held at Abilene on July 2, when vice-presidents and members of the board of directors will meet and lay plans for the year. Mr. Duggan attending a meeting at Stamford Monday night, making a short address and explaining his plan for service to the organization.

He Explains Tax Stand
Equalization of taxes is the crying need of Texas and especially West Texas, at this time, Mr. Duggan said, and it is with this fact in mind that he has chosen this platform to stress. Mr. Lee specialized on farm diversification. While a member of the Lamb county commissioner's court Mr. Duggan said he was impressed with the inequality of taxation in Texas, which, he says, causes West Texas to pay more than its share of state taxes. He will do all in his power to place the organization on record as opposed to the present plan and will attempt to work out, and place into effect, a new method of taxation in his state.

SEATTLE'S DANCERS START BATTLE AGAINST WOMAN MAYOR

By NEA Service SEATTLE, June 30.—Mayor Bertha Knight Landes New England conscience and the free-and-easy ways of the west are locked in a bitter battle here, only a few days after the city's new woman mayor took office.

Three hundred and forty "women scorned" are on the new mayor's trail, breathing revenge.

They are professional dance hall entertainers, Mrs. Landes wants to abolish them.

"It's not a nice system," is the mayor's explanation. "Nice" retorts Miss Billie Keyes, girls' leader, in bitter sarcasm. "Say, if we dared to dance like the high-brows in Mrs. Landes' society set, we'd find in jail pronto. And if we dared to dress like some of the women Mrs. Landes associates with we'd be barred from the floor."

Most Are Married In Seattle, as in most Pacific coast cities, professional dancers make good livings at dance halls. They are closely supervised by "city mothers." From 7:30 until midnight they are not allowed to leave the halls. Liquor and drunken men are rigorously excluded. At midnight, each girl is placed, by the "city mother" on duty at the hall, into a taxicab, the door is locked and she is taken home, at the hall's expense.

More than 80 per cent of Seattle's dancers are married; most of them are supporting children. At 5 cents a dance they make between $40 and $60 a week. The girls belong to the Dance Hall Entertainers' Association, affiliated with the A. F. of L.

They are sure enough because Mrs. Landes wants to destroy their jobs—but what makes them madder still is the manner in which she refers to them as "dance hall girls." Her constant characterization of them in this way, they say, has hurt their reputations.

"What does Mrs. Landes expect us to do?" asks Miss Keyes. "Of course, we can go to work in stores or as theater ushers—at $12.50 a week, the minimum wage. But how can a girl go straight on that? And now that we've been sneered at, it's doubly hard for us to get any kind of a job.

"What About Jobs?"

"Mrs. Landes going to provide jobs for us, or look after our children?"

"Sure, they're straight," says the Irish cop outside the mayor's office, which the girls storm with protests every day. "They don't have to be crooked. They make good money and make it honestly."

What Mrs. Landes wants to do is pass an ordinance forbidding the girls to invite men to dance. If she succeeds, the girls say, that'll mean the end of their profession. Western men are still gallant—and asking a strange girl to dance—well, it just isn't done.

Miss Billie Keyes

IT'S NOT NICE TO ASK MEN TO DANCE WITH YOU

"Well, I don't care—it's not nice," is Mrs. Landes' retort.

And the stern and rockbound New England conscience is meeting its first test.

MEXICO TURNS TO LOCAL MAN

Harry Roberts Working Plans For Water System in Old City in Oaxaca

Harry N. Roberts, Lubbock Paving engineer and local representative of the consulting engineering firm of Hawley and Roberts, Fort Worth and Lubbock, is doing some consulting work for the city of Huajuapam de Leon, in the state of Oaxaca, Mexico he told the Journal today. Mr. Roberts is devising a means of water supply and distribution for the city.

Dr. Alfredo Diaz, Mr. Roberts' brother-in-law, has been placed in charge of securing the water system for the city, which has a population slightly in excess of 20,000 persons. He is badly handicapped, however, due to the fact that the town is located about a hundred miles from a railroad and the only way that supplies can be brought in is to pack them in by mule-train.

Mr. Roberts, after a careful survey is advising Mr. Diaz to use concrete pipe for water mains, mending the conduits after mixing the cement on the grounds.

FIND SKELETONS OF EARLY RACES

New York Archeologists Will Go To Port Arthur to Look Into Queer Remains

PORT ARTHUR, Texas, June 30. (AP)—Scientists of the American Museum of Natural History, New York City, are to be called upon to confirm belief held here that skeletons found near this city in a shell mound are of a prehistoric race.

The skeletons, forty in number, were uncovered by a contractor excavating the shell mound for road construction material. While a number of the skeletons are in an excellent state of preservation, others crumble at the touch.

A belief is current here that the shell mound was the site of an ancient Indian village, perhaps founded centuries ago. Credence is lent this belief by the fact that the mound is much higher than the surrounding country, being above high water levels.

Amateur anthropologists here assert that the skulls show a marked difference in contour to those of the race at this period of human existence. They point out that the jawbones are much more pointed than are present human skulls and that the posterior skull is exceedingly heavy. Teeth in the skulls are declared to be in good condition, most of them intact. The skulls show a receding forehead and the spinal bones and ribs are smaller than bones of men today.

The skeletons were found in rows and it is believed here that the shell deposit was used as a grave yard. In Louisiana numerous shell beds were used as burial grounds by Indians.

CITY ROTARIANS HEAR WOODWARD

Kiwanis President And Jack Parsons Talk At Meeting Of Civic Clubbers

With President Garland Woodward of the Lubbock Kiwanis club as the principal speaker and an interesting program under the direction of S. E. Cone, members of the Lubbock Rotary club held their regular weekly luncheon meeting Wednesday, at noon, in the basement of the Leader building.

Dick Smith, resident manager of the oil ice cream company, was introduced into the club and was given duties by Kiwanian Garland Woodward who prefaced his remarks concerning the Rotary club with a good natured caustic of the organization.

Jack Parsons, manager of the J. C. Conney store here, addressed the clubbers on the subject of "Cooperation and How It Has Helped My Business." He gave a short and interesting history of his concern, based upon the principle of cooperation and then argued cooperation among the business men and citizens as a method of building a bigger and a better city, state and nation.

Garland Woodward then spoke on Lubbock's Service Club, stressing the need that the Rotary, Kiwanis and Exchange clubs are doing here. He spoke of his recent trip to Montreal, where he represented Lubbock Kiwanians at the international convention of Kiwanis clubs of the world and lauded the work of all these organizations.

President Hubert L. Allen was in the chair.

Menus for the Family

BREAKFAST—Stewed rhubarb, cereal, thin cream, crisp rye toast, soft cooked eggs, milk, coffee. LUNCHEON—Stuffed baked potatoes, whole wheat bread and butter sandwich, fruit salad, milk, tea. DINNER—Broiled sirloin steak, mashed potatoes, creamed string beans, jellied vegetable salad, strawberry ice-box cake, bran rolls, milk, coffee.

This is an excellent quick dinner after an afternoon out when the "cock" has on her best dress and has no appetite. The salad and dessert have spent the afternoon in the refrigerator, the beans have been cooked ready to reheat in cream sauce, the potatoes will cook in 30 minutes and the steak in less—depending on how rare you like it—so in a short time and without a mad rush you can have a dinner sure to please the taste of the housewife sitting hot on the table.

Strawberry Ice-Box Cake One quart berries, 4 tablespoons granulated sugar, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 3 eggs, 1/2 cup butter, 1 cup confectioners' sugar, 2-egg sponge cake, 1/2 pint whipping cream. Bake a 2-egg sponge cake in a shallow pan or spring-form mold using the following recipe. Beat yolks of 2 eggs well, adding 1-3 cup of granulated sugar gradually and beating constantly. Add 5 tablespoons boiling water, still beating with the Dover beater. Add 1-3 cup of sugar and beat well. Mix and sift 1/2 cup pastry flour, 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder and 1/2 teaspoon salt and add to first mixture. Beat until smooth and fold in the whites of the eggs beaten until stiff and dry and 1/2 teaspoon vanilla. Pour into oiled and floured pan and bake 30 minutes in a moderately slow oven. When cool cut out the center with a sharp knife, and fill with the following mixture.

Reserve 12 of the finest berries to use to garnish the cake. Hull and wash remaining berries and rub through a wire sieve. There should be 1 cup of juice and pulp. Beat yolks of eggs well and combine with cornstarch and granulated sugar mixed and sifted. Put into top of double boiler with strawberry juice. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly until thick and smooth. Remove from heat and cool. When cool add butter and confectioners' sugar stirred until very creamy. Fold in whites of eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Fill the cake shell with this mixture, replace top of cake and put in the ice-box. Let chill eight hours or longer. When ready to serve cover with cream whipped until stiff with 1 tablespoon powdered sugar and a few drops of vanilla. Garnish with strawberries and serve. This will serve ten. RED LEGS HOLD GOOD MARGIN IN NATIONAL LOOP

FOUR GAMES AHEAD OF SECOND PLACE CARDS IN PENNANT RACE

(By the Associated Press) Entrants in the National League race have their own eyes on a hustling pair of Red Stockings dimly discernible through the dust.

Where only a week or so ago the margin between the first and sixth place team in the circuit was only a matter of four full contests, it is now nine and Cincinnati has a four game advantage over the fast-climbing St. Louis Cardinals, now in second position.

Yesterday Carl Mays, a veteran submarine server, showed the Phillies overboard, the Reds' fifth straight victory over the champions. Mays scattered around nine hits to win by six to three. Curtis Walker made three bingles to carry his consecutive game hitting record to 17.

Brooklyn stopped the Philadelphia winning streak at five games by winning in the eleventh, 4 to 3. Bill Marzetti, Dodger third baseman, obtained two homers, his second trying the game in the ninth. Charley Hargrave's single with the bases full settled the verdict.

The New York Giants, playing ragged baseball, went down before the very lively Boston Braves twice, 5 to 2 and 7 to 2. Babe Ruth made another effort to catch up with that famous 1921 record by polling a homer in Philadelphia while the Yankees were beating the Athletics, 1 to 5.

It was the Babe's twenty-sixth and now stands two games behind his pace of five years ago. Lou Gehrig allowed his for the circuit before he was scratched for protesting a decision. Joe Shuster, of Cleveland, hurled a good game and was accorded sufficient hitting to beat Chicago 4 to 2.

Bryan Harris, one of the pitchers traded by Connie Mack to the Red Sox for Howard Ehmke, pitched the best game of the day when he set down Washington with five hits and won, 2 to 1.

St. Louis gave a trio of Detroit pitchers a terrific pounding, piling up 14 safe blows in an 11 to 3 victory. Bing Miller's two doubles and single gave him a perfect day at bat.

There's something wrong about everybody. . . . The fact that Washington tried to throw a dollar across the Potomac is proof he wasn't any too bright.

He's Babe Ruth when he rocks one with the pillows stuffed but he's just George Herman when he whiffs.

Some men do nothing but flash in the summer, others simply do nothing.

DIAMOND DISPUTES DECIDED

By BILLY EVANS

Does the position of a player's feet, who is fielding a ground or fly ball, in any way determine whether the ball is fair or foul?

A ball is judged fair or foul by the umpire according to the position of the ball rather than the feet of the player.

In such a play the batter would be foul, since the ball itself was in foul territory when the player with both feet in fair territory tried to catch it.

If the position of the player determined a fair or foul ball, it would be possible for a player to make a fair ball foul that was hit down the line by merely stepping into foul territory as he fielded it.

When the ball is hit, the shortstop must calculate the bounds the ball will take before he makes a play on it and try to be in a position to get the big hop.

It is impossible to figure certain batted balls, such as line drives that strike the ground a few feet in front of the player about to handle them.

On such balls the shortstop must place his hands where he believes the ball will come and trust to luck.

I have always tried to get the jump on every ball. This enables me to be more accurate as to throwing, not being hurried.

The batter's speed always influences the position of a shortstop and his throw. He should play deep or slow men, close in on the fast runners. He should time his throw to suit the speed of the man he is making a play on.

A close study of each batsman is a great help. Knowing the field to which he usually hits and the style ball about to be pitched, the shifting of a few feet often makes possible a play on a ball that would otherwise go through for a base hit.

Handling ground balls is an easy matter if you are able to play the big bound. It is the "between-bounds" that are troublesome.

SECRETS OF STARS ON INSIDE BASEBALL

as told to BILLY EVANS

BY SHORTSTOP EVERETT SCOTT Who Played in 1907 Consecutive Games.

There are two set rules that every shortstop must religiously follow if he wants to be a success.

They are: Be on your toes and try to handle every ground ball on the big bound.

It is fatal for a shortstop to be caught flat-footed. It prevents him from breaking with the pitch and cuts down his ground-covering possibilities by a couple of steps.

The successful shortstop must be alert physically as well as mentally. With runners on the bases, try to figure out in advance what you will do with the ball, provided it comes in your direction and the play is up to you.

Boston Officers On Way To Get Ponzi

HOUSTON, June 27. (AP)—Boston authorities were reported on their way to Texas Wednesday with extradition papers for Charles Ponzi, who is in the county jail here in a fugitive warrant which alleged that he defaulted on a sentence of "from seven to nine years" as a "common and notorious thief."

When Ponzi was arrested he had $16 in his pocket. Now he has $500. He sold an interview to a newspaper while in jail. It is this money that he proposes to use in fighting extradition.

HELPFUL HINTS by GOLFING STARS

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH GOLFERS MAGAZINE)

GEORGE DUNCAN Upright Lie of Clubs I recommend an absolutely upright putter. True, my own has a medium lie, but, as I have had it for 16 years, I hesitate now to make a change even in the light of learning. In my youth I used a flat putter—it was a check—and so became accustomed to such an instrument, but I believe that if I had started with an upright putter, I should putt better than I do now.

I have little faith in the jigger, especially on inland courses. It is so shallow that it is apt to get under the ball; it is better at the seaside where the grass is shorter and the turf firmer.

As a final word, let me advise the golfer to examine the lie of his clubs, and make sure that the shorter the shot each club is expected to accomplish, the straighter up should rise the shaft from the head.

Sometimes you see a man with a mangle flatter even than his driver. That means he may have to stand farther from the ball for a mangle shot than for a full drive. To control the direction of the approach in those circumstances is well-nigh impossible. (Copyright, 1925)

THAT AIR LINE

The news that Lubbock and Dallas will probably soon be connected with an air line is welcome, indeed, to Lubbock and probably just as cheerful to Dallas.

The improvements and conveniences which will come as a result of the institution of an air line, such as suggested, are manifold and so obvious that they do not need to be pointed out. Plane passenger service to Dallas, which will probably be augmented by air mail service later, will mean a much quicker connection with the heavily populated sections of Texas and a great saving in time to the business men of both parts of the state.

The Journal believes that the institution of the Lubbock-Dallas air line will take the form of one of the greatest improvements which have come to this section of the Plains in recent years, one fit to be classed with the addition of a railroad, with paved highways, natural gas and other modern conveniences.

THE McPHERSON CASE

The entire United States is watching with interest, the outcome of the Almee Sempie McPherson abduction case in California and many are the opinions being voiced concerning it.

If false, it will probably be the biggest hoax of the decade.

Mrs. McPherson's reputation and her personality stand her in good stead but her story, from press reports at least, is hard to accept in spots, and the Journal wonders.

Every once in a while some clever press agent works out a scheme which does worlds to advertise someone whose business it is to remain in the public eye and the newspapers and news gathering agencies, with service to their public always in mind, are hurried into protecting the newspaper readers and spread the tidings before the falsity of them can be ascertained.

If the McPherson story is one of the latter a press agent has earned for himself a permanent niche in Ananias' Hall of Fame.

If it is all that it is represented to be another laurel for the rapid circulating of news has been added to the newspapers and news gathering agencies of the nation.

EXECUTING WOMEN

Some notable instances of women slayers paying the supreme penalty for their crimes have come up during the past week.

England, for instance, has hanged a woman murderer and broken down tradition of centuries. Costa Rica, now, will follow England's example, and will execute one of the female sex for a life offense.

The Journal can see no difference between wilful slayers of the two sexes. A woman who maliciously takes a life is no better than a man who does the same thing and just because her brutality is concealed behind a mask of femininity is no reason why her life should not be claimed the same as a man's, under similar conditions.

It is the Journal's opinion that there is not enough exacting of the supreme penalty for murder in the United States and claims that because of the laxness of our juries and our courts, the murder complex is becoming more and more wide-spread as the years roll by.

If a man takes a life through sheer animal instinct—let him pay to society with his own. If a woman slays her neighbor in the same manner, let her too, bear the consequences that should attend the act.

PROSPEROUS TEXAS

Prosperity is the keynote of Texas today, a recent report of the Federal Reserve bank of Dallas indicates.

IN NEW YORK SEE-SAWING UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

NEW YORK, June 29.—New York's colorful "foreign settlements" are a continuous magnet for visitors. The Syrian quarter. A slice of Arabia, Palestine, the old Orient. Take and elevated to Rector street and walk over to Washington. There you are. A district of strange contrasts. Bank buildings magnifying the squalor of the dwelling places. Overlapping on three side streets, Rector, Morris and Carlisle.

Everywhere the color and smells of the Orient. Cobblestoned inner courts. Men with stockinged feet. Wearing queer sandals. Women with noses pierced for rings. But few wear nose rings in America. Other women from the inner desert country. Almost negroid in complexion.

First the Dutch lived here and built many of the present buildings. Then came the Italians, then the Irish, then the Greeks. Some houses contain relics of all three races. An Italian vase, left behind.

A French piece of furniture. An Irish inscription upon the walls. And the marvelous rugs of Syria upon the floors.

Windows with strange collections of Oriental pipes. The "tutum," a water pipe. The water is rose scented. Coffee houses and cafes every few doors. Inside are long rough board tables. And coffee so thick one could stick a finger in and leave a dent. All day long they seem to gather around the coffee cups. If one is fortunate enough to gain entry, a water pipe will be produced, and more water pipes and perhaps some flat nosed dancing girls.

News stands with papers flaring strange characters. Windows filled with books in Arabic script. And gold and red illuminations. The old goldsmiths, pounding on little anvils placed in their laps. These disappear fast. The most famous has gone. Too much competition from factory inroads. Few tourists appreciate the difference. The manufactured sells as easily as the hand made. And much cheaper. The arts fast disappear.

Houses on side streets seeming to crumble against each other. Like aged men leaning against each other for support.

The rug ben—with rugs that were made by the hands of a half dozen generations, if you happen to know rugs. If you don't look out, they're sharp traders. Watch an Armenian pick out the real article. Their sensitive fingers run but once over a rug you can't fool those fingers.

Banking places that cater to those wishing to change foreign money. Agents, representatives, and all the by-products of business.

These people have little in common with the rest of the city. They do not know what is going on outside. They do not enter into the city's life. This is their land. And yet, just around the corner loom the spires of the city hall and down upon the waterfront the jangle of noises tell of the city's great water traffic.

The Very Idea!

Sister gets up early, without ever being told. Seldom makes a move that makes her mother have to scold. Chips right into morning work, and when she takes a hold, it's pretty hard to realize she's only eight years old.

Helps to get the breakfast: cleans the kitchen and spash-tinkles 'round the household, doing everything she can. All the work is finished by the middle of the day. Then she feels she has a right to run along and play. Sonny runs the errands to the meatshop and the like. Does 'em in a hurry, making speed upon his bike. Burns the papers once a week, and after that is done, cleans the yard and cuts the grass and calls his labor fun.

Isn't any wonder that their mom and dad feel proud. They're two sort of youngsters who will stand out in a crowd. Just a bit unusual, but the answer sheds a light: Ask their parents—you'll be told they've just been brought up right.

A man's worst enemy wished to marry his daughter, and he let him, realizing that his wife would be the fellow's mother-in-law.

A kid's explanation of what water is would likely run something like this: "some wet stuff that turns black when you put your hands in it."

One advantage a horse has over an auto—who ever heard of carrying a spare leg?

The use of straps in street cars makes a person throw a fit. But what the dickens can we do? Just simply stand for it.

Funny thing about a fellow whose wife is waiting up for him. If he misses the last car home, he'll catch it.

When a fellow asks a girl's father for his daughter's hand, he's anxious about the outcome, and the father is anxious about the income.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

WHITE HOUSE, LIKE OLD ONE HORSE SHAY, MAY TUMBLE DOWN MOST ANY DAY

By CHARLES P. STEWART, NEA Service Writer WASHINGTON, June 29.—"What in the world," numerous persons have been heard to remark recently, "is the repair gang going to do to the White House that can possibly be made to cost $350,000?"

The truth is that the executive mansion probably could be duplicated, new inside the sum that Budget Director Lord suggests as necessary to do a thorough job of repairing the present structure.

But it wouldn't be the same White House. It might look just like the old one but it wouldn't have the old one's historical associations. The theory is that these are preserved by repairing instead of rebuilding.

Now, to speak of "repairing" the present White House is simply to use, for the benefit of those who set so much store by its historical associations, a euphemistic expression. The old thing will have to be practically rebuilt, anyway.

Rebuilding it, and yet not rebuilding, is more expensive, according to the experts, than it would be to raze it, begin at the beginning, and build entire.

This is truer of the White House than it would be of most buildings, for the White House has one very remarkable structural peculiarity. It was built originally, not from the bottom up but from the top down.

The builders began by putting up piers to support the roof. These piers they roofed over. Then they suspended the second floor, underneath, from the roof. The upper part of the house wasn't anything to do with the foundation. It hangs down from overhead.

Well, a new roof is one of the things most urgently required.

But the minute the repair gang takes the old one off, down tumbles the second floor into the first floor, and then both, probably, into the basement.

It's roof, however, isn't the White House's only weak spot.

The whole building has been gradually disintegrating for a long long time—some plaster here, a cracked joint there, a busted bit of plumbing some other place.

Slowly, as the process of decay went on, little dinky jobs of repair work have been done. When a seam opened somewhere, it was stopped up with putty. When a floor sagged, it was braced up. When the roof leaked, a coat of waterproof paint was smeared over it.

All this "first aid" was recognized as only temporary. Only—nothing permanent ever followed it.

Helpful Health Hints By DR. HUGH S. CUMMING Director General U. S. Public Health Survey

The countless multitude who lay aside their business cares to engage in one way or another in the celebration of the Fourth of July, our National Independence Day, constitute the glowing, a living tribute to the success of our institution of government.

It has so happened in recent years that the celebration of the Fourth of July regularly brought sorrow, suffering and bereavement to an ever increasing number of fathers, mothers, and brothers and sisters, because some members of a family, usually some child or youth, became mangled through the accident of an uncontrolled explosive.

"Tetanus Week." Tetanus or lockjaw became so common that the period from July 16 to July 18 of any year might have been named with propriety Tetanus Week.

From 1903 to 1909, there were 901 persons who died from Tetanus following wounds due to Fourth of July accidents. During the same period, there were 630 persons who died from other causes directly connected with these celebrations. This makes a death toll of 1531 persons killed in seven celebrations—you might say in seven days. In addition, there were 30,600 persons wounded during the same period.

Tree squirrels' all require water at frequent intervals, every day, and in warm weather, even times a day. Without water soon suffer from thirst and die."

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN and FAY MILBURN buy a home when their baby girl is born and the advertising agency in which John is partner and copy writer lands a new contract. Among their acquaintances are—

NOEL and VERA BOYD, whose marriage is strictly "modern."

PAT and MARIAN FORBES, who have three children and whose marriage is unhappy because of Pat's roving tendencies. Previous chapters told how:

John, in love with his wife but a romantic individual, was fascinated on meeting NELL ORME, of whom Pat Forbes hints that she is having trouble with her husband.

When Fay took JUDITH, the baby to Houston to visit her parents, John "ran around" a good deal, mostly with Pat Forbes.

When Fay returns, gossip has retailed some of John's doings and greatly magnified them. Sharp quarrels between him and Fay follow. She is always fearful that he will get into trouble, but he thinks she just misunderstands him.

One of these quarrels drives him "out on a limb," and when Fay learns that he has been out again with other women, she threatens to leave him if it is repeated. He begins to think Fay is starting to dislike him, and it suddenly seems as though the world is against him. He becomes aware of the fact that people are talking about him, and DICK MENEFE, a young doctor and John's best friend, takes him to lunch one day to warn him "to watch his step" as the rumor is going the rounds that he is drinking heavily and neglecting his wife.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXIX

MENEFE shrugged his shoulders. "Lord knows who's at the bottom of it. One never knows where these rumors come from. The trouble is, they take little foundations of truth and erect structures of stupendous lies. I'd hate to see malicious gossip ruin you, John. Marriages do go on the rocks that way."

"If they'd only leave me alone," John muttered between clenched teeth. "If people would understand me, I'm decent, Dick; you know that. But even Fay—" He stopped. Dick laid a hand on his shoulder. "That stuff about writing your copy when you're drunk, John—it might have been circulated by this new advertising outfit, Kelly and Jones. I think they're a couple of sharp-shooters."

"They looked decent enough to me, Dick. They wouldn't know they're after some of your business, I've heard a lot of talk. Business is a hard-boiled proposition. It's often pretty dirty. You're not a business man, you know—no more than I am."

"I know it," John was silent for several minutes. Then he set loose some of the bitterness that was in his heart. "If people want to throw mud, why don't they throw it at someone who's more deserving of it than I am? If I take a drink, I'm a drunkard; if I say hello to a pretty girl, I'm running wild. How about—well, how about Noel Boyd for instance? There's a man who's rotten and is proud of it. Why don't they shoot at him? How about Paul Davidson—although Paul despite his habits, is pretty much of a gentleman?"

"Paul isn't married," Dick told him. "They can't hurt him much. I suppose I'm a rather unnatural person, John, but I call myself lucky because I haven't an interest in the world outside of Margaret and my practice. Believe me, I'm glad of it; I miss a lot of trouble."

He took one of John's proffered cigarettes. "As for Noel Boyd," he went on, he isn't worth talking about. You know, John, in a way a man can feel flattered when he is gossiped about. They usually pick a clean target to throw mud at; a dirty one, like Noel, doesn't show any new stain."

He paused a moment and studied the smoke curling up from the end of his cigarette. "Look at Pat Forbes, John. I'd hate to see you begin to lose your grip—like Pat's doing."

"What do you mean? I haven't heard that, Dick."

"Well, Pat, I understand he is in a pretty bad way. You know Pat's no saint, but neither is he a black-hearted sinner."

"I know that all right. Pat's just a boy that never grew up."

"That about describes him. Still, everyone doesn't know Pat the way we do, and some of this talk about him has reached the firm that employs him, and his hold on his job is weakening."

"Great Scott! I hadn't heard that, Dick."

"Well, it's true enough. Margaret saw Marian Forbes not long ago, and Marian told her, Pat's been pretty careless, of course, and he'll need a pretty stiff jolt to bring him around to his senses."

"I'm sorry as the devil to hear that," John said. "I'm telling you, John, because I don't want you to get in trouble. God knows I'm not trying to preach to you—"

"I know you're not, Dick. It was decent of you to talk to me." He was gazing idly at his coffee cup, toying with its handle, and Menefe, knowing there was nothing more to be said, pushed back his chair.

He was not angry with Dick Menefe—he had an idea that it had gone pretty hard with Dick to say what he had. But he was in a blind rage at the meddlers who were lauding his name about. Noel Boyd he told himself, was just the kind who would take a keen delight in stirring up trouble. Then there was Eleanor Mason—he had been pretty short with her. She had called him up several times since this night he had left her in her apartment, and he had found some excuse every time.

Nat Graham looked up as he walked in the office door. "John," he called, "could you come here a minute?" He motioned toward the little office which was used for private conferences.

"What now?" he thought. Nat wore a heavy frown and the hooded eyes gazed at John coldly.

Graham closed the door carefully. John, waiting for the other to speak, lit a cigarette and inhaled a deep draught of the smoke.

"All right, Nat, what's on your mind?" John put a lightness in his tone that he was far from feeling.

"We've lost an account," Graham said shortly. His mouth set in a hard line.

John frowned. "Who?"

"The Smithsonian Oil people."

John whistled. "Well, I'll be darned. Give any reason?"

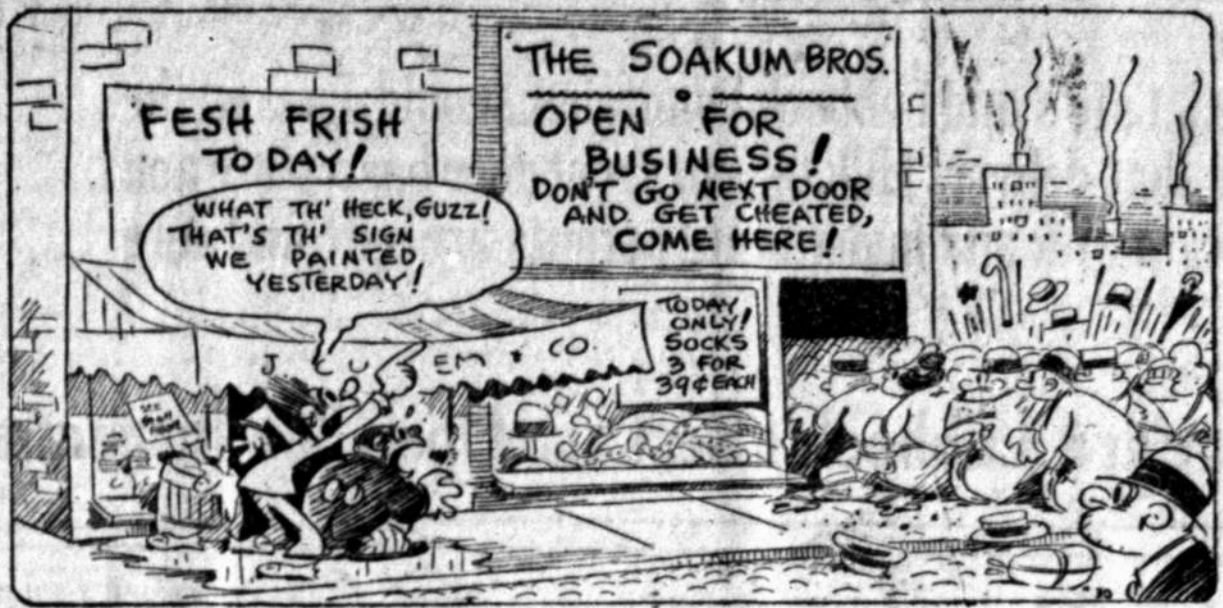

"The kind of reason they gave doesn't mean much. His manner was such as to indicate the responsibility for losing the account was John's."

FERGUSON RAPS MOODY'S RECORD AND IS BOOED

"LAUGH YOU HYENAS," HE TELLS PARIS AUDIENCE TUESDAY NIGHT

(By The Associated Press)
PARIS, Texas, June 26.—James E. Ferguson encountered hecklers here on Tuesday night during his address in behalf of the candidacy of his wife, Governor Miriam A. Ferguson.
Heckling reached its height when he attacked Dan Moody's war record.
"How about yours and how about the American Party?" some called.
"You're hollering like a wet dog, you're a big coward; the American Party is all right," the speaker retorted.
Again when Ferguson made the statement, "I told them if they elect me—I mean my wife," he was interrupted by hecklers.
"Laugh you hyenas," he called.
Ferguson defended Governor Ferguson's administration, particularly with reference to highway matters. He charged that Moody's "interference" in that regard had cost, rather than saved, money for the State.
Ferguson was to speak at Bonham Wednesday afternoon and Cooper in the evening.
WELLINGTON, Texas, June 26. (AP)—Mayor C. C. Small introduced Attorney General Dan Moody for an address here Tuesday with the declaration that "if people of Texas are to banish Fergusonism they should elect the man who had exposed it."
Moody followed with an attack on the administrative record of the Governor and on James E. Ferguson, whom he described as "having exercised powers of governor without being responsible to the people." The American Book Company, highway administration, and the conduct of the prison system drew Moody's criticism. Once the attorney general was interrupted by a person in the audience who cried, "Me for Me." Moody asked if there had been "any pardons in this section?"
Moody was to speak at Haskell on Wednesday afternoon and at Stamford in the evening.

turbances at the State Capitol with consequent unsettled business conditions," the speaker declared. Davidson cited his own qualifications, declaring that he is equipped to put the State's business on a stable, economic foundation.

Smith May Be New Engineer Of City

Marlin R. "Red" Smith, graduate of the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical college department of engineering and a former employe of Hawley and Roberts, Lubbock paving engineers, will be the next city engineer of Lubbock if he and the city commission can come to terms, it was stated authoritatively here today.
Mr. Smith, who is now in the employment of the DeBose Engineering company and who is in charge of a sewer extension project at Childress at this time, is in the city and will confer late today with City Manager W. H. Dickinson on the local proposition.
Harry N. Roberts, resident member of the firm of Hawley and Roberts, has done very satisfactory work here but with the cutting down of paving, water and sewer operations the commission has decided that one engineer, to be contracted for at a smaller salary, can handle the work.

Aged Woman Dies Of Rattlesnake Bite

ABELINE, June 30. (AP)—Mrs. Edith Jane Thornton, aged 69, died at her home eight miles east of here Tuesday from a rattlesnake bite received Monday afternoon. She was given first aid treatment immediately after being bitten, and received medical attention within 30 minutes.

Baseball Drive Will Be Made Feature

In a final effort to keep Lubbock's champion baseball machine intact for this season, teams, composed of fans and members of the Lubbock baseball association, will take the field tomorrow morning, beginning at nine o'clock and will solicit donations from the business men to pay the expenses of keeping the team here.
This decision was made this morning at a called meet at the Chamber of Commerce rooms at the city hall, with President F. G. Shepard, of the baseball association presiding. A payroll of $1,000 per month must be regularly met if the galaxy of stars now wearing the Hubber livery remain in this city, it was stated.

City Is To Enforce Building Ordinance

The new building ordinance, which has recently been placed into effect here, will be rigidly enforced and if the ordinance is not right and practical it will be changed to "fill the bill," officials of the city said today following a meeting last night between City Building Inspector Grover Merrill and various local contractors.

If the ordinance is not practical it will be made so through agreements between officials and contractors, it was said today.

Rotary - Kiwanis Ball Game Set On July 13

Tuesday, July 13th, will be an unlucky day for either the Rotary or Kiwanis club of Lubbock. That is the date set for the annual baseball game between the two clubs. It was decided Wednesday following a meeting of committees from the two organizations.

The teams will meet in a seven inning diamond classic with Merrill park providing the scenery and a hectic struggle will decide supremacy which is argued with bats and balls every year. Garland Woodward and Frank Jones, sled Allen, E. Y. Freeland and Chas. A. Guy will guide the destinies of the Rotary entries.
