Anti-drug organizations have impact

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of a five-part series on substance abuse among Midland school students. In cases where first names only are used, the names are fictitious. The people, however, are real. This story deals with the community's role in resolving the problem.

By JULIE HILLRICHS

In the past, Midland's society with its higher socio-economic living standards tended to view alcohol and drug abuse through rose-colored glasses.

The stigma of the chemically dependent person, as in other U.S. cities, was kept behind closed doors. Those who had a problem — especially youngsters — were treated with "hush-hush" attitudes.

But society today — in Midland and throughout the country — is recognizing that what once was seen as a social problem actually is a medical problem.

Organizations such as Texans' War On Drugs, Council Against Substance Abuse, Mothers Against Drunk Driving, Esteem Machine, Families in Action, Families All Together and Tough Love have created an impact in schools as well as the community.

Considering one out of 20 high school seniors nationwide use marijuana daily, and over four million persons — half of whom are between the ages of 18 and 25 — are current users of cocaine, it's easy to realize we have a significant problem in our community, says Gregg Holmes, spokesman for Council Against Substance Abuse.

A 1983 survey conducted by the Midland Independent School District indicated 76.6 percent of Midland juniors who took the survey used alcohol and 37.4 percent used marijuana. Only 9.8 percent reported using cocaine. Some 32 percent reported using stimulants while 5.8 percent said they used other drugs, which include psychedelics, tranquilizers, heroin, quaaludes, LSD and other narcotics.

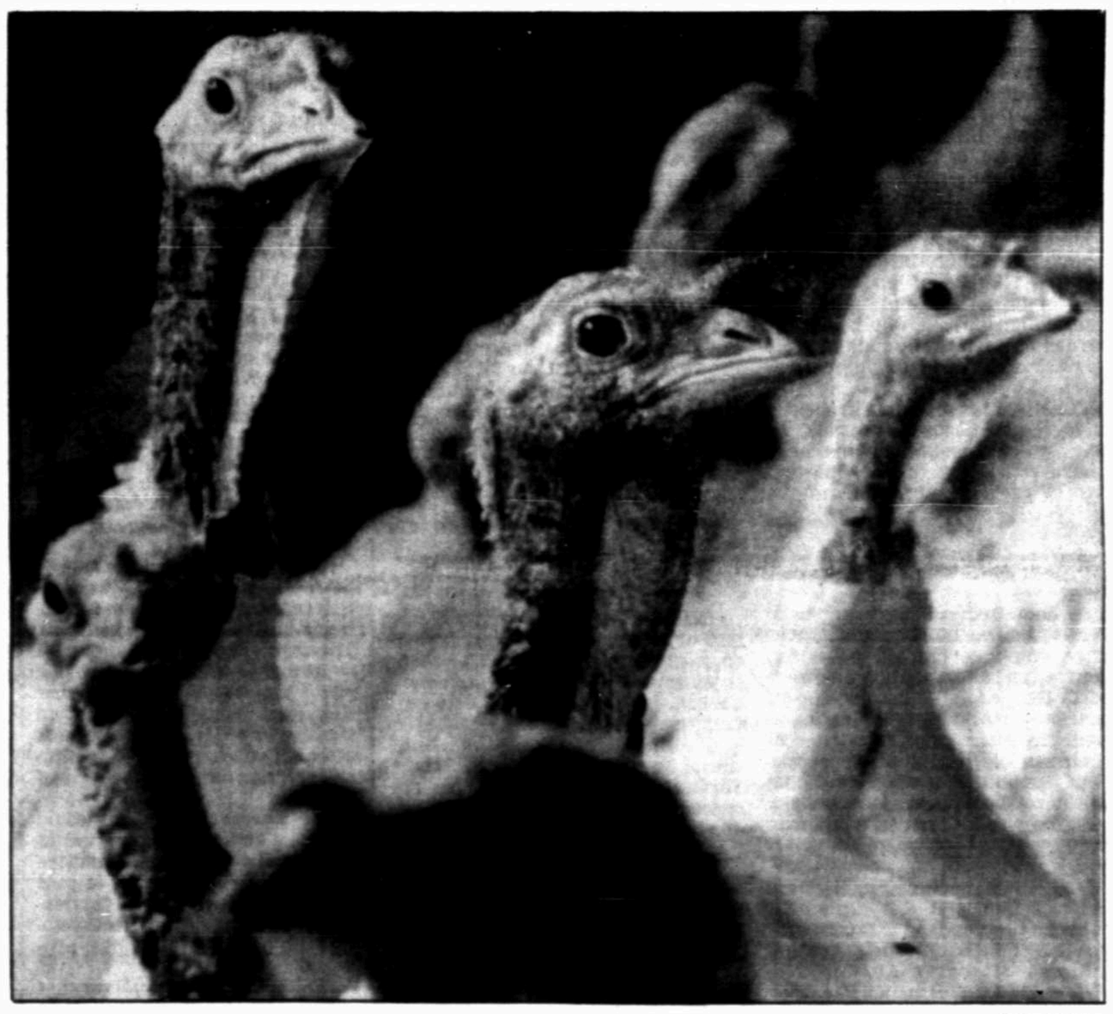

To deter such use, several Midland organizations, in cooperation with MISD, have become committed to reducing the use of alcohol and drugs by youth.

The Junior League of Midland, Inc., in cooperation with MISD, helped to expand drug education to reach third-grade students this fall through a program entitled, "Stand Tall." Every third grader participates in two sessions which teach children the dangers of drug abuse and peer pressure.

Students in fourth-, fifth- and sixth-grade health and science courses also receive more intensified instruction in a three-week unit of study entitled, "Here's Looking at You Two."

Mahon rites Friday

SAN ANGELO — Funeral services are scheduled Friday for former U.S. Rep. George Mahon, a personal friend of Lyndon Johnson's who attained the power of the nation's purse strings during his 44 years as a West Texas congressman.

"He walked with kings but kept the common man's touch," said Kent Hance, who followed Mahon in Congress after he retired in 1978 as chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Mahon, 85, died at 5:50 p.m. CST Tuesday at Shannon West Texas Memorial Hospital, nursing supervisor Verna Morse said.

Bryan Mahon, a nephew in San Angelo, said the former congressman died of a heart attack. He said Mahon had been hospitalized for the past week after undergoing surgery to replace a knee joint and had had a reaction to the medication he was taking.

Mahon represented the 19th District in West Texas, serving as that district's only congressman until his retirement. At the time of his retirement, Midland was included in his congressional district — it now is in the 21st — and several Midlanders had worked with Mahon on projects for this city.

According to W.H. "Bill" Collyns, former editor of the Reporter-Telegram, Mahon was instrumental in having the new Midland-Odessa Division of the United States Court, Western District of Texas, located here upon its creation a number of years ago. "He also played a major role in getting a new Post Office Building and U.S. Courthouse for Midland," said Collyns, and the federal building later was named for Mahon.

Summit session resumed

GENEVA - President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev resumed their highly personal diplomacy today at a second round of summit talks described as "very lively" and focusing on "all the problems of concern to the Soviet and American people."

A news blackout shielded their discussions at the Soviet mission from public scrutiny, but there were strong indications of progress in improving superpower relations.

Gorbachev arranged to hold a news conference here Thursday, after the summit meetings end, and his remarks are to be carried by television to the Soviet people at home. This suggested he might have an important announcement.

Reagan had already scheduled a speech to Congress Thursday night after a stopover in Brussels to brief NATO allies.

While keeping secret whether they had made headway in reducing tensions, the two leaders said they had discussed the likelihood of future summit meetings, and whether Gorbachev would visit Washington for talks next year or in 1987. Reagan said he would welcome such a visit but that "it hasn't been agreed to."

Regan sharply criticized after 'gender bender' comment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Feminists demanded an apology from White House chief of staff Donald Regan for saying most women don't understand human rights, arms control or other weighty issues being discussed at the U.S.-Soviet summit in Geneva.

Regan's gender gaffe came as he told a Washington Post reporter that he expects the activities of first ladies Nancy Reagan and Raisa Gorbachev at Geneva to hold high appeal, especially among women.

"They're not...going to understand (missile) throw-weights or what is happening in Afghanistan or what is happening in human rights," Regan said of female summit-watchers. "Some women will, but most women — believe me, your readers for the most part if you took a poll — would rather read the human interest stuff of what happened."

In Geneva, a reporter asked Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev about Regan's comment. "All women everywhere in the world are interested in peace," the Soviet leader said.

Former Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., a prominent feminist, said in an interview with Cable News Network, "Mr. Regan has made a big mistake. Women have historically been interested in the course and conduct of policy, particularly in the area of peace.'" She said Regan's remark displays "fear of sharing power."

The chief of staff, through an aide, declined an opportunity to amplify or clarify his remarks. And presidential spokesman Larry Speakes today refused to comment on them, saying the White House would have no reaction to Regan's statements or an editorial about them in the Washington Post.

He said that so far as he was aware, Regan and the president had not discussed the matter.

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., said Tuesday it was "absolutely unbelievable" that Regan would intimate women would be interested in little more than what Mrs. Reagan and Mrs. Gorbachev were wearing or saying at tea.

"I think it's a real insult and women deserve an apology," said Mrs. Schroeder, a 13-year veteran of the House Armed Services Committee who added, "I bet I know more about those things than Mr. Regan."

Ellie Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, said she "was glad to learn the president took Bonzo to Geneva with him."

"It's hard not to laugh," said Irene Natividad, chair of the National Women's Political Caucus. "All the gender gap polls in '84 showed that peace was the No. 1 issue."

She said Regan's comment is typical of an administration that she said believes "only white men are entitled to having an opinion about the key issues of our time."

Arden Cummings, executive director of Peace Links, an anti-nuclear group, said if the 40,000-plus members of her organization "are any example of the rest of the women in the United States, Mr. Regan certainly is not educated about American women."

No-pass, no-play charge 'insignificant'

HOUSTON (AP) — A survey which purports to show that Texas' controversial no-pass, no-play rule discriminates against minority and handicapped students is statistically insignificant, the attorney defending the law for the state says.

"It deals with less than 1 percent of the Texas population," assistant attorney general Kevin O'Hanlon said after the 19-district survey was introduced into evidence Tuesday in a class-action suit which seeks repeal of the law that bars failing students from extracurricular activities.

Johnnie Orr, a retired Houston teacher hired by plaintiff attorney Anthony Sheppard, said the random survey showed blacks and Hispanics were discriminated against because of no pass, no play.

The opinion was based on "the survey and my experience," she said. "It's discriminatory in that it excludes youngsters from being able to participate in extracurricular activities and those currently trying to do so are being pushed out of extracurricular activities."

Some districts, however, reported white students with a greater failure rate.

"You're speaking of isolated situations," Mrs. Orr said. "When you look at the overall situation, minorities are impacted much more so than our Anglo youngsters."

O'Hanlon, who was to cross-examine Mrs. Orr today in the case before State District Judge Marsha Anthony, said the districts represented only about 21,000 of the state's three million students "and they're trying to condemn the whole state of Texas."

"The no pass, no play rule doesn't have anything to do with how well we happen to be teaching our kids," he said. "You can take something out of context and say there's a terrible impact. You've got to add them all up and she made no attempt to do that."

The Spring Independent School District, which listed 8,532 secondary school students, was the largest in the survey.

"I believe no pass, no play is discriminating against those who want to do more than just come to school," Leonard George, Spring athletic director, testified. But figures provided by George showed the failure rate for black and Hispanic students involved in after-school activities lower than white students.

"If you look at it, minorities are having their performance enhanced more than Anglos," O'Hanlon said. "The blacks and Hispanics who are participating in extracurriclar activities are improving more than the Anglos."

White criticizes coaches' stand

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas coaches who might use the controversial no-pass, no-play rule to fight Gov. Mark White's re-election are displaying the wrong kind of leadership, White said Tuesday.

Directors of the Texas High School Coaches Association said last weekend they will consider taking a stand on the 1986 gubernatorial race during a Dec. 14 meeting in Austin. White is a strong supporter of the rule, which prohibits students who fail any class during a six-week grading period from taking part in extra-curricular activities during the next six weeks.

"I'm for high school football," White said at his weekly news conference Tuesday. "I think that we've demonstrated that the winners in high school football are the ones that pass all their courses.

Eighteen-minute power outage linked to equipment malfunction

From Staff Reports

Malfunctioning fault detection equipment was the cause of an 18-minute power outage to about 9,800 customers in West Midland, said Texas Electric spokesman Stan Garrison.

"Weather wasn't a factor. It was just a malfunctioning of equipment," he said.

Garrison said a transformer tripped off at the west substation, one of four in Midland, at 9:36 p.m. Power was restored by 9:54 p.m.

The area affected by the outage was roughly west of Midkiff Road and ran south to Andrews Highway and Highway 80.

Waite awaits further contact with Beirut captors

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Terry Waite, the archbishop of Canterbury's envoy, was believed holed up in his Beirut hideaway today awaiting further contacts with the kidnappers of Americans he is seeking to free.

Waite, who reported meeting with the captors last week, said when he returned to Beirut from London on Tuesday that he had "very important things" to tell them and hoped more contacts would lead to progess.

Waite met unidentified senior U.S. officials during a one-day stay in London before returning to Beirut. He told a Beirut news conference: "This is an opportune time for a major step forward."

After meeting with newsmen, Waite drove to his hideout in Moslem west Beirut to await contact with the kidnappers, believed to be Shiite Moslem fundamentalists of the Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War.

He left his base once Tuesday night to recover a suitcase and his British passport that were left at Beirut airport several hours earlier when he returned to the Lebanese capital.

The items were left behind when pistol-packing Shiite militiamen hustled him into a car and drove him to the Commodore Hotel for his news conference.

Waite refused to say whether he was delivering a message to the kidnappers.

"I hope those who have responsibility (for the hostages) will see what an opportune time this is now for a major move forward — not just for limited causes, but for greater causes," Waite said. He did not elaborate.

"I have very important things to say to them," he said. "I'm not prepared to say publicly what I need to say to them in private. I believe that last time was a good step forward. I think now it's possible to take another step forward."

As he did during last week's visit, Waite appealed to journalists for privacy. "I value human life and wrong moves could endanger life," he said.

Waite, 46, has secured the release of Britons and Anglican missionaries in Libya and Iran in the last three years. His current mission was launched after four of the six missing Americans wrote to Runcie asking for help.

The four are Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest; David Jacobsen, director of the American University Hospital in Beirut, and Thomas Sutherland, the university's dean of agriculture.

Islamic Holy War claimed Oct. 4 to have killed a fifth American, diplomat William Buckley, in retaliation for alleged U.S. complicity in Israel's air raid Oct. 1 on Palestine Liberation Organization headquarters in Tunisia.

U.S. officials say there is no proof that Buckley is dead.

The captor have made no mention for months of another American, university librarian Peter Kilburn, who has been missing since Dec. 3.

The kidnappers have demanded that Kuwait release 17 comrades convicted of bombing the U.S. and French embassies in 1983.

Waite also noted a purported statement from Islamic Holy War on Monday that one of four French hostages it holds, apparently apart from the Americans, was in "terrible physical condition that might endanger his life."

He said: "I would like to make a special appeal to his captors to show mercy and release him to his family without delay."

DRUGS

In addition, law enforcement officials work closely with MISD in conducting uannounced searches of secondary school campuses by Midland Police Department officers and drug-sniffing dogs. Students found in possession or under the influence of illicit substances are punished, according to school board policy.

CASA — an organization of community leaders sponsored by the Junior League of Midland, Inc. — made initial strides to mobilize Midlanders to fight substance abuse this fall when it organized a week-long drug education seminar conducted by Community Intervention Inc. About 38 persons — many of them school employees — attended the seminar.

"We are very excited to have the opportunity to bring professionals such as these to Midland to help coordinate an organized effort against substance abuse in our community," Holmes said.

MISD trustee and CASA board member Betsy Robinson said, "I really believe the schools are the first in line for education, but it's going to take involvement from the entire community. Anyone who looks to the schools alone to resolve the problem is naive."

Mrs. Robinson said drug and alcohol abuse among teens should begin with recognition followed by referral, counseling and intervention.

The problem won't be resolved overnight, she said. "Anyone who thinks it might, doesn't understand the problem.

Other organizations also are taking the grass roots approach in an attempt to get parents involved with their user child in counseling or drug prevention groups.

While the PDAP program is based on the 12 steps of Alcoholic's Anonymous, its director Bob Savage said those steps have been modified to focus on the adolescent because adolescent "use is abuse."

When the program began in Midland, it was geared toward persons between the ages of 13 and 25. Because they have found involvement with drugs at a younger age, officials there re-evaluated the program to include 10-ear-olds, Savage said, and education and prevention programs are presented to children ages 5 through 12. Adult, parent and family group counseling sessions also are offered.

Funded through private, corporate, church and United Way of Midland donations, PDAP receives referrals from family members, teachers and ministers. If a couple goes for marriage counseling and the counselor realizes that drugs or alcohol are the root of the problem, he may refer the couple to PDAP.

PDAP views alcoholism and drug addiction as "a family illness," Savage said, and the individual, family, community, state and nation must become involved in the process of resolving the problem.

Community intervention "is going to become the pivot point," Savage said. "It's going to take every person that walks."

At Teen Challenge, counseling and live-in programs are provided for persons ages 17 to 35, although most seeking help there range in age from 18 to 25.

A Christian program, emphasis is placed upon re-directing one's life, getting priorities straight, and usually avoiding old friends and familiar hangouts.

Those needing medical detoxification are usually referred by PDAP To Midland Memorial Hospital, Permian Basin Mental Health/Mental Retardation, the Johnson Center or Clearview.

Dr. Joe Wolpmann, medical director at Clearview, said during a recent seminar that emotional crises, family and adolescent conflicts, marital problems, school and work failures, depression are some of the many issues often are related to chemical use.

Clearview, the first free-standing treatment center of its kind in the Permian Basin, opened its doors Oct. 4 and is designed to offer a spectrum of progressive programs that pinpoint problem areas.

A facility of the Midland Camelback Samaritan Group, Clearview is active in preventive mental health and drug/alcohol awareness programs in the community...providing lectures, workshops, conferences, crisis counseling, school and civic presentations.

Wolpmann noted that all Clearview programs — alcohol, cocaine, poly-drug treatment — are medically supervised and involve detoxification, education, rehabilitation, family involvement and aftercare. The patient's return to the community also is supported with the involvement of family members referring agencies, professionals, and self-help groups such as Alcoholics Anonymous, Cocaine Anonymous, PDAP and Al-Anon.

Another way to prevent a breakout of drug usage among neighborhood kids is to involve parents, children and other citizens in peer pressure reversal groups.

The Lee High School Parent-Teacher Association and the Junior League of Midland organized parent education programs on substance abuse and peer pressure reversal.

Prevention Using Student Help, a teen group for students in grades 7 through 12, is "dedicated to stopping teen drug and alcohol problems before they start," said PUSH co-sponsor Seree Whitlow. "We want to provide chemical free fun activities and education. We are a positive pressure support group for teens of all ages."

Thursday: A success story

RULE

Sheppard said his case was hampered by a lack of statewide statistics.

The law passed by the Legislature last year to encourage students to get better grades made no provision for statewide record-keeping because of the expense and extra paperwork, O'Hanlon said.

Sheppard said the survey introduced into evidence Tuesday was supposed to include all 1,100 Texas school districts. But he said the state Supreme Court, acting on an appeal from the Texas Education Agency, on Nov. 8 threw out Ms. Anthony's request for information from all those districts. The 19, plus two McAllen high schools, responded to the survey even though it was not mandatory, Sheppard said.

Other than the survey, which included districts like Culberson, Hempstead, Bledsoe, Denver City, Floydada, Keller, Knippa and Merkle, among others, opponents of the law have failed provide figures to show discrimination.

Sheppard acknowledged the testimony from school officials during the first 1½ days of trial was "just kind of mediocre." But the survey information, he said, would shift the burden of proof to the state to come up with some kind of numbers to refute it.

The lawsuit is the latest in a series of legal challenges to no pass, no play, which has become the most controversial part of an education reform package. According to the law, students failing at least one subject in a six-week grading period may not participate in an extracurricular activity for the following six-week period.

About 15 percent of the varsity football players were ruled ineligible for the second six weeks of the school year although junior varsity and freshman teams were hit twice as hard, according to a coaches association survey.

Earlier this year, Ms. Anthony found the statute unconstitutional, but that ruling was overturned by the Texas Supreme Court. The rule's opponents are seeking review of that case by the U.S. Supreme Court.

This latest suit is challenging what is alleged to be an unfair impact on minority students and handicapped students.

MAHON

"Midland has lost a true, loyal and helpful friend of long standing in the death of George Mahon — a real gentleman, scholar, distinguished internationally known statesman, as well as a top West Texan. With his 44-year background in the U.S.House of Representatives, he would have made this nation a great president had he chosen to seek that high office," Collyns said.

Jno. P. Butler described Mahon as "very much a conservative man. He did a fine job representing his constituents. He was always there ready to help and he had input for whatever undertaking he went into."

Collyns remembered that Mahon and his wife were honored in November 1978 with a community-wide "George and Helen Mahon Day" celebration at Midland College's Chaparral Center, just prior to his retirement from political life. During the event, Mahon praised Midland and said it wasn't just another town. "Midland is a dynamic city, a unique city, and it has been great to be a part of this community all these years."

ELECTED IN 1934, he was a young district attorney in Colorado City when the district was created out of 25 counties.

Tom Sealy came to Midland in 1935 to begin a law practice. He became acquainted with Mahon and supported him through all his subsequent elections. "I never ran for anything," said Sealy, "but I was always interested in the people who did. We wanted to be sure Midland was represented as well as any other city." Mahon fulfilled their expectations, according to Sealy.

"George Mahon was one of the most dedicated public servants who ever served in the Congress. Those of us who knew him will never forget the time and attention he directed to the people — not only in his district — but in all of the nation as well. His many years of service as chairman of the House Appropriations Committee left a record that will never be equaled. Last, but not least, he was a Christian gentleman in every sense of those words," Sealy said.

Mahon was succeeded by Hance, a Lubbock Democrat who turned Republican this year and is running for the GOP nomination for governor.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, said in a statement that Mahon "was the epitome of honor. For half a century he faithfully served the people and best interests of West Texas.

"His lanky frame, quiet wisdom and gentle humor cast a long shadow across the land. Those of us who knew, loved and respected him have lost a cherished friend," Wright said.

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said, "He was the kind of statesman you read about in the school books. His was the level of public service that should be the goal of every officeholder. He was a dear friend and we will all miss him."

In Congress, Mahon became known as a conservative with a passion for pay-as-you-go government.

He maintained a home in Colorado City throughout his career, but lived in Lubbock for many years.

He was named to the appropriations committee in 1939. By 1949, after already gaining the reputation as champion of a strong defense, he became chairman of the subcommittee that wrote the first combined defense appropriations measure.

In 1964, he was made chairman of that full panel and held the job longer than any other.

ONE OF THE most popular members of the House and a close friend of Johnson, Mahon once displayed enjoyment at being right in the middle of a 1967 budget battle between Congress and and the president.

"It's like being in the eye of a hurricane, so to speak," said the rangy Texan. "The president has his responsibilities and I have mine. I don't mind a good fight. I rather enjoy it."

Once describing himself as "an apostle of the strenuous life," Mahon kept an athletic appearance by doing calisthenics and walking every day, playing golf when he had time. He was a Methodist who abstained from drinking.

His nephew, Bryan Mahon, said, "My dad (Mahon's brother) told me when he was plowing in the field, he would carry a pocket dictionary and he would learn a new word every day. He had a tremendous vocabulary."

Born Sept. 22, 1900 near Haynesville, La., Mahon was brought by his parents to Mitchell County, Texas, in 1908, where he was reared on a farm.

After graduation from Loraine High School, Mahon got an A.B. degree from Simmons University in Abilene in 1924. The next year, he got a law degree from the University of Texas.

He married the former Helen Stevenson of Loraine in 1923 and they had one child, a daughter, Daphne.

Funeral services were scheduled for 11 a.m. Friday at the First Methodist Church in Lubbock, with burial in the Loraine Cemetery in Mitchell County.

He is survived by his wife, his daughter, Mrs. Duncan Holt of Dallas, three sisters, a brother, three grandchildren and nieces and nephews including U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon of Fort Worth.

SUMMIT

It was learned that Soviet negotiators in Geneva last month approached their American counterparts about a "quick fix" interim agreement to limit strategic nuclear weapons.

The United States responded with a proposal — no details were disclosed — but there was no reply from Moscow before the summit talks opened.

Answering questions as he posed for pictures with Reagan this morning, Gorbachev said the meeting "is going on in a very careful, responsible way with all the problems of concern to the Soviet and American people and other countries. This is a responsible discussion."

Asked if they had discussed human rights, Gorbachev replied, "We had a very lively discussion of everything." He said the meetings were being held in a "frank, businesslike and I think responsible way."

Reagan, asked his assessment of the talks, replied, "Fine."

The president was quoted by his spokesman as saying, "Our differences are serious but so is our commitment to improving understanding."

Leonid Zamyatin, the Kremlin's spokesman, said the leaders discussed future summits at dinner Tuesday night. He described the current talks as "a first step" and "a beginning" after a lapse of more than six years in U.S.-Soviet superpower summitry.

Reagan and Gorbachev conferred at the Soviet mission this morning, and again met without aides for more than an hour, accompanied only by interpreters. It was their third one-on-one session over two days of talks.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said neither Reagan nor the U.S. interpreter took notes, but that the president reported on the discussions afterward to Donald Regan, the White House chief of staff; Secretary of State George P. Shultz; and Robert C. McFarlane, the national security adviser.

"He briefs from memory," Speakes said. Asked if the president carried a hidden recording device, the spokesman said, "I think I can safely deny that."

On the Soviet side, both Gorbachev and Zamyatin used the diplomatically significant word "frank" to describe the summit talks. That language usually means sharp differences were expressed. Speakes declined to describe the talks that way.

The Kremlin spokesman, at a briefing, said the fact that a summit finally had been held "in itself is a very positive event."

"But, believe me," Zamyatin said, "in such a limited space of time the enormous amount of difficult issues that have accumulated cannot possibly be solved. It can only be a beginning."

Describing today's morning session, Zamyatin said, "Of course there were disagreements. There were problems, which are related to the diverging approaches of each country to certain issues."

But he later added, "I should very much like to see a compromise."

COACHES

"We've seen a lot of comments being made by some people who apparently are not able to provide the leadership that we need in Texas. Many of those coaches are giving that leadership. There's always a few that are reluctant to do so because it means a change in their pattern."

Gregg Sherwood, Plainview High School athletic director and president of the coaches association, said White's comments demonstrated that the group "struck a nerve."

"It's a shame that his reaction was not from realizing no-pass, no-play is more detrimental than helpful to students," Sherwood said. "It's a shame his reaction is political."

Sherwood predicted the rule — passed as part of the 1984 education reforms — "will be one of the big issues" in the 1986 campaign. The three Republican candidates — former Gov. Bill Clements, U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler and former Rep. Kent Hance — have all said they favor reducing the six-week disqualification period. None has called for an out-and-out repeal of the rule.

The governor said he would continue to support the rule as written. His campaign committee recently released a series of paid political television advertisements boasting of the success stories no-pass, no-play has produced.

"I'm going to continue on that course," he said Tuesday. "I don't care what course others may take, that's the course we're going to take."

White's campaign manager Dwayne Holman said his polls show most Texans support no-pass, no-play. Holman said the three Republicans are talking "weasel words," trying to gain support from "the vocal minority" that opposes the law without antagonizing those that like it.

The governor acknowledged that many high school coaches have a strong standing in their community and could become formidable opponents. "They should be taking credit for the success of no-pass, no-play not trying to defeat it," he said.

"They're community leaders, and I'd like for them to be leading in the direction of stronger academic programs."

"I think we've got some people out there who are crying and whining about having to meet some standards that apparently are easily achieved if we work for it," White said.

Soviet officials try to put on Western face at Geneva

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

WORLD

GENEVA — Soviet officials have tried hard to present a Western-style image of openness at the Geneva summit, but old habits and new surprises keep getting in the way.

Although the Soviets have a closed authoritarian society at home, they have been holding open press conferences once or twice daily and offering top officials for interviews to comment on the summit between President Reagan and General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev of the Soviet Union.

The Soviets are particularly anxious to talk about — and criticize — Reagan's "Star Wars" program, which they contend is the major stumbling block to a breakthrough here on arms control.

They have made available senior officials to conduct these briefings, including Gen. Nikolai Chervov, a top Soviet arms control expert, and Leonid Zamyatin, the chief spokesman and a member of the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party.

That's all in the American and Western style. But the press conferences are run in a decidedly un-American manner. Officials are selective about the questions they will answer, particularly avoiding questions on human rights in the Soviet Union — a summit topic.

When a recently released dissident, Irina Grivivna, who had been accredited as a reporter for a Dutch newspaper, persisted in asking questions about the Soviet practice of confining some dissidents in psychiatric institutions, a Soviet official denied it and suggested that "the militia" be called to remove the questioner.

That is a very un-American threat. Another Soviet press conference was canceled and a third broken off because of questions about human rights.

U.S. officials put up with endless questions by hecklers that often have no relationship to the subject at hand, without ever threatening to call the police.

U.S. officials consider such confrontations as an unavoidable consequence of the functioning of a free press.

There are no such press freedoms in the Soviet Union, where suppressing dissent is the rule, not the exception.

In fact, reporters for the Soviet press have frequently appeared at U.S. news conferences here to ask questions clearly designed to embarrass or mislead, while they never ask that type of questions of their own officials.

The Soviet campaign to look Western extends to the human rights area. To improve their image in days prior to the summit, the Soviets released several Jewish dissidents and 13 people from so-called divided families who had not been allowed to join their spouses in the West previously.

An Analysis

They also disclosed that Yelena Bonner, wife of exiled dissident Andrei Sakharov, would be allowed to seek medical treatment in the West and they allowed Sakharov to talk by telephone to his relatives in the United States for the first time in a long while.

But the few who are released only serve as a reminder to the West of the hundreds of thousands of other Jews and dissidents who are not allowed to emigrate despite Soviet international commitments, such as the 1975 Helsinki accords.

William Hyland, editor of Foreign Affairs magazine, said in a recent interview the Soviets should not be given credit for letting Yelena Bonner get medical help in the West since it is something they should have done long ago.

Mrs. Avital Shcharansky, wife of imprisoned Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky, 37, held a news conference of her own here Tuesday and said the best evidence that the Soviets want peace would be the release of her husband.

Mrs. Shcharansky has directed similar pleas to Moscow in the past. Her husband has been imprisoned for 11 years on charges of spying for the United States.

After someone else said Tuesday he had discussed human rights recently with Gorbachev and interpreted him as possibly willing to liberalize treatment of dissidents if East-West tensions were reduced, Mrs. Shcharansky objected.

First ladies put message of hope in cornerstone

GENEVA (AP) — Nancy Reagan and Raisa Gorbachev today buried a joint message in the cornerstone of a new Red Cross museum expressing hope for "peace and harmony for all mankind."

The American and Soviet first ladies were joined by Ursula Furgler, wife of Swiss President Kurt Furgler. They put identical messages, in English, French and Russian, in a metal time capsule, which was then placed in the museum's cornerstone and cemented over.

Mrs. Reagan and Mrs. Gorbachev were to meet again later today for tea at the Soviet mission. At the first of the "tea summits" Tuesday, the two talked about home and family, and invited each other to visit their countries.

At the museum, Mrs. Reagan and Mrs. Gorbachev exchanged their messages, rolled in white paper and tied with different colored ribbons, before placing them in the capsule.

The message read: "This stone is laid in hopes that this museum will contribute to the understanding and strengthening of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent movement and that it will inspire future generations around the world to seek peace and harmony for all mankind."

Mrs. Gorbachev praised the work of the Red Cross. "People can have and do have different outlooks but we really must find a common language when life, health and the future of mankind are at stake," she said.

Mrs. Reagan said that because of the Red Cross, "the world will be reminded of its hidden strength and humanitarianism."

The American first lady said she brought with her a $10,000 donation from the Heritage Foundation. Mrs. Gorbachev said her country, too, would make a donation but did not say how much.

Mrs. Reagan was bundled up against the cold in a bright red coat with mink collar, a black fur hat and black leather boots. Mrs. Gorbachev wore a gray coat with matching fur collar and hat and black boots.

Mrs. Gorbachev also visited the ultra-modern World Health Organization building Wednesday morning, but refused to tell Soviet employees there anything about the talks between her husband and Reagan.

"I can't say anything about it until after it is over," she told about 40 Soviet citizens who gave her a standing ovation in the executive board room.

Mrs. Gorbachev was scheduled to view cattle on a 105-acre Swiss farm while Mrs. Reagan taped messages for the United Nation's Children's Fund vaccination campaign.

On Tuesday, when Mrs. Gorbachev arrived at Mrs. Reagan's borrowed home, some of the waiting international press corps thought she looked a bit nervous. But after rushing in from the cold, the two sat down and overstayed their scheduled 45-minute tea by another half hour.

"I think everything relaxed after a while," Mrs. Reagan said later, explaining that she served her favorite almond-flavored tea in a drawing room overlooking Lake Geneva.

Mrs. Gorbachev, who responded, "Yes, a little, aren't you," when asked if she was nervous, perched on the edge of a chair and posed for pictures.

But when they were alone, or at least out of the camera's eye, the conversation flowed.

"We talked about our husbands and the meeting and what we both hope would come out of the meeting-...which is a better understanding," Mrs. Reagan said.

The two women talked so long that President Reagan had to come in the back way when he returned to the villa from his talks with Gorbachev. It seems Mrs. Gorbachev's motorcade was blocking the front driveway of the 18th century villa.

Colombian troops burn corpses mired in mud

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Soldiers wearing face masks to cover the smell of death poured gasoline on corpses stuck in the volcanic mire that inundated the Armero Valley, and set fire to them.

Film on government television late Tuesday showed the soldiers going through Armero, most of which is covered by 15 feet of mud, dousing the corpses with gasoline from small cans and setting fire to them.

The film also showed soldiers shooting stray dogs.

Despite predictions that no more survivors remained, 13 people were rescued Tuesday after being buried alive for six days.

But later, government officials said they were beginning to shift their focus from rescue work to cleanup. Rescuers who had been working virtually around the clock snatched a few minutes of sleep in the shade of bushes, trucks and buildings.

Scientists watching the Nevado del Ruiz volcano said a series of minor earthquakes Tuesday inside the three-mile-high mountain may indicate internal lava movement. A small eruption with no external lava flow last Wednesday melted snow on the mountain, spawning the mudslide that killed up to 25,000 people.

Fred Fischer of the U.S. Geological Survey said scientists would have to study seismographic charts and watch for a continuing pattern of shocks to determine if another eruption will occur.

Temperatures were in the mid-80s Tuesday and the smell of decomposing flesh was almost unbearable in the still, humid valley.

National Red Cross Director Carlos Martinez told the RCN radio network, after six people were pulled from the mud Tuesday, that "there are no survivors to rescue."

But exhausted and grimy rescue workers refused to give up, and pulled seven more survivors from the mud where they had clung to life for six days.

All of the 13 people rescued Tuesday were badly injured and taken by helicopter to hospitals for emergency treatment. At least two were rescued from Armero, including 9-year-old Janeth Zarate, who was reported later in satisfactory condition at a hospital in Ibague, some 50 miles southwest of Bogota, with abrasions and the first stages of blood poisoning.

Gen. Victor Delgado Mallarino, National Police director, told reporters at a news conference, "The job of rescue that moved forward during six days was a complete success."

An official said Sunday that there was no one left to rescue, but the government pledged to continue the search after a public outcry. It said Monday that the search would continue as long as there was a chance of finding people alive.

Red Cross spokeswoman Maria Ines Pacheco said her agency has compiled a list of 5,000 people who were injured, hospitalized or reported safe.

In Manizales, 25 miles west of the volcano, two dozen scientists monitored the aftermath of the explosion with tons of equipment.

Fischer said lava expands more rapidly when it meets water soaking into the mountain from the snow and ice cap. The results, he said, could be dangerous.

The national emergency committee created after the disaster issued a report Monday saying experts feel the situation "has stabilized," and that there have been no changes in the glaciers clinging to the volcano.

It was the snow and ice melted by an eruption that caused the mudslide. Even so, tons of snow and ice still remain on the mountain, and scientists estimated that only 5 percent of the snow has melted.

Despite the possibility of another eruption, some residents of Manizales, a coffee growing center within sight of the volcano, have adopted a fatalistic attitude.

"I have lived here all my life. What is going to happen is going to happen. It is in God's hands," said Martha Lucia Olarte, 24.

The U.N. Development Program said in a report that the mudslide that followed last Wednesday's eruption killed 22,800 people in a 12-square-mile area, including 8,000 children under the age of 16.

Aid includes high-heeled shoes

ARMERO, Colombia (AP) — The last thing homeless refugees needed after being pulled from the putrid sea of volcanic mud that covered their city was a bottle of French mineral water and a pair of high-heel shoes.

But both were waiting at relief centers and airports, thanks to an outpouring of sometimes misguided aid from a sympathetic world.

The emotional impact on the world of a great tragedy, such as the volcanic mudslide that inundated Armero and neighboring towns last Thursday, sometimes makes it hard ensure that only necessities are sent, U.S. relief official Paul Bell said Tuesday.

"If water is the problem, you don't need to have Perrier shipped in. I'm not kidding — there is Perrier sitting in the airport in El Dorado. It's incredible," said Bell, regional head of the Office of Foreign Disaster Relief for the U.S. Agency for International Development.

Just in case anyone wants to take the Perrier somewhere, Bell has spotted something they might want: 1,000 five-gallon metal water cans shipped from Italy by the U.N. Disaster Relief Organization.

"I can walk down almost any street in almost any town in Colombia and I can buy, for a few pesos, a much better product made out of plastic. It will help the economy, it gets there fast," he said.

Elsewhere, shipments of clothing arrived, including a large pile of shoes that included several pairs of the latest in high-heel fashion.

It was not clear what group or country had donated the Perrier water and shoes.

The United States, Bell said, has learned from its mistakes.

"Our office has learned we need to sit back and say our objective is not to impress people with how generous we are," he said. "Our objective is to help people."

Police say battle between blacks kills six people

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police said two rival black mobs of about 1,000 members each battled with spears and clubs early today near Durban, and that six people were killed. Anti-apartheid violence was reported in seven areas of South Africa.

A police spokesman said the fighting near Durban had nothing to do with politics, and officials listed no new deaths as a result of anti-apartheid violence. Six blacks were killed Tuesday, and nine died Sunday and Monday.

Mobs of blacks stoned police vehicles in Queenstown and Hanover in Cape province, police said. In Soweto, the black township near Johannesburg, police said vehicles were damaged by stones.

Arsonists set fire to two black schools in Kwanobuhle, a gasoline bomb damaged a delivery vehicle in Langa, and an arsonist set fire to a home in Stutterheim, police said. Those communities all are in Cape province.

Police also said the Moslem Assembly Center in Phillipi near Cape Town was hit by a gasoline bomb that caused extensive damage.

Police Capt. Vincent Heunis said the fighting between ethnic Zulus and Pondo tribesmen in Malagazi shantytown south of the Durban airport was unconnected to politics.

There was no information on what started the fight, but the two groups are known to hold grudges that go back decades.

"It was two groups of about 1,000 each," said Heunis, who reported that police separated the mobs and discovered the six dead.

Meanwhile, doctors and nurses urged leniency toward more than 1,000 student nurses and non-medical employees who were fired for striking at Baragwanath Hospital on the edge of Soweto.

Two black unions threatened to spread the job action to other hospitals if the Ministry of Health does not resolve the issue by midnight today.

About 650 doctors and other workers at Baragwanath urged administrators to welcome back the fired workers.

Soldiers have been cooking meals and cleaning the 3,000-bed facility.

Business Day, a newspaper aimed at South African business executives, reported that a "sharp fall" in South African imports from the United States forced an end to direct U.S.-South African sea links.

The drop in imports reflects the inability of South African consumers to afford U.S.-made goods. The South African rand, now worth about 38 U.S. cents, has fallen in value during the country's racial unrest.

Ecologists claim famine caused by human activity

NEW YORK (AP) — The famine in Africa was caused by human activity, not by lack of rain, and emergency food aid is making the situation worse, two ecologists have concluded.

Piecemeal aid from developed countries has changed life in sub-Saharan Africa so dramatically that the land can no longer support the population, the researchers say.

The changes may even be altering the weather itself.

The core of the problem, according to Anthony Sinclair and John Fryxell of the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, is that too many people and too many cattle are living on land that can no longer support them, because it has been overgrazed and stripped of vegetation.

"If you feed the people and leave them where they are, it won't address that problem," Sinclair said recently. "It will make it worse, because these people will move into new areas and alter the vegetation again, so the famine will spread."

Sinclair is quick to say that on humanitarian grounds there is no immediate alternative to sending food to the millions of starving African families, but warns that more must be done.

"The very first thing we have to address is to repair the vegetation," he said. "We've got to get the grasslands growing again. We've got to take the people off the land, take the pressure off the land."

Moving large numbers of people is a difficult political problem in the best of circumstances, and may be impossible given the political unrest in some of the drought-stricken countries of Africa, in the broad belt known as the Sahel that stretches across the continent just south of the Sahara.

"We're not the right people to say how this should be done," Sinclair said. "We're not in the aid business. But that shouldn't stop us from mentioning problems."

Sinclair and Fryxell are specialists in the migration of wild animals in the Sahel.

In a recent paper titled "The Sahel of Africa: ecology of a disaster," Sinclair and Fryxell described how the wildebeest and the white-eared kob, two African antelopes, survive in large numbers by migrating during the rainy season to areas where short-lived, high-protein grasses briefly appear, and then returning in the dry season to areas where lower-quality vegetation grows year-round.

The migration strategy allows more animals to survive than would be possible if they were confined to a single area year-round, and it also allows grasslands to recover during periods when the animals are away.

Many people living in the Sahel have traditionally followed a similar strategy, moving their cattle herds to different areas at different seasons, and thus avoiding overgrazing and permanent loss of grasslands.

That pattern began to disappear several decades ago, however, as western countries began to send aid to Africa.

Wells were drilled in areas that were green with vegetation year-round. Communities developed around the wells, and medical and veterinary care became available. People who had migrated soon settled near the wells, and it wasn't long before difficulties arose, according to Sinclair and Fryxell.

Grazing animals no longer had access to high-protein grass during the rainy season. The land around the wells became overgrazed and ultimately denuded of vegetation, now that animals were feeding there constantly.

The improved medical care increased the population of humans and animals.

As the process accelerated, each periodic episode of less-than-average rainfall had more severe consequences. The famines of 1973 and 1984 were both preceded by reduced rainfall, but resulted in far more deaths than previous droughts, the researchers said.

While the lower rainfall might have been the trigger for the famine, the ultimate cause was settlement and overgrazing, prompted in part by aid from developed countries.

"That's the most crucial point in understanding the problem," Sinclair said.

Beyond this relatively rapid deterioration of grasslands there may, however, be an even more ominous long-term problem, Sinclair said.

The overgrazing may be directly changing weather patterns, causing a decline in rainfall that could last for decades.

Satellite photos show grasslands sprouting hope

NEW YORK (AP) — The rainy season just ending in the drought-stricken regions of Africa has produced some substantial increases in vegetation, a development that could ease the famine there, new satellite photos show.

The vegetation consists largely of grass, which is not edible but which will support livestock, said Compton J. Tucker of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md.

"These areas are largely pastoral," he said. "Things are based on animals being the converter of energy for human uses, either through milk or meat, because people can't eat grass."

Increased vegetation growth does not necessarily mean that more rain has fallen, Tucker said. What it does suggest is that the rain has been distributed at times that are best for nurturing plant growth.

The satellite photos, taken during August and September — the height of the rainy season in sub-Saharan Africa — showed marked increases in vegetation when compared with similar photos taken during August and September 1984, he said.

The increases were scattered along the Sahel, the semi-arid region lying along the southern boundary of the Sahara desert, Tucker said in an interview.

He said the satellite photographs provide information that is unavailable on the ground either because ground-based weather stations have not been built or because political unrest makes travel to remote areas impossible.

In addition, Tucker said, ground observers usually have detailed knowledge of only small areas, and the observers' judgments of vegetation changes are subjective. The satellite observations are precise and can be obtained quickly, he said.

The low cost of the satellite photographs, compiled from multiple images made by NOAA-9, operated by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, is also a factor, he said.

It costs about $150 a day to monitor the entire Sahel, a region stretching across the African continent from Senegal in the west, across Mauritania, Mali, Bourkina-Fasso, Niger, Chad, Sudan and into Ethiopia and Somalia in the east.

"For that price, you couldn't hire somebody to work on the ground," he said.

Tucker's interest in the observations is a scientific one: he is trying to map the southern boundary of the Sahara desert and determine how it varies over time. "There's a huge controversy over the southern boundary of the Sahara," Tucker said.

He has, however, shared his findings with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and with the International Livestock Center for Africa, based in Ethiopia, he said.

The NOAA-9 satellite circles the Earth twice a day in an orbit that takes it over both poles. The satellite travels over every point on the globe twice a day — once in darkness and once in daylight — as the Earth rotates beneath it, Tucker said.

Liberia bans meetings, foreign journalists

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Foreign journalists have been barred from Liberia, and leader Samuel K. Doe banned meetings of students, businessmen and professionals in a crackdown on political opposition following a failed coup, a private radio station said Tuesday.

The Liberian Embassy in Ivory Coast said Tuesday that foreign journalists will not be allowed into Liberia for two weeks.

Radio Elwa, broadcasting from the Liberian capital of Monrovia and monitored in Abidjan, also said the country's international airport and seaport were reopened Tuesday for the first time since the Nov. 12 coup attempt.

Borders remained sealed because soldiers still were looking for rebels, the radio said. The government said previously that most of the rebels have been killed or captured.

Elwa reported Tuesday that Doe has told the United States he will not seek revenge against the perpetrators of the attempted coup. Gen. Thomas Quiwonkpa, an ally of Doe in the 1980 coup that brought him to power, was identified as the leader of last week's attempted overthrow and was reported shot to death in the streets of Monrovia on Friday by one of Doe's bodyguards.

The government says most of the rebels have been killed or captured.

In a message to President Reagan, Doe also pledged to pursue a policy of reconciliation and reconstruction, Radio Elwa said.

Texas filmmakers unite to reel in new projects

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White, who last week appeared on the "Dallas" television show, says filmmaking is an industry on the move in Texas.

Announcing formation of the Motion Pictures Producers of Texas, White said earlier this week that the state's film industry is a vigorous part of the economy.

"The Texas film industry has enjoyed considerable growth over the past 10 years, and we are proud of the major contribution the many Texas film and video producers have made to one of our state's vital industries," White said.

The producers group, headed by Dallas film producer Joe Camp, hopes to promote the state's homegrown movie industry through a variety of projects.

White, who had a brief speaking part as himself in the "Dallas" program that aired Friday night, called movie-making "an exciting industry...that's quickly becoming an important part of the Texas economy."

Of the 83 movies made in Texas in the past two years, White said, 33 were produced by Texans. "This year, for the first time, the majority of the projects shot in the state have been Texas-produced," he added.

Tax records show that 247 Texas companies are involved in some aspect of motion pictures or allied services, reporting receipts of $120 million last year. Gross sales for the industry in Texas have increased an average of 30 percent annually since 1980.

"...No group in any state has ever mounted a major effort to effect support and stimulate the growth of a home-grown, resident film industry."

— Producer Joe Camp

White noted that several Texas-made films have been award-winners, including "Tender Mercies," "Terms of Endearment," and "Places in the Heart."

Camp, producer of the "Benji" films, said the group's members will seek to make Texas "the home of a major, self-sufficient motion picture and television industry to be reckoned with internationally."

Hopefully, an industry can be built inside the state that won't need outside productions to keep it going, Camp said.

While several states have recruited individual film projects, Camp said, "To our knowledge, no group in any state has ever mounted a major effort to effect support and stimulate the growth of a home-grown, resident film industry."

Camp said Texas-based film production has been booming in recent years, making the state's film industry less dependent on film projects from outside Texas.

Bill will allow Contras to purchase aircraft, vehicles with U.S. funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaraguan rebels could get unarmed aircraft and ground vehicles as well as sophisticated radios under a compromise bill nearing final congressional approval.

But the 1986 intelligence authorization bill continues a ban against the Reagan administration giving the rebels military training, advice and lethal supplies. It also bars U.S. officials from asking other governments to ship military hardware to the insurgents.

The bill, a compromise hammered out by congressional negotiators, cleared the House on Tuesday by a 387-21 margin. The Senate is expected to pass it later this week and send it to President Reagan for his signature.

The compromise amounts to a temporary cease-fire in congressional fighting over Reagan's policy of aiding Nicaraguan rebels in their four-year war against the leftist government in Managua. That political battle is expected to resume early next year when Reagan again requests lethal military aid.

Last summer, Congress agreed to provide $27 million in non-lethal "humanitarian" aid to the rebels and permitted the CIA to share intelligence with them, but barred additional U.S. support. The CIA backed the guerrillas covertly from 1981 until 1984, when Congress cut off the aid.

The bill approved Tuesday gives the rebels special radios to transmit CIA-supplied intelligence to their base camps without fear of it being intercepted by government troops. The CIA also could train the rebels in using the radios.

In addition, the bill states that the already-approved $27 million can be spent to buy "transportation equipment...so long as no modifications are made...to inflict serious bodily harm or death."

Congressional sources said that provision clears the way for the administration to send unarmed planes, helicopters, ambulances and trucks to the rebels even if the vehicles are used later to transport military equipment or troops.

Until now, a special State Department office established to distribute the "humanitarian" aid has refused to spend the money to buy vehicles for the rebels, using the funds for food, medicine, clothing and shipment costs.

Judge warns defense in sanctuary trial

TUCSON (AP) — Halfway through their opening statements, defense lawyers in the sanctuary conspiracy trial have drawn a stern warning from the judge that they could face contempt citations for violating his pretrial orders.

U.S. District Judge Earl Carroll planned to continue discussions with prosecution and defense lawyers today regarding prosecutor Donald M. Reno Jr.'s request that defense attorneys be found in contempt.

Reno made his request during the opening statement Tuesday of attorney A. Bates Butler III, who was giving the sixth of 11 planned defense opening statements.

"I'm the keeper of the door," Carroll said. "Having a conspiracy charge doesn't open the door to a floodgate of evidence...All that I think is sought here is a continuous effort to mistry this case."

The 11 sanctuary defendants are charged with conspiracy for allegedly smuggling Central American refugees into the country. The defendants claim the aliens were political refugees, but the prosecution contends they merely were seeking better jobs.

Reno claimed the defense lawyers deliberately defied Carroll's pretrial orders limiting the type of evidence that could be presented, particularly an Oct. 28 order barring any defense claim that the defendants acted through a good faith belief that the Central Americans were political refugees.

Carroll told the defense lawyers, "Motive is not a defense in this case in any way, shape or form." The judge told Butler, "in this instance and in the future, lawyers will be cited for contempt."

Butler answered, "I did not intend to be contemptuous. I do not think I was."

Defense lawyer Robert Hirsh said he believed Carroll's orders were in error, but that lawyers intended to stay within them.

Panel OKs snuff, chewing tobacco warnings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Snuff and chewing tobacco, products rapidly growing in popularity among America's youth, would be required to carry health warnings under legislation approved by a Senate committee.

The Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee Tuesday approved a bill that would require smokeless tobacco tins and pouches, as well as advertisements for the products, to carry one of three rotating warning labels that read:

"Warning: This product may cause mouth cancer."

"Warning: This product may cause gum disease and tooth loss."

"Warning: This product is not a safe alternative to cigarettes."

The bill, approved on voice vote without debate, now goes to the Senate floor.

The committee's action was prompted by increasing concern over the widespread use of smokeless tobacco by youngsters.

According to congressional testimony, local surveys in Oklahoma, Oregon, Texas and Massachusetts suggest that between 20 percent and 40 percent of high school boys use the product. The Texas study found that 55 percent of the users started below age 13.

Those testifying before Congress blamed much of the increased use on television ads featuring athletes such as Carlton Fisk of the Chicago White Sox and former Dallas Cowboy Walt Garrison and entertainers such as Charlie Daniels.

Unlike cigarettes, advertising of smokeless tobacco is not restricted. Witnesses said many youngsters assume snuff and chewing tobacco are safer than cigarettes because of the endorsements by athletes and the lack of warning labels.

A study published last month in the Journal of the American Medical Association said a survey of more than 5,000 Texas schoolchildren found 77 percent perceived cigarette smoking as very harmful, while only 40 percent had that view of smokeless tobacco.

And the National Cancer Institute has said use of smokeless tobacco "is a dangerous practice that may increase a person's risk of cancers."

NBC planning to leave 'Radio City' complex

NEW YORK (AP) — After more than 50 years, NBC is planning to leave Rockefeller Center, the complex that became Radio City because of the network's presence and from which Orson Welles announced "The Shadow" and Fred Allen told listeners, "Hollywood is a great place if you're an orange."

In the 1950s, NBC's "Today" show made the area familiar to people who had never been to New York with live TV pictures from studio windows of passersby and skaters at the Rockefeller Plaza ice rink across the street.

The NBC studios in the RCA Building at 30 Rockefeller Plaza have been the home of such television highlights as Milton Berle's "Texaco Star Theater," and Johnny Carson's "Tonight" before it moved to California 15 years ago.

But even with much of its entertainment production moved to the West Coast, NBC has had to spill out of the building to 10 sites around the city.

About the only major network shows now beaming regularly from "30 Rock," as the building is familiarly known, are "Today," "NBC Nightly News," "Late Night With David Letterman" and, still live from New York, "Saturday Night Live."

Local TV and radio affiliates also air from 30 Rock and Phil Donahue's syndicated talk show originates in the building.

But the NBC radio network now operates from a building five blocks away and TV soap operas and Bill Cosby's top-rated show are shot at a studio in Brooklyn because "we can't accommodate them here," said NBC spokesman Curt Block.

NBC's leases, for just under half of the 2.3 million square feet of space in the 70-story RCA Building, will be expiring between 1989 and 1997.

The network announced it was hunting for a new home several weeks ago and has talked to a number of real estate operators, among them Donald Trump, who earlier this week unveiled plans to build a project called Television City.

NATION IN BRIEF

FDA seeks warning labels on drugs containing sulfites

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration, citing 14 suspected cases of allergic reactions, is proposing that an estimated 1,100 prescription drugs carry warnings that they contain sulfite preservatives.

The warning, proposed in a draft regulation issued Tuesday, is intended to protect the estimated 500,000 to 1 million people who are sensitive to sulfites and could suffer a potentially fatal allergic reaction.

The FDA said sulfite preservatives are present in more than 1,100 prescription drug products. Most are intended for intravenous use or injection, but some inhalers and eye drops also use them. Relatively few oral medicines use the preservatives, the agency said.

However, the FDA said in its notice that the allergic reactions reported to the agency are sufficient to justify special notices. It also said some scientists believe the incidents of allergic reactions are underreported, because doctors may attribute reactions to side effects of the drug itself without suspecting the preservative.

Confrontation avoided

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — A confrontation with farm activists and a right-wing extremist group who helped block the eviction of an illiterate black farmer may represent a dangerous new trend facing authorities, a law officer says.

At least four members of the Oklahoma-based Heritage Foundation, some in camouflage suits and with assault rifles, and about two dozen armed activists vowed to used force if necessary Friday to prevent Oscar Lorick from losing his 79-acre farm near Cochran, authorities said.

Bleckley County Sheriff Edward Coley averted bloodshed by handling the situation "in a textbook way" despite pressure from some local residents to use force, said Bill Padgett, head of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation anti-terrorist squad who advised Coley.

Coley arrived unarmed at the farm and talked briefly with Lorick, while Lorick's supporters tried to convince the sheriff he had the authority to ignore a court eviction order.

"To me, the hero of the whole thing was the sheriff," said Donald Sparry, director of Coastal Georgia Police Academy in Brunswick, which offers courses on extremist groups. "He didn't overreact. He defused the situation. He let time work for him, and he kept a cool head."

Group to monitor forests

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Environmentalists have started a drive to save the world's rain forests, saying it will be the most important ecological issue in the next decade.

The goals announced at a news conference Monday included stopping the World Bank from financing development in tropical forests, which are disappearing at a rate of 100 acres a minute.

Environmentalists from 35 groups formed a coalition to save rain forests during a weekend meeting at Sausalito.

Hopes for summit

With all the publicity, all the speculating, all the hoopla regarding the summit between Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev now taking place in Geneva, one would get the impression that the two leaders would strike a world-changing agreement or something of the sort to at least let the summit live up to expectations.

That isn't likely to be the result, of course, although there undoubtedly will be numerous reports of "progress being made," or "differences being settled," or even of one or the other leader "stealing the show."

A major agreement isn't likely because the ideological differences separating the two nations preclude any such agreement, and if one were to be struck, it would be suspect from the very outset. History attests it's far better to sit back and await positive actions than to blindly embrace hollow pronouncements.

So, the value of the summit is relegated to the purpose of giving the two leaders a forum in which they can make concerns of their respective nations known to the other, and to set the stage for future meetings during which leaders of the two nations realistically can attempt to iron-out those differences in hopes of forging a lasting peace and understanding.

Hopes for anything more from a summit such as the one now under way would be totally unrealistic. The differences in ideology between the United States and the Soviet Union developed over a span of centuries, and cannot be resolved in a brief two-day meeting.

In all honesty, the only hope for the current summit is that President Reagan and Soviet leader Gorbachev will find a common ground that can show them they are mortal human beings who hold a sacred trust for the continuation, not the destruction, of this planet.

From such a common ground could spring greater understanding between the people of the two nations, which might mark the beginning of the end of national hatred spawned by the lack of understanding.

That is the best hope for this summit and future summits held in the interest of knocking down the barriers between nations.

Avoid trade war

Within a few weeks, the United States and Canada, which rank as the world's largest trading partners, will open talks aimed at working out a free trade agreement. There is hope on both sides of our lengthy borders for a duty-free pact similar to the one agreed to early this year between the U.S. and Israel.

Unhappily, however, the path to trade harmony with Canada is beset with more obstacles than confronted negotiators of the U.S.-Israel covenant. The main issue dividing the neighbors is Canada's timber exports to the U.S. which many Americans regard as a threat to our own lumber industry. And at the moment, the problem is being approached in ways that cause resentments to proliferate.

In the past 10 years, Canada has practically doubled its timber exports to the U.S. while our timber companies are still mired in a depression. Canadian wood sells here for substantially less than the native products and, in a few instances, is of superior quality.

U.S. critics contend that Canadian timber interests enjoy a virtual subsidy that gives them an unfair advantage. Their supporters in Congress are pushing legislation to impose stiff new tariffs on the imports, but the Canadians have found an important ally in U.S. home builders who are trying to keep construction costs as low as possible.

Any action by the U.S. to hamper timber imports is certain to provoke retaliation by Canada against U.S. products and will torpedo the forthcoming talks. There is still time for the two countries to clear this serious hurdle and every effort should be made to do so. The last thing two good neighbors need is a disastrous trade war.

Another View:

Not even failure

If the administration were really serious about improving the educational chances of poor children, it would strengthen existing educational programs that have been successful — and it would demand additional funds for education —not propose another voucher plan whose most likely effect is further damage to the nation's public schools.

Under the proposal, recently announced by Education Secretary William Bennett, vouchers worth an average of $600 apiece would be made available to some 5 million disadvantaged children to use in public or private schools. The money would come from federal funds now allocated to public schools to provide extra help for such children. Parents who wanted to opt out of their local public school could ask the district for the money, in the form of a voucher, and use it in any other school, public or private.

The proposal could have profound consequences. On the one hand, it would give poor children and their parents some economic power to make demands of their local schools or, if their demands are not met, to buy alternative schooling in parochial or secular private schools. That power is seriously limited by the fact that $600 represents less than 20 percent of what it costs to educate a child in the average public school and no more than 15 percent of what the better private schools charge in tuition. At the same time, there's no doubt that it would be of substantial help to inner-city parents, for example, who, with scrimping and scholarship help, already send their children to parochial schools. Obviously, it would also be of great help to such schools which, not surprisingly, welcome the proposal.

And yet there's even less doubt that even if, as seems certain, only a small percentage of those 5 million students claim their voucher, the program will have a negative effect not only on school districts already strapped for money, but on the ideal of common schooling in America. If the vision of public education for a free society is reduced to nothing more than the ethics of the marketplace, then its support will quickly erode to what politicians at any given moment regard as the minimal needs of its clients.

There is validity in Bennett's argument that if the affluent can buy their way out of rotten schools, why shouldn't the poor. The schools have to be made more accountable to the people they claim to serve, people who, in many cases, have neither clout nor choice. But this is a hollow and dangerous form of choice: To the extent it succeeds, it would leave the public schools with more and more marginal students — those without the motivation, those who are kicked out of other schools, those for whom the $600 is simply inadequate — and with even fewer resources to deal with them. If this administration had been trying hard to support public education, its voucher proposal would be a confession of failure. But since it hasn't, it's not even that.

RUSSELL BAKER

Empire State Building lives on

NEW YORK — Crossing Fifth Avenue at 42nd Street the other day, I was saddened to discover that the Empire State Building was gone.

Russell Baker

It didn't surprise me. In Manhattan, buildings have brief life spans. One day they are there, next day they aren't. It probably has something to do with a provision in the tax law. It is remarkable how many irrational things occur these days because strange provisions in the tax law make it profitable to engage in irrational behavior.

In the fraction of an instant during which I glanced up and saw that the Empire State Building was gone, an astonishing succession of emotions and thoughts raced across my mind. These can be expressed in coherent sentences as follows:

No.1. "I am going to miss it."

No.2. "It was so beautiful that it's a wonder no one loved it enough to put up a fight to keep it."

No.3. "Why couldn't they have taken down the World Trade Center instead?"

No.4. "What's wrong with me? Mentally and emotionally, I'm carrying on like the worst kind of extreme environmentalist."

No.5. "Isn't the correct phrase 'environmental extremist'?"

No.6. "I don't think the landscape rapists have settled on the definitively abusive term yet. The other day I read an article by one of them denouncing 'environmental elitists.'"

No.7. "In any case, I don't want to catch myself carrying on like those knee-jerk preservationists who go around arguing that ugliness is too high a price to pay for a multi-million-dollar windfall, do I?"

No.8. "You bet I don't. I want to be respected in this town."

No.9. "And it's a tough town, baby. New York is a tough town, and in tough towns they don't cry when lovely old buildings go because they know that just as you have to break a few eggs to make an omelette you have to knock down a few lovely old buildings to make a zillion dollars."

No.10. "Sure it's a tough town, but there are a million stories on every street corner and most of them are stories of love and kindness and ..."

No.11. "Don't start carrying on like the worst kind of extreme sentimentalist."

No.12. "I think the correct phrase is 'knee-jerk sentimental narrationalist.'"

No.13. "There is no such word as narrationalist."

No.14. "I wonder why. If there is such a word as 'rationalist' — and there is — there must surely be such a word as 'irrationalist.' Therefore, why not 'narrationalist'?"

No.15. "Who cares? I am thinking of 'irrationalism' only because this sadness about the Empire State Building reminds me that it was probably removed because of some curious provision in the tax law that makes irrational behavior, like disposing of the Empire State Building, profitable."

No.16. "In short, the Empire State Building has been done in by 'irrationalists'?"

No.17. "Also tax lawyers."

No.18. "Who, I dare say, will clear many a cool million as a result of the disappearance. Did I see that story about the corporate raiding of the Revlon conglomerate in which everybody cleaned up, especially lawyers, and possibly even the lawyer for the losing team, who is asking for $25 million?"

No.19. "As a matter of fact, I did see that story, and I realized then why I will never be tough enough to thrive in a tough town, even though it does have a million stories on every street corner, including many stories of love ..."

No.20. "Get on with it."

No.21. "I'll never be tough enough to make it in New York because if I were a lawyer I'd be too soft to ask for $25 million for losing a case."

At this point, having progressed a few yards westward on 42nd Street, I glanced up again and discovered that the Empire State Building wasn't gone after all. Somebody had erected an extremely high barrier in the nature of a new building on Fifth Avenue just south of the Public Library, and this hid the Empire State Building from view if you happened to be looking south.

I assume the city authorities are embarrassed by the Empire State Building and are encouraging builders to wall it off from public view. Or maybe architects and builders are embarrassed. That's understandable. Standing there as a constant reminder that a skyscraper doesn't have to be just another big, arrogant, dim-witted glass bore, it must be a terrible reproach to everybody building the new Manhattan.

FLORA LEWIS

Confusion widespread at summit

GENEVA — There is widespread confusion as the first Soviet-American summit conference in six years opens here. And no wonder. There have been volleys of proposals and counterproposals, all apparently brushed aside.

Flora Lewis

President Reagan and General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev compete on who can sound most eager for peace. Reagan believes the summit meeting can be a "watershed," his national security adviser announced. Gorbachev speaks of a moment of decisive importance.

But Gorbachev says that improvement depends on stopping the arms race — including "Star Wars" — so as to lessen tensions, and Reagan says it isn't the arms that create distrust and suspicion but the other way around. How are people to figure out what they think they are doing?

A group of lawyers here has petitioned the Geneva court to order recordings and transcripts of all the private talks. They base their case on the statute dealing with disturbance of the peace, saying that what is going on "threatens to disturb world peace." It is legal and diplomatic nonsense, of course, but not so much more nonsense than the White House talk about "a fresh start" that will make a "fundamental difference" in Soviet-American relations.

The White House is doubtless right that the success or failure of the summit meeting really won't be measured by the sum of rehearsed pronouncements each side makes here.

The real measure will come soon enough, but we may not know about it for a while. It will be the conclusion each leader takes home about what to expect from the other.

Reagan is said to rely on his "powers of persuasion" to convince Gorbachev of America's good will, in effect that U.S. policies are also in the best interest of the Soviet Union. Not likely. Gorbachev is pounding on the one door that Reagan has firmly shut, the attempt to research an effective defense against strategic missiles in space.

Russians here affect a sophisticated tolerance for the "presidential imprecisions" that botch the record and for the contradictory static from Washington. "Every U.S. president has to talk about a fresh start and a new relationship," said one veteran America-watcher from Moscow.

Still, they don't really believe that the same United States that produces so much wealth, such technological wizardry, such cultural dazzle can really just be bumbling around on the most crucial issues of foreign policy. They see dark designs to regain clear military superiority, though they have no answer to the question of what they think America would do with the weapons.

Revival by top U.S. officials of talk about "a position of strength" as the basis for relations doesn't help. "Negotiating from a position of strength" was a favorite buzz phrase that John Foster Dulles used during the worst of the cold war. He also talked about "rollback liberation" of Eastern Europe, which of course was never even attempted, and relying on nuclear weapons because they give "a bigger bang for the buck."

To the Muscovites, the phrases are associated and suggest that Reagan's beaming confidence stems not so much from a belief that the two superpowers can work out more satisfactory ways of getting along in the world, but that he thinks he can back them into a corner.

Although Reagan spent most of his first term refusing to meet the Russian leader on grounds that a summit meeting would have to be "thoroughly prepared," he has done well to reverse himself and decide there should be direct talks to initiate a search for accord. In that sense it is much better to have a summit conference without impressive results than to stay home shouting invective at each other.

But even before the sessions start, it is already a disappointment that both sides are spending so much effort trying to convince the world it's the other man's fault if nothing much comes of it. From what has been said so far, there is clearly very little understanding and not much attempt to probe each other's deepest thoughts.

It's still just possible that somehow there will be a bolt of illumination, a recognition that true advantage is to be gained not by winning a test of strength — which must always remain hypothetical — but by calming fears.

If the two go home from the summit with a conviction that the other is hopelessly intransigent, this meeting could have as dangerous consequences as the 1961 summit talks between Nikita Khrushchev and President Kennedy, who also believed in the magic of his personal charm. At this stage, confusion and apprehension are realistic insights.

ART BUCHWALD

Nuclear stockpiles make killing!

It's only fair, with the summit in progress, that we pay tribute to the world's great stockpiles of atomic weapons. Without them there is a good chance that Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev might not be meeting in Switzerland today.

Art Buchwald

A recent survey revealed that being blown up by a nuclear weapon is not the biggest fear in the world today. It's the fact that people can be snuffed out more than once that has most citizens on the globe slightly nervous.

According to a report by Ruth Sivard, a former official of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, there are now enough weapons on earth to kill 58 billion human beings. The catch is there aren't 58 billion people in the world.

Professor Sowa Bratten, who specializes in nuclear snuff statistics, says there is an answer to this. "Since we're short on the living and long on the weapons, the scientific community no longer counts how many people we can kill, but rather how many times we can kill them."

"How many times is that?"

He took out his pocket calculator. "We can knock off everyone in the world 12 times — with favorable wind conditions, of course."

"That's a big improvement," I said. "I recall just a few years ago that the superpowers were lucky if they could kill each person five times. To what do you credit the breakthrough?"

"Better quality control. In the old days building atomic weapons was little more than a mom-and-pop business. Mom stuffed the bombs with uranium, and pop screwed on the fuses. This was okay for Hiroshima and Nagasaki, but it just wasn't good enough for a global arms race. No one was thinking big."

"How did number one and number-two move the arms buildup into the 20th Century?"

"Their military advisers warned them that the low post-World War II kill ratio would no longer keep pace. Without extra fallout they could not guarantee the safety of their citizens."

"Thank God for the military," I said.

He continued, "Crash programs were started, and larger bangs were developed, with the help of giant cost overruns.

"It was obvious, as the demand increased for third-generation hardware, the nuclear powers would spend more and more of their gross national product on weapons. Edward Teller, the father of the H-bomb, said, 'The building up of larger and more powerful atomic weapons is the only way to stop the arms race.'"

"He didn't say that," I said.

"Maybe not," Bratten admitted, "but it sounds like something he would say. In any case we all know if you're going to make a nuclear omelette you first have to crack the plutonium."

"This still doesn't explain how the superpowers managed to increase their stockpiles."

"The powers didn't intend to make so many deadly weapons. They just got lucky. But it wasn't the size of the bombs that made everyone happy. A fool can make a nuclear bomb. The trick is to deliver it where you want it to go. That's where the real progress has been made. The breakthrough in the present delivery systems has given man new hope."

"Do you think we have now reached a plateau in overkill?"

He laughed, "You ain't seen nothing yet."

Small Texas town 'lost its innocence' after brutal slayings

BRENHAM, Texas (AP) — The broad daylight abduction of a Brenham woman and her son has forced residents in this Central Texas town to wonder if they have been living in a "fool's paradise," one town member said.

The quiet town nestled in the rolling hills southeast of Austin saw its security shaken when two men abducted teacher Kathy Coppedge, 36, and her 11-year-old son Casey from a church parking lot.

Their bodies were later found in the trunk of Mrs. Coppedge's car. Mrs. Coppedge had been shot, and her son had suffocated from the 150-plus-degree heat in the trunk.

"In an incident like this, one of the feelings you have is guilt. Then you ask yourself, 'Are we naive? Were we living in a fools' paradise?'" asked Brenham resident, Pastor Currie.

Currie says people are still nervous and are buying guns.

Despite efforts by police, deputies and the Texas Rangers as well as the lure of a $17,000 reward, the slayings are still unsolved.

Investigators are baffled. They lack clues, leads and even a motive.

In the town of 11,000 residents, best known as the home of Blue Bell Ice Cream, the people are horrified by the crime and stunned by the intrusion of such violence.

"I used to say, 'we don't have murders in Brenham,'" said Mayor Dorothy Flisowski. "I can't say that now."

Brenham, she says, has lost its innocence.

It had been a typically hot and muggy August Sunday for the 115 or so worshipers at Brenham Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Coppedge and her son, two of the congregation's newest members, were seated in a rear pew. Phil Coppedge, her husband, is not a regular church-goer.

The Coppedges had moved to Brenham in November 1984 when Coppedge was transferred by his employer, Hughes Tool Co. He serviced the oil rigs in the oil fields surrounding Brenham.

Mrs. Coppedge had been hired to teach first grade at Brenham's elementary school.

At the fateful Sunday's service, she and her son joined in the reading from Psalms 86:

"God, arrogant men are coming against me; a gang of cruel men is trying to kill me, people who pay no attention to you."

According to one witness, a car carrying two men with a woman seated between them in the front seat sped out of the parking lot and south down Jackson Street after the church service.

The witness thought it strange that one of the men had a hand over the woman's mouth.

Later that evening, Coppedge reported his wife and son missing.

Shortly before 11 p.m., a resident of nearby Burton called police and said there was an abandoned car parked along a grassy shoulder of U.S. 290, about 14 miles east of Brenham.

The car was the one Mrs. Coppedge had driven to church. The bodies, with hands tied behind the backs with cord, were found after the trunk was pried open. Mrs. Coppedge was strangled by the same cord.

Warming trend due

From Staff and Wire Reports

Warmer temperatures are expected in the Permian Basin area Thursday as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport predicts a high in the 60s.

Forecasters are calling for partly cloudy skies with a low in the middle 30s tonight, warming to a high in the upper 60s Thursday. Winds will be from the southeast at five to 15 mph tonight, increasing from the south at 15 to 20 mph and gusty Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 61 was 22 degrees below the record high set in 1950. This morning's low was four degrees above the 1937 record low of 23 degrees.

STATE

Very cold Arctic air spread across most of Texas, sending temperatures plunging below freezing across the Panhandle, South Plains and western portions of North Texas early today.

The large mass of cold air was poised just off the middle and upper Texas coast and just north of the Lower Rio Grande Valley early today.

Forecasts called for partly cloudy skies across western and southeastern sections of North Texas. It was to be clear over the remainder of North Texas and mostly cloudy over South Texas through Thursday. Some scattered showers or thundershowers were forecast across southern sections of the state.

NATION

Strong winds and still more snowfall sent the wind chill factor plummeting to minus 40 over much of the Dakotas and western Minnesota today, while storms thundered from the Midwest to the Southeast.

Snow fell overnight in western Idaho, northeast Oregon, Montana, western Wyoming, much of Washington and the mountains of northern California as well as the northern half of the Mississippi Valley.

Travelers' advisories for sleet and freezing rain were issued over western and upper Michigan. Concordia, Kan., reach a record low 9 degrees for the date Tuesday. The previous record of 10 degrees had stood since 1964.

Thunderstorms extended from southern Florida to the South Carolina coast, as well as across Michigan's Lower Peninsula, Indiana, the western parts of Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee, eastern Arkansas, northwest Mississippi and the Texas Gulf Coast.

Gusts accompanying rains in New Baden, Ill., reached 60 mph Tuesday night.

Rangers get tougher on long term pacts

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers on Tuesday adopted a drug testing policy that will apply only to future guaranteed or multi-year contracts, General Manager Tom Grieve said.

"We feel strongly there is no place in major league baeeball for the use of illegal drugs, and this policy is in keeping with our desire to do whatever is possible to help alleviate the problem and show our players and fans we have a genuine concern in this area," Grieve said.

The specifics of the new policy have not been formulated, Grieve said, but "it will only involve players with long-term contracts."

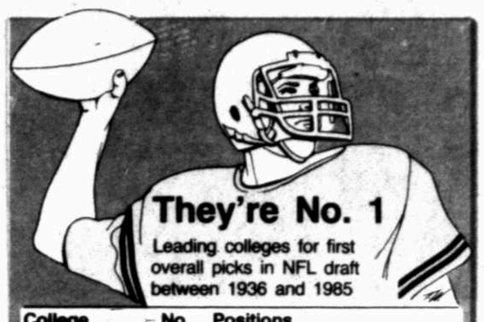

The majority of the Rangers players will not be affected, he said, because they are under only one-year contracts.

Drug Policy

Currently, only seven players have multi-year agreements. The new policy will apply only to new team members negotiating guaranteed contracts, Grieve emphasized.

The Rangers manager said he believes some other ball clubs have adopted similar drug policies.

Earlier, Rangers players voted not to vote on a request by Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth that players agree to voluntary drug testing.

OU as good as Huskers

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Fifth-ranked Oklahoma's football team is as good this year as second-ranked Nebraska, Sooners' Coach Barry Switzer said Tuesday.

Last year, when Oklahoma posted a 17-7 victory, that was not the case, he said.

"I think we're closer this year, I think we're equal. We're as good as Nebraska," Switzer said. "A year ago they were better. We were lucky to win the game."

Nebraska and Oklahoma meet Saturday. The game, which could decide the Big Eight Conference championship, will be televised nationally by ABC.

If Nebraska wins, the Cornhuskers will win the Big Eight title and go to the Orange Bowl. An Oklahoma victory would set up a showdown with Oklahoma State next week for the conference championship.

The runner-up in the Big Eight will go to the Fiesta Bowl, and the third-place finisher has been assured a spot in the Gator Bowl. Officials bowl invitations cannot be made until Saturday.

Nebraska is 9-1, 6-0 in the conference. Oklahoma is 7-1 and 5-0.

Switzer, 9-4 against Nebraska, said the Cornhuskers look as impressive as ever.

"The one thing Nebraska teams have always had is strong, physical linemen. The names have changed ... but the ability hasn't," said Switzer.

"The one area that has always separated great Nebraska teams is the quarterback," Switzer said. "When I think of the quarterbacking, I think of their passing game statistics.

"Their quarterbacks have always had 59, 56, 57 percent completions, and this year they're 39 and I think 36. That's one area that's probably kept them from being another great Nebraska football team."

McCathorn Clayton is scheduled to start at quarterback against Oklahoma. Backup Travis Turner has been bothered by a leg injury, and there has been talk about the possibility of freshman Steve Taylor playing if those ahead of him do not perform well.

The games will feature the conference's two most potent offenses and the league's top two defenses. Switzer said fans should not count on a high-scoring game.

"Nebraska is averaging 400 yards rushing; they're not going to rush for 400 on us. We're averaging 338 yards; we're not going to rush for 340 yards against Nebraska."

BOXING

RENO, Nev. — Saturday's scheduled 15-round title fight between WBA lightweight champion Livingstone Bramble and Tyrone Crawley has been postponed because of a hand injury to the challenger. Crawley injured his right hand while sparring last Thursday and the fight, which earlier had been postponed from Oct. 12, will be rescheduled for early next year.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK — The baseball players' union threatened to take action over a mandatory drug-testing clause included in at least one new contract and reportedly intended for up to 200 more. Because such a clause appears in catcher Steve Yeager's new contract, a grievance or an unfair labor practice is being considered against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

About 200 players will be negotiating new contracts between now and the start of the 1986 season. The Boston Red Sox, San Francisco Giants, Kansas City Royals, Montreal Expos, Philadelphia Phillies and Texas Rangers have indicated they plan on including drug testing clauses.

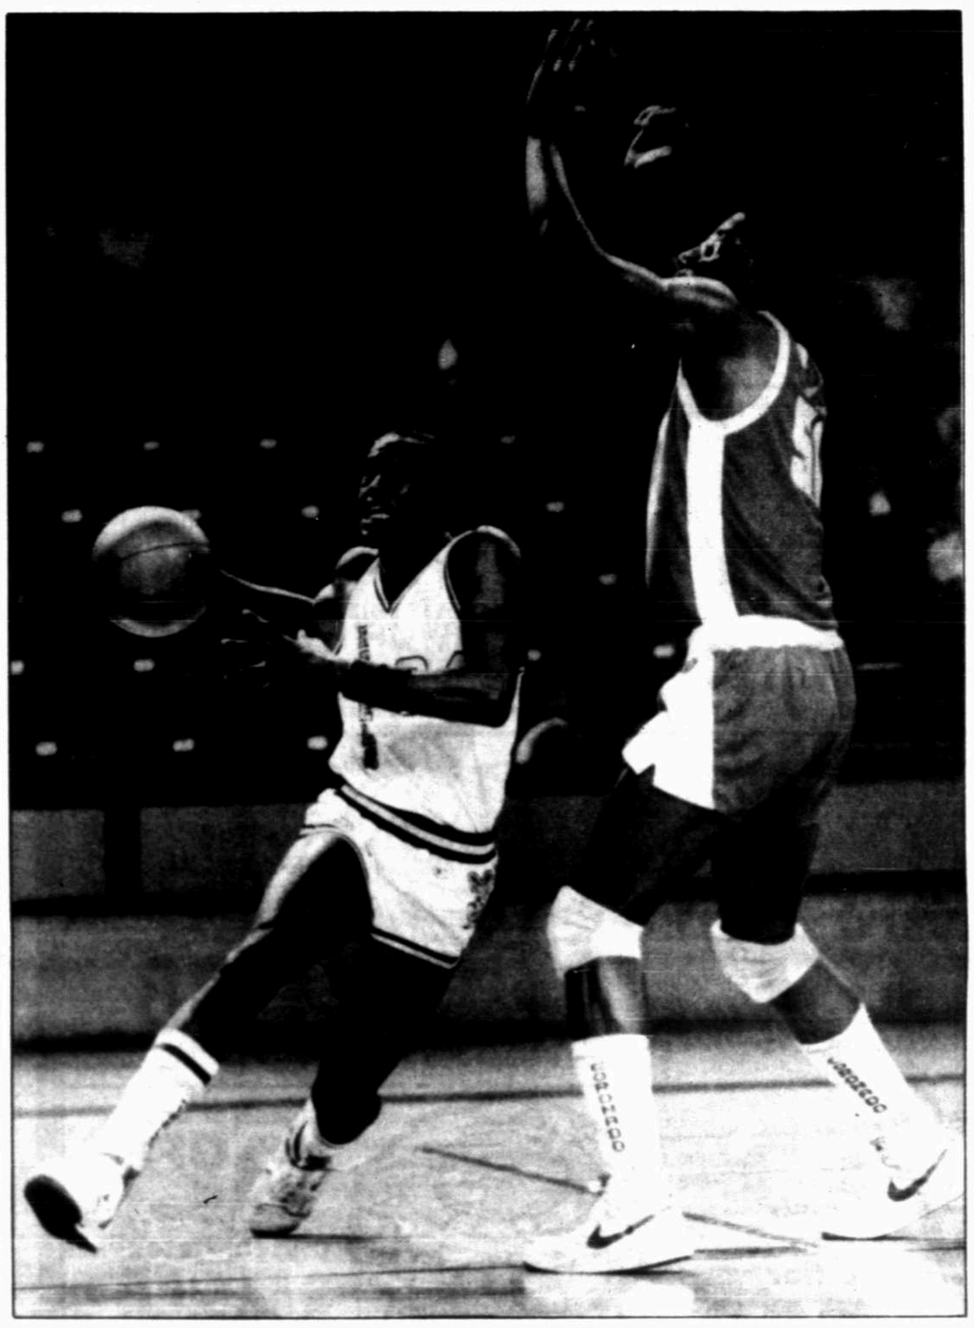

HARTFORD, Conn. — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner says he will meet this weekend with Billy Martin and Martin's agent, Eddie Sapir, to discuss a new role he has in mind for his volatile ex-manager. Steinbrenner gave his new manager, Lou Piniella, a vote of confidence and again denied making the decision to dismiss as manager Martin after the 1985 season. He said he left the decision up to Yankee front office chiefs Clyde King and Woody Woodward.

The jury returned innocent verdicts on two perjury counts and seven other misdemeanor counts of cocaine possession.

Midland Lee's Lee Dixon (34) drives for basket against Coronado's Alvin Morriel.

Coronado nips Rebels, 57-52

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland Lee's Rebels opened the 1985-86 basketball season and the question needs to be answered: Is it a sign of things to come or just an off night?

The Rebels led once in the game, scoring the first four points, but Lubbock Coronado came back with 10 straight and was never headed in its 57-52 victory at Chaparral Center.

"I thought our inexperience really showed up tonight," said Rebel coach Paul Stueckler. "You've got to give them a lot of credit and their big guy dominated the boards."

The big guy Stueckler was talking about is Alvin Morriel, who led the Mustangs in rebounds with 10 and added 18 points, second only in the game to teammate Todd Malaise's 24.

While Malaise was hitting the 12-15 foot outside shots, Morriel was scoring from close range, cashing in on offensive rebounds and beating the Rebel defense underneath.

"They got some good outside shooting," said Stueckler. "We didn't play with any poise and got nothing out of our fast break."

Without the fast break and an inability to work inside consistently, the Rebels were doomed to shoot from outside and, most of the night, accuracy wasn't in the cards. In all, Lee hit 23-of-58 shots (40 percent), including a hot-handed fourth quarter when the Rebels scored on 12-of-19 attempts (63 percent).

From the field, the Mustangs didn't shoot much better. While Malaise was 7-of-11 from the field and Morriel 8-of-13, Coronado hit only 21-of-47 as a team (44 percent).

The big difference in the game came from the line with Coronado outscoring Lee 15-4. The Mustangs hit 15-of-21 (71 percent) while Lee canned 4-of-9 (44 percent).

"I don't know if that's going to be low for this team or high for this team," said Stueckler about the shooting percentages. "This is only our first game."

Eddie Riley had the best night of any Rebel, mostly on the boards with a game-high 12. Riley also scored 10 points while Lonnie Dixon led in scoring with 13.

Riley provided the bulk of the Rebels' inside attack with three straight shots wide open under the bucket in the second quarter. However, that was about it from short range.

"We probably weren't looking for him inside after that," said Stueckler. "Eddie has been the brightest spot for us in all of our preseason work. He's consistent, plays with poise and keeps his cool on the court. He's done what he's supposed to do on the floor."

Even though Lee's shooting was off the first three quarters, Coronado never managed to put the game away. Lee was always knocking.

The Mustangs held a 12-8 lead at the start of the second quarter only to see Lee rally to 12-12 on two of Riley's close range buckets. Coronado scored the next two baskets for a 16-12 lead.

Lee countered with Reily again to cut the margin to two, the closest it would be the rest of the night.

Now, the 0-1 Rebels turn their thoughts to their next game against Plainview on Saturday at Chap Center. The Rebels and Bulldogs tipoff junior varsity action at 5 p.m. with varsity following at 7 p.m.

In underclassmen action Tuesday, Lee's sophomores claimed a one-sided 49-32 victory while the JV lost 47-46.

Elsewhere in games involving District 4-5A teams, Odessa Permian posted a 72-67 win over Lubbock Monterey; Odessa High defeated Fort Stockton, 86-49; Lamesa ripped San Angelo, 89-71; Plano bombed Abilene High 65-53.

Lubbock Coronado (57): Chris Blackburn, 3-0-2-6; Todd Malaise, 7-10-0-24; David Henderson, 1-0-2-2; Alvin Morriel, 8-2-3-18; Keith Howell, 1-0-2-2; Greg Parr, 0-0-1-0; Johnny Grusing, 1-3-0-5; Mark Willet, 0-0-0-0. Totals: 21-15-10-57.

Midland Lee (52): Eddie Riley, 5-0-2-10; Greg Johnson, 4-0-2-8; Lee Dixon, 1-0-5-2; Lonnie Dixon, 6-1-3-13; Mike Courtney, 1-2-3-4; Jeff Burchard, 0-0-0-0; Henry Brewer, 3-0-2-6; Quintus Hampton, 3-1-1-7; Carl Brackens, 0-0-0-0; Danny Staehling, 0-0-1-0; Mark Van Cott, 1-0-3-2. Totals: 23-4-22-52.

Dykes, UT's McWilliams possible Moore successors

LUBBOCK (AP) — Jerry Moore put down the telephone and looked at a photograph of his son, Chris, a walk-on football player at Texas Tech and said, "That was the hard part."

Moore had become the first head football coach fired in Texas Tech's 60-year history and had to deliver the bad news to his son.

Speculation on Moore's replacement centered around University of Texas defensive coordinator David McWilliams and Texas Tech defensive coordinator Spike Dykes. Jones knew both coaches when he was an associate athletic director at Texas.

The Tuesday firing by Athletic Director T. Jones becomes effective after Saturday's Southwest Conference game in Houston against the Cougars.

"This puts a big knot in my stomach and a lump in my throat. I'm confused and I'm hurt," Moore said.

Jones said he made a decision to fire Moore, 46, on Sunday night after a 9-7 loss to Southern Methodist.

JONES ASKED Moore to resign Monday night, but he refused.

"A matter of pride was involved," said Moore. "I'm not bitter and I'm not going to say anything bad about the school, but I wasn't going to resign after putting in five hard years to get this program on its feet."

Moore predicted the new coach would have almost instant success because of the talent pool the Red Raiders had been building. Moore red-shirted most of this year's freshman crop and had developed some talented performers, such as quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver and sensational wide receiver Wayne Walker.

"Whoever comes in here will enjoy it because they'll have a great bunch of kids, and this could be another Baylor or a TCU in 1984 here next year," Moore said.

JONES announced at a 3:30 p.m. press conference that he was "making a change in the head football position" and that he wanted Texas Tech to become more prominent on the national scene.

"I would like to see the university in a consistently competitive position and occasionally get into the Cotton Bowl," Jones said. "We have signed up for games against Ohio State and Nebraska because we feel it is important for athletes to compete against the best."

Jones said he hoped to find a replacement soon.

Two years remain on Moore's contract, which states he can be relocated within the university system.

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Is there a doctor in house?

Watching Midland Lee's Rebels play football is a lot like taking some of grandma's cold tonic. Either way you know you're in for a scary outing.

Lee is a heart doctor's favorite team. Nerve medicine came to the front in this country about the time the Rebels started running out of the wishbone.

As a kid, the wishbone was something of a dinner time game. You pulled on it to see if you would get your wish. Under Lee, the wishbone is pulled to see if you survive another week.

FOUR STRAIGHT weeks now our loveable brigade of Rebels have stuck pins in our hearts and while pulling them out laughingly say, "It's only a joke. We win don't we?"

Four weeks ago these Rebels went up against Abilene High, a team that hadn't given up enough points or scored enough points to fill out a grocery coupon. What happened? Lee scores 35, Abilene High scores 28. It could be considered a last minute type of victory to look back on if you didn't have to remember the three weeks after.

Three weeks ago Lee wins a 7-6 decision over Odessa High, stopping a Broncho two-point conversion with the upper portion of the sand glass almost empty. Two weeks ago, Lee trails Midland High by a 21-7 margin in the first half and comes back to win by a 27-21 tally. And, yes, MHS was within striking distance near the end.

And last Saturday came Bi-district, the game Lee has outscored opponents by a 72-10 margin the last two years. The verdict: a meager 13-7 win over Amarillo High while tossing in three straight quarterback sacks after the Sandies set up fourth quarter shop at the Lee 18-yard line.

AND, NO, we haven't forgotten San Angelo, a 12-7 fourth quarter comeback effort that made all this possible in the first place. You know the game — halfback to split end pass and split end to split end pass for miracles that are usually just dreamed of during the offseason.

And there was that 13-7 loss to Odessa Permian when Lee was perched at Mojo's two-yard door step before forgetting to knock.

Folks, this has been a wild football year. But the "New Tradition" is still plugging along while unplugging the pace makers across West Texas.

Some say the Rebels just aren't very good this year. Some say this was the year Lee would have to be lucky to get back to the playoffs and they played the cards with a bluffer's hand. Some say Lee is winning with flashlight batteries in the power plant.

Some say Lee did what it had to do to win and that's the bottom line. Still others offer that the Rebs are just flat out good in a district that is tougher than Hulk Hogan in a wrestling arena or in a TV commercial.

And then there is this lowy opinion coming from this corner. Lee's Rebels just don't know any different. They aren't as good as they have been the past two years. But somewhere along the line, they never learned to lose. These guys think they are the best thing to put on a football helmet since Doak Walker. Some of them don't even know who Doak Walker is. And most of them don't care.

BUT THESE Rebels have learned to win games when they probably shouldn't. Winning builds a winning tradition. It has carryover value for kids who don't even play on the team this year. You win, for the most part, when you expect to win before you take to the field.

Of course, you have to have a certian amount of talent to work with, but winning is mental for a lot of teams.

There is proof for all of this. Lee is 9-2, still alive in the playoffs and will be hosting El Paso Andress at Memorial Stadium Saturday at 2 p.m. There are a lot of teams that were invited to this party that won't attend.

Yes, the Rebels are alive and well — and that's more than you can say for their fans.

Big 10 is back with avengance

CHICAGO (AP) — The Big Ten is back!

Once in sad decline, this year's Big Ten Conference served its Midwestern fans a dazzling brand of college football that barely resembled its former "three yards and a cloud of dust" approach.

With three teams ranked in the Top Twenty, record-breaking crowds packing huge stadiums, and splendid television ratings, the Big Ten's pride is perking at an all-time high.

"All we have to do now is win the big ones," Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke said.

The "big ones" are the bowl games, which the Big Ten had been losing with alarming consistency in recent years, especially the Rose Bowl.

But the new Big Ten, marked by a balance of blended offenses and directed by crafty coaches, may be able to reverse that trend behind No. 3 Iowa, No. 6 Michigan and No. 12 Ohio State.

There was a time when the conference was in total command of the Rose Bowl, winning 12 of 13 games from 1947, when the Big Ten and the Pacific Coast Conference hooked up in a lucrative and exclusive contract.

In those days, the Big Ten had a rule that a team could not make a repeat trip to the Rose Bowl the following year. There were times when the Big Ten runnerup went West and won, heaping additional embarrassment upon their rivals.

The Big Ten, however, has had only two victories in the last 16 Rose Bowl games, with Ohio State winning in 1974 and Michigan in 1981. The last time the conference produced a national champion was 1968, when Ohio State reigned.

The Big Ten's big overhaul really began with the coaches. Before leaving for the National Football League's Detroit Lions, Darryl Rogers drilled his passing concepts into players at Michigan State.

Mike White turned the program around at Illinois, where crowds had drastically dwindled, but now pack the stands.

And out of Texas came Hayden Fry to rescue the program at Iowa. An immediate Hawkeye hit with his homespun philosophy and humor, Fry turned a losing team into a national power.

He also had a formidable weapon in quarterback Chuck Long, a product of Wheaton, Ill., whom Fry recruited and once said was "destined for greatness."

Long isn't the only experienced quarterback working in the Big Ten this season. Nearly every school had one, including stars such as Jack Trudeau at Illinois, Jim Everett at Purdue, Jim Harbaugh at Michigan, Jim Karsatos at Ohio State and Steve Bradley at Indiana.

To get into such an enviable position, changes had to be made years ago and they seem to be finally producing results.

It wasn't until 1975 that the Big Ten decided to allow its teams to play in postseason games other than the Rose Bowl. Several years later, the NCAA adopted the 95-scholarship limit under which the Big Ten had been operating, eliminating an advantage enjoyed by other conferences.

Those changes and others have helped recruiting and during the past year alone, Big Ten schools have invested $25 million from football revenues on new facilities.

Still, it took time for the Big Ten to shake the stodgy image imposed by Ohio State and Michigan, which dominated the league with their old-fashioned but successful ground offenses.

While at Ohio State, Woody Hayes shunned the passing game. "Protect your flanks and don't forget your fullback," the coach would say in elevating football to the level of war.

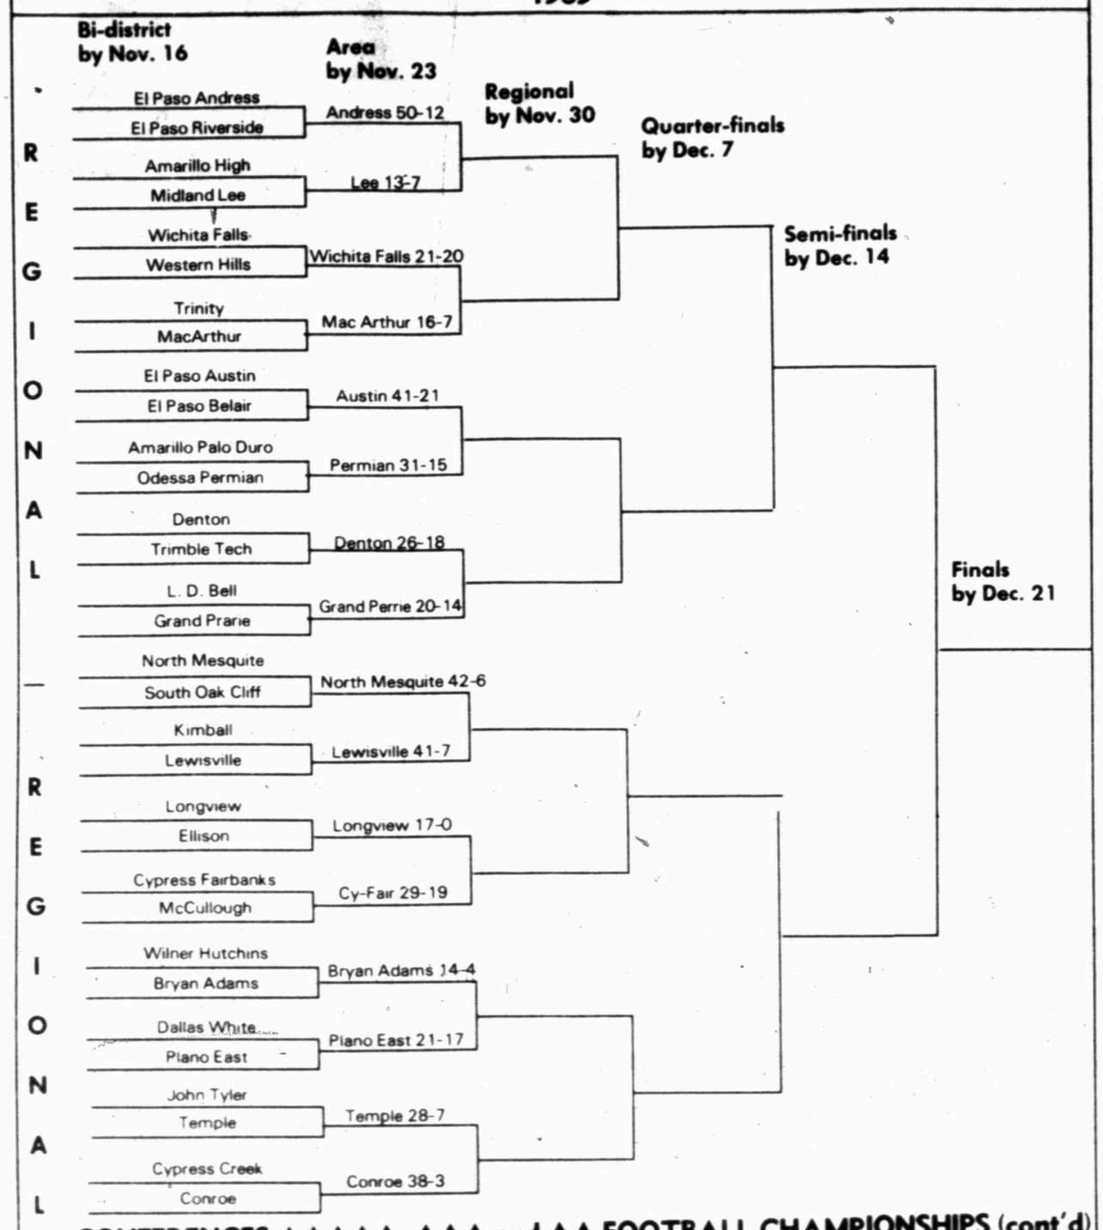

At Michigan, Coach Bo Schembechler would wink and say, "There are three things that can happen when you pass the football and two of them are bad."

That was great for Ohio State and Michigan, which took turns winning the conference championship in the days of the Big Two and Little Eight. But the one big game a year between Ohio State and Michigan didn't fill the bill for television, ever hungry for bigger and more exciting games.

Meanwhile, enlivened Big Ten teams averaged more than 69,000 fans a game this season, prompting the commissioner to call college football "the single most popular spectator sport in the country."

Jones said he expected Moore to honor the contract "the way the contract reads."

Moore, who's paid almost $60,000 a year, said he would have to discuss that matter with Jones. He said he would like to stay in coaching, which is precluded by the contract.

"The contract situation is going to have to be worked out apparently," Moore said.

Texas Tech players were unanimous in saying they felt Moore had received a raw deal.

"They just gave up on him," quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver said. "Now they'll bring in a new coach next year and we'll have a good season and have a chance to go to a bowl. But it won't be because of the new coach they brought in."

"It wasn't fair at all. The new athletic director just gave the man the shaft real quick," defensive back Carl Carter said.

Defensive end Tim Crawford claimed Jones "lied to us. He told us after the Texas game (Nov. 2) that a decision wouldn't be made on the head coaching job until the end of the season."

Surprise, Isles hold on to lead

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Making a habit of losing third-period leads, the New York Islanders finally kept one. Even better, it was against the Philadelphia Flyers.

"It meant a lot because it was late in the streak," said Islander right wing Mike Bossy after New York snapped the Flyers' 13-game National Hockey League winning streak with an 8-6 victory Tuesday night.

The Islanders had just lost a 5-4 overtime game to the red-hot Flyers last Sunday after wasting a 4-1 lead in the third period. They were determined not to let that happen again, and determined as well not to give the Flyers a chance to break their own record 15-game streak set in 1982.

Bossy had an All-Star night with two goals and three assists, but even at that the Islanders' victory wasn't assured until Bryan Trottier knocked a cross-rink goal into the empty net at the final second.

The Flyers converted four of six power plays, including two by Tim Kerr, in the final 40 minutes to make things interesting after the Islanders had built an early 5-1 lead.

Oilers 5, Nordiques 4

Glenn Anderson, who had scored the tying goal with six minutes left, connected with 21 seconds remaining in the game as Edmonton rallied from a three-goal deficit in the third period to beat Quebec.

Anderson got his game-winning goal, his 16th of the season, when he converted a pass from behind the Quebec net by Dave Semenko.

Sabres 2, Whalers 0

Paul Cyr broke a scoreless tie with 1:09 remaining to lead Buffalo over Hartford behind the goaltending of Mike Barrasso. Cyr picked up a loose puck in the Hartford zone and knocked in the game-winner, ending Mike Liut's bid for his 12th career shutout. Barrasso stopped 23 shots for his ninth career shutout.

NHL

Capitals 4, Penguins 3

Mike Gartner scored two goals and goalie Pete Peeters scored a victory in his first start for Washington as the Caps defeated Pittsburgh. Washington scored its eventual winning goal on defenseman Larry Murphy score at 9:54 of the third period, which gave the Caps a 4-1 lead.

Canucks 7, Red Wings 5

Petri Skriko scored three goals and Tony Tanti added one and a pair of assists to lead Vancouver over Detroit. The victory snapped Vancouver's three-game losing streak and ended a modest two-game winning streak for Detroit.

Flames 3, North Stars 3

Dino Ciccarelli scored his first goal of the season midway through the third period to force a tie with Calgary. Ciccarelli took a drop pass from Neal Broten just inside the Calgary blue line and beat goaltender Rejean Lemelin with a low screen shot.

Devils 6, Kings 3

Peter McNab scored the first of five straight goals in the first period as New Jersey notched its first victory ever at the Forum after going 0-19-4 since the franchise began in Kansas City in 1974-75.

After McNab tied the game 1-1 early in the opening period, New Jersey got goals from Doug Sulliman, Kirk Muller, Aaron Broten and Mel Bridgeman to take a 5-1 lead with 38 seconds left in the second period.

Denver's English flabbergasts coach

Associated Press

Denver Nuggets Coach Doug Moe says he's surprised sometimes when he finds out how many points Alex English has scored in a game.

On Tuesday night, he was flabbergasted when the public-address announcer said English had 48 points, en route to a career-high of 54, as the Nuggets defeated the Houston Rockets 127-113.

"I couldn't believe it," Moe said. "That's what happens when a guy is so good that people tend to take him for granted."

English, who led the NBA in scoring in 1982-83 and is on top of the league again with an average of 34.1 points per game, says he is feeling better than he has in years.

"We've defended Alex better in the past, but he got a lot on his own tonight," Houston Coach Bill Fitch said. "You just can't let a guy like Alex have a night like that."

Denver's victory vaulted the Nuggets past the Rockets into first place in the Midwest Division. Denver is 9-2 and Houston 9-3.

English, who hit 21 of his 30 field-goal attempts and all 12 of his free throws, previously had scored 47 points twice, including this season at Golden State.

It also was the highest point total of the young season. Larry Bird and Bernard King both had 60-point games in 1984-85.

Nets 108, Trail Blazers 102

Buck Williams had 22 points and 16 rebounds to lead New Jersey to its first road victory in eight games this season and hand Portland its fourth straight loss.

The Nets, 6-0 at home and 1-7 away from home, fell behind 10-4, but used a 14-3 rebounding advantage to outscore the Trail Blazers 30-16 the rest of the first period. New Jersey went on to lead by 22 points in the second quarter.

Warriors 110, Cavaliers 104

Purvis Short scored 32 points as Golden State also won for the first time on the road, while keeping Cleveland winless at home.

NBA

The Warriors scored eight points in the last 10 seconds, starting with Joe Barry Carroll's basket that broke a 102-102 tie. After the Cavaliers committed a violation on the inbounds pass, Terry Teagle made two free throws with seven seconds left, Teagle added two more free throws and Short made a basket at the buzzer.

Knicks 98, Bullets 94

Ken Bannister scored 23 points, one short of his career high, as New York won despite an injury to rookie star Patrick Ewing just 2½ minutes into the game against Washington.

Ewing was sidelined by an ankle sprain that left his status uncertain for tonight's game at Detroit.

Pat Cummings, who missed the previous six games with a sore ankle, scored seven of his 16 points in the final 4:03 to keep New York in front.

Mavericks 123, Suns 119

Dallas handed Phoenix its 11th loss in 12 games as Mark Aguirre scored 36 points and Rolando Blackman 32.

The Suns, who got 34 points from Walter Davis, including a three-point goal with 13 seconds left that cut the Mavericks' lead to 119-117, led 66-63 at halftime before Aguirre took over, scoring 22 points in the second half.

Bulls 121, Pacers 114

Orlando Woolridge scored 35 points, including a tiebreaking three-point play with 1:05 left, to lead Chicago over Indiana.

Kings 103, Spurs 99

Sacramento won its first road game after four losses as backup guard Mike Woodson scored 22 of his 26 points in the second half against San Antonio.

Woodson scored 10 points in the third period, but the Spurs, who led by four points at halftime, extended the margin to 82-75 going into the fourth quarter.

Woodson added 12 more points in the final period as the Kings outscored the Spurs 28-17. In the first 7½ minutes of the quarter, Sacramento went on a 17-6 run for a 92-88 lead.

Mike Mitchell scored 18 points to lead the Spurs.

Refrigerator to star in TV commercial

ATLANTA (AP) — William "The Refrigerator" Perry and his Chicago Bears teammate, quarterback Jim McMahon, will star in a television commercial for Coca-Cola and Coca-Cola Classic.

Atlanta-based Coke announced Tuesday that the ad featuring the National Football League stars will be aired in December.

"Perry and McMahon work together even better off the field than on," said Sergio Zyman, Coca-Cola USA's senior vice president for marketing.

Perry, a 308-pound defensive tackle from Clemson, has distinguished himself with the Bears as an occasional receiver and ball carrier.

Paterno unhappy over wife's ducats

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Now that top-ranked Penn State is ticketed for a New Year's Day appearance in the Orange Bowl, Coach Joe Paterno is complaining about the poor tickets given his wife for Saturday's game at Pittsburgh.

Paterno, in a telephone conference call Tuesday with Pittsburgh sports writers, said Penn State was given only end zone seats for Saturday night's the traditional regular season-ending game.

"My wife (Sue) has to sit in the end zone because Pitt sent us lousy tickets," Paterno said. "This really annoys me tremendously. We give them tickets on the 20 yard line and our people are in the end zone."

Pitt Athletic Director Ed Bozik denied that the Lions were intentionally given poor tickets.

"Our seats at Penn State are in the end zone. They give us the same amount we give them (5,000 tickets). There are 300 seats around the 25 or 30 yard line," Bozik said.

Pitt Coach Foge Fazio joked that he would ask his wife, Norma, to invite Sue Paterno to sit with her.

"I'm going to call him (Paterno). I don't want Joe to be mad," said Fazio.

Landry sees wide open race in East

IRVING — The National Football Conference East is "up for grabs," though the New York Giants probably have a slight advantage over the other teams in the tight divisional race, Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry said Tuesday.

The Cowboys, 44-0 loss to Chicago, host the Eagles at Texas Stadium Sunday.

Sunday's loss dropped Dallas to 7-4. Landry said the Cowboys were "a little bit in shock" following the Chicago game.

"A game like that happens to you every once in a while," he said. "When it does, you have no control over it."

The last time the Cowboys were shut out was in 1970, when they suffered a 38-0 Monday night loss to St. Louis. Dallas went on to win the Super Bowl.

For the second time this season, Gary Hogeboom could start at quarterback against the Eagles, Landry said. At Veterans Stadium on Oct. 20, Hogeboom replaced an injured White, completing 15 of 25 passes, but the Cowboys lost 16-14 after his two costly interceptions.

Starter Danny White, who sustained a neck injury Sunday against Chicago, has said he plans to play against Philadelphia, but the final decision will be made today.

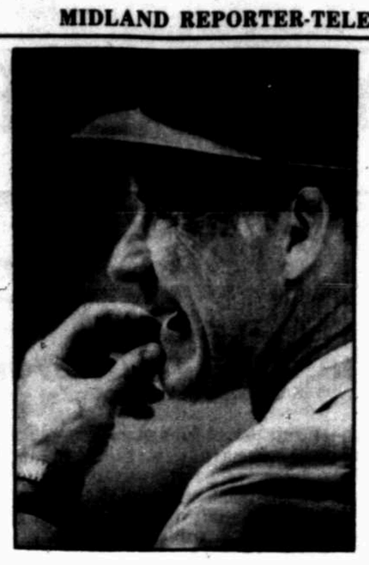

The Eagles also have a question mark at quarterback. Ron Jaworski injured a shoulder Sunday during the Eagles' 24-14 win over St. Louis and no decision is expected on his status until later in the week. Backup Randall Cunningham could see duty against the Cowboys.

The Eagles, who started with a 1-4 mark, have won five out of their last six and trail the Cowboys and the Giants by a game in the NFC East.

Landry said the Giants, despite their 23-21 Monday night loss to Washington, have a slight advantage over the other teams in the division — mostly because they already have played Philadelphia twice. from over.

"It's up for grabs ... I don't know what it is going to take. The team that is going to win it will have to win at least three of their five games," he said.

Landry said he still is concerned about the Cowboys' lack of offensive punch, especially close to the goal line, but added that it would not take much to correct the problem.

Funeral reward for hole-in-one golfer this week

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A pay-me-now or pay-me-later option awaits any golfer who sinks a hole-in-one at this week's New South Wales tournament. He can accept $10,000 cash or a pre-paid funeral with a monument.

That's the choice dreamed up by organizers of the golf tournament, starting Thursday at Canberra's Federal Golf Club. The cash-or-funeral has been offered by local PGA member Paul Smith to any golfer who can make a hole-in-one on the par-3, 185-yard eighth hole. Smith's family is in the funeral business.

"We were looking for a suitable hole-in-one inducement for our tournament when Smith came up with the idea," tournament director Terry O'donoghue said. The eighth hole, not so coincidently, also is a sudden-death hole in case of a playoff.

Bears Face a Big Challenge; Bum Phillips Digs Hole

By MICHAEL JANOFSKY
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — With five more victories, the Chicago Bears can become the first team since 1972 to finish a National Football League regular season undefeated and the first to do so under the 16-game format, which has been in effect since 1978.

It is possible they could do it, but improbable. The Bears have two difficult games left on their schedule, and maybe three. Here are the games and the possibilities:

Atlanta Falcons, next Sunday in Chicago: The Falcons are going nowhere with a 2-9 record. They beat the Los Angeles Rams Sunday, 30-14, but the Rams have been playing badly in recent weeks. The Falcons do not seem to have an offense strong enough to beat the Bears.

Miami Dolphins, Dec. 2 in Miami: Since the Dolphins were the last team to go undefeated — 14-0 — they will not take this game lightly. Not that they can afford to take any game lightly. At 7-4, they trail the Jets and the Patriots by a game. If the Dolphins do not win the division, they must have no worse than the fifth-best record in the conference to make the playoffs as a wild-card team.

Indianapolis Colts, Dec. 8 in Chicago: This is the easiest of the five. The Colts are 3-8 and playing like it.

Jets, Dec. 14 at Giants Stadium: This could be a tremendously important game for the Jets, who may need a victory to retain the division lead or keep their wild-card chances alive. The Jets are also a very good football team, with a passing offense sound enough to worry the Bears.

Detroit Lions, Dec. 22 in Pontiac, Mich.: It's hard to say now how important this game will be for the Lions. Now 6-5, they are still in the running for a wild-card spot in the playoffs. They might need this game to clinch it, and they play much better at home than away. They are 5-0 in the Silverdome, with victories over Dallas, San Francisco and Miami.

NOW THAT Bum Phillips has fitted his neck for a noose by saying he would resign if his New Orleans Saints, now 3-8, do not finish with eight victories, it is time to wonder if he would ever get another head coaching job.

Phillips deserves a certain amount of credit for his winning teams in Houston in the late 1970s, but before he left, he traded away many high-round draft choices for older players, moves that the Oilers are only now beginning to overcome.

His legacy in New Orleans is not much better. Only one team, the 1983 Saints, came close to making the playoffs. That team needed a victory in its final game against the Rams and did not get it, largely because of Phillips's decision to punt and not try for a field goal late in the game. The Saints lost, 26-24.

THE DOLPHINS have been the best team in the Eastern Division of the American Conference since 1981 but are now in jeopardy of losing their claim to the Jets or the Patriots, who are tied for first place at 8-3.

Two more Miami offensive linemen were injured Sunday, Jeff Toews, the right guard, and Cleveland Green, the left tackle. Toews suffered a severely damaged knee in the 34-20 victory over the Colts and will be out for the year; Green sprained his ankle and could be out for a month.

Solomon posts ghostly numbers

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — In their 1985 media guide, the San Francisco 49ers describe veteran wide receiver Freddie Solomon as "the most important element" in the offensive attack aside from quarterback Joe Montana.

That was written before the season. Last year, Solomon caught 40 passes for 737 yards and 10 touchdowns and was a key to the team's march to victory in Super Bowl XIX.

But this year, Solomon is living up to his nickname, "Ghost." He's been virtually invisible in San Francisco's attack, as the offense has struggled and the team has only a 6-5 record.

In 11 games this season, Solomon has 20 receptions — with only five in the last six games — and no touchdowns.

Solomon, 32 and in his 11th season in the National Football League, is in great shape, but he's been pushed aside by rookie Jerry Rice, who has had problems but apparently is San Francisco's deep threat of the future.

The decision apparently was made during the spring, when Coach Bill Walsh decided that Rice had to play to learn.

Deciding to phase out Solomon was "a tough kind of move to make, but you're almost obligated to make it," Walsh said.

"But each year that passes, an athlete's effectiveness, his stamina, come into play," Walsh said. "You work to replace men at the proper time and use men properly and bring them along properly. We're just playing it as we see it."

Coach inherits 46-game streak

By TOM CANAVAN

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Coaching the basketball team at Rutgers-Newark has been a no-win situation for the last two years, but new coach John Adams hopes to change that.

Adams is taking over a team that lost 46 games in a row and is on the verge of breaking the NCAA basketball record for consecutive losses.

Only two other teams in the league have ever suffered through that many straight defeats. Olivet College of Michigan did it in 1961 and Southwest State University of Minnesota followed in 1973.

The record could fall Friday when Rutgers-Newark opens its Division III season in the Western Connecticut Tip-Off Tournament against Roger Williams College.

"I really enjoy having a challenge no matter what part of my life it is," said Adams. "This obviously is a great challenge."

Adams has been up to the challenge in the past. He took over a doormat William Paterson program 11 seasons ago and won four New Jersey Athletic Conference championships while posting a 207-77 mark.

And when Matt Shoban was released as the Rutgers-Newark coach after last season, Adams was picked for the dual job as athletic director and basketball coach with the Scarlet Raiders.

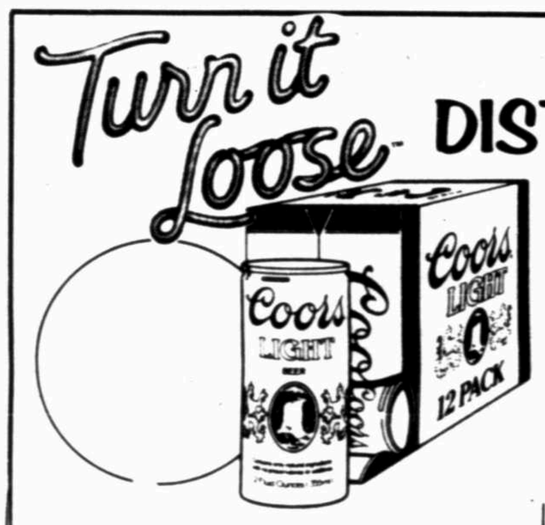

"I cringed the first day of practice, there were only three or four people who showed an interest in the program," said Adams. "The first four weeks of practice, I felt like I was doing a summer camp."

Adams now has 14 players after doing some recruiting in the school's lobbies and lounges and pubs around the campus.

"The talent level is obviously much less than the rest of the conference," said Adams. "That's something we are going to have to deal with. We feel we have two or three players that will be part of the program for four years."

Six players are back from last year's team, which went 0-22 overall and 0-18 in the NJAC, losing by an average of about 40 points per game, Adams said. Gone are two of the best players from last year, 6-foot-7 forward Mike Webb, who left school, and Marvin White, who is not playing because of academic problems.

"We're dealing with some people who have never played competitively in basketball," said Adams.

Yields fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on three-year Treasury notes auctioned Tuesday averaged 8.74 percent, the lowest level in seven years.

The Treasury Department said it sold $8.76 billion in an auction that represented the second installment of a program to borrow an unprecedented $61 billion through Nov. 27 to replenish the government's coffers.

The 8.74 percent average yield came from offers totaling $17.98 billion. It was the lowest yield for three-year notes since 8.46 percent on Aug. 15, 1978.

At the last auction of three-year notes on Aug. 15, the average yield was 9.53 percent.

Dollar up

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar posted modest gains on foreign exchange markets early today, and gold bullion also rose slightly.

A few hours after European markets opened, the dollar was being quoted at higher levels against all major currencies except the British pound.

Activity was muted by the closure of West German markets for a religious holiday and the scheduled release later in the day of revised figures on the third-quarter U.S. gross national product.

A dealer for the U.S.-based Citibank in London said the dollar's gains came during late trading Tuesday in New York. He said the currency failed to hold those gains in early European trading, although it remained above the previous day's levels in Europe.

He attributed the advance, in part, to comments Tuesday by Paul A. Volcker, chairman of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board. Volcker suggested that the reserve board could not ignore above-target growth of the U.S. money supply.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Tuesday included:

—2.6030 West German marks, up from 2.6000 (quoted in London)

—2.1325 Swiss francs, up from 2.1298

—7.9315 French francs, up from 7.9225

—2.9290 Dutch guilders, up from 2.9265

—1,759.75 Italian lire, up from 1,757.50

—1.3760 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3747

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended midmorning gold price of $325.05 a troy ounce, up from $324.25 late Tuesday. One trader reported a brief flurry of buying during the morning, but said the bullion market remained basically weak.

In Zurich, gold was bid at $325.25, up from $324.50.

Earlier in Hong Kong, the precious metal gained 28 cents to close at a bid of $325.19.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $6.14 an ounce, up 2 cents from late Tuesday.

Pennzoil awarded $10.53 billion in damages

Jurors send message to corporate raiders

HOUSTON (AP) — A $10.53 billion judgment against Texaco Inc. for breaking up a merger agreement between Pennzoil Co. and Getty Oil Co. was meant as a message to corporate raiders, the jury foreman said.

But Texaco attorney Richard Miller said the company was not engaged in raiding when it merged with Getty.

"We did not crash the party. We were invited," Miller said. "This is the first time in history where the dragon sued the white knight."

After hearing more than four months of testimony and deliberating three days, the jury Tuesday decided Texaco should pay Pennzoil $7.53 billion in actual damages and $3 billion in punitive damages.

Jury foreman Richard Lawler said jurors were sympathetic to both companies but believed Texaco ignored Pennzoil's rights and deliberately interfered in a binding agreement.

"We wanted to send a message to corporate America: that they can't get away with this type of action and not be punished," Lawler said.

The trial, which began July 8, centered on Texaco's $10.1 billion purchase of Getty Oil in 1984, the second-largest merger in U.S. corporate history behind Chevron Corp.'s $13.3 billion purchase of Gulf Corp.

Pennzoil alleged in the trial that Texaco used unethical tactics to persuade Getty to break its earlier merger agreement.

Pennzoil did not seek to dissolve Texaco's acquisition of Getty, but asked for $7.5 billion in actual damages and $7.5 billion in punitive damages.

Texaco, the nation's third-largest oil company, argued Pennzoil had no binding agreement to merge with Getty and that it filed the suit to get revenge against a successful competitor.

Pennzoil Chairman J. Hugh Liedtke said the jury's verdict reaffirmed legal and ethical standards in American business.

"I think that is the most important and gratifying thing to come out of this trial," Liedtke said.

Visiting State District Judge Solomon Casseb set a Dec. 5 hearing to decide whether to accept the jury's award.

"The jury's decision was unjustified and not supported by the evidence," said Texaco Vice Chairman James Kinnear. He said the company will appeal.

Texaco will be required to put up the entire $10.53 billion plus more than $2 billion in interest during the appeal, Pennzoil attorney Joe Gamail said.

Kinnear refused to comment on the financial impact of the verdict.

But Miller noted the award exceeded the $8.6 billion market value of Texaco stock. "Anytime you have an award like that, it will be a tremendous blow," he said.

On the New York Stock Exchange, Texaco stock fell $3 a share in heavy trading Tuesday, closing at $36.25. Pennzoil stock rose $7.62 to $57.50 a share.

On Jan. 4, 1984, Pennzoil announced it had reached an "agreement in principle" with Getty's major stockholders — the Sarah C. Getty Trust and the J. Paul Getty Museum — to form a partnership. According to the terms, the trust was to own four-sevenths of Getty Oil and Pennzoil the rest.

Two days later, Texaco issued a statement saying it would buy the museum's 11.8 percent of Getty stock and would later acquire the entire company.

Pennzoil charged that Texaco threatened Getty stockholders with financial disaster and pressured Getty to break its previous merger agreement.

Pennzoil based its $15 billion damage claim on the assumption that if it had succeeded in the Getty merger, it would have acquired the equivalent of 1 billion barrels of oil and natural gas reserves.

Pennzoil said it would have to spend more than $10 billion to find the same volume of petroleum reserves, but it would have gained the reserves from Getty Oil for about $2.7 billion.

Texaco argued Getty Oil never wanted to sell its stock to Pennzoil, but felt compelled to negotiate with the company after it issued a hostile tender offer in December 1983.

Permian settlement decision to be posted

By SUSAN LINDSAY

Retired Midland County Judge Perry Picket will render his decision within 15 days in the W.R. Davis vs. Permian Corp. class action suit heard Wednesday in the Midland Center.

The hearing was moved from the county court room because as many as 200,000 producers and royalty owners were involved in the $4.5 million settlement, but only 100 showed up for the hearing.

The suit, filed by Davis, alleged that Permian had not properly accounted for all oil it had collected from producer's tanks.

"The nature of the lawsuit arose from a disagreement between Davis and Permian Corp. whether the company was properly measuring oil," said Cecil E. Munn of Fort Worth, representing Davis. "The Permian Corp. said measurement could not be 100 percent precise, because of the nature of the business. The company contended that the oil had been measured by industry standards."

Ed Clover, representing the Permian Corp., said he felt the settlement was fair and reasonable.

He said the two parties agreed that $4.5 million in payments in the settlement would be paid from a fund Permian Corp. had set aside as a Department of Energy contingency fund.

Those who received royalty income from oil or condensate from Permian Corp. from Jan. 1, 1973, to Dec. 31, 1983, eligible to share in the settlement.

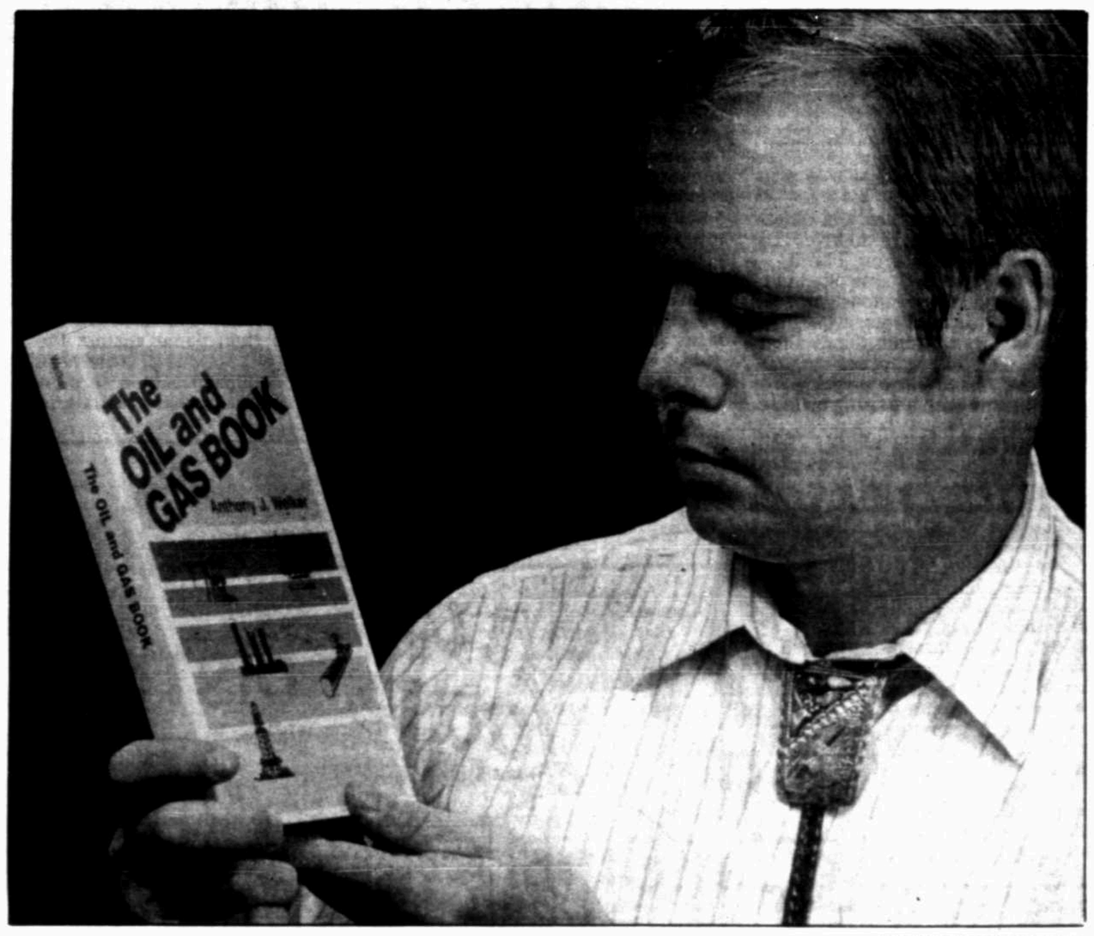

Of the over 200,000 notices of the meeting sent out, about 80,000 were returned. Of this number, only three statements were against the settlement, said Pickett.

One man against the settlement was David K. Trevino, Jr., representing Andrew G. Shebay, III. He said he was concerned about severance taxes on the settlement.

The suit has been a state of off-and-on litigation since it was brought over five years ago.

"We've lived through this suit for the past five years. It was time to get rid of it," said Pickett.

Pickett's decision will be posted on the bulletin board in the county courthouse or a copy of the decision may be obtained by send a stamped self-addressed envelope to the county clerk.

Anthony Welker, district production engineer with Sante Fe Energy, has written the Oil and Gas Book, a book which explains the petroleum industry to laymen.

Engineer bridges information gap

By SUSAN LINDSAY
Business/Oil Writer

It's not uncommon for oil companies to hire personnel with no or little knowledge of the industry, but a Midland engineer may have come up with an answer to this information gap.

Anthony J. Welker, district production engineer with Sante Fe Energy, has written The Oil and Gas Book, a book which explains the multi-faceted petroleum industry to people who have little knowledge in the area.

He said he first began interested in writing a book on the petroleum industry while he was working at the company's Amarillo office.

"Oil is not as predominate an industry there and few of our support staff knew anything about the petroleum industry," he said. "They'd come and ask me questions. I'd try to explain things to them, but that's all they knew about the industry — just what they'd ask."

In addition, Welker said laymen should not learn about the oil patch through just asking questions. "There are very few people who know everything about the oil industry. For example, the geologist can tell you about his field, but I doubt if he could tell you much about engineering. And the engineer probably doesn't know too much about geology.

"It's best to teach about the industry through a easy-to-understand, throughly-researched book, so the information will correct every time," he said.

When Welker could not find a book such as this for his Amarillo employees, he decided to write his own.

Work on The Oil and Gas Book began seven years ago. "I took the questions that were most frequently asked gave them more weight to the book," he said, adding that he researched areas in the industry that he was unfamiliar.

The Oil and Gas Book includes chapters on acquiring leases, refining of crude oil, processing of natural gas and tertiary recovery. He said much of the book is about production and drilling activities, because these are the areas most people are interested in.

"I included some history, but only to help explain a subject. For example, cable tool drilling is explained in the book, which is not as commonly used as rotary drilling. However, it's easier to understand rotary drilling when you understand cable tool drilling," he said.

Another purpose of the book is to eliminate misconceptions associated with the industry, such as pools of oil lie beneath the earth's surface, Welker said.

He said he feels the oil companies should make a larger effort to educate the public about the business. "It's not that people are dumb, they just don't know," he said.

The book is available through SciData Publishing, a subsidiary of PennWell Books, or at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum.

Texas American Energy reports losses

Texas American Energy Corp., Midland, has reported a $248,000 or .04 cents per share loss for the first three quarters of 1985, and a loss of $2.8 million, or 40 cents per share loss, for the third quarter, according to William F. Judd, president.

For the nine-month period ended September 30, the firm reported revenues of $135,717,000, compared to $143,404,000 for 1984. For the same period last year the firm reported earnings of $1,605,000 or .22 cents per share. Judd attributed the loss and decline in revenue to a substantial second quarter loss by the firm's gas utility, as a result of unseasonably warm weather in April. He called the third quarter a traditional loss

Austin area chosen for new manufacturing plant

AUSTIN (AP) — The Austin area has been selected for a new $225 million manufacturing site that will employ 300 people by 1987, officials announced today.

The joint announcement was made by Gov. Mark White, L.J. Sevin, chairman of Cypress Semiconductor Corp., and T.J. Rodgers, president of Cypress.

The exact site of the plant was not given.

"Cypress officials spent several months evaluating communities across the country before deciding on Austin for this $225 million, five-year capital investment," said the announcement. "They cited the business climate in Austin and Central Texas, the presence of other technology-oriented companies and the University of Texas as some of the reasons that they selected Austin."

Cypress officials said the firm was formed in 1983 to develop, manufacture and market a broad range of integrated circuit products.

"Texas sells itself as a place for business to relocate and expand," White said at the ceremony in his office. "There is no denying that competing states, such as Washington, put together tax abatement packages that looked very attractive — until Cypress took into account that Round Rock,

T.J. Rodgers

Texas, has lower sales and property taxes and competitive land prices. Also Texas has no corporate or personal income tax and no unitary tax. That is a winning combination that is difficult to beat."

Low-interest mortgage loans available Monday

By SUSAN LINDSAY

Beginning Monday, 9.7-percent, 30-year mortgage loans for first-time home buyers will be available in Midland, but how many is anybody's guess.

INVESTORS RESIDENTIAL MORTGAGE of Midland will offer its share of $111 million in low-interest mortgage loans, financed through the sale of tax-exempt bonds.

A spokesman for the lending company said she does not know yet how much money will be available for the Midland area.

Individuals with a gross annual income of $33,000 or less and families with income less than $42,000 per year are eligible to apply.

Lenders will require down payments of 5 to 10 percent and will limit mortgages to homes costing less than $80,000 until January 2. After that, they will begin accepting applications for more expensive homes.

Since the program began in 1980, nearly 11,500 families have used the low-interest loans to purchase homes. The agency is self supporting and receives no state or federal funds.

Services fall into several categories, including mergers and acquisitions; private placements; leveraged buyouts, secured equipment financing; interest rate swaps; public finance; and import-export trade activities.

Conrail merger critics doubt congressional okay this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of the proposed Conrail sale to the Norfolk Southern Corp. are pushing for a Senate vote early next month, but several key opponents of the plan say they doubt any action will be taken this year because of concern about the merger's effects on competition.

Even so, the Norfolk Southern proposal got a boost Tuesday when the Justice Department's antitrust division gave preliminary approval to a new round of Norfolk Southern concessions aimed at countering criticism about the merger's impact on shippers.

While final Justice Department approval will not be given until after a more detailed study of the Norfolk Southern plan is completed, Assistant Attorney General Douglas Ginsburg, who heads the antitrust division, said it "appears on its face to address the competitive problems."

A resolution of the competition problem is essential before the Senate will consider a Transportation Department proposal that would sell the government's 85 percent interest in Conrail to Norfolk Southern for $1.2 billion.

Norfolk Southern for several months has been negotiating with the Justice Department and two small regional railroads — Guilford Transportation Industries and the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railrod — to work out a way for the two smaller lines to compete with a combined Norfolk Southern-Conrail.

Supporters of a rival proposal to sell Conrail to a group of investors and keep it independent said the latest Norfolk Southern divestiture offer fell far short of what would be needed to solve the anti-competitive problems.

Thomas Saunders, managing director of Morgan Stanely & Co., which heads the investment group, said he doubted any divestiture plan could be produced that would allow two small regional railroads to compete against a rail giant that last year had combined income of nearly $1 billion on revenues of nearly $7 billion.

Norfolk Southern's latest proposed solution to the competition issue generally amounts to the Guilford and the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie railroads getting additional trackage rights on Norfolk Southern-Conrail routes as well as other benefits such as some guaranteed switching agreements.

Norfolk Southern spokeman Edward T. Breathitt said the new proposal not only avoids a reduction in competition but "adds competition" in some areas of the current Conrail system.

The Senate Judiciary Committee is expected to hear more about the proposal Thursday at a hearing on Conrail. Supporters of the sale to Norfolk Southern are hoping that quick approval by the Judiciary panel might sway enough senators to overcome a promised filibuster on the Senate floor, perhaps in the first week of December.

But at a news conference Tuesday, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, a staunch opponent of selling Conrail to Norfolk Southern, said he doubted the Conrail legislation would come up for a vote this year because of more pressing issues and continuing concern about the competitive impact of the deal.

But Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole immediately issued a statement saying the Conrail legislation is "still on my 'must-do' list for this year," although conceding that "much depends on how long this session lasts."

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., another critic of the Norfolk Southern sale, said he thought it "highly unlikely but possible" that a vote would come before the Christmas recess.

Norfolk Southern executives repeatedly have threatened to walk away from the deal if Congress does not indicate some movement — preferably Senate approval of the plan — before the end of the year.

But Saunders said the Morgan Stanley investor group will continue to press for congressional support into next year, announcing an extension of their offer to June 1986.

"We are in this for the long haul," Saunders said at a news conference.

He also indicated for the first time that the investment group might increase the purchase price beyond $1.2 billion.

"We are flexible on all aspects of our plan," he said.

Investors should beware of 'CD Shock' LOSSES

Today's yields fall to 8 to 10 percent

By Staff and Wire Reports

Investors by the millions are in for severe "CD Shock" in the upcoming months. The certificates of deposit they purchased during 1982 to 1984 providing yields as high as 15 percent are now maturing. But today's yields have fallen into the 8 to 10 percent range.

The question they face is what to do with the money — collectively about $20 billion a month — from the maturing CDs.

"All CD owners, including those whose CDs are in Individual Retirement Accounts, Keogh or pension plans, have to decide if they are willing to settle for the present low yields by renewing their CDs, or if they would rather investigate alternatives that offer higher returns on their investment," says Joe Liberty, of Rauscher Pierce Refsnes, Inc.

Liberty is manager of the brokerage firm's Midland office.

"There are a number of safe, conservative investments available offering taxable yields in the 11 to 13 percent range. Tax free and tax deferred yields begin at about 9 percent," Liberty said. "But you won't find 15 percent yields in any prudent instrument. They are relics of the past."

"Since interest on CDs is fully taxable at the individual's highest marginal rate, investors should take that into consideration in choosing a CD alternative. In fact, they may have been far better off today had they selected a tax free investment rather than the CD they ended up with."

Among the more popular alternatives to CD renewal, notes Liberty, are:

■ Government securities mutual funds: Yields in the 11-13 percent range, with the safety of government securities. Probably the most popular CD alternative.

■ Corporate bond mutual funds and unit trusts: 11-13 percent yields for the higher quality managed funds.

■ GNMA unit trusts: Fixed yields currently in the 11-12 percent range.

■ Tax-free municipal bond unit trusts: Fixed portfolios of municipal bonds offering yields in the mid 8 percent range on portfolios of insured bonds; low 9 percent on portfolios of uninsured bonds.

■ Tax-free managed bond funds: Available as high yield funds with lower rated bonds, or as lower yield funds with higher rated bonds. Although current yields are lower than the unmanaged unit trust portfolios, these funds, whose composition can change, may provide greater returns than unit trusts over time.

■ Tax deferred annuities: Yields in the range of 10 percent. Principal is guaranteed, rates guaranteed for specified period of time, interest not taxed until withdrawn.

■ Growth mutual funds: In some cases, stock funds are appropriate alternatives for CD money.

Government reports strong economic growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy, boosted by an automobile buying spree, grew at a surpisingly strong 4.3 percent annual rate from July through September, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the gross national product — the broadest measure of economic health — spurted upward during the summer at the fastest pace in more than a year.

The new figure represented a sharp revision from a projection last month that put growth at 3.3 percent for the third quarter and was up even further from the initial "flash" estimate of 2.8 percent growth.

The new figure caught economists by surprise. None had forecast anything close to a 4.3 percent annual rate and many were actually predicting the GNP figure would be revised downward, reflecting the country's continuing trade problems.

The 4.3 percent growth rate represented good news for President Reagan, who has been maintaining for months that the economy was in the midst of a substantial rebound from the weak growth experienced in the first six months of the year.

From January through June, the GNP grew at an anemic annual rate of 1.1 percent, far below the 6.8 percent growth recorded in 1984.

But private analysts noted that much of the strength in the third quarter came from a surge in sales of new cars in August and September as consumers responded to attractive cut-rate financing incentives.

Auto sales, however, fell substantially in October and early November and many analysts believe this will contribute to much weaker growth in the current quarter.

While the Reagan administration is calling for growth in the final three months of 5 percent to 6 percent, some private analysts expect growth could dip as low as 2 percent.

The pessimism stems from a belief that the country's huge trade deficits will continue to act as a drag on overall growth in the months ahead.

It would take growth of 5.7 percent in the fourth quarter to reach the administration's target for the year of 3 percent growth.

Most analysts are calling for much weaker growth of around 2 percent, a rate that would qualify as a "growth recession," a period when the economy expands at such a slow rate that unemployment rises.

Volcker warns of budget, trade deficit threats

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker told business executives Tuesday that "we've come a long way toward setting the stage for a period of sustained growth," but warned of budget and trade deficits as "dangers and risks that I see that threaten our prosperity."

Separately, a top economist predicted at the same business outlook conference sponsored by the Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce that the nation must endure three more quarters of sluggish economic growth, accompanied by stable prices and a slight decline in interest rates.

Other industry leaders foresaw sluggish retail sales, an increase in tourism, an overall stable construction outlook and improved aerospace and defense employment.

Volcker said that "I think it's well within our collective capacity to contain the strains in our economy, but it's going to take more than words."

Paul Volcker

Because of the widening trade deficit created in part by the strong dollar, U.S. manufacturers continue to lose market-share to foreign competitors, Volcker said. "We have in effect been creating manufacturing jobs in Japan, Europe and elsewhere," he said.

But the trade deficit and the related influx of foreign capital have both bad and good implications for the U.S. economy, he added.

The flow of foreign capital to the United States has kept the dollar strong, which has helped to boost cheap imports, he said. At the same time, the foreign investment has kept U.S. capital markets "in reasonable balance" in light of the large budget deficit and the low savings rate, and that had helped to keep interest rates low.

"The situation is unsustainable," Volcker warned. "The sooner we get our house in order so that our financial markets are not hostage to foreign capital, the better."

Volcker also noted that the Fed has been pursuing a "generally accommodative policy" in monetary growth. The higher-than-targeted growth of M1, the most basic measure of money supply that includes cash in circulation and checking deposits, hasn't been inflationary because of the increasing importance of other monetary targets, lower interest rates and the strong dollar, which creates competition and incentives to cut costs.

In another presentation to the conference, John D. Paulus, managing director and chief economist of Morgan Stanley & Co, said that inflation should remain under control during 1986 because the U.S. economy will continue to plow through its "growth recession," a period of positive but sluggish economic growth. Paulus forecast real economic growth of 2 percent to 2.5 percent during the current quarter and the first half of 1986.

"It's quite unlikely that we're going to come surging out of this growth recession with a full head of steam," he said.

quarter because of the seasonal nature of the gas utility.

The firm's third-quarter revenues of $26,929,00 were substantially below the $32,068,000 of 1984, in which the firm also sustained a loss of $2 million or 28 cents per share.

Texas American also reported that its principal lender had informed the company that its borrowing base under its revolving line of credit had been preliminarily set at the firm's current debt load of $26.8 million, and that further borrowing for the oil and gas segment would not be available until the debt level is reduced.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Financier may make bid for HNGInterNorth

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Minneapolis financier Irwin Jacobs and his associates own 7.9 percent of the common stock in HNGinterNorth, and Jacobs said his group might try to take control of the company "under certain circumstances."

In a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, Jacobs disclosed that his group owns about $166 million in HNGInterNorth stock.

The statement said:

"The purchasers intend to closely monitor developments at and pertaining to the company. The purchasers anticipate that they might under certain circumstances consider seeking control of the compnay, in which event their involvement might be through or together with entities in which they have an interest."

Randal Blauvelt, director of media relations for HNG InterNorth, said company officials were aware of the filing.

"We are studying it right now and beyond that we don't have any comment," Blauvelt said.

Asked when the Jacobs group bought the stock, he said, "Much of it was acquired since Nov. 6."

In the statement, Jacobs said his group acquired the HNGInterNorth stock to obtain an equity position in a company they considered to be undervalued.

Sage Energy, Shell reach purchase agreement

SAN ANTONIO — Sage Energy Co. has announced an agreement with Shell Western Exploration & Production, Inc., an affiliate of Shell Oil Co., to purchase working interests in five oil and gas fields located in northern Texas for $17,250,000. The purchase includes approximately 130 producing oil wells and a gas processing plant with related equipment.

Sun reports discovery in California Channel

DALLAS — Sun Exploration and Production Co., operator of the Diablo Prospect in the Santa Barbara Channel, offshore California, announces a 1,500 barrel per day oil discovery in its OCS P-0467 No. 2 well.

The discovery well reached a total depth of 16,500 ft. and encountered two oil zones in the Monterey formation.

Conoco begins Gulf of Suez production

HOUSTON — Concoco, through its affiliation with Geisum Oil Co., has started production from the Geisum field in the Gulf of Suez.

Initial production of about 2,000 barrels of oil a day is currently flowing from one well. Two more wells will be brought onstream in a few days. The three wells are expected to produce an average of 7,500 barrels of oil a day.

IBM to halt growth of new dealerships for PCs

SAN FRANCISCO — The International Business Machines Corp. said Tuesday that it would halt the growth of new retail dealerships for its personal computers.

In a letter sent to PC dealers Friday for delivery Monday, Dougias LeGrande, IBM's vice president, national distribution division, personal computer operations, said no new dealer applications for the United States or Puerto Rico would be accepted after Nov. 18 and that any requests for exceptions must be filed by Dec. 6. IBM now has 2,500 dealers in the United States and Puerto Rico.

Analysts saw the move as an effort by IBM to prop up its existing dealers, who have been hard hit by slow computer sales. But it was also seen as part of IBM's battle against the "gray market" — the sale of computers by unauthorized dealers below list price. Most of those computers originate from the inventory shelves of authorized dealers in need of quick cash. By limiting the number of authorized dealers, the company appears to be hoping to keep inventories from building up and to inspire more dealer loyalty.

Kimbark reports results

DENVER (SWN) Kimbark Oil & Gas Co. announced record production and oil and gas revenues for the first nine months of 1985.

During the 1985 period, the company produced 252,412 equivalent barrels, a 29 percent increase over the 195,078 equivalent barrels produced in the first nine months of 1984.

The increased production, however, was almost totally offset by declines in oil and gas prices, resulting in revenues from oil and gas sales of $5,184,000 for the first nine months of 1985, a 6 percent increase over oil and gas revenues of $4,873,000 during the 1984 period.

Pipeline executive testifies

HOUSTON (SWN) The vice chairman of ANR Pipeline Co. told a congressional committee that legislation is needed to correct serious flaws in new federal natural gas pipeline transportation rules.

S. Kinnie Smith, Jr. said without such legislation, the new Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) gas transportation rules will cause unfair economic hardship for certain pipeline customers.

He said under the new rules, if a pipeline agrees to participate, a distribution customer buying from that pipeline on a long-term basis could reduce the amount of gas it buys from the pipeline by up to 25 percent per year with no penalty.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, November 21, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: An eye-opening performance could put you center stage at work. You win the sweepstakes where employment is concerned! Continue to pursue a long-time career goal. Mate can be a big help if you open new lines of communication. Travel and romance go hand-in-hand. A financial windfall is likely in January. Buy a few small luxuries and invest the remainder wisely. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: ballet's Natalia Makarova, box office favorite Goldie Hawn, actresses Marlo Thomas and Juliet Mills, baseball's Stan Musial, actor Laurence Luckinbill, the Pittsburgh Pirates' Bill Almon, singer Lorna Luft, French author-philosopher Jean Francois Voltaire.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Show more initiative and you will able to promote a pet project. You will be rewarded for giving generously of your time and effort. A renovation increases your home's value.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your intuition could be off-kilter today. Postpone making a financial decision. Squeeze in a visit with an old friend. He/she could provide valuable new insights. Group and club activities are favored.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New acquaintances can provide interesting employment leads. Keep your ears open and send out resumes. You are adept at mixing business with pleasure. Curb a tendency to be overly critical.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Long-term planning begins to pay off. Your ideas are highly original. Tackling too many things at one time would be a mistake. Sit down and concentrate on the job at hand.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A difficult individual is more likely to listen now. Go ahead and express yourself freely. Try to meet as many people as you can when traveling. Romance is almost ideal. Your confidence grows.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New business alliances prove highly profitable. An ego-boosting success helps you see yourself in a different light. Resist the urge to take unfair advantage of someone. Shortcuts can be dangerous.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Watch what you say when arguing with loved one. Unkind words could lead to a permanent rift. An old flame could reappear. You could find yourself thinking "we" instead of "I." Go slow.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A project you started recently begins to bear fruit. Be careful not to cause a rift in an important relationship. You benefit from socializing with people from many walks of life.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Foreign travel aids business and broadens your perspective. Resist an urge to buy something you cannot afford. Be more tactful if you want to avert arguments. Romance flourishes when both partners are considerate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Happily, you are full of inventive ideas. Ask for a raise and you are apt to get it. Romance is unpredictable. Avoid saying or doing anything that will hurt mate's feelings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stay close to home base today and complete pending projects. Good luck comes in the form of an important communication. An old friend shares spiritual or philosophical insights.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Friend may not understand your deep need for privacy. Be patient but persistent. A rendezvous with a newcomer proves very exciting. Your self-confidence grows.

EVERY LITTLE BIT HELPS

Neither vulnerable. North deals.

	NORTH ♠ K Q 10 ♡ A K ◇ 9 4 2 ♣ A J 9 7 5
WEST ♠ 8 5 ♡ 10 9 5 3 2 ◇ Q 8 5 3 ♣ K 6		EAST ♠ J 7 3 ♡ 8 ◇ K J 10 7 6 ♣ Q 8 3 2
	SOUTH ♠ A 9 6 4 2 ♡ Q J 7 6 4 ◇ A ♣ 10 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ◇	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♡.

The optimist believes that we live in the best of all possible worlds. The pessimist is afraid that he's right. At the bridge table, be a pessimist if you can afford it!

North's one club opening bid was artificial and the one no trump response showed four controls (ace equals 2 controls, king equals 1). Thereafter, the bidding was natural, except that four no trump asked for further information, not aces. The excellent spade slam was reached after a complicated auction.

Those who look at life through rose-colored spectacles would be defeated quickly. They would count five spade tricks, five hearts and two minor suit aces. So they would win the king of hearts, draw trumps and then lead a heart to the ace. When East shows out on the second round, it is too late to recover. West need only play the king on the first club lead to ensure the contract's defeat. Try it.

The pessimist takes into account the possibility of a 5-1 heart split. He wins the king of hearts and draws trumps in three rounds. However, before leading another heart, he plays the ten of clubs. If West covers, declarer has a second club trick by force, so West must follow low. Declarer ducks in dummy and East wins the queen. But now declarer is in control.

He wins any return and cashes the ace of hearts. After that suit breaks 5-1, declarer can fall back on trying for a second club trick with another finesse. When West turns up with the king, a well-played slam comes home.

Pia Zadora cays criticism painful

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Pia Zadora says being rich doesn't make up for the pain of gibes from critics who say she is a poor performer.

"A lot of people think I'm a joke. I don't like being laughed at," she said Tuesday. "I don't like being attacked.

"People think that when you're very rich, nothing can hurt you because you have all that money to comfort you. That's really a joke. Those vicious criticisms can hurt.

"I'm not some arrogant monster who's immune to getting hurt."

Miss Zadora, 28, who is married to wealthy businessman Meshulam Riklis, acknowledges that none of her movies has been good and says one, "Lonely Lady," was a "real turkey."

"So you get wounded and you lick your wounds and smile like it doesn't hurt even though you're torn up inside," she said. "You go on with the show. That's show biz, isn't it?"

Fetchit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Stepin Fetchit, the actor whose comedic roles in 1930s movies as a shuffling, head-scratching servant came to be viewed as a negative stereotype of blacks, died Tuesday at age 83.

Fetchit headed for Hollywood in the 1920s. He was the first black performer to be given featured billing in movies with stars like Will Rogers and Shirley Temple. Fetchit appeared in the films "Showboat," "Stand Up and Cheer," "Dimples" and "Steamboat Round the Bend." He later performed in nightclubs and infrequent films.

Stennis, a Democrat who at 84 is the oldest current senator, was applauded by colleagues Tuesday for his long service and his integrity in office.

"My only complaint is that I can't get around fast enough any more to get into all of the things I want to," said Stennis, who lost his left leg to a malignant tumor last year and now operates from a wheel chair.

The late Sen. Carl Hayden, D-Ariz., who served 41 years, holds the record for the longest Senate service.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Jan-Michael Vincent, charged with battery for allegedly punching a woman in the face, has lost a bid to have her fingerprints and blood samples taken.

Superior Court Judge David Fitts on Tuesday denied the request from Vincent's attorney, Ronald Carpol, and sent the matter back to Malibu Municipal Court. A preliminary hearing was scheduled Thursday.

Vincent, 40, star of the CBS-TV series "Airwolf," earlier had requested permission from Malibu Muncipal Court judges for the tests. The requests were denied and Carpol sought Superior Court approval.

Carpol's office said he was not immediately available Tuesday to explain why the blood samples and fingerprints were sought.

Vincent is charged with one count of felony battery involving an assault on Chenoa Lee Ellis, 34.

Last May, Vincent was acquitted of separate counts of battery stemming from a fight in a Malibu bar.

Chicken Soup cure for women with sick children

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Once upon a time, working parents had to stay home when their kids became sick. Then two women who worried about working parents came up with an alternative — a day care center for sick children.

"Our intent is to be available for parents when there are no other resources," said Birdie Johnson, a founder of Chicken Soup. "This is a solution if you haven't any other solution."

Chicken Soup is Minnesota's only licensed day care center for sick children. There are fewer than a dozen such centers in the nation, said Beth Fredericks, project coordinator of the Boston-based Work Family Directions, a national child care referral network.

Children who come to the center are examined by a nurse. Then they're assigned to one of three brightly decorated rooms — the "Sniffles Room" for those with colds, the "Popsicle Room" for those with flu and the "Polkadot Room" for chicken pox.

Each room has its own bathroom and is filled with toys, books and video games.

"Most people expect to see little beds in a row," Ms. Johnson said. "We had a problem making it friendly, yet sanitary."

There is no carpeting and the bedding consists of cots with colored quilts which are used as pillows. The quilts are washed daily, and children are encouraged to bring things from home.

Connie Bell, associate director of the Greater Minneapolis Day Care Association, said several studies found a need for sick child care services. Minnesota and many other states prohibit sick children from attending regular day care centers.

Chicken Soup is open from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. and accepts children ranging in age from 6 months to 12 years. Costs are $30 for a full day or $20 for four hours or less.

Children who have measles or whose symptoms already seem serious are not accepted.

Linda Tacke said she her 3-year-old son Paul enjoyed his first visit to the center. He told his sister, "You'll be so happy when you get sick because you get to go to Chicken Soup," Mrs. Tacke said.

The "Sniffles Room," where children may play in groups, has been the most active, Ms. Johnson said. Toys that are shared are washed with a sanitizing agent. In the "Popsicle Room," child are given their own toys and instructed to play alone.

The "Polkadot Room" has a separate entrance, ventilation and heating to prevent chicken pox from being spread through the air, Ms. Johnson said.

"If a child catches a cold from another child, it's not a crisis. But we don't want them to pick up anything worse," she said.

Ms. Johnson and co-founder Ruth Matson formed a non-profit corporation, Alternative Services for Children, to operate the center, and received a $100,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. Corporations and local businesses contributed over $160,000.

Wagon train send-off to create chaos

SULPHUR SPRINGS (AP) — Sulphur Springs is a small town with small-town problems. On Jan. 2, however, those small town problems could grow into full-scale chaos.

On that day, Sulphur Springs, a town of 16,000 about 80 miles northeast of Dallas, will give a send-off to the Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon Train, setting out on a six-month trek around Texas.

The town best known for its dairy farming is bracing for a media blitz and what is expected to be tens of thousands of onlookers.

Texas Wagon Train Association officials met recently with Sulphur Springs law enforcement officials to try to plan crowd control that will ensure a safe voyage for the wagon train.

"People control will be the major hurdle," association chairman Charles Oliver said. "Beginning on (Dec.) 27, people will start coming to Sulphur Springs, and from there, it will build quite rapidly, I suspect."

Among the dignitaries expected to attend the kick-off ceremonies are Gov. Mark White and former Presidential Press Secretary Jim Brady.

Oliver said that he is not concerned about controlling the members of the wagon train, but he is afraid the mass of spectators may present a problem.

"We will assemble and attempt to organize very carefully our people," he said, adding, "This thing is a logistic nightmare."

The association's business manager, Quentin McGown, agreed. "Within our ranks, that first day will be bordering on insanity. This will be a busy site..."

For the most part, the wagon train will be self-contained, having its own veterinarian, food and water suppliers, and outriders, Oliver explained. But, the horses, wagons and support equipment will need 100 acres just to rest for the night.

Due to safety precautions, some of the campsites will not be accessible to the public, McGown said.

McGown and Oliver both cautioned against local riders from "saddling up," and joining the wagon train.

"If someone wants to saddle up here at the start site, that's a no-no," Oliver said. "We want people to come see us, but don't saddle up and come,' he warned.

"Contingents will want to move along with us. But, they will have to travel behind us, on their own. Members of the wagon train would be drained if they had to put up with a new bunch of people having a fresh party every night."

The slow-moving train will also not be a welcome sight for many motorists who are unlucky enough to be caught behind the four-mile-long procession. "We're not going to be a real help to traffic flow wherever we are around the state," Oliver explained, saying that the train will be separated into two contingents which will be traveling an hour apart at 4 mph.

The maximum number of wagons will be 150, he added, with a maximum of 300 horseback riders accompanying them.

The entire procession is staggering to imagine, he said. "There's no doubt, this thing is Texan in proportion."

Wilfred turkey anticipates visit with the Reagans

NORTHFIELD, Minn. (AP) — Wilfred has put on weight, is well groomed and is behaving well as his visit with President Reagan draws near.

"Oh, I think the president, Mrs. Reagan and the Washington media will love him when we visit the Rose Garden," John Holden said last week of the 50-pound turkey he plans to present to Reagan on Nov. 26. "We went through a baby book with all kinds of names and named him Wilfred, meaning 'resolute for peace.'

"Anything but Tom."

Holden, president of the National Turkey Federation and producer of about 600,000 turkeys a year, said he selected four of his best specimens and raised them in his backyard.

"It meant more than just hand-feeding and bringing them water myself," Holden said. "I was asked to try to get them domesticated and more docile."

Last year's turkey nearly flew away, showering Reagan with white feathers.

In any event, the bird will wind up at a petting zoo rather than the White House kitchen.

Tradition With A Contemporary Touch

Holidays are a time for tradition and for doing things the same way year after year. Grandma's favorite recipes are always prepared. It just wouldn't seem right any other way.

But lifestyles have changed. More mothers are working. The kids are too. Finding time to do everything is turning out to be the biggest problem during the holidays.

So, for the thoroughly modern family wanting a traditional holiday meal, here are some timesaving tips for serving up deliciously memorable fare:

Sliced Roast Turkey
Gravy
New-Fashioned Rice Dressing
Cranberry Blue Cheese Salad

When the turkey comes from the oven, let it stand at room temperature for 15 to 20 minutes before slicing. It will cut more easily. An important part of a holiday meal is a good sharp knife. It will make a world of difference in the appearance of the slices and in the disposition of the carver!

Another tip for making the meal easier to serve is to prepare the gravy in advance. While the turkey is roasting, simmer the giblets with liquid, herbs and vegetables. Use this stock to make the gravy. To make a rich-colored gravy, use a color and flavor enhancer in place of the drippings. There'll be the traditional homemade taste without all the calories or fuss.

Turkey wouldn't be the same without dressing. This rice/sausage/apple variation tastes great. Rice, perhaps the most ancient of foods, is also a modern convenience food. Uncooked, it can be stored at room temperature, ready to measure with other dressing ingredients just before baking. Cooking the dressing separately, rather than using to stuff the turkey, saves time in preparation, roasting and serving.

Cranberries are the traditional turkey accompaniment. They become even more special when mixed with fruit cocktail, raspberry flavor gelatin, and blue cheese. The piquant, domestically-aged blue cheese is used in the dressing as well. It is indeed a special blend of flavors for this special meal. Find time the day before to prepare the molded salad. The flavors blend and mellow overnight while you rest easy knowing there's one less dish to prepare.

Tradition doesn't need to go out the window when an easier-to-prepare-and-serve meal is put on the table. Perhaps this one will become a tradition in its own right.

New-Fashioned Rice Dressing

- 8 ounces well-seasoned whole hog sausage
- 1 cup chopped onions
- 1 cup sliced celery
- 1 cup uncooked rice
- 1 can (8 oz.) sliced water chestnuts, drained
- 1/2 cup raisins
- 1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon ground allspice
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 tablespoon brown sugar, firmly packed
- 2 cups turkey or chicken broth
- Salt
- 2 tart cooking apples, cored and coarsely chopped
- 1/2 cup slivered almonds, toasted

Crumble sausage into large oven-proof skillet. Cook over medium heat, stirring, about 5 minutes. Add onions and celery; cook until tender crisp but not brown. Add rice, water chestnuts, raisins, seasonings, sugar and broth. Salt to taste. Bring to a boil. Cover and bake at 350° for 25 to 35 minutes, or until rice is tender and liquid is absorbed. Remove from oven. Stir in apples. Replace cover and let stand 5 minutes. Sprinkle with almonds.

Makes 8 servings.

Cranberry Blue Cheese Salad

- 1 box (10 oz.) frozen cranberry orange relish*
- 1 can (17 oz.) fruit cocktail, undrained
- 1 cup water or fruit juice
- 1 package (6 oz.) raspberry flavor gelatin
- 1/3 cup cream sherry
- 2 to 4 oz. Blue Cheese, crumbled
- 1 banana
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 1 cup heavy cream
- 1 package (3 oz.) cream cheese, softened
- 2 tablespoons cream sherry

Combine relish, fruit cocktail, and water in 2-quart saucepan. Bring to a boil. Remove from heat and stir in gelatin, stirring until dissolved. Set aside to cool but not thicken. Stir in 1/3 cup sherry and half the blue cheese. Spoon into 4 to 6 cup mold. Chill until firm. Mash banana with lemon juice. Beat cream and cream cheese until stiff. Beat in sherry, mashed banana and remaining blue cheese. Chill until needed. At serving time, unmold salad and serve with dressing.

Makes 6-8 servings.

*or 1 jar (14 oz.) cranberry orange sauce

Easy Turkey Gravy

- 5 cups turkey stock* or canned chicken broth
- 1/2 cup flour
- 1 teaspoon Kitchen Bouquet
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon ground black pepper
- Chopped giblets (optional)

Blend in a bowl 1 cup cold stock or chicken broth with flour until smooth. Heat remaining stock in large saucepan. Stir flour mixture into hot stock. Cook and stir over moderate heat until mixture thickens. Reduce heat, add remaining ingredients and cook 2 to 3 minutes longer. Serve hot. Makes about 4 cups.

*TURKEY STOCK: Combine giblets; 1 teaspoon each thyme leaves and chopped parsley; 1 carrot and 1 celery rib with leaves, chopped; 1 half onion, quartered; and 1/2 teaspoon Kitchen Bouquet. Cover with water. Season. Simmer about 2 hours. Strain. Reserve giblets.

Filleting a Turkey

This simple method yields large slices of breast meat for an attractive platter.

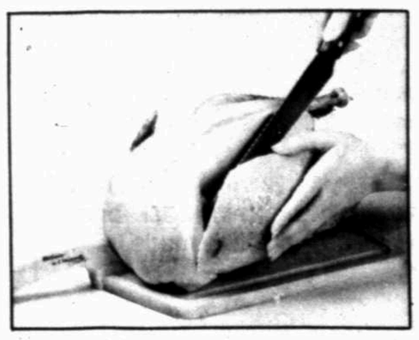

1. REMOVING LEG, THIGH, AND WING

Start with an extremely sharp knife.

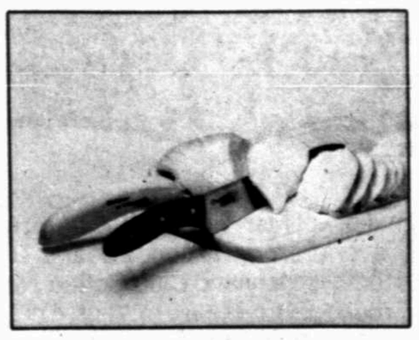

Place turkey on a cutting board. Remove drumstick and thigh in one piece by pulling leg away from bird and slicing through the joint. Separate leg and thigh by cutting through the connecting joint. Remove bones and slice meat, if desired.

Remove wings by pulling them away from the body and cutting through the joint closest to the breast. Separate the wing into sections at the joints for serving, discarding tip.

2. REMOVING BREAST

The breast will be removed in two sections. Make a vertical cut along the entire length of the breastbone about 1 inch deep until you reach the bone. Place fingers in the slit and peel the meat away by pulling with your hand and slicing with the knife.

3. SLICING BREAST

Place the breast sections on cutting board; starting at the small end, make thin diagonal slices at a 45° angle.

Arrange the light and dark meat on platter and garnish with parsley and fruit-filled orange shells, if desired.

By BETTY WILSON
Hearst News Service

Stocking up on nuts, spices and chocolate for holiday goodies can easily consume an entire week's food allowance. To control costs, use up what already is in the pantry, then make new purchases each week.

Shelling your own nuts may not save money. Two pounds of most varieties of unshelled nuts make about 1 pound of nut meats.

Use these guidelines:

- One pound of black walnuts equals 1 cup of kernels;
- 1 pound of almonds equals about 3¼ cups whole nuts;
- 1 pound of Spanish peanuts makes 3 cups nuts, and 1 pound walnut or pecan halves makes almost 4 cups nuts.

Once the package is opened, store shelled nuts in the refrigerator or freezer.

To save money, try making these gifts from your kitchen:

PUMPKIN PIE SPICE
1 tablespoon cinnamon
1½ teaspoons nutmeg
¾ teaspoon cloves
¾ teaspoon ginger

Combine ingredients and store in a tightly covered container. Label. Makes 2 tablespoons.

NO-BAKE CARAMEL SNACK
2 cups sugar
¾ cup margarine
⅔ cup evaporated milk
1 package (3⅝-ounce) instant butterscotch pudding mix
3½ cups rolled oats

In a large saucepan, combine the first three ingredients. Bring to a boil, stirring often. Remove from the heat and add pudding mix and rolled oats. Mix well. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto waxed paper and let stand. Makes 5 dozen.

SPICED MARBLE POUND CAKE
2 packages (18-ounce) pound cake mix
5 teaspoons cocoa
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon mace

In a large bowl prepare both packages of cake mix according to package directions. Remove 2 cups of batter and stir in cocoa and cinnamon. Mix well. Set aside.

Add mace to the batter remaining in the large bowl. Pour light batter in thirds into a greased and floured 9½-inch bundt or 10-inch tube pan.

Spoon some of the chocolate mixture into the pan between each addition of batter. Cut through the batter with a knife to marble cake.

Bake in a preheated oven at 325 degrees for 1-½ hours or until center tests done. Cool in pan on a rack for 10 minutes. Turn out of the pan and cool thoroughly before slicing. Serves 20.

SAUCEPAN GINGER COOKIES
2½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ cup margarine
½ cup sugar
½ cup molasses
¼ cup water
1 teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cloves
1 egg, slightly beaten
⅓ cup sliced blanched almonds
10 red candied cherries, quartered

Mix the first three ingredients and set aside. In a 2-quart saucepan over medium heat, bring the margarine, sugar, molasses, water and spices to a boil, stirring to dissolve sugar. Remove from the heat and cool. Add the flour and egg. Stir until well blended. Cover and chill several hours or overnight.

Shape in 1¼-inch balls. Place 2 inches apart on greased cookie sheets. With lightly floured fingertips, press cookies to about 2-inch diameter. Press in almonds and cherries as decorations.

1 bunch green onions
½ celery stalk, with leaves
¼ to ½ cup bacon drippings
1 cup water

Cold water
1 cup jalapeno juice
Salt and pepper, to taste
Jalapenos, chopped, to taste
Turkey

Chop onions and celery and saute in bacon drippings. Add 1 cup water, cover and cook for about 7 minutes or until barely tender. Combine with crumbled corn bread, day-old bread, turkey broth, cold water, jalapeno juice, salt, pepper and chopped jalapenos (add as much turkey broth as needed to achieve the right consistency). Stuff turkey with the dressing and place excess in greased casserole and bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

Vegetable cookbooks blooming

By KIT SNEDAKER
Hearst News Service

Vegetable books threaten to outnumber pasta books, to the great pleasure of vegetarians. And the rest of us, too, who should be eating more vegetables.

The latest is "The New American Vegetable Cookbook," by Georgeanna Brennan, Isaac Cronin and Charlotte Glenn. Each vegetable is explained, pictured and followed with recipes.

The book is unique because it has an illustrated index with little drawings of horseradish, etc., and because it deals with such exotics as flowering white cabbage, rapa, water spinach, burdock and other plants some of us have never even seen, let alone eaten.

In the back is "A Cook's Vegetable Miscellany," with information on vegetables for grilling, the baby vegetable boom, window-box salads, edible flowers in salads, growing produce and farmers' markets.

Howard Hillman was one of the first to write about cooking in scientific terms in "Kitchen Science." It's easier to cook if you know what's happening in the pot, so now he's come back with "Kitchen Secrets," an alphabetical listing of ingredients and dishes, with helpful hints for each.

Not all are earth-shaking. "The whites of eggs will become rubbery if you cook the eggs over high heat" is not news. Neither is "If the frogs' legs have an off odor or a noticeably moist surface, they are not fresh." But using those empty bottles of foreign beer, the ones with the attached caps for storing olive oil, is a good idea. Some make it, some don't.

Jill Krementz and her camera have made photo-essays into books for children of the '80s. "A Very Young Dancer" took one child through her tough ballet schedule. Others, for gymnasts, riders and a circus acrobat followed.

Now she's done "The Fun of Cooking," with young cooks 6 to 16 making their favorite dishes. This includes dog biscuits.

If anything can fire up a child to cook, it will be this volume. Step-by-step pictures and easy recipes do it all.

Felipe Rojas-Lombardi not only assisted James Beard for five years, but is the owner/chef of The Ballroom in New York, the first place I know of to serve Spanish tapas (delicious little bites that serve as hors d'oeuvres) in this country. He gets points for that and more points for his new book, "Soup, Beautiful Soup."

Rojas-Lombardi is from Peru and makes good use of that country's interesting cuisine, combining it with that of this country. His soups have imagination. First, he gives good, quick vegetable stocks for the growing number of vegetarians. Then he proposes a good carrot soup, celery root soup, a white gazpacho, parsnip soup, a pea-ginger combination, a tomatilla soup, oxtail with balsamic vinegar, and for variety, tuna with lemon grass and flounder with 24 cloves of garlic. There's also a cheese soup served in a big loaf of bread for a dramatic supper.

James Villas, the outspoken food and wine editor for Town and Country magazine has just written "James Villas' The Town & Country Cookbook."

It is not all caviar and champagne, as you might imagine, but includes some innovative items — onion gougere, mushroom tapenade and Charleston hobotew, which reads a lot like South African bobotee.

With 600 recipes, there's bound to be one that sends you to the kitchen.

Reports link raw milk to illnesses

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Raw milk's credibility as a consumer product may be undermined as the result of several health reports, news accounts and a recent court recommendation.

Some of the events involving the so-called health food that forgoes the pasteurization process include:

— A warning in the Western Journal of Medicine that "health care providers need to be alert to the potential of milk-borne disease, especially when raw milk or raw milk products are consumed." The article in the November issue of the publication also stated that although 95 percent of all milk consumed in this country in pasteurized, more than 95 percent of all milk-borne outbreaks are due to raw milk.

— A Northern California newspaper reported that 17 children who visited a Tracy, Calif., dairy last month became ill after drinking raw milk during a class trip. Several of those who reported illnesses were diagnosed as having camphylobacter, a harmful bacteria linked to raw milk that causes severe diarrhea and other stomach disorders.

The raw milk developments come at a time when consumers are apparently aware of food safety issues, according to a nationwide poll published earlier this year by the Food Marketing Institute, a grocers' trade association.

The survey found that 73 percent of those queried considered the possibility of harmful residues in food to be a "serious health hazard." Twenty-one percent believed that residues were "something of a hazard," whereas 4 percent did not believe that residues presented a health threat and 2 percent were not sure, the food retailers' group reported.

The poll defined residues as being either pesticides or herbicides and did not directly take up the issue of bacterial contamination.

WHAT'S COOKING

Cook plans big holiday dinners

EDITOR'S NOTE: "What's Cooking" is a new column featuring the recipes of local residents which will appear each Wednesday in the Reporter-Telegram's Food Section.

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

For Rachel and Charlie Dunn, holidays and family gatherings go together like — well, Thanksgiving and turkey.

The couple's four children, three children-in-law and seven grandchildren all celebrate the holidays at the Dunn's home in Greenwood. For a group that size, the menu must be voluminous.

A typical Christmas dinner for the family might include turkey with dressing and gravy, sliced ham, green salad, fruit salad, mashed potatoes, asparagus spears with mayonnaise and pimento, said Mrs. Dunn, as well as pumpkin, pecan, apple and Jeff Davis pies, plus assorted Christmas candies and cookies.

"We almost have too much," she said, "but with a crowd like that you have to have a lot of food."

Although the job of cooking for a group that large is an enormous, time-consuming task, preparing the meal is also a family affair. Mrs. Dunn said she usually provides the meat while and the rest of the family contributes the other dishes.

Mrs. Dunn, who is the incoming president of Prairie Lee Homemakers Club, was born in North Ireland and came to the United States in 1946 as a war bride. She and her husband lived in Midland and other oil field locations until 1962, when they settled permanently in the Midland area.

Family is important to Mrs. Dunn, especially during the holiday season. "We have a houseful when we all get together," she said. "Still, it's wonderful to have people around you at that time (the holidays)."

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Rachel Dunn

The recipe for Mrs. Dunn's Jeff Davis Pie was given to her by her mother-in-law. The pie is a family favorite for festive occasions.

JEFF DAVIS PIE

½ cup butter
2 cups brown sugar
4 egg yolks
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 cup canned milk
½ cup raisins
½ cup dates
¾ cup broken nut meats
Unbaked pie shell (recipe follows)
4 egg whites
½ cup sugar

Cream butter and brown sugar; beat in egg yolks, one at a time, and vanilla.

Sift flour, cinnamon, nutmeg and salt; stir in canned milk, raisins, dates and nut meats. Pour into unbaked pie shell. Bake at 300° for about 40 minutes.

To make meringue, beat four egg whites with ½ cup sugar, put on pie and brown in oven.

Pie Crust:
1 cup ice water
2 cups vegetable shortening
4½ to 5 cups flour
¼ teaspoon salt

Mix together and roll out. Recipe makes one large pie crust or two small ones.

Carrot muffins rich in fiber, low in cholesterol

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

In the beginning there was carrot cake made with white flour, white sugar, vegetable oil, eggs, leavening, a bit of spice, pecans and, of course, carrots.

Then came carrot quick breads such as carrot loaves and carrot muffins, made much like the cake but less sweet. Now a new day has dawned for carrot muffins. When the following recipe for Carrot Spice Sesame Muffins came into our test kitchen we realized it was a low-cholesterol version with a good supply of dietary fiber plus vitamins and minerals. No egg is used and honey replaces sugar.

These muffins are sweet. They are also sturdy so serve them straight from the oven. If any are leftover, reheat them.

CARROT SPICE SESAME MUFFINS

1½ cup whole wheat flour
½ cup wheat germ
½ cup whole bran cereal
¼ cup sesame seed
1 teaspoon baking soda
3 teaspoons ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon ground nutmeg
½ teaspoon ground allspice
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
⅔ cup orange juice
⅔ cup honey
⅓ cup safflower oil
¼ cup plain yogurt
¾ pound trimmed carrots, pared and grated medium fine

On wax paper stir together whole wheat flour, wheat germ, bran, sesame seed, baking soda, cinnamon, nutmeg, allspice and cloves.

In a large bowl whisk together until blended the orange juice, honey, oil and yogurt. Add flour mixture; stir only until moistened; stir in carrots. Turn into well-greased muffin-pan cups (each 1-3rd cup capacity) filling each ¾ full.

Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 25 to 30 minutes. Serve hot. Makes 18.

Food industry introduces amusing products

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Proving that the food industry does indeed have a sense of humor are several unusual products currently making debuts.

Topping this list of whimsical items is Lightron, the perfect product for those who get impatient when their glass is empty.

Lightron looks like a two-inch-high coaster whose sides are adorned with five tiny red lights. The lights remain dark until a glass, bottle or can is placed atop the holder. Then the pressure from the container switches on the bulbs that, theoretically, get the attention of cocktail servers or bartenders.

Needless to say, it would be somewhat impractical for individuals to carry their own battery-powered Lightrons out on the town when the possibility exists that they will be having more than one drink. So, the item's inventors, Intromark Inc. of Pittsburgh, hope to entice restaurants and bars to purchase the gadgets in bulk by offering to emblaze them with an establishment's logo.

Even so, those looking for better service at home can purchase Lightron at a retail price of $5.95.

The chronicle of innovation in the food industry, New Product News, reports on some other faintly bizarre items in its latest issue.

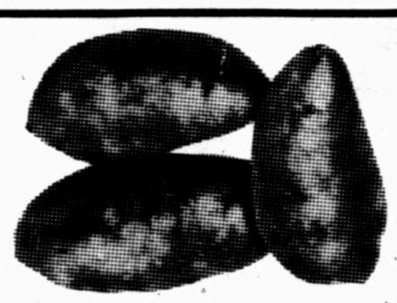

For people who love pizza but dislike touching the dough, there is Pizza in a Cup. Pax International Foods of Medford, N.Y., is testing bite-size pieces of pizza in a handy-size container. The company is limiting its line to a simple cheese topping at this time. Two (six-ounce) servings sell for $1.98.

Another new product combines aliens with Italian cuisine: Chef Boyardee's Smurfs Pasta. The Smurfs are placed in a can and seasoned with various sauces and flavors. A 15-ounce serving of Smurfs sells for 89 cents.

Burgundy best with capital 'B'

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

How unfortunate that the word burgundy with a lower-case B has come to mean, in this country, any old red wine! It is a particular irony and a slap in the face to real Burgundy — the red wine that has the power to please as no other can.

Bordeaux, with its Cabernet Sauvignon-based wines, has gained a greater reputation, in some circles, as a red wine of reward, but that is merely tribute to skillful wine making, brilliant marketing strategies and the forceful personalities in the Bordeaux houses. These men are known as the lords of the chateaux, and their properties' names carry instant prestige.

Bordeaux is all quite orderly.

Burgundy, on the other hand, suffers from the anarchistic upbringing of the French Revolution that split up properties into infinitesimal, gerrymandered blocks, changing the map of the district into a crazy quilt of scraps run by every manner of manor and hovel.

The district's leading lights are jolly folk, unstuffy people of peasant stock who happen to love a good bottle of wine, and many of whom happen to make some rather incredible juice.

Many wine lovers view the best wines of Bordeaux as second best. Burgundy is king, the poets and wine lovers have told us over the centuries. Drinking great old, red Burgundy is an ultimate, consummate experience.

And the crown jewels of Burgundy are clearly the wines of Domaine de la Romanee-Conti, a house whose products command the highest first-release prices in the entire world of table wines.

Domaine de la Romanee-Conti is a name sprinkled with plaudits, yet few people in the world have ever tasted the products of this house because of its minuscule production, as well as prices that start at $30 a bottle and top out at $125 a bottle.

Are they worth it? Some people think not. Anthony Hanson, a British master of wine and author of the controversial book "Burgundy," wrote that the wines of the Domaine de la Romanee-Conti have seemed overripe and don't warrant quite the effusive praise they have received. A similar allegation appears in Hugh Johnson's Modern Encyclopedia of Wine, but with a modification:

"Their policy is to delay picking until the grapes are consummately ripe, running the gauntlet of the autumn storms and the risk of rot, simply rejecting all the grapes that have succumbed," Johnson wrote.

The variation from bottle to bottle for the same Domaine wines is unnecessarily high, he wrote.

Yet despite the criticisms launched at the house affectionately called DRC, the world still goes ga-ga over the new releases, paying whatever the market price is to get them.

Over the years, I have had few Domaine de la Romanee-Conti wines (my wine budget doesn't warrant wines of this price very often), but most have been grand experiences, a combination of strength and finesse, starting with the exotic near-East spice elements in the aroma; then fruit and structure, and finishing with richness and expansive complexity.

Of course, drinking it at all is an expensive proposition, and to drink this wine when it is very young is a crime since such fine wine demands 10 to 15 years in the bottle before it shows what Burgundy is all about.

I am not in the habit of recommending such expensive wines, particularly when so many other more reasonably priced Burgundies exist

Great-grandma's old woodburning stove coming back

Associated Press

Good cooks are rediscovering great-grandma's woodburning cookstove that produces delicious baked goods and helps cut gas and electric bills.

There's a special taste to foods cooked on a woodstove, according to an article in the autumn issue of Country Cooking. And the stoves are easy to use once you learn how to build fires and where to place your pots for best results.

Wood stoves, which date back to the mid-19th century, are best for breads, pies, cobblers and cookies. They don't work well for foods that require precise temperatures because you can't adjust the heat quickly and sometimes you must interrupt cooking to add more fuel.

Woodburning stoves can burn either wood or coal. Coal is longer-burning than even the best hardwood and burns more evenly, so it works especially well for large amounts of food.

Wood is best for quick meals, or if you don't want the stove to heat up the house. And the good wood smell and flavor seem to cook right into the food.

Whether you are burning wood or coal, all ranges operate on the same basic principle, as Lynda Moultrie writes in "The Antique Kitchen Range Bible."

The most important thing to learn is draft and damper control. Keep all dampers and drafts in good working order and learn to regulate them, and your stove will work at top capacity.

It is important to remember that on a wood-coal range the whole range is hot. It is very easy to burn yourself. Keep potholders handy — the glove kind that go up your arm — and never touch pot handles or any part of the range with bare hands.

As a safety precaution, also keep an ABC chemical fire extinguisher nearby.

Cast iron cookware is ideal for cookstoves, but any pots and pans without plastic or wood parts can be used. Copper-bottomed pans are not a good choice because the copper will tarnish rapidly.

Cooking on top of the range is a matter of moving your pots and pans around to different parts of the rangetop for different types of cooking.

The portion over the firebox is the hottest so it is best for quick cooking. Food will come to a boil or fry quickly when placed here. A cast iron frying pan here makes a good wok for quick-stirring vegetables and sauces.

If food is burning or cooking too fast, move it to the middle of the range and cooking will slow. The middle range is best for slow cooking, while the far end — away from the firebox — is used for simmering and gives you crockpot-type cooking with little or no stirring.

For cooking inside the oven, you need an oven thermometer. The gauge in the door only tells you how hot the door is.

In baking, because the side of the oven nearest the firebox is hottest, you must sometimes turn bread, cookies and pies.

'Yuppie Chow' howlingly costly

Copley News Service

One can't begin thinking too soon about what to get one's Yuppie friends, relatives or spouses for Christmas. Can one?

What better gift idea than gourmet cuisine developed to ensure a hearty, six-figure income? Extra nutrition for upward mobility — that's the promise from the manufacturers of Yuppie Chow.

"We brought in costly trained Yuppie nutritionists to research and formulate the best product imaginable for good wealth," says Jim Bode, president of Rainbow Specialties Inc. in Riverside, Calif.

The result? A very good copy of dog food packaging, complete with recommended feeding amounts and the thoughtful warning — "For your Yuppie's health, see your stockbroker regularly."

And, be sure to feed Yuppie Chow until fully weaned (when your Yuppie has earned a master's degree or lands that first $30,000-a-year job).

The product is recommended, of course, by four out of five financial analysts. And it comes in varieties, the likes of which all true Yuppies crave.

The test box was labeled "Brie (cheese) flavored." Other varieties include Milktoast and Ethnic flavors.

Now, since all Yuppies have expensive taste, Yuppie Chow may seem like quite a bargain — at only $7.95 per box — even if it is only 6 ounces of popcorn.

Chicken breast makes low-fat meat substitute

By TONI TIPTON
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Chicken breasts are a versatile low-fat substitute for red meat in today's calorie-conscious cooking. They are teamed here with ingredients like pineapple and tomatoes, which have a hefty dose of Vitamin C. And when served with rice they make for healthful dining for the entire family.

INDONESIAN CHICKEN SATE

2 cups diced roasted almonds
¼ cup soy sauce
2 (10¾-ounce) cans condensed chicken broth
2 tablespoons almond oil
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons sugar
¾ teaspoon garlic powder
¾ teaspoon ground ginger
¼ teaspoon cayenne pepper
3 whole chicken breasts, boned, skinned and split
¼ cup butter
1½ cups chopped onion
1½ cups long grain rice
1½ teaspoons garlic salt
¾ cup water
¼ cup chopped parsley

Grind 1 cup almonds in blender or food processor until fine. Combine almonds with soy sauce, ¼ cup chicken broth, almond oil, lemon juice, sugar, garlic powder, ginger and cayenne. Set aside.

Cut chicken breast halves in half lengthwise. Marinate chicken in almond mixture at room temperature ½ hour or overnight in refrigerator.

Meanwhile, melt butter in 10-inch skillet. Add onion and rice and cook 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Add remaining chicken broth, garlic salt and water. Simmer, covered, 20 minutes. Stir in remaining 1 cup almonds and parsley and keep warm until serving time.

Skewer chicken pieces tightly on wooden skewers, covering exposed ends of skewer with foil. Brush chicken with almond sauce and broil 3 inches from heat 7 minutes. Brush occasionally with sauce. Turn skewers and broil 7 minutes longer. Continue brushing. Serve with almond rice. Makes 6 servings.

PER SERVING: 862 calories; 54 gm protein; 59 gm carbohydrate; 47 gm fat; 2,150 mg sodium; 693 mg potassium.

⅓ cup white wine
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 chicken bouillon cube
1½ teaspoons marjoram, crushed
¼ teaspoon dried mint, crushed
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon water
3 cups hot cooked rice

Drain grapes and reserve ⅓ -cup syrup. Gently pound chicken to ¼ -inch thickness. Heat oil in large skillet and saute onion, garlic and chicken until lightly browned. Add wine, reserved syrup, lemon juice, bouillon cube, marjoram and mint. Cover and simmer 20 minutes or until chicken is cooked. Combine cornstarch and water and add to chicken mixture to thicken. Add grapes and cook until heated through. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

PER SERVING: 550 calories; 42 gm protein; 69 gm carbohydrate; 8 gm fat; 824 mg sodium; 245 mg potassium.

STUFFED CHICKEN BREASTS WITH PINEAPPLE SAUCE

1 (8 ¼-ounce) can sliced pineapple in syrup
2 whole chicken breasts, split, boned
2 ounces Swiss cheese
4 thin slices ham
4 cloves garlic, crushed
⅛ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon black pepper
1 egg
½ teaspoon tarragon leaves, crumbled
¾ cup flour
¼ cup butter
1 small onion, sliced
¾ cup chicken broth
¼ cup apricot jam
2 teaspoons cornstarch

Drain pineapple, reserving syrup. Using sharp knife, cut deep horizontal pocket into each chicken breast. Cut cheese into 4 (1 by 2-inch) slices ¼ -inch thick or to fit inside chicken pocket. Wrap ham slice around cheese. Insert ham and cheese along with garlic clove into each pocket. Secure with wood pick and sprinkle with salt and pepper.

Combine egg and tarragon and dip each chicken pocket into mixture. Coat with flour. Brown chicken on both sides in hot butter. Remove from pan. Add onion to pan drippings and saute until transparent. Return chicken to skillet along with reserved syrup and chicken broth. Cover and simmer 30 minutes. Remove chicken to platter. Combine jam and cornstarch. Stir into pan juices. Add pineapple and cook until sauce boils and thickens. Pour over chicken. Spoon pineapple around chicken. Makes 4 servings.

CHICKEN IN TOMATO-GINGER SAUCE

3 whole chicken breasts, skinned, boned and split
½ cup flour
2 tablespoons oil
2 tablespoons brown sugar, packed
1 tablespoon grated ginger root
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 teaspoon salt
2 pounds tomatoes, peeled, seeded and chopped
6 green onions

Lightly pound chicken breasts. Dredge in flour then brown in oil. Stir in brown sugar, ginger, garlic and salt and cook 1 to 2 minutes. Add tomatoes. Cover and simmer 10 to 15 minutes or until chicken is done.

Meanwhile, cut off tops and root ends of green onions, leaving 4- to 5-inch pieces. Cut both ends lengthwise several times to make a fringe. Place in ice water to curl. Serve chicken and sauce garnished with green onion fans. Makes 6 servings.

Experts say eat, drink but be wary of holiday season overindulging

WASHINGTON (AP) — The holiday season of repeated feasting is at hand, when diets are forgotten amid lavish repasts that leave typical Americans four to six pounds heavier by New Year's Day.

Good food and good times are a major part of the holiday season, but overindulging can add weight that is hard to shed later, health experts warn.

The centerpiece of those grand meals is usually the turkey, a seasonal treat that pleases many a palate, although it does need some special care in storage and preparation.

To help remind Americans of the best methods of handling these tasty birds, the Department of Agriculture has put together a booklet entitled, Talking About Turkey.

Storage, defrosting, preparation and cooking are covered as well as care and uses of leftovers.

To get a copy of Talking About Turkey, send your name and address to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 541N, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

While care of the turkey is important, so is care of the humans who eat it, and it's easy to become a casualty of caloric holiday cheer.

Holiday weight gain averaged six pounds for men and four for women, according to researchers at the University of Arizona.

To help avoid that problem nutritionisis at the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service have developed suggestions for coping with holiday temptations. These include:

— Don't be a martyr. It's impossible to say no to all holiday treats, so rely on discretion rather than attempted total denial. Otherwise, when you do give in, you could completely lose control and overeat.

— Eat a light snack before dinner parties, or a meal before cocktail parties. You will be less inclined to overindulge.

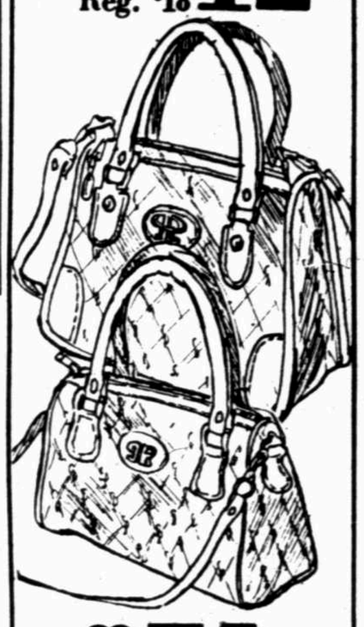

— Establish a cutoff time for eating. Keeping this promise to yourself will help you avoid round-the-clock snacking.

— Remember that alcohol has plenty of calories. Some cocktails can contain 200 calories. Consider dry white wine diluted with club soda.

— Go easy on seasonal specialties, even a little frosting, peanuts or candy canes can add up to a lot of calories.

— Plan participatory parties when entertaining. Scheduling special activities such as caroling, group games or dancing will give you and your guests something to do besides eat and drink.

— Increase activity. One way to eat more without gaining weight is to burn off the calories.

Enticing recipe for Ilona Torte

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

I asked my niece, Mimi Kley, for her comment on a new cookbook containing recipes for the dishes served at New York City's Cafe des Artistes because she is an artist who loves to cook. Here is her report:

"George Lang, restaurant consultant and owner of Cafe des Artistes, writes, 'One slice of Ilona Torte will bring temporary happiness, which is more than we get from most things these days.' This rich chocolate dessert is one of the enticing recipes in Lang's "Cafe Des Artistes Cookbook" (Clarkson Potter).

ILONA TORTE

5 ounces semisweet chocolate, cut into small pieces
1 cup sugar
6 tablespoons unsalted butter
8 eggs, separated
1¾ cups plus ⅓ cup coarsely ground walnuts
2 tablespoons fresh white-bread crumbs
Pinch of salt
Butter
Flour
Mocha Buttercream, see recipe
Garnish: walnut halves

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

In a medium-size saucepan, combine chocolate and sugar with ¼ cup water and cook over moderate heat for about 5 minutes, stirring occasionally until mixture is smooth. Let mixture cool for 15 minutes.

In a mixing bowl, beat butter until light and fluffy. Add egg yolks, one at a time, beating until each is incorporated. Slowly beat in chocolate syrup until well blended. Then add 1¾ cups ground walnuts and bread crumbs, mixing just enough to combine thoroughly.

In a large mixing bowl, whip egg whites and salt until stiff peaks form; very gently, fold into the chocolate mixture.

Lightly butter a 10 by 3-inch torte pan (or 10 by 2-inch cheesecake pan). Sprinkle with flour, and shake out any excess. Pour batter into pan and bake for 35 to 40 minutes. Let the cake cool in the pan for 15 minutes. Invert torte onto a cooling rack, and let torte cool completely.

Cut the cooled torte into two layers. Place top half, topside down, on a round platter. Cover torte with ¾ cup of mocha buttercream, reserving 1 cup for decoration. Place the second layer on top of the filling, smooth side up. Cover the top and sides of the torte with the remaining buttercream, using a flexible spatula.

Press the remaining ⅓ cup ground walnuts into the buttercream on the sides of the torte. Using a pastry bag with a star tip, decorate the top edges and base of the torte with the reserved 1 cup buttercream.

MOCHA BUTTERCREAM:

In a small saucepan, stir over low heat 6 ounces semisweet chocolate (cut into small pieces), ⅓ cup water and 2 teaspoons instant expresso powder until chocolate is completely melted. Scrape into a bowl and let cool completely. Using an electric mixer, cream 1 cup plus 2 tablespoons unsalted butter (at room temperature) until light and fluffy. Add 3 egg yolks, one at a time, beating until each is incorporated. Gradually add 2-3rds cup confectioners' sugar. Scrape in chocolate mixture and blend thoroughly.

Sweet potato favorite for holiday menu

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

One of the most popular vegetables used to dress up holiday dinners, such as Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's, in the United States is the sweet potato.

This is a native vegetable originally grown in the warmer parts of this country but which is now cultivated in many parts of the world. A root from a vine of the morning glory family, it was cultivated as a food by Indian tribes long before explorers set foot on American soil.

The sweet potato, which comes in many sizes and shapes, closely resembles the yam, and many cooks use them interchangeably.

Actually their origins are quite different. Yams belong to a family of herbaceous tropical and subtropical vines. They are the mainstay of the family diet in West Africa. But whereas they are sweeter than the sweet potato, they are said to be less nutritious.

Although sweet potatoes are strictly American in origin, they traveled years ago to the Far East. In Japan, they are eaten more frequently than in America. They have proved a boon there in years when rice crops are ruined by typhoons.

When explorers brought the sweet potato back to Spain, it soon became popular in much of Europe. England's King Henry VIII, known for his fondness for food of all sorts, had sweet potatoes planted in his gardens and ate them in spiced pies.

The vegetable also became popular in Pacific islands like New Guinea, where they now make up a major part of the local diet.

The accent there is on sweetness, featuring such desserts as sweet potato pie and sweet potatoes with pecans, as in this recipe adapted from a cookbook titled "Miss Mary's Down-Home Cooking" by Diane Dalsass (NAL Books).

SWEET POTATOES WITH PECANS

4 large sweet potatoes
½ stick butter or margarine, softened
¾ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon Bourbon whiskey
½ cup pecans, coarsely chopped

Place sweet potatoes in large saucepan and add enough water to cover. Bring water to a boil, cover and cook about 35 minutes or until potatoes are tender. Drain. When potatoes are cool enough to handle, peel off skins. Place potatoes in mixing bowl and mash with butter or margarine. Beat in sugar, salt and Bourbon. Spread half potato mixture in a greased 1½-quart round casserole and sprinkle with half the pecans. Repeat layers. Bake casserole in 325-degree oven until hot and pecans turn light brown, about 30 minutes. Serves 6 to 8.

Zucchini bread for holiday baking

By ROSE DOSTI
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

This zucchini bread from the Cliff House in Playa del Rey, Calif., is quite nice and a good recipe to keep on hand for holiday baking.

CLIFF HOUSE ZUCCHINI BREAD

3 eggs
2 cups sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 cup oil
3 cups peeled and grated zucchini, drained
3 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup raisins, optional
1 cup pecans
1 cup drained crushed pineapple

Beat together eggs, sugar, vanilla and oil in large bowl. Add zucchini. Combine flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt, raisins and nuts, then add to zucchini mixture. Add pineapple and mix well. Pour into greased and floured 9-by 5-inch loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees 55 to 60 minutes. Makes 1 loaf.

THE BUTCHER

Dry aged beef has richer flavor

By MERLE ELLIS

It wasn't, by any stretch of the imagination, a very scientific experiment. It just sort of happened. It was, I believe, as valid a taste-test-type of consumer survey as most taste-taste-type surveys. I know it was — I was the taste tester. And, it proved once again a truth I have known for years — dry aged beef is better. It also gave me a clue that I can pass along to you regarding how to get it.

I was in my favorite local restaurant for lunch one day about a month ago. I went back to the kitchen to see what the "special" was.

Johnnie Won, the owner-chef, was in the process of taking a top loin of beef out of the plastic vacuum-seal bag that most beef comes in these days. "No special today!" he said tersely as he mopped up the liquid that flowed from the bag of beef.

"Fix me a steak, okay?" I asked, gesturing to the meat in his hand. He picked up a knife and cut a nice thick slice off the top loin.

It was a long, long way from the best steak I ever ate. It was soft in texture, tender but mushy. It had little flavor. In general, it just wasn't a very good steak and I told Johnnie so. "Too soon!" he snapped, with an expression on his face that said: "You should know better."

I left town the next day. Not because the steak was bad; I went fishing in Alaska for a week. When I came back, I again went into Johnnie's for lunch. The special was shrimp curry, but I had been eating nothing but fish for a week. I opened the door to the walk-in cooler looking for inspiration. There on the shelf, laying on one of those formed cardboard dividers used to separate eggs in a crate, was the top loin Johnnie had taken out of the plastic a week before. It had turned a bit dark in my absence and the texture was firmer to the touch. Just to be sure, I asked: "It's the same piece you opened last week?" "Same piece," John replied, "only better now."

It was, indeed, "better now." Just sitting in the cooler for a week with air circulating around it had improved the quality of the meat ten fold. It firmed the texture by evaporating some of the moisture from the meat and made the steak much more tender, juicy and flavorful.

Confirmed beef eaters of long standing have always known that aged beef is best; but there are not many butchers aging beef these days. There are those who advertise "aged beef," but most of those would like you to believe that beef "ages" in those plastic bags. It doesn't. Some tenderizing may occur in those bags, but "aging" in the traditional sense? No way! Old-fashioned style aging now is referred to as "dry-aging" and means aging the beef, usually in carcass form or as primal cuts, outside the plastic.

Aging is a simple process but an expensive one. It requires that meat be stored for a period of time, usually two to three weeks or even longer, at a temperature of between 34 and 38 degrees. This causes two things (1) the gradual decomposition of the muscle fiber, which promotes tenderness and develops the characteristic and sought-after "aged beef" flavor and (2) the evaporation of moisture that firms the flesh but also causes shrinkage, which is another reason few butchers dry-age beef these days.

Until my experience with the aging top loin, I would have told you that you can't age beef in your refrigerator — but we're never too old to learn. If you would like to experience the flavor and texture of good aged beef at home, try this: Buy a whole sub-primal top loin (you can't age beef a steak at a time). Clear a shelf of your refrigerator where there is the best air circulation. Remove the top loin from the plastic wrap and pat it dry with paper towels. Put the meat on the shelf of the refrigerator, fat side down, and leave it for a week. The surface will darken and dry out, but don't worry about it. That's what it should do. Indeed, check it often to make sure no moisture from any other source has dropped on the meat. If it does, dab it off with a paper towel.

DEAR ABBY

Good health without any butts

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Tomorrow will mark the Ninth Annual Great American Smokeout, an upbeat, good-humored, one-day campaign to encourage smokers to quit smoking for 24 hours — just to prove they can do it.

The idea was conceived by the American Cancer Society, which insists that anyone who can live without a cigarette for 24 hours can quit forever. So, if you're hooked on cigarettes (or cigars) and you really want to quit, why not start tomorrow — for just 24 hours?

The following information may motivate you: According to Dr. William G. Cahan, attending surgeon at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, lung cancer is the single largest contributor to the total cancer death rate. It accounts for 25 percent of all cancer deaths in the United States. It is estimated that 85 percent of all lung cancer cases are due to cigarette smoking. As a smoker, you are 10 times more likely to die of lung cancer.

This year there will be 98,000 lung cancer cases among men and 48,000 among women. Of these, 87,000 men and 38,000 women will die of the disease. The number of women who will die of lung cancer is increasing at an alarming rate. Breast cancer used to be the biggest killer for women — now it's lung cancer!

A word about smoking-related diseases — emphysema, chronic bronchitis and heart disease. This year an estimated 350,000 will die from one of these. This total exceeds the number of U.S. deaths in World War II; it is eight times as many people who die in automobile accidents.

A congressional study has just reported that health costs from the adverse effects of smoking have reached a new high of $65 billion a year in increased medical bills and lost productivity. The loss in death and disability cannot be measured. (And how does one measure the amount of heartache, remorse and guilt suffered as a result of a preventable, self-induced tragedy?)

What about "secondhand" smoke? Is it actually damaging to non-smokers to be in the presence of those who are smoking? According to Dr. Cahan, the answer is yes. Furthermore, studies reveal that the children of smokers are more prone to lung problems and allergies than children of non-smokers.

For years I have begged my young readers, "If you smoke, quit now. If you don't smoke, don't start!" Yet, an estimated 3,000 to 5,000 kids light up for the first time every day. Why? Peer pressure, no doubt.

"How about the rights of smokers?" you ask. Of course they are entitled to smoke if they wish. But they will have to find a place where they can smoke without offending those who can't tolerate it.

"Quitting cold turkey" is the hardest way to quit, but my readers have told me it's the most effective, and in the long run, the easiest way. Cutting down is less traumatic, but the temptation to smoke is often too powerful to resist while smoking just one, two or three cigarettes a day.

Those who are heavily addicted may require professional help to break the habit.

So, if you're hooked on cigarettes or have been telling yourself, "One of these days I'm going to quit," start tomorrow — for just 24 hours?

It won't be easy, but I can promise you, it will be the best Thanksgiving present you can give yourself — and those who love you.

The American Cancer Society has put together a wonderful booklet, "How to Stay Quit Through the Holidays." It's free. Pick one up at your local American Cancer Society office, or write for one, and please include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The address is in your telephone book.

P.S. A favor, please? If you quit tomorrow even for 24 hours, I want to hear from you. Then write again and let me know how long you were able to stay clean. Good luck. Keep me posted. I care.

Gelatin easily used for variety of recipes

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Most of us keep at least one box of gelatin in the cupboard, and no wonder. Simply by adding water, this magical substance may be transformed into an endless array of aspics, soft-gelled soups, molded salads and desserts.

But it hasn't always been so easy. Back in the 1840s, inventor Peter Cooper got the idea to produce a dry, powdered gelatin that could be rehydrated by merely adding water. He blended his gelatin with sugar and fruit flavorings, and thus was born the ready-to-mix, flavored gelatin we know today.

Yet it wasn't until the 1890s that powdered gelatin became widely available. It was then that a New York salesman named Charles Knox, whose wife was laboring over a pot of homemade calf's foot jelly, remembered hearing of Cooper's invention. He packaged the powdered gelatin and began selling it door-to-door — and the rest is history.

Gelatin is a pure protein, derived from animal bones and connective tissue, that dissolves and swells when mixed with hot water and forms a gel when chilled. While it contains seven essential amino acids, gelatin is not a complete protein. Unflavored gelatin is flavorless and colorless, and contains only about 25 calories per tablespoon. Easily digested, it can also help to strengthen fragile or brittle fingernails.

Today, plain gelatin is available in envelopes containing ¼ ounce (about 1 tablespoon) — enough to gel 2 cups of liquid. Flavored, sweetened gelatin comes in 3- and 6-ounce packets, enough to gel 2 or 4 cups of liquid.

SPICY BEEF MADRILENE

2 cups vegetable juice cocktail
1 tbsp. (1 envelope) unflavored gelatin
1 (10½ oz.) can condensed beef broth
1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 cup cubed cooked beef
2 tbsps. minced pimiento
2 tbsps. chopped celery leaves
½ cup sour cream
¼ cup sliced green onion

Pour vegetable juice cocktail into 2½-cup glass bowl. Sprinkle gelatin ove top and let stand 5 minutes to soften.

Cover bowl with plate and microwave 2½ minutes on HIGH (100 percent power), stirring after 1½ minutes, to dissolve gelatin.

Combine beef broth and Worcestershire in large mixing bowl. Stir in hot gelatin mixture, then refrigerate about 20 minutes, until mixture is consistency of honey.

Spoon mixture into 6 shallow individual serving bowls. Divide beef, pimiento and celery leaves evenly among bowls. Stir gently to blend, and chill until set.

To serve, top each bowl with small dollop of sour cream, and sprinkle lightly with sliced green onion.

Serves 6.

BAVARIAN CREME

2 cups milk
4 eggs
One-third cup sugar
1 tbsp. (1 envelope) unflavored gelatin
Dash salt
2 tbsps. orange- or coffee-flavored liqueur
2 cups unsweetened whipping cream, whipped
Sweetened whipped cream and ground nutmeg (optional, for garnish)

Combine milk, eggs, sugar, gelatin and salt in 2-quart glass casserole. Bea well until thoroughly blended.

Microwave, uncovered, 12 to 14 minutes on DEFROST (30 percent power) just until mixture bubbles around edges, stirring twice during last half of cooking time. Let stand until mixture thickens.

Gently stir in liqueur, then fold in whipped cream. Turn into 8-cup mold, or divide evenly among 8 individual dessert glasses.

Refrigerate at least 4 hours to set.

Serves 8.

SUNSHINE CAKE RING

1 (2 layer) pkg. yellow cake mix
1 (3 oz.) pkg. fruit-flavored gelatin
¾ cup water
½ cup cooking oil
4 eggs
Sweetened whipped cream (optional)

Combine cake mix, gelatin, water, cooking oil and eggs in large mixing bowl Blend on low speed of electric mixer just until dry ingredients are moistened, then beat at medium speed 4 minutes.

Turn batter into 16-cup fluted or straight-sided microwave ring mold. (If you don't have ring mold, place 4- or 5-inch-high glass in center of large glass mixing bowl.)

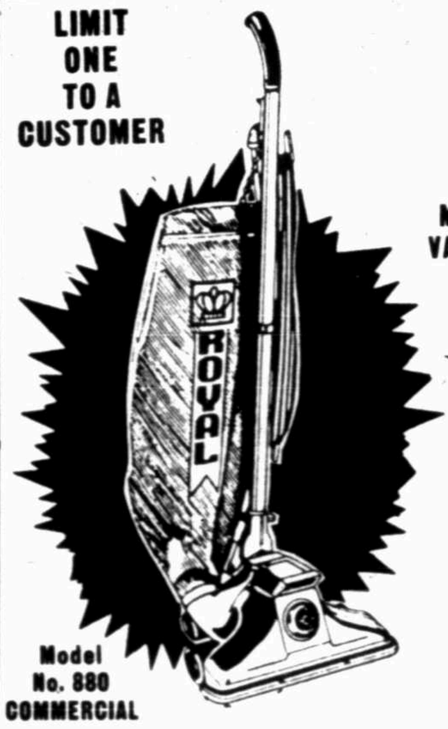

Microwave on HIGH (100 percent power) 12 to 15 minutes, rotating ¼ turn every 5 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes directly on countertop. Retained heat will complete cooking.

Turn cake out onto serving platter. Serve with sweetened whipped cream, if desired.

Serves 6 to 8.

Pumpkin versatile food

Associated Press

The versatile, nutritious and low-calorie pumpkin — that native American symbol of Pilgrim Thanksgiving — has become a dish enjoyed around the world.

While Americans tend to put pumpkin into pies and soups, according to an article by food and wine editor James Vilas in the November issue of Town & Country, elsewhere in the world it is prepared in a wide variety of ways.

The Israelis stuff it with ground meats; in Sri Lanka it is curried; the Greeks fry it in oil; the French puree it; in the Caribbean they make it into bread; the Chinese turn it into delicate dumplings, and the Russians boil it slowly with rice to form a thick breakfast porridge.

The Spanish conquistadors brought pumpkin seeds back to Europe in the 17th century, but pumpkin fossils dating back thousands of years B.C. have been found in the Peruvian Andes.

The Pilgrims were given pumpkin seeds by the Indians and by the second Thanksgiving in 1623 the pumpkin was being baked, boiled, fried in cakes, fermented into ale and used in a pie.

Americans today think of pumpkins in terms of pie, soup or jack-o'-lanterns, but pumpkins have many other menu uses.

They can be cut into strips and fried like French fries; mixed with other vegetables and baked or glazed; included in hearty stews; used as a base for subtle sauces; turned into an elegant souffle, or made into an unusual ice cream.

Vilas said adventurous cooks could add a little pumpkin puree to the batter for waffles, muffins, blinis and pancakes. A small pumpkin can be baked and stuffed with spicy chopped lamb and vegetables. Cooked pumpkin could be combined in a compote with apples and onions, or made into a thick pumpkin and apricot preserve.

Caroline Hunt Schoellkopf had such a passion for pumpkins that she compiled more than 400 pumpkin recipes in her privately printed, "The Compleat Pumpkin Eater."

She has recipes for stuffed pumpkin blossoms, peanut butter pumpkin soup, pumpkin ambrosia, pumpkin lasagna and pumpkin marmalade tarts.

Don't throw away the pumpkin seeds, which are rich in iron and B vitamins and, according to Town & Country, can be toasted, salted.

TOASTED PUMPKIN SEEDS

2 cups pumpkin seeds, membranes removed
¼ cup melted butter
Salt

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Place seeds in a strainer and rinse under cold running water until they no longer feel slick. Dry well with paper towels. Spread seeds on a baking sheet and drizzle evenly with the butter. Toast seeds 15-20 minutes or until golden brown, shaking the baking sheet from time to time. Drain on paper towels. Sprinkle with salt to taste and serve with cocktails or store in airtight container for future use.

Yield: 2 cups of seeds.

Thanksgiving roast turkey served Normandy-style

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Thanksgiving, among the most colorful of American holidays, was first celebrated at a dinner the Pilgrims served in 1621, with roast native turkey accompanied by Indian pudding and succotash, both made from native corn.

The domesticated birds, said to have first been eaten by the Aztec Indians, were introduced in Europe in the early 16th century, where they scored an immediate hit.

In colonial times, America's forest lands abounded with wild turkeys and they became America's most popular food birds. This inspired Benjamin Franklin to comment that it should have been chosen instead of the eagle as our representative bird.

Turkey is not limited to the U.S. mainland. In Hawaii cooked turkey cubes are dipped in beaten eggs and flour and fried. Chinese-style turkey chow mein is popular and turkey curry, presumably from India, has many fans.

Here's a recipe for Roast Turkey, Normandy style.

NORMANDY ROAST TURKEY

2 pounds apples, such as pippins
Juice of 1 lemon
1 turkey, about 10 pounds, boned and rolled by butcher
Salt and pepper
Thyme to taste
5 tablespoons butter
1 cup apple cider

Peel and quarter apples. Remove cores and halve each quarter. Place apple slices in a bowl and sprinkle at once with lemon juice to prevent turning brown. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Sprinkle turkey with salt, pepper and thyme. Heat butter in a stewing pot until lightly browned, and sear turkey a few minutes on each side until golden. Remove meat and set aside. Lower heat under stewing pot to low-medium. Add sliced apples and brown for five minutes, turning carefully every 30 seconds with a wooden spoon. Remove half the apples and line bottom of an oval baking dish. Place turkey on top and cover, including sides, with rest of the apples. Pour cider into stewing pot and scrape bottom of pot with wooden spoon to loosen all browned particles. Simmer for two minutes over low heat. Pour cider over turkey and apples. Cover with a aluminum foil and roast at 350 degrees for 50 minutes, or until done. Serve with a colorful mixture of stir-fried vegetables, such as snow peas, asparagus and carrots. Serves about 6 people.

Plaza rally will kick off annual Smokeout Day

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

The air was smoke-free at Centennial Plaza today as supporters of the annual Great American Smokeout met for a Pre-Smokeout Day Rally, kicking off the ninth consecutive year of the American Cancer Society-sponsored event.

"Tom Wageman, president of Republic Bank First National is Midland's honorary chairman for the '85 Smokeout," said Chairman Judy Priddy. Wageman was to have participated in the Cancer Society's Pre-Smokeout Day Rally at the Centennial Plaza from 11:45 a.m. to 1 p.m. today."

Wageman, a heavy smoker estimated by co-workers to smoke "around three packs a day" is kicking the habit for the campaign.

Also appearing at the rally, said Ms. Priddy, was KMID's J. Gordon Lund, who emceed the event that included entertainment by professional guitarists Ron Franklin and Jerry Tubbs, sponsored by the Midland Parks and Recreation Department.

Smokeout literature was available and "cold turkey" sandwiches were served, as well.

Also appearing at the event were Mayor Thane Akins who was to have proclaimed Thursday as "Smokeout Day." Balloons were scheduled to be released and a drawing for turkeys was held.

Continuing this year, she added, will be the "Adopt-A-Smoker" program, a popular feature of the Smokeout.

"Nonsmokers can be a part of the Smokeout by 'adopting' smokers they'd like to have quit for the day," said Ms. Priddy. "Adopters can offer survival kits, snacks and encouragement throughout the day. The support really helps."

Included in the survival kit were labels and buttons and T-shirt appliques featuring a lip-sticked frog stating "Kiss me, I don't smoke;" a Larry Hagman special "Stop Smokin' wrist snappin' red rubber band" for nervous types and a list of 21 ways to "snap out of it" describing various ways to present the band to a smoker; a book of "headless matches; a greeting card urging a smoker to quit for a day; and Great American Smokeout stickers.

A free follow-up clinic will be held Dec. 2, 4 and 6, according to the ACS, for smokers who decide to kick the habit.

A Freshstart clinic, consisting of three ½-hour small group sessions, complete with trained instructor will be offered. Interested persons may call the ACS at 683-6374.

The Smokeout began 11 years ago, according to the ACS, in Monticello, Minn., but is in its ninth year as an annual nationwide celebration. The first mass movement by smokers to give up cigarettes was led by Lynn R. Smith, editor of the Monticello Times, in 1974. Smith's idea, "D-Day" quickly spread throughout Minnesota. In 1976, California adopted the idea and labeled it the "Great American Smokeout." The following year, it was observed nationwide.

The idea of "taking a day off from smoking" has spread to other countries, although the name and date varies. Canada, Great Britain, Ireland, France, Australia, South Africa, Norway and Sweden all have similar observations. Last year, Finland celebrated the event for the first time.

The ACS reported that more than one-third (20.4 million people) of American smokers attempted to give up cigarettes last year on Smokeout Day. According to a survey conducted by the Gallup organization, almost 10 percent (5.4 million) succeeded for the full 24 hours. One to five days later, more than five percent (3.1 million) reportedly were still not smoking.

The ACS states that cigarette smoking is responsible for 340,000 deaths each year.

A new feature of the national Smokeout campaign, the "Adopt-A-Dipper" — a program aimed at the nation's tobacco chewers and dippers — will not be highlighted locally, according to Ms. Priddy.

"As far as I know, nothing is planned," she said.

Dipping and chewing, however, is a concern of the U.S. Senate.

Council comes up with $1 million in bond refinancing

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midland City Council took a gamble and came up with a jackpot of $1 million.

Bonds purchased during the days of high interest rates were refunded, or refinanced, Tuesday, and the council approved the action during a special evening session. Ten general obligation issues were combined into one package and Colorado River Municipal Water District bonds constituted the second with the total being about $45 million.

It was a combination of dropping interest rates, high bond ratings and strong demand that gave the city its jackpot savings. Interest rates had ranged from 9 to 13 percent on the various bonds; now it's 5 to 8 percent.

Barbara Haynes with Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. said the city had received similar bond ratings from two firms: AA on both issues from Standard & Poor's while Moody's gave the city's bonds a AA-1 and the CRMWD bonds a AA rating. "They were looking more specifically to the net water revenues for credit rather than to the city," Ms. Haynes said in explaining the difference on the ratings.

"Both (bond rating companies) were pleased to hear the city is interested in higher ratings. They still see the economy as cyclical and tied to a mineral-related industry. They would like to see the city broaden its economic base. Midland's credit is a strong AA because you recovered quickly from a strong downturn in the economy," she said.

In addition to the strong credit rating, she said, the market rallied from Friday to Tuesday. The transaction gave the city a savings of $1,036,762, she added.

The general obligation issue brought the city $421,642 in savings; the CRMWD bonds brought $615,120 savings.

In addition, Ms. Haynes noted that Midland's bonds were oversubscribed within 2½ hours of going on the market, indicating a strong demand.

Combining the 10 general obligation bonds into one issue would simplify the paperwork, City Finance Director Troy Gifford had explained in October when the city officials began looking at refunding. This method is similar to the refinancing being undertaken by homeowners who purchased their houses during the years of high interest rates.

As with any bond sale, Ms. Haynes cited the list of various fees charged for the refunding. But the council noted it had questions about a $120,000 fee charged by the attorneys which do the legal work for CRMWD. Ms. Haynes said the CRMWD transaction was "slightly more cumbersome" because the water district "serves as the vehicle for the city of Midland."

CRMWD sold the $23 million in revenue bonds for the city to build a sewage disposal project southeast of town and to install more sewer lines.

Mayor G. Thane Akins said the refunding "is worth it. It's $1 million in your pocket today." And additional savings will come over the years, he noted.

Ms. Haynes told the council "the city will have no excess debt service this year and in the future it should be a savings."

Midland is only one of many Texas cities doing the refunding. Ms. Haynes said Lubbock, Plano and Richardson received rates comparable to Midland's. It was explained that cities are rushing to get this refunding completed in case Treasury 2 is approved by Congress. That bill would eliminate this type of bond issue.

In other action, the council approved spending $6,000 to send two police officers to the National Academy of Professional Driving and OK'd permits for Parker and Parsley to drill wells at sites two miles east of Big Spring Street and south of what would be an extension of Mockingbird Lane. No residences are nearby and the permits fit the city's requirements.

Hendrix to replace Legg on MC board

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland independent oilman John H. Hendrix will occupy the unexpired term on the Midland Junior College District Board of Trustees effective in December, the board voted at its Tuesday meeting.

The vote followed a month-long search for a replacement after Midland attorney Reagan Legg announced his resignation Oct. 30 effective "when my successor has been named and qualified by the board."

Legg, who was elected a regent of the Permian Junior College System in 1969 and served as president of the first Midland College Board of Trustees when the college was established in 1972, said he chose to relinquish the post he held for 16 years because "I believe no person should remain in elective office for a long period of time."

Healthcare financial leaders may form group

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Medicare, indigent care and preventative health measures are key concerns to healthcare financial leaders who will meet to "join forces" in Big Spring Thursday.

An organizational meeting of the Healthcare Financial Management Association (HFMA) for West Texas will hopefully lead to the formation of such a chapter in this part of the state, according to organizer Eddie Read.

"There are chapters around Texas and I am a member of the North Central Texas group that meets in Dallas-Fort Worth," said Read, assistant comptroller at Malone-Hogan Hospital in Big Spring. "I just got tired of going all the way over to Dallas for meetings. I really think we could use a chapter in this area."

Read stated that he is expecting 30 to 50 healthcare financial professionals to attend the meeting to discuss "goals and objectives." The program will be from 2 to 6 p.m. at Malone-Hogan.

"We'll be forming a steering committee to establish goals and objectives which will be presented to the board in Dallas in January," he said. "We hope to formally apply for a charter a month later."

Plans call for future meetings to be held in several cities "in about a 200 mile radius around the Midland-Odessa area," including San Angelo, Abilene, Lubbock, Midland, Odessa and Big Spring.

Key issues to be discussed at Thursday's program include "upcoming changes in Medicare" to be discussed by a reimbursement specialist from Hospital Corporation of America, the "wellness" concept introduced by a Malone-Hogan spokesman and a presentation by Howard County Judge Milton Kirby on indigent care.

"The wellness concept can be compared to preventative maintenance on your car," said Read. "It's just staying healthy and taking care of yourself."

Among the organizers of the association are Phil Davis with Price Waterhouse in Midland. Davis, a senior audit manager involved in West Texas health care, believes that the program "will give an opportunity for the exchange of ideas."

"In areas of financial reporting, reimbursement and other hospital-related matters, it will be helpful," said Davis. "The group will be open for any healthcare-related areas including home health care agencies, retirement homes and any public accountant who deals with healthcare."

"We sent out notices from Abilene to Van Horn and have had a pretty good response by phone," he added.

West Texas healthcare financial managers have unique problems, suggested Davis, that may not be shared by professionals in the North Central area.

"We are so spread out in West Texas and many of the hospitals are smaller than the hospitals further east," he said. Indigent care, he indicated was one area of healthcare financial interest that could affect smaller hospitals differently than larger facilities.

Midlanders divided on banning smoking in the workplace

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A non-smoking trend appears to be happening around the United States with more people becoming health conscious and more employers banning smoking in the workplace.

Thursday marks the Great American Smokeout Day, where smokers are encouraged to kick the habit for one day. This week a random group of Midlanders were asked, "Should smoking be banned in the workplace?"

Nine people out of 15 interviewed said smoking should not be banned in the workplace. Six said it should.

Those against outlawing smoking at work usually cited personal freedoms and civil rights in defense of workers who smoke.

"I think it's a free country and we do - it's personal," said Nelda Chesser, a housewife from rural Route 13.

Donald Gardner, 21 Landan Lane, a shop foreman, said he's against banning smoking at work because he smokes and because, "I think everybody ought to have the right to smoke when they want to smoke and where they want to smoke."

Chester McCampbell, 714 W. Storey, said smoking shouldn't be banned in the workplace because he had been smoking for 50 years and "I think people ought to get out of the business of telling other people what to do."

Gardner

McCampbell

Kaufmann

Patel

Plumbing contractor, Bill Drummond, 3814 Holiday Hill Road, said he didn't think smoking should be banned at work but, "If the smokers out there would be more courteous, there wouldn't be any problem about it."

Terri Kaufman, of Route 2, said only those employees working around food and in restaurants should be forbidden to smoke.

"If there's food around, I think it should be banned," she said.

Banking officer Linda Clark, 4415 N. Crest Drive said she thought smoking should not only be banned in the workplace, but everywhere.

"I find it just totally annoying. I get upset at people," said Ms. Clark.

Jailer Ken Colston, who didn't want his addressed published, said smoking is banned at his workplace - the county jail. He said the nonsmoking policy is good where he works, but businesses with offices should not forbid smoking. He said in most workplaces, smoking employees should be separated from non-smoking employees.

Salesman Rachel Rando, 2111 N. Jackson, said smoking should be banned in the workplace because she always has to breathe the cigarette smoke of her co-workers and her clothes and hair end up smelling like smoke.

She also said it should be banned because, "It's a terrible habit."

V.M. Patel, 2103 W. Michagan, said he's in favor of banning smoking in the workplace because the smoke harms other people. Patel said he manages his son's doctor's office, where smoking is prohibited.

Lawyer claims case 'won't stand up in court'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

An Odessa criminal defense attorney claimed that the federal-drug case against his 36-year-old California client, Daniel Thomas Reyes, "would not stand up in state court."

But U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton nevertheless found Reyes guilty Tuesday in a non-jury trial of possessing with intent to distribute about 1½ pounds of cocaine and 195 grams of diazepam, generic name for the prescription tranquilizer drug Valium.

On a tip from an informer, Odessa police and sheriff's deputies had arrested Reyes on Oct. 7 just after he had left his Odessa motel room, where he had lived for a week, and in the 1985 Chevrolet Blazer he was driving was found the cocaine, the diazepam, $12,000 in cash, and several firearms, including an assault rifle and a shotgun with pistol grips.

Reyess retained defense attorney, Tom Hirsch of Odessa, claimed the case against his client was a "law question" and not a question of fact, and that the search of the Blazer, a four-wheel drive recreational vehicle, Reyes was driving was "bad."

"This case would not stand up in state court," Hirsch said Tuesday after Bunton had found his client guilty. He claimed that Reyes was denied the protection of the U.S. Constitution's Fourth Amendment against "unreasonable searches and seizures."

"The Supreme Court has just taken away all rights to privacy," Hirsch charged.

The search of Reyes's vehicle and his subsequent arrest was made without benefit of a search warrant, Hirsch said.

"I claimed that they (law-enforcement officers) did not have probable cause" to search Reyes's vehicle, he said outside the courtroom. However, law-enforcement officers in the Reyes case maintained that their informer was both credible and reliable.

"You can have a (federal) search without a warrant to the full extent you can with a warrant issued by a magistrate," Hirsch said.

The case's prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Blankinship, had noted that the 1982 United States-vs.-Ross case decided by the U.S. Supreme Court held that "Police officers who have legitimately stopped an automobile and who have probable cause to believe that contraband is concealed somewhere within it may conduct a warrantless search of the vehicle that is as thorough as a magistrate could authorize by warrant."

Since his arrest, Reyes, an ex-convict who served penitentiary time for second-degree murder in California, has been held in jail without bond. U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith, on the motion of prosecutor Blankinship, had denied Reyes bond in determining a high probability that he might flee were he released from jail. The magistrate found no record of Reyes's gainful employment or permanency. And Bunton ordered Reyes returned to jail to await his sentencing. The federal judge is to sentence Reyes at noon on Dec. 6.

"It will be my job to pronounce sentence on you," Bunton told Reyes, who was clad in a T-shirt, earth-tone jacket, blue jeans and jogging shoes. "I will pass what I think will be a proper sentence."

Bunton could sentence Reyes up to 15 years in prison on the cocaine conviction and up to three years confinement on the diazepam offense. In addition, the judge could impose fines totaling $500,000.

Man found shot to death drifter from Dallas area

From Staff Reports

A 53-year-old drifter from the Dallas area has been identified as the man found shot to death Tuesday morning on a lease road in northwest Midland County, according to Sheriff Gary Painter.

Robert Ray Kittle, who originally was from Virginia, was something of a wandering troubadour, Painter said this morning.

"He traveled around the country, hitchhiking, staying with the Salvation Army and playing his guitar in country-western bars, trying to make enough money to eat," Painter said.

Kittle was found on his back with bullet holes in his cheek and chest about 8:40 a.m. by a pumper for the Anschutz Corp., on whose lease road he had apparently been killed several hours earlier. His body lay about 50 yards east of State Highway 158, just north of County Road 60. There are no suspects in the case, according to Painter.

"We don't even have a motive," he said. "Robbery could not be a motive," since Kittle apparently had little money.

He had been seen walking in the area about noon Monday, Painter said.

Pickup valued at $5,000 stolen from repo yard

From Staff Reports

A $5,000 pickup was reported stolen from a repo yard in Midland County south of town, in one of several burglaries and thefts reported to law-enforcement agencies Tuesday.

Employees of Midland Recovery, Route 3, Box 3472, told sheriff's deputies they didn't know when the 1979 Ford pickup was taken from the company yard on County Road 125 west of State Highway 349.

A $9,900 Ford pickup was reported stolen from a maintenance barn at the High Sky Children's Ranch Tuesday. The pickup had been taken sometime between Nov. 8 and Tuesday, reports said.

A $600 nail gun and other items worth a total of about $2,500 were reported stolen by Albert H. Cookson, 5107 Sunnyside. Also taken from Cookson's vehicle were a $450 nail gun, a $300 sander, a $222 socket set, a $110 saw, a $100 drill and about $700 worth of assorted tools. The tools were taken from the vehicle about 3:08 p.m. Tuesday while it was parked near 1506 W. Storey, reports said.

About $1,000 in currency and five watches worth a total of $750 were taken from Thrifty Auto Parts, 3401 Thomason, sometime between Monday night and Tuesday. It was one of several burglaries and attempted burglaries which occurred on that block, according to police.

A $100 television was taken from the Paramount Beauty Shop, 3403 Thomason, along with two hair dryers worth a total of $50, and $20 in bills and change. Also broken into were Shear Talent Hair Design, 3405 Thomason, and Mario's Spanish Inn, 3411 Thomason, but nothing was taken from either shop, reports said.

Three flatbed trailers worth $3,000 each were stolen from Paul's Fina Station, 2401 S. Midkiff, Paul Allen Norred told police Monday.

Trudy Williams, 3200 Sage, reported the loss of a $400 videotape recorder in a Monday burglary of her apartment, reports said.

A $600 dictaphone was reported stolen Monday by Wes Perry of Perry and Perry, 220 W. Texas. The machine had been taken sometime between Friday and Saturday, reports said.

R.O. Samuels, Route 9, Box 9756, reported the loss of $300 worth of clothes, $50 worth of bedclothes and a $60 telephone in a Sunday burglary of his home on County Road 1216 near County Road 118, reports said.

A 16-year-old Midland girl injured Sunday in a one-car rollover on State Highway 191 has been upgraded to satisfactory condition, a Midland Memorial Hospital spokesperson said.

Jill Henson, Route 11, Box 11720, was injured when the 1982 Chevrolet pickup she was riding in overturned about 5:15 p.m. on SH 191 a half-mile west of FM 1788. The driver and two other passengers, all teen-agers, were treated and released Sunday, but Ms. Henson suffered internal injuries.

Amber Sawyers, a 21-year-old Midland woman listed in critical condition for a month after an Oct. 10 traffic accident, has been released from MMH, but her doctors refused to say if she had recovered or merely been transferred to the care of another institution, the spokeswoman said.

Ms. Sawyers, 4410 N. Lanham, was injured in an early-morning accident when the car she was riding in struck a utility pole at the intersection of Midland Drive and Cuthbert Avenue, according to police reports.

The driver, 24-year-old Terry Weddle, 4622 Leisure, was released from the hospital shortly after the accident.

Testimony resumes in Odessa murder trial

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 161st District Court jury of eight men and four women today resumed hearing testimony in the murder trial of 20-year-old Robert Patino, accused of the April 2, 1985 fatal shooting of a 19-year-old man.

District Judge Tryon Lewis, after dismissing jurors, Tuesday evening denied a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal sought by Patino's attorney, G. David Smith.

Smith contended Assistant District Attorney Carson Grimm had failed to establish any direct effort on the part of Patino to take the life of Castillo.

Responding to Smith's motion, Grimm said the state had presented evidence establishing shots were fired and Patino, as driver of the vehicle from which the shots were fired, demonstrated his part in the incident by driving the vehicle in a pursuit mode while shots were fired at the car occupied by Castillo, 17-year-old Terrence Lopez and 18-year-old Rene Gomez. Lopez was wounded in the shooting and Gomez managed to escape injury by ducking down in the backseat.

Odessa pathologist Dr. Robert Bright, the first witness called by the state as testimony got under way just after 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, said the cause of Castillo's death appeared to be a bullet that struck him in the back of the head. The bullet that killed Castillo was reportedly fired from a 30.06 caliber rifle that has never been found by investigators.

Patrol Sgt. Frank Beam testified he found a .357 caliber revolver on the floorboard on the passenger side of the Lopez vehicle when he arrived at the scene. Beam stated he unloaded six live rounds of ammunition from the gun and replaced it. He also expressed the belief the gun had not been recently fired. Attorney Smith asked Beam if ballistics tests had been done on the gun. Beam said he didn't know if the Odessa Police Department had run any tests on the gun.

Smith, in an apparent effort to refute testimony that no shots had been fired from the Lopez vehicle, asked Beam if such tests would have determined if the gun had been fired and reloaded and Smith said yes.

Det. Greg Travalan followed Beam to the witness stand and identified the gun as a Dan Wesson .357 magnum that was found in a vehicle belonging to Lopez that was parked half on the sidewalk and half on the street near the intersection of West Clements and Summer Street.

Lopez, who was wounded in the neck and jaw, was accused by Smith of changing his testimony each time he testifies. Lopez stated his testimony is always the same and Smith didn't pursue the issue.

Gomez said he ducked down in the back of the car when he heard two shots. He said a total of five or six shots were fired at the rear and front of the Lopez car. The first shots, he said, were at the rear of the vehicle, then he saw the car driven by Robert Patino move ahead of them, make a U-turn, and more shots were fired at the front of the vehicle.

Gomez stated he saw Israel Patino leaning out of the other car and that he was holding a rifle.

Ex-judge running for state house

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Former Ector County Judge Gary Watkins Tuesday announced he will seek the 1986 Democratic nomination to run for the District 75 state representative seat now held by Republican Rep. Kelly Godwin.

The state economy, specifically jobs and taxes, will be the key issues in the 1986 campaign, Watkins said, noting that while the state budget rose dramatically in the last legislative session, funding was drastically reduced for University of Texas of the Permian Basin, the Texas Tech Regional Academic Health Center, Odessa College and the Ector County School district.

Saying reduced state funds for education means, in essence, Ector County and Odessa residents will be paying more and receiving less, Watkins said he'll work to see Ector County receives its fair share of funding for education.

Of particular concern, Watkins said, are rumblings in the House of Representatives about the possibility of a state income tax. The former Ector County judge contends implementation of a state income tax "could destroy the Texas economy."

Watkins is a past president of the Ector County Bar Association and Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission. He has served on the Odessa YMCA board of directors and currently is a director of the the American Red Cross Ector County Chapter and is a vice president of the Boy Scouts of America, Buffalo Trails Council.

Abbott stepping down from post on housing board

From Staff Reports

After 11 years of serving on the Midland Housing Authority Board of Commissioners, Gene Abbott is stepping down and turning it over to the younger generation.

During a Housing Authority meeting Tuesday at Hillcrest Manor, Abbott was recognized for his service, which began with the formation of the board in July 1974.

Ruth Wenck, board member, pointed out Abbott's "devoted and unselfish service in the community."

Abbott, who has served as chairman of the commission the past four years, said, "It's been my pleasure indeed to work in this particular program." Afterward, he said, "We've got some young people coming on."

Earlier in the meeting, Doug Henson was elected chairman and Steve Kiser vice chairman. Recently appointed to the board was Ciro Sanchez, and the City Council needs to fill one more vacancy.

A quarterly report updating the housing rehabilitation project showed each house in the 1984-85 program has had repairs averaging $6,174.51. With the $100,000 allotted that year from Community Development Block Grant money, 15 houses have been completed and the final is almost finished for a total of $98,792.31.

"This is 35 to 50 percent below other communities; we have no administrative overhead," said Henson of the cost per house.

The program has been administered through the Housing Authority and since it was started about four years ago has spent about $1.1 million on rehabilitating homes in south and east Midland. Another $75,000 will be given for 1985-86 and should be spent during the first six months of 1986.

Susan Howell, CD coordinator, said she and Rita Jimenez, director of the Human Relations Council, are studying ways to improve documentation that is required by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, which awards the CD grants.

Jury selection to start in Bobo trial

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Jury selection for the retrial of a 53-year-old man on a charge of indecency with a child was scheduled to get under way in 244th District Court this morning.

Gene Bobo initially faced trial on the charge in January 1985 in 161st District Court but the jury deadlocked, unable to reach a unanimous verdict, and Judge Tryon Lewis declared a mistrial.

Testimony during the first trial alleged Bobo exposed himself to a youth who had gone to his apartment to get some candy.

Several youths testifying during the first trial stated it was generally known Bobo would provide candy at reduced rates and that his apartment door was always open.

In connection with the indecency charge against him, Bobo is alleged to have appeared in the living room of his apartment, while a boy was present, wearing only an undershirt. The incident allegedly occurred Oct. 30, 1984.

Audit reveals MC in good shape

From Staff Reports

An audit of financial activities for 1984-85 revealed the Midland Junior College District is in a sound financial position, the board learned at its Tuesday meeting.

The audit, prepared by Main Hurdman Certified Public Accountants, included statements of current fund revenues, expenditures and changes in respective fund balances for the periods ending Aug. 31, 1984 and 1985.

According to the report, the college's assets increased by 26 percent from $2,660,087 in 1984 to $3,344,375 in 1985 while the total endowment fund increased by 13 percent from $2,325,236 in 1984 to $2,621,860 in 1985.

The audit also found that MC's expenses rose only slightly from $21,790,083 in 1984 to $22,075,267 in 1985.

MC President Dr. Jess Parrish praised trustees in their efforts to keep expenses low. He urged them to continue the same progress in 1986 due to MC's ineligibilty to collect additional state revenue.

In other business, trustees voted to purchase outright an AT&T System 75 telephone switch. The system, estimated to cost more than $100,000, should be installed by Jan. 1, according to Bob Phillips, vice president of fiscal affairs.

Trustees also heard a division presentation by Barbara Gideon, director of Adult Basic Education.

"I love this institution almost as much as I love Midland and its people," he said, "but Midland College must have the benefit of new perspectives and fresh ideas if it is to remain committed to the pursuit of excellence as it must be."

Hendrix, owner of John H. Hendrix Corporation, was unavailable for comment following the announcement. He is a member of the Midland College Foundation Board and also is active in other college and civic organizations, particularly the 1983 construction of the MC athletic dormitory.

"It took us quite some time to find a qualified replacement," trustee President Hoyle McCright said in announcing that Hendrix would be named successor.

"You couldn't have made a better choice. John loves this college," said Legg, who received adulation from fellow trustees during his final board meeting.

He commended the Board of Trustees, college President Dr. Jess Parrish, the faculty and administrative staff for their diligence in providing students with "a fine educational program."

Legg also expressed gratitude to all Midlanders for their support of Midland College.

"We live in the greatest city, among the finest people in the world," he said. "All of us share a tremendous pride in what Midland College is and in what it can become."

McCright, who accepted Legg's resignation "with regret," said "I can't speak for the other board members, but you may not realize how proud of you we are...You put the college on the map."

Trustee Jack Huff added, "It's always been a pleasure to work with Reagan. He's been a successful trustee in every sense of the word."

Mattox names Jack Hightower his assistant

STATE

State Attorney General Jim Mattox has named former Congressman Jack Hightower as first assistant attorney general and Mary F. Keller as executive assistant for litigation.

By DAVID ELLIOT
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In a surprise move, Attorney General Jim Mattox Tuesday announced the appointment of former U.S. Rep. Jack Hightower as first assistant attorney general.

Hightower, D-Vernon, represented the 13th Congressional District, which includes 33 West Texas counties, from 1975 to early 1985. He now assumes his duties as the second most powerful man in the attorney general's office.

In November 1984, U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, upset Hightower. Some political analysts thought Hightower would attempt to regain his seat, but Tuesday he effectively ruled out another congressional race.

"My wife and I came back to Texas several months ago, determined that we wanted to re-establish ourselves as 100 percent Texans," he said. "My future plans are to serve in this position to the best of my ability."

Mattox said Hightower "is one of the most honest, decent men" he worked with in Congress. "He adds a major new dimension to my office, with a vast knowledge of the West Texas and Panhandle area and of farming and ranching matters, oil and gas law and issues affecting small business owners," he said.

State Sen. Ray Farabee, thought several months ago to be a possible contender for attorney general, praised the appointment. "Jack will bring a formidable degree of experience to the job of first assistant," said Farabee, D-Wichita Falls. "He has been a district attorney and practicing member of the bar. He has been very dedicated to the state Legislature, and he has been an outstanding member of Congress."

> "He (Jack Hightower) adds a major new dimension to my office, with a vast knowledge of the West Texas and Panhandle area and of farming and ranching matters, oil and gas law and issues affecting small business owners...Mary (Keller) has earned the respect of attorneys, including those with many years of experience, in her handling of litigation."
> —Jim Mattox

Hightower replaces Dave Richards, ex-husband of Treasurer Ann Richards, who left the staff to form his own law firm.

Mattox also appointed Mary Keller as executive assistant for litigation. Ms. Keller is the first woman ever to hold the position of overseeing and supervising all litigation for the attorney general's office.

"Mary has proven herself to be a tough but fair lawyer during these past three years," Mattox said.

PAC agrees to fine

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Congressional Majority Committee has agreed to pay a $1,250 civil fine for violating campaign finance laws by sending out fundraising letters on behalf of Phil Gramm without the proper disclaimer, the Federal Election Commission says.

According to the FEC, the Arlington., Va. based-group wrote on the 15,000 letters, "Paid for and authorized by the Congressional Majority Committee. Not prepared or mailed at government expense," when it should have used the disclaimer, "Paid for by the Congressional Majority Committee. Not authorized by any candidate or candidate's committee."

Burglar escapes with jelly doughnuts

ARLINGTON (AP) — Police are keeping their eyes open for culprits with jelly-smeared faces.

Officers discovered early Monday that somone had smashed a plate glass window at a doughnut shop and stolen two dozen jelly-filed doughnuts.

"We've got an APB (all points bulletin) out for anyone with dried red jelly on their face," joked police spokesman Jim Willett. "At least that would be probable cause to question them. I believe that would stand up in court."

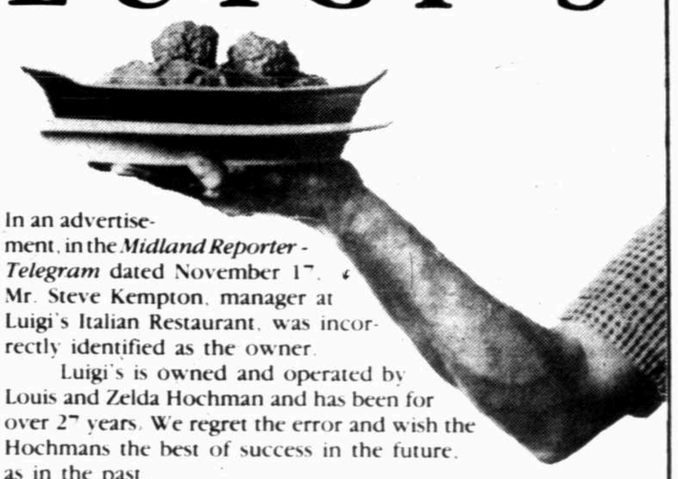

Police didn't have any problems finding an investigator qualified to handle the case, Willett said.

"Fortunately, we've got lots of cops here who are experts on doughnuts, so we can give it to anyone," he said.

Dallas artist's design of eagles may adorn U.S. $50 gold coin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sculptor Miley Busiek's American bald eagles soon may nest in vaults and shoeboxes around the world.

Her design of a family of eagles has been selected by legislators for the first general circulation $50 gold coin minted by the United States in more than 50 years.

It took the Dallas artist four years of lobbying Congress and the Treasury Department to get her dream this close to reality.

The design for the one-ounce gold piece calls for art symbolic of liberty on one side. On the other side would be her eagles, with a male bird carrying an olive branch and flying above a nest containing a female eagle and eaglets.

"This coin, which will be sold all over the world, will show what America stands for — freedom, peace and caring," Ms. Busiek said in a telephone interview as she worked at a foundry in Loveland, Colo.

If the House approves, as expected, the $50 coin and three other U.S.-minted gold coins of lesser denomination could become available to the public in October 1986. With little fanfare, the Senate last week passed a bill authorizing production and sale of the gold coins, although the Reagan administration has not formally approved the idea.

Designs of $25, $10 and $5 coins were not in the pending bill.

The coins would be legal tender to buy or sell merchandise. But it is expected they will be sought mainly by collectors and investors.

"The American gold coin will hit this country by storm," said Rep. Jerry Lewis, R-Calif. The Treasury would sell the gold coins to the public at a price equal to the market value of bullion at the time of sale, plus the cost of minting, marketing and distribution.

"The United States has not produced gold coins for circulation since 1932," Lewis said.

President Reagan asked for a report from the Treasury on the feasibility of producing an American gold coin for general circulation when he banned further importation of South Africa's Krugerrand.

A source who spoke on the condition of anonymity said the Treasury report, which will go to the president after he returns from Geneva, is favorable toward minting the gold coin.

Lewis said that in 1984 alone, the United States had a gold coin trade deficit of more than $1 billion. He said $400 million of that deficit went directly to the South African government for the trading of the Krugerrand.

The United States has issued limited edition gold coins.

The Treasury plans to issue a $5 gold piece this fall to be sold for $175 apiece to help raise money to renovate the Statue of Liberty.

"It's wonderful to be able to do something for your country, but at the same time, have something concrete you can hold in your hand," Busiek said.

Ms. Busiek said she first got the idea aboard an airplane when she saw published report that Reagan was setting up a commission to review whether the United States should return to a system in which the value of dollar should be tied to gold. Eventually, the panel decided it should not.

"It, hopefully, is symbolic of what America stands for: the family," said the 43-year-old mother of two sons.

Prosectors want teen tried as adult in rape-slaying

YOAKUM (AP) — A teen-ager who admitted the rape-slaying of a 38-year-old Yoakum woman is being held in Lavaca County jail so prosecutors can have him certified as an aduult, officials said.

The 15-year-old boy, also from Yoakum, was arrested Friday after he admitted to the killing, said Guadalupe County District Attorney W.C. Kirkenedall, who is assisting Lavaca County authorities in the case.

State District Judge B.B. Schraub ordered the youth held so prosecutors can seek to have him certified as an adult and pursue a capital murder charge, Kirkendall said.

The teen-ager is being held in the Nov. 13 sexaual assault and strangulation death of Cathy Chapman, 38, Kirkendall said.

Ms. Chapman was found dead in her home last week by her teen-age son, he said.

More speeders ticketed

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 1,000 speeding tickets have been handed out and seven drunken drivers arrested since Austin police received additional federal funds for traffic enforcement, officials say.

Senior patrol officer Charley Chapman said the drive against traffic violators was reactivated the first two weeks of November after the city received $192,000 for the speeding program and $122,590 for enforcement against those driving while intoxicated.

The federal money matches or augments funds allocated by the city.

Chapman said the four officers working overtime to hand out speeding tickets had been writing an average of 67 tickets a day.

Kickapoos to take oath

EAGLE PASS (AP) — Kickapoo Indians based in Eagle Pass will begin taking their oaths for U.S. citizenship Thursday morning at their reservation, a U.S. immigration official said.

Members of the tribe along the U.S.-Mexico border were awarded Mexican citizenships and a reservation and signed peace treaties with the U.S. in 1815. They were not recognized by the U.S. until 1983 after many years of campaigning and lobbying and finally received recognition as a Texas Indian tribe in May of this year.

Nakai Breen, long-time spokesman for the Kickapoo, said that at her last count there were 45 members of the tribe who wished to take their citizenship oath.

Those that do not wish to become citizens will be termed "permanent residents," according to Mario Ortiz of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Dallas.

U.S, Vietnamese team digs up pieces of plane

YEN THUONG, Vietnam (AP) — A U.S.-Vietnamese team pulled four more pieces of a shattered U.S. aircraft out of the wet earth today, the second day of a search for the remains of four American airmen believed killed in the crash.

U.S. Army men and Vietnamese workers, in an extraordinary show of cooperation nearly 13 years after American forces withdrew from Vietnam, extracted pieces of webbing, aluminum, fiberglass and fuel tank lining. The remnants were stored for later analysis in the United States, along with human bone fragments found Tuesday.

The Vietnamese say a B-52 bomber with four crew members crashed at the site on Dec. 20, 1972, after being hit by missiles. They say two other airmen who parachuted from the bomber were taken prisoner and later released.

"Everything I've seen so far suggests that this is the place where some American aircraft wreckage came to Earth. I don't have enough evidence yet to characterize the type of aircraft," said Col. Joe Harvey of Temple, Texas, who is head of the U.S. team and of the U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center.

Meanhile, Vietnamese Foreign Ministry official Nguyen The Dang said the remains of seven missing Americans that Vietnam plans to return were found in the Hanoi-Haiphong area with the help of local villagers. Vietnamese experts have matched the remains with names of American airmen, said Nguyen.

Vietnam has promised to hand over the remains immediately after the completion of the joint excavation, expected to last about 10 more days.

First Sgt. Dave Kelly of the Army's Central Identification Laboratory said he and other workers breaking down the clumps of soil found about 18 small bone fragments on the first day of digging but that no bones were found early today.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Afghan guerrillas may have captured senior Soviet adviser

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Guerrillas battling Afghanistan's Marxist government may have captured a Soviet air force general after shooting his plane down last week, Western diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

The sources, speaking on condition they not be identified, said information from Afghanistan indicated the general was shot down Nov. 11 in western Afghanistan while flying a single-seat MiG-21 jet fighter.

They said their information from a diplomatic source in Kabul, the Afghan capital, did not identify the general but claimed he was a senior adviser to the Afghan air force at the air base at Bagram. The general reportedly was flying to the western city of Kandahar when his plane was downed.

Soviet ground forces searching for the general found only his parachute, indicating he might have been captured by the anti-communist rebels, according to the report.

Human chain links embassies

MADRID, Spain (AP) — More than a thousand people formed a human chain Tuesday between the U.S. and Soviet embassies in Madrid as President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev opened their summit meeting in Geneva.

The Movement for Peace, Disarmament and Liberty organized the chain of hand-clasping people that was more than a half mile long.

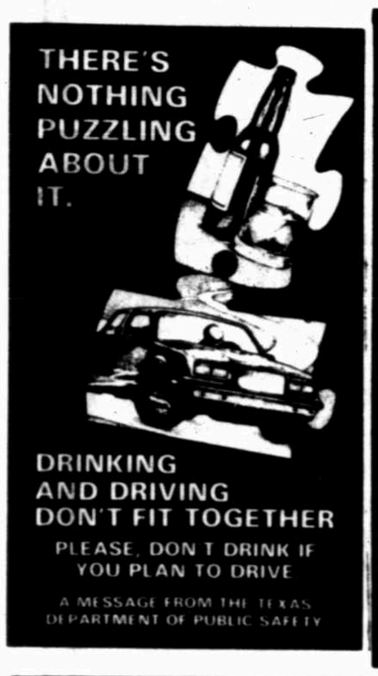

Movement leaders delivered letters to both embassies urging the superpowers to reach agreements on disarmament. The demonstrators then dispersed peacefully.

Egyptian students end sit-ins

ASSIYUT, Egypt (AP) — Three days of hunger strikes and sit-ins by thousands of students protesting police interference in university elections ended Tuesday, but students threatened further action if authorities reneged on their promises.

Hours after about 300 students ended a hunger strike and several thousand others abandoned sit-ins, some student members of fundamentalist Islamic groups said they had been tricked by promises that their demands would be met.

About 600,000 students in Egypt's 17 universities are choosing representatives in elections that end Sunday. Security authorities routinely delete from the ballots the names of students with extremist political views.
