Campaign will echo 1980's effort

Convention's close chaotic

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

DALLAS — The glitter fell and the cheers went up on the close of the 1984 Republican National Convention as the orchestrated chaos turned into unorganized madness in the final moments.

But the adrenalin spout that was turned on as a trickle Monday with the opening speech by U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick overflowed the delegates Thursday night and poured out into the aisles. Midlanders and others in the Texas delegation were inspired to go home and spread the good word immediately about the Reagan-Bush ticket...the exact effect hoped for by the re-election committee.

This convention was by far the most organized, the most inspiring and the most fun, according to delegates who have been to several. Neither the ticket nor the platform will be hard to sell, they said.

"I sat there thinking what all I had to do Monday morning to get the campaign rolling in Midland," said David Godfrey, an alternate from Midland and a chairman of the county Reagan-Bush '84 committee.

"People are getting fired up to go home and campaign," agreed Tom Craddick, a state representative from Midland. In visiting with delegates from other states, Craddick said he had heard no negative comments about selling the campaign or platform to those parts of the country.

"There's a new feeling of people wanting to do something for America," Bob Monaghan yelled amid the cacophonous pandemonium of the convention's closing. "There's a different mood than I've ever seen."

He's convinced the platform outlining the attitude and goals of the GOP will sell. Going from the airport to the hotel when he arrived in Dallas, the taxi driver wondered aloud how the Reagan program could be fair.

Monaghan said he talked to the man about the lower taxes, lower inflation rate and lower interest rates. "By the time we got to my hotel, the driver said he was going to vote for Reagan."

Lou Brown, a Midland delegate who sat next to Arnold Swarzenegger and behind Charleton Heston during the final night, said the Republicans are vacillating between being too complacent about the campaign to being too scared the Democrats will win.

Eddie Chiles, the Fort Worth millionaire who made his fortune in the West Texas oil patch, has been to several national conventions, but never one this exciting or thrilling, he said.

Monaghan agreed this gathering far exceeded the three previous conventions he has attended.

Chiles predicted this campaign year "will be a turning point in this country. The whole campaign, the whole platform; everything Reagan and Bush stand for will be for the improvement of America.

Reagan heads for Chicago

By MAUREEN SANTINI
AP White House Correspondent

CHICAGO — President Reagan, after launching his re-election campaign with a political festival of film and flag-waving, made it clear today he will attack Walter F. Mondale with echoes of the winning themes he used four years ago against Jimmy Carter.

Flying to Chicago to address a Veterans of Foreign Wars Convention after delivering a pep-talk to Republican Party officials in Dallas, Reagan described the Carter presidency as "a dismal chapter of failed policies and self-doubt."

In his prepared remarks to the VFW's 85th national convention, the president recalled that he had addressed their meeting four years earlier "and when you think back to 1980, it's hard to forget the mess America was in."

He cited his familiar indictment of the Carter years: "The foolish talk of malaise, the unfairness of runaway price increases, 21½ percent interest rates, weakened defenses, Americans held hostage and the loss of respect for our nation abroad."

Reagan added: "I think we've come a long way together. In fact, I believe we've closed the books on that dismal chapter of failed policies and self-doubt. May it never return."

Before he left Dallas, the president called on Republican Party officials to "get out the word" that the GOP is the party of new ideas while the Democrats are "the party of the tried and not-true."

Reagan and Vice President George Bush made a joint appearance at the post-convention meeting of the Republican National Committee.

The president told the meeting of party officials from every state that the election would be a battle of ideas "and we will wage it with joy and vigor."

"This year offers us an historic opportunity to get across an historic truth: that we are the party of new ideas, we are the party of the future, we are the party whose philosophy is vigorous and dynamic," said the president. "And they — they — are the party of the tried and not-true."

In his speech accepting nomination Thursday night for a second term, Reagan defined the choice in November as between Democratic promises and Republican "proven, workable answers."

Before cheering delegates, Reagan confronted Walter F. Mondale's tax challenge by portraying the Democrats as "drunken sailor" spenders who want to raise taxes. The president said he and Bush would hold the line against higher taxes.

The Republican incumbents launched their re-election effort with echoes of the winning themes of four years ago — opposition to taxes and big government and pledges to expand the nation's military strength.

Reagan continue that theme at the RNC meeting. "It's clear the opposition has only one innovation to offer — a huge tax increase," he said.

The closing convention session Thursday night was the moment delegates awaited after three days of sitting emotionally unmoved in the cool hall while outside temperatures rose to 100-plus.

At last their hero appeared before them, and the 17,000 delegates and guests, armed with signs and noisemakers, cheered themselves hoarse, shouting "Four more years. Four more years." Not since 1972, when Richard M. Nixon was renominated, had that chant been heard with such enthusiasm at a GOP convention.

And the president gave them what they wanted, vintage Reagan, an acceptance speech in which he never mentioned Mondale by name but said, "Our opponents are openly committed to increasing your tax burden. We are committed to stopping them and we will."

He said the Democrats "spend money like drunken sailors but that would be unfair to drunken sailors. The sailors are spending their own money."

Young Republicans focus on economy

Teens agree nation 'better off than four years ago'

By STEPHANIE SLEWKA

DALLAS — "This is not the time to be a Democrat.

"If people were starving, if things got bad, I'd be a Democrat," said a 17-year-old member of Teen-age Republicans at a reception hosted by the Young Republican National Federation.

For Young Republicans, the economy seems to be the main factor in the decision to become a Republican.

Things are not bad, according to most young Republicans. We are "by all means better off than we were four years ago," said Rhonda Beckham, a black state representative from the 25th ditrict of Ohio. She added "the people in my district have gone back to work."

"When I was 16 and Carter was in office, I couldn't get a job. Now I'm 19 and I can. Last summer I found a job in construction for nearly $100 a day," said Mark Stuart of Dallas.

"When I talk to an 18 year-old about becoming a Republican, I say, 'are you going to have a job when you get out of high school, are you going to have a job when you get out of college?'" said Mike Thomas, 24-year-old chairman of the Virginia YRNF.

Young Republicans feel that President Reagan is in control of the economy. "The Republicans have an appreciation for the value of money," said Dan McCormack, a sales representative in his mid-20s. "I like the fact he's (Reagan) trying to balance the budget without raising taxes," explained 19 year-old Billy Roberts.

Reaganomics allows everyone an equal opportunity to be successful, according to Sidney Harrison, a Virginia YRNF organizer. He said,"people are the first priority in America and they have an opportunity to go forward. You have to do things for yourself in this life. Jesse Jackson's continual effort to keep people dependent on the government is beyond belief."

Of the Democrats, Harrison says, "we never got sidetracked in liberal philosophy, we just don't understand what they're talking about."

Young Republicans are also concerned about defense. Of 13 youngsters asked about the United States' invasion of Grenada, all said they approved of it. "It was a beautiful act," said 19 year-old Mark O'Leary. "It was the highlight of the administration. It's the first time the U.S. has rolled back communism," agreed Howard Foster, 21.

Young Republicans feel a hard line in foreign policy is necessary to stop communism. "Carter got pushed around," and "America got walked all over," are two common comments.

Some youngsters, however, joined the Republican Party for other reasons, they said. Several joined because their parents were Republicans, while two young women became Republicans because "young Republican men are more clean-cut, more professional and more career-oriented."

Sikh forces hijack Indian jetliner to Pakistan

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India — Sikh militants hijacked an Indian jetliner carrying 93 people today, forced it to fly to Pakistan and threatened to kill the passengers one by one and blow up the plane, authorities said.

About eight hours after the jet landed in Pakistan, the domestic news agency reported all the passengers were set free. Government spokesman Mohammad Sharif promptly denied the report. "There is no truth to the APP (the domestic news agency) story," he said.

This morning, Pakistani officials began refueling the plane in response to the hijackers' demand for fuel for a flight to the United States. A Pakistani government spokesman, Younis M. Sethi, said the hijackers had released two Norwegian women who were ill. One of the women apparently suffered a heart attack and was rushed to a hospital, he said.

The Indian Airlines Boeing 737 with 87 passengers and six crew members was commandeered on a domestic flight from New Delhi to Srinagar, capital of northern Kashmir state. It was diverted to Lahore, Pakistan, airline officials in India said. The plane, flight IC425, was hijacked after a stop in Chandigarh at 7:25 a.m. (9:55 p.m. EDT Thursday).

Radio Pakistan said there were six hijackers, but there was no report on what type of weapons they carried. Authorities closed Lahore airport and diverted incoming flights after the commandeered plane landed.

The nationalities of the passengers were not known. The United News of India said the passenger list included 67 men, 14 women and six children, one of them an infant. The crew was made up of two pilots, a chief purseur and three female flight attendants, UNI said.

The Pakistani government said the threat was made at 11:40 a.m. local time (2:40 a.m. EDT), and Sethi said it was being repeated "every five minutes."

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA U.S. Dept. of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

Clear skies for most of the nation are forecast through Saturday by the National Weather Service. Showers are expected from the central Rockies to the northern Plains and from northern Florida to coastal South Carolina.

Slim chance for continued thunderstorms forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Although isolated thunderstorms are predicted, Midlanders are not likely to experience much more rain. According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport the probablity of rain tonight and Saturday is less than 20 percent.

Partly cloudy skies will accompany temperatures in the upper 60s tonight with winds from the south at 10 to 15 mph. Conditions will continue through Saturday with highs in the mid-90s.

The 1977 record set for Thursday was 15 degrees below the recorded temperature of 91. The low of 66 set this morning was nine degrees above the 1966 record of 57.

STATE

Scattered showers continued to fall over the Panhandle and East Texas this morning as a weak surface trough of low pressure stretched form Louisiana across North Central Texas over the Edwards Plateau.

Skies across the remainder of the state were fair to partly cloudy this morning because of a high pressure system anchored over the state.

Violent weather struck last night south of Amarillo. Either high winds or a tornado five miles west of Canyon caused $40,000 to West Texas State University's Nance Farm Swine Center, authorities said. Several buildings were damaged but none of the animals were hurt.

Reagan knows it's no 'cake walk'

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — President Reagan, after accepting his party's nomination to seek a renewal of his 1980 mandate, warned Republican Party leaders today that "1984 isn't a cake walk" just because he's ahead in the polls.

"This is no time to sit on our laurels," Reagan told the post-convention meeting of the Republican National Committee.

And to show he meant it, the president set off for Chicago to campaign before the Veterans of Foreign Wars before returning east for a weekend in the comfort of his Camp David retreat atop Maryland's Catoctin Mountain.

In remarks prepared for the veterans, Reagan rejected critics' suggestions that his decision to send American troops into Grenada showed he couldn't be trusted with the nation's nuclear arsenal.

"Because we were willing to take decisive action, our students today are safe, Grenada is free, and that region of the Caribbean is more peaceful and secure than before," Reagan said. "But let no one confuse that situation with an inescapable reality of the modern age.

"When it comes to our nuclear forces, I've said it before, and I'll say it again: A nuclear war cannot be won and must never be fought."

Recalling his campaign speech to the VFW convention four years ago, in which he attacked Jimmy Carter's leadership, Reagan said, "Well, I think we've come a long way together ... Gone are the days when we abandoned principle and common sense. Gone are the days when we meekly tolerated obvious threats to our peace and security. Gone are the days when we either sought to achieve overnight grandiose arms control agreements that were bound to fail or when we set our sights so low that the agreements permitted the numbers and categories of weapons to soar."

Rejecting Walter F. Mondale's attacks on his administration's record budget deficits, Reagan said Mondale — whose name he never used — "has only recently found budget deficits alarming. Nearly ten years ago he insisted...we sometimes 'need a deficit in order to stimulate the economy.'"

Reagan said Democrats "should be experts on budget deficits. They've spent most of their political careers creating deficits."

For nearly 50 years, Reagan said, "deficit spending has been their deliberate policy."

In a speech interrupted every sentence or two by chanting, cheering, howling delegates, one of Reagan's best-loved lines dealt with Democrats' spending habits.

"We could say they spend money like drunken sailors," Reagan said, "but that would be unfai to drunken sailors." When the crowd finally let him continue, he added, "I was going to say, it would be unfair to drunken sailors because the sailors are spending their own money."

CHAOS

"There's no better place for the working man," Chiles continued. "It was one of the finest acceptance speeches I've ever heard. It gives promise for Americans. It sums up that America is the only place in the world where people can find freedom and exercise their liberties."

Godfrey said he believes the platform fits what the country wants. "It's moving more toward traditional family values."

Before a film introduction on President Reagan came on the overhead screen, the aisles at the front — where the Texas delegation was located — began filling with young people carrying placards.

During the speech, more people crowded toward the front and the aisles became as packed as a can of sardines. People were literally walking over delegates in their chairs, being lifted by others in the aisles or breathing down the necks of others. Emotion rolled over the audience as Ray Charles closed the evening with a patriotic song and they clasped hands.

With a "Hook 'Em Horns" sign from some on the podium the convention was concluded.

Campaign schedule will put Bush back on road quickly

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Keep your bags packed, George Bush. The campaign plane is waiting.

That's the message the vice president will find on his desk when he returns to Washington from the Republican National Convention. Much more than President Reagan, Bush will hit the hustings this fall, trumpeting the administration's record and decrying the failings of the Jimmy Carter-Walter Mondale years.

While Bush's specific role is still being refined by the Reagan-Bush re-election committee, he is experienced enough to know that vice presidents are expected to smile their way through a grueling schedule of four and five-day-a-week campaign stints, week after week.

"My job is to support the top of the ticket, to travel extensively around the country without regard to any region or another, in other words, not part of any regional strategy," Bush said. "I think it's more of a national approach.

"I expect that if there's a disproportionate amount of time spent any place, it might be in my home state of Texas."

That's a good guess, and not only because it's his adopted home. With a whopping 29 electoral votes, more than a tenth of the 270 needed to win the White House, Texas is one of a handful of key battleground states in the 1984 race.

But watch for Bush elsewhere. Say, in Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Florida and the West.

"You have to have a presence in order to build spirit, in order to build organization, to increase voter registration, to get your troops fired up," said White House chief of staff James A. Baker. "If the president is not available to do a lot of that, the vice president is the very best surrogate to accomplish it."

In Bush's words, he will "take our message out, outside of the major news centers of New York and Washington, and travel on the campaign with a positive message."

He begins his mission today, flying to New Hampshire for a fund-raiser for Gov. John H. Sununu. Next come speeches Sunday in Washington, D.C., and Monday on Long Island. The official campaign kickoff is Sept. 2 in Norfolk, Va., followed by a three-day swing into southern states.

Bush also has an unprecedented mission this year — trying to blunt any excitement generated by the fact that his opponent is a woman.

Bush says the polls haven't shown the Democrats with any edge because of Geraldine Ferraro, the first female vice presidential candidate of a major party. Indeed, a telephone survey by NBC News taken between Aug. 12-14 gives Reagan and Bush a 23-point lead over Mondale and Ms. Ferraro. Other polls have shown lesser but still significant leads for Reagan and Bush.

In the NBC poll, Reagan topped Mondale among both men and women. Ms. Ferraro was known by only 52 percent of the public.

For his part, Bush insists he's not doing anything differently because he faces a woman.

"I've hailed her appointment as historic and I think you just treat it the same. ... You've had plenty of senatorial and congressional races involving women and I don't think you have a choice on this, I don't think you can have a preference."

Ms. Ferraro's selection has focused an extraordinary interest in the vice presidential race, and that will translate into a closer scrutiny of both Bush and Ms. Ferraro.

Out of a desire for privacy, and perhaps to lessen the chances of miscues becoming publi, it appears certain that Bush's staff will bar reporters from traveling on the vice president's plane. Instead, the press will ride on a chartered airliner while Bush relaxes on Air Force II secure in the knowledge that his every move isn't being monitored.

In the coming weeks, Bush must decide whether to debate Ms. Ferraro. While Bush says that is his decision to make, he surely will listen to campaign advisers who will be trying to figure out if he has anything to gain from confronting her. Speaking privately, some White House aides express fear Bush will be bested by Ms. Ferraro.

In any debate, should Bush be tough? Should he be courtly? Should he act like her gender doesn't make any difference?

"I've gotten tons of advice on that," Bush said. "I've already gotten some mail on it. Some are saying 'Be careful.' Some are saying, 'Be tough.' Some are saying, 'Be gentlemanly.' I mean, we've got opinions from all over the place."

What's the best advice? "I haven't tried to sort it out," Bush said.

CAMPAIGN

His speech was scheduled for 20 minutes but took 50 minutes to deliver because of frequent interruptions for applause and cheers and for a continuing dialogue between Reagan and his audience which answered his rhetorical questions with shouts of "no" or "yes" or prolonged boos aimed at the Democrats.

When he finished, thousands of red and white balloons dropped from the ceiling and for 15 minutes the delegates resumed their chanting, cheering and marching while the Reagans and Bushes looked on from the rostrum.

From the committee meeting, Reagan and Bush went their separate ways, the president to address the VFW and his running mate to New Hampshire for a fund-raiser for GOP Gov. John Sununu.

Bush had no hesitancy about mentioning Mondale's name in his acceptance speech.

He cited "Mr. Mondale's first promise — a solemn promises to raise everyone's taxes," a reference to Mondale's statement in his acceptance speech last month in San Francisco that "Mr. Reagan will raise taxes, and so will I. He won't tell you. I just did."

Reagan was introduced by an 18-minute film so promotional that two television networks, CBS and ABC, broadcast only excerpts. Two others, NBC and CNN, broadcast the entire film.

"I feel more patriotic...I'm proud to be an American," said people in the opening scenes. They were followed by scenes of Reagan in the White House and at the Demilitarized Zone in Korea, in a chow line with U.S. troops.

There were scenes of the assassination attempt in 1981 during which the president was shot in the chest, and then it was on to the president in China and on the Normandy coast where allied troops landed on D-Day in 1944.

Finally, there was Reagan at his California ranch, riding a white horse.

The lights went up, a voice announced, "The President of the United States," and Reagan stepped to the microphones.

The president said voters are presented "with the clearest political choice of half a century" and defined the difference as between a Democratic "government of pessimism, fear, and limits...or ours of hope, confidence and growth."

Iraqi sources claim rocketing of Cypriot tanker

AP Laserphoto Map

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraqi warplanes rocketed a ship south of Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal today, and shipping sources said a Cypriot tanker captain radioed that his vessel had been hit and set afire, forcing the crew to abandon ship.

In Baghdad, the Iraqi military spokesman said jetfighters "successfully raided and effectively hit a big naval target" south of Kharg, Iran's main oil terminal.

Iraq did not identify its victim, but the term "big naval target" is commonly used by Iraq to refer to a tanker. It was the second attack on gulf shipping claimed by Iraq within 24 hours.

The attack today was confirmed by Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit in London, which said the master of the 31,280-ton Cypriot tanker Amethyst sent an SOS a half-hour after the attack saying the ship, which had picked up oil at Kharg six hours earlier, was burning badly and needed helicopter assistance.

Shipping sources in Bahrain, who spoke on condition they remain anonymous, said later attempts to contact the vessel were futile. They said tugboats in the area rushed to the rescue, after hearing the distress signal.

Lloyd's said the ship was managed by Troodos Shipping and Trading Ltd., London.

Iraq, trying to enforce an economic blockade to weaken the Iranian war effort, has warned that merchant vessels sailing to or from Iran would risk being attacked by the Iraqi air force.Iraq's blockade, begun in February, is aimed at forcing Iran to accept a compromise settlement ending the Iran-Iraq war, which began in September 1980 over a border dispute.

About 40 ships have been hit in the gulf region since February. Most of the attacks have been claimed by Iraq, while Iran denies the widespread contention that it has carried out some of the attacks in retalation.

Arson blamed for book depository fire

DALLAS (AP) — Fire officials are blaming arson for a blaze that caused $250,000 in damage to the former Texas School Book Depository from where President John F. Kennedy's assassin allegedly fired the fatal shot nearly 21 years ago.

"We're ruling it an arson because there were two points of origin and because we've eliminated most of the possible accidental causes," said Chief Dick Langran of the city Fire Department's arson section.

Officials said the fire started at in the seven-story red brick building's basement where photographs, documents and newspaper articles on the Kennedy assassination were stored.

Investigators discovered the remains of a pile of papers and wood furniture near the north end of the basement that had been used to start the fire, Langran said. The second point of origin was located near the stairwell at the southwest corner of the building, he said.

Capt. Lewis Eppes, with the Arson Division of the Dallas Fire Department, said investigators late Thursday were still trying to determine how the fire was set. No suspects were in custody, Eppes said.

He declined to speculate on a motive and said authorities "have no indication that it was related to the (Republican National) convention."

Lindalyn Adams, president of a historical foundation that plans to open a museum on the musty sixth floor, said the basement contained newspapers and books about Kennedy. The Hertz rent-a-car sign that sat atop the building at the time of the Nov. 22, 1963, assassination was in the basement, but was not damaged, she said.

"It's not that bad," she said after fire officials allowed her to briefly inspect the inside of the building. "It's a relief."

STATE

Clements worries about overconfidence

DALLAS (AP) — Most Texas Republicans left the GOP National Convention bragging about unity and victory, but at least one was worried that might be premature.

"Overconfidence and complacency is the disease that can kill us," said former GOP Gov. Bill Clements, ousted in 1982 after a single term as the state's first Republican governor in 104 years.

"I see symptoms of this right now. If we let overconfidence set in, and we get complacent, we're going to lose it. Other than that, we're going to win it," Clements said Thursday night as the convention ended.

Ernest Angelo Jr., GOP National Committee member from Midland and leader of the 218-member Texas delegation, said he had the best of feelings about the convention.

"I don't see how it could be any better," Angelo said.

He also had good feelings about the GOP's chances in November.

"I think it looks good across the board at the moment. You're always in kind of a political high after a convention, so you're always close to the peak.

"But the Democrats are in a little more disarray than usual. That, coupled with popularity of president and of our candidate in the Senate race, may allow for some surprises (further down the ticket)," Angelo said.

"What we've wanted to get out of this convention is the kickoff of our campaign, something that will put people in a frenzy," said George Strake of Houston, Texas Republican Party chairman.

Strake, who earlier had said he wanted to guard against overconfidence among GOP loyalists, said he believed the convention would fire up his troops.

"This convention has set the theme for our campaign. The Democrats have given up the mainstream of Texas. Unless our Texas delegates and our Texas party fall asleep, I think President Reagan will win handily."

Clements, too, said he thought Reagan was on his way to another victory in Texas, the nation's third-largest state.

"The tone is, we're going to win. The people of Texas fully support Ronald Reagan. When I say fully support, I mean the large majority of Texans," the former governor said.

Sen. John G. Tower, who is retiring this year after 23 years in Washington, said he believed the convention has led to a spirit and platform that will prove attractive not only to Republican voters but to Democrats.

"I think we'll have more and more people actively identifying with the Republican Party. We're in pretty good shape becuse the economy is in good shape. That influences our political fortunes this year," Tower said.

Anne Armstrong, former U.S. ambassador to Great Britain, said that although some moderates complained about their inability to win on proposals for the party platform, Reagan and Vice President George Bush will make strong candidates.

"They've had a superb record for the past four years. Jobs. This is what Americans care about and should care about the most," Mrs. Armstrong said.

While the convention delegates approved a conservative platform and touted feelings of unity, outside the convention some moderate Republicans expressed concern about the party's direction.

Strong showings may be good news for GOP

DALLAS (AP) — The strong early showings in Texas for the GOP presidential and U.S. Senate tickets may indicate more good news for Republicans, state party officials say.

"The Republican Party of Texas is a growing effort. We've got a lot of new people participating, and we're proud of it," said Ernest Angelo Jr. of Midland, who headed the state delegation to the national convention.

The opinion poll leads held by President Reagan and Senate hopeful Phil Gramm could hold up until the Nov. 6 election, Angelo said Thursday. And if they do, "it may allow for some surprises in the congressional districts," he said.

At present, Republicans hold six of the 27 seats Texas has in the U.S. House of Representatives and one of two Senate seats.

GOP strategists say they have candidates in some districts who — given big wins by Reagan and Senate candidate Phil Gramm — might be able to oust Democratic incumbents.

One of those being touted is Beau Boulter, an Amarillo lawyer, who is running against five-term Democrat Jack Hightower in the 13th Congressional District.

Boulter was one of a handful of congressional candidates chosen to speak to the Republican convention this week. A former city commissioner, he says he decided last year to run because of Hightower's failure to consistently support Reagan's budget and tax plans.

Hightower was one of only two Texas delegates to the Democratic National Convention who refused to vote for Walter Mondale's nomination, favoring Sen. John Glenn instead. And Boulter admits he can't try to portray Hightower as a liberal.

"I've never said he is a liberal. He is largely perceived as one who is not only a conservative, but who in the past has supported some of President Reagan's policies," Boulter said.

Dallas Democrats happy to bid GOP goodbye

DALLAS (AP) — Somehow, the city's official motto for the Republican National Convention — "Working Together" — was lost on Jim McCasland.

"Let them have their convention and get out of town," McCasland, secretary-treasurer for the local AFL-CIO, says.

It was a good week for McCasland and other Democrats to stay home. The town was decked out for the GOP.

The convention ended Thursday with the GOP delegates screaming praises of their president. But local Democrats know the opposition's influence around here does not depend on an invasion of thousands of out-of-town Republicans.

"We haven't really been going through any hell. It's just life as usual. This is Republican paradise. Our newspapers are Republican. Our TV and media are Republican. Everything is Republican here," said Dallas County Democratic Chairman Mike McKool.

It's so Republican that Democrats would be thrilled if Walter Mondale gets about 44 percent of the county vote.

The GOP convention apparently raised the ire of some Democrats. The phone at the local Democratic headquarters, a few blocks from the fancy hotel where the Texas GOP delegation stayed, became a complaint hot line.

A woman who identified herself as Mildred, the only person on hand Thursday, said the phone "has been ringing and ringing with complaints" all week.

Twinkies on sale for $9 billion

DALLAS (AP) — At the Reagan bake sale, Hostess Twinkies went for $9 billion — each.

Members of the satirical group Ladies Against Women set up an ironing board outside Reunion Area, where President Reagan held a prayer breakfast Thursday, saying they wanted to do their bit to ease the federal deficit.

"You have to sell a lot of Hostess Twinkies to raise $200 billion," said a Ladies Against Women member dubbed Mrs. Chester Cholesterol.

Plunked down next to Mrs. Cholesterol were signs reading "Born to Clean" and "Ban the Poor."

For a few billion dollars, a customer could buy delectable Lysol-sanitized American Pie decorated with a flag, spray-on processed cheddar cheese food, Cool Whip and a variety of Hostess products.

In town for the Republican National Convention, Ladies Against Women have become a familiar sight around Dallas.

On Wednesday, they mingled with a crowd of well-dressed Republican women outside a luncheon hosted by Nancy Reagan at the plush Loews Anatole Hotel.

Mrs. Cholesterol sported buttons bearing slogans such as "I'd Rather Be Ironing" and "Tupperware Preserves the Family" on her pink polyester dress. A polka-dotted bow adorned her white hat.

She and her colleagues, Mrs. T. Bill Banks and the Rev. Jerry Fallout, profess to be avid fans of the Reagans.

Zaccaro: I believed investment 'prudent'

NEW YORK (AP) — John Zaccaro says he borrowed $175,000 from the holdings of an elderly woman whose estate he was appointed to manage because "as a businessman, I believed the investments were prudent ... to preserve the estate and enhance it."

The husband of Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro made the remarks in state court in Queens on Thursday during a hearing on his actions as the woman's financial guardian.

Judge Edwin Kassoff is expected to issue a decision in the case within 30 days, but Zaccaro's lawyer said outside the courtroom, "It's in everyone's interest that the decision be made promptly."

Zaccaro is accused of improper "self-dealing" with the money of Alice Phelan, 84, and could be reprimanded or removed as conservator of her estate.

The New York Times, meanwhile, reported Zaccaro obtained postponement of a June hearing into the matter so it would not interfere with the Democratic National Convention, where his wife was chosen the vice-presidential nominee.

There was no indication, the Times also said, that Zaccaro volunteered information on the pending court hearings on the loans during a July 10 interview with a lawyer for Mondale.

Dayton Duncan, a Mondale deputy press secretary, declined to discuss the matter. Ms. Ferraro has said through a spokesman that she first learned of the loans two weeks ago.

Asked Thursday night about the postponement of the June 28 hearing, Ferraro campaign deputy press secretary Barbara Dixon replied, "We have no answers." She said that she was awaiting responses from Zaccaro's lawyers.

Zaccaro made two loans from Mrs. Phelan's accounts to his real estate management company, P. Zaccaro Co., which had Ms. Ferraro as a part owner and director. She has said she had no role in running the company and announced Tuesday she was giving up her interest in it.

He was appointed conservator of the estate in 1982 after Mrs. Phelan was declared incompetent to manage her finances.

Zaccaro borrowed $100,000 from the estate in October and repaid it five months later with 12 percent interest. A loan this year for $75,000 was also repaid with 12 percent interest, he said.

His attorney, Morton Povman, conceded the loans were repaid only after Zaccaro was notified by the court-appointed referee in the case, Jonathan Weinstein, that the loans were improper.

Asked by Kassoff if he considered seeking legal advice on the propriety of the loans, Zaccaro said, "It never entered my mind."

Governor builds contacts at convention

DALLAS (AP) — A Rockefeller tried for years to become president, but never got closer than No. 2. Now a du Pont appears to be trying to find out if there is room at the top for him.

George Bush, Jack Kemp, Howard Baker and Robert Dole already have convinced fellow Republicans that they are serious contenders for the party's 1988 presidential nomination. Gov. Pierre S. du Pont IV of Delaware has a way to go yet.

Du Pont, who introduces himself as "Pete," still has trouble being recognized outside his home state. Gov. George Deukmejian introduced him to the California delegation as "Rhode Island Gov. Pete du Pont."

But he was busy at the Republican National Convention all week trying to change that.

He was asked, How many television interviews have there been this week?

"Ten, probably."

How many state delegations has he visited?

"Half, I don't know. ... I've got a lot of friends," he says with a grin.

Du Pont, 49, is a member of the family that has dominated Delaware's economy from almost the beginning of American history. His second four-year term as governor ends in January and he cannot succeed himself.

He has held elective office — the state legislature, the U.S. House of Representatives and the governorship — since 1968. He has quietly built contacts at the entry level of state politics around the nation with GOPAC, a political action committee which gives financial support to Republican candidates for state legislatures.

"I have been eight years of my life a legislator and eight years of my life an executive and there's a world of difference. I much prefer being an executive," du Pont said. But he refuses to say he is running for president.

As if on cue, while du Pont talks with a reporter on the convention floor, up steps a Michigan delegate, W. Clark Durant: "I was on the platform committee during the week and I hear very good things about you from a variety of people and I want you to meet my wife."

They discuss a mutual acquaintance. "I'm a great friend of a lot of people," du Pont tells the delegate.

After the encounter, du Pont jots down the names in a notebook he carries in his suit coat pocket, and talks about how someone can get elected president.

"There is a generational change in leadership about to occur in the Republican Party at the end of Reagan's second term, assuming Reagan wins. The same thing's going to happen to the Democrat Party right after this election, assuming Reagan wins. ... There's 33 million ... in America between the ages of 20 and 29," du Pont says.

"Those people have a very different perspective on life because, consider, they are routinely going to live to be 80 or 90 or 100 years old. How to you support yourself if you live to be 90? You don't retire at 62 and live for 30 years on Social Security.

"So they say to themselves, 'I'm going to have to re-skill myself as I go through life and what's the country going to offer to retrain me when I'm 45 and again when I'm 60.' These people want low inflation and low taxes.

He has brought national attention to a Delaware program in which high school graduates receive job counseling and other help moving from school to work, and has urged the Reagan administration to support a multibillion-dollar program to retrain workers whose skills are in dwindling demand.

When will he decide whether to run for president?

"I didn't say I was going to do that. I'm going to go to work after I leave the governorship, work on some party development and then, and then we'll see," du Pont said.

Man shoots, stabs wife, her father

SUMTER, S.C. (AP) — A 38-year-old man fatally shot and stabbed his estranged wife and her father on Thursday, then held hostage three men, including a priest, for nearly three hours in a church rectory before surrendering, police said.

Alain Lareau of Columbia was hospitalized with a stab wound in the chest, said Joe Brunson, police chief of this city 40 miles west of Columbia. The three hostages were released unharmed, he said.

Police said they believed Lareau had stabbed himself, but did not know when the wound was inflicted.

Lareau's wife, Sara, 38, and her father, Lindsey Campbell, 69, were found dead in the Lareaus' home, apparently of gunshot and stab wounds, said Bill Brasington, Richland County sheriff's department spokesman.

Una Mae Campbell, Lareau's mother-in-law, was stabbed four times in the melee, said Richland County Coroner Frank Barron. She was in good condition in a Columbia hospital, a hospital spokesman said.

"Initial investigations indicate it was a domestic dispute between Mr. and Mrs. Lareau," Brasington said.

Mrs. Lareau "was stabbed approximately 15 times in her chest," Barron said.

Family members said Mrs. Lareau had asked her husband Wednesday for a divorce.

Police were notified that Lareau had taken his four children and was believed to be heading to Sumter, where he has relatives.

About a half-hour later, they received a report that a gunman had entered St. Jude's Catholic Church and held the priest, the Rev. Tony Rigoli, and Michael Pecko and Jerry Martineau in the rectory, Brunson said.

"I have no idea why he went there," Brunson said. Lareau's children were not with him, he added.

The church and school, including 12 grades, were evacuated and the area was sealed off, Brunson said.

Lareau unplugged the phones and told the hostages he would not speak to police, Brunson said. Police unsucessfully broadcast messages on local radio stations asking the gunman to call them.

Rigoli and Pecko were released after Sheriff's Maj. Wayne Sims, who had attended school with Lareau, spoke to him using a megaphone, the chief said.

Sims then entered the rectory and Martineau was released. Lareau turned his gun, a .22-caliber rifle, over to Sims, who called an ambulance, Brunson said.

Lareau was allowed to see his children briefly before being taken to Toumey Hospital, where he was in stable condition Thursday afternoon, Brunson said.

Authorities in Columbia charged Lareau with two counts of murder and one count of assault and battery with intent to kill.

Winds reap wheat crop

Just one day of hot, dry winds can reduce winter-wheat yield 30 percent if the winds occur while the plants are in the milk stage. Wheat plants in the flowering stage or soft-dough stage also suffer from hot winds, and subsequent yields can be reduced by 25 percent.

School safety

Every so often we read the kind of story we really don't like to read. It's one that tells how the first day of school somewhere ended in tragedy when a child was run over by a well-meaning parent or a rushed businessman.

It's always the kind of story that is so sad because it's so avoidable, so preventable. But it happens, nonetheless, and puts an indelible black mark on what otherwise should be a happy occasion.

This week is the final week of summer for Midland Independent School District's 17,000 or so students, most of whom will begin classes Monday. Some area schools, including Greenwood, already are in session.

What that means, of course, is that the streets that primarily have been used only to transport businesspeople and other motorists to and from their jobs and other destinations for the past three months will be additionally congested with bicyclists and pedestrians as students make their way to morning classes and home in the afternoons.

That calls fall extreme caution by both the students and the motorists because accidents can happen quickly. In addition to the increased traffic load on the streets because of students, motorists should be aware that school buses will be making necessary stops to pick up or unload students, and students will be crossing streets at crosswalks and possibly other locations.

Remember, summer's over and, ready or not, school's back in session already in some areas and will be next Monday in Midland. Drive carefully and help make this a safe and happy school year for everyone.

Wasting more money

One of the many complaints the United States has against the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization is that it wastes money, not only for luxury living for officials but on ill-advised projects. The State Department has announced it will pull out of UNESCO at the end of the year unless it mends its wayward ways. Under these circumstances you might think UNESCO leaders would make credible gestures in the direction of reform, but this has not happened.

On the contrary, UNESCO has just launched another dubious project. The Director General, Amadou-Mahtar M'Bow, has retained a Washington public relations firm to improve the organization's image in this country and to do some lobbying to get support in the Congress. As far as can be learned, Mr. M'Bow made this move on his own, and did not consult the United States or other western governments.

The contract went into effect July 1, and will remain in effect indefinitely. The price tag for this strange venture is, believe it or not, $15,000 a week. It is a development certain to make State Department officials even more determined to jump the UNESCO ship rather than stay aboard.

If Mr. D'Bow really wants to brighten UNESCO's image he could do so by finding a way to save $15,000 a week rather than adding such a burden to an already burdensome budget.

Another View:

Soviet campaigning

Walter Mondale keeps saying that President Ronald Reagan refuses to talk to the Soviets about arms control although it was the Soviets who walked out of the Geneva conference.

No matter how many arms control conferences the Soviets snub, the United States should keep trying to break the ice. Something good might emerge from positive efforts. Peace is worth the effort.

But the United States, the president, Congress, diplomats and the public alike should view the question of arms control treaties with clear heads, not muddled naivete.

As this year began the Heritage Foundation published a list of more than 40 Soviet arms control treaty violations. Editor Guy M. Hicks, writing in the foundation's National Security Record, said the Soviets have "consistently and flagrantly" violated the agreements, "calling into question the integrity of the agreements, as well as the entire process of negotiating itself."

He said the U.S. response to Soviet treaty violations should be increased military expenditures, imposition of sanctions and other appropriate steps. Past administrations have not responded.

The Reagan administration is increasing military spending. That is language the Soviets understand. It dampens somewhat their enthusiasm for backing new communist expansion ventures.

A Mondale administration would reduce military spending. That is the kind of language the Soviets would rather hear coming out of Washington. It would give them the green light for new Red advances in Asia, Africa and the Americas.

That is why the communists are campaigning against President Reagan. He is standing in their way.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1954, the Communist Control Act went into effect, virtually outlawing the Communist Party in the United States.

In 1959, Daniel K. Inouye was sworn in as the first Japanese-American member of the House of Representatives; Hiram L. Fong was sworn in as the first Chinese-American in the Senate. Both were from Hawaii.

In 1968, France became the world's fifth thermonuclear power with the experimental explosion of a hydrogen bomb in the South Pacific.

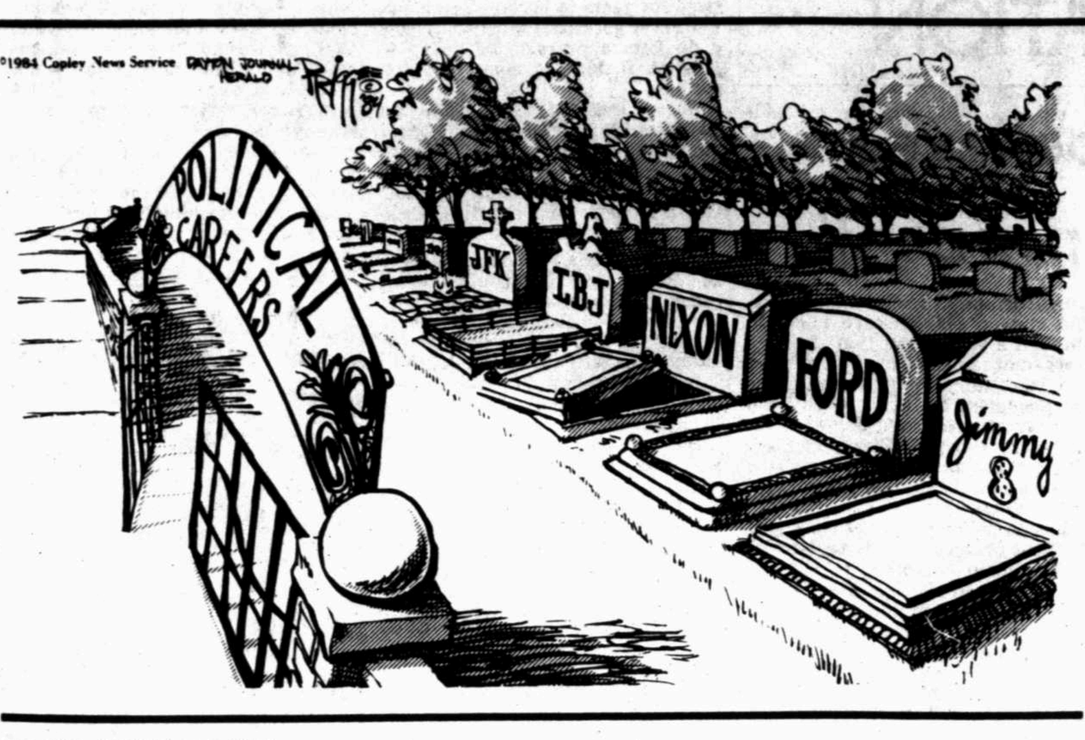

Ten years ago: Greece said it had accepted a Soviet proposal for an international conference on the Cyprus issue "in principle," but would be making further suggestions.

Five years ago: U.S. authorities prevented a Soviet plane with the wife of ballet dancer Alexander Godunov aboard from leaving New York. The United States said it wanted to be certain Ludmila Vlasova was leaving voluntarily after her husband had defected the day before. (The result was a three-day standoff with Soviet officials.)

One year ago: An immigrant from Hong Kong was found guilty in Seattle of taking part in the murder of 13 Chinese-Americans in a gambling den.

Today's birthdays: Television personality Durward Kirby is 72. Television host Dennis James is 67. Actor Sam J. Jones is 30. All-Star shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. is 24.

Mexico's cleanup only 'show'

WASHINGTON — Corruption in Mexico reached its giddy peak in the years 1976 to 1982, when huge, newly discovered oil reserves promised to put the historically poverty-stricken nation on the road to prosperity. But when world oil prices fell, Mexico was stuck with massive loans it had received from Western banks on the basis of its oil wealth.

Jack Anderson

The corruption was so notorious that President Miguel de la Madrid based his election campaign in 1982 on a promise of "moral renovation," including prosecution of those who had stolen the big bucks.

But the CIA, in a top-secret report to President Reagan in May, predicted that de la Madrid's great cleanup campaign will be all show and little substance. A summary of the CIA report made available to my associate Dale Van Atta explains that the Mexican president must tread lightly, both for his own sake and that of the dominant political party he heads, the Institutional Revolutionary Party.

For the truth is that any serious investigation would lead straight to ex-President Jose Lopez Portillo, who skimmed off more than his share of the Mexican people's wealth — perhaps as much as $5 billion — while de la Madrid was his budget director.

Still, popular outrage reached such a pitch that de la Madrid had to serve up at least one big fish. He was Jorge Diaz Serrano, director-general of Pemex, the state oil monopoly, during the Lopez Portillo administration. Diaz Serrano was an oil contractor who had once been a partner of Vice President George Bush in the Houston-based Zapata Oil Co.

On the strength of the new oil discoveries — and the supposedly unstoppable increases in petroleum prices — Diaz Serrano boosted Pemex's annual budget to more than $23 billion, increased its employees from 80,000 to 120,000 and began construction of a 55-story headquarters in Mexico City.

Mexico became the world's fourth biggest oil producer.

But in 1981, Diaz Serrano was unceremoniously fired after lowering oil prices without consulting Lopez Portillo and his cabinet. In June 1983, after his protector left office, Diaz Serrano was arrested and charged with defrauding Pemex of $34 million in a contract for two Belgian natural gas tankers. He was sent to prison.

That was comparative peanuts. In a recent column, I reported that 317 million barrels of oil had simply disappeared during Diaz Serrano's tenure, and that an estimated $4 billion had been diverted from Pemex in 1979 alone.

After the column appeared, Diaz Serrano wrote me from prison, saying: "What you state in your commentary is totally false — from the beginning to the end." He ended his letter with this pious statement: "I think I have expressed not only my point of view but the unanimous disapproval that has arisen in Mexico for your lack of professional ethics while hitting those who stand for the flag of dignity" — a reference to de la Madrid.

Unfortunately for Diaz Serrano, the facts brought out in more than 5,000 pages of official testimony make clear that he was a crook of awe-inspiring proportions.

By concealing kickbacks to top Pemex officials through overpayments to American contractors on just one series of transactions, for example, Diaz Serrano and his cronies bilked the Mexican treasury of $97 million. On a single order for turbines and compressors, two Pemex officials got $12.3 million in "commission."

Thousands of "aviadores" — the slang term for "fliers" who touch down only long enough to pick up paychecks — were put on the Pemex payroll under Diaz Serrano. One investigation turned up 13,000 of these ghost workers, while sources tell me that Pemex cranked out more than 2 million paychecks for no work.

Diaz Serrano's praise for de la Madrid is understandable. The president who had him arrested can also set him free — and if past history is any guide, that's exactly what will happen.

BLUE MOVIE UPDATE: Recently I reported on the flood of pornographic movies into American living rooms via cable television. Impressionable children, who would be barred from blue movies in theaters, can watch the filth at the flick of a switch whenever the TV is left unguarded.

The Supreme Court recently ruled that the federal government, not local jurisdictions, has paramount authority over cable TV. But regulation of the content of TV programs is a touchy business, no matter who does it.

No one abhors the idea of government censorship more than I do. If parents won't do the job, it's risky to let the government dictate what can be shown on TV.

Now a compromise solution has been offered by the House subcommittee on telecommunications. It's an amendment that would require cable television subscribers to have locks on their sets, so the TV can't be turned on without parental permission.

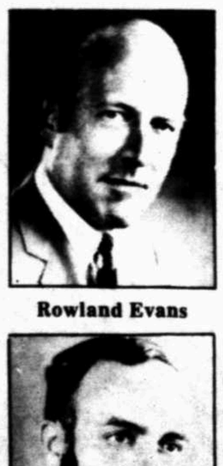

Parents who want to protect their kids from dirty movies could do so; those who don't care what their children see would not be subjected to government interference. Unfortunately, after committee approval, the bill has been stalled in the House.

EVANS & NOVAK

Security plank worries some

DALLAS — Fearful that the old warmonger albatross still poses the gravest threat to Ronald Reagan's re-election, White House agents diluted the platform's national security plank to cast a long shadow on the Soviet policies of a second term.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

No other part of a militantly conservative platform — from taxes to the gold standard to abortion — sacrificed Reagan's long-held positions for short-term electoral expediency. Watering down some of the president's cherished convictions on how to deal with the Soviet Union worries hard-liners more than it angers them.

"This is a campaign document that will go into the ashcan after the election," said one Reaganite who fought to preserve important portions of the 1980 platform, "but not before it gives the arms controllers new ammunition to fight us in the second term." Whereas the party economic doctrine of the future proceeds naturally from the 1980 platform to the embarrassment of cautious presidential aides, the official word on national security returns to pre-Reagan orthodoxy.

That signals victory by White House staffers, in this case led by deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver. He has played the leading role in the bitter struggle to rid Reagan of any vestige of Attila the Hun and array him in the mantle of peace. Wordy though the national security treatise was, it omitted the declaration of 1980 that peace demands U.S. military "superiority." Additions to the defense plank of "technological superiority" and "qualitative superiority" in naval power, added at the last minute to appease conservatives, were carefully hedged.

More significant than the outright deletion of "military superiority" was the studied effort to downplay Soviet cheating on SALT and other treaties. An original draft written at the Pentagon inserted a flat prohibition on any and all future U.S.-Soviet arms control treaties "until the question of Soviet non-compliance with existing treaties" has been resolved. That is precisely the president's belief, but it was knocked out at the White House's request.

In step with Reagan's own long-held convictions, hard-liners wanted the platform to spell out the president's intention to "build" a new space-based defense against the primary Soviet military threat — land-based nuclear missiles. Panicking at the prospect of losing votes in November on the "Star Wars" issue (even though most polling data show a highly favorable response), the White House sent National Security Council aide Don Fortier here to safeguard Reagan's olive branch.

Fortier forced substitution of "achieve" for "build," with the help of Sen. John Warner of Virginia and calls from Washington eventually wearing down the platform subcommittee chairman, Rep. Marjorie Holt of Maryland.

The difference is fundamental: "build" means deploy; "achieve" focuses on narrow technical feasibility, not deployment. For a fancied short-term gain between now and Nov. 6, the Republican Party opened the door wider to followers of the discredited doctrine called MAD — mutual assured destruction. That door could have been nailed shut and party policy set for the long future.

To defense-oriented Reaganites who understood the president's convictions long before he characterized the Soviet Union as an "evil empire," nuances in the party's roadmap for future dealings with Moscow contradict reality. Arms control, treated secondarily in 1980 and always regarded suspiciously by Reagan and his hard-line advisers, got top billing in the 1984 defense plank.

Another sop to electoral politics at the expense of reality was initial failure to mention the Midgetman missile at all because some critics have attacked it as destabilizing. Yet it represents Reagan's most notable effort to add a new strategic weapon to help close what used to be called the "window of vulnerability" — a phrase not to be found in the 1984 platform because it might enhance the warmonger image. The Midgetman finally was tucked in by Rep. Jack Kemp.

If he is re-elected, the president's true conviction about Moscow will at once dominate his actions — elevating Soviet treaty violations, Star Wars and other elements of his Soviet policy to their pre-eminence. But by fuzzing up the clearest view of the Soviet Union any president has held since World War II, Reagan's political men have handed his critics new tools for harassment to revive MAD and press for arms control at any price. The most pragmatic plank of a platform derided for adherence to ideology may prove most costly to Ronald Reagan after the election.

CHARLEY REESE

S. Africa issue complex

The hostility and hypocrisy of some Americans and Europeans toward the Republic of South Africa is one of the great examples of dishonor in our time.

Charley Reese

Consider, for example, the Olympics. South African athletes, some of whom are black, are barred from competition. The International Olympic Committee added to the outrage by barring South African journalists from reporting the Olympics.

South Africa's sin, of course, is apartheid, which is their word for American-style segregation. Well, no one will argue that apartheid is morally defensible — in the United States or in South Africa.

But the International Olympics Committee does not hold the athletes of other nations accountable for the crimes of their governments. In many cases those crimes are a hundred thousand times worse than keeping a segment of the population from exercising the right to vote.

Some of the governments represented in the Olympics effectively don't allow any of their citizens to vote; some are guilty of mass murder, of torture, of censorship, of persecution of religious people; some of genocidal policies.

Why then punish South African athletes for their government's policy of apartheid. South Africans have integrated their sports and South Africans are slowly but surely beginning to remove some other racial barriers. And never has South Africa been guilty of mass murder the way some African dictators have been. South Africa has never practiced human slavery the way some Arab countries have and some experts contend still do. South African haters always neglect to tell you that many African blacks attempt every year to leave their black-ruled nations for South Africa.

Finally, South African athletes have no more control over their government's policy of apartheid than the American gymnastics team has over Ronald Reagan's policy in Central America. There simply is no logical reason to bar South African athletes on moral grounds.

If then there are no logical reasons to justify the rabid hostility toward South Africa on moral grounds, what are the reasons? Two. One is pandering to black nationalists in Africa by American liberals who for reasons known only to them consider segregation a worst crime than murder. They would have a hard time selling that proposition to victims of the latter.

Another reason is that the Soviet Union, with its eye on the vast strategic mineral wealth in South Africa, has its worldwide apparatus in gear to replace the South African government with a Marxist-Leninist government. This is fact, not opinion.

Soviet officials have made public statements explicitly expressing that goal. If you look at the voluminous testimony before Sen. Jeremiah Denton's subcommittee by black African nationalists, you will see that SWAPO — the Southwest African People's Organization — and ANC — the African National Congress — have both been taken over by communists and the non-communist black nationalists purged and in several cases, murdered.

Only recently 22 black and Asian leaders' homes were firebombed in South Africa. These acts of terrorism were committed by black extremists against moderate blacks who are attempting to solve South Africa's racial problems without violence and bloodshed.

American liberals support the extremists and undermine the moderates. It is the black extremists and the American liberals who want to undercut the black and white moderates by totally isolating South Africa and punishing it economically.

I don't like apartheid or racism but I hate hypocrisy and terrorism. It took Americans over 101 years after the Civil War to end apartheid in the South and in the nation's capital. When the great Jesse Ownes won his gold medals in the 1936 Olympics, he was barred by law from taking a drink of water from a whites only water fountain in many parts of the United States.

Even today in the northern states over half of all the black students attend schools which are virtually all black. What I'm saying is that no American has any grounds for acting self-righteously toward South Africa where 4 million white and 16 million blacks are trying to come to terms in a way that will not result in havoc, bloody tribal civil ward and mass destruction.

The only things they ask of us are a realistic understanding of the complexity of their problem, fairness and an end to this puking hypocrisy.

Sea lion to go to Soviet Union

MYSTIC, Conn. (AP) — A 3-year-old California sea lion named Domino will be put in a special padded packing crate for a flight to the Soviet Union on Saturday, sewing up a deal in which an Omaha, Neb., zoo gets a Siberian Tiger from the Soviets.

"We are sending them something that is indigenous to North America, and we have received something that is indigenous to the Soviet Union," said Roger B. Ryley, a spokesman for the Mystic Marinelife Aquarium, where Domino has been living.

Ex-bailiff could still face charges

CHICAGO (AP) — Authorities say state charges could still be brought against a former bailiff, acquitted of federal Greylord charges by a judge who nevertheless called the defendant "as sleazy a human being as is possible to imagine."

Alan Kaye, 33, was found innocent Thursday by U.S. District Judge Milton I. Shadur of taking $10,000 in bribes and soliciting $30,000 to fix divorce cases.

Shadur said state — not federal — crimes were involved.

Greylord is the code name for an FBI undercover operation to ferret out corruption in the Cook County court system.

Suspects must take mental tests

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — A judge says Alton Coleman and Debra Brown must have a mental competency evaluation before they can plead guilty to a charge of kidnapping a Kentucky college professor and leaving him in the trunk of his car.

Coleman, 28, of Waukegan, Ill., and Ms. Brown, 21, are suspects in a six-week spree of killings, beatings and abductions in six states.

U.S. District Judge Walter H. Rice refused to accept a guilty plea from Coleman on Thursday, and said he would discuss the competency issue with lawyers Tuesday. In the meantime, he entered innocent pleas for both Coleman and Ms. Brown.

Winners appealing deportation

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A Mexican couple who came to the attention of immigration authorities when they won a house in a charity drawing are appealing a deportation order in part on humanitarian grounds, their pastor says.

Jose Carmona, 29, and his wife, Silvia, 24, appealed Thursday one day before their 10-day deadline, said Ron Sanders, district director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The Carmonas' pastor, the Rev. Robert Frerking of the Good Shepherd Mission, said the appeal raises humanitarian and procedural issues.

Only 160 workers to be rehired

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — Only 160 workers out of 1,150 employees still on strike will be rehired immediately in the settlement of a 14-month walkout by the Marine Draftsmen's Association against the Electric Boat shipyard, which makes Navy nuclear submarines.

Strikers accepted a three-year pact Thursday that leaves nearly half of them indefinitely unemployed.

Orphan returns to U.S.

BRAINTREE, Mass. (AP) — Tiny Alexandra Balzacar, the limpid-eyed Ecuadoran orphan brought to Massachusetts for surgery to unlock her clamped jaw, has returned and is once again charming her American hosts with her spunk and courage.

"That's me! That's you!" the 4-year-old girl said Thursday as she sat laughing with her speech therapist at Braintree Hospital in suburban Boston. "In the house. On the plane. Look!"

Those who care for her say Alexandra's joy and simple words show the orphan's mettle.

Until five months ago when Boston surgeons performed a seven-hour operation, Alexandra's jaw was clamped shut, fused together by a rare birth defect. All her life, she had eaten mashed foods through a small opening between her teeth. Her words were garbled.

Her first utterances, her first meal and first smile received nationwide publicity. Thousands of people contacted Cardinal Cushing Hospital in hopes of adopting the child, who was abandoned at birth on the steps of a crowded Ecuadoran clinic.

As soon as she was able, Alexandra returned to her orphanage in Guayaquil, Ecuador.

Dr. Martin Dunn, who operated on the girl and is the director of the Catholic charity Por Cristo which arranged and funded her trip, had hoped she could continue her daily therapy in her homeland.

But one week after she returned to Ecuador, doctors reported that her jaw muscles had started to fuse together again.

"We just couldn't get the therapy we needed in Ecuador, but I do not mean to criticize that country's hospitals," Dunn said. "The therapy Alex needs is not even available in the majority of American hospitals. We were afraid she was going to fuse together again in a few weeks."

So in June Por Cristo, an organization of American doctors who travel to Ecuador several times a year to treat the country's neediest cases for free, flew Alexandra back to Boston.

The child is living with Dunn, his wife and 16-year-old daughter in Milton. Adoption plans are on hold until December, Dunn said.

To strengthen her jaw, facial muscles and tongue, Alexandra receives physical therapy for an hour every day, and speech therapy for 1½ hours three times a week.

Dunn and speech therapist Charlene Manning are excited by Alexandra's progress.

"She knows that she's loved. She knows that, and that's one of the reasons she is doing so well," said Miss Manning.

"It is amazing how well she has adjusted. Here is a little girl who is out of her own country, she didn't speak English, she's with people she doesn't really know, and she is so cheerful and motivated.

"She comes in here knowing she's going to feel some pain and yet she is always so happy. She is a courageous little girl."

Alexandra is beginning to speak English, and can string together two or three words at a time.

Her favorite words appear to be doll, birthday and cake. Although she is probably about seven — no one at her orphanage knows her age for sure — the Dunns celebrated her fourth birthday this week.

"Four years old is about where she is developmentally," Dunn says.

Alexandra probably will remain in the United States for adoption, Dunn said. He hopes to enter her in a pre-school program in the fall.

"I don't see any reason now why she can't talk someday," says Miss Manning. "She wants to. She's very motivated and she's very brave."

Where do patents go?

In an average year about 23 percent of patents issued by the U.S. Patent Office go to independent inventors, 75 percent to individuals representing big corporations, and 2 percent to people in government or educational institutions.

Scottish longshoremen begin strike

LONDON (AP) — Scottish longshoremen went on strike today in another spinoff of the national coal miners' strike, and employers and union officials predicted the rest of the 35,000-strong national longshoremen's union soon would join the walkout.

If a nationwide strike was called, it would be the second time in five weeks that longshoremen have struck in indirect support of the 23-week-old coal miners' strike. The last walkout, an 11-day affair that paralyzed 75 percent of British trade, was in July.

"There will be a national dock strike. It has been on the cards from day one in this dispute. There is bound to be strong support for it," said John Connolly, leader of the docks committee of the Transport and General Worker's Union. The committee was meeting today to discuss the possibility of a strike.

Jim Gilligan, Scottish docks secretary of the transport union, said the strike by the 2,500 Scottish dock workers began at 8 a.m. The walkout was called to protest the unloading of a coal ship by members of the steelworkers' union.

The longshoremen are boycotting coal imports in support of the miners, but the steelworkers say supporting the miners would be devastating for the hard-pressed steel industry.

NICHOLAS FINNEY, director of the National Association of Port Employers, expressed frustration at the complexity of the dispute, which was pitting one union against another.

"We are powerless to intervene. The dispute involves purely the Transport and General Workers Union and the British Steel Corp.," he said.

The Conservative government's employment secretary, Tom King, appealed to dock workers in a radio interview Thursday to think again. He said a second dock strike would imperil the jobs of hundreds of thousands of Britons.

The miners' strike, which has idled 75 percent of the Britain's 175 state-owned pits, was called by the 183,000-member National Union of Mineworkers on March 12 to protest plans to close 20 money-losing pits with the loss of 20,000 jobs.

THE DOCKS DISPUTE flared up after crane drivers belonging to the Iron and Steel Trades Confederation unloaded 95,000 tons of coal Thursday from the Panamanian-registered freighter Ostia at the Hunterston terminal on Scotland's River Clyde.

The coal — brought from Rotterdam and destined for Scotland's fuel-starved Ravenscraig steel plant — had been boycotted by transport union dock workers in support of striking miners.

The miners have been seeking to starve Ravenscraig and Britain's three other major state-owned steel plants of coal and iron ore in order to beef up the impact of the coal strike.

Scottish dock workers say the berthing of the Ostia without tugboat crews belonging to the transport union and its unloading without the participation of union dock workers breaches a 37-year-old agreement guaranteeing employment for dock workers at 78 British ports.

The British Steel Corp. says it has consulted lawyers who disagree.

Sir James Cleminson, president of the employers' organization, the Confederation of British Industry, said a second national docks strike could wreck Britain's economic recovery.

THE BRITISH STEEL industry is fighting to save jobs in the face of fierce competition from other steel-producing nations and declining demand resulting from world recession. The company and the steel union say the Ostia's coal is vital for Ravenscraig. Without fuel, furnace linings will cool and crack, threatening closure of the plant, they say.

The first national dock strike, which began July 10 over the unloading of iron ore by non-union labor at Immingham in eastern England, idled 75 percent of British trade.

The strike weakened when stranded truckers threatened to burn down facilities at the south England port of Dover.

Leftist group ready to sign cease-fire pact

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A fourth leftist guerrilla group says it is ready to sign a cease-fire pact, leaving only two rebel factions holding out against President Belisario Betancur's efforts to end a 34-year insurrection.

The April 19 Movement, which has grown rapidly ever since it reportedly had 130 field commanders trained in Cuba four years ago, was expected to sign the one-year truce this afternoon.

Three other guerrilla organizations already have signed the cease-fire proposed by Betancur. Two of those, the Maoist-oriented People's Liberation Army and the nationalist Workers' Self-Defense, signed the truce Thursday.

The Soviet-line Colombian Revolutionary Armed Forces, with an estimated 15,000 members, was the first to sign the cease-fire last May 28.

With today's ceremonies, all but about 3,000 of the estimated 30,000 leftist insurgents in Colombia will have agreed to the truce.

Two other leftist guerrilla groups, the Cuban-line National Liberation Army and the Maoist-leaning MAO, have issued communiques vowing that they will never stop fighting to topple the government.

On Wednesday, the National Liberation Army swooped down on a mountain village of 1,500 people and flattened the police station with a barrage of mortar and rocket-propelled grenade fire.

Of the 25 policemen at the station, nine were killed and 14 were injured, the Defense Ministry said in a communique about the attack on the village of Betoyes in northeastern Colombia.

The attempt to get guerrillas to stop fighting for the first time since 1950 is being received with widespread skepticism.

Betancur fired one defense minister last year for publicly opposing the peace gestures. The army has remained silent — officially.

"We are outraged," an army colonel told The Associated Press on Thursday in an interview granted on the condition that he not be identified.

Police kill guerrillas in 'total war'

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Undercover police shot and killed eight suspected anti-government guerrillas in what President Augusto Pinochet says is a "total war to the death against communism."

A passing motorist also was killed, three police agents wounded, a gun shop bombed and three men arrested in a four-city operation Thursday in the military government's response to a wave of sabotage bombings. It was the broadest one-day crackdown on suspected guerrillas reported by the government in seven years.

The National Information Central, Pinochet's secret police agency, coordinated and announced the security operations, calling them "confrontations" between police and "terrorists" under surveillance.

It said they were continuing with the aim to "neutralize terrorist activity that threatens internal peace."

"The forces of order are waging total war to the death against communism," Pinochet told a Military Academy luncheon marking his 11th anniversary as army commander.

The 68-year-old general, who overthrew an elected Marxist-led government 11 years ago, has endeavored to purge this Andean nation of Marxist influence.

But the Communist Party and smaller leftist groups that espouse violent resistance appear to have maintained their strength.

Since last December, Chilean news media have reported more than 300 bombings that damaged banks, businesses, police installations and power lines. The 1,000-mile-long central valley has been blacked out six times. Fifteen policemen and army officers have been killed by ambushers in the past year.

The police announcement said guerrillas raided a gunshop three blocks from the presidential palace Thursday night, stole guns, set off a bomb and sped away in different cars, with police in pursuit.

Two of the gunmen were reported killed in a shootout 20 blocks away near O'Higgins Park. A 37-year-old electric company worker driving near the scene was also killed and two policemen wounded.

Six other suspects were shot to death in southern Chile, the announcement said — three in Concepcion, two in Valdivia and one in Los Angeles.

The governor's office in Concepcion said two guerrilla suspects were killed there when police intercepted a bus they had commandeered while fleeing a raid on a private home. But local newsmen quoted witnesses as saying the victims were unarmed.

Another suspect was shot dead in Concepcion's port district when he fired at police agents trying to arrest him, the governor's office said. One policeman was wounded. Witnesses told a Concepcion radio station that the police scattered leftist pamphlets around the body before television crews arrived.

Authorities gave no information about the other killings and identified none of the victims with any leftist group.

Intelligence sources, who declined to be identified, said before the announcement that police had infiltrated the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front, a Communist guerrilla group, and were preparing to seize 10 of its operatives.

The front, named for a Chilean independence hero, has claimed responsibility for many of the sabotage bombings since its formation last November. It is thought to be more active than the Leftist Revolutionary Movement, a Cuban-trained underground group formed in the late 1960s but heavily repressed after the 1973 coup.

Thousands of leftists died and more than 600 disappeared after Pinochet overthrew President Salvador Allende, a Marxist. Human rights groups say the worst repression ended four years later, when Pinochet's feared National Intelligence Directorate was dissolved under American diplomatic pressure and replaced with the current secret police organization.

Bruce Castleberry/Reporter-Telegram

Reagan County quarterback Bobby Gunnels has suffered a slight loss of mobility with a hairline fracture on his ankle. Gunnels has earned two letters as he enters his junior campaign.

Brutal schedule faces RC's Owls

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

BIG LAKE — After a disappointing 2-8 campaign in 1983, Reagan County's Owls have made wholesale changes for this year.

Topping the list of new faces is Ronnie Reeger, the new head football coach at Big Lake after an assistant coaching stint at Fort Stockton.

Familiar faces abound on the team, where a crew that didn't mature quickly enough last year is back for a re-dedicated entry into 1984.

For the third year running, the Owls enter the season with questions at quarterback, and this has been a Big Lake problem. In each case, quarterback Bobby Gunnels answered the call when the bell rang, but the junior veteran once again has a critical injury.

Last year, a broken nose sidelined Gunnels for virtually all of the pre-season work. Gunnels is doubtful for the season opener against Robert Lee. In his stead, senior Bubba Havis is working at number one. "He's got some starting experience in the defensive secondary," Reeger said. "He'll do until Gunnels gets back."

With Gunnels' uncertain status, a key point was driven home about the Owls: they lack depth.

And the Owls have another brutal schedule this year. Big Lake's stumble in 1983 came by a murderer's row of opponents. The young team never recovered and was battered before play opened in the competitive District 8-AA.

UNFORTUNATELY, the schedule-makers have penciled in four consecutive games against class AAA schools before the district slate. Three of those games, all against 7-AAA powers, are on the road.

"That schedule was made out before I got here. It's very tough when you play those kind of people every week," Reeger said. "I don't think we have that much depth, but we have a lot of kids with experience. We carried eight sophomores last year on the varsity.

"We'll get through our non-district schedule and learn something about ourselves."

Offensively, Reeger will use the Wing T. Gunnels has shown a talent for passing, but now the Owls will call on a group of big offensive backs. "All of our backs are coming back," Reeger said. "Williams has been a starter for two years." The other important returnee is Tim Thompson, a 178-lb. junior fullback.

The offensive line returns both guards and a tackle in Stephen Weise, Mark Quain and Terry Townsend. All are seniors.

All told, seven regulars return on offense and eight starters on the defense. And the Owls have other nice ingredients - experience, excellent size for a 2A school, and the hunger to win after a dismal '83.

The Owl defense is out of a 5-2 set, a switch from the standard set used last year. "Defensively, they're going through a major change," said the coach. "We had the spring to talk to them and get them used to us. Their work habits have changed a little."

One cornerstone will be Williams, an All-District defensive end last year as a junior on a poor team. He should be equally strong this year.

REAGAN COUNTY also returns a pair of starting linebackers and half of a secondary. As for experience, the Owls have plenty. But the unit has yet to win big. That problem is being addressed. "I feel real good about the season right now," said Reeger. "It will certainly be a challenge to us."

Reeger and the Owls appear on the surface to be with many questions. But the only real question is whether or not the Owls are ready to fly. McCamey coach Buster Leaf says the Big Lake squad has the most talent in 8-AA. But Reeger disclaims the kudos now. "That's just Buster talking. I think McCamey has the inside track. We feel like we have an opportunity."

Eventually, the results will take care of themselves. But Reeger has instilled a positive attitude and the Owls may atone for the errors of the past. "I like our kids. Like any young team, they think they can. Last year they lost some games by one point (twice in district) and it hurt them mentally. They could have had a much better record."

This year, they will.

Owls Report Card

Offensive Line: A - Three seniors back.
Receivers: C - Must develop to balance attack.
Quarterbacks: A - If Gunnels is healthy.
Running Backs: B plus - Here's the beef - Williams and Thompson.
Defensive Line: B - Strong and talented, but learning new tricks.
Linebackers: A - Heavy hitters.
Secondary: B minus - Smart but not fleet of feet.
Overall: B plus - Like last year, the Owls expect big things. Unlike last year, Big Lake appears capable of producing now. Should they hit district unscathed, watch out.
Predicted Finish: 6-4.
1984 Schedule: 9/7 Robert Lee; 9/14 at Crane; 9/21 Ozona; 9/28 at Coahoma; 10/5 at Sonora; 10/12 McCamey; 10/19 at Eldorado; 10/26 Stanton; 11/2 Greenwood; 11/9 at Wall.

Cubs Stadium needs roof

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

From the number of postponements, one might suspect Midland was a neighbor of Shreveport in the Louisiana tropics instead of being located way off in high, dry West Texas. For the fourth time in its last seven home dates, the Midland Cubs were rainout victims Thursday night.

As a result, the Cubs will open their five-game series against El Paso's Diablos at 7:30 p.m. today in Cubs Stadium. The rained out game will be made up as part of a doubleheader at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, unless Friday's game is rained out...but let's not get into that.

The series with El Paso launches a 10-game season-ending homestand at Cubs Stadium and with the Texas League West pennant already flying over Beaumont, the winddown is strictly for statistics.

JOE HOUSEY (6-6) is tonight's probable starter and Doug Potestio (5-9) will get one of Saturday's starts. Housey won his last time out at Beaumont, 4-2.

Potestio's 5-9 record is a paradox. The 6-2 righthander from San Leandro, Calif., leads the Cubs in complete games. In his most recent start he gave up one earned run and lost to Beaumont 3-0. In his last four starts, he surrendered only seven earned runs and wound up with three losses. In those games, Midland was blanked the last two times out and was held to one run in another game and three in the fourth.

If Potestio can come up with a shutout Saturday, he can get credit for a tie.

But that's the way things have been going for Midland this year. In a doubleheader at Beaumont Monday, Midlander pitchers gave up four hits in two games and got just a split.

Tuesday night, four Midland pitchers gave up just two hits, but the Cubs lost 3-2, still the pitching staff had no one to blame but itself. They issued 16 walks.

EVEN SO, it wasn't all that bad a road trip. Midland won five of 12 despite being whitewashed three times.

Going into the final stages of the season, there are some individual honors to be settled, like Dan Norman holds an 18-15 edge over Jeff Jones in the home run derby while Gary Varsho and Paul Noce are tied for the lead in triples. Varsho, however, does appear to have the doubles and stolen base titles nailed down with 29 and 19, respectively.

Joe Housey and lefthander Jim Boudreau each have six victories, Potestio has five complete games and Boudreau 71 strikeouts, all of which set the pace. Ron Kaufman's six saves are high for the staff, and particularly noteworthy since Ron didn't join the club until the middle of the season.

One vital statistic which will be followed closely will be catcher Don Hymman's attempt to double his 1983 output in stolen bases. Last year, he didn't get his second until the last day of the season, but has been stuck on three, now, for quite some time.

Saturday's games could be the last opportunity for Midland to win a doubleheader this season.

CUB PAUSE—Since the Diablos last visit, pitcher Ted Higuera was sold to Portland of the Pacific Coast League...Higuera was 8-7 and showed the Texas Leage's best ERA, 2.60, which should be good enough to win the title. If so, it will be the first ERA title for an El Paso pitcher since Frank Tanana did it...El Paso holds a 15-12 edge over the Cubs in the season's series...Outfielder Dave Klipstein is hitting .382 against Cub pitcher and infielder Juan Castillo has a .384 mark against Midland with 15 rbi...Mike Felder is hitting a modest .266 against Midland, but the Cubs' success in this series may lie in its ability to keep Mike off base. In addition to his 15 rbi, he has stolen 12 bases on Midland...Former major league relief ace Jim Kern has joined the Diablos....

Line of nations awaits McEnroe

NEW YORK (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe could be facing a multi-national challenge if he is to follow his impresive 1984 Wimbledon triumph with his first U.S. Open men's singles crown since 1981.

The New York left-hander, who has lost only two matches this year, will open his U.S. Open title bid at the National Tennis Center against Colin Dowdeswell, a member of Great Britain's Davis Cup team.

Later in the tournament, if form follows, McEnroe would also face a Swede, a South African, an Argentine and a Czechoslovakian in addition to a pair of Americans.

Meanwhile, Martina Navratilova, seeded first among the women, has more of an all-American flavor in her prospective matches.

Navratilova, seeking her second straight U.S. Open title and her sixth straight Grand Slam tournament victory, will face fellow American Lea Antonopolis in the opening round. If she wins, Navratilova's second-round opponent would be the victor of a battle between Americans Betsy Nagelsen and Andrea Leand.

Chris Evert Lloyd, the No. 2 woman's seed, begins her quest for a seventh U.S. Open crown by taking on Sharon Walsh.

If the seedings hold, the semifinal pairings will pit Navratilova against her doubles teammate, No. 4 Pam Shriver, while Lloyd will play third-seeded Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia.

McEnroe's second-round foe could be young Stefan Edberg of Sweden, who won the gold medal at the recently concluded Olympic Games in Los Angeles. Edberg will face Larry Stefanki in the first round.

Matt Bahr wanted to kick himself for missing an extra point.

"It will come back to haunt me many times," said Bahr after his missed extra point allowed the Philadelphia Eagles to escape with a 20-19 victory over his Cleveland Browns Thursday night, one of two National Football League exhibition games.

In the other contest, the Los Angeles Rams crushed the San Diego Chargers 47-14.

Along with his missed extra point, Bahr also fell several yards short on a 51-yard field-goal attempt with 10 seconds left.

"I thought I hit it well. I hit it straight. I just had to give it another yard or two," he said.

"Bahr didn't have enough gas," said Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano. "The range was within Bahr's potential. He's kicked that distance before."

The Browns had an opportunity to win after Philadelphia's Michael Haddix fumbled at his 45-yard line with 26 seconds left and Cleveland linebacker Chip Banks recovered.

Quarterback Paul McDonald, who completed 15 of 30 passes for 233 yards, connected with Dwight Walker for an 11-yard gain and a first down at the Eagles' 34. But three Cleveland passes fell incomplete before Bahr came on with 10 seconds remaining and failed to connect, too.

Ron Jaworski completed 11 of 20 passes for 186 yards and one touchdown to lead the Eagles' offense.

NFL Exhibitions

Los Angeles running back Barry Redden scored two touchdowns and the Rams rolled up 30 first-half points on their way to routing the Chargers.Redden scored on runs of one and three yards and Eric Dickerson added another rushing touchdown for the Rams, scoring on a one-yard run.

The Rams gained 212 yards in total offense in the first half to only 55 yards for the Chargers, who were forced to punt six times.

In tonight's action, Gerald Riggs will be put in the spotlight when the Atlanta Falcons meet the Denver Broncos.

Riggs, a 230-pounder beginning his third NFL season, suddenly became Atlanta's starting running back this week when the club's all-time rushing leader, William Andrews, was declared out for the season after ungoing knee surgery.

"It's a definite challenge to try to fill the shoes of a man who's done what William has done," Riggs said. "I've always been preparing myself to come in and play, whether I was a starter or not. Right now I'm concerned with not doing anything different from the way I've always been doing it."

Riggs has seen only limited duty as a backup during his two pro seasons. He has 18 carries for 92 yards during the current exhibition season.

Quarterback Steve Grogan will get plenty of action against Kansas City tonight, according to New England Coach Ron Meyer. Grogan "still needs more work," said Meyer. "We all do. This is right where we expected to be at this time."

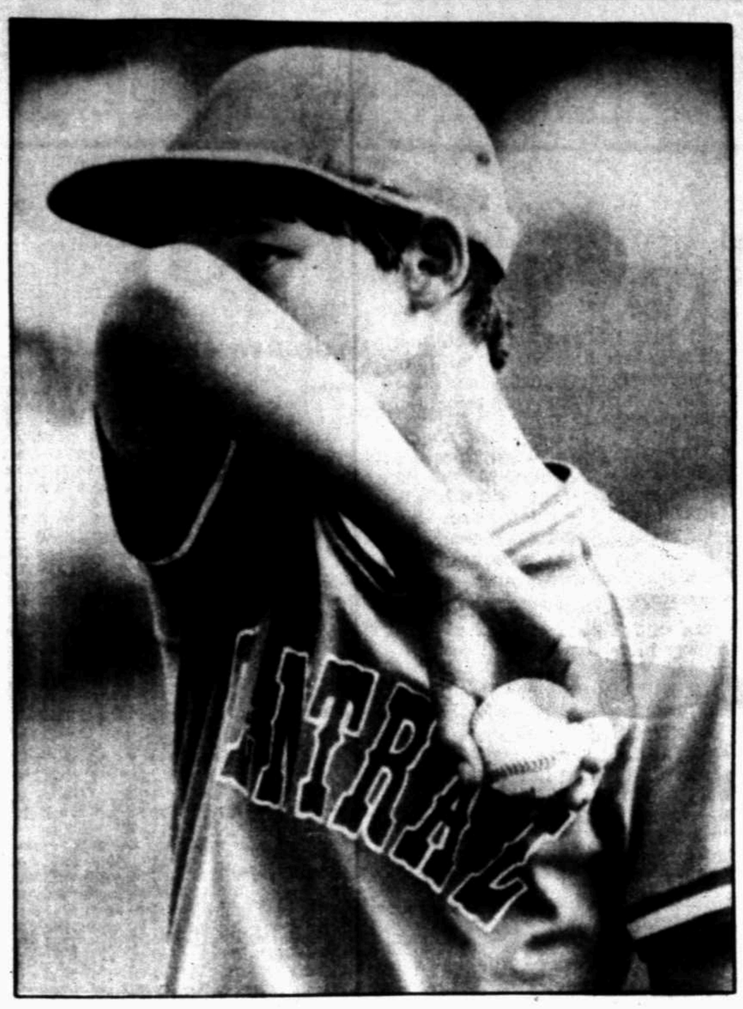

Minnesota's new coach, Les Steckel, meanwhile, will be taking a hard look at veteran quarterback Archie Manning in the game against St. Louis.

"We just want to see how valuable he can be to the football team," said Steckel in explaining his choice of Manning for the assignment in the final regular-season tuneup for each team.

"We've just had so many injuries. We haven't since the first ballgame been able to show what we can do," said Steckel, whose team has a 1-2 preseason record. "We've taken the opportunity of this being experimental. I've been accused of being a mad chemist, but that's what it's been."

Backup quarterback Pat Ryan will start for the New York Jets against the Los Angeles Raiders. Starting quarterback Ken O'Brien and defensive end Mark Gastineau have missed practice time this week because they're involved in a court case in New York, and Jets Coach Joe Walton has not been especially happy with O'Brien's preseason work (37 completions in 71 attempts for 423 yards and one TD.)

In other games tonight, it's Detroit at Cincinnati, Miami at Tampa Bay and Seattle at San Francisco. In Saturday's games, Washington visits New Orleans, Indianapolis is at Green Bay, Pittsburgh at the New York Giants and Houston at Dallas. Chicago plays Buffalo at Indianapolis on Sunday to close out the NFL's preseason schedule.

Pitcher Kevin Kavanaugh of Southport, Ind., reacts with new ball after giving up the winning homerun to Chris Radcliff of Altamonte Springs, Fla., in Thursday's Little League World Series play.

World Series leader Lietzke isn't banking on victory

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Bruce Lietzke, the first-round leader, offered a prediction for the NEC World Series of Golf.

"If I don't drive it better, I can't win," said Lietzke, the leader Thursday by two strokes after squeezing a 4-under-par 66 out of windy Firestone South.

Tom Purtzer and Rex Caldwell, two first-time Series qualifiers, matched 68s for second place going into today's second round of the $700,000 tournament, offering a first prize of $126,000.

Craig Stadler, Mark McCumber and Denis Watson of South Africa, all at 69, were the only other players in the field of 42 to break par.

TOM WATSON, this year's No. 1 money-winner, and British Open champion Greg Norman of Australia were among those at 70. Defending champion Nick Price of South Africa shot 71, Jack Nicklaus and PGA winner Lee Trevino 72s and Masters winner Ben Crenshaw 74.

Lietzke called it an unfamiliar round — 18 holes filled with an 111-yard wedge shot for an eagle, 10 putts on the front side and just five fairways hit.

"My strength is my driving and hitting greens in regulation. I drove it poorly and putted incredibly," said the 33-year-old, looking for his first Series victory.

Lietzke is trying to shake an image of being an early-season winner. Of his 10 victories, six have come in January or February and all but two by May.

"One of my little goals is to win this time of year. I've never come close to winning in August, September or later," he said.

"I am very fresh," said Lietzke, "and if I am fresh mentally, I can overcome physical problems with my swing."

Lietzke was 3-under after two holes, thanks to a birdie-eagle beginning over this 7,173-yard monster. He toured the front side in 30, 5-under, aided by six one-putt greens.

Caldwell was astounded by Lietzke's performance. "That's incredible," he said, looking at the scoreboard in the press tent. "You got no roll in the fairways. The ball was plugging, even on down slopes. It's the longest course we play on tour, by far."

Caldwell, playing with a new set of irons, found the gusting North wind difficult. "When you turned into the wind, you had to hit a lot lumber. Scott Simpson hit a driv for his second shot at 18. I hit a wood," he said.

He, too, found a swift start. He bi died three of his first holes.

Seoul captures LL finals berth

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Chul Chang fired a no-hitter and struck out 14 as Seoul, South Korea, claimed a berth in the Little League World Series title game with a 10-0 rout of Coquitlam, British Columbia.

Chang permitted only two baserunners —John Pollock walked with two outs in the fifth inning and pinch-hitter Scott Leroux was hit by a pitch in the sixth. Neither advanced past first base.

South Korea now faces Altamonte Springs, Fla., in the title game Saturday. Altamonte Springs defeated Southport, Ind., 4-2, in Thursday's other semifinal contest.

Barring consolation games, Chang's was the first series no-hitter since Hidetoshi Yoshino of Osaka, Japan, pitched a perfect game against Al Khobar, Saudi Arabia, in last year's quarterfinals.

SOUTH KOREA has not allowed a run in 12 innings of this year's World Series.

South Korea, which hit three home runs in the game, jumped on top with three runs in the first inning.

An error, a single and a walk loaded the bases. A throwing error by second baseman Glen Wright on a ground ball brought in one run, and a bases-loaded walk issued by losing pitcher Bob McDonald brought in another. An RBI-single by Kyung-Ho Kim made it 3-0.

A sacrifice fly by Kwang-Hyon Kim extended the margin to 4-0 in the third.

South Korea scored five more runs in the fourth to make it 9-0. The big blows were a three-run homer by Hyok-Don Kwon and a solo home run by Kyung-Ho Kim. Kyung-Won Kim added another solo shot in the sixth.

Earlier, Chris Radcliff lined a two-run homer in the sixth inning to lift Altamonte Springs to its victory over Southport.

With the score tied 2-2, Jimmy Musselwhite opened the top of the sixth with a single, the first hit off loser Kevin Kavanaugh.

Radcliff then lined his home run over the right field wall.

It is the second straight year a team representing the American South made it to the finals. Last year, Marietta, Ga., won the championship, beating Barahona, Dominican Republic, in the final game.

Altamonte Springs had taken a 2-0 lead with unearned runs in the first inning.

AFTER TWO walks, Southport center fielder Brett Detty collided with right fielder Craig Hendrick on Radcliff's fly ball. The ball dropped to the ground as two runs scored. Detty was assessed the error.

Southport made it 2-1 in the third after Dan Boehm reached base when winning pitcher Aaron Iatarola booted his grounder. He moved around on a wild pitch, a sacrifice and a ground out.

Southport tied it 2-2 in the fourth on another unearned run. Kavanaugh singled, moved to second on a wild pitch and scored when first baseman Danny Albert threw wildly trying to nail Kavanaugh at third after a ground out.

Non-winner Reinhardt produces record 64

DENVER (AP) — Alexandra Reinhardt was pinching herself. It felt like a dream — her course-record 7-under-par 64 — and she had difficulty keeping her emotions in check.

"Everything went right out there today," Reinhardt said Thursday after taking a 3-stroke lead in the first round of the $200,000 Columbia Savings LPGA Classic.

"I made some long putts I didn't expect to make. I had to settle myself down a couple of times. I was getting too excited. I enjoyed watching it myself. It was really a neat experience."

Reinhardt, a non-winner in 10 years on the tour, entered today's second round with a 3-shot edge over Patty Sheehan, the LPGA's leading money-winner this season, and Sally Little, who is rebounding from health problems of a year ago.

Another shot back at 68 were Jo Ann Washam and Deborah Petrizzi, while Carole Charbonnier and Debbie Hall were tied at 69. Defending champion Pat Bradley and two-time Columbia winner Beth Daniel were among those at 1-over 72.

Reinhardt, who finished third in last week's tour stop and admits she is on a roll, had eight birdies and a single bogey in her round over the 6,258-yard Green Gables Country Club course. Starting on the 10th hole, she sank birdie putts of 35 feet at both the 11th and 15th holes, canned a 20-footer at No. 1 and made five more in the 8-to-12-foot range.

The 31-year-old Albuquerque, N.M., native worked at nearby Columbine Country Club in 1976, the year she didn't play the tour after losing her card. Columbine was the site of five previous Columbia tournaments, including the last four, but ironically Reinhardt never played well on that course.

"There's a lot of pressure in being the first-round leader," she acknowledged. "I don't want to be so nervous that I can't make a free swing tomorrow."

Sheehan, who has pocketed $241,672, including four first-place checks in 1984, had a remarkably steady round, with four birdies and no bogeys. She hit 13 greens and used 27 putts.

Little, who won this tournament the last time (1979) it was played at Green Gables, fired off seven birdies but suffered three bogeys.

Sheehan complained about "missing a lot of 10-to 20-foot putts." After knocking in birdie putts of 25 feet at the third hole and 12 feet at the fourth, she went 10 holes without another birdie. "I just kept telling myself to keep hitting the ball well, and one of these times a birdie putt will fall. I didn't get discouraged."

She hit her sand wedge to 10 feet on the par-5 15th hole and sank the putt for a birdie. At 17, she hit a five-iron to 10 feet and made that putt for another.

"I'm hitting the ball pretty well," said Sheehan, 27, of Los Gatos, Calif. "I felt really tired coming into this tournament. I couldn't quite get it going, but this round will help."

Little, traditionally one of the tour's top 10 money-winners, fell to 139th last season. Bothered by abdominal surgery and arthroscopic surgery on her left knee, she played in only nine events.

"The thing I'm most pleased about is that I kept my concentration for 18 holes today," said Little, 32, of Lakeland, Fla. "That's a big change for me.

"When you play as competitively as I have for 13 years, you build your concentration. But with five months off last year, it has been hard to get that concentration back."

Little has come at least part of the way back.

Jim Palmer considering pitching comeback

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Three-time Cy Young award winner Jim Palmer said Thursday that he is considering a pitching comeback that could begin with his playing winter baseball.

"I still think I can pitch. It's a matter of whether I'm willing to do what it takes."

Palmer, 38, who was released by the Baltimore Orioles earlier this season, said he is "leaning toward" playing winter ball in Puerto Rico.

"I don't miss the travel but I miss pitching every fourth day. I've had some teams talk to me," he said but did not name the teams.

Palmer was interviewed at the 38th Little League World Series. He will provide color commentary for ABC-TV during Saturday's title game.

Two self-imposed factors could stand in the way of Palmer's return to baseball, he said.

He would miss seeing his family as much as he has this summer, and he is not certain he wants to end, at least temporarily, his broadcasting career.

Astros hit Cards 20 times

Associated Press

The Houston Astros continue to hit their stride — and the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Astros rapped out a season-high 20 hits Thursday night as they beat the Cardinals for the fifth time in six meetings this year, 9-6.

Terry Puhl went 3-for-3, including his seventh homer of the season, and drove in three runs. Denny Walling had four singles in five at-bats while Bill Doran had three hits, including a double, the Astros' only other extra-base blow.

Houston, winners in 11 of their last 13 games, moved into a virtual tie with idle Atlanta for second place in the National League West, 10 games behind San Diego, after playing the day's only game in the NL.

"The bats are going to have to take over," Puhl said. "That's what it's going to take to challenge San Diego."

Walling said: "This is the third time in my career I've had four hits in a game. No amount of adversity seems to phase this team. We just seem to keep coming back. It would be nice to see San Diego run into some trouble. What with four double-headers on the road, who knows what could happen?"

St. Louis broke to a 4-0 lead in the first two innings, chasing Astros starter Mike LaCoss. LaCoss was also hurting from a bruised right forearm he suffered when Tommy Herr's first-inning line drive hit him.

Herr drove in two runs and scored once to lead the early charge. Altogether, Herr was 4-for-5 with three RBIs.

Astros rookie pitcher Julio Solano, LaCoss' replacement, started the Houston comeback with his first major-league hit, a single to right to open the third inning and Puhl later delivered a two-run single.

Houston reliever Dave Smith, 2-2, got the victory with two innings of work and Dave Rucker, 1-3, lost because of rookie pinch-hitter Jim Pankovits' run-scoring single in the sixth inning. Pankovits has produced eight RBIs with seven pinch-hits this season.

Both teams are hovering around the .500 mark, but St. Louis manager Whitey Herzog feels the Astros should have higher expectations.

"They're swinging the bats and they're hot," he said. "We're starting three rookie pitchers and tonight (starter Danny) Cox didn't pitch well. We've had no consistent hitting this year."

The Astros' hitting has improved consistently, from .237 on June 5 to .267 after Thursday's game.

Blue Jays 6, Indians 1

Doyle Alexander pitched a four-hitter and George Bell drove in two runs Thursday as the Toronto Blue Jays beat Cleveland 6-1, snapping the Indians' eight-game winning streak.

Alexander, 12-5, struck out seven and walked three in winning his fourth straight game. The Blue Jays had lost five consecutive times to Cleveland.

"I tried to do what I do every time I go out on the mound, keep us in the ballgame and give us a chance to win," Alexander said. "Today I mixed them (his pitches) up a little bit.

"I threw quite a few fastballs early. My ball was moving all over the place with the wind. Maybe that set them up for the changeup later on."

The Jays took a 1-0 lead in the first inning without a hit off Don Schulze, 2-5. Dave Collins walked with one out, stole second and went to third on catcher Jerry Willard's throwing error, one of three errors he had on the day. Ernie Whitt then drove him home with a sacrifice fly.

Brewers 5, Twins 2

In the only other American League game of the day, Mark Brouhard and Bill Schroeder hit solo home runs as the Milwaukee Brewers stopped a five-game losing streak by beating the Minnesota Twins 5-2.

Bob McClure pitched a six-hitter for the Brewers, cutting Minnesota's lead in the AL West to five games over California and Kansas City.

Twins want trade voided

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Twins say they are prepared to ask baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn to void the trade that left them with an injured shortstop, but no action was taken Thursday by the American League team.

"Nothing official has gone in yet. We're getting something ready to file," said Tom Mee, the team's public relations director. "Apparently the Cardinals are being dealt with first."

The St. Louis Cardinals had traded shortstop Chris Speier to the Twins Sunday for cash and a minor leaguer.

Speier reported to the Twins with a bruised left heel and was placed on the 15-day disabled list Wednesday after aggravating the injury in Tuesday night's rain-shortened game against Milwaukee.

To replace Speier, the Twins brought back shortstop Houston Jimenez, who was optioned to the Twins' Triple A farm club in Toledo, Ohio, to make room for Speier.

The Twins said they got special permission from American League President Bobby Brown to bring back Jimenez.

"I understand that they (the Cardinals) assured us (Speier) was in fine shape and ready to play baseball," said Twins Executive Vice President Howard Fox.

Bears have shot at Cotton Bowl

SWC Preview

WACO, Texas (AP) — The Baylor Bears have been to two Cotton Bowls under Coach Grant Teaff and they have the talent in 1984 for a legitimate shot at a third one.

But the Bears lost 72 percent of their offensive players from a 7-4-1 Bluebonnet Bowl team in 1983 and face a tough on-the-road schedule.

If Baylor can stay healthy and somehow defeat Brigham Young and Oklahoma starting out, a confident Bears squad could take the Southwest Conference by storm.

TEAFF IS less than thrilled about the team's schedule.

"If we could get two victories out of our three road games (the third is in Lubbock against Texas Tech), I think we could be a very, very good football team," he said. "If we don't, it could be a struggle.

"We feel good about the way our program is going," he said. "However, our defense will have the monkey squarely on its back the first few games until our offense gets going."

The Bears lost 16 lettermen, including All-America receivers Gerald McNeil and speedy Bruce Davis, All-America offensive lineman Mark Adickes, and All-Southwest Conference tailback Alfred Anderson.

Also missing is short-yardage quarterback Allen Rice, who was excellent at moving the team on critical third and fourth down situations.

"The overall offensive firepower won't be the same because of the all the people we lost," Teaff says.

However, the Bears have the talent to be good again.

Quarterbacks Cody Carlson and Tom Muecke give Teaff two of the best at that position in the country.

"If you wanted to start building an offense, you'd want to do it with a proven quarterback — and we have two," says Teaff.

Carlson finished last season ranked fourth in NCAA passing efficiency and was tops in the SWC in that category. Muecke was second in the conference in passing efficiency.

Teaff used a quarterback shuttle last season but may alternate them by quarters this year. He would prefer just one starter, though.

"I want these two guys to push each other to the highest levels of performance," said Teaff. "I can't lose either way."

A BIG question mark is whether former defensive back Ron Francis can succeed Anderson. Francis was a starting defensive back two years ago.

"We wanted to see what he could do, and he showed us he can handle the tailback job," says Teaff.

Baylor's defense will be led by end Ervin Randle, linebacker Kevin Hancock and roverback Aaron Grant.

Teaff says of Randle: "He ranks with any defensive end in the nation, better than most. He and (Texas A&M's) Ray Childress are two peas in a pod."

This is Teaff's 13th season at Baylor. He hopes when he looks back it was a lucky 13.

Two clubs better than one

JEREMY RANCH, Utah (AP) — Senior Dan Sikes and PGA Tour regular Bill Kratzert proved that two clubs are better than one.

The dynamic duo eagled three par-5s to fashion a 12-under-par 60 and carry a two-stroke lead into Friday's second round of the $450,000 Shootout at the Jeremy Ranch.

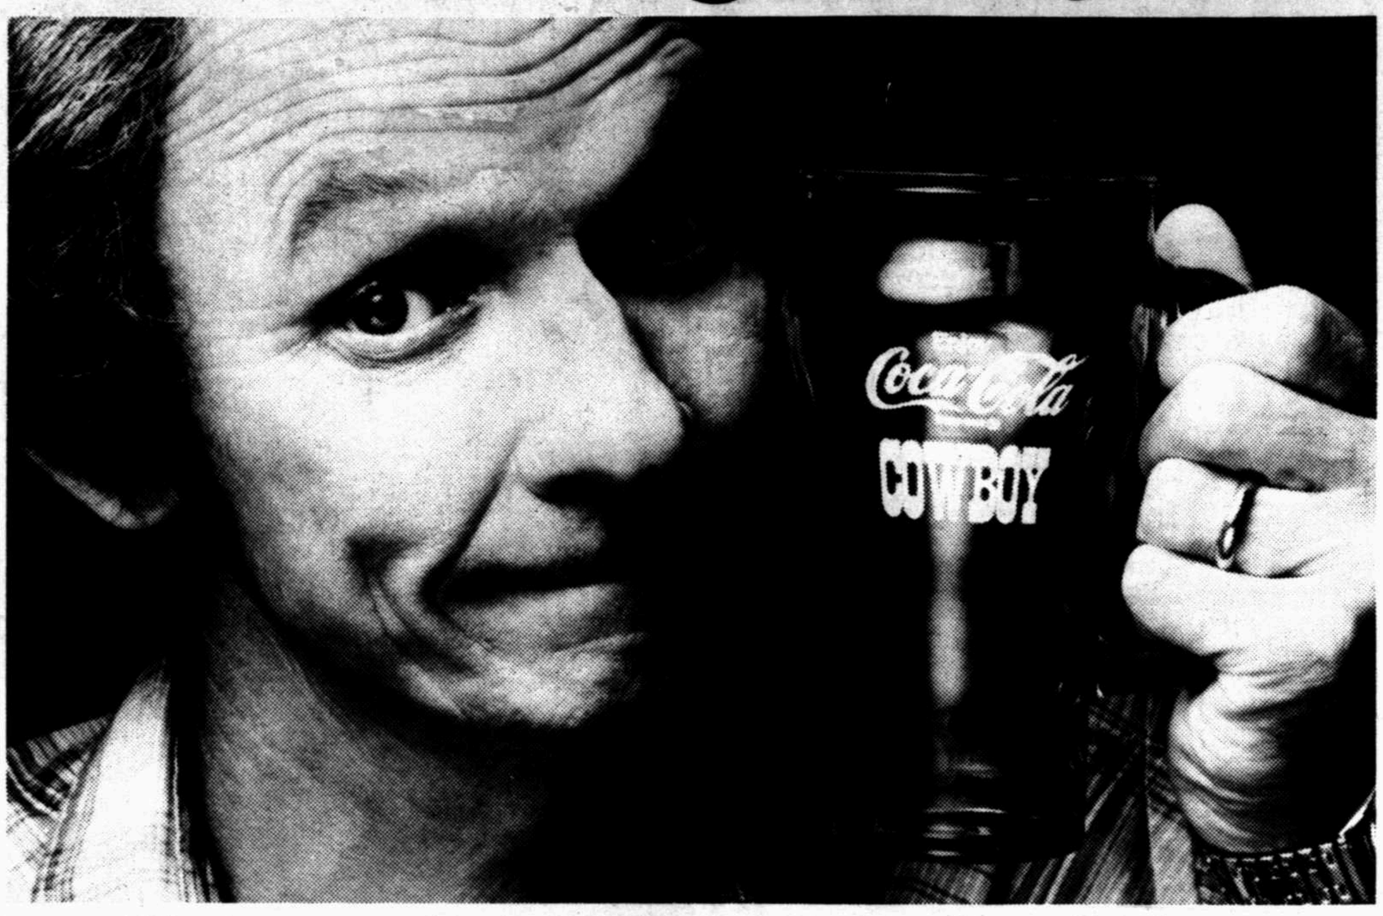

Sikes, who ranks eighth on the Senior Tour money list this year, teamed with Kratzert to fire a 7-under-par 29 on the back nine holes in the Senior Tour-regular PGA Tour best-ball event at the 6,947-yard Jeremy Ranch Golf Club Course.

And yet the pair had hoped to break 60.

"That would've been something. We had some chances and didn't capitalize. I thought we were going to do it," Sikes said.

Kratzert said the team's lead going into today's round means "we can loosen up a little now. If we had shot a 66 or something today, we'd have to grind a little tomorrow (Friday). It's nice to be in the position we're in ... but we haven't won anything yet.

Pete Rozelle thinks USFL teams misguided

CHICAGO (AP) — United States Football League club owners, having made their momentus decision to challenge the National Football League for fall audiences, returned home, possibly to ponder the wisdom of their action.

Those who harbor dreams that the move, starting in 1986, will lead to some USFL teams being absorbed by the older and more powerful league, received little encouragement from NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

Rozelle said Thursday that USFL owners are misguided if that is their intention.

"I just can't see it happening," said the commissioner. "There's just no sentiment for it. When we expand, we'd want to pick our own cities and our own owners.

"There are many, many reasons why it would not be feasible. One of them would be antitrust problems. We had to get a bill through Congress to merge with the AFL," Rozelle told the New York Times.

The NFL commissioner, in response to comments from New Jersey Generals owner Donald Trump that the USFL move would hurt NFL television ratings and increase NFL salaries, said, "Donald has an erroneous view if he thinks this shakes up the NFL."

Rozelle said he had talked to about 10 NFL owners and all of them welcomed the USFL shift.

"Everyone I spoke to said they're in favor of going to the fall because it stops spreading football out," the commissioner said.

The switch to a fall schedule, after one last spring-summer card next year, also will likely end the USFL's first crack at college talent. The 2-year-old league held its college draft in January, more than three months before the NFL, and was able to sign some top talent.

Its future success in that area remained uncertain.

"I think there are a lot of risks we can't anticipate," USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons after the two-day owners meeting had ended. "But there are a lot of things that can be done."

The first of those was the move announced Wednesday of the league-champion Philadelphia Stars to Baltimore. The second was the approval Thursday of the merger of the Oklahoma and Oakland franchises.

The league now at 17 teams has been forced to nurse two failing franchises in Los Angeles and Washington and is without a network TV contract for the 1986 transition season.

Simmons said it was unlikely the USFL would enter the spring season next year with 17 teams.

"The question of whether to go ahead and add a franchise or consolidate further to 16 (teams), or even 14, will depend" on what a committee of owners studying the implications of a move to the fall season in 1986 recommends, Simmons said.

Simmons said several groups have expressed interest in the Los Angeles franchise now that the fall season is set. And he said the league already has endorsed Florida real estate developer Sherwin Weiser's attempt to purchase the Washington franchise, although he conceded the league wouldn't wait much longer for a final agreement.

The final element in the "shakeout" depends on Eddie Einhorn, the owner of baseball's Chicago White Sox and the recent buyer of the USFL's Chicago franchise. He has not yet committed to fielding a team for 1985 — in Chicago or elsewhere.

Einhorn, who has taken over management of much of the USFL's television package, would only say the league "would begin negotiations with ABC for fall '86 and beyond after Labor Day."

Radio reporter rides herd on special GOP guests

By TOM JORY

DALLAS (AP) — Chet Douglas, who covered the Republican National Convention for ABC Radio, showed up for the longhorn cattle drive along the Trinity River levee near downtown Dallas in jeans, cowboy shirt and western hat.

"I used to ride a little," Douglas acknowledged as the 6-mile drive, an attraction for convention-goers, began.

Indeed. The 6-foot-6 Douglas is a former actor whose credits include a couple of westerns, "Two Rode Together" with Jimmy Stewart and Richard Widmark, and "Requiem for a Gunfighter." Both films were released in the early '60s.

Douglas' ride was not without mishap. At once point, his horse reared, but the reporter managed to stay in the saddle. And when the drive was over, he discovered the tape, on which he had described the drive and interviewed other, real-life cowboys, was blank.

• • •

Vice President George Bush showed up for an interview at the Republican National Convention with NBC News and asked for the makeup person. The news folks weren't prepared for that; they had no one at the Loew's Anatole Hotel, where the interview was to take place, who could handle the job.

Except for Trish Peters.

Trish Peters?

She's secretary to Bryant Gumbel, host of NBC's "Today," and she volunteered makeup from her own purse.

It wasn't clear who applied the stuff, but Bush seemed satisfied as he stepped before the camera.

• • •

Bob Schieffer, the CBS News correspondent in Dallas for the Republican National Convention, finished an edition of the network's "Evening News" with a report — his own — about Fort Worth 30 miles to the west.

"In the interest of objectivity," he began, "we thought you ought to hear about Fort Worth, too. We thought that mainly because I'm from Fort Worth."

Dallas and Fort Worth, though their names often are said together, aren't the same place, he said.

"While Dallas is proud of its world class hotels, Fort Worth notes that at the stockyards hotel, you'll find a cowboy's prayer on your pillow rather than a French chocolate," the correspondent concluded.

• • •

Broadcasters covering the Republican National Convention stationed 29 satellite dishes outside the Dallas Convention Center, most of them for transmitting their reports to distant stations.

With so much technology crammed into a relatively small space, the Federal Communications Commission established a mobile office at the center to monitor frequencies and make sure that other broadcast signals were not interrupted.

Jess Chairez, an FCC spokesman, said Secret Service communications got top priority, followed by the White House and other government agencies, and then those frequencies used permanently by local broadcasters.

The mobile FCC office is not unusual: there was one at the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco in July.

• • •

Steve Reddicliffe, who covers the news media for the Dallas Times Herald, figured out a way to cover Republican National Convention stories written for his newspaper and the rival Dallas Morning News.

'Treat audience like partner, not customer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — James Stewart, who says he learned about moviemaking from such mentors as John Ford, Frank Capra and Alfred Hitchcock, recalls a piece of advice he once got from a slapstick comedian.

He was on his way to Muroc Dry Lake for location work on the 1936 film, "Speed," with comedian Ted Healy, who had come to Hollywood with the Three Stooges.

"You may get along all right; it's a strange business," Healy told Stewart. Then Healy added: "Just remember: Never treat the audience as customers, always as partners."

Stewart, 76, is one of Hollywood's senior superstars who is still working. He is off to Hawaii in September for location filming on "The Late Christopher Bean," with Carol Burnett.

State judge to decide choice of lawyer in slander suit

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Whether or not Midland lawyer Charles Tighe will be allowed to continue his representation of Midland Police Chief Wayne Gideon in a slander suit instigated by Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith is to be decided within two weeks by 118th State District Court Judge Jim Gregg of Big Spring.

Gregg, who is to preside over the slander suit, held a hearing Thursday noon on Smith's motion to disqualify Tighe on grounds that Tighe's law firm had consulted with Smith's attorney, John Hyde, in Smith's 1982 divorce proceeding.

In early July, Smith filed a $4 million lawsuit against Gideon in which he alleges the police chief aired rumors about Smith's reputedly beating his wife. The sheriff claims those rumors resulted in his defeat in the Republican Party primary election by Gary Painter, a 37-year-old former sheriff's patrol lieutenant and, like Smith, a former Texas Department of Public Safety trooper.

Gideon, accompanied by his wife, Patricia, sat silently in the hearing. He has denied that he ever slandered the sheriff or that he is "responsible for Smith's misfortune."

After the hearing, Gideon said he had "wanted" Tighe to represent him. "I have high respect and regard for him. He's an excellent attorney — a man who practices from the standpoint of fairness and truth."

Gideon, who said he was "insured by the city," said he was "ready to go" to trial. "I'm confident."

Smith said he was "surprised" by the legal arrangement.

"I didn't sue the city." Though he said he's not suing Gideon in his official role as police chief, Smith's lawsuit does identify Gideon as being police chief since 1976.

Midland City Attorney Joe Nuessle said Gideon is covered under the public officials' liability insurance through the Texas Municipal League.

Nuessle, who said Tighe represents some insurance carriers, had represented the city in some suits.

Mayor G. Thane Akins, who said "I really don't know" of any legal arrangements, said he viewed the slander lawsuit as a "no-winner" case.

Evidence in the hearing indicated Smith had hired the firm of Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe & Dawson to counsel Hyde on oil-and-gas and other finanacial matters arising in the divorce proceeding. Smith's wife, Gail Mabee Smith, then 28, had filed for divorce in September 1981 to end their 1973 marriage.

Smith said he had hired the firm "because they were fine lawyers" and because of his friendship with the firm's Robert "Bob" Bledsoe. "He and I have jogged together, run together," Smith said under questioning by his Houston lawyer, Thomas J. Sims.

"We talked about personal relations with my wife," Smith said. "We talked about financial conditions...We talked about oil-and-gas involvements."

"I trusted them. I talked about any and all things that they asked, and I volunteered information."

"Did you pay 'em," Sims asked the sheriff.

"I'm paying on it," Smith said. Court records indicate the sheriff has paid $2,300 on his bill and owes the firm an additional $666.

In cross-examining the sheriff, Tighe asked Smith if the "only reason" he hired Bledsoe and Allen Cummings of the firm was because Hyde wanted Smith to have the firm's "oil-and-gas expertise." Tighe asked Smith if that didn't account for "98.9 percent" of the reason he retained the firm.

"I don't know if I would put a percentage on it," Smith replied. "I knew that was the area he (Bledsoe) could assist me in."

Neither Bledsoe nor Cummings attended any of the divorce proceedings.

Tighe noted that grounds for the divorce were not an issue in the divorce but that community and separate properties were.

Both Cummings and Bledsoe testified. Bledsoe said "in the main" he turned the oil-and-gas issues over to Cummings, who offered Hyde his opinions on the properties.

Teen-ager recalls events leading to Odessa murders

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The only surviving rider in the car that carried two teen-agers shot to death on a south Odessa street June 23 recalled for jurors Thursday the events of the day which ended with his two friends dead.

Jessie Hernandez, 15, recounted how he, Johnnie Moreno and Ronald Don Lopez ended up stopped in a car down the street from the home of Joe and David Mendoza before the shooting started.

David Mendoza, 34, and Joe Mendoza, 27, are on trial for murdering Lopez and Moreno after Moreno's Monte Carlo came to a stop a few houses away from the Mendoza's Autumn St. residence. Apparently, the Mendozas were in the midst of a family celebration when the commotion began.

Hernandez testified that he and his two friends had purchased and drank about 40 beers during the time leading up to the exchange, which occurred about 6:40 p.m. that Saturday. He said they earlier were passed by a car carrying another Mendoza brother and two female family members, when the driver of the other car motioned them to follow.

Near the intersection of Clements and Autumn, Hernandez said Lopez threw a beer container which barely missed the Mendoza's car. In the minutes that followed, Lopez, 19, and Moreno, 18, were slain and Hernandez was stabbed.

Hernandez said Moreno's car would not start when the Mendozas emerged from their house and ran toward the Monte Carlo. While he insisted he had taken cover during most of the shooting, Hernandez also referred to another car which he said fired two shots at Moreno's car before the Mendozas ran up.

None of the three teen-agers had weapons, said Hernandez, who admitted Lopez was known to commonly carry a gun.

Hernandez told jurors he left the car after the shooting stopped. Moreno was bleeding from a gunshot wound as he walked toward the car, then fell to the ground, said the 15-year-old.

Another man, whom Hernandez could not identify, walked up and stabbed him as he was seeking help for his fallen friend, he said.

He denied taking part in the beating of a younger Mendoza brother the Thursday before, which Lopez reportedly participated in. This beating is believed by police to have some relationship to the Autumn St. shootings.

The shootings and the beating are apparently part of a continuing feud between several southside Hispanic families. Police reports indicate that during the alleged beating, Lopez asked 17-year-old Johnnie Mendoza about gunfire into the Lopez home in late May that wounded Lopez's mother.

Since the June slayings, a younger Lopez brother has been charged with murdering a 15-year-old Hispanic who was reportedly riding in a car Aug. 4 with others aligned against the Lopez's.

Rocky Couder with the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission told jurors about meetings held on the southside before the shootings in an apparently unsuccessful attempt "to make it a safer, better community." He recalled Lopez was the only family member at the last meeting, held the same day Lopez allegedly took part in the beating of Johnnie Mendoza.

Couder testified Wednesday he witnessed the events leading up to the gunplay and the shooting of Lopez as he was driving with his family while off duty.

Through a Spanish intrepreter, Ave Maria Diaz told jurors Thursday how she witnessed the shooting of Moreno across the street from her home. She identified Joe Mendoza as the man who shot Moreno.

Diaz's sister, Myrna Roberts, testified she watched Moreno be shot by Joe Mendoza through the home's front curtains. She recalled that about 150 people gathered after the gunplay on the short southside block.

Testimony was scheduled to continue today in the 70th District Court, with Judge Gene Ater presiding. If convicted, the Mendozas face maximums of life imprisonment and $10,000 fines.

Joe, left, and David Mendoza are on trial for murdering two teen-age Hispanics in an alleged episode of continuing southside violence stemming from a longstanding family feud.

Lawyers, unlike medal-winners, 'don't get no respect'

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

The 106th anniversary of the founding of the American Bar Association was observed quietly Tuesday, if it was observed at all.

If there was no fanfare, no presidential proclamation and no ticker-tape parade, well, the nation's 628,000 lawyers don't enjoy quite the same public esteem as its Olympic gold medal winners.

In fact, public opinion polls usually rank lawyers with politicians and journalists at the bottom of the list of trustworthy professionals.

There's nothing new about this — lawyers have been considered unlovable since at least the 16th century, when Sir Thomas More banished them from his "Utopia," and Shakespeare gave one character the line, "The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers."

"There's no question that the public image of lawyers is extremely low," says Midland attorney John Hyde. "It began to fade around the Depression, and the events of Watergate and the large number of lawyers involved didn't help."

Hyde thinks lawyers are vulnerable to public disaffection because they place themselves in a position of trust, and when that trust is abused, "the public reacts very strongly."

"Personally, I'm very proud to be a lawyer," Hyde says, but he also thinks the negative public image of lawyers is at least partially justified by the legal profession's traditional reluctance to discipline its own members.

"The legal profession has probably not policed itself as scrupulously as it should," though bar associations are taking steps to change that, he said.

Another problem is the competitive atmosphere created by the lawyer glut, which encourages those lawyers on the fringe of the profession toward shady legal practices, Hyde says.

Lack of communication between lawyer and client also contributes to the profession's negative image, says Bud Martin, president of the Midland Bar Association.

"Lawyers often don't take the time to explain it" to their clients, says Martin, who also objects to the relatively new phenomenon of lawyers advertising their services.

"I think the nature of the ads you see in bigger cities cheapens the profession."

But the various sins of the legal profession aren't the real cause of its low standing with the public, according to Judge Vann Culp of the 238th State District Court in Midland.

The public may resent such irritations as long delays and excessive fees, says Culp, but the real source of their frustration "arises from the proclivity of the American people to call upon the legal profession and the courts to resolve every conceivable socioeconomic, personal and business dispute."

"We demand that the courts protect our privacy, shield us from public wrong and private temptation, penalize us for our transgressions and restrain those who transgress against us. We ask the courts to tell us when we are dead and see to it that our funeral expenses are paid."

The legal system, in this view, is another victim of rising expectations. This has become a litigious society not merely because lawyers encourage litigation but because the public acquieses willingly, even eagerly, in the hope that an omnipotent court system will solve all its problems. Given these kinds of hopes and dreams, disappointment and disillusion are inevitable.

Possible solutions mentioned by Hyde include the growth of the paralegal system, which provides legal paperwork services for much less than lawyers charge for the same work, and, in civil cases, an arbitration system as a first step before taking the dispute to court.

Casa celebrates 20th anniversary

From Staff Reports

Casa de Amigos will celebrate its 20th anniversary with an open house and "birthday party" from 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday at the "House of Friends'" headquarters at 1101 E. Garden Lane in Midland.

Casa de Amigos is an ecumenical Christian outreach agency which is partially funded through United Way of Midland. It serves Midland's lower income individuals and families at no charge to them.

The open house will highlight Casa de Amigos' 2,600-square-foot expansion, which includes a medical-dental service facility for children, a sewing-crafts room, classroom-library-meeting room, business office, expanded space for senior citizens and a rummage room.

"We've really got something going on here," said Mary Hinkle, director of Casa de Amigos.

"The purpose of Casa is to help people help themselves," Ms. Hinkle said.

The service agency offers educational programs, senior citizens programs and social services.

The multi-faceted programs include the offering of classes in English as a second language, tutoring of school-age children, offering homemaker education classes, the sponsoring of a Boy Scout troop, providing hot lunches weekdays for senior citizens, offering emergency aid, operating a referral service, running a used-clothing room, offering a playground for youngsters, and the offering of craft classes and various other programs.

"We don't charge anything for our services at Casa," Ms. Hinkle said. "We are really for low-income clientele."

Casa de Amigo's medical-dental facility will be operated beginning Sept. 5 by the Junior League of Midland, which had been operating the free clinic in the old Mast Clinic.

Funds for the expansion were provided by a grant from the Mabee Foundation.

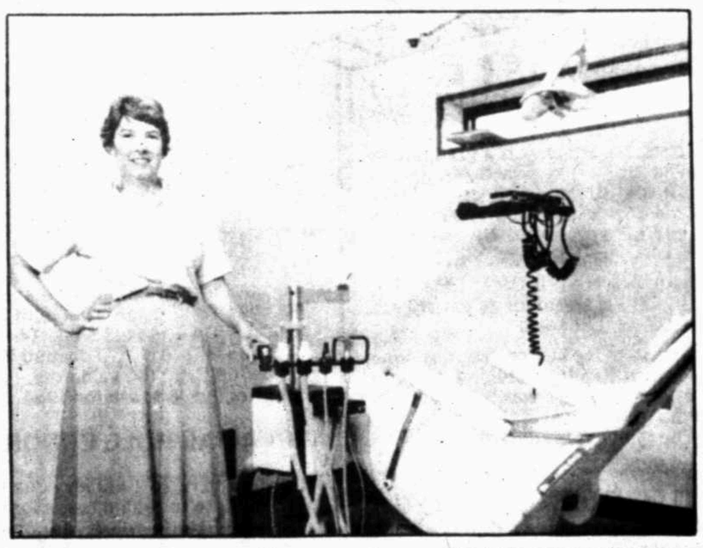

"It's wonderful," Ms. Hinkle had said when the expansion was announced in the spring of 1984.

The facility will include examining rooms, laboratory and pharmacy, a dental cperatory and laboratory, waiting room, restrooms and storage room.

Each weekday, the agency serves between 150 and 200 people.

Sunday's open house will include a pictoral history of Casa de Amigos. And the event's "especially" invited guests are members of Casa de Amigos' first kindergarten class 20 years ago.

"We especially invite those who have participated and volunteered in Casa programs over the years," Alice G. Brown, volunteer coordinator, said in the newsletter, "Casa Caller," which she edits.

Federal agency OKs grant for airport rescue unit

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A $234,900 federal grant for the purchase of a replacement rescue unit at Midland Regional Airport was approved by the Department of Transportation Thursday.

The 1,500-gallon CFR (crash fire rescue) truck would be used as a replacement for a malfunctioning, 10-year-old unit, one of three with similar capacities stationed at the airport, according to an aviation official.

"Usually we auction off the old ones or put them in surplus but this one has some major problems," said Tommy L. Jones, assistant director of aviations/operations. "It's time for it to go, kind of like the old family car."

CFRs, used primarily at the airport, also can be taken to other major fires, Jones said. One unit was used at the scene of a tanker explosion on Interstate 20 Tuesday on the orders of Fire Chief James Roberts. An Odessa man was killed in the four-vehicle accident.

Signals from 'downed' craft turn out to be false alarms

From Staff Reports

The Midland Civil Air Patrol searched early this morning for two possibly downed aircraft after emergency locator transmitters (ELTs) were picked up in the area. But by 9:30 a.m., the signals were found to have been accidentally set off, according to a CAP officer.

Scott Air Force Base in Illinois notified Capt. Richard Kolas, CAP commander, at 6 a.m. that a satellite had detected signals from two ELTs in the Permian Basin area. The signals were coming from southwest Midland County and near San Angelo.

Pilot campaign collects $223,847 for United Way

From Staff Reports

Representatives of 24 Midland companies and businesses participating in the United Way's pilot fund-raising campaign reported Thursday that $223,847 has been collected so far for Midland's United Way.

The goal of the campaign is to raise $550,000, or approximately one fourth of the general campaign's goal of $1.95 million.

The pilot campaign is a kind of dress rehearsal for the general campaign, which will kick off on Sept. 10 and run through Oct. 25.

Among the companies involved in this year's pilot campaign are Earle M. Craig Jr. Corp., whose pledge is up 168 percent over last year's gift; ClayDesta National Bank, whose partial report reflects a 33 percent increase over last year; and O'Neill Properties Ltd., whose completed campaign brought in 11 times as much as last year. Exxon USA's corporate gift is up 22 percent from last year.

With two and a half weeks left until the close of the pilot campaign, many corporations and businesses are still conducting meetings and providing information to their employees about the United Way. The other companies participating in the pilot campaign are Adobe Oil and Gas Corp., ARCO Oil and Gas Co., the City of Midland, Dawson Geophysical Co., Elcor/Ortloff, First City National Bank, Forest Oil Corp., HBF Construction, HBF Corp., HNG Oil Co., Midland Memorial Hospital, The Permian Corp., Republic-Bank/First National, Southwestern Bell, Sun Oil, TESCO, Texas American Bank, Tom Brown Inc., United Bank and Williamson Petroleum Consultants.

The final results of the United Way's pilot campaign will be reported at the general campaign kick-off event scheduled for Sept. 10 at Midland Center.

Goldsmith woman killed

From Staff Reports

A 24-year-old Goldsmith housewife was killed early this morning in a one-vehicle rollover 10 miles west of Odessa, the second such accident investigated by area Department of Public Safety troopers within 48 hours.

Pamela Gordy Hensley was pronounced dead at the scene at 4:10 a.m. by R.G. Hungerford, Ector County Justice of the Peace.

According to DPS reports, Ms. Hungerford was westbound on State Highway 302 at about 2:15 a.m. when she veered into the median and overcorrected, turning her 1981 Chevrolet pickup onto its left side. The vehicle skid down the road, rolled over several times and stopped in a ditch on the northside of the highway. Ms. Hensley was thrown from the vehicle.

Her body was taken to Easterling-Wilson Funeral Home in Odessa.

A 33-year-old Seminole man was killed early Thursday morning in a similar accident on U.S. 62, about 13 miles west of Seminole in Gaines County. Juan Jose Gonzales, a well-service employee, was eastbound at a high rate of speed when he passed two vehicles and ran off the road to the right at about 3:20 a.m, the DPS said. He also overcorrected, rolled his vehicle and was thrown from the car.

Teen-age mother gets custody of twins

GILMER, Texas (AP) — A battle over a pair of infant twins that a judge once ordered divided between their teen-age parents has ended in a more orthodox custody arrangement.

Stan Carter, 18, and 17-year-old Dina Denise Carter reached an out-of-court settlement this week under which the mother will retain custody of the 8-month-old children and her husband will be allowed to visit them once a month.

But state District Judge Virgil Mulanax, who once ruled that each parent should take custody of one child, saying he hoped to reunite the couple, said he agreed to the arrangement reluctantly.

"It's over now," he said Wednesday. "I still believe, like I have all along, that these two young people didn't really want a divorce."

At issue in the lawsuit was the marriage of the high school sweethearts, and the custody of twins born seven months after the wedding. Mrs. Carter left her husband's home on Feb. 10, when the twins were less then 3 weeks old, and moved 250 miles south to her parents home.

"I'm satisfied with the decision — not pleased — just satisfied," said Carter, who lives with his parents in the town of Big Sandy in northeast Texas.

"The way the judicial system is in this state a man doesn't seem to have a chance at getting his kids. You have to have serious charges of abuse or other such things for a man to have a fighting chance. But if it's a 50-50 deal, then forget it," he said.

LAWYERS

But it's possible that the public's professed dissatisfaction with the legal system is more symbolic than real.

"All reports indicate that citizens will increasingly call upon the courts to provide a remedy for every wrong."

AIRPORT

"They are designed as all-terrain crash units but we don't usually take them on major 10-50s (traffic accidents with major injuries)," Jones said. "But being out here in the middle of nowhere, sometimes you have to be creative as to what kind of services you offer."

The 1,500-gallon capacity units meet Midland's requirements as an Index C airport, Jones said, adding the CFR units are "primarily for the airlines' protection."

Index C encompasses 727s, the largest regular aircraft at Midland Regional Airport, while an Index D, requiring 3,000-gallon capacity units, would have 747s at the airport. Although "every now and then we get a diversion from American (Airlines) such as a DC-10 or a 747," the Index C classification still applies.

A pre-application for the grant has already been submitted to the Federal Aviation Administration, which would pick up 90 percent of the CFR cost. The City of Midland would finance 10 percent.

Jones said the city council was behind financing the new unit. "They recognize it as a safety item the airport has to have," he said.

According to City Manager Fred Poe, the council authorized admission of the grant and the city's share has been appropriated. "The next step is the FAA will send us written information and a form to accept the grant offer. Then we advertise for bids and it'll probably take about six months to get that truck."

The FAA's share comes from a fund designed for such purchases, Poe said.

"Every time you buy an airplane ticket, 7 percent of it goes into (FAA) funds that finance these local projects."

ELTS

"The ELTs are designed to go off on impact; however they do malfunction from time to time and go off by themselves," Kolas said.

CAP aircraft and a ground crew began searching at about 7 a.m. today, said Kolas, Central Fire Department communications supervisor. The source of one signal was located at Bates Field, where gear had malfunctioned in a plane, setting off the ELT. The other signal was located in San Angelo, although it was not transmitting when the CAP crews arrived. "It probably had gone off accidentally and the pilot realized it and shut it off before we got there," Kolas said.

A Soviet and two American search and rescue satellites (SARSATs) transmit ELT signals to the Air Force Rescue Coordination Center, said CAP Dep. Cmdr. Capt. Clay Shepherd, an employee of the Federal Aviation Administration at Midland Regional Airport. Scott AFB is a receiving station.

Both Midland and Odessa CAPs were involved in the search.

SUIT

Though Smith had said he and Bledsoe talked about the impending divorce, Bledsoe said he didn't remember talking to Smith about the divorce and its causes.

Sims said it's "patently obvious" to him that Smith divulged personal divorce matters to Bledsoe, that that would link the divorce case to the slander suit and that for ethical reasons Tighe nor any member of the law firm should represent Gideon in the case. Even the "appearance of impropriety" should be avoided, he said.

In response, Tighe said it will be "absolutely abundantly clear" that there is no conflict of interest, that Smith's and Sim's claims are "superficial" and that "there is no relationship" between the divorce and the slander suit.

Theft complaints filed with police

From Staff Reports

Two thefts were among complaints filed with Midland police Thursday.

Jose Cuevas Jr., of 1610 N. Weatherford, said a $700 window air conditioning unit was removed from an unoccupied rent house at 4001 Cedar Spring sometime between noon and 3:20 p.m. Thursday. There was no entry into the house.

Emilio Ramirez of 203 W. Cowden told police shears, a saw, jack and toolbox worth a total of $300 were removed from under his porch.

According to reports, the items were probably taken around Aug. 10.

A Midland man, injured early Saturday in a two-vehicle accident on State Highway 191 that killed another Midland man, was listed in satisfactory condition in the intensive care unit at Odessa Medical Center Hospital this morning.

Kenneth Everett Baskett, 21, had been in stable condition Wednesday but worsened and was listed in critical condition Thursday. Joseph Wesley Higgins, 24, of Midland, was killed in the accident.

Emanuel Baptist sponsors revival

A youth-led revival begins today at 7:30 p.m. at Emanuel Baptist Church, 1800 E. Cherry Lane.

Evangelist for the three-day revival is Victor Rodriquez, San Antonio. Rodriquez is a graduate of Hardin Simmons University, Abilene.

Other revival times are 7:30 p.m. Saturday and 10:45 a.m. Sunday.

Music director is Tommy Revilla, Midland. Revilla is a student at Hardin Simmons University.

Roda Sanchez, San Antonio, and Sissy Jaso, Midland, are the featured soloists. Ms. Sanchez is a graduate of Baylor University, Waco. Ms. Jaso, a student at Midland College, is a 1983-84 member of the pop music group "Origen," sponsored by Lee High School.

Sound director is Oscar Lara, Midland. Lara is a student at Texas Tech University, Lubbock.

Art work for the revival was done by Ruben Rendon, Midland. Rendon is a graduate of Texas State Technical Institute, Amarillo.

The public is invited to attend.

First UMC to hold promotion day

Church School Promotion Day at First United Methodist Church will be held Sunday.

All children and youths will move up to their new class according to the grade they will be in for public school or the age they will be on Sept. 1.

This Sunday is also a Rally Day when everyone is encouraged to be back in worship and Sunday School after the summer holidays.

The Rev. Charles E. Lutrick will be back in the pulpit for the 10:35 a.m. worship service after an absence of three weeks for vacation.

In the afternoon, the youth singing choir and three handbell choirs will resume weekly rehearsals from 4 to 5 p.m. The United Methodist Youth Fellowship will meet from 6 to 7 p.m. for a snack meal and program following the rehearsals.

Visitors are welcome for all activities.

NOTICE OF CALCULATION OF EFFECTIVE TAX RATE AND PUBLICATION OF ESTIMATED UNENCUMBERED FUND BALANCES

I, Roland Wilkinson, Tax Assessor/Collector for the Midland Memorial. Hosp. District in accordance with the provisions of Sec. 26.04. Reagan's filmed introduction creates 'reel' controversy

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Conventions are political entities, and if the Republicans put together a made-for-television convention with speeches primed for bursts of spontaneity, there's very little the networks can do to stop them.

But commercials are TV entities, and the networks were adamant that they weren't going to let the Republicans put their glorified movie images of Ronald Reagan on their air for free without some journalistic check and balance.

Control. That was the issue behind the Reagan Film Fuss. TV had to draw the line somewhere.

It was bad enough that the networks this week were giving Reagan and Co. what amounted to a free ride by showing powerful people pictures of a harmonious convention that had no news and no conflicts.

But people — even those who agree with each other and are on their best camera-conscious behavior — are the lifeblood of politics and journalism. They can be questioned, challenged and confronted, and what they say can be spontaneous and alive. A canned film of Reagan introducing Reagan is not the same thing as a real Sen. Edward Kennedy introducing Walter F. Mondale.

This may not be an easy distinction to understand, particularly when the networks give free air time to politicians to wave their flags, drop their balloons and congratulate themselves. But that's why many TV executives are re-thinking whether they should allow the parties to produce made-for-TV commercials, also known as prime-time conventions, in 1988.

A political propaganda film is worse than any of that, they say. It's all manipulation, all image, a collection of celluloid bursts designed to touch the heart, not the head. And it would have been an easy thing to ignore the Reagan film, as the networks did with the Mondale film, if only it hadn't become such a controversy, such a source of interest and, as such, such a source of news.

The news element, craftily created by the Republicans' promotion of the film and, ironically, by the Democrats' own challenge to the networks not to run it, had elevated the 18-minute movie tribute into a news decision.

And it was no simple yes or no, as illustrated by the networks each finding a different way to treat the positive presidential pictures that were designed to make Americans feel good about America and Reagan in the same way that snapshots in Kodak commercials are supposed to make consumers crave cameras.

On Thursday night, NBC and Cable News Network said yes; ABC and CBS said no.

The $425,000 film, produced by Madison Avenue experts, included footage of the president being presidential in China and in cabinet meetingsand patriotic at Normandy and in a mess tent in South Korea. He was wearing army fatigues.

With America-the-Beautiful shots of a waterfall, a wheat field and a wedding, the slick production set the tone of Reagan's re-election campaign — that a confident America should look forward and feel good about itself.

ABC called a political propaganda film a political propaganda film and packaged some excerpts, along with the late-but-not-lamented Mondale movie, in its own report on political image-making.

CBS labeled it "an 18-minute campaign commercial" and told the Republicans it was exercising "news judgment in determining what to broadcast during that time."

While the film was being shown in the darkened convention hall, CBS ran a report assessing Reagan's results vs. Reagan's promises. Using fancy graphics, CBS showed some wins, some losses, with the deficit being depicted as a glass that smashed into the ground. Then CBS showed some brief excerpts of the film.

Class looks to past for use in future

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Students in Professor Gerald Elkan's course, "Entering the 21st Century," at North Carolina State University are learning that sometimes the best designs are the old designs.

The course is based on a 1981 Global 2000 study of what the world will be like in the year 2000, Elkan said in a recent telephone interview.

"My thinking is that all the students (in his class) will be about 40 years old then and be at the height of their careers," he said. If the students are to make an impact on the world, it will happen then, he said.

The class studies food production, energy and mineral resources and the quality of life.

"We see what we can do and what the problems are and what we might be able to do to alleviate some of the problems," Elkan said.

Elkan's students are required to write a paper or design a project that can be used to help solve some the problems the world will face in 2000.

And the students are discovering that for some countries, high-technology may not be the answer.

"We've noted that high technology isn't necessarily the way to go to alleviate problems in the Third World," Elkan said. "With sophisticated equipment, if a gasket goes bad, the whole thing goes out of kilter, and they can't get the part for a year."

One of the discoveries the students have made about the past is a piece of equipment called a hydraulic ram. Elkan said he had learned of the rams and suggested to mechanical engineering student David Eichenberger of Raleigh that he build one for his project.

The pump, which uses the hydraulic action of flowing water to push water uphill, was developed around 1750 in Great Britain. It provided water for cities in the United States with 20,000 to 40,000 people, he said.

Eichenberger built a ram for $42, but it's "not foolproof, it still has bugs in it that need to be worked out," Elkan said.

He said several people have approached the student and the professor about manufacturing the pump for developing countries.

"We want to be real careful that it's done for developing countries and not for people who do it for profit," Elkan said.

Meanwhile, as word of the project spread, Elkan and his student learned of a hydraulic still operating on North Carolina's Roan Mountain. About the size of a vacuum cleaner, it lifts water 500 feet from a small stream to a popular camping and picnic area on the 6,285-foot-high summit at a rate of two gallons of water a minute.

The pump is maintained by local mechanic Oscar Queen, who is employed by the U.S. Forest Services.

Elkan said Queen reported that "except for having to change a gasket once in a while, or a relief valve plugging it up, it just runs year in and year out."

But the pump is just one of a vast but vanishing chest of old-time knowledge that Elkan said can be used to help developing countries.

Another is a non-electrically operated refrigerator that was built in the United States by the Crossley Co. Although about 75,000 such appliances were built, Elkan said he has never even seen one in an antique store.

Elkan said a friend of his, who directs research for a industrial firm once told him, "If one looked back, about everything we ever needed in developing countries has already been used at one time or another and then been forgotten about."

Household sale could net millions

HENRIETTA, N.Y. (AP) — At Linda Peacock's household sale, paperback books are going for 25 cents, magazines for a nickel and a 19th century Bible for $2 million.

The miniature copy of the New Testament handwritten by a 15-year-old girl in England rests on a coffee table in Ms. Peacock's house among old clothes, antiques and toys.

Experts say it's difficult to place a monetary value on the manuscript because there is nothing comparable, and it has neither historical nor research value.

But even though she has never had it appraised, Ms. Peacock does not believe the $2 million price tag is unreasonable.

"You can hold this beautiful manuscript and get a real special feeling inside, knowing the time and effort that was put into it," said Ms. Peacock.

The manuscript was written from 1800 to 1804 in England by Mary Catherine Hodgkinson, the great-grandmother of Sutherland's great-aunt.

"What you have is a great accomplishment by a 19th century girn, and something with great sentimental value," said Mary Huth, assistant director of the Department of Rare Books and Special Collections at the University of Rochester's Rush Rhees Library.

"I think $2 million is rather excessive. Why, you could get a medieval manuscript with lots of illumination and gold for that price."

Entrepreneurs take up cause for wind power

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Experts have called Iowa the best place in the country for turning prairie breezes into electricity, and a handful of business operators may be on the verge of proving it.

By the end of the decade, the state could be dotted with thousands of windmills. But they won't be the rickety-looking structures that children imitate with their Tinkertoys — "water pumpers," as the new breed of windmill entrepreneurs disparagingly call them.

They're talking about sleek, high-technology contrivances which resemble enormous aircraft propellers, with blades as long as 25 feet, atop towers that soar as high as 100 feet. The bigger ones produce 60 kilowatts, enough to run a household and a farm operation.

"Wind generators, we call them," said John Sayler, an alternative energy consultant whose ad nevertheless appears under "windmills" in the Yellow Pages.

Wind energy, nonpolluting and renewable, is sufficiently available in the United States to provide up to 14 percent of the nation's projected demand for electricity in the year 2000, according to a recent study by the Worldwatch Institute of Washington, D.C.

There are only about 60 of the new wind generators in Iowa now, according to Jeff Newburn of the state Energy Policy Council.But if the farm economy improves, energy costs continue to rise, and the state Commerce Commission pitches in, the number is expected to soar dramatically.

"There's no reason why there shouldn't be at least between 1,500 and 3,000 in the next three to five years," Sayler said.

"Iowa is a good wind state," agreed Ken Hach, who owns Hach Energy Systems in Elkader and is president of the Iowa Wind Energy Association. "A study by the Solar Energy Research Institute showed we have more potential wind sites rurally than any other state."

Although Iowa may have the potential, California has the most wind generators in operation. By the end of 1983, more than 4,000 wind turbines were installed on some 40 California "wind farms," many of which do nothing but sell to the utility companies.

Iowa wind-power proponents are optimistic over a law enacted last year which authorizes the Commerce Commission to raise the price that wind generator owners can charge utilities for surplus energy they pump back into the grid.

Until now the price has been only about 1.5 cents per kilowatt hour. The law permits an increase to as much as 8 cents. The commission is considering 6.5 cents, still a dramatic increase.

"You can sell the extra that you don't use back to the utility company," Newburn explained. "If a farmer has windy days, the power he doesn't use goes back to the grid through something called a synchronous inverter. It's measured by a meter."

When the wind isn't blowing, the farmer pays anywhere from 8 to 14 cents per kwh to a utility company. When there's wind, he saves that much for each kwh he produces and uses, plus whatever the utility must pay him for his surplus.

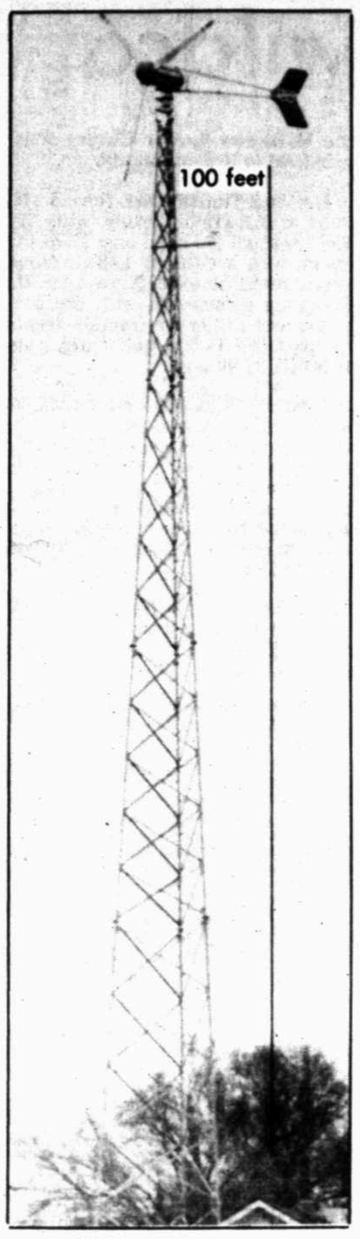

One reason for Iowa's favorable rating among wind proponents is the nature of the state's economy.

Residential producers of alternative energy — wind, hydroelectric and solar — get a 40 percent federal income tax credit on their investment, up to a maximum of $4,000.

But businesses, including farms, enjoy tax credits and depreciations which permit them to recover as much as 75 percent of the cost of a system. Wind generators can cost $25,000 or more.

All businesses have the same opportunity. But winds are better in the countryside, so farms are an important target market for wind generators. And Iowa has both abundant winds and abundant farms.

An Iowa farmer could recover the cost of a system in tax allowances and energy savings in eight or nine years, Sayler said. If the expected Commerce Commission action is forthcoming, he added, it would reduce that time period to between three and five years.

This 4,000 kilowatt, wind-driven generator, sits atop a 100-foot tower, as a demonstration unit at the Winpower of Newton plant. The company produces windmills for alternative electrical energy.

Occidental president quits

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A. Robert Abboud resigned after four years as president of Occidental Petroleum Corp. in an "amicable" parting stemming from "honest" differences with company founder Armand Hammer, the executives said.

Abboud's resignation is effective Sept. 1., Hammer told board members Thursday, stressing that "under Mr. Abboud's presidency, Occidental has made great progress.

"The fact that honest differences exist in no way detracts from his qualities and our continuing personal friendship," Hammer said.

Hammer, who is also the corporation's chief executive officer, read a statement by Abboud that explained his resignation from the board of directors and said he would remain as a consultant to the company.

Differences between Hammer, 86, the company's founder, and Abboud arose during Occidental's acquisition of Cities Service Gas and Oil Co. and Iowa Beef Processors Inc., in 1981 and 1982, Abboud's statement said.

"The planning and establishment of priorities for such an effort are enormously complex in a large multinational company like Occidental and honest differences result," Abboud said.

"Dr. Hammer wishes to assume total leadership in the formulation and implementation of this program," Abboud said. "We thus have mutually agreed to have an amicable, no-fault parting.

"I will remain active in the capacities called for by my contract to assist Dr. Hammer and the company to the best of my abilities," Abboud said.

Occidental executive vice president Dr. Ray R. Irani will succeed Abboud as president and chief operating officer, Hammer said. Metromedia Inc. Chairman John W. Kluge will replace Abboud on the Occidental board.

Abboud is the second Occidental executive to sever ties with the company as a result of the Cities Service and IBP acquisitions.

Last month, Occidental bought out its largest shareholder, David H. Murdock — who was instrumental in the acquisitions — for $194 million. Murdock resigned from the board and agreed not to purchase company securities for 10 years.

Irani joined Occidental in 1983 from the Olin Corp., where he was president and chief operating officer.

Kluge joined Metromedia in 1959, when the company owned two television stations and two radio outlets. Today it has 20 television stations in the nation's largest markets.

Abboud restated the amicable nature of the resignation in an interview Thursday night.

"It is very friendly," he said. "I just want to be of maximum help. I don't consider this the end because I will be associated with the company until 1988."

Moth itch hits tanker crew

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Crewmembers of a tanker whose hull ruptured inexplicably, spilling tarlike oil into the Gulf of Mexico, are battling a new curse — Venezuelan moths which are driving them crazy with itching.

Ed Vickery, a lawyer for the owners of the Alvenus, told The Galveston Daily News Thursday the crew had been taken en masse to a Galveston dermatologist for treatment of a rash caused by the irritant-laden body hairs of the Caripito moth.

He said between 25 and 35 workers were on the crew.

The 670-foot vessel is docked at a ship repair yard in Galveston. Vickery said that as soon as the ship reached port, crewmembers received paper clothes to wear, left their own garments on the vessel and were taken to the University of Texas Medical Branch for treatment.

Their clothes were laundered, and the Alvenus was fumigated to kill the moths, he said.

Dr. Edward Ibert of the Galveston County Health District, the moth has minute hairs coated with an irritating chemical. The hairs break off whenever the moth crawls on fabric or "gets into tight places."

When humans contact the moths or put on clothes containing the broken-off fuzz, the hairs penetrate the skin like bits of fiberglass and cause a rash, Ibert said. Vickery added that some crew members thought the hairs were spread throughout the ship by its ventilation system.

Natura profits up

Natura Energy Corp. has reported higher revenues and profits for its second-quarter and six-month periods, according to Larry Stapp, president.

Natura reported that revenues for the six-month period ended June 30, 1984, increased 226 percent to $821,000 and the company reported net income of $465,000, or $.01 per share, compared with a net loss of $583,000, or $.02 per share, in the first six months of 1983.

For its second quarter ended June 30, 1984, the company reported a 105 percent increase in revenues and a net profit of $86,000, or a negligible per share figure, compared with a 1983 second-quarter loss of $490,000 or $.01 per share.

Stapp attributed the increase in revenues for both periods to gains on the sale of the company's East Texas Prospect. He also noted decreases in total costs and expenses of 71 percent and 57 percent for the second quarter and six months, respectively. These decreases are attributed to impairment expense items in 1983 relating to expiring oil and gas leases, lower interest expense in the current year, as well as 1984 cuts in general and administrative costs.

Dollar mixed; Gold slightly weaker

LONDON (AP) — The dollar turned in a mixed performance against major currencies in early European trading today. Gold bullion prices were slightly weaker.

Dealers said trading was generally trendless following Thursday's late upturn for the dollar in New York after heavy selling during much of the day.

Several dealers said they didn't expect any major changes in U.S. interest rates in the near term.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar lost fractionally against the Japanese yen, finishing the week at 240.93 yen compared with 240.95 yen late Thursday.

In London, the dollar gained against the British pound, which dealers said was hit by fears of a second national dock strike in two months. It cost $1.31095 to buy one pound sterling, cheaper than the $1.3130 price late Thursday.

–2.8707 West German marks, up from 2.8700.

–2.3870 Swiss francs, down from 2.3910.

–8.8145 French francs, up from 8.8095.

–3.2400 Dutch guilders, up from 3.2367.

–1,778.50 Italian lire, up from 1,775.75.

–1.29845 Canadian dollars, down from 1.29895.

Gold prices were slightly lower in very quiet trading.

In Zurich, Europe's biggest bullion market, gold was selling at a bid price of $350.50 an ounce at midmorning, down from $351.50.

In London, the precious metal opened at a bid $350.20 an ounce. The city's five major bullion dealers later recommended a trading price of $350.35.

WeCTOGA president named

ABILENE — Dan M. Fergus, an Abilene oilman and lawyer, has been elected president of West Central Texas Oil and Gas Association.

Other officers elected were vice presidents William J. Stevens, Rick Rhodes, Allan Frizzell and Joe Canon. All are from Abilene except Rhodes who is from Sweetwater. Scott Dueser was re-elected treasurer.

Fergus will become the 35th president of the 51 year oil association at its annual meeting in March, 1985. He will serve as president-elect until then.

Fergus has practiced law in Abilene for 33 years, specializing in oil and gas. He is associated with James H. Smart, Jr. and Dan Fergus, Jr., his son.

Fergus also is a partner in F-G Oil Co., with Fred L. Gerlach, which is an oil and gas exploration and production company. He also owns Vida Oil Co.

He is a past president of the Abilene Bar Association and the Abilene Young Lawyers Association. In addition to being a member of these organizations, he is a member of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, the National Stripper Well Association and Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association.

PBGC schedules tax,land courses

The Permian Basin Graduate Center has scheduled three courses for September at the PBGC Building, 105 W. Illinois, Midland.

"Tax Consequences of Deals for Landmen," Wednesday, September 5, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. This seminar is designed to cover the basic taxation rules of property transfers and identify the major problem areas. Qualifies for five AAPL recertification credits. John M. Malloy, Ph.D., professor of accounting and head of the taxation program, Texas Tech University, will instruct the course. Fee is $150.

"Oil and Gas Taxation — Level I," Thursday and Friday, September 6-7, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. This course covers the basic federal oil and gas tax areas. No experience in oil and gas taxation is necessary. Qualifies for 16 CPE credits. John M. Malloy will instruct.

"Principles of Land & Leasing," Thursdays, September 6 — November 1, from 7-10 p.m. This course is designed primarily for geologists, engineers, and independents not trained in petroleum land work, as well as beginning landmen, brokers, and support personnel. This course is team-taught by local professionals. The first session "Introduction and overview. What is a landman? Title search of records to determine ownership" is taught by Darrell F. Smith, attorney, Midland. Fee for the complete course is $150; individual sessions $25.

For registration or further information, call 683-2832.

Investigation reveals fire hazards at nuclear plants

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — An investigation prompted by fire protection deficiencies at one nuclear plant has found similar problems at two other Tennessee Valley Authority facilities, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission says.

In the event of a major fire, the deficiencies at the Sequoyah and Watts Bar plants could endanger safety systems, including the ability to automatically shut down, NRC spokesman Joe Gilliland said Wednesday.

"We were especially concerned with what we call safe shutdown equipment," he said. "That's anything that you want to have to be able to shut down the plant in the event of an accident."

TVA informed the Nuclear Regulatory Commission Aug. 3 of the problems, which involve compliance with NRC safety standards, and is taking steps to correct them, said Carl Crawford, TVA spokesman.

The plants do not have the required 20 feet between primary and backup electrical cables that control the plants' safety systems and there is too much combustible material in areas separating the cables, said Janice Blankenship, a spokeswoman at Sequoyah.

That means there is a greater chance that a fire in one cable system could spread to the other, she said.

TVA also found that some sprinklers in the two plants were improperly located, Ms. Blankenship said.

Sequoyah, which is outside Chattanooga, began operation in July 1981. Watts Bar, near Spring City, is scheduled to begin loading atomic fuel in Unit 1 in October.

The NRC asked TVA to check the cable systems at Sequoyah and Watts Bar after finding similar problems during an inspection of TVA's Browns Ferry Nuclear Plant near Athens, Ala., in July, said Gilliland.

TVA has promised to determine the extent of the deficiencies and establish a schedule to correct them by Jan. 1, Ms. Blankenship said.

"The cost and how long it will take will depend on the ways that we resolve the problems," she said.

Contract killed between mine union, coal industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prospects for an early and amicable contract settlement between the soft coal industry and the once-mighty United Mine Workers have collapsed, spokesmen for both sides confirm.

The 160,000-member United Mine Workers of America and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association apparently had been making some headway on various issues. Both sides privately voiced confidence about reaching an accord well ahead of the Sept. 30 expiration of the current pact.

But things fell apart Tuesday night, officials of both sides confirmed, although neither side would say what problem developed or what differences precipitated the breakup of negotiations.

The United Mine Workers, which once had the power to wage a strike that could paralyze the country, has been in decline in recent years. The union's share of U.S. coal production has fallen to about 40 percent, and demand for American coal is slack.

The industry bargainers had noted that problem at the outset of negotiations with the UMW on April 24. Bobby R. Brown, chairman of Consolidation Coal Co. in Pittsburgh and chief industry negotiator, had said some financial accommodations were expected from the union to help unionized coal operators meet non-union competition.

Richard Trumka, UMW president, vowed at that time that there would be no givebacks — "no backward steps."

The union has struck the soft coal industry in every contract renewal year since 1974, including a 1978 walkout that lasted more than 100 days and a 73-day strike in 1981.

Brown bags go back to basics

Copley News Service

If the prospect of gearing up to daily school lunches has you yearning for summer, take heart.

Packing varied and healthful totable lunches is mainly a matter of imagination (80 percent) and preparation (20 percent).

Throwing together a colorful array of neatly boxed and bagged goodies may be quick and easy, but all too frequently there's as much nutrition in the package as in the product.

Nutritionally that means packing lunches that combine a variety of fresh, natural foods.

Practically it means not waiting to the last minute to come up with menu ideas. Spend some time thinking about the nutritious foods your child already enjoys and build on them. (Don't be discouraged if a dozen possibilities don't immediately spring to mind, they'll come. No child exists exclusively on bologna, potato chips and snack cakes.)

Make a list and use it as a guide for both shopping and packing.

Most lunches begin with two hunks of bread and something stuck between them. Peanut butter, egg salad, tuna, chicken salad, cheese and ham salad are all traditionals. Vary them with slices of leftover ham, fish, meat loaf and chicken.

When putting your sandwiches together, try some variations on the standard theme. How about substituting bananas for the jelly on the peanut butter sandwich, or raisins, lettuce or alfalfa sprouts?

Team up bacon with mayonnaise, sliced avocado, shredded lettuce and sunflower seeds, or match turkey with avocado dip, Monterey Jack cheese and alfalfa sprouts.

When regular sandwiches begin to pall, serve your child's favorite filling in pita bread, or try something different like a blend of cream cheese and crushed pineapple, diced bananas or peaches between two slices of banana or other quick breads.

Crackers and peanut butter or cheese offer another good variation on the sandwich theme, as do graham crackers spread with fruit-flavored cream cheese.

As an alternative to sandwiches, put together chunks of meat, cheese and fresh fruits on disposable kabobs; fill a widemouthed thermos with hot soup, stew, chili or macaroni and cheese; stuff peanut butter between two apple slices, or spread it on celery sticks. You also can use cheese spread, cottage or cream cheese.

For the child who exists solely on nibbling, buy or make your own trail mix out of dried fruits, sunflower seeds, cereal and nuts.

Raisins and sunflower seeds also make excellent accompaniments to a more traditional lunch, as do whole, sliced or diced fresh fruit, dried fruits, carrot and celery sticks, sliced zucchini, cherry tomatoes, olives, pickles, cucumbers, jicama, boiled or deviled eggs, string cheese, snack crackers, beef jerky, snack-size canned peaches or fruit cocktail and nuts.

Send milk or fruit juice in a thermos or pack liquid-proof beverage containers with frozen juice. In cold weather fill the thermos with spiced apple juice, hot chocolate or bouillon.

Vacuum bottles are ideal for keeping foods at the right temperatures. And you can pack ice bags or packaged commercial gel coolants with lunches. You may find that a lunch box is better than a bag since it offers some insulation.

As a general health rule, if food should be kept hot, keep it hot; if it should be kept cold, keep it cold, reports the U.S. Agriculture Department.

The use of mayonnaise is good in helping slow the growth of bacteria in sandwiches and salads. Despite past worries, mayonnaise does not spoil if unrefrigerated. The worst that happens is its flavor will deteriorate.

Man fights children's vision problems

FOREST GROVE, Ore. (AP) — Only one person in the country holds the degree, Master of Education, Visual Function in Learning. That's Dr. Norman S. Stern of Forest Grove, and he's excited about applying the knowledge behind the degree.

"I've found that I can make a difference," says Stern. "Children have been falling through the cracks in schools. Subtle vision problems are not picked up. The child's self-concept and behavior are all involved. And, we can help. We should stop problems before they become really big ones."

Stern already holds Doctor of Optometry and Doctor of Philosophy degrees. He has gone on to pioneer in Pacific University's new Visual Function in Learning program to better assist children with visual and learning problems and to aid schools in detecting such problems.

Pacific's College of Optometry is one of only 14 such colleges or schools in the United States and Canada, and is the only one on a private liberal arts campus with an education department also, according to Dr. Robert F. Duvall, Pacific's president.

"This master's program ties together our two colleges at Pacific in an exciting way," says Duvall.

In the program an optometrist receives additional theoretical grounding and knowledge of the treatmeent of children's vision problems, and through education courses learns more about the teaching-learning process and the role which vision and vision therapy play in education.

"A reading problem can show up on a half-hour test that is not apparent on a five-minute quiz," Stern explains. "Various materials used in a classroom or phonetic approaches and sight work approaches demand different visual skills."

What readiness skills should the first-grader have? Stern has found that visual skills are important and that the child should be able to identify letters.

"I even learned about recess," he says with a smile. "If a child can track and catch a large ball but not a small one, there could be a visual problem."

DEAR ABBY

Shady deal seen in crystal ball

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Last week I went to a spiritual reader who is supposed to have the power to tell you your past, your future and to make your dreams come true. I was told she charged $20, which was fine with me.

After the first reading, she asked me for another $20 so she could burn a candle to bring back my first love, which is something I have been praying and praying for. I gave her another $20 and she told me to come back in a week.

Well, I went back last night, and she said she would have to have another $50 because the evil spirits blew out the first candle and she would have to light another one to bring back my first love.

I told her I was not a rich woman and that was all the cash I had, so she asked me to leave my VISA card with her so she could buy something for the church in my name. She said that would help bring back my first love. Something told me not to leave it, so I didn't.

I feel like I am being drained for all I have, but it would be worth everything to me if she could bring back my first love.

I need to know if this woman has the power she claims to have. Please answer before I go broke. — UNDER HER SPELL

DEAR UNDER: The only "power" this woman has is to separate people like you from their money. Don't give her another dime! Get in touch with the "bunco squad" of your local police department immediately and report this fraud.

DEAR ABBY: I am 62 years old and have been a widow for two years. I recently met a very nice man, age 64. (He's divorced with grown children.) He's a retired military officer, very intelligent and sensible. He's wonderful company and I know he's interested in me; however, there's one problem. He smells. He looks very clean and neat, but he has a sweaty, disagreeable odor about him.

He wants to see me again, and I would like to see him — but only if he bathes. Should I tell him he has a problem? Or should I just forget about him? — MRS. CLEAN

DEAR MRS. CLEAN: Tell him! You would be doing him an enormous favor. If the cause is internal, he needs to see his physician. If it's external, he needs to know that if he doesn't clean up his act, it's curtains for his social life.

Parenting books' ideas don't always work

By JONI WINN
King Features Syndicate

Every parenting book on the market found its way onto my bookshelves and nightstand. Surely by now somebody has figured out the best way to raise a child, right? Here's what happened when I tried some of the experts' ideas:

— When your child has a tantrum, try to distract him.

I tried this one in a supermarket and watched an entire display of "Lucky Charms" cereal take flight. I felt neither lucky or charmed.

— When your child misbehaves, give him a choice of two behaviors, both of which are acceptable to you.

This one sounded great.

My toddler, Richie, thinks he can race around the dinner table snatching food off everyone else's plates. "Richie," I said, "would you rather sit in your booster seat or your high chair?" Wearing a groove into the floor wasn't one of the choices.

I waited, all smiles, to hear his decision. Now Richie is only 21 months old, but already he recognized my question as the ploy that it was, and responded by choosing not to choose.

— Help him learn to make decisions by letting him select his lunch menu from two nutritious options.

Okay, Richie needs to learn to make decisions. This will be good, harmless practice.

"Richie, would you like a peanut butter or a tuna sandwich?"

This was greeted with loud screaming and desperate pointing at the tomatoes, to which he is allergic.

— Give your child enough time to do a task.

"Honey, put all your blocks away before we leave."

Ten minutes later: "Richie, are your blocks put away? We're late." Ten minutes later: "Richie, hurry — we really must go." Ten minutes later: "What a creative boy you are! Look how you've arranged your blocks all over the room!"

At that point, I grabbed him and left.

Allowance gives economics lesson

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — The sooner parents begin to let their children experience how the economic world works, the sooner the children will understand what it takes to get the material goods they want, says psychologist Dr. Robert Leone.

"Some parents make the mistake of giving their children a spending allowance without expecting the children to do anything in return," says Leone, assistant director of the United States International University psychological clinics in San Diego.

"A spending allowance may only give them the idea that money is always just going to come their way, that it will just fall into their lap," he explains. "Well, that's not the way of the world. In the real world you do 'x' amount of work and you get 'x' amount of money in return."

Leone says an allowance for "value received" can instead be a wonderful opportunity for parents to teach their children the value of a dollar.

For example, parents could give their children an allowance in exchange for a certain number of chores performed each week. Parents can also give their children extra money or extra benefits — such as the opportunity to choose the dinner menu once a week, or a movie, or any of a number of things — if the children do extra work.

"This way," says Leone, "they soon learn to make the connection between what they do and the things they earn and also that if they do extra, they often get extra."

Even children too young for an allowance can "earn" things, Leone says. Parents can set up a system of gold stars for certain tasks or chores performed. Once a certain number of stars are earned, parents can then reward the child with an outing, a special movie or something else already agreed upon between parent and child.

"Is this bribing, this system of rewarding children with money or other benefits for certain behaviors?" asks Leone.

"Well, the classic answer is 'Sure it is; that's the way the world works.' Is it bribing for an employer to say to his employee, 'You come in here at 9 a.m., do your work, leave at 5 p.m. and we'll give you so much a week'? It could be looked at that way, but that's also the way it goes in the real world."

Morning rush avoidable

Copley News Service

It's back-to-school time once again. For busy parents, whether they're trying to juggle careers or household responsibilities with children's school schedules, knowing how to make the ship run smoothly will prevent many new gray hairs.

Robin Kriegsman Glazer, parent counselor and author of the best-selling book, "Letting Go: How to Help Your Two- to Five-Year-Old Become a Well-Adjusted and Independent Child," has several time-saving tips that will help make mornings easier when you're in a rush:

— Dressing. Children should be able to dress themselves and choose their own clothing each day. It is simple to make your child's present room and furniture arrangements well organized, thus making it easier for your child to dress himself.

— Bureau drawers can be divided into compartments with cardboard. Place smaller items in some compartments while larger items, such as shirts and pants, can go into others. This way, items are easier for your child to sort through and will stay neater.

— If you have adequate wall space, invest in expandable cup or hat racks to hang up children's sweaters, blouses and pants. A bonus is that clothing will remain unwrinkled.

— Label each drawer with a photo from a magazine or catalog and a word label of what is inside the drawer to make selecting items easier.

— Children are notorious for choosing clothing by preference and not suitability. So out-of-season clothing should be removed and stored. After all, you don't want your children wearing mittens in August.

— Children will be more willing to dress themselves in the morning if they like their clothes. Little girls love wearing bright-colored underpants and patterned socks. Young boys respond enthusiastically to underwear that features familiar cartoon characters, like Scooby Doo and the Smurfs, according to spokesmen for Hanes, makers of Showtoons underwear.

— Children's clothing should be comfortable and easy to put on. Pullover shirts and sweat pants are good for children who can't button clothing well.

— Purchasing solid pants and print tops that can be interchanged makes clothes selection easier for children.

— Waking Up. No parent likes to wake up a cranky child. Since children rarely get enough sleep on a consistent basis, the more organized you are in the morning, the later your child can sleep. Try eliminating some of your child's morning routines, such as watching television and bathing. Bathing at night is an excellent way for a child to wind down and get ready to sleep.

For children who are still difficult to wake up, try purchasing an alarm clock. Children love to do things themselves and will get a kick out of this responsibility — and setting the alarm.

— Meals. If your child is old enough to prepare his or her own breakfast, you can leave non-perishable items on the table or store all perishables within his or her reach. If you prefer to prepare your child's breakfast, serving foods that your child enjoys and which are nutritious will help ensure a good start to the day.

After all, soup and a sandwich are full of nutrients and perfectly appropriate for breakfast — especially if your child eats them. Prepare lunches the night before and leave in the refrigerator marked with the child's name or, for children too young to read well, a personalized sticker.

The more pleasant his morning hours are, the easier it will be for your child to have an enjoyable day.

Child prepared for school

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — In addition to being provided with new lunchboxes and shiny shoes, children should be emotionally prepared for their first day of school, says Elaine Wilson, Extension parenting specialist at Oklahoma State University.

Mrs. Wilson advises parents to ask older children to help reassure the younger ones about school. And if a child insists on not going to school, she suggests reminding that child in a matter-of-fact way that all children are required by law to go to school.

Children sue parents

Hearst News Service

Most young people would be miffed if their parents told them to get a job, go to school or get out of the house, but they would recover their composure after slamming a few doors or sulking.

Not Tom Hansen. In 1978, at age 24, the Boulder, Colo., man filed a $350,000 "parental malpractice" lawsuit, accusing his mother and father of "outrageous conduct" during his teen-age years.

Hansen's lawsuit was quickly dismissed, but his case helped serve notice to parents everywhere that they no longer are immune from being taken to court by their children.

Legal experts estimate that although only 15 to 20 children each year file suit against their parents, the number will skyrocket as society grows more comfortable with the idea of child vs. parents.

While Hansen's case may seem frivolous, others are tragic. A growing number of young incest victims are using the courts to strike back at their parents, and are winning huge settlements.

Most states at one time had common-law statutes or doctrines granting parents immunity from prosecution by their children, but over the years they have been eliminated in all but a handful of states. In a recent decision overturning Massachusetts' doctrine, Suffolk County Superior Court Judge Andrew Gill Meyer noted: "Children enjoy the same right to protection and to legal redress for wrongs done to them as others enjoy."

"Issues that relate to child rearing shouldn't end up in court," said Robert Manookin, a Stanford University law professor and an expert in family law. "Parents have to be able to tell their 13- and 14-year-old children what time to be home without worrying about being sued over it."

Parenting hints simple

Hearst News Service

Her younger daughter, 10 months old, prompted Kay Wallingford, a children's librarian in Austin, to try one of the hints that she and close friend Carole Riddell include in their new book, "Helpful Hints for Fun-filled Parenting."

The two women, who attend the same church and live within six blocks of each other, sandwiched the book in between having babies. Riddell has two boys, 5 and 3.

"It was difficult sometimes to write with small children, especially because we try to give them first priority on our time," Riddell said. "We had a lot of help; we used the time they were at the Mothers Morning Out program (part-time play and day care at their church) and our husbands took care of them some at night. But a lot of the time we had to work with the children playing around us."

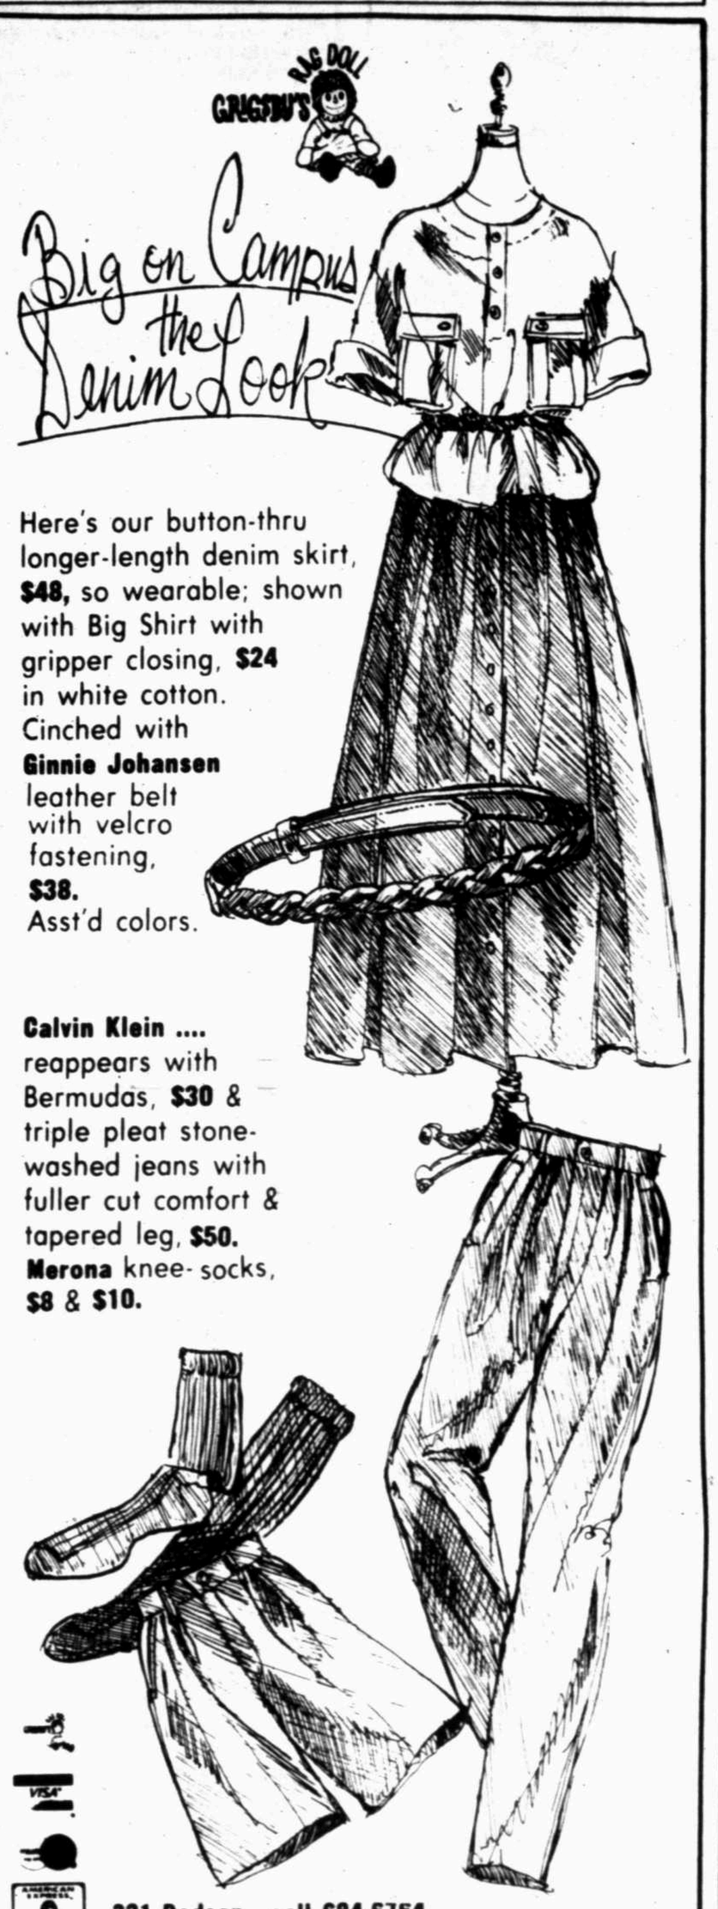

Writing wasn't the only time-consuming part of the book. Many of the hints were tested by them or by friends to see if they worked.

The book contains hints for children of all ages, despite a disclaimer on the cover which says it's for children to age 8. Among the ideas:

— Develop a silent signal or number system for correcting children in front of others. For example, holding up two fingers may mean "please don't interrupt." Make a practice of silently saying "I love you" by squeezing a hand three times, holding up three fingers or winking three times as a special, secret reassurance in crowded places.

— Stuff ice-cream cones (the wafer kind) with tuna, egg salad, cottage cheese or yogurt for a nutritious lunch.

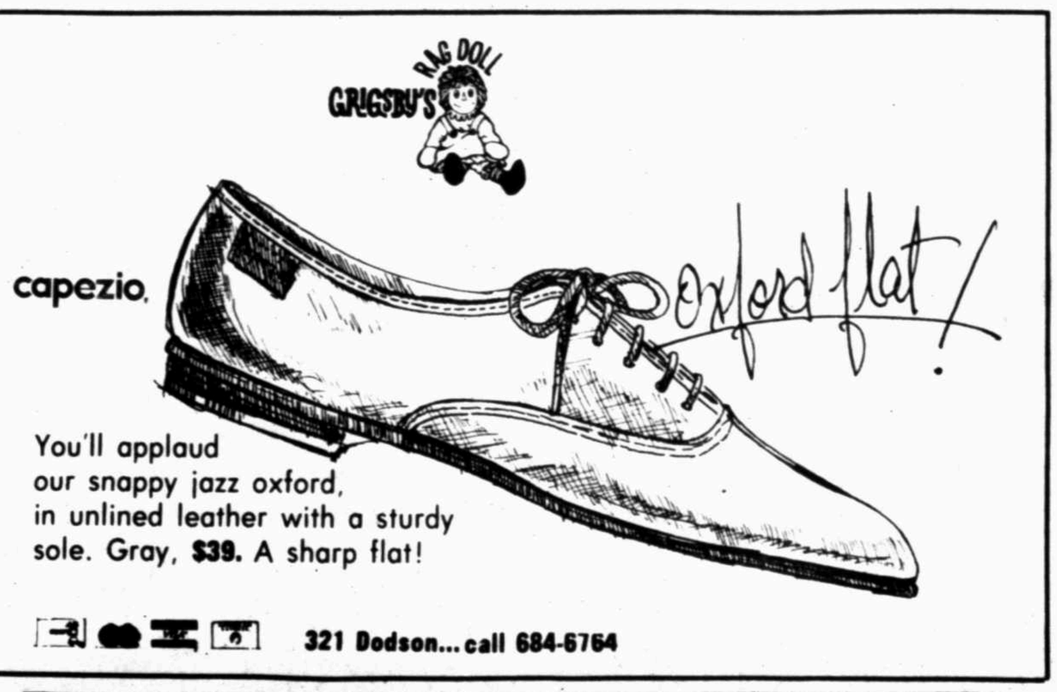

— To remove gum from hair, dab peanut butter on the gum and rub the hair gently between your fingers. Or soak a washcloth in witch hazel and saturate the hair and gum. Or apply cooking oil or egg white to the matted hair and rub gently.

Irwin again searching Ararat for ark

Irwin

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Former astronaut James Irwin is at it again — climbing Mt. Ararat in search of Noah's Ark for the fourth time.

"I believe that I will be more succesful this time and will send you good news from the peak," Irwin was quoted as saying by a Turkish news agency before starting the quest Thursday.

The independent Hurriyet News Agency reported that he was accompanied by his son-in-law, John Christianson, friend Dick Bright and Turkish guide Ueman Sungur. Irwin was to set up a base camp at the 10,499-foot level and a second camp at 13,779 feet by this evening, the agency said.

The group will approach the 16,945-foot peak in the last three days of their climb and will focus their searches for the Biblical resting place of the ark in that area, the agency added.

Klein

NEW YORK (AP) — Designer Calvin Klein, who in the past 16 years has managed to build his fashion house into a $1 billion-a-year worldwide business, says he owes most of his success to luck.

"I don't think I deserve what I have...I have far too much," says Klein, 42, who spends $15 million a year on advertising and recently bought the company that manufactures his best-selling blue jeans for $61 million.

The designer made his comments in this week's Parade magazine.

Klein says he and his single rack of designs were discovered in a cubbyhole room on Seventh Avenue by a Bonwit Teller executive who accidentally got off on the wrong floor.

The mistake led to a $50,000 order.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Producer Robert Evans says he and Las Vegas financiers Edward and Fred Doumani have settled their bitter legal battle over "The Cotton Club," a $48 million film due for release in December.

In return for his 50 percent interest in the movie, Evans was relieved of having to repay loans totaling $3.5 million and gets a cash payment he described as "close to seven figures."

Evans, who spent years developing the film about the famed New York speakeasy of the Prohibition Era, will receive screen credit as producer and presenter of the film, which stars Richard Gere, Gregory Hines and Diane Lane and is directed by Francis Ford Coppola.

Evans also will receive additional payments from the Doumanis if ticket sales exceed certain levels.

"They were very generous ... ," Evans said. "I hope their investment in 'The Cotton Club' proves a favorable one,"

The Doumanis also reportedly paid $5.8 million to acquire investor Victor Sayyah's 25 percent share in the film, leaving the Doumanis as sole owner.

The Doumanis have no telephone listing in Las Vegas. Sayyeh also could not be located.

The settlement ends months of feuding that ended with Evans suing the Doumanis for control of the film. Evans said he and the Doumanis are now on such good terms that they may even make another film together.

Asked about the film's financial prospects, Evans said: "If the drama in the film is one-half as good as the drama in making the film, it will make profits."

CHESTER, Conn. (AP) — Stage star Colleen Dewhurst recently paid a visit to a rehearsal of an unusual production of "All the Way Home," at the National Theater of the Deaf.

"The only distracting part occurred when the voices didn't 'jive' with what the actors were 'saying,'" Miss Dewhurst, 58, said during a break.

In the production, members of the national repertory company express the dialogue through sign language while two "hearing" actors speak their parts.

"This is an exceptional ensemble," Miss Dewhurst said later. "They know each other and have a tremendous ability to express themselves."

"All the Way Home" is Tad Mosel's adaption of the novel, "A Death in the Family" by James Agee. The theater is getting ready to start a national tour Sept. 28.

Jackson, friends ride in balloons

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — It was hot-air balloons at daybreak for Michael Jackson and 22 friends as the group took a ballooning break from the Victory Tour concert series for an hour-long ride over the city.

"They would sing out a little bit and then stop," said Jackson's balloon pilot, Steve Adams, 36. "Mostly they'd holler at the other balloons and wave."

The excursion was strictly recreation for Jackson, currently on nationwide tour with his brothers.

Adams, who was instructed by the Jacksons' agents to shoot no photographs and seek no autographs, said he was not sure if people below knew who was waving and shouting at them.

"We were just above the ground as we passed over one subdivision and they talked to some people on the ground," he said. "Most of the people on the ground were looking up at us and some were waving."

Adams said Jackson got a kick out of watching some pilots thrill their guests by dropping low over Orlando lakes to dip their gondola baskets in the water.

"One time one got in the water pretty deep and he thought that was pretty great. He got a big charge out of that," Adams said.

The flights cost $100 a person.

The balloonists came from as far as Tampa and were told in advance that Jackson wanted his privacy protected.

One of the pilots involved in the airborne outing said he was told Jackson was staying at a special suite named in his honor at the Hotel Royal Plaza at Walt Disney World.

But a spokeswoman for the hotel, where Jackson stays during his frequent jaunts to Orlando, would neither confirm nor deny the singer was a guest.

Adams, who flies balloons professionally for Rosie O'Grady's Flying Circus in Orlando, said Jackson was accompanied in his balloon by business associate Bill Bray, two women and a boy.

Jackson picked Rosie O'Grady's because "he's flown with us before three times," according to Joe Kittinger, manager of the flying circus.

Jackson, who is still on his highly publicized Victory Tour, is scheduled to play this weekend in Buffalo, N.Y. Next weekend, it's Philadelphia.

More nude photos of Vanessa uncovered

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Miss America Vanessa Williams, who resigned her crown under fire because of sexually explicit photos of her with another woman published in Penthouse magazine, has acknowledged posing nude for a second photographer.

Penthouse publisher Bob Guccione said the second collection of nude photographs of Miss Williams will appear in the January issue of his magazine. The pictures were taken by photographer Greg Whitman and Miss Williams signed a model's release before posing for the shots, she says.

"When I first heard that Penthouse was publishing nude photos of me, I assumed they were by Whitman," Miss Williams said. "In my naivete, I had signed a release for Whitman."

Miss Williams said she later "felt badly" about the pictures and asked Whitman if she could have the photos back, The New York Times reported today. The photographer returned them all, she said, except for several color slides which Whitman said he wanted for his portfololo.

The first set of photos, featuring Miss Williams and model Amy Wessell, were taken by photographer Tom Chiapel and published in the September issue of Penthouse. Miss Williams, a former Miss New York, insists she never signed a release form for those photos. Both sets of photos were taken in the summer of 1982.

"She is unquestionably going to sue (over the Chiapel pictures)," said an advisor to Miss Williams, Dennis Dowdell. "We expect to file in court next week."

Guccione said he became aware of the second set of nude pictures when he received a telegram from a photographer offering them. Guccione declined to name the photographer.

Miss Williams said her resignation was prompted by her knowledge of the second set of photographs and her fear that "people wouldn't forgive a second mistake."

'Full-time Christian' curses demolishers of Austin hotel

AUSTIN (AP) — Tony Hearn, who wants to turn the old Alamo Hotel into an "intercity mission," put a curse Thursday on anyone who trys to tear down the 55-year-old downtown lodging place.

"We are claiming this in God's name for God's people," Hearn said as he drew a faint red line around the brick five-story structure with liquid from a plastic bottle.

At first he said it was "lamb's blood" then admitted it was vinegar and red food coloring.

Hearn told reporters called to the scene that he was a former journalism instructior at Southwest Texas State University but now a "full time Christian" who helps operate a noontime feeding place for transients.

The Alamo was built in 1929 as an up-to-date lodging place, particularly for travelers and salesmen.

In later years the building became mostly a residence hotel with former President Lyndon B. Johnson's brother, Sam Houston Johnson, a prime tenant with an apartment on the top floor.

In recent years the hotel has been a low-price spot for transients with a massage parlor and a beer tavern on the first floor.

The current owner, Ray Howard, obtained a city permit recently to tear down the building although he has never announced such action. An auction sale of fixtures is set for Aug. 23.

"I hereby call down a curse on anyone who crosses this line, a curse if they enter the building to destroy it," Hearn said, pointing to the faint red, rank-smelling line he had dribbled around the building. "I warn anyone who crosses this line they are going to be dealing with God's angels."

"I further call a curse on this property that it will never yield a profit to whoever holds it," Hearn said.

Things had been going so badly that Trump Coup Tommy had stayed away from the club for months. Readers will remember that Trump Coup Tommy played like a duffer except in one circumstance — when trumps were breaking badly. Then he became the Superman of the Green Baize, bringing home seemingly impossible contracts with ease.

Tommy had hardly sat down at the table after his long absence when this hand was dealt. East preempted in third seat, but it takes more than a preempt to silence Tommy. He weighed in with four hearts, and West's double was deafening. North was resigned to another 1,100 penalty, but he reckoned without Tommy's peculiar talents.

Warned by the double that trumps were stacked on his left, Tommy played the hand in masterful fashion. He won the ace of diamonds and led the 10 of spades. West held off with the ace, and Tommy promptly shifted his attention to clubs.

He cashed the king and ace of clubs and ruffed a club in hand. Now he led another spade. West could do no better than win the ace and get out with a spade. Tommy won on the board, ruffed another club, then exited with a spade.

Down to nothing but trumps, poor West was forced to ruff and exit with a trump. The low trump was won on the table, and now Tommy conceded his diamond loser. West was forced to ruff his partner's winner and lead away from the king of trumps into Tommy's ace-queen tenace. So Tommy ended up scoring three trump tricks and two ruffs, two spades, two clubs and a diamond for a total of 10 tricks!

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, August 25, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Conductor-composer Leonard Bernstein, "Falcon Crest's" Mel Ferrer, super reliever Rollie Fingers, actors Sean Connery and Van Johnson, Alabama Gov. George Wallace and longtime actress-dancer Ruby Keeler share your birthday. Polish up your image and new doors will open. A change in your appearance could lead to a new romance or that job you have always wanted. Do something about an unfinished project. The financial outlook is bright. Although you often seek guidance from older people, you are less eager to hear the views of your contemporaries. Recognize the need to keep up with new trends and make fresh contacts.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A theme of confidentiality persists, enabling you to build on yesterday's gains. The weekend looks promising for travel. Go out this evening. One-on-one relationships enjoy favorable influences.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An abrupt change could have an adverse affect on business affairs. Ask questions if someone tries to upset the status quo. Guard against the temptation to eat or drink too much tonight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A dynamic newcomer's influence could lead to a change in lifestyle. Handling a secret romance is a real challenge. Unexpected financial gains enable you to go on a luxurious outing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An early morning communication problem is solved in time to salvage your travel plans. Stay out of a power struggle between neighbors. Outdoor activities prove refreshing.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day for taking care of personal chores and errands. Curb an urge to overspend. You may have to change your evening plans if a family emergency arises.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Romance dominates your thoughts. A Leo wants you to make a commitment. Stand your ground if you have any doubts. A bright idea may require a friend's support. Use your powers of persuasion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Travel enjoys favorable influences, although a loved one's unpredictable behavior could upset some evening plans. A financial agreement that seems restrictive promises long-term security.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A young person may be trying to deceive you. Postpone taking financial action. Do not overlook a friend's special day. Luck favors your business efforts. Influential person is on your side.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not let a difficult situation drag on; end an unproductive alliance. Romance is less sensitive and more rewarding than yesterday. Curb spending. Group entertainment holds special appeal tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Some surprises are in store; stay flexible and they should be pleasant ones. An affectionate relationship grows stronger. Go out of your way to assist an older relative.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Events at a distance could change your plans for today. Give a little -- you gain a lot. A house-hunting expedition proves lucky. A financial matter can be straightened out.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Opportunity knocks; open up at once! A joint investment brings a wonderful return. Loved one could act in an eccentric manner. Be careful not to judge until you have all the facts.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Three killed in train-bus collision

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Three people were killed and more than 70 injured when a passenger train and bus collided in dense fog at a railroad crossing, the government PAP news agency says.

PAP said the crash occurred Thursday near the industrial city of Skarzysko-Kamienna, about 80 miles south of Warsaw.

The agency said the train — traveling from Deblin to the southern city of Kielce — hit the rear of a city bus at a protected railroad crossing.

Further details were not provided, including how many people were aboard the train and bus or what led to the accident.

Government will extend test

MOSCOW (AP) — The government will extend its experiment with worker incentives such as profit sharing and local autonomy to several more industries, the official Soviet news agency Tass says.

In January, the electrical and heavy engineering industries began the experiments on a nationwide basis. They also were applied on a limited basis to light industry, the food industry and some local services.

Enterprise directors were given more autonomy in making decisions, and workers were allowed to keep a percentage of profits, or savings from the cost of production.

Tass gave no assessment on results of the policy, saying only that the Kremlin leadership decided the experiments should be applied to machine-building, ferrous metallurgy, food and light industry and services industries next year.

Lawyers: Fugitive may surrender

ROME (AP) — Lawyers for Licio Gelli, the fugitive who headed a Masonic lodge linked to tax fraud and conspiracy, say he will surrender if Italian authorities agree to place him under house arrest in his villa in Tuscany.

Gelli believes that a recent reform of Italy's laws on preventive detention would allow for such arrest while he awaits trial, his lawyers told reporters Thursday.

His lawyers, Elio Vaccari and Fabio Dean, did not say where Gelli is hiding.

Gelli, 65, is wanted on charges including conspiracy against the state, political espionage and fraud.

He headed the secret P-2 Masonic Lodge, which has been linked by police and a recent parliamentary report to a variety of crimes, including tax evasion, bribery and conspiracy to undermine the government.The now-outlawed lodge included politicians, military officers and industrialists.

Four ordered to stand trial

LONDON (AP) — A Nigerian and three Israelis have been ordered to stand trial on charges connected with the foiled kidnapping of former Nigerian Cabinet minister Umaru Dikko.

The four are accused of kidnapping the exiled politician July 5, injecting him with drugs and attempting to fly him out of Britain in an freight crate.

The four defendants, who appeared in magistrates' court Thursday, will be tried in Old Bailey Criminal Court. No date for the trial was set.

The magistrates rejected a plea by Mohammed Yusufu, 40, that he be freed on grounds of dilomatic immunity. Yusufu maintains he is a Nigerian diplomat, but magistrate Sir Bryan Roberts said the British Foreign Office reported it had no records to verify this.

In court with Yusufu were Dr. Lev-Arie Shapiro, 43, Alexander Abitbol, 31, and Alexander Barak, 27, all Israelis.

Dikko was transport minister in the civilian government of President Shehu Shagari, which was overthrown in a Dec. 31 military coup. The new regime wants Dikko returned for trial and alleges he plundered state coffers of millions of dollars.

Investigators find mass grave

AYACUCHO, Peru (AP) — A mass grave containing 25 to 30 bodies reportedly has been found by government investigators looking into the disappearance of a reporter in Peru's guerrilla zone.

The newspaper La Republica said Thursday that the grave was found 18 miles from Huanta, where its correspondent, Jaime Ayala, 22, disappeared on Aug. 2 after being seen entering marine headquarters.

Reporters in Ayacucho, the state capital in the guerrilla area, confirmed the report of the mass grave and said peasants led investigators from the attorney general's office to the site Wednesday.

It raised to more than 150 the unofficial count of bodies found in the Andean mountain area since the armed forces assumed a bigger role in fighting guerrillas July 6.

Officials of the attorney general's office in Ayacucho were not immediately available for comment.

Nation Party picks candidate

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — The opposition National Party has picked attorney and journalist Alberto Saenz de Zumaran to replace jailed party leader Wilson Ferreira Aldunate as its presidential candidate for the Nov. 25 election.

Saenz de Zumaran, 43, and his vice presidential running mate Gonzalo Aguirre, 44, were chosen at a party convention Thursday.

The election will be the a first since 1971 and is designed to end more than 11 years of rule by the military, which took over the country in 1973 coup. The elected civilian government is to assume power on March 1, 1985.

Ferreira, who ran for president in 1971, was picked in December to head the National Party ticket. He was arrested June 16 upon returning from 11 years of self-exile and faces charges of collaborating with subversives and insulting the armed forces.

Ferreira is barred from political activity, and asked his party to choose a new candidate.

Man guilty of false identity

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — A Florida man who assumed the name of a dead infant and successfully carried off the deception for 14 years, pleaded guilty in provincial court to three counts in connection with the false identity.

The court was told Thursday that Frank Allan Schrama fled the United States in the fall of 1970 to avoid sentencing on drug charges in Tallahassee, Fla.

He assumed the identity of George Francis Sanborn, who died in infancy, and used it to obtain Canadian documentation, including a passport.

He moved to Calgary in 1981, married and had two children. He ran a successful massage and acupuncture clinic.

His charade began to unravel when he was invited to an acupuncture conference in China earlier this year. He had lost his identification in a movie theater and had to reapply for his passport.

On June 25, the Alberta vital statistics branch, in checking its records, found a death record for Sanborn.

He is to be sentenced Sept. 13.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals, addressed to the Mayor and City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, for the furnishing and installation of 7,750 square yards of 8" caliche base with 2" HMAC surface on the Fire Training Facility Parking Lot will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 2:30 p.m. on the 6th day of September 1984, and publicly opened and read aloud at 3:00 p.m. on the same day.

Any bid received after closing time as stated above will be returned unopened.

Bid envelopes shall be plainly marked "Proposal for Project No. FS-14, Fire Training Facility Parking Lot".

Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the City Engineer, Fifth floor of the City Hall, 300 North Loraine, Midland, Texas, and may be secured upon a deposit for FIFTY DOLLARS ($50) for each set as a guaranty of safe return of the plans and specifications. The full amount of the deposit will be returned to the contractor on submission of bid on the work, with such plans and specifications, or upon return of the plans and specifications immediately after the examination of same and advising the City Engineer that no bid will be submitted; otherwise the deposit for same shall be forfeited.

A bid bond or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance and payment bonds. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.

The City of Midland, Texas, reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals of bids, to waive technicalities, and to make any investigation deemed necessary concerning the bidder's ability to perform the work covered by the plans and specifications, to award this bid by items and to accept what in the judgment of the Mayor and City Council is the most advantageous bid.

NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR IN SITU BRINE MINING PERMIT

WILSON SYSTEMS, INC., P. O. Box 7192, Odessa, Texas 79760 has applied to the Texas Department of Water Resources for a Class III brine permit (Proposed Permit No. BR50043) at the Midland Brine Station which is currently operating under Authorization by Rule (31 TAC Section 353.15). The proposed permit would authorize production of 10 lb./gal. brine from a brine well located on a 4.89 acre permit area. One freshwater well drilled on the site supplies fresh process water and also serves as a monitor well to detect any migration of brine solutions into overlying aquifers. Surface facilities consist of one brine storage tank, one lined brine retention pond, one freshwater storage tank and related surface facilities. The production zone is the Salado Salt Formation at a depth interval of approximately 1,700 to 2,310 feet. The surface injection pressure of the brine well shall not exceed a maximum of 790 psig. No surface discharge is authorized from any production or processing areas.

The Midland Brine Station is on a 4.89 acre site approximately six miles southeast of Midland. The brine well is approximately 425 feet from the west line and 1050 feet from the south line of Abstract 584, V T & P RR Survey, Block 38, T-2-S, Midland, County, Texas.

Legal Authority: Sections 26.028 and 27.018 of the Texas Water Code, as amended, and 31 TAC 341 and 353 of the Rules of the Texas Department of Water Resources.

No public hearing will be held on this application unless an affected person who has received notice of the application has requested a public hearing. Any such request for a public hearing shall be in writing and contain (1) the name, mailing address and phone number of the person making the request; and (2) a brief description o how the requester, or person represented by the requester, would be adversely affected by the granting of the application. If the Commission determines that the request sets out an issue which is relevant to the permit decision, or that a public hearing would serve the public interest, the Commission shall conduct a public hearing, after the issuance of proper and timely notice of the hearing. If no sufficient request for hearing is received within 30 days of the date of publication of the notice concerning the application, the permit will be submitted to the Commission for final decision on the application.

Requests for a public hearing and/or requests for further information concerning any aspect of the application should be submitted in writing to the Chief Hearings Examiner, Texas Water Commission, P. O. Box 13087, Capitol Station, Austin, Texas 78711, Telephone (512) 475-2678.

Issued this 15th day of August, 1984.
