County okays survey request

Scurry County commissioners this morning accepted a check from the Texas Forest Service for installation of dry hydrants and approved a request from Western Geophysical of Midland.

Nick Harrison of the Texas Forest Service presented commissioners with a check for cost-sharing for two dry hydrants within the county. Partial funding for the hydrants came from the Rural Cooperative Fire Protection program, administered by the state forest resource and rural firefighting agency.

The dry hydrants will serve as water sources for rural firefighting where limited water is available.

The court approved a request from Western Geophysical of Midland to conduct a seismographic survey on a 14-acre tract at Cogdell Hospital.

In a statement from Western Geophysical, the operations will be conducted at the expense and risk of the company, rather than the county. County Judge Bob Doolittle said that the survey will be conducted on outlying land, and not right around the hospital.

Commissioners recently received a request from R.E. Glasscock Oil Properties in Midland to lease minerals on the 14 acres owned by the hospital for exploration purposes. The court voted to advertise for bids to lease the property. According to Doolittle, the bids are to be opened June 8.

The court approved a budget amendment of $188 to cover additional costs of the purchase of right-of-way along county road 1673 between Highways 84 and 180.

A budget amendment of $23,342.50 was recently approved by the court in order to purchase the land and improve the road, which leads to the city landfill.

The court approved line-item transfers of $5,418 for Precinct 1 and $4,000 for Precinct 3. Both transfers were from contract mowing expense to part-time salaries.

In discussing mowing, Precinct 1 Commissioner Jerry Morgan said he feels it would be more economical to have the mowing done with county equipment by someone who knows their way around the county. "It costs us less per mile, because we are not having to repair someone else's equipment because they don't know our

Sales tax rebates up

Sales tax rebates were up for the month of May in many area cities, including Snyder.

The City of Snyder received $95,383.57, up 12.88 percent from the $84,498.30 received in May of 1991.

Abilene, Andrews, Big Spring, Lubbock, Odessa and Post noted increases in May, while Colorado City, Lamesa, Roby, Roscoe, Rotan, San Angelo and Sweetwater marked decreases from one year ago.

Scurry County received $66,691.29, up 24.47 percent from the $53,578.54 taken in a year ago.

Year-to-date totals for Snyder show a total of $393,936.45, up 4.47 percent from the $377,067.34 received in the first five months of 1991.

Scurry County marked a 12.33 percent increase compared to the first five months of 1991, from $240,174.94 to $269,798.24 received since the beginning of 1992.

May payments include taxes collected on March sales and reported in April by businesses filing monthly tax returns. Merchants send the taxes to the state comptroller's office with their tax returns. The state keeps its share and returns to cities, counties and other taxing entities their portion of the local sales tax.

A list of area cities and rebates for May follows:

Abilene received $1,893,318.96, up 7.57 percent from the $1,760,148.42 received during the same month one year ago. The year-to-date total of $7,511,532.65 is up 5.19 percent.

Andrews received $85,816.88, up 15.66 percent from the $74,196.35 received during the same month one year ago. The year-to-date total of $329,264.78 is up 5.39 percent.

Big Spring received $370,894.92, up 4.98 percent from the $353,291.01 received in May of 1991. The year-to-date total of $1,391,527.58 is up 9.59 percent.

Colorado City marked a 4.48 percent decrease, from $40,641.97 received in May of 1991 to $38,822.01 this year. The year-to-date total of $164,541.53 is up 4.64 percent.

Lamesa received $56,687.72, down 4.58 from the $59,408.91 received one year ago. The year-to-date total of $231,013.26 is down 2.12 percent.

Wastewater plant bids mark agenda for council tonight

Snyder City Council will consider bids for the construction of a new city wastewater treatment plant at a special meeting today.

The meeting is set for 6:30 p.m. in the council chambers at City Hall.

At a bid opening May 13, the city received eight bids for construction of the plant, ranging from $3,942,264 to $4,579,664.

The city was approved for a State Revolving Fund loan of $4 million to cover original estimated costs for plant construction, including fees for engineering, testing and surveying and legal and financial assistance. After the bid opening, the council learned that the cost would be about $600,000 more than expected.

In a meeting last week, the council was presented with possible cost-saving changes for the plant by Terry Bilderback of Parkhill, Smith and Cooper.

Council members voted for bid reductions of $215,000, which include a $200,000 reduction for the use of alternative pumps and a $15,000 reduction for installing aluminum handrails rather than steel.

The option will reduce the cost of construction, but still require $375,000 in additional funding. The council chose to request the additional funds through the State Revolving Fund system, which must be approved by the Texas Water Development Board.

Other business for the council this evening will include a review and discussion of possible sewer rate charges for the new plant.

The city has proposed a base rate of $5.16 per customer, plus a consumption rate of $1.60 per 1,000 gallons of usage based on average consumption from the months of December, January and February.

States can tax mail-order sales if Congress oks it, ruling says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today cleared the way for Congress, if it chooses, to let states tax mail-order sales. The ruling could have an enormous impact on American business, state treasuries and millions of consumers.

In a case from North Dakota, the court said states may, with congressional approval, force out-of-state catalog companies to collect the taxes — sales or use taxes — their in-state customers owe on mail-order purchases.

The high court in 1967 banned states from imposing tax-collection obligations on businesses that have no physical presence within their borders.

The ruling 25 years ago said that imposing such obligations would violate out-of-state companies' due-process rights and interfere unduly with interstate commerce.

Although states have always been legally able to tax consumers for mail-order purchases, they have no means of enforcing such laws if they cannot collect the taxes from the merchants.

Today, the court unanimously reversed that part of its 1967 decision that said such tax-collection obligations violate due-process rights.

But by an 8-1 vote, the court said imposing such obligations — without congressional approval — still interferes unduly with interstate commerce.

Justice Byron R. White voted to overturn completely the 1967 decision by ruling that no interstate-commerce problem is posed by states requiring mail-order companies to collect the taxes.

Today's decision still bars states from collecting taxes on mail-order sales but leaves Congress free to lift that prohibition.

Mail-order sales reportedly are more than $200 billion a year, an estimated fourth of all retail sales nationally. One reason for their rapid growth has been the attraction for consumers of tax-free purchases.

The amount of tax money the states have not been able to collect is a matter of some dispute.

The National Governors' Association and the direct sales industry contend the amount exceeds $3 billion a year. The mail-order industry contends the amount is about $1 billion a year.

The North Dakota Supreme Court ruled in 1990 that the landmark 1967 decision, in a case called National Bellas Hess vs. Department of Revenue, had become an "obsolescent precedent" that need not be followed any longer.

It said technological advances of the 1970s and 1980s "created revolutionary communications abilities and marketing methods which were undreamed of in 1967."

Those advances, the state court ruled, make it far easier for a mail-order company to collect from its customers the appropriate state tax.

But some mail-order representatives have said the administrative expenses for collecting taxes and returning them to state and local governments nationwide could drive smaller catalog companies out of business.

Lottery tickets arrive in Austin

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Texas rancher rode horseback to deliver the initial batch of lottery tickets to three Austin dealers, setting the pace for a week of festivities marking Friday's lottery kickoff.

In a scene reminiscent of the Pony Express of the Old West, Canadian, Texas, rancher Buddy Webb on Monday rode his steed to Kevin's Cookies and Cream, the Congress Avenue Booksellers and the Downtown Pit Bar-B-Que to unload tickets from leather saddlepacks for the "Lone Star Millions" game.

Webb, the star of the Texas Lottery's first TV commercial advertising the new scratch-and-win ticket game, also posted proclamations from Gov. Ann Richards at each site declaring Friday "Texas Lottery Day."

"Within spittin' distance of the Capitol, just like the rest of the state, there's plenty of places for Texans to buy their lottery tickets," Webb said. "Everything from a bakery to a barbecue."

A fleet of United Parcel Service trucks will deliver the rest of the first game's 300 million tickets to 15,000 licensed lottery retailers across the state on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Retailers officially can begin selling the $1 scratch-off tickets at 6 a.m. Friday. The tickets offer instant prizes ranging from $2 to $10,000 and give Texans a chance to win a weekly drawing for $1 million in cash.

The SDN Column — By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "A man with a lot of irons in the fire may have just given up golf."

If you think people are not disgusted with the tone of the 1992 presidential campaign, you might consider one of the political jokes making the rounds.

It's a tale about a candidate who wanted to jazz up his campaign. The candidate had tried just about everything without a rise in the polls.

An aide suggested that he seek help from the spirit world. In desperation, the candidate finally agreed.

So, on a dark and stormy night, everyone gathered around the table holding hands. Lights off, the seance began.

The candidate pounded on the tabled and asked to speak to George Washington. There was a flash of lightning and a roll of thunder. Then it became hushed.

"What message do you have for me?"

"Go to the people," George said. "Go to the people."

That wasn't sufficient for the candidate, so he rapped on the table again for more information. The candidate asked to speak to Thomas Jefferson.

"What message do you have for me?"

"The same as President Washington," Jefferson said. "Go to the people."

The candidate still was not satisfied. He knocked on the table a third time, asking for Abe Lincoln. "What message do you have for me?"

"Don't go to the people," said honest Abe. "Go to the theatre."

Insurance is a sore topic. It caused one Wag to note one of the most common and, at the same time, greatest of dangers to which we are all subject for which there is no available insurance.

It's called politics.

Tourist parks gear up

DALLAS (AP) — More tourists would thrill operators of Texas theme parks and other attractions who are predicting an onslaught of travelers this summer.

"I think it's going to be the biggest season we've had since Sea World opened," said Don Hansen, executive vice president of the Texas Hotel & Motel Association. The 250-acre aquatic theme park opened in spring 1988.

"Consumer confidence has increased, and that gives us an indication that people are spending a little bit more and having a little bit more money for travel," said Joe Horak, a spokesman for the non-profit U.S. Travel Data Center in Washington.

"Last year was such a tough year when people were not taking those vacations because they were strapped for cash," said Horak.

To attract the tourists, Fiesta Texas in San Antonio heralded the opening of its summer season during the Memorial Day weekend. And Six Flags Over Texas in Arlington aggressively advertised new shows and rides.

Six Flags spent $5 million on a new ride featuring animated Looney Tunes characters, called Yosemite Sam and the Gold River Adventure. Both made debuts Saturday. An additional $3 million was invested in a new Batman stunt show which will begin June 6.

Other parks across Texas also braced for a busy summer.

At Astroworld, spokeswoman Debra Ford said sales of season passes are running ahead of last year. The park has also introduced a new water ride, "Adventure Rivers of Texas."

"Business is up 20 percent right now, so all indications are that the summer is going to be great," Ms. Ford said.

Travelers can still expect a summer season increase in hotel rates despite the recovery.

"We had some very low (sales volume) growth rates in the second and third quarters of 1991, and lo and behold, the fourth quarter came along with a six percent increase" statewide, said Bruce Walker, a hotel industry consultant with Source Strategies Inc. in San Antonio. "And there are very few new properties being built, too."

An increase of 3 or 4 percent is expected, Walker said.

Memorial erected

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) — A pink granite memorial to 23 victims of the nation's deadliest mass shooting lists only the date of the attack and the victims' names in alphabetical order.

The memorial was unveiled on Monday as a permanent reminder of Oct. 16, 1991, when Gunman George Hennard of Belton terrorized patrons eating at Luby's Cafeteria after he drove his truck into the building and opened fire.

Hennard shot and killed 23 people before killing himself.

The monument to the dead is 5 feet tall, 3 feet wide and 3 feet long. Aside from the victims' names, the memorial includes a bronze plaque on the back that lists individuals and businesses donating to the project.

More than 100 people attended Monday's brief ceremony at the site of the memorial near the Killeen Community Center. Members of victims' families received red roses.

Boy With Two Mothers May Be Twice Blessed

DEAR ABBY: I work in a hospital. Two of our social workers have had a long-standing lesbian relationship. Recently, one of them had artificial insemination and gave birth to a baby boy.

I know that many children are raised by their mothers with very little parental input from their fathers, but I feel that the raising of this boy by a lesbian couple cannot be in the best interest of the child. I am left to ponder the extreme selfishness of these two women, and the motive of the physician who enabled this pregnancy.

If the gods first make mad those they wish to destroy, we must be well on our way.

OLD-FASHIONED IN GLENDALE

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: Some people have further to go than others. I commend the physician who enabled the pregnancy and believe it is always in the best interest of a child to be raised by two people who love each other.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I was flabbergasted and embarrassed when I read the letter from the Japanese American in Denver who was offended by George Dawson's satirical poem about bashing the Japanese. I thought it was very funny and sympathetic to the Japanese.

I teach a class of Japanese women who are highly motivated in learning American English and culture. They, too, thought the poem was amusing.

A JAPANESE AMERICAN IN ILLINOIS

DEAR JAPANESE AMERICAN: Thanks for defending me. And in response to your very flattering "P.S." — the answer is yes.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: This may not seem like a big problem, but here goes: What is the polite response to someone who asks, "Are you wearing colored contact lenses — or are your eyes really that color?"

I would never dream of walking up to a stranger and asking, (1) "Do you have false teeth? Or are they capped?" (2) "Do you dye/bleach your hair?" (3) "Is that a wig/toupee?" (4) "Have you had a face-lift?"

I consider these questions very personal and would like your opinion, as well as a great reply.

GREEN (EYED) WITH ANGER

DEAR GREEN-EYED: An appropriate response to any of the above questions:

(A) "If you'll forgive me for not answering, I will forgive you for asking."

(B) "Why do you want to know?"

(C) "How could that possibly concern you?" — which is a polite version of, "It's none of your business."

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My 85-year-old sister-in-law was recently visited by her nephew and his wife who live in Wisconsin.

During their three-day visit, this nephew and his wife tried desperately — without being point-blank — to find out who was named in her will, and to what extent.

Abby, if you were that sister-in-law, how would you have handled that awkward situation? As you may have guessed, there was quite a lot of money involved.

CURIOUS IN IOWA

DEAR CURIOUS: I would have told the nephew and his wife, "It is customary to wait until the will is read to disclose that information." Period.

* * *

People are eating them up! For Abby's favorite recipes, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Your Birthday

May 27, 1992

Give serious consideration in the year ahead to proposals that are presented to you pertaining novel or unique products. You should be able to recognize a winner when you see one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try to steer clear of becoming involved in a friend's complicated affairs today. What you can offer might not be of any real value, making things worse instead of better. Gemini, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Gemini's Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Everyone appreciates coming out ahead in their negotiations, but don't do so today to the detriment of someone who has always treated you fairly. This is a touchy area.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A plan you hope to implement is in need of further study. There's a chance you have overlooked a critical flaw that could cause it to fail.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Conditions in general look favorable for you today, with one exception. Don't jump into a venture about which you're not well-informed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Regarding a domestic matter that affects your family, you and your mate may not operate on the same wavelength today. Each has an equal amount of good and bad ideas.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you feel inclined to criticize co-workers today, be absolutely certain that what you have to say is constructive. Caustic comments could provoke an argument.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Expenses related to a social activity today should be equally divided among all participants. If they aren't, angry feelings could result.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It will be hard to find someone more charming and considerate than you today when dealing with friends. However, your family might not see these sterling aspects of your personality.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You are not likely to be plagued by a lack of bright ideas today. Your problem could be in knowing how to effectively implement what you conceive.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You may be inclined to take everyone at face value today. Unfortunately, this could prove costly — if you end up doing business with someone who operates behind a mask.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In your relationships, you usually strive to share rather than manipulate. But today you might be tempted to use others to advance your interests, and this could have a reverse effect.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your intuition and common sense could be in conflict today. You might depend more upon the way you perceive things rather than evaluate them as they actually are.

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Jay Leno picked up where Johnny Carson left off — skewering Vice President Dan Quayle — but added his own distinctive touches on his first night as host of "The Tonight Show."

Leno, 42, stepped from behind a purple curtain — not the Technicolor one favored by Carson — smiled his trademark goofy grin and was met by thunderous applause from the studio audience Monday night.

Raising his hand for quiet, he quipped, "Let's see how you all feel in 30 years" — a reference to Johnny Carson's retirement Friday after 30 years as host of the late-night talk show.

New band leader Branford Marsalis unveiled a high-octane jazz-and-funk theme song to replace the blasting, big band sound of Doc Severinsen's NBC Orchestra.

In his opening monologue, Leno milked a theme that Carson got lots of mileage from last week — Quayle's criticism of the CBS television show "Murphy Brown" for portraying single motherhood as an acceptable lifestyle.

"This is 'The Tonight Show,'" Leno said. "The one TV show that Dan Quayle hates even more than 'Murphy Brown.'"

His first guests were comedian Billy Crystal, singer Shanice and CBS economic correspondent Robert Krulwich.

Crystal sang a song called "Dear Mr. Leno," a parody of Bette Midler's ode to Carson on his next-to-last show.

"You made me first guest, I didn't want to do it, my agent really blew it," he sang.

Leno winced as Crystal uttered several mild vulgarities on the show, which was being broadcast live to the East Coast.

The live broadcasts are to continue this week because of NBC's coverage of the National Basketball Association playoffs. Carson routinely taped the show three hours before it aired.

Shanice sang her hit single, "I Love Your Smile," and Krulwich offered a lighthearted explanation of how American corporate executives are overpaid.

While the show's format remained loosely the same, the feel was decidedly different. He concluded his monologue with a taped segment reminiscent of "Saturday Night Live" that poked fun at imprisoned hotel magnate Leona Helmsley.

Marsalis and his band received ample time on camera, in contrast to Severinsen's largely off-camera duties as band leader. And Leno's tone was self-effacing and conversational, while Carson favored sharp and witty repartee.

A new set featured Romanesque arches and pillars and a backdrop depicting the Los Angeles coastline. Leno has actively recruited harder-edged bands.

DEAR POLLY — I'm concerned with the scare about salmonella in eggs, that cooking them in the microwave is not safe. Will the microwave oven destroy these germs? — ALICE

DEAR ALICE — So long as the eggs are cooked firm throughout, the microwave oven will cook eggs safely. The correct temperature will destroy salmonella bacteria. Salmonella is destroyed at 160 degrees Fahrenheit. Hard-cooked eggs must exceed that temperature for the white and yolk to congeal into a firm mass.

When you're cooking custards or egg-thickened sauces, a microwave oven with a temperature probe is a good way to do it, while ensuring the eggs are adequately cooked. Put your microwave's temperature probe setting to 170 or 175 degrees, insert it in the custard or sauce mixture and cook to that temperature. The eggs will be adequately cooked to destroy the salmonella bacteria and at the point where they can thicken the sauce without curdling. Be sure to follow the manufacturer's directions for using your oven's temperature probe. You may also want to check the temperature with another accurate thermometer the first time to be sure your microwave's temperature probe gives an accurate reading.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter, "Main Dishes from Your Microwave," which gives directions for hard-cooking eggs, as well as a number of easy dishes you can cook in the microwave for family suppers or company meals. DEAR POLLY — One day, I ran out of plastic containers to freeze some leftovers. I looked into the freezer to see what I could take out and use. Then it occurred to me to take the size container I needed, remove the contents (frozen), and rewrap in foil to return to the freezer. I then had a container to use for my new food to be frozen. Now my containers are unlimited. — CAROLE

DEAR POLLY — A recent suggestion about slightly warming leftover cat food was a good one. However, it won't go far enough to please that finicky cat. Cat food should be removed from the can before storing in the fridge; I use recycled cream-cheese containers. Cats, who have such an exceptional sense of smell, get turned off by food that's been in the can. — TONI

DEAR TONI — Now THAT'S a finicky cat! However, people should be aware that it is not dangerous to store the food in the can, and it doesn't bother many cats (my own included). But if your cat absolutely refuses to eat leftover cat food even after warming it, it might be worthwhile to try storing it in a different container. Thanks for the tip. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I have a recipe that calls for unsalted cashew nuts, but I can only find the salted variety. Can these be substituted? — HELEN

DEAR HELEN — The salted nuts will probably add too much salt to your recipe, but you can remove some of their salt in this way:

Pour hot water over the nuts and let them stand for 30 seconds or so, then drain. Rinse under running water for several seconds. Then very lightly toast the nuts in a 350-degree oven for a few minutes or in the microwave for a minute or less, just enough to dry and crisp them. Be careful not to let them get too dark, as the nuts are already toasted.

This will not remove all the salt, but enough so that you can probably use them in your recipe without any difficulty. — POLLY

RECIPE OF THE WEEK — Summer weekends demand cool frozen desserts! This super easy Fruit and Ice Cream Pizza is delicious and lots of fun. Try it for a children's birthday party instead of cake!

Press ½ package refrigerated cookie dough into a greased 12-inch pizza pan or into a 12-inch circle on a greased baking sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for 12 to 14 minutes. Cool. Spoon one quart vanilla ice cream, softened, onto the crust. Freeze until firm. Top with assorted cut-up fresh or canned fruit in a decorative pattern. Drizzle with your favorite ice cream toppings, if desired. This makes one 12-inch pizza.

If you love ice cream (and who doesn't!) you'll enjoy making a variety of easy but fancy desserts with the recipes in my newsletter, "Ice Cream Dessert Creations." Send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 93863, Cleveland, OH 44101-5863. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Stains will come out of tablecloths and napkins more easily if you starch them before using them. — L.B.

Activities are planned for new year by BDP

Beta Delta Phi Sorority met at the Snyder Country Club recently to install elected officers and make plans for the coming year.

Following the installation ceremony, led by immediate past president, Lana Crenwelge, the group held a brief meeting with the new president, Lyn Lancaster, presiding.

Members decided to begin the year with a social at the country club on August 28. Discussion was held on possibly hosting a golf tournament, four-person scramble, on Saturday, June 27 at Western Texas College. Interested persons should contact Tina Long at 573-8895 for more information.

The sorority's last meeting of this club year will be held this evening in the home of Carrie Cox. Highlight of the meeting will be the revealing of secret sisters.

Traditional, trendy joined for recipes

NEW YORK (AP) — In this the 500th year of Columbus' voyage, there's lots of talk about the foods he found in the New World, what became — Elizabeth Rozin says in "Blue Corn and Chocolate" — the backbone of American cuisine.

The American table, she writes, "is unique in all the history of the world, for it combines everything that ever was: the old and the new; the traditional and the trendy; what has been, what is and what is becoming."

Her recipes are among those possibilities as well: chicken corn chowder, vegetable posole, colcannon, Cuban black beans and rice, hickory grilled turkey breast and peanut shortbread cookies.

"Blue Corn and Chocolate" (Knopf, $23) might tempt you into the kitchen, but it also includes plenty of interesting history and photographs if you just sit and read.

One sample: Peanut Shortbread Cookies. Rich and crisp, with a dose of peanut flavor, these little cookies are extremely good and easy to make. They freeze well.

PEANUT SHORTBREAD COOKIES

1 cup (2 sticks) butter, softened
1/2 cup peanut butter, at room temperature
1 cup sugar
1 egg, separated
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 and 1-3rd cups flour
1 cup quick or regular oats
1 cup salted dry-roasted peanuts, finely chopped

In a medium mixing bowl combine the softened butter and peanut butter; mix thoroughly. Add the sugar; cream it thoroughly into the butter. Stir in the egg yolk and vanilla; blend them into the mixture. Add the flour and the oats; mix them thoroughly into the butter mixture. Preheat oven to 300 degrees F.

Spread the dough evenly in a buttered 10- by 15-inch rimmed baking pan. Smooth the top with a broad knife or spatula.

Beat the egg white lightly with a fork; pour it over the top of the dough and with a pastry brush spread it all over the surface.

Sprinkle the chopped nuts evenly over the egg white.

Bake in a 300-degree F oven for 25 to 35 minutes until the top is very lightly browned. Remove from the oven; cut into small squares or rectangles while still hot. Cool completely in the pan before removing. Makes 40 cookies.

Recipe from: "Blue Corn and Chocolate" by Elizabeth Rozin. Knopf. $23.

Mills speaks to writers

The Scurry County Penwomen met in the home of Dorothy Cox on May 20 for a program by Deanie Mills, local noted author.

Following the invocation by Cox, program chairman Betty Kellum introduced Mills.

In Mill's program, "Goals and Making Time," she pointed out several tips to help writers. She stressed the importance to visualize and set goals and deadlines for work. She also urged them to make lists and keep up with jobs at hand.

She also encouraged catagorizing, saying to learn to say "no" and apologize when asked to do something that interferes with writing. Another important fact is to organize, and don't be a packrat, she said. Throw away trash and keep up with manuscripts, and when rejection slips are received, immediateley mail them to a different place.

She told the writers to take care of their health, walk or get proper exercise and eat right. "Don't be a perfectionist, do the best you can, and most important, be flexible," she concluded.

In the reading session, members reading their own poems were Bertha Warren's "Mother;" Betty Kellum's "Words," and Sherry Bryant's "God's Child." She also read her song, "Land of Sweet Forever."

Also reading their poems were Betty Boyd's "Life's Storm," and "Footprints;" and Garnet Quiett's "Echoes." She read "Wedding Plans," written by several Penwomen members.

Cox played a tape of her interview with Tumbleweed Smith in which she read her poem, "Daddy's Hands."

The group will not meet again until September.

Declarer thought things were going swimmingly on today's hand, but then suddenly tnere was a nasty turn of events. However, it didn't discombobulate him for long.

If you would like to test yourself, cover the East-West cards and plan the play in six hearts. West leads the spade king.

South's opening bid showed a good 20 to 22 points. Many players have a 20-21 point-range for their two-no-trump opening bid. I think this is wrong. If you have a balanced 20-point hand with no five-card suit, you should usually open with one of a suit. You can rarely make a game unless partner has sufficient values to rake up a one-level response.

North's three-diamond response was a transfer bid, showing at least five hearts. South jumped to game because his hand was so suitable for play in hearts. And North jumped to slam because he thought his partner could make it.

Declarer won the spade lead with the ace, drew trumps ending in hand, and ruffed his spade loser in the dummy. He played a diamond to his ace and cashed his three club winners ending in the dummy. Finally, he led a low diamond, but East discarded a spade.

"Oh no!" he thought — or words to that effect.

Then he realized he had no problem. He just played the diamond four from hand. West won with the nine but was endplayed. If he returned a diamond, it would be into South's K-J tenace. If he led his remaining black-suit card, declarer would ruff in one hand and discard his diamond loser from the other. Either way, the slam was guaranteed.

French Open...

Favorites fare well in first round play

PARIS (AP) — It was a good day today for the favorites and the sun worshippers at the French Open.

Ivan Lendl, back at the the Grand Slam tournament, for the first time since a painful loss in 1989, crushed clay-court specialist Sergi Bruguera in straight sets.

Most other favorites also won easily as the first round neared completion. Andre Agassi won easily, scoring a 6-1, 6-4, 6-4 victory over Argentine Javier Frana. Agassi, who lost in the finals here the past two here, wore a pirate-style bandana, earring, and turquoise-trimmed outfit.

Lendl, a three-time champion who has dropped from the top 10 for the first time since 1980, beat Bruguera 6-4, 6-2, 6-1. The 10-seeded Lendl's last match at Roland Garros was a semifinal loss to cramp-stricken Michael Chang three years ago.

Monica Seles, sporting a new hairdo along with her familiar power game, took a first step toward a third straight women's title with an easy victory over a little-known Frenchwoman.

On a bright, balmy morning that quickly dried courts soaked by a thunderstorm Monday evening, the top-seeded Yugoslav routed Catherine Mothes 6-1, 6-0.

Seles, whose light-brown hair turned dark and wavy at a Paris salon, has won the last four Grand Slam tournaments she's entered — she missed Wimbledon last year. Mothes, by contrast, was ranked 79th in the world and has won only two Grand Slam matches in her career.

Two Americans who spent a night in suspense won their rain-interrupted matches today. No. 3 seed Pete Sampras survived his battle with hard-serving Marc Rosset of Switzerland, 7-6 (7-5), 4-6, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, and fifth-seeded Jennifer Capriati rebounded from an error-filled second set Monday to beat Beate Reinstadler, a qualifier from Austria, 6-1, 6-7 (7-3), 6-2.

Sampras held a 4-2 lead in the fifth set when the rains came Monday, and saved a break-point with an ace to start off today's session. He saved another break point in that game with a service winner, held to go up 5-2, and served out the match with two more winners and an ace on match point.

The principal opening-day surprises were a thunderstorm that ended two weeks of near-perfect weather and a 17-year-old Ukrainian who knocked off a seed in his first Grand Slam match.

Andrei Medvedev, the junior champion last year, had to win three qualifying matches just to get into the 128-man field as its youngest player. But he belied his No. 175 world ranking with a 7-6 (8-6), 6-3, 6-4 victory Monday over 16th-seeded Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland.

Incaviglia gets 4 RBI...

Houston outlasts Expos, 10-8

MONTREAL (AP) — Back in the summer 1985, Pete Incaviglia was a highly touted draft pick by the Montreal Expos out of Oklahoma State.

There was no debate over a signing bonus, but the Expos could never sign their first-round choice. Seven years later, the story took another twist as Incaviglia faced the Expos for the first time in a regular-season game.

Incaviglia drove in four runs with a two-run homer, a single and a sacrifice fly as the Houston Astros held on to beat the Expos 10-8 Monday afternoon.

"When I was drafted by the Expos, I would have signed if they had allowed me to attend major-league spring training in 1986," Incaviglia said. "I met with (executives) Bill Stoneman and Jim Fanning and they unequivocally said no to my request. They thought I was joking but I wasn't. All I wanted to do was go to spring training. I wouldn't sign. It had nothing to do with the city of Montreal or anything like that."

In November 1985, the Expos had little choice but to trade Incaviglia. They sent him to the Texas Rangers for pitcher Bob Sebra and infielder Jim Anderson.

Incaviglia's power surge Monday came in the first four innings as the Astros took a 10-0 lead, which they needed when the Expos rallied for six runs in the ninth. Incaviglia's output gave him two homers and 13 RBI on the season.

"I've been struggling a bit power-wise," Incaviglia said. "I've been platooning so I'm not getting a lot of at-bats."

Craig Biggio added a solo homer for the Astros and was in the right place at the right time at second base to nail Tim Wallach making a wide turn at third in Montreal's second inning.

Biggio dove to stop a smash by Archi Cianfrocco and saw Wallach going too wide. Biggio threw to third baseman Ken Caminiti to end the inning.

"When I came up with the ball, I knew I had no play at first but saw that Wallach had turned wide," Biggio said.

When the score was 10-0, Expos manager Felipe Alou's thoughts had wandered considerably. His revelation provided some comic relief.

"I was thinking of a book called 'The Sexual Behavior of Elephants,'" Alou said. "A few years ago in winter ball in Venezuela, our team lost a game 24-5. When I went to the airport, the plane was late so I went looking for a book to read. The only book in the bookstore was 'The Sexual Behavior of Elephants.' So I bought it."

By the ninth inning, Alou's mind was back on the game as the Expos sent 11 men to the plate to erupt for six runs and make things interesting.

Butch Henry had to sweat it out on the bench as the Expos flailed away. Finally, Henry (1-4) got his first major-league win.

Doug Jones, the third of three relievers to enter the game in the ninth, collected his 10th save when he got Darren Reed to fly to center and end the rally with a man on third.

Jones came on with the bases loaded and the score 10-6. Spike Owen singled to make it 10-7 and the eighth run scored on a double-play grounder by Moises Alou, the manager's son.

"The Expos didn't let down and die," Henry said. "They fought and scratched all the way. When I left, my job was done. I let the things out of control take of themselves."

Henry gave up 11 hits in eight-plus innings, struck out five and walked one.

Incaviglia's homer in the third finished Chris Haney (2-3). Haney allowed six runs in 2-1-3 innings.

Sweden's Bjorn Borg, attempting to make a comeback on the pro tour, has won more French Open tennis titles than any other player. The tournament, originally restricted to members of French clubs, became an international event in 1925. It was briefly closed to foreigners during World War II. The French Open is the only Grand Slam event that is played on red clay.

Beat Bulls in Game 4...

Cavaliers knot playoff series

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Craig Ehlo still has to pinch himself when he sets up opposite Michael Jordan.

"I'm still in awe sometimes," Ehlo said Monday after his 21 points and hard-nosed defense helped the Cleveland Cavaliers beat Jordan and the Chicago Bulls 99-85, tying the best-of-7 Eastern Conference finals 2-2.

Game 5 will be played Wednesday night in Chicago, where the teams split the first two games of the series. Game 6 will be in Richfield on Friday, and Game 7, if needed, would be in Chicago on Sunday.

Born in Lubbock, Texas, and schooled at Washington State, Ehlo has never had any trouble with his ego. Since the Cavaliers signed him after the Houston Rockets cut him in 1986, they've worked to build his confidence so he'll be more willing to shoot when he's open.

"That's always been a big question mark — do I believe in myself? This is my ninth year, and I still get in awe, especially when I play against guys like Michael Jordan, Larry Bird, Magic Johnson," Ehlo said.

Jordan, of course, gets the best of most of the matchups. He scored his career high, 69 points, in a game against Ehlo and the Cavs in 1990, and he's averaged 39 in 14 playoff games against Cleveland.

But on Monday, Jordan had to scrap for his 35 points, which came on 15-of-33 shooting from the field. Ehlo, meanwhile, sank four 3-pointers and supplied some of the offense the Cavaliers were missing because of the weakened condition of Mark Price, who played despite a stomach virus.

"I think Mark usually shoots 15 or 16 times a game," Ehlo said. "That wasn't there today. I took some of those shots."

Jordan got little offensive help from his teammates Monday. Scottie Pippen scored 13 points, none of them in the second half, and John Paxson had 11. The Bulls' only significant contribution off the bench was from Cliff Levingston, who scored four quick baskets early in the fourth quarter to reduce Cleveland's lead to single digits. The rest of Chicago's bench went 3 for 18.

"I don't know why Scottie took so few shots," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said.

"Phil just didn't allow me to push the ball the way I did in the last game," Pippen said. "I basically didn't have that many opportunities offensively."

Cleveland led by as many as eight in the first quarter and maintained a double-figure lead for much of the second and third periods. Ehlo started the fourth quarter with a 3-pointer that made it 74-60.

Levingston's flurry, however, got Chicago back in it, and a 3-pointer by Paxson made it 82-78 with 4:44 left. A rebound basket by Jordan kept the deficit at four points with four minutes to play before Mike Sanders stunned the Bulls with a rare 3-pointer with 3:40 left.

It was Sanders' second 3-pointer of the season, his first of the playoffs. He took it only because the 24-second clock was winding down.

The Bulls got within six on Jordan's basket with 1:30 to play, but Cleveland clinched it when Larry Nance finished off a crisp three-pass play with a dunk for a 92-84 lead with 1:18 left.

Nance led Cleveland with 22 points and four blocked shots. Brad Daugherty, grabbed nearly every time he tried to shoot, scored 10 of his 14 points on foul shots and also collected 14 rebounds. John Williams scored 18 and Price scored 13 despite spending part of the second half in the locker room trying to get his stomach to settle down. He spent Sunday night in the Cleveland Clinic.

Umpires stop music following complaint

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Texas League umpire George Ulrich didn't want to hear the music when he made El Paso Diablos manager Chris Bando face the music for complaining about Jackson Generals pitcher Rodney Windes.

So Ulrich and fellow umpire Tim Vessey put a stop to the music being played by Derrick Grubbs, the public address announcer at Cohen Field on Monday night.

Grubbs said that Ulrich complained to him the second inning of Jackson's 11-5 victory that the music was distracting the batters.

The controversy erupted again in the eighth inning when Bando was ejected after he complained that Windes had tried to hit John Byington. Grubbs then began playing circus music while the manager and umpire argued.

Vessey, the third base umpire, came behind home plate and signaled to the press box to cut the music. Then Ulrich gave the same motion, a slashing finger across his throat, to put an end to the music.

"An umpire can't be concerned with the other intangibles," Bando said. "Being an umpire is not an easy job. But if he can't take criticism, take suggestions, take a little heat, then he shouldn't be an umpire."

Grubbs wasn't happy about the situation, calling it "unfortunate."

"I'm disappointed it happened because the fans came to watch a baseball game, not a cat-and-mouse game between the announcer and umpire," Grubbs said.

Jackson manager Rick Sweet said he complained about the music simply to protect starting pitcher Donne Wall.

"I really don't want to make a big deal out of it," Sweet said. "The music's a big part of the game, a great part. But, it's got to operate within the guidelines. I like music, but if you break the rules, you break the rules."

Sweet claimed that several Diablos had complained about the music played while they were in the batters box, but the El Paso Times surveyed several of the players and they didn't have any complaints after the game.

Ulrich couldn't be reached for comment after the game because Texas League rules prohibit fans or reporters from entering the umpire's locker room.

The music apparently didn't bother the Jackson hitters since they got a season-high 17 hits, including two doubles, three triples and a three-run homer.

Kevin Dean had the three-run homer to highlight a five-run explosion in the eighth inning. Byington was 3-3 for the Diablos.

Wall (2-0) was the winning pitcher. Windes earned his second save. The losing pitcher was Steve Spark (4-5).

Political notebook: Perot, Perot, Perot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Not everyone here says nice things about Ross Perot, but they all seem to be saying something about him.

The billionaire businessman hangs over this city like a curtain of smog, elusive yet ever present, dominating conversation at political events of all persuasions.

He's had no government experience and he was tight with Richard Nixon. On the other hand, he's rich and he seems to make things happen — two big selling points in and around Tinseltown.

A week before the California primary, here's what people are saying about the man who's planning to launch and personally pay for an independent presidential campaign.

At a World Affairs Council lunch attended by Los Angeles business leaders:

The speaker was Republican challenger Patrick Buchanan, but the audience was more curious than supportive. There was a collective gasp followed by cheers and applause when the master of ceremonies said Ross Perot would be a guest speaker in October.

"The Republican and Democratic parties are not structured to change things. We need someone to shake things up," said Jim Callos, 46, who runs an auditing business. He's planning to host a reception for Perot this fall.

Joseph Ellias, 34, a general contractor, said he'll write in Perot on the June 2 primary ballot. "He talks about what real Americans think," Ellias said. "People that earn their money should be able to keep it."

Not everyone was so positive. "There's something funny about that man, I don't know what it is," said Verna Gunther, a retired fashion model leaning toward Buchanan.

A fund-raiser at a Chinese restaurant for Xavier Becerra, running for the Democratic congressional nomination in a Los Angeles district:

"I'll take Perot," said Andy Vargas, 65, retired from the clothing business. "He's a very intelligent man. All he has to do is get the right people that have experience in government. He can do the rest because he's very, very smart in business. He could run this country like a business."

The restaurant owner, Hong Kong native Sylvia Hom, meanwhile nodded enthusiastic assents. But city councilman Mike Hernandez wasn't swayed.

Forget Perot, he said. "You ask him what he's going to do about the Bill of Rights and he'll say pay it."

A fund-raiser at a Los Angeles mansion for Republican Judith Ryan, an abortion-rights advocate challenging Rep. Bob Dornan for the GOP congressional nomination:

"I'm door-knocking and people are starting to ask me if I have the Ross Perot petition with me," said state assembly candidate Christine Reed of Santa Monica. "A man got out of his car when he saw me with my clipboard. He said, 'Is that the Ross Perot petition? I've got to sign the Ross Perot petition.'"

Patty DeDominic, a personnel-business owner, said people believe Perot when he says he'll get rid of the federal budget deficit. "He seems to have demonstrated that he's quite capable of achieving his financial objectives," she said archly.

But not in a transferrable way, said Polly Benson-Brown, a local GOP official. "Perot is a CEO," she said. "He says jump, you say 'how high?' I'm not sure that is a very good way to deal with Congress."

A shopping center in a middle-class black neighborhood:

"Perot could be the best thing or the worst thing America ever had," said James Mayberry, 57, a magazine publisher. "We elected an actor and we messed it up. A businessman could be even worse. You have to be a politician ... I personally believe you should have some kind of experience in government to run the country."

A Van Nuys brunch attended by a retired couple and a bunch of baby boomers with young children:

"Perot is the guy in the white Cadillac. If nothing else he has a wakeup call for both parties," said Stanley Landes, 42, a Democrat who produces and distributes home videos.

"He's a glimmer of hope," said retired public relations man Jerry Ross, 73, also a Democrat.

"A glimmer of difference," retorted Landes.

Joerg Knipprath, 41, a law professor and self-described libertarian Republican, said it's ridiculous to even think about voting for Perot.

"This is not just getting the trains to run on time," he said of the presidency. But he added: "You can always go back to the old historical rule — the short guy always loses."

Dr., Gott
by Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Our son who is now 15 experienced periods of apparent sleep apnea as an infant. He now has learning disabilities, is far below his grade level and is irritable and difficult to manage. In addition, he's had chronic congestion all his life, even with the removal of adenoids two years ago. Could his long-term problems with mental and emotional development be related to the sleep apnea of 15 years prior?

DEAR READER: Sleep apnea, the periodic cessation of automatic breathing during sleep, is estimated to affect up to 4 percent of adults, in whom it often causes snoring and daytime fatigue.

In infants, whose nervous systems have yet to develop fully, sleep apnea is a potentially serious disorder that frequently leads to unpredictable and sudden fatalities ("crib deaths"). No one knows the cause of sleep apnea in young children. Many experts believe that because of underdeveloped nervous systems, these children are not stimulated to breathe normally; essentially, their respiratory centers cannot respond to low blood oxygen, usually a strong stimulus for respiration. Of course, some children with brain disorders, such as hydrocephalus, may have apnea BECAUSE of the disorders.

Therefore, in your son's case, I cannot judge whether his sleep apnea was the result of some brain damage (perhaps incurred during the birth process) or whether his mental problems are caused by the apnea. Either choice could be correct — as could the final one: His sleep apnea and mental development are separate, unrelated issues. I suggest you ask your pediatrician to clarify the issue.

I cannot close without pointing out that the cause of your son's difficulties is really unimportant at this stage. Rather, the crucial issue is how best to handle the situation now. For example, if your son has dyslexia (learning disability), he can be helped by special training and schooling. If he is suffering from adjustment problems, these can be treated by professional counselors. Perhaps he should see a neurologist for nervous system testing. Ask the pediatrician about this.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Help I — Physical Illness." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

6th graders volunteer for drug tests

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A voluntary drug testing program for sixth graders at Tuloso-Midway School is the first program of its kind in South Texas, school officials say.

"We're doing it as a preventive measure," Superintendent Sue Nelson said in a recent interview with the Corpus Christi Caller-Times. "We're trying to intervene. We're trying to be proactive."

The program will be similar to others in Kilgore and Victoria and will involve only sixth-graders in an attempt to reinforce the Drug Abuse Resistance Education messages taught in the fifth grade, Ms. Nelson said.

Adam Collavo, an 11-year-old who will be in the sixth grade next fall, said he expects that the pressure to undergo drug testing will be greater than the pressures to take drugs.

"I think it's a good program, and most of the people who want to do it want to show that they're drug-free and not a misfit," he said.

Tuloso-Midway Middle School Principal Melodie McClarren said she expects most of the district's 200 sixth-graders to participate. They will be tested at the beginning of the school year and given a card denoting their drug-free status.

The tests will screen urine samples for amphetamines, cocaine, marijuana, LSD and inhalants, Ms. McClarren said. Each test will cost $17.50 and the program is expected to cost the district more than $4,000, she said.

School officials will contact parents of students who test positive for drugs and may refer the children to a substance-abuse treatment

Rural justice more innovative than thought

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Many rural justices are often denigrated because of their lack of formal education, but the criticism may be unwarranted, a study has found.

"There is no doubt that many rural non-attorney judges remain isolated and cling to the traditional ways," said John Domino, a Sam Houston State University political science professor.

"But evidence also suggests that many are better educated, more innovative, and more mindful of their shortcomings than might be expected," he said.

Domino recently conducted a survey of 133 judges in Arizona, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Utah and Texas.

The average respondent to the mailed questionnaires was a white male, with neither a college nor law degree.

That has many attorneys, members of the State Bar of Texas, urging that non-attorneys be barred from judicial positions.

Officers note 3 burglaries

Snyder police began investigations into three burglaries and filed three theft reports Monday and early today.

Administrators at Stanfield Elementary had informed police of possible criminal mischief at the school over the weekend; however, no report was taken at the time. On Monday, it was discovered that some miscellaneous items were missing. An offense report for burglary of a building has since been filed.

Burglaries were also reported at Snyder Laundry and Scurry County Health Unit. At Snyder Laundry, someone took several miscellaneous items, including clothing. Taken from the health unit were food items from the break area. Health unit workers were still taking inventory today, to see if anything else is missing.

At 1:09 p.m. Monday, police received a report of a theft at Northeast Elementary. Taken were several small items from a classroom. An 11-year-old juvenile was identified as a suspect and taken into custody. The boy was released to the custody of his parents. A report for Class C theft was filed in the case.

At 2:52 p.m., police took a report of Class B theft in reference to someone taking some garden tools from the 2900 block of Avenue J.

A report of Class B theft was also taken at 3:47 a.m. today after a woman notified police that someone had taken a purse, bank bag and other items from her 1992 Chevrolet.

The only arrest recorded by police came at 11:53 p.m. Monday at the Eastridge Apartments. Police took a 28-year-old man into custody for Class C assault. According to officers, the man struck a police officer. Police decided not to file charges of assault on a police officer, a felony offense.

In one other report Monday, police took an offense report for Class B criminal mischief in reference to damage done to a work vehicle at CD Auto Repair.

Vice President Aaron Burr mortally wounded former Treasury Secretary Hamilton in a pistol duel in 1804 near Weehawken, N.J.

High court bolsters weapon for fighting political corruption

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today made it easier to prosecute officials accused of extorting payoffs, bolstering the federal government's primary weapon for fighting political corruption.

The court, by a 6-3 vote, ruled in a Georgia case that a public official may be convicted of extortion under the federal Hobbs Act without proof the official initiated the transaction that resulted in an unlawful payoff.

"The government need only show that a public official has obtained a payment to which he was not entitled, knowing that the payment was made in return for official acts," Justice John Paul Stevens wrote for the court."

Federal appeals courts had split over the need for prosecutors to prove that the payoff was demanded or solicited, and not merely received, by the public official. The court's majority was fragmented. Only Justices Byron R. White, Harry A. Blackmun and David H. Souter joined all of Stevens' opinion. Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Anthony M. Kennedy joined parts of it, and each filed separate, concurring opinions.

Today's decision upheld the attempted-extortion conviction of John Evans Jr., a former DeKalb County, Ga., official who took $8,000 from an undercover FBI agent who had asked for some help getting property rezoned.

Evans, who in 1982 became the first black ever elected to the DeKalb County Commission, first met undercover agent Clifford Cormany Jr. in 1985.

Cormany was assigned to an investigation, known as Operation Vespine, into allegations of public corruption in the Atlanta area, particularly in zoning.

Between August 1985 and October 1986, Cormany posed as a developer and had several meetings and telephone conversations with Evans. In the summer of 1986, Evans took from Cormany $8,000 — $7,000 in cash and a $1,000 check — that he later said was a campaign contribution.

But Evans did not report $7,000 of the money he received from Cormany on his income tax return or on the required state disclosure form for campaign contributions.

Russia reveals Communist Party's past role in terrorism

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union supplied arms to Palestinian terrorists for attacks on American and Israeli targets in the 1970s, according to secret documents newly released by the government of Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

On the eve of a court hearing on the legality of his ban on the Communist Party, Yeltsin began to release the contents of a top secret "special dossier."

Among the first documents released are papers detailing the promotion of terrorism by the Communist rulers of the former Soviet Union during the waning decades of the Cold War.

Western governments often accused the Soviet Union of backing international terrorism in the 1970s and '80s, but internal documents proving high-level involvement by the Communist Party had not previously been made public.

Russia's Constitutional Court today announced it would consider the legality of Yeltsin's 1991 decrees liquidating the Communist Party and nationalizing its property. The court also said it would examine whether the party was ever legal to begin with.

If the court rules the party was invalid from the start, it would in effect validate Yeltsin's decrees and quickly derail the Communists' challenge of them.

Yeltsin issued the decrees after hard-liners in the party, military and KGB tried to seize power in last August's coup.

"The Communist Party that seized power and dissolved the parliament by force in 1918 is now trying to return to power using democratic institutions and procedures," Yeltsin's top legal adviser, Sergei Shakhrai, said at a news conference Monday.

Shakhrai clearly was trying to remind the Russian people of the party's bloody history and head off any public support for its revival.

He read a May 16, 1975 document describing the decision by the party's guiding Central Committee to supply arms to the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"In accordance with the Communist Party Central Committee's decision, the KGB has handed over to the head of the foreign operations service of the PLO a shipment of foreign weapons and ammunition," it read.

It added that the weapons were intended "to continue 'the oil war' by special means, accomplishing actions against U.S. and Israeli personnel in third countries and conducting terrorist activities."

NE staff participate in program

Northeast Elementary school staff for 1992-93 participated in a staff development program last week, conducted by Dr. Lee Hannel of Phoenix, Ariz., titled "Cognitive Education," a methodology workshop for grades K-12.

The program was developed by Hannel and his wife, Maria, for the purpose of enabling students to enhance their thinking skills.

Following the training, teachers will be able to help each child, through questioning, to systematically work through information on their own and think about it in a broader and more lasting manner.

The Hannels have conducted this program in urban as well as rural school districts across the United States, and Lee Presswood, principal at Northeast, said "Snyder is fortunate to have him present the program to us." Dr. Hannel will be working with follow-up throughout the school year.

Two injured in accident

Cogdell Memorial Hospital emergency room personnel handled two motor vehicle accident patients and a dog bite victim Monday.

Seventeen-year-old Shannon Dale Ballard of 314 34th St. was treated at the emergency room for a contusion to the head and released following a two-vehicle accident at 4:24 p.m. Ballard was the driver of a 1984 Honda which was in collision with a 1985 Buick driven by Georgia Allen of 111 Scurry.

The mishap occurred in the 1700 block of College Avenue.

A passenger in the Honda, 16-year-old Cara Covey of 1613 Firestone, was also taken to Cogdell emergency room where she was treated for a scalp laceration and a contusion to the elbow and admitted for 23-hour observation.

In one other report, 22-year-old Holly Page of 4116 Jacksboro was treated at the emergency room for a dog bite, and released.

Actress has throat cancer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lana Turner has throat cancer but says she expects to recover because it was detected early.

"I know that with the help of my beloved God and my loving family, I will be fine," the 72-year-old actress said in a statement Monday from her Los Angeles home. "Because of early detection, the prognosis for full recovery is excellent."

Doctors detected the small cancer May 13 during exploratory surgery, said Turner's publicist, Linda Dozoretz.

Miss Turner's films include "The Postman Always Rings Twice" and "Peyton Place."

The court approved a $400 transfer from coliseum promotions to dues, to allow coliseum Promoter/Director Bernadette Stephens to become a member of the International Association of Auditorium Managers.

Other line-item transfers approved by commissioners were a $2,600 transfer from supplies and equipment to travel and maintenance repair for the juvenile probation department, and a $13 transfer from miscellaneous expense to cover gas expenses for a mandatory school for the justice of the peace office.

The court recessed until 1 p.m. Wednesday, when an executive session will be held to discuss an appeal from a welfare client in the county indigent health care program, and a personnel matter concerning airport employees. Nation observes Memorial Day

by The Associated Press

Memorial Day has new meaning for some Dallas residents committed to the solemn task of making sure that scores of former slaves buried in an obscure cemetery are not forgotten.

Morning showers on Monday pushed the special services conducted near downtown at Freedman's Cemetery inside. But the spirit of the blacks and whites gathered to commemorate the burial place was not dampened.

For Lillian Thompson, who has a brother and sister buried at Freedman's, the tribute was especially sweet.

"Oh I think everything's alright now since they remembered and tried to do something about it, because it's never too late to rectify something you've done in the past," Ms. Thompson said. "It's never too late for that."

The cemetery was discovered about two years ago by highway construction workers digging in the area. Since then, archaeologists have been excavating graves and moving them to another site.

Experts say as many as 8,000 people may have been buried at Freedman's between 1861 and 1925. State officials say it will take at least two years to move the graves.

All around Texas, the boom of artillery and the familiar sound of taps marked a smorgasbord of Memorial Day observances.

In Central Texas, Lt. Gen. H.G. Pete Taylor, commanding general of III Corps and Fort Hood, spoke at the Olin E. Teague Veterans Center in Temple. Taylor then returned to Fort Hood to lay a Memorial Day wreath at the post flagpole with III Corps and Fort Hood Command Sgt. Major Richard B. Cayton.

"I am certainly honored today to be here to help perform our country's most sacred duty: To honor our fellow Americans who have fallen in battle in defense of our country," Taylor said.

About 200 people, including Mayor Major Blair, gathered at Killeen's Conder Park Monday morning to pay tribute to fallen patriots.

Killeen also remembered victims of the nation's worst mass shooting during an afternoon dedication of a red bronze monument listing the names of the 23 people who died at Luby's Cafeteria in October.

Out west, El Paso marked the day by releasing about 50 hot air balloons. They were part of a weekend festival at a water park, but had been grounded because of high winds and rain.

A morning service was held at Concordia Cemetery in El Paso, where numerous historical figures are buried, including gunslinger John Wesley Hardin. Several pioneers of the city also are buried in the cemetery.

In Fort Worth, British and American veterans and their families honored Allied pilots killed in flight training at North Texas airfields during World War I. Royal Air Force attache Group Capt. Trevor Beney, based in Washington, said the burial ground of twelve pilots at Greenwood Cemetery is the only grave site in the United States dedicated to members of the Royal Flying Corps.

SCS Notes

By Michael Squires
Range Conservationist

June 15 through June 26 will be the next Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) sign-up period. The CRP offers long term rental payments and cost-share assistance to farm owners and operators to establish permanent vegetative cover for land that is highly erodible or contributing to a serious water quality problem.

Under the 1985 Food Security Act, nearly 34 million acres have been enrolled. You can sign up for CRP at your local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) office during an approved sign-up period.

A protective vegetative cover of permanent grass will not only reduce soil erosion, but will also improve water quality and enhance wildlife habitat. Water quality benefits are also attainable on land that is not highly erodible.

Annual rental payments for approved contracts will be made to eligible farm owners or operators who convert eligible land to permanent cover. These payments are limited to $50,000 per person per year. By law, an acceptable rental rate cannot exceed the prevailing rental rate per acre of comparable land. New procedures will be used to make these determinations.

USDA will accept offers following this three-step bid process:

1. At the local level, county ASCS committees will review each offer and make a recommendation to the national office as to whether the offer is acceptable, based on the committee's knowledge of rental rates in the local area.

2. The offer will undergo a bid screening process to assess the agricultural use value at the national level. This assessment will valuate the potential productivity of the land being offered, the dollar value of the offer each producer submitted and the establishment cost and practive maintenance being offered by the producers.

3. Offers will be ranked using an Environmental Benefits Index. The index will be calculated using seven factors, then divided by the rental rate bid by the producer. The seven factors are:

- •Surface water quality
- •Ground water quality
- •Soil productivity
- •Conservation compliance assistance
- •Tree planting
- •Assistance to state water quality impairment areas
- •Conservation priority areas

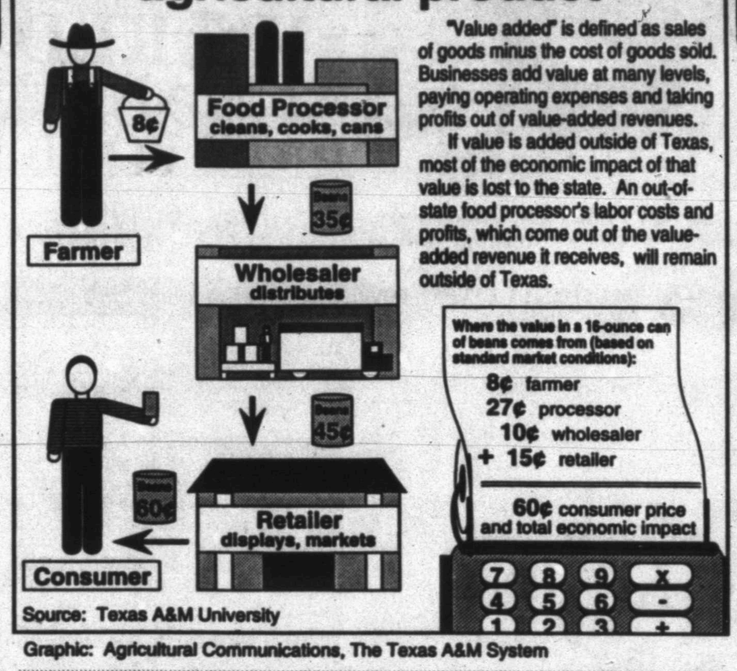

There are land and producer eligibility requirements which must be met before a bid will be accepted. Eligible cropland for enrollment in the CRP includes cropland that was planted or considered planting to produce an agricultural commodity, including alfalfa and other multi-year grasses and legumes grown in rotation as determined by the Secretary of Agriculture, in 2 of the 5 years 1986 through 1990. It must satisfy any one of the following criteria:

- •Land with an erosion index equal to or greater than 8 and an erosion rate greater than T.
- •Land in capability land class:
  - -VI, VII or VIII
  - -II, III, IV, or V with an erosion rate of 3T or greater.
  - -II, III, IV, or V with an erosion rate of 2T or greater, if trees are planted or a serious gully erosion problem exists on the designated CRP acres.

Easement practices, land having evidence of scour erosion, land contributing to a water quality problem, and public wellhead areas are eligible for CRP even if the soil erosion criteria are not met. CRP land is not eligible to be designated as set-aside or diverted acres for annual production adjustment purposes. Producers putting land in CRP are prohibited from sodbusting newly purchased lands.

Any further questions that you may have concerning CRP may be directed to the USDA, ASCS or SCS office nearest you.

How value is added to an agricultural product

Graphic: Agricultural Communications, The Texas A&M System

"Value added" is defined as sales of goods minus the cost of goods sold. Businesses add value at many levels, paying operating expenses and taking profits out of value-added revenues.

If value is added outside of Texas, most of the economic impact of that value is lost to the state. An out-of-state food processor's labor costs and profits, which come out of the value-added revenue it receives, will remain outside of Texas.

THE WATER SOFTENING PROCESS

During the softening process, water flows through a tank with synthetic resin beads which have been saturated with salt (sodium chloride). The resin has a stronger affinity for calcium and magnesium in the water than for sodium. When water flows through the resin bed, the calcium and magnesium become attached to the resin and the sodium combines with carbonate or other anions and stays in the water. The water still contains dissolved solids, but the solids will not react with soaps and detergents to form insoluble compounds. The solids in water will still leave spots when the softened water dries on surfaces, but the spots will be "soft." They can be brushed away or will redissolve in water.

Iron, in amounts more than about 0.3 parts per million (ppm) can cause a staining problem. An ion exchange water softener will remove small amounts of soluble iron — up to 0.5 ppm for every grain per gallon (gpg) hardness or up 3 ppm if the softener is heavy duty.

It is necessary to check with your softener dealer for the capability of various softeners to remove iron. However, insoluble iron in water (the water appears red or brown), excess soluble iron or the presence of iron bacteria can foul the resin bed and make the softener ineffective. Correction will require in-plant cleaning of the resin bed.

ASCS Report

By Joe Hefner
County Executive Director

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service recently issued cash payments totaling $1,656,164 to Scurry County farmers for crops lost during 1990 and 1991. The total disaster payments included $1,224,851 for participating program crop losses, $429,416 for nonparticipating program crops, and $1,897 for commercial nonprogram crops.

To apply for the program, farmers with crop insurance had to lose more than 35 percent of their crop production and those without crop insurance had to lose more than 40 percent of their production to be eligible.

Total national disaster payments were limited to $995 million dollars, and claims were paid at approximately 50 cents on the dollar.

Entomology Report

By Mark Logan
County Entomologist

The pecan put casebearer is the number one insect threat to pecan production in Texas.

This nut feeder accounts for total crop losses in many years on unsprayed trees. Normally, the first generation of this insect is found damaging nuts within a two-week period.

The timing of insecticide applications for effective casebearer control is crucial. Predictions for pecan nut casebearer emergence have been set for today, May 26. There is a two-week time period following this date, when casebearers will lay their eggs and the immature casebearers will move into the nutletts.

An actual spray date cannot be set until a significant egglay has occurred. I will be looking at pecan trees throughout Scurry County to determine pecan nut casebearer activity.

There will be another article in the paper when a spray date has been set.

Boll weevil problem expected to be worse

SAN ANGELO—Two mild, wet winters in a row may seem like heaven for Texas ranchers, but the state's cotton farmers likely will play hell with the boll weevil this summer.

An entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service say the boll weevil problem is shaping up to be at least two or three times worse this growing season than last year.

It's not just here, but everywhere in Texas south of Lubbock," said Dr. Tom Fuchs of San Angelo, who has monitored weevil numbers since 1979.

Considered cotton's worst enemy, boll weevils in such high numbers could ruin millions of dollars worth of cotton and cost millions more to control.

Traps monitoring the emergence of boll weevils from diapause, their overwintering state, this spring are finding huge populations. For example, the 177 traps monitoring boll weevil activity in 15 counties south of Lubbock found 21,152 weevils in the last six weeks compared to only 123 during the same period a year ago.

"If population growth continues on this plane, we will see an extremely serious problem by fall," said Roger Halenby, of Lubboek, coordinator for the Texas High Plains Boll Weevil Diapause Control Program for Plains Cotton Growers, Inc.

Halenby, however, does not expect the High Plains above Lubbock, where half of the state's cotton is grown, to be hit by the boll weevil. The diapause control program, which carefully sets planting dates late enough to avoid the boll weevil, has been effective preventing the spread of the insect into that area for the past 28 years.

Fuchs said the last winter that knocked weevils back hard was in 1990. The coldest weather last winter came in early November after a disastrous October freeze. The icy blast stopped development on a crop already hampered by unseasonable rains.

"The good news about the freeze was that many weevils went into diapause early," said Extension Service entomologist Rick Minzenmayer, of Ballinger, who monitors weevil numbers with Fuchs. "Those that didn't were left with little to survive on. Weevils entering diapause early usually emerged early this spring, when there was nothing to eat. Those that made the winter should survive for only a short time if cotton squares are not available."

Minzenmayer said the bad news is that huge numbers of weevils moved from cotton fields to pastures and other overwintering areas last fall, which grew lush with the rains.

The two entomologists are the only ones in the state who annually conduct leaf liter surveys for weevils. These are done to compare likely overwintering boll weevil populations to previous years. The counts and weather data are computerized to help cotton farmers decide how much land to plant, budget control expenses and establish a uniform planting date.

Overwintering areas remain a prime concern of the entomologists. These include fence rows and native pasture, but some of the worst culprits are old abandoned farmsteads. These three-to five-acre sites usually grow rank with weeds and create excellent overwintering areas.

Ronald, Jerry and Murphy Brown keep it interesting

By Walter R. Mears
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — From Ronald the chairman to Jerry the candidate to Murphy the issue, Browns are all over the presidential campaign. Their success rates vary.

Chairman Brown, Ronald, of the Democratic National Committee, said far in advance that the party would strive for an early decision on a nominee to challenge President Bush, and would keep ideological litmus tests, the bane of earlier nominees, out of the way this time.

That much of his game plan worked. But Bill Clinton, the nominee in waiting, hasn't been able to take full advantage of the head start, in part because of the interest and attention claimed by independent Ross Perot.

Brown also said he'd try to persuade Democratic losers to drop from the race once it was obvious they couldn't win, to help rally the party around the winner.

That plan didn't succeed.

Candidate Brown, Jerry, former governor of California, can't win but won't quit. Chairman Brown tried to get him to temper his campaign assaults on Clinton as a likely loser, to little avail.

Indeed, candidate Brown says he intends to keep his challenge to the establishment going beyond the presidential campaign. He hasn't figured out how do to it, but he says there has to be a way and points to the Perot surge as evidence of the need.

"There's an opening for new structures of participation that do not now exist," Brown said. "Somebody's got to invent a new one. There's such a vacuum."

The frustration is reflected in the Perot movement, Brown said, although he added it may not withstand the scrutiny and rigors that go with an active campaign for the White House.

On that, at least, the Democratic Browns agree.

Ronald Brown said the Perot campaign reflects "the tragedy of what's happened in American politics."

"Voters out there are expressing a desire to support somebody they know nothing about whatsoever," he said in Louisville, Ky., last Thursday. "That ought to give us all pause."

AP analysis

He added, "My own judgment is he's a little dictator."

The Clinton campaign line has been to temper criticism of Perot so as to avoid alienating his supporters, on the theory that the Democratic ticket may ultimately attract voters who want change.

Chairman Brown agrees with the premise, and says polls in which most people say they do not want Bush re-elected are good news for Democrats, even if they do rank Clinton third at this point.

Fictional television character Brown, Murphy, was only a bystander until Vice President Dan Quayle made her an issue with one line in a May 19 speech on family values, complaining about the television comedy series that made a heroine of an unwed mother.

Quayle's speech was on "the poverty of values" and the breakdown of the family; factors, he said, in the urban turmoil that erupted in the Los Angeles riots.

Amid the wave of wisecracks and rebuttals to the Murphy Brown comment, Quayle said he had stirred a substantive discussion on values and "the American people support what I'm talking about." He said that will be an issue in the fall campaign.

No city has ever played host to the Summer Olympics more than twice.

Voters to decide next week whether to split California

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A proposal to make Northern California the 51st state goes before voters next week, delighting the disgruntled taxpayers, state-bashers and secessionists who resurrected the 19th century movement.

While purely advisory, the ballot measure next Tuesday reflects a growing sentiment fueled by worries about crowds and crime in Southern California.

"I think there's a feeling that the state is too large and dysfunctional," said Jim Chapman of Susanville in Lassen County. "People are saying, 'Gee, I don't want to be part of that.'"

The riots in Los Angeles after the April 29 acquittals of four white officers in the beating of black motorist Rodney King "may strengthen that kind of feeling and drive people to support this," he added.

The measure is on ballots in 31 of California's 58 counties. The counties, which include a third of the state's population, range from densely populated San Francisco and San Mateo counties to tiny Alpine, with 1,140 people. All are in the northern or central part of the state.

California's secession movement comes amid attempts by unhappy residents of other states and cities to break away. In New York City, officials in the boroughs of Queens and Staten Island have taken steps to secede from a city they believe is dominated by Manhattan borough.

In 1846, a group of settlers at Sonoma, Calif., proclaimed the free republic of California.
