Speaking out

Poll on verdicts

LOS ANGELES — A majority of residents believe the verdicts in the Reginald Denny beating case were too lenient and jurors feared another riot, according to a newspaper poll. O'Leary's remarks send shocks through industry

■ Oil, gas association phone, fax lines buzz, as members make known their displeasure.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

Remarks made Monday by Secretary of Energy Hazel O'Leary have sent shock waves through the petroleum industry, which has reacted with outrage to O'Leary's remarks that the domestic petroleum industry may be "too feeble to salvage," and the notion that a strong domestic oil industry is needed for national security may be an "outdated idea."

The comments, made in an Associated Press interview that generally was negative toward the domestic oil industry, kept phone lines and fax lines to oil and gas associations buzzing all day Tuesday, as members made known their displeasure.

"We have been innundated all day long by phone calls and faxes from irate members around the country," said Denise Bode, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA).

Coast Guard officials carry a 4-month-old baby to safety at Mobile, Ala., Monday. The baby was among 17 Cubans rescued Sunday from a 15-foot boat near Key West, Fla. A Navy frigate, based at Mobile, picked up the refugees and plans to transfer them to Miami immigration officials.

Council vote propels new terminal plan

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

City Council gave the go-ahead Tuesday to begin the process of building a new airport terminal. But before the council decision, a concerned citizen had the mayor promise that the $29 million project would never be funded with tax dollars.

The terminal — expected to be completed in about five years — will be constructed with $13 million from Passenger Facilities Charges (PFC), which are $3 per enplanement; $12 million in Federal Aviation Administration grants; and $4 million from airport revenue, such as concessions, parking and landing fees over a 20-year period, officials said.

The passed resolution authorized the Midland Department of Airports to ask the FAA to allow expenditure from the enplanement fund.

Tuesday's vote was unanimous, and although council member Claudia Egan was not present, she had sent a letter expressing her support.

In the process of granting the go-ahead, city and airport officials expressed the need of a new terminal and the public support.

"Anyone who's investigated (the proposal) at all knows the needs are there," said Thane Akins, chairman of the airport advisory board.

Officials have said the current building is in poor shape: Americans with Disabilities Act compliance problems, plumbing and electrical systems from the 1950s, a need to rebuild baggage and jetway equipment, covered parking structural problems, and safety and line-of-sight problems from the control tower.

'Anyone who's investigated (the proposal) at all knows the needs are there.'

— Thane Akins, airport advisory board chairman

Furthermore, officials said building a new terminal is financially more feasible than remodeling the current one. And the new building — which will be about 20 percent larger — will keep Midland up with the times, officials said.

City leaders said they feel comfortable that Midlanders support the project.

"I think we have gone out of our way to make sure citizens have had their comments," Mayor J.D. Faircloth said.

Edna Walger, representing Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse, put in a last comment to council about the terminal.

"This is a dying gasp for those people in town who believe this is not needed," she said.

Ms. Walger went on to warn council members of unanticipated cost overruns and asked for their promise that taxes won't be used if that happens.

Another opponent of the council's decision expressed a preference for voters to decide the issue.

Because the funds are generated by the airport, a public vote isn't required.

MISD cracks door on prayer issue

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Student-led prayers may soon be heard over public address systems during opening comments of football games or other Midland Independent School District activities.

Midland school-board trustees voted unanimously Tuesday night to leave the door open for prayer to become a part of opening comments of extracurricular activities.

The issue, which elicited passionate support from a boardroom full of Midland citizens, was brought before the board by two students at a previous meeting.

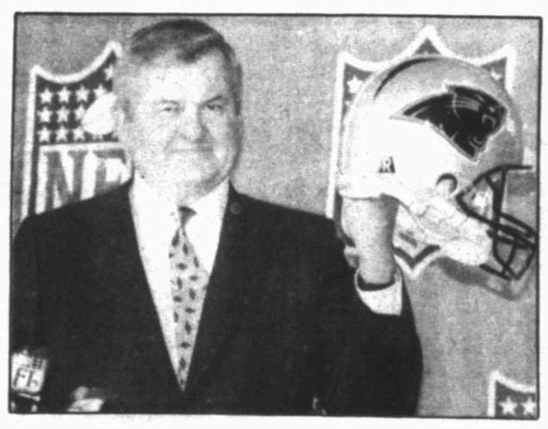

'We can neither inhibit nor promote free expression.'

School-board trustee Gary Willis

School-board trustee Gary Willis prepared a response to the students, which his fellow board members upheld.

"The (U.S.) Constitution obligates us — as a board — to remain neutral on the issue of free expression," Willis said. "We can neither inhibit nor promote free expression."

Dead woman just 'fell through cracks'

By Jeff Donn
Associated Press writer

WORCESTER, Mass. — One neighbor had Adele A. Gaboury's lawn mowed for her. Another took care of a pile of mail. A utility company was called to tend to her broken pipes.

All the while, the 73-year-old recluse lay dead, probably for four years, in trash on the kitchen floor. Authorities found her body Monday with a phone nearby, as if she had been trying to make a call when she died.

"She didn't want anyone bothering her at all," said an old friend, June Tsiokas. "She just wanted to be left alone. I guess she got her wish, but it's awfully sad."

Neighbors had inquired about Gaboury about four years ago, after they noticed she was missing. But one of her brothers, with whom she wasn't close, told po-

Judge dismisses indictments of Hutchison on technicality

By John Gonzalez
N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — Four felony ethics indictments against U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, were dismissed Tuesday by a state district judge who agreed with her contention that the charges were invalid because of a technicality.

However, prosecutors already are seeking to re-indict Hutchison over allegations of misconduct resulting from her two-year term as state treasurer.

By granting Hutchison's request to toss out the Sept. 27 indictments, District Judge Mike Lynch said he lost the authority to conduct any more proceedings — a setback in the former state treasurer's bid for a quick trial.

Hutchison, accused of misusing her state office and trying to cover up misdeeds, was sched-

Israelis, Palestinians grapple with police, POW questions

TABA, Egypt (AP) — Israeli and Palestinian negotiators wrestled Tuesday over how to police the Gaza Strip and West Bank town of Jericho after Israeli troops leave. The two sides reported better understanding but little progress.

Palestinian delegates also complained that Israel had not lived up to a promise, made earlier in the negotiations, to free 700 Palestinian prisoners.

Israel freed 617 Palestinian prisoners on Monday. It was the largest single release since the Sept. 13 signing of the Israel-PLO agreement providing for autonomy in the occupied Gaza Strip and Jericho.

But Chief PLO negotiator Nabil Shaath said Israel should free detainees from all Palestinian groups, not just those who belong to PLO chief Yasser Arafat's Fatah faction, which supports the peace negotiations.

"We would like Israel to see that releasing prisoners contributes toward support of the peace process, not the other way around," Shaath said, appearing in front of reporters with his arm around Salim Zerai, who was released last week after 23 years in prison.

In Israel, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Tuesday that Israel wants to "solve the problem of the detainees and prisoners."

U.S., N. Korea hold secret strategic talks

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In unpublicized talks aimed at ending an impasse over international supervision of North Korea's nuclear program, United States and North Korean officials meeting in New York have discussed steps toward cancellation of war games conducted by United States and South Korean forces and the possibility of eventual American diplomatic recognition of the North, government officials and private citizens say.

The discussions, a new channel of communication between Washington and the Communist government in Pyongyang, were joined two weeks ago by North Korea's principal arms control negotiator, Choi U-jin, the officials and citizens said.

"The U.S. and North Korea have had unannounced talks going on for about a month," said Selig S. Harrison, a senior associate at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace in Washington. "The ice is beginning to crack."

Harrison said that if the talks succeeded, the two nations could "begin to talk about a broad normalization of relations," including diplomatic recognition.

At the heart of the current discussions and the delicate diplomatic interplay between the two nations are attempts by the International Atomic Energy Agency to oversee North Korea's nuclear program. The United States suspects that North Korea is trying to build a nuclear bomb.

North Korea agreed in June 1992 to allow the agency to make inspections, but arguments arose over its demands for access to suspect sites. They led to what Harrison called an "atmosphere of nationalist paranoia" and "a posture of injured innocence" on the part of the North Koreans.

As a consequence, North Korea blocked routine technical inspections. The film and battery packs on surveillance cameras placed by the agency at North Korean nuclear sites will run dry by the end of this month. Unless the disputes are resolved, the agency's director, Hans Blix, has said he will go to the U.N. Security Council seeking sanctions against Pyongyang.

The secret talks are aimed in part at ending those disputes, opening the way for more productive talks in the public negotiations between North Korea's deputy foreign minister, Kang Jok-su, and the assistant secretary of state for politico-military affairs, Robert L. Gallucci. The two met in New York in June.

Embargo prompts Haitian gunmen to grab pumps

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Gun-toting men barged past waiting motorists to commandeer dwindling gasoline supplies Tuesday, as a global oil embargo aimed at restoring democracy squeezed Haiti harder.

Parliament was again unable to muster a quorum to pass laws that could end the crisis. Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, head of the military that toppled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide in 1991, wants the parliament to grant an amnesty to those involved in murders since the coup.

But many legislators are in hiding at home or abroad, afraid that anti-Aristide thugs will kill them if they appear in public.

Political violence blamed on the ruling military, as well as the military's intransigence, has hampered efforts to bring Aristide home under a U.N.-brokered accord signed in July.

Under the agreement signed by Cedras and Aristide, the military chief was to have resigned before the return of Aristide, the country's first freely elected leader. The accord called for Aristide to return on Saturday.

But the United Nations imposed the oil and arms embargo Oct. 18, after Cedras showed growing unwillingness to step down and military-backed workers turned back a U.S. ship carrying U.N. workers who were to help implement the agreement.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman, Stanley Schrager, on Tuesday characterized the political efforts to return Aristide as "stymied."

In Washington, other U.S. officials conceded that Aristide probably won't be able to return to Haiti for at least another week.

Despite the political paralysis, the oil embargo has sunk its teeth into the Western Hemisphere's most impoverished country.

Because of insufficient fuel, deliveries of drinkable water to the capital's huge Cite Soleil slum were cut by two-thirds on Tuesday. Aid officials also are concerned that food aid could be delayed by the fuel shortage.

Canada's new chief now faces unemployment

TORONTO (AP) — The Liberals vanquished their rivals with a landslide election victory, but the strength of their win won't make Canada's struggle for renewal any easier.

The first stage of Liberal leader Jean Chretien's plan — tossing the rascals out — has been accomplished. The Conservatives are gone, reduced to just two seats in the 295-seat House of Commons.

Now Chretien takes on tougher tasks: attacking 11.2 percent unemployment, getting a runaway budget under control, dealing with a spiraling debt that is eating away revenues, finding an alternative to a hated national sales tax, and coming to terms with Quebec.

Chretien, 59, a Quebec lawyer with more than 30 years experience in the federal government, has the mandate. Some Canadians wonder if he has the skill.

"I don't expect leadership to come from the top of the government," said William Christian, a political scientist at the University of Guelph.

"Chretien has never had any ideas, that's not his particular skill. I don't think he has got much in the way of economic smarts in his own right, but he certainly has capable advisers."

■ More world news/8D

What Chretien can do is give free rein to some of the talented people on his team, then do what he does best: sell his program to the people.

Deputy Liberal leader Sheila Copps said Tuesday the new government will take power within two weeks and move immediately on a promised $4.5 billion job-creation program, the first step toward easing Canada's 11.2 percent unemployment.

"We have to move very quickly because obviously Canadian confidence is one thing that we really have to build upon," she said on CBC television. "The public works program is ready to roll immediately."

Chretien's plan is to put up $1.5 billion to fix roads, sewers and other public works projects. The provinces and municipalities would be expected to chip in another $2 billion each to create 120,000 jobs over two years.

During the campaign, Conservatives pointed out that the local and provincial governments are just as broke as Ottawa and would have to borrow to come up with their share.

Next on Chretien's list would be cancellation of a Conservative plan to buy 43 EH-101 helicopters at a cost of $3.6 billion. Some of the savings could be used for other programs, but some would still have to go toward refitting the military's fleet of aging choppers.

Then he'll have to consider his vow to renegotiate Canada's free trade deal with the United States and the multilateral deal that also includes Mexico, though the three-way North American Free Trade Agreement is scheduled to supersede the U.S.-Canada accord on Jan. 1. That is, of course, if he can persuade the United States to reopen negotiations, which is far from certain.

Monday's election gave the left-of-center Liberals 178 seats in the House of Commons. The separatist Bloc Quebecois won 54 seats.

Dominicans tell refugees to go home

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — The Dominican Republic is returning thousands of Haitians to their homeland despite political turmoil in that troubled land.

"We are not persecuting the Haitians. We are simply continuing our program of repatriation of foreigners who live illegally in the country," Dominican immigration director Hector Vilorio Caminero said Monday.

"We ought to be deporting 1,000 or more illegal Haitians daily, but we do not have the resources," he said.

Truckloads of Haitians being sent home have arrived in recent days at Dajabon, a border crossing 190 miles northwest of Santo Domingo, a parish priest said Tuesday.

"We are increasing the suffering and anguish of the Haitian people," said the Rev. Regino Martinez, a Jesuit priest, in a telephone interview.

There are an estimated 500,000 to 1 million illegal alien Haitians in the Dominican Republic. Many were contracted to work temporarily in the cane fields over the years and never returned.

Many Dominicans fear that the poverty and political upheaval in Haiti could trigger an exodus into their country, which is more prosperous and politically stable. The two countries share the Caribbean island of Hispaniola.

Dominican newspapers have raised the question of whether the expulsions are being undertaken to prevent Haitians from fleeing troubles at home.

President Joaquin Balaguer began a large-scale Haitian repatriation program two years ago after Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide accused the Dominican Republic of violating the human rights of Haitians living there.

Rain chance to cloud morning

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for cloudy skies with a 30 percent chance of light rain in the morning with decreasing clouds in the afternoon and a high in the upper 50s with variable winds 5-10 mph, according to a National Weather Service spokesman.

Tonight should be clear with a low in the mid-30s. Thursday should be sunny with a high in the mid-70s.

After a low of 47, compared to the record low of 33 set in 1967, the temperatures only rose to 64 — considerably lower than the record high of 90 set in 1950.

STATE

Cloudy skies and light rain moved into West Texas behind a cold front Tuesday, but the rest of the state had mostly sunny skies and pleasant temperatures.

Afternoon highs in West Texas ranged from 42 degrees at Dalhart and Amarillo to 70 degrees at Sanderson. Winds were northerly to northeasterly at 15 mph to 25 mph and gusty, except in the far west areas where they were easterly at 15 to 20 mph.

NATION

Strong winds buffeted the East on Tuesday, while warm Santa Ana winds blew through Los Angeles, raising temperatures 15 degrees in a half-hour.

Gale warnings were posted Tuesday and today from the southern New England coast through southeast Virginia. The strong winds and high tides were expected to cause some coastal flooding and beach erosion.

Temperatures in many places were lower than normal for late October. Clayton Lake, Maine, chilled to 14 degrees early Tuesday, and the low temperature for the Lower 48 states was 8 degrees at Pinedale, Wyo.

At 2 p.m. CDT, temperatures around the nation ranged from 33 degrees at Alamosa, Colo., and Laramie. Wyo., to 93 degrees at Thermal, Calif.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SHOCK: Oil industry reacts with outrage and Royalty Owners Association (TIPRO), Permian Basin Petroleum Association (PBPA) and West Central Texas Oil & Gas Association (WeTOGA) expressed a similar situation.

(From 1A)

"Our phones have been ringing off the wall," said Morris Burns, WeTOGA vice president.

Energy officials expressed shock, dismay and disappointment at O'Leary's remarks. "I am astonished that she would make such a statement, especially at a financial conference to promote trade," Bode said.

Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, called the remarks "totally out of line."

He said they were in direct conflict with campaign promises made by President Clinton when he was campaigning for office, and that he had Clinton's promises on file to prove it.

Others agree that the statements were inconsistent with Clinton's stated views on energy. A meeting of TIPRO's statewide task force on energy policy issued a press response calling the statements apalling. Said TIPRO President Tom Coffaman: "We simply cannot believe the Clinton Administration shares the secretary's viewpoint, arbitrarily dismissing the independent producer as a dying breed too feeble to salvage."

Bode said she had been working on a daily basis with the Department of Energy and White House and that O'Leary's remarks were totally contrary to everything she had been told by Clinton Administration officials.

Bode said the statements could be very damaging to U.S. energy policy.

In her interview O'Leary also said she "had no answers" for the troubled domestic oil industry, and implied that it should not count on her for much help. "We may be an industry in crisis, but we don't want to be written off," she said referring to independent oil producers.

TIPRO's Coffman called the independent producer the backbone of the domestic oil industry, a term also used by Texas Railroad Commissioner Barry Williamson to describe the role taken by independents since the large integrated oil companies have begun to move overseas.

Williamson said independents typically drill 85 percent of all the wells in the U.S.; produce 60 percent of the gas and 31 percent of the oil, while spending $11 billion annually for exploration and development. "These individuals and companies are far too important to casually write off."

Independent producers were in agreement. Bill Gilmore, a small independent oil producer in Midland, said he didn't want to be written off, but one sure way to rid the nation of a domestic oil industry would be to follow O'Leary's lead. "She is totally out of touch if she thinks we should rely only on foreign oil to fuel our nation. Nothing can put our nation into deep turmoil quicker than an energy crisis. We only have to look at the Arab Oil Embargo of 1973 to know that."

Calling embargoes very effective, Dennis Johnson, chief operating officer, for Henry Petroleum Corp. in Midland, noted that when an embargo is imposed anywhere in the world, the first thing on the list is energy.

"As for independents being too feeble to salvage, there are more healthy and economically competitive independent oil companies today than major oil companies," Johnson said. "If Mrs. O'Leary can't think of any way to help independents, I would ask her to help promote reasonable environmental laws."

Jerry Atkinson, president of JVA Operating Co. of Midland, said O'Leary's remarks were the evidence of a liberal-leaning bureaucrat that viewed oil and gas as an adversary of the environment. "She has a mindset based on political inclination rather than fact. It's another sad example of Bill Clinton putting amateurs into positions of importance."

Ironically, Dirk Beveridge, the AP reporter that interviewed O'Leary in London, is the son of Dick Beveridge, a Midland oilman.

"I was glad Dirk got the opportunity to put some hard questions to her," said Beveridge, president of Western Reserves Oil Co. "She was probably not aware that he had been an energy writer for two years, or she might have responded with different remarks."

Beveridge said he, too, was shocked that a U.S. Secretary of Energy would make such remarks. "I find it discouraging that she has no answers. Every aspect of the interview was negative. There was nothing positive or encouraging."

Bode said she had contacted the younger Beveridge, 33, a Midland High School graduate, in London to make sure he had not misunderstood O'Leary's remarks. She said he had assured her that the secretary's quotes were accurate.

DISMISS: Judge tosses out ethics charges

uled to go to trial on Nov. 29 and had hoped to clear her name before the 1994 Senate election campaign — even if it meant facing trial without a regular indictment.

A spokesman, saying a trial this year now appears impossible, accused District Attorney Ronnie Earle of deliberately trying to stall the case to injure Hutchison's election chances. Earle refused to go along with Hutchison's agreement to face trial based on a prosecutor's affidavit of accusations, rather than a grand jury's indictment.

"Earle wants to stage this trial sometime next year — in the middle of the campaign or even after the 1994 election — so that Senator Hutchison remains under this cloud as long as possible," said Hutchison spokesman David Beckwith.

But Earle spokesman David Halpern denied that, saying, "This is not a deliberate attempt to delay the proceedings." Two days ago, Earle called the defense maneuver "just a legal trick."

The district attorney is presenting the case to a second grand jury because Hutchison's lawyers discovered that one of the grand jurors had a theft by check charge pending since 1988. They contended that his presence on the grand jury tainted the indictment, and Earle agreed.

Halpern said the grand jury would reconvene Wednesday to continue consideration of evidence against Hutchison. The panel took up the case on Monday after prosecutors acknowledged that the four indictments where flawed.

PROPELS: City gives go-ahead on terminal query, the city can change its mind on the project before construction begins in 1996.

In other action at their regular meeting Tuesday, council members agreed to water and sewer rate increases, to support ongoing operation of water supply and sewage disposal, and costs incurred for the city's participation in the Ivie Reservoir pipeline project.

The minimum water charge for 2,000 gallons will increase from $10.50 to 10.75, and the rate for each additional 1,000 gallons will jump from $1.89 to $2.15.

The sewer charge for households will increase from $12.17 per month to $13.

The new rates will still be subject to a 10 percent discount for early payment, of which more than 90 percent of Midlanders take advantage, officials said.

MISD: Trustees open door on prayer issue

(From 1A)

Willis' motion, which passed 7-0, read: "Be it moved that board legal counsel and the superintendent be charged with carefully crafting and presenting to the board reasonably defensible policy language that allows senior high school students — acting through Student Council — to determine issues of free expression by students on the occasion of opening comments at school extracurricular activities.

"Further be it moved that said policy language affirmatively include provisions prohibiting speech that is not protected by First Amendment rights — examples of which include lewd speech and 'fighting words.' "

"Does this mean only football games? Can we have prayer before basketball games?" asked an unidentified student.

"Each high school Student Council has to decide," said Joseph Baressi Jr., MISD superintendent. "But, yes, this means school concerts, basketball games or anything with a reason for opening exercises.

Willis said student councils will have to go through a process, similar to the current process of preparing opening remarks for graduation ceremonies, before prayer can be implemented.

"No school officials will tell students: 'You will pray,' or 'You won't pray,' " the trustee said. "This has a very secular purpose. We are allowing students to learn how representative government works."

Some parents asked if the district policy could be drafted and implemented before the next home football game.

"We prefer to do this correctly," Willis said.

Baressi said before becoming district policy, any proposal must receive two board readings.

Midlander Randy Atwood, addressing trustees, said, "I can remember a time when we had prayer every morning in school . . . and when I stood out on the football field, hearing a prayer over the loud speaker system meant something to me and the people in the stands."

His remarks were met with resounding applause.

Willis said his proposal "allows seniors to determine free expression, excluding language that is not constitutional."

Another agenda item drawing a large crowd Tuesday night was the proposed $2.2 million renovation of South Elementary School.

South Parent Teacher Association President Belinda Lieme said parents were displeased with two renovation proposals presented by MISD administrators at a recent community meeting.

One proposal added classroom space and a teachers' lounge, but eliminated a stage. The other proposal kept the stage, but had less classroom space. Parents divided on which plan was better.

"We (South parents) felt because we were on the wrong side of the tracks, we're getting shortchanged," Ms. Lermi said. "You build new schools in the north, but ours is going to be fixed or changed instead of adding something new. If we are going to spend money, let's do it right. . . . We as parents want the best for our kids . . . including appropriate space."

Trustee James Fuller said, "We have demonstrated we are concerned about equal facilities across the board. South being renovated is part of that plan."

Trustees invited South parents to look at Washington and Houston renovations to get an idea what their school will look like.

Built in the 1940s, MISD administrator Wilson Heidelberg said South will be "completely gutted" for repaired during the renovation.

A third proposal for South's renovation, which included a multipurpose center, stage, teachers' lounge and additional space, received the support of parents and was approved by the school board.

The approved proposal, which adds a full stage, will cost an additional $152,000. The $2.2 renovation comes from capital outlay funds. Trustees hope to recoup the additional $152,000 from residuals left from construction projects when actual bids were lower than the budgeted amount.

Another top agenda item for Tuesday was a public hearing called to discuss ways to lower the district's dropout rates.

Bill Franklin, Midland National Bank president and CEO, said, "The problem in Texas is not only an education problem, but a king-size economic problem. We can minimize the problem by starting at the pre-kindergarten and elementary school level."

Speaking as a representative of the Midland Chamber of Commerce's Education Combination Committee, Franklin praised the district's Reading Recovery intervention program in the elementary schools. "It works," he said. "But it is not nearly staffed as it could be."

"Less than 1 percent of the total budget is spent on Reading Recovery," Franklin noted. "We can spend a whole lot now or a whole lot more later."

Deborah Grayson, current president of ADDAPT (Attention-Deficit Disorder Association of Parents and Teachers), said students who aren't in the upper or lower ends of achievement scales fall through the cracks.

"The district spends a whole lot of time and resources to serve those students who excel and forget about those struggling who are not low enough to qualify for resources . . . they need help too," she said.

Ms. Grayson suggested those students be identified through testing and assisted through tutoring.

In other action trustees voted unanimously to set the district property tax rate at $1.38 per $100 valuation.

Representatives of the Education Combination Teacher Recognition Committee presented a proposal to name "Teacher of the Year" and runner-ups.

Greathouse Elementary School's mascot was approved to be the knight, and the school's colors of purple and green were accepted.

lice she had gone into a nursing home.

"A brother had located a woman with the same last name and assumed it was his sister. It wasn't," said police Capt. James Gallagher.

With the search for Gaboury ended, neighbors began to tend to her two-story house that stood out in its decay in a middle-class neighborhood of the central Massachusetts city.

The mailman kept delivering her mail through a slot in the door, until neighbor Michael Crowley noticed a pileup. He opened the door and hundreds of pieces of mail fluttered into the yard. Crowley notified police, who got the deliveries stopped. Subsequent mail was stamped return to sender.

Next-door neighbor Eileen Dugan, assuming Gaboury was in a nursing home, started paying her own grandson $10 twice a month to mow Gaboury's lawn because the property was such an eyesore.

A utility company was called to shut off the water when Dugan's son noticed Gaboury's pipes had frozen and sent water spilling out the door.

No one could imagine Gaboury was inside. Even when police searched the home Friday, after a neighbor complained about it as a health hazard, they missed her badly decomposed body in 6 feet of trash.

Authorities still suspicious returned Monday for another look and found the body.

Police said they believe Gaboury died of natural causes four years ago, when her bank transactions ended. The state medical examiner's office was investigating.

A brother, Joseph Gaboury, 70, of East Brookfield, said the family hadn't been close since their mother died in 1979. But he told the Worcester Telegram & Gazette: "Someone should have noticed something before now."

Gaboury apparently had worked at a nursing home and had been living with a male companion until he died six years ago. Florence Stearns, administrator of the Anna Marie Rest Home, said Gaboury worked there as activity director for about two years, leaving in 1986 after problems arose over her absenteeism.

Stearns said she knew little about Gaboury except that she had formerly worked on a cruise ship.

"She was rather a private person," Stearns said. "She kept her own affairs to herself."

And few others knew much about Gaboury, who lived on the street for 40 years.

"My heart bleeds for her, but you can't blame a soul," said Rose Girouard, who lives across the street. "If she saw you out there, she never said hello to you."

Clinton modifies health-care plan to cut costs

WASHINGTON (NYT) — To control the cost of his proposal for universal health insurance coverage, President Clinton has modified it to limit federal spending on subsidies for low-income workers, small businesses and early retirees, administration officials and congressional aides said on Tuesday.

The proposal, one of dozens of adjustments to the Clinton health care plan he intends to submit to Congress on Wednesday, seeks to balance two conflicting imperatives. On the one hand, the president is telling Americans, as he said last month, they have a right to "health security — health care that can never be taken away, health care that is always there."

On the other hand, he and his budget director, Leon E. Panetta, say they do not want to create a new entitlement to benefits that would impose open-ended costs on the federal government far into the future.

By limiting the federal subsidies, the administration hopes to prevent runaway costs. But ultimately, doing so could also mean less coverage for some citizens or smaller payments to doctors and hospitals.

Clinton's health plan represents the most sweeping new venture in social policy in a half-century. The White House finished drafting the formal legislation on Tuesday. The document amplifies the vision Clinton set forth in a speech to Congress on Sept. 22.

In an effort to regain political momentum lost since then, the president and his wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton, will go to Capitol Hill on Wednesday to give Congress the full text of the proposed legislation. This document, containing the language they want Congress to write into law, will be far more detailed than anything yet offered by the White House.

The legislation responds to congressional demands for more detail. It also reflects political compromises with lobbyists and lawmakers spanning the ideological spectrum: those who want a much bigger role for the government and those who want less government.

Jury convicts former HUD aide of felonies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deborah Gore Dean, a central figure in the Reagan-era HUD scandal, was convicted Tuesday of 12 felony counts of defrauding the government, taking a payoff and lying to Congress.

The former executive assistant to Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel Pierce could be sentenced to a maximum 57 years in prison and $3 million in fines. Her sentencing was set for Jan. 19 by U.S. District Judge Thomas Hogan.

The 38-year-old Dean was the 10th person in the HUD scandal to be convicted through trial or guilty pleas. Pierce, who disclaimed knowledge of the high-level misdeeds in his department, has not been charged.

Dean was depicted at her six-week trial as being instrumental with others in funneling millions of dollars to housing projects that benefited politically connected Republicans.

"Defendant Dean took a program designed to aid low-income families, and instead used it to benefit herself, her family, and her friends," said independent counsel Arlin M. Adams, whose office prosecuted the case.

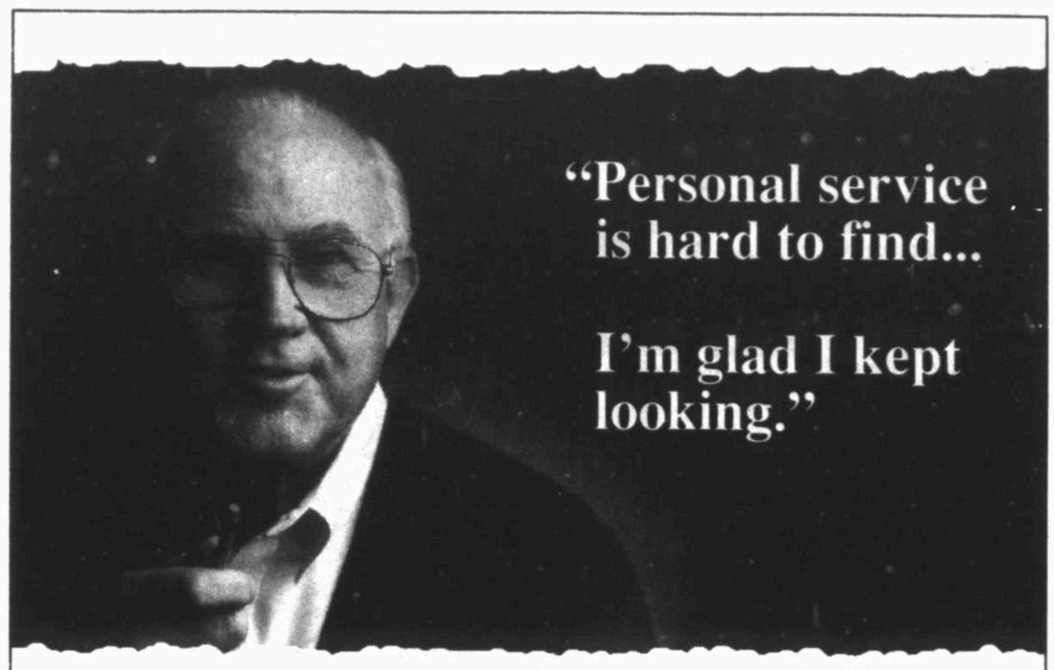

"By betraying the public trust in this manner, Ms. Dean committed a crime no less serious than the street crimes that plague our nation," Adams said.

Prosecutors told the jury of eight women and four men that Dean stood at the center of "a partnership in crime" that enriched her family and friends, including Richard Nixon's former Attorney General John N. Mitchell.

She testified that she was the contact point for politically well-connected developers. But, she said, her boss, Pierce was the one who made all the decisions on where to send "mod-rehab housing."

Dean was executive assistant to Pierce from 1984 to 1987 when the agency was parceling out federal money under its moderate rehabilitation housing program.

She was convicted of three counts of conspiring to defraud the U.S. government, one count of accepting an illegal gratuity from a consultant and eight counts of lying about her activities at HUD.

Moratorium's wise on human cloning

While the cloning of human embryos at George Washington University did not involve embryos that could develop into a fully-realized human being, the ethical questions raised by the experiment beg for declaration of a moratorium on such experiments.

Jeremy Rifkin, president of a biotechnology watchdog group, made that point clear when he said, "No such experiments should be allowed in the United States or funded by the U.S. government."

Although the cloning might not result in the popular Hollywood-version of Frankenstein and might actually lead to potential benefits to mankind in some regard, until the matter is fully debated and the ethical questions are resolved a moratorium on human cloning should be declared and rigidly enforced. Rifkin contends that the cloning done at George Washington University represents a destructive type of genetic engineering. It was to be expected when science first broke into the realm of genetic engineering that the moral questions involved would eventually surface. Now they have.

"There are very significant ethical concerns involved," said American Fertility Society President Dr. Robert Visscher. "We would strongly suggest that there be an ethical review before further research is done."

The embryos in question were not implanted in patients because they were flawed.

A moratorium is the only reasonable alternative at this point. Every time that a technological breakthrough occurs in science, there is the possibility that it could be used for the good of mankind or for evil purposes. In this instance when there is no assurance that every scientist who can clone human embryos will willingly refrain from such experimentation, the only logical manner is to declare a moratorium on such experiments.

We have strong concerns that human cloning is not a suitable region for modern science to tread.

Danger lurks behind merger of monopolies

Danger for the American consumer lurks behind the announced merger of Bell Atlantic Corp. and cable TV giant Tele-Communications Inc.

The danger is combining two monopolies into one, giving them more power and money to extend their monopoly over consumers, controlling prices and access to information.

In announcing the merger, it was noted that the two companies will combine extensive programming resources of the world's largest cable company with the regional phone company's expertise in two-way communications.

It's the start of what telephone companies have long dreamed and have been gearing up to do for some time. They want to build a super highway of information, providing telephone, interactive television cable, news and advertising as well as bill paying and shopping.

We're not sure of the demand just yet for such a system nor of the ability of the public to access all that is available.

But, the main danger and a really big problem is they will have sole control of what we can see, hear and read with vast capital resources that would possibly overwhelm competition. This is something that regulators, including Congress, need to look at very carefully.

U.S. troops aren't global agency; bring them home

Why March 31? Why not Jan. 1? Or even better Nov. 1?

Somehow President Clinton apparently thinks the good guys can beat the bad guys in Somalia before March 31, allowing U.S. troops to hold their heads high when they end their "humanitarian" mission. U.S. troops haven't made much headway in trying to bring peace and stability to this African nation since they arrived last December. . . .

Missing from all the recent discussion over the timetable for withdrawal has been any official pronouncements about what compelling national interest might be served by keeping U.S. troops in Somalia. Our armed forces exist to protect our national interests, not to serve as a global social services agency. . . .

Too bad the Senate wouldn't bite the bullet and force the president to bring the troops home more rapidly. No more Americans should have to give their lives to carry out a mission that lacks any clear objective.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 27, the 300th day of 1993. There are 65 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 27th, 1787, the first of the Federalist Papers, a series of essays calling for ratification of the United States Constitution, was published in a New York newspaper.

JACK ANDERSON

California governor faces uphill climb

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — It's a wonder Pete Wilson is still smiling.

Since taking office in January 1991, the embattled Republican governor of California has watched his state suffer two large earthquakes, the Oakland fires, chemical and sewage spills, flooding, a drought and the Los Angeles riots. Some parts of the state even suffered an infestation of whiteflies and locusts.

Anderson

"We don't call them disasters," quipped Wilson's spokesman Dan Schnur. "We call them plagues. We've had eight plagues now, just two behind Egypt. So far, we've missed frogs and boils."

Tragically for Wilson, California's natural disasters may be the least of his problems. As the governor of America's most populous state, which by itself ranks as the world's seventh-largest economy, Wilson is presiding over the worst economic times seen here since the Great Depression: More than 800,000 jobs lost in the last three years; skyrocketing entitlement programs; a population that continues to grow by the size of Delaware each year.

Yet Wilson was smiling when our associate Dale Van Atta visited him in his office recently. He shrugs, even tells a joke or two with a wry, Midwestern humor.

This was not the so-called "Robopol" of California we were expecting, judging from the local press. He's been portrayed as heartless.

His problems notwithstanding, the workaholic Wilson loves his job. It's the one he always wanted. "I've been a chief executive twice and a legislator twice," he explains. "What you do as chief executive has almost instant impact."

If Wilson seeks instant impact, he has plenty of places to choose. The state is broke, and citizens here are in a near-panic over illegal immigration. State agencies estimate it cost $3 billion last year just to educate the children of illegal immigrants.

Or, he could start with the tax system. California is hamstrung by voter initiatives that virtually block any attempts to raise property taxes, yet mandate that a specific, and growing, amount of money be spent on public education each year.

A pro-business conservative who prefers lower taxes and less spending, Wilson has found himself confronting fiscal chaos each year.

A man who likes quick results, Wilson needs just that if he is to win re-election next year. Polls show his popularity statewide is in the low 20s, and he is being attacked from all sides.

On his right are conservative Republicans, who are gaining steady influence in statewide politics. Wilson's pro-choice stand on abortion, and a 1991 compromise with the legislature raising taxes $7 billion have left him in a lurch with the right wing. The only good news for Wilson, our sources say, is that a number of big-name Republicans, such as former Housing and Urban Development Secretary Jack Kemp and actor Charleton Heston, have already rejected offers to challenge Wilson in the primary.

From the Democrats come two challengers who expect to fight through a bruising primary: California Insurance Commissioner John Garamendi and State Treasurer Kathleen Brown (sister of former Gov. Jerry Brown and daughter of former Gov. Pat Brown.)

Should Wilson survive his re-election battle, many analysts here predict he would try to ride his winning streak into the presidency two years later. Wilson denies any plans to run for president. But it's no coincidence that he supported the recent move of the California presidential primary from June to March, making this struggling state a Republican kingmaker in 1996.

Committee uses Packwood as scapegoat

WASHINGTON — In a cynical attempt to make Bob Packwood a scapegoat for generations of congressional sexism, the Senate Ethics Committee put Americans on notice: no private diary is safe from government investigators.

Safire

Ironically, the recently established constitutional right to privacy, which forms the basis for all the pro-choice law in this country, is being undermined by panicky senators determined to punish one of their own for boorish behavior in a previous era.

Do you keep a diary? More of us should: it not only lets us blow off steam and articulate private thoughts that would be impolitic or libelous if said out loud, but also preserves memories and reveals our youthful selves to our aging selves. Unlike a letter, it is intended to be totally private, written on our own time and in our personal space, for each diarist to keep or destroy.

In the case of a public figure, a diary is a godsend to historians. Samuel Pepys, the English naval functionary who kept a detailed diary three centuries ago, gave us an invaluable glimpse into the social conditions of his time.

Oregon's Bob Packwood is a Pepysian diarist. In the 25 years I've been his friend, this principled moderate has kept voluminous notes on life as a lightning rod.

He recorded his crusade to keep the legality of abortion from being eroded in the Senate, which made him public enemy No.1 of anti-abortion forces. His fight to make the tax code simple and fair, culminating in the sweeping 1986 reform, infuriated the loophole legion of accountants and tax lawyers. His leadership of Republican support of Israel made him a pariah in the Bush White House.

And, as diarists from Pepys to Packwood do, he included the insiders' gossip of his time. He expressed the anguish of his failing marriage and his endangered eyesight, and may have noted when his friends told him he was drinking too much beer.

Now he is facing charges instigated by long-time political foes and driven by senators eager to placate feminists after the interrogation of Anita Hill.

He is not accused of threatening to block careers, the essence of what we now prohibit as sexual harassment; on the contrary, Packwood hired and advanced qualified women when equal opportunity was denied elsewhere in the male-dominated Senate.

The scapegoaters are applying today's standards of behavior — deservedly much higher than tolerated a generation ago — to accusations of yesteryear's crude office gropings. That's ex post facto morality, which is neither ethical nor fair.

Packwood has been chosen to be harassment's celebrity villain. To some nervous colleagues, his ruination has become the ticket to forgiveness for all congressional sexist sins.

That's why Pepysing Toms demand the Packwood diaries; it has been "determined that the documents in their entirety may be relevant and probative." If Senate staffers or hearing examiners rummage through his diary, they'll find personal ruminations and titillating tidbits to embarrass the man for years.

That's the scapegoat idea: load all our sins onto Packwood and drive him out to Azazel. the demon in the desert. In its zeal to get right with the gender avengers, the committee has voted to rape the right to privacy, which — under the penumbra of the Constitution, as pro-choicers say — should be important to both sexes.

Only when a crime has been charged can prosecutors make a case for examining personal records. However, no criminal indictments are remotely contemplated in this case; "sexual harassment" law doesn't go back that far.

Even so, the fishing committee has subpoenaed Packwood's lifetime of diaries, insisting "there is no constitutional privacy right" to personal papers — as the ACLU sleeps.

What hypocrisy. Feminists, who looked to Packwood for privacy protection when they were using him, now undermine everyone's civil liberty in abusing him.

Why not 'anchor aircraft carrier off capital'?

Washington, D.C., Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly's idea to send the National Guard into the streets is getting mixed reviews.

The hawks and doves in the nation's capital have been bitterly debating the mayor's request.

Buchwald

Sen. Radford Bogie declared on the floor of the Senate, "Haiti, yes — Washington, no. We will not send American boys to die at the U.S. Post Office."

His colleague, Sen. Thomas Dingleberry, took issue with Bogie and said, "If we don't fight them in Washington, we'll have to fight them on the beaches of Atlantic City. The strongest nation in the world must give military aid to its own capital or risk being considered a paper tiger."

Sen. Sammy Lighter said on C-Span, "Washington is an issue for the United Nations. We must not act unilaterally. If the drug dealers refuse to make peace, then we will be forced to ask the United Nations to impose an embargo on the entire city until they get their act together."

The debate spilled over to the TV talk shows.

Retired Adm. Michael Rockfirst said on the David Brinkley show that Washington was another Vietnam, but he would not send troops into the city. "It would make more sense to anchor the John F. Kennedy aircraft carrier off the capital in the Potomac River and have our planes carpet-bomb the city's crack houses."

A Marine general who was being interviewed by reporters said, "I disagree that air power alone can stop the violence in Washington. You need a division of Marines with light armor and flame throwers if we ever hope to win this war."

An anti-war group started by Tom Hayden threatened to march on Washington if troops were sent in. "We're suggesting that all National Guardsmen as well as Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly go to Canada," Hayden told Oprah Winfrey who was doing a show on Tailhook pilots who were sexually abused by their grandparents.

The CIA spokesman, who appeared on "60 Minutes" behind a screen, said, "We have information that Hollywood would like the Air Force to nuke Pennsylvania Avenue to divert attention from the debate on television violence."

So far the Pentagon is remaining mum on the mayor's request. However, one of the Joint Chiefs told Ted Koppel, "We won't send our boys in unless we are assured that they can finish off ALL of Washington's warlords. We learned our lesson in Somalia."

Koppel asked if the United States would give money to rebuild Washington once the fighting stopped.

The Joint Chief replied, "We can't be the philanthropist to every city in the free world."

The idea of American troops patrolling American cities is not a new one, but since they would be occupying the capital, it's getting more attention than if they were being asked to patrol Amarillo, Texas.

How do the city's inhabitants feel about this issue? One co-ed at George Washington University said, "I always wanted to be a war bride."

A young man told me, "I have a bad knee so they will never send me to Southeast Washington."

The biggest fear is that if the troops are marshaled for the District streets there might be friendly fire at RFK Stadium, and then the Redskins would be in even worse shape than they are now.

Admirers remember Price as warm, professional horror king

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Vincent Price, with insinuating voice and menacing face, used warm humor against his warped reputation as the horror king of Hollywood.

Price died Monday at age 82 of lung cancer he fought for five years.

He had faith in his own versatility and was amused when the public viewed him solely as a master of menace.

Consider the woman in Houston who once asked him to bite her neck. Price obliged, though he had never played Dracula. "My, was she surprised!" he grinned as he recounted the story.

"He could do anything," said his friend Bob Hope. "He could do a heavy, and he could do light comedy. Not many like Vincent Price. Never was."

Price began as a classical actor, though he had no pretensions about the profession. He cheerfully lent his authority to schlock like "Rage of the Buccaneers," "Dr. Goldfoot and the Girl Bombs," "The Conqueror Worms" and "It's Not the Size That Counts."

His reputation as a scare merchant was established in the 1953 3-D thriller, "House of Wax."

'I never felt that the great parts were the only ones you should do. That's a great mistake because there are so many interesting things available.'

— Vincent Price, actor

During the 1960s, Price appeared with Boris Karloff, Peter Lorre, Lon Chaney Jr. and others in a series of Edgar Allan Poe movies made by Roger Corman.

Price demonstrated his wit and knowledge on TV shows, including "Pantomime Quiz," "Hollywood Squares" and "The $64,000 Question." In every performance, even a TV commercial for a bathroom cleaner, Price never coasted.

"It's awfully easy to get out of the business, it's not easy to stay in," he said in a 1988 interview. "I never felt that the great parts were the only things you should do. That's a great mistake, because there are so many interesting things available."

His approach to life was open-mindedness and willingness to explore. "You never know where things will lead you," Price mused.

Price's interest in art — his first ambition was to be a painter but he didn't think he had enough talent — led to a collection that he constantly replenished.

He opened a gallery, donated paintings to a local college, even selected 15,000 works of art aimed at working-class Americans through the Sears catalog.

Price's hobby of gourmet cooking produced a cookbook that sold 350,000 copies.

"Losing Vinny is a sad thing," said Charlton Heston.

Price is survived by two daughters, a son and two grandsons.

The family planned to hold a private funeral and memorial service at a time to be determined.

Editor believes conservatives were ill quoted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan was "the Great Communicator," even his enemies concede, but he managed to get into Bartlett's "Familiar Quotations" with only three quotes, and a conservative editor smells a rat.

Adam Meyerson, who edits the Heritage Foundation's magazine, says the 40th president and others on the right were deliberately underquoted in the revised edition of Bartlett's.

The motive, he says, was "to show that conservatives are on the fringes, that they haven't made an important contribution to American intellectual and cultural life."

To bolster his point, Meyerson has printed in his magazine 15 pages of "conservative quotations" from the past 50 years that he says should have been in Bartlett's. They come from Robert Bork, Rush Limbaugh, Milton Friedman, Pope John Paul II, Margaret Thatcher, Phyllis Schlafly, William F. Buckley Jr. and Chiang Kai-shek, among others.

Some of Meyerson's choices lack pithiness, running 80 words or more. Others aren't especially memorable, like a quote from Reagan's first inaugural address: "This administration's objective will be a healthy, vigorous, growing economy."

But Meyerson contended that Justin Kaplan, general editor of the 16th edition of Bartlett's, not only gave short shrift to Reagan but deliberately chose his Reagan quotes to make the former president "look ridiculous."

Not guilty, says Kaplan, 68, the Pulitzer prize-winning biographer of Mark Twain and a self-described liberal.

"I may have my attitudes and so on, but I did not sit down as a matter of policy to try to stick it to the conservatives," he said in an interview.

In fact, he did Reagan a favor by limiting him to three quotes, Kaplan said.

Truckers devise nationwide strike against fuel costs

PHOENIX (AP) — Jim Bowman has some advice if his fellow truckers go on strike: "Tell your momma to stock up on groceries because ... there won't be anything in the stores."

Bowman's wife, Doris, has passed out fliers at truck stops across the country to garner support for a nationwide industry shutdown Nov. 11-17. Truckers also are spreading the word on CB radios and a network of toll-free numbers.

Big trucking companies and the Teamsters union oppose the effort organized by independent truckers to protest rapidly rising diesel fuel prices.

Independent trucker Bob Mackin is one of those ready to park his 18-wheeler for a week. Mackin says rising fuel prices amount to a $10,000-a-year pay cut.

"This will be a big bite in my pocketbook, but it's worth it," Mackin said.

It's unclear how many of the nation's estimated 4.5 million truck drivers — including as many as 500,000 independent owner-operators — might participate.

In the past, wildcat attempts to halt truck traffic gained sparse support.

Spokesmen for the American Trucking Associations, which represents big trucking companies, and the Teamsters, which represents about 100,000 long-haul drivers, said they oppose the plan and expect few employee drivers to take part.

But the Owner-Operators Independent Drivers Associations, a Grain Valley, Mo., group that represents 20,000 independent truckers, is getting many supportive calls, said Todd Spencer, executive vice president.

Senators cite new Packwood development

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee subpoenaed Sen. Bob Packwood's diary after discovering a potential new area of alleged ethical misconduct, two senators disclosed Tuesday.

The discovery was unrelated to allegations of sexual misconduct and intimidation already under investigation for nearly a year, according to Sens. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb. and Tom Harkin, D-Iowa.

Both senators said they did not know the subject of the discovery.

"The committee has come across something that leads, may lead or has led ... to some other possible charges — or, misconduct..." Harkin said.

He described the information as "outside" the scope of the original allegations.

The two senators' comments help explain a furious dispute between Packwood, R-Ore., and the ethics committee over whether the panel should have access to most of his personal diary entries since Jan. 1, 1989.

Packwood, accused by more than two dozen women of making unwanted sexual advances, has so far defied the subpoena — arguing it is so broad that it violates his constitutional right to privacy.

He has agreed to provide those portions specifically related to the inquiry, which also covers alleged attempts by Packwood or his supporters to intimidate women to keep them quiet.

Packwood has said his 8,000-plus pages of entries include a conversation about a senator's "extended affair" with a staff member and his divorce; and the description of an affair by a Senate staffer with a member of the Democratic congressional leadership.

Other entries concerned private consentual personal relationships with non-staff persons; references to former female staffers not involved in the case; campaign fund-raising activities and dealings with lobbyists.

Before the committee subpoenaed the material, staffers had been permitted to examine certain entries in Packwood's diary.

Packwood's lawyer, James F. Fitzpatrick, said the committee had identified passages that "have nothing to do with the original investigation."

But he added "I don't know and I'm not going to speculate" on which entries sparked the committee subpoena.

"I don't have any idea what their goal is in selecting material that isn't within the scope of the original inquiry," he said. "I don't think it's appropriate to use our cooperation as a justification for a fishing expedition."

The unanimous committee has said it will ask the full Senate to approve a civil suit against Packwood to force him to obey the subpoena, but has not said publicly why it needs information unrelated to the specific allegations probed so far.

That mystery was partially cleared up when Sen. Richard Bryan, D-Nev., chairman of the ethics committee, explained his position to Tuesday's weekly luncheon meeting .

President tells officials to buy 'items off shelf'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton proposed a major overhaul of government buying Tuesday, requiring that the Pentagon and other agencies order items off the shelf when possible rather than custom-made, super-expensive versions.

As part of a government-streamlining program, Clinton also proposed a $10 billion package of new spending cuts and other cost-saving moves, ranging from offering federal workers bonuses for retiring early to letting the Internal Revenue Service hire private bill collectors.

"We can and will run a government that works better and costs less," Clinton said at the White House.

As for making the government buy commercially available products, Clinton said: "Procurement waste is costing the taxpayers tens of billions of dollars and it has to stop." He said he hoped some of the savings could be channeled into anti-crime programs.

"No more specially constructed cigarette ash trays," said Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., who is sponsoring the administration's procurement-overhaul legislation in the House.

He was referring to the nine pages of specifications issued by the General Services Administration earlier this year for glass ashtrays to be used in government buildings — an example frequently cited by Vice President Al Gore in his campaign to streamline government.

The government buys $200 billion in goods and services each year, 75 percent by the Pentagon.

Clinton said his package fulfills the promise for more spending cuts he made last August to congressional conservatives to win their support for his deficit-reduction plan. It also aims to carry out a host of recommendations made by Gore's National Performance Review last month.

The package ranges from ending federal subsidies for wool, mohair and honey to providing less money for certain small airports.

Pentagon frowns on use of Guard as anti-crime unit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon didn't like the District of Columbia's idea of enlisting National Guard troops as urban crime fighters — and it isn't looking for any other new civil missions either.

President Clinton on Monday turned down D.C. Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly's request that he give her the same power that governors have to call out the Guard.

Clinton said he would support asking Congress to change the law to give her that authority, but in the meantime her idea of using the Guard for police work is dead.

Ms. Kelly's request highlights a broader debate now under way: Is it time to commit the Guard to new civil missions, and are citizen soldiers suited to law enforcement?

The Defense Department thinks not, on both counts.

"I would be concerned about it if it went beyond" the traditional role of the Guard as a backup to active-duty troops in wartime, a force to respond to civil disorder and natural disasters, and a supplement to counter-drug forces, said Deborah Lee, the assistant defense secretary for reserve affairs.

"Our people — even our MPs — are not trained in the intricacies of law enforcement," Ms. Lee told reporters Tuesday. "They don't know about arrest and search and seizure and the like.

"You need to be sure that people are trained to go into whatever role you are putting them into," she said.

Judge sentences father to 60 years for sexual assault

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

A Midland man who confessed Monday to sexually assaulting his then 8-year-old daughter in 1991 was sentenced to 60 years in prison Tuesday by 238th District Court Judge John Hyde.

The aggravated sexual assault trial of Daven Lee King, 44, began Monday morning with a jury already hearing testimony when King decided to enter a guilty plea to one charge in the indictment.

King had been indicted in August 1992 for aggravated sexual assault of a child with various charges of having oral and anal sex with a child in August 1991.

Defense attorney John Roosa said King chose to enter the guilty plea because he did not want his daughter to have to testify.

Hyde dismissed the jury and began the sentencing phase of the trial immediately with the now 10-year-old girl testifying. The girl, who now lives in Farmersville, Ill., with a woman who was a friend of King's, said she loved her father but she is scared of him and doesn't want him to ever get out of jail.

Three different witnesses testified Monday before the trial was stopped that the child told them she was being sexually assaulted by her father. The victim was scheduled to be the next witness when King entered his plea and halted the trial.

Midland County Assistant District Attorney Teresa Clingman said King was not offered any plea bargain or granted any leniency by entering his guilty plea.

Lettye Holland, a former case worker for Child Protective Services who is now a social worker for an Andrews hospital, testified Tuesday that the child has already been through twice the amount of counseling most victims require and will likely need more before becoming an adult.

"There is no way to tell for sure how much counseling (this child) will need. But, most likely it will be with her for the rest of her life," Ms. Holland told the judge.

Ms. Clingman informed the judge of Food services director disputes USDA claims

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel

Although U.S. Department of Agriculture officials criticized school cafeterias across the country for giving students too much salt and fat in their food, the Midland Independent School District food services director disputes that claim.

MISD Food Services Director Patricia Grillos, R.D., L.D., said the accusations made by USDA Secretary Mike Espy and his assistant secretary for food and consumer services, Ellen Haas, were out of line.

In a recent report, Espy criticized school lunch programs for failing to meet dietary guidelines his department helped set. The report showed lunches offered by the nation's schools exceed the government's own dietary guidelines for fat by 25 percent.

The Dietary Guidelines for Americans, developed by the departments of Agriculture and of Health and Human Services, recommend limiting fats. The guidelines indicate no more than 30 percent of daily calories should come from fat.

Ms. Grillos said MISD students take in an average of 35 percent of their daily calories from fat through school lunches. She said the figure varies depending if the students drink a fruit drink with no fat or whole milk, which contains a large amount of fat.

She said the figure ranges from 29 percent with some meals up to 40 percent of the daily calories in fat.

"We have 35 percent of our calories from fat and I don't

Secretary of state urges Midlanders to vote in Nov. 2 amendment election

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Texas Secretary of State John Hannah Jr. said in Midland on Tuesday that it is "terribly sad" that less than 20 percent of the Texas electorate will cast ballots in the Nov. 2 Constitutional Amendments elections that are more crucial to the state's welfare than the election of a new governor, judge or legislator.

Hannah

"They will have longer-term effects," Midland County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer said.

Among the 16 propositions are issues dealing with the criminal-justice system, the environment and the Texas economy.

Of those, Hannah, who is a former federal and state prosecutor known for his vigorous prosecution of public officials and other white-collar criminals, mostly focused on Proposition 4, which would prohibit a state personal income-tax without voter approval, and Proposition 14, which would authorize $1 billion in general-obligation bonds to expand the state's penitentiary system and to set up state jail beds to help relieve the overcrowding of both Texas-wide county jails and the state prison system.

While Hannah said he was prohibited from campaigning for any issue, Seltzer noted that the Midland County Commissioners' Court has endorsed Proposition 14.

"Failure of this bond-financing proposal will be disastrous to both county government and the general public safety of all Texans," the five-member Commissioners' Court said in its Oct. 11 resolution.

The proposition calls for the construction of 22,000 state jail beds and an additional 10,000 penitentiary beds.

Statewide, there are more than 24,000 convicted felons in county jails and about 280 of those are in the Midland County Jail. They are trapped in county

Testimony to continue in attempted bank robbery trial

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Testimony will likely conclude today in the attempted bank robbery trial of a Midland man accused of holding a banker captive in a scheme to get deposits from a local bank vault last November.

The federal trial for George Wendell Maxey Jr., 23, started Monday and will likely wrap up today, courthouse officials said.

Maxey is accused of breaking into the home of Sue Scott, now a vice president with Midland American Bank who was then the manager of the branch bank, restraining her and attempting to get her to open the bank vault for him.

The robbery attempt was foiled when Ms. Scott convinced her attackers that she could not open the vault alone. She testified that one bank employee had the key and another had the combination.

She testified Monday that she could not identify her attackers.

John Andrew Gruzins, 20, pleaded guilty to the Nov. 6 attempted bank robbery. He is serving a five-year prison term. Teena Marie Carr, 27, pleaded guilty to not reporting the crime. She is serving a 27-month prison sentence.

Several witnesses testified Tuesday including people Maxey had listed as alibi witnesses. They all denied having seen Maxey on the day of the robbery.

Ms. Carr testified that she was Maxey's girlfriend at the time the robbery occurred. She claimed he talked about robbing a bank, "but I never thought he would go through with it."

She said she bought some "walkie-talkies" and a police scanner Maxey allegedly used in the incident. Maxey's defense attorney, Thomas Hirsch, implied Maxey was framed by the government and was not

A&M System to investigate need for changes

AUSTIN (AP) — The interim general counsel for the Texas A&M University System said Tuesday he will investigate whether changes are needed in the way the system's board of regents conducts business.

A&M System regents chairman Ross Margraves has acknowledged that the company operating the Texas A&M University bookstore has paid for lavish trips to New York for himself and school vice president Robert Smith.

"In the end, we may all learn a little bit about something that could have been done differently," said James Bond, who serves as interim general counsel to the seven-university system that includes Texas A&M.

"But right now that remains something that I need to examine."

Margraves' travel vouchers, obtained by The Associated Press under the Open Records Law, show his hotel expenses during a trip to New York in April 1990 were paid for by JP Morgan & Co., a financial services firm based in New York that serves Texas A&M.

"That was a higher education seminar that JP Morgan invited about 70 of our higher education clients to, and for that we pick up the hotel bill," said JP Morgan spokeswoman Ellen Barry. "We don't pick up their airline tickets."

When asked if JP Morgan had paid expenses for any other trips involving A&M officials, Ms. Barry said, "This is the only thing that I am going to confirm."

Margraves defended having companies the A&M System does business with pick up the tabs for lodging and travel.

"They were not secret trips," Margraves said. "I have to assume they were legitimate. As a fairly astute person on ethics, I don't see anything wrong with that."

Bond is heading an internal inquiry into allegations leveled against Margraves in an anonymous letter sent to eight of the system's regents last month. Bond said he would add the trips to his inquiry.

"I think that for the sake of the regents, we will take each trip and look at it and get the facts as we learn them to be," Bond said. "We will look at each trip and determine the purpose and how they came to be. We are learning about those trips about the same time everyone else did."

The Texas Rangers also are looking into accusations made in the anonymous letter that Margraves has supported the privatization of several A&M ventures, like the bookstore, to personally benefit from the deals.

Texas Department of Public Safety officials say Margraves has cooperated fully. Fellow regents say the investigation will vindicate Margraves, who was appointed to the system board in 1989 by Gov. Bill Clements.

Margraves said Barnes & Noble Bookstores Inc. paid for at least four trips, including one this year, as part of A&M bookstore business.

Hutchison is 10 votes short in effort to void retroactive tax boosts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison's first major legislative effort was defeated Tuesday as the Senate rejected her attempt to roll back retroactive tax increases in President Clinton's deficit-reduction plan.

The measure, backed largely by fellow Republicans, would have scrubbed the retroactive tax increases imposed on wealthy Americans and top-earning small businesses.

Mrs. Hutchison and her lead cosponsor, conservative Democrat Richard Shelby of Alabama, attached their legislation as an amendment to a long-stalled unemployment benefits extension bill.

The Senate voted 50-44 in favor of the Hutchison-Shelby amendment, but under Senate rules, that was 10 votes short of the 60 needed to wipe out the retroactive income, estate and gift tax increases.

The freshman vowed to continue her fight. "Winning a simple majority of senators' votes shows how much progress we've made in the fight against unfair retroactive taxes," she said. "We'll be looking for an early opportunity to get around the procedural roadblocks that have been thrown up by opponents."

The amendment proposed to offset the $10.5 billion in lost tax revenue by reducing government administrative overhead spending by $3 billion a year for three years.

"The senator from Texas has given us an opportunity to cut another $9 billion of government spending so we don't have to impose a retroactive tax," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said.

Democrats charged that Mrs. Hutchison's measure jeopardized the jobless benefits package, which would provide extra unemployment benefits to the 60,000 workers who exhaust their regular 26 weeks of coverage every week.

They said that because the House must originate tax measures, attaching the tax rollback provision in the Senate would kill the entire bill.

"What a bitter irony to kill a bill to provide unemployment insurance to a million Americans in order to make a statement in behalf of the one million wealthiest Americans," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell.

And, the Maine Democrat charged: "It's a circuitous attempt to kill the unemployment insurance bill, and that's what makes this a particularly cruel hoax."

Mrs. Hutchison denied that she was trying to kill the jobless benefits. "I want our unemployed workers to get the help they needed," she said.

But, she added: "The issue is one of fairness."

"American business owners were hit right between the eyes with an unfair retroactive tax increase."

The deficit-reduction bill, enacted last August over total Republican opposition, raised the top personal income-tax rate to 36.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your psychic ability will help you cut through the underbrush at work and get to the bottom of things. Honing your decision-making skills will lead to higher profits. Those with careers related to sports or outdoor activities will watch business boom. Turn your attention to romance early in 1994.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: poet Dylan Thomas, Secretary of State Warren Christopher, actress Ruby Dee, 26th President Theodore Roosevelt.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Superb conditions prevail for you to advance your long-range plans. Friends or an organization at a distance will be instrumental in your success.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A domestic situation improves dramatically, but now you may be forced to deal with another problem. An older person tries to help but ultimately you must make up your own mind.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone pressures you to conform to rigid standards. Be sure you are aware of the proper protocol to follow. Refuse to be rattled. Devise a plan and make one move at a time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Instinct tells you to move quickly now but practicality calls for quiet deliberation. Try to strike a happy medium. A sudden insight startles you. Go ahead and play Cupid if you want.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You sail along on a wave of popularity and prestige now. Part of feeling good comes from helping those less fortunate than yourself. Be gentle with someone who feels unloved.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Turn to a partner for the answer to something that has been bothering you. A loving response could cheer you up considerably. Get in touch with your desires.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An available seat or special rate brightens your day. Travel or news from faraway friends sparks happy emotions. Tomorrow will be hectic. Tonight, opt for quiet activities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You feel driven to turn your ambitions into solid accomplishments. You may find that helping other people is the most worthy work of all. Take a friend's suggestions with a grain of salt.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Turn within for guidance. A dream could prove prophetic. Do not shy away from the limelight. Use your personal magnetism to promote an art or science project.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A day when information may be inaccurate and directions unclear. Asking for clarification is your safest bet. Your high-profile moves impress people at top levels.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Work pressures may be on your mind, but social activities are in your heart. Recognition for the little things makes you feel great! Take time for contemplation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A flash of insight shows you the right way to handle a domestic issue. Family members turn cooperative. Cool your heels in romance. Enjoy solo activities or get together with old friends.

TODAY'S CHILDREN can seem very mysterious at times. Highly self-sufficient, they do a good job of keeping things to themselves. These Scorpios tend to be both good-looking and quite intense. A love for the outdoors often leads to an environmentally oriented career. Nothing is beyond their abilities once they make up their minds to do something.

Opening lead: King of ♣.

So you think the lot of the bridge writer is an easy one? Suppose that someone boasted how brilliantly this deal was played or defended. Would you accept their word for it? Study all four hands and decide whether you would rather play or defend four spades.

The auction is straightforward. South, loaded with playing tricks, is fully worth a jump to game once spades are supported.

The defenders cash the king and ace of clubs. West then shifts to the queen of hearts. Dummy wins, you cash two high spades in hand and East discards a club. Whose side are you on?

If you elect to play, it's easy, looking at the cards, to take the diamond finesse. Not blessed with X-ray vision suppose you try to cash two high diamonds, West ruffs and exits with a trump and down you go. It's no better if you choose to lead a low diamond to the jack. East wins and returns the suit and West's ruff is the setting trick.

Better is to cash one high diamond and then lead a low diamond to the jack. If West ruffs, or if West discards and East wins the queen, you are home free. Trust us, but try it for yourself. However, the defenders can prevail if East allows the jack of diamonds to win! Locked in dummy, you have to surrender trump control to get back to your hand.

Does that mean you should defend? Not at all. The safest line is to cash the king of diamonds, jettisoning the jack from the table and continue with the ten! No matter what the defenders choose to do they will get only one more trick. You ruff the heart return and run winning diamonds at West. Whenever the defender chooses to ruff, you overruff with the queen, return to hand with a trump and make the rest of the diamonds.

New York greets hotel queen Leona Helmsley — uh, sort of

NEW YORK — Leona Helmsley was halfway home Tuesday, settling into a hotel just off Fifth Avenue. But the only exotic aspect of her new digs is the name: Le Marquis Hotel.

It's a federal halfway house, where as many as six people sleep in one room. The pillows are sans mints and the bathroom is avec bugs.

Helmsley

The 73-year-old hotel queen was sentenced to four years in prison for tax evasion and began serving her term on tax day — April 15, 1992. A federal judge, citing her age and husband Harry's failing health, reduced her term to 30 months.

With time off for good behavior, she will be free in January.

Until then, it's Le Marquis for La Reine. Just two blocks south of the Helmsley-managed Empire State Building, the halfway house will be her home through Jan. 26, when the multimillionaire's debt to society will be paid in full.

PIERRE, S.D. — A Ted Nugent tip: Drugs lead to drooling.

The rocker took time out from a hunting trip to tell schoolchildren that drugs aren't cool.

"Drugs make people drool," he said Friday during his visit to Jefferson Elementary School. "Drooling isn't cool."

Nugent, an avid hunter, lives in Colorado while not touring with his band the Damn Yankees. He told the students he doesn't allow alcohol or drugs at his hunting camps.

Although Nugent's solo career in the 1970s would be more memorable to their parents, the students were impressed with him.

"Well, he's got really long hair and a ponytail and he plays the guitar really, really loud," one youngster said. "And he doesn't drool."

STUART, Fla. — California. Florida. No, California. No, Florida. The divorce of Loni Anderson and Burt Reynolds just won't stay put.

Circuit Judge Marc Cianca granted Anderson's request that alimony and the division of assets be worked out by a retired California judge. Reynolds wanted those issues decided in Florida, where the couple lived with their adopted son.

"What I'm trying to do is get these people to sit down somewhere, whether it's in Alaska, California or Florida," Cianca said Monday.

Cianca set a 45-day period for the two to work out an agreement in California. Anderson and Reynolds agreed in August to allow a California judge to decide custody of their 5-year-old.

DALLAS — Judd Nelson got two years' probation for one kick.

The actor pleaded no contest Monday to a misdemeanor charge of assault. He was accused of kicking Kim Evans in the head after some people began heckling him and actress Shannen Doherty outside a Dallas restaurant.

Criminal Court Judge Phil Barker didn't rule on Nelson's guilt, meaning that if Nelson completes probation the charge will be wiped from his record.

Ms. Evans said she has suffered headaches and dizzy spells since the May 16 confrontation. Nelson didn't testify and had no comment after the court hearing.

The scene:

Nelson and Ms. Doherty were seated on the patio at the Greenville Bar and Grill. Ms. Evans and some others were on the porch of an adjoining restaurant. Witneses said someone at Ms. Evans' table called Nelson a derogatory name.

Witnesses said Nelson approached the table where Ms. Evans and her friends were seated. Some said Nelson accidentally struck Ms. Evans as he attempted to jump over a low metal railing separating the two restaurants.

Security guard James Walkinshaw said Nelson delivered a karate-style kick to the back of Ms. Evans' head.

GLYNDON, Minn. — Garth Brooks is the kind of guy who would give you the guitar off his back. And Snookie Langseth has the instrument to prove it.

Langseth brought a gift to Brooks' concert in Fargo, N.D., on Sunday and passed it to the stage: a drawing she commissioned of Brooks, surrounded by his family, parents and singers George Strait and George Jones.

Brooks told the audience he knew it was a gift from the heart and wanted to give her one in return.

With a gasp from onlookers, Brooks unstrapped the guitar he had used all night, signed it and passed it back through the crowd to Langseth.

Langseth, from Glyndon in northwest Minnesota, said she planned the gift for nearly a year and hoped "it might knock his socks off like he's done to mine more than once."

NEW YORK — Sean Connery "flew" James Bond-style via jetpack onto the stage of David Letterman's show and said reports of his death — or even his serious illness — are greatly exaggerated.

"It started in this town and went around the world," said Connery, who last week was reported hospitalized in London.

FOOD: MISD food service director disputes USDA claims consider that a problem," Ms. Grillos said. "We continue to improve on that each year."

She added Midland parents should not worry about whether or not their children are getting a nutritious meal at school. She claims they are.

Ms. Grillos said MISD is one of the smallest school districts in the state to have two licensed dieticians on staff to monitor and analyze the nutrition in their food services.

In order to continue improving the nutritional quality of the food, she said she orders entrees that can be baked or fried, such as corn dogs, chicken nuggets and burritos.

"These are traditionally fried foods which are being baked in our schools, with some exceptions" such as when the schools are running short of time to get all the food baked, she said.

Ms. Grillos also responded to criticism by Ms. Haas of breaded, baked chicken that contained the skin and 2 percent milk served to students in schools across the country. The chicken skin and milk contain large amounts of fat.

Ms. Grillos said those two particular items are among the commodities distributed to the schools by the departments who set up the dietary guidelines.

The food services director said the changes Ms. Haas wants made won't comply with USDA regulations. Essentially, Ms. Grillos said the government officials shouldn't send these foods to the schools and then complain about the quality or contents.

"I want to make it clear that the school district has been working to improve the quality," Ms. Grillos said.

She stated the guidelines were set up in 1990 and provided a 10-year grace period to get on-line, which the MISD has and continues to work on.

"This is the type of thing that can't take place in a short amount of time," she said. "We've been working on it year after year."

She said parents should feel assured their children are getting the most nutritious meal possible because of nutrient analyses performed by the school dieticians and due to the products served in the schools.

"We need to work toward gradually making the changes. If we started serving tofu and bean sprouts tomorrow, no one would eat it. It is not nutritional unless it is something acceptable the child will eat," Ms. Grillos said.

One of the measures the school district has taken to improve the nutrition in the schools is to remove pats of butter — which are high in fat — from students' lunch trays. They are replaced with melted butter lightly rubbed atop rolls to give a buttery taste and aroma.

She also said salt shakers have been taken off cafeteria tables to reduce the amount of sodium. Also the school cafeterias offer choices to the students, so the nutrition is there for the taking.

However, Ms. Grillos said many students learn their eating habits at home noting that the most popular entrees in the schools are pizza and hot dogs. But, she added, the school district is offering those foods and adapting them to be lower in fat.

She said she is in favor of local school districts implementing a nutrition policy and enforcing it by removing vending machines that distribute foods high in fat, in addition to enforcing other restrictions.

Ms. Grillos said the MISD food services department serves more than 12,000 meals every day.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

jails due to the overcrowded penitentiary system — the Institutional Division of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Those who oppose the proposed $1-billion bond issue, Hannah said, contend that "the money should be spent to keep people out of prison" or they just oppose the idea of more state debt.

Those who promote Proposition 14 for expanding the prison system say that people convicted of violent crimes should spend more time in prison, that county jails "in every county in the state have a serious backlog of prisoners" who should be in the state penitentiary, and that the building of state jails and more prison bunks would create more "real assets" that would last for "years and years.

"It's a terribly important issue," Hannah said.

Proposition 4 has that "dreaded 'I' word in it — income tax," Hannah said.

Currently, the Texas Legislature could pass a state-wide income tax without consulting the people.

"If passed," Hannah said of Proposition 4, "the Legislature could set a tax rate and then go to the voters for a referendum. The voters would have the final say."

Hannah bemoaned that relatively few Texans, historically less than 20 percent of the qualified voters, vote in constitutional-amendment elections and predicted a 20 percent turn next Tuesday "unless something drastic happens.

"That's sort of sad," Hannah said. "It's terribly sad."

In elections with candidates, the voter turnout ranges from 50 to 75 percent, he said.

Early voting, which ends Friday in the Midland County Elections Administrator's Office at 709 W. Washington Ave., will be held from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. both Thursday and Friday. So far, only about 2 percent of Midland County's 54,000 registered voters have cast ballots in the election.

Propositions range from a constitutional amendment to "allow the legislature to prescribe the qualifications of sheriffs" to the proposal which would allow a judge to deny bail "to certain persons charged with certain violent or sexual offenses committed while under the supervision of a criminal-justice agency" of the state of Texas.

The proposed amendment on sheriffs is Proposition 5. And Proposition 12 on denying bail to certain persons charged with "violent offenses" is a "radical change in the Texas Constitution," Hannah said. "And it is fairly easy to understand."

The 117-year-old Texas Constitution has been amended 339 times in past elections.

Hannah noted that just because propositions are on the ballot doesn't mean that voters must vote on all of the issues

Fact is, Hannah recommended that if a voter does not understand the wording of a proposition, then that person would be wise not to vote for that proposal at all or to vote against it.

"I'm a lawyer and a good one," said Hannah, who noted that he does "not quite understand" all of the propositions or the effects of them being approved.

"It is not required that you vote on every one of these amendments."

PRISON: Judge gives man 60 year sentence

(form 1B)

prior misdemeanor convictions King had for possession of marijuana, possession of a controlled substance and driving while intoxicated.

King could have been sentenced to anything from five to 99 years or life in prison because aggravated sexual assault of a child is a first degree felony.

By pleading guilty, King gave up his right to appeal the case, Roosa said. King had remained in custody for almost two years in lieu of a $100,000 bond. He had posted the bond after his arrest in October 1991, but went to Illinois without notifying his probation officer and was arrested there on a bench warrant in December 1991.

Roosa said in addition to the almost two years King has already served in jail, he will likely serve at least 10 more before becoming eligible for parole. Current state law requires everyone convicted of an aggravated offense to serve at least one-quarter of their sentence.

TRIAL: Bank robbery testimony continues involved in the crime.

He inferred that Ms. Carr and Gruzins received leniency in their sentencing for cooperating with the government's prosecution of Maxey. Both denied the allegation.

Hans Martin, the FBI agent in charge of the investigation, testified that he recovered a number of items he believes were used in the attempted robbery while executing a search warrant at Maxey's home.

Courthouse officials indicate they believe the trial will conclude today with the jury beginning deliberations.

"Unofficial"

SAN ANTONIO — Maybe Leakey coach Fred Navarro was too busy buying mums to remember calling the officials. Whatever the reason, it cost his team a District 28-A game.

About 15 minutes before Friday night's homecoming game, coaches realized the officials weren't there. It's because they weren't invited.

"With all of the commotion with homecoming and everything else, it just kind of slipped my mind," Navarro said. "I forgot about it. It was completely my fault."

D'Hanis (3-5) accepted a 1-0 forfeit victory and Leakey fell to 1-6, but that was no reason to waste a Friday night.

The teams just reached into the stands and plucked out a few paying customers and asked them to keep order on the field.

"I had just come to the game as a spectator when they came up to me," Leakey rancher Wayne Carter told the San Antonio Express-News. "I didn't have much time to think about too much. We just went out and went to work."

Carter officiated in the Houston area until he moved back to Leakey three years ago. He was a freshman center for the high school when Navarro was a senior.

One other Leakey fan and two D'Hanis backers volunteered to officiate the game.

"Neither one of us was going very good and it was their homecoming," D'Hanis coach Clayton Woolls said. "Our kids wanted to play, so I just said, to hell with it."

Leakey won the scrimmage 14-7, teaching Navarro a stiff lesson.

"I know one thing," Navarro said. "The officiating crew is at the top of my list."

Stephens cut

SUWANEE, Ga. — The Atlanta Falcons on Tuesday released running back John Stephens, obtained earlier this month in a trade with the Green Bay Packers, and signed two players from their practice squad.

The team signed running back Anthony Wallace to replace Stephens and quarterback Chris Haker to replace the injured Billy Joe Tolliver.

The Falcons received Stephens, 27, in a trade that sent running back Eric Dickerson to Green Bay.

Pazienza wins

LEDYARD, Conn. — Vinny Pazienza went to 4-0 since returning to the ring after breaking his neck when he took a unanimous decision over Robbie Sims in a 10-rounder at the Foxwoods High Stakes Bingo & Casino on Tuesday night.

Pazienza, a former world lightweight and junior middleweight champ, was cut above the left eye in the third round. But he used a strong jab and left hook to dominate the fight.

Charlotte wins NFL team

■ League owners pick Charlotte, decide to wait until Nov. 30 on second expansion team.

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

ROSEMONT, Ill. — The NFL expanded into new territory Tuesday night, adding a team in Charlotte, N.C., that will begin play in 1995 as the Carolina Panthers.

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue announced the addition at the league's expansion meeting. Action on the second team was deferred until Nov. 30 with St. Louis, Baltimore, Memphis, Tenn., and Jacksonville, Fla. still in the running.

Charlotte was a unanimous recommendation by the 11-member expansion and finance committees and a unanimous choice of the 28 owners, although only 21 votes were needed.

Tagliabue was interrupted by applause from Carolina backers in the jammed hotel ballroom where the announcement was made.

In Charlotte, fireworks exploded and hundreds of people gathered for a downtown celebration. Many North Carolina television stations carried the brief announcement live.

The Panthers, the NFL's 29th club, will be run by Jerry Richardson, an ex-Baltimore Colts wide receiver and owner of company that owns such restaurants as Hardee's and Denny's

"I hope giving birth isn't as difficult and doesn't take 6½ years," Richardson said.

The general manager will be Mike McCormack, the former general manager of the Seattle Seahawks and a former player and coach with the Cleveland Browns. And speculation has already begun that the coach might be Joe Gibbs, a Carolina native who resigned last year after leading the Washington Redskins to three Super Bowl titles in 12 years.

The team will begin play at Clemson Stadium in South Carolina and is situated in what the NFL considers a vacuum between the Redskins and Atlanta Falcons. The area has a population of about 10 million within a 100-mile radius.

Its permanent home will be a stadium financed under a unique concept — permanent seating licenses purchased by prospective ticket buyers at prices from $600 to $5,600. Even without a franchise guarantee, 50,000 licenses were sold.

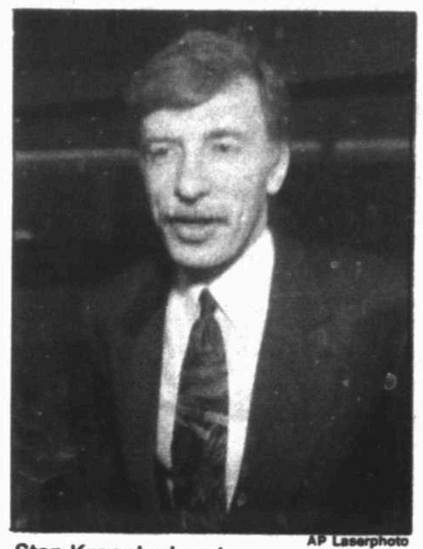

That, in turn, seemed to sell the NFL owners.

"When I get back to Charlotte, I'm going to say to those people who bought the (licenses) 'thank you, thank you, thank you, thank you,'" said Richardson, who unveiled the team's new jersey in the trendy colors of silver and black.

The owners deferred action on naming the second club Tuesday at least in part because the St. Louis ownership group led by Stan Kroenke was not named until Monday. The owners wanted more time to investigate his background and finances.

Members of other groups seemed to think that was the case.

Pokes hope to avoid Philly frenzy

■ Dallas hopes to avoid a repeat of last year's game.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Up next, the city brotherly hate for the Dallas Cowboys. On Halloween Sunday.

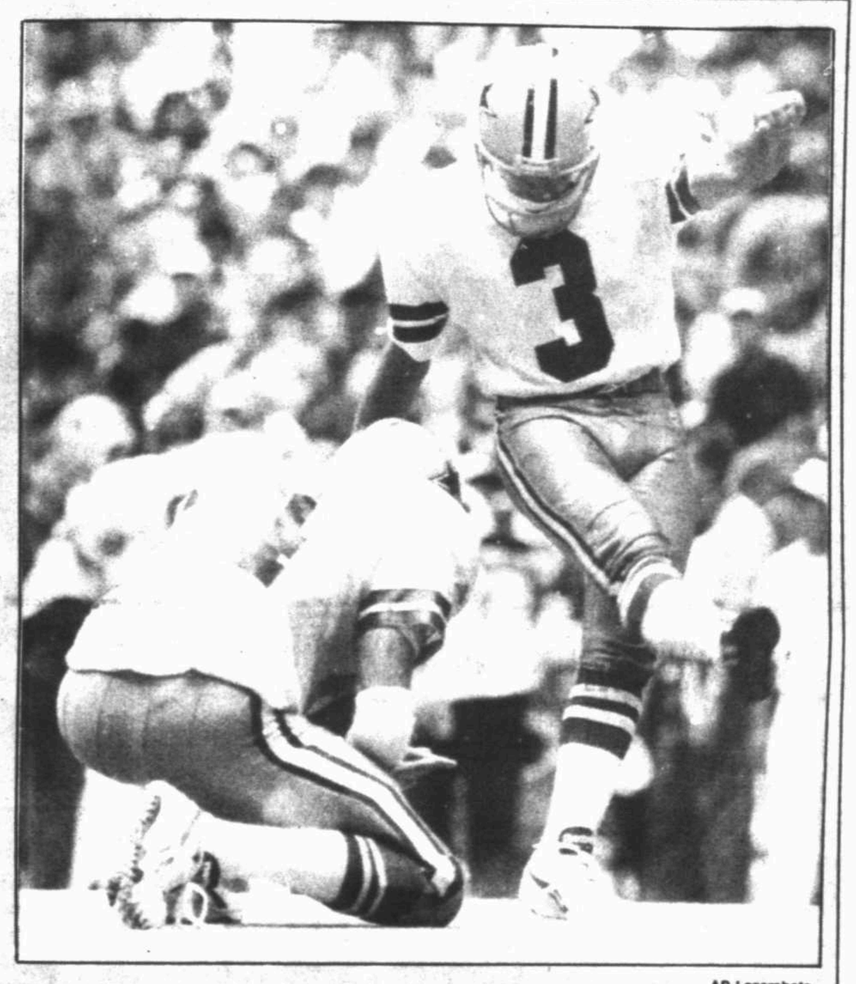

"We're going to a place that hasn't been real friendly to us through the years," Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said Tuesday. "I expect we'll see Philadelphia at its best. They've moved the game from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. I expect the fans will be worked into a frenzy by then."

Johnson knows about "frenzy" in Philly, where he's had to dodge snowballs filled with batteries.

Success has always been hard to come by for him at the Eagles' home perch.

The Eagles blew out the defending world champions 31-7 last year in a Monday night game at Veterans Stadium. The Cowboys have won just one of their last six games in Philadelphia, a 23-15 victory in 1991.

Bearkat back runs Wilde in victory

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Imagine being a defensive player looking over the Garden City offense. Somebody points out Stuart Wilde and tells you he's rushed for 550 yards the last two weeks. You'd likely laugh.

Wilde stands 5-feet-8 and weighs 128 pounds, less than the blocking pad on some tackling sleds.

"He's not real impressive-looking in the uniform," said his coach, Dennis Bryant. "I guess if I was on the other side of the ball looking at him, I'd chuckle myself. His legs aren't even bigger than pencils."

Wilde is having the last laugh these days. He's overcome a slow start, battled through injuries and become the Class 1A Bearkats' featured ball carrier.

In last weekend's 20-0 victory over Sanderson, Wilde rushed 36 times for 343 yards and two touchdowns, earning the "spider" top honors in this week's Associated Press high school honor roll.

"When he runs, it's all arms and legs. He really looks like a spider," Bryant said.

Some of Wilde's unique traits include what Bryant calls an amazing ability to slip tackles, a burst of acceleration that puts him at top speed within about two steps and excellent strength for some-

Lee-Permian: Great game with 'if'

There are still visions floating around of Midland Lee head football coach Earl Miller taking a Confederate sabre and drawing a line in the sand, asking his Rebels to step forward or step back.

Williamson

Of course, Miller never actually did that. He just said it was time for such an action. It was time for a last stand, just like at the Alamo.

History will record that Lee's Rebels stepped forward, forging a 21-21 tie with previously No. 1 state-ranked Odessa Permian in a game that surely will down as one of the best high school games a fan could ever view. Both teams deserve a lot of credit, but as the underdog, Lee's moment in the sun was a rare treat.

Lee linebacker Chris Connally should be named to the All-District team just by virtue of this one game. Linebacker Justin Goodman, with an interception at the goal line, deserves a star. And a fumble recovery by Mark Hunter inside the 10-yard line stands tall.

Offensively, Lee was superb. A week before, halfback Marlon Henry had over 100 yards rushing and five touchdowns. But this week the glory went to halfback Phillip Sims with over 150 yards rushing, and despite his fumble after a 50-yard run to the Permian one-yard line, Sims was great. Tight end Bryan Bippen got it all started with a key reception and quarterback Courtney Turner ran a smooth attack with the likes of linemen Rex Tucker, Will Shaw and Haseeb Rafeek opening holes that Sherman would be proud of.

And these were just a few of the greats that gave us this "Game of the Decade" in District 4-5A. Obviously, both teams had stars and woes. That happens when two good teams occupy the space of one football field.

Receiver Sheldon Bass, of course, gave a performance that will live long after the lights are turned off, making game changing catches at the end of each half that virtually turned the outcome of the game.

The game is not left without controversy, however, as Permian coach Tam Hollingshead elected to go for the tie instead of the win on Mojo's last touchdown.

"In our hearts, we wanted to go for it, but with the district implications involved, we felt like we had to go for the tie," Hollingshead said. "The tie keeps us undefeated in district play."

However, Permian entered the game needing one victory to clinch a playoff berth. A tie or loss wouldn't change that fact. The district championship is no longer a big deal in 5A football. Getting to the playoffs is of major importance. Permian gave up one of three chances at clinching by going for the tie. If the Panthers lose to both Abilene Cooper and San Angelo, which probably won't happen, Permian is out of the playoffs, leaving a missed opportunity on the field of play.

Both Miller and Midland High coach Ronnie Reeger said they would both have gone for the tie just like Hollingshead if they had been in his shoes, citing that a loss can affect a team in a much more negative way than a tie. Both said you chance losing momentum down a tough stretch drive.

The bottom line is that Lee comes out the overall winner, now needing only to beat Cooper to get into the playoffs. Had Permian gone for two points at the end of the game and had beaten Lee 22-21, the Rebels would have to beat Cooper by five points in the season finale to get into the playoffs over Odessa High. The tie was ultimately worth five points to Lee.

That is a tremendous benefit mentally because it's tough entering any key 4-5A contest when you are already down by five points.

The controversy will last until Permian wins its next game. It's just that the next victory better not be next year.

Terry Williamson is sports editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

mance in the second game to get the win. They end the season at 5-7 in district and 10-17 overall. Abilene goes winless in league play — 0-12, 5-20 overall — after winning the district title last season.

Midland Lee finished with a 15-9, 15-9 loss at Abilene Cooper. They will go into the playoffs either Monday or Tuesday against the winner of District 3-5A's third-place playoff between Amarillo Palo Duro and Lubbock Coronado. Odessa Permian makes the playoffs as the third-place team and San Angelo Central wins the district with a 15-9, 15-9 victory over Permian in San Angelo.

In Midland High's game Thompson had 11 kills including four in the final game. Madison served for eight points and senior Jodie Strain had a seven-point service run in the last game.

Midland went 2-4 in the first half of district but came back to play much better the second half despite losing two players.

"This final core that was on the court the last six games played very well together," Pittman said. "We gained the respect of several district teams after a poor first half showing. We came back to beat some teams and gave some others three-game matches and I think that's what I'm most proud of."

Abilene High struggled offensively, coming up with few kills. They had to depend on defense for most of their success and won a long second game with only four kills.

"It would have made their season to have beaten us and we were flat," Pittman said. "They put up a block tonight. They were much more competitive than we expedted them to be."

Abilene's Kelly Armbruster's ace gave the Lady Cougars the win in game two.

Midland then surged to a 6-1 lead in the third game before Abilene came back to make it 6-4. But Strain then got the serve for the Lady Bulldogs and didn't relinquish it until her team led 13-4. Two of Strains serves weren't returned and Madison had a kill along the way.

"We served better and I think we just kind of wore them down offensively," Pittman said of the third game.

Midland Lee's second place finish makes coach Anita Corder happy because it means her team doesn't have to go against stalwarts Amarillo Tascosa or Amarillo High in the first round of the playoffs. But her team's play lately has her concerned.

"I'm tickled to death by (the second-place finish) because I feel like that gives us a good opportunity in the playoffs," Corder said. "But we're going to have to overcome this complacency."

Midland High's junior varsity beat Abilene 15-1, 7-15, 15-3 to take second place in district with a 9-3 mark. The JV won 22 and lost five on the year.

"I couldn't ask for a greater group of kids," said Midland JV coach Susan Nix. "They were so great about helping each other out and believing in the team."

one his size.

"He's like a ping pong ball," Bryant said. "If he doesn't take a straight hit, he bounces off people and he keeps moving his legs. That's his biggest asset."

Wilde

Wilde, who also plays cornerback, has been a late bloomer, waiting until midway through his senior year to really break out. He played wide receiver last season.

He began this season with 53 yards rushing in two games, missed the third with a broken left thumb, rushed for 116 yards in game 4 and had 98 the next week.

Early this season, Wilde and Bryan Harp split time at tailback. Wilde has since claimed the spot for himself and earned the full share of carries, getting 69 over the last two games.

He now 817 yards on 136 carries for the season. Garden City is 2-5, but 2-0 in District 8A. This weekend, the Bearkats face district foe Wink, which is coached by their former coach Sam Scott.

In other outstanding Week 8 performances around the area:

—Another highly touted back also lived up to his billing as Odessa Permian's John Williams ran for 171 yards on 29 and all three TDs in a 21-21 tie with Midland Lee that dropped the Panthers from first to fourth in 5A.

—Williams will get to watch another of Class 5A's most successful backs this weekend when Permian plays Abilene Cooper and Mike Rose. In a 35-0 victory over Austin High last weekend, Rose rushed 15 times for 240 yards.

—Joe Ramirez rushed for 264 yards and TDs of 45 and 20 yards in Reagan County's 37-0 victory over Crane.

Senator wants bowl coalition investigated

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell, upset that Louisville will be shut out of all New Year's Day bowl games, asked the U.S. Justice Department on Tuesday to investigate whether a college football bowl coalition violates antitrust laws.

McConnell, a Kentucky Republican who graduated from Louisville, said he didn't bring up the issue to improve the Cardinals' chances to get invited to a prestigious bowl. The 17th-ranked Cardinals are 7-1 this season.

"What I want is for any team in America to be able to benefit, whether they're in a conference or out of a conference," McConnell said from Washington, D.C. "I hope they'll reach the conclusion that it's not fair for any team in America to be punished for success."

Louisville coach Howard Schnellenberger said he shares McConnell's "concern about the fairness of the current bowl setup."

"Many coaches, players, fans and even some bowl committees feel the same way," Schnellenberger said. "To exclude teams from the chance to play in the very best Jan. 1 bowls before even a single game is played is of concern to all of us."

McConnell said his request to have the bowl coalition repealed does not mean government is overstepping its bounds by intervening in collegiate athletics.

"The antitrust laws are designed to allow competition to blossom in our country," McConnell said. "It's pro free enterprise, not the opposite."

In a letter to Ann Bingaman, the assistant attorney general of the Antitrust Division, McConnell calls the bowl coalition the "ghettoization" of independent teams shut out of the major bowls.

He said the bowl coalition unfairly denies independents financial rewards and national recognition from appearing in a major bowl.

"We're not just talking about prestige," he said. "We're talking about money. Television contracts, recruiting. How could you possibly recruit if you said to your recruits, 'We may never got a major bowl, even if we win 11 games.'"

Rick Baker, executive director of the Cotton Bowl and the bowl coalition, said the bowl alliance does not violate antitrust laws.

"Speaking for the college football bowls that are a party to the coalition agreement that is the subject of Senator McConnell's complaints, we are confident that this agreement does not violate the Sherman Act," Baker said in a statement.

NFL: Charlotte wins franchise

From 1D

"If you're a St. Louis fan, you have to be tickled pink by the decision," said Leonard "Boogie" Weinglass, the principal owner in one of the Baltimore groups. Earlier, Weinglass had argued that St. Louis was a baseball rather than a football town.

"The Colts have tradition," he said. "When I think of St. Louis, I think of Ozzie Smith."

William Dunavant, head of the Memphis group, said if St. Louis is awarded a team, "then in my opinion we have not been dealt a straight deck."

Said George Westfall, the St. Louis County executive: "In a sense I feel good about it except for the torture of having to go through it again."

Tagliabue said the market, stadium and ownership group were all critical factors in Charlotte getting a franchise.

The situation is similar to the league's last expansion. The owners first approved a franchise for Tampa Bay, then named Seattle after further investigation of the ownership group.

Tagliabue was believed to have favored a split of the two franchises between one new city and one that has lost an NFL team. That would make St. Louis, which lost the Cardinals to Phoenix in 1988, and Baltimore, which lost the Colts to Indianapolis in 1984, the prime candidates.

However, both have competing ownership groups. In addition to the group headed by Kroenke, Fran Murray, who was a member of a previous group, is still maintaining interest in a franchise.

A St. Louis franchise also is likely to return NFL great Walter Payton to the league. He is a member of the first ownership group and is expected to be included in Kroenke's group once some legal technicalities are overcome.

One problem Charlotte faced coming in were accusations of racial bias against Denny's. But Richardson assured civil rights groups of his commitment to racial harmony.

"It was a terrible thing," he said of allegations by blacks that they were treated badly in restaurants. "I was embarrassed by it then and I'm still embarrassed by it. I want to make sure that everyone who comes into our restaurants feels comfortable."

ceive five points for first, three for second and one for third.

Fregosi got 11 seconds and four thirds for 92 points. Felipe Alou of the Montreal Expos and Bobby Cox of the NL West champion Atlanta Braves tied for third with 27 points each.

Don Baylor, a rookie manager who took the expansion Colorado Rockies to a sixth-place finish in the NL West, received one third-place vote and one point.

Baker, 44, was hired by the Giants new owners last Dec. 16 to replace Roger Craig. Baker had spent five seasons with the team as a coach, including the previous four as the hitting coach.

The Giants led the NL West from May 11 to Sept. 11, when they were overtaken by the Braves. The teams fought down the stretch and the Giants lost on the season's final day, when the Los Angeles Dodgers routed them 12-1.

San Francisco became the first team to win 103 games and not finish first since the 1954 New York Yankees, who finished with eight fewers victories than Cleveland.

Baker was a player for nearly 16 seasons with Atlanta, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Oakland, finishing with a .278 career average, 242 homers and 1,013 RBIs. He played on three NL pennant winners with the Dodgers and was part of their World Series championship team in 1981.

Former football great Cloyce Box dies at 70

DETROIT (AP) — Former Detroit Lions standout receiver Cloyce Box, who still holds or shares several team records, has died at the age of 70.

Box, who went on to become a millionaire in the Texas oil business, died in his sleep Sunday at his Dallas home.

Box played for the Lions in 1949-50 and 1952-54. He caught 129 passes for 2,665 yards and 32 touchdowns in his career and played in three straight NFL championship games, winning in 1952-53.

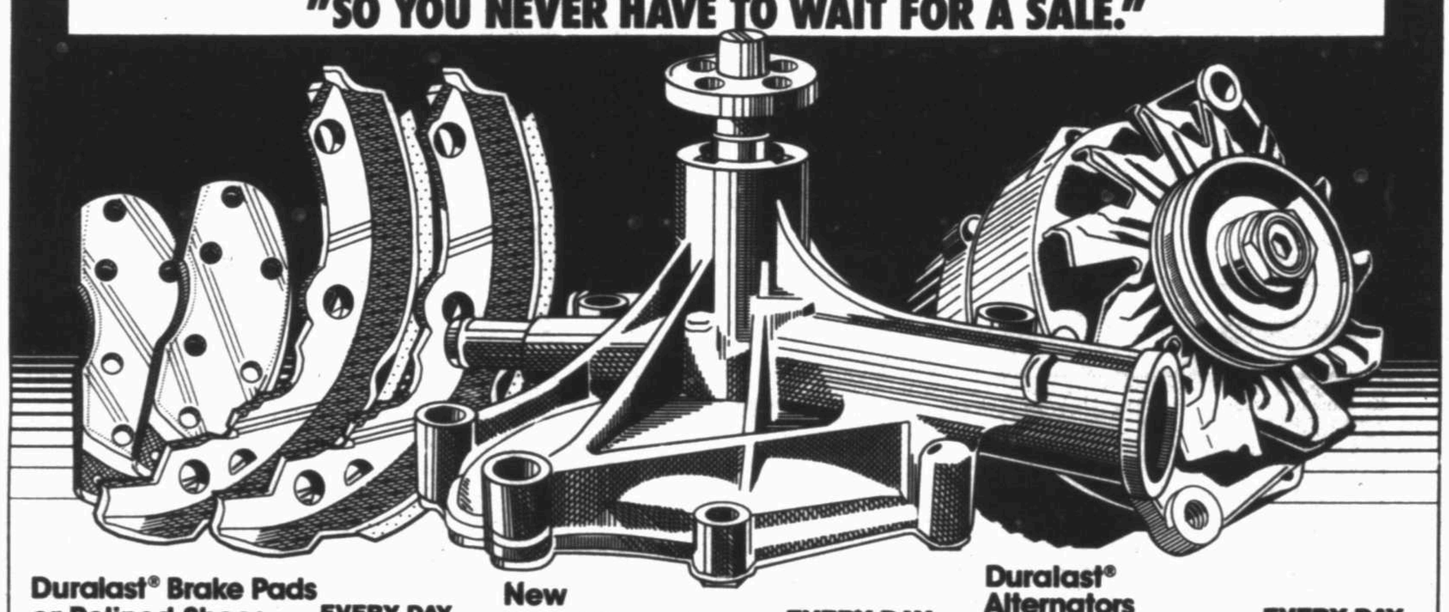

"He was a hell of a receiver," said Joe Schmidt, a Lions Hall of Fame linebacker. "He was 6-foot-4, and his speed was comparable to any of today's receivers. He had a graceful stride and at 220 pounds he was a big-sized man."

Box, a two-time Pro Bowl player, holds three Lions' records and is tied for three more. He holds the records for most touchdown catches in a season (15), most receiving yards in a game (302) and most touchdown catches in a game (4).

At West Texas State Teacher's College, now called West Texas A&M University, Box lettered in football from 1946-49. He also lettered in track in 1947 and in basketball in 1945, 1947 and 1948.

The Canyon school inducted him into its Athletic Hall of Champions in 1988.

Rockets beat buzzer, Magic for win

Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — Hakeem Olajuwon hit a fallaway jumper with three seconds left to give the Houston Rockets a 101-100 exhibition victory over the Orlando Magic on Tuesday.

The basket by Olajuwon, who scored 30 points, capped a hectic final minute.

Houston's Vernon Maxwell hit a 3-pointer with 50 seconds remaining to tie the score at 97. After a free throw, Mario Elie put the Rockets up 99-98 with a running jumper.

■ NBA Exhibition

Magic star Shaquille O'Neal didn't play for the second game in a row because of an ankle injury. He is expected to return when the Magic goes to London this weekend to meet the Atlanta Hawks.

Atlanta 82, Dallas 77

ATLANTA — Dominique Wilkins had 26 points to help the Atlanta Hawks halt a four-game exhibition losing skid with a victory over Dallas.

Wilkins, who missed Monday's loss at San Antonio with a sore rotator cuff, scored 14 points in the last eight minutes of the second period. He broke a 41-41 tie with a layup, and Stacey Augmon and Mookie Blaylock followed with baskets to give Atlanta a 47-41 halftime lead.

Augmon had 12 points for the Hawks, now 2-4 in exhibition games.

Mashburn, a rookie from Kentucky, made his first four shots, including two 3-pointers, finishing with 21 points on 8-of-14 shooting. Mashburn was only 9-of-27 his first three games.

Celtics 126, Kings 125 OT

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Croation rookie Dino Radja scored 20 points and grabbed a key rebound in overtime that helped the Boston Celtics defeat the Sacramento Kings in the annual Hall of Fame game.

The Celtics, 4-2 in exhibition games, overcame a 44-point performance by Kings guard Mitch Richmond. Robert Parish added 19 points for Boston and Dee Brown had 17.

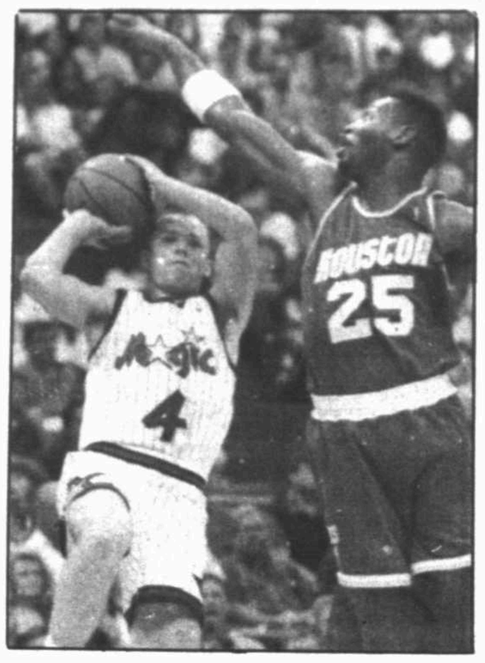

Lakers 105, Bullets 104

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Vlade Divac sank a free throw with 43.4 seconds left to lift the Los Angeles Lakers past Washington.

Rex Chapman brought the Bullets (0-6) back from a nine-point deficit with nine of his 26 points in a 3:18 span, including a long basket from the left wing that tied the game at 104 with 55.4 seconds left.

Charlotte 138, Philadelphia 126

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Larry Johnson scored 21 points to lead Charlotte to a NBA exhibition victory over Philadelphia in the Charlotte Coliseum.

Orlando guard Scott Skiles has a last second shot blocked by Houston forward Robert Horry during their exhibition game Tuesday. The Rockets won the exhibition game 101-100.

COWBOYS: Dallas meets Philly Sunday

From 1D

Troy Aikman has never defeated the Eagles in the Vet but this time the Cowboys are 11-point favorites to do just that.

"I guess that's one more ghost I have to put to bed," said Aikman, who once suffered a separated shoulder at the Vet. "It's a hard place to play."

Johnson has played in some tough places both as a college coach at Miami but he rates Veterans Stadium as the hardest place to win.

"Going to Philadelphia is as difficult a task as we have," Johnson said. "They get up for us and there's no bones about it. They seem to play better against Dallas. The intensity level is up."

The Cowboys had no trouble last year with Philadelphia in Texas Stadium, winning 20-10 in a regular season game and knocking the Eagles out 34-10 in an NFC divisional playoff.

The Cowboys and Eagles are 4-2 but appear headed in different directions. Dallas lost its first two games without holdout Emmitt Smith. The Eagles, who have lost two quarterbacks to injuries, including Randall Cunningham, have lost their last two games.

The Cowboys are injury free except for defensive end Charles Haley, who is battling back problems incurred in a 26-17 victory over the San Francisco 49ers Oct. 17. Haley was listed as questionable.

"I fully expect Haley to play," said Johnson. "He will get some tests on Wednesday and we'll make a decision at that time. If Haley can't go, then Jim Jeffcoat will start."

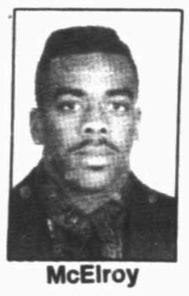

The Cowboys are also expected to activate linebacker Godfrey Myles, who has missed all of the season because of an injury suffered in the Super Bowl.

McElroy, Ellis earn weekly honor

HOUSTON (AP) — It didn't take Texas A&M's Leeland McElroy long to make an impression on the Rice Owls.

Ellis

McElroy

Two plays were enough.

He returned Rice's first two kickoffs 93 and 88 yards for touchdowns, tying an NCAA record, to set the tone for the No. 11 Aggies' 38-10 victory on Saturday. For his performance, he was named the Associated Press Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week.

McElroy touched the ball only one other time late in the game but his electrifying feat kept Rice from taking charge early in the game until the Aggies offense cranked up in the second half.

Texas cornerback Joey Ellis highlighted a Texas defense that bashed Southern Methodist's offense and captured four turnovers in a 37-10 victory that netted Ellis defensive honors.

McElroy, a redshirt freshman, has to make an impression wherever he can because he's the No. 3 tailback behind Rodney Thomas and Greg Hill. His feat on Saturday made him only the sixth player in NCAA Division I-A to return two kickoffs for touchdowns in one game.

Notre Dame's Rocket Ismail did it twice and the Owls were one of his victims in 1988.

"Greg and Rodney will get most of the carries because they've been here and I'm just getting here," McElroy said. "They're trying to find other ways to let me touch the ball."

The Owls, trying to beat the Aggies for the first time in 13 years, had impressive drives in their first two possessions of the game, ending in Johnny Bagwell's 26-yard field goal and Bert Emanuel's 14-yard touchdown pass to Byron Coston.

But each time, McElroy took away Rice's momentum with kickoff returns for a 14-10 lead that expanded to 21-10 at the half.

McElroy took Rice's first kickoff at his 7-yard line, shot upfield and sidestepped Bagwell on his way to the touchdown. He struck for 88 yards the next time, also eluding Bagwell's tackle attempt.

"When I didn't see anybody but the kicker, I knew I was going for another touchdown," McElroy said. "We work on special teams a lot and put a lot of emphasis on it."

McElroy's 93-yarder was the eighth-longest in Aggies history and the longest since last season when Billy Mitchell returned a kickoff 95 yards against Houston.

"They were important to the game," McElroy said. "We were down when I returned the second one and the first one. It helped the team out a lot."

Texas' blitzing of SMU quarterbacks Mark Elred and Ramon Flanigan left Ellis and the other Longhorn defensive backs in man-to-man coverage.

That suited Ellis.

"I know a lot of the guys here like to play man," Ellis said. "Some like to play zone and get more picks. I just like to get right up in the receiver's face."

Coaches pick Texas in basketball poll

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Longhorns have been put on the preseason hot seat as the favorite to win the Southwest Conference basketball championship, according to a poll of the eight conference coaches.

Senior Longhorns center Albert Burditt was chosen as preseason Player of the Year by the coaches.

Texas returns four starters and welcomes two heralded transfers, Rich McIver from Michigan and Tremaine Wingfield from Louisville, to a squad which finished 11-17 overall last season and was seventh in the SWC with a 4-10 mark.

Four players sat out part of the season for Texas last year, including Burditt, who missed the final 19 games due to academic suspension. Guard B.J. Tyler missed most of the SWC season with a stress fracture in his foot.

Coach Tom Penders' Longhorns received seven of the possible eight first-place votes for 63 points, edging second-place Texas A&M by 16.5 total points.

Rounding out the SWC's upper division is upstart Baylor at third with 46.5 points, including one first-place vote. Houston was selected fourth with 41 points. Texas A&M is a surprise selection after finishing 10-17 a year ago and in sixth in the SWC race. Coach Tony Barone welcomes back all five starters and a heralded class of newcomers.

Baylor coach Darrel Johnson is also expected to make an impact with four starters returning and a wealth of incoming talent.

Burditt was selected the preseason Player of the Year after being ranked among the nation's leaders in rebounding and blocked shots during the first part of last season. At the time of his January suspension last season, Burditt was averaging 14.1 rebounds and 4.2 blocks.

The preseason SWC Newcomer of the Year is Texas Tech junior Mark Davis. A heralded junior college transfer from Howard (Texas) Junior College, Davis was one of the top juco players in the nation.

Baylor's Jerode Banks from Temple is the coaches' selection as the league's preseason Freshman of the Year. Banks was one of the top prep players in Texas last season and led Temple to the state class 5A championship.

Texas junior guard Terrence Rencher, the 1992 SWC Newcomer of the Year, was the only unanimous choice on the coaches' first team. He is joined by Houston senior Anthony Goldwire, Burditt, Texas Tech junior Lance Hughes and Texas A&M junior Damon Johnson.

The second-team consisted of Baylor junior Aundre Branch and senior Willie Sublett, TCU senior Eric Dailey, Rice senior Torrey Andrews and Texas A&M senior David Edwards.

Florida fires swim coach after allegations

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The University of Florida fired women's swim coach Mitch Ivey after a university investigation of his relationships with his swimmers.

The investigation began after ESPN reporters showed up on campus three weeks ago to work on a story about Ivey's interaction with former and current athletes.

Ivey denied the charges of misconduct after his firing Monday night, saying the university would rather avoid bad publicity than stand behind its coach.

"It's real unfortunate," Ivey told The Gainesville Sun in a story published today. "I was told that putting my arm around a girl and using foul language was deemed reason enough.

"Rather than saying they're pleased with my performance and standing behind me, they're saying they can't have the bad publicity. It shows you that all of that talk about Team Florida is just baloney. It leaves me feeling pretty nauseous."

The university began its own investigation after ESPN reporters showed up on campus three weeks ago to work on a story for the program "Outside the Lines: Coaching in the '90s." It is set to air Friday.

The program's host, Bob Ley, told The Associated Press Monday the show will contain allegations of sexual misconduct against a "world-class coach who has a history of marrying his athletes and also of having sexual relationships with them." Ley declined to identify the coach because that segment of the show was unfinished.

Florida athletic director Jeremy Foley said the university is "always proactive any time we're dealing with issues such as ESPN was asking about."

Ivey, who has been married three times, did marry his second wife while she was at Stanford. "She was of legal age. Florida knew all about that when I got the job," Ivey said.

Florida's women's swim team issued a statement Monday backing Ivey.

"We ... as a whole completely support Mitch Ivey no matter what has been said. He is one of the best swim coaches in the world and he is the reason that we have developed into a team that is vying for a national title. We are stunned by this decision and feel very sorry that Mitch will be denied the opportunity to use his talents to better ours."

As a member of the 1968 and 1972 U.S. Olympic teams, Ivey came to Florida in 1990. He led the team to Southeastern Conference titles in 1991, 1992 and 1993. Florida finished second in last spring's NCAA meet, its best finish ever under Ivey.

Prices up

NEW YORK — Oil prices finished barely changed Tuesday after a rally early in the session fell apart.

Oil prices have been moving lower in recent weeks, despite a lack of news to encourage selling.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in December, which fell 56 cents on Monday, settled at $17.54 per barrel Tuesday, up 3 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. Prices had reached as high as $17.70 per barrel earlier in the session.

After the market closed for the day, the American Petroleum Institute released weekly inventory figures that showed a larger-than-expected gain in crude oil supplies. However, most of the increase was on the West Coast, which has a smaller impact on the New York markets.

In the early going of computerized after-hours trading Tuesday night, crude prices were down a penny.

Aside from the crude oil increase, the API figures showed tighter supplies of gasoline and an increase in stocks of distillates, which include home heating oil. Refineries cut back production as a percentage of capacity.

API, an industry group, said crude oil inventories rose 5.23 million barrels last week to 332.37 million. That's more than 2 million barrels higher than a year ago.

Distillate stocks rose 2.47 million barrels to 134.63 million and gasoline stocks dropped 949,000 barrels to 208.725 million. Refineries operated at 91.7 percent of capacity, down from 93.7 percent a week earlier.

Confidence falls

NEW YORK — Consumer confidence in the economy suffered an unexpected, sharp setback in October as the outlook for jobs and financial security dimmed, said a survey released.

The Conference Board, a New York research group which tracks sentiment through the monthly poll, said Tuesday its consumer confidence index registered 59.4 in October, a loss of 4.4 points from the previous month. Since January, the index has shed more than 17 points, reflecting a steep decline in expectations.

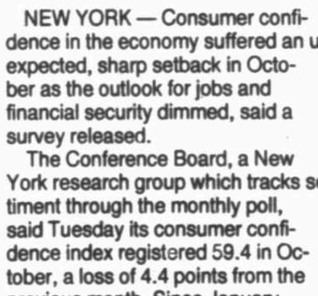

Dollar weakens

NEW YORK — The dollar generally weakened Tuesday, hurt by news of falling consumer confidence in the economy. But it gained on the Canadian dollar after Canadians overwhelmingly voted the Conservatives out of power.

Dow drops

NEW YORK — An unexpected decline in consumer confidence helped send stocks downward Tuesday, but a recovery later in the day led by economically sensitive issues kept losses to a minimum.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which during the day was nearly 20 points off Monday's record high, ended up just 1.12 lower at 3,672.49.

Benefits slow compensation gains

■ 'Health-care costs are decelerating, so fringe benefit cost increases have slowed,' economist says.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The slowest growth in job benefits like health care in almost six years helped hold U.S. workers' compensation to a modest 3.6 percent gain in the 12 months ending Sept. 30.

"Health care costs are decelerating, so fringe benefit cost increases have slowed," economist Robert G. Dederick of the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago said. Health care represents about one-fourth of benefit costs.

President Clinton's proposed health care reforms are designed to curb inflation in this area, but Dederick said the recent trend in benefit costs suggests "the system is self-correcting."

The Labor Department said Tuesday its Employment Cost Index, considered one of the best gauges of wage inflation pressures, was up just slightly from a 3.5 percent advance a year earlier. The increase was about what analysts had expected.

Wages and salaries rose 3 percent, compared to a 2.7 percent gain a year earlier. The advance barely outpaced the period's 2.7 percent inflation rate. Wages and salaries comprise about 72 percent of employment costs.

"Basically, the message was that wage inflation is an oxymoron because there isn't any," Dederick said.

And the growth in benefits slowed to 4.9 percent, from 5.2 percent a year earlier. It was the smallest since benefits advanced 3.7 percent in the year ended Dec. 30, 1987.

In early 1990, employment costs were increasing at a 5.5 percent pace, including a 7.4 percent jump in benefits.

On a quarterly basis, overall employment costs rose 0.8 percent, a bit slower than the 0.9 percent advance during the April-June period and the smallest increase in five quarters.

Wages and salaries were up 0.9 percent, compared to a 0.6 percent advance in the second quarter. But growth in benefit costs slowed to 0.8 percent from a 1.4 percent gain from April through June.

In a second report, the department said workers covered by collective bargaining agreements in the third quarter of 1993 won wage gains averaging 1.6 percent annually over the term of the contracts.

They replaced contracts that for the most part had been negotiated in 1990 and that had provided increases averaging 2.9 percent.

Settlements during the year ended Sept. 30 also averaged a lower wage rate over their term than the contracts being replaced — a 2.3 percent annual increase compared with 3.5 percent. This has been the pattern in all but one of the last six four-quarter periods, the department said.

"Firms are not aggressively seeking workers and some are still downsizing," Dederick said. "That slack means labor is in no position to be demanding higher wages."

Compensation cost increases were higher for union workers, up 4.2 percent, than for nonunion workers, which rose 3.6 percent.

Until 2½ years ago, nonunion increases had exceeded those of union workers almost without exception for nearly a decade.

Tall City jobs hold steady, report shows

Midland's employment picture appears to have been stable for the month of September, according to figures released Tuesday by the Texas Employment Commission.

The Tall City's unemployment rate fell to 6.4 percent from 6.7 percent in August and is sharply lower than the 8 percent rate seen a year ago.

Odessa's unemployment rate fell to 8.2 percent from 8.7 percent in August.

There was, however, a sharper decrease in Midland's civilian labor force, which saw 600 workers leave during the month. The TEC put Midland's civilian labor force at 48,500 in September, down from 49,100 in August and just below the 48,600 seen a year earlier.

Of the city's labor force, 45,400 were employed, down 400 from 45,800 a month ago but up from 44,700 in September 1992.

TEC figures indicate 200 Midlanders found employment during the month, sending total unemployment down to 3,100 from 3,300 in August and below 3,900 last year.

"Things seem to be stable," said Jacquen Moseley, manager of the Midland TEC office. "There's been no dramatic increase in activity. Of course, the recently announced Arco layoffs may affect us next month."

She added that unemployment benefits claims have remained steady week-to-week as well.

Moseley attributed the lower unemployment rate, labor force and employment to students and seasonal workers leaving the work force.

Among the TEC's metropolitan statistical areas, Midland ranked 15th, tied with Abilene. Odessa was 22nd, tied with Longview-Marshall.

Bryan-College Station had the lowest rate in the state, 3.3 percent, followed by Austin with 4.2 percent, Amarillo with 4.5 percent, Lubbock with 5 percent and Victoria with 5.1 percent. The highest rate in the state was in McAllen-Edinburg-Mission, which had 15.2 percent.

Statewide, the rate fell to 6.5 percent from 6.7 percent in August, well below the 7.5 percent seen a year ago.

Last month, there were 8,365,200 working Texans, and 577,900 people who were unemployed.

Paramount, Chris-Craft agree to form 5th TV network

NEW YORK (AP) — Caught in a takeover crossfire, Paramount Communications Inc. says it plans to launch a fifth broadcast television network in January 1995 with station owner Chris-Craft Industries Inc.

Paramount's announcement Tuesday came as Barry Diller's QVC Network Inc. continued to study its next move in the bidding war against the movie and TV studio owner's choice for a partner, Sumner Redstone's Viacom Inc.

QVC said last week it would take its $80 a share cash-and-stock bid for Paramount directly to shareholders but hasn't formally begun the offer.

Viacom matched it Sunday and launched an $80 a share cash offer for 51 percent of Paramount on Monday, getting at least a psychological jump on QVC.

But QVC backers said there is no practical advantage to getting a day or two lead on another's tender offer. QVC is expected to either raise its offer or boost the proportion paid in cash.

Paramount has long been rumored to be considering launching a fifth broadcast TV network employing its programming talent and some of its seven TV stations.

Martin S. Davis, chairman and chief executive of Paramount, said Viacom has approved the plans for the new network. QVC had no comment.

Edward Hatch, analyst for UBS Securities, said Paramount's network plan gives it a reliable new outlet for its programs and formalizes a longstanding syndication relationship with Chris-Craft.

Paramount and Chris-Craft evidently have a way to go in assembling an affiliate lineup that could reach the 80 percent of U.S. homes that many national advertisers consider critical when buying commercial time.

They said their network would initially be carried by a group of stations that include Paramount's four unaffiliated stations.

American Fence offers new type of fencing

By Mella McEwen

A new type of treated fencing is adding both color and durability to West Texas yards, according to American Fence Co., which sells the fencing.

McEwen

Called Copperwood, the fencewood is treated with a special blend of oil, copper and naphthetic acid that not only protects the wood from decay, but also turns a variety of colors that begins with dark green, moves to light green and cooper and finally ends with a light brown and gray.

The fence material, grown especially in the Ozark Mountains of Arkansas, comes with a 25-year warranty and is safe for humans and animals.

RUEL SMITH TRANSPORTATION SERVICES INC. has opened a Midland-Odessa terminal one and 6/10 miles west of the Warfield Truck Stop on the north service road of Interstate 20.

Ray Todd has been named terminal manager and can be reached at 563-3033.

The terminal opened after the Houston-based company, a national flatbed trucking company, received Texas intra-state authority from the Texas Railroad Commission. The authority allows the company to haul oil-field equipment and general commodity.

The company runs to 48 states and western Canada and presently operates in excess of 100 power units and 125 flatbed trailers. Plans are to purchase an additional 50 power units and 50 new flatbed trailers in 1994.

In addition to the Midland-Odessa terminal, the company recently has opened a terminal in Dallas-Fort Worth.

ELCOR CORP. of Dallas, formerly of Midland, has posted higher first quarter sales and operating earnings in fiscal 1994.

Roy E. Campbell, Elcor chairman and chief executive officer, attributed the results to higher demand and prices in its roofing products segment.

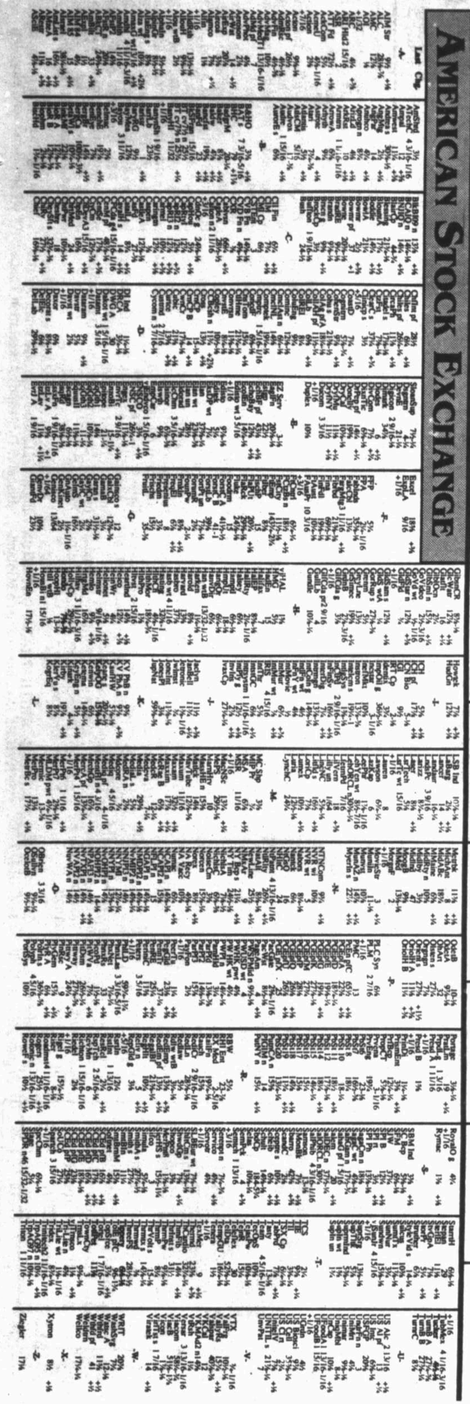

In the quarter, income of $4,072,000 before extraordinary item and cumulative change in accounting for income taxes was up 5.7 percent from $3,850,000 a year ago. Earnings of 46 cents per share were down from 52 cents per share a year earlier due to a 21 percent increase in shares outstanding.

Somali gunmen fire on religious mediators

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Battling Somalis fired on religious mediators Tuesday, a sign of a society so brutalized by war that young men ignore a centuries-old tradition demanding respect of one's elders.

No one was hurt, and the clan elders, waving green branches of peace, eventually negotiated a respite in the three-day battle over a water well in southern Mogadishu. But the deterioration of social order was undeniable.

"It's unheard of," said businessman Mohamed Jirdeh Hussein. "Any dispute, from car looting to camel poaching, is ended by the elders. These traditional controls are stronger than governments in Africa."

The fighting over the well began Sunday near the Kilometer Four Traffic circle where Mogadishu's main roads converge, and resumed after the four-hour respite the religious leaders negotiated.

Sporadic gunfire rang out elsewhere in the capital Tuesday. Clashes in Mogadishu on Monday had been the first major confrontations there since warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid called off his showdown with U.N. troops two weeks ago.

The battles also appeared to scuttle an unsteady 19-month-old truce between Aidid and his rival, Ali Mahdi Mohamed.

At least 11 people died and more than 50 were wounded in the fighting.

The fiercest gunbattles were around the Green Line dividing Mogadishu into the fiefs of Aidid and Ali Mahdi. Fighting also broke out around two heavily traveled points in Aidid territory, the U.N. compound and Kilometer Four.

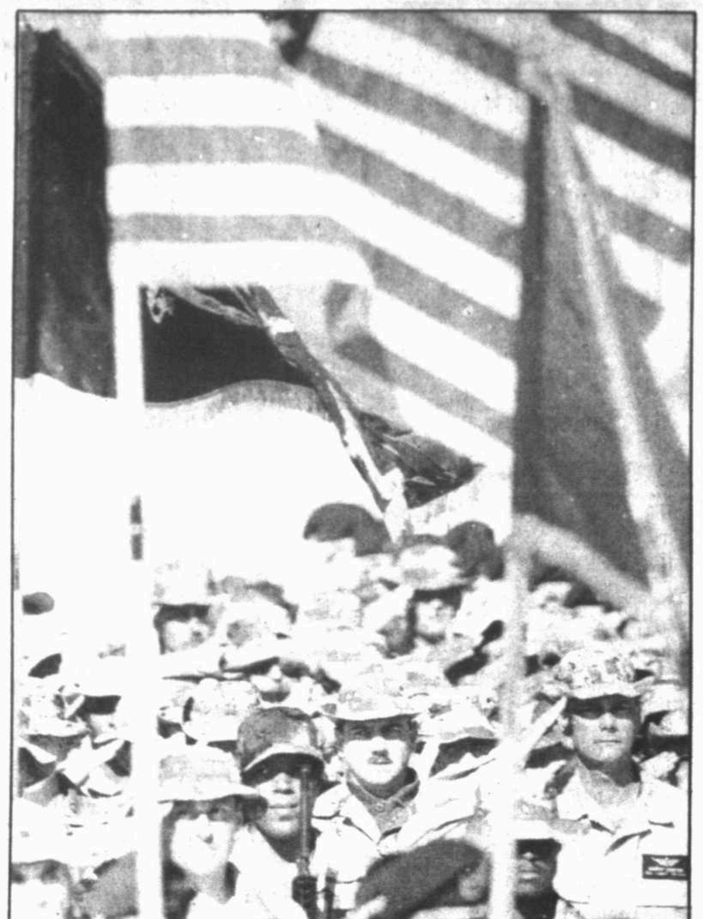

On Tuesday, the Green Line was deserted. Only a few pedestrians ventured into streets where at least 10 people were killed Monday when Ali Mahdi's people tried to cross into Aidid's southern sector in what they called a demonstration for peace.

Men armed with submachine guns and rocket-propelled grenades remained alert at buildings left roofless and windowless from previous battles.

Gunfire around the U.N. compound Monday night wounded a Somali worker near the U.S. Army's 46th Combat Support Hospital, U.N. spokesman Capt. Tim McDavitt told reporters Tuesday.

The 11th fatality Monday was a Somali driver for NBC News who was killed on the road from Kilometer Four to the airport.

U.N. peacekeepers have kept out of this week's fracas so far. A U.N. strongpoint near Mogadishu port in Aidid territory came under small-arms fire Tuesday morning, McDavitt said. Peacekeepers from the United Arab Emirates returned fire.

Bosnian forces regain control from renegades

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Government forces said they regained control Tuesday from two renegade officers accused of turning large swaths of Sarajevo into fiefs of violent crime.

One of the two officers surrended Tuesday evening, and the army said it had the other surrounded.

A televised statement from the government and army said Ramiz Delalic, known as Celo (pronounced Chelo), had surrendered and 25 civilian hostages were released unharmed.

The other commander, Musan Topalovic, known as Caco (Tsatso), and an unspecified number of his supporters were surrounded in a building in the Old Town district, the statement said.

The two commanders were expelled from the army Monday and ordered arrested on charges of organized crime.

The statement said the army had regained control of the entire city, except for the building where Caco and his loyalists were holed up. The army said it expected to resolve the standoff by morning.

Earlier in the day, the army had set up tank barricades and posted armed guards throughout the city in a sweep for the renegades and their supporters.

Streets were deserted after residents were warned to stay indoors. Except for intermittent firefights and some reports of sporadic Serb shelling, Sarajevo was eerily quiet.

There were believed to be casualties, but no details were immediately available.

Bosnian radio said 278 people were arrested in the sweep, but 84 were released.

Brigades commanded by Caco and Celo control large sections of Sarajevo and are blamed for the increasing violent crime in the city, under Serb siege for nearly 19 months.

They have been able to close part of the city to regular army units, and both are believed to be heavily involved in the local black market.

Caco, a former guitarist who played in Sarajevo restaurants before the war, commanded the 10th Mountain Brigade in control of part of eastern Sarajevo's old Muslim quarter.

Celo was in charge of the 9th brigade, controlling an area northeast of the city center adjacent to Caco's turf.

An earlier statement broadcast by state radio appealed to supporters of the two men to "join the legal forces." It warned that those refusing to comply "are walking straight to death."

"We are fighting a battle against organized crime, against people who are completely out of the system, and who turned out to be people who used this war for their own benefit," Mustafa Hajrulahovic, a member of the army command, told The Associated Press.

Shevardnadze's forces attack rebel stronghold

TBILISI, Georgia (AP) — Soldiers loyal to Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze followed up a string of victories by attacking the rebels' military stronghold of Senaki on Tuesday.

The government troops, backed by tanks, converged on the western Georgian town from two directions in an attempt to break the back of the rebel army, said Ministry of Defense spokesman Eteri Baladze.

The assault on Senaki came one day after government forces recaptured the vital Black Sea port of Poti from rebels seeking to overthrow Shevardnadze and restore former President Zviad Gamsakhurdia to power.

More government troops and arms were being sent to Poti from the Georgian capital, Tbilisi.

Shevardnadze has gained the edged in Georgia's civil war over the last five days after his troops united under a single command and received support from Russia, which promised to guard vital railroads.

The rebels, known as "Zviadisti" from Gamsakhurdia's first name, had stopped shipping along the main railroad that runs from Poti through Senaki and on to Tbilisi.

Battles in the civil war often involve only a few hundred men, and the outlook for either side can change overnight with a sudden victory or defeat. Shevardnadze's forces sought to consolidate their recent advances by seizing Senaki, the rebels' military center.

Zugdidi is their political center, and an aide to Shevardnadze said frightened residents have begun digging trenches around the western Georgian town to prepare for a government assault — which is likely if the government succeeds in taking Senaki.

Shevardnadze, the former Soviet foreign minister, has been struggling to hold Georgia together. His government is still reeling from its defeat last month by a separate group of rebels fighting for independence in the coastal province of Abkhazia.

Government troops got a boost over the weekend with military victories over Gamsakhurdia's forces in his home province of Mingrelia in western Georgia.

Shevardnadze's soldiers, under the unified command of Defense Minister Georgy Karkarashvili, captured the towns of Abasha and Martvili on Sunday and retook Poti on Monday.

Ten rebels were killed in the fighting around Poti, according to Murma Sakadze, who was appointed by Shevardnadze as the seaport's new mayor.

Sakadze said the port was quiet Tuesday and returning to normal. Poti was vital to the Georgian government because food, fuel and other supplies arrive there by sea and are carried by railroad to the capital.

After Gamsakhurdia's forces captured the port three weeks ago, supplies were cut off and Tbilisi began preparing for food rationing.

Booze-Estrogen

Women who drink alcohol, even moderately, are much more vulnerable to breast cancer. But why? One reason may be alcohol's estrogen-boosting effects, according to new research by Joseph Judd, Ph.D., at the Department of Agriculture's Human Nutrition Research Center in Beltsville, Md.

For six months, Dr. Judd had 34 healthy premenopausal women, ages 20 to 40, consume two mixed drinks (grain alcohol in citrus juice) or a non-alcoholic drink every day. During the periods they imbibed the alcohol, their levels of estrogen in blood and urine shot up by 7 to 32 percent. Elevated estrogen is a well-known promoter of breast cancer.

Further, the greatest alcohol-inspired estrogen surges occurred during the week of ovulation. A couple of daily beers or glasses of wine would have a similar effect, says Dr. Judd.

His recommendation: If you have a family history of breast cancer or other strong risk factors, cut out alcohol or restrict it to an "occasional social drink."

A safe dose for lower-risk women is unclear; many experts set a limit of one to two drinks a day. Dr. Judd is doing a new test of alcohol's impact on estrogen in postmenopausal women.

Not by diet alone

The case for taking vitamin E supplements grows stronger. The truth is, you can't get as much vitamin E as you probably need to protect your health from diet alone, especially if you are on a low-fat diet. In fact, it takes a daily vitamin E supplement of at least 100 International Units (IU) to substantially raise vitamin E blood levels.

So finds a recent study from the National Cancer Institute and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The researchers studied 65 men with ordinary diets providing less than 15 IU of vitamin E per day. Men taking a daily multivitamin supplement (with 15 to 60 IU of vitamin E) had 14 percent more vitamin E in their blood than non-vitamin takers. However, men who took a daily 100 IU vitamin E capsule had more than twice as much blood vitamin E as non-supplement users.

Recent Harvard studies find that taking vitamin E capsules may dramatically slash your chances of heart attack. The minimum protective daily dose was 100 IU for men and 200 IU for women. Harvard researcher Dr. Charles Hennekens says he does not recommend that everyone take vitamin E, but he neither does he discourage people who do take moderate doses — under 600 IU daily.

Pesticide precautions

It's better to eat fruits and vegetables with pesticides than not to eat fruits and vegetables. But it's best to eat fruits and vegetables with the least pesticides. So says the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a Washington, D.C., consumer group. Here's their advice for doing that:

- Wash all produce well to remove surface pesticides, preferably in a pot of water with a drop of mild dishwashing detergent. Rinse thoroughly.
- Use a vegetable brush to scrub foods like potatoes, sweet potatoes, carrots when you plan to eat the skin.
- Chop spinach, broccoli, cauliflower and similar rough-surfaced produce before you wash them.
- Peel any non-organic fruit or vegetable that has an obvious wax coating, such as cucumbers, apples, eggplants. This removes pesticides sealed in with the waxes.
- Discard the outer leaves of cabbage and head lettuces and the top leaves of celery.
- For more protection, buy food that is "Certified Organic" or at least grown with fewer pesticides. Ask your supermarket manager to stock such produce.

Deaf community says remedy is 'brutal'

By Scott Maxwell

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — Ethics and science are clashing in an increasingly heated debate over a surgically implanted device that restores limited hearing to the deaf.

Cochlear Corp., the manufacturer of the device, says its product is simply a technological alternative to deafness that is not meant for every deaf person.

But deaf advocates say they are incensed by the perception among the hearing and medical communities that any amount of hearing, even if surgery is required to achieve it, is better than none.

Cochlear manufactures cochlear implants, electronic devices that convert sound waves into electrical impulses and transmit them to the inner ear to reproduce sound.

More than 7,000 people, including 2,500 children, have received the implants since they were approved for adults by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in 1985. The implants were approved in 1990 for children.

The cost of the two-hour implant surgery and follow-up medical care is $25,000 to $30,000.

"It's time for the public to respect us as deaf people, not as handicapped people," said Cliff Mores, president of the Colorado Association of the Deaf.

"The handicap is the public's perception. Deaf children need not be reminded they are different. With cochlear implants, they will always feel they are different. They are not handicapped or disabled. They are deaf and bright."

In a position paper on cochlear implants, the National Association of the Deaf denounces "invasive surgery upon defenseless children, when the long-term physical, emotional and social impacts on children from this irreversible procedure — which will alter the lives of these children — have not been scientifically established."

And advocates for the country's half-million deaf people say the FDA's decision to remove Cochlear Corp.'s implants from the experimental category was based on scientifically and ethically flawed studies and data.

Doctors don't agree with the criticism.

Many ear specialists and surgeons hail the implants as a technological alternative to deafness, especially for young children and late-deafened adults, who can best make sense of the sounds created by the implants.

Laura Moulder, a New York-based spokeswoman for Cochlear Corp., said the implants are intended only for a small percentage of the population.

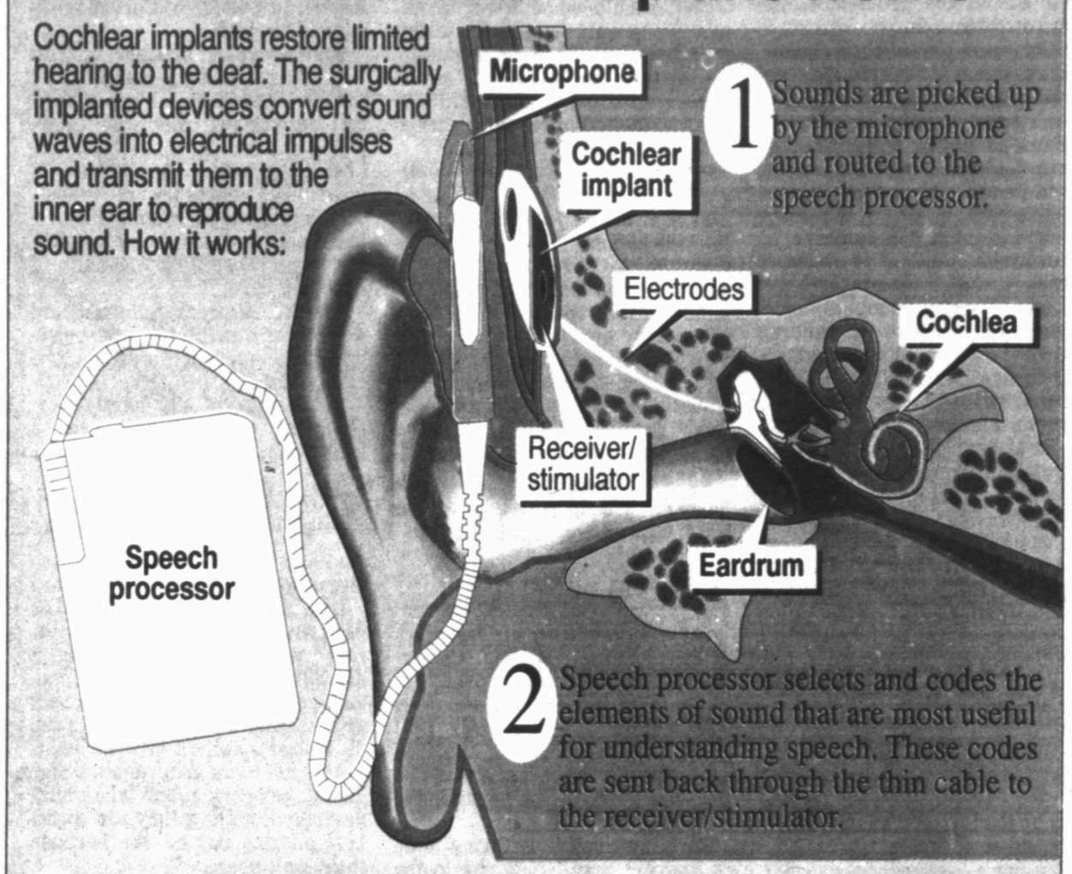

"The implants certainly aren't for everyone," Moulder said. "They're for a small fraction of the population: for children and adults who are profoundly deaf and who cannot be helped by hearing aids."

Dr. Samuel Selesnick, an assistant professor of otolaryn-

How the cochlear implant works

Cochlear implants restore limited hearing to the deaf. The surgically implanted devices convert sound waves into electrical impulses and transmit them to the inner ear to reproduce sound. How it works:

1 Sounds are picked up by the microphone and routed to the speech processor.

2 Speech processor selects and codes the elements of sound that are most useful for understanding speech. These codes are sent back through the thin cable to the receiver/stimulator.

3 The stimulator delivers electrical impulses to the appropriate electrodes in the cochlea. These stimulated electrodes then activate the auditory nerves in the inner ear, creating the sensation of sound.

4 Your brain receives the signals and interprets them. The entire process happens in milliseconds so that the user can virtually hear sounds as they occur.

It's time to be serious about getting that flu shot

By Carolyn Poirot
N.Y. Times News Service

A bout of influenza is nothing to sneeze at, right. True, influenza drives the hardiest folks to bed and keeps them there for three to four days, warns Dr. James Luby, chief of infectious diseases at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas.

Each year influenza kills more than 10,000 Americans, mostly elderly people and others at high risk, which includes anyone with chronic respiratory or heart problems and children weakened by diseases, especially lung disease, according to the American Lung Association.

They strongly recommend flu shots for everyone at risk and for physicians, nurses and those in contact with high-risk individuals.

There have been three epidemics in the last 25 years that killed more than 40,000 each, the ALA says. In 1990, the last really bad year, influenza combined with pneumonia resulted in more than 79,000 deaths in this country.

Influenza A epidemics tend to be more severe, and A/Beijing is the predominant flu strain expected this year.

The good news is that there are now two drugs available that can significantly reduce the severity of influenza A: amantadine, which has been around for years, and rimantadine, which was just approved last month.

These prescription medications are most effective if they are started within 48 hours after flu symptoms begin, Luby said. Symptoms include but are not limited to fever, chills, weakness, loss of appetite, sore throat and coughing, and bodily aches and pains.

A trip to the doctor early on could save a week of misery later; a flu shot now could save you the trip to the doctor and the misery.

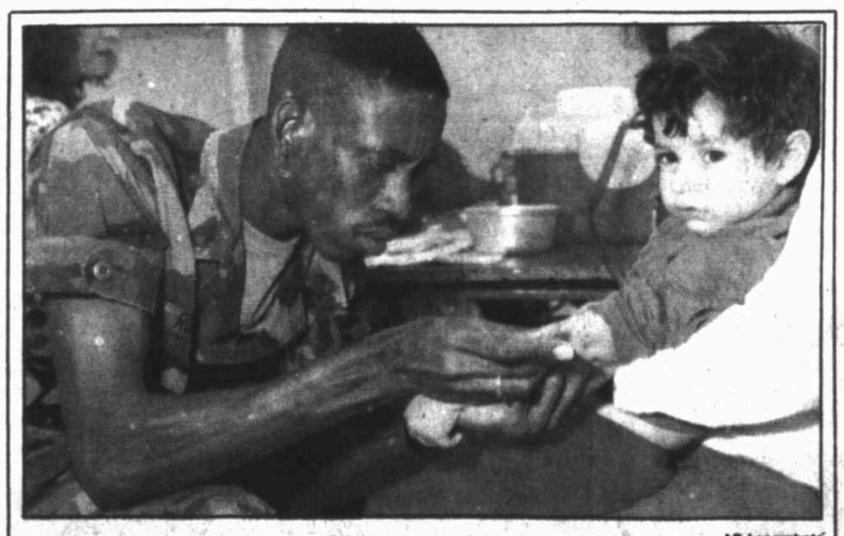

Studies show that fewer than 30 percent of Americans in high-risk groups heed public health officials' annual warnings to seek influenza vaccinations, said Dr. Robert Crider Jr., director of the Texas Department of Health's Immunization Division.

"We know that one reason some older people fail to be vaccinated is because of an unfounded fear that the vaccine can actually cause influenza," Crider said. "The truth is that a vaccinated person may still contract some strain of influenza, but not from the vaccine. If you do become ill, the vaccine usually helps lessen the severity of the case."

Flu vaccine is made from highly purified, egg-grown viruses that have been inactivated. Therefore the vaccine cannot cause influenza.

Vaccines change from year to year depending on the type of virus predicted by public health surveillance people. This year's vaccine contains three virus strains (two type A and a type B).

Flu season generally begins in December and extends through March, peaking in January and February. For maximum protection against the virus, the optimal time to get a flu shot is from mid-October through mid-November.

Hospitals' choices: It's change or die

EDITOR'S NOTE — Market forces and reform are forcing radical change among the nation's hospitals. Almost a thousand closed in the 1980s; 1,000 more aren't expected to survive by decade's end. As part of a continuing project, "Critical Condition: U.S. Health Care in Crisis," The AP series examines the rapidly changing industry.

By Fred Bayles

NORMAL, Ill. (AP) — BroMenn Regional Medical Center, six stories of glass and steel, rises from a parking lot moat, a monument to $70 million spent over 10 years for state-of-the-art labs and operating suites.

U.S. Health Care in Crisis

Three miles away in Bloomington sits the brown brick St. Joseph Medical Center, slightly smaller and careworn, but with its own $25 million in recent investments.

To remain competitive, the two hospitals bought and built and bought some more — often duplicating the other's services. But rules have changed. Now there's a chance one of these medical palaces may not survive the future of health care.

"We are going to need a lot fewer hospital beds in this community," says Kenneth Natzke, administrator of the 150-bed St. Joseph's. "You eliminate 100 beds and you change the whole health care picture."

For Dale Strassheim, president of BroMenn, the abrupt end to a health care system that paid little attention to costs raises hard questions for his 230-bed hospital.

"It might be best for this community to have one hospital, but then people will say the lack of competition will hurt both economically and in terms of quality," he says.

Such concerns are not limited to the twin cities of Bloomington-Normal, with their population of 92,000. Since World War II, hospitals have grown in number and size to claim 40 cents of every health care dollar. But demands for cost controls and a shift from hospitalization to outpatient care has brought an unprecedented period of turmoil.

Know your Medicare benefits

Staff report

Being a Medicare beneficiary is like being a member of a club. You're aware of your main benefit — medical coverage — but are you aware of the many other benefits "Club Medicare" provides?

Whether you're a meber of Club Medicare or the auto club, you may not find out about other benefits you have until after you've been in a situation in which you could have used them.

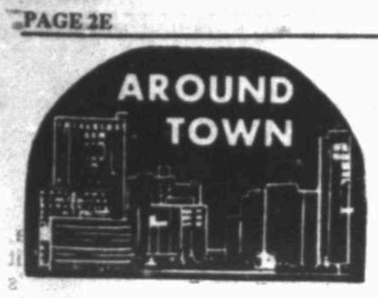

For instance, many Medicare beneficiaries do not know that if they feel they are being asked to leave the hospital too soon, they have the right to appeal the hospital's decision to discharge them — immediately — through their state peer review organization.

If you have Medicare benefits, information about this public service of the Medicare program is provided in your "Medicare Handbook" and in " An Important Message From Medicare," a document hospitals are required to give you when you are admitted. But like some of that mail you might receive from your club, you may not be inclined to read these documents. And if you are like most patients, you probably won't feel up to reading the "Important Message" at the time you're admitted to the hospital.

So find out all you can about the benefits of Medicare — BEFORE you need to use them. CHANGE: Hospitals face health care crisis

(From 1E)

A thousand hospitals closed their doors in the 1980s. Industry officials say current market forces may trim the remaining 5,342 acute care hospitals by an additional 1,000 through closings and mergers before decade's end.

(Beyond these community hospitals, the nation has about 1,300 Veterans Administration facilities, military units, and rehabilitation and psychiatric hospitals.)

The trend toward fewer hospitals would only accelerate under the Clinton health care plan with its ceilings on spending, under which networks of doctors and hospitals would compete for patients on basis of cost.

"We're in for a dramatic reconfiguration," said Dick Davidson, president of the American Hospital Association. "There is no argument that we have excess hospital capacity. The test of how you realign hospital space will be done community by community."

Seemingly unlimited health dollars fed the frenzy of hospital expansion in the late '70s and early '80s. Expensive medical arms races developed in community after community as hospitals spent millions to match competitors and win over doctors and their patients.

Consider catheterization labs, where specialists take X-ray movies of patients' hearts and clear blockages from coronary arteries.

A thousand hospitals built catheterization labs in the last decade, doubling the number of the expensive facilities. The result has been a fourfold increase in the lucrative procedure, a figure that even the American College of Cardiologists says is too high.

Soaring costs brought a reaction. To stem the hemorrhage of unrestrained hospital procedures and admissions, Medicare established limits on how much the federal government would pay to treat each category of illness. That encouraged hospitals to release patients as soon as possible and avoid absorbing the costs of extended care.

Private insurers followed suit with their own limits, and hospitals found they had more and more empty beds.

"The rules of the game have changed," said Eran Broshy, a health care analyst for The Boston Consulting Group. "There were no incentives to hold down costs, and all of a sudden you started having a squeeze on hospital income."

The cross-town rivals of Bloomington-Normal are trying to adjust. BroMenn was created by a mid-'80s merger of Brokaw and Mennonite hospitals. Mennonite was converted to long-term care and rehabilitation; Brokaw took over acute care.

While the merger ended some duplication, it was costly. The new corporation spent $45 million in renovations and $25 million updating constantly evolving high-tech equipment.

St. Joseph's matched the $25 million in upgrades. It plans to build a second ambulatory care facility and just broke ground for its own MRI imaging lab, matching one at BroMenn.

"You have to keep up," said Natzke, whose hospital went through three generations of ultrasound equipment in 10 years.

Some attempts at cooperation have succeeded, like the new joint prenatal care program. But negotiations for a jointly owned MRI lab ended in acrimony, with each side blaming the other for dealing in bad faith.

Acrimony flared again when BroMenn won a state certificate of need to build a competing catheterization lab despite opposition by St. Joseph. Natzke said the BroMenn facility took half of St. Joseph's heart patients.

"It dilutes the entire cardiology service and makes it less cost effective, but that's the American way," he said.

Strassheim said his hospital built the heart lab, in part, because of pressure from doctors who wanted such a facility at BroMenn.

"There is probably a limit to the number of catheterizations in the community, but we're in a business that is asked to be competitive," he said.

But these days besides competing for doctors, hospitals also must compete for the people who pay the bills. Big employers in Bloomington-Normal, like State Farm Insurance and Diamond-Star Motors, now demand discounts in exchange for their managed care business. With both hospitals writing off an estimated $54 million last year in Medicare cuts, less and less remains to trim.

"With most employer agreements, the hospital will discount costs in exchange for volume," Strassheim said. "But if we don't get the volume of patients, we end up shifting our costs onto someone else."

But as managed care takes hold, fewer payers are ready to take on that extra cost. They now shop for networks of hospitals, doctors and home care services that offer both quality and economy. Those hospitals with higher costs and limited affiliations will be left out.

St. Joseph has a head start as one of seven hospitals operated by The Sisters of the Third Order of St. Francis. BroMenn is forging ties with Carle Hospital in neighboring Champaign, which runs a clinic in Bloomington.

For now, there are plenty of patients for two hospitals. But the changing health care landscape does not assure either hospital a secure future.

"Estimates indicate it's going to take twice the population base to support a given number of hospital beds," Natzke said. "The question is whether or not the community on a long-term basis will be able to support two hospitals."

SURGERY: Experts divided

(From 1E)

gology and surgeon at New York Hospital Cornell Medical Center, agrees that the implants aren't for every deaf person but that they can help many.

"If someone is hearing impaired and can wear a hearing aid and do well there's really no need for the implant," he said.

"What we're really trying to do is improve communication to the point to help them read lips and hear most syllables in a conversation. It's not like getting a new set of ears," Selesnick said.

The implant relies on a pocket-sized receiver, which picks up sounds and processes them into electrical impulses transmitted along varying numbers of 18mm wires that pass through the skull and into the ear.

Inside the ear, each wire stimulates a nerve ending in an organ called the cochlea, where sound waves normally are converted into nerve impulses. As the number of wires increases, so does the number of nerve endings that are stimulated — improving the sound quality.

The devices are surgically implanted in a procedure surgeons liken, in terms of complication and discomfort, to a tonsillectomy.

Deaf advocates say it is cruel to perform surgery on a child to "correct" what the hearing see as a disability. They say that after hundreds of years of living as outcasts in a hearing world, the deaf have developed a culture of their own.

And they say they don't suffer gladly the hearing fools who would have them believe they are somehow missing out on life because they can't hear.

"The deaf culture has its own language and its own history, its own culture. The deaf community is a linguistic minority," said Harlan Lane, Distinguished University Professor of psychology at Northeastern University and chairman of the National Association of the Deaf's task force on childhood cochlear implants.

"It's not as if kids are dying of their deafness. It's part of a larger problem of the way professionals deal with deaf Americans. They treat them as though they're hearing people who don't hear. It's like treating black people as white people with a skin disease," he said.

Doctors are also perplexed by the controversy.

"I am befuddled at the reaction of the deaf community to cochlear implants," said Dr. Karen Jo Doyle, an otalaryngologist at the University of California-Irvine.

"You wouldn't expect people who have a handicap to not want others with handicaps to get help. You don't see the blind coming out against surgeries and treatments that help improve vision and you don't see quadriplegics coming out against the new technology in electronic limbs."

Cochlear defender Selesnick said he understands the deaf advocates' point, but he nonethless believes the implants are worthwhile.

"Their point is well taken. But what is the goal (of not using the implants)? To lead an insulated life in the deaf community?" he said. "Deaf people can certainly have full and wholesome lives, but they're still not in the community that everyone else is in. It's possible to have very good results so people can leave that community and get into the mainstream: mainstream classes, mainstream occupations. A mainstream life."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Information about the implants is available by calling the Cochlear Implant Information Hotline at 800-458-4999 (voice) or 800-483-3123 (TDD).

Cheese tops garlic bread

By Linda Anderson

No doubt about it, children's tastes in just about everything change as they get older. And in the never-ending quest to keep them fed and clothed, parents sometimes get really, really frustrated. Just when you think you have their likes and dislikes down pat, they change their minds again...

Anderson

My new teenager (recently turned 13), who loves pizza and French bread pizza, talked me into buying something called Microwave 4-Cheese Garlic Bread (from Tony's), which looks like French bread pizza without the tomato sauce.

I had no objections, and she volunteered to be the official taste-tester, so we bought a package for her to try.

A single-serving, 4.65-ounce serving of Tony's Microwave 4-Cheese Garlic Bread cost $1.69. It consists of one-half of a very small loaf of French-type bread, sliced lengthwise, and covered with garlic butter, then topped with four kinds of cheeses.

According to the ingredients label, the cheeses (or toppings, as they are listed there) consist of something called Cheese Blend, which contains low moisture part-skim mozzarella cheese, provolone cheese, two different kinds of cheddar cheese and romano cheese.

The only label advertising I could find was the claim that the product is "made with 100 percent real cheese."

Since we had some unhappy experiences with bread heated in the microwave, we decided that this cheese-covered, garlic-laced bread — even though its first name is "microwave" — would be heated in the regular oven.

Well, the longer it heated, the better it smelled, until it reached just the right stage of perfection. The hungry new-teenager couldn't wait to sample it, and discovered when she did that the 4-Cheese Garlic Bread was as delicious as she hoped it would be. Her exact quote was: "Extremely yummy!"

See, all this time I never thought she'd like something that looks like French bread pizza, but without the pizza sauce. I guess my little baby is growing up. And I guess I'll have to buy her some more 4-Cheese Garlic Bread.

P.S. Recently I wrote a column on some new varieties of candy. Since that was before I found TD's, I naturally had to leave them out. Now that I've bought a bag, I thought they deserved a mention.

TD's are chocolate-covered, candy-coated peanut candies from Brach's (similiar to peanut M&Ms, but from another company) that are manufactured in team colors. This is Midland, so of course the team's colors were blue and silver (actually gray) for the Dallas Cowboys.

The candy and the color scheme went over big with all the chocolate lovers and football fans at the office. While blue and silver (gray) are not the most appetizing colors for candy, these fans will do anything for the Pokes, including having blue tongues for a couple of hours.

A 16-ounce bag of TD's in Cowboy colors cost $1.99. The football fans thought they were terrific, but I still like peanut M&Ms better...

Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

DEAR ABBY

Teen says education is best defense against unsafe sex

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "Nervous in New York," who was concerned because condoms were being handed out to schoolchildren. She said it was the same as giving kids permission to have sex.

Van Buren

Well, the truth is, the kids are having sex anyway, and if they aren't educated by their parents (most are not), they will get the information from the kids at school. I've heard many things from my friends about sex that aren't true — like you can't get pregnant the first time.

I am all for sex education in the school, including handing out condoms with the proper instructions on how to use them. Kids are having sex much earlier than their parents did, so we might as well be realistic and educate them. That way, they will be much safer. This is not encouraging sex — it's protecting children.

If this were taught in more schools, we would have fewer pregnancies. Sign me ... 17 AND WELL-INFORMED

DEAR 17: Congratulations. You are better informed than most kids your age. However, everyone — regardless of age — should be aware that no form of birth control is 100 percent foolproof, and no form of protection from sexually transmitted diseases is foolproof either. Abstinence is the only foolproof solution. Trust me.

DEAR ABBY: I am sure you will get many hostile letters regarding your response to "Nervous in New York" and your strong defense of school condom distribution. I, for one, say, "Thank you, Abby!"

As you pointed out, this is a life-and-death issue. Informing our young people of the very real dangers of unprotected sex does not promote promiscuity — it stresses the importance of education over ignorance and emphasizes the responsibilities and consequences of sexual activity.

In this day and age, it is unfortunate that the same caring parents who would give their lives to protect their children and keep them out of harm's way, stick their heads in the sand when it comes to sex. If we truly care about our children's well-being, we have a moral obligation to do all we can to make sure they have the facts they need to make informed, intelligent decisions.

Again, thank you, Abby. I am hopeful your words will help simplify this issue for many concerned parents. — ERIC C. LARSON, LOS ANGELES

DEAR ERIC: Thanks. I needed that.

DEAR ABBY: I was so happy to read the letter in your column from the lady who objected to the hotel clerk announcing her room number loudly enough for everyone in the lobby to hear it.

I have a similar complaint: Why must so many bank clerks loudly count the money the customer receives in a transaction as though they were announcing a train schedule?

I am not hard-of-hearing and would appreciate a little privacy. When I leave the teller's window, I feel as though everyone in the bank knows exactly how much I have in my purse. After all, the person standing behind me in line —or at the next window — could very well be the friendly neighborhood robber.

If you could mention this in your column, perhaps some of these well-meaning bank personnel would see it and remember to modulate their voices. — F.S. IN WEST HILLS, CALIF.

DEAR F.S.: Consider it mentioned, although most bank tellers know better. A thought: People who are hard-of-hearing are inclined to raise their voices. Perhaps the bank teller who speaks louder than is necessary should have his/her hearing tested.

DEAR ABBY: Although I've read your column for many years, I never thought I would have reason to write to you. But after reading about cheap husbands, I had to write.

Several years ago, shortly before Mother's Day, a local store was giving away White Sox T-shirts with every $5 purchase.

Well, guess what my husband gave me for Mother's Day — one of those T-shirts.

I was furious until I had an idea. I took the T-shirt, rewrapped it and gave it to him for Father's Day. (He's still wearing it.) — KAREN IN MUNDELEIN, ILL.

Snappy Joes low in fat

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

For family favorites such as Sloppy Joes, it pays nutritionwise to trade up to a leaner ground meat. To find out how lean the meat is, read the label. The greater the number, the higher the percentage of lean and the lower the amount of fat. Beef that's 85 percent lean is fairly common these days, but you may also find 90 percent or even 95 percent lean beef.

SNAPPY JOES

1 pound lean ground beef
½ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup chopped onion
8-ounce can tomato sauce
½ cup bottled barbecue sauce
1 cup shredded cabbage with carrot (coleslaw mix)
6 toasted hamburger buns, 6 corn tortillas or 6 baked potatoes

In a large skillet cook ground beef, green pepper and onion for 4 to 5 minutes or until beef is no longer pink. Drain off fat. Stir in tomato sauce, barbecue sauce and cabbage. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer, uncovered, for 10 minutes. Spoon about ½ cup meat mixture onto each bun, into each tortilla or over each baked potato. Makes 6 servings.

Nutrition information per serving on bun: 277 cal., 8 g fat, 43 mg chol., 21 g pro., 2 g fiber, 710 mg sodium.

Presenting the U.S. Savings Bonds that money alone can't buy.

There's only one way to get Series HH Savings Bonds: Exchange Series E/EE Savings Bonds and Savings Notes for them.

HH Savings Bonds, of course, offer the security of knowing your investment is backed by the full faith and credit of the United States. They also offer tax advantages.

With HH Bonds, you'll receive interest payments every six months for up to 20 years. That interest is exempt from state and local income taxes, although it's subject to annual federal income tax reporting. If, however, you've deferred reporting the interest earned on your E/EE Bonds, you may continue to do so for up to 20 more years or until you redeem the HH Bond, whichever comes first. Or you can report the accumulated interest when you exchange your E/EE Bonds for HH Bonds.

Ask about the Bonds money alone can't buy, Series HH Bonds, where you bank, or write: U.S. Savings Bonds Division, Department of the Treasury, Box HH, Washington, DC 20226.

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:

★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just wa t to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.
