Mondale will run with Geraldine Ferraro

Walter Mondale

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Walter F. Mondale, an establishment Democrat ready to break with tradition, today announced his choice of a woman — Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York — as his vice presidential running mate, campaign aides said.

The announcement was made at noon at the Minnesota state capitol, four days before the Democratic National Convention begins in San Francisco.

"If selected, I will work very hard for the campaign," Ms. Ferraro told reporters before a Wednesday night speech in San Francisco. She was positively buoyant, but gave no verbal hint of her selection, except to say, "I am glad there is no longer a sign 'White Males Only Need Apply.' It's our time folks."

Mondale's press secretary, Maxine Isaacs, confirmed that Mondale's vice presidential choice arrived early this morning at Mondale's home in North Oaks. Later, campaign sources said Ms. Ferraro had flown from California to Minnesota in a private jet, arriving around dawn.

Without naming Ms. Ferraro, Ms. Isaacs said the assumed vice presidential nominee's family would arrive later in the morning.

If the convention delegates confirm Mondale's choice, Ms. Ferraro would become the first woman vice presidential candidate on a major party ticket. She represents a blue-collar district of Queens in New York.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who campaigned against Mondale in the primaries, said Mondale's apparent decision to select Ms. Ferraro is "a step in the right direction and as far as I'm concerned, it's a victory for the 'rainbow coalition.'" Jackson had dubbed his own campaign the "Rainbow Coalition."

"We've now moved a step closer to realizing a new dream in the Democratic Party," Jackson said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" show. "I must say, overall, I'm quite excited about this new direction."

In New York, John Zaccaro, Ms. Ferraro's husband, said his wife was "terrific," and added: "We're going to do what we have to to win."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., who had endorsed Ms. Ferraro for the ticket, called the New York congresswoman "a great choice." In an interview from Massachusetts, O'Neill said, "I think she'll be a great asset ... to all of us who are running on the Democratic Party (ticket) for office across the nation."

A Ferarro partisan had suggested that Mondale seemed ready to take a gamble with his vice presidential choice, and a new poll hints at the potential new danger for him in his uphill race against President Reagan.

An ABC-Washington Post poll of registered Democrats indicated the presence of a woman on the ticket could be a wash: 15 percent of those surveyed said they would be more likely to vote for Mondale, while 15 percent were less likely to.

The poll, conducted from last Thursday to last Sunday, shows Reagan leading Mondale by 51 percent to 44 percent. A total of 1,005 people were interviewed.

Cisneros: It's business as usual

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

Walter Mondale ended the suspense today and announced who would be his running mate, and San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros was not tapped by the Democratic presidential hopeful.

In Minneapolis, where Mondale lives, an aide to the former vice president announced Wednesday night Mondale had settled on his vice presidential running mate. Mondale, who officially announced his choice at noon today. The aide said Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, D-N.Y., immediately accepted Mondale's invitation.

Ambushed by reporters Wednesday night outside his West San Antonio home, Cisneros said he had talked to Mondale Wednesday night but that he planned to go about business as usual today.

"I don't expect personally to be doing anything other than chairing the city council meeting tomorrow," Cisneros said. "I believe the substance of the vice president's anouncement is his to make, and I want to respect his right to make all the presentations and to set the timetable for whatever he needs to say tomorrow."

Cisneros said he could not disclose details of his conversation with Mondale.

"I did speak with the vice president and assured him that the substance of our discussion would remain between us until he chooses to make his announcement tomorrow in Minnesota," the mayor said.

Earlier Wednesday, Cisneros had already discounted speculation that he would get the nod from Mondale.

"I don't envision that I am going to be selected," said Cisneros.

President cites rescue of park land

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — President Reagan, the target of an unrelenting weeklong attack from environmentalists, declared today that his administration rescued national parks from disrepair and reversed a loss of enthusiasm in the government's conservation efforts.

Hitting the conservation trail for the third consecutive day, the president chose a convention of recreational vehicle operators to issue his most aggressive defense yet of the environmental record that has produced such stiff criticism.

"In recent years, our environmental efforts began to lose some of their energy and direction," the president said in remarks prepared for delivery to the National Campers and Hikers Association.

"Indeed, by the time our administration took office, the federal government had become negligent in its care of our natural heritage," he said. "Our parks had suffered funding declines for maintenance and were in disrepair."

Although Reagan said he was preoccupied during his initial months in office by an economic crisis and by foreign policy matters, he asserted that "even while we moved to address these twin crises we were determined to move quickly and effectively to deal with the federal government's lagging efforts to preserve our environment."

The president addressed the convention at the Beech Bend campground after touring the 54-degree Mammoth Cave at the Mammoth Cave National Park near by.

British dockworkers, backed by other unions, halt cargo

The Associated Press

LONDON — Striking dockworkers voted to block the movement of cargo through nearly all British ports today and were backed by railway and seamen's unions, escalating the nationwide labor strife linked to the four-month-old coal miners' strike.

"If they (the dockworkers) come out for any length of time, the economic recovery will be throttled," Brtain's National Chamber of Commerce said in a statement.

The dock strike began Tuesday as a spinoff from a strike by the National Union of Mineworkers. By Wednesday, it had closed 78 of the nation's 204 ports.

Dockworkers' delegates from the 1.5-million-member Transport and General Workers Union voted at a conference in London Wednesday to try to extend the stoppage to the remaining 126 ports today and Friday.

Port officials said there was a "heavy buildup" of freight traffic today as exporters rushed to move as much cargo as possible before dockers start blocking all freight aboard the ferries. About 80 percent of British trade is by sea and only about 20 percent by air.

"It is our intention wholly to stop the movement of cargo through all ports where we have membership," John Connolly, the union's national docks officer, told reporters after the conference Wednesday. The union represents 13,700 stevedores.

Talks between the union and the National Association of Port Employers broke down Tuesday night. No new talks were scheduled.

The 150,214-member National Union of Railwaymen has instructed its 4,000 members who work in the docks not to cross transport union picket lines to go to work.

The 25,000-member National Union of Seamen told its members not to handle freight aboard the 24 ferries operated by the Sealink company owned by British Rail, the state-owned corporation that runs the nation's rail network.

The 940,312-member General, Municipal, Boilermakers and Allied Trades Union also called out its 1,500 members who work in the docks.

The 78 ports so far closed include those in London, Liverpool, Bristol, Glasgow, Hull, Southampton and the inland port of Manchester, linked to the sea by a ship canal. Together the 78 handle more than two-thirds of all British imports and exports.

Authorities at Dover and Folkestone, the major ferry terminals on the English Channel, reported all services running normally today, aside from the buildup of freight traffic.

Some ferries that normally carry container trucks were blocked in Southampton on England's south coast.

Connolly said the union would try to minimize disruption for ferries carrying vacationers and their autos across the English Channel and other waterways, and passenger ferry services were reported operating normally today.

The chancellor of the exchequer, Nigel Lawson said in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp. Wednesday night that the dock strike coming on top of the coal strike had rattled money markets.

Britain's major commercial banks raised their base lending rates from 10 percent to 12 percent Wednesday, the highest level in two years. Share prices on the London stock market nosedived.

The transport inion ordered the dock strike after the British Steel Corp. hired non-union labor to unload iron ore imports for plants blockaded by striking miners.

In support of the miners, who are protesting plans to close 20 mines and eliminate 20,000 jobs, the transport union had ordered its members not to unload the ore.

The coal strike has split the 183,000-member National Union of Mineworkers. About one-third of the miners have refused to join the walkout on grounds the union's leftist leader, Arthur Scargill, called it without polling union members.

Police reported at least 50 arrests Wednesday when miners tried to block trucks carrying iron ore into steel plants.

Downtown hotel, office complex planned

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A new hotel and office complex that could add 500 jobs to the local economy and help the city attract more convention business may soon be built on county-owned land in downtown Midland.

The proposed $22 million complex, which would include a 12-story, 300-room Crowne Plaza Hotel and two office towers, "would be an enhancement to the downtown area," said County Commissioner Win Brown today. "We've been talking about this for a couple of years."

If negotiations are successfully completed, the county would lease land east of Main Street between Texas and Illinois to La Jolla Investment and Development Co. of La Jolla, Calif. In return, "The county is to be supplied with a considerable amount of office space and parking free of charge," said Brown.

Although Brown cautioned that "We're still in the early talking stage," developer Frank Sipan of La Jolla Investment said today that he hoped to begin construction on the project within two years.

"We're planning a very high-quality luxury business hotel of about 300 rooms," said Sipan, whose partner is William French Smith III, the son of U.S. Attorney General William French Smith II. "I think there's currently an opportunity in the downtown market for a quality hotel. It will complement the other hotels" in attracting business conferences and conventions to Midland.

The complex, which would include conference facilities, an athletic club, retail stores and restaurants on the ground floor, is to be designed by The Legacy Group, an Arlington architecture firm, said Sipan.

"It will work hand in glove with the proposed Performing Arts Center to revitalize the east side of the downtown area," he said.

Once construction begins, Sipan estimated the hotel would be ready to open its doors in 15 months. They plan to build one of the two office towers at the same time as the hotel. The other tower would be constructed later, Sipan said.

Early morning showers bring only trace of rain

.From Staff and Wire Reports

Today's early morning showers may have lifted Midlanders' spirits, but dampened flower beds and messy windshields were about all they brought.

According to the National Weather Service early this morning, a trace of rain, which began around 7 a.m. hadn't changed the 6.3 inches recorded for the year.

Less than a 20 percent chance of isolated evening thunderstorms remains in the forecast for tonight but Friday is expected to bring only partly cloudy skies.

Temperatures should drop into the upper 60s tonight, climbing into the middle 90s Friday.

Tonight's southeasterly winds at 5-10 mph will shift to southerly at 10-20 mph Friday.

Wednesday's high of 95 missed the record high of 106, set in 1964, by 11 degrees. The overnight low of 72 was 17 degrees warmer than 1936's record low of 55 degrees.

STATE

A weak cool front stalled over North and West Texas early today, triggering widespread thunderstorms over the region.

Heaviest storms were reported near Seymour, Gainesville and Athens.

Strong wind and intense lightning were reported north of Athens, in Van Zandt County, around 3 a.m. Slow movement of the storms indicated heavy rainfalls was likely, the National Weather Service said.

Was Lucas Lubbock girl's killer?

The Associated Press

LUBBOCK, Texas — The stepfather of Deborah Sue Williamson, a teenager who was stabbed 17 times in 1975, says his stepdaughter did not die at the hands of convicted murderer Henry Lee Lucas.

Bob Lemons told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal Wednesday that "the Lubbock Police Department is taking advantage of Lucas' willingness to confess to close the case."

Mrs. Williamson, 18, was found stabbed to death on the patio of her south Lubbock home on Aug. 26, 1975. And despite a lengthy investigation, Lubbock police had no clues in the case until Lucas confessed to the slaying May 17.

Lucas has claimed he and traveling companion Ottis Toole killed more than 360 people during a decade-long killing spree. While the pair are suspects in more than 150 cases, Lucas has confessed to several murders law enforcement officers say he didn't commit.

Lucas was indicted for capital murder June 6 in the death of Mrs. Williamson, and the case has not come to trial.

Lemons insists "there is nothing in his (Lucas') statement the way it happened. The time has come that we need to stop this thing" before the case is closed.

In his written statement, Lucas said that, "Ottis (Toole) and I got out of the car and went to the back of the house, I remember sliding the sliding glass door open and went into the house. Ottis came in after I did. A girl came out of the back bedroom of the house. I chased her through the kitchen into the back bedroom, chased her through the house, I stabbed her. She was stabbed several times. I left part of her clothes on her. There was quite a bit of blood around her."

Lemons said Lucas and Toole could not have entered through the glass door. "The door was permanently closed and there was a large piece of furniture in front of it," he said.

He also said Lucas could not have chased Mrs. Williamson through the house because there was no indication of a struggle or chase. Blood was not found inside the house, and a puzzle book, pen and car keys found outside near her body indicate she was leaving the residence when the attack took place.

Lemons claims Lucas never mentioned the outside of the house in his statement, even though the entire incident occurred in the carport and patio areas.

Shortly after Lucas began giving statements in murder cases last year, Lemons took several pictures of Mrs. Williamson to the Montague County Jail, where Lucas was being held.

"Lucas said he didn't know her and had never seen her," he said. "I don't believe Lucas had a thing to do with it. There's a killer free out there."

Lucas has been convicted of four Texas murders, including one in which he received the death penalty.

FERRARO—

Reagan, leaving Washington on a campaign trip to Kentucky today, declined comment on Ms. Ferraro. He said only, "I'm looking forward to running against the Democratic ticket."

Friday, Mondale was to take Ms. Ferraro on a sentimental journey to his hometown of Elmore, Minn., before traveling to Lake Tahoe, Calif., for the weekend. On Monday, Mondale was to fly to San Francisco where convention delegates were expected to nominate him for president on Wednesday.

By making his selection known before the convention, Mondale hoped to head off serious opposition to his own candidacy or his choice of a running mate.

The steam went out of Sen. Gary Hart's challenge to Mondale on Wednesday when Hart said he'd join a Mondale ticket if asked. He wasn't.

Until the last moment, Mayor Dianne Feinstein of San Francisco was a possible choice if a woman were the nominee. When she learned it would not be her — Mondale called those not selected — she said she'd be "delighted" if it were Ms. Ferraro.

Among others on a final list of possible running mates were Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles, a black, Mayor Henry Cisneros of San Antonio, Tex., a hispanic, and Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts.

The choice of Ms. Ferraro, 48, was anything but obvious.

One prominent Mondale supporter, an aide who had been pushing the woman-for-vice president movement along for months, was asked if she was sure it would be Ms. Ferraro. Others aides had confirmed the choice, anonymously, but she pronounced herself only "99.9 percent sure," adding: "I'll believe it when I see her (Ms. Ferraro) standing up there next to Mondale, hands held high."

It is unheard of for a presidential candidate to complete his ticket before his party's convention.

Eight years ago, a struggling conservative, Ronald Reagan, tried to boost his chances for the Republican nomination by announcing his choice of moderate Sen. Richard Schweicker. Reagan lost anyway, to incumbent President Ford.

Four years ago, Reagan waited until the night of his own nomination before choosing George Bush over Ford for the No. 2 spot.

Ms. Ferraro, who is a member of the House Democratic leadership, was endorsed by O'Neill and several prominent congresswomen. She had been the early favorite if the vice presidential choice were a woman. But she was said to have distressed Mondale by suggesting that the only factor in deciding who should be on the ticket should be electoral college votes.

The National Organization for Women and other feminist groups pressed Mondale publicly and privately, and there was fear among Mondale's senior aides that he would appear to be succumbing to pressure groups if he selected Ms. Ferraro. Perhaps in reaction, Mondale aides provided less-than-glowing accounts of her lengthy interview with Mondale at his home in Minnesota.

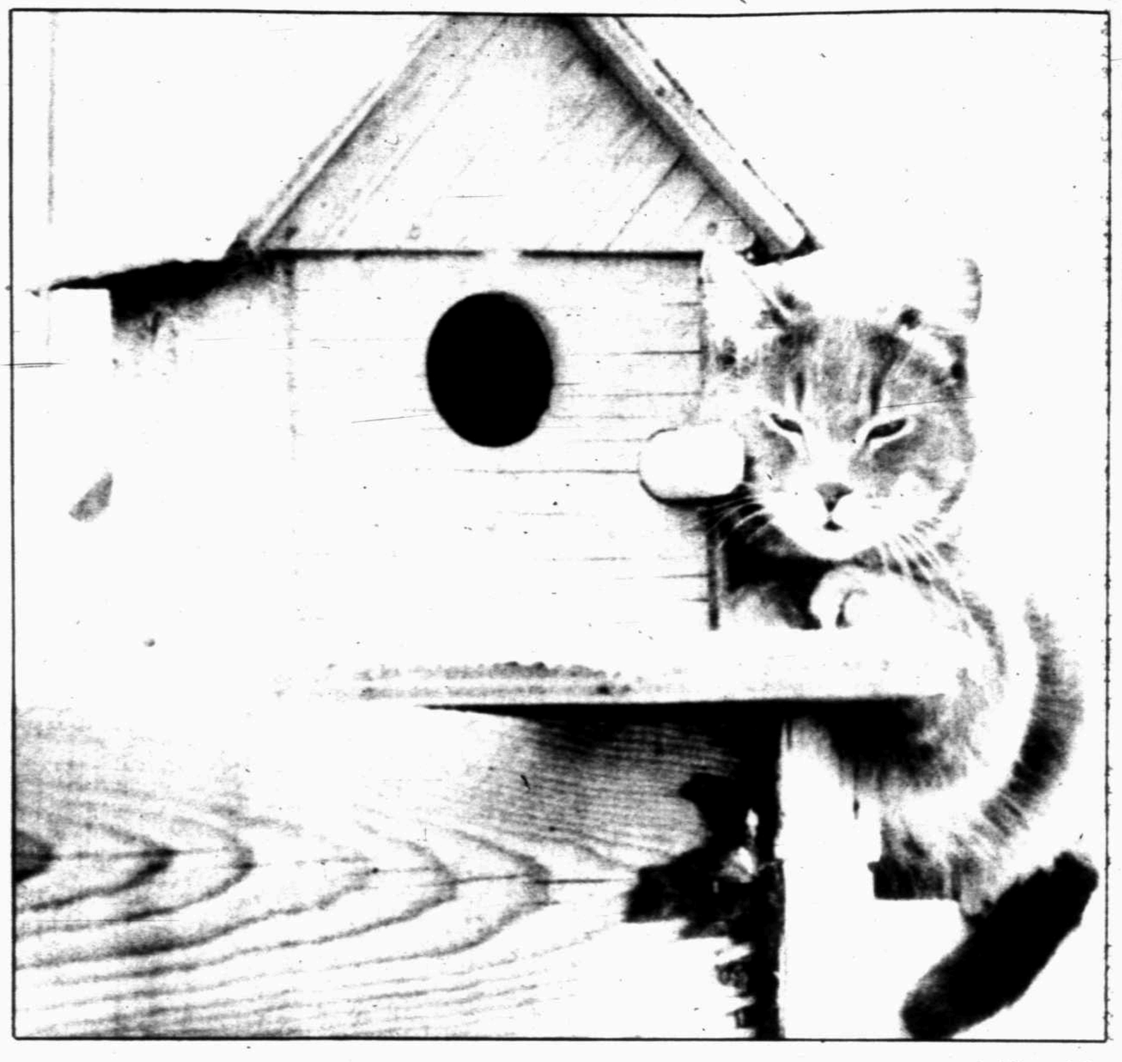

Ms. Ferraro discussed such matters as her family, her health and her finances in a 90-minute meeting with Mondale aide John Reilly on Tuesday. Top Mondale aides met with her husband, as they did with Mrs. Feinstein's.

Campaign chairman James A. Johnson said Mondale made up his mind at about 6 p.m., CDT, Wednesday and telephoned the winner 30 minutes later.

Johnson described Mondale as "very pleased."

Earlier in the day, Mondale said he would not consider Jackson as a running mate because the two were not compatible enough.

In recent interviews, Jackson criticized Mondale for failing to consider him as a potential running mate. Jackson said one reason he was being slighted was "threats to Mondale by a significant number of Jewish leaders."

CISNEROS—

Mondale aides had been conducting a background investigation of Cisneros, an aide said.

Cisneros was asked to provide "personal information on finances and health. That was shipped up to Minnesota today (Wednesday)," said Jim Dublin, the mayor's long-time political and media adviser.

Dublin, who will accompany Cisneros to the Democratic National Convention next week, said Mondale aides have been talking with Cisneros since the two met at Mondale's Minnesota home on July 4.

According to sources in the Mondale campaign and news reports, Cisneros remained on a shortened list of vice presidential prospects Wednesday after another Texan, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, was dropped by Mondale.

Jack Martin of Austin, one of Bentsen's closest political advisors, told the Associated Press, Bentsen "himself had taken himself out of consideration."

The list reportedly includes Sen. Gary Hart, Ms. Ferraro and San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein, plus Cisneros.

Cisneros' staff fielded telephone calls Wednesday from news organizations nationwide. Television stations in Mexico and Spain also were seeking interviews, they said.

According to Mondale aides, the candidate was much impressed by his interview with the mayor of the nation's 10th largest city.

"I am honored by my consideration. I have not sought nor do I seek now this position. I don't expect in the final analysis to be selected," Cisneros said.

A number of Democratic politicians, who asked not to be identified, suggested that Cisneros would bring several assets to the ticket as a vice presidential candidate.

Being a Hispanic, Cisneros would appeal to minority voters, they said. In addition, he is seen as appealing to many of the younger voters who favored Hart over Mondale during the primaries.

Cisneros would be an asset in Texas, the nation's third largest state and one which has always been carried by Democrats when a Democrat won the White House.

The San Antonion Light reported Wednesday that Cisneros' interview with Mondale went so well that some Mondale aides say choosing Cisneros "could be the 'master stroke' Mondale needs to 'electrify the electorate' and revive his sagging showing in the polls against President Reagan."

Dwayne Holman, an aide to Gov. Mark White who headed Mondale's primary campaign in Texas, agreed that Cisneros would be a plus.

"Speaking from a strictly provincial point of view, he would be a big help in Texas," Holman said.

Two major negatives were attached to Cisneros by political observers: His youth and his lack of party experience.

At 37, he is just two years older than the constitutional requirement for a president or vice president.

Cisneros has been active in Democratic Party politics for only about 18 months, and he never has sought a partisan office. He won three nonpartisan races for city council and two for mayor.

REAGAN—

"Make no mistake, the American land belongs to the American people, and we intend to keep it open for the people," Reagan said. "We believe, in short, that you can be a friend of the people at the same time that you are a friend of the land."

Reagan told his audience that past administrations had tried to deal with energy shortages by attempting to ration gas "and trying to keep you from using your recreational vehicles or RVs. At one point, the Department of Energy even proposed a Sunday ban on motor boating....

"The proposal symbolized a government that had grown arrogant and intrusive, a government that believed the American people should be kept away from their own lakes, rivers and parks," he contended.

"Forgive me, but our administration takes a different view," he said. "We believe that the environment includes people, and that they, now and always, have a right to enjoy the American land."

He said that with his energy policy, "we should never again face a severe shortage of gasoline...but if we do face a gas shortage, this administration will never respond by trying to keep the American from enjoying the great outdoors."

In the speech, Reagan said there had been a decrease in power plant sulphur emmission despite an increase in coal-fired electric generation capacity during the past 14 years.

He also said his administration was acting to combat water pollution, to reduce lead poisoning, to research the causes of acid rain, to protect wetlands, to preserve wild life and to refurbish national parks.

"Like everyone who has ever seen them, we view our national parks as the crown jewels of the American land." He said his administration reversed a four-year decline in appropriations for the upkeep of national parks and began a $1 billion improvement effort.

Repairs drive some Texas drivers crazy

HOUSTON (AP) — The irritation of constant repairs being done on Houston freeways can prompt even the most obedient motorists to shout obscenities, pull pistols and hurl bottles at freeway workers and police officers hired to protect them, state officials agree.

Richard Christie, a spokesman for the Texas highway department, says the "never-ending cycle" of repairs seems to kindle aggression that is out of proportion to the problem.

Some drivers have jumped curbs, scattering workers, and then roared away, laughing, he said, while others have pretended they were playing in a high-speed bullfight.

"This might in itself be more dangerous (than police work) because when I'm out there, it's just my frail, 250-pound self trying to stop that two-ton piece of steel moving 80 miles per hour," Tom Rogers, a police sergeant who guards freeway crews while off duty, told the Houston Post.

Rogers recalls early one Saturday morning he was standing beside a freeway lane blocked off with barricades when one driver accelerated and headed at him.

"He did it on purpose because he was a full lane over," Rogers said.

Rogers said he ran for the median. As the car passed, it clipped his right hand and scraped the skin from his knuckles. The driver never stopped, he said.

"They think it's funny 'cause there's nothing I can do. I'm usually out on foot and my car is running distance away," he said.

In recent years, authorities said, several workers have been killed. Thirteen highway workers died between 1980 and 1983. This year to date, two workers have been injured.

Mattox wants plane, two vans, six cars

AUSTIN (AP) — Despite lawmakers' cries that agency heads hold the line on spending, Attorney General Jim Mattox has submitted a budget that calls for an 89 percent increase in his operation over the next two years, the Austin American-Statesman reported today.

In a 300-page document sent to the Legislative Budget Board last week, Mattox asked for a $750,000 airplane and a 10 percent pay hike for his employees, the newspaper said.

Mattox asked for money to create a division, and, in most instances, to double or triple the size of his divisions.

"Any agency that comes to us asking for increases better have a good excuse," Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, told the American-Statesman.

"In the case of the attorney general, it's going to be more difficult to justify trying to hire more personnel for prosecution when we gave him such a tremendous increase the last time."

Rudd and House Speaker Gib Lewis sent agency heads a letter in March urging them to prepare no-growth budgets for the 1986-87 biennium. The letter suggested "that you not include any considerations for inflation, salary changes, or growth."

Earlier this month, at a close of a special session where lawmakers passed a $4.6 billion tax bill, Gov. Mark White repeated his call for a "tightly drawn, bare bones" state budget.

Rudd said Mattox would have "real problems with the airplane" and that "with the tight money situation, we have a real problem with any new construction."

In March 1983, two months after Mattox took office, lawmakers gave him an emergency appropriation of nearly $1 million. They also increased his 1984-1985 budget 40 percent.

Armed with a two-year budget of $37.5 million, the agency more than doubled the staff of 480 inherited from Gov. Mark White, the former attorney general.

Mattox's budget request asks for a staff of 1,515 — an increase of 500 from the 1984 fiscal year that ends Aug. 31. It also asks for five group managers at $62,000 a year. In his current 1984-1985 budget, Mattox has five group manager positions funded at $55,000 a year, but only one of those positions is filled.

The administration division, which doubled in size between 1983 and 1984, would be one of the chief beneficiaries of Mattox's request. Its current $4.5 million budget would increase to $8.9 million in 1986, and staffing would jump from 292 to 369.

In addition, Mattox is asking for a $750,000 airplane and $1.8 million to buy equipment for the administration division. Proposed purchases include a forklift, an elevator, 50 word processors, 40 personal computers, a video cassette recorder, a printing press, two vans and six cars.

Other divisions seeking budget increases in Mattox's request are enforcement, taxation, consumer protection, antitrust and the labor, agriculture, and housing section.

Requested increases include:

— the enforcement division, from 63 to 130 employees;

— the prosecutor assistance group, from 3½ jobs to 14½ jobs; and — the taxation division staff from 34 to 73 persons.

'Extinct' frog found in Australia

A frog thought to be extinct was discovered recently in Eungella National Park, Queensland, Australia. The platypus frog, named for its platypus-like swimming action, is said to be the only truly aquatic frog that spends its whole life in the water.

The female swallows her eggs and raises the young in her stomach, the only vertebrate to do so.

Appeals court upholds murder convictions

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has upheld the capital murder convictions of four men who were sentenced to death in separate cases.

Ruling Wednesday, the court rejected 31 objections raised by G.W. Green, convicted in Montgomery County in the shooting death of John Denson, who was gunned down at his home while his wife and daughter were forced to lie on the floor nearby.

According to court records, the family was at home on Nov. 19, 1976, when Green and three other men forced their way into the house. Despite pleading with his assailants, Denson was shot three times, twice through the heart.

Green confessed to taking part in the robbery but said another man shot Denson. He was convicted and given the death penalty.

In rejecting his appeal, Judge W.C. Davis said the facts of the case proved that Green had responsibility in Denson's death.

"(Green) was a participant in the robbery...(He) entered the house armed with a gun...The evidence is sufficient to prove that (Green) and his co-defendants planned and carried out their plan to steal guns from the Densons," the judge wrote.

"We conclude that a rational trier of fact could have found the essential elements of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt and that the evidence reflects no reasonable hypothesis other than the appellant is responsible..."

The court also upheld the Harris County conviction of Jack Harry Smith, who was found guilty of killing a man during the robbery of a convenience store.

Witnesses testified that Smith shot Roy A. Deputter during the Jan. 6, 1978 robbery, then fled.

In his appeal, Smith's lawyer contended that the trial court erred in overruling motions he made after being told that a co-defendant had decided to cooperate with prosecutors after five jurors already had been selected in Smith's trial.

But the appeals court, noting that the prosecutor informed the Smith's lawyer as soon as he learned of the co-defendant's decision, rejected the argument.

Murderer 21st person executed since 1976

JACKSON, Ga. (AP) — Convicted killer Ivon R. Stanley went calmly to his death in the electric chair today minutes after the U.S. Supreme Court refused to stop his execution for the robbery-killing of a man who was buried alive after pleading for his life.

As Stanley became the 21st person to be executed since the Supreme Court restored the death penalty in 1976, two convicted murderers in Florida, originally scheduled to die at sunrise today, were locked in isolation cells under a last-minute reprieve.

A hearing was set for 9:30 a.m. EDT today in Florida for Jimmy L. Smith, who killed a North Florida mother and daughter. He and David L. Washington, a triple-murderer from Miami, awaited the outcome of appeals that delayed their executions Wednesday.

The slightly built Stanley, 28, was convicted of the 1976 murder of Clifford Floyd, a Bainbridge insurance collector who was beaten with a shovel and hammer and buried alive.

Stanley walked quietly into the execution chamber at 12:07 a.m. in the Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Center after refusing last rites and a final statement.

About a half hour earlier, the Supreme Court had denied Stanley's request for a stay, reaffirming a decision by the Georgia Board of Pardons and Paroles and a three-judge appeals panel in Atlanta.

Stanley watched closely as six guards attached the leather straps that bound his arms and legs to a wooden chair.

Asked if he had any final statement, he shook his head. Asked if he wished to have a prayer said for him, again he shook his head.

At 12:15 a two-minute jolt of more than 2,000 volts coursed through his body, and he was pronounced dead nine minutes later, his fists clenched as 11 witnesses watched.

Stanley, who had worked at a Decatur County sawmill, was the second person put to death in Georgia since 1964 and the first black in more than 20 years. The U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976. John Eldon Smith, a white inmate, was executed last December for killing a newlywed couple.

Wallace Cato, then district attorney and now a judge in Decatur County, said Floyd begged for his life when he was robbed by two men and was "still trying to talk" as they buried him in a shallow grave.

Stanley had maintained that Joseph E. Thomas, now on Georgia's death row for the same crime, was the killer.

The condemned man twice refused to see a minister Wednesday. He was not religious "and made no pretense about it," said Fred Steeple, a prison spokesman for the prison system.

"He says he's not guilty, and I believe he's not guilty," Stanley's grandmother, Eliza Yulee, said Wednesday after visiting her grandson, who she said was in good spirits and was reminiscing about his childhood.

About 50 death penalty opponents and members of Stanley's family met Wednesday night in Atlanta to pray for him. After a church service, the crowd moved to the steps of the state Capitol across the street where they held a 20-minute demonstration.

Empty boxcars may have caused collision

McBEE, S.C. (AP) — Empty boxcars parked near a crossing blocked the view for a gasoline truck driver who drove into the path of an Amtrak passenger train, killing two people and injuring five others in the ensuing explosion and fire, a state investigator says.

The Amtrak Silver Star, en route from Tampa, Fla., to New York, was traveling 65 mph Wednesday when it smashed into the tanker crossing the tracks at a detoured route, which had no lights or gates, officials said.

The truck driver, John Coker, 39, of Coward, S.C., and the train engineer, Earl Pate, 60, of Hamlet, N.C., were killed, and the train's fireman and four of the 309 passengers aboard were injured, officials said.

The train was blackened by flames from the truck loaded with 8,900 gallons of gasoline, which burned for more than seven hours.

It was the second fatal collision between an Amtrak train and a truck in South Carolina in a week. Pate had also been engineering the Silver Star on July 4 when the train collided with a pickup truck near Elgin, killing a man and woman in the truck, The State newspaper of Columbia reported today.

On Saturday, an Amtrak train derailed in northwestern Vermont, killing five people.

Officials from Amtrak, Seaboard Systems Rail, which employs the train crews, and the National Transportation Safety Board were trying to determine what caused Wednesday's accident, but said an investigation would not be completed for several weeks.

Highway Patrol Trooper E.C. Liles, who investigated the accident, said he concluded the parked rail cars hampered the vision from the crossing.

"I would have to say that vision was obscured by them. By the time the truck's driver saw the train, it was too late," Liles said.

But Owen Pride, a Seaboard spokesman, said the truck driver failed to stop before crossing the tracks as required by state law. "We believe that if he had pulled up short of the track and stopped, he could have seen the train," he said.

When asked about the lack of lights and signals at the crossing, a detour for busy S.C. 151, Pride said, "The standard railroad crossing markings are there which require vehicles to stop.... I do not see where it's obstructed for a safe driver."

FBI hunting for 'con man' in crime spree

WASHINGTON (AP) — A street-savvy "con man" wanted for questioning in a five-state crime spree may have left the Midwest to escape intense publicity, say FBI officials who have made him a special addition to their 10 most-wanted list.

Alton Coleman, 28, was named Wednesday as to the list of most-wanted fugitives. He is only the 10th person in the 34-year history of the list to warrant its expansion beyond 10 names.

Coleman has been charged with murder by local authorities and kidnapping by the FBI in the killing of Vernita Wheat, a 9-year-old Kenosha, Wis., girl whose body was found June 19 in Waukegan, Ill., Coleman's hometown.

Assistant FBI Director Oliver Revell said Coleman was last seen in Toledo, Ohio, on July 7. He said the manhunt was being spread "nationwide because we think there is a distinct possibility that the glare of publicity has been so intense in that area that he may well go elsewhere."

Revell told a news conference that Coleman is wanted for questioning about four murders, possibly five, including the case of a missing Gary, Ind., woman.

He said Coleman is linked "by eyewitnesses and other evidence" to 10 crimes, beginning in February in North Chicago, Ill., and stretching through Wisconsin, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio.

Revell said Coleman has shown "cunning" and a strong sense of survival and has in the past gone into a residence and stayed three or four days.

"If he believes it is safe, he will be moving," Revell said, "and he might well move to other areas."

Coleman is black and so have been all his alleged victims, except the most recent — Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Duvenbach. They were unharmed after their 1981 silver-grey Chevrolet Citation was stolen in Toledo on July 7. The FBI is still searching for that car.

Coleman, who is 5-feet-8 inches tall and weighs 145 pounds, is believed to be traveling with 21-year-old Debra Denise Brown, his companion for the last two years. She faces several local charges and is wanted by the FBI as a material witness in the abduction of the Wheat girl.

Coleman and his girlfriend are wanted for questioning in the weekend deaths of Virginia Temple, 30, and her 10-year-old daughter, Rachael, whose bodies were found Saturday in a crawl space of their Toledo home. The daughter had been raped and strangled.

Heart applicants being studied

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Although they are far away from choosing the next artificial heart recipient, officials at the University of Utah Medical Center have confirmed that "six or seven" applicants are being studied closely.

The center has received more than 20 inquiries about receiving the plastic device first implanted in retired dentist Barney Clark 19 months ago. Clark survived until March 23, 1983.

The Food and Drug Administration last month approved a request by Dr. William DeVries to perform a second experimental implant on a patients healthier than Clark at the time of his surgery.

DeVries is the only surgeon authorized by the FDA to perform artificial heart implant surgery in humans.

Two guilty of robbing courier

SEATTLE (AP) — A U.S. Customs agent and a former agent have pleaded guilty to robbing two money couriers in British Columbia and illegally bringing the money into the United States.

Agent Darryl W. Archer, 42, and former agent Gayle Du Wayne Kindred, 48, face 30 to 40 years in prison for their guilty pleas Tuesday to the theft of $700,000 in Canadian currency.

A judge said he would wait for a probation report before accepting a plea bargain that prevents the defendants from being extradited to face charges in Canada. Sentencing was set for Sept. 7.

The kidnap and robbery of two couriers took place May 22.

Juvenile 'penalized to maximum'

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Correction officials say a 17-year-old boy was "penalized to the very maximum in terms of human relationships" by being kept in isolation for a year because of conflicting laws.

Brian Wingate eventually pleaded guilty to wounding his mother with a shotgun, but he was separated from all other prisoners from May 4, 1983, until May 16, 1984, as his case lay dormant.

John McLagan, a state corrections spokesman, said in a St. Paul Dispatch & Pioneer Press story Wednesday that Wingate was caught between a law requiring separation of juveniles certified as adults from other juveniles, and one ordering jailers to keep adults from those under 18.

Arm worth $25,000 missing

BURLINGAME, Calif. (AP) — Police are searching for a missing arm worth $25,000.

John Lambert's artificial arm was taken from his apartment on July 6, Burlingame police Lt. Gary Missel said.

Lambert told police that the arm, described as an advanced prosthetic device which operates on the user's muscle impulses, was kept in a locked aluminum case.

Missel said the burglar may have assumed the case contained a video cassette recorder.

Lambert, who lost his right arm below the elbow in a motorcycle accident four years ago, has been using another artificial limb, but it is far less sophisticated than the missing arm, Missel said.

Children removed from home

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Two children were placed in a temporary home after police investigating child abuse reports found the house teeming with cockroaches.

The children, ages 3 and 4, were placed at Columbus Home, a temporary home for children, while their parents were cited to appear in Knox County Juvenile Court, police said Wednesday.

Police Lt. Jim Winston said the children apparently were staying in a closed, dark hot bedroom that contained one bed soaked with urine and feces.

"I was shocked. There were bugs on the ceilings, on the walls, on the furniture. You couldn't walk without stepping on brown cockroaches," Winston said.

Minister objects to library's videos

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — A minister says he may oppose a bond issue for the city's public library because teen-agers are allowed to check out R-rated videocassettes with parental consent.

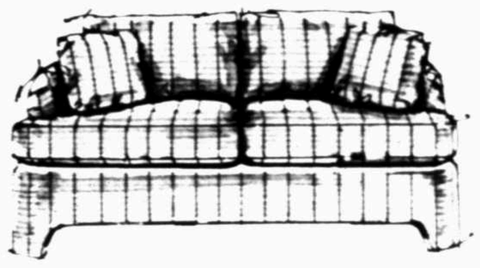

"I'm basically in favor of a bond issue, but I believe our money is being used incorrectly if restricted materials are allowed in the hands of youngsters," said the Rev. Steven Jamison of the South Tacoma Assembly of God. "The primary way the public can police this system is through the purse strings if things are not changed."

Youths 14 to 17 years old can obtain an annual "media responsibility card" which, if signed by their parents, allows them to check out movie cassettes rated G, PG, or R. Younger children are ineligible for the card.

A good century!

In the community 20 miles east of here, our good neighbors are having a noteworthy week-long celebration — and with good cause. This is Martin County's Centennial Celebration and residents are understandably excited.

Stantonites are observing the first 100 years of their county's existence with a variety of activities including an Old Settler's parade, fiddler's contest, beard-growing contest, black-powder shooting competition, and numerous other events.

Many of the events center around the heritage of the community and that's as it should be. If a community fails to cherish its past and to strive to preserve its traditions, the past is quickly forgotten — and with it, a way of life that has faded away.

Stanton is steeped in history. It was founded in 1881 by an order of priests and friars from Kansas known as the Carmelites. At first the community was called Grelton and was just a section house along the Texas & Pacific Railway Co. tracks.

But the Carmelites renamed the community Marienfeld, which in German means Field of Mary. Slowly, the community grew and in 1890 was again renamed — this time in honor of President Abraham Lincoln's Secretary of War, Edwin M. Stanton.

Agriculture is a big part of Stanton's history, just as it and oil are a big part of the history of this entire region. They molded — even made possible — the way of life we all share here.

But beyond the work ethic the residents of Stanton and Martin County have much to focus on in their centennial celebration. As motorists approach Stanton on Interstate 20, they're greeted by a billboard that proudly proclaims the city "home of 3,000 friendly people — and a few old soreheads!"

We have to admit we're not familiar with the soreheads (even though we undoubtedly have a few here, too), but after sharing this part of the state with the fine folks of Stanton for the best part of a century, we have to concur with the claim to friendly people. Stantonites are friendly people!

Congratulations to Martin County residents on their centennial observance. We're looking forward to the next 100 years as their neighbors and hope they are, too!

Prophets of doom

One would think that the figures released last Friday by the U.S. Department of Labor should be cause for celebration. After all, the national civilian unemployment rate of 7.1 percent is at its lowest ebb since April 1980. This second consecutive sharp drop in the monthly jobless rate demonstrates the Reagan economic recovery is proceeding apace. Several experts even suggest that full employment is possible by the end of next year.

But some crepehangers, who also double as economic analysts, view this good news with alarm. These prophets of doom say the record number of Americans drawing paychecks actually endangers the economy because too many dollars are chasing too few goods. Full employment, they add, would strain the nation's productive capacity and reignite inflation.

Got that? The doomsters are suggesting that unemployment is actually beneficial as a safety valve because it prevents the economy from becoming too successful for its own good. Otherwise, they contend, the Federal Reserve Board is compelled to raise interest rates to restrain persons from making foolish purchases such as homes and automobiles.

Of course if you follow this reasoning to its logical conclusion then the Great Depression must have been a far better time than we have been led to believe. In fact, the 25 percent unemployment rate during the early 1930s, combined with the restricted money supply, should have put the American economy in the pink.

Granted, millions of persons were on the verge of starvation, mortgage foreclosures were commonplace, and families lived in tar-paper shacks by the railroad tracks. Then again, there was no danger of U.S. businesses being unable to keep up with a burgeoning consumer demand. Nor were there any shortages that drove up wages and the price of goods.

Oh well, you can't have everything. Can you?

Another View:

Seeing bicycles

Bicycle riding is one of summer's most popular activities, especially for children, but it is also one of the most nerve-wracking for motorists trying to dodge small-frys darting about carelessly on bikes without lights or reflectors on dark, often busy, streets and roads.

Youngsters do not realize that a two-ton car or a 30-ton truck cannot stop on a dime.

Many of them seem to think that because they can see the cars and trucks the drivers of cars and trucks can see them on their dark little bicycles.

They do not realize that cars and trucks have headlights and taillights and often sidelights as well while a dark bicycle with a little boy or girl on it is just a flitting shadow.

In most cases, it might as well be invisible — especially if the rider is zigzagging back and forth across the street daring cars to hit him.

If the kids don't think, parents should.

More than 250,000 bicycle accident injuries occur yearly. More than 1,200 of these accidents are fatal.

The awful bump of a car or truck hitting a child on a bike and the sight of the youngster, bleeding and in pain, on the pavement is hard to forget.

The sight of a fatal accident involving a child on a bike is impossible to forget.

Parents may be able to cut the odds of such accidents by equipping their children's bikes with lights and reflectors and encouraging them not to take foolish chances in traffic.

Soviet tank didn't pass Customs

WASHINGTON — Did the U.S. Customs Service stumble onto a cloak-and-dagger operation that might have delivered a Soviet super-tank into U.S. hands? Customs officials say it ain't so, but the suspicion lingers that they have blown a secret caper.

Jack Anderson

The facts surrounding the mystery are being kept under wraps by the government, and that lends credence to the theory that it involved an intelligence operation. A federal judge has sealed court records in the case, but my associates John Dillon and Donald Goldberg have learned some of the suppressed details. The story sounds like a John Le Carre movie directed by Mack Sennett.

It all began more than two years ago, when the Defense Intelligence Agency tried to figure out a way to smuggle a Soviet T-72 super-tank to the West. The DIA wanted to study the tank's gun barrel, armor plating and infrared sensors.

Israel, which often turns over captured Soviet-made weapons to the Pentagon, came close to snagging a T-72 in Lebanon, when one of the tanks bogged down in the mud. But it was in Syrian territory, and the Israelis had to leave it behind.

The Kremlin's meddling in the Persian Gulf war gave the DIA another opportunity. The Soviets began shipping T-72s to Iraq.

The problem of intercepting the tanks en route to the war zone remained to be solved. Enter Leonard Berg, owner of a New York security company, and Solomon Schwartz, a consultant to the firm. The latter has close ties to the intelligence community.

Schwartz also had contact with a top Polish general through a friend who was close to the general. This general was high enough in the Polish communist hierarchy to get control of a T-72.

Schwartz traveled back and forth to Warsaw to arrange the secret deal. In exchange for his help in hijacking the tanks, the Polish general wanted money deposited in a Swiss bank account (protection for himself and his family if and when he defected) and a cut of another weapons deal.

The details are still sketchy on how the two Soviet tanks were supposed to be stolen, but one source believes they were to be diverted on their way to the battlefront in Iraq.

The other arms deal, in which the general was promised a secret share, was the sale of police weapons to Mexico. It included several thousand weapons to be picked up in this country, Great Britain and Belgium.

According to competent sources, Schwartz and Berg hired a pilot to deliver the arms to Mexico, flying from New York to London, then on to Brussels — and Warsaw.

But unbeknownst to Schwartz and Berg, their pilot was a customs informant, and he tipped off officials to the arms shipment. Customs decided the weapons weren't destined for Mexico, but for Poland. So they seized the cargo in New York.

Customs' efforts to untangle the mystery took on the flavor of the Keystone Kops. They got a search warrant for Berg's company — but for the wrong floor. While one agent kept the employees at bay, another hurriedly found a judge to correct the error on the warrant.

The public may never know whether it was a bona fide intelligence operation, as defense attorneys claim, or if Schwartz and Berg were a couple of rogue spooks out for a fast buck, as customs claims. The case is now under the Classified Information Procedures Act, which means those involved are forbidden to discuss it.

However, sources close to the case say Schwartz and Berg believed they were working on a legitimate undercover plan to get a Soviet tank. They discussed the situation beforehand with at least one DIA agent and an FBI man who specializes in Polish intelligence.

The FBI agent would make only this Delphic comment: "The government has a case and the other situation, I believe, has its case."

"We're going to say the pilot was just a flunky and wasn't told the whole plan in order to protect the interests of the United States," Schwartz's attorney said.

But the prosecutor, David Kirby, said, "If the government had authorized this in some way, it is doubtful we would authorize a prosecution."

As interest rates continue to rise, with signs that the prime will go as high as 15 percent by the end of the year, the squabbling economists are in such deep philosophical disagreement that they can't decide what to do about the situation.

The Treasury experts blame everything on the fear of inflation, and say the Fed's erratic management of the money supply in recent years is the reason for the financial market's uncertainty.

The Fed has its own singleminded idea of what's to blame: the huge federal budget deficits. Only when they are brought down will interest rates fall, the Fed insists. Its economists refuse to assume any of the blame.

Meanwhile, the patient — the nation's economy — is fast approaching rigor mortis.

Burger Court took 'mild steps'

WASHINGTON — A cliche more frequently uttered than demonstrated is that the Supreme Court follows the election returns. Actually, sometimes election returns respond to the Court. The electorate's recent rightward movement may have been in part a reaction against Court decisions considered triumphs of ideology over reasonableness, and manifestations of a Washington impulse to fine-tune society. However, the electorate reacted more moderately to the Warren Court's activism than some persons who should know better have reacted to the Burger Court's few mild steps back.

George F. Will

Perhaps fatigue at the end of term, when decisions pour from the Court like beer from a bottle, explains why Justice Brennan, dissenting in the "exclusionary rule" case, became shrill.

The rule, designed to deter deliberate police misconduct, excludes from trials evidence obtained illegally. The decision that detonated Brennan merely allowed admission of evidence obtained under a search warrant defective through no fault of the police. The police were acting in good faith, hence the "good faith" exception.

Responding, Brennan declared the Fourth Amendment dead — although the Amendment was more than a century old when (in 1914) the Court began to wring from it the exclusionary rule which did not become rococo until the 1960s. Furthermore, not even the "good faith" exception to the rule (a judge-made exception to a judge-made rule) is fully established — and even if it ever is, much of the rule will remain.

Justice Stevens, also dissenting, said the Bill of Rights — the whole caboodle — should be renamed because it is now a mere "honor code." But Laurence Tribe, an excitable Harvard law professor, reached the highest note on the register of panic about the Burger Court. He said that it is a fitting "metaphor" that the Statue of Liberty "was in shackles and being dismantled" as the Court's term ended, because "in one sphere after another, the Court has affirmed the almost boundless authority of government over the individual and of the executive over the other branches."

Now, that is not just false, it is silly. This term's most important ruling, involving Memphis firemen, curtailed government power (of courts) to impose particular results at the expense of individuals' rights. That is, the Court overturned another court's abrogation of seniority rights to preserve hiring gains achieved for minorities through affirmative-action quotas.

The Court blocked the use of government (again, courts) by individuals to prevent Pawtucket, Rhode Island, from doing what the majority of Pawtucket individuals have favored for generations: putting a creche in the Christmas display on public property.

Many persons who criticize Burger's Court for favoring "government" against "the individual" — a muddying analysis — love the Grove City College decision. The Court again limited government power — the power of executive-branch bureaucrats construing Congress' intent. That is, the Court gave a narrower construction than the executive branch had to Congress' intent in a sex-discrimination statute. Congress may now counter the Court by changing the law to expand the power of the executive branch to regulate colleges.

The Court paused (while dismantling liberty) to expand the right of journalists to cover jury selections, and to strike down a government ban on editorializing by public broadcasters. The Court's liberal critics have applauded the Court for affirming the power of government (state legislatures and Congress) to override First Amendment "freedom of association" claims. The Court affirmed the use of state and federal anti-discrimination statutes to compel the admission of women to private organizations (the Jaycees, an Atlanta law firm).

The Burger Court's supposed "counter-revolution" in favor of government, and especially the executive, was not visible just 12 months ago, when the New York Times headline summation of the Court's year was: "Forceful Term of Supreme Court Puts Reins on Congress and Reagan." The Court had just affirmed the 1983 abortion ruling, had unanimously overturned the Reagan administration's rescinding of the requirement for automobile airbags or automatic seatbelts, and had ruled 8-1 that the IRS could deny tax-exempt status to Bob Jones University and other racially discriminatory private schools.

No Warren Court decision was as radical in its consequences, or in its exercise of raw judicial power, as the Burger Court's abortion decision. No significant Warren Court decision — about defendants' rights, school integration, reapportionment or anything else — has been overturned by the Burger Court.

A decision this term concerning travel was the one Tribe emphasizes as evidence of the Court's affirming "almost unbounded authority" of the executive. Did the Reagan administration in restricting travel to Cuba exceed the authority granted by Congress? The Court says no, but if the administration, and now the Court, misconstrued Congress' intent, Congress can quickly make its mind clear.

One decision did confer what Tribe calls "almost unbounded authority" on government. The Court affirmed an extraordinary "eminent domain" power claimed by Hawaii's legislature in seizing private property. The lawyer for the state legislature? Professor Tribe.

ART BUCHWALD

Selling farm to get 'access'

Nathan the Innocent was a good citizen who knew nothing about the American Political System. All he wanted to do was get someone to stop a chemical plant from dumping toxic wastes in his cow pasture. He wrote to the EPA, his congressman, his senator and the president of the United States.

Art Buchwald

EPA replied they would look into the matter some day.

His congressman wrote that if he was re-elected he would stop the dumping.

His senator said he would forward his letter to the EPA.

And the president thanked Nathan for supporting his policy in Central America.

"Why don't you go to Washington yourself, Nathan?" his wife pleaded. "Then they will listen to you."

Nathan the Innocent bought a ticket on "People Express" and flew to Washington. He put on a suit and tie and went to the Environmental Protection Agency. The receptionist told him everyone was in an important meeting and suggested he come back in three months.

Nathan then went to see his congressman and was turned over to a summer intern who didn't know what toxic waste was because he was majoring in Chinese literature.

He then went to see his senator. The receptionist said the senator was out of town but gave him ten campaign bumper stickers which she suggested he distribute to his friends.

Finally, Nathan went to the White House. He asked to see the president to discuss his cow pasture. Since he wasn't violent they took Nathan in an unmarked car to St. Elizabeth's Hospital for observation.

He was placed in a locked hospital room with a Washington lobbyist who was suffering from deep depression. It seemed a bill he worked on to make the MX launching pad into tax shelters had failed to pass.

Nathan told his story to the lobbyist who said, "You are really an innocent. You can't come to Washington and just speak to anyone here. What you need is Access."

"What is Access?"

"Access is the grease that opens doors in Washington."

"How do I get this Access?" Nathan wanted to know.

"You make political contributions to the people who can help you. You can donate directly to your congressman, your senator or the president, and indirectly by joining 'clubs' that have been set up to get around how much you can give the candidates. The more you donate the more Access you will have."

"Doesn't that get expensive?" Nathan asked.

"Good government doesn't come cheap."

A few days later the psychiatrists decided, although Nathan was neurotic about toxic wastes, he wasn't a danger to the community.

He went back to his motel and wrote out checks to his congressman, senator, the president, and clubs such as "Citizens for a Better America," "The Fund for Honest Elections," "Americans for the Little Guy," and the "President's Golden Circle."

In two days he found all doors were open to him and everyone listened sympathetically to his problems and said they would get on it right away. He was even invited to the White House to watch the president issue a new EPA postage stamp, with Anne Burford Gorsuch's picture on it.

Nathan the Innocent came home in triumph and told his wife, "The chemical company will never be allowed to dump toxic wastes in the cow pasture again."

"Good," said his wife.

"The bad news is I had to sell the farm to stop them."

"Why?" she asked.

"It was the only way I could raise the money to get any Access."

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1862, Congress authorized the Medal of Honor.

Five years ago: The Carter administration conceded that the nation's economy was headed for a recession — something most other forecasters had been predicting for months.

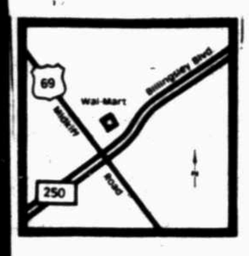

One year ago: Los Angeles attorney Robert Steinberg, who claimed to have "sex videotapes" of murdered model Vicki Morgan and government officials, reported those tapes were missing.

Today's birthdays: Comedian Milton Berle is 76. Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., is 62. Pianist Van Cliburn is 50. Comedian Bill Cosby is 47. Actress Cheryl Ladd is 33.

Thought for today: "Peace is not made at the council table, or by treaties, but in the hearts of men." — Herbert Hoover, 31st president of the United States (1874-1964).

Pope defends ban on artificial birth control

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II has opened a major campaign against artificial birth control, and a leading Vatican official accused some Catholic theologians of misleading the public by rejecting papal teachings on family planning.

The pope spoke about family planning for nearly an hour Wednesday, defending a 16-year-old encyclical against artificial birth control which has caused deep divisions among Roman Catholics in the United States and Western Europe.

His speech to about 10,000 people gathered in St. Peter's Square for the weekly general audience was the first of as many as 12 planned on the subject, said the Rev. Carlo Caffarra, director of the Institute for the Study of Marriage and the Family.

"The church teaches that every marriage act (sexual intercourse) must itself remain open to the transmission of life," the pope said.

"This teaching is based upon the inseparable connection between the two aspects of the conjugal act: its unitive meaning and its procreative meaning."

Caffarra told reporters that the 1968 encyclical, "Humanae Vitae (Of Human Life)," "will not undergo any modification."

He said the church is concerned about theologians in France, the United States, West Germany and Italy who have been questioning the encyclical. He said the public's difficulty in understanding it is "the fault, above all, of a group of Catholic theologians who reject it."

The encyclical, issued by Pope Paul VI in July 1968, prohibited the world's 790 million Roman Catholics from using birth control pills, condoms or diaphragms and other artificial ways of preventing conception.

The church approves only what it calls natural family planning — abstinence during a woman's fertile period.

Church studies have found that many Catholics in the United States ignore the encyclical.

U.S. officials fear report doesn't support claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Reagan administration draft report, arguing that leftist Nicaragua still ships arms to Salvadoran guerrillas, is getting a second look from officials who fear it won't convince critics of the claim.

The 35-page report, which was first expected out in late May, then in June and then last week, remains unpublished as some administration officials press for release of secret intelligence to buttress the charges — and others question the value of having a new report at all.

The draft report, entitled "Background Paper: Nicaragua's Military Build-up and Support for Central American Subversion," was prepared by the State and Defense departments. It maintains that military shipments, with Nicaraguan collaboration, continue to flow to El Salvador by sea, air and land.

Nicaragua's alleged support for the Salvadoran guerrillas has been central to President Reagan's charge that El Salvador's government is the target of external communist aggression and to justification for covert CIA aid to rebels fighting to oust the leftist Nicaraguan government.

Administration officials privately predicted release of the new report in May, put a "June 1984" date on the draft sent to Capitol Hill, and then said it would be issued last week.

But State Department spokesman Joseph Reap said Wednesday that "there was no delay...We always said we hoped to have something." A copy of the draft report was obtained two weeks ago by The Associated Press.

While the report says it relies "primarily upon evidence available throughout Central America and elsewhere in the public record," State Department officials, speaking anonymously, say the public information is supported by still-secret U.S. intelligence, including radio intercepts.

But one senior State Department official, who spoke on the condition he not be identified, told a reporter that, as written, the report doesn't provide the "smoking gun" that would provide the public proof of the administration's allegations.

He is understood to have argued that it not be released because it would only raise further doubts about the administration's knowledge of Sandinistas supplying arms to the rebels.

Some officials have pushed for declassification of the intelligence they say they have, but others contend that such a release would compromise U.S. intelligence sources and methods, making it harder to obtain future information.

One critic, former CIA analyst David C. MacMichael, charged last month that any significant arms flow from Nicaragua to Salvadoran guerrillas ended more than three years ago.

Rescuers recover 67 bodies from mine in Taiwan

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Rescue teams recovered 67 bodies from a collapsed coal mine tunnel in northern Taiwan today, raising the death toll to 100 in Taiwan's worst mining disaster.

Officials said 22 of the 125 men who were trapped in a tunnel when fire swept through the area Tuesday had been rescued. Rescuers were pressing their search today for the three missing miners.

Twelve of the survivors were in critical condition, suffering from carbon monoxide poisoning or injuries sustained when sections of the tunnel collapsed, doctors said. They said the others were in surprisingly good condition.

The death toll at the Mei-Shan Coal Mine, 31 miles northeast of Taipei, surpassed the 74 killed June 20 at the Hai Shan Mine, southeast of Taipei, the nation's worst previous mining accident.

Doctors said most of the fatalities resulted from carbon monoxide poisoning.

The government ordered all of Taiwan's 124 mines shut down today for safety checks and those found to be unsafe are to be closed permanently. President Chiang Ching-kuo also threatened severe punishment for any government official or mine executive found guilty of ignoring safety regulations.

Two Polish seamen defect from Tall Ship in Ontario

TORONTO (AP) — Two young Polish seamen defected from the sailing ship Tryglaw and were being held at a hotel today prior to meeting with Canadian immigration officials, according to a Polish emigre leader and security officers.

Lech Prusinski of the Polish Canadian Action Group said Wednesday night the sailors are both single and both 22 years old, but would not identify them further.

Prusinski said the men contacted him Wednesday after leaving the ship, which was in Toronto to take part in the Lake Ontario Tall Ships Rendezvous, celebrating Ontario's 200th anniversary and the 150th birthdays of Toronto and Rochester, N.Y.

Carson stunts anything but dull

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

After he drops hood first from the top of the Astrodome, Brian Carson will attempt to clear the fountain at Ceasar's Palace in Las Vegas, providing, of course, he survives his present tour.

A professional stuntman and member of the Hollywood Screen Actors Guild, Carson will perform his "Wildest Stunt on Wheels" as the grand climax of Friday night's Twin Cities Speedbowl program. That's an exploding-car jump and crash.

According to Carson, "it's the most dangerous stunt attraction touring the nation since it combines an airborne automobile, a violent on-board explosion and a fiery crash landing all in one."

He performed the stunt in Smokey and the Bandit, Part III, one of his many movie credits. He broke three ribs in Tulsa and caught fire in Portland and suffered second degree burns on the present tour, but hasn't missed a performance. "I've got four seconds to get clear of the car once the bomb blows, and I didn't quite make it."

Carson, 27, started out on a tour of five major cities, but it has evolved into a 25-week tour.

It will end in time for him to make it back to Hollywood this fall where he will do a Jerry Reed TV crash extravaganza in which, at $3,000 a car, four people will combine to wreck 78 autos.

Carson has his eye set on the Guiness World Record for most cars wrecked in a stunt career, 1,342. He has demolished 1,183 and figures he's a year away.

He began his demolition career jumping motorcyles at 12 years of age. He performed eight years with the Joie Chitwood thrill show before striking out on his own.

It's a rough life and, really not all that profitable, although Carson says he's doing it for the money.

His stunt injuries include a dozen brain concussions, compound fractures of the wrists, forearm, hand, elbow, nose, leg, ankle, foot, collarbone and seven ribs. After three major operations on the right foot, he still walks with several surgical pins and clips holding together muscles and bones.

Eight more years and he plans to retire.

"My show at Twin Cities gives people an opportunity to see how they do it on TV," Carson says. "When I started on tour, I figured five major cities wouldn't be bad. After all, this is a dangerous stunt. We don't use roll bars or cages and the seat belt goes around the waist, so you've really got to brace yourself. But 25 weeks...sure I'm concerned. I'm doing it for the money, but when I'm finished, expenses are so high on the road, that I figure to make $45,000."

He's dickering with the financially-troubled New Orleans World's Fair for a Superdome appearance, but isn't too optimistic about the prospects of that deal materializing.

His attempt to clear the fountain at Caesar's Palace would be a record. "No one has cleared the 200-feet before. The others tried it on motorcycles; I'll be doing it in a 4,000 pound car."

Even more hazardous sounding is what he has planned for the Astrodome in Houston. They'll lift a car to the top and drop it nose first. "My only protection will be an airbag. The most an airbag has withstood is a collision at 47 mph. I'll be dropping at 82 mph. No, there's no way to test it before hand. I just hope the air bag opens. If it doesn't...."

Season's first half surprising

The Chicago White Sox adopted the slogan this season of "Let's Do It Again," a reference to their winning the American League's West Division championship in 1983.

And so far, so good.

"It's almost a carbon copy up to this point," says Roland Hemond, the White Sox' general manager, pointing to an almost identical record this season as it was at last year's All-Star break. "I hope it's a carbon copy when it's over."

At the mid-summer break, the White Sox had a 44-40 record and were leading the AL West by one game over both the faltering California Angels and fast-closing Minnesota Twins.

The biggest story in baseball, however, was the explosive getaway of the Detroit Tigers in the AL East, and the biggest surprises happened in the National League East, where the New York Mets and Chicago Cubs emerged as bona fide contenders after years of desultory play.

The Tigers won 35 of their first 40 games, the best start in major league history, to bolt into a huge lead in the AL East. But since compiling that incredible record, they have come back to earth with a 22-22 mark and have shown increasing signs of mortality.

"Seven or eight games back isn't bad," says Toronto Manager Bobby Cox, whose runner-ups are exactly seven behind the Tigers at this point. "It's still within striking distance. Those things can dissipate quickly."

Perhaps also within striking distance of the Tigers are the defending World Champion Baltimore Orioles, currently 11½ games behind in third place.

"Detroit will have to play better than they have in the last month to keep what they have," says Orioles General Manager Hank Peters.

The Mets and Cubs, meanwhile, are both playing better than anyone expected. One-two in the NL East race at this point, the teams took divergent routes to the top — the Mets through their farm system and the Cubs through trades.

Thought to have made a mistake when they let pitcher Tom Seaver go before the start of the season, the Mets came up with a couple of mound diamonds in Dwight Gooden and Ron Darling, who hurled the Mets into first place at the All-Star break.

The emergence of Gooden and Darling, among others, and the outstanding play of young Darryl Strawberry in the outfield has made the discontented Met fans forget the loss of Seaver, historically the team's most popular player.

"You don't hear from the fans about it so much," says Frank Cashen, the Mets' general manager.

Seaver, by the way, had a mediocre 7-6 record and a 4.31 earned average with the White Sox, clearly a disappointment for the three-time Cy Young Award winner.

The Cubs strengthened themselves with the acquisitions of starting outfielders Bob Dernier and Gary Matthews, starting pitchers Rick Sutcliffe and Dennis Eckersley and two relief pitchers in George Frazier and Tim Stoddard.

In the National League's West Division, the San Diego Padres emerged as the front-runners, thanks to the acquisition of new players, particularly reliever Goose Gossage, the former New York Yankee star. The hard-throwing right-hander has contributed 14 saves and four victories thus far in helping the Padres reach the highest position they have held at this point in the season.

The Padres' climb has been spurred by some of the National League's best young players, including Tony Gwynn, who was hitting .351 through the first half of the season.

Among the other pleasant surprises were Dave Kingman, who has hit 23 home runs and knocked in 69 runs after signing with the Oakland A's as a free agent; 45-year-old Phil Niekro of the New York Yankees, who has an 11-4 record with a new team and in a new league, and Reggie Jackson, who has found his home run swing again with the California Angels, having walloped 14.

Without Niekro, and the league-leading hitting of Dave Winfield (.370), there's no telling where the Yankees would be at this point. As it is, they are 20 games behind the Tigers in sixth place in the AL East, and virtually out of the race.

On an individual basis, Montreal outfielder Andre Dawson has been one of the biggest disappointments. Hampered by a combination of knee and bat problems, the player considered one of the best in baseball is hitting only .217 with five home runs and 37 RBI.

Dawson's teammate, pitcher Steve Rogers, won't win any prizes with his first-half performance, either — a 3-8 record and 5.73 ERA. Nor will the Yankees' Ron Guidry, who has an uncharacteristic 6-7 record and a 4.39 ERA. And although he has a respectable 2.97 earned run average, better things were expected of Los Angeles' Fernando Valenzuela, who was under .500 with an 8-9 record at the All-Star break.

WBC wants Hagler to rematch Hamsho

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — The World Boxing Council pledged Wednesday in writing it would recognize no fight involving middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler until he makes a mandatory defense against top-ranked challenger Mustafa Hamsho of Syria.

WBC legal adviser Gabriel Penagaricano said he sent the stipulation to the U.S. District Court in New York. Hamsho filed a civil suit against Hagler and the WBC in the New York court, charging they were denying him his right to a title match.

Hagler, who also is recognized as champion by the World Boxing Association, stopped Hamsho in the 11th round of a undisputed title defense Oct. 3.

The champion was supposed to defend against Hamsho July 20, but he pulled out of the fight, saying he didn't want to fight until the fall. Now the big fight for the fall appears to be one between Hagler and Thomas Hearns, the WBA junior middleweight champion, who knocked out Roberto Duran in the second round June 15.

Penagaricano said he told the court Hagler had been warned he'd be stripped of the title if he didn't sign for the mandatory defense against Hamsho. He said he also gave the court guarantees there'd be no reprisals against the challenger because of the legal action.

"We are letting the court know that the council will not withdraw its recognition of Hamsho as the No. 1 challenger (in the middleweight division), nor drop him down in the rankings," Penagaricano said.

"Hamsho used a legal procedure that it is his right to use, but it is not true that the council has been negligent in pressuring Hagler to give him a shot at the title," he added.

Weather spoils All-Star game

SAN FRANCISCO — It was a terrible day in San Francisco. Temperature in the high 60s. Wind gusting mildly out of the northwest, a mere zephyr of 29 m.p.h. No hot dog wrappers winding themselves around your glasses. No dust balls obscuring your vision. No fog drifting in from the outfield. The earth nice and stable, San Andreas fault at rest.

It was depressing.

Listen! Do you ever root for the weather at a sporting event? Well, I do it all the time. I root for the ball to go in the water at golf tournaments, I plead for the squalls to come up and blow it into a triple-bogey. I love to watch them play football in a blizzard, or at least in the mud. I like to watch films of the first Dempsey-Tunney fight because it was fought in a downpour. To tell you the truth, I was glad the Boston Garden wasn't air-conditioned for the basketball playoff.

Where does it say conditions have to be perfect for the games people play? Horses run in the slop all the time. I stop well short of recommending they add pedestrians to the Indy 500, but you have to admit a guy who doesn't have to worry about hitting a cow in the dark has all the best of it behind the wheel.

A lot of us felt our hearts jump when baseball scheduled the All-Star game for San Francisco this July. Visions of infielders circling under pop flies that would come down three feet behind right fielders danced in our heads. Dreams, like plum puddings, of guys squinting up through the fog for line drives that would hit them on the haircut filled our fancies. Promises of knuckleballs that would bob in the wind like feathers in a tidal wave dazzled our brains.

RATS! IT was like coming down on Christmas morning and finding you hadn't gotten that new bike but an encyclopdia instead. It was like getting the fat one on a blind date.

It was like Casey striking out. The weather was supposed to be the heavy hitter in this classic. It was supposed to take charge of the game like a Babe Ruth in a World Series or a Jack Nicklaus at a Masters or a Larry Bird in a playoff. It was supposed to swat flies back over a fence, blow curveballs back into the faces of pitchers. It almost blew the flower of the U.S. Navy into the bay during the pregame festivities when they tried to unfurl a gigantic U.S. flag which nearly turned into a red white and blue hang glider with 100 swabbies and lady sailors hanging from its underside.

But once the game started, the weather was an easy out. It was an "ofer," which is what the ballplayers call a hitter who goes "0 for 4." The weather, so to speak, left men on base all night and was no factor. It hit a slump.

There have been 55 of these All-Star games, and you remember them in vignettes. Pete Rose slamming into catcher Ray Fosse, Reggie Jackson blasting one over the roof at Tiger Stadium.

And you remember the only one ever held in Candlestick Park before for Stu Miller, a lightweight hurler being blown into a balk by the capricious currents of air out of the Barbary Coast. The "Bernoulli Effect," they call the malicious compressions and twists it takes as it hurtles into the ballpark on a normal night.

Los Angeles keeps smoldering through smog siege

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Southern California choked under a brown blanket of heavy smog Wednesday for the 17th day out of 18 since June 23, but Olympic officials and doctors said they don't think air pollution will seriously hamper athletes in the Summer Games.

Amy Quinn, a Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee spokeswoman, said the committee has taken every precaution — with doctors and oxygen bottles at competition sites and with events timed and placed for minimum smog levels.

She said the Olympic medical staff is more concerned about heat, humidity and altitude problems than smog during the games, which run July 28 through Aug. 12. July and August are traditionally the hottest months of the year in Los Angeles, with temperatures hovering daily around 100 degrees.

"Smog is about fourth on their list," she said. "Sure, there'll be oxygen, but that will be for a variety of things, not just smog. The athletes and trainers are not concerned."

Mile runner Steve Scott of Leucadia, Calif., near San Diego, said he believes that "anybody who trained in Southern California's smog, heat, sunlight and humidity will have an advantage."

However, he said if the Olympics get both heavy smog and excessive heat, "it will be a struggle."

U.S. athletes for the first time will use anti-asthma medications during smoggy days. Up to 50 of the 600 U.S. team members will use the drugs, which are legal under Olympic rules, Dr. Robert Voy said last spring. Voy is chief medical officer of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Olympic Games

But that won't help the eyes of archers or skeet shooters, who "won't have time to wipe away a tear," said David Boyd, assistant director of the National Rifle Association's international competition.

Jim Birakos, deputy executive director of the Air Quality Management District, said he is setting up a pre-Olympic "summit meeting" Tuesday among the district, the Los Angeles Olympic committee and several major industries at the request of the county Board of Supervisors. But he said he's been having such meetings with industry for six months.

He said power plants have already converted to natural gas to minimize smog, and other stationary sources of pollution, such as oil refineries, have revised and upgraded anti-pollution efforts. Also, he said, companies are emphasizing car pooling since auto pollution makes up 60 percent of smog.

"It'll take the edge off" the smog, he said.

"We've had more days of (smog) alerts this July than the last 10 years, but the levels haven't been as high or as widespread," he said.

Since June 23, he said, all but one day has prompted such an alert, during which time the very young, the very old and people with respiratory problems are warned to curtail activities.

Birakos said that constituted the longest July siege of alert-level smog in 10 years, but he said the alerts were not in as many areas of Southern California and the smog was not as heavy as in some recent years.

During second-stage alerts, industries are ordered to curtail activities and emergency car-pool plans are put into effect. During third-stage alerts, he said, "we could shut down the entire community."

"We don't anticipate that," he said Wednesday.

If alerts are posted during the Games, Dr. Jack Hackney, chief of environmental health service at Rancho Los Amigos Hospital and professor of medicine at the University of Southern California, said Wednesday that "then I think some of them (athletes) would likely experience some respiratory irritation."

But he said "it's temporary" and not life-threatening.

Hackney, who advised the air quality district on Olympic precautions but had no direct contact with the Olympic committee, said much time was spent on preparation for the Olympics — finding the best times and places for events that might be smog-influenced.

"With just a little luck it will be adequate," he said. "They can't prepare for every eventuality, and no one can predict the weather or meteorology with any real accuracy. But from what I know they've given a lot of attention to it."

Argentine Davis Cuppers feuding

ATLANTA (AP) — Argentina, which will meet the United States this weekend in a Davis Cup quarterfinal tennis match, is denying rumors of a feud between countrymen Jose-Luis Clerc and Guillermo Vilas.

Vilas, reportedly with a pulled groin muscle, has pulled out of the competition. Clerc, left as his country's best hope, worked out on The Omni's fast court for the first time Tuesday.

"It's not that they are not friends," said Argentine team captain Jerry Wortelboer, who compared them to the top Americans, John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors.

"McEnroe and Connors, they are the same," he said. "It is the problem — no one wants to be second."

Clerc "beat Vilas twice in one year," Wortelboer noted. "Clerc was No. 1 in Argentina, and we Latin Americans have hard feelings, you know?"

Amid such controversy, Clerc and two Davis Cup rookies — Roberto Arguello and Martin Jaite — must face McEnroe, Connors and Peter Fleming.

"On paper, obviously, we look like we have a good chance of winning 5-0," said American captain Arthur Ashe. "But you know, strange things happen in Davis Cup."

Strange things such as last year, when Argentina stunned the United States 3-2 in opening round action as McEnroe dropped both his singles matches.

"It certainly figures in McEnroe's mind," Ashe said. "He lost both his Davis Cup singles assignments ... you know, that stinks."

McEnroe is 30-5 in Davis Cup singles play, but four of those losses came against Argentina — two to Clerc and two to Vilas.

But this year's McEnroe is fresh off one of the most impressive wipeouts in recent tennis history — last weekend's 6-1, 6-1, 6-2 thrashing of Connors in the men's singles final at Wimbledon.

"I don't think I've ever seen John play better under such circumstances," Ashe said, noting that the New Yorker made no unforced errors in the first two sets. "He was just absolutely overwhelming ... breaking new ground."

In Friday night's singles action, McEnroe and Connors will face Clerc and either Arguello or Jaite, in pairings to be determined by a draw Thursday. The pairings will be swapped for two more singles contests Sunday afternoon.

On Saturday, McEnroe and Fleming will take on Clerc and Jaite in doubles.

Clerc, ranked eighth in the world, has a 3-0 career record against Connors, ranked third. He is 5-5 against the top-ranked McEnroe.

"The pressure's on Clerc," Ashe said. "Clerc has to win his singles. Strange things happen in doubles, so anything can happen there."

Unhappy fan files suit against Indianapolis Colts

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A fan who sent the Indianapolis Colts $12,000 for 60 season tickets has filed suit against the National Football League franchise, saying he's been deprived of his money.

The suit by Herbert C. Haggard of Martinsville is the second filed by a season ticket applicant dissatisfied by the Colts' ticket distribution plan. A suit filed by R.W. Lesher of Indianapolis is pending.

"I want either the tickets, or my money back plus interest," said Haggard, who filed suit Tuesday in Marion Superior Court.

He is trying to get his suit classified as a class-action suit representing all ticket applicants who have not received tickets. The Colts received approximately 200,000 mail-order applications for about 55,000 seats.

Haggard, who owns Burt's Family Restaurant in the Morgan County community of Waverly, said he sent in his money in April but has received no word on the request.

"No one knows what kind of games this Irsay (team owner Robert Irsay) is playing. I lost the use of $12,000 for three months," he said.

Robert L. Walters, director of public relations for the Colts, declined comment on Haggard's suit.

The Colts spokesman said successful ticket purchasers, chosen by a lottery, should be notified near the end of the month. NFL rules require season ticket holders to receive their tickets two weeks before the first game. The deadline for the Colts would be July 28.

Walters said the team is "getting very close" to sending out refunds to the unsuccessful applicants. He said the refunds will not include interest.

State Dept. calls leaflets 'disinformation'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department said Wednesday that "hate leaflets" mailed to Olympic committees in several Asian and African nations "bear all the hallmarks of a disinformation campaign."

The department said the thrust of the messages aimed so far at the Olympics committees in Malaysia, Zimbabwe and South Korea "dovetails neatly with the Soviet justification for their withdrawal" from the 1984 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles.

The Soviets blamed their withdrawal on an alleged threat of physical violence by American extremists in Los Angeles. The department did not directly accuse the Soviet government of responsibility for the leaflets.

The State Department made available copies of a leaflet sent to the Olympics committee of Zimbabwe. Its markings suggested that it came from the "Ku Klux Klan." The leaflet was contained in an envelope bearing U.S. postage stamps and a U.S. postmark.

The letter received by the Zimbabwe committee contains threatening language and was illustrated with a drawing of a white-hooded figure on a rearing horse and of a monkey with a noose around its neck.

Alan Romberg, the State Department's deputy spokesman, said the "hate leaflets" received in the three countries "bear all the hallmarks of a disinformation campaign."

The United States has claimed for years that the Soviet Union orchestrates a "disinformation" campaign of distributing false or misleading information, sometimes to journalists, to advance its interests and undermine the position of its adversaries in various regions of the world.

"The matter is still under investigation, but we can give a preliminary opinion that the leaflet sent to Zimbabwe, of which we have the original, was not written by a native English speaker and contains errors in grammar and syntax which a native speaker would not make," Romberg said.

"The sophistication involved in obtaining the addresses of national Olympic committees also bespeak a campaign characteristic of active measures (or) disinformation activities," the spokesman said.

Romberg noted that the leaflet erroneously spelled Ku Klux Klan with a hyphen between the first two words, and said published materials from authentic Klan groups usually use their organization's full names.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz told reporters Tuesday in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, that he had ordered the State Department to determine whether the threatening letters actually came from the Ku Klux Klan.

Allen won't cause Philly to see stars

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — George Allen, the most recognizable name in a largely no-name cast that will compete for the United States Football League's second championship, isn't shy about letting people know that his coaching is the main reason his Arizona Wranglers qualified for the finals.

But to Chuck Fusina, one of the reasons Philadelphia is the USFL's winningest team, Allen will be irrelevant when the Stars meet the Wranglers for the USFL title Sunday night at Tampa Stadium.

"I've got nothing against George Allen. He gets a lot of media attention and a lot of publicity and that's great for our league," Fusina said after Wednesday's practice, the Stars' first since arriving here from Philadelphia.

"But when I get out on that field Sunday night, I'm not going to be worried about George Allen. I'll be a lot more concerned with Stan White and Bruce Laird and the other guys on the Arizona defense."

Still, it's hard to avoid noticing the impact that Allen is having on this championship, which will be televised nationally by ABC at 8 p.m. EDT.

For one thing, the Wranglers are not a typical USFL team — a high-priced former college star at a key position or two mixed with a core of low-paid unknowns.

They are, instead, a George Allen team — a "the future is now" bunch, the kind Allen coached in Washington, replete with veterans like White, Laird and Wilbur Young (13 professional seasons each), quarterback Greg Landry (16) and other well-seasoned veterans like Luther Bradley, Carl Allen, John Lee, Karl Lorch, Doug Dennison, Joe Ehrmann, Frank Corral, Eddie Brown and Kevin Long.

Allen maintains that Arizona's biggest problem this year was adjusting to the pre-season move from Chicago to Arizona — the Wranglers are last year's Chicago Blitz, which switched cities with last year's Wranglers.

In fact, the Wranglers hardly figured to be here, losing eight of their first 14 games before winning their final four to qualify for the playoffs. Then they upset Houston 17-16 and Los Angeles 35-23 to get here.

For which Allen, reportedly on the brink of dismissal several times, takes full credit.

"When things were going bad, there was talk that we were working too hard, that I needed to change my ways," he said Wednesday. "But I'm a believer that you get the right kind of people, people with character, and that you stick with them and they stick with you."

By contrast, the Stars are a low-key bunch, led by Coach Jim Mora, who coaxed them to a 16-2 record in the regular season after a 15-3 mark last year and a two-point loss to Michigan in the USFL championship game.

Mary Lou Retton, 16, is expected to be the hit of the summer Olympics in gymnastics. Her coach, Bela Karolyi, defected from Romania, where he taught 1976 champion Nadia Comaneci.

Retton the heir apparent

By CHRIS LONG
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — This could be the year that you'll be able to pronounce the name of the cute little gymnastics champion who you'll fall in love with during the women's Olympic competition.

Her name is Mary Lou Retton. She's 16 years old. She trains under Bela Karolyi, the Romanian defector who coached Nadia Comaneci. She's the best the United States has to offer and she could wind up standing on that middle platform when the medals are given out at Pauley Pavilion.

"She's a dynamite girl," said Culver City's Makoto Sakamoto, who is the University of California at Los Angeles men's assistant as well as the assistant for the U.S. men's team. "She may very well be one of the Olympic stars. She is a possible gold medal winner in the all-around, vaulting and floor exercise.

"There is virtually no one who can touch her in vaulting. She is as sure a bet to win the vault as Carl Lewis is to win the long jump."

In addition to that, she and her USA teammates, including Julianne McNamara, Michelle Dussere and Pam Bileck, could deliver a team gold if everything unfolds right. Same with the men's team.

Unfolding has a dual meaning here. U.S. gymnastics is on a rapid rise and the boycott by the superpowers will give them a chance for glory.

"I think the American women's team has a great chance to win the whole thing," said Sakamoto, a U.S. Olympian in 1964 and 1972. "They will definitely be in the medal standings. The question is, what color of medal?"

With the Soviet Union, East Germany and Bulgaria out, the U.S. women will battle Romania for the gold and should win at least a silver in the team all-around.

Retton and McNamara will be in a four-girl battle with Romanians Ectarina Szabo and Lavinia Agache in the individual all-around. China ranks third in both areas.

"The boycott really lessens the competition for the women because the Russians, the East Germans and the Bulgarians were tops," said Sakamoto. "The Japanese are weak. The Chinese are strong, but they're not in the same class as Romania and the U.S."

Things are a little different in the men's competition. Until the boycott, the Americans were conceding first and second to the Soviet Union and China and were gearing up for a nose-to-nose battle with Japan for the bronze, which would be the first medal for the United States since the Los Angeles Games of 1932.

Without Russia, a medal is nearly assured. The silver is a realistic goal. The gold is within reach.

That became apparent when the men, led by UCLA's Peter Vidmar, Mitch Gaylord and Tim Daggett, burned up the apparatus at the Olympic Trials recently in Florida.

"It's not impossible for us to beat China," said Sakamoto, "but we have to perform exceptionally well and the Chinese have to miss a few places for us to be able to beat them. Abilitywise, they're beyond our reach. Japan will be very strong. They will be well-conditioned. They will be favored to beat us. But, man for man, I feel we are as good or better."

Vidmar, Gaylord and Daggett, all close friends, finished 1-2-3 in the Trials. Vidmar won that competition, edging Gaylord, who fell during his last event, the horizontal bar. But the two have been trading championships for the last few years and are in serious contention for the all-around gold.

"I see Peter, Mitch and several Chinese battling for first place in the all-around," said Sakamoto, Vidmar's personal coach since 1973. "I think the Chinese will be favored to win the all-around, but it's going to be a tight race. There are two outstanding ones: Li Ning and Tong Fei. Those two are the proven, experienced top guns for China.

"Also, there's another gymnast from Japan, Koji Gushiken. He was the silver medalist last year in the Budapest world championships. Gushiken, the two Chinese, Peter and Mitch are the five who will be vying for the top all-around position."

The Americans should be in contention for individual medals, too.

"Peter would have a chance on the pommel horse, horizontal bar, parallel bars and, perhaps, the rings," said Sakamoto. "Mitch has a chance on the rings, parallel bars, horizontal bar. Tim would have a chance on the pommel horse and parallel bars. Bart Conner, on the parallel bars, also."

Gymnastics will be the toughest ticket for the Games and Pauley Pavilion should be packed for each day's competition. The men's compulsories start July 29, the women's July 30 and they'll alternate days through Aug. 5.

On Aug. 9, rhythmic gymnastics will make its first appearance in the Olympics. It differs from traditional gymnastics in that the competitors, all women, perform a lively ballet using hoops, balls and clubs and ribbons to highlight their movements.

It's an individual competition only and the United States will be represented by Valerie Zimring of Los Angeles, the Trials winner, and Michelle Berube of Rochester, Minn., the second-place finisher.

BUT IT was in a slump Tuesday night. It was, so to speak, taking pitches it would normally knock out of the park. It was serving up these nice soft hanging curves. It was not giving it its best shot. It looked a little over the hill.

"Bernoulli Effect, my aching art!" you cold hear the kids sneer, adding, "Who'd this guy ever lick?!"

You could almost see Willie Mays, whom the Bernoulli Effect robbed of 100 career home runs, looking on wistfully, thinking: "I wish you turned that tame when I came to bat, you in-and-outer!"

It was supposed to be finger-numbing, bat-stinging cold. They say in San Francisco that when the Bernoulli Effect is really working, seagulls walk, and the Golden Gate Bridge ripples.

As it was, Bernoulli turned out to be the goat of the game. Oh, he huffed and puffed and made faces but was a little like a four-eyed kid who does situps and muscle flexes in front of the bench and pleads: "Put me in, coach!" And then, when he gets in there, falls on his face.

IN THE end, it was just another game played in earmuff weather in San Francisco. You have to remember San Francisco is the place where the Call Bulletin once wrote a perfectly straight-faced headline that "Yesterday was the coldest day of the year in San Francisco since last July 6." San Francisco is the place where winter goes to spend the summer.

But high pop flies came straight down. Curves broke the way curves are supposed to break. Three guys hit home runs. The National League won the game as usual.

When the Bernoulli is in mid-season form, you don't get home runs over the left-field fence. Balls hit in that direction usually come down around shortstop, where guys are circling under them like drunks on an ice rink.

Twenty-one batters struck out, a record for a nine-inning game, but that was more a function of the time of day than the kind of day.

The game is a concert not a contest, anyway, and you would have to say the acoustics were, if not perfect, at least ordinary. It was just another 3-1 game, not Dempsey-Tunney in the rain, Green Bay-Dallas in the ice, Notre Dame-Army in the mud or the America's Cup in the calm.

As a story, it's about like the bridegroom not showing up. Nice for the bride and family but not very exciting to watch. The cleanup hitter didn't make the show. The star sent a stand-in. The week before the game, the flower of American journalism asked no questions about RBIs, basepath speed or managerial strategy, but only about meteorology.

The San Francisco weather was a bust. A palooka with a glass jaw. A pitcher who gives up gopher balls. A guy with a big reputation who couldn't deliver. Party pooper and punchline killer. Just another team that looked good on paper and folded in the stretch. Sort of like the Cleveland Indians. Or Steinbrenner's Yankees.

East tops TL West on Beane's late homer

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Billy Beane's only hit of the night — a two-run, game-winning homer in the bottom of the ninth — was enough to earn the Jackson Mets star the Most Valuable Player award of the Texas League All-Star Game.

Beane's home run gave the East an 8-7 victory over the West in the Wednesday night classic.

The winning pitcher was Steve Kordish of Tulsa, while Ted Higuera of El Paso absorbed the loss before a crowd of 4,824.

The East had led 6-4 after eight innings, but Darrin Jackson of Midland clouted a two-run homer with Dale Sveum of El Paso on base, and James Steeles of Beaumont singled home another run for a 7-6 West lead.

But in the last half of the inning, Al Pedrique of Jackson singled and was aboard for Beane's homer.

Texas League

The game was riddled by errors, with West players making four and the East three.

In fact, the East scored the first two runs of the game on a succession of errors by West shortstop Al Newman of Beaumont.

In the first inning, Kurt Ford of Arkansas scored on a fielding error by Newman. Then, in the second, first baseman Bill Max of Jackson reached first on another error by Newman and scored on a third error by Newman.

Right-fielder Javier Ortiz of Tulsa scored again for the East in the bottom of the second on a sacrifice fly by shortstop John Stevenson of Shreveport.

Olympic rites will be inspirational, majestic, emotional

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Even the late Cecil B. DeMille, the great producer of spectacles, might have balked at this one: a cast of 20,000; 100 pianos, pigeons and balloons by the thousands; a $7 million budget for two events that will be seen live by 98,000 people; perhaps $1 billion on television.

Those are a few of the statistics for the opening and closing ceremonies of the summer Olympic Games at the Coliseum, which begin July 28.

David Wolper, producer of TV documentaries, movies and miniseries, was one of seven Los Angeles citizens who helped secure the games. Then Peter Ueberroth, president of the Olympic Organizing Committee, asked him to stage the opening and closing.

His Westwood office is dominated by a bulletin board that outlines both ceremonies in brief form. The opening includes 17 acts, from "Fanfare" to "Sing Along Exit." On the floor are a few costume sketches, and nearby is a T-shirt with the message: "USSR — Having good time, wish you were here — LA."

"I've got an opening cast of 12,000, plus 7,500 athletes," Wolper said. "Do you realize that every time I rehearse the 12,000, that means $36,000 for lunches — $3 per box! And we also must have 12,000 costumes — more, in fact, because some of them have costume changes."

Wolper studied tapes of all the Olympic ceremonies since 1960. He also has seen six Olympic Games in person and in 1972 produced the official film, "Visions of Eight."

"The most spectacular opening was in Moscow four years ago, with 25,000 people," he said. "But remember that the Army had six months of training for the show. That's a different kind of world over there.

"The most emotional closing was at Mexico City in 1968," Wolper continued. "Everyone in the stadium was given a sombrero, and there were 1,000 mariachi players on the stadium floor. The spectators were throwing their sombreros and the athletes were throwing them back."

For the closing this year, Wolper said he would stage "the greatest light, laser and pyrotechnic finale ever seen.

"There will be more lasers in one place than ever before, and everything will be state-of-the-art. This is something that America can do better than anyone, because we've got the technology."

The opening, he said, will be "majestic, inspirational and emotional."

The ceremony logistics are staggering. One of the biggest challenges is to build an enormous stage on the Coliseum floor — in the 18 hours following the last contest. Wolper insisted on two dress rehearsals for the construction crew.

"And I wouldn't settle for one dress rehearsal for the opening ceremonies," he added. "I insisted on four run-throughs before the dress rehearsal. This stems from my film training. I like to run a scene through the Moviola again and again to see how it works."

The attractions include 100 pianists playing Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue"; a marching band of 650 players enlisted from all 50 states; 2,000 folk dancers; 300 jitterbuggers; and 200 break dancers.

At least one of Wolper's grandiose ideas had to be abandoned. He wanted to assemble 500 convertible cars on the Coliseum floor and have their tops retracted all at once to spell "WELCOME TO L.A." He realized the cars would occupy the entire floor and would take an hour to drive out of the arena.

Once in a while, David Wolper has time to ponder his huge responsibility.

"When I do a bad show on television, the critics can write that Wolper stunk," he mused. "But if we don't come through on the Olympics, the world is going to say, 'The United States did a bad job.'

"Besides, people expect more from Hollywood. Expectations for spectacle are not so high at Lake Placid and Sarajevo, or even Munich and Mexico City," he said. "But if we can't put on a great show from Hollywood, the entertainment center of the world, we're in real trouble."

Opening lead: Queen of ◇.

In the good old days, when you used the closed hand to ruff and dummy's trumps to draw the trumps, the technique was called a "dummy reversal." Because of transfer bids, these days declarer often has the short trump hand, so here is a "declarer reversal" from a recent Wales vs. Ireland match.

The bidding sequence shown is that of the Irish pair. We are not sure what North intended bidding had his partner shown a king — possibly seven no trump for safety.

There are 12 top tricks, and the Irish declarer relied on his traditional luck for the 13th — he attempted the heart finesse. Down one.

The Welsh declarer was Patrick Jourdain, editor of the International Bridge Press Association Bulletin. He also reached seven spades, but he chose a considerably better line.

He won the ace of diamonds in hand and immediately ruffed a diamond in dummy. To test trumps, he cashed the ace of spades and then crossed to hand with the queen. When both defenders followed, the hand was a near laydown. He ruffed another diamond low, returned to hand with the ace of clubs and ruffed his last diamond with the king of trumps. Now he came back to the closed hand with the ace of hearts and used the jack of spades to draw the last outstanding trump, discarding a heart from the board on this trick. The table was left with nothing but club winners. Making seven-odd.

Note that the defenders could have prevailed had West led a club. That attacks one of declarer's entries before he can put it to use. If he wins in hand, he is an entry short for the reversal. If he wins in dummy, he has no entry back to the clubs after ruffing diamonds and drawing trumps.

Showtime's sitcom cites homosexuality

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Amid the ax murders and wet T-shirt contests on pay-cable television this summer is a pleasant little surprise — "Brothers," the first situation comedy on pay-TV.

The sitcom, premiering Friday night on Showtime's network, is an endearing show about three brothers, one of whom announces in the opener that he is a homosexual.

It literally isn't ready for the networks; ABC turned it down a few years ago because it contained gay characters.

But that doesn't mean it fits into the mayhem of pay-cable television, where violence and nudity permeate too-bad-for-drive-in movies, obscenity is a crutch for laughs in so-called comedy shows such as "Bizarre" and dreadful soap-opera plots infest anything remotely resembling drama.

"Brothers" is one of the funniest situation comedies on the dial, a sitcom that neither insults viewers' intelligence, as network TV too often does, nor makes him blanche, as does so much on cable.

The initial episode, the weakest of the first three, will appear throughout the month. Beginning Aug. 16, "Brothers" will have a new episode every week — a first for pay television.

DESPITE ITS best intentions, "Brothers" will never be another "All in the Family." Its charm and sensitivity more resemble NBC's "Cheers" — solidly entertaining if not especially enlightening.

"Brothers" treats homosexuality on the small screen much the way "Victor-Victoria" and "La Cage aux folles" did on the big screen. More than simply mildly amusing, it is laugh-out-loud funny.

Robert Walden, reporter Joe Rossi on the "Lou Grant" dramatic series, plays high-strung Joe Waters, a former pro football placekicker who owns a restaurant in Philadelphia.

Paul Regina plays soft-spoken Cliff, the youngest brother who has just come out of the closet, and Brandon Maggart is the oldest brother, Lou, a bearded, dimwitted construction worker.

IN THE first episode, Cliff backs out of his wedding at the altar, revealing to his brothers that he is gay. Their reactions are predictable, but the pleasant surprise here is Cliff's platonic friend Donald, a garishly effeminate homosexual, a man utterly secure about his sexuality.

When he learns Cliff has come out of the closet, he rushes over to the apartment Cliff and Joe share. Brimming with sincere joy, Donald exclaims: "I'm so proud of our boy, honestly. I mean, Hallmark doesn't even have a card for this!"

Donald, played by Philip Charles MacKensie, is irreverent, funny and, as the next two episodes will show, a solid character with superb comic timing.

In the second episode, Donald is staying overnight with Cliff and Joe because he lost his keys at a Julio Iglesias concert. It seems he threw the keys on stage in a fit of amour.

Meanwhile, Joe's old football buddies drop by unannounced. They hear someone getting out of the shower, figure it's Joe, and get set in a three-point stances in the living room. Out prances Donald, his hair under a shower cap, a towel wrapped around his skinny form.

THE SCENE is priceless, and the show moves quickly into a case of mistaken homosexuality — the football players figure Donald's presence in the apartment means Joe is gay. Two of the players spurn Joe; the third reveals his own homosexuality and confesses his love for Joe.

The third episode revolves around Joe's fling with a woman he learns is married. While that episode doesn't reach the level of the second, the three brothers and Donald begin to emerge as a working comedy ensemble.

The people behind the series have close ties to television. It was created by David Lloyd, Ed Weinberger and Stan Daniels, whose credits include "Cheers," "Taxi," and "The Mary Tyler Moore Show." The executive producer is Gary Nardino, former president of Paramount Television and executive producer of the movie, "Star Trek III: The Search for Spock."

"Brothers" has an advantage over network sitcoms — it is one continuous half-hour show uninterrupted by commercials. It also has the advantage of being able to deal with a subject so far unexplored by network sitcoms, and "Brothers" does it without resorting to gratuitous sexual jokes and nudity.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, July 13, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actor Harrison "Indiana Jones" Ford and Congressman Jack Kemp (R-N.Y.) share this birthday with you. Also born on this date: original "Today Show" host Dave Garroway and "Hogan's Heroes" star Bob Crane. Trust your intuition and business will show a dramatic turnaround. Loyal friends are there when you need them. A positive attitude helps you find the solution to a financial dilemma. Count on romance to take on an extra-special glow in August. A sacrifice you make for a parent or child fills you with pride. Be more patient with those who cannot match your rapid pace.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Close associates will be difficult to influence today. Use facts, not fiction, to convince them. Travel is highly successful. Do everything possible to patch up your differences with a loved one.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Postpone making any important moves connected with career or romance. Family affairs require closer attention. A brother or sister plays an important role in your affairs. Use tact in dealing with others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A domestic matter must be handled with kid gloves. Nothing will be gained by tackling the opposition head-on. A small child's questions shed new light on an old problem.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A serious quarrel could develop if your interests clash with your co-workers' or neighbors' aims. A friend helps you cut through red tape. Make some concessions to your loved ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be cautious when traveling. Do not allow an emotional upset to affect your driving. A new hobby or pastime brings great satisfaction. Try to interest a loved one in joining you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep a low profile today and stay out of other people's affairs. A parent's problems could weigh heavily on your mind. A brother or sister will help out temporarily.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Outsiders could make extra demands on you. Take advantage of any opportunities to mix business with pleasure. Get together with old friends; their loyalty and love mean a lot.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do everything possible to promote your business interests in distant places. Professional advice could be the key to your continued success. Behind-the-scenes activities contribute to your financial security.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make better use of your creative talents. Accept constructive criticism in the spirit in which it is given. A sensitive individual could be offended if you neglect your social duties.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A busy day lies ahead. Get an early start. Someone puts your loyalty or beliefs to a test. You come through with flying colors. Romance could prove elusive; play a waiting game.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Broaden your horizons. Take advantage of an opportunity to meet people from different walks of life. Evening could be the most rewarding part of the day. Devote more time to family affairs.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A close associate gives you valuable advice on turning an artistic project into a real moneymaker. Parents should devote more attention to their children's needs. A backyard picnic holds special appeal.

Pate begins comeback attempt

Busch Classic

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Jerry Pate's golfing career could be on the line this week in the $350,000 Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

"I'll give it a try. That's all I can do; give it a try and see what happens," said Pate, a former U.S. Open champion who has been sidelined most of the last two seasons with a severe neck and shoulder problem.

"The doctors said that it would never heal until I took at least three months off, took three months and just did nothing, just rested it.

"Well, that's what I've done. I've taken three months off. Now we'll give it a test and see what happens," Pate said Wednesday as he prepared for today's first round on the 6,746-yard Kingsmill Golf Club course.

It is his first start since March 29, at the Tournament Players Championship, where he missed the cut. He has not completed a full four rounds of tournament play since Doral, early in March.

Pate, a brash and breezy character who won the U.S. and Canadian Opens as a rookie in 1976, gained international attention when he celebrated a victory in the 1982 Tournament Players Championship by shoving PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman and course architect Pete Dye into a lake by the 18th hole before diving in himself.

Later that year, however, he suffered a severe neck pull. And the injury has bothered him since. He played infrequently in 1982, finishing only eight of 17 starts.

Now he's trying a comeback.

And, he was asked, what happens if the injury persists.

"I don't know," he said.

While Pate will be attempting to extend his playing career, the chief contenders for the $63,000 first prize include Lanny Wadkins, a former PGA champion, a two-time winner last season and a native of nearby Richmond, Va.; host pro Curtis Strange, a frequent contender but not yet a winner this year; and Calvin Peete, who has won this title the last two seasons.

The No. 1 gate attraction, however, is the legendary Arnold Palmer, who now restricts much of his activity to the PGA Seniors Tour. Palmer, 54, is constructing a second 18-hole course at Kingsmill and agreed to play in this tournament.

Also on hand are Gary Koch, a two-time winner this season, and 1984 tour winners John Mahaffey, Bruce Lietzke, Jack Renner and Scott Simpson.

NBC will televise portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

LPGA tour returns to site of Zaharias triumph

U.S. Open

PEABODY, Mass. (AP) — Defending champion Jan Stephenson, leading money winner Patty Sheehan and most of the top pros on the LPGA golf tour head a field of 150 that starts today in the 32nd U.S. Women's Open.

The 72-hole, $225,000 event with top prize money of $36,000 is returning to the Donald Ross-designed Salem Country Club for the first time in 30 years — since the late Babe Didrickson Zaharias won her third U.S. Open 15 months after cancer surgery.

Zaharias, a gold medal winner in the 1932 Olympics long before she took up golf, set a U.S. Golf Association record for both men and women with a 12-stroke victory here in 1954.

However, the 6,285-yard course with par 72 is expected to play much tougher this time around.

"The fairways are fine, but the course is long," said Sheehan, who set records in winning the LPGA championship for the second year in a row last month. "When the course gets faster, it will get tougher. Whoever wins here will earn it."

Sheehan, who has won $177,752 in prize money, plus $500,000 as a bonus for capturing the McDonald's Kids' Classic the week following the LPGA, said after a practice round she would settle for a four-round total of par 288 "and I'd sit right here." She added that she might even accept 290.

Stephenson, who ranks 17th among this year's money winners with $61,000, is winless on the 1984 tour, blaming outside commitments which followed her victory in the 1983 U.S. Open.

She is bidding to become only the fifth player to win consecutive Open championships. The others are Mickey Wright in 1958-59; Donna Caponi, 1969-70; Susie Berning, 1972-73, and Hollis Stacy, 1977-78.

Stephenson won the championship a year ago by edging Sheehan and JoAnne Carner by one stroke at Cedar Ridge Country Club in Tulsa, Okla. Carner, the U.S. Open champion in 1971 and '76, has been second in the event four times, tying Louise Suggs for the most bridesmaid finishes.

The local favorite will be Pat Bradley, a native of nearby Westford. Bradley set the Open record of 9-under par 279 in winning in 1981. After winning four tournaments in 1983, her best finishes this year have been three ties for second.

Foursome plays 306 in one day

TRUTH OR CONSEQUENCES, N.M. (AP) — Four Truth or Consequences golfers have been recuperating this week after their golf outing last Saturday that left them with sore muscles and blistered hands.

The four didn't settle for a leisurely 18 holes or even 36 holes. They teed off at dawn and played straight through until 8:25 p.m. — 306 consecutive holes.

The four golfers hustled from hole to hole using golf cars and playing only with five irons and pitching wedges.

Pageant depicts Martin County history

Cody Bell/Reporter-Telegram

Midlanders Jim Tennison, 32, and Amy Hale, 14, do some fiddling Wednesday during one of Martin County's Centennial events in the Martin County Community Center in Stanton.

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

■ Rundown of celebration events — Page 2C

STANTON — The Indians started dancing even as the rain clouds were forming. Dusk fell. The winds blew. The sky darkened.

And the pitter-patter of footsteps and rain filled the night air. The show, which had just started, was over too soon.

"Everybody please keep your ticket stubs for rainchecks," shouted a voice in the rain.

Martin County's Centennial Pageant in the football stadium was rained out for one night. But that seemed to suit most everyone in this farming and ranching community if the trade-off would be an end to the drought. Barring more rain, the show will go on tonight.

The pageant is Martin County's "spectacular" extravaganza for the century. In "seriousness and mirth," it depicts the history of this community.

What the folks here do in daytime is more celebration, a re-kindling of the folk arts of milking, lye-making, biscuit cooking, weaving, washing by scrub board, corn shelling, horseshoeing and fiddling.

THESE FOLKS are serious about their fun.

Nancy Bradshaw, 25, of Courtney latched on to a recipe for lye-soap making. She got the iron kettle piping hot, threw in hog fat and the rest of the ingredients.

"I'm sure glad centennials don't come around but once every hundred years," sighed Ms. Bradshaw, who was put out.

"Ours didn't turn out," she said.

"Would you say lye-soap making is a bust?" asked an impish Bob Deavenport, the Martin County judge.

"I would say," she replied, "that I'll never make lye-soap again."

There are some other folks, such as county judges, who may never milk again.

Nine judges tried their hand at the udder. Some seemed not to know the hindquarter from the forequarter or a horn from a teat.

Some tried to milk Jody Yates' Jersey cow. A few tried their hands on Sammy Yates' Guernsey cow.

Some squirted well; others just tried. One copped out.

H.D. "Butch" Howard, Martin County's treasurer, timed the 60-second spurts per contestant and measured the gain.

"I'LL JUST LET you set up and get a hold of the handles," he said. "Are you ready?"

Andrews County Judge Les Brown of Andrews only got an ounce of milk from the cow.

Borden County Judge Van York of Gail squeezed out 12 ounces.

But the milking champion, Glasscock County Judge John Robinson of Garden City handily squeezed off 28 ounces from the Jersey.

Howard County Judge Milton Kirby of Big Spring put five ounces of milk and cream into the bucket. "I didn't know this was the right end until I seen them (others) milk," he laughed.

Upton County Judge Peggy Garner of McCamey pulled 4½ ounces."I've done some interesting things since I've been in office (since 1975)," she said, "but this takes the cake."

Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport of Stanton snuggled up to the Guernsey but only produced four ounces and lamented, "Can't hit the bucket." But Howard sized up the judge: "He'd dry any cow up, I believe."

Gramm says nation's problem is too much spending

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

After singing his usual political tune to the Downtown Lions Club here Wednesday, U.S. senatorial candidate Phil Gramm turned his ear to requests from the audience who asked for new verses on deficit budgets, overspending and tax rates.

Gramm, who is the Republican candidate against Democrat Lloyd Doggett, said after the talk that he would be releasing later this week the names of 50 persons who had worked on Kent Hance's campaign and 10 of those from Bob Krueger's campaign who had joined the Republican. Hance and Krueger lost the Democratic nomination.

"We've had more luck than I thought with the Krueger people," Gramm said. "We've got 10 of his top supporters."

This summer Gramm is concentrating on the rural areas which have a history of voting Democratic.

"It's important to reach those people. They think Republicans are silk-stockinged city slickers from Dallas or Houston. I represent the philosophy shared by most Texans."

Gramm started out with the same melody: inflation is down, unemployment is down and President Reagan's economic program should be continued. As co-author of the Gramm-Latta bill which called for various reductions in spending, Gramm said only part of that legislation was followed. Last year, Congress threw out the Gramm-Latta guidelines and adopted its own budget which called for a higher deficit and new spending programs.

The problem, said Gramm, "is not a taxing one; it's a spending one. We can stay with the program that is working and bringing the inflation rate down or we can raise taxes so government can go on spending."

Some changes have been made in the spending programs, he said. "In 1981, there were too many people riding in the wagon, complaining they weren't getting to hold the reins or the ride wasn't soft enough. Then we asked them to get out of the wagon and pull it," the College Station congressman said of stricter requirements imposed on welfare eligibility.

The country's economic recovery has occurred during a period of declining inflation, and that is an unusual combination, he noted. "We haven't needed inflation to pull us out of the recession."

Gramm said he supports the constitutional amendment calling for a balanced budget. But in time of war, there would be a provision that Congress could suspend the rule by a 60 percent vote of both houses. And if the country slipped into a recession one year and revenues dropped, the budget correction could be made the following year.

He also noted it would take at least three years to get the budget in balance.

Refusing to predict what the interest rates would be in the future, Gramm said the rates could go down if Congress put a down payment on the deficit this year.

The military budget could be reduced by $30 billion in three years if a few changes were made. Gramm suggested repealing an amendment which calls for awarding a defense procurement contract to a company in a high unemployment area. Dropping the Davis-Bacon Act, which requires the government to pay union or prevailing wage scale in defense construction, would help. And the amount of items that go out for competitive bidding should be upped to 60 percent.

Military installations could be combined as a cost-cutting measure. "We're operating some military bases at less than 15 percent of capacity. We need to consolidate functions," he said.

A revised income tax system will hit Congress next year. Rather than a flat 10 percent which has been proposed by some corners, Gramm said Rep. Jack Kemp is working on a flat tax that would preserve some deductions.

Deregulation of natural gas has been one area he's addressed in Congress, but a bill before the House now would be worse than the current legislation. "The American consumer has lost more from price regulation of natural gas than from regulation of any other commodity," Gramm said. "We have suffered more in this country from stupidity than we've ever suffered from conspiracy."

'Tweens' 'hang out' during summer

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

They're called the tweens — teen-agers 'tween the ages of 13 and 16. They're too old for day care and too young for most jobs.

And many of them are hard put to find entertainment during the long summer days. One can sleep until noon, lay out by the pool and watch re-runs of "Brady Bunch" for just so long before getting bored.

Some do find work, according to Rick Etheredge, who oversees the summer youth program of the Texas Employment Commission. He has found jobs — full-time or intermittent — for about 100 "tween-agers." Many more, he feels, have found jobs on their own working in yards, fields, homes and restaurants. "But a great many of them are just staying home," he said.

About 300 students have enrolled in summer school at Midland High School. Many take driver's education. Less than 100 students have signed up for various courses, usually in computer sciences, at Midland College.

But there are roughly 5,000 tween-agers in the Midland Independent School District, one school official estimated. What do the rest of them do during summer vacation?

"Hang out" seems to be the most common answer. Popular gathering places include pools, parks, video arcades (to a lesser extent than past years), recreation centers, parking lots and the mall.

Drunken driver put on probation

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — An Ector County jury, told it would be "setting a standard for the community and our offices," Wednesday decided against prison time for a defendant who admitted he had been drunk when he caused the car wreck which claimed the life of a 23-year-old Odessan.

Jack Dempsey Samples, 31, was sentenced to 10 years on probation and a $5,000 fine after pleading guilty Tuesday to driving while intoxicated and causing the collision which resulted in the death of Dale Painter, 23.

Samples also was ordered by the court to pay restitution of about $10,000 to Painter's mother for the involuntary manslaughter conviction, stemming from an April 1982 wreck in which the defendant's car ran a red light and struck Painter's, while the victim's mother watched from a few car lengths behind.

Painter, who was heading home after sharing a meal with his mother at a local restaurant, died at Medical Center Hospital within two hours of the accident.

Samples, who asked the jury not to send him to prison, was happy with the verdict, which allows him to return to his San Antonio home. But Painter's family and the president of the local chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers were upset with the jury's decision against jail time.

"In voluntary manslaughter cases, we want jail time — no ifs, ands or buts," said Cynthia Grubb, president of the Midland/Odessa chapter of MADD.

Mrs. Painter, who cried on the stand during testimony, shook her head as the verdict was read. The victim's older brother later vented his anger at the jury and the legal system which he felt let Samples "off scot free."

"The public view regarding DWI is apathetic," said Vincent Partsch. He suggested the public is apathetic about drunk driving "until it's part of your family."

"What if someone had used a gun?" asked Partsch. "They're more concerned with (Samples') life than the fact he took someone's life."

Ms. Grubb echoed Partsch's sentiments, calling the verdict "a slap on the wrist."

"They view it as an accident. It isn't an accident," she said.

Quoting statistics that indicated drunk drivers take to the roads an average of 80 times each year for four years before an arrest, she said, "When you get 'em, you've got to get 'em good."

She criticized defense attorneys for calling the collision "an accident" and suggesting probation officers will have time to enforce the strict provisions Samples agreed to as part of his sentence.

"I can't imagine a more clear-cut case," said Ms. Grubb.

Samples told jurors, "That night I decided I wanted to do a little drinking," then recalled a night in which he apparently slipped in and out of consciousness, at one point waking up in a topless bar with two black women hitting him with their purses.

"Anybody who gets any booze in them, it just doesn't dawn on them and they keep on drinking," said Samples. He recalled pushing the accelerator while regaining consciousness as his car entered the intersection of Andrews Highway and University Avenue.

Painter's car, struck on the passenger side, was thrown over 130 feet from the intersection, and he was pinned inside the wreckage.

Samples, who swore he had no previous DWI convictions, told the jury he had begun drinking during the evening hours of April 23, a week after he had lost his job with an Odessa drilling company.

"Every single day since it's happened, I've had it on my mind," he said.

He denied being a problem drinker, saying he still drank beer, but would not drink and drive again.

"It was like a nightmare," testified the victim's mother, Dorothy Painter. "I just couldn't believe what I saw." Police said they heard the collision from several blocks away.

Mankind fails to view world as finite, fragile

I am appalled by the insanity of this amazing world.

Here we are, intelligent and supposedly rational creatures cast into a cyclic existence by an infinite Creator, and we have no place else to go.

We are stuck on Earth.

Not even the Moon or Mars seems inviting.

Spooning under a harvest moon is an exciting experience. But who wants to live on the Moon and collect rocks or travel on Mars' canals or be cast into infinite space?

We're bound to a finite Earth. We all know that; we just don't think. Mankind has the unparalleled audacity and the terrifying insanity to treat this planet as if it were disposable. Earth is not a box of Kleenex. It's not a family car which, after it's almost worn out and in need of an overhaul, can be traded in for a new model.

For now, we're tied to Earth just as surely as we are bound in our fleshly forms. And, in that regard, we tend to treat our flesh, blood and bones as if they, too, were renewable. In a reproductive sense, they are. That's why there are children running all around. But, as you've heard, there will never be another you.

So, what are we doing?

Humankind, so proud of its creative powers, is perfecting its technological and scientific know-how for dastardly purposes: destruction. The Super Powers and the "emerging powers" already are primed to destroy civilization. They are ready, in the name of defense and their ideologies, to set off atomic and hydrogen weapons in the name of vanity, pride, greed and blindness. They must be willing to rename this planet "Hiroshima."

Another world war is untenable. It is suicide, homicide and world-cide. It is not impossible, for man has yet to devise a war to end all wars; he has tried, as graveyards the worldwide will attest.

While man is planning his own destruction via the military, he also is plotting a world-cide by more cautious and deliberate means: exploitation.

Witness to that is the imperialistic Manifest Destiny. We exploited the United States until much of it is eroded and beyond regeneration for generations to come. We've managing to pollute the air, the waters, the oceans, the soil and our very beings.

For so-called rational and reasoning beings, humans in the raw and in refinement are grossly lacking in foresight and in the innate quality found in lesser creatures: a balance in the world. Do we not view the world of wildlife, the pristine world unaltered by man, in wonderment and in awe?

Yet, we, with God's gift of limited creation and free will, are so blind. We grope for peace and harmony, but we greedily plot and strive for our selfish ends and fail to view the world as finite and fragile.

We have thrown the world out of balance.

How we pull out of this dive and spin toward destruction is a question all of mankind ought to address today. But to do that demands worldwide cooperation, a concerted effort by all peoples. Is that possible? Can we make heavenly music out of cacophony?

Graveside services were to be at 4 p.m. today in Trinity Memorial Park, directed by Nalley-Pickle and Welch Funeral Home.

Mrs. Taylor was a member of College Baptist Church.

Eunice Orem

LUBBOCK — Eunice Brettell Orem, 83, of Midland, died Wednesday in a Lubbock hospital after a sudden illness.

Graveside services will be 1 p.m. Friday at Prescott National Cemetery in Prescott, Ariz.

Mrs. Orem was born May 17, 1901, in Gonzales. She was married to Chester Peter Orem in Belle Fourche, S.D., in 1919. They moved from the Black Hills of South Dakota to Pinetop, Ariz., in 1970. Orem died in 1975.

Mrs. Orem, a Midland resident since 1975, was a member of Eastern Star, Daughters of the American Revolution, American Legion Auxiliary, American Association of Retired Persons, Veterans of World War I of the U.S. Auxiliary, the South Dakota Daughters of the American Colonists and the Episcopal Church.

Survivors include two sons, Chester George Orem of Midland and Harry Marshall Orem of Pinetop, Ariz.; five grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be sent to the Midland Senior Citizens Center.

Thelma Handley

Services for Thelma Handley, 69, of Midland, will be at 3 p.m. Friday in St. Mark's United Methodist Church with the Rev. Jack Riley, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park, directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers will be W.D. Gill, Bill Switzer, J.R. Wright, Ed Snodgrass, Jack Jeffries and J.E. Wilkerson.

Mrs. Handley died Tuesday evening in a Midland hospital after a long illness.

She was born Sept. 26, 1914, in Titus County where she was reared. She graduated from Mount Pleasant High School and attended Texas Women's College, where she received her degree in 1934. She taught school for the next two years and was a home demonstration agent for a year. She married D.H. Handley Jan. 2, 1937, in Fort Worth. They moved to Decatur for a short time, before moving to Ardmore, Okla. They moved to Midland in March 1960. She was a member of St. Mark's United Methodist Church.

Survivors include her husband of Midland; two sons, Don Handley of Midland and David Handley of Geneva, Switzerland; a brother, James Welborn of Dallas; and two grandchildren.

PAGEANT

Dawson County Judge Glenn White of Lamesa put six ounces of milk in the bucket after yanking on two teats. "There's two more spigots on the other side," cried a spectator.

Winkler County Judge Frances Clark of Kermit got 1.25 ounces from the cow. "I've never seen anybody milk, except on TV," she said.

Midland County Judge Bill Ahders edged in close to the cow.

"I HATE TO tell you," Deavenport said, "but this is a Democratic cow."

"A Democratic cow?" Ahders, a Republican, asked.

He promptly produced a quart of store-bought chocolate milk, poured it into the bucket and proclaimed, "Here's my entry."

"That's what happens when you leave it to the Republicans," announced Howard.

A 10th contestant, Patty Schuelke, 27, Martin County's first lady, squeezed out 10 ounces of the cow's brew and took a sip from the bucket.

There were more savory things, such as butter churning and biscuit making, going on. Other events included quilting, weaving, corn husking, washing and fiddling. "This is what you call 'pure country' — trying to get back to the basics," observed Deavenport.

He headed for the food.

"How long has it been since you've tasted real honest-to-goodness butter just churned?" asked Deavenport.

The judge produced Michaeleen "Mike" Glendening, who turned cream into butter in a Dazey Churn. "Oh, yeah," she said, "I make butter every week. We have a milk cow, and we have lots of cream."

DRESSING UP the atmosphere in the Martin County Community Center were the men and women in costumes from the 1880s. Some strutted while others lingered and busied themselves with toiling.

Deavenport's garb included a black derby and a black bow tie.

The women were donned in full-blown dresses down to the ankles; some were wearing hoops and bonnets.

The day was hot.

"I think it's going to warm up," Deavenport jested to two sisters.

"Warm up?" asked Charlotte White, 37.

"I think it's done its due," her sister, Sharron Odom, 34, said in a country drawl.

"Right," agreed her sister. "We need an old-fashioned block of ice to sit on and make ice cream."

Despite the nostalgia of the atmosphere and the old-fashioned music, including some Gay '90s piano playing, the sisters didn't seem interested in living in "the past" — in the olden days of kerosene lamps, horses and buggies, mules and ploughs, lye-soap making and washing by the scrub board.

"I'm glad I don't live in them times," said Ms. Odom. "I like my modern conveniences."

Never modern, never old was the fiddling. Two Midlanders, Jim Tennison, 32, and his student, Amy Hale, 14, broke out with some breakdowns and waltzes.

They were the sole entrants in the contest for amateur fiddlers.

"We've got to have two first places, and two last places," said the emcee, Mike Payne. "We don't have any ribbons — just cold, hard cash. They are going to play this and that." They did and got $25 each.

Over in a barn, within a cow chip's toss of the milk cows, were some barnyard animals, from a puffed-up, strutting turkey to some roosters and nanny goats.

A practical jokester fixed up a large wire cage. There was nothing in it but a sign was on it: "Barnyard flies: Please Do Not Shoo Away."

Martin County celebrates centennial

From Staff Reports

STANTON — Martin County's Centennial Celebration this week includes the nightly serious-to-jocular Centennial Pageant, daytime games and contests, and Saturday's Old Settlers Reunion.

The Courtney Community Reunion will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday in the First Baptist Church in Stanton. The reunion is open to ex-students, former teachers and residents of the old community northwest of Stanton.

The Centennial Pageant begins with a pre-show fare at 8:15 p.m. today, Friday and Saturday in the Stanton High School Football Stadium.

"It's great," Paige Eiland, Centennial Celebration chairman, said of the show, which has a cast of 300 townspeople. The show, headlined "Centennial: The Story of Martin County," is a lighthearted and serious account of the community's history from times of the Conquistadors until 1984.

The show begins at dusk.

Friday's activities will be centered around senior citizens in the Stanton Care Center. Activities, to begin at 10 a.m., are to include games, lunch and recognition of the Older Texan.

On Saturday, "Old Settlers' Day" in Stanton, functions will include a 4-H Club Ice Cream Sale, a Future Farmers of America ice cream parlor, the Old Settlers Parade at 10 a.m.; the Martin County Jaycees' downtown games at 1 p.m.; beard judging at 1 p.m.; Old Settlers Fiddlers' Contest at 1 p.m. in the Martin County Community Center, and the 6:30 p.m. barbecue in Shelburne City Park.

Stanton, founded in 1881 by an order of Carmelites, priests and friars from Kansas by way of Austria and Germany, initially was known as Grelton, a section house along the Texas & Pacific Railway Co. tracks. The T&P laid its tracks here in 1881.

The Carmelites, under the guidance of a priest, Anastasio Peters, established a colony of families and a monastery after their arrival here on Aug. 15, 1881. They named the settlement Marienfeld (Field of Mary). Their numbers dwindled in 1886 and 1887 during a prolonged drought but many from the order endured the "hard times" and stayed on.

The community was renamed Stanton in 1890 due to Protestant influence. The town was named after President Abraham Lincoln's Secretary of War, Edwin M. Stanton.

In 1894, the Sisters of Mercy established a convent and boarding school in the monastery, which had been discontinued a few years earlier.

Martin County was organized in 1884.

About 150 teens a day participate in tournaments, games and crafts offered at recreation centers at Lee Freshman High School, Alamo YMCA and Park Center YMCA, said Laurie Bowers, program supervisor with the City of Midland's Parks and Recreation Department.

"Cruising the mall," is popular with students from 8 to 20, said Pam Leach, marketing director at Midland Park Mall. "It seems we're the biggest babysitting operation in town," she joked.

"During the summer they're out in large numbers," she added, saying they usually travel in groups. "Cruising out here is more for the younger teens that don't have any place to go.

"They're mostly in the food court area, because that's where the arcade is. Early afternoon and evenings are the heaviest times," she said, estimating teens make up about 25 percent of the crowd at those times.

"We really don't have any sort of security problems at all," she continued, but admitted receiving some complaints about the break dancing performances. "We don't discourage them coming out here. They're shoppers. They're buying things and keeping up with the new fashion trends.

"We'd never tell them 'Y'all have to break it up and get out of here.' We wouldn't want to be guilty of something happening like 'Adam,' where someone ran him out of the store." She was referring to the widely-publicized story of Adam Walsh, who disappeared from a mall and was later found murdered.

The mall is a meeting place for students, as well as a place to kill time. Allison Kirkpatrick, 15, and Kelley Haddon, 16, were two teen-agers chatting in the food court and munching on french fries Wednesday afternoon. Both spend their mornings in summer school, but their afternoon activities include, among other things, "looking at guys" in the mall. They talked about how their classmates spend their days.

"Most of the time they go riding around," Allison said. "They go out on the drag or come out to the mall."

"Water Wonderland. Swimming. Parties. Skating," added Kelley.

"Nobody goes skating anymore," Allison contradicted. "A lot of time is spent at home."

"Watching soaps," Kelley finished. "Some leave town, go on vacation, visit relatives."

Contrary to what might be expected, idle teen-agers don't often cause trouble. "I think they really have fewer problems during the summer because most of them stay busy," said juvenile probation officer Lorraine Miles. "They go to camps, church and other camps. A lot of them visit relatives. Many have jobs. Really, kids get in trouble a lot less during the summer than the school year."

Of course, parents might have a different opinion. But bored-to-tears tweens and distraught mothers and fathers can take heart. School is just six weeks away.

He advocated opening up the Outer Continental Shelf for drilling and exploration, saying that with new technology the environment wouldn't be hurt.

Rather than impose trade restrictions on foreign countries, Gramm proposed instituting his "Second Law of Political Behavior: If you're going to catch hell no matter what you do, you're generally going to do what's right."

He explained that the United States' trading partners should be asked to open up their markets for U.S. products the way this country is open to foreign goods. "Our trade policy needs to be like a mirror image of theirs," he said. If the foreign countries refuse, then the U.S. could restrict sale of those countries' products here.

As an example, he said Japanese politicians might figure selling more U.S. goods would put 5 percent of their people out of work. But when the Japanese are faced with putting about 50 percent of their people out of work if they can't sell cars or television sets in the U.S., their trade policy toward American products would change.

Prosecutor Ruth Marks suggested during final arguments to the jury that its verdict would be "setting a standard for the community and our offices."

But defense attorney John Cliff insisted jail time for Samples would not protect "future Dale Painters."

"We can't compensate Mrs. Painter. We can't bring Dale Painter back to life," he said.

Painter's older brother expressed frustration at the legal system, questioning why the case took more than two years to come to court.

During the jury's deliberations, Cliff said growing negative sentiment over DWI might hurt Samples' case. Looking back, Cliff said a better sentence might have been gained if the case had gone to trial before the increased pressure on cases involving drinking and driving.

"I think Texas attitudes on drunk driving are very liberal," said Ms. Grubb. "We have to let potential jurors know what probaton really is. Probation is nothing."

Rats often born in octets

A rat delivers her young, usually about eight in a litter, 24 days after mating. She can mate again immediately, and so could theoretically have a dozen or so litters a year, but five is typical.

Man killed in explosion

HOUSTON (AP) — One man was killed and another hurt in an explosion of a railroad tank car they were cleaning, a chemical company official said today.

Hector M. Garza, 30, was killed Wednesday in the 11:40 p.m. blast at the Empak Inc. facility in the southeast Houston suburb of Deer Park, plant manager Joe Whitworth said today.

A second man, 27-year-old Israel Garza, was in serious condition at Hermann Hospital in Houston. Whitworth said the two men were not brothers but may have been distant cousins.

Cash, checks taken from office

From Staff Reports

Cash, checks and money orders totaling $10,183 were reported taken in a theft at the Autumn Woods apartment complex, 2439 Whitmire.

An employee told police the money represented the day's receipts and was in a bank bag that had been left on an office desk late Wednesday afternoon.

Alex Carameros reported a burglary at 1217 Lynn. Taken was $1,585 worth of carpet, furniture and kitchen appliances. Entry was gained sometime in the past week by forcing a sliding door.

Sonig Duffin of 4609 Tattenbaum said two gold bracelets valued at a total of $900 were stolen in a burglary Tuesday. The bracelets had been left on a window sill. The window had been left open and the thief removed the screen to reach the jewelry.

Duncanville man collides with parked truck

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 20-year-old Duncanville resident was in surgery Thursday morning following an early morning collision on West County Road in Odessa in which his car collided with a parked Peterbilt truck.

Kevin R. Smith, 20, Duncanville, was attempting to pass a car at 5:17 a.m. while traveling southbound in the inside lane of West County Road when his 1976 Plymouth struck the rear of the semi-truck, parked on west side out of the traffic lane, according to police reports.

Smith's vehicle reportedly sustained extensive damage. No reports were available on the types of injuries Smith had suffered. He was reportedly still in surgery at presstime, so no condition report was available from Medical Center Hospital.

Youths arrested in shooting at grocery store

LUFKIN (AP) — Two Hispanic youths have been arrested in connection with the shooting of two grocery workers and a teen-ager who remain hospitalized, authorities say.

Police identified the wounded as 53-year-old Tom Humphries, owner of the Quik Way store and a store clerk, Elizabeth Simons, 41. Also injured was an unidentified youth thought to be about 13 years old.

Detective David Hayes said the wounded teen-ager, who apparently went to the store with two other youths who were armed, was shot accidentally Tuesday. Police believe the teenagers attacked Humphries and Mrs. Simon because Humphries had made the boys leave the store.

Earlier Tuesday, Humphries had caught the boys shoplifting but decided to let them go, Hayes said.

Police Capt. David Kirkland said the youths, ages 15 and 16, put up no struggle when they were picked up at their homes. He said a .32- and a 38-caliber handgun, believed to have been used in the shooting, also were recovered.

Humphries and the store clerk suffered multiple wounds, but were listed in stable condition at Lufkin hospitals.

The teen-ager was struck between the eyes and was in critical condition. He was transferred to a Nacogdoches hospital for emergency brain surgery.

The grocery personnel, Hayes said, were unarmed.

Teen accidentally shot when gun goes off

HOUSTON (AP) — A 15-year-old girl was fatally shot as she and her older brother played with a shotgun, authorities say.

Bernadino Trinidad was killed Wednesday evening at her southeast Houston home, police said.

When the girl's 17-year-old brother inserted a bolt on a .410-gauge shotgun, the weapon discharged, police said.

The slaying will be referred to a Harris County grand jury without charges, police said.

Cuomo unhurt in auto mishap

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo was "shaken up" but unhurt when his car was involved in a seven-car, chain-reaction accident, a spokesman said.

Cuomo's car was struck Wednesday afternoon as he was going to a hotel in suburban Cheektowaga, said a spokesman for the governor, Timothy Russert.

The governor, who has a bad back, was "shaken up" by the accident but did not require hospitalization, said Russert.

Cuomo is to give the keynote address at the Democratic National Convention on Monday.

An aide, Gary Eiseman, was taken to a hospital after the accident, Russert said. Eiseman was riding in the car ahead of the governor's and suffered a cut.

The governor, expected to announce today whether he will sign legislation making seat belt use mandatory in New York state for adults riding in the front seats of automobiles, was sitting in the front seat wearing his seat belt, according to Russert.

"Otherwise, he probably would have hit the windshield," said Russert.

A state trooper and a reporter were in the car with Cuomo when it was struck from behind while stopped.

LONDON (AP) — Princess Anne's husband and father are denying a newspaper report that her 11-year-old marriage is a "loveless union."

Capt. Mark Phillips, who is married to the princess, was "obviously annoyed" when he responded to the report by The Sun newspaper, the British Press Association reported.

Prince Philip, Anne's father, told a "Face the Press" luncheon Wednesday at London's Hyde Park Hotel that the media "cannot get their facts right."

Buckingham Palace refused comment.

Princess Anne is Queen Elizabeth II's only daughter. She and Phillips have two children. There have been news stories that their marriage is on the rocks since September 1981.

The latest story in The Sun said the gulf between them "has now widened to the point where they virtually lead separate lives.... Anne and Mark seek solace in the company of separate groups of friends."

The prince, who arrived Wednesday, also was scheduled to sign the golden books of visitors in Lemgo, Hemer and Iserlohn.

Charles is the colonel-in-chief of the two British regiments stationed in the area.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Raymond L.S. Patriarca, a onetime rum runner who authorities say ruled New England organized crime for three decades, was described after his death both as a "well-liked" man and a vengeful mob chieftain who ordered gangland killings.

The heart condition that had long kept the frail Patriarca out of reach of judges and prosecutors caused his death Wednesday at age 76 at Rhode Island Hospital, where he was taken after suffering a heart attack in North Providence, officials said.

A slight man at 5-foot-6 who favored cheap cigars and wore white socks with his suits, Patriarca grew up in Providence's predominantly Italian Federal Hill section. He counted as friends everyone from small-time thugs to the chief justice of the Rhode Island Supreme Court.

He was born on St. Patrick's Day 1908 in Worcester, Mass., and would later be arrested more than 40 times and convicted of 18 crimes — from playing dice on Sunday to armed robbery and accessory to murder.

Joseph Valachi, a former mobster who told the secrets of the Cosa Nostra before a Senate committee, said Patriarca was a member of "this thing of ours" since the 1940s.

Dollar reaches new heights; Stock market falls

The Associated Press

Expectations of rising interest fates and continued moderate inflation have helped propel the dollar to new heights in foreign exchange trading, while plunging the stock market to its lowest level in four months, an analyst says.

The dollar set all-time highs against the Canadian dollar and French franc on Wednesday, and it reached a new high for a second day in a row according to a Federal Reserve Board index.

But on Wall Street, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 18.33 to 1,108.55, for its poorest daily showing since it dropped 22.82 points on Feb. 28.

David Arbesman, a first vice president at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. in New York, said the dollar was driven by "a perception that U.S. interest rates are not going to come down."

But at the same time, rising interest rates have hurt the stock market as investors turn from stocks to high-paying bonds.

In a development which could brighten prospects for low inflation, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries wound up a two-day meeting in Vienna on Wednesday by deciding to hold oil prices at current levels, rejecting a suggestion that the price should be lifted to $34 a barrel from $29.

A leading member of the cartel, Saudi Arabia, said it would reduce its oil production to allow cash-strapped Nigeria to sell more and to permit the group to stay within its overall production limits.

Gasoline prices in the United States and some other Western countries have been holding steady, and in some cases decreasing, mainly because supplies are up as a result of increased worldwide oil production.

Iran had suggested that OPEC raise its prices to $34 a barrel.

Instead, the 13-member cartel reaffirmed its London agreement of March 1983 in which it reduced its reference price by $5 a barrel, to $29, and set an overall production limit of 17.5 million barrels daily.

Although the production ceiling will be retained, Saudi Arabia — OPEC's largest producer — agreed to cut its production to allow Nigeria to sell more, conference sources said. The other 11 member countries agreed to stick to their current production quotas.

In another economic development, a divided government panel recommended that President Reagan impose a complex system of quotas and tariffs under which most steel imports to the United States would be restricted for five years.

The U.S. International Trade Commission voted 3-2 for a plan to limit four types of steel imports to an average 17.7 percent share of the American market for three years. The maximum market share would rise to 19.5 percent in the fourth and fifth years.

"This program will enable the domestic steel industry to generate the much-needed cash flow to modernize existing steel production facilities and to become more competitive," said Commissioner Alfred Eckes, who voted with the majority.

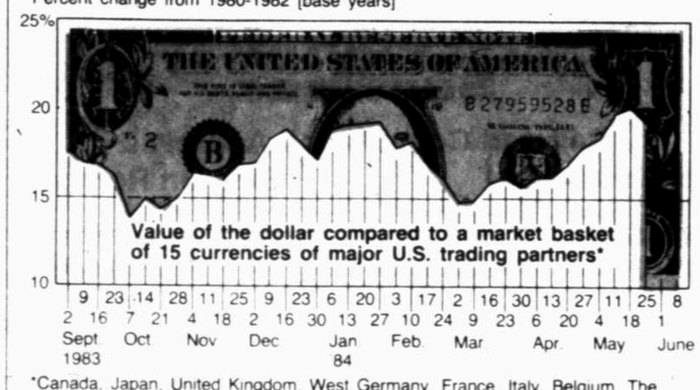

But steel importers have argued that while the plan might save 10,000 steelworker jobs, its cost would "irreparably damage" U.S. steel users such as the automobile industry.

The plan now goes to the White House, where President Reagan will weigh whether to accept, reject or modify it. The decision must be made before the election — by Sept. 24 or, if Reagan requests additional information, by Oct. 7.

Local firm hit with SEC injunction; Misrepresentation of facts alleged Wayne M Secore, Administrator of the Fort Worth Regional Office of the Securities and Exchange Commission, announced that on July 11, 1984, the Honorable Lucius D. Bunton of the United States District Court, Western District of Texas, issued an Order of Permanent Injunction against Harshel Rex Chambers and Jackie Alan Chambers, of Midland.

The order permanently enjoins the defendants from further violations of the registration and antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws. Chambers and Chambers consented to the entry of the order without admitting or denying the allegations in the complaint.

The Commission's complaint, filed July 11, 1984, alleges that the defendants were doing business as Chambers Oil and Gas and operating out of Midland. The complaint further alleges that from 1981 to the present, the defendants violated the registration provisions of the Securities Act of 1933 through the offer and sale of fractional undivided interests in oil and gas leases to approximately 50 investors in four states and Canada, raising over $2 million.

In connection with the offer and sale of these securities, the complaint alleges that the defendants violated the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws by misrepresenting and omitting to state material facts.

The SEC complaint alleges that Harshel and Jackie Chambers failed to disclose:

— their history in the oil and gas business.

— the success or failure of prior drilling operations.

— the co-mingling of in-sector funds.

— the financial conditions of themselves or Chamber Oil and Gas.

The SEC complaint further alleges that the pair missrepresented information by telling investors that:

— they could expect 200-300 barrels of oil per day from producing well.

— a water injection well was generating income of $1200 to $1500 per month.

— investors could expect to recover their investment in 10-12 months.

— actual production was 30-60 barrels per day and — that the condition of well equipment was excellant.

SEC alleged that, in fact, the wells were producing only two to five barrels per day, the water injection well income was minimal and the condition of the well equipment was largely poor.

Texas American purchases stock

Texas American Energy Corp. has announced that it has purchased all Texas American stock held by Cavalcade Oil Corp. and John Mark Wilson at a price of $7.75 per share. The purchase involved 439,485 shares, after giving effect to Texas American's five percent stock dividend payable August 1, 1984.

Cavalcade, Wilson and Michael J. Levenson, president of Cavalcade, have agreed for a period of five years not to purchase Texas American shares or to engage in a proxy solicitation relating to Texas American.

Cavalcade also agreed to dismiss an action it had brought against Texas American in the Delaware Chancery Court, and Texas American agreed to dismiss its counterclaims in that action.

Texas American has paid Cavalcade $807,497 for expenses incurred in connection with the litigation and Cavalcade's solicitation of proxies at Texas American's 1984 annual meeting of stockholders.

UT scientist honored for research in statistics

AUSTIN — Dr. Carl N. Morris, director of the Center for Statistical Sciences at The University of Texas has been honored for his research in statistics. Morris received the Don Owen Award, which was presented by the San Antonio chapter of the American Statistical Association. He shared the award with Prof. Bill Schucany of SMU.

Average income of managerial workers up

CRETE, Ill. — Over the past two years, the average income of managerial personnel in the manufacturing field has increased by 15.5 percent and the income of engineering personnel by 10.5 percent — while the consumer Price Index increased by 7.3 percent according to a recent survey sponsored by the Society of Manufacturing Engineers.

Outside owners/partners, the individual in manufacturing management with the highest annual income is a corporate president in a firm manufacturing transportation equipment or machinery. This individual has a bachelor's degree in engineering, 20-40 years of experience, and supervises 50 or more professionals. Such an individual earns in excess of $270,000, although corporate presidents as a group have an average income of $69,000.

The lowest-paid function is probably that of a cost estimator with training in some field other than engineering. He is employed in an entry level position in a firm with 100-999 employees. Such an individual may earn as little as $25,000 per year, although the average income of cost estimators is $30,686 and that of all engineering personnel is $33,595.

Income tax may be taken from pension

DALLAS — Pension income may be either fully or partially taxable, IRS says; and federal income taxes may be withheld from pension payments. Many retirees may find the withholding a convenience that can spare them penalties when they file their federal income tax returns. Withholding is not compulsory, and any person can apply to their payor for exemption. However, without tax withholding, a retiree who owes 4400 or more for 1984 may be liable for an estimated tax penalty.

A retiree who chooses not to have tax withheld from pension payments may pay quarterly estimated payments to avoid the penalty. Additional information can be found in Publication 505, "Tax Withholding and Estimated Tax," which is available free from the Internal Revenue Service.

Petroplex Savings branch office unopposed

AUSTIN — No opposition has been received by the Texas Savings and Loan Department to the application of Petroplex Saings Association, Midland, for a branch office in Monahans.

The proposed office would be located at 301 S. Main.

Also unopposed was the application of Andrews Savings and Loan Association for a branch office at 318 S. Main, Morton.

The applications have been referred to Savings and Loan Commissioner L.L. Bowman III for decisions.

Governmental Insurance Conference set

DENTON, Texas — A Governmental Insurance Conference, to be held Aug. 2-3 in Austin, is designed especially for Texas and Texas government agencies and is geared specifically toward solving problems relevant to Texas public agencies, including counties, cities, schools and state agencies.

Last hurdle looms on steel imports protection

WASHINGTON (AP) — The last hurdle in a seven-month fight for industrywide protection against steel imports may be the biggest: a president who doesn't believe in import quotas.

By the end of the month, President Reagan will have on his desk an elaborate package of temporary quotas and tariff increases narrowly approved Wednesday by the U.S. International Trade Commission.

His options are to accept, reject or modify the politically sticky proposal by Sept. 24 — six weeks before the election.

Top administration trade officials maintain that quotas would aggravate tensions with trading partners and drive up steel prices.

But Bethlehem Steel Corp. and the United Steelworkers of America, which petitioned the ITC for the import protection, say domestic producers need temporary quotas in order to modernize and become competitive.

"I would judge there won't be a statement until the president is ready to act on it," White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said after the ITC vote.

Splitting 3-2, the commission approved a plan that would limit four types of steel imports to an average 15.5 percent share of the American market for three years. The maximum market share would rise to 17.1 percent in the fourth and fifth years.

Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., chairman of the Senate Steel Caucus, said he would strongly urge Reagan to adopt the ITC recommendation "in its entirety, so that we can get American steelworkers back on the job rather than leaving them on the street where too many of them are right now."

More than 170 steel facilities have closed in the last two years and some 90,000 steelworkers are laid off. The USW estimates another 100,000 have permanently lost their jobs.

Heinz, the major Senate proponent of a bill establishing an across-the-board 15 percent quota on steel imports, said he would pursue the bill only if Reagan does not implement the ITC recommendations.

The chairman of the House Steel Caucus, Rep. John Murtha, welcomed the ITC vote but said he would continue to push for the legislation "because it is more comprehensive and a surer way to the quota goal."

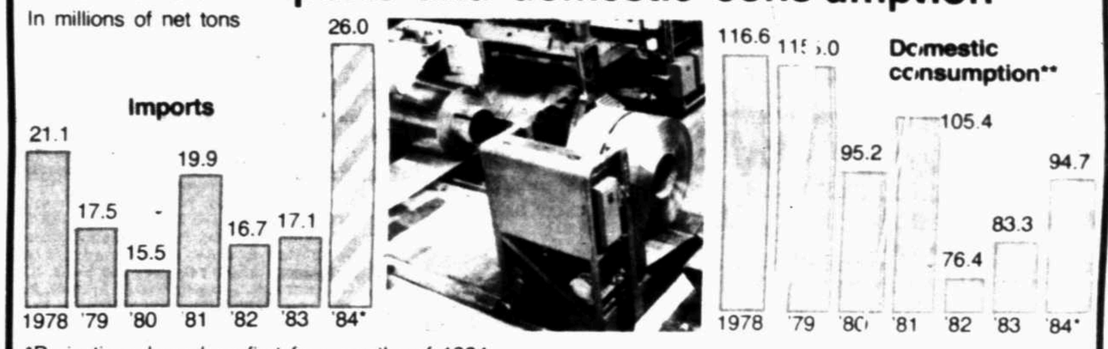

Bethlehem Steel Corp. Chairman Donald Trautlein and USW President Lynn Williams also said they would continue to fight for the congressional measure.

"I don't think the tariff remedy will be effective and the (quota) limits are just too high," Trautlein told reporters in Pittsburgh, referring to the ITC vote.

Bethlehem and the USW requested a 14.3 percent average cap on the foreign share of the U.S. market. The entire quota-tariff package covers products accounting for about 70 percent of 1983 imports, rather than the requested 100 percent.

World leaders concerned by loss of capital to U.S.

DALLAS — As America's foreign trade deficit grows larger, so does the amount of foreign capital flowing into the United States — and this is causing considerable concern in world capitals, says RepublicBank Corp. chief economist William E. Gibson.

"The desire to buy dollars to make investments here is putting upward pressure on the value of the dollar, which in turn is making U.S. exports increasingly noncompetitive abroad, hence our trade deficit is worsening," Gibson states in the new July issue of the corporation's Economic Perspective.

To stem this inflow of foreign capital to the U.S., world leaders are urging the United States to cut its federal deficit and thus lower the value of the dollar. But Gibson says they might not be much happier if their wishes were to come true.

"A meaningful reduction of the U.S. budget deficit could well have the opposite effect on exchange rates. If the U.S. responds to what foreigners feel to be our greatest economic problem, it is highly questionable whether this would hurt the dollar," Gibson says. "While it might lead to fractionally lower real rates of return in 1985 and 1986, it would add immensely to the longer-term attractiveness of U.S. investment from the viewpoint of foreigners."

He adds, "To the extent that the U.S. gives signals of being able to adapt and adjust to this large (deficit) problem, it will give our economy enhanced stature abroad. Accordingly, meaningful deficit reductions would likely attract more investment than they drove away."

Foreign investors are attracted to the U.S. by the prospect of higher returns brought on by higher interest rates Gibson says.

"Treasury deficits have become an internationally thorny issue as foreign leaders are pressing the U.S. to reduce the deficit to reverse the dollar's strength," he states. "Often the discussion notes that high budget deficits are inflationary, and this process is lifting interest rates."

However, a misconception exists that budget deficits are the sole reason for higher interest rates. Not so, says Gibson. They are the reason why interest rates are high, but heavier borrowing by U.S. businesses to finance new projects is why rates are rising.

The desire among many foreigners to invest in the United States has mixed blessings for the U.S. economy. On one hand, the foreign capital inflow has enabled domestic investment to flourish despite the fact that the Treasury has been taking such a large part of available credit.

On the other hand, foreign investment and the upward pressure it puts on the dollar has disrupted business for U.S. exporters. U.S. products are being priced out of foreign markets and hence our trade deficit is worsening, he says. The merchandise trade balance is now registering monthly deficits which exceed the annual totals of a few years ago.

"The dollar's value is not likely to fall precipitously for the foreseeable future. Following on, a reversal of our trade deficit problem also does not seem just around the corner," Gibson states.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Rank wildcat finaled in Sterling

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

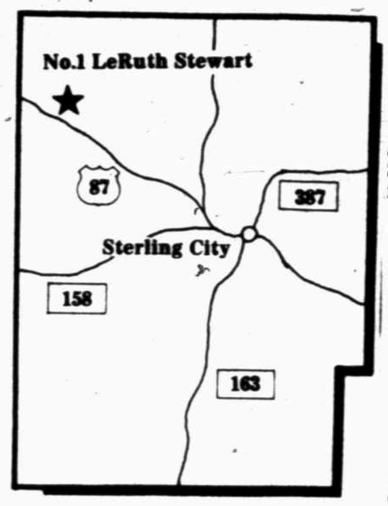

TEXAS AMERICAN OIL CO., Midland, has completed a significant Fusselman wildcat in a relatively rank area of Sterling County.

The firm reports that while the well is no "barn burner," it is a good well and additional acreage has been acquired since the completion of the well.

Spudded March 30 of this year, the No.1 LeRuth Stewart has tested flowing 72 bopd of 54.4 API crude, 160 Mcfd gas, with nine bwpd. Gas oil ratio was reported at 2,222:1.

It was completed in perforated intervals from 8,9[illegible]2-8,930 ft. and 8,930-8,937 ft., after being drilled to a total depth of 9,12[illegible] ft. and being plugged back to 9,01[illegible] ft. Ground elevation at the well site was 2,518 ft.

Formation tops in the Fusselman discovery were were: the Fusselman; 7,910 on top of the Fusselman; 8,818 on top of sand; 7,026 on top of ft. at the Cisco 8,758 ft. on top of the f the Strawn; 8,878 ft. at the top of Mississippian; the Woodford and 8,970 ft. on the Montoya.

Matt Holten/Reporter Telegram

A confirmation well has been staked on the prospect.

Conger Penn gets producer, extension

For those who have or can get the acreage to drill on, the Conger Southwest (Penn) continues to yield modest to good rewards.

INDIAN WELLS OIL CO., Tulsa, has finaled its No.1 Edmonson '44' pumping 40 bopd 43.5 API crude, 186 Mcfd gas with 12 bwpd and a GOR of 4,650:1, and feels there may be some potential behind the pipe in the Wolfcamp.

A field edge development well, Indian Wells, a new name in the area, drilled the well on a farm out from Wagner-Brown, Midland. who is reported to have shifted a large chunk of its budget to Louisiana and may be giving farm outs to further define the already closely defined field, which needs further definition on some sides.

Indian Wells, headquartered in Tulsa, describes the farm out well as adequate but not quiet what they were looking for.

"This is not a bad well, but we usually like to see more reserves for the money," says Paul Woodul, vice president,Indian Wells. He said his firm would probably turn acreage back to Wagner-Brown.

Indian Wells is a heavy player in the Canyon sand trend in Irion and Schleicher counties.

Chevron wildcat still has not spudded

A highly rank wildcat, slated to be drilled 30 miles east of El Paso along Interstate 10 has still not spudded. Chevron reports that it is encountering survey problems because of old 'visual' surveys, and has not yet selected the site. Problems could be resolved, however, some time this month. Chevron reports the wildcat will be below 10,000 ft.

Cosden buys polypropylene business

PHILADELPHIA — Cosden Oil & Chemical Co. (Cosden), a subsidiary of American Petrofina Inc., has completed the purchase of Arco Chemical company's (a division of Atlantic Richfield Co.), polypropylene business, including a 470 million pound per year plant at LaPorte, Texas, utilizing some of the latest technological advances for the manufacture of polypropylene. The effective date was July 1.

The acquisition immediately diversifies the company's product line and places Cosden as a major producer of polypropylene in the U.S. Cosden will retain many of the existing Arco Chemical Co. personnel and will market polypropylene under the existing trademark — Dypro.

May Petroleum completes discovery well

DALLAS (SWN) — May Petroleum Inc., a Dallas-based oil and gas exploration and production company, has announced the successful completion of a discovery well on the East Duson Prospect in south Louisiana. The well was drilled by May, its three 1983 partnerships and May Energy Partners Ltd.

May, as operator, completed Hutchinson No. 1 in Lafayette Parish, La. The well flowed at 8.5 million cubic feet of gas per day and 178 barrels of oil per day from perforated intervals of 11,224 to 11,230 feet in the MioGyp formation.

AT&T freezes management salaries

NEW YORK (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. says its decision to freeze management salaries through 1985 to save $184 million will allow it to compete more efficiently in the newly deregulated communications industry.

The freeze, which applies to 114,000 employees at all levels of management, comes at a time of transition for AT&T, which was separated from its local Bell System operating subsidiaries Jan. 1 and freed to enter new, unregulated lines of business.

"As we manage our way through this transformation, it is absolutely essential that we spare no effort to reduce current costs and minimize future costs to the fullest practical extent," AT&T Chairman Charles L. Brown said Tuesday in a message to the company's managers worldwide.

ALTHOUGH THERE will be no overall increase for the salary schedule, the freeze will not affect raises for changes within salary classifications or commission and special incentive compensation plans, the company said.

It also does not affect AT&T's 236,000 non-managerial employees, the company said.

Harry Edelson, a telecommunications analyst for the investment firm of First Boston Corp., said the freeze "shows they mean business. It shows they're not kidding around — they want to be tough in the first year out.

"They are in the right track to cut costs," he said. "This is one way to do it and it is less painful than laying people off."

AT&T HAS SO far resisted layoffs or dividend reductions to cut costs. However, last month, the company decided to keep its payout for the second quarter at 30 cents per common share.

Details of the salary freeze were explained to managers in a series of meetings, the company said.

Brown said in his letter that the company "must accelerate the shaping of the new AT&T from an enterprise that conducted a single business — telephone service — under regulation nationwide, to one that conducts many lines of business in high technology products and services worldwide, in markets that are fiercely competitive."

Despite the freeze, the company plans to "continue to pay salaries which will enable us to hire and keep high-caliber management people we need to assure our success now and in the future," Brown said.

THE COMPANY pays its management employees on a scale ranging from about $20,000 a year for an entry-level position to $768,500 base pay for the chairman.

Don McLaughlin, a company spokesman, said the last general salary increase for managers came in April, when they were given an average of 3.5 percent, excluding merit awards.

He said changes in the salary structure this year had added an estimated $155 million in costs and that the $184 million savings figure for next year was an estimate based on "what we probably would have given" for 1985.

McLaughlin said the company would be looking for other ways to cut costs, although he would not specify any possibilities. "There is going to be no activity that is exempt from scrutiny. Every faction in the company is being looked at or will be looked at," he said.

HE ALSO SAID the company was talking to representatives of its 230,000 union workers about wages, noting, "The unions are certainly aware of our need to cut costs." Union workers approved a new three-year contract in August 1983.

Veteran oilman wants to stamp out careless attitudes, crude thefts

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — R.J. Underhill is worried that the country has a bad case of the Spindletop Syndrome. It's not a disease; it's an attitude that Underhill wants to stamp out.

"We treat all our production today exactly as we did when Spindletop blew in 1901," Underhill says. "Because of this attitude we have become exceedingly careless even though the cost to produce a barrel of oil has risen so drastically. We demand absolutely no accountability."

What he's talking about is theft of oil — along the bayous, canals, rivers, marshes and offshore.

"No one gives a damn if 100,000 barrels ends up on the ground," Underhill says.

"We spend all kinds of money, we get brilliant people who go out and find oil and punch a hole in the damn ground. It's producing away and no one takes the responsibility to see that what is produced is accounted for. How they can continue to suffer these losses and still make a profit I simply don't understand," he says.

UNDERHILL TOOK his message before the second annual World Oil & Gas Show and Conference held at the Dallas Convention Center recently. With his cantankerous style and upstate New York accent, Underhill says he attracted a lot of attention talking about "Prevention and Control of Crude Oil Losses."

"Everybody thought it was great," he says, waving his arms. But, unless they put a fence around their tanks and start guarding their fields, it won't do a bit of good, he says.

"They (wells) are usually out in the boondocks away from everything and the fact that they are so isolated makes them prime targets for thefts. Most wells are completely unprotected," Underhill says.

Although losses are hard to estimate, the Petroleum Engineer International News Highlight said as much as $1 billion worth of oil was lost in Texas just during 1982. A manual published by the American Petroleum Institute does provide measurement standards for the oil industry, but Underhill says these are seldom used.

HE PICKS UP a thick book from his loaded bookshelves and shakes it rapidly. "If you have a cup of oil here — I want a cup of oil there," he says. "I have asked pumpers, terminal employees, and others if they have ever read these standards and I have always gotten a negative answer. I have asked petroleum inspectors and they don't even know what I am talking about."

The thing that really bugs Underhill is who gets to pay for the thefts.

"You drive up to the pump and you pay for it," Underhill shouts. He looks as if he's about to leap over his desk, as he shakes his fist in the air.

Underhill owns and operates Underhill & Associates Surveyors, Investigators and Consultants from an office on Procter Street in downtown Port Arthur. The rusty anchor outside is just the beginning of the marine antique store that his office has become.

WEATHERED SIGNS, photographs and paintings fill the walls, while everything from ancient fog horns to a rope tiller and captain's wheel clutter the office floor. Underhill talks about the possibility of a marine museum in Port Arthur. He'd like to give some of his treasures to the port part of the city.

"This is a seaman's town. It's a shipping town," he says.

Underhill works on several cases at a time, and his desk is loaded down with file folders and thick court cases. His work has taken him all over the world — Africa, the North Sea, Chili, Bolivia.

"I'll be in London the second and third week in July testifying on a ship that went aground with a load of fertilizer. I get around," he says.

Speeches like the one in Dallas are an ongoing project with Underhill, when he has time. Now, though, he needs to rush out the door to meet some people in Houston.

FIRST HE SHOWS off one more sea treasure. A 5-gallon oak breaker used to carry water on lifeboats attracts his attention. He holds it up and examines it.

"I'm going to take it home and fill it with wine," he says. It's one tank that will surely have to account for every drop.

Union Texas awarded 29 Gulf blocks

HOUSTON (SWN) — Union Texas Petroleum, a subsidiary of Allied Corp., has reported that it has been awarded 29 Gulf of Mexico blocks out of 33 high bids in which it participated at the April 24 federal OCS lease sale.

Union Texas' portion of the lease bonuses totaled $82.5 million. The company's interests in the blocks range from 16.7 percent to 100 percent. The 29 blocks won by the company add nearly 66,000 net acres of exploratory leaseholds to the company's U.S. portfolio.

"Our success in this sale has significantly expanded our Gulf of Mexico holdings," said A. Clark Johnson, president and chief operating officer. "A strong presence in the offshore and continued participation in area-wide lease sales is a key element in our U.S. exploration strategies."

Union Texas expects drilling to begin on certain blocks in the fourth quarter of 1984. The company will operate the majority of the tracts awarded. The other leases will be operated by the company's partners in the sale, which include Mobil, Conoco and AGIP.

Success Personnel Inc., a locally owned corporation, announces the association of BILL HOUGHTON as vice president of marketing. Houghton will be responsible for expanding the firm's concept of exclusive and completed personnel assistance to the oil and gas industry and the industries' service companies. Houghton joins Flo Dean, Leon Taylor and Terrye Jiles, bringing oil and gas personnel experience to the firm. Houghton has had 29 years experience with B.J. Hughes and Geo Frac. His expertise has been in sales, management, personnel, and training.

AMARILLO — GEORGE M. (MIKE) GREEN joins the Plains Machinery Co. team as the Western Regional Manager.

Headquartered in Dallas, Green will be responsible for the coordination of marketing, sales and administration of the Amarillo, Abilene, Lubbock, Odessa and Dallas branches. Branch managers working with Green are Tony Rhodes, Amarillo; Larry Horwedel, Abilene; Guy Roberson, Lubbock; C.D. Gale, Odessa; and Chuck Snyder, Dallas.

Green is a native of San Angelo and graduated from Central High School there. His experience in the heavy equipment industry includes 11 years in management, eight years in sales and five years in parts inventory. The majority of his work was with International Harvester Co.

LUBBOCK — Marion Key, chairman of the board of directors of West Central Investment Corp. has announced TENA WAGGONER as the branch manager of the Midland West Central office. She is also a vice president of the corporation. West Central is a mortgage lending firm, involved in FHA, VA, and conventional residential financing, with an office in Midland for several years.

Waggoner has been active in the mortgage lending field for the past five years. She is a member of the Midland and Odessa Board of Realtors and the Permian Basin Lenders Association.

ARLINGTON — BURVIN HINES, formerly of Midland, was installed June 28 as president of the Arlington, Chamber of Commerce. He is senior vice president of the First City National Bank of Arlington.

Hines was on the staff of the Midland Chamber of Commerce for a number of years and from 1967 to 1971 was vice president of the First City National Bank of Midland, then the Midland National Bank.

While in Midland he served in various volunteer roles in the chamber, including vice president.

In addition to his Arlington Chamber post, Hines is also president of the City of Arlington Industrial Development Corp. He is a past president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and currently is a member of that organization's executive committee.

ROY N. WHITE, agent in the Midland-Odessa district office of the National Life and Accident Insurance Company located at 202 Airport Plaza, has marked his fifth year with the firm.

Pockat brings eight years of club management experience to Mission coming here from St. Charles Country Club in the Chicagoland area. Pockat also managed the Firestone Country Club, site of the Annual World Series of Golf.

Pockat has a B.S. degree with specialization in country club management.

Welch comes to Mission from the Greater Odessa Area Chamber of Commerce where she served as vice president-general manager. She received a B.S. in education from Sul Ross State University in Alpine.

Mission Country Club, a development of the HBF Corp. will open its new clubhouse in October.

DALLAS — LAWRENCE J. SERIGHT has joined the staff of Hrubetz Oil Co. as regional manager for the West Texas region, James Savage, senior vice president — exploration, said recently.

Seright was most recently a consultant in Midland for Edmonson and Associates. He has had extensive experience with Depco and Southland Royalty in the permian Basin.

Tax-Deferred

"It's really remarkable how the government thinks of us... every April 15th, that is."

Will Rogers

Sometimes it seems like the government doesn't know who you are, but come April 15th, it's mighty easy to feel like you're at the top of its list. To help you with your taxes, City Savings is thinking of you all year 'round, by offering you ways to keep the tax bite down. Even though tax-time has come and gone, what you do today will affect what you pay next April 15th. Even Will Rogers would approve of the GNA Tax-Deferred Annuity, now available at City Savings. This safe, competitive plan not only helps insure a secure retirement income, but qualifies you for a great tax break at the same time.

11½% Annualized Yield (10.88% compounded daily) – GUARANTEED until December 31, 1984

Tax-Deferral You pay no taxes on the interest earnings until you withdraw money from your account. That means your money compounds faster because there's more left in your account to grow.

No Deposit Limit There is no ceiling on the amount of interest earnings you can shelter from current taxes. ($5,000 minimum deposit)

Safety Your principal and interest are guaranteed by GNA, a qualified legal reserve life insurance company.

Flexibility There are over thirty different pay-out plans to meet your future financial needs.

Will Rogers knew there's no such thing as a free lunch. On the other hand, the winner is the one who exercises good, old-fashioned common sense when making decisions. That's where the GNA Annuity comes in. It's the common sense approach to a tax-advantaged today and a sound financial tomorrow. Call or come into any City Savings branch, or mail the coupon below to find out more about the GNA Tax-Deferred Annuity. Exercise your common sense. Open a retirement account that goes to work for you today, and every day.

WASHINGTON (AP) — New government figures show the salaries of white-collar workers grew over the past year at their slowest pace in more than a decade.

A report released Tuesday by the federal Bureau of Labor Statistics showed pay for the year ending in March increased between 3 and 6 percent for most of 25 occupations analyzed.

In contrast, salary increases averaged about 7 percent a year during the 1970s and rose to more than 9 percent in 1981 and 1982, the figures showed. They began their fall in 1983.

Wage moderation among white-collar workers reflected a broader trend across the whole spectrum of the economy. But the decline in the growth of wages among this class of workers was less severe than that for blue-collar workers in America's heavy manufacturing industries.

The study of white-collar salaries, excluding top managerial and executive positions, was based on a once-a-year survey of private business pay scales for a host of jobs ranging from engineers to accountants and secretaries, including step-ups for seniority.

The figures show the slowdown in the rate of wage gains among certain classes of white-collar workers has been dramatic in recent years. Among stenographers, for example, average annual salaries rose at a 5.5 percent clip from March 1983 to March 1984, down from 8.6 percent from 1982-3 and 13.8 percent from 1981-82.

The largest gains from March 1983 to March 1984 were registered by auditors, whose average salaries rose 8 percent, while the the most modest gains were made by typists, whose average annual salaries rose only 2 percent.

Precise comparisons of white-collar and blue-collar wage trends are difficult because of the methods used by the BLS for gathering this information.

But among workers covered by contracts negotiated by unions in 1983, however, the average first-year wage increase was 2.6 percent, the lowest in 15 years. The figures were brought down because of the negotiation of contracts which provided some union members with a pay cut or freeze in wage rates.

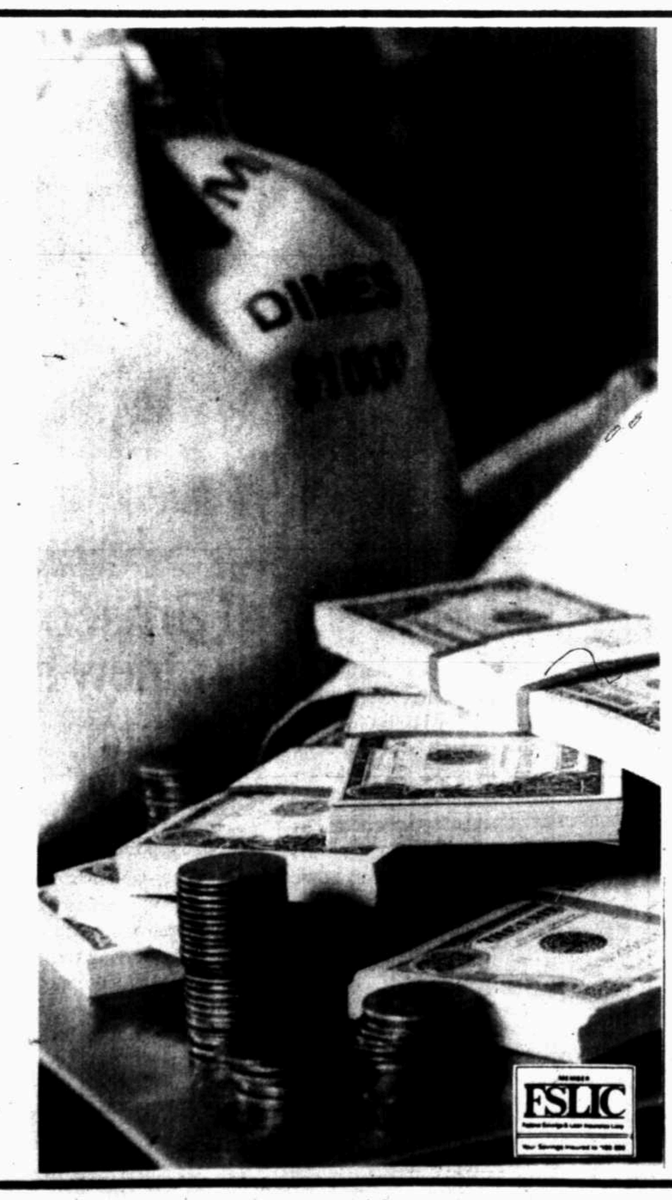

Firms to jointly install pipeline

HOUSTON (SWN) — Amercian Oil & Gas Corp. has announced that its wholly-owned subsidary, American Distribution Co., has executed a contract with Arco Chemical Co., a division of Atlantic Richfield Co. to install a 10-inch pipeline, approximately 12 miles, to connect Arco Chemical's Lyondell Plant into the pipeline system of Texas Eastern Transmission Corp. This will provide for gas from various fields in Texas and offshore Texas to be moved through the Texas Eastern pipeline system into the new American pipeline for ultimate delivery to the plant, which is located approximately 15 miles east of Houston. In addition, this pipeline will permit sales of interstate gas to be made. George S. Loch, president and CEO of American, stated, "We are very pleased to provide these transportation facilities for Arco Chemical's Lyondell Plant. Installation of the pipeline will commence immediately, with deliveries expected to start this fall."

Gerber's baby talk offers tips for proper feeding

By LINDA ANDERSON

When it comes to caring for babies, parents today have it easier than their grandparents did. Baby formula can be purchased in ready-to-serve containers. Some baby bottles have pre-sterilized disposable liners. Even baby diapers are disposable. No diapers to wash!

But just when you think this baby-care business is a snap, along comes another expert who says it's more complicated than you think.

Take baby food, for instance. What could be easier than opening a jar of pre-cooked, pre-measured baby food and spooning lunch into the baby's mouth? The Gerber people recently issued a press release claiming it's not quite that easy.

Here are some of Gerber's tips on the proper feeding of baby:

— Check the nutrition label on the jar of baby food. These labels should list the variety and amount of nutrients of the food it contains. (Remember, however, that label information is based on one serving per jar although younger babies probably won't finish a whole jar in one meal.)

— Check the safety seal on the cap of the baby food jar. If the seal is curved downward, the jar is still vacuum-sealed, which means it should still be safe and wholesome. Before serving, make sure the seal is not broken. An unbroken seal should make a "pop" when the lid is opened. (If a lid removed from a new jar does not pop, discard it.)

— Check the date, usually printed on the top of the jar lid or on the side of cereal and other packages. This date indicates the length of time the product will be top quality. Plan to use the baby food product before the date printed on the package.

— To make sure high-quality baby foods stay high-quality, proper storage is a must. Unopened jars of food and strained juices should be kept in a cool, dry place away from steam or heat. Avoid freezing and other temperature extremes. It is a good idea to use the foods that have been on the shelf longest first.

— Keep cereal and other packaged baby foods in a cool, dry place away from soap, household cleaners or strongly-flavored foods.

— Opened baby foods should be covered and kept in the refrigerator in the original jar. Use opened baby foods within two or three days.

— When only part of the food will be served at one time, remove that portion from the jar with a clean spoon. Baby food may be heated in a food warmer or glass custard cup in a pan of simmering water. Try not to heat it too much because reheating baby food not only ruins taste and texture, but reduces nutritional value as well.

— Do not heat meats, meat sticks, egg yolks or high meat dinners in a microwave oven because uneven heating of these foods may cause spattering.

— Never feed the baby directly from the jar (unless, of course, the baby will finish the entire jar in one meal) or put leftovers back in the original jar because the baby's saliva on the spoon or in the food may transfer enzymes and bacteria to the food and cause it to spoil.

— Baby foods may be served at room temperature. If it is heated be sure to stir it well and test it to be sure it is not too hot. Juices and fruits may also be served slightly chilled. Meats, vegetables and some combinations taste best when warm (Gerber did not specify who tasted them to see if they tasted better warm), although some babies do not mind these foods at room temperature.

— Reconstitute cereals with room-temperature or cool juices, warm or cool formula, milk or water.

If some questions remain unanswered, don't hesitate to check with the baby's pediatrician or family doctor. Insuring proper feeding and nutrition for baby doesn't have to be difficult or frightening.

The whole process really is easier today than it used to be.

CURIOUS SHOPPER

Best to cook live shellfish, advises expert

By SONJA HEINZE

Q: We bought four live lobsters for ourselves and guests with the intention of cooking them several hours later. When the time came to put them in the pot, we realized one of the lobsters was dead. We all concluded that dead lobsters were poison, so we threw the poor thing out. How can lobsters be fine one minute and poisonous the next? — W. Romig, Santa Cruz, Calif.

A: "People have been warned not to eat clams, mussels, oysters, crabs, lobsters and other shellfish unless they are alive when cooked. This suggestion is good," states Robert Price, University of California Cooperative Extension seafood specialist, "but not because shellfish become toxic when they die.

"When a shellfish dies," Dr. Price tells us, "its digestive gland breaks down, releasing powerful enzymes that begin to digest the animal's flesh. This digestion proceeds rapidly, resulting in discoloration of the shellfish meat and producing off-flavors and off-odors.

"Dead shellfish may appear fresh, but when cooked they can have a decomposed flavor and odor. For this reason, it's best to clean and cook only live shellfish."

Q: When I was a child my father used to buy mixed nuts and bring them home to us for a treat. Every single time he said, "Never eat more than seven almonds at one sitting. Almonds contain cyanide and cyanide is poison." We adhered to this rule solemnly. But I haven't heard anyone saying this in many years. Was he wrong by any chance?

A: Your father's admonition regarding the eating of seven almonds at one sitting is not entirely correct, says John Mattei, executive director of Blue Diamond Almond Research Center.

"The almonds your father was referring to," informs Mattei, "are the bitter variety, and not sweet almonds. The bitter almonds are not an article of commerce for edible purposes; rather, they are processed for the almond flavoring oil which they contain. Sweet almonds do not contain this oil.

"Bitter almonds, like apricot, peach, cherrystone or prune pits, all contain the elements necessary to produce cyanide when eaten. And when eaten in large amounts, these materials can make one very ill and, in some cases, cause death. They can be especially harmful to children, or people in poor health.

"On the other hand, sweet almonds can be eaten in any quantity desired without any ill effects, other than to give one a feeling of great satisfaction."

Q: I have read that mushrooms are cultivated in caves, or such dark places, in soil enriched by natural fertilizer. If this is so, why are we instructed to just brush off mushrooms before eating, or wipe them with a damp cloth — but never to soak them or peel them? — Nancy Hess, Stamford, Conn.

A: The commercial mushrooms you buy in the supermarket are grown in sterilized organic compost such as peat moss, not your ordinary dirt. So nothing harmful contaminates the mushrooms.

The Campbell Soup Company is a large commercial mushroom grower, and Scott Rombach, manager of Campbell's public relations office, states that mushrooms should simply be washed to remove any embedded pieces of the peat moss. Or the peat moss can simply be removed by wiping the mushroom with a soft tissue.

If you soak the mushrooms, they will just absorb a lot of water. According to the American Mushroom Institute, in reference to peeling mushrooms, "Cookbooks published before cultivated mushrooms became commonly available recommended peeling because they referred to wild mushrooms which can have rather leathery skins. Today's store-bought mushrooms not only eliminate the safety hazards of wild mushrooms, but also they never need peeling."

Q: How many calories are there in one Hershey Kiss? I have two of them after dinner for dessert. It's very satisfying, but I wonder if I'm fooling myself. Also, didn't Hershey Kisses used to be called something else?

A: Virginia Ames, a registered dietitian with Hershey, tells us that there are 25 calories in each Hershey Kiss, so your chocolate dessert of 50 calories would be significantly less fattening then most desserts.

This candy was first made in 1893 by a manufacturer named Wilbur and were called Wilbur Buds.

Americans on the move

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — With new home construction and home resales on the rise, millions of Americans are preparing to pack up everything they own and move.

Linda Vannoy moved 687 employee families of R.J. Reynolds Industries in 1983. She says that, if properly managed, family moves can be survived and even enjoyed.

Her tips for movers:

— Get valuable belongings appraised and photographed.

— Collect all medical, dental and eye glass records and prescriptions before leaving town.

— Pack your old telephone book — you may need it to clear up details after you move.

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — Are thousands of high school students across the nation taking computer courses they don't need at the expense of courses they will need for work or college?

High schools have geared up to prepare students for what isn't necessary, says Bill Meserve, a consultant to the personal computer industry.

"Computer literacy for the sake of knowledge is only valuable to a select group of people. Today, you don't need to know computer languages or how operating systems work," he said.

Meserve suggests that the concentration on the technical side of computers has all been part of a promotion campaign to boost sales.

"The consumer computer manufacturers have pushed computer literacy to the general public because they lacked a legitimate, realistic reason to sell the product," he said.

"They didn't have the right kind of software (programs)" for the general public, he explained. "They had low prices, a broad distribution system, but no compelling applications" for the personal computer user. "We still haven't discovered that compelling application."

Nevertheless, "computer programming courses are springing up in secondary schools, often at the expense of other curriculum offerings," Meserve, a consultant with Arthur D. Little, Inc., of Cambridge, Mass., continued. "For example, you might have a computer programming course fighting for turf with a music course."

Before long, he predicted, the situation will right itself and "we'll see music courses that use computers. And most of the students in those courses won't need to know how to program the equipment."

That's because computers are being taught human language faster than humans are learning machine and programming languages. And that's what's behind the industry's latest catchword slogan, "user friendly."

The schools just haven't caught up yet, Meserve said.

"There has to be two kinds of computer education," he advised. "One, technical literacy, teaches how to program; how a computer works. But you don't have to know how to field strip a computer or understand how it works to take advantage of its values. You only have to know the technical details if you want to design computers.

"The second kind of computer literacy is knowing how to run the programs," Meserve said. "You want to know how to use word processing programs, data bases, spreadsheets. You don't need to spend a year learning how to program. This is applications literacy and this is what most people need."

'I HAD A 6-YEAR-OLD DIE IN MY ARMS.'

"No matter how tough a policeman thinks he is, he's never ready for the first highway fatality he sees. Mine was here 11 years ago. I had a 6-year-old die in my arms. It still wakes me up some nights. She'd be about 17 today if her mother had made her wear her safety belt. Safety belts can save more than 16,000 lives each year. In those 11 years I've never unbuckled a dead man."

Health officials defend Nutrasweet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal health officials are joining the maker of Nutrasweet in defending the low-calorie sweetener against a consumers group which says safety data used to approve it may have been flawed.

The Food and Drug Administration and G.D. Searle & Co., the company which sold $336 million worth of Nutrasweet last year, contended Tuesday that the allegations by Common Cause officials Fred Wertheimer and Florence Graves aren't new and have been answered before.

Wertheimer and Ms. Graves, president and vice president of the nonprofit citizens lobbying group, stopped short of calling Nutrasweet a health hazard and refused to offer consumers advice about using soft drinks, cereals, beverage mixes and nearly 70 other products that contain it.

But they urged Congress to look back at the way the FDA handled aspartame, the chemical name for Nutrasweet, during about 10 years of regulatory review before its approval in 1981.

"We don't see in the public record the basis on which FDA should have gone ahead on this," Wertheimer told reporters.

"We are talking about a process over 10 years that was flawed, step by step," added Ms. Graves, who conducted the research on the project. The group's findings were published in Common Cause Magazine.

Common Cause's main complaint was with the way the FDA investigated tests conducted through the mid-1970s and submitted by Searle. The FDA had questions about 25 tests on seven products. Eleven tests involved aspartame and three were pivotal in deciding to approve it.

Ms. Graves argued that the questions raised about Searle's testing practices never were adequately answered and issues raised by other scientists about safety data haven't been addressed.

But both the FDA and the Skokie, Ill.,-based company dispute this.

Dr. Frank Sturtevant, director of Searle's offices of Scientific Affairs, said the questions raised by Common Cause have been answered before. "I don't see that anything will be gained by spending the taxpayers' time and money on an investigation," he said.

He said that Searle's aspartame tests were authenticated by a review conducted for the FDA by the Universities Associated for Research and Education in Pathology.

The FDA and the Centers for Disease Control are examining about 600 complaints received from consumers about side effects allegedly associated with using aspartame.

The side effects include headaches, dizziness, menstrual irregularities, rashes and some cases of seizures. Grigg said about 200 cases are being reviewed in detail and lengthy interviews have been conducted with the consumers involved. But preliminary information shows "There are no surprises, nothing that suggests any problem," he said. The results should be issued within a month, he added.

Introduced in dry form in 1981, aspartame was cleared for use in soft drinks a year ago and now is used in every major low-calorie brand — often with saccharin. Sales of aspartame accounted for about one-third of the $1 billion Searle earned on all its products in 1983, spokeswoman Denise Ertell said.

But safety questions have cropped up regularly about aspartame. Among others, a Washington-based consumer group, the Community Nutrition Institute, has been trying unsuccessfully to have a federal court pull aspartame off the market. The state of Arizona considered and then rejected pleas for restrictions on aspartame-containing products, restrictions sought because of the potential for its breakdown into its component substances in high heat.

Former FDA Commissioner Arthur Hull Hayes Jr. approved the initial sale of aspartame despite the recommendation from a special public board of inquiry, convened by FDA, that further studies on the potential for brain tumors in rats be conducted.

Aspartame is a synthetic compound made of two naturally occurring amino acids — L-aspartic acid and L-phenylalanine. When ingested or placed in liquids a part of aspartame forms methanol. Aspartame is 180 times sweeter than table sugar. While one teaspoon of sugar has 18 calories, the equivalent sweetness of aspartame has one-tenth of a calorie.

Executive: Education 'No. 1 responsibility'

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — In the next six years, some 27 million children in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades will not get a proper foundation in science and mathematics, according to Charles Kittrell, executive vice president of Phillips Petroleum.

Kittrell said he believes it will take until 1990 to raise enough taxes, train a new generation of superior teachers, and design the proper materials neeessary for modern instruction.

This year, Phillips says it will channel $8 million into education, much through company-sponsored math and science educational films.

"Education clearly is our No. 1 civic responsibility," Kittrell said.

Teaching involves discipline, enthusiasm

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Good teaching involves discipline as well as enthusiasm, several University of Rochester professors agreed in a recent seminar for high school teachers.

"We must require students to learn the basics, even if they're not 'interesting,'" said Jack Kampmeier, a chemistry professor. "Although a teacher's passion for the subject is important, too often students expect entertainment alone and balk at hard work."

Students must realize "they need a 'critical mass' of information before they can appreciate scientific findings, or literature in a foreign language," said biologist Robert Angerer.

"Students must know facts before they can ask questions, because they must know what to question," noted historian Jesse Moore.

New parents often bullied by authors selling books

Hearst Feature Service

A good deal of unsubtle bullying goes on when new parents bring home their first baby; everybody presumes to know how to raise the child better than its parents. And when those inexperienced parents search for child care books to help them find their own way, they often end up bullied by strong-minded authors who have a particular philosophy to sell.

It is precisely this intimidation of parents by "experts" that British child care author Penelope Leach has set out to overcome.

"If my books have one purpose," says Leach, "it's to make clear to all parents that there can't be anyone else in the world who knows your child the way you do. Let's not be so jolly respectful of authority."

Her crusade has found a ready audience in England, America and most of the world. Her third and most popular book, "Your Baby and Child" — "an attempt to look at the business of bringing a baby and toddler up as much as possible from the child's point of view" — has been translated into 18 languages and sold 300,000 copies here with little publicity.

RESPONDING TO demands that she extend her expertise to older children, Leach has put together "The Child Care Encyclopedia," a 700-page reference guide to "the physical and emotional well-being of children from birth through adolescence." She calls it "a sort of confidence-giving book," designed to give parents up-to-date psychological and medical information on topics as diverse as allergies, language and play.

Leach feels that America is a country where the "experts know best" attitude is even stronger than in England. "It makes me very cross," she says. "When I started off as a research worker in child development in the early '60s, a great deal of fascinating information was being found out, but most of it was going into learned journals for other research workers to read. It wasn't getting out to parents. When I had my first child, I realized that I had a lot of factual background material that most mothers I was meeting didn't have, and that nobody wanted them to have it, either."

Her urge to write came from this desire to bridge the gap between "the two halves of my life" — the mother and the developmental psychologist with a doctorate from the London School of Economics and years of field research.

As a mother, she relied on the books of child care authority Dr. Benjamin Spock. "He was the first to think that parents might want a book that took into account their feelings." But times and concerns have changed. Despite advances in medical and psychological sciences, child raising may actually be a more difficult process today than it has been in times past, Leach says, "if only because we expect more of ourselves and more of our children. It's a hard life out there; expectations are very, very high."

THERE ARE subjects in the encyclopedia you wouldn't have seen in Dr. Spock's time — children's reactions to divorce and their parents' new lovers, for example, or the growing problem of child abuse. Leach wanted "to look quite practically at how one can help children keep themselves safe in what has to be admittedly a dangerous society."

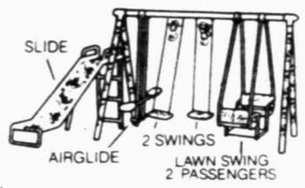

Leach devotes eight pages to the growing problem of child abuse and how to teach children to protect themselves from it. She has had to answer a lot of questions about child abuse lately, mainly because of California's McMartin Pre-School child-molestation case.

What troubles Leach most of all about that case "is what this tells us about communication between parents and the children. The most nightmarish aspect as I understand it is that it went on for a long time. If you are a parent who is tuned in to your child, believe me, there will have been signs that the child was not happy in school — kids not eating well, kids not sleeping well, kids having nightmares. Anxiety is an all-pervasive thing. While you can bribe and terrorize a child into not putting out specific information, there is no way you can bribe and terrorize a child into appearing happy, secure, enthusiastic about life."

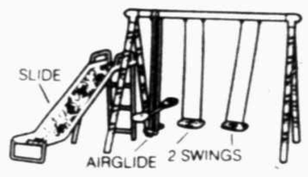

PARENTAL UNDERSTANDING of the development process is one of Leach's greatest concerns. A little understanding can help give a parent the necessary confidence when dealing with the authority figures in a child's life — doctors, teachers, daycare personnel.

Globe sets Opree schedule

ODESSA — The Globe resumes its regular Odessa Brand New Opree schedule for the summer at 8 p.m. Saturday with a full line-up of area country and western talent.

"Mariah" is this week's house band. Individual performers for the show include Lisa Huling of San Angelo, Albert Cano of Jal and Doug Bailiff of Odessa. Other performers from Odessa include Windy Patton, vocalist with Permian High School's Black Magic Ensemble, Joel Galloway and gospel singer Holly Ensey.

Following this week's show, the Opree will begin its annual Entertainer of the Year competition to select the year's outstanding Opree performers.

Admission to the Opree is $4 for adults, $2 for students and senior citizens and $1.50 for children under 12. Tickets may be purchased at the Globe Box Office prior to the performance or during the week from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Museum seminar set

AUSTIN — A museum educational seminar for museum professionals and volunteers has been set for Aug. 3 in Midland at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum.

Sponsored by the Texas Historical Commission, the seminar will teach how primary materials, such as letters, photographs and clothing, can enrich the understanding of a period; several interpretive approaches to "reading" three-dimensional artifacts; and relationships between art and history in interpreting material culture in a museum setting.

Participants will take part in several exercises designed to explore these topics. A $5 registration fee will be charged for the workshop.

The Midland workshop is one of four to be held this summer throughout the state. The other seminars will take place July 31 in Denton, Aug. 1 in Canyon and Aug. 4 in Huntsville.

Revue to play at schools

The Fred Story Revue brings magic to Odessa High School Friday and Midland High School Saturday in two benefit performances for the Sunshine Kids, a national organization for children with life threatening diseases.

Proceeds from these performances will go to benefit the local chapter of Sunshine Kids. Funds made available through donations and benefits allow these children, most of whom suffer from cancer, to participate in activities such as the National Sunshine Kids Winter Games, first held in Winter Park, Colo., in March 1983. The national organization originated in Houston two years ago.

Tickets, priced at $3.50, may be purchased at the door. Local businesses have donated enough money to secure seats for those who are "handicapped or less fortunate" and want to attend. For more information call 687-4485.

The Museum of the Southwest's second summer film festival, "Adaptations from the Classics," begins today with "The Good Earth."

The series includes "Anna Karenina," July 19; "Camille," July 26; and "Madame Bovary," Aug. 2. All showing are at 7:30 p.m. at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium. Seating is on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Suggested donation is $2.

Newswoman juggles White House, news show

ENTERTAINMENT

By GUS STEVENS

HOLLYWOOD — Talk about pressure. Lesley Stahl, who covers the White House for CBS News and moderates the network's Sunday morning show "Face the Nation," is wired to handle it like a controller at Chicago's O'Hare.

For last Sunday's program Stahl interviewed Boy George about androgyny and sexual roles. She did it while she was in London covering a Western European economic summit. Next week she'll be in San Francisco interviewing the Democrats. There isn't necessarily any connection among the three, except to demonstrate the range of Stahl's talent.

"I usually gain weight Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday," Stahl, rail thin, said as she discussed her "Face the Nation" duties. "I know I'll lose it on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

"We often don't know by Friday who we're going to have Sunday morning. This is desperate by 4 p.m. Late last season we wanted King Hussein. He said no. We asked Kissinger. Kissinger said no. We tried Shultz. No. Then the No. 2 and No. 3 men at State. No.

"Kissinger finally said yes. Then Hussein said he'd do it. We were stuck with both and we did them together. Luckily, I cover the White House and I'd been to Egypt the week before. I make phone calls. I read and research. I come up with questions. I get very up-tight. You're seeing me now relaxed." She's fidgeting and gulping coffee.

This is life for a TV network news person. Stahl, even though the grind eats at her insides, seems to love it, to thrive on it. Just keep the coffee and the nervous little jokes coming.

"I got to CBS in 1972, frankly, because I was a woman and they were looking for women," Stahl said. She was born in Swampscott, Mass., is an honors graduate of Wheaton College, a former two-year reporter for WHDH-TV Boston, married to author Aaron Latham ("Urban Cowboy") and mother of a daughter.

"My big break was being assigned to Watergate. No one was in Washington. They were out covering candidates. I just stayed with it and it developed into a long story. I was able to show them I could be a reporter. Usually stories are so short you can't develop them, but this one was different."

Watergate was a difficult time for lots of people in Washington, not just those in the White House.

"People don't like the messenger who brings them the news they don't want to hear," Stahl said. "During Watergate they hated us. They chased us in the streets. They spat at us."

'Dancin' USA' to tape at park

"Dancin' USA," a 30-minute dance and music show on cable television's The Nashville Network, will tape several episodes during five production days in Midland and Odessa this month.

The show features contemporary country music with the feeling of a country and western mightspot. Area dancers are encouraged to participate and appear on camera.

Tapings are Saturday through Wednesday at Water Wonderland on Highway 80 between the two cities. The shows, produced in cooperation with Water Wonderland, will be cablecast to more than 16 million TNN subscriber households this year.

Country music artist Jacky Ward is the host of "Dancin' USA." He is joined by the "Dancin' USA" band and a quartet of singers. Show production begins daily at 8 p.m. at Water Wonderland. Interested dancers need to arrive by 7:30 p.m. Expertise in the Cotton-Eyed Joe and the Texas Two-Step is helpful but not required.

The parts are unpaid, but participants will receive prizes and national television exposure. Minors must be accompanied by a parent or guardian. No special dress is required, but western wear is preferred. Faded blue jeans and white clothing are discouraged.

For additional information call Water Wonderland, 563-3141.

TNN is a national cable television network currently seen in more than 16 million homes. Programming is produced by The Nashville Network, a division of Opryland USA, Inc., Nashville. The service is marketed and distributed by Group W Satellite Communications.

John Henry Faulk comes to Midland

John Henry Faulk, a regular on the long running "Hee Haw" television show, will speak at the Petroleum Museum at 7:30 p.m. July 18 as part of the museum's Fuqua Distinguished Lecture Series.

The Texas born and raised Faulk is nationally known as a humorist, folklorist and constitutional expert. He has had his own radio and television programs as well as guesting on such interview shows as "The Tonight Show" and "The Today Show." The Austin resident also has a number of acting roles to his credit, having appeared in the films "The Best Man," "Loving Molly" and "Leadbelly."

Faulk will speak on "To Secure the Blessings of Liberty." His remarks will be a folksy, humorous and yet serious account of the ideas and principles that are the essence of the people of the United States.

The lecture series is funded by The Sid W. Richardson Foundation in honor of the Fort Worth industrialist and philanthropist, H.B. Fuqua. The first speaker in the series was John E. Swearingen, retired board chairman of Standard Oil of Indiana.

The lecture will be followed by a reception honoring the speaker. Both the lecture and the reception are open to the public.

Nigeria recalls ambassador to Britain

LONDON (AP) — Nigeria recalled its ambassador to discuss British-Nigerian tensions, and there were predictions today that he or other diplomats might be expelled in response to the kidnapping of Nigeria's former transport minister.

The British Foreign Secretary was to make what authorities called a crucial statement on the case today in the House of Commons. News reports said he was likely to announce the expulsion of some of Nigeria's 122 diplomats in London but to stop short of breaking diplomatic ties.

One newspaper, the Daily Mail, said Nigeria may have recalled its ambassador, Maj. Gen. Haldu Hananiya, to avoid the embarrassment of having him ordered out of the country.

"Seasoned diplomats said the general's recall could be a convenient face-saving formula," the Daily Mail reported. It said there were "strong suspicions that he was getting out before being kicked out."

Hananiya flew to Lagos late Wednesday night on a flight booked under another name, according to informed sources at Heathrow Airport who spoke on condition of anonymity. They said he checked in for the flight under his own name.

Officials at the Nigerian Embassy declined to comment on the report. But earlier Wednesday evening, Moses F. Ekpo, director of information at the embassy, told a news conference that Hananiya would return to London after his trip. He said that in Lagos, Hananiya would "brief the head of state, Maj. Gen. Muhammadu Buhari, on the current situation in London."

The dispute between the two countries began a week ago when former Nigerian Transport Minister Umaru Dikko was kidnapped from his home in London.

Authorities found him drugged in a crate that was about to be loaded onto a cargo plane for a flight to Lagos, the capital of Nigeria. The crate was addressed to the Nigerian Foreign Ministry from the London embassy.

Britain held the cargo plane and its crew, and Nigeria held a British Caledonia Boeing 747 jet. Both sides allowed the planes to leave last Saturday.

Nigeria's military government has denied any involvement in the plot to kidnap Dikko, who is wanted by the government on corruption charges. Nigeria alleges that Dikko, 47, amassed more than $1 billion during the civilian administration of President Shehu Shagari, which was overthrown on Dec. 31.

On Wednesday, Hananiya had his fourth meeting with officials at the British Foreign Office since the kidnapping. Howe has asked Hananiya to waive the usual rules on diplomatic immunity to let British police question members of his staff.

Ekpo said Monday that Howe's request would be relayed to Lagos but that no immediate reaction was expected.

STATE OF TEXAS
June 20, 1984

Pursuant to Article 21.29 of the Texas Insurance Code, I HEREBY CERTIFY THAT

SECURITY SOUTHWEST LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY
El Paso, Texas

is authorized under the laws of this State to issue policies and transact the business of stock life.

Given under my hand and seal of office at Austin, Texas, the date first above written.

TOM BOND,
Commissioner of Insurance

Dean Buckalew, d/b/a Mr. D's, is making application to the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission for a Wine Only Package Store Permit on the location of 2603 N. Midland Dr., Midland, Midland County, Texas.

CLAYDESTA NATIONAL BANK
Shareholder's Meeting

Notice is hereby given that, pursuant to call of its directors, a special meeting of the shareholders of ClayDesta National Bank will be held at its banking house at No. 6 ClayDesta Drive, Midland, Texas, on Thursday, July 19, 1984 at 10:00 a.m., for the purpose of considering and determining by vote whether an agreement to consolidate the said bank and a state interim bank to be located in Midland, Texas, the resulting bank of which would be a member of a bank holding company to be formed as ClayDesta Bancshares Incorporated, under the provisions of the laws of the United States, shall be ratified and confirmed subject to the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, Washington, D.C., and for the purposes of voting upon any other matters incidental to the proposed consolidation of the two banks and any other matters to properly come before the shareholders. A copy of the aforesaid agreement providing for the consolidation is on file at the Bank and may be inspected during business hours.

LOCAL NOTICE ANNOUNCEMENT

The Federal Communications Commission has designated for hearing on September 6, 1984, at 10:00 a.m. at the Federal Communications Commission's offices, Washington, D.C. the below applications for authority to operate a TV station for Midland, Texas, on Channel 18. Parties to the proceeding include: Midland Telecasting Company, Inc., Rodger Weems and Rolando A. Romero, d/b/a West Texas Communications, and Plains Television, Ltd. West Texas Communications seeks a construction permit for a new commercial television station to operate on Midland Channel 18, while Midland Telecasting Company, Inc. seeks to renew its license for Channel 18 and consent assignment of the KDCD(TV) license from Midland Telecasting Company, Inc. to Plains Television, Ltd. The issues included in the Hearing Designated Order designating the applications for hearing include:

1. To determine which of the proposals would, on a comparative basis, serve the public interest; and
2. To determine, in light of the evidence adduced pursuant to the foregoing issue, which of the applications should be granted.

The application, amendments, and materials relating thereto for Rodger Weems and Rolando A. Romero, d/b/a West Texas Communications may be inspected during regular business hours at:

Midland County Public Library
301 West Missouri
Midland, Texas 79702

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals, addressed to the Mayor and City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, for the furnishing of materials and labor and the construction of 4,800 lin. ft. 15" Corrugated Galvanized Steel Pipe Drain, 90 lin. ft. 15" slotted Drain Pipe, 110 lin. ft. 12" slotted Drain Pipe, 19 manholes and other appurtenance for a complete drain system will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 2:30 p.m. on the 7th day of August, 1984, and publicly opened and read aloud at 3:00 p.m. on the same day.

Any bid received after closing time as stated above will be returned unopened.

Bid envelopes shall be plainly marked "Proposal for Project No. D-10".

Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the City Engineer, Fifth floor of the City Hall, 300 North Loraine, Midland, Texas, and may be secured upon a deposit for FIFTY DOLLARS ($50) for each set as a guaranty of safe return of the plans and specifications. The full amount of the deposit will be returned to the contractor on submission of bid on the work, and with such plans and specifications, or upon return of the plans and specifications immediately after the examination of the same and advising the City Engineer that no bid will be submitted; otherwise the deposit for same shall be forfeited.

A bid bond or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance and payout bonds. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.

The City of Midland, Texas, reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals or bids, to waive technicalities, and to make any investigation deemed necessary concerning the bidder's ability to perform the work covered by the plans and specifications, to award this bid by items and to accept what in the judgement of the Mayor and City Council is the most advantageous bid.

Gerber's baby talk offers tips for proper feeding

By LINDA ANDERSON

When it comes to caring for babies, parents today have it easier than their grandparents did. Baby formula can be purchased in ready-to-serve containers. Some baby bottles have pre-sterilized disposable liners. Even baby diapers are disposable. No diapers to wash!

But just when you think this baby-care business is a snap, along comes another expert who says it's more complicated than you think.

Take baby food, for instance. What could be easier than opening a jar of pre-cooked, pre-measured baby food and spooning lunch into the baby's mouth? The Gerber people recently issued a press release claiming it's not quite that easy.

Here are some of Gerber's tips on the proper feeding of baby:

— Check the nutrition label on the jar of baby food. These labels should list the variety and amount of nutrients of the food it contains. (Remember, however, that label information is based on one serving per jar although younger babies probably won't finish a whole jar in one meal.)

— Check the safety seal on the cap of the baby food jar. If the seal is curved downward, the jar is still vacuum-sealed, which means it should still be safe and wholesome. Before serving, make sure the seal is not broken. An unbroken seal should make a "pop" when the lid is opened. (If a lid removed from a new jar does not pop, discard it.)

— Check the date, usually printed on the top of the jar lid or on the side of cereal and other packages. This date indicates the length of time the product will be top quality. Plan to use the baby food product before the date printed on the package.

— To make sure high-quality baby foods stay high-quality, proper storage is a must. Unopened jars of food and strained juices should be kept in a cool, dry place away from steam or heat. Avoid freezing and other temperature extremes. It is a good idea to use the foods that have been on the shelf longest first.

— Keep cereal and other packaged baby foods in a cool, dry place away from soap, household cleaners or strongly-flavored foods.

— Opened baby foods should be covered and kept in the refrigerator in the original jar. Use opened baby foods within two or three days.

— When only part of the food will be served at one time, remove that portion from the jar with a clean spoon. Baby food may be heated in a food warmer or glass custard cup in a pan of simmering water. Try not to heat it too much because reheating baby food not only ruins taste and texture, but reduces nutritional value as well.

— Do not heat meats, meat sticks, egg yolks or high meat dinners in a microwave oven because uneven heating of these foods may cause spattering.

— Never feed the baby directly from the jar (unless, of course, the baby will finish the entire jar in one meal) or put leftovers back in the original jar because the baby's saliva on the spoon or in the food may transfer enzymes and bacteria to the food and cause it to spoil.

— Baby foods may be served at room temperature. If it is heated be sure to stir it well and test it to be sure it is not too hot. Juices and fruits may also be served slightly chilled. Meats, vegetables and some combinations taste best when warm (Gerber did not specify who tasted them to see if they tasted better warm), although some babies do not mind these foods at room temperature.

— Reconstitute cereals with room-temperature or cool juices, warm or cool formula, milk or water.

If some questions remain unanswered, don't hesitate to check with the baby's pediatrician or family doctor. Insuring proper feeding and nutrition for baby doesn't have to be difficult or frightening.

The whole process really is easier today than it used to be.

CURIOUS SHOPPER

Best to cook live shellfish, advises expert

By SONJA HEINZE

Q: We bought four live lobsters for ourselves and guests with the intention of cooking them several hours later. When the time came to put them in the pot, we realized one of the lobsters was dead. We all concluded that dead lobsters were poison, so we threw the poor thing out. How can lobsters be fine one minute and poisonous the next? — W. Romig, Santa Cruz, Calif.

A: "People have been warned not to eat clams, mussels, oysters, crabs, lobsters and other shellfish unless they are alive when cooked. This suggestion is good," states Robert Price, University of California Cooperative Extension seafood specialist, "but not because shellfish become toxic when they die.

"When a shellfish dies," Dr. Price tells us, "its digestive gland breaks down, releasing powerful enzymes that begin to digest the animal's flesh. This digestion proceeds rapidly, resulting in discoloration of the shellfish meat and producing off-flavors and off-odors.

"Dead shellfish may appear fresh, but when cooked they can have a decomposed flavor and odor. For this reason, it's best to clean and cook only live shellfish."

Q: When I was a child my father used to buy mixed nuts and bring them home to us for a treat. Every single time he said, "Never eat more than seven almonds at one sitting. Almonds contain cyanide and cyanide is poison." We adhered to this rule solemnly. But I haven't heard anyone saying this in many years. Was he wrong by any chance?

A: Your father's admonition regarding the eating of seven almonds at one sitting is not entirely correct, says John Mattei, executive director of Blue Diamond Almond Research Center.

"The almonds your father was referring to," informs Mattei, "are the bitter variety, and not sweet almonds. The bitter almonds are not an article of commerce for edible purposes; rather, they are processed for the almond flavoring oil which they contain. Sweet almonds do not contain this oil.

"Bitter almonds, like apricot, peach, cherrystone or prune pits, all contain the elements necessary to produce cyanide when eaten. And when eaten in large amounts, these materials can make one very ill and, in some cases, cause death. They can be especially harmful to children, or people in poor health.

"On the other hand, sweet almonds can be eaten in any quantity desired without any ill effects, other than to give one a feeling of great satisfaction."

Q: I have read that mushrooms are cultivated in caves, or such dark places, in soil enriched by natural fertilizer. If this is so, why are we instructed to just brush off mushrooms before eating, or wipe them with a damp cloth — but never to soak them or peel them? — Nancy Hess, Stamford, Conn.

A: The commercial mushrooms you buy in the supermarket are grown in sterilized organic compost such as peat moss, not your ordinary dirt. So nothing harmful contaminates the mushrooms.

The Campbell Soup Company is a large commercial mushroom grower, and Scott Rombach, manager of Campbell's public relations office, states that mushrooms should simply be washed to remove any embedded pieces of the peat moss. Or the peat moss can simply be removed by wiping the mushroom with a soft tissue.

If you soak the mushrooms, they will just absorb a lot of water. According to the American Mushroom Institute, in reference to peeling mushrooms, "Cookbooks published before cultivated mushrooms became commonly available recommended peeling because they referred to wild mushrooms which can have rather leathery skins. Today's store-bought mushrooms not only eliminate the safety hazards of wild mushrooms, but also they never need peeling."

Q: How many calories are there in one Hershey Kiss? I have two of them after dinner for dessert. It's very satisfying, but I wonder if I'm fooling myself. Also, didn't Hershey Kisses used to be called something else?

A: Virginia Ames, a registered dietitian with Hershey, tells us that there are 25 calories in each Hershey Kiss, so your chocolate dessert of 50 calories would be significantly less fattening then most desserts.

This candy was first made in 1893 by a manufacturer named Wilbur and were called Wilbur Buds.

Americans on the move

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — With new home construction and home resales on the rise, millions of Americans are preparing to pack up everything they own and move.

Linda Vannoy moved 687 employee families of R.J. Reynolds Industries in 1983. She says that, if properly managed, family moves can be survived and even enjoyed.

Her tips for movers:

— Get valuable belongings appraised and photographed.

— Collect all medical, dental and eye glass records and prescriptions before leaving town.

— Pack your old telephone book — you may need it to clear up details after you move.

Schools prepare students for college computer classes

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — Are thousands of high school students across the nation taking computer courses they don't need at the expense of courses they will need for work or college?

High schools have geared up to prepare students for what isn't necessary, says Bill Meserve, a consultant to the personal computer industry.

"Computer literacy for the sake of knowledge is only valuable to a select group of people. Today, you don't need to know computer languages or how operating systems work," he said.

Meserve suggests that the concentration on the technical side of computers has all been part of a promotion campaign to boost sales.

"The consumer computer manufacturers have pushed computer literacy to the general public because they lacked a legitimate, realistic reason to sell the product," he said.

"They didn't have the right kind of software (programs)" for the general public, he explained. "They had low prices, a broad distribution system, but no compelling applications" for the personal computer user. "We still haven't discovered that compelling application."

Nevertheless, "computer programming courses are springing up in secondary schools, often at the expense of other curriculum offerings," Meserve, a consultant with Arthur D. Little, Inc., of Cambridge, Mass., continued. "For example, you might have a computer programming course fighting for turf with a music course."

Before long, he predicted, the situation will right itself and "we'll see music courses that use computers. And most of the students in those courses won't need to know how to program the equipment."

That's because computers are being taught human language faster than humans are learning machine and programming languages. And that's what's behind the industry's latest catchword slogan, "user friendly."

The schools just haven't caught up yet, Meserve said.

"There has to be two kinds of computer education," he advised. "One, technical literacy, teaches how to program; how a computer works. But you don't have to know how to field strip a computer or understand how it works to take advantage of its values. You only have to know the technical details if you want to design computers.

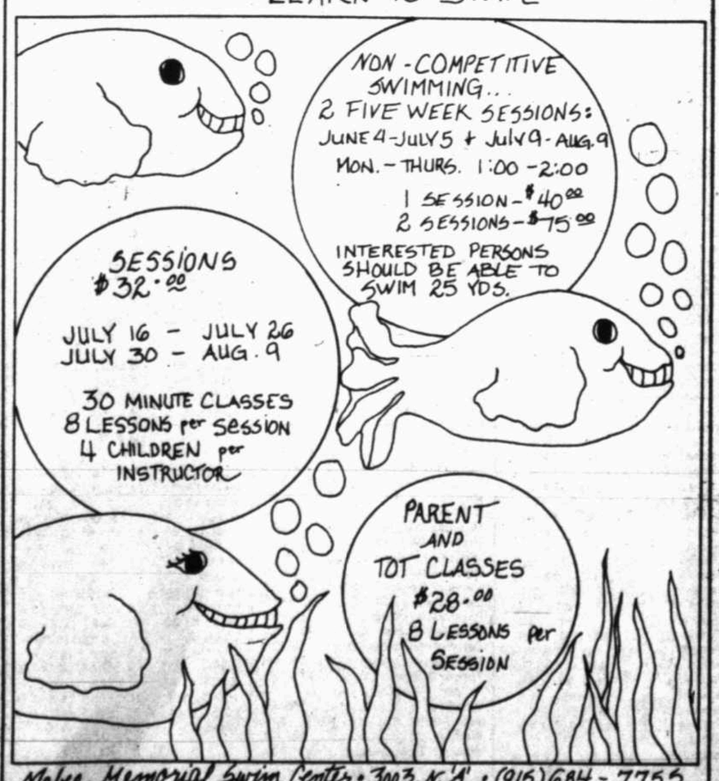

"The second kind of computer literacy is knowing how to run the programs," Meserve said. "You want to know how to use word processing programs, data bases, spreadsheets. You don't need to spend a year learning how to program. This is applications literacy and this is what most people need."

"No matter how tough a policeman thinks he is, he's never ready for the first highway fatality he sees. Mine was here 11 years ago. I had a 6-year-old die in my arms. Health officials defend Nutrasweet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal health officials are joining the maker of Nutrasweet in defending the low-calorie sweetener against a consumers group which says safety data used to approve it may have been flawed.

The Food and Drug Administration and G.D. Searle & Co., the company which sold $336 million worth of Nutrasweet last year, contended Tuesday that the allegations by Common Cause officials Fred Wertheimer and Florence Graves aren't new and have been answered before.

Wertheimer and Ms. Graves, president and vice president of the nonprofit citizens lobbying group, stopped short of calling Nutrasweet a health hazard and refused to offer consumers advice about using soft drinks, cereals, beverage mixes and nearly 70 other products that contain it.

But they urged Congress to look back at the way the FDA handled aspartame, the chemical name for Nutrasweet, during about 10 years of regulatory review before its approval in 1981.

"We don't see in the public record the basis on which FDA should have gone ahead on this," Wertheimer told reporters.

"We are talking about a process over 10 years that was flawed, step by step," added Ms. Graves, who conducted the research on the project. The group's findings were published in Common Cause Magazine.

Common Cause's main complaint was with the way the FDA investigated tests conducted through the mid-1970s and submitted by Searle. The FDA had questions about 25 tests on seven products. Eleven tests involved aspartame and three were pivotal in deciding to approve it.

Ms. Graves argued that the questions raised about Searle's testing practices never were adequately answered and issues raised by other scientists about safety data haven't been addressed.

But both the FDA and the Skokie, Ill.,-based company dispute this.

Dr. Frank Sturtevant, director of Searle's offices of Scientific Affairs, said the questions raised by Common Cause have been answered before. "I don't see that anything will be gained by spending the taxpayers' time and money on an investigation," he said.

He said that Searle's aspartame tests were authenticated by a review conducted for the FDA by the Universities Associated for Research and Education in Pathology.

The FDA and the Centers for Disease Control are examining about 600 complaints received from consumers about side effects allegedly associated with using aspartame.

The side effects include headaches, dizziness, menstrual irregularities, rashes and some cases of seizures. Grigg said about 200 cases are being reviewed in detail and lengthy interviews have been conducted with the consumers involved. But preliminary information shows "There are no surprises, nothing that suggests any problem," he said. The results should be issued within a month, he added.

Introduced in dry form in 1981, aspartame was cleared for use in soft drinks a year ago and now is used in every major low-calorie brand — often with saccharin. Sales of aspartame accounted for about one-third of the $1 billion Searle earned on all its products in 1983, spokeswoman Denise Ertell said.

But safety questions have cropped up regularly about aspartame. Among others, a Washington-based consumer group, the Community Nutrition Institute, has been trying unsuccessfully to have a federal court pull aspartame off the market. The state of Arizona considered and then rejected pleas for restrictions on aspartame-containing products, restrictions sought because of the potential for its breakdown into its component substances in high heat.

Former FDA Commissioner Arthur Hull Hayes Jr. approved the initial sale of aspartame despite the recommendation from a special public board of inquiry, convened by FDA, that further studies on the potential for brain tumors in rats be conducted.

Aspartame is a synthetic compound made of two naturally occurring amino acids — L-aspartic acid and L-phenylalanine. When ingested or placed in liquids a part of aspartame forms methanol. Aspartame is 180 times sweeter than table sugar. While one teaspoon of sugar has 18 calories, the equivalent sweetness of aspartame has one-tenth of a calorie.

Executive: Education 'No. 1 responsibility'

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — In the next six years, some 27 million children in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades will not get a proper foundation in science and mathematics, according to Charles Kittrell, executive vice president of Phillips Petroleum.

Kittrell said he believes it will take until 1990 to raise enough taxes, train a new generation of superior teachers, and design the proper materials necessary for modern instruction.

This year, Phillips says it will channel $8 million into education, much through company-sponsored math and science educational films.

"Education clearly is our No. 1 civic responsibility," Kittrell said.

Teaching involves discipline, enthusiasm

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Good teaching involves discipline as well as enthusiasm, several University of Rochester professors agreed in a recent seminar for high school teachers.

"We must require students to learn the basics, even if they're not 'interesting,'" said Jack Kampmeier, a chemistry professor. "Although a teacher's passion for the subject is important, too often students expect entertainment alone and balk at hard work."

Students must realize "they need a 'critical mass' of information before they can appreciate scientific findings, or literature in a foreign language," said biologist Robert Angerer.

"Students must know facts before they can ask questions, because they must know what to question," noted historian Jesse Moore.

New parents often bullied by authors selling books

Hearst Feature Service

A good deal of unsubtle bullying goes on when new parents bring home their first baby; everybody presumes to know how to raise the child better than its parents. And when those inexperienced parents search for child care books to help them find their own way, they often end up bullied by strong-minded authors who have a particular philosophy to sell.

It is precisely this intimidation of parents by "experts" that British child care author Penelope Leach has set out to overcome.

"If my books have one purpose," says Leach, "it's to make clear to all parents that there can't be anyone else in the world who knows your child the way you do. Let's not be so jolly respectful of authority."

Her crusade has found a ready audience in England, America and most of the world. Her third and most popular book, "Your Baby and Child" — "an attempt to look at the business of bringing a baby and toddler up as much as possible from the child's point of view" — has been translated into 18 languages and sold 300,000 copies here with little publicity.

RESPONDING TO demands that she extend her expertise to older children, Leach has put together "The Child Care Encyclopedia," a 700-page reference guide to "the physical and emotional well-being of children from birth through adolescence." She calls it "a sort of confidence-giving book," designed to give parents up-to-date psychological and medical information on topics as diverse as allergies, language and play.

Leach feels that America is a country where the "experts know best" attitude is even stronger than in England. "It makes me very cross," she says. "When I started off as a research worker in child development in the early '60s, a great deal of fascinating information was being found out, but most of it was going into learned journals for other research workers to read. It wasn't getting out to parents. When I had my first child, I realized that I had a lot of factual background material that most mothers I was meeting didn't have, and that nobody wanted them to have it, either."

Her urge to write came from this desire to bridge the gap between "the two halves of my life" — the mother and the developmental psychologist with a doctorate from the London School of Economics and years of field research.

As a mother, she relied on the books of child care authority Dr. Benjamin Spock. "He was the first to think that parents might want a book that took into account their feelings." But times and concerns have changed. Despite advances in medical and psychological sciences, child raising may actually be a more difficult process today than it has been in times past, Leach says, "if only because we expect more of ourselves and more of our children. It's a hard life out there; expectations are very, very high."

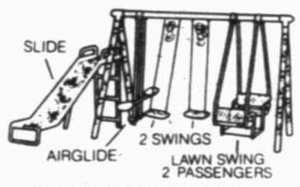

THERE ARE subjects in the encyclopedia you wouldn't have seen in Dr. Spock's time — children's reactions to divorce and their parents' new lovers, for example, or the growing problem of child abuse. Leach wanted "to look quite practically at how one can help children keep themselves safe in what has to be admittedly a dangerous society."

Leach devotes eight pages to the growing problem of child abuse and how to teach children to protect themselves from it. She has had to answer a lot of questions about child abuse lately, mainly because of California's McMartin Pre-School child-molestation case.

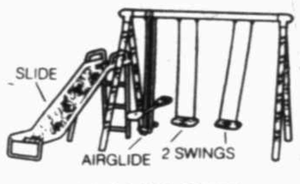

What troubles Leach most of all about that case "is what this tells us about communication between parents and the children. The most nightmarish aspect as I understand it is that it went on for a long time. If you are a parent who is tuned in to your child, believe me, there will have been signs that the child was not happy in school — kids not eating well, kids not sleeping well, kids having nightmares. Anxiety is an all-pervasive thing. While you can bribe and terrorize a child into not putting out specific information, there is no way you can bribe and terrorize a child into appearing happy, secure, enthusiastic about life."

PARENTAL UNDERSTANDING of the development process is one of Leach's greatest concerns. A little understanding can help give a parent the necessary confidence when dealing with the authority figures in a child's life — doctors, teachers, daycare personnel.

Globe sets Opree schedule

ODESSA — The Globe resumes its regular Odessa Brand New Opree schedule for the summer at 8 p.m. Saturday with a full line-up of area country and western talent.

"Mariah" is this week's house band. Individual performers for the show include Lisa Huling of San Angelo, Albert Cano of Jal and Doug Bailiff of Odessa. Other performers from Odessa include Windy Patton, vocalist with Permian High School's Black Magic Ensemble, Joel Galloway and gospel singer Holly Ensey.

Following this week's show, the Opree will begin its annual Entertainer of the Year competition to select the year's outstanding Opree performers.

Admission to the Opree is $4 for adults, $2 for students and senior citizens and $1.50 for children under 12. Tickets may be purchased at the Globe Box Office prior to the performance or during the week from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Museum seminar set

AUSTIN — A museum educational seminar for museum professionals and volunteers has been set for Aug. 3 in Midland at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum.

Sponsored by the Texas Historical Commission, the seminar will teach how primary materials, such as letters, photographs and clothing, can enrich the understanding of a period; several interpretive approaches to "reading" three-dimensional artifacts; and relationships between art and history in interpreting material culture in a museum setting.

Participants will take part in several exercises designed to explore these topics. A $5 registration fee will be charged for the workshop.

The Midland workshop is one of four to be held this summer throughout the state. The other seminars will take place July 31 in Denton, Aug. 1 in Canyon and Aug. 4 in Huntsville.

Revue to play at schools

The Fred Story Revue brings magic to Odessa High School Friday and Midland High School Saturday in two benefit performances for the Sunshine Kids, a national organization for children with life threatening diseases.

Proceeds from these performances will go to benefit the local chapter of Sunshine Kids. Funds made available through donations and benefits allow these children, most of whom suffer from cancer, to participate in activities such as the National Sunshine Kids Winter Games, first held in Winter Park, Colo., in March 1983. The national organization originated in Houston two years ago.

Tickets, priced at $3.50, may be purchased at the door. Local businesses have donated enough money to secure seats for those who are "handicapped or less fortunate" and want to attend. For more information call 687-4485.

Second film festival begins

The Museum of the Southwest's second summer film festival, "Adaptations from the Classics," begins today with "The Good Earth."

The series includes "Anna Karenina," July 19; "Camille," July 26; and "Madame Bovary," Aug. 2. All showing are at 7:30 p.m. at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium. Seating is on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Suggested donation is $2.

Newswoman juggles White House, news show

HOLLYWOOD — Talk about pressure. Lesley Stahl, who covers the White House for CBS News and moderates the network's Sunday morning show "Face the Nation," is wired to handle it like a controller at Chicago's O'Hare.

For last Sunday's program Stahl interviewed Boy George about androgyny and sexual roles. She did it while she was in London covering a Western European economic summit. Next week she'll be in San Francisco interviewing the Democrats. There isn't necessarily any connection among the three, except to demonstrate the range of Stahl's talent.

"I usually gain weight Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday," Stahl, rail thin, said as she discussed her "Face the Nation" duties. "I know I'll lose it on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

"We often don't know by Friday who we're going to have Sunday morning. This is desperate by 4 p.m. Late last season we wanted King Hussein. He said no. We asked Kissinger. Kissinger said no. We tried Shultz. No. Then the No. 2 and No. 3 men at State. No.

"Kissinger finally said yes. Then Hussein said he'd do it. We were stuck with both and we did them together. Luckily, I cover the White House and I'd been to Egypt the week before. I make phone calls. I read and research. I come up with questions. I get very up-tight. You're seeing me now relaxed." She's fidgeting and gulping coffee.

This is life for a TV network news person. Stahl, even though the grind eats at her insides, seems to love it, to thrive on it. Just keep the coffee and the nervous little jokes coming.

"I got to CBS in 1972, frankly, because I was a woman and they were looking for women," Stahl said. She was born in Swampscott, Mass., is an honors graduate of Wheaton College, a former two-year reporter for WHDH-TV Boston, married to author Aaron Latham ("Urban Cowboy") and mother of a daughter.

"My big break was being assigned to Watergate. No one was in Washington. They were out covering candidates. I just stayed with it and it developed into a long story. I was able to show them I could be a reporter. Usually stories are so short you can't develop them, but this one was different."

Watergate was a difficult time for lots of people in Washington, not just those in the White House.

"People don't like the messenger who brings them the news they don't want to hear," Stahl said. "During Watergate they hated us. They chased us in the streets. They spat at us."

'Dancin' USA' to tape at park

"Dancin' USA," a 30-minute dance and music show on cable television's The Nashville Network, will tape several episodes during five production days in Midland and Odessa this month.

The show features contemporary country music with the feeling of a country and western nightspot. Area dancers are encouraged to participate and appear on camera.

Tapings are Saturday through Wednesday at Water Wonderland on Highway 80 between the two cities. The shows, produced in cooperation with Water Wonderland, will be cablecast to more than 16 million TNN subscriber households this year.

Country music artist Jacky Ward is the host of "Dancin' USA." He is joined by the "Dancin' USA" band and a quartet of singers. Show production begins daily at 8 p.m. at Water Wonderland. Interested dancers need to arrive by 7:30 p.m. Expertise in the Cotton-Eyed Joe and the Texas Two-Step is helpful but not required.

The parts are unpaid, but participants will receive prizes and national television exposure. Minors must be accompanied by a parent or guardian. No special dress is required, but western wear is preferred. Faded blue jeans and white clothing are discouraged.

For additional information call Water Wonderland, 563-3141.

TNN is a national cable television network currently seen in more than 16 million homes. Programming is produced by The Nashville Network, a division of Opryland USA, Inc., Nashville. The service is marketed and distributed by Group W Satellite Communications.

John Henry Faulk comes to Midland

John Henry Faulk, a regular on the long running "Hee Haw" television show, will speak at the Petroleum Museum at 7:30 p.m. July 18 as part of the museum's Fuqua Distinguished Lecture Series.

The Texas born and raised Faulk is nationally known as a humorist, folklorist and constitutional expert. He has had his own radio and television programs as well as guesting on such interview shows as "The Tonight Show" and "The Today Show." The Austin resident also has a number of acting roles to his credit, having appeared in the films "The Best Man," "Loving Molly" and "Leadbelly."

Faulk will speak on "To Secure the Blessings of Liberty." His remarks will be a folksy, humorous and yet serious account of the ideas and principles that are the essence of the people of the United States.

The lecture series is funded by The Sid W. Richardson Foundation in honor of the Fort Worth industrialist and philanthropist, H.B. Fuqua. The first speaker in the series was John E. Swearingen, retired board chairman of Standard Oil of Indiana.

The lecture will be followed by a reception honoring the speaker. Both the lecture and the reception are open to the public.

Nigeria recalls ambassador to Britain

LONDON (AP) — Nigeria recalled its ambassador to discuss British-Nigerian tensions, and there were predictions today that he or other diplomats might be expelled in response to the kidnapping of Nigeria's former transport minister.

The British Foreign Secretary was to make what authorities called a crucial statement on the case today in the House of Commons. News reports said he was likely to announce the expulsion of some of Nigeria's 122 diplomats in London but to stop short of breaking diplomatic ties.

One newspaper, the Daily Mail, said Nigeria may have recalled its ambassador, Maj. Gen. Haldu Hananiya, to avoid the embarrassment of having him ordered out of the country.

"Seasoned diplomats said the general's recall could be a convenient face-saving formula," the Daily Mail reported. It said there were "strong suspicions that he was getting out before being kicked out."

Hananiya flew to Lagos late Wednesday night on a flight booked under another name, according to informed sources at Heathrow Airport who spoke on condition of anonymity. They said he checked in for the flight under his own name.

Officials at the Nigerian Embassy declined to comment on the report. But earlier Wednesday evening, Moses F. Ekpo, director of information at the embassy, told a news conference that Hananiya would return to London after his trip. He said that in Lagos, Hananiya would "brief the head of state, Maj. Gen. Muhammadu Buhari, on the current situation in London."

The dispute between the two countries began a week ago when former Nigerian Transport Minister Umaru Dikko was kidnapped from his home in London.

Authorities found him drugged in a crate that was about to be loaded onto a cargo plane for a flight to Lagos, the capital of Nigeria. The crate was addressed to the Nigerian Foreign Ministry from the London embassy.

Britain held the cargo plane and its crew, and Nigeria held a British Caledonia Boeing 747 jet. Both sides allowed the planes to leave last Saturday.

Nigeria's military government has denied any involvement in the plot to kidnap Dikko, who is wanted by the government on corruption charges. Nigeria alleges that Dikko, 47, amassed more than $1 billion during the civilian administration of President Shehu Shagari, which was overthrown on Dec. 31.

On Wednesday, Hananiya had his fourth meeting with officials at the British Foreign Office since the kidnapping. Howe has asked Hananiya to waive the usual rules on diplomatic immunity to let British police question members of his staff.

Ekpo said Monday that Howe's request would be relayed to Lagos but that no immediate reaction was expected.

CLAYDESTA NATIONAL BANK
Shareholder's Meeting

Notice is hereby given that, pursuant to call of its directors, a special meeting of the shareholders of ClayDesta National Bank will be held at its banking house at No. 6 ClayDesta Drive, Midland, Texas, on Thursday, July 19, 1984 at 10:00 a.m., for the purpose of considering and determining by vote whether an agreement to consolidate the said bank and a state interim bank to be located in Midland, Texas, the resulting bank of which would be a member of a bank holding company to be formed as ClayDesta Bancshares Incorporated, under the provisions of the laws of the United States, shall be ratified and confirmed subject to the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, Washington, D.C., and for the purposes of voting upon any other matters incidental to the proposed consolidation of the two banks and any other matters to properly come before the shareholders. A copy of the aforesaid agreement providing for the consolidation is on file at the Bank and may be inspected during business hours.

LOCAL NOTICE ANNOUNCEMENT

The Federal Communications Commission has designated for hearing on September 6, 1984, at 10:00 a.m. at the Federal Communications Commission's offices, Washington, D.C., the below applications for authority to operate a TV station for Midland, Texas, on Channel 18. Parties to the proceeding include: Midland Telecasting Company, Inc., Rodger Weems and Rolando A. Romero, d/b/a West Texas Communications, and Plains Television, Ltd. West Texas Communications seeks a construction permit for a new commercial television station to operate on Midland Channel 18, while Midland Telecasting Company, Inc seeks to renew its license for Channel 18 and consent assignment of the KDCD(TV) license from Midland Telecasting Company, Inc. to Plains Television, Ltd. The issues included in the Hearing Designated Order designating the applications for hearing include:

1. To determine which of the proposals would, on a comparative basis, serve the public interest; and
2. To determine, in light of the evidence, adduced pursuant to the foregoing issue, which of the applications should be granted.

Midland County Public Library

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals, addressed to the Mayor and City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, for the furnishing of materials and labor and the construction of 4,800 lin. ft. 15" Corrugated Galvanized Steel Pipe Drain; 90 lin. ft. 15" slotted Drain Pipe; 110 lin. ft. 12" slotted Drain Pipe; 19 manholes and other appurtenance for a complete drain system will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 2:30 p.m. on the 7th day of August, 1984, and publicly opened and read aloud at 3:00 p.m. on the same day.

Any bid received after closing time as stated above will be returned unopened.

Bid envelopes shall be plainly marked "Proposal for Project No. D-10"

Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the City Engineer, Fifth floor of the City Hall, 300 North Loraine, Midland, Texas, and may be secured upon a deposit for FIFTY DOLLARS ($50) for each set as a guaranty of safe return of the plans and specifications. The full amount of the deposit will be returned to the contractor on submission of bid on the work, and with such plans and specifications; or upon return of the plans and specifications immediately after the examination of the same and advising the City Engineer that no bid will be submitted; otherwise the deposit for same shall be forfeited.

A bid bond or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance and payout bonds. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.

The City of Midland, Texas, reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals or bids, to waive technicalities, and to make any investigation deemed necessary concerning the bidder's ability to perform the work covered by the plans and specifications, to award this bid by items and to accept what in the judgement of the Mayor and City Council is the most advantageous bid.

"Some people only live this way two weeks a year."

Welcome to vacation living all year long. Welcome to Saddle Club Apartments. Saddle Club isn't a resort-we just look like one. We offer you 2 sparkling swimming pools, 2 lighted tennis courts, 2 indoor racquetball courts, a universal gym, indoor and outdoor jacuzzis, and wet and dry saunas.

Once inside a Saddle Club apartment home you can cozy up to a warm fireplace, relax on your own patio or balcony and enjoy the feeling of luxury living.

Rent beginning at $310. We're located only minutes from major businesses, recreation, fine restaurants and entertainment. We're probably only a few minutes away from where you work.

So if you feel like taking a vacation that never has to end, take a drive over to Saddle Club and let us show you how.
