Ortiz appears in court, judge appoints him attorney

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Appearing in leg-irons and "jail blues," accused killer Henry Ortiz went before the judge and was appointed counsel Friday by 238th District Court Judge John G. Hyde.

The grand jury indicted Ortiz, 41, Wednesday for capital murder.

The indictment charges Ortiz with killing 10-year-old Julianne Powell Feb. 10 by various means, including strangulation and suffocation while in the course of committing kidnapping and aggravated sexual assault.

Prosecutors plan to seek the death penalty.

Hyde appointed attorney H.W. "Woody" Leverett to act as an agent for the court to advise Ortiz of his rights while determining if Ortiz can retain his own attorney or if one needs to be appointed for him.

On Friday, Ortiz was advised of his right to be arraigned then or wait for two days. After consulting with Leverett, Ortiz elected to be arraigned Tuesday.

Midland County Assistant District Attorney Ralph Petty notified Ortiz of the motion to deny bond. Ortiz is entitled to a hearing on that issue as well.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre, Petty and fellow assistant district attornies, Teresa Clingman and Brian Carney, will prosecute the case as a team.

The victim's family issued a statement Wednesday stating:

"We are expecting the swift execution of justice in this case. Mr. Ortiz has committed a crime that cannot be forgiven. He deserves the most severe penalty allowable under the law. He and others like him must not be allowed to do this again."

Ortiz — a Midland College student who works with teens at an MHMR residential drug treatment center — remains in the Midland County Jail. He has thus far been denied bond.

Julianne was found dead — unclothed in a laundry hamper with her clothes laid on top of her — in Ortiz's apartment two hours after her mother reported her missing Feb. 10.

Both the suspect and the victim lived

Jury convicts man in 1993 train slayings

■ Jurors deliberate 10 hours before returning verdict in courtroom filled with survivors, slain victims' families.

Associated Press

MINEOLA, N.Y. — Colin Ferguson was convicted Friday of murdering six passengers and wounding 19 others on a commuter train, ending a bizarre trial in which he refused an insanity plea and defended himself.

The jury deliberated for 10 hours before returning its verdict at about 9:20 p.m. in a courtroom packed with survivors of the attack and families of the slain victims.

In addition to the murder counts, Ferguson was convicted of 22 counts of attempted murder, weapons possession and reckless endangerment. However, he was acquitted of 25 counts of civil rights violations, charging he targeted victims because of their race.

Even Ferguson anticipated the guilty verdict; only the length of the deliberations surprised him, said his legal adviser, Alton Rose.

"Guilty," said jury foreman Delton Dove when asked about the first murder count. He repeated it five times, once for each of the other victims shot to death aboard the 5:33 p.m. train on Dec. 7, 1993, just outside New York City. Nineteen others were wounded.

A small smattering of applause greeted the first guilty verdict, and the courtroom erupted in cheers when a handcuffed Ferguson was led out by court officers.

"It's been a long 14 months, but justice has been done," said Carolyn McCarthy, whose husband was killed and her son crippled in Ferguson's rampage on the Long Island Railroad train.

Ferguson stood mute and stared at jurors as the verdict was read. When the jury was polled again, he sat slumped in his chair. Dove sat in the jury box, crying and shaking after the verdict.

Ferguson, who faces life in prison, asked the judge to set the verdict aside. Judge Donald Belfi told him he could address the issue at his March 20 sentencing.

Ferguson used his closing argument Thursday to accuse survivors of conspiring with police to implicate him. Victims and relatives were so incensed they walked out of court.

The evidence against Ferguson appeared overwhelming. In addition to his handwritten notes expressing hatred of whites and Asians, all but two of the 19 survivors testified against him.

Twelve identified him as the gunman. And the commuters who said they subdued and disarmed Ferguson also took the witness stand.

Combest expects House to pass oil, gas rule-suspension legislation

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Congressional passage of the Republicans' proposed suspension of new oil-and-gas regulations will help stymie the "continuing heavy mudslides" of federal regulations, U.S Rep. Larry Combest, R-Texas, said Friday in Midland.

"Costly and ineffective federal regulations have already made much of our domestic industry into museum relics," Combest said. "But we plan to stop additional new rules from making the oil-field situation worse. And with the federal government, an even worse situation is within their bureaucratic bent unless we stop them beginning next week."

Combest said he expects the House of Representatives to pass legislation which, if approved by the Senate and President Clinton, will curtail new regulations that date to Nov. 20, 1994, and those proposed through Dec. 31, 1995.

"These rules run the range from the above-ground (storage) tanks to expensive new permits for storm-water runoff for a well set-

Electronics store, developers agree to build buffer for Crestgate houses

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

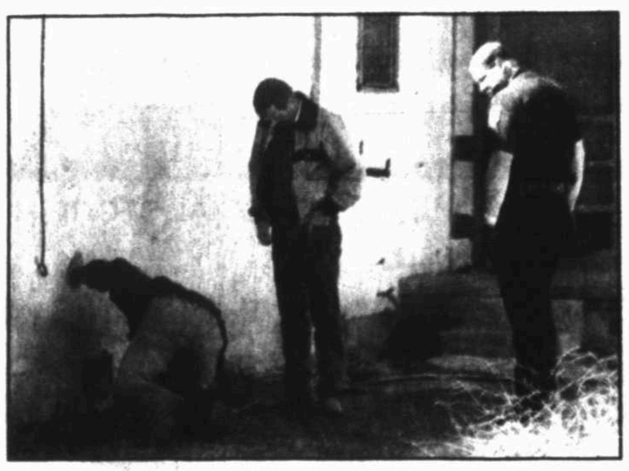

Developers constructing an electronics store at the northeast corner of Loop 250 and Midland Drive plan to erect a fence as a buffer to the Crestgate housing addition. The decision to build a buffer — not a requirement under zoning ordinances applicable to the development — was reached in order to appease neighbors concerned with perceived problems of living next to a retail store.

On Thursday evening, about 50 residents met with several city officials to seek solutions to the problems. Officials advised residents that the developers were under no obligation to erect a fence.

Nevertheless, Pat Schneider — City Council representative for District 1 that includes Crestgate — and Mayor Bobby Burns worked diligently to resolve the problem and spoke at length with the developers and store representatives, Assistant City Manager Glen Hackler said.

Mild day in store for Midland

Staff Report

A day filled with sunshine, light winds, and mild temperatures is in store for Midlanders today.

Today should be sunny, with a high in the mid-60s and light winds, according to the forecaster at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight calls for clear skies and a low in the mid-30s.

Sunday is to be sunny with a high in the upper 60s.

After an overnight low of 26, Friday's high reached 57, compared to the record high for that date of 82 set in 1977. The record low was 11 set in 1936.

TEXAS

Sunshine returned to most of Texas on Friday, with only a few clouds and showers lingering along the Gulf Coast.

Temperatures warmed into the 50s and 60s statewide despite northerly breezes at 5 to 10 mph. However, winds shifted to the southwest at 10 to 20 mph in the Panhandle.

Abilene and Beaumont reported afternoon temperatures of 50 degrees while it was 65 at Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio.

The North Texas forecast is for mostly sunny skies and warmer temperatures Saturday with highs in the 60s. Saturday night is expected to be fair but not as cool with lows in the 30s and 40s. Sunday will be springlike with highs in the 60s and 70s.

South Texas is expected to be mostly cloudy Saturday with a chance of light rain in the far south. Highs are to be in the 60s. Overnight lows will be in the 40s and 50s.

Forecasters predict mostly sunny days for West Texas through Sunday. Highs are to be in the upper 60s. Lows are to range from near 30 in the north to near 40 in southern sections.

NATION

Rain pelted areas from southern Louisiana to the Carolinas on Friday, and powerful storms pounded the Pacific Northwest with high winds, heavy rain and snow in the mountains.

Many streams and rivers approached flood stage or have already caused some flooding throughout the Gulf Coast states and the Carolinas. No serious problems were reported. Up to 4 inches of rain had fallen in some areas within 36 hours.

Along coastal areas of Washington and Oregon, as well as the Puget Sound region and the northern Willamette Valley and Portland, nearly 3 inches of rain fell, while a couple inches of snow dropped on Snohomish. Winds gusted as high as 87 mph on the Oregon coast at Cape Blanco.

High winds also blew through the eastern slopes of the Rockies in Montana and Wyoming, and Interstate 25 was closed overnight between Casper and Douglas because of blowing, drifting snow.

A few rain showers were reported in northwest Montana, while some snow was developing in parts of northern Minnesota along a Canadian cold front.

Forecasters expected more bands of showers and thunderstorms from Louisiana to the Carolinas, with some rainfall amounts heavy enough to cause flooding.

The soil throughout the region is saturated from recent heavy rainfall, so widespread minor flooding is likely to continue into the weekend. Some thunderstorms may produce hail, damaging winds and a few tornadoes.

The high Friday in the lower 48 states was 84 at Key West, Fla., and the low was 27 below zero at Warroad, Minn.

Clarification

A story in Wednesday's newspaper reported that the contract of former bilingual education coordinator John Martinez had not been renewed by Midland Independent School District. However, when his contract came up for renewal, the board took no action on it and he continued to work under the contract that had been renewed the year before. He later took a job with Dallas Independent School District before his contract came up for renewal again.

Putt-Putt course gets location

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

As Mayor Bobby Burns and City Council members Claudia Egan and Pat Schneider looked on, Midland businessman David Powers on Friday placed a sign at the intersection of Loop 250 and Holiday Hill Road announcing the future location of a Putt-Putt recreation center.

Powers said the center will include two themed miniature golf courses totaling 36 holes, a seven-station batting cage and a game room that will include rooms for birthday parties. He said future plans include a raceway and bumper boats.

Construction is expected to begin in November, with the center opening in March 1996.

He said the center will be bounded on the north and west by the planned Northwest Community Park, the construction of which will begin in March. On the south, the property is bounded by commercial property.

"We won't begin construction until after the park is done," Powers said.

Since being awarded the Midland franchise by Putt-Putt of Fayette, N.C., Powers has been seeking a site for the center. He initially tried to purchase the former Davis Landscaping location on north Midkiff Road, a move that was opposed by residents and denied by the City Council.

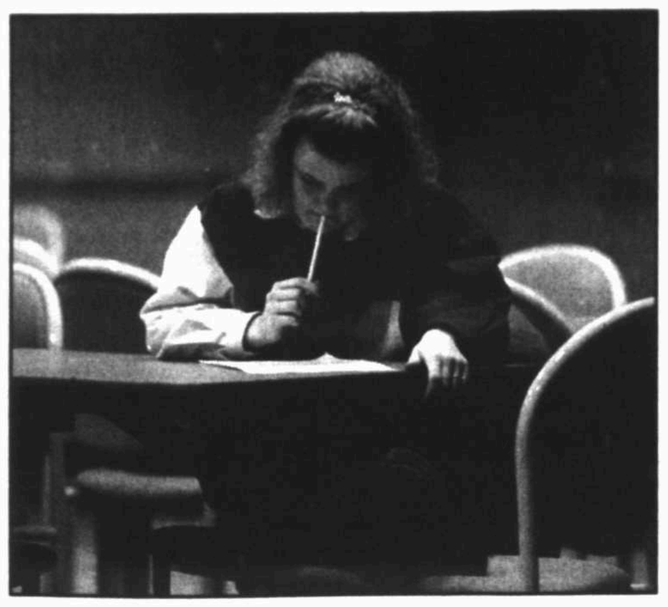

After that attempt, he said, "I worked with Mayor Burns evaluating 30 different properties, looking for a location that was feasible for both us and for the city. The mayor was very helpful."

"I was very pleased with the way Mayor Burns worked with us. I'm also very pleased with how everything worked out. Because we were turned down, I had lots of people call and offer property; it actually was very positive," he said.

Powers, who is self-employed in the oil and gas business, said he had been looking for additional business opportunities.

Another reason for his interest in the Putt-Putt franchise, he said, is because he has "teen-age children and I was interested in having a place where they could work. Also, I've lived here since 1981 and I recognize that there's not that much to do, recreation-wise."

He pointed out that in the 1993 Midland Introspective survey, 11 percent of respondents said the city's main issue was the lack of recreational facilities and programs. His planned miniature golf course, he said, covers both issues.

SLAYINGS: Jurors deliberates for 10 hours

(From 1A)

Under cross-examination, the witnesses answered Ferguson's questions by directly implicating him. One victim, Robert Giugliano, so unnerved Ferguson with his hard stare that the defendant asked for a 15-minute recess.

The first person shot on the train, Maryanne Phillips, coolly told Ferguson: "I saw you shoot me" — a surreal scene that was repeated over and over in the Long Island courtroom.

The parade of victims included Kevin McCarthy, whose father died in his lap; Lisa Combatti, who was seven months pregnant when shot; and war veteran Thomas McDermott, who said the carnage was worse than anything he'd seen in Vietnam.

All of them cited a sense of closure achieved by facing Ferguson.

After the verdict, they said little about the defendant, concentrating instead on gun control.

"Until 10 minutes ago (Ferguson) would have been eligible to buy that same gun, to kill the same six wonderful people," said McDermott, who was shot in the shoulder.

Mrs. McCarthy said she and the relatives of other victims would continue campaigning against guns.

"We are going to take it upon ourselves to do everything possible so other people in this country won't have to go through this," she said.

Ferguson, a 37-year-old Jamaican immigrant, insisted he was innocent. Yes, Ferguson said, he was riding on the train. But he fell asleep, and a white man stole his automatic weapon and opened fire, he said.

His defense consisted of a single witness: a Nassau County homicide detective already called by the prosecution. And he never called his star witness: himself.

The opening statements were the first sign of the strange days ahead in the three-week trial. Ferguson, referring to himself in the third person, gave a rambling statement that claimed he was arrested because of his race.

Ferguson is black; all but one of his victims were white or Asian.

He later delivered this nonsequitur in explaining why he faced a 93-count indictment: "If it had been 1925, it would have been a 25-count indictment."

Despite the 93 counts, in many cases jurors had to choose between alternate counts, so it was impossible for Ferguson to be convicted on all counts.

Ferguson also tried to subpoena President Clinton and ex-Gov. Mario Cuomo, and announced in court there was a conspiracy against him that was linked to the prison slaying of Jeffrey Dahmer.

However bizarre, his arguments often were delivered in a polished, calm, articulate manner, and showed that he had studied the basics of trial procedure.

Ferguson represented himself over the advice of celebrated defense lawyer William Kunstler, who hoped to raise an insanity defense based on "black rage."

But Ferguson dumped Kunstler and was found mentally fit for trial. The jury did not have the option of finding Ferguson insane because it was not raised as a defense.

APPEARS: Ortiz goes before judge who appoints lawyer in the same building at Quinten's Walk apartments, 3100 W. Caldera Boulevard. Julianne and her mother lived upstairs; Ortiz and his wife lived downstairs.

Ortiz was arrested and questioned by detectives following the discovery of the girl's body in a spare room of his apartment. Officers were led to Ortiz after questioning neighbors about the girl's disappearance, Schorre said.

Schorre said Ortiz was sober and calm when officers arrived about 7 p.m. Feb. 10. Ortiz signed a written consent allowing the officers to search the apartment, police said.

"She (the girl) was found in the suspect's apartment, but we don't know how she got there," Midland police Sgt. David Garcia said. "This guy, for some reason, became a suspect and officers went to his apartment where he gave a written consent to search, and after a short search officers found the body."

Preliminary autopsy results from Southwestern Institute of Forensic Science in Dallas listed the cause of death as suffocation and strangulation and indicated the girl had been sexually assaulted.

Schorre said a preliminary investigation shows Ortiz has faced sexual assault allegations, but he has no convictions.

Funeral services were conducted in Marin County, Calif., Wednesday for Julianne. A candlelight vigil was conducted Thursday on the steps of the Midland County Courthouse in memory of Julianne.

PLEA: Judge dismisses charges against Ms. Nichols indictment against Bevery Ann Nichols for the reason it is in the best interest of justice," according to the motion to dismiss.

Holbrook posted a $5,000 cash bond and was released.

Officers from several law-enforcement agencies instigated the drug raid Feb. 10 and arrested the Nicholses at their mobile home at 1003 W. County Road 121; Holbrook was arrested at the downtown post office where he worked.

The raid was the result of intelligence gathered on the trio. About 60 pounds of marijuana were found in various states of packaging for distribution, according to Midland police Sgt. David Garcia.

Officers uprooted more than 4,100 marijuana plants from the couple's back yard.

They are also charged with maintaining a place to manufacture the marijuana as well as the possession of a weapon, a .45 caliber revolver, during drug trafficking.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery had filed a notice seeking an enhanced penalty in the crimes because of the more than 1,000 marijuana plants discovered and because they allegedly conspired to distribute more than 50 kilograms of marijuana.

In another case, Gina Rene Norred, 37, was granted a $2,500 cash bond and was released Friday afternoon.

She was indicted Wednesday on charges of possessing with the intent to distribute cocaine within 1,000 feet of Bonham Elementary School and for possessing a semi-automatic assault rifle during drug trafficking.

Officers from several law-enforcment agencies executed a search at 4303 W. Cuthbert Ave. at 8:15 p.m. Monday, according to a police report.

Officials seized 6.2 ounces of powder cocaine, with a street value of $20,000, a small amount of crack cocaine and an SKS assault rifle, according to the report.

struct an 8-foot high wooden fence with landscaping in the form of mondale pines," Hackler said.

The developers will also adjust directional lighting on the building and reduce exits from two to one, officials said.

Ms. Schneider said she was "delighted" a compromise was reached. "Those are the companies we like — the ones that will work with us," she said.

Hackler, echoed that sentiment, adding that a letter from Circuit City was "written with the spirit of cooperation."

Officials said homeowners were generally pleased with the offering. The buffer was a compromise; the residents had requested a concrete wall rather than a wood fence.

Chechen war catches children in middle

By Julia Rubin
Associated Press Writer

SAMASHKY, Russia — School closed long ago in this Chechen town. Now, the kids have gone, too.

Five-year-old Amkhad, walking down the muddy main street with a toy pistol, is one of only a few children whose families have not fled in a month of clashes between village men and Russian troops.

Asked where he is walking, Amkhad is too shy to answer. He smiles when a man standing nearby shouts, "Say you're going to wipe out the Russian swine!"

The war between Russian soldiers and Chechen rebels who want independence from Moscow has caught children square in the middle.

Tens of thousands are refugees, often living without one or both of their parents. Those who stay home also seem lost, their friends and extended family having fled. Many endure terrifying air raids.

In front of President Dzhokhar Dudayev's ruined palace in Grozny this week, a woman walked with her 6-year-old son and 5-year-old daughter as gunfire sounded from southern parts of the city.

They were the only children in sight all day.

"The kids still become terrified when they hear a plane, and say, 'Mommy, hide me,'" said the mother, identifying herself only as Nadya. They walked within feet of the remains of weaponry, buildings and bodies.

Few kids have any idea what the conflict is about.

"I don't know. I think they want to kill Chechen and Ingush people," says Islam Markhiev, a 6-year-old with a scab on his nose and torn woolen pants. He has been living on a parked train with his mother, sisters and about 1,000 other refugees for two months in Nazran, the capital of the neighboring republic of Ingushetia.

Chechnya became an unfriendly place for children even before the war.

In Samashky as in other towns, school closed a year or two ago, residents say, after the government stopped paying teachers and other state employees.

Critics say Dudayev was raiding the treasury to buy arms.

But in Samashky, people blame Moscow's blockade against the separatist republic, and say Dudayev had to build up his arsenal against an inevitable Russian attack.

The rundown school has been hit by artillery. In some villages, abandoned schools serve as meeting places for Chechen fighters.

Refugee children, most living with relatives in other towns, also rarely go to school. Those who live on the train in Nazran spend the days climbing trees, or playing tag, hide-and-seek, pat-a-cake.

"I don't have any toys," says 10-year-old Adam Yarizhev, whose family fled the capital, Grozny, and now lives on the train in Nazran. "All my things were in my house when it was attacked by a bomb."

He misses his brother, sent to live with another family, and his friends. His grandmother was killed in the attack, he says.

Along with the schools, health care has collapsed, and again children are among the hardest-hit. Many Chechen towns, including Grozny, have no running water, and medical officials expect epidemics come spring.

Nurses on the Nazran train say they treat numerous colds, diarrhea and pneumonia. One recent humanitarian-aid shipment contained bad milk, and 50 children on the train got sick.

Still, the refugee children often seem happier and livelier than their exhausted parents.

"Even when the planes were flying back in Grozny and I was afraid, my kids would say, 'Don't worry Mom,'" said a sobbing Fatima Kirimova, who came to Nazran with her six children after Russia's New Year Eve offensive on the Chechen capital.

"I saw two missiles, but I wasn't scared," says 11-year-old Timurlan Barkinkhoyev. He says his family's house in Grozny was hit, and they sat all day in the cold before leaving for Ingushetia.

Villagers in Samashky tell of an 11-year-old girl who died of fright during a bombardment. "Her heart just gave out," said Isya Bakharchiyev, one of a crowd of men gathered on the street.

Rebel's information leads to arrests, officials say

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A disgruntled member of the high command of the Zapatista rebel movement gave information leading to the arrest of several top rebels and the unmasking of their leader, Marcos, an official said Friday.

The arrests came only days after President Ernesto Zedillo had invited the guerrillas to the negotiating table.

A high-ranking Interior Ministry official, who spoke with reporters on condition of anonymity, identified the informer as Salvador Morales. The 34-year-old rebel, known as sub-commander Daniel, met secretly with government officials in January, the official said.

Armed with information on the number of guerrillas, locations and type of weapons they held, the army sent helicopters, armored vehicles and infantry into rebel-held towns. The Zapatista National Liberation Army retreated into the jungle and the army encountered no resistance as it took control.

Morales' statements detailed the names and activities of most guerrilla leaders, including Marcos, whom he identified as former university professor Rafael Sebastian Guillen Vicente. Marcos remains at large.

Information Morales gave earlier to the government's security agency led to safe houses and storage sites run by Zapatistas.

He is now in a maximum security prison.

Morales reportedly sent his first communication to the army in early January, but it was not believed. Information in two subsequent messages was investigated before a meeting was arranged.

"He said in his letter he was doing this because of the damage that Marcos was doing to the country," the government official said.

Marcos wanted total control of the movement, according to the government. Morales reportedly told the government that Marcos, upset over a shortage of supplies, even ordered an audit of the logistics department run in Mexico City by Fernando Yanez, known as commander German.

China warns against missile system development

N.Y. Times News Service

BEIJING — China said Friday that the United States "will increase the danger of nuclear war" and "trigger an arms race in outer space" if it proceeds with a plan to develop an advanced ballistic missile defense system that could be deployed around United States forces in Asia.

A proposal to build a missile shield covering the United States — a return to the "Star Wars" program of the Reagan years — was defeated on Thursday in the House of Representatives.

But the Clinton administration and some members of Congress support the development of a smaller "theater missile defense" system to protect American forces and allies when they are exposed to enemy ballistic missiles like those Iraq fired against Israel and Saudi Arabia during the Persian Gulf war in 1991.

The Chinese warning was delivered by a senior foreign ministry official, who briefed reporters on condition that he not be identified.

"If a country with nuclear weapons has a spear and then gets a shield, you can imagine what would happen," the official said, referring to the potential for a first strike without fear of retaliation.

China's opposition to anti-missile systems stems from fears in the military leadership that an American anti-missile system could render China's small force of nuclear-tipped strategic missiles completely ineffective.

China's opposition to anti-missile systems stems from fears in the military leadership that an American anti-missile system, if deployed in Asia to protect Japan or South Korea, could render China's small force of nuclear-tipped strategic missiles completely ineffective.

Senior Chinese military officials have told high-level American visitors that China's national prestige demands that it maintain the credibility of its nuclear deterrent force of about 300 long-range warheads.

Without that credibility, China would be subject to "blackmail," the official said. He reminded reporters that the United States considered using nuclear weapons against China during the Korean War.

At the briefing, the official also made these assertions:

- China and Russia are justified in selling civilian nuclear technology to Iran as long as it is done under the safeguards of the International Atomic Energy Agency.
- Despite President Clinton's decision to extend the American moratorium on underground nuclear testing, China is free to continue exploding a new generation of warheads in underground tests until 1996, when it has committed itself to sign a comprehensive test ban treaty.
- Even after China signs a test ban treaty, its leaders have not decided whether to press for "small" underground tests to insure the safety and reliability of nuclear weapons already in the arsenal.

The official's warning on missile defenses came before a series of high-level American visits to Beijing, including trips by Energy Secretary Hazel R. O'Leary and Winston Lord, the Assistant Secretary of State for Asian Affairs.

The foreign ministry official said China had often expressed its opposition to a theater missile defense system through a variety of diplomatic channels and "whenever we meet."

"We are opposed to any modified form of the Strategic Defense Initiative because it will touch off another round of arms race in outer space," he said. "I believe it will increase the danger of nuclear war."

At one point, the official raised his voice and accused the United States and the news media of falsely portraying China as a "threat" to international peace.

"I think the so-called China threat originated from a faraway place," he said. "We are tired of all these allegations. For the last 100 years, we have been hearing the same story."

Government won't accept lawlessness, Mandela says

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — President Nelson Mandela, facing growing discontent, opened Parliament Friday with a warning that his government won't accept lawlessness as it struggles to fulfill its promise of a better life for poor blacks.

Hit with demands from public workers for better pay, agitation by black police over lingering discrimination, white protests about black children in their schools and even criticism from his estranged wife Winnie, Mandela sounded as if he had had enough.

Mandela promised to resist unreasonable demands by public employees and crack down on crime. He said his 9-month-old government is fighting "the forces of anarchy and chaos."

Criticized in recent weeks as being too soft on lawbreakers and corruption in his Afrıçan National Congress, Mandela showed his less-familiar side: tough and willing to castigate his own followers.

His message drew praise from political opponents, particularly conservative groups such as the white-led National Party and Freedom Front.

But it was unclear how his call for discipline would play to his grassroots support, millions of impoverished blacks who elected Mandela's ANC last April hoping for a significant improvement in living conditions.

Mandela leveled his fiercest fusillades at radical politicians, unionists and civic leaders who want to squeeze more money out of the government with strikes, boycotts and holding public officials hostage in their offices.

"All of us, especially the leadership of political organizations and civil society, must rid ourselves of the wrong notion that the government has a big bag full of money. The government does not," Mandela declared.

He criticized South Africans for expecting free housing, electricity and other services, and said a minority who sought disruptions to further their own ends had "misread freedom to mean license."

"The battle against the forces of anarchy and chaos has been joined," Mandela said. "Let no one say they have not been warned."

The warning was ironic because, before assuming power, the ANC used the same tactics against the old apartheid regime. Now, Mandela argued, such illegal protests only harmed a legitimately elected government.

With the police forces in disarray and many officers demoralized by low pay or worries about being punished for past actions supporting apartheid, it was doubtful Mandela's call for action against the country's soaring crime would have immediate results.

But the tougher the 76-year-old president talked, the more he was applauded during a speech that exceeded an hour. Cheers came from his own ANC and especially from the National Party, which created and then dismantled apartheid before finishing a distant second in the election last year.

Arafat rejects Israeli proposal

JERUSALEM (AP) — Yasser Arafat on Friday rejected an Israeli proposal that as a step toward expanding Palestinian self-rule he start running the West Bank town of Jenin while Israeli troops remain there.

However, a senior Palestinian negotiator said the PLO was ready to compromise and accept a gradual Israeli troop withdrawal from West Bank towns, signaling an end to the months-long impasse in the Israel-PLO autonomy talks.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin delayed the West Bank withdrawal because he felt Arafat didn't do enough to foil attacks by Islamic extremists that have killed 56 Israelis since October.

On Friday, the Muslim militant group Hamas threatened reprisals against Palestinian security forces if more Hamas supporters were arrested in the Gaza Strip.

Hamas, the leading opponent to the Israel-PLO peace accord, also claimed it has obtained antitank missiles and would fire them into Jewish settlements and army posts in five attacks.

Arafat, under pressure from Israel to crack down, arrested scores of Islamic militants in the past two weeks. Out of some 200 initially rounded up, about 50 remained in custody Friday, Palestinian police officials said.

"We agreed that the withdrawal and elections would take place in July and now we're in February and nothing has happened," Arafat said during an impromptu speech at noon services in a Gaza City mosque.

Accounts of events differ in Los Angeles graffiti shooting incident

By Scott Lindlaw
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — William Masters was out on a midnight walk when he ran into two men spray-painting graffiti on a freeway underpass. He says he planned to report them. He ended up shooting them.

Masters claims he reached into his fanny pack for his 9mm handgun and fired at the men, killing one and wounding the other, only after he was threatened with a screwdriver. The survivor says he may have looked menacing but didn't mean to threaten Masters.

Prosecutors declined to charge Masters with murder, sparking outrage among the Hispanic community. Relations were further strained when Masters, on his release from jail, referred to the victims as "Mexican skinheads." The dead man was Hispanic, the survivor is of Middle Eastern descent.

Still, for many residents of crime-weary and graffiti-scarred Los Angeles, Masters is a hero.

Masters says he is surprised by his new role, but understands what feeds it.

"We are coming back to the point where people are responsible for protecting each other and themselves," he said recently.

"We spent most of the last 40 years letting the police handle it. We were told to be a good victim and the police would come along. We've got to change that attitude," he said.

Masters, a 35-year-old bit-part actor, was on his customary walk just past midnight on Jan. 31 when he stumbled on Cesar Arce, 18, and David Hillo, 20, spray-painting the mark of their club on a freeway overpass.

Masters wrote down their license plate number, but the two demanded the piece of paper and he handed it over.

Then, as Masters tells it, Hillo pulled a screwdriver and Arce approached from behind as Masters tried to walk away. That's when Masters pulled out his gun, whirled and fired. He killed Arc and wounded Hillo.

"I didn't do anything until they threatened to perforate my abdomen," Masters said.

Hillo said that he had a screwdriver, but was using it to climb traffic sign poles, not as a weapon. He has said the shooting was unprovoked.

The prosecutor's office said Arce was shot in the back near one side as if he was turning, and the bullet exited his chest. Both Hillo and Masters told authorities that Arce was within arm's length of Masters when Arce was shot. Hillo was about 10 feet away when he was shot in the buttocks.

Authorities were flooded with phone calls from residents outraged when Masters was arrested. And they rallied to his defense on radio talk shows when the district attorney declined to prosecute Masters, saying he believed Masters fired in self-defense.

Deputy District Attorney Robert Cohen had even considered charging Hillo with "vicarious murder" because, based on Masters' story, Hillo's threat caused Arce's death. He decided against it Thursday, saying there wasn't enough evidence.

Prosecutors still are considering charging Hillo with vandalism. Masters may be charged with carrying a concealed weapon without a permit, but he hasn't stopped packing his gun.

The deadly confrontation took place in suburban East San Fernando Valley, a tableau of tidy neighborhoods 15 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles.

These neighborhoods, with names like Panorama City and Sun Valley, were built after World War II, and their lemon trees and sun-drenched baseball diamonds came to represent the postwar success of their inhabitants' lives.

But many have declined, and for residents the most graphic symbol of the slide is graffiti. It blights parks, street signs, utility poles, water pipes and freeway overpasses at every turn.

"It bothers me more than anything I can think of," said Doreen Turnham, 68, of Van Nuys, a lifelong Valley resident. "It degrades the neighborhood."

Valley communities have aggressively fought the graffiti invasion, giving citizens video cameras and radios to help authorities catch the vandals.

Elsewhere in Los Angeles County, officials have tried everything from youth rehabilitation programs to ordinances directing merchants to keep spray paint in display cases. There's a hot line where citizens can report vandals, and the city pays $500 rewards for convictions.

The animosity is growing. Matthew McMurray, who admits he has "tagged" property with graffiti, was stunned by the reaction as he and about 15 other young men and women held an informal memorial for Arce at the underpass.

"People are driving by here clapping and laughing, shouting, 'Kill the taggers!'" McMurray said.

The incident has made little change in Masters' habits. He still takes his late-night walks, though he goes earlier and varies his route. He is undeterred by the possibility of revenge-seekers.

"These kids know I shoot straight and have a gun or two," he said. "Plus, they're not used to picking on people with guns. There's a big difference between hunting a hunter and hunting prey.

"If someone's going to kill you, just make sure they die with you," he said.

Total cyberspace security from hackers is impossible, some experts say

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Despite the arrest of the FBI's most-wanted hacker, computer system operators are scrambling to put virtual locks on their cyberworlds in what may be a futile attempt to protect themselves.

"We're doing what we can, but it's impossible to give people the world with a fence around it," said Bruce Katz, owner of the Sausalito-based Well, one of the networks hacker Kevin D. Mitnick is accused of invading.

Mitnick allegedly broke into the system to read strangers' e-mail, camouflage his other activities and, in one final affront, wipe out all its accounting records.

While Mitnick is considered one of the best hackers, networks are concerned about the hundreds of others who also get thrills breaking into computers.

Computer security is a daunting task. The global Internet was designed for researchers to collaborate, not for high security.

But as it has gone from being the purview of scientist to a business and public forum, security needs have changed — the porous nature of the network has not. Anyone with a computer, a modem and a phone line can get onto the Internet.

In the case of the Well, Mitnick's alleged security breach was so severe that technicians will have to rebuild the system from scratch next week.

"We're actually going to have to go off the air for two full days to do it," Katz said.

That's on the order of evacuating a small town so police can search for bombs. The Well's 10,000 users comprise a tight, albeit virtual, community.

Since the Well was ravaged, it has moved all its internal communications and accounting systems behind a portion of its computer that the public can't reach. And a new password program going up next week will only let users chose "strong passwords."

"If people pick a word that's in the dictionary, it will tell them to find another," Katz said.

Mitnick, 31, was arrested Wednesday in Raleigh, N.C., and charged with computer fraud and illegal use of a telephone access device. He was jailed without bail Friday.

Prosecutors say the man called the nation's most-wanted computer infiltrator commandeered cellular phone circuits to raid corporate computer systems and steal information worth more than $1 million, including at least 20,000 credit card numbers.

With hacking of that magnitude going on, companies that do business over the Internet were already wary, and they're getting warier.

CyberSource in Menlo Park, which sells software via the Internet, allows only a small portion of its computer system to connect to the Internet.

"Places like the Well and Netcom (another system that Mitnick allegedly cracked) are kind of throwing the house open to anyone on the street and then trying to stop them from stealing the silverware," said John Pettitt, CyberSource's vice president of engineering.

"We changed all our passwords yesterday, on general principle," Pettitt said.

That's no surprise to those who term the Mitnick case a wake-up call for the computer community and call for tighter standards on the Internet.

"This whole sorry mess could have been avoided — and the blame can be laid directly at the door of the government for suppressing strong cryptographic applications," Berkeley consultant Bruce Koball said.

Cryptographic computer programs are based on algorithms that allow users to code and decode messages. Currently, online communications are like post cards — anyone can read anything.

Programs to encode messages are considered munitions under U.S. arms regulations and cannot be exported.

Several companies, including Apple and Microsoft, plan to release easy-to-use cryptography as part of their e-mail systems in the next year. The encryption scheme they're using, RC4, has an OK from the government.

Travel agencies to increase fees

By Rachel Beck
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Jenny Johz was vacationing in the East when she heard that two of the nation's biggest travel agencies, American Express and Carlson Wagonlit Travel, will start charging customers fees.

Like thousands of other travelers, Johz relies on the convenience of travel agencies to purchase airplane tickets.

The move, announced Thursday, follows a decision by seven major U.S. airlines to cap commissions to agents on ticket sales. The airlines will now pay agents up to $25 for one-way domestic tickets and $50 for round-trips, instead of 10 percent commission on each ticket.

"This may be how travel agencies have to deal with commission caps," said James V. Cammisa Jr., publisher of Travel Industry Indicators, a Miami-based travel management newsletter. "But it could alienate customers."

Carlson Wagonlit said it will charge one-time single-ticket buyers a $15 service fee. Regular customers would be exempt under the plan, as would those who book hotel rooms or rent cars when they buy tickets.

Trade deficit hits all-time high, outpaces export gains, experts report

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's deficit in merchandise trade climbed to an all-time high in 1994 as a flood of cars, computers and other foreign imports swamped a record level of U.S. exports. The trade gap with both Japan and China set records.

Nevertheless, the Clinton administration insisted that its aggressive campaign for big trade agreements to lower barriers to American products around the world was bearing fruit as reflected by the record exports.

The Commerce Department reported Friday that the merchandise deficit soared by 25.4 percent last year to $166.29 billion, compared to a 1993 deficit of $132.58 billion.

U.S. goods exports rose 10 percent to a record $502.8 billion. But this improvement was outpaced by a 13.5 percent surge in imports, which also set a record of $669.09 billion.

While a slowing U.S. economy and faster growth overseas had been expected to start lowering the deficit this year, many private economists have begun to express concerns about this forecast in light of the recent economic turmoil in Mexico, America's third biggest export market.

"1994 was a bummer when it came to the trade deficit and the fact that we have just lost much of our export market in Mexico will probably make 1995 worse," said Robert Dederick, an economist at Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

Dederick predicted a 1995 goods deficit of $175 billion.

The worsening trade deficit upset financial markets, pushing down the value of the dollar on currency markets and lowering bond and stock prices as well. The Dow Jones industrial average, after flirting earlier in the week with the 4,000 mark, closed down 33.98 at 3,953.54.

"There is no way our deficit will improve until we get serious about addressing the underlying problems including barriers in Japan and China," said Lawrence Chimerine of the Economic Strategy Institute in Washington.

America's deficit with Japan was up 11 percent to $65.7 billion while the imbalance with China surged by 30 percent to $29.5 billion. Together, those two countries accounted for 57 percent of the total goods deficit.

The deficit in both goods and services for 1994 totaled $108.11 billion for 1994, a 42.8 percent increase from the $75.73 billion imbalance in 1993. A record $58.18 billion surplus in U.S. exports of services such as tourism helped to offset somewhat the huge goods imbalance.

For December, the goods and services deficit shrank to $7.34 billion, lowest level in nine months, but economists said it was likely to widen again in coming months.

The administration sought to emphasize the export performance while blaming much of the worsening of the overall deficit to the fact that the U.S. economy was growing so much faster than those of major trading partners.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor said President Clinton was convinced that his strategy of promoting market-opening trade deals such as the North American Free Trade Agreement and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade was correct.

"Are our policies working? The answer to that is yes," Kantor said, insisting it was crucial to push American exports in Latin America and other fast-growing economies.

"The two countries that we have the biggest trade deficits with are the two most closed markets in the world," he said, referring to Japan and China.

But opponents noted that America's once huge surplus with Mexico continued to shrink last year, the first full year that NAFTA began lowering trade barriers with Mexico. The U.S. surplus with Mexico, which had hit $5.38 billion in 1992, shrank to $1.34 billion last year.

Sen. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., who opposed NAFTA and GATT, said that the administration's "strategy is one that cripples our country. It means loss of opportunity, jobs and income."

The $166.29 billion merchandise deficit for last year surpassed the old mark for goods on a balance-of-payments basis of $159.6 billion set in 1987.

The combined deficit of $108.11 billion in merchandise and services was the largest since a 1988 deficit of $114.8 billion.

The trade figures would have looked even worse except for the fact that oil prices fell in 1994, with the average per-barrel price dropping to $14.22, the lowest level since 1988.

Prosecution shows evidence for first time in Simpson trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ending the day's testimony in powerfully dramatic fashion, the prosecutor in the O.J. Simpson case gave the jury its first look at the physical evidence Friday, gingerly lifting a blue knit cap and a leather glove out of two rumpled shopping bags.

The presentation came shortly after a detective, under cross-examination by the defense, retracted his testimony that Simpson asked no questions when told over the telephone that his ex-wife had been killed.

Detective Ronald Phillips — confronted by defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. with his own police report — acknowledged that Simpson asked, "What do you mean she's been killed?" during the conversation early on the morning the bodies were found.

The knit cap and the glove that were found at the crime scene were introduced with dramatic flair by prosecutor Marcia Clark.

First, a box was delivered to her table. Then, the judge gave her a pocketknife to break its seal. After a number of defense objections, Clark, wearing plastic gloves, extracted two heavily creased brown paper bags from the box, removed a dark leather glove from one and laid it in front of the witness.

"It appears to be the glove that I observed at the foot of Mr. Goldman," said Detective Tom Lange, referring to Ronald Goldman, who was slain alongside Nicole Brown Simpson.

Clark then pulled the blue cap from its wrapping.

"That also appears to be the blue knit stocking cap that I observed near the glove," Lange said.

When the cap was revealed, Simpson turned to attorney Robert Shapiro and appeared to say, "That looks too small for me."

Without further testimony, jurors were sent back to their hotel to contemplate the evidence over the three-day holiday weekend.

The presentation rivaled other dramatic moments of the case, including the day a judge brandished the "mystery envelope," and the powerful testimony of Ms. Simpson's sister Denise Brown two weeks ago.

The moment marked the first time the public has seen anything other than photos of the glove and cap.

The evidence is considered critical for the prosecution, which said fibers like those from Simpson's Bronco carpeting were found on the cap along with hairs like Simpson's. The glove is alleged to be the mate of one found at Simpson's estate.

During Phillips' cross-examination, Cochran appeared intent on defusing the impact of Thursday's testimony, in which prosecutors tried to leave the jury with the impression that Simpson didn't ask questions about his ex-wife's death because he already knew the answers.

On Thursday, Phillips testified that Simpson "got very upset" upon being told over the phone that his ex-wife had been killed but didn't ask when, where or how.

But on Friday, Cochran quoted from a police report Phillips said he probably filed the day after the phone conversation.

Many Americans change habits, sex survey says

ATLANTA (AP) — Nearly one-third of Americans say they have changed their sex lives to avoid AIDS, including using condoms more and sleeping around less. Some, according to the survey, have given up sex entirely.

Even those at extremely low risk of getting the disease are being more careful, though the researchers found that people with the greatest chance of AIDS are doing the most to protect themselves.

"People respond to the idea that sex is potentially a life or death decision," said Joel A. Feinleib of the University of Chicago.

The findings on sex in the age of AIDS are based on newly analyzed data from the National Health and Social Life Survey, the largest random survey ever conducted of American sexuality.

The study, much of which was published in a book last year, was based on 90-minute interviews with 3,434 Americans about their most private acts and desires. The group surveyed ranged in age from 18 to 59.

The latest data were released Friday at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

One criticism of the study is the difficulty of being sure people are telling the truth. This may be especially important in judging their response to AIDS, since almost everyone knows what answers are considered socially acceptable.

In the survey, 30 percent of U.S. adults said they had changed their behavior in some way as a result of AIDS, and 3 percent of adults are avoiding sex completely because of AIDS.

Biography details crossing racial barriers

By Rodd Aubrey
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Gregory Williams was 10 when he found out he was black — and that it would matter.

"In Virginia, you were a white boy, in Indiana you're going to be a colored boy," the youngster was told by his father, a light-complexioned black man, on a bus ride to Muncie, Ind. "You're not any different today than you were yesterday, but you'll be treated differently in Indiana."

Williams, whose mother was white, had no clue of his father's racial background. He learned of his mixed-race heritage only after his parents' marriage ended and his father, Tony, was forced to return to the housing projects on the black side of his hometown of Muncie.

"I didn't believe him really, but he was pretty earnest about it so I began to believe him," Williams, 51, said in a recent phone interview. "There wasn't any choice about whether I was going to be white. I clearly was not going to be white."

The tale of how Williams, now dean of Ohio State University's law school, crossed the color line is recounted in an autobiography published this week, "Life on the Color Line: The True Story of a White Boy Who Discovered He Was Black."

Growing up near Alexandria, Va., in the early 1950s, Williams lived in the white part of town and went to an all-white school. Like his father, he had a light complexion and straight, dark hair. His father's slightly darker skin tone was attributed to Italian ancestry.

Williams' troubles began as a youngster. His alcoholic father abused his mother, who later left with a younger brother and sister.

After the family's business collapsed, Williams, his penniless father and younger brother Mike were forced to move to Muncie to live with his father's family.

It was on that trip that his father leaned across the aisle of the Greyhound bus and explained to the boy for the first time his racial heritage.

Shortly after arriving in Muncie, their father disappeared and the boys were shuttled from one relative to another.

Their white grandmother, who lived 10 minutes away, didn't visit for about a year-and-a-half. When she did, the children begged to get their mother's address.

"Don't tell me what to do," the grandmother said. "I don't carry messages for niggers." She never gave them the address.

Enter Dora Terry, widow of a small-time gambler and a friend of the newfound relatives. The black housekeeper took them in, stretching her $25 weekly salary.

But Williams had to fight for acceptance elsewhere.

Black children rejected him, then accepted him on the playground — after many fights. He successfully fought to keep his position as junior high school quarterback when the coach discovered he was black.

From populism to prestige

Gary Sinise was nominated for Best Supporting Actor for his portrayal of an Army Sgt. in "Forrest Gump."

By Bob Strauss
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Mama Gump never told Forrest that it pays to be popular, but that's something any fool can figure out for himself.

Voting members of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, however, may not have worked the whole thing out yet. If the nominees for the 67th annual Academy Awards released Tuesday are any indication, tastes within the professional peer group are suspended between a new kind of populism and a more traditional preference for conventionally prestigious projects.

On the one hand, "Forrest Gump" consolidated the momentum that's driving it toward becoming the highest-grossing Best Picture in history. Far ahead of the rest of the Oscar field with 13 nominations, the fifth-biggest box-office smash of all time seems as impossible for the competition to catch as its fleet-footed, slow-witted title character.

"Gump's" nearest chasers — "Bullets Over Broadway," "Pulp Fiction" and "The Shawshank Redemption" — each have seven nominations. But of those, only the most popular, "Pulp," is up against "Gump" in three of the top four categories (Best Picture, Actor and Director). Though not in "Gump's" ticket-selling league, "Pulp" is the ultimate art movie success — and one that drew large audiences through a canny combination of creative excellence and the kind of gratuitous vulgarity, perversity and violence that has long kept commercial pictures out of Oscar competition.

The better-behaved "Four Weddings and a Funeral" was the bridge Best Picture pick — a respectable hit that also slaked the academy's long-standing thirsts for things romantic and British.

However, the category's other entries, "Quiz Show" and "Shawshank," are the epitome of serious-minded, socially concerned period cinema, virtual catnip to the academy's traditionalist wing. And they both are being re-released in the wake of the nominations announcement, since they failed to find substantial audiences the first time around.

A nice balance, all things considered. At least the academy limited its pop movie picks to stuff worth talking about ("Lion King," an even bigger hit than "Gump," was rightfully relegated to the music categories) and avoided the more pretentious fringe of pseudo-serious filmmaking ("Legends of the Fall" is competing mostly for pretty pic-

It's always Marcia! Marcia! Marcia!

■ With superb casting and a surreal, otherworldly quality, "The Brady Bunch Movie" is not all bad, believe it or not.

By Bob Strauss
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — We expected geeky from "The Brady Bunch Movie." We expected sarcastic, too, once word got out that the plot was going to be about the obliviously wholesome TV family of the '70s dealing with the nasty realities of the '90s without a single change in their worldviews or wardrobes.

But what wasn't expected is the surreal effect of watching a garishly lit, zoom-shot-in-a-room look of a witless sitcom blown up to big-screen proportions. Many scenes, especially when the Bradys are just being Bradys in their split-level suburban home or AstroTurf-covered yard, feel as disorienting as outtakes from a David Lynch picture. If nothing else, "The Brady Bunch Movie" uncovers a truly cinematic weirdness at the heart of disposable TV entertainment.

It's also got a half-hour's worth of genuine amusement packed in (which, not uncoincidentally, is about as much as most people could take of a typical "Brady" episode). The film's one-joke premise, of course, can't supply 90 minutes' worth of laughs, and the contemporary portion of the story is as lamely imagined as any TV-spinoff comedy. But the otherworldly quality of Brady life, coupled with spookily superb casting, puts more of it across than could be reasonably hoped for.

The nonplot involves the efforts of the Bunch's smarmy neighbor Dittmeyer (who else but Michael McKean) to get the Bradys to sell their beloved homestead. Seems everyone else on the block is eager to turn their property over to a minimall developer, but the deal's no good without Brady participation.

Crisis hits when Carol and Mike (Shelley Long and Gary Cole) receive a $20,000 property-tax bill. If it isn't paid in a ridiculously short period of time, the county will auction off the Brady estate.

Any concerted effort to raise the cash is naturally impeded by the Brady children's more pressing problems, most of which are adapted from episodes of the sitcom. Oldest girl Marcia (Christine Taylor, a dead ringer for TV's Maureen McCormick) naturally has to deal with too many dates on the same night; thank heaven she's incapable of realizing that her best friend, Noreen, is a lesbian with a crush on her.

Meanwhile, neglected middle sister Jan (Jennifer Elise Cox) doesn't want to wear her glasses and the voices in her head — most of which complain about Marcia getting all the attention — are reaching an "Exorcist"-level pitch. None of this is enough to interest the school guidance counselor, played by

Field of 'Means'

By Frazier Moore
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Sally Field? At age 18, she became Gidget, that quintessential 1960s California girl.

No one much watched this little surf-side sitcom during its single season. Yet "Gidget" still made waves. It launched a star and planted a legend. You've been watching Sally Field ever since.

This is worth belaboring as the actress who started out a beach bunny, then played an airborne nun, presents herself three decades later in a complex role that lets viewers accompany her, stage by stage, through a colorfully unfolding life — just as they have followed Field herself thus far in her remarkable career. (Her most recent theatrical films are the box office smashes "Mrs. Doubtfire" and "Forrest Gump.")

In "A Woman of Independent Means" the audience will first encounter Bess Steed Garner in her teens. By the end of this six-hour NBC miniseries, Sally

'Power Rangers' so bad it's not even campy

What do Theodore Giesel, Haim Saban and Suki Levy have in common?

All three are responsible for creating wildly popular children's stories.

Patterson

One of them is good at it. Two of them are not.

Mr. Giesel, more commonly known to the masses as Dr. Seuss, is a children's storyteller without equal. Book-hunters recently unearthed Dr. Seuss' long-lost final work "Daisie-Head Mayzie," which is now in television form and playing in heavy rotation on TNT. "Daisie- Head" teaches the simple lesson that it is better to judge a person by his or her inner qualities rather than outward appearances. Daisie, you see, is suddenly stricken with the not-so-common malady of having a daisy growing from the top of her head. She is laughed at, pointed at and talked about by all her unkind friends until she is made a star by Hollywood moguls looking for someone different. The flower on top of Daisie's head dies as quickly as it sprouted and she once again is quickly transformed back into a regular gal.

The message is clear and the television program has all the endearing qualities and rhythmic storytelling all-good Seuss contains. It is a must-see and must-read.

Now, about Saban and Levy, two television producers who for some reason have readily agreed to have their names attached to the hideous "Mighty Morphin Power Rangers."

A reader phoned a few weeks ago, saying I should watch "Mighty Morphin Power Rangers," the program that has become phenomenally successful for reasons inexplicable. The Power Rangers have received reviews that have been quite unkind; the main dispute being the program's violent content.

Frankly, I found "Power Rangers" to be no more violent than any program available today or 20 years ago, for that matter, which doesn't make it OK. You see kids everywhere kicking other kids on the playground, the result of being Morphin-ized, or whatever they call it. But kids will be kids and they'll kick each other and play good guy-bad guy on playgrounds across the country whether we have Power Rangers or not.

I was lucky enough (I guess that's the phrase) to catch a multi-part episode of "Power Rangers" earlier this week in which longtime enemies Rita Repulsa and the evil Lord Zedd (Rita's boss) decide to marry. Their nuptials occur despite the fact that Mr. Zedd banished Rita into deep space in a Dumpster after she failed to complete her assignment, which was to destroy the Power Rangers.

The words "kill," "die" and "destroy" are used quite often during a half-hour "Power Rangers" episode. Not good words, but words that were also used in respectable children's classics like "The Wizard of Oz," "Aladdin" and "The Lion King."

The good news is that "Power Rangers" is not excessively violent when comparing it to other shows. The bad news is that the program has become so popular it is responsible for copycat shows like "Superhuman

Virtual unreality: Ted Danson, Frasier Crane meet again

By John Carman
N.Y. Times News Service

In the television dimension, a dimension as vast as space and as timeless as infinity, funny things can happen to Dr. Frasier Crane.

Odd, unnatural things — like running into Sam Malone in sweeps month.

Ted Danson's guest shot on "Frasier" Tuesday has that disorienting, alternative-reality air to it.

It was one thing for Frasier (Kelsey Grammer) to run into his "Cheers"-era wife, Lilith (Bebe Neuwirth) on the show last year. But this is weirder.

The Frasier Crane of "Frasier" is not the Frasier Crane of "Cheers" because "Frasier" is not quite a linear extension of "Cheers." These spheres shouldn't collide.

Like the old Frasier, the new Frasier is a humbug in search of an accident. But the new Frasier drinks vintage wine, not tap beer, and probably always has. This Frasier Crane shouldn't know Sam Malone. Not now, not ever.

Can you imagine Norm and Cliff turning up in Seattle to see Frasier? Norm and Cliff meeting Niles? All of them going out to pound some Bud together, with the dog in tow?

Part of the strangeness is that not even Danson seems connected to Sam Malone anymore. He comes across as sallow, subdued and ill at ease.

But anything can happen on TV. Last week, Carl Reiner was on "Mad About You," as Alan Brady — the Alan Brady of "The Dick Van Dyke Show," 30 years ago.

An NBC publicist explained it: "In their world (the 'Mad About You' world of Paul and Jamie Buchman), 'The Alan Brady Show' was real, and not part of 'The Dick Van Dyke Show.'"

Got that? Maybe Alan Brady had a head writer named Rob Petrie, but Rob Petrie didn't have his own show because he worked for "The Alan Brady Show," and it's anyone's guess whether Mary Tyler Moore was the Petrie dish on either show.

Luckily, "Lou Grant" got off the air before Minneapolis news anchor Ted Baxter could pay a visit to his ol' Minneapolis buddy, the city editor of the Los Angeles Tribune.

Even more luckily, Laurence Harvey died before his trained killer from "The Manchurian Candidate" could pop in on his mom, Jessica Fletcher of "Murder, She Wrote." But then, Harvey isn't really dead, he's just inhabiting a parallel universe.

At least Frasier Crane and Sam Malone shared a nonexistent past life.

Tuesday's show finds Sam leapless in Seattle. He meant to take the marriage leap, back in Boston, but freaked out at the altar and flew west, possibly leaving his bride to Dustin Hoffman.

A whole 'Bunch' of cool nostalgia

By Bob Strauss
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — "The Brady Bunch Movie" is as ironic as it is nostalgic. According to some of the talent involved, that was the only way they could see doing it.

"The trick is to have a point of view about it, not just extend the characters as they originally existed," said Betty Thomas, the Emmy-winning actress ("Hill Street Blues") and director ("Dream On") who makes her big-screen directing debut with "The Brady Bunch Movie." "What saved the movie was the idea to put them into the '90s."

Packed in bright polyester, as innocent as they were oblivious to the turmoil of the Nixon administration years that paralleled the show's original network run, the Bradys were an unbelievably wholesome clan even 25 years ago. In the movie, the smile-prone mixed family — widow Carol ("Cheers" heroine Shelley Long), her very lovely girls Marcia (Christine Taylor), Jan (Jennifer Elise Cox) and Cindy (Olivia Hack), widower Mike (Gary Cole of TV's "Midnight Caller"), his three boys, Greg (Christopher Daniel Barnes), Peter (Paul Sutera) and Bobby (Jesse Lee) and their referee and housekeeper Alice (Henriette Mantel) — seems even more cheerfully out of place confronting such contemporary terrors as grunge rock, safe sex and the specter of homelessness.

Cast members of "The Brady Bunch Movie" as well as the set itself, bear an amazing resemblance to the originals from the 1970s sitcom.

While good, campy, sometimes wicked fun, "The Brady Bunch Movie" nonetheless had to negotiate a tonal tightrope that more straightforward movie versions of old TV shows like "The Addams Family," "The Beverly Hillbillies" and "Star Trek" did not. After all, the 1970s sitcom is as beloved for its reassuring warmth as for its unadulterated geekiness.

"The script depended on walking down a line that wasn't way overboard and, yet, had to have some kind of bite and edge to it," said Cole, who admitted that he was a teen-ager on the way out of the house when "The Brady Bunch" first was appearing in its Friday night time slot. "You couldn't drive a spear through the thing's heart."

Cole acknowledges that, as laughable as some viewers found the Bradys, many others took them deeply to heart. The latter was especially true for succeeding generations of young viewers, who were fed the original show in constant reruns and numerous later incarnations that included a cartoon version, abortive series updates ("The Brady Brides" and the bafflingly dramatic "The Bradys") and well-received specials ("A Very Brady Christmas").

"It's tricky because we're playing icons," said Cox, an actress in her early 20s who got the old Eve Plumb role of resentful middle sister Jan in the movie. "You have to be so careful because there are people who take the Bradys very seriously. I think in America, with TV, people our age and older watch a lot and they think that these characters are real, in a way."

Premiering a month after the Woodstock festival and signing off the network a few weeks behind President Nixon's resignation, all of the series' attempts to be hip and with it were hopeless and out of it. Yet the unflappably happy family headed by Florence Henderson and the late Robert Reed became a reassuring ideal for the 1980s and '90s' growing legion of underparented kids.

"I really liked it because they were almost like a fantasy family," Cox said. "It wasn't really real, but here was this family that worked everything out and didn't have any problems. I mean, Jan had what seemed like major problems to her, with her sister and all of this sibling rivalry. But there was nothing that Dad couldn't give advice for and get wrapped up in a 30-minute episode. It was very comforting."

Taylor, whose astounding resemblance to Maureen McCormick has led to both stage ("The Real Live Brady Bunch") and now movie incarnations of the family's teen princess Marcia, explained why she, too, grew up Brady.

"Marcia was the character who I loved on the show, so I was always flattered when people told me I looked like her," Taylor said. "She was just so pretty, and by the time I got to high school, I was going through a lot of the same stuff she was going through. The whole you-feel-like-it's-the-end-of-the-world-if-this-guy-isn't-going-to-a sk-you-out deal; that really was the end of the world. Life was just in such a different place then.

"Marcia went through all of it, though completely in her own state of oblivion — and obviously unaware that Jan really had problems with her."

FIELD: Actress returns to TV after decade

(From 1B)

Field will carry the audience deep into Bess' old age. "Woman" airs Sunday, Monday and Wednesday, from 8 to 10 p.m. CST each night.

The film, which brings the two-time Oscar winner back to television after more than a decade, is based on the 1978 novel by Elizabeth Forsythe Hailey. Related totally through Bess' letters, the book tracks the life of a plucky, loving, irascible, needy and unsinkable woman, from the turn of the century all the way into the '60s.

This "Woman" costars Charles Durning, Brenda Fricker, Tony Goldwyn, Ron Silver, Jack Thomas and Sheila McCarthy. But it is Sally Field's show all the way.

It's also the hardest thing she's ever done, she says. A breakneck 60-day shooting schedule, the sweltering Texas locations, her 170-odd costume changes, those are some of the reasons she cites.

But now, as she sits in sweater and slacks in her hotel suite, her sock feet folded under her, Field fondly recalls the aging process she underwent during the production — and particularly her character's odyssey beyond the 48 years Field has traveled for herself.

"I found that, playing the unknown of old age, your imagination can allow you to experience something that you can't really return to in portraying the youth you've already known," Field says. "The older Bess got, the more of a kick I got out of it.

"In the meantime, I sort of lost my own age. I didn't feel any particular affinity or connection to any age as being mine. My own age began to be sort of fuzzy."

Likewise incidental for Field is her own identity when she steps into a given role.

"For me, acting is never about Ego Gratification For Sally," she explains. "It has all to do with creating a character that is right for the piece, whether she's Guinevere or the Hunchback of Notre Dame.

"I don't know how to be the leading-lady type," Field admits, tugging her ponytail skyward in thought, "and part of me has felt hampered by that. That part of me thinks, 'If I were more of a glamorous sort of movie star, had a sexier quality about me, I would be better.'

"But I don't know how to be that way." On the contrary: "I'm not afraid if I have to look like dogdoo."

At that she smiles her crooked smile, still girlish yet informed by earned maturity.

"I'm more afraid if I have to look good," she says. "THAT'S scary."

What doesn't scare her so much is staying alive in show business. After all, how scary could it be for someone who, so early on, survived "Gidget" and "The Flying Nun"?

"I guess because my struggle started so young, I expect it," says Field.

"I feel accomplished, which I didn't use to feel," she allows, "but I don't ever feel confident about anything. I never have. Even the times that seemed like they should have been the easy times were still a struggle for me.

"It's always a struggle, but I feel there are many more hills to climb. It's my responsibility to scramble."

BRADY: Film's focus is on younger kids of the bunch

(From 1B)

RuPaul, however, who only wants to hear about real pathology, abuse and dysfunction.

And so it goes. Self-styled rock god Greg Brady (Christopher Daniel Barnes) has trouble picking up '90s grrrls with "groovy chick" come-on lines. Cindy, the youngest one in curls (Olivia Hack), is told to "get back on the Swiss Miss package you escaped from" by adults driven mad trying to decipher her lisp. With frightening inevitability, the kids do a big production number in which the word "sunshine" is used a lot.

The film's focus remains on the younger Bradys, except when Mike is delivering one of his axiom-packed life lessons (Carol's duties consist almost entirely of saying, "Your father's right"). Loyal family housekeeper Alice (Henriette Mantel) is even less visible; loyal family dog Tiger completely absent. Some, but not all, of the original TV cast members make cameo appearances.

Good TV-maker Betty Thomas ("My Breast," episodes of "Dream On" and "Hooperman") directs her first feature with "The Brady Bunch Movie,' Second City comedy troupe filters into each of the movie's smart-aleck situations. It all makes you chuckle for a while, but after it becomes clear that we're supposed to like the Bradys as much as laugh at them, you start wishing for an even nastier — or at least more sharply written — edge.

Yes, shots of Mike reading "Jonathan Livingston Seagull" in bed are worth a titter. But in a film as conceptually and even formally bizarre as "The Brady Bunch Movie," closer encounters with stuff along the lines of "American Psycho" would have been better bets.

PATTERSON: Program low, low budget

(From 1B)

Samurai Syber Squad," and, my favorite, "Tattooed Teen-Age Alien Fighters From Beverly Hills."

While "Power Rangers" is your basic attempt at a '90s version of good-vs.-evil, what it also is, is third-rate, low-budget, uninspired garbage that is so bad it can't even qualify as campy. "The Brady Bunch" and "The Addams Family" were campy. "Power Rangers" is, at best, amateurish storytelling and characters who wear costumes so cheap looking they're not even befitting of a garage sale.

The storylines and dialogue are so remarkably weak and uninventive they defy description.

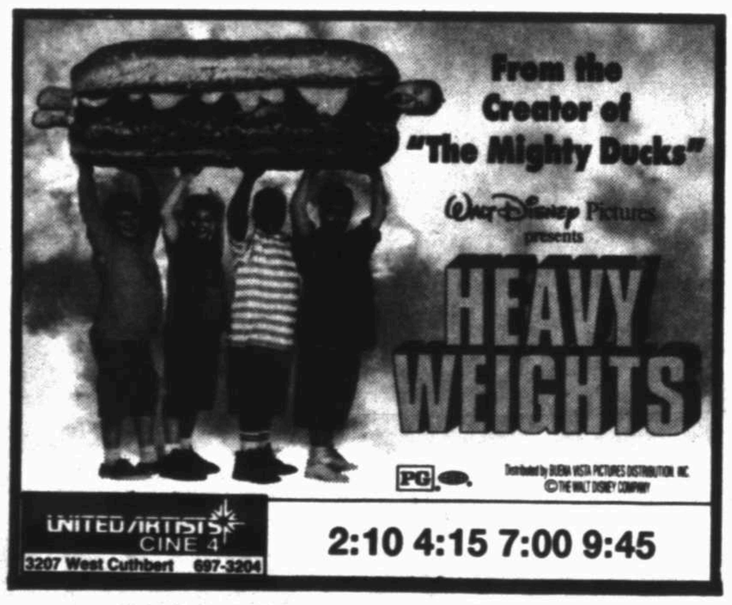

In Monday's episode -- no joke -- one of the female Power Rangers was wearing a shirt with a stain on it. Now that's low budget when you can't afford to throw a t-shirt in the washing machine before the cameras roll. "Power Rangers" may be children's entertainment at an all-time low.

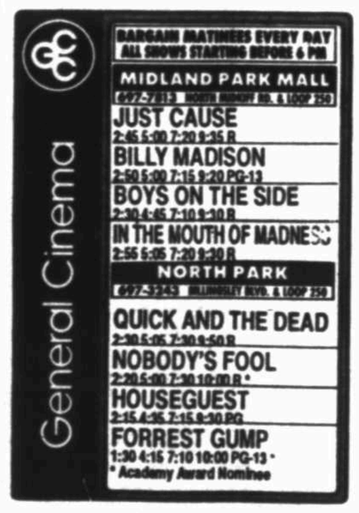

Respected children's writer Lee Wyndham once wrote that "Writing for young people is a great responsibility because their minds are impressionable and what is read (or watched) can affect not only their current lives, but their future lives as well."

The great sin of the "Power Rangers" is not so much its violence, but simply that it is bad entertainment that kids have bought into by the tens of thousands. Give them "Power Rangers" and kids no longer care about quality entertainment that actually forces them to use their minds for 30 minutes.

Nominees get box office curtain call

By Yardena Arar
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Don't be surprised if this weekend's movie ads look like ones from last fall and summer. In what's becoming standard movie marketing procedure, several major Oscar contenders are returning to theaters to take advantage of the hype.

The parade of Academy Award-related reissues begins today with "Quiz Show," opening on 354 screens nationwide; on Friday, "Forrest Gump" reopens on 1,060 screens.

"Bullets Over Broadway," which as of Tuesday was playing in 39 theaters, will widen to 100 screens by the weekend and 300 the weekend after, a Miramax executive said. "Blue Sky," for which Jessica Lange is considered an Oscar front-runner, widens from less than a handful of screens to between 20 and 25 venues this weekend, Orion Pictures reported.

"The Shawshank Redemption," which also had been playing on a few screens, widens to about 500 sites the weekend of Feb. 24, a Castle Rock Entertainment spokesman said.

The proliferation of Oscar reissues reflects the changing face of film marketing and Oscar campaigning. Once held until the fourth quarter, Oscar contenders now surface almost year round; videos are used to refresh the memories of motion picture academy voters.

Several of this year's multiple nominees were financial disappointments that practically had vanished from theaters — "Bullets" has grossed only $9.5 million, "Shawshank" less than $17 million and "Quiz Show" and "Blue Sky" performed equally poorly. For these films, the Oscar reissue is a last chance for box-office glory.

"Shawshank" writer-director Frank Darabont said the film should have had a wider release following its September opening. "Also, I think audiences had this perception of 'Shawshank' as a downer. But the people who saw it loved it.

"I hope now it recoups the investment that Castle Rock put into it. Certainly it's a vindication for them. Talk about redemption, right?"

"Quiz Show" screenwriter Paul Attanasio said the rerelease was "a great opportunity for people to see the film who haven't seen it or to see it again. ... One of the nice things about the Academy Awards is that it is a wonderful platform for these films that did not get so much attention the first time."

More unusual was Paramount Pictures' decision to pull "Forrest Gump" from theaters in mid-January, right after it passed the $300 million mark, in anticipation of an Oscar reissue.

"The thinking was that it was starting to run its course in the regular market, and rather than just have it drift and float, we would take it out of circulation ... and hopefully obtain a better result by taking advantage of the Oscar attention," said Barry London, vice chairman of Paramount Pictures' motion picture group.

Marcy Granata, executive vice president of marketing and publicity for Miramax Films, said the company tries to keep films in theaters during entire seasons rather than several weeks. "Pulp Fiction," for example, has been playing around the country since October and has earned close to $60 million.

OSCARS: Differences noticed in Best Picture

ture honors.

The tension between popular and prestigious is most pronounced in the Best Picture category, but it's also quite apparent in the Best Actor race. "Gump's" Tom Hanks and "Pulp's" John Travolta are running against the arguably more masterful — but definitely less seen — Paul Newman and Morgan Freeman from, respectively, "Nobody's Fool" and "Shawshank." "The Madness of King George's" Nigel Hawthorne satisfies the old-timey lust for Brit/period/politically engaged stuff.

The same pattern plays out on a somewhat smaller scale in the Best Actress competition, with "The Client's" Susan Sarandon and "Little Women's" Winona Ryder riding public acceptance to somewhat unexpected nominations (Sarandon's movie was trash, Ryder was part of an ensemble). Meanwhile, Jodie Foster ("Nell"), Jessica Lange ("Blue Sky") and Miranda Richardson ("Tom & Viv") all failed to sell their old-style, Oscar-friendly performances to a wide audience.

Of course, popular vs. prestigious and pretentious isn't the only dynamic working through this year's nominations. Merit, in some cases, at least was acknowledged — although, in a year almost universally perceived to be among the industry's aesthetically poorest, more of the really good stuff should have been easier to recognize.

But campaign strategy was the key that, say, got Miranda Richardson a nomination for "Viv" but denied the arguably better Jennifer Jason Leigh one for the equally literary "Mrs. Parker and the Vicious Circle."

Samuel L. Jackson's is the primary case study in the rights and wrongs of this year's campaigning. He more than earned his Best Supporting Actor nomination for his scintillating work in "Pulp Fiction." But, Hollywood politics notwithstanding, he deserved the Best Actor slot Travolta got instead.

And, oddly, Martin Landau genuinely deserves the Supporting Actor Oscar for his stupendous impersonation of Bela Lugosi in "Ed Wood" — a film that was the very definition of a box-office bomb, but by no means your traditional academy-pleasing bio flick.

Think about it. If distributor Miramax had promoted Jackson for the Best Actor race, wouldn't he stand a better chance against Newman and Hanks than Travolta does? And than he does now against virtual lock Landau? Just asking.

Whatever Miramax might have bungled with its "Pulp" actor strategy, you've got to admire the studio's ability to get Jennifer Tilly, of all people, nominated alongside her talented "Bullets" co-star Dianne Wiest for Best Supporting Actress. Indeed, Miramax — which dominates the nomination count with 22 in all — has two other actresses in this field, "Pulp's" Uma Thurman and "Tom & Viv's" Rosemary Harris.

They even stopped the "Gump" steamroller, denying presumed shoo-ins Sally Field and Robin Wright their chances. If "King George's" Helen Mirren wins, you can be sure heads will roll.

Of all this year's Miramax campaigns, the "Red" controversy was played most astutely. When Krzysztof Kieslowski's highly praised picture was disqualified from the Foreign Language Film competition because of ridiculous academy rules, the studio guilt-tripped the writers' and directors' branches into bestowing two nominations on the much-deserving filmmaker. ("Red" got a cinematography nod, too; unfortunately, the remarkably shot — and overlooked — "Natural Born Killers" and "Ed Wood" were released by other studios).

Here here. And by the way, for the first time in eons, the competitors finally chosen by the Foreign Language Film committee all seem equivalently worthy. This doesn't mean that the winner will be the year's best non-English picture, but it will put a stop to the recent pattern of stupidest nominee beating four excellent entries.

Some unconscionable academy snubs, however, simply cannot be forgiven, whether they're part of a tradition or not. "Hoop Dreams," the astounding, inner-city basketball documentary that many critics felt was the best film of 1994, didn't even make the Feature Documentary cut. The academy's documentary committee repeatedly has punished pictures that enjoyed theatrical releases over the years, with apparent utter disregard for the films' quality.

When this happened to "Roger & Me" and "The Thin Blue Line," it was a scandal. In the case of "Hoop Dreams," it's more like a crime.

Quality documentaries available on video cassette

The Academy Award nominations are in, and not everyone's jumping for joy. As always, the wisdom of Oscar voters is being questioned, especially by those who enjoy documentaries. A notable omission in the documentary category was the highly acclaimed "Hoop Dreams," which trails two high-school basketball players for 4 1/2 years.

Over the years, many other worthy — and entertaining — documentaries have missed a date with the golden statuette. Others have made the cut. If you like to view this type of film every now and then, your local video store offers a treasure trove of titles.

Some documentaries worth checking out:

■ "Athens, Ga." (1987): A gutsy, amusing portrait of a Georgia town.

■ "Borneo" (1937): Borneo when it was in a more primitive stage, as filmed by the husband-wife explorer team of Osa and Martin Johnson.

■ "Buster Keaton: A Hard Act to Follow" (1987) and "Buster Keaton Rides Again" (1965): This year marks the centenary of movie-making and also Buster Keaton's birth. These are two wonderful studies of the master comic.

■ "Celebrating Bird: The Triumph of Charlie Parker" (1987): A must-see for any jazz lover.

■ "Chuck Berry Hail! Hail! Rock 'n' Roll" (1987): How can you go wrong with Keith Richards, Little Richard, Eric Clapton and the Chuckster? Excellent rock concert movie.

■ "The Civil War" (1990): Ken Burns' celebrated montage.

■ "Cousin Bobby" (1992): Jonathan Demme made this special movie about a cousin who has devoted his life to fighting racism.

■ "The Cry of Reason" (1988): Received an Oscar nomination for its gripping look at apartheid in South Africa and the sacrifice of a white minister.

■ "The Decline of Western Civilization" (1981): Penelope Spheeris' look at the punk scene.

■ "Dinosaur!" (1991): Walter Cronkite narrates this terrific four-tape collection, first shown on cable TV's A&E.

■ "Don't Look Back" (1967): Dylan's 1965 British tour — features Joan Baez.

■ "Herdsmen of the Sun" (1990): Werner Herzog's look at a nomadic tribe of the Sahara.

■ "Jazz on a Summer's Day" (1959): All that and more — features Dinah Washington, Thelonious Monk, Louis Armstong, Anita O'Day.

■ "The Last Waltz" (1978): One of the best concert films ever made: The Band's final appearance.

■ "Man With a Movie Camera" (1927): Considering when this was made, the technology is outstanding.

■ "Mississippi Blues" (1987): The black evangelical movement as seen through the eyes of French filmmaker Bertrand Tavernier.

■ "Monterey Pop" (1969): Jimi, Janis and Country Joe.

■ "The Night and Fog" (1955): Alain Resnais' graphic and painful look at Nazi death camps.

■ "Phantom India" (1968): Everything you ever wanted to know about India, beautifully filmed by Louis Malle.

■ "The Sky Above, the Mud Below" (1961): Exploring New Guinea when it was still uncharted.

■ "The Sorrow and the Pity" (1970): An important work about French collaboration with Nazis during World War II, made by Marcel Ophuls, who later made "Hotel Terminus" about the Nazi SS Captain Klaus Barbie.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Put your thinking cap on. Spotting a trend and providing a special service will make money worries a thing of the past. Those of you who are married should curb even innocent flirting. Otherwise, a serious misunderstanding could arise. Career opportunities will abound next fall. Romance looks happiest during the winter holidays. A change of lifestyle will benefit both your relationship and your health.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor John Travolta, actress Cybill Shepherd, artist Yoko Ono, classical guitar legend Andres Segovia.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Relationships thrive on consideration. Give home, family and neighborhood matters priority now. Your experience and know-how are more valuable than you realize. Real estate ventures enjoy highly favorable influences. You could make a fortune!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Carefully scrutinize plans to redecorate or remodel your home. Get several bids. Do-it-yourself types can save themselves money. A shopping trip will relax you. Welcome an invitation to a potluck dinner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Gather materials for income tax preparation and make an early date with your accountant. A chance meeting could put you on a first-name basis with someone fascinating. Make the first move; issue an invitation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A social event could put you in touch with a former flame. Take stock of a current relationship. Do you know where it is going? A friend helps you launch a second career. Be appreciative.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An older person could steal your heart today. Do not be afraid to show your interest. Welcome the chance to pair off with an intriguing newcomer. A spontaneous invitation will hold special appeal.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Set work concerns aside and have some fun. Spending money on the good life is fine if you can afford to do so. Those who have been widowed should get back into the social swim.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Constant friction within the family circle can be harmful to everyone involved. Compromise is a wiser route to go. Romance could languish if loved one feels taken for granted. Plan some special outings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make up a schedule that will let you get through this busy day with flying colors. Those who do not object to crowds should check out the sales. Only buy what you really need.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Tend to domestic chores first today or you risk coming up with too little too late. Loved one may act stubborn. Be flexible; change tactics when you are not getting the results you want.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The emphasis now is on guarding your personal and joint resources. Although your ideas make sense, you must also make them palatable to others. Point out the many benefits of cooperation. Curb entertainment costs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An unexpected opportunity deserves a closer look. Make certain everything is as represented. Letting others do the talking will hand you a clear advantage. Stress the practical and expedient even in your personal relationships.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Love has you looking at the world through rose-colored glasses. Your affection is returned. Two hearts beat as one! Single parents who are planning to remarry should gradually break the news to their children.

Donald Trump wants rats, nemesis Leona out of Empire State Building

NEW YORK — Donald Trump says he wants two things out of the Empire State Building: rats and his nemesis Leona Helmsley.

Trump filed a lawsuit Wednesday to get rid of the building's operators, Helmsley-Spear Inc., which is owned by Mrs. Helmsley's husband, Harry.

Trump files lawsuit to get rid of building's operators.

Trump, who owns half the 102-story skyscraper and has a long-standing enmity with Mrs. Helmsley, claims the management company has let the landmark deteriorate into "a second-rate, rodent-infested" office tower.

John Scanlon, spokesman for Helmsley-Spear, called the lawsuit frivolous. He said the company has spent $60 million since 1990 on improvements. A hearing was scheduled for March 1.

Mrs. Helmsley, who earned the nickname the "queen of mean" for her tough management approach in her husband's hotel and real estate holdings, spent 18 months in prison for tax evasion.

SEOUL, South Korea — Michael Jackson's been unbanned.

South Korea decides to allow Jackson to perform in capital.

The government reversed its position Friday and decided to allow the singer to perform in the nation's capital.

In 1993 the government banned a Jackson concert on the grounds he would offend Korean customs.

South Korea frowned on foreign pop performers after a teen-ager was crushed to death at a 1992 New Kids on the Block concert, but recently has allowed shows by Boyz II Men and Richard Marx.

Jackson is expected to perform in June.

HOUSTON — Anna Nicole Smith is fighting her stepson over guardianship of her 90-year-old billionaire husband.

The 26-year-old former model and Playboy centerfold was in court Thursday for a hearing in which she won visitation rights to see her husband, J. Howard Marshall.

Smith wins visitation rights to see her husband.

Marshall's son, Pierce, has temporary guardianship of his father, who doctors say is mentally incapacitated.

Last year, Marshall signed over his $550 million estate to his son. The fortune has been put in trust and Smith largely has been cut off from the money.

Smith has complained of her financial woes and insisted she is in love with her husband and has performed her "wife duties."

LOS ANGELES — Soap opera shrink Diedre Hall has settled a real-life dispute involving the family of her late therapist.

The actress sued to regain $800,000 in loans to George Barkouras, who died in 1992.

The jury was waiting to hear final arguments in the trial Thursday when the settlement was reached. Terms of the agreement weren't disclosed.

"I'm pleased in every area," said Hall, 47, who plays the demonically possessed psychiatrist Dr. Marlena Evans on NBC's "Days of Our Lives."

R.B. Kitaj, the American-born painter who makes his home in England, had something else to do this week besides promoting a retrospective of his work that opened at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

Kitaj (pronounced KIT-eye) flew to Washington Friday to sketch his latest portrait subject: President Bill Clinton.

He was commissioned by the University College at Oxford last year to do a portrait of the president, a former Rhodes Scholar. It is to hang in the school's great hall, where portraits of some noted graduates hang.

And how does the artist plan to capture the essence of the nation's chief executive?

He didn't say, according to Geoffrey Parton, a director at Marlborough Fine Art of London.

Sister Bonnie Steinlage blow dries Robert Cummings' hair after giving him a haircut at St. Raphael Social Service Center in Hamilton, Ohio, Jan. 18.

Nun ministers to poor, needy with her haircuts

By Terry Kinney
Associated Press Writer

HAMILTON, Ohio — Sister Bonnie Steinlage spent 22 years as a nursing nun, and all the death and dying began to take its toll.

Her friends, she said, "urged me to do something different. I said, 'When the time comes for me to change careers I will know, and it will be so clear I will have no doubt about it.'"

Lightning struck on Ash Wednesday in 1986 when she heard a verse from Matthew 6:17 at Mass: "When thou fastest anoint thy head and wash thy face."

To start her Lenten observance, she splurged on a $14 cut and perm. Sitting in that cut-rate salon, she knew she had to become a beautician.

She won a scholarship, became a licensed cosmetologist and after a missionary stint in Brazil set up shop at Mary Magdalene House, a shower facility for the poor and homeless in Cincinnati's poorest neighborhood.

She'll always remember her first customer.

"She had this tight, short skirt and she said, 'I do drugs and I'm a prostitute.'" Steinlage recalled. "I said to myself, 'Oh, I'm not used to dealing with people like that.' I thought I had Mary Magdalene herself."

Steinlage still cuts hair there, and at the Drop-Inn Center Shelter and Providence Hospital in Cincinnati, and the St. Raphael Social Service Center in nearby Hamilton.

She has recruited a dozen volunteers, and using donated equipment and beauty products they cut and style hair for about 3,000 needy people a year.

"I believe my place is to go where the poorest of the poor are," Steinlage said. "Many people are afraid to go, but I will."

A member of the Franciscan Sisters of the Poor for 30 years, the 50-year-old Steinlage has become an accomplished beggar of beauty shop supplies.

"I'm living out my name — Bonita Veronica Regina Steinlage," she said.

Steinlage believes the thing most sorely missed by the downtrodden is the feel of a human touch.

"I can hand you a sandwich, I can talk to you and never touch you," she said. "My particular ministry of hair styling gives me permission to touch you.

Scholars turn to DNA for help in piecing scrolls

By Matt Brown
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY — They call them the Dead Sea Scrolls, but a more accurate description of what's left to be deciphered of the ancient manuscripts would be the Dead Sea Fragments.

For decades scholars have been trying to piece together tens of thousands of pieces of animal skins representing an unknown number of scrolls that were part of the cache deposited in the barren hills of the Judean desert.

Now curators of the coveted scrolls, unable to match handwriting and parchment textures from a pile of remaining miscellaneous scraps, have enlisted the latest techniques for identifying DNA.

They hope the relatively fledgling science will help solve the jigsaw puzzle and settle disputes about the origin of the scrolls.

For nearly a year, a team of researchers in Jerusalem has been extracting DNA from tiny scroll fragments to see if the notion of using genetic codes can piece together the manuscripts.

So far work on the genetic makeup of 50 fragments has confirmed the belief the parchments are made from thin sheets of goat or sheep skins.

"We also have a couple of others that are different. They are something else ... related to a goat but not exactly that," said Scott Woodward, a Brigham Young University microbiology professor, speaking by phone from his temporary home in Jerusalem.

Woodward, the DNA expert assigned to the scrolls research team working out of a Hebrew University lab, made headlines last year when he announced the first isolation of DNA from a dinosaur. He is confident his current project will benefit scholars anxious to complete translation of the scrolls.

But scholars, while excited about the prospects of another method of "objective" analysis of the scrolls, say DNA research isn't the final step in deciphering them.

"The DNA search is just one piece of a large puzzle that can eventually tell us about the world" at the time the scrolls were written, said Hershel Shanks, editor of the Biblical Archaeological Review in Washington, D.C.

Discovered in the caves at Qumran near the Dead Sea, the scrolls have been dated to between 150 B.C. and 50 A.D. As the only religious texts known to exist that were produced during the time of Jesus, their contents are of extraordinary interest to scholars seeking to understand the origins of Christianity and its relationship to Jewish beliefs.

Some 800 scrolls from the more intact portions have been identified, but thousands of fragments from "Cave 4" have vexed the select number of scholars allowed to examine them.

"We should just be grateful for any information because it is really difficult to try and piece these texts together. We could be creating documents that never existed," said James VanderKam, professor of Hebrew scriptures at Notre Dame University and a member of the editorial team appointed to officially publish the manuscripts.

That's the contention of scholars who claim some manuscripts cobbled together by handwriting and parchment analysis are fragments from several different sources.

Another dispute the DNA findings could settle is where the scrolls originated. Some believe they were the writings of a Jewish sect called the Essenes, who were secluded in the Dead Sea region. Others hold that the texts were compiled in Jerusalem and represent literature from a variety of locations throughout ancient Palestine.

Pigskin Classic

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Boston College and Ohio State have been selected to play in the Kickoff Classic after Penn State withdrew from consideration because a suitable opponent couldn't be found, sources close to the game told The Associated Press Friday.

Penn State, which finished second to Nebraska last season despite going undefeated, reportedly was ready to play in college football's traditional season opener, but coach Joe Paterno wanted a game with either Miami or Notre Dame.

Those schools weren't interested and Paterno was not willing to play either Florida or Auburn, both of which wanted to meet the Nittany Lions, sources said.

The Southeastern Conference, of which Florida and Auburn are members, has a conference agreement not to play in a preseason bowl, but the schools were ready to petition for an exemption for the Aug. 27 game, sources said.

Lady 'Dogs roll on; Lady Rebs fall

By Amy Wolfenbarger

ALPINE - The Midland High girls took advantage of a rarely used offensive strategy to come away with a 72-53 Class 5A area basketball win over El Paso Bel Air here Friday night at the Sul Ross gym.

The Lady Dawgs, who rarely shoot from the three-point line, got five crucial treys from guards Ogonna Merritt and LaKendria Hendrick during the second and third quarters to recover from a first-quarter deficit and put the game out of reach.

Midland High improved to 26-3 and will return to Alpine on Tuesday to play El Paso Hanks in regional quarterfinal action for the right to advance to the Region I tournament next weekend in Midland. The game is set for ó p.m. at the Sul Ross gym.

Alcala

Hanks defeated Midland Lee in the second game of the playoff doubleheader, spoiling a chance for MHS and the Lady Rebels to meet for the fourth time this season. Bel Air ended its season at 19-7.

MHS coach Jim Raughton said that although the Lady Dawgs don't shoot the three with much frequency, they are certainly capable of making it.

ALPINE - Perhaps it just wasn't meant to be.

After watching Midland High beat El Paso Bel Air in the first of a playoff doubleheader at Sul Ross State University here Friday, Midland Lee could not find the bucket as they shot 20-66 from the field (30 percent) and fell 51-46 to El Paso Hanks in Class 5A area girls basketball action.

A win by Lee, which ended its season with an 18-11 record after claiming a bi-district championship, would have set up a showdown with Midland High at Chaparral Center on Tuesday night.

Instead, it's the Hanks Lady Knights, who improved their record to 24-6 in winning their first area-round game in five years, who will advance to face the Lady Dawgs. The regional quarterfinal match up will take place in the same site as Friday's games.

Rhoads

Lee coach Elise Kail, despite the loss, was still impressed with the turnaround the Lady Rebels made in just one short year. Lee finished fifth in District 4-5A play last year with a 4-8 record but rebounded for a third-place 8-4 record and won a playoff game against Lubbock Coronado.

"They had a great season," Kail said.

Rebs stymie 'Cats, move in playoffs

ABILENE - Midland Lee put a stop to San Angelo Central's gaudy climb to District 4-5A glory here Friday night with a 75-65 victory over the Bobcats to clinch the Rebels' third consecutive basketball state playoff berth.

Hicks

The Bobcats had pulled off a major upset over Midland High just last Tuesday to tle Lee for thlrd place in the 4-5A race. Friday's game here at McMurry University was to break that tie and see which of the two teams, tied at 7-5 in the league race, would be playoff bound.

Lee answered that call, and Lee coach Jon House contributed the win to previous playoff experience.

"We look at the season in three parts. There is non-conference, the district season and the playoffs," House said. "We look at this as the playoffs, because if you lose, you're out. I think our playoff experience came through. We've got some kids who have been through this."

Lee returns to the playoffs Tuesday when they will face Lubbock High at 7:30 p.m. in Seminole. Lee went to the state region quarterfinals a year ago as a third place team. They will have that chance again.

Some thought that Lee would enter this game on a down note since they had to watch their lead over San Angelo disappear with the upset over MHS on Tuesday.

"Actually, with San Angelo beating Midland High, that just us more spark to beat them," said Lee's Mark Holly, who came out to the "new season" with a 14-point night. "We really wanted in the playoffs and help to get a little tradition going at Lee. We didn't want to be the team to stop the playoff string."

Stanton rally not enough

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Stanton's girls will miss this year's Class 2A Region I final. But last night they got a pretty good idea of what that game might be like anyway.

Ozona held off a strong third-quarter rally by the Lady Buffaloes to take the bi-district playoff 48-43 at the Odessa Sports Complex in front of about 1,400 fans. The Lady Lions (29-2) looked like a team that can make it to the region championship.

"It's a shame that we had to play these people first," Stanton coach Frank Riney said. "This looked like a good region final game here."

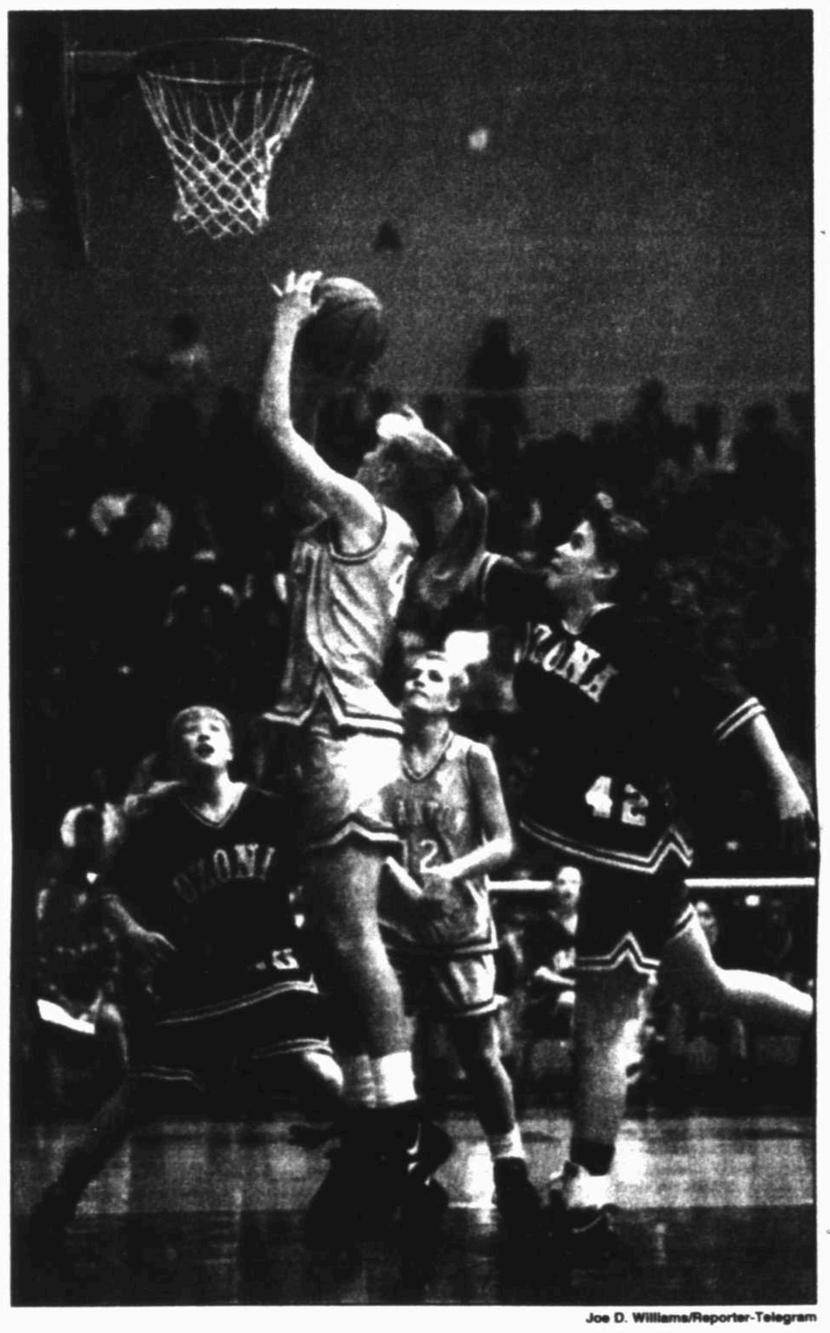

Stanton's senior class of four Lady Buffaloes that have started since they were sophomores and made the playoffs three times will graduate never having passed the area round. But the way the team played against the No. 4 Lady Lions Friday, they appeared capable of going a lot further than the first round if they had faced a squad other than Ozona's.

The Lady Buffaloes rallied from a ten-point halftime deficit to come within one-point of Ozona at 43-42. But the they couldn't get the shot needed in the final minutes to take their first lead since the game's first basket. Down 46-43, Laura Herm missed a 3-pointer with 38 seconds left and then double dribbled with 13 seconds to go.

"I told my team at the beginning of the fourth quarter that we had withstood the best rally they had in them and they couldn't continue to shoot three's like they did," Ozona coach Dickie Faught said.

Stanton ((19-10) had several possessions in the final minute down by three and took 3-pointers each time.

Lady Red Devils hang on to beat Ira by one, 66-65

GREENWOOD — If you don't think the Class 1A schools take their playoffs seriously, think again.

"I'm getting too old," Rankin head coach Jeff Bearden said following his team's 66-65 victory over Ira in a bi-district playoff game Friday night at Greenwood High School. "I think they gave me a few more gray hairs."

On the other side not much was said. The tears just flowed down the faces of the Ira players after their fight came up just a bit short.

"I'm proud of the girls and their effort," Ira head coach Ted Mebane said. "The girls realized it would be a tougher game than what they thought. It was going to be a good ball game from the word go."

He couldn't have been more right, but it was the last few minutes that had all the fans at Greenwood on the edge of their seats.

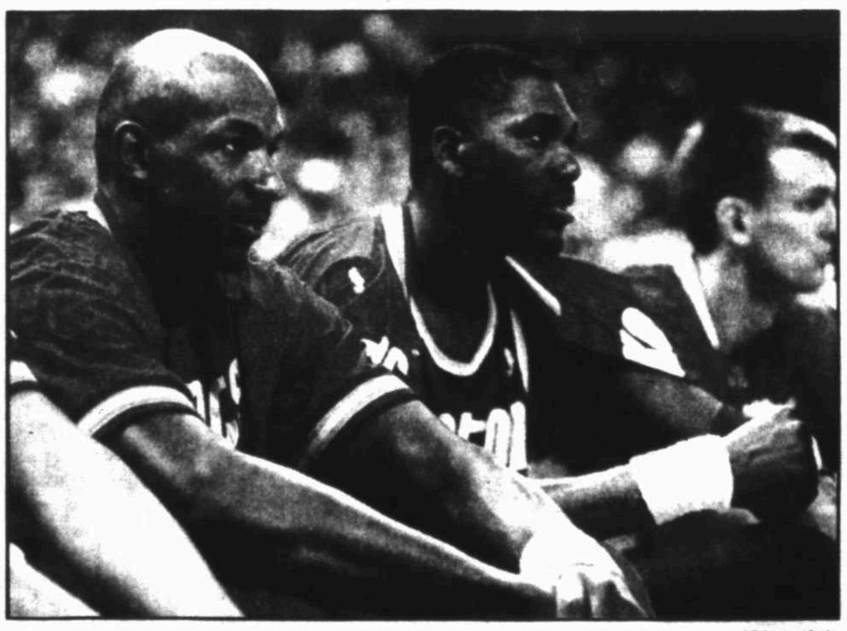

Having held off the charging Bulldogs for most of the fourth quarter and most of the half, the Lady Red Devils opened the lead to nine (52-43) with seven minutes to go on the fourth-straight basket by Kelly King. The Ira team, beat up and without one of their leading scorers — Jennifer Northcott, who fouled out in the third quarter — came back. Forcing turnover after turnover (nine in the last seven minutes), they cut the lead to two (52-50) on two Jody Rankin free-throws with three minutes to go in the half. The comeback is more incredible when you consider that Ira hit only one field goal in the first four minutes of the half.

Despite being so close to the lead that they could actually taste it, Rankin's King and Heather Hard, who led the team with 20 points, kept the Lady Bulldogs away matching Ira buckets with scores of their own.

"We were on the edge at first," King said. "We came on, I got my confidence back and the offense put points on the board."

With 2:00 to go and Rankin leading by six, Ira's Melissa Brausel hit the game's only three pointer, but like the rest of the night Rankin had an answer. This time the answer was post Ana Guadarrama, who continued

Clyde Drexler (right) and Hakeem Olajuwon (right) reunite to try and bring championship back to Houston.

Drexler hungers for elusive title

By Tom Foreman Jr.
AP Sports Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Together, they came close to a title at the University of Houston. Apart, Clyde Drexler has been longing for the crown awarded Hakeem Olajuwon.

They were finally reunited in Charlotte as members of the defending NBA champion Houston Rockets, bringing to life a dream that Drexler had nearly abandoned.

"Last year at the All-Star game, we said it probably wouldn't happen," Drexler said after the Rockets marked his official arrival with a 105-89 beating of the Charlotte Hornets. "We'd been there many times and we'd always have dinner with our families and we'd just always visit. We gave up on it last year. And then it happens. Wouldn't you know it?"

Drexler was traded from the Portland Trail Blazers to the Rockets last Tuesday for Otis Thorpe and a conditional draft pick. But a delay in the completion of Otis Thorpe's physical examination kept Drexler on the bench for the first 24 minutes against the Hornets.

■ NBA Roundup/6C

When he came out of the locker room, he returned to a smattering of applause and a one-point deficit. Drexler sat down for good midway through the fourth quarter, having sparked the Rockets to a 41-point third quarter and a huge lead the Hornets hardly dented.

It was the first step on a path that Drexler hopes will lead to a title.

"I'm hungry," Drexler said.

Drexler doesn't point fingers at anyone for Portland's loss to Chicago three years ago in the NBA Finals, nor does he spread blame for other playoff losses. It was just a matter of the Bulls and the other teams being a little closer than the Trail Blazers.

"When you look at that team, we still

Rangers win practice game

GREENWOOD — Greenwood's Ranger won't find out who they play in the first round of the Class 3A playoffs until as late as Tuesday, but the team warmed up for postseason Friday with an 82-57 win over Class 1A Rankin. Greenwood was led by Daniel Harris with 21 points, James Settles with 18, Edward Kennepohl with 14 and Vincent Serbantez with 13. Tomas Wrotten had 16 for Rankin while Juan Bautista had 10 and Dionicio Sifuentez had 12.

The Rangers (20-11) outscored Rankin (26-4) by seven points in the second quarter and by ten in the third. Greenwood plays the District 7-3A runnerup in the first round of the playoffs.

Cotton gets hole-in-one

MHS baseball takes Hobbs

HOBBS, N.M. — Midland High's baseball team beat the Hobbs Eagles Tuesday 17-12 with Craig Coleman getting the win for the Bulldogs. MHS' Cade Nobles hit a three-run home run and also doubled. Coleman also doubled.

Keith Lant started for MHS, which recorded nine strike outs as a team. The Bulldogs junior varsity beat the Hobbs JV 16-1. The Bulldogs play again today at 1 p.m. against Andrews.

Lee shuts out another opponent

The Midland Lee softball team won their third-straight game to advance to the semifinals in the Ysleta Tournament Of Champions Friday, defeating Socorro-Montwood 7-0.

Crystal Smith got her first win of the season on a two hitter, striking out ten in seven innings. Adrian Nobles added a two-run home run.

MHS makes still perfect

The Midland High girls' softball team advanced to today's semifinals, defeating Ysleta Thursday and El Paso Hanks on Friday.

Katrina Kelly picked the win in MHS' 12 win over Yselta. Kelly struck out seven in the five inning affair. Julie Williams went 3-4 from the plate and Joye Lewis went 2-3 with 2 RBI's.

The victory followed Thursday's 14-5 win over Hanks. Michelle Quintella picked up the win, striking out nine.

Kenye Kay Butts and and Jennifer Thompson had three hits and a RBI each, and Shelia Vines went 2-5 with 3 RBI's. MHS ran their record to 3-0. If MHS and Lee win their semifinal games, they would face each other in the tournament final.

BOYS: Hicks pours in 19 points in win and he continued his arsenic ways Friday with a game-high 19 points.

"I've realized late in the season that I have to step up my game. It's the playoffs," Hicks said. "I'm scoring some points, but I'm depending on my teammates for some other areas and they are depending on me in other areas. We're just coming together."

House also feels his team is playotf ready.

"I have to give credit to San Angelo for how hard they played, but we stepped on them when we needed to, and we haven't been doing that to teams," House said. "We were beginning to do that when we went into the playotfs last year."

Lee staged the key surge of the game in the third quarter, sprinting out of the gate on a 16-7 run for a 47-34, 13-point lead with over four minutes left to play in the period. Sophomore John Purves hit six key points in the run and Lee never trailed after that.

"Purvis had a big third quarter when we played in San Angelo," House noted. "The old sophomore came through again."

Purvis said, "Actually, I took some very bad shots in the game, but I did hit some good shots in the third quarter. Everyone played a great game. That (spurt) just added to it."

Another key factor was that Lee held powerful Joseph Nunez to just seven points. He had only three points until very deep in the fourth period. Shane McCulloch, Hicks and Israel Boyd did most of the work on Nunez.

"We doubled down on him a lot because he really hurt us when we lost to them in San Angelo," McCulloch said. "That was a huge key in the game because he's a very good player."

McCulloch also saw his three-point shot return, hitting four of six and ending the game with 14 points.

"Man, I was glad to see that shot come back," he said. "It's about time."

Guard Elliott Bowman, almost not a factor for the Bobcats against Midland High, led San Angelo with 16 points. Guard Micah Echeberger had 15 whild post B.J. Townsend had 14 points. Guard Marty Lopez had 10 points. The Bobcats just didn't get the points they needed from inside against the smaller, but scrappy Rebels.

Lee will enter the playotfs Tuesday as a playoff team with a losing record, 14-16 for the year while Lubbock High is 22-9. However, the Westerners haven't been to the playotfs in 31 years and Lee showed Friday that playoff experience does have its upside.

STANTON: Fourth-ranked Ozona prevails

(From 1C)

"I felt like our shooters are really a little better at three's than they are at two's," Stanton coach Frank Riney said. "They were collapsing so much on the post that I said if we got three's to take them."

The Lady Buffs fell behind at halftime 26-16. And Ozona seemed they could turn the game into a blowout with the ball-hawking defense of freshman guard Bobbie Bryson and the inside play of freshman post Amber Tarr. The Lady Lions cut off Stanton's post game in the first two quarters, holding Stanton leading scorer Sande Bundas to two points and the Lady Buffaloes to 6-for-25 shooting.

"We expected them to be bothersome with their defense," Riney said. "But it worked out both ways. We got a few steals from them too."

But in the third Stanton guards Herm and Lupe Chapa each made two 3-pointers and the Lady Buffs outscored Ozona 23-14 to cut the score to 40-39 headed into the fourth period.

"They just started hitting those three's and Bryson started getting a little tired and her and Gloria (Pena-Alfaro) started turning it over," Faught said.

Bundas started the rally by hitting her first two shots of the third. Herm hit two three's in a row to make the score 38-30. Herm, who finished with 19 points and five three-pointers to lead all scorers, then followed two three-pointers by Chapa with a steal that resulted in a free throw from Bundas for a 38-34 score. The Lady Buff guard made her last three of the period with 32 seconds left and then sank two free throws with 2 seconds in the third for a 40-39 tally.

But Stanton managed only four free throws in the final stanza.

"We might have gotten a little tense at that point when it was so close," Riney said. "I wouldn't be surprised to see Ozona go a long way."

The Lady Lions play either Hawley or DeLeon in the area round. Ozona got several easy baskets off steals and by beating Stanton down the floor in the first half. Bryson, among three freshmen that start for Ozona who went undefeated the last two seasons as seventh and eight graders, scored eight of her 11 points in the first half. Tarr had 18 points, many scored off a pivot move she has perfected under the basket.

While Riney was left watching seniors Bundas, Chapa, Herm, Kindra Woodfin, Traci Moore and Shauna Butler play for the last time, Faught may have just started fully appreciated his talented freshmen threesome of Bryson, Tarr and Amber McWilliams. But Riney hasn't said goodbye to his seniors yet.

"We've been together a long time and it's sad to break up a good act," Riney said. "But they're not quit gone. We still have track season."

RANKIN: Lady Devils hold Ira comback

(From 1C)

Rankin's dominance down low, scoring to spread the lead to five.

The team exchanged blows again and with six seconds left and down by five (66-61), Ira's Jody Rankin, who scored 26 on the night, made two free throws to cut the lead to three. Needing a miracle, Ira was fortunate as the following in bounds pass bounced off a Rankin player giving Ira the ball with those six seconds left.

Following Ira's last timeout, the Lady Bulldogs made what would be a season ending mistake. The pass was made to wide open Jody Rankin who would sink the layup to cut the lead to one. What the two pointer did was leave Ira down by one with no timeouts left, allowing the Red Devils, 20-10, to run out the clock without making an in bounds pass.

"We finally managed to hang on," Bearden said. "We had forced things and were doing things we hadn't been doing (down the stretch), and Ira played tough basketball."

The end finished off what was an amazing game.

The Rankin offense was dominating on the inside with the three post players, Guadarrama, King and Hord scoring 49 of the team's 66 points. The pounding and dominance on the boards as well was too much at times.

"It (the inside game) has been our game," Bearden said. "All three post players can take charge at anytime. If we get anything from the outside it is a bonus."

King, who came on strong after missing her first ten shots, dominated play in the second half scoring 14 of her 16 in that half. Hord led all scorers with 11 in the first half, putting the Lady Red Devils up by as much as seven early on.

The Lady Red Devils also forced 30 Ira turnovers which made up for the 28-70 shooting performance.

Ira's Jody Rankin had 17 of her 26 in the second half leading the way for the Lady Bulldogs, 17-11, to take a three-point lead at one time.

GIRLS: Rhoads' 27 not enough to win

(From 1C)

"They took a bad year (1994) and turned it around and brought the playoff tradition back to Lee. They brought the team back together and had great camaraderie with each other."

The Lady Rebels have a long tradition of making the playoffs in the 18-year history of 4-5A play for girls but missed the last two years.

And with sophomore Jamie Rhoads coming back for two more years, the playoff drought should be at the end for a while.

Rhoads was the only Lady Rebel who had any accuracy at all from the field, hitting on 13-of-22 for a career-high 27 points. And her play boosted Lee to a 21-18 first half advantage and kept them in it down the stretch.

But the Lady Knights outscored Lee 17-12 in the third quarter to take a lead from which the Lady Rebels would not recover.

Lady Knight point guard Tresa Silcott led the charge by driving the lane for three layups in the third quarter and dishing off for assists on three other drives. That gave Hanks a 30-29 lead, only their second of the game, with 4:31 to play in the third. Hanks went on to pull away for a 37-33 lead going into the fourth quarter.

That's when the Lady Knight defense took over as it garnered five crucial defensive rebounds which they converted to points on the fast break.

Hanks coach Angie Kennedy said they tried to make use of their speed advantage over the Lady Rebels.

"We try to run the break all the time," Kennedy said. "But we thought we were faster than this team and we had to get up the court before Krissy Woodard got down there to close it up."

Woodard, who scored 32 points in the Lady Rebels' win over Coronado, was held to only 12 points in the final game of her three-year high school career. Hanks' 6-foot-1 post Lauren O'Neill did a good job of getting her hand in 6-2 Woodard-'s face, making her miss 12 of her 18 total shots.

"We knew we needed to shut her down," Kennedy said. "But Rhoads took control anyway. She's a great sophomore. She's a great player period. We couldn't shut her down but it's probably impossible to hold them both. But we knew we had to keep Prissy under 20 to win the game."

Hanks busted the game open in the fourth, holding the Lady Rebels scoreless for the first two-and-a-half minutes. Rhoads finally drove the lane to pull the Lady Rebs to within 43-35 but it was too little, too late.

Lee had to start fouling with about four minutes to play but the Lady Rebels had committed less than seven team fouls for the half and it took several fouls to put Hanks on the line.

"They had such a good season, I hate to put so much emphasis on this last game," said Rail. "I mean, you get to this point in the season and your last game is going to be a loss unless you're the last one left at the state tournament."

Mascots' fight may go to court

PALO ALTO, Calif. (NYT) — Investigators are reviewing an unlikely videotape of a possible crime — a perpetually smiling bear with a huge head grappling with an eight-foot-tall pine tree with an idiotic grin permanently pasted on its midsection.

In the latest installment of a century-old sports rivalry, the scrapping mascots of Stanford University and the University of California are facing possible criminal charges for brawling during a basketball game between the two schools.

Stanford's campus police filed a report with the Santa Clara County district attorney's office over the Wednesday night incident in which Stanford's Tree mascot scrapped with Cal's Oski the Bear at midcourt during a timeout.

Stanford Police Captain Raoul Niemeyer said a misdemeanor complaint of fighting in public could be filed against one or both of the mascots, whose scuffle was witnessed by thousands of fans at the contest and televised on ESPN.

Police made no recommendation in their report. "We're neutral in this," said Niemeyer. The decision whether to press charges will be up to Deputy District Attorney Margo Smith of the department's Palo Alto office.

Since no one was hurt, Niemeyer said he is inclined to view the incident as "offsetting penalties." But, he said, campus authorities could not stand by and "let them duke it out. It looks bad."

Niemeyer said it was not clear who started the fight, since TV did not pick up the action until the mascots were grappling on the floor. Security guards stepped in after the Tree ripped off Oski's costumed head, and escorted them out of the building.

There were no arrests, and the pair were released a short time later.

Niemeyer said the scuffle was apparently provoked when the Stanford Tree told the bear to stop taunting Cardinal fans and gave Oski a "playful nudge." The Cal mascot fell down, got up and dropped the Stanford mascot with what Niemeyer called a "high school wrestling tackle."

Stanford police refused to identify either mascot because no charges have been filed. However, the Stanford Daily identified the Stanford mascot as sophomore Ari Mervis.

Mervis said the scuffle started over a misunderstanding.

MHS: Outside game propels 'Dogs to win

(From 1C)

giving them that stuff," Raughton said. "Of course Ogonna can hit the three and we know Kendra can hit it."

Kendrick, a senior, set the MHS record for most threes in a single game with seven in a contest against Pecos last year. But the Lady Dawgs have connected on less than 30 for the season.

Bel Air's tight defense on MHS' leading scorer Amy Alcala helped open up the outside for Kendrick, Merritt, Marci Swinney and Tia McCutcheon.

The tight quarters, however, did not seem to slow Alcala, who took over the game in the last part of the first quarter.

The Lady Dawgs started slow falling behind 10-4. But Alcala took over on the defensive end, grabbing seven rebounds and making two steals, and MHS rallied back to take a 16-14 lead at the end of the first.

Kendrick hit a three-pointer to start the MHS run and Alcala, after being fouled on a defensive board, nailed the two free throws. Hendrick and Alcala then scored once each on fast breaks after Bel Air turnovers to boost MHS' halftime lead to 33-24.

Bel Air began the game shooting 5-of-11 (45 percent) to take the early six-point lead with 5:08 to play in the first quarter. That point in the game was the last time the Lady Highlanders controlled the action as they went cold, shooting eight-of-28, until the fourth quarter.

In the second quarter, Merritt nailed two three-pointers in a row to push the Lady Dawgs' lead to 29-22. MHS then began the second with an 18-4 run from which the Lady Highlanders could never recover.

MHS' slow start could be attributed to the fact that two regular starters, seniors Veronica Poage and Jamie Rand, did not start as they have all season and did not play a single minute due to a "coach's decision," Raughton said.

It didn't seem to affect the Lady Dawgs who easily outclassed their District 2-5A opponent. Alcala led MHS with 23 points and 14 rebounds while Kendrick finished with 11 and Merritt had 12.

MHS had a 23-point lead at one point but Bel Air finally started hitting in the fourth as Rosie deSantiago nailed four treys in a row.

DREXLER: Coogs reunite for title run had no dominant people," he said. "We had a very good unit. The chemistry was good. The teams that beat us had been together a little bit longer.

"I've learned how to lose," he said. "Now I want to learn how to win the big one."

Championships have dominated their conversations for years now. Some of those talks focus on the one chance that slipped away — the 1983 NCAA title game against North Carolina State.

With victory within their grasp, the Cougars slowed their familiar fast pace to a walk and eventually let the Wolfpack creep back into the game. Lorenzo Charles' dunk at the buzzer gave N.C. State the victory, but robbed Drexler and Olajuwon of the championship.

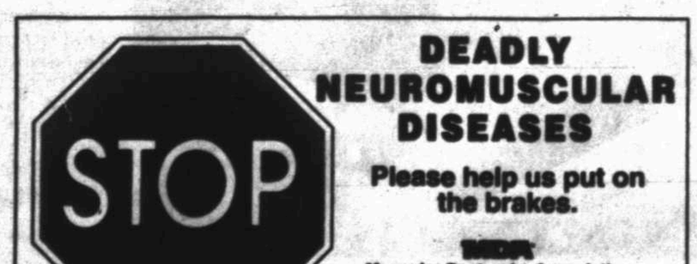

"We talk about missed opportunities or things that happened during the game that maybe we could have done better," Drexler said. "How bad we wanted Guy Lewis to get a national champion. We wanted it as much for him as we wanted it for ourselves. It was very emotional."

There were emotions of a different type when the Rockets arrived at the Charlotte Coliseum without clearance for Drexler to play. He could only watch the morning shootaround.

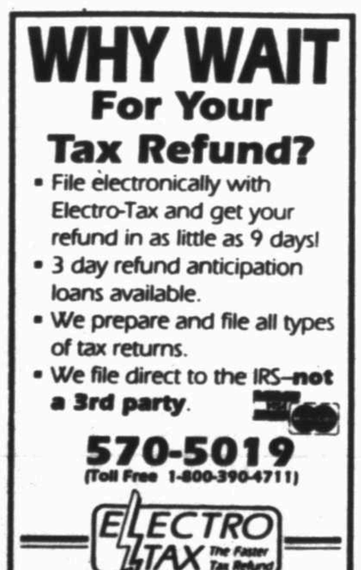

"He couldn't practice because the deal was not yet finished," Olajuwon said. "In the second half, when we realized everything was OK and he was cleared to play, you could just see the morale, the energy and the enthusiasm just pick up from there."

Olajuwon is hoping that surge of energy will carry on through June and the NBA finals. At least, he feels the Rockets have a role model that can get them there, one who wants a championship.

"Clyde, he's a professional," Olajuwon said. "You always know what to expect of him. He's a worker every night."

De La Hoya defends WBO crown against Molina tonight

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The Olympics gave Oscar De La Hoya a name. Fighting John John Molina can give him a reputation.

De La Hoya takes the biggest risk of his young career day night when he meets Molina in a fight that figures to tell a lot about the future of the Olympic gold medalist.

De La Hoya defends the WBO version of the lightweight crown against Molina, the IBF junior lightweight champion who has almost as many title fights as De La Hoya has professional bouts.

The fight promises to answer questions both about De La Hoya's chin and the quality of opponents he has beaten in his first 16 pro fights.

"You can't get any better than John John Molina," De La Hoya said. "He's been champion for five years. Nobody could beat him. I can't see why people will still be talking about how John John Molina wasn't a good opponent."

The scheduled 12-round fight tops a card that includes the light heavyweight debut of James Toney, who lost his super middleweight title in his last fight against Roy Jones Jr.

The rap on De La Hoya, unbeaten in 16 pro fights, is that he has fought opponents too old or over the hill, and that he can be put down.

"I have touched the canvas, but the mark of a great fighter is one that comes off the canvas and knocks out his opponent," said De La Hoya, who has done just that in two fights.

Part of De La Hoya's problem may be that he has been too good for his own good. With 15 knockouts in his 16 fights, he has overwhelmed most of his opponents.

"I make these guys look easy," De La Hoya said. "People at first thought this fight would be my toughest fight. Now that we have trained so hard, it will be an easy fight. This fight will give me a chance to put a stop to all my critics and make them believe I am the best in the lightweight category."

De La Hoya, the only U.S. gold medalist in the 1992 Olympics, is a 4-1 favorite to beat Molina, who has won 15 straight fights, including eight title bouts.

De La Hoya, 22, will earn $1.25 million, the biggest payday of his career, for taking on the more experienced Molina (36-3).

If De La Hoya wins, he will fight Rafael Ruelas, the IBF lightweight champion, on May 6.

Bulldogs hope to continue momentum

■ Midland meets lowly Abilene Cooper while the Midland Lee girls host Abilene High.

■ 5-5A Soccer

The new wave of District 5-5A play continues today as the Midland High boys' team hosts Abilene Cooper and Midland Lee welcomes Abilene High. Both games start at 2 p.m. The Lee boys will travel to Abilene to face Abilene High while the MHS girls will face defending district champion Abilene Cooper.

The MHS High boys' team, 9-1 overall and 7-0 in district, started off their second half of district with a 2-1 win over home-town rival Midland Lee on Tuesday. The Bulldogs are looking to carry that momentum into the playoffs and that mean taking their two-game district lead into today's game with district seller dweller Abilene Cooper, 2-12 and 0-7.

"Everybody is targeting us," Esikhati said. "If we let in a little bit, with people will be playing at their best, we could lose."

Last time the two team got together, the result was a 7-0 Bulldog win. Sean Parnell scored twice in the Jan. 24 game in Abilene to lead the six Bulldogs who found the back of the net. Head Coach Tom Esikhati knows a win today will be tougher the second time around.

"Looking at what Cooper, their record doesn't reflect their performance," Esikhati said. "Their 1-0 loss against Abilene High shows they have improved. The boys will not take it easy."

The Midland Lee's Lady Rebels, 7-4 and 4-3, are in a third-place tie with Odessa Permian for the last playoff spot. The Lady Rebels are coming off Tuesday's 1-0 clash with MHS, a game that broke a three-game district losing streak. Lee girls' soccer coach also hopes the win will serve as a jump start for the second half of the season.

"Moral-wise, I think it was important," Lee coach Van Gravitt said. "It gave the team confidence."

Offensively, Gravitt would like to see the team get back to their early-season production. With two teams (Abilene and Odessa High) on the schedule, Lee will be looked at as being the favorite, yet another reason for goal production.

"We need to win the games we're supposed to," Gravitt said. "We also need to win game we maybe are not supposed to win. We need to build momentum."

The Lady Rebels will be led by their leading scorer Jamie Welch. The Lee senior who has eight goals and seven assists, is joined in the offensive attack by Nikki Smetzer, Erin Blinka and Christi Johnson. The defense should get a boost with the return of goalkeeper Jamie Calhoun.

We've been playing well defensively," Gravitt said. "Jamie's return will lift the spirits of the team. It will benefit the team all over the field." The Midland Lee boys' team leads the contingency of Midland teams (the MHS girls being the other) traveling to Abilene. Lee, 5-6 and 3-4, is tied for fourth in district play after their heartbreaking 2-1 loss to MHS Tuesday. Despite the loss, Lee coach John McCulloch knows the effort that the rebels showed on Tuesday will likely get them to the playoffs.

"If our guys played the way they did Tuesday, I don't see any problems making the Playoffs," McCulloch said. "We need to win the next five game. The difficulty getting into the playoffs will help them out."

The Rebels can start their ascent up the rankings if they beat Abilene High (7-5 and 4-3) the district's third-place team. Lee accomplished this feat in their 4-0 win over the Eagles on Jan .25, but this time around things could be different.

"I think they'll be ready for us this time," McCulloch said. "They also lost to MHS 2-1, so they have improved."

The Midland High Lady Bulldogs, 2-6 and 1-6, are also in the unenviable position of having to get up for a big opponent after a tough loss. Their challenge, is made more difficult, because they have to travel to the home of the undefeated district leading Abilene Cooper Lady Cougars.

Having lost already to Cooper 4-1 at MHS, one would think the team would have a hard time to get up for this game, but that is not the case.

"It will be another tough game for us," Midland High coach Scott Hodkinson said. "We definitely have not given up. I hope to give Cooper a run for their money and wouldn't be shocked if we won tomorrow. We're looking to get wins over the next five games."

Injury Update: MHS Bulldogs Tyler Berry will miss today's game with a hamstring pull and J.D. Garcia will be absent due to a bruised knee. Lady Rebels' forward Stephanie Smith will miss today's game with with a knee injury, and Lady Bulldogs' forward Ann Smith is probable for Friday's game after missing a game with a sprained right ankle.

Pierce victorious on homeland

■ Paris Open

PARIS (AP) — Mary Pierce scored a 6-2, 6-4 victory over Judith Wiesner in the quarterfinals of the Paris Open on Friday, assuring that the top four seeds will play in the semifinals.

Jana Novotna of the Czech Republic, the No. 3 seed, outlasted Karina Habsudova of Slovakia 6-3, 3-6, 6-4 and will play top-seeded Steffi Graf.

Fourth-seeded Iva Majoli of Croatia beat Sabine Appelmans of Belgium, 6-2, 6-4, and will meet Pierce.

After a scare in her opening match, in which she had to come back from 1-5 deficit the third set against the lowest ranked player in the field, Rennae Stubbs, the second-seeded Pierce had an easier time against the sixth-seeded Weisner.

"I started fast and well and feel ready for the semifinals," said Pierce, making her first start in France since winning the Australian Open. "All I need to to keep my concentration because my game is fine."

Novotna will provide an important test for Graf, who is playing in her first tournament since November.

"I have had some great matches against her in the past," Novotna said. "I have to be fast and can't hold back."

Graf had to take time off to recover from back and calf injuries, but beat 14-year-old Swiss star Martina Hingis on Thursday.

A written request to the Registration Committee listing these participants must be made.
3. Up to five companies/businesses of the same or similar professions having 25 or less than 25 employees may combine to enter a team. They must make a written request to the Registration Committee in order to be officially entered.
4. In the division categories, spouse participation will be allowed based on the number of company employees. This scale is listed below:

■ Jeff Gordon tries to win NASCAR's Super Bowl as the Daytona 500 kicks off the racing season Sunday.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — At age 23, Jeff Gordon already has earned his place in NASCAR Winston Cup history.

Winning the inaugural Brickyard 400 last August assured that. But winning Sunday's Daytona 500 would place the driver they call "The Kid" in a group considered even more elite.

The season-opening event still is the Super Bowl of stock car racing, and when its winners are written about or introduced, they are forevermore "Daytona 500 winner ..."

"That would sure be nice," Gordon said as his team prepared a Chevrolet Monte Carlo for Sunday's $3.1 million event. "It's hard to believe how big winning the race at Indy has been. Everybody talks about it everywhere I go. I'm sure winning Daytona would be even bigger.

"When I first won the Brickyard, I had no idea how much it would mean. Sure, it was great to win it. I was flying high. But winning my first (Winston Cup) race last May at Charlotte was very emotional, too."

Tears ran down the cheeks of the then 22-year-old on the final lap of that Charlotte race as his emotions overflowed.

"I was able to keep that all bottled up inside me at Indy," he said. "Whew, I don't know what I would do if I found myself leading like that with a lap to go here."

Considering the history of the Daytona 500, what probably would happen is that Gordon would be too preoccupied with looking in his rearview mirror to see what the other contenders were trying to do to get past him to think much about winning until the checkered flag actually waved over his car.

"There's usually a few guys with a chance to win it on the last lap," Gordon said.

He has been one of them each of the past two years, finishing fifth as a rookie in 1993 and fourth last season.

Going into Sunday's race, Gordon is among the favorites. The others include Dale Earnhardt, going for his first Daytona 500 win in 17 tries, defending champion Sterling Marlin and 1993 winner and this year's pole-winner Dale Jarrett.

Earnhardt and Marlin won the Twin 125-mile qualifying races Thursday in dominating fashion, while Gordon and 1989 Daytona 500 winner Darrell Waltrip each ran second, and Jarrett and fellow Ford Thunderbird driver Mark Martin were the third-place finishers.

"I believe Sterling has the best car out there," Gordon said. "He's the defending champion and we've got to work on our car to make it as good as his.

"Earnhardt is good, but the only reason he was good (in the 125) was because we couldn't get around him. I think that (No.) 4 car (Marlin) is going to be the one to beat. He's fast, but he's handling, too."

Gordon isn't conceding anything, though.

"I'm not going to be happy with second even if it's second to Earnhardt," he said. "Everybody is gunning for him. Everybody wants to beat him. ... Earnhardt is going to do whatever it takes to win, and so am I. ... I like to win. I don't like to run second.

"I've learned about as much as I can (finishing second to Earnhardt). I need to get around him now."

Eardhardt wins Daytona warmup

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (NYT) — It is rare when Dale Earnhardt arrives at Victory Lane and has to apologize for winning a race, but that's what the defending Winston Cup champion seemed to do Friday after he won the first round of the International Race of Champions XIX at Daytona International Speedway.

Earnhardt, who has won 26 events at the famed 2.5-mile trioval, claimed his third victory in an IROC race at Daytona but did so at the expense of PPG-IndyCar champion Al Unser Jr., who fell from the lead when Earnhardt's identically prepared Dodge Avenger bumped Unser from behind.

"It was just one of them deals," said Earnhardt. "It was a tough wreck and I hated that it happened, but it was just one of them deals where we ran out of room."

Unser, who had led 22 of the 40 laps, spun out and crashed into the wall in a wreck that was eerily reminiscent of his collision with Emerson Fittipaldi on the next-to-last lap of the 1989 Indianapolis 500, which sent Unser careening into the wall and Fittipaldi to Victory Lane.

Earnhardt, whose car never went off course after it smashed into Unser's rear bumper and lifted it off the track, wound up being ushered into Victory Lane after holding off runner-up Scott Pruett.

"I got too far ahead in Turn 1 and I knew it was going to bite me in 3," he said. "I was trying to block Dale. I ran into the same thing last year, except Dale blocked me (and went on to win the 1994 IROC series opener at Daytona). Last year I lifted. This year Dale didn't. It was one of those racing deals. I was trying hard to win, but it was another lesson at Daytona."

■ IROC at Daytona

Unser had taken the lead in Turn 1 of the last lap and begun to pull away when Earnhardt gathered a head of steam and, with some drafting help from Winston Cup colleague Mark Martin, rapidly ran down Unser. Video replays of the wreck showed that Earnhardt had taken a high line through the backstretch and that Unser's car had drifted toward Earnhardt's in an attempt to block him.

Larry Caudill of North Wilkesboro, N.C., won Friday's Florida 200 Goody's Dash by averting a wreck near the start-finish line on Lap 56 that claimed the cars of leader Will Hobgood and Edward Howell. "When the calamity started, I could see it coming from Turn, 4 and like an idiot, I started down pit road," said Caudill, whose victory marked his third in the event and first since his back-to-back triumphs in 1987-88. "But it may have been the best move of the day." Caudill spun backward through the grassy area in the trioval but collected his car to start seventh when the race resumed. With 20 laps to go, Caudill worked his way back to the front to record his 31st career victory on the circuit. Michael Waltrip will sit on the pole position for today's Goody's 300 Busch race.

Rison, 'Pokes Harper head list of NFL free agents

■ Sixteen Dallas Cowboys, including receiver Alvin Harper and defender Tony Tolbert are free to shop around for other ball clubs..

By The Associated Press

Andre Rison and David Meggett were among 481 NFL players who officially became free agents Friday, many of them simply because they had priced themselves out of a job.

"He's certainly the most gifted player I have ever coached, but Andre needs to make the money he deserves," Atlanta Falcons coach June Jones said. "And we have to go in a different direction and take some of that money to help improve our defense."

Of the 481 free agents, 328 are unrestricted, players who have four or more seasons of service whose contracts have expired. There is no compensation to their former teams for signing them. Rison and Meggett, of the New York Giants, are unrestricted free agents.

Sixteen Dallas Cowboys are listed as free agents. Included on the list are defensive players Tony Tolbert, James Washington and Jim Jeffcoat. Offensively, Dallas could lose backup quarterback Rodney Peete, wide receiver Alvin Harper, running back Tommie Ageeor tight end Jay Novacek.

Also among the unrestricted group are such players as quarterbacks Frank Reich of Buffalo and Mark Rypien of Cleveland, defensive end Jim Jeffcoat of Dallas, kicker Matt Bahr of New England, defensive back Ronnie Lott of the New York Jets and running back Ricky Ervins of Washington.

Although teams are allowed to try to re-sign their own free agents, Rison's career at Atlanta apparently also is over.

Jones told the four-time Pro Bowl wide receiver Thursday that he did not fit under the team's salary cap. Jones also told running back Erric Pegram that the Falcons won't attempt to re-sign him.

"I've talked with both of them and explained our situation and the direction we want to go in right now," Jones said.

Rison, a six-year veteran, has a club-record 423 receptions and 56 touchdowns.

Meggett, the Giants running back and kick returner, became a free agent after his agent and the team could not come to terms on a new contract. Meggett reportedly wanted $8 million over four years with a $3 million signing bonus. He would have used up about $4.5 million of the Giants' salary cap money in 1995.

"I think we'll get it done quickly," one of Meggett's agents, Howard Shatsky, said. "Once we get the deal we're looking for, we'll take it."

Unlike Rison, however, the door apparently was not locked behind Meggett. Although New England, coached by Bill Parcells, was a likely candidate to grab the fleet-footed Meggett, the Giants were still in the chase.

"If I were the Giants, I would have gotten it done," Shatsky said. "They still have an equal opportunity with every other team to sign David. What they lost was an advantage over those other teams."

Last year, Meggett totaled 1,462 yards and six touchdowns running, receiving and returning.

Of those players who are not unrestricted, the majority (95) have completed between three and four years of service and have no contract. Teams losing such free agents have right of first refusal and must be compensated with draft picks.

The smallest group of free agents are the so-called "franchise" players, so designated by their former clubs. Not only do the original teams have right of first refusal on them, but they also must be compensated with two No. 1 draft choices.

Replacement parts begin to crack

■ Replacement players have second thoughts on breaking strike.

By The Associated Press

Baseball's plan to use replacement players showed signs of cracking Friday when the Baltimore Orioles said they wouldn't play spring training games against strikebreakers, and one of the game's most esteemed managers, Sparky Anderson, said he wouldn't work with them.

On Day 2 of a very strange spring, indeed, several other managers and players also had second thoughts about participating in replacement ball.

"We've notifed the commisioner's office that we are prepared to play spring training games if we are assured the other teams will only use players with National Association contracts," Orioles general manager Roland Hemond said, referring to the formal name of the minor leagues.

Orioles owner Peter Angelos has already said he will not play regular season games with strikebreakers. Baltimore did not invite any replacement players to its training camp, and all of the 25 players who practiced Friday were members of the Orioles' minor league system.

"Me and all our coaches and most people in baseball are traditionalists," new Orioles manager Phil Regan said in Sarasota. "We love the game and don't want to do anything to hurt the game. I think Mr. Angelos comes from that background. He wants to keep that tradition. I'm glad, and I feel proud that I'm on the side of a person who has taken that stand."

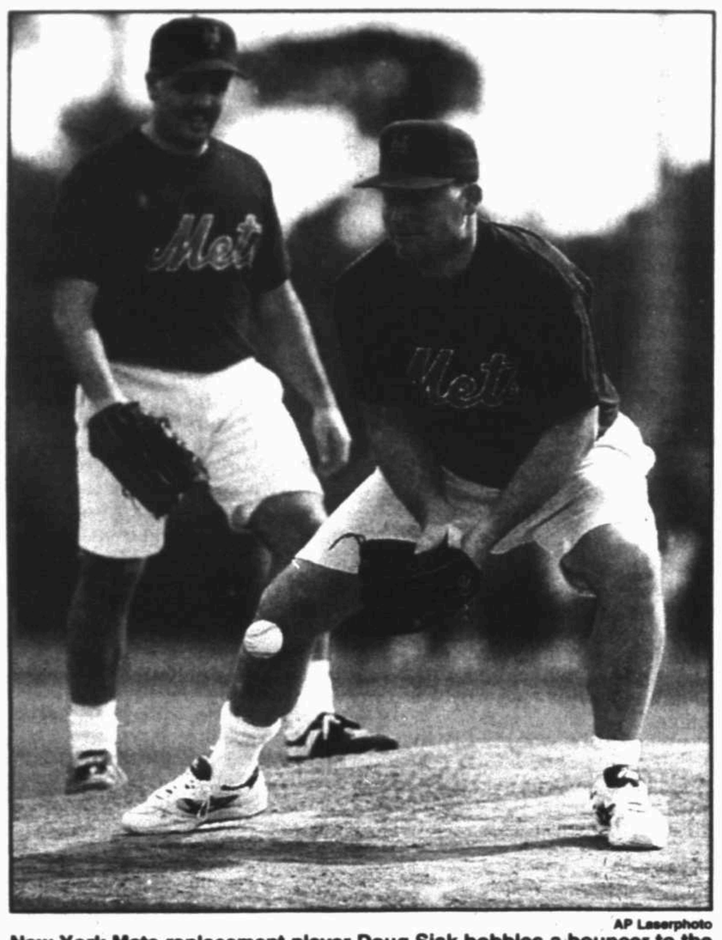

Anderson, second only to the Dodgers' Tommy Lasorda in seniority, abruptly took an involuntary leave of absence after balking at replacement ball. Detroit, where he's managed since early 1979, wouldn't guarantee that he'd get his job back when the strike ends.

"There ain't no place in our game for replacement players," he said.

The 60-year-old Anderson, fourth on the managerial career victory list, joined Toronto's Cito Gaston on the sidelines. The Blue Jays told Gaston and his staff last month that they were excused from managing replacement ball.

"The one thing I have that will never leave me is integrity," said Anderson, who was to be paid $1 million this season. "That is the one thing I have that money can't buy. There ain't enough money in the world to buy my integrity."

Owners still haven't formally endorsed the concept of replacements, and the American League's lawyer last month promised Angelos a vote but it hasn't been taken yet. Meanwhile, more teams opened camp, following the New York Yankees, the first club to open the season on Thursday.

New York Mets replacement player Doug Sisk bobbles a bouncer to the mound during spring training in Florida on Friday. Sisk originally played with the Mets in 1982 and now runs a family sports center in Olympia, Wa.

Veterans Ken Oberkfell and Chuck Rainey, who had committed to becoming replacements, changed their mind Friday.

Oil Can Boyd, the replacement player with perhaps the most recognizable name, reported to the Chicago White Sox in Sarasota.

"I haven't received any kind of harsh criticism from either side," said Boyd, who hasn't pitched in the majors since 1991. "I wouldn't say I wouldn't expect to or anything like that. I'm willing to face this thing like you're supposed to. But believe me, at the end of this when everybody suits up, I'm going north, too."

Anderson, who has a career record of 2,134-1,750, is the only manager to win World Series titles in the American and National leagues. He's also the only manager to lead teams to 100-victory seasons in both leagues. He appeared near tears a few times during a long, rambling talk with reporters.

"This is the hardest day I've ever had in my career," he said. "I don't get to walk across the street and put the uniform on. You have no idea how hard this is for me. ...

"God gave me something when I was born: class. You can give it away, or you can retain it. If you give it away, you can never really regain it again."

Tom Runnells, manager of Detroit's Toledo farm team, was appointed Tigers interim manager.

"We know it was a hard call for him," Tigers president John McHale said. "We wish it could have been otherwise. We respect Sparky and the many great years he has given to the Tigers. ... He elected to do this with no guarantees as to the future."

Oberkfell, a 16-year veteran who last played in the major leagues in 1992, had signed with the Philadelphia Phillies as a replacement. The Record of Hackensack, N.J., said Oberkfell told Phillies general manager Lee Thomas on Thursday night that he had changed his mind.

"I just can't do it. If you have to sue me because of the contract, go ahead," Oberkfell was quoted as telling Thomas.

"Ken called me last night and said he wasn't really sure he would pass the physical," Thomas said Friday. "His shoulder was bothering him."

Thomas also said that Oberkfell, a union activist during his career, told him that "he did have second thoughts."

Rainey, a 40-year-old pitcher who hasn't appeared in the majors since 1984, failed to report to the Texas Rangers' camp at Port Charlotte, Fla. He decided to remain at his construction business.

"I had my chance back then, now it's time to let somebody else try it, whether it's scab baseball or otherwise," Rainey said from his home in San Diego. "It was a nice whim, but the more I thought about it, the more reality and common sense set in."

Other major league managers were surprised by Anderson's decision.

"It's sad to hear that," Lasorda said. "Sparky is a good man, an outstanding manager, a former teammate, and a very close friend. I'm sorry to see him have to leave this way."

New York Yankees manager Buck Showalter, last season's AL manager of the year, wasn't definite about whether he would manage strikebreakers.

"My decision is to be here and participate in drills leading up to the games," he said in Fort Lauderdale. "I want to see what the rest of the industry is doing and what is best for baseball and the organization."

Mets manager Dallas Green also was noncommittal.

"We'll wait until March, then you can come down here and see for yourself," he said. "Right now I'm doing a job I'm paid to do and am required to do."

San Francisco Giants manager Dusty Baker said he sought the advice of former San Francisco 49ers coach Bill Walsh, who coached during the 1987 NFL strike, about how to deal with the situation. But he remains unsure how to treat replacement players.

"This is my house as well as my players' house," he said. "Anybody who comes in that interim period is nothing more than a renter."

As for what Anderson did, Baker said:

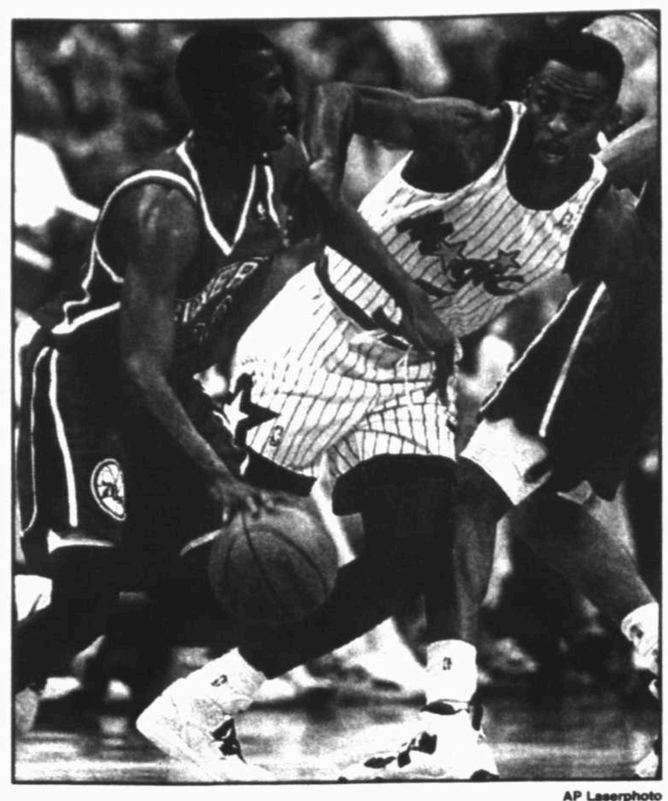

"Well, Sparky's about to take a leave of absence for good. The closer you get to the end, the more you can do things you want to do. He's been managing 25 years. I've been managing two years, so I can't do that."

Anderson, sitting in his office in Marchant Stadium, insisted that he wasn't trying to take sides.

"This is not a doing for ownership or players. This is a doing for me," he said.

Anderson led the Cincinnati Reds to World Series titles in 1975 and 1976, and the Tigers to the 1984 World Series championship.

Meantime, at the Reds' camp in Plant City, Fla., reporters and photographers outnumbered the 14 fans who neither cheered nor asked for autographs when 22 pitchers and catchers — most career minor leaguers — jogged onto a field for their first workout.

Rockets go to 2-0 with Drexler

The Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. — Hakeem Olajuwon scored 16 of his 30 points in the first quarter and Pete Chilcutt posted season highs with 18 points and 14 rebounds as the Houston Rockets extended their winning streak to three games with a 109-92 victory over the Washington Bullets Friday night.

Clyde Drexler, making his first start for the Rockets since being traded from Portland on Tuesday, had 9 points and nine assists as the Rockets won for the eighth time in 10 games.

Chris Webber had 20 points, 15 rebounds and seven assists for the Bullets, who have lost eight of nine games. Juwan Howard scored 20 points and Doug Overton came off the bench to tally 16 points for Washington.

Olajuwon scored 10 points during a 14-4 run midway through the first quarter to help Houston to a 30-23 lead.

Hawks 110, Mavericks 90

DALLAS — Former Midland College standout Mookie Blaylock had 24 points, nine assists and five steals to lead Atlanta to its fourth straight victory and give coach Lenny Wilkens the 950th of his career.

Steve Smith added 23 points and went 5-for-6 from 3-point range before fouling out with 5:44 to play as the Hawks won for the sixth time in the last eight games.

Jim Jackson and Jamal Mashburn scored 27 points each to pace the Mavericks.

Trailing by 12 entering the fourth quarter, the Mavericks knocked the deficit down to 88-83 with 7:08 to play after Lucious Harris' short jumper.

But Blaylock, a native of nearby Garland, hit two straight 3-pointers to push Atlanta's advantage to 94-85 with 4:44 to play.

Knicks 100, Heat 91

NEW YORK — Hubert Davis, subbing for injured John Starks, scored 13 of his 21 points in the third quarter as New York beat Miami for the second night in a row.

Starks, the Knicks' No. 2 scorer averaging 15.4 points a game, partially separated his left shoulder Thursday night at Miami and did not play.

The Knicks led by 22 in the second quarter and finished the third up 86-62 after hitting five 3-pointers, three by Davis and two by Derek Harper.

■ NBA Roundup

The Heat outscored the Knicks 16-2 late in the game, pulling to 95-88 with 1:49 left, but by then it was too late.

Magic 129, 76ers 83

ORLANDO, Fla. — Anfernee Hardaway scored 31 points and Shaquille O'Neal outscored Shawn Bradley 30-3 to pace Orlando's rout of the Philadelphia.

The all-star guard finished 12-for-18 and sat out the fourth quarter while O'Neal entertained with a variety of dunks.

Pacers 110, Timberwolves 78

MINNEAPOLIS — Rik Smits scored eight points as Indiana grabbed a 21-8 lead, and he finished with 24 as the Pacers cruised to their biggest victory of the season.

The Pacers got off to a quick start in each of the first three quarters and maintained a lead of at least 20 points for most of the second half.

Bulls 117, Pistons 102

CHICAGO — Toni Kukoc, revitalized by the All-Star break, scored a career-high 33 points on 13-of-15 shooting, leading Chicago to a victory over Detroit.

Going into last weekend's break, Kukoc had scored 20 points only twice in his previous 17 games. After the Bulls had five days off, however, Kukoc has 55 points in two games.

Warriors 139, Suns 128 OT

PHOENIX — Latrell Sprewell had 33 points and Tim Hardaway added 30 as the Golden State Warriors broke a 19-game losing streak in Phoenix.

Chris Gatling added 26 points for the Warriors, whose previous win in Phoenix was in March 1987. Golden State got its first victory for new coach Bob Lanier after two losses.

Hardaway also had 19 assists for the Warriors, who hit all eight of their shots in overtime and shot 59 percent in the game.

Throngs gather for Rangers opening day at spring training

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — The Texas Rangers had their biggest-ever casting call Friday as the search began for 25 replacement players who can perform like major leaguers.

The Rangers were the first major league team to open a full camp.

A club-record 101 players, 50 of them pitchers, went through five hours of workouts and meetings on the five minor-league diamonds at the Rangers' spring-training complex.

Players outnumbered fans by about 5-to-1. Previous spring-training openers have averaged about 200 spectators.

First-year Manager Johnny Oates did not expect to learn much about so many players the first day.

"Today went as well as expected with all the guys here. Overall, the effort was the No. 1 thing, and their enthusiasm. I think we got a lot done today, especially in the conditioning," he said.

There were eight no-shows, including Chuck Rainey. The 40-year-old pitching veteran, who tentatively agreed to play for the Texas Rangers, reconsidered his decision to try a comeback after an 11-year layoff.

Some of the other no-shows resulted from visa problems, said team spokesman John Blake.

Each pitcher threw for 10 minutes Thursday. They will repeat the drill daily for the next two days, then stagger their workouts on alternating days, Rangers officials said.

"No one's going to get cut today or tomorrow, nor will anyone make the team today or tomorrow," Oates said.

"But they don't have until April 3 (the regular-season opener) to get ready. These guys have to start proving something starting March 3 (the first exhibition game)," he said.

Among the replacement candidates in camp Friday were former major leaguers Rick Schu, Eric Fox, Dan Peltier and Tommy Hinzo.

Also in camp were outfielder Johnny Monell, the MVP in Mexico last season, pitcher Felipe Castillo, who pitched in Taiwan last year, and shortstop Luis Martinez, the leading hitter in the Italian League.

The only player to identify himself as a replacement player so far, however, is pitcher Jackie Davidson, one of 14 players on the roster who was out of baseball last year.

Angels' Lachemann begins camp with 47 wanna-be ballplayers

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — California manager Marcel Lachemann felt mixed emotions as he looked out at the 47 would-be players who showed up Friday for the Angels first spring workout.

"I know a lot of people are not going to look at these people very favorably," Lachemann said. "But they are keeping the game going. You've got to look at it both ways. This is the hand we've been dealt, and we've got to do the best we can with it."

While replacement players went through drills in Arizona, Angel first baseman J.T. Snow sat at home in Southern California and wondered what lies ahead for his striking union.

"When the owners took the salary cap off the table, I thought, 'Wow, maybe now we can get this thing settled.' But nothing happened," Snow said. "Now it seems like we're just in a holding pattern. I'm to the point where I don't get excited when something breaks on the news, and I don't get too down about it. But I'm ready to go."

Some Angels players have been quietly working out in small, informal groups at various locations in Southern California.

The Angels actually brought their replacement team to Arizona one week ago for a series of clinics on fundamentals.

Veteran big-leaguers Pedro Guerrero and Leon Durham are not in camp with the replacement players. They signed Triple-A contracts and will report with the rest of the Angels' minor leaguers.

The most colorful name on the Angels' replacement roster is Tookie Spann, a 28-year-old outfielder who last played pro ball for Chattanooga in 1993.

Astro minor leaguers get pep talk

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) — Houston Astros minor league pitchers and catchers got an unnecessary pep talk from president Tal Smith and general manager Bob Watson.

"I told them this is a unique spring and that some of them will have a chance, if the strike is not settled, to go to Houston with us on March 31 to play the Yankees," Watson said Friday.

"Some of these guys are attending their first training camp, so they're going to be wide-eyed anyway. But I think we got their attention. We told them this is an opportunity, a chance."

The players were more excited than about 50 curious fans who wandered through Osceola County Stadium trying to identify the unfamiliar players.

The Astros issued a 105-name spring-training roster
