A.M. BRIEFING

Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole shows a copy of the Tenth Amendment to the Constitution during a rally in Anaheim, Calif., Monday.

Dole reversal

SAN DIEGO — Bob Dole, determined to win California supporters by seizing on a hotly debated ballot issue, criticized affirmative action programs Monday as "a blind alley in the search for equal justice." In renewing his support for a state proposition opposing race- and sex-based preferences, Dole offered a broad indictment of affirmative action programs overall. Page 5A

BATON ROUGE, La. — Mary Ann Turner thought she was going into the hospital for simple surgery to repair damage from the birth of her third baby. Instead, she claims in a lawsuit, surgeons mutilated her genitals at the instigation of her anesthesiologist husband, who was present during the procedure 24 years ago and treated his wife afterward. Page 7A

Emergency landing

NEW YORK — An American Airlines jet made an emergency landing at John F. Kennedy Airport Monday after its front landing gear failed to work properly. Three passengers suffered minor injuries in the rough landing and evacuation. Flight 346 from Chicago was approaching LaGuardia Airport when it reported problems with its front wheels, and it was diverted to Kennedy, which has a longer runway, said Port Authority spokesman John Kampe.

Dole leads in oil, gas money

Industry contributes to both parties, but Republican has 4-1 margin

■ GOP candidate puts forth ideas like cutting regulations, jettisoning Energy Department.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The problem with talking about an energy policy is nobody wants to talk about it.

Not unless gasoline hits $2 a gallon. Or New Englanders are frozen out of their homes.

Until then, Bob Dole and President Clinton may not say much about energy, compared to issues like crime or campaign reform, but they aren't ignoring it altogether. They can't.

Both are receiving substantial contributions from the oil and natural gas industry — more than $686,000 between them so far — although Dole holds a nearly 4-1 margin in contributions.

And the industry holds powerful sway in places like Texas, where energy underpins jobs and the economy.

So Clinton and the Democrats are bragging about their energy record, buoyed by the fact that the oil and gas industry is seeing some of its best days in 30 years.

Dole and the Republicans are putting forth a few ideas, like cutting regulations and jettisoning the Energy Department. Dole challenges the Clinton record, contending that the administration hasn't done enough to lift regulatory burdens, cut taxes and open federal lands to drilling.

"They are anti-growth, they are anti-energy, and they think fossil fuel is a dirty word," said Washington lawyer William Scherman, an adviser to the Dole campaign.

On issues that pit environment against energy, the former usually prevails, Clinton critics charge. The administration has spurned industry demands to explore for oil in the Arctic National Wildlife Reserve in Alaska, despite a showing that oil production there could be done with minimal interference.

Consequently, many oil and gas executives, who generally lean right anyway, haven't warmed up to Clinton.

"The Clinton administration is extremely biased toward the environmental movement, and that is very hard for people in the energy business to accept," said George Alcorn, president of Alcorn Exploration in Houston.

Others are left in a quandary.

"Their hearts are with Dole, but they've had a lot of luck working with the Clinton administration," said one Washington lobbyist who didn't want to be named.

Clinton's Energy Department clicks off a list of accomplishments that it hopes curry favor with the industry. They

Death of student at OC prompts preventative meningitis treatment

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — In the wake of the sudden death of a 19-year-old Odessa College student Sunday from possible bacterial meningitis, OC administrators are working with the Ector County Health Department to provide "preventative treatment" to those who had close contact with the student.

Jesse P. Sosa, a second-year member of the OC golf team from El Paso, died Sunday afternoon in Medical Center Hospital.

"We're shocked and saddened by the passing of this fine young man," Vance Gipson, OC president, said Monday in a written statement.

Sue Blair, vice president for student life, said the health department has recommended treatment for anyone who had direct, prolonged contact with Sosa during the days immediately before he became ill late Saturday afternoon.

"The college is taking all precautions to see that preventative treatment is provided for faculty, resident-hall students, Sosa's fellow team members and classmates, and others," Ms.

Hollywood Theaters' 10-screen complex to open doors Nov. 8

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Midland's newest movie theater, the 10-screen Hollywood Theaters complex located west of Target on Loop 250 and Midland Drive, will officially open its doors Nov. 8, officials announced Monday.

The opening coincides with the release of the new Mel Gibson movie Ransom, according to Tracy Bundy, director of marketing for the Dallas-based company.

"We wanted to get that movie for the new theater," she said.

A grand-opening celebration is scheduled for Nov. 21, Ms. Bundy said, with the winner of the "Name the Theater" contest to be announced at that time. Other events include musical acts and free admittance and concessions during the celebration. Ms. Bundy said further details would be announced later in the month.

In addition to the new 10-screen theater being constructed on Loop 250 near Midland Drive, Hollywood Theaters earlier

Jewell describes his 88-day ordeal, lashes out at FBI, media for actions

ATLANTA (AP) — For 88 days, Richard Jewell stoically stood his ground, professing his innocence while he was branded the FBI's chief suspect in the Olympic park pipe bombing. Finally cleared by prosecutors, the weight of suspicion lifted, he let his guard down and cried.

The tears came Monday as he recalled the bodies of friends injured by the blast, and when he turned to his mother, who buried her head in her hand. "Mom, thanks for standing by me and believing in me," he said, his voice choking. "I love you."

Another emotion — anger — came out as he lashed out at reporters and investigators who had depicted him as the man who brought the specter of terrorism to the Summer Olympics.

But at the end of the press conference, he calmly delivered a message.

"I thank God that it has now ended, and that you now know what I have known all along," he said in a firm voice. "I am an innocent man."

Mediation sessions begin for Lee High varsity cheerleaders

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Lee High School varsity cheerleader problems — which school officials refuse to reveal, but the county attorney said border on prosecutable behavior — were discussed behind closed doors Monday evening.

All 16 cheerleaders were expected to attend the first mediation session in an attempt to work out "their problems," said Susan Webb, spokeswoman for Midland Independent School District.

The cheerleading squad was recently suspended from engaging in cheerleading activities, apparently as a result of those problems.

Ms. Webb declined to expand on the nature of "internal strife" among the cheerleaders.

WEATHER WATCH

Warmer today with high near 70

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high near 70 and west winds at 15 to 25 mph and gusty, according to the National Weather Service.

Tonight will be fair with a low between 40 and 45.

Wednesday is expected to be mostly sunny with a high between 70 and 75.

Monday's high was 52 compared to the record high for that date of 91, set in 1980. Monday's low was 44 compared to that date's low of 34, set in 1980.

STATE

Skies were generally cloudy across Texas on Monday, although more rain fell in already saturated areas and flash flood watches were posted in several parts of the state.

Most of west Central Texas remained under a flash flood watch through the night after heavy rains of 3 to 6 inches saturated the ground Sunday night and early Monday. Major lowland flooding occurred along the Llano River over Kimble and Mason counties.

A flash flood watch also was in effect in eight West Texas counties. A strong upper level low pressure system that moved into the region increased the chance for additional precipitation.

The northwestern half of North Texas was under a flash flood watch with rain and thunderstorms predicted. Elsewhere, conditions were cloudy and humid with a few showers over far eastern and far southwestern areas. Temperatures varied from the 50s to the upper 70s across the area.

More rain and thunderstorms are on tap today in central and east portions of the region. Highs will be in the 70s and 80s, with lows in the 40s and 50s.

In South Texas, a cold front interacted with an upper-level disturbance prompting repeat showers and thunderstorms. Numerous flash flood warnings and river flood warnings were posted over the Hill Country. Twelve inches of rain had fallen at Harper in Gillespie County since Sunday evening.

Otherwise, skies were mostly cloudy across the region. Temperatures east of the front were in the 80s and 90s and in the 50s west of it.

The forecast calls for some clearing in the Hill Country as the front begins to push east. Highs will range from 70 to 90 degrees with lows varying widely from the 50s to the 70s.

Cloudy skies continued across West Texas along with areas of light rain, drizzle and fog. Afternoon temperatures ranged from the 50s to the 70s. Skies will become mostly sunny today with highs in the 60s and 70s and lows in the 40s and 50s, except for 30s in the northwest and mountains.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms blanketed much of the Northeast, some mid-Atlantic states and parts of the Tennessee Valley Monday while southern and central Texas got soaked with as much as a foot of rain.

Snow showers continued in northern Arizona and New Mexico as well as southern Utah and Colorado, although they were somewhat lighter than the last few days. They were expected to taper off over New Mexico later in the night.

Another storm began moving into the Pacific Northwest, kicking up strong winds and dumping rain on Washington state. It also brought snow showers into northern Idaho and northwestern Montana.

A cold front moving over New England dumped showers on Maine and many coastal cities as far south as Virginia. Part of that front left a few scattered showers and thunderstorms across the Tennessee Valley.

Much of the Southeast, including Georgia, South Carolina, Alabama and Florida, was sunny and mild.

But thousands of homes in southern and central Texas were without power after strong storms dumped as much as a foot of rain in the 24-hour period beginning Sunday.

Hundreds of flights were canceled or diverted at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, and the Rio, Guadalupe, and Llano rivers spilled their banks, making roads impassable and stranding some motorists.

The Llano crested at 30 feet — 18 feet above flood stage — and Llano County sheriff's deputies were evacuating homes downriver. Severe showers and thunderstorms were expected again today from Texas to Kansas.

The remainder of the Southwest was expected to clear up as a low pressure system heads northeast, making its way into the central Plains by today.

Temperatures around the Lower 48 states Monday ranged from a morning low of zero at Laramie, Wyo., to early afternoon readings of 93 around Texas, at Harlingen, Kingsville and Corpus Christi.

LEE: Varsity squad starts mediation

(From 1A)

Asked if school officials would disclose the problems upon resolution, she replied: "I don't think the school district can do that."

Ms. Webb downplayed the problem when asked if it involved delinquent or criminal behavior.

Nevertheless, County Attorney Mark Dettman said he planned to attend the mediation in an official capacity. "From a prosecutor's standpoint, I'm going to be there to nip this in the bud before it goes any further," he said.

Dettman likened the County Attorney Office's role as analogous to intervening in a dispute among neighbors to prevent filing of charges.

Asked if the problems were criminal in nature, he replied: "It could ... if it keeps going. It sure could."

Dettman said an investigator with his office had a "whole notebook full of police reports" related to the problem.

Dettman said the problems appear to be something that has been going on for several years and, "it seems to be escalating."

As for specifics, Dettman said he would know more about the issue after being better briefed by his investigator and attending the mediation.

The public was barred from the mediation solely because the cheerleaders were minors, Ms. Webb said.

Resolution of the problems likely will take more than Monday evening's mediation, she said.

Blair said.

She added that those for whom treatment is recommended are in the process of being contacted. The health department will administer an oral antibiotic from 10 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 4:30 p.m. today, she said.

The recommended dosage is two 300-milligram tablets of Rifampin twice a day for two days, according to Toby Cross, Odessa's health department administrator.

include lower royalties for deep-water drilling in the Gulf of Mexico, permitting export of Alaska North Slope oil for the first time in 23 years and authorizing the sale of California's Elk Hills Naval Petroleum Reserve, one of the nation's largest oil and gas fields.

Clinton also signed legislation to untangle the system of royalty payments that the federal government receives from companies drilling on public land.

For sure, the Republican-led Congress passed all of these measures. But Clinton's Energy Department can claim several of them as being part of a blueprint for energy initiatives laid out in December 1993 — which, overall, has been a patchwork of hits and misses.

"You don't get everything," you succeed on what you can," said Kyle Simpson, associate deputy energy secretary who handles much of the department's oil policy.

There's been enough perceived successes, however, that Clinton has lured some converts.

One is Mac McFarland, president of the California Independent Petroleum Association, who wrote of his support of Clinton in a newsletter to the group's 500 members.

"This administration and President Clinton have done some very positive things, particularly for us in California," said McFarland, an independent producer in Santa Fe Springs, Calif.

He cited the sale of Elk Hills, which holds the promise of operating more efficiently in private hands and has a lighter crude that can be mixed with California's heavier, tarry crudes. And he mentioned lifting of the export ban on Alaskan crude, which helped raise oil prices on the West Coast.

But he acknowledges his endorsement "was controversial within our organization. Most of our members are conservative, and many of them are Republican, as generally am I," he said.

He feared enough of a backlash that he repeatedly emphasized that the endorsement was his own and not the organization's.

But for every Mac McFarland, there are more oil executives like Lew Ward, chairman of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, who blames the Clinton administration for everything from failing to tackle an often unhelpful energy bureaucracy to barring access to oil exploration on federal lands.

"We need to be drilling twice as many wells as we're drilling now," said Ward, a Dole supporter who operates his own oil business in Enid, Okla.

Dole supports more drilling and oil exploration in the Arctic wilderness preserve. The Energy Department should be eliminated, he said, because it is a waste of money whose functions could be split among other agencies.

He wants to reform the Superfund environmental cleanup law and opposes expansion of the Toxic Release Inventory, which imposes heavy reporting requirements on oil and gas producers.

But Dole does not embrace every oil industry position. His campaign told Hart's Oil and Gas World, a trade publication, that Dole wants to extend the moratorium against drilling off the Florida coast. He is also a longtime supporter of subsidies for ethanol, a corn-based gasoline component that is the base of the oil industry.

Still, the oil industry has by and large stuck by Dole.

Dole received $75,545 from political action committees and $480,545 for the presidential election cycle through Sept. 5.

Clinton collected $130,010 from oil and gas industry executives during the same period, based on an analysis of Federal Election Commission reports by the Center for Responsive Politics in Washington, a contributions watchdog group.

Houston-based Enron Corp. is the top giver to both campaigns.

Dole's top five donations came in the following amounts and order: Enron, $75,250; Koch Industries, Wichita, Kan., $39,700; Atlantic Richfield, Los Angeles, $20,250; Houston-based Coastal Corp., $15,750; and Panhandle Eastern Corp. (now known as PanEnergy), $12,750.

Clinton's top five donations were: Enron, $11,100; Occidental Petroleum, Los Angeles, $8,000; Coastal Corp., $7,000; Coulson Oil Co., Little Rock, Ark., $6,000; and Global Petroleum, New Bedford, Mass., $6,000.

ORDEAL: Jewell lets down guard, cries at press conference

Richard Jewell speaks through tears at a press conference in Marietta, Ga., Monday.

Olympic Park — the informal gathering place for spectators at the Games — killed one woman outright, was blamed for a cameraman's death and injured more than 100.

Jewell initially was hailed as a hero for alerting authorities to a suspicious knapsack and helping to evacuate the area. He gave numerous interviews until, three days after the bombing, The Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported he was a suspect.

Reporters stalked out his apartment complex for days and followed his every move, while Jewell refused to comment. His mother, Barbara, in August tearfully begged President Clinton to "end this nightmare."

"I felt like a hunted animal, followed constantly, waiting to be killed," Jewell said. "The media said I fit the profile of a lone bomber. That was a lie. The media said I was a frustrated police wannabe. That was a lie. I was, then and now, a law enforcement officer."

On Saturday, federal prosecutors gave Jewell's attorneys a letter clearing him as a suspect. To Jewell and his attorneys, the letter is a weak attempt at an apology.

"While the government can tell you that I am an innocent man, the government's letter cannot give me back my good name or my reputation," Jewell said.

"In their mad rush to fulfill their own personal agendas, the FBI and the media almost destroyed me and my mother."

His lawyers plan to sue the Journal-Constitution and NBC for comments Tom Brokaw made in early news reports about the bombing. The Journal-Constitution on Monday defended its stories about Jewell as "accurate and appropriate."

A lawsuit against the FBI is being considered. "I don't have enough words, I can't cuss enough, to describe the way they have treated this man," said Watson Bryant, one of Jewell's lawyers.

He also lashed out at the FBI over affidavits released Monday that were used to gain warrants for searches of Jewell's home and other property in the days after the bombing, saying they are "full of half-truths."

"I think the American public should be shocked at how little it takes for the government to get a search warrant," Bryant said. "Who are these people?"

FBI spokesman Jay Spadafora declined to respond.

As he did after the bombing, Jewell again Monday tried to place the hero label on others, such as officers who placed their bodies between the package and the crowd.

somewhat" or "serious true anecdotes."

Among the Southwest's legendary folklorists, who are kindred in spirit to the late J. Frank Dobie, at the storytelling festival was Crane folklorist-author-bard Paul Patterson, who is into his 87th year.

"I taught Elmer (Kelton) everything he knows," jested Patterson, who, in fact, was the Western novelist's writing mentor more than 50 years ago.

Patterson recited some of his writings, including poems, and recalled his book, "Crazy Women in the Rafters," about forlorn pioneers on the plains of West Texas even before his time.

"A lot of women lost their mind through loneliness, just like sheep-herders lose touch with reality,"

In his reflective and gentle tone, Patterson told of a widow who "dug up" her late husband and resettled up on the High Plains of Texas. "So I guess they got things straightened out," he mused.

And Patterson told of his endearment to creatures and critters, especially mules, donkeys and horses, and then all the rest, including coyotes, panthers and lobo wolves. Even rattlesnakes and Mexican lions have their roles to play.

Patterson was emphatic when he declared that he "learned a lot of wisdom" in dealing with work and wild animals.

"Don't ever get mad when somebody calls you a jackass," he said. "I consider that a compliment, and I will tell you why."

And so he did. In brief, donkeys are smart and wise animals, Patterson said. "They know how to survive and thrive even in hard and tricky times."

"All kinds of animals have compassion," Patterson told his fellow storytellers and fans under shade trees and tent. "One bull won't kill another bull," he said. "He will just let him know who's boss."

Midland College's James Fuller switched roles from lecturer to storyteller and told tales of moral instruction.

"Storytelling is a manifestation of the oral tradition," said Fuller, 54. "Storytelling evokes emotion. It is a way of being creative, stimulating an audience's imagination. Storytelling is a primary vehicle for retaining one's cultural identity."

Among his tales was the audience-participation story of an eagle who assumed that it was an eagle simply because the great bird was raised in a pen of ground-scratching chickens.

Time passed. But one daybreak, as the sun beamed over the horizon, the magnificent eagle was inspired into discovery, realized its identity and potential, flew away and soared with the wind on great wings.

"Storytelling becomes a common ground that brings diverse cultures together in a common context," Fuller said, "and that is sharing true stories or fictional stories to define and redefine life's experiences."

Lubbock-based Eric Strong, who is one of Fuller's former students, noted that "some of the stories are so old, older than the ABCs, older than the pyramids, older than hieroglyphics."

Strong, whose stories include parables from the Old World setting, as in Africa, said that many stories "teach behavior, how to respect, how to be respectful."

He cited "Aesop's Fables."

"Something inside of our nature makes us perk up," Strong said of the storytelling art.

"But today, I think the storyteller has been (largely) replaced by television" by which "you don't get that interaction" between storyteller and audience.

San Marcos storyteller Doc Moore asserted that "there is a revival in storytelling."

"With a story, I say the words, but you make the pictures," Moore, 57, said. "Now with the television set, they say the words and make the pictures, and all you have to do is sit there."

Moore told the story about a big U.S. industry setting up a television station with many channels in Africa.

"The people came for awhile," Moore said, "but they weren't going back to watch the television."

After awhile, the big industry's head man approached the people's spokesman.

"Chief, tell me, why aren't the people using the television opportunity?" he asked. "That television knows more stories than your storyteller."

"Yeah," the chief answered, "but the storyteller knows me."

Moore reasoned that "there is a personal relationship that the storyteller builds with the people because those people are building their own stories in their own mind. They are running that tape themselves."

Moore's stories may be rooted in Texas history or in fable.

He recalled the 1833 story of Texan "Josiah Wilbarger who got scalped by the (Comanche) Indians," who "thought he was dead ... but he came back to life" and was rescued. "That one has some history basis to it. A lot of them are a little bit more far-fetched."

Alpine storyteller Keith West, a Chickasaw Indian who was raised in Oklahoma, told Garrison Keillor-type small-town stories.

"Folks think that small towns have gone away," West said. "They look for a simpler time. Of course, I never thought that small towns were simple by any means or stretch of the imagination. My plate is more crowded now in a small town than it ever was in a large town."

West is on the teaching faculty at Sul Ross State University.

"Folks have got to realize that small towns are not based on location or geography," West said. "They are based on a feeling that you have for your fellow persons. Small towns are a place where somebody gets in trouble, everybody works and helps them out. And if somebody makes a mistake, they make sure they don't forget it, either. As long as you keep the idea of a small town in your heart, you are never going to go too far astray."

Midland College creative-writing instructor Rebecca Watson said that "the longer I teach, the more I realize" that stories abound in everything and everywhere. "It is a huge, overriding category" from before short stories to beyond novels. "Every poem has a story, even if it is just an image."

"And when students write their compositions," Ms. Watson said, "they are writing a story, even if it is an argument that they are making. Even if they are taking sides on some kind of issue, there is still a story there. ... History is a story. ... Every archetype is a story. You split the atom, and you have got a story."

However, she lamented that "So many times, by the time we recognize how important stories are, we have lost our older people who have stories."

And from her own study of genealogy, Ms. Watson has been even more impressed with the importance of storytelling, the importance of asking questions and the importance of listening.

There is wisdom and humor in storytelling, noted Keith West, the Alpine storyteller. From his youth, he recalled this bit of sage advice that he uses in his tales: "Always have a smile on your face (like an opossum), because people will wonder what you are up to."

Crews continue search for missing people in rubble of collapsed building

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Using cranes, shovels and their bare hands, rescue workers pulled 15 survivors Monday from the ruins of a collapsed 12-story apartment building in a Cairo suburb, but dozens more were still missing.

By nightfall, a total of 15 bodies had been found in the rubble of the concrete-block and plaster building, which collapsed Sunday in Heliopolis, an upper middle-class residential and commercial suburb on the east side of Cairo.

Police said more than 60 others were still unaccounted for. Six people were rescued Sunday.

Scores of anxious relatives stood in the street Monday, many weeping and others too stunned to talk.

Anaheed Abdel-Messih, a woman in her 20s, said her parents were in an x-ray clinic in the building when it collapsed.

"I don't know if they are still alive," she cried. "It needs a miracle."

Dr. Adel el-Sharouni, Cairo's chief of emergency aid, said he had to amputate the arm of one victim and the leg of another to free them from the debris. "We couldn't get them out without the operation," he said.

Police detained a building contractor and an engineering consultant for questioning Monday, saying they may have been responsible for weakening the 30-year-old building's structure by ordering the removal of walls during the renovation of an apartment.

The building's owner also was arrested, police said. Many buildings in Cairo are poorly constructed. Building owners often add floors beyond the number allowed on their permits, contractors cheat on materials and there is little government enforcement of zoning or construction codes.

Gen. Mukbil Shafr, commander of the army's engineer corps who was supervising the rescue work, told Egypt's Middle East News Agency he believed changes had been made to the columns supporting the front of the building, causing the collapse.

A neighbor, Ahmed Mohammed, said some residents of the building jumped from their balconies as the building crumbled Sunday evening. He said he heard two loud noises, then could see nothing but a huge cloud of dust being thrown up by the collapsing walls.

All but the back side of the building fell, piling debris five stories high.

Rescue workers dug through the night Sunday and all day Monday trying to find survivors in the building, which had more than 40 apartments and several offices.

Cranes moved huge slabs of concrete, sniffer dogs prowled the ruins and special sound devices were brought in to listen for tapping or calls for help.

A police major general at the scene said it would take days to clear the rubble.

Jewish settler detained in death of Palestinian

HUSSAN, West Bank (AP) — Israeli soldiers fired tear gas and rubber bullets at Palestinian stone-throwers Monday, after a Jewish settler was detained in the death of a 12-year-old Palestinian boy who was killed by a blow to the head.

The Palestinians hurled stones at Israeli troops driving along a bypass road around the village of Hussan, where Palestinian witnesses said the settler struck the boy, Hilmi Shawash, with a pistol butt Sunday.

An army jeep overturned under the hail of stones and four soldiers were injured, settlers said. Soldiers responded with tear gas and rubber bullets until the crowd dispersed.

Settler leaders said the detained man, whose name was not released, chased a group of Palestinian boys who had stoned his car Sunday and Hilmi apparently was injured when he ran and fell.

An autopsy performed Monday showed the boy was struck in the left side of the head and the blow caused fatal internal bleeding, Israeli police spokesman Boaz Goldberg said.

It was not clear from the autopsy whether Hilmi fell or was beaten. Police were still investigating, Goldberg said.

The detained settler is the security chief of the Hadar Beitart settlement, a cluster of 10 homes about a mile from Hussan.

Akiva Ovitz, a settler leader in the area, said the detained man was responding Sunday to a report that Palestinian children were stoning cars on the road leading to Hadar Beitart, when his own car was stoned.

She said the settler chased the stone-throwers, and one of the boys fell and hurt himself. The settler administered first aid and called an ambulance, Ovitz said.

Ann Morgan:

"Here are the 15 fat-burning foods that cause you to lose weight..."

Everyone who will try them can lose five to six pounds during the first week. Get results!

Nutritionists have discovered that certain foods cause you to lose weight. These are foods with fat-burning calories. The more you eat, the more weight you lose.

In a report that you can receive without obligation, you will discover what these foods are, why they cause you to lose weight, and how.

QUESTION: How can certain foods cause you to lose weight?

ANSWER: Experiments have shown that 15 particularly healthful and nutritious foods (some of which are vegetables and fruits) burn more calories than they contribute. So the more you eat, the more you burn off your excess weight. These foods (with fat-burning calories) are transformed into energy, not fat.

Q: How is this possible?

A: The power of fat-burning foods to dissolve excess fat will seem obvious to you when you understand how your body accumulates fat.

You are born with a certain number of "adipose" cells. These adipose cells swell up and multiply when you take on too much weight. As soon as your metabolism slows down, this allows carbohydrate-based foods to be changed into fat. This fat is stored.

Therefore, you cannot lose weight by draining the fat from the cells.

You can only do this in three ways: omit foods that are rich in fat (dieting); intensive exercising; or eating foods with fat-burning calories that burn off the fat and drain it from your cells.

Obviously, it is the last method that is far and away the easiest because it requires no effort, no deprivation.

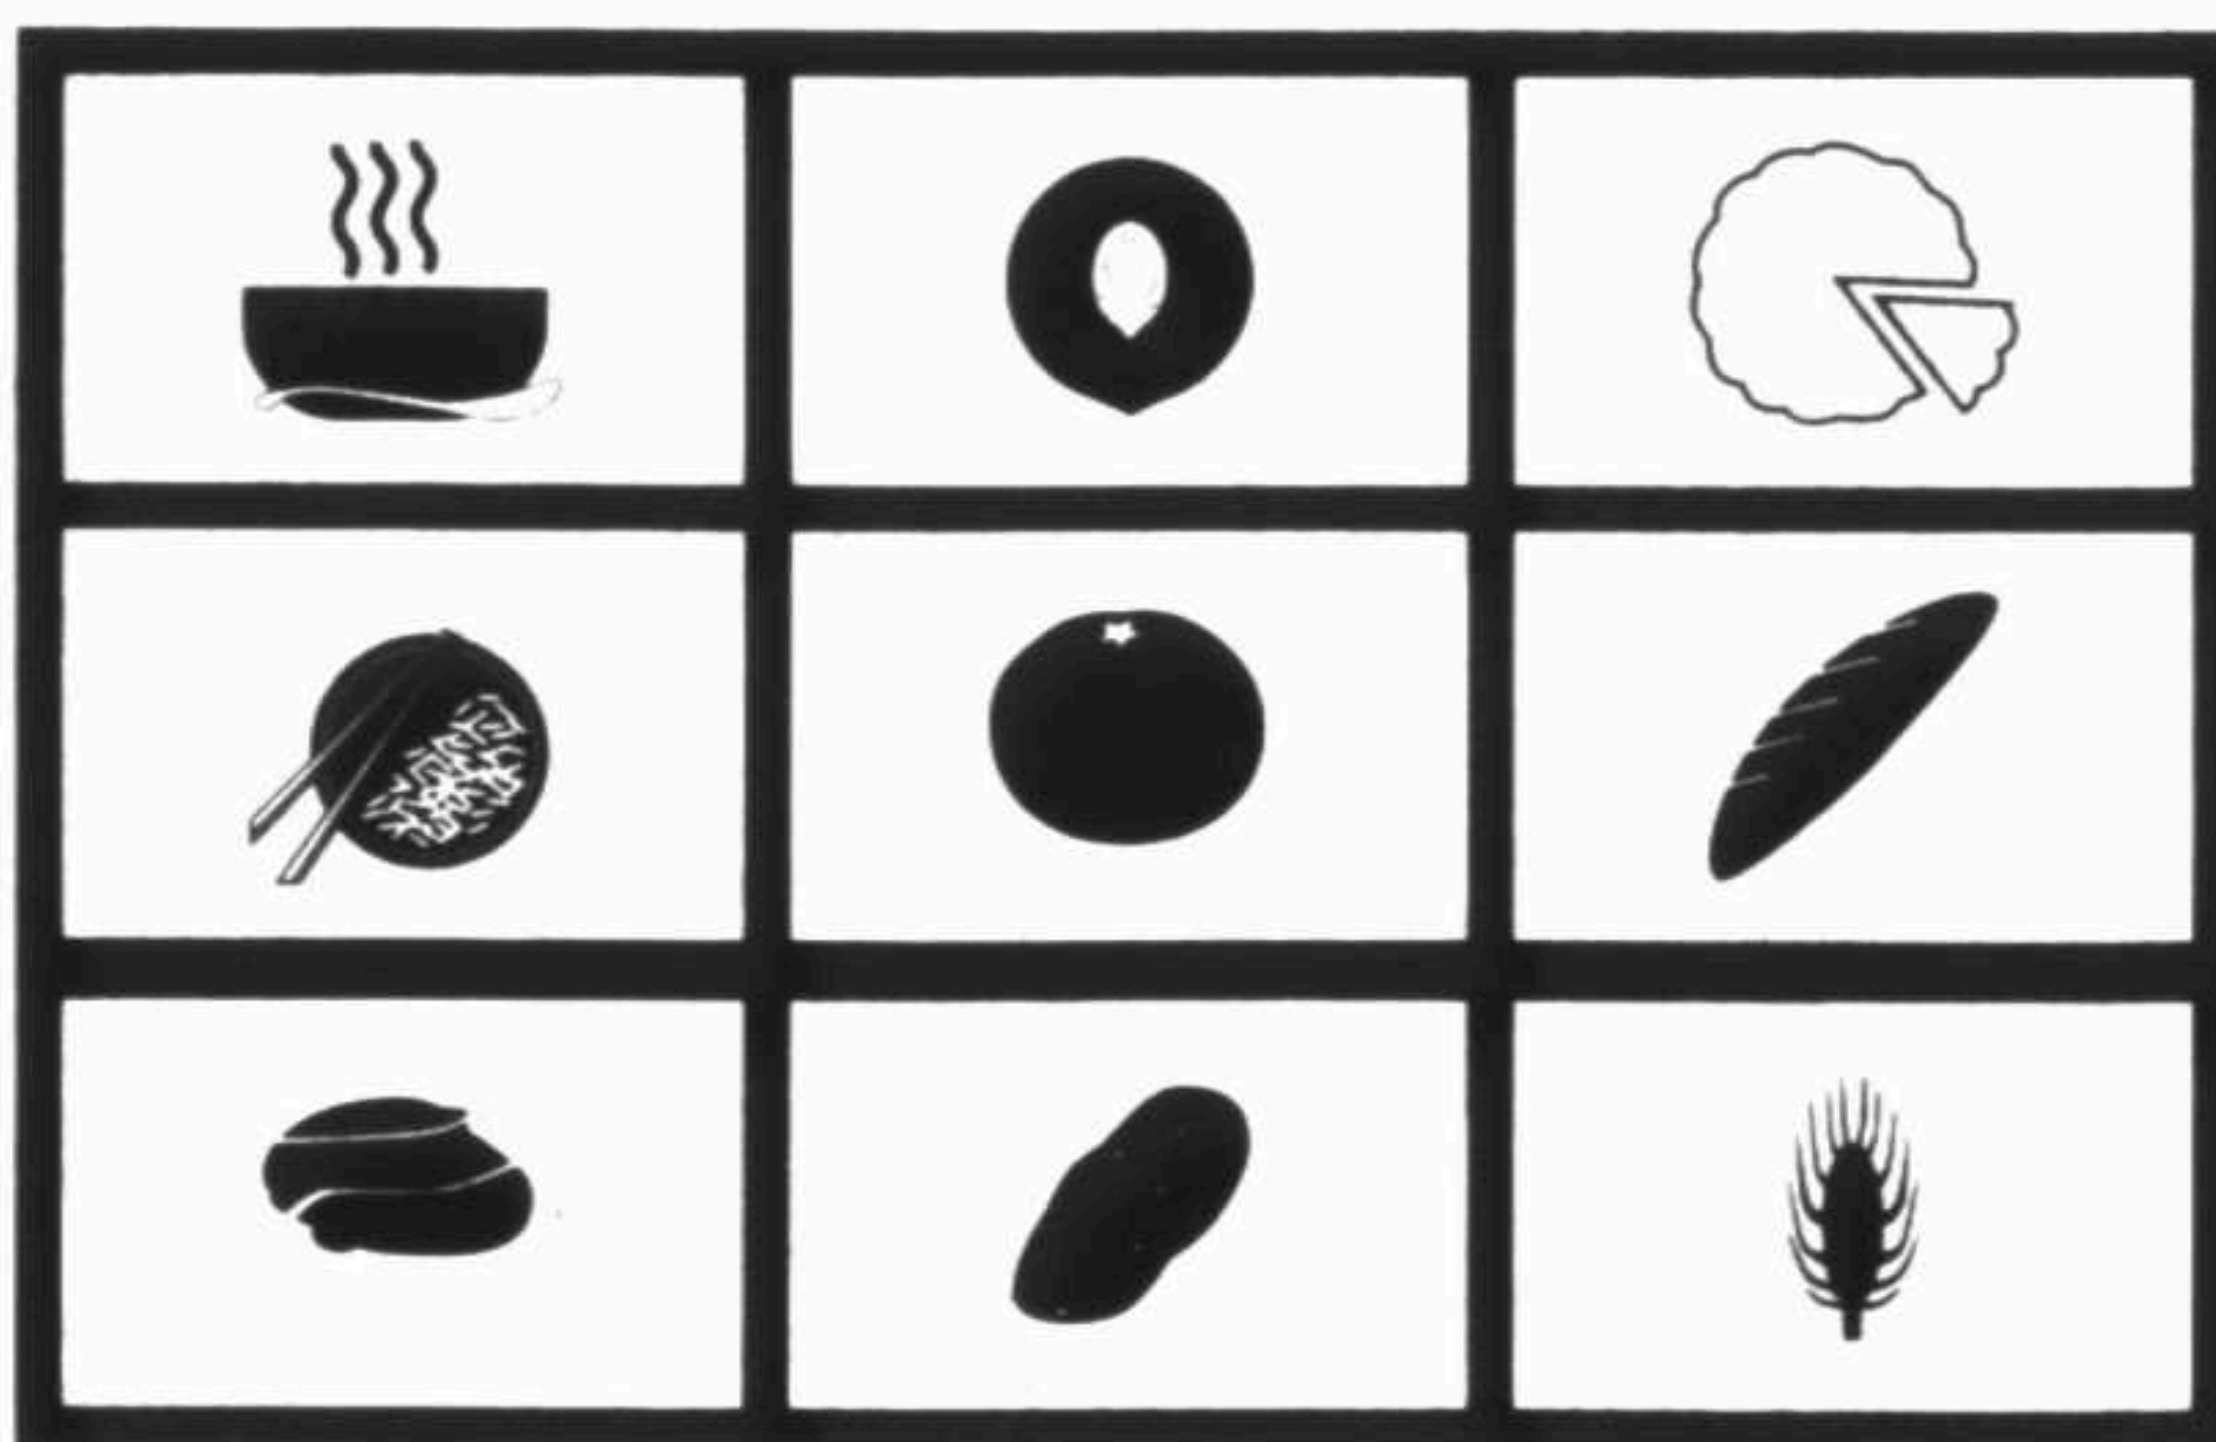

Q: How many pounds can you lose per week?

A: If you are more than 20 pounds overweight, you lose an average of five to six pounds in the first week, and three to four pounds in subsequent weeks.

If you are more than 20 pounds overweight, you will lose weight even more quickly. Some people with more than 40 pounds to lose have lost up to 7 pounds in the first week.

Q: Do you have to follow some kind of special diet? Or is it just a question of adding fat-burning calorie foods to your normal diet?

A: You don't have to follow any diet, or change anything in your lifestyle. You can eat pastries, sauces, butter, cake, anything you want.

LOSE WEIGHT! An Amazing Discovery: Fat-burning foods
Now you can lose weight easily, even if you eat a little too much

The only thing you have to do is add fat-burning calorie foods to your normal diet... and watch your pounds and rolls of fat disappear.

Q: How many fat-burning calorie foods do I have to add to my normal diet?

A: Just add 25% of your normal diet. But you can exceed that amount because the more fat-burning calorie foods you eat, the more quickly you lose weight.

Q: Instead of adding these fat-burning calorie foods, can I just replace 25% of my normal diet with them?

A: Yes, because that is not really important. The only thing that is important is to absorb at least 25% fat-burning calorie foods because these are the ones that burn off the excess fat and cause you to lose weight.

Q: Will it be easy for me to maintain my ideal weight after losing my excess pounds?

A: Most people who lose weight with diets of pills or other methods quickly gain back the weight they have lost.

But with fat-burning calorie foods, it is different. The only thing you have to do to keep slim is to add fat-burning calorie foods to your normal diet.

Q: What are these fat-burning calorie foods? Where can you get them?

A: All these fat-burning calorie foods are natural foods. There are 15 of them. Among them are fruits, vegetables and other natural foods that you will find in any supermarket or at your grocer.

Q: Is there any proof that people have tried fat-burning calorie foods and have really lost weight?

A: Everyone who has added fat-burning calorie foods to their normal diet has lost weight. Here are some good things that could happen to you:

"I had tried everything..."

I have lost 35 pounds. All my life I have suffered from being fat and I had tried everything to lose weight. The fat-burning calorie foods are the only thing that have ever worked for me. I feel like a new woman. My husband also lost 23 pounds. We are delighted to have rediscovered the joy of life that we had long since lost.

"My excess weight melted away..."

In three weeks, I lost 19 pounds of excess weight. Since then I have not regained that fat. Because I had already tried so many methods and medications to lose weight, I no longer believed in any of them. But I tried this anyway. Thank heaven! Maybe my experience can be of help to other people.

"I thought I would be fat all my life..."

I often dreamed of becoming slim, but nothing I ever tried ever helped me lose weight. Now I have discovered fat-burning calories. I lost 23 pounds in two short weeks and a total of 38 pounds more quickly than I would have dared to hope. My husband told me last night that I am prettier than I ever have been.

Q: I have read in a magazine that fat-burning calorie foods not only help lose weight, but also improve your health. Is that true?

A: Yes. Fat-burning calorie foods were discovered by nutritionist physicians during their search for healthier foods. When you add fat-burning calorie foods to your normal diet, you lose weight but you also lower and normalize your cholesterol rate. This always contributes to your health.

Q: I have already tried bean pod capsules, pineapple capsules, other methods, other diets, and nothing helped me lose weight. Why would it be different this time?

A: Because the process of fat-burning calories is natural: you burn off more calories than you absorb. Because everyone who has tried them has lost weight, there is no reason that it would work for everyone else and not for you. The results are so certain that you can try this at our risk, and with no obligation.

Try these foods that help you lose weight, with no obligation and completely at our risk. Decide only AFTER having lost your excess pounds if you want to keep the Report.

HERE IS MY PROPOSAL:

If you do not lose at least five pounds per week, within 90 days return the Report on "Fat-Burning Foods that Cause Weight Loss" and I will send you your money back no later than nine days after receipt of your returned package.

Therefore, either you lose at least five pounds per week until you reach your ideal weight, or I will refund the price of the report.

This is unconditional, no questions asked. This is a written, formal obligation on my part.

No Risk for You

You can, therefore, accept this trial offer simply out of curiosity, because you are not risking a single cent.

Why Would I Dare Make This Offer?

Because I am convinced that when you have lost your excess pounds, you will be so happy that you will want to keep the Report on foods that make you lose weight.

Because everyone, absolutely everyone, who has adopted these foods that cause you to lose weight have lost their excess pounds.

Because there is no reason why it would work for others and not work for you.

"... They possess certain special properties that add zip to your system and help it melt away unhealthy pounds. You have to try them to see the results!"
— Ann Morgan

Read this Only If You Have Decided Not To Take This Trial Offer

1. This trial offer is entirely at my risk. If you do not lose at least five pounds per week, all you have to do is return the Report on foods that cause weight loss within 90 days. I will then send you your money back no later than 9 days after receiving your package. This is an unconditional, no-questions-asked guarantee.

2. You eat as much as you want, and anything you want. All you have to do is add one-fourth fat-burning calorie foods to your normal diet.

3. You are the one to decide if you want to keep the Report or if you prefer to return it for a refund. You may even return the Report after having lost your excess weight, but I don't believe you would do it.

4. Now you have the opportunity of changing your appearance and your life without going on a diet. Even if you have been overweight for years, it's not important.

Everyone who has tried fat-burning calorie foods has lost weight. These foods must make you lose weight too, or it won't cost you a single cent.

If you don't want to lose weight for yourself, do it for your husband, your children, and for your health!

Rwanda decides to reject U.N. proposal for peace talks with Zaire

N.Y. Times Service

KIGALI, Rwanda — As fighting continued to spread chaos in eastern Zaire, Rwanda on Monday rejected a U.N. proposal for peace talks with that country, saying it was not responsible for a revolt by members of the same ethnic group that controls the Rwandan government.

"In no way is Rwanda involved in this," Foreign Minister Anastase Gasana told diplomats and reporters. "We don't want to be a scapegoat for their problems."

Zaire has accused Rwanda of sending in troops to help Zairian Tutsi rebels, who are resisting a government order to return to Rwanda, a land their ancestors left more than 200 years ago.

Diplomats fear that the conflict between the rebels and the Zairian army could grow into a regional war. U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, has called on the two countries to meet and resolve the conflict.

But Rwandan officials, who have been fighting insurgencies based in Zaire for two years, made it clear that they had no interest in peace talks.

At a press conference, President Pasteur Bizimungu strongly denied that Rwandan troops had invaded Zaire to fight alongside the Tutsi rebels, who have in the last nine days seized a border region that used to be the base for guerillas of the Hutu ethnic group fighting the Tutsi-dominated governments in Rwanda and Burundi. There are a million Hutu refugees in eastern Zaire.

Bizimungu, a Hutu, also rejected allegations that the Rwandan army had attacked a refugee camp near Goma on Saturday morning, killing at least 6 people in an artillery barrage and sending 195,000 refugees fleeing westward.

Waving placards and maps depicting the Rwandan kingdom of the 19th century, Bizimungu pointed out that the Tutsi now living in Zaire had been part of an ancient Tutsi kingdom. Their lands became part of Zaire in 1910, he said, when European powers redrew the map.

"They are in their homelands," he said, "and if somebody wants to uproot them, if someone wants to disown them, let that country disown the land as well."

But despite his hinting at a greater Rwandan kingdom, Bizimungu took pains to emphasize that Rwanda was not interested in annexing eastern Zaire. He said that Rwanda did not have the resources to intervene in the conflict and that other countries had a responsibility to stop what he called a genocide against Zairian Tutsi.

"Morally, I support these people," he said. "Between extermination and fighting, I would advise them to resist."

As the president spoke in Kigali, the Tutsi rebels traded mortar and small-arms fire with Zairian soldiers in Bukavu, the regional capital of the south Kivu area. The rebels appeared to be pressing on the outskirts of the town, at the southern end of Lake Kivu. The Associated Press reported.

On the other end of the lake, near Goma, aid officials said the 195,000 refugees who abandoned a camp near the Rwandan border after it was attacked on Sunday were being resettled in another camp about nine miles into Zaire.

Goma was quiet on Monday, and no new fighting was reported in camps along the border, said Panos Mountzis, a spokesman for the U.N. High Commission for Refugees. Aid workers distributed high-protein biscuits to women and children and began setting up latrines and tents. The Mugunga camp now has more than 400,000 people, he said.

Anti-Taliban forces come together to prevent students' takeover

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Allied forces seeking to prevent the country's takeover by an army of religious students massed Monday 10 miles north of Kabul, while their fighter jets bombed Taliban positions on the edge of the capital. Soldiers loyal to warlord Rashid Dostum fought alongside former government troops led by the ousted military chief, Ahmed Shah Massoud.

The anti-Taliban forces were several thousand strong, reporters there said. Soldiers from a smaller Islamic sect known as Ismaili Muslims also arrived at the front line Monday to link up with Dostum and Massoud, they said.

Pilots loyal to Dostum conducted bombing runs outside the capital Monday. The attacks followed night bombing raids on the Kabul airport, on the northwestern edge of the city. It was the third straight day Dostum's jets bombed Kabul airport.

"Our forces are participating fully, whether on the defense or on the attack," said Gen. Yusuf, a spokesman at Dostum's headquarters in the northern city of Mazar-e-Sharif. "It's our planes that are bombing."

There have been no reports of injuries.

The Taliban army seized the capital on Sept. 27, ousting the government, and have captured two-thirds of the country in their campaign to impose their version of strict Islamic rule.

The military alliance against the Taliban formed soon after the capital fell, combining the forces of Dostum, Massoud, the Ismailis led by Jaffar Nauderi and a small Shiite sect led by Karim Khalili.

Peace envoys from the United Nations and Pakistan are trying to broker a cease-fire, but talks are deadlocked.

On Monday, Dostum's forces moved multiple-rocket launchers into place north of a key pass that the deposed government has been trying to capture for nearly a week.

Taliban soldiers are fiercely guarding the Khair Khay pass area, whose hills overlook Kabul, repulsing repeated attempts to claim it.

In Kabul, two bombs landed near the airport shortly after midnight. A third — a cluster bomb — hit a runway. Airport workers swept up the shrapnel so the airport could reopen, they said.

The Taliban retaliated Monday with at least three low-flying bombing runs over anti-Taliban positions north of the capital.

Taliban leaders say they are extending their rule in western regions previously run by Dostum, an assertion Dostum's spokesman denied. The two strategic northwestern provinces of Badghis and Faryab remained in Dostum's control, Yusuf said.

Dostum commands the second-largest fighting force after the Taliban.

Anthrax reported in central Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — At least nine people were infected with anthrax after eating contaminated beef and one died, Russian health officials said Monday.

The outbreak was in the village of Troitskoye in the Lipetsk region of central Russia, the Sanitary-Epidemiological Committee said in a statement.

The committee said officials had inadvertently distributed contaminated meat to schools and workers. About 1,500 people were thought to have eaten the meat or come in contact with diseased animals, and most are undergoing preventative treatment.

Anthrax, an infectious disease which normally afflicts animals, especially cattle and sheep, is caused by bacteria which remain in water and soil for years.

Infectious diseases, including anthrax, have been on the rise in Russia in the past few years with the steady deterioration of the state health-care system.

Health officials say 34 cases of anthrax were diagnosed last year, and 32 so far this year.

Dole speaks out against affirmative action programs

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Bob Dole, determined to win California supporters by seizing on a hotly debated ballot issue, criticized affirmative action programs Monday as "a blind alley in the search for equal justice."

In renewing his support for a state proposition opposing race- and sex-based preferences, Dole offered a broad indictment of affirmative action programs overall.

"We cannot fight the evil of discrimination with more discrimination," Dole said in his most lengthy explanation yet of his switch on the subject. Until the presidential campaign, Dole had supported affirmative action programs.

"I changed my position. You have the right to do that," Dole said, adding: "Not every day, as the White House does."

Dole has been on record in support of Proposition 209, which would end racial and sexual preferences in state hiring and education, but he has not spoken out forcefully on it until recently.

Trailing Clinton by double-digit margins in polls in most regions of the county, Dole is struggling to boost his candidacy in the final week of the campaign.

His latest effort came as House Republicans released a new 30-second TV ad telling voters that electing a Democratic Congress would amount to a "blank check" for Clinton — a tacit admission that Dole is likely to lose.

In a conference call with reporters, Republican National Committee Chairman Haley Barbour sought to play down that aspect of the ads, saying the TV spots "remind people of why they are against Clinton. ... They talk about what Clinton was like when he had a Democratic Congress."

Many prominent Republicans have been talking as if a Dole loss were inevitable. For his part, Dole told reporters, "I haven't heard any of them."

"We're going to be working every day," said Dole. He added that the Dole campaign's internal poll numbers show Clinton's lead in California down to single digits. "Looking good. Got new numbers today in our surveys. It can be done."

With that, Dole extended his California campaign swing for a fourth day. Instead of flying to Denver late Monday as originally planned, Dole was going to Newport Beach to film the last of his campaign ads.

A Los Angeles Times poll a week ago put Clinton's lead at 20 percentage points. Pollster Mervin Field, whose poll two weeks ago put Dole just 10 points back, suggested that Clinton's current lead is somewhere between 10 and 20 points.

Clinton, campaigning in St. Louis, opened a campaign swing through Midwestern states Monday by taking credit for the smallest annual budget deficit since 1981.

The president announced that the deficit for the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30 was $107.3 billion. The White House said the drop was due largely to a stronger economy than the administration had projected. It was the fourth year in a row the deficit has fallen.

Clinton trumpeted the "new good news about exactly how far the deficit has dropped since I took office." Republicans asserted they were responsible for bringing the deficit down, with Barbour calling it "a huge credit to the common sense Republican Congress which fought for spending constraints."

Later Monday, Dole hooked up with running mate Jack Kemp for an Orange County rally in Anaheim. "We need to carry Orange County big time," Dole said. The county, south of Los Angeles, usually votes Republican.

Ken Khachigian, Dole's chief California strategist, told reporters that internal overnight polls showed Clinton's lead over Dole had shrunk to 7 percent in the state. Independent pollsters have scoffed at such numbers.

But Dole told the Orange County rally not to believe the national polls. "You are the polls, right here," he said.

Meanwhile, in an interview with CNN, Dole pronounced his relationship with Kemp a good one, although he conceded "we don't talk together a lot."

As to his election prospects, Dole told CNN, "Win or lose, I'm not going to look back. ... It will either be one way or the other, but I'm not going to jump off a building or go over the cliff."

In his San Diego speech, Dole noted he saw "dozens and dozens of black men without work" on the streets of Washington and had wondered what affirmative action programs had done for them. "Absolutely nothing," he said.

Comic actor Morey Amsterdam dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Morey Amsterdam, the comic actor best known as the wisecracking television writer on "The Dick Van Dyke Show" died of a heart attack Monday. He was in his 80s.

Born in Chicago, Amsterdam started in vaudeville and performed in nightclubs before doing radio in the 1930s. In the late 1940s, he moved to television. In the 1960s hit sitcom, "The Dick Van Dyke Show," Amsterdam played Buddy Sorrell, part of a television writing team that included Dick Van Dyke and Rose Marie.

"There was something ageless with him. Probably 100,000 jokes in his head went with him," said Dick Van Dyke.

"He was just a very dear sweet man," said Rose Marie, who played Sally Rogers.

Amsterdam suffered a heart attack at home and died at Cedars Sinai Hospital early Monday, said hospital spokesman Ron Wise.

Keating message was on target

The message proclaimed by Oklahoma Gov. Frank Keating at the 34th annual meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association was not a new one. It has been proclaimed before. And, chances are, it will be proclaimed again.

Gov. Keating is correct. This nation does not now have a national energy policy and until it formulates one, it is operating kind of like a ship adrift — always in danger of being swamped by some tidal wave set into motion by oil moguls far from our own shores.

That's not the right attitude for a nation to have concerning something as vital as energy, which can realistically determine its ability to win a war or provide a stable source of fuel for a burgeoning population. It's risky and near-sighted.

It is important for those of us in energy-producing states," Keating told those attending the luncheon meeting Friday, "and even those in energy-consuming states, to be sensitive to the need for a policy encouraging the development of domestic oil and gas."

The governor could not have said it better. This nation should be encouraging as much domestic production of oil and gas as possible — and should have a national energy policy that spells out that thrust in black and white.

The Texas Railroad Commission has a program in force now to prevent the premature plugging of wells and Oklahoma has approved legislation offering tax incentives to prevent plugging such wells. Those kinds of aggressive programs are needed to help our domestic oil and gas industry.

This message cannot be repeated often enough: We need a national energy policy and we need it now.

ANOTHER VIEW

TV commercials may be greatest threat

Voters across the country must be groggy as well as bored and disenchanted at this point in the campaign season.

If one is to take the television commercials seriously, the voters are limited to a choice between soundbites.

Some of the scoundrels are bent on taxing and spending us into oblivion while the others are dead set on destroying Medicare, Social Security and education. ...

Some lawmakers concerned over bankrupting the system have tried to get a better handle on controlling the increases in Medicare costs. But there have been no proposed reductions in funds allocated for either Medicare or education. And no politician is foolish enough to advocate disbanding the Social Security system. ...

In short, no one is out to tax us to death or to let the elderly die of starvation or lack of medical attention.

Indeed, the greatest threat might be that some of the campaign commercials might scare some old folks to death!

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 29, the 363rd day of 1996. There are 63 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On Oct. 29, 1929, "Black Tuesday" descended upon the New York Stock Exchange. Prices collapsed amid panic selling and thousands of investors were wiped out as the Great Depression began.

On this date: In 1618, Sir Walter Raleigh, the English courtier, military adventurer and poet, was executed in London.

In 1682, the founder of Pennsylvania, William Penn, landed at what is now Chester, Penn.

In 1901, President William McKinley's assassin, Leon Czolgosz, was electrocuted.

In 1911, American newspaperman Joseph Pulitzer died in Charleston, S.C.

In 1923, the Republic of Turkey was proclaimed.

In 1940, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson drew the first number — 158 — in America's first peace-time military draft.

In 1947, former first lady Frances Cleveland Preston died in Baltimore at age 83.

In 1956, 40 years ago, during the Suez Canal crisis, Israel launched an invasion of Egypt's Sinai Peninsula.

In 1956, "The Huntley-Brinkley Report" premiered as NBC's nightly television newscast, replacing "The Camel News Caravan."

In 1966, 30 years ago, the National Organization for Women was founded. In 1967, the counter-culture musical "Hair" opened off-Broadway.

In 1979, on the 50th anniversary of the great stock market crash, anti-nuclear protesters tried but failed to shut down the New York Stock Exchange.

In 1994, a gunman fired more than two-dozen shots at the White House; Francisco Martin Duran was later convicted of trying to assassinate President Clinton and was sentenced to 40 years in prison.

Ten years ago: Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, Saudi Arabia's oil minister since 1962 and one of the best-known figures of OPEC, was dismissed.

Five years ago: On the eve of a historic Middle East peace conference in Spain, President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev met at the Soviet Embassy in Madrid, Spain, and expressed hope for a positive outcome. President Bush imposed trade sanctions against Haiti to pressure its new leaders to restore ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power.

One year ago: Palestinians burned American and Israeli flags and swore revenge for the assassination of Dr. Fathi Shakaki, the leader of the radical Islamic Jihad and a top architect of terror attacks against Israel. (Shakaki was gunned down three days earlier in Malta, reportedly by Israeli intelligence.)

One reason Dole is in trouble and Clinton isn't

One of the reasons (there are others) Bob Dole continues to lag behind Bill Clinton is the negative slant given by big media to the Dole campaign and the largely positive spin given the Clinton campaign.

aside our personal beliefs to present fair and balanced coverage.

Now comes a new survey in the October-November issue of "The Public Perspective," a Roper Center Review of Public Opinion and Polling, which reveals that the media have not been telling it to the public straight. While noting that reporters and newspaper editors are far more likely to identify with the Democratic Party than the Republican, "The data from our survey of reporters suggests that the journalistic goal of objectivity is more of an ideal than a practice. Evidence from our survey shows that the liberal and Democratic leanings of Washington reporters may, consciously or unconsciously, influence coverage of politics."

The Roper survey asked reporters to assess their coverage of the 1994 Contract With America, and 59 percent said they treated this topic only as an election-year campaign ploy, compared to 3 percent who treated it as a serious reform proposal. "That 6 in 10 reporters did not even in part consider the Contract story as a policy proposal in covering the issue suggests that the political orientations of journalists — orientations which we know to lean in the direction of the Democratic Party and liberal point of view — may have influenced their work." When journalists are asked how often their opinions affect their work, a shocking 78 percent said at least some of the time, including 16 percent who said often. Journalism certainly has changed from the days when news was reported objectively. According to the Roper survey, 62 percent of reporters and 79 percent of newspaper editors feel that they should be "suggesting potential solutions to social problems." That mandate used to be reserved for the op-ed page and broadcast essays labeled editorial or commentary. But today's thinly disguised editorializing is frequently done on the front page and in statements by network anchors and morning-show hosts that are designed to stroke the ones they support and confront those they oppose.

Concludes the Roper survey: "These findings further suggest that the political orientations of those in the journalistic community may, in fact, result in bias in the news."

Some network executives and editors are in total denial about this, though their story selection, approach to coverage and choice of "analysts" prove the point beyond all doubt. Coverage of the presidential debates reflected a sameness no matter what channel one watched. Viewers, who have complained for years about slanted coverage, are ignored. Many have gone to C-Span or simply turned off the TV. In the survey, two-thirds of voters disagree (41 percent strongly and 24 percent mildly) that "news media stories about the campaign provide unbiased accounts of what is happening in the campaign." While majorities of all major partisan and ideological subgroups feel a media bias is apparent, Republicans (75 percent) and conservatives (70 percent) are most critical of a general media bias.

When confronted with such high levels of customer dissatisfaction, most industries would seek to address the grievances. But it appears the big media would rather close shop than present, fairly and accurately, a point of view that differs from their own. This hurts the journalism profession and our democracy, since it prevents a full and complete airing of ideas, issues, character and a candidate's record of promise-keeping.

CHARLEY REESE

The problems with third party presidential candidates

I'm not writing about any of the third party candidates for president because I don't think any of them are serious.

People who pop up once every four years and suddenly announce they are running for president may want to sell books or tapes, collect membership dues or indulge their egos, but they are not serious candidates.

Anybody who is serious knows that you would have to start two years ahead of time to have a chance. There is nothing cynical, mysterious or conspiratorial about the American election process.

This is a big country. More than 3 million square miles. More than 260 million citizens. And it is not the duty of the communications industry to provide free advertising for every Ross, Ralph and Harry who sporadically decides to become a candidate.

Ergo, since campaign equals communication, any serious candidate has to raise money and recruit an organization. And you can't do that ditty-bopping around for a few weeks every four years.

So I have concluded that the third party candidates are as meaningless in their own ways as the two guys on the main tickets, whose race I will not write about.

Reese

Most of these guys are ideological candidates who think that all they have to do is announce their position on issues and that everyone who agrees on a particular issue will flock to their side.

Horse apples.

There is more to leadership than taking a position on a menu of issues. There is no office of dictator in America. Any president who wants to do something besides go to dinners and make appointments had better know how to persuade members of the House and the Senate to go along with his ideas. He better have the ability to rally vast numbers of Americans to his cause.

That requires more than taking a position on an issue. It requires wisdom and experience and, frankly, a genuine affection for people. So far as I know, none of these third party presidential candidates has ever been elected dog catcher and none of them would require more than a small room in which to hold a rally.

Let's not confuse politics with politicians. We may have a low opinion of particular politicians, but politics is an honorable art. If you study the lives of the founders of this republic — George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Patrick Henry and Tom Jefferson, for example — you will see that they were social people. They had wide networks of friends. They got involved very early in their lives in the affairs of their community. They were, in short, politicians.

What we do not like about contemporary politicians is not that they are politicians, but that they have flaws in their character — insincerity, dishonesty, lack of courage, greed for office and, often, money, too.

People who are serious about building an alternative to the Democrats and Republicans should really concentrate on the state level. A state with a new party that had a majority in the legislature and the governor's office would command national attention.

It can't be done making the round of talk shows once every four years or by running an ongoing, penny-ante fund-raising operation out of Washington. Nor can it be done by merely stating ideological positions. If you propose a change, and are serious, then you have to convince Americans that the change is in their interest.

This country doesn't need people to make statements or merely take positions on issues or announce ideas they have no idea how to implement. They need experienced leaders rooted in their communities who care about more than their own egos or who just need a job. They need leaders who can translate principles into programs that will address contemporary problems.

So far, I don't see any serious alternatives to the Republicans or Democrats. I think a lot of people want an alternative, but a good one hasn't shown up yet.

MIKE ROYKO

Me-me-me non-voter explains politics 'doesn't affect me'

(While Mike Royko is on vacation we are reprinting some of his most popular vintage columns. This column originally ran on Nov. 4, 1978.)

I've never been bothered that droves of people don't vote. Not once have I ever written a column before an election urging people to exercise that right.

But what does bother me is when I'm forced to listen to some bore explain to me why he doesn't vote. Many non-voters find something profound and important in what they don't do.

It happened again a couple days ago. This time it was a man about 30 years old. Unmarried. Big-paying job. High-rise apartment. Cushy lifestyle. Self-ordained ladies man.

"I'm not going to vote," he said, without being asked. "And I'll tell you why. It doesn't matter to me who wins because it doesn't affect my life. It has nothing to do with the way I live. It won't change my life in one way or another."

It may be important to people in the news business because they make their living writing about elections. And it is important to people in politics because it has to do with their egos. But to most of us, it is irrelevant. Regardless of who is in office, nothing changes. At least nothing that affects me personally.

Well, I made a mistake. I tried to answer him.

Royko

I began to talk about the Vietnam War, and how we might have avoided or shortened that bloodbath had we given more thought to the kind of people we sent to Washington. Had there been more brain and less bluster in Congress, we might have been out of there sooner. Who knows how many lives would have been saved.

But then I remembered that, despite his age, he had managed to avoid being touched by the war. He came from that fortunate upper-middle-class background whose members were so adept at finding loopholes in the draft laws, the generation that left its social conscience behind with the abolition of the draft. Thus he, like so many of his peers, had spent those bloody war years increasing his knowledge of rock music and savoring the pleasures provided by the birth control pill.

So from his safe perspective, it wouldn't make much difference who held office then, since the war didn't touch him, as he said, "personally."

Then I began a small lecture about the '50s and the '60s, and how it mattered a great deal to the black people of this country which candidates happened to be elected to public office during those times. Not only to Congress and the White House, but to the state legislatures and even various sheriff's offices.

All of that monumental civil rights legislation, a century overdue, wouldn't have come about if there hadn't been enough people in public office who believed in it. And there were times when it was a close call. One or two more boons could have swung important votes back a few decades. Luckily, the right kind of votes were there. And this resulted in dramatic changes in the lives of millions of people.

But then I remembered that he wasn't black. He grew up in a wealthy family in a wealthy suburb and his closest contact to blacks was when the hired help came to clean the house. And the closest he ever got to a place like Selma or to people like Bull Connor was when they might have caught his eye on the color TV set that undoubtedly stood next to his teen-listening telephone in his air-conditioned bedroom.

So he was right. Those who held office in those years weren't significant to his lifestyle. I didn't even bother to talk to him about things such as worker-safety laws that have been passed over the years, laws that make it less likely that a workman might have his hand chopped off by a factory machine, although we still have a long way to go in that direction.

That, too, doesn't affect him personally. In fact, I couldn't think of one argument I could give him for voting, because his reasons for not voting were unassailable. As he said, none of it touched him personally. He is part of the me-first, me-second, me-forever, me-me-me generation. The fact that the outcome of an election might affect others doesn't matter to him, because those people don't matter to him.

What I dislike most about these kinds of insulated me-me narcissists is that when things get rough, they are the first to whine that somebody ought to do something to straighten things out. They're the first to look around frantically for somebody, anybody to take care of them.

But in the meantime, he's getting his, and what happens to others is of no concern. So he sneers that politics is outside the mainstream.

What he doesn't recognize is that he is the one on the outside. Hopefully, he'll stay there.

Wife accuses ex-husband in female circumcision case

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Mary Ann Turner thought she was going into the hospital for simple surgery to repair damage from the birth of her third baby.

Instead, she claims in a lawsuit, surgeons mutilated her genitals at the instigation of her anesthesiologist husband, who was present during the procedure 24 years ago and treated his wife afterward.

"He told them she had some sexual problems and this would fix it," said Turner's lawyer, Richard Ducote.

The lawsuit against Alan Ostrowe, her ex-husband, goes to trial today after eight years in the courts. It has divided the couple's four children — two of their sons side with their father while the eldest son, Michael Constantine, and their daughter back Turner.

Turner, now 56, claims Ostrowe persuaded the two surgeons to perform a female circumcision while she was sedated.

Her lawsuit doesn't offer a motive for Ostrowe's alleged actions, but Constantine says he knows why it happened.

"This was done out of a sadistic need to have control over my mother's sexuality in order to compensate for his sexual inadequacies," he said.

Ostrowe did not immediately return phone messages left at his home and office.

His lawyer said Turner knew what was happening and chose to sue only after a dispute over child custody and alimony following their 1983 divorce.

"This lady 24 years ago made the decision to have a surgical procedure," said Karl Koch, one of Ostrowe's attorneys. "It was her decision. She discussed it with her doctor."

"That procedure was somewhat in vogue in some circles back then and she went and had the surgical procedure done."

He said Turner waited to sue until the surgeon who performed the procedure had died.

Turner's lawyer says she didn't know what was done to her until 1988, when she met the surgeon who had assisted in the operation.

"He told her that he had been carrying this guilt for all these years and she said, 'For what?' He said ... 'Don't you know what they did to you?'" Ducote said.

Turner remained in the hospital for at least eight days, receiving large doses of narcotics and sedatives, Ducote said. He said her husband kept her in a drug-induced stupor for two months — and when she complained about the pain, she was assured by the surgeons and her husband that nothing was wrong.

Their son, Constantine, said he changed his name as a result of the fight.

"This is a heavy burden my father has put upon our blood line," he said. "I don't think I will ever be able to purge it."

No one has claimed the procedure was motivated by religious or cultural reasons.

Female circumcision is practiced in Africa, the Middle East and among Muslim populations in Indonesia and Malaysia. It is intended to suppress sexual desire.

Congress this year outlawed female genital mutilation, making it a crime punishable by up to five years in prison. California, Rhode Island, Tennessee, North Dakota and Minnesota also have banned the practice.

A number of countries, among them Belgium, Britain, Canada, Denmark, France, Sweden and Switzerland, have outlawed the practice for years.

Officers say they saw only one bloody glove before Fuhrman arrived

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Plugging holes left by prosecutors who failed to convict O.J. Simpson of murder, two police officers who reached the scene hours before Mark Fuhrman said Monday they found only one bloody glove.

The officers also swore they saw blood on a back gate — blood Simpson's criminal defense lawyers successfully claimed was planted three weeks after the murders of Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

The defense still claims the former detective snatched the matching glove and moved it to Simpson's home in a devious, racist plot to incriminate Simpson. Plaintiff's lawyers sought to refute that Monday at his civil trial.

"You saw only one glove?" attorney Edward Medvene asked Officer Miguel Terrazas, who was not called to testify in the first trial.

"Yes, sir," Terrazas said.

"Did you observe any second glove?" Medvene asked.

"No, sir," Terrazas said.

Officer Robert Riske, Terrazas' partner, said he saw one glove, a cap and an envelope lying in blood near the bodies.

DEAR ABBY

16-year-old regrets not acting to stop friend's fatal drug use

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 years old and heartbroken. A 15-year-old friend of mine died recently. His name was Cliff and he had been "huffing" (inhaling) propane.

Van Buren

Although Cliff had been huffing for a long time, he told me that he had stopped. Foolishly, I believed him. Friday night he decided to do it again. He was with a friend who tried to stop him, but Cliff was determined. He said he knew what he was doing — that he had done it a hundred times before. Cliff huffed for about five minutes that night before he died.

All of us are traumatized — his church, his family, his friends. We never thought this would happen to us or to him. After all, he was only 15 and had his whole life ahead of him.

I know teens have seen and heard all the "Just Say No" ads, but they seem to think nothing bad could ever happen to them. That's what Cliff thought.

I hope to make two points by writing this letter. The first is: DON'T DO DRUGS! Just because propane and some other inhalants are not illegal, doesn't make them safe. They can still kill just as quickly as an illegal drug, and either way you're just as dead.

The second point I want to make is this: If you know somebody who is huffing, or doing any kind of drugs, BE A RAT! Tell their parents, or another adult you can trust who will help you do the right thing. I didn't do come. I could have told his parents, or my mom, or someone else — and they would have helped Cliff. But I didn't do it, and now he's dead.

Abby, I want everyone to know about this. I know this won't bring Cliff back, but maybe it will make somebody stop and think. Please don't print my name. Just sign me ...

HEARTBROKEN IN VIRGINIA

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Thank you for wanting to alert other teens about the danger that inhalants and illegal drugs pose. It's too bad that you will never know how many people will read your letter and re-think their attitude about "huffing." But bear in mind that there is only so much a person can do to save others. At some point, they must help themselves.

DEAR ABBY: I am responding to the letter from Edith concerning women who don't drive and are constantly bumming rides.

Edith is obviously ignorant about that situation. I am a 52-year-old woman who does not drive. Not only do I not relish bumming rides off people, I despise it!

I suffer from panic disorder. Very few people understand this condition. All my life people have told me, "You'd be so much better off if you would learn to drive."

The truth of the matter is, if I didn't kill myself behind the wheel, I'd probably kill someone else. (Maybe Edith!) — NO NAME, NO TOWN

DEAR NO NAME: Driving is not for everyone; at least you recognize your limitations. However, panic disorder is treatable. Your physician can refer you to a mental health professional who can help you find ways of managing this not-uncommon condition, and advise you about national support groups.

What teens need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting

Voter apathy could affect House races

By Robin Toner

N.Y. Times News Service

The final eight days of the 1996 campaign are shaping up as a furious struggle by two parties and their allies to get their supporters to the polls, in the face of widespread indications that sagging voter interest may well diminish turnout.

Strategists say that fears on both sides are legitimate after a lopsided and largely static presidential campaign. Democrats worry that President Clinton's comfortable lead in the polls will cause many would-be supporters to think he no longer needs their votes; Republicans fear that Bob Dole's troubled campaign will so dispirit many of the party faithful that they will simply stay home. In either case, it is the struggle for control of the House of Representatives that could be most affected, many analysts say.

Mary Crawford, press secretary for the Republican National Committee, said, "It's totally fair to say that the party, on a national and state level, will be donating unprecedented resources to turning out our voters this year."

Democrats make similar vows. "We saw in 1994 the results of low turnout," said David Eichenbaum, the Democratic National Committee's director of communications. "We lost a number of races by very close margins that had everything to do with turnout and resulted in a Republican Congress that tried to gut a lot of important priorities."

The final drives by the parties and their allied interest groups are well under way, often based on extensive research to identify probable supporters and find the appeals most likely to get them to the polls. This weekend, Democrats are holding rallies and distributing leaflets directed at women from the soccer fields of suburban Baltimore to the Wal-Marts of Georgia. The AFL-CIO has sent 1,000 fresh troops into the field to help unions coordinate the endgame of their effort to oust the Republican House; labor volunteers distributed 100,000 pieces of literature to union members on a single day last week in Washington State.

On the conservative side, the Christian Coalition is distributing 45 million voter guides through 120,000 churches, as well as running get-out-the-vote commercials on Christian radio outlets and getting in touch with more than three million voters by letter, phone and personal visits.

Ralph Reed, executive director of the coalition, says his voters will know the stakes. "It would be the end of the world to core religious conservatives if Dick Gephardt became speaker or Tom Daschle became majority leader," he said. "It would make it impossible to move any pro-family legislation through Congress for the foreseeable future, and that's why I'm predicting the largest turnout by religious conservatives ever in a presidential election."

Still, when it comes to the electorate at large, many analysts say poll data indicate voters are much less interested in this campaign than they were in the battle between Bill Clinton and President George Bush four years ago. For example, the most recent New York Times/CBS News Poll found that 39 percent said they would describe this race as interesting, compared with 78 percent who felt that way about the presidential campaign in October 1992.

Experts cite several reasons for the shrinking interest: the seeming lack of competition in the presidential race; the relatively healthy economy, compared with the recessionary days of 1992; and the low-key nature of the Ross Perot campaign, in contrast to the interest and excitement he generated four years ago. Thomas Patterson, the Benjamin C. Bradlee Professor of Government and the Press at the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University, said the lack of interest might be less a sign of troubled politics than of comparatively untroubled times.

Parade, concert to honor veterans

Don De Santis, an Elvis impersonator, is among the entertainers who will be participating in Saturday's "Veterans Welcome Home Concert" to be held at Twin Cities Speedway.

From Staff Reports

The Heroes Day Parade — a part of what is hoped to be an annual West Texas Salute to Veterans — will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday at Dennis the Menace Park.

Among the local groups and organizations participating in the parade are: Midland VFW Post 7028, VFW Post 4372 in Odessa, Chapter 105 of the Reserve Officers Association, Midland Antique Car Club, Midland High School Band, Company A-Texas National Guard, the Masons and Shriners, the Midland Fire Department, the 104th Quarter Master Company, Daughters of The American Revolution, Big Spring VFW Post 2013, the Snyder VFW Post, Midland American Legion Post 19, the Truck Driving Academy of Odessa College, Midland High Sky Wing and The Odessa Desert Squadron of the Confederate Air Force, Sons of Confederate Veterans, Coors, and Twin Cities Speedway.

In addition, Korean War veteran and Congressional Medal of Honor recipient George O'Brien will serve as parade Grand Marshal.

All groups participating in the parade should be at the park at 8 a.m. to register. Call 682-0706 for more information.

The Big Spring Veterans Hospital will be bringing a busload of hospitalized veterans to be a part of the parade, according to organizers.

The "Veterans Welcome Home Concert," which begins at noon on Saturday, at Twin Cities Speedway is also picking up steam as the following bands have signed on to donate their services: the Flatland Band, Five Speed, Midnight Stampede, Group Organ and Sensational Sounds, featuring Elvis impersonist Don De Santis.

Twenty five percent of all proceeds will be donated to the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

General admission for the concert is $10 at the gate. Coors and Twin Cities Speedway are the corporate sponsors for the Welcome Home Concert. Attendees should bring lawn chairs. The concert will continue until midnight.

Citing a lack of ticket sales, organizers have cancelled the concert. Please see SALUTE/2B

A Day in the Life of Dorothy Cleere

Dorothy Cleere designs and constructs costumes for many different types of people. She and her husband, Fred, have been in business for 12 years. Cleere began making costumes for her children's school functions.

Midland woman designs award-winning costumes

By Joe Gaines

Staff writer

Dorothy Cleere has helped a lot of grownups figure out what they want to be. She has made them rock singers, movie stars and television personalities. With Halloween, in two days, the bulk of her work is done.

Ms. Cleere, owner of Costumes by Dorothy, 3410 S. County Road 1213, helps customers pick out costumes, including some strange requests.

"I had this guy who told me he was going to a convention up North and everybody thought he was going to come as a Dallas Cowboy," she said.

The man wanted to be a Cowboy, but instead of a football player, he wanted to be a cheerleader, she said.

"I had to look at some pictures for that one. I got his measurements and made it, including the, uh, upper part. He won first prize with it," she said.

It isn't the only award-winning costume she has made either. Several have won first prizes, including a risque Cher costume she made for another man.

"They didn't even know it was a man wearing it," she said.

Ms. Cleere started her business, along with husband, Fred, 12 years ago and most of the costumes are made by her, she said.

"I had three sons who were always in school plays and

FCC head worried about companies showing liquor ads

Associated Press

The head of the Federal Communications Commission on Monday urged a gathering of pediatricians to fight to keep hard-liquor ads off television.

FCC Chairman Reed Hundt's comments came as the distiller Seagram Co. Ltd. of Montreal has begun putting whiskey ads on local TV stations, breaking a 48-year-old voluntary ban by distillers on broadcast advertising of liquor.

"If they won't play by the unwritten rule, do we need a written rule? That is the question," Hundt told The Associated Press after his speech to the American Academy of Pediatrics annual meeting.

In an ad campaign that has since spread to other markets, the Seagram Americas division began running 30-second spots for its Royal Crown whiskey in Corpus Christi, Texas, this June.

The ads are believed to be the first for

From Staff Reports

The Midland Angels have announced the creation of a foundation in honor of Scott Seator, who died Sept. 3, following a two-year battle with cancer.

Seator, who served as the club's director of communications, was known throughout the Permian Basin community for his work with children. Fittingly, contributions to the foundation honoring his memory will fund youth-oriented programs.

"Scott was the driving force behind so much of our work in the community," said Angels General Manager Monty Hoppel, "and his dedication to kids was incredible. This foundation is not only a tribute to Scott, it will keep his work and spirit alive."

All contributions are tax deductible, and may be directed to the following address: The Permian Basin Area Foundation, c/o Scott Seator Midland Angels Memorial Fund, P.O. Box 10424, Midland, 79702.

LHS band gets ready for state

From Staff Reports

The Lee High School Rebel Band this week continues to prepare for what has become an almost annual trip to the State Marching Contest, which this year will be held next Monday on the campus of Baylor University in Waco.

The band, which is under the direction of Randy Storie, John Gilliland and Brian Collins, qualified for the state competition by finishing first in the UIL area contest, held this past weekend in Lubbock.

There were 13 bands competing at the area contest, and of those, only two advanced to state. Joining the Lee band in Waco from this area will be the Odessa High School band.

Lee finished first; OHS took second place honors.

One week earlier, the LHS band participated in the UIL Region Marching Contest in Odessa, where it received its 27th consecutive Division I rating.

That No. 1 rating entitled the band to compete in the area marching contest in Lubbock this past Saturday. That competition consisted only of the 13 bands from the region who had received No. 1 ratings from their marching competitions.

The Rebel band will be loading up buses on Sunday morning for its trip to Waco.

Lee High School sophomore Eric Wiebusch practices with the LHS band Monday. The band has again qualified for the state competition, which is to be held next Monday in Waco.

GARY OTT

Most people really prefer either cats or dogs, not both

More rambling thoughts...

— Just wondering: As you get older is it easier or harder to tell a lie and still be able to sleep at night?

— Most people, it seems to me, are either "dog lovers" or "cat lovers." They may "like" both, but when you get right down to it, they REALLY prefer one or the other.

— It is at this time of the year, a couple of days before Halloween, that I invariably become hooked on candy corn.

— Almost magically, though, the addiction will end the day after Halloween.

— Thank goodness.

— Why is it that I can enter a crowded theater and automatically select the seat directly behind the only person present who is going to suffer a coughing attack halfway through the movie?

— And while we're on the subject, why doesn't that person, upon realizing the coughing isn't going to end anytime soon, go stand in the lobby so the rest of us can follow the dialogue?

— John Steinbeck once offered this marvelous description of traveling: "One goes, not so much to see but to tell afterward."

— If we are completely honest with ourselves, most of us, as we approach those dreaded middle-aged years, long for a magic pill that will somehow allow us to become slim and trim without having to work at it. What's worse, deep inside we actually think such a pill exists.

— Overheard: "The stars resembled cut glass."

— I've always liked the phrase "clothes horse," though I've never quite understood its origin.

— Oddity: I went 30 years without wearing a wristwatch, but now that I've started using one, I feel naked when it's not on.

— There are few things in life as pleasurable as that first night of the season when the temperature officially drops into the teens: a roaring fire, a bowl of hot soup and soothing music on the stereo.

— It was Shakespeare who best described the power of silence, when he wrote: "Few words, but to effect."

— Why is it, that no matter how often I place a ballpoint pen next to the telephone, it is never there when I need it?

— Just a thought: How many of us, if we knew then what we know now, would have chosen the same line of work we're now in?

— There is something about making an appearance at the office when no one else is there, like maybe a Sunday morning, that makes you feel REALLY productive even if all you do is sit around and stare at the walls.

— Why do you never have a camera handy when you really need one?

— It is an unfortunate sign of the times that you can no longer call someone a "man's man" without attracting a bunch of mindless giggles.

— Giggie, giggle.

— And today's final quote comes from Thomas Fuller, who once said, "If you are too fortunate, you will not know yourself. If you are too unfortunate, nobody will know you."

LHS engineering team advances to state competition at Texas A&M

From Staff Reports

The Lee High School "West Texas Boosting Engineering, Science and Technology (WT-BEST)" team has advanced to the state competition, which tests the science and engineering skills of high school students.

A total of 26 teams will be competing in the state contest, which will be held Saturday on the campus of Texas A&M University.

Lee advanced to state by virtue of taking first place honors in last weekend's regional competition held in Lubbock. Midland High's team finished 10th in the regional competition.

As the first place team, LHS won four $1,000 scholarships to attend Texas Tech's School of Engineering.

WT-BEST is a group of industrial technologists in the West Texas area who have joined together in an attempt to inspire and motivate students toward studies and careers in engineering, science and technology by providing a sports-like technology contest to design and build a radio-controlled machine to accomplish a defined task.

"The local sponsor of WT-BEST is Texas Instruments, which provided the 'parts kits' as well as engineers to consult throughout the design process," said Andrew Franks, sponsor of the LHS team. "All teams participating in the contest were required to use the same parts to build a robot which would be the key player in winning the competition. The teams were notified of the parameters of the competition six weeks prior to the event."

The robots, Franks added, were required to capture rectangular sections of the playing field by marking them with one or more of their wooden blocks. At the end of the round, the team with the most points scored advanced to the next round of the tournament.

"Our students won due to their teamwork, commitment and perseverance," Franks said. "They tried many different ideas before determining which robots worked the best to win the game."

I was always making their costumes," she said. "I can make about two to three costumes a day, but it can depend on how complex the costume is."

For research, she watches movies and keeps in touch with children to know which costumes to make, she said.

She may know what to make, but most customers don't know what they want to wear, she said. "All they know is that they want something to go as a couple," she said.

When dressing up for Halloween parties, most go with someone else or as part of a group. Ms. Cleere plans accordingly, making her costumes in sets. She has groups of costumes from the Wizard of Oz, Ninja Turtles, Star Wars, Casper, Batman and others.

When picking out costumes, she helps customers by showing them pictures of the costumes on people and reminds them of comfort.

"They want a costume that will win a prize, but they need to know that they will be spending a few hours in it," she said. "We pass on our knowledge of which ones will get hot."

If the costume is taken off, the wearer can get cool, but his character won't be recognized, she noted.

Some costumes, like a pair of pig costumes, were designed for both. The wearer can remove the costume's furry mask and hands, but wear light pig ears and be recognized, she said.

Besides Halloween, she provides costumes for birthdays, school plays and other holidays, she said. But only during Halloween season do they have store hours, the rest of the year is by appointment.

BAN: FCC head concerned by ads for hard liquor making comeback hard liquor on American TV since 1988, when the Distilled Spirits Council of the United States extended a voluntary radio ad ban to television.

"We need your help to guarantee that every child has reasonable protection from the media's capacity to do harm, whether by showing too much violence ... or advertising hard liquor to an audience of children," Hundt said in his speech.

The FCC approves broadcasting licenses and polices the public airwaves.

Hundt has supported a law that will require television sets to come with a "V-chip" that allows parents to filter out shows with violence or sex. He also successfully fought to require broadcasters to set aside three hours a week for educational children's programming.

Monday was the first time Hundt focused on the ads in an address, although he publicly expressed concern about the ads after they were denounced by Mothers Against Drunk Driving earlier this month.

"Halloween is supposed to be the best night of the year for kids. But there's something real to be afraid of this year," he said.

Hundt said he was sending letters to broadcasters who aired the ads to find out when and where they ran.

A spokeswoman for Seagram Americas said the company plans to continue running television and radio ads for Royal Crown and Chivas Regal.

"As long as we market our products in a responsible, tasteful and appropriate fashion, we are completely within our rights," said Bevin Gove. "This is not about irresponsibility. We are extremely responsible. We always have been."

Gove said Seagram started the campaign because changes in viewing habits and technology now make it possible to target adult audiences, and because distilled spirits should be able to compete with beer and wine, which already advertise on TV.

Seagram would not say where the ads have run or in how many cities, only that they have appeared in a range of markets throughout the United States.

So far, Seagram is believed to be the only company to violate the ban, which remains in the Code of Good Practice of the Distilled Spirits Council, a trade group that includes Seagram.

Gove said Seagram has encouraged responsible drinking by adults through public service ads and produced videos for educators and parents on how to speak to children about alcohol. The company has had no official contact from the FCC, she said.

Asked whether Seagram's actions could encourage less responsible drinking, Gove said: "We've taken a leadership role in responsible marketing. We can only encourage others ... to follow suit."

But the FCC's Hundt said he believed Seagram's action would lead others to follow.

"One bad apple spoils the whole bunch," Hundt said after his speech. "If you're in a market and somebody starts doing it, there's competitive pressure."

DEATHS

Mary Coffee

Services for Mary Lou Smith Coffee have been set for 3 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 30, at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Tommy Potter of the First Christian Church officiating. Burial will be at Resthaven Memorial Park.

Mrs. Coffee died Sunday, Oct. 27, in Houston.

She was born July 29, 1911, in Muskogee, Okla.

She married Grayson C. Smith. He died in 1970.

She married Loyd Coffee in 1985. Mrs. Coffee was a member of the First Christian Church of Midland prior to moving to Houston in 1985.

STATE IN BRIEF

Students injured in school-bus accident

ANGLETON — An unidentified vehicle forced a school bus off a rural road Monday and several students were injured when the bus turned on its side in a ditch, authorities said.

The accident about 3:40 p.m. occurred in Brazoria County just west of Angleton, about 55 miles south of Houston, Mike Cox, spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety, said. He said the other vehicle failed to stop.

Details were sketchy. Angleton school officials and local police were at the scene of the accident and could not immediately provide information about how many children were riding the bus.

"We do have an accident, we do not know anything else," a Brazoria County Sheriff's Department dispatcher said. She refused to give her name.

Medical helicopters from Houston's Hermann Hospital flew to the scene to assist treating the injured.

Student suspended for having butter knife

CORPUS CHRISTI — A seventh-grader caught at school with a knife she used to slice apples has been suspended for two weeks and must finish the semester at a disciplinary school.

Officials at Flour Bluff Junior High said the punishment of 12-year-old Bianca Felix was justified because she was carrying a weapon on campus in violation of state law.

But Bianca's parents, who are appealing the suspension, said school officials overreacted.

"It was a butter knife, not a weapon," said Bianca's stepfather, Les Howitt. "She is just a little girl. She didn't know any better."

Bianca said she takes an apple to the bus stop each morning as her breakfast, slices it with what she describes as a butter knife, then puts the knife in her purse and goes to school.

A student saw the handle of the knife sticking out of her purse, she said, and "reported it to school officials."

School board President Dan Thornton said even if Bianca meant no harm with the knife, another student could have taken it and hurt someone.

"It is against state law for a student to take a knife on school premises," he said. "It is also against our policy. Our policy calls for expulsion. I think she got off easy."

School officials suspended Bianca for two weeks, after which she must complete the semester at an alternative school for children with discipline problems.

Bianca's mother, Elena Howitt, said her daughter is being treated like a criminal.

First juror chosen in Routier trial

KERRVILLE — The first juror has been selected in the capital murder trial of Darlie Routier, the Rowlett homemaker accused of stabbing to death her two young sons.

A 33-year-old man, a contractor, was chosen Monday during the first day of individual questioning of potential jurors.

Testimony in the trial is scheduled to begin Jan. 6.

Mrs. Routier, 26, is charged with the June 6 stabbing deaths of her sons Damon, 5, and Devon, 6. She claims an intruder killed them as they slept in the living room of the family's suburban home and that the attacker slashed her neck and shoulder before fleeing through the garage.

But police claim there was no intruder and that Mrs. Routier wounded herself to cover the crime.

The capital murder trial was moved to Kerrville because of pre-trial publicity in the Dallas area. Last week Mrs. Routier's new attorneys lost a bid to have the case moved back to Dallas.

Storms bring record downpours to several Texas areas

Associated Press

Thousands of homes remained without power and dozens of flights were canceled Monday after strong storms dumped as much as a foot of rain, including a record amount at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Flash flood warnings were posted Monday for the Llano and Guadalupe rivers and parts of the Dallas-Fort Worth area, according to the National Weather Service.

Runoff rose quickly at low-water crossings, stranding some motorists.

"We have extensive flooding and some rescues going on right now," said Becky Thompson, a Real County sheriff's dispatcher. "We also have reports of some houses under water near the Nueces River."

More than seven inches of rain fell on the Frio River headwaters north of Leakey. Deputies in Edwards County, where more than eight inches of rain fell, also were trying to rescue a stranded motorist.

The Llano River crested at 30 feet — 18 feet above flood stage — and Llano County sheriff's deputies were evacuating homes downriver to Kingsland above Lake LBJ, said Nita Roberts, a sheriff's dispatcher.

Meteorologists said the 3.81 inches of rain Sunday at DFW Airport broke the old record of 1.81 inches for the date in 1991.

American Airlines spokesman John Hotard said 140 flights were canceled and 69 diverted Sunday, with about two dozen additional cancellations Monday as a result of weekend delays.

Delta Air Lines canceled a half-dozen DFW flights on Sunday, said airline spokesman Willis Ugen.

Naval Air Station Dallas received 6.4 inches of rain Sunday, with another .34 inch Monday, said Bob Owen of the NWS Fort Worth office. He said DFW Airport received another .41 inch Monday, with more expected.

"The normal precipitation for the month would be 3.22 inches. We're running over that now," he said. "With a slow-moving front still coming up from the Gulf, we're getting continuous rain."

Morales takes to Texas highways confident of landslide

AUSTIN (AP) — A confident Victor Morales was behind the wheel of his pickup truck Monday, on the road again for a last week of campaigning that he predicted would bring victory over two-term Republican U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm.

Morales, the schoolteacher who has logged 72,000 miles in the white Nissan truck since beginning his quixotic quest for the Senate, voiced confidence about the Nov. 5 vote despite Gramm's lead in both fund-raising and opinion polls.

"It would take a miracle for Phil to win... I think Phil Gramm is going to be shocked at the results. And I would be shocked if Phil Gramm would win," the Democrat said.

"I feel like it's near Christmas, and you want to open that package, and you know you've been good, and you want to see what you got."

Coal, predicted Gramm spokesman Larry Neal.

"My message to Mr. Morales is — expect a miracle," Neal said. "All we've got on our side are the issues and the voters."

Morales was headed from Austin to San Marcos, Seguin and San Antonio on the first day of a five-day tour to 20 cities. Much of the trip is being made in his pickup, he said, because it's something voters like.

The dented truck, now sporting new tires, was virtually his only campaign tool when he unexpectedly led the Democratic primary and April runoff, besting two congressmen to win the party's nomination.

"I didn't ask for it to be a symbol. The people of Texas are excited about it... So I'm headed out again," he said. The trip had something of a bumpy start. As Morales prepared to leave Austin, he gently nudged the bumper of a car parallel parked behind him.

Morales also is turning to a more conventional campaign tactic this week, finally hitting the airwaves with two television commercials. His campaign staff said the ads would be showing statewide except for some areas of West Texas.

Judge finds Republic of Texas members in contempt of court

AUSTIN (AP) — A state district judge found the Republic of Texas group and its top leaders in contempt of court Monday for trying to take over state bank accounts.

Judge Joseph Hart ordered the group to rescind letters mailed to about 175 banks, directing them to transfer all accounts held by the state, its agencies and political subdivisions to the organization.

Hart gave the group one week to comply with the order before facing $10,000-a-day fines that will double each day until the letters are rescinded.

Hart told officials from Attorney General Dan Morales' office they could seek higher penalties or arrest of group leaders if they do not comply with his order.

Richard McLaren, ambassador of the so-called Republic, said

Hart has no authority to order the group to do anything. He contends that the people of Texas will take action if the state tries to enforce the fines.

"If they start seizing assets, you won't believe what will happen. If they start it, they won't be able to turn it off," McLaren said.

"People are upset. If you start going around stealing assets, people are going to react... If he really pulls it off, God help him."

The Republic group, which would not reveal its membership, claims the annexation of Texas in 1845 was illegal. It has set up various institutions, including its own courts and treasury.

Peter Haskel, an assistant attorney general, said he was unaware of any bank turning over accounts to the group. But he said the letters have caused some confusion and have wasted people's time.

Hart earlier this year approved a temporary injunction against the group, ordering it to stop filing liens against property held by government entities and private people. He also ordered the group to stop filing supposedly legal government documents like the bank notices.

Haskel said the group also has notified other businesses in Texas that the state no longer exists. He said the notices direct any business wanting to work in Texas to deal with the organization.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Finding a better work environment will boost your productivity. Handle your person's funds carefully, purchasing fewer luxuries. Travel is favored early in 1997. A winter vacation could result in both romance and valuable social connections. You begin to have more fun! Family ties grow stronger following a wedding or birth that takes place next summer. Refuse to mediate between feuding relatives; they may be enjoying their ongoing battle.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: actress Winona Ryder, actor Richard Dreyfuss, actress Kate Jackson, hockey player Dennis Potvin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An alliance is subject to strain today. Remember to give credit where it is due. Taking a new approach to an old problem hastens progress. Higher-ups will be impressed by the results of teamwork.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good luck is linked to sharing. Pooling funds or talents could prove very beneficial. If a family business needs revamping, seek the advice of experts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You find yourself in limbo where romance is concerned. The next move is up to your partner. Think about the possible outcome if you seek a raise or different assignment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): New intellectual pursuits will counteract a restless mood. You find a secret reserve of energy this afternoon. Working on a project that has been postponed too often will give you a sense of accomplishment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If tempers flare at work, douse the flames. Going the extra mile will bring financial rewards from an unexpected source. Influential people like your style.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): People will not respond favorably if you throw your weight around. Go slow. Settling into a routine will help you accomplish more. Expect a larger paycheck or new perks if you have been putting in overtime.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Focus on improving your relationships at work and home. Your domestic partner may be getting restless. Spend more time having fun together. Shared goals are also important.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A dynamic change is occurring in an important alliance. A romantic revival is possible. Someone new enters your life, motivating you in positive ways.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Confusion will reign if you let it. Make your plans known to those in authority, but avoid debating issues with contentious co-workers. Physical activity will help relieve tension.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your work environment is in a state of flux. Determine what you want and go after it! Past relationships play an important role in a current alliance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A financial deal is still up for grabs. Strive to hold on to your hard-earned cash! Discard possessions that no longer have your interest. Business negotiations will reach a turning point later today.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be prepared to handle increased communications and paperwork. Your keen intuition helps you uncover important information. Do a favor for someone who will be appreciative.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠ lead of dummy's suit. Partner obliged, but East stumbled at the very first hurdle.

West led the queen of diamonds, covered with the king and taken by the ace. Catering to the possibility that partner might also have the nine, East returned the four of diamonds, which would establish a long diamond no matter who held the nine. The operation succeeded but the patient died.

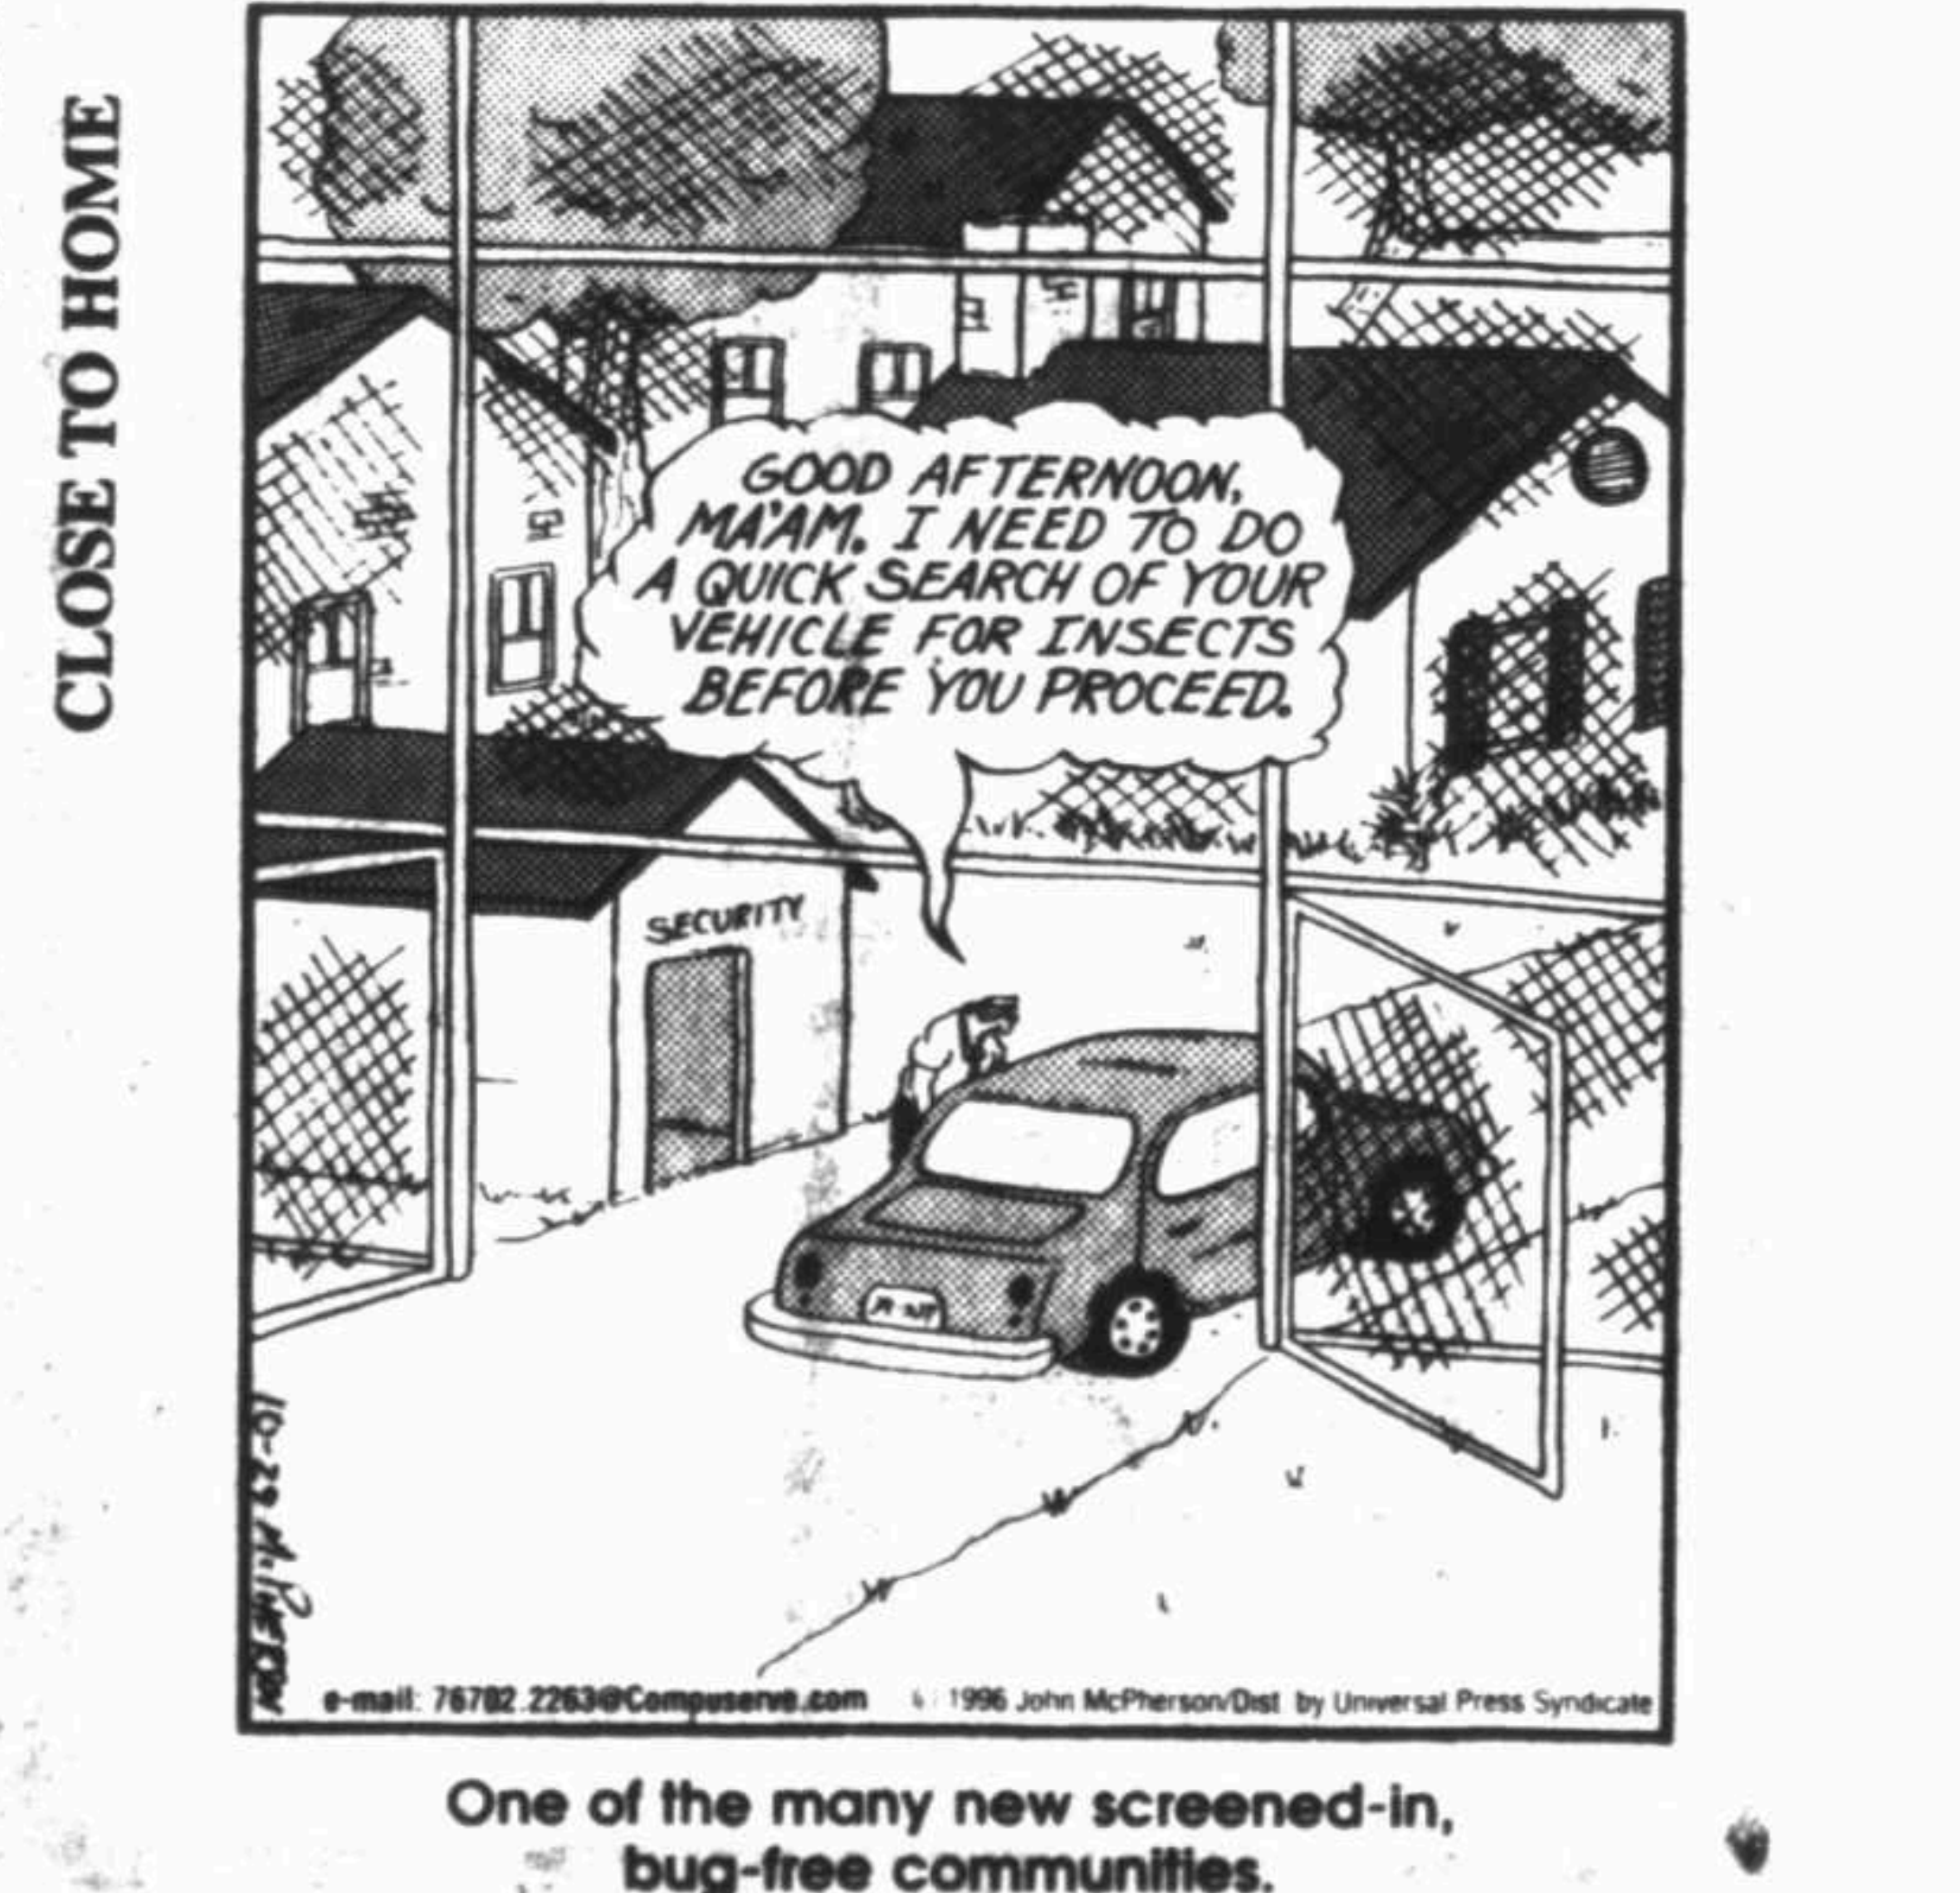

Given the present of a diamond trick, declarer reeled off eight tricks in the black suits to bank nine tricks before the defenders could collect five. A contract that should have been defeated came home.

South's bidding showed a balanced hand of some 13-14 points. Thus declarer could not hold ace-king of spades, king of hearts and enough in clubs to run nine tricks. Which of these cards does West hold? It doesn't matter which card declarer is missing, since North-South cannot have more than eight running tricks. Count them.

To test which high-card partner holds, East has a choice of sure-trick lines. The defender can cash a second diamond and then shift to a spade to see if partner signals for a continuation. As the cards lie, declarer will probably run for home with eight tricks to avoid going down two, but if South wins the spade in dummy and leads a third diamond, West signals in hearts and that is down two. Equally effective is for East to cash a third diamond right off the bat and await instructions from partner.

GARRY TRUDEAU'S OUR ANALYST CHASE TALKS III, TAKES ON THE CHARACTER ISSUE.

PANEL 1: CHASE (to a man in a suit): BASICALLY, WE'RE TALKING ABOUT THE MOST ETHICALLY CHALLENGED WHITE HOUSE IN A CENTURY!

PANEL 2: CHASE (to a woman in a suit): TO DATE, OVER 30 MEMBERS OF THIS ADMINISTRATION HAVE BEEN INVOLVED IN MISFEASANCE.

PANEL 3: CHASE (to a man in a suit): OKAY, HOLD IT RIGHT THERE, CHASE... REAGAN HAD OVER 100 UNDERLINGS IN TROUBLE. AND THEIR MISCARRIAGES WERE FAR MORE SERIOUS! YET THE PUBLIC FORGAVE REAGAN—SHOULDN'T CLINTON GET THE SAME PASS?

PANEL 4: CHASE (to a man in a suit): NO, CLINTONS A LIBERAL—HE SHOULD KNOW BETTER. OKAY, JUST CHECK-ING.

ER's Clooney posts 'doctor-is-out' sign for Entertainment Tonight crew ARLINGTON, Va. — George Clooney's message is clear — the doctor is out.

The star of "ER" is fed up with paparazzi — he calls them stalkerazzi — trailing his every move and he has announced that he will no longer do interviews with television's "Entertainment Tonight."

The final straw was video of Clooney and girlfriend Celine Baldran aired on tabloid television's "Hard Copy," a Paramount show.

Clooney told "ET," another Paramount show, that the Sept. 23 segment broke a deal he had with Paramount — keep him off "Hard Copy" in exchange for appearances on "ET."

"At some point, you've got to say, 'What are you in control of?'" Clooney said in Monday's USA Today. "This is kind of a warning shot."

Clooney said he hopes other stars will join his boycott. A Paramount spokeswoman declined to comment.

GOLDEN VALLEY, Minn. — Christopher Reeve was honored as a hero by a group that promotes independence for the disabled, but some in the audience said his efforts are pointed the wrong way.

Reeve was given the National Courage Award by the Courage Center, which encourages independent living for disabled people. Before he received the award Sunday, about 50 disabled protesters distributed critical fliers among the 350 guests.

They want more communication with the center and with Reeve. "He needs to start finding out what it's like to live with disability," said Charlie Smith, who publishes a newspaper for the disabled.

Reeve, whose neck was broken in a riding accident last year, has called for research into a cure for spinal injuries. That ranks advocates who think he sends the wrong message — that disabled people are not whole unless cured. They also fear Reeve's celebrity status will steer money to possibly fruitless research instead of to programs that help disabled people live in society.

BUFFALO, N.Y. — K Alexis doesn't just talk the talk, or even walk the walk.

The event was a benefit for the Recovering Child Foundation, which helps young people with drug problems. Alexis gave a few words of encouragement to the race's 150 participants before slipping into the middle of the pack to await the starting gun.

LOS ANGELES — His last TV co-star was a chimp. Now Greg Evigan has graduated to a more glamorous cast.

Evigan starred in "B.J. and the Bear" as a carefree truck driver with a chimp sidekick and a crew of beautiful young women. Now he'll join the beautiful people of "Melrose Place," appearing in 13 episodes as the new love interest for the show's gay character.

Evigan plays Dr. Dan Hathaway, who runs a drug rehab center where Matt Fielding, played by Doug Savant, seeks treatment for his own addiction to amphetamines.

"Matt comes in for help with his drug problem, and look out," Evigan said. The first episode with Evigan's character aired Monday.

SPARTANBURG, S.C. — Margaret Thatcher knows how to make an entrance.

The former British prime minister surprised organizers of a charity event last week by requesting "America the Beautiful" for her arrival, not "God Save the Queen." The Easley High School band easily complied.

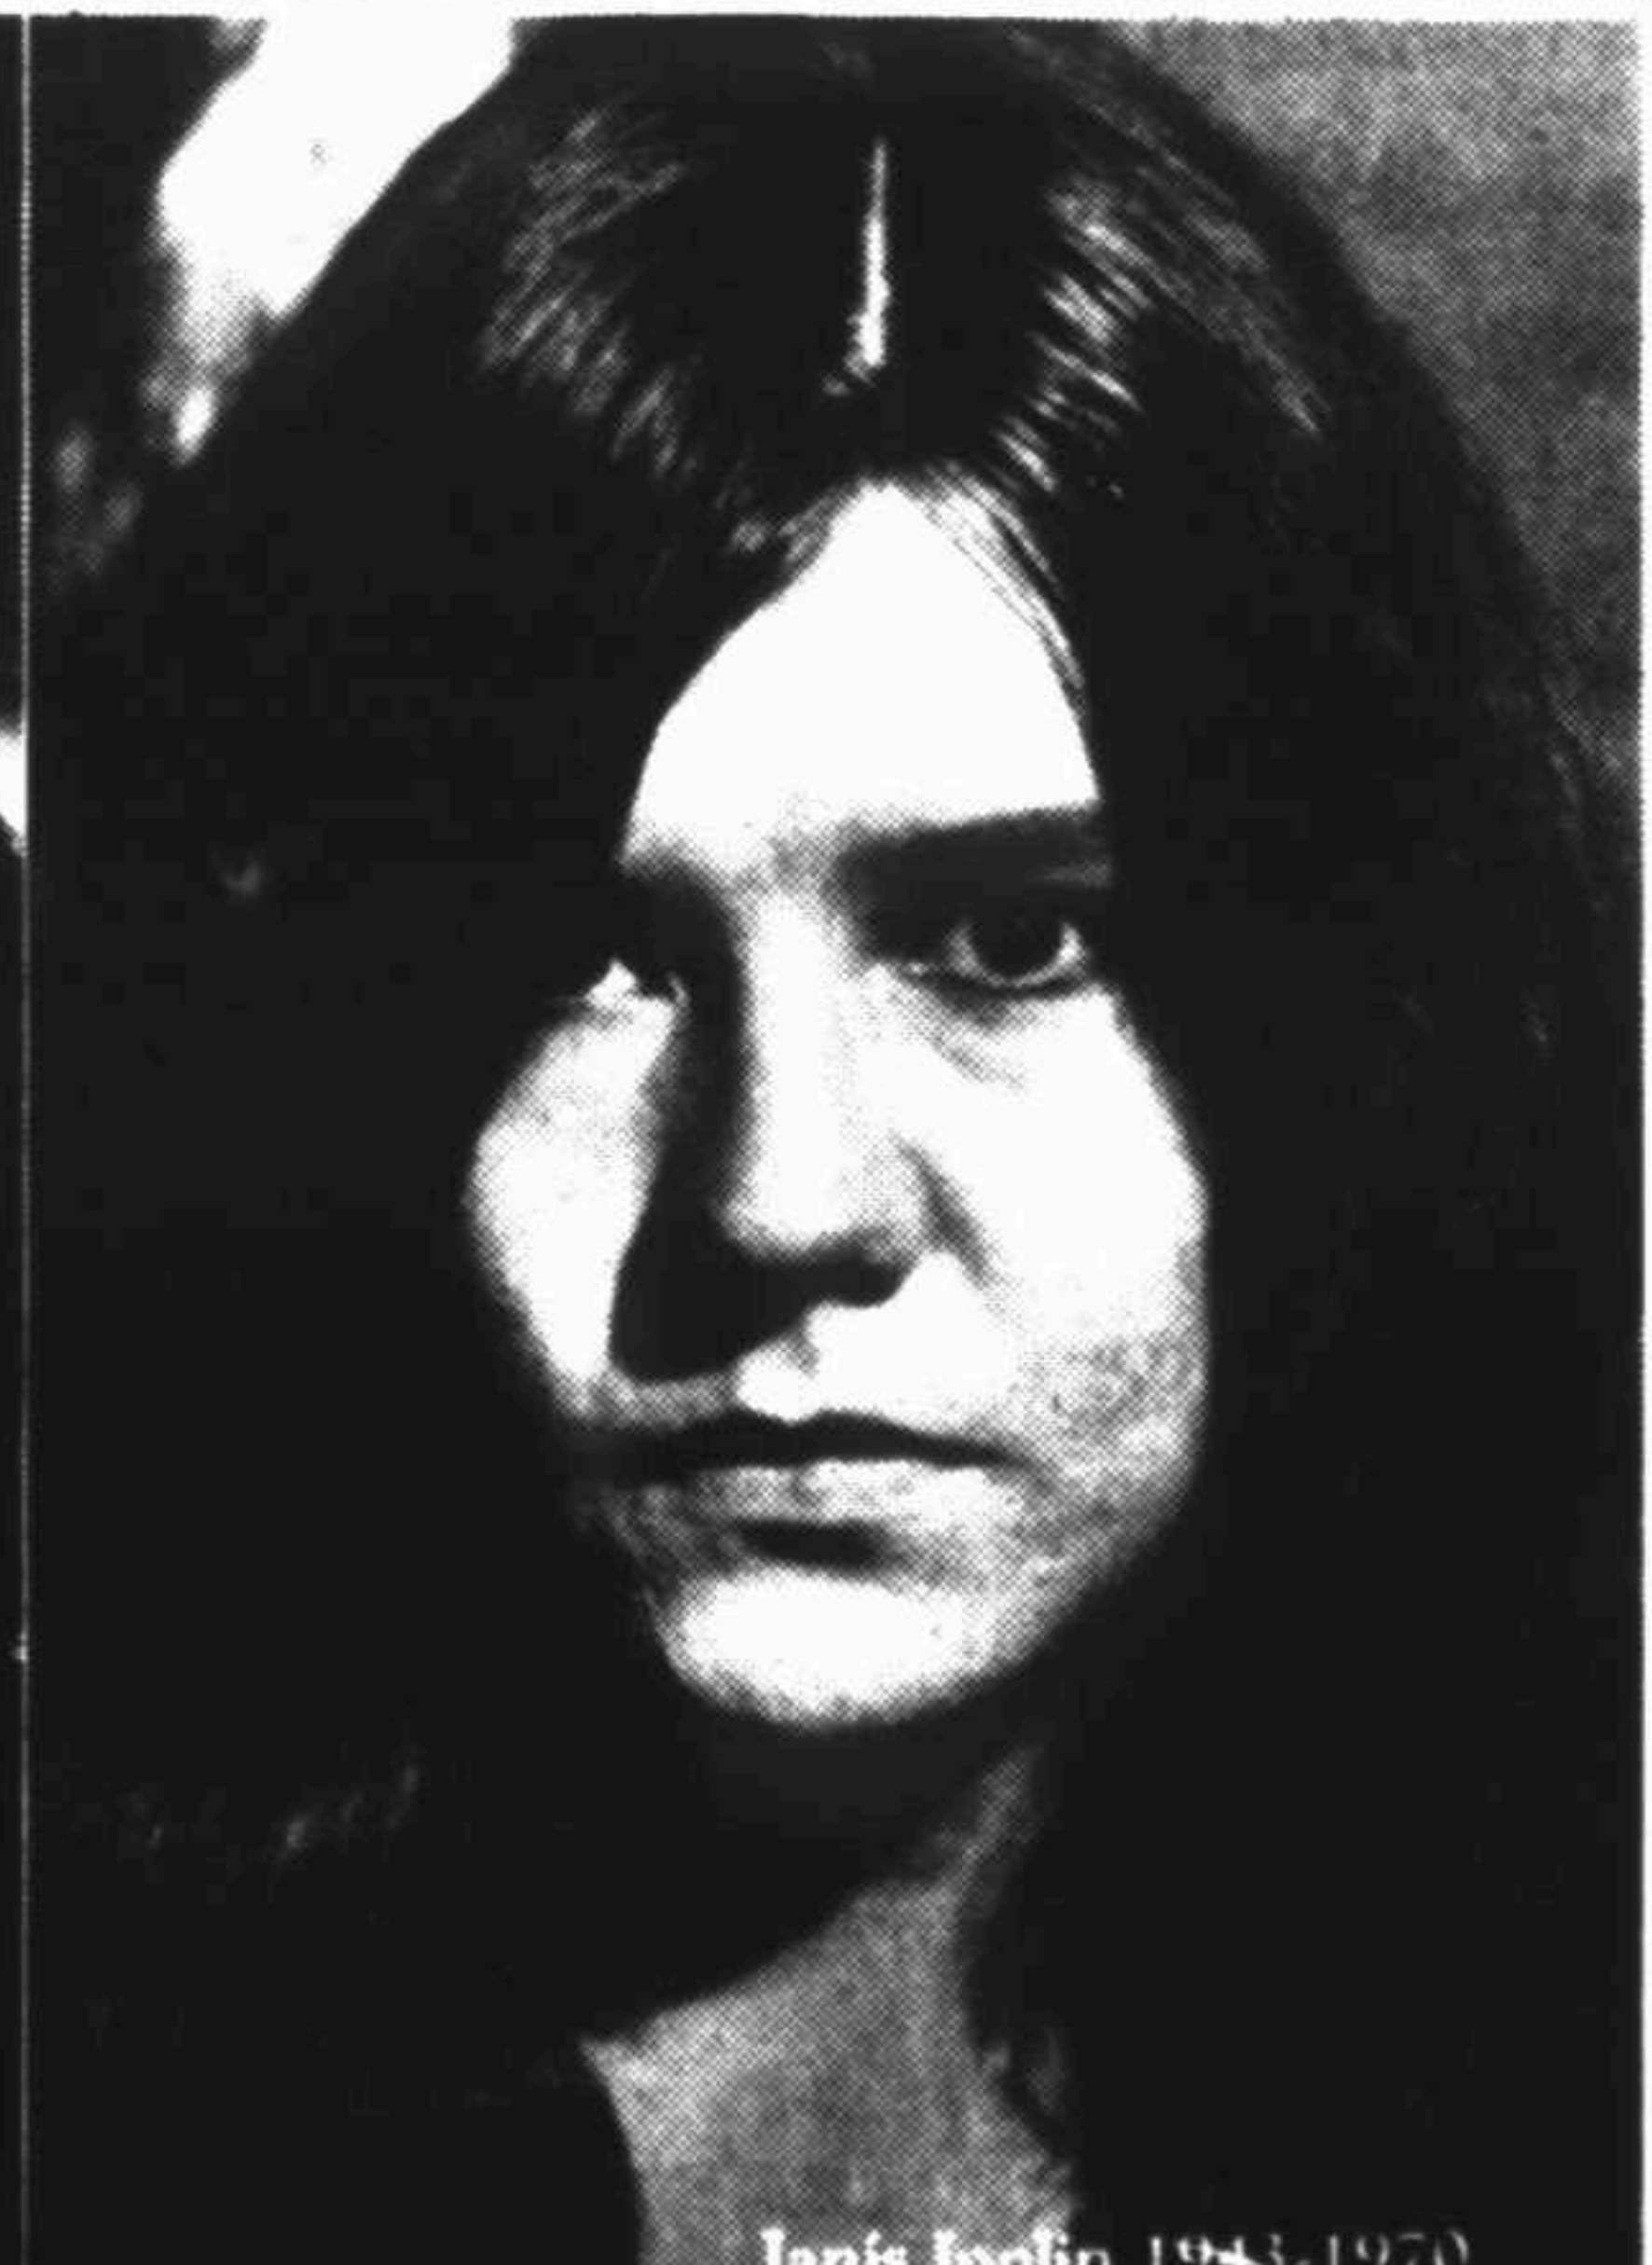

Margaret Thatcher makes her entrance at a recent charity event to the strains of "America the Beautiful."

The first woman prime minister, dubbed the "Iron Lady," served from 1979 to 1990.

STORM TRACKER FACTS

Cold and dreary weather was found across most of the Permian Basin on Monday as a stationary front lingered across the area. As a strong upper-level disturbance moves out of the area and clears out the clouds, it will give us a nice day with higher temperatures. Strong westerly winds behind the disturbance will be common with some gusts up to 30 mph, but don't get too accustomed to the warm weather because another blast of arctic air will move in by late in the week. It may be a cool Halloween.

Regardless of crime rate, many Texas cities receive federal grants

By Michelle Mittelstadt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A torrent of dollars is flowing from federal coffers to communities large and small under the 100,000 cops-on-the-beat initiative President Clinton is fond of bragging about.

Texas law enforcement agencies received $126 million of the $2.2 billion awarded by August — for a gain of 2,274 Texas officers — according to an Associated Press computer analysis of Justice Department figures.

A tiny trickle of that money found its way to Bovina, a town of 1,500 in the Texas Panhandle.

Bovina's two-man police force didn't increase. But the department is reaping dividends nonetheless, says police chief Leon Saddler.

With a $3,000 grant, Saddler bought a computer that he and his deputy use to file paperwork. "Computerizing our office was like adding two more people," he said. "It just frees us up to do lots more things."

Bovina isn't the mecca of crime that advocates of the federal program described as they prodded Congress to endorse Clinton's 1994 crime bill authorizing 100,000 cops. To date, some 43,000 cops have been funded.

"The COPS program is helping neighborhoods take back their streets and take back their lives," Attorney General Janet Reno said last fall. "It's replacing fear with hope."

The tough talk about cleaning up mean streets is at odds, however, with how much of the money is being allocated.

Just under half of Texas' $126 million share went to communities reporting 1994 crime rates below the national average of 7.14 violent crimes per 1,000 people.

That, some say, suggests resources aren't being targeted to the most needy areas. In Texas, a quarter of the money went to communities of 10,000 or less — most reporting violent crime rates below the national average.

But violent crime constitutes only one facet of law enforcement, the director of the Community Oriented Policing Services program stresses. "Policing deals with issues that go well beyond criminal behavior alone," said Joe Brann.

Others share his view. "There's a lot of other things that happen that officers need to be out there for, not necessarily just crime," said Dora Ballard of the Comanche County Sheriff's Department in Central Texas.

The department, which reported only five violent crimes in 1994, received $51,572 to add one officer to its five-deputy squad. The deputies patrol, serve warrants and respond to domestic calls and accidents, among other duties, Ms. Ballard says.

— Dora Ballard, of the Comanche County Sheriff's Department in Central Texas

Grants are awarded on the basis of a commitment to community policing, not crime rates.

Houston, where community policing is enthusiastically touted by Mayor Bob Lanier and police Chief Sam Nuchia, is the biggest Texas recipient of the funding.

The $27 million "has allowed the Houston Police Department to put more officers in the neighborhoods, on the streets where they are the most visible and the greatest deterrent to crime, and also to work with the people in the community," said Lt. Wayne Roger Goralski. "It's made a big difference."

Houston hired 151 new officers; obtained the equivalent of 174 cops by buying laptop computers and equipment allowing existing officers to spend more time on patrol; and got enough overtime pay to provide the equivalent of 189 officers.

Of Texas' $126 million, some $9.5 million was for equipment grants and clerical workers. The feds estimate the combination of new technology and clerical staff, freeing officers for patrol, is worth 608 extra cops.

"This is like a godsend from Washington," said Mark Clark of the Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas, when asked about the program.

Not all see it that way.

Communities must pony up a 25 percent match to obtain federal funds — a criteria that has kept some from taking as much as they're eligible for, others from participating at all. Another hurdle is that the federal funding expires after three years, leaving local taxpayers to fully shoulder a new burden.

Among Texas cities reporting at least 100 violent crimes in 1994, some 44 decided not to take the Washington money.

"We felt that with our budgetary constraints ... we did not want to go out and seek additional funds for more officers that we would have to find funding for later on," said Harlingen assistant police chief Robert Archer.

Asked why Houston embraced the program with such gusto when other cities waded in more cautiously, Goralski said: "Both the chief and Mayor Lanier have made a commitment to getting all the tax dollars that they can get back to Houston from the federal government."

Dallas has been less eager to tap the federal spigot. Its $5.5 million share places it behind Houston, San Antonio, El Paso and Austin.

Dallas used the money to hire 60 new officers for its community policing program. "We were eligible to apply for more dollars than we applied for, but the city was comfortable in making that long-term financial commitment for 60," said police spokesman Ed Spencer.

Some remain skeptical of the community policing thrust.

"Community policing is very nice and it does certain things, but it does not reduce violent crime," said Tanya Metaksa, chief lobbyist for the National Rifle Association. "They are not apprehending criminals."

Metaksa is scornful of the COPS program, terming it "touchy-feely type legislation" that's doing little to halt crime.

To CLEAT's Clark, who has been a police officer for 18 years, that criticism is misplaced. "I can't help but think visibility equals less crime," he said.

Bears eclipse Moon, Vikings

By Ron Lesko
AP Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — The Minnesota Vikings lost Warren Moon and Robert Smith. Then they found several ways to lose the game Monday night.

Walt Harris blocked a field goal attempt with 3:47 to play, and Bryan Cox forced and recovered a fumble with 1:47 left as the Chicago Bears held on for a 15-13 victory over the slumping Vikings.

"A lot of breakdowns hurt us," Minnesota coach Dennis Green said. "Breakdowns in protection, and penalties hurt us, too."

The battered Bears (3-5) built a 15-3 halftime lead behind Dave Krieg's passing and their first rushing touchdown of the season, a 1-yard dive by Rashaan Salaam.

Led by Moon and their defense, the Vikings (5-3) rallied with 10 third-quarter points.

Moon reinjured his right ankle while being tackled after an incomplete, and Brad Johnson replaced him in the fourth quarter and twice led Minnesota into scoring range.

But Harris charged through virtually untouched to block Scott Sisson's 47-yard field goal attempt. The Vikings immediately got the ball back at midfield as backup defensive tackle Jason Fisk intercepted a deflected pass, and Johnson's 18-yard pass to Jake Reed gave Minnesota a first down at the Chicago 31.

But on third-and-14 at the 35, Cox stripped a scrambling Johnson and pounced on the fumble. The Bears then ran out the clock. "Brad did a courageous job," Green said. "He tried to get us into the end zone. But we needed to score points, and we didn't."

Cowboy haters take notice: Big D finds old form

■ After impressive 29-10 victory over Jimmy Johnson's Dolphins, Dallas adds grist to mill for haters of America's Team.

AP Football Writer

A scary thought for fans who love to hate America's Team: At midseason, the Dallas Cowboys are healthier and playing better than any NFL team, certainly well enough to win their fourth Super Bowl in five seasons.

The only good news for Cowboy-haters: first they have to win the NFC East, where they trail Washington and Philadelphia.

A look at the NFL at midseason:

NFC

Basically, it's eight teams vying for six playoff spots with three — Minnesota, Detroit and Carolina — shaky at best.

East: Three playoff teams here — Redskins (7-1), Eagles (6-2) and Cowboys (5-3). Washington is looking better and better — the Redskins' 31-16 win over Indianapolis demonstrated they can beat winning teams and the offense is turning into one of the NFL's best behind the "New Hogs" up front.

Philadelphia may have found its quarterback inadvertently — Ty Detmer threw for 342 yards against Carolina. The defense is solid and Ray Rhodes won't let his teams lose.

But Dallas is still the big boy. "We played back to the way we can," Emmitt Smith said after the 29-10 win over Miami in the JJ-JJ mano a mano, a game in which Michael Irvin was truly back with 12 catches for 186 yards.

But it won't be easy. There are still two games left with Washington, which beat the Cowboys twice last season. And the next three games are Philadelphia at home, at San Francisco and Green Bay at home. If the Cowboys win all three, watch out.

Central: Green Bay (7-1) will probably win the division despite the loss now of its two top receivers — Robert Brooks and Antonio Freeman, who broke his arm Sunday in the ugly 13-7 win over Tampa Bay. But the Packers want home field for the playoffs and they still have a tough road trip that includes back-to-back games in Kansas City and Dallas. They'll probably go to two tight ends (and they have them in Keith Jackson and Mark Chmura). They also have to hope that Don Beebe, Desmond Howard and rookie Derrick Mayes can respond, that Terry Mickens gets healthy quickly and Anthony Morgan finally re-signs.

Belle files for free agency while Burks opts to stay

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Albert Belle filed for free agency Monday and Ellis Burks, who could have filed, decided to stay with Colorado when the Rockies gave him an $8.8 million, two-year contract.

On the first full workday of baseball's offseason, the Detroit Tigers traded outfielder Ruben Sierra to the Cincinnati Reds for two low-level minor leaguers, and the Kansas City Royals dealt pitcher Mark Gubicza — the last active player from their 1985 championship team — to California for designated hitter Chili Davis.

Meanwhile, Chicago Cubs outfielder Luis Gonzalez became the first of the 12 players who need service time from the strike to qualify for free agency to file for it.

Attempt to interview Mayes a 'Sterling' experience

I happen to like the name Stewart. The dictionary will tell you that Stewart is a variant of "Stuart," a name of kings.

Now, I am not royalty, though at times, I think I am pretty darn close. My parents just thought it would be neat to carry on the Stewart family name, and there you have — Stewart.

Sometimes in an attempt to be cute, people add prefixes and suffixes to the "Stew" portion of my name, but not until last week had my name been altered so greatly since to Permian football coach Randy Mayes. I will always be known as "Sterling." Go Figure.

It is just the latest episode in an odd, adventurous, frustrating and comical series between the coach of one of Texas' dominant high school programs and some guy looking to finish his story.

My dealings with Mayes started as a younger cub in 1995 trying to break as a Midland football writer. Three weeks into the 4-5A season was the Midland High-Permian game and my overly-demanding boss said talk to Mayes for the MHS-Permian advance. No problem, right? Wrong! It was the day before the game with my story due in a matter of hours. I called his home, and his wife, Cynthia, said he was at Midland Memorial Stadium watching the junior varsity. And sometime in the third quarter on the visitors' side, Mayes spoke about what his team needed to do.

Lee-Permian week in 1995: I appreciate Alexander Graham Bell like the next guy but I knew the phone would not be the way to go. My task was to catch Mayes on Tuesday, get some comments and go back to Midland. Wrong. I got to practice just after it started.

Three hours later, the Panthers were ending their last set of sprints and I had seen more of Mojo than I ever wanted. I asked Mayes if he could answer some questions as he headed to the field house. He said, "Yeah, if you can walk to the field house with me, I've got to go to a booster club meeting." Booster Club? What in the world?

OK, I fired some questions as our walk turned into a trot. We kept our speed going into the field house where the young scribe kept writing those key quotes and while the coach was readying for a shower. I didn't have to break out the water-proof notebook. Wilburn Story in 1996: OK, I know the system. Get to Permian before the guys go to practice. That is what I did. At 2:45 p.m., I'm ready for Mayes.

And at 3:30 p.m. he wasn't ready for me. Mayes was running late and needed to get out to the field. We made a plan for me to talk to him and Ja'Quay Wilburn the next day. Job taken care of 24 hours and 60 driving miles later.

Permian open week 1996: Coach Mayes and I have made plans for a 2 p.m. meeting on the Thursday before this week's Lee-Permian game.

Mayes was in his office, with two others on their way out. Then I hear, "Good to see you, Sterling." Didn't think much of it.

Until "Sterling" came up about 10 times during the course of the interview. Apparently, while Mayes scanned over play sheets and relived old Lee-Permian games, he kept referring to me as Sterling.

I mean what do you do? Tell this man, who made time of his schedule for you, that your name isn't Sterling.

Uh... No!

That would take a big man. I stand 5-foot-9 but in the Permian field house that goes down to 4-7. I can accept, that in the religion of Mojo, I have officially been christened with the name of Sterling.

Barkley suspension delays debut

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Charles Barkley's regular-season debut for the Houston Rockets has been put on hold, but he won't miss his rematch with his former team.

Barkley was suspended for one game and fined $5,000 Monday for a fight with New York's Charles Oakley in an exhibition game last Friday. Oakley, who instigated the fight by slamming Barkley to the floor, got two games and a $10,000 fine.

Barkley will sit out the Rockets' opener Friday night at home against the Sacramento Kings, but he'll be on the court the next night when Houston travels to Phoenix to play his old team, the Suns.

"I feel bad I'll miss the home opener, but I guess it's ironic that I'll open the season in Phoenix," Barkley said after Monday's practice. "I'm glad it's over with."

Barkley and Oakley tangled early in Friday's game. Both were ejected, which costs them an additional $1,000.

Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich applauded Oakley's punishment.

"(Barkley) was a victim," Tom-

Houston Rocket Charles Barkley talks to reporters Monday after the NBA suspended the forward for one game for a fight during an exhibition game.

janovich said. "It was one of the most brutal attacks of trying to hurt somebody."

"I'm prejudiced, but I thought our guy was pushed into a position where he had to do what he had to do," Tomjanovich said. "I don't think there's a guy around who wouldn't have reacted in that manner."

Barkley knew his punishment was coming.

"I felt like I'd get it," Barkley said. "Anytime you throw a punch it's an automatic suspension. I felt it was totally uncalled for and a cheap shot but that's a good suspension — two games and $10,000.

Oakley was suspended and fined without pay for fouling Barkley, initiating the scuffle and flagrantly fighting. Barkley was penalized for retaliating.

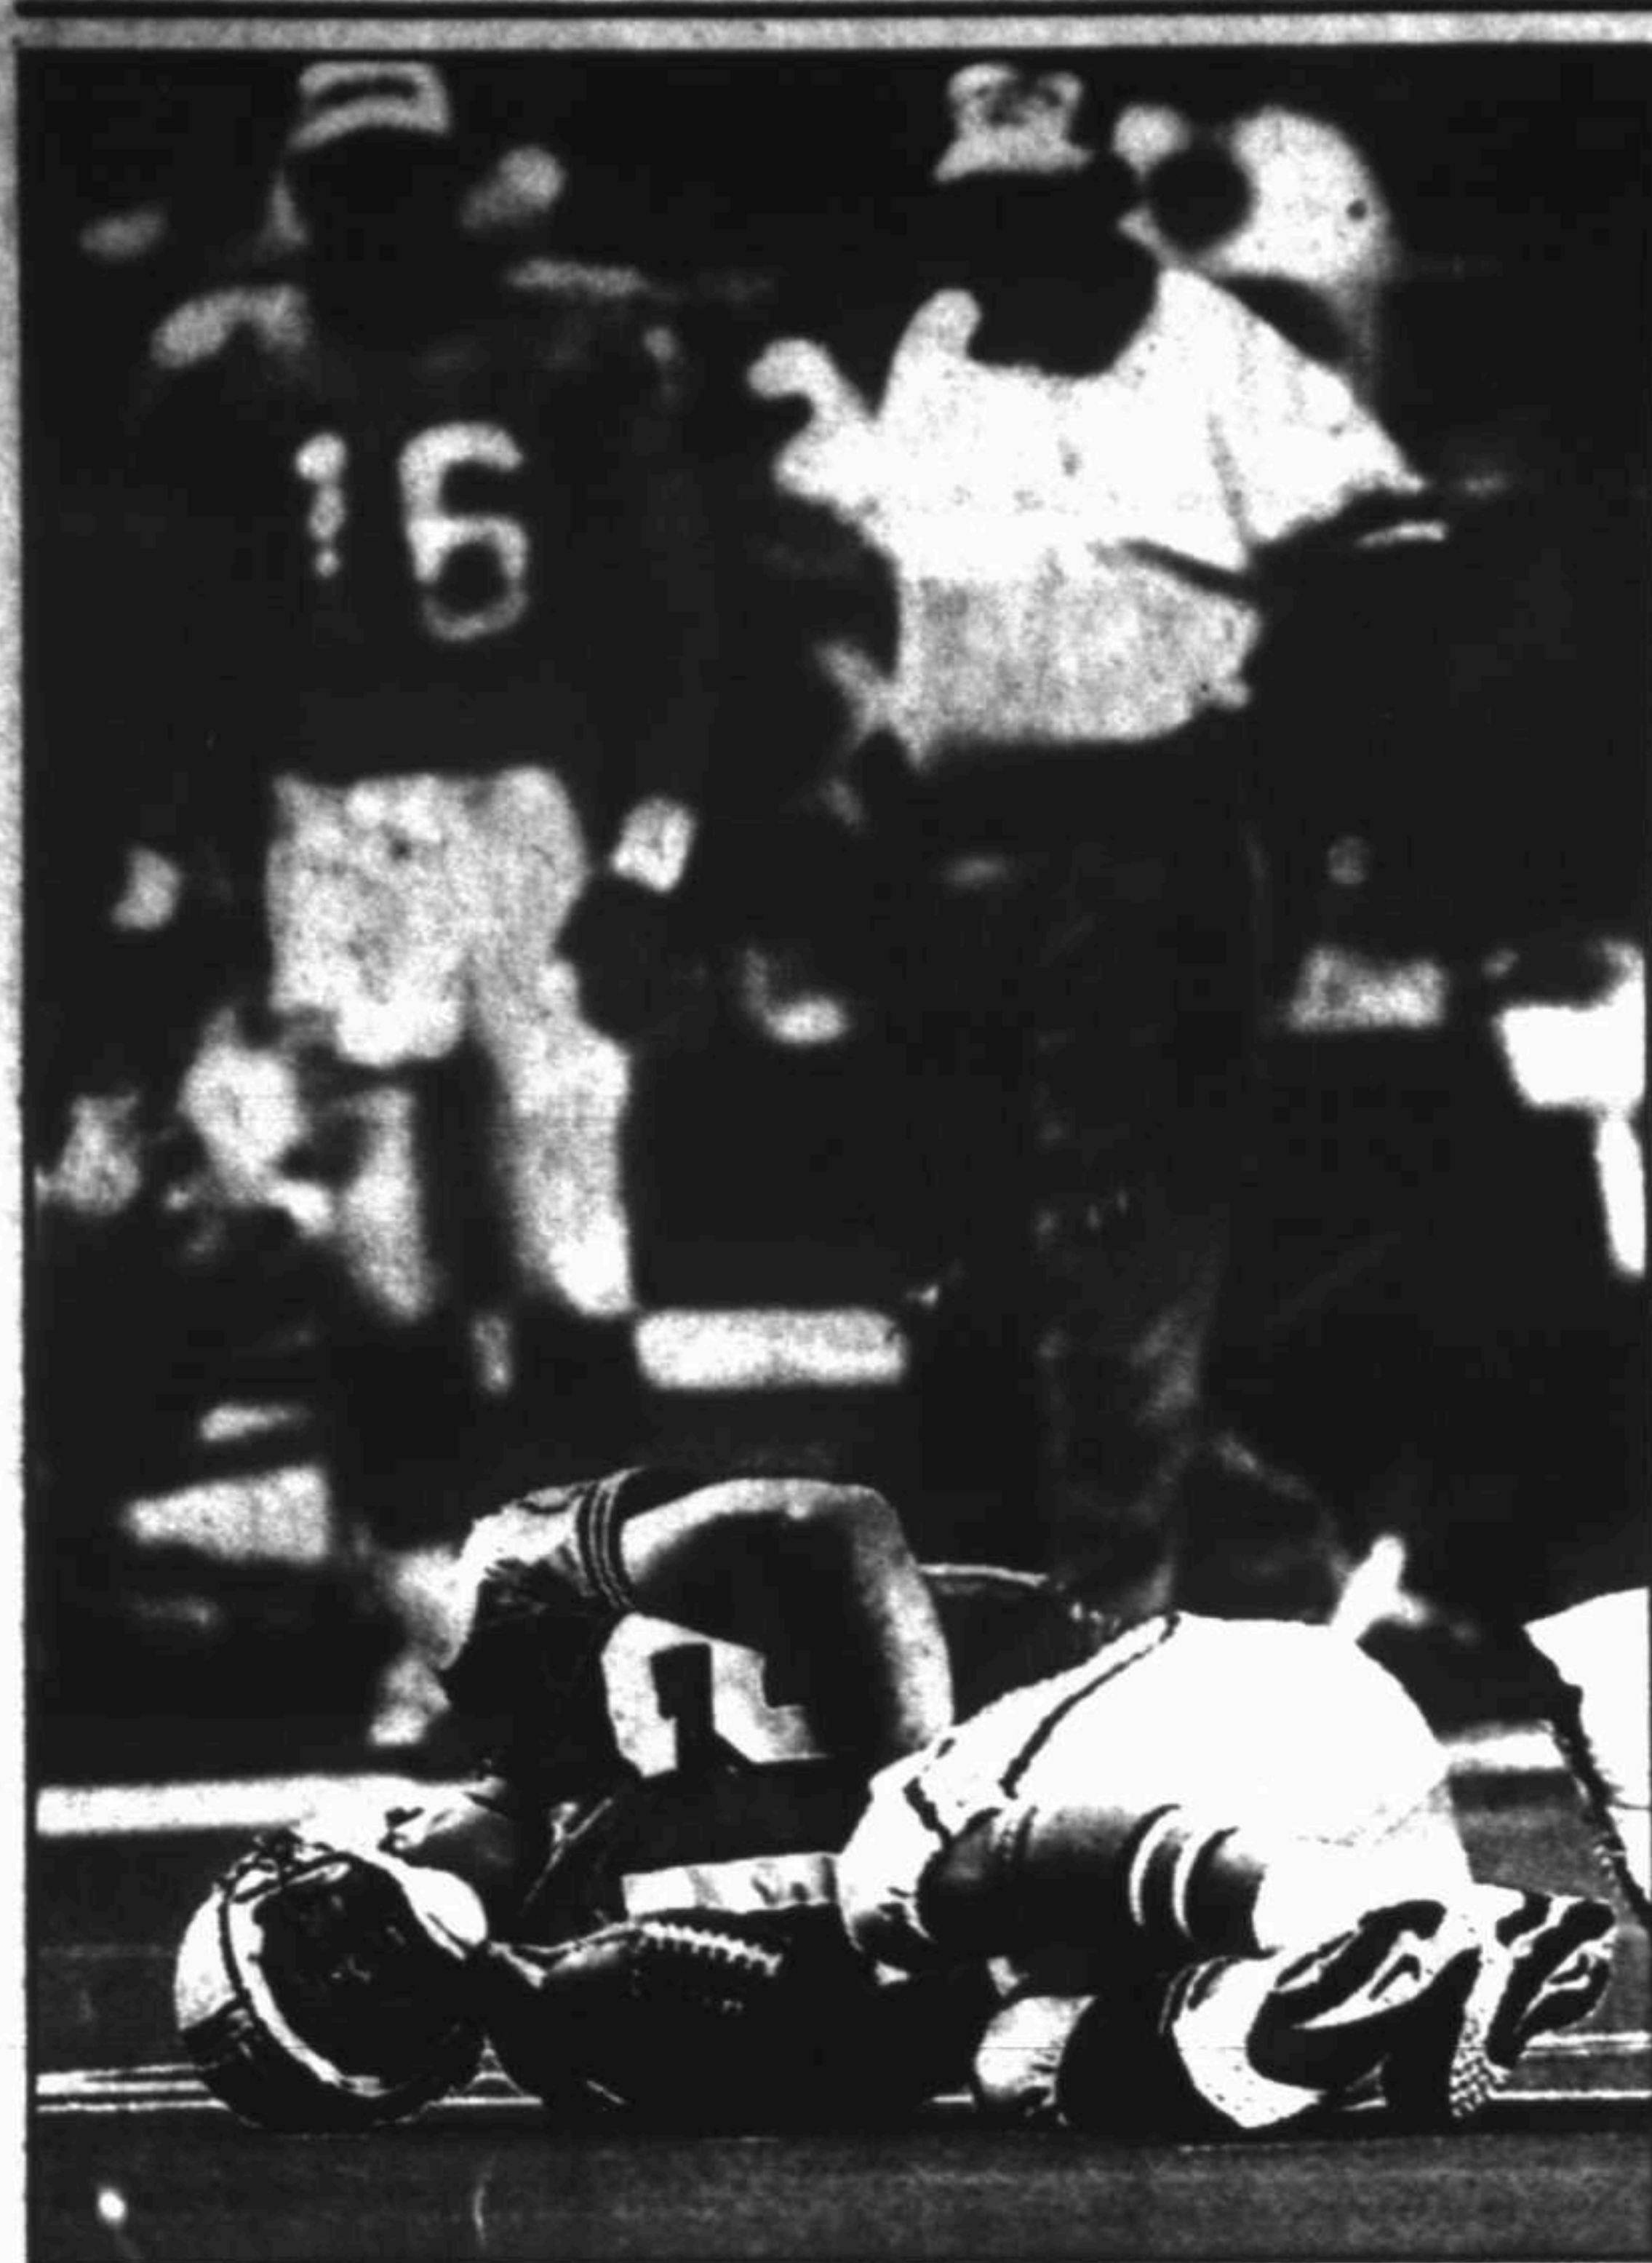

"I guess you have to get body slammed, punched in the head and let them get away with it nowadays," Barkley said. "I just don't know what they're thinking up there in New York."

"I guess you're supposed to run and that's even worse. Then your friends will talk about you like a dog."

Tomjanovich said he may start free agent Kevin Willis on Friday, but that move would interfere with his rotation at center.

"Kevin will play a lot but I don't know about starting," Tomjanovich said. "I think I'm going to start him but I don't know what to do. You need a backup if there's foul trouble."

The Rockets also will start the season without starting point guard Brent Price. He's out for two to three months with a broken bone near his left elbow.

Oilers still trying to get by close losses

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — The Houston Oilers did almost everything necessary to beat the San Francisco 49ers. They knocked Steve Young out of the game and contained Jerry Rice.

In the end, however, the Oilers found themselves in an all-too-familiar place — the wrong side of a one-point game.

Seven of their nine losses last season were by seven or fewer points. They lost to the 49ers 10-9 on Sunday and 20-19 to the Kansas City Chiefs in the season-opener.

"Basically these last two games (Pittsburgh last week and San Francisco) really are an indicator of where we are as a football team," coach Jeff Fisher said. "Now that we've split those games I can tell you we have improved."

A sack, a 49-yard screen pass and a fumbled punt were primary reasons the Oilers didn't upset the 49ers. The screen pass set up the winning touchdown and Malcolm Floyd's fumbled punt set up a 49er field goal.

That's still a shorter list of problems to correct than Fisher had at the beginning of the season.

"I know that we know how to win now," Fisher said. "We just have to continue doing what we do best. Nobody panics, they believe that we are going to make the plays and we came close."

The Oilers had a chance to kick a fourth-quarter field goal that would have given them a 12-3 lead and made San Francisco's final touchdown meaningless.

Instead, quarterback Steve McNair was sacked for a 10-yard loss, taking the Oilers out of field goal range.

"It came down to making a first down or kicking a field goal to win the game," Fisher said.

"Before, it was special teams, the defense and something was always happening on offense," Fisher said. "Now we just need to correct a few mistakes and make the plays."

Quarterback Chris Chandler played into the fourth quarter despite a painful groin injury. But his mobility became so limited, Fisher took him out of the game and could affect his availability for Sunday's game at Seattle.

Chandler went for a checkup Monday to determine his status.

"I don't think it's good for the team if Chris remains questionable all week and we make a decision at game time," Fisher said. "I'll talk with Chris and if he is confident he can improve by week's end, he'll start."

"If he needs rest, we'll make that decision soon and not drag it out."

Owner Adams says Astrodome will be home to '97 Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — The Astrodome will likely be home to the Houston Oilers for another year, with the team moving to Nashville, Tenn., in 1998 although a stadium there won't be completed then, owner Bud Adams said.

"We'll play somewhere in Tennessee," Adams said Sunday. "I'm not sure where, but I'm reasonably certain we'll play in Tennessee."

Adams said the team probably would remain in Houston through 1997 as he would not try to buy out the last year of his Astrodome lease.

Such a buyout for an early move to Tennessee would have to be approved by Mayor Bob Lanier, Harris County Judge Robert Eckels and Astrodome USA owner Drayton McLane Jr.

"I expect to play here in 1997," Adams said. "Mayor Lanier has already said he is not going to let me out of (the lease)."

The Oilers are expected to move next year's training camp from San Antonio to Tennessee. They have talked with Memphis officials about playing in the Liberty Bowl until the new stadium is ready but have been unable to work out a suitable deal.

When they do move, the most likely site appears to be Vanderbilt's stadium.

The Oilers have an agreement to move to Nashville, but nothing in the deal specifies that they have to move before a new stadium is ready in 1999.

It has been speculated for more than a year that the 1996 season would be the Oilers' last in Houston.

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue admitted three weeks ago that the league was trying to help Adams negotiate his way out of the last year of the lease. But a league source told the Houston Chronicle for Sunday's editions that the NFL expects the Oilers to stay put next season.

Since last year, when the team settled a lawsuit with the city of Houston and Harris County, the Oilers' public stance has been that they intend to honor their lease. To settle the lawsuit, they agreed not to leave without permission.

Adams told reporters Sunday that he will meet in the next few weeks with U.S. District Judge Lynn Hughes, who is presiding over the settlement, to discuss his Astrodome contract.

Adams has said the team is legally bound to move in 1999 to Nashville unless he wants to pay a $117 million buyout of that contract. Oilers fans had stayed away in droves because of the planned move. But a surprisingly large and enthusiastic crowd of 50,122 watched the Oilers beat Pittsburgh last week in the Astrodome. And 53,843 attended Sunday's 10-9 loss to the San Francisco 49ers.

Also Sunday, Adams described a Nov. 5 referendum that seeks voter support to build a downtown stadium for the Houston Astros, as a "total financial mess" but stopped short of saying he would vote against it.

"I could not vote for something like that," said Adams, who noted the ballot question does not specify how the proposed stadium will be funded.

Adams, who had wanted a new domed stadium for his Oilers, had previously endorsed the referendum.

Jimmy gets defensive about Dolphin 'D'

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

DAVIE, Fla. — Jimmy Johnson turned defensive on the subject of defense Monday, cutting short a news conference because the questions annoyed him.

Contributing to Johnson's testiness was a 29-10 loss to his former team, the Dallas Cowboys. The Miami Dolphins deployed soft secondary coverage in Sunday's game, with cornerbacks Terrell Buckley and Calvin Jackson playing at least five yards off Dallas' fleet receivers. The strategy backfired when Troy Aikman repeatedly completed passes in front of the defenders, and the result was Johnson's most lopsided loss in his first year as the Miami coach.

"I'll take the blame," he said. "Maybe I made them overly cautious because I kept harping on them not to give up the big play." When asked about a cornerback who lined up in his own end zone 10 yards off a receiver, Johnson bristled and rose from his chair.

"Any other questions?" the coach said, and then he walked out of the room.

Before departing, Johnson said Aikman enjoyed "a career day." The Dallas quarterback completed 33 of 41 passes for 363 yards, Michael Irvin made 12 receptions for 186 yards and one score, and the Dolphins slipped to 26th in the NFL in pass defense.

"We had a problem of giving up the big play in previous games," Johnson said. "Because of that, the guys were a little more cautious than they should have been."

"I would have liked to have seen them challenge a little more. But if you're going to get on anyone, get on me."

Johnson's bend-but-don't-break plan worked until halftime, when Dallas had 248 yards but trailed 10-9.

But in the third quarter, the Cowboys finally hit a big play. Irvin slipped behind broken coverage for a 61-yard reception to set up the touchdown that put Dallas ahead 22-10. It was the 12th play gaining at least 30 yards against Miami this season.

"You go with what you're able to execute," Johnson said of the defensive scheme. "What you want and what you have are not always the same."

Johnson said one of the reasons the Cowboys wanted to play well was not because they were meeting their former coach but because "so many of us on the team are from Florida. That's where the media missed the boat on our joke or something. We couldn't believe it. It helped get our attention."

Dallas coach Barry Switzer said the prayer, read over the public-address system, was strange.

"Nate Newton leaned over to me and said, 'Coach, I don't think that prayer was for everybody.' We knew it certainly wasn't for us," Switzer said.

Quarterback Troy Aikman had one word for it: "Tasteless."

Newton said one of the reasons the Cowboys wanted to play well was not because they were meeting their former coach but because "so many of us on the team are from Florida. That's where the media missed the boat on our effort, maybe too much effort. None said that they now go into a fourth quarter expecting something bad to happen."

"Maybe we're pressing a little," said receiver Mike Adams. "It makes you sick when you know you had those games won in the fourth quarter and we couldn't finish it off."

"I can't say that we're not playing hard enough because we're playing very hard," Adams added. "I'm sure we'll be in that situation again this year, and hopefully next time we'll put the game away."

Texas tight end Pat Fitzgerald says he doesn't think the team can practice any harder. He said the team knows it has to win the rest of its games, beginning against Baylor on Saturday, to have a chance at winning the Big 12 South Division.

Texas Tech leads the standings at 4-2 and is considered the favorite because it's playing the best right now.

"Everyone is working their tails off," Fitzgerald said. "We know we don't have any margin for error. We've had our close losses, and now it's time to start winning. It's crunch time."

Texas quarterback James Brown said he thinks the Longhorns will be focused and hungring against Baylor.

"I think we're going to have a good game Saturday," Brown said. "The remaining games are about who wants to give up and who wants to get better."

"I don't think anyone has given up," Brown added. "Each player wants to get better. We can still win the conference and go to a bowl game."

Baylor (4-3, 1-3) will present problems for a defense that still hasn't proven it can stop the run. The Bears' Jerod Douglas and Elijah Burkins each ran for over 100 yards in a 49-21 victory over Iowa State on Saturday.

But it's Baylor sophomore quarterback Jermaine Alford who has Mackovic worried.

"He's given them a big-play quarterback," Mackovic said. "He can throw deep and he can run if he needs to. They are coming out very aggressively with him in there."

Baylor coach Chuck Reed said Monday that Texas is a little like a wounded animal.

"They've struggled, but they've played some great teams and outplayed them," Reed said. "We know what they're capable of. We know they're backs are against the wall. They have to win out to win the Southern Division. They always give us their best shot."

What does Johnson want that he doesn't have at cornerback?

"G" at players," he said. "How's that? And a great pass rush."

Johnson gave his players Monday and Tuesday off, saying they need a break at the midpoint in the season.

After a 3-0 start, the Dolphins (4-4) have slipped to fourth place in the AFC East. They play two of the co-leaders the next two weeks, traveling to New England for Sunday's game and facing Indianapolis at home Nov. 10.

"We have put ourselves in a crucial position," Johnson said, "but we still have opportunities."

New England, Indianapolis and Buffalo are 5-3, but the Dolphins are the only team with just one loss within the division. They've already beaten New England and Buffalo, and they have yet to play the Colts in Miami.

Johnson said he's glad the hyped showdown against the Cowboys is history.

"I'm looking forward to getting back into the AFC East," he said, "and the games that have a meaning toward our division."

Pre-game prayer whips Cowboys into frenzy

Sept. 30 in Veterans Stadium.

"We've got three tough games in a row," Smith said. "After today we're going to forget the win over Miami. We've got the Eagles. Then we have to travel to San Francisco and get Green Bay. Philadelphia is on a roll. When we wake up tomorrow, that's who we're going to be thinking about."

Newton said it's strange to look at the newspaper after the first half of the season and see the Cowboys trailing the Redskins and Eagles in the standings.

"Usually this time of the year we're in the lead or we're tied with somebody," Newton said. "We've dug us a hole but we can still take control of our division."

Nicholls St.-Southwest Texas contest more than a game

Associated Press

When one of Nicholls State's two team buses broke down before the game against Southwest Texas State, the players might have suspected they were in for a long day.

But they probably never guessed that they would become embroiled in a fierce, five-overtime battle under a brutal Texas sun before finally outlasting Southwest Texas 49-36 on Saturday.

"I've never been involved in anything like that," said Nicholls head coach Darren Barber. "Few football games really go the distance and become more than a game. This one did. It was absolutely incredible."

In the early going the game looked like a blowout as the Colonels (4-4, 2-2 Southland) built a commanding 20-0 halftime lead. Demetrius Patterson scored on two interceptions and Ricardo Wilson caught a 2-yard touchdown pass from Brad Zeller to end the half.

But then Southwest Texas (4-4, 0-2) rallied in the second half with two touchdowns by Claude Mathis and a 1-yard touchdown by David Williams to tie the game.

Mathis' last score came with 18 seconds remaining in the fourth quarter to tie the game 20-20, setting up the possible game-winning extra point.

"You always hope that something special will happen, but I pretty much expected the game to be over," Barber said.

Then, something special did happen. Murphy Edwards ducked through the Bobcats' line and blocked Matt Wieland's kick, sending the game into overtime.

And then the real game began. "The five overtimes were like a ballgame in themselves," said Southwest Texas coach Jim Bob Helduser.

The teams traded field goals in the first overtime. Then a 12-yard touchdown by the Bobcats' Aaron Allen was matched by Terrence Spears' 1-yard touchdown in the second overtime.

"We were dying — they were dying," Barber said. "It was hot, hot, hot."

Temperatures soared into the mid-80s, threatening to bench some of the players with heat exhaustion, but none were sidelined.

"Linebacker Quincy Sorrell — that guy really pushed the envelope. He played with a bruised knee. When I looked at him going into the third overtime I had to think, 'How much longer can these guys last?'" he said.

The Colonels coach said one moment on the sidelines set the tone for the final two overtimes.

"We (the coaches) got them together and told them the team that quits first will lose the game. We told them, 'We're in a war, we're in a battle. And the team that wants it most will win,'" Barber said.

The teams traded field goals again in the third and fourth overtimes before Spears scored on fourth-and-1 in the fifth overtime.

Southwest Texas won 49-36.

Southwest Texas coach Jim Bob Helduser said the game was "one of the greatest I've ever coached."

Southwest Texas State coach Darren Barber said the game was "one of the greatest I've ever coached."

he'll play Sunday

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Steve Young remembers the hit that gave him the concussion. That, along with his rapidly diminishing headaches, left the 49ers quarterback encouraged he would be able to play at New Orleans next Sunday.

"I got some of my memory back pretty quick, and then overnight I got a lot a sleep and I really feel a lot better," Young said Monday. "My head doesn't hurt too much today and that's a really good sign, that you can shake your head and it's not real painful."

Young planned to see a neurolowing something like that," Seifert said. "What will it mean at the end of the week? I don't know right now."

Young said the concussion was the fourth he has suffered in years with the 49ers but first since 1992.

"There is a cumulative effect, but luckily I haven't had one three or more years, so that you get the benefit of time," Young said. "The times they get scary are when you get three or four in the same year."

Young planned to see a neuro-

had one of those for a few years. It kind of reminds you that you still play football."

Young, who has been playing most of the season with a groin strain, was knocked out of Sunday's game at Houston on the third play, when he was hit by charging linebackers Micheal Barrow and Joe Bowden as he rolled out and set up to pass. Unknown to most of the players, the play had been whistled dead because of a timeout called by a Houston defengist Tuesday to make sure faced no significant risks resuming play.

"I would assume if I pass the because of the tests that we can these days, the CAT scans a everything else, that I'd be safe go and play next week, I hope Young said.

Nevertheless, Young, w played through his groin strain lead the 49ers past Cincinnati a once kept scrambling without a helmet during an exhibition

Young was taken from the game to a Houston hospital, where he underwent a CAT scan. Results were negative and he returned to the Astrodom in time to see the 49ers pull out a 10-9 win behind third-string quarterback Jeff Brohm. Elvis Grbac, Young's backup, was inactive Sunday due Though Young was listed as a probable for Sunday's game at New Orleans, coach George Seifried said the team would be cautious about Young's return.

"Basically, what I'm saying is: he feels good right now, everything looks as positive as it could fol-

BEARS: Moon reinjures right ankle

Minnesota, which has lost three of its last four games, hurt itself with 11 penalties for 70 yards. The losses of Smith (left knee) and Moon (right ankle) could end up hurting even more.

The Vikings, who came into the game a 6 1/2-point favorite, won't get any sympathy from the Bears, who have been ravaged by injuries all season and seemed to be bolstered by the return of a few of the injured players. Jim Flanigan returned to get one of the Bears' for 152 yards in the first half, he was just 5-for-9 for 35 yards after halftime. Fortunately, the Bears, their defense stiffened when it had to.

Before he was hurt, Moon ran the Vikings to 10 third-quarter points, including a 54-yard TD

Land speed record attempt fails

GERLACH, Nev. (AP) — Hoping to reclaim the land speed record, Craig Breedlove narrowly averted disaster Monday when his jet-powered car reached 675 mph, then tipped on its side and careened across the desert.

Breedlove, who said the car was traveling 675 mph when it tipped, said his car was "in the bushes but unpinjured after his car, "Spirit of America," went out of control, missed a crowded spectator area by about a half mile and finally came to rest about two miles off the race track.

The crash, stemming from a crosswind in the Black Rock Desert, damaged the car and its rear axle, ending Breedlove's quest this year to reclaim the record from Richard Noble of Britain.

The biggest disappointment, Breedlove said, was knowing he had exceeded the 633 mph record he was trying to break when the car tipped on its side and ended his record-setting attempt.

"It makes it doubly disappointing," said Bill Breedlove, Craig's cousin and operations manager.

"We knew there had potential. It's very frustrating. The car was there but the weather and fate didn't cooperate."

"Obviously, it's not where we wanted to go," Craig Breedlove said, after the first of his two laps.

planned runs. "I guess I'll be busy this winter. It will take a while to assess the problem. It was a good run on power. It just got away from me, but I'm all right. I think the wind was a factor. I think the wind

Breedlove, 59, was the world's fastest man five times between 1963 and 1965. Thirteen years ago, Noble set the mark with a run of 633.468 mph, also in the Black

Extend life of upholstery, draperies, the easy way

"When did you last vacuum your furniture or your draperies?" asks Andy Jencks of Blackmon Mooring Steamatic. You respond, "Who in their right mind would do that?"

"Dust and dirt in upholstered furniture can cause the fibers to wear just like it can in carpet. In upholstery, you have the added ingredient of skin oils which can also damage fabric."

Andy Jencks

Blackmon Mooring Steamatic

can add to allergy problems in the home.

Okay, so there's dirt there, and it's a problem. While vacuuming can help, the best way to get it out is to have the items cleaned. To accomplish this, you don't have to load them up and take them anywhere; Blackmon Mooring Steamatic can clean these items in your own home.

The Steamatic professional will first evaluate the items to be cleaned, then will give you a cost estimate. "We want the customer to know the cost up front," says Jencks.

Next, they will test clean a small patch of upholstery in a hidden area to verify what cleaning method it requires, whether dry or wet cleaning. Once that is determined, the cleaning job usually takes about an hour for a sofa. If it was wet cleaned, it is usually dry and ready for use in two to three hours. If it was dry cleaned, it can be used almost immediately.

Draperies are almost always dry cleaned because of the type fabric they are made of, Jencks reports.

Some extremely delicate fabrics must be cleaned in the shop. In that case, Steamatic professionals will load the item on their truck and return it when it's clean.

"People expect to have carpet cleaned regularly. At the same time, if someone spent $1,000 on a sofa, it makes sense to maintain its appearance and extend its life with regular cleaning also," says Jencks.

Don't wait until it looks bad to call Steamatic, Jencks warns. "By the time there is noticeable discoloration, it may be too late to rescue the fabric." This is another reason for having this cleaning done on a regular basis.

Besides, think of all the loose change and other lost items you'll find whenever you have the sofa cleaned.

Blackmon Mooring Steamatic, founded in 1948, offers a wide variety of home services. They clean air ducts, carpets and furniture. They do restorations from fire and water damage, deodorization and many other services. Call them at 520-8121. There is no extra charge for after hours flood or fire restoration.

Haven't vacuumed your sofa lately? Andy Jencks shows how Blackmon Mooring Steamatic can come to your home and remove dust and dirt that can damage upholstery fabrics. They can also clean most draperies in your home.

Retirees: Avoid 5 common investing mistakes

By Van Percy

Napoleon Bonaparte advised never to interrupt an enemy while he is making a mistake. The reverse, then, should be to caution a West Texas friend in error.

Author Jonathan Pond does just that in The New Century Family Money Book. The book includes the most common investment mistakes of retirees and how to avoid them. Most of these mistakes and their solutions have been discussed in my previous column. Their importance, however, deserves another look.

Selling too soon. Pond says that investors over age 50 are more inclined to sell too quickly because they feel they can't afford to take any risks. Many investments fluctuate in value, but a decline is not always a reason to sell. Rather than selling an investment, ask yourself if, knowing what you know now, you would still buy this stock today. If so, you may be better off not only holding onto the investment but also taking the opportunity to buy more at a bargain price.

Shuffling investments unnecessarily. Retirees often sell solid long-term growth investments and reposition assets in those offering fixed income. As long as there is inflation, there is a need for growth.

Buying the wrong annuity. This robs many retirees of precious income. A pure annuity offered by most insurance companies takes a lump-sum investment and guarantees the purchaser, or annuitant, a lifetime income. The amount of income is determined by the amount of the deposit and the age of the annuitant.

People often buy annuities with guaranteed monthly lifetime distributions. A better approach is to look around for the best annuity with the best rates. Don't rush this decision. Insurance companies and the annuities they offer are not all alike.

Forgetting about taxes. Many retirees immediately begin withdrawing from their tax-sheltered retirement accounts when other taxable money is available. Leaving funds to grow tax-deferred makes more sense than paying taxes on your withdrawal as well as your unsheltered income.

Ignoring inflation. This is probably the biggest investment mistake. For retirees who live on the income from their investments, growth investments are still important. They're the only way to stay ahead of inflation. Ask your investment professional to show you several examples of blue-chip stocks or mutual funds that have consistent records of raising dividend payments. Typically, you will find that these investments not only have a history of increasing dividends but also of growing principal. Increasing income and growth of principal are both necessary to keeping up with the rising cost of living.

There are no guarantees in investing, but avoiding these easy mistakes will increase your chances for success.

MONEY MATTERS
Q. Behind retirement planning?
A. Tucked into the recently passed Minimum Wage Bill are several provisions that can help a great number of people enjoy a more secure retirement. The impact of this new legislation will be most keenly felt among two segments of the population: nonworking spouses and employees of small businesses. High net worth individuals will also be able to take advantage of several windows of opportunity to lower their overall tax burden. For more information on any of these topics:

Planning a time and date for a Christmas party can really be a challenge, especially if you're just now starting. You have to plan around people's other Christmas parties such as soccer teams, spouse's company party, church and civic organization parties—which leaves about two hours at lunchtime on Thursday for your party.

Did you say lunchtime? That's a great idea, according to Sandy Lundberg of the Party Station. "A Christmas party at lunchtime takes a lot less planning and preparation than an evening one," she says. "It can save money, too, because we have special rates for weekday luncheon times."

Sandy and her staff can set up the tables for you in advance, so you can just cover the tables and let your caterer serve the food. "If you serve on paper or plasticware, cleanup is a breeze, also," says Sandy.

The Party Station is actually a great place to have a luncheon or gathering any time, not just at Christmas. The indoor facility can seat up to 300 people. There is a stage for making presentations or awards and the building includes a full service kitchen.

Its location on the far west side of Midland makes the Party Station a great place to host an out-of-town speaker, who will then be just a quick jaunt from the airport. The location is also handy for anyone coming from Odessa.

The Party Station has also been host to barbecues, family reunions and a cookoff or two, making use of the barbecue grills, fish fryers, shrimp boilers and the big smoker. Participants can cook over oak or mesquite wood at no extra charge.

Actually, now is a good time to schedule the best dates for next summer's family reunion, while the calendar is still wide open.

With Midland's mild year-round climate, there are few days that would keep attendees from enjoying a few games of volleyball, basketball, horseshoes or washers on the brightly lit and well-manicured grounds.

The facilities are well suited for meetings, parties, dances, receptions, seminars, fund-raisers or just about any gathering.

The Party Station is located at 6009 Empress, off West Loop 250 between Business 20 and Interstate 20 near the Fina truck stop. Call Sandy Lundberg for detailed directions and to arrange a complete tour of the facilities.

The Party Station has facilities for banquets, parties or other gatherings, with an indoor seating capacity of approximately 300. Outdoors, they have a lighted beach volleyball court and basketball court, along with horseshoes and washers. The address is 6009 Empress, off West Loop 250. The phone number is 520-2132.

Picture the folks in your company or organization enjoying a Christmas luncheon or other gathering at these tables at the Party Station. Evening Christmas party times left are few, but there are plenty of dates available for luncheons. Call Sandy Lundberg at 520-2132 to schedule your event.

Don't park your car on a vacant lot to sell it, let Don Driver and Dealer Services take care of all the details.

Consignment makes buyers AND sellers winners

"On our consignment lot, the seller usually nets more than wholesale (what they would get for a trade-in) and the buyer usually pays less than retail," says Dealer Services owner Don Driver. "That means everybody comes out ahead."

Driver and his wife, Jeanette, bought Dealer Services a couple of months ago. They recently added another associate, Cleve "Beau" Adams, who owned Beausautos on West Wall for many years.

In addition to price, there are other advantages to consignment transactions.

For the seller, there's no classified ad to place (aren't they fun to word just right?), no appointments to show the vehicle to total strangers and no worry about keeping the vehicle spotless for weeks at a time. Dealer Services displays the car for you on their lot. They provide bi-weekly washing at no extra charge, with other detailing services available for a fee. Don, Jeanette or Beau will be happy to check the Blue Book and help you set the price. They handle closing and title transfer, and can also make sure that the new owner has the proper insurance.

All the seller has to do is fill out the consignment form, leave 1/4 tank of gas in the car for test drives, give Dealer Services the test drive instructions (no test drivers under 25, etc.) and provide pertinent information on the car. While the car is on the lot, the title remains in its original name, whether yours or the bank's.

Dealer Services' fees are simple: if the car sells for $2,000 or more, they get $200. If it sells for less than $2,000, they get $100. If you decide to remove the car before it sells, lot rent is $25 per month.

If you're in the market to buy a vehicle, you'll find over 100 on the lot, including cars, trucks, vans, boats and even RVs. Financing is available on some vehicles. You'll find a tag in each one with the asking price, year model and pertinent information (air conditioning, mileage, special features).

What you won't find is a salesperson who sticks to you like flypaper. Browse all you want until you find one you're interested in. Then ask for the keys to take a test drive, or take it to your mechanic. "We recommend having your mechanic check it out," says Driver. "That cuts down on any surprises later."

Driver has books that can provide information on fuel economy and general reliability.

You are free to make a counter offer, or to ask for additional information about the car. Dealer Services will relay your offer and get back to you with the response.

If you reach an agreement, all you do is provide the money (or down payment for some vehicles), provide proof of insurance good for at least 30 days and sign the title, title application, as-is statement, financing contract (if applicable) and drive away.

Dealer Services is located at 1200 North Loop 250 W, on the east side access road between the Illinois/Thomason underpass and Andrews Highway. The phone number is 699-7275.

Still don't believe you can get blood from a turnip?

Meet the IRS, but don't do it alone

A client of Federal Tax Consultants (FTC) once commented, upon receiving a Notice of Intent to Levy letter from the Internal Revenue Service that, "It ain't here and they can't get it!"

On the other hand, the story is told of the IRS agent who had a red liquid in a jar on his desk. When asked about the liquid he replied with a sly smile, "That's blood from a turnip."

FTC founder Charles Frost recognizes the problem of getting "blood from a turnip." But he also realizes that IRS has a very long memory, and what "ain't here" today may be there—and snapped up by the IRS—tomorrow, or even years later.

In fact, local consultant William F. Judd said, "The IRS can hold a taxpayer responsible for tax for at least ten years and quite possibly longer."

Another problem is that what the IRS considers assets and income available for payment of taxes differs significantly from what a taxpayer thinks. That's why the "It ain't here" response often does not hold water.

While there are several methods of resolution to help taxpayers, Judd warned taxpayers against trying to present their own cases before the IRS. "The lawyer's axiom, 'He who represents himself has a fool for a client,' also applies in tax cases."

The IRS collection process is lengthy and complicated. Unless an individual has a strong business background with an emphasis in finance, FTC believes self-representation should not even be considered.

FTC founder Frost is himself a former IRS officer, manager and analyst. He knows in depth how the IRS operates, and is familiar with many procedures they are reluctant to reveal to delinquent taxpayers. After all, the IRS's mission is to collect as much tax, penalty and interest as possible.

Federal Tax Consultants specializes in a process known as Offer in Compromise. This often allows taxpayers to settle for much less than they actually owe. To qualify for this process a taxpayer must meet several criteria. These criteria generally include:

- V Tax and penalty exceed a taxpayer's net realizable equity and
- V Monthly ability to make an installment agreement with the IRS is minimal.

Judd cautioned, however, that because there are so many variables in financial status only a thorough evaluation can determine an individual's eligibility.

This is important because a taxpayer presenting an Offer in Compromise himself, without the evaluation and assistance of FTC, runs a great risk of having his offer rejected. This could result in the individual paying much more in tax than legally necessary.

Federal Tax Consultants also makes use of another little-known option, the Problem Resolution Program (PRP). Judd spoke of a recent case involving a taxpayer whose remittance to the IRS was credited to the wrong tax year. FTC used the PRP to remedy the mistake.

Federal Tax Consultants is a tax consulting firm founded in Amarillo in 1988 by Charles Frost. Contact local FTC consultant William F. Judd at 682-7004 or 1-800-382-6337. The office is open all year to assist with tax matters.

Regulators angry over fight refunds

LAS VEGAS (AP) — State boxing regulators are upset over plans by a satellite dish service to give partial refunds to customers if Mike Tyson's Nov. 9 fight with Evander Holyfield doesn't go three full rounds.

The Nevada Athletic Commission will meet Friday to discuss the offer by National Programming Service to refund one-third of the $49.95 price if the fight doesn't make it until the end of the third round.

"We don't mind people betting how many rounds a fight will go, but we don't want anybody guaranteeing that if it doesn't go so many rounds you get your money back," said Marc Ratner, director of the state athletic commission.

"It's part of the sport of boxing where a fight can end in a first-round knockout or go the entire 12 rounds."

National Programming Service has been advertising the refund for satellite dish owners who buy the fight before Nov. 9.

It comes in the wake of the Tyson's aborted fight with Bruce Seldon, which ended in controversy in the first round. In Tyson's four comeback fights, he has not fought a total of eight full rounds.

"The last fight was so controversial in the way it ended that we really need to see a good, long competitive fight," said Hugh Panero, whose Request Television distributes the pay-per-view show to cable companies. "What would be nice is 12 rounds with them in the middle of the ring at the end of the last round."

Panero said he had not heard of any cable companies making similar offers for the fight, which will be for the WBA heavyweight title held by Tyson.

Though Holyfield is a former heavyweight champion, oddsmakers in this city's casinos don't think the fight will last long. At some sports books, the over-under proposition is three rounds, while at others it is two.

Ratner said offering the rebate gives the impression that something is guaranteed and that the outcome of the fight may be predetermined.

"It puts undue pressure on everybody, the fighters, the officials, the doctors," Ratner said. "It calls the sport into question. It's stupid."

Gordy Fink, deputy attorney general for the athletic commission, said the commission has no direct power over Showtime, which sells the fight to cable companies, or the companies themselves.

But Fink said promoter Don King is licensed by the state and could be made to answer about the promotion.

Edberg, on his way out, beats angry Stich in Paris Open first round

PARIS (AP) — Stefan Edberg, playing in his next to last pro tournament, beat an angry, sarcastic Michael Stich 6-2, 6-4 on Monday in the first round of the Paris Open.

Edberg will play in Stockholm,

Sweden, after this tournament. He may play in the Davis Cup final against France on Nov. 29-30 Dec. 1. "I am still playing good tennis but I'm not satisfied because it's not good enough for me," Edberg said.

Stich, like Edberg a former Wimbledon champion, had little patience for the officiating. "You short-brained or what," Stich was heard to say when umpire Rich Kaufman was trying to explain the calls.

Stich wanted to look at the television replays to prove his point. "We go to Eurosport after the match and we check out the replay," he said. "If I am right, you'll never be up on the chair again. Is that a deal?"

TREND: Denver looks like class of AFC

(From 1C)

But whatever happens, Brett Favre isn't likely to be at his best simply because he doesn't have the rapport with the new guys (except possibly Beebe) that he had with Brooks and was getting with Freeman.

Minnesota (5-2 going into Monday night's game) can probably make the playoffs, but Warren Moon is showing signs of age. The other contender is Detroit (4-4), which looked more like a contender for the No. 1 draft choice Sunday, losing 35-7 to the Giants at the Silverdome.

West: San Francisco (6-2) is the class here because its defense may be the NFL's best, a strange thing to say about a team in which the offensive guys have always had the glamour.

The 49ers also know how to win. How else to explain a 10-9 victory against a tough Houston team with Jeff Brohm at quarterback and the offensive line hurt?

Carolina (5-3) could make the playoffs, a remarkable feat for a second-year expansion team. But the Panthers have to learn to win on the road to make any real noise — they're 4-0 at home, 1-3 away.

AFC

Denver is beginning to look like the class of the conference, although Pittsburgh remains solid.

East: New England is playing better than the other two 5-3 teams — the Colts and the Bills. "I'm not sure about this team," says Patriots coach Bill Parcells. When he said that in New York, it meant he was about to win a Super Bowl.

That Pats aren't likely to do that, but Drew Bledsoe seems back on course, Terry Glenn (to whom Parcells referred to as "she" in training camp) may be the best rookie wide receiver in the league and the defense is showing signs of playing the way wants it to.

Buffalo's defense is good, but not good enough to carry a struggling Jim Kelly past a round or two of the playoffs. And Indianapolis finally seems worn down by injuries, particularly on defense. Miami?

Jimmy Johnson suggested this is a building year. He's 4-4 and starting six rookies, meaning even the playoffs are looking dim.

Central: Pittsburgh (6-2) and Houston (5-3) are playoff teams and the Steelers have a schedule so easy they could be home for the AFC title game — they might not meet a team with a winning record again until they are home against the 49ers on Dec. 15.

Houston's no fluke. For once, Bud Adams made a shrewd move by announcing they'll stay in Texas another year. Maybe they'll have a home field now.

West: It wasn't a surprise that Denver (7-1) beat Kansas City at Mile High Stadium on Sunday. It was a surprise that the score was 34-7 and that the Broncos were one yard short of 500 yards against the Chiefs' defense.

Kansas City (5-3) will rebound — Marty Schottenheimer teams always do. They also always seem to lose in the playoffs, which is what's likely to happen again this season.

The Raiders (4-4) and Chargers (4-4) are playoff contenders. The Raiders are coming on but have to keep Jeff Hostetler healthy. The Chargers are falling without Stan Humphries and Junior Seau.

WAYNE'S WORLD: The Detroit Lions are catching nobody by surprise.

"At one point, I talked to a cornerback on the way off the field," Herman Moore said after the Lions were embarrassed at home 35-7 by the Giants on Sunday. "I asked him, 'Are we that predictable?' And he said, 'Honestly, yes.'"

What's also predictable is the team's schizophrenic ways under Wayne Fontes.

True, this was the Lions' first loss at home in 11 games. But every season, they manage to throw in a stinker or two against a team they should beat — they were 10-point favorites in this one and lost by 28, with six turnovers, five of them interceptions.

Fontes is a delight as a person, which makes his players play hard when his job seems on the line.

And they usually play well late, so they'll probably win six of their last eight or something like that, make the playoffs again and save Fontes' job.

Until, perhaps, they lose in the first round of the playoffs and return to schizophrenia again next season.

land as part of the deal for Jose Canseco. He went to the Yankees for Danny Tartabull in July 1995, and was sent to Detroit on July 31 in the deal that brought Cecil Fielder to New York.

"I've always liked reclamation projects. I consider him a little bit of one," Reds general manager Jim Bowden said.

Sierra, 31, hit 12 homers and drove in 72 runs for the Yankees and Tigers last season.

Detroit agreed to pay most of Sierra's $5.5 million salary for 1997, the final year on his $28 million, five-year contract. The Tigers will pay up $4,875,000, leaving the Reds to pay $625,000.

Cincinnati gave up outfielder Decomba Conner, 23, who hit .281 for Class A Winston-Salem last year, and right-hander Ben Bailey, 22, who was 10-11 with Winston-Salem and Charleston.

Gubicz, 34, had been with the Royals since 1981. He had the right to veto the trade, but welcomed it because he will be playing an hour away from his home in Northridge, Calif.

Gubicz had a 4-12 record for the Royals in 1996. His season ended July 5 at Minnesota when a line drive struck him and fractured his leg.

Davis, 36, spent seven of his 16 major league seasons with the Angels. The three-time All-Star hit .292 last season with 28 homers and 95 RBIs.

"In all honesty, I don't think I give myself enough credit," Lehman said. "As my confidence has grown my game has gotten better."

Lehman just may be right when he says, "I think my best golf is ahead of me."

DIVOTS: The lift, clean and place rule was in effect. Tiger Woods shot a 68 Monday despite a triple bogey on No. 17. He played the front nine on Friday in 43 and the other 63 holes in par. His father, Earl Woods, 64, was expected to be released from the hospital Tuesday after experiencing chest pains Friday. The elder Woods plans to travel with his son to the Australian Open next month.

Frank Williams, manager for Greg Norman, said the Australian withdrew from the Tour Championship because he had an overseas commitment. ... Lehman's runaway victory was not close to being a record. Johnny Miller won the 1975 Phoenix Open by 14 strokes. Jose Maria Olazabal won the 1990 World Series of Golf by 12 strokes.

Mickelson, with four victories, and Mark Brooks, with three wins, including the PGA Championship, were considered the front-runners in the player voting for the PGA Tour player of the year award.

But Mickelson finished 12th at 283 and Brooks was tied for 27th at 295 as Lehman leaped over both of them to top the money list.

"Well, I needed to finish third or higher to stay on top of the money list and I didn't do it," Mickelson said. "It's a little disappointing, but Tom played great this week. He deserved it."

Lehman, 37, broke into the PGA Tour in 1983 but in three years won less than $40,000. The next six years he scratched out a living on tours in Asia and South Africa as well as such minor America tours as the PGT, the Dakotas, the Golden State, the South Florida and the Carolinas.

He returned to the PGA Tour in 1992 and won his first tournament at the Memorial in 1994. Since then he has been a constant contender, playing in the final group of four major championships — twice at the Masters and twice at the U.S. Open without winning — before playing in the last group at this year's British Open and holding off Nick Faldo.

Lehman finished 1996 with two agreement that would allow those players to file provisionally. They also worked to extend the filing deadline for all free agents from Nov. 10 to Nov. 14.

White Sox pitcher Alex Fernandez, also in that group, was expected to file Tuesday.

Acting commissioner Bud Selig said he will hold an owners' meeting "very shortly" to consider the new collective bargaining agreement. He has not set a specific date.

Seventeen players filed for free agency Monday, raising the two-day total to 22.

Belle, who hit 50 homers in 1995 and 48 more this season, may set a record for the highest average salary. The temperamental outfielder broke off negotiations from Cleveland after the first week of the season and is awaiting a new offer.

Indians general manager John Hart said his goal was to keep Belle in Cleveland.

"At this point, our goal is to talk to the Indians, and in two weeks talk to the other teams as well," said Belle's agent, Arn Tellem.

contender for the PGA Tour player of the year award, which is determined in a vote by players.

"I told Tom coming up No. 18 that he's got my vote," Faxon said. "He came in here ready to play."

The $540,000 first-place check gave Lehman $1,780,159, breaking the record $1,654,959 won by Greg Norman last year and edged Phil Mickelson by $82,360 as leading money winner.

Lehman's 268 was a stroke better than Nick Price's winning score in the 1994 PGA Championship at Southern Hills when he ran away by six strokes over Corey Pavin.

Tiger Woods, whose one bad round was a second-round 78 on the day his father was hospitalized with chest pains, finished with a 68 and tied for 21st at 288.

The $55,800 check gave Woods $799,594 for the year in only eight events. The rookie earnings record of $881,436 was set by David Duval last year in 26 tournaments.

While Lehman was the big winner, Mickelson, who came into the tournament leading the money list and ahead in the point system that determines the PGA of America player of the year, was the big loser.

Deposed figure skater Harding revives woman

■ Tonya saves life of elderly woman who collapsed while both were visiting neighborhood bar.

By Bob Baum

Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — Tonya Harding couldn't have invented a better story to help change her image.

She's a lifesaver. The deposed figure skating champion says she believes God was behind her last-second decision Sunday to stop at a suburban bar near her home for a few minutes to play video poker.

Shortly after Harding and her godmother Linda Lewis arrived, Alice Olson, 81, collapsed and stopped breathing. Harding called 911 with her cellular phone and administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

"It was very, very scary," Harding said. "I kept my calm and cool and knew what I was doing. I had to do this. I thank God that I was there. Nobody else in the bar knew what to do. ... This lady was literally dead for probably two minutes. Linda and I brought her back to life."

Kim Ip, owner of the Lost and Found Saloon where the incident occurred, confirmed Harding's version of events.

"The lady came to in a couple of minutes," Ip said. "I'm grateful that Tonya was here."

Harding comforted the woman until paramedics arrived, Ip said.

Olson, who suffers from heart problems and diabetes, was treated overnight at Milwaukie Providence Hospital and released on Monday.

"I wouldn't be here if it wasn't for her," Olson told KOIN-TV. "She saved my life."

In an interview with The Associated Press, Harding said she and Lewis were on their way to Harding's home when they decided to stop at the bar.

"I really believe that God had me there for a reason because we weren't going to stop because I'm trying to sell my house and somebody was going to come look at it and I had to get home to clean it," Harding said. "We decided to stop for about 15 minutes."

Harding said she never intended to take her story to the media, but members of Olson's family called KOIN to relate the story. Harding said she didn't know of the impending publicity until her agent, David Hans Schmidt, called her from his Phoenix office after getting a call from KOIN. Harding worked with the elderly in the Meals on Wheels program as part of the conditions of her probation after pleading guilty to conspiracy to hinder prosecution in the January 1994 assault on rival skater Nancy Kerrigan just before the U.S. Figure Skating Championships in Detroit. Harding went on to win the title in Kerrigan's absence, but later was stripped of the crown and banned from the sport for life.

Gas prices higher

NEW YORK — Natural gas prices moved higher Monday, extending last week's gains on continued concerns over low supplies in parts of the country at the start of the cold weather season.

The December natural gas contract settled 2.7 cents higher at $2.731 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Natural gas is the main source for heating most American homes and businesses. The current level in storage is at 83 percent of capacity, or about 9 percent below last year, according to the American Gas Association.

In other markets, December crude fell 1 cent to $24.85 a barrel; November heating oil fell 6.36 cent to 71.46 cents a gallon; November unleaded gasoline rose .20 cent to 70.30 cents a gallon.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar hit a nearly 3 1/2-year high against the yen Monday, strengthening over unexpected Japanese political bickering and new signs of economic weakness in Japan that diminished demand for yen.

The yen's retreat also contributed to rallies in the mark, pound and other important currencies, indirectly leaving the dollar mostly lower in global foreign-exchange transactions.

In late New York trading the dollar cost 114.20 yen, up from 113.31 yen Friday and nearly 43 percent higher than its all-time low reached in April of 1995. During intraday dealings the dollar hit a high of 114.43 yen, the strongest level since April 1993.

The dollar cost 1.5190 marks, down from 1.5210. The British pound cost $1.6128, up from $1.5973.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.2609 Swiss francs, down from 1.2611; 5.1330 French francs, down from 5.1390; 1,521.30 Italian lire, up from 1,521; 1.3440 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3450.

Markets sink

NEW YORK — Stocks slid into the close Monday as interest rates rose in bond trading amid jitters that an impending flood of new economic data might upset an optimistic inflation outlook.

The Dow Jones industrial average surrendered an early 36-point gain and fell 34.29 to 5,972.73 as an afternoon rebound fizzled. It was the blue-chip barometer's second finish below 6,000 in three sessions and its fifth losing performance in six sessions.

Broad-market measures also surrendered early gains as bond prices slipped, sending interest rates higher. The yield on the 30-year Treasury bond rose to 6.83 percent from late Friday's 6.81 percent.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by nearly a 7-to-4 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled 383.63 million shares.

The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 3.66 to 697.26, and the NYSE's composite index fell 2.28 to 370.98.

The Nasdaq composite index fell 6.71 to 1,215.89, and the American Stock Exchange's market value index fell 3.24 to 566.55.

The Dow's oil-related stocks, which provided much of the index's early strength, ended lower: Chevron fell 1 1/8 to 66 after a brokerage downgrade, Texaco fell 1 to 102 1/4, and Exxon fell 1/4 to 88 1/4.

U.S. budget deficit falls to 15-year low

N.Y. Times News Service

Washington — The U.S. government finished its 1996 fiscal year Sept. 30 with the lowest annual deficit in 15 years — $107.331 billion — President Bill Clinton said.

That's down from the fiscal 1995 shortfall of $163.917 billion and smaller than the $116.75 billion deficit estimate for 1996 the administration projected only weeks ago. It's also a 63 percent cut from the record $290.2 billion shortfall in fiscal 1992, President George Bush's last year in office.

"When I ran for president four years ago, no challenge loomed larger or seemed more difficult to solve than the deficit," Clinton said Monday in University City, just outside of St. Louis, Missouri. After subtracting inflation, Clinton said, the last fiscal year produced "the lowest deficit in 22 years."

Monday's announcement didn't surprise investors, who forecast Monday's number would be in the range of $109 billion to $116 billion. "We're making phenomenal progress, and the level of interest rates has begun to reflect that," said Robert Schumacher, senior fixed-income analyst at Zurich Kemper Investments in Chicago, which manages $79 billion in investments.

Even so, there's heavy lifting ahead. Without further cuts in spending or increases in revenue, the deficit is likely to rise to $165 billion in the current fiscal 1997 year that started Oct. 1 and grow each year after that until it reaches $210 billion by 2002, the Congressional Budget Office estimated before today's announcement. Additionally, interest payments on the government's $5 trillion debt increased 3.5 percent during the fiscal year to $343.955 billion.

Clinton administration officials refused to give a new estimate for the 1997 deficit. All Budget Director Franklin Raines would say is that this year's deficit will "certainly end up being lower" than the $144 billion that his office estimated in March. The CBO will give a new estimate in January.

Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin said Clinton will continue his quest for a balanced budget agreement with Congress if he's elected to a second term next week. Rubin pooh-poohed reports of Wall Street's fear that the balanced budget goal will be lost if Democrats regain control of one or both houses of Congress.

"You now have an environment where fiscal responsibility has come to the fore," Rubin told a group of reporters. "Very few people don't accept that tenet. It might well be that (the president) can (balance the budget) better with a Democratic than Republican Congress."

If continued progress is made toward a balanced budget, Rubin said, the U.S. should enjoy "solid growth for some time to come." The recovery from the 1990-91 recession is now in its fifth year.

Recoveries turn into recessions when the economy overheats and interest rates rise, Rubin said. He added he sees no sign of inflation reigniting, and therefore interest rates rising, "as far as the eye can see."

The dollar's strength in foreign exchange markets will work to keep U.S. inflation and interest rates down, Rubin said. "It is very much on our national interest to have a strong dollar."

In any case, said Kathleen Camilli, director of economic research at Tucker Anthony Inc. in New York, "I don't think there's any room to allow the deficit to balloon back toward the $200 billion level. The trend in deficit reduction is a good one whether it comes from higher taxes or cuts on the spending side."

Analysts agree the deficit will keep growing if the federal government doesn't change the way it pays for Social Security and other entitlement programs such as Medicare, federal health insurance for the elderly.

Lawsuit reform group donates big

■ Texans for Lawsuit Reform have contributed more than twice as much as second-highest group to state candidates.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Texans for Lawsuit Reform is the largest contributor to candidates for the state Legislature, where the group plans to seek more limits on injury lawsuits against businesses, according to a published report.

The Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story Monday that the organization contributed $467,998 through Oct. 1 to candidates running for the Texas Legislature.

The Texas Association of Realtors was second in contributions with $207,551. The Texas Trial Lawyers were third in reports with $206,500.

Group executives say their goal is to curb civil lawsuits that have clogged Texas courts and enriched lawyers while damaging businesses.

"We are in the races to win," said Houston liquor store chain owner Richard Trabulsi, who directs the organization's political giving.

"There are critical races between tort reformers and those who are opposed to tort reform, and we are going to support those candidates in a very straightforward manner, aimed at winning the race," he said.

The group has given to 12 of the 15 state Senate races and 93 of the 150 House races, according to records.

Republican Ron Clark, a lawyer running for office in Sherman, says the $37,606 given to him by the Texans for Lawsuit Reform "helped level the playing field" in his race against Democrat Roger Sanders.

Clark, whose contributions from the group amount to about one-third of his total, said he already favored lawsuit reform.

"It's not a case of their expected some sort of quid pro quo," he said.

Dick Weekley, a real estate developer from Houston, said Texans for Lawsuit Reform bases its contributions on who backed its legislative agenda in 1995 and who had pledged to support its new goals of additional business protections when the Legislature convenes in January.

Some public interest groups have criticized Texans for Lawsuit Reform, saying they are trying to buy legislative races for an agenda that will hurt consumers.

"Being the largest single contributor, they can definitely control the outcome of certain races and may determine the power on certain key committees," said Tom Smith, director of the Texas chapter of Public Citizen.

Goosebumps scarily successful franchise

Associated Press

Imagine a quiet bookstore in a small town. It could be anywhere in the United States.

Business is good in the children's department — parents and kids are buying plenty of old and new classics. Suddenly, a series of books rises up, takes over and becomes the No. 1 seller. They don't stop there — they take over the bookstore in the next town, the next city, the whole country.

When the stories reach kids' TV, they become No. 1 there too.

This tale from the bookstore is the story of Goosebumps, the children's horror books that can only be described as a monster hit.

Five million Goosebumps copies are sold each month. More than 130 million have been sold since the series, which now has 48 titles, was introduced in 1992.

"It became much bigger than anyone, myself included, would have predicted," said Joan Waricha, president of Parachute Press, which publishes the books along with Scholastic Inc.

Scholastic produces the Goosebumps TV series, and both companies oversee licensing agreements that allow other companies to put the name Goosebumps on clothes, toys and other items.

The companies don't release sales figures, but at $3.99 a copy, the books are a multi-hundred-million dollar business.

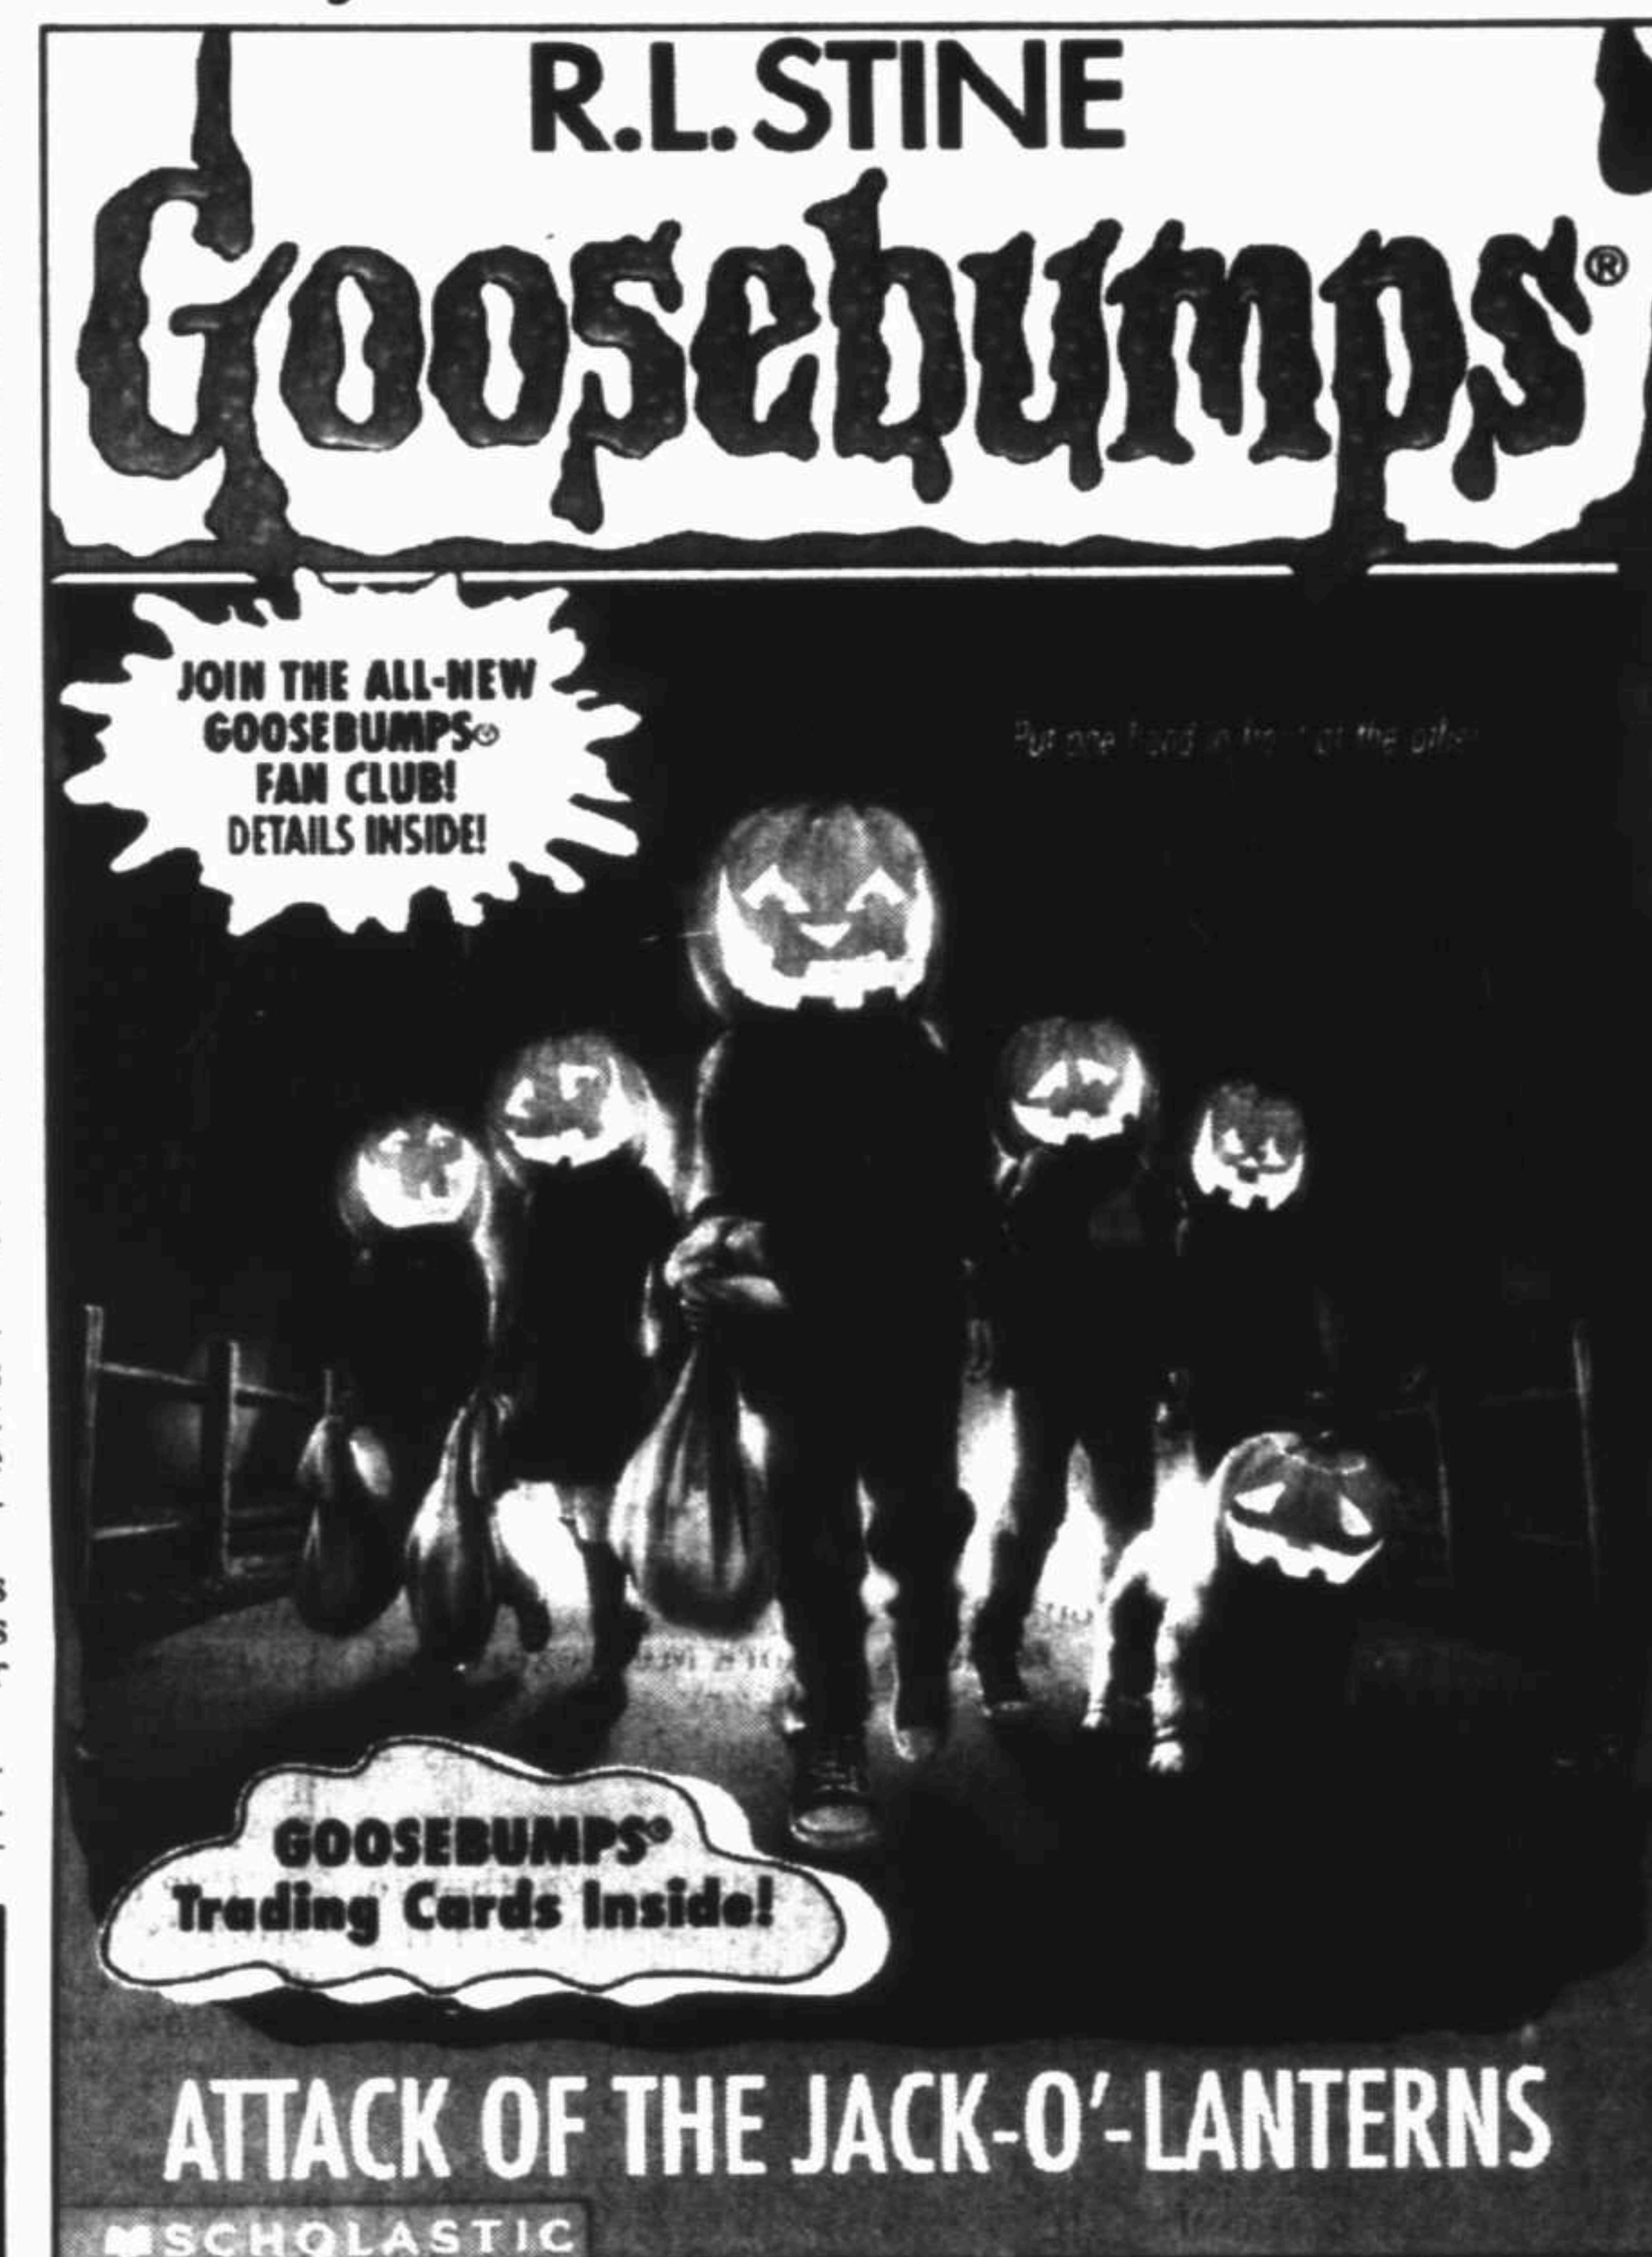

Goosebumps are written by R.L. Stine, a children's author for 25 years. Their success also took him by surprise, but more important to him is that through Goosebumps, many children "have discovered reading. This is the thrilling part to me."

Stine, who also writes the Fear Street horror series for children, uses different formats for Goosebumps. Some are a straight read, others allow readers to pick the ending. Each book has a different set of characters. Protagonists can be boys and girls.

They are full of surprises. A monster coming out of a grave may be a neighborhood kid in a fright wig. But there's plenty of the supernatural and extraterrestrial too — what seem like ghosts and aliens often turn out to be. Goosebumps are year-round best sellers, but Halloween is a particularly good time for retailers and companies that manufacture Goosebumps-licensed products to promote the books and other merchandise.

The Target discount store chain is holding Goosebumps events this month, and Hallmark is selling Goosebumps party goods.

Taco Bell is giving away Goosebumps toys. Frito-Lay is putting little Goosebumps books into 42 million bags of Doritos. Both companies are owned by PepsiCo Inc., which has put Goosebumps coupons on 12-packs of its soft drinks.

T-shirts, caps and other clothes with the Goosebumps logo are big sellers because "it's very cool to be a Goosebumps reader and a Goosebumps fan," Waricha said.

Children ages 7 through 13 took quickly to the books, which were selling 1 million copies a month soon after they first appeared.

"They're not really scary, but they're mysteries ... They usually have different kinds of endings — some of them are happy and some are sort of weird," said Tess Kuntz, a 10-year-old from Glen Ridge, N.J. She reads Goosebumps and Fear Street books.

Many parents and teachers think Goosebumps are good because the books get children into reading.

But the books also have drawn some criticism from educators who fear that many children may Goosebumps and nothing else.

The TV show started on the Fox network a year ago. Stine said children asked for Goosebumps to be turned into a TV program.

Despite the books' popularity, getting TV network executives to accept Goosebumps wasn't easy, said Deborah Forte, executive producer of the show.

"They said it will never work ... anthologies don't work," she said, noting that networks prefer programs built around a continuing cast of characters.

"They said we needed to reinvent for TV, but we decided to go with our vision," Forte said.

Thirty half-hour shows have been produced along with six prime-time specials. Almost all are based on Stine's books.

Goosebumps toys began appearing this year. New toys usually grow out of movies or TV shows — comic books are as close as they get to literary — but Goosebumps was too successful not to be spun off into toys and games.

Goosebumps began in the mind of Robert Lawrence Stine, 53, who is fulfilling a wish he had when he started writing at the age of 9: "I grew up in Columbus, Ohio, dreamed of moving to New York and becoming a writer and now I'm doing it."

Before Stine started writing scary stories, he wrote humor books, Indiana Jones action stories, coloring books and even bubble gum cards.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

New managers at mutual funds no cause for concern

By Eric Tyson

Q: I am looking to invest in mutual funds in my retirement accounts and am 44 years old. After reading your books and some others, I was all set to buy one of the Mutual Series of funds run by Michael Price until I heard they were being bought by Franklin. I read that Mr. Price agreed to stay for five years, but my horizon is much longer than that. Do you think I should go ahead or pick another fund?

A: The fact that Michael Price has sold his firm, the Mutual Series of funds, to Franklin would not in itself deter me from investing in his funds.

First, as you say, Price has agreed to stay on for five years. He also has significant financial incentives based upon the performance of the funds during the next several years.

Price could have walked away from his job years ago, since he made so much money early on. Clearly, he's one of those wealthy people who is continuing to work not because he needs to put food on the table or pay for the roof over his head!

Franklin bought the Mutual Series — which primarily manages money in the U.S. stock market — because it historically has not been great at stock funds. Franklin also acquired Templeton, which manages money mainly in foreign stock funds.

If Price were to leave, I would hope and expect that Franklin would have Price pick his successor.

If Price does leave in the next five to 10 years and the fund lags its peers, you could sell without concern for tax consequences, since you would be keeping the fund shares inside a tax-sheltered retirement account.

Q: It seems that it's been musical chairs for fund managers at Fidelity Investments in recent years. I hold a number of Fidelity funds, in my retirement account as well as in a regular brokerage account. I am concerned at the high level of manager turnover at Fidelity.

Should I sell my existing fund shares and put the proceeds in more stable

A: Partly because of performance problems and partly because of Fidelity's culture, managers at Fidelity move around a lot.

While Fidelity has a good long-term track record with most of its U.S. stock funds, the performance of many of Fidelity funds has lagged the market averages and the competition in recent years.

When one manager leaves a fund and is replaced by a new manager, so long as that new manager is good, you shouldn't have to worry. However, since most new managers want to do things a little differently, turnover of managers usually leads to some short-term trading by a fund — which increases the costs to shareholders.

Given the significant increase in assets under management at Fidelity in recent years and the fact that the economies of scale in running larger funds have not been passed along in the form of reduced fund operating expenses, I am a bit less enthusiastic about investing in Fidelity these days.

However, that does not mean that I wouldn't invest in Fidelity funds at all or that I would recommend that you sell your current Fidelity fund holdings.

Since you wouldn't owe tax in selling your retirement-account investments, why not consider trading in some of the less-stellar Fidelity funds you hold inside your retirement account?

As Fidelity is weakest at bond funds and international stock funds, consider paring those holdings first.

For the U.S. stock focused funds you hold, compare the performance of your holdings during the past several years to similar funds and relevant stock market indexes.

As for your non-retirement Fidelity fund holdings, I would be more inclined to hold onto them. If you bought them several or more years ago, you would owe quite a bit of capital gains tax if you sell.
