TEAR BOMBS QUELL KLUXERS

Blacksmith Of Cumby Scared 'Em

Blue Jeans Williams Gave Campbellites Run for Their Lives During The "Black Land Revolution" in Texas.

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD
Record News Staff.

In the first of this series of political articles democratic control of Texas from the inauguration of Richard Coke in 1872 until the passing of S. W. T. Lanham was reveiwed and then dismissed. Then came a little warrior from east Texas—Thomas M. Campbell. Joseph Weldon Bailey was the power behind the political throne in Texas and he broke a convention deadlock by a famous speech in which he said "the Campbells are coming" and sure enough the Campbells came.

The winner felt that he was a second Hogg. As governor he demanded the full rendition of land in the black land counties and a law was enacted.

* * *

THE political hell broke loose again. The black land farmers, all democrats, rebelled and fought Campbell's renomination. Blue Jeans Williams, famous Cumby blacksmith, was dragged from his smithy and introduced by proxy to the Texas populace.

This small conflagration was economic rather than personal, the Campbellites were given the scare of their lives. Smart politicians slipped into Cumby, poured honied words of political friendship into the ears of Blue Jeans, obtained photos of the honest blacksmith in his whiskers and work day attire, gave wide circulation to their trophies and Campbell was saved, although he lost Dallas and a bunch of the other big counties, Blue Jeans rolling up 129,000 votes, something unusual in those days when cast against a candidate asking for a second term.

Cyclone Davis and other remnants or relics of dying populism, returned to the party in this primary campaign and fought for God and home and the sage of Palestine. Then prohibition became the one paramount as well as acute issue, although it had been a dragging one for many years, and Oscar B. Colquitt won the nomination for governor after a bitter contest and became the successor of Campbell.

* * *

COLQUITT'S first term was a battle royal with a hostile legislature from start to finish. Again the democracy of Texas was split into two factions or parties both under the same tent—for prohibition and against prohibition. Colquitt led the anti-hosts and held the affection of the small farmer and the tenant. Colquitt announced for reelection in 1912.

In the spring of that year the pro-democrats led by General M. M. Crane, Thomas H. Ball, Cato Sells, Cullen F. Thomas, Thomas M. Campbell, Joseph E. Cockrell and a host of others, captured the state convention and sent forty immortals to Baltimore. Woodrow Wilson was nominated for president. The immortals returned to Texas clammoring for a clean sweep and Judge W. F. Ramsay, noted lawyer and banker and jurist was pitted against Colquitt for the primary nomination.

* * *

COLQUITT buckled on his armor, faced the avalanche of immortals and their followers and hundreds of pro preachers who urged his defeat, gave blow for blow, hurled brick for brick, stink-pot for stink-pot and when the ballots had been counted this Texan who began life as a tenant farmer and made stepping stones of minor offices until he had reached the highest in the gift of the people, had buried the immortals, the pride of the Texas judiciary and bar and all the retainers, by an adverse majority of fifty thousand.

Colquitt's second term, like his first, was spectacular and stormy. A legislature controlled by pro democrats defeated many of the economic recommendations of the governor. To be a wet was a crime in eyes of the ultra dry and to be a dry was to be a fanatic in the eyes of the ultra wet—all sons of Thomas Jefferson. There were no republicans to flay or flail and so the dry democrats flayed the wet democrats and the wet democrats flayed the dry democrats throughout the four years of the Colquitt regime.

* * *

THEN the democratic call boy paged James E. Ferguson whose meteric coming and the side lights of his reign afford material for another and perhaps other stories.

Tomorrow: The coming of Fergusonism to Texas and the prophecy of William A. Hanger.

CURLEE WRITES HAMILTON NOTE ON TAX SYSTEM

Former Street Commissioner Wants His Detail Of Opposition

FORMER WILL SPEAK

Says He Will Have More To Say Later On Proposed Charges

An announcement that he would have a statement to make in a few days regarding his protests on the city's proposed new tax equalizing and assessing system was made yesterday by W. B. Hamilton when questioned as to the nature of the opposition that had developed. For the present, he said, he would not amplify on his statements made at the city council meeting Monday night which urged that the commissioners proceed with caution in their steps toward contracting for a new tax system.

Mr. Hamilton reiterated that it was not his intention to stand in the way of more equitable equalizing measures for Wichita Falls.

Says Revision Necessary.

He asserted his belief that a revision of the system now in use was a necessity, but he also remarked that the method by which the council proposed to bring about this revision would be attended by unsatisfactory results. He further intimated that his opposition was directed more at the Sommers or kindred systems than against improved equalization methods.

On the other hand, announcement that the council was seriously considering awarding a contract for the work and that opposition had been found against it, brought out considerable favorable sentiment Tuesday. A number of tax payers here assured city officials that they were heartily in accord with the movement to improve the equalization system and that they believed any of the three methods on which bids were presented would bring a decided change for the better.

Curlee Writes Letter.

That an active campaign in support of the council's plan for installing the system is planned was indicated by a letter written yesterday by W. S. Curlee, local real estate and insurance man and former city street commissioner, to Mr. Hamilton in which he asked for the latter's reasons for protesting against the movement. Mr. Curlee asserted last night that he was strongly in favor of any proposal designed to secure a more equitable tax equalization and that he could not conceive of any valid opposition against such a proposition. In his letter he asked that Mr. Hamilton make public the grounds on which his opposition was based. The latter indicated that these would be fully covered in due time.

Another Conference

The proposed taxing system was the subject of a conference yesterday afternoon between Mayor Collier, Walter Pollack, president of the manufacturers Appraisal company, owners of the Sommers system, and J. Ben Stoner, owner of the Stoner system. Both of these firms have submitted bids for the work. A third bid has also been submitted by the local engineering firm of Montgomery and Ward.

Mayor Collier yesterday stated that the city was merely awaiting developments and was ready to listen to any protests that might be made.

Mrs. Evans was the American born widow of a British subject. She was assassinated last August near her hacienda in the state of Puebla.

The attorney general declined to discuss the details of the statement he proposed to lay before the president, until after his conference with the chief executive.

Butler Says Coolidge Election May Come from Congress

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—The democratic and independent nominees "after abandoning the east as a battle ground" and now "executing a double shift" both candidates are "abandoning the west," William M. Butler, chairman of the republican national committee declared in a statement issued here tonight.

Declaring that the "great region known as middle America," is for Coolidge and maintaining that Mr. Coolidge will be elected or the election thrown into congress Mr. Butler said that the latter contingency is not probable, "but we do know there is work still to be done to insure victory. The vote must be gotten out."

Whiskey and Idleness Keep Europe In Debt to U. S., Revivalist Avers

Dr. Hobbs Before University Club Declares Prohibition And Work Overseas Would Pay Us Off In 10 Years.

Dr. J. R. Hobbs of Birmingham, Alabama, Baptist revivalist, addressing members of the University Club at the luncheon Tuesday at noon at the Kemp Hotel, declared two things "hurt Europe."

"The people do not want to work, and they drink too much whiskey. My opinion is," the speaker declared, "that if the money the Europeans spend on drink could be turned to the war debt that debt could be paid in 10 years, or if they would go to work, they could soon pay the debt."

Dr. Hobbs has but recently returned from a tour of the Holy Land.

"After once seeing Europe, every man of you would appreciate being an American and would love your country more," said Dr. Hobbs.

"This country of ours is such because we are a working people, producers. In Europe the people look for leisure. The glory of America is that we're busy.

"This is the greatest and best country in the world and you men of this country can keep it so."

NO FISHING FOR GUINN WILLIAMS ON ELECTION DAY

Congressman Says It's Too Late to Begin Such Practice Now

FOR ENTIRE TICKET

Going to Vote the Party List From Stem to Stern, He Says

"The republican noise being made throughout the state will in all probability prove to be a tempest in a teapot and when it is all over and the votes are counted, the Lone Star state will be in its same old class—the star state of the democratic party."

This was the opinion expressed yesterday by Guinn Williams, congressman from this district, who announced while enroute from Washington to his home in Decatur that he would actively support the democratic ticket. He has placed himself in the hands of the state democratic committee and will make what ever speaking engagements that body sees fit to arrange.

Visits Daughter Here.

Mr. Williams spent some time with his daughter, Mrs. Ted Harris, and at noon was a guest of the University club at its regular weekly luncheon. Later in the day he went to Electra where he was guest at a Lions club luncheon there.

His attitude on politics was voiced by the observation that "I have never scratched the democratic ticket and I've never gone fishing on election day; and it's too late to begin now. I am for the whole democratic ticket from top to bottom and from stem to stern.

"In years gone by an election in Texas was considered settled when the democratic primary was over but just recently the high priests of the Golden Calf party have endeavored to beguile the unsuspecting into straying far afield and following after stranged gods.

Calls It Republican Noise.

"The republican noise throughout the state will in all probability prove to be a tempest in a teapot and when it is all over with and the votes are counted, the Lone Star state will be in its same old class—the star state of the democratic party."

Mr. Williams said he believed that Texas will roll up a bigger democratic majority than ever on account of the noise the republicans are making; because in former years when the republicans were quiet, about half the democrats, figuring the election settled at the primary, forgot to vote on election day.

PINK THEORIES ATTACKED

Socialist Speaker Says LaFollett's Proposals Are Impossible

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Senator LaFollette would be powerless to enforce the demands he is making even if elected president, and he stands for a continuation of the capitalistic system in essence, Frank T. Johns, socialist-labor presidential candidate told an audience at Cooper Union tonight.

"The working class will be as little able to buy back the full product of its toil as at present," Mr. Johns said, "and Mr. LaFollette would have to invent some way of connecting with the planet Mars in order to dispose of the surplus product. To dispose of it on earth is an impossibility.

Auto Wheel Visits Plate Glass Front

A large plate glass window of the North Texas Furniture company at Ninth and Scott was almost totally demolished early last night when a wheel from a passing automobile left the car and rolled across Ninth street, up onto the curbing, narrowly missing some pedestrians, straight through the glass show window, coming to rest against a display of kitchen furniture.

A loose hub cap was given as probably cause of the accident. The car belonging to W. W. Whatley, 1501 Austin, was driven by his son. After the wheel left the car it came to a lop-sided stop about 15 fee down the street. No one was injured.

Rooming House on Lee Street Total Loss From Fire

Fire originating in a second story room and spreading rapidly through the building Tuesday night completely destroyed a rooming house operated by Mrs. Pearl Herndon, 311 Lee street. An estimated loss of between $10,000 and $12,000 was sustained.

The blaze was discovered about 9 o'clock and the 18-room structure was a mass of flames before firemen could be summoned. The blaze, in fact, was seen from the central station before an alarm had been turned in. The roof was entirely burned away and practically all the partitions and floors consumed.

Furnishings which escaped destruction by flames were ruined by smoke and water. The four walls of the house were left standing but the interior was gutted.

Mrs. Herndon was not at home when the blaze broke out and said she had no idea as to its cause. A few roomers in the place could give no opinion, either, as to its origin. The interior had just been repapered and painted, Mrs. Herndon said, but the decorators had completed their work several days ago.

The owner, who said she carried $5,700 insurance, estimated her loss to be $10,000 or over. Firemen's estimates agreed that it would run to about that figure.

RESIST PASEDENA TAX

Ouster Proceedings Are Started Against "City" Officials.

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 21.—Ouster proceedings against officials of "the alleged incorporated town of Pasedena" were instituted in district court here today by Attorney General W. A. Keeling and attorneys representing the Houston Lighting & Power company and the Crown Oil & Refining company.

The action represents another step in the fight of big industries on the Houston ship channel to resist incorporation in the town of Pasedena, a village 10 miles from Houston. Last December the village voted to incorporate, including in its boundaries much channel territory. Officers were elected and recently the Houston Lighting & Power company and the Crown Oil & Refining company were informed that their plants on the channel have been assessed for taxation at a rate of 40 cent on the $100. The power company plant eventually will represent an investment of $10,000,000.

SPLIT OVER MA COMES AT BEXAR COUNTY MEET

Anti-Ferguson Faction Of 17 and Leader Bolt Committee

NAME NEW CHAIRMAN

Refusal by Bolter Previously Made to Answer State Call

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Oct. 21.—A fight to gain control of the Bexar county democratic machine ended in a stormy session today. A bolt by the faction backing Thurman Barrett, chairman, election by the opposing forces of Carl Johnson in his place and the stand by Mr. Barrett that he is still the legal chairman of the county committee and that he will not call the committee to meet again until June, 1926, featured the proceedings.

J. Ed Wilkins introduced a motion declaring the chair vacant, but Mr. Barrett refused to put the motion before the committee which would dethrone him. He then ccepted a motion to adjourn and put it before the house. The vote was 45 against adjournment and 17 for. Mr. Barrett then declared the meeting adjourned and left the room with his 17 backers.

A motion was introduced by Mr. Wilkins that each member of the executive committee be appointed to aid Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson in her campaign for governor on the democratic ticket.

The meeting was called by Mr. Barrett after a call had been sent out by members of the other faction following the refusal of the chairman to call a meeting to aid Mrs. Ferguson asked by the chairman of the Texas democratic executive committee. The meeting was to have been held last Saturday, but Mr. Barrett would not call it. Friends of Mrs. Ferguson in the executive committee claimed that Barrett had failed to function as chairman and called today's meeting to replace him.

LA FOLLETTE IN ILLINOIS

Pink Candidate Discusses Alliance of Farmer With Labor

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Oct. 21.—Senator Robert M. LaFollette, again in Illinois for two campaign speeches before swinging eastward, declared in an address here tonight that a new political alignment is at hand—"an alignment of primary producers, of men who produce wealth of the men who feed us, clothe us, haul us, house us."

"I frequently hear the suggestion that the farmers and wage earners will not work together," the independent presidential candidate asserted.

"It is said that their interests are antagonistic, that this is unnatural, and, therefore, an impossible alliance. But the reverse is true. The farmers and the wage workers have a common economic interest. They are natural political allies. They suffer from the same things. They want the same things. And the things they want are good things.

GOVERNMENT'S CASE AGAINST DOHNEY BEGINS

Federal Court at Los Angeles Crowded At The Opening

AN AMENDED BILL

U. S. Charges Conspiracy Between Fall And The Oil King

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 21. — The opening session of the government's suit against the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Co., to cancel the Elk Hills naval reserve oil leases granted the E. L. Doheny interests flooded Federal Judge J. McCormick's court here today with crowds that outnumbered those attending the sensational criminal trials held in Los Angeles in the past several months.

File Amended Bill.

The government's amended bill of complaint charges conspiracy between Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, and E. L. Doheny involving the payment of $100,000 by Doheny to Fall which was followed by granting of oil leases in the naval reserve to the Doheny interests, whose value in possible profits have been estimated by Doheny at $100,000,000. Owen J. Roberts stated the government's case briefly.

The defendant welcomed the change of venue and expressed great satisfaction that the case was out of the senate and before a federal tribunal, according to Frank J. Hogan, chief defense councel.

Hogan declared that "we propose to expose an almost inconceivable story of the deliberate mis-representation of known, or of easily ascertainable facts and the unblushing distortion of the truth which have made as unlike as day and night the case heretofore presented to the public and the case now to be submitted to this court."

Says Fall's Part Small

Councel for the defendant declared that the part played by Albert B. Fall in making contracts with the Doheny companies, was "so slight as to be almost negligible and the part played by Doheny, while not quite so slight, was really unimportant."

He characterized as "without foundation" the charge that the executive order transferring the administration of the naval reserves from the navy to the interior department was induced by false representations made to the president by Fall. Equally "baseless," Hogan asserted, was the accusation that Fall and Doheny had conspired to defraud the government.

USELESS TO BE SOBER

Man Who Sued for $10,000 Loses His Case in Court

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 21.—A verdict for the defendant was ordered by Judge MacLeod in superior court today in a suit brought by Michael Crowley of Boston, to recover from the estate of Mrs. Emma J. Sinclair $10,000 and interest claimed to be due on a promise made by the late Frank Jones, Portsmouth, N. H., brewer. The plaintiff contended that Jones promised to pay him this sum if he remained sober for ten years. Crowley, who formerly resided in Portsmouth, alleges that Mrs. Sinclair, a daughter of Jones, repeated the promise on condition that he did not press her mother for the money. He said he refrained from bringing suit against Mrs. Jones because of this arrangement.

In cross examination, Crowley admitted that he had written a letter to one of the executors of the Jones estate, making claims totalling more than $300,000. The administration of the estate entered a general denial of Crowley's allegations and denied that signatures of Jones and Mrs. Jones on letters produced by Crowley were genuine. The statute of limitations also was cited, as the alleged promises were made in 1893.

R. L. Gross, democrat and wealthy farmer, although crippled, drove ten miles and was carried to the speaker's stand by friends as he moved his crutches.

Judge Bumpus Presides.

Dr. E. W. Alderson, pastor of the Kaufman Methodist church, spoke for 15 minutes before Dr. Butte arrived. Judge A. R. Bumpus of Terrell presided and introduced Dr. Butte.

Dr. Butte, amid cries of "vote for George" from the audience, began his address with a prediction of victory and told of a poll taken in the Panhandle country by a democratic paper. "The poll was discontinued," laughed Dr. Butte, "when I began to lead by a margin of eight to one. Now Mr. Ferguson in the morning papers is claiming a big majority in November.

"Such preposterous claims are amusing in the face of the revolution sweeping over this state. Ferguson has the oratorical Goliaths of Texas swarming out to bring me down and he is beginning a primary campaign, the first in the history of the democratic party.

Says They Are Scared.

"The truth of the matter is that Jim and his friends are white with fear; they are the worst scared folks in the state of Texas."

SPEAKS AT GREENVILLE.

Butte in Old Home County Given Banquet by Playmates.

GREENVILLE, Texas, Oct. 21.—Coming back to his old home county of Hunt, where he followed the plow in his work on a little 100-acre farm as a boy, George C. Butte, republican nominee for governor, shook off the years tonight and for a time became a cheerful lad again.

Just to show their appreciation, two-score old playmates welcomed "George" with a banquet at the chamber of commerce. F. N. Hopkins presided as toastmaster.

Going over to the court house lawn here a loud speaker tossed his voice to an audience of 5,000 persons, Butte in a voice that quavered at times, paid his respects to the friends of his youth before launching into his political address which followed the text of his speeches in other north Texas towns. Hopkins also presided at the speaking and the Rev. W. E. Graham, Presbyterian pastor, introduced Butte.

Greenville friends and friends from Commerce, Dr. Butte's old home town to which he came as a boy of nine, told of knowing "George" when he chopped and picked cotton and on Fridays "pulled" the Washington press on the Weekly Commerce Journal. A large delegation from Commerce heard Butte and pledged their support.

LABOR DECISION PRAISED

Warren Stone Says All Strikers Entitled to Jury Trial

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 21.—Warren I. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, today issued the following statement on yesterday's United States supreme court decision that railway employes who joined the shopmen's strike in 1922 were entitled to jury trial when charged with contempt of court:

"Every good citizen, regardless of whether or not he belongs to a labor union, ought to be gratified that the United States supreme court has upheld the provisions of the Clayton antitrust act requiring jury trial for workers charged with contempt of court during industrial conflicts.

"A large number of working people have had their confidence in the integrity of the courts undermined by the issuance of injunctions which have deprived them of their constitutional rights during labor disputes. The Clayton law was enacted to curb the injunction evil and prevent the judge from being prosecutor, judge and jury combined.

"The decision of the supreme court shows an interesting sidelight upon the illegality of ex-attorney general Daugherty's injunction against the striking railway shopmen. It was upon the appeal of some of these victims of government by injunction that the decision has been rendered."

HOGS IN POOR DEMAND

More Than 30,000 Left Unsold on Chicago Market

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—With demand so slow that more than 30,000 hogs were left over unsold today at the stock yards, closing prices on hogs were $1.50 to $2.00 lower than Monday of last week. This is one of the most severe price declines in years.

The bulk of the hogs sold in Chicago today brought around $9.25. A great many sold around $9.00.

Everett C. Brown, president of the Chicago livestock exchange, said that commission men were urgently advising the holding back of pig and hog shipments during the remainder of the week. He predicts a sharp reaction from the break in prices if the country shippers would do this.

Mr. Brown added that farmers need have no fear of such prices at any time throughout the coming winter. He said with favorable weather and plenty of low grade corn and lots of grass it would be very good judgment to hold back all little pigs and thin hogs as by this action receipts would be cut down and prices forced higher.

Get Out the Vote Davis Pleads In Louisville Talk

Candidate Warns that Destiny of Country At Stake

TALKS AGRICULTURE

Says Farm Bloc Is Farmers' Answer to Industrial Bloc

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 21.—Winding up his brief personal campaign in Kentucky with an address here tonight, John W. Davis, democratic candidate for president warned that the ballots cast on November 4 would decide the destiny of the country for another four years and urged voters not to neglect on that day to "discharge the first and most solemn duty of an American citizen."

"It is in the ballots of this country and the ballots alone," Mr. Davis said, "that its destiny resides and if we are false by absentation, by carelessness or by worse, we cannot criticize the short comings of those who take public office, we cannot complain in the years to come if disaster comes to visit us."

At Three Cities.

Earlier in the day at Franklin, Bowling Green and Elizabethtown, the candidate had stressed the same plea in speeches from the rear platform of his car and had coupled with his request a special request for the re-election of Senator O. Stanley and Representative Robert Thomas.

"If you are going to install an army," Mr. Davis said, reciting his experience with party government, "you want the general and privates and the captains and colonels to wear the same uniform. You will not get consistent advance and vigorous action if some of them are clothed in one uniform and some in another. The great trouble with our, republican brethren today is that they have disregarded that great fact and they have organized themselves not into a single army but into an army divided into two great factions."

In this connection Mr. Davis reasserted confidence that he would be elected and pointed to what he said was necessity of having a democratic congress to cooperate with him.

Discussing agricultural problems, Mr. Davis said:

"I know of no men in the United States more concerned in that sound government, than the farmers who make up the bone and sinew of this country and who too long have been ignored in governmental affairs.

The Farmers Answer.

"We hear constant complaints about a farm bloc in the United States but the farm bloc is nothing more than the farmers' answer to the fact that this country has been ruled for years by an industrial bloc. And there is no more reason why it should be ruled by an industrial bloc than by a farm bloc. The great democratic ideal is that it should be ruled not in the interest of industry alone, not in the interest of the farmer alone, but in the interest of all the people of the United States alike.

"The great trouble with agriculture," Mr. Davis said, "is that for years the farmers have been compelled against their will to pay tribute to others of their fellow citizens, they have been compelled to sell their products in a market open to the entire civilized world and to buy in a market which was closed against them by unfavorable and unjust laws."

In his address at Bowling Green Mr. Davis said he believed the "time had come for the American people to face about and get back on the good and sound principle of equity instead of the quagrime of privilege and to put in power the only party in this country that today is marching in harmony and in unity, and promises, when entrusted with power, harminous cooperation at both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue."

ON BREAKING THE PLEDGE

Jed Adams Gets a Letter Regarding Davis' Statement

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 21.—Jed C. Adams, democratic national committeeman from Texas, today made public a letter received from Harold G. Hathaway, secretary to John W. Davis, democratic nominee for president, on the question of Mr. Davis' attitude on the party pledge such as required at the democratic primaries in Texas. The latter was in reply to a telegram from Mr. Adams asking about Mr. Davis' speech at Oneida, Kan. It read:

"Mr. Davis has your telegram. I do not find in any of his speeches a statement which would justify the inference drawn by the deserters from the democratic party. He did in one of his speeches say that he believes 'in my party when it is right and some other party when it was wrong,' but he wishes to inform you and this he stated emphatically, that he has never at any time made a statement that could even inferentially be construed as a suggestion that a voter should violate the pledge he took in the primary.

"I will be glad to hear from you if there is anything further you want him to do in this matter."

NO MONEY FROM M'ADOO.

So Far He and James Cox Have Not Aided Democrats.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Individual contributions to the democratic campaign fund in excess of $100 each total $516,826, according to a list of contributions prepared by Jesse H. Jones, the party's director of finance, for the New York Times. The list will be filed with the senate investigating committee.

No gift exceeds $25,000 and Mr. Jones and Bernard M. Baruch of New York City were the only ones to give that amount. John W. Davis contributed $5,000. William G. McAdoo and James M. Cox of Ohio are not listed as contributors.

SPEAKS FOR THE SAINTS

Senator Reed Smoot of Utah has advised the republicans of Iowa to vote against Senator Smith William Brookhart, republican nominee for reelection. Senator Reed Smoot is the spiritual voice of the Mormon saints of Utah. It is his custom to fall upon his knees and appeal to the God of the Mormons for spiritual guidance before he takes direct political action. He did this before he cast his vote to retain Newberry in his seat, before he voted to crucify the League of Nations and all the policies of Woodrow Wilson.

Senator Smoot is one of the twelve apostles of the Mormon church. He believes in the rule of the apostles and the blind obedience of the laity. As a reactionary he has no superior. He is positive that the world is flat and of the opinion that only the wealthy and the wise should have a voice in the control of public affairs.

Brookhart is running wild on the Iowa prairies and the gamblers are betting ten to one that he will be reelected.

HEROISM HATH ITS REWARD

Captain John Coolidge was a soldier of the American revolution and the founder of the Coolidge family in America. His dust reposes in a little cemetery near Plymouth, Vermont. This soldier who fought all through the revolutionary war remained unhonored and unsung until early in October of this year. Then the Daughters of the American Revolution, New Hampshire, discovered that the grave was unmarked.

Of course these patriotic women were shocked but they ordered direct action.

A marker was placed on the grave and now the name and the fame of Captain John Coolidge has been preserved for posterity. Very thrifty indeed are these Vermonters. They always count the cost. When they count it no doubt they ask a monument or a marker to perpetuate the name and the fame of a soldier who fought for freedom in the long, long ago?

WHY THE AGREEMENT?

"Why should a secret agreement be made between the agents of government and a private corporation?"

This for the Harding-Coolidge administration leaders to answer.

Now the Alaskan railroad is not a private concern. It was built by the government and the money was taken from the pockets of the people. There is a John Pierpont Morgan Alaskan steamship company. This steamship company is the beneficiary of the secret contract made by the agents of the government who operate the Alaskan railway company, built by the people, paid for by the people and primarily intended to be run for the benefit of the people.

What of the agreement? Why, it gives the lowest possible rate to the steamship company and charges the highest possible freight rate to all the competitors of the company and all who are engaged in mining in Alaska.

Is this a democracy or a plutocracy?

What Today Means to You

LIBRA.

Today's planetary aspects are quite adverse, and, do not counsel any decisive or aggressive action. Rather do they indicate that the greatest safety will be found along the path of least resistance. Speculation and any undertakings of a hazardous nature, are doomed to failure. The vibrations are of such a character as to influence unfavorably the temperament. It is, therefore necessary to maintain poise and equilibrium, in order to avoid an aftermath of regrets.

A child born today will be subject to the customary vicissitudes of infancy; but with proper nutrition, it will successfully overcome these difficulties, and attain normal maturity. Its character will be rather weak, its disposition dreamy, its mentality obtuse in ordinary studies, but quite brilliant in all branches of art or science. This child must, by precept and persuasive force, be taught to acquire the ability to say "yes and no," but no special efforts should be taken to curb its artistic leanings, as, properly and judiciously developed, they may, and probably will, lead to moral success, although material achievement may be conspicuous by its absence.

If today is your birthday, the signs indicate that you are generous to a fault, and willing to make sacrifices at any time for those who are your friends, even at the expense of your own interests. You however, lack the virtue of constancy, and are too much attracted by externals.

Whilst generosity and unselfishness are commendable traits, and should be encouraged rather than discouraged, they have their limitations and this indulgence can be carried to excess, as has so often been evidenced in your own career.

If the objects of your liberality—both of things material as well as those that are intellectual—were always worthy, you would have little cause for regret. Unfortunately, you are a poor judge of character, and choose your friends, more because of what they wish you to think they are, than because of any real merit they possess. "All is not gold that glitters," a glib conversationalist is not always a deep thinker, demonstrativeness does not always imply affection; flattery does not often bespeak sincerity.

You suffer, too, from your lack of constancy—both in affection or ideals—and you never get out of life the best that is in it. You are influenced, in your opinions, altogether too much, by exterior, rather than interior, decoration; and you are disposed at all times to discard the substance for the shadow—even though the latter may be wanting in attributes that are worth while.

Successful people born on this date are: Alexander W. Thayer, author; Leopold Damrosch, musician; Jabez A. Curry, merchant; Annie Louise Cary, singer; Theodore S. Woolsey, professor at Yale, (an authority on international law); Sarah Bernhardt, actress.

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

QUERY

Rafael Sabatini says no stenographer in her right mind would trade position for a throne.

Little stenographer, tapping the keys,
  Or buzzing with Billy or Bob on the phone,
Would you be the queen of a royal demesne
  And sit on a hard and a comfortless throne?
Would you trade the cloche clinging close to your bob,
  And giving your face such a trick little air,
For a glittering crown or that trim little gown
  For the handsomest robe that an empress could wear?

Just read Sabatini, he'll tell you that queens
  Were no one you ever should envy a bit,
They all had to wear heavy crowns on their hair;
  Their shoes were a fright, and their frocks didn't fit.
What were their palaces, coaches-and-four,
  Scepters and jewels and treasures of art,
When none of them knew, as stenographers do,
  The way to come down to the job looking smart?

No queen was allowed to go out for a ride
  Without half a regiment strung at her heel;
While spiffily gowned, you go bowling around
  In Tommy's or Clarence's automobile.
No saxaphones whined when the queen gave a dance,
  And the feeblest of kicks could a young woman get,
In those old stately days, out of treading the maze
  Of the pepless and zipless and tame minuet.

Little stenographer, tapping the keys
  And mis-spelling words that are strangers to you,
Were you offered a throne you might have for your own,
  And a kingdom to rule over, what would you do?
Would you say your position contented you well
  And not for a throne would you ever forsake it?
You possibly might, but if I guess aright,
  And you had half a chance at a throne, you would take it.

THE THIRD PARTY.

A third party has never been successful in the United States. Its influence, however, has been considerable.

A record of some of the third parties that have flourished previously, and have appeared and disappeared at various times in American history, has been given by a recent writer and is interesting.

"The Anti-Renters were a New York organization which flourished about 1841. They resisted the collection of back rents on the Van Rensellaer manor near Albany. They had strength enough to defeat Wright, the regular democratic candidate for governor of New York.

"The Barn-Burners, New York 1848, were seceders from the democratic party. They were opposed to slavery extension. The Bucktails were another New York party and supported Madison for the presidency.

"The Conservatives, in New York and several other states, were paper money democrats and in their prime in 1837. To the Doughfaces belonged the northern members of congress who voted for the Missouri compromise.

"The Know-Nothings, New York 1854, were opposed to the naturalization of foreigners who had not lived at least twenty-one years in the United States.

"The Loco-Focos, New York 1835, were a branch of the democratic party.

"The Liberal Republicans, 1872, were those who joined with the democrats in support of Greeley for president."

Roosevelt headed a third party but was unsuccessful.

Just what will be the result of the LaFollette third party, which appeals to the discontent of the great middle west, is yet to be seen.

AN OLD BOOK.

I have an old book that my great-grandfather brought from Scotland in the year 1880. I believe I have the only copy of it in this country, and as it is so very excellent, I feel I must let you enjoy parts of it with me.

There is a chapter on women that I think is wonderful.

We will read together what Samuel Smiles, the author, says:

"Woman, above all other educators, educates humanity. Man is the brain, but woman is the heart of humanity; he its judgment, she its feeling; he its strength, she its grace, ornament and solace. Even the understanding of the best woman seems to work mainly through her affections. And thus, though man may direct the intellect, woman cultivates the feelings, which mainly determine the character. While he fills the memory, she occupies the heart. She makes us love what he can only make us believe, and it is chiefly through her that we are enabled to arrive at virtue.

"The home is the true school of courtesy, of which woman is always the best practical instructor. 'Without woman,' says the provencal proverb, 'men were but ill-licked cubs.'

"Let the mother be idle, vicious and a slattern, let her home be pervaded by cavilling, petulance and discontent, and it will become a dwelling of misery—a place to fly from, rather than to fly to; and the children whose misfortune it is to be brought up there will be morally dwarfed and deformed—the cause of misery to themselves as well as to others.

"Napoleon Bonaparte was accustomed to say that 'the future good or bad conduct of a child depended entirely on the mother.'

"He, himself, attributed his rise in life, in a great measure, to training to his will, his energy and his self-control, by his mother at home.

"We do not often hear of great women, as we do of great men. It is of the good women that we mostly hear; and it is probable that by determining the character of men and women for good, they are doing even greater work than if they were to paint great pictures, write great books, or compose great operas.

"It is quite true," said Joseph de Maistre, "that women have not invented algebra, nor telescopes, nor steam engines; but they have done something far greater and better, than all this, for it is at their knees that upright and virtuous men and women have been trained—the most excellent productions in the world."

A BUSINESS GIRL

By MARK ALLERTON

Her next thought came as a natural sequence. Was her disappointment in Alan justified? It had been based on the direct accusation of a man she could no longer trust. True, she could not imagine how otherwise the secret of Kersland's figures could have reached Dicey's.

But an hour before her imagination would have revolted at the possibility of Max Rutland behaving as he had behaved. The baseness of his veiled threat, and the open, sordid meanness of his bribe were to her far worse than the grossness of his physical assault. That had frightened her, sickened her. The other made her ashamed.

What must he have thought of her? Oh, what on earth must he have thought of her? And Alan—could he think the same now?

There was no sleep for Barbara that night.

She lay on her bed, wide-eyed, through tumultuous hours when she was possessed by the whole gamut of emotions. She arose to find that these hours had left their mark. She dashed water on her cheeks to bring back their color. She resolved that she would employ the peace of Sunday to come to definite conclusions. She was faced by more than one crisis.

There was the crisis of her little office. She could hope for nothing less than her ruin now.

Without Kersland's work she would be idle, maybe for weeks, maybe for longer than weeks. She could not afford, at the present juncture, to be idle for one week. She had the rent of her flat and the rent of her office to meet, and her capital was at vanishing point.

Something had to be done, and at once Rutland's behavior gave her the impetus to go on. Otherwise she might have given in.

CHAPTER XIII
Barbara's Refusal

On Monday Barbara resolved to canvass the firms whose work she had rejected. To them she would explain the situation. It would mean eating humble pie, but any pie was better than no food.

Then there was Alan. She could not remain in doubt whether she had treated Alan badly or as he deserved. But how to find out? She could not go to him now, a failure.

The long day was an agony to her. The hours brought only more perplexities, not one conclusion. They redoubled her fears, her sense of the hopelessness of her position.

With haggard steps the next morning she went to her office, and waiting for her there, in her own room, was Max Rutland.

For a moment she stared at him, too astonished to speak.

Her lips parted. "What do you want here?" she demanded coldly.

"To apologize to you," he said.

"Again?"

"Yes, again. When the wine's in the wit's out. The wine was in last night. I was not myself. I am deeply sorry."

"I am glad you are sorry," she said, frigidly. "Now will you please go."

"Give me a moment. Do you not think, having regard for the past, that your conduct might lead me to think and hope that my attention to you meant more than mere friendship?"

"My conduct!" Barbara cried, with a flush. "Do you suggest that my conduct has led you to think that I should allow you to—to maul me about?" she spoke with rising indignation.

"Mauling about," he said with a faint smile, "is a harsh term to apply to my ardor."

"It is the least harsh term I can think of," she replied angrily.

"I put it to you," he said, with ominous calm, "that a girl who accepts favors from a man and who allows him to take her about is not wholly indifferent to that man. Not if she is the right sort of a girl, at any rate."

"You are an unspeakable cad!" burst out Barbara.

"You have not answered my question."

"I have accepted no favors from you."

"No? What about this business of yours?"

"You offered me business. I accepted it. There is no favor in that."

"Yet I could have had that business done more cheaply and—may I say it?—more efficiently elsewhere."

"Then you are a fool not to have taken it elsewhere. There ought to be no friendship in business."

"I admit I have been foolish. I mistook you entirely. I did not think you were a girl who took all and gave nothing. You knew I loved you. I told you so once. You cannot have forgotten."

Barbara grew pale. "You—you apologized for that. You—"

"Apologized for loving you? Oh, surely not."

"At least you—" She stopped. Again he had driven her into a corner. He seized his advantage.

"You knew I loved you. You must have known that I was trying my hardest to regain your esteem. Because my love for you made me forget myself for a moment you call me an unspeakable cad. Is that justice?"

"I don't care whether it's justice or not," she cried wildly. "It's the truth. You had no right to behave as you did. I never want to see you again."

"Are you sure of that?"

"I am quite sure of that."

"I should imagine that starving was an uncomfortable ordeal," he said, quietly. "Look here, Miss Linwood, you must listen to reason. I admit I oughtn't to have called on you so soon. You are still very angry with me. Honestly, I think there is no justification for this extreme hostility toward me. But I'm ready to make any admission—because I love you. I want you to do me the honor, one day, of becoming my wife."

He paused. It was a bold stroke—the boldest stroke he had made.

"Wait." He interrupted her reply. "I said 'one day.' That will be when you think better of me again, when you can make excuses for my—my lapse. I shall do all in my power to regain your esteem—to make myself worthy of you. I—"

"It is quite—quite impossible, Mr. Rutland," she broke in. "I can never marry you."

"I was going to say that in the mean time, I shall leave you quite alone. I shall in no way force myself upon you. But I shall see to it that your business suffers no loss. Even if Kersland's goes under I can keep you full up with work. I tell you that I do not intend to see you again for weeks, maybe months. In the mean time, you will be able to run this office without scrambling around for irregular work—irregularly paid. You will be able—"

"I understand perfectly what you propose, Mr. Rutland," interrupted Barbara. "I cannot accept the proposal."

Max Rutland took a step toward her, so that she retreated quickly. His eyes were blazing with venom.

"All right," he snarled. "You can be sold up and you can go to the workhouse, for all I care! I'm a cad, am I? If I was to start calling you names there's some choice ones I could think of. You—. What are you going to do?"

The question came sharply from his lips.

With a quick motion Barbara had gone over to the telephone. She lifted the receiver.

"Hullo! Hullo!" she cried. "Will you give me the nearest police station please? I don't know the number. Quickly, please!"

She turned and faced Rutland. He was quivering with rage.

Pantomime —By J. H. Striebel

Dorothy Dix

Are You a Party to the Crime Of Keeping the Family Martyr Bent Over With Responsibilities in Which You Should Share?

Among my acquaintances is a man who has been the mainstay of his family ever since he was a little boy. He has supported his mother. He educated and took care of a houseful of little brothers and sisters, and launched them in life.

This man has never been able to accumulate any money because all that he has earned has been gobbled up by his hungry family who, like the daughter of the horse leech, were always crying "more!"

My friend is now nearly forty years old. He has fallen in love with a splendid woman and wants to marry her, but he cannot do so if he has to be the sole support of his mother. He has applied to his brothers and sisters for help, but with one accord they make excuse. This one has many children, that one is buying a home. Another has a poorly paid job. Another wants to take a post-graduate course at college, and so on.

Not one is willing to do his share, or her share, toward caring for the old mother. Not one will lift an ounce of the load from the bent back of the brother who has carried the burden so long, yet the mother is just as much their mother as she is his mother. Their duty to her is just as great as his duty to her. Their final obligation is precisely the same as his.

But somehow they have shunted the whole business on him. By some process of selection that nobody can explain, he has been elected the family martyr, and while all the others have felt free to love and marry and follow wherever fortune led, poor William is left at home with the bag to hold.

I have cited this case because it is typical. You know a hundred similar instances, for almost every family offers up some one member of it as a living sacrifice on the altar of parental duty so that the balance of them may go scott-free. And in all the category of crimes there is nothing meaner, nor sneakier, nor dirtier.

You will find thousands of Williams who missed the education they yearned for to go to work to help support their families; who gave up their own ambitions and stayed along on the farm, or went into the little village store to try to help father wring a living out of it; who have never had a chance at any life of their own because they have never been anything but bond servants to their families.

You would think that when these younger brothers and sisters, for whom William has sacrificed his youth and his ambitions and his chances in the world, grew to manhood and womanhood they would be filled with gratitude to him, and that they would feel that he had done enough and that they would set him free.

I have never known of a single case in which they did. Neither have you.

They are so used to seeing William's bent back that they think he likes to be hump shouldered. They are so accustomed to having him do the unpleasant things that they persuade themselves that he enjoys being uncomfortable. They selfishly want to spend their own money on themselves, and so they try to silence their consciences by saying that poor, old William is a stick-in-the-mud who never goes anywhere, or does anything, and so he really doesn't need any money.

You never heard of William getting any back pay for the food they have eaten, the clothes he has bought them, the schooling he has paid for them. You never hear them say that as William has supported father and mother for all these years we'll provide for them the balance of their lives.

And you know hundreds of Marthas. Thin, worn, gray, tired little old maids. It is hard to realize that they were once young and pretty and had high hopes and that men desired them. In their younger days they looked forward to the normal life of women—husband and home and children of their own.

But somebody had to look after mother and father, and somehow the job fell to Martha. That kept Martha from marrying, and it has kept her from doing any of the interesting things that women do nowadays. It's kept her dependent and poor, because she couldn't go away to earn her living, although if she had worked half as hard at any outside occupation as she has at home, she would have made a fortune.

Martha is just as much a prisoner in the dull old house as if she were locked in a prison cell. And her life is a thing to weep over—it is so hard and monotonous and thankless, taking care of querulous old people who are always complaining, and who have a million little crochety ways to which she must cater, listening to the same old stories told over millions and millions of times.

It is enough to drive any one crazy. John always says so when he pops in on his annual visit to see father and mother. He never stays more than an hour or two. He is so rushed for time. John's wife says she just thinks Martha is a saint, she is so patient and lovely about it all. Julia says that she's just die if she had to live in that poky old hole, and Sadie tells Martha she really must keep her mind fixed on joyous thoughts, one is so apt to slump and get depressed when one spends all of one's time with feeble old people.

But not one of them comes and puts in a few months of rubbing mother's and father's rheumatism while Martha goes away for a change, nor do they take the old people to their houses and divide with Martha the responsibility of caring for them.

The utter selfishness of human nature has no uglier illustration than is found in the family goat, for it is sacrificed by the hands it loves. Are you a party to such a crime?

DOROTHY DIX.

Uncommon Sense

UNPAID ACCOUNTS.

It is a good idea after you have discovered how you stand in account with your creditors to determine how you stand in account of yourself.

The expression: "You owe this to yourself" is worth regarding as something more than an empty phrase.

You know, vaguely, that you owe a great deal to yourself.

But you are such an easy creditor that you usually let yourself off for a very small part of the total reckoning.

If you will sit down some time and try to remember just what you do to yourself, you will find the following among the more prominent items:

First—Good health.
Second—A good education.
Third—A good reputation.
Fourth—A good set of habits.
Fifth—An opportunity to see something of the world.
Sixth—A profession or trade which will return you a fair income.

If these accounts are all paid in full you are a very unusual sort of person, and will gain little from a further reading of this editorial.

If you have defaulted in any of them, it is high time that you were beginning to make arrangements to get square.

If you have merely in most cases promised to pay, without having any clear idea of how you will do it, you still need to sit down and do a good bit of energetic thinking.

Only the fortunate are provided with these necessities by their parents.

And not even parents can bestow good health or a good reputation or a good set of habits—three of the most important items in the total.

These are debts which must be settled if you are to get much satisfaction or any real happiness out of life.

Unless you are cripples from birth you can pay the good health debt merely by taking exercise and being careful about your diet.

The good reputation debt can be discharged with equal ease—a little self-sacrifice in the matter of self-indulgence, and a little kindliness and consideration for others will be the only price that will be exacted.

The set of habits is harder to acquire. It means industry and determination, and constant practice of the will power.

But it is a small price to pay for the return it will bring.

The world into which you come owes you nothing. Your parents owed you a rearing within their means, which they probably have given you. The rest is all your personal private debt. Pay it in full if you can, before you leave this life. You will live happier and die happier if you remain solvent and a going concern.

Gleanings From the Book of Life

WHAT PRICE MACHINERY?

Where is this mechanical age leading us? The question is worrying our philosophers.

They fear the elaboration of the mechanical side of life by itself may serve merely to speed up the pace of life instead of expanding leisure, to pile up the weary burden of luxury, and still further to dissipate the energy of life in petty and frivolous channels.

Havelock Ellis, who has been called the most civilized of living Englishmen, holds the view that bringing order into the region of Soulless machinery running at random, and rising the superstructure of a genuinely human civilization, is not a task which either men or women can afford to fling contemptuously to the opposite sex.

"It concerns them both equally and can only be carried by both equally, working side by side in the most intimate spirit of mutual comprehension, confiding trust, and the goodwill to conquer the demon of jealousy, that dragon which slays love under the pretense of keeping it alive," he says.

"This task," he adds, "is always an adventure. However well organized the foundations of life may be, life must always be full of risks.

"We may smile, therefore, when it is remarked that the future developments of the home are risky. Birds in the air and fishes in the sea, quite as much as our own ancestors on the earth, have always found life full of risks. It was the greatest risk of all when they insisted on continuing on the old outworn ways and so became extinct.

"If the home is an experiment and a risky experiment, one can only say that life is always like that. We have to see to it that in this central experiment, on which our happiness largely depends, all our finest qualities are mobilized. Even the smallest homes under the new conditions cannot be built to last with small minds and small hearts. Indeed the discipline of the home demands not only the best intellectual qualities that are available, but often involves—and in men as well as in women—a spiritual training fit to make sweeter and more generous saints than any cloister."

"The greater the freedom," Ellis opines, "the more complete the equality of husband and wife, the greater the possibilities of discipline and development.

"In view of the rigidities and injustices of the law, many couples nowadays dispense with legal marriage, and form their own private contract; that method has sometimes proved more favorable to the fidelity and permanence of love than external compulsion; it assist the husband to remain the lover, and it is often the lover more than the husband that the modern woman needs."

It always has to be remembered that in the present condition of social opinion a slur is cast on the children of such unions.

No doubt, Ellis believes, marriage and the home will undergo modifications in this mechanical and growingly materialistic age, which tend to make this ancient institution a little more flexible and to permit a greater degree of variation to meet special circumstances.

HOW IT STARTED

CALLING IT A "SALTCELLAR"

Strange are the ways of language. Here we have another of those words that one uses every day without a thought as to its origin or its appropriateness to the significance which it is intended to convey.

"Saltcellar" has been called an etymological curiosity because literally it describes a "salt saltholder." The fact is that it is a corruption of the French word for saltholder which is "saliere." It is easily comprehensible how through the similarity of sound this should have become "cellar" in English. But by prefixing the word salt one is using it really twice.

Wichita Visitors Tell Of Mexico, a Land Of Mystery and Romance

The Misses Grace Le Beau And Al Cargill, Visiting Mrs. O. E. Wilson, Recount Stories of the Land Of the Aztec.

Miss Grace Le Beau, who with Miss Miss Al Cargill, is a guest at the home of Mrs. O. E. Wilson, 1516 Thirteenth street, leaves today for Stamford and Abilene where she will appear in concert.

Misses Le Beau and Cargill are from New York City where Miss Le Beau, a coloratura soprano of ability, has done concert work for the past several years. The two young women have recently returned from three month's in Mexico where Miss Le Beau appeared at the Abeu theatre, and from a month's visit in Los Angeles. Miss Le Beau is contemplating a concert appearance in this city in November.

"Mexico is beautiful," they stated, "trees and flowers are everywhere, the birds are colorful and the climate is God-given. The scenery is surprisingly gorgeous, as the country is practically wild and undeveloped.

Of Mystery and Romance

"The mystery, the romance and the spell of Mexico is real," stated Miss Le Beau whose singing endeared her to the hearts of the capital theatregoers. "The radical difference in racial customs makes Mexico City seem like another world.

"As I stood on my balcony, late at night, after the concert and looked out over the old city, the still darkness pulsated with romance, mystery, the spell that is Mexico. The streets there at night are not bright and busy as in America; there are no show windows or brightly lighted shops; everything is closed, barred, and darkened. Even the doors of the largest and most pretentious hotel are huge and thick and can only be entered by means of a great knocker.

"The pretentious promenade of Mexican social life takes place, not at night, but at noon, between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock, when the very elite of the city appear to drive around the "calle" five or six times during the fashionable hour.

They Were Conspicious

"We were conspicuous during our stay in the city because we appeared on the streets unchaperoned. Being American girls, however, this was deemed altogether proper. We were received and treated cordially by Mexican people everywhere and learned that higher class of Mexicans are anxious for the friendship of American people, whom they state, with their energy, ambition, and intelligence can develop and advance Mexico.

"The strictness with which Mexican girls are guarded, makes romance run high, and only fires the hot impulsiveness of the Latin which makes him quick to kill, over a love affair. The women are perhaps quicker tempered than the men, and use their tiny stilettos expertly.

"The Mexicans are passionately fond of music, and are literally at the feet of an artist they love. Opera occupies their interest chiefly, though there are a few music halls where popular numbers are sung. They do not care much for American jazz except to dance by.

National Theatre a Marvel

"The great National theatre which has been under construction for 20 years and is not yet completed is an example of their national devotion to drama and music. The beautiful structure is of marble and worth many millions of dollars. The main curtain is of cut glass, tons in weight, and the interior of the theatre equals the old world in splendor and beauty.

Both visitors expressed their fascination for the bull fights.

"If one can but overcome the horror of the bloodshed and the dying animals, the realization that bull fighting is a great art, is evident. The matadors strive quite as hard for perfection in technic, grace, and art in their work as a dancer. They are perfect examples of skilled athletic performers, and are the idols of the spirited Mexicans.

"Mexico, in spite of the danger of bandits, revolutions, and the difficulties of travel and communication, offers to Americans a wonderful opportunity. It lies, an undeveloped treasure, just as it has lain for many years.

"I believe," said Miss Le Beau, "that the next five years will see wonderful development and progress in Mexico through the few who are now in the interior and who realize the vast opportunities that lie in that country."

BUSINESS WOMEN PLAN FOR "MARCHETA."

Miss Jim Covey, chairman of the ticket committee for the production, "Marcheta," being presented early in November by the Business and Professional Women's Club of the city, announced at the weekly dinner at the Y. W. C. A. Tuesday evening, the following members of the club which will form the chairmen of ticket selling groups: Mrs. Iva Austin, Mrs. Bussey Mathis, Mrs. Mae Bennett, Misses Happy Jolske, Ann Seipelmeyer, Margaret Bacon, Agnes Birlock, Marie Duke, Thelma Pross, Helen Durgin, Elma Gardiner, Elizabeth Hill and Maud Mays.

The entire membership of the club will be placed under these captains, it was announced, and each member will be responsible for selling at least ten tickets.

Misses Laura Eichelberger, Dorothy Ackerman, Hazel Ewing, Frankie Jackson, Phyllis Campbell, Kate Lane and Mrs. W. W. Nelms were presented to the club for deliberation and will be voted on as club members at the next meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club.

Stunt songs closed the meeting, and several talks on the progress of arrangements for the musical comedy.

METHODIST LADIES HONOR MRS. SIMPSON.

Honoring Mrs. C. M. Simpson, wife of the pastor of the First M. E. church, who is leaving an active field of work in local church circles upon her departure for Sherman, Friday, the Woman's Missionary society of the church entertained at the Wichita club Tuesday afternoon with a five course luncheon.

Mrs. J. C. A. Guest, president of the organization, with the officers and circle leaders, were hostesses.

Pink rosebuds in silver baskets connected by dainty trailing vines decorated the luncheon table, which was arranged in the form of a T.

The invocation was given by Mrs. C. W. Snider. Mrs. W. W. Cooke, chairman of the department of Bible study, presented with a fitting speech, a tall silver basket of rose buds to Mrs. Simpson in appreciation for the untiring service and active interest shown in the two years of her stay here. A lovely tribute was paid by Mrs. Cooke who spoke of the honoree as a "true Christian character and an earnest Christian woman; more than this cannot be said."

Mrs. Simpson, in a gracious talk of acceptance spoke of the two pleasant years spent in association with Wichita Falls women and expressed her regret at leaving the work here. She closed with a fitting bit of verse, urging the women to make their lives stepping stones instead of stumbling blocks.

Covers were laid for Mesdames Jim Young, J. B. Stokes, John Marra, T. A. Baggett, J. M. Harrison, W. L. Downing, O. P. Darsey, Guy Raley, Dulaney, McAlister, Lipscomb, C. A. Rogers, W. W. Cook, C. B. Macbeth's Moral Code Discussed

"The sense of honor in Macbeth, frequently a man's only conscience, disappears altogether after the murder of Duncan," Mrs. Ernest Westmoreland said in her paper, "Macbeth's Moral Code," which she read to the Pieria Club Tuesday afternoon. "He has irredeemiably violated his sense of honor and it never has another shred of influence upon him," she stated, after she had explained the circumstances.

"Moreover, since nothing isolates a man like the loss of honor, Macbeth is henceforth separated by Shakespeare from the whole of the world except from his comrade in the murder. He is isolated also from his earlier self, from the honorable soldier that he was; he became an outlaw to himself. The loss of his honor made him absolutely reckless. No crime after his great crime seemed more than a trifle to him.

If we would see Macbeth clearly we must not dwell on his conscience, of which so much is made, but on his sense of honor. They are, of course, related one to the other, but the realm of each is quite distinct. Were it conscience which troubled him, he would have been pictured by Shakespeare as a victim of remorse like Lady Macbeth. There is no remorse in him, but there is the wild, indifferent recklessness which comes to one who is conscious that he has shut himself out from his fellows by a fatal act of dishonor."

Continuing her discussion of Macbeth's moral code, the speaker asserted that imagination was a thing that troubled him. "This element in his character should be dwelt on. We cannot understand Macbeth without realizing in.

"Macbeth is superstitious and controlled by a poetic imagination. These keys unlock the man. On such a temperament naturally brave, supernaturally fearful, weak in resolve, strong in imagination, a rude soldier with a poet's heart; honorable, but not having any foundation for his honor only the custom of his class, on such a temperament falls the heavy temptation of ambition.

"At the end, we see Macbeth deep in despair and the next moment all fire and action without punishment of conscience but a victim of dishonor."

Roll call was answered by the club members with great actors of the play. Round table discussion was carried on, taking up the causes of Banquo's death and the second conflict. Mrs. Westmoreland's address was the club paper for the afternoon. Mrs. G. T. Drinkard directed the program.

Miss Clara Schultz was hostess to the Pierias at her home, on Tenth street. She served a dainty refreshment course to Mesdames Drinkard, A. C. Dulaney, A. B. Dincan, O. T. Gorsline, Alex Hallman, Frank Hoover, Earl Jameson, C. M. Richardson, Ernest Westmoreland.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS ENJOYS KID PARTY.

Transported back to the good old days of readin', writin' and 'rithmetic, the members of Mrs. J. L. Keevil's Sunday school class of the First Christian church enjoyed a kid party at the church Monday night. Romper suits, short skirts, big bows and a few pigtails were evidenced by the young matrons and business women who were children again just for the night.

Spelling matches conducted in the old fashioned way were a part of the evening's entertainment. At the recess period, a sack lunch was served to the pupils of the school. Children's games of "Going to Jerusalem" newspaper contests, suit case contests and others were played.

The thirty-five members voted they had had one of the most enjoyable socials of the year.

EFFLORESENCE, ITS CAUSE AND BEST REMEDIES

By the Architects' Small House Service Bureau of the United States, Inc.

Spring rains may bring out on walls of stone, brick or concrete a whitish, crystalline deposit like hoar-frost. This is efflorescence.

The action which causes efflorescence is water from rain or drainage off window sills or eaves, soaks into the masonry walls and dissolves some of the soluble salts either of the mortar or the masonry material itself. After the rain has ceased, the water is drawn to the surface and evaporates, leaving the dissolved salts in the form of whitish crystals on the wall.

Where the Water Soaks In

It will be noticed that the presence of efflorescence is most common under window sills, roof copings, and other points where there is the greatest amount of water to soak into the wall.

The question then presents itself—Why doesn't the white deposit dissolve and wash off in the next rain? The reason is that upon exposure to the air these salts change their nature, absorbing carbon dioxide from the air and becoming carbonates, and hence largely insoluble in water.

From the explanation of the action of efflorescence, it will be apparent that the presence or absence of efflorescence is mainly due to local conditions such as the amount of absorption of the masonry material, the degree of exposure to rainwater, drippings and drainage, rather than to any factor inherent in the mortar or masonry material.

For efflorescence already existent, the only remedies are brushing with a stiff fiber brush or wire brush, or the removal by scrubbing with an acid wash consisting of one part of commercial muriatic acid and from 4 to 10 parts of water, depending upon the amount of efflorescence present. After the white deposit is removed with the acid wash, the acid is thoroughly rinsed off. The deposits may recur and require additional acid washes, but the amount of deposit should be less each time, due to the dissolving out of all the soluble salts, and hence the deposit should disappear after a time.

Colorless Waterpoofing Helps

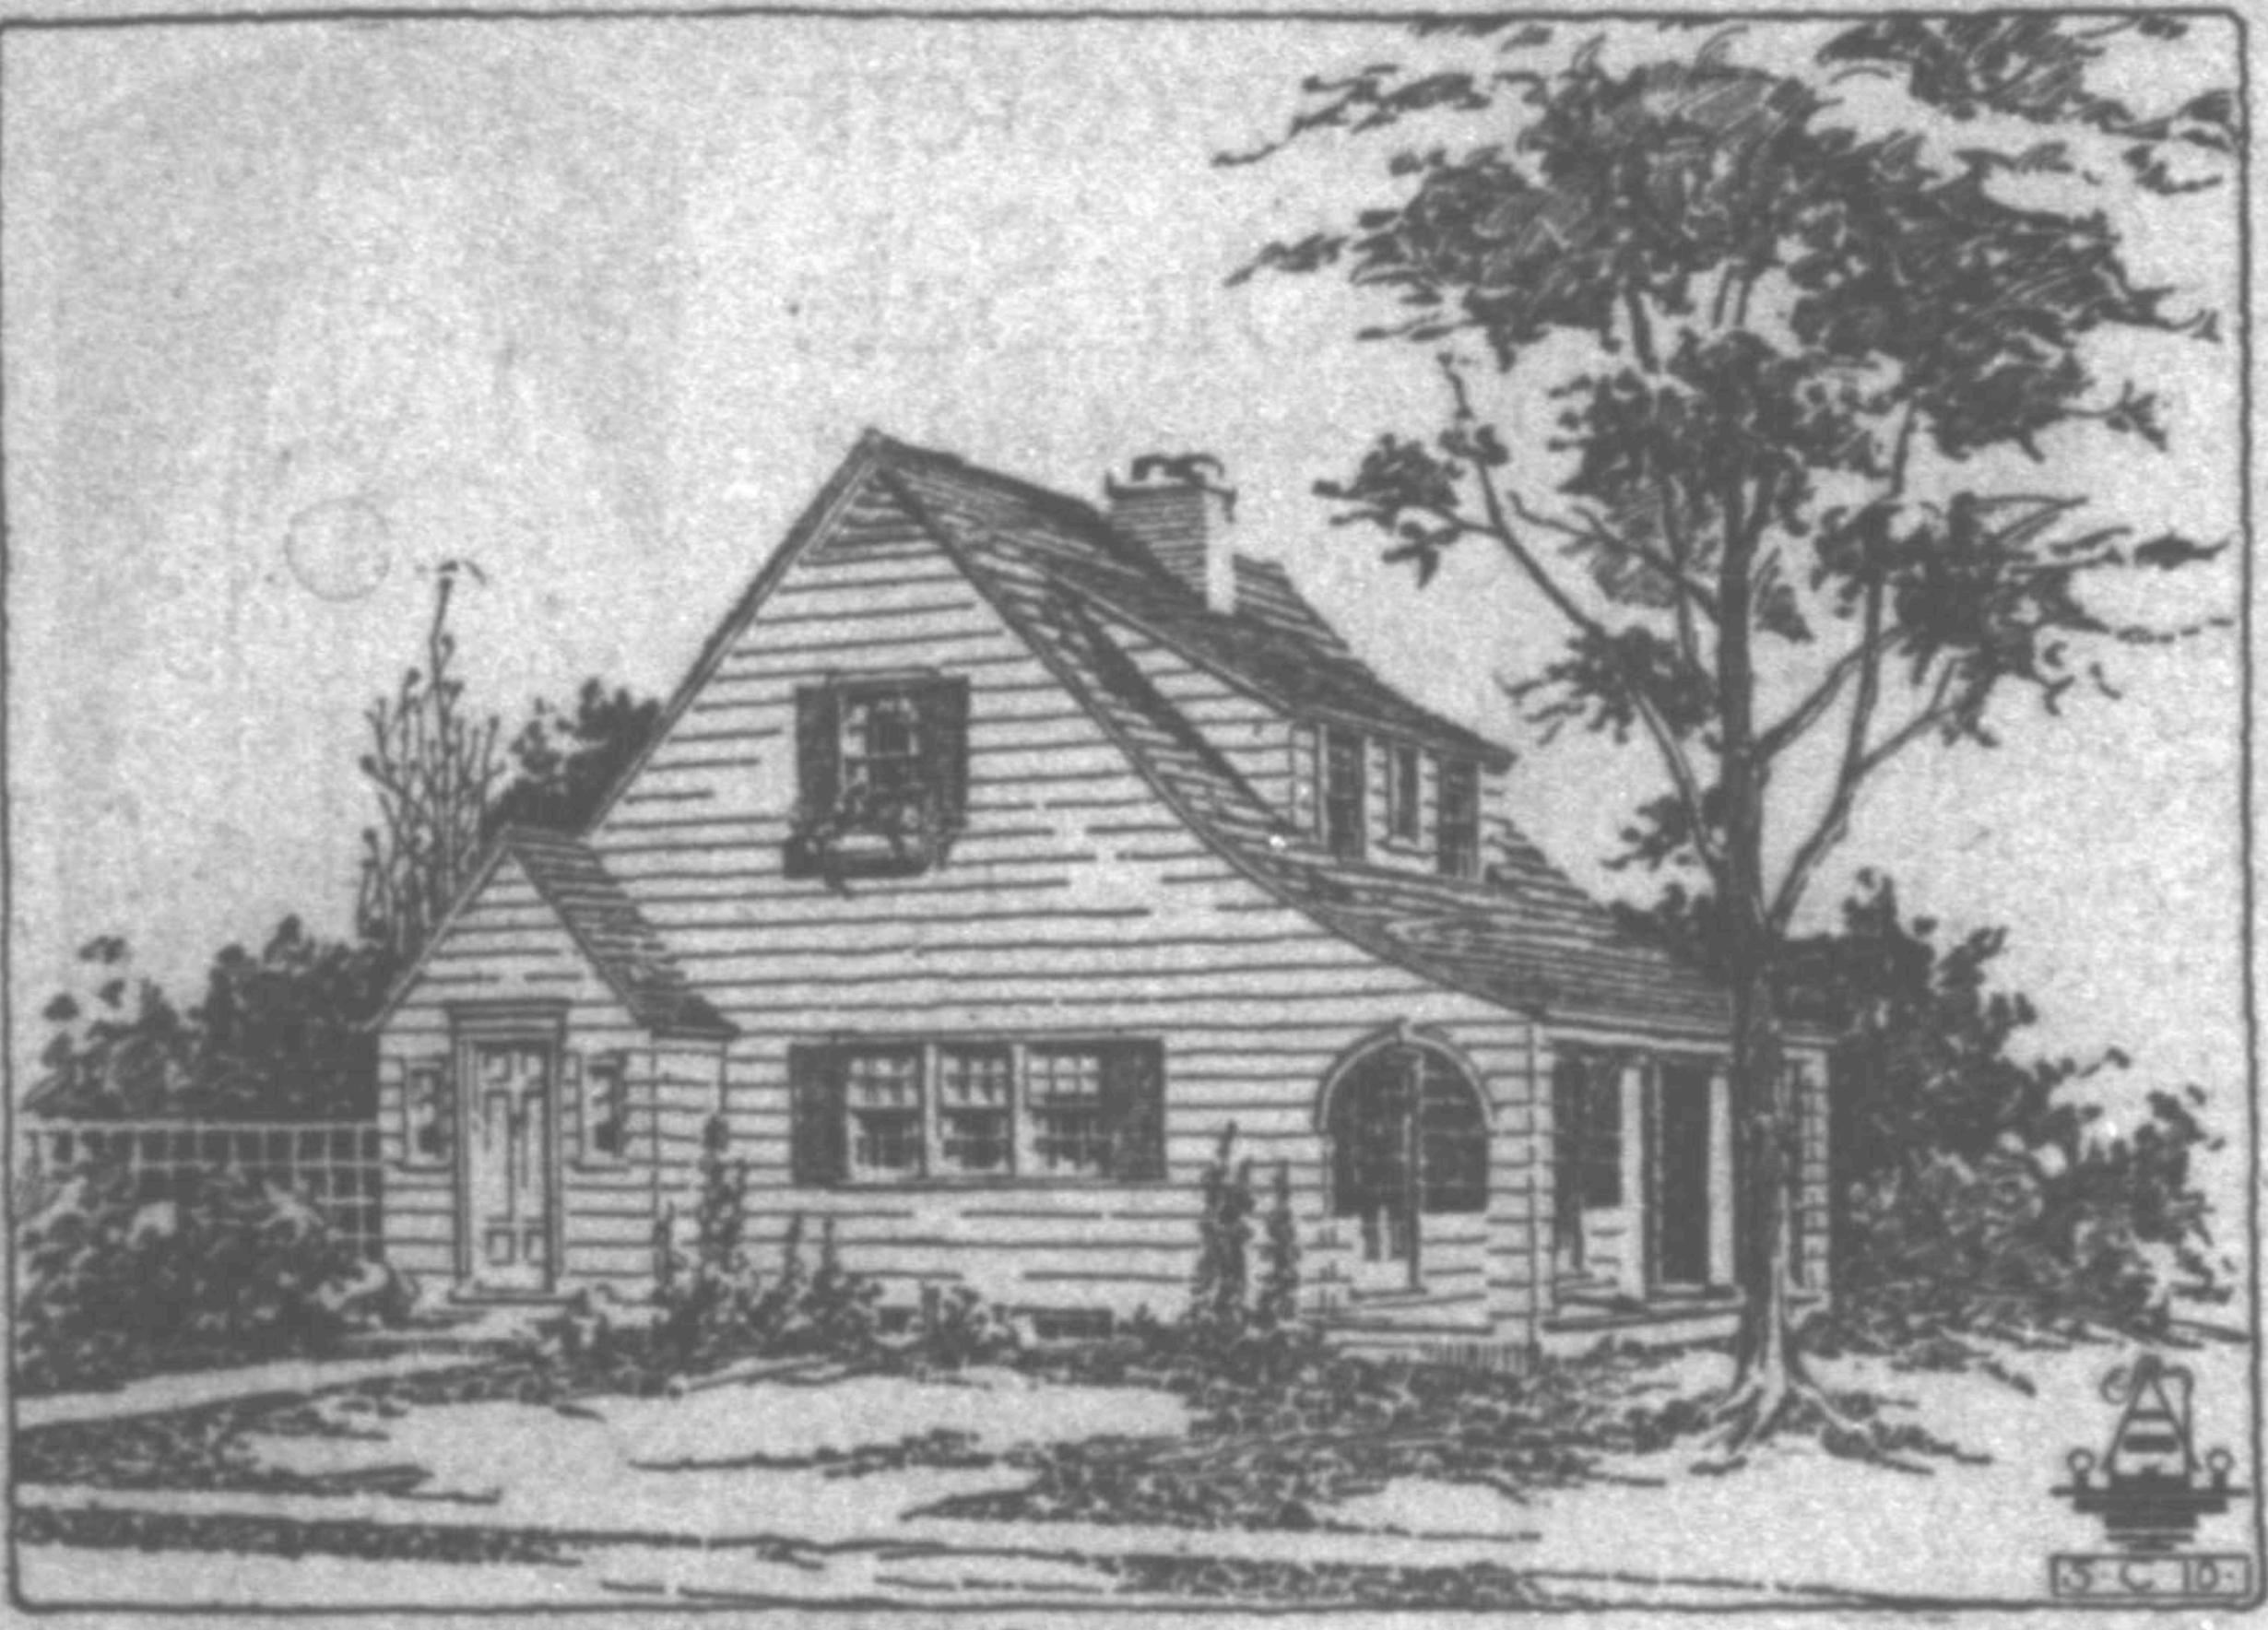
Since the absorption and evaporation of surface water is the primary cause for efflorescence, anything which will eliminate this absorption will aid in preventing efflorescence. The application of one of the colorless waterproofing compounds to the surface of the wall will eliminate absorption, and hence be of help.

Colorless surface application of the dissolved paraffin type also should be beneficial for application to brick and stone walls.

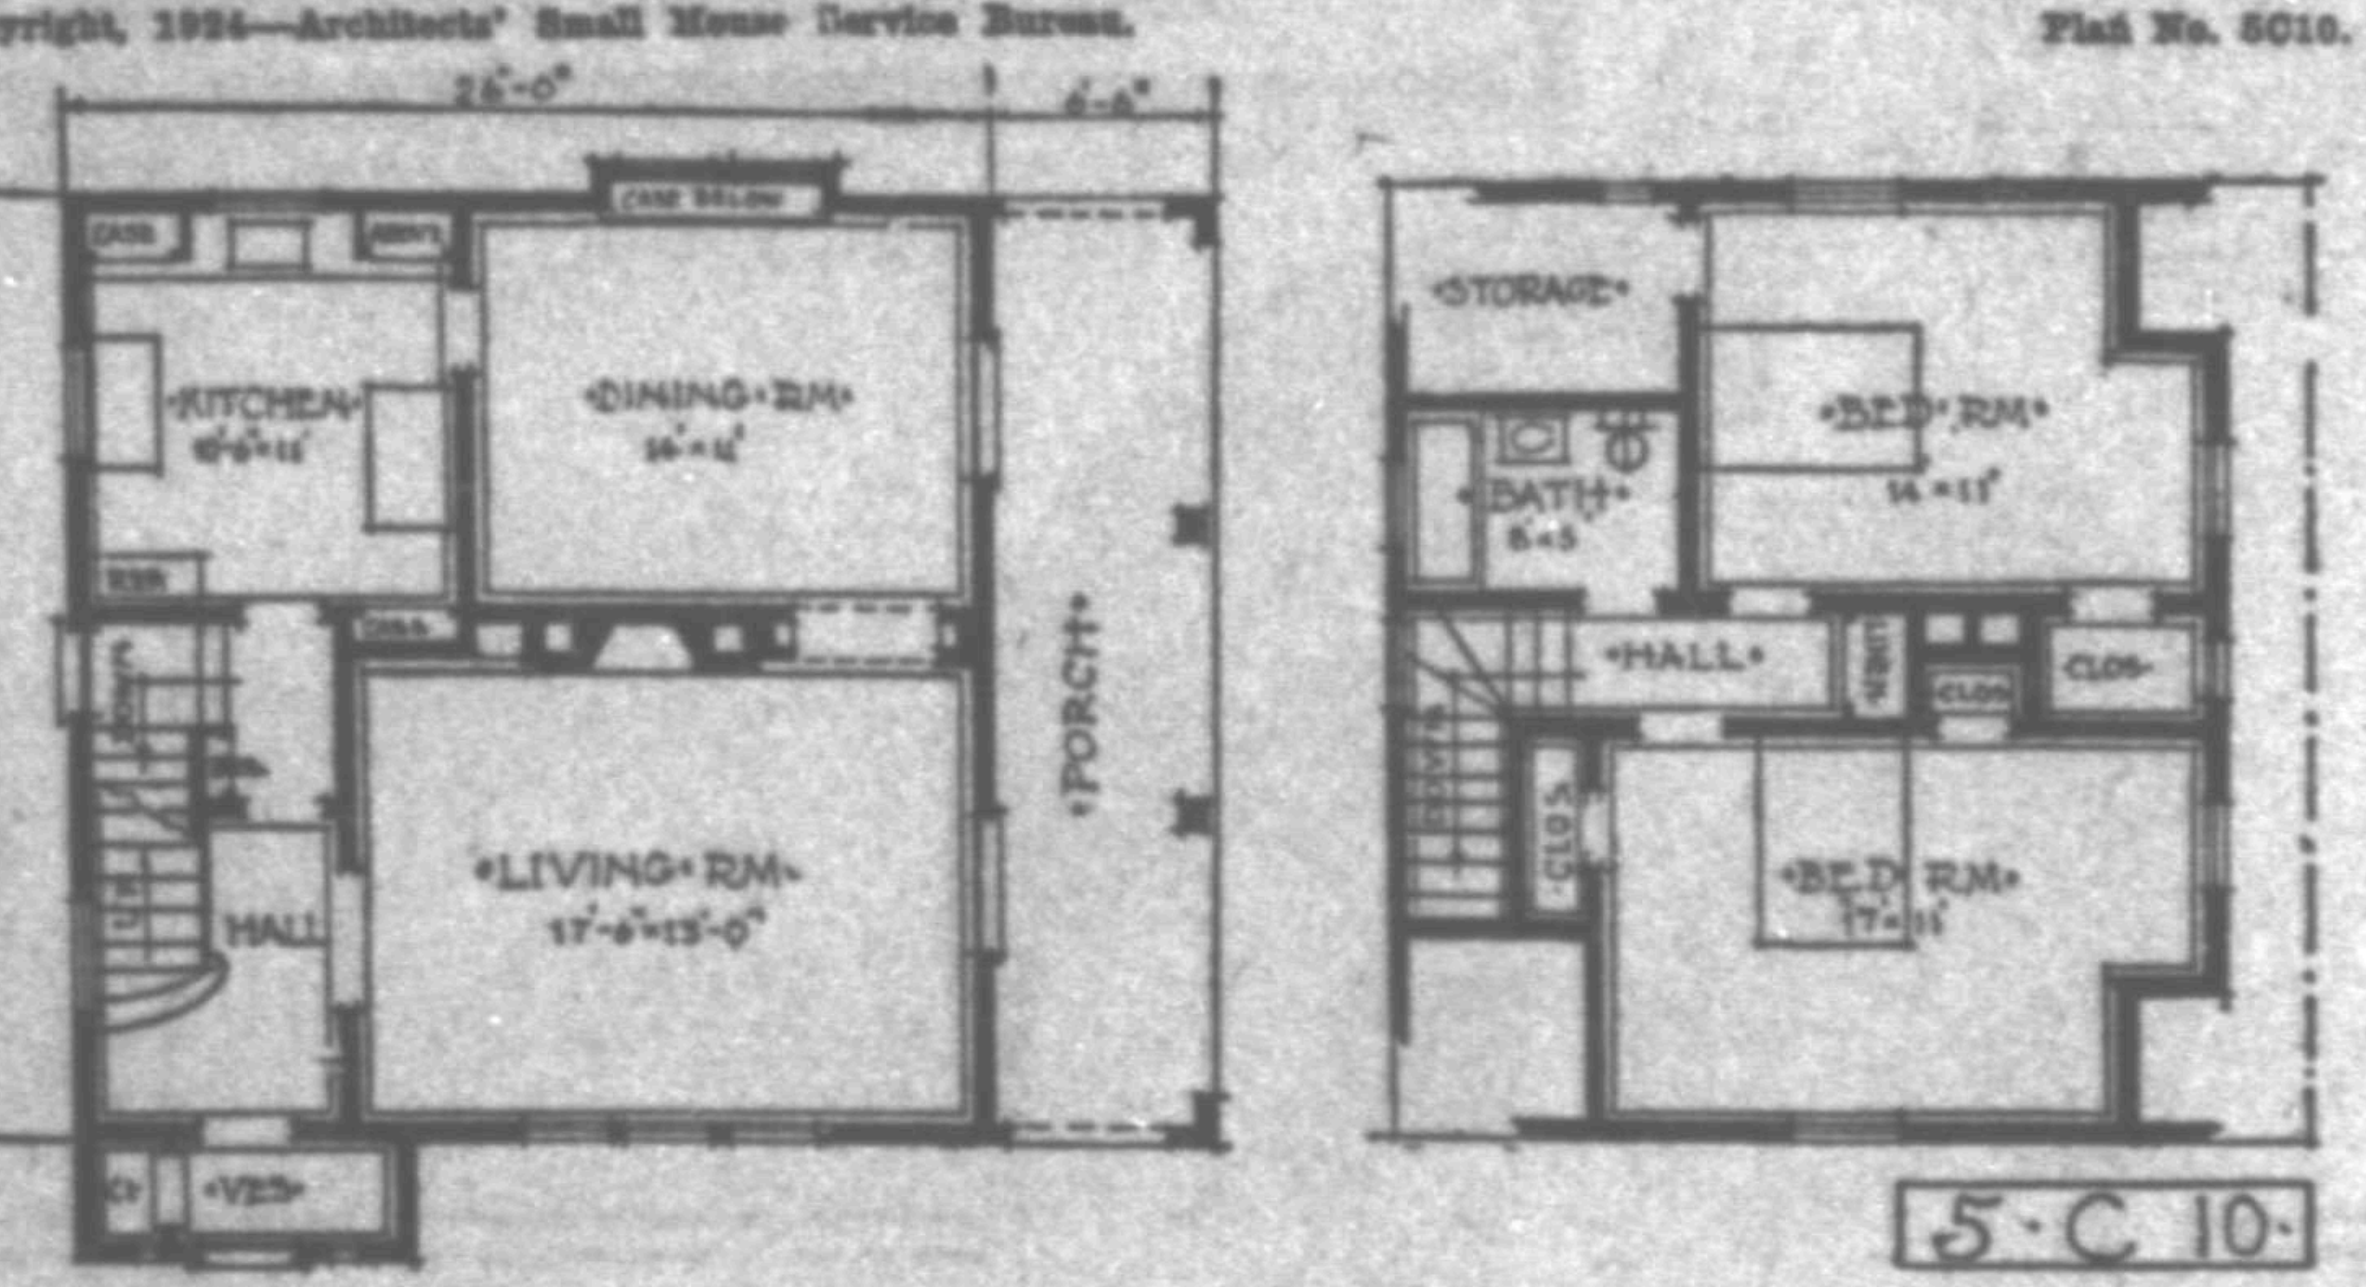
One of the best aids in preventing efflorescence is to prevent absorption of water. In this connection be sure that your downspouts and gutters do not leak and the projecting courses such as cornices, window sills and belts are devised so that water running over them will drip away from the wall.

It will be seen that workmanship and the proper design of walls, openings and cornices are extremely important elements in keeping down efflorescence. And in providing against this defacement we are also assuring for the building less depreciation and a brighter, cleaner wall.

A PRIZE WINNING SMALL HOUSE



Copyright, 1924—Architects' Small House Service Bureau. Plan No. 5C10.



THERE are three main things to remember if you want to keep down the cost of your home. First—limit your requirements only to those things which are actually necessary. Second, use sound but inexpensive materials. Third—eliminate waste in materials and labor.

The house illustrated here, Plan No. 5C10, deserves careful study, not only because of the architectural merit, but because it gives you an opportunity to put into practise the three things mentioned above, as direct aids toward lower costs.

Features of This Home

There are five good rooms, bath and porch, in addition to considerable storage space and plenty of closets. The house is of frame construction, siding or shingle exterior and shingle roof. Is is designed to face north or west, but can be reversed for other facings. It can be placed comfortably on a 45-foot lot.

The splendid porch, which stretches the full depth of the house, can be glazed or screened, and will provide an excellent out-of-doors living room for the summer months. It would be possible to make this an all-year-around porch, if the home builder desires.

There is a full basement under the entire house and this includes the vestibule.

The two spacious bedrooms on the second floor provide cross circulation of air and cross light. The kitchen has been planned to economize steps and lessen labor.

The Cost to Build This Home

This home should be reasonable to build if you use simple materials and inexpensive equipment. The cost will depend upon what the house is made of and what you put into it. The cost will also be affected by the locality in which it is built. In certain cities costs are much higher than in others. Simple equipment will decrease the cost, expensive equipment and materials will increase the cost.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The plans for small homes are furnished by the Regional Bureaus of the Architects' Small House Service Bureau of the United States, Inc., an organization made up of the representative practising architects from leading architectural offices throughout the United States. This bureau is controlled by the American Institute of Architects, and has the endorsement of the Department of Commerce, United States government. It is practically a non-profit making public service, and has as its purpose the furnishing of a very complete and dependable small house plan service at moderate cost. For information regarding the blue prints and specifications, address the Home Building Editor of this paper. The United States bureau maintains an information department to answer home builders' questions at no charge. Enclose stamped addressed envelope.

WHAT YOU MAY WANT TO KNOW ABOUT BUILDING

Questions addressed to the paper will be answered by the Architect's Small House Service Bureau of the United States, Inc., controlled by the American Institute of Architects and indorsed by the department of commerce, United States government. Inclose selfaddressed, stamped envelope for reply.

Q—What is the cause of rust running down the kitchen wall from the hole where the vent pipe from the gas range comes through the plaster?

A—This is caused by the warm air from the gas range coming into contact with the cold walls of the pipe which condenses the moisture from this warm air. The difficulty can be overcome if a drip is run from the bend of the pipe so that the water of condensation drips onto the basement floor. It is very difficult to overcome this condition in an old house without unreasonable expense.

Q—Is it safe to build an eight inch brick wall to a height of 10 or 12 feet?

A—An eight inch brick wall laid of good bricks and in good mortar is a substantial wall in the height you mention.

Q—Is it safe to build partition walls with single bricks four inches wide for basement partitions?

A—This is sound construction and is recommended by the United States department of commerce.

Q—I own a two family house which I intend to sell. On it is a first mortgage of about one-third of the value of the house. I have purchased lots nearby and intend to build a single house on them. How can I get money to build before I sell the old house?

A—It would be better to sell the property before you start your new house. If this is not possible increase the first mortgage against it to get the ready cash. A larger first mortgage probably also will be of assistance to you in selling the property.

Q—Please let me know if it is necessary to put a separate footing of concrete in the center of the basement floor to put the posts on that support the first floor?

A—The supporting posts in the basement must rest on separate footings. There should be a six inch high concrete base in the center of these footings upon which the posts are rested. This brings the base of the posts up above the basement floor and protects them from rotting.

TWICE AGAIN AS BIG.

New Zeppelin Is Planned Double Size of the ZR-3.

AKRON, Ohio, Oct. 21.—Plans to construct a Zeppelin of 5,000,000 cubic feet, twice as large as the ZR-3, the largest yet designed, were announced today by Paul W. Litchfield, vice-president and general manager of the Goodyear Zeppelin corporation. The ship will be designed especially for trans-Atlantic service.

Working plans are to be started immediately upon the arrival of Dr. Karl Arnstein, chief of design of the German Zeppelin corporation. He is expected to leave Germany in two weeks.

6,000 CHEER UBER ALLES.

American-German Enmity Forgotten In ZR-3 Lecture.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—An audience of 6,000 persons cheered the playing of "Deutchland Uber Alles" last night at a local theatre where the officers and crew of the ZR-3 were guests of the management. There was no trace of unfriendliness when Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the giant dirigible on her trans-Atlantic flight, made a speech in German.

When the spotlight was turned on the box where Dr. Eckener and his staff of officers were seated he arose and told the crowd that all misunderstanding between Germany and America was a thing of the past.

AWARD BIG FAMILY PRIZE

Through M. Poincare's Influence, Poor Family is Rich

PARIS, Oct. 21.—The "big family" prize of 25,000 francs has been awarded by the French academy at former Premier Poincaire's request, to Devouste Dubreuil, whose family has been struggling against the high cost of living with ten small mouths to feed. The children include quadruplets—two boys and two girls—born during the war, for whom M. Poincaire, who was then president of France; Kig Albert of Belgium, King George of England and the empress of Russia were godfathers and god mother.

M. Poincare induced the academy and the multi-millionaire founder of several score such annual prizes to waive the rules which limit the award to families in which the parents are under 40 wears of age. Dubreuil is 55.

Orient Needs New Funds If Road Is To Be Continued

Operatives File Brief For Interstate Commerce Commission Tuesday

WOULD CONSOLIDATE

M. K. T. Among Other Roads Opposing Pleas

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The Kansas City, Mexico & Orient railroad must have additional revenue if it is to continue to operate, attorneys for the road told the interstate commerce commission today in briefs and arguments filed in support of the road's application for an increase in the division of joint rates on traffic between the Orient and its connecting lines.

The road's revenues, the attorneys said, are not sufficient to meet its absolute requirements for operation, payrolls, fuel, materials and upkeeps. They cited statistics to show that the road had operated at a loss since 1920 ranging from $1,470,106 then to $20,100 in 1923. The loss in 1923 was held down because, they contended, equipment had been left in bad repair and the road's property generally deprived of the care it should have had.

The attorneys also declared that testimony showed the road's cars to be in such bad repair that connecting lines refused to accept them in exchange, forcing a reloading of freight.

The solution of the Orient's problem, it was asserted, is its consolidation with some other road that will make possible its operation as a branch line.

The Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad, the Missouri Pacific Railroad company and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad company filed briefs opposing the Orien's application.

ISHBEL MacDONALD AIDING

If Socialists Win in Bassetlaw She Will Have Done it.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—While Prime Minister MacDonald is having a strenuous time driving home his arguments to the voters of the Aberavon district of Glamorganshire and other industrial centers, his daughter, Ishbel, is conducting a smiling campaign on behalf of her brother, Malcolm, in the Bassettlaw division of Nottinghamshire. Miss MacDonald confesses she does not care for electioneering work, declaring:

"My line is social work like my mother's, but I am doing this because I want to do all I can to help the government."

Her bright and cheerful personality more than compensates for her lack of debating ability and according to local gossip, it will be Ishbel who will turn the socialist minority in this division into a majority—if anything does.

CENSOR CALLED FOOLISH

Associated Press Head Says War Propaganda Ridiculous

BOSTON, Oct. 21.—Frederick Roy Martin, general manager of the Associated Press, and an overseer of Harvard University, at a banquet of the Boston Club of the Harvard Business School Alumni Association last night reviewed the past work and the aims of the Associated Press.

He said that so far as he knew it was the only organization tabulating the national election returns. This work, he stated, required the employment of 26,000 persons for 24 hours at an approximate cost to the association of $250,000. He dwelt on the covering of wars, saying that the two great mistakes of the world war from the point of view of the newspaper were "foolish censorship and government propaganda."

BLOCKS BANK UNIONIZATION

New York Financiers Declare They Were Misunderstood

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Seward Prosser, president of the Bankers Trust Company, today issued a statement denying he had given permission to the Book Keepers, Stenographers and Accountants Union to organize the office workers in the employ of the Bank. Officials of the federal reserve bank of New York and the New York Trust Company, two other institutions which were said to have agreed to allow labor leaders to unionize their employes, also said they had been misrepresented in a statement by Ernest Bohn, secretary of the office workers organization.

Officers of the Bankers Trust company said Mr. Prosser told the labor organizers that he believed it impossible to regulate the working hours of bank employes.

REPLIES TO FLAG CHARGE

Veterans Bureau Head Says That Emblems Were Inspected

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Charges made recently before the New York state federation of women's clubs that the veterans bureau had draped the coffins of soldiers with cheap and shoddy flags and had contracted for 300,000 which were found to be minus a row of eight stars were answered by Director Hines today with an assertion that all flags purchased since August, 1922, only 2,400 in number, were examined and met with federal requirements.

"Samples must be submitted for inspection before an order is placed for flags," he said.

Regarding the specific allegation that an imperfect flag was used to drape the coffin of Harry Bench who died in a Philadelphia veterans hospital last December, the director said the incident is being investigated.

LONG BEACH, Cal., Oct. 21.—Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy, speaking in support of John W. Davis for president at a democratic rally here last night, took occasion to voice high praise of the independent candidate, Senator Robert M. LaFollette, who he lauded for his progressiveness and his consistent political record.

President Coolidge, on the other hand, came in for strong condemnation at the hands of the former cabinet member, who accused him of indifference toward corruption in the governme

Texas 1.4 Cooler In September

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 21.—L. H. Dangerfield, one of the state's official weather doctors, has just finished taking the temperature of Texas. He does it regularly, once a month, and announces it in a condense climatological survey.

In September, he says, the state was 1.4 degrees cooler than normal as indicated by reports from 129 points, which showed it had ten one-hundredths of an inch more water in its 2.92 inch bath, the average at 222 reporting stations. The sun shone, Mr. Dangerfield reports, an average of 18 days, part of the time on seven days and none at all on five days. The state was fanned by prevailing southerly winds which at Del Rio on Sept. 2 reached 40 miles an hour, the highest velocity for the 30-day period.

The highest monthly mean temperature was 82.4 degrees at Fort McIntosh and the lowest 65.4 at Dalhart. The thermometer registered 107, the highest daily temperature, at McKinley, on Sept. 8, and 20 days later at Reno it reached the freezing stage, 32 degrees, the lowest daily temperature in the state. The monthly range within the state was 75 degrees and the greatest daily range was 54 degrees which Seminole experienced on Sept. 26. The greatest monthly amount of rainfall was 10.9 inches at Trinidad, while Clint had only a trace.

DE VALERA TO TAKE TRIP.

While He Does It He Will Be Taking a Chance, Also.

DUBLIN, Oct. 21.—Eamonn de Valera, the republican leader, intends to go to County Downs on Friday to address a political meeting in the town hall, it is announced at republican headquarters. The northern government has forbidden de Valera to enter certain Ulster areas, of which County Down is one, and there is much curiosity as to what will happen if he defies the government on Friday.

It is recalled that De Valera was elected member for the county in the northern parliament in 1921, but he has never taken the seat.

FOSTER VS. LAFOLLETTE

Radical Presidential Aspirant Says Bob "Unscrupulous Trader"

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—William Z. Foster, speaking here in behalf of his campaign as presidential candidate of the workers' party, declared that Robert M. LaFollette, independent presidential candidate has in the present campaign been "guilty of the most unscrupulous political trading ever witnessed in American politics."

"Here in New York he (LaFollette) is entering into a deal with Al Smith, the Tammany candidate, with the socialist party in apparent agreement," said the worker's party candidate. "LaFollette is to hand over the progressive and socialist votes to Smith, and in return Smith will knife Davis and throw his Tammany following to the Wisconsin senator."

BROADCASTING CONDITIONS.

Rules Promulgated For Stations Up to 5,000 Watts.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Conditions were announced today by the department of commerce under which licenses will be issued on a strictly experimental basis for the use in radio broadcasting of power up to 5,000 watts.

The conditions were drafted in line with the recommendation of the national radio conference that a general increase of power over 1,000 watts was desirable in all stations to overcome static and give better service to listeners. Surer-power stations having 25,000 to 50,000 watts are not considered in the plan and each station taking out an experimental license will be considered as a separate entity in view of varying local conditions.

MAY BE LAWSON CLUE.

Police Investigate Latest New York Apartment Robbery.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Four men arrested today were questioned about robbery early yesterday of the West Side apartment of Mrs. Helen Heyworth, fiancee of "Dapper Dan" Collins, internationally notorious thief.

A platinum diamond cluster ring resembling one stolen from Mrs. Heyworth was found in possession of one of the four.

From their questioning of the prisoners the police also hope to throw light on the cases of Dorothy Keenan, Louise Lawson and Edith Bobe. Miss Keenan and Miss Lawson were killed by robbers who ransacked their apartment. Miss Bobe and her wealthy male companion were held up in their apartment recently and robbed of jewelry valued at $50,000.

"Cave Man" Not What We Crack Him Up To Be

Returning Explorers Believe His Wife Did Thinking For Him.

PRAISE CAVE WOMEN

Think She Did All the Painting History Credited to Husband.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The "cave man" was a poor dumb beast who let his mate—his wife—do his thinking for him."

This was the conviction expressed today by Mrs. George C. McCurdy, anthropologist and explorer, as she and her husband, professor of prehistoric research of Peabody Museum Yale University returned on the S. S. Orbita after a summer's work abroad.

"From my investigations in 14 European museums and in many excavations, I doubt very much that the cave man was the boss, after all," Mrs. McCurdy declared. "Women evidently displayed the earliest signs of injustice. It was natural that they should for theirs was the drudgery of the camp and they had more time to think.

Paintings By Women

"Men research workers hold that the beautiful prehistoric paintings and drawings were the work of cave men. I'm convinced that the best of them were done by cave women.

"I believe, furthermore, that women occupied a position of greater importance in the life of the family and tribe than they do today. In prehistoric days motherhood was venerated as the salvation of the race. Today it is a secondary matter."

Dr. McCurdy declined to comment upon the views put forth by his wife. As she is an anthropologist in good standing, she is entitled to her own theories, he said.

Explored Excavations

He went abroad last spring to attend the international congress of Americanists at The Hague, Holland, and Gothenburg, Sweden. Later, as director of the American school of prehistoric research he explored the recently unearthed "rock shelter" near Bordeaux and other excavations near Lyons.

Especially significant, said Dr. McCurdy, was the discovery by his party of a deposit containing the bones of small horses. They indicated that horse flesh, "considered a delicacy in France today," was the principal meat of the cave man he believed.

Irrigation

By A. M. M'PHERSON.

WATER—BUOYANCY.

One of our local sportsmen dropped in the other day to ask us about a new motor boat he was building and which he expected to launch on Lake Kemp.

He is having a number of air tanks put in the boat to prevent it from sinking should he accidentally punch a hole in the bottom. What he wanted to know was whether or not he could not put air under pressure in these tanks and thus increase their buoyancy.

He had in mind that pumping up an inner tube will increase its ability to float and the more air you put in the greater the weight the tube will sustain without sinking.

The buoyancy of an inner tube increases when more air is forced in because the size of the tube increases as the air pressure is increased. This increase in size caused by the tube to displace more water when submerged and this in turn makes it harder to sink.

In the case of a steel tank built rigid, air under pressure cannot cause it to expand. Its size remains the same, therefore the amount of water it will displace when submerged remains the same and of course its lifting power is not increased.

The lifting power or power to float is dependent upon the size of an object in relation to its weight. If you increase the size and the weight remains the same then the bouyancy is increased.

Instead of increasing the floating power of a rigid tank by putting compressed air into it the opposite is actually true. Air has weight and the weight of air per cubic foot increases as the pressure increases. So filling a tank with compressed air really makes it a little heavier and not quite as capable o sustaining a weight in water.

HEADS IN GUNNY SACK.

Dixon, Illinois, Police Find Them Wrapped in Iowa Paper.

DIXON, Ills., Oct. 21.—Lee county authorities were at a loss today for solution of the mystery surrounding the finding of parts of two human heads, wrapped in a Sioux City, Iowa, Journal of September 29 and enclosed in a gunny sack. The bundle was found yesterday under a bridge on the Lincoln highway near here.

TONG WAR IS SCATTERED.

Chicago, Milwaukee and Detroit Report Chinese Fatalities.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Renewal of Chinese tong feuds was said by police to be responsible for the killing of one Chinese, the probble fatal wounding of two more and attempts to kill several others here last night, the fatal shooting at the same time of a Chinese in Milwaukee and the death Saturday of another in Detroit.

Police inquiries into the attacks in the three cities were balked by scores of Chinese who when questioned professed ignorance of the shootings and denied connection with any tongs.

"There's No Doubt About It—

KARNAK

Actually Saved My Life," Declares Well Known Waco Man.

"Yes sir, I believe Karnak is all that ever pulled me through, and I'll praise it as long as I live," is the emphatic statement made by J. A. Abischier, 331 S. Fifth street, Waco, Texas, in his unqualified indorsement of Andre's celebrated new medicine which has created such a profound impression throughout Texas. For ten years Mr. Abischier carried the mail on the first rural route to run out of Waco, and he numbers his friends by the scores.

"I had become so weak from stomach suffering that i couldn't walk half a dozen blocks," continued Mr. Abischier. "I didn't have any appetite at all, and what little I ate lodged right in the pit of my stomach and caused such terrible pain I could hardly stand it. My stomach just seemed as sore as a boil and I could hardly bear the weight of my clothes. Two weeks before I began taking Karnak I had lost 12 pounds in weight and was getting mighty worried over my condition.

"Two friends of mine told me about Karnak and just begged me to try it, so I went down and got a bottle and, as I said before, I really believe this medicine saved my life. I have taken two bottles now and can eat anything set before me, and my stomach doesn't bother me a bit. All the soreness and pain is gone, my digestion seems perfect, and I can do a good day's work again without feeling any the worse for it. Karnak is the greatest medicine ever made, and nothing I can say is half good enough for it."

Karnak is sold in Wichita Falls by Smith's Drug Stores, Store No. 1, 720 Ohio avenue, Store No. 2, Kemp Hotel building, Store Uo. 3, 612 Eighth street, in Burkburnett by Burkburnett Pharmacy and the leading druggists in every town.—Adv.

"There Will be No Alibis," Declares Indians' Coach

JUNIOR COLLEGE CLUB READY FOR SET-TO WITH DEVOL HERE FRIDAY

McCallum's Coyotes, Sorely Beset By Injury Jinx, Prepare Today for Electra Tilt Saturday.

The Coyotes worked inside Tuesday because of bad weather, but Coach Mosley's Junior college Indians turned out enmasse, and romped through a stiff workout on the college field regardless of rain and mud. The two elevens were to have scrimmaged each other. Limbering up exercises and a bit of signal study constituted the Coyote practice session. The Indians devoted the afternoon to forward pass scrimmaging.

Coyotes and Indians probably will hook up this afternoon in a light scrimmage session, possibly both teams resorting to aerial work solely.

Indians in Shape

As Friday and the hour of the Junior college-Devol All-stars contest in Spudder park draw near the Indian are looking better and better. Of course, there are still a number of rough edges both in defense and offense play of the team which could be bettered with sufficient time. But on the whole the squad seems to be in fine shape. The men are in pretty good condition, and all of the injuries which beseiged the team for the past two weeks have just about disappeared.

"There will be no alibis," said Coach Mosley last night and he didn't utter this with reservations. The All-stars stack up as a fast and heavy outfit. Devol's most notable feat of the current season was the recent playing of the powerful Breckenridge eleven to a scoreless tie. The All-stars, too, were not in the best of condition for this embroglio. Breckenridge, it will be remembered is the next club to face the Cisco high school Loboes, conquerors of the 1923 Texas champions the past week, Abilene high. And Breckenridge, booming the slogan "Beat Cisco," expect to accomplish exactly that feat.

Coyotes Again Under Dogs

McCallum's crippled Coyotes will enter their first real practice this afternoon for the Electra game in the Tigers' own lair Saturday. And the outlook is not of a bright nature. Injuries and yesterday's rain have hampered the Crimson and Black in making preparations for this tilt the first two days of the week. Sore spots and the absence of several players are expected to continue to worry the squad the remainder of the week. Heretofore rated by many followers of the grid game as superior to Coach Gilstrap's squad, the Coyotes will assuredly enter the contest picked as the under dogs as was the case the past week-end in the game with the Vernon Lions. But this time it will not be lack of playing finesse which gives the Coyotes the lower rung on the dope ladder, but the absence of stars hurt in the Vernon affair.

Shaw, Steed, Deems, Jenkins, and Doke probably will be in no condition to enter the game. Steed is out for the remainder of the year with a broken arm. Lawson, the best Coyote ground gainer Saturday, and a number of other members of the squad are nursing injuries.

Because of the poor condition of his men McCallum will be forced to work but lightly instead of running them through the still practice sessions needed prior to a game of such moment.

GRANGE NOT ONLY HERO

Illinois Players Praise Sportsmanship of Steger, Michigan Captain

Every once in a while we find evidences that the campaign for better sportsmanship in sport is bearing fruit.

Football in the last decade, probably can show no more striking example than that of Herbert Steger, captain of the Michigan eleven in last Saturday's struggle with Illinois.

That game at Urbana meant a lot to the Wolverine leader. It had been his proud boast that he never had played a losing game.

He went into this contest realising that the one sure way for his team to win would be to get "Red" Grange out of the way as soon as possible. Men as experienced as those on the Michigan team know more than one way to put an enemy star out of the game in short order. They could have crippled Grange early and might have won had they done so.

But instead, Illinois men testify to the fact that more than once the Michigan captain was seen to protect his fallen enemy from the crush that often comes, by arching his own body above that of Grange.

Illinois won, thanks to five touchdowns scored by Grange. Grange stayed in the game to make these touchdowns, thanks to the clean play of his opponents.

Grange came out of the fray heralded as the greatest player of the age, one of the greatest of all time.

Capt. Herb Steger, though his team was beaten, emerged with a record for sportsmanship, in the final analysis, an honor as much to be desired as that accorded Grange.

STRIBLING FIGHTS TOO MUCH

Macon Battler Develops Good Defense but Has No Offense

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Young Stribling is doing too much fighting. He has developed great speed, but lacks a punch. Fighting nearly every week he has worked out a style of boxing in which he takes few chances. If he fought only once a month and felt that he had to win decisively every time out he would make a better showing and might have a better chance to go up among the champions. He knows all he needs to know about defensive fighting right now. All he needs is the habit of trying to put in a winning punch. In the bout with Berlenbach several weeks ago, Stribling played safe, and the way he was able to keep Berlenbach out of position so that Paul couldn't use his hardest punches was appreciated more by the boxers around the ringside than by the crowd. It was a fine exhibition of defensive skill. But something more is needed to make a champion.

Florida Sure Of Pouring It On Longhorns

'Gators Present Formidable Overhead and Line Attack

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Oct. 21.—Leaving Tuesday for Austin, Texas, where they face its next difficult grid assignment in the Longhorns of the University of Texas, the championship aspiring Fighting 'Gaitors from Florida university embarked with added confidence and prestige following their whirlwind 34 to 0 victory over the Deacons from Wake Forest. Coach Van Fleet had only Monday in which to limber up his brilliant squad of gridders who vied on Saturday with Georgia Tech and Tulane in unsetting the well known "bucket of dope." Wake Forest came to Tampa not overrated, their stinging defeat resulting from the magnificent play of the Fighting 'Gaitors on their way toward the highest peak in southern football.

The Fighting 'Gaitors have certainly enhanced their play and will be dangerous not only to Texas, but to the Army and all other opponents who aspire to taste the caliber of their stride. With a most powerful offensive that includes a fast and puzzling aerial game, line bucks and an assortment of other features, the 'Gaitors are well fortified to lock horns with the rangers from the southwest. Their defense checked Tech and Wake Forest and must now hold Texas, and judging from their performances of the past two weeks they are men enough to hold anything the country can show in a football way. And when the Orange and Blue combines a swift, effective offensive with a stubborn and impregnable defense, then look out for Florida. They're on.

MANDELL REAL FIGHTER.

Sammy Meets Jack Bernstein In Gotham November 3.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Sammy Mandell, who is to box Jack Bernstein in New York, November 3, is one of the cleverest lightweights in the country. Mandell began boxing professionally when he finished high school at Rockford, Ill., where he was captain of the basketball team and a famous football and baseball player. He is a keen, intelligent boxer, with plenty of class, and should go well in New York. Sammy has just been boxing in California, where he beat Adams, the coast lightweight champion, in a four-round decision bout, and lost a decision to Phil Salvadore, who can fight like a streak when the mood is on him.

Leonard Clever But Lacked Real Punch at Start

Young Benjamin Learned "Feather Duster Boxer" Can't be Champ

BEN STUDIED HITTING

Now He Packs Punch And Wears Lightweight Crown

By ROBERT EDGREN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Lots of good fighters started with a hankering for the fast and clever stuff, and it may be a good foundation for a fighting career. But it doesn't win championships. Benny Leonard was known as the "feather duster boxer" in the first year or two at the old Fairmont club. Then Billy Gibson took Benny aside one afternoon and said: "Benny, you can be a champion if you learn how to punch. I want you to work with the idea of punching hard, and forget everything else."

Leonard was smart enough to see the point. He began developing a knack of putting in hard blows. A few weeks later he met Joe Mandot of New Orleans, one of the best lightweights in the country, and knocked him out in seven rounds. It was a startling finish to a hard bout, and the punch that dropped Mandot was no "feather duster." That punch gave Leonard more reputation than all of his clever fights together.

Immediately Benny Leonard was in demand all through the eastern states. He began winning fights with knockouts. Among the good lightweights who were fanned to sleep by Benny's new poke were Joe Welsh, Phil Bloom, Jimmy Murphy, Shamus O'Brien, Eddie Andrews, Ever Hammer, Harvey Thorpe, Packey Hommey, Ritchie Mitchell, Charlie Thomas and Eddie Shannon—all well known in their day, some of whom hadn't been knocked out before. Ever Hammer and Ritchie Mitchell especially were supposed to be headed toward the lightweight title. Then Leonard got his big chance in a third bout with Freddy Welsh. In the ninth round he dropped Welsh with a fierce left hook in the stomach, hammered him along one side of the ring after he got up, hung him across the ropes and kept hitting him with right hooks to keep him there. Welsh was not down," as his feet were on the floor while his arms were locked over the top rope. But he was helpless and practically unconscious when referee McPartland jumped in and declared Leonard winner. Released from the ropes, Welsh collapsed and fell, and his seconds had to carry him to his corner. It was a queer way to be knocked out, but a clean K. O. at that. After the fight Leonard said that he hit Welsh with short right hooks to keep him from falling, which was a thoughtful thing to do and showed that Benny's bean is working all the time.

"I was afraid that if I let him drop he'd take a rest and get up again," said Benny, "so I kept knocking him against the ropes to keep him from falling. I stopped hitting just as McPartland stepped in, for I saw Freddy was going limp and I was afraid of hurting him."

S.M.U. AND T.C.U. COACHES — GLEEFUL OVER OUTLOOK.

Ray Morrison of SMU is no doubt the most joyful coach in the southwest conference right now. He has a reason to be after defeating the team from the school he dared not meet in 1923.

But next to Morrison is Matty Bell—not that he conquered another pennant chaser, but that a TIAA team held his machine to seven points.

"Just what we needed," he sang out delightedly. "Over-confidence has no business sneaking around our camp.

Top O' the Mornin' Stuff

BLONDY CROSS

Down in Austin there's a different atmosphere from that which hovered over the varsity campus in other years when the sturdy Longhorns were forced to taste the sour dish of defeat. In days of yore one setback to the Steers usually was enough, two a certainty, to cause wailing and gnashing, yelping and howling, and ultimately a still hunt for the scalp of the worthy grid mentor who happened to be guiding the varsity moleskin destinies at the time.

Texas students and alumni alike have driven grid coaches from their pigskin throne down at the Texas capital for losing games no matter what the reason for the loss, and no matter whether or not they realized just the why and wherefore of the defeats, which in most cases they did not.

But Doc Stewart, lord of the university athletic domain during the current fall session and last, is an orator and a psychologist. He has imbued into varsity rooters the spirit to pull for the eleven and its coaches always and regardless of all obstacles, and he has taught them to expect defeat.

Instead of a pampered student sorrowing over the Mustang victory the past week-end in which the Methodists triumphed over the Longhorns, 10-6, varsity students are still praising the valiant fight waged by the crippled Steers. Instead of trying to discover why they were beaten Texas students are wondering just why the Mustangs won, and they don't believe that it could be done again in a thousand years.

Is the varsity yelping for the dethronement of Stewart? Not at all; it is now busy with resigning itself to another defeat Saturday when Florida U. storms Clark fie

How long this attitude will last, it stands to be seen. It is not believable that a Texas university student body can resign itself to a Texas A. & M. victory over a Longhorn team. But the way the dope flows right now the Aggies are given a decided advantage for the annual Thanksgiving classic.

Put on the mitts with Jackie Sanders yesterday for about four rounds of glove exercise. That boy's tough and willing. Whatever else may be said about the style and ability of the so-called Fighting Wop from Charleston, S. C., it will never be voiced that he's afraid to stay in there and plug away at his man.

Jackie weighs in the vicinity of 120 pounds. I caught him flush in the face several times with all the force that I could put behind the blows aided by 160 pounds of weight. It shook him up, but the little fellow kept boring in, and wouldn't give ground.

Duke Trammel intends to bring a lad from Fort Worth with him this week to box Sanders in Thursday's semi-windup bout. Duke believes his protege to be a real comer.

Some time in the future Sanders probably will hook up with Nick Gundy. All Wichita Falls boxing fans know Nick. He's another tough one. Not clever, but a boy who keeps slugging away. The pair should stage a slam-bang type of battle.

They say Mickey Savage has picked himself a mean customer in Jimmy Guest of Houston. These lads are billed to sling a bit of leather in the second go of the double windup card Thursday. If the Houston glovester is half as good as press agented Mickey, who has long been absent from local fistic circles, will be pushed to the limit to defend himself.

"Beat Dartmouth" Now Cry of Harvard's Crimson

"Wipe out the 16-0 defeat at the hands of Dartmouth," is now the cry at Cambridge as the Harvard eleven preps for the Green game, its next big one, which will be played Oct. 25. Dartmouth defeated Crimson by mentioned score last season when Harvard also smarted from defeats administered by Yale and Brown. Three of Harvard's stars are shown above: Capt. Greenough, left; Edwin Gehrke, center, and Isadore Zarakov, right.

The lighter but hard driving Dartmouth eleven played Yale to a 14-14 tie last week while the best Harvard's Crimson could accomplish was a close 12 to 6 victory over the none too powerful Holy Cross team.

Harvard is rated, however, an even chance to beat Dartmouth this week-end, but the battle should be a furious one.

Coyote Pups To Work Hard On Aerial Attack

Present Strong Overhead To be Developed More

Montgomery's junior high moleskinners were forced indoors Tuesday by rain and mud, contenting themselves with a skull session.

This afternoon's workout probably will be a stiff one with scrimmage to the fore by way of making up for yesterday's layoff.

Attention will be turned to the developing of a smooth-working overhead game. The eleven right now seems fairly proficient in this style of attack, but Montgomery intends to drill the youngsters all the harder, put on a number of new plays, and in short build up an aerial game to be used especially in future contests in which the opposing teams may be heavier and strong in the line.

Levine, Francis, and Walker constitute the chunking force. Herndon and Strange at ends are pretty good on the receiving portion of forward passes, while Levine, Horten, Walker, and Hicks in the backfield are fast developing the fine art of snatching the oval.

The present forward passing repertoire of the juniors consists of a series of short running passes. Longer passes, various other passing formations, and different types of short passes will be added to those already used.

Horten and Francis, too, are fast developing punting ability. These youths kick on a par with the leading punters in class B circles. Strang and Parker both stack up as good placekickers, and may some day be called on to attempt field goals. These lads will practice daily on placement boots.

CINCY NUCLEUS FOR '25 ROUSH, PINELLI, DRESSEN AND CRITZ

CINCINNATI, Oct. 21. — Garry Herrmann says that Roush, Critz, Pinelli and Dressen are four members of the Cincinnati Reds who need not be mentioned in any trade rumors the coming stove league season. These four men will be used as a nucleus for next season's team, he avers.

Which gives some 15 other members of the team a chance to ponder as to where they will play next season.

Herrmann's statement is interesting in view of the rumor already bobbling about that this is the winter that Eddie Roush is to become a member of the New York Giants.

You'll recall that Roush startled the baseball public last spring by falling all over himself in an effort to sign early with the club. This change of tactics after he had held out annually for years, caused many wise boys to wonder whether or not some inducement outside of salary was not offered him. This inducement, some said, was the promise that 1924 would be his last in Cincinnati and that the next campaign would find him in New York.

All this is purely conjecture of course.

There is this about the situation in Redville, though. The death of Jake Daubert and the failure of the Reds pitching staff to deliver as brilliantly as was prophesied gives the Red bosses a few problems to solve. And trades are the first methods used in solving said problems.

NEW FIELD GOAL STYLE

Two-Man Drop-Kick Proves Success For Several Elevens

List the two-man drop-kick as this season's contribution to new football plays.

The lineup is the same as for a placement kick. The chap with the sharpshooted foot drops ten to fifteen yards back of the line of scrimmage. With him goes the man who is to assist him.

The ball is snapped back to the assistant the same as for a placement kick.

Duncan, Newest Addition To Nat Crew, Lucky One

CLEVELAND, Oct. 21.—As this is written Mr. Louis Baird, alias Pat Duncan is the baby member of the world's champions, the Washington Senators. As a member of said outfit he now stands as good a chance as anyone in baseball of biting into a slice of a world's series melon himself next fall.

Duncan apparently was born under a lucky baseball star. He was one of those men predestined to hop from the obscurity of a minor league berth to a championship club over night.

Pat was purchased by the Cinci Reds in August of 1919 and six weeks later was collecting world series money.

In connection with the acquiring of Pat by the Senators, Henry P. Edwards, Cleveland sport editor and recently named secretary of the Baseball Writers association tells an interesting story. Edwards writes that five years ago McCann was scouting for Cincinnati, while Joe Engel was beating the bushes for Washington. Engel sought a second baseman, McCann a right-handed hitting outfielder. The paths of the two crossed in South Carolina. Each told the other what he wanted.

"Just the outfielder you want over in Birmingham," said Engel to McCann.

"Just the second baseman you have been looking for in Buffalo," said McCann to Engel.

McCann takes the train to Birmingham and buys Outfielder Pat Duncan for Cincinnati. Pat reporting at once and getting into the world series, while Engel journeyed to Buffalo to look over Stanley Harris.

According to McCann, Clark Griffith, then manager of the Washington club, did not think much of Engel's tip to buy Harris.

Engel, however, persisted and Griffith finally consented to give Harris a trial on the next training trip.

Olympic Coach Believes Hussey Another Paddock

Brilliant Schoolboy Sprinter Soon to Enter Boston College

BOSTON, Oct. 21.—Frank Hussey, the famous schoolboy sprinter who has been timed in 9 3-5 seconds in the hundred in high school games and who went to Paris on the American Olympic team, will soon be running under the colors of Boston college. Hussey ran on the winning relay sprint team at the Olympics, and in other meets shortly afterward showed speed that puts him in Charlie Paddock's class in the shorter sprints. It was unfortunate that Hussey didn't have a chance to run in the hundred meters at Paris. The United States had so many first class sprinters that it was impossible to enter them all in the hundred and the two hundred meters, the number of entries from each country being limited. Hussey might haver un faster than Scholz, Paddock, Murchison and Leconey, and might have beaten Abrahams of England in the short sprint. However, Hussey is young, and he'll have another chance. Probably when another Olympic rolls around he will be going faster. He may be the fastest sprinter in the world in another year or two. His schoolboy performance promise record breaking when he is fully developed under college coaching.

Charlie Paddock, who has now retired from the track and is going to confine his athletic activities to golf, says he may try to run again in the next Olympics. It's doubtful that any athlete can stay out of competition for four years and show his old speed. And there is no telling how many new record sprinters may be developed in the next four years.

Lawson Robertson, Olympic team coach, declares that he expects to see Frank Hussey come up to Paddock's speed in another year. Hussey is a steady performer, and even as a novice competing against such men as Scholz, Paddock, Murchison and Leconey he was as cool as any veteran on the mark, and as quick to get away. He is a remarkably fast starter. With a little more strength and experience, and a Paddock "jump" at the finish he may be unbeatable.

LEONARD FORTUNATE LAD

Sore Thumb Saves Benjamin Licking At Hands of Walker

The way Mickey Walker swarmed all over Bobby Barret, fighting in the style once made famous by Terry McGovern, shows that Benny Leonard was lucky when he got a sore thumb. Mickey is a real fighter, and there's little doubt that he could beat the lightweight champion, no matter how invincible Benny is in his own class.

FUENTE AFTER CROWN.

Mexican Battler Flops Four in Week Of Heavy Scrapping.

Tony Fuente recently won four fights in a week, all with quick knockouts. He is a six-footer, has a long reach, and weighs about 190. Winsor's friends are trying to discourage him, but he's talking already about matching his new heavyweight against Dempsey. For a starter, Fuente will fight Floyd Johnson. That's the way they "started" Romero.

Mexican Nat'l Net Tourney To Begin Oct. 25

Richards and Other Stars From States Will Compete

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The turbulent land of revolution torn Mexico will be the center of the tennis world for a brief time while many of the leading tennis stars of the U. S. and foreign countries are competing in the annual Mexican national championship tourney at Mexico City which starts October 25.

Vincent Richards, winner of the title last season, will defend his crown. The final meeting last fall was productive of some of the most startling tennis uncorked all season. Richards met Manuel Alonzo, Spanish star, in the championship match. Alonzo several times came within a point of winning the match, only to be nosed out by Richards.

Alonzo is not entered this year but Richards must defend his title against Howard and Robert Kinsey, Clarence Griffin, Francis T. Hunter and several other outstanding stars of the 1924 season.

Miss Mary K. Browne, former national champion who gave devotees of both tennis and golf some interesting exhibitions in her double comeback the past season heads the list of women netters entered in the feminine division.

Miss Helen Wills planned to compete but her college studies have forced cancellation of her entry.

One interesting angle of the tourney is the fact that the courts lie so far above the sea level that the players plan on spending three days at the capital before the matches to become accustomed to the altitude. The courts are some 7,000 feet above the sea level.

SAINTS OFF FOR COAST.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 21.—Manager Nick Allen and 19 members of the St. Paul American Association club left here today to play a nine game series for the minor league baseball championship of the world with Seattle, winners of the Pacific Coast pennant. The party will arrive in Seattle Thursday night. The series opens Saturday.

Exiled Giant To Sue Landis On Slander Charge

Dolan Hopes to Clear Name, Be Reinstated, Obtain Series Cut

KENESAW WON'T TALK

"Sounds Like Repetition Of White Sox Scandal," Avers Ban

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Cozy Dolan, former New York coach, who was banned from baseball with Jimmy O'Connell, on charges of attempted bribery, will bring suit against Commissioner Landis and organized baseball for alleged slander, according to announcement by W. J. Fallon, noted criminal attorney, who has been engaged by Dolan to handle the case.

At the same time, Fallon said, Dolan will make his action a basis for an attempt to clear his name, gain restoration to baseball ranks and obtain his share of the 1924 world's series money.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Kenesaw M. Landis, basebal commissioner refused tonight to comment on the threatened suit for slander which Cozy Dolan, expelled New York coach, plans to bring against Landis and organized baseball. "It looks like a repetition of 1921," was the comment of President Johnson of the American league. "Dolan," Johnson said, "has retained Attorney Fallon. He is a lawyer who represented Arnold Rothstein after the 1919 world's series scandal between the White Sox and the Cincinnati club. He also represented Abe Attel during the time in which we tried to extradite the man who was said to be the go-between in fixing the White Sox players. Fallon has been close to John McGraw. It all seems to work out in a cycle."

HEISMAN BANS RAZORS.

Flappers Fail to Bother Bolsheviki Appearing Rice Gridmen.

John W. Heisman is giving Texas coaches a lesson in handling the Texas flapper, who won't let football men alone. Football mentors at practically every co-educational institution in the state have trouble at one time or another with the tendency of the men to break training rules on account of the admiring co-eds.

But now comes Heisman with a ban against razors and shaving soap, so that his team will probably look like a bolshevik meeting before it takes on TCU. His Appollo-like grid heroes will, therefore, be topped off with a ragged coat of hair and a rough chin.

BILLY WHISKERS

BY FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY

Billy and his friends were planning to escape from the motion picture studio and had persuaded Toodles, the Shetland pony, to go with them.

The moon had just cast a bright pathway across the stable yard of the studios as it came up from behind some tall buildings when Billy awoke and touched Toodles, who was sleeping beside him, and told her that it was time for them to start.

"Sssh! Don't speak! Be very quiet and follow me. Stubby and Button are outside, but keeping in the shadows, watching for the night watchman, for you know we must dodge him. The minute he has gone his rounds and is out of sight, Stubby is going to bark as if he was barking at the moon, as dogs often do. That is to be the signal for us to start. We are to hurry across the yard and escape through the gate. It is locked now, but I shall butt it down. The minute it falls we will all jump through the opening and run for dear life before the night watchman and the policeman on the beat have time to get here and see what caused the noise."

"Oh, Billy, I am so frightened!" said Toodles.

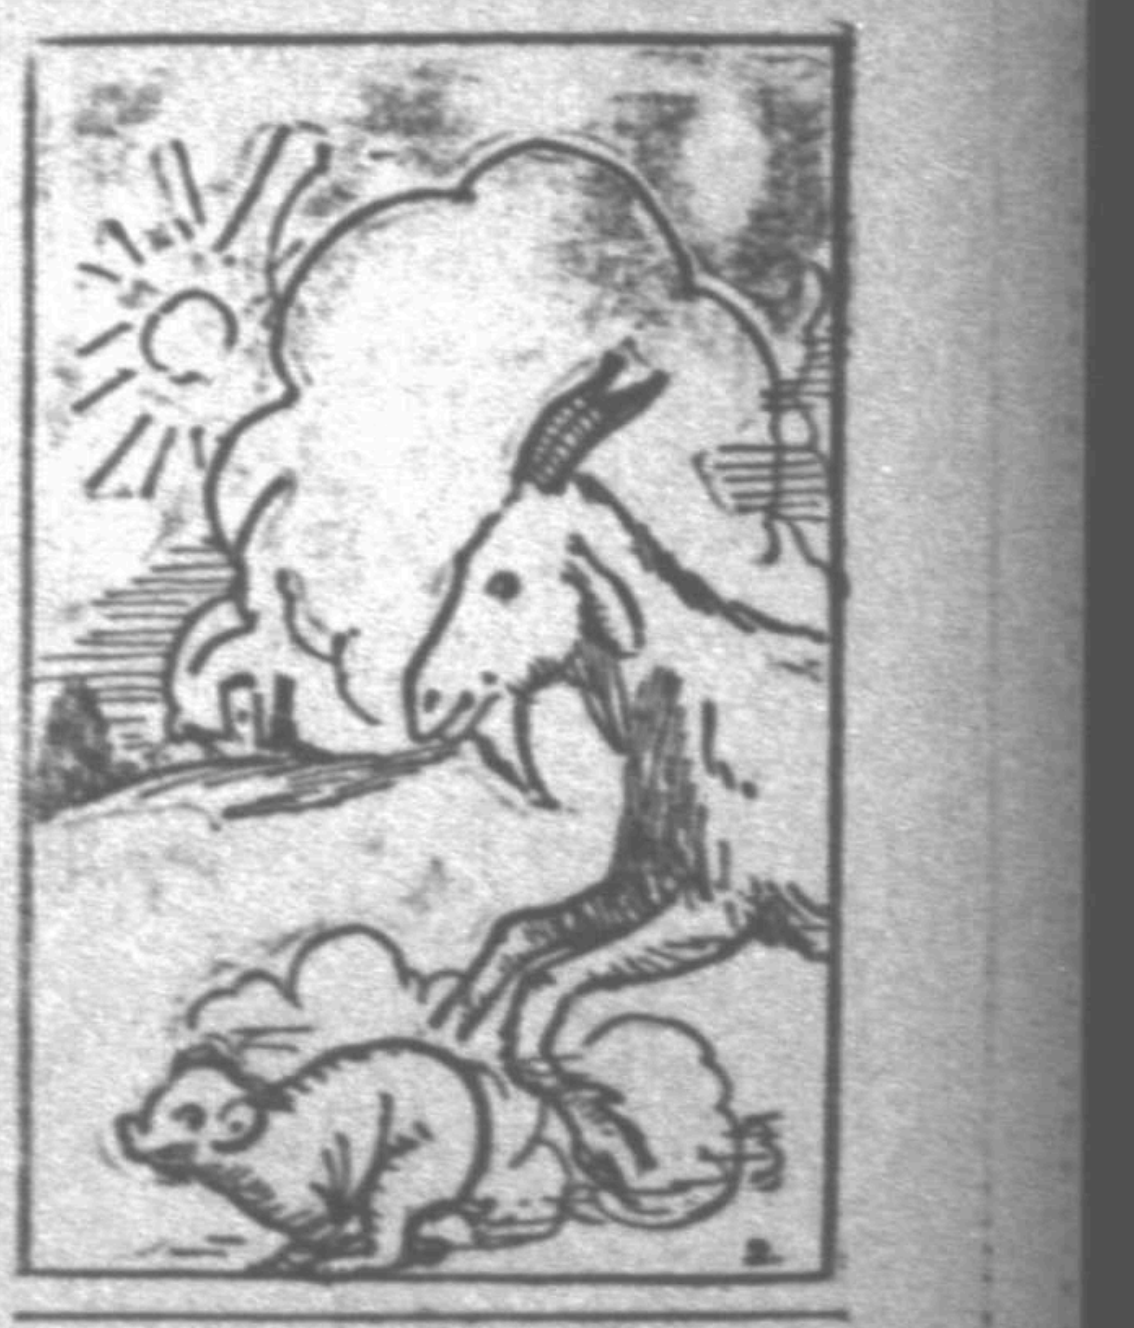
"Never fear, Toodles dear. I'll look after you. And you are going to have more fun than you ever did in your whole life. Hark! I thought I heard a dog howl! Yes, that is Stubby giving us the signal."

They were stealthily creeping out of the stable door when a voice in the stillness called out, "Who goes there?"

For a second their hearts stood still with fear, for both of them thought they were caught. But, looking up over the door, they discovered Billy's hated rival, the green parrot, who had called out that teasing "Who goes there?" with the idea of making a noise and having him discovered so he could not depart.

"Shutup, or I'll butt your cage over yonder moon!" threatened Billy, and the parrot having had an exhibition of Billy's butting powers did not doubt for a minute but that he could do it if he tried, so she said no more but quietly settled down on her perch and watched the four of them sneak across the stable yard and disappear in the shadows.

But what was that terrific noise?



It sounded like a building falling. There followed two shots and the running of many feet. Polly still sat on her perch and bet with herself that Billy had butted down a wall or part of the stable.

"I believe Billy is running away and has coaxed that nice, quiet well-behaved little pony to go with him, along with his tramp friends, that common looking dog and big, black cat. She will rue the day she left a good home to run away with a billy goat! No good ever came to any animal that ran away from its home and master, especially if it went with an animal not its own kind. A horse might run away with a horse, or a cow with a cow; I could understand that but for a pony to run away with a goat is more than I can understand. My, but there will be a commotion here in the morning when it is discovered they are missing, and I can screech my head off telling them where they have gone, but one one will pay the slightest attention to me."

(We will have to wait until tomorrow to find out what caused the noise and if Billy and his friends really escaped).

AGED MINISTER DEAD.

Rev. D. A. Price of Montague, Aged 70, Passes Away Sunday.

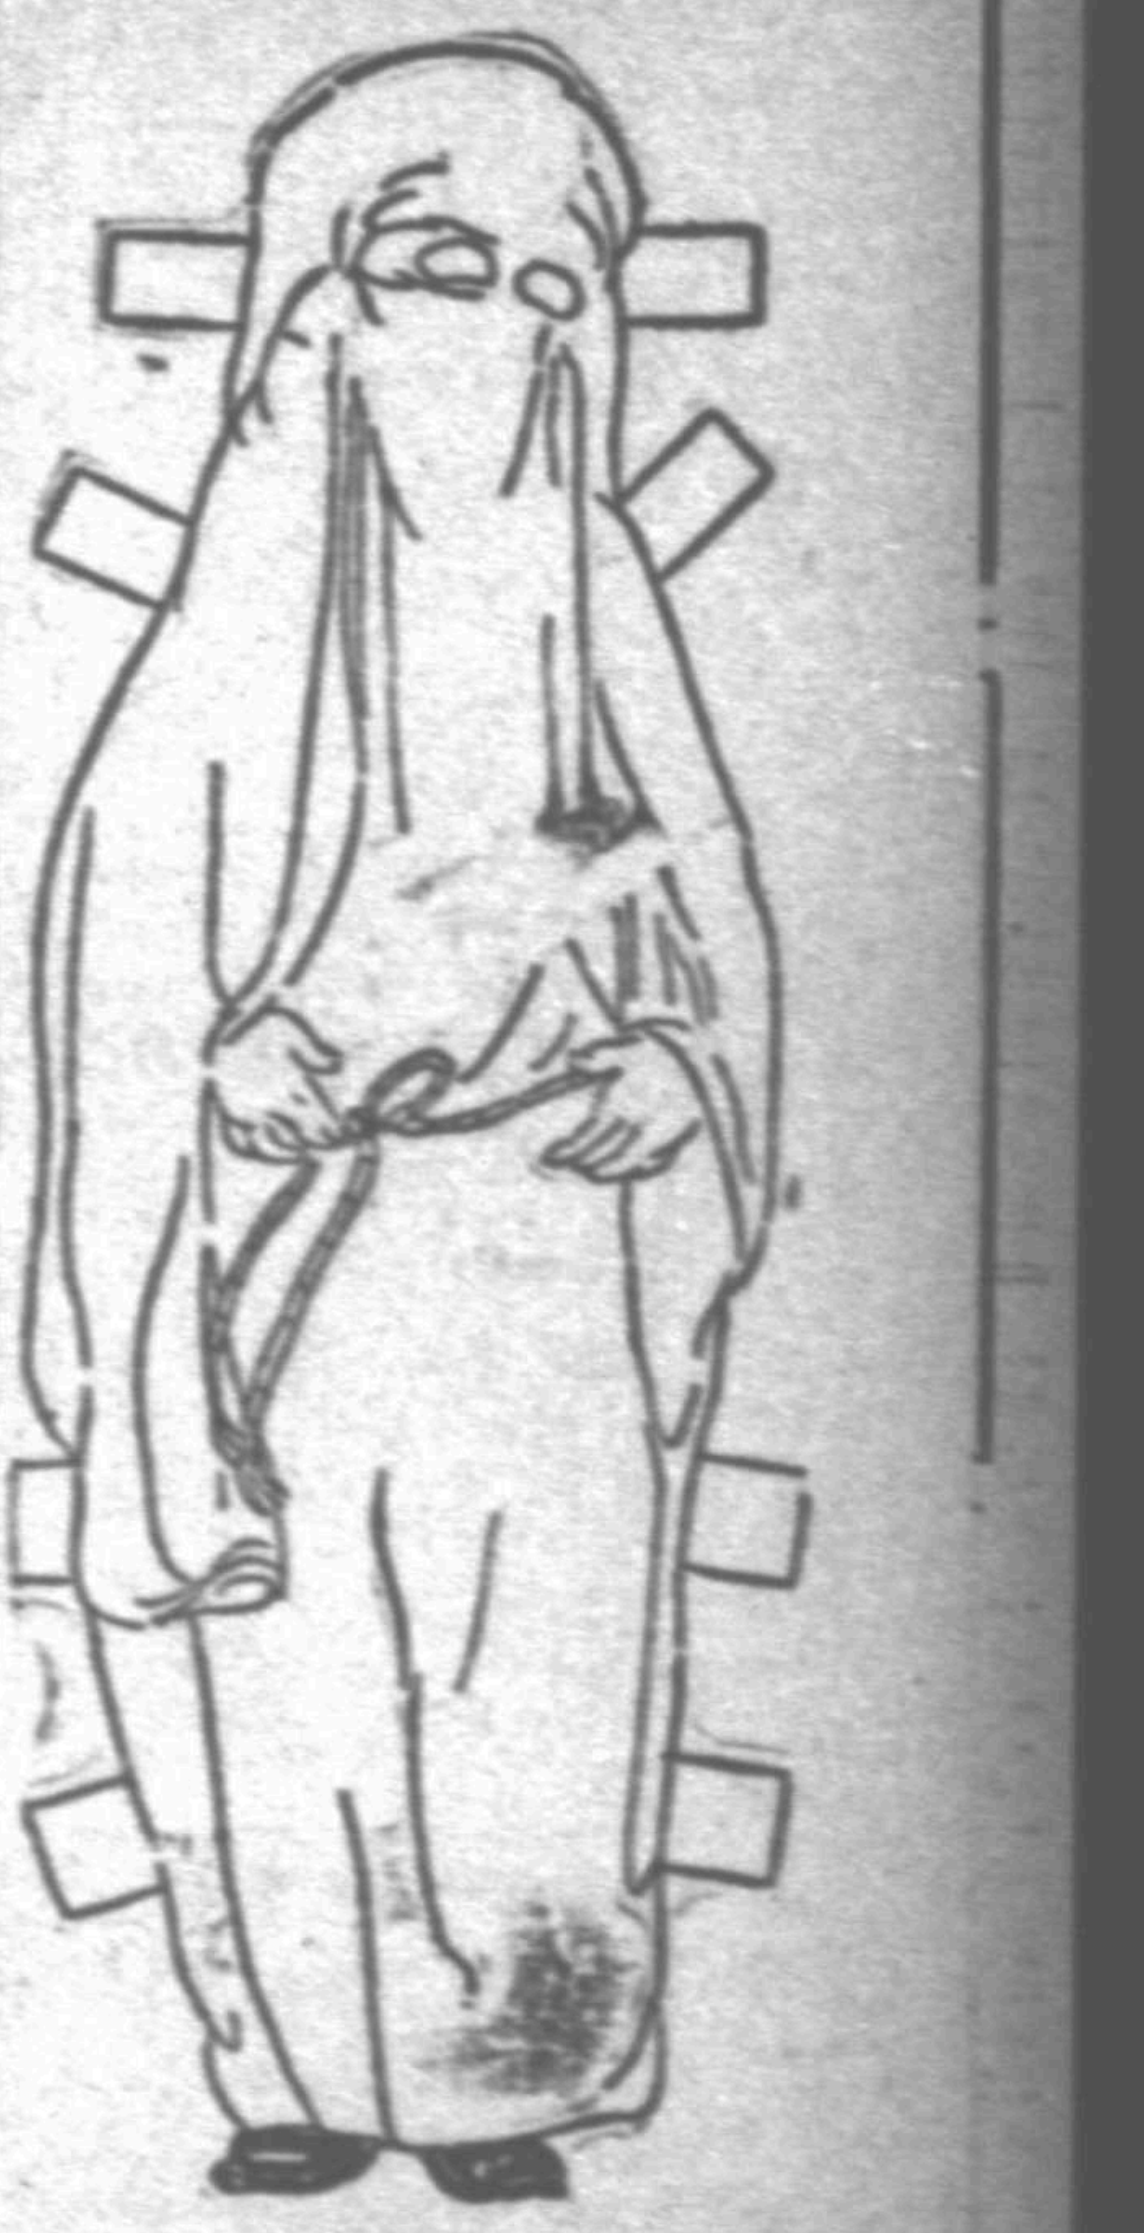
NOCONA, Oct. 21.—Rev. A. D. Price, 70, an early settler and pioneer Baptist preacher of Montague county, died at his home eight miles north of Bonita, Saturday night. Funeral and burial was at Union cemetery near his home, Sunday afternoon. Price had resided in the county since 1872.

WEIGHED 720 AT DEATH

Farmersville Resident Previously Ordered Casket Weighing 610

GREENVILLE, Texas, Oct. 25.—Sam Harris, 45 years old, and weighing about 720 pounds, died of pneumonia today at his home at Farmersville, 14 miles west of here. Last year he purchased his own casket, specially made. It weighs 610 pounds, is 43 inches across, 35 inches deep and 79 inches long. Undertakers who will use a motor truck instead of a hearse for the burial tomorrow said a door must be removed from Harris' home before the body can be moved out.

Color Cut-Outs



"Bo-o-oo!" wailed Joan, in a low, ghostly, moaning voice, as she tried on her ghost dress, made of an old sheet, with slits cut out for eyes.

"Goodness gracious," excaimed Betty Cut-out, who was helping her fix the sheet just right, "you almost make me shiver to look at you. Turn around until I put another pin in."

When Joan was sure the ghost dress was all right, she slipped it off and the two girls, with the help of Betty's mother who showed them how to put things together, began making the witch dress that Betty was to wear at her Hallowe'en party.

The ghost dress is all white. Be sure to cut out the two holes for the eyes so Joan can peep through. Tomorrow you'll find out the kind of dress Betty is making.

Texas Company Will Build 6-Inch Line to South Vernon

Second Carrier Decides to Enter Wilbarger Field

Construction of New 22-Mile Long Pipeline Will Start At Once

NO CONTRACTS

Completion Expected Within Thirty Days With Pipe Enroute Now

The Texas Pipeline company will begin at once on the construction of a six-inch 22-mile pipeline from their Electra main line station to the new South Vernon field, in Wilbarger county, according to information given out at the local offices of the company yesterday. The pipe for the line is reported to be en route to Wichita Falls and no delay is expected in the commencement of actual laying of pipe. Completion is expected within 30 days.

Twenty-Two Miles Long.

The new pipeline will take an air line course across Wilbarger county to the field from the main line pumping station just west of Electra. The line will be 22 miles long and will be laid with six-inch pipe, according to the announcement made yesterday.

The Texas company has and is making no contracts of any sort with producers, but is building the line to place at their disposal, to be there for their use when they desire. This will be the second line to go into the field, Waggoner Refining company having already commenced the construction of a four-inch line from their plant at Electra to the field, and being within about two weeks of completion.

Second Line to Field.

The Texas Pipeline company, the Sinclair Pipeline company, and other major carriers have been considering the proposition of an additional carrier to the South Vernon field for some time, especially since the completion of the Stephens will, but to date the Texas company is the only one to actually undertake the construction of the line, other than Waggoner Refining company. The line will be of great benefit to producers, who are in a fair way of finding no market at all for their oil, which is being produced faster than storage can be built and is running into earthen pits in most cases.

CONDITION IMPROVING

Marland and Standard Actions Have Influence in Wall Street

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Wall street's attention has been drawn still more to the oil securities by the Marland Oil company's removal of prorating in the midcontinent field and the statement of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey regarding increased consumption of fuel oil. Important oil interests take the view that if prices are held down, enthusiastic drillers will be discouraged and the downward trend of the oil output will be accelerated, thereby paving the way for better prices and smaller inventories when the demand warrants.

Shamrock, Goldsmith

The Shamrock Oil company has completed its No. 15, Goldsmith, Swastika district, as a lost hole, a slip having gone in the hole at a depth of 462 feet, and an unsuccessful fishing job resulting. Derrick and rig are being moved 22 feet east for No. 16.

Shamrock, Campbell

The Shamrock Oil company has completed its No. 6, Campbell Banking company, Swastika district, for a 100-125 barrel well, sand depth given as 1,321-33 feet. The well will be placed on power.

News of the Fields

Roberts-Hill, Overby

Roberts and Hill are drilling below 1,600 feet on their No. 7, Overby, Roberts and Hill district, south Wichita county. The well will be completed in the 1,700-foot pay.

Burns-Maxson, Young Co.

Burns and Maxson are moving a rig onto their location in the southwest corner of the east half of TE&LCO survey, block 81, northwest of the Peter, Kemp, area, and expect to get started by day after tomorrow.

The well will be located on the W. C. Alexander land.

Ray-Massie, South Vernon

Ray and Massie are drilling at about 1,000 feet on their No. 1, Dill et al, southwest quarter of section 84 H&TCRR block 14, north of the south Vernon production, Wilbarger county. The No. 1, Bond-Hawkins-Williams, offsetting the Winnipeg Oil company's lease to the south, is drilling at about 800 feet. No. 2, Bond et al, is still a derrick.

Texas Company, Jeske

TEXAS COMPANY JESKE 6 .....

The Texas company is drilling past a last reported depth of 840 feet on their No. 1, Jeske, offsetting to the northwest the Texhoma (Carey) No. 1, Hausler, pumper. The test is located in the southwest corner of lot 6, Thomas McCoy survey.

Bridwell-Heydrick

Bridwell and Heydrick have made location for their No. 3, Stephens, a location east of their No. 1, drilling at a last reported depth of 1,854 feet, northwest quarter of section 83, H&TCRR survey, block 14, south Vernon area, Wilbarger county. The No. 2, Stephens, drilling, is a south offset to the gas well, owned now by Petroleum Producers and Bridwell and Heydrick.

Cumley, Camp

James T. Cumley is reaming down to 1,803 feet from 1,716 feet in his No. 1, Caroline Camp, a mile south of the Cumley-Callendar-Stump producer on the Stine land, Petrolia district, Clay county. Sand was encountered here at 1,803 feet.

John O'Neil, Clay Co.

John O' Neil is shut down temporarily at a depth of 2,025 feet on his No. 1, Orus Ross, Kerbow and Edwards subdivision, southeast of Wichita Falls, total depth given as 2,025 feet. No sand was encountered showing enough oil to test. The hole will probably be abandoned.

E. S. Carey, Pollei

E. S. Carey was setting casing and was to bail last night or this morning on his No. 1, S. W. Pollei, southwest corner of block 7, Thomas McCoy survey, south Archer county. Depth of encountering the sand was given as 1,117 feet, but it is not known whether this is the upper dry sand encountered in the well to the south or not, production there coming from sand at about 1,124-27 feet.

Maer-Staniforth, Pollei

Maer and Staniforth have set casing and are bailing No. 1, Pollei, just north of the Texhoma producers on the Hausler land. Depth of the sand was given as 1,155 feet, this test having missed the upper sand altogether as in the Texhoma west offset No. 1, Jeske, to the Carey well.

Burton-Texhoma

Burton and the Texhoma Oil and Refining company are drilling at about 600 feet in a lime in their No. 1, H. Lewis, southeast corner of block 187, TE&LCO survey, abstract 434, northeast of the Peter-Kemp area in north Young county.

The Magnolia No. 4 Parrish, southeast corner of their 40 acres, section 26, H&TCRR survey, abstract 1197, is drilling at about 800 feet.

Simms, Falls County, S. L.

The Simms Oil company has abandoned their test on the Falls county school lands, in south Archer county, northwest corner of block 29, at a total given depth of 1,610 feet.

Simms, Farmer

The Simms Oil company is rigging up on their No. 1, Farmer, southeast corner of lot 15, William Baker survey, abstract 15, between the Green-Flowers pool and the Ray-Featherstone-Evangeline extension group, south Archer county.

Donovan, Bergfield

D. S. Donovan et al have made a location and have spudded on their No. 1 Caroline Bergfield, three miles northwest of Wichita Falls, 1,320 feet north and 150 feet east of the southest corner of the C. Brown survey, abstract 522, north and west of the Panhandle Refining company's tank farm.

Several New Tests Go to S. E. Baylor

The drilling spurt which has taken south Archer county and north Young county by storm in the last 60 days is giving every indication of extending across the line into southeast Baylor county and northeast Young county, several new locations having been announced and others known to be tentative.

The Magnolia Petroleum company is rigged up with a Star machine and is spudding on No. 2 Portwood in the southwest corner of block 2412, TE&LCO survey, several hundred feet south of the other test and of the Cranfill pumper. In this locality the Texhoma is also known to be considering a location on its Portwood acreage, and will probably drill some time in the near future.

New York Cotton

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Advances in the cotton market today seemed to reflect uncertainty as to whether next Saturday's government report would confirm increased crop estimates and reports of a firm spot situation in the south. December sold up to 22.94 or 47 points net higher and closed at 22.81, the general market closing steady at net advances of 31 to 67 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 6 to 13 points on relatively firm Liverpool cables. Some offerings on a belief that the tropical storm reported over the extreme southern end of Florida would work eastward to sea were readily absorbed and buying became a little more active following reports that one of the private authorities estimated the crop indication at only 12,140,000 bales. Trade interests were among the buyers, while there was re-buying by sellers on the larger private crop figures of yesterday. The volume of demand tapered off, however, on the advance to 23.04 for January or about 46 points above yesterday's closing quotations.

Two other private crop reports were issued. One made the condition 53.4, indicating a yield of 12,366,000 bales, while the other placed the condition at 55 and the indicated yield at 12,838,000 bales. These figures checked buying on the more bullish earlier report, but offerings were comparatively light and the market closed within 5 to 13 points of the best.

Private estimates on ginning on October 8 ranged from 7,140,000 to 7,500,000 bales.

Reports that spinners of American cotton in Lancashire would increase their working time from 26¼ to 32 hours per week, beginning November 3, were one of the factors on the mid-day advance.

Exports today 38,434, making 1,553,626 so far this season. Port receipts 84,743. U. S. port stocks 960,557.

New Orleans Cotton

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 21.—The cotton market developed rather firm today and prices showed an upward trend from the start at the highest of the day, the active months were 45 points up from yesterday's close. While there were some reactions from the highest during the middle of the session and in the afternoon, the market rallied again near the end, closely approaching the day's highest.

The market started off slightly higher owing to the better Liverpool cables and initial trades showed gains of 9 to 12 points. The cabled news that the British Spinners' association had voted to increase working hours beginning November 3 from 26¼ hours to 32 hours per week gave the market an advancing tendency.

While the market eased off about 20 points around noon on another crop forecast considerably larger than the first, prices later rallied on private reports of widespread rains in Oklahoma and north Texas followed by colder weather. Nervous short covering in the late trading ran near months to within one to three points of the earlier highs. The close was at net gains for the day of 38 to 44 points.

Exports for today totalled 38,434 bales.

New Orleans Survey

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 21.—Cotton was strong and higher today selling 45 points net higher at one time. There were some dips of moderate proportions but these attracted buying and prices soon rose again. Passing of menace from the storm furnished the occasion for some selling but this was offset by buying induced by prospects of rain in the northwestern part of the belt, following by a cold wave, smaller crop estimates, and a smaller ginning forecast than generally expected. One of the private bureaus issued an estimate of 12,140,000 bales and another predicted one of 12,366,000, while the ginning forecast was for 7,140,000 bales ginned to October 17.

Add to this was the vote of the English spinners to increase working time from 26¼ hours a week to 32, thus assuring increased demand for our cotton.

Advices from Texas and other parts of the belt told of higher basis. Firmness on the part of spot holders and little offering at these prices.

The opinion appears to be gaining ground that even a 12,500,000 bale crop will prove inadequate in view of the increasing needs of the world for our cotton owing to failure of foreign crops to show any increase of consequence. These are estimated only 100,000 bales larger than last year.

We believe the buying side offers best opportunities.

FENNER AND BEANE (By Shannon).

New York Survey

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The feature today has been the market's resistence to pressure, although one private report was issued showing the indicated crop to be around 12,800,000. The ginning figures are coming in for more general discussion. Ideas on the size of the crop are still widely at variance and outside business continues at a low ebb. Between now and Friday prefer buying on the breaks for moderate profits.

Spot News

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 21.—Basis firm and unchanged to 10 points higher, ranging from 65 to 75 off December New York. Exporters buying very sparingly and generally inclined to expect a lower basis. New business with Liverpool and the European continent is difficult. On the other hand offerings are very light, holding by country buyers and farmers is increasing, now amounting to 20 to 30 per cent of the ginnings.

News from the entire belt say spots steady, and while demand light spots are being firmly held, and there is some indications that mills are making inquiry for cotton around these prices in south central belt.

Receipts included 2,500 head of cattle and 1,000 calves. A few steers brought 4.50 to 5.00, cows 3.25 to 3.75, yearlings 6.15 and light calves 5.75 to 6.00.

The hog trading was slow at a decline of 50c. The best sold at 10.00 with most deals at 9.65 to 9.85. Best pigs stopped at 8.50. Receipts amounted to 1,500.

The sheep market was about steady, only about 100 of the 400 head on hand being for market purposes.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Buying on the part of the houses that have recently led the selling gave a moderate upturn to wheat values at the last today despite setbacks at the opening and numerous subsequent changes. Closing quotations on wheat were nervous, ⅝c to 1⅛ net higher, December 1.46⅝ to 1.46½ and May 1.50½ to 1.50⅝, with corn 1⅛ to 1⅝c up, oats showing ⅛c to ⅜c gain, and provisions varying from 10c decline to 12c advance.

Advances in the price of corn were associated with news of export sales.

Frost news had little effect, being looked upon as seasonal at this time. Oats followed corn.

Weakness of hog values tended to ease the provision market.

Chicago Survey

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Wheat: Excited market with big trade on both sides. One of the leading local bulls was credited with heavy purchases while a prominent eastern operator was said to be the principal seller. Prices covered a wide range and showed unusual nervousness. There was buying credited to yesterday's principal seller, but the same interest sold on the bulges. Locals on both sides. Receipts 193 cars estimated. Cash basis relatively steady with shipping sales 10,000 bushels.

Corn: Showed stronger undertone, although held in check by the errectic action of wheat. There was talk of export business and seaboard finally estimated 125,000 worked since late yesterday, with Holland and Rotterdam the buyers. Receipts estimated 139 cars. Cash basis relatively half to one cent off. Shipping sales 80,000 bushels.

Oats: Displayed a steadier undertone with buying of December by shipping interests that suggested export business although no reports of actual sales aboard were made. Trade mixed and influenced by action in other grains. 146 cars inspected. Cash basis relatively steady.

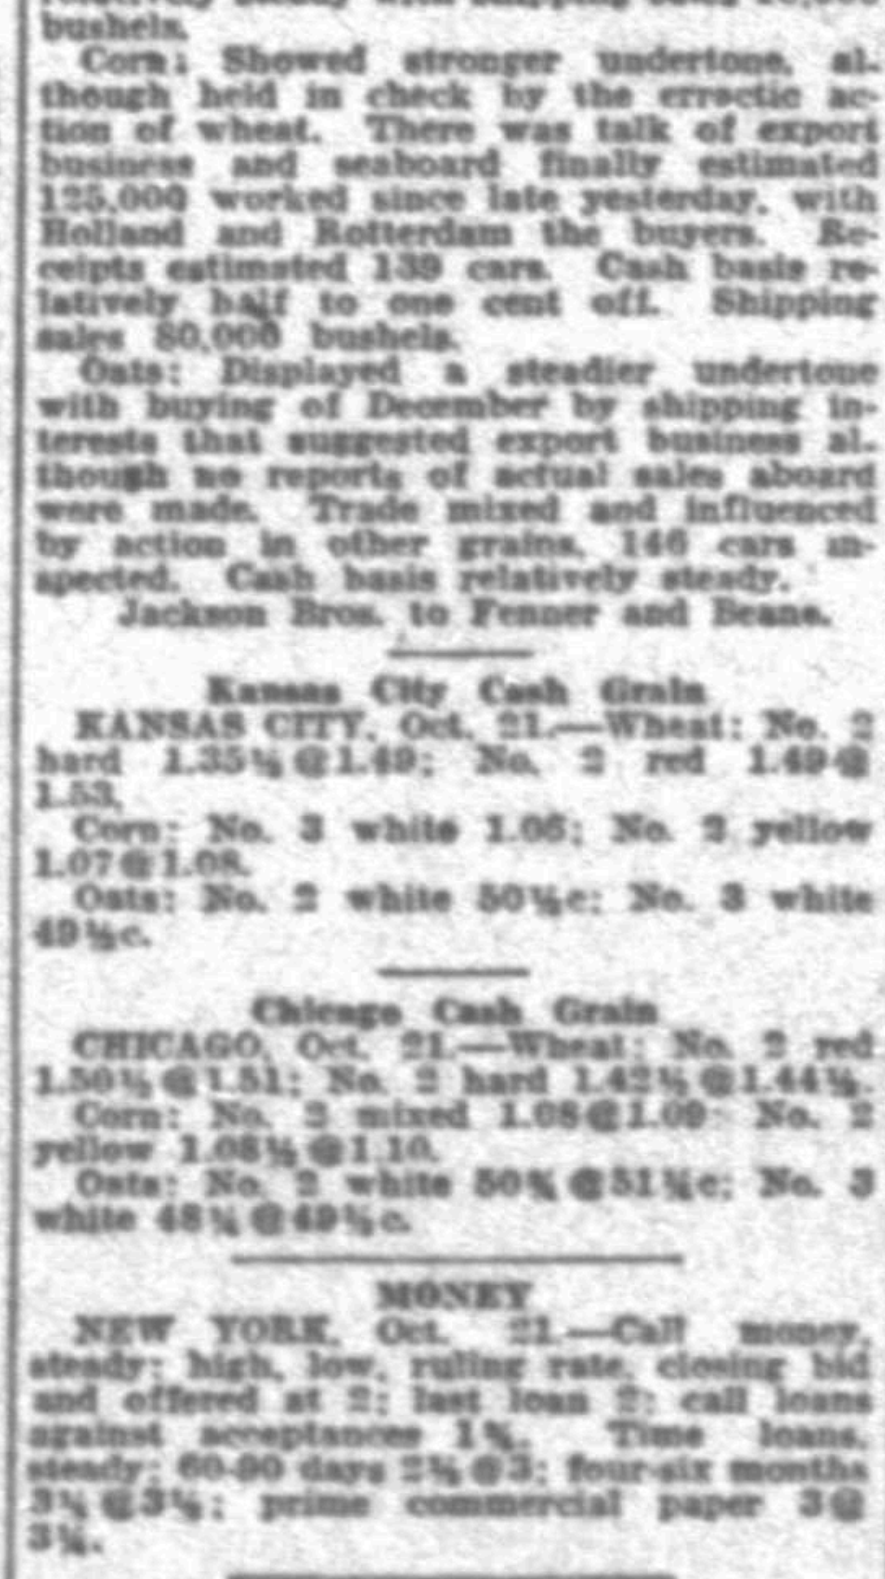
MONEY AT WORK

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.



A few good rules can be laid down for young married couples who wish to save for future income.

The few rules, or maxims, outlined here are not copy book slogans, they are rules which one very successful young couple laid out for themselves and adhered to. This young couple will have $10,000 saved by the time they are thirty—which is still two years away. Of course, judicious investment and reinvestment have helped to build up this sum—but there has been no out and out "speculation" or get rich quick dabbling. Here are the rules they adopted:

1. Pay cash for everything even though our credit is good. 2. We outline a schedule of saving for each year at the beginning of the year—we have always met this schedule. 3. We study investments and try to make good ones—with the aid of our banker. Our losses have been practically nothing. 4. All that we have is held jointly so that both of us have an interest in seeing the fund grow.

This acquisition of $10,000 by the thirtieth year means that this couple, by conservative management, will have an income of $200 per month by the time they are fifty.

Total sales 852,600 shares.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Stock prices swung upward again today under the leadership of the railroad shares, the demand for which arose from the splendid showing made by the first of the September earnings reports to make their appearance. Nearly two dozen rails closed at net gains of 1 to 2 points, new 1924 peak prices having been attained on Frisco common, Southern Railway preferred, Gulf, Mobile and Northern preferred, Rutland preferred and Colorado and Southern.

Active industrials also displayed a better tone despite the renewal of selling pressure against the sugars, based on labor troubles and political disturbances in Cuba and against such individual issues as Bethlehem Steel, which was hammered down to 39⅝, the lowest price since 1911 and American Woolen, which broke more than two points to 54⅝ and then recovered more than half of its loss.

Heavy buying of Frisco common, which advanced nearly two points to 36½, again overshadowed all other developments in the railroad group. All other western carriers also were in demand on publication of the Union Pacific's September statement showing net operating income of $5,963,000, an increase of $456,000 or 8.3 per cent over September 1923, and the highest for any September since 1919. Rock Island common and 6 per cent preferred, Chicago Great Western preferred, Lehigh Valley, "Katy" preferred, the Missouri Pacific and Seaboard Air Line issues and Wabash preferred were among the many shares to close a point or so higher.

U. S. Steel common was unaffected by the selling of Bethlehem, closing unchanged at 107. Sears Roebuck common soared six points to a new peak at 111⅝.

Call money ruled unchanged at 2 per cent. The time money market continued quiet with borrowers showing no inclination to raise their bid and lenders refusing to make concessions. Commercial paper rates held steady.

Strength of sterling, both here and in London was a feature of the foreign rate change market. The local demand rate ruled around $4.49⅝, up about a cent. Dutch exchange was also steady, demand bills jumping about 20 points to around 39.34 cents. Other European rates showed only nominal changes.

Old Horse Given As Great Pension As to a Minister

United Lutheran Speaker Urges Better Care Of Superanuated

REFERS TO "CLOVER"

An Old Horse Rewarded For Faithfulness By Jockey Club

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—The Jockey club of New York gave "Clover" an old horse, a pension of $25.00 a month, which is the maximum pension of the United Lutheran church in America to its retired ministers, according to Rev. Edgar Grimm Miller, Philadelphia executive secretary of the board of ministerial relief of the denomination.

Addressing the convention of the Lutheran brotherhood here today, Dr. Miller outlined plans for expanding the work of the relief board during the next quadrennium.

"We hope to raise at least $8,000,000 in 1928," he said. "The fund is to be distributed among pensioners in addition to church endowments.

"Pension endowments of the various denominations in the United States and Canada now amount to more than $83,000,000, paying out more than $7,000,000 annually."

Dr. William J. Showalter, Washington, D. C., editor of the National Geographic, discussed the problem of inactive church members.

"There are 15,000,000 persons in the United States who tell the census man they are Lutherans," he said, "only 4,000,000 tell the pastors they are Lutherans." He recommended appointment of a special committee to put the 11,000,000 inactives to work.

Delegates to the brotherhood convention will attend a communion service tonight, marking the opening of the fourth biennial convention of the United Lutheran church in America.

Instituted Because of Low Grades, Indiana U. Is In Furore.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Oct. 21.—Students at Indiana university were in a furore today due to an edict by Agnes E. Wells, dean of women, that co-eds would not be permitted to motor outside the city of Bloomington and denying them the privilege of possessing a motor car while attending the university, except during the two weeks at the opening and closing of the school year.

The ban on motor cars was placed, it was said, because of poor scholastic standing. Dean Wells said 50 per cent of the co-eds who were forced to leave school because of low grades were known to have spent much time in motor cars.

The university faculty is said to be considering a rule to prohibit possession of a motor car by any student attending the university.

Once In It You're In, at City Bastile

"Joe, go up and get the kid in No. 3; his daddy has paid his fine."

Joe Blocker, city motorcycle cop, unhooked a massive bunch of keys from a nail on the wall and went to the second floor of the city hall where, in one of the cells, a youth arrested earlier in the day for passing worthless checks was being detained.

He selected a key for the big lock, inserted it, turned it—and grunted.

He tried another and still another, and then, deciding that the first one was right after all, went back and started over again. The lock merely rattled. He shook it; he tapped it against the door; he laid on it with all his weight and brawn and nearly twisted the key to a corkscrew. It still stuck.

"No can do," mused Joe and went in search of assistance.

Reinforcements arrived. Individual and collective advice and explitives only served to get the key stuck tighter and the lock hung up more securely.

"No can do, either," they decided. "Git the files and crowbars."

The fire department mechanic's tool box was raided and out came a wicked looking pair of wire cutters, some files and sundry other implements. Everybody went to work. Downstairs an irate pa waited for an interview with an erring son who had won himself plenty of grief by passing bum checks. Also, he commented on the banalities of a jail house crew that got a guy locked up and then couldn't get him out.

Later—considerably later, a weary cop straightened up, whammed viciously at an obdurate piece of mechanism on which he had been working with file and wire cutters—and the door swung open.

The city patronizes a hardware store this morning.

ARCHER'S FAME SPREADS

Spencer Says Arkansas Has Heard About New Oil Field

The fame of the Archer county oil fields have spread even as far as the Arkansas oil producing territory, according to Judge C. F. Spencer of Fort Worth who is in the city to attend to his business interests here. He is interested in a number of local corporations and also has some valuable oil holdings in the south Archer field.

Recently Judge Spencer and associates incorporated the Wichita Falls Cotton company and have experienced a highly successful season thus far.

Judge Spencer has just returned from Arkansas where he acted as a receiver for some oil lands there during federal court litigation.

He expects to remain in the city for the balance of the week.

FEW RIGHTS TO CAT OWNERS.

Can't Regain Possession "Strays," Louisiana Attorney General Rules.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 20.—Owners of cats in Louisiana cannot regain legally their strayed property because possession is not only nine points, but all of the law, according to an opinion handed down yesterday by the attorney general's office.

The opinion was forthcoming when a woman champion of cats of Paradise, La., complained that a citizen of that town had shipped out of the community approximately 250 cats without consideration as to positive ownership or ensuing conditions.

The woman objected to the wholesale deportation chiefly on the grounds that the fields, bins, barns and store rooms would be overrun with rats.

The attorney general branded the allegation as hypothetical and even if it were otherwise, he said, the cats belonged to no one and no one could be prevented from engaging in the alleged traffic.

YOUTH IS INVESTIGATED.

Charge May be Filed for Passing Worthless Checks.

A youth who, police said, had been passing worthless checks on a number of local merchants, was arrested Tuesday afternoon by Detectives Boone and Hart after he had obtained a small amount of cash on two checks found to be fraudulent.

He is being held in the city jail while a check-up is being made of his past activities. He will probably be turned over to the county authorities this morning for prosecution.

Those streets on which the service is extended are as follows: Brittain between Avenue F and I; Giddings between Avenues F and I; Avenue F between Giddings and Bell; Avenue G between Giddings and Bell; Monroe between Avenues I and J; Avenue I between Taft and Monroe; Avenue J between Taft and Monroe; Taft between Avenues H and I; Grant between Avenues J and R; Tilden between Avenues G and J; Garfield between Tenth and Avenue G; Tenth between Hayes and Garfield; Sixth between Denver and Van Buren; Denver between Fifth and Sixth; Van Buren between Fifth and Sixth; Seventh between Broad and Baylor; Wafford between Seventh and Eighth.

So charmed were Jean Cassidy (seated) and Frances Lee Dytchmendy, St. Louis stenographers, with the "mean" saxophone playing of a young man, that they ran away from home to see him. At least that's what they told Chicago police, by whom they are being held.

LATE NEWS

CROMWELL, Okla.—The court of inquiry being conducted by District Judge George C. Crump of Holdenville, into alleged vice conditions here this afternoon turned to narcotic peddling and tonight one alleged dispenser of the drug is in custody. The inquiry will be resumed tomorrow with Attorney General George Short who was invited here by County Attorney Walter Billingsley, as an observer. Tonight everything in and around Oklahoma's newest boom oil town was quiet. The houses from which have emanated the jangling notes of revelry were dark tonight as last night. There were no customers; no inmates. They had joined the exodus of narcotic peddlers, gamblers and bootleggers, fearful lest they might be conscripted into Judge Crump's "chain gang army" well known to members of Cromwell's underworld. Judge Crump's "chain gang" first made its appearance in Cromwell early in September when the jurist cast the shadow of the law over the little oil town and before law violators had time to leave many of them were arrested, handcuffed to the 60-foot chain and marched to the Wewoka county jail in custody of deputy sheriffs. The town is unincorporated and has to resort to public subscriptions for funds to police the town. Judge Crum has declared he will clean the town up by the "chain gang" method.

BENTON, Ills.—Escorted by a long caravan of flag bedecked automobiles, Governor Charles W. Bryan continued his tour of the southern Illinois coal region today with speeches here and at Christopher. At the latter place he emphasized that he came to Illinois "not with a desire to hold office, but to fight for the application to government of the principles we have been applying back in Nebraska." Skirting his native town Salem, Governor Bryan met many old acquaintances and friends of his father, Silas L. Bryan and his brother, W. J. Bryan and was received by cheering crowds both here and at Christopher.

GALVESTON—Judge Robert Gould Street, 82 years old, prominent barrister of Texas died this evening at 8:40 o'clock at St. Mary's infirmary following an operation. He was active in all social and civic enterprises and was instrumental in creating interest in the deep water project of Galveston.

GALVESTON—The quarantine against hoof and mouth disease in Galveston county may be lifted within 10 days, it was indicated here today by J. T. Bugg-Scott, president of the Texas Livestock Sanitary commission. He conferred with county officials here and declared that conditions in this county are better than in any other placed under the quarantine. The commission president urged strict enforcement of the quarantine regulations for the next two weeks and hinted that the regulations will be abolished in that time on the part of the island and part if not in the entire county.

HOUSTON—Adolph Grauer, 82, said to have been the man who first ventured into Galveston when, in 1900, that city was ravaged by a tidal wave, and flashed the news of the catastrophe to the outside world, died in San Antonio today, according to information reaching here tonight. Grauer was a pioneer in the development of the telephone system in the southwest, having been in the employe of the Southwestern Bell Telephone company, for more than 30 years. He was a native of Alsace-Lorraine. Funeral services will be held here Thursday.

HARTFORD, Ky.—Governor Pat Neff of Texas speaking here today in the interest of the state and national democratic campaign reviewed briefly the records of the two major parties and urged support of John W. Davis, the democratic presidential nominee, and Senator A. O. Stanley of Kentucky, candidate for re-election. "I cannot bring myself to the point of supporting a candidate representing the special interests," he declared. "In John W. Davis, the democrats have named a man as their leader who will give the people in this country a square deal if he is elected president. The voters of this country should send a democratic congress to Washington to assist them (Davis and Bryan), in carrying out the reforms they have promised."

FREDERICKSBURG, Va.—A victim of mistaken identity, the little 9-year-old son of Philip Calvert, Prince William county is dead, his head literally blown off by a shotgun in the hands of his own father who mistook him for a burglar. The tragedy occurred Sunday night. The lad had gone outside to get a drink of water from a nearby spring before going to bed and when he returned found the house dark. His father, a prohibition agent, had retired, but was awakened by the footsteps of the boy upon the stairs. Fearing burglars he seized his gun and, at the head of the stairway called to know who was there. When no one answered he says, he fired. Then he turned on a light and was horrified to learn that he had killed his own child.

SAN ANTONIO—"Tillie Kid" Herman, California welterweight won over Jimmy Tillman of Minneapolis here tonight in the ninth round of their scheduled 12-round bout when the referee stopped the bout alleging that Tillman was stalling. MILWAUKEE—The farm industry in its economic sense fights for the unity of the family; the city industry tends to disrupt it, the Rev. Edwin V. O'Hara, social action department, rural life bureau, Eugene, Oregon, declared tonight before the second annual Catholic rural life conference here. Because husband and wife in the country have the same intellect, make the same contacts and directly supervise the training of their children in the only apprenticeship left for children of America, divorce is comparatively infrequent in rural districts, while on the other hand, the city is strewn with the wreckage of broken homes, according to the speaker.

100 Pct. Decline In Valuation Is Indicated By Roll

50 Cents Last Year Raised Same as $1 Does In 1924

SEEK SCHOOL AID

Barwise, County Line And Enterprise Need Money Now

With the exception of Barwise, County Line and Enterprise, each of which have applied for state aid, all rural school districts in the county will be able to finish the present school year on revenues derived from local taxation. Completion of the list showing what each district is to receive shows but few changes over those of last year.

Of the rural schools, Clara, district No. 9, receives the most, $20,601.64. Burkburnett gets the largest sum of any school in the county, $67,684.34, with Fairview second, $47,192.

As an example of the manner in which property values in some parts of the county have declined, it was cited yesterday that last year, with a tax rate of 50 cents in the district, the revenue for the period was approximately $42,000. This year the rate has been doubled, is set at $1, and the revenue is to be $47,192. This indicates an almost 100 percent decline in valuations.
