Smedley D. Butler To Speak Tonight

FEAR MAY BE DISCUSSED BY GEN. BUTLER

When Gen. Smedley D. Butler speaks at Eastland tonight he may touch on the matter of primitive fears. The famed marine, who is visiting his brother, Samuel Butler, in Eastland, will speak at the Connelley Theater at 8 o'clock.

In the third of a century he has served the United States, he has had occasion to watch how fears work and to learn the secret of control in himself as well as in his men.

The famed marine leader, who is to speak upon the Ethiopian situation, deals with courage as a physical matter. Talk helps, but it isn't always feasible. He tells the following story to illustrate his point.

"There are times when to harangue your men is just the last thing on earth the situation permits of. Take, for example, the instance down in Nicaragua when a score of us were shut off from the others — down in a ravine. It was dark. There were sheer, wooded banks to the stream, and fighting — from ambush. The rebels were coming the underbrush for us. There didn't seem a chance of escape. Capture, under those conditions is a very unhealthy condition. Every mother's son of us was terrified; plain scared to death. Huddled together, we forded the stream, up to our waists, and crawled into the underbrush where we lay prone on our bellies. The tension became unbearable, and I began to fear that a couple of the men would give way. That would have been the end for us all."

"Silently, I began to chafe my hands and wrists to get the blood circulating in them. They were clammy cold, in spite of the torrid heat of the tropics. If I should touch a man with such a hand, he would probably have screamed."

Cashing In On War Misfortunes

The Ethiopian-Italian war being waged in Africa is offering a mark for the sharpers to shoot at. Those persons who live by their wits already are gathering to grab off a profit from the suffering of a war-torn people.

The Daily News yesterday carried a United Press account of such a person—he was from Texas, by the way—who has been trying to sell Emperor Haile Selassie on the idea that he ought to "mine" the heavens against enemy aircraft. The Texan's idea was to sell toy balloons—a lot of balloons—to the government. These balloons would be inflated with a light gas, hydrogen or helium, and turned loose over the capital. Each balloon would carry a bit of dynamite. Then were to any Italian plane which was nosing about the atmosphere where it had no business.

The enterprising Texan who was going to cash in on the war failed to explain to the Ethiopian government what would happen if the Italian sharpshooters shot the balloons down over the capital. Needless to say, his plan has not been adopted.

But that shows what happens in time of war. Somebody comes along with an idea. Maybe it is a good one. Maybe it isn't. But maybe he sells it, and profits while hundreds of other men are losing their lives on the front.

Liquor Legislation

Many of the voters, going to the polls in the last election, believed they were settling the liquor question, one way or another. It appears from the action going on at the state legislature now, however, that the real liquor trouble is really just beginning.

Some of the ardent wets, disregarding the clause in the amendment which prohibited the return of the open saloon, want to serve drinks if, when, and how they are wanted in restaurants and cocktail bars. The extreme dries, on the other hand, disregarding the part of the amendment which legalizes the sale of liquor, would make the laws so rigid that they would amount to prohibition under a new name, with all the evils of bootlegging springing up.

On the other hand, there are those legislators who say they are making their fight for or against sales by the drinks on constitutional grounds and object to being termed either extreme wets or extreme dries.

The difficulty at present appears to find a good working definition of an open saloon, one which will stand in the courts, and to base the laws governing the sale of liquor upon the sale other than in such a place.

More Labor Troubles

With the coal strike just settled, labor is threatening two more strikes, and violence has already broken out on one front.

Illinois farmers yesterday were reported to have destroyed two bridges and to have dynamited a section of railroad.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—Not many years ago a Morgan partner slumbered frequently at the White House. The name of the great banking firm at Broad and Wall has always been a familiar one in these parts.

Never before, however, has the House of Morgan been the subject of so many backstage whispers in an administration or involved—and annoyed—in so many fields of federal action.

One returned here to find a general craning of necks toward that "security graveyard" in New York where the Morgans were to auction off collateral carrying control of the $3,000,000,000 Van Swearingen railroad empire, following default on a $48,000,000 loan.

The collateral, consisting of control stock in a bankrupt company, presumably would be worthless to the buyers unless they could get the RFC and ICC to agree to a reorganization plan for the Missouri Pacific which would leave them in control.

There has been plenty of suppressed excitement over whether the Van Swearingens would have the seemingly essential support of Jesse Jones in their effort to retain control and whether the Vans wouldn't still be in hock to Morgan with the $48,000,000 loan largely unpaid.

SENATE munitions committee investigators are still deep in the Morgan pre-war and wartime records and act as if they would have something sensational to tell in a few weeks.

You'll be surprised to learn the extent to which personal fortunes of Morgan partners were pledged for the Allies and how important it was for them to have the Allies win—though you won't learn that this led them to egg Washington into the conflict.

Possibly there'll be some heretofore secret history of unfriendly post-war relations between Secretary McAdoo and Morgan which will seem especially interesting when you recall that McAdoo lost the Democratic nomination in 1924 to a Morgan lawyer—a dark horse named John W. Davis.

Relations between the Morgans and the Van Swearingens and certain government officials are being uncovered by the committee under Senator Wheeler, now investigating railroad financing, which means more sensations coming up.

CREATION of Morgan, Stanley & Co.—operated and owned by Morgan partners and fronted by a son of J. P. Morgan himself—to carry on a security investment business (from which the Morgan company itself is barred as long as it engages in banking) caused sardonic comment here. Especially among such optimistic New Dealers as had thought, after Morgan lobbyists were defeated recently in their attempt to change the law, they had ended the evils of combined commercial banking and investment banking.

It is recalled that the law prohibiting railroad mergers and consolidations without ICC approval was nearly evaded when Wall Street lawyers told the Vans—with Morgan floating their securities and acting as their bankers—how to buy up control of railroads by purchasing stock through holding companies.

road to prevent the shipment of milk to Chicago and to prolong their strike until their demands are met by buyers in the city.

Meanwhile, it was reported that longshoremen in Texas are planning to strike Friday morning. If the dock workers carry out their intention and really strike, their action will not only tie up all shipping from the Texas coast, but will also result in violence, in all probability.

Yesterday Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, speaking before the American Federation of Labor, asked "not only the country's wage earners but the employers and all other groups, that there be no weakening of the spirit of unity and cooperation which we have so bravely been showing in our attack on the forces of the depression." Her speech was taken generally to mean that she favors a cooperation between labor and "all other groups" rather than a fight between the two, with peaceful settlements of their differences.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 AUSTIN, Oct. 9.—Austin police and state legislators are engaged in an acrimonious feud over city traffic laws.

A legislator is exempt from arrest throughout a legislative session for a day before the session, when he is presumed to be on his way to the session; and for a day after, when he is presumed to be returning home. While the present session was under way, a series of traffic accidents spurred Austin to a sudden wave of traffic law enforcement.

They take the city at its claim of being the "friendly city." Some party by fire plugs. Some park overtime. Some drive fast.

Given a ticket, a legislator can tear it up with impunity.

The situation was brought to a head when Representative W. F. Clayton, El Paso, drove past a red light. Clayton indignantly told the house what happened after that.

He took his ticket meekly. Obeying he went to corporation court with his mind made up not to claim immunity but to submit his case.

His heard other traffic cases disposed of with side remarks and comment, he said he became convinced that under the stress of Austin's drive for traffic law stringency, he would not get fair treatment. So he claimed his exemption.

Then there appeared a statement that legislators make laws but do not obey them. That brought down condemnation for an Austin newspaper in a House resolution. The resolution rapped the paper and ment. Legislators are notoriously lax about observing Austin's traffic rules.

George Purl, Dallas, quizzed by a state senate investigating committee about his correspondence with Robert W. Lyons, chain store legislative advisor, was requested by the committee to ask Lyons, whom they cannot summon, to come before the committee.

"I'll be glad to telephone him and request him to come," said Purl, "but I will not write."

State Auditor Orville Carpenter has become alarmed lest the anxiety of old folks to qualify for pensions is leading them to make unnecessary sacrifices and expenditures. He warned them that they should pay no one for help in securing an old age pension.

A proposal to make a census of applicants probably created the impression that the old folks must register. The proposal originated in the senate but died in the house.

Representative J. C. McConnell's air-tight definition of a saloon provoked laughter this week in the legislature. The Palo Pinto member Austin officers, commended and praised Clayton.

Senator G. H. Nelson, Tahoka, was cordially received by old senators when he presented his credentials as successor to the late Senator Arthur Duggan, Littlefield—but not too cordially.

President Pro Tem Will Martin announced Nelson's appointment to the committee on state affairs. That is one of the prime committees. It ranks next to the Finance committee. Immediately there was protest.

Senators Gordon Burns, Huntsville; Olan Van Zandt, Tioga and Joe Hill Henderson, protested. They showed the presiding officer that an election is necessary to add a member to a committee. Senator Duggan had not been a member of that committee.

"I'm wrong," Martin agreed after reading the rules.

proposed a state liquor monopoly prohibiting a saloon.

"Any room, house, out-house, cellar, boat vehicle, structure or place wherein intoxicating liquors are sold."

"I'm not representing Onie Sale," commented Representative Fred Harris, Dallas, "but I think Judge McConnell's one a little bit far in his definition of a 'saloon'—especially on you rural boys."

Added Representative Roy Hofheinz, Houston: "Why, under your bill the only place a man could buy liquor is in a tree!"

Even in the liquor debate, the railroad commission received its jabs. Members were haranguing over where to put liquor law administration.

"Let's put it in the railroad commission," joked Representative Lon Alsop, Carthage, bitter critic of the commission.

"That wouldn't be such a bad idea," replied Fred Harris, speaking before the microphone. "They don't do anything now."

If the house gets a "breathing spell" before its 30-day special session ends, the oil question is expected to be presented for consideration in its own right.

Railroad and truck enemy parallels the famous cow-country rivalry between cattlemen and sheep ranchers.

At a hearing before a house investigating committee, Herman Clary, Fort Worth, remarked: "It's generally rumored that the railroads buy those 'bathroom scales' for officers."

Clary was referring to small scales carried by officers to weigh trucks on the highways two wheels at a time.

Bitter denunciation was directed at "fee-grabbing" local officers. The new salary-for-fee amendment was pointed out as a blessing to truck operators.

"If they (local officers) could work 24 hours a day they could retire in six months," Clary reported.

Mark Marshall, director of the motor division of the state railroad commission, replies that his men are on salary. They are merely enforcing the law legislators wrote and passed.

Persons can transport their own commodities on their own trucks anywhere in Texas without any permit, if they obey traffic laws applicable to everybody. If an individual purchases commodities from some one else, the goods then are his, and he can haul them. Trucks may be stopped for inspection.

"Is there any other way for an officer to know if they are hauling for themselves or for hire?" Marshall asked.

EASTLAND CAN NOT PAY DEBT NOW IS VIEW

EASTLAND, Oct. 9.—Its back to the wall of bonded indebtedness which totals $1,439,894.50, Eastland can not likely make settlement that will any time in the near future put the city on the black side of the ledger.

Figures presented by city commissioners brought that conclusion to a delegation of citizens meeting with the council Monday night.

A psychological factor enters into the making of agreement of city commissioners with bondholders representatives for payment of the city's debt, that was the consensus of opinion.

Preservation of citizens' morale—taxpayers will not pay taxes when they realize that the city will default to bonding companies, speakers indicated.

Unless citizens can see that Eastland will eventually enter a period of solvency, there will be little or no tax paying, several speakers stated.

It was generally agreed that unless some favorable agreement can be made by commissioners with bondholders' representatives, it would be best to let the situation remain in its present status.

Amount due on bonds to date is $1,175,700. Interest due is $264,194.50, making a total of $1,439,894.50.

Troop 29 Wins Rally

Troop 29 of Carbon won the North Section Quarterly Rally held at Breckenridge last Saturday night with a total of 87 points. Troop 31 of Breckenridge took second place with 64 1-2 points, while Troop 6 of Eastland gained third place having a total of 42 points which was only one point ahead of Troop 103 of Eastland. The rally was held on the court house lawn under flood lights. The scouts entered into the contests in a very enthusiastic manner, and declared that they had had a good time, when the rally came to a close. Due to the weather being warm instead of the Muligan Stew supper being served as planned, ice cream was served to all. The Scoutmasters present

Machine Gunners Blaze Away at Ethiopian Fighters

An Italian machine gun outpost on the Tigre front, near Aduwa, where the invaders encountered desperate resistance from the Ethiopians, is shown in this picture, first from the scene of action. The photo was taken direct from the battle front by plane to Rome, telephoned to London and sent by radio to the United States.

The GOLDEN FEATHER

by Robert Bruce © 1953 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JEAN DUNN, pretty, 21, is secretary to DONALD MONTAGUE, lawyer, BOBBY WALLACE, automobile salesman, has frequently asked her to marry him, but Jean delays her answer.

At The Golden Feather, night club she meets SANDY HARKINS, who says he is in Dover on business.

LARRY GLENN, federal agent, warns Jean and Bobby against spending much time in places like The Golden Feather. Larry is trying to trail WINGY LEWIS, bank robber. He discusses the case with his friend, MIKE HAGAN, of the local police.

Sandy telephones Jean on a day when she has the afternoon off from work and they go off for a horseback ride. He kisses her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VII

When she got home that evening Jean discovered that her conscience was rather disturbed about that kiss.

"What sort of girl do you call yourself, anyway?" asked Conscience, indignantly. "The very first time you've been out with a man, too! And you've always prided yourself on the fact that you didn't like to be mauled and petted!"

"But that wasn't mauling and petting," answered Jean. "It was just one little kiss. And anyhow, it happened before I knew it was coming."

"Oh, yeah?" said Conscience. "I've heard that before."

"Well, it did," insisted Jean. "And what's the harm? It didn't mean anything. And he — he didn't even try to do it again, or —"

"Well, I must say, that's a very weak sort of defense," Conscience replied. "It wasn't your fault he didn't try to do it again."

"It was so! I drew away and I told him —"

"Oh, you told him! Since when did that mean anything? And besides, what would Bobby say?"

"Well, Bobby just isn't going to know. And it isn't going to happen again, so what's the use of making all this fuss over it?"

That wasn't the most satisfactory reply imaginable, perhaps, but it would have to do. And the feeling of guilt that stayed in the back of Jean's mind made her especially nice to Bobby when he called for her after dinner, to take her to a movie, and when he told her good night, later, she let him kiss her three times to make up for it, so that that young man went home both pleased and puzzled.

Sandy called her up Sunday morning and suggested another ride. She put him off on the ground that she had another engagement. He called her up Sunday something? Why can't I ever have another date with you?"

"I didn't say you never could. My goodness, you're rushing things, aren't you?"

"Why not? I don't believe in being backward, when the prettiest girl in the whole state is floating around loose right under my nose."

"Well, but — I'm not really floating around loose. I'm — I'm really engaged." And she was furious with herself when she found herself adding the words, "practically, anyhow."

Sandy cocked a humorous eye at her.

"Practically engaged, eh? Good Lord, baby, go ahead and be engaged. I'm not going to eat you up. I just want to pal around with you. No harm in that, is there?"

"No-o-o." The waiter set food before them, and she became very busy with her club sandwich. "But — on, you know how it is."

"Boy friend might get sore?" Sandy grinned.

"Why, he's a nice kid," said Sandy. "When you going to get married?"

"Well, not right away, said Jean helplessly. "I mean, you see he's just getting started, and —"

"What's he do?"

"He's an auto salesman."

"Who's he with?"

"He's with the — oh, Sandy, what's the use of questioning me like this? I've gone with him ever since I was in high school. I just don't think I — I ought to have dates, that's all."

"Aw, there aren't regular dates I'm asking for. I just want to see you sometimes. No harm in that."

But Jean remained adamant, and Sandy had escorted her back to her office and gone away, she told her conscience savagely. "Now — I do hope you're satisfied!"

That night she went out to dinner with Bobby. But whereas Conscience, on their last date, had caused her to be especially nice to him, it all seemed to work with reverse English this time, and she found herself being irritable and disagreeable.

As they were finishing their dessert, Bobby looked at her anxiously. "What's the matter tonight, honey?" he asked. "Aren't you feeling well?"

"I'm all right," she said. "Just — just a little tired, or something, I guess."

He looked at her fondly. "You're working too hard," he announced. "Honey, when you go to quit that old office and let me take care of you? That's what you need."

"Please, Bobby," she said. "Let's not argue about it tonight. Let's —" let's go dance somewhere, or something, and not quarrel."

"Good idea," said Bobby. "Look — how about going back to the Golden Feather again and seeing life in the raw?"

She hesitated; and then told herself, "Oh, for pity's sake, what's the matter with you? You probably won't bump into Sandy there, and if you do, what of it?" Aloud she said, "All right — let's." So they went out, got a taxi, and went to the night club.

The hour was early, and there was only a handful of people scattered about in the club. They followed the headwaiter to a table along the wall, and as they reached it Bobby glanced idly at the couple at the next table. His face lit up with recognition, and Jean heard him say, "Why — hello there."

She looked. There sat Sandy, with a striking-looking girl in an expensive purple frock. Jean was astonished to discover that her first emotion, on seeing them, was a small, instinctive stab of jealousy. Sandy got up and beckoned to them.

"Look who's here," he said gaily. "Come on and sit with us. Here —" he motioned to the waiter to bring chairs. "This is Eve Lewis," he went on, addressing Jean and Bobby. The girl looked up and smiled in friendly fashion. "Eve, there are —" he suddenly stopped and grinned. "Doggoned if I haven't forgotten your names," he said.

Jean instantly thought, "He remembers mine but he's forgotten Bobby's, and he doesn't want Bobby to know." Bobby was completing the introduction, as this thought was going through her head, and a moment later all four of them were seated together.

The orchestra began to play. "Will you dance, Miss Lewis?" asked Bobby. She got up. "Okay," she said. "And by the way, it's Mrs. Lewis." They glided off on the dance floor. Sandy turned to Jean with a quizzical grin. "Dance?" he asked. She shook her head.

"Let's just sit here, if you don't mind... and since when have you forgotten my name?"

His grin became broader.

"That was all right, wasn't it?" he asked. She smiled and nodded.

"Your girl friend is nice," she said presently.

"Oh, she's not my friend," he said. "I'm holding that job open for you. She's the wife of a pal of mine. He's going to meet us here pretty quick."

He looked toward the door.

"There he is now."

A slight, black-haired man was coming toward them. He wore a carefully tailored dinner coat, and he seemed to be something of a dandy. He reached the table and Sandy introduced him as Mr. Lewis. He drew a fifth chair to the table. As he did so, Jean noticed idly that he lacked an index finger on the left hand.

Leaf tobacco being sold to highest bidder

From 1900 up to 1934 the leaf tobacco used for cigarettes increased from 13,084,037 lbs. to 326,093,357 lbs.; an increase of 2392%

It takes mild ripe tobacco to make a good cigarette.

During the year ending June 30, 1900, the Government collected from cigarette taxes $3,969,191

For the year ending June 30, 1934, the same taxes were $350,299,442 an increase of 8725% — a lot of money.

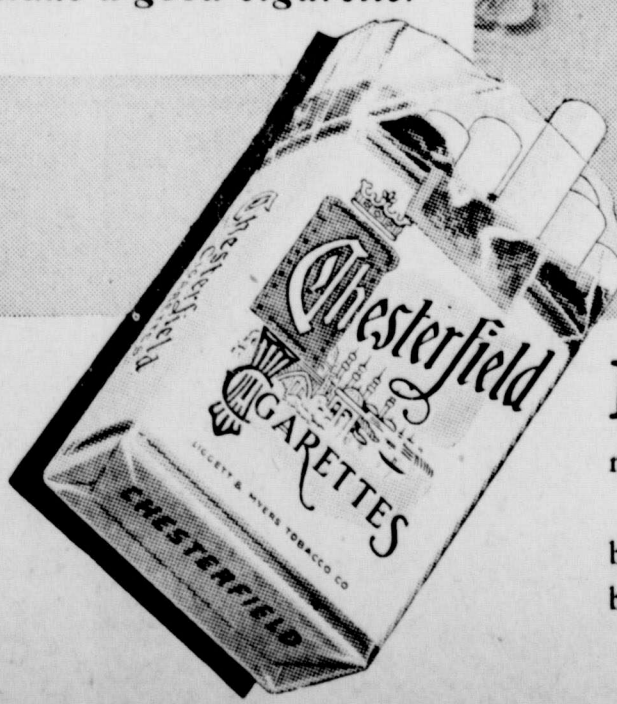

Cigarettes give a lot of pleasure to a lot of people.

More cigarettes are smoked today because more people know about them — they are better advertised.

But the main reason for the increase is that they are made better — made of better tobaccos; then again the tobaccos are blended — a blend of Domestic and Turkish tobaccos.

Chesterfield is made of mild, ripe tobaccos. Everything that science knows about is used in making it a milder and better-tasting cigarette.

We believe you will enjoy them.

Loboes In Good Spirits Over the Game

SHOW HUSTLE AS GAME WITH LIONS NEARS

The Cisco Loboes, with their meeting with the rejuvenated Lions at Brownwood only one day off, today were in high spirits, with plenty of hustle foreseen.

They are "going to work" in the Brownwood game, it was predicted this morning.

The Loboes are on the spot. Tomorrow night they will be in the position of being forced to climb off the pedestal on which they were placed after their Electra win and which was badly rocked by the San Angelo and Sweetwater bluffs.

Coach Shelley this morning said that the Loboes will use about the same starting lineup as in previous games. He was unable to say whether Popeye Beasley would be able to take the field against the Lions, but omitted his name from the list to start the game.

Starting backs will be Stansbury, Burnam, Rylee and either McCannell or Wood. Wagley and Wende will be at the ends. Page and Barnes at tackles, Merrett and Rainbolt at guards, and Ivey at center.

LIONS ANXIOUS TO GET AT LOBOES

BROWNWOOD, Oct. 9 — The Brownwood high school Lions will emit a mighty roar when eleven of them charge down the field here tomorrow night with the scent of Lobo meat strong in their nostrils. The Lions, held scoreless last year not only by the Oil Belt but by Class B teams as well, this season are a marauding fighting lot of cats, ready to get their fangs and claws upon their old foes.

Already they have taught a lesson to two Class B teams and last week they got in their revenge against the Eastland Mavericks by taking an 18 to 12 game from them. Thursday night they will be out again, clawing for another Oil Belt victory at the expense of the Cisco Loboes.

The Lions are proud of their winning streak and of the fact that they are the only unbeaten and untied team in the Oil Belt.

Coach W. B. Chapman's Lubbock Westerners.

Brownwood, however, is the only unbeaten and untied team in the Oil Belt. That is the eleven that the Loboes play Thursday night.

The Lions, although they have played only two Class B teams and one conference team — Eastland — have managed to build up a far better reputation than they had a year ago. Last week Eastland loosed a forward-passing attack on the last quarter and nearly upset the big cats. They probably had a more or less weak defense for passes. They will be ready for anything in the overhead game this week, however, and it is their passing that the Loboes will be relying upon.

The Lions will be out to keep that unbeaten record.

In the Southwestern conference there is a team which, like Brownwood, is not rated near the top but which is unbeaten, untied, and undefeated. It is Coach Morley Jennings Baylor Bears. In their three struts, they have kept their goal line uncrossed.

However, this record may fall after Saturday night, for the Bears are rated as the underdogs against the Arkansas Razorbacks.

The Loboes are angry. It was rumored about town yesterday. It was also rumored that the reason they were somewhat irate was because a man — a Cisco man — had expressed the opinion, expert or otherwise, that they would not win another game during the season.

The rumor said also that this man had backed up his judgment to the extent of 500 iron men. That was only a rumor — and you know how such things are. But the Loboes were up in the air.

There is one way they can get even — Thursday night.

Chilled to the marrow?

YOUR CAR'S COLD TOO... SO MAKE SURE YOUR ENGINE

And please don't think you are going to read this same sort of thing about a "whole raft" of winter oils.

The clean-cut difference in favor of Conoco Germ Processed Oil is this: when the thermometer goes down there is a Hidden Quart of Conoco that doesn't. It can't. It stays and stays — becomes a lasting part of every surface in your engine.

The Germ Process... fully patented... makes this alloyed oil blend with metal remarkably, forming your Hidden Quart. Then no matter how long your car is parked or garaged in the coldest cold, you come out to a well-oiled start... not merely because fine paraffin-base Conoco Germ Processed Oil is free-flowing, but because the Hidden Quart is up on guard before any oil could even begin to flow.

Gone are the warm-ups that chew up your engine. Nor need you fear highest speeds, or hardest winter pulls. That's when Germ Processed Oil puts its high-durability film between you and repair men. It's not only light-bodied enough for winter, but tougher, too.

AND... road tests of cars with conventional babbitt bearings, and with the new copper-lead, high-lead, and cadmium-alloy bearings, prove Germ Processed Oil far better than plain mineral oils for all bearings!

Whether you're driving a '35 model or a "veteran," drive it in today for your Conoco man's winter help. Continental Oil Company, Established 1875.

Gov't Spending At New Peacetime High

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Oct. 9 — The federal government reported new high peacetime spending today in figures showing expenditures in excess of $2,000,000,000 in the first 99 days of the current fiscal year.

General Butler—

our nerves were that ragged. So I forced warmth and confidence into my grip, then reached out and grasped the wrist of the man on either side of me. The response was immediate; a veritable current was generated. They knew the signal; I often worked it in moments of great emergency.

"Camels don't get your W"

SAY THE DETROIT TIGERS 1935 WORLD CHAMPIONS

Here's the line-up on the smoking preference of the new world champions:

19 OUT OF 22 OF THE TIGERS SMOKE CAMELS

Today Detroit glories in its first World Championship! These 1935 Tigers have punched out a story of courage and energy that stands among the masterpieces. They could "take it"! What do the Tigers say about smoking? Here's Mickey Cochrane, dynamic Tiger manager: "One thing the team agree on is their choice of cigarettes — Camels. 19 of the 22 regulars smoke Camels. The Tigers say they can smoke all they want because Camels are so mild that they don't get their wind or upset their nerves." How about taste? Jo-Jo White says: "Camels always taste better." You'll like Camel's mildness too. Camels never upset your nerves or tire your taste.

ELDEN AUKER (left), SCHOOLBOY ROWE (next to Elden), ALVIN CROWDER (next to Schoolboy) agree with TOMMY BRIDGES (right), who says: "I smoke Camels because I can smoke as many as I like. Camels don't affect my wind or give me jumpy nerves."

And OWEN! "I light up a Camel to refresh my energy," says Marvin (left).

GERALD WALKER (right) comments: "Camels make such a mild, tasty smoke."
