City Council candidates make their closing argument

The following are closing arguments from the at-large candidates for Midland City Council.

Please go to mrt.com to read op-eds from the candidates about the following questions.

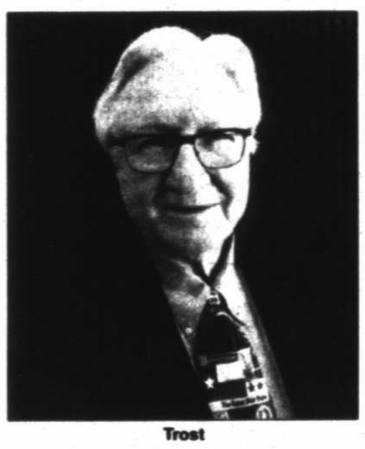

■ What do you feel is the difference is between the at-large and the district candidates (and the mayor) in terms of being a representative and what will you do to make yourself accessible to constituents?

■ The city has spent or obligated $80 million dollars to downtown projects over the last 5 years. How much public money should be dedicated to downtown before deciding that it should be just private money to continue downtown revitalizing?

■ How does the city get ahead of the infrastructure and housing problems that its residents face? Please provide specifics, including if the city should go to the voters for the quarter-cent of sales tax that is available.

Did you know?

When you go vote, you can vote for your favorite two candidates (not just one). The two candidates with the highest vote totals win seats on the next council. An at-large election is city-wide, so any eligible voters living inside city limits can participate.

Only one candidate deserves your vote Tuesday

By Michael Trost
At-large council candidate

There are at least 7.5 million reasons to elect Michael Trost to the Midland City Council. But with all the noise and dirty tricks, some of them might be hard to see. So, let's step back and think about this for a moment.

Remember when Gov. Rick Perry was a Democrat? Yup, sure was. But, at the end of the day, it really doesn't matter that Chase Gardaphe has never voted in Midland's Republican Primary. That's

My priorities are right for another term on city council

By Spencer Robnett
At-large council candidate

I always enjoy election season because it provides an opportunity to have structured conversations about the issues that face Midland. This paper has been gracious enough to provide a forum for my views on what it means to be an at-large councilman, downtown, infrastructure investments and the potential for a repurposed 4B. These issues only scratch the surface of the challenges ahead, and I want to make sure you

A decade ago, Eagle Ford shook up South Texas

By Rye Druzin
San Antonio Express-News

When Petrohawk Energy Corp. announced a decade ago that it had made two big shale gas wells in South Texas, everything changed.

Companies poured into the region. They deployed hordes of landmen to tiny county courthouses to comb through mineral records. They spent billions to lease acreage and develop what would become the Eagle Ford Shale, which stretches 400 miles from the Bryan-College Station area to Laredo, and is now the second largest oil producing and fifth largest natural gas producing region in the U.S.

The field ultimately helped reshape the global energy market and upend world geopolitics — but first, it upended South Texas.

For Floyd Wilson, then-president and CEO of Petrowhawk, the Oct. 21, 2008, announcement was a coup accomplished through stealthy buying of acreage under pseudonyms and keeping reports to the state under wraps until the last moment.

"We didn't tell anybody," Wilson said. "So we started leasing land, we started with maybe 30,000, 40,000 acres and pretty soon we had probably 300,000 acres. By that time word was out, we made some announcements in 2008 and the land rush started in the Eagle Ford."

Oil and gas drilling permits skyrocketed from 26 in 2008 to 1,010 in 2010, hitting a peak of 5,613 in 2014, according to the Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates the oil and gas industry in Texas.

Oil production in the Eagle Ford grew from less than 60,000 barrels a day in October 2008 to a peak of 1.72 million barrels a day in March 2015. Natural gas production expanded from 1.68 billion cubic feet a day to 7.42 billion cubic feet, according to data from the Department of Energy.

It wasn't the first shale rush Wilson had started. Petrohawk drilled previously in the Haynes-ville, a natural gas field in East Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas. It was there that the company got a feel for combining horizontal drilling with hydraulic fracturing, the process of pumping high volumes of water, chemicals and sandcrack shale rock and extract oil and natural gas.

Shale became "almost an obsession of mine," said Wilson, now president and CEO of Permian Basin-focused Halcón Resources Corp. based in Houston. In 2007, Wilson told Petrohawk's exploration group to find him another shale play. That's when they went out and started purchasing acreage in the Eagle Ford and West Texas' Permian Basin.

As a shale pioneer, Petrohawk became a target — and Wilson one of the

MELANIE NICHOLAS

The whole world has gone mad. Kanye is hanging out in the Oval Office, Justin Timberlake has somehow become an outdoorsman, and I willingly went to Disney World.

Now, it is well-known that I have an aversion to theme parks and rides. It started in childhood when I tried to escape the Judge Roy Scream roller coaster at Six Flags. Unfortunately, I had waited until we were atop the ride's pinnacle before I tried to wrestle myself out of the seat. With every sickening click of the cart on the rail, I just knew I was getting closer to my death. We were going up, up, up with no end in sight. The dreadful anticipation of the inevitable down, down, down was more than I could take and like a lunatic possessed, I jumped up and tried to climb out of the car. I remember the bright, hot sun, the red sweatshirt I wore, and my sweet Aunt Margie who brooked no tom foolery pulling me back down into the cart just before we took the plunge. The ride took only seconds, but it was one of the longest moments of my entire life.

I now know that the park considers the coaster a "family-friendly ride" that makes "a great transition for younger riders who are in training for the mega-coasters." As if. I know that six stories isn't all that high, and 45 miles per hour, well, golf carts and jazzy scooters go faster than that. But I can't rationalize away the terror I felt that day and going to amusement parks and carnivals brings it back to me every time. And darnit, my kids love 'em. I sobbed all the way through the giant swing ride at last year's state fair — from the ground. Watching my kids fly through the air while I watched from below was almost more than I could take. The Hubs was a little concerned to find my makeup running down my face when they touched down. Is there such a thing as fear of carnival rides? Like MotionHeightsPainfulDeath-aphobia? It's like I need Dramamine and Xanax and Valium all at once. Hence, I try to avoid rides at all costs. But it's hard with kids!

Each year, we all accompany The Hubs on his annual conference. This year, it was in Orlando. I just didn't see how we could manage to get there and hide all the theme parks. I mean, the whole city is built around Disney. The kids are young, but they don't live under rocks. They've heard all about Universal Studios and Magic Kingdom from their friends. So, we decided to stay over a few extra days and take them to Walt Disney World.

Now, if you haven't gone to Disney World before, let me tell you a few things. A trip there is like visiting a foreign country where you don't speak the language and can't afford the exchange rate. I needed an interpreter. Fortunately, my neighbor goes there multiple times a year and speaks fluent Disney. Walt Disney World is a giant park, made up of several smaller parks and water parks. You want a park hopper pass if you want to go to multiple parks in one day, and you want to take full advantage of the "FastPass+" option on your tickets. The passes reserve your spot in line at a specific time for up to three rides in one day. You can book your FastPass+ selections 30 days ahead of time and doing so gives you a better shot at actually getting a ride on the rollicking Space Mountain.

Now, I got really lucky when I booked our reservations. My booking agent was awesome and recommended the Birnbaum guidebook for Walt Disney World. This book tells you everything about the parks, dining and transportation. But the best part — it tells you which rides are not a good idea for folks like me. Bodacious and I rode every ride for littles we could find and left the thrill rides to the boys.

We all loved Pirates of the Caribbean. The ride's details and the robotic "actors" are simply incredible, and I can see why the ride sparked a movie franchise. But It's a Small World was my favorite ride. Every inch of the ride is covered in gigantic glitter and fur and taffeta. Riding along from vignette of singing children to vignette of singing children made me feel the same breathless awe I felt when I saw "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer" on television the very first time.

Another thing that took my breath away were the food and Disney "experience" prices. Even bottled water was outrageous. We brought some water with us, but y'all, that water gets heavy fast in 90-degree heat. So, the next thing I knew, there we were, spending almost $20 for water every time we got thirsty. I was too cheap to do the $400 princess and pirate makeovers for the kids, though, and I laughed when I saw several people wearing T-shirts that said Disney: Most Expensive Day Ever.

And there were so, so, so many people there. Our Uber driver said the best time of year to visit was in early September when school starts, so mark your calendars if you are thinking about a trip. I would also suggest bringing a good, sturdy stroller. Not only can you lug exhausted, screaming children around in them, they make excellent battering rams in lines and crowded walkways.

I sure could have used a stroller myself. We walked about nine miles that first day, and I was so proud of the kids for keeping up and not complaining about the lines. And while I wouldn't jump at the chance to go again, even I can't deny there is something special about Disney World. Cinderella's castle was beautiful, just the way I always imagined it. We turned a corner to see Jack Sparrow, drunkenly weaving about and signing autographs. Pluto welcomed guests at the park entrance, and there were so many sparkling princesses! But my favorite part of being there was just being there together, in a place where you felt like something magical could happen at any moment. Even I can't put a price on that.

There are no winners in San Jacinto's classroom controversy

STEWART DOREEN

Sdoreen@mrt.com

Any teacher who threatens to kill any student should be fired.

I think it is important to get this out there because I would feel uncomfortable if my child was in a classroom where a teacher threatened a student in such a way.

As we found out last week, my point of view is not accepted by everyone. That's OK.

Moving on, it is hard not to think of the events of the last week — specifically what happened at San Jacinto — and not ask questions.

My first question was: "Is what happened at San Jacinto on Oct. 25 a symptom of the type of discipline issues teachers faces on a regular basis, and students found the one teacher who snapped?"

"I think we are jumping to conclusions there," MISD Executive Director of Communications Lacy Sperry said.

There are 26,000 students, around 1,600 teachers and educators, and dozens of campuses. That type of behavior — which led to the situation that resulted in a science teacher acting inappropriately — is an isolated incident, she said.

Midland ISD officials said Friday that central office administrators definitely have the backs of their teachers – those men and women on the ground inside classrooms across the city. They said there are practices and training being offered to teachers — specifically a "restorative" approach that calls for relationship-building. It is more "supportive" and less "punitive" than what has been offered in the past. This process, they said, is in its infancy, but trained administrators and counselors are among those providing guidance to teachers on proper steps to take with disruptive students. The district has even hired a "lead" administrator to the restorative practice movement, so teachers will have the support they need.

In Friday's edition, the Reporter-Telegram called for more information to be released, so this community could understand how a back-and-forth about a student's conduct could take such a turn. District officials repeatedly said laws are in place that make it impossible to provide information about student or teacher actions during that incident (or any incident).

Again, does MISD have an issue with student behavior? Sperry repeatedly said that is not the case. A colleague, Teresa Moore, said, "redirecting behavior is part of the education process and part of the learning process, so it is a piece of the day-to-day. We have students who need direction. I wouldn't say it was an issue, no more pervasive than the norm."

In the end, I talked to multiple people in the education world this week. Most of them, just like most of our followers on social media, disagree with my assessment that the teacher should have been fired. In each case, the conversation was constructive (disagreements can be). They told me about the pressures teachers are under with class sizes that are sometimes larger than what is expected. They told me that student behavior has been a thorn in the side of many educators. They said — and I never thought about this — that electronics has become a pretty serious source of contention between teachers and students. And yes, in some cases, teachers are left to deal with the lack of parenting taking place at the homestead.

School, in my view, is not meant to be a place where a child learns right from wrong, just like teachers are not meant to be a substitute for parents. I have always believed that parents should be their child's first teacher in matters such as politics if they don't want a teacher to have too much influence.

How much is discipline an issue at Midland ISD? Depends on who you ask. But we know there are more students than ever before, and the current educator workforce is short-staffed. We hope that some Midlanders who read this column — and have a couple of hours to spare — find ways to volunteer. Be there to provide a stressed-out educator a little help, be there to see what they have to go through on a daily basis, be there because the ratio of students to teachers isn't in favor of those in the academic trenches.

And personally, I hope the teacher at the center of the controversy gets to experience a classroom atmosphere conducive to learning and not one that is a potential student violation away from what has made the rounds on social media. Because there were no winners in this classroom controversy — just questions.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

Note: Bigar's Stars is based on the degree of your sun at birth. The sign name is simply a label astrologers put on a set of degrees for convenience. For best results, readers should refer to the dates following each sign.*

A baby born today has a Sun in Scorpio and a Moon in Virgo if born before 3:01 p.m. Afterward, the Moon will be in Libra.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Nov. 4, 2018:

This year you are determined to be noticed and have others appreciate you. That determination might lessen as the year goes on and you enjoy your downtime and private time even more. If you are single, it could be important to choose someone who isn't too needy and can adjust to your different desires. If you are attached, your sweetie will flow with your various needs. Be sure that you are just as flexible in return. LIBRA cares about being fair when dealing with you.

ARIES
(March 21-April 19)

★★★★ Defer to someone else. You like being in charge, but sometimes this person needs to take the reins. You also might appreciate this person's choices more than you did in the past. Great planning often leads to a great time for everyone involved. Tonight: Give others the spotlight.

This Week: You will have an inclination to break a pattern.

TAURUS
(April 20-May 20)

★★★★ Others greet you with enthusiasm and happiness. You cannot help but enjoy being part of the group. Reach out to an older person at a distance. This person might seem closed down. However, a little news and a good joke could cheer this person up. Tonight: Out with a friend.

This Week: You could witness a change in someone you relate to.

GEMINI
(May 21-June 20)

★★★★ You are personality plus, and others see a change in how you feel and how you carry yourself. Your focus might be on keeping plans lively but undemanding. You'll want to spend time with a loved one or a romantic interest. Tonight: Act as though it's Friday night.

This Week: You become less concerned with work.

CANCER
(June 21-July 22)

★★★ You can be emotionally complex and demanding at times. One of the places you are happiest is at home. Allow more socializing to take place, even if you are housekeeping. Your sense of humor helps loosen up an uptight family member. Tonight: Play the role of host.

This Week: You have something you want to share with a loved one.

LEO
(July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ Try to make a round of calls to those you rarely have time to speak with. You might consider reaching out to a loved one at a distance. If you don't already have plans for today and in the near future, be sure that you will. Tonight: Whatever you do, just don't be alone.

This Week: Handle a domestic matter by Thursday.

VIRGO
(Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★ Look at your budget and be aware of your finances before going out to join a friend or loved one at a favorite but expensive haunt for brunch. You could chat for hours with this person. Do not push yourself any harder than you need to right now. Tonight: Choose a stress-buster.

This Week: Defer to a neighbor or relative.

LIBRA
(Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

What we know about the Texas midterm elections as early voting ends, and what we don't

■ Today is the last day of early voting, and the outcome of the 2018 midterms won't be known until Tuesday. But it's already possible to answer a lot of the big questions about this election.

By Ross Ramsey
Texas Tribune

■ ANALYSIS

On this second-to-last day of the 2018 election — early voting ends at twilight and all that's left is Election Day next Tuesday — most of the people who will vote this year have already cast their ballots.

The outcomes are still unknown, but some of the questions are clear.

What do Texas voters think about Donald Trump?

The only way to answer this question is to know which flag those voters are flying. Texas Republicans remain persistently in the president's corner. Texas Democrats are obstinately against him. The latest University of Texas/Texas Tribune poll took the measure of this: 88 percent of Texas Republican voters approve of the job Trump is doing, and 91 percent of Democrats disapprove.

It doesn't stop there; that partisan attraction/repulsion streak is indelible in voters' responses to questions about U.S. Supreme Court Justice Brett Kavanaugh and other Trump judicial picks, about immigration and border security, trade negotiations, the FBI and, of course, the president's suitability to lead the country.

That oil-and-water reaction to the nation's top Republican official provides a stark backdrop for these elections in Texas and nationally: 2018 is a referendum on Donald Trump.

Are there any new blue spots on the red Texas map?

Travis County — where the state Capitol is located — has long been the most prominent Democratic outpost in this very Republican state, but the old line about it sticking out of state political maps like a "blueberry in the tomato soup" is a little stale.

There are other blueberries now. Dallas County is a big one. Harris County is well on its way. El Paso, and so on.

If you're searching for blue waves this year, watch the state's two largest counties – Harris and Dallas – where Republican congressional and legislative incumbents are in electoral danger in districts that, before this year, had long been considered safe. Dallas alone accounts for more than half of the hottest Texas House contests in this election; all but one of those races have Republicans playing defense against Democratic challengers. That's also true of at least three Harris County races. Republican U.S. Reps. Pete Sessions of Dallas and John Culberson of Houston are trying to wriggle out of those same snares.

To answer the question: Yes, there are blue spots, but it's still a big Texas-shaped bowl of tomato soup.

Did state issues stand a chance this year against national ones?

Not really. "All politics are local" seems to have been replaced for now by "all politics are national."

The top race on the Texas ballot isn't for state office — it's for the U.S. Senate. So that's one reason.

But midterm elections are often about the occupant of the White House, and that's certainly true this year. The biggest political events of the year — most recently Kavanaugh's confirmation, major shifts in immigration policy and hate- and politics-driven mass shootings and attempted bombings — have been national ones. Texas candidates have spent as much or more of their time responding to what's coming out of Washington than to what's on the slate in Texas.

Property taxes and public education and roads and storm recovery still move voters. But those aren't the issues at the top of the political playlist right now.

Is immigration a reliable way to drive Texas conservatives to the polls?

It doesn't hurt when the president chooses to close the election season with an issue that continues to top the list of "most important problems facing the state of Texas" among Republican voters: 61 percent of them put immigration and border security at the top — again — in the latest UT/TT Poll. Fifty-seven percent of Republican voters in Texas don't think the Trump administration has gone far enough in enforcing federal immigration laws. And 81 percent of those voters believe "undocumented immigrants currently living in the United States should be deported immediately."

Trump's continued attention to the northbound caravan of asylum seekers crossing Mexico, and his promise to send thousands of military troops to the Texas border in response peaked during early voting. As people argue until they are red- or blue-in-the-face over whether his timing was intentional, this is clear: His timing affects what people are thinking about when they vote.

What's the deal with all that turnout?

Short answer: It's big, and it's not clear what that means. State officials say there are 15.6 million registered voters now. In recent midterm elections, between 33.6 and 38 percent of Texas voters have turned out; given the current number of registered voters, that would mean 5.2 million to 5.9 million voters.

Since we're already out on a limb, add this: The early vote in the last two Texas midterms was between 53 percent and 55 percent of the total vote. If 55 percent of the total vote this cycle turned out before Election Day, that would mean between 2.9 million and 3.2 million Texans would vote early — based on normal overall turnout.

That's the setup. Here's the payoff: As of the end of business on Wednesday, 4 million Texans had already voted.

Read it as you'd like. Voter turnout might be higher than in a normal midterm, or early voting might have borrowed more votes from Election Day than normal.

We'll know next Tuesday.

and the city that I call home, Midland, Texas. I also understand that I am not perfect, and I don't know everything but will strive for excellence. As your at-large city councilman, my job will be to absorb, process and make informed and educated decisions on your behalf.

As your city councilman, I will open myself up to the citizens of Midland, and I will fight for you. We are all in this together, and I look to each and every one of you for guidance and support as we embark on this journey together. This is why I will be completely transparent, and this is why I will continue to make myself available to each and every one of you. I want to hear your opinions, thoughts and ideas on how to make Midland a better place for all of us. I will listen to you and be your voice on the council.

Throughout this campaign, I have been blessed to meet some incredible people, complete strangers who are now friends. Midland is full of wonderful people with caring hearts with genuine concerns for our city. We all have a common bond in that we want to make Midland a better place for all of us, young and old. This is why my wife and I chose to move here and raise our children here.

The outpouring of support throughout this campaign has been unbelievable, and I want to thank everyone that has been involved. I especially want to thank my wife and my two children who have been my biggest cheerleaders! I also want to thank all of those whose words of encouragement have helped me throughout this campaign.

My involvement with developing and managing affordable housing communities has provided me with great knowledge about the industry, but more importantly, it has provided me with experience in listening and transparency. Currently, I office in the community that I developed and am always welcoming residents into my office. Sometimes they come in to discuss issues within the community, but most of the time it is to just chat about life and circumstances. I have created bonds and friendships with the residents that extend beyond the community.

My educational and business backgrounds have given me the tools to assess the current budget and come up with innovative solutions to inefficiencies. I also understand that if it isn't broke, don't fix it and shift your focus to fixing areas that are broken. My upbringing has taught me to be hardworking and fiscally conservative. My parents and my grandmother have instilled in me a great work ethic and a compassion for helping others. My wife has taught me thoughtfulness and love. My kids have taught me patience and putting others before yourself.

My experiences and the people in my life have prepared me to represent the citizens of Midland in the most open and honest way possible. I have proudly served on the Planning and Zoning Commission for almost five years, been directly involved in the development process of an affordable housing community, been appointed to various boards by city council to serve the citizens of Midland, and I am very involved with non-profits that serve our community. My personality and demeanor suit me well for working with city staff and other members of city council. This is a team effort, and it is imperative that we work together as a council and as a city to move forward.

I would be honored to serve the citizens of Midland as your at-large city councilman, and I promise that I will do my best to make you proud that you voted for me.

My wife and I have worked extremely hard throughout this campaign to earn your vote. We have knocked on countless doors and have spent many enjoyable hours visiting with the citizens of Midland. Unfortunately, we haven't been able to meet everyone. If you feel that you still have questions about this race or whom to vote for, please do not hesitate to reach out to me. Call or text 599-4177, send me an email at Chase@Chase4Council.com or message me on Facebook at Chase Gardaphe for Midland City Council.

I humbly ask for your vote on Election Day. I would also like to wish my wife a happy birthday, which just so happens to be the day after the election.

ties are if re-elected to serve as an at-large councilman. Driving partnerships, investing in our first responders, investing in infrastructure and advocating for practical allocation of your tax dollars are where my priorities lie.

Driving Partnerships: The city of Midland cannot succeed without partnering with other local municipalities, non-profits and corporate stakeholders. The challenges we face as a community must be solved collectively, and I will continue to search for partnerships to solve our most critical issues to help make your tax dollar go further. Projects like the upgraded wastewater plant with Pioneer and the downtown park with Concho and the Scharbauer Foundation should be used as templates for partnerships on other projects going forward. Collectively these projects saved the taxpayer more than $140 million. We are working on additional partnerships now for the new Midland Animal Shelter (among others), and I will continue to do so.

First Responder Funding, Retention and Growth: As Midland grows, so does our need for adequate police and fire protection. In this year's budget, the city of Midland's property tax revenue will only cover 90 percent of our annual police and fire operating budgets. Although our police and fire departments are 90 percent and 97 percent staffed currently, our population growth will continue to strain our first responders. Just last week our police and fire departments responded to 1,257 calls. This is a looming problem this council and community must face now. We must have an honest conversation about the funding required to properly staff and operate our police and fire departments. This includes competitive wages, career progression and training opportunities for both departments. Also, be on the lookout for a discussion to take place soon for a new regional police and fire training center led by the city of Midland.

Infrastructure Investments: In this year's budget, inclusive of the road bond, the City of Midland will spend more than $25 million repairing, rebuilding or maintaining roads inside the city limits. This is the most ever invested by any city council for this purpose. In addition to our roadway investments, I am actively working on a solution to extend water and sewer lines to northeast Midland. Water service to northeast Midland will open thousands of acres of land for development to support additional housing, schools and commercial uses. This is the single greatest chance we have to make a meaningful impact in area housing supply and the largest opportunity we have for the city to grow unencumbered.

Practical Investments: The city of Midland has a lean, balanced budget with no room for misappropriated funds. Our needs are too great to see hard earned tax dollars wasted on frivolous projects. When we do have the ability to make a material investment in our city due to increased sales tax or other revenue, we cannot miss. A perfect example of a missed investment is the Midland spaceport. At $20 million-plus spent on the spaceport to date, this is the greatest waste of taxpayer money in the history of Midland. I will continue to oppose the spaceport and other frivolous uses of your tax dollars.

This is my fourth city council election cycle and third contested city council race, and I am truly grateful for all the support and feedback I receive during these times. As the only incumbent and native Midlander in this race, I hope I have been able to earn your vote and the opportunity to serve Midland for another term. I am proud to have represented the city of Midland as an at-large councilman for the last 4 1/2 years and would appreciate the opportunity to serve again. There are two at-large council seats open in this election, and I respectfully ask for one of your two votes. If I can answer any questions about my candidacy or where I stand on the issues before you vote on Tuesday, I can be reached at Spencer@RobnettForMidland.com or 553-8545.

not why I entered the race. I entered the race because I simply believe Midlanders deserve a break; Midlanders deserve a council that is humble in governance and conservative in taxation.

When I was elected and began serving on the Midland City Council in 2008, the city was in one of the worst economic climates since the great depression. Under Mayor Perry's leadership, the council focused on keeping the ship afloat. We focused on the community's needs, not the city council's wants. But whether times are good or bad, shouldn't the same rule apply? Shouldn't we expect our elected officials to focus on the basic services that make a city run well and not on frivolous spending? Because as we know, today's blessings aren't forever. We're amid that one more oil boom we all prayed for. We shouldn't squander it by over taxing and under delivering.

And yes, I'm frustrated. Every senior on a fixed income should be frustrated. Every teacher trying to make ends meet should be frustrated. Every first responder should be frustrated. We should all be a little bit frustrated.

And as we enter the final push toward Election Day, I believe we still have a chance. We still have a chance to elect someone who has a solid conservative record. We still have a chance to elect a leader who has worked to build a stronger, better Midland even when it wasn't the best thing for him financially. But if that isn't enough, there really are at least 7.5 million good reasons to elect me to serve you on the Midland City Council. I've listed a few of them below.

Reason No. 1: You can send a message. You can say loudly and clearly that you've had enough. Don't vote for two candidates. Just vote for 1. Just vote Trost. Message sent, message received.

Reason No. 3: I will work to eliminate the automatic 3 percent tax increase my opponents have embraced. This will at least keep taxes the same in 2020 as they will be next year.

Reason No. 10: I'd fully support letting the voters decide when a proposed expenditure will exceed 10 percent of the city's annual budget. While that might eliminate some new stuff, it would be because you decided that it wasn't a priority.

Reason No. 28: At last count we were 28 police officers short. By the time this article is printed, that number may be higher. I will fight to ensure that we not only focus on recruiting new first responders, but that we provide incentives to retain the ones we have.

Reason No. 222: I am not a developer, I'm retired. I don't have conflicts of interest. When a good development of 222 housing units is proposed for Fairgrounds Road or anywhere for that matter, I'll happily approve it. We need the housing supply so that rents can go down.

Reason No. 7,500,000: I have never and will never vote to give the mall $7,500,000 of your tax dollars and then raise your property taxes to pay for it. That doesn't make sense on this planet or any other.

I filed as a candidate for the Midland City Council at-large position because I believe that planning for the future is a great way to keep taxes low and mitigate the downsides of a thriving economy. I filed because I believe someone on the council needs to always ask why? My years of experience on the City Council, the Midland Development Corp., the Airport Advisory Board, the Parks board as a business owner and others, has given me the experience needed on the Midland City Council. I am asking for your vote because in times like these, experience matters. Vote for transparency, integrity and a solid conservative voting record.

There is a choice in this election. I would be honored to serve as your at-large representative for the next three years. Send a message. Choose 1. Choose Trost. #votetrost

Is a Democratic president from Texas what the nation needs now?

By Ken Herman
Austin
American-Statesman

■ COMMENTARY

Friday was the last day of early voting. Tuesday is the day of right-on-time voting. Alas, there is no late voting (except sometimes by the U.S. Supreme Court).

Election 2018 is drawing to a climax, which means it's time to step up the already-underway talk about Election 2020. Iowa, here they come. In fact, many of them already have been there.

Right here in Austin I recently heard the early outline of a 2020 presidential campaign stump speech I think we can all expect to hear, perhaps starting within weeks of next Tuesday's election.

Stump speeches evolve, starting as concepts and talking points and morphing into something a candidate nurtures and tinkers with as it hits the road.

The early version of the one I heard last Saturday at the Texas Book Festival was invited by question, not offered voluntarily. But it was clear the potential presidential candidate came well-prepared for the query, which came from interviewer Paul Stekler, local documentarian and astute observer and chronicler of the passing political scene.

"I'm going to go on a limb over here," Stekler said by way of saying out loud what was in everyone's head in the Texas House chamber for the event. "You're kind of unemployed right now. You teach at the LBJ School. You're writing books. Who knows? Maybe hypothetically maybe you'd run for president."

The mere mention of that possibility in a sentence that included two maybes drew enthusiastic applause.

Stekler: "I'm going to ask you a softball question that Ted Kennedy couldn't answer in 1980, which is why vote for you for president, if hypothetically you did?"

That, of course, is The Only Question That Matters for a Presidential Candidate. A would-be candidate better have a good answer prior to becoming a for-real candidate.

Former San Antonio Mayor and HUD Secretary Julián Castro didn't flinch.

"Sure," he said, "I'll answer that. First of all, I'm going to make a decision about running after the November election and before the end of the year. So I haven't made a final decision about running, but if I decide to run it will be because I have in my life felt very blessed with opportunity and I have a strong vision for the future of this country to ensure that we continue to expand opportunity for everybody, instead of going backward the way that we are now."

On Oct. 16, Castro told The Associated Press he'd "likely" run for president in 2020. And he was in New Hampshire three days prior to the book festival event. Maybe it was just to enjoy fall foliage. Back to the likely candidate:

"And because I believe that we need leadership that is trying to bring people together instead of tear them apart, especially as we've seen over the last couple of days," he said in the wake of the mail bombs and as we were learning about the horror in a Pittsburgh synagogue.

"Because we need somebody in that office that people can believe is honest and has integrity instead of the scandal after scandal and corruption that we've seen. And because I believe that we need to focus on going forward as a country and the future and not the past," Castro said.

He spoke of a "very contested Democratic primary" and pivoted to what could differentiate him in a crowded field: "I also believe this country is ready for a new generation of leadership."

Castro is 44, which could make him the youngest among the Democratic presidential contenders. New Jersey Sen. Cory Booker is 49. Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti is 47. Rep. Beto O'Rourke, whose future obviously hinges on Tuesday's election, is 46. Castro would be 46 when he took the presidential oath in January 2021, which means our current and oldest president would hand it off to our third-youngest president. Teddy Roosevelt was 42. JFK was 43. Bill Clinton was 46 years and 154 days at inauguration. Castro would be 46 years and 126 days (with the required caveat here about a journalist doing math).

More math: If Castro wins in 2020, the age gap (28 years) between him and President Donald Trump would be the largest ever between back-to-back presidents. JFK was 27 years younger than Dwight Eisenhower.

Castro's "new generation" line drew applause, as it might among a certain demographic in Iowa, New Hampshire or South Carolina.

Another applause line was more provincial: "And it's also just been a long time since we had a Texas Democrat in the White House. And whether that's me or somebody else I think we should have a Texas Democrat in the White House soon."

Castro's stump-speech preview included a message that could be shared by some in what's shaping up as a diverse field of Democratic 2020 contenders. He spoke of a need for "leaders of different backgrounds and different places to articulate a message of unity for the country."

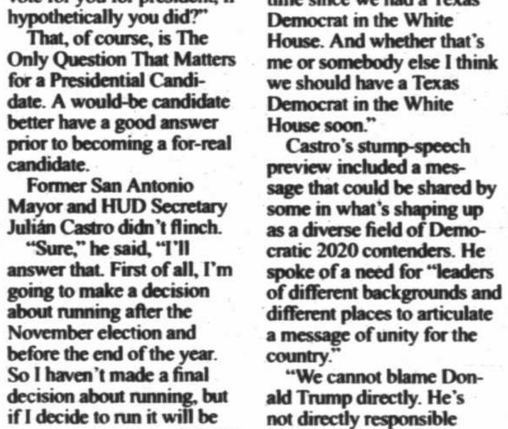

"We cannot blame Donald Trump directly. He's not directly responsible for what happened either with the mail bombs or the (synagogue)," Castro said. "But there's no question that there has been a tone that has been set and flames that have been fanned constantly, over and over by this leader."

"What you see out there today is that people just feel emboldened right now," he said. "They feel emboldened. And I believe that's due to the rhetoric, especially of the president."

Yes, it would help if everyone, starting at the top, toned things done a bit.

Question: How long after Castro's entry into the race until Trump starts calling him Fidel?

Texas voter turnout is surging now

By David Montgomery
Stateline.org

The Pew Charitable Trusts/TNS

University of Texas at Austin students Hadi Ahmed, left back, and Duriba Khan, left front, find out more about voting procedures from Anthony Zhang, right back, and Kassie Phebillo, representatives of a campus get-out-the-vote organization, TX Votes. In the last midterms, Texas voter turnout was second-worst among the states. This year's election could be different.

AUSTIN — Wearing a red-white-and-blue blouse with a sticker declaring "I'm so gonna vote," Kassie Phebillo sits behind a table here at the University of Texas, dispensing information about the Nov. 6 midterm election. Nearby, scores of students line up to cast their ballots on the opening day of early voting.

The display of political energy contrasts with Texas' long record of lackluster voter turnout. In the last midterm election in 2014, Texas' 28.9 percent turnout was less than 1 percentage point higher than dead-last Indiana's, according to the United States Elections Project, which estimates voter turnout based on reports from state election offices.

A large percentage of Texans are young people and Latinos, two groups of people who are less likely to vote than the general population. Critics say a voter ID requirement, which went into effect in 2013 and has survived years of legal challenges, also has played a role. And more than two decades of Republican dominance has eroded resources for the rival Democrats and stifled competition.

"People haven't participated because they feel like their vote didn't make a difference," said Grace Chimene of Austin, president of the League of Women Voters of Texas.

But this year's election may be different: As in other states, there have been long lines at early voting sites throughout Texas, raising the potential for an upturn in the sluggish voting patterns that typically characterize midterm elections _ especially here.

In Texas' 30 largest counties, 2.4 million people cast ballots in the first days of early voting, surpassing the combined totals for early voting and mail-in balloting in the 2014 midterm, the United States Elections Project found.

"There's a guy named Donald Trump and either you love him, or you hate him, but he inflames passion, and when people are passionate, they're going to vote," said Michael McDonald, who directs the project. "It's just another manifestation of Trump. He's affecting politics and now he's affecting turnout in the election."

"We've never seen this level of engagement this early in the early voting period," McDonald said. "Something special is happening out there right now."

The Trump administration's crackdown on illegal immigration and the president's frequent use of heated language to describe immigrants from Mexico and Central America appears to be energizing Latino voters in Texas and elsewhere.

Voto Latino, a national nonprofit that aims to propel younger Latinos into the political process, has registered more than 200,000 voters this election cycle, including 52,000 in Texas.

Jessica Reeves of Austin, the group's chief operating officer, said Latinos feel "a real need to push back against negative rhetoric."

A surprisingly competitive U.S. Senate race also is pumping up participation in Texas. Democratic U.S. Rep. Beto O'Rourke has raised a staggering $70 million in his bid to unseat Republican Sen. Ted Cruz, who has raised about $33 million.

Hard-fought congressional contests in Indiana, Minnesota and Nevada have driven early-voting turnout to presidential-election levels in those states, as have close gubernatorial races in Florida and Georgia.

But in some states, high voter turnout is nothing out of the ordinary.

In 2014, nearly 59 percent of Maine voters turned out to vote, which was tops in the nation. Analysts say Maine and other states with consistently high voter-turnout rates, such as Minnesota and Wisconsin, typically have a better-educated electorate as well as fewer impediments between the voter and the ballot box.

Maine's population of 1.3 million is dominated by older white voters, who tend to vote in greater numbers. People who are retired have more time to vote, and they also are aggressively protective of vital economic lifelines such as Social Security and Medicare.

Amy Fried, who chairs the political science department at the University of Maine, said Mainers frequently interact at town meetings and have fiercely defended their stake in government for more than two decades.

In 2011, when Maine leaders enacted legislation to end the state's 38-year-old practice of allowing registration on Election Day, residents rebelled and voted to overturn the law.

"They are just very involved," Fried said.

In Texas, groups are trying to create a similar dynamic among Latinos and young people through aggressive voter registration efforts. Overall turnout for the 2014 midterms was 42 percent and the rate among Latinos was only 27 percent, census data shows.

Domingo Garcia, a Dallas lawyer and the president of LULAC, the nation's oldest Latino civil rights organization, said Trump's policies have propelled mobilization efforts. Garcia predicted "huge numbers" of first-time Hispanic voters in states such as Arizona, Florida, Nevada and Texas.

"I think the election is really a referendum about Trump in the Latino community," Garcia said. "He is probably the most despised president in my lifetime."

Nationwide, two-thirds of Hispanics polled by the Pew Research Center in June said they disapproved of Trump. (The Pew Charitable Trusts funds both the center and Stateline.) Still, a recent University of Texas poll showed that Latino voters in that state were not as enthusiastic about voting this year as were whites.

Young people also may vote in higher than normal numbers this year, many motivated by the mass shooting that killed 17 students and staff members at a high school in Parkland, Fla., in February.

Thirty-four percent of people in that age group are "extremely likely to vote," which would be a historic high for a midterm election, according to a recent poll by the Tisch College of Civic Life at Tufts University. The highest midterm turnout for that group was 31.7 percent in 1982.

"I think it's important if I want to change anything," said Christine Garner, an 18-year-old University of Texas freshman who cast her ballot on the first day of early voting. "And I think there definitely needs to be more young people voting, especially when our representation is so much older than us."

Voting rights activists in Texas and elsewhere also are pushing back against what they perceive as Republican efforts to suppress voting among young people and minorities, who tend to favor Democrats.

A lawsuit by students at historically black Prairie View A&M University in Waller County charged that early-voting restrictions were suppressing the voting rights of African-Americans. In October, officials in the rural southeast Texas county responded by expanding voting hours and opening a new polling place.

Similarly, Hays County commissioners in central Texas agreed to expand voting hours at Texas State University in San Marcos after the Texas Civil Rights Project threatened a lawsuit on behalf of two students.

Zenen Perez, a spokesman for the project, said myriad flaws in Texas' voting system _ from antiquated voting machines to backward registration policies _ constitute "death by a thousand cuts."

"It's not that there's one issue of suppression," he said, "but there are all these little things that add up to basically a culture and a blanket of suppression across the state that makes it difficult for people to go vote."

From behind her information table here at UT Austin, Kassie Phebillo is doing her part to rally young people toward the voting booth. A newly married 29-year-old who is pursuing a doctorate in communications studies, she's the program coordinator for TX Votes, a student organization committed to increasing voter awareness on campus. With a "TX Votes" banner adorning the front of the table, Phebillo and other volunteers explain the process to anyone who stops to inquire. "Thanks for voting," she shouts to a student who is just leaving the campus polling place with an "I Voted Early" sticker on his shirt.

Earlier this year, volunteers set up tables in more than 250 classrooms to register students. Now that registration has closed, their core duty is advising students on how and where to vote.

Standing under an overcast sky on the first day of early voting, Phebillo is joined by the TX Votes interim president, Maya Patel, a 20-year-old chemistry major whose parents are scientists.

Patel's mother is from Kenya. Her father was born in Tanzania and grew up in India and London. She learned the importance of civic involvement when she helped her father study for his citizenship test.

"I'm passionate about this stuff because my parents are immigrants to this country," she said. "And they didn't always have the right to vote."

Say it ain't so: Is Texas turning into California?

■ COMMENTARY

By Steve Brown
The Dallas Morning News

When economist James Gaines gave a talk recently about the economy and the real estate market, his biggest audience response came from an unexpected topic.

Gaines, chief economist at the Real Estate Center at Texas A&M University, told hundreds of local real estate agents what to expect in the years ahead regarding the state's population growth and demographic changes.

"Do you know what Texas looks like in 30 years?" Gaines asked the audience.

"California," he offered as the whole ballroom of folks groaned and rolled their eyes.

Nothing gets a bunch of Texans more riled up than to tell them they are turning into California.

"I have used that line a number of times and get the same reaction," Gaines said. "People are always asking where are we going and what will we look like.

"I'm serious about it," he said. "The problems, the issues, politically, socially, economically, land use, housing resources — go down and tick off the issues. We are going down the same path."

Gaines said the rapid growth of jobs, population and wealth that California has seen over the past few decades is similar to what Texas is now experiencing. That means the state faces the same opportunities and increasing challenges.

D-FW's population, now around 7.5 million, is expected to hit 10 million by 2030. Gaines' comments about California aren't a joke, but it's too early to see exactly how things will play out.

"It's easy to make a 30-year projection because I'm not going to be around to defend it," Gaines said.

In October when I wrote that major Texas cities — Houston, Dallas, Austin — were top destinations for folks from Los Angeles looking to flee their state, it was one of my best-read stories and drew the most negative comments from readers.

"They can no longer afford to live in the California they ruined and now are here, like a virus," one reader fussed in the comments section.

Texas is already creating more jobs than California. And last year, the two fastest-growing population centers in the U.S. were in Texas: the D-FW metro area and Houston.

Still, even with the folks leaving the state, California has 10 million more residents than Texas. And median home prices there are more than twice what they are in the Lone Star State.

A house in Texas' most expensive metro area — Austin — that will cost you just over $300,000 will go for twice that in Los Angeles and more than $1.5 million in San Francisco.

With soaring home and apartment prices on the West Coast and a shortage of affordable labor, no wonder everyone, from recent college grads to Amazon's top brass, is looking east for greener pastures. And Texas is at the top of their shopping list.

Tennessean Davy Crockett said it best: "You may all go to hell and I will go to Texas."

Of course, Crockett died at the Alamo.

US, China need to reach trade deal

THE ECONOMIST

By M. Ray Perryman

Recent rhetoric and threats have added additional fuel to the already-simmering trade war between the United States and China. Stock markets and business leaders around the globe respond immediately and significantly to the ebb and flow of the situation, and we can expect ongoing volatility until it is resolved. As I am writing, some hope of a truce has markets surging; by the time you are reading this, the situation could be very different.

Foreign trade is a classic win-win for participating countries. Through imports and exports, consumer choice improves, prices are reduced, business opportunities escalate, and economies grow. I could go on. There are times when nations don't play by the rules and imbalances and other issues occur; those should be properly addressed. The bottom line, however, is that tariffs do far more harm than good. Some U.S. sectors are feeling negative effects, including farmers, manufacturers and consumers, and Chinese leaders recently acknowledged dislocations and decreased growth.

Trade between the U.S. and China has been expanding rapidly. Twenty years ago (in 1997), U.S. exports to China were valued at $12.9 billion and imports from China were $62.6 billion.

By 2007, exports had grown to $62.9 billion, with imports up to $321.4 billion. In 2017, the U.S. exported $129.9 billion to China and imports were $505.5 billion. These increases are substantial, and notably, U.S. exports have risen more than 60 percent faster than imports, which suggests anything but a problem.

The United States exports a variety of products to China — civilian aircraft and parts (almost $16.3 billion in 2017), soybeans ($12.3 billion), automobiles ($10.2 billion), semiconductors ($6.1 billion), industrial machines ($5.4 billion) and crude oil ($4.4 billion).

Exports of most of these products have been increasing significantly, particularly aircraft and cars.

As U.S. companies sell into the Chinese market, they increase volumes and revenues as well as employment opportunities.

On the import side, the largest category by far is cellphones and other household goods, with $70.4 billion in 2017. Other technology-intensive products follow in line, including computers ($45.5 billion), telecommunications equipment ($33.5 billion) and computer accessories ($31.6 billion). Toys, games and sporting goods are next, then apparel and textiles and furniture and household goods. Consumers nationwide purchase these products, thus reducing prices and enhancing choices.

Strong trade agreements can facilitate the exchange of goods and services and add predictability.

The recent uncertainty and threat of a tit-for-tat trade war is causing businesses to delay investment, prices to increase and economic growth potential to be diminished. If the U.S. and China can iron out differences and strike a lasting deal, the benefits will ripple through both nations and, indeed, the globe.

biggest winners to emerge from the Eagle Ford boom. Australian mining company BHP Billiton snapped up Petrohawk in a deal worth $15.1 billion, including debt.

OVERWHELMED

In Karnes County, it was "out of control chaos" said county commissioner Shelby Dupnik.

"All of a sudden we started to see welding trucks coming in, travel trailers," Dupnik said. "What we saw was an explosion, but we had no housing for anybody here."

The county had to upgrade its road maintenance crews and equipment, create a full-time EMS service, and increase pay for its employees to try to keep them for leaving for oil field jobs.

In neighboring DeWitt County, the sleepy county seat of Cuero exploded from 6,800 people in 2010 to an estimate of nearly 8,300 in 2017. New hotels sprung up. Cuero voters approved a $76 million school bond package for new buildings including a performing arts center. H-E-B built a new and larger store that opened in 2015.

The growth was dizzying. County Judge Daryl Fowler compared it to "big-city life."

"It was just a constant stream, and it was day and night, a constant stream of folks," Fowler said. "When you're used to seeing the sidewalks roll up at 6 o'clock in the evening, it's a stark contrast when that comes in and takes over."

The industry paid nearly $1.6 billion in local government taxes across the 15-county Eagle Ford region and employed an estimated 130,000 people in 2014, according to a June 2017 study by the University of Texas at San Antonio. The impact on the region was estimated to be a staggering $98 billion in that year alone.

The investment and growth "transformed" South Texas said Omar Garcia, former president and CEO of the South Texas Energy & Economic Roundtable, an industry group.

"South Texas was a sleepy, dormant area that was relying on tourism, hunting and agriculture," Garcia said. "Now the region has high paying jobs, highly skilled jobs, that are going to be around for the foreseeable future."

The growth had another side to it. Rural roads and infrastructure struggled and sometimes crumbled under the strain of overloaded semi trucks on farm-to-market roads intended for light traffic.

Since 2011, Fowler said the county government has spent $139 million on county road repair.

There's been an environmental footprint as well.

"Oftentimes you find out much later about the problems than you do initially — all the hazardous contaminants that are being injected underground, do they stay in that zone or do they migrate?" asked Cyrus Reed, conservation director of the Sierra Club's Lone Star Chapter. "Infrastructure placed to move gas around, does it stay in the lines or escape? Some of those things we may not know 10 years from now."

Activism in the region has been "muted" with pockets of resistance over specific issues like oilfield solid waste disposal sites and injection wells, Reed said. One reason may be because the region is so spread out and many of communities have never seen anything like the Eagle Ford, Reed added.

For Fowler, the boom of the Eagle Ford was a "rebirth" for Cuero and the wider region.

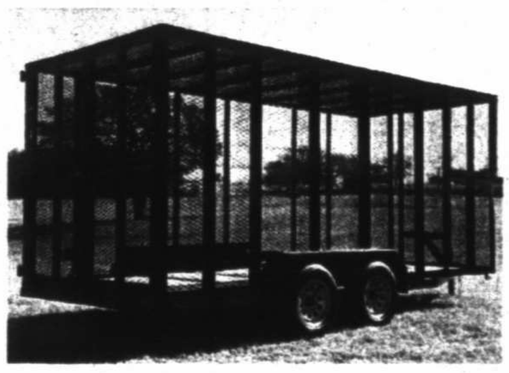

"Before the Eagle Ford Shale came here, this was an aging community that was becoming more and more of a bedroom community for Victoria," he said. "But the Eagle Ford changed all that — a lot more businesses, a lot more homes."

The region has learned to ride the roller coaster of oil price swings, too. Oil prices fell from $107 a barrel in June 2014 to $26 a barrel in Feb. 2016, leading to drastic cuts in the number of active drilling rigs and mass layoffs. In June 2014 the number of active drilling was in the 260s, but fell to a low of 28 by the end of May 2016.

Drilling rig counts have since recovered to the mid-90s, according to data from S&P Global Platts. Oil prices have also recovered, spending most of 2018 above $60 a barrel.

Even at today's less frenzied pace, Dupnik, the Karnes County commissioner, said Eagle Ford has left an indelible mark.

"You could go around town and see everybody you knew, you'd walk into a store and you'd see most of your friends," Dupnik said. "Now you walk in and you don't know who they are, it's changed that much."

Crime of the week

Midland Crime Stoppers and the Midland County Sheriff's Office are asking for assistance for information regarding a theft.

Deputies responded to the 10000 block of County Road 1110 at about 10 a.m. Sept. 14 in reference to a trailer that was stolen. The complainant said the trailer is used to haul trash for the business. The trailer is black, 16 feet long with 8-foot expanded metal walls equipped with a scissor lift for dumping. The trailer has a heart with an arrow cut out of the frame for the hydraulic hoses.

If anyone has any information about this theft, please call Crime Stoppers. You could earn a $1,000 cash reward if it leads to an arrest or case solved. You will remain anonymous because no caller ID is ever used. Call 694-TIPS or use mobile app P3 TIPS.

Earnings Roundup

From staff and wire reports

Apache leans on Permian growth for quarterly profit

Houston's Apache Corp. aggressively pushed for growth in its Permian Basin developments to deliver a third-quarter profit.

Despite some negative tax impacts, Apache reported an $81 million net gain for the quarter that jumped up from $63 million last year. Minus the tax impacts, Apache said it would have made $244 million in adjusted earnings.

Apache operated 18 rigs in the Permian Basin during the quarter — eight in its developing Alpine High region, six in the Midland Basin and four more in the Delaware Basin outside of Alpine High.

"Apache continued our strong performance in the third quarter of 2018, delivering 31 percent growth in U.S. production year over year," Apache Chief Executive John Christmann said. "The Permian Basin continues to be the key driver, with oil production up 16 percent and total production up 38 percent year over year."

EOG Resources posts $1.2B profit, record oil production

Houston's EOG Resources reported a $1.2 billion quarterly profit that's well up from $100 million last year and even from the $700 million posted in the second quarter of 2018.

EOG's revenues jumped more than 80 percent up to $4.78 billion compared to $2.64 billion during the third quarter a year ago. The Houston oil producer said its crude oil volumes set a company record of 415,000 barrels per day, up 27 percent from last year.

The company said it raised its 2018 estimates on capital spending — up to $6 billion from a previous top end of $5.8 billion — to meet the costs of rising oilfield services contracts, but EOG also increased its oil production projections.

South Texas' Eagle Ford shale remains EOG's top producing region, but the firm also is pursing growth in West Texas' booming Permian Basin, Oklahoma, Colorado, North Dakota and Wyoming's emerging Powder River Basin.

Anadarko posts profit gain with Permian, GoM growth

Anadarko Petroleum Corp. reported a growing net profit of $363 million for the third quarter, courtesy of revenue that surged nearly 50 percent from a year prior.

Led by growth in West Texas' Permian Basin and in the Gulf of Mexico, The Woodlands-based oil and gas producer improved from a big $700 million during the same quarter in 2017.

The company's $3.7 billion in quarterly revenues jumped from $2.5 billion last year.

Anadarko Chief Executive Al Walker also touted the company's new oil processing system in the Permian, called the Loving Regional Oil Treating Facility, which is bringing in additional profits beyond oil and gas sales.

Chevron's $4 billion profit doubles last year's result

California energy giant Chevron reported a $4 billion quarterly profit that more than doubled its result last year of just less than $2 billion.

Revenues jumped 24 percent to $42 billion from $34 billion last year, the company said.

Chevron noted its oil and gas production volumes of 2.96 million barrels of oil equivalent per day are its highest ever in the quarter, up from 2.72 million barrels a day in the third quarter of 2017 and from 2.83 million barrels a day from the second quarter.

Chevron Chief Executive Michael Wirth noted the growth from West Texas' booming Permian Basin and from the company's liquefied natural gas projects out of Australia.

People flying out of Midland International soars in last decade

By Stewart Doreen
sdoreen@mrt.com

The number of people boarding airlines at Midland International Airport has increased by nearly 150,000 in the last decade.

The city of Midland reports a 15.5 increase in the number of people who boarded an airline this past fiscal year. The total number of "enplanements," or "boardings," reached 581,721 — an increase from 503,746 in 2016-17 and a jump from the previous high over the last decade (529,357 in 2013-14).

Compared to 2008-09 — when boardings reached 433,378 — the increase is more than 34 percent. That translates to more money in the passenger facility charge fund and more parking revenue. Over the course of the last decade, the price of parking has increased. In 2008-09, the city reports collecting around $1.807 million. Last year, parking revenue finished at $4.302 million – an increase of 138 percent. Even a year-over-year comparison shows a 21.6 percent increase in parking revenues at the airport.

Director of Airports Justine Ruff recently told the Reporter-Telegram that there was $17 million in the Airport Operations Fund, some of which will be used for parking expansion near the terminal in the coming months. Ruff said the airport is "self-sufficient" and that it pays into the general fund.

Once again, Southwest Airlines carried the most passengers at 24,972, which was more than half of those flying out of Midland International. United had the largest year-over-year increase (37.45 percent), but all three airlines, including American Eagle, reported double-digit percentage increases in boardings.

FOR AT-LARGE CITY COUNCIL

CHASE GARDAPHE

I'm Chase Gardaphe, and I ask for your vote for City Council.
I am EXPERIENCED, FOCUSED and PASSIONATE about Midland.

The City of Midland is on the move, and strong leadership and financial prudence is crucial to its growth. I believe my experience as Chairman of Planning and Zoning Commission will help create a more beautiful and exciting place for all of us. I want the city of Midland to be a place where my children want to live, not where they have to live.

My focus will be affordable housing and responsible development while maintaining transparency in city government.

VOTE CHASE GARDAPHE FOR AT-LARGE CITY COUNCIL

POLLS OPEN NOVEMBER 6TH FROM 7AM - 7PM

Don't Waste Your Vote

A vote for Trost is a wasted vote for the past with no energy for our future; the citizens of Midland removed Trost from the City Council in 2013 for this exact reason. Our need for thoughtful planning for the future requires personal responsibility and financial prudence; neither trait has been shown by Trost. His recurrent bankruptcies, federal tax liens and unpaid property taxes, which ultimately pay for our first responders, show his unwillingness to take personal responsibility for his actions. These are not the traits of a leader that Midland deserves.

"The point here is to say that on Tuesday, Michael Trost showed the entire community the type of leadership skills that got him voted off the council before and the type of character that puts him above what has been good for the community. That isn't a recipe for a better Midland."

MRT OCTOBER 25th, 2018

OPINION EXTRA

At-large candidate again demonstrates why he previously was voted out

Michael Trost on Tuesday showed what type of a city councilman he would be for Midland.

Hours after it was reported that public records show he faces liens for nearly $180,000 related to tax payments going back to 2009, he called for Brent Hilliard should step down as chairman of the board of the Midland Development Corp. Trost is apparently upset Hilliard contacted him about the public documents that offer details about the federal liens.

Trost's comments to a local TV station showed how disconnected he is with what is happening in our community today. Hilliard is the same chairman who has provided the leadership sorely needed after a previous MDC board recruited and then signed space industry companies to contracts that lost the community millions of dollars. One of the five people on that previous board was Michael Trost.

MDC board members have three major concerns – infrastructure, education and health care -- and their spending is following suit. This MDC board, under the leadership of Hilliard and Keith Stretcher, has put the community's money toward projects that will help finish the northern part of Loop 250. It has been this MDC that has contributed funding for other road projects in west Midland, arguably the city's fastest-growing area over the last five to 10 years. This influx of funds will help the cash-strapped city at a time when infrastructure is needed.

Trost might not realize the significance of proper development in west Midland. Voters in this region of the city (District 4) resoundingly was voted Trost out of office in 2013.

The MDC put money into making a children's psychiatric hub a reality in Midland. Our community lacks substantial children's psychiatric resources, and the MDC worked with the Scharbauer Foundation and Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center to bring in these services. When the story of 2018 is told, there might not be a more significant achievement in Midland. Trost seems to believe interfering with his political run supersedes accomplishments and leadership that made Midland a better place.

I could go on, but what Trost did on Tuesday told everyone in Midland what type of councilman he would be. He will put his interests ahead of what have been good for the community. He will argue with and call out those who rightfully have concerns about his tax history. And yes, his financial prowess is fair game. Trost has told people he didn't vote for tax rate increases in the past. What he doesn't tell people is the same record will show he voted for those same budgets, so his type of leadership isn't conservative -- it's reckless. Forcing the city to go into reserves could have tested its credit ratings at a time when reserves weren't nearly where they are now.

This newspaper doesn't make endorsements, and this column isn't an endorsement of his opponents, Chase Gardaphe or Spencer Robnett.

The point here is to say that on Tuesday, Michael Trost showed the entire community the type of leadership skills that got him voted off the council before and the type of character that puts him above what has been good for the community. That isn't a recipe for a better Midland.

Right seeks unprecedented convention to amend Constitution

By Matt Sedensky
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Whatever success Republicans have amassed in taking control of all three branches of U.S. government, and whatever fate awaits them as midterm elections near, some on the right are working to cement change by amending the Constitution. And to the mounting alarm of others on all parts of the spectrum, they want to bypass the usual process.

They're pushing for an unprecedented Constitutional convention of the states. While opponents are afraid of what such a convention would do, supporters say it is the only way to deal with the federal government's overreach and ineptitude.

"They literally see this as the survival of the nation," said Karla Jones, director of the federalism task force at the conservative American Legislative Exchange Council, which represents state lawmakers and offers guidance and model legislation for states to call a convention under the Constitution's Article V.

Among the most frequently cited changes being sought: amendments enforcing a balanced federal budget, establishing term limits for members of Congress, and repealing the 17th Amendment, which put the power of electing the Senate in the hands of the public instead of state legislatures.

For the past 229 years, constitutional amendments have originated in Congress, where they need the support of two-thirds of both houses, and then the approval of at least three-quarters of the states.

But under a never-used second prong of Article V, amendments can originate in the states. Two-thirds of states — currently, 34 — must call for a convention at which three-fourths of states approve of a change.

The particulars of such a convention, though, are not laid out. Do the states have to call for a convention on the same topic? Must they pass resolutions with similar or identical wording? The U.S. Supreme Court may have to decide whether the threshold of states has been reached and, ultimately, the parameters of a convention and the rules delegates would be governed by.

A bill introduced in the U.S. House last year would direct the National Archives to compile all applications for an Article V convention.

Some believe enough states have already passed Article V resolutions, pointing to votes over the years across the country on a variety of potential amendment topics. Others contend the highest possible current count of states is 28 — the number of states with existing resolutions on the most common convention topic, a balanced budget amendment. Others point to lower total counts based on states that have passed near-identical resolutions.

Regardless, proponents of a convention believe they have momentum on their side more than any other time in American history.

"That second clause of Article V was specifically intended for a time like this, when the federal government gets out of control and when the Congress won't deliver to the people what they want," said Mark Meckler, a tea party leader who now heads Citizens for Self-Governance, which runs the Convention of States Project calling for an Article V convention. Legislation promoted by the group calls for a convention focused on the federal government's budget and power, and term limits for office holders. It has passed 12 states and one legislative chamber in another 10.

The Convention of States Project says 18 other states are considering the measure.

Meckler, like other backers of a convention, believes there's no reason why it can't be limited in scope. Others aren't so sure. Four states that previously had passed resolutions calling for a convention have rescinded them in recent years, often citing wariness over a "runaway" convention.

Karen Hoberty Flynn, president of Common Cause, has sounded alarms on a possible convention and portrays the coast-to-coast emergence of resolutions on the issue "a game of Whack-a-Mole."

"This is the most dangerous idea in American politics that most people know nothing about," she said.

Nancy MacLean, a Duke University historian and author of "Democracy in Chains: The Deep History of the Radical Right's Stealth Plan for America," views the prospect of an Article V convention with fear — the next chapter of decades of work on the far right transforming the federal judiciary and supporting cases that go on to make broad constitutional points, all while suppressing votes and gerrymandering districts.

"The ultimate project," MacLean said of conservatives, "is to transform our primary rules book, which is the Constitution."

There are proponents of an Article V convention on the left who see it as a possible way to overturn the Citizens United campaign finance decision, pass the Equal Rights Amendment and otherwise address what they see as a stacked deck that has helped the GOP get an unfair advantage. But with more red states than blue ones, it seems an unlikely path to abolishing the Electoral College, re-engineering apportionment of the Senate or otherwise devising a democracy they believe is more reflective of the American public's views. In that view, it's baffling to some observers that conservatives are the ones pushing a convention.

"I don't know what exactly they're unhappy with. When I look at the current politics, it seems to me things for them are going really well," said constitutional law professor Michael Klarman of Harvard University. "They're already getting what they want from the Supreme Court. Gerrymandering is fine. Unlimited money in politics is fine. The Electoral College is OK. Voter purges, photo ID laws are OK. So I don't know exactly what they're looking for."

Meckler acknowledges the loudest voices calling for a convention are conservative. ("You look at our website, it's all right-wingers," he says.) But he sees that as a reflection of a conservative culture in which the Constitution is more frequently discussed, not a reflection of the politics of it.

It's not the first time a convention has been proposed.

In the 1890s, when the Senate refused to take up the issue of direct election of senators, states pursued a convention, falling just short. Eventually, the 17th Amendment passed in the usual way, fulfilling that aim. In the 1960s, states sought a convention over a Supreme Court decision dictating how legislative districts were apportioned.

But convention opponents have always feared that once one has been launched, it could tear up the Constitutions in all sorts of ways.

What's to stop a convention from passing an abhorrent affront to the Founders, like an outright ban on Muslims, Klarman asks. He points to a 2009 Swiss referendum that resulted in outlawing the construction of minarets, the towers found beside mosques.

Presidency faces high stakes in midterms

By Zeke Miller and Catherine Lucey
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump has been acting like a candidate on the ballot this week, staging daily double-header rallies and blasting out ads for Republicans up for election on Tuesday. Given the stakes for his presidency, he might as well be.

A knot of investigations. Partisan gridlock. A warning shot for his re-election bid. Trump faces potentially debilitating fallout should Republicans lose control of one or both chambers in Congress, ending two years of GOP hegemony in Washington. A White House that has struggled to stay on course under favorable circumstances would be tested in dramatic ways. A president who often battles his own party, would face a far less forgiving opposition.

On the flip side, if Republicans maintain control of the House and Senate, that's not only a victory for the GOP, but a validation of Trump's brand of politics and his unconventional presidency. That result, considered less likely even within the White House, would embolden the president as he launches his own re-election bid.

White House aides insist the president doesn't spend much time contemplating defeat, but he has begun to try to calibrate expectations. He has focused on the competitive Senate races the final days of his scorched-earth campaign blitz, and has distanced himself from blame should Republicans lose the House. If that happens, he intends to claim victory, arguing his efforts on the campaign trail narrowed GOP losses and helped them hold the Senate, according to a person familiar with Trump's thinking who asked for anonymity because the person was not authorized to discuss White House conversations by name.

Throughout the campaign, Trump has been tested out other explanations — pointing to historical headwinds for the party of an incumbent president and complaining about a rash of GOP retirements this year. He told the AP last month that he won't bear any responsibility should Democrats take over.

Janie Osborne/AP

At a rally in West Virginia Friday a defiant Trump brushed off the prospect of a Democratic House takeover. "It could happen," he said, adding, "Don't worry about it. I'll just figure it out."

Meanwhile his staff has begun preparations to deal with a flood of subpoenas that could arrive next year from Democrat-controlled committees and the White House counsel's office has been trying to attract seasoned lawyers to field oversight inquiries.

Should they take the House, Democrats are already plotting to reopen the House Intelligence Committee's investigation into Trump campaign's ties to Russia. Other committees are plotting aggressive oversight of Trump's administration and his web of business interests. Some Democrats are looking at using the House Ways and Means Committee to obtain copies of the president's tax returns after he broke with decades of tradition and withheld them from public scrutiny during his campaign for the White House.

A slim Republican majority in the House would also present challenges, likely inflaming simmering intra-party disputes. First among them would be a potentially bitter leadership fight in the House to replace retiring Speaker Paul Ryan. But a narrowed majority would also exacerbate divisions over policy — and continued unified control could leave the GOP facing the blame for gridlock.

"Clearly there's an awful lot on the line in terms of the legislative agenda," said Republican consultant Josh Holmes. "The prospect of a Democratic controlled House or Senate puts a serious wrinkle in getting anything through Congress."

Some in the White House think losing to Democrats might actually be preferable. They view Democrats eagerness to investigate the president as a blessing in disguise in the run-up to 2020. They view House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi as a potent foil for Trump, and believe they can tag the party responsibility for Washington dysfunction.

Ari Fleischer, George W. Bush's press secretary, said Democratic control of the House "has both peril and promise for the president."

"The peril is subpoenas, investigations, legal bills and headaches," he said. "The promise is Trump will have an easy foil to run against: Pelosi and Democratic leadership."

White House aides have discussed floating popular legislative issues, such as infrastructure, to tempt Democrats and test the unity of the Democratic opposition.

While keeping the House remained an uphill battle for the GOP, the in the closing days of the campaign, Trump and Republicans have tried to sell voters on the possibilities of another two years of GOP control. They promised hardline immigration policies and more tax cuts, arguing that Democrats would erase two years of progress.

In the closing weeks of the midterms, Trump has unleashed a no-holds-barred effort to boost Republicans as he dipped into the same undercurrents of unease that defined his 2016 campaign, from stoking fears about illegal immigration to warning of economic collapse if Democrats are victorious.

But a House loss will prompt GOP hand-wringing about the divides in the party and the struggles for moderate Republicans to run in the Trump, as well as raise questions about whether the Democratic gains point to a path for presidential hopefuls in 2020.

Democratic consultant Jim Manley said Tuesday may reveal if Democrats are having any success recapturing white working class voters in the Midwest who backed Trump in 2016.

"Trump is helping. He's becoming more and more radioactive," Manley said. "There's a chance to try and win them back over."

But while the results may reveal weaknesses in the Republican coalition, midterm elections are very different than presidential years. Republicans were quick to point out that the party in power typically suffers defeats in midterms. Former President Barack Obama was in his words "shellacked" in 2010 and went on to win re-election in 2012.

Said Fleischer: "In the aftermath people with exaggerate its meaning and in 2 years' time everything will have changed."

Trump, media get almost equal share of blame for politically motivated violence in new poll

By Scott Clement and Emily Guskin
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Both President Donald Trump and the news media are seen by nearly half of American voters as encouraging politically motivated violence, with partisans taking predictable sides in the wake of recent attacks, a new Washington Post-ABC News poll finds.

The poll finds 49 percent of registered voters say Trump, in the way he speaks, encourages politically motivated violence. Almost as many — 47 percent — say the media encourages politically motivated violence in the way it reports the news. A smaller 19 percent say Trump is discouraging violence while 15 percent say the same of the news media, while roughly 3 in 10 say each is neither encouraging nor discouraging violence.

As is often the case, partisans are nearly complete opposites in the poll. A 76 percent majority of Democrats say Trump is encouraging politically motivated violence while 69 percent of Republicans say the same about the news media in the way they report the news. Among political independents, roughly half see Trump and the media alike as encouraging political violence.

A separate question finds 69 percent of voters saying "reducing political divisions between people and groups in this country" is a very important issue in their vote for Congress or one of the most important issues. Democrats have a significant advantage on this issue, with 46 percent saying they trust them more to reduce political divisions compared with 31 percent who trust Republicans more. A sizable 17 percent minority of voters volunteer that "neither" party is more trustworthy in reducing divisions between people and groups in the United States, a view that peaks at 25 percent among political independents.

The survey was conducted shortly after a mass shooter killed 11 worshipers at a Pittsburgh synagogue and another person mailed possible package bombs to prominent critics of Trump. Critics have blamed Trump for stoking anti-Semitic conspiracy theories and broader racial and political divisions that might have inspired the attacks.

Trump denounced the attacks and rejected claims he is responsible for fostering an environment that encourages them, calling for national unity and blaming anger in society on "purposely false and inaccurate reporting in the Mainstream Media that I refer to as Fake News."

The Post-ABC poll finds that while almost half of voters believe Trump's rhetoric and media coverage are encouraging violence, a relatively small 16 percent fault both Trump and the media.

A larger 33 percent of voters say Trump, but not the media, is encouraging violence. A similar 32 percent say the media, not Trump, is encouraging violence. The rest say that neither are encouraging violence, or have no opinion.

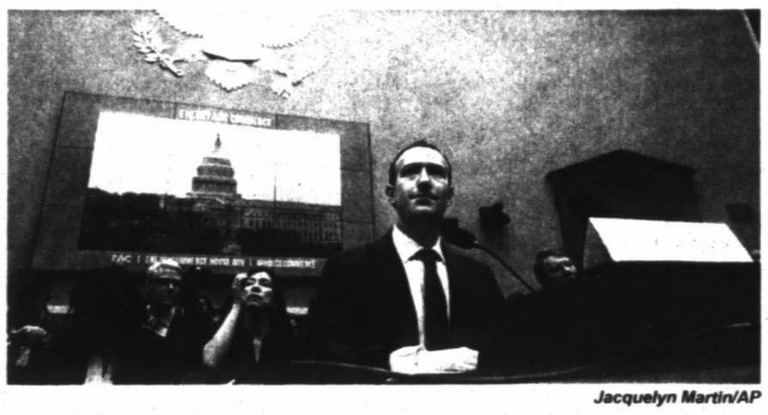

On the broader question of reducing the nation's divisions, voters largely side with their own party, though Democrats are more united than Republicans. Nearly 9 in 10 Democrats, 87 percent, trust their party more to reduce divisions between people and groups in the U.S., while a somewhat smaller 73 percent of Republicans trust the GOP. A quarter of independents trust neither party, while 41 percent trust Democrats and 24 percent trust Republicans more.

Despite deep partisan divisions, the poll finds a break from the partisan seesaw in whether voters see Trump and the media "discouraging" politically motivated violence. Just over 3 in 10 Republicans, 31 percent, say Trump is discouraging violence, compared with 16 percent of independents and 13 percent of Democrats. But fewer than 2 in 10 Democrats (19 percent) say the same about the media, dipping further to 14 percent among both Republicans and independents.

The Post-ABC poll was conducted via cellphone and landline telephone Oct. 29 to Nov. 1 among 1,041 registered voters and carries an error margin of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points.

Social media's misinformation battle: No winners, so far

By Barbara Ortutay
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Facebook and other social platforms have been fighting online misinformation and hate speech for two years. With the U.S. midterm elections just a few days away, there are signs that they're making some headway, although they're still a very long way from winning the war.

That's because the effort risks running into political headwinds that Facebook, Twitter and Google find bad for business. Some even argue that the social networks are easy to flood with disinformation by design — an unintended consequence of their eagerness to cater to advertisers by categorizing the interests of their users.

Caught embarrassingly off-guard after they were played by Russian agents meddling with the 2016 U.S. elections, the technology giants have thrown millions of dollars, tens of thousands of people and what they say are their best technical efforts into fighting fake news, propaganda and hate that has proliferated on their digital platforms.

Facebook, in particular, has pulled a major reversal since late 2016, when CEO Mark Zuckerberg infamously dismissed the idea that fake news on his service could have swayed the election as "pretty crazy." In July, for instance, the company announced that heavy spending on security and content moderation, coupled with other business shifts, would hold down growth and profitability. Investors immediately panicked and knocked $119 billion off the company's market value.

The social network has started to see some payoff for its efforts. A research collaboration between New York University and Stanford recently found that user "interactions" with fake news stories on Facebook, which rose substantially in 2016 during the presidential campaign, fell significantly between the end of 2016 and July 2018. On Twitter, however, the sharing of such stories continued to rise over the past two years.

A similar measure from the University of Michigan's Center for Social Media Responsibility dubbed the "Iffy Quotient" — which gauges the prevalence of "iffy" material on social networks — also shows that Facebook's "iffiness" has fallen from a high of 8.1 percent In March 2017 to 3.2 percent on Monday. Twitter iffiness has also fallen slightly, from 5.6% in November 2016, to 4.2 percent on Monday.

Even at these levels, fake news remains huge and may be spreading to new audiences. A team led by Philip Howard, the lead researcher on Oxford's Computational Propaganda effort, looked at stories shared on Twitter during the last 10 days of September 2018 and found that what it called "junk news" accounted for a full quarter of all links shared during that time — greater than the number of professional news stories shared during that time.

The team defined junk news as sources that published deceptive or incorrect information, often in an ideological or conspiratorial way, while failing to meet criteria such as professionalism, bias, credibility and style.

While the Oxford analysis didn't produce similar figures for Facebook, the researchers did map out how junk news circulates on the social network and found that conspiracy theories and other misinformation once confined to a "hard right" audience are now shared more freely among mainstream conservatives as well. (Left-leaning users have also developed a taste for junk news, the Oxford team found, but it represents only a small fraction of the material they share on Facebook.)

Such studies offer imperfect pictures of what's actually happening on social networks, since the services typically don't offer researchers untrammeled access to their data. Twitter, for instance, takes issue with the Oxford study, noting that it used a public feed of tweets that doesn't reflect the filtering Twitter does to remove malicious or spammy material.

Tamping down misinformation, of course, is anything but easy. Adversaries are always finding new ways around restrictions. It can also be hard to distinguish misinformation and propaganda from legitimate news, especially when world leaders such as President Donald Trump are regularly disseminating falsehoods on social media.

Politics also complicates matters, since the social-media companies are anxious to avoid charges of political bias. When Facebook, Google's YouTube and, eventually, Twitter all banned the conspiracymonger Alex Jones for various violations of their terms of service, Jones and his allies immediately claimed he was being censored. President Trump chimed in a few weeks later with a parallel charge, claiming without evidence that Google and other companies were "suppressing voices of Conservatives and hiding information and news that is good."

Twitter, in fact, charges that researchers such as the Oxford team define "junk news" too broadly. The group, for instance, classes conservative sites such as Breitbart News and the Daily Caller as "junk" by its criteria. Twitter argues that banning "media outlets that reflect views within American society" would "severely hinder public debate."

Some critics charge that the very advertising-based business model that made Zuckerberg rich is also perfectly suited for propagandists. Services like Facebook and Twitter "sustain themselves by finding like-minded groups and selling information about their behavior," Dipayan Ghosh, a former privacy policy expert at Facebook and Ben Scott, senior adviser at New America, wrote in a Time Magazine op-ed earlier this year. "Disinformation propagators sustain themselves by manipulating the behavior of like-minded groups."

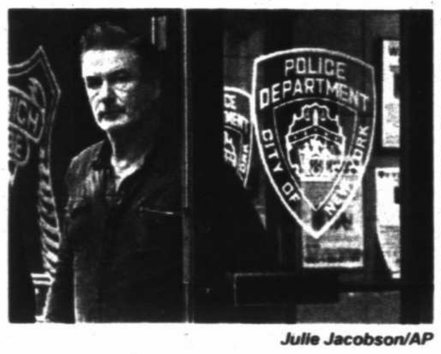

"They don't self-regulate," said Dora Kingsley Vertenten, a professor of public policy at the University of Southern California and CEO of research consulting firm Trenton West. "They just want to make a profit, and what they have done to date is not nearly enough."

Really fixing the misinformation problem might require big changes to how these services work. Users started spending less time on Facebook after it made changes to make its service more "meaningful" to users, involving less scrolling through posts and more interactions with friends, the company said.

Twitter CEO Jack Dorsey has hinted that he is open to drastic changes , but he hasn't yet said what they might look like. And there haven't been any obvious shifts since he made that statement in August.

Alec Baldwin says he didn't punch man in parking dispute

Associated Press

Julie Jacobson/AP

Actor Alec Baldwin walks out of the New York Police Department's 10th Precinct on Friday in New York.

NEW YORK — Alec Baldwin is denying that he punched anyone over a parking spot and says an assault allegation is being reported "for the purposes of clickbait entertainment."

The actor was arrested Friday and charged with assault and harassment after allegedly hitting another man in the face during a dispute over a parking spot in New York City.

Baldwin's publicist declined to comment after the arrest. But the actor later tweeted from the account of the Hilaria and Alec Baldwin Foundation that "the assertion that I punched anyone over a parking spot is false. I wanted to go on the record stating as much."

Baldwin complained that it's become "a sport" to tag people with as many "negative charges and defaming allegations as possible for the purposes of clickbait entertainment."

Baldwin, 60, told police a family member was holding the spot in front of his Manhattan home when a man driving a Saab station wagon pulled up and took it.

The driver of the station wagon told police Baldwin hit him with his hand, but he wasn't sure if it was a punch or a slap.

Police said the 49-year-old driver complained of jaw pain and redness in the neck area and was taken to a hospital. It wasn't clear from his tweets whether the specific allegation that Baldwin wanted to refute was that he punched the other man or some other aspect of the story. His publicist said she had no comment.

Baldwin was released from the local police precinct in Manhattan's Greenwich Village neighborhood after about two hours. He was ordered to appear in court Nov. 26.

Baldwin, the star of former television sitcom "30 Rock" and current host of "Match Game," plays President Donald Trump on "Saturday Night Live" and recently started a talk show on ABC.

Report: Amazon in 'advanced talks' to build new HQ near DC

By Ken Sweet
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Retail giant Amazon Inc. is in "advanced talks" to open its second headquarters in the Washington, D.C., metropolitan area, The Washington Post reported Saturday.

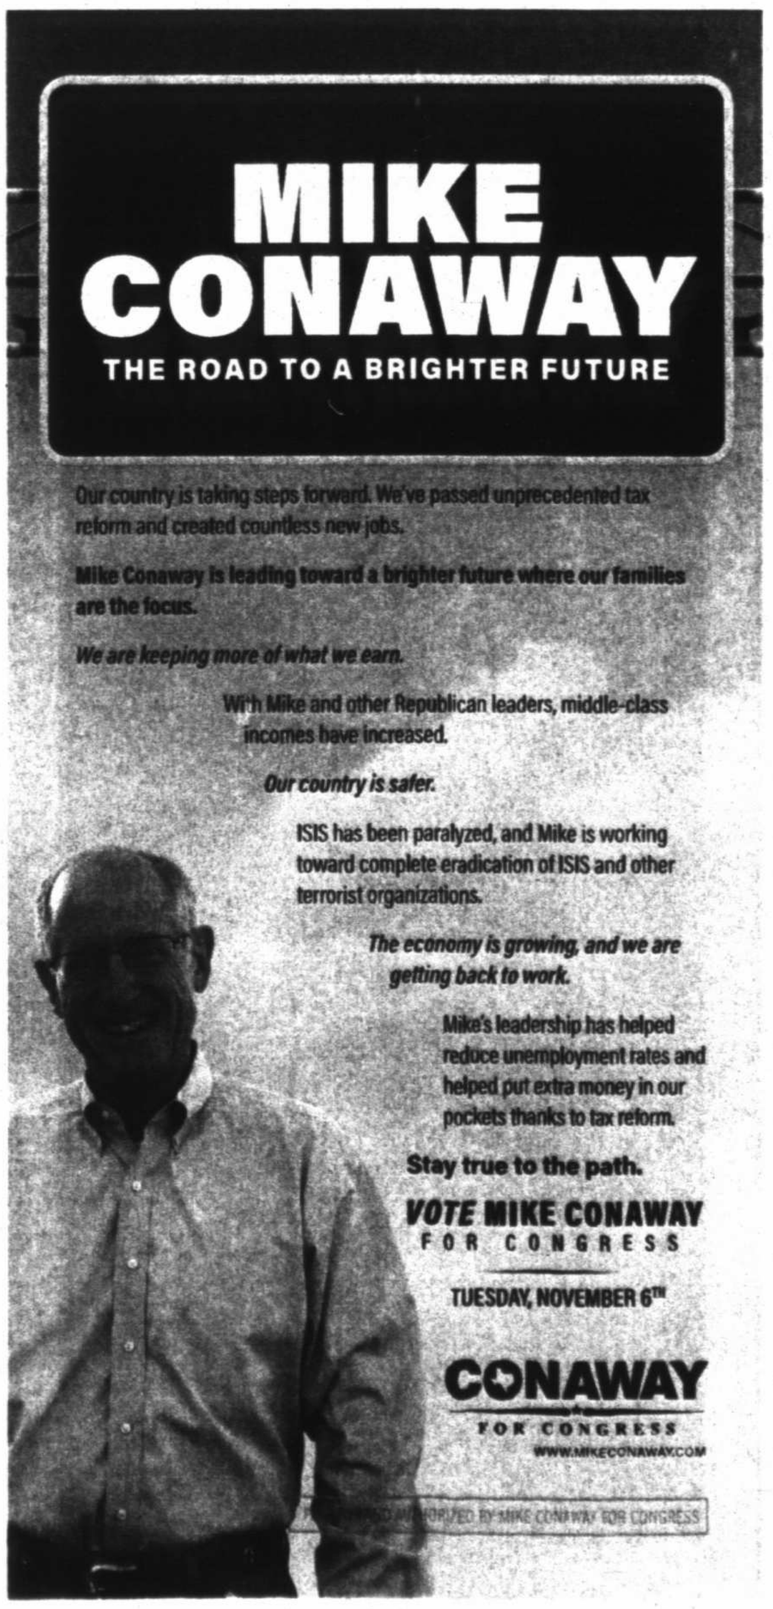

Amazon, based in Seattle, is apparently seriously considering an area known as Crystal City. It's a large residential and office complex in Arlington, Virginia, just south of Washington, the Post said, citing unidentified sources.

Amazon announced last year that the retail giant was looking to open a second headquarters somewhere in the U.S., bringing with it as many as 50,000 new jobs. Several state and local governments threw their hats in the ring, offering Amazon millions in tax incentives if they opened their new headquarters in their city.

The Washington metropolitan area was long considered a top contender for Amazon's second headquarters. Company founder and Chief Executive Officer Jeff Bezos already had several connections to the Washington area. He's the owner of The Washington Post and owns a home in the area. When the company announced a list of 20 top contenders in January, it included both Washington as well as Montgomery County, Maryland, which is just north of D.C.

Crystal City is served by a mass transit system and major highways, both qualifications that Amazon has said is required for its new headquarters as well.

Because Amazon is reportedly in "advanced talks" does not mean the deal is certain. Shortly after the Post published its story, Mike Grella, Amazon's economic development director, posted on Twitter, "Memo to the genius leaking info about Crystal City, VA as #HQ2 selection. You're not doing Crystal City, VA any favors."

Those that have not voted yet I would encourage you to vote Thomas Wolfmueller on Tuesday. I have been on the forefront of listening to many issues at MISD during this campaign. At times it seems overwhelming, but I know I have the fortitude to stand up for the education of all of our students at MISD.

I would like to point out what separates me from my opponents. John Trischitti is a county library worker. He has given a Ted talk on literacy and has served on several boards. John has a PAC backing his campaign, and they would like you to think that things at MISD are not as bad as they are in reality.

Heidi Kirk is a former teacher. I am not a librarian or a teacher. I am an engineer. I believe in the importance of literacy as most everyone does, and my only

Unique perspective makes Kirk right choice for school board

Three months ago, running for an elected office was not in my sights. It was not something I ever really wanted to do. As a matter of fact, I have been known to say that the people who we want to run would never really do so because of what they would subject themselves and their families to.

Nevertheless, here we are now. I am running for school board to represent the constituents in District 5, the teachers and staff in our schools, the students and the parents, and to help heal a broken district.

What changed? I spoke at a board meeting and a parent heard me speak positively about the desperate need for change and the positive approach I believe we should take to fix it. I offered myself up as a willing participant to work for that change. I spoke of the need to partner with the district as we call for changes to the system.

Even at that time, I spoke of the

We need leaders that understand their role, produces positive results

By John Trischitti

I am seeking to serve the community in the capacity of MISD Trustee District 5 because I am a believer in the power that education can have on a student's life and I want that opportunity for all students in our community. I see our best years are ahead of us for public education in Midland.

As the Director of the Midland County Public Libraries and a father of five public school children, I have seen the impact education can have on a life. I am the only candidate with extensive experience working for and with a taxing entity and understand government budgeting and board governance. I have served on boards for local and state nonprofits, including Midland Need to Read and the Salvation Army and currently serving on the Midland Airport Board, and I am also a Texas PTA Life member.

All of these experiences have prepared me to serve the community in the role of school board member. As the district and community move forward, we face challenges from facilities and how to handle larger-than-average growth, to the recruitment and retention of Campaign based on wanting best for 'my kids'

Party

By Lauren Party

First of all, I want to thank the Midland community for taking interest in this year's school board election. You have given the candidates excellent questions to answer and brought up many great ideas and valuable insight. I've been asked many times why I care about improving the district when I don't have kids who attend MISD schools. Many teachers will understand and relate when I say that your students become "your kids." I'm doing this for my former students, "my kids." Believe me when I say I want the absolute best for all MISD students. I believe that the district is on a path to success and I want to be on that journey.

As a former teacher, I can relate to the problems many teachers may be facing. I understand them, and I want them to know that I will back them and advocate for them to the best of my abilities. Teaching is

This is a great opportunity for a public thank you note, so I would first like to take advantage of that. Thank you to my wonderful family, my friends, and to everyone who has shown me support throughout this process. To my wife and my son — thank you for your patience and your investment in me. Whether for this or for any other venture in life, I know you are always by my side. Thank you to all my family for your unwavering support in everything I have ever done. I love you all very much. I could not be more grateful for the many blessings in my life and for the grace of God.

For anyone who doesn't know much about me and who has not yet voted, this is my last opportunity to tell you about myself. My platform is simple — I am a young dad with a passion for public education. I want to work to enable the lifelong success of all MISD students. Getting there means I want to help transform our district into the best place to work, teach and attend school to get an education in the state of Texas.

Experience with transformation makes Davis uniquely qualified

By Rick Davis

This past Tuesday, I attended an extraordinary public conference entitled "Shifting Toward A System of Great Schools Conference" led by David Osborne, the author of "Reinventing America's Schools: Creating a 21st Century Education System." It was organized by MISD, generously sponsored by Educate Midland and conducted at the Petroleum Museum's conference center. Its purpose was to assist MISD in its goal of becoming a System of Great Schools which your school board trustees have set as a goal for this district.

The term "System of Great Schools" is not merely a slogan, but a specific school district-governing philosophy whereby a district provides a variety of school choices to students on where and how they pursue their educational goals. It is an

Texas Senate race struggles with identity crisis

RUBEN NAVARRETTE
Washington Post

Once again, the eyes of the nation are upon Texas. This time, our gaze is fixed on a bizarre Senate race where neither of the candidates appears comfortable enough in his own skin to go by his given name.

Republican incumbent Rafael Cruz prefers to go by "Ted," while the Democratic challenger Robert Francis O'Rourke wants you to call him "Beto."

In some states, politicians are defined by where they stand on issues. In Texas, the Senate candidates appear to be struggling with identity issues.

People in the Lone Star State like to say, "Don't mess with Texas." But, as someone who lived in Dallas for five years, I have to wonder: Why are these two Texans so messed up?

Cruz explained in his 2015 autobiography that he went with "Ted" because "Rafael" often became "Felito" and the kids he grew up with teased him over the nickname. His mom suggested other variations, and he settled on Ted — which is a long way from Rafael.

The road from "Robert" to "Beto" is shorter, but still — in the case of O'Rourke — not exactly a direct route.

The legend — which I've heard often from Latino Democrats — is that the evolution was organic. A bunch of Latino friends who grew up with O'Rourke in El Paso must have taken a liking to him and made him an honorary Mexican. They dubbed him "Beto." It had nothing to do with politics, or a cynical attempt to trick Latinos into thinking he was one of them.

Still, I have to admit, I like the fairy tale that O'Rourke's Latino supporters are spreading about how he supposedly "became Latino" by growing up around Latinos. Let's call that "LBO" — Latino by Osmosis.

I want in. I love the Armenian people. I was raised near one of the Armenian capitals of the United States: Fresno, California. Under Beto's law, I could be "ABO" — Armenian by Osmosis. But wait. I also respect the Armenian people. And saying that growing up around them made me one of them would be presumptuous — and disrespectful.

Meanwhile, Democrats have long accused Cruz of "trying to be white." Mexicans-Americans like to poke him for leaving "Rafael" behind and opting for an Anglicized alternative like "Ted."

That's how we roll. Mexican-Americans are always waiting for one of our own to disappoint us, betray us, or sell us out. And those of us who are plagued with insecurities tend to suspect that some in our tribe would like to be white.

I myself have often quipped that I'd like to be reincarnated as a white male because I'm tired of working so hard. Besides, I'm eager to see what's beyond the golden door and find out what privilege tastes like.

Sadly, there aren't enough couches in the entire Southwest to let all those Mexican-Americans who are confused about identity sort through our issues. They affect how we see ourselves — and everyone else.

And speaking of privilege, O'Rourke — who is being treated like a rock star by liberals in Hollywood and the left-leaning East Coast media — has a free pass on the issue of cultural appropriation.

While all this is going on, liberal media elites felt the urge to register their outrage about "blackface" after Megyn Kelly said that she didn't see a problem with the racist concept growing up. Kelly may soon see her way to the unemployment line, as her high-paying job at NBC News appears to be in jeopardy.

Liberals baffle me. They're dumbfounded that someone could miss the offensiveness of posing as an African-American. But, in Texas, they're trying to help elect someone who is posing as a Latino.

Approach of midterms brings rise in political scams

HEATHER MASSEY
Permian Basin Better Business Bureau

Election day is only a few days away and it's common around this time of year to receive phone calls from political pollsters asking questions about how you plan to vote, and scammers mimic those legitimate calls. Better Business Bureau is warning consumers about these common political scams and frauds to watch out for this election season.

■ Fundraising

You get a call from someone claiming to represent a political candidate, raising money to support the campaign. Consumers report that callers are typically pushy and demand immediate action. Even if the caller is not a scammer, some groups may be poorly managed and not actually spend the money the way they describe on the phone.

■ Polling

The call is from someone claiming to be conducting a political survey. After asking several legitimate-sounding survey questions, the caller typically then asks you to provide your credit card number to pay for the shipping and taxes of a "prize" you've won for taking the survey.

■ Impersonation

You get a call that sounds like one of the candidates, or perhaps even the president, asking you to make a special contribution. This scam uses real audio clips of politicians' voices, likely lifted from speeches or media interviews. At some point, the politician will ask for a donation and request that you push a button to be redirected to an agent, who will then collect your credit card information. Since real politicians use prerecorded calls, it's challenging to tell which ones are fake.

In all of these cases, sharing your personally identifiable information and/or financial accounts can open you up to the risk of fraudulent charges and even future identity theft. Although these examples are primarily telephone scams, fraudsters can use other methods to reach you; mail, email, social media, text or even showing up at your front door.

need for the community to rise up and participate in the transformation we are calling for. Now, at this time, I speak to the community about the need for the village to rise up and help bring change. As a parent of six very different children, I understand, very deeply, parents' concerns about their children's needs not being met in school.

As a former teacher, I understand the need for a cultural transformation within our schools and district to create a place where teachers, students, and staff feel safe, valued, and empowered to be the best versions of themselves.

As a lifelong learner who is not a traditional student, I understand the need for academic accountability and balance in meeting the needs of a diverse student population and a changing 21st century world.

And, as a community member and businesswoman, I understand the need for fiscal accountability to build trust with the taxpayers and create a fiscally responsible bond to meet the growing district's needs.

I am a parent. I am an educator. I am a community member. I am committed to education. When I speak of education, I don't speak of my passion for it, although I am passionate about it. Instead, I speak of my commitment to it. I speak of my family's roots in education and its importance. I speak of my experience as a university enrollment and finance advisor, as a high school English teacher, as a nontraditional lifelong student, as a special needs and gifted and talented parent, and as a community volunteer who spends time and money in our schools.

I have a unique perspective to bring to the board. I truly am MISD, not because of the school board election, but because it's what I do. We spend our time doing the things we value. I value MISD. I spend my time in MISD.

And, I believe in the power our community has to bring change to MISD. I am known to ask the tough questions because I asked them as a teacher, as a community member, and as a parent.

Now, you have the power to help me ask those questions as a member of the school board. #ItsTimeWeHadATeacher talented people to be teachers and leaders for the next generation of Midland community members.

And, to be honest, it's time we had so much more. Vote for me, Heidi Kirk, if you are ready for change.

The next few years are going to be vital as we face the potential of a school bond to deal with long-term infrastructure and capacity issues, continue to work toward a being a "System of Great Schools" and have accountability to the community. The Midland community is known for its "Midland Spirit" using hard work, honesty and collaboration to address issues, no matter how daunting they appear to be. A quality public education is something that we can provide to every student, and should. We will need leaders that understand their role and can immediately affect positive results. Understanding the role of the school board is vital to the success of the district. Allowing teachers to teach, supporting decisions made at the campus level and belief in the bottom up model of education are going to be key in the coming years as this district continues to evolve to meet the demands of this generation of students.

I envision a public education system in Midland that is meeting the needs of every student and equipping them for all avenues of life. Whether that be higher education, career, vocational training, military service or another path, we need to be giving students the best possible opportunities and supporting educators by providing the tool necessary to make that a reality.

I respectfully ask for your vote this Tuesday.

with my faith and my family. I am a member of Crestview Baptist Church and I am married to my high school sweetheart, Lauren. We have a 2-year-old son named Brooks and a 3-year-old, 75-pound 'puppy' named Chip. I am a former MISD student myself, having spent six years in the district as a child. I graduated from Seagraves High School just more than 80 miles away, followed by Texas Tech University in Lubbock with a degree in Computer Engineering. I have worked in the defense, technology and energy sectors in my professional career; and I recently completed my MBA from Mississippi State University. My expertise is in advanced technology and data analytics, concepts that are closely related to solving some of our district's most pressing issues.

My premise as a board trustee is not that I have all the answers, but that I am willing to ask all the right questions. I am ready to listen, to engage and to act accordingly. I will leverage my personal, educational and professional experience to bring about new ways of thinking on our board. I will recognize and acknowledge the things we do well, and I will challenge the way we do things where I see opportunities.

As you evaluate your options in this election, I ask you to consider the following. The incumbent in this race has been in office for 10 years. Over that period, this is the first time you have been presented with a choice regarding who sits in that seat. Are you satisfied with the state of MISD? Over 10 years, can you find demonstrative evidence that our district has progressed more than it has regressed? Are we doing enough to address our most pressing issues such as retaining, developing and supporting our teachers? Is it acceptable that over 80 percent of Texas school districts outperformed MISD in academic accountability ratings last year?

I recently received yet another mailer from the campaign of the incumbent. In a large font, it states that I should "support Midland schools" by voting a certain way. I do support Midland schools, so I voted for Austin Beam. If you find yourself in Midland's District 6, I encourage you to do the same.

Obituaries

Brenda Joyce Nathan Hamilton

Brenda Joyce Nathan Hamilton of Midland, Texas passed away Sunday, October 28, 2018 at the age of 70. Brenda was born October 1, 1948 to Maxine Smith and Willie Jesse Nathan in Stanton, TX. She attended Washington Elementary and graduated from Bishop College in Dallas, Texas, and later moved to Seattle, Washington where she was a medical nurse at Harborview Medical Center.

She moved back to Midland in 1988. She was employed with MISD at Viola Coleman High School as nurse until she retired in 2011. She was fanatic about her privilege to vote and worked diligently for the Democratic Party, when her health permitted. She was very outspoken, loved attending Carver school reunions and spending time with family and friends. Her greatest love was for her children, grandchildren, and great grand-children. There was nothing she wouldn't do for them.

She leaves to cherish her memory one daughter, Conjetta Nathan, two sons; James Andrew Richardson, Jr. and Royce Pegues (Frances); two sisters Lillie Harmon of Las Vegas, NV and Yolanda Jackson (Elmore) of Houston, TX. one brother Gary Nathan (Hattie) of Midland, TX, sister-in-law Diane Nathan, eight grandchildren; six great-grandchildren; and a host of relatives and friends. She was preceded in death by her mother, father and brother Willie James Nathan.

Special thanks to Dorothy Goodley and Evang. Archia Word during Brenda's illness.

Visitation will be Monday, November 5, 2018 4-8pm at Jackie Warren Funeral Home.

Services will be held Tuesday, November 6 2018 at Lighthouse Pentecostal Church, 200 North Lincoln Street in Midland, TX. at 11:00 am. Bishop Barak Stanford will be officiating.

Jere Lyn Blocker

Jere Lyn Blocker, age 82, died peacefully on October 29, 2018. Beloved wife of Col. Norman K. Blocker (U.S. Air Force, retired), loving mother of daughter Norlynn Blocker Price (Harrison) and son Byron Keith Blocker (Debby), irreplaceable "Jer Jer" to grandchildren Cody Blocker (Briana), Ryan Blocker (Victoria), Kelsey Blocker Grommes (Sean), Hannah Price and Abigail Price and to great-grandchildren Kali Blocker and Luke Blocker. Jere was the daughter of the late Rev. Ernest B. Coon and Jimmie Rowe Coon of Tunnel Hill, GA and was preceded in death by her sisters, Lee King and Bette Chesser.

Born in Graham, TX on July 28, 1936 and the daughter of an itinerant Baptist preacher, Jere and her family lived in 15 different towns before she married Norm, an officer in the Air Force. During her marriage, Jere and Norm lived in another 10 different places before settling permanently in Albuquerque in 1979. Jere graduated from Howard Payne University in Brownwood, TX, obtaining a double degree in theater and secondary education with a concentration in English. She taught middle school drama and English for a few years before devoting all of her time and energy to her family. Years later, with her two children still living at home, Jere obtained a master's degree in Speech-Language Pathology from the University of New Mexico (with a 4.0 GPA!) and became certified as a speech-language pathologist. Jere served for several years as a speech pathologist, working primarily with children in public schools and in various Native American pueblo communities in the Albuquerque area. She ultimately became the East Region Coordinator of Special Education for Albuquerque Public Schools, the position from which she retired in 2001.

Jere was a lifelong learner, amateur political commentator, voracious reader, and grammarian; she loved sharing her expertise in all of these topics with her family at any given opportunity.

Jere's big personality and even bigger heart will be missed by her family, whom she loved to feed, entertain and shower with gifts, particularly at birthdays and during the Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter holidays.

A celebration of Jere's life will take place on Sunday, November 18, 2018 at 3:00 p.m. at FRENCH Funerals in Albuquerque, NM. Reception following. An interment service will take place at a later date at the Texas State Veterans Cemetery at Abilene, TX. Please visit our online guestbook for Jere at www.FrenchFunerals.com

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

County judge

There is alternative to Johnson as county leader

There have been many letters supporting candidates. I haven't seen one asking about the proverbial elephant in the room. That elephant is how Terry Johnson led and planned a parade that was so poorly planned four people were killed by a train and many injured with life-changing injuries.

If Terry Johnson is that negligent of a planner, how can we trust him to be our county judge, who is essentially the county executive?

There is an alternative to Johnson. Steven Schafersman is an intelligent, quiet man who can be a fine leader for our county. Vote for him.

David Rosen

441st District Court

Robnett will treat clients fairly, with dignity

I am a Democrat, an Odessa attorney, and I have no interest except ensuring that my Midland County clients are treated fairly and with dignity.

With this in mind, I ask that Midland County elect Jeff Robnett for the 441st District Court.

Jeff's curiosity is a great quality. The law always changes, and a judge should have the curiosity to question, research, and continue to learn the law. A judge shouldn't just "do it the way it's always been done." Jeff will ensure that Midland County has another judge that is curious and up-to-date on current law.

You are most likely to be in court for a criminal or family law case and, in both instances, Jeff will give you a fair shot under the law, treat you with respect, and have the courage to make rulings based on the law, not his emotions.

Jeff has the courage to make difficult decisions based on law, not emotion. He's shown the courage to fight for unsympathetic clients with the same tenacity he had when fighting for sympathetic clients.

Vote Jeff Robnett.

Anthony Robles
Odessa

Robnett is defined by faith, family, friendships

Good judges are a blessing; great judges reflect the community from which they spring.

In Jeff Robnett, my lifelong friend, find a man who is defined by his faith, family and friendships to be such a judge. No greater preparation for the role of a great judge is there than the crucible of life, from which Robnett willingly accepts each lesson as a blessing in preparation for service. Regardless where his faith has taken him since his youth in Midland, he has always returned to serve this community.

In this sprint to fill the role of judge in the 441st District Court seat, I pray my friends, that you accept Jeff Robnett's service and put him to work as another of the great judges of Texas.

W. Allen Manning
Dallas

Robnett's experience will serve him well

I have known Jeff Robnett for many years. He is an experienced, hardworking trial attorney, and has handled a variety of both civil and criminal cases. His experience in jury trials and knowledge of the trial process will serve well as a judge.

He is also a devoted family man possessing Christian values and is a conservative Republican.

I hope you will join me in voting for him for 441st District judge.

Wayne Frost

Robnett is intelligent, detailed, caring

I am supporting Jeff Robnett for 441st District Court judge. I have known Jeff for 11 years. In a professional role, I have known Jeff as my opposing counsel when I was a prosecutor and as one of my supervisors when he was a school board trustee and I worked for the school district. In both of those roles Jeff was always professional, prepared and respectful.

I also know Jeff as a friend. He is intelligent, detailed and caring, and as a judge will most certainly be impartial, deliberative and just.

I believe Jeff will be a great judge for Midland, and I would be honored to practice in front of him someday.

I encourage you to vote Republican. Vote for Jeff Robnett.

Leah Robertson

Robnett has provided excellent counsel

I want to endorse Mr. Jeff Robnett, candidate for 441st District judge. Jeff is very professional and knowledgeable regarding the law and how it is handled. Jeff, a conservative man with conservative values, is needed for the role of a judge.

According to the Rule 1.2 of the American Bar Association Model Code of Judicial Conduct, "A judge shall act at all times in a manner that promotes public confidence in the independence, integrity, and impartiality of the judiciary, and shall avoid impropriety and the appearance of impropriety."

This is the person I know Jeff Robnett to be. He has provided Midland with an honest approach in handling cases of civil, family and criminal law for many years. He has provided excellent council and has shown to be an upstanding and dedicated family man. I am proud to endorse Jeff Robnett.

As citizens, we have the right to vote and need to exercise that right by voting in this midterm election. Midland, Texas, and our nation are in turmoil. By exercising our rights and electing appropriate, conservative candidates of integrity can we turn our city, state, and country around and make it great again.

Mona Caswell

Robnett is trustworthy, honest, dependable

As a Martin County resident, I wish I could vote for Jeff Robnett. I have known him since birth because he was raised in our church family. The young lad moved to Midland but continued to be a part of Martin County by helping folks here.

He and Dila, and their precious children make up a very special home. The joyous welcoming reception one receives upon entering lets you know there is an abundance of love and acceptance within the walls of their "white house."

I am proud to say this fine Christian lawyer is representing my parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Clements.

Please vote. Jeff Robnett for 441st District, Court Judge. I know him to be trustworthy, honest, and dependable.

Beverly Ritter

Robnett is knowledgeable, experienced

I write this in support of Jeff Robnett for 441st District judge. Please know up front that I am the most biased supporter he has. I am his wife. There is no one else better-qualified or who knows him better than I do. I have seen him open his heart up to children and love them fiercely as his own — seven of them, plus my oldest child, all of whom he adopted.

I have seen him stand by me in times of need and by our family, friends and even strangers. I have seen him care for clients that no one else cared about at all hours of the day and night. It infuriated me at first when he would stop family time to help a client, but I soon understood that this is what made him a special kind of lawyer. And this is what the job required.

My husband deserves to be elected to be the next judge of the 441st and Midland deserves him. He is intelligent, knowledgeable, experienced and has integrity. He is also the funniest person I've ever met. He's the perfect combination to be a great judge.

He could use work on carrying out the trash, though.

Dila Robnett

County will be well-served by Robnett as judge

I have known Jeff Robnett since we started law school in 1986.

Throughout our time there, he has shown himself to be a scholar of the law and a man of character and integrity. Jeff and I have remained friends throughout the years, and his steadfast adherence to the law and moral compass have never wavered. While he is a man of words, his words are backed by his deeds.

I have been a practicing attorney for nearly 30 years and have practiced in front of many judges. What I have discovered is that you need a judge that does not care who is in front of him. You need a judge that cares what the law is and how it is properly applied to the facts before him.

Jeff Robnett is that man, and Midland County will be served well by him as the next judge of the 441st District Court.

City council at-large seat

Gardaphe has business knowledge, expertise

I want to stress the importance of getting out to vote. Each and every election is important, and this one is no exception. Our national, state, and local races should be your top priority on Tuesday.

Chase Gardaphe and his third-generation Midlander wife, Annabelle, have chosen Midland as home to raise their two young children. He has a vested interest in the continued success and growth that Midland is experiencing. Chase has the business knowledge and expertise that will ensure Midland's rapid development will be positive. He is accessible and attends various functions to be available to all Midlanders.

Please join me in voting for fellow Republican Chase Gardaphe.

Sue Brannon

Gardaphe has unique insights into city's challenges

As Midland faces the challenges associated with its rapid growth, it is important that it have leaders like Chase Gardaphe. His experience as chairman of the Planning and Zoning Commission and as a real estate developer provides him with unique insights into how best to tackle some of the most difficult of those challenges, such as affordable workforce housing. It also provides him with hands-on experience in the inter-workings of the various city departments tasked with managing many of the key issues that arise out of that growth.

Chase's focus on responsible development, improving Midland's infrastructure and eliminating inefficiencies from the city budget will further his goal of creating a city that will provide all of our children with better opportunities.

At a time when Midland needs its next generation to step into more impactful leadership roles, I am grateful for Chase's willingness to serve and encourage you to join me in voting for Chase Gardaphe for one of the two at-large seats on the Midland City Council.

William K. Abney

Gardaphe can bring experience to council

To serve a city it takes commitment. I know — I served on the Planning and Zoning Commission, the City Council and as mayor of Midland. It takes time and commitment to learn city government, and Chase Gardaphe has done just that by serving on the Planning and Zoning Commission. That is how I learned city government and then served on the City Council.

As past mayor, I fully support Chase and the experience he can bring to the City Council.

On Nov. 6 we all have a civic responsibility to elect leadership who can best serve all of Midland. Chase is the person who will commit to serve all of Midland. As citizens, we don't always see what the city leadership is doing for us by keeping our roads safe, water and sewer infrastructure up-to-date and staying ahead of future growth. Chase's experience on Planning and Zoning has taught him this value.

Join me in voting for Chase Gardaphe on Nov. 6 — a true leader for Midland's future.

Edwin H. Magruder Jr.

Gardaphe is committed to residents of Midland

I support chase Gardaphe for City Council. I have personally known Chase for over 10 years.

I know him as a devoted husband, loving father, a hard-working and honest business man and an exceptional son-in-law.

He brings to Midland the hope of a better place to raise children and a better place to do business. He has the experience and skill set to make it happen. He believes the opportunities are endless in our community.

Chase is well-educated and driven to not only be successful for himself and his family, but to enable others to be successful as well. He has the vision and desire to promote opportunity for growth of families and businesses in our community that he wants to be a major part of.

He is an active real estate developer, and with his vision for growth in our community, he designed and built a manufactured housing development in northeast Midland. He specializes in affordable housing. To further commit to his community, he sits on the Planning and Zoning Commission and is involved in numerous nonprofit organizations in Midland.

He would be an excellent addition to represent the city and its residents.

Gardaphe willing to consider all sides of an issue

I would like to write in my support of Chase Gardaphe for at-large City Council in the coming election.

I have worked with Chase since 2014, and have witnessed firsthand his interactions with the public, in particular the residents of Stonegate Manufactured Housing Community, and know that he is considerate, attentive and an intelligent man willing to consider all sides of any issue.

Through his involvement in the community by serving as chairman of Planning & Zoning, chairman of Midland Chapter of Stewards of the Wild and advisory board member for the Tall City Tomorrow, Chase truly demonstrates his compassion and dedication to Midland and his fellow Midlanders.

Please join me in voting for Chase Gardaphe for at-large City Council on Nov. 6.

Energized, experienced, focused says it all.

Kathy DeBusman

Gardaphe has experience, academic and business training

In support of Chase Gardaphé, Midland City Council at-large candidate:

I met Chase Gardaphé in 2012 after his move to Midland following his marriage to our friend and third-generation Midlander, Annabelle Bailey. Chase had just earned his MBA from SMU to complement his degree from Texas A&M.

Like so many of us who have moved to Midland, he was investigating entry into the oil business. When Chase told me of his grandmother's business of manufactured home communities, we discussed Midland's dire need for affordable housing. Not long after our conversation, Chase completed Stonegate Manufactured Housing Community. In addition to managing the project and the property, Chase was appointed to the Planning & Zoning Commission by the Midland City Council and served as its chairman where he sponsored and implemented new processes and improved governance.

I have gotten to know Chase further at First Presbyterian Church and

We received a call from a woman concerned about her neighbor. She had seen the recently-widowed neighbor and the widow's three children loading up a U-Haul. When asked, the widow explained that the family had gotten several months behind on their mortgage during her late husband's illness. While she had not been served with foreclosure papers yet, she knew they were coming any day now. She had no idea where the family would go from there, but she was preparing to move nonetheless.

The concerned neighbor approached us and when she gave us the name of the woman we immediately recognized her as a member of a family we had helped with medical expenses in the past.

We met with the woman the next day. Her husband has been diagnosed with cancer three years earlier. At the time he had a job and medical insurance. After surgery and chemotherapy, the cancer went into remission, however he was no longer physically able to perform his job and so he was terminated and given a small disability check. Less than a year later the cancer came raging back. With no medical insurance, every last penny that they had between their Social Security disability and her job went to his pain medications, medical bills, food and utilities. There was simply not enough left for the mortgage. He passed away three months ago, at the age of 49. What pain and heartache this family has been through, losing their beloved husband and father at such a young age!

The mortgage company agreed to work with the widow if she could pay half of the past due amount. We were happy to pay the entire past due amount. With her paycheck and her job and her late husband's Social Security, she will be able to keep on top of her bills and support herself and her children. Her mortgage payment is far less than rent on any decent apartment in Midland, and she will be able to keep her children and their pet dog in the home they have lived in for so many years.

Special thanks and blessings to all of you whose donations made it possible to keep this family in their home. Thank you very much!

from our community. Chase's love and vision for Midland, his academic and business training, his P&Z experience, and his commitment to Midland prepare him to serve with distinction as Midland's City Councilman at-large representing all of our citizens. Please join me in voting for Chase Gardaphé for Midland City Council at-large.

Steven H. Pruett

Gardaphe, Robnett dedicated to deal with challenges

I have lived in this community since 1982 and have ridden the roller coaster known as the oil and gas industry. However, I have never seen anything close to what we are experiencing with the shale revolution. Midland is no longer a sleepy boom-to-bust oil town. Having been thrust into its place among the handful of energy capitals of the world, the fastest-growing community in the U.S. must have sound leadership.

A good start toward that goal is to vote for Chase Gardaphe and Spencer Robnett for the two at-large Midland City Council seats. Both of these responsible businessmen have shown their dedication to this city. They have the common sense, energy and willingness that it will take to deal with the many challenges that are in front of us.

If you have not voted, I would urge you to go to the polls Tuesday and participate in this crucial election for our community, for our state and for our great nation.

Henry Musselman

Trost demonstrates compassion, leadership abilities

I confidently recommend Michael Trost for the Midland City Council. Over the many years that we have known each other, he has enthusiastically demonstrated not only his compassion for Midland, but also his leadership abilities.

During his previous tenure, Mr. Trost answered the call to stand with this community and keep a fire station from shutting its doors. He has been an outspoken supporter of our first responders, and his record shows that.

Now it's your turn. Michael needs your help to win this election. Vote for Michael on Tuesday.

Eric Stewart

Trost has experience that is much needed

I would encourage your readers to vote for Michael Trost, at-large City Council. Michael has the experience, as previous city councilmen, that is much needed in today's environment.

More importantly, Michael has formulated a plan to cut taxes and streamline efficiency in developing infrastructure and housing. He has a proven record of coordinating and facilitating coalitions between separate entities seeking the same goals, which can be applied to a number of issues facing the city and county of Midland.

Michael has a proven conservative voting record, together with the time and energy to see that the job gets done. I voted for Michael Trost and recommend your readers do as well.

P. Lourcey Sams

Trost will help build a better Midland

Beyond a doubt, Michael Trost is the most qualified person to elect for the at-large position on the Midland City Council. With his many years of service to the community, including his prior term on the city council and many community boards, he has served the community well.

He has done it all, and in all he has done he has exemplified transparency, fairness and a sense of community. He will use those qualities to build a better Midland. We need Michael. Michael needs you. Vote for him this Tuesday.

Rose Anna Richardson

Trost will support community

Michael Trost has been an important part of my life for many years. As a father, he provided our family with love and support and stood by each one of us during good times and bad. He will do the same for the community that he has called home for the past 30 years.

Vote Trost.

DISTRICT 5

Kirk is right candidate because of classroom experience

I have to say, not having children in this town, I still see the struggles happening in MISD. I also see we have several people running to fill the seats on the school board. In my opinion, Heidi Kirk would be the right candidate because of her experience in the classroom and as a parent who has a lot of kids with different needs.

As a taxpayer, I want to see someone stand up and ask the right questions about the bond that might be close to a billion dollars. That is a lot of money to ask of us. She honestly has this community's best interest at heart. Watching her speak about her beliefs and after having met her in person, Heidi gets things that most people don't. She'll represent the parents, the teachers and the community well.

Heidi will work hard to have all our voices heard, not just her own. I believe her when she says she will be available for the community because she has done it the entire campaign. I think a vote for Heidi Kirk is a vote for change, for community and for responsibility. She is right. It's time we had a teacher.

Callie Hill

Trischitti will support teachers, administrators

If you live in District 5, you should vote for the open seat on the school board. This is why your vote should go to John Trischitti III.

John Trischitti deeply cares about Midland's school system. The future of the school system has a big impact on his life because the Trischitti family is heavily invested in Midland ISD. They currently have children at four MISD campuses from elementary to high school. Therefore, the success of MISD is not only critical to John now but will continue to be so in years to come.

As a trained educator, I appreciate the background and experience that John Trischitti brings as a representative of my community. John's experience in working with the county means that he understands working with budgets and how to make the best funding decisions with sometimes less-than-ideal resources.

In addition, John understands and advocates for one of the most impactful pieces of the educational puzzle — literacy. He respects teachers as professionals. John will be a support to teachers and administrators as they work hard for our children.

John Trischitti III is an excellent leader and the best choice to represent District 5 for school board.

Allison Brown

Trischitti has passion for education, the community

John Trischitti has a passion for education, for our community and for Midland ISD. I believe he has the experience needed to be ready on day one as a school board trustee. He has experience in budgeting, management and leadership, along with experience specifically with improving youth literacy and in providing educational opportunities for all those in Midland.

John is committed to Midland and has proven that over the last eight years through his public and private works. He has a wonderful, supportive wife and five children who attend Midland ISD. John believes in public education and knows that to provide the best possible education for his children and all the children at MISD, we need strong leadership and a willingness to follow through.

He has the skills, compassion and dedication needed to move Midland ISD in the right direction, no matter the challenges we may be facing now or in the future. He will stand up and fight for what is in the best interest for the nearly 26,000 students who rely on Midland ISD for their education.

Please join me in voting for John Trischitti, the right pick for Midland ISD District 5.

Stephen Robertson

Wolfmueller will be problem-solver, change-maker

Stakeholders of District 5 are extremely lucky this election cycle to have the opportunity to vote for change in our Midland ISD board. I am very hopeful that we will have a voice on the board soon who will be our advocate, problem-solver and change-maker. I believe the best candidate to fill the role is Thomas Wolfmueller.

Thomas has proven himself worthy of the role of representative by making himself available to all stakeholders, going as far as publishing his personal cell-number while campaigning. Thomas has demonstrated his commitment by attending school board and PTA meetings, forums and any other opportunity he is given to engage, learn and fully grasp the challenges our district is facing, while taking into consideration the thoughts, ideas and needs of stakeholders.

MISD is in need of trustees willing to honestly and openly address our issues, someone with courage, someone willing to make hard choices. We need a representative accountable to the people and available to listen to us, someone willing to entertain any solution that will change our culture, better morale and improve outcomes. That personality is Thomas Wolfmueller.

Please consider Thomas for District 5 Midland ISD trustee.

Shea Thompson

Wolfmueller will bring accountability, work ethic

I met Thomas five years ago as a co-worker, and today I'm proud to call him my friend. Let me tell you why.

When we started working together, I got my first look at Thomas' character. Drilling wells is a challenging job. In challenging situations, it's common to do what is easy for yourself, and pass the problems to someone else. Not Thomas. Many people like to say "I hold people accountable." Great, but what is truly great and unique about Thomas is that he holds "himself" accountable, every day, every time.

As I got to know Thomas over the years, it became clear that he treats everything in his life the same way. He applies the same principles to his church, friends and wonderful family.

Thomas now wants to take his character, accountability and work ethic to the school board. I hope anyone that reads this can think about the importance of the role, and the type of person they want in that role. When you think about all of that, I hope you think about Thomas Wolfmueller. I'm certain that is what I will be thinking of when I vote.

DISTRICT 6

Davis has leadership skills, is problem-solver

As a resident of MISD District 6, I am asking my neighbors to vote for Rick Davis as their school board representative.

I have served with Rick in numerous civic organizations. We have also been part of the same church community for over 25 years. Rick has a strong sense of values and ethics, demonstrates exemplary leadership skills, has positive community relationships and is an analytical problem-solver.

Under his leadership he has and will continue to be part of the MISD team who are making positive changes for the benefit of MISD students, employees and our community.

The nature of our economy presents unique challenges to all aspects of our community. We need leaders who are problem-solvers.

Re-elect Rick so the hard work for positive change continues.

Ellen K. Ramsey

Davis is fair, forward-thinking

I encourage you to vote for Rick Davis. With general experience serving on many boards at the local, state, and national levels, I can report that as a leader he has few peers. Having served with Rick on the MISD board, I can state unequivocally his work is a big reason MISD has made the strides it has. He's fair, insightful, forward-thinking, thoughtful and respectful, which are important to any board; also important for this particular board, he cares about and considers what is best for all students.

I simply have the highest regard for him as a leader and as a person. I have worked with few others who reach his level of proficiency and expertise. MISD is lucky that he decided to run again. Vote to keep him.

Karen Nicholson
Austin

Davis understands what board's role is

Under board President Rick Davis' leadership, steady progress is being made in aligning MISD classrooms and student outcomes with community expectations. Rick gets it. The board's job: translate community's values into outcomes, empower staff (with resources and support) to do that and maintain accountability.

An Aug. 19 Reporter-Telegram article stated: MISD officials are putting together a School Performance Framework that expresses locally developed goals, values, and will support high quality learning environments designed for every student to succeed. "The SPF will be a living tool that we will continue to refine based on ongoing community, school, district, and other feedback …"

The Texas Education Agency (TEA) ranks the MISD board No. 1 statewide for governance practices and focus on improving student academic performance. MISD is one of 25 education entities awarded a TEA 2018-2019 Grow Your Own grant that supports recruitment, support, and retention for teachers and principals.

Rick's background, focus, commitment and leadership skills will enable MISD to complete the transition as a "turnaround" district and make MISD classrooms a "laboratory for life" where every student can succeed, and great teachers are celebrated.

District 6 voters: Please join me in supporting Rick Davis.

Vandalism won't deter vote for O'Rourke

To the criminal who decided to place two nails in my tire while parked in the H-E-B parking lot, just because I have a "Beto for Senate" bumper sticker in my window, listen up!

I will NOT be deterred.

I will NOT be intimidated.

I will NOT be frightened.

I will NOT be silenced.

I will NOT let your petty criminal act of vandalism stop me from exercising my freedom of speech.

I WILL go high when you go low.

I WILL support whoever I choose.

I WILL vote for whoever I choose.

I proudly support Beto O'Rourke.

Citizens should expect more from representatives

I find it beyond staggering that our U.S. representative, Mike Conaway, doesn't know that the 14th Amendment is constitutional right, not a "policy"! (Conaway supports ending birthright citizenship).

It is a right as is the First Amendment or the Second Amendment.

We should expect more from those who represent us in Washington.

not a 7:30-3:30 job, these individuals pour their hearts into educating the youth of midland and will go out of their way to make sure to provide the most engaging lessons your children will remember for years to come. I want to make our teachers feel valued and let them know I will be an ear to listen to any issues or concerns they may have.

Midland ISD has some incredible parents. I have attended PTA meetings and am so impressed with the volunteerism and leadership that is shown at MISD schools. There are PTA's with amazing ideas and programs that I would love to see rolled out at multiple campuses. If elected, I want to be present at PTA meetings district-wide to hear about the great things happening at campuses. I would also love to strengthen the parental involvement of MISD by implementing Parent University at more campuses. I was a presenter for the Parent University program at a pilot campus for the district and saw first-hand the positive effect the program brought.

I am passionate about education and believe all students deserve the best education possible. I have my degree in Special Education and am currently working toward a master's degree in Special Education. I want to use this knowledge to educate the board about multiple learning styles, so we can keep exceptional learners in mind when making decisions. My teaching background helps me understand testing data as well as the TEKS (Texas Essential Knowledge and Skills). Knowing how to dissect the TEKS is important when making educational goals for the district.

As a potential board member, I promise to put all children first, support the staff of MISD, be present in the district and remain fiscally responsible. I will listen to the concerns of the community and work with the board to consistently improve our district. I thank you for your time voting during this election and humbly ask for your vote.

integral part of our "Midland on the Move" efforts to transform this district. Our existing magnet school options—and improving them—are certainly part of this, but so is expanding other school choice options for the entire district and yes, improving every single campus. The new college preparatory academy at Sam Houston Elementary is one such example and the extraordinary turnaround success of South Elementary is another. Both of those examples are the result of the student-first mentality of our dedicated teachers and educational leaders.

In addition to providing quality choices to students, one of the other key components of a System of Great Schools is empowering campuses to make decisions for themselves that affect their students and, after a proven track record of success, encouraging them to replicate their successes on other campuses. In my opinion, it is a natural progression of our Professional Learning Communities that we have already implemented on every campus to restore teaching control to teachers.

Osborne led the day-long conference which included panel discussions and breakout sessions with school board members, administrators and principals from two of the nation's leading school districts currently implementing a System of Great Schools — Denver Public Schools and Indianapolis Public Schools. These visitors shared their respective experiences to assist MISD in becoming the first district in Texas to become a System of Great Schools.

MISD's transformation efforts have not only caught the attention of these recognized leaders for educational reform who are eager to help us, but representatives from national education foundations also attended the conference to learn more about what they have heard is taking place at MISD. They were very complimentary of what they heard and saw.

For example, the turnout was tremendous. In addition to MISD School Board members and MISD staff, parents, and community members, representatives from our local non-profit organizations, foundations, businesses, community colleges and universities, Region 18 Service Center, and the Texas Education Agency also attended and participated in the conference and the breakout sessions.

At the end of the day, our visitors were extremely impressed with, and complimentary of, our efforts to date and our future plans as well as the level of interest, enthusiasm and support for achieving that goal by all the community members and partners that attended. As a follow up, we are currently exploring funding opportunities with local and national foundations and local and national businesses who are interested in supporting MISD's current activities and future plans.

None of this has happened, or is happening, by chance. It is part of a focused and concerted effort. Having played a role, along with my fellow board members, district staff, and many, many supportive members of this community, in helping MISD along this transformational path, I am asking the citizens of District 6 for their vote to allow me to follow through on all these efforts to help ensure we will be successful.

I truly believe that having had the experience of seeing what has worked and what has not worked will be extremely helpful in keeping MISD on its current course of continual innovative improvement that has caught the attention of state and national educational leaders. I believe that if we continue to focus Midland's "can do" spirit on public education, we will be successful. It is the 'Midland" way of doing things, and the success of MISD is critically important for the future well-being of our entire community. I would very much appreciate your vote.

OPINION

Americans survived Nixon; we'll survive Trump

MARC THIESSEN
Washington Post Writers Group

This week marks the 50th anniversary of the election of President Richard Nixon. It is a chance for some perspective. While many seem convinced that the United States will never recover from the Donald Trump presidency, the truth is conservatism, the Republican Party and our nation survived Nixon — and we will survive Trump.

Many conservatives are dismayed with Trump's failure to condemn the racist alt-right. But let's not forget that Nixon came to power based on the "Southern Strategy," winning over disaffected white voters who left the Democrats because of civil rights and the dismantling of Jim Crow.

Many were appalled by Trump's Helsinki news conference and embrace of Russian President Vladimir Putin. But it was Nixon who gave us detente with Moscow, invited Leonid Brezhnev to the White House and signed the disastrous Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty that restricted U.S. missile defense for decades.

Many are concerned with Trump's outreach to North Korea and his willingness to hold a summit with its brutal dictator, Kim Jong Un. But it was Nixon who led the opening to Communist China, and sat down with its murderous founder, Mao Zedong — a man responsible for the death of an estimated 65 million people.

Many are disheartened by Trump's tariffs and trade wars. Well, Nixon gave us anti-free market economic policies such as wage and price controls.

Many are worried about Trump's attacks on the media as the "enemy of the American people." But it was Nixon who sent Vice President Spiro Agnew out to attack the media as a "tiny, enclosed fraternity of privileged men elected by no one" and actually attempted to stop the publication of the Pentagon Papers.

Many are disturbed about a possible criminal conspiracy with Russia to steal and publish Democratic Party emails. But, of course, it was Nixon who gave us the coverup of the break-in to the Democratic Party headquarters at the Watergate Hotel.

And, if you think Trump's Twitter feed is bad, listen to the Nixon tapes and imagine what he would have been like on Twitter.

So, in many ways the Trump presidency is like deja vu all over again. Except that Trump is, at least for conservatives, arguably a much better president than was Nixon. While Nixon had a mixed record in Supreme Court appointments, Trump has, so far, given us two of the strongest conservative justices in modern history. While the chairman of Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers, Herb Stein, bragged that, under Nixon, "probably more new regulation was imposed on the economy than in any other presidency since the New Deal," Trump has given us a historic regulatory rollback. While Nixon boasted over dramatic cuts in defense spending, Trump has enacted historic increases. While Nixon's 1969 tax reform increased taxes, Trump's reforms have cut them. While Nixon withdrew U.S. troops from Vietnam, Trump has unleashed our forces against the Islamic State and has halted the withdrawal from Afghanistan begun during the Obama administration.

Nixon also showed us that our constitutional system of checks and balances works, and that if the president crosses a constitutional line, the rule of law will prevail. And while Nixon resigned over Watergate, we still don't know how the Russia inquiry will turn out. It may well be that there was no criminal conspiracy with Russia. Even knowing what we know about Watergate, the United States would not have been better off with George McGovern as president, just as we would not be better off today with Hillary Clinton in the White House.

As bad as things got for Republicans, six years after Nixon's resignation we elected Ronald Reagan and, just like that, it was Morning in America. Those of us fortunate enough to have lived through the Reagan Revolution have great expectations for the presidency. We want to not just support the policies, but admire the person who occupies the Oval Office. So our disappointment in Trump's moral failures is profound. But the truth is, if you look back at U.S. history, there have been few Reagans. Most presidents are mediocre, and some are downright awful. But the idea that Trump has ushered in an end to the hopeful, optimistic vision for conservatism is absurd. All conservatism needs to recover is for one great, hopeful, optimistic leader to emerge.

Until then — to paraphrase the man who implemented Nixon's wage and price controls, Donald Rumsfeld — we go to war with the president we have.

Beto O'Rourke needs to offer specifics on migrant caravan

Beto O'Rourke wants a promotion. He wants to go from the House to the Senate and go from representing a constituency of 743,000 in the 16th congressional district to the entire state of Texas and its 30 million residents.

With days to go before the election and President Trump along with Ted Cruz ramping up the immigration rhetoric, O'Rourke has managed to stake out an opposition stance without offering much detail of his own. It's time he stepped up and delivered.

Outside of advocating for a path to citizenship for DACA recipients (aka Dreamers), O'Rourke hasn't offered much in the way of ideas of details about immigration, particularly the migrant caravan that started out in Honduras.

That isn't to say we are enamored with what Ted Cruz brings to the table. He supports Trump's border wall, and when he met with the editorial board would say only that he opposed citizenship for Dreamers. Cruz's embrace of the pseudo-journalistic outfit Project Veritas and another of their questionable videos does nothing to add to what is an important debate.

O'Rourke's tone and the manner in which he's conducted his campaign became the focal point of our recommendation for the voters of Texas to make him the next junior senator in the state. But the debate about immigration is so critical to the nation and particularly Texas, it is imperative that O'Rourke do more than just offer counter statements to Trump and Cruz about unity and bringing people together.

What is his position on how the migrant caravan should be handled? The possibility exists that by the time it arrives, the number of people may dwindle from thousands to hundreds. But if thousands of people arrive at the Texas border, U.S. authorities will have to do something. If O'Rourke believes he's in a better position than Cruz to lead on such issues, he's obligated to his supporters and non-supporters alike to offer concrete solutions.

If O'Rourke wins, we'd like to see him succeed. Our criticism of Cruz over the years centered on his tone and the legislative approach that too often ties up Congress instead of advancing legislation.

O'Rourke is a unique position. The divisiveness within our political culture has the country adrift like a rudderless ship. A reporter described O'Rourke as a "rock star." But the people of Texas and the United States deserve real leadership. Beto O'Rourke has that opportunity. And he can start before the election.

What the U.S. Constitution giveth, the president wants to taketh away

RUBEN NAVARRETTE
Washington Post Writers Group

To take Americans' minds off his problems, President Trump offers another shiny object: birthright citizenship.

The legal concept is jus soli, Latin for "the right of the soil." In the United States — and more than 30 other countries, including Canada and most of Latin America — if you're born there, you're a citizen. This includes the children of illegal immigrants.

In about two dozen countries — mainly in Asia, Europe and the Middle East — at least one parent must have legal status for a child born on their soil to get citizenship. Only two nations — India and Malta — are so strict that they deny citizenship to children born on their soil unless at least one parent is a citizen.

Thanks to the 14th Amendment, the United States has it right. But what the U.S. Constitution giveth, Trump wants to taketh away.

You ought to keep 10 things in mind:

■ When conservatives parrot the talking point that the Supreme Court "has never ruled" on whether the citizenship clause of the 14th Amendment applies to the children of undocumented immigrants, they're missing the point. There are reams of issues that the court has never decided because they're ridiculous. Note that the court has also never ruled on unicorns. This could be one of those issues.

■ The underlying assumption of those who want to deny citizenship to the children of the undocumented seems to be that U.S. citizenship is extremely valuable. But if they want to be stingy about who becomes a citizen, then why do we give the privilege away automatically to the native-born who did nothing to earn it?

■ Most illegal immigrants come from Mexico and Central America. So Trump's attack on birthright citizenship should be seen as just another hate-filled strike against the nation's 58 million Latinos, many of whom get up and go to work every day to help keep America great.

■ It's simply false to say that "no other country" confers birthright citizenship. Besides, what the folks who say that likely mean is that few countries in Europe offer it. Who cares? The United States hasn't followed Europe's lead on much of anything since the Marshall Plan. When was the last time you heard of the French Dream?

■ Trump warns that U.S.-born children of illegal immigrants have the "benefits" of citizenship. This implies that they are takers. But countless studies show that immigrants are just as likely as the U.S.-born to be productive members of society, if not more so.

■ Opponents of birthright citizenship also claim that the privilege acts as a "magnet" that draws refugees and migrants to this country. That's nonsense. I've spoken to dozens of immigrants over the years, and I can tell you this much: There is a jobs magnet, and a family reunification magnet. There is no citizenship magnet.

■ It's pointless to dwell on the "intent" of the 14th Amendment. With the Constitution, intent is debatable — and not worth much. The 14th Amendment also guarantees "equal protection of the laws." The fact those words were written to protect freed slaves doesn't mean that they don't also protect other groups from unfair treatment.

■ The 14th Amendment confers U.S. citizenship to "all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof." Some insist illegal immigrants don't qualify. That's absurd. We're talking about the child, not the parents. And if the government can deport or imprison you, then you're subject to its jurisdiction.

■ Republicans like Trump don't really care about citizenship. They care about what citizenship bestows: the right to vote. They know they've misbehaved by picking on Latinos, and they're due a spanking at the ballot box that they're desperately trying to avoid one way or another. That's what this is all about.

■ Once upon a time, some Republicans made a play for Latino voters. Those days are over. The only voters who Trump is trying to rile up so they turn out on Tuesday are those whose American Dream is an America without brown people in it.

Trump and other Republicans like to pick on Latinos. But this time, they picked the wrong spot to poke.

Those voters care about children and families. Defend them, and we will always remember. Attack them, and we will never forget.

teaching experience is with fourth- and fifth-graders at church. I have been peer nominated and awarded by the Society of Petroleum Engineers for drilling engineering. I have served on several boards, but just because you have been on one board does not make you qualified for this board. I deal with people from all walks of life on multi-million-dollar projects on a daily basis and know how to effectively work as a team. In my line of work behind schedule means over budget. So proper planning and making informed decisions correctly the first time is the way I work. MISD needs this type of leadership to take us into the future.

We have had many big issues at MISD recently. Losing almost 500 teachers will always be unacceptable in my book. We need to hold our leaders accountable (actually accountable and not just talk) for supporting our teachers. They need better pay and support for discipline in the classroom.

I do not celebrate our district rating of "C." I do not believe we are properly fulfilling the district goal of preparing all students for college or career. With the vast resources and wonderful people we have in Midland, none of us should be happy until all of our schools are "A" rated.

First, the problems need to be identified before we can find solutions. As a board member I will look at all available information and listen to all sides to identify the problems. Then, we as a board can effectively find a solution. I will not be a yes man and will not rubber stamp everything on the board. I am for smart informed decisions that will better the education for all students at MISD.

Many campuses are getting distinct honors and are doing great things. We have to keep the momentum going at those campuses while encouraging other failing campuses to reach for that mark. We as a community can do great things together. As a board member I will work closely with the community, using open communication, to bring all schools up to the level we should expect and strive for.

If you want a no nonsense results leader at MISD, vote Thomas Wolfmueller for District 5 trustee and thanks for the support. Visit me on Facebook at Wolfmueller.misd5 or email me at wolfmueller.misd5@gmail.com

Lee uses 1st-half flurry to record 400th win

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@mrt.com

Lee was a football team on a mission Friday night.

The Rebels were reeling after a rare lopsided 49-26 loss to Amarillo Tascosa the week before, and a meeting with rival Midland High presented the right opportunity to get the previous defeat out of their system.

Lee played with physicality on both lines of scrimmage, overwhelming the Bulldogs in the first half on its way to a convincing 49-28 victory in District 2-6A play at Grande Communications Stadium.

The Rebels (7-2, 3-1 in District 2-6A) did all their damage within the first 19 minutes of the game, scoring on five plays of 28 yards or more to take a commanding 49-7 lead in the second quarter.

Despite being pulled in the second quarter, Lee quarterback Felix Hinojosa made the most of his 12 combined rushing and passing attempts, accounting for five total TDs.

Hinojosa went a perfect 7 for 7 for 159 pass yards and two TD passes, while amassing 177 rushing yards and three scores on only five carries.

"We talked about being physical and I thought up front, our two fronts -- offensive line and defensive line -- were extremely physical," Rebels head coach Clint Hartman said.

In the first half alone, Lee rushed 17 times for 314 yards, an average of 18.4 yards an attempt.

Rebels running back Josh Traylor added 116 rushing yards and two TDs on only nine attempts.

"I felt that our offensive line dominated up front, which allowed us to run the football," Hartman said.

On defense, Michael Hinojosa, Felix's younger brother, shined for Lee with 13 tackles, one sack, a fumble recovery and two quarterback hurries.

Lee clinched its second consecutive postseason berth and stayed alive in the hunt for the District 2-6A title.

The Rebels, who are tied for second with Tascosa (6-3, 3-1), can capture a share of the District 2-6A title with a win over first-place Odessa Permian (7-2,

West Virginia defeats No. 15 Texas

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press

AUSTIN — West Virginia's Will Grier threw a 33-yard touchdown pass to Gary Jennings with 16 seconds left, and then ran in the 2-point conversion to send the 12th-ranked Mountaineers to a 42-41 win over No. 15 Texas.

Grier broke his finger on a run to the pylon in the first quarter of a loss to Texas last year, and his game-winning run came on a similar scramble. But there was no defender near him this time as he held the ball up while crossing the goal line untouched.

The 2-point conversion came moments after Grier connected with David Sills. Texas had called timeout just before the ball was snapped so the Mountaineers had to line up again. Grier dropped back, took a step into the pocket, and then swung out to his left to break for the corner of the end zone.

Grier drove the Mountaineers (7-1, 5-1 Big 12, No. 13 CFP) to the win after Texas grabbed a 41-34 lead on Sam Ehlinger's touchdown throw to Devin Duvernay with 2:34 to play.

Grier finished with 346 yards passing and three touchdowns, two to Sills.

Ehlinger passed for 356 yards and three scores and also ran for a touchdown for Texas (6-3, 4-2, No. 17 CFP), which has lost two in a row.

The takeaway

West Virginia: The Mountaineers got an important road win in their quest for their first Big 12 title. The defense held on just enough to force the Longhorns to kick two field goals in the second half that kept them in range for Grier to work his fourth-quarter magic. The running game also pounded away at the Texas defense with 232 yards.

Texas: Injuries have become a problem while Texas has stumbled into the second half of its season. Starting safety Brandon Jones didn't play because he aggravated an ankle injury before the game at the team hotel, starting cornerback Davante Davis was knocked out on the first series and edge rusher Breckyn Hager also left with a first-half shoulder injury.

Woodward hired as Rangers manager

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

Los Angeles Dodgers third base coach Chris Woodward was hired as manager of the Texas Rangers on Saturday, six weeks after Jeff Banister was fired.

He received a three-year contract with a club option for 2022. He will be introduced at a news conference Monday.

Woodward inherits a team that went 67-95 and finished last in the AL West, with the focus turning to the development of younger players. Texas had its first consecutive losing seasons since 2005-08.

Woodward

The hiring ended a process during which general manager Jon Daniels and the Rangers interviewed more than 10 candidates, including bench coach Don Wakamatsu after he served as interim coach the final 10 games of the season.

Woodward was interviewed this week after the Dodgers finished their second straight season in which they advanced to the World Series, losing both times. The last team before Los Angeles that appeared in consecutive World Series without winning the title was Texas in 2010 and 2011.

"We interviewed a number of strong candidates during an extensive interview process for our managerial role and believe we have found the right fit in Chris Woodward," Daniels said in a statement released by the team. "We look forward to working with him and everyone on the baseball staff to develop and grow a culture that will lead to success for many years to come."

Daniels has hired three managers in his 13 seasons as the Rangers GM, and all were first-time MLB managers. Texas won its only American League pennants during Ron Washington's eight seasons before Banister won two AL West titles in his four seasons.

Two candidates Texas interviewed were hired last month as managers by other teams, David Bell in Cincinnati and Rocco Baldelli in Minnesota. The hiring of Woodward left the Baltimore Orioles, who fired Buck Showalter after the season, as the only MLB team with a managerial vacancy.

Stidham-to-Williams lifts Auburn past Texas A&M

By John Zenor
Associated Press

AUBURN, Ala. — Seth Williams figures there's only one likely outcome on a mid-air battle for the ball, and it's exactly what happened with the game in the balance.

The Auburn freshman came down with an 11-yard touchdown pass from Jarrett Stidham with 1:41 left and the Tigers rallied to beat No. 25 Texas A&M 28-24 on Saturday.

"Zero chance I wasn't coming down with it," Williams said. "It's going to come down with me if it's up in the air."

The Tigers (6-3, 3-3 Southeastern Conference) sputtered early on offense but finished with a 14-point outburst over the final 5:14 and the defense came up with big stops. Stidham delivered big plays on both final drives.

Kellen Mond and the Aggies (5-4, 3-3) pushed the ball into Auburn territory on their final drive, converting a fourth-and-5. Then a holding call pushed them back across midfield and Mond's desperation pass to the end zone was incomplete.

Officials put one second back on the clock but Mond was sacked by Nick Coe on the final play.

"You think the game's over," Auburn coach Gus Malzahn said. "The game's over, you shake the other coach's hand ... and then they tell you to come back out."

The Tigers, who had plummeted from a No. 8 ranking, trailed 24-14 before staging the rally. Texas A&M had missed a late field goal following another defensive stand.

Stidham started the final drive with a 47-yard pass to Ryan Davis, who spun away from defenders and raced downfield. Then came Williams' second 11-yard touchdown catch of the day, in the back corner of the end zone.

Auburn had gotten new life with the first career interception by Noah Igbinoghene on what Malzahn called "probably the play of the game." Stidham led the Tigers down the field and completed two straight sideline passes to Darius Slayton to set up Chandler Cox's 1-yard touchdown run, making it 24-21.

The defense held again and ROUND ROCK – The Andrews boys narrowly missed a state championship by placing second during Saturday's UIL Class 4A State Cross-Country Championships at Old Setters Park.

Andrews with 92 points, finished two points behind state champion Decatur (90).

Andrews returned to the medal stand for the second time in three years after also placing second at state in 2016. Andrews head coach Wade Floyd said the difference between finishing second and first was any of his runners picking up 1 ½ seconds.

"We were a little disappointed at the end when we saw how close it was," Floyd said. "We ran very well. I was very pleased how we ran. There was a lot of movement and jostling in the middle eras."

The Mustangs were led by freshman Derek Hernandez, who finished 11th overall out of 152 runners with a time of 16 minutes, 16.87 seconds.

"Today he decided it was time for him to run," Floyd said. "He made a big move for us."

Andrews junior Jasson Marquez came in 25th (16:37.31), while junior Derik Lujan was 29th (16:40.51) in the 3-mile run.

The Andrews boys team is comprised of two juniors, one sophomore and four freshmen, so all of them are returning in 2019.

"Our goal is already set for next year as far as to come back here and win a state championship," Floyd said.

The Andrews girls finished fifth with 196 points. Canyon was the girls Class 4A champion with 54 points.

For the Lady Mustangs, junior Samantha Jasso finished 13th (12:02.07) in the 2-mile race and senior Elizabeth Garcia was 32nd (12:31.68).

Big Spring freshman Roman Perez was 37th (16:48.60) in the Class 4A boys race and Odessa Permian junior Joshua Garcia came in 52nd (15:48.03) in the Class 6A boys race. In the Class 1A boys race, Carlos Cura finished 31st (17:38.01) and Grady senior Alijah Ontiveros was 75th (18:46.29).

Texas A&M-Commerce holds off UTPB, 20-17

From staff reports

ODESSA – Defending NCAA Division II national champion Texas A&M-Commerce needed a fourth-quarter touchdown to squeak past U.T.-Permian Basin, 20-17, in Lone Star Conference play Saturday at Ratliff Stadium.

The No. 16-ranked Lions (8-2, 5-1 in conference) pulled ahead when Kane Wilson scored a 1-yard TD run with 14:55 to play.

The Falcons (2-8, 1-6) led throughout the third quarter after going into halftime with a 17-13 lead.

UTPB quarterback Taylor Null completed 18 of 34 passes for 179 yards and two TD passes.

Null connected with Michael Myers on an 11-yard TD pass in the first quarter, and tossed a 15-yard TD pass to Kristian Brown in the second.

The Falcons were plagued by a non-existent run game, which lost -69 yards on 24 rushing attempts.

A&M-Commerce, on the other hand, had a successful ground game as Ovie Urevbu gained 195 rushing yards on 27 attempts.

UTPB visits Texas A&M-Kingsville at 7 p.m. Saturday to close out its season.

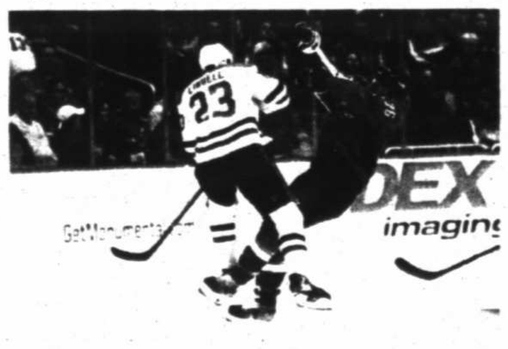

Stars beat Capitals in OT for 3rd straight win 4-3

By Stephen Whyno
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Jason Spezza and Tyler Pitlick scored 10 seconds apart, Jason Dickinson had the overtime winner and the Dallas Stars beat the Washington Capitals 4-3 on Saturday night for their first three-game winning streak of the season.

Dickinson scored 3:17 into overtime to salvage two points for Dallas, which also got a goal from captain Jamie Benn and is finally finding its game under first-year coach Jim Montgomery. Ben Bishop stopped 29 shots to beat the Capitals for just the third time in 12 games.

Bishop allowed sharp-angle, short-side goals to Nicklas Backstrom and Evgeny Kuznetsov during an inconsistent performance. Brett Connolly also scored for Washington, batting the puck out of the air before Bishop could get back to glove it away.

Washington Capitals center Nic Dowd (26) collides with Dallas Stars defenseman Esa Lindell (23), of Finland, during the second period Saturday in Washington.

Capitals goalie Braden Holtby made 32 saves and stopped Tyler Seguin on a penalty shot in overtime but lost to the Stars for the fifth time in eight games. Holtby turned the puck over to Pitlick on one goal and was victimized by bad turnovers on Dallas' other two goals in regulation.

One game after allowing the fastest two goals in NHL history, the Capitals gave up two in quick succession again — this time with the goaltender in the net for both. A turnover at the offensive blue line allowed Spezza to score on a breakaway 10:51 into the first period, and Holtby turned the puck over to Pitlick behind the net to make it 2-0 Stars just 10 seconds later.

Backstrom cut Dallas' lead in half 38 seconds into the second period when he scored from a tight angle short side and high on the 6-foot-7 Bishop. But another Washington mistake, this time a turnover by Jakub Vrana, allowed the Stars to go up 3-1 on Benn's sixth goal of the season midway through the second.

In a game that was far from a showcase of defensive structure or sound goaltending, Connolly cut it to 3-2 less than two minutes later by batting his own rebound out of the air and into a wide-open net.

WOODWARD

Dave Roberts, after working for Seattle the previous three years. He started his coaching career as minor league infield coordinator for the Mariners in 2013, then joined their big league staff later that year. He was Seattle's infield coach in 2014 and the first base coach in 2015.

"Chris brings high energy, outstanding leadership and communication skills, a strong knowledge of the game and its evolving strategies, and great integrity — attributes that we feel are vital for our next manager," Daniels said. "We believe these traits will resonate with our players, our staff, and our fans. He has also been a big part of a very successful stretch in Los Angeles."

As a player, Woodward spent 12 seasons (1999-2011) with five teams — Toronto, the New York Mets, Seattle, Atlanta and Boston. He hit .239 with 33 home runs and 191 RBIs while playing every position except pitcher and catcher.

Woodward was teammates with Adrian Beltre for a short period during the 2009 season with the Mariners. Beltre, who has 3,166 career hits, just completed his 21st big league season and hasn't said yet if he will return to play for the Rangers again next year.

When Beltre went on the disabled list during the 2009 season, Woodward started 13 games at third base in his place. Soon after Beltre's return that August, Woodward was selected off waivers by the Boston Red Sox.

The Rangers went 87-75 in 2009 before their two World Series seasons, then lost in the AL's first one-and-done wild-card game in 2012. They ended the 2013 regular season with a loss to Tampa Bay in a wild-card tiebreaker.

When Banister was fired Sept. 21 with 10 games left in this season, Daniels acknowledged that the decision wasn't based on the record and said instead that it was time for a new voice in leadership. Banister was under contract through next season.

Woodward is a native of Covina, California, as is Michael Young, the Rangers career leader in hits and games played who is now a special assistant to the general manager. They are the same age but played at different high schools.

NMMI holds off MC for Region V West tourney title

From staff reports

ROSWELL, N.M. – The Midland College volleyball team fought to the very end during Saturday's NJCAA Region V West Tournament at Cahoon Armory.

No. 12-ranked New Mexico Military Institute outlasted the Lady Chaparrals 25-10, 25-18, 23-25, 16-25, 15-9 in the tournament championship to earn an automatic bid to the NJCAA National Tournament, Nov. 15-17 in Hutchinson, Kansas. MC (20-11) gave No. 1 seed NMMI (27-8) a scare after the Western Junior College Athletic Conference champion was rarely threatened during conference play.

Earlier in the day, the Lady Chaparrals also beat rival and No. 2 seed Odessa College 25-12, 22-25, 15-25, 26-24, 16-14 in a semifinal match. The Lady Wranglers (21-10) had previously swept MC in their two matches during conference play.

MC swept Clarendon College 25-16, 25-19, 25-19 in Friday's tournament opener.

Kurt Busch vying for 2nd Cup title

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Kurt Busch knows he took his first and only NASCAR Cup Series championship for granted.

The one that came 14 years ago with another team.

"If it happens again, I'll appreciate it that much more," Busch said Friday.

Now 40 years old and with an uncertain future after this season with Stewart-Haas Racing, Busch arrived at Texas just outside the top four with two races left before the finale at Homestead, where four drivers will race for the championship. Three of those spots are still up for grabs.

"We have all the confidence in the world, we have all the right to be in the position we're in," said Busch, fifth in the standings and 25 points out of fourth. "Black and white is we have to win. That way we control our destiny. We can still point our way in, and that's been our strength, the consistency of our team this year."

While Busch is still trying to clinch a spot, Joey Logano is the only driver already locked in for Homestead after his bump-and-run to get past defending Cup champion Martin Truex Jr. at Martinsville last weekend.

Truex was clearly upset after the race, when he vowed to prevent Logano from winning the title : "He may have won the battle, but he ain't winning the damn war." He sent a text to Logano later Sunday night.

"I didn't expect to hear from him, so I wanted to tell him how I felt," Truex said Friday in Texas. "I wanted to get his point of view and what he was thinking. What he thought about it. Now I know."

Logano said he wasn't surprised to hear from Truex.

"I am glad he did. It kind of broke the ice," he said Friday. "I was planning on waiting a couple days to let things settle. It got a lot of things out of the way. We both know where we stand. We know where it is at. It is what it is and we move on."

Custer wins for shot at Xfinity title

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Cole Custer's first career victory at Homestead last year wasn't for the NASCAR Xfinity championship.

When he gets back to South Florida in two weeks, the 20-year-old Custer will have a chance to win a title there.

Custer locked in one of the four championship-contending spots for the season finale with his second career win. He regained the lead and won at Texas on Saturday when he pushed past rookie driver Tyler Reddick on the final lap soon after a restart.

The final restart with two laps left came after the 13th caution, the most ever in an Xfinity race at Texas. The final charge to the finish left Custer's No. 00 Ford with a winning margin of .162 of a second, the third-closest at the 1 1/2-mile track.

Custer, who led four times for 16 laps, went low near the bumper of Reddick's No. 9 Chevrolet in Turn 1 on the 200th and final lap and got past for the lead. Both drivers maintained control when they made hard contact on the backstretch.

Reddick, who led a race-high 54 laps, did take over the series points lead from retiring driver Elliott Sadler, who finished eighth and dropped to second in points.

There are three championship-contending spots for Homestead that will be decided next week at Phoenix.

Daniel Hemric is third in points, ahead of Justin Allgaier, Matt Tifft and Custer.

Christopher Bell, the polesitter at Texas, finished 32nd in the 39-car field after being unable to avoid the wall on a second spin with 68 laps left. He dropped to seventh in points. Third-place finisher Austin Cindric is eighth.

4-0) in Friday's 7:30 p.m. regular season finale at Grande Communications Stadium.

Lee also notched its 400th victory in program history Friday.

"That was pretty neat," Hartman said. "I forgot the 400th victory of our program. When you have 400 wins, I give credit to the people before. When I took this job, I knew I wasn't bigger than this program and then what I'm praying for is that I am here for the 500th. That would the next great milestone for me. I love it here. My family loves it. We don't want to go anywhere."

MHS faces OHS in do-or-die game

Midland High's 49-26 loss to Lee Friday is a game the Bulldogs would like to forget about quickly.

Midland High (3-6, 1-3) visits Odessa High (5-4, 1-3) in a winner-take-all game for District 2-6A's fourth and final playoff spot at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Ratliff Stadium.

The Bulldogs will be trying to reach the postseason for the fifth straight year, while the Bronchos hope to secure their first playoff berth since 2013.

"Everything that we've been working toward to get that playoff spot, that game is in front of us next Friday night," MHS head coach Tim Anuszkiewicz said. "Now what we've got to do as a coaching staff, we've got to regroup. Our players have got to regroup. They are going to have to have a bad memory. We're going to have to let this one go pretty quick and rebound. Otherwise, we're going to squander another opportunity next Friday night."

The Bulldogs dug too deep of a hole against the Rebels, as their defense couldn't slow down the Team 58 offense, and the MHS offense had only one sustained touchdown drive in its first seven possessions.

"We didn't show up in the first quarter," Anuszkiewicz said. "Hell, we probably got lucky and scored on the first drive."

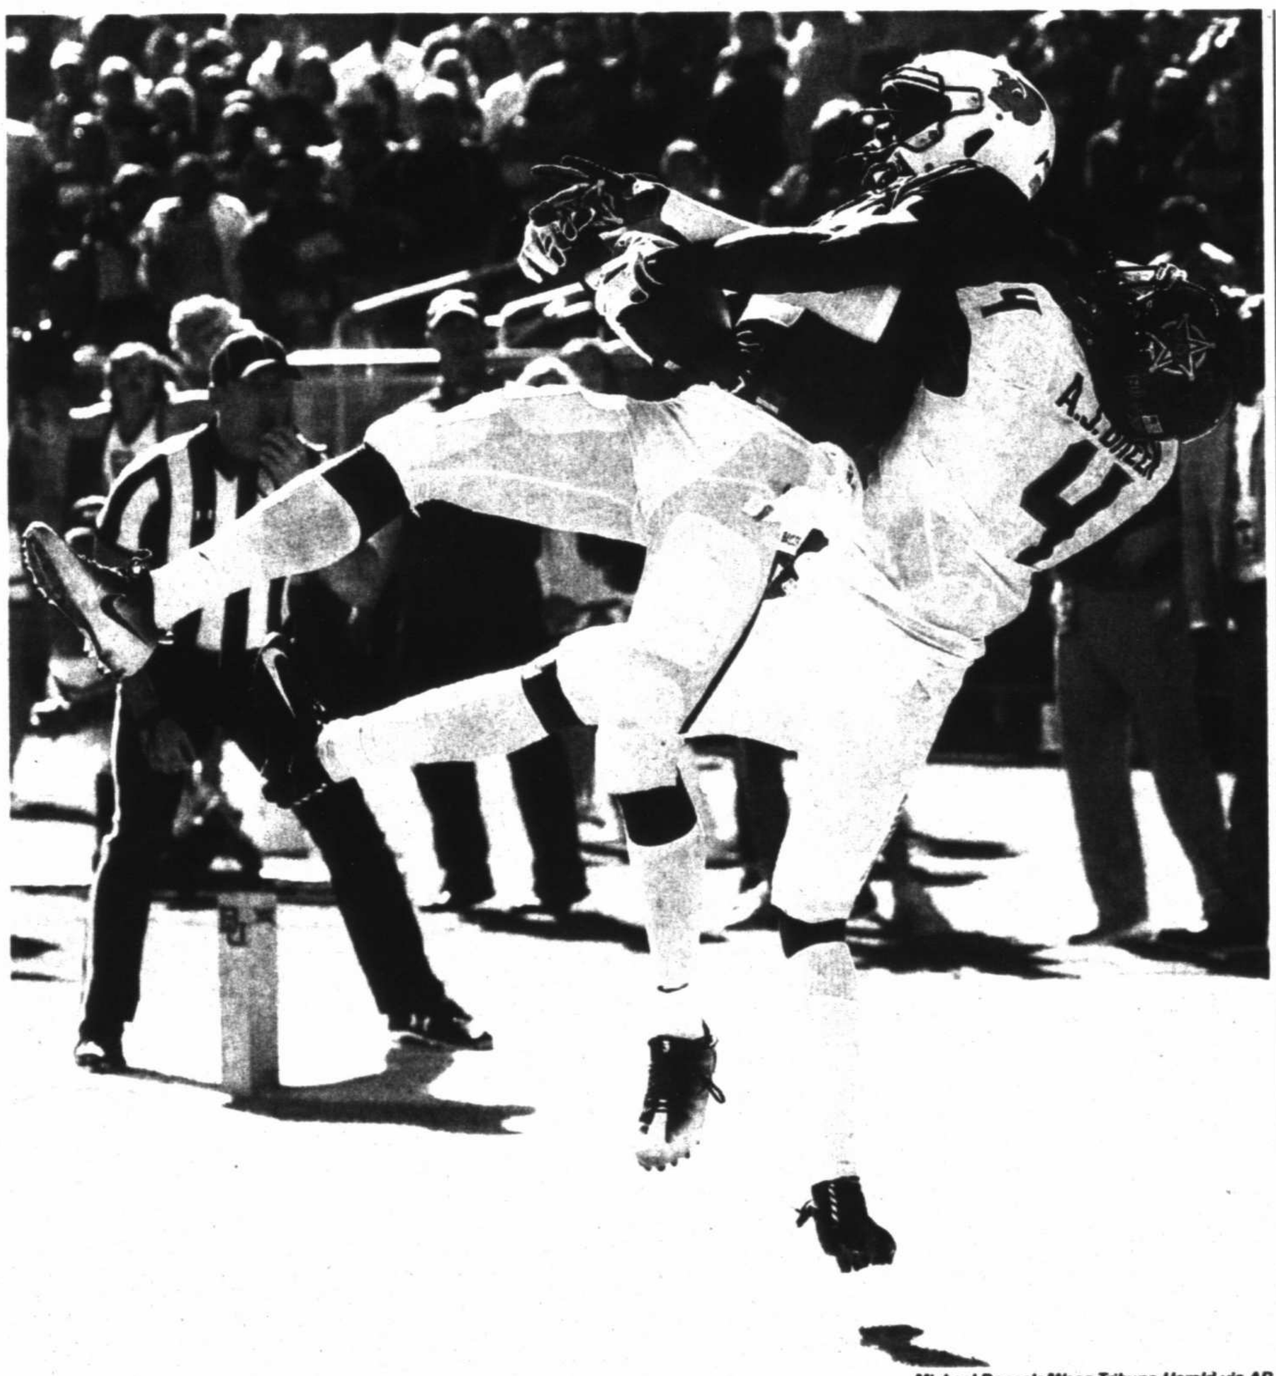

The highlight of the Bulldogs' loss was their passing attack.

MHS quarterback Suddin Sapien completed 27 of 40 passes for 308 yards, one TD pass and one interception.

Two Bulldog receivers eclipsed the century mark, as Unique Lee had seven catches for 114 yards and one TD, while Campbell Keithley caught eight passes for 107 receiving yards.

Lee had a 29-yard reception that set up a score in the first quarter, and provided another 32-yard catch that led to a TD in the third quarter.

Baylor's wide receiver Denzel Mims, left, pulls down the game-winning touchdown over Oklahoma State's cornerback A.J. Green, right, in the second half Saturday in Waco.

Baylor rallies past Oklahoma St 35-31

Associated Press

WACO — Charlie Brewer threw a 6-yard touchdown pass to Denzel Mims with seven seconds left to give Baylor a 35-31 win over Oklahoma State on Saturday.

Brewer didn't play the first three quarters after spending the week in concussion protocol since Baylor's last game. But he led the Bears (5-4, 3-3 Big 12) to consecutive touchdown drives after entering the game, including a 36-yard TD pass to Jalen Hurd with 5:43 left.

Baylor's game-winning drive started after Oklahoma State (5-4, 2-4) was stopped on fourth down, when Chris Miller sacked Taylor Cornelius for a 9-yard loss with 1:31 left.

The Bears then went 55 yards on either plays, the winning score coming on Brewer's TD to Mims.

The win gets Baylor within one win of bowl eligibility, a year after winning only one game in coach Matt Rhule's first season.

John Lovett ran for 104 yards and a touchdown, including a 75-yarder one play after Oklahoma State took a two-score lead late in the third quarter. Jalan McClendon got the start at quarterback for Baylor and threw for 102 yards with an interception. He had a 1-yard touchdown on a quarterback sneak in the second quarter.

Baylor's only lead before the final score was after a blocked punt by Christian Morgan that was taken seven yards to the end zone by Trestan Ebner to make it 14-10 in the second quarter.

Cornelius threw for 287 yards and a touchdown and ran for a score. Justice Hill had 119 yards rushing and a touchdown for the Cowboys.

The takeaway

Oklahoma State: The Cowboys led most of the way but couldn't follow up its upset win over then-No. 6 Texas. That leaves them one win shy of being bowl eligible for the 13th straight season, with road games against No. 7 Oklahoma and TCU, and a home tilt with No. 12 West Virginia. In addition to the blocked punt, Matt Amendola had a 47-yard field goal blocked and was well short kicking a 45-yarder into a stiff breeze.

Baylor: The Bears were winless at home last season but are 4-1 with only a reeling TCU team still set to come to McLane Stadium. They won despite coming up empty on their first two drives, both of which ended inside the Oklahoma State 10. The first was an interception in the end zone by Rodarius Williams, and Connor Martin missed a 26-yard field goal to end the second.

Christian Tutt returned a punt to the 42.

"We knew if we left any life in them, they were going to fight, scratch and claw," Texas A&M coach Jimbo Fisher said. "That's what they always do, and we did that. We played excellent football for three quarters."

Stidham completed 18 of 29 passes for 239 yards. Slayton had eight catches for 107 yards.

Auburn won despite running for just 19 yards on 21 carries.

It was the fewest by the Tigers since gaining 18 against Mississippi State in 2000.

Trayveon Williams ran for 107 yards and two touchdowns for Texas A&M. He caught five passes for 75 yards and a third score.

"It's a tough way to lose, to dominate the whole game like that," Aggies defensive lineman Landis Durham said. "We preach and preach to finish, and we fell short of that. Now we're hurt."

The takeaway

Texas A&M: Didn't complete a pass until the final play of the first quarter, with Auburn unable to stop the run. Dropped its second straight game. Had a 38:41-21:19 advantage in time of possession.

Auburn: Fought back to avoid a tough loss. The Tigers' running game still isn't producing, netting minus 14 yards in the first quarter. Offense went three-and-out six times.

Auburn quarterback Jarrett Stidham (8) is sacked by Texas A&M defensive back Larry Pryor (11) during the second half Saturday in Auburn, Ala.

Beating the Aggies

Stidham, a Texas native, took special pleasure in beating a home state team.

"Any time I can beat the Aggies, it's a great day in my book," he said.

Trickery

Auburn got its first touchdown when receiver Ryan Davis hit Sal Cannella for a 20-yard touchdown on a double pass.

That came one play after the Tigers recovered a botched pitch by Kellen Mond.

Fisher vs. Malzahn

The two coaches' only head-to-head meeting came in the national championship game to end the 2013 season.

Fisher's Florida State team scored in the final seconds to win 34-31.

"This was a different kind of game," Malzahn said. "It was completely different."

TCU hangs on for 14-13 win

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Mike Collins threw a 67-yard touchdown pass to Jalen Reagor in the third quarter and TCU held on for a 14-13 win over Kansas State on Saturday after the Wildcats missed a potential game-tying extra point in the fourth.

The Horned Frogs (4-5, 2-4 Big 12) avoided the first four-game losing streak in 18 seasons under coach Gary Patterson, and improved their chances of becoming bowl eligible for the 16th time in that stretch.

The missed PAT, a muffed punt and a botched field goal attempt put Kansas State (3-6, 1-5) in the position of having to win its three remaining games to qualify for a bowl.

The Wildcats lost quarterback Skylar Thompson to an injury in the first quarter, but backup Alex Delton answered each TCU touchdown.

Reagor fought off cornerback AJ Parker on the deep throw from Collins, turned and ran into the end zone to break a 7-7 tie midway through the third quarter. Jonathan Song kicked what turned out to be an important extra point.

Delton found Taye Barber for 27-yard touchdown on his first series late in the first quarter, and scored on a 1-yard plunge early in the fourth before Blake Lynch hooked the PAT attempt to the left with 9:16 remaining.

Jarrison Stewart's 31-yard catch set up a 4-yard run by Darius Anderson for a 7-0 TCU lead after Isaiah Zuber muffed a punt and Jawuan Johnson recovered at the Kansas State 43-yard line.

Delton, who hadn't played in four games, kept Kansas State's first scoring drive alive by drawing the Frogs offsides on fourth-and-1. Seven plays later, Delton threw a 21-yard score to an outstretched Malik Knowles in the back of the end zone.

Reagor finished with three catches for 92 yards. Collins completed 17 of 33 for 218

UTEP ends skid with win over Rice

HOUSTON — Quardraiz Wadley ran for 91 yards on 20 carries and scored two touchdowns and UTEP ended one losing streak and continued another with a 34-26 win over Rice on Saturday.

Entering the game, UTEP (1-8, 1-4 Conference USA) was the only winless FBS team this season and had lost 20 straight games. The Miners' last win came on Nov. 26, 2016, in a 52-24 home win against North Texas. UTEP hadn't beaten the Owls in Rice Stadium in 13 years.

As for Rice (1-9, 0-6), the Owls now own a nine-game losing streak.

Wadley put UTEP up with a 12-yard touchdown run on the game's opening drive. Early in the second quarter, Kai Locksley ran it in from a yard out. On their next drive, Wadley again had a 12-yard touchdown run and the lead went to 20-0. Locksley added another 1-yard TD run and UTEP led 27-3 at the break.

Rice closed to within the game's final margin with three unanswered touchdowns in the fourth quarter. The Owls had the ball with more than three minutes left, but A.J. Hotchkins came up with back-to-back sacks. On fourth down, Justin Rodgers intercepted Wiley Green and UTEP ran out the clock.

CLEMSON, S.C. — Travis Etienne ran for 153 yards and two touchdowns and 350-pound defensive tackle Dexter Lawrence added a 2-yard scoring burst in No. 2 Clemson's 77-16 victory over Louisville on Saturday.

The Tigers (6-0 Atlantic Coast Conference, No. 2 CFP) improved to 9-0 for the third time in four seasons and can wrap up their fourth ACC Atlantic Division title next week at Boston College.

Trevor Lawrence threw a pair of early touchdown passes. Etienne went over the 1,000-yard rushing mark and scored his ACC-leading 15th touchdown. Tavien Feaster added 101 yards rushing.

Freshman Lyn-J Dixon ran for 116 yards, the second time this season Clemson has had three runners with 100 or more yards. They finished with a season high 492 yards rushing.

Linebacker Isaiah Simmons had a pick-six, the Tigers collected five sacks, coach Dabo Swinney's eldest son Will caught a TD pass and even "Big Dex," a junior defensive tackle projected as a can't-miss, NFL first-rounder got in on the fun in the Tigers' "Fridge Package" against overmatched Louisville (2-7, 0-6).

NO. 5 MICHIGAN 42
PENN STATE 7

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Shea Patterson accounted for three touchdowns and No. 5 Michigan put together a dominant performance on defense in a 42-7 win over No. 14 Penn State on Saturday.

The Wolverines (8-1, 6-0 Big Ten, No. 5 CFP) moved a step closer toward their goals of winning a conference championship for the first time since 2004 and earning their first spot in the College Football Playoff.

The Nittany Lions (6-3, 3-3, No. 14 CFP) scored with 1:59 left, avoiding getting shut out for the first time since 2001 against Michigan.

Karan Higdon ran for 132 yards and a score that put the Wolverines up 35-0 early in the fourth quarter.

Michigan's defense held Penn State to 186 yards and forced three turnovers, including Tommy Stevens' interception that was returned 62 yards by Brandon Watson for its second score in the final minute of the third quarter.

The Nittany Lions started banged-up quarterback Trace McSorley and he was 5 of 13 for 83 yards with an interception and a fumble. McSorley hurt his right knee in last week's loss to Iowa. He shared time with Stevens, who was 3 of 4 for 35 yards. Stevens scored on an 8-yard run late in the game.

Patterson was 11 of 17 for 144 yards with two touchdown passes, a 23-yard throw to Donovan Peoples-Jones in the second quarter and a 7-yard strike to Zach Gentry. He ran 11 times, often on read-option plays, for 42 yards, including a 1-yard TD midway through the first quarter.

NO. 6 GEORGIA 34
NO. 11 KENTUCKY 17

LEXINGTON, Ky. — D'Andre Swift ran for a career-high 156 yards and two touchdowns on 16 carries against Kentucky's vaunted defense and No. 6 Georgia beat the No. 11 Wildcats 34-17 on Saturday to wrap up its second straight Southeastern Conference Eastern Division title.

Swift had an 83-yard breakaway in the third quarter that gave Georgia (8-1, 6-1, No. 6 College Football Playoff) a 28-3 lead. He also had a nifty 20-yard scoring run in the second period when the game was close.

Elijah Holyfield ran for a career-high 115 yards on 18 carries, scoring on a 4-yarder in the third quarter.

Georgia rushed for a season-high 331 yards to earn a spot in the SEC championship game Dec. 1 in Atlanta. Kentucky (7-2, 5-2, No. 9 CFP) has never reached the SEC championship game, which has been played every year since 1992.

Kentucky entered the weekend with the nation's top scoring defense and hadn't allowed anyone to exceed 20 points all year, but it couldn't slow down Georgia's tandem of Swift and Holyfield.

Before Saturday's game, the only player to rush for as many as 75 yards against Kentucky was Texas A&M's Trayveon Williams, who ran for 138 yards in a 20-14 overtime victory over the Wildcats. Swift and Holyfield were both over the 100-yard mark by the end of the third quarter.

Kentucky dominated time of possession through the first 1 1/2 quarters, but still trailed 7-3. That's when Swift started to give the Bulldogs some breathing room.

With Georgia facing second-and-17, Swift made a move around a defender at the line of scrimmage, made another move between two Wildcats about five yards downfield and shed a tackle inside the 5 to complete a remarkable 20-yard touchdown run.

Swift's touchdown gave Georgia a 14-3 late in the second quarter. Georgia fumbled away a scoring opportunity late in the first half but got the ball to open the second half and extended the lead to 21-3 on Holyfield's touchdown.

On Georgia's next series, Smith raced through a big hole on the left side of the line and didn't appear to get touched on his 87-yard sprint to the end zone. Before that play, Kentucky hadn't allowed a run from scrimmage longer than 34 yards all season.

Ohio State Buckeyes quarterback Dwayne Haskins Jr. (7) fails to complete a two point conversion in the fourth quarter of their game against the Nebraska Cornhuskers at Ohio Stadium on Saturday in Columbus, Ohio.

NO. 8 OHIO STATE 36
NEBRASKA 31

COLUMBUS, Ohio — J.K. Dobbins ran for three touchdowns and Dwayne Haskins Jr. passed for two more scores to help Ohio State beat Nebraska.

After Nebraska quarterback Adrian Martinez threw a 17-yard touchdown pass to JD Spielman to pull within five with 3 minutes left, Dobbins pounded away for two first downs to run out the clock.

Before the late Nebraska score, Dobbins broke through the right side and romped for a 42-yard touchdown with 5 minutes left to give Ohio State (8-1, 5-1 Big Ten, No. 10 CFP) breathing room.

Dobbins rushed for a season-high 163 yards — only his second 100-yard game this season. Running back Mike Weber added 91 yards on the ground.

Martinez threw for 266 yards and touchdown and rushed for two scores for Nebraska (2-7, 1-5).

ARIZONA STATE 38
NO. 16 UTAH 20

TEMPE, Ariz. — Manny Wilkins threw three touchdown passes to N'Keal Harry and Arizona State beat Utah 38-20 on Saturday, knocking the No. 16 Utes out of sole possession of first place in Pac-12 South.

The Utes (6-3, 4-3 Pac-12) lost quarterback Tyler Huntley with a broken collarbone.

The loss snapped Utah's four-game winning streak and dropped the Utes into a first-place tie with Arizona in the clogged Pac-12 South. USC was a half-game back and played Oregon State later Saturday. Arizona State (5-4, 3-3), with consecutive victories over USC and Utah, also is a half-game out.

Huntley was injured when he was hit while forcing a throw with 5:33 left in the third quarter. Freshman Jason Shelly replaced him and the offense struggled after that.

Harry, considered one of the top receivers in the country, caught nine passes for 161 yards, including TD catches of three, 23 and 61 yards. His three TD catches were a career high.

Wilkins completed 19 of 24 for 285 yards and three scores with one interception. Eno Benjamin rushed for 175 yards, including a 44-yard TD run that sealed the victory with 4:12 to play.

Arizona State gained 536 yards against a Utah defense that had been ranked No. 1 in the Pac-12

The Sun Devils took a quick 14-0 lead.

They went 75 yards in 11 plays in their first possession, Benjamin scoring on a six-yard run.

The Utes were moving after the subsequent kickoff when Huntley threw deep to Jaylen Dixon. But the ball bounced off of Dixon's chest at the goal line and into the hands of Arizona State's Aashari Croswell, who returned the interception 47 yards. Six plays later, Wilkins threw three yards to Harry and it was 14-0 with 5:09 left in the first quarter.

Utah reeled off 17 consecutive points to take the lead. The Utes went 80 yards in 11 plays for the go-ahead score, Huntley throwing a five-yard TD pass to Samson Nacua to put Utah up 17-14 with 2:15 left in the half.

But the advantage was short-lived.

Wilkins gained 16 yards on the ground and threw a 19-yard pass to Brandon Aijuk to set up a 23-yard touchdown pass to Harry and the Sun Devils were back on top 21-17 with 1:01 left in the half. The six-play, 77-yard drive used up just 1:14.

After Matt Gay's 31-yard field goal cut the Arizona State lead to 21-20 in the third quarter, Wilkins teamed with Harry for his biggest gain of the day. Harry broke open over the middle of the field, caught the pass and raced downfield, tackled just as the ball crossed the goal line and the Sun Devils lead 28-20.

Harry took a short pass and reversed the field for a 35-yard gain moments later to set up Brandon Ruiz's 21-yard field goal that made it 31-20 with 10:27 to play.

PURDUE 38
NO. 19 IOWA 36

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Spencer Evans made a 25-yard field goal with 8 seconds left Saturday, giving Purdue a 38-36 upset over No. 19 Iowa and putting the Boilermakers back in the Big Ten's West Division title hunt.

David Blough threw three touchdown passes to Terry Wright and topped the 300-yard mark for the fifth time this season.

The Boilermakers (5-4, 4-2 Big Ten) have won five of their last six and beat their third ranked team this season — the first time they've achieved that feat since 2003 — to move within one game of division leader Northwestern.

The Hawkeyes (6-3, 3-3) lost their second straight road game despite Nate Stanley's big day. The junior quarterback threw for 275 yards with one TD and ran for another but the conference's No. 2 scoring defense allowed a season-high point total.

And when the Hawkeyes needed one last stop, Blough drove Purdue 43 yards to set up Evans for the winning kick.

Blough was in complete control most of the game, going 23 of 32 with two interceptions while hooking up with Wright six times for 146 yards. Wright became the first Purdue receiver with three TD catches in one game since Gary Bush in 2012.

It didn't take Blough long to set the tone. He led the Boilermakers to scores on their first two drives, dropping in a beautiful 36-yard TD pass to Isaac Zico before Markell Jones scored on a 1-yard run.

Iowa got a 2-yard TD run from Ivory Kelly-Martin and a 34-yard field goal from Miguel Recinos to make it 14-10 early in the second quarter.

But Wright got behind Riley Moss and made a perfect adjustment to haul in a 41-yard TD, Purdue led 21-10.

Stanley's 1-yard plunge closed out the first-half scoring, making it 21-17.

Blough started the second half with a bang, finding Wright for an 82-yard TD pass on Purdue's first offensive play, then hooked up with Wright again on a 3-yard scoring play to make it 35-23 late in the third quarter.

Iowa got within 35-30 on Mekhi Sargent's 1-yard TD run early in the fourth and eventually took a 36-35 lead when Sargent scored on a 1-yard run following Blough's second interception of the day before the Hawkeyes' defense broke down.

NO. 22 SYRACUSE 41
WAKE FOREST 24

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Eric Dungey rushed for 119 yards and a touchdown, Jarveon Howard ran for two scores and Syracuse beat Wake Forest.

Dungey — whose average of 294.1 total yards per game ranks second in the ACC — was 23 of 35 for 157 yards and also ran for a 26-yard score to help the Orange (7-2, 4-2, No. 19 CFP) win their first game as a Top 25 team since the Dwight Freeney days in 2001.

Moe Neal added an 8-yard score, Chris Elmore had a 5-yard TD run and Andre Szmyt kicked two field goals for Syracuse, which earned its first conference road victory in more than two years.

Sam Hartman was 21 of 37 for 275 yards for the Demon Deacons (4-5, 1-4) with two touchdown passes.

NO. 24 BOSTON COLLEGE 31
VIRGINIA TECH 21

BLACKSBURG, Va. — Travis Levy ran for two touchdowns and No. 24 Boston College beat Virginia Tech 31-21 on Saturday to set up a huge home game against Clemson next week for the Eagles.

BC (7-2, 4-1 Atlantic Coast Conference, No. 22 CFP) limited the Hokies to 32 yards in the third quarter and erased a 14-7 deficit with 21 unanswered points after halftime. First-place in the ACC Atlantic Division will be on the line when the second-ranked Tigers visit Boston College.

Ryan Willis threw for 281 yards with three touchdown passes for Virginia Tech (4-4, 3-2), but the Hokies lost their third straight at home for the first time since 1992. It came on a day when they could have moved into a share of first place in the Coastal Division with a victory.

Levy scored on a 29-yard run midway through the third quarter to tie the game at 14, and his 1-yard run with 8:51 to play made it 28-14. In between, Anthony Brown got them the lead with a 22-yard TD pass to Korab Idrizi after an interception by Brandon Sebastian.

On the interception, Willis hit Damon Hazleton but the ball went off him and right into the hands of Sebastian.

BC star AJ Dillion had 24 carries for 96 yards and a 3-yard touchdown in the first quarter.

Willis completed 25 of 42 passes and ran for 49 more yards. His touchdowns — 26 yards to Hazleton, four yards to Eric Kumah and 14 yards to Tre Turner — all came when he threw the ball in their direction in one-on-one coverage and they came away with the reception.

Both quarterbacks missed on what could have been long scoring passes. Brown had Michael Walker well behind the secondary but overthrew him on what would have been a 90-yard play in the second quarter, and Willis underthrew Tre Turner in the middle of the field on a would-be 79-yard scoring play in the third quarter.

Texans' Thomas makes quick return trip to Denver

By Arnie Stapleton
Associated Press

DENVER — The Denver Broncos may have lost a respected voice when they traded former captain Demaryius Thomas to the Houston Texans on Tuesday, but they certainly didn't lose any of their gift of gab.

"I don't flinch from situations like this," declared rookie receiver Courtland Sutton , whose emergence as a big-play threat made the 30-year-old Thomas more valuable to general manager John Elway as trade bait than a tutor.

Broncos cornerback Chris Harris Jr., who credited Thomas with helping to make him the superstar he's become, will spend Sunday trying to snarl DeAndre Hopkins when the Broncos (3-5) host the Texans (5-3) in Thomas' hurried homecoming.

If Harris finds himself covering Thomas, who's replacing Will Fuller (ACL) in the Texans' lineup, the advantage goes to ...

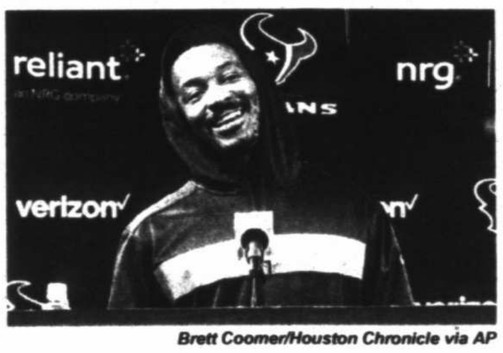

"Oh, me," Harris said matter-of-factly.

Why's that?

"I'm that good."

The same can't be said for the Broncos overall.

Brett Coomer/Houston Chronicle via AP

Houston Texans wide receiver Demaryius Thomas leaves the podium Wednesday following a news conference at NRG Stadium in Houston. Demaryius Thomas' trade from the Denver Broncos to the Houston Texans wasn't so much a good-bye as a see-you-later—as in Sunday, when the Texans (5-3) visit the Broncos (3-5).

despite a backfield that's the best in the business, averaging an NFL-high 5.3 yards per carry but just 18th in rush attempts per game.

Offensive coordinator Bill Musgrave is doing what Mike McCoy did in Denver before getting fired last year: spreading out the offensive formations despite a good ground game and left tackle Garett Bolles' holding habit.

Case Keenum has been sacked 22 times, 20 of which have come with him in the shotgun, to go with a league-high 10 interceptions.

Defensively, the Broncos have been stumped by cornerback Bradley Roby's slide after his promotion from nickel back following the trade of Aqib Talib. In a contract year, they expected him to flourish as a starter. Instead, he's been giving his man too much cushion or getting fooled by quarterbacks burning him for big plays.

Middling drafts prior to this year's crescendo has left coach Vance Joseph (8-16) without the option of benching Bolles or Roby, although cornerback Tramaine Brock's return from a pulled hamstring and solid play over the past two weeks could foretell a return to some nickel back snaps for Roby.

Elway insists the Broncos can turn things around over the second half and avoid the franchise's first back-to-back losing seasons since 1971-72.

If not, Joseph could be out of a job.

Texans coach Bill O'Brien was feeling the heat himself before J.J. Watt and DeShaun Watson rounded into form, leading Houston on a five-game winning streak, something only four other teams in the Super Bowl era have done after starting 0-3.

The Texans were devastated last week when receiver Will Fuller (32 catches, 503 yards, 4 TDs) tore an ACL, ending his season.

Enter Thomas (36 catches, 402 yards, three TDs) .

"It's going to be great" having Thomas alongside Hopkins, Watson said. "Nothing really should stop the train. D.T.'s a veteran guy that can do a lot of different things and he's played a lot football. So it's a great opportunity for all of us to get on the same page and continue to put a lot yards in the air and put a lot points on the board."

Accelerate wins Breeders' Cup Classic

By Gary B. Graves
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Even if he isn't recognized as this year's top thoroughbred, Accelerate all but assured his place as North America's best older horse.

His signature win in the Breeders' Cup Classic should solidify his credentials for multiple honors.

Accelerate took the lead at the top of the stretch and held off Gunnevera to win the $6 million Classic by a length Saturday, strengthening his bid for Horse of the Year over Triple Crown winner Justify.

The race lacked the retired 3-year-old star and left a wide-open field, which the 5-year-old chestnut horse eventually overtook after breaking from the No. 14 post as the favorite. Accelerate made a sweeping move in the far turn and was in charge at the top of the stretch, then held off Gunnevera for his fifth consecutive Grade 1 victory and sixth of seven overall this year.

That gave trainer John Sadler his first Breeders' Cup win since his initial starter 30 years ago.

As for the California-based Accelerate being named this year's top thoroughbred, Sadler said he'd leave that up to media who vote on the Eclipse Awards. He noted his own bias, though.

"To me, he's the Horse of the Year, no doubt," Sadler said. "He's won all those great races. To win the Santa Anita Handicap (in March) was for me probably one or two on my bucket list.

"The Classic is a newer race but a great race, and he won that so smashingly. He's just a great horse and had a great year."

Ridden by Joel Rosario, Accelerate covered 1 1/4 miles in 2:02.93 and paid $7.40, $6 and $4.40.

"He broke really well," Rosario said of Accelerate. "I was on the outside and had to use him a little bit. I just wanted to get a position because I was way out there. I know I had a long run to the turn but I wanted to be not too wide.

"When I got to the backside I tried to be in the clear, which is what he likes to do."

The Classic triumph capped a successful Breeders' Cup for the jockey, who also rode Game Winner and Jaywalk to victories on Friday in the Juvenile and Juvenile Fillies Turf, respectively.

Gunnevera returned $21.80 and $11.80, while Thunder Snow paid $8 in redeeming himself at Churchill Downs after a last-place finish in the 2017 Kentucky Derby.

Off the board were Hall of Fame trainer Bob Baffert's duo of West Coast and McKinzie. They finished seventh and 12th, respectively, after projections of challenging Accelerate in the marquee event of nine season-ending championship races.

"They looked good for a mile," Baffert said. "They just tired and just didn't have it today."

Gunnevera, Thunder Snow and early pace setter Mendelssohn made things interesting before 70,423, an upside to the absence of horse racing's 13th Triple Crown winner from the Classic. Justify's ankle issue led Baffert to retire the colt in July, eliminating the opportunity to follow 2015 Triple Crown winner American Pharoah in pursuit of a rare grand slam.

Accelerate claimed his fourth race in a row and answered the question of if he could continue his roll after beating West Coast by 2 1/4 lengths in the Awesome Again Stakes at Santa Anita. And it followed other notable performances on the second day of the $30 million championships.

Monomoy Girl bolstered her case as the top 3-year-old filly by winning the $2 million Distaff. The anticipated duel between the reigning Kentucky Oaks winner and her 2017 predecessor Abel Tasman never materialized, as Monomoy Girl made her move at the final turn and held off Wow Cat by a length for her sixth victory this season.

"She was training like a monster and ran like a monster," said Louisville-based trainer Brad Cox, who earned his first Cup victory. Jockey Florent Geroux collected his fifth win.

Peter Miller made Breeders' Cup history as the first trainer to saddle two repeat winners in the same Breeders' Cup races. Soon after Stormy Liberal out-dueled favorite World of Trouble to retake the $1 million Turf Sprint by a neck, 6-year-old Roy H swept past Promises Fulfilled and flew to a 3 1/4-length win in the $2 million Sprint. Jockey Paco Lopez earned his first Breeders' Cup victory.

Rodgers-Brady a spicy prime-time matchup in Week 9

By Dennis Waszak Jr.
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Aaron Rodgers vs. Tom Brady. Green Bay vs. New England. Talk about one spicy prime-time matchup.

The two will meet for just the second time when the Packers (3-3-1) and Patriots (6-2) square off Sunday night.

The weekend began Thursday night with the San Francisco 49ers' 34-3 victory over the Oakland Raiders in a lopsided Battle of the Bay. Nick Mullens threw for 262 yards and three touchdowns for the most productive NFL debut since the merger for the 49ers (2-7). The Raiders are 1-7.

Los Angeles Rams (8-0) at New Orleans (6-1)

The Rams put their undefeated mark — the only team in the NFL yet to lose — on the line in a game that features the squads with the NFC's best records.

Los Angeles boasts the No. 2 overall offense with the top-ranked running game in the league, led by the versatile and electric Todd Gurley. But the Saints have the No. 1 run defense in the NFL, so something's got to give, right?

Pittsburgh (4-2-1) at Baltimore (4-4)

Joe Flacco and the Ravens won the first meeting this season, 26-14 on Sept. 30, and Baltimore will try to complete its first series sweep since 2015.

Big Ben & Co. are looking for their fourth straight victory, and that's despite all the drama — will he show up or not? — surrounding the still absent Le'Veon Bell. James Conner has done just fine in his place, though, rushing for 599 yards and nine touchdowns this season.

Kansas City (7-1) at Cleveland (2-5-1)

Just what the struggling Browns need: a matchup against the team that has the best record in the AFC as well as the NFL's most potent offense.

The Chiefs average a league-high 36.3 points per game and Patrick Mahomes has been putting up eye-popping numbers. He has a league-leading 26 TD passes, just four shy of the franchise record set by Len Dawson in 1964, and has thrown for 300 yards or more in a Chiefs-record seven straight games. Mahomes also leads the NFL in yards passing (2,526) and TD-to-INT rate (plus-20).

Los Angeles Chargers (5-2) at Seattle (4-3)

Philip Rivers and the Chargers are well-rested after their bye-week break, looking to keep things going after a solid start to the season.

Rivers will start in his 200th straight game, becoming just the 10th player since the merger in 1970 with such a streak. And he has shown little signs of slowing. Rivers is tied for third in the NFL with 17 touchdown passes.

Houston (5-3) at Denver (3-5)

Wide receiver Demaryius Thomas will face the team with which he spent his first eight-plus NFL seasons before being traded to the Texans on Tuesday. He'll be counted on by Houston right away to replace the injured Will Fuller and keep the DeShaun Watson-led offense humming.

Tampa Bay (3-4) at Carolina (5-2)

Fitzmagic is back. Again.

Ryan Fitzpatrick will start at quarterback for the Buccaneers — who rank No. 1 in the NFL in total offense — in place of the benched Jameis Winston. He'll look to recapture some of the success he had during his four-game stint as the starter at the beginning of the season. The 35-year-old Fitzpatrick threw for over 400 yards in each of the first three games, and had 11 touchdowns in that span with four interceptions before giving way to Winston.

New York Jets (3-5) at Miami (4-4)

Sam Darnold faces the Dolphins for the second time, looking for a much better outing than the one he had in Week 2 when New York lost 20-12. The rookie threw for 334 yards — still a personal best — but also had two interceptions.

Atlanta (3-4) at Washington (5-2)

The ageless Adrian Peterson and the Redskins will try to go two games up on Philadelphia in the NFC East. They'll have to get past the Falcons first, though, and Atlanta has won each of the last five meetings.

Peterson, by the way, rushed for 149 yards and a TD last week against the Giants. He has some past success when facing Atlanta, with 442 yards from scrimmage and three TDs in three games against the Falcons.

Detroit (3-4) at Minnesota (4-3-1)

Adam Thielen comes into this one with his sights set on the end zone — as usual.

The Vikings wide receiver is tied with former Lions star Calvin Johnson (2012) with eight straight games of 100 or more yards receiving, the longest streak in NFL history.

Chicago (4-3) at Buffalo (2-6)

The Bears stopped a two-game skid last week by manhandling the Jets. Even more impressive was the way Mitchell Trubisky rebounded from a so-so first half in that game.

The second-year QB failed to throw for 300 or more yards after three straight while finishing with 222, but he had two touchdown passes and no interceptions. He has 13 TDs in his last four games, the most in that type of span for Chicago since Sid Luckman in 1947.

Tennessee (3-4) at Dallas (3-4)

Amari Cooper makes his Cowboys debut after being acquired from Oakland on Tuesday, giving Dak Prescott a new No. 1 wide receiver.

He comes just in time to boost a passing game that ranks a lowly 29th in the NFL. Dallas made another change during its bye-week break by firing offensive line coach Paul Alexander and promoting former Cowboys lineman Marc Colombo.

ACE A 30-MINUTE INTERVIEW

By Kim Thompson

It's no surprise that preparing for an interview combined with your desire to be the best candidate can be somewhat stressful. The pressure builds when your interview is scheduled to last 30 minutes and you need to make a lasting impression.

Recently a friend of mine was invited for an interview, and even though he was excited about the opportunity, he had concerns over the amount time to discuss his background and skills. The 30-minute time slot seemed to create more angst for him than a half-day of interviews.

We discussed a new strategy he could use to help him focus on the questions being asked rather than the clock ticking behind him. The pressure he was feeling was getting him off-focus: Instead of ramping up his answers he was worried about trying to cram his whole career history into 30 minutes.

He is not alone in admitting the same dilemma that other candidates face – "How do you make a good impression in 30 minutes or less?" The biggest mistakes job candidates make during short, structured interviews is failing to prepare and overwhelming the interviewer(s) with too many details.

Here are some tips we discussed that could help you feel less anxious and more confident the next time you are invited for a 30-minute interview.

- Answer questions in terms of broad strokes, overarching contributions that lend credibility to your skills. Stay away from getting too involved with details. When every accomplishment is explained word-by-word you run the risk of losing the interviewer's attention and the momentum.
- Break your career into themes, look for the common problems you solved throughout your career. Identify the skills you used and make sure they relate to the job description.
- List your accomplishments on a sheet of paper and use the job position as a guide to address the employer's needs. Since you only have 30-minutes each answer counts.
- Listen to the questions asked, if you aren't sure you understand, ask for clarification before answering. Mistakes happen when candidates ramble.
- Highlight your contributions. It's better to leave the interviewer(s) with a handful of significant skills than to overwhelm them with everything you can do.
- Prepare and practice with your introduction. Don't memorize it, just be comfortable in talking about your background with the emphasis on matching the needs/requirements the employer is looking for.
- Know why you want the job and what interests you in working for the employer.
- Have at least three or four questions to ask that pertain to the job and employer's needs. Time is valuable and the questions you ask need to send a perception that you have researched the company and are interested in contributing.
- Take some deep breaths before the interview and smile. Non-verbal language always speaks louder than words. Even if your interview is over the phone, people can sense smiling versus being uptight and anxious. Your goal is to make yourself distinguishable from other candidates by having clear answers that convey you are the right candidate for the job. Always inquire about the next steps.

How do you prepare for 30-minute interviews? What have you learned from your interview experiences?

810 W. KANSAS - $399,500

Beautifully remodeled property just minutes from the duck pond with 3 bedrooms and 2 baths. When entering the home, you are greeted by lovely woodwork and moldings along the ceilings and walls in the formal dining and living. The original hardwoods have been beautifully restored and are present in the living, dining, kitchen and bedrooms. The fully remodeled kitchen offers beautiful granite counter tops, updated appliances and cabinetry and is open to the formal dining and wine bar. The home offers two patios – a covered side patio off the formal living and a large covered patio off the family room. The oversized master suite is equipped with a private bath, two walk-in closets and a dressing table. There is a large family room off the back of the house with an attached half bath and access to the patio - perfect for entertaining in the backyard! Beautiful plantation shutters, original glass door knobs and extra wide crown molding add to the beautiful charm of this "old Midland" home. A must see!!

Updates in the last two years: New roof, fully remodeled kitchen, restored the hardwood floors, exterior paint, luxury vinyl plank flooring in second living, pergola on back patio, added wine bar, light and plumbing fixtures, plantation shutters throughout.

Schools for this area include Houston Elementary, San Jacinto Middle, and Midland High. For a private showing, call Cindy Kellough (432) 556-4044 or Christina McMillan, Broker Associate (432) 556-4155.

Deep Cleaning Your Kitchen Counter

If your kitchen counter cleaning routine consists of swiping a sponge every few days, you could have a serious germ build-up you aren't even aware of. Because your kitchen counter is likely your main meal prep area, proper sanitation is critical for food safety.

Read on for tips on cleaning each type of counter surface.

Marble. Luckily, marble is pretty easy to clean. The recommended solution for maintenance cleaning is a solution of warm water and non-abrasive dish soap. Avoid acidic cleaners, even natural ones like vinegar and lemon juice, as those may eat away at your stone surface.

Granite. Similar to marble, granite countertops need only mild dish soap, warm water, and a soft, non-abrasive towel. If you want to disinfect the surface after cleaning, swipe with isopropyl alcohol.

Tile. While tile can be easily cleaned with soap and water, keeping your grout fresh is another story. To really sanitize and reduce staining in your grout, turn to a scouring powder with bleach.

Stainless steel. These sleek, industrial-looking surfaces need nothing more than a sprinkle of baking soda and a swipe of vinegar. In addition to cleaning with soap and water on a daily basis, try the baking soda and vinegar trick once a week to keep your counter shining.

Wood. Wood counters classically come in the form of the butcher block counter, which can offer a beautiful rustic vibe - but they stain easily and can be tough to keep clean. First, scrub your countertop with warm water and mild dish soap. After you fully rinse the soap residue away, follow up with a spray bottle of straight white vinegar to sanitize. Let it sit for 5 - 10 minutes and wipe with a damp, clean towel.

DECADE OF REBUILDING

Galveston County Museum director and curator Jennifer Wycoff speaks Oct. 15 about the challenges she has faced in getting the museum up and running again in Galveston.

Galveston County Museum, closed since 2008's Ike, to reopen

By John Wayne Ferguson
The Galveston County Daily News

GALVESTON — For years now, small signs have hung on the double doors at the back of the bottom floor of the Galveston County Courthouse.

"Museum Under Construction. Please Do Not Enter."

The Galveston County Museum's director hopes the signs don't have to hang much longer.

"It's definitely coming," said Jennifer Wycoff, the museum's director and curator. "I get people coming by every day, calling, asking 'Can I come in?'"

The museum has been closed since Hurricane Ike flooded its old site inside the former City National Bank building on Market Street in September 2008. While no artifacts were damaged, the building was unusable as a museum, officials said.

In 2014, the county moved the museum, and its thousands of artifacts to the courthouse building into a space that was once was the county's jury selection room. That same year, the county hired Wycoff as the museum's director and curator.

The county originally intended to open the museum soon after Wycoff was hired. But plans changed, the grand re-opening was moved to sometime in 2018 — according to an informational sign that hangs next to the double doors.

Inside the museum, there's a mix of completed displays and incomplete projects. An antique harp needs to be restrung, and a mural dedicated to the county's most historical moments still needs to be touched up.

Wycoff hopes to have the museum opened in some form by December, though it was apparent there is still a lot of work to be done in the exhibition space.

Wycoff does most of the planning and design of the museum herself. She has one part-time employee who helps with cataloging and historical research for the exhibits, she said.

Much of the work being done to construct the exhibits is performed by trustees from the Galveston County Jail, she said. The museum also receives help from Texas A&M University at Galveston students, she said.

The museum has a budget of about $183,000, according to the county's 2019 adopted budget. More than half of the budget goes toward salaries and related expenses. The county didn't budget any money toward building improvements this year, after committing more than $16,000 to improvements to the museum in 2017.

Old photographs line a display case at the Galveston County Museum.

The museum had requested $38,000 in building improvement funds before this year's budget was passed, according to budget documents. The small budget is part of the reason the rebuilding project isn't complete, Wycoff said.

"The budget is small, that's why I don't have a lot of staff," she said. Wycoff would rather be focused on art direction and development, but has to do a lot of physical work herself, she said.

In addition to the main display area, Wycoff sometimes displays smaller exhibits in display cases in the bottom floor of the county courthouse.

When it is completed, the main museum will feature displays dedicated to the 1900 storm, local Native American tribes, Galveston corner stores, Mardi Gras, local immigrants and the history of gambling on Galveston Island.

Some of the exhibits are mostly complete, though Wycoff is still hoping to install better, museum-quality lighting inside the museum, she said. She planned to have a proposal for the lighting in front of county commissioners in coming months, she said.

"I would expect around Christmas," she said. "But it has to be dim, dark and lit with mood. When that's in, I can do everything."

Meanwhile, thousands of museum pieces are being stored in locked rooms around the county government building, in spaces that were once part of the county jail. Even when the museum is open, it's unlikely that all the pieces would be put on display, Wycoff said.

Film festival to feature foreign, American productions

By Rich Lopez
jrlopez@mrt.com

ODESSA — More than 40 films will be shown at the West Texas Film Festival later this month. Entries range from shorts to full-length features with submissions from around the globe. The festival is planned for Nov. 15-18 at the Jack Rodgers Auditorium at Odessa College.

"We are excited about the broad group of films, both foreign and domestic, for this year's festival," said Harlan Whatley, festival director, in a press release.

The festival also marks the final event for the Odessa Arts initiative ArtPocalypse, an endeavor to have West Texans partake in area arts and cultural events such as theater productions, book talks and art openings.

"The ArtPocalypse was really a labor of love for me," he said in a phone interview. "I've been planning it for three years, and to see it out in the community was amazing. My greatest joy was seeing new patrons discover our amazing organizations like the Ellen Noël and the Permian Playhouse. My hope is that they return time and time again and strengthen the reach of our cultural community."

Odessa Arts executive director Randy Ham sees the film festival as a prime opportunity for West Texas.

"Harlan and his volunteers work to find excellent films from all over the world to showcase here in Odessa," Ham said. "For me, it's a shining example of using the arts to bring the world to West Texas."

The festival celebrates diverse voices in films from Texas filmmakers on opening day to numerous foreign movies.

"We've come up with an international slate mixed in with Texas and American films," Whatley said.

Along with those selections, the Friday theme is Education Day, which features student pieces and appearances by filmmakers Brian David Cange, Shake Jones, Tracee Beebe, James Fite and John. L. Greer.

"We want to have opportunities for students and audiences to learn about filmmaking," he said.

Along with films and lectures, the festival will grant awards for documentary, feature, short, student film, screenplay and a new award for television pilot.

Ultimately, Whatley hopes that West Texans attend the festival for a variety of films they might not see otherwise.

"I'd like us to get some high-profile person as a guest and we may have to move the event to not compete with the fall calendar, which might boost our numbers," he said. "But I like that it brings all types of people together because everyone likes movies."

OUT&ABOUT

by Julie Donnelly

LIVING HISTORY CAMP IS PART OF CAF AIRSHO

The Commemorative Air Force High Sky Wing held its two-day AirSho 2018 at Midland International Air & Space Port. This year's show featured the 80th anniversary of the formation flying of the T-6 trainers, a Vietnam tribute, and paratroopers with pyrotechnics. Both days concluded with the missing man formation flyover.

On the bomber ramp, airplane enthusiasts received a first-hand look inside the cockpit of a B1 bomber, which was also the last plane with its original interior. The plane was flying out the next day for a full cockpit makeover in Oklahoma City. Helicopter rides were also available as part of a fundraiser. In front of the main hangar, families enjoyed the living history camp, where children got to hold old-fashioned military artillery, protective gear and uniforms that represented what was used during battle.

LUNCHEON KICKS OFF JUNIOR LEAGUE SUSTAINERS' YEAR

Sustainers in the Junior League of Midland kicked off their year at the annual sustainer luncheon at Midland Country Club. Hostesses were Jann Bash, Barbara Buckley-Hobgood, Julie Donnelly, Jananne McLaughlin, Darlene Parkis, Jackie Rendell, Cecily Shull and Sally Sipes.

Anne Mouton, sustainer director, introduced the league's current president, Myndi Easter. Easter discussed her theme for the next year, "Be An Unstoppable Change," highlighting the change the league is making through its five community projects. Kassadie Barela then addressed the sustainers about the league's 70th anniversary events.

For lunch, members enjoyed roasted chicken, potato fries, rolls and a vegetable medley. Cheesecake topped with strawberries and chocolate cake with whipped cream were the choices for dessert. The highlight of the lunch was a runway style show by Studio SoHo featuring some of the sustaining members in the most current fashion trends.

Dad threatens to disown son if he digs into family history

DEAR ABBY: I am a 22-year-old, single male who recently graduated from college. I received lots of congratulations in person and by phone, text and social media.

One of them came from a woman my age named "Bree." When I responded, I didn't recall ever having friended her but learned she's a cousin who lives back east. Apparently, her mother and my father are siblings. When I asked my father about it, he got very defensive and told me whoever it was I spoke to is a complete and total liar. Ordinarily, I might have agreed, but his reaction tells me there's a lot more to this.

I want to find out more. Neither of my parents will say a word about it, and I don't know why. When I told them I plan to travel to the East Coast and meet Bree, I was told I may not be welcomed back if I do. This makes me wonder what horrible thing could have happened that would make a father consider disowning his son.

Because my father won't share the truth with me, I am left with only this option. Pursue this, find part of my family I never knew existed and learn something, but lose the family I have and regret it forever. Any insight? — LOST COUSIN IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR COUSIN: I can offer insight, but not a roadmap for how to proceed. Family secrets can be devastating. That your father reacted so strongly shows how threatened he is that you might uncover something he isn't proud of.

As a college graduate, I am sure you are familiar with the myth about Pandora's box. While you may not lose your father if you delve into this, you may find that when you do, your image of him may be shattered. If you feel you will "regret it forever" if you do, then make sure you are prepared for the possible penalty.

DEAR ABBY: My only son and his wife had their first baby recently. My daughter-in-law treats me terribly. She's hypercritical of what I do or say. I am usually so blindsided I don't have much of a reply.

When I attempted to help with the laundry, cleaning, etc., I was met with more criticism and advice on how to perform those tasks. She also says I don't know how to properly hold an infant. Abby, I have raised five children. How can I change this situation? — PUNISHED FOR WANTING TO HELP

DEAR PUNISHED: Remind your daughter-in-law that you're just trying to help her. She may not have been critical of your efforts as much as trying to convey how she would like those tasks done. However, if you can't please her, take the hint and stop offering.

She may be a nervous new mother, but she appears to have gone overboard to the point of being tactless. The next time she mentions you don't know how to hold a baby, point out that you managed to raise five of them safely to adulthood. Then back off and give her some space because she may be hormonal and need it.

Portobello mushrooms can be dressed like burgers

HINTS FROM HELOISE

King Features Syndicate

Dear Heloise: My family loves Portobello mushrooms. Since we are vegans, we eat them the same way you might dress a hamburger, or we grill them. One of my favorite ways to make them is to soak the mushroom caps in balsamic vinegar for 10 minutes, then grill for about three to five minutes on each side and serve with a little feta cheese crumbled over top. — Vicki A., Mesa, Ariz.

Potato soup

Dear Heloise: Please repeat your potato soup recipe. Now that the cooler weather is coming, we enjoy a hot bowl of soup in the evenings, and we're especially fond of potato soup. — Jenny in Spring Branch

Jenny, I'd love to. You'll need:

- 4 medium potatoes, cubed
- 1 small onion, chopped fine
- 1 tablespoon shortening or olive oil
- 1 cup water
- 2 cups milk
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- Dash of pepper

Cook potatoes, onion, oil (or shortening) and water in a large pot until potatoes are soft. Add remaining ingredients and simmer for 20 to 30 minutes. Serves 4.

Since you liked this potato soup recipe, you'll love my pamphlet Heloise's Spectacular Soups. Order it online at Heloise.com.

A tasty tip: Puree celery and onions in a blender and add to most soups for extra flavor and without extra calories. — Heloise

Soften honey

Dear Heloise: We love natural honey, but it often gets "sugary" and solid. I've found that if I microwave the honey in its jar for a couple of minutes, it will return to its pourable state. Microwaving time varies with the amount of honey in the jar, so I start with small increments of zapping time. If the jar has a metal lid, be sure to remove it before microwaving. — Phyllis N., Quincy, Wash.

Banana's life

Dear Heloise: Can bananas be frozen? If they can be, are they edible after thawing? — Odette Y., Missoula, Mont.

Yes, you can freeze bananas and use them when making banana bread or muffins. When they thaw out, they're usually a bit too mushy to just peel and eat. — Heloise

Sleeves and liners

Dear Heloise: I save saltine sleeves and cereal-box liners. The sleeves are great as disposable cutting boards, and the cereal-box liners can be used as small trash can bags. They never leak. Put one in your car so your carpet stays clean, or use to stash a wet umbrella. — Rose J., Dayton, Ohio

The trick to getting velvety pumpkin soup is canned pumpkin

By America's Test Kitchen

This velvety pumpkin soup is surprisingly easy and fast thanks to canned pumpkin. The trick is getting rich, balanced pumpkin flavor out of a can.

We started by creating a deeply flavorful base for our soup by softening onion and then adding cumin, coriander, and nutmeg, which gave us a warm-spiced flavor that paired well with pumpkin.

Maple syrup was the ideal sweetener, adding depth and enhancing the nuttiness of the soup without overwhelming it with sweetness.

A combination of vegetable broth and water gave the soup a subtle savory backbone, and just a half cup of half-and-half gave us an ideal creamy texture. Briefly simmering the pumpkin in the flavorful liquid allowed the flavors to meld and cooked off the tinny flavor of the canned pumpkin; we then pureed the soup to a silky consistency.

Be sure to buy pure canned pumpkin, not pumpkin pie filling, which has sugar and spices added. Crumbled blue cheese and toasted, chopped walnuts make nice garnishes to this soup.

11th-hour harvest pumpkin soup

Servings: 4-6
Start to finish: 45 minutes

- 2 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 1 onion, minced
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1/2 teaspoon ground coriander
- 1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 3 cups vegetable broth, plus extra as needed
- 2 cups water
- 1 (15-ounce) can unsweetened pumpkin puree
- 1/4 cup maple syrup
- 1/2 cup half-and-half
- Salt and pepper

Melt butter in Dutch oven over medium heat. Add onion and cook until softened, about 5 minutes. Stir in garlic, cumin, coriander, and nutmeg and cook until fragrant, about 30 seconds.

Stir in broth, water, pumpkin, and maple syrup, scraping up any browned bits, and bring to boil. Reduce to simmer and cook until flavors have melded, about 15 minutes.

Working in batches, process soup in blender until smooth, 1 to 2 minutes. Return pureed soup to clean pot and stir in half-and-half; adjust consistency with additional broth as needed. Heat soup gently over low heat until hot (do not boil). Season with salt and pepper to taste, and serve.

Opening lead: Four of ♠ Players will usually prefer to play game in an eight-card major suit fit rather than play in no-trump. That's a good idea, but when the hand with the five-card major is otherwise balanced and his partner's hand is completely balanced, nine tricks at no-trump might prove easier to take.

Today's deal is from a team game. At this table, East won the opening spade lead with his ace and shifted to a low diamond, setting up three potential diamond tricks for himself. South won the shift with his queen and led the 10 of hearts to the queen and ace. He crossed back to his hand with a club to lead the nine of hearts. He was hoping West would cover and East would have a doubleton eight, but that hope vanished when West played the eight. Declarer rose with dummy's ace and took his nine tricks — two spades, two hearts, one diamond, and four clubs. Making three!

At the other table, North-South "found" their eight-card heart fit. There were four certain losers and declarer never had a chance. Down one.

no-trump is often best when one player has a six-card minor suit. Be on the lookout for hands that might play better in notrump despite a five-three major suit fit. It is almost always right to play in a major with a four-four fit, unless both hands are "mirrored," meaning they have exactly the same length in all four suits.

Mourning dove increases in population across country

MICHAEL PRICE
Wild About Texas

The mourning dove (Zenaida macroura) is a large species of dove whose natural range encompasses more territory of North America than any native dove species. It can be observed from southern Canada southward throughout the continental United States continuing southward to southern Mexico and Central America.

Only the non-native and established rock dove (or pigeon) has a more extensive range. It is a permanent resident in the clear majority of this area, including all of Texas. It is a migratory species only in the extreme northern portions of its range.

At first glance, this large species is somewhat drab in coloration, like most other doves. However, it has a beauty that has been described as delicate. The large brown eyes surrounded with a light blue ring and the pinkish coloration of the crown of the head and breast enhance that description. It has grayish brown upper and underparts with a few large black spots on the upper wings. There is also a distinctive black spot on the cheek, and usually another one right behind the eye. It also has smaller, less noticeable white tips on the relatively long and pointed tail. The bill is dark and slightly curved, while the legs are comparatively short and pink-colored. With a body length of about 12 inches and a wingspan that approaches 19 inches, it is the largest species of native dove that can be encountered in West Texas.

While the mourning dove can occasionally be seen in small groups, it is not a gregarious species like its close relative the white-winged dove. Most male mourning doves will aggressively protect their territory. Typically, only when feeding at the same field or drinking at the same pond are more than two or three found together. They feed almost exclusively on grains and other seeds. The flight pattern is easily recognizable because it is a direct path, although many times the bird will zig-zag with strong and rapid wing-beats. The strength of the wingbeats is often heard in the sound of whistle as the bird flies by.

This species of bird pairs up during the breeding season, with the male and female remaining monogamous. It has been reported that this species of dove may pair up with a partner for life.

The nest is placed either near the ground in various cacti plants or shrubs, or more commonly, in trees up to 50 feet above ground. The saucer-shaped and rather flimsy nest is made up of grasses, sticks and stems. Often, the male gathers the materials while the female is charged with the nest building.

The two eggs are medium-sized (just over 1 inch in length), unmarked and white. These eggs hatch in about two weeks after the male and female both take turns at incubating them. After hatching, both sexes continue to tend to the helpless young until they leave the nest about two weeks after hatching. During this time, the young are fed with what has been called "pigeon's milk." This "milk" is produced in the crop of the parents and then subsequently regurgitated into the mouths of the hungry offspring.

Juveniles are colored like the adults, and up to five broods per year have been recorded in Texas.

The mourning dove is a common bird whose population numbers appear to be increasing. Like other doves, it has adapted well to habitat changes by humans. The use of bird-feeding stations with small seeds such as millet and sunflower seeds will attract this common species of dove to your yard for closer observation.

In 31 of the 48 continental states where it occurs, it is managed as a game species, meaning that it is legal to hunt for short periods of time. It has been estimated that more than 30 million doves are legally harvested annually by hunters.

Shannon Tompkins/ Houston Chronicle

Texas' resident mourning dove population, the largest in the nation, had a good year of nesting, boosting their numbers to 30-40 million birds ahead of the Sept. 1 opening of what wildlife officials expect will be a very productive hunting season for the state's 300,000-plus dove hunters.

Harvey recovery: 500 free trees offered Saturday in Houston

Associated Press

HOUSTON — About 500 trees will be given away Saturday in Houston as part of recovery efforts following last year's Hurricane Harvey.

The Texas A&M Forest Service on Thursday announced plans to host the event associated with the NASCAR Green Race for Trees Campaign. It's also a project of the Arbor Day Foundation, the Harris County Master Gardener Association and Texas A&M AgriLife.

The free trees for Houston residents will replace those damaged and destroyed by Harvey, which struck in August 2017.

Staff forester Monica Singhania says the trees, in containers, are live oaks, bald cypress, bur oaks and red maples. Saturday morning's giveaway is at Hermann Park.

Singhania says more than 1,000 trees were given away during similar events Oct. 13 in Houston and Oct. 20 in Port Aransas.

Yuccas create landscape excitement

ON GARDENING
By Norman Winter

Look out America, Color Guard and Golden Sword are changing landscapes in dramatic fashion. Believe it or not, these two selections of our native Yucca filamentosa are crushing the cookie cutter, lookalike landscapes, no matter the season.

Now when I say our native, I'm not talking the desert southwest but the east from Texas to New York. That's correct: these evergreen yuccas are cold hardy from zones 4 through 10. Color Guard and Golden Sword are exciting additions to the flower bed and will entice visitors to bring out their cameras.

Both varieties reach 24-inches tall, and perhaps a little wider, showing off their green and gold variegation. Why not grow a garden of yucca, cactus, and agave? The palette of colors and partnerships is only limited by your imagination.

They pair nicely with begonias and red spider lilies. Whatever the season, or the possible partnerships, all will look dazzling beyond your dreams when grown with these showy variegated yuccas.

Right now, in Columbus, Ga., professional landscapers are using them as pansy pals, which look stunning — the pansies haven't even kicked into gear so to speak. But it's not just pansies: another has them with Citrona and Black Pearl heuchera as well as Juncus and pansies.

Typically, everyone thinks of cabbage, kale, mustard, and chard as foliage plants to be pansy partners, which is certainly appropriate. They are treated as annuals to be replanted every year. With the Color Guard or Golden Sword, however, you will be growing one that is essentially an evergreen perennial.

In addition to the excitement it creates by being an unexpected plant, it also stands out by virtue of rising above the horizontal plane. If you are unfamiliar with this term, think of a bed of pansies, marigolds or even petunias. You could conceivably draw an imaginary line across the top of the bed. When you rise above this with spikey flowers, or in the case of the yucca, a sword-like foliage, then there is a tremendous amount of added interest.

As you might expect from a native, it is an extremely drought-tolerant plant that requires good drainage. If your soil is clay or muck that holds water, then, by all means, improve your soil and plant on raised beds. They will produce offshoots which can be removed and planted elsewhere in the garden.

I'm raving about the foliage and architectural aspects of these plants, but each spring to early summer, there's another reason to get excited. These spikey plants produce creamy white, lightly fragrant blooms borne on 6-foot-tall stalks. These blooms are a delectable source of nectar for hummingbirds.

It is a rare week that goes by that someone doesn't ask me about deer-resistant plants. If you find yourself the proud owner of a roving herd, then rejoice; the Color Guard and Golden Sword yuccas will not become Bambi's salad.

Hairy Soapwort and Adam's Needle are common names associated with these yuccas. One look at the bright gold and green variegation of these tough-as-nails plants, however, will steal your heart in a 'New York Minute,' and that is pretty darn fast.

Garden chores to do in November

JESSICA DAMIANO
Newsday

In life, November is a month for reflection and gratitude; in the garden, it's for cleaning and clearing. Although preparing the home for family visits and holiday celebrations is front-and-center for many, making time to prepare the garden will go a long way toward ensuring healthy plants and a clean slate come spring. This year, I'm thankful for a newly power-washed fence, a "Blue Diddley" chaste tree, an Incrediball blush smooth hydrangea and a fragrant peach "At Last" landscape rose. Mostly, though, I'm thankful for my friends and family, and for all of you. Happy Thanksgiving!

1. For holiday blooms, pot amaryllis and paperwhite bulbs now. Get instructions at newsday.com/gardening101.
2. Mow the lawn one last time and shorter than usual (bring blades down to 1.5 inches, but only for the last cut of the season.)
3. Place Christmas cactus in bright light for 10 hours daily and total darkness at 55 to 60 degrees for 14 hours nightly, and you will have flowers for the holidays.
4. Daylight Saving Time ends at 2 a.m. Set clocks back an hour.
5. Winterize water gardens and cover koi ponds with netting to keep leaves and debris from mucking up the water.
6. "Elect" to adjust your pH for spring. Apply lime indicated by a soil test, then head for the polls.
7. Happy Diwali! Instead of traditional sweets, bring light to the lives of your loved ones by gifting a lucky bamboo plant.
8. Wait until after vines die back to harvest winter squash, but be sure to do so before frost hits.
9. Prune weak and damaged branches from trees so they won't break off and threaten damage and injury when winter winds whip up.
10. Clean, sharpen and oil pruners and other tools, then store in a dry spot so they will be ready to go when you need them in spring.
11. Empty soil from pots into the compost pile or garden holes that need filling, then rinse with a 10:1 water-bleach solution. If made of clay, pots should be stored indoors to prevent cracking.
12. To all my veteran readers: Many, many heartfelt thanks for your service!
13. Cut asparagus to the ground and mulch with 2 inches of well-rotted manure.
14. You can still plant evergreens. Be sure to water, apply mulch and protect young trees with burlap over winter.
15. Inspect foundations and crawl spaces for gaps and cracks, and repair or fill with steel wool to keep rodents from entering the house.
16. Inspect tree trunks and the undersides of branches for gypsy moth egg masses. Scrape the tan-colored blobs off and discard in the trash.
17. Firewood transported more than 50 miles can increase the risk of new invasive pest infestations that can destroy trees in our area. Please buy local.
18. Keep firewood stored outdoors to avoid bringing insects into the house.
19. As long as temperatures are above 40 degrees, spray broad-leaved evergreens with an anti-desiccant to protect them from winter dehydration.
20. Harvest Brussels sprouts and enjoy with your holiday meal.
21. For an early spring harvest, sow spinach seeds outdoors. Be sure to apply mulch.
22. It's Thanksgiving and that means three things: Turkey, family and covering the fig tree. Wrap with burlap and tar paper and top with a bucket to deflect water; never wrap with plastic.
23. Pot garden parsley and chives and set on a sunny windowsill.
24. To create a new bed for spring, cover area with thick layers of wet newspaper and cardboard to smother grass over winter.
25. Drain and store hoses, but leave one accessible for watering evergreens during winter dry spells in some areas.
26. Turn over vegetable beds now to disrupt the life cycles of harmful insects trying to survive in the soil.
27. Deadhead flowering houseplants and trim brown foliage.
28. Prepare a bed for pea seeds you will sow in March.
29. If the ground isn't frozen, it's not too late to plant bulbs.
30. Arborvitaes and upright junipers tend to bow and break from ice damage; protect now with a loose twine wrapping.

Now is right time to plant trees

DEBBIE ROLAND
Permian Basin Master Gardeners

If you're thinking about planting a tree, don't think too long — this is the right time. Most of the trees sold in our area are grown in the container you purchase. In the fall, a containerized tree has started going dormant for the winter. With lower temperatures and more rainfall, there is less stress on the tree, so it will hardly know that it has been transplanted into the ground.

They may also have a "container habit," which means that the roots are contained in a limited space and likely coiled tightly together in the container. Some of the larger roots could be coiled back around the trunk, which is known as root strangulation or girdling root.

To break the container habit, spread the roots when planting. This will encourage the new roots to grow where they need to be for a healthy tree.

Choose trees with a good natural shape and that are free of visible insects and disease. Make sure the root ball is solid and the bark doesn't have any breaks. Avoid trees if the roots are circling on the surface or growing out of the drainage holes. Generally, smaller trees cost less and may establish faster. Once established, they will also need less maintenance.

The planting hole will be your root system's growing environment. It should be twice as wide in diameter and no deeper than the soil ball. Backfill the hole with native soil.

Almost all fruit trees require full sun for best production. Don't plant in locations that don't get at least half a day of full sun or you can expect weak, spindly trees, poor foliage and poor fruit set.

All trees need frequent watering from the time they are planted until they are well-rooted, which may take two growing seasons. Once established, water-efficient trees can be weaned to tolerate less watering. Proper weaning develops deep roots and enables the plants to better survive a drought.

Call your local AgriLife Extension Office at 686-4700 for a list of recommended trees for the Permian Basin.

LIFETIME ACHIEVEMENT

Dick Saulsbury says his success is product of his employees

By Mella McEwen
mmcewen@mrt.com

From its start as an electrical and instrumentation services contractor, Saulsbury Industries has grown into a full-service engineering, procurement contractor active in industries ranging from gas processing and treatment to nuclear power to terminals and logistics. It has grown to more than 5,000 employees.

Saulsbury

"I didn't think it would be that way when we started," said Dick Saulsbury, who founded Saulsbury Electric in 1967, in a phone interview from his Odessa home.

Despite the various industries Saulsbury serves, "everything we are, everything we have, comes from oil. We keep that in mind," he said.

Born and raised in Smackover, Arkansas, Saulsbury recalled watching his grandmother help his grandfather pull wells. "I was raised in the oil fields," he said, starting work in the industry at age 11.

After getting married, Saulsbury left Louisiana Tech, and he and his wife hitched a trailer to their Buick and landed in Wickett in 1962, lured to West Texas by his uncle to work for Dixie Electric.

Demand for the services of his Saulsbury Electric prompted him to find employees to help with the work. As demand continued, he began to expand and formed Saulcon construction company, Eagle Instrumentation to provide pneumatic services, then Saulsbury Engineering and Construction. He eventually consolidating them into Saulsbury Industries.

Saulsbury is quick to credit his employees with the company's growth. "This is a product of the employees. What God gave us, the employees helped grow," he said.

He said he has had no specific growth targets or goals for the company. "I don't care if we had 50 employees or 150 employees, if we earned $5 million or $500 million. It was important that we work safely, that the people like what they're doing and they're happy," he said.

"We want to do good, honest work and have our employees return home safely — all employees return home safely."

INDUSTRY ADVOCACY

IPAA has represented independent producers for almost 90 years

By Mella McEwen
mmcewen@mrt.com

Representing the independent producers that drill 95 percent of the nation's oil and gas wells has been the longtime mission of the Independent Petroleum Association of America. The association will celebrate its 90th anniversary next year.

"In 2019, IPAA will celebrate 90 years of service to independent oil and natural gas producers," Jeff Eshelman, the IPAA's senior vice president, operations and public affairs, told the Reporter-Telegram by email.

Founded in 1929, "the mission of IPAA is to ensure a strong, viable American oil and natural gas industry, recognizing that an adequate and secure supply of energy is essential to the national economy," Eshelman said. "Today, through hard work not only in oil fields across America but in the nation's capital, we are achieving this mission. Our nation now leads the world in oil and natural gas production."

For 90 years of supporting the independent energy industry, the IPAA is receiving the Hearst Energy Award for Industry Advocacy.

Of the association's work, Eshelman said, "This is an industry that every American relies on. That could be seen as a huge burden, but we see it as a proud honor. Oil and natural gas are a necessity for every American. It provides us opportunities and freedom that no other nation can rival. Knowing that the 'Wildcatter Spirit' is working hard across our country, to keep our country running, to

TECHNOLOGY

GreenShot could revolutionize fluid level measurement

By Mella McEwen
mmcewen@mrt.com

For 50 years Sam Gibbs and Ken Nolen have been in the oilfield technology and sucker rod business, developing the SAM Pump-Off controller, the world's best-selling control device for rod-pumped wells.

The two sold the company they formed, NABLA, to Lufkin Industries in 1997. But they continued working on new ideas to improve sucker rod technology. Their latest technology, GreenShot, was sold to WellWorx Energy earlier this year.

"We thought we were retired, but we had ideas to continue with this technology," Nolen said in a phone interview.

As Gibbs said in a phone interview, "We were spending our kids' inheritance."

GreenShot can be paired with the SAM Pump-Off controller, variable frequency drives and SCADA systems to accurately shoot multiple fluid levels each day on each well using only the well's produced gas.

Nolen said monitoring fluid levels was an area that needed new technology. Gibbs said it's something that costs companies a lot of money.

"Sonic fluid level monitoring has been around some 80 years, but it's labor-intensive. You have to send someone to the field with a lot of portable equipment," he said.

Gibbs said an employee may drive as much as 50 miles to shoot one fluid level.

Nolen said, "Companies don't like to send people out to the field. They want to be able to look on their computers and see the data. And you can see why — the cost, the potential for accidents."

The two decided to design a device that was programmable and automated.

"And we wanted it to be green — you don't have to put anything foreign down the well to find the fluid level and it doesn't emit anything into the atmosphere," said Gibbs.

After testing GreenShot on several wells, "the darn thing worked," said Gibbs. "It was very satisfying to Ken and I."

Though it was apparent the technology was useful, "it was not a commercial success," said Gibbs. "We spent more of our kids' inheritance."

Just when it looked like it wasn't going to be a

COMPANY PERFORMANCE

Ervin Well Site Consultants has exceeded its one-man roots

By Mella McEwen
mmcewen@mrt.com

Ervin Well Site Consultants opened its doors as a one-man operation comprised of founder Andy Ervin. In the ensuing years, the company not only survived the oil price crash of 1998-1999 but has grown to include offices in Midland and San Antonio and a presence as far away as Arizona, New York, Pennsylvania and the Bakken play.

"We've been blessed," said the deeply faithful Ervin, sitting in his new offices across from Security Bank Ballpark.

He said he is proud of his efforts to provide his clients with consultants who not only have expertise in everything from drilling and completions, to well production to safety and environmental compliance but who have honesty and integrity.

"I believe I have a gift for identifying good people," he said.

His idea to start a consulting company has its roots in his history with the industry.

"I've been working in the industry since I was 13 years old," he said. "I noticed in the 1970s, 1980s, 1990s, oil companies were having more layoffs and outsourcing work to contract people instead of employees. There was a time in my generation when we joined an oil company, we said it was for life. I set out to prove to myself I was a good consultant. I'm still holding to that goal."

He now has contracts with 100 different oil companies, ranging from large companies to smaller independents, including one that has just one well, he said.

"Our business is primarily based on our relationship with our clients and with our consultants," Ervin said. "We treat

BRUNO HANSON/MC ENVIRONMENTAL EXCELLENCE AWARD

Dark Skies Initiative fosters cooperation between McDonald Observatory, energy industry

By Mella McEwen
mmcewen@mrt.com

Presented by the Bruno Hanson family and Midland College, this year's environmental excellence award goes to the Dark Skies Initiative, a collaboration between the McDonald Observatory and the oil and gas industry to reduce lighting from drilling rigs and other oil field activities to protect the night skies and help the observatory better perform its work.

Receiving this award will be Bill Wren with the observatory, Pioneer Energy Services, which was instrumental in pioneering the initiative by allowing Wren access to its rigs and experimenting with lighting, and the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, which has spearheaded the initiative and helped distribute best practices suggestions to its members.

Gretchen Bakke, Bruno Hanson's daughter and a member of the advisory committee that selects each year's winner, stated, "I am proud to serve on the committee for this award named after my late father, Bruno Hanson. The McDonald Observatory, along with Pioneer Energy Services and the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, deserve the honor of receiving the Bruno Hanson Environmental Excellence Award this year. These three organizations have worked together as a team to help reduce the light from drilling rigs in order to protect our night skies. It is refreshing to see the oil and gas industry collaborate with outside agencies to help protect our environment. This award continues the legacy that my father worked so hard to establish in his lifetime while working in the oil industry: teamwork and helping protect our precious commodity, planet earth."

Curtis Helms, director of Midland College's Petroleum Professional Development Center, said, "The Permian Basin Dark Skies Initiative as an excellent example of responsible parties that have shown exceptional environmental stewardship and collaboration in the research and the development of reducing light pollution while assisting companies in improving visibility and safety on drilling locations in West Texas."

Stephen Robertson, executive vice president of the PBPA and a member of the advisory committee, said, "PBPA is humbled and honored to have our efforts involving the Permian Basin Dark Skies Initiative recognized with the 2018 Bruno Hanson Midland College Award for Environmental Excellence. Our mission is to promote the safe and responsible development of oil and gas resources in the Permian Basin. The association's work with the McDonald Observatory, Pioneer Energy Services and others to improve outdoor lighting practices in those counties surrounding the observatory, not only helps the PBPA accomplish its mission, but it helps secure the continued cutting-edge research conducted at the observatory and improves the operations of our members. These lighting recommendations may have started in a partnership between the McDonald Observatory and the PBPA, but they have now also been accepted and publicized by organizations such as the Texas Oil and Gas Association and the American Petroleum Institute. While we couldn't be prouder of our members' utilization of these recommendations to date, we know there is still plenty of work to do, so we'll continue our efforts to promote Dark Skies throughout the Permian Basin."

Advisory committee member Mark Henkhaus, Permian regulatory manager with Apache Corp., said, "The observatory is a jewel in West Texas. The Dark Skies Initiative brings the lighting problems created by the development to the forefront and enables the oil and gas industry to support the observatory in a meaningful manner. Apache is proud to be an early proponent of the Dark Skies program."

Gilbert Van Deventer, partner, project manager and senior hydrologist with Trident Environmental and advisory committee member, said, "The Dark Skies Initiative serves as a great public awareness by encouraging all landowners to use similar lighting in their own backyards. Who hasn't been in their own backyard and wish there was less stray light to better see the night sky? I plan on enlightening my neighbor -- no pun intended -- with this initiative as a way to motivate him to change his outdoor lights that point directly toward my backyard."

Committee member Debi Sport Moore, president, Sport Environmental Services, said, "The Dark Skies Initiative is truly deserving of recognition for its collaborative efforts in reducing light pollution. Industry benefits from improved visibility at facilities operating after dark which promotes a safer and more efficient work environment. With proper planning, oil and gas operators also see the added benefit of cost savings associated with the use of recommended lighting practices. Citizens are better able to enjoy the natural beauty of the night and scientists are able to continue world-class research that is only possible with our dark West Texas skies."

commercial success, Matt Raglin with WellWorx Energy, approached the two with some ideas to simplify GreenShot and make it more affordable and take it to the next step, which is mass production.

Raglin, WellWorx founder and chief executive officer, said he has worked with Gibbs and Nolen for many years.

"I always appreciated their passion for artificial lift, to be best and be accurate," he said in a phone interview.

He said he loved what the two were doing and saw its possibilities.

"I appreciated what they were doing relative to science, and I also saw a business opportunity," Raglin said, noting his background is not only in science but also manufacturing and the business side of the equation.

GreenShot is finished and extremely accurate, "and we're trying to build it better, make it economical enough to put on every well. We're also making it cutting edge — that has to be about high-speed data acquisition and remote high-speed communication. So, we're trying to make a smaller footprint, less costly and add more robust capability around high-speed data acquisition, remote access and high speed two-way communication," said Raglin.

It will be a fundamental change from the way things are currently done, he said.

"I'm pleased we don't have to accept the wrong answer any more," Raglin said.

IPAA

protecting our borders, to enhancing our economic outlook, is something that makes IPAA's staff, leadership and members very, sincerely honored."

Eshelman said that supporting the nation's energy industry is important.

"Oil and natural gas provides power for every American, every single day. Not only does it fuel our businesses and factories, it heats and cools our homes. It helps to manufacture the products that we, as consumers, use every day. It moves us forward in our cars, in the air and across our seas. The American oil and natural gas industry not only provides thousands of jobs, it also is the lifeblood of our economy. And it provides protection against unnecessary reliance on foreign oil, which often comes from unfriendly countries. It is empowering our national security."

The IPAA's work has changed over the years, and Eshelman said there have been significant changes in recent years, due in large part to the domestic industry's rejuvenation.

"Throughout most of IPAA's history, the industry was fighting hard to protect the nation against foreign oil imports. Our national security was at stake. Think of the oil embargo and long lines at gas stations in the 1970s. But now, with the decade of shale production, America's oil and natural gas industry has been flourishing, allowing us to protect our nation from foreign oil. This has not only helped our national security, but has also allowed us to fuel our economy, move manufacturing back home and ensure reliable, affordable fuel for all Americans.

"Also important is the impact increased natural gas production has had on our environment. With the best regulations and oversight, the industry has helped contribute to the cleanest air the nation has seen in decades, while increasing oil and natural gas production. Today, America is a global leader in air emission reductions, thanks to the increased use of domestic, clean-burning natural gas. That's something we all can be proud of," Eshelman said.

ERVIN

our consultants like our customers."

One reason he is a consultant, he said, is "I've done what they do. I understand their sacrifice." His wife, Darlyne, said that is one reason "he ensures our contractors get paid (promptly). That's an attraction, but also an assurance because he's been there."

There are so many people in the industry who have worked for independents and were laid off or retired, said Ervin. "I believe, regardless of age, you still have expertise. That's what we work on is that expertise," he said.

Darlyne Ervin said her husband has a way of knowing what some people have to offer. She cites a specific example of a pumper who Ervin encouraged to become a consultant. "And in five years he made more money than he ever had in his life, because (Andy) recognized their potential," she said.

Ervin is starting a new company to serve clients who want W2 consultants, meaning they are employees of the consulting company.

"It will work out well in the end. Because of that, other companies I've not been able to work with because we're not a W2 consulting company, this well open the door to them," he said.

Steam process completely cleans paraffin from pipe

Are you frustrated with continual paraffin buildup in flow lines or downhole? Is that paraffin buildup costing you money in lost production and workovers?

What if there were a way to completely clean paraffin from pipe—a method that's safe, cost-effective and environmentally friendly?

Odessa-based ParaffinPro, LLC uses a closed-loop steam system that guarantees the extraction of up to 99.9 percent of the paraffin lodged in pipes—without using any chemicals. Ever.

Their system cleans 2-3/8" and 2-7/8" pipe. It is safe for internally coated and uncoated pipe.

This method is extremely cost effective, environmentally friendly and is relatively quick, to minimize production delays.

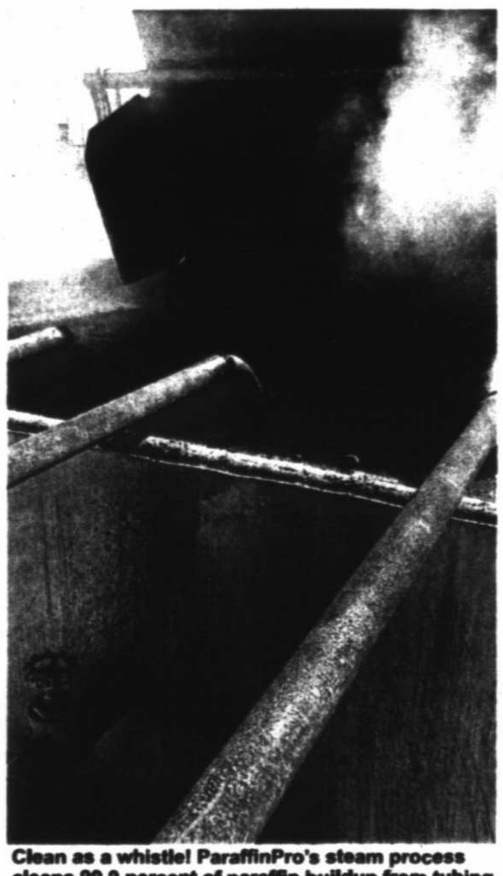

The cleaning process is environmentally controlled throughout. Disposal is carried out in accordance with regulations and safety norms.

When all paraffin is removed over the full length of the pipe, new buildup is delayed because there's no residue for new paraffin to stick to. So pipes stay cleaner longer.

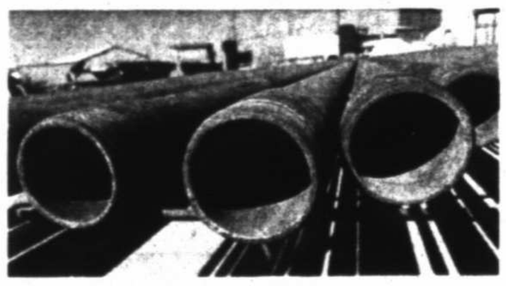

With tubing and pipe prices and availability fluctuating these days, ParaffinPro's clients are more inclined than ever to re-use and extend pipe life by steaming paraffin out and returning their tubing to the field.

You probably have questions. That's great! Call ParaffinPro this week to learn how this process can boost your production and reduce downtime.

ParaffinPro LLC, a Branco company, is located at 2715 W. 40th, Odessa, TX 79764. The company is dedicated to the extraction of paraffin (wax) from flowlines. Call them at 432-889-5434. Their web address is www.paraffinpros.com.

Clean as a whistle! ParaffinPro's steam process cleans 99.9 percent of paraffin buildup from tubing. So these treatments keep flow lines producing much longer between treatments than other methods. Call ParaffinPro this week at 432-889-5434 to learn more.

Are sourcing or disposal constraints forcing you to recycle produced water? Let Orion be your quarterback

A flood of water in the desert? Before the frac boom started in 2010 that would've sounded absurd.

Now you may be among the many producers finding that it is vital to recycle produced water for use in fracturing—because SWD facilities are more crowded than Highway 191 at 5:00.

And using produced water is not that simple. Produced water chemistry is complex and ever-changing. For that reason it's more challenging to use produced water than fresh water for fracturing. Produced water must be treated.

But what is the right treatment? Can you test your water, set the treatment and forget it?

No.

Maybe you're looking for a company to quarterback your recycle program—to make sure your water treatment and frac chemistry are compatible, to test and plan for scaling tendencies and to monitor and adjust to changing conditions during the frac.

Orion Water Solutions is ready to be the all-star you can count on. They've treated hundreds of millions of barrels of produced water, so they have the expertise and equipment to manage your water treatment program from flowback all the way to the next completion.

Because they understand how quickly the composition of incoming produced water can change, as new wells and older wells take turns feeding the system, they constantly monitor that water—and adjust to keep output at specs.

Here are the top treatment issues and the single answer to all of them:

- If you have a pond that's turning septic...
- If you want to use produced water but think it's too expensive...
- If you want to be sure your blend of waters won't cause scale problems...
- If you want to know that every drop of the chemical additives you paid for in your frac package was delivered at the right dosage and sent down hole as designed...
- Call Orion!

Are you getting the reports that prove your fluid chemistry is right throughout every stage? Orion gives you the data you need to know it's right.

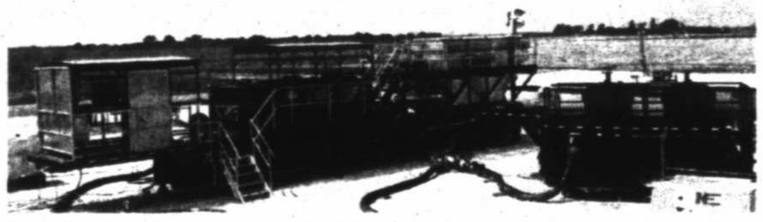

Orion's people understand that treating your water is all about maximizing your production at the lowest possible cost and risk. They look at every day as an opportunity to partner with you to improve the process and get the best outcome for you and your company. You've called them to quarterback your produced water recycle program and Orion's people are ready to make sure the results are exactly what you need.

It's more than chemicals

In addition to chlorine dioxide and other proven chemical treatments, Orion Water Solutions uses portable dissolved air flotation (DAF) units to remove and condense sludge so it is easily disposed of.

Call Orion today and put the water treatment specialists to work for you.

The phone number for Orion Water Solutions is 432-219-8100. Their website is www.orionwatersolutions.com

Orion has dissolved air floatation (DAF) units ready to turn your produced water into a FRAC-READY FLUID™.

RADIOACTIVE OIL IS WORTHLESS

A spill or leak of high-level nuclear waste would decimate our oil and gas reserves. It's not worth the risk.

Contact your elected officials and say NO to the transport of high-level nuclear waste through West Texas.
Say NO to the storage of this waste in Andrews County.
