NUMBER 32.

NEED WHEAT CARS AT ONCE

The section of the Panhandle is up against a very acute situation in the matter of the short-coming of wheat cars to ship out wheat and grain. It appears to us that the Santa Fe officials are handing out a very raw deal when they put the order that no cars shall be shipped at this point for the shipping of grain. It is our understanding that they give as their reason that Kansas points need more than we do here. Well, we need cars and need them at once. It may be that Kansas needs more cars than we do here, but our young life. Every elevator in Perryton needs a car. The Santa Fe will not even allow the cars to be loaded with wheat which are shipped in here with merchandise.

Mr. Packett of the Farmers' Union informs us that on Monday last week he personally inspected the cars which were on the line here and were hauled out. He says that all of these would have made good grain. This looks unjust discrimination to us. What we need is cooperation by all of the towns on the line. We believe that if this would be taken up with the authorities we would get results. We need the cars and need them. Let's go after them rough. The "bunk" about not shipping the railroad because they are getting thread-bare with cars is getting for one minute that the Santa Fe built through this agricultural country for the purpose of developing the land. They built in here because they saw a good opportunity to develop a good feeding line. They built here because they realized that road would be a good money-maker which we have every reason to believe that it has. Now if the Santa Fe had some competition at this point you could bet your life we would have cars and of them but as it is, why do they worry? They know as we do that when they get the cars in, the grain is waiting.

SOME MORE MUCH NEEDED RAIN

Crop outlooks have brightened considerably during the past few days for we have received two good showers. The rain on last Friday and Saturday nights helped out things wonderfully. The average precipitation over this country for the two rains was about one inch. On Saturday night an exceedingly heavy rain fell over Beaver County. From all reports it was accompanied by much wind which did some damage. All of the farmers are very busy now finishing up their preparing of wheat ground. Some few have commenced to drill in wheat but the majority are waiting for more moisture. The general average of the feed crop is going to be good for these recent rains have helped considerably.

C. E. BARBER BUILDING NEW FARM HOME

C. B. Barber is building a new home on his farm four miles north of Wawaka. Cofer and Bennett of this city have the contract for the erection of the residence which will be a seven room modern structure. It is to be built of hollow tile, exterior plastered and will be modern in every respect. This is the kind of farm homes that we like to see built. We need more of them and we understand that several will be built this fall.

COAL SHORTAGE IS ACUTE IN INDUSTRIES

Dallas, Texas, Sept. 13.—A survey of the coal situation made by the public utilities of the United States shows grave shortage in states where coal is dependent upon for fuel by the utilities. In Texas where most of the utilities use fuel oil the situation is not so difficult. Two companies in Texas that use coal reported September 1, 330 tons on hand and 120 tons in transit with daily requirements of 82 tons. This indicated a little more than four days' supply.

From replies made by 348 companies scattered throughout the country it is apparent that but little more than half of the daily requirements of coal is being received.

PACKARD—THOMPSON

Miss Grace Packard and Mr. William R. Thompson were married at 7:00 o'clock last Sunday evening. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Maude Packard by Judge J. M. Grigsby. Mrs. Thompson has lived here only a short time but in this period has made many friends. Mr. Thompson is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Thompson and has many friends in and around Perryton. He has lived here for several years and has assisted his father in the operation of the American Theatre. At present he is engaged in farming on the Thompson farm west of town. He is a world war veteran. The Herald unites with a host of friends in wishing this newly wedded couple a long and happy married life.

WEIBE—REMPEL

Miss Sussie Weibe and Mr. John H. Rempel were united in marriage at the Enterprise Schoolhouse at 7:30 p. m. on last Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Rempel is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob B. Weibe who are among the most influential and substantial citizens of the northwest part of the county. Mr. Rempel is a prosperous young farmer of that section. The ceremony was preceded by a sumptuous dinner which was served at the home of the bride's parents. The Herald joins with the many friends of this young couple in wishing them a long and happy married life.

The Tower Painting Co. have finished the erecting of the road signs on the north and south highway. William Moore put up the signs on the south end and he did an excellent job, they are put in to stay in a good substantial manner. Mr. Towers informs us that he is going over the north end personally in order to get these signs in the best of shape. Some of them were not placed deep enough in the ground.

SHULER'S HOG SALE TOPS THE LIST

M. A. Shuler, the Poland China Hog man from near Gray, Oklahoma was a caller at our office the fore part of this week. Mr. Shuler is one of the pioneer pure bred stock breeders of this section and he has made an unusually successful record. At his sale on the 5th of this month he sold 30 head for an average of $47.00 a round. The highest price hog which he sold brought an even $100.00. Of the seven pure bred hog sales held so far this year, the Shuler sale has been the most successful. Mr. Shuler informs us that out of the 30 head which he sold only six will remain in Beaver County, the rest going to adjoining counties. This record of foreign sales is a direct result of the liberal use of PRINTER'S INK, in which Mr. Shuler is a firm believer. Mr. Shuler will take several of his show animals to the Woodward Fair, and we predict that he will get his share of the blue ribbons for he has one of the very best herds of pure bred Poland Chinas to be found anywhere.

CITY COUNCIL MET LAST TUESDAY NIGHT

At the meeting of the city council on last Tuesday night the alderman decided to have the city attorney draft an ordinance prohibiting the use of the sidewalks on Main Street as a public play ground both for the children and the grown ups. We think that is needed city legislation. It means that all roller skating, coaster wagons, bicycles, etc. will be barred from the sidewalks.

Another good move was the ordering of the streets to be graded at the concrete street crossings. This was needed badly. After allowing of bills the council adjourned to meet again tonight at which time the matter of ordering in sidewalks throughout the town will be taken up. Let's put them in.

KU KLUX KLAN ORGANIZED AT LIBERAL

Autoists traveling out on Second street late last night report a great gathering of presumed Klansmen, for cars in great number were parked in the field on the north side of the road, men were seen gathered together in a big group and the entrance to the field was guarded by individuals. While it is not known that this was a Klan gathering it is a known fact that an organizer has been in the city for several days and the general move conforms well with reputed characteristics of that body. No lights were visible according to our informant and as the gathering was held well after 10 o'clock none of the participants were known.

At this time it seems the city is about to have a Klan and an anti Klan organization, for if the latter is in prospect of or is in actual organization the former is practically an assured fact. And while a lot of criticism may be heaped upon this organization it is well to investigate matters thoroughly before being too caustic on the anti side. Springing up all over the nation as this organization has the News is of the opinion that in its membership must be many men of every community who are numbered among the best and who are not afraid to go about doing good in the open, even if they may elect to adopt the Klan regalia on stated occasions.

The News had hoped that in these disjointed days this community be spared such organizations but speaking from what looks like definite information Liberal and Seaward county can expect a Ku Klux Klan unless there is a decided change in events in a short time. An organizer has been on the grounds here lately and from the best information available it's a safe prediction that the citizens of the city will some of these nights see a similar cross that has been witnessed by hundreds of other towns of late. County Clerk Stouffer was yesterday asked for the court house that a Klan lecturer might at an early date set forth the tenets of the order to the public, which evidences the fact that the Klan proposes to establish itself in this city.

Evidently the Klan is out for the best men available for citizens of the highest walks in life in Liberal have been solicited—ministers, doctors, business and professional men, newspaper men, officers of the law and from the list of men approached, who have openly acknowledged the same, it is a respectable class of citizens to which the Klan has thus far presented itself in Liberal. If it is organized and made a matter to contend with in this city this paper joins in the expression of the hope that its control never gets out of the hands of the level headed class and into the radical element which possesses neither fear nor sense for only God can then tell what hellishness it could perform.

Last week the News had a few remarks regarding the apparent organization of the Ku Klux Klan, which seemed to weigh heavily with some individual who used the contemptible, cowardly unsigned method of expressing his disapproval over an Anti-Ku Klux signature. The News holds no brief for the Klan. It can take care of itself. But if the Klan does a good deed, holds itself within the boundaries of law and order and now and then injects a little wholesome respect for the same, the News will not work overtime endeavoring to withhold commendation, threatening communications of the despicable character, such as this paper received, to the contrary notwithstanding—Liberal News.

UNITED STATES IS STILL ON EVE OF PROSPERITY

Secretary of Labor Davis declares that America "can look with real pride and gratitude upon the achievements of the last twelve months." But for the industrial strife which has been evident for several months throughout the country, he added, the outlook of the nation would not have been darkened during the year.

"We must find a common ground of finances and co-operation for unemployed and employed where they can adjust their differences without recourse to an appeal of force," he said. "There can be no justification for bloodshed and destruction in America today."

On the other hand, a four-year "anti-labor" war, Mr. Gompers says, has demonstrated the power of the trade union to protect its members whom unorganized labor has found against organized employers, before itself "weakened, scattered and helpless." He adds that the time has come for laboring men and women at least to present "a united workers' front to the powers that prey."

CHILDREN BORN OUT OF WEDLOCK

The movement for securing measure of justice for the more than 32,000 children born out of wedlock in the United States each year, the United States Department of Labor through the Children's Bureau has announced, received the sanction of the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, a legal organization of the highest authority. The National Conference of Commissioners, at its 32d annual meeting held in San Francisco the first week in August, approved a uniform illegitimacy act and recommended it to the States for adoption. Professor Ernst Freund of the University of Chicago Law School was chairman of the committee which drafted the proposed law.

The action of the commissioners was the outgrowth of a series of regional conferences held in 1920 under the auspices of the Children's Bureau and the Inter-City Conference on Illegitimacy, to consider standards of legislation and protection for children of illegitimate birth. In discussing the proposed law Miss Grace Abbott, Chief of the Children's Bureau, pointed out that it deals almost entirely with the obligation of the parents for the child's support, and leaves open the questions of status and inheritance rights. She stated that it is proceedings for determining paternity and compelling support that uniformity of State legislation is most essential.

WALLS INDIAN FIGHT

K. Dixon in Panhandle

first sought them for their meat and later a still larger number for their hides, the latter retailing for three dollars each. As they were so plentiful big money could be made at the business, one man after killing fifty buffalo a day. This necessitated large transportation to carry the gains to market and bring back provisions and ammunition for the hunters, the nearest railroad point being Dodge City, Kansas, one hundred fifty miles away.

In the spring of 1874 a man named Myers who owned a store in Dodge City, in company with about forty-four other men brought down an outfit of groceries and general merchandise and leaving the plains at the head of Moores creek, followed the river down to Adobe Walls creek, which flows through a broad and fertile valley of six miles in length. Here this little band of men, some of them hardened frontier men, others without any experience what ever, pitched their tents and went to work, in a short time establishing what was known as a trading post.

The buildings were of pickets and sod and comprised a general store owned by A. C. Myers, a black smith shop run by Thomas O'Keefe and a saloon and mess house owned by James Hanrahan. In connection with the buildings was a stockade corral two hundred feet square with bastions on the southeast and northwest corners.

About 2 o'clock on the morning of June 27, 1874, the occupants of one of the buildings were awakened by the creaking of a cotton wood ridge pole which supported the dirt roof and fearing that it would give way, called on some of the other men to help to repair it.

This commotion woke up the others and in short time something like fifteen men were helping repair the roof by placing a prop under the long ridge pole.

All this had taken some time and as the buffalo hunters wanted to get an early start for their different camps, some of them did not go back to bed.

The stock was grazing on the creek bottom east of the buildings and Billy Ogg, a young man hardly out of his teens, was sent by Hanrahan to drive up the horses. Just at this time William Dixon was busily engaged in rolling up his bed in front of the blacksmith shop near where his loaded wagon stood all ready to pull out for camp, noticed a large body of moving objects slowly moving towards the buildings, coming up the valley from the east, but it not yet being light he could not distinguish them from a bunch of thickets. On drawing nearer however, and seeing the camp was aroused and that they were discovered, the Indians gave a mighty war whoop and came on a charge, driving all the loose stock in front of them, apparently to add confusion to the scene.

The sight of that savage band painted hideously in all colors, their handsome war bonnets streaming in the wind, their fancifully decorated horses running like mad charging in a solid mass, was enough to make the stoutest heart quail.

On they came, yelling like demons and firing their guns. They kept close together so long that it looked like they intended to strike the building as a huge wave. They were splendid horsemen and had perfect control of their horses, but they were not prepared for the reception they got from the white men for when they got within fifty yards of the buildings the big guns of the buffalo hunters rang out and a buck skin saddle was emptied at every shot. These men who had all faced death before in various forms knew that at this time it would take a steady nerve and sure aim to pull them through and every man stood his post. Warriors fell dead and wounded on all sides, some almost beneath the windows of the buildings. Charge after charge was made by the determined but too confident savages only to be met by the deadly aim of the white men.

And thus the fight went on from daylight until dark that long summer day. After the first grand charge the repulsed enemy made a wider circle circling around in every direction, some approaching on horseback and some on foot. A few braves confident in their superiority in number and emboldened by the suddenness of the attack tried to force open the doors and break down the walls but to no avail. The substantial buildings refused to yield while the steady fire of the defenders sent many an Indian to his "happy hunting ground."

Horses and riders went down on all sides before they drew out of close range. After this they resorted to all kinds of ways to aid their wounded comrades who were concealed in the tall grass, to escape. Some of the Indians would make a charge and while the inmates of the building were firing at them the wounded would rise, run fifteen or twenty steps, then drop in the grass again. This would be repeated and enable a good many of them to reach a place of safety.

It is impossible to say what the loss of the Indians was, but from their own story afterwards, it must have been very heavy, for besides the fifteen dead ones, and on the ground, there were many indications of wounded ones further out.

Three white men were killed, Billy Tyler, who was shot in the beginning of the fight through an improvised port hole and the two Shadler brothers, who were surprised and killed in their wagon on the north side of the stockade. The three men were buried in one grave. That the Indians spent some time around this wagon was shown by the fact that the cover had been pulled off and such provisions as were found removed. Both the brothers had been scalped and a large Newfoundland dog which slept at the foot of the wagon, and had probably shown fight, had been killed and a piece of hide removed from his side.

The Indians were composed of three tribes, the Cheyennes, Kiowas and Comanches.

Previous to the fight one of the medicine men of the Comanches had held a medicine dance to determine the advisability of the attack and had declared in favor of it, telling the Indians all they had to do would be ride up quietly and knock their victims in the head; that his medicine was so strong that the white men's guns would not go off.

They came very near succeeding; had it not been for the providential creaking of the ridge pole this story might have had a different ending.

After the fight Adobe Walls was abandoned as a trading post and the buffalo hunting almost broken up on account of the noise made through out the country about the Indian attack.

As soon as the horses could be secured most of the men went to Dodge City. News of the fight was telegraphed to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas and the U. S. troops under command of Gen. Nelson A. Miles was ordered into the Panhandle.

The following fall these same Indians made another trip to Adobe Walls and finding the place deserted they set fire to the buildings and burned them to the ground.

Besides the two men killed in the beginning of the fight there were two others killed later. One was Billy Olds, the husband of the only woman at Adobe Walls, who accidentally shot himself while descending a ladder and a man by the name of Huffman, who was killed by the Indians out on the open prairie.

This makes the five whose bodies lie there today.

The foundations of both the buildings and the stockade can still be plainly traced and at this time a concerted effort is being made to mark the battle grounds.

There is no more beautiful spot on the Canadian River than the lovely valley where the Adobe Walls Indian fight took place. A lovely little stream known as the Adobe Walls Creek winds its way to the Canadian river, fringed on each side with hackberry and willow trees while the high bluffs on the east around whose base the Indians so confident of victory rode that memorable June morning of 1874, still stands guard over the surrounding country.

Really successful men—men who have never worked all their lives for the sake of getting rich, and yet are

A fixed financial program is a great help to any man trying to be based on a knowledge of what constitutes true economy.

One of the first steps on the road to true success is the starting of a

WESTERN IRRIGATION PROJECTS

The Government has invested $132,653,900 net in Western irrigation projects, and the settlers on these projects have repaid $12,820,300, or less than 10 per cent of their obligation, in twenty years. Twenty-four individual projects have been established, on which are 31,462 farms. The crops from those farms for 1921 were valued at $49,620,300, or more than one-third of the total cost of building projects, while the value of crops from all projects for the past ten years is given as $426,090,120 substantially more than three times the amount invested. This figure does not cover the entire period during which some of the projects have been operated; it covers only the last ten years, and yet in the faces of these big returns from crops, the settlers, in twenty years, have repaid only $12,820,300.

Detailed figures are interesting. The famous Salt river project in Arizona, the project of the Roosevelt dam, produced crops last year valued at $11,435,380; in the past ten years this project produced crops valued at $111,101,108; yet the settlers of that prosperous project have repaid the Government only $609,900. In a single year the crops of the Salt river project would repay the full cost of the project, yet those farmers have to date discharged only 4.7 per cent of their obligation to the Government. This is the most flagrant instance of failure to meet an obligation. Six projects in the west have, as yet, repaid nothing at all; only four have repaid more than $1,000,000, and only one has discharged more than 20 per cent of its obligation to the Government.

According to the Department of Agriculture, thirteen eastern States, which spend nothing for irrigation to make their lands productive, have a greater yield per acre than the true average of the irrigation projects built by the Government. Connecticut leads with an average of $88.46 per acre; then in order comes Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Maine, North Carolina, Florida, Vermont, New York, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

The expenditure of $132,000,000 of Government money "loaned" to the west has produced an average crop yield of $27.35. Thirteen old States of the east exceed that yield without a cent of Government aid. One reason for the relatively low averages on the irrigation projects is the fact that more irrigated land is devoted to growing hay and fodder than to any other crops. Fruits are second in importance among the irrigated crops, but more than half of all the fruit produced on Government projects comes from the Yakima and Okanogan valleys of Washington; vegetables and truck stuff are third in importance and cereals occupy a bad fourth place.

WHERE THE PROFIT GO.

The greatest crime being committed now, as it has in the past, in Texas agricultural practices by 99 per cent of our farmers, including our most progressive farmers along other lines, is the neglect of farm implements and machinery. In 1920 there was $154,320,996 worth of farm implements and machinery, on a conservative government estimate, on Texas farms. There is practically not any higher valuation to be placed on the implements and machinery on hand on the farms at the present time, yet Texas farmers have spent annually between $35,000,000 and $50,000,000 for additional implements and machinery the past two years. This means that the depreciation in the large majority of cases is 50 per cent more annually. The average life of the average farm implement or machine kept in repair, greased and under shelter is 10 years, yet Texas machines and implements as a rule give service for only one or two years.

When thrasher after thrasher, tractor after tractor, binder after binder, plow after plow, etc., can be seen remaining idle in one corner of the barnyard exposed to the sun, wind, and rain the year round it is not hard to understand why they only last one season, to be replaced with a new one next season.

If the 436,033 farmers in our state would expend $200.00 each, or a total of $87,206,600 for implement sheds to house this machinery, and expend a little grease and oil, and an average of 30 minutes per implement per year they would save themselves annually $35,000,000 expended for new implements to replace the previous year's new implements, or, over a period of 10 years, the average life of the implement shed, a total of $350,000,000. Very few investments will return the farmer as great an income as an investment in an implement shed.

Most of the average farmers' revenue comes in during the fall of the year, so it is this season when he has the money to spare that he should construct this shed rather than figure on junking this year's machinery and having to buy new implements next year. If you are able to build and save your money. A successful farmer, as any other successful business man, must stop his leaks and wastages.—J. I. McGregor, Agricultural Agent, Southern Pacific Lines.

Play Safe This Year

The problem of getting a normal profit from high-priced acres is a problem of yield per acre. The bigger the yield, the lower the cost of producing each bushel—and the bigger the profit per acre. Big yields per acre demand perfect stands—and perfect stands can only be obtained by using good drills.

HOME TOWN HELPS

TO DEVELOP "SAMPLE TOWN"

No Really Great Problems to Be Solved in the Establishment of Model Community.

When we have studied our existing towns, generalizing from numbers and showing the best we have done so far; when we have taken hold with a will to make such improvements as we can in our stubborn, old-established towns, a great new social service can be done by developing a "sample town."

This sample town should appear to be a perfectly ordinary industrial town, preferably with some new factory with its employees placed where it could have land or water communication with the rest of us. It should have an agricultural base in the surrounding country, as any town does after a fashion. Then the problem to be worked out would be the economic balance between local supplies, which save in transportation, and such imported supplies as might save in other ways.

A good kindergarten and school ought to have 20 children at least, properly to use two first-class teachers. To keep up that average number of children requires about 200 women, since about ten women is the average number required to supply one child a year. Two hundred families means about a thousand persons, a good number to base our calculations upon; and 200 houses, grouped about their necessary public buildings, form a very pleasant little village.

One central building, economical but beautiful, could house many of these. All should be grouped conveniently about a pleasant little park.

The economic problem to be worked out is something like this: How few persons out of our 400 adults are sufficient to do work not immediately productive, such as cooking, teaching, preaching, keeping the store and the library? How much must be earned by those who produce raw materials or manufactured articles for sale, in order to support the whole group? At how little expense can heat, water, light and service be provided to such a group?—Charlotte Perkins Gilman in The Century.

IDEA IS WORTH EMULATING

Public Spirit Shown by Citizens of Michigan Village Should Be Incentive to Others.

At the next resort and tourist meeting the name of the village of Montague should be inscribed as the Abou Ben Adhem on the good book. Along the lake is an excellent park space which Montague has decided to improve. But the innovation is the way this village has gone about it.

A legal holiday was declared, and almost every man in town hustled down to the park with shovels and rakes, drays and trucks, filling in low ground along the shore in preparation for a big tree planting at other similar holidays in the near future. And all the ladies served their sons and squires and sweethearts with hot coffee and sandwiches to keep them on the job and unfatigued. It was an arbor day de luxe. More of them are scheduled until the park becomes something tourists will talk about all the way up and all the way back.

If every town which could be a thing of beauty instead of a main street and scatter of sheds would go in for the spirit of Montague and for a good, healthy spell of tree planting and general cleaning up, Sinclair Lewis would be in line for a fine session of back talk—Grand Rapids Press.

Proper Care of Hedges.

If you have a privet hedge which is showing the effects of age you can renew it by cutting it back hard. This seems like drastic treatment, but new wood will soon begin to grow, and within three years your hedge will be as fine as ever. You can cut it back to within a foot of the ground without doing any harm, but as soon as it begins to grow again it ought to have a good dressing of well-rotted manure or a liberal application of pulverized sheep manure, dug into the ground. Many people let their privet hedges grow too tall for best effects. They look most attractive when about three feet high, especially if they are kept well trimmed so that they always have a symmetrical appearance.

Individualism First.

In all worth-while community building, men and women must function as individuals before they can function as communities.—L. H. Bailey.

Results of Jazz.

"Now that you are rich, John, your son seems a fender for jazz."
"Yes."
"Think he'll ever be able to earn his own living?"
"Yes, I think he may develop into a pretty fair snare drummer."

PLOW UP BARN LOTS YEARLY

Turning Over Soil Helps to Get Rid of Pests and Forage Makes It Profitable Job.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Hog raisers may accomplish two desirable results by plowing up the barn lots at least once a year, says the United States Department of Agriculture. In the first place, hogs need good succulent pasture as much of the time as possible, and in the second place they need protection against internal parasites, such as roundworms, the eggs of which remain in the soil. Turning over the soil in the lots helps to get rid of the pests and the crop of forage makes it a profitable operation. In addition to providing cheap protein feed, pasture crops aid as a laxative and require the hogs to take a certain amount of exercise, which is necessary to breeding animals and growing pigs.

Rye is probably the best crop to use for fall, winter and spring pasture for hogs. Throughout the corn belt it may be sown from August 20 to about October 1, depending on the latitude. In warmer climates the crop may be put in at various times up to as late as December. By putting in successive plantings from two to four weeks apart it is possible to have fresh pasture all the time. Seeding for pasture should be much heavier than for a grain crop, from three to four bushels per acre on a good soil. Pasturing can probably begin six weeks after seeding, and may continue, if the rye is not covered with snow, until the following April.

WORMS CAUSE SERIOUS LOSS

Farmers Should Exercise Special Care Against Stomach Infection for Rest of Summer.

"All farmers who have sheep should exercise special care regarding stomach worm infection, for the remainder of the summer," says A. E. Darlow, assistant professor of animal husbandry at Oklahoma A. and M. college.

"All spring lambs grown for the market should be rushed and put on the market at the first possible date. Stomach worms in connection with short pastures cause serious financial losses, especially with lambs.

"Wherever possible the sheep should have a change of pasture and where flockmasters are prepared to furnish a change of good pasture danger from stomach worms is small."

Aside from changing pasture and rushing lambs the best method of overcoming the stomach worm is drenching, Darlow says. Oklahoma station bulletin 137 by J. E. Guberlet gives directions for preparing and administering this drench.

VITAMINES IN YELLOW CORN

Experiments Conducted at Wisconsin University Show White Variety Is Inferior.

Feeding experiments at the University of Wisconsin indicate that white corn and skim milk when fed to pigs in drylot, is decidedly inferior to yellow corn and skim milk. Two pens fed on these two rations were cared for in other respects alike. None of the lot fed white corn did well; those fed yellow corn produced fairly good returns. Over half the pigs given the white corn were seriously affected and two or three died before the test was completed.

This experiment is in further proof of previous tests both at Wisconsin and elsewhere, indicating that in yellow corn there is a much larger percentage of vitamins. If these can be supplied through green crops, white corn, according to the experiments is satisfactory.

A COMPARISON

Of the Light and Power Rates in Effect in Six Panhandle Towns.

During the past few weeks it has been repeatedly intimated to us that our light and power rates are higher than those of adjoining towns. In fact one man told us that we were "higher than any where else in the country." In order to correct this impression and to give our patrons a chance to compare for themselves in this matter, we prepared and mailed questionnaires to six Panhandle towns regarding rates and service. The following chart is compiled from the returns received. We believe that a study of it will convince any fair minded man that we are absolutely in line with our prices and service.

Town	K. W. RATE For Light	K. W. RATE For Power	Hrs. Service	Ownership	Minimum	Furnished for Min. Rate	Population	No. Meters
CANADIAN	.20	.08	24	Private	$1.50	7 K. W.	3500	505
HIGGINS	.20	.20	Night	Municipal	$2.00	10 K. W.	1000
PAMPA	.20	.15-12 ¹ / ₂ -10	Night	Private	$2.00	10 K. W.	1000	145
SHAMROCK	.30	.15	24	Municipal	$3.00	10 K. W.
MIAMI	.25		18	Municipal	$2.50	10 K. W.	1500	175
CANYON	.20	.12 ¹ / ₂	20	Private	$2.00	10 K. W.	2000	400
PERRYTON	15 to 20	10, 8, 7, 5, 4.	24	Private	$2.50	12 1-2	1500	130
AVERAGE	21.6		11		$2.21	10	1750	271

- NOTE: That the average monthly minimum charge for the seven towns is $2.21. Ours is $2.50.
- NOTE: That the average kilowatt allowance for their charge is 10. Ours is 12 1-2 kilowatts, or two and one half kilowatts more.
- NOTE: That in every case the reported power rate is higher than our power rate.
- NOTE: That the average number of meters in use is 271. We have only 130 in service.
- NOTE: That we are giving as many hours service as any other town in the Panhandle.
- NOTE: That the average rate per kilowatt is 21.6 cents. Our highest rate is 20 cents and drops to 15 cents after 50 kilowatts. It averages us 18 or 19 cents.
- NOTE: That three of the six towns reported are municipal owned, and that the rates charged in these towns are as high or higher than the private owned plants.

- REMEMBER That our fuel cost, which is a big item in our operation costs, is higher here than in any other town in the Panhandle, due to excessive freight rates.
- REMEMBER That all of our equipment has been purchased and installed since the war, and as a result has cost more than if it had been installed when many of these plants were installed.
- REMEMBER That Perryton has grown more rapidly than any other town in the Panhandle and that it is taxing us to the utmost to keep pace with the growth of the town.
- REMEMBER That we are a home institution. Every dollar we spend is spent in and for Perryton.

YOU MAY BE ASSURED

That as soon as the town and our business grows to the point that we can reduce our rates, we will do so, and do VOLUNTARILY.

THE EFFECT OF THE STRIKE ON AGRICULTURE

In the course of a talk before the Farm Bureau at Leesburg, Virginia, Monday afternoon, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said:

"It is worth while to compare wages in the organized industries with the wages received by the farmer, as represented in the price he gets for the things he grows. The value of income, whether it be in the form of wages or of money received for sales of products, is represented not in dollars and cents but in what that income will buy by its purchasing power.

"Take the average wage received by the coal miner for mining a ton of coal. In 1913 this wage per ton would buy 1.1 bushels of corn in Iowa; in 1921 it would buy 2.5 bushels of corn in Iowa. In 1913 the ton wage would buy .7 of a bushel of wheat in North Dakota; in 1921 .9 of a bushel. In 1913 it would buy 4.7 pounds of cotton in Texas; in 1921 8.5 pounds. In 1913 7 pounds of hog in Nebraska; in 1921 14 pounds. In 1913 11 pounds of sheep in Wyoming; in 1921 18 pounds. In 1913 1.6 bushel of oats in Illinois in 1921 3.1 bushel. 1913 2.4 pounds of butter in Missouri; in 1921 3.2 pounds.

"Taking the average yearly earnings of railroad employees, we find that in 1913 the yearly wage would buy 1492 bushels of corn in Iowa, and in 1921 4112 bushels. It would buy 1028 bushels of wheat in North Dakota in 1913; in 1921 1466 bushels. In 1913 it would buy 6449 pounds of cotton in Texas; and in 1921 13,934 pounds. It would buy in 1913 102 hundredweight of hogs in Nebraska; and in 1921 237 hundredweight. It would buy 148 hundredweight of sheep in Wyoming in 1913; and in 1921 296 hundredweight. In 1913 it would buy 1087 bushels of potatoes in New York; in 1921 1916 bushels. In 1913 2174 bushels of oats in Illinois; in 1921 5109 bushels. In 1913 3309 pounds of butter in Missouri; in 1921 5285 pounds.

In 1913 the freight revenue per ton mile received by the railroads would buy 1.4 bushels of corn in Iowa; in 1921 this revenue per ton mile would buy 3.1 bushels of corn in Iowa. In 1913 1 bushel of wheat in North Dakota; in 1921 1.1 bushel. In 1913 6.1 pounds of cotton in Texas; in 1921 10.5 pounds. In 1913 10 pounds of hogs in Nebraska; in 1921 18 pounds. In 1913 1 bushel of potatoes in New York; in 1921 1.5 bushel. In 1913 14 pounds of sheep in Wyoming; in 1921 22 pounds. In 1913 2.1 bushels of oats in Illinois; in 1921 3.1 bushels of oats in Illinois; in 1921 3.9 bushels. In 1913 3.1 pounds of butter in Missouri; in 1921 4 pounds.

In 1913 the price of a ton of coal f. o. b. the mine would buy 2.4 bushels of corn in Iowa; in 1921 6.2 bushels; it would buy in 1913 1.7 bushels of wheat in North Dakota; in 1921 2.2 bushels; in July 1922 4.4 bushels. In 1913 it would buy 10.4 pounds of cotton in Texas; in 1921 21.1 pounds; in July 1922 22.9 pounds. In 1913 16 pounds of hogs in Nebraska; in 1921 36 pounds; in July 1922 53 pounds. In 1913 1.8 bushel of potatoes in New York; in 1921 2.9 bushels; in July 1922 4.7 bushels. In 1913 24 pounds of sheep in Wyoming; in 1921 45 pounds; in July 1922 70 pounds. In 1913 3.5 bushels of oats in Illinois in 1921 7.7 bushels; in July 1922 14.2 bushels. In 1913 5.4 pounds of butter in Missouri; in 1921 8 pounds; in July 1922 16.1 pounds.

In fairness it should be noted that before the corn, wheat, hogs, sheep, cotton, butter, or other farm products get to the consumer's table, a good deal has been added to the price the farmer receives. This margin between the farmer and the consumer has considerably increased during the past eight years, but it is also fair to note that a good deal of this increase has been due to the increase in the wages paid the people who handle these products. What these figures show is that the wages of the farmer, as represented by the prices paid for his crops, are lower than his wages before the war, measured in purchasing power, while the wages of the workman, and especially in organized industries, are considerably higher than they were before the war, whether measured in dollars and cents or in purchasing power. The purchasing power of the wages of the railway employee in 1921 was 51 per cent greater than in 1913. The purchasing power of the wages of the coal miner in 1921 was 30 per cent greater than in 1913. The purchasing power of the farm hand who works for wages in 1921 was 4 per cent less than 1913, while the purchasing power of the farmer himself was on an average, from 25 to 45 per cent less than in 1913.

In short, the farmers of the country, numbering almost one-third of our entire population, have altogether the heaviest burden of deflation. They have endeavored to get relief by all lawful means. They have appealed to the administration, to Congress and to every other agency which they thought might be able to help them, but while making these efforts to avoid their heavy losses they have not struck. They have kept on producing and in the face of extraordinarily low prices, have this year grown one of the largest crops in our entire history. The farmer believes in law and order. He believes in government. He believes in fairness between man and man. He believes in working hard and producing efficiently.

If other groups would do as the farmer has done, our economic troubles would soon be over. Prices would soon be adjusted to their normal relationships. There would be work for everybody and at just wages.

But there are too many people who seem to be thinking only of themselves and how they can profit at the expense of the community at large, and especially at the expense of the farmer. The farmer is sick and tired of this sort of business. He is disgusted with these recurring disputes between capital and labor especially as connected with the essential industries. He sees no reason why such disputes cannot and should not be settled in an orderly and lawful way and without the interruptions of service which cost him so dearly.

The farmer recognizes his obligation to produce food, for people must eat to live. He demands that both the owners of the coal mines and the coal miners recognize their equal obligation to produce coal, and he demands that the management of the railroads and the railroad workmen recognize also their equal obligation to keep trains moving, for unless the food he produces is moved promptly to market the people will starve.

If the various groups in this country are determined to prey upon one another and abandon law and order for srtong arm methods, the farmer can take care of himself. He can reduce his production to his own needs. He can follow the example of some others and refuse to sell what he produces. But he does not believe in that sort of thing. He knows that such a policy would bring about in this great Republic exactly the same sort of conditions that exist in Russia.

The farmer calls upon capital and labor to cease their petty bickering and resume production, trusting to American institutions and the American sense of fair play to see that justice is done to both of them. —Southwest Plainman.

UNITED STATES TO OPEN ITS LAST WESTERN FRONTIER

Opening up to twentieth century civilization of what is described as the last frontier settlement in the United States, is foreseen in the recent announcement by the Forest Service of the proposed sale of timber in the Malheur national forest, Oregon.

The opening for sale of the timber of the Bear valley unit of the Malheur national forest affects approximately 890,000,000 feet of the Blue mountains timber now and marks the beginning of the razing of the entire forest, containing more than 7,000,000,000 feet of lumber. To start the lumbering operation it will be necessary to build eighty miles of trunk line railway, in addition to tap lines, thus opening incidentally for settlement an agricultural country having an area of 10,000 square miles, or about twice that of the State of Massachusetts.
