World-Wide Rise in Commodity Prices Progresses Today

SPECULATORS FLOOD MARKET WITH ORDERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—A world-wide rise in commodity prices progressed today as speculators flooded American and foreign markets with buying orders inspired by belief that trade recovery was imminent.

Talk of 12-cent cotton and 75-cent wheat by winter was heard as these markets shot upward in response to announcement by the farm board that it will hold its 2,000,000 bushels of wheat and 2,000,000 bushels of cotton off the market.

Cotton surged up almost two dollars a bale at the opening while wheat prices jumped two cents a bushel. May cotton sold at 9.56 cents a pound and May wheat at 64 cents a bushel.

Buying of cotton was accelerated by reports of widespread damage to the Texas crop and a run of private crop estimates suggesting a yield for the entire cotton belt of only about 11,000,000 bales, compared with last month's estimate of 12,500,000 bales, and last year's yield of more than 16,000,000 bales.

Relatives Seek Child's Return

DALLAS, Sept. 6.—Relatives with whom Hugh Bradford Jenkins, nine years old, heir to $200,000, has been living today appealed to authorities in an effort to regain his custody.

The boy was not returned after leaving for a walk yesterday with his father, Hugh Jenkins, of Louisville, Ky., who came to visit him.

Parents of the boy were divorced several years ago and his mother, Mrs. Jenkins, is in an automobile crash near Mineral Wells.

After her death her father, the late Major Tom L. Bradford, of Dallas, a millionaire, was given custody of the boy. He died a few days ago, leaving the child approximately $200,000 under his will.

BATTLE OVER VOTING QUIZ STIRS SENATE

AUSTIN, Sept. 6.—The battle in the Texas senate over investigation of the recent primary election raged today around charges of illegal voting in east Texas and over entry in the senate journal of newspaper editorials on the subject.

The controversy broke when a telegram from Sam McCorkle, of Mexico, addressed to Sen. Walter Woodul, Houston, was read to the senate.

McCorkle charged that the "excess votes" cast in Gregg county can be accounted for in part by the fact that at Gladeview great numbers of tramps were taken off freight trains and were headed to the polls and permitted to vote in the July 27th primary.

Senators Thomas Pollard, of Tyler, and Miss Marie Neal answered McCorkle's charge with a message to the district attorney at Longview urging a grand jury investigation.

"Who is running this state? Newspapers or the legislature?" Senator J. J. Lov, Sherman, shouted in opposition to printing editorials on the proposed election investigation.

The senate adjourned until 3 p. m. today with the conclusion of an argument attacking the right of the senate to order an election investigation.

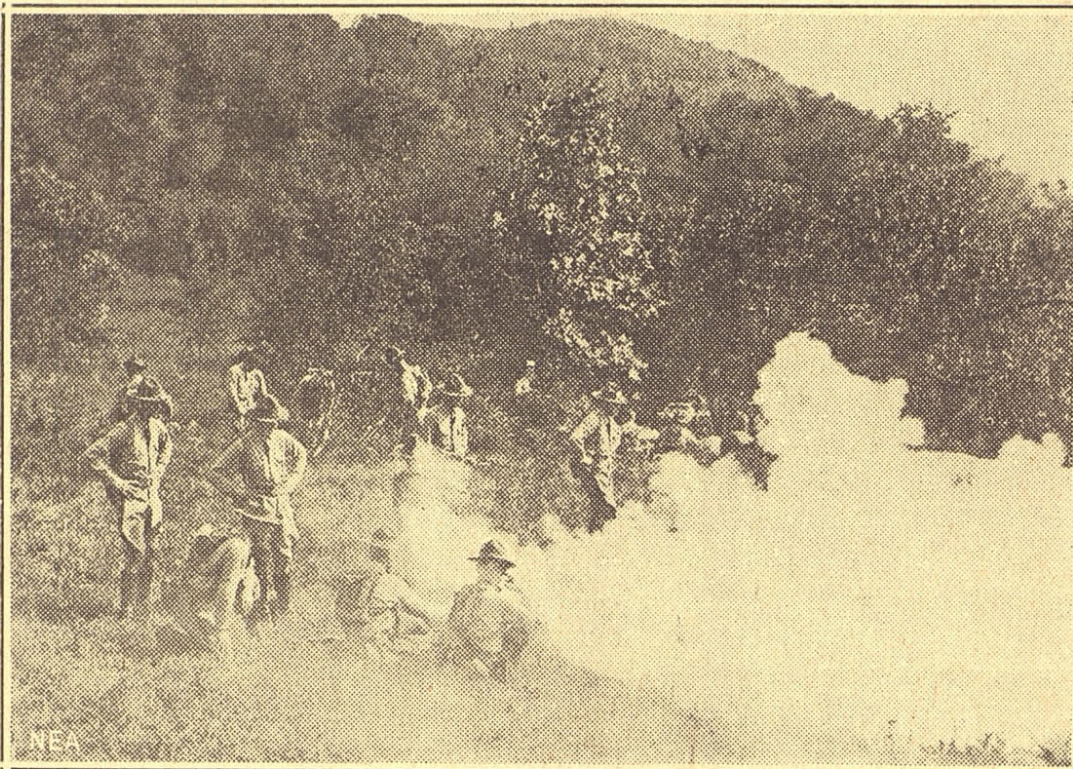

Lieut. Gov. Edgar Witt said he had not decided whether he will rule on the point when the senate reconvenes or submit it to the senate for decision.

4,000 Moved Out of Hurricane's Path

MIAMI Fla., Sept. 6.—The state of Florida raced a tropical storm off its coast today to move 4,000 persons living in the direct path of the hurricane to safety before the storm struck.

Warnings were displayed in the afternoon along the coast from North Carolina, to Texas.

ENGINEER IS HERE TO MAKE CITY SURVEY

R. G. Waggener, engineer with the firm of Wood, Powell and Waggener, Dallas, is in Cisco to begin a survey of the city's revenue resources preparatory to the suggestion of a plan for solving this city's bonded debt problem.

Mr. Waggener, who was with the Texas and Pacific railroad for 13 years and who specializes in financial survey, is a member of one of the most distinguished engineering firms in the United States. Major E. A. Wood, senior member, is recognized as one of the outstanding city plan experts in the nation while Major W. J. Powell, enjoys almost equal note in other fields of engineering. It was under Powell's supervision that the Dallas county highway system was built.

Major Wood was for several years employed by the Chinese government in directing vast engineering projects.

CRABS STARVE

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 6.—Starvation because of their superabundance was given as the cause of the death of millions of crabs found on the beach between Lynnhaven and Cape Henry, Va.

NET 50 CENTS

ROYAL OAK, Mich., Sept. 6.—Burglars took a large safe from a cleaner's plant here. They trucked it to a woods at the outskirts of the city, where they opened it to discover 50 cents.

AGED BOMBERS HAPPY ON PRINCE'S ESTATE

EDITOR'S NOTE: Eugene Lyons has visited and talked to many veterans of the Russian revolution, now being cared for by the Soviet regime. Some of these veterans date back to the 1870's and 80's, when bomb and revolver were the chief propaganda methods. He has written three articles on this subject.

By EUGENE LYONS
United Press Staff Correspondent

MOSCOW, Sept. 6.—I have just spent a day in what might irreverently be described as a home for aged bomb-throwers. Unrepentant octogenarians, glowing with the pride of work performed, regaled me with details of their assassinations for the revolutionary cause 40 and 50 years ago.

Gentle, idealistic old men and women they are, too, living as wards of the Soviet regime, for which they prepared the ground. Retired war horses grazing placidly upon the former estate of the Prince Sheremetiev.

remetiev, some 40 miles out of Moscow, now serving as a rest home for the Society of Former Political Prisoners.

The society has about 3,000 members. Born-ide prison-terms under the Czarist regime for revolutionary offenses are the sole condition for membership. The society boasts a total of at least 15,834 years in chains and 4,883 years in punishment.

Prisoner Who Eluded Russell Recaptured

EL PASO, Sept. 6.—Carlos Brazel, 23, the only prisoner who ever escaped from Bud Russell, veteran prison agent, in 20 years, was back in jail today. He was captured as he entered the United States from Mexico, 15 miles west of here.

He picked a lock with a hairpin and escaped at Abilene July 26 while being taken to Huntsville to serve a 60-year term on a charge of holding up a garage here.

RIO GRANDE 4 MILES WIDE AT BROWNSVILLE

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Sept. 6.—Four miles wide in places, the greatest Rio Grande flood in history moved slowly toward the gulf of Mexico today. The crest was expected at Hidalgo this afternoon.

Reports from observation squadron fliers that the San Juan river has falling led authorities to believe the flood may reach the gulf without greatly adding to the toll of eight known dead and $5,000,000 property damage upstream.

Forty blocks of Nuevo Laredo were covered completely or partially by flood waters. Two hundred residences and business houses were swept into the river. A Catholic church, a bank, a court building were among the structures damaged.

DOPE ADDICT SLASHES WRIST IN CITY JAIL

A dope addict, confined in the city jail after he had been removed from the office of Dr. W. P. Lee, yesterday made good his promise to force the police to change their mind about summoning a physician.

He took a razor blade from his shoe and slashed his wrist so badly that the officers hastily called a doctor to stop the flow of blood.

The man, with whom the police had had dealings before, appeared at Dr. Lee's office yesterday morning and demanded a drug. Dr. Lee refused and the addict promptly went into such a spasm that the physician called the police to remove him. At the city hall he continued his insistence and when the officers remained adamant he produced the razor blade and slashed his arm.

After the blood was staunched the police took the addict to Eastland.

PERFECT TWINS

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 6.—A perfect specimen of twin cantaloupes was brought here by E. Reynolds, who raised it in his patch at Biscoe, Va. The twins were closely joined together and alike in every respect.

26-POUND MUDCAT

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., Sept. 6.—R. B. and H. B. Robertson, fishing in New River, caught a mudcat that weighed 26 pounds and had a mouth spread of eight and a half inches.

They relish talk about their past. The rest home seems like a living museum of the Russian revolution. Here are live specimens. These are all men and women over 80—Vera Figner, Michael Froenko, Elizabeth Kovalskaya, Vassili Perovsky, Michael Chernavsky, and others. To people familiar with Russian history it may come as a surprise that these historic personalities still are alive. Most of them are in robust health.

I had visited the society's museum in the city. Room after room is crowded with pictures and documents of the terrible underground struggle against Czarism. It is an impressive display, recording thousands of executions, imprisonments, tortures, exiles, and blood-curdling examples of brutality, suicides, escapes and vengeance.

In Mikhaelovsky, where the Sheremetiev estate is located, I found a sort of living replica of this museum. Instead of pictures, the living survivors of the early period. Instead of documents, the flaming memories of men and women grown old in dungeons and distant exiles. With some of them I talked about the past—and the present.

Like veterans the world over,

TICKETS FOR SMOKER BEING DISTRIBUTED

Distribution of tickets for the business men's smoker on the roof garden of the Laguna hotel Friday night is being done by W. J. Leach, chairman of the arrangements committee, and his committeemen, H. L. Dyer, J. L. Thornton, Art Gattson and Charles Sandler.

Chairmen of subcommittees in actual charge of selling the tickets will report to Mr. Leach and to Mr. Dyer, who serves as committee secretary, upon the number of tickets sold.

These group chairmen are: Jack Anderson, George Boyd, Joe C. Burnam, Dr. F. E. Clark, Pere Coates, E. P. Crawford, E. O. Elliott, Fred T. Crist, I. R. Haley, Ed Huestis, J. C. King, E. C. McClelland, Homer McDonald, S. H. Nance, C. H. Parish, Barton Philpott, J. B. Pratt, O. J. Russell, J. O. Skiles, W. B. Statham, W. P. Thompson, T. C. Williams and S. R. Wood.

Committees named at a previous meeting of the business men will be expected to give reports on plans for a trades day, a rodeo and a means of getting into closer touch with the people of the trade territory. It is also understood that plans are being considered to increase interest in more and better markets for cotton and other farm produce.

Comm'n Begins Gas Rate Hearing

AUSTIN, Sept. 6.—The Texas Railroad commission today began a hearing on the fairness of natural gas rates charged in 90 Texas towns of less than 500 population by the Community Natural Gas company of Dallas, subsidiary of the Lone Star Gas company.

RUBIO GOES TO SAN DIEGO TO MAKE HOME

EL PASO, Sept. 6.—Pascual Ortiz Rubio, former president of Mexico, arrived here today on a special train en route to San Diego, California, where he will live with his family.

Rubio cancelled earlier plans to go to Hot Springs, Ark. He appeared in good spirits. "You can't imagine how happy I am to be freed of the responsibilities of the presidency," he said. "Mexico will have no more revolutions," he predicted.

He said he resigned because of a long standing illness and not because of differences with Gen. Calles, "strong man" of Mexico.

HEART ATTACK IS FATAL TO STRANGER HERE

Tumbling from his chair only a moment after he had entered the porch at the home of M. H. Fleming, 400 H. avenue, a man identified as Harry J. Crandall, Pine Island, Minn., died almost instantly of a heart attack Monday afternoon.

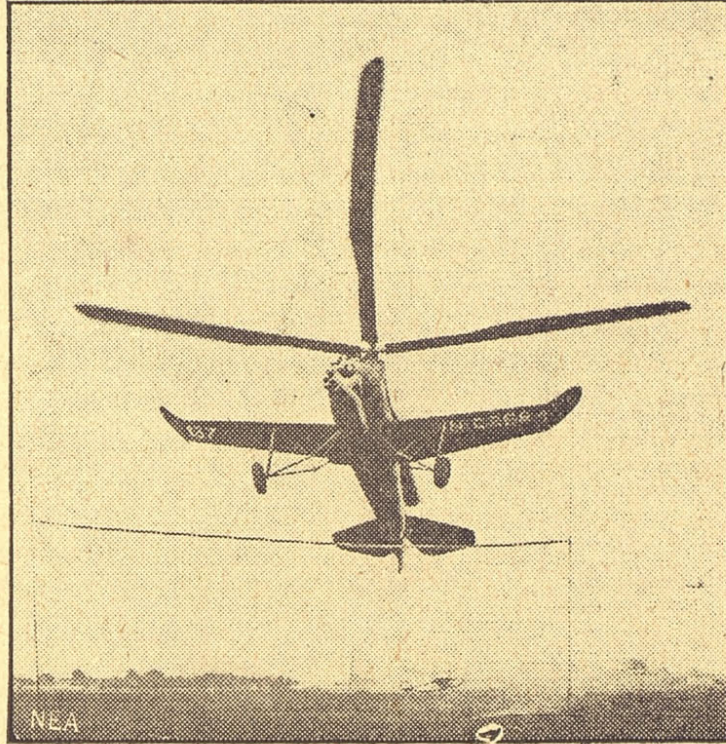

The body was removed to the Green Funeral home where it was prepared for shipment to Pine Island.

The man, hitch-hiking from Houston, Texas, to Minnesota, appeared to the Fleming home and asked Mike Fleming if he might sit on the porch until the downpour had slackened. Mr. Fleming agreed.

Identified at the funeral home the stranger was found to have been 34 years of age and a telegraph operator. He is survived by his wife, whom he left at Houston, his mother and four sisters.

The mother is Mrs. Mary Crandall and the widow Mrs. O. A. Crandall. Sisters are Mrs. J. B. Clansner, Pine Island; Mrs. Mary Strubbe, San Francisco, Calif.; Mrs. S. Neuman, Bakersfield, Calif.; and Mrs. Otto Klimham, Anaconda, Minn.

Largest Presidential Poll in History Now Being Conducted by Literary Digest

CISCO CASE TRIAL DUE TO START WED.

Hearing of Cisco's football suit was definitely set this afternoon for 9 o'clock tomorrow morning in 91st district court.

Trial of the Cisco Independent School district's suit for re-instatement in the interscholastic league football division will probably get underway in 91st district court at Eastland tomorrow morning, attorneys indicated today noon. Arguments began at 1:30 in the insurance case which took precedence on the docket.

There was a possibility the court would be able to reach the Cisco case at mid-afternoon although this was not regarded probable.

Announcement is made that the early returns give an indication there may be a number of surprises in the balloting, as happened in the 1928 presidential poll. The final figures predicting the identity of the next president will be made public well in advance of the final election.

The largest presidential poll ever conducted, comprising over 20,000,000 individual ballots mailed throughout the entire United States, is now being undertaken by The Literary Digest.

Cisco's first allotment of ballots in this pre-election referendum has been mailed already from the poll headquarters in New York, according to advice received here today, and should be distributed by the local post office within a few days.

The ballots are being mailed throughout the entire United States at the rate of more than 1,500,000 every working day and it is anticipated that the first tabulated returns of this country-wide balloting will be published before the end of this month.

This is the third large presidential poll conducted by The Literary Digest and the results of each have been substantiated by the official election returns with over 95 per cent accuracy, according to statistics released on the prior polls.

Ascertain "Shift"

A feature of the current poll is an attempt to ascertain any general shift of voters from the parties for which they cast ballots in the 1928 election, by asking each voter in this "post-card election" if he is changing his party allegiance this year.

To guard against tampering, fraud and counterfeiting, a specially manufactured cardboard is used for printing the ballot, according to the sponsors of the poll, and all spurious votes can be detected immediately and destroyed.

Each envelope mailed, containing a ballot, is individually addressed. It is stated that the poll is secret in every respect and involves no obligation on the part of the voter other than marking his choice. The return postage is paid by the magazine.

20,000,000 Names.
The more than 20,000,000 names to which the "straw votes" are sent are a combination of the most accurate mailing lists available, which it is stated include every state and section, city and countryside, class and occupation in the United States.

The operation of the poll requires the services of 2500 addressers and 300 assembling and mailing clerks. A staff of 500 has been working on the lists of the voters since Spring, bringing the names and addresses up-to-date. The services of 500 more clerks are required to tally the ballots as they are returned.

The publishers of the magazine state that over 1,100,000 pounds of paper were required for printing the ballots, envelopes and letters of instruction and the postage bill for this "straw poll" will be upwards of $300,000.

Announcement is made that the early returns give an indication there may be a number of surprises in the balloting, as happened in the 1928 presidential poll. The final figures predicting the identity of the next president will be made public well in advance of the final election.

Several houses on East 11th street near the site of the old oil mill were flooded, while water rose to the thresholds of houses on west 14th street.

In the business district water, at the height of the rain, ran over the sidewalk and flowed into the Home Furniture company. Boards were placed across the doors to hold it out. The Morris Simon store was similarly threatened.

The creek running through the city and collecting the greater part of drainage from the rest of the residential district assumed the proportions of a river.

So far as could be learned damage from the rainfall was comparatively slight, however.

TODAY'S FALL IS 4 INCHES AT 1 O'CLOCK

The gauge at the city hall at one o'clock this afternoon showed 4.1 inches of rain had fallen in Cisco up to that hour today. This brings the two-day total to 7.4 inches.

Rain that turned dry creeks into rivers and gutters and streets into small torrents deluged Cisco this morning, bringing the total precipitation for two days, as gauged at the city hall, to 7 inches at noon.

Yesterday afternoon's downpour measured 3.3 inches while rainfall this morning had reached well above 3.5 inches at noon.

The small creek following a general southwest by northeast depression through the residential district was running several hundred feet wide at points, threatening residents in the lowlands. Firemen stationed equipment on 14th street just west of D avenue in a position to render assistance if the waters rose higher.

The yard of the Bankhead Feed mill was flooded, water lapping at the floor level. Nearby the bridge over the branch at 11th street was choked with the torrent. Likewise the yard of the White Star Refining company was overflowed while the Katy crossing on 14th street, street intersections elsewhere, and warehouse company grounds in the vicinity resembled mirages.

Houses Flooded

Several houses on East 11th street near the site of the old oil mill were flooded, while water rose to the thresholds of houses on west 14th street.

In the business district water, at the height of the rain, ran over the sidewalk and flowed into the Home Furniture company. Boards were placed across the doors to hold it out. The Morris Simon store was similarly threatened.

The creek running through the city and collecting the greater part of drainage from the rest of the residential district assumed the proportions of a river.

So far as could be learned damage from the rainfall was comparatively slight, however.

New Level Near

Lake Cisco approached a new high level for all time with water reported within 6 inches of the previous high mark and rising. At noon the lake was reported to have gained one foot and three inches.

East of Cisco the intensity of the rain slackened. Ranger received two inches. Eastland had a commensurate amount. North toward Albany it was likewise comparatively slight. That city reported 1.21 inches at noon. Abilene received 2.66 inches and Breckenridge 2.2 inches, according to reports from the Southwestern Bell Telephone company. Rising Star reported 1.5 inches and, further south, Dublin reported only .82 of an inch.

Heavy precipitation was reported from Strawn which received 7 inches from Saturday noon.

WATER FLOODS RAILROAD AND HIGHWAY

Traffic on the Texas and Pacific railroad was tied up this afternoon, as train crews waited for flood waters to subside before attempting to cross damaged bridges west of Cisco. Heavy downpours at noon submerged the main line, washing way approaches and ballast to about six bridges on the road.

The western approach to the overpass on Highway No. 1 at Harrell's crossing was also submerged early in the afternoon, tying up highway traffic east and west for two hours or more. Water at the crossing reached the highest stage on record as the area was deluged with a downpour about noon.

The westbound Texas and Pacific passenger No. 3, due here at 12:30 and arriving at 1 o'clock, was tied up here. A Southern Pacific freight train was waiting at Dothan. Extent of the damage could not be determined until the water subsided. About a mile of track was reported under water.

FALLEN FORTUNES OF THE RICHEST WOMAN.

Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick was known as the world's richest woman. Now Chicago and the American world are asking "Did she die virtually penniless?" Attorneys and business associates familiar with her estate that once was valued at more than $40,000,000 say it may have shrunk to such an extent that only enough remains to settle outstanding obligations. This world's richest woman who may have died practically penniless had a heart. She refused to allow foreclosure of mortgages on homes sold through the Edith Rockefeller McCormick trust, and she likewise declined to throw on the market her huge block of Standard Oil trust, believing such action would force the stock lower and bring losses to persons whom she had advised to buy it. "Sack it to the rich" has been the slogan of demagogues the country over in recent years. Well, a slump in values "sacked it" to the fortunes of the richest woman in America and now there are thousands who received her benefactions while she was in the land of the living who are out of jobs and perhaps on the brink of want. If there were no rich, there would be no jobs. All the great fortunes of America were created by men who began life's activities on the lower rung of the ladder. Indeed they began as wage earners. They fought their way to the top and while they were creating these fortunes, they were providing high wages to millions of men and women on their payroll.

CEMENT INDUSTRY SAVED BY HIGHWAY ACTIVITY

It is said that highway construction this year has been the salvation of both labor and the cement industry. There are nine cement plants in the state. Their combined capacity is 10,500,000 barrels or 42,000,000 sacks. In 1929, when general construction was at its peak, Texas cement plants distributed 7,500,000 barrels, which is 75 per cent of their capacity, and 75 per cent of the distribution was in Texas. Then came the crash. Distribution declined in 1930 to 6,500,000 barrels; in 1931 to 5,500,000 barrels, and this year to 4,500,000 barrels. Road work in Texas is responsible for 75 per cent of distribution which already has amounted to 2,500,000 barrels. In other words cement distribution, if it were not for highway work, would be less than 2,000,000 barrels this year and many of the 1200 employees would be laid off. It is said transportation of Texas cement brought the railroads at least $4,000,000 this year. In other words, according to a higher authority, if the state highway department has expended $20,000,000 on road work this year $17,000,000 of it has gone into labor of some kind. It goes with-

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON — Vice presidential candidates apparently can't help being funny, even if they try. There is no evidence that they try very hard to help it, either.

Recent experiences of Uncle Charlie Curtis and Uncle Jack Garner promise that the campaign won't lack for comic relief. And that's all to the good, because most people either so thoroughly dislike a presidential candidate or hold him in such deep respect that the leaders of the two tickets seldom inspire hearty laughter.

Poor Uncle Charlie

AMUSING pictures of Uncle Charlie have registered themselves on the screen in rather rapid succession, including:

1—Uncle Charlie all thrashed and bound, ready to be thrown to the sharks by the G. O. P. politicians at Chicago who couldn't imagine what possible good he would do the ticket, suddenly rescued by the refusal of Charles G. Dawes to take the nomination and by the heroic efforts of his devoted half-sister, Mrs. Dolly Gann.

2—Uncle Charlie calling out the marshes to guard the Capitol from bonus marchers, then learning that only the president can call out armed forces and watching them march down hill again.

3—Uncle Charlie in New Mexico, his appearance guarded by machine guns, hurling "dirty coward" and other epithets into the crowd.

4—Uncle Charlie making his acceptance speech at Topeka and, although running on a wet platform with a wetter candidate, declaring against repeal of the 18th amendment.

Garner's Stage Trip

NONE of which is any more ridiculous than the spectacle of Uncle Jack Garner's trip to New York, in which he publicly went through his paces in an obviously stage-managed effort to convince the east that he was not a radical, that he was wet, that he was not a religious bigot and that he was an admirer of Al Smith.

Republicans decided to center their fire on Garner on the theory that he was easier game. They felt they could sell the idea that he was an unbound, dangerous radical, a great menace on any party's ticket. It would be interesting to know who first had that idea about this hard-boiled old Texas banker and peacen grower. Everybody in Washington knows that he is such a conservative that many of the progressives dislike him cordially. He has been known to issue silly, wild-eyed statements about suppressing "Socialism and Communism."

Someone may have derived the idea from the fact that Uncle Jack is more honest and outspoken than most politicians. He likes to express his opinions bluntly, often in sizzling words and not always with a careful view to the effect. He has especially enjoyed harpooning Hoover and Andy Mellon, but the fact that they are arch-conservatives doesn't mean Uncle Jack is a radical.

The "Dry" Rumors

THE whispering campaigners had also been busy circulating stories that Jack was dry and a religious bigot who had opposed Smith in the 1928 campaign. That also was part of the attempt to draw votes away from the ticket simply on account of Garner.

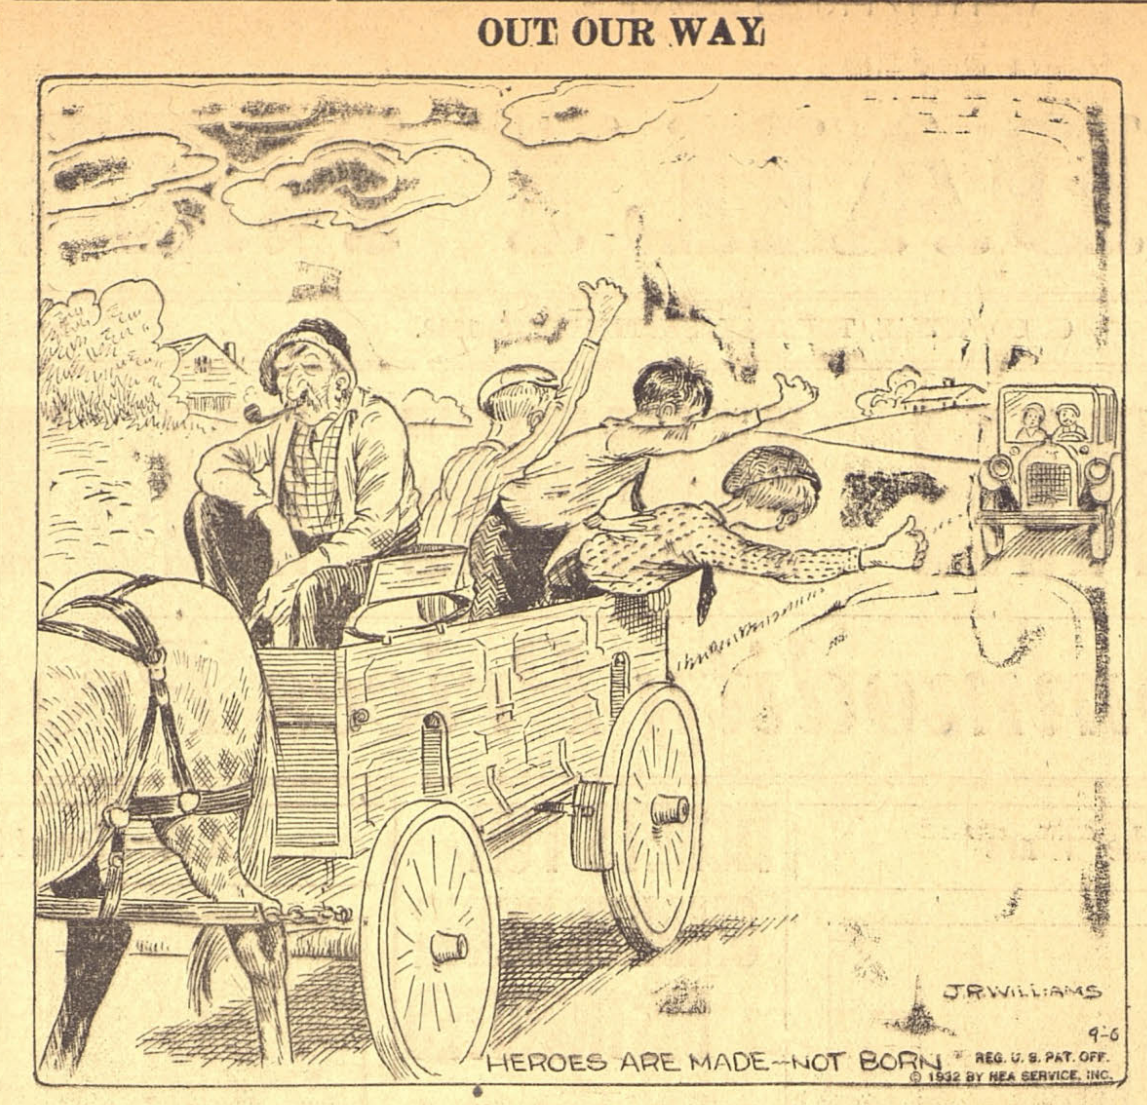

So they brought him up to New York and gave him a luncheon with a lot of the active state leaders on hand. Jack made a speech fitted to refute the radicalism charge and then politicians from the Smith states of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut rose and asked questions just as if to satisfy themselves for the first time as to the falsity of those other accusations.

So Uncle Jack made his denials and confessions of faith and the Democratic publicity machine made quite a story of it, telling how "his voice broke with emotion" and so on.

The Smith Session

AND Uncle Jack must have had a rather absurd session with Al Smith, too, considering that it was he primarily who smothered Al's hopes at Chicago and considering how sour Al still was at the end of the meeting.

Then they let Jack go back to Texas, where he is staging the unique and diverting spectacle of a man running for re-election to his seat in Congress—as if to play safe—as well as the vice presidency.

out saying that road improvement this winter will be a boon to the unemployed, and the investments in nine cement plants of Texas aggregating 40 to 50 million dollars have been virtually saved to their investors. First and last, for nearly six years the state highway commission of Texas has made a record of efficiency and economy that should appeal to all intelligent and fair-minded people.

MILLER NAMES COIN RAISERS.

State Chairman Roy Miller, director of the democratic national campaign in Texas, has named Frank Schofield of Hillsboro, Carl Estes of Tyler and Harold Byrd of Dallas members of the state finance committee. Schofield will be the chairman. He directed the campaign of Melvin W. Traylor of Kentucky, Texas and Illinois for the presidential nomination. Carl Estes is the publisher of a daily newspaper and very active in democratic politics. He was an original Franklin D. Roosevelt man and attended the Chicago convention as a delegate. Byrd is an East Texas independent oil operator. He has a historic background and an ancient family tree. He is a cousin of Admiral Richard E. Byrd and ex-Gov. Harry F. Byrd of Virginia. Harry E. Byrd of Virginia is the head of the finance committee of the national committee. He has named National Committeewoman Mrs. H. H. Sevier as the Texas member of the committee. Gov. Roosevelt's coast-to-coast tour began Monday. He is ready for the "battle of the century." Physically he is fit, and mentally he is able to hold his own with the big guns called into service by the president and all the administration leaders.

TEXAS LAWMAKERS PAVE A WAY.

Now Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania and his lawmakers are going to regulate the size and load of motor trucks. Texas lawmakers should feel chesty. They paved the way. That is, they blazed the legislative trail in the work of regulating the size and loads of trucks. Now it is for the lawmakers of other states to walk in the footsteps of the Lone Star regulators of the people's highways. As governor of Texas, James Stephen Hogg forced the enactment of rail regulatory laws and the laws compelling the state to insure the validity of all bond issues before they were marketed. In after years Robert M. LaFollette and Theodore Roosevelt copied the laws of Texas and made history in their respective commonwealths. Now Gov. Pinchot, the confidential friend and political adviser of the lamented Roosevelt as well as the close personal friend of the illustrious LaFollette, has invaded Texas for ideas or statutes which will enable him to put over his regulatory plan in the second state of the American union in point of wealth and population.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

The most popular theme song for this country right now should be "It Ain't Gonna Rain No More." I see by a letter from E. G. Fleming, of Clyde, Texas, that the Callahan county singing convention will meet Saturday and Sunday at Baird. I suggest that the convention adopt that song and sing it. Perhaps by appropriating Mr. Hoover's anti-depression methods the members of the convention can build up a psychological defense which will cause us not to mind these soppy dripping clouds.

The present state of the weather accounted for one death here yesterday. It is the custom, I believe, to measure the severity of climatic phenomena in terms of human toll. Thus if a man dies of measles in a windstorm his death is listed as a windstorm toll. I have never heard of the weather having been given credit for a birth.

A transient, foot plodding from Houston to Pine Island, Minn., stopped in at the home of M. H. Fleming, 400 H Avenue yesterday, and asked to sit upon the porch out of the heavy rain. Mr. Fleming hospitably agreed. A moment later the stranger tumbled over with a fatal heart attack. The reason for ascribing his death to the weather is the argument that if it had not been raining the stranger would have been stepping cheerily along the highway without suffering any of those mental and physical influences which contributed to the failure of the vital organ.

Rainy weather is a good time to tell fish stories. I am indebted to John D. McCall, Dallas attorney here yesterday in connection with the survey of Cisco's bonded debt problem, for the following atrocity. Two men went to the creek to fish and arriving at the site discovered they had neglected to bring bait. They were in a quandary until happening to glance under a log they discovered a water moccasin holding a live frog by one leg preparatory to gulping the kicking morsel. Securing a forked stick the men pinned the snake down and robbed it of its prey. Having dissected the frog into bait, the fishermen noticed that the snake continued to lie under the log regarding them with a solemn and sorrowful mien, and had compassion upon it. One of them drew out a fruit jar, filled the lid with synthetic spiritus corni and set the retribution before the reptile. The moccasin sniffed the contents, lapped it delicately, and promptly gulped down the liquor. Then it slithered off into the weeds.

A few moments later one of the men, intent upon his tackle, felt a light tap against his leg. He looked down and, believe it or not, there was that snake with another live frog in its mouth.

One of the witnesses in the Cisco Independent School district's suit for re-instatement in the Interscholastic league has sent the assembled counsel scurrying to Webster, N. S. Holland, superintendent of the Breckenridge Public schools, making deposition to be introduced as evidence in the case due to come up in 91st district court at Eastland today, staggered his examiners with this polysyllabic ponderosity:

"Endocranial unbalance." In other words, explained Mr. Holland charitably, "my emotions were aroused."

A word like that will arouse anyone's emotions.

7,000 Delegates to Teachers' Meeting

FORT WORTH, Sept. 6. — Over 7,000 delegates to the Texas State Teachers association convention are expected here Nov. 24-26 according to R. T. Ellis, executive secretary of the association.

Lorado Taft, Chicago, artist and critic, Dr. George W. Truett, noted Baptist pastor of Dallas, and Dr. Harold Rugg of the Columbia university Teachers college, New York, are among the speakers scheduled on the convention's tentative program.

A meeting of the association's executive committee will be called by President J. A. Hill, Canyon, head of the West Texas State Teachers college, in October to complete arrangements for the convention.

ESCAPES BATH—GET CUT

COEBURN, Va., Sept. 6 — A two-year-old son of John Moore, met a painful and unusual accident when he tried to escape a bath by crawling into a five-gallon stone crock. The crock, already cracked broke under the boy's weight, and inflicted severe injuries, including a deep cut across the thigh, exposing one hip bone. The right elbow was cut to the bone.

MONA TOWNSEND, beautiful young widow, inherits her husband's millions with the provision that she must not wed. Her marriage, arranged by her husband's lawyer, who was Mona's employer, was a strange affair, leaving her free at the end of a year to become her husband's wife in actuality or secure a divorce. Mona, in love with Townsend's nephew, BARRY TOWNSEND, agreed to the marriage when she thought Barry was lost to her.

She employs LOTTIE GARR, a famous model, as her secretary, companion and they set out for South America where Barry and STEVE SACCARELLI are partners in a diamond mine. Mona's brother, BUD, works at the mine. Mona hopes for a reconciliation with Barry. She also feels Barry is entitled to a share of his uncle's fortune and wants to find a way to arrange this legally.

Learning that Barry and Steve are on vacation at Holiday Island the girls leave their boat at Port of Spain. There they meet Bud who takes them to Holiday Island by plane. They arrive as Barry and Steve are at the noon meal. The young men are cordial but their greeting lacks warmth. Mona wishes she had not come. Barry does not ask for explanations and she cannot make them.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLI

THE maid had brought Mona and Lottie up the uncarpeted stairs into the wide halls above. From the landing swung a huge window of shutters which, open now and made fast by means of a rope, looked out on a riot of blossoming hibiscus. Intense greens were dotted with crimson, pink and yellow. A soft breeze stirred the trees, sending in showers of perfume.

The rooms on the second floor were high and, above the doors, were latticed to the ceiling. At either side of each door there were shutters placed to let in air. The effect was one of marvelous coolness.

"You can't tell secrets here!" Lottie remarked, eyeing this arrangement. "Heavens, a whisper would be all over the house. I hope nobody uses an alarm clock!"

From the windows of the bedroom they could glimpse the sea. It lay shimmering like a softly swaying bit of blue satin rimmed with silver. A necklace of palms fringed the beach and a white boat swung with the lazy tide.

The room contained few pieces of furniture. A huge bed draped with netting stood in the center of the farther wall. There was a dresser, two easy chairs of rattan and a table. Mona noted with satisfaction that the room was lighted with electricity and that the bed had a reading lamp attached to its head.

"But there's no bath!" Lottie cried, pointing to a wash stand. Josie had hung towels about and disappeared with two huge pitchers.

Lottie's room, connecting by door and by outer balcony, was similar to Mona's.

A knock on the door announced the arrival of the baggage and Florence entered, dragging suitcases and hat boxes after her. The boys, she explained, had brought it to the door but it seemed best not to allow them to disturb Madame.

Josie appeared almost immediately carrying pitchers of hot water. Mona and Lottie bathed, opening suitcases in search of pajamas, and finally crept beneath the netting for a rest. They were asleep instantly.

SEVERAL hours later Mona awoke suddenly. Lottie, a veritable sea nymph in green, was bending over her.

"I've been out to bathe—not in the sea, just the pool," Lottie announced. "Josie told me about it. The boys have a sort of sunken bath behind the house. It's as large as a baby swimming pool, with showers rigged up and everything. It's great!"

Half an hour later, wearing cool chiffon and dainty shoes, Mona descended the stairs. Lottie had reached the terrace just before her and sat at a small table, the silver service in front of her, quizzing the boys about their tea.

Josie, the maid, arrived with tinkling ice. Mona supposed that she would like you if we keep landing on the fairway, Barry! How's the airport coming?"

"Not very well. Maybe I'll get you to handle it," Barry answered amiably.

"Any time you say," called Bud. "He drives well, doesn't he?" said Mona, watching him career out was prepared to answer questions. Barry and Steve, in fresh linens and sleek of hair, rose as Mona approached. It was cool on the terrace. The glare of the sunlight was softened and a gentle breeze played. "Tea, Mona," Lottie inquired. She was perfectly at home here. "Hot or cold?"

"Cold," Mona decided.

"I don't see how anyone can drink hot tea here," observed Lottie. "There is lemon or lime. Which do you prefer?"

"Let me arrange her place, Lottie," Barry said. He put down a plate of tiny cakes and took possession of the tea table. "I know what Mona likes."

It was a small courtesy yet it made Mona's heart leap as she watched. The long months seemed suddenly to have faded. She had never—really—been married to Barry's uncle. Here they were—she and Lottie, Barry and Steve—on an outing just as they had been so often before.

Things would be all right, she was sure. Barry would forgive her for everything. Some time very soon she could explain all that had happened. Now she would relax and enjoy herself.

Her dream was broken abruptly. Barry held the tumbler decked with mint out to the maid and, indicating Mona, said, "Give this to Mrs. Townsend."

Mrs. Townsend! He might have said nothing, leaving it to the maid's deduction whom the glass was intended for, or he might have handed her the glass himself.

Mrs. Townsend! That name which might have been so sweet was a reproach.

They heard a pounding on the carpeted stairs, a sudden clatter on the veranda, and Bud, freshly dressed and glowing after his recent swim, joined them.

"Tea!" Lottie asked. "Did you have a good swim, Bud?"

"No tea, thanks. Yes, I had a fine swim." To Barry he said, "I'm going down to the plane. Is that o. k.?"

Barry nodded and Bud flung himself into the rickety automobile and started off.

He called back, "Bobby Jones won't like you if we keep landing on the fairway, Barry! How's the airport coming?"

"Not very well. Maybe I'll get you to handle it," Barry answered amiably.

"Any time you say," called Bud. "He drives well, doesn't he?" said Mona, watching him career out through the gate on a single wheel and disappear in a tunnel of green trees beyond.

"He does everything well," Barry replied. "It was a great idea to send him down here. Been a big help to us. I guess Bud was just about at the turning point. He was all set to amount to something—either something pretty fine or just the opposite."

MONA nodded in agreement. "It was awfully good of you," she said softly. "I don't believe I've ever thanked you—"

"Oh, we've had our thanks all right. Bud himself, looking as he does today, is thanks enough."

There was coolness in Barry's tone and Mona felt it. She was silent for some time.

Then after a little she said, "Does he handle any of the selling for you?"

Barry nodded again. "He does and he's clever at it, too. There's a man named Horton—"

How could Barry know about that? Had he seen Bud? Then she understood that of course he had while she was sleeping.

"There's a man named Horton who's a tough customer. He gave us a good price for uncut diamonds because Bud—"

"Why don't you let Bud tell her that, boy?" suggested Steve casually. He turned to Mona. "Barry is always bragging about Bud. I tell him the boy's head will be turned."

The scent of the honeysuckle came nearer and nearer. They could hear the sea spilling and crashing along the beach. Lottie, rising, beckoned Steve to join her at the edge of the terrace.

Mona was alone with Barry at last. What was he going to say? How would he begin? With reproaches? With a demand for explanations?

Instead Barry, too, rose from his chair. "Don't take Lottie away," he called. "I promised the girls we'd take them for a drive. We ought to be starting or it will be too late. The roadster is in order, isn't it?"

"Never better!" Steve agreed. Cupping his hands together raising them to his mouth, he shouted, "Oh, boy! Bring the roadster!"

NER YEAR PREDICTED BY RICE COACH

HOUSTON, Sept. 6. — Although Meagher will have an hand 55 candidates, 21 of whom won their "R" last year. With this manpower he believes the Owls will be the favorite in the running for the outburst conference championship, a thing long coveted at Rice. Meagher will have an assortment of backfield talent that he holds to be second to none in the conference. At fullback, Capt. Tom Driscoll, Houston, will be back on the job. His brother, Vic Driscoll, will have first call at quarterback. Tom and Vic Driscoll, respectively, will be understood by Jim McLaughlin, Ranger, and Jim McLaughlin, Dallas, among others, and Henry Clure, Beaumont, and Neaveux, Houston.

Halfback jobs will be taken care of by Lee Hammett, Ranger; Jap Brasher, Houston; Pat Wallace, Elmer; Jack Frye, Houston; and Billy Scott, Marshall, all veterans. Meagher reports a wealth of consistent understudies to these first string men.

Unbalanced Ends

The Rice head coach admits to a slight tendency toward unbalanced play. On one wing he will try Hinman, Ranger, shifting him to tackle. Jim McKinnon, Austin, will be back on the job. DeWitt Knight, Port Arthur; Ed Strong, Houston, and Red Miller, Houston, will try for the end.

Rice's all-conference center, Odell Marsall, will again hold the pivot position, with Ed Handker, next in line for the job. Other available for center duty are Lauterbach, San Antonio, and Dunbar, Palestine.

The teams will be well fortified with Lou Hassell, Edinburg, voted the most valuable player in 1931, and Fred Lauterbach, Antonio, Paul Cole, Cisco, and Watson, Dallas, are among others who will see service.

As call for guests will go to Ray Burk, Houston, and Payton, Dallas, both of whom star in 1931. Two others adjudged as good are Hal Michelson, El Paso, and Red Dickey, Houston. Miller, Miller, also will be liable as guard.

The Rice schedule for 1932: Sept. 24. — Texas College of Arts Industries at Houston. Oct. 1. — Louisiana State University at Houston. Oct. 5. — Southern Methodist University at Dallas. Oct. 15. — Loyola of New Orleans at Houston. Oct. 22. — University of Texas at Austin. Oct. 29. — Creighton college of Omaha at Houston. Nov. 5. — University of Arkansas at Fayetteville. Nov. 12. — Texas A. & M. college at College Station. Nov. 19. — Texas Christian University at Houston. Nov. 26. — Baylor University at Austin.

exas and Mexico To Trade Students

AN ANTONIO, Sept. 6. — An exchange studentship between the University of Mexico and the University of Texas for the next two years has been arranged, it was announced here.

Students will be sent from the University of Texas to the University of Mexico and four from the University of Mexico to the University of Texas. The next school year each school will exchange students.

Arrangements for the exchange were made at a conference here between H. Y. Benedict, president of the University of Texas and Eduardo Hernandez Chazaro, Mexican ambassador.

Payment for the scholarships is being made in a legacy of $110,000 by the late P. D. Farmer of Worth, Texas, to be used in international scholarships between Texas and Mexico. Interest on the $100,000 for the scholarships.

Students will be selected by Benedict, Chazaro and the dean of the university. Mexican students to the university will be chosen by the president of the University of Mexico, the American ambassador and a third person, as yet unnamed.

Students from the University of Texas have been recommended by Esequiel Salinas, Jr., Fritz Hoffmann, J. Nelson Green, Wellitsey, Paul Patterson Young, Dorothy Kress.

TREASURIES DISAGREE

LEVELAND Sept. 6. — While parties were involved in an investigation seeking the cause of the disappearance of $570,000 from the city treasury, examiners checked treasury books and found $250,000 much.

Texas U. Graduate Indulges Whimsical Humor in Book "Philosophers in Hades"

AUSTIN, Sept. 6. — Already the author of a number of recognized works on philosophy, Dr. T. V. Smith, now professor of the University of Chicago but graduate of The University of Texas, has written yet another volume, entitled "Philosophers in Hades". The new book is published by the University of Chicago Press. Dr. Smith received his bachelor of arts degree from the Texas institution in 1915 and his master of arts degree the following year, taking the doctor of philosophy degree later from the University of Chicago.

A review of Dr. Smith's somewhat whimsical book appeared in a recent issue of the New York Times, as follows:

"Of all possible titles for his book Mr. T. V. Smith undoubtedly chose the one surest to scare away the greatest number of readers. The unusual American reader may be quite willing to consign all philosophers to Hades but he prefers to have them stay there and has little use for their resurrected shades, whether concerned with the matters of modern America or ancient Greece. Nevertheless, there is a goodly number of those readers, selected ones, it is true, but a sizable array of them, after all, who can safely be advised to take the hurdle of the title and plunge into Hades along with the philosophers.

For Mr. Smith, who is professor of philosophy in the University of Chicago, is an engaging sort of person who has no respect for even the most awesome reputations and would as soon spoof Plato and Socrates as Thrasymachus — whom he informs at the end of their argument that he does not know when he is least and does not even know when he is kidding — or Empedocles, or Zeno, or Epicurus. He spoofs them all a bit, the whole score or more of ancient and famous Greek philosophers whom he meets in Hades, and does it very cleverly and amusingly. He does not spare even Socrates, and his puckish fancy makes a grimace now and then at Plato, although he is usually quite reverent toward this "brightest light of the Grecian skies." He gets their opinions of one another and finds them to be quite often neither amiable nor respectful. Ad he equalizes matters by spoofing himself and the earth and the people whence he came.

Jovious Nonsense

"There is a jovious bit of nonsense in the author's account of now he happened to find himself in Hades. He was taking an airplane journey to California on a confidential mission for a group of Chicago republicans to try to enlist the aid of Will Rogers in a certain scheme, with the vice presidency as a bait when there was engine trouble and we met the ground halfway and were the earth's." The description of the floating journey through nothingness, which ends with his announcement, "Pluto we are here!" is well imagined and is lucid, simple and impressive. All the rest of the book is dialogue with the Earthling as the shades call him meeting one after another of the Greek philosophers, engaging him in argument and trying to draw him out on the principles that he taught and practiced and to tell him about the earth and its affairs and people at the present time. Each chapter is chiefly devoted to a particular philosopher and is prefaced by a brief "Who's Who" account of his life, work and teachings. Pluto devises an instrument for his use, a "Plutophone," with which he can broadcast these interviews upon the earth, and both Pluto and Plato are so pleased to have this opportunity of spreading anew their light and learning that they and Heraclitus sign a recommendation of the book.

"In one chapter Pluto, to assuage the Earthling's nostalgia, abducts the spirits of his colleagues, Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, and Thornton Wilder and brings them for a few minutes to Hades, and the Earthling gives the reader an amusing account of how Socrates reacted to his conversation. Epicurus true to his earth philosophy has a garden in Hades, and the Earthling, finding it redolent of delicious smells, leads the ensuing conversation to a proposal to dignify with proper recognition the neglected

Nose by starting a laboratory for research upon the alchemy of fragrance, using the results for nasal education and planning a Theatre of Smell which shall bear the inscription, "Olfactoring in Hades — Just Smelling Around."

"While there are much good fun, clever satire and amusing spoofing in the book, it is not all merely entertainment. Each philosopher is made to set forth in his argument at least the main points of his system briefly and pithily — although sometimes he is treated with little or no respect — and both ancient and modern as they float through the land of shadows utter many striking bits of philosophy."

Food Attracts Church Crowd

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 6. — The combination of food and religion, offered unemployed men here every Sunday, has proved so popular that more than 400 men now await the weekly service.

In a vacant lot, the men gather for bread, hamburgers, eggs and coffee. Breakfast over, they group around a piano for the church service. They join in the singing and praying and listen attentively to the sermons.

The plan was conceived by Capt. Arthur MacKenzie, head of the Mer's Industrial Home. When men drifted down to his institution MacKenzie told them that if they agreed to go to church afterward he would provide them with breakfast every Sunday morning.

They replied that their clothes were so ragged that they hesitated about going into a regular church. So MacKenzie decided to hold the services in a vacant lot near his headquarters.

The first week 100 men attended. Then 250, and about 400 came to the third service. But a few resigned on their promise and left before the service had concluded.

TEXAS TOPICS

By RAYMOND BROOKS
AUSTIN, Sept. 6.—Lon R. Smith will become chairman of the Texas railroad commission next January, and Ernest O. Thompson, its newest member, will be chairman for two years beginning in January, 1935.

The present chairman, C. V. Terrell, has just been re-elected to a six-year term upon the commission, and the present rotation plan would make his chairman again during the final two years of his term.

Only former Gov. Pat Neff will have reached the chairmanship quicker than Col. Thompson. Neff by common consent, held the chairmanship during the remainder of the term of Clarence E. Gilmore, deceased chairman, to which he was appointed by Gov. Moody. He made a condition of his acceptance of a place on the commission that he should retain the chairmanship during the appointive period. As soon as he was sworn in as an elected member the commission advanced its senior member to the chairmanship.

HOARDED GOLD FAILS TO AID FRENCH POOR

By RICHARD D. McMillan
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, Sept. 6.—France has $3,250,000,000 in gold ingots locked away in a huge vault here, but the country finds itself poor.

All the time the yellow metal, in sovereigns, French and Swiss francs, dollars and in plain ingots has been pouring into the country the tide of unemployment has been growing. Cost of living has risen and taxation increased.

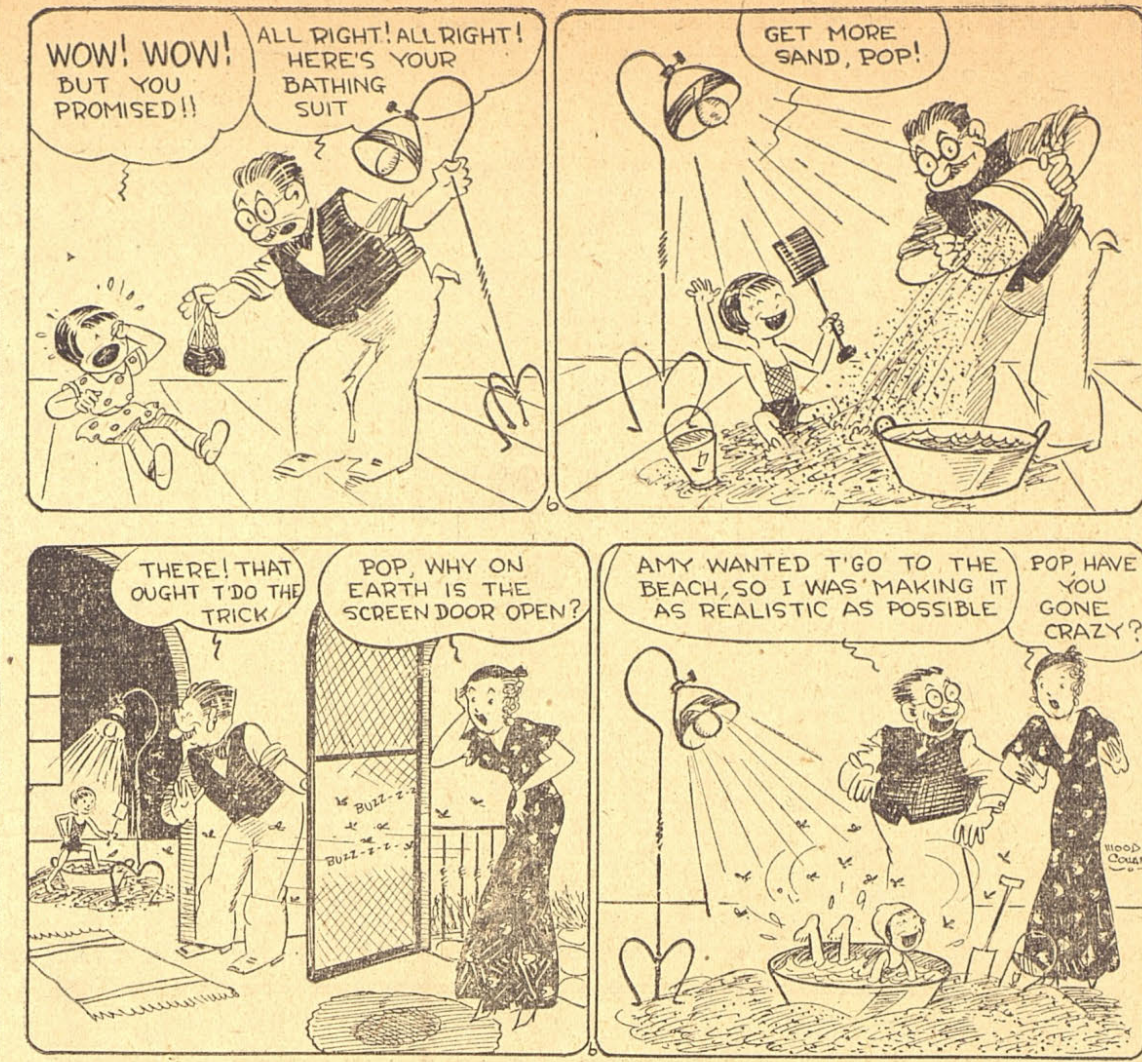

In a year France has added 50 per cent to her bullion reserves. Almost all the gold of the Bank of England came over during the gold rush, when Britain abandoned the gold standard. But the average British subject is better off than the average Frenchman.

Received Millions
The Bank of France has received millions of dollars from the Federal Reserve bank but the average American is in a far happier financial condition than the average Frenchman.

Gold has not prevented France's army of unemployed from jumping from 50,000 18 months ago to a quarter of a million now. The official estimate of unemployed or partially employed is nearly 3,000,000.

A sack of flour costs a French housewife three times what it costs an American; bread is 50 per cent higher than across the border in Belgium, while food prices generally are about 40 per cent higher than across the channel. In Great Britain the light of gold has not disturbed the index of the cost of living. In some instances it has fallen due to acceleration of trade.

Tariff Barriers
The abandonment of the gold standard by Britain and the introduction of tariff barriers there have hurt France's economic life severely. The farmers who used to send their choicest fruits and flowers, obtaining high prices because of the high value of the pound when changed into francs are cut off from these clients by the tariffs. To counter-balance this loss, they are forced to ask higher prices for their other commodities on the French markets.

The quota system introduced by the Tardieu government has added to the burden of 50 per cent of the

"Nature in the Raw" is seldom MILD

They are not present in Luckies ...the mildest cigarette you ever smoked

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature

Does not this explain the world-wide acceptance and approval of Lucky Strike?

NEW DISCOVERIES CONFIRM VIRTUES OF BRAN IN DIET

Supplies "Bulk" and Vitamin B for Constipation; Also Iron for Blood

For ten years, now, millions have found Kellogg's ALL-BRAN a safe, pleasant way to overcome constipation—with the headache, loss of appetite and energy that often result from this condition.

Recent laboratory tests show that ALL-BRAN supplies "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. In addition, ALL-BRAN contains as much blood-building iron by weight, as beef liver.

This "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is made like the "bulk" in lettuce. In the body, it absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, which clears the intestines of wastes.

Special cooking processes make ALL-BRAN finer, softer, more palatable. It is not habit-forming.

Think how much better it is to enjoy this delicious cereal than take endless pills and drugs, which often lead to harmful habits.

Two tablespoonfuls daily—serious cases with every meal—usually sufficient. If your interest is not relieved this way your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal—milk or cream, or use in cooking. Appetizing recipes on the red-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.
