Virginia Primary Law Is Declared Unconstitutional

Measure Barring Negroes From Voting In Democratic Primary Held In Violation Of Amendment

(By Associated Press) RICHMOND, Va., June 5.—The Virginia primary law which has had the effect of barring negroes from the democratic primary by giving political parties the right to make their own rules was declared unconstitutional in United States district court here today.

Judge Lawrence D. Groner in holding the law violative of the 14th and 15th amendments to the federal constitution, said the state could not by delegation or otherwise give vitality to a claimed right which it is prohibited by the constitution from enacting into law.

He cited the case in which a Texas primary law excluding negroes was held unconstitutional by the United States supreme court, stating that the Texas law differed from that in Virginia, but had the same result. The Virginia law does not specifically

Slight Precipitation Here Last Night As Showers Spot Panhandle; Hail Reported Tuesday Night

Lubbock shared lightly with a precipitation insufficient to register on the rain gauge early Wednesday evening in heavy rains which fell over the north Panhandle, extending as far south as Sweetwater. Rain fell in sheets at Amarillo, according to a communication to the local union bus terminal. The bus had not arrived shortly before midnight from that city, and at the time was almost two hours over scheduled arriving time. Plainview reported no rain.

Speedwater and Snyder reported heavy rains and roads were being rendered heavy for travel. Buses from Roswell and western routes and those from Crosbyton, Plooyada and eastern points arrived on time with reports of intermittent rain throughout the area. Interspersed by a severe electrical storm, heavy rains and some hail interspersed the South Plains area Tuesday night. No serious damage was reported, however.

Precipitation of more than one inch fell during the night at Brownsville.

Export Debenture Plan Is Eliminated By Farm Relief Committee Wednesday

Prompt Approval Of Bill Is Asked Of House

By RAYMOND Z. HENLE Associated Press Staff Writer WASHINGTON, June 5.—(P)—A farm relief bill made acceptable to President Hoover by elimination of the export debenture plan was agreed upon by the farm relief conference committee today and both senate and house will be asked promptly to approve it.

Leaders at the capitol hope that the bill can be sent to the white house before Saturday but conflicting week end plans of members may delay final congressional action until next week.

Approval Reported. Approval of the bill reported by the conference is expected to be given practically without debate by the house, which must act first. Disappointment of the debenture extremists in the senate, however, promises to occasion spirited debate before a vote on the conference report can be reached in that branch.

Only two members of the conference committee, Senators Norris, republican, Nebraska, and Smith, democrat, South Carolina, voted against the motion to eliminate the debenture section. These members, who demanded a report of disagreement on debentures so the house would be required to vote upon them, will join the group asking rejection of the conference report but administration leaders are convinced they have sufficient votes to defeat such a move.

Both Senator McNary of Oregon and Representative Haugen of Iowa, chairmen, respectively, of the senate and house agriculture committees, expressed confidence that the farm bill as agreed upon would be approved speedily and would prove efficacious. Senators McNary described the measure as "a fine, well rounded out bill," while Mr. Haugen said he expected it to accomplish its purpose.

As not prepared for final congressional action, "the agricultural marketing act" would set up a federal farm board of nine members, including the secretary of agriculture, who would serve ex-officio. The other eight members would be

Discontent Among Democratic Party Ranks Developed

Southland Senators Decline Invitations To Dinner Honoring Jettett Shouse, New Assistant Chairman

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, June 5.—Calling of a dinner for democrats here next week in honor of Jettett Shouse, newly named assistant to Chairman John J. Raskob, of the national committee has developed some signs of discontent in the party ranks in the southland.

Several democratic senators from the south have said they have "other engagements" on the night of the dinner. Mr. Raskob will be one of the speakers at the affair, which is being organized by the Jefferson Democratic association of Washington.

No Reasons Given. Few of the senators who will be absent from the dinner have given any reason. Senator Simmons of North Carolina, who resigned as democratic national committeeman for his state after Raskob was named chairman, did describe the dinner, however, as "very inopportune and instead of bringing about the desired harmony is likely to have the contrary effect."

Senator Smith of South Carolina, whose state was in the democratic

Peace Between Italy And Catholic Church Is Shaken Wednesday By Open Letter Of Pope Pius XI Censuring Speeches Of Mussolini

(By Associated Press) VATICAN CITY, June 5.—Pope Pius XI, in an open letter to Cardinal Gasparri, Papal secretary of state, today admitted that he frankly was displeased with several statements in speeches made by Premier Mussolini on the Lateran treaties before the Italian chamber and senate.

The pope's speeches in question were delivered May 13 in the chamber of deputies and May 25 in the senate and urged the ratification of the Lateran accords drawn up between the Italian government and the Vatican.

Replies In Letter. His Holiness replied to both these speeches in an open letter to Cardinal Gasparri which was published tonight in the Observatore Romano, finding in them "words that herald expressions as to the very essence of Christianity and Catholicism."

The Pontiff deplored the rift in the understanding between the fascist government and the Holy See, which had come after such laborious discussion. He termed it "an unwelcome and dolorous interruption."

Says Peace Will Last. He concluded, however, that peace between Italy and the Holy See would last because of his own faith in the fidelity and the good will of men, but above all because of his "greater faith in the help of God."

Appropriations Pass Senate And House Wednesday

Respective Bills For Support Of The Judiciary Given Favorable Action In Austin Wednesday

(By Associated Press) AUSTIN, June 5.—The senate and house passed their respective bills making appropriations for support of the judiciary today and the senate passed the bill by Senator W. A. Williamson of San Antonio appropriating $1,000,000 to purchase property surrounding the Alamo in order to keep off commercial encroachments.

The senate endorsed the elementary appropriation bill and was on the verge of passing it finally when Senator Joe M. Moore of Greenville launched an attack on the items which made provisions for psychopathic hospitals at Galveston and Dallas.

The house's progress on appropriations was interrupted by consideration of a resolution proposing impeachment proceedings against J. T. Robinson land commissioner.

The Alamo bill was favored by 27 of the 28 senators present, only Senator McNary of Oregon being opposed.

Name Macdonald Prime Minister

LONDON, June 5.—(P)—Ramsay MacDonald, for the second time labor prime minister of England, accepted today from King George at Windsor Castle the mission to form a new government and submitted the names of the principal members of his cabinet to his majesty.

Announcement of the labor ministry is expected Friday or Saturday. The actual ceremony of Mr. MacDonald's visit to the king today was as simple and as short as that in which Stanley Baldwin yesterday resigned his high office. There was one difference, for his majesty was able today to receive Mr. MacDonald sitting up in a chair, whereas he had accepted Mr. Baldwin's resignation from his sickbed.

Story of Downtown Shooting Is Related After State Rests Case; Mother-in-Law Figures

(By Associated Press) AMARILLO, June 5.—Mrs. Levi P. Stallworth, charged with the fatal shooting of Mrs. Grace Morrison, testified today she fired because she believed her life in danger and that she snatched the pistol with which she killed Mrs. Morrison from her victim's hands only a few minutes before the shooting.

"She threw up her hands and was in the attitude of jumping at me," Mrs. Stallworth said. "I saw a flash and thought she might have something in her hand. I thought I was being attacked and I fired. I just shot—I don't know how many times."

Grapples With Mother-in-law. Mrs. Stallworth said Mrs. Morrison had just grappled with Mrs. E. M. Stallworth, Mrs. L. P. Stallworth's mother-in-law, and that she believed she was the next one to be attacked. She declared Mrs. Morrison was angry.

The defendant declared she was weak, weighed 104 pounds and had just been released from the hospital whereas Mrs. Morrison was a woman of large stature. Mrs. L. P. Stallworth's testimony was her first public statement.

Looked For Husband. She said she went to the rooming house where Mrs. Morrison stayed expecting to find her husband there. She said she first looked in the window, and then saw Mrs. Morrison leave the rooming house and go toward an automobile at the curb which she said both Stallworth and Mrs. Morrison used. Mrs. Morrison got in the car. Mrs. Stallworth climbed to the running board and asked where her husband was.

Accidental Shot Hits Amherst Man

Leg of John McKinney Will Have to Be Amputated In Local Sanitarium; Condition Is Serious

Efforts were being made last night at the Lubbock sanitarium to prevent amputation of the right leg of John McKinney, about 28, of Amherst, who sustained wounds in the calf of his right leg and below the knee of his left leg when a shot gun was accidentally discharged Wednesday evening about 7 o'clock at a farm near Flag where he was working.

He was brought to the local sanitarium about 10:30 o'clock last night. While refilling a tractor with gasoline, McKinney accidentally kicked the gun, which was lying on the machine, to the ground, and the discharge followed. The gun shot tore a large hole through his right leg and lodged slightly below the knee of his left leg.

How to Achieve Beauty

Before you can completely understand the care of the skin you must know something about its structure. Physically, skin is tissue in three main layers. The top layer is the epidermis, a pliable elastic covering stretched over your body. It is translucent, which means that it lets color show through, and the rosiness that your complexion has comes from the tissue beneath with the blood in it.

The third layer is much like the second but of looser texture, with fat cells crunched in it. It is in this layer that the fat accumulates in stout people. And it is this layer that thin people must keep replenished so that their faces will not look thin and starved.

The nutrition of the skin is supplied by the arterial blood, and the blood supply of the skin is directly under the control of a nervous mechanism which can either dilate or constrict the blood vessels and so increase or diminish the amount.

The arteries feed the nerves, the nerves control the muscles, the muscles control the blood supply and the blood supply nourishes the skin.

Does that all seem very complicated? I have tried to make it simple. But at any rate this much is clear: Beautiful complexions must originate beneath the skin. The blood is the first source of all complexion beauty as is clearly indicated by the functions of the nerves, muscles and blood circulation.

One of the most important effects that beauty preparations can have upon the skin is a stimulating effect. The creams and liquids that stimulate the skin bring up the blood to nourish the tissue naturally. People with poor circulation need this artificial stimulation to help nature carry on its work. The stimulants gently induce an increased flow of blood to the facial arteries, which naturally nourishes and invigorates the nerves, glands and muscles of the skin—in other words, the tissue that is the skin itself.

Ask Endowment Of McMurry College

$1,000 Methodists of District to Be Given Chance To Subscribe to $500,000 Fund On July 9

(Special To The Avalanche)
ABILENE, June 5.—On July 9, the 61,000 Methodists in the Northwest Texas Conference will be given an opportunity to subscribe to the $500,000 endowment fund being raised for McMurry College of Abilene.

Every pulpit of the Methodist denomination in each of the eight districts of the Northwest Texas area, will on that day W. J. Fulwider, chairman of the McMurry board of trustees and general director of the endowment drive, says, be given over to a public presentation of the campaign.

Is Sole Institution
McMurry, the only Methodist educational institution in the Northwest Texas Conference was established six years ago, largely as a result of the efforts of Dr. J. W. Hunt, president of the school since its beginning.

The institution is rated as an A-grade co-educational senior college and is one of the four schools in Texas, owned by the Methodist church which have been designated by the commission of education of that church for continued maintenance.

At present the college has physical property valued at approximately $500,000, seventy percent of which has been provided by Abilene people. The endowment fund now totals $300,000.

Will Give Time
Subscribers to the sustaining fund will be asked for twenty percent of their pledges on November 1, 1929, and a like amount each six months until the total has been paid, Mr. Fulwider says.

In addition to the $500,000 endowment, the college supporters are hoping to secure an additional $25,000 during the campaign which will be used to enlarge one of the dormitories on the college campus. The campaign is being conducted by a committee composed of R. J. Murray, Lubbock; J. Ross Bell, Paducah; J. R. Porter, Clarendon; Dr. L. O. Dudgeon, Sweetwater; R. B. Bryant, Stamford; C. D. Wadford, Plainview; and W. J. Fulwider, Abilene. Dr. J. W. Hunt, Henry James, J. W. Couch, S. M. Jay and Dr. J. Richard Spann, Abilene.

AMARILLO MAN DOING HIS PART

Helps Suffering People By Telling His Experience With Orgatone While Recovering From The 'Flu'

"It didn't take many doses of Orgatone to satisfy me that I had found the right medicine for my case at last," declared P. B. Goodwin, residing at 313 N. E. Ninth St., Amarillo, Tex., the other day.

"For two years," continued Mr. Goodwin, "my stomach was in such a terrible condition that I lost thirty pounds in weight and every thing I would eat bloated me up with gas till I was miserable most all the time. My nerves were in such a wretched state that I couldn't half sleep and I would get up in the morning feeling so ragged out that I couldn't do anything like I wanted. I was weak and run down and this was just the condition I was in a few weeks ago when I took the 'flu' and anyone knows what that is, who has had it."

"I got me a bottle of Orgatone and began to pick up right off. My appetite has improved so much that I can eat and enjoy every thing before me and to give you some idea that my food is doing me some good and how fast I am recuperating from the 'flu' the sales show that I am now gaining in weight at the rate of a pound a day which I think is pretty strong evidence for Orgatone. I am stronger and have more energy than before, and I can go about my work with more satisfaction than in a long time, and I'm going my part to help suffering people by telling what Orgatone did for me."

Genius Orgatone is not a so-called secret or patent remedy but new scientific treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Lubbock exclusively by the Bowers Drug Store under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative.

When Opera Star Turns Farmer—Marion Talley Plans To Have Conveniences Of City Home In Kansas Wheat Belt Farmhouse

By NEA Service.

KANSAS CITY, June 5.—Picture a vast expanse of land a mile square flat as the top of a table, without a tree or a little knoll or a bush or a house or a running brook to break its empty evenness—and you have the farm to which Marion Talley is retiring from the Metropolitan Opera Company at the age of 22 with the fortune she has accumulated.

This farm, 360 acres of land near Colby, Kans., far in the southwestern corner of the state is typically Kansas. Level, treeless, unbroken—but rich black dirt everywhere. Ideal land for wheat, dropped down in the heart of the greatest wheat region in the world. Miss Talley won't need the income from the money her voice has brought her. This land can support her.

Perhaps it was only fitting that the songbird from Kansas should pick a typical Kansas farm. But this was another reason, likewise sentimental.

Father Wood Mother There
It was in the immediate vicinity of this farm that Charles M. Talley, Marion's father, met and wooed her mother, Mrs. Talley.

Miss Talley says she will live on this farm "forever."

"Of course, I'll have horses, and chickens and cows," she says. "But most important of all, I'll have the surroundings in which my father fell in love and plighted his troth and finally joined his hands in marriage."

Always she can close her eyes and see a vision of her father and mother when they were young.

The country around Colby isn't scenic, if one is used to eastern scenery. But once you get used to it, it grows on you. There is the endless prairie stretching away to an illimitable horizon, treeless and even, green as grass, then the wheat is young and yellow and gold when the wheat ripens. The sky is summer blue, usually cloudless.

Plans Modest Home

It's a far cry from the brilliant stage of the Metropolitan Opera Company to a peaceful seclusion of a Kansas wheat farm, but Marion Talley, retiring at 22, hopes to find happiness there amid her horses and chickens and by improving the lot of neighboring Kansas housewives. She is pictured above, against a typical wheat field panorama.

Farm homes for years have been behind city homes in comfort," she explains. "But we can have just as comfortable a home out here in the country as in any city."

It's only a mile from a hard-surfaced highway. It's only six hours by motor from Denver, and 14 to Kansas City. Well, it's some nice idea.

Mar Talley is going to have an automobile. She has never had one yet. All the time she lived in New York she and her mother and sister rode the subway, except on nights when she was to sing. Then she took a taxi. She will not, she says, have a chauffeur.

She hasn't any definite plans about her farm.

Wants Saddle Horse

"I'm going to stock it," she says. "Chiefly I am going to be interested in saddle horses, as I have always wanted to ride and never had a chance while in New York."

"Of course, I'll have cows and chickens and turkeys. And then I may specialize in guinea hens. They grow well in that country—and guinea hen is one of my favorite meats."

"You know, I have always loved flowers, and I will have just lots of them."

Temperance Plan Not To Prevent Bridge Building

SAN BENITO, June 5 (AP)—President Porter Gillette's temperance campaign in Mexico will not prevent the construction of an international bridge near here, according to L. L. Zenor, local manager of the bridge company.

Zenor said that all necessary licenses had been obtained before the Mexican government issued orders that no more saloon licenses were to be issued and that present owners would not be allowed to transfer permits.

The government was said to have refused a permit for a saloon and cabaret at the Mexican end of a proposed bridge at Weslaco.

The governor of the state of Tamaulipas has ordered that all saloons be moved from the public square at Reynosa but so far as is known a like order has not been issued at Matamoros near here.

Lights Carry On Bulbs Not Snuffed By Floods

HOUSTON, June 5 (AP)—For more than 48 hours lights in the central waterworks plant burned during the recent flood although they were under 35 feet of water.

When Water Commissioner James House made an inspection tour he found the lights still burning.

"We didn't have time to turn them out when we left," he explained.

Many globes still were lighted when the water receded.

"JUNK" JUNK PILES

Midland Stages Campaign Against Trash

MIDLAND, June 5 (AP)—Junk piles along the main highway through Midland should be "junked," the newly-appointed sanitary commission has agreed.

The commission recommended that junk on the highway be hauled off and buried and that owners of automobile junk yards be required to move at least 100 feet from the highway and to erect high board fences to hide their "unsightly places of business."

Mexican Hand To Hand Fight Told

MEXICO CITY, June 5 (AP)—Official reports to the war department today from the Cerro Grande region, state of Colima, said the third day of the intensive battle between federal and "Cristero" there yesterday was marked with bitter hand to hand fighting and heavy casualties.

Federal infantry, protected by airplanes, advanced and attacked the rebel positions on a hill, Cerro Azul, using bombs and machine guns to advantage. Izuforova were killed among them the chief slain Baso O. Revilla.

Build Insurance into your Home with Fire-Resistive FACE BRICK

Insurance is good business. Every reasoning man insures his home. It is a big investment... he cannot afford to take the loss if it should burn. But insurance costs money. How much... depends on the fire-resistive quality of the material used in the building.

One of the strongest arguments in favor of building with Face Brick is that it takes the lowest fire insurance rate possible to obtain on a building. That is simple and scientific proof of the fire-resistive quality of Face Brick. But building with Face Brick gives you another kind of insurance... a kind which no insurance man can write you. It gives you depreciation insurance... for

Rabbit's Cinch Basket Fails Him

MAKES "BASKET" CATCHES "OF POP FLIES"

"Rabbit" Maranville, whose fame as one of the greatest shortstops of the National League is one of the most interesting players to watch perform.

His diving stops and uncanny throws from off-balance positions have always afforded thrills for fans who look for the spectacular.

But in handling infield flies, the Rabbit has a style all his own and it never fails to bring a ripple of amusement from the stands.

When a high one is lofted his way, the Rabbit judges it at a glance where it will land and forms the copyrighted "basket" with his gloved hand held at arm's length below the waist. When the ball comes down it pops in the glove, retires the batsman and brings the house down.

But not always.

According to Maranville he hadn't made an error on a pop fly since 1912 until Sunday, May 26, 1929. On this day Ed Roush of the New York Giants lifted a ball high over the infield. Maranville signaled his teammates, assumed a bored expression and parked himself under the descending pill.

You have an idea of how mad a wet hen is if you could have seen how mad the Rabbit was when the ball bounded high out of the "basket" for the first time in 17 years.

Purdue Likewise Facing Charge In Big Ten Wrangle

Indiana High School Coach Offers To Prove That Lafayette Institution Is Guilty of Proselyting

CHICAGO, June 5. (P)—Another bomb was tossed into the already shellshocked Western Conference today.

Coach Everett Case, who turns out state championship basketball teams for Frankfort, Ind., High school charged and offered to prove to Major John L. Griffith, conference athletic commissioner, that Purdue like Iowa is guilty of proselyting and subsidizing athletes.

Commissioner Griffith immediately requested Coach Case to bare his charges to him tomorrow and Case consented.

Case fired his charges today after he had been accused, presumably by Purdue, of receiving teacher's credits from Iowa in return for inducing two of his basketball stars, Doyal Plunkett and Bob Spradling, to matriculate at Iowa. Angered by this accusation, Case charged Thab "Peggy" Labret, Purdue basketball coach brought up the question.

NOT TOO BIG TO BE BUSY

SOMEWHERE else in this paper you'll find a story about the success of a cheese factory in Abertown, which carries a powerful moral. The story tells the world that the cheese factory in Abertown—only a few weeks old—is to be doubled in capacity in order that it may take care of the products of dairy cows in Abertown's trade territory.

The fact bears out the judgment of Abertown in fostering the cheese factory and shows that Lubbock county and the South Plains generally, is turning toward dairying as another avenue of profit.

Down at Slaton there is in operation a creamery. It is probably a month old, or so, and already several carloads of butter have been shipped to hungry markets. Like the Abertown cheese plant, Slaton's creamery, secured through civic enterprise, is a decided success and offers another outlet for products of Lubbock county.

Slaton and Abertown are but two examples of what smaller cities in this territory are doing. One by one, they are falling in line, securing new businesses, sponsoring new ventures which invite the rural trade and offer it something in return. All the while Lubbock, holding the whip hand as the capital of this empire of ours, seems to be taking the stand that "we're too big to monkey with such small ventures"—and while we're basking in the sun light of our own importance other places are, to use the common vernacular—"getting the gravy."

The Avalanche doesn't believe Lubbock is too large to go after—to secure and support—the smallest of industries in this territory are doing. One by one, they are falling in line, securing new businesses, sponsoring new ventures which invite the rural trade and offer it something in return. All the while Lubbock, holding the whip hand as the capital of this empire of ours, seems to be taking the stand that "we're too big to monkey with such small ventures"—and while we're basking in the sun light of our own importance other places are, to use the common vernacular—"getting the gravy."

The Avalanche doesn't envy Slaton in having the civic spunk to get out and get a creamery. It doesn't envy Abertown in adding to its volume of business by erecting and operating a cheese factory. But the Avalanche, in the interests of Lubbock, does take the stand that Lubbock cannot rest on its laurels in the matter of attracting new business and trade—and won't be able to do so even if the city reaches a population of a million souls.

It's all right to dream about office buildings which will be erected by outside capital. It is perfectly natural for people who love their home town to want to get the big things. But we can do both these without stinging idly by while the smaller opportunities slip by, practically unnoticed, to be snapped up by other places.

The phrase "Look after the pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves" is still a good one—and, incidentally, applies to large and small businesses as well as to dollars and pennies.

GOWNS FOR JUDGES

One by one courts, high and low throughout the United States are reverting to an old custom by adopting the gown for the bench. The argument is that a distinctive garb makes for formality and dignity and enhances respect for the court.

There is to be said for the suggestion that mankind in all ages has found in robes and dress, mantles and crowns, insignia and decorations the way to set apart those of exalted station. It is as common in the straw hut of the chief of a savage tribe as in the castles of royalty. A thing so deeply rooted in the mind of generation after generation after generation must have something to commend it.

On occasions of state nobody wants to see an emperor or a king in a fedora and business suit. A man's man for a "thayanda" that, but ritual and ceremony have their place in the scheme of things. The bench and the bar are best able to determine whether gowns would add a more impressive character to judicial proceedings. But the layman can add to their decision that nothing adds to the dignity of the court and to public respect for the courts as courts, independent, good, just, and honorable on the bench. There have been judges upon whose shoulders not even the judicial robes could rest with dignity.

AN ADVOCATE OF PEACE

President Hoover's Memorial day address at the Arlington National Cemetery should give assurance to those who are engaged in the promotion of world peace. Speaking for the first time as chief executive in behalf of a new order of international affairs, the president boldly declared himself in favor of "common sense and realism" with regard to military preparation.

Reiteration of the principle that the nations should seek disarmament as opposed to mere limitation of arms is encouraging. The president rightly suggests that actual reduction with a view to defense rather than aggression is the only possibility for an effective lessening of the burden of militarism.

Mr. Hoover sees this move as an obligation which the powers have assumed under the terms of the Kellogg-Briand treaty for outlawry of war. If the compact means anything, according to the president, it means that "we will conduct our daily intercourse with nations in keeping with the spirit of that agreement."

It is apparent, also, as a result of the Arlington speech, that the Hoover administration is in a receptive mood toward the World Court concept. This may be inferred from the president's plea for furtherance of "those instrumentalities of peaceful adjustment that will enable us to remove disputes from the field of emotion to the field of calm and judicial consideration."

While it is true that Mr. Hoover espouses the cause of adequate preparedness "for the protection of our own people," there is no gaining by the government the reputation of being a peace-loving nation.

On the Firing Line at the Nation's Capital

BIG BUSINESS PICTURED AS GAGGED BY COURT DECISION IN RAIL CASE

BY CHARLES F. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Who would have supposed that big business could get a huge enough helping from the national platter to gag at it?

Yet that was precisely how big business reacted when the United States supreme court dished out its recent decision in the St. Louis & O'Fallon railroad case. True, on investigation it proved to be not quite so vast a helping as first glance had assessed it at—but, even scaled down to its actual proportions, big business is afraid of it.

In itself the O'Fallon case was a puerile lawsuit. Indirectly it meant a nation's ransom.

Thus: American railroad rates are fixed on what the roads are estimated to be worth—in order to pay the money supposedly invested in the roads. They are watered to such an extent, years ago, that they were getting away with it.

This did not satisfy them. The interstate commerce commission persisted in reckoning their original construction costs—which were principally pre-war costs. The roads wanted the commission to figure what it would cost to rebuild them today—at far higher prices of everything; labor and material.

The difference was no trifle. The commission's total valuation was 23 billions. The post-war basis is about 40 billions.

That is, the roads claimed a 17 billion margin in their own favor. However, some calculations were lower. They tapered down to 11 billions. Even that would furnish an excuse for boosting freight and passenger tariffs higher than Mt. Ararat—and for cutting wages.

The O'Fallon is a dinky little nine-mile line but it was picked to test the railroad's valuation argument.

In the United States supreme court the other day, Justice Taft, Van Devanter, Sanford, Sutherland and McReynolds announced how they had decided the case—Justice Holmes, Brandeis and Stone disagreeing with them—Justice Butler keeping quiet, because he formerly was a railroad attorney.

The decision's support was that the interstate commerce commission was wrong in rejecting the railroad's contention in toto—the commission ought to have made a certain amount of allowance for the present day cost of rebuilding them. How much of an allowance it ought to have made remains unsettled. That will take more litigation.

But the first impression to get out in Washington was that the supreme court had decided flat-footed for the railroads.

Unquestionably that was what the roads had been fighting for. Nevertheless, as the figures' magnitude soaked life, they gave a kind of an involuntary gasp of horror. They gave a kind of an involuntary gasp of horror—almost audibly.

Eleven billions—or maybe 17 billions!—created out of nothing!—and handed over to the railroads, to capitalize at their customers' expense!

What would the public say?

An analysis of the court's opinion brought back some color to officialdom's cheeks, but its pulse continued to flutter.

Whatever way the situation is looked at stiffer transportation charges are indicated. If the roads choose to advance them—and how popular will they be?—in this era of farm discontent, and hollering about high prices already.

As President Hoover expressed it, "I am confident that there will be no increase in railway rates as a result of the O'Fallon decision"—evidently meaning that he hopes not, because his actual authority in the matter is exactly the same as any other citizen's—except, doubtless, that he will be more respectfully listened to.

The initial cannon shot in answer to the O'Fallon ruling was fired by Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa—in the form of his bill for a two billion dollar national road building program, to enable auto trucks to compete with the railways.

"However, there is another thing to be taken into consideration," suggests Senator Clarence G. Dill of Washington. "The O'Fallon decision is sure to be seized on as a precedent by other great public utilities besides the railroads."

"The power industry, for example! True, the law provides that their investments of today shall furnish the basis for the future determination of the value of power companies' properties. But unfortunately the federal power commission lacks funds to ascertain the amounts of these present day investments. The O'Fallon case is a reminder to remedy this deficiency immediately."

"It is a decision which involves many ramifications."

MANY NEW DEVICES USED IN MEDICAL PRACTICE

DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association
And of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

The changes that have taken place in the form of medical practice are already apparent to everyone even slightly conversant with the problems of the profession.

A quarter of a century has seen the introduction into medical service of a wide variety of techniques for delivery to the patient of what the doctor has to offer for the prevention of disease, for the relief of symptoms or for cure, when cure is available.

New Devices. The advancement of medical science has been associated with the introduction of innumerable complicated devices planned to aid the senses of man in the study of the changes that go on in the human body in health and disease.

The microscope is familiar to every student of medicine but the cystoscope, proctoscope, electrocardiograph and the techniques of blood chemistry are to the practitioner of an older generation and even to many recent graduates tools beyond facile employment.

General practitioners, confronted with problems beyond simple solution, refer those problems to specialists. In a difficult diagnosis or in a complicated problem of treatment several specialists may be called in.

The old-time practitioner of medicine is passing. But he left an impression on the people of this country that they should not forget.

TOMORROW—General practitioners or group practice.

No man's pride is so easily hurt as a doctor's. However, if he has the guts to pay

RICH GIRL-POOR GIRL

By RUTH DEWEY GROVES

THIS HAS HAPPENED MILDRED LAWRENCE falls in love with STEPHEN ARMSTRONG who is lured away from her by PAMELA JUDSON when she tells him that Mildred is trying to marry her brother HAROLD for his money. Harold fears that PAMELA because he holds a check which he forged. Huck is infuriated with Pamela, who plays him for a fool. Pamela drops him, but Mildred goes to see him in jail and promises help.

Harold had once told her he feared Huck and that he had been to get rid of Stephen to keep him from marrying Pamela. Mildred determines to force Harold to help her and is shocked to hear of his death—apparently accidental. She tells Stephen her suspicions but they have no proof and it seems hopeless.

In desperation, Mildred goes to MR. JUDSON, who takes her to headquarters to tell her story. Judson puts up bail for Stephen's release and Pamela begs his forgiveness. A lawyer and detective escort Stephen away from the jail and they soon realize that the bail was followed. At a congested corner the detective is shot at as the cars pass. He escapes with a scratch as his answering shot had penetrated the thug's wrist and caused him to drop his gun—saying the bullet meant for Pamela. The thug makes a getaway and they learn he was driving a stolen car.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XL

"It's a common trick," Freen explained. "The owner allows his car to be stolen; then it's abandoned and he gets it back with no responsibility for anything that happens after he reports that it's out of his possession. But of course he delays making the report until the car has served its purpose."

"And the police have too little time to find it," Oerndorf remarked.

"Well, have the owner brought in," Freen said and turned to Stephen. "Better come along to headquarters and have a talk," he added quietly.

Stephen shook his head. "Not until I've seen Mr. Judson," he replied. "All right, buddy, but you know this 'stolen' car business means there's an organization after you."

Stephen showed a quickened interest. "If the owner of that tax really is in on this thing then hold him," he exclaimed earnestly.

"What for?" Freen asked. "I'll tell you after I've seen Mr. Judson," Stephen promised.

"Don't be a fool, young man. Somebody's out to get you good and plenty."

Stephen's lips set in a stubborn line. "They'll have to take time to look up something new," he said, convinced that he was safe for the time being. "You get that tax owner and maybe you'll have someone who can tell you where Huck Connor is."

"This Connor..." Oerndorf began. "He's the man Mr. Judson will give his right arm to find after I've told him what I know," Stephen declared. "Come on let's go."

Oerndorf gave the driver orders to proceed to the hotel.

"Go after your man," Stephen said to Freen, and the latter stepped off the running board of the car where he had stood talking through the window.

On the way to the Judson Hotel Oerndorf tried to question Stephen.

"Did you see this, John—Wed Fifty Years—Still on Honeymoon?"

"Now, Helen, let's not start that again."

"Do you know anything more about my son... his death... than Miss Lawrence knows?" he asked.

It was now Stephen's turn to be surprised. "Miss Lawrence?" he repeated dumbly.

"She came to me this morning with information that I hope will lead to the arrest and conviction of the man who murdered Harold," Mr. Judson told him.

Oerndorf sat forward on the edge of his chair. Mr. Judson caught his exclamation of surprise.

"I hadn't time to tell you all this when I asked you to bring Mr. Armistage here," he said to his lawyer.

"Before that the police had asked me to say nothing to anyone about their belief that my son had been murdered."

"Mildred," Stephen mumbled. It seemed unbelievable to him now that he hadn't seen her hand in this.

Mr. Judson turned to him sharply. "I must confess, I thought she had heard in some manner of the reward I intended offering as soon as the police would permit me to make public," he said and watched Stephen closely.

That young man evinced an instant indignation. "I suppose you still believe that she deserved to be fired," he said scornfully.

Mr. Judson shook his head. "No," he said. "I know I was mistaken about her interest in Harold."

Stephen leaned forward. "If there's any doubt left in your mind I can tell you that she was only trying to help him out of some hole that had got himself into, he declared stoutly."

"I know, I know. There is no occasion for you to defend her," Mr. Judson retorted and Stephen was brought to a sudden realization that the lawyer had once entered the double doors of Mildred's disinterestedness as regarded Harold Judson.

But you owe her undying gratitude for getting you out of jail," Mr. Judson went on, his voice tinged with contempt.

He was certain now that Stephen was not in love with his daughter. He might or might not be in love with Mildred Lawrence. At least he was ready to defend her at a moment's notice.

Stephen nodded. "I never even guessed she'd been to see you," he said. "I thought she was here."

He stopped. He couldn't tell Pamela (father) that she had led him to believe it was her love and belief in him that had brought about his release.

"Perhaps you'd better go over the facts as you know them," Mr. Judson suggested to him. "Miss Lawrence may inadvertently have omitted something of importance."

"There's nothing I can add. I'm afraid," Stephen replied. "I only know what Miss Lawrence told me about this man Connor and your son. She is certain, in fact, Harold told her that Connor was blackmailing him. We don't know anything about Connor beyond the fact that I suspect he was mixed up with a gang of automobile thieves who operated for a while in Indiana."

"Then Pamela hasn't told you that we have a very definite clue to the murderer?" Mr. Judson asked.

Stephen shook his head. "She stayed with me only a few minutes," he exclaimed. "We talked about... our future."

"Hm," Mr. Judson compressed his lips. "Well, it will interest you to know that—have the thumbprint of the man we believe killed my son?"

"Good!" Stephen exclaimed. "Now we've something to go on."

"Mr. Armistage," it was Oerndorf speaking. "Why didn't you tell what you knew about Connor and Mr. Judson's son without waiting until you were released from jail?"

Stephen answered him promptly. "Because we, Miss Lawrence and I, had no proof to back up our suspicions. We thought everyone else believed it a case of accident or suicide."

"Do you consider that a sufficient reason for your silence?"

"There's another and a better one," Stephen replied. "I was safe enough in jail but Miss Lawrence was threatened some time ago, merely for trying to make Harold confide in her. Had she gone to the police with her story her life would have been in danger."

Mr. Judson glared at him. "Is it your opinion," he said, "that fear of such danger would prevent Miss Lawrence from doing her duty?"

Stephen glared back at him. "Certainly not," he answered readily. "I induced her not to go to the police. Told her they couldn't act on her unsupported word."

Mr. Judson subsided. "She came to me," he said. "That fear we went at once to Inspector Markson. We must have been shadowed for later on her way back to work. Miss Lawrence was shot."

Self Defense

ter leave me alone; you little—". Mrs. Stallworth quoted Mrs. Morrison as saying:

With this remark, Mrs. Stallworth declared Mrs. Morrison slipped to the right side of the car and pulled a pistol from the car pocket. "As she started to open the car door, I grabbed the gun away from her," Mrs. Stallworth testified. "I threw it on her, demanding she accompany me to the police station. I had no intention of killing Mrs. Morrison or doing her bodily harm."

The witness said the pistol belonged to her husband, Levi P. Stallworth.

Pistol Is Husband's
M. S. Boyer, Amarillo hotel owner, said a short time before the shooting, Stallworth came into his hotel from a car parked across the street carrying a pistol in his belt. The man was intoxicated, Boyer said, and he persuaded Stallworth to replace the gun in the car. He identified the gun, and described the car.

Another witness testified he once rode in the car with Mrs. Morrison and felt the gun in the car pocket but did not take it out.

Mrs. Stallworth testified she first learned of her husband's association with Mrs. Morrison through her mother-in-law, whose home was in Fort Worth.

Character witnesses testified Mrs. Stallworth was of good reputation and a church goer.

Robert Stallworth, a brother of L. P. Stallworth, testified his mother begged Mrs. Morrison to let his brother alone several weeks before the tragedy.

Mrs. O. D. Earnest, rooming house landlady, testified Mrs. Morrison, and L. P. Stallworth occupied a room at her place from April 8 to 13.

Evidence was concluded at a night session, and arguments will start tomorrow.

Heat of Passion
Theory In Adams Trial

CORPUS, June 5. (AP)—Testimony designed to prove that Ray Adams killed in the heat of passion, and not by premeditation, when he shot down Orville Mathews on a busy Dallas street corner last September, during an election bet argument, opened the defense in Adams second trial for the slaying here today.

More than a score of character witnesses testified that Adams was a respected citizen of Bartlett, Texas.

Answering attempts of state witnesses, earlier in the day, to show that Adams was cool after the shooting, and that the crime was premeditated, the defense produced a policeman, a detective, and a reporter to testify that the defendant was badly shaken, agitated and pale as he surrendered his pistol.

The state had placed a number of eyewitnesses on the stand who described the scene on Dallas' busiest street corner when Adams pursued Mathews across the street, firing three shots into his body, and then finished the job by firing two more shots from close range after Mathews slumped to the sidewalk.

The slain man's widow also took the stand to testify that her husband never had owned a pistol, that he was not a member of the Ku Klux Klan, that he was in good health when he left home on the day of the slaying and that she did not see him alive again after his departure.

The state rested its case late in the day and a stream of character witnesses immediately took the stand for Adams.

Carl Phillips, Dallas detective, who received Adams' pistol when the slayer surrendered testified that Adams had said:

"That man beat me out of $2,000 and told me to get out of town or he would blow my head off. I beat him to it."

Phillips said that Adams was trembling at the time and he denied that Adams had lit a cigarette as state witnesses had testified.

State Rests In Goerner Trial

CALDWELL, June 5. (AP)—After introducing as evidence a woman's small brown leather purse, which has figured conspicuously in the case, District Attorney Merton L. Harris this afternoon abruptly closed for the state in the trial of Ed. Goerner here on a charge of slaying his wife at their Bastrop county home in April, 1927. The case was brought here on a change of venue.

In order that defense attorneys might confer with their 76 witnesses, court was recessed until tomorrow morning. Former Senator Paul D. Page, Sr., chief of defense counsel, indicated that the defense testimony probably would be completed tomorrow.

Bitter controversy arose today among opposing attorneys about the leather purse when Raymond D. Thorp, Austin police chief, corroborated testimony of Fred D. Thompson, former Austin newspaper man, which related the manner in which the article was discovered in the attic of the Goerner home the day after the slaying.

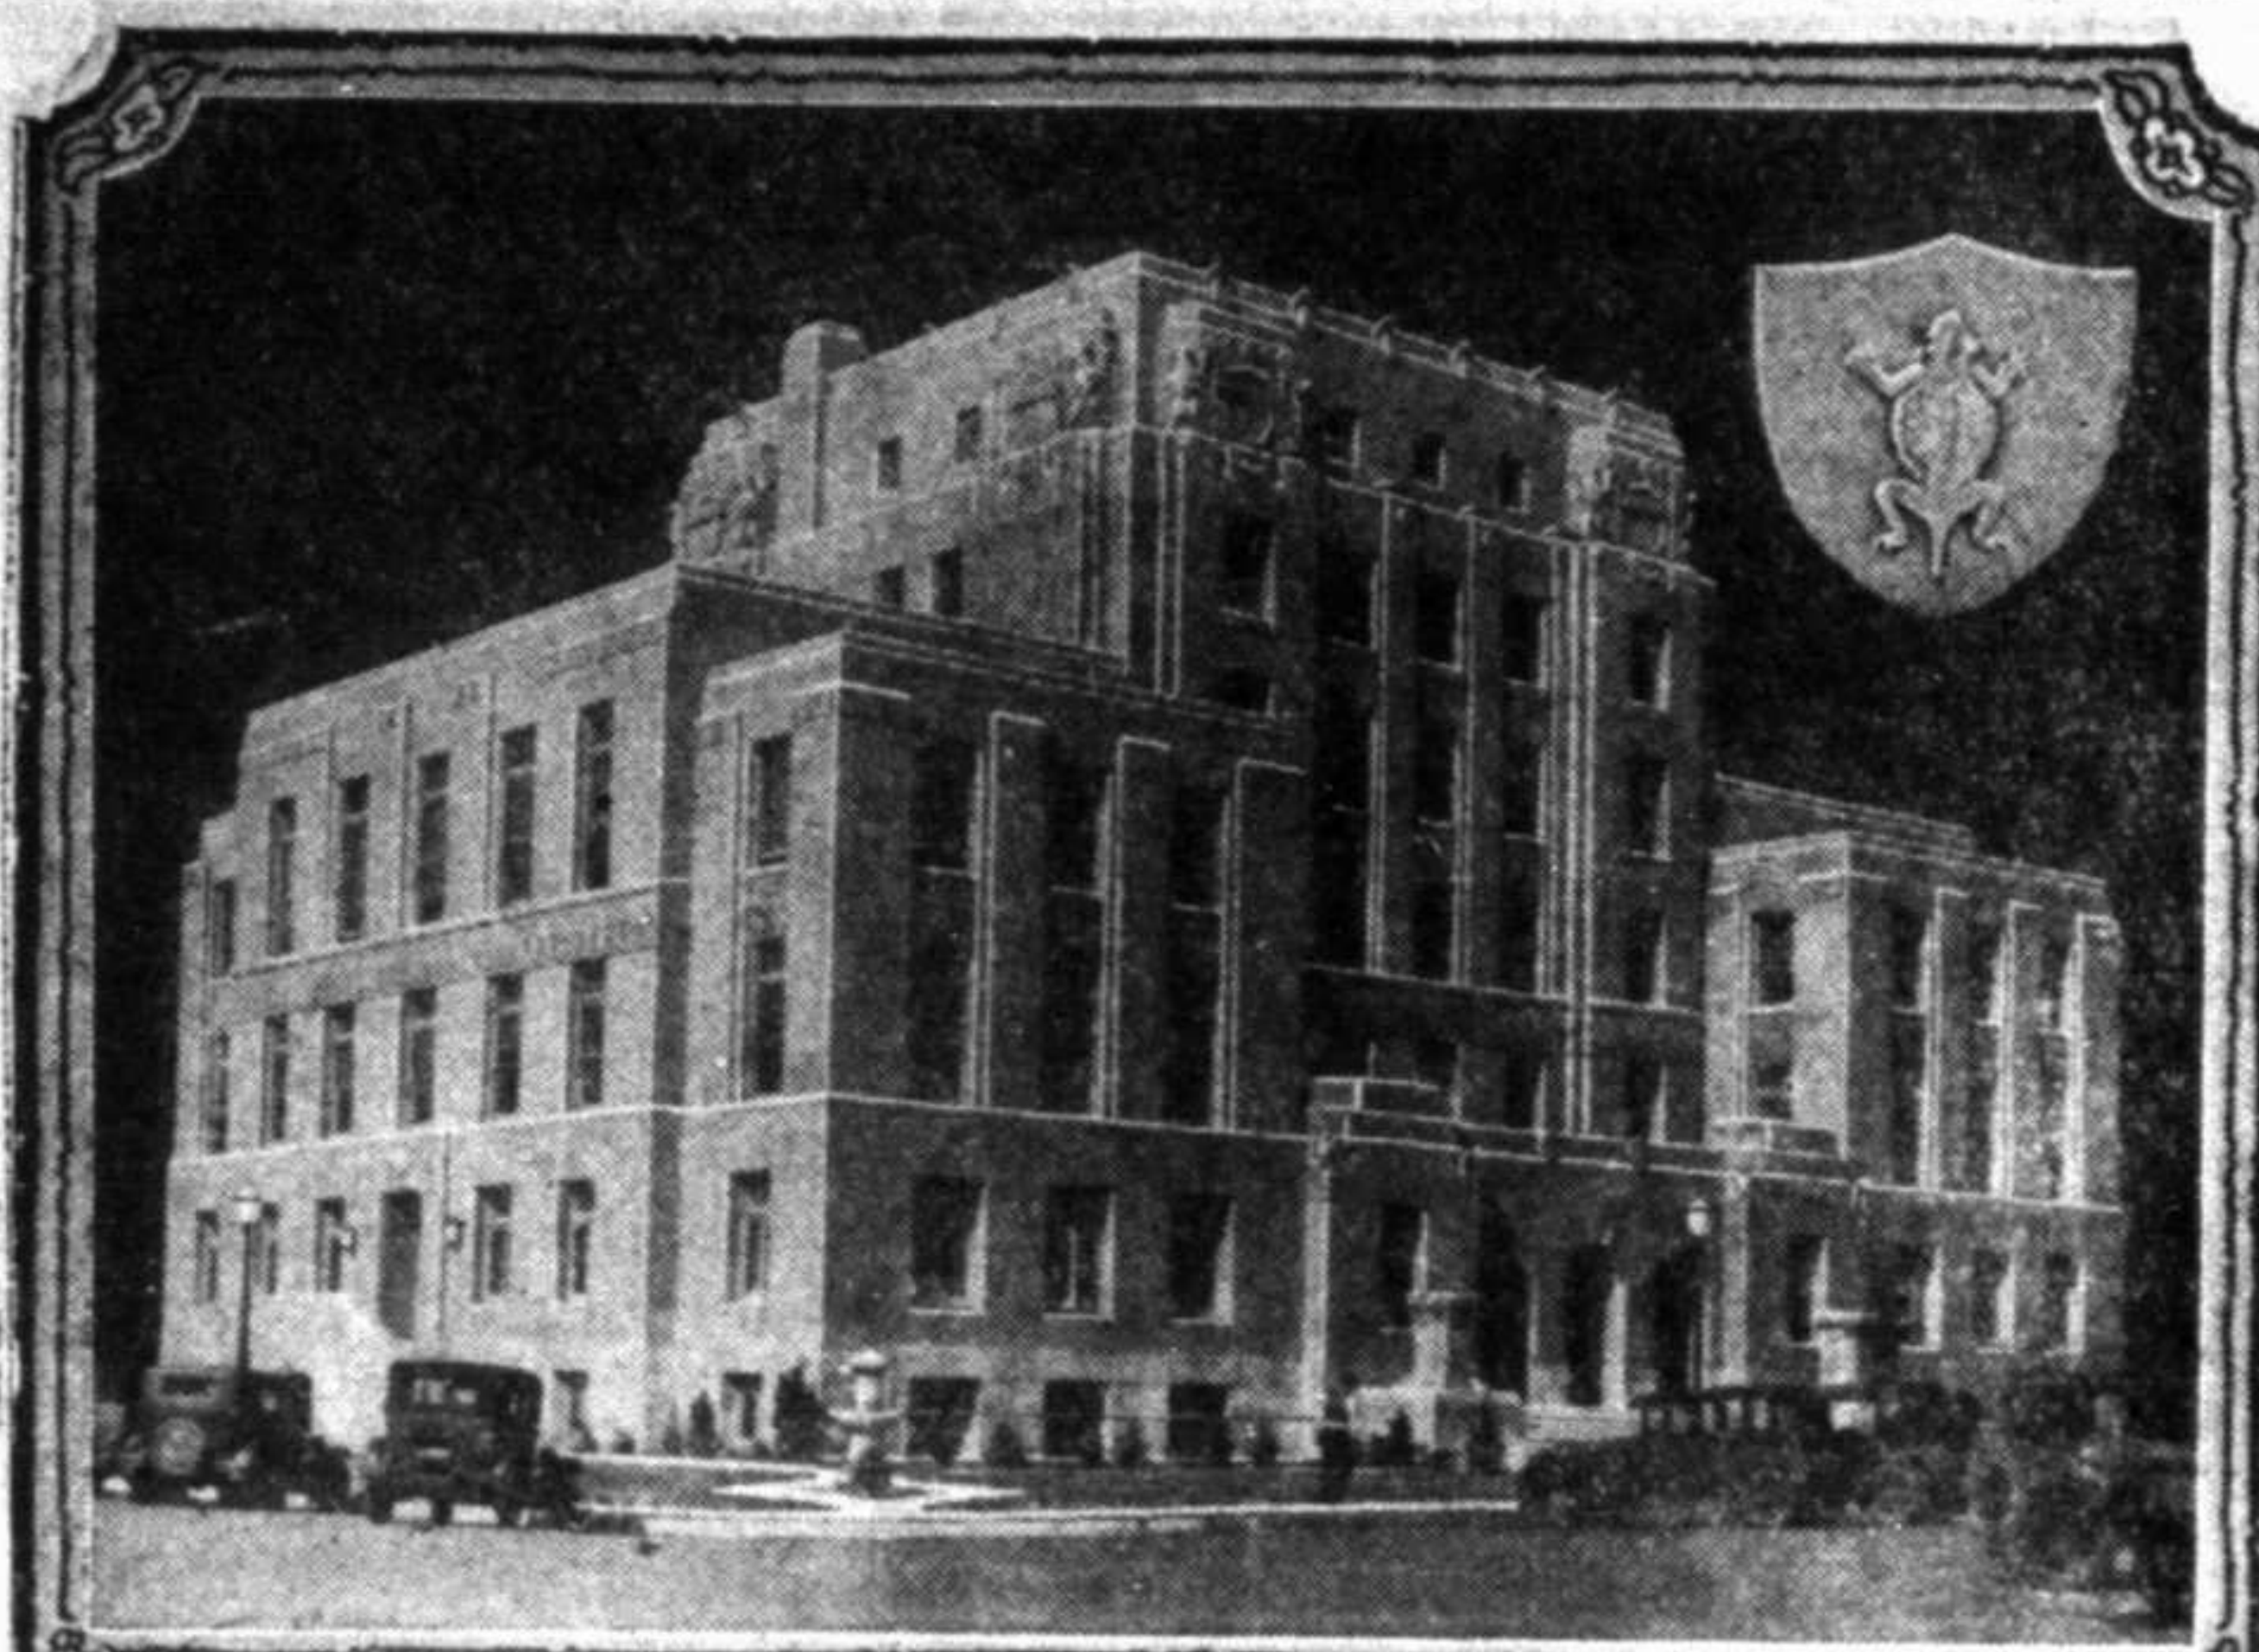

Anti Salooners Condemn Press

PITTSBURGH, June 5. (AP)—The Rev. F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the anti-saloon league, speaking at the United Presbyterian general assembly today assailed the "Press" as a menace to prohibition. He also attacked the Hearst prohibition substitute plan, as inchoate.

"Since when did William Randolph Hearst become interested in a plan to enforce prohibition?" McBride asked. "And from where did the $25,000 prize money emanate? The so-called 'Hearst plan' is nothing more than a liquor selling plan."

"The church is not ready for any plan that may be offered, from any source, as a substitute to prohibition," he said.

"Old Rip" Is Immortalized In Cornerstone Of New $300,000 Six-Story Eastland Courthouse

(Special To The Avalanche)
EASTLAND, June 5.—The capital of Eastland county was the scene of a great celebration on Memorial Day when the new $300,000 six-story courthouse was dedicated to the veterans of the World War. The building is declared to be one of the most beautiful public edifices in Texas.

In the rotunda is a huge bronze tablet bearing the names of 900 men who went from Eastland county into the service in the great war. This building is on the site of the old courthouse which gained world-wide fame when the cornerstone was laid and "Old Rip," the humped frog, emerged, presumably after a 35-year nap. The frog has been immortalized in sculpture as his child-like likeness appears in the frieze-work on the walls of the district courtrooms. The courthouse, the memorial tablet and one of the stone likenesses of Old Rip are shown in the pictures.

The courthouse is illumined by flood light at night—some of the few buildings thus lit—and along the Broadway of America.

field, and streets of the city were flooded with water. Wednesday morning the heavy downpour extended as far as Wolfarth this way. Slaton and Post likewise reported heavy rains. Hall fell in small quantities at Post. A small area northwest of Lubbock was damaged, slightly by hail. Shallowwater, however, reported no damage.

May's Rainfall Sets Record

A total precipitation of 6.6 inches, a record breaking rainfall, fell in Lubbock and environs during the month of May, according to the weather report issued by Don L. Jones, superintendent of the State Experiment station, three miles east of the city.

The rainfall was 4.74 inches in excess of the normal fall of 2.17 inches and increased the total precipitation for the first five months of 1929 to 9.86 inches. The normal precipitation for this period is 5.85 inches. Other high May records were 4.04 in 1914 and 5.14 in 1926.

Ten days during the month were clear, 13 were cloudy and 8 were partly cloudy.

Smacking of the freakish, the maximum temperature for the month was 93 degrees while the freezing point, 32 degrees, was also recorded during the period.

column again in the presidential election, said he was not going to the dinner and did not care to make a statement about it, in the interests of party harmony.

Sensors Swanson and Glass of Virginia have made other arrangements for the night on which the dinner will be held. The same is true of Senator Harris of Georgia.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader and the running mate of Alfred E. Smith, is not in the city and it is not known whether he will be here for the dinner.

Other democratic leaders are making no comment.

Virginia Primary

cally bar negroes as did the Texas law, but subsequent action of the democratic party under the authority of the law kept negroes from participating in the primary.

The case originated with the filing of a claim for $5,000 damages against city election officials by James O. West, democrat, because he was refused permission to vote in the last democratic primary. The defendants' counsel, headed by Leon M. Basile, assistant attorney general, filed a demurrer. Judge Grover overruled the demurrer, and continued the case to give counsel for the defendants sixty days in which to plead further.

Farm Relief

appointed by the president to serve for six years at $12,000 annually, the chairman to be designated by the president.

The bill contains the provisions of both house and senate farm bills for commodity advisory councils and stabilization corporations, the latter charged with buying up and marketing surplus crops in an attempt to stabilize prices.

Would Provide Fund
A revolving fund of $500,000,000 would be provided for the board to use as it sees fit, and an additional $500,000,000 would be authorized for administrative expense.

The proposed act was put forward as an attempt to coordinate the cooperative marketing movement under government supervision and to bring relief to the farmer by helping him work out his own problems through organizations set up, controlled and directed by farmers themselves.

As soon as the legislation is enacted the president is expected to submit an estimate of money needed to carry out the act and a number of leaders have indicated they would favor appropriation of the half billion dollars authorized. In addition, Mr. Hoover is considered by some congressional farm leaders to have a number of the proposed board's members in mind and consequently an early announcement of its personnel is expected.

crippled children were announced. A recommendation to the Imperial Council that $800,000 additional appropriations for the extension of hospital facilities be added to the $1,250,000 annual appropriation was made by the trustees. They pointed out that the hospital program was at its peak and emphasized the need for further appropriation.

The last mass parade was tonight and tomorrow at the closing meeting of the council, the 1930 convention city will be selected from a list including Toronto, Minneapolis and Atlantic City.

NEGRO IS FINED

Driving While Intoxicated Costly To Black

E. K. Bruce, negro, charged with driving while intoxicated was assessed a fine of $50 by jury Wednesday morning in 99th district court.

H. J. Gentry, Slaton negro, is scheduled to be tried on a charge of violation of the prohibition law, Thursday morning in 99th district court.

Seventy-second district court is concerned this week with non-jury and non-contested cases.

In the case of F. E. Duncan, vs. W. N. Stockard, civil suit for collection of commission, the jury failed to agree in county court yesterday afternoon.

Appropriations

After T. J. Holbrook of Galveston, setting his vote against it. He said the money was not available for the purpose.

There was only $228,137 difference between the judiciary bills passed by the two houses. The house passed the committee bill calling for an appropriation of $5,016,375 without an amendment. The senate bill carried several amendments, these bringing the total to $4,788,238 for the two years of the biennium. The original bill was for $4,758,818.

Senator A. J. Witte of Seguin got in $10,000 for each of the two years to pay expenses of the advisory judicial council created by the regular session of this legislature to make a survey with a view to simplifying court procedure.

Senator Holbrook tried unsuccessfully to get the amounts stricken by the "reconsideration" route after they had been voted in. He declared that the council had not been appointed by the governor and that in fact it was a "mythical" body and he doubted if it would ever be of any use. He said the money would probably be spent by the members of the council traveling around over the country and putting up at fine hotels.

Farrish Submits Bill
Governor Moody today submitted five additional subjects, in most cases local bills requested by members of the legislature. One was the bill by Senator Pink L. Farrish of Lubbock proposing to limit the amount of compensation any public official may receive to $10,000 annually. The same bill was before the first special session.

Probe Ownership Of 13 Newspapers

WASHINGTON, June 5. (AP)—After Postmaster General Brown had transmitted to the senate today amended statements of ownership of 13 newspapers mentioned in testimony in the federal trade commission's investigation of financial holdings in newspapers by power companies, a bill to provide for disclosure of the "real ownership" of newspapers was introduced by Chairman Philipps of the senate postoffice committee.

The bill would amend the present law so that in addition to the names of stockholders, bond holders or other security holders, the postoffice department may require such information about the newspapers ownership as it may desire.

The federal trade commission meanwhile announced the summoning of three witnesses, Joseph F. McCowan, Mobile, Ala., financier; Victor H. Hanson, proprietor and publisher of the Birmingham, Ala. News and the Abe-Herald, and R. B. Chandler, publisher of the Mobile Press, to appear before it on June 14 in connection with its inquiry into power companies' financing of Alabama newspapers.

Britain may censor talks.

Arnie Arnot, aged 25, of Hackbridge, England, died recently from the effects of a mosquito bite.
