★★★★★★★★★★ NOSIN... ★★★★★★★★★★ With Polly

The day was perfect, nothing amiss, for a local family founsome, the Doug Shelys, like is the custom across the nation, joined relatives for the Thanksgiving Holidays, for a time of visitation, warm fellowship and thankfulness.

With this family group was a sweet young lass destined never to grace a Thanksgiving day table with her presence here on Earth again.

Though it seems that God purposely allowed them those happy Thanksgiving holidays with grandparents in Arkansas, before calling at 4:15 p.m. Monday saying, "It's Supper Time in Heaven", and though playing the little lass heard the call and in a split second was in that heavenly home where God is.

There like a beautiful rosebud glowing with instant beauty, innocent freshness and sweet fragrance, she will bloom forever in the warmth and love that fills the kingdom above.

While on earth the memory and warmth of her tender embrace and the many treasured kisses will forever live in the hearts of those who loved her so. But parting is not forever, it's only for a few short moments, then the gates can swing open that "Who-so-ever will" may enter the Kingdom to be in the midst of those awaiting in that beautiful home beyond the sky.

The referendums are entirely separate and unrelated matters, but will be handled by the ASCS Office. Ballots will be mailed out December 2 in the same envelope with complete instructions for voting. The marketing quota program has been in effect for several years, for which a penalty is paid for any cotton harvested in excess of the effective farm allotment.

The cotton research and promotion order is entirely separate from the marketing quota program. Aten said, Farmers may vote for or against paying $1 per bale for use in research and promotion of cotton use and sales.

Producers who have farms in other counties have only one vote, but they may file their acreage and yields for 1966 with the county office by December 9, in the event it will become necessary to use this to determine the final outcome of the referendum.

She began her own private practice in Plainview in 1959 and has continued throughout the years at 1005 W. 9th St. in Plainview.

Through a change announced by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the grower has until the final day of the referendum, December 9, to establish his interest through the ASCS office.

The program can go into effect if approved by two-thirds of the cotton farmers voting. It can also go into effect if a simple majority vote "yes" providing these farmers account for two-thirds of the volume of those voting.

It is of utmost importance, the Committee stated, that farmers producing in different counties or states notify the ASCS of the total volume, combining all acreages, the total from all counties and states, in the one report. This is not a requirement for voting. If it becomes necessary to compute the volume of cotton represented in the referendum, however, county ASCS offices will make this calculation on the basis of their records of 1966 planted

Potpourri...

By DPW

Little Pete no longer has a playmate. Little Pete no longer has a playmate because little Max is gone. And little Max was one of the most lovable, fun-filled, sad-eyed, lop-eared, mass of canine masculinity ever to romp playfully and gleefully through any living room of any abode.

It is sad. So very, very sad. He was so trustful. He was a newborn baby. When you held him he would go completely limp and there would be no taught nerves in his entire body. His large, sad, brown eyes emitted only trust and he gave himself to you with complete abandon. He trusted the straight upright creatures that fed him, and cared for him, and loved him. And to little Max, they were all the same. It was inconceivable that these creatures would ever harm him and he loved them all.

And now little Max is gone. And the way of this departure creates an even more emptiness and pang of heart. You see, no one seems to know where little Max went. He simply went one day and has never returned.

I wish I wasn't such a dreamer. Untold hundreds of terrible catastrophes flit through my mind and I see little Max in fear of his very life. And each one chills my bones to the very marrow.

I see little Max taking food from a friendly outstretched hand only to find the food saturated with poison. Then I see him writhing in painful agony, with bewilderment and hurt and pleading in his sad, tear-filled eyes.

And then again I see him accepting a lift from some stranger, only to be taken far out in the country, where a gun is placed at his head and the trigger is pulled. And all the while, little Max is looking up with his beautiful and large trusting eyes, not really knowing the inhumanity of man is about to take his young and wonderful life.

It is really awful what the mind can conjure up if you permit it to dwell in the bottomless depths of despair. What horrible acts of violence and sadistic torture can be imagined when your mind concentrates on the evilness of mankind.

I even see little Max being brutally beaten over the head with some kind of crude club, with his brains spilled and scattered over the ground he loved so and never being given an opportunity to live out his God given life. And when I see this imaginary departure I feel not only sorry for little Max but also pity for the creature that so betrayed his trust in them.

The mind has its three areas of thoughts. The heights, the depths, and then the level plains. I have thought on the heights also. I have seen little Max happily running off with little Maxine, only to return home proudly showing off his new-found mate and possibly his cherished brood of more little Maxes. But as the time passes on, I have to gloomily admit this is not the case and that little Max will never return.

I miss little Max. I miss his ecstasy at being petted and rubbed. I miss him romping through the rooms and his nipping at the heels. I miss his sudden charge around the corner and his feet sliding from beneath him as he sprawls belly-downward on the floor, only to scramble up again to rush madly forward to feel the trust and comfort of the petting hands.

If by some stretch of the imagination some of the horrific dreams I have dreamed are true, I hope the perpetrator of little Max's death can gently close his eyes and sleep a peaceful and undisturbed sleep at night. I wish this because I know little Max would really wish the same.

Urge Housewives Write White House To Curb Spending

The President of the National Association of Manufacturers today called on housewives protesting inflationary prices with market-boycotts throughout the country to focus their protest of the real source of the trouble--high levels of government spending.

W. P. Gullander, speaking before the National Management Association convention in Pittsburgh, said of the housewives, "They have chosen the wrong target in singling out the supermarkets, but they are dead right to be stirred up about the shrinking purchasing power of their dollars."

The NAM President said businessmen should join the housewives in letting Washington feel their anger just as the grocery managers are feeling it now. He suggested that a flood of mail to the White House and the new Congress, urging a cut-back in federal spending, would have far-reaching results in their common battle against inflation.

Unless federal spending is curbed, the NAM head said, prices will keep going up and a tax increase "will leave us all with less money with which to pay them."

The 1967 Cropland Adjustment Program sign-up for farmers who wish to take part next year will start December 1, L. D. Aten, Jr., Lamb County ASCS office manager, announced.

For 1967, CAP provides generally higher rates (except for cotton) for putting cropland not presently needed for agricultural production under long term agreements, 5 to 10 years.

The rates announced for Lamb County by commodities are as follows: Cotton 6¢ per pound, corn 55¢ per bushel, Grain Sorghum 4¢ per bushel, non-allotted crops $8 per acre average.

The smallest amount of acreage to be taken under contract will be one of the allotments or base on the farm. A total farm may be placed under contract, Aten said.

The sign-up will be a first come, first serve basis. There will also be acreage ceiling as in 1966. Farmers who have been to the county office to figure and talk about the program, should not confuse this with the actual sign-up. Aten said farmers are not signed up until they appear at the county offices on December 1 or after.

Long Distant Calls Within Texas Reduced

Reduced long distance rates for most station-to-station calls within Texas will become effective January 1, 1967, for customers of General Telephone Company of the Southwest, Southwestern States Telephone and Four States Telephone Companies, according to E. H. Danner, president of the three companies.

State-wide reductions on three minute calls vary from five to fifteen cents on most station-to-station calls over 56 miles in distance within Texas. Reductions for calls over three minutes are even greater, according to Danner. The reductions apply to calls made during the time when "day rates" are in effect as well as to all intrastate station-to-station calls made during the night rate hours after 8 p.m. and all day Sunday.

The new tariffs reflecting the reduced rates will be distributed to all offices handling long distance calls at the earliest possible date, Danner stated.

I live in the country I have a horse, a calf, some ducks, a baby brother, and a lot of other things they won't let you keep in the city. But I watch TV and we have electric heat. Mother has an all electric kitchen and Daddy has a workshop. Mother also has an electric washer and dryer which keeps her from sending my baby brother back. The electricity comes from the electric Cooperative and my Daddy says service is as good as you will find anywhere. So if you want a pony, or a goat, or a baby brother, move out to the country with us. The electric cooperative has plenty of electricity. My Dad says they keep upgrading their system with bigger poles and heavier lines. I don't know what their grade is now but I give them A+.

VOTE YES ON COTTON RESEARCH AND PROMOTION DEC. 5-9

Because:

- Higher-priced synthetics are taking our markets — over 2 million bales in the last 2 years.
- New synthetic fiber plants are scheduled; additional manufacturing capacity equal to another 3.5 million bales of cotton by end of 1967.
- Carryover is at all-time high; acreage lowest since 1872.
- 1966 acreage cut averaged 30%; further cuts will come unless carryover is reduced.
- Research odds (5 to 1) and promotion odds (16 to 1) must be reduced if cotton is to survive.
- Farmers originated research and promotion proposal; farmers will run it.
- Plan is voluntary; any farmer not wishing to participate can get a refund.
- 42 cotton producer organizations have endorsed this approach —officially.
- All projects must be initiated and administered by producer trustees elected by cotton producer organizations.
- If we want to keep on growing cotton, we must sell more cotton.
- Most farmers put nearly $100 or more into growing, harvesting, and ginning a bale; can you afford not to spend $1 to sell a bale?

Senior Class girls in the Springlake-Earth School will be among more than 500,000 throughout the nation who will sit in classrooms Tuesday, December 6, to take a written knowledge and attitude test dealing with homemaking.

One of these may go on to earn a $5,000 college scholarship from $10,000 in scholarships available. National runners-up will receive $4,000 $3,000 and $2,000 scholarships, respectively. State winners will be awarded $1,500 grants with $500 awards going to state runners-up. Their schools will be presented sets of Encyclopedia Britannica by Encyclopedia Britannica, Inc. Local winners will be presented specially designed silver charms and will have their test papers entered in state competition.

The girls here are among those in approximately 15,000 public, private and parochial schools which are participating in the 1967 Betty Crocker Search for the American Homemaker of Tomorrow. The program is sponsored by General Mills, Inc. Judging for national honors is on the basis of the original test scores plus personal observation and interviews during the tour. The program is the only national scholarship competition exclusively for high school senior girls.

General Mills, Inc., launched the program in 1954 to emphasize the importance of homemaking as a career. The Betty Crocker Search is on the approved list of national contests and activities of the national association of secondary school principals. Science Research Association, Chicago, prepares the test and also has charge of sorting and judging.

County Cotton Crop Count Is 93,182 Bales As Of November 25

Lamb County bale count continued to climb last week, according to Joe Pat Hart of the Texas Employment Commission office in Littlefield. 93,182 bales weighed in, as of Friday, November 25.

"Most of the ginner I talked with say they will have only 25 to 100 bales more," Hart said.

"We may hit 97,000," Hart said he doubted that any gins in the county would be running at night in the future. "For all practical purposes, we're done."

The total count is from 33 gins in Lamb County. On Tuesday afternoon, November 23, the total count for the county was 82,505 bales.

The count was then broken down into areas, with Littlefield area 15,330 bales; Earth-Springlake area 22,446 bales; Olton area 18,265 bales; Spade area 7,453 bales; Sudan area 8,900 bales, and Amherst area 10,111 bales.

No break down was given of the later bale count on Friday, November 25.

Hart said he would make one more count of the county bales, either this Friday or next Friday to determine the actual count. He said he would be certain that all the cotton was in when he made his last count.

Parents Meet With School Officials To Air Problems

NO. 3 IN A SERIES:

"The lady at Dimmitt told us that she went in the red last year, but she would be out the first 8 weeks of school this year, but she bought $4000 worth of equipment for her lunchroom last year out of the lunchroom money. They were charging 35¢," Mrs. Starkey reported.

"Over a period of years, it wouldn't be strange to build up quite a bit of money," Mann replied.

"She said they made it last year."

"Well, that's possible. I know that other places around didn't do that sort of thing."

"She did. She told us," replied Mrs. Starkey.

"Well the question to begin with, wasn't it, we were discussing a snack bar? Wasn't that the beginning? Or was it?" Mrs. Sawyer asked.

"I don't know. I'd be glad, at least in a minute, to go back to that. Let me go on and say something else. Now, course we have a school board policy that Guy Kelley read a few minutes ago, said if you have a complaint or criticism, in as near as possible, you come to the superintendent to make it. Now, if the superintendent did not make a suggestion that would satisfy you, then certainly you have a right to go to the school board, and I can't think of many complaints that people, and evidently people who are really interested can come up and complain. I haven't. I'm not saying that no one has. But I know that we have not had many come up here to the office and complain, which they should do. Course you like to come up and complain and offer suggestions, but we haven't had many people interested enough to do that. But I'd say this, that I think these are ways we can improve. One would be to put more money into it. That would be a decision for the school board to make. I'd say that we have often said that the people could come up and visit and work with the menu committee. Cause they're always glad to have people sit down and work with them. They'll be glad to have your suggestions. I think maybe if you have something to say about the menu, why they'd be glad to listen to you," Mann said.

"But don't you think this is a real good meeting we're having? I mean, I think people are really interested or they wouldn't be here. I feel like it's a real good meeting," Homer Starkey contended.

"I'm not complaining," Mann interrupted.

"We can discuss and talk about what's going on," Starkey continued. "Then you can find out what people do like and what they don't like. Then you'd be able to make an adjustment if you want to. See what I mean?"

"As long as my water holds out, I'm all right," Mann interrupted again.

"Well, that's the truth though, isn't it?" Starkey asked.

"By and large, you can't depend on a meeting like this all the time in that we've had some unfavorable publicity and so have some other people," Mann said.

"Well, I'm sure of that," came the reply.

"It could be avoided if people follow the rules," Mann said.

"But then all of us do have sooner or later," said Starkey. "But you don't go out looking for it," Bill said assuringly.

"That's right," agreed Starkey.

"I think any part of school life we'd like to improve, whether it's the lunchroom whether it's the curriculum, no matter what it is," Mann replied.

"That's what I had in mind. I thought you ought to be able to listen to the people and maybe you could get some good out of it. Maybe it would help and maybe it wouldn't."

"I'd rather listen to it any time that it happens and not let somebody put it off because, I'd say this to you or anybody else, when you have a complaint to make you should come to school and make it," Mann said.

"You're sure right. That's the reason we're here tonight."

"Well, I know but rather than wait and build up, you should come then. I mean, I know you can talk to me and I can talk to you. There's no reason why you can't come to school any time."

"I'm sure of that. I appreciate it," Starkey answered.

"Cause you might want to come up and tell me the kids like hominy and black eyed peas," Mann said.

"Well, I serve it."

"I'd be glad you'd come, really, anytime. But, I think that the people here should feel free to visit with the menu committee and make suggestions to them. I think they feel free to come in my office and chew me out anytime."

"But we can't meet with the board and say anything unless we write it in advance and get it on the agenda," Artis Barton asked.

"I'd say that whatever the written policy says, is the way it goes, unless the board wants to rewrite it. We have never refused anybody to meet with the board," Mann said.

"In other words, these community meetings, the school board must know or no body can say a thing?" someone asked.

"No, that's not right," was the reply from several.

Mann said, "You can talk anytime you want to. In fact, you can talk right now."

"I understood if you had a complaint, you'd have to write the school board in writing and then if they wanted to they'd put it on the agenda to make it legal."

"I believe that thing says that the school board reserves the right to ask you to be invited. Is that not the way it goes?"

The discussion continued at length until Guy Kelley was asked to reread the policy.

Mrs. Starkey asked Guy who wrote the policy.

"Well, this is a policy from way back. I can't even remember when it was put into our board policy book, Faye, but I know it's been in there."

At this point Mrs. Starkey broke in and said, "Well, the reason I asked, James and I were talking Wednesday and he said you did not have to write to the school board and request to meet with them."

"That's what it just said there. You don't have to write and request to meet with them," came the reply.

Kelley again read various parts of the policy.

The question was asked, "Well, what did they say about writing in there?"

"It says the board, however, is not obligated to act on request or complaint unless it has been submitted in writing and until it has had time to collect and study the pertinent facts," Kelley read.

"If the school board wants it in writing, they can request it. That's all it amounts to. But that doesn't have anything to do with the meetings."

"You can meet with the school board at any time?" was the next question asked.

The discussion continued at great length, with Mann explaining that all the meetings are public unless the discussion is concerning personnel.

"Well, are we going to continue to have meals as good as they have been the last couple weeks?" Mrs. Ardis Barton asked.

"I have said nothing to the menu committee that I know of and I'd say that I don't know that," At this point, Mrs. Barton interrupted to ask, "Can we afford the milk?"

"Might I ask a question," Busby asked, "Would any of you ladies like to help the menu committee and offer suggestions? I believe that they would be glad to have."

"I think they're doing a good job, but they have improved and I'd like to know if they are going to stay as good as they are now, or if they're going back as bad as they were?"

"They may not do it to suit everyone unless someone helps them. And if you, some of you, have time, I believe that they would be glad to have your help," Busby replied.

"James, no one person, or no group of people can satisfy everybody. But we're still right back to the problem that we still want some meat on the plate," Mrs. Starkey said.

"Faye, we will sure try to do all we can up to a certain point. Now, when it gets to digging too deep in the treasury I think nearly everybody starts cutting down," Busby said.

"Well, why can't we use it from the treasury? What other purpose do we have it for?"

"You mean our general school fund?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"Well, that's what makes the school run. Ordinarily the lunchroom should take care of itself, Faye."

"Well, I know that."

The discussion continued at length, with Mann saying, "We're not just going to keep going down, down, down, in the red. It might be a matter of what the school board decides to raise the price and how much they decide to raise it. But I'd say this, at 30¢ and 35¢ you cannot put more meat on the plate."

"Well, go up a nickel," Mrs. Starkey suggested.

"A lot of people can't pay that other nickel. I've seen the day when that nickel would mean a whole lot to me," Mrs. Vivian Parish said.

The question was asked what did you say you're going up to, 40¢, 45¢, or whatever? Did I understand right that any kid here can pay say 30¢ a day and the rest can be made up?"

"Now the law says, the contract that we sign with the state says, that you'll feed free or at reduced cost all those people who cannot pay for their lunch. A big problem we have is trying to determine how many can and cannot pay for their lunch," Mann replied.

"I'd like to know, does the state reimburse you for some of this?"

"Yes, we get 5¢ a lunch, of course that's been the same way for years with every school. We get 5¢ a lunch for a meal with milk. You get 3¢ for one without milk," Mann answered.

"I mean on these kids that can't pay for it," the question arose.

"Yes."

"They reimburse for all of it, just 5¢."

"No, they reimburse just like everybody else. They get the one that you feed free, and you get the same reimbursement that you get on everybody else."

"What about for those who can't pay for their lunch," was the question asked.

"Well," answered Mann, "that's part of the problem because we have so many, like when we have someone come up. It hasn't been too long ago that we fed some for Ardis for a few days free."

"Well, do you have to report that?" someone asked.

"Well, I don't know what was wrong. They didn't have any money and the kids weren't getting any help," Ardis said.

Somebody had come and got all their stuff. Seems like their furniture had been repossessed. We ended up feeding them. I think we fed them for a week or two, until they could get started," Mann answered.

Ardis questioned, "How long did you feed them?"

"I said a week or two. Is that right?"

Mrs. Dorothy Wood answered, "Yes, I think we sorta tried to make a rule that people can come and work part of the time because we got so many free lunches here for a few years that we couldn't take care of them. And people who are willing to work in the family or some older person who's willing to work, I've asked them to go to Mr. Mann and ask that. In a way sorta not to have too many people to ask for free lunches because the ball just gets to rolling and after a while you get so many free lunches that we couldn't possibly take care of all of them. And so, this man, I think we fed him, fed those children for a little more than a week, 6 days I believe it was, and he didn't show up to work or the boy didn't show to work."

Ardis suggested, "You might tell them that their sister worked until she got married, and when she moved off, you cut the lunches."

"She didn't work, she really didn't work. She was supposed to have, but I even went to their house one day when she," at this point Ardis interrupted and asked, "She did work though, isn't that right?"

"She only worked one or two days, and she didn't any ways (Continued to page 9) near do what they were supposed to."

"Now, we weren't complaining about feeding other people free. That wasn't the problem at all. It's just that we have that same thing all the time and it's hard to. At this point, someone interrupted saying, 'And there are other children fed free and have been for years and no questions asked, am I right?' Workbooks furnished free?"

"Now, I don't know about that," Mrs. Wood assured, "I don't know about the workbooks. Only thing I have to do with," and was interrupted "Don't you get reimbursement for those children who are fed free?"

"Oh yea, someone asked that question a few minutes ago," "You don't know how many kids you have. You reported it. Don't your reports show?" "Well, now that wasn't the question," Mann argued.

"I asked how many kids do you have that couldn't afford to pay for their lunch and I was told you didn't know," "Well, like right here, we have come along with about 64 a day is what we're actually feeding. I don't know that we're feeding all we should feed. Now we're not together on what you're asking and what I'm trying to answer. Now what we're actually feeding, I see here, from 64 to 65 every day. Now whether we're feeding all of them that we should or not, I don't know. But then, you really can't afford, we may not be feeding them all."

"But the state does say you're supposed to feed them?" was the next question asked. "The state says you feed free at reduced cost all those who cannot pay for their lunch, but now the problem is, how do you determine who can and cannot pay," Bill answered. Busby said, "Excuse me, Bill. We're getting into administrative decisions. If you all want to talk about that I think it would be a lot better if you'd come by and talk to Bill about that some other time. There should be more important things that we could be doing."

The question was asked, "How do you determine who can and cannot pay?" "Well, James, I feel like if there's a kid out here that's hungry and hasn't got the money to eat, I feel like it's pretty important. That's the reason I asked that cause I just hate to see kids hungry," Claud Holder replied. "Well, I don't like to see them hungry either" Busby said. "But they've done the best they can to feed the ones that need it, and whether the people that should be able to tell, should be Mrs. Wood and Bill. They have what's going on than anyone else. But that's beside the point of what we were supposed to be discussing. At this point Busby gave the floor to Weldon Barton.

"Back to the subject you and I discussed here momentarily, maybe someone else on the board would like to let me ask this, when you have milk on the menu, 1/2 pint of milk, that constitutes or completes making that a Class A lunch, am I right? But that student can go back through that line and buy as many as he wants for 3¢ for a half pint, right? That's not necessary is it, because he's already gotten enough for his Class A lunch, and that's all you're required to give the student. Alright, are you losing money on that 3¢ milk? I understand you get reimbursement from the state for part of that half pint of milk, right? You didn't get reimbursement for part of that 3¢ milk?"

"Let me answer that," Mann said. "The special milk program for all the milk you serve over and above the regular lunch, you get 4¢. You are allowed to make 1¢ for distribution cost. If you make over 1 1/2¢ you have to submit to the state a plan why you need to do that." "Does the state allow you to sell that milk above and beyond the ones that it comes across on the tray?" "Well, the only way you can use it is that way, and the special milk program is for that over and above the school lunch, you see. Is that what you're asking?" Mann inquired. "What do you mean?" "Well, the one that comes on the lunch, you can't count. That's something else. The special milk program is to get the kids to drink more milk, so milk over and above the school lunch, that you get reimbursement for. It has nothing to do with the school lunch. The special milk program and hot lunch program are 2 separate programs."

"If a student came through here with his sack lunch from home, and he wanted a half pint of milk, you'll sell it to him? For how much?" "3¢," came the answer. "When do you get 4¢? You said while ago 4¢?" "Well now, we do get reimbursed 4¢," Mann answered. "Oh, 4¢, you get reimbursed 4¢. OK. Now, we sell that milk for 3¢. Doesn't it meet the requirement on the milk program? I mean are you allowed to do that, Mr. Mann?" someone asked.

"Oh yes, we can sell it over here in school. That's the special milk program," Mann replied. "A special milk program?" Barton asked. "Yes," came the answer. "Does every state school have that special milk program?" Mann answered, "They might not necessarily if they want to participate in it they can. They wouldn't have to participate in the school lunch program. But in the special milk program, if they want to participate they can. Some schools, I'm sure do not."

"They can have the state lunch program, but they don't have to have the special milk program?"

Mann answered, "They don't have to have either one of them."

"No, but say they do have the lunch program. Can they exclude the special milk program?" "They can exclude it. They don't have to participate in the special milk program. They are two separate programs."

"Well, El Paso school according to the El Paso paper, and I don't say a paper is 100% right, will not sell a half pint of milk unless he buys a tray of food," Barton said. "Of course, that would be a local rule."

"No, it said the explanation was, that it was a state rule."

"Well, I've never seen this rule," Mann said. "Well, I don't know either, I'm just asking if you know anything about it."

"Well, is the problem there?" Mann asked.

"No, but if the student can buy milk and it's costing us, I understand you might not be breaking even on the 3¢ milk," Barton said. "Not really, we make a penny on it," Mann answered. "You make a penny?" "Yes," Mann answered, "there's no problem there."

The discussion was carried on at length when Barton asked, "You have to sell that milk before you get that 4¢ reimbursement?" "Yes, every month you send in your report for reimbursement on the milk."

"In other words when, 750 a day come through here, and they all get milk, do you get reimbursed 4¢ times 750?" "No, no, special milk is over and above the school lunch. Someone asked, 'The milk on the lunch then costs 6¢?' "Well, the milk on the lunch is part of the class A lunch. Of course, on the class A lunch, you get a 5¢ reimbursement if it had milk with it."

"Well, I know, but you get that 5¢ on each student?" Starkey inquired. "Yes, but that doesn't have anything to do with the milk."

"Well, I know, but actually the milk costs you 6¢."

"Yes," was the reply. "Well, that cuts it down some more. Cause your 50¢ lunches is way more than half of them, James, aren't they?" "Yes, I suppose," was the reply.

"Well, that takes 6¢ off that. How much have you got left, 24," Starkey said.

"Yea, but how much are we going to need to raise it?" "Well, I don't know. You've got to go and see what your meat is going to cost you, and how much meat you're going to put on that plate. And then you can tell what your lunches are going to cost you."

Mann and Starkey discussed at length the cost of meat. Olatha Sanders asked, "Could the board not take the thoughts that were brought out tonight and at a later time take all these thoughts and collect them together, figure out what it would cost per plate to put our menus up with some other schools and maybe from there determine the price that we might charge?" "Well, there may be a question, I don't know. I've talked to a few that eat out here but I've also talked to a lot of other people that eat in the lunchroom and all of them don't think ours is so awfully bad. There's quite a few that think we have one of the better lunches. So actually it's a matter of opinion. Now, the amount of meat served any one day, it would depend on what day they were here or at the other lunchrooms. It would make a lot of difference whether they liked this lunch or one they had somewhere else."

The discussion on the subject was pursued at every angle. Someone in the audience asked if the lunchroom had been on a trial basis for the last 3 weeks.

"Not so far as I know. That goes back to the menu committee that makes that," replied Busby.

Mrs. Adrain asked, "Well, could they answer that?" Olatha Sanders answered, "When we first started, we already had our menus made out a month before and the last week of that particular menu, some of the kids said well, the second week of it, rather, I'm sorry, that the menus have changed this week, but they were made a month before and they had not changed at all."

"I understood it was to be on the trial basis for 3 weeks."

The discussion continued at great length with Bill Mann saying, "I didn't know that it had changed."

The conversation was drawn to the question, "When did the last menu go into effect?" Finally the answer was received after long discussion, that the menu was planned on October 31 and it would be 2 weeks at the end of this week.

Mrs. Wood suggested that some of the people should serve on the menu committee or committee for indigent children.

Mann suggested that they might even like to help the cooks one day a week. The cooks applauded at this remark.

Mrs. Sawyer said, "If our children don't want to eat, we want a snack bar. They don't have any choice, either bring a lunch or eat over here. That's what we're trying to bring up. That's what we started with."

"That's what I tell my kids, either eat over here or bring your lunch," Busby said. "Well, some of them don't like to bring their lunch."

"I don't have any personal complaint against a snack bar. I figured in this building perhaps we might not have a place for it unless you added on to the building, which you probably wouldn't. But now there are some other things involved. I know this is not always the case, but most of the ones who have the snack bar, did so because they were having to compete with a little 'Cafe' across the street, where all the kids went. I say all, a good number of these went and they could smoke and take a break and I'm sure the kids enjoyed it. But now, course the other side of it is if you don't like what's serving, you can go over there and get a hamburger. Now you can also do this, it would be the same as having vending machines here in school which we do not have. You could go to that snack bar and you could spend a nickel to get you some potato chips and a Coke and that's what you'd have for dinner. Or you can get a bar of candy and a Coke and save some money for a package of cigarettes. Personally, and speaking as a parent, I had rather not have one for that reason."

Mann went on telling why he did not feel that a snack bar is a good idea. He also gave his view points on vending machines in the schools.

Finally Starkey said, "Well, maybe you can take this into consideration of the lunch counter or snack bar and maybe over a period of time, we might work it out. Well, you know it is something to look at."

Mann said, "Well, here's the thing about it, it's your school and if you want to enlarge the lunchroom and build a snackbar, it can be done."

"Well, I know it could be taken into consideration, I mean if it makes money and if it will offset some of your other problems, why I'd say the kids could be able to eat without bringing their lunch from home."

The discussion continued until Mann said, "I'd say this, I'm probably as interested as any other one person in having a good school and I say that our school board is the same way. If a snack bar will improve the school and that's what people want, then we should have a snack bar."
