Second quake hits Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A second strong jolt rocked the Mexico City area Friday evening some 36 hours after a major earthquake ravaged the world's largest metropolis and, according to the latest government estimates, left 2,000 people dead.

There were few details, but all of the reports agreed that the second big jolt in two days occurred at about 7:42 p.m. (9:42 p.m. EDT), following a day of minor aftershocks.

The U.S. National Earthquake Center in Golden, Colo. said the quake measured 7.3 on the Richter scale and was centered at about the same place as Thursday's quake, 250 miles west of Mexico City.

Ham radio operators in Dallas reported conversations with people in Mexico who said more buildings had collapsed in Mexico City.

Several Dallas area ham operators reported they heard a report on the U.S. Embassy radio frequency that another earthquake had hit; it was described as lasting about a minute and being almost as strong as Thursday's quake that devastated the city.

It was measured at 7.2 at the University of California, Berkeley, seismographic center, according to Dr. Robert Uhrhammer, chief research seismologist. He said the epicenter was the same as Thursday's quake.

The Pacific Tsumani Warning Center in Honolulu originally reported an earthquake measuring 6.6 on the Richter scale struck with an epicenter at about 150 miles northwest of Acapulco, Mexico, but remeasured and found it was 7.3.

"Less than 10 minutes ago, I was sitting in my hotel room and it began to shake," said AP Photographer David Breslauer. "The chandelier began to swing." Breslauer was in Queretaro, 125 miles northwest of the capital.

Frank Kemper, a ham operator in La Jolla, Calif. was monitoring a radio conversation between Los Angeles and Mexico City, when he heard the ham operator in Mexico say, "Oh no! It's another one. It's a big one." Then he went off the air.

Ham radio operator Dave Downing in Wausau, Wis. said he heard a station in Veracruz, about 300 miles east of Mexico City, broadcast a report of the new quake and then go off the air, possibly indicating the quake covers an area larger than the Mexico City area. The had been reporting tremors all day. But the operator said, "It was not an aftershock. It was a major earthquake," before he went off the air.

In San Bernardino, Calif., amateur radio operator Vince Cox, 35, was talking with a Mexico City ham operator shortly when the other operator suddenly went off the air. "The Mexican station just jumped out of sight. He just wasn't there anymore.

"We were passing the phone numbers and names (of people wanting information of relatives) back and forth and in the process of that he was talking and he just fell out."

Red Cross takes aid for quake victims

From Staff Reports

Numerous Midlanders are organizing efforts to assist Mexico City residents in the wake of the earthquake that rumbled across central Mexico Thursday. And the U.S. State Department has set up a task force to relay messages between Americans in Mexico and their relatives in the United States.

The local chapter of the American Red Cross is accepting financial contributions to be forwarded to this massive relief effort.

Checks, money orders (marked "Mexico Relief") may be mailed to American Red Cross, P.O. Box 1706, Midland, Texas 79702 or dropped off at the Red Cross office, 2306 Elizabeth St.

Additional details are available by calling 915-684-6161.

The office of Mayor G. Thane Akins has organized a relief fund to collect items needed by the earthquake-injured victims. These items will be trucked to the Disaster Relief Center in Mexico City, according to Akins.

He said the following list includes just some of the items most urgently needed:

Case goes to jury in arson trial

From Staff Reports

EL PASO — A federal district court jury of eight women and four men Friday night began deliberations in the arson-conspiracy trial of two prominent Odessans.

The trial began Monday, with U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton presiding. Bunton transferred the trial because of the publicity surrounding the first trial earlier this year in Midland.

Odessa Fire Department Capt. Billy Stovall was on the witness stand Friday and, essentially, repeated testimony he gave during the first trial of Ector County Commissioner Willie Hammond Jr. and former Odessa City Councilman Keith Weddel in Midland in February that ended in a mistrial.

Stovall, as did fire Captains Wayne Wallace and Steve Pollock Thursday, said he believed the cause of the O'Michael Building fire was an electrical short and not gasoline because no gasoline fumes were detected in the area where the fire occurred. Wallace testified that the question of arson was not raised until about five days after the fire.

The testimony of Odessa Assistant Fire Marshal Rick Cates and that of former state fire marshal Rick Womack contradicted that of Stovall, Wallace and Pollock. Cates and Womack contend the fire was started with flammable liquids.

Wallace and Pollock both testified that neither Cates nor Womack ever questioned them about the fire.

In an interview outside the courtroom, Shelton, Weddel's attorney, questioned why Cates or Womack "never questioned the three senior fire suppressors."

Wednesday, Odessa firefighter Robert Haynes testified he was one of the first to arrive at the scene and when he walked into the burning second floor office behind two other firefighters each corner of the room was burning.

However, Wallace and Pollock refuted Haynes' testimony, saying Haynes was not in the room where the fire was, but in a stairwell handling a hose.

Hammond and Weddel are jointly accused of conspiring to burn the O'Michael Building, 301 N. Jackson, for insurance money.

Hammond is additionally accused on two counts of perjury in connection with depositions he gave involving insurance claims on the building, which has since been remodeled and renamed the Jackson Center.

Emery Henderson, horse psychologist, demonstrates one of the techniques he uses in training horses.

Trainer conducts horse kindergarten

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The common result of crawling beneath a standing horse for most people would be serious bodily injury.

But when Emery Henderson, horse psychologist, crawls beneath one of his kindergarten-trained horse's belly, the horse continues to calmly munch away at grass.

"There's not many people that use that kind of training. We're teaching them that this kind of behavior is normal. That it's just as normal to have someone on top as underneath on the ground," the 64-year-old horse trainer said.

"She'd kick her head off," Henderson said of the horse, if she hadn't been through his kindergarten pyschology training.

Henderson will conduct a horse seminar from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today at the County Arena, 2445 East Highway 80. The seminar is $12 for the public and $8 for 4-H Club members.

"You just don't go up to a horse and throw a saddle on it. The thing that bothers me about trainers is that they start on the back. The back is lion country," Henderson said.

Henderson says pyschology is important in training a horse. The trainer needs to read and understand what the animal is thinking, he says.

"You don't mechanically train a horse. You have to get into their minds and into their thinking."

Henderson gets into horses' minds by reading the expression in their eyes and their body movement, he says. Like humans, horses' moods change and are affected by their environment, he said.

"The average cowboy. He would put a saddle on. And climb on and stay on top until he got kicked off and broke a rib.

"Safety is what we're after. I've had all the lumps I can stand. I'm a first-class coward. I don't ever want him to think about bucking," said Henderson, who has been bucked several times in his life.

In Henderson's horse kindergarten, obstacles, such as paper bags, are placed on the horse's hoofs and legs. The bags are intended to get them used to the feel of strange objects around their bodies.

Henderson said he also does a lot of scratching and "hands on" when training horses.

Touching and placement of foreign objects on the horse's body begins with the horse's nose and is progressively worked toward the horse's back. "We do the horse's back last," Henderson said.

Eventually, saddles are placed on their backs, and the horses are taught to trail ride and to pull a buggy. Henderson said some horses are ready for a saddle after two weeks of training, but each individual horse goes through training at a different pace.

A horse is considered finished when it can run with an operating chainsaw dangled beneath its belly, he said. A chain saw is used to get the horse adjusted to motor sounds. This is important with a lot of motorbikers in open country now, Henderson said

Like humans, each horse has a different personality, Henderson said.

Group plans campaign against immigration bill

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A coalition of Texas labor and Mexican-American groups is planning a grass-roots campaign to block congressional approval of an immigration bill the U.S. Senate passed Thursday.

The groups said Friday they will mount "an intense lobby effort" to convince Texas congressmen to vote against the Simpson-Rodino Bill when House debate begins in the spring. James Harrington, legal director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, said the legislation would have "no impact" on the rising tide of illegal aliens, would cost Americans jobs and legitimize discrimination against Mexican-Americans.

Harrington directed his most intense criticism against the so-called "guestworker" provision of the bill. That would allow fruit and vegetable growers to hire up to 350,000 foreign laborers to pick crops every year for the next three years.

"It's the 'bracero' program rehashed and sanitized with new legislation," Harrington said, referring to a World War II-era guestworker program for alien farm and ranch hands. The guestworker "rent-a-slaves," he said, would lose the minimum wage and workman's compen-

Congressional candidate says import fee would help oil industry

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Last Monday's announcement in the Wall Street Journal that Saudi Arabia was planning to increase its production and cut prices spurred congressional candidate Lamar Smith to devise an oil import fee that he says would help the domestic petroleum industry.

The announcement of his plan came Friday afternoon during a news conference at the Petroleum Club. Smith, a San Antonio resident, is seeking the Republican nomination for the 21st Congressional seat now held by Tom Loeffler, who is returning to Texas to be a candidate in the governor's race.

Smith, a former Bexar county commissioner, announced his candidacy July 23 and is running against Jeff Wentworth, also of San Antonio. Also considering entering the Republican primary are San Antonio city councilman Van Archer and Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins.

If elected, Smith said that as congressman he would "propose an oil import fee on imported crude oil and petroleum products equal to the average windfall profits tax on domestic production. Currently, the average windfall profits tax is slightly under $4 per barrel. If oil prices were to go under $22 per barrel, an additional fee to offset the difference between $22 and the price should be imposed."

Calling it a "windfall profits tax equalization fee," Smith said it would put domestic producers on an even footing with their foreign competitors.

Getting support for it from the northeast legislators, who historically have opposed such fees on imported oil, would be accomplished by appealing to the issue of national security, according to Smith.

"The more reliance we have upon foreign oil, the more our national security is jeopardized. We have to be prepared, regardless. We can't be

Sunset panel reviewing agencies

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Several Texas criminal justice agencies were at center stage Friday as the Sunset Advisory Commission began another round of state agency reviews.

A 1977 Texas law provides for a thorough examination of several agencies and commissions every two years. Only those agencies that are constitutionally protected are exempt from the review process.

The sunset commission, composed of four senators and four representatives, oversees the process and makes recommendations to the full Legislature.

On Friday, the panel took a preliminary look at the Board of Pardons and Paroles, the Texas Department of Corrections, the Texas Youth Commission, the Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies, the Texas Juvenile Probation Commission and the Adult Probation Commission.

"Every agency in the state needs this kind of independent, non-biased review, even if it makes us nervous," said Diana Clark, secretary for the Adult Probation Commission.

When legislators created the review process they established 13 specific criteria to be used in determining recommendations for the continuation, reorganization or abolishment of an agency. Most of the guidelines are designed to find out how well an agency is fulfilling its intended purpose and how well it serves the public.

The commission also looks how efficient an agency's operation is, as well as whether it complies with open records and open meetings laws.

The sunset commission submits its recommendations to the Legislature during the next regular session, in this case, January 1987. To become law, the recommendations must be introduced as bills and passed like any other piece of legislation. As with all other bills, the governor may veto legislation designed to continue an agency or commission.

In addition to the criminal justice agencies, the commission will examine the following:

- The Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, including a total of 22 state schools, hospitals and centers.
- The Department of Human Resources.
- The Commission for the Deaf.
- The Medical Care Advisory Council.

QUAKE

Cox then monitored the conversations of other ham operators in the Mexico City area. "Several amateurs in the area basically said there had been a good sized aftershock."

He heard no reports of damage.

"I listened to three or four conversations. I heard them exclaiming that there had been quite a shock."

Earlier Friday, stunned Mexicans counted the dead and searched for the living, struggling to recover from a giant earthquake that turned the world's biggest metropolis into a dust-shrouded city of terror and tragedy.

"I would not dare give a number," said a grim-faced Mayor Ramon Aguirre.

Reports were even sketchier from the surrounding countryside, where unofficial accounts spoke of hundreds killed in areas closer to the epicenter of the quake, which reached a powerful 7.8 on the Richter scale.

Late Thursday, Aguirre said at least 1,000 people were buried in scores of collapsed buildings in Mexico City, and hour by hour on Friday bodies were pulled from the rubble. Five thousand people were treated for injuries, the mayor said.

Sirens echoed non-stop through the capital's downtown streets. Fires flickered and smoldered in the ruins of destroyed buildings, pouring smoke into the dust raised by Thursday's upheaval. Crying children wandered through the streets, calling for their parents.

Tens of thousands of emergency volunteers, using picks, heavy construction equipment or bare hands, clawed through the rubble in search of survivors — occasionally with success. One young Briton, for example, was lifted from the ruins of a downtown hotel after being buried 26 hours in the debris.

"The people of Mexico City have shown great solidarity," Aguirre said.

Smaller aftershocks continued to rumble through the city Friday, each one a new terror.

"It's shaking. It's shaking a little. Don't be scared," a TV news announcer calmly advised viewers in the middle of one tremor.

Texans to survey quake damage

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Former Ambassador Bob Krueger and San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros will travel to Mexico today to survey the damage of Thursday's massive earthquake and find out how Texans can help.

Gov. Mark White named Cisneros and Krueger — U.S. ambassador to Mexico in the Carter administration — to coordinate what he called "tremendous outpourings of offers of assistance from throughout the state." A private plane will fly the two to Mexico City this morning.

"Our task is going to be to find out how the people of Texas can best coordinate their efforts in order to act as good friends and good neighbors to the citizens of Mexico," Krueger told reporters in a late-afternoon press conference Friday. He said they are conducting the on-site visit because the quake so disrupted communications with Mexico that the country's needs are impossible to assess from Austin.

"My hope is their team will act as a conduit for all the resources we pull together from various agencies, religious and charitable organizations and individuals and businesses," White said. Those resources include special church offerings, doctors and medical supplies, and utility companies providing crews to reestablish broken power and communications lines.

White rejected a request from Ruben Bonilla Jr., chairman of the Mexican American Democrats of Texas, to send Texas National Guard troops to Mexico City. "My authority with the National Guard does not extend past the borders of the state of Texas," the governor said.

He added that he has informed President Reagan that the Texas Guard "is available to move in if they are requested."

The governor is supplying Cisneros and Krueger with a staff and office space in the Capitol to coordinate the relief effort.

Akins said the group will also accept any other donations, including monetary. Trucks must be ICC-approved for transportation with drivers, tents and other portable shelters furnished.

Contributions will be collected today and Sunday from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Texas National Guard Armory at Midland Regional Air Terminal. There will be signs posted to direct persons to the Armory.

For more information on this effort, persons are asked to call Lillian Wallis, who is in charge of the Disaster Relief Drive. She may be contacted from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 563-2826 and after that at 697-6597.

Mrs. Wallis grew up in Mexico City and speaks Spanish. Akins said anyone who wants to help should call Mrs. Wallis or go by the Armory.

The State Department has asked that people with inquiries about American citizens in Mexico City to call the task force in the Consular Affairs Bureau at 202-653-7959.

SMITH

so reliant upon foreign oil. If that flow is shut down, we're vulnerable."

Smith explained that foreign oil today provides one-third of the oil consumed in the U.S., which is about 5 million barrels per day. "It accounts for almost half our trade deficit. The Energy Information Administration projects that by 1995, the U.S. will import 52 percent of its oil."

A war in the Middle East could shut off those imports overnight, according to Smith. "Twice in the 1970s our foreign oil supply was disrupted. The crises those disruptions brought about fueled one-third of all the inflation we experienced in the 1970s," he said.

Revenues from that oil import fee could be used to build up the Strategic Petroleum Reserve to be used as a backup if supplies from the Middle East were stopped, said Smith. A $5-per-barrel tax on imported crude would generate $44.4 billion in the next five years, which could be used to help reduce the country's deficit.

Questioned about the possible entrance of Akins into the race, Smith said, "I'm here today as a candidate for Congress. The kind of candidate the people will look for is one who has leadership on oil and gas issues. I'm here today demonstrating my leadership. No, I'm not concerned about the Midland mayor running."

BILL

sation benefits illegal aliens now enjoy.

"It's ludicrous to have a guestworker program that will bring in 350,000 people a year to harvest crops in South Texas when our unemployment rate in South Texas is 27 to 28 percent," said Bill Calderon of Houston, executive director of the Mexican-American Democrats of Texas.

Growers and other supporters of the guestworker program say their crops would rot in the field without the aid of foreign labor at harvest time.

Harrington said the groups would also fight the provision of the bill which penalizes employers who hire illegal aliens.

"There's no way that that can do anything but discriminate against actual and prospective employees of Hispanic origin," he said. "It's going to be a subterfuge...that will be written into the law, a legitimate reason that growers and construction people can seize upon to say they don't have to hire minority people."

The bill's sponsors say undocumented workers will not come to the United States if they know they will be unable to find a job.

Rebecca Flores Harrington, Texas director of the United Farm Workers of American, AFL-CIO, said Congress is taking the wrong tack in trying to control the immigration problem on this side of the border. "I don't think it's a political/legislative problem, it's an economic problem," she said.

"There's no way possible that you can stop people from coming into this country if the jobs are here and they're dying in their own country."

HORSE

"Horses are not unusually temperamental. They have different tempers and abilities and can perform accordingly to their physical attributes. They receive instructions differently," he said.

Henderson said his seminars on training are valuable to all horsemen. Without opportunities people make a lot of mistakes, he said. With some good pointers they can get a horse and in time they can train the horse, he said. Although most people buy horses already trained, Henderson said, many horses are never completely trained.

Two factors are important in training a horse, Henderson said.

"One, you have to know more than the horse. And two, you have to watch the horse's reaction - how he thinks."

Most important, his wife Betty adds, is to "have much love for horses and much patience, which Emery has both. Not everyone has a gift like that."

To train horses, Emery Henderson says it takes time, patience and "you have to pray about it a lot."

For 20 years, Emery and Betty Henderson have been training Arabians, Thoroughbreds, Connemaras, Quarter Horses, Paints, Mules, Clydesdales and Morgans.

"It's interesting to figure out these little fellers," Henderson says.

Men released on drugs charge

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Two men were released from the Ector County jail late Friday after posting $10,000 bond each on charge of possession of methamphetamines and marijuana.

Humphrey Harris, 28, and Arlie S. Jennings, 35, were arrested about 8:30 p.m. Thursday by search warrant-armed Odessa police narcotics officers, Ector County sheriff's deputies and DPS troopers.

According to police spokesman Rusty Baker, officers searching the house at 513 N. Bernice, where Harris and Jennings were arrested, seized seven ounces of a substance believed to be methamphetamine and about two pounds of marijuana. Baker said the estimated street value of the illicit drugs is in excess of $21,000.

Harris and Jennings were arraigned Friday morning before Municipal Judge Otis Moore Otis Moore, who set bonds totaling $10,000 for each of the men.

Baker said the search warrant was issued Thursday by Ector County Peace Justice R.G. Hungerford on the basis of a probable cause affidavit drawn on information received through the Crime Stoppers program.

Man sentenced in shooting of former friend

STATE

ABILENE (AP) — An Abilene jury handed out a 7½-year prison term to a man accused of shooting his former friend, denying him the probation his paralyzed victim had requested.

Kevin Jefferson, 21, of Abilene, was sentenced after the jury deliberated about three hours Thursday. Earlier, jurors convicted him of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Brian Keith Garrett, who was paralyzed from the neck down by the bullet fired by Jefferson, had joined others in asking the state district court jury to grant his assailant probation.

Garrett's mother, Linda Powell, said her 18-year-old son seemed hurt when he learned Jefferson had not received probation.

"He just put his eyes down when my sister told him," Mrs. Powell said.

In a statement from his hospital bed, the youth told attorneys he didn't want his attacker to go to prison.

Court testimony shows Jefferson took a pistol from his grandmother's house March 29 and went to an Abilene nightclub. He said he was afraid Garrett would assault him because the former friends had been feuding for about a year.

Garrett was shot once in the neck after the two squabbled at the club.

For the sentencing phase of the trial, attorneys Wednesday took Garrett's oral deposition at Hendrick Medical Center. But despite the victim's recommendation of probation, prosecutors asked for the maximum 10-year prison term.

Court-appointed defense attorney Jim Smart said he will appeal.

An ambulance and five medical personnel were required Tuesday to bring Garrett to the courthouse to testify in the first phase of the trail.

Hooked up to a life-support system that "breathes" for him, Garrett said he could not remember the night of the shooting.

He speaks through a "voice box" activated by compressed air, which he releases by wrinkling his forehead. Monitors on his forehead and a compressor do the work of his brain and lungs in allowing him to vocalize his thoughts.

"Do you want him (Jefferson) to go to the penitentiary?" the attorneys asked Garrett at the hospital visit.

"Not really," Garrett answered.

"Not really? It would be okay with you if he got probation?"

"Yes," Garrett said

At one point, the jury sent out a note saying it could not agree unanimously on the punishment. State District Judge Billy John Edwards instructed jurors to continue deliberations.

Dallas-area residents bugged by cricket invasion

DALLAS (AP) — Great jumping crickets!

Residents of area cities are hopping mad over swarms of pesky insects that have evaded insecticides while invading homes, streets and even the Cotton Bowl, where they took on Bruce Springsteen.

The veteran rocker was plagued by the pesky insects on stage at a recent concert, where hundreds of the winged adult crickets swirled around bright stage lights.

Springsteen, batting away a few crickets between songs, told the crowd he was glad to be in Dallas except for "these giant flying Texas grasshoppers."

The Cotton Bowl has been sprayed twice in as many weeks for the insects, actually field crickets. As many as 400 eggs laid last fall by each female cricket are now hatching, said officials.

Larry McMillan, operator of the A-1 Pest Control in Dallas, said he was called to fumigate the Cotton Bowl press box and concession stands on Saturday after reports of "thousands" of crickets.

The complaints of cricket infestation came after Springsteen's Sept. 13 night concert, he said.

"I heard they were louder than he was," said McMillan.

Millions of the crickets have begun moving to warm spaces, such as basements and beneath patios, as the hot summer temperatures drop, said Beverly Brewer, an urban entomologist for the Dallas County Agricultural Extension Service.

At night, the crickets are attracted to bright building lights in downtown areas, said Ms. Brewer. She said homeowners should cut down outside lighting to cut down on the insects.

"It's that time of the year," she said. "Until the first freeze, there are going to be a lot of them."

LCRA directors report alleged worker corruption

AUSTIN (AP) — Lower Colorado River Authority directors went to a state legislator with reports that agency employees accepted sexual favors during business dealings, mismanaged multimillion-dollar construction contracts and changed bids on land deals.

Allegations of widespread corruption and misuse of public funds within state agency have forced the retirement of its general manager, state Sen. John Sharp, D-Victoria, said Thursday. Other top officials may follow, Sharp said.

"I'm uneasy about what I'm hearing, but quite frankly, I'm not surprised," he said. "I think this is a perfect example of the arrogance of power of any agency when there is nobody looking over its shoulder."

Agency spokesman Tom Purdum, however, denied any wrongdoing. He said the river authority learned of the allegations, conducted an investigation and found no evidence of illegal or immoral activity.

Lawyer: Wife 'snapped' after years of abuse

By DAVID SEDENO

DONNA, Texas (AP) — One day last spring, Nivio Sanchez gave his wife, Sylvia, $180 to buy Easter clothes for their two daughters.

The woman, however, used most of the money to buy a .22-caliber pistol and bullets, eight of which she emptied into her husband while he sat outside a bar.

Ms. Sanchez will go on trial for her husband's murder next month, and her attorney, state Rep. Juan Hinojosa, believes his client will go free. After years of enduring physical abuse from her husband, Ms. Sanchez snapped, Hinojosa said.

He will use the "battered women's syndrome" in defending the 26-year-old woman.

"By the time you reach that stage where you take this type of action, you've already gone to the police to no avail; you've gone to relatives to no avail; you've gone to the courts to no avail," Hinojosa said.

"You are in a helpless situation where you have no other recourse but to defend yourself."

The attorney said Ms. Sanchez had been abused for seven years, but the situation could not have been remedied by a divorce.

"There is a misconception among the public, especially among people who have not experienced the battered women's syndrome or do not find themselves in a situation where they are beaten violently by their husbands or boyfriends," Hinojosa said.

"It is not that simple as getting up and walking away from the situation...There are children involved. The economic situation does not allow the woman the independence to go out on her own...She doesn't have any place to go," he said.

Jury selection in Ms. Sanchez's trial is scheduled to begin Oct. 28 in the Hidalgo County Courthouse in Edinburg. Assistant District Attorney Iris Aguilar, who is prosecuting the case, declined to discuss it.

Hinojosa said the state is looking at the case as premeditated murder.

He said Nivio Sanchez physically abused his wife around April 1 and that Ms. Sanchez had to wrestle a knife away from him.

On April 5, Good Friday, Ms. Sanchez wanted to buy clothes for her two daughters for Easter Sunday. Her husband gave her $180, and went to a bar, Hinojosa said.

On Saturday morning, Nivio Sanchez said that before the day was over, "he was going to do something to her that she wasn't going to forget," Hinojosa said.

The woman, remembering the money she was given the day before, went to a hardware store and purchased a .22-caliber pistol and bullets. That night she went to the bar her husband frequented. He was sitting with another couple in a car outside the bar. He laughed at her when she showed up with the gun, Hinojosa said.

One bullet missed, the other eight didn't. She waited for police to arrest her.

Poetess finds freedom in closed space

By CARROLL COPELIN

ARCHER CITY, Texas (AP) — Normally, the thought of a writer's or poet's studio brings to mind a large, airy garret with windows aplenty.

That's not so for one of Texas' most respected poets. Her "studio" is part of a converted walk-in closet so narrow she can almost touch the walls by extending her arms. To get into it, she has to walk around a large pool table in the den.

But Margaret Slack prefers it that way.

"I can come in here, close the door and not be distracted by anything," she explained.

It might be an unusual work place, especially when she could have any room in the large, comfortable home she shares with her husband, Joe. But the confining situation obviously works for her. Mrs. Slack earlier this year won first place in lyric poetry in a contest sponsored by the National Federation of State Poetry Societies.

Entries came from all over the United States and foreign countries. Mrs. Slack wasn't the only member of the Wichita Falls Poetry Society whose work the judges liked. Six other members of the Wichita Falls group also finished in the contest's top 10 in their various divisons.

These included Ann Moorehead, Mrs. Clark Gresham, Jennie Spray, Ruth Ruther, Candace Dimitri and Lou Gatlin.

Mrs. Slack said the Wichita Falls poetry group is especially active and serious about its work.

Despite her talent, Mrs. Slack said she has never published a book of her work, though she said a friend once had some of her poems bound in a one-of-a-kind book for her.

"I don't like to make the effort to be published," she said, explaining that publication requires constant revising, editing and perfect typing.

And to be honest, the longtime Archer City resident said she doesn't have the time all that would take. She said she has other irons in the fire. She is an accomnplished portrait and landscape painter. Her home houses a large collection of her hand-painted porcelain.

Her talent in this particular field has prompted numerous requests from friends for specially painted porcelain sets. But she has steadfastly refused all requests, explaining she doesn't like to "mass produce" her work.

"I'd go crazy painting one color on a bunch of dishes and then doing the same thing all over again with another," she said.

She recalled that as a child, her younger sister found some of her poetry in the bottom of her drawer, including a piece that had moved her to tears while writing it. The sisters read it aloud and "laughed themselves silly."

"I didn't forgive them for that for a long time," she said with a laugh.

De Lorean indicted with defrauding investors of $8.9 million

DeLorean

DETROIT (AP) — Auto entrepreneur John Z. De Lorean, who has weathered the failure of his sports car company, a cocaine conspiracy trial and divorce from his model wife, was charged Friday with defrauding investors of $8.9 million.

A federal grand jury in Detroit returned a 15-count indictment against the 60-year-old silver-haired businessman, charging him with racketeering and other federal crimes involving mail fraud, wire fraud, interstate transportation of stolen money, income tax evasion and causing false tax returns to be filed.

"I don't know anything about anything on this," De Lorean said when reached at his New York City apartment.

"He's discouraged. He's concerned and he feels somewhat harassed," said Howard Weitzman, De Lorean's attorney. But he added that De Lorean was optimistic that he will defeat the new charges, "much the same way he did in California," where De Lorean was acquitted last year of cocaine trafficking charges.

Arraignment was set for Sept. 27, but federal officials didn't request an arrest warrant. The maximum penalty for racketeering is 20 years in prison, $25,000 fines and forfeiture of any property acquired or maintained in the enterprise. The other charges carry lesser sentences.

The alleged crimes began in October 1978 and stemmed from the financial management of the collapsed De Lorean Motor Co., which produced racy, gull-winged, stainless steel sports cars at a Northern Ireland plant, the indictment said.

The former General Motors Corp. executive, who already has announced plans to begin a new sports car company, is charged with transferring $8.9 million from Pierson Bank in Amsterdam, Netherlands, to his personal account at Citibank in New York.

The indictment alleges the money was initially funneled from De Lorean Research Limited Partnership, which raised $18.7 million to develop the cars, to a Panamanian corporation, GPD Services Inc., and from there into various European banks, including Pierson.

De Lorean was charged in the indictment with using $7.5 million of the money to repay loans he had personally guaranteed for the purchase of Logan Manufacturing Co., a manufacturer of snow-grooming equipment in Logan, Utah.

The indictment said De Lorean used other money to pay off an $875,000 personal loan at Citibank, transferred $71,000 to his account at Community National Bank in Pontiac, Mich., for personal expenditures, bought $435,000 in Citibank commercial paper, which was reinvested and ultimately spent for personal use, and spent $28,000 on jewelry bought from Citigold Inc. of New York.

De Lorean Motor filed for protection from creditors' lawsuits under the Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act in 1982 and the case was later converted to liquidation under Chapter 7 of the act.

Subsequently, trustees for De Lorean Motor Co. brought suit against former company officials for $200 million, alleging that they diverted more than $26 million from the company for De Lorean's use or their own use.

At the very time De Lorean was seeking financial backing to save his company, federal authorities in Los Angeles charged that he conspired to distribute cocaine.

The government's case was buoyed by widely publicized videotapes of De Lorean calling a suitcase full of cocaine "good as gold" and using alleged drug code words in a hotel room.

De Lorean was acquitted last year, and a month later he separated from his wife of 11 years, television show host and former model Cristina Ferrare. She married ABC television executive Anthony Thomopoulos after her divorce became final in April.

When De Lorean left his position at GM, his avowed purpose was to teach Detroit how to build cars.

He spoke of building an ethical car which could last for forever. The De Lorean motorcar began rolling off assembly lines in Belfast in 1980, with $200 million in backing from the British government.

No more than a few thousand of the cars were produced before the company sank into financial trouble.

One of the cars was featured in the current box office hit, "Back To The Future," in which a California teen-ager travels to the past in a time machine made out of a modified De Lorean.

In a recent interview, De Lorean reflected on his failed company, his drug trial, his bitter divorce and his conversion to born-again Christianity.

Schools try high-tech truant officer

Computerized phone tattles on school-skippers

DETROIT (AP) — School systems across the country are beginning to unleash a high-tech truant officer on students who skip school, employing computerized phone systems that tip off parents when their kids cut classes.

Public school systems from Los Angeles to Bay City have begun using the hooky monitors in the past three years, said Dale LaPorte, vice president for operations for Atlanta-based Melita Electronics Labs Inc.

"It is a trend," LaPorte said Wednesday. "The schools are using it for dozens of applications, from checking attendance to reminding students about overdue library books."

The Los Angeles Unified School District last year installed attendance computers to serve 49 senior and 73 junior high schools, said spokesman Marty Estrin. "Many times parents may not be aware that their children are skipping school. This helps alert them."

The computerized checks also have boosted state aid to schools that receive money based on average daily attendance, LaPorte said, adding that schools in such states are his biggest customers.

"If you can verify absences, at least in our state, we receive credit for students who are legitimate absences," said Estrin. "It's the unexcused absences that we don't get credit for."

A monitor went on line this week in Bay City's Central High School, said assistant principal Timothy Tobin. "It's kind of a tattle-tale type thing. It calls home and tells parents their kid was missing that day."

The machines are the type commonly used for sales solicitations. Programmed for schools, they dial a truant's home number and play a recording saying the student was missing that day. The machine will record comments from whoever picks up the telephone.

The machine can tell if the caller hangs up and continues dialing if it reaches a busy signal, Tobin said. It also prints out the recorded response.

At Bay City, hourly attendance reports are reviewed at the end of each school day and compared with the list of excused absences. Telephone numbers of the unexcused students are then programmed into the system, which makes calls from 4:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. that day.

After considering the automated telephone systems, Detroit public schools decided last year to keep track of attendance by computer, but notify parents by mailing weekly records, said Mike Alberts, head of information systems.

School officials believe that system gives parents a more accurate picture of a students' attendance, Alberts said.

The Bay City school began leasing its $6,200 system for $500 a month this year, Tobin said.

Thatcher says British government to meet with Jordan-PLO delegation

WORLD

AQABA, Jordan (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain said Friday her government will meet soon with a delegation that includes two senior PLO officials.

She said the British "hope this will help the United States to follow our initiative and meet their own Jordanian-Palestinian delegation."

Mrs. Thatcher said Foreign Secretary Sir Goeffrey Howe would meet the delegation, and the Foreign Office in London said the meeting would be the first between a British Cabinet member and a Palestine Liberation Organization official.

Speaking at a news conference at the end of a five-day trip to Egypt and Jordan, Mrs. Thatcher said the London meeting would be soon, probably during October. She said the delegation would include two members of the PLO Executive Committee, Eliya Khoury and Mohammed Milhem.

Khoury is the Anglican assistant bishop of Jerusalem and Milhem is the former mayor of Halhoul on the Israeli-occupied West Bank. Both were expelled from the region by Israeli authorities and both were named to the PLO Executive Committee in November.

"We know Bishop Khoury and Mr. Milhem to be men of peace," she said. "They personally support a peaceful settlement on the basis of the relevant United Nations resolutions," a reference to measures implying Israel's right to exist.

The announcement by Mrs. Thatcher seemed to be a significant boost for King Hussein's efforts to keep alive his faltering peace drive. It comes little more than a week before he is to meet President Reagan in Washington.

Deputy Prime Minister Abdul-Wahab Majali and Foreign Minister Taher el-Masri will represent Jordan in the talks, Mrs. Thatcher said.

Under a Feb. 11 agreement between Hussein and PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat, Israel is offered peace in exchange for its withdrawal from all territory occupied in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war and for creation of a Palestinian state confederated with Jordan.

The United States has hesitated to meet a delegation of Jordanians and PLO-chosen Palestinians. Both the United States and Israel favor direct Arab-Israeli negotiations and United States officials have expressed doubt about the purpose of a preliminary meeting, as well as reluctance to meet delegates closely allied with the PLO.

None of the Palestinians proposed for the U.S. meeting holds a formal PLO position as senior as those held by Milhem and Khoury.

Mrs. Thatcher said the London meeting would not mean British recognition of the PLO.

"I don't think there's a great deal of time and I think it's very important that the first step goes ahead fairly quickly," she said, referring to the proposed U.S. meeting.

"After that, one hopes the PLO will find it possible to accept (U.N. Security Council resolution) 242 and its associated resolutions and to reject violence and that of course would bring all kinds of possibilities."

The announcement appeared to be a change in Mrs. Thatcher's position. She said Tuesday in Cairo that Britian would not meet with a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation until after it had met with the Americans.

But she made clear Friday she did not expect the same Palestinians to attend both meetings.

An Israeli official said Friday that Britain's decision was "counterproductive" and would hinder the search for Mideast peace.

Joggers, runners will be racing in 'Fitness for Life'

From Staff Reports

About 300 walkers, joggers and runners will be racing in a "Fitness for Life: A Celebration Under the Son" fun run at 8 a.m. today.

"Some will walk, some will jog and some will run five K (kilometers or 3.1 miles)," said the Rev. Charles Elliott, minister of activities at The First Baptist Church, sponsor of the race.

The race will begin on N Street between the church at 2104 W. Louisiana Ave. and Midland Memorial Football Stadium.

The race was preceded by a Friday night health-food banquet for the race's registrants and a lecture on food and nutrition by Dr. Dick Couey, professor of physiology at Baylor University in Waco, in the church's Fellowship Hall. Couey has authored fitness books, including "Happiness Is A Physically-Fit Christian" and "Building God's Temple."

After the race at 9:30 a.m. today, runners may undergo physical testings at seven stations in the First Baptist Church Activities Building across the street from the church. Testing will include checks for cardiovascular fitness, body composition to measure the percentage of fat and flexibility. Previously-taken blood samples will be analyzed.

Between 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. today, Couey will lecture on health and physical fitness.

At the church at 7 p.m. Sunday, Couey will talk on food, nutrition and physical fitness in his sermon "The Body Is the Temple of the Lord."

Turkey shoot doesn't involve city firefighters

An advertisement for a Turkey Shoot Sweepstakes being held today does not involve the Midland Fire Department, according to Fire Chief James Roberts.

Roberts said he has had several phone calls at his office about the turkey shoot. The event, to be held at FM 1788 and South Warfield, is being sponsored by the Midland County Fire Department.

"People thihk it's the Midland Fire Department and we have no connection with that," he said.

"God loves you and so do we at Golf Course Road..."

The 72-floor InterFirst Plaza towers is Dallas' newsest skyscraper.

Dallas' latest skyscraper has 72 floors

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Looking down from atop InterFirst Plaza, the landmark flying red horse that soars above the old Magnolia Building resembles a tiny and freshly sunburned grasshopper.

Bubble-topped Reunion Tower, a familiar sight to "Dallas" television viewers, appears no larger than a metallic bowling ball perched on a fat steel spike.

The Cotton Bowl could pass for a colored concrete marble, and Texas Stadium might be mistaken for a marshmallow disfigured by a thumbprint.

"On a really clear day, you can see the outline of Fort Worth," said Patricia Dillingham, a spokeswoman for InterFirst Plaza, 72 floors of uniquely crafted steel, concrete and mirrored glass.

Sure enough, an image of Fort Worth's skyline rises as a purple blur on the horizon some 30 miles to the west.

Proclaiming itself the "flagship of our city's skyscrapers," InterFirst Plaza is the newest and tallest addition to a Dallas skyline already bursting with architectural drama and high-rise reflective glass.

"One of the world's most distinctive office towers," contend InterFirst developers, claiming new standards of excellence in energy efficiency, space planning, safety and convenience, not to mention beauty. "... A towering symbol of the present and future vitality of Dallas."

What's more, it is merely the first phase of a $1 billion-plus development known as Dallas Main Center, which promises to include a twin 72-story office tower and an executive hotel.

So it is with exotic food, drink, music and typical Texas subtlety that InterFirst introduces itself to a business community that some consider just as worldly, if slightly less sophisticated, than those of New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

InterFirst earlier reported a record million-plus square feet of preleased space, almost half of it gobbled up by InterFirst Bank Dallas and its holding company, InterFirst Corp.

Executive management of the huge financial institution will occupy the 70th and 71st floors, but surrendered the top story of the $300 million building for a satellite and microwave transmission communications center.

Among the early occupants were eight law firms, attracted in part by the proximity of county and federal courthouses.

The silver-hued structure anchors the west end of downtown Dallas and rises more than 900 feet above the Trinity River. As the world's 14th tallest edifice, it offers a panoramic view of the city's physical and historical past, present and future.

Skeletons of even newer but smaller skyscrapers compete with the reflective browns, blacks, greens, golds and grays of older buildings, and all dwarf Dr. W.A. Criswell's First Baptist Church and Lee Harvey Oswald's Texas School Book Depository.

In projecting itself as a future landmark, InterFirst embraces a variety of expensive art works and unusual features in addition to its towering height. Not the least of these is a configuration that can accommodate 16 corner offices on each floor.

A 12-ton, 38-foot-tall red steel sculpture created by Russian-born Alexander Liberman guards the main entrance, and a tubular, suspended stainless steel sculpture by William Martin graces the rotunda.

Upper and lower lobbies house elevators and escalators, but are hardly pedestrian with their stunning blend of clear glass, stainless steel and pink granite along with a rocky stream, waterfalls and greenery.

Elevators feature hand-tied tapestry recreating famous French Impressionist paintings by Monet, Renoir, Gaugin, Redon or Dufy.

Muted classical music soothes passengers as the elevators whisk them up and down at speeds approaching 1,200-feet a minute.

A park-like "Tree Court" is the centerpiece of the retail esplanade and is 40 feet below a glass canopy rising from the plaza. Floating overhead are 10 multicolored, hand-painted fabric and steel sculptures by Ina Kozel.

Low slung Spanish granite retaining walls serve as rose-colored "benches" for people to sit on, endorsing the owners' contention that InterFirst "celebrates the street, welcoming and sheltering visitors.

EDITOR'S NOTE: "Karl Marx was a mighty prophet," said George Bernard Shaw. But "Das Kapital" never prophesied people's republics boasting Cadillacs, computer entrepreneurs and capitalist counselors. Here is an in-depth update on historic changes under way in the Marxist world.

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press

Karl Marx

He still looks at home in gray Moscow's Sverdlov Square, a bearded, fatherly figure hewn from granite, forever summoning workers of the world to unite.

But in People's Square in Shanghai, or along Budapest's Lenin Boulevard, or even on Avenida Marx in revolutionary Luanda, Angola, the 19th-century socialist sage Karl Marx might feel uncomfortable here in the late 20th.

A tide of change is rising through the one-third of the world "Made by Marx." Where it may crest is beyond foretelling.

In China, the Communists have "de-communized" the farms, setting hundreds of millions of peasants loose to reap their own profits. In Budapest, enterprising Hungarian businessmen are hiring private proletariats. In Africa, a socialist president who says he "made a big mistake" is handing nationalized plantations back to private interests. In other Communist-led nations as well, Marx's heirs are turning to capitalist tools to woo foreign investors and inspire their own workers.

The ambitious Chinese even talk of opening a stock market in the biggest of all people's republics.

A stock market? "For a socialist country, let's say it's — unusual," concedes American Communist Party economist Victor Perlo.

It's more than unusual, says Edward A. Hewett, a specialist in socialist economies at Washington's Brookings Institution.

"It isn't Marxism."

Judging just what is Marxist has perplexed the world ever since the original Marxist left it 102 years ago.

"Marx himself refused to give cookbooks for the development of socialism," West German scholar Gert Leptin noted in a New York interview.

In fact, much of the current change does not relate directly to Marx's theories, but to Stalinist centralized controls, a later application of basic Marxism.

The new Communist "cooks" are not just tinkering with recent recipes, however. They also are sinning against some commandments of Marx — the Marx who denounced the marketplace, condemned man's profiting from the labor of fellow man, and crystallized communist theory in one phrase: "Abolition of private property."

Again and again in recent interviews, those who follow socialist systems closely said Communist leaders are "groping," looking for any means to put new life into their struggling economies.

They are not about to take down the statues or rename the avenues — or surrender the absolute power their Communist parties now wield. But they are casting off some century-old canons.

The event to watch closely, the experts say, is next February's 27th Congress of the Soviet Communist Party, when new Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev can show whether he intends to open up the world's original Marxist state, a country whose stale economic system has kept the price of bread the same for 30 years, to the latest wave of innovations.

The roots of change actually can be traced to Moscow, the year 1957 and Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev, said Leptin, an economist at West Berlin's Free University.

"The first major step away from real socialism was when Khrushchev sold machinery from the state farms to cooperatives," Leptin said. "Up until then, control by the state was considered a higher level of economic and social development, higher than control by groups like cooperatives."

The movement soon stalled in the Soviet Union. But by the late 1960s neighboring Hungary was testing out its own brand of "goulash communism," a system of advanced worker incentives, decentralization and, eventually, limited private enterprise.

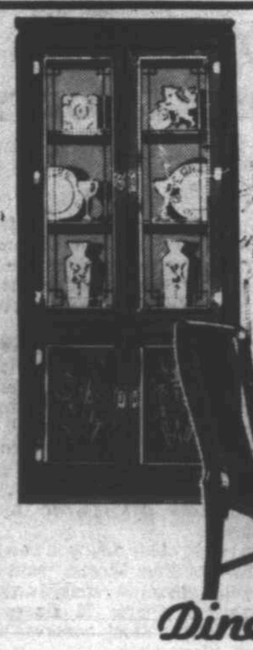

In 1976, the Communist parties of East and West Europe, meeting at a historic East Berlin summit, declared there were "many roads to socialism." China soon was taking the widest detour of all.

Beginning in 1978, two years after revolutionary patriarch Mao Tse-tung died, new leader Deng Xiaoping dismantled Mao's huge system of state-run collective farms. Today, 90 percent of China's more than 750 million peasants till their own land on long-term leases from the state.

Encouraged by the "Dengists," more than 9 million private businesses have opened in China — small restaurants, tailor shops and other services with up to seven workers. Local factories have taken on more market decision-making. Prices are being deregulated. Foreign investors have been invited in. Mao's successors have even imported Cadillacs, the car of the capitalists, as official limousines.

Something is working: The Chinese economy raced ahead at a breathtaking 13-percent rate in 1984, leaving discarded theory in the dust. Marx's ideas on capitalism were correct, the Chinese party journal Red Flag explained, but his "concepts of socialism were not so in their entirety."

East Europeans, living in the Soviet shadow, are not dropping the old ways as easily as the Chinese have shed their Mao suits. But trends are clear.

Army food builds lean-cuisine fighting machine

FORT STEWART, Ga. (AP) — An army may march on its stomach, but it won't get very far if overeating turns the stomach into a potbelly.

To help soldiers fight the battle of the bulge and salvage military careers threatened by chubbiness, the Army has created a special dining hall that serves only low-calorie foods.

"I would say it's true that an army moves on its stomach," said Chief Warrant Officer Gerald Cislon, the fort's food adviser, recalling the words of Napoleon. "But a healthy army moves on a nutritionally developed body. One that's not too fat."

Under a crackdown on corpulence begun several years ago, soldiers who do not meet established weight standards can be denied promotions, transfers and admission to training programs.

The Fit to Fight dining hall was started here in November by Maj. Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf to help soldiers fight food temptation. It has been continued under his successor, Maj. Gen. Andrew L. Cooley.

Where other military dining halls might offer burgers and fries, Fit to Fight features food that is low in sodium, fat and cholesterol.

Since fried foods are taboo, the cooks bake, steam or broil meats to eliminate excess fat. Vegetables are specially cooked to hold down calories and the troops receive smaller portions than they would in other dining halls. All items in the serving line are labeled with calorie counts and salt has been banished.

The menus, prepared by Fort Stewart's hospital dietitian, are designed to provide soldiers with 500 to 800 calories per meal.

The Army had programs to rehabilitate alcoholics and drug abusers and Schwarzkopf felt it should also create an environment to help overeaters, Cislon said. "If everyone was put out who is overweight, we'd lose valuable experience. This dining facility is a benefit to the Army as well as the individual."

Lt. Col. Gary Green, 44, whose battalion operates Fit to Fight and a standard dining hall, said the lean cuisine has helped boost job satisfaction and moral.

"There's a definite tie between physical fitness, morale and soldier productivity," said Green. "Our soldiers are starting to miss fewer duty days due to sickness and injury and I think they tend to perform better on the job because of the emphasis on physical fitness."

Spec. 4 Phillip Mitchell, 23, who weighs 175 pounds, said he has to work hard to keep his weight down.

"I eat there because the food tastes better than the regular dining facilities and doesn't have that many calories," said Mitchell, whose home is in Jacksonville, Fla. "They have a lot of salads."

Last month, the dining hall was opened to the post's civilian workers in a six-month pilot program for the Defense Department. If the special diet can reduce sick leave and provide other health benefits, the program might be extended to civilian employees at other posts, Cislon said. Civilians pay $3.65 for lunch.

Officials of the Gulfstream Aerospace Corp. visited the dining hall and were so impressed they established a similar eatery for workers at their plant in Savannah, he said.

Estacado soils Bulldogs' record

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK - Midland High had seen the story before, but this time the Bulldogs dug too deep a hole to climb out of as the No. 9 ranked Class 4A Lubbock Estacado Matadors turned MHS offensive mistakes into a 19-13 victory here Friday night at Lowrey Field.

The Bulldogs were following the script they had learned so well against Andrews. MHS had come-from-behind twice to take a 13-12 lead over the ranked Mats at the half, then bit a few bullets like Superman in the second half before Estacado's Dwight Myers intercepted a Matt Marcum pass and returned it 37 yards for the winning TD with 8:10 left in the game.

It was mistakes like this one that dealt the Bulldogs their first loss of the year. All of the Estacado points came basically from offensive mistakes.

ESTACADO TOOK a 6-0 lead in the first quarter when Jimmy Doss skirted the Bulldog defense for 12 yards, but that score was set up by a 29-yard punt return by Doss to the MHS 13.

The Mats took a 12-7 lead when Richard Ross intercepted another Marcum aerial and returned it 54 yards for a touchdown. Ross isn't one you want to throw to when Estacado is on defense. Ross runs the 100 meters in 10.4 and was a state finalist in the 100 at Austin last spring.

In all, the Bulldogs turned the ball over six times, giving Estacado two touchdowns and killing MHS' own offensive thrusts. It was a frustrating night because defensively, MHS did exactly what it wanted in the game.

"Our defense worked hard and did just what we wanted of it," noted MHS coach Doug McCutchen. "We made Estacado drive the ball and didn't give up the big play on defense. Estacado has scored this year on big plays and they really didn't get the big play against the defense. It all came off our own mistakes. Our kids played hard, but we made too many mistakes. I feel bad for our kids. This is one that I really think they wanted to win."

THE BULLDOGS couldn't put any points on the second half board as fumbles stopped every thrust goalward. For instance, the Bulldogs fumbled on the opening drive of the third quarter to set bad happenings in motion. In the fourth period, Anthony Adkinson broke open for a 42-yard run to get MHS out of a hole inside the Mat 15, but fumbled on the next play. Then the Myers' interception came on the next series when MHS was passing with a 13-12 lead in its own end of the field.

MHS took a 7-6 lead in the first period when the Bulldogs moved 82 yards in nine plays. Marcum hit tight end Billy Williams with passes of 15 and 37 yards to set up Mark Johnson's one-yard plunge and Williams' PAT put the Bulldogs in front.

Down 12-7 after Ross' interception, the Bulldogs punched in a score with 47 seconds left in the half on a six-play, 33-yard drive with Johnson getting the final two. That drive resulted from a fumble recovery by Richard Triplett at the Estacado 33.

Doss paced all rushers with 98 yards on 18 carries for the Mats while Johnson had 59 on 16 carries for MHS and Adkinson 58 in just four totes.

It must be noted that the MHS offense was hampered by a soggy field and a light rain all during the second half. McCutchen didn't use that as a crutch.

"We were playing on the same field as Estacado and they didn't make the mistakes we did," said McCutchen.

Midland's Burt Fisher made a key tackle on Estacado quarterback O.T. Thomas on a fourth-and-five at the MHS 12 to halt one Estacado offensive bid. Fisher also knocked Thomas loose from the ball while Triplett recovered at the MHS 33 to halt another drive. Triplett had two fumble recoveries.

The MHS defense always seemed to come up with the big plays. William Hernandez, Jake Madrid, James Campbell, Charles Comer, Steve Pruitt and Phillip Speight all came up with big plays in the game.

Estacado is now 3-0 with all the victories carrying the hides of 5A schools, Plainview and Big Spring included and should catch the attention of pollsters.

MHS, on the other hand, is now 2-1 and faces a road trip to Big Spring next Friday night to open the District 4-5A warfare. The Bulldogs must recover from this one in a hurry, knowing they could have, and maybe should have, beaten Estacado.

The Bulldogs won the statistic battle with 158 yards rushing and another 150 passing. Estacado had 184 rushing and 48 passing.

Eastwood outclassed

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland Lee quarterback Tuey Rankin didn't carry the football very often Friday night against El Paso Eastwood, but when he did it was extremely valuable for the Rebels.

On only three attempts, Rankin picked up a game-high 95 yards and scored three touchdowns, plus a two-point conversion, as the Rebels pounded the visiting Troopers, 53-7 at Memorial Stadium.

Rankin's first two touchdowns came on Lee's first two possessions on runs of 22 and 69 yards. The first TD capped a 10-play, 73-yard drive with 5:54 remaining in the opening quarter. Mike Little made it 7-0.

After Tommy Wood picked up four yards, Rankin rolled out and opted against pitching the ball to one of his trailing backs. Sixty-nine yards later Lee had a 13-0 lead and was well on its way to a blow out.

Rankin's 95 yards was only part of an awesome rushing display by the Rebels. In all, 10 different backs carried the ball 59 times for a season-high 502 yards. Add 90 yards passing and it was a 592-yard night. Rankin was perfect in his lone passing attempt, hitting Dexter Traylor for 14 yards and Rodney Johnson was 3-for-5 for 76 yards, including a 32-yarder to Dennis Sterling at the Trooper one-yard line as time ran out in the first half.

"I thought Tuey did a good job, he had an excellent ball game," said Rebel head coach Jack Tayrien. "He did a good job executing the offense and leading the ball club like he's supposed to."

When Tayrien was informed that Rankin only carried the ball three times (four counting the PAT run) and scored on each, he said jokingly, "I guess we goofed. We should have given him the ball more often."

As it was, there were enough Rebels scoring to make up that slight oversight on Tayrien's part.

Before the half ended, Tommy Wood scored on a 12-yard run and Rankin followed with his conversion. Chris Alexander added the final Rebel points on a 37-yarder. The kick failed, giving Lee a 27-0 lead.

Eastwood's only points in the game cut the margin to 20 with 1:52 remaining in the half. Trooper quarterback David Ortega burned the Rebels three times, two to flanker Edward Givens for 40 and 16 yards and the eight-yard scoring strike to Kirk Means. Matt Howard added the PAT.

LIKE THE first half, passing was the only way the Troopers could move the ball, but couldn't punch it into the end zone. Rebel defenders picked off four passes to neutralize Ortega's 14-of-36 for a 173-yard performance.

"Most of the passes were underneath passes," said Tayrien. "They only had one long one against us. We were trying to bend and not break. We didn't want to give up that many, but we did get four interceptions out of it."

Steve Rowland led the Rebels with two interceptions while Kevin Witt and Jay Roach added one each. Carlos Pina came up with a fumble recovery.

On the ground, Lee defenders allowed only 35 yards rushing in the first half and 71 for the game. The Troopers managed only three rushing first downs compared to eight passing.

RANKIN PICKED up his third TD of the game early in the second half, covering the final four yards of a four-play, 12-yard drive with 10:13 remaining. Rodney Sims followed three and a half minutes later with a 31-yard run. Little kicked both extra points.

In the fourth quarter, Joe Woodard scored on a two-yard run and Dennis Sterling on a 25-yarder.

"We were pleased to have the opportunity to use that many backs," said Tayrien. "When you get to use that many backs it helps in gaining experience.

One area Tayrien wants to work on is the Rebel kicking game where Lee gave up two of its' three fumbles.

"Two of those fumbles were on punts and that's what we have to work on," said Tayrien. "It was a little humid out their tonight. Tracy Mayfield (who fumbled both) wears glasses and they were fogged over a little bit. That's no excuse, he still should have fielded the ball. We can't afford mistakes like that."

Overall, Tayrien "thought we played pretty good. I'll have to wait to see the films. We were pleased with the effort and pleased with the victory. It wasn't perfect by any means. A lot of areas have got to be worked on."

Warning label on Tech games

Texas Tech returns to Jones Stadium tonight 2-0, which isn't quite as surprising as the way they got there.

Look in the wake of those Red Raider victories and you'll see the toll those two victories have taken...they are all there in baskets.

No, that isn't opposition players littered about, it's the fans who have suffered through the anxiety of two midnight come-from-behind victories.

If you are making the trip to Lubbock tonight, it seems only fair to warn that watching the Raiders could be hazardous to your health, if you tend the least bit toward myocardial infractions. Please don't ask me to explain what I just said.

North Texas should be a cinch No. 3 for the Raiders, but don't ask Oklahoma State, a runaway winner over Washington two weeks ago, and a 10-9 winner over the Denton Eagles last week, for confirmation.

If the Raiders continue to play as they have in victories over New Mexico and Tulsa, the chariot is going to turn to a pumpkin one of these Saturdays. However, not tonight.

Still, North Texas and 13 points looks like the conservative pick.

The SWC....

Rice plus 24 1/2 over Air Force— It's at Colorado Springs, but surely Falcons can't take Owls that seriously, can they?

Missouri plus 10 over Texas— Horns should win, but giving 10 points to a team that already has played a game is risky, even if it is a team that lost to Northwestern.

Texas A&M minus 15 over NE Louisiana— Aggies in a breeze while waiting for NCAA's other shoe to drop.

TCU minus 14 over Kansas State— Frogs catch Wildcats in the midst of a coaching change. Of course, Wildcats catch TCU in the midst of a major scandal.

Washington minus one over Houston— If you like Agatha Christie, this is the game for you.

USC minus 11 over Baylor— Trojans, easy winner over Big 10 favorite Illinois, may be back from NCAA exile.

The biggies...

South Carolina minus three over Michigan— Gamecocks favored? Catching Wolverines after Notre Dame game is good timing and it's at Columbia.

Maryland minus seven over West Virginia— Points should hold if Terps as good as everybody claims...and the foe isn't Penn State this time.

Michigan State plus 7 1/2 over Notre Dame- In a close neighborhood rivalry such as this, take the points and run.

Georgia plus one and a half over Clemson- Bulldogs on past reputation and integrity.

Virginia plus three over Georgia Tech- I have a lot of confidence in George Welsh.

Illinois plus 7 1/2 over Nebraska- They have to give the Big 10's pride and joy points?

Rutgers plus one over Army- No. 1 pulls an upset, unless the Do-Or-Die boys are looking forward to Penn State next week.

Pitt minus six over Boston College— the Eagles just aren't the same without Doug Flutie.

Iowa State minus four over Vanderbilt- Cyclones get Vandy at Ames, and how effective can a Commodore be in a cornfield?

The pros...

Dallas minus seven over Cleveland- Cowboys have something to prove, don't they?

Pittsburgh minus 5 1/2 over Houston- This looks like a terrible pick, but who knows how the men in stripes will see this one.

Denver minus six over Atlanta- I hate to give points, but this is Atlanta we're talking about.

Raiders plus three over 49ers- One of the day's choice games.

Cards plus one over Giants- Strictly a hunch play, but it is in Jersey.

Jets plus 5 1/2 over Packers- Unless a cold front hits Wisconsin unexpectedly.

Colts plus five over Lions- Detroit lets down after Dallas win.

Crane defeats Buffaloes, 35-6

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

CRANE - For head coach Ricky White, it was all a matter of getting the Golden Cranes offense untracked against visiting Stanton on Friday night.

It took two possissions and a pair of turnovers, but Crane finally did get its offense rolling and stampeded the Buffaloes 35-6 in a non-district contest.

After watching a fumble and an interception in two of their first three possessions, White's undefeated Golden Cranes found the mark with five unanswered first half touchdowns to jump to a 35-0 lead before the break.

Gerald Mitchell recovered from a fumble in his first carry to rack up 118 first-half yards and one touchdown, while quarterback Abel Sena bounced back from an early interception to throw three TD bombs before intermission.

IT WAS a combination that Stanton coach Dale Ruth could not counter, or find a way to stop.

"They threw the ball well and did a good job against us," said Ruth. "We got off to a good start, we were really getting after it, but then we started making some mental mistakes."

The Buffaloes came out playing a stunting, eight-man defensive front that seemed to give Crane some trouble. On the first Crane play from scrimmage, Mitchell dropped the pitch from Sena before he even took his first step and Stanton took over with its best field position of the half on its own 49-yard line.

But Stanton couldn't move the ball and the Cranes took over but once again failed to puncture the confusing Stanton set-up in its next two possessions.

"I felt we might have trouble with their eight-man front and with all the stunting they do, but we did a really good job against the stunts all week in practice," White said.

THE PRACTICE finally paid off for White when Mitchell started finding some holes in the Buffalo defense, busting for runs of nine and 28 yards to gestablish field position. Then fullback Cliff Wilson almost broke a long one before being hauled down from behind and held to a 16-yard carry.

Sena's first completion of the night, a 21-yarder to Tarpley followed, and moments later Wilson punched in the first touchdown of the night. The Golden Cranes were off to the races from there.

Sena completed five of 10 attempts in his stint in the ballgame, good for 146 yards. His first six-pointer went 47 yards to Dwayne Tarpley, the second a 28-yarder to Richy DeGraffenried, better known for his defensive play as the Cranes nose guard. The final touchdown pass was another 47-yarder, this time to Kenny Walker as time ran out in the first half.

"WE TRIED to open things up a little bit early, maybe we shouldn't have, but I wouldn't change anything now," White said after the romp. "Abel (Sena) threw the ball well, he's a good quarterback. And we just moved (Dwayne) Tarpley to split end because of his speed, and he's been catching the ball really well."

While Sena was finding his receivers all over the field, Stanton's passing whiz Kevin Glaspie found the Crane defense as stingy against the pass as Reagan County's Bobby Gunnel's did last week.

Glaspie was just one of eight passing in the first half as the Buffaloes could muster only one first down. In the second half, Glaspie fared a little better throwing 10 more times for 49 yards and a 27-yard touchdown pass to Mark Gonzalez. But Glaspie went down with a knee injury on the failed two-point conversion attempt. His status for the rest of the season was still in doubt.

The Cranes remained tough against the rush, allowing the Buffs just 83 yards on the ground for the entire game, and zero first downs rushing in the opening half.

THE LOSS was even tougher for Stanton to swallow as its two best athletes did not make it to the final gun. Wide out Derek Sorely went down in the first half after taking a blow in his Adam's Apple and was taken to the hospital. Reports indicated he would recover in time for next week. Glaspie's injury, suffered late in the fourth quarter, could be more serious.

Killeen delays Wood's 400th

BROWNWOOD (AP) — The Killeen Kangaroos delayed Brownwood's celebration of coach Gordon Wood's 400th career victory Friday night, edging the Lions 7-0 on Mike Murphy's 57-yard touchdown run with 8:13 left in the game.

Wood, the nation's winningest coach, started the game with a career record of 399-84-12. The veteran coach has won nine state championships, including seven at Brownwood.

Brownwood dominated the game with 18 first downs to Killeen's five and 273 yards to the Kangaroos' 159, but the Lions failed to score on first-half drives to the Killeen eight, 15 and 19 yard lines.

Brownwood drove into Killeen territory in the closing seconds but ran out of downs at the 23 yard line.

Wood's next opportunity to become the first coach to win 400 games comes Oct. 4 when the Lions travel Crowley.

Steers rumble by Plainsmen

BIG SPRING— Winless Big Spring took out its frustrations on Lubbock Monterey by scoring a 35-0 non-district win here Friday night as Danny Matthews scored two touchdowns to lead the Steers to their first win.

And the win was a lot more one-sided than the final score indicates. It was 35-0 at half.

Big Spring went ahead 7-0 in the first period on Matthews' seven-yard run and then the Steers stampeded to four second period touchdowns to salt the game away.

Danny Williams broke loose for 18 yards with 1:20 gone of the quarter. James Harlin went over from the one and then Matthews added a 14-yard run. David Shortes took a three-yard pass from Colin Carroll for the final TD.

Midland Temple Baptist scored in every period to defeat New Life, 25-6, Friday in Six Man football.

Fullback Joe Wasson scored three touchdowns and gained 160 yards in leading the unbeaten Eagles to their second win of the season. His scoring runs came from the 11, 13 and two yards out.

Temple's other score came on a 46-yard pass from quarterback Ely Kuhlmann to Jim Larsen and put Temple ahead to stay, 13-6, in the second period.

Defensively, Dyron Rotan and Jeff Manes combined for seven quarterback sacks as the Eagle defense held the Crusaders to one first down and minus yards rushing and passing.

Get tougher on drugs, Davis

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — If the man who built the Los Angeles Raiders into one of football's most successful enterprises ran all professional sports, drug-abusing athletes would face a much tougher road back.

"I think they need to do something tough; I don't mean rehabilitation," Al Davis, the Raiders' chief executive officer, said Friday. "I think tough action needs to be taken involving penalties, severe penalties. That's the only way you're going to create a deterrent."

During a 30-minute press conference, the outspoken owner said he thought the United States Football League had overreached. He also blasted National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle, who opposed his 1982 franchise move from Oakland to Los Angeles.

Drug jurors angry

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Federal court jurors who heard seven major league baseball stars testify about using cocaine said Friday they were angry, sympathetic and disillusioned with the players' off-field activities.

"I thought sometimes they were frightened on the witness stand. Sometimes they told the truth and sometimes they didn't. Sometimes they conveniently didn't remember things," said jury forewoman Betty L. Clay, 44, of Indiana, Pa.

"And sometimes they didn't remember things because they simply didn't have the brain-power to remember things," said Mrs. Clay, a Pittsburgh Pirates fan and a private nurse.

The U.S. District Court jury of nine women and three men found Philadelphia caterer Curtis Strong, 39, guilty on 11 of 14 counts of dealing cocaine to major league ballplayers.

Jurors interviewed had little dispute with the Justice Department's claim that Strong, a former clubhouse cook for the Philadelphia Phillies, was "a traveling salesman of cocaine" to major league ballplayers.

"I feel bad that he's going to jail. But if you do the crime, you've got to do the time," said Faith H. Hoskinson, 24, a hospital nurse from Georgetown.

"I don't believe Mr. Strong is the biggest pusher in Pittsburgh or Philadelphia," said David B. Irvin, 33, a Pittsburgh truck driver. "I think he's a small man who got caught up in it all. But he broke the law and I believe he did it."

During 14-day trial, seven professional ballplayers, dressed in business suits instead of baseball uniforms, sat on the witness stand just feet in front of the jurors to tell their stories of cocaine in the big leagues.

New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner says the umpires "did a terrible job for both sides" in the Yankees' recent four-game series against Toronto and proposes that blue-ribbon crews be used in future big series. The umpires who worked the four games at Yankee Stadium last weekend were Jim Evans, Nick Bremigan, Eugene Hendry and Dan Morrison. Steinbrenner suggested in future crucial series, Bobby Brown, the American League president, pick four umpires from a list of 10 provided by the contending teams, five by each...

Ted Turner told his Atlanta Braves he was "literally sick" about their losing season and ordered them to undergo a battery of conditioning tests. "Look at all the teams that do well. They're in good shape." he told his team during a meeting before Thursday's 15-5 loss to Cincinnati. "If you're not in good shape, who are you letting down? Your family, because you're not going to be able to make as much money ... the guys in here (the clubhouse), because you're not going to be able to play. The guys who aren't in shape hurt everybody."..

Tommy Cruz drove in four runs with a triple and a double as the Nippon Ham Fighters beat the Nankai Hawks 11-4 Friday in Japanese League...

Competing factions hoping to lure major league baseball to the Tampa Bay area have signed a statement pledging to make a united effort to obtain a team. The letter stresses that groups representing Tampa and St. Petersburg are willing to work toward solving local issues that have kept the two apart in their bids to build stadiums and attract a franchise...

General

Executives of Pittsburgh's four pro sports franchises the public must ultimately decide if, or how much, it will financially support the pro franchises in their region. "There's no reason for you (to care)...unless you want to enjoy the amenities in your city that professional sports bring," said Paul Martha, VP and general counsel of the Pittsburgh Penguins hockey team and the Spirit indoor soccer team. "Otherwise, go ahead and pay additional taxes and don't have hockey and soccer and baseball."..."It's a matter of choice. It's a matter of lifestyle. What do you want?" said Joe Gordon, Steelers' spokesman.

Akers in jeopardy?

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas Longhorns are starting their ninth season under Coach Fred Akers, and while university officials won't say Akers' job is in jeopardy, neither do they guarantee he will be around for a 10th year.

Texas opens its season Saturday night against Missouri, 0-1.

University officials say there is no magic number of wins Akers' team must achieve this year for him to keep his job.

Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds said he will treat Akers as he does every other Longhorn coach, evaluating him after the season.

Akers has a solid record at Texas, 73-21-2 since the 1977 season.

But 1984 worried many of the Longhorn faithful.

After defeating pre-season favorite Auburn and reaching No. 1 in the national rankings for two weeks, Texas collapsed.

The Longhorns lost four of the last five games. Texas suffered its worst bowl loss, a 55-17 thrashing by Iowa, in the Freedom Bowl. Off the field, a starter was arrested and charged with assaulting a police officer.

Dodds mail after the Freedom Bowl defeat brought what he estimated was an all-time high 30 negative letters. The major complaints involved the end of the season performance and team discipline, Dodds said.

Texas Tech seeks non-loop sweep

SWC Football

LUBBOCK- Going into tonight's date with North Texas State (7 p.m. at Jones Stadium), Texas Tech's 2-0 record is the best in the Southwest Conference and the Red Raiders are on the verge of sweeping their non-conference schedule for the first time since 1977.

No body is taking anything for granted, not after last gasp wins over New Mexico and Tulsa.

Quarterback Aaron Keesee engineered a five-play, 80-yard drive and a two-point conversion for a 32-31 win over the Lobos with 1:24 left.

Against Tulsa, Keesee pulled the strings on a 12-play 63-yard hike, passing to former Midland Lee back Tyrone Thurman from 20 yards out for a 21-17 win with only 11 seconds left.

In case you think things should be easier against the Eagles from Denton tonight, don't go counting any chickens. But for a missed 54-yard field goal in the last period against Oklahoma State in a 10-9 loss and NTSU would also be 2-0.

The Raiders' new flexbone offense is doing fine, producing 397 yards and 43 points in the last half of Tech's two starts. It's just that it takes a while to get cranked up, 10 points and 197 yards in the first half so far.

Tech and NTSU have met only twice, the last time in 1952 when the Raiders were a 34-19 winner.

ELSEWHERE in the SWC, Texas opens its season against 0-1 Missouri at in Austin. The Longhorns are 83-9-1 in openers and will be facing a team that lost to Northwestern, 27-23, in its opener last week.

Although Texas Christian opened the season with a 31-10 win over Tulane last week, after the suspension of several players, including All-America running back Kenneth Davis, tonight's game with Kansas State shapes up as a season's opener. It's the same for K-State, which will be under the guidance of a new coach after suffering two season-opening defeats.

Baylor (1-1) is at Southern California (9:30 p.m.). The Trojans beat Illinois, 20-10, in their opener two weeks ago.

Rice (0-1) is at Air Force (2-0) at 2:30 p.m.; Texas A&M (0-1) hosts Northeast Louisiana (1-0) at 6 p.m.; Arkansas, 24-19 winner over Mississippi, plays Tulsa (1-1) at 7 p.m. in Little Rock; and Houston (0-1) hosts Washington (0-2) in the Astrodome at 7 p.m.

SHORT TAKES- TCU's Jim Wacker calls his Frogs the youngest team in the nation. Last week 24 freshmen saw action against Tulane and 13 were true freshmen. After Thursday's revelations and suspensions, expect to see even more freshmen....Rice will be facing the nation's top scoring offense in AFA, 48-6 and 49-7 winners over UTEP and Wyoming...A&M's quarterback shuttle produced impressive numbers against Alabama last week, Craig Stump going 6-for-7 for 51 yards and Kevin Murray 12-of-20 for 158 yards...and no interceptions...Arkansas will be meeting Tulsa for the 29th straight year. The Razorbacks lead the series 44-15-3...Washington, last year's Orange Bowl winner, and Houston, last year's SWC champion and Cotton Bowl representative, are both looking for their first victories...The Huskies were a 16-7 loss to USC away from a national championship last year and ranked by some as No. 1 this year, but dropped out of the Top 20 after losses to Oklahoma State and BYU...Big question going into Texas' opener is the knee of running back Edwin Simmons, if it stands the gaff, let future opponents beware...Last time Baylor played on the West Coast was 1964, a 35-14 loss to Washington...Bears have split two meetings with USC, losing 17-8 in 1959 and winning 35-14 the next year...

Cowboys rule by TD

IRVING, Texas (AP) - The Cleveland Browns and Dallas Cowboys, two old rivals who used to battle for championships in the same conference, tangle Sunday in Texas Stadium with the Cowboys rated a touchdown favorite.

Cleveland is one of five National Football League teams with a series edge over Dallas. The Browns are 15-8 over the Cowboys, having lost 31-14 in 1982 in the last meeting between the two teams.

In 1974, the only other time Cleveland has been to Texas Stadium, the Browns lost 41-17.

The last time Cleveland defeated Dallas was 26-7 in 1979.

The Browns will have help at wide receiver for the game, although it's not certain whether Coach Marty Schottenheimer will use newly acquired John Jefferson. The Green Bay Packers dealt Jefferson to Cleveland this week.

The Browns are 1-1 under Schottenheimer, winning 17-7 Monday night over Pittsburgh after dropping a 27-24 overtime heartbreaker to the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Cowboys also are 1-1 after a 44-14 victory over Washington followed by a 26-21 loss to the Detroit Lions.

There will be curiosity until the opening kickoff at noon whether Dallas quarterback Danny White's passing hand will be in good shape.

Strong guilty on 11 of 14 drug charges

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A Philadelphia chef and "baseball junkie" was convicted Friday on 11 of 14 charges that he sold cocaine to major league players in a case the federal judge said demonstrated that some of the nation's sports heroes "have feet of clay."

Curtis Strong, 39, briefly the caterer in the Philadelphia Phillies' clubhouse, showed no emotion as the verdict was read following nine hours of deliberations over two days by a nine-woman, three-man jury. He faces a maximum term of 15 years in prison and a $25,000 fine on each count.

Meanwhile, Strong's flamboyant attorney, Adam Renfroe Jr., was sentenced to a 30-day jail term for contempt of court by U.S. District Judge Gustave Diamond. Renfroe said he would appeal both Strong's conviction and his own.

The judge admonished Renfroe for constantly ignoring his instructions concerning the type of arguments permitted during the defense counsel's fiery, 75-minute oratorial closing argument Thursday.

Renfroe, against the judge's instructions, argued that the jury should set Strong free to show that it didn't condone the government's granting of immunity from prosecution to the seven current and former major league players who testified against Strong.

David Irvin, a Pittsburgh truck driver and one of the jurors, said, "It was clear Curtis Strong was dealing dope," but that he believes the players who bought the drugs were equally as guilty.

"I think it's too bad something can't be done about them," Irvin said. "I don't believe that Mr. Strong is the biggest pusher in Pittsburgh or Philadelphia. I think he's a small man who got caught up in it. But he broke the law."

"I feel bad that he's going to jail. But if you do the crime, you've got to do the time," said juror Faith Hoskinson, 24, a nurse from Georgetown, Pa.

Strong, called "a traveling salesman of cocaine" by U.S. Attorney J. Alan Johnson, was convicted of selling cocaine on 11 dates from 1980-1983 to Los Angeles Dodgers infielder Enos Cabell, Cincinnati Reds outfielder Dave Parker, former Pittsburgh Pirates outfielder John Milner and Kansas City Royals outfielder Lonnie Smith. All played for different teams at the times of the drug transactions.

Bean beats gusty wind

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

Southwest Classic

ABILENE— Veteran Andy Bean, using the gusty 30-mile-an-hour West Texas winds to his advantage with monster drives, eagled the final hole Friday for a 5-under par 67 and a record 11-under par 133 for a one-shot lead after two rounds of the $400,000 Southwest Golf Classic.

Lurking in second place was Mike Reid, who fashioned a 6-under par 66 thanks to 10 one-putt greens for a 10-under 134.

Two shots back of Bean were 1983 PGA champion Hal Sutton, and former U.S. amateur champ Bill Sander, who had 67s for a 135 total, 9-under par.

Bean, who started the day tied for the lead with Steve Jones, Cranked 300-yard drives to set up easy wedges to long par 4s and irons to the par 5s on the wind-whipped 7,166-yard Fairway Oaks Golf Club.

Playing the 536-yard Par 5 No. 9 last, the 6-foot-4, 210-pound Bean carried a drive over 300 yards and drilled a 4-iron 230-yards to within 6-feet of the pin. He sank the putt for an eagle three to finish off the morning round which broke the old record of 9-under par for 36 holes held by three other players.

"The wind might be a blessing because the harder it blows the more it makes me concentrate," said Bean. "I was really concentrating and hitting my drive extremely well. I was outdriving my playing partners 50 yards. I was letting it out."

Bean's only bogey came when he three-putted the Par 4 No. 13 from 40-feet after stubbing his first putt. "It's hard to hit a putt fat but I did," said Bean. "I just flat hit the grass in front of the ball."

Bean, who hasn't won a tournament since the 1984 Greensboro Open but has won $153,004 on the tour this year, had three short birdie putts and holed a 20-footer for another.

Jones faded to a 2-over par 74 to finish at 140 — four under par and a tie with former Masters champion Ben Crenshaw, who had a one-over 73.

Reid said "It was exciting to have only 26 putts. The greens were great and rolling very true."

Sander's day was saved when he came within three feet of hitting a ball out of bounds on the 13th hole. He birdied the hole and said "that was a break. If the ball had been out-of-bounds I was looking at a double bogey six. It was a real boost."

TPA pros 36 holes away

GTCC Benefit

The touring pros are only 36 holes away from the High Sky Children's Ranch benefit at Green Tree Country Club Monday.

The Southwestern Classic at Abilene's Fairway Oaks concludes with 18 hole rounds today and Sunday and from there a contingent of 30 will head for Midland to play in the Pro-Am.

Once again the field will be highlighted by the Oklahoma State connection. In addition to Doug Tewell, Mark Hayes, Willie Wood and Danny Edwards will be in the field for the $50,000 in prize money.

Hayes, 36, plays out of Edmond, Okla., Oak Tree GC and has been on the tour since 1973. His tour victories include the 1976 Byron Nelson, Pensacola Open and the 1977 Tournament Players Championship. He was a collegiate All-America for two years and a member of the 1979 Ryder Cup team.

Wood, 24, also plays out of Oak Tree in Edmond and has been on the tour only since 1983. He won five major titles as a junior, played on the 1983 Walker Cup team and his nine collegiate victories at OSU brought him All-America and Outstanding Collegiate Player of the year accolades.

Edwards, 34, is another Oak Tree golfer and the native Alaskan has been on the tour since 1974. His victories include the 1977 Greater Greensboro Open; the Walt Disney World National Team championship with David Edwards in 1980, the Greensboro again in 1982 and the Quad Cities in 1983.

For relaxation and to divest himself from the pressures of tournament golf, Edwards drives race cars, professionally. In 1981 he won the Mideast Divisional point championship for Formula 3 cards, winning three of 11 races he entered.

Also expected Monday are ex-Midlanders John Adams and Bobby Nichols, the former PGA champion; and Tom Kite, who plays out of GTCC. Also in the field are Paul Azinger, Ronnie Black, Woody Blackburn, Mark Brooks, Rex Caldwell, Russ Cochran, Frank Conner, Bruce Crampton, Dale Douglas, Brad Faxon, Ed Fiori, Bill Glasson, Mark Hayes, Joe Inman, Barry Jackel, Jim Nelford, Mark Pheil, Tom Purtzer, Ron Streck, Leonard Thompson, and perhaps others.

The golfers will begin teeing off at 8 a.m. and tee offs will continue through 1 p.m. or so, which means play will last until around 6 p.m.

Holmes tries to match Rock's 49-0

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes will try and match Rocky Marciano's record Saturday night and keep Michael Spinks from becoming the first light heavyweight champion to win the heavyweight title.

It's an intriguing bout, which is being billed as "History — A September to Remember."

It could be remembered as the night Holmes equaled the late Marciano's 49-0 record on the 30th anniversary of Marciano's last fight — a ninth-round knockout of light heavyweight champion Archie Moore.

It certainly would be remembered as a great upset if Spinks could achieve what nine light heavyweight champions or former champions failed to do in a total of 13 attempts.

Spinks weighed in at an announced 200 pounds, 25 pounds over the light heavyweight limit. Holmes weighed 221½.

"I want glory from this. I'll get glory from this," said Spinks, the undisputed light heavyweight champion. Holmes officially is recognized as champion only by the International Boxing Federation, but generally is considered the premier heavyweight in the world.

What the oddsmakers think Spinks is going to get is a thrashing. The 35-year-old Holmes was a 6-1 favorite for the scheduled 15-round bout at an 11,192-seat outdoor arena at the Riviera Hotel and Casino.

HBO will televise the fight, which is scheduled to start at 7:22 PDT.

There also are two scheduled 12-round World Boxing Council title fights on the card. Cruiserweight champion Alfonzo Ratliff will fight Bernard Benton, and super featherweight champion Julio Cesar Chavez will meet Dwight Pratchett.

Carpentier, 172, was knocked out in the fourth round by Jack Dempsey, 188, at Boyles Thirty Acres in Jersey City, N.J., July 2, 1921.

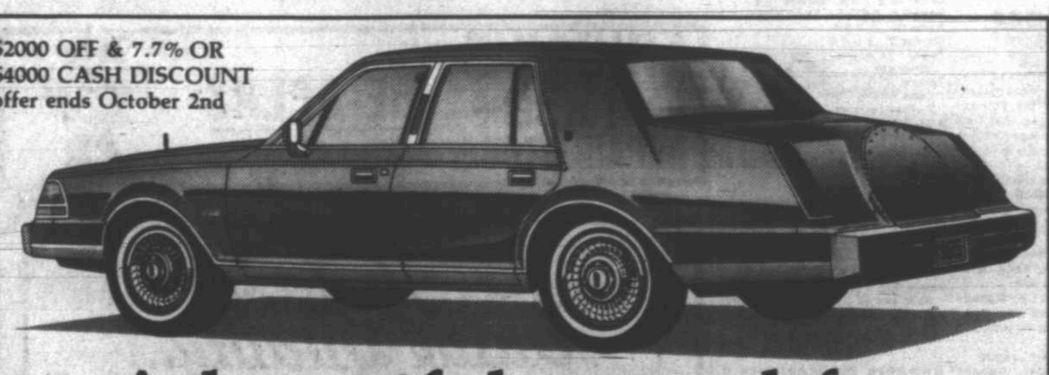

Conn, 174, although he said he actually weighed 169½ pounds, was leading on two officials' cards and was even on the third when he was knocked out by Joe Louis, 199½, at the Polo Grounds in New York June 18, 1941.

Carpentier and Conn, two good little men against Dempsey and Louis, two good big men.

The 6-foot-2½ Spinks will be a big little man.

Spinks reportedly actually weighed 199¾, but his weight was officially announced at 200.

Ken Norton all for national ring commission

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Ken Norton told a congressional subcommittee Friday he supports the idea of a national boxing commission to monitor fighters.

"I was very fortunate to be able to make the money I did and come out of boxing all right," said Norton. "But what about the individual who doesn't make it big in boxing. Where does he go after that?"

Norton, testifying before the House Subcommittee on Labor Standards, said the boxing commission should be set up to guard the safety of fighters and to establish a pension plan for retired boxers.

But Sig Rogich, chairman of the Nevada State Athletic Commission, said he was oppposed to the idea of a permanent commission and suggested a panel be set up for a period of only three years with the limited function of establishing medical guidelines for the sport.

"I think a federal commission, if enacted, could do one thing and that's safety reform," said Rogich. "If it had a sunset provision it might have a chance at passage."

The subcommittee met in Las Vegas a day before the Larry Holmes-Michael Spinks fight to hear testimony on two bills calling for enactment of a national boxing commission.

Montana Rep. Pat Williams, who is sponsoring one of the bills, said he is concerned the sport of boxing is in trouble because of a lack of regulation. Williams' bill calls for the enactment of the American Boxing Corporation, a quasi-public body that would supervise the sport.

"Like an old champion needing to retire, boxing doesn't know the trouble it's in," said Williams. "Boxing's ability to regulate itself has failed."

Williams used as an example the death of Duk Koo Kim, a South Korean who took a fatal pounding from former lightweight champion Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini in November 1982.

Williams said the World Boxing Association had Kim ranked No. 1 in the division, even though a Korean boxing federation didn't have the fighter anywhere on its list of top 40 lightweights.

"We need a way to protect the Duk Koo Kims of the world so they can survive to become No. 1," said Williams.

Rogich, who won praise from the panel for chairing the most stringent athletic commission in the country, told Williams, however, that the Kim death was an exception, not the norm.

"If you look at the percent of problems in boxing you'll find them far, far down the ladder as compared to other sports," he said.

Kansas City halts skid

Associated Press

Steve Balboni hit a grand slam in the first inning Friday night and the Kansas City Royals, locked in baseball's tightest pennant race, ended their four-game losing skid with a 5-1 viry over the Minnesota Twins.

The California Angels, who entered the night tied with Kansas City in the American League West, played host to the Cleveland Indians in a late game.

Balboni, mired in a 3-for-30 slump, hit a 2-1 offering from Bert Blyleven over the left-field fence for his 33rd home run of the year.

The loss halted the Twins' winning streak at five as Blyleven dropped to 14-16. Charlie Leibrandt, 16-8, scattered eight hits in 7 1-3 innings for the victory.

The Toronto Blue Jays increased their lead in the AL East to 6½ games with a 7-5 victory over Milwaukee while New York lost 4-2 in Baltimore.

"Everybody came to the park with nothing but business in mind," said Balboni.

"This game was important for us — real important. After losing four straight to Seattle, we knew we had to turn it around again. We had to stop it."

Blue Jays 7, Brewers 5

Jimmy Key pitched a one-hitter for seven-plus innings and Garth Iorg and Rance Mulliniks drove in two runs apiece as the Blue Jays cut their magic number for winning the AL East to 10.

Key, 14-6, retired the first nine Milwaukee batters before Paul Molitor hit his 10th home run of the season. Key left in the eighth with two runners on base and no outs, then Tom Henke and Gary Lavelle finished. Lavelle got his seventh save.

Orioles 4, Yankees 2

Cal Ripken and Eddie Murray rapped run-scoring singles as the Baltimore Orioles snapped a seventh-inning tie and sent the fading Yankees to their eighth straight loss.

The Yankees' losing streak is their longest since a nine-game skid in September 1982.

Mike Flanagan, 4-4, got two innings of relief help from Don Aase, who got his 13th save.

Tigers 6, Red Sox 2

Chet Lemon greeted Boston reliever Steve Crawford with a tie-breaking two-run single that highlighted a four-run eighth inning.

Jack Morris, 15-10, won his first game since Aug. 24 and stretched Detroit's winning streak to four games.

Wade Boggs, who had two hits in three at-bats, improved his major league-leading average to .373. With 221 hits, he is one shy of the Boston team record for one season set by Tris Speaker in 1912.

White Sox 10, A's 4

Ron Kittle drove in three runs, two with his 19th homer of the year, and Floyd Bannister, 7-14, pitched six shutout innings and won for just the second time in his last 11 decisions.

The victory was the 11th in 15 games for Chicago. The A's have lost 12 of 15. Their starter, Tommy John, 5-4, retired only 10 batters and was pounded for 10 hits.

Rangers 10, Mariners 9

Bobby Jones and Ellis Valentine led off the ninth inning with consecutive home runs. The Rangers twice came back from four-run deficits.

The game-winning blast by Valentine was his first as a Ranger and his first home run since 1983, when he played with the California Angels. The game featured 33 hits, including five doubles and eight home runs, off 11 pitchers.

Cardinals 5, Expos 3

Cesar Cedeno and Terry Pendleton tripled consecutively down the right-field line in the eighth inning, breaking a 3-3 tie. Todd Worrell, 2-0, pitched two scoreless innings for the victory.

Trailing 2-0, the Expos tied it in the fifth on starting pitcher Dan Schatzeder's two-run homer, his second home run of the year.

Pirates 7, Mets 5

R.J. Reynolds broke an 11th-inning tie with a bad-hop single over Mets first baseman Keith Hernandez, keying a two-run rally. Reynolds then stole second and scored on Sid Bream's single.

Cecilio Guante, 4-5, worked two innings for the victory. Jose DeLeon gained his first save in his second relief appearance this year. Bill Latham, 1-2, was the loser.

Pittsburgh's three-game winning streak is its longest this season.

Reynolds and Johnny Ray hit run-scoring doubles in Pittsburgh's three-run seventh inning, giving the Pirates a 5-2 lead, but the Mets scored three unearned runs in the bottom of the inning to tie the score.

Cubs 3, Phillies 1

Ryne Sandberg hit a two-run homer that supported six-hit pitching by Reggie Patterson and Lee Smith.

Patterson, 1-0, recalled from Iowa of the American Association on Sept. 3, pitched into the ninth inning, gave up five hits, struck out three batters and walked one. Smith finished for his 30th save.

Reds 5, Astros 3

Pinch-hitter Max Venable's double broke a 2-2 tie and Eddie Milner's single drove in two more runs in the four-run Cincinnati sixth that snapped Houston's nine-game winning streak.

The Reds won their sixth straight game and their ninth in 11.

Rookie Glenn Davis hit his 17th homer for Houston.

Baseball roundup

Brewer opens three-stroke lead

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Gay Brewer fired a 67 to take a three-stroke lead in the PaineWebber World Seniors Invitational golf tournament Friday while Arnold Palmer and Roberto DeVicenzo tied a tournament record with rounds of 66.

Brewer, at 9-under-par 135 midway through the event, had birdies on the first three holes of the 6,841-yard Quail Hollow Country Club course to break away from Bob Toski and Jim Ferree at 6-under.

"I played almost a perfect round of golf," said Brewer. "Today's round was about as well as I can play."

Ferree needed putts of 31 and 35 feet to stay in contention as he put together his second 33 on the back nine in two days.

"I felt like the Easter Bunny looking for my ball in the high rough in the early round," Ferree said.

Toski fashioned a bogeyless 2-under-par 70 to tie for second, overcoming putting problems that had plagued him earlier this year.

"My best lesson came from my wife Monday night," said Toski. "She admonished me for being down on myself."

Positioned for a charge were defending champion Peter Thomson, Palmer and Miller Barber, who shot a seocnd-round 67. Barber has finished no worst than third in the past four years at Quail Hollow, including a 1981 victory.

"It's always been a good course for me," said Barber. "I've hit the ball a lot more solidly today than I have in a long time."

Palmer, DeVicenzo and Thomson are tied at 3-under for fourth place.

A double bogey on the 17th hole marred a good outing for Thomson while Palmer and DeVicenzo finished strong after opening round 75s.

"I've had to play my way back into contention many times because of outside commitments," said Palmer. "After the opening round I changed putters, which I'm not likely to do tomorrow."

Builders create limousines fit for 'red carpet' treatment

NUEVO LAREDO, Mexico (AP) — As if to defy the very principles of construction, a limousine builder takes a perfectly good car and destroys it.

"The first thing you do is take all the upholstery out of the car, then you take a jig saw and cut the body, chassis and everything," explains Carlos Allen of Eagle Allen Executive Automobiles, a limousine factory just 30 blocks from International Bridge No. 2.

After this ruthless destruction, the rebuilding begins, Allen says.

First comes the reinforcing of the chassis, then the addition of side posts, floor, side panels, roof, every detail down to the veneered interiors, some complete with television and dial-a-drink wetbar.

The Eagle Allen factory is scattered throughout a few rough buildings along an unpaved street. The place is something of a labyrinth of workshops, but here skilled limousine builders — some of them true masters — toil away the days on cars literally fit for kings.

Among the Eagle Allen output, which averages one finished car a day, has been a royal falcon hunting limousine, specially designed to raise up on its tires in order to pass through desert brush.

Most all of the work is done by hand. By working on the border, the company has been able to take advantage of low-cost labor.

"The cars being made at the border are much more ornate," Allen said. "A job like this could not be done in the states. It's a hand-built product to its utmost. No detail is left until it's perfect.

"To obtain that kind of standard you must have a viable labor cost. If you did this in Santa Barbara, it would cost you 14 times as much," he said.

Allen came to Nuevo Laredo in 1969 from Mexico City where he first started building cars in 1933.

When he moved to the border, eight of his craftsmen came with him and five still work for him. One of them, now about 45, is "the master coach builder. He is the genius of all of them," Allen said.

In coach building, it often takes a worker 10 years to reach the level of a master, Allen said.

"They all come in at the lowest level and they teach each other. They're corrected by a group leader and the group leader is corrected by the foreman. The foreman is corrected by the plant manager and the plant manager has to respond to god — that's me," Allen said with a laugh.

Most Eagle Allen limos begin with a Lincoln body. The roof is cut off and replaced with a fiberglass and metal combination and raised 3½ inches above the normal roof line.

"You have both the strength of fiberglass and the structural stability of the metal," Allen said.

WE'RE HURTING.

Saving lives can be very expensive. The costs of our disaster relief and other humanitarian programs keep mounting. And we can't afford to come up short.

Please help.

Bonsai is the Japanese art of cultivating dwarfed trees and shrubs. Skillful gardeners uproot the plants on a regular basis and trim the roots back into a ball. That causes the tree not to grow in any direction but to become older. When we fail to cultivate a support system of prayer, people, and church participation, our spiritual growth is stunted. Don't let that happen to you.

From siding to main line

Among railroaders the "high iron" is paramount. That's the main line. That's where the action is. And every nerve in a railroad system is dedicated to keeping traffic moving swiftly and safely along the "high iron."

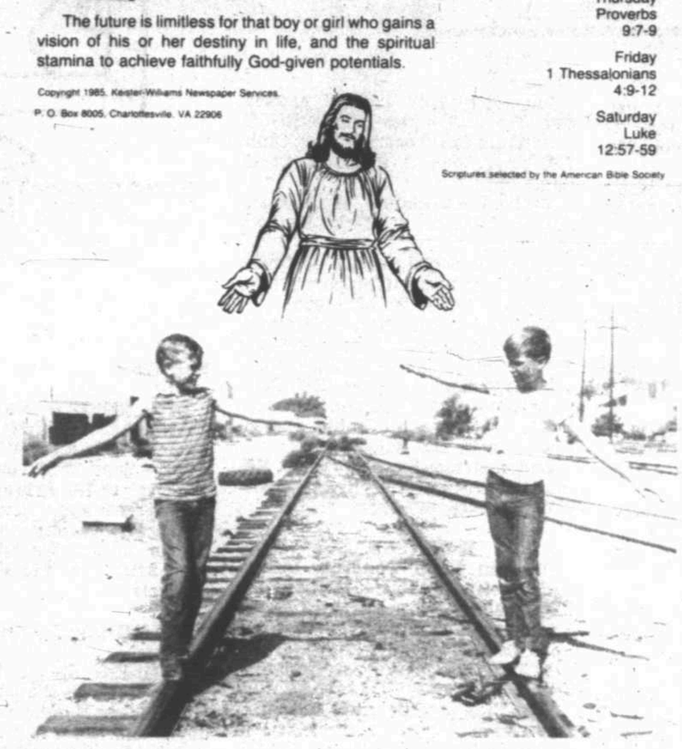

Yet sidings are important, too — for waiting . . . for coupling . . . for making up the trains that will roll on the "high iron."

There are lots of kids on sidings!

The Church depends on you — parents, leaders, citizens in this community — to bring them where the main line begins.

The future is limitless for that boy or girl who gains a vision of his or her destiny in life, and the spiritual stamina to achieve faithfully God-given potentials.

El Pasoans can't do much besides wait

AP Laserphoto

Ruth Arauza of Abilene, who just returned from a vacation in Mexico City, displays a copy of a Mexican newspaper with its report on the earthquake.

EL PASO (AP) — Though separated from neighboring Mexico only by the Rio Grande, many residents of this border city felt they lived worlds away Friday as they tried unsuccessfully to reach relatives in earthquake-ravished Mexico City.

"Ever since yesterday, when I heard about the earthquake, I've tried to call, tried to find out something," said Carmen Castillo, 55. "But all the lines are down. They say there's no way to get through."

Mrs. Castillo, an assembler with Rockwell International, said four of her cousins live in downtown Mexico City, one of the areas hardest hit Thursday by an earthquake that measured 7.8 on the Richter scale of ground motion.

Communications with Mexico were crippled by the earthquake when the central microwave tower in the capital collapsed and caught fire. The tower carries the bulk of telephone, telex and television circuits.

The Lindavista telephone exchange that handles long distance circuits also was damaged, leaving central Mexico isolated from the outside world and U.S. citizens with friends and relatives south of the border helpless.

"I don't know what to do," lamented Mrs. Castillo. "We just have to wait, I guess. I just want to know if my relatives are OK."

Edgardo Flores Rivas, the Mexican consul general in El Paso, said his office was inundated Friday with telephone calls from people seeking information about their Mexican relatives.

Flores said some communications links had been established by the American Red Cross, by ham radio operators in the United States and by Aeromexico airlines in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

But, he said, "It's now practically impossible to reach the people who can reach Mexico City because their lines are all busy."

Flores said he was encouraging El Pasoans to bring a list of their relatives in Mexico to the consulate. The names and telephone numbers were being passed on to ham radio operators and to Aeromexico personnel, he said.

"It's not much, but it's about all we can do right now," Flores said. "Most people here are finding they're just going to have to wait until they can call again or until they hear from their relatives."

Javier Colmenero, communications director with the Catholic Diocese of El Paso, said he discovered Thursday afternoon that "waiting is the only answer."

Colmenero, who moved from Mexico to the United States 14 years ago, said he has several relatives, including his grandmother, in Mexico City.

"We tried calling over the telephone, then tried through friends in Corpus Christi with ham radios, then tried the (U.S.) State Department and so far, we're still blank," he said.

Colmenero said he considered flying to Mexico City, but determined "it wouldn't be a wise decision because so many people are trying to do that and once you get to Mexico City, it's probably chaos."

Flores said he was trying to discourage El Pasoans from going to Mexico to search for relatives, saying, "It will just make things worse."

An Aeromexico spokeswoman in Ciudad Juarez said that because the airline's computers were inoperable, no reservations were being accepted.

"People just have to go the airport and try to get on," she said. "There are long, long lines."

Relief efforts in the United States were being coordinated by the American Red Cross.

Colmenero said El Paso Bishop Raymundo Pena had called for a special collection to be taken Sunday. The donations are to be given to the Red Cross for relief aid, he said.

"It's strange," Colmenero said. "We're so close, but there's so little we can do."

Houston emergency officials contact Mexico via ham radio operators

HOUSTON (AP) — Worried Houston residents with relatives in earthquake-ravaged Mexico City were turning to Houston's Office of Emergency Management to find out the condition of family members.

Joaquin Martinez's mother lives in the Mexican capital and his mother-in-law was there on business Thursday when the quake hit.

"It is terrible not to be able to telephone," Martinez said. "I heard it was a real big tragedy, and that only some parts of the city were affected, but you don't know which parts."

International phone lines still were out Friday, but Martinez knew his mother and mother-in-law were safe because Houston emergency officials were using amateur radio operators to contact their counterparts in Mexico.

The Mexican operators in some cases were able to telephone people within the country and then relay condition reports to worried relatives in Houston.

"I didn't get to talk to them or anything, but it's still unbelievable," Martinez said after hearing that his relatives were fine. "No charge or anything."

Richard Hawkins, an emergency communications officer, said many of the Mexican radio operators were powering their units with car batteries and gasoline generators because normal electric power had been interrupted.

Red Cross officials in Houston were advising people that because of the problems with communications, it would be best for people with relatives in Mexico City to wait until they heard from relatives there.

Photographer reports on quake scene

By ED KOLENOVSKY
Associated Press Photographer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — I was suprised at the amount of traffic on the streets.

From the airport, it looked like the population in that part of Mexico City, at least, was going about a regular day's work.

As our plane prepared for landing, the only hint of trouble was the plumes of smoke coming from the downtown area.

Otherwise, there was no more haze than usual for Mexico City.

Once downtown, the damaged areas were roped off, although I had no trouble walking under the ropes to do my business.

In the background you could hear the sirens of ambulances and emergency vehicles screaming down the roads all through the downtown area.

I saw no panic. I saw no bodies. But you must remember that I arrived several hours after the quake hit.

At almost every downed building, particularly where they knew it was an apartment building, or at one of the numerous small hotels, the workers were furiously digging.

I saw one apartment building flattened, and another small hotel across the street that also was flattened. Rescue workers were digging through these, obviously seeing if there were any survivors.

There were reports of some shouting from the apartment buildings. I never heard any, but the rescue workers said there was some shouting in the rubble.

Numerous fires were burning. We also had heard on Mexican radio that there had been numerous gas explosions at different buildings.

So Mexico City was worse than I expected. I really didn't expect buildings of tall concrete just to be dropped like that. I knew they could sustain cracks and broken windows, but to actually see them dropped, like by a concrete crusher, I did not expect that.

Teen shoots assistant principal, another student

HOUSTON (AP) — A 16-year-old boy pulled a gun and fired into the lunchtime crowd in a high school cafeteria Friday, wounding the assistant principal and striking a fellow student, authorities said.

Marvin S. Webster, 33, assistant principal at Langham Creek High School, was flown by helicopter to Hermann Hospital in critical condition with a gunshot wound to his right side, Harris County Sheriff's Detective David Graham said. Webster was undergoing surgery Friday evening, he said.

A 15-year-old boy, whose name was not immediately available, was taken to a north Houston hospital and treated for a gunshot wound in his right foot, Graham said.

The youth who allegedly fired the shots was in custody, Graham said, but investigators have no motive for the shootings.

According to witnesses, about 12:20 p.m. the teen-ager pulled a .357-caliber revolver from his jacket and fired at Webster. The teen-ager then shot at a student, but missed and hit the 15-year-old boy, witnesses said.

"He took a gun from his jacket and yelled, 'Hey, Mr. Webster.' When Mr. Webster turned around, there was a blast and fire coming out of the gun," said a student, Jerry Hitchcock.

Oilfield explosion kills one

VIVIAN, La. (AP) — A Jefferson, Texas, man was killed early Friday in an oilfield explosion, the cause of which was not immediately known, said the Caddo Parish Sheriff's Department.

Sheriff's spokesman Richard Dunn said Morgan G.Moore, 37, employed by Hart and McFarland Petroleum Production Co., apparently was checking the level of oil in a group of three oil tanks when the explosion happened.

Dunn said Moore died instantly in an inferno that charred an area about 100 feet in diameter. He said one of the tanks contained an estimated 125 barrels of oil and a second was empty. The amount of oil in the third tank was not known, Dunn said.

He said the force of the explosion also destroyed the victim's pickup truck.

Houston children get AIDS

HOUSTON (AP) — Health officials have confirmed that two Houston children apparently contracted AIDS from their mothers, who are prostitutes.

A 65-year-old Florida woman got AIDS after receiving massive blood transfusions at a Houston hospital, the first case reported since local blood banks instituted a screening program in February 1984 to eliminate high-risk donors.

"I don't think it's an indicator the system is failing," said blood bank spokesman Bill Teague. "We continue to believe the blood supply is safe."

According to Health Director James Haughton, three children so far have contracted the disease, which destroys the body's immune system and leaves it helpless to infection.

A 9-month-old girl died earlier this year. A 2-year-old boy is still alive and has not been hospitalized, officials said. Both their mothers were prostitutes, officials said.

Earlier this year, a 3-year-old girl died after receiving contaminated blood transfusions.

The Florida woman received 52 units of blood and blood products during two operations in April and July 1984 at a Houston hospital.

Earthquakes can turn solid ground to slush

WASHINGTON (AP) — Buildings solidly constructed on firm ground can find themselves with unstable feet of quicksand in an earthquake, scientists said earlier this week.

The little-known process of soil liquefaction — in which the shaking of an earthquake causes the land to lose its cohesiveness and behave more like slush — was the focus of a day-long seminar by the National Research Council.

"Soil liquefaction is a concealed hazard. It is underground, so we don't see it. And also, the public is not aware that soil liquifaction is a very distinct hazard during earthquakes," said George W. Housner of California Institute of Technology.

"The problem is particularly important for critical facilities such as nuclear power plants and earthen dams," he observed.

Housner, chairman of the council's Committee on Earthquake Engineering, presented a detailed report on soil liquefaction in which a broad panel of scientists urged close attention to the problem in earthquake-prone areas and proposed increased research into methods of reducing the potential damage.

"Any progress we can make in understanding this phenomena...is of significant importance," research council President Frank Press said in opening the meeting.

He noted that engineers have made significant progress in designing buildings to survive the stresses of earthquakes.

"But it didn't do any good" during a quake in Niigata, Japan in 1964 because while several large apartment buildings survived the quake, subsequent soil liquefaction caused them to tip over, Press said.

One of those buildings leaned over some 60 degrees, T. Leslie Youd of Brigham Young University said. Fortunately, it leaned over slowly and residents were able to climb out their windows and walk down the side of the building to safety, he added.

Soil liquefaction is most common in loose, sandy soils that are saturated with water. While these soils may easily hold buildings when undisturbed, sudden sideways forces such as from a quake cause them to compact and then begin slipping about, the scientists explained.

And, they observed, while a building may seem to be placed on firm ground, there may be unseen layers of saturated sand beneath that can turn into a liquid unexpectedly.

As much as 10 percent of the damage recorded in a 1971 earthquake in California's San Fernando Valley has been attributed to soil liquefaction, Youd explained.

He said it also was a major factor in the great San Francisco quake in 1906, when underground soil movement ruptured water lines, thus preventing firefighters from battling the blazes that subsequently overwhelmed the city.

The loss of bearing strength, as seen in the Japanese case when the buildings toppled over, may seem the most spectacular manifestation of soil liquefaction.

However, other results can also pose serious threats, Youd said. For example on a steep slope, liquefaction can lead to a landslide and can result in failure of earthen dams. And on level areas, strips of loose soil can occur, resulting in a spreading and movement of the land and underpinning bridges.

Gilbert surprises injured girl

Gilbert

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Actress Melissa Gilbert of television's "Little House on the Prairie" visited an 8-year-old Oregon City girl critically injured last week in a car wreck that killed her father.

Erin Riley, daughter of Portland Police Officer James R. Riley, 37, suffered a spinal injury and cannot move her arms or legs. She is breathing with the help of a respirator.

Ms. Gilbert's surprise visit Thursday was the work of Erin's aunt and the secretary to the Portland Police Bureau chaplain.

"Just to see her smile — that's why I came here," the 21-year-old Ms. Gilbert said about the half-hour visit.

Haid

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Actor Charles Haid said Sylvester Stallone's popular "Rambo: First Blood, Part Two" is "entirely unrealistic" and "the shame of our industry."

Haid, 42, who plays Officer Andy Renko on television's "Hill Street Blues," said the movie is "an irresponsible fantasy." Rambo is a Vietnam vet who returns to that country on a rescue mission.

Haid, a Vietnam veteran, was in Madison on Thursday to film a Public Broadcasting System program about Vietnam vets.

The show, entitled "A Program for Vietnam Veterans...and Everyone Else Who Should Care," will be broadcast on PBS stations on Veterans Day. Haid leads a cast of 18 veterans who share their memories of the war and discuss ways to stop future wars.

PARIS (AP) — Violinist Yehudi Menuhin had some advice for constestants in the Yehudi Menuhin International Violin Competition.

"Stand tall like a palm tree," Menuhin encouraged. "Flexible, not rigid. And remember, the violin is held on a cushion of air."

In an interview, Menuhin, 69, said: "It's not a do or die, bloodthirsty competition with one winner who steps over dead bodies. I created this competition as an educational experience with real exchanges between the contestants and the jury."

The two-week competition was won Wednesday night by Hu Kum, 22, of China.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Economist Art Laffer, opening his campaign for the Republican nomination for U.S. Senate, says workers now under age 40 shouldn't collect Social Security until age 70.

He said at a news conference Thursday that for the short term, the Social Security system is taking in more funds than it needs. He said he would vote to use some of those funds to remove current benefit penalties against recipients who continue to work after age 65, and to repeal the "marriage penalty" in benefits.

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Rob Sweetgall, who walked 11,200 miles across all 50 states in a day less than a year, continues to preach his message of exercise. "If just 1 percent of the people respond to my walk around America, if just one out of every 100 people decide to stop smoking, lose weight and start exercising, then I'll have changed 1½ million people," he said about the recent walk.

On Thursday, Sweetgall, 37, was in Boulder as one of two opening speakers for the Pedestrian Conference.

His topic: "Walking the USA."

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Arlene Violet, a nun for 23 years and the nation's first elected female attorney general, is negotiating to write her autobiography, Random House said.

Ms. Violet, 42, who left the Sisters of Mercy to run for political office, will write the book with Martha Smith, a columnist for the Providence Journal-Bulletin.

Robert D. Loomis, a vice president New York's Random House, said the company approached the attorney general earlier this year about publishing her memoirs.

Random House hopes to publish the book next year, he said.

LONDON (AP) — Crown Prince Alexander, exiled heir to the Yugoslav throne, is to remarry at the Serbian Orthodox Church in London on Saturday, a church official said Friday.

Alexander, 40, will marry Greek divorcee Katherine Batis, seven months after his divorce from his wife of 12 years, Princess Maria Gloria of the Spanish royal family.

Nenad Petrovich, chairman of the Serbian church's governing council, said the prince has never visited his homeland. The communist regime that took over Yugoslavia abolished the monarchy in 1945, the year Alexander was born, and banned members of the royal family from entering the country.

MERIDIAN, Miss. (AP) — J.W. Kemp, mayor of "just a sleepy little Southern town," says he's unsure of the best way to honor Susan Akin, the hometown girl who is Mississippi's fourth Miss America.

"We're going to put up billboards. We're going to have Susan Akin Day on Oct. 17, with a parade and maybe a little ceremony that day," Kemp said. "But I told our officials that they should tell me what else to do."

Kemp said he was thinking of changing the city's theme from "Meridian, Everything You Want It to Be" to "We Compete." He said Miss Akin, by her example, proved the new theme to be true.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The lead singer for the heavy-metal rock band Motley Crue was ordered Friday to pay nearly $3 million to victims of an alcohol-related car accident as part of a plea bargain.

Vincent Neil Wharton, 24, also was required to spend 30 days in the county jail, beginning next June, and to continue performing 200 hours of community service, which his lawyer said has included benefit concerts and anti-drug and alcohol speeches.

"I feel a sentence like this benefits society," said Wharton's attorney, Michael Nasatir. "It's an unusual case because you have a young man with an enormous potential to reach teen-agers. He speaks their language."

Wharton pleaded guilty in July to charges of manslaughter and drunken driving in connection with a Dec. 8 Redondo Beach collision that killed one man and injured two other people.

He was ordered to pay $1.8 million to Lisa Hogan, 18, of Rancho Palos Verdes, who was critically injured and spent weeks in a coma after the accident.

The other victim, Daniel Smithers, 20, will receive $700,000, while $200,000 will go to the estate of Nicholas Dingley, 24, who died in the head-on crash.

Dingley, a drummer for the band Hanoi Rocks, was Wharton's passenger. After the crash, Wharton was found to have a blood-alcohol level of 0.17 percent. It is against the law in California to drive with a level of 0.10 or higher.

In passing sentence, Superior Court Judge Edward A. Hinz Jr. praised the district attorney's office for what he termed a courageous decision to seek the unusual sentence rather than traditional jail time.

"(Wharton) is doing everything he can and seems to be legitimately sorry for what happened — the guy who was killed was one of his good friends," said Deputy District Attorney Roger Kelly.

Cars and passersby, right, go by a building that is draped with curtains from windows after it was reduced to rubble in Thursday's earthquake in Mexico City. Rescue workers, far right, pass a jug of water to other workers on the inside of this demolished hotel as they look for victims.

Mexicans await word on survivors

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexicans tears running down their cheeks waited helplessly in front of collapsed buildings while rescue workers tugged at the rubble in a search for their loved ones.

People crowded in front of the metal gates of the city's largest medical complex, awaiting word on the whereabouts of family members hastily evacuated from badly damaged hospital buildings.

A man who fled a collapsed downtown hotel sat staring at the wreckage more than 12 hours later and insisting others were still alive in the flattened structure.

Those were some of the scenes following Thursday's earthquake that rumbled through the heart of Mexico City.

Asked for a death toll, the city's mayor, Ramon Aguirre, replied, "I would not dare give a number."

He said an estimated 1,000 people were buried under collapsed buildings.

The death toll was expected to be far greater than the nearly 500 lives lost in last November's natural gas explosion in a poor part of the city.

The latest destruction was spread over a wide area of the metropolis.

"It's incredible," said rescue worker Juan Carlos Christy. "It's like a big monster came over all the city. It's like being bombed or in a war."

For the survivors, the hardest part was waiting for rescue workers to pull back collapsed walls, ceilings, pipes and furniture in search of their kin.

In Colonia Roma, one of the hardest hit areas, Juventino Benito Hernandez and his wife, who was clutching a dust-covered Bible, sobbed in front of the wreckage of their apartment building.

Their three children were under the debris. The two boys, aged 8 and 3, were feared dead. Rescue workers had heard their 2-year-old daughter crying.

Hernandez said he and his wife left for work before the quake occurred. When he heard the news, he rushed home. "I called for my children but there was no answer," he said.

Looking at the rubble, he said, "We have nothing."

At the city's huge medical center, Maria de Jesus Garcia de Santillan sobbed that she couldn't find her husband, a heart patient.

She and dozens of other Mexicans pressed against closed gates at the complex, begging hospital employees for word of their relatives.

Thousands of patients at the complex of eight hospitals had been hurriedly transferred to other hospitals in the city. Those less seriously ill were sent home.

Police and army troops, carrying rifles, were posted at the gates and allowed only employees and ambulances to enter.

Signs posted on the fence told relatives of patients to go home and stay close to radios, telephones and televisions for news.

Ruben Gomez Leon said his mother was scheduled to arrive at home at 1 p.m. but more than two hours later, she was still missing.

Gloria Flores Diaz, an obstetrical nurse, was working when the building began to shake.

"Someone yelled, 'It's an earthquake,'" she recalled. "It was very easy to get out but I almost suffocated from the dust. It was very difficult to get the patients out."

She said there were injuries in her building and she feared some died. Authorities, however, said no deaths occurred at the medical center

IMF may change decision to cut off Mexico loan

WASHINGTON (AP) — An International Monetary Fund move to cut off loans to Mexico might be reassessed in light of the devastating earthquake that will make it even harder for that deeply indebted nation to meet its obligations, international financial sources said Friday.

The IMF had reportedly been poised to withhold a $900 million installment due Mexico in early October because of that nation's failure to meet economic austerity terms of the loan agreement.

The agency refused to make any public comment on the situation.

But, amid cries of bad timing from Congress and from international economists, the board of the 149-nation organization is likely to reconsider the move to cut off funds, according to sources who spoke only on the condition of anonymity.

The IMF will probably agree to renegotiate terms of the loan to give Mexico the same kind of flexibility that was given Chile after a major earthquake struck that country last March, the sources said.

Chile was allowed to run a higher national deficit than first stipulated so that it could divert funds to needed reconstruction efforts.

The damage of Thursday's earthquake to Mexico's economy has not yet been calculated. But, like Chile, the nation will need to shift money into major rehabilitation projects, economists agreed.

Mexico, with a total foreign debt of $96 billion, is the world's second-biggest debtor, after Brazil.

At issue is the final installment of a $3.4 billion loan the IMF made to Mexico in 1983. The loan carried numerous strings, requiring Mexico to reduce government spending, bring inflation and interest rates down, and to spend more of its revenues in servicing its debts.

"Clearly, the earthquake will make things more difficult for Mexico and increase the urgency of the need for funds down there," said John Williamson, a senior fellow at the Washington-based Institute for International Economics.

inal loan)," Williamson said.

Actually, the IMF move was not a final decision. The cutoff of funds would not become official until early October, when the $900 million installment was due.

Activists denounce U.S.

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Demonstrators threw paint and smoke bombs during a reception hosted by the U.S. consulate, a police spokesman said Friday.

About 40 activists entered the reception hall late Thursday, threw paint and smoke bombs, then left before police arrived, said police spokesman Klaas Wilting. He said no one was injured and only minor damage was caused.

He said the activists left leaflets signed by the "Committee Against the American Beast," a group previously unknown to authorities.

The leaflets denounced "American involvement in Nicaragua and South America," Wilting said.

The World Court in The Hague has been hearing testimony this past week in Nicaragua's charge that the United States violated international law by supporting rebels fighting the Sandinista government.

Red Cross plane hits mine

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A light plane chartered by the International Committee of the Red Cross struck a mine while landing at a central Angola airstrip, and a local employee who rushed to help was killed by a second mine, the Red Cross said Friday.

The aircraft was badly damaged but the 19 passengers, including five officials of the all-Swiss International Committee and 14 local employees, were unhurt, the organization said in a statement.

The plane was landing at Chitembo airstrip in the Bie region of Angola's central highlands when it struck the mine Wednesday, according to the statement.

Red Cross spokeswoman Catherine Peduzzi said the organization suspended its operations in Bie for safety reasons. Food and medical aid was continuing in Huambo and Benguela provinces to people displaced by fighting between government troops and rebels, she said.

Israelis probe complaint

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli army is investigating complaints that soldiers harassed several Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and forced at least one of them to kiss a donkey, the military command said Friday.

The incident allegedly took place in Hebron, where two Israeli soldiers were stabbed, one fatally, on Sept. 3. As a result, the army enforced its patrols in the predominantly Palestinian city.

"As soon as we started hearing reports about the man being forced to kiss his donkey, we started investigating and we appointed a special officer to look into it," said a spokeswoman for the military command, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Martial law protested

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Thousands of people demonstrated Friday in nationally organized protests on the eve of the 13th anniversary of martial law. The military said soldiers opened fire on one group of protesters in self-defense, killing 14 people.

Nearly 200 people were reported to have been arrested. It was the bloodiest demonstration under President Ferdinand E. Marcos' 20-year rule since opposition leader Benigno Aquino was killed in Manila in 1983, witnesses and authorities said.

"The unfortunate incident happened because our men had to protect themselves," said Brig. Gen. Isidro de Guzman, regional military commander, in a television interview.

Glemp meets with U.S. churchmen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church aims to make life in communist Poland "more human" for common people, and the U.S. government could help by lifting economic sanctions that are harming Poles, Polish Cardinal Jozef Glemp said Friday.

Glemp, who has asked Polish government leaders to lift their own ban on the Solidarity union movement, also defended the right of free association during a day of speeches, religious ceremonies, meetings with U.S. Catholic leaders and sightseeing in the nation's capital.

The religious leader's comments on political issues were much more muted than his recent charges in Poland that Marxism was "based on the notion of force" and that his nation's communist leadership "postpones the final confrontation" with the church only as "a strategy... caused by circumstances and not good will."

On Friday, the third day of his U.S. trip, Glemp told a news conference: "It is known that Poland is now in the realm of socialist countries due to the decision of the three powers after the war" — a reference to the division of Europe after World War II.

"We belong to this bloc, but also in this communist bloc the church is active and activity of the church aims to make human life more human," he said.

His most specific recommendation for government action concerned the United States rather than Poland. He asked for elimination of sanctions which the Reagan administration has said it will lift only when the Polish government eases what U.S. officials see as a repressive grip on the nation.

Polish Cardinal Jozef Glemp celebrates Mass at St. Matthew's Cathedral in Washington, D.C., Friday. Glemp also met with U.S. Catholic leaders and toured the city's monuments.

"From the very beginning I was of the opinion that these sanctions or restrictions were unjust toward the Polish nation," Glemp said. "The rupture of economic collaboration and scientific collaboration is of great damage to the Polish people."

Still, he said he had no plans to meet with U.S. officials to press the point.

Though he is considered to have considerable political weight in mostly Catholic Poland, Glemp said, "I am a churchman and not competent to undertake political discussions."

Earlier, on the subject of free association, he called Jesus' disciples a "colorful and diversified" group, and he said, "With this group, Our Lord demonstrated a basic human right, the right to be together."

Glemp called such a right "this law of social life," and said, "The right to be together entitles those who wish to associate for good reasons to join different social organizations."

His remarks, during a Mass at St. Matthew's Cathedral, made no mention of Solidarity or of Poland's communist government, which has banned the free trade union.

Glemp said in an interview in Warsaw last week before beginning his week-long American trip that he has asked Polish communist leader Wojciech Jaruzelski to lift the Solidarity ban and to free political prisoners.

He also said the U.S. government should lift remaining economic sanctions against his nation because they hurt Poland's people.

However, Glemp, who is himself a major political force in Poland as spiritual leader of 34 million Roman Catholics, has carefully steered clear of political references during te first half of his American visit.

He refers to the trip, which will take him to Detroit on Saturday, as "a pastoral visit" to meet with U.S. church leaders and thank them for aid sent to Poland.

In his remarks at St. Matthew's, where Pope John Paul II, a fellow Pole, preached six years ago next month, Glemp said: "In recent years my people have experienced some disruption in the balance of producing and distributing goods. This has happened at both the national and international level."

Senate panel votes to extend cigarette tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee voted Friday to extend the 16-cent-a-pack federal tax on cigarettes and impose new taxes on snuff and chewing tobacco as part of a plan to reduce the federal deficit by $38 billion over the next three years.

The package also includes reductions in payments to doctors and hospitals for treating Medicare patients; an end of revenue-sharing with cities and counties, several narrow tax increases and — as a payback for the higher tobacco taxes — a whole new government price support program for tobacco farmers.

Also attached to the catch-all bill is a program of assistance for workers and companies adversely affected by competition from imported products. Financed by a fee of up to 1 percent on imports, the program would, for example, give eligible workers tax-free vouchers for up to $4,000 of retraining costs.

After voting the spending cuts and tax increases, the committee found it had generated about $250 million more savings than it was required to — and proceeded to divide the extra money among members' pet social programs.

The committee voted down efforts to raise tobacco taxes even higher in an effort to discourage young people from smoking, dipping or chewing. But the key to winning pledges of tobacco-state support for the taxes was the new support program for tobacco farmers.

That program would replace one that is financed by assessments on farmers, and under which the government buys tobacco that cannot be sold for a minimum price. The farmers' assessments — and government stocks of surplus leaf — have grown so large that many farmers of talking of abandoning the program.

The plan approved by the committee — and supported by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chairman of the Agriculture Committee — would shift part of the cost of price supports to the tobacco companies. In return, they would get the right to buy supluses at cut-rate prices. If it works as expected, price-support levels would drop and U.S. tobacco would become more competitive in world markets.

The Finance Committee, which has no jurisdiction of such farm legislation, was stymied for three days because Democrats objected to consideration of such a sweeping measure about which most knew little or nothing. But the roadblock was removed after the Agriculture Committee Thursday night approved a new farm bill — for non-tobacco crops — that influenced two Finance Committee Democrats, David Pryor of Arkansas and David Boren of Oklahoma, to vote for the tobacco measure.

The Finance Committee adopted the tobacco package without a recorded vote. On the price-support portion, Sens. John Chafee, R-R.I., Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., Max Baucus, D-Mont., and Bill Bradley, D-N.J., voted no.

"This is not a very seemly occasion," Moynihan complained of the procedure. And even Chairman Bob Packwood, R-Ore., joked that his next move would be to offer an amendment on President Reagan's "Star Wars" defense program.

The cigarette tax was doubled to 16 cents in 1982 as part of a deficit-reduction plan. Under that law, it is due to drop back to 8 cents on Oct. 1. The House Ways and Means Committee already has voted to keep the tax at 16 cents and to earmark 1 cent per pack for tobacco price supports. But the House package does not impose taxes on snuff and chewing tobacco.

Taxes on those products were repealed 20 years ago on grounds they had a disproportionate effect on lower-income people. The Finance Committee bill would result in a tax of about 2 cents on a tin of snuff or a three-ounce package of chewing tobacco.

The extended cigarette tax and the new levies on smokeless tobacco would bring the government about $5 billion over the next three years.

About $22 billion of the deficit reduction in the Finance Committee plan would come from changes in spending programs, principally Medicare and revenue-sharing. The tobacco tax is the biggest item on the tax-increase side, which totals about $16 billion over three years.

Senators threaten to defy veto warnings

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's trade policies came under new challenge Friday as senators threatened speeded-up action to aid the import-battered textile and shoe industries in defiance of White House veto warnings.

A textile rebellion expanded into a shoe uprising at mid-afternoon when senators from Maine and South Carolina agreed on a strategy to tie import quotas for their home-state industries to an obscure compact on U.S. ties to the Micronesia atolls of the Pacific.

The textile bill, vanguard of a protectionist wave in Congress, became the primary focus of the politically charged debate over the nation's $150 billion trade gap and job losses caused by imports. It eclipsed for the moment jockeying between the parties over broader trade issues.

"I am prepared to move the textile bill on the Micronesia compact," Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., said. If that failed, he said, he would seek to attach it to "any other possible bill that hits the desk."

Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said such a move would guarantee lobbyists descending on the Capitol en masse in hope of harnessing the Micronesia compact as a vehicle to choke off other imports.

"I assume that the first train up here is going to be filled," Dole said. He said, however, that he remains a textile bill supporter.

Within hours, shoe-state senators said they had reached agreement to combine forces with textile lawmakers when the Micronesia bill came up.

Sen. George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, described the arrangement as "a natural alliance between two similar industries." He and Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, had been pressing for such an agreement.

"The deal is in on the shoe thing," confirmed an aide to a textile-state Democrat, who asked not to be quoted by name.

Reagan, rejecting a recommendation from the U.S. International Trade Commission, last month denied import relief to the non-rubber footwear industry. The shoe bill, at that point on the back burner, immediately gained momentum as Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee's international trade panel signed on as a co-sponsor.

Meanwhile, the White House announced that Reagan would make a speech on trade policy Monday morning. Spokesman Larry Speakes said the address will help to spell out administration efforts to "promote American exports and assure an international climate of fair trade."

Dole had said Thursday night that the Micronesia measure could come up Friday. The Senate devoted the day instead to debate on extension of the Superfund program to clean up toxic waste sites, and trade action was shelved until next week.

The textile measure, focus of a Reagan administration drive to damp a protectionist brushfire in Congress, cleared its first hurdle Thursday, winning approval from the divided trade subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee on a voice vote in a closed-door meeting.

The White House is threatening a veto if the measure reaches Reagan's desk. U.S. Trade Representative Clayton K. Yeutter told businessmen this week it would bring on "substantial retaliation" against U.S. exports and wreck the 1974 Multi-Fiber Agreement on global trade in textiles and apparel.

The measure, supported by textile and apparel associations and two major labor unions, would roll back imports — by 25 percent to more than 40 percent, industry analysts say. Ways and Means Committee aides said they were still calculating the extent of the proposed rollback.

Proponents say the tightened quotas are needed because imports flooding into the U.S. market,primarily from five East Asian nations, have cost 300,000 jobs over the last five years.

"With textiles and apparel the question is not free trade versus or lack of modernization," Hollings said in comments relayed through his office. "This textile bill simply enforces quotas that have been agreed to by most of the textile- and apparel-producing world."

Harnessing the Micronesia bill as a vehicle for the import quotas would mean bypassing the Senate Finance Committee's international trade subcommittee, which is still considering the textile and shoe measures.

Four Republican senators said they would filibuster to block the bill. It is co-sponsored by more than half of the Senate and, thus, should have sufficient support to pass.

FarmAid organizers worry about weather

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — FarmAid organizers worried about the weather Friday but said everything was ready but the lighting and sound for Sunday's star-studded concert intended to raise millions for America's troubled farmers.

"This project is at least on schedule, if not ahead of schedule," said Jim Skilbeck, special events coordinator for Gov. James Thompson, who helped acquire the University of Illinois football field for Sunday's concert.

The biggest problem may be getting the weather to cooperate. The National Weather Service forecast temperatures Sunday in the 50s and 60s with a good chance of rain.

Rain or shine, the concert will be carried live to 25 million households on cable TV's The Nashville Network and portions of the show will be broadcast on hundreds of radio and television stations across the country.

FarmAid, modeled after the Live Aid concert to help Africa's hungry, is designed to raise money for counseling the nation's hard-pressed farmers and spreading the word about their plight. Experts say at least 25 percent of America's growers are in serious financial straits.

Nearly 80,000 ticket-holders began to descend on this heartland college town for the 14-hour benefit and its lineup of 50 rock, county and blues headliners, including concert organizer Willie Nelson, the Beach Boys, B.B. King and Billy Joel.

'Born Free' author still proud of his lion pride

By CHARLES T. POWERS
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

KORA NATIONAL RESERVE, Kenya — East Africa once abounded with legendary specimens of willful individualism, men and women who went their own ways, followed their own instincts and said to hell with what other people thought of them.

There are not many of those characters anymore. Africa's political independence, the advancing forces of modernity, the lengthening reach of government bureaucracy — all have helped to drive such people to ground, to retirement, to their memories and memoirs.

The spectacle of George Adamson, 80 years old and still out in the raw African bush with wild creatures eating out of his hand, seems to offer some mild, possibly temporary assurance to those who fear the extinction of this old style of untrammeled spunk. If some people think, and some do, that Adamson is a little bit nuts, well, it's no skin off his deeply tanned back.

"I'm doing what I want to be doing," he says, taking a contented draw on his pipe as he offers a peanut to the squirrel sharing his luncheon table.

Adamson still lives in a thatched-roof house in this remote corner of Kenya's bushland, a 500-square-mile reserve of tangled thorn and jagged comifora trees. He still tends his lions. He passes his days feeding his tame birds and squirrels, tossing camel meat to the lions and amiably tolerating a steady stream of wildlife buffs and nature pilgrims who make the trek to his camp less to view the wild game, which is more easily visible at a dozen other locations in Kenya, than to get a look at the man himself.

For it is George Adamson who represents the truly endangered species of Kora.

Adamson's name is familiar to those who recall the 1960 best-seller "Born Free," an account written by Adamson's late wife, Joy, of their successful struggle to return their pet lioness, Elsa, to a life in the wild. The book spawned two others ("Living Free" and "Forever Free"), a popular movie and a treacly hit song that quickly became a standard of Las Vegas crooners and high school choruses.

All that seems a long time ago, and in more recent years, Adamson has taken his place as one of the true eccentrics of the country, the man with the controversial — not to say Quixotic — notion of returning tamed lions to their natural wilderness habitat.

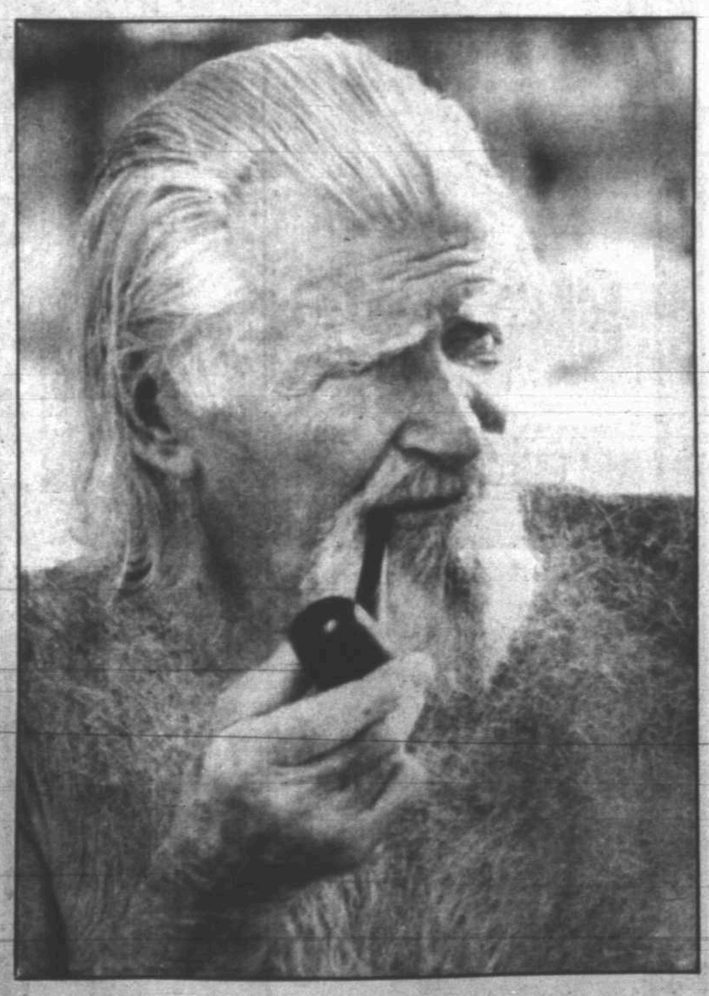

He is a man with scores of friends, all of whom treat him with a sort of proprietary protectiveness, seeing to it that planes flying up to the landing strip hacked out of the rough Kora bushland carry fresh supplies of food and drink. The stream of visitors is endless and many of his closest friends seem to feel that Adamson may be done in more by the strain of having so many guests than by the rigors of the bush or the lions that live around the fenced enclosure where he makes his home.

And yet Adamson welcomes all, emerging from his one-room house with a smile and a firm handshake. He dresses in baggy shorts and sandals, and his white hair reaches almost to his bare shoulders.

"Would you like some lunch?" he asks.

Along with four African helpers, Adamson lives at Kora with his brother, Terence, 78, who suffered a stroke last year and complains bitterly that his legs "are just damn useless anymore."

The lions do not usually appear until late in the afternoon. There is Koretta, a third-generation Kora lion, about 8 years old, five of her 3-month-old cubs, and two of her older-female cubs, about 18 months old. Altogether, about a dozen lions are believed to live in the reserve, all but a few of them offspring of the 16 lions that George Adamson has returned to the wild here in the past 15 years.

George Adamson, 80, became a household name with the 1960 best-seller "Born Free," and the subsequent movie and song.

"There isn't much game for the lions around here now," Adamson explains. "It was pretty much wiped out by the drought last year. Koretta would have a pretty hard time surviving with those cubs unless I gave her some food."

In the late afternoon, the two older cubs approach the camp, in their slow, regal gait, from opposite directions. Koretta, her five scampering cubs tumbling behind her, appears out of the tall grass and thorn trees at the foot of the towering rock that looms up in front of Adamson's compound.

Adamson opens the gate and from a bucket tosses the cats chunks of camel meat. The lions maul it about in the dirt, then settle down under the trees to eat. Adamson and his guests, a reporter and four weekend visitors from Nairobi, sit for tea, prepared by the African cook, and watch.

George and Terence Adamson were born in India and British-Irish parents and in 1927 came to Kenya, where their father tried, and failed, to run a coffee farm. After a few years in various unsuccessful business ventures, George became a Kenya game warden.

George and his wife separated in 1970. (In 1980, Joy Adamson was killed, apparently by one of her African workers, at her Kenyan camp, where she also worked with lions.)

Adamson worked as a technical adviser on the film "Born Free" and later took three of the lions used in the movie and set them free in Meru National Park. When one of the lions mauled the game warden's son, Adamson was asked to leave.

By this time, Adamson had retired from the Kenya Wildlife Department, which had employed him for 25 years, and in 1970 he rented the 500 square miles of Kora from the Tana River County Council and moved his operations here. Since then, the Kenyan government has turned the area into a wildlife reserve and has allowed Adamson to stay on as a sort of unofficial resident warden.

He lives on his pension of about $700 a month, plus about $600 a month from his wife's estate. Out of those funds and the modest donations received by the Kora Wildlife Preservation Trust (set up in the United States, Britain and West Germany), Kora manages to keep functioning.

It has not been easy, or without controversy. Some wildlife experts have long been skeptical of Adamson's program, arguing that no lion is as dangerous as a lion that has become accustomed to close contact with humans. Such lions, they argue, lose their fear of man and are, in fact, more likely to attack. Lions that have been fed by man, they say, are also more likely to attack domestic livestock, thereby encouraging herdsmen to destroy the lions for feeding on their animals.

The critics (some of whom have known and liked Adamson for years and are reluctant to voice their criticisms publicly) were given ammunition by several incidents around Adamson's camp. Shortly after Adamson moved to Kora, one of his African assistants was killed by the same lion that had mauled the game warden's son at Meru. It was the third attack involving that lion, named Boy (a star of the "Born Free" movie), and Adamson was forced to shoot it.

Six years ago, Terence was badly mauled by another lion. After that, the Wildlife Department halted Adamson's release program. Koretta and her cubs, in effect, are the end of the line of Adamson's lions at Kora.

Adamson acknowldges the criticism but argues that his program has been a success. None of his lions, he points out, has attacked a stranger; in other words, they have not gone on to become man-eaters but have proved a danger only to the people who have worked around them and, perhaps, become careless about their presence.

In any event, he feels vindicated by his efforts. Although no one is really sure how many lions there are in the Kora reserve, those that Adamson has brought in seem to have bred with lions already living in the reserve.

"Male lions move around a lot," Adamson says. "Some of them seem to stay around a while and then move on. They disappear for a while and then come back. The females are more likely to stay around where they grew up, although they sometimes go away for extended periods of time." Toward the end of their lives (lions in the wild usually live 10 to 12 years) the females, Adamson has learned, often go off on their own as well.

Although he is resigned to the end of the lion-release program, he is hopeful that his ideas will endure. Adamson's assistant, Tony Fitzjohn, who began working at Kora in 1970, has branched out on his own with a program for leopards modeled on Adamson's work with the lions.

Fitzjohn's first two leopards, male and female cubs, came from a restaurant owner in Paris. A third, a male, now about to be released from Fitzjohn's camp a few miles from Adamson's, was an orphaned cub found on the farm of Saudi millionaire Adnan Khashoggi, near Nanyuki, Kenya. The leopard, now 18 months old and fully grown, is kept in a pen in Fitzjohn's camp, where it dozes atop its cave, constructed from local rock, and growls softly at strangers.

Fitzjohn is fighting hard to see that the leopard program continues in Kora. He has traveled to Europe and the United States to raise money (Kora Wildlife Preservation U.S.A., Inc., is situated in Santa Monica, Calif.) and is hoping that his work will lead to the establishment of a viable leopard population within the reserve.

Fitzjohn, 40, seems to be well on the way to creating as much of a legend for himself as Adamson has, in a different but complementary manner. He once portrayed a Tarzan-like figure in a Japanese movie filmed at Kora and the image seemed to fit Fitzjohn perfectly — the "Wild Man of Kora," some people called him — muscular, bare-chested, handsome and crazy enough to take midnight swims in the crocodile-infested eaters of the Tana River. Visitors to his camp, particularly young women, came away enthralled.

One evening, a visitor asked Adamson what had brought him to Kora: Was it for himself, or for the animals?

"For myself, first," he replied, without hesitation. "Then for the animals."

The planet Jupiter was rising behind the big rock next to the camp, two of its moons clearly visible through field glasses. Just outside the compound, three generations of Kora lions gnawed at the carcass of a camel. The five cubs, now about the size of cocker spaniels, tumbled over one another in the dust, now and then provoking a good-natured backhand cuff from the older lions. Dottie, a pet raven, landed atop the fence for a final evening visit, then dropped down to the table to search for a stray cracker.

Half a dozen guests settled around the table, watching the emerging stars and prompting Adamson to talk of his adventures in the wild. Adamson has the knack of telling stories with economy and grace, even though he must have recited them hundreds of times.

"Bored?" Adamson says. "Oh no, I'm never bored. This is what I want to do. I've always liked this, being off by myself."
