Eastern jet hijacked to Cuba

Hijackers arrested, passengers safe

MIAMI (AP) — Two men waving Molotov cocktails with burning wicks hijacked a Chicago-to-Miami jet carrying 180 passengers and 12 crew members Friday, forcing the pilot to fly them to Cuba, officials said. Six other passengers got off the plane voluntarily.

It was the first hijacking of a U.S. jetliner to Cuba since last Sept. 17. There were no injuries in the incident, and both suspected hijackers were arrested when the plane reached Cuba, officials said.

FBI agent Jim Freeman said one of the men, waving a baby bottle filled with a flammable liquid and a lighted wick, barged into the cockpit to order the plane to Havana. The agent said the other man, carrying two more "Molotov cocktails" with lighted wicks, stayed in the first-class section.

Freeman said two women and four girls got off the plane voluntarily.

William Nettles, assistant special agent in charge of the Miami FBI office, said the suspected hijackers were apparently Cuban, and added that the six women apparently were relatives.

The Eastern Airlines L-1011 jet landed safely at Havana's Jose Marti Airport at 1:08 p.m. EDT, and the two men were arrested by Cuban security forces, said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Jack Barker in Atlanta.

The six other people voluntarily left the jet at the same time, Barker said.

Other passengers were allowed to shop in souvenir stores before the refueled jet took off for Miami International Airport, where it arrived at 6 p.m, officials said.

Among the passengers were two members of the Jamaican cabinet, Minister of the State Tony Johnson and Minister of Trade and Commerce Douglas Vaz.

The man who ran into the passenger cabin said, "Everything is OK. Everything is OK. We're going to Cuba," said returned passenger Dorothy Ash of Northfield, Ill.

Ms. Ash said the suspected hijackers, and two women and four girls ranging in age from preschool to teen-agers, shook hands and waved to officials who met them outside the plane.

Their identities were not immediately available, but Freeman described the men as being in their late 20s or early 30s. Ms. Ash said they made their original demands in English, but later spoke Spanish and needed an interpreter.

Rick Vaz, son of one of the Jamaican officials, was visibly relieved when the two men returned with the other passengers.

The youth said he had feared they might not be allowed to leave, because Jamaica's relations with communist Cuba have chilled since the election last year of Prime Minister Edward Seaga.

Johnson said he and Vaz were interrogated by Cuban officials in Havana but never felt threatened.

Eastern spokesman Jim Ashlock speculated that the alleged hijackers were disaffected refugees who came to this country during the 1980 refugee boatlift from Mariel harbor in Cuba.

"It looks more and more like they were homesick Mariels," Ashlock said.

"They appear to be Cubans," Nettles said. "They were speaking Spanish and they used three bottles filled with some kind of fluid. One guy had two bottles and the other had one. All three had wicks coming out of them."

Last year's hijackers often threatened to ignite flammable liquids they had smuggled aboard the planes.

The incident came almost a year after a string of 11 hijackings to Cuba began on July 22, 1980.

Trapped in an abandoned water well 210 feet below the ground for over two hours, Jared Artho, 4, cries as he is helped by rescue workers to safety Friday. The well, which was to be filled in later that day because it was inactive, was uncovered only hours before Jared fell in. The boy was apparently unharmed.

Boy safe after falling into well

MILO CENTER, Texas (AP) — A 4-year-old boy who tumbled into a 180-foot-deep abandoned irrigation well Friday morning spent two hours before rescuers with a rope hauled him to safety amid a cheering crowd.

Jared Artho and his two brothers were watching their uncle fill the shaft with sand in this Panhandle farming community when the boy fell over the edge of the almost-dry well, said Deaf Smith County Chief Deputy Dean Butcher.

The boy, his fall apparently cushioned by the layers of sand lining the well's bottom, was treated and released at Deaf Smith General Hospital in Hereford, about 12 miles south of here, he said.

"We witnessed a miracle today in Hereford, Texas," a fire official said.

The towhead boy, wearing a T-shirt and cut-off blue jeans and covered in sand, looked confused and shocked to see the members of the numerous law enforcement agencies who had gathered around the shaft, one witness said.

"Whenever they pulled him up, the ambulance people just grabbed him and took him to the hospital," Butcher said. "No one even got time to really look at him."

For the first hour the boy was trapped at the bottom of the well, the people crowded anxiously around its opening — 19-inches in diameter — could see Jared moving about, witnesses said.

But for the next hour, nothing could be seen in the dark hole below, according to Carey Black, of the Hereford volunteer fire department.

If the child was yelling, rescuers could not hear him.

So they lowered 260 feet of rope, a flashlight and some oxygen into the abyss and yelled for the boy to shine the light up the shaft and let the crowd know he was still alive.

He did.

They yelled to him to put the rope around his arms and to tug when he was ready to come up. Then Black began shouting, "He's pulling! He's pulling!"

Four minutes later, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Artho stood on the ground — all 40 pounds of him.

Authorities said that if they couldn't have reached him by the rope, they would have had to dig a shaft parallel to the boy's and then tunnel over to rescue him.

INSIDE TODAY

Israeli warplanes raided Palestinian guerrilla strongholds in southern Lebanon Friday and the military command in Tel Aviv said the air strikes destroyed Soviet-made mobile rocket launchers used by the PLO. The targets of the raid were about 12 miles north of the Israeli border in the area between Nabatiyeh and the oil terminal of Zahrani, including the guerrilla-held area of Habboush, according to a Lebanese spokesman.

Texas official pleased about California plan

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said Friday he was pleased that California will start aerial spraying to exterminate the Mediterranean fruit fly but also compared the state's government to Disneyland.

Gov. Jerry Brown of California said a threat by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to quarantine California produce left him no choice but to allow aerial spraying of malathion to end the Medfly infestation.

The governor had resisted aerial spraying because of its possible ill effects on people in the area to be sprayed.

Reagan Brown has urged California to start spraying and repeatedly has threatened to stop California produce at the Texas state line.

Asked if he felt California officials were so incompetent they needed advice from Texas, Brown told a news conference:

"We haven't been offering any advice. We've been trying to protect our interests. ... I thought Disneyland was in Orange County, but I think it is in Sacramento, the way they've been handling this thing."

While Brown praised U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block as "a pretty tough hombre" for forcing California into aerial spraying, he also suggested federal authorities should have taken the action six months ago when California's first Medfly outbreak occurred.

"If they had acted six months ago, they would have saved $22 million and many, many bushels of fruit," the commissioner said.

He said spraying should not add much to California fruit and vegetable prices. Texas fumigates citrus fruit leaving the state for Florida and California to control the Mexican fruit fly, and the cost is only five to 10 cents per box, Brown said.

Brown said his chief concern was the world food supply.

"We have played a major role in this because not only am I interested in protecting the great industry of agriculture in this state but because yesterday 58,000 people starved to death in the world. That's a Hiroshima every day," he said.

California plans assault on threatening medfly

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Threatened with a federal quarantine on dozens of California crops, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. on Friday ordered aerial pesticide spraying to combat a persistent, potentially catastrophic infestation of Mediterranean fruit flies.

Brown's decision, which represented an about-face for him, was greeted with relief by growers and agriculture officials but bitterness by residents worried about how the chemical malathion could affect them.

The first of six aerial assaults will begin sometime early Tuesday over the 97-square-mile Palo Alto area, where Stanford University is located, Brown said in Sacramento. He said the exact time for beginning the spraying had not been set.

The entire 630-square-mile area now under state quarantine — Santa Clara, San Mateo and Alameda counties south and east of San Francisco — would be sprayed in a week, according to Jerry Scribner, head of the medfly eradication project. Subsequent sprayings will take two days each, he added.

In the meantime, backyard stripping in residential areas and highway checks of motorists leaving the quarantine area would continue. The area is partly rural and partly residential, and includes some commercial orchards.

Brown warned that the area to be sprayed might have to be expanded to 800 square miles.

"The medfly was just moving too fast," Scribner said. "Continuing on the ground is just not justified on any basis."

The current invasion of the medfly started last summer and is believedto have originated in fruit brought to California from Hawaii.

Brown, who fought aerial spraying, announced he had changed his mind after U.S. Agriculture Secretary John R. Block informed him by telephone of the federal government's ultimatum: take "severe, immediate action" or face a quarantine on all crops that medflies infest.

Block also planned to dispatch a federal task force to California next week, headed by Deputy Secretary Richard E. Lyng, who once headed California's Department of Food and Agriculture.

Block warned, however, that even if spraying began promptly, it might be too late to halt the spread of the flies and a quarantine might be imposed anyway.

Speaking here later in an auditorium packed with reporters and residents opposed Meanwhile, Santa Clara County Superior Court Judge Bruce Allen set a Monday morning hearing on a request filed by an attorney for the community of Los Gatos for an injunction against state spraying of malathion.

Brown repeated his belief that the aerial spraying of malathion was preferable to the fumigation needed in the event of a statewide quarantine, saying that the poisons used in fumigation are "100 times more deadly than malathion."

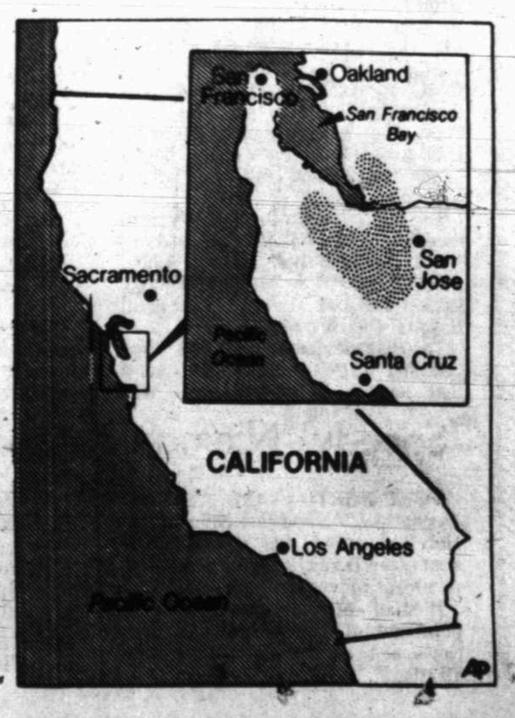

Asked if he were willing to be in the area during the spraying, Brown replied, "I may just come down here and share it with you."

And U.S. District Court Judge William A. Ingram, sitting in San Jose, issued a temporary restraining order Friday afternoon barring San Jose from enforcing its ban against aerial spraying. State attorneys had requested the order.

Les Hubbard, vice president of the 2,000-member Western Growers Association, was relieved by Brown's decision but added, "Why the devil did it take that (Block's threat) to get the job done? They could have ordered it last Tuesday and saved us a lot of trouble."

Von Dohlen testifies at hearing

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rep. Tim Von Dohlen testified Friday that the House redistricting bill divides counties only to treat rural and urban interests equally, protect minorities and comply with the "one man-one vote" requirement.

Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, is chairman of the committee that wrote the redistricting bill passed by the Legislature and signed by Gov. Bill Clements.

He was cross-examined in the fourth day of trial of a suit filed by three Mexican-American legislators and other plaintiffs challenging the redistricting bill.

The plaintiffs have asked State District Judge Harley Clark to strike down the bill on the ground it violates a state constitutional provision that legislative district lines may not divide counties except where necessary to equalize population.

Clark resumes the hearing Saturday. He earlier had hoped to issue his ruling by Friday afternoon.

Von Dohlen said the committee and the House had a good reason for each of the 34 "county cuts" they made.

He said that urban delegations were told early in the legislative processs that their "surplus population" would be used to bring adjoining rural districts as close as possible to the mathematical ideal of 84,856 people per representative.

"We tried to treat rural and urban areas equally. We did that by taking the surplus from urban areas, not to treat urban areas unfairly but to give rural areas the population they needed," Von Dohlen said.

He said 11,402 people in Tarrant County, mostly whites, were assigned to the largely rural district of Rep. Bill Coody, D-Weatherford, partly to maintain black voting strength in the rest of the county.

"If the excess were put back into the county and rippled through the county, it could have had a voting rights impact," Von Dohlen said.

Under the federal Voting Rights Act, the state cannot use the new districts in next year's legislative elections until the U.S. Justice Department certifies they will not weaken minorities politically.

Von Dohlen said 5,402 persons from El Paso County were placed in an adjoining multi-county rural district because they were surplus to the population required to give El Paso its five representatives.

"Those people are entitled to representation under the one man, one vote principle, and they were taken out for that purpose," he said.

Bill would restrict AT&T services

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Commerce Committee, bowing to newspaper publishers' concerns, unveiled an amended telephone deregulation bill Friday that would impose stingent restrictions on the types of information the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. could offer consumers electronically.

The bill would allow AT&T to provide its basic phone directory listings — name, address and number — electronically. But it would bar the company from packaging and offering its own advertising, news or other information in an electronic form that could be received by consumers on a TV set or computer terminal.

Dislosure of the new legislative draft, now scheduled to be voted on by the committee next week, came as AT&T unexpectedly announced it was canceling plans to test an electronic information service in Austin, Texas. The company cited "protracted regulatory and legal proceedings" stemming from the opposition of Texas newspaper publishers as the major reason for canceling the experiment.

While the giant telephone company said it intended to find "other means to move ahead" in experimenting with such an electronic service, the new Senate bill would sharply restrict AT&T's options.

The bill is designed to update and modernize the 1934 law that now governs regulation of the entire telephone industry. As such, it deals with many larger questions than the newspaper-AT&T dispute, including whether AT&T must be broken up to ensure competition.

The draft bill does not call for breaking up the giant firm, but sticks with a scheme of dividing the firm into regulated and unregulated sections. Bell System competitors have described that as an inadequate resolution.

It was the electronic information section, however, that received the most attention over the past few weeks by key members of the Senate committee.

At the heart of the dispute is a realization the American public is rapidly approaching the day when it can receive all its information directly in the home — on demand — through a reasonably priced computer terminal or modified TV set. Consumers could get their news at home and bank and shop at home, for example.

Such services eventually could be offered by cable systems nationwide, but the only transmission route already in place reaching virtually everyone is the telephone network. The publishers have argued that AT&T should not be allowed to offer advertising and other types of information provided by newspapers and other media, as long as it owns the transmission system that everyone would have to rely on.

The new bill would require AT&T to set up a separate subsidiary to handle electronic information services, and those services would be restricted to a customer's or business' name, address, telephone number and trademark.

AT&T could continue to print those publications it prints now, including the Yellow Pages, and could also offer the time and weather electronically just as it does now by phone. But the firm could not print or provide electronically "newspapers, periodicals and any service or product like or similar to all or part of the traditional function of a newspapr or periodical."

One Senate aide, who asked not to be identified, said the new language would allow AT&T to sell or lease the equipment needed for electonic informaton service; to lease the transmission capacity required for such services, and to lease capacity in its own computers to companies that wanted to provide the type of advertising and information services that AT&T is barred from.

"It appears they're giving publishers a special arrangement and I don't know that this is in the public interest," said AT&T spokesman Pic Wagner. "We're still studying the bill and we expect to be talking to the sponsors about exactly what AT&T could and could not do."

As expected, the language was immediately endorsed by the American Newspaper Publishers Association, which led the lobbying campaign on C$pitol Hill.

Terry Maguire, an ANPA vice president, described the electronic information that AT&T would be allowed to offer as "the information that people need to use the basic telephone system efficiently."

"We don't want to interfere with that," he continued.

Midland expected to have another typical summer day

If there could be a typical summer day in Midland, today would be the day, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Temperatures will once again reach the mid-90s under partly cloudy skies today and Sunday. Even the low tonight is forecast in the upper 60s, with 69 being the average normal low for this time of year.

Southerly winds round out the scenario today, coming in at 10-15 mph through Sunday.

Friday's high reached the normal 95 degrees with the record for July 10 set in 1964 at 105 degrees. Friday's low was 67 degrees, only five degrees higher than the record low of 62 degrees set on the date in 1947.

Midland National Bank pays back taxes to four entities

Midland National Bank has paid four government entities more than $1 million in five years of back taxes.

A memo from City Attorney Joe Nuessle to City Manager James Brown, Mayor G. Thane Akins and the City Council reminded the group that the Texas Supreme Court had upheld the decision by the Court of Civil Appeals in the city's favor and forcing the bank to pay the back taxes. The money was paid to the city tax assessor-collector's office, which handles taxing and collecting for the four entities.

The back taxes each entity will receive are: City of Midland, $1,034,152.56; Midland Independent School District, $583,427.80; Midland College, $96,487.66; and Midland Memorial Hospital District, $40,254.13.

The case started back in 1976 when Midland National Bank contended that the part of the building it was leasing from Gerald Hines Interests shouldn't be considered part of the bank's assets for tax purposes. Nuessle explained the land on which the bank tower was built was leased to the Gerald Hines firm, which constructed the facility. Then Midland National Bank leased part of that building for its purposes.

The ruling, said Nuessle, is that the bank building shouldn't be taken into consideration in arriving at capitol stock for the purpose of taxes. The tower is carried on Gerald Hines' books.

And when the second tower, also being constructed by Gerald Hines, is finished, Nuessle said he expects Midland National Bank to be in the same taxing situation.

The five years of back taxes amounted to about $200,000 a year, and that includes penalties and interest, the city attorney said.

McGruff costume contributors get certificates of appreciation

The Midland Police Department Crime Prevention Unit recently presented certificates of appreciation to local contributors to the "McGruff, Take a Bite Out of Crime" costume fund.

The "McGruff" costume, styled after a dog seen frequently in public service announcements, will be worn by a member of the CPU in presentations to schools and citizen groups in Midland and the Permian Basin. The costume was originally designed for the drug abuse program directed at the elementary level. Nationwide, McGruff is used to tell citizens how to protect homes and families against burglary.

Sgt. Lalo Camarillo, crime prevention coordinator, and Robert A. Barnes, crime prevention specialist, presented certificates to the following groups and individuals contributing to the fund: the Night Owls chapter of the Texas Extension Homemakers Association; the Midland Crime Prevention Commission; the Midland County Extension Homemakers Council; the Junior Women's Association; Wilshire Baptist Church; Jean Tucker; and Grammer-Murphey.

In addition, the CPU recognized the Human Relations Council for its work in distributing material about McGruff in its newsletters.

'Junkyard dogs' go after government waste

WASHINGTON (AP) — With an exhortation from President Reagan to "go get 'em," federal inspectors charged with working like "junkyard dogs" are stepping up the war on government waste and fraud. And they say they're winning.

A group of the inspectors told the president Thursday that since January they have questioned more than $1 billion in federal costs, have recovered $95 million and have saved $300 million that would have been spent without their vigilence.

They said their efforts in that period resulted in more than 600 indictments and more than 400 convictions.

The inspectors predicted they eventually could help save billions of dollars but said their newly launched program has a long way to go before that goal is achieved.

"You sure have my backing. Go get 'em," Reagan told the inspectors as they were leaving the Oval Office.

Reagan vowed at the outset of his administration to fight waste, fraud and abuse in government. He named a Council on Integrity and Efficiency to oversee the work of the 15 inspectors general who ferret out such wrong-doing in federal agencies.

At the time, Reagan fired all the inspectors general. The White House passed the word that it wanted its inspectors generals to pursue their jobs like "junkyard dogs."

Since then, 12 inspectors generals have been rehired, although most have been shuffled to new agencies to guard against the possibility they had become too familiar with their old ones to remain genuinely critical.

Reagan also announced at a Rose Garden ceremony Thursday that he will nominate Charles A. Bowsher, a fiscal management expert, to be comptroller general. That is the top post at the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress.

Bowsher, managing partner of a large Washington accounting firm, would replace the retired Elmer B. Staats. If confirmed by the Senate, Bowsher's term would be for 15 years.

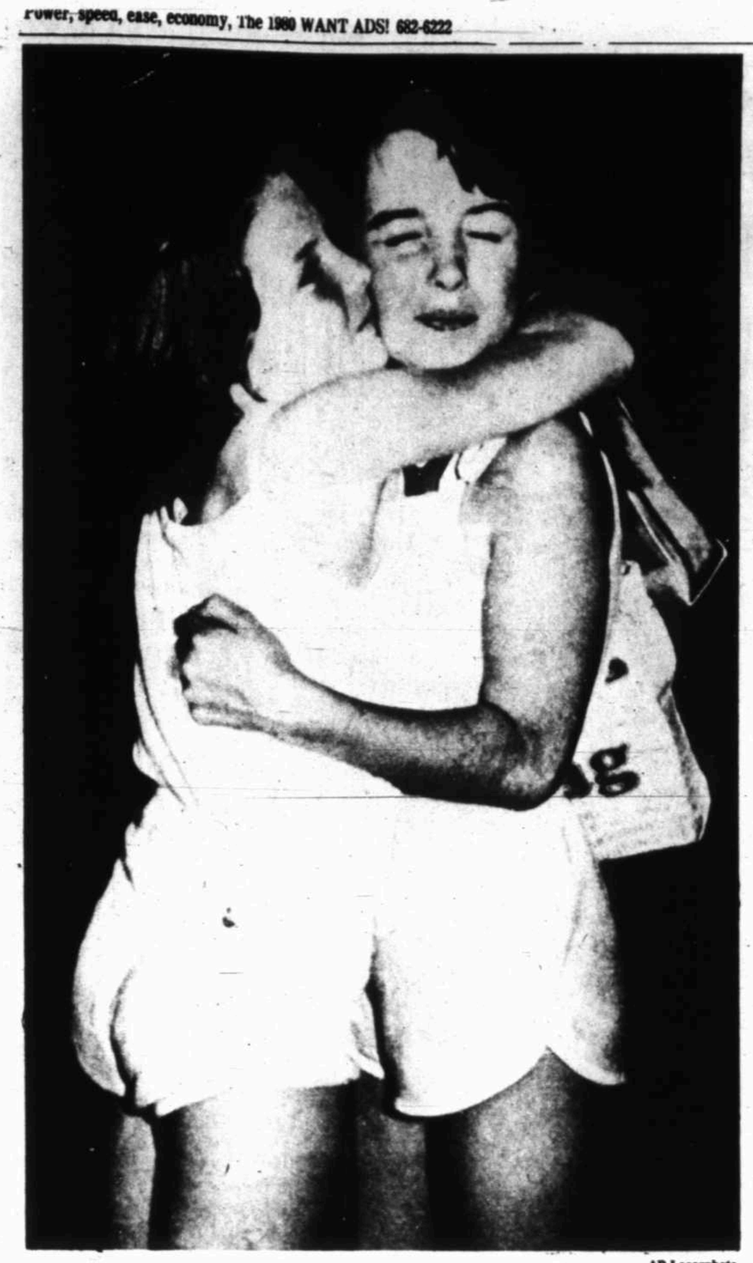

"It's obvious that in this post, strong and effective leadership can have an enduring impact on our political institutions," Reagan said. "Such a leader can do much to restore the faith of the people in the integrity and efficiency of government.

Reagan said nothing has disheartened him more than the discovery that some government offices are not moving to install efficient financial management. "If you have any difficulties here, believe me, I want to know about it," he told Bowsher.

Emphasizing his determinination to strengthen the inspectors general corps, Reagan created the Council of Integrity and Efficiency within the White House structure. As chairman, he named Edwin L. Harper, deputy director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Harper told a news conference Thursday that having the inspectors general meet at least monthly as a part of the council is paying dividends, enabling them to coordinate their efforts.

Tom McBride, nominated to be inspector general at the Labor Department, said major savings have resulted this year from cross-checking employment rolls in an area with lists of those who draw government welfare checks, food stamps and other aid. He said the computers have caught thousands of persons who don't meet income-eligibility standards to receive certain types of aid.

Bernadette McDonnell, right, receives a farewell kiss from Kathy McVeigh at New York's Kennedy airport Tuesday night before flying to Ireland where her father, IRA hunger striker Joseph McDonnell, lay dying at Belfast's Maze Prison. The little girl, who was visiting the McVeigh family in Floral Park, N.Y., as part of a summer program, was in the air when her father died. Bernadette is 11.

Library construction most cherished

SKOWHEGAN, Maine (AP) — Margaret Chase Smith, the first woman to serve in both houses of Congress, says the construction of a new library here is "one of the most cherished happenings" in her life.

It's to be called the Margaret Chase Smith Library Center, and when the $1 million project is finished next year it will house documents that Mrs. Smith collected during her 36-year career as a Republican congresswoman and senator.

Mrs. Smith, now 83, was wearing her familiar red rose Thursday when she turned the first shovelful of earth at a ground-breaking ceremony for the library center, which will be part of the Northwood Institute, a business college. Mrs. Smith said it gives her peace of mind to know her papers and records will be preserved.

At an impromptu news conference, Mrs. Smith said she was delighted that President Reagan has nominated a woman, Sandra D. O'Connor, to the U.S. Supreme Court.

After Radarange Ovens passed a series of torture tests, the U.S. Government granted Amana an exemption from displaying a warning label on the door of all "RR" series Radarange Ovens (and derivative models).

In one of these brutal tests, Amana actually hit the door seal with a 5-pound steel ball from a height of 8 feet! And after every test, the Amana ovens did not allow microwave leakage in excess of the Federal standard. Because the patented Amana Choke Door Seal reflects microwaves back into the oven.

No other microwave oven manufacturer in the world has earned this U.S. Government exemption.

Tick-borne fever sets record pace

ATLANTA (AP) — Rocky Mountain spotted fever is setting a record pace this year, with more than 100 more cases reported than in the same period last year, when a record was set, the national Centers for Disease Control said today.

Despite its geographic name, the tick-borne disease is most common in the south Atlantic states, where more than 61 percent of last year's 1,156 cases occurred, the CDC said. Almost all of the cases occur in the summertime, when ticks are prevalent.

Through the week ending July 4, 510 cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever were reported, compared with 405 cases through the same period last year, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

The disease causes fever, headache, rash and muscle pain. If left untreated, about 20 percent of the cases result in death, but the disease is easily treated with antibiotics.

Rocky Mountain spotted fever can be prevented if people in tick country are aware of the problem, said Dr. Chad Helmick, a medical investigator in the CDC's Viral Diseases Division.

Because the ticks have to be attached for several hours before the infection can take hold, people who are outdoors should check for them frequently, he said.

A gradual increase in the number of cases reported has been noted since 1959, but doctors are unsure why it is on the upswing.

"It's the great unanswered question," Helmick said. "One theory parallels the use of (the banned pesticide) DDT — when DDT use was halted, it allowed the tick population to grow. But a lot of people don't buy that.

"Another theory is increased suburbanization. It put more people out where the ticks are. But that's just speculation," he said.

A vaccine to fight the disease has been developed and is presently being tested, but it will be several years before it is available, Helmick said.

Cycle jaunt spans globe

NEW YORK (AP) — There's a fundamental difference between travel and tourism, as world traveler Ted Simon sees it — and that is vulnerability.

"To travel and profit by it so those you visit can also profit by it, you must make yourself vulnerable," he said in a recent New York interview. "The person who visits India for two weeks feels he cannot possibly make himself a hostage to fortune. So he drinks bottled water, doesn't shake hands with an Indian for fear of getting a skin disease, travels first class on trains.

"It's better never to go to India than to fly there for five days," Simon continues. "It's better to go slowly to some place close to home."

Ted Simon would be ranked a world traveler by anyone's definition. While in his early 40s, he spent four years going around the world on a motorcycle, setting out from London in 1973 and arriving home in 1977. His book about his experiences in more than 63,000 miles of travel through 54 countries, "Jupiter's Travels," was issued in paperback this year.

Simon, a journalist and writer, explains in his book that the idea of traveling around the world came to him one day "out of the blue," not as a vague thought or wish, but as a fully formed conviction.

The goal of the trip was not to achieve a tour de force, but "comprehension."

"The only way to comprehend the world," he explains in the book, "was by making myself vulnerable to it so it could change me."

So Simon made himself vulnerable — staying with people he encountered along the way like the young Tunisian he met on a ferry from Italy; having moments of pure joy like the smile an Ethiopian woman gave him as he passed her on a road one day.

"It shone," he says of that smile, "it beamed towards me with such life and depth that I was her son, her lover, her saviour, all in one."

He had his fearful moments too — including more than a week in custody in Fortaleza, Brazil, for reasons that were never clear except that perhaps his name resembled that of another man who was "wanted."

Simon's kind of travel can be addictive, he conceded in the interview. "It's a sort of Flying Dutchman syndrome." Part of the addiction is the feeling you get in far-away places that you can be "un-responsible" — which, Simon emphasizes, doesn't mean "irresponsible." There's also the warm welcome you get. "People can be as generous as they like to you today," he said, "because you won't be there tomorrow sponging on them."

Like other addictions, Simon added, the Flying Dutchman syndrome can be handled with the "cold turkey" treatment. He's planning to treat his own case by writing another book — about aspects of his trip that he didn't cover in the first one, such as Chile right after the generals took over, and his experiences in Argentina.

Simon, born in Germany, brought up in England and long a resident of France, has bought himself 40 acres in a valley in California's Mendocino County, where he'll think out his book.

He explains his choice of Mendocino County by noting that his travels made him a "landscape freak." The open country of South America, Australia and elsewhere "impregnated my soul. Northern California is the closest I could get to such landscape and still be near a top cultural center."

Figures show tuberculosis increasing again in U.S.

ATLANTA (AP) — Cases of tuberculosis increased in the United States in 1980 after years of steady decline, according to figures released Friday by the national Centers for Disease Control.

There were 27,749 cases of tuberculosis reported in the United States last year, up 80 cases from 1979, the center said.

It was only the second time since 1953, when tuberculosis reports from the states were standardized, that the number of reported cases rose, the center said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

"Over the past 26 years, the number of reported cases and case rates have continued to decrease about 4 or 5 percent, respectively, each year," the report said. "In view of this steady pattern of progress in controlling tuberculosis ... 1980 stands in contrast."

The figure released Friday was revised slightly downward from the preliminary 1980 figure of 27,983 cases the CDC released in February.

At that time, the center said the increase was caused by the large number of cases among Indochinese refugees and a 53-week reporting period for 1980. Since the usual 52-week reporting period contains only 364 days, the reporting period is extended one week every few years to include the extra days.

The factor that had the biggest impact was the influx of Indochinese refugees last year, the CDC said.

Many were infected with the TB bacteria but did not have the disease. Some developed the disease after entering the United States.

Reagan says economic challenge at heart of summit

AP Laserphoto

Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau moves to the edge of his chair after photographers instructed him to move in closer to President Reagan during a photo session prior to the start of their meeting in the Oval Office at the White House Friday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan assured Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau on Friday that the United States won't "export pollution" — the acid rain swept northward from American smokestacks — and asked in return that Canada ease bars to U.S. investment in her energy treasure.

The two men also met to review strategy for the economic summit of the seven richest democracies, set to begin a week from Sunday near Ottawa. Te conference will provide the first opportunity for Reagan to meet alone with Francois Mitterrand, the newly-elected socialist president of France. One U.S. official said such a private session would occur.

Reagan told Trudeau at the end of their two hours of meetings that "achieving economic recovery now poses one of the greatest challenges to the free world."

"It is this challenge that shall lie at the heart of our summit," Reagan said as the prime minister prepared to leave the White House after lunch. "All of our nations face a common task of reducing inflation, increasing employment and improving long-term economic prospects for our people."

The meetings were divided between discussion of the summit, the seventh in a series, and problems in the U.S.-Canadian relationship. Trudeau raised the issue of acid rain, industrial pollution which drifts over Canada.

"The prime minister noted this is a problem, one we will have to address," said a senior administration official who asked that he not be identified by name.

"The president said we are not going to export pollution," the official said.

The official said that Reagan introduced the question about Canadian restrictions on U.S. investments in Canadian companies and told the prime minister "there is developing concern" over this.

"We are concerned about the possibility of a souring mood about this matter," the official said.

A Senate subcommittee has also indicated concern about this problem, spurred by Canada's efforts to reduce foreign ownership of its energy resources from a current level of 70 percent to 50 percent or less by granting numerous financial advantages to Canadian-owned energy companies.

One other sensitive issue — Europe's bitter complaints about Reagan's economic policies and high interest rates in the United States — did not come up, the official said.

Trudeau, he said, "may have an inkling or idea we got the message" about others' concerns.

Reagan and Trudeau emerged from the White House expressing confidence in achieving economic prosperity.

The president stressed the need for the industrial nations to "reaffirm our fundamental partnership with each other,"and said he also hopes the summit will provide a "new sense of confidence and community among the industrial nations that economic recovery can be achieved."

He said the summit participants — France, Britain, West Germany, Italy and Japan, in addition to the United States and Canada — would "express our quiet determination to defend" the "fundamental partnership" of shared policies and the market economic system.

Trudeau, in an indirect reference to criticism of Reagan's policies, praised the president for"discussing frankly not so much the areas of agreement, which are many, but the areas of possible disageeement among those seven industrial democracies."

Trudeau said he "is as optimistic as the president is that we will find the solutions."

In addition to meeting with Mitterrand for the first time, Reagan will have his first meeting with Giovanni Spadolini, the newly chosen premier of Italy.

U.S. and other officials have said that the summit conference, which will be held at the Chateau Montebello, a sprawling log building about 40 miles from the Canadian capital, is unlikely to delve into specific elements of each nation's economic policies.

Rather, it is seen as providing an opportunity for the seven leaders to get together and discuss their views of international economic problems and foreign policies.

No major agreements are expected in the summit-ending communique, a version of which has already been drafted, the officials have said.

Actress Lucille Ball attended funeral services recently for actor Ross Martin. Martin died last Friday while playing tennis in San Diego. Martin gained noteriety playing a western hero in the television series "Wild, Wild West."

Where does music stop?

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Sometimes in Nashville it's hard to tell where the music stops and the politicking begins.

Gov. Lamar Alexander swapped gifts and a kiss with comedienne Minnie Pearl in his office Thursday to mark "Hee Haw's" 13th year of production in Nashville. This fall, the hospitality will be returned: Alexander and Miss Pearl are to play a piano duet on the popular country-music television show.

Under the name Mrs. Henry Cannon, Miss Pearl lives next door to the executive residence.

Country music star Roy Acuff was in the governor's office for the celebration, too. He once ran for governor but lost.

Alexander, a one-time jazz trombonist who frequently drops in as a guest pianist with Tennessee orchestras, gave Miss Pearl a certificate for the "Hee Haw" cast and a black-and-white photograph of himself and Miss Pearl at upright pianos.

She gave him a straw hat like the one that has become her trademark, complete with price tag.

"You're a fine pianist, and I'm just a hillbilly plunker," she told her neighbor.

"See you at home," the governor said as Miss Pearl left.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, July 12, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Famous philosopher/essayist Henry David Thoreau was born on this date. Also sharing this birthday with you: Hollywood stars Cheryl Ladd, Bill Cosby and Milton Berle. The coming year will be a wonderful one for you, a year in which you attain a level of success you never thought possible. Happy romance enhances an overall sense of well-being. Tenderhearted and sensitive, you may occasionally be hurt by well-meaning but misinformed friends. Instead of listening to rumors, ask direct questions! Keep a tighter rein on your generous nature and savings will increase. Family members are loyal, supportive.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You will have plenty of time today to reflect on an important decision. Romance is on the horizon! Do not create problems for yourself by antagonizing someone.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can now have fun without spending a lot of money. Do not take risks with funds set aside for emergencies. Parents cannot be ignored. Show greater understanding of their needs.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Loving relatives may make a special request. Do not make promises that you cannot keep. You and mate should be on the same wavelength now. Romance is more enjoyable than ever.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A special outing adds an air of excitement to what might have been an ordinary quiet day. An unusual experience gives you new insights. Friendships are strengthened.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Allow your mate or favorite friend to set the pace today. A drive can be fun if you get an early start. Keep spending within reasonable limits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep things in perspective when evaluating your financial situation. Welcome suggestions from family members, including the small fry. Stick to diet or exercise resolutions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The emphasis may appear to be on your obligations, limitations and shortcomings. Discuss sensitive issues with mate or partner. You may begin to see things in a new light.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A weekend trip could include a happy surprise. Keep your emotions under tight control. Impulsive action could result in embarrassment later on.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Today you may be full of confidence and joy. See people who share your goals while avoiding those who want to change you. You now feel more positive about an admirer's romantic overtures!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Intense activity may mark your morning. When things quiet down later on, catch up on your rest. A busy work week begins tomorrow! You take special pleasure in a new book.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Common sense helps you resolve a sticky family situation. A new openness makes an old relationship meaningful again. Good news could arrive in the form of a phone call or visit.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You will relish social activity today but would be wise to catch up on household chores and home repairs before going out. Organize closets or file drawers.

Retiree leaves estate

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — A 91-year-old retired postal worker has left an estate of nearly $3 million, most of it to aid the blind, according to court records.

Clinton J. Teubert of Huntington died in February 1979, leaving a handwritten document detailing how he wanted his estate divided. It included bequests to church and civic groups and ended with the statement: "Residue to aid the blind only."

Ten-year-old Patrick Taylor sits atop the mouth of the train that almost took his life June 30 in Fort Wayne, Ind. The grate covering the sewer had slipped off and the entire area around the opening was filled with water. The boy was sucked in and traveled a quarter of a mile before he popped to the surface in a nearby pond.

Navy cracks down on drug use in sailors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief of Naval Operations Thomas B. Hayward, claiming that drug abuse is hampering his drive "to instill pride and promote professionalism" in the fleet, is ordering a crackdown on the use of marijuana and other illegal substances by sailors.

In a strongly worded message to Navy units worldwide Thursday, the service's top admiral said the stepped-up fight against drug abuse would include more urine-testing devices and drug-detecting dogs, tougher law enforcement and preventive education.

"Drug abuse is destructive of our efforts to instill pride and promote professionalism," Hayward said in his order.

"Commanding officers and supervisors at all levels cannot condone the illegal use of drugs, regardless of the degree of acceptance in the civilian sector," he wrote. "Officers and petty officers must recognize the threat, set the example, enforce the rules and work to change conditions, both on board and ashore, to eliminate illegal drug use."

Hayward said more law enforcement officers will be assigned to coordinate anti-drug efforts and possession or transfer of drug paraphernalia will be made a disciplinary or criminal offensive. In addition, he said, the Navy will set up a preventive education program patterned after one that combats alcohol abuse.

Eligibility for participation in drug rehabilitation programs also will be tightened to screen out those who are taking part only to escape prosecution or to obtain an early discharge from the service, he added.

Attempt to halt filibuster fails

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate refused by a wide margin Friday to cut off a filibuster by a bipartisan coalition trying to sidetrack a proposed ban on busing in school desegregation cases.

In what was at least a temporary victory for those opposed to the ban, the Senate rejected 48-38 a motion by Republican Senate leaders to shut off unlimited debate on the controversial issue.

The 38 votes for the cloture motion fell 22 short of the 60 needed to halt the filibuster.

"We established the fact that assaults on the Constitution are not going to come cheaply," said Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., leader of the filibuster.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, who sponsored the motion, abandoned earlier plans to call the Senate in for an unusual Saturday session. The next try at ending the filibuster was postponed until Monday.

Baker wants to settle the matter so the Senate can turn its attention next week to President Reagan's three-year 25 percent tax-cut plan.

At Baker's urging, the Senate agreed to simply set aside the busing issue next Wednesday if new efforts to halt the filibuster are not successful by then. That would leave the controversy unresolved until later in the year.

Weicker said if the bill is set aside Wednesday — as now looks likely — the matter will not be taken up again until after Labor Day. And he pledged to continue the fight against anti-busing amendments even if his filibuster is broken next week.

In adopting the traditional Southern conservative tactic of filibustering, opponents of the anti-busing provisions said they were seeking to preserve constitutional protections for minorities and the independence of federal courts.

"There may be no decisions of greater constitutional significance made in this session of Congress," said a "Dear Colleague" letter signed by several of the Senators supporting the filibuster.

Weicker has gained the backing of at least 14 colleages — Republicans and Democrats — in his effort to talk the proposal to death.

"These pending proposals ... would threaten the ability of the federal government ... to enforce the constitutional guaranntee of equal protection of the laws," said the letter distributed by the pro-busing forces.

The filibuster began before Congress took its July 4th recess two weeks ago and was resumed Wednesday. But it has been interrupted for unrelated routine matters and the debate itself has consumed relatively few hours.

If the cloture motion succeeded, it still would leave the Senate with up to 100 hours to debate the issue — a maximum of one hour for each Senator. Without cloture, debate is unlimited.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., is sponsoring a propsal to prevent courts from ordering busing of children more than five miles or 15 minutes from their home to promote integration.

A companion proposal by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., would would prevent the Justice Department from filing suits on behalf of minorities to seek court-ordered busing.

The filibuster is aimed at keeping the anti-busing amendments from being attached to an otherwise routine 1982 spending authorization measure for the Justice Department.

Weicker called Johnston's proposal a "blatantly unconstitutional" effort to restrict what kin- of cases federal courts may decide.

Johnston said his plan was a legitimate legislative response to growing popular disenchantment with busing of children to achieve racial balance in public schools.

Ironically, the Louisiana senator voted against the cloture motion Friday because it was worded in a way that applied to the overall bill and probably would have resulted in his amendment being killed as non-germane to the Justice Department spending authorization. There was no way to determine how many others voted the same way for similar reasons.

Under complicated Senate rules applying in such a circumstane, the question of whether an amendment is germane can be raised only after the Senate has voted to end a filibuster on a bill.

Johnston now will have an opportunity Monday to seek a modified cloture that would limit a filibuster to his amendment only and thereby preserve the possibility that his amendment can be attached to the bill.

However, there is no guarantee Johnston can win on the question of whether the amendment is germane if the issue is raised at some future point before final action on the bill.

An earlier version of the Helms' proposal passed Congress last year but was vetoed by then-President Carter.

Federal agents arrest Bexar County probation officer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Federal agents have charged a Bexar County juvenile probation officer who teaches law enforcement at the local junior college with selling unregistered machine guns to an undercover agent.

Jerry J. Jimenez, 36, a coordinator for the Volunteers in Probation program which recruits adults to help juveniles on probation, was arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Jamie Boyd who set bond at $25,000.

Jimenez, a licensed firearms dealer who also teaches law enforcement at San Antonio College, contended he did not know it was illegal to sell the weapons.

He was taken into custody at his home Thursday by agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms while allegedly selling two AR-15 rifles which had been converted to fully automatic, according to Ron Wolters, agent in chrge of the San Antonio ATF office.

The machine guns were being sold for $1,000 apiece to an ATF undercover agent who earlier met Jimenez in a parking lot and drove to the probation officer's home, Wolters said.

Jimenez also offered to sell six handguns to the undercover agent, the ATF official alleged.

Jimenez also was charged with two earlier sales of machine guns to undercover agents, one on June 24 involving an Israeli-made Uzi machine gun and the other on July 3 involving a fully automatic AR-15, Wolters said.

The two previous sales were for $800 apiece, he said.

Workers protesting payless paydays in Massachusetts

BOSTON (AP) — Thousands of state workers walked off the job Friday to protest payless paydays as Gov. Edward J. King assailed the state Senate for its part in the deadlock over a new state budget.

Most state agencies operated normally, but several mental hospitals and schools for the retarded reported absenteeism at 30 percent to 60 percent. With managers and volunteers filling in, the institutions had to cancel most classes and therapy sessions.

About 500 National Guard troops were on standby at five armories statewide. Public Safety Secretary George Luciano said more troops might be called up and sent to the mental institutions, depending on how many workers show up for the night shifts.

Without a budget, state workers have not been paid since June 30, and they went on strike after a midnight Thursday deadline passed without the Legislature coming up with a payroll agreement.

As legislators tried again to iron out differences over a budget for the 1981-82 fiscal year, King criticized the Senate for refusing to approve a stopgap one-month budget, as the House did.

King appealed to state workers to return to their jobs, even though some of them have missed two weekly paychecks, while legislative leaders wrangle over spending.

"The treatment they are receiving at the hands of power politics is totally wrong. It is unacceptable," King said. "Yet we must urge them to continue in their patience and continue services to those depending on them....

"Since June 30, the Senate has said, 'We'll have a budget tomorrow.' There have been 10 tomorrows and still the Senate has refused to enact my interim budget," the governor told a press conference. "In my opinion, this is to act without compassion, humanity or concern for the commonwealth's neediest citizens."

Moments before, Senate President William Bulger ordered a further six-hour delay on the temporary budget package and then retreated to his office. Bulger and his aides have refused to explain their actions, but it was reported he was holding out to win more concessions from the House in private bargaining on the final version of a $6.3 billion budget for the year.

The haggling apparently involves which state workers will be laid off to free an additional $265 million for aid to cities and towns. The communities want the money to ease the fiscal shock of Proposition 2½, a voter-imposed rollback of local taxes that is expected to reduce their revenues by $480 million.

Luciano estimated as many as 5,000 day shift employees boycotted work. Some of their jobs were filled by overnight workers who were held on overtime.

Picketing was reported at mental health facilities in Worcester, Waltham, Northampton, Danvers, Westboro and Shrewsbury, the Paul Devers state school in Taunton and the Fernald School and Metropolitan hospital, both in Waltham.

There was also picketing at the sewage pumping station at Deer Island in Winthrop, which treats sewage for metropolitan Boston. Workers there agreed to resume work temporarily, warning that another walkout could occur Monday.

Charles Manning, a public safety spokesman, said the only report of vandalism was at Danvers State Hospital, 20 miles north of Boston, where workers put glass and stones in a driveway to discourage people from crossing a picket line.

Moslems fight to keep identity

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

CHHRANG CHAMREAS, Cambodia (AP) — Cambodia's decimated Moslem minority — the descendants of a once-mighty kingdom — are struggling to keep alive their religion and traditions amidst shattered mosques and torched Korans.

The Phnom Penh government claims that during the Pol Pot regime, which fell in early 1979, two out of every three Moslems were massacred; that only 20 of Cambodia's 113 mosques were spared destruction and that the chief of the minority group, Res Los, was arrested and, according to one account, boiled alive.

It is difficult to estimate how many Moslems remain, but tales of refugees from Pol Pot's Cambodia and subsequent accounts indicate that the small community which had lived on the fringes of Cambodian society was drastically reduced.

Some Western Indochina watchers fear the Moslems — most of them known as Chams — may not be able to maintain a separate identity.

This would close the story of a tragic people, who once ruled over large areas of Indochina before being all but wiped out by th Vietnamse.

Western reference books variously estimated the Moslem population of Buddhist Cambodia at between 85,000 and 250,000 in the early 1970s. The current government, in what appears to be erroneous statistics, says that 200,000 out of a 1970s' population of 700,000 are left alive.

This predominantly Moslem district at Phnom Penh's northern doorstep was a lovely place before 1975. Spacious wooden houses stood on stilts and caught the breezes from the adjoining Tonle Sap river. There were three large mosques, with Koranic schools attracting the faithful. Most of the Chams, like elsewhere in Cambodia, were fishermen, silk weavers, buffalo raisers or slaughterers of animals.

Today, Chhrang Chamreas is choked with ugly, filthy shanties. Two of the mosques and most of the old homes were razed by Pol Pot, and Tin Prasoeu, a local official, says that only 200 of the original 8,000 Cham inhabitants remain.

Tin Prasoeu, a Cham whose father was executed by Pol Pot's men, said the last fishing season was poor, due partly to a lack of boats. There is no silk weaving since silkworm cultivation has not started up again. There are too few cattle left in Cambodia to make slaughterhouses profitable.

But at the one surviving Mosque, the doors are open for worship, and in an adjoining building 41-year-old Mohamath Aly daily gives religious instructions to children and old people alike. He proudly displays one of the two Korans — the Moslem holy book — that refugees fleeing Pol Pot's terror to Vietnam had brought back to the mosque.

Aly, who reads Arabic, said there are few trained religious teachers like himself left in the country and only one known professor of some dozen who had earlier received higher religious training in Egypt and other Moslem countries.

The Phnom Penh government stresses that freedom of worship has been restored in Cambodia, and indeed there is no evidence of persecution on religious grounds.

But the Marxist-Leninist regime does not seem to actively encourage the revival of Islam, or Buddhism for that matter. It provides political indoctrination for religious leaders and has integrated the various religious communities into the political system rather than allowing them a separate power base.

Prior to 1975, the Chams maintained some links with the Moslem world. Within Cambodia they kept largely to themselves, rarely intermarrying with the Khmers who tended to look down on them.

The Chams, a Malay-Polynesian people, began filtering into Cambodia in the 15th century as the Vietnamese were pushing into what is now southern Vietnam and systematically eradicating the then powerful Kingdom of Champa.

Onetime Cambodian leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk tried to integrate the Chams and other Moslems into Cambodian society and gave them the name, "Khmer Islam."

Some joined with the Pol Pot revolutionaries during the 1970-75 war but this did little to save the minority as a whole after the Pol Pot's victory.

Several thousand have fled Cambodia since 1975. Malaysia, where Islam is the chief religion, has accepted 3,300 to date and is now selecting another 1,500 from refugee camps along the Thai-Cambodian border.

EMERGENCY! THE DEVIL IS IN TROUBLE!

Paul felt impelled by the Holy Spirit to go across to Greece before returning to Jerusalem. "And after that," he said, "I must go on to Rome!" He sent his two assistants, Timothy and Erastus, on ahead to Greece while he stayed awhile longer in Turkey.

But about that time, a big blowup developed in Ephesus concerning the Christians. It began with Demetrius, a silversmith who employed many craftsmen to manufacture silver shrines of the Greek goddes Diana. He called a meeting of his men, together with others employed in related trades, and addressed them as follows:

"Gentlemen, this business is our income. As you know so well from what you've seen and heard, this man Paul has persuaded many, many people that handmade gods aren't gods at all. As a result, our sales volume is going down! And this trend is evident not only here in Ephesus, but throughout the entire province! Of course, I am not only talking about the business aspects of this situation and our loss of income, but also of the possibility that the temple of the great goddess Diana will lose its influence, and that Diana -- this magnificent goddess worshipped not only throughout this part of Turkey but all around the world -- will be forgotten!"

At this their anger boiled and they began shouting, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!" A crowd began to gather and soon the city was filled with confusion. Everyone rushed to the amphitheater, dragging along Gaius and Aristarchus, Paul's traveling companions, for trial.

Paul wanted to go in, but the disciples wouldn't let him. Some of the Roman officers of the province, friends of Paul, also sent a message to him, begging him not to risk his life by entering.

Jewish officer allowed to wear skull cap in uniform

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a sardonic exchange which determined that a military installation "isn't going to blow up" or suffer riots just because a man wears a skull cap, a federal judge turned aside Friday an Air Force order barring a Jewish officer from wearing his yarmulke in uniform.

U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. said he would issue a preliminary injunction barring the superiors of Capt. S. Simcha Goldman from taking disciplinary action against him. The order also allows Goldman, who is stationed at March Air Force Base near Riverside, Calif., to wear his yarmulke pending a full judicial review.

Robinson, who had unusually sharp words for the Air Force during Friday's hearing, said he hoped the issue would eventually be decided by the Supreme Court, because the controversy has cropped up before and those entering the Air Force should know from the outset what the rule is.

Goldman, an ordained orthodox rabbi serving as a clinical psychologist at March, filed a civil suit alleging the Air Force had violated his First Amendment right to religious expression. To Jews, the covered head is a sign of respect to God.

Although Goldman had been wearing his yarmulke since enlisting in September 1977, he was ordered to remove it last May when a new commander took charge of the base hospital and decided the skull cap violated Air Force dress regulations.

Goldman refused to comply and, according to his suit, was threatened with disciplinary action including a court-martial. Robinson last week issued a 10-day temporary restraining order as an emergency measure to prevent the Air Force from taking action against Goldman.

"Is March Air Force Base going to blow up because this man continues to wear his yarmulke?" Robinson asked Assistant U.S. Attorney Royce C. Lamberth.

Lamberth: Obviously the base isn't going to blow up, your honor.

Robinson: And there aren't going to be any riots, are there?

Lamberth: No, your honor.

Robinson: Not unless the commanding officer starts them.

The Air Force contended in an affidavit that failure to follow the dress code destroys "discipline and esprit de corps," especially "when the violator is a commissioned officer."

The affidavit by Maj. Gen. Herbert L. Emanuel, assistant deputy chief of staff for Air Force manpower and personnel, also contended the service is concerned about the precedent that would be established if Goldman wore his head covering.

"If we were to make such an exception, then it would seem to follow that individuals with other religious dress and grooming standards would have to be similarly accommodated," he said.

Robinson said he was "not at all impressed" by the affidavit and added, "The Air Force isn't free to rewrite the Constitution."

Lamberth said the military has had dress regulations "since the founding of the country." He said that in previous court cases, the judiciary has not interfered with military regulations as long as there was a rational connection between the rules and the service's mission.

But the judge said he "finds it difficult" to see the rational connection of the regulation to the Air Force's morale, since the service allowed Goldman to wear his yarmulke for nearly four years before ordering it removed.

"Just because one commander didn't follow the regulation should not mean the Air Force worldwide should be unable to follow the secretary's (of the Air Force) dictates," Lamberth argued.

Goldman's attorney, David J. Butler, said Goldman — whose enlistment expires Aug. 31 — had wanted to re-enlist for a year to help him decide whether to make a career out of the Air Force. According to Butler, Goldman withdrew the application after his new commander gave him a negative recommendation for the re-enlistment.

Butler said Goldman may want to resubmit the application and asked the court to have the negative recommendation removed. When Lamberth said such an order would be premature since there is no current pending application, Robinson said, "I know what's going to happen and so do you. He hasn't got a prayer."

After considering the request, however, the judge said if Goldman decides to renew his application for re-enlistment and it is denied, the officer's lawyers could return to court to argue the point.

Haig, foreign secretaries to have talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — With El Salvador clearly in mind, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. meets Saturday with his colleagues from Mexico, Venezuela and Canada to try to forge a joint development program for the Caribbean basin before widespread economic distress fosters more bloodshed.

The four foreign secretaries will gather in the Bahamas for five hours of discussions on whether there is enough common ground to attempt a team approach to development of the area. The major problem is the marked disagreement between the United States and Mexico on security issues.

Haig, who was to leave Washington friday night, is expected to focus on trade liberalization and increased U.S. private investment as the chief potential American contributions.

Because of budgetary constraints, officials said Haig will be unable to offer a large aid package but they did not rule out the possibility that some aid funds might be reallocated to the Caribbean-Central America area from other regions.

The Reagan administration, worried that widespread economic distress in the region could lead to political instability, requested Saturday's meeting.

The administration believes that its policy toward the area thus far has been centered too heavily on confronting communist penetration in El Salvador. Saturday's meeting will enable the administration to claim it is capable of a broader approach to the region's problems.

Mexican officials, however, make no secret of their wariness of American intentions. Foreign Minister Jorge Castaneda has served notice his government will not be a party to any development plan envisioned as an instrument to fight communism.

Administration officials acknowledge, however, that combatting communist penetration in the region is a high priority concern.

In a speech earlier this week, President Reagan said he is interested in attacking the "root causes of instability" in the region while making it clear that "the United States will not tolerate interference by Cuba in the lives and freedom of other nations."

Besides Haig and Castaneda, Saturday's meeting will be attended by foreign ministers Jose A. Zambrano of Venezuela and Mark MacGuigan of Canada.

The main contributions of Mexico and Venezuela — the area's two major oil producers — are expected to center on selling oil to poorer countries of the area at concessional rates. Those two nations undertook such a program last year.

Canada's principal emphasis is on development assistance. It recently approved a sharp increase in such aid to the Commonwealth countries of the Caribbean.

With few exceptions, the economies of the 31 Caribbean-Central American nations have been deteriorating because of the high cost of imported oil and excessive reliance on a handful of a few food and raw material exports.

Unemployment rates are generally high, producing a steady wave of illegal immigrants to the United States. U.S. interest in curbing this flow is a prime factor behind the administration's attempt to promote a regional development program.

Officials concede, however, that the magnitude of the problems in the region drawf the resources available to combat them.

The United States already permits 85 to 90 per cent of imports from the region to enter the United States duty free, leaving little room for maneuver in the area of trade liberalization.

Rum and textile imports from the region are subject to duties because of pressure from U.S. manufacturers. Late last year, the Carter administration clamped down on brassiere imports from Costa Rica following complaints from the domestic industry.

The administration sees additional American investment in the region as perhaps the most efficient way to promote development. But officials admit even this approach has drawbacks because the populations — and thus the markets — of many countries are too small to appeal to U.S. corporations.

They also say there is political opposition in many countries to the idea of allowing foreign corporations to dominate the local economies.

Connors wins, McEnroe loses

NEW YORK (AP) — Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia shocked newly crowned Wimbledon champion John McEnroe before Jimmy Connors crushed Tomas Smid to give the United States a split of their two singles matches on the opening day of play in the Davis Cup tennis quarterfinals Friday.

Lendl outlasted McEnroe 6-4, 14-12, 7-5. Connors, making his first Davis Cup appearance since 1976, annihilated Smid, the veteran of the Czechoslovakian squad, 6-3, 6-1, 6-2.

Americans Stan Smith and Bob Lutz will play Lendl and Smid in the doubles on Saturday. Sunday's singles play will send McEnroe against Smid and Connors against Lendl in the best-of-five format.

"I had my chances to win," McEnroe said of his loss to Lendl. "I was up a break in the first set and again in the second set, but he kept bouncing right back. I guess mentally I was a little tired, especially after I lost the second set and knew I had to win three more.

Connors was brilliant, destroying his Czechoslovakian opponent in every set as Smid was able to hold serve only three times in the entire match — once in each set.

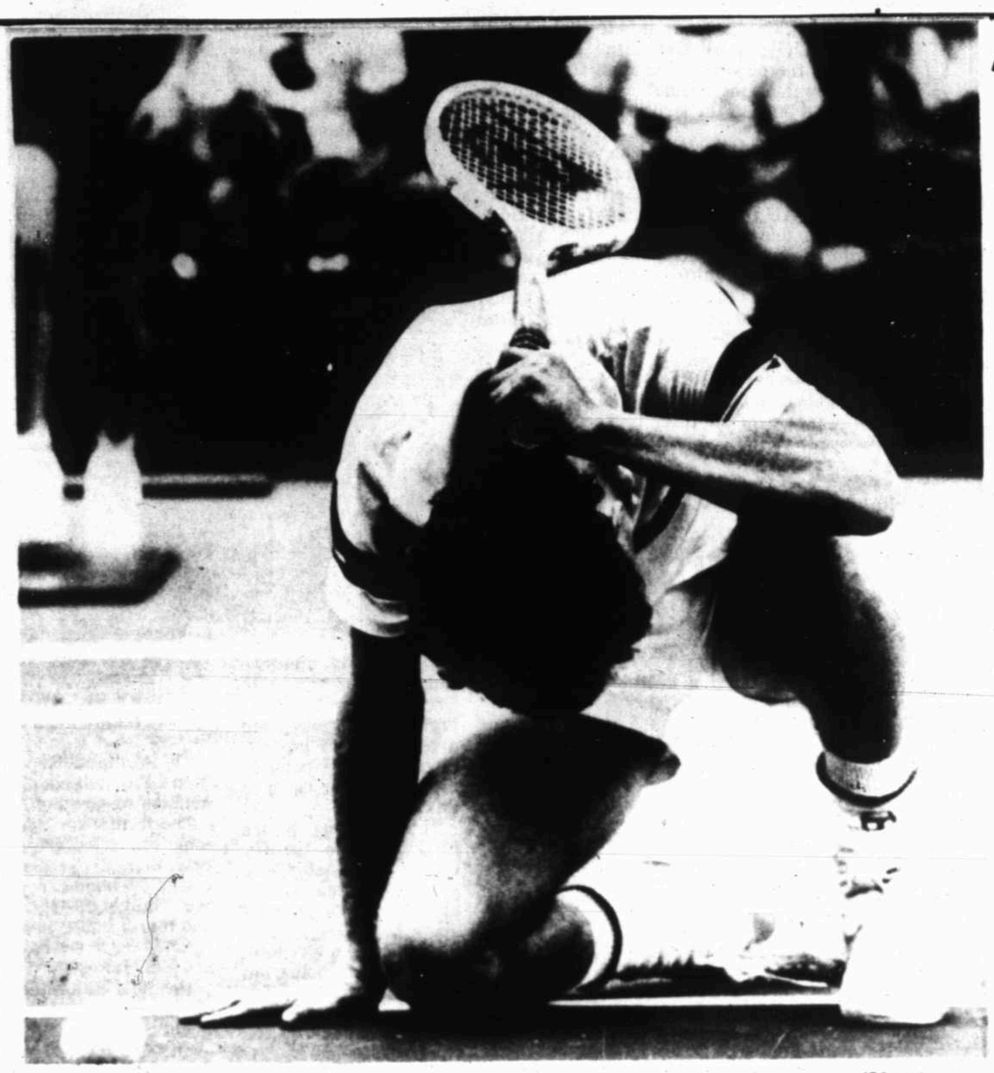

Oakland tried its best

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former Oakland Coliseum official testified Friday that Oakland was prepared to spend $8.5 to $10 million last year to keep the Raiders from moving.

William Cunningham, who left his post as Oakland Coliseum general manager in 1980, said the money would have been spent on a new practice field, executive offices, a Raiders' Hall of Fame and 64 luxury box suites.

But as the ninth week of the Los Angeles Coliseum and the Raiders' federal court antitrust trial against the National Football League concluded Friday, Cunningham said that Al Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner, wanted "more, more, more."

Cunningham testified, "The Raiders knew we were ready to go forward so long as we could get a lease long enough to finance it."

Midland home for Jackson

Cubs to face top hill staff

If the Midland Cubs are to retain their two-game Texas League West Division lead, they'll have to do it against the best pitching in the league.

Although 2 1/2 games back in the second half, the Jackson Mets, who will be at Cubs Stadium for the next five nights, won the first half pennant and did it with the best pitching in the league, posting the lowest earned (3.14) run average, most shutouts (17) and fewest hits of any staff in the league.

Midland brought up the rear in the first half West Division race, but is 11-7 in the second half and just home from a triumphant march through San Antonio, despite a mild batting slump. The Cubs, who were 0-5 on their first trip to the Alamo City, beat the first half West champion four out of six this trip.

UNDER GEORGE Enright, who succeeded Roy Hartsfield, promoted to Iowa early in June, the Cubs have played 21-17 ball and the team that once was 4-20 on the road, is 10-9 away from home under Enright.

Of course, it is a much improved club with the addition of outfielder Joe Carter, left-handed pitcher Mike Thompson, third baseman Fritz Connally, shortstop David Pagel, pitcher Henry Mack and all-purpose infielder Javier Fierro. Jon Perlman's return from Iowa promises to be a big plus, giving the Cubs a second righthanded starter. Jon, a former teammate of Connally at Baylor, broke in a with 4-2 debut win at San Antonio.

MIKE KING, the southpaw from Morningside College in Iowa, who probably will start tonight, also is a late addition to the club and has posted a 3-0 record since moving up from Quad Cities.

Jackson comes to Midland with the top relief pitcher in John Semprini, who leads the league with 12 saves, while Rick Ownbey, 8-4 and 2.14 ERA,Scott Holman, 2-5; Joe Simond, 4-3; and Mike Lowery, 5-5, are starters.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—The Cubs, 9-19 in one-run games in the first half, are 4-3 in one-runners the second half...Midland-San Antonio drew 14,950 for a five-night stand in San Antonio. That tops both series at El Paso where the Cubs and Diablos drew 12,332 the first time and 12,060 in June. For road games, the Cubs have played before 71,870 in 39 dates...King has an ERA of 8.55, but is 2.45 for his last two starts...Rob Blyth had a win and three saves at San Antonio and lowered his ERA, once at 5.82, to 3.26. That means for the last 24.2 innings in 13 appearances he has been 1.09...The sickbay list still includes second baseman Craig Kornfeld and pitchers Tom Spino and Carlos (Disabled) Gil...

Owners, players take hope at meeting

By HAL BOQK

NEW YORK (AP) — A proposal made by federal mediator Kenneth Moffett on Friday appeared to give both sides in the 29-day-old baseball strike some hope of a settlement.

While there were indications that both sides found things they liked in the proposal, the owners wanted time to discuss some problems they had with it.

The walkout has caused cancellation of 363 games since June 12.

After meeting for three hours, the negotiating teams recessed for dinner and Moffett announced they would return at 9 p.m. to resume discussions.

INFIELDER Doug DeCinces of the Baltimore Orioles, American League player representative, distributed copies of the mediator's proposal.

"We are discussing the plusses and minuses," he said. "Both sides had some objections and some problems, but we feel it has the skeleton for an agreement."

DeCinces said the owners requested the five-hour recess.

"The owners will come back and give us their problems with this proposal," he said. "I am not free to discuss it, We feel it has some possibilities. Something may come from it."

Moffett had presented his proposal to both sides on Thursday during a break in a National Labor Relations Board meeting charging the owners with an unfair labor practice.

That hearing concluded Friday with administrative law judge Melvin Welles announcing that he expected briefs to be filed within three weeks and any decision would probably come at least a month after that.

THE 26 major league club owners met in Manhattan Thursday night and announced total support for their bargaining committee headed by Ray Grebey.

Grebey then returned to the negotiating table Friday to meet with Marvin Miller and a committee of players headed by league player representatives DeCinces and Bob Boone of the Philadelphia Phillies.

Moffett's proposal defined premier players — those requiring additional compensation — to be in the top 20 per cent at each position, using statistics based on two-year averages. Excluded from the category would be players who were previously free agents, such as Reggie Jackson of the New York Yankees, Joe Rudi of the Boston Red Sox and Bobby Grich of the California Angels; players with more than 12 years of credited service; and players over 35 years of age.

Under the plan, there would be no re-entry draft for premier players and such players would be free to negotiate with any number of clubs. The re-entry draft for other free agents would continue as it has been since 1976.

The plan limited to 12 the number of premier players subject to added compensation in any one year. That was the number proposed by management last Saturday before negotiations broke down.

THE PROPOSAL then divided the 26 major league clubs into three groups — Group A consisting of the top nine teams; Group B, consisting of the middle eight teams, and Group C, consisting of the bottom nine teams.

If a premier player becomes a free agen, compensation would be paid from the signing club to the former club as follows:

If the player signs with a Group A club and the losing club is in Group C, the signing club would be able to protect 24 players before supplying compensation.

If a player signs with a Group A club and his former club is in Group B, or if a player signs with a Group B club and his former club is in Group C, the signing club would be able to protect 30 players.

If the player's former and signing clubs are in the same group, the former club would receive an amateur draft choice, the existing compensation.

In all other cases, there would be no compensation.

Throughout the stalemated negotiations, management has stood firm on protected player numbers of 15 for Type A free agents — those in the top 25 per cent — and 18 for Type B players — those from 26 to 35 per cent. The percentages refer to statistical performance.

As part of Moffett's settlement plan, a club losing a professional player for compensation which has protected 24 players would receive $200,000. A club that has protected 30 players would receive $150,000.

THE UNION has insisted throughout negotiations that any settlement not carry "punishment" or tax a team signing a free agent by requiring it to supply direct compensation. However, Moffett's plan calls for the professional player replacement to come directly from the team signing the new player.

The players association had recommended a pool might be established with players contributed from it from all teams to provide compensation. There was no mention of such a pool in the meditator's proposal. However, the protected player limit of 24 and 30 is considerably higher than the numbers management has been using.

The proposal was the first encouraging development in the strike that claimed as its latest victim Friday the 1981 All-Star Game.

The major league schedule contains a possible make-up date of July 30 and if the mediator's proposal leads to a quick settlement, it is conceivable that the game could be played on that date.

Haas' 66 good for Milwaukee lead

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jay Haas said it wasn't easy to explain his five birdies in a six-hole stretch Friday that led him to a 6-under-par 66 and the lead after two rounds in the Greater Milwaukee Open.

"It's something you can't foresee. It just happens. I guess maybe it's momentum," the 27-year-old Haas said.

Haas, a non-winner since the 1978 San Diego Open, has a 36-hole total of 134. He was 10 under par for two trips around Tuckaway Country Club and held a 2-shot lead over Lee Elder, the winner here three years ago, and three little-recognized pros.

Elder, 46, fighting knee and hand injuries this season, shot the best round among the contenders, a 7-under-par 65, for a 136 total.

ALSO AT that 8-under-par figure were Las Vegas song-and-dance man Tom Storey and rookies Thomas Gray and Rod Nuckolls.

Storey fashioned his second consecutive 68, Gray had 69 and Nuckolls 70 on the warm, sunny, windless day.

Dave Stockton, a two-time Milwaukee Open winner and the first-round leader at 67, could do no better than 72 and was at 137 along with Chi Chi Rodriguez and Mike Smith. Rodriguez and Smith shot 69s.

Haas, 36th on the 1981 money list with more than $66,000, took over the lead when he birdied 12, 13, 15, 16 and 17.

He then bogeyed two, followed with another bird at three and matched par the remainder of the way over the 7,010-yard layout.

HAAS HAD missed the cuts in his last two starts.

"I wasn't expecting much when I came here this week. I wasn't driving well. I wasn't doing anything well. I really wasn't expecting this," he said.

Nuckolls, 24, spiced his round with an eagle 3 on the 524-yard sixth hole. "That hole made my round," he said. "I had a 50-foot uphill putt. I was just trying to lag it. That got my adrenalin going."

Storey, 39, the winner of just $50,000 in five Tour seasons, said with tongue in cheek, "I don't know what's wrong. I've been hitting the ball well all week."

Elder, bidding for his fifth Tour victory, but first since 1978, came back with a vengence after his only bogey at nine.

The 14-year pro birdied the first three holes of the back side and added birds at 14 and 17.

ELDER has his knee drained twice yearly, the result of an old, sandlot football injury. And this week he's visiting a therapist daily for treatment of an injured left hand.

"That's what happens when you get old. You develop aches and pains," he cracked.

Defending champion Bill Kratzert posted a 69 for a 141 total and safely made the 36-hole cut.

At stake is a first prize of $45,000 in the $300,000 tournament, not being televised nationally.

Reynolds closes gap on Debbie Austin

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Cathy Reynolds shot a career-best 6-under par 66 Friday to move to within one stroke of leader Debbie Austin after two rounds of the 72-hole, $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Mayflower Classic.

Austin, the first-round leader, had a second-round 69, retaining the lead at a 7-under 137.

"I really hit the ball extremely well on the front side," said Reynolds, who will celebrate her 24th birthday on July 19.

Reynolds, who started her second round at the 6,101-yard Country Club of Indianapolis course even with par, said her Dec. 15 marriage to Dana Derouaux "turned my life around."

"He taught me to think," said Reynolds about her husband, who also became her caddy this year. "He has helped me level off my attitude."

Reynolds sank a pair of two-footers and a 13-foot putt for birdies on each of her first three holes. Then, after a pair of pars she sank birdie putts of six and 10 feet to go 5-under.

Reynolds had only one bogey, on the 393-yard, par-4 No.8 hole.

Austin, seeking her first tour triumph since 1978 and her seventh since joining the tour in 1968, needed only 23 putts to complete a round that included five birdies and a pair of bogeys.

"I putted terrific," said Austin. "The holes played tougher today."

There was a big gap between the leaders and the rest of the field. Beth Daniel, who had a second round of 70, was alone in third place at 141. Jan Stephenson, Louise Parks — a non-winner since joining the tour in 1972 — and Myra Van Hoose were tied for fourth at 142. Sharon Barrett and Connie Chillemi were another stroke back at 143.

Judy Rankin, who started the second round in a tie for second at 69, had a 76 for the day for a 145 total. Marlene Floyd, who was tied with Rankin at 69, shot a 75 and was at 144.

Amy Alcott, the defending champion, had a par 72 and was at 146.

The field was cut to the low 70 pros for Saturday's third round. It took a score of 153, 9 over par, to survive the cut.

USSR leads U.S. 97-93

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The Soviet Union rallied to take a 97-93 lead over the United States Friday in a dual meet between the track and field superpowers, their first confrontation in three years.

The American men captured seven of 12 events to grab a 68-59 lead. However, the Russian women were more dominant, winning four of six events for a 38-25 advantage to more than make up the difference.

The first day results put the Soviets in an excellent position to win the overall comptition for the 13th time in 17 meetings since 1958.

Tempers flare in Fame tennis

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Tempers flared as temperatures eased Friday in the quarterfinals of the $100,000 Miller Hall of Fame Tennis Championships at the Newport Casino.

Brad Drewett, an Australian, lost his composure during his match. Drewett received a delay of game warning from chair umpire George Parker while he persisted in questioning a service ace from Hank Pfister in the sixth game of the first set of their match.

Pfister won the match 6-4, 7-6, and advanced to the semifinal round today.

A police car blazes in Brixton, South London, Friday night in a fresh and brief outbreak of violence. The location is in the middle of some of April's worst fighting and only a quarter of a mile from where the Lord Scarman inquiry into the earlier riots is being held.

Fighting erupts in London slum district

LONDON (AP) — Fierce street fighting broke out Friday in the battle-scarred slum district of Brixton after a night of riots and looting by blacks and whites in 11 districts of the capital. Home Secretary William Whitelaw signed an order banning demonstrations in greater London for a month in a bid to halt the spreading violence.

A Home Office spokesman said the order was to take effect at 6 a.m. Saturday.

Merchants across London began boarding up shops on the advice of police. Shopkeepers from the city's fashionable Chelsea district to the working-class neighborhoods of Hammersmith in West London and Islington in the north were hammering boards into place.

Brixton, with a large population of West Indian descent, was the scene of bloody racial violence three months ago — the worst riots in memory until this week. Mobs of youth have waged nightly battles with police in four English cities, including Liverpool, where riots Sunday night were England's worst in 200 years.

In the latest fighting Friday, youths hurled bricks and bottles at officers in riot gear and set a car on fire, a police spokesman said. Three policemen were reported injured.

Witnesses said the trouble started when a crowd gathered to help a local businessman arrested by police. Looting also was reported across the street from Lambeth Town Hall in Brixton.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher met with community leaders in Southall, the West London district where the violence started a week ago, and took the opportunity to condemn "fascist organizations, because it is they who cause a lot of the trouble."

The rioting last Friday in Southall began when a large group of "Skinheads" — white supremacist youths known for their distinctively close-shaven heads — attacked a group of young Asians outside a pub.

Whitelaw's order banning public demonstrations and marches is designed to eliminate right-wing extremist attacks on non-whites and Asians as well as clamp down on the fighting between extremists of both left and right that has contributed to the week's disturbances.

Earlier, Whitelaw raised the possibility troops might be used to quell the rioting that has reduced sections of Liverpool, Manchester and Lon-on to smoldering ruins. He said he hoped they would not have to be used because experience in Northern Ireland had proven they created another problem: "How to get the army out."

"It is not impossible they would be used in certain circumstances," he said in Warrington, Cheshire, shortly before touring Manchester, 20 miles away. "But I hope (these) would never arise."

After the Southall outbreak a week ago, Liverpool's Toxteth district erupted in flames, with both black and white youths looting stores and battling police; violence broke out in the Moss Side district of Manchester; and some 12 different communities in and around London were hit by violence and vandalism.

Between Thursday night and dawn Friday there was fighting in all three cities and the ancient city of Chester, where about 100 youths battled police and eight were arrested.

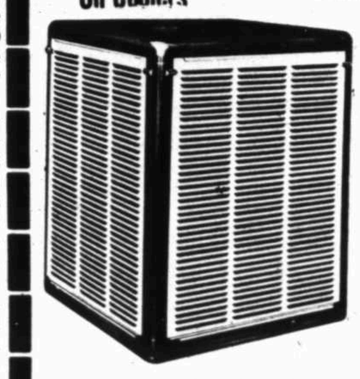

Street fighting and looting were reported in 11 working-class districts of London. Scotland Yard reported 66 arrests in all, 27 of them in Woolwich southeast of the city.

In Toxteth, Liverpool there were 29 new arrests overnight but no major incidents, police there said.

In Manchester's Moss Side, police came under attack from gangs of stone-throwing youths for a third straight night. Authorities reported more than 150 arrests and said the incidents were "less serious than previous but more widespread and numerous." Four officers were reported injured, including one who was stabbed twice.

After touring Manchester, Whitelaw was asked by reporters whether water cannon might soon be brought in by police in hopes of stopping the riots. "I would have no personal objection to this," he said.

Central Committee takes steps to expel 6 officials from party

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Central Committee took the first steps Friday toward expelling former First Secretary Edward Gierek and five associates from the Communist Party and called for a probe of former Premier Piotr Jaroszewicz.

The decision by the 143-member body appeared aimed at sweeping the issue of former officials' responsibility for Poland's labor and political crisis off the agenda of the party congress that opens Tuesday.

Final plans were being drawn for the congress in an atmosphere of political tension spawned by a week of warning strikes and the threat of new protests.

The committee met here after warning walkouts temporarily shut down Baltic ports, the national Polish airline and public transport in a major industrial city.

The protests ended a four-month period without strikes and drew criticism Friday from the official press in the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia and East Germany.

But the independent Solidarity labor union warned that more protests are yet to come, saying its Kutnow chapter would stage a two-hour strike Monday to dramatize the food shortage in the important railroad junction 45 miles west of here.

It was last summer's strikes which spawned Solidarity and cost the six men whose party membership is now in question their posts in a series of party and government shakeups that installed Stanislaw Kania as party leader in place of Gierek.

The Central Committee recommended a review of the party membership of Gierek and former Premier Edward Babiuch, whose announcement of meat price hikes last July sparked the strikes.

Other members to be reviewed include former Politburo member Jerzy Lukaszewicz, former Deputy Premier Tadeusz Pyka, Politburo member Zdzislaw Zadarowski and Jan Szydlak, former Central Committee secretary in charge of labor unions.

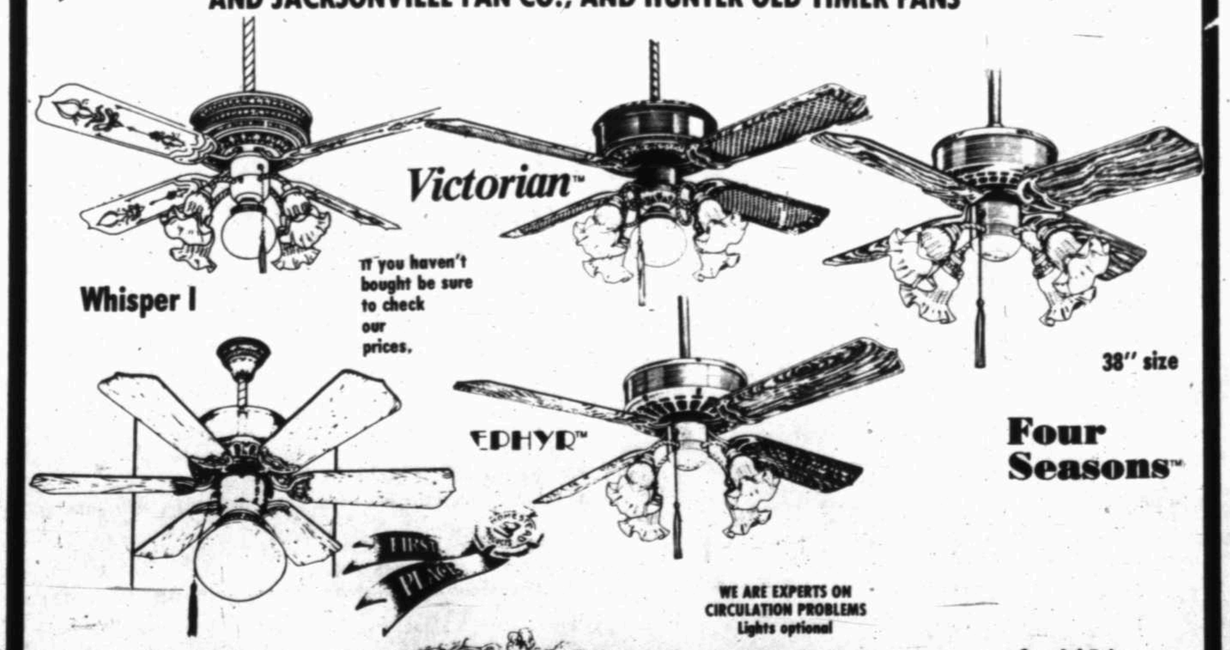

The committee recommended those officials and four others be stripped of all decorations. Gierek came to power on a wave of shipyard riots in Gdansk in 1971.

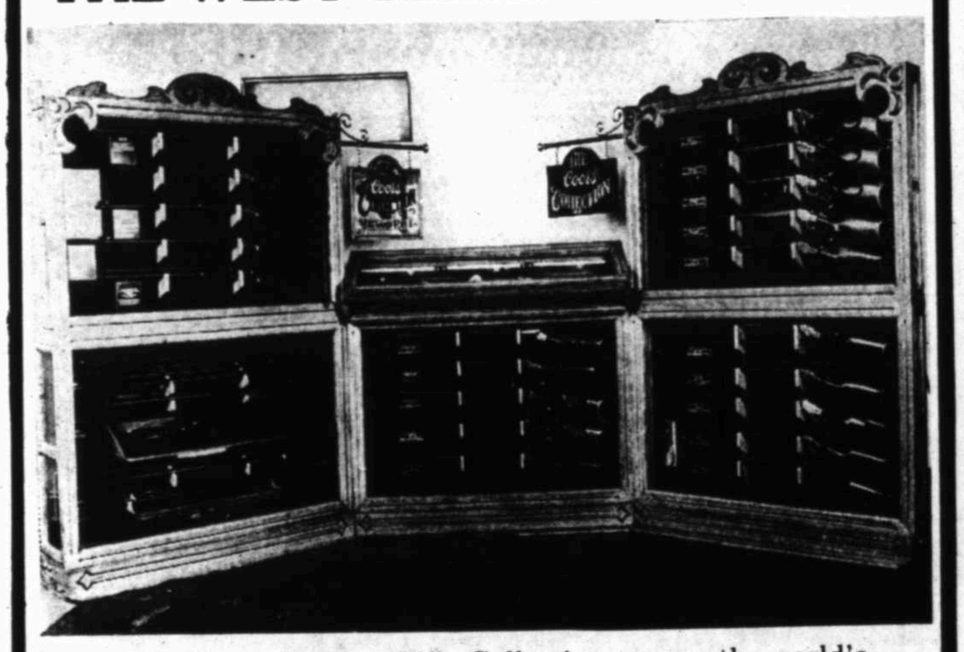

A number of unprecedented changes are on the congress agenda, including election of the party first secretary either from the floor of the congress or by the Central Committee. The party leader previously was chosen by the Politburo.

Jaroszewicz, whose 10-year premiership ended in April 1980, will be subject to a probe by the general prosecutor to determine if he is liable for criminal prosecution.

If convicted of failing in his duties, Jaroszewicz, who is blamed for pushing through a drastic 1976 food price hike that sparked riots near here and in Radom, could draw a five-year prison term, the Polish news agency PAP said.

"For the first time the possibility exists that a statesman will face the court charged with bad steering of the state," said Politburo member Tadeusz Grabski, who headed a party commission studying the former officials' actions.

Israelis, Palestinians attack each other again

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli jets blasted Palestinian military camps and rocket launching bases in southern Lebanon on Friday, breaking a five-week lull in air strikes against guerrillas. Hours later Palestinians rocketed a northern Israeli town, Israel radio said.

Lebanon's state television said three people were killed and 20 wounded in the attacks on Lebanese bases.

In Tel Aviv, the radio said seven people were slightly injured in the Palestinian attack on the Israeli border town of Kiryat Shmona.

The attacks came on the second day of talks between Lebanese officials and U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib, who is on his third trip to the Mideast to try to settle a Syrian-Israeli confrontation over Syrian missiles in Lebanon.

Edmond Chedid, a Lebanese reporter who toured the PLO camps, said he was told the Israelis used four U.S.-made F-15 jets in the attacks. He said a commander of the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a pro-Soviet Marxist faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization, reported one guerrilla killed and six wounded at the guerrilla's Habboush rocket base, 11 miles north of the Israeli border.

He also reported a PLO ammunition dump at Aqtanit, 18 miles north of the Israeli border, was set afire and a Soviet-supplied Katyusha rocket launcher was destroyed.

Cheded said a PLO commander told him two guerrillas were killed and three wounded at Nabatiyeh, and that there no reports of casualties at a base tucked in the lemon groves near Qinnarit that was also hit. It was not immediately where the 11 other wounded were.

A communique issued here by the PLO said the strikes were at Habboush, Aqtanit and Wadi el-Akhdar. It mentioned no casualties. The Voice of Lebanon radio of the rightist Christian Phalangists said 20 guerrillas were killed or wounded, without saying how many of those were killed.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv announced the raids. But Israel said only that Soviet-made rocket launchers and gun positions had been attacked and that all planes returned to base.

The strikes, on targets north and south of the Zahrani River, constituted the 11th Israeli attack on Palestinian guerrillas this year. PLO and Lebanese government tallies had previously listed up to 108 guerrillas and villagers killed in the Israeli raids.

Habib met for an hour with Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, a Moslem in the Lebanese government that apportions power between Moslems and Christians. He met with President Elias Sarkis, a Christian, on Thursday.

There has been no word from Habib on his talks or itinerary, but Lebanese government sources said on Thursday that the envoy was carrying "some ideas" for a solution to the internal Lebanese problems as well as the Syrian-Israeli stand-off.

The crisis was generated by the April 1 outbreak of heavy shelling between Christian militias and Syrian forces in Lebanon to enforce an armistice in the leftist Moslem-rightist Christian civil war of 1975-76.

Israeli planes downed two Syrian helicopters April 28, saying the helicopters were firing on Christians. Syria retaliated by moving Soviet-made anti-aircraft missiles into eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley the next day.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin has threatened to knock out the missiles if they are not withdrawn, but the Israeli elections and Habib's efforts have been cited as reasons the threat has so far not been carried out.

In the meantime, Mideast tensions worsened with Israel's June 7 bombing of an Iraqi nuclear reactor on the outskirts of Baghdad. The United States joined 14 other U.N. Security Council members in condemning the raid but Arab leaders said the U.S. government was responsible because American-supplied F-16s were flown by the Israeli attackers.

Arab mediators have arranged a cease-fire in the Syrian-Christian shelling and are working on a long-range solution to that conflict, in tandem with Habib's efforts.

Rioting erupts following IRA funeral procession

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Rioting rocked West Belfast on Friday after British troops moved in on the funeral procession of hunger striker Joe McDonnell in an attempt to capture members of the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Local Roman Catholic priests said troops shot and killed two civilians as the fighting turned into a major street battle, but a Royal Ulster Constabulary police spokesman denied that claim. Police said several people, including soldiers, were injured. A spokesman for the Royal Ulster Constabulary said two of the IRA men sought by the troops were wounded and one was captured.

The trouble started when an army squad tried to ambush three masked gunmen who fired rifle volleys over McDonnell's tricolor-draped casket as it was being carried from his home district of Lenadoon to Milltown Cemetery.

The rifle volley, the IRA's traditional "military salute" to fallen members, is outlawed.

About 200 mourners broke from the 10,000-strong procession and started hurling bricks and rocks to distract the soldiers and aid the gunmen's getaway.

Scores of men, women and children lining the funeral route and caught in the crossfire, took cover in doorways. Troops fired plastic bullets intended to disable the attackers.

A Royal Ulster Constabulary spokesman said troops stormed a house where two of the gunmen were changing clothes, wounded both in an exchange of gunfire, and captured one. The other two masked guerrillas and their "commander" were not seen, police said.

The RUC spokesman also said two men and a woman were later arrested but it was not clear if they were part of the rifle-firing party.

The spokesman said three rifles, apparently those used by the IRA squad, were seized.

The violence spread quickly to surrounding streets off Andersonstown Road and more than 100 police officers and soldiers in armored vehicles moved in to quell the rioting.

While forces battled the rioters, the funeral procession headed by McDonnell's 29-year-old widow, Goretti, and his two children, Bernadette, 10, and Joseph, 9, continued to the cemetery. McDonnell's brother Frank, 25, a prisoner, was given a six-hour leave from the Maze to attend the funeral. He is due for release in December from a five-year sentence for belonging to the IRA.

McDonnell, a 30-year-old IRA activist sentenced to 14 years in 1977 after conviction for handgun possession, was buried in an IRA plot beside Bobby Sands. Sands launched the hunger strike campaign at Maze Prison on March and on May 5 became the first of five fasters who have died. McDonnell died early Wednesday, his 61st day without food.

Patrick McGeown, 25, joined the Maze hunger strike as McDonnell's replacement Friday. Britain's Northern Ireland Office said he "refused breakfast" and thus joined seven other hunger strikers demanding special treatment which the British government says would amount to political-prisoner status.

The Rev. Francis McCorry, at the funeral Mass for McDonnell at St. Oliver Plunkett Church, appealed to Catholics not to stage "demonstrations of violence and hatred" over what he called McDonnell's "tragic and unnecessary death."

He said the British government had not played fair with negotiators who tried early in the week to end the hunger strikes and save McDonnell's life.
