Elections Saturday...

Early voting ends today

Election officials at the Snyder public schools administration building were expecting a busy afternoon on the final day of early voting in the May 2 board of trustees election.

Early voting wraps up today in the elections for city council, college board and Snyder, Ira and Hermleigh school board trustees.

As of noon, 480 people had cast ballots in the election for Snyder public schools trustees. The election, in which eight candidates are running for two at-large seats on the board, has drawn the most interest of all of the races.

The candidates are are Benjamin Felan, Luann Burleson, Mike Levens, Charles G. Anderson, Tim Coffman, Travis Bunch, Rudy Gutierrez and Richard Chambers.

Citizens waiting to make their choices for SISD trustees should note that voting on election day, Saturday, will be at City Hall, and not the administration building.

Voting hours in all of Saturday's elections will be from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m.

The trustees' election at Western Texas College has two contested races. Carolyn Barbee and Mike Dennis are candidates for Place 3. W. Jay Kidd and Joe B. Flowers are contending for Place 4. To date, 118 people have cast early ballots in the election.

Voting on election day will be held at City Hall, Hermleigh High School and Ira Community Center.

Thirty-three people have voted in the Hermleigh ISD board election, where six candidates are running for two at-large seats on the board. They are R. Neil Beeks, Ronnie Price, Nelson Edwin Eckert, Allen Kuss and Randy Bates.

Those planning to vote on Saturday should go to Hermleigh High School.

Ira ISD board election, featuring two contested races, had drawn 30 early votes by noon today. Candidates for Place 1 on the board are Darryl Calley and Don Davis. Keith Clements is the only candidate for Place 6. Wylie H. Oliver, R. Douglass White and Jeff Brown are running for Place 7.

Voting on Saturday will take place at Ira Community Center.

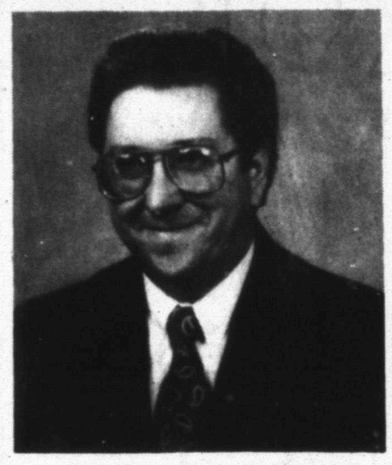

None of the four Snyder City Council seats are contested. Running are incumbents Vernest Tippens, District 1; Jack Denman, District 2; Mike Post, District 3; and Jack Greene Jr., District 4.

Thirty-eight total ballots have been cast so far.

Saturday, voting will be held at City Hall, by district.

Fogleman named principal at West

Thomas Fogleman, junior high school assistant principal, has been reassigned as principal of West Elementary, effective for the 1992-93 school year.

THOMAS FOGLEMAN

In a specially called meeting Monday, trustees unanimously approved Superintendent Dalton Moseley's request to reassign Fogleman and set his salary at $39,000 annually on a two-year continuing contract.

The board will name his replacement at the junior high at a later date.

By reassigning Fogleman as West Elementary principal, the board has completed another step towards next year's elementary reorganization plan.

The plan calls for grade-level campuses for grades 2 through 6. West Elementary will be the sixth grade campus.

Under the reorganization, Lee Presswood will be the principal at Northeast Elementary, Bob Travis will be at Stanfield, Jim Rosson at Central and Wayne Kennedy at East. Jim Erwin, who has announced he will retire at mid-term next year, will assist Kennedy at East.

North Elementary will be closed under the reorganization plan. Trustees accepted the resignation of North Elementary principal Ray Courtney earlier this month.

Fogleman, 40, was employed by Snyder ISD as junior high assistant principal for the current school year. He came to Snyder from the Breckenridge school system, where he taught band and choir for seven years. He also taught for five years in Roscoe, one year in Winters and four years in Throckmorton.

He recieved his master's degree in education from Angelo State University in 1982. He received his bachelor's degree from Tarleton State University and his associate's degree from Navarro College. He graduated from high school in Teague.

His wife is Kem Fogleman, a reading teacher at Stanfield. They have two children Lynn Michelle and Amy Elane.

BACK TO WORK — Walls Industries employee Shirley Giddens sews material for insulated coveralls this morning. Eleven employees began work Monday as the local plant resumed operation. Nine more were scheduled to begin today. (SDN Staff Photo)

Walls' production is underway again

Walls Industries re-opened the doors of its Snyder manufacturing plant Monday less than a month after contacting the chamber of commerce about the possibility of resuming operations.

According to manager David Wittie, the first day of operations was hectic, but went well.

"We were supposed to start with about nine employees, but we ended up with 11," said Wittie. "We had some people come in from Cleburne to help with paperwork and getting things in order."

Wittie added that a majority of the workers who began Monday were former employees, which made things run more smoothly.

"We didn't have to spend a lot of time training people the first day, because they have done this before," said the manager. "They were able to come in and go right back to work."

According to Wittie, nine more employees were scheduled to begin work today, bringing the total to 20 operators.

Wittie said that more employees will be added as the work load increases. "It is just a matter of getting things built back up."

Walls officials recently stated that they hope to have up to 45 employees in the plant by the middle of May. The plant employed 106 people at an annual payroll of $1.6 million when it closed last summer.

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Golf is a game where a little white ball is chased by codgers too old to chase anything else."

Despite what the Japanese want to say about American technology, we observed an ultimate victory for the U.S. in one of Austin's public buildings.

A guy in a dark, freshly-pressed business suit walked up to an automatic coffee machine and dropped in the correct coins. There were hums, whirs, clicks and the door to the coffee cup compartment slid open.

The man watched as a little green light bulb spelled out a "coffee brewing" message. In a matter of seconds, the steaming hot coffee poured out of the tube. He then patiently observed as the cream came out, followed by just the right amount of sweetener. Then the machine stopped.

The man remained calm. "That's amazing," he said. "The cup never came down, and the machine even drank it for me. I love this country."

This is a presidential election year, so everybody knows it is open season on politicians. Somebody left the following story on our desk:

A surgeon, an engineer and a politician were debating which of their professions was the oldest.

"Eve was made from Adam's rib," said the doctor, "and that, of course, was a surgical procedure."

"Yes," countered the engineer, "but before that, order was created out of chaos, and that most certainly was an engineering job."

"Ah-ha," exclaimed the politician triumphantly. "And just who do you think created the chaos?"

We finally came across an honest answering machine greeting. Like most folks, we hate talking to a recording. This recorded message may be our favorite:

"I could come to the phone, but I'm not. I want to be left alone. Leave a message, and when I get ready to, I'll call you back."

Lottery tickets on sale May 29

AUSTIN (AP) — The first Texas lottery tickets will go on sale May 29 and offer players a chance to win up to $1 million, officials said today.

The $1 scratch-off tickets will have prizes of $2 to $10,000, and feature a chance to enter $1 million grand prize drawings, which will be held for 12 straight weeks.

"Texas will have a new millionaire every week for 12 consecutive weeks," State Comptroller John Sharp said.

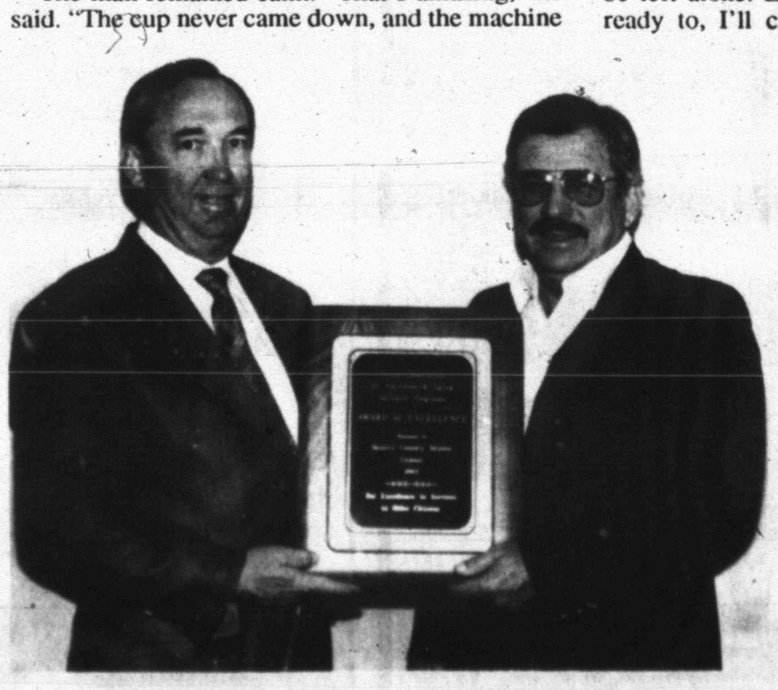

The "Lone Star Millions" game will be easy to play, said Texas Lottery Director Nora Linares.

Players must scratch off the covering of all six stars on the tickets. "Any ticket with three matching amounts is a winner," Ms. Linares said.

She said the overall odds of winning an instant prize are one in 7.9.

Tickets will go on sale at 6 a.m. on May 29 at more than 14,700 retail outlets.

"They're all here, from a sport fishing guide near Alvin to a domino club in Beaumont, from an art gallery in Houston to a bank in Temple," Ms. Linares said. "We're just amazed at the wide variety of businesses that want to sell lottery tickets to their customers."

Award of Excellence...

Senior Center honored

Scurry County Senior Citizens Center received statewide recognition Monday during the 11th annual Joint Conference on Aging in Abilene.

The center received the Award of Excellence from the Texas Association of Nutrition and Aging Services Programs (TANASP). The award is based on considerations such as the number of people served by the center in relation to the population of the community, the variety of programs, services and activities offered, and its involvement with the community.

This is the second year TANASP has named an outstanding senior center. The Abilene senior citizens program was the first recipient.

Jerry Baird, senior center director, accepted the award on behalf of the center Monday. He commended the volunteers who gave more than 17,000 hours of service to the center and the community last year.

"Everyone who works to make our center the best in the state can take pride in this award," Baird said. "They are the best."

The award was announced by Mary Sapp, executive director of the Texas Department on Aging. She noted that Scurry County's senior center has about 1,400 participants out of a countywide over-60 population of about 3,400.

Scurry County Senior Center has occupied its present location at 2603 Ave. M since Jan. 29, 1979. It was formerly housed on the Western Texas College campus.

The center provides a nutritious meal Monday through Friday. Transportation to the center is provided upon request. The center also provides transportation for senior citizens who need to run errands.

For senior citizens who cannot go to the center, there is a home delivered meal program.

Information about the center and its activities can be obtained by calling the office at 573-4035.

The Conference on Aging will continue through Wednesday in the Abilene Civic Center. The Kitchen Band and the Sunshine Choir from the Scurry County Senior Center were to perform today in the civic center exhibit hall as trade show exhibits opened.

Billionaire claims signatures collected

AUSTIN (AP) — State election officials say Dallas billionaire Ross Perot must submit by May 11 the 54,000-plus petition signatures he says he has gathered to obtain a spot on the November election ballot.

Katy Davis, spokeswoman for Secretary of State John Hannah, said Monday that Perot also must formally apply for a general election ballot spot as an independent presidential candidate.

"At some point, he has to decide when he wants to submit his petitions to our office, along with an application to be an independent candidate, and his designees for electors," Ms. Davis said.

May 11 at 5 p.m. is the petition deadline, she said.

On Sunday, Perot told supporters at a rally in Dallas that he had obtained far more than the 54,275 signatures needed.

"The job in Texas is done," he said. "If you can do Texas, you can do it anywhere."

Ms. Davis said that once Perot submits his petitions, the secretary of state's office will verify them, probably through a statistical sampling.

Under state election law, petitions are valid only if signed by registered voters who didn't cast ballots in the Republican or Democratic primaries or runoffs in March and April, Ms. Davis said.

Perot has said he is awaiting the results of petition drives in all 50 states before deciding whether to become a presidential candidate.

He has indicated he'll make a decision by June. Associates say they expect Perot to enter the race.

Recent opinion polls have suggested that Perot may have the support of a fifth or more of the electorate nationwide.

If Perot submits enough proper signatures in Texas, he would join three other presidential and vice presidential candidates on the November ballot — the nominees of the Republican, Democratic and Libertarian parties.

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: We recently lost a healthy, vigorous 45-year-old son-in-law who was at bed rest for six days due to a herniated disc. He sustained a pulmonary embolism and died prior to even being prepped for surgery. Is there any way to guard against such a tragedy?

DEAR READER: The sequence of events you describe is exceedingly unusual in a person your son-in-law's age. For years, doctors have recognized the many complications of prolonged bed rest: weakness, reduction in muscle tissue, loss of bone calcium — and thrombophlebitis, the most serious. It's this last complication that led to the tragedy in your family.

During forced inactivity, people — notably the elderly — develop a tendency to form blood clots in the veins of the legs and pelvis. Except for some soreness, patients may lack symptoms altogether.

However, over time, large pieces of these clots can break off and be carried in the venous circulation, through part of the heart and into the lungs. This is called a pulmonary embolism; if the clot is large enough, the condition may be fatal because large areas of pulmonary tissue are damaged.

As I said, this unexpected catastrophe is much more prevalent in older patients, especially those recovering from surgery; the elderly seem more predisposed to it. Also, they require longer in-bed convalescence following procedures, such as hip surgery, than do younger patients. For this reason, doctors routinely prescribe anti-coagulant drugs, such as Coumadin, for elderly post-op patients on bed rest. In addition, such patients are often encouraged to exercise their legs in bed (to prevent unacceptable pooling of blood), to move around freely in bed and to begin an early program of rehabilitation.

I am really surprised that your son-in-law developed a pulmonary embolism at the age of 45, after less than a week in bed. This makes me wonder if he were obese and smoked cigarettes, two factors that predispose to thrombophlebitis. I suspect he died because no one expected such a complication in a middle-aged man. I suspect his death could have been avoided if he had been given anti-coagulants.

As a general rule, patients at risk for thrombophlebitis from bed rest can be helped by early mobilization, in-bed activity and elevation of the legs (to promote venous drainage).

Parton encourages students to graduate

PIGEON FORGE, Tenn. (AP) — Dolly Parton says she's not trying to save the world, just keep some of it in school.

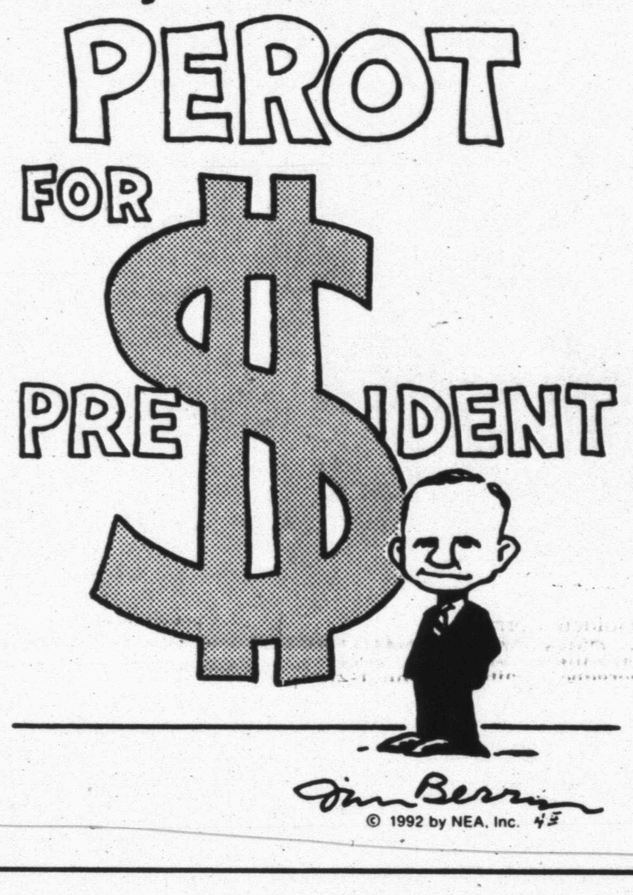

Parton and Education Secretary Lamar Alexander joined forces Monday to congratulate the first class of her Buddy program.

Announced in 1988, the program promised the 750 students in the seventh and eighth grades in Sevier County schools $500 each if they got a high school diploma. This year, 474 students were awarded the prize money.

"I think the money is minor," Parton said, calling it "an incentive to let them know we're interested."

Space station funding fight resumes in House

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA once again is being called upon by Congress to justify the existence of a proposed space station less than a year after surviving a life-or-death funding struggle.

Round Two kicks off this week, when the House begins consideration of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration authorization bill.

Although the measure will not translate into cash for the space station — that comes later, in the appropriations process — it will indicate the level of support in the House for the controversial project.

Rep. Tim Roemer, D-Ind., plans to introduce an amendment Wednesday to kill federal funding for Space Station Freedom, which is estimated to cost up to $40 billion to build.

Both sides agree the fight will be a tough one. That's largely because space station and a sister science project, the superconducting super collider, are due to grow at a time when domestic programs overall are shrinking by $6.4 billion. But supporters of both projects expect to prevail again this year.

President Bush has requested $2.25 billion for the space station in fiscal 1993, a 10 percent increase over this year.

Roemer's amendment would return $1.1 billion of the proposed $2.25 billion to NASA while $1.15 billion would be used to reduce the deficit.

Roemer opposes the space station on grounds it's too costly and its scientific benefits too few. He realizes he has an uphill battle.

UPI says it can't afford to go on

NEW YORK (AP) — United Press International, once among the world's largest news services, says it can't afford to go on much longer and wants to auction off its assets.

"What the auction does is actually kind of sets an agenda for transacting the business that will result in a new owner of UPI," UPI editor Steve Geimann said.

In a letter Friday to U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Francis Conrad, the news service asked permission to hold the auction before May 15 — when UPI "will have to cease operations due to an inability to meet its payroll."

The judge did not immediately rule on the request.

UPI, which goes back 85 years and has won nine Pulitzer Prizes for writing and photography, filed for Chapter 11 protection from creditors in August. Its parent, Infotechnology Inc., also sought bankruptcy protection last year.

"We will be looking forward to an auction in which there are several bidders," Geimann said. "It will really be up to those folks, the people who come to the auction, to determine what the future of UPI is."

He did not identify the potential buyers.

Wire Service Guild President Kevin Keane, whose union represents UPI editorial employees and is one of UPI's largest creditors, welcomed the deadline.

Time for bedding plants

AP Special Features

Gardeners looking for quick results often wonder if it's smart to buy plants already in flower.

"Most bedding plant annuals are currently being bred to withstand transplanting in bloom," says George Lucht, president of the Professional Plant Growers Association. "However, most annuals will come into full-bloom faster if existing blooms are pinched off before transplanting."

And if you must have instant color?

Lucht, who operates a garden center in Brooklyn Center, Minn., recommends buying 4-to-6-inch pots rather than the more common six-packs.

He says the larger size provides a better root system to help them adapt when transplanted in bloom.

Such pots are considerably more expensive, of course. And plants from seeds are even more economical than transplants of any size, but take more time and effort.

Many experienced gardeners use this rule of thumb if purchasing six-pack transplants: look for compact, healthy plants that are just starting to show bud color. That way you can be sure the label's color description is reasonably close, and you avoid much of the transplant shock.

If there is a choice, select six-packs with the largest individual compartments since this allows development of larger root systems.

"Look for bedding plants that are well-proportioned with stocky stems. Avoid plants that are leggy or limp," the plant growers association recommends in a fact sheet.

"The leaves should have a rich, green color. If, instead, the foliage appears mottled or if the edges of the leaves are curled, the plants may be suffering from pests.

"If the lower leaves are turning yellow, it could be because the soil the plants are grown in got too dry. When the soil mixture has been allowed to dry out completely, the plant's root system can be permanently damaged and the plants may never flourish."

To minimize stress from sun, the association recommends transplanting on an overcast day or late in the afternoon. If the soil in packs or pots is not moist, drench it thoroughly. Loosen the ground to a depth of 6 to 8 inches and dig a hole about the size of the root ball.

"Hold the bedding plant by its root ball, not by the stems or leaves, and set it in the hole," the recommendations continue. "Securely tamp the soil around the plant, making sure that the ground level and soil level of the plant are at the same height. Then thoroughly drench the bed, watering slowly, evenly and deeply."

For the next few weeks keep the soil evenly moist by watering when the surface begins to feel dry. During one of the waterings, apply fertilizer according to the product's label. To minimize future watering needs, and keep down weeds, the association recommends an organic mulch.

Alvi Voigt, agriculture economist at Pennsylvania State University, conducted a survey for the association of 1991-92 sales projections by members.

Petunia, the one-time leader, now is second, and common impatiens "is by far the leading bedding plant." Geraniums are third, followed by begonias, marigolds, sweet alyssum, dusty miller, pansies, New Guinea impatiens, salvia and vinca (catharanthus).

The growers recommend as low-maintenance, easy-to-grow flowers: African daisy, ageratum, sweet alyssum, begonia, celosia, cleome, coleus, cosmos, dusty miller, flowering kale, impatiens, lobelia, nicotiana, petunia, phlox, portulaca, salvia and vinca.

Not all will do well in every climate, so be sure to check if you haven't grown them before.

Terry Humfeld, the association's executive director, says there are two main reasons why some flowering annuals are easier to care for than others: (1) they don't require regular removal of fading bloom to stimulate new ones (dead-heading) or (2) they don't need pruning to avoid becoming spindly.

"Marigolds, snapdragons and zinnias need to be regularly dead-headed," says Humfeld. "However, ageratum, alyssum, begonias, portulaca and vinca are good examples of flowering annuals that don't require dead-heading and therefore require less time of busy gardeners."

As to pruning, grandiflora petunias, snapdragons and zinnias need cutting back while "multiflora petunias, nicotiana, pansies, verbena and vinca naturally remain bushy."

FUTURE BRIDE HONORED — The fellowship hall of Colonial Hill Baptist Church was the site for a bridal shower honoring Susan Harrison, bride-elect of Brandy Hickman, on Saturday afternoon. Children should learn about environment, skin cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Skin Cancer Foundation is distributing the second edition of The Sun Day News, a poster designed to teach kids about the environment and its effects on skin health.

Developed in conjunction with General Learning Corp., an educational publisher, The Sun Day News II contains information about sun protection and skin cancer prevention. It is designed for children ages 9 to 12.

The Skin Cancer Foundation, a non-profit organization, says the poster is being distributed to 60,000 fourth-, fifth- and sixth-grade students in public, private and parochial schools. It will also be distributed to 10,000 camps, scouting and recreation programs.

Fritzi Gordon, one of the best

By Phillip Alder

One of the world's greatest women players, Fritzi Gordon, died in London on February 8.

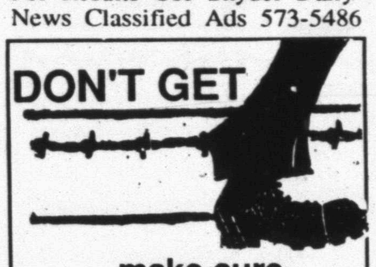

Fritzi was born in Austria and fled to England just before World War II. There she met and formed a partnership with another emigree from Austria, Rixi Markus. Rixi and Fritzi were the world's best women's pair for many years. They won four world titles: the Women's Teams in 1964, the Women's Pairs in 1962 and 1974 (they were second in 1970), and the Mixed Teams in 1962. Fritzi also won eight European Championships.

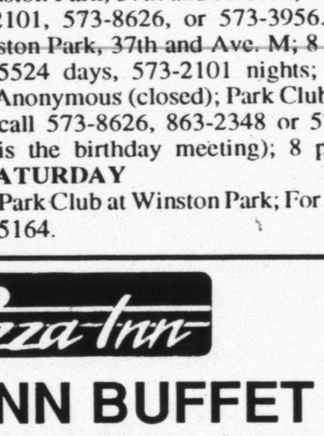

Fritzi was an excellent declarer. She read the cards perfectly on today's hand from the 1966 European Championship in Warsaw, which Britain won.

East took trick one with the diamond king and cashed the diamond ace: jack, queen, 10. In answer to her partner's suit-preference signal, East switched to the heart three: queen, king, four. Back came the diamond nine, ruffed in the dummy.

Declarer wondered why West, who had no reason to distrust the diamond jack at trick two, had risked giving a ruff-and-discard. Fritzi deduced that the spades were breaking 4-1.

Fritzi cashed the spade ace, led a heart to her ace and finessed dummy's spade 10. East discarding a diamond. After cashing dummy's spade king, Fritzi had to find the club queen. This wasn't difficult, considering the auction and the values already produced by West. Fritzi ran the club jack through East, led a club to the ace, drew the last trump with the spade queen and cashed dummy's clubs.

Tigers meet DHS in district contest

With three games left in the District 2-4A baseball season, coach Albert Lewis and his Snyder Tigers are hoping for a .500 season.

The Tigers, coming off a three-game road swing that saw them lose games to Lamesa, Frenship and Levelland, will return home today for a 7 p.m. battle against Lubbock Dunbar at Moffett Field.

The Tigers carry a 2-5 mark in loop action into today's contest. Dunbar is 1-6, with their lone win coming in an 11-10 slugfest against the Tigers in Lubbock.

Since the district race began April 3, the Tigers have beaten Levelland and Estacado, both in the friendly confines of Moffett Field. They are 0-4 in 2-4A road games.

They will send senior David Patrick to the mound to battle the Panthers today.

Snyder is coming off a 10-4 loss to the fast-improving Levelland Lobos. The SHS nine were able to get only five hits off starter Craig Black while a quartet of hurlers wearing the Tigers' black and gold walked six and gave up nine singles.

In other loop action today, Estacado tangles with the league-leading Lamesa Golden Tornadoes and Levelland visits Frenship.

Following the Dunbar game, Snyder takes on Estacado in Lubbock before closing out the season hosting Lamesa, May 5.

Annual NFL draft winds down

NEW YORK (AP) — At first glance, every NFL team got what it wanted in the draft and every coach could say, as Chicago Mike Ditka did when he got defensive end Alonzo Spellman in the first round: "We were suprised he was still there when we picked."

Come back in three years and see if it was true.

Two days of what could be the final NFL draft ended Monday after 17 hours and 34 minutes, the second day devoted to reaching for sleepers like Roosevelt Nix or the selection of name players without pro credentials, like Ty Detmer.

The last player picked was Matt Elliott, a center from Michigan. He was taken one pick after Buffalo took quarterback Matt Rodgers, son of the coach of the NBA's Minnesota Timberwolves.

It was the deepest draft in years and most teams hope it will help, even those like Philadelphia, which were without a first-round pick.

"I think he's an impact back," Philadelphia coach Rich Kotite after the Eagles used their first pick, a second-rounder, on Alabama running back Siran Stacy, who is still recuperating from a 1990 injury. That adds another knee problem to Philadelphia's stable of knee problems that starts with quarterback Randall Cunningham.

This was the last draft under the 1982 contract. Whether it continues will be determined if the league can come to some agreement with the players association pending an antitrust suit scheduled to start June 15.

So who did best in this year's draft?

Who knows, but you can start with Detroit, which desperately needed a pass rusher and got two with potential in the first two rounds — defensive end Robert Porcher of South Carolina State in the first round and linebacker-defensive end Tracy Scroggins of Tulsa on the second. In fact, if Detroit hadn't been able to get Porcher, it would have taken Scroggins No. 1.

"He has the sacks. He's big, he can run," Ron Hughes, the Lions' personnel director, said of Porcher, who pronounces his name the French way — Por-SHAY.

Washington got Heisman winner Desmond Howard with the fourth overall pick — the highest ever by a Super Bowl champion — and will use him as an eventual replacement for 35-year-old Art Monk. Defensive end Shane Collins of Arizona, chosen on the second round, was coming into his own late this season after a couple of years with knee problems.

010 LEGAL NOTICES

ADDENDUM TO RULES AND REGULATIONS, CRMWD LAKES AND RESERVOIRS
(As Adopted by the Board of Directors, December 1989)
PERMIT FOR COMMERCIAL FISHING GUIDE SERVICES ON DISTRICT-OWNED RESERVOIRS
LAKE J.B. THOMAS, E.V. SPENCE RESERVOIR AND O.H. IVIE RESERVOIR

The Colorado River Municipal Water District owns and operates three reservoirs on the Colorado River, Lake J.B. Thomas located in Scurry and Borden Counties, E.V. Spence Reservoir in Coke County, and O.H. Ivie Reservoir in Concho, Coleman, and Runnels Counties. The prime purpose of these reservoirs is the impoundment of water for municipal and other uses. In connection with the prime purpose of the reservoirs, the District permits recreational activities around and on the waters of the reservoir. It has been called to the District's attention that it is desirable to permit qualified individuals to engage themselves as commerical fishing guides on district-owned reservoirs.

In order to have some control over commercial fishing guides operating on District-owned reservoirs, the following criteria has been adopted by the Board of Directors of the District. It has been determined by the Board that an annual fee(s) must be paid by an individual providing services as a commercial fishing guide. A person desiring to provide such services must obtain a permit and license each boat that will be utilized in such business.

The annual permit will cover the period of January 1 through December 31. Regardless of the date the permit is purchased, the cost shall be the full annual fee. The annual fee for 1992 will be $200.00 for each boat the fishing guide utilizes. The cost of the permit during 1992 will be prorated based on the number of days remaining in calendar year 1992 at the time of purchase.

In addition to the purchase of an annual permit, the fishing guide must agree to abide by the following rules:

1. To observe all rules and regulations for boat operation and safety as set forth by the U.S. Coast Guard, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, and the Colorado River Municipal Water District.
2. To obtain all applicable State of Texas licenses and permits, as well as the Fishing Guide Permit from the Colorado River Municipal Water District.
3. To be sure all clients obtain recreational permits and have on their person such evidence at all times while engaging in recreational activities on and around the reservoirs owned by the District. The fishing guide permit will serve as a recreational permit to the fishing guide.
4. Not withstanding anything to the contrary herein, this permit is issued at the pleasure of the District and may be revoked by it at any time, with or without cause.
5. To obtain and maintain in force, liability insurance adequate to protect against liability for damages arising from any accident, injury, or damage, however caused, occurring either directly or indirectly from service or acitivity as a fishing guide. Minimum amount of insurance shall be $100,000 for each person injured, $300,000 for any one accident and $10,000 for property damage. Such insurance policy or policies shall provide for the Colorado River Municipal Water District's contingent liability on such claims or losses. A copy of such insurance policy or policies will be delivered to the Colorado River Municipal water District with a written obligation from the insurers to notify the Colorado River Municipal Water District with a written obligation from the insurers to notify the Colorado River Municipal Water District in writing at least thirty days prior to cancellation or refusal to renew any such policy or policies.
6. To covenant and agree to indemnify the Colorado River Municipal Water District, including its agents and employees, against any and all claims, demands, damages, or injuries arising from any act or negligence of mine, my agents, contractors, or employees, or arising from any accident, injury, or damage whatsoever, however caused, to any person or persons, or to the property of any person, persons, corporation or corporations, occurring either directly or indirectly from my service or activities as a fishing guide, and from nd against all costs, attorney fees, expenses and liabilites incurred in connection with any such claim, or any action or proceeding brought on such claim.

Any person providing services as a fishing guide on any of the District-owned reservoirs, without first having obtained a Fishing Guide Permit, as set forth herein, will be in violation of the rules and regulations (adapted by the Board of Directors) governing the recreational activities on District-owned reservoirs and may be subject to the penalties applicable to such violation.

Adopted this 16th day of April, 1992, by the Board of Directors of the Colorado River Municipal Water District, to become effective June 1, 1992, following the publication in area newspapers as required by law.

By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

April 29, 1992

You might become involved in an endeavor in the year ahead where you'll start out playing a minor role. However, before year's end, your position could be substantially elevated.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you're not impatient or erratic today, an important objective can be achieved. Take time to size up situations before you make your next move. Taurus, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Taurus' Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Arrangements you have with friends today for things of a purely social nature should work out quite well. This might not be true, however, if involvements are for commercial reasons.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You could be a trifle feisty today and more responsive than usual to challenges. However, it is very important you're able to distinguish between competitiveness and combativeness.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll have the wherewithal today to effectively implement plans that require bold measures. The courage you feel now might not be as vigorous tomorrow.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There is a possibility you might become involved in an endeavor today that someone else masterminded. Nevertheless, even at this late date, your contribution will be meaningful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you feel an associate is putting undue pressure on you today to do something you think has not been well thought out, stand your ground and don't yield until conditions are acceptable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Strive to keep pace with your duties and responsibilities today; if you fall behind, your workload tomorrow could be so heavy that you won't be able to get back to them.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Have fun and enjoy yourself today, but try to do so as inexpensively as possible. You're harboring rather strong extravagant inclinations that could be detrimental.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're as strong a finisher as you are a starter. This could be a very productive day for you, provided you schedule your assignments sensibly. In short, don't attempt too much.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you have to speak before others today, don't structure your speech too tightly. You'll be a better performer if you work from an outline rather than a script.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Financial conditions are mixed for you today, and you might hover somewhere between gains and losses. Yet you should still come out a little ahead.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're likely to be extremely enterprising and resourceful today, especially in situations where you can advance your self-interests. This strong emphasis assures success.

Jury seated

CONROE, Texas (AP) — A jury has been seated to hear the case against an acclaimed scientist accused of trying to kill a fellow scientist by putting a carcinogen into his nasal spray.

John G. Linner, 48, is accused in connection with an incident involving fellow scientist W. Barry Van Winkle. Linner, who now lives in Montana and works as a consultant is charged with putting an allegedly lethal carcinogen, beta-propiolactone, into nasal spray used by Van Winkle.

The two researchers worked together at the now-defunct Cryobiology Research Center in The Woodlands when Van Winkle used the tainted nasal spray the morning of April 8, 1991.

Van Winkle said he suffered what he described as a burning sensation before quickly washing his nostrils with water.

Van Winkle, 47, of Houston has reported no ill effects from the episode.

Montgomery County prosecutors claim that Linner was jealous of Van Winkle and spiked his nasal spray with the intent to kill him.

Accidental shooting, theft among reports

Snyder police took reports of an accidental shooting, a theft and criminal mischief Monday and early today.

At 6:35 p.m. Monday, Cogdell Memorial Hospital employees notified police of a Hermleigh woman who had come to the emergency room for treatment of a gunshot wound. The woman, 52, said she had accidentally shot herself in the tip of the finger while putting away a .38-caliber handgun.

Sheriff's deputies took the case because the shooting took place in the county. No charges are expected to be filed and the case is considered closed. The woman was treated and released from the hospital.

At 3:42 a.m. today, Rudy Hernandez notified officers that someone had taken his lawn mower from 810 29th St. A report for Class A theft was filed in the case.

At 8:01 a.m. Monday, administrators at North Elementary informed police that someone had broken a window and damaged several doors at the school. A report for Class A criminal mischief was filed.

A second report for Class A criminal mischief was filed at 8:37 a.m. after Leon Gutierrez complained to police that someone had broken out the windshield of his vehicle while it was parked at a local business.

At 2:24 a.m. today, a 20-year-old man contacted police in reference to two other men having assaulted him. The victim was transported to the hospital emergency room by Snyder EMS, where he was treated for contusions to his nose and right side of his face and released.

No charges had been filed by mid-morning today.

Police also spoke with a woman at 3:20 p.m. Monday who filed disorderly conduct against another woman for using obscene language toward her.

On the Issues

Overcrowding in prisons

Editor's Note — The Associated Press asks the major presidential candidates a question each weekday about their views on a particular issue and assembles their responses.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are the views of the major presidential candidates on the question: "Do you favor construction of more federal prisons or other means of coping with overcrowding in the corrections system?"

DEMOCRATS

—Jerry Brown: "We're reaching the end of the prison-building binge and it is time to get serious about crime in this country."

—Bill Clinton: "I've built more prisons in my state but that's not enough. We need more cops on the street and a real war on drugs."

REPUBLICANS

—George Bush: Has not proposed any new initiatives to deal with prison overcrowding, but opposes early release of criminals because of overcrowding. Attorney General William Barr says the Justice Department will help states lift court-imposed limits on prison populations that were designed to protect inmates rights but had in some cases pressured state parole officials into releasing violent criminals long before their terms were up.

—Patrick Buchanan: A spokesman said Buchanan had not taken a position on the issue.

Commission adopts sweeping regulatory changes in Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Producers would have a bigger say in how much natural gas is produced under a rule that has been passed by the Texas Railroad Commission.

The new system takes effect July 1. Its adoption Monday will change a more than 50-year-old method in Texas of allocating demand to producers, and follows 17 years of study by the commission and four months of heated debate.

"We've come a long way. This is an extremely important effort," Texas Railroad Commission Chairwoman Lena Guerrero said.

Under the new rules, the producer will tell the commission how much gas they can sell, and then the commission will set the "allowable" production.

Currently, pipeline companies and other purchasers each month tell the commission how much natural gas they will need for the next month. The commission then sets a production limit on a prorated basis among the state's more than 2,700 separate gas reservoirs.

But purchasers have historically overestimated demand, leading to competition among producers to sell to a smaller than expected market. That pinch on producers has been most acute during the recent spate of record low prices for the commodity.

Under the new system, the commission will tally monthly natural gas demand estimates from producers, factoring in production records, and then set the allowable rates.

"The independent natural gas producer in Texas has struggled to survive under the weight of a race-to-waste regulatory system," said T. Boone Pickens, chairman of Dallas-based Mesa Inc., one of the largest natural gas producers in the state. "Much of that weight has now been lifted."

The change comes at a time when other natural gas producing states have either adopted or are considering rules limiting production. This has drawn fire from some members of Congress who say they fear an emerging OPEC-like cartel of energy-producing states.

Ms. Guerrero said the change was not designed to limit Texas natural gas supplies and thereby drive up the price. "We will never allow less gas in this state to be provided than the market demand," she said.

Texas is the biggest producer of natural gas in the nation, providing about 31 percent of the country's demand. The state also has 27.5 percent of the nation's natural gas reserves.

But the commission delayed consideration of how to handle waste and market discrimination disputes that come up between parties with interests in an individual field.

Oil service companies look to former Soviet Union for opportunities

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Oil service companies in the Permian Basin are banking on tens of thousands of idle wells in the former Soviet Union.

The Commonwealth of Independent States own one-fourth of the world's non-OPEC oil reserves, according to recent statistics. The states of the CIS are the world's largest producer of oil and natural gas.

"Most of the petroleum industry is looking to the (CIS) and its potential right now," said Warren Bradshaw, vice president of The Highland Pump Co. in Odessa. "It's a risky area, but ultimately it can do wonders for this industry."

But a lack of cash, government instability, little international business experience and obsolete equipment threaten to make the republics a net importer of energy.

Roger L. Abel, national president of the Society of Petroleum Engineers, said that while 150,000 wells are active in Russia, an estimated 20,000 wells are idle because of acute equipment shortages.

Production from these wells could add 80,000 barrels of oil per day to the current commonwealth production volume.

"Government funding that traditionally was allocated to this sector is now competing with programs to alleviate other serious economic problems," Abel told the Odessa American.

Bradshaw said Highland is working to create an oil pump manufacturing facility in Azerbaijan. He said Highland is also working on a project to finance equipment and technology to Russia through a Japanese trading company.

"It has to mean more jobs (for Odessa)," Bradshaw said. "It's just that simple."

Disability insurance money cannot keep up with the demand

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sluggish economy and the growing number of U.S. workers claiming disability benefits are threatening the Social Security fund that helps 3 million workers who are physically unable to work.

The disability insurance fund will run out of money in 1997 unless Congress steps in, Social Security Commissioner Gwendolyn S. King told a Senate Finance subcommittee Monday. She emphasized, however, that only the disability fund, not the much bigger retirement fund, is in trouble.

"Social Security beneficiaries should be confident that their benefits will be paid timely, just as they have since Social Security benefits were first paid in 1940," Ms. King said.

It has been clear for three or four years that the disability program's payout was growing too quickly for its income. But just a year ago, the officials who oversee Social Security predicted the fund would be exhausted in 2015 — 18 years later than this year's estimate.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., the chairman of the Finance subcommittee on Social Security, said the dramatic change in forecasts was caused by a strong increase in the number of people who successfully claim disability benefits and the number who get the checks on a long-term basis.

Ms. King said people are getting onto the disability rolls at a younger age and fewer of them are leaving the rolls because of medical recovery, death or reaching retirement age.

Until recently, she said, the increase in the number of people who said they were physically unable to work was offset by strong economic growth. "Currently, however, benefits are growing much faster than revenues" because of the sluggish economy, she said.

The program pays monthly benefits to more than 1.3 million spouses and children of the disabled, in addition to 3 million workers.

Ms. King said the Bush administration will thoroughly review the disability fund before making a recommendation late this year for boosting its finances.

Moynihan and other witnesses at a hearing emphasized that most of the problem could be solved simply by earmarking slightly more of the Social Security payroll tax for the disability fund.

Under present law, most workers will have 7.65 percent of this year's wages withheld for Social Security: 1.45 percent for Medicare, 0.6 percent for disability insurance and 5.60 percent for the retirement system. Employers match the tax.

Starting in 2000, the disability share is scheduled to rise to 0.71 percent and the retirement portion will fall to 5.49 percent.

Woman receives settlement

HOUSTON (AP) — A rape victim who received $2 million from her former landlord in an out-court settlement says she hopes publicity surrounding the case will convince apartment managers to listen when residents complain about potential dangers.

The woman, identified only as Brenda because she did not want her last name used, said she had complained several times to the manager's office at Pate's Crossing about an obnoxious male neighbor who once tried to enter her apartment in the middle of the night.

The man, who lived across the hall, also brandished a gun once in the complex parking lot, the woman said.

"I was complaining about what I heard and saw," she said. "There was loud music (from the man's apartment) at all times of day. They (management) said they were going to take care of it."

The neighbor, Seth Hill, sexually assaulted the woman in May 1989. He was convicted and is now in prison.

The woman said management, which had begun 30-day notice of eviction proceedings before the rape, should have given Hill only three days to move out, as would be given a tenant who did not pay rent.

The lawsuit was filed against the management company, Trammel Crow Ltd., in a court action known as premises liability.

The lawsuit accused the complex of violating the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act by "failure to perform security measures necessary under the circumstances."

Lawyer G. Robert Friedman, who represented the woman, said such multimillion-dollar judgements will get apartment owners' attention and persuade them to deal promptly with security problems.

"I think it means management companies are going to have to pay attention to complaints to protect tenants," Friedman said. "There's a growing trend of rape victims and victims of crime to sue these establishments if they could have prevented (the crime)."

Jennifer House, a lawyer who represented the management company, said the woman may feel a sense of vindication and satisfaction with the settlement, but premises liability suits will not prevent violent crime at apartment complexes.

A provision in Brenda's lease said the complex owner's security measures do not constitute a guarantee of tenants' safety.

Boy's arm, hand reattached after accident on the farm

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Doctors say they're optimistic a 6-year-old whose severed left arm and right hand were reattached will regain use of the arm.

They are less certain about the boy's hand.

Michael Conoboy's limbs were torn off Saturday while he and his 14-year-old stepbrother were riding on the arm of an irrigation system in a field near their Chetek, Wis., home. He underwent surgery Saturday and again on Monday.

"This is a tremendous insult to the body ... to re-implant a large bulk of muscle that's lost its blood supply for a long period of time," said Dr. Paul Donahue, who headed the surgical team at St. Paul-Ramsey Medical Center.

But Donahue added: "I do think his left arm will be able to regain some useful functions. At this point we're not certain he'll be able to regain functions of the right hand."

Hospital spokeswoman Lisa Blomeke said Michael is aware of what happened but cannot speak because he is on a respirator.

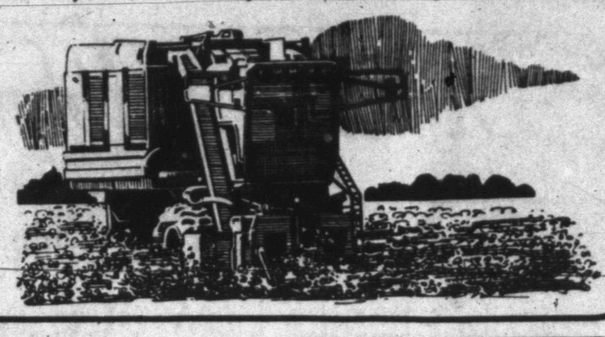

The kindergartner underwent nine hours of surgery on Saturday and 41/2 on Monday. His arm was severed 11/2 inches above the elbow.

Donahue said that Michael's stepbrother, Matthew Neisler, carried the 65-pound youngster and the severed arm to the boys' home a quarter-mile away. An ambulance crew and sheriff's deputies found the hand in the field.

Michael and the limbs were taken by helicopter from a hospital in Barron, Wis., to St. Paul, about 80 miles to the west.

SCS Notes

By Michael Squires
Range Conservationist

All land is not the same; most farms have several soil types with different physical properties that influence the potential for soil erosion. Some soils are highly erodible, while others have minimal erosion potential under any cropping system.

The conservation compliance provision of the Food Security Act (FSA) of 1985, as amended by the Food, Agriculture, Conservation and Trade Act (FACTA) of 1990, applies to highly erodible fields on which annually tilled crops or sugarcane are planted. The Soil Conservation Service (SCS) estimates that 140 million acres of cropland in the United States will be subject to the conservation provisions of the FSA and the FACTA.

To remain eligible for most U.S. Department Agriculture (USDA) program benefits, you must have developed and be actively applying a locally approved conservation plan on your highly erodible fields. Conservation plans developed before Dec. 31, 1989, must be fully implemented by Dec. 31, 1994.

SCS has an inventory and description of each soil type on your farm. SCS uses this information to determine which fields are highly erodible. The agency provides help with conservation planning. Specialists from SCS, Cooperative Extension Service, Forest Service, and local conservation districts, as well as agricultural consultants, vocational agriculture instructors, and others can provide assistance.

Steps to take in conservation planning are:

1. Ask conservationists or advisors to help you interpret detailed data about your soil types and their limitations, production and erosion potentials, crop adaptability, and resource problems.

2. Discuss your plans with SCS and others to explore economically feasible conservation alternatives to overcome problems, make better use of the soil, and remain eligible for USDA program benefits.

In some cases, changes in cropping systems and specific treatments on cropland may be needed to substantially reduce erosion. You may want to convert some cropland to pasture, rangeland, recreational woodland, or wildlife habitat. These lands may be suitable for the Conservation Reserve Program.

3. Decide exactly how you are going to use your land and what conservation practices will be used.

For example, on relatively level cropland, crop sequence and crop residue management and/or conservation tillage may be adequate. On sloping cropland, other practices such as contour farming, stripcropping, or grassed waterways may be needed. In some cases, terraces may be an economical alternative.

4. Decide with a conservationist or advisor when to apply the practices to best meet erosion reduction requirements. Select the best time to fit residue management and other cultural practices into your operation and decide when to install needed conservation structures. The conservation district can help find special equipment and provide technical assistance for design and construction of practices. Remember, all erosion reduction practices on highly erodible cropland must be installed by Dec. 31, 1994.

5. Sign a copy of your conservation plan. SCS certifies that the plan is technically correct according to the Field Office Technical Guide. The plan, if acceptable, is approved by the local conservation district.

As circumstances change, you may need to alter your plan. Discuss any changes with SCS beforehand to ensure that land use and conservation treatment will not change your eligibility for farm program benefits.

Remember, the conservation plan is:

- a document that is flexible enough to meet the requirements of your specific farming operation
- a document for the land you own and use.
- a document of decisions you have made and must implement on schedule to maintain eligibility for USDA program benefits
- a document that incorporates the best available and practical technology
- a document with a clear description of actions you will take to comply with the Highly Erodible Land Conservation Provision

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS), Farmers Home Administration, and the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation will need verification of an approved conservation plan before determining eligibility for farm program benefits, loans or guarantees.

SCS and conservation districts can help you install practices according to the schedule in your plan. SCS is committed to carrying out the provision of the law. Every year, SCS will conduct random status reviews to verify that persons are complying with the requirements of their conservation plans, as certified on Form AD-1026 at the ASCS office.

The spring of 1992 is shaping up to be a good season for mesquite control. Adequate moisture should provide mesquite and other brush plants excellent growing conditions.

A Brush Control Clinic will be held on Monday, May 4, from 1-3 p.m. at the Scurry County Rodeo Association grounds located on Gary Brewer Road. Mr. J.F. Cadenhead, extension range and brush control specialist from Vernon, will be the guest speaker.

Brush control alternatives for pasture and CRP acreages including mechanical, chemical, fire, and combinations of these will be discussed. Specific topics will include product selection, application techniques, application timing, controlling brush along fencelines, and streamline basal treatments for plants up to about four inches in diameter.

Use of the back-pack sprayer and spot gun for individual plant treatments will be demonstrated. Mr. Cadenhead will also demonstrate using drip torches for controlled burns and "boom-buster" spray nozzles for foliar treatments.

Licensed private applicators will be offered two continuing education credits for attending this training.

This clinic, sponsored by the Scurry County Extension Service, is free and open to the public.

For more information contact the Scurry County Extension Office at 573-5423.

State SWC election set May 5

The regular election of a member to the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board to represent District 2 is scheduled May 5 in the Houston Harte University Center on the Angelo State University campus in San Angelo.

The election will begin at 6 p.m.

The Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board, an agency of government, was created in 1939. Unlike many state agencies and commissions whose policy making bodies are gubernatorial appointees, the state board consists of five elected members.

State board members are elected in a convention type election by delegates from soil and water conservation districts with the district the member is to represent. Qualified delegates voting in the election must be landowners, reside in the SWCD they represent at the convention, and be actively engaged in farming or ranching. Each SWCD in District 2 selects one delegate to attend the election.

Each state board member serves a two-year term. Each member must own agricultural land and be actively engaged in farming or ranching.

Food additives are those substances or mixture of substances, other than the basic foodstuff, which is present in a food as a result of any aspect of production, processing, storage or packaging. Food additives perform one or more important functions and are added to foods to achieve specific effects during production, processing and distribution.

Food additives can be grouped by functions as follows:

Preservatives help assure safety and maintain freshness by preventing food spoilage from bacteria, mold, fungi, yeast or chemical agents.

- Nutrients such as vitamins, minerals or protein serve to maintain or improve the nutritional quality of a food.
- Processing aids provide body, improve consistency and enhance overall product quality by stabilizing, thickening, retaining moisture, emulsifying and preventing lumping.
- Flavors such as spices, flavor enhancers, natural or synthetic flavors and sweeteners compliment the taste and aroma of food.
- Colors contribute to a food's desired or characteristic color.

Of nearly 3,000 direct food additives used in this country today, sugar, salt, corn syrup, citric acid, baking soda, vegetable colors, mustard and pepper make up 98 percent by weight of all additives used. The food industry and government regulatory agencies make every effort to minimize the risks associated with the consumption of food. Food additives have a key role in assuring the availability of an abundant and wholesome food supply by making our coast-to-coast food distribution system possible.

Scurry ASCS receives honor

COLLEGE STATION—The Texas State ASC Committee presented the Scurry County ASCS Office a Certificate of Appreciation for their demonstration of exceptional ability, dedicated commitment and the performance of outstanding service to ASCS and the farmers and ranchers of Texas in the administration of the 1990/1991 Disaster Program. The Texas State ASC Committee presented certificates of appreciation to every county ASCS office in Texas.

Jerry D. Harris, Chairman of the Texas State ASC Committee, said, "We would like to take this time to let you know how proud we are of our county office employees and their dedicated service to the farmers and ranchers of Texas."

In addition, Harris stated, "As you know, the county offices just finished the signup period for the 1990 and 1991 Disaster Program. What you may not know is what commitment and hard work it took for the counties to meet the deadlines imposed by Congress. Texas county offices were required to make a report of participation and projected payments not later than Saturday, April 11, 1992. However, computer software sent to the counties to transmit the data was faulty. A fix to the problem was not received until late Friday night, April 10, and had to be hand-delivered to many offices. Determined county office employees worked long hours Friday and into Saturday night traveling from county to county to ensure information was timely and accurately transmitted to Washington, D.C."

As a result of county office efforts, the disaster information was successfully transmitted to Secretary of Agriculture Ed Madigan who announced a payment factor of 50.04% and authorized disaster payments of more than $144,000,000 for Texas producers.

According to Harris, Texas ASCS employees continue to set the example for all government employees.

Dear Abby

Dogs Who Frighten Child Keep Sister-in-Law at Bay

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1992 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My sister-in-law — I'll call her Evy — has two dogs, a poodle and a Lhasa apso. I have an 18-month-old son, "Timmy," who is Evy's godson.

When I visited Evy with Timmy, her dogs yelped, barked and jumped up on my son, frightening him. The last time we were there, the poodle came very close to biting Timmy on the cheek. The child became hysterical. I told Evy I would not visit her again unless she secured her dogs behind a barrier, and if she wanted to visit me, she would be welcome — without her dogs.

It's been two months and neither one of us has budged. I'm afraid the longer this situation continues, the more hard feelings it will cause in the family. I hope with your wisdom you can resolve this matter.

UNPLEASANT SITUATION

DEAR UNPLEASANT: The "wisdom" you attribute to me will not resolve this stalemate. You gave Evy an ultimatum: Either secure the livestock, or I'm not crossing your threshold with your beloved godson.

To date, Evy has shown no signs of missing you. Were your demands unreasonable? Absolutely not. Is Evy being unreasonable? Absolutely.

If you miss her, and want to avoid a family feud, visit her with Timmy and carry a water pistol (filled with water); if her pooches come near your baby, let 'em have it with both barrels.

DEAR ABBY: What is so fascinating about sex? My husband told me the facts of life on our wedding night. I never asked any questions before I was married because I didn't know there was anything to ask.

I learned about abortion, homosexuality and condoms only after they became media stars. I still don't understand many sex-related phrases. I find people coupling a laughable image — not romantic.

After five years of pain, messiness and vaginal infections, I said "no more" and abstained for 30 years. Yet I had a beautiful marriage.

As a recent widow, tall, blonde and pretty, but preferring the morals, dress and lifestyle of the '30s, '40s and '50s, I would like to date again. But are there any men out there who still abide by the old rules and treat women like ladies? In other words, a kiss goodnight, and nothing more until marriage?

LESS IS MORE IN OHIO

DEAR LESS: There are men who treat women with respect and do not demand sexual favors in return for their company. But don't expect to find another man who would stay married to a woman who regards marital relations as painful, messy and the cause of vaginal infections. Your husband was one in a million.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My parents split a number of years ago after 15 years of a loveless marriage. I was 11 years old at the time. Divorce is always painful for the children, but you would be surprised how quickly most kids can adjust.

I know some kids who are angry at their parents for getting divorced, but that's selfish. If my parents had been happy together they never would have split. I may not live in a happy family, but I have a happier life now.

My dad went back to live in his hometown. He ran into his childhood sweetheart and eventually married her, and he's never been happier. Mother went back to college, and now she's enjoying a much fuller and happier life than she could have had with Dad.

It is much better for children to live in a stable, single-parent home than one in which there are a couple of unhappy parents who can't get along no matter what.

Delegates are being counted too early

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House, eager to begin the fall campaign and get rid of Patrick Buchanan, says President Bush will have secured his renomination in today's Pennsylvania primary. But Bush's campaign is counting delegates who don't yet exist.

"We had already turned our sights to the general election," where Bush likely will face Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, Bush campaign political director Mary Matalin said Monday.

And locking up the nomination "unequivocally eliminates" Buchanan as a factor, even though the conservative TV commentator insists he will stay in the race until the California primary on June 2.

The president won't have the required 1,105 delegates until after state conventions in Maine and Wyoming this weekend.

It's easy to see why the campaign would want to proclaim Bush the victor as soon as possible, says James David Barber, a Duke University political science professor.

"The idea is that you marshal support by showing that you have support," he said. "You say, 'I already have support, so you support me too.'"

The Bush campaign on Monday said the president already had 1,051 delegates, just 54 shy of the threshold.

With that total, Bush would clinch the nomination today in Pennsylvania, the same state that put him over the top four years ago and forced Kansas Sen. Bob Dole out of the race. There are 72 delegates at stake in Pennsylvania.

But Bush's delegate total, according to a count maintained by The Associated Press, was 1,020 delegates, and if Bush won all 72 Pennsylvania delegates, he would still be 13 delegates short of enough to clinch the nomination.

The Bush campaign was counting Maine's 22 delegates and the 10 Illinois delegates that remain to be chosen. Republicans in Maine hold their state convention this weekend and will choose those delegates at that time. Illinois Republicans, who already have given Bush 75 delegates, will choose the remaining 10 at their state convention in June.

There's no technical advantage to Bush clinching the nomination, but it nonetheless provides a boost for the campaign, said Matalin.

Lubbock team wins national Science Bowl competition

WASHINGTON (AP) — A team of young Texans from Lubbock High School have earned a trip to Europe and a visit to the White House by winning the National Science Bowl.

The team overcame a 10-point deficit in the final minutes Monday.

The question they answered to take the final lead: What chemical element "undergoes a strange transition near absolute zero that permits it to flow as a liquid without friction."

The answer: Helium.

Lubbock High School, which also won last year's competition, defeated La Cueva High School of Albuquerque, N.M., 74-70, to claim the first-prize trip to England for the London Youth Science Forum.

"I am elated," said 17-year-old Juny Sridhara, whose quick answer to a separate question gave his team its chance for the 10-point bonus on helium. "Those guys were very good and those questions were really, really hard. First we were in a slump and then we came back."

Questions on atomic physics were the biggest surprise, added Heyning Cheng of La Cueva. He said he had expected questions on biology, earth science, chemistry, physics, astronomy and computer science.

"This was a good exercise in mental agility," said Cheng, 18.

Sandia High School of Albuquerque wound up in third place and Newnan High School, Newnan, Ga., in fourth after matches on Sunday.

Energy Secretary James D. Watkins later announced that La Cueva's team also will spend two weeks this summer at the London forum. The third- and fourth-place teams will spend one week at science-related camps.

Lubbock was scheduled for a Rose Garden ceremony with President Bush today.
