House panel delays vote on proposal

WASHINGTON (AP)— Less than a day after President Reagan warned that "the safety of our homeland" is at stake in Central America, a House panel today sidestepped a fight with the president by postponing a vote on a bill to cut off covert support to Nicaraguan rebels.

After a 1½-hour closed-door meeting of the House Intelligence Committee, House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said a vote on the proposal would be delayed until Tuesday. House Republicans had pressed for a postponement.

"This needs to be considered not swiftly but wisely," Wright told reporters after the meeting. "We don't want to ram something down anyone's throat."

On Wednesday night, Reagan declared in a rare foreign policy address to a joint session of Congress that a leftist guerrilla victory in El Salvador could undermine U.S. credibility around the world, and he pressed for congressional approval of an emergency $110 million military aid package for the Salvadoran army.

Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass., intelligence committee chairman, has proposed terminating covert U.S. support for the insurgents fighting the leftist Nicaraguan government within 45 days and establishing instead a public fund to help Central American governments stop leftist gun-running in the region.

Boland said that a majority of the intelligence committee favors his amendment, amd that after Tuesday's vote the committee will ask House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., for a closed House session to discuss CIA activities in Central America.

In announcing the postponement of a vote, Wright described the Boland proposal as a "well-balanced bill" that while ending U.S. support for Nicaraguan rebels, would enable friendly governments to stop weapons from reaching leftist guerrillas in El Salvador and other countries.

"It would be an out-front, on-the-table, right-out-in-the-sunlight operation," he said.

In his speech, Reagan renewed his call for congressional approval of an emergency military aid and declared that stopping leftist revolution in Central America was vital to U.S. national security.

He also said he will name a special envoy to help bring peace to Central America and work with Congress. In addition, he said the administration supports any agreement reached by Central American nations for withdrawal of all foreign troops and security advisers.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said today Reagan "felt very good about his speech...and the reception to it.

"The response in the chamber and the public response and congressional response following the address reflected a strong bipartisan flavor," Speakes said.

Within 90 minutes after the speech, the press spokesman said, the White House received 1,419 telephone calls he said were positive and 904 calls that were negative. By 7 a.m. today, the White House had received 607 positive telegrams and 230 negative.

"It strikes us as a strong reaction, basically positive," Speakes said.

He added the administration would "renew our efforts with Congress beginning today ... The president will be totally involved."

Clerks' 'hunch' pays off

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

There was "something unusual" about the sweat-drenched man who asked directions to the fitting room.

It was a gut feeling that two J.C. Penney store clerks said they felt when he approached the men's department late Wednesday morning.

Unknown to the two clerks, that "something" was the nervous actions of a suspected armed robber who had the law nipping at his heels.

Less than an hour before, the man and two accomplices allegedly heisted cash and jewelry valued at $56,000 from Canton's Decorating Center at 4600 Sinclair, according to police.

A call to police from the shop's owner led them on a high speed chase, ending near Midland Park Mall. The suspects fled on foot toward the mall, sinking a .32-caliber revolver in a nearby Dumpster.

"He looked nervous," said Penney's clerk Cindy Waner.

"He grabbed a shirt off the rack and automatically asked, 'Where can I try this on?'" she added, referring to a red, blue-striped golf shirt.

"He came out of the dressing room wearing the shirt," said Nell Jones, another clerk. "The white shirt he had (been wearing) was rolled up. I put it in a bag and he left without waiting for his receipt."

Apparently, the suspect walked through the mall, stopping at Great Expectations, a hairstyle salon, where Mike Fields gave the man "a $10 special."

"He just came in and said he wanted a haircut," said Fields, a hair stylist. "He didn't say much. He just paid for the haircut with a $50 bill and left."

Because the clerks sensed something was wrong and tipped off police about the customer, he was arrested shortly after his haircut and about an hour following the robbery.

A few minutes earlier, Penney's security guard George Scott helped police nab the second suspect.

"I chased the first guy who came running through here," Scott said.

At the same time, police outside were apprehending the third man.

Jailed were 33-year-old Gerald Fred Chapman, 34-year-old Richard Lee Uptain, both of Phoenix, Ariz., and 44-year-old Joe Lee Corbin of Texarkana, the man who allegedly bought the shirt and got a haircut.

All three, according to police, are unemployed construction workers. Formal charges were expected to be filed this morning and bond set.

The hour-long saga began about 10:30 a.m.

"A guy came in to price some carpet," said Tom Canton, owner of the decorating store. "He came back 30 minutes later with another man and two guns."

Besides Canton, his daughter and an employee also were in the shop. Canton said a third man was parked outside in a butterscotch-colored Dodge Charger.

Tom Canton

"They took our jewelry from us and told us to lie face down on the floor," Canton said. "They put our hands behind us and taped them with duct tape.

"I broke the damn tape, grabbed my gun, stepped out the door and shot at them."

Meanwhile, the employee noted the car's license plate. But the California plates turned out to be stolen, according to police.

Canton, who met police at the mall, identified the jewelry. He shook hands with one officer and later said: "The police did an excellent job."

Appointment of Angelo rejected

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate today rejected the appointment of former Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo to the Texas College Coordinating Board.

The vote was 10-21, far short of the two-thirds necessary to confirm Angelo.

One of those voting for Angelo was Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, who defeated Angelo for the Senate.

Angelo was state co-chairman of President Reagan's 1982 campaign.

The vote tally was:

For (10) — Brown, Harris, Henderson, Howard, Jones, Leedom, McFarland, Sarpalius, Sharp and Sims.

Against (21) — Blake, Brooks, Caperton, Doggett, Edwards, Farabee, Glasgow, Kothmann, Lyon, Mauzy, Montford, Parker, Parmer, Santiesteban, Traeger, Truan, Uribe, Vale, Washington, Whitmire and Williams.

Central American proposal a 'formula for failure'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Christopher Dodd, giving a Democratic reply to President Reagan's Central America address before a joint session of Congress, attacked the speech as a "formula for failure."

But other key Democrats — including House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas — reacted more positively to Reagan's call Wednesday for a bipartisan consensus on U.S. policy toward the strife-torn region.

Wright warned against U.S. "self-righteousness" in attempting to impose unrealistic standards on the government of El Salvador, which has been heavily criticized for human rights abuses.

And Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., striking a conciliatory tone, said, "I thought he made a good speech ... This is not a partisan matter."

Even so, Byrd said it was doubtful Congress would approve all the U.S. military aid Reagan wants for El Salvador.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said some senators are more receptive to Reagan's proposal to boost military aid, but he declined to say whether he thought Congress would give the president the full amount.

House Republican Leader Robert Michel of Illinois said Reagan's speech may have succeeded in gaining more public backing for additional military aid.

"It was a darned good speech," Michel said, adding: "Not everybody (in Congress) is set in concrete on this, and it may influence people out there."

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., also said he thought the speech would help enhance support for Reagan's policy. "I don't say he's going to get every dime and nickel (in aid funds) — but he is certainly going to get what is necessary to do the job," Jackson said.

Dodd, D-Conn., declared in a televised response on behalf of the Democratic Party that "American dollars alone cannot buy military victory" against leftist insurgents in El Salvador and elsewhere in Central America.

The Reagan administration's policy, he said, has involved "ever-increasing military assistance, endless military training, even hiring our own paramilitary guerrillas. This is a formula for failure."

"The American people know that we have been down this road before — and that it only leads to a dark tunnel of endless intervention," said Dodd, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

In the House, Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., declined to comment when asked by reporters for his reaction following the Reagan address.

Wright, the House's No. 2 Democratic leader, said: "Fundamentally I agree with the basic precepts set forth in the speech."

Noting congressional demands that the Salvadoran government improve its record on human rights, Wright contended that "we have the responsibility, as well, to guard ourselves against the temptations to self-righteousness."

"We cannot, after all, insist that other governments fashion themselves ... as carbon copies of the United States," he said.

Wright added that "there have been occasions in which we ourselves have not been paragons of political purity." As examples, he cited Abraham Lincoln's suspension of habeas corpus during the Civil War and the World War II internment of Japanese-Americans.

Rep. Michael D. Barnes, D-Md., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Western Hemisphere subcommittee, said: "I was very pleased by the general thrust and tone of President Reagan's address."

Natural gas rates could climb despite decontrol

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's 45 million residential consumers of natural gas could get higher bills under proposed changes to President Reagan's decontrol bill, regardless of whether decontrol itself is approved.

The Senate Energy Committee was scheduled to vote today on a so-called "contract carriage" amendment that would force pipelines to transport natural gas between producers and industrial users, bypassing local utility companies.

Michael Baly, vice president of the American Gas Association, said Wednesday that the amendment by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., could mean a $12.4 billion loss to the hundreds of the local utilities belonging to his group.

Bill Cooper of United Distribution Companies, an organization of 33 local utilities primarily in the Midwest, said the remaining residential and small business customers would have to pick up the costs of facilities originally installed for industrial users.

"When industrial loads are lost, residential rates go up," Cooper said. "That was demonstrated dramatically in the natural gas shortages of the 1970s."

Bradley, however, contended that his amendment "will put a downward pressure on rates" by giving industry and local utilities an incentive to seek lower prices.

But the senator acknowledged that loss of a large industrial customer could harm the "financial viability" of some local utilities. "There's no way that you can guarantee that the rates won't go up" for a utility's other customers, he said.

Professor attacks Alaska's favored drilling tax status

By SARAH McCLENDON
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Professor Stephen Williams of Colorado told the U.S. Supreme Court Wednesday that it costs less to drill an oil well in Alaska "than it does in the lower 48 states."

In arguing that the Crude Oil Windfall Profits Tax law is unconstitutional, Williams said the higher costs for Alaskan oil come from transportation, not production.

Williams represented the oil industry in its claim that the Constitution requires all taxes to be applied uniformly.

"It is unjust to give an investor a tax incentive to invest in oil in Alaska," Williams said, adding that will drive more people to put their money there and pull it out of other states.

Associate Justice Sandra O'Connor, born and educated in El Paso, asked the first question from the line of nine justices. "Was Mr. Williams willing to concede that Congress had the right to apply an exemption on climactic grounds?"

Williams agreed, that Congress had the power but said that portion of Alaska which gets the exemption from the Windfall law is getting it on other grounds than climate.

Lawrence G. Wallace, speaking for the government as Solicitor General, argued that the exemption granted Alaskan oil does not constitute a violation of the Constitution. He said it is assumed that this is a reasonable and just exception.

The Supreme Court is not expected to rule on this case until late June or early July.

Delays in withdrawal discussed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz met with President Amin Gemayel today on issues holding up the withdrawal of foreign troops from Lebanon.

U.S.-sponsored talks between Israel and Lebanon have dragged on for four months without accord on a troop withdrawal and Shultz pledged in an arrival statement at the heavily guarded Beirut airport to "redouble" U.S. efforts to reach a solution.

"I am here to help bring these negotiations closer to a successful conclusion," he said.

He then flew on a U.S. military helicopter to the site of the U.S. Embassy, where a terrorist bomb blast April 18 killed at least 49 Americans and Lebanese.

"It was a crime against both of our people and tied us closer together by the very special bond of shared sacrifice," Shultz said of the bombing.

After his two-hour meeting with Prime Minister Menachem Begin earlier today, Shultz said, "I expect to be in the area for a while, and perhaps we will regard this as the first in a series of private meetings which we will have."

A high-ranking Israeli official said his government hopes Shultz can convince Lebanon to accept Israel's conditions for a troop pull-out, including giving Maj. Saad Haddad, a Lebanese militia leader, a command role in southern Lebanon.

An Israeli official, briefing reporters under a guarantee of anonymity, said of Shultz's mission: "We would like him to get Lebanon to agree on those issues (that remain). It's as simple as that."

The official also said the United States should open talks with Syria to learn the conditions under which Damascus will withdraw its troops from Lebanon.

If Israel and Lebanon are unable to work out an agreement or if the Syrians fail to withdraw their forces, the official said, it is "a likely scenario" that Israel would unilaterally pull its troops toward its border but leave them in southern Lebanon.

Gemayel's government opposes such a move for fear it would divide Lebanon into permanently held zones, with the Israelis in the south and the Syrians in eastern Lebanon.

On Wednesday, Begin and Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir told Shultz they feared Israeli's northern border with Lebanon would not be secure if all Israeli troops were withdrawn now.

Shultz also met with Defense Minister Moshe Arens and Foreign Ministry and military officials. It was the first time Begin and Shultz had met.

Israel has insisted on leaving behind a small number of troops, who would patrol jointly with the Lebanese army to protect the border. It also is demanding that Haddad, an ally of Israel who quit the Lebanese army, control a 25-mile buffer zone in the south. Haddad, whose men were armed and trained by Israel, commands a militia in southern Lebanon.

The Lebanese Parliament has rejected any form of Israeli military presence in southern Lebanon and refuses to take Haddad back into the Lebanese army.

Shultz, in his first attempt at shuttle diplomacy, said he would return from Beirut to Israel later today and then go back to Lebanon on Saturday. He also said he expects to go to Syria to meet with President Hafez Assad.

On the first stop of his trip, in Cairo on Monday and Tuesday, Shultz won the support of Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak in his efforts to get an agreement on troop withdrawal.

On his arrival in Israel, Shultz made clear he expects Israel to agree to withdraw all its troops from Lebanon and drop demands for a military presence there.

"Our immediate task is bringing peace to Lebanon, restoring Lebanese sovereignty, and withdrawing all foreign forces and ensuring peace and security" on the Israeli-Lebanese border, he said. "Any arrangement that falls short of that is not going to be the basis for a Syrian troop withdrawal."

Israel, which invaded Lebanon June 6 to force the Palestine Liberation Organization from it base in Beirut, has about 25,000 troops in Lebanon. Syria has about 38,000, and has had troops in the country since the 1975-76 civil war. An estimated 6,000 to 8,000 Palestinian guerrillas remain in Lebanon after the evacuation of the PLO from Beirut in September.

A Cairo newspaper reported today that Mubarak told Shultz the role of the PLO in Middle East peacemaking "cannot be minimized or written off."

The semi-official newspaper Al Ahram said Mubarak also was critical of recent attacks on the PLO by the Reagan administration.

Republicans remain divided on budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans are running out of time to settle deep divisions on a 1984 budget plan, or choose between a legislative deadlock and Democratic proposals on domestic spending and new taxes next year.

Most of the Republicans met Wednesday to discuss the budget resolution to be debated next week, and afterwards one member, Dan Quayle of Indiana, joked: "We've actually got 55 proposals and there are only 54 Republicans."

He said after discussing five separate blueprints for spending and taxes in the fiscal year which begins Oct. 1, there was "absolutely no consensus."

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., said of the meeting, "It was a free-for-all."

If the budget debate begins next week with Republicans badly splintered among themselves, the 46 Democrats could recruit enough moderate and liberal Republicans to push through their own plan.

That would include higher taxes, more spending for social programs and less defense money than either Reagan or Senate Republican leaders now want.

The Republican-controlled Senate Budget Committee has approved a budget outline which allows for $30 billion in new taxes next year, cuts Reagan's defense buildup from 10 percent to 5 percent and sets nondefense spending about $11 billion above the president's budget.

It was approved with only five GOP votes in a marriage of convenience with Democrats to get the issue to the Senate floor because Republicans on the panel could reach no consensus of their own.

There is a wide political spectrum among the Senate Republicans, from Sen. John Chafee of Rhode Island, whose priorities are very close to Senate Democrats, to Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, who is recommending an absolute freeze on 1984 taxes and domestic cuts even deeper than Reagan.

All were discussed at Wednesday's closed meeting, and Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., appointed a nine-member committee to try to reach a consensus, especially on new taxes to offset federal deficits projected to hit about $200 billion annually over the next five years.

But participants agreed that the range of opinion was broader than the previous two years when the Republicans were able to assert their majority and push through a budget plan over Democratic opposition.

"They're all over the place," said Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., who has freely opposed Reagan on budget issues.

The tax increase approved by the budget panel is identical to one included in a budget resolution approved by the Democratically-controlled House. It is roughly the amount that would be saved by repealing this year's 10 percent tax cut.

But Senate leaders, including Baker and Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., have said they will fight to sharply reduce the proposed new revenues for next year, and predicted that the tax cut would easily be kept alive.

However, it appeared that some form of tax increase was likely, with the fight to come over the amount and kind. Packwood, for one, suggested a new energy excise tax, and others have recommended an income surtax.

Reagan has proposed tax increases of about $8 billion for 1984 and 1985, with much larger standby taxes on oil imports or other sources to take effect starting in 1986.

Domenici and Baker were expected to support the president on taxes. The party's leadership is expected to push hard for adopting Reagan's approach of minimal increases during the next two years and larger boosts afterwards.

House launches 5th debate on nuclear freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House today headed into its fifth round of floor debate on a nuclear weapons freeze resolution, with Republican opponents set to renew efforts to tone down the measure.

President Reagan has charged that the resolution — calling for a "mutual and verifiable freeze" on U.S. and Soviet nuclear arsenals — would undercut U.S. arms negotiators and lock the United States into strategic inferiority to Moscow.

Republicans and conservative Democrats opposing the freeze have conceded that the resolution is virtually certain to pass in the Democratic-controlled House. But it remained uncertain how soon the chamber would be able to dispose of a long series of amendments and move to a final vote.

Debate over the non-binding measure already has totalled more than 30 hours, spread over four separate days — far longer than had been expected when the freeze resolution first went to the House floor last month.

Last week, the House adopted by voice vote an amendment by Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., stating that "any item both sides do not agree to freeze would not be frozen" whenever a U.S.-Soviet arms freeze was implemented.

But Rep. Thomas J. Tauke, R-Iowa, a freeze advocate, said Wednesday he would be pressing for reconsideration of this amendment, contending that it "cuts at the very heart of the rationale for the freeze resolution."

Tauke said that while the freeze concept was intended to ban development and deployment of new types of nuclear weapons, Lott's amendment apparently would permit building of any weapons which were not specifically listed in a freeze accord.

Libyan oil production stepped up in exchange for arms

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst European Bureau

PARIS — Libyan Colonel Moamar Khadafy, caught in the act earlier this month surrepticiously shipping weapons to Nicaragua, has drastically stepped up his country's oil production in order to pay for Soviet arms.

Both Western intelligence and oil industry informants have confirmed that, at the very moment when OPEC has agreed to cut back production to shore up crude oil prices, the Libyans have actually doubled their average output to a million barrels a day.

But the increase has so far had no impact on international oil markets and is unlikely to in the future. That is because the expanded output is going exclusively to the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

"Khadafy, in effect, is bartering oil worth approximately $1.4 million per day on the open market for Russian armaments," according to a French intelligence official. "That represents a substantial increase over Libyan arms purchases from the Soviet bloc in the previous two years. The reasons for the change aren't entirely clear."

In trying to ship 150 tons of arms and ammunition to Nicaragua aboard four giant cargo planes that were stopped by the Brazilian authorities, was Khadafy acting for himself or as an "agent" for the Russians?

Intelligence officials here think that it hardly matters. Whether the arms were bought and paid for by him or he was acting as a middleman, the arms traffic is seen by them as part of a well-coordinated arrangement between Moscow and Tripoli.

They believe that the restless colonel, thwarted in his African ambitions and especially his hopes of annexing Libya's southern neighbor, Chad, has reverted to his earlier obsession with sponsoring worldwide "revolution." His interest in the latter apparently tapered off somewhat in 1981-82 when Libyan oil revenues, affected by the drop in oil prices everywhere, declined.

His new deal with the Soviets is once again permitting him to exercise his aspirations to be a global godfather to leftist subversion and terror. At the same time, as officials here emphasized, nothing could suit the Russians better.

Khadafy is again sharing in some of the "overhead" involved in sustaining costly leftwing insurgency movements in many different places. Whatever their commitment to world revolution, the Russians never have been ones to overlook the expense. Whenever possible, the record shows they prefer to be paid for their material support in hard cash and on favorable terms.

With arms worth nearly a million-and-a-half dollars a day at his disposal, experts here predict that Khadafy's Brazilian fiasco won't long discourage his efforts to bring aid and comfort to leftist rebels in El Salvador and probably elsewhere in Latin America. The Colombian government has said that it suspects some of the weapons aboard the Libyan cargo planes were destined for its leftwing guerrillas.

Johnny Cash

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Country music star Johnny Cash won the hearts of thousands of Hungarian fans as he and his wife June Carter gave a rare Eastern European concert.

The newspaper praised Cash's backup band for its "crisp, bold, fresh sound," and lauded Miss Carter as "a seasoned country performer adding extra fun ... with her attractive looks, slick professional rendering of songs, and fine sense of humor."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Eileen Brennan, severely injured in a car accident last fall, is negotiating a television contract and may go back to work in a month or so.

"She's moving about now. She can even move about without a walker," her publicist, Dick Guttman, said Wednesday. "There are days when she feels good. There are days when it's a strain."

He said Miss Brennan is now negotiating a contract with Warner Bros. Television for TV movies and series.

Miss Brennan, 48, was hit by a car Oct. 27 after she came out of a Venice-area restaurant with her friend, actress Goldie Hawn.

Both her legs were fractured, and she underwent extensive reconstructive surgery for broken facial bones. She still is undergoing orthopedic therapy, Guttman said, adding that her recovery was aided by daily workouts in a gym at her house.

LONDON (AP) — Consumer advocate Ralph Nader is taking his crusade for citizen activism to Great Britain, in a three-day tour.

"Our country has learned a lot about democracy from Britain," Nader, 49, said in an interview Wednesday. "It's time to repay the compliment by importing citizen activism techniques into Britain."

Invited here by Friends of the Earth and Clear, Britain's campaign for unleaded gasoline, Nader said he was lending his support to them and to a movement for a British version of the U.S. Freedom of Information Act.

Apnea sleep syndrome can be serious but treatment can be simple as dieting

Dear Dr. Solomon: My wife is very worried about her father. He is now under a doctor's care because he has trouble when he sleeps at night. He doesn't breathe very well. How serious is this, and is treatment of this condition very complicated? — Mr. P.R., Akron, Ohio

Dear Mr. R.: You appear to be describing a condition called obstructive sleep apnea syndrome. It involves a blocking of the upper airway during sleep. The consequences can be serious, but treatment may be as simple as losing weight or as complicated as undergoing surgery.

Dr. John R. Stradling, of Hammersmith Hospital in London, says that the syndrome is often caused by obesity. Simple weight loss in these people may be sufficient for cure. Other patients may be helped by reducing their intake of alcohol or by removal of a nasal obstruction or by tonsillectomy.

As you might expect, obstructive sleep apnea syndrome disturbs the patient's sleep. As a result, many complain of being extremely tired during the day. Loud snoring has been reported by the spouses of many of these patients. Should the syndrome continue over a period of time, the patient may show some intellectual impairment and personality changes. Bed-wetting is reported.

Teen-aged armed robber gets probation

HOUSTON (AP) — A teen-age girl who said she robbed five people at gunpoint to buy milk and diapers for a baby half-brother born to her drug-addicted mother got 10 years' probation and a warning from jurors.

"We gave you a chance. We expect you to take it and make the best of it," jury foreman Robert Reicheck told Robin Marie Herod, 16, after the sentence was announced Wednesday.

Miss Herod pleaded guilty to five counts of aggravated robbery. Under instruction from State District Court Judge Ted Poe, the 12-member panel found Miss Herod guilty and set her punishment.

Poe said a jury had to decide punishment for Miss Herod because Texas law prohibits a judge from granting probation in armed robbery cases.

Prosecutors argued that Miss Herod should spend time behind bars. The maximum sentence was life in prison and a $10,000 fine.

"Holding a gun to someone is not the action of a child," said Assistant District Attorney Joe Magliolo.

Poe ordered the teen-ager to be sent to a halfway house, to write letters of apology to the five people she admitted robbing at gunpoint between Sept. 27 and Sept. 30 and to make restitution to each. No one was harmed in the robberies.

Afterward, the shy teen-ager said she had learned her lesson and vowed to change her ways.

"I'm going to get an education and get out on my own and make an honest living," said Miss Herod, who dropped out of school after failing the seventh grade three times.

Miss Herod, who was certified to stand trial as an adult, expressed remorse about the robberies but said she felt she had no choice.

Robin Marie Herod, 16, who confessed to staging armed robberies to get food for her infant half-brother, received a 10-year probated sentence. She hugs a friend after the jury returned the sentence.

"I felt a responsibility to my little brother because there was no food and my mama needed to take her medicine, and if she didn't take her medicine she'd get very sick. And I didn't know what else to do," she said.

"I know what I did was wrong. I know I scared those people very badly. I pray to God they forgive," she said.

The teenager said she used the money from the robberies to buy milk and diapers for her 18-month-old half-brother.

Fort Worth Chamber Orchestra returns home

FORT WORTH (AP) — A tired but exultant Fort Worth Chamber Orchestra has returned home after a fast-paced two-week performance tour of China.

A throng of family members and media representatives greeted the 32-member ensemble Wednesday evening upon their arrival at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport.

The orchestra was en route to Tokyo on the first leg of its journey when China cancelled all official sports and cultural exchanges with the United States after the U.S. granted political asylum to Chinese tennis star Hu Na.

Because the Fort Worth orchestra did not represent the U.S. government, its tour was not affected. Joint concerts with the orchestra of Peking and Shanghai were dropped from the itinerary, however.

The orchestra's reception in China was "unbelievable," music director and conductor John Giordano told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"The friends we made were of the closest nature," Giordano said.

An official with the Ministry of Culture, which sponsored the orchestra's travels on the mainland, issued an oral invitation for a return trip, Giordano added.

"He said he wished we could stay longer and play in some of the smaller communities," Giordano said.

Giordano said he, in turn, requested that a Chinese musician be allowed to visit the United States to perform with the Fort Worth orchestra.

"She is a world-class violinist," he said.

The entourage left Hong Kong at 11:50 a.m. Wednesday and arrived in San Francisco at 10 a.m. the same day, gaining a day by crossing the International Dateline.

When the orchestra landed at D-FW about 7:15 p.m., musicians emerged in straw coolie hats. They also carried Chinese instruments that they had purchased as souvenirs.

Concert master Robert Davidovici demonstrated the pipa, a lute-like folk instrument, to his wife and children.

"From now on, this is the fiddle," he said. "We've had some demonstrations, and I've started practicing, but I'm not an expert yet. I'm not yet going to play the Mendelssohn Concerto."

He bought the instrument in a Shanghai music store, he said.

Other musicians expressed interest in ordering a steak or pizza after a non-stop diet of Chinese food.

"My wife's got a bottle of Chardonnay out in the car," said Dr. Ed Etier, the physician accompanying the group. "We had lots of good beer, but we missed our wine."

Etier attributed the group's one-day bout with illness to being "overfed" on rich cuisine.

Etier "was the first one to get sick, and Ann (Koonsman, the orchestra's executive director) acted as his nurse," Giordano said.

Orchestra staff member Sylvia Stoddard said sleep was a priority for her, but "I'll probably take my kids to school (today). I haven't seen them in three weeks."

"They have the same problems we have," right down to such specifics as proper reeds for bassoons, Giordano said.

A visit to a tea commune included singing and dancing by preschoolers who concluded their program with a rendition of "Clementine," he said.

The orchestra's 2-week tour included concerts at Peking, Shanghai, Hangzhou, Canton and Hong Kong, as well as workshops and master classes. Five encores in Peking, an impromptu performance by some orchestra members at the Great Wall, sold-out concerts, sightseeing and attendance at Chinese music and drama performances also highlighted the journey.

Houston pastor shoots intruder

HOUSTON (AP) — Prayer services were called off at a small church after the pastor, beaten by a burglar two years ago, shot and killed an intruder.

"We are all scared," a church member, who did not want to be identified, said from behind locked doors.

The Rev. Charles D. Jessup III fatally shot the intruder early Wednesday after being awakened by noises from an intercom he set up between the First Church of Divine Science and his mobile home, police said.

The dead man was identified as Joe Louis Marquez, who appeared to be about 35 or 40, police said.

Marquez, who was unarmed, made a "sudden move" and Jessup fired a single shot from a 9mm pistol, striking the suspect in the chest, said Detective D.G. Lott.

"The pastor yelled for the man to stop, but he made a sudden move so the pastor shot the man one time," Lott said.

Jessup, who has been pastor at the small church in the Houston Heights neighborhood for about 10 years, declined to talk about the shooting.

"He's understandably shaken and he's resting," said Jessup's son, Charles.

The shooting prompted the cancellation of weekly 8 p.m. prayer services Wednesday.

Two years ago burglars beat Jessup on the head with metal bars in his mobile home near the church, said asistant pastor Jovita Garcia.

"They saw me coming in and took off," she said. "They would have killed him."

She said that several cars have been stolen from church grounds and that in March burglars stole money and two pistols. The man shot to death Wednesday apparently came through the same window that was forced open in the March burglary, she said.

She said Jessup told her that during the night he heard noises from the intercom, got up, and found that a door had been opened and two lights turned on. Police said the minister caught the man taking money from church office.

The pastor, who has heart problems and high blood pressure, was very distraught after the shooting, Ms. Garcia said.

Ms. Garcia said some people had expressed surpise a minister would shoot a burglar. She added, "but when somebody breaks in and might kill you, what are you going to do?"

Nudists to protest against Klan

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A nudist group plans to parade in downtown San Antonio wearing "the least we can get away with" to protest the robes and regalia of a Ku Klux Klan march planned for the same day, a group spokesman says.

"We would be nude if it were legal," Omar Kirk said Wednesday after police approved his group's parade permit for Sunday. "Basically, it is a protest against the Ku Klux Klan's uniforms."

Kirk said the Klan's robes and other regalia are obscene and symbolize racism, murder and lynchings.

The Klan only wants to "create a scene" with its May Day parade, so the nudist group wants to call attention to "a better moral issue," Kirk said.

"If not for nudity, none of us would be here," he said.

The Klan scheduled a three-block march to City Hall, beginning at 2 p.m. Sunday after the City Council refused to let the group stand vigil at the Alamo, where radical demonstrators raised red flags in May Day incidents in 1980 and 1981.

Kirk said his group will march along a downtown route ending at the John H. Wood Federal Courthouse before returning along the same route.

The parade permit was approved by Deputy Police Chief Edward Foresman, a spokesman said.

Deaf woman excused from jury

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman who believed it was her duty to serve as a juror has been excused from a trial because she is deaf.

State District Judge Frank Price explained to Michelle Bailey, 29, through a sign language interpreter on Tuesday that attorneys in the involuntary manslaughter case objected to her serving on the jury.

She was among 35 people summoned for a jury panel to hear an involuntary manslaughter case.

Price said Ms. Bailey was disqualified by a law barring anyone but jurors from the deliberation room, meaning that she could not have taken an interpreter inside.

Satellite thrusters to be tested

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — One test firing of thrusters aboard the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite will be made early next month before engineers try to move it into its proper orbit, officials say.

The satellite was deployed April 4 during the maiden voyage of the space shuttle Challenger. But a rocket system designed to boost the communications satellite into a 22,300-mile-high orbit malfunctioned the next day.

Scientists and engineers managed to regain control of the satellite, which was in an egg-shaped orbit ranging in altitude from 13,600 miles to 22,000 miles.

1,006 people become citizens

HOUSTON (AP) — In a brief, simple ceremony, 1,006 men, women and children renounced loyalty to their native homelands and became citizens of the United States.

Attorney General Jim Mattox also brought 2,000 voter registration cards to Wednesday's ceremony and requested they votesin the next election.

Of the 80 countries represented, the largest group — 268 — were former residents of Vietnam. There also were 132 former citizens of Mexico, 118 from India, 78 from the Phillippines and 68 from China.

SWAT team officer kills man

HOUSTON (AP) — A SWAT team officer shot and killed a man who fired at a policeman trying to persuade him to surrender during a two-hour siege at a west Houston townhouse, officials said.

William Manuel Tryan, 61, was shot on the front porch of his townhouse Wednesday morning, police said. He was shot in the side and died at the scene.

Police were called to the scene about 4 a.m. because of a complaint about loud music.

Fairchild fined $100,000

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) — Fairchild Industries Inc. showed "intentional disregard" for health and safety by illegally discharging hazardous waste at a Maryland plant, a judge said in fining the company $100,000.

Washington County Circuit Judge Frederick C. Wright III levied the fine Wednesday after a 13-day trial in which Fairchild was convicted on five counts of unauthorized hazardous waste disposal and water pollution.

The fine against the aircraft manufacturer is the largest criminal penalty ever imposed under Maryland's anti-pollution statutes, state Attorney General Stephen Sachs said.

U.S.to bargain after resolution

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says the United States will not negotiate with the Soviet Union on the control of weapons in outer space until such problems as verification are resolved.

The department on Wednesday added that Soviet development of an anti-satellite weapon, as well as other Russian military activities in space, "belies their pose as champions of peace in outer space."

Alan Romberg, the department's deputy spokesman, was responding to a new call by Soviet leader Yuri Andropov for early negotiations on a treaty banning from space "weapons of any kind."

Students protest budget cuts

MAGNOLIA, Texas (AP) — It's "un-American" to eliminate athletics and band as school-financed activities, say students who were suspended after they walked out of classes to protest the cuts.

"The whole school is about ready to walk out," said Brandy Fletcher, 14, one of 30 students who were suspended after Tuesday's walkout at Magnolia Junior High School. "School just isn't fun without all those things they cut out."

The Magnolia Independent School District board voted 4-3 last week to eliminate extracurricular activities to save money.

Magma won't cause eruption

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. (AP) — Underground pools of magma beneath this Sierra Nevada resort are probably too deep to cause an explosive volcanic eruption, scientists say.

At a conference Wednesday, U.S. Geological Survey hydrologist Michael L. Sorey said the weight of the overlying earth would dampen the possibility for explosions.

Fears have been expressed that if the rising magma comes in contact with large bodies of groundwater, an explosion could result as the water is heated and expands. But Sorey said scientists don't know at what depth the volcanic explosions might occur.

Cuban broadcast considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — An assistant secretary of state says the Reagan administration considered but later rejected establishing a clandestine radio station to broadcast to Cuba.

Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary for inter-American affairs, made the statement Wednesday to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee during testimony on behalf of the administration's proposal for Radio Marti.

Radio Marti, named for Cuban patriot Jose Marti, would be an openly operated station that would broadcast news and entertainment to Cuba. It was approved by the House and by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last year, but did not come to a vote in the full Senate.

Bill to curtain drug trafficking

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation that would toughen the punishment for using airplanes in drug trafficking has won the support of the Reagan administration.

Officials of the Customs Service and Federal Aviation Administration told a House subcommittee Wednesday that such legislation would aid the government's campaign to stem the flow of heroin, marijuana, cocaine and other illicit drugs into Florida and other parts of the nation. However, they did recommend some minor changes in the bill.

The proposal sponsored by Rep. Norman Y. Mineta, D-Calif., and others would require that a pilot's license be revoked for one to five years upon conviction of a drug law violation, other than simple possession, involving use of aircraft.

Officials to revoke charter

MIAMI (AP) — Florida officials will seek to dissolve the International Gold Bullion Exchange and revoke its corporate charter, after Illinois authorities said the company accepted $200 million for precious metals it never delivered.

The exchange filed for reorganization Wednesday under federal bankruptcy laws.

As many as 25,000 investors nationwide may have lost money they paid the Fort Lauderdale-based business, the Illinois attorney general's office said in a suit against the company. A lawyer for the exchange, Thomas Tew, said there was no way of knowing its total debts.

Office wants more competition

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an attempt to drive down costs for weapons and parts, the Defense Department is trying to increase competition among defense contractors, a Pentagon official says.

But the volume of contracts involved means it will take time to implement any changes, Mary Ann Gilleece, deputy undersecretary of defense for research and engineering, told a House Armed Services subcommittee Wednesday.

There are an average of 13 million contract actions every year, she told the panel at a hearing on a bill to overhaul the Pentagon's procurement systems.

Bill approved to change time

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Energy and Commerce Committee has overwhelmingly approved legislation to begin daylight-saving time in early March instead of late April.

Wednesday's 22-9 vote sent the measure to the full House. The bill would start daylight-saving time on the first Sunday of March, instead of the last Sunday of April. Daylight-saving time would continue to end on the last Sunday of October.

A similar bill passed by the House died in the Senate Commerce Committee in the last Congress.

Officials reject Arab's money

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — County officials have rejected an offer from the son of a Saudi Arabian oil executive to pay $100,000 for canceling an arrest warrant stemming from a reckless driving conviction.

Tarik Abdulhadi Taher, 26, sought to have the warrant expunged after he failed to show up to serve a 45-day jail term.

"To allow a defendant to buy his way out (of) jail time ... would not constitute even-handed enforcement of the criminal law," said Santa Barbara County District Attorney Thomas Sneddon in a written reply to Taher's offer, which was made last week.

Artists population increases six percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — California became first among states as a home for artists in the 1970s, a decade that saw the South more than double its artists' population, the National Endowment for the Arts reported today.

Nationally, artists increased from nearly 600,000 people to 1,085,693 from 1970 to 1980, when they accounted for 1 percent of the entire civilian labor force, according to a study compiled by the endowment using Census Bureau figures.

"What this means is that our country's life is enhanced as never before by the talent and creativity of musicians, dancers, painters, sculptors, folk artists, actors and others," said endowment chairman Frank Hodsoll, in a speech Wednesday in Austin, Texas.

Texas, with 61,802 artists in 1980, moved into third place behind California, which led the nation with 176,321 artists, and New York, with 138,424. New York led all states a decade earlier, and Texas was fifth-ranked.

Others in the top 10, in order, were Illinois, Florida, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, New Jersey and Massachusetts.

Among major regions of the country, the South — which ranked last in 1970 with 136,263 artists — led all regions in 1980 with 293,739 artists.

Snake crushes owner

WINCHESTER, Mo. (AP) — An "animal lover" who was crushed to death by his Burmese python trusted the 16-foot, 100-pound snake "more than he trusted his cat," according to friends.

The body of Robert J. Vierling was found Wednesday on the floor of his west St. Louis County home. His wife, Christine, who discovered the body, first thought her husband had suffered a heart attack, said Police Chief Donald "Red" Loehr.

But an autopsy showed the victim had been crushed to death by the snake, which was found under the bed near the body.

Drought leaves islands in thirsty situation

AGANA, Guam (AP) — A 4-month-old drought in the Western Pacific islands is drying up usually lush vegetation, threatening food crops, and forcing tourists to join residents in the old custom of bathing in the ocean.

The lack of rainfall has led to water rationing and other stringent controls on islands from Truk, in the Caroline Islands, to the Philippines, a distance spanning thousands of miles.

The drought is expected to last at least several more months, far into what would normally be the start of the area's rainy season, said Ralph Mesa, chief of operations for the Public Utility Agency on Guam. "It's not a threat. It's a reality," said Mesa.

Guam, in the middle of the drought region, has had only 4.79 inches of rain this year, said Bill Butler, assistant operations office at the Naval Oceanography Command Center. Normally the island receives nearly 14 inches of rain in the same period, he said.

In Saipan, the capital of the Northern Mariana Islands, officials are having trouble maintaining water pressure to beachfront hotels. Two major hotels have been told they can fill their reservoirs for only two hours each morning, said Public Works Director John Pangelinan.

Elsewhere in Micronesia, tourists are being told they must join residents in bathing in the ocean and rivers. The prolonged dry spell in Palau has forced town dwellers to resume the old custom of bathing in the sea, then using coconut oil to remove salt from the body.

The drought has turned what is normally lush green vegetation atop the famed Rock Islands of Palau into brown and yellow hues resembling a New England autumn.

In the Federated States of Micronesia, several thousand miles to the east, government officials say the drought is threatening the taro and breadfruit crops, staples of island nutrition.

The island of Ponape has been put on a program of limited water hours, according to Federated States President Tosiwo Nakayama.

Contest winner had 'a face like a dog'

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Humphrey, a 72-pound charmer, was named the epitome of bulldog beauty, but Essex won "Mister Congeniality" in the fifth annual Bulldog Beauty Contest.

The canine competition Monday was a prelude to the Drake Relays track meet, which start today.

The contest sponsored by Midland Financial Savings and Loan attracted 44 bulldogs from 19 communities in two states.

About 3,000 people were on hand for the judging. All the contestants were well-behaved, and the Des Moines Botanical Center presented each contestant with its own tree — a nine-inch seedling.

Leaders fear change

ROSEAU, Dominica (AP) — Neglected by a world with troubles of its own and buffeted by economic and political winds, Caribbean leaders fear disruptive change might be forced on their fragile nations.

"America has to understand that if she really wants our people to feel we are on the right track, she must, without appearing to bribe us, help us make this a better place," said Dominica's Prime Minister Eugenia Charles, one of eight heads of government interviewed.

Dominica, with 75,000 inhabitants on 290 square miles, typifies crises in the West Indies, a 2,000-mile stretch of brilliantly colorful, palm-fanned islands once dismissed by DeGaulle as "flecks of dust in the Caribbean."

It is one of 10 independent Caribbean states in the British Commonwealth, from Belize in Central America to Barbados at the eastern end, all peopled mainly by descendants of slaves brought from Africa to cut cane centuries ago.

The West Indies also takes in Cuba, Haiti, the Dominican Republic and island chains under French, Dutch, British and U.S. rule. Counting Cuba's 10 million, total population is 30 million.

Dominica's unemployment is kept to 15 percent largely because islanders leave — for the United States, for Europe or for other troubled islands. No one is sure, but estimates say up to one West Indian in five lives in the United States.

Like its neighbors, the little island is almost hopelessly exposed to outside currents, figuratively and literally.

Bananas earn 70 percent of its foreign exchange, but recession cut prices from 8 cents a pound to less than 5 cents in two years. In 1979, Hurricane David wiped out the banana crop, along with most of the coconuts, fishing boats and homes. A year later, Allen blew away replanted trees and smashed up the port.

Tourists are few in Dominica. The 7.2 million Caribbean visitors last year, though equal to the 1981 level, spent less and went home sooner. And travel agents still recall the Dreads, a shaggy haired-sect that once terrorized Dominica but have since dissipated.

As in other islands, political forces from within and without strain the carefully defended system of parliamentary democracy.

Miss Charles survived three coup attempts believed inspired by a former prime minister. In one, U.S. FBI agents intercepted Ku Klux Klan mercenaries. In another, a French helicopter rushed in weapons when Dominica's tiny police force could not open its arms locker.

In Dominica and elsewhere, some politicians exercise free speech to note how neighboring Grenada is awash in Cuban and Soviet bloc aid. Grenada's Marxist revolutionary government overthrew an elected prime minister in 1979 and now seeks to spread its example around the region.

President Reagan's ambitious Caribbean Basin Initiative, announced in February 1982, is designed to channel new resources to the region, but Congress watered it down, and key provisions are still under debate.

Japan making gains on America in auto safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Japanese are making advances on American automakers' traditional safety edge with a surprisingly good showing in a ranking of car performance in crash tests, according to a public interest group.

The Center for Auto Safety, examining frontal crash tests on about 100 cars, on Monday released a list of the 10 cars that performed best and the 10 that did the worst. Among the top 10 were four Japanese imports and four cars built by General Motors Corp., a past critic of the government tests.

The list, using frontal crashes at 35 miles an hour, showed the four-door Chevrolet Celebrity at No. 1 with the Volvo DL and the Honda Civic not far behind. Two Renault cars — the Fuego and LeCar — ranked at the bottom in the survey.

"The ratings are not exact," said Clarence Ditlow, the center's director, "but what they are is they give you a very good indicator of which cars are the safest and which are the worst ... This represents the relative likelihood of survival in a front seat crash..."

The ranking was based on government crash tests on 1981 and 1982 model cars. But Jack Gillis, who compiled the list, said the findings can be applied to current models because the cars tested had no substantial design changes in the 1983 model year. The test results had all been made public previously, but the ranking is new.

Gillis, a former employee at the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, said a surprise in the rankings was the performance of the Japanese imports, which previously had shown poorly using a "pass" or "fail" standard.

"American manufacturers' competitive edge on safety is now being eroded by the Japanese ... While American automobile manufacturers fight safety regulations and the crash test program, the Japanese are going back to the drawing board and building safer cars," said Gillis.

The crash tests have been criticized by the auto industry for some time. The manufacturers claim a single test may give an erroneous reading because of many variables and that a "pass" or "fail" grade — as the government once used — can be misleading. Instead, manufacturers have said a numerical ranking would be more appropriate.

Ditlow said the ranking, using an indexing formula that takes into consideration the degree of injury to an occupant's head, chest and thighs, was meant to provide a more detailed comparison of various car models.

With the lower the number, the better the test results, here are the center's 10 worst and 10 best cars:

Women to get legal aid

OSLO, Norway (AP) — The Justice Ministry soon will be offering free legal help to battered women in a new project aimed at exposing the problem and bringing woman-beaters to justice.

Effective May 1, the program applies to all female victims of men, whether housewives mistreated by husbands, unmarried women victimized by live-in boyfriends or prostitutes abused by clients or procurers.

"We hope the new arrangement will help bring these problems into the open," said Sveinung O. Flaaten, the ministry's state secretary.

While there are no statistics to show how many Norwegian women are mistreated by men, health authorities investigate thousands of cases annually. Few are reported to police, however, and officials say more than half the reported cases later are withdrawn.

FLAATEN SAID the new free legal aid system may encourage more women to press their cases once they file charges. Nevertheless, he said, women will qualify for free legal advice even if they don't report their mistreatment to the police.

The new system will give an abused women free advice from a lawyer before she reports the abuser, then during the process of reporting the case and at the subsequent police hearing.

The plan does not cover legal costs of actual court trials, but public funds still will pay for the victim to consult the state lawyer.

Other programs by the ministries of justice and social affairs demonstrate that, despite the lack of statistics, the government considers mistreatment of women a problem in Norway, as in many other countries.

At least 22 "crisis centers for mistreated women," financed partly by the state, operate around the clock in several cities. Staffed by women, the centers advise battered women on legal and medical matters, help them find emergency accommodations and arrange escorts to the police if a victim wants to report the case.

There also are about 30 so-called "emergency telephones" available on a 24-hour basis for mistreated women needing urgent help.

THE SOCIAL Ministry already has an "action program against the mistreatment of women." Last year, it urged 10 hospitals, 250 selected doctors and public health centers to register and report all cases of mistreatment of women.

"Investigations have found that physical and psychological violence against women are far more common than most people realize," said a Social Ministry spokesman. "The violence occurs on all social levels and within all age groups."

In a list of suggestions to local authorities, the ministry recommended several ways in which mistreatment of women should be handled:

—JURIES DEALING with cases of abuse and rape should have equal numbers of men and women.

—Municipalities should finance emergency apartments for mistreated women with children.

—Every county should have at least one competent crisis center.

Former NY Times executive dies

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Turner Catledge, who was chief of the The New York Times' news operations for 17 years, was a "unique talent" who "never lost sight of journalism's ultimate purpose — to inform the reader."

Catledge, who suffered a stroke in late February, died at his home Wednesday at the age of 82.

Catledge became the Times' managing editor in 1951 and served as the newspaper's first executive editor from 1964 to 1968. Since his retirement on April 30, 1970, he had lived in the fashionable New Orleans Garden District.

A native of Ackerman, Miss., Catledge started in the news business at the weekly Neshoba County Democrat in Philadelphia, Miss.

He quickly moved to daily newspapers, including the Memphis Commercial Appeal and the Baltimore Sun, after graduating from Mississippi State University.

He joined the Times as a reporter in 1929 with a recommendation from President Herbert Hoover, who had met the young reporter in Mississippi several years earlier during a flood.

Catledge stayed at the Times for 39 years, with only 17 unhappy months away as chief correspondent and editor of the Chicago Sun during 1941-43. He took a cut in annual salary from $26,500 to $12,000 to return to the Times.

Catledge established his authority in news matters soon after being appointed managing editor in December 1951. He took the post of executive editor when the previously separate Sunday department came under his authority.

He held the post until 1968, the year he was named a vice president and member of the board.

In New York, Arthur Ochs Sulzberger, publisher of the Times, issued the following statement:

"Turner Catledge made a vital contribution to American journalism. His was a unique talent with an unfailing sense of mission. He never lost sight of journalism's ultimate purpose — to inform the reader, to bring him each day a letter from home and never to permit the serving of special interests. His love of his craft and his deep affection for those who practiced it well have left an enduring imprint on The Times. He was loved and we will miss him."

With Catledge serving as the Times' No. 1 news executive, the newspaper won 10 Pulitzer Prizes.

TURNER CATLEDGE

At the same time, he helped the Times lighten its image from a ponderous publication to one Catledge described as more inviting to read.

His staff was about 800 strong and generated as many as 2 million words a day, pared down to fit about 170,000 words' worth of space.

Catledge, a foe of advocacy journalism, broadened the Times' daily fare to include a regular man-in-the-news feature, frequent news analyses, a local column and investigative reporting.

"A riot does not begin with a wild, agitational speech in Harlem or a protest march along Beale Street," he said in a speech. "It begins long before (and) among the great causes of these eruptions which we report so diligently are civic indifference and middle-aged nearsightedness."

Prison food dangerous to convicts

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — Kitchens in San Quentin Prison show signs of rodent, roach and fly infestation, and the food presents "an imminent danger" to convicts who eat it, a health official says.

Ted Gordon, chief environmental health officer of the District of Columbia and an expert on prison health and safety, testified Wednesday in a Superior Court hearing of an inmate lawsuit.

Gordon, who toured the aging facility Tuesday, said freezers are broken, rodents run through the bakery, pans are old, pitted and unclean, and food is stored at temperatures that support bacterial growth.

He also said electrically live wires run through overcrowded cells filled with flammable articles, including polyurethane mattresses that release lethal hydrogen cyanide when burned.

Prisoners brought the suit against the governor and the state, claiming conditions at the prison help cause violence.

Anthropologists will gather to discuss 'Lucy's' gait

By RICHARD SALTUS
Hearst Feature Service

BERKELEY, Calif. — An anthropological summit conference to resolve sharp disagreements over nothing less than the origin of man's most distinctive trait, his two-legged way of getting around, has brought leading scientists here to pore over fossils more than 3 million years old in hopes of reaching a consensus.

For the first time, scientists who have vociferously aired clashing views about the recently discovered human ancestor nicknamed "Lucy" will confront each other personally. Anthropologists who have been following the growing controversy said they were looking forward to seeing the issues hashed out among the dozen or so main participants at the meeting, sponsored by Donald Johanson's Institute of Human Origins.

It was Johanson, formerly of the Cleveland Museum of Natural History, who discovered the Lucy skeleton and who, along with Tim White, an anthropologist at University of California-Berkeley, re-drew the family tree of early man about five years ago. They took the bold step after examining unusually well-preserved fossils of Lucy and 13 other individuals, dated at more than 3.2 million years old, found at Hadar in Ethiopia, and Laetoli in Tanzania.

MORE PRIMITIVE even than the small-brained, upright-walking ape-men discovered in South Africa several decades ago, the East African fossils suggested a previously unknown species ancestral to those now-extinct ape-men and also to others that eventually evolved into modern man.

What was striking about the Lucy fossils, which the scientists named Australopithecus afarensis, was that, even though their skulls and brain cases resembled nothing so much as chimpanzees, their skeletons from the neck down suggested that they had already evolved into upright-walking creatures. Since then, some other scientists have examined the fossils and declared that Lucy and her kind had not reached such a modern level of bipedalism (upright walking) and spent much of their time swinging in the trees like apes. That dispute is the major one being aired here.

It is generally agreed, however, that the afarensis hominids (a hominid is an upright-walking primate) had essentially human-like bodies weighing up to 150 pounds, and chinless, ape-shaped heads.

Previously, it had been thought that bipedalism, walking on two legs, was a unique evolutionary event that had only come about in conjunction with hominids' developing larger brains and the ability to make and use tools. But with the discovery of the afarensis ape-man, it appeared that hominids had abandoned tree-dwelling for a bipedal existence on the ground at least a million years before the first evidence of tool-using hominids.

JOHANSON AND WHITE constructed a Y-shaped family tree, with the new species at the bottom. They proposed that A. afarensis was the earliest known upright-walking pre-human, and that its successors evolved in two directions. One was the australopithecine ape-men that became extinct. The other branch became modern man.

Further evidence that these primitive pre-humans were upright walkers came from a stunning discovery at Laetoli of more than 50 footprints preserved in the cooled ashes from a nearby volcano. Now believed to be about 3.5 million years old, the impressions were left by hominids, which, according to White and Johanson, were probably of the same species as Lucy.

Herein lies another point of dispute. Some researchers, after studying casts of the footprints, have claimed that they couldn't have been made by the afarensis creatures, but must have been left by another species present at that same time.

Indeed, not everyone believes that the fossils lumped together by Johanson and White are all representative of one species. One reason for believing this is the wide range of sizes of the individuals, though Johanson and White attribute this to the fact that the females were markedly smaller than the males.

Johanson, White and others are convinced that if still older fossils can be found, they will reveal successively more ape-like, tree-living hominids that at some earlier point, perhaps 6 million years ago or more, diverged from the primate line that developed into our closest living relatives, the apes.

HOPE THAT THE hominid line can be traced backward has emerged with the discovery not far from Hadar, in Ethiopia's Middle Awash River Valley, of sediments at least 6 million years old. However, an international expedition to comb the Middle Awash for such older fossils has been frustrated by the Ethiopian government, which has barred archeological work while it decides on policies regulating foreign scientific research in the country.

Not all scientists, however, are as convinced that Lucy was fully adapted to the bipedal way of life. Raising their voices more strongly in recent months, these critics have pointed to various skeletal features and argued that perhaps the afarensis hominids were still essentially based in the trees. The chief exponents of this view are anatomist Jack Stern and anthropologist Randall Susman of the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

"We believe strongly that these animals spent a considerable portion of their time in the trees, to sleep and escape predators," said Stern.

AND EVEN WHEN they were on the ground, he added, bone measurements indicate the creatures would have had a high-stepping, inefficient gait compared with modern man. "From the point of view of locomotion," said Stern, "we consider them to be a true missing link, an ideal intermediate between apes and humans."

Agency reissues travel restrictions for Cubans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Restrictions on the travel of Cuba's United Nations diplomats to an area within 25 miles of New York City have been reinstated by the U.S. government, State Department says.

Cuban officials have "misused their freedom to travel by engaging in unlawful activities such as espionage," the department said earlier this week.

A 25-mile travel restriction on Cuban U.N. officials had been in place until 1977 when the Carter administration lifted the ban as part of a broader attempt to seek an accommodation with the Cuban government.

The restriction does not apply to officials of the Cuban Interests Section in Washington. According to the statement, most of the alleged offenses have been committed by Cuban diplomats at the U.N.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, April 29, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Duke Ellington and controversial newspaper publisher William Randolph Hearst were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: Japan's Emperor Hirohito, conductor Zubin Mehta, actresses Celeste Holm and Kate Mulgrew, football's Jim Hart, hockey's Jean Gauthier and director Fred Zinneman. You meet many interesting people while pursuing romance. Keep in touch with those who could become good friends. A married couple's trials and tribulations lessen. A career change could be part of the picture. Choose something for which you have a natural aptitude. Fairly frequent travel lies ahead. Count on family member to pitch in and help when you feel rushed or overworked.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Starting an enjoyable, creative project with someone could bring the two of you closer together. Romance becomes more satisfying. A money question must be answered now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You gather the strength you need to make a difficult family decision. Be persistent. Although you feel a bit disillusioned about romance, it should not affect your equilibrium.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Others will not accept your deep convictions about life on faith alone. Let romance develop slowly. Make vacation plans well in advance to avoid disappointment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are often too possessive for your own good. Begin a gardening or building project. Someone you admire could ask to join you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A reversal can be turned around if you keep your cool. Ask for help in resolving a legal dispute. Do not sign anything until sure of the terms used.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A family storm passes. Refuse to continue swallowing your pride. Seek compromises that let everyone retain a degree of dignity. Romance heats up when a rival disappears.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Allow more time for making important decisions. Get promises in writing. A good day for declaring your independence. Say exactly what you mean at a staff meeting.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make things happen at work! You will be able to withstand almost any challenge. More career planning will have to wait. Look for funds to buy new equipment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your commitment to your job may be interfering with certain personal relationships. A home computer saves time, money.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Things fall into place when you assert yourself. Get expert help on a legal or accounting matter. You may have to assume an associate's duties.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Travel helps revitalize a marriage. Do what you can to build up your savings. Students, job applicants do well on tests. Do not give up your plans for college.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Look for a better showcase for your artistic talents. You get a huge thrill when a child excels. A blind date could be the start of a long-term alliance.

Disney creative again

HOLLYWOOD — It is common when writing about the state of the Disney organization to summon the image of a ghostly Walt Disney — a benign father figure watching over the business that reaches from Southern California to Florida and now to Tokyo.

The absence of Disney's creative mind, however, has left a vacuum that at times seemed to engulf the studio. Now, however, for the first time since Disney's death in December 1966, it appears that the company is truly on its own, with a new creative management team in place.

Richard Berger, a studio veteran who spent 15 years at 20th Century-Fox, came over to Walt Disney Productions last month as president of Walt Disney Pictures. He met Disney stockholders Friday for the first time.

Berger, 43, heads the new division of the corporation formed in March to coordinate all of Disney's film and TV production. Berger has plans, big plans, to reshape how Disney sees its audience, and how the audience perceives Disney.

Initially, the major change will be the formation of a new movie company as yet unnamed that will produce, acquire and release "harder" PG and "soft" R-rated films. Berger revealed the plans in his first major interview, accompanied by Disney Productions President and Chief Executive Officer Ron Miller.

From now on, they said, the Disney imprimatur will be restricted to the traditional animated and family-oriented live-action movies. "With our new company, we'll be going after the mainstream audience of 16-to-28-year-olds," Berger said.

The confusion stems from Disney's attempt to straddle two worlds. Its forays into more adventurous film fare, such as "Tron" last summer and the scheduled release Friday of "Something Wicked This Way Comes," has perplexed its traditional audience of parents and young children, who expect nothing more daring than "Bambi."

Berger started hiscareer as an accountant, he worked his way into programming for TV and then moved to movies at Fox. He worked briefly at CBS in the mid-1970s, where he helped launch "Dallas" and "The Incredible Hulk," before returning to Fox as a senior film production executive.

Opening lead: Five of ◇.

Here's a hand that will be a strong candidate for the 1983 Bols Brilliancy Prize. It was played in the star-studded St. James's Invitation Pairs in Manchester. Our hero in the East seat is Robert Reiplinger of France.

After South opened bidding with one no trump. North employed the Stayman convention to check on the possibility of a 4-4 spade fit.

With a near maximum opening, South naturally proceeded to three no trump over North's invitation.

West set the stage for what was to follow when he started the ball rolling with a low diamond. Dummy and East played low and declarer won the ten. A low heart was taken by West's jack and back came another diamond. Declarer played the nine from dummy and Reiplinger ducked again!

After overtaking with the queen of diamonds, declarer cashed his hearts as East sluffed a spade, and now it seemed he was playing for overtricks. His best shot was to find West with the king of spades, so he tried ace of spades and a spade to the queen. East won the king and cleverly refrained from cashing the rest of his spades. Instead, he shifted to a club. Declarer hopped up with the ace and confidently finessed the jack of diamonds. Reiplinger finally got to win his king of diamonds and the defenders took the rest of the tricks for down two!

Needless to say, that was a top score. No other pair succeeded in defeating three no trumps two tricks. Indeed, at many tables that contract was made via an end play in spades.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Teachers for hire

Dallas Independent School District has launched an innovative program intended to improve education and recruit better teachers. It remind us that education of our young people is the responsibility of us all.

Specifically, the district is recruiting the would-be teachers from companies in the Dallas area to instruct math and science classes. Also being encouraged to apply are college instructors and former teachers.

The program is not unlike Midland's own Junior Achievement except it's directed more toward providing quality formal instruction while Junior Achievers study free enterprise skills. It is intended to combat the shortage of teachers in that area and relieve teachers who might suffer "teacher burnout."

Dallas area chambers of commerce and other business organizations are supporting the program and why not? Business relies on the schools to adequately prepare youngsters to enter the world of employment with the skills necessary to succeed. Both business and youngsters reap the benefits of a quality education.

The education process doesn't end at the schoolhouse door. As a society, we must strive to ensure quality education is provided regardless of the means.

Some kind of interest

We hear a lot about the size of the national debt and the increasing share of the federal budget going into the payment of interest on the debt. One may wonder who is getting the interest.

The answer is that millions of Americans and quite a few foreigners are lending money to the U.S. government and collecting interest on it. The interest is paid to individuals, mutual funds, insurance companies, pension funds, trusts, foundations, and others who invest in U.S. government securities.

Savers who took money out of passbook accounts in recent years and invested it in liquid-asset mutual funds or other "money market" funds probably became beneficiaries of interest payments on government securities. Much of the foreign investment in the United States also goes into government notes and bonds. About half of the "petrodollars" invested here by OPEC oil producers has gone into government securities.

As of February of this year, the government had $315 billion of debt in Treasury bills which are sold in three-month, six-month and one-year denominations; $481 billion in Treasury notes which run for one to 10 years, and $111 billion in bonds running for 10 to 30 years. When other forms of debt are included, the national debt stands at $1.245 trillion dollars.

In the 1982 fiscal year, interest on the public debt came to $117 billion, but because our debt-ridden government also collected $32 billion in interest on loans from its own trust funds, the net outlay for interest was $85 billion. The figure will be higher this year because the national debt continues to rise.

Inasmuch as balanced federal budgets have become only a memory and remain a wispy promise for the future, borrowing to cover the national debt will be standard procedure for the U.S. government for the foreseeable future.

Even though Uncle Sam is now shouldering a $1.245 trillion mortgage, he hasn't missed a payment. So far.

Another View: Palatable tax bill

Congress won't be able to agree on a workable budget resolution until it decides on the size and shape of a tax increase. What is not lacking, however, is fairly wide consensus that a substantial tax increase is needed soon.

The House budget resolution already calls for a $30 billion increase starting next year. So does the tentative budget resolution voted last week by the Senate Budget Committee. And most of the president's economic advisers treat the "standby" tax increases proposed in the president's budget as if such increases — or their equivalent — were a foregone conclusion.

The trouble is that no one seems ready to propose a tax package that could command both congressional and presidential support. "Speechless: stronger letter to follow," was the reaction of Sen. Robert Dole to the news that the budget resolution called upon his Finance Committee to raise $30 billion. And while the House budget resolution seemed tailored to a simple rescission of this July's tax cut, the president has vowed to veto such a measure. Many members, noting the apparent fragility of the current recovery, are also wary of forgoing the expected stimulus.

Most economists would agree, however, that whatever help may be gotten from another tax cut would be far outweighed by the short- and long-run economic damage that would come from rising interest rates. And interest rates will surely rise if the Federal Reserve and financial markets see enormous budget deficits on the horizon. What sort of tax compromise might give prompt assurance that — with election-year politics in the offing — the budget deficit will not be left spinning wildly out of control for the foreseeable future?

Any kind of tax increase will meet opposition on either practical or theoretical grounds. Closing loopholes, for example, is certainly the best way to raise taxes in theory. But it calls into action all the well-heeled lobbies that stand guard at the door of each tax shelter. Putting off the July tax cut or repealing future tax indexing would be easier. But both actions would hit hardest the lower and middle tax brackets that have gotten precious little from the Reagan tax cuts so far.

George Perry of the Brookings Institution offers a solution with both theoretical and practical merit. Why not, he says, take seriously the president's budget proposal for a surcharge on income taxes and an excise tax on both foreign and domestic oil? A surcharge would make high-bracket taxpayers share more of the burden than would rescinding either the July tax cut or indexing, and the oil excise tax has merit apart from revenue raising.

True, the idea of a "standby" tax is too hokey to reassure the financial markets, and 1986 is too late to put the new taxes into law. But Congress could remedy both these defects by making the tax increases certain and starting to phase them in next year. Throw in a few badly needed reforms and you'd have a bill that could and should command the support of both Congress and the president.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Foot-dragging slows drug probe

WASHINGTON — Attorney General William French Smith has said his No. 1 priority is cracking down on illegal drug traffic. He might be interested to learn that some of his own Justice Department people have been less than enthusiastic about the investigation of drug dealing in the halls of Congress.

Jack Anderson

For months, while a federal grand jury has been hearing testimony about narcotics sales to members of Congress and their staffs, Justice Department officials have been playing down the explosive evidence.

But with the extradition from Australia of two suspected ringleaders, Douglas Marshall and Troy Todd, the foot-dragging officials will soon have no place to hide. The heat is on the Justice Department — and the prominent politicians who have been accused of purchasing narcotics.

Perhaps the first question the attorney general should ask his subordinates is why Marshall and Todd were allowed to skip the country 10 months ago. Undercover detectives caught them red-handed, selling $15,000 worth of cocaine in the home of Marshall's father, Sylvan, a prominent Washington lawyer. Yet the charges against the two were suddenly dropped, allowing them to flee to Australia.

Another matter the attorney general should ask about is the mysterious withdrawal by prosecutors of a crucial grand jury subpoena issued to Capitol Police Chief James Powell. His men had collected information about drug use in the Capitol, but the grand jury's subpoena was withdrawn after it had been served — because of a phone call from Powell to prosecutor Daniel Bernstein.

Part of the evidence the grand jury wanted has apparently disappeared. A secret investigative document seen by my associates Jack Mitchell and Indy Badhwar states, "it has been indicated that these records (the Capitol Police data) are no longer complete, and that the U.S. Attorney's office will withdraw its subpoena." This, of course, is precisely what happened.

Sources close to the case estimated that a thorough follow-up on the allegations given to the prosecutor could have resulted in as many as 100 witnesses being called before the grand jury. There was no such effort to break the case.

A year ago, an eyes-only memorandum prepared for the attorney general's signature ordered his lieutenants to form "Law Enforcement Coordinating Committees ... to focus on the social environment which has helped to create the vast market for illegal drugs."

But it's apparently the political environment that has been the decisive factor in the investigation of the Capitol cocaine club.

Attorney General Smith has personally ordered Justice Department officials to abandon their usual policy in this sensitive case and prosecute users as well as pushers. The reason is obvious: Those who make the nation's laws should be held strictly accountable when they themselves break those laws.

THE EYES HAVE IT: The Air Force requires 20/20 vision for its pilot trainees. Anything less is an automatic washout. But there's an operation, called radial keratotomy, that will give nearsighted people the coveted 20/20 vision.

Unfortunately for aspiring pilots, the Air Force considers radial keratotomy to be still an experimental surgical procedure. This is despite the fact that some 500 doctors have been performing the operation since 1978 and consider it a safe, long-term correction of nearsightedness.

An Air Force spokesman explained that the military doesn't want to invest time and money training individuals whose vision may deteriorate later, and said, "We can get plenty of pilots who have proper vision."

But one expert in the surgical procedure, Dr. Frederic Kremer, told my reporter Kelley Griffin that persons who have undergone radial keratotomy face no greater risk of deteriorating vision than anyone else.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: A secret Pentagon report gives a scorecard on U.S.-Soviet competition in nuclear weapons available for use in the Pacific area. In 12 separate nuclear weapons systems in the Pacific, the United States leads in just two: carrier fighter planes and surface-to-air missiles. The Russians hold the advantage in short-range surface-to-surface missiles, artillery, rockets, long-range surface-to-surface missiles, naval surface-to-surface missiles, submarine surface-to-surface missiles, naval guns, torpedoes, land-based fighter-bombers and land-based heavy bombers.

— The eastern Mediterranean off the coast of Lebanon has been named "Bermuda Triangle East" because of the dozens of merchant ships that disappear each year. A typical disappearance involves Greek-owned freighters — old but well-insured — that carry cargo already bought and paid for. En route to Lebanon, the ships' names and registry are changed after being sold at hefty profits. The cargoes are then sold to Lebanese or Syrian smugglers, and the still-insured, empty ships are either loaded with hashish for the European trade market, sold for scrap or sunk.

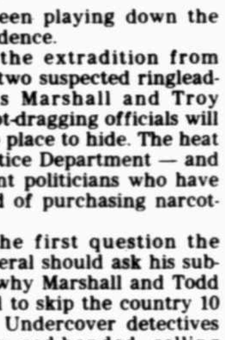
GEORGE F. WILL

'Little Drummer Girl' a problem

WASHINGTON — Literature transmutes experiences into art, but political experiences are problematic material, as John Le Carre's "The Little Drummer Girl" shows. A political novel can be a political act, and can be, as Le Carre's is, polemical. But the dust raised by the brawling about Le Carre's politics has obscured the more interesting question of why the novel is so unsatisfactory.



George F. Will

Trollope used novels subtly to explore questions of manners: How can gentlemanliness be accommodated to politics? Dickens slammed headlong into policy questions, promoting reforms (of schools in "Nicholas Nickleby," of poorhouses in "Oliver Twist," of the law in "Bleak House"). But rarely is a novel as tied to current headlines as Le Carre's is.

There are 450,000 copies of it in print in this country. The market has spoken, and so have reviewers, most of them admiringly. A novel can be a fine device for exploring moral dilemmas, and reviewers frequently refer to Le Carre as a master of delineating moral "ambiguity." In his espionage novels the "ambiguity" consists primarily in the idea that means as much as ends reveal where, if anywhere, justice lies in a political conflict.

The subliminal — actually, not very subliminal — message of "The Spy that Came in from the Cold" and other novels was: East and West both do disagreeable things to promote their interests, so there is a kind of moral symmetry. That idea, and the thought that public virtue may diverge from private virtue — that conventionally good people can not govern because they will not do what is necessary — appear again in his new novel.

About the cause of the controversy, consider this. Readers are encouraged to take as journalism — as fact — the statement by one of Le Carre's Palestinian characters that a refugee camp filled with women, children and elderly was bombed 700 times in 12 years — an average of more than once a week — and that Israel routinely used U.S.-built cluster bombs, and dropped booby traps designed as toys. A novelist whose speciality is supposed to be verisimilitude should not retail rubbish.

Far from being, as advertised, an illusionless reporter of moral grayness and arcane details from shadowy worlds, Le Carre is a romantic. Were governments capable of the genius and precision that Le Carre's fictional Israelis demonstrate, the world would be either much better or much worse than it is. Describing the Palestinian terrorist who is the object of Israel's plot, Le Carre says: "He was broad-shouldered and sculptured, with the rarity of a precious object kept from sight. He could not have walked into a restaurant without the talk dying around him, or...." You get the drift. An editor of a Harlequin novel would reach for his blue pencil.

The principal male character, an Israeli agent, is a Zarathustran fellow spouting epigrams while performing miracles of manipulation on the principal female character. He devises plans of incredible complexity, requiring incredible precision. From start to finish, he, the plans and the book are incredible.

Israel's grievance against Le Carre is nothing compared with every woman's grievance. The central character, Charlie, she is an English actress, a cloth-headed leftist who, incredibly, decides to cooperate with the Israelis who kidnap her. She will help kill that sculptured Palestinian. It is Pygmalion done as "My Fair Lady Counter-Terrorist." She is utterly passive and plastic to the male manipulators. They practice spiritual taxidermy on her, stuffing her with their purposes, which she does not really accept but fulfills anyway. On page 383 (of 430) an Israeli exclaims, "So what's her motivation?" That is a question that Le Carre never answers. He refers to "this world of unexplained devotions." This world? This novel.

Le Carre simply asserts that "to the uninitiated, the secret world is of itself attractive. Simply by turning on its axis, it can draw the weakly anchored to its centre." But Charlie is the center of this novel. She is unintelligible, so it is unconvincing.

At the end of his espionage trilogy about Smiley and Karla, the British and Soviet master spies, "exchanged one more glance and perhaps each for that second did see in the other something of himself." Yes, of course: There are human beings with common attributes on all sides. But that is not a substantial political insight. Political literature done well can expand the range of readers' empathy by replacing abstractions with flesh-and-blood beings. Few such beings live in Le Carre's Middle East.

Competition saves money

To The Editor:

In a Sunday edition of the Reporter-Telegram I noticed an article about Midland Memorial Hospital attempting to get a better rating on their up-coming bond sale, so that the interest they pay the investors will be less. I hope they achieve their goal. After all, I am a Midlander.

But, I am really disgusted with the fact that Midland Memorial is doing a tremendous PR job on the city about the how's and why's of being the "only" city hospital. Yes, I know Parkview is currently somewhere between an efficient clinic and a full-fledged hospital and I do not mean to insinuate any ill feelings toward them or to any individual at MMH for that matter. I do call a spade a spade when looking at MMH, however. How long do they really think they can get by trying to be the "only" hospital in a town of 90,000 people? Really — how long? If one listened to the directors and officers of MMH they will tell you big is better and they are right for Midland. Hogwash!

What I am truly disgusted with is how Midlanders, who claim to have a proud tradition of independence (whatever that means), are so doggoned apathetic about the whole issue of allowing other hospitals to be built in our area. Come on Midland — wipe off the dust on the windshield of your Mercedez and see this for what it really is.

Midland Memorial is a county institution: that means literally of the government, for the government, and by the government! I feel a county hospital is worthwhile, especially for interns, residence training, and indigent families. But we live in a free land built on our capitalistic free enterprise system. And when an environment begins to change the products and services offered normally must adapt with it. The best of competition brings out the best products, services, and lowest prices. It is a built-in check and balance system. Yet, Ho-hum, pardon me while I yawn, the average Midlander's attitude is, "who is the new kid on the block who wants to build a new hospital in my town and disrupt good old MMH?"

Lubbock, one of our sister West Texas cities to the north has just over 200,000 population and six hospitals. It is "the" medical center for a 250 mile radius. With all the money and need in Midland why is there just one hospital for 90,000 people? The answers go deeper than what I am relating here, but it is simply a matter of time before the citizens of Midland do achieve better competition for medical care.

Yet, today we have just this one hospital with indeed slim hopes of ever seeing another major hospital built to serve our growing needs. My point is that competition fosters the best environment. Our county hospital is indeed fortunate they do not have to, in this case, let the citizens decide to approve their fifteen million dollars expansion plan. Because we all probably know the answer to that one. Oh, well, if MMH ever does begin losing money they will just increase our taxes to cover the loss. Maybe that is now the new American way...

Good impact

To The Editor:

In the hustle and bustle of everyday life, one comes across a few individuals who make a strong impact on a community. Praise the Lord we have such people here in Midland, and it is good to take time to recognize them for their efforts in making our community a better place to live for everyone.

In the educational field we have Charles Priddy, whose financial contributions made it possible for our east side community to have a beautiful new school at a tremendous saving to our taxpayers.

Bobby Trimble, whose unselfish giving has made it possible for many elderly citizens to enjoy the small comforts of having a roof that does not leak, running water in the house, and for some, a real bathroom in the house. I have worked in some homes where hot water was enjoyed for the first time, and I could go on and on about the many Christian loving acts the Christmas in April groups do each year. Thanks to the leadership of Bobby, this caring will go on and on.

Next in my mind comes Charles Fraser, whose brilliant mind and tremendous vision has been a great contribution in the Objectives for Midland for the 80s. His support has seen many good changes in Midland, but we are most grateful for his assistance in the growth of our east-side community. Whatever his reason for resigning from First National Bank, we pray he will continue to help implement the Objectives for the 80s program in Midland. May he take time to smell the roses, fish and take his hunting dogs out again, but please continue to make every effort to make Midland a better place for everyone to live. God loves you!

Excerpts from Hitler diaries a propaganda attempt?

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst European Bureau

PARIS — A former deputy chief of British counter-intelligence said that he suspects the so-called Hitler diaries which have recently come to light are an elaborate communist confidence trick with an up-to-the-minute propaganda aim.

"The partial entries which have been published so far look like an ingenious attempt to show that Hitler wanted to team up with the West against the Soviet Union," Sir George Young, the retired intelligence expert, said in a telephone interview. "I would not be at all surprised if the material from the 'diaries' shows Hitler trying to enlist Britain in an anti-Soviet crusade and claiming to receive encouragement from at least some politicians in that aim."

Young, whose own role in counter-intelligence goes back to the wartime period, joined the skeptics over the 60 leather-bound volumes, each bearing a gold swaztika crest, which the West German magazine, Stern, claims to have uncovered. The magazine said last week that the diaries were discovered in East Germany following a two-and-a-half year hunt by one of its reporters.

They are said to contain daily entries for the period from just before Hitler came to power in 1933 to the days immediately preceding his suicide in his Berlin bunker in 1945. The volumes allegedly were flown out of beseiged Berlin in a fireproof box and were lost for many years when the airplane carrying them crashed in Prussia, now communist East Germany.

Expert opinion concerning the diaries' authenticity so far seems about equally divided. Several leading Western European historians have declared them the real thing, after admittedly cursory examination. Others have expressed strong doubt. As Young pointed out, however, Stern's editors did not ask either West German or other Western intelligence authorities to study them before putting publication rights up for sale at an asking price so steep that no American magazine or newspaper has so far bought them.

Central to Young's doubts is the fact that his own organization, MI-6, conducted a "major" postwar inquiry into the possible existence of such diaries or other personal writings by Hitler. As a result, a definite conclusion was reached that they did not.

Trudeau issues missile warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau is warning the Reagan administration that proposed testing of U.S. cruise missiles in Western Canada is becoming "a serious and deeply troubling issue" for the Canadian government.

Trudeau told Vice President George Bush on Wednesday that 80,000 demonstrators took to the streets last weekend to oppose Canadian approval for testing the missiles over Western Canadian terrain that resembles the region around the Soviet capital of Moscow.

Canadian officials said later that Bush stressed the cruise is "an important aspect of NATO defense" systems that are jointly supported by Canada and other Western allied nations.

Seizure tests Brazilian policy

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The seizure of four Libyan planes carrying arms to Nicaragua is testing Brazil's policy of maintaining friendships both with the United States and radical Third World nations.

On Wednesday the government refused Libya's request to fly out the confiscated arms in the same four planes which carried the cargo into Brazil.

Brazil is willing to discuss ways to return the arms, but the weapons will not be put back on the planes detained in this country since April 17, government spokesman Joao Baptista said.

Irish abortion law toughened

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The Irish government suffered its first defeat since taking power last November when lawmakers rejected its proposed constitutional amendment on abortion and approved a tougher one instead.

Legislators in the 166-member Dail, or lower house, voted 87-65 against the government's amendment, which was designed to prevent the Supreme Court from permitting abortions. Critics complained its wording would have enabled the Dail to modify the 1861 law that makes abortion a crime punishable by life imprisonment.

Several conservatives of Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald's Fine Gael (Family of the Irish) party abstained in the vote, as did five deputies of the Labor Party, his coalition junior partner.

The outcome was not considered a vote of no-confidence in the government, whose coalition has a six-seat majority in the Dail.

U.S. Embassy cleanup begins

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. Embassy staffers have turned their homes into offices and are busy stripping the bombed-out ruins of the embassy of all salvageable equipment.

Still shaken and grieving from last week's bombing, the American and Lebanese staff who survived the bombing are already at work in temporary quarters. The press of troop withdrawal negotiations and the visit of U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz have left little time for anything else.

"Nobody is pretending this is easy," said embassy press officer John Reid, who was injured in the blast that killed at least 17 Americans and an estimated 32 Lebanese staff. "Three of my employees were killed, some others were hurt. It's had a terrible effect on everybody else.

Bishops outline nuclear threat

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West German Roman Catholic bishops warn in a pastoral letter that the threat of nuclear war should not be relied on indefinitely as a deterrent.

The letter was read at a news conference Wednesday by Josef Cardinal Hoeffner, chairman of the West German bishops conference.

Editor has done much for his adopted country

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Jorges Orgibet, the oldest resident American in Thailand, drives to work these days over traffic-clogged, concrete roads where not so long ago he boarded boats for languid canal journeys. Most of the gracious, wooden villas where he lived or visited have been bulldozed away to make room for soaring condominiums.

Siam, the land of exotic charm to which Orgibet came in 1945, has become Thailand, a rapidly modernizing nation along the booming East Asian rim. Krungthep, the quiet, templed "City of Angels," has become Bangkok, the international name for Thailand's capital, which now moves to a fast international beat.

"Here was a city of some 600,000 people, known as the 'Venice of the East' for its network of klongs (canals). Trees formed a canopy of green over most of the streets. Very little resembled today's metropolis of some 5½ million."

So writes Orgibet, now a trim, vigorous and still fully employed 75-year-old, in his recently published memoir, "From Siam to Thailand: Backdrop to the Lands of Smiles."

Young Orgibet came to Siam — it was renamed Thailand in 1949 — from the China-Burma-India theater just after World War II ended, assigned here with the U.S. Office of War Information.

Although an avowed patriot, he was one of many Americans who fell in love with Asia via the war and never returned home. Over the past 37 years Orgibet has gone back to the United States just once for a short visit.

A number of Americans who remained in Thailand contributed significantly to their adopted country.

Willis H. Bird co-founded the first stock exchange and paved the way for a now vigorous Thai-American trade. Albert and Freda Lyman built Tilleke and Gibbins into one of the country's largest law firms. Alexander MacDonald founded the "Bangkok Post," a thriving English-language newspaper.

Jim Thompson, a close friend of Orgibet's, is remembered as the "Silk King of Thailand" for reviving the silk industry. He disappeared mysteriously while on a trip in the Malaysian jungles in 1967.

Orgibet resigned from the U.S. government service in 1947 after a stint as the embassy press officer and after laying the foundations of the U.S. Information Service in Thailand, a job which involved travel by foot, elephant and a railway car especially designed for his use.

Orgibet, who came from a newspaper family, has since opened Thailand's first advertising agency and served as a public relations consultant to the national airline. He began operations of The Associated Press in Thailand in 1953 and reported for NBC news.

Along the way he started Thailand's first Western-style nightclub, "The Silver Palm," and ran a security guard business.

Today, he puts in 10 hours and more a day as executive editor of "Business in Thailand," considered one of the best English-language business magazines in the country to which for years he contributed a "Backdrop" column.

Ranger gets paid for being outdoors

CHIRICAHUA NATIONAL MONUMENT, Ariz. (AP) — Snow clouds hover over the saddles and canyons of this 10,690-acre wilderness most days, and winds well below freezing sigh through its forests.

And Bill Murray, the ranger in these southeastern Arizona mountains, keeps moving. He patrols 21 miles of trails by jogging them three times a week.

"Most rangers with an advanced degree in biology who have a patrol car, carry a gun and a can of mace, never really get out," Murray said. "I'm lucky. I can jog the trails with nature at my side. And the best part is, I get paid for it."

Murray, a native of Union Grove, N.C., lives with his wife and two children in the Chiricahua National Monument. It lies in the Chiricahua Mountains, a range that runs from 4 to 20 miles wide and 40 miles long, reaching an elevation of 9,795 feet. The peaks are virtually surrounded by arid grasslands except in the north end, where a low ridge forms a connecting link with the Dos Cabezas Mountains.

"In some areas of the park you can drink fresh water from springs, watch an eagle in flight or follow the fresh cracks in rock formations," said Murray, 39.

"In a world that is running short of wildlife, the Chiricahuas have prime resources," Murray said. "We have a large population of exotic birds, everything from golden eagles to red-faced warblings, red-tailed hawks and Mexican jays." More than 250 species and subspecies of birds have been recorded.

"I've seen four wolves in these mountains, even one after they declared wolves extinct in Arizona," he went on. "And there's lots of deer in the park. We have snakes, javalinas, jaguars, Apache fox squirrels, mountain lions, even coatimundis."

Goldwater: Congress runs for benefit of Easterners

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., was hopping mad. As chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, he'd been abruptly summoned back to Washington from a weekend visit to the Air Force Academy in Colorado.

He had to catch a night flight so he could be in the Senate early Monday morning for what he thought was going to be a secret session on U.S. involvement in Nicaragua sought by Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn.

Goldwater was there; Dodd wasn't. No secret session.

"I flew all night to be here," Goldwater fumed. "Now I find that one of the participants is not in town."

"I have to inform the majority leader that we Westerners, who have a hard time getting home, are getting a little bit tired of these people in the East who can conduct their business out of a taxi, going home and not showing up until Tuesday."

"I think I represent all senators who come from west of the Mississippi that we are getting a little bit tired of this place being run for the benefit of those people who do not live so far away."

Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., didn't want to be left out. On behalf of Democrats, he apologized to Goldwater for the inconvenience — then sought to explain that West Virginia wasn't really an Eastern state, either.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., told Goldwater he sympathized with his irritation, then added: "I have never been prouder of the fact that I am from the South than I am at this moment. Since the senator only mentioned the West and the East, I feel absolutely safe and secure under these circumstances."

"Our state is the most Eastern of the Western, the most Western of the Eastern; the most Northern of the Southern, and the most Southern of the Northern. It is where the East says 'good morning' to the West and where Yankee Doodle and Dixie kiss each other goodnight...."

Baker: "I have always known I was confused by West Virginia, but I have never known why until now."

But Goldwater was clearly intrigued by Byrd's statement.

"I can understand the senator (Byrd) and I have to say, as a native of the territory of Arizona, we still maintain great pride in the fact that we were the first territory of the Confederacy. ..."

The discussion went on in that vein for a while until Baker called a halt to it all: "I sense a great danger overtaking the Senate. If we do not end this conversation before very long, the very fabric of the Republic may be rent asunder," he said.

'Attack' rooster strikes

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Dealing with guard dogs is routine for most detectives, but one gumshoe was almost at a loss when he came face-to-face with another breed of animal sentry: an irate 50-pound rooster.

"I thought it was a turkey at first. His talons were as big as my hand," said John Pennington of the Metropolitan Nashville Police Department.

Pennington said he was in the neighborhood Sunday when he heard a radio dispatcher send officers to the home of Ed Taylor, 84, who had broken his hip.

The detective said he kicked in the rear door and came face-to-face with two dogs and the green and gold bird, apparently upset over the sudden intrusion.

Pennington said he grabbed a rake and used it to ward off the rooster's attempts to peck and scratch him. He was not injured, and said the fowl stuck his head in the carpet after several seconds.

But the bird got free and attacked a second police officer who came through the door as Pennington tended to Taylor in a bedroom. The detective said he is sure the fowl was simply guarding its master.

City workers finally corraled all three animals and took them to the pound where they will stay until Taylor is out of the hospital.

EPA: Two pints equal one quart

DENVER (AP) — Red-faced officials at the Environmental Protection Agency have apologized to a Colorado farmer after accusing him of using "one quart of pesticide" per acre. The regulations allow two pints.

Bill Geise, chief of the toxic substances branch at the EPA's Denver office, called the rebuke to Fort Morgan farmer Gary Sagel "a first-grade mistake."

"We wrote to the farmer to apologize and have cleared his record of that. In fact we sit around at our staff meetings together and recite that two pints equals one quart," Geise said earlier this week.

Geise said the EPA requires sellers of pesticides to keep records of who buys them.

Pennsylvania proves itself to movie makers

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — So you want to shoot a movie but Hollywood and Vine is a little out of your price range? How about beautiful downtown Scranton? Or perhaps picturesque Johnstown?

Ridiculous, you say? Then you haven't seen "That Championship Season," filmed in Scranton last summer, or heard about "All the Right Moves," which 20th Century Fox plans to shoot in Johnstown this spring.

Pennsylvania may not yet challenge California or New York City as the nation's film capital, but it's not exactly down there with Wisconsin and Mississippi, either.

To the contrary, 20 feature-length films, 16 made-for-television movies and six documentaries were filmed in Pennsylvania during the past five years — or since the state created a Bureau of Motion Picture and Television Development.

"We've proven ourselves," said Michele Casale, the bureau's director since May 1981. "We give a service and we don't have any complaints — and we know that what a producer wants are very few difficulties, because time is money."

Movies filmed in Pennsylvania put money in the state's economy. How much? According to the bureau, the economic benefit from productions filmed in the state since 1977 totals a whopping $38.25 million, enough to justify its continued existence as an arm of the Commerce Department.

Ms. Casale, a 30-year-old Pittsburgh native and onetime producer herself, attributes the bureau's success in landing films, TV movies, documentaries and even commercials to hard work and perseverance.

Every day, she says, she and her two staff members pore over the various trade publications looking for "leads" — producers and directors who might be interested in filming their movie in Pennsylvania.

"The hardest thing," she said, "is just convincing them to come see (the state) for themselves. The locations and the people sell themselves."

After some prodding last year, director Adrian Lyne was persuaded to take a look at Pittsburgh as the site of "Flash Dance." Result: After a one-day tour of the city, Lyne abandoned his first choice, Chicago, and decided "Flash Dance" was meant for Pittsburgh.

In the case of "That Championship Season," Pennsylvania had a friend in playwright Jason Miller, who set his award-winning play of the same name in Scranton.

Accommodating filmmakers can present all sorts of demands, Ms. Casale noted. Over the years the bureau has managed to:

— Gain permission to drill a huge hole in a state road so that a cameraman for "Knightriders" could shoot a truck driving over him.

— Get a temporary change in the state's child labor laws that would permit minors performing in "Taps" to work during evening hours.

Sometimes the requests for help come from unusual places.

"We had an author call us once from the St. Moritz Hotel in New York City who said he was having a terrible time trying to write a script about a manufacturing town from a hotel room," Ms. Casale recalled. "So we sent him to Allentown."

Although a number of big-name movies have been filmed in part or entirely in Pennsylvania — including "Rocky III" and "The Soldier" — the bureau has had its share of disappointments.

It "location scouted" for some real biggies that wound up elsewhere, among them "Tootsie," "Sophie's Choice," "Best Friends" and "The Toy."

But still the work, Ms. Casale said, has some special rewards.

An ABC made-for-TV movie, "For Lovers Only," was filmed at a resort in the Poconos last summer. When it aired, the audience included a divorced couple who had honeymooned there years before.

"We heard that they got back together after watching it," beamed Ms. Casale.

Can you top that, Hollywood?

Mayor more involved with music than law

NORTH MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — "Every good lawyer has to be an actor," says Mayor Howard Neu, who finds himself getting more involved with "show biz."

A practicing attorney for 15 years, a politician since the 1970s and a certified public accountant, Neu is spending increasing time with cable television and is stepping into the movie industry.

"If and when I start making more money with television, law may go by the wayside," says the 41-year-old Chicago native, who came to Florida as a youth.

Music, however, seems to be the stabilizer in his busy life although he doesn't play an instrument. For 18 years, Neu has served as the musical director of Temple Menorah in Miami Beach and for the past decade he's also held that position with the "Chosen Children," a Jewish youth group on the order of "Up With People."

The 20 to 30 youngsters dance and sing a range of musical arrangements from modern rock to Russian classical medleys.

"It's the only group of its kind that I know of," Neu says, adding that it is independent of any temple. The youths perform once a week and have toured the eastern United States, Canada and Israel. "But it also involves these high school children in Judaism."

Neu enjoys singing and performs regularly not only at his temple, but sometimes at other churches in the Miami area.

A Democrat, he became a city councilman in 1975, was elected mayor in 1979 and re-elected in 1981. A two-term limit prevents him from running again, but he admits he has an eye on a congressional seat. He becomes the president of the Dade Bar Association in June.

Neu conceived and put together a cable television program last year called "South Florida Speaks." He produces the weekly half-hour show and co-hosts it with his attorney friend, Alex Rosenfeld.

"It's a talk show on controversial matters and we usually have a panel of three guests. There's audience participation, like the Donahue show," he adds.

He hopes the program will eventually be shown on the numerous other cable networks in South Florida. "Then we can look for sponsors," Neu says.

He has formed his own production company and plans to produce a children's program for South Florida.

Television involvement has resulted in his having some bit parts in movies filmed in the area.

"Most people don't realize North Miami is the third-largest motion picture producing city in the country after Los Angeles and New York," he says.

Pope John Paul sees himself as modern-day apostle

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

Mulligan's Stew

PORT-AU-PRINCE, HAITI (AP) — Last month, as Pope John Paul II headed back to Rome after his 16th wearying and worrisome pilgrimage to another part of the world, his chartered Alitalia jet traced the contrail of an enormous question mark in the moonlit sky over Haiti.

Such vaporous formations are rarely seen at night, especially in warm tropic air, but to this reporter, worn out after eight days on the papal path, the manifestation overhead seemed to suggest the two questions most often asked in letters from readers, questions from the floor after a speech and by neighbors, friends and editors when you get home:

Where does the pope get the stamina to carry on such a demanding travel schedule?

Why does he do it?

This pope has journeyed more than 150,000 miles to almost every arc of the globe. As he approaches his 62nd birthday on May 18, he is preparing for what shapes up as the most emotional and potentially problematic trip of all, a return to his native Poland after the devastation of the Solidarity movement by the government.

FOR HIS age, the ruddy faced, clear-eyed John Paul II looks rugged and healthy, but the effects of the assassination attempt in St. Peter's Square two years ago become more evident with each passing month and mile of his pontificate. He walks slower and with a more pronounced stoop. His energy is still amazing but no longer inexhaustible. He can still wear out the relatively younger press corps, but their hours on the job have become a bit shorter.

The pope is still on the road at first light, heading somewhere in his Popemobile to celebrate Mass or greet nuns or be the pop star at a youth rally, but he is rarely found anymore after midnight waving from his balcony or, as on his last Polish trip, playing the guitar and joining in the folk songs with the university students who had come to serenade him.

Either John Paul's health is not what it used to be or those around him have finally managed to slow him down. Perhaps a measure of both.

As to why this 264th successor of St. Peter has become the most traveled pope of all, he has answered that question many times in his sermons in many parts of the world and never more emphatically than when ABC's Bill Blakemore asked him point blank during that rare and excellent network look at the everyday life of a pope. His answer was that he does what he was called to do.

John Paul II sees himself as a modern-day apostle, a messenger of Christ pledged to carry out the words of Jesus in Matthew 28:19, "going therefore, teach ye all nations."

Given the gift of tongues on that first Pentecost, the original 12 apostles — with Matthias taking the place of the traitor Judas Iscariot — piled up an incredible mileage record in an age when a day's journey was reckoned at 14 miles. According to sacred tradition and the writings of the early church fathers, the doughty dozen, before all except John met martyrdom, set foot in almost every corner of the ancient world. Matthew got to Ethiopia; Thomas the Doubter to southern India, where tradition says he was executed near Madras; Simon the Zealot preached in Persia; James the Greater in Spain before he was executed by Herod Agrippa. Bartholomew crossed the great desert of Arabia and was beheaded by the Armenians. Peter, the first pope, reached Europe and was crucified head downwards in Rome about 62 A.D.

UPON RECEIVING the keys of Peter in the fall of 1978, John Paul II took the names of his two predecessors, honoring apostles who had traveled far in the first Christian century when Jesus was an unknown name even a day's journey beyond the shores of Lake Galilee.

John, the most junior partner in a fishing boat with his brother James and Peter, was transported to the Turkish coast in a Roman quinquereme, a large galley, slave-powered by five decks of oarsmen. He had been condemned as a Christian agitator to work in stone quarry on the offshore island of Patmos.

Here he had the searing visions that inspire the Book of Revelation. John died of old age at Ephesus in Turkey, the only apostle to escape martyrdom — but not from any lack of Roman trying. Tertullian tells us the evangelist was "plunged unhurt into boiling oil and then exiled."

Paul, the most traveled of all, was not one of the original 12 and, though a contemporary, never saw Christ. His four missionary journeys, stretching from Arabia to Gibraltar, made Christianity a worldwide religion less than four decades after the crucifixion. Even more so than now, danger ws the name of the missionary game, as Paul himself tells us in Second Corinthians: "Five times have I received at the hands of the Jews the 40 lashes less one. Three times I have been beaten with rods; once I was stoned. Three times I have been shipwrecked; a day and a night I have been adrift at sea; on frequent journeys in danger from rivers, from robbers, from my own people; danger from the Gentiles, danger in the city, in the wilderness, at sea; danger from false brethren."

Like the multilingual John Paul II coming from Poland to Rome and then setting off around the world, the first Paul was uniquely equipped to become the Moses of the New Testament: he was of Roman citizenship, of Greek culture and of Jewish birth. Sentenced to death in Rome during Nero's persecutions, he could insist on dying by the sword, like a Roman, not hanged from a tree, like a criminal.

John Paul II is still inclined to let his sermons test the endurance of his listeners and devastate the best-laid plans of Vatican schedule makers, although lately he has been keeping them under 40 minutes. Paul the Apostle anticipated his loquacity here. Luke tells us that on one Sabbath, Paul preached so long a boy named Eutychus (which means "lucky") nodded off and fell out the window of the upper room where the service was held. Paul picked him up and restored him.

The words preached by the apostles John and Paul were eventually heard and read by more people than any spoken by any statesmen, soldier or celebrity of their or any other age. Just as the modern apostle bearing their combined names has been seen, live or on prime time TV, in more plces in the world than any contemporary media messenger.

Study: Smokers addicted

From Wire Reports

A new animal study has added evidence that cigarette smokers have a true physical addiction to nicotine and uncovered clues to a source of drugs to treat it.

Dr. Kenneth Kellar, one of the pharmacologists who conducted the study on rats at Georgetown University in Washington, emphasized that any use of their findings to help smokers is "still wishful thinking" at this time. But his results do "offer a glimmer of hope for a new way of looking at nicotine's action in the brain."

Keller and Rochelle Schwartz measured the way rat brains regulate the uptake of a common brain chemical, called acetylcholine, after stimulating nerve cells that make the chemical with two substances. One was nicotine. The other was a drug called DFP (for diisopropyl fluorophosphate).

Their report, published in Science, concluded that repeated injections of nicotine increased the number of "receptor sites" in the brain that could bind or take up the brain chemical acetylcholine. Ten days of DFP, however, decreased the number of binding sites.

The study suggests that nicotine mimics the action of acetylcholine, overloading the available receptor sites and recruiting other cells to take the excess. The more receptors there are, the more stimulation is required, setting up a cycle not unlike "tolerance" and increased craving in drug addiction.

Most smokers who attempt to quite cigarets claim that they feel physical "withdrawal" symptoms in the first days or weeks of non-smoking. After a while, the craving for nicotine diminishes.

The Georgetown study suggests that when nicotine stimulation of the brain stops for a period of time, the recruited receptor sites might return to their normal function, corresponding to a diminished need for nicotine.

DFP, unlike nicotine, indirectly rather than directly stimulates brain cells to make acetylcholine. Through a sensitive feedback system, its effects eventually signal the brain to reduce available receptor binding sites in order to protect the system.

DFP is a drug related to nerve gas. While widely used in animal brain experiments, it is not for human use. However, if the Georgetown work is confirmed by experiments now underway, drugs could be designed to do what DFP does safely and effectively.

That is still speculation at present, Kellar cautioned, and added, "even if we could one day stop the physical addiction, that would be only part of the battle to help people quit smoking."

Mexican train travels through time

AP Laserphoto

Tarahumara Indian women sit at the train depot in Divisadero, Mexico, where a canyon in the Sierra Madres provides colorful scenery. The depot is along the route of the Chihuahua al Pacifico train that takes travelers back in time along a 400-mile-track amid scenery unlike any in North America.

BARRANCA DEL COBRE, Mexico (AP) — The finest of Old Mexico is found on the Chihuahua al Pacifico train that takes travelers back in time to a place where people live in converted railroad cars amid scenery unlike any in North America.

The train meanders 403 miles through meadows where horses stand shoulder-deep in grasses, passes places where Mexican maidens wash clothes in a river they also bathe in, and crosses the Sierra Madres, colored by the pinks and yellows of spring.

The rickety Mexican train also chugs by canyon creeks where shy Tarahumara Indians carve wooden artworks and loggers live in rustic cabins in a forest of mountain pines.

"Some say there's too much to see," train spokeswoman Ida Romero said of the 15-hour Los Mochis-to-Chihuahua City trip, which costs $7 for a first-class ticket.

Travelers can break the journey midway in Creel, a 7,500-foot-high logging and copper mining town that offers primitive hotel accommodations and burro-led excursions into the Tarahumaras back-country, Ms. Romero said.

The Tarahumaras, famed for their long-distance, barefoot races through Northern Mexico's Sierra Madres, also sell wood carvings and hand-woven baskets at the Divisadero stop, which overlooks Barranca del Cobre, the Copper Canyon.

Mexican tourist agencies tout the Copper Canyon — 4,000 feet deep in some places — as their nation's version of the Grand Canyon. Narrow winding trails drop down into secluded valleys where tropical vegetation florishes.

When abnormally heavy storms buried the Sierra Madres this winter with meter-deep snows, the Tarahumaras simply treked down into the tepid, fern-filled valleys.

The 400-passenger Chihuahua al Pacifico trains start journeys most mornings both in Chihuahua City, 250 miles south of El Paso, Texas, and at the Gulf of California port city of Los Mochis, about 450 miles south of Tucson, Ariz.

Los Mochis to Creel offers the most spectacular scenery, rising from the lowlands where locals sell rose-colored canaries and cardinals at train stops for $1.33, and follows the Rio Fuerte, where hand-drawn ferries carry natives across the river. Some wash clothes and bathe along the riverbank.

The train steadily climbs the craggy Sierra Madres, passing little railroad settlements such as Temoris and San Antoninio where locals have converted discarded red boxcars into permanent homes.

Most boxcars have stove-pipes poking out of the roof and windows carved from the side panels. Other wood-paneled railcar homes have extended porches that front onto the train tracks, and crude window-boxes where flowers are grown.

The train has first- and second-class seating, and a small dining car where meals such as bacon-and-eggs or breaded Mexican steaks cost about $1.50.

"This trip shows Old Mexico at its best. People live here much like they did many years ago. Still, most of the people who use this train now do it because there are no roads in or out this part of the country," Ms. Romero said.

Cubs bite Gators for third time

BEAUMONT — Behind a strong pitching performance by Doug Welenc, the Midland Cubs defeated Beaumont, 7-3 here Wednesday night taking three of the last four against the Gators.

Welenc (1-2) scattered six hits as he went the distance for his first victory of the season.

The base-on-balls was key to Midland's victory as six of seven Cubs who were given the free pass eventually scored.

With the game tied 2-2 in the eighth, Midland erupted for four runs, including a crucial two-RBI single by A.J. Hill.

The Cubs then executed a suicide squeeze when Tom Johnson bunted with Trey Brooks scoring on the play.

Steve Schefsky, 1-1, was the losing pitcher for Beaumont.

Elsewhere in the Texas League, Jackson Mets beat Shreveport 4-1, San Antonio posted a 10-6 win over El Paso and Arkansas beat Tulsa 10-5 in 10 innings.

Ryan's Express passes 'Big Train'

AP Laserphoto

Nolan Ryan fires another fast ball in his historic game against the Montreal Expos in which he broke Walter Johnson's all-time major league record for strikeouts.

Carlton headed down same track

Nolan Ryan, the fastball pitcher for the Houston Astros, passed Walter Johnson's (Big Train) 55-year-old record for the most strikeouts in a career when he chalked up the 3,509th of his 16-season major league career in the eighth inning of Houston's 4-2 victory over Montreal.

"I'm really not record oriented," said the big right-hander. "I had the opportunity to break the record, and I feel fortunate to be in that position."

That's only 29 ahead of Steve Carlton, Philadelphia's silent southpaw. Lefty might well catch Ryan before the season ends."I can't worry about that," Ryan said. "My main goal is to be effective in as many games as I can for the Astros."

Dickie Thon and Phil Garner drove in two runs apiece for Houston, but the big attraction was, of course, Ryan, who had come into the season 14 strikeouts shy of the record and hoped to break the mark at home against Philadelphia last Friday night. But he managed only three of the eight strikeouts he still needed.

"It's been such a buildup," said Ryan. "I never realized 15 strikeouts would be so hard to come by. I'm relieved and very satisfied ... I wasn't sharp with my fastball and my curve wasn't as sharp as I would have liked it to be. I was getting two strikes on batters and not putting them away, just like I was doing the last game."

Ryan is never particularly emotional. It was more relief than exaltation he displayed when he finally broke the record. "I don't get too excited about anything," he said. "Now, I can sit back and relax and get more satisfaction out of it."

But in the stands, his wife, Ruth, was exhausted. "I was a lot more emotional than Nolan was," she said. "Didn't you hear me screaming?"

It wasn't Johnson, who spent 21 years with the Washington Senators, who fascinated Ryan when he was a youngster. It was Sandy Koufax, who held the record for career no-hitters and single-season strikeouts before Ryan arrived.

"It's been so long since Walter Johnson pitched, I really know very little about him," Ryan said. "I looked him up once in the Baseball Encyclopedia, but all that gave me was his stats. It didn't say too much about the man.

"When I broke Koufax's single-season record, that meant more to me. I was a fan of Koufax's when I was growing up. I watched him when I was in high school."

Mets 2, Reds 1

The Mets finally found a home away from home, in Cincinnati. For the first time in 10 games, they won on the road, thanks to pinch-hitter Danny Heep's ninth-inning sacrifice fly.

Mike Torrez pitched eight innings of three-hit ball for his first victory in the NL since Sept. 27, 1974. And he got it partly because he got his first hit in the NL since that date, an RBI-single in the fifth inning. It was a dramatic turnaround for Torrez, shelled in his previous starts.

Phillies 6, Braves 2

While the Mets were winning on the road for the first time in 10 games, the Braves were losing at home for the first time in 11.

Dick Ruthven checked the Braves on three singles through five innings, then gave way to relievers Porfi Altamirano and Ron Reed for the Phils. Garry Maddox drove in one run and scored one and Pete Rose had a two-run single for Philly.

Giants 3, Pirates 2

Bill Laskey of the Giants won for the first time in 1983, snapping a personal six-game losing streak which dated back to last season.

Milt May's single in the second inning and Tom O'Malley's hit in the fourth gave the Giants a pair of runs, then Darrell Evans' homer in the sixth produced the winner off winless Rick Rhoden.

Cards 7, Dodgers 6

Mike Ramsey ripped an eighth-inning triple off Alejandro Pena, then Darrell Porter greeted Steve Howe, the Dodgers' ace reliever with a single that propelled the Cardinals past LA. Bruce Sutter, St. Louis' fireman, was the winner.

Jose Morales hit a two-run homer for the Dodgers and George Hendrick had a three-run homer and an RBI-single for St. Louis.

Cubs 5, Padres 4

Larry Bowa drove in two runs with a fourth-inning sacrifice fly and a 10th-inning double to give the Cubs their victory over San Diego. The extra-inning hit followed Steve Lake's his fifth consecutive hit over the past two games. Ruppert Jones had a home run for the Padres. (AP)

Bulldogs hoping to carry on '82's momentum

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

In the final five games of the 1982 football season, the Midland High Bulldogs picked up a little momentum to finish with four victories for a 4-3 District 4-5A record. It was good enough to gain a four-way tie for second place and came within a coin flip of a state playoff berth

Now that the 1983 spring training is underway — today was the first day for the Bulldogs — Coach Pat Culpepper would like to "carry on the momentum we ended the season with and improve every day. We know we can win, we want to win."

Culpepper already has an "on paper" lineup of players to start the spring — centered around his five returning starters — but sees several positions up for grabs.

"Our drills will be tough and there will be a lot of hitting, a lot of competition between units to find out which players can go day-to-day and be consistant."

Of the starters he has to work with, four are on offense and one on defense. Two of those players will be moved to new positions, Jimmy Essman from the offensive line to fullback and Terry Hannon from defensive back to rover.

"This way he can block whichever side the ball is going," said Culpepper about Essman, a 200-pound All-District honorable mention returnee.

"We think he's a terrific blocker and could be a good inside runner. His running remains to be proven."

The "inside game" was a weakness for Midland High last year and Essman, combined with a larger John David Munn at center, could be the key to making the oft-called upon I formation a more explosive attack.

"John David Munn is up to 180 pounds (from 150 as a starting center last year) and at that weight he's lethal."

MIDLAND HIGH'S final two offensive starters from '82 are wide receivers Todd Shiplett and Allan Foret. "They're probably the strength of the football team right now," said Culpepper. "Todd Shiplett has gained a tenth of a second in speed and is down to 4.7."

And that leaves the quarterback, I back, tight end, guard and tackle positions to fill.

"We need a quarterback that can pass, read a defense pitch, handoff and provide leadership," said Culpepper. The pre-season nod goes to James Welborn from last year's junior varsity with Jeff Alsup and Matt Marcum guiding the underclassmen squads.

Culpepper has two players he expects to fight for the tight end position, Dennis Cano from the junior varsity and a kid from Midland Freshman he calls the "shot put king," Darrell Davis.

Both tackles up from the JV are dubbed "steady workmen" by Culpepper: Steve Lindsey and Jeff Daily. Both tip the scales at 200-plus and are under 5.0 in the 40. On the smaller side of things, the Bulldog guards are Gil Ward, 180, and "little bitty" Gary Browning, 150.

HANNON PLAYED in the secondary last year in Midland High's eight-man line Junk Yard Dawg defense, but Culpepper has visions of moving him to rover because "he's kind of grown out of his defensive back position. He'll play rover like John Hibbits did last year.

"Our interior defensive line, as Bill Yeoman (University of Houston) says is 'as green as lettuce leaves,'" said Culpepper. "More than likely we'll start three juniors in the middle: Brad Edgar, Steve Mizzles and Tommy Hudson."

Essman is expected to be a two-way starter for the Bulldogs and will bring his varsity experience to the tackle position along with John Atlee "who played some varsity last year," said Culpepper. "They have the potential to be very good."

Albert Reed and Kyle Kitto saw some varsity action in 1982 and each are back this year to step into the linebacker role. Jeff Pulley is expected to give Kitto a "real battle for the spot, some real hot competition.

"The secondary should be the fastest and quickest unit we've had since I've been here," said Culpepper who's starting his fourth season. He tabs Kenny White, Keith Byrd and Jay Harkrider (some varsity in '82) as the three to beat for the position.

THE PLAYERS Culpepper is looking at now, based on previous years, are in no way guaranteed a starting role. Each has to fight for his position. The MHS coaching staff will have 63 juniors and seniors to look at and 44 kids coming up from Midland Freshman.

To cap off the spring training program, the Bulldogs will play in the annual Bill Mims game on May 17 at 7 p.m.

"It'll be a scrimmage between the seniors of last year against this year's varsity," said Culpepper.

It'll be the best chance to impress the coaches, give them something to think about over the summer and could give some players a good shot at their positions when fall ball's two-a-days get underway.

Dykes hopes last year's bitter pill will spark Rebels in 1983

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Last fall the Midland Lee Rebels were one victory shy of gaining its first state football playoff berth since 1975. With that bitter pill still stuck in the throat, head football coach Spike Dykes begins a three-week look at the 1983 Lee grid edition Friday — spring training style.

Last year the Rebels owned a 7-3 season mark, but all three losses were in District 4-5A play, which was good only for a second place tie. Dykes entered last season with no returning starters from 1971's 8-2 squad. This year there are 14 returning lettermen, including two fulltime offensive starters and two part time starters. Lee also has two defensive starters and two part time starters.

THE TEAM also features 56 seniors listed on the varsity, some class juniors and help from a 9-0 sophomore team and a 9-1 junior varsity team. Even this early, there is talk around 4-5A that Lee may be very near to owning a powerhouse group.

Lee's linebacking corps may be the best in the school's history with Reggie Ellis and Isaac Garnett returning. Garnett is also a fullback, who rushed for 201 yards last year for a 4.6 per carry average and Ellis led the team in tackles last year with 124 in just 10 games. Michael Johnson, who had a lot of linebacking experience last year, is also back.

Tracy Sherman returns at offensive tagkle and Eddie Kittle, a part time starter at defensive end and offensive tackle, is also back.

"We have a little more experience than last year, that's for sure," noted Dykes. "We think the linebacking will be very strong positions for us and we are excited about the prospects in the offensive line. However, we don't have anyone who has played a varsity game in the secondary and that's one area we will work with this spring."

Dykes will miss 10 athletes due to baseball and track commitments, but that doesn't seem to bother him. "I think that speaks well of the competitors we have in that they are involved in playoff situations in other sports. I really like to see that."

DYKES DOES not have a No. 1 quarterback heading into spring training, but Jeff Motley, Dennis Matta (baseball) and John Abbott appear to be the candidates. Motley carried three times for seven yards last fall and did not throw a pass. Matta and Abbott have no varsity experience.

The running backs could be the most explosive in Lee history with highly touted juniors Walter Jones (80 yards for an 11.4 per carry average in a late season varsity move) and Tyrone Thurman (JV) to go with Sergio Ochoa (9, 1.5), Billy Gibbs (68, 9.7), Gordon Norris, Junior Nicholson, Pat Lithecome and Jerry Morales. Garnett (track) may miss a big part of spring training, but that will give Dykes a chance to look at his runners.

With center Allen Bell, guards Coy Stewart and DeVoe McMillen and tackle Nicky Tomlin back from last year's team with Kittle and Sherman, the Lee line has a lot of promise. There will be a lot of competition here since eight other seniors are good enough to see action.

Even though Dykes has no experience back in the defensive secondary, he has 11 players shooting for four positions. There should be some help somewhere.

THOUGH THERE are few names with a definite lock on any position, Lee's football numbers have soared over the past two years. Well over 100 athletes will be participating in the spring grind.

There has been a lot of talk that Lee will move to a platoon system next fall, not using players on both offense and defense, but Dykes downplays that notion.

"We will look at the platoon situation, but it may not be practical. Every spring it looks like we are platooning anyway," Dykes said.

Dykes also downplays the idea that Lee may be in possession of a power, saying, "We will probably be picked to finish about fifth."

Spring training will end Thursday, May 19, with the annual Maroon-White game at Memorial Stadium.

Milwaukee bucks Celtics, 116-95

Associated Press

NBA Playoffs

The 13-year veteran, who has never been on a championship team, surprised everyone, including himself, with an almost-flawless performance as the Milwaukee Bucks beat the Boston Celtics 116-95 in their playoff opener Wednesday night.

"I had an abnormal game. Even at 34 you can have an abnormal game," Lanier said after hitting 10 of 12 shots, scoring 21 points and pulling down 10 rebounds in 23 minutes as the Bucks took away Boston's homecourt advantage in the best-of-7 Eastern Conference semifinal series.

Boston led 38-31 midway through the second quarter when Lanier and the Bucks took control of the game. Lanier scored 12 points in the period and Milwaukee outscored the Celtics 20-6 in one stretch to take a 51-44 advantage.

"Two things set the tempo for the game," Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said. "One was the performance of Lanier. He has been looking just average in practice and I didn't think he would be as sharp as he was.

"The other thing was our defense. I don't want to discuss our stratgey. People will have to make their own judgment on whether our game plan was to force them to shoot from outside."

"We had about four or five minutes out there where we just plain quit," Boston Coach Bill Fitch said. "It's hard to get that to roll off my tongue. I don't think our guys ever played that bad before and they didn't know how to react to it."

"The Bucks were hungrier than we were," said Boston's Larry Bird, who dislocated a finger on his right hand while scoring only 17 points.

"Lanier seemed ready and rested, not like I expected after reading all those stories about his knees," Bird added. "He didn't have any trouble getting up and down the court."

The Bucks jammed the middle in an effort to neutralize Boston's strong front line. The stretegy worked as they outrebounded the Celtics 66-54.

Nate Archibald led the Celtics with 23 points, while Sidney Moncrief had 22 for Milwaukee.

76ers 98, Knicks 91

Philadelphia held New York to nine points in the third period, one more than the record low for the playoffs, to wipe out the 20-point deficit.

Moses Malone had 30 points and 17 rebounds for the 76ers, while Maurice Cheeks added 26 points and Julius Erving 20. Guard Andrew Toney didn't play for Philadelphia because of a bruised thigh, while forward Bobby Jones was sick with the flu.

New York led 59-41 at halftime and scored the first basket of the third quarter to go ahead by 20. But the Knicks hit just three of their last 17 field goal attempts in the period as Philadelphia outscored them 24-9.

"It's hard to believe that a team could play such two different halves," 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham said.

Spurs 126, Nuggets 109

Moore became the first NBA player to register 20 assists in a playoff game to lead San Antonio past injury-plagued Denver.

"Johnny Moore," Spurs Coach Stan Albeck said, "gave the ball to the right people at the right time."

"I just try to get my teammates the ball and it's their job to put it in. They put the shots in," said Moore, who was second in the NBA in assists behind Earvin "Magic" Johnson during the regular season. "I wasn't aware of the record until 'Ice' (Gervin) told me to get him the ball."

Denver's Alex English, the NBA's leading scorer, didn't play because of an injured ankle, while center Dan Issel went to the Nuggets' bench for good with 8:47 left in the third quarter after straining a tendon in his left leg.

"We couldn't get the breaks," Denver Coach Doug Moe said. "Even without Issel and English, I think we had a shot at winning the game tonight."

The Nuggets led 49-43 with 7:19 left in the first half, but a 17-2 spurt by the Spurs in the next 3½ minutes put San Antonio in control.

"We got a little tight in the fourth quarter, but we made one mistake — which was letting Johnny Moore drive the middle," Moe said.

MC women favored in Region V tennis

Midland College will have the role of favorite and that of the underdog Friday when the Region V junior college tennis tournament kicks off at the MC courts.

The Chaparral women are expected to win the women's title while the Chap men are considered the dark horse team.

The MC women swept the Western Junior College Athletic Conference this year, winning 48 matches without a loss. That's a new record for the Chaparrals and makes them a heavy favorite for the Region V crown.

The MC men placed third in conference play and will have to pull off a lot of upsets to finish in the top two positions.

The finish is important since the first and second place finishers in both men and women's competition qualify for the National Junior College Athletic Association's championships in Ocala, Fla., next month.

Eight teams are entered in each division, which begins Friday at 9 a.m. and concludes Saturday.

Competing in the regionals from the WJCAC will be MC, Odessa College, New Mexico Military Institue and South Plains College. Entered from the Northern Conference are teams from Grayson County Community College, McLennan Community College, Weatherford Junior College and Cooke County Community College. McLennan and Cooke are expected to post the strongest teams from the Northern Conference.

Odessa College won the men's conference title, edging NMMI by three points, 53-50. MC was a distant third.

The men's division is played in six singles flights and three doubles flights. The women compete in four singles flights and two doubles flights.

"Our women's team finished second last year in the regional tournament and fifth in the nationals," said MC coach Leon Dulin. "Their goal is to win both those titles this year, but the competition is expected to be very strong in the region.

"Overall, the Florida teams might not be quite as strong as they were last year, but the teams from Region XIV in Texas probably are even better than they were last year. Tyler and Kilgore were very strong last year and should be among the top five in the nationals."

Heading up the Chaparral women's squad is Liz Alvarado, a sophomore litter winner from Odessa who plays No. 1. Sophomore letter winners Jodi Wertenberger and Kym Somerville provide the remaining experience while Jill Wertenberger, Jodi's sister; Lynda Bryant and Therese Devine are solid players.

"Our men will have to depend upon getting lots of points from the lower position singles and doubles," Dulin said. "We just can't count on getting many points in the No. 1 or No. 2 singles or the No. 1 or No. 2 doubles."

Peter Brown, a freshman from Lubbock Monterey who played No. 1 singles and doubles in the fall, has been slow in recovering from a broken leg suffered during the Christmas holidays. He has been playing in the No. 3 doubles tandem.

Under the flight format used in the conference, regional and national tournaments, one point is awarded for each match won and players compete only in their flights. There will be six champions in men's singles and four winners in doubles play.

Golden Boy sues NCAA

OLATHE, Kan. (AP) — Former football star Paul Hornung has filed a $3 million suit in Kansas against the National Collegiate Athletic Association for defamation of character.

The suit, which contends the NCAA also caused him to lose thousands of dollars in income, is identical to a class-action suit Hornung filed last year in his home state of Kentucky.

Both suits stem from an NCAA decision last year that blocked Hornung, a former Notre Dame and Green Bay Packers player, and former Georgia Tech Coach Pepper Rodgers from being announcers for cable television football broadcasts produced by Turner Broadcasting Corp.

An attorney for Hornung, Truman K. Eldridge Jr. of Kansas City, said the Kansas suit, filed April 21 in Johnson County District Court, was a precautionary move.

The NCAA, headquartered in Mission, Kan., has argued that Kentucky courts do not have jurisdiction over the NCAA. If the suit is dismissed in Kentucky for lack of jurisdiction, Hornung wants to pursue it in Kansas.

In its contract with Turner Broadcasting, the NCAA had the right to approve the persons selected to announce 38 college football games in the 1982 and 1983 seasons.

The NCAA television committee decided that Hornung, the 1956 Heisman Trophy winner, was too closely identified with professional football. The committee said Hornung "had at least one undesirable public situation while a professional player" and his image "does not personify college football."

Eldridge said the "undesirable public situation" apparently referred to Hornung's suspension from pro football in 1963 after he admitted betting on the Packers and other teams for several seasons.

The suit contends that the NCAA statement "was taken by the public to mean that Hornung was of unfit moral character, guilty of criminal acts and unqualified to work as a broadcaster."

Hornung is asking for more than $1 million in actual damages and $2 million in punitive damages.

Four Chaps advance to regional golf

WACO—Jeff Cranford, Mike Schwartz and Emil Hale are representing Midland College at the Region V Junior College golf tournament at Lake Oak CC today and Friday.

Cranford, who helped Lubbock Monterey and Amarillo to district golf titles in high school, was all-Western Junior College Conference and eighth medalist with a 72.75 average. Schwartz played his high school golf at El Paso Coronado while Hale is a product of Midland Lee.

Record setter

LUBBOCK—Jimmy Zachry, two time all-SWC third baseman from Midland, hit seven homers in one seven-game stretch to bring his season and SWC total to 10, a new Tech record for homers during the SWC season. Zachry is one homer shy of tying the school record of 11, by Gary Ashby in 1977.

During a 12-game stretch, which included his homer spree, Zachry was 20-for-43 for a .465 average and 20 runs-batted-in.

Spring football

RANGER—Bart Ryan, quarterback from Midland Lee, is competing for the starting berth during two weeks of spring training, climaxed by an intra-squad game at 10 a.m. May 6, at Ranger Junior College. The Rangers were 7-3 last year, their worst record in six years, but 30 players from that team are ticketed to play senior college football this fall.

YMCA gymnastics

The Midland Sandstormers of the Alamo YMCA took second place in the State YMCA Gymnastics competition in San Marcos recently with 26 girls competing in Class III and IV divisions.

In the Class III division, Dianna Eccelston won all-around honors in the 12-14 age group with 32.30 points and Kirsten Smith was third in the 15-up with 30.90. In Class IV, Shannon Graham was sixth in all-around in the 9-11 and Kathy O'Connor was sixth in the 12-14 division with 32.15.

In individual events, Graham placed fourth on balance beam, fourth on vault and sixth on floor exercise. O'Conner was sixth on beam, fifth on vault and sixth on Unevenbars while Ann Wolle was third on bean and sixth on uneven bars in the same division.

Eccelston took top prize on the uneven bars, second on baem and vault and fifth on floor exercise. Susie Dunn was fifth on floor while April Sturdivant was sixth on beam, floor and vaulting.

Smith's third came with a first on beam, third on vault, fourth on uneven bars and fifth on floor.

The Sandstormers moved up from last year's fourth place state team to second under head coach Gary Seth and assistant coaches Hubert Collins, Debbie Hoisager, Jan Williams and Lori Vian.

Fencing

DENTON — Midland's Robert Walter won a silver cup and national fencing ranking here this weekend in the Red River Challenge Cup fencing tournament.

There are over 50,000 fencers in the U.S., but only two percent have earned a ranking or classification. The first step is a C ranking, which Walter obtained. There are also B and A rankings with those in Class A most likely to represent the U.S. in the Olympics.

Walter, representing the La Belle Fencing Society of Midland won his C ranking in a 24-man field of Texas and Oklahoma fencers. Texas was the overall winner, based on competition in five weapon catagories. Walter won top honors in the men's foil competition.

Walter plans to compete in the national championships in San Francisco June 3 along with his teammates Mike Husband of Odessa and Midlanders Orlando Temple and Venita Sandefer. Other La Belle team members who qualify for the national tournament are Gilberto Garcia and Bob Casavant, but neither is expected to make the tournament.

MCC Golf

Midland Country Club will hold its annual Partnership Golf Tournament Friday through Sunday with 120 teams expected to enter.

The tournament always features many of the top amatuer golfers from West Texas and beyond. Shotgun starts will be held each day for morning and afternoon slots.

Tennessee may fire recruiting violators

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)— The Senate Education Committee voted 5-2 today for legislation to require the firing of coaches who intentionally violate college or university athletic recruiting rules.

Sen. Frank Lashlee, D-Camden, proposed that any "employee, official or coach of any state college or university" be fired and barred for life from working for any public school or college in Tennessee or for state government.

In addition, any non-employee who aided in intentional recruiting violations would be barred for life from buying tickets, attending or otherwise participating in athletic events at the school involved.

Sen. Joe Crockett, D-Nashville, said to bar violators from public re-employment or prevent them from buying tickets forever was too stiff. He successfully limited the penalty to 1-10 years.

"We're got people convicted of selling drugs and dope that can work for the state of Tennessee," he said.

Sen. Avon Williams, D-Nashville, also was successful in allowing those accused to appear before an administrative hearing.

Red Sox win sliding battle

Wade Boggs and the Boston Red Sox won with a slide at the plate. The Seattle Mariners and pinch runner John Moses lost the same way.

"Don't ever stop at third base," Boggs said simply.

He had given Boston the lead when he dashed home from second on a throwing error. Then Red Sox right fielder Reid Nichols preserved the 2-1 victory by throwing out Moses at the plate on final play of the game.

Moses was pinch running for Ken Phelps, who led off the Seattle ninth by singling off Boston reliever Bob Stanley. After a fly out, Moses moved to second on a grounder.

Rick Sweet then singled to right, where Nichols uncorked his game-saving peg while catcher Jeff Newman blocked the plate.

"You have to send Moses all the way," said Seattle Manager Rene Lachemann.

Chimed in Mariners third-base coach Chuck Cottier: "It was a perfect throw. If there's no outs or one out, we don't send him."

And from Boston Manager Ralph Houk: "That was a helluva throw Nichols made and a helluva block Newman made."

Boston starter Dennis Eckersley, 2-1, scattered five hits during the first eight innings.

Angels 13, Tigers 3

Daryl Sconiers and Fred Lynn belted grand slams and Doug DeCinces and Bob Boone also homered to lead the rout. Sconiers added a double and two singles as California finished with 16 hits.

Lynn's slam, his sixth homer of the season, came in third inning as the Angels roughed up Milt Wilcox, who had pitched shutouts in his last two starts. Sconiers' slam and DeCinces' solo shot came in the seventh against reliever Bob James.

Orioles 6, A's 0

Mike Flanagan ran his record at Oakland Coliseum to 9-0 by pitching the first five innings. Flanagan, who left the game with a pulled muscle, allowed four hits and reliever Sammy Stewart pitched two-hit ball the rest of the way.

Baltimore scored five runs in the sixth inning, aided by three Oakland errors. Gary Roenicke knocked in two of the runs with a bases-loaded single and drove in a ninth-inning run by drawing a bases-loaded walk.

Yankees 6, Royals 0

Bob Shirley scattered eight hits for his first American League victory while Roy Smalley cracked a three-run homer and Steve Kemp added a two-run single.

Shirley, signed by the Yankees during the off-season as a free agent after six years in the National League, had pitched just 32-3 innings this season before the start.

It was only the second shutout in 125 major-league starts for Shirley, now 1-1 this season.

Twins 5, Indians 3

John Castino hit a two-run homer and Randy Bush singled in two runs as the Twins scored four times in the eighth inning against Cleveland starter Bert Blyleven and relievers Ed Glynn and Dan Spillner.

Kent Hrbek's third homer of the season accounted for Minnesota's other run.

Blue Jays 3, Rangers 2

Rance Mulliniks' double — his third hit of the game — in the top of the ninth inning snapped a 2-2 tie.

Ernie Whitt led off the ninth with a single off Texas starter Danny Darwin. Garth Iorg came in as a pinch runner and moved to second on a sacrifice. Reliever Dave Tobik walked Cliff Johnson before yielding Mulliniks' game-winning hit.

Larry Parrish homered for Texas.

Brewers 6, White Sox 2

Rookie Tom Tellmann, taking over for injured starter Jerry Augustine, twirled 51-3 innings for four-hit relief to get the victory. Augustine was forced to leave in the second when he was hit in the left forearm by a Carlton Fisk line drive. X-rays on Augustine's arm were negative.

Another rookie reliever, Bob Gibson, bailed Tellmann out of bases-loaded threat in the seventh inning for his first save.

Ben Oglivie homered and singled to drive in two Milwaukee runs as Floyd Bannister, 1-3, absorbed the loss.

Keys' silvery bonefish offers real challenge

By JIM PETERSON

NEW YORK (AP) — You won't see it or hear it, but chances are it can see and hear you, says fishing expert Flip Pallot, who considers the bonefish one of the five most difficult fish to catch.

"It's so silvery and highly reflective that when it's swimming over sand, its body just reflects the sand to your eye," said Pallot, who has pursued the bonefish in the Florida Keys since he was a boy.

"Experienced bonefishermen look for the fish's shadow on the ocean floor or it's tail, when it breaks the surface when eating off the bottom," he explained.

THE BONEFISH, shaped like a torpedo, usually grows no bigger than 5 or 6 pounds. Its habitat is the shallow waters of the Caribbean. For bait, Pallot suggests any kind of crustacean, especially shrimp.

After boating a bonefish, Pallot will let it go so it can challenge other fishermen. It's also tough to eat.

"Bonefish are eaten at great risk to your throat," Pallot said. "The skeletal structure is composed of millions of tiny bones, each one with a little hook at the end. That's why it's called the bonefish."

PALLOT, 40, is a former Miami banker who left his career a few years ago to open a sporting goods store in southwest Miami.

An all-around hunter and angler, he takes sporting expeditions to the eastern shore of Maryland to hunt geese, to Texas for whitetail deer and to Alaska to fish salmon. He teaches a special casting style, based on techniques developed by noted anglers Lefty Kreh and Charles Ritz, which he said "speeds casting while preserving energy."

When he's not angling for bass and catfish in the freshwater Everglades, Pallot fishes the flats in a small boat that must be poled "very slowly and and quietly" since bonefish are "very sensitive to the slightest sound." And "they're very close to the surface so they can see things above the surface much more readily," he said.

HE SAID other hard-to-catch fish on the flats include the permit, which can grow to 30 pounds, and the tarpon, that "horribly aerobatic and tremendously strong" Atlantic gamefish which can get up to 6 feet long and weigh 200 pounds.

Taking a bonefish, permit and tarpon in a day constitutes the triple crown of the Florida flats, something few anglers accomplish.

TPWD may put striped bass in Moss Creek

By RODNEY RIEHLE

The Parks and Wildlife Dept. is considering stocking striped bass at the 250-acre Moss Creek Lake near Big Spring.

"The lake has poor populations of largemouth bass and catfish, but far too many shad," says biologist Billy Follis. Flucuations in the lake water level is one of the reasons game fish populations are down.

Follis believes the stripers should be able to utilitze the abundant forage species such as shad and contribute to the sport fishery. Brush or tire fish attractor reefs also are needed at Moss Creek, according to Follis. These are usually placed by fishing club, with the cooperation of the TPWD and the lake controlling authority.

Oak Creek, near Sweetwater, is another lake with promise for good fishing. Follis says, however, that the 2,375 acre lake's large mouth bass habitate may deteriorate with the anticipated lake lowering within the next year. "We have recommended stocking of smallmouth bass, which occupy a different type of habitate from largemouths"...

TEXAS saltwater fishermen who catch sharks may be interested to know that the fins of most species have market value. A Hawaii-based firm has notified the TPWD that they will purchase dried shark fins, primarily for sale in foreign countries.

The fins are used in preparing two Chinese delicacies, shark fin soup and stewed shark fin.

Officials of Hawaii Shark Processors said they will purchase the two pectoral fins, dorsal fin and lower tail fin from the tiger, whitetip, hammerhead, brown, soupfin, blacktip, great white and sand sharks. Only the caudal fin is marketbable from mako and blue sharks. Oh, darn!...

EXCELLENT year-round fishing opportunities abound in certain areas of Redfish Bay near Rockport, says TPWD biologist Lee M.Green. Best area for anglers is the north side of state highway 361. "This area can be fished in warm or cold weather, even when the wind is blowing enough to make fishing difficult in other areas."

Green claims the shallow flats are best in warmer months...Intracoastal Waterway, Aransas Channel and Corpus Christi Bayou. His favorite deep area is Hog Island Hole, off the north end of Hog Island. "It is bounded by shallow grass flats to the east and Hog Island to the south and is accessible from Corpus Christi Bayou through an unmarked channel off the northeast tip of Hog Island. It is best for speckled trout, but sheepshead, drum, redfish and flounder also make appearances.

But at these prices, it could almost be considered an economy car.
Especially when you consider that Hertz never charges you a penny for mileage at all corporate locations in Texas.
This low weekend rate is available from Thursday noon to Sunday noon.
But reserve your Lincoln as early as possible. Like many luxuries, its availability is limited.
For information and complete details, call your travel agent. Or call Hertz at 1-800-654-3131.
You'll find that renting from Hertz is as much a pleasure as driving a Lincoln.
Hertz
#1 For Everyone.™
Hertz rents Lincolns and other fine cars.
Minimum day weekend rental requirements apply. Weekend rate is non-discountable. For this rate to apply, cars must be returned to renting city. Gas, C.D.W., P.A.I. and state and local taxes not included. Rate subject to change without notice.

Treasury agreed to revise stripper well proposal

By SARAH McCLENDON
WASHINGTON BUREAU

WASHINGTON — The Treasury Department agreed to revise its published plans to shut out stripper wells from exemptions to the Windfall Profits tax just prior to the testimony given by oil and gas industry representatives here Tuesday at the Internal Revenue Service, according to Darlene Stevens, Abilene accountant.

"A news release issued by Sen. Bob Dole, R—Kan., Monday night, announcing these changes, caused me to revise my statement and to take out objections to certain regulations," she explained.

Dole's office said a press release was issued last Thursday, April 21, on the regulations. In it, Dole quoted the Treasury Department repeatedly.

A check at Treasury shows that they made no public announcement on April 21 or at any time recently. Officials working on this problem had not seen Dole's statement. The representatives of many Texas groups and about 30 other national and regional organizations who were testifying at Tuesday's hearing had no direct access to these agreements.

THE INDEPENDENT Petroleum Association's headquarters in Washington, which was assembling the oil and gas industry's efforts, knew nothing before today of Dole's press statement.

Dole's statement "applauded the Treasury Department's responsiveness in addressing the concerns raised by the proposed regulations relating to the taxation of six 'stripper wells' under the crude oil 'windfall profits' tax."

By quoting the Treasury Department throughout and concluding with a reference to the Internal Revenue Service for future inquiries, Dole as the chairman of the Senate Finance committee, made the statement appear to be official.

Here are the changes in tax proposals which he listed:

"I am pleased to report that the Treasury Department has considered the objections that have been raised and has assured me that the proposed regulations were not intended to change the general thrust of the Department of Energy rules. In particular, the Treasury Department has advised me that the final regulations will address the following concerns:

What about stripper wells?

— THE RULE requiring producers to elect newly-discovered property treatment for new reservoirs will impact on workovers of wells which pass through more than one reservoir. The Treasury has stated that it does not intend to have this rule apply to workovers of existing wells.

— THE PROPOSED rule was retroactive but only with respect to production from properties subject to the option after 1980. The Treasury has stated that the new rules (as modified above) will only apply prospectively with respect to new reservoirs.

— THE GAS/OIL ratio test for determining whether a well was an oil well (which enters into the calculation of stripper well property) and a gas well (which does not) was not consistent with industry practice. Treasury has stated that it will accept the gas/oil ratio test used by the states of Texas and Oklahoma (100,000 cubic feet of gas per barrel of oil).

— THE DEFINITION of "working interest" used in the proposed regulations required that to qualify as exempt independent producer stipper oil, the working interest must have been in existence on January 1, 1980. Treasury has stated that it will drop that requirement. This is good news for independents — I know that this was the number one concern with Kansas stripper well operators and I am pleased we could respond to their needs."

Later, the Treasury Department called back to say a letter with the changes was sent on April 11 to Texas senators Lloyd Bentsen and John Tower, and to other senators and House members from southwestern states. Dole was also sent a copy of the letter.

Bentsen's staff said they had not received the letter. They were told by the Treasury in March that preliminary plans were being discussed, but no specific agreements were mentioned.

Dole was severely criticized by stripper oil men in his state in 1981 when he failed to get the White House to include relief for strippers in the tax bill. Later, the "Boll Weevils," the conservative Democrats led by Rep. Charles Stenholm, D., Stamford, obtained such an agreement from the White House. Bentsen, too, received a compromise from the President on other oil provisions. This left Dole with "egg on his face," said a spokesman for Bentsen.

Darlene Stevens, saying she represented four associations in Texas with combined membership totaling 3,981, presented the problems the shut out would create for small independent producers.

SHE APPEARED FOR the West Central Oil and Gas Association, the North Texas Oil and Gas Association, the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and the Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association. She is a Certified Public Accountant employed by Chalmers Operating Company, Inc., in Abilene.

These associations backed the legal attack by Mitchell Energy of Houston and additionally the testimony of the Independent Petroleum Association of America and the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners association.

She cited the fact that Congress had heretofore provided exemptions and incentives, for stripper well operations, recognizing their need. In the Crude Oil Windfall Profits Tax of 1980, Congress recognized this tax would hurt stripper wells, she said. Similarly stripper wells were taxed at a loweer rate than Old Oil by Congress. The Economic Recovery Act of 1981, exempted stripper oil from independent producers completely in the Windfall Profits tax.

"If adopted, the proposed new regulations put forward by Treasury last January would negate thes incentives and also increase the administrative costs making this especially burdensome on the small, independent producers.

"This is in direct conflict with President Reagan's and Vice President Bush's expressed wishes to decrease the regulatory paperwork wherever possible."

THE NEW proposed regulations "will increase record keeping as separate accounting will be required for all properties with both stripper reservoirs and new reservoirs," she said. "This will mean increased costs in the field as many of these reservoirs are comingled in the same tank battery. In the future, these properties will either have to have separate gathering facilities or expensive metering devices. This will be another added cost on the back of the stripper well.

"The new regulations will require property elections to be made for any new reservoirs. Much new information will be required to segregate property by reservoir. Some of the operators may be widely dispersed and some may live under different state regulatory agencies.

"Had these proposed regulations been in effect during the past decade, the decision to recomplete or drill in a new reservoir may have been substantially different. The decision to recomplete or drill deeper was based on the projected long-term benefits. This also affects the royalty owner rule.

"The proposed regulations will assuredly mean additional costs which will not only reduce funds available for drilling but in many instances will force the producer to abandon many of these stripper wells. The stripper spends $80,000 to drill an average stripper well to 3,500 feet deep. Under these doubtful circumstances, the investor could invest his money elsewhere with a guaranteed return."

Afterwards, Stevens said the changes in regulations which Dole speaks of "will give us much that we want but not all."

More development wells are being drilled in 1983 than in the same period last year. But the number of wildcats is down. Total wells are 17 more than drilled in 1982 at this time. Wildcats are dry holes in 70 percent of drilling. Note: API warns that this report does not follow national rig counts because of information time-lag.

Shopping center permitted by city

Initial building permits were issued last week for the shell of a new shopping center, North Park, to be located on the northeast corner of Loop 250 and Midkiff Road.

Jordan & Nobles, El Paso, is the contractor for 35,000-square-foot and 60,000-square-foot building shells to be finished later. Total valuation is $2,320,000 for the center, a 40-acre project of Billingsley Enterprises, Midland, and Hawkeye Inc., Houston.

Thirty other permits were issued by the city of Midland last week for construction or alteration projects here. Total for the week was $2,877,550 in valuation, and the tally for the month to date is $15,332,940.

This brings total valuations of new construction in 1983 to $58,258,735 as of April 22.

Permits for commercial alterations went to: Charles Boler, add two 6,000-gallon storage tanks at 1101 Andrews Highway, $7,000; West Texas Masonry, add to a lapidary shop and clubhouse at 801 N Fort Worth, $25,000; Mike Madrid, add porch to property owned by St. Ann's Catholic Church at 1008 W. New Jersey, $4,000; HBF Construction, alter lease space at No. 10 Desta Drive, $40,000, and alter first floor of Marathon Oil Building, 125 W. Missouri, $50,000.

The city's Department of Inspections and Permits issued permits for four new single family residences ranging in price from $60,000 to $89,000, and granted 16 permits for residential alterations.

Protection from foreign industry declining

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The National Planning Association contends that contrary to claims that U.S. industry is highly protected, "the protection received is small and declining."

The study, sponsored by the NPA's Committee on Changing International Realities, a coalition of leaders of business, labor, and agriculture, contends that protection from nontariff barriers designed to limit or discourage imports "is substantially less" than from tariffs; that the U.S. offers less import protection or export incentives than its industrialized competitors, and that by 1985 the protection received by most manufacturing industries should be "significantly reduced" due to the implementation of recent international agreements and federal budget cuts.

The study comes at a time of increased tension between the U.S. and its trading partners over protectionism.

SPACE SHUTTLE

A National Research Council panel has testifed before Congress that the chances the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) can meet a goal of 30 space shuttle launches annually by 1990 are "impossible or highly improbable" with the four-orbiter fleet currently funded.

The panel estimated a fleet of four orbiters would support 17 to 25 launchs annually by about 1990 and five orbiters woild allow 22 to 31 launches.

NASA's current plans call for 24 space shuttle launches per year in 1988, 30 in 1990, and 40 in 1992. The agency has two orbiters in operation now, Columbia and Challenger. A third, Discovery, is expected to be available later this year, while a fourth, Atlantis, is planned for 1984. A fifth, if funded in fiscal 1984, would be delivered no earlier than 1987.

DON'T ENCOURAGE FOREIGN LENDING

A study released by CATO Institute says the U.S. government should stop encouraging wide foreign lending by American banks. The public policy research institute says that bankers expect the government to bail out bad international loans and that expectation has led them to ignore the risks of foreign lending.

It claims that the loan exposure of the top nine U.S. banks in Mexico, Brazil and Argentina exceeds their combined equity capital and that just one country's default could cause these banks to collapse. The study views the administration-backed request for an $8 billion increase in U.S. funding for the International Monetary Fund as another signal to the banks that the government will protect them from bad loans. It warns that industrialized nations cannot continue to expand exports by financing Third World borrowing.

REHAB MARKET GROWS

The rehabilitation construction market reached $99 billion last year, according to the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation, with commercial rehabilitation projects spending $51.6 billion in 1982, an 84 percent margin over new commercial construction. The tax incentives, including a 25 percent inestment tax credit for certified rehabilitation of a historic commercial building, are among the reasons for the rehabilitation boom.

COAL GUIDELINES

New Interstate Commerce Commission guidelines for rail transportation rates for coal would allow railroads to charge any rates they desire, provided no coal rate exceeds a level equal to the cost of the shipper which builds and operates its own rail lines. Rate increases will be presumed reasonable if they do not increase more than 15 percent per year, after inflation.

SEEK FEE ENACTMENT

The Transportation Department has proposed that Congress enact legislation paving the way for the Coast Guard to charge user fees for services provided commercial vessels, such as the inspection, measurement, documentation, and recording of title of a U.S. vessel, the licensing of an operator or a merchant oficer and the certification of a merchant seaman.

The Coast Guard would also charge for issuing of permits for private aids to navigation, issuing regatta permits, transferring a cargo of hazardous material and domestic icebreaking. No user fees would be imposed for recreational boat owners, for commercial fishermen or for search and rescue missions. A recent request for imposition of user fees for recreational boat owners went down to defeat at the hands of Congress.

Adobe hits in South Texas

Adobe Oil and Gas Corp. reports completion of a Lower Frio formation wildcat discovery in its South Texas Dawdy No. 1 well in Matagorda County, Texas.

The well flow-tested 2,100,000 cubic feet gas and 35 barrels condensate per day on 10/64ths inch choke opening with 3,500 psi tubing pressure through perforations from 12,508-12,513 feet.

Logs also indicate several additional Frio gas/condensate zones above 12,508 feet and a possible Frio oil zone between 11,298 and 11,312 feet. None of these additional zones have been opened to production. Nearest Frio production is two miles to the southwest.

There are some 1,444 net acres in this prospect. Adobe has 32 percent working interest in the well; Norse Petroleum (U.S.) Inc. (Houston) has 16.67 percent; Teal Petroleum (Houston) has 16.67 percent; LAE Energy, Inc. (Houston) has 12.5 percent; Alps Oil Company (Odessa, Texas) has 16.66 percent and individuals have 5.50 percent.

Nukes: Will waste, less demand kill them?

Energy for the U.S.

A Reporter-Telegram series

By VIC OSTROWIDSKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court decision upholding the right of states to ban new nuclear plants until the federal government finds a way to dispose of used atomic fuel may have dealt a mortal blow to an already reeling industry.

"Nuclear power is dead in the water in terms of new orders for the near future," says Eric Van Loon, executive director of the Union of Concerned Scientists (UCS), an industry critic.

"The industry is so far gone that nothing can revive it at this point," adds Richard Udell, an official with Ralph Nader's anti-nuclear Critical Mass energy project.

Industry officials, however, contend that although nuclear power may not be the picture of health, the reports of its demise are greatly exaggerated.

INDUSTRY SPOKESMEN point out that by the end of the year, nuclear energy will move into second place behind coal as a generator of electricity in this country. Last year nuclear power produced 13 percent of the nation's electricity and by the end of the century, nukes may produce about 25 percent.

But even the Reagan administration, a staunch nuclear power supporter — trying to revive an industry that has seen 48 plants canceled and no new plants ordered since 1978 — does not seem confident of the industry's future.

A White House spokesman said the administration was totally "shocked and disheartened" by the ruling. "We're trying to figure out whether this is the end of the road for nuclear power," admitted a high-ranking official. "Plants in the pipeline could be held up until a way is found to dispose of nuclear waste."

The industry's spokesmen ruefully remember their lawyers' earlier warning to the court that a negative decision could well "sound the death knell" for future plant construction.

THE BEST THE Atomic Industrial Forum — industry spokesmen — could do was to insist the decision would have no effect on the 72 plants already operating or the 60 plants that are under construction.

The Forum said recently that the utility industry is attempting to "match the generous free media space and time accorded the critics of nuclear power" by launching a $25 million advertising campaign.

The mid-April Supreme Court decision was bad news for an industry already beset by serious economic problems — soaring cost overruns, lagging orders for reactors, lack of enthusiasm on the part of investors, unfinished plants, environmenal suits, shoddy worksmanship, public mistrust — accompanied by a slowdown in electric power demand.

That is, 2.1 percent lower in the first nine months of 1982 than the same period in 1981, a drop which has left the industry with the largest unused reserve capacity since 1938.

EXAMPLES OF problems abound:

The travails of the auto industry are blamed for the drop in the use of electricity in Michigan. Critics now question the need for two reactors being built in Midland, Michigan by Consumers Power and Detroit Edison's Fermi plant nearing completion near the Motor City.

In the west, not one of California's six nuclear-power reactors is functioning, victims of safety problems and faulty designs.

Long Island's Shoreham nuclear-power facility is six years behind schedule, 10 times as costly as planned. Its rates when finally functioning will probably be the highest in the nation. It now faces a new, unforeseen obstacle to starting up.

Suffolk County, L.I., where Shoreham is, blocked implementation of an emergency evacuation plan for the reactor — which should be ready to load fuel by the end of June.

PROBABLY THE LAST plant to be completed in New York state in this century is likely to be Nine Mile Point No.2 on the shore of Lake Ontario. Its total cost is expected to hit at least $4.2 billion, or 11 times its original estimate. That means power from the plant is likely to cost nearly twice as much as power from other sources cost now.

Public Service Co. of Oklahoma cancelled its proposed Black Fox Nuclear Station near Tulsa after unsuccessfuly trying to get a construction permit for years.

The industry's problems are so apparent that the UCS no longer wage protest against manufacturers of nuclear power plants and utilities — it has turned its attention to fighting nuclear arms growth.

There are 72 plants operating in the U.S., generating about one-eighth of America's electricity. The plants have generated nearly 270 billion kilowatt hours in 1981 alone — about as much as all the electricity the U.S. was using at the close of World War II. Some 60 additional nuclear plants are in various stages of contruction — two-thirds of them 50 percent or more completed.

BY 1990, THE total investment by the industry in nuclear power will hit $150 billion, even without orders for new plants. The industry employes more than 300,000 people, a large proportion of them technically trained or highly skilled.

The Supreme Court decision upheld a moratorium imposed by California and 10 other states — including New York, Maryland, Oregon and Massachusetts — on new nuclear plants. It is also likely to encourage another 20 states which had supported California in the Supreme Court suit to pass similar measures.

The Pacific Gas and Electric Co., joined by the federal government, argued before the court in January that the Atomic Energy Act gives the federal government sole authority to design, build and operate nuclear plans and thus preempted state laws.

California maintained that states have the right to refuse nuclear plants as too costly and unsafe until the federal government has solved the problem of waste management and disposal.

CONGRESS PASSED a law last winter that sets rules and timetables for selection of waste disposal sites and methods, but those solutions still lie a long way down the road.

Residents of Washington and Nevada, where hearings were held last month, came out in force to oppose selection of their states for new sites. Additional hearings are planned in a few weeks — in Texas, Louisiana, Utah and Mississippi.

Even if the process for selecting and constructing the nuclear waste depository is adopted soon, it will not be ready to accept spent fuel from atomic power plants until the late 1990s. Spent fuel remains radioactive for thousands of years. The problem of how to dispose of it has taken on an increasing urgency, because atomic plants already have begun running out of storage space.

The industry was damaged by the accident in 1979 at the Three Mile Island nuclear facility near Harrisburg, Pa. where small amounts of radioactive gas and particles were released into the atmosphere.

THE ACCIDENT brought the industry — already barely alive — to a near standstill. Cancellations came in a flood tide. Work on 18 reactors was halted, bringing total cancellations since 1972 to 102.

"The accident showed that a $2 billion investment could disintegrate in 30 seconds," Van Loon said.

The irony is that at one time energy officials were touting nuclear power as the wave of the American future, predicting that as many as 1,000 plants would be generating electricity by the turn of the century. At one time, President Carter had hoped nuclear power would supply the energy equivalent of four million barrels of oil a day.

It now supplies the equivalent of about one million barrels, with total U.S. consumption at about 15 million barrels.

With the industry's future on the line, the administration has proposed to streamline the licensing process by curtailing public participation and instituting regulatory shortcuts. It contends that the reforms it presented to Congress last month can slash five years from the 12 to 14 now required to build a nuclear power plant.

The House of Carpets' first location in Midland was the old Brunson ranch home, pictured above. Built in 1908 by the ranching Brunson family, it was located on the cattle trail running north out of Midland. The House of Carpets became Midland's first carpet store in May, 1951 and today is Midland's oldest and most respected name in carpets.

Today, the House of Carpets is located in the Village Shopping Center on West Wall Street. Since 1951, more than 150 other carpet stores have come and gone, but House of Carpets remains in business under the same ownership, and is constantly expanding its services to Midland and the Permian Basin.

House of Carpets Midland's first, best

Once upon a time, there were no carpet stores in Midland--not one. That was before May 8, 1951, when House of Carpets held its grand opening at 1502 N. Lamesa Rd. Since that time, Midland has had many carpet stores. As a matter of fact, more than 150 other carpet stores have had grand openings and subsequent closings during that 32 years.

As most of you know, Midland has had its booms and busts over the years. During the booms, several carpet operators have moved in to take advantage of Midland's prosperity, but have closed and moved on when the slack periods arrived. But House of Carpets, Midland's first carpet store, has survived all the ups and downs to become not only Midland's oldest carpet store, but the most dependable and respected.

Although Midland is experiencing another of these economic crunches right now, the people at House of Carpets predict that Midland will bounce back, bigger and better than ever, and soon.

In the meantime, House of Carpets is in business as always, offering superior service and competitive values with quality products. Incidentally, the House of Carpets is now having their Annual Spring Carpet Sale, with extra bonuses in super-low prices. So, if you want to beautify your home or office with fine new carpet, come to House of Carpets in the Village Shopping Center, W. Wall and Andrews Hwy., and save money on some of America's most popular and luxurious carpets.

All sale carpets are backed by House of Carpets' ten-year written limited warranty. If you haven't visited House of Carpets before, here's a little extra incentive to come in this week: just cut out this article and bring it in and you will receive a free gift bottle of 'Unbelievable!' carpet spot remover. This offer is good through Saturday, April 30. Come on in—we think you'll enjoy meeting our nice sales and decorator personnel. House of Carpets is open weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday.

Permian Civic Ballet to perform 'Cinderella' at Lee High School

ENTERTAINMENT

Lisa Myers, Michael Job and Kirt Hathaway will be dancing principal roles tonight in Permian Civic Ballet's production of "Cinderella." The performance, set for 8 p.m., will be held at Lee High School Auditorium.

Miss Myers has trained with Maggie Black, David Howard, Nina Popova, Ann Cheselka, Sallie Whallen and Hector Zaraspe. In 1972 she was awarded a Joffrey Ballet School scholarship and worked with Meredith Bayliss.

She has danced with the Houston Allegro Ballet, Houston Ballet, Joffrey II, Poughkeepsie Ballet Theatre and Ballet de Grande, Theatre de Geneve. She recently choreographed "Serene Solos" for the Chamberlain School of Ballet.

Miss Myers taught in Berkley, Calif., and Dallas before becoming assistant rehearsal director for Permian Civic Ballet, where she has conducted company workshops in the absence of the company's artistic director, Anne Burton.

This year, Miss Myers will be artistic director for Permian Civic Ballet's production of "The Nutcracker," set for Dec. 2 and 3.

Hathaway began training with Margo Marshall of the Greater Houston Ballet. He has been a member of Dallas Ballet. In addition, he has danced with Chicago Lyric Ballet and Pacific Northwest Ballet, Seattle, Wash. He has guested with, among others, Denver Civic Ballet, Ballet Arkansas in Little Rock, Chicago Ballet and San Antonio Ballet.

Job, a principal dancer with the Atlanta Ballet, began his dance training in 1972 with Joan Kunsch and Leslie Swayzee of Dance Arts. Inc. For six consecutive summers he studied with Bill Martin-Viscount and the faculty of Southwest Ballet Center.

In 1974, at the age of 17, he joined Pittsburgh Ballet Theater and the following two seasons danced with choreographer James Clouser and his Houston-based company Space-Dance-Theater for two years. He has danced with the Dutch National Ballet in Amsterdam, Joffrey II and the Dallas Ballet.

Permian Civic Ballet Association contains eight junior, 24 intermediate, 24 senior and six adult students. Tickets for tonight's performance may be purchased at the door.

Former Midlander Ron Riley performs Friday and Saturday at El Centro Restaurant and Bar downtown. Riley graduated from Lee High School in the mid-1960s. He plays the guitar and harmonica, performing a wide variety of music but specializing in country jazz he describes as "high-energy country swing."

Woman to speak on complex issues

Colette Dowling, author of the best seller "The Cinderella Complex," is this year's guest speaker for the Uptown Chapter of Business and Professional Women's annual fund-raising event. Ms. Dowling will speak on today's rapidly changing roles for women and how to adjust to these changes.

The two-hour event is set to begin at 7 p.m. Tuesday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. Tickets, priced at $15, may be purchased at the door or by calling Texas American Bank, 683-5281, ext. 321.

A compelling writer of women's issues for many years, Ms. Dowling was a guest editor for Mademoiselle magazine in 1958. She has had numerous articles published in such national publications as Harpers, The New York Times Magazine and Redbook.

In her work Ms. Dowling uses herself as a "bellweather" by "examining closely the ambiguities and conflicts in my own life and seeing how these relate to the lives of women in general."

At one point in her life Ms. Dowling went through an intense self-examination. After much research and interviewing, she wrote "The Cinderella Complex," which examines hers and others' experiences and the conclusions she reached.

Ms. Dowling credits the book's success to the fact that she speaks directly to the readers. By using her own experiences as a guideline — raising three children, surviving divorce and death — she is able to empathize with her readers.

The Uptown Chapter of Business and Professional Women's Club is an organization open to all women in business and the professions. The club strives to elevate the standards for working women, to create a spirit of cooperation among business and professional women and to extend opportunities to business and professional women through education.

Funds raised from this event will be used to support the club's programs which include educational scholarships, a yearly Leadership Midland scholarship and support of Midland's Christmas in April.

Newton plays to several empty seats

'Saturday night crowd' enthusiastic

A Review

Wayne Newton, "the most successful performer in Las Vegas history," who "never plays to an empty seat" did so Sunday night.

Decked out in a Nudie three-piece gray suit, complete with white bow tie, his flying eagle belt buckle and two diamond rings sparkling in the spotlights, Newton sang, played (guitar, banjo, and fiddle) and joked with the audience nonstop for two hours, including his encore.

The 3,733 fans at Chaparral Center, which seats 6,250—plus (6,303 for Barbara Mandrell), certainly got their money's worth. After warming up the audience for 30 minutes, comedian Freddie Roman turned the show over to Newton's (about 25 member) orchestra — harp, electric pianos, trombones, trumpets, drums, bongo drums, guitars, banjo — which was complemented by three quite talented female singers.

Following the usual Las Vegas fanfare and introduction, Newton arrived on stage and immediately opened with "C.C. Rider."

In response to the enthusiatic applause, Newton said, "You keep that up and we're going to be here at least 20 minutes." Then he turned to his orchestra and said, "Keep it hot. This is a Saturday night crowd."

Which was exactly what they did. It got so hot at times one trumpet player felt compelled to strip — almost.

The show contained some very suggestive material, especially after Newton received an affirmative answer to his question: "Is this the down and dirty group?" But he rode the line, stopping short of obscenity and amusing his audiences in the process.

Newton, like another boy soprano who performed here recently — John Gary — made numerous in jest references to his voice and himself.

The men in the audience were won over when Newton described what he imagined they might be thinking: "If there's anything I hate it's a damn Indian dressed up like Thor. I didn't even want to come here tonight. She even lied to me — told me it was Olivia Newton-John."

He recalled his good news and bad news when he was 15. The good news — his song "Danke Schon," was No. 1 around the world. The bad news — he had been confused as a girl.

Another line Newton rode was being overly dramatic. Just as it became too much, he'd pull up short. For example: He sang blues — "Georgia on My Mind;" country — "Good Hearted Woman;" pop — "Bad, Bad Leroy Brown." Broadway — "The Impossible Dream;" but it was his performance of "The American Trilogy" that brought the applauding crowd to its feet.

His orchestration and light show played on the full-sized screen hanging behind the stage was effectively done. The audience's response to the solo performances of several of his troupe was quite positive, especially pianist Glenn Smith and singer Avis Harrell.

No doubt Sunday's performance may well have picked up some new fans for "the Midnight Idol's" Las Vegas show.

Early American expert to lecture

Wendell D. Garrett, editor of "The Magazine ANTIQUES" and one of the nation's foremost authorities on the Early American decorative arts, will be guest lecturer at 10 a.m. Friday at Chaparral Center.

Garrett's lecture on "The American Experience: Fine Arts, Decorative Arts and Architecture, 1700-1800," opens the third annual Act IX Antiques Show this weekend in Chaparral Center. Proceeds go to Midland Community Theatre.

Garrett's lecture marks the culmination of Act IX's three-part lecture series. The series is sponsored by a grant from Mr. and Mrs. Earle M. Craig, Jr. of Midland. Admission is $3. Student tickets, priced at $2, are available at the door.

Garrett, a native of California, received his bachelor of arts in American history in 1954 at the University of California, Los Angeles. From 1955 to 1957, he was a fellow at The Henry Francis du Pont Winterthur Museum in Wilmington, Del. He studied American history at the graduate level at Harvard University from 1957 to 1960.

His editorial career began in 1959, when he became a member of the staff of the "Adams Papers" at the Massachusetts Historical Society. He was assistant editor of the "Diary and Autobiography of John Adams" (Vol. I to IX) and associate editor of "Adams Family Correspondence" (Vol. I and II, 1963). In 1965, Garrett discovered the "Earliest Diary of John Adams" at the Vermont Historical Society and edited the diary for publication by the Harvard University Press.

In 1966, he joined the staff of "The Magazine ANTIQUES" and became its editor in 1972.

In addition, Garrett has co-authored "The Arts in America: the Nineteenth Century" (1969) and "The Arts in Early American History" (1965). In 1968 he also edited the Rev. E.B. Hillard's "The Last Men of the Revolution" which was originally published in 1864.

Economist: Not smart to cut aid

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The former president of Honduras' Central Bank said Wednesday "it wouldn't be too smart" for the United States to reduce or discontinue military aid to the El Salvadoran government.

Praxides Martinez, a Harvard-educated economist and private consultant, said with the widespread involvement of foreign powers in El Salvador and elsewhere in Central America, "it wouldn't be too smart to reduce aid now, knowing that things might worsen."

When asked whether he subscribes to the "domino theory" in Central America, a fear by the Reagan administration that Marxist revolution could sweep the entire region, Martinez said: "It might be a danger every time a country falls into the hands of the communist threat.

"The involvement of foreign powers is a reality in Central America," said Martinez, speaking at a hastily-arranged afternoon news conference at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. "It seems to me that once a program (U.S. aid) has been started out, it's quite difficult to stop it."

The Reagan adminstration plans to send as much as $110 million on military aid to El Salvador this year. A House committee recently lopped Reagan's first request for $60 million in half, heralding the president's appeal to a joint session of Congress Wednesday night for increased aid to the country.

Martinez, 57, said U.S. aid is looked upon favorably by the people of El Salvador, where leftist guerillas and a U.S.-backed conservative government are locked in a bitter struggle for control of the tiny country.

"I would say that the El Salvador people have lived in democracy and they want to keep in the democratic system," Martinez said.

President Reagan's plan to send a peace envoy to Central America has merit, according to Martinez. But he added that a negotiated peace in El Salvador is doubtful because the Marxist guerillas there "don't want peace in the sense that the democratic people want peace."

Despite the government's willingness to negotiate, Martinez said, the leftist guerillas seem bent on achieving peace through a military victory.

Martinez said his country, despite sporadic shooting on the Nicaragua-Honduras border, is probably the most stable in the region and is accepting refugees from El Salvador and Nicaragua.

He said all of Central America's countries are "very depressed," suffering from high unemployment, low economic growth and governments too destitute to spend money on social programs.

The region's instability has driven out foreign investors, and low prices for coffee, bananas, timber and other commodities have drained the region's economy, according to Martinez.

"There are several problems that have to be overcome to bring (the region) back to normality," he said.

When asked whether economic aid might be more essential to El Salvador's survival than military assistance, Martinez quoted an ancient Latin maxim: "First we live, later we eat."

Martinez will take part in a seminar on the economics and politics of Central America May 4-5 at UTPB.

UTPB bills unusual, witness says

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

If bills introduced in the Texas Senate and House are approved, the Legislature and the Texas College and University System Coordinating Board may be swapping positions.

Bills introduced by Rep. Jay Gibson, D-Odessa, and Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, calling for four-year status for The University of Texas of the Permian Basin are unusual, according to an expert witness who testified before the House Higher Education Committee.

Dr. Kenneth Ashworth, commissioner of higher education with the coordinating board, was called to testify Monday.

"This is an unusual bill in that it delegates authority of the Legislature to the coordinating board to create a four-year institution," Ashworth told The Midland Reporter-Telegram Wednesday.

In the past, he said, the Legislature has had the only authority to delegate a four-year school. The coordinating board, which reviews certain decisions made by UT System Regents and local schools, was established to provide input on the Legislature's decision.

"Normally, the Legislature would make this decision," he said. "They would ask the coordinating board what we think. This time, instead of asking us what we think, (the Legislature is giving its opinion by considering the bills and leaving the final decision to the coordinating board and regents).

"They are saying, 'Just let the coordinating board do it,'" he said.

The bills, SB 1014 and HB 598, allow the University of Texas System Regents, with the approval of the coordinating board, power to establish UTPB as a four-year school.

Now an upper-level university, UTPB is seeking the admission of freshman and sophomore students as well as undergraduate course work, with an emphasis on energy-related sciences and engineering degrees. Several community college representatives have outspokenly objected to the bill, citing the possibility of decreased enrollments and duplicated courses in area community colleges if the measure is passed.

According to Ashworth, there are nine other upper level institutions around the state without lower division coursework.

Ashworth said some opponents of the bills argue granting UTPB four-year status will encourage other senior level institutions to seek expansion — a costly situation.

"This is certainly not a propitious time," Ashworth said, adding he feels the state budget is not adequate to handle the costs. He also said he doesn't think there is enough student enrollment to fill the upper-level colleges if they do expand.

"It surely does look at this time (the bills) will pass in both houses," Ashworth said. "But I don't know what position Gov. (Mark) White will take on it."

Although the coordinating board was established to provide information and assistance to the Legislature, Ashworth said it does have the authority to be sure at least two criteria are met: No unnecessary duplication of courses occur and resources aren't diluted by unnecessary expansions.

Those are two issues some junior college presidents opposing the bills are using to argue against the expansion of UTPB and other upper-level institutions.

Archives collection has 'lots of little tidbits'

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — It's a mecca for historians, says special services librarian Bobbie Klepper, a pausing place "with lots of little tidbits" from centuries ago for those on a quest for self-identity.

It's known as Regional Historical Resource Depository and Local Records Division of the Texas State Library — a mouthful for any historian. More succinctly, it is an archives collection for New Mexico and Texas that has found a permanent home in Room 293 of The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Not associated with the learning institution, the state-owned archives collection is the result of 24 years of research by members of Permian Historical Society and others.

"We do not have enough material for any one (project), but for those researching a paper, an article or a book, we do have many things that would aid," said Mrs. Klepper.

But one problem, she said, is a lack of awareness regarding the collection's existence.

"You'd be surprised at the people that go to school here that don't know it exists," she said.

It was started in 1959 with the establishment of Permian Historical Society, an organization of almost 300 persons whose aim is to collect and preserve the area's history. The society's archives were housed in several locations, including Ector County Library, before finding permanence at UTPB in 1971.

Permian Historical Society's archives became a part of the State Archives in 1973 with the precedent-setting initiation of Regional Historical Resource Depository at UTPB. Since that time, 23 more such regional depositories have been established.

The archives consists of extensive materials relating to the enigmas and lore of that part of Texas and New Mexico bordered by Lea County, N.M., and Culberson County on the west, Yoakum County on the north, Mitchell County on the east and Pecos and Crockett counties on the south. Included are such obscure items as county records, census records, KOSA-TV news reels from 1960-1976, tapes of interviews with old-timers and copies of land surveys.

Additionally, "we are one of the major sources for early area photographs," said Mrs. Klepper.

Her role in the depository is an important one, faced with cataloguing items and assisting researchers. But as one who has had an interest in history "all my life," it's a job that matches her profession with her hobby.

"I'm an avid western fan," she noted. "I thought westerns were all fiction, and then I realized that some western writers write about real places and real people. So I kind of sidled into the field through westerns."

Mrs. Klepper became involved in the Regional Depository while working on her masters in history at UTPB. She became a graduate assistant for the archives and, upon receiving her degree, found herself as the logical successor for the position as head of the depository.

As one who undertook two research projects for her masters — one involving a Baptist church and another involving Methodist women — Mrs. Klepper has an assurance that the work of historians is invaluable.

"You don't know who you are if you don't know what the past is," she said, "and you don't know where you're going if you don't have something to build on."

Mrs. Klepper, who doubles as secretary-treasurer of Permian Historical Society, noted that some persons enmeshed in deciphering history are "kind of fanatic about it. I think really to be an archivist you have to be sort of a pack rat."

The results of years of work by other pack rats can be studied Mondays, Wednesday, Thursdays and Fridays from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. while research during summer months must by approved by UTPB library officials.

The Midland Arts Assembly lifted the curtain and focused the spotlight this morning on its "May Marquee," a series of seven free concert performances for Midlanders seeking some entertainment "punch" with their lunch.

Heading the "Marquee," which features Midland actors and musicians, is Tuesday's noon Lone Star Brass concert at the First National Bank Plaza. The other "Marquee" performances, locations and scheduled dates include:

—Tuesday, May 10; Midland Community Theatre, musical comedy excerpts; noon, First National Bank Plaza.

—Saturday, May 14, Lone Star Brass, 1 p.m., Midland Park Mall.

The MAA, a recently-formed non-profit organization consisting of more than 20 independent Midland cultural groups, also announced the selection of an executive director at a morning news conference.

Norma Helm Webb, a former teacher and director of senior services at Midland College, assumes the post June 1.

Mrs. Webb earned a bachelor's degree in art from Texas Tech University and a master's in education from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. Her art work has been featured at two one-woman exhibits and has earned her many awards.

Before moving to Midland, she taught art in the Dallas and Hurst-Euless-Bedford school districts.

During her 14 years here, Mrs. Webb has served as president, treasurer and show chairman for the Midland Arts Association. She also served as city chairman of the Arthritis Victory March in 1975 and has done volunteer work for Casa de Amigos and the Mental Health and Mental Retardation Association.

Tom Roberts, MAA president, said the organization is dedicated to the promotion and coordination of cultural activities in Midland.

He said the MAA will publish a brochure in May detailing the cultural offerings in Midland, which the MAA plans to promote as a "A Cultural Oasis."

He also announced MAA sponsorship of the first annual Celebration of the Arts the week of April 24, 1984.

"It's our idea to place all of the art groups of Midland on a pedestal," Roberts said.

The MAA's Midland Marquee, a listing of available concerts, recitals and performances which debuted in October, is published twice-monthly in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Midland Marquee listings are also available 24-hours-a-day by calling 683-6048.

Newton plays to several empty seats

'Saturday night crowd' enthusiastic

A Review

Wayne Newton, "the most successful performer in Las Vegas history," who "never plays to an empty seat" did so Sunday night.

Decked out in a Nudie three-piece gray suit, complete with white bow tie, his flying eagle belt buckle and two diamond rings sparkling in the spotlights, Newton sang, played (guitar, banjo, and fiddle) and joked with the audience nonstop for two hours, including his encore.

The 3,733 fans at Chaparral Center, which seats 6,250—plus (6,303 for Barbara Mandrell), certainly got their money's worth. After warming up the audience for 30 minutes, comedian Freddie Roman turned the show over to Newton's (about 25 member) orchestra — harp, electric pianos, trombones, trumpets, drums, bongo drums, guitars, banjo — which was complemented by three quite talented female singers.

Following the usual Las Vegas fanfare and introduction, Newton arrived on stage and immediately opened with "C.C. Rider."

In response to the enthusiatic applause, Newton said, "You keep that up and we're going to be here at least 20 minutes." Then he turned to his orchestra and said, "Keep it hot. This is a Saturday night crowd."

Which was exactly what they did. It got so hot at times one trumpet player felt compelled to strip — almost.

The show contained some very suggestive material, especially after Newton received an affirmative answer to his question: "Is this the down and dirty group?" But he rode the line, stopping short of obscenity and amusing his audiences in the process.

Newton, like another boy soprano who performed here recently — John Gary — made numerous in jest references to his voice and himself.

The men in the audience were won over when Newton described what he imagined they might be thinking: "If there's anything I hate it's a damn Indian dressed up like Thor. I didn't even want to come here tonight. She even lied to me — told me it was Olivia Newton-John."

He recalled his good news and bad news when he was 15. The good news — his song "Danke Schon," was No. 1 around the world. The bad news — he had been confused as a girl.

Another line Newton rode was being overly dramatic. Just as it became too much, he'd pull up short. For example: He sang blues — "Georgia on My Mind;" country — "Good Hearted Woman;" pop — "Bad, Bad Leroy Brown." Broadway — "The Impossible Dream;" but it was his performance of "The American Trilogy" that brought the applauding crowd to its feet.

His orchestration and light show played on the full-sized screen hanging behind the stage was effectively done. The audience's response to the solo performances of several of his troupe was quite positive, especially pianist Glenn Smith and singer Avis Harrell.

No doubt Sunday's performance may well have picked up some new fans for "the Midnight Idol's" Las Vegas show.

"It surely does look at this time (the bills) will pass in both houses," Ashworth said. "But I don't know what position Gov. (Mark) White will take on it."

Although the coordinating board was established to provide information and assistance to the Legislature, Ashworth said it does have the authority to be sure at least two criteria are met: No unnecessary duplication of courses occur and resources aren't diluted by unnecessary expansions.

Those are two issues some junior college presidents opposing the bills are using to argue against the expansion of UTPB and other upper-level institutions.

Archives collection has 'lots of little tidbits'

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — It's a mecca for historians, says special services librarian Bobbie Klepper, a pausing place "with lots of little tidbits" from centuries ago for those on a quest for self-identity.

It's known as Regional Historical Resource Depository and Local Records Division of the Texas State Library — a mouthful for any historian. More succinctly, it is an archives collection for New Mexico and Texas that has found a permanent home in Room 293 of The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Not associated with the learning institution, the state-owned archives collection is the result of 24 years of research by members of Permian Historical Society and others.

"We do not have enough material for any one (project), but for those researching a paper, an article or a book, we do have many things that would aid," said Mrs. Klepper.

But one problem, she said, is a lack of awareness regarding the collection's existence.

"You'd be surprised at the people that go to school here that don't know it exists," she said.

It was started in 1959 with the establishment of Permian Historical Society, an organization of almost 300 persons whose aim is to collect and preserve the area's history. The society's archives were housed in several locations, including Ector County Library, before finding permanence at UTPB in 1971.

Permian Historical Society's archives became a part of the State Archives in 1973 with the precedent-setting initiation of Regional Historical Resource Depository at UTPB. Since that time, 23 more such regional depositories have been established.

The archives consists of extensive materials relating to the enigmas and lore of that part of Texas and New Mexico bordered by Lea County, N.M., and Culberson County on the west, Yoakum County on the north, Mitchell County on the east and Pecos and Crockett counties on the south. Included are such obscure items as county records, census records, KOSA-TV news reels from 1960-1976, tapes of interviews with old-timers and copies of land surveys.

Additionally, "we are one of the major sources for early area photographs," said Mrs. Klepper.

Her role in the depository is an important one, faced with cataloguing items and assisting researchers. But as one who has had an interest in history "all my life," it's a job that matches her profession with her hobby.

"I'm an avid western fan," she noted. "I thought westerns were all fiction, and then I realized that some western writers write about real places and real people. So I kind of sidled into the field through westerns."

Mrs. Klepper became involved in the Regional Depository while working on her masters in history at UTPB. She became a graduate assistant for the archives and, upon receiving her degree, found herself as the logical successor for the position as head of the depository.

As one who undertook two research projects for her masters — one involving a Baptist church and another involving Methodist women — Mrs. Klepper has an assurance that the work of historians is invaluable.

"You don't know who you are if you don't know what the past is," she said, "and you don't know where you're going if you don't have something to build on."

Mrs. Klepper, who doubles as secretary-treasurer of Permian Historical Society, noted that some persons enmeshed in deciphering history are "kind of fanatic about it. I think really to be an archivist you have to be sort of a pack rat."

Bobbie Klepper

The results of years of work by other pack rats can be studied Mondays, Wednesday, Thursdays and Fridays from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. while research during summer months must by approved by UTPB library officials.

Midland Arts Assembly announces 'May Marquee' concerts

Norma Helm Webb

The Midland Arts Assembly lifted the curtain and focused the spotlight this morning on its "May Marquee," a series of seven free concert performances for Midlanders seeking some entertainment "punch" with their lunch.

Heading the "Marquee," which features Midland actors and musicians, is Tuesday's noon Lone Star Brass concert at the First National Bank Plaza. The other "Marquee" performances, locations and scheduled dates include:

—Tuesday, May 10; Midland Community Theatre, musical comedy excerpts; noon, First National Bank Plaza.

—Saturday, May 14, Lone Star Brass, 1 p.m., Midland Park Mall.

—Tuesday, May 17; Midland High School Reader's Theatre, Westminster Handbell Ringers; noon, First National Bank Plaza.

—Saturday, May 21; MHS Reader's Theatre, Westminster Handbell Ringers; 1 p.m., Midland Park Mall.

—Tuesday, May 24; Midland College Roadrunners, country and western band; noon, First National Bank Plaza.

—Saturday, May 28, Midland College Roadrunners, 1 p.m., Midland Park Mall.

The MAA, a recently-formed non-profit organization consisting of more than 20 independent Midland cultural groups, also announced the selection of an executive director at a morning news conference.

Norma Helm Webb, a former teacher and director of senior services at Midland College, assumes the post June 1.

Mrs. Webb earned a bachelor's degree in art from Texas Tech University and a master's in education from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. Her art work has been featured at two one-woman exhibits and has earned her many awards.

Before moving to Midland, she taught art in the Dallas and Hurst-Euless-Bedford school districts.

During her 14 years here, Mrs. Webb has served as president, treasurer and show chairman for the Midland Arts Association. She also served as city chairman of the Arthritis Victory March in 1975 and has done volunteer work for Casa de Amigos and the Mental Health and Mental Retardation Association.

Tom Roberts, MAA president, said the organization is dedicated to the promotion and coordination of cultural activities in Midland.

He said the MAA will publish a brochure in May detailing the cultural offerings in Midland, which the MAA plans to promote as a "A Cultural Oasis."

He also announced MAA sponsorship of the first annual Celebration of the Arts the week of April 24, 1984.

"It's our idea to place all of the art groups of Midland on a pedestal," Roberts said.

The MAA's Midland Marquee, a listing of available concerts, recitals and performances which debuted in October, is published twice-monthly in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Midland Marquee listings are also available 24-hours-a-day by calling 683-6048.

New GOP chairman wants to regain lost ground

HOUSTON (AP) — George W. Strake Jr. is expected to become chairman of the Texas Republican Party this Saturday. It's a job, he says, that can either end his political career or put him into the governor's mansion.

"Everybody who has had the job has ended up being chewed up like a piece of raw hamburger," said Strake, a soft spoken, 47-year-old Houston oilman. "It could happen to me."

Strake said that if he survives in the job politically, he'll consider running for governor in 1986.

"I will (run) if the conditions are right," he said. "But if I find somebody better than me, I will work for him or her."

The important thing, he said, is for the Republicans to regain the momentum lost last November when Bill Clements, the first GOP governor in Texas since Reconstruction, was defeated by Democrat Mark White.

It was, said Strake, a severe blow to the century-long efforts to turn Texas into a true two-party state.

Strake was part of the loss — he was a candidate for lieutenant governor and was buried at the polls by Democratic incumbent Bill Hobby.

After the defeat, some Republicans blamed the loss on Chet R. Upham of Mineral Wells, the current state party chairman. There was a movement to put another man at the helm of the GOP organization. Upham agreed to step down, provided Strake was named as his replacement.

Pat Black, executive director of the Harris County Republican Party, said Strake was viewed as a man who could bandage the wounds of the crippled party and pull warring elements together.

And that's what the Houstonian plans to do.

"I want to turn the guns of the Alamo outward, not inward," Strake said.

The targets of those guns are Democrats and Strake's already talking like a political warrior.

White was elected on promises that he can never keep and the state's voters are just beginning to understand that, Strake said.

"White misled the teachers into thinking he can deliver a 24 percent pay raise," said Strake. "He's painted himself into a corner."

If White sticks with the teacher pay raise plan, he will force 564 school districts in the state to hold tax increase referundums, he said.

"Taxpayers aren't ready for that," he said.

Added Strake: "White made so many promises to get elected he is now finding himself unable to live within" the limits of the state's revenues. The result, said the Republican, may be new state debts.

"He's saying 'I'll build my political palaces today and let the children pay' " said Strake. "He's leading us into a New York State-like system (of high debts)."

Strake believes the state and the nation should stick to the Republican principles of fiscal conservatism. But to make that happen, he said, the state's Republicans have got to stick together.

"I've got to try to keep the various factions (within the party) from warring with each other," he said. "If I can, I've got to keep them focused on re-electing Ronald Reagan, George Bush and John Tower. We can't do that by dissipating energy on each other."

Strake's master plan calls for erasing the state party's $160,000 debt, building a block worker program, reorganizing a telephone bank system that Clements used so successfully in 1978 and starting neighbor-to-neighbor drives.

The long political pathway toward the November 1984 elections starts for the Republicans on Friday night with a fund-raising dinner for Sen. John Tower. President Reagan and other Republican notables are expected to attract enough of the party faithful to the $1,000-a-plate function to raise more than a million dollars.

That should be only a part of what Tower will need for his war chest. The four-term senator is expected to face one of the toughest battles of his political career.

"I wouldn't even guess at how much money that campaign will require," said Strake.

A Houston native, Strake comes from a family that has lived here for three generations. His grandfather was in the cotton business and his father made a fortune in oil.

Strake graduated from a private prep school in Houston and then earned a bachelor's degree from Notre Dame and a business degree from Harvard. In between, he served a tour in the Navy.

For more than 20 years he has taken on party jobs, starting with pounding the pavement in neighborhood surveys and then slowly taking on more responsibility.

4-year-old girl to undergo series of rabies vaccinations

A 4-year-old girl faces a series of vaccinations after rabies tests on a skunk which bit her Tuesday came back positive today.

Stacey Paulins, who received an initial shot Tuesday after being treated at Midland Memorial Hospital for a bite on her left leg, will receive four additional shots during the next four weeks.

The girl's mother, Sherry Paulins, said this morning that Stacey was playing in the sand near a neighbor's home when a skunk rushed out from underneath the house and bit her on the leg.

Mrs. Paulins, who lives about three miles southeast of Midland on County Road 140, said Stacey will receive a second shot Friday, followed by shots seven, 14 and 28 days after the biting incident.

She said Stacey's doctor has told her that the shots should take care of any rabies infection.

According to the City-County Health Department, a human rabies immunoglobulin shot is administered — along with the first injection of a human diploid cell vaccine — in the first vaccination. The human diploid cell vaccine is then administered in later shots.

Mrs. Paulins said Stacey "was terribly scared" when the skunk attacked. "When it had bitten her, she grabbed ahold of its head so it wouldn't bite her anymore."

She said a relative instructed Stacey to push the skunk away, she did so and then ran for safety.

A Midland Animal Control spokeswoman said 18 of 20 — or 90 percent — of the skunks found in Midland County and sent to Austin for testing this year have tested positive for rabies.

Twenty-four rabid skunks have been discovered in Midland County since Jan. 1.

Another lawsuit filed as result of Warwick crash

Another lawsuit in a series of suits totaling almost $8 million has been lodged against Louisiana, the Louisiana Department of Corrections and LDC pilot Alex A. Sheets as a result of an airplane crash into Midland's Warwick Apartments on Sept. 24. This suit has been filed in federal court here.

Filing suit is Nancy Lewis, who claims that her household goods and personal items were destroyed in the fire at the apartment complex where she lived. In addition to her seeking compensation for her actual losses, Ms. Lewis is seeking $10,000 in exemplary damages.

Ms. Lewis is claiming incompetence by the pilot and negligence on part of Louisiana and the LDC.

The aircraft, a twin-engine Beechcaft Baron 58P which was transporting two prisoners, crashed into the apartment complex shortly after takeoff from Midland Air Park. Fatally injured in the crash was 41-year-old Kenneth Hornsby, the pilot's friend who reportedly was not authorized to be aboard the craft.

Randy Sellars, then 20, a Warwick dweller who was injured in the apartment fire, is seeking more than $6.55 million in damages.

Convicted rapist claims he was wrongfully imprisoned

A Galveston man, who in 1976 in Midland's 142nd State District Court was sentenced to a 40-year prison term for raping a 60-year-old Midland woman in 1972, has filed a writ of habeas corpus in federal court.

The man, Cecil Ray Willis, is contending that he is wrongfully imprisoned due to some improprieties in the course of his trial.

Willis, now about 50, was accused of attacking the elderly woman, knocking out two of her teeth, beating her, tying her up, raping her and then choking her until she become unconscious. At the jury trial the victim identified Willis as her assailant.

In his petition, Willis is complaining that:

—The jury should not have been apprised of his 1965 conviction for theft since the conviction was "no good" and could "be proved invalid." Willis says he was represented by "incompetent counsel" in that 1965 case.

—That the implication to the jury was that "sex was forced upon her."

—That the indictment was defective.

—That the victim may have been promiscuous and may have picked up men in bars.

In that 1976 case, Willis was defended by Odessa attorney H. Thomas Hirsch and was prosecuted by Rusty Wall, then an assistant district attorney. Judge Perry D. Pickett presided over the trial.

UTPB honor grads to be recognized

ODESSA — Top upcoming graduates will be the first in the history of The University of Texas of the Permian Basin to receive recognition at the university's commencement ceremony.

Acting UTPB president Donald Rippey said graduation with honor proposals had come from the Faculty Senate and Student Senate.

"I believe this is an excellent means of complimenting our honor students and drawing public attention to their success," he said.

Rippey noted students graduating with honors must be in the top 12 percent of their academic college and have a grade point average of at least a 3.5. He said honor graduates will be named from a combination of all graduating summer, fall and spring classes. Only hours from UTPB will be counted toward honors status and students being considered for honors are obligated to complete at UTPB the minimum number of upper-level hours specified by the catalog under which they registered.

Rippey said the honors notation will appear on the student's diploma and transcript.

Central America to be seminar topic

ODESSA — Economics and politics of Central America will be the topic of a two-day seminar at 7 p.m. May 4-5 in The University of Texas of the Permian Basin's Devonian Room.

Martinez will paint a broad picture of the Central American situation during his first session and will focus on Mexico during the second evening.

A representative of the Central American desk of the U.S. State Department will address the politics of the area. Witte Energy ex-employee sued

Richard E. Witte, president of Witte Energy Management which specializes in infrared scanning, has filed in federal court here a $600,000 lawsuit against a former Witte consultant who allegedly went into competition against Witte and his company.

In doing so, Witte is claiming that his ex-employee, Thomas L. Owens, violated an Employee Non-Competition & Secrecy Agreement which Owens executed in March 1982.

Eight months later, Owens had left Witte's employ, began working for Pumping Units Service Inc. of Hobbs, N.M., "under the tradename of Infra Red Enterprises" in "direct competition with" Witte, according to the suit's petition. Pumping Units Services Inc. is a co-defendant in the suit.

Witte, who is based in Midland, is seeking $100,000 in actual damages and $500,000 in exemplary damages.

The agreement between Witte and Owens specified that Owens "would not directly or indirectly own, manage, operate, control or participate in any manner in any business" which competes with Witte within 200 miles of "any place" where Witte "should then be engaged in business."

Witte's infrared scanning services is applicable to pumping units, petroleum and gas-processing plants, compressor stations and buildings.

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

CHENGDU, China — Suffering from tired blood, asthma or indigestion? Then, try "Doc" Yang's roast duck with caterpillar fungus. Or if your ticker is thumping like a locomotive engine, ask for his fragrant pig-tongue slices.

Yang Zhongyang is not a real doctor, but his Peaceful Gathering restaurant is like an all-purpose clinic, pharmacy and rehabilitation center for devotees of Chinese herbal-medicine cooking.

His patients travel hundreds of miles to the simple eatery in this southwest provincial capital to sample Yang's nourishing nostrums. Instead of consulting a physician, they simply check off a menu of exotic elixirs promising to cure everything from poor eyesight to premature ejaculation.

"People come in and say, 'Doc, I'm sick, what can I do?' " explained Yang. "For coughs, I recommend chicken cooked with a special butterfly. If they have ringing in their ears, I tell them to try silver fungus and pigeon-egg soup. Numbness in the limbs? I advise a glass of wine made of three snakes."

Most dishes might raise eyebrows at the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, but Yang claims their medicinal value has been proved by history.

One of the oldest remedies, euphemistically called "deer kidney and tortoise soup," dates back to the 7th century. An ambitious Tang Dynasty general brewed the mixture of deer, dog, ram and rooster testicles as a way of helping the emperor regain interest in his concubines.

The potency bisque can still be had at Peaceful Gathering for $20 a portion, but most of Yang's specialties treat ailments of less imperial proportions, and they cost just a few cents.

Yang, 63, an herbal druggist who promotes his fare with the enthusiasm of a prairie preacher, said his specially trained cooks can substitute for doctors in all but the most serious diseases.

"We are honest with people," said Yang, a stocky, stooped man wrapped in a doctor's white garb. "If it's cancer, we tell them to go to the hospital. But we can cure the little diseases like anemia, irregular heart beat, bronchitis, dizziness and weaknesses. For the major problems, we can only be consultants."

For Yang, the proof is in the potion. More than 1,000 meals are served daily at his austere cafe located behind an herbal drug store. Despite its national fame, the place is appointed only by a few potted plants, dirty plastic tablecloths and a bamboo-slat painting.

Breakfast is the most popular meal, with elderly men with their wispy beards crowding around the small tables, slurping bowls of snow lotus soup or gobbling down steamed buns spiced with cardamom.

"If I stop eating this food for a few days, I get too tired to walk far," said Gu Hongxiang, 86, who hikes three miles every day for his breakfast fix at Peaceful Gathering. "I feel much stronger after I leave," he added with the hard-eyed glint of a true believer.

Yang said his recipes have been passed by word of mouth for thousands of years, but he guards the precise ingredients of every dish as if they were blueprints for a nuclear bomb. He refused to allow a visit to his kitchen.

"We have secret formulas," he advised.

He did divulge a few tricks of the trade, however. For example, the snake wine prescribed for numbness is prepared by fermenting three kinds of slimy carcasses in a jar of herbal alcohol for a month.

"The secret," he said conspiratorially, "lies in the number of snakes in the jar and the type of herbs. I cannot say any more."

The making of bear paw chowder for extra strength takes three full days just to clean and depilate the animal's hairy toes. "You can't boil them too long," he said, "or the paws get too spongy."

Some dishes have been taken off the menu, because their contents can no longer be found. In other cases the local herbal medicine bureau helps search for such precious items as deer testicles, sea horses and tiger thigh bones, he said.

Peaceful Gathering may be the only restaurant in China that refuses to serve rice because it mixes poorly with medicine.

Western health faddists, however, will be disappointed to learn that Yang's dishes use both refined sugar and monosodium glutamate. "Our foods must be tasty as well as healthy," he said. "Otherwise, who will eat them?"

To prove his point, Yang prepared a banquet of therapeutic delicacies for this generally healthy correspondent.

I left the table with a pronounced sense of well-being. The stimulation, however, lasted throughout the night, preventing sleep.

DEAR ABBY
Wife not buying idea

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The present economy (hard times) has hit us to the point where my husband has been voicing some rather bizarre ideas on how to make some money. His most recent scheme still has me reeling.

He suggested that we take out large amounts of life insurance on some of our relatives. We pay the premiums and name ourselves as sole beneficiaries. My husband had in mind insuring relatives who are either sick or elderly. In other words, those who probably won't have too many years left to live. One is my father!

I told my husband I would have no part in such a scheme. I also accused him of being insensitive and immoral. He said I was being silly — that his plan was something like "gambling." He assured me that my father would feel good about leaving me $50,000 or so when he died.

Abby, what kind of man am I married to? — WONDERING IN MISSOURI

DEAR WONDERING: He is both naive and unrealistic — in addition to several other adjectives that come to mind.

One visit with an insurance salesman would straighten your husband out. An elderly and sick person who is not long for this world is not so easily insured. And please give your husband this message for me: "The saddest day in the life of a man is when he's sure he's discovered a way to make money without working for it."

DEAR ABBY: When I read about the woman who had been treated for herpes, and all that was wrong with her was an allergy to colored, scented toilet paper, I had to write.

I have been married for many years, but the first year of my marriage I was in and out of doctors' offices all the time. The itching and burning were unbearable! I thought maybe I was allergic to sex. I was told I had "some kind of infection," but nobody told me what kind. The pain was so bad at times I could hardly walk.

Finally, a nurse asked me if I ever used colored toilet paper, and I told her yes. She told me to stop using it and see if that helped.

In less than one week after I switched to plain, white, unscented toilet paper, I was 100 percent well again!

Now, whenever I see colored toilet paper in the home of a friend, I warn her. Many have thanked me and admitted that they also had that kind of trouble too, but never knew what caused it. Thanks, Abby. You did a lot of good with one letter. — CHICAGOAN

DEAR CHICAGOAN: I was amazed at the number of letters I received from readers whose experience was the same as yours.

DEAR ABBY: While cleaning the basement today I once again had to move several boxes containing junk for garage sales next summer. Abby, this "junk" is all new!

On every gift-giving occasion, my husband's parents and grandparents give us numerous nonreturnable knickknacks purchased at craft shows.

Although we have dropped hints as to practical things we need and would enjoy, they disregard them and buy instead objects to hang on walls or set around, none of which goes with our decor.

We regret that they have wasted their money, but what can we do? We live in a small apartment with limited space. We appreciate their thoughts but are ... UP TO OUR EARS

DEAR UP: I can offer only one situation: Quit "dropping hints" and tell them frankly what you've stated so well here.

How to save baby's life

By WILLARD ABRAHAM, Ph.D.
Copley News Service

Want to save your baby's life? Of course. Who doesn't?

These questions are triggered by a disturbing letter I just received. Here is what it said:

Q. My husband is a fast, reckless driver, and that fact worries me sick. I love him and don't want anything to happen to him. Even worse is the horrible thought of what can happen to our 6-month-old baby who frequently is in the front seat with him.

When I'm there as a passenger or driver, I securely belt in the baby, but on those occasions when our little girl is alone in the car with her father, he just puts her on the seat next to him. He insists that his reaction time is quick enough to protect her in case of a fast stop or a possible accident.

Am I worrying for nothing? What do you think?

A. In a sudden stop or accident an infant or young child can be thrown into the windshield, the dashboard or some other part of the car — or totally out of the car. Even when held firmly, the baby will be torn from adult arms. A 10-pound infant will be thrown forward with the force of 300 pounds in a 30 mph impact, the same force as if falling from a three-story building.

Such comments come from the Arizona Safety Association and the Highway Safety Research Institute at the University of Michigan.

The best approach seems to be to use (in every car ride!) a carefully selected restraint, considering factors like these in choosing one:

— A restraint that is comfortable for the baby or young child, that can be anchored securely in the car, and that you will use all the time.

— A restraint that can be fastened by a top anchor strap to a special anchor plate installed to the rear or to a set of rear lap belts, or anchored by a lap belt — and pulled tightly.

An additional safety device is a side anchor strap that fastens to the base of the nearest inboard set of auto lap belts, keeping the restraint from tilting sideways in a swerve or crash.

Here are some additional suggestions for you — and your husband.

— The restraint should be placed in a backward-facing position for infants.

— Car beds and household infant carriers are not designed for protection in a car.

— If one restraint you look at seems too complicated or uncomfortable, move on. There are others available.

The cost may seem high to you (the usual range is $15 to $50), but consider the alternative — and also where your top priorities are. It could be your best bargain. What is more important than the safety of your young child?

If no restraint is available, at least use a lap belt, as snugly as possible across the thighs and hip bones. A low, very firm cushion can help improve the fit. (And looking ahead, when a child outgrows the restraint, the habit of using a lap belt is essential.)

Use restraints exactly as the manufacturer recommends. This isn't the time or place for creativity and experimentation.

Don't buckle two people into one lap belt, regardless of their size.

The habit of using restraints or seat belts with children is usually quite easy to develop if they are comfortable in them — and if their parents provide a model for them. Their use should begin in early infancy, and continue every time, on every trip, in every car.

Pregnant drug abuser may endanger baby

BALTIMORE (AP) — A doctor who says a 7-month-old fetus deserves legal protection has asked a judge to order a pregnant drug abuser to take herself off drugs.

The mother's drug abuse during her pregnancy "will further retard, inhibit and prevent the (fetus') growth and development," the doctor contends in legal papers filed recently in the city circuit court's juvenile division.

The mother, he added, "continuously puts herself and (the fetus) in dangerous, life threatening situations," the newspaper reported.

Because the case is in juvenile court, the names of the participants were not made public.

The Baltimore Sun said the woman is in her mid-20s.

Bruce A. Kaufman, a domestic relations lawyer and head of the Maryland Bar Association's family law section, said the case raises the issue, "At what point is the state going to be permitted to intervene in other people's lives?"

Another issue is whether a fetus is a "child" under Maryland law.

The doctor contends in the court papers the fetus' growth has been retarded.

He also pointed out that a daughter previously born to the woman "was born prematurely and was classified as a child at great risk for sudden infant death syndrome."

The physician also asks the judge to order the woman "to immediately undergo urinalysis and other reasonable tests to determine the extent to which she is abusing drugs," to be tested immediately to see how healthy the fetus is.

Mothers earning envy

By ERMA BOMBECK

Remember when mothers used to make excuses for going to work? Well, now they're making apologies for staying at home.

It was bound to happen. It's called Guilt Backlash.

The principle is simple. Anything you enjoy is worth feeling guilty about. Back in the early '70s when getting a job outside the home was fun and different, guilt was at a premium. You could buy your soul back for an angora sweater, three meals out, a raise in the allowance, a trip to Disneyland, or the use of your car for the weekend.

But when the envy shifted to the woman who stays at home, gets to watch all the soaps she wants to, drinks coffee whenever she feels like it, and has time to shop and take naps, the attitude changed. What gives her the right to sit at home working one job when other mothers are working two?

I overheard two children talking the other day and their comments were interesting.

One child said, "I heard your mother quit her job and is staying at home now. Does she have to?"

"No," said the other child. "She said she just didn't feel fulfilled anymore making coffee for the whole office and filing insurance claims. She was bored."

"Boy, I hope that doesn't start something," said his friend. "Suppose all the other mothers started staying home. What do you think would happen to us?"

"Yeah, what kind of a mother is always home when her kids get home from school . . . nagging about changing out of your good clothes and complaining you're indoors too much watching TV and why don't you go out and play and get some fresh air?"

"Mark's mother stays at home, but she has to. They need the extra money she saves by not having to buy fancy clothes to work in and an extra car and the price of a baby-sitter."

"That's different," said his friend, "but when you stay home for no good reason, it stinks!"

"My mother stayed home once for two weeks. She was on a real guilt trip. Baked cookies every day, cleaned out the garage, actually sat me down and asked me what I thought about life. It was weird."

"My brother told me he can remember when nearly all the mothers in the world stayed at home. He never had to carry a door key. She was always there."

"Gosh, does that mean you won't be able to make confetti in the blender anymore or climb on the roof to change the antenna or tease the dog?"

His friend nodded. "I liked it better when mothers didn't know who they were."

Don't look like 'crayon box'

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

How many accessories can you wear at one time? How many colors can you wear?

Granted, there are those women who can wear twice too many and still look fantastic. But most of us must be careful not to overdo it or we come out looking like a crayon box with spangles.

To judge whether or not you have "overdone" it, give each accessory one point (earrings, bracelet, rings, belt, scarf, etc.). Give each color of your ensemble one point. Give your shoes one point if they are not the same color as your skirt or slacks, two points if they have bows, clips or contrasting color.

Give points to plaids, large prints, contrasting trim and puffy sleeves. After you have put yourself together, count the points. If the total is 12 to 14, you are very close to being overdone. If the total is as high as 18 to 20, go back in the house and start all over again.

Whether you are safe with 12 or more points depends on your personality, lifestyle, size, build, etc. Only you can judge.

I feel most comfortable with 10 points or less. My rule is no more than three colors and no more than three pieces of jewelry (wedding rings don't count unless they are flashy).

Sound complicated? Not at all. You will soon get the hang of it and will be able to judge your total very quickly. If in doubt, remove an accessory or two. It is considerably better to be a little underdone than overdone.

Points should also be given for flashy belt buckles, ruffles, textured or colored stockings.

If you need to subtract points, you can exchange. Replace a contrasting belt for one the same color as your dress. Replace a printed scarf with one of a solid color.

Old stereo viewer returning

Copley News Service

Well, it's finally happened — they've gone and modernized one of my boyhood delights.

Jerry Nims and Allen Lo researched and then developed a new version of the stereopticon viewer. Now I can just hear everyone who's in their second or third decade asking, "What's a stereopticon viewer?"

Years ago, nearly every household had a strange-looking twin contraption that you held up to your face and looked through twin lenses at a card that had the same picture on both the right and left sides. When the card was moved into proper focusing range, the viewer saw the scene in three dimensions. The new Nimslo three-dimensional camera and processing system re-creates the old-time stereopticon effect, but does it within the confines of a modern, single, color photographic print.

The part that you, as the photographer, get to see, is the strange-looking camera with four lenses. A "quadra lens system," the company calls it — and it features four side-by-side 30mm matched optical glass three-element lenses.

At this stage in the development process, the inventors have taken most all of the guesswork out of picture-taking for you ... the camera has an automatic exposure system and it's pre-focused for maximum simplicity.

You can use your choice of any of your favorite color negative films (the kind you use for prints) just as long as the ASA rating is either 100 or 400.

I'd suggest you buy the 36-exposure rolls because you'll only end up with half the number of finished pictures. The reason behind that is the four lenses each expose a half frame. Since four half frames equal two full frames, you're exposing double the amount of film each time you press the shutter.

The part of the Nimslo system you don't get to see is the processing. After the film is developed, a computerized patented printer (designed and built by the Nimslo folks) correlates the four images and transfers them onto a unique print material, separating and focusing the four images into one.

Your exposed film obviously has to be returned to your photo store, where it gets sent to Nimslo for their special processing. I found that viewing the processed prints at a normal distance has a tendency to make them appear just a bit blurry — but if you'll hold them at arm's length, that blurriness disappears and the three-dimensional feeling is really apparent.

Home security system: unique present shows mom you care

Your mother's "Day" is coming and you'd like to get her something special.

Crystal, housewares, the usual gifts are all fine, but not quite what you had in mind. They don't say what you feel about this day...about your mother.

You want something that expresses your gratitude for the way she's always worried about you. You want to thank her for all the times she listened as if you were the most important person in the world.

And you were...to her.

This Mother's Day, you want your mother to know how much you appreciate her...respect her...love her.

A special thank-you

About the best gift you could possibly give your mother is the assurance that the remainder of her life will be trouble free. But that's impossible.

What is possible, is an unusual gift that can protect her from some of the worst kinds of trouble: the burglaries, holdups and fires that victimize thousands every day—right in their own homes!

Your mother has earned a safe and secure future. Her home should be a place of comfort and safety.

You can help make sure that it is.

Gift of protection

A modern home security system can help protect your mother and her home from fire and criminal intrusion with advanced electronic technology.

HELP MAKE MOM SAFE at home with an ADT Security System.

There's even a system developed by ADT called Safewatch® that will connect her home to an ADT central station where trained staff working round-the-clock relay to police or fire departments any smoke, fire, break-in or other emergency Safewatch detects.

The Mother's Day gift of electronic home security places a reassuring ring of protection around your mother and her property.

Information on Safewatch and a free 20-page booklet on how to protect your home from criminals is available from ADT, Residential Security, Box M-3, One World Trade Center, New York, NY 10048, or from your local ADT branch office.

Living tradition — say it with flowers!

From the first Mother's Day it's been said with flowers. As a matter of fact, when Miss Jarvis conceived of Mother's Day 75 years ago, she had no thoughts of gifts—"except the gift of love."

Her expression of love and respect was embodied in flowers, probably wild flowers at that, because in the spring, the West Virginia countryside is abloom with a profusion of nature's loveliest blossoms.

And breathes there a mother who doesn't enjoy a floral remembrance, especially one that you grew and nurtured; or one that you picked yourself—from your garden, or from the nearby fields!

If you live "in town" growing flowers or picking your own might be a bit difficult. In that case, there's a florist no further than the nearest telephone or street corner.

Miss Jarvis selected the carnation as the Mother's Day official flower because the carnation was her mother's favorite.

Today, you can choose her favorite, be it roses, violets, pansies, or whatever.

Mother's Day: whose idea was it anyway?

Believe it or not, historians tell us that the first Mother's Day was not the generally observed one established by Miss Anna Reeve Jarvis in 1908!

The fact is that more than three decades earlier, in 1872, Julia Ward Howe, mother of six, famed reformer, poet and scholar, gave Mother's Day a meaning of commitment to world peace and international arbitration.

Pretty heady ideas in those days of Victorian reserve, but born, no doubt, of a married life that was turbulent, often estranged, and brief reconciliations resulting in more children!

Her husband was twice her age, a Boston patrician, who resented his wife's independence and aspirations toward a literary career.

Her inspiration for a Mother's Day of deeper involvement with the torment of the world came to her as a result of the Franco-Prussian War in 1870. She founded a Women's Peace Conference, hopeful that the "august dignity of motherhood and its terrible responsibilities" would be forced to prevent future holocausts.

Because she was a woman, the Women's Peace Conference failed in its purpose. Established peace organizations just would not let her be heard.

Returning from disappointing experiences in London and Paris, she began to promote a festive day to be known as Mother's Day. It was to be on June 2, 1872, and devoted to the advocacy of peace.

For many years, it was celebrated in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, many smaller cities in the U.S., and in London, Geneva, even Constantinople and elsewhere.

Perhaps it was doomed by the seriousness of its objectives. When Miss Jarvis' more simplistic idea came to life commemorating motherhood as the focal concept.

It's interesting to note that Mrs. Howe's ideas, today, come into sharper focus than when first promol gated. As women, mothers, all over the world are demonstrating for peace, abolition of nuclear armaments, and fulfillment of themselves with active participation in the world as it is.

Take mom on a safari and start a new Mother's Day tradition

What did you do last year for your wife on Mother's Day? Chances are you and the kids took her to dinner at a nearby restaurant — probably one she's been to a few times before. Or perhaps you dined at home; you did the cooking and the children did the cleaning up.

We're sure mom had a lovely time, but this year how about doing something completely different. Remember your wife when you were dating ... what an adventurous, sensuous woman she was ... ready to embark on the craziest romantic ventures at a moment's notice?

Well, just because you're married and she's a mother now doesn't mean she's lost her adventurous spirit. Help her to re-ignite that spirit of adventure this Mother's Day with a creative and exciting new approach. Take her on a sensuous safari!

Now wait, it's not as wild as it sounds. We're not suggesting you load your family on a jet bound for Africa, but rather create your own adventurous day near home. The excitement of a safari-like day will enable mom to rediscover that same sense of daring she had when she was single. And, to show you how it's done without traveling too far from home, we've listed a few Mother's Day safari ideas.

• Animal Safari: Surprise mom with a trip in her honor to an animal park. It's sure to be a change of pace for her and a fun time for the entire family. A carefree spring day spent driving among the animals and sharing in their antics, is sure to put a smile on everyone's face.

Don't forget to bring a camera along to "bag" the furry creatures you encounter and to "capture" the day's special family moments. Later on, you can present mom with a commemorative photo album to preserve the wonderful memories of this special Mother's Day.

• Bicycle Safari: Even if you don't live near an animal park, you can still take mom and the family on an outdoor safari this spring. Get those bikes out of storage (or you can rent them for a nominal fee) for a "free-wheeling" adventure exploring the countryside, keeping eyes peeled for signs of local wildlife.

Before embarking on your trip, map out a scenic bike route, and select a picnic sport that's particularly picturesque, perhaps beside a cool running stream or atop a grassy knoll. Pack a picnic lunch fit for a queen—after all, it is mom's day.

For your feast, select a few of the delectable delicacies mom doesn't often have the chance to indulge in, such as her favorite paté, a piece of French cheese and a plate of fresh strawberries, and include some more familiar goodies for the kids.

SHOW YOUR WIFE YOU STILL APPRECIATE what an adventurous, sensuous woman she is by taking her on a "safari" this Mother's Day. A trip to a local animal park, sure to be a change of pace for her, and a gift of Senchal, the fragrance for the sensuous woman, make exciting "safari" Mother's Day presents.

Because it's a holiday, white paper plates certainly won't do, so bring along the most colorful, lively designs you can find, and pack everything in separate parcels so each family member (except mom, of course) can share the load on the back of his/her bike.

For the grand finale when the picnic is over, present mom with her own special gift, and watch her face light up with pleasure.

• Sensuous Shopping Safari: Indoor safaris can be adventurous, too. Treat mom to a special sensuous shopping expedition and, together, you and she can "stalk" her favorite shopping mall or plaza for her Mother's Day presents. But please, no food processors or electric knives this year—we're trying to be daring!

Instead, help mom select a sexy negligee, a feminine lace blouse, real silk stocking or her favorite sensuous perfume. Fragrance is, after all, one of the most exciting, intimate gifts you can choose.

This Mother's Day, Senchal, the fragrance for the sensuous, adventurous woman, has perfectly captured the exciting safari spirit with its Sensuous Senchal Safari gift set. Packaged in a beautiful violet box adorned with exotic flowers like the kind you might find on a real safari, the cologne and perfume set is $9.50 (you'll have an $18.50 value), and the cologne alone is just $4.50.

Throughout the year, mom can lavish herself with this evocative scent made of jasmine, ylang-ylang, rose, amber, hyacinth, orange blossom and musk, whenever she wants to relive the feeling of the special Mother's Day adventure she shared with her family. And Senchal will make mom feel sensuous, too, by bringing out a little of the animal in her!

If you surprise her with a safari outing, you'll prove you know she's still the adventurous woman you married. She might like the idea so much, it could become a Mother's Day family tradition!

Recent survey indicates working families spend more time together

In a survey completed recently, it was reported that working families (mother and father both employed outside the home) managed to spend more leisure time with their children than the usual, perhaps "old line" family with only one working spouse. These families tend to center their activities around the TV set, but strangely enough, they don't give TV their full attention.

The new working family, because of more limited time, tends to structure leisure time in such a fashion that they are able to spend more time with their children than families where only one parent (usually the male) is employed outside the home.

Noteworthy is the fact that these parents tend to read more to their children, more often than parents where only one is employed.

It would appear, then, that where leisure time is limited, the working mother has to plan and ration it more carefully, making use of every available hour, to help give real guidance to her children.

The conclusion, then, is that working mothers are good mothers, maybe even better mothers. They are dedicated, and because they lead planned lives at work, that structuring carries over to their home lives, and works out well for them, their husbands and their families.

They obviously work and play together more intensively and, as a result, develop strong ties that serve everyone in good stead.

Cater to Mom's sweet tooth by preparing her favorite dessert

Love mom, and want to show her just how much? Why not treat your favorite lady on her special day to her "just desserts!"

If she's got a yen for chocolate ice cream, buy her a quart of the finest, and present it to her, including a real silver spoon to eat it with.

All-American favorite

If mom is as American as apple pie—and that's her favorite sweet—clear her out of the kitchen, borrow her special recipe, and begin baking. But, remember, she's not allowed to help.

If she's nuts about nuts, the following recipe for a rich and creamy Mocha Walnut Pudding Parfait should fill the bill.

The delectable mousse-like dessert is particularly easy to prepare. It begins with a chocolate pudding mix, which is flavored with coffee, rum and just a hint of pumpkin pie spice—for a subtle, sophisticated flavor that's hard to beat.

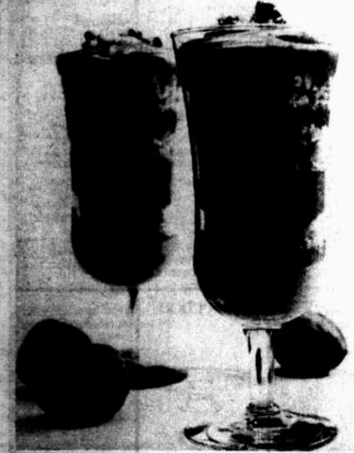
Success with walnuts

The mellow taste of the fine California walnuts which star in this dessert tempers its sweetness, and their crispness provides an ideal contrast in texture to the soft, creamy parfait.

Toasting the walnuts will protect their crisp texture, even if this dessert is made ahead of time and kept refrigerated till served.

The home economists at Diamond Walnuts recommend toasting walnuts whenever they are used in make-ahead puddings, gelatins, sauces, salad dressings or any liquid mixtures.

A glance at the recipe will assure you that this glamourous dessert is as easy to make as it is tasty. Preparation is even simpler—and faster—if you use already shelled California walnuts.



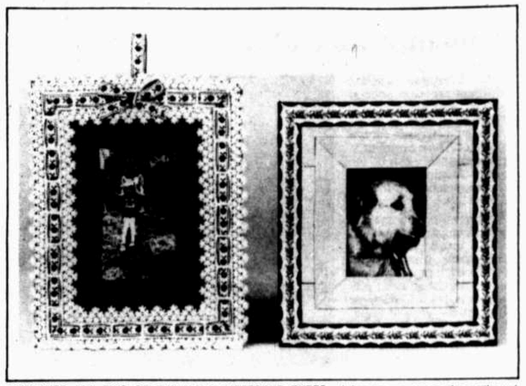
THIS MOTHER'S DAY, why not treat mom to her "just desserts," such as this creamy and delicious Mocha Walnut Pudding Parfait.

MOCHA WALNUT PUDDING PARFAIT

- 1 cup toasted California walnuts
- 1 3⅞-ounce package chocolate pudding and pie filling
- 1 cup milk
- ¼ cup granulated sugar
- ½ teaspoon pumpkin pie spice
- Dash salt
- 1 tablespoon instant coffee granules
- 1 teaspoon rum flavoring
- 1 cup whipping cream

Coarsely chop ¾ cup of the toasted walnuts; set aside. Prepare pudding as package directs, using only the 1 cup milk. Add sugar, spice, salt, instant coffee and flavoring; mix well. Cool. Whip cream to stiff peaks and fold into pudding. Layer pudding and the ¾ cup of toasted walnuts into small parfait glasses; decorate tops with remaining walnuts. Makes about 6 servings.

To Toast Walnuts: Drop walnut kernels into rapidly boiling water; boil 3 minutes and drain well. Spread kernels evenly in a shallow pan and bake at 350 degrees F., stirring often, for 12 to 15 minutes or until golden brown.



DISPLAYED ARE TWO OF THE MANY DIFFERENT TYPES of frames you can make easily and inexpensively for Mother's Day. On the left, a wide grosgrain ribbon is topped on the outside edge with a lacy trim. A colorful narrow ribbon is attached with Elmer's Glue-All to the center of the lace and used as a loop from which the picture can hang. The frame for the family pet is made up by gluing 1-½" strips of balsa wood to the mat (a piece to cover top and bottom and with pieces to fill in sides). Narrower strips of balsa cut to fit opening and mitered in the corners are glued over Colorful ribbon edges the frame. †

GIFTS FOR MOM on Mother's Day range from a million to one, but they all spell one thing—love, something that comes from the heart.

Mother's Day survey — gifts range from a million to one (dollars, that is)

Mother's Day is coming up and once again it's time to buy the perfect gift.

How about a South Pacific island? No, not a trip to the island. The island. There's at least one for sale from Neiman-Marcus of Dallas for $1 million.

If that's too expensive, let mom pay for it herself with your gift to her of a solid gold American Express Card, available from Sakowitz's of Houston.

Extravagant? You bet.

Whitman's* Chocolates surveyed key department and specialty stores across the nation and found that along with the simple and traditional, the selection of gifts for mom extend to the lavish and sublime.

It all depends on how the gift-giver wishes to express his or her love for mom—and how much he or she can afford. Of course, the price of a gift has no bearing on the value of a person's love; a 2-oz. bottle of Arpege cologne at $18.50 can be as meaningful as a 1-oz. bottle of Arpege perfume at $100, say many department stores.

Despite the profusion of uncommon offerings, Whitman's found that givers of traditional gifts have no lack of selection this year.

From designer silk scarfs at $40 from Bonwit-Teller, to a dozen roses at $50 from the local florist, to a Beewa (natural) pearl necklace at $240 from John Wanamaker's in Philadelphia, stores throughout the nation are well prepared for virtually every taste, every pocketbook.

Speaking of pocketbooks, Gucci's—of Rodeo Drive, Beverly Hills—is offering ultra-soft leather handbags from $300 to $400.

The Whitman's survey also found that some stores are providing items for mom to accommodate the increasing presence of women in the work force.

Bloomingdale's, for example, has singled out "the executive mother" by making available a Schoesinger leather briefcase, with shoulder strap, for $150.

However, if mom is more outrageous than conservative, why not buy her a personal roller coaster from Sakowitz's? Personal roller coaster? Yes. If that's too wild, Sakowitz's is prepared to offer a more intimate gift—the 21 Club in New York, rented for mom and 300 of her best friends.

The price? If you have to ask, forget it.

Give her the time of her life

Mother's Day has been celebrated in the United States for nearly 100 years. Traditional remembrances include church services, wearing a red or white carnation, and sending fancy desserts called "mothering cakes." Many of these customs still exist yet, as times change, so do the ways we observe this special holiday.

Today's more active mom shares both home and work responsibilities. So why not honor her with something that will keep pace with her changing role. One of the most up-to-the-minute presents is a timepiece that will last in her memory as well as on her wrist.

Stylish and affordable

Timex offers a variety of watches that are attractive and affordable. Gold-tone and silver-tone designs with integrated or mesh bands dress up any wardrobe, while sportier styles with leather straps are perfect for less formal affairs.

And to meet daily appointments, there are digital watches with alarms and hourly chimes that can be set on demand. Many of the models are water-resistant, so whether in the kitchen, the pool or caught in the rain, mom won't have a moment's worry.

The selection of mechanisms is just as wide—ranging from traditional wind-up models to no-wind quartz with super accuracy.

Times and celebrations may have changed, but mom still cherishes a memento that comes to her with love.

A WATCH IS STILL THE TIMELIEST WAY to remember mom on her special day. Timex offers traditional and ultra-modern timepieces she can wear for every occasion—such as the classic quartz with up-to-the-minute accuracy or the sleek command bar digital which can be set with just a touch of the front bar. Whatever your choice for mom, Timex makes style affordable.

A FRENCH PARFUM like Michelle from Balenciaga projects an image of admiration and love—an appropriate message for every mother.

Secret language of flowers and perfume

In Victorian times people communicated secretly by filling their prose with flowers, all of which offered their own special symbols to the message.

If a woman received carnations, she was told she was admired. If a letter to her mentioned daisies, she was being told that someone shares her sentiments précisely.

This secret language could change a message completely so only the person receiving it really knew its true meaning.

When this same art was set to fragance, these Victorian ideas seemed to add new impact to the development of precious parfums.

Michelle by Balenciaga features floral notes of tuberose, gardenia, jasmine, rose de mai and iris and ylang-ylang set in an atmosphere of greenery and ferns. To a Victorian poet this is a very sensual message of love.

Tuberose typifies a feeling of enchantment and magic. Gardenia adds the allure of dreams and night. Jasmine says she is admirable while rose de mai extols the beauty and love of woman.

Iris says there is hope and eloquence in this association, and ferns declare it's fascinating as well.

What a beautiful feeling to express—and the Michelle fragance by Balenciaga duplicates it completely. It is exquisitely female but free of shyness, a fragance for women who know how to express themselves.

This Mother's Day either the Parfum or the Eau de Toilette can offer every mother these beautiful statements, for her to wear all year. And she'll surely use it to send out her own secret messages.

A quick question: what do these famous women have in common?

Bette Davis ... Phyllis George Brown ... Congresswomen Geraldine Ferraro and Pat Schroeder ... Mrs. Jane Muskie ... Joan Lunden ... Pia Lindstrom ... just what do they all have in common?

Each has received the coveted OMA Award, designed for the National Mother's Day Committee.

Favorite fragrance is a treasured remembrance of mom's special day

As everyone knows, mothers are very special people. And according to two very special mothers, talented actresses Jaclyn Smith and Jane Seymour, a gift of fragrance can be the most treasured and precious remembrance on their special day.

"Fragrance is romantic and intriguing," avows British stat Jane Seymour. "Like memorable music, literature or art, it captures attention...stimulates and provokes a warm response from those around you," continues Jaclyn Smith.

Personal favorites

Naturally, each lovely lady has her own personal fragrance favorite. Created by Max Factor, these two delicious scents have been captured in some very special presentations for Mother's Day gifting.

As a most provocative way to step into spring, Jaclyn's favorite, EPRIS, is presented in a petite cologne rendition, as well as in a delightful "Bathing Suite Travel Tote" filled with portable sizes of Silky Bath & Shower Gelée, Moisturizing Body Sleeker, Refreshing Friction Lotion and a Perfume dram.

Platinum jewelry for Mother

A gift of jewelry is a gift of love, and Jewelers of America (JA) suggests presenting Mother with a piece of platinum jewelry to update her Spring fashion wardrobe.

"The current resurgence in white metals for jewelry has reawakened an interest in platinum," comments JA Chairman Michael D. Roman.

"While platinum is not new, having been the traditional metal for fine jewelry since the 1930s, its current popularity gives the owner an exciting new symbol of glamour and elegance."

Jewelry designers and manufacturers are combining platinum with diamonds, rubies, sapphires, and other colored gemstones in dramatic and decorative necklaces, earrings and rings.

Also, platinum is being used to create art deco-styled estate jewelry and new looks in watches and chains. A two-color effect is achieved by using platinum and yellow gold combined together for a bold and beautiful fashion statement.

Platinum's qualities will surely appeal to mother:

- It is by far the purest of precious metals (at least 95 percent) and therefore non-allergenic; it won't discolor or irritate even the most sensitive skin.
- Platinum is almost invincible—it resists scratches and nicks and it won't stretch or tarnish.
- Platinum is the rarest of precious jewelry metals.
- Platinum's white lustre does not compete with, nor distract from, the color of a gemstone; in fact, it enhances a stone's brilliance and depth and dramatizes the perception of the stone's size.

What better way to say, "Mom you are precious, you're one-in-a-million, and I love you!" than with a gift of platinum jewelry this Mother's Day?

Jewelers of America has just expanded its library of informative consumer brochures to include "What You Should Know About Platinum Jewelry."

Why not write for your free copy today (and one of each about karat gold, diamonds, colored gemstones, pearls, appraisals, care & cleaning) by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Jewelers of America, Consumer Information Dept. MNS, 1271 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10020.

What's wrong with a working mom? It's a new way of life

What's wrong with a working mom? Nothing!

She's part of today's labor mix, often by choice, perhaps just as often by necessity.

Moms as homemakers

Perhaps there are arguments that the mother whose "calling" is managing the hearth and home, makes for a better balance in family interactions. And even for a heightened sense of security.

But, there are equally persuasive arguments that today's socio-economic environment has made the traditional homemaker's role somewhat obsolete. It's not easy to be a good mother and good "work person" at the same time. It takes skill, practice, and determination. But more than 50 percent of our American mothers have learned, or are learning, the techniques for combining two busy lives into one whole for the benefits of their children and their husbands.

Economic must

In a period of economic recession, the burden of supporting the family all too often falls onto the shoulders of a mother, for a period of time at least. But skills acquired in high school or college adaptable to the world growing ever more computerized, now stand in good stead.

There is a learning and adjustment process to be suffered through, but retraining a semi-skilled technician (yesterday's "Gal Friday") into one of today's sought after skilled experts is bearing ripe fruit.

Role of female worker

Often the mother who goes back to the job market is filling in for a father displaced by an economic shift from "smoke stack" to hi-tech industry. His retraining is likely to be more painful, and extended over a longer period of time, because the skills that once kept the family in ease and comfort have little or no usefulness in this new era of thinking machines.

The job he once had and lost, through no fault of his own, may never exist again. It's mother, who for a period of time has to bridge the "income gap" with perhaps permanently altered roles for both mother and dad.

And who is there to say that a mother, with new skills honed in the market place, will not be a better mother? It's certain that her daily exchanges with coworkers broaden and develop instincts and understandings which can adapt usefully in her life with the family.

A new norm

It might even be fair to say that the working mom is the norm mom, and her involvement in everything from politics to decision making to managing the home is now—all over the world.

ORDINARY TAP WATER comes out looking, tasting and smelling like fresh spring water after it's circulated through the Norelco Clean Water Machine.

Give mom the gift of cleaner water

Now you can give mother the gift of delicious water that smells good, looks sparkling clean, and is a delight to drink and cook with.

You don't have to be a magician. All you have to do is give her the Norelco Clean Water Machine as a Mother's Day present.

All she has to do is pour ordinary tap water into the reservoir of this counter-top electric appliance, turn it on for a minute, and the water will circulate through the charcoal-based filter system and then flow into the carafe cleaner and clearer.

Mother will have the choice of letting the water go through the filter once before it flows into the carafe, or recirculating it for additional cleaning action. Tap water that goes through this unique system will have up to 90 percent of organic wastes, chlorine, synthetic detergents and trihalomethanes removed, and come out looking, tasting and smelling like fresh spring water.

Once mother has cleaner water she'll wonder how she ever managed without it. The whole family will develop a taste for water instead of sweet beverages. Coffee and tea will lose their bitter taste, and ice cubes will look clearer.

Everyone knows you should drink plenty of water each day, and now it will become a pleasure to do so.

Lingerie says love on Mother's Day

FOR THE MOTHER WHO LOVES THINGS simple yet chic, the perfect gift is this seductive, lace-accented bra-slip with adjustable straps. Of silky, easy-care Astron III nylon tricot in your choice of pink, blue, white, body blush, black or champagne for sizes 32 through 36, at $17.50. From the Nice 'n Spicy Collection available exclusively at most larger JCPenney retail stores. The group also includes coordinating teddy, bra, camisole and half-slip.

Remembering mother with something truly special each year on her day can turn into a tedious task. And in a tight economy, it can really become a challenge.

But not if you get down to essentials—the bare, beautiful ones, of course. For lingerie is practically guaranteed to please and pamper, both your mother and your pocketbook.

"Especially when it looks far more luxurious than it costs," emphasizes Rosalie Jackson, JCPenney's buyer and specialist in extravagant intimate apparel at affordable prices.

Ms. Jackson continues, "A woman wants her underclothes to be just as pretty and feminine as her streetwear."

While a wonderful nightgown or glamorous robe never goes out of style, and satiny bras and bikinis are always appreciated, you might want to consider these less traditional luxury items which, because they flatter and work well under current fashions, have become increasingly popular:

• The bra-slip: truly the best of both worlds; a comfortable bra and a body-skimming slip, all in one garment.

• The camisole: to slide over a bra or bare skin. Very effective under sheer blouses.

• The bra-camisole: a terrific combination that cuts down on underwear layering. Pair it with a matching half-slip for a matchless feeling.

Did you remember mom's sweet tooth?

Chances are, it was mother who first introduced you to the delights of candy. Sweet and chewy. Crisp and crunchy. So tasty and rewarding for some little chore well done.

Mothers are still the same. Even in a very diet and figure conscious world, candy remains the gift constant that says most of what you want to say, in the "sweet" way you want it expressed.

Of course, one of the fine quality candy brands, steeped in the symbolism of exclusivity, makes a significant gift statement. It not only pleases the ego, but addresses the sensory perceptions in a dramatic and highly rewarding fashion.

And the price range of fine sweets is as comprehensive as the federal budget. Your selection can be tailored to fit your purse—a big box of moderately priced chocolates or a small and selective gift of one of the "pricier" brands, available at the finest stores.

And since most mothers enjoy the pleasure of several Mother's Day gifts, a sure way to bolster your other choices is to include a gift of her favorite candy. If she doesn't have a favorite, it's a pretty sure thing that your gift will soon become her "first choice."

Joan Lunden and daughter star on 1983 Mother's Day poster

Joan Lunden, co-host of ABC-TV's Good Morning America, with her two-year-old daughter were chosen as the 1983 Mother's Day portrait poster family.

They express a contemporary family, active and involved, and reach out to all America through the medium of daily television.

Posters have marked Mother's Day for nearly a half-century, serving to communicate each year's goals, values and aspirations, to all America.

The vibrant charaeter of American motherhood, and the dynamic interaction between modern mothers and their children flows with energy and realism from the photo-picture with disarming charm, reminding all America of the date of Mother's Day and its meaning to today's busy, self-assured parents.

Ms. Lunden was a 1982 Outstanding Mother, and received her OMA Award at the Fourth Annual Awards Presentations last April. She is also the mother of a new born child, now just two months old.

Any teenager can make this brunch for Mom on her day

Give mom the gift she's always wanted—freedom from work on Mother's Day!

Let her be the guest of honor at a special brunch, so easy any teenager can put it together without slip-ups. It not only shows her you love her, it proves you can come up with a great-tasting dinner, as well (don't be surprised if she asks you for your recipes).

YOU DID IT—and mom will be amazed when you serve this Mother's Day brunch. The impressive Ham Loaf With "Love" Apples is far easier than it looks, and Cinnamon Berry Muffins are ready in no time when you use corn muffin mix and whole berry cranberry sauce.

Mouthwatering surprise

You can't be blamed for a bit of self-satisfaction when you bring the main dish to the brunch table. Ham Loaf with "Love" Apples is, frankly, something of a triumph—worthy of cooks with a lot more experience.

The steaming hot loaf, made with ground smoked ham, is served with a delicious sauce featuring cranberry apple drink, and surrounded by edible cut-out hearts.

Did you actually do this all by yourself? Absolutely—all it takes to make those clever decorations is apples and a couple of cookie cutters.

Easy and delicious

Cinnamon Berry Muffins are a cinch to make too. Just spice up the corn muffin mix with cinnamon, then add the tangy bite of whole berry cranberry sauce, a little milk and an egg.

Mom will be amazed. Just smile, and tell her there's really nothing to it.

HAM LOAF WITH "LOVE" APPLES

- 2 pounds ground smoked ham
- 2 large eggs
- 1 cup packaged plain bread crumbs
- ½ cup milk
- 2 tablespoons instant minced onion
- 1½ teaspoons dry mustard
- ½ cup sugar
- 4 teaspoons cornstarch
- 1½ cups Ocean Spray Cranberry Apple Drink
- 4 large green cooking apples (2 pounds)

Preheat oven to 350°F. Generously grease a 9×5×3-inch loaf pan using shortening or margarine. In a large bowl, combine ham, eggs, bread crumbs, milk, onion and mustard; press mixture lightly into loaf pan. Bake 50 minutes or until firm.

Meanwhile, in a medium saucepan, combine sugar and cornstarch. Gradually stir in cranberry apple drink until smooth. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until sauce boils; boil 1 minute. Remove from heat.

Core apples; do not peel. Cut apples crosswise into 4 or 5 slices. With a 2- or 2¼-inch heart-shaped cutter, cut apple slices into hearts. Using a 1-inch heart-shaped cutter, cut out the core of each slice.

Add apple slices to sauce. Reheat sauce with "love" apples just until apples are softened. When ham loaf is done, loosen from sides of pan; unmold onto platter.

With a slotted spoon, spoon apples on top and around ham loaf; serve sauce separately. Garnish platter with parsley, if you wish.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

CINNAMON BERRY MUFFINS

- 1 package (12 ounces) corn muffin mix
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 can (8 ounces) whole berry cranberry sauce
- ½ cup milk
- 1 large egg

Preheat oven to 400°F. Line 12 muffin-pan cups with fluted paper cups. In a large bowl, combine corn muffin mix and cinnamon. In a small bowl, combine whole berry cranberry sauce, milk and egg; stir into muffin mix.

Spoon into muffin cups.

"Uptight dressing" is out

There was a time when mother came down to make the family breakfast corseted and skirted formidable and formal looking.

Seventy-five years later—and you've come a long way mothers! You deserve your new-found freedom and comfort.

Today's mother, as likely as not, dashes into the kitchen in slacks and a bright looking top (shirt, blouse, sweater, velour pullover), and organizes the family for its first meal of the day with the efficiency that she shows in planning her day at the office or factory.

Her new mode of life demands a new mode of dressing. And mothers have set their own pace. Chic and smart. Practical and useful. Colorful and striking. These are the clothes for today's mothers. Start with tops. A "preppie" shirt or something soft and frilly. Or tailored to say that the wearer "means business."

Of course, solid colors are both "safe" and compatible with just about anything. But then, there are fresh and bright plaids, stripes, checks, even figured prints.

A common denominator of most of today's shirts and blouses is easy-care, wash and wear: a labor saving "extra" that any mother will appreciate—whether her job is in or out of the home.

To team up with the tops, your imagination can run riot through a choice of slacks and jeans that's almost endless.

Denim is still an odds on favorite, both for wearing around the house and garden, for shopping expeditions, and not infrequently seen with the designers' cachet, in the "best places."

But slacks don't start or stop with denim. The new polyester and cotton poplins are now front and center favorites, and come in a whole range of pastel and deeper colors. For warmer wear, there's durable corduroy. And for dress, blended clothes in gabardine and poplins add that touch of class for special events.

If she's also into skirts, your selection is just as large. The idea of separates solves so many mix and match problems, for the giver and the getter, you'd have a hard time doing better in selecting your Mother's Day gift.

Where to buy? Probably just around the corner. Any good specialty shop or department store will show you a choice that'll literally "blow your mind." If you want certainty with panache, today's casual clothes, for active and other mothers, are the answer to every question.

Less housework for more working moms

If ever less work for mother around the house had application, this is the decade when it is most pertinent. And it will get progressively more so. Whether mother works only at home, or divides her time between home and a job outside, making her housework easier is where it's been at for years.

Enter the modern, labor saving device that's been taking more and more drudgery out of homemaking for nearly a half-century.

Kitchen helpers

The labor saving appliance for your mother may be as simple as an electric can opener or electric knife-sharpener. Or it can take the sky's the limit route and end up with a fanciful food processor, a microwave oven that cooks and bakes in minutes, or an exotic espresso coffee maker!

According to recent studies on gift behavior and attitudes of the American consumer, one of the favorite Mother's Day gift options was labor saving appliances. And with new products coming onto the market almost daily, made ever more sophisticated by electronic wizardry, your only limitations are your imagination and your pocket book.

Long time favorites have been waffle makers and electric mixers. More recently the automatic coffee makers have loomed large, along with devices that take a lot of the labor out of gourmet food preparation.

If you really have some excess cash, there are an amazing number of major appliances from computerized radar ranges through computer intelligent electric washing machines and dryers.

Consider mom's lifestyle

Since about 75 percent of the women in the country will be out working a decade from now, there can be no wiser investment in your mother's happiness than something to save her strength at home, so she can bring more bacon home from the workplace. (Even today, 75 percent of divorced and/or widowed women are working in the market.)

Perhaps today's appliances are a centuries far cry from those 75 years ago when the first Mother's Day was celebrated, but this is a different world in everything from the size of families, to the roles of modern mother, to the impact that mothers have on the world we live in.

If you would like to pick the right work saving appliance for your mother this year, stop to consider her way of life, her new responsibilities, her goals and aspirations. Then you can't help but make a wise selection from the vast array of house and kitchen "gadgets" designed to take the "woe out of work."

Tick them off. A toaster that bakes and broils. A stove with an oven that really cleans itself. A blender that doubles as a food processor—literally the heart of an up-to-date kitchen. Disposable pots and pans and cups and glasses. Convection ovens that perform their own magic. And the list goes on and on.

Mother's homelife never need be the same again—thank goodness!

Intimate apparel — the perfect gift for mom's leisure hours

Underneath that firm facade of organization and measured discipline lies a soft and intimate quality that is the "gift" of being a mother. And intimacy is so often best expressed as a gift to heighten the luxury of her few leisure hours when she can just sit back and r-e-l-a-x.

Tops the list

At the top of many a Mother's Day "Wish List" or "Gift List" is an item of intimate apparel. Something to intensify, with a touch of luxury, the joy of literally "doing nothing."

A sophisticated negligee gown or a cuddly warm robe is just the place to start. Then, underneath it all, a filmy nightdress, a little daring or seductive, but so exciting in the privacy of her own little world of fantasy.

But today's intimate apparel rises above and beyond the frills, tucks and laces of traditional styling. All sorts of loungewear, often as at home on the porch or patio as in the bedroom, is commanding attention.

To the busy mother, involved with her job or her civic projects, slipping into something comfortable at the end of the day might just mean a sporty-looking slacks and top combination. Or smartly styled pajamas, with a flair for leisurely living.

You can make your selections from such a vast array of colors as to put Joseph's coat to shame! And as for fabrics, just about anything you pick is spelled "easy care." Modern blends, with the touch and handle of the finest silks, drip-dry to perfection, stand up in use, shed wrinkles even when being worn and their luxury gives a sense of your love and appreciation.

Silken luxury

Of course, there is always real silk if your love doesn't have to be tempered by economic reality. Silk is it—but silk costs money...lots of it! Let her lifestyle be your guide.

If she's employed outside the home, even part-time, make your gift something that's intimately understanding of how she has to make the most of "off-duty hours." That means combining practicality with leisure luxury.

If she's lucky (or unlucky enough) not to have pervasive outside interests, give her something in which to fantasize away her hours out of the kitchen or away from the dust mop.

MOM DESERVES THE BEST—For active moms there are easy gifts for Mother's Day. Whether she likes playing tennis, prefers to jog or simply likes to dress comfortably around the house, a pair of adidas shoes or a Comfort-Fiber® fleece warmup suit are sure to make her happy. The adidas Lady Oregon with its unique web for better cushioning will make her morning run a less shocking experience. For the ultimate in convenience and comfort on the tennis court, consider the adidas Barbara, a leather tennis shoe with velcro® straps replacing conventional lacing. There is hardly a better way to score love.

MAKE THIS MOTHER'S DAY as special as she is with a gift of a stunning Seiko quartz watch. She certainly would enjoy adding this new Seiko ultra-thin dress quartz watch to her fine jewelry collection. It features a gold tone case, white dial punctuated by a bold Roman numeral "XII" and an elegant gold tone bracelet. It's a gift she'll treasure for years to come.

Mother's Day help for teens: How to buy gifts for two moms

Every Mother's Day you probably struggle to find an extra-special gift to give mom to help show how much she's loved and appreciated all year long. And there's no doubt that searching for that "perfect" gift can put a strain on your creativity and energy, not to mention your budget!

Wouldn't it be wonderful if someone made things easier for you this year by offering a list of unique and economical gift ideas? It's not just wishful thinking because that's exactly what we've done here.

In fact, these gift suggestions will make things so easy, you may be inspired to add a second mom to your shopping list!

Remember his mother

Who's a perfect candidate to honor as a "second" mother? Well, if you've been dating and are developing a friendship with your steady's mother, it would be an especially thoughtful gesture to remember his mom on Mother's Day.

Both mother and son will think you're wonderful for it, and you'll show you appreciate all the times she loaned him the car for dates, answered your phone calls and took your messages, fixed you a special snack or just made you feel at home.

Or, if you've been living away from home at school, perhaps you'd like to select something special for a girlfriend's mother who lives nearby and has acted as a kind of "substitute" mom to you.

She's listened to your troubles, made you home-cooked meals and invited you for overnight visits. She certainly deserves a Mother's Day treat.

Now that you're shopping for "two," you'll need double the imagination but not necessarily double the budget. Just as we promised, here are gift ideas that will make a hit with every mom without taxing your pocketbook.

• Food for thought: Present your mom with all the makings of a "coffee break"—a personalized mug, a jar of her favorite jam for toast or croissants and a pound of freshly ground coffee.

Choose an exotic blend of bean such as French mocha or Italian espresso, and give the trio of gifts in a small colorful canvas bag.

They say the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, and that may be true for your beau's mom, too. You're sure to impress her with your thoughtfulness if you give something you baked yourself.

A special spice cake or a few dozen oatmeal raisin cookies packaged in a pretty reusable tin tied with ribbons will really be appreciated.

• In the kitchen: Here's an original gift for any mom who enjoys spending time in the kitchen creating masterful meals. Select an array of kitchen utensils or gadgets such as a whisk, garlic press, ice cream scoop, etc., and arrange them in a flat wicker basket (which can later be used as a bread basket) adorned with a big, bright bow.

As a true "one-of-a-kind" present for your friend's mom, choose a colorful chef's apron and stencil her initials on it. You might want to be very creative—and amusing—by stenciling a clever saying on the apron that has a personal meaning for your "substitute" mom.

• Pamper her: Give mom a special present she may not normally splurge on for herself. A gift certificate for a manicure or pedicure at a local beauty salon is a perfect way to pamper her. She'll find the treatment luxurious, and you'll find it affordable.

A gift of fragrance is always a sure bet. This Mother's Day, Jean Nate—that wonderful, citrusy scent everybody loves—has put together a lovely duo called Splash 'n Talc. It's their very popular After Bath Splash and Perfumed Talc packaged in a sunny yellow box ready for giving and guaranteed to please anyone's mom!

Splash 'n Talc is a $6.75 value but, because the talc is included as a free bonus, it will only cost you $4.50.

• Bathing beauty: If your mom does everything in a "big" way for you—why not return the sentiment by giving her a selection of "larger-than-life" bath accessories. An extra-large, extra-velvety terry bath sheet in her favorite color will put her in seventh heaven.

The "piece de resistance" is to give mom a "magnum" of Jean Nate After Bath Splash. The 32-ounce bottle is only $9.95! And that Jean Nate scent will give her an energizing, refreshing feeling every time she uses it.

• Around the house: If his mom has a green thumb you might consider creating a gardening "essentials" kit for her—miniature shovel, hoe and spade in a colorful watering can tied with green streamers. Or, choose a packet of bulbs or seeds and a special flower pot in which they can be planted.

A welcome present

For your mom, a gift subscription to a home decorating magazine will be a welcome change-of-pace present. Most publishing houses will offer you a discount off the regular newsstand price on a year's gift subscription. And mom will think of you with the arrival of each issue.

This Mother's Day, show your mom just how much she really matters. And show that special "second" mom you care, too—she'll be surprised...and delighted!

EVERY MOTHER'S DAY you show mom how much she's loved all year long. This year, the makers of Jean Nate offer such wonderfully economical gift suggestions, you may be inspired to add a "second" mom to your shopping list— your steady's or best friend's mother.

Mothers on the move are sure to love practical gift of luggage

For those mothers who are on the move, "move" them with a gift of luggage. But, luggage in the broadest sense, which embraces everything from a shoulder bag, soft and expandable, to a hanging case for dresses, suits and pockets for incidentals.

The new soft-side luggage has taken the American traveller by storm. Not only is it light in weight (not an inconsiderable asset in these days from flying from city to city, and "toting your own"), but very colorful and fashionable.

most trips demand social amenities, luggage that "travels well" enjoys a high premium.

For mothers who like it tough and resilient, there are new kinds of hard-side luggage, made of molded, lighter weight materials, that not only carry a wardrobe, but that can take punishment that only a baggage handler can manage.

Can't you see the light in your mother's eyes when you give her a new set of handsome luggage, just in time for this year's vacation! (Vacations are barely a month or two away, so what

MOTHER'S LITTLE HELPER—Time saving appliances such as Black & Decker's versatile new Scrub Brusher are practical Mother's Day gifts that take the "grunt" work out of unpleasant chores. This hand-held cordless scrubber operates wet or dry with 30 minutes of power and comes with its own recharger base. As an added bonus, it's light enough so that children can pitch in with the housework—the best present of all on mom's special day.

Career or motherhood? That is the question!

Some mothers are able to combine careers and motherhood. Some are single mothers—they have little choice. Some mothers pitch in when their husbands just don't earn enough to support their families.

But many mothers, especially professional ones, are discovering the inherent problems of trying to manage the demands of full-time jobs and motherhood. The costs to careers, children involved, even marriage itself, have not yet been fully assessed. But there is a lot of re-evaluation going on.

Some career mothers (and to them, Mother's Day is of all consuming importance) are giving up careers, at least temporarily. Others have found a solution in reducing the number of work hours.

More and more women—career women—have deferred motherhood until they are past 30. That's why nearly 50 percent of the married women with preschool children are employed. And about 90 percent of them have children under three-years-old.

The career mother, pity her, is under real stress. There just isn't enough time. Days off are spent at the washing machine or in shopping for food for the family. Their problems affect both their home life and their productivity in the market place.

We have still to shake off our ages old concept that women are essentially responsible for running the household—and admittedly, they are tops at that. But the pressure of mothering, wifing and working creates "superhuman stresses"—and not everyone can make it.

Here's where the role of a modern father is critical to the balancing act—motherhood and career and wife. Father is no longer a remote disciplinarian. Young fathers are taking a more active role in raising the children, even to changing their work schedules to accommodate the needs and goals of a career wife.

Our recognition of the "right" of a woman, a mother, to hold a responsible outside job, while undertaking a family management program, is barely a decade old. But we're coping. Career mothers are coping. And somehow, we'll find a reasonable balance in the years before the close of this century.

Turn the tables on mom with special meal and a good book

Few things please most families more than a delicious home-cooked meal. That generally means a favorite recipe cooked by mom...something the family enjoys, but too often takes for granted.

Mother's Day is the perfect occasion for turning the tables on mom to thank her for all her creative and hard work in the kitchen. She's sure to enjoy a relaxing meal cooked by others in her family.

Then, when she offers her compliments to the chef, give her a second surprise—the gift of a super new cookbook full of easy, interesting recipes like the one she's just enjoyed.

One book that fills that bill is "Cooking With Cornelius: The Corning Cookbook," a 200-recipe collection of just plain good cooking easily done at the end of a busy day... and what mom's day isn't busy!

Here's a sample (and simple) recipe to delight mom—and the rest of the family, too—on Mother's Day or any other busy day. It's a quick-and-easy...

CHICKEN-WALNUT SAUTÉ

- 2 whole chicken breasts, boneless and skinless
- 3 tablespoons vegetable or corn oil
- 3 to 4 green onions, chopped
- 2 medium stalks celery, chopped
- 1 tablespoon butter
- ¾ cup coarsely broken walnuts
- 1 teaspoon finely chopped lemon peel (yellow part only)
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice

Cut chicken breasts into bite-size pieces. Heat oil in a 10-inch Rangetoppers skillet over moderate heat until sizzling hot. Add chicken, green onion and celery. Stir quickly until chicken just loses its raw color.

Add butter, nuts and lemon peel. Continue to cook, uncovered, for a few minutes, stirring often until chicken is cooked. Turn off heat.

Add soy sauce and lemon juice and stir until chicken and vegetables are well-coated with sauce. Serve at once with rice.

Computer mothers keep pace

It's even been said that we've not been in a "recession" as much as in a period of revolutionary change.

And the home-computer, it seems, is at the root of all that good—or evil.

If you've one of those upbeat, "with-it" mothers who has an avant garde lifestyle that keeps her a couple of steps ahead of the Joneses, chances are that she'd really "flip" over a new personal computer that takes all of the drudgery out of keeping the household finances, filing favorite recipes, and then adds fun and games for leisure hours.

Sure, they're still "pricey" but, they are the wave of the future. And whether you think so or not, she (and you) will be using one before the decade is out.

You could give her a real headstart on the future with a computer keyboard, now priced below $100.

GIVE EXTRA COUNTERSPACE: The unique design of General Electric Spacemaker™ Can Opener helps eliminate countertop clutter. The can opener mounts under the kitchen cabinet with an easy-to-install bracket.

Space-saving can opener makes an ideal present

Every good cook deserves extra kitchen counterspace. Even a few inches can help.

Today, functional and decorative kitchen tools—from hanging copper pots to digital drip coffeemakers—make beating the counterspace squeeze more difficult than ever.

However, a unique idea in can openers from General Electric gets at least one often-used appliance off the countertop. The Spacemaker™ Can Opener mounts under the kitchen cabinet with an easy-to-install bracket. In addition to tall cans, Spacemaker™ Can Opener opens bottles and plastic bags.

The user simply positions the can, starts the opener, then lets go. The unique piercing system easily penetrates lids, and the powerful motor provides fast cutting action.

The opener automatically shuts off when the lid is cut and holds onto both the lid and can until user releases them. The cutter and magnet lift off for cleaning in the sink or dishwasher.

The can opener is yet another General Electric space-saving appliance; the first was the GE Spacemaker™ Microwave Oven.

The GE Spacemaker™ Can Opener gives your favorite cook the gift of extra counterspace. Suggested retail price $31.98.

THE ULTIMATE MOTHER'S DAY gift is created by Farr-West. An elegant twosome, the camisole and petti-slip frame white Venetian lace on soft satin. This duo makes a beautiful as well as practical gift, in shimmering, easycare "Qiana" fabric.

Remember mom with card or letter

Miss Jarvis didn't conceive of Mother's Day as a special gift occasion. That was an "invention" of all American sons and daughters, out of devotion and love for their mothers.

Indeed, Miss Jarvis' idea of recognition on Mother's Day was a personal note or letter, expressing love and respect.

That tradition is now carried on through the Mother's Day greeting card, a great deal more sophisticated, but every bit as meaningful and important.

So much so that fully 91 percent of all of the people in a survey conducted by the Mother's Day Council replied that they always or sometimes send Mother's Day greeting cards. (That's compared with Christmas cards where the incidence of sending is 93 percent—after a near 2,000-year headstart!)

Greeting cards can be serious, nostalgic, and traditional expressions of love and devotion. Or they can be equally meaningful if they are contemporary, humorous, or simply stated messages of love.

When you send your Mother's Day cards this year (and you can find a fine assortment in a couple of stores on every block), be sure that you pen in a personal note that best expresses your own brand of love for your mother. It takes just a minute. Costs no more, and really makes your greetings very personal.

Best of all, this remarkably sentimental form of remembrance costs less than a dollar, postage included! And chances are, nothing mother gets will be more appreciated than the fact that you thought of, and for her.

Perhaps that's why something like 125,000 of Mother's Day greeting cards will swamp our postal service between May 1st and 8th. And by the way, if you forget to post your greetings in time for certain delivery by Mother's Day, you can always buy and deliver your greeting card on Mother's Day.

Mother's Day celebrates its diamond anniversary in 1983

Though mothers have been "mothering" since the Creation, Mother's Day, which honors their selfless dedication, is celebrating its 75th anniversary on May 8th!

It seems that the world took a long time to get around to paying just homage, but the very fact is that Mother's Day grew from an idea into a National Holiday in a matter of just six years! Today, Mother's Day is so widely observed, and so deeply loved, that it is participated in by over 95% of all Americans!

Miss Anna Reeves Jarvis, still mourning the passing of her own mother a year after her death in 1906, first told friends of her concept for a Mother's Day, in honor of her mother and all mothers.

That was in Philadelphia, her adopted home. It wasn't long before she won the endorcement and support of civic leaders, chief among whom was John Wanamaker, the Philadelphia merchant-tycoon.

With his support, and that of religious and civic organizations, Mother's Day became a reality in 1908.

The first Mother's Day was unsophisticated and simple, expressed through a sermon preached in Grafton, West Virginia, in a small church attended by the Jarvis family when they were living in the area.

By 1910, just two years later, Gov. William E. Glasman of West Virginia gave Mother's Day its first official recognition by proclaiming it a state holiday.

So popular was the observance that it soon transcended local and even state boundaries. By 1913, Congress, in a Joint Resolution, made Mother's Day a national holiday, to be observed the second Sunday of every May—on the anniversary of Miss Jarvis' mother's death.

The Joint Resolution was signed into law by President Wilson, who then issued the first Mother's Day proclamation in 1914, designating that Mother's Day be "celebrated in the United States and all its possessions." The rest of Miss Jarvis' life, until her death in 1948, was dedicated to enhancing the importance of Mother's Day, and "policing" the manner in which it would be observed.

So complete was her devotion to the cause that in later years, the concept grew into an obsession which finally distorted her view of the holiday she had "mothered." Miss Jarvis' idea was for a Mother's Day marked by a simple letter of appreciation and perhaps a bouquet of wild flowers, picked from a profusion that blanketed the West Virginia countryside in early May.

And of course, a visit to mother (a very realistic ritual 75 years ago, when families lived in closer proximity to each other than is true today).

But Americans, as is their wont, built on the idea of honoring mother, and substituted greeting cards for letters; gifts of all kinds instead of wild flowers (the floral tributes remain an important remembrance option).

And, of course, a telephone call to mother is a "must"—Mother's Day is one of the telephone's busiest, probably only exceeded by Christmas.

To make mother feel like the "queen" she is, taking her out to dinner is a noble form of remembrance.

By the time Miss Jarvis died in 1948, her homely and humble idea of a Mother's Day had reached international acceptance, highly revered all through the western world.

As we move into the mid-80's, the significance of taking a respite from our computerized lives to tell our mothers that we haven't forgotten, is meaningful to both mother and her children—be they young or old.

Nearly a century after that first Mother's Day sermon, that little church in Grafton, West Virginia, stands as a symbol to all the world that mother was, is, and always will be the motivating force in our society. Nationalized in 1962, that little church is now a living shrine, maintained through public contributions, in commemoration of the American mother and her role in our way of life.

Thoroughly modern mom: a sheer wonder

Moms have certainly changed a lot since Mother's Day became a national holiday in 1912. But our desire to honor mom hasn't changed one bit.

Your mom may be a high-powered corporate executive, a secretary, a ballet dancer, or the traditional full-time homemaker. But whatever kind of career she has, or hobbies and clubs she participates in, you can be sure that the mom who gets a special thank you on Mother's Day puts her family first.

The 1983 mom is often expected to be a "wonder-woman." She probably has to juggle dozens of responsibilities every single day and begins giving her all as soon as she wakes in the morning, not quitting until she falls asleep at night.

With all that running around, what better Mother's Day present could there be than pantyhose that help active legs feel livelier longer. The ingredient that creates this long-lasting magic is Lycra®, from Du Pont.

Combined with natural or man-made fibers it adds flexibility and resiliency to the pantyhose without sacrificing the sheerness that makes all legs look more glamorous.

The Du Pont company has been working for years with top fashion designers to perfect the formula for beautiful, sleek-fitting and inexpensive legwear.

So give your mom a gift that will make her feel like the lady with "the million dollar legs." Fashion pantyhose with Lycra® are available in stores throughout the country in all the exciting new accent colors and textures of the season.

They'll make her feel special all over.

Serve Sliced Steak "Reine" as tasty Mother's Day tribute

Sliced steak is what all outstanding mothers enjoy most on their "big" day. And the rest of the family usually agrees.

The National Mother's Day Committee selected sliced beef to serve at the Annual Outstanding Mother Awards Luncheon in New York.

"Sliced Steak Reine" is sherry-marinated top round steak, broiled to perfection.

The recipe was specially developed for the Awards Luncheon in the test kitchens of the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

SLICED STEAK REINE

1 beef top round steak, cut ¾ inches thick
½ cup sherry
½ cup soy sauce
¼ cup salad oil
¼ cup lemon juice
2 tablespoons brown sugar
½ teaspoon ginger
1 clove garlic, minced
⅛ teaspoon hot sauce
4 teaspoons cornstarch
½ pound mushrooms, sliced
¼ cup sliced green onions

Mix together sherry, soy sauce, oil, lemon juice, brown sugar, ginger, garlic and hot sauce in small saucepan. Cook slowly ten minutes; cool. Place steak in plastic bag, add marinade and tie securely. Refrigerate 24 hours.

Remove steak from marinade, reserving marinade, and place on grill over ash-covered coals or on rack in broiling pan so surface of meat is 4 to 5 inches from heat.

Broil at moderate temperature to rare or medium (25 to 40 minutes, depending on doneness desired), brushing with marinade and turning occasionally. Carve in thin slices, diagonally across the grain.

Sauce: Stir remaining marinade into cornstarch in saucepan and cook slowly until thickened, 2 minutes. Serve sauce over sliced steak. 10 servings.

A MOTHER OF TWO-WEEK OLD TWINS would especially welcome a Kodak disc 6000 camera as a gift. Even a beginning photographer will find the camera easy to use. It automatically sets the exposure, fires a built-in electronic flash if needed and then advances the film for the next picture. And the camera is so easy to keep handy for capturing babies' precious moments because it's small enough to fit into a shirt pocket. It also has a built-in close-up feature that allows pictures to be taken as close as 18 inches from a subject.
