Panhandle Veterans Hall of Fame lists first inductees

By BETH MILLER
Staff Writer

Four people will be inducted into the Panhandle Veterans Hall of Fame during a banquet Aug. 17 at the M.K. Brown Auditorium.

The four were chosen from 12 names submitted for the honor of being the first veterans inducted to the Hall of Fame. The first to be honored are James W. Hart, Robert L. Hite, Bob Izzard, and Jack H. Osborne.

"This is the beginning of a process intended to honor area veterans who have distinguished themselves both in military life as well as civilian life," said John Tripplehorn, president of the Pampa Army Air Field/Veterans of Foreign Wars Museum Inc.

The banquet is to begin at 7 p.m. with after dinner speaker Ben Burton of Hot Springs, Ark., providing the entertainment. All proceeds from ticket sales go toward the construction of the museum, which will be located at Memorial Park.

Tripplehorn said the induction of people into the Hall of Fame and the banquet are to be annual events with those eligible for nomination coming from the entire Texas Panhandle and those individuals who served at the Pampa Army Air Field during World War II.

Thelma Bray, chairman of the Hall of Fame banquet, said Friday that the three living members to be inducted — Hart, Hite and Izzard — will all be present at the banquet.

"This is a special occasion and they are very excited," Bray said.

Following is information provided by the people who nominated the four Hall of Fame inductees.

JAMES W. HART

Master Sgt. James W. Hart was born July 27, 1926, in Olney. When he was four years old, he moved with his family to Pampa. With the exception of 16 years spent in Stillwater, Okla., Hart has lived in Pampa his entire life.

A week after his 18th birthday, he joined the Army. On Aug. 15, 1944, he was sent to Fort Hood for 17 weeks of infantry basic training. On Dec. 19, 1944, he passed under the Golden Gate Bridge on a ship bound for the island of Leyte in the Philippine Islands.

He was in the Fifth Regiment of the First Cavalry Division, which moved through southern Luzon, P.I., and was secured July 25, 1945. Japan surrendered unconditionally while the First Cavalry Division was en route to make an amphibious landing on Honshu. Hart remained in Japan for almost a year with the occupation forces.

Hart went home in September 1946. Of his 27 months in the Army, 20 months were spent overseas. He was discharged as a staff sergeant in October 1946 and had received the following awards: Bronze Star, Good Conduct Medal, National Defense Service Medal, Army of Occupation Medal (Japan), Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal with two Bronze Stars, World War II Victory

Jack H. Osborne

Medal, and Combat Infantry Badge.

Hart remained with the Army Reserves and was called back to active duty in October 1950 to serve in the Korean War. He again passed under the Golden Gate Bridge on Dec. 15, 1950. He was assigned to Fox Company, Fifth Regimental Combat Team, attached to the 24th Division. He went into combat immediately.

On Feb. 13, 1951, his unit was involved in a campaign called "Operation Killer." There were more than 650 casualties in Fox Company from Feb. 13 to April 25. Hart was promoted from squad leader to first sergeant during this time.

On April 21, the Chinese launched their "Spring Offensive." Hart was at the Command Post when radio transmissions indicated the offensive had started. The Command Post began receiving shells from Chinese who penetrated the lines. Hart went to the battalion ammunition depot and loaded a jeep and trailer with ammunition and headed for the front, about 10 miles north.

Though this was not his responsibility, he traveled to the front line of Fox Company. At 10 p.m. when he arrived, he found the Company surrounded and involved in fighting. He and six men with him opened fire on the Chinese and were engaged in battle until about 2 a.m.

Twenty-two hours later, Hart was captured.

Being captured was his greatest fear. Yet, when it happened, he was amused at the fear of the Chinese soldier who was trembling as he pointed a rifle at Hart. He was interrogated for about eight hours and after refusing to cooperate was put with a few other American prisoners. Their number grew to 400 and they were confined in a place the prisoners named Peaceful Valley.

James W. Hart

They were fed a gruel consisting of sorghum grain and water twice daily. They began a march on May 19 that ended June 19 at a destination 425 miles away in Chong-Song, North Korea. During the march, many prisoners died, and others weakened. About 20 men per day were buried after the arrival at Chong-Song.

At the end of the hostilities, Hart was liberated in the exchange of prisoners. He was returned to the Americans on Sept. 5, 1953. This was the next to last day of the prisoner exchange.

Bush weighs options in Iraq situation

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush huddled Saturday with senior advisers to devise a strategy for pushing Iraqi occupation forces out of Kuwait, while an Iraqi envoy announced that "Kuwaiti authorities" were now in control of the oil-rich nation.

Mohammed Sadiq Mashat, the Iraqi ambassador to the United States, read a government statement reiterating Baghdad's intention to begin withdrawing from Kuwait on Sunday "unless a threat to the security of Kuwait or Iraq has reemerged."

Mashat, speaking at the Iraqi Embassy, also said Iraq will not attack Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter, and he confirmed that 11 of 14 Americans missing in Kuwait had been found, taken to Baghdad and are now free to leave the country.

The ambassador declined to elaborate on the Americans' plight.

Mashat said the troop withdrawal was deemed possible because order had been restored.

"The situation in Kuwait is back to normal," he said. "Security and stability are maintained for all the population — indigenous and resident. Kuwaiti authorities are consolidating their control over all aspects of life in Kuwait."

The Bush administration has expressed doubts about Iraq's pledge, first delivered on Friday, to begin withdrawing its invasion force from Kuwait on Sunday.

"I assure you he does not intend to withdraw," said Nasir Al-Sabah, the Kuwaiti ambassador, told reporters at a news conference shortly after the Iraqi ambassador spoke in Washington.

"They (Iraqi forces) have already dug in. They have already dug in the south, along the Saudi border, they have dug in our country deeply. They have taken over the central bank. They have ransacked all the banks in Kuwait, all the institutions. They have even gone to the low of going into houses and taking private property."

Al-Sabah, a member of Kuwait's ruling family, said the Iraqi forces have "conducted themselves in a way that no other occupying force has."

He said he interpreted during a telephone conversation earlier Saturday between Bush and the Emir of Kuwait, but declined to disclose what was said. He said the Kuwaiti embassy in Washington also facilitated a letter exchange between Bush and the exiled leader.

Although he had called earlier for military intervention from the United States, Al-Sabah said Saturday that he was grateful for economic and diplomatic sanctions arranged by the United States.

The question of military assistance, he said, is a "decision (that) has to be made by the administration according to their readiness and their policy making. The bottom line is we are pleased the United States is moving and cultivating the whole world behind it."

Bush met for two hours with Vice President Dan Quayle and the president's top military and national security aides at his Camp David, Md., mountain retreat to consider possible U.S. actions and to monitor reports on Iraqi troop movements.

A White House statement issued after the meeting said three key U.S. allies — Japan, West Germany and France — had decided to join the United States in freezing Kuwaiti assets in order to stop Iraq from confiscating them.

In all, 11 nations have frozen Kuwaiti assets. The actions take aim at Kuwaiti government investments that amount to as much as $100 billion and that include massive holdings of U.S. government securities, chains of gasoline stations across Europe, an American oil services company and stakes in other major corporations.

Also on Saturday, the 12-nation European Community agreed to ban imports of Iraqi oil, freeze Kuwaiti assets and halt arms sales to Iraq. The United States banned imports of Iraqi oil on Thursday and Bush has encouraged others to do the same.

Marlin Fitzwater, the White House press secretary, indicated in a statement on the Camp David meeting that Bush was keeping open the possibility of resorting to military force to compel Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to withdraw from Kuwait.

"We continue to seek the immediate, complete and unconditional withdrawal of Iraqi forces from Kuwait and restoration of the legitimate government of Kuwait," Fitzwater said. "As we have stated before, all U.S. options are under consideration."

Fitzwater said the White House had no information on missing Americans in Kuwait.

Iraq announced on Friday that its troops would begin withdrawing from Kuwait on Sunday, but that the Kuwait royal family would not be allowed to return.

Oil from barge spill oozes into marshlands

BEACH CITY (AP) — Oil oozed into sensitive marshlands on the north end of Galveston Bay, while fishing resumed Saturday in parts of the bay where up to 700,000 gallons of oil spilled from a damaged barge.

Cleanup crews used vacuum trucks to suck up the oily mess, which has washed up along an estimated seven-mile stretch of Houston Point. The oil has struck marshes and some residential property in the area.

"That's our new spot. It's a good-size area," Coast Guard Petty Officer Dennis Schaefer said. Environmentalists were concerned about wildlife living in the marshlands, and there were reports of at least two oil-soiled birds. Workers used noise makers in areas where the oil has washed ashore in an effort to keep birds from landing in the gooey mess.

Coast Guard officials, however, said they had not yet heard of any wildlife being injured by the oil along Houston Point.

"There is wildlife up there, but we've had no reports yet of oiled birds. But we do expect that," Schaefer said.

Booms were placed along parts of the shoreline, trapping some of the oil so it can be cleaned up and stopping new crude from washing ashore, the Coast Guard said.

Although the crude had struck several beaches earlier this week, new oil was reported Friday morning along Houston Point — an area of land on the north end of the bay between the Houston Ship Channel and Trinity Bay.

Schaefer said Coast Guard officials also were considering using oil-eating microbes on parts of Houston Point, but he did not know when a decision would be made.

State officials dumped the microbes on a 400-yard stretch of beach on Pelican Island Thursday, but results weren't expected for several weeks.

Between 500,000 and 700,000 gallons of oil spilled into Galveston Bay when a tanker collided with two barges July 28 in the ship channel, the Coast Guard said.

One of the barges nearly sank, but it has since been raised and moved to shallower waters in the bay. Salvage crews Saturday were considering the possibility of cutting it in half, then moving the pieces out of the bay.

Limited traffic resumed Friday in the ship channel after the barge was moved.

Meanwhile, a ban on all commercial and recreational fishing in the bay was partially lifted at 12:01 a.m. Saturday by the Texas Department of Health. The ban was implemented Thursday.

Texas health officials reopened the bay to fin fishing and limited harvesting of all other aquatic life. But Texas Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein cautioned fishermen and consumers to avoid eating fish tainted with visible oil or fish caught in oily waters.

A federal inquiry panel investigating the cause of the accident also resumed Saturday in Houston.

Police announce rewards awaiting three Crimestoppers informants

Pampa Crimestoppers have three rewards waiting for persons whose tips led to the arrest and indictment of suspected burglars in the city.

Cpl. Dave Wilkinson said rewards are waiting for the informants in burglaries at 326 N. Faulkner, 1112 Terrace and 805 N. Hobart.

A total of $11,350 worth of goods were recovered when the three cases were cracked.

"We have some nice rewards for these people who helped us out," Wilkinson said. "They need to call us, though, to claim them."

The only caller number police have for the three informants is 8177, the informant who helped with the case involving 326 N.

Faulkner.

Wilkinson said "10 to 15" substantial calls are being received by Crimestoppers each month, aiding in the solving of numerous offenses and putting criminals on notice that their associates may turn them in to claim the rewards.

When calling Crimestoppers, Wilkinson said, informants answer as many of the following questions as possible: What crime has been committed? When did it happen? Who did it? Where are they now? Where is evidence that would back up the caller's claims? If merchandise was stolen, where is it? How can police get in touch with the caller discreetly, or, when will the caller re-contact Crimestoppers?

Crimestoppers needs YOU

How can you help stop crime in Pampa? By calling 669-2222 if you know a crime has been committed.

Include the following information:

1. What happened
2. When
3. By whom
4. Evidence
5. Time you will call back

You can take a bite out of crime and claim rewards.

Getting closer

Julia Dawson, left, and Margie Moore, far right, both Pampa High School Class of '44 representatives, accept a $475 donation from Dan Morrison, representing the PHS Class of '75. The donation will be added to the Pampa High School Landscaping Fund to be used towards a major landscape project at the 50-year-old school. Dawkins said the fund has reached $18,464 of its $35,000 goal to date. The class sponsoring the project hopes to have the landscaping completed by the school's 50th anniversary celebration in 1991.

Use of 900 numbers raises questions

DALLAS (AP) — Some small service companies believe the 900 number will someday make even a trip to the doctor as easy as picking up a telephone. But some local phone companies have doubts about the long-distance industry's latest gold rush.

Bob Manley's company, Ciscorp, a small Dallas outfit looking to deliver new kinds of telephone service, is one of about 200 small companies driving the growth of the 900 industry nationwide.

Each one is a service bureau type of organization that develops, markets and manages their own application of the 900 service.

Ciscorp, for example, markets a 900 number where callers can leave a message for Chicago Bears coach Mike Ditka. Callers can try the 900 number again to see if Ditka left a personalized return message.

Other 900 numbers offer a variety of entertainment and information services at pre-set prices ranging from 50 cents to $50 per call. The charges are tacked onto the caller's phone bill at the end of the month.

Introduced by major long-distance companies on a widespread basis last year, 900 service has the potential to transform telephones into a new type of credit card.

To date, local telephone service providers, such as Southwestern Bell, have been gun-shy of the 900 service, which puts them in the role of collecting money for other companies.

"We want to go slow here," said George Murphy, area manager for business service marketing at Southwestern Bell. "We're trying to stay away from a situation where we lose control over what's happening in the 900 industry."

Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Hugh Parmer did battle this week with Southwestern Bell, which refused to collect campaign donations to his 900 number, claiming it has a policy not to collect political contributions.

Parmer took the matter to the Public Utility Commission. Southwestern Bell agreed Friday to resume collecting Parmer's $10 contributions until the PUC rules on the issue.

Others are upset that phone companies will bill for information services but not for products.

Three Texas workers among 11 Americans freed in Kuwait

By ROD RICHARDSON
Associated Press Writer

Three Texas oil field workers missing in Kuwait since the Iraqi invasion were among 11 Americans freed and housed at a Baghdad hotel Saturday, the State Department said.

Marjorie Walterscheid of Jackboro said the State Department told her of her husband's release about 1:30 p.m. Saturday. She said Rainard Walterscheid was alright but that she had not spoken with him.

Edward Hale of Spring near Houston and Gary Carr of Keller, near Fort Worth, were also freed Saturday, an official for OGE Drilling said. Both men are employed by the Houston-based company.

Walterscheid, 52, has worked in oil fields in more than a dozen countries since 1964. He has been assigned to Kuwait since March.

Initially, the State Department had thought 14 Americans were unaccounted for, but an official indicated there may have been only 11.

The State Department was trying to contact relatives of the freed Americans in the United States.

Other missing Texans have been identified as Charles Amos, 59, of Harmony in northeast Texas, Jim and Phyllis Calvin of San Antonio and Kuwait Petroleum Co. worker

Edward Hale

Bobby Parker, 48, of Vidor, near Beaumont.

Hale has been working as a rig supervisor for OGE Drilling since January. His wife, Patricia, said she had planned to join him there soon but has not heard from him since Thursday's invasion.

Mrs. Hale fought back tears Saturday, minutes after receiving a telephone call confirming that her husband was safe at a hotel in Baghdad.

The ordeal has been especially hard on relatives waiting to hear word about the missing workers. "I hadn't had sleep in days," Mrs. Hale said.

"We've been trying to talk to Hale and Carr in Baghdad but the phone's been busy," said W.C. Goins, one of OGE's owners in Houston.

Although things were looking better, not all of the families had received good news by Saturday afternoon.

David Amos told The Associated Press Saturday that his family still had received no word about his father.

"We're still waiting. We're hoping to get that call right now," he said.

Amos has worked for Santa Fe Drilling Co. of California more than 20 years. He and his family have lived in Kuwait, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia and Egypt, said Sarah Amos, Charles' wife.

Parker was scheduled to return home Aug. 10 and a family reunion was planned for the next week.

"Even if we're sitting by the telephone, and watching TV, we're going to have a reunion," said Lynda Parker, the man's wife.

"I think (Thursday) was the hardest," said Parker's son, Clifton Parker. "Mom really broke down. She just sat on the living room floor and cried."

In the Korean War, he served 3 1/2 years, of which 33 months were spent in Korea. He was discharged as a master sergeant. Awards he earned in the Korean War included the Silver Star, Good Conduct Medal, Korean Service Medal with One Bronze Star, Combat Infantry Badge (Second Award), United Nations Service Medal, Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citation Badge, and Prisoner of War Medal.

Since being discharged from the service, he has been a member of the American Legion, D.A.V. (Life Member), Ex-P.O.W. (Life Member), North Central Oklahoma Chapter of Ex-P.O.W. (Was a charter member and served as chapter commander), and Texas Panhandle Chapter of Ex-P.O.W.

ROBERT L. HITE

Col. Robert L. Hite was born March 3, 1920, in Umbarger County and moved to Earth as a small child. He attended West Texas State University in Canyon and enlisted on Sept. 9, 1940, in the Army Air Corp in Lubbock. Hite now lives in Camden, Ark.

He received pilot's wings in 1941 and was one of 80 men who volunteered for a secret mission which culminated in the bombing of Tokyo, Japan, on April 18, 1942. The men were known as the "Tokyo Raiders."

Hite was co-pilot of Plane 16, the last B-25 to take off from the carrier U.S.S. Hornet, and was captured after the raid and held as a prisoner of war by the Japanese, serving 40 months as their prisoner — 36 months in solitary confinement. He subsisted on wormy rice.

Hite is one of the four prisoners freed in the book entitled "Four Came Home."

The men who flew off the carrier had never been on a ship before and had never flown a B-25 in combat.

After his release on Aug. 20, 1945, he continued service as an African instructor. He served a time at Mitchell Field New York, where he was discharged in 1947. He was recalled to duty on March 9, 1951, during the Korean War and discharged in November 1955.

During his service time, Hite received the Distinguished Service

Hemphill Junior Rodeo set for Aug. 10 and 11

CANADIAN — Canadian 4-H Riding Club will sponsor the Hemphill County Junior Rodeo on Friday and Saturday.

Under the direction of Connie Rutherford, riding club sponsor, and Dan Cornett, Hemphill County Extension Agent, the two-day show is open to young people who are 8 through 19 years old.

Contestants will vie for the nightly jackpots along with buckles to be awarded in each age group based upon a two-day average. Awards will be given to the Reserve All-Around in each age group.

Young cowhands ages 8 to 12 compete in breakaway roping, barrel racing, pole bending, goat tail untying, ponies, juniors bulls and adult-youth ribbon roping. Adult-youth ribbon roping points do not count toward the all-around average buckle. Entry fees will be charged plus a stock charge.

Medal, Legion of Merit with cluster, Distinguished Flying Cross with cluster, American-Pacific Distinguished Flying Cross, Purple Heart with Oak Leaf cluster, Japanese-Asian Medal, Chinese Breast Order of Pao Ting, Victory Ribbon Medal, and China, Burma, India Medal.

BOB IZZARD

Bob Izzard was born July 18, 1923, in Urbana, Ill., and moved to Amarillo at six months of age. He attended Amarillo public schools, graduating from Amarillo High School. He attended Amarillo College, West Texas State, Texas Tech and the University of Illinois.

Izzard resides in Amarillo. In September 1942, he enlisted in the U.S. Army Air Corp and graduated as a fighter pilot at Luke Army Air Force Base. He was deployed to England in the winter of 1943-44 with the Ninth Air Force, 371st Fighter Group, 404th Squadron.

On June 8, 1944, Izzard was shot down over German occupied France and walked out 100 days later. He rejoined the group and finished the war in Europe. He flew 150 combat missions, with the majority being close air support. He also flew several escort missions and interdiction missions during his tour.

Izzard was among the first 10 pilots to reach 100 missions without a break. He wears the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal with 14 Oak Leaf Clusters, the Purple Heart, the Presidential Unit Citation, the European Theater of Operations ribbon and six battle stars.

Izzard was the district traffic manager for Pioneer Air Lines 1948-49. His district encompassed Midland-Odessa, Lamesa, Lubbock, Plainview and Amarillo. While he was the manager, Pioneer opened operations in New Mexico and Izzard opened Clovis and Tucuman stations to civilian air service.

He joined KGNC AM-FM on the news department in late 1949. In 1950, he was named news director. He did the first television newscast from Amarillo and became the joint news director for radio and television in 1952.

Izzard's father, Wes Izzard, did the first radio newscast in Amarillo in 1924. He still holds the all time world record for the most consecutive sponsored newscast.

Bob Izzard originated the phrase Golden Spread and during his time with KGNC covered it from Sayre, Okla., to Santa Rosa, N.M., and from Liberal, Kan., to Lubbock. The station was sold in 1968 and Izzard left to join KVII for three years in 1969. He went to KFDD-TV in 1973-75. He joined KTXS-TV in Abilene from 1975 to 1980. He returned to Amarillo in 1981 where he was news director for KPUR-AM until his retirement in 1987.

JACK H. OSBORNE

Lt. Jack Osborne was the New Year's baby in 1923 for Polk and Ola Osborne. He was born on the Osborne Ranch in Roberts County. He died on Dec. 29, 1989.

Through his Miami school years, he participated in 4-H activities and in showing his father's registered Herefords. He participated in football, basketball and boxing. He played saxophone and clarinet in the school band and was the highest ranking boy scholastically in the 1940 class of Miami High School.

He received appointments to West Point and Annapolis Naval Academy, but chose to attend Texas A&M University to study mechanical engineering. In 1942, he joined with a group, "The Plansmen", for active military service. He then began training as a naval torpedo bomber pilot. Upon getting his wings, he married Joan Chambers of Canadian.

Of his World War II experiences, Osborne kept a daily journal. The family was not aware of this until after his death in December. It is a documentary of all the days of his training, various bases, friends and battles.

Osborne, pilot of a Navy avenger torpedo bomber, was awarded the Air Medal for his action during the Saipan campaign during which he made numerous photographic missions over enemy-held positions in the face of concentrated Japanese anti-aircraft fire.

He received the Silver Star for the missions and he also received the Distinguished Flying Cross "for distinguishing himself by heroism and extraordinary achievement in operations against the enemy" while serving aboard the U.S.S. White Plains. He flew his torpedo bomber in a coordinated strafing, bombing and torpedo attack directly against two enemy battleships, one enemy cruiser and one enemy destroyer in the Battle of Samar Island on Oct. 25, 1944.

In addition, Osborne received two unit citations and the Air Medal.

After discharge from the service, Osborne and his wife lived a short time in Amarillo and then moved to Pampa with their two sons, Frank and Michael.

Osborne settled into an agricultural life. He was a member of Southwestern Cattlemen's Association, Khive Shrine of Amarillo, and an active golfer on the Pampa Country Club course.

It's curtains for this husband

After a week of getting situated in our new house, my wife Caryl was about ready to scream. So, being a dutiful husband (scared to death the person she'd scream at would be me), I offered to help with turning the new place into a home.

"We have got to do something about curtains," Caryl told me. "I don't even care what. Just something."

"No problem," I told her, soothing her ruffled feathers. "Leave it to me."

Caryl looked concerned. "The windows are a funny size and we've got to match the comforter and I can't find Disney Baby curtains to go in Sarah's room and ..."

"Consider the new curtains installed," I told her, heading out the door with the window measurements in my hand. "This will be a snap."

On arriving at the place that sold the curtains, there was a "snap" all right. It was my head popping back at the prices.

"Can I help you sir?" asked the sales lady.

"I need curtains."

"If I may be so bold, sir, what you need is your wife here to help you. My experience is that men are not strong enough for this."

Miffed at this female chauvinist pig, I bulldozed my way past her to make my purchase.

"Where are your curtains?" I asked over my shoulder.

"Do you want priscillas, sheers, panels, drapes, swags, tiebacks, tiers, undertiers, valances or bishop sleeves?"

"I want curtains."

"Cafe curtains?"

"No, these are for our house."

"Sir, are you sure you couldn't get your wife to help you with this?"

"I'm giving her the day off."

"Lucky her."

The sales lady then began some bizarre explanation of window fashions. "You can have a valance or a swag, but usually not both and they can go over the tier or the priscilla or you can have a tier or a panel under the priscilla, unless you choose to use drapes and that would mean you would probably want a valance. There are also the scalloped valances that you can put with sink skirts next to your priscillas. Insert tiers look good with priscillas if your valance is just right. So how did you want to do it?"

I stood there trying to figure out why she wanted me to go have scallops with some girl named Priscilla Valance who wore a skirt that was coming off.

Then I figured it out. There are no such thing as curtains. Never has been. Curtains are like honest politicians and the tooth fairy; lots of people talk about them, but they don't really exist.

Armed with that knowledge, I turned and walked out. This was all a scam to get me out of the house and make me think I was being helpful.

We really didn't need curtains because there's no such thing as curtains, unless, of course, you own a cafe.

When I got home, my wife wanted to know where the curtains were.

"In your head, I guess."

"Try me again."

Then I explained to her that the sales lady kept trying to get me to go eat sea food with a person named Priscilla Valance. "Since I was married, I just left and came home."

The next day my wife had something up over the windows, but I'm still not sure what they are. She told me they were balloons, but I know she was kidding because I tried for two hours and still couldn't get them to inflate.

Foes dispute effectiveness of 'abortion rescues'

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The director of a Corpus Christi abortion clinic said Saturday that business has increased since religious activists last November began a series of protests in which they have blocked access to clinics.

But Rex Moses, leader of the anti-abortion group Body of Christ Rescue, said he doesn't believe it.

"I wouldn't trust the statistics from a person who works in a business that profits from abortion," said Moses, a Roman Catholic who has the active support of Corpus Christi Bishop Rene Gracida.

Moses formed Body of Christ Rescue last November in Corpus Christi, and has staged 21 "rescues," or clinic blockades, in the city since then.

Rachel Vargas, director of the Reproductive Services clinic, said the number of abortions performed at the clinic averaged about 140 per month during 1988 and 1989. The number increased to an average of about 160 per month this year, she said.

"I don't think it's because of Mr. Moses being here, but it's clear to me that these women are not going to allow themselves to be intimidated," she said.

Sixteen of the 21 "rescues" were staged at Ms. Vargas' clinic, including one in which 95 protesters tried to block patients' access last Tuesday. Police removed them, but made no arrests.

Ms. Vargas is one of at least two abortion-clinic employees whom Bishop Gracida has excommunicated this year after they refused to change jobs.

Moses said he knows "children alive today, I know their names and addresses, who are alive today because of our rescues. If there is one baby alive who would not be alive unless we had been there, then it's worth it."

A well publicized "rescue" that had been scheduled for Saturday at the Reproductive Services clinic was canceled, Moses said. He said he changed it to a prayer demonstration outside the clinic after he learned that the clinic planned to usher in fake patients who were not really having abortions.

"I have too much respect for the police to put them in a position of participating in a charade," Moses said.

About 130 anti-abortion demonstrators showed up at the clinic early Saturday morning, prayed, and sang a hymn while carrying a poster of a mutilated fetus, titled, "This is Abortion." In the doorway, they left a bassinett full of cards each had signed, denouncing the clinic's business.

Among the anti-abortion protesters present Saturday were the county sheriff, Jim Hickey, and his wife, Jan.

Some 60 abortion-rights activists staged a counter demonstration, chanting "America is pro-choice."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Why did the U.S. prosecute Imelda?

In the wake of the acquittal of Imelda Marcos, the main question is: Why did the U.S. government prosecute her in the first place? The question is especially pertinent given an explanatory remark from jury foreman Catherine Balton: "There was no evidence."

This does not absolve Mrs. Marcos and her husband, the late dictator Ferdinand Marcos, from crimes they may have committed in the Philippines. Nor does it repair the damage done by their seizing money from the Philippine people. But the verdict does return American prosecutors to the ground of legal common sense.

The U.S. government has no power to prosecute a foreign head of state, or his family, if those people have done nothing that directly violated U.S. law. Said juror Thomas O'Rourke: "It was on the wrong side of the ocean. It was a totally silly case. We are not big brothers to the people overseas."

The most the U.S. government can do in such a situation is to extradite someone, after reasonable evidence suggests that the person has committed a crime in a foreign country and will be given a fair trial there. But after her acquittal, the Philippine government indicated (a) that it did not want Mrs. Marcos back and (b) that it might very well want to try her should she return.

The U.S. government began prosecuting Mrs. Marcos and her husband in 1986, right after Marcos had given up power to President Corazon Aquino. The prosecutors apparently figured that, because the Marcoses were reviled for living a life of luxury in a land of poverty, using money apparently embezzled from the Philippine people, a court case could be easily won.

Indeed, much evidence was present of Marco's ill deeds. But he is dead. Moreover, over the decades that Marcos was plundering, the U.S. government knew all about it but kept silent, the suspicion being that Washington wanted to maintain U.S. bases in the Philippines.

If the prosecutors had succeeded with Mrs. Marcos, they might have gone on to prosecute other despoised foreign potentates; indeed, they are even now prosecuting former Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega on similarly dubious grounds. They might even have started a TV show: The Dictator's Court, presided over by Judge Wapner - though the good judge probably would have quashed the Marcos case before it came to trial.

Fortunately, the American legal system, which still works despite some faults, has now injected a note of realism into prosecutors' briefcases.

Berry's World

Petty morality rules us today

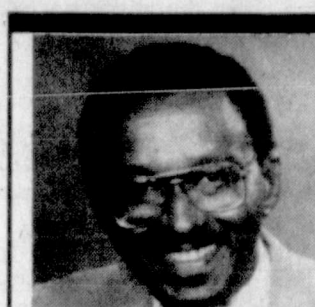

Over the last few decades, Americans have fought to eliminate those injustices that have blemished our national race, ethnicity, religion and sex. We now have greater tolerance for unconventional views, actions and opinions.

In pursuit of these worthy achievements, we've become a nation that worships petty morality and scorns larger moral concerns. We're taught not to hold our fellow man accountable, to ignore his shortcomings. Don't hurt his feelings, and don't be judgmental. To accommodate this change, we've developed a new language.

We no longer refer to young criminals as hoodlums or delinquents, but as "children at risk." Men who deserted their families, refused to work and overindulged used to be called bums, derelicts and hobos. Today, their status has been lifted by calling them homeless. They are seen as no more responsible for their condition than people who've lost their homes in a natural disaster.

Experts find it easy to tell smokers to just quit; but they wouldn't dream of saying the same to homosexuals whose lifestyles lead to the spread of the deadly AIDS disease and tuberculosis.

Recent U.S. Supreme Court rulings have upset many Americans to the extent that we want to amend the Constitution to ban flag desecration. However, principles of constitutional government and personal liberty have been so trivialized that to worry about respect for the flag is akin to Nero's fiddling while Rome burns.

Walter Williams

Congress and the White House love our concern about flag desecration because it diverts our attention, while they steal, hustle and barter away those very precious liberties and moral principles our flag represents.

Let's talk about it. At the root of liberty is the fact that people own themselves. To make owning oneself meaningful, one must own what he produces and not be unwillingly used to serve the purposes of another. After all, a working definition of slavery is that the slave does not own what he produces and is used to serve the purposes of other people.

The average American works over four months, the equivalent of about three hours a day, and does not own what he produces during that time. It is taken as federal, state and local taxes.

Some of these earnings are taken for the legiti-mate government functions the taxpayer enjoys, and for which he would rightfully pay his share, but at least three-fifths of it Congress gives to other Americans in the form of S&L bailouts, farm handouts, corporate handouts and welfare handouts. Groups with political clout use government to force you and me to serve their purposes. That is hardly consistent with the moral principles and constitutional government that our flag represents.

Private property, the concept that what's ours can be used the way we wish so long as we don't violate property rights held by others, is a principle of trivial importance to Congress and the courts. If you own forest land, in some states, you must get permission to chop down your trees; often that permission is denied.

If you're renting a duplex to someone, and you wish to make it available for your aging mother, and give proper notice of eviction, your tenant has the "right" to refuse to move unless you bribe him with thousands of dollars.

Americans have lost moral perspective. As each session of Congress expires, we have fewer freedoms and become less moral.

Instead of an anti-flag desecration amendment to our Constitution, we need an amendment like: "No government shall take the property of one American and give it to another to whom it does not belong." Would you find such an amendment offensive?

Ties that bind should be burned

I wear ties for weddings and funerals. That's it.

I wouldn't wear ties then, but people would think I was being disrespectful if I showed up at a wedding or a funeral without one. I don't want to be thought of as disrespectful. Obnoxious, fine, but not disrespectful.

The reason I shun ties on every other occasion is quite simple: ties are uncomfortable and unnecessary.

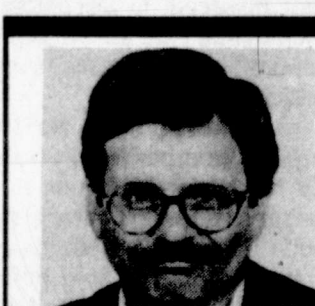

How did this catch on?

When the tie was first introduced, didn't somebody say: "Let me see if I've got this straight. I'm supposed to put on shirt and button it up all the way to my neck. Then, I'm supposed to take this piece of cloth here and tie it around my neck, too. So what happens if I walk around all day choking just so I can get into '21' for lunch?"

If God had intended us to wear ties, he would never have given us the turtleneck shirt and the golf shirt. Think God - assuming God is a male - wears a tie? Of course not. God's God. Let's see them turn him in: away at "21."

I've always suspected that ties are unhealthy. It just makes sense that if you go around all day wearing something tied around your neck, it can have some harmful effects.

Now, my suspicions turn out to be correct, if we are to believe a 1989 study at Cornell University.

Lewis Grizzard

I read about it in the paper. A man named Don R. Powell of the American Institute for Preventive Medicine has written a book with 365 suggestions titled A Year of Health Hints.

One of his hints is based on the Cornell study that says ties can, indeed, constrict blood flow to the brain and sensory organs and cause blurred vision and swimmy-headedness.

Mr. Powell's hint is to buy shirts a half size bigger in the neck, leaving the top button undone, tying tie knot loosely and then loosening the tie throughout the day.

Gorbachev wears a tie. That's probably why he's got that funny looking place on his head. Boxing promoter Don King wears a tie; that's probably what makes his hair stand straight up.

Donald Trump wears ties. That's probably why having to pay back what you owe, with interest, slipped his mind. No wonder people in high places do strange things. They've been wearing ties for so long, their brains are all running a couple of quarts low on blood.

When President Bush said, "Read my lips - no new taxes," he obviously was swimmy-headed and changed his mind later when he wasn't wearing a tie and his head cleared up momentarily.

When he picked Dan Quayle as his running mate, he was wearing a tie and had blurred vision. He thought he was picking Jack Kemp, whose hair style is a lot like Quayle's.

So why do we continue to wear ties?

Come to think of it, all the times I've gotten married I was wearing a tie. And how many funerals do you go to for men who would still be alive if they hadn't worn ties all those years?

I don't mean to be disrespectful, but if I have to wear a tie, I don't think I'll go to any more weddings or funerals.

I could restrict the blood flow to my brains and decide to get married again myself or my vision could become blurred and I could walk out in front of a bus on my way to a funeral and become dead, too.

I'll depart here sooner or later, of course, and when I do, please don't bury me in a tie. Heaven requires a jacket only.

Senators are leading S&L lynch mob

By VINCENT CARROLL

Having spent the better part of a decade shielding the S&L industry from its day of reckoning, scores of senators are now gathered at the head of a lynch mob set on bringing the swindlers to justice.

If this were a movie, we could all laugh at the tale of longtime scoundrels transforming themselves overnight into allies of decency. But this is not film, and real lynch mobs rarely deserve a laugh. In fact, the U.S. Senate has authorized sanctions against alleged S&L crooks that should make thoughtful Americans who care about civil liberties positively shudder.

Not that there seem to be many thoughtful people in the Senate these days. The World's Greatest Deliberative Body whooped through an S&L amendment to its new crime bill by a vote of 99 to 1.

Only one member - William Armstrong, R-Colo. - had the presence of mind to buck the tide and to worry aloud about the rights of individual defendants.

On the theory that all's fair when good publicity is at stake, eager senators extended the reach of a terrible law - the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations (RICO) statute, originally aimed at kingpins of organized crime - to the S&Ls.

Among other things, RICO allows prosecutors to freeze the assets of fraud suspects even before conviction, and it arms the government with a host of formidable weapons, such as the threat of triple damages, by which it can more easily hammer defendants into coughing a guilty plea.

Why should we care, so long as the suspects are guilty anyway? Precisely because we don't know who is guilty until it's proved in court, and because prosecutors have been known to abuse their power to enhance conviction records and (not incidentally) their careers. Indeed, Armstrong quoted a host of federal judges who are already so disturbed by RICO's record that they've called for its revision or repeal.

As Armstrong rightly observed, "This general point of view, this abhorrence of RICO, this sense that it abuses the rights of everybody involved, that it violates a traditional sense of civil liberties in our country, that it clogs the courts, that it provides a hammer, as one judge called it, to force defendants to do those things that they will not otherwise do, that it is coercive and that it is almost tantamount to Police State tactics, is very widely held."

Anyway, prosecutors don't need RICO to nail S&L crooks. A few have donned prison garb already, while the FBI has identified more than 3,000 cases of potential bank fraud that could result in additional convictions.

Naturally, in its spasm of righteous anger over the S&Ls, the Senate conveniently neglected again to address the underlying causes of the thrift fiasco, which Armstrong describes as "the regulatory and legal structure established by the Congress." Not a peep was heard, for example, about reforming the federal deposit insurance system so that taxpayers aren't left holding the bag again someday for another band of careless bankers.

But then what did we expect? Remember, this is the same legislative body that harbors the Keating Five, whose pressure on regulators to delay action against a single S&L cost taxpayers as estimated $1.5 billion. Every one of these five upstanding fellows voted for the new sanctions against their former buddies in the thrift industry.

Perhaps they think that if they leap in front of the lynch mob and scream loud enough for vengeance, the rest of us will forget their own squalid role in the S&L mess. But as the bailout heads toward half a trillion dollars, such amnesia grows unlikely.

Questions on prison should be answered

To the editor:

I agree with "P for Poison." I feel that the proponents of this prison have failed to provide us with the "cons" of this prison proposal. Below are several questions which were never publicly addressed.

1. For every prisoner in the new prison, one to at least three of his family could follow. Who will provide jobs for these people when we don't presently have jobs for our own citizens ... OR ... will they become added to our growing list of unemployed, forced to live on welfare and UNABLE to pay taxes?

2. Is it possible that school rooms will have to be added to handle the increased volume of children ... more teachers ... more TAXES? Will the state valuation of our school district be even higher next year because of the prison population influx making us again a wealthier school district and costing us thousands of dollars in state aid and INCREASED TAXES, as was the case discussed by Dr. Griffith in the July 31, 1990 edition of The Pampa News?

3. Is it true the prison DOES NOT PAY ANY taxes?

4. Why has the reported number of jobs which this minimum security prison was supposed to provide suddenly dropped from 400 to 260? Is 260 even a realistic number since most of the work done within a prison is done by the prisoners? I assume this will include a reduction in the millions of overturned money too.

5. Was the same money and land offered to other industries to come to Pampa? If so, who? If not, why not? To the point ... is the TYPE of job you have provided one you would want to face every morning?

6. Don't statistics show that crime increases in a town with a prison and don't you feel that Pampa has enough crime? Will we be increasing our police force and hopefully their underpaid salaries? Will this mean MORE taxes?

7. Does 650 people (What is the final count?) who pledged money to the prison actually constitute overwhelming support as reported by our own Pampa News in a town with a population of around 18,000? Of the reported 650, how many of them are duplicate pledgers ... such as business pledge and individual owner of business pledge?

8. Is it true you are having difficulty securing your pledges and where are you planning on getting the money that is not provided? Taxing us?

9. Statistics show over 60 percent of crimes are drug related and that prisoners serve only 1/5 or less of original sentences (one month for every four months sentenced). Statistics show that no matter how fast they build, they CANNOT build their way out of the daily release of prisoners due to overcrowding. Our own Pampa News local survey reveals the fear and helplessness our community already has toward drug users. Will you feel safe letting your child go to a ballgame, movie, school banquet or dance after the continuous release of drug users and sexual offenders from our local prison? Please remember, these are not my statistics.

10. If these statistics are accurate, don't you think the state of Texas would have been mandating, within the next couple of years, that we build a prison and paying US for it instead of us paying THEM for it?

11. Does it ever cross your mind as to just exactly WHY not ONE of the Amarillo hospitals will accept these prisoners, yet Pampa's local hospital meets them with "open arms"?

Yes, I believe the citizens of Pampa have been successfully "snowed" with the lure of 800 jobs and millions of overturned money. Instead of the promised "pros" of this prison, we are now stuck with POSSIBLY 260 low-paying, undesirable jobs; a bill for well over $600,000; a hospital with a growing indigent care bill; and without doubt a tremendous increase in taxes.

Channel 10 news states 3 percent of the total prison population has the AIDS virus. I feel that more than just law officers are going to suffer ... I fear drug problems will increase; teachers will be forced to deal with children that have both psychological and aggressive behavioral problems because of their forced lifestyle; and nurses and patients at our hospital could be in danger from the maximum security prisoners from the Amarillo prison.

The proponents of this prison respond that in a few months they will prove me wrong. I hope THEY'RE right.

'Witch hunt' made against the sheriff

To the editor:

Many persons have asked me to write about my thoughts and theirs concerning the turmoil in our sheriff's department.

Of the dozens who have spoken with me about our sheriff's problems, only two wanted him out. Those two blamed me in part for Jim Free being our sheriff. They were quick to condemn him and myself for having supported him.

Now that more information has come out, I believe I must say my piece.

First, it appears to us that Mr. Free's chief deputy wanted to back into the sheriff's job without having to run at election time as Jim Free did. Those few who supported him were a small but noisy bunch. And our media, always looking for sensationalism, made a big play on the 25 or so protest marchers against Sheriff Free.

Secondly, our D.A. and county commissioners were quick, so quick, to jump into the fray. Our D.A. seems to have appointed himself as lord over who is or is not brought before a grand jury even though public information and lawyers looking at that info ascertain that probable cause exists.

The excessive prices paid by some of our county commissioners for buildings now torn down and the manner the purchase was made is a good example.

Next, our county commissioners seem to have all they can handle in trying to get our county a new jail to replace one that was outdated long ago. Some on our court apparently didn't have gumption enough to tell our former sheriff that we needed a new county jail, period. The state has been saying that for many years!

Since our county commissioners have no say-so, other than the sheriff's budget in the operation of that office, they should bug out and get the jail built!

Now comes the worst part of the investigation into the happenings in our sheriff's office.

Were the Texas Rangers that were called in the same ones that came and practically kissed the feet of our outgoing sheriff at the appreciation banquet held for him? If so, and this is my strong personal opinion, I believe that the time has come for the Texas Rangers to ride into the sunset and ride and ride and ride ...

I do not believe the people in Gray County want the Rangers to dictate policy as to the way our sheriff's office is run. That's for the majority of the voters to decide!

The only reason that what is happening to Sheriff

Free has occurred is because he has an open policy and is not trying to run that office through intimidation. He is not putting himself or his office above the law. In the past, our D.A.'s office and county commissioners would never have called our sheriff on the carpet to answer allegations of misconduct, and if an investigation would have been requested, in all probability the sheriff would have conducted his own inquiry!

It's my belief that a deliberate "witch hunt" has and is being perpetrated against our sheriff, Jim Free, and I can be counted as one who will do my best to see that he remains our sheriff.

Never do I want to go back to the dictatorial ways of our former sheriff. Therefore, I remain staunchly for the change voters made in our sheriff's office.

I urge Jim Free's supporters to make their voices heard. We can have marches too!

Ray Velasquez Pampa

P.S. My only anger came when I was notified by two callers that a convicted killer was practically running around loose. I remain opposed to this kind of policy, regardless of work performed by that person. Convicted killers, except for a few exceptions, if I had my way, would never see daylight again, as those whose life they took!

Political machine after Sheriff Free

To the editor:

Again the political machine of Gray County is in high gear and doing its best to run over people who do not conform to its ways.

Why is it that some few individuals who have all the power cannot accept defeat gracefully? It appears that the office of district attorney is desperately attempting to discredit our fine sheriff.

The voters of Gray County sent out a manifesto when they elected Jim Free. They stated it was time for a change. Apparently they wanted the department run a little different and not like it had been for 35 years. For these 35 years there was a rhythmic pattern established for the shuffling of our county. We now live in the year 1990; why not wake up and realize that maybe a new method might also work?

Mr. Comer, you are the district attorney and, yes, you are knowledgeable in prosecuting law breakers, but Mr. Free is skilled in the other side of it. He is knowledgeable in enforcing the law. These are two different entities that should work together, not apart wasting taxpayers' money over wasted energies in the courts.

Sure, let us befriend the Rangers and instruct the grand jury. How on earth is there ever to be any fair evaluation, when a group of friends picks on one individual that does not fit in? How does the grand jury, which consists of private citizens, know how or what is involved in running the sheriff's office?

Since The Pampa News is so bent on printing the facts according to Comer, why do you not take a public opinion survey to see what kind of a job Mr. Free is doing? Let the citizens of Gray County decide on the qualifications and the validity of the department.

Boys show disrespect to city parks property

To the editor:

Recently at a Parks and Recreation Advisory Board meeting, Reed Kirkpatrick gave a report on the status of the repairs to the various parks' sprinkler systems. He stated that about half of the sprinkler system in Alameda Park is now functional. He also stated that when he and the crew were testing the system, as the sprinklers came on and the sprinkler heads popped up, a group of middle school age boys (11, 12, 13) would run in and "stomp" the heads, damaging several of the heads. He tried to approach the boys; he was greeted with obscene language and obscene gestures as they ran away.

These were boys from the upper middle income and affluent part of the city. They apparently had no respect for other people's property or respect for other people. The act of unintentionally doing damage to the sprinklers I could understand, but the obscene language and gestures and lack of respect for authority is deplorable. Do these boys reflect the home-training they receive? Do their parents know which VCR movies they are renting? Parents need to read George Will's editorial in the July 30 Newsweek, "America's Slide Into the Sewer."

I wish, in connection with the parks, to encourage everyone to continue to donate their one dollar a month when paying their water bills. This is a donation that is doing much good in our parks. The repairs to the sprinkler systems in the parks could not be done without the donations received, since the repairs to the sprinklers was not a budgeted item this year. Please continue your $1 per month contribution to a good cause.

Team enjoys support

To the editor:

Pampa's 16-18 year old Senior Babe Ruth League finished its season with a 19 win and 14 loss record, including runnerup for West Texas State Tournament held in Amarillo recently on July 26.

Prior to state play, Pampa went 3-3 in an invitational tournament held at Albuquerque, N. M., where the competition was stiff and six games were played in four days. However, the coaches were proud of the team's accomplishments, overall play and the valuable game experience gained by all players.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank the following sponsors who believed in this team and made it possible for us to play and to be able to travel: Pampa Optimist Club, Hall Auto Sound, J. David Fatherree, Robert Lyle, Robert Finney, Insurance Unlimited, Jerry Noles (Duncan Insurance), Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Bowers, Chief Plastic Pipe & Supply, Stubbs Inc., Hoechst Celanese, Gayle Trolinger, Max Louvier, Mr. and Mrs. Brent Stephens, Hawkins Communications, Mr. and Mrs. Harold DeVore, Nortex, Lone Star Babbit, Mr. and Mrs. G. Suspended sheriff to face trial for misconduct charge

SEYMOUR (AP) — A prosecutor says a suspended Baylor County sheriff will be tried on official misconduct charges in connection with a citizens' fund.

District Attorney Bobby D. Burnett said he plans to appoint a special assistant district attorney to help him prosecute the case against Sheriff Jerry Barton.

State District Judge Quay Parker, at a pretrial hearing, denied Burnett's motion for access to names of residents who signed petitions in support of the sheriff after he was first indicted in April.

Burnett dropped three felony theft charges pending since April against Barton and chose to try him Aug. 20 on one of five felony charges of official misconduct filed last month.

If found guilty of the third-degree felony, the 50-year-old sheriff could be sentenced up to 10 years in prison, be fined $10,000 or both, said Burnett.

A grand jury indictment alleges that Barton misappropriated $3,069 from the Baylor County Citizens Assistance Fund, which held money for battling drugs, on Sept. 14, 1989.

Parker rejected Burnett's argument that getting the petition signers' names would speed prosecutors' task of jury selection.

"It's my understanding we only have one week" for jury selection and trial, Burnett said. "We ought to be entitled to know whether these people signed one of the petitions or contributed" to his defense.

But a defense attorneys, Bill Lane of Fort Worth, said that Barton had no obligation to assist the state in that regard. Lane said it's the state's job to prove the defendant has done wrong.

"While his (Burnett's) impassioned argument might have been to expedite the process, there's nothing expedient about the criminal process when you're talking about the life and liberty ... of the elected sheriff of this county," said Lane.

Mother angry about treatment of teens

To the editor:

Any newcomers to Pampa with teen-agers? Think twice before making Pampa your new home.

We came to Pampa to shop many times and thought of living here someday. That day came, and now, two and a half months later, we're ready to go back. We have a son, age 20, who stayed in Oklahoma because of his job. Another son, age 17, and two young children moved here with me.

My son from Oklahoma comes to visit us whenever he can, not too often. The weekend of Friday the 13th in July, he and his friend, age 17, came to visit us. That Friday night, my two sons and their friend went out, like normal teen-agers. Some 14- or 15-year-old girls (looked older) invited them to their house, assuming their father would be asleep, much later that night. The boys got as far as the gate and the girls' father was waiting there with a shotgun pointed at them.

The father used bad language and told them to run or he'd shoot them. Of course, the boys ran, not far, when the police caught them and handcuffed them. They were charged with public intoxication, disorderly conduct and evading arrest. They were not drunk, and who wouldn't run from a shotgun?

Disorderly conduct - because my son, age 17, defended himself by saying he is no queer, as a policeman called him, then kicked my son on his chest. The friend, 17, was also kicked on his chest by a policeman. My other son, age 20, had his wrists scratched by handcuffs, big bruise on his leg from being pushed to the ground by a policeman. All this while they were being handcuffed. Then the friend, 17, was hit on the face by the man with the shotgun. The police didn't say anything to that.

My son, 17, had to stay in jail until Tuesday night when my 20-year-old son had to go all the way to Kansas to borrow bond money.

We believe something has to be done about the policemen who go around beating up teen-agers instead of going after real criminals. This is the first time the boys have been in jail. As for the man with the shotgun, something has to be done or some teen-ager might get killed. And as for threatening to keep my son's Blazer, he can forget that, no chance.

I don't think I want to bring up my two young ones here in Pampa, as it is too dangerous for teen-agers. We're seriously thinking of moving to a safer town. The boys were even booked, as if they were real criminals!

Where's information on America's MIA's?

To the editor:

I have through the years been concerned about the least and least of the government of the U.S. not taking responsibility for upholding the U.S. Constitution and beliefs Americans hold dear in our hearts and in our minds.

Past presidents have loosely interpreted the U.S. Constitution and the American Bill of Rights of U.S. citizens. Period, nothing less!

I was a 17 year old in November 1967. I was sworn to keep and uphold the Constitution of the U.S. and the Bill of Rights. In '67 Vietnam raged, only AGAIN to find out we were losing in disgrace. The U.S. should have looked back at the previous North and South Korea conflict and learned the lesson with China's Red Army that Asia would definitely not be defeated.

The U.S. government has restricted public information on our MIA's in both the Korean Conflict and the Vietnam police action. This, sir, with time to contact the right groups and veterans, this statement can be proven. I feel the U.S. government has shamed the honor of the U.S. citizens and those we left behind. Are we, the U.S. government, so weak?

Concern for American citizens who have been killed or imprisoned by groups in different nations, East and West, should be expressed. I feel foreign governments are secretly financing such actions. It costs lots of money to hold U.S. citizens in captivity for how many years - five years? 10 years?

The U.S. Constitution, as sworn to by me in '67, meant to me that if one American citizen is killed or placed in captivity, if it takes 500,000 U.S. soldiers to make offenders pay for their actions, it is the responsibility of the president of the U.S. to order this so.

Why is the U.S. government not fulfilling the solution of those asking these questions? Being a U.S. citizen, I have the right to petition the government. Or do I not? Is the government keeping the U.S. public ignorant of these pointed questions?

And am I wrong in asking, "What's the deal?"

Get real, 'P for poison'

To the editor:

In reply to "P for poison" -

Let me remind you, "P" that Pampa is getting a minimum security prison. This means that the most desperate inmate in the place probably robbed a convenience store of Simulac because his baby was hungry!!

I mean, get real, "P"! Most of the prisoners' terms are probably only months long, not years. Not all their families are going to move here. But, as for the ones who do, I'm sure they are all good people, just like you and me. It's going to mean more jobs and money for Pampa. Those people will be spending their money here. In this case, the "pluses" outweigh the "minuses"!!

And as for the "unruly teen-agers" of Pampa - their parents need to start handling them!!

Since my name is not "name withheld," sign me,

Pampa to host Church of Brethren district conference

Area members of the Church of the Brethren will be gathering in Pampa later this week for a district conference.

The conference will begin at 1 p.m. Thursday at the Pampa Church of the Brethren, 600 N. Frost. Other meetings will continue through Saturday evening.

Church of the Brethren district covered in this meeting encompasses a four-state area and includes 11 churches, according to Laverne Hinson, pastor of the Pampa church. He said an estimated 30 to 50 delegates from the churches will be attending the conference.

Highlighting the conference events will be Rev. Edwina Pote of Wichita, Kan., now serving as pastor in Family Ministries at the Wichita Church of the Brethren, and George Brock III, a 35-year-old cowboy, evangelist and preacher.

Rev. Pote previously served as director of Christian education in Wichita and has several years of experience in direct sales and management. She is a wife, mother of four and grandmother of five.

Rev. Pote will be speaking on "Feed My Sheep."

Evangelist Brock, shortly after accepting Christ some 13 years ago, was called to preach the gospel. He served the first six years of his preaching ministry at the First Baptist Church of Olive, Okla. Then he was called to fulltime evangelism for the next four years.

For the past three years he has served as the pastor at Oak Grove

Baptist Church, located east of Cushing, Okla. In addition, he has had numerous opportunities to preach in revivals, crusades and conferences.

Brock says he is convinced that Jesus Christ is right for whatever is wrong in one's life. He states unreservedly that an individual does not have a problem that Christ cannot solve, a tear that Christ cannot dry, nor a burden that Christ cannot lift.

The public is invited to attend the district conference sessions at the Pampa Church of the Brethren.

Gasoline prices climbing after Iraqi invasion; some accuse oil companies of price gouging

By JOYCE M. ROSENBERG
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Iraq's invasion of Kuwait already is costing U.S. motorists more at the gas pump. Some elected officials, service-station owners and motorists are accusing oil companies of price gouging.

A survey of 1,400 retail gasoline stations nationwide showed self-serve unleaded gasoline prices increased 4 cents in two days, to an average of $1.11 a gallon, the American Automobile Association said Friday.

Spot checks by AAA clubs in Florida, Michigan, Missouri, North Carolina, South Carolina and the Washington, D.C., area Friday showed retail prices shot up 4 to 14 cents a gallon, the association said.

In Wisconsin, "prices are just jumping up like crazy," sometimes increasing every 12 hours, said Robert Park, director of trade practices in the Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection. Increases as high as 10 cents a gallon were reported and further hikes were expected today, he said. Major oil companies increased wholesale prices, blaming surging energy markets. Prices for crude oil, gasoline and home heating oil futures rose for a second day Friday because of uncertainty about future Mideast supplies. Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., urged a federal investigation of the U.S. oil industry.

"There is absolutely no reason consumers should already be paying more for oil and gas," he said. "It's either panic or profiteering. Either way it must be stopped."

Dan Loepp, executive director of the Service Station Dealers Association of Michigan, agreed. "The public has a right to know why these prices are rising so rapidly when the oil at the terminals was purchased weeks ago," he said.

Motorists' reactions were varied.

"I really don't care, not when it comes to my car," said Casey Brittain, 28, of Shreveport, La. "You've got to have it."

"Five cents isn't so bad," said Steven Binson, a teacher from Miami Beach, Fla. "But 50 cents would be a cause for war."

"It's absolutely illegitimate," said Art Warsaw of East Peoria, Ill., who was filling up at a diesel pump. "That stuff (higher-priced OPEC oil) hasn't hit the pipeline yet."

Texaco raised prices as much as 7 cents a gallon; Chevron Corp. hiked its price 5 cents; BP America Inc. had a 4-cent to 5-cent increase; and Mobil Oil Corp. raised its prices an average of 3.5

cents a gallon. Other firms also had increases.

Ed O'Brien, owner of two gasoline stations in Superior, Wis., said his price for unleaded gasoline rose from $1.14 a gallon to $1.23 per gallon Friday, and said an increase of another 6 cents per gallon was likely today.

"This is a big jump, probably the biggest I've seen," O'Brien said.

Gas station operators said they were forced to pass higher costs on to consumers.

"We can't eat these kinds of increases. We'd be in terrible shape," said W. Terry Dennis, general manager at Woodfin Oil Co., which operates 20 service stations in Virginia.

Oil is Iraq's most important revenue source, and Iraqi President Saddam nearly doubled his country's reserves by invading Kuwait early Thursday and taking control of that country's oil. Today, there was concern that Iraq might invade Saudi Arabia, which has the world's largest oil reserves and provides 15 percent of U.S. oil imports.

Brain-damaged child wins $1.2 million award

FORT WORTH (AP) — A 7-year-old boy who suffered brain damage in 1987 when a column of bricks fell on his head has been awarded more than $1.2 million, a newspaper reported.

Michael Patterson has a metal plate implanted in his head and must wear a crash helmet when he plays. He must also undergo at least one more operation.

"This means the little boy will get the medical help he needs," said Michael Metcalf, the Pattersons' attorney.

Michael was injured when a car struck a post, knocking the bricks on his head while he was standing near the parking lot of an Arlington apartment complex. Michael's father worked as a handyman at the complex.

The Pattersons sued the apartment owner and property management company, alleging they were negligent for not securing the crumbling brick post, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Saturday.

The couple originally sought $9.8 million in damages.

(AP Laserphoto)

Robert Jenkins posts a 10-cent per gallon increase Friday at the Marathon gas station on 67th and Halsted in Chicago. The increase in consumer prices is tied to concern over the Middle Eastern oil supply in the wake of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Parents deliver baby with car-phone coaching

AUSTIN (AP) — Deborah Michelle Hille entered the world with the help of her parents and a passerby with a cellular phone.

She was born in the front seat of a Mercury Grand Marquis Friday just 12 blocks from the hospital, and her father used the phone to get some coaching.

John and Kathy Hille and their friend, Mary Berger, thought they could make it to the hospital in time for Deborah's birth.

But when they found they were wrong, Ms. Berger flagged down some help.

"She practically threw herself in the street asking for car phones," John Hille said.

"When the man (with the phone) pulled over, I opened his door and yelled, 'Call 911 — we're having a baby here,'" Ms. Berger said.

The man, Carrington Weems, said, "She just jumped out in front of me."

"Actually, I was pretty scared. I thought either somebody was really hurt, or I was about to be really hurt by this crazy woman," he said.

Emergency medical services dispatchers relayed questions about Mrs. Hille's condition to Weems.

After just 45 minutes of labor, the Hilles held their third child. Deborah, born at 8:20 a.m., weighed 7 pounds, 10 1/2 ounces and was 20 inches long.

The ambulance arrived five minutes after the birth.

Covenant House reports evidence on founder of runaway shelter

By GARY LANGER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Covenant House said Friday private investigators found extensive evidence confirming sexual misconduct by the Rev. Bruce Ritter, founder of the nation's largest shelter system for young runaways.

Investigators hired by the Covenant House board also questioned some financial dealings by Ritter, the charismatic priest who resigned in February as the organization's president.

But there was "no evidence of any other material financial impropriety or mismanagement," including the handling of hundreds of millions of dollars in contributions, the investigators said in a detailed report.

The Covenant House board said it was issuing the 51-page report in hopes of restoring the credibility of the church-affiliated organization.

"Clearly, mistakes were made. Some corrective measures have been taken and others will be put in place," said an investigation oversight committee.

"The report confirms some things that make us very sad," said its chairman, Ralph A. Pfeiffer Jr. "We acknowledge his and our mistakes, and we pledge that we will do all in our power to insure that they will not be repeated."

Covenant House receives more than 90 percent of its income from donors, many of whom have responded in the past to mass-mailed appeals written by Ritter. When the scandal broke and he stepped down, donations suffered.

A restructured board of directors cut the annual budget from $86 million to $72 million and laid off 111 of 420 employees. Some programs were cut back, although Covenant House continues to shelter 25,000 youths annually in 17 dormitories in the United States, Canada and Latin America.

The allegations arose in December when Kevin Lee Kite, 26, a drifter from Texas, accused Ritter of luring him into a sexual relationship. Two other men made similar allegations, and charges of financial improprieties involving loans and contracts followed.

Ritter's Roman Catholic order, the Franciscans, investigated the sex charges and ordered him to leave Covenant House. The Manhattan district attorney investigated and found no criminality.

The Covenant House founder has denied wrongdoing. The private investigators, Kroll Associates, said Ritter refused to speak with them and Franciscan leaders agreed to discuss only limited areas.

Kroll, whose investigation was led by former Police Commissioner Robert McGuire, said that if Ritter had not resigned he would have to be fired by the board.

Kroll said it interviewed five former residents who said they had sex with Ritter. One resident and four Covenant House workers reported sexual advances by Ritter, and another resident acknowledged having shared a bed with Ritter, but denied sexual activity.

Four other residents were reported to have had sex with Ritter, Kroll said, but one was dead and three could not be located.

"The cumulative evidence ... that Father Ritter engaged in sexual activities with certain residents and made sexual advances toward certain members of the faith community is extensive," the report said.

Kroll also said rumors of sexual activity involving Ritter apparently were circulating among child care workers outside Covenant House as early as the 1970s, and that some responded by not referring runaways to Covenant House.

Ritter, 63, founded Covenant House in 1968. He reportedly is living in New Jersey and considering leaving the Franciscan order.

A statement from his lawyer, Stanley Arkin, said the report "gives emphasis to an alleged few sporadic incidents, washing away more than 20 years of uncompromising and unstinting accomplishment."

Noting that Ritter has resigned, Arkin said: "revisiting these allegations now is wholly unnecessary, either for Covenant House or for the public."

Arkin said neither he nor Ritter would have further comment.

Franciscan officials could not be reached by telephone for comment.

Former archbishop's affair raises celibacy debate

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — The resignation of the nation's highest-ranking black Roman Catholic clergyman because he was intimate with a woman has renewed debate over mandatory celibacy for priests and raised fears of a racial backlash.

Atlanta Archbishop Eugene Marino resigned last month because of his two-year relationship with a lay minister, Vicki R. Long, church officials confirmed this week. They previously said he resigned for health reasons.

Ms. Long, 27, has filed a monetary claim against the archdiocese for an undisclosed amount.

Neither Marino nor Ms. Long have commented about their relationship. Bishop James P. Lyke, the acting administrator of the Atlanta Archdiocese, would not say whether the relationship was sexual, describing it only as "intimate."

Church officials and theologians say Marino's prominence will provoke debate over church law dating to the Middle Ages requiring Catholic clergy to abstain from sex. Pope John Paul II strongly supports the requirement.

Opponents say mandatory celibacy is an eroding symbol of church misogyny.

Lyke sought to downplay any questioning of the church law. "I don't think one mistake provides an occasion to bring about a discussion of celibacy," he said.

The National Conference of Catholic Bishops, however, favors optional celibacy. In a report last year, the conference said sexuality should be presented as an "essential component of human existence."

(AP Laserphoto)

Former Atlanta Archbishop Eugene Marino and Vicki Long are shown in this undated copy of a snapshot obtained by Atlanta, Ga., television station SAGA.

Richard McBrien, chairman of Notre Dame University's theology department, agreed. "Celibacy is unrealistic and it's counterproductive now," he said.

"The priesthood as we've known it is falling apart ... because of a stubborn refusal to change."

McBrien said about 15 percent of priests have resigned since 1970 and officials expect seminary applications to decline 40 percent by the year 2000.

Cathy Grenier of Good Tidings, a Pennsylvania support group for women and priests, said Catholic mandatory celibacy also is a feminist issue.

"The attitude toward women is that if a priest touches a woman he's tainted," said Mrs. Grenier, who married a priest. "If women were not believed inherently evil and dirty, there'd be no problem with marrying us."

Terrence Dosh, who runs a national support group for priests who later married, said Marino's stature drew attention to a widely disregarded church problem.

"In the past 25 years, 19,000 American Roman Catholic priests resigned and married and 110,000 in the world resigned and married," he said. "It takes the situation of a bishop to draw attention to it."

Dosh and McBrien also said Marino's resignation could hurt black Catholics, who make up only 2 million of the 53 million American Catholics.

"Any leader of a group who falls, they're (Catholic hierarchy) ashamed about it," Dosh said. "The people in charge in Rome will be reluctant to put someone like him in his place."

McBrien said he feared that "people are going to say, 'Well, he is black and ... they have different sorts of urges and needs.' That's racism of the worst kind but it will be an effort on the part of certain figures in the church to gloss it (Marino's resignation) over."

Lyke, who is black, said he hoped any racial backlash would be minimal.

"The church deals with racism internally," he said. "It would be a terrible expression of racism if we retreated on our progress."

Two brothers drown in swimming pool

MOUNT SYLVAN (AP) — Two East Texas brothers have drowned in a neighbor's swimming pool, said authorities who were investigating the deaths today.

A spokeswoman for the Smith County division of Texas Parks and Wildlife Department said game wardens were called to the pool where Joseph Allen McDade, 3, and Billy Earl McDade, 2, died Friday to begin an investigation.

The boys were found about mid-morning and were pronounced dead shortly after arrival at East Texas Medical Center in Tyler, said Bruce Baker, a nursing supervisor.

Investigators say the boys crossed three fences before taking off their clothes to go for a swim.

The boys were found by their parents, who took them out of the pool and to the home of grandparents, which was close to their own house, investigators said.

Sheriff's Sgt. Jack Kea said he did not believe anyone was home when the drownings occurred.

Feds may exhume body of delinquent taxpayer

By STEVE KLINE
Associated Press Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service will go to almost any lengths to retrieve back taxes. In a case against an Iranian immigrant, federal officials are considering following the man into the grave.

The U.S. attorney's office says it might ask to exhume the body of Ehsanolla Motaghdad just to make sure he's dead. Motaghdad apparently died June 9 without paying $156,000 in back taxes.

"They're just mad because he had the audacity to die without settling his account," said James Martin Davis, the attorney for Motaghdad's estate.

Motaghdad, 66, who ran an optical lens importing business, was indicted April 25 for allegedly offering a $4,000 cash bribe to an IRS agent. He pleaded innocent and was free on bail.

According to both Davis and local death records, Motaghdad died June 9 in his Omaha apartment of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, or Lou Gehrig's disease. He was buried June 12.

The U.S. attorney's office has said it is considering seeking a Douglas County Court order to have the body exhumed. Assistant U.S. Attorney Bob Kokrda has refused to say why officials suspect Motaghdad isn't dead.

"This is about as grotesque a thing as I've ever dealt with," said Davis, who has asked the court to dismiss the charges.

"It's an identification problem," Kokrda said in an interview Tuesday. "It was four days after he was put in the ground that we read in the paper that he died. We're just trying to satisfy ourselves that the man died."

Kokrda said his office hasn't decided whether to ask for exhumation. "If we can do it (make an identification) any other way, we will," he said.

The IRS on Monday filed liens against Motaghdad's estate, claiming he owes $156,000 in back taxes. The filing was the result of a review of Motaghdad's 1985 through 1987 tax returns, said Omaha IRS spokesman Ed Daemon.

Motaghdad's daughter, Afsaneh McGahey of San Diego, said she was questioned two weeks ago by IRS officials about her father's death.

"I was horrified," said Mrs. McGahey, who is a lawyer. "I don't know why they are doing this."

Mrs. McGahey said she's satisfied the man in the grave at Omaha's Evergreen Memorial Park Cemetery is her father.

The death certificate on file with the county identifies the body as that of Motaghdad, said Douglas County Attorney Ron Staskiewicz. The certificate lists amyotrophic lateral sclerosis as the cause of death.

Motaghdad came to the United States 12 years ago after being expelled from Iran by the government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Iraqi cargoes to be released from Texas ports, Treasury says

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The cargoes of two Iraqi oil tankers apparently will be released by customs agents because they were bought before an embargo was announced against goods from the warring country.

The Customs Service on Friday seized 479,000 barrels of Iraqi crude oil from one tanker and blocked another offshore.

But the Treasury Department said later that oil loaded before President Bush announced a trade embargo Thursday against Iraq and Kuwait may be delivered after all.

Treasury spokesmen were not available to comment on specifics, but the exception appeared to cover both the cargoes seized in Texas.

Bush issued the embargo after Iraq invaded Kuwait Thursday. The embargo covers Iraqi vessels and goods as well as ships flying Iraqi or Kuwaiti flags. The order also prohibits dealings between U.S. and Iraqi companies.

Customs, along with the U.S. Coast Guard, confiscated the oil at the Port of Corpus Christi on Thursday afternoon, hours after the embargo went into effect at 5 a.m.

The oil was being unloaded from the Hellespont Dignity, sailing under a Swedish flag, at a Coastal Corp. refinery facility, said Patricia McCauley, district Customs director in Houston. The cargo had been unloaded at sea from a Norwegian mother ship, the Berge Banker.

That ship remained in the Gulf of Mexico outside U.S. territorial waters, Ms. McCauley said.

Another tanker, destined for a Fina Oil and Chemical Co. refinery in Port Arthur, was halted offshore. A Customs spokeswoman was unable to provide the name of that ship, its owners or its registry.

The Treasury statement said importation of Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil would be permitted if the cargoes were loaded before Thursday and landed by Oct. 1.

Fina has refineries in Big Spring and Port Arthur and a terminal in Corpus Christi.

Darren Gee, Topographic employee, demonstrates the company's computer-aided drafting equipment while T.S.T.I. student, Jerry Barker, sitting at his right, watches. Also present are instructors N.G. Patel and Charles Christian, Lynn Bezner of Topographic, and T.S.T.I. program chairman, Brad Blenden.

Topographic Land Surveyors of Pampa recently hosted a field trip for drafting and design technology students from Texas State Technical Institute (T.S.T.I.) in Amarillo.

Brad Blenden, T.S.T.I. program chairman, said 13 students and two instructors traveled to Pampa Friday for a demonstration on daily operations at the land surveyors office.

Students were given a tour of Topographic's recently up-dated office which features computer-aided drafting equipment, Blenden said, in addition to a trip to the field to see how the surveyors use the equipment to produce drawings.

T.S.T.I. is a vocational college which teaches primarily subjects related to the technical field.

"Without companies like Topographic Land Surveyors working with us, there's no way for us to teach the students what is happening today," Blenden said.

"Our goal is to teach students so that when they graduate they know today's skills, not skills from textbooks written five years ago," Blenden said. "These companies help us do that."

Harbison to head Borger outreach center

Kathie Harbison has recently been hired by Cedar Creek Hospital as community Outreach Representative for this area. Harbison is to head Cedar Creek's Outreach Center in Borger.

Harbison says she's anxious to offer a quality assessment and referral service for the Borger area. "If there is someone who is in crisis, I'll be nearby. They won't have to drive all the way to Amarillo," Harbison said.

A graduate of West Texas State University in Canyon, Harbison holds a bachelor of social work degree. She spent five years working for Mental Health/Mental Retardation and was most recently director of social services for Golden Plains Community Hospital in Borger.

Lone Star Technologies subsidiary files for reorganization

DALLAS (AP) — Lone Star Technologies Inc. announced that Lone Star Steel Co. has filed a plan of reorganization in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Dallas.

The bankruptcy proceeding under Chapter 11 to reorganize Steel and certain of its subsidaries started in June 1989. Steel is a principal subsidiary of Lone Star Technologies.

If accepted by creditors, the plan calls for Steel to pay about 61 percent of the claims in cash and retain 100 percent ownership mond George.

Randy Shirley has been named regional sales manager for all three of the new distribution centers. He has 15 years experience in bearings and power transmission and fluid power.

With the acquisition of the three companies, Precision Bearing has added six new distribution centers in 1990. Others are located in Garden City, and Emporia, Kan., and Monticello, Mo. Precision has 30 sales and distribution centers nationwide.

of the company. Under the plan, actions against the parent company would be dismissed.

Lone Star Technologies has provided a $36 million commitment to finance the plan, which is expected to be confirmed by the end of the year.

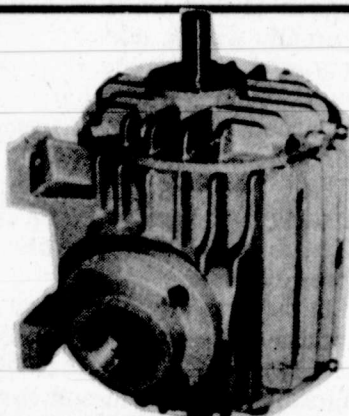

Established in 1945, Precision Bearing Company is the fourth largest family-owned bearing and power transmission distributor in the United States. Headquartered in Omaha, Neb., their divisions include material handling, air/hydraulics, liquid handling, industrial products, lubrication, systems contracting and maintenance training.

Braves' Murphy traded to Philly

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Two-year-old Taylor Murphy spent a busy morning Saturday answering the telephone in his suburban Roswell home. He had his greeting down to perfection.

"Hi," he replied. "My daddy got traded."

Taylor's daddy, Dale Murphy, was the heart and soul of the Atlanta Braves in the 1980s.

Nearing the end of a two-year contract, Murphy told Braves general manager-manager Bobby Cox to try to work out a trade before Murphy became a free agent this winter.

The Braves announced Friday night that Murphy and a player to be named later had been dealt to the Philadelphia Phillies for relief pitcher Jeff Parrett and two players to be named later.

The deal was completed while the Braves were in Houston. Murphy made a detour en route to Atlanta before moving on to Philadelphia for Saturday night's game against the Pittsburgh Pirate.

The all-time home run leader in Atlanta history (371) had a 30-minute layover at the Atlanta airport, where he picked up his wife, Nancy; five of their six sons; and his agent, Bruce Church, for the trip to Philadelphia.

"I probably won't look too many of you in the eye because it's been kind of a tough time," Murphy said.

"This has been a real hard decision for Nancy and me," he said. "We did come to the decision a few weeks ago that we would be leaving this winter and so we went to Bobby and said if you can work out a trade and something that we'll both be happy with, I would accept it and move on."

Cox agreed to the deal and gave Church permission to negotiate with the Phillies.

Church said the contract was worked out in just under seven hours, a two-year deal, terms of which Church declined to specify.

Dale Murphy tries on a Phillies' batting helmet prior to making his first start for Philadelphia Saturday night.

"I don't talk about numbers, but we're very pleased with what we arrived at," Church said. "It's a no-trade contract."

Murphy, 34, fought back tears when he reflected over a major-league career that began in 1976.

"I think about a lot of people," he said. "I think about a couple of people who aren't with us now."

Tears welled in his eyes and his voice choked with emotion as he named former Braves general manager Bill Lucas and Tommy Aaron, a former Braves player and coach, both of whom died unexpectedly.

"No one in baseball could be treated better than I have here in Atlanta by the organization or by the fans, the clubhouse personnel and everybody," Murphy said.

"I'm glad that I could leave the organization with such a good feeling and such a good feeling in my heart of what I've been able to be a part. I wish the last few years I could have been a little bit better. It's been a little bit frustrating."

Murphy leaves the Braves having appeared in 1,926 games. He had a .268 lifetime batting average, scored 1,103 runs, had 1,901 hits and drove in 1,147.

The two-time National League Most Valuable Player and a seven-time All-Star has seen his batting average plunge to .226 and .228 the last two years.

Razorback bashing: New pastime for SWC coaches

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Razorback bashing. That was the main theme of Friday's Southwest Conference football kickoff luncheon.

Arkansas and the Southeastern Conference, the new home for the Hogs, caught some flak at the gathering.

Baylor coach Grant Teaff was the most inventive with his remarks.

Teaff said tongue-in-cheek he wanted to apologize to the SEC for calling its raid of Arkansas "unethical."

"What I meant to say was I'm now thoroughly convinced that the Southeastern Conference is the Iraq of the college football scene in America," Teaff said.

Teaff's remark brought heavy applause at the sold-out luncheon.

"Well, Arkansas said they were too good for us," Teaff said. "Their coach (Jack Crowe) said they'd finish fifth in the SEC."

Arkansas won the SWC title last year.

Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes hinted that greed got the best of the Razorbacks.

"It's the same old deal, the grass is greener on the other side of the fence," Dykes said. "I guess they'll be after me when we go to Fayetteville this year. It doesn't matter. We haven't done that well up there anyway."

However, both Teaff and Dykes said Arkansas should be allowed to go to the Cotton Bowl if it wins the title in its final year of SWC play.

"If they win it, fine," Dykes said. "They're still in the conference."

Teaff said it would be OK with him if Arkansas earned a trip to the Cotton Bowl.

"Let's let 'em go if they win the championship," Teaff said.

Teaff announced that Baylor had already replaced Arkansas with Penn State on the schedule for four years beginning in 1993.

"It will be home and home," Teaff said. "Penn State's a great attraction."

Crowe said he looked for other teams "to come at us hard this year. I just hope it's done in a sportsmanship manner."

Crowe added, "I didn't know what to expect when I came here today. I've heard a little of it (SEC talk). I just want everyone to know that no coach or player is happy about leaving the Southwest Conference. It's the will of the people. It's a matter of circumstance."

Arkansas quarterback Quinn Grovey attended the luncheon and said the Hogs might as well have a circle and bulls eye painted on their helmets.

"There's no doubt we'll be targets," Grovey said. "We'll have a big bulls eye on our chests. We'll just have to be ready for it."

Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum said he thought a lot of players would be trying to "get their last licks on Arkansas."

Teaff said he figured Arkansas would be pumped up, too.

"It will be their last hurrah and I would think they will be very emotional when they play," Teaff said. "I think Arkansas will have a great advantage going into this year."

Eight of the nine SWC coaches attended the kickoff day. Texas Christian coach Jim Wacker was bed-ridden with a bad back.

Once talk of the Razorbacks' departure simmered, Texas A&M and Arkansas were picked as the most likely teams to succeed in 1990.

Cotton Bowl president John Stuart said no matter what happened his organization would welcome the champion on New Year's Day.

"We've enjoyed our association with the conference and we expect it to continue and to improve," Stuart said.

Rumors surfaced at the luncheon again on Friday that the Pac-10 Conference was looking hard at Texas and Texas A&M but no league or school officials would confirm it.

Dykes said, "If Texas and Texas A&M leave it would be a sin."

Hall of Fame

Stoic Landry keeps emotions in check at induction speech

By RUSTY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

CANTON, Ohio — Tom Landry won two Super Bowls and played or coached for 40 years in the NFL.

But he said the last 12 months have been the most bittersweet.

"I got fired and I'm in the Hall of Fame all in one year," Landry said with a chuckle Saturday in his induction speech into the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Landry, who coached the Dallas Cowboys for the first 29 years of the franchise's history, was his typically reserved self during the induction ceremony on the front steps of the Hall.

Joining him in the 1990 class were Pittsburgh Steelers running back Franco Harris and linebacker Jack Lambert, Kansas City Chief defensive tackle Buck Buchanan, Miami Dolphin quarterback Bob Griese, San Francisco 49er offensive tackle Bob St. Clair and Ted Hendricks, a linebacker with the Baltimore Colts, Green Bay Packers and the Raiders in Oakland and Los Angeles.

Harris, Lambert and Landry were all elected in their first year of eligibility. The seven additions bring to 155 the number of members.

In the annual Hall of Fame exhibition game following the ceremony, the Chicago Bears beat the Cleveland Browns 13-0.

True to form, Landry said he did not intend to lose his composure during his speech.

"They're taking bets on whether I'll show any emotion. The odds are very long that I won't ... If I don't show emotion, it's all on the inside," he said.

Landry's 270 wins during his coaching career in Dallas are exceeded only by George Halas and Don Shula. But he said that after a 13-38-3 record in the first four seasons of the Cowboys, his job was in jeopardy.

"They called a press conference and everybody said Landry's gone," he recalled. "It turned out that (Dallas owner) Clint Murchison walked in and said, 'I'm going to give him a 10-year contract.' Now that's loyalty, that's support."

Landry went on to win Super Bowls in 1971 and 1977. Three other times, he took teams to the Super Bowl, only to lose, twice to the Steelers.

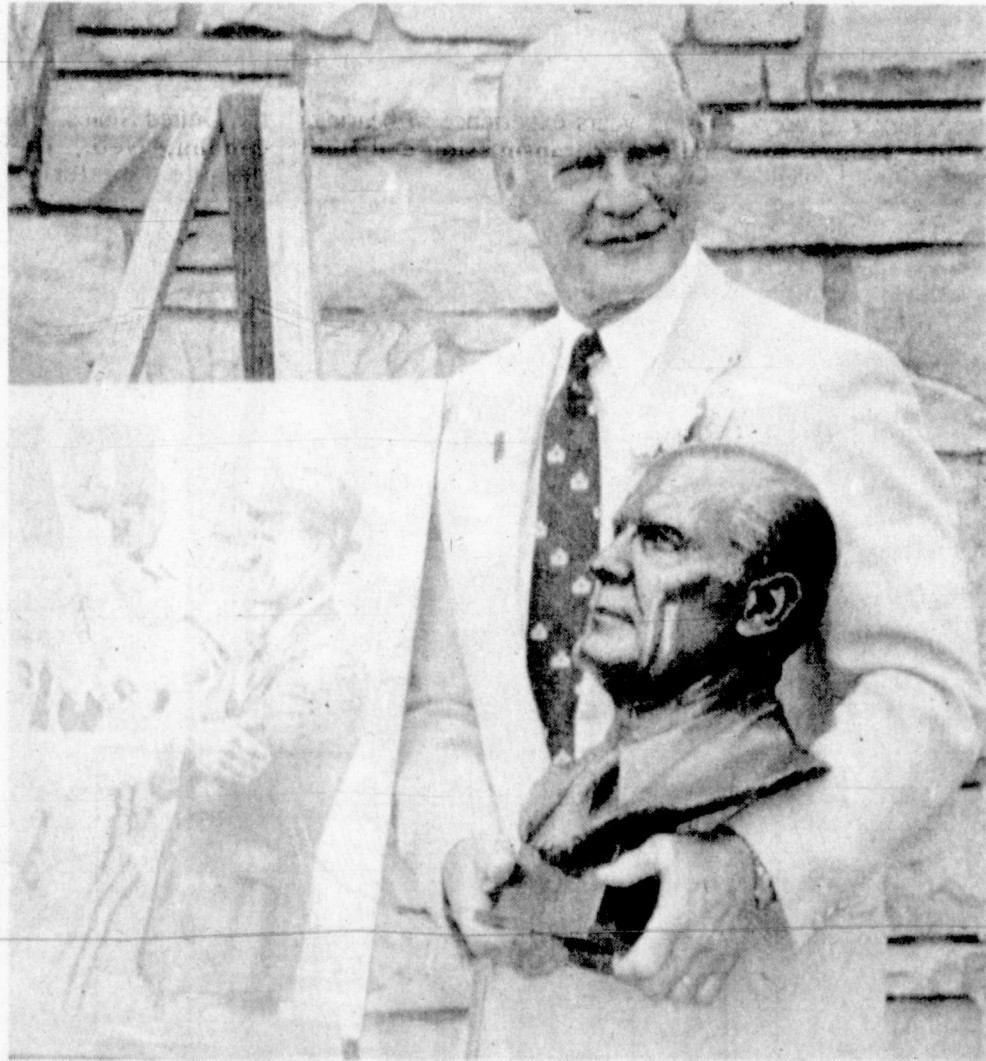

He looked at Lambert and Harris seated behind him and said, "I understand now why Pittsburgh beat us twice. Their whole team will be here before they're through."

An overflow crowd surrounding the entrance of the Hall of Fame wildly cheered and chanted each time Pittsburgh — just two hours away — was mentioned.

"If I could start my life all over again, you can be sure I'd be a pro football player and you'd better be certain I'd be a Pittsburgh Steeler," said Lambert, who spent all of his 11-year career in Pittsburgh.

Lambert, a second-round draft pick out of nearby Kent State University, was a force in the middle of the Steelers' famed Steel Curtain defense that resulted in four Super Bowl triumphs.

Harris, who rushed for 12,120 yards

Former Dallas Cowboys' coach Tom Landry poses with the bronze bust that will stand in the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

during his 12 years with the Steelers and one with Seattle, called Pittsburgh "the greatest team of all time."

Addressing the partisan crowd, he said, "This was the team I belonged to, a team that will live forever. So I want you to remember. Do you realize how great those memories were? Did you savor them?"

Griese said he had been kidded by his youngest son because a display in the Hall included the eyeglasses the Dolphin quarterback wore during his playing days.

"(My son) told me that's the closest I was ever going to get to the Hall of Fame," Griese said. Then he added, "Well, in your face, Brian."

Griese guided the Dolphins to a pair of Super Bowl victories. He passed for 25,092 yards and 192 touchdowns during his 14 seasons, but said it was his ability to study failures rather than successes that led him to the Hall.

Observations on Cowboys' new home away from home

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — Sights and sounds from the Dallas Cowboys training camp at St. Edward's University, Austin's Altar of Adoration:

— A grown woman screaming and begging for Michael Irvin's autograph and giving it to her daughter with the warning: "If you lose it I'll brain you."

— A crowd of at least 50 people sitting in the stands just to watch a grounds crew line the field.

— A Texas Stadium crowd never sounded louder than the scream for signatures as owner Jerry Jones strolled down "autograph alley" on the path from the playing field to the locker room.

— The screech of a hair drier at 3:30 a.m. penetrating the paper thin walls of St. Teresa dorm like a dentist's drill. The early bird was a broadcaster preparing for his radio show back home.

— The humorous sight of coach Jimmy (Too Short) Johnson standing on a Coke box so the media swarm could hear him at the end of practice briefings.

Freeman File

— The pitiful sight of 350-pound Nate Newton trying to deal with the suffocating heat and humidity.

— A peppy fan who had to arise at the break of dawn to position himself so he could get autographs as sleepy-eyed players stumbled to practice. Some of the players were cut the next day.

— The amazing enthusiasm of some 5,000 fans who paid $5 each to see a practice where there was no hitting at Westlake High School.

— Kelvin Martin running his fastest route of the year to get away from reporters without explaining what happened when he was stopped by Austin police at 1:30 a.m.

— The laughter coming from a Babe Laufenberg interview. "I'm just two heart beats away from the starting quarterback job."

— The brevity of wide receiver Dennis McKinnon, who said he didn't give interviews the first two weeks of camp.

— The cheers for a simple completed pass from a crowd estimated at 6,800 fans for a Sunday afternoon workout.

— The swarm of media for every practice. Cowboys press chief Rich Dalrymple issued over 250 working media passes.

— The near civil disturbance created when the Austin police department started hauling away automobiles parked on the street alongside the Cowboys practice field.

— The danger of watching practice along the sidelines. Several close misses on players hurtling out-of-bounds.

— The flight of the ball after Troy Aikman throws it — a speeding projectile. The flight of the ball after Steve Walsh throws it — a wobbly duck.

— The pitiful face of a fellow sports writer after he locked himself out of his automobile with the motor running.

— The sharp crack of plastic on plastic as 250-pound human beings run into each other in the meat-grinder "middle drill."

— The amazing way the newly sodded practice fields held together despite seven days of rain.

— The beauty of the St. Edward's University stone academic building, constructed in 1888.

— The completely spent players dragging back to their dorms after another practice in searing Texas heat.

— One wonders why anyone would be a football player.

Rockets' owner puts NBA team on auction block

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Rockets owner Charlie Thomas is seeking more than $100 million for the National Basketball Association franchise and already has talked to at least two potential buyers, a newspaper reported.

Thomas purchased the Rockets in 1982 for $10 million.

Unidentified sources told the Houston Chronicle that Thomas may be getting out now to maximize his profit.

"If other areas of your business empire need help, then you go to the one that is strongest. The Rockets are a debt-free business right now, so it makes sense in that respect," an unnamed club executive said in Saturday's editions.

Rockets President Ray Patterson and general manager Steve Patterson were out of town Saturday and unavailable for comment, said Rockets media information director Jay Goldberg, who also declined comment.

Another source close to the team said: "Charlie's a very smart and very shrewd businessman. What he's looking at now is the entire NBA, while doing great and appearing to be in excellent health, possibly coming to the end of the biggest upward push in terms of franchise value that we've ever going to see."

The way the league has grown in recent seasons, the price of franchises has escalated rapidly. The San Antonio Spurs were purchased by Red McCombs in 1988 for $48 million and the Portland Trail Blazers were bought by Paul Allen in the same year for $70 million.

As a reflection of the league's growth, the salary cap for each team — 53 percent of the gross revenues that are guaranteed to the players — was just raised on Tuesday to $11.8 million per club, up $2 million from last year.

The league also has set overall attendance records in each of the last seven seasons, while adding expansion clubs in Miami, Charlotte, Orlando and Minneapolis over the past two years.

But with no more expansion plans for the league on the horizon until at least the end of the decade and with new TV contracts with NBC and Ted Turner's TNT cable already in place, there is no reason to expect the big jump in revenues to continue.

Meanwhile, because of the increased revenues, the NBA's salary structure has continued to spiral upward. The average salary for an NBA player is more than $500,000 per year. Akeem Olajuwon, the Rockets All-NBA center, is slated to make $4 million in the 1990-91 season, and guard Sleepy Floyd recently signed a new four-year deal with the team that will pay him more than $6 million.

"From a business standpoint, this may be exactly the time to sell," said the source. "Until you look down the line at maybe future expansion or a relationship with Europe or pay-per-view, it is hard to see where you would get more of a return on an NBA team than Charlie Thomas has gotten over the last eight years."

Cowboys' Jones ends 17-day holdout

Third-round draft choice Jimmie Jones anxiously takes his place on the line of scrimmage Saturday.

AUSTIN (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys say that rookie holdout Jimmie Jones has reached agreement on a four-year contract and worked out with the team on Saturday.

The third-round draft pick entered the 17th day of his holdout Friday before agreeing to terms. The defensive lineman from the University of Miami was scheduled to join workouts.

Jones said a phone call from Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson, who coached him at Miami, was also a factor behind his decision to report.

"Anything he says, I listen to," said Jones. "He was like a father figure to me in college. The only thing I'm behind on is the physical part. I played the same system in college so it's be real easy for me to pick it up."

Last week, Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said the length of Jimmie Jones' holdout was jeopardizing his chances of making the team.

The owner said the contract Jimmie Jones accepted resembled the offer that has been on the table for the past 10 days.

"We've been real adamant that we wanted a four-year deal, there was incentive items that we dealt with some, but that's pretty much what we've had on the table for some time," said Jerry Jones.

Jimmie Jones said he told his agent, Miami attorney Drew Rosenhaus, on Thursday that he was willing to take what was on the table.

"I wanted to get it done," Jones said. "I told him I wanted a done deal. Get it done today."

Johnson, before the opening of camp, gave Jones a good chance to crack the starting lineup. Missing 17 days of workouts, he starts camp well behind the other veteran linemen.

"But because he's played in the system before, he'll be able to pick up things quicker than most," said Johnson. "He has the ability. That's one reason why we drafted him in the third round."

PHS announces physicals, practice times

Pampa High School athletic director Dennis Cavalier this week announced times and dates for physical exams and athletic practices for the upcoming school year.

Next Thursday, Aug. 9, all middle school and high school boys who plan to participate in school athletics must report to the high school athletic building at 1 p.m. for physicals. The physicals apply to students grades 7-12.

Physicals for middle school and high school girls were given last Thursday.

Junior and senior boys who plan to play football this fall should come to the athletic building on Wednesday, Aug. 8, for equipment checkout from 8 to 10 p.m. Sophomore and freshman griders will be issued equipment the following day, Aug. 9, from 8 to 10 p.m.

Practice for volleyball and cross-country begins Monday, Aug. 13. Football players grades 10 through 12 will also begin workouts on Aug. 13, while freshman griders will open practice two days later, Aug. 15.

Fishing Tournament

The Panhandle Tournament Trail Fun Fishing Tournament at Lake Meredith is scheduled for Thursday, Aug. 9, from 6 to 9 p.m. at Cedar Canyon. Participants may enter either or both of the Bass or Walleye categories, and live bait and trolling are permitted.

First place wins $500, and cash or prizes are awarded through 10th place, based on 100 entries per category. The more entries, the more payoff.

Softball Tournament

HEREFORD — The First Annual Hereford Jubilee Softball Classic is set for next weekend, Aug. 10, 11 and 12. The Class D tourney is double elimination and deadline for entry is Wednesday, Aug. 8.

First place team will receive a team trophy, individual bat bags and 15 free 8x10 team pictures. A team trophy and individual trophies will be awarded to the second place team, while third- and fourth-place finishers will each receive a team trophy.

For more information, contact Mark Andrews at 364-7792 (work) or 364-3429 (home) or Jimmy Ramirez at 364-8701 (work) or 364-1049 (home).

One-Arm Dove Hunt

OLNEY — In what has been billed as the Lone Star State's most unusual event, the citizens of Olney invite all arm and hand amputees and their guests to the 19th Annual One-Arm Dove Hunt Sept. 7 and 8.

The hunt was originated by Olney's two one-arm Jacks, City Administrator Jack Northrup and retired County Commissioner Jack Bishop. The two-day event has since gained national and international recognition for offering amputees an opportunity to exchange thoughts and ideas and helping new amputees adjust to a better way of life.

For more information, write P.O. Box 582, Olney, Texas 76374, or call (817) 564-2102 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Oilers' special teams go marching into war

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

SAN MARCOS — The Houston Oilers' "Hit the Beach" special teams are back with replacements who include triggerman return specialist Gerald McNeil and a new supply of battlefield commendations.

It's coach Richard Smith's plan to make the Oilers' special teams special again.

McNeil, who played for the Cleveland Browns last season, has signed to become the Oilers kick returner.

Smith also is stretching his motivational creativity.

He's stationed a mannequin in a dressing cubicle in the Oilers locker room that will be a weekly tribute during the regular season to the team's top special teams player that week.

"It'll be an Army guy already set up," Smith said. "He'll be a 'hit the beach' kind of guy, and we'll put the player's jersey on it."

"It'll be a shrine for the special teams player of the week."

Smith first gained notice with his psychological techniques as a rookie pro coach three seasons ago when he rewarded army helmets to the special teams player of the week.

He talked of special teams strategy in military terms.

"Special teams players are tempo setters," Smith said. "They will motivate this ball club. We'll continue to stress the same attitude, but not have as many penalties."

The Oilers' special teams were among the most feared in the NFL in 1988. The Oilers tied an NFL record with five blocked punts.

They added four more in 1989, and their 17.4 yards allowed on kickoff returns tied for fourth best in the NFL.

But Plan B losses and a surplus of penalties made the special teams less effective in 1989.

"We've always stressed eliminating the penalties in the kicking game," Smith said. "Your kickoff return team doesn't want to hold back the offense with penalties."

Cris Dishman and Eugene Seale were two of Smith's best special teams troops, but were often criticized as being too war-like.

They expect improvement this season.

"We've got all the hustle we've had in the past, we're young and we'll continue to grow," Seale said. "We haven't gone against any top notch competition, so I can't dare comment (on strengths)."

Dishman says he's learned from his coach.

"I guess the strength of the special teams is Coach Smith," Dishman said. "He takes the special teams seriously. He's teaching all the young guys the right techniques."

It took Smith much of last season to put his unit back together after Plan B. The feeling of togetherness wasn't there at the beginning.

"We went through much of the year and we weren't as good as we were the first year," Smith said. "But it took us about six games to start to be better."

With the groundwork established last season, Smith and his group hit the practice field at training camp with renewed "hit the beach" vigor.

"This year, our goal is to start off that way, and when we play Atlanta (season opener) we want to be a great special teams unit," Smith said.

McNeil, who plagued the Oilers as the Browns' punt returner the past four seasons, will help the special team production, Smith said.

"Besides being a little quick guy, he's also competitive and very tough," Smith said. "He doesn't want to be the punt returner, he wants to be the best punt returner. He wants to get to the Pro Bowl."

"Anytime you have that attitude, you have success."

McNeil hopes to play more offense in the Oilers' run-and-shoot, but he's also anxious to be a member of the "hit the beach" crew.

He's already hearing himself called the Oilers' best kick returner since Billy "White Shoes" Johnson.

Rookie League champs

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE — Two U.S. boxers won gold medals at the Goodwill Games on Saturday, then the shooting started.

The United States had three boxers going for gold Saturday and Sergio Reyes and Tim Austin came up winners. Teammate Raul Marquez lost a 4-1 decision to Francisc Vastag of Romania in the 147-pound division.

"My plans didn't go as I expected, but I still thought I pulled out the decision," Marquez said.

Reyes, a Marine lance corporal, beat Serafim Todorov of Bulgaria 3-2 at 119 pounds, and Tim Austin had a 3-2 decision over Dzhambulat Mutayev in the 112-pound division.

Austin's bout could not have been closer. Two judges gave the fight to Austin by a point, two others had the Soviet by a point, and the fifth had it even. Under international rules, however, the fifth judge was forced to pick a winner, and he picked Austin.

The U.S. has five more boxers going in the six finals Sunday, but two of them will fight each other — Oscar de la Hoya and Ivan Robinson for the 125-pound gold medal.

The U.S. hockey team won its way into a gold-medal game with a victory over previously undefeated Canada, 5-4.

Goaltender Guy Hebert stopped all four Canadian shots in the shootout as the teams took turns firing point-blank at the net. The shootout followed a 10-minute scoreless period. The score was 4-4 after regulation, and the U.S. team was awarded a fifth goal for winning the shootout.

Tim Sweeney and Tony Amonte both connected in the shootout for the United States. Sweeney put a shot between goalie Warren Sharples' legs on the first attempt, and Amonte's wrist shot beat Sharples to the stick side.

Canada tied the score on a goal by Kent Manderville with 6:32 left in the 3rd period after Tom Pederson had put the Americans ahead 4-3.

The U.S. will play the winner of Saturday's later semifinal between the Soviet Union and Sweden.

The U.S. women's basketball team beat Bulgaria 106-67 and also will play for the gold medal Sunday.

"We never fool ourselves for a moment against the strongest competition," Bulgarian coach Ivan Lepitchev said.

Teresa Edwards led six Americans in double figures with 19 points, and the U.S. team outscored Bulgaria 15-6 to lead 81-60 with nine minutes left. The Bulgarians scored only seven points in the final nine minutes, and the U.S. team outscored Bulgaria 13-0 over the final 2:57.

"This game, in particular, was sort of hard to get up for because we played them in Malaysia, and we knew we could beat them," said Lynette Woodard, who joined teammate Carolyn Jones in scoring 12 points.

Bulgaria trailed 55-39 at halftime and went on an 11-2 run early in the second half to cut the margin to 66-54. That's when the U.S. team started its 15-6 run, putting the game out of reach.

"It's a little difficult when you win by 39 points, but I don't think we played very well, particularly in the first half," U.S. coach Theresa Grentz said. But, she said, in the second half the team's "maturity and experience" began to show.

CFA-ABC pact could violate antitrust laws

DALLAS (AP) — Some staff members of the Federal Trade Commission believe the College Football Association is an illegal cartel, an opinion that could doom a record television contract with ABC Sports, according to a published report.

The FTC staff has said that provisions of the five-year pact between the CFA and ABC could violate federal antitrust laws, The Dallas Morning News reported.

The newspaper quoted attorneys and witnesses in the case as saying that some of the FTC staff believes the CFA is an illegal cartel. The CFA is a coalition of 64 NCAA Division I-A universities.

The five-member FTC delayed action in the case until next month, when it could send the case to an administrative hearing or dismiss it, the newspaper said.

"My understanding of what's going on is that it is virtually a certainty that the FTC will proceed against the CFA and ABC," an attorney told the newspaper.

Staff recommendations are not binding, but any action by the FTC short of dismissal leaves the CFA's 5-year, $160 million contract with ABC Sports in jeopardy.

If the CFA is ruled in violation of antitrust laws, so-called "super conferences" would market their games to the networks. The Big Ten and Pacific-10 conferences, which are not CFA members, have such a deal with ABC.

"My understanding is the staff has made a number of suggestions," said an attorney for the CFA. "They don't agree as to what the commission should do, if anything."

"Clearly, we would prefer that the contract not be found to be in violation," said Dr. Robert Lawless, president of Texas Tech University, who recently began a term as CFA chairman.

The CFA began marketing football games in 1984. In June of that year, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the NCAA violated antitrust law by selling such TV rights. The CFA now has agreements with CBS and ESPN.

More competition ups ante in fight for federal science aid

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The two companies competing to build $1 billion worth of bus-sized magnets for the superconducting super collider both have promised to manufacture them in the home state of a key senator.

The National Science Foundation, a government agency hoping to expand its budget, treated five congressional staffers to a tour of U.S. research stations in Antarctica. And the private National Foundation for Ileitis and Colitis got the actress Mary Ann Mobley to beseech a congressional committee to boost spending on the digestive diseases.

It's all part of the increasingly intense competition for federal research and development dollars. Though the kitty will reach $64 billion this year — of a $1.2 trillion overall budget — scientists say it is too small.

Federal science spending is feeling pressure from within and without. The huge federal deficit means there is less money for all government programs, including science.

There also are demands on the government's science dollar from a growing number of big-ticket projects like the $8 billion super collider, an atom smasher to be built in Texas, and the $30 billion space station. Thus, researchers are vying ever harder to persuade Congress to give them a piece of the budget pie.

"There is a lot of money out there, but these sums are considerably less than is needed to do the job and the competition is greater," said Jerold Roschwalb, lobbyist for the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges, whose schools rely heavily on federal research aid.

The situation has driven some scientists to venture into Congress' budget process as never before.

Recently, two groups — the American Society for Cell Biology and the American Society for Biochemistry and Molecular Biology — hired former Maine Democratic Rep. Peter Kyros for about $100,000 to lobby Congress to increase federal medical research grants.

"Our members felt the situation had gotten so bad that it was time for something new and innovative," said Peter Farnham, spokesman for the biochemistry society. "All of our members live and die on the availability of these grants."

Other scientific organizations have long believed that getting active in the budget process is a must. About 20 colleges and universities have lobbying offices in Washington, while dozens of others have retained lobbying firms.

John Farrar, president of the Digestive Disease National Coalition, testified before the House and Senate Appropriations committees for five years before showing up this year with Mobley, an actress who has battled her own digestive ailments.

"The fact is nobody knows" what his appearances accomplish, Farrar said. "But it seems to me if you don't show up, you know you won't get your share."

Dangling jobs is another approach.

Last summer, General Dynamics announced that if the Department of Energy picked it to build giant magnets for the super collider, it would manufacture them in Hammond, La.

Its competitor, Grumman Corp., said in May of this year that it would build the magnets in Shreveport, La., if it won the competition.

Executives for both contractors cited the proximity of the Louisiana sites to Waxahachie, Texas, where the atom smasher is to be built. They also cited supplies of skilled workers.

But the firms also had positioned themselves to deliver hundreds of jobs to Sen. J. Bennett Johnston's home state. The Louisiana Democrat is chairman of the Senate's Appropriations energy and water subcommittee and the Energy and Natural Resources Committee. Both panels play crucial roles in providing money for the super collider.

"I guess it didn't hurt," General Dynamics spokesman Jack Isabel said of the relation between the company's decision to locate in Louisiana and the fact that it is Johnston's state.

"That's not a factor," said Grumman spokeswoman Miriam L. Reid, adding, "We certainly are aware of Senator Johnston."

Another way to draw attention to a project is to bring decision-makers out to the lab — all expenses paid.

Last December, the National Science Foundation — one of 96 federal agencies and agency subdivisions involved in science — did what it does every year: It invited congressional staffers to visit federal bases in Antarctica.

Five aides accepted, all from Congress' budget and appropriations committees. They were flown commercially to New Zealand and carried to Antarctica on a scheduled cargo run by a foundation-owned C-130 aircraft. There, they spent four days being ferried by helicopter to research facilities.

The cost to taxpayers was about $27,000, according to figures provided by Joel Widder, the foundation's head of congressional affairs.

"We've instilled in them a never-to-be-forgotten experience," Widder said.

Competitors for federal science dollars do battle in two legislative arenas. One is the budget resolution, which makes non-binding recommendations for broad areas of spending such as health, defense and environment.

The second target is the 13 annual appropriations bills, which actually provide the money for government. Each bill finances one or more agencies, and federal science spending is spread among nine of the measures.

In 1988 — the most recent year for which the National Science Foundation has figures — the government distributed science funds to 2,769 colleges and universities, 46 academic system offices such as state university headquarters, and 717 non-profit, independent institutions like hospitals.

There also are 218,000 scientists and engineers on the government payroll and many of them are additionally eligible for federal grants. And the foundation says that last year, there were 41,270 companies involved in high technology, many of which sought government contracts.

Cherubs line the path to the Precious Moments Chapel in Carthage.

Standing among the thick dogwoods of the Ozarks, the Precious Moments Chapel is artist Samuel Butcher's tribute to the Lord.

A guardian angel arrives to secretly render aid in this painting at the chapel, based on Psalm 91:11.

Precious Moments Chapel fulfills artist's dream of tribute to God in foothills of Ozark Mountains

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

What began as one obscure artist's expression of love for his God has grown into the most popular series of collectable figurines in the world and there is no end in sight to their growing popularity.

Over the last 12 years the Precious Moments collection, created by artist Samuel J. Butcher, has gone from being just another set of figurines to a near-obsession for hundreds of thousands of people around the United States.

Over 800 different sculptures are now available for Precious Moments fans, many having a spiritual title or significance that echoes Butcher's dedication to the Lord.

On the edge of the Ozarks, in Carthage, Missouri, Butcher has built the Precious Moments Chapel on the same land where his home is located.

Every day thousands of Precious Moments enthusiasts and their families journey to the site, a sort of collector's Mecca, to tour the chapel, a tribute from Butcher to the Lord.

Butcher, whose creations come in porcelain, plastic play dolls, stuffed animals, on plates, in pewter and on clothing, decided to build the cathedral after seeing the Sistine Chapel in Italy, painted by another famous artist, Michelangelo.

"As my eyes moved from one panel to the other, I could feel his passion to portray the judgement of an almighty God," Butcher said. "Could it be, I thought to myself, that someday God might grant me the privilege of sharing what light He has given me by painting what I feel He has to say about His grace."

Butcher located his home in the Ozarks six years ago and quickly began building the chapel on the same grounds. Though Butcher insists the chapel isn't finished, it is simply stunning; as impressive for its artistic and architectural merits as its spiritual message.

Stained glass windows, murals and huge, hand-carved mahogany doors all bear the Precious Moments style and give witness to Butcher's religious devotion.

On the ceiling are hundreds of angels dancing before their Lord. The walls contain 54 murals covering 5,000 square feet.

The largest takes up the entire front wall behind the pulpit and details how Butcher envisions heaven to be. At the pearly gates is a depository for tissues, since Scripture teaches "He will wipe every tear from their eyes."

Also pictured is an angel holding the crutches of a little lame girl who is running to her parents for the first time. Another scene features a family being reunited for eternity.

At the very center of the mural is the only "adult" found in Precious Moments art - Jesus Christ. Butcher's art shows everyone, even the old, as having children's features, since we are all God's children. In the mural, children of all ages gather before the Lord, seeing him face to face for the first time.

Much of the art in and around the chapel was designed by Butcher during trips to the Philippines, where he supports a variety of Christian mission projects.

Huge iron gates outside the chapel were drawn on a napkin at a restaurant in that country and then later in chalk on the street to show a Philippine iron worker exactly what Butcher wanted the gates to look like.

The doors, sculpted by Butcher's understudy, Nelson Lete, were carved out of Philippine mahogany and weigh over 300 pounds each. Butcher drew the designs for each one on huge sheets of butcher paper to show the understudy exactly what he wanted them to look like.

Among the murals in the chapel are depictions of the life of Christ from birth to resurrection, seven parables taught by Jesus, a series of Old Testament heroes, and the four means of worshipping God: prayer, praise, teaching and fellowship.

Butcher pays respect to fellow artisans from the Bible in one series of paintings featuring Precious Moments-styled versions of King David the musician, Bezalel the painter and St. Paul the writer.

Each phrase of the 23rd Psalm and the Beatitudes are depicted in intricate stained glass on outer halls of the chapel.

The only figurine kept in the chapel is the one that means the most to Butcher - the one that honors the memory of his mother, who died while Butcher was still struggling to make a name for himself.

In the statue, a little girl in a heavy coat is making snowballs and putting them in her mail box. It is titled "Sending You a White Christmas."

Butcher created the piece based on a story his mother told him from her childhood. She had moved to the northern plains from Florida and the first time she saw snow, she was so excited that she wanted to send some to her friends back in the more tropical climates.

Butcher says today that the piece signifies the importance his mother played in his later success.

Several gift shops, Tiffany's Restaurant, a cafe, a gallery of rare pieces and originals and a convention center round out the Precious Moments grounds and take several hours to tour.

For Precious Moments fans who stop to swap stories of what the figurines mean to them, the visit could easily take twice as long.

Admission is free, but reservations are required by calling 1-800-543-7975.

Plan to stay for lunch while on the grounds. The decor in Tiffany's with its majestic windows overlooking the Ozarks, indirect lavender lighting, live plants and splendid table settings create a rich effect that is as elegant as the food is tasty.

The convention center is where members of Precious Moments collectors' clubs gather several times a year to meet with Butcher and discuss their hobby. Collectors also have the opportunity, both through the mail and at the conventions, to purchase pieces not otherwise offered.

While many collectors became hooked on Precious Moments for their meaning or beauty, others might rightfully have more carnal motivation. Figurines which sold for less than $20 a decade ago can now fetch hundreds of dollars each.

No end is seen to the increasing value of the figurines, which skyrocket among collectors as soon as production is discontinued.

Ikey Earp, a retired Pampa Independent School District employee, said she began collecting Precious Moments figurines several years ago when her children gave her one of the statues after she broke a leg.

She now has over 200 Precious Moments items in her home. Her living room has become a huge museum/tribute to the effect Butcher's artwork has on people.

She recently gave a reporter a tour, discussing the meaning of each piece and how she came to acquire it. She also compared notes on how work on the chapel had progressed since her last visit.

Earp said she has attended Precious Moments conventions at the chapel and will do so again in the future. Her husband joins her on these pilgrimages, since he too is now a collector.

Earp and other collectors are on a first name basis with sales people at area Hallmark stores and other Precious Moments outlets around the nation. When a new piece arrives at the store, the rush is on to purchase it before others do.

A Precious Moments collector from Liberal, Kan., recently journeyed to Pampa for an afternoon when she learned the store here had a piece she was looking for.

Many collectors share similar stories of trips they have made across the region looking for must-haves for their collection.

While Earp and others may discuss the value of their Precious Moments, it quickly becomes clear that most of the real worth of the figurines is not in what they would bring on the secondary market, but in what they bring in memories and reflections.

Weddings are commemorated with the bride and groom speeding off for their honeymoon in a figurine entitled "Wishing You Roads of Happiness." A get-well greeting is found in the little girl on the stick horse with the title "Hope You're Up and On the Trail Again." For baptisms there is the pastor in a pool with a new Christian entitled "Let the Whole World Know."

And for the couple pondering monikers for their soon-to-be, there is an angel holding a book of names. The inscription on the bottom reads "Jesus is the Sweetest Name I Know."

Collector Earp said she has charted much of her life, both the secular and religious events, with the figurines, making them the most special kind of heirlooms for her children and grandchildren.

Back in Carthage, Butcher works almost daily making additions or changes in his chapel murals. As he pauses from his painting, he greets each wave of visitors, many of whom are eager to share how much the figurines mean to them.

Watching Butcher interact, one would believe he is hearing the stories for the first time.

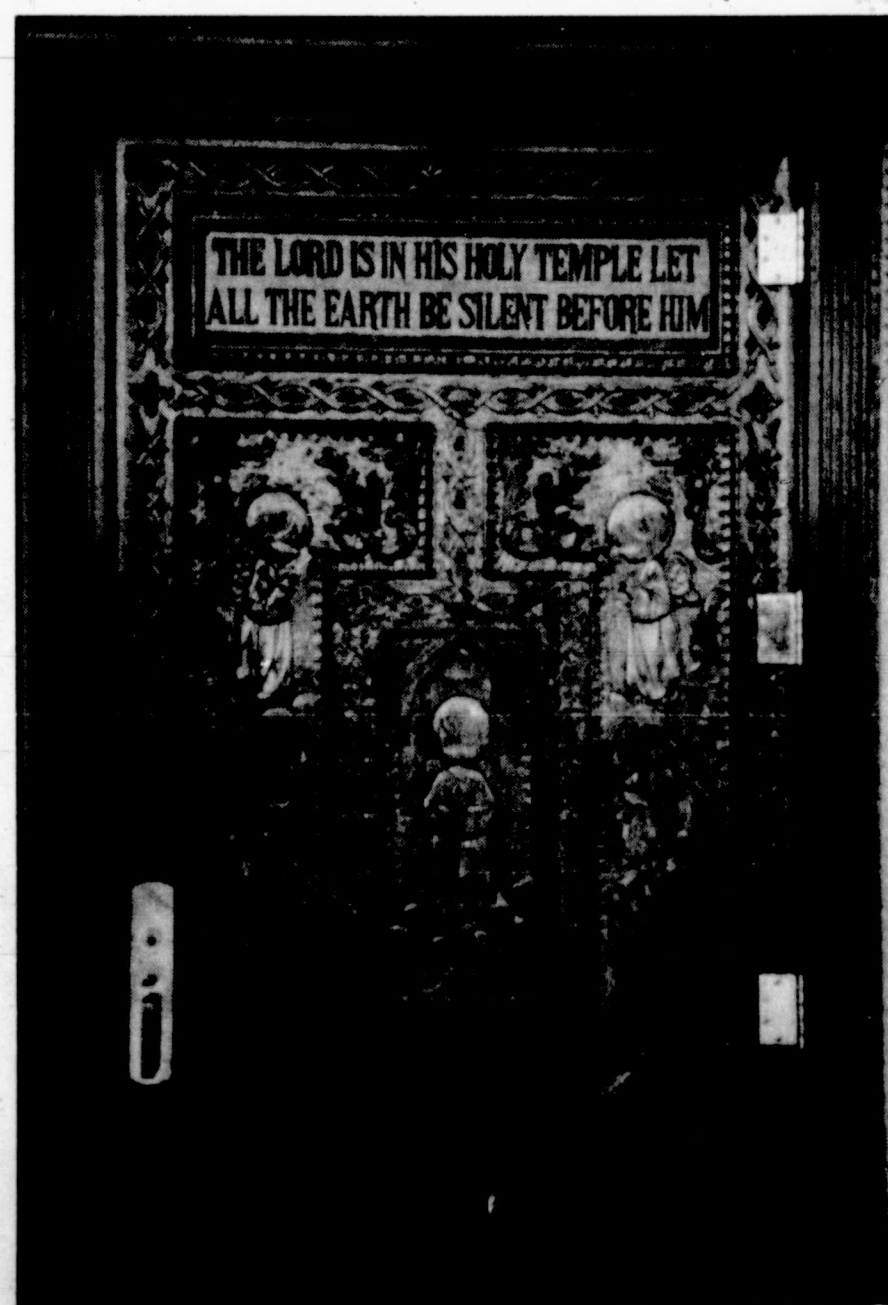

"I got my first one when our baby was born and we've been collecting ever since," a lady from Ohio tells Butcher, who looks directly at her, focusing intently on every word.

"I'm glad they have been meaningful to you," he replies, smiling and posing for yet another picture.

"You know," a tour guide tells a writer standing nearby, "he is that way with everybody. He is just always nice like that. Anytime I wonder what Jesus must have been like, I think of Sam Butcher."

Another guide later confirms that description. "That's why his figurines mean so much to people," she adds. "He puts the love of God in them. I don't know how he does it. He just does."

Photography by Jean Streetman-Ward & Bear Mills.

At the entrance to the chapel is a huge mahogany door reminding visitors to approach this House of God with respect and quiet dignity. Butcher did not intend for the chapel to be a "tourist stop," but rather a tribute to his Lord that could be shared with thousands of visitors each day.

Precious Moments collectables include porcelain figurines, dolls, cups, The Precious Moments Story and the New King James version of the Bible.

Butcher's vision of heaven is found on a mural that covers the entire wall of the chapel behind the pulpit. At the exact center of the work, barely visible in this picture, is the only adult found in his art, Jesus.

Large murals chart several of the parables Jesus taught, including, from left, the planter and the seeds, the prodigal son and the good shepherd. Above them in ovals are the first three paintings reflecting the life of Christ.

Rivera - Whitson

Geraldine Rivera and David Whitson were united in marriage in an afternoon ceremony on July 7 at the First Assembly of God Church with Norman Rushing of Central Baptist Church, officiating.

Parents of the bride are Rex and Erlinda Taylor. The groom is the son of Earl and Betty Whitson.

Elaine Rivera attended the bride as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Carmen Hopkins and Madella Harmon. Melissa Williams was the flower girl.

David Snuggs of Amarillo was best man. Groomsmen were Charles Paxton of Hollis, Okla. and Tom Jones of Amarillo. Aaron Paxton of Hollis was the ring bearer. Chase Roach and Johnny Snuggs were the ushers. Candlelighters were Melanee Grange and Michelle Whitson. Amy Turner registered guests. Wanjeta Hill was the musician and Mistie West was vocalist.

Servers at the reception that followed the wedding were Cindy Jones, Amarillo; Jeri Paxton, Hollis; Angie Taylor, Pampa; and Suzy Moore, Springfield, Colo.

The bride is accounts receivable assistant at Serco and is taking classes at Clarendon College. The groom is the assistant manager of Jay's Drive-Inn. After a honeymoon in San Antonio, the couple will make their home in Pampa.

Mr. & Mrs. C.H. Smiley

Smiley Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. C.H. Smiley of Lefors will be honored with a 50th wedding anniversary reception on Aug. 11 from 2 to 4 p.m. at the First Baptist Church of Lefors. Hosts for the event are Mr. and Mrs. Don Smith and Mr. and Mrs. C.E. Smiley, both of Amarillo, and Carolyn Kay Spence of Fort Worth.

Ursula Sue Ford married C.H. Smiley on Aug. 8, 1940 in Bentonville, Ark. The couple have been area residents for 49 years and have lived in Lefors for seven years. Mr. Smiley retired from Phillips Petroleum Co. He was an electrician for 42 years.

The couple's children are Carolyn Kay Spence, Fort Worth; Barbra Smith, Amarillo; and C.E. Smiley, Amarillo. They have eight grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Cicada killer wasps have arrived in Gray County

A very large wasp, the "cicada killer" is making its annual summer appearance in the Gray County area. This wasp is the largest in our area, being about 1 1/2 inches in length. It is black or rusty with yellow bands on the abdomen.

This wasp is much more interested in stinging Cicadas than people. They can often be seen dragging or flying and carrying paralyzed cicadas back to their nests.

At suitable nesting sites, the wasps excavate a tunnel into the soil at an angle for a distance of one to three feet. The main tunnel ends in a number of branches and cells. The burrows may be dug during the day and night. The excavation will often result in a large mound of dirt. The burrow entrances are left open during provisioning of the nest and may never be closed except when the wasps' entire job is completed.

Depending upon their size, from one to four cicadas are provisioned in each underground cell. The female lays an egg on the last cicada she places in a cell. As many as four females may provision a single nest simultaneously although only one of them made the initial excavation.

The wasp larva which hatches from the egg has a cicada meal waiting. After consuming the cicadas provisioned in a cell, the wasp larva remains underground until the following July when the adult wasp emerges again to repeat the cycle.

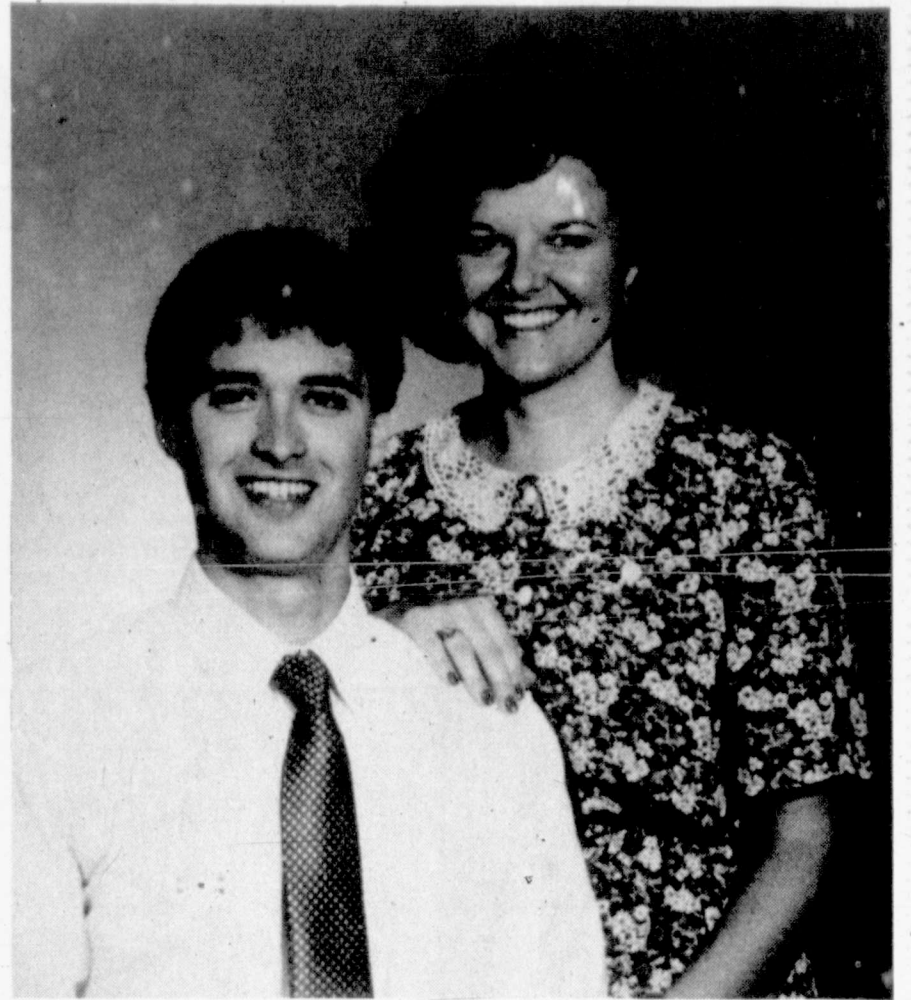

Cicada killers are not aggressive and seldom attack humans. The males are not capable of stinging. Only the female can sting.

Rebecca Ainsworth in OSU's college of home economics.

"Basically, in a short-term environment, you can go with most any color," says Simpson, adding that even strong colors seem to cause no mood or performance changes.

Ainsworth's study was based on an earlier test done in Texas that also produced no statistically significant effects of color. Results of that study implied that a stimulating effect was caused by changing from one environment to another, regardless of color.

John Hursey & Tammy Johnson

Johnson - Hursey

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Johnson announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Tammy, to John Hursey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Richard Hursey of Lawrenceville, Ga.

The couple plan to be married on Sept. 29 at the First Baptist Church in Pampa.

The bride-elect graduated from Pampa High School in 1984 and Angelo State University in 1988 with a degree in nursing. She is presently employed as an RN at the University of Texas Medical Branch Hospital in Galveston.

The prospective groom graduated from Central Gwinnett High School and Southern College of Technology. He is presently employed with Novatel Communications as project engineer. He is also youth counselor for Central Gwinnett Alliance Church.

Cicada killers are considered beneficial insects because they prey on cicadas. However they can be present in sufficient numbers as to be a nuisance. For control you may use one of the outdoor aerosol sprays containing pyrethrum or dust the nest entrance with Sevin.

Vegetable Garden Questions

Q. What causes the black spots on the bottom of my tomatoes?

A. Blossom end rot, caused by improper moisture. Maintain uniform soil moisture as the fruit nears maturity. Deep, slow watering every few days (3-6) is needed.

Q. How do I keep squash bugs from literally destroying my plants?

A. Squash bugs are very difficult to control especially if control measures begin when the insects have reached a mature stage. For control to be satisfactory, apply insecticides such as Sevin or Thiodan early in the season while the insects are small. Applications, whether sprays or dusts, must be thorough with complete coverage. When utilizing these insecticides, the materials must come in contact with the insect to be effective. Apply the chemicals to the base of the plant, underneath the foliage and in some cases underneath the stems of the plant for satisfactory control. Removing and destroying egg masses on the bottom of leaves aids in control. Also, the hand pick and stomp method works well for a few plants.

Q. The leaves of my cucumbers develop yellow spots on the upper side and a downy growth underneath.

A. This is downy mildew, an airborne fungus. It is controlled by using resistant varieties and applying foliage fungicide. The materials maneb, chlorothalonil, maneb plus zinc and captan have controlled it successfully. Downy mildew is apt to be a problem during the cool, rainy days of spring and early fall.

Q. My bean leaves have large brown spots on them. The damage looks more severe near the soil. However, it is beginning to cover the plant.

A. Although a number of leaf spots occur on beans, one of the most severe in Texas is Anthracnose. It is caused by a fungus that is airborne. It can be controlled with chlorothalonil, maneb, maneb plus zinc or zineb sprays. Begin applications at first sign of disease. Repeat in 10 to 14 days for two to three applications.

Mr. & Mrs. Ezra King

King Anniversary

Ezra and Geneva King of Liberal, Kan., will be honored with a 50th wedding anniversary reception on Aug. 11 from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Mary Frame Community building in Liberal. The reception is being hosted by their children, Lavelya Dorris of Clovis, Ezra III of Garden City, Kan., Charles of Colorado Springs, and Carrie Jeanne Rose of Claremore, Okla.

Geneva Stephens married Ezra King on Aug. 8, 1940 in Amarillo. The couple were raised in Pampa and two of their children were born here. Mrs. King during the 60's worked for the Pampa News as a teletype operator.

Parents can help with their children develop writing skills

Learning to write is an important task of childhood. The U.S. Department of Education has noted that "children who are encouraged to draw and scribble stories at an early age will later learn to compose more easily, more effectively, and with greater confidence than children who do not have this encouragement."

Parents can assist their children in acquiring writing skills in a number of ways:

- Provide a special place for writing and drawing which is equipped with paper, pencils, crayons, felt pens, envelopes, tape and staples, so that children can explore writing at any time.

- Provide bank forms, memo pads, prescription pads and pads for taking orders in restaurants for make believe play. Make believe play for this type will stretch the child's imagination and broaden their experiences.

- Help the child in writing letters to grandparents, sick friends, authors of books and famous people.

- Put little notes in lunch boxes and back packs. These can be picture notes of simple messages like "Hi! I hope you are having a good day. I love you!"

- Help children write and illustrate their own books by stapling the pages together.

Model writing for children so they will recognize the importance of writing. You can encourage this by writing them private notes, writing letters to family and friends (be sure to allow the child to draw a picture or write a letter to include), letting them observe you writing grocery lists or recipes.

Praise children's attempts to spell as these show they are learning the relationship between writing and speech. "Correct" spelling will come later.

Homemakers' News
Donna Brauchi

Avoid criticizing neatness, spelling or grammar. It is important that children learn that writing is communication and that it is fun.

For more information on child growth and development, contact your Gray County Extension Agent.

Back-to-school plans announced by PISD

Pampa Independent School District recently released this information regarding enrollment for the 1990-91 school year.

New students who have moved to Pampa need to contact the appropriate school campus for enrollment procedure. Principals will be on campus beginning Aug. 8.

Headstart students need to contact Baker Elementary. Pre-K students need to call Horace Mann Elementary.

Kindergarten children who are five years old before Sept. 1 will be tested for placement during their first two weeks of school. Any student who has not been pre-enrolled will need to bring birth certificate, immunization records and social security number to elementary registration on Wednesday, Aug. 22.

Pre-K through fifth grade students will register Wednesday, Aug. 22 from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. at elementary campuses. Buses will pick up students at the usual time and will leave at 10:30 a.m. to return students.

Sixth grade orientation is set for 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. Aug. 22 at the Pampa Middle School Auditorium. Students will receive schedules and visit each of their assigned classes. Schedules for students in the seventh and eighth grades will be mailed the week before school starts on Aug. 27.

High school students, grades 9-12, will need to pick up their schedules from the high school Aug. 14-16 between the hours of 8 a.m. and noon and 1 to 5 p.m.

Varsity football and volleyball will begin on Aug. 13 and freshman football will begin on Aug. 15.

Telephone numbers for all the schools have been changed because of a new computer system. The new number for Carver Center is 669-4700. For more information regarding enrollment contact Lynda Queen.

Mr. & Mrs. Thomas W. Kitchens

Kitchens Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Kitchens were honored with a 50th wedding anniversary reception on July 29 from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Pampa Country Club. Hosting the event were Mrs. Kitchens's sisters, Ava Warren, Betty Pat Howell, Frances Johnson and Fay Akers, all of Pampa.

Eva Swafford married Thomas W. Kitchens on July 29, 1940 in Amarillo. They have lived in Pampa for 50 years. Mr. Kitchens was born in Pampa and has lived here all his life. Mrs. Kitchens was born in McLean and moved to Pampa in 1936.

Mr. Kitchens retired in 1976 from a service station business that he owned and operated for 30 years. Mrs. Kitchens retired from Cabot Corporation in 1980 after 34 years. They enjoy golfing and fishing.

Club News

Altrusa Club
Altrusa Club met on July 23 at the Coronado Inn Starlight Room with Joyce Williams, president, presiding. The vocational services committee presented the program entitled "No Negligence: If it's to be, it is up to me."

Judy Warner introduced Jerry Lane, guest speaker, who presented the program on the student assistance program at Pampa Learning Center.

Greeters were Dawna Mauldin and Brenda Tucker. The next meeting will be Aug. 13 at the Starlight Room. Delegates to District Convention will be elected with the Community Services Committee in charge.

SGT Retiree Club
The SGT (Skelly-Getty-Texaco) Retirement Club met recently for their monthly meeting. They enjoyed some good old-fashioned string music by Creed Smith on guitar, O.V. (Bill) Bailey on base fiddle and Richard Brantley on fiddle. Thirty members and one guest also enjoyed homemade ice cream served by Mary Ann and Lawrence Ebenkamp and Betty and R.H. Dyson.

Salvation Army plans back-to-school new shoe program

The Salvation Army will begin their back-to-school new shoe program Aug. 20-24 and 27-31. Last year the Salvation Army was able to put new shoes on the feet of 175 children in Pampa.

This year the Army is projecting to help 200 children and is requesting donations from the community for $25 per child.

Families that are applying to the program may come by 701 S. Cuyler from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Aug. 20-24 or 1 to 5 p.m. Aug. 27-31. Families will need to bring with them birth certificates for each child and proof of income and residency.

New video highlights the best in children's videos

By PAUL BOCCARDI
AP Newsfeatures

NEW YORK (AP) — In an attempt to highlight the best children's videos, the American Library Association has made a video of its own.

More than 200 new children's videos are added monthly to the thousands already available. "Choosing the Best in Children's Video" is the ALA's attempt to help parents zero in on those that will stimulate a child's imagination, not just occupy his time.

Produced by Joshua Greene and narrated by Christopher Reeve, "Choosing the Best in Children's Video" incorporates clips and stills from more than 100 programs to illustrate the diversity of films available: book adaptations, original drama, musical performance, instructional shows and theatrical features.

Peggy Charren, president of Action for Children's Television, emphasized the positive impact that videos for children can have. "If it's terrific," she says, "it's not passive. A good story involves activity."

However, she says videos are no substitute for books. "Videos are as good as a book," she says, "but

Red Lobster offers recipes

NEW YORK (AP) — Red Lobster restaurants nationwide are offering a brochure with new recipes for light, easy-to-prepare seafood salads. Included are recipes for Hot and Spicy Oriental Shrimp Salad, Seafood Salad with Puffy Omelet and Dill Seafood Salad.

To receive the brochure by mail, send a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to: "Seafood Salad Sensations," Red Lobster, Box 593330, Orlando, FL 32859.

4-H'ers compete well at state horse show

Joe Vann

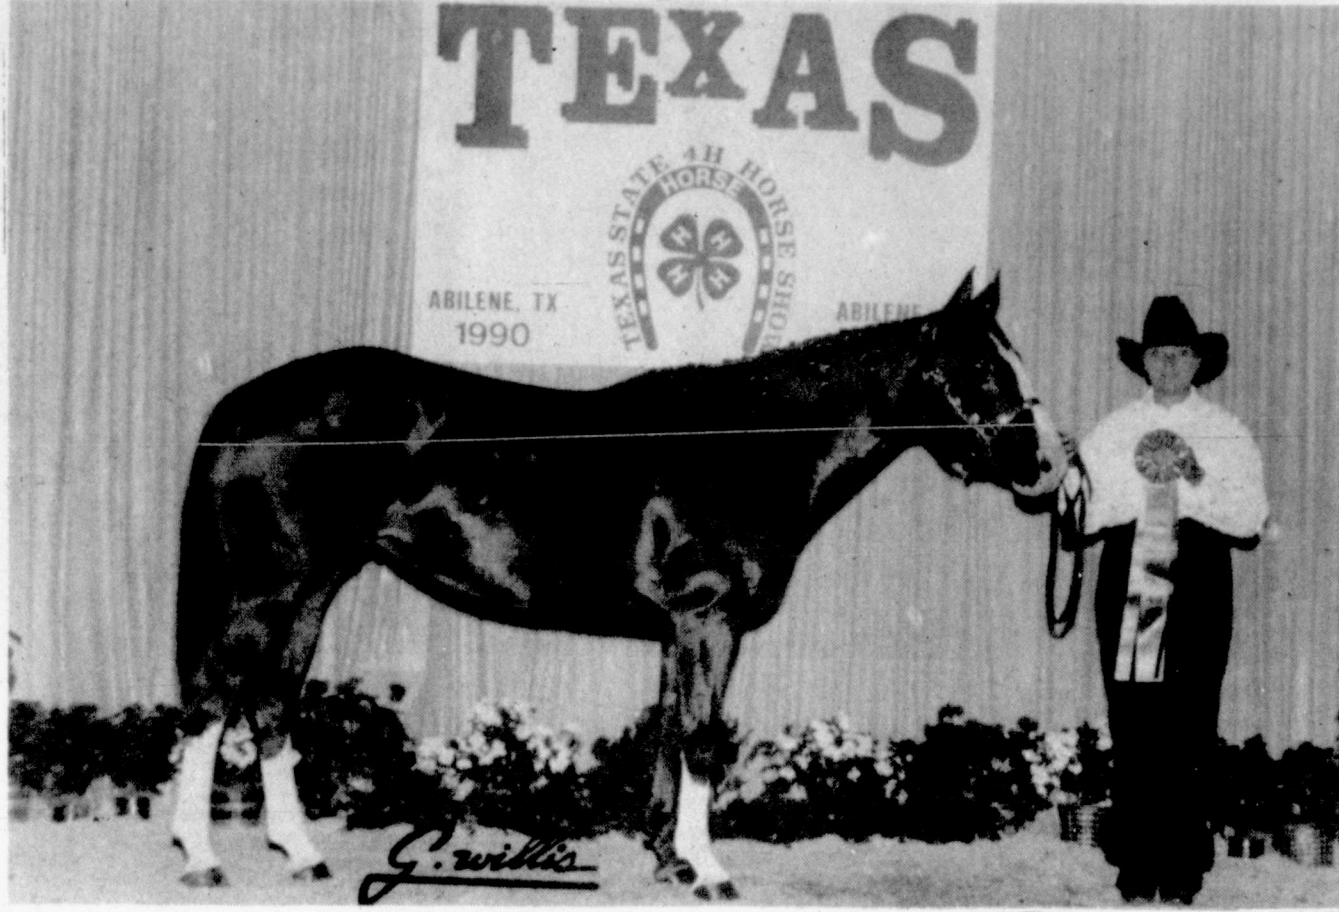

Angie Underwood and Michel Reeves, two Gray County 4-Hers competed very well in the always highly competitive Texas 4-H Horse Show. These two young ladies were among some 450 4-H Youth from all across Texas to meet in Abilene last week and try to earn that state championship in several different events.

In the Halter Show, Angie Underwood's grade mare "Candy" earned a very respectable third place. Michel Reeves also showing in the Grade Mare class, earned a 5th place with her mare "Goldie Taylor."

In the speed events both Angie and Michel qualified for the finals go-around. These two Gray County youth were the only 4-Hers out of the 20 counties in the Panhandle District to make the final round.

Michel Reeves on the back of her "Goldie Taylor" earned a 7th place in the stake race. Angie Underwood with her mount "Candy" placed 14th in the stake race. There was a total of 118 entries in the stake race.

With 128 entries in the pole bending contest, Michel placed 17th. Our congratulations goes out to both of these 4-Hers and their parents for a job well done. We all know that many hours of hard work and practice went into the success that these youth enjoyed.

Re-Enrollment Time

The start of the 1990-91 school year is just a matter of few weeks away. That means it's time for a new 4-H year to also begin. Several Gray County 4-H Clubs will begin to hold monthly meetings starting in September.

With the start of these 4-H club meetings, Gray County will be hosting several events in an effort to recruit new members, and re-enroll past members.

On Tuesday, Aug. 21, the Gray County 4-H will be hosting a Project show in the Pampa Mall. 4-H Youth will be on hand from 11 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. to answer questions and show off some 20 different projects that 4-H offered in Gray County last year. This promises to be a really fun event with lots of neat and interesting things to look at.

A 4-H Skating Party has also been set for Thursday, Aug. 30, from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. at Skatetown. We will be enrolling 4-Hers and having a great deal of fun.

If you are interested in 4-H, please plan to attend each of these events. For more details on the Gray County 4-H Program, call the Gray County Extension Office at 669-8033.

Postcards give students window to the world

DEAR READERS: It all began when some fourth- through sixth-grade special-education students from Santa Maria, Calif., wrote me a letter asking my readers to please send picture postcards and state their occupations.

I published their request, assuring them that my readers were the nicest people in the world. Nine weeks later, I received this letter from Donna Eschen — their teacher:

DEAR ABBY: We have been overwhelmed with postcards and gifts from your readers! So far, more than 40,000 pieces of mail have been received! All seven continents are represented. Picture postcards from foreign countries from Zimbabwe to Antarctica to Iceland to New Zealand arrived. The generosity of your readers is unbelievable!

Letters and autographed pictures came from Burt Reynolds; Virginia's Gov. L. Douglas Wilder; Grant Devine, premier of Saskatchewan; Gov. Stan Stephens of Montana; Maureen O'Connor, mayor of San Diego; Mike Schmidt, former Philadelphia baseball star; Al Unser Jr., Indy race car driver; NASA astronaut Ken Bowersox; James Kearney, vice president, Paper Corp. of America — the largest supplier to the U.S. for postage stamps and passports; William H. Fraker, production editor of Barron's; Richard Austin, secretary of state of Michigan; Andrea Barber, actress on ABC's "Full House"; Janet Barnes, Maryland Public Television; and Dr. Douglas Livermore, chairman, Economics and Business Department, Morningside College, Sioux City, Iowa. Renee Williams, an artist with Hallmark, sent an illustrated card. Ronald W. Allen, chairman of Delta Airlines, sent a card; so did state Rep. Joseph F.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Toohey of Louisiana. And "Jeff's — An Affair With Flowers," Beverly Hills, sent corsages and boutonnières for the entire class.

A King's cake arrived from New Orleans, and Nancy and Fred Hoffman sent a chunk of the Berlin Wall! The mail is still arriving: a postcard from Clint Eastwood, and gift certificates for the entire class for El Pollo Loco. A grandfather from Almonte, Ontario, Canada, bet the kids $25 they couldn't find his little town on the map. (He lost — and sent the money.) We've papered our classroom ceiling-to-floor with picture postcards from all over the world!

We have tallied more than 300 occupations, including bear hunter, alligator wrestler, coffee taster, priest, nun, grave digger, bounty hunter, shepherd, newspaper carrier and New York cabdriver.

The children love to read. That's what this project was all about — improving their literacy, fostering a love of reading, and gaining greater knowledge of geography and occupations.

The local postmaster came to tell the children how the mail works.

Four total strangers by the name of "Eschen" wrote, wondering if we could be related. And the advice most people wanted to convey was: "Stay in school, get an education, and don't do drugs!"

As I write this, an autographed picture just arrived from President

Former long-time resident of Pampa, Lois Enloe Skidmore, will be honored today at her 70th birthday party. Friends and family are invited to attend the celebration today at Central Baptist Church Parlor, 513 East Francis, from 2-4 p.m.

Mrs. Skidmore has three daughters: Mrs. Jean (Joe) Dunn of Dumas, Texas, Mrs. Paula (Tolbert) Barton of Albuquerque, NM, and Mrs. Linda (Ron) Kinney of Oklahoma City.

Mrs. Skidmore lived in Pampa all her life until Moving to Albuquerque, NM, two years ago to live with her daughter, Paula. She is the widow of Paul Skidmore, and is retired from the JCPenney Company.

NEW VACCINE FOR LYME DISEASE!!!

According to the Journal for the American Veterinary Medical Association, Lyme disease is now the most frequently reported disease that is transmitted from ticks to human beings, in the United States. It has been reported in 44 of the continental states, and appears to be still spreading.

The culprit is a spirochete, Borrelia burgdorferi, carried primarily by ticks, but it also can be transmitted by fleas, biting flies, and other blood-sucking insects.

Symptoms in dogs and most animals include fever, loss of appetite, and most important, crippling arthritis. Enlarged lymph nodes, and permanent kidney and heart disease are common in dogs, while horses have had damage to the eyes and brain.

In humans, exposure to B. burgdorferi initially results in flu-like symptoms, followed by skin lesions (which may be so minimal as to not be noticed.) Weeks to months later, signs involving the brain include meningitis and other similar symptoms, as well as arthritis. Another common problem involves fluctuating degrees of atrioventricular heart block, as well as myopericarditis.

If you or your pets have any of these symptoms, ask your doctor(s) to send a blood sample to be checked for this disease. The test results now are quite reliable. Prevention for your pets can now be easily accomplished. We have a vaccine which is given in a 2-or 3-shot series, depending on the age of the dog or cat. (At this time supplies are limited, so I would recommend you call soon.)

If you find ticks on your pet, do not attempt to remove them with your bare hands—use tweezers if you feel you must pull them off. A better way is to have your pet bathed and dipped by a professional.

Keeping your yard sprayed to prevent fleas and ticks, keeping your pet treated, (tick collar, sprays, etc.) as well as vaccinating for Lyme Disease, should prevent the disease from affecting your pet and your family.

For more information and appointment for vaccination, call your veterinarian.

Senior Golfers' wives entertained at fashion show

Trips and celebrations work together to spin a calendar full of activities. All events make for good rummaging on recent happenings about town.

Ernestine Pulse came back home to rest after a round of whirlwind trips. In May she flew to Dallas where she met her son Dr. Terry Pulse and his friend, Michael Arrington. The three flew to Los Angeles for a cruise to Catalina, Ensenada and back to L.A. Her son, Lee Haslam and his wife Melissa, came from Pasadena to see them off. While in L.A. Rod Roddy of The Price Is Right and a patient of Terry's, gave the three VIP passes to the show, which allowed them backstage where the party atmosphere prevailed.

Next was a week in Pasadena with Lee, Yvonne and Melissa. She met Terry again in Midland for the high school graduation of her granddaughter, Kim, Lee's daughter. Later Ernestine drove to El Paso to visit her sister, flew on to Phoenix and back to visit her son John and Cindy and grandchildren, Shelly and John, Jr. Her sister, Shelly and John-John, came to Pampa with her. Ernestine wonders now how she ever had time to work. Sounds like an exciting summer.

Irene and Irl Smith and their daughter, Rochelle Lacy, attended a photographer's convention in Las Vegas.

Mary and Dwight Fiveash flew to Florida to visit Dwight's parents and then drove back on a round robin trip that included taking in the sights at New Orleans.

Rev. Gene and Jean Allen came home only days ago from a leisurely vacation spent in Springfield, Mo. with their granddaughter Hailey and her parents, Carol and Garland Allen. Other points of interest included Branson, Mo., being part of a crowd of 4,000 people who saw the Passion Play at Eureka Springs, Ark., a visit with Heidi and Randy Roush at Grapevine, a visit with Jean's sister, Juanita and Thurmas Elswick at Lake Brownwood.

Filling in for Gene at Briarwood Full Gospel Church was Rev. John McKinzie, associate pastor. John and Melissa celebrated their wedding anniversary a few days ago. Belated anniversary wishes!

Bonnie and Armal Finney spent a well-earned vacation visiting relatives and taking in the sights of California.

Harold Anderson, longtime Pampa now living in Atlanta, combined the pleasure of visiting with his mother Rena Belle Anderson and friends with business.

Rev. John and Cindy Judson, Andy and Katie, vacationed for a week at Estes Park, Colo.

Peeking at Pampa By Katie

Joe Gracey of Highland Village visited his grandparents Loretta and Wayne Robinson and attended the wedding of Jim Massick and Sharla Vaughn.

A few days ago Bob Rice and Gloria Crawford were married in the backyard of the Bob and Fauncine Mack home. Debi and three houseguests, Eileen Theissen, New Canaan, Conn., Leslie Roskind, Boston and Grace Whiteman, LaJolla, Calif., decorated the area with flags and big fluffy yellow bows. Debi and Carl Atwood were attendants. June Ivory, Lilith Brainard and Andrea Mitchell prepared a champagne brunch with emphasis on an egg dish Andrea prepared. Bob's parents, Bill and Billie Depue and Gloria's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Emilo Gracia came from Clayton.

A tacked on p.s.: Debi's houseguests named above were an important part of the decorating crew for the barbecue held in the Mack home a couple of days before the wedding.

"Best Wishes!" "Good Luck!!" to Glyn Kirby, who will be moving soon to Dimmitt to make her home close to family members. Glyn, an active doer and goer, will be missed in several circles both in Pampa and Groom, where she made her home for many years.

Have you noticed how pretty Pampa yards and flowers are since the heavenly rains came? Special words to Virginia and Lloyd Gooch for their myriads of pretty flowers and neatly groomed yard.

An added note: Aren't the "naked ladies" beautiful this year? Clarification: The naked ladies mentioned are the tall beautiful pink lilies that rise straight from the ground without benefit of a leaf that shows.

Doug and Karen Reeves and her parents Alma and Bud Cumberland of Lefors are enjoying a vacation in Hawaii. They are visiting daughter, granddaughter and husband, Tracy and Kerry Zeek of Waianae.

The class of 1990 will be meeting Miss Mickey Dougherty, fiancée of Chad Darcé, so of Jo and Roland, at their class reunion this weekend. Chad recently graduated summa cum laude from Washington University and will enter law school at St. Louis University this fall. Chad and Mickey are sign interpreters for the deaf.

Pampans and Pampa merchants certainly enjoyed having the wives of Senior Golfers who came for the annual tournament. Gracious and charming were the two most used descriptive phrases. Remember that Jim Broyles won first place? Well, his lovely wife won a door prize of a gorgeous handbag from one of the ladies' stores.

Six ladies' stores furnished three models who showed three outfits at a special style show/luncheon for the wives. Bethany Knowles from Bobee J's was remembered for the black rompers she wore. Pam Story commanded a lot of attention with a turquoise denim pantsuit studded with silver nailheads and her quick change of hairdo for each showing. Priscilla Alexander, Michelle's, was there with her regal carriage.

Mary Nelson, Personal Touch, wore a breath-taking purple leather suit. Bette Hoyler, of Bette's wore some full and flowing garbs in the brightest of fall colors. Connie McDaniel looked especially striking in a navy suit from Hi-Land Fashions.

Bettie Johnson, Images, though not a model, looked her usual beautiful self in all white, contrasting with her always perfectly done dark hair. Ruby Landers, also of Images, looked elegant in a black hat and a black and white shepherd check suit.

Speaking of fashion shows...remember the Beta Sigma Phi sororities will host a fund-raising style show/brunch at the Pampa Country Club next Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

See you there and here next week. Katie.

New menswear line caters to bulging biceps and fearsome forearms

By The Associated Press

Here's good news for all you hunks — or is it hulks? — out there.

A new collection of men's clothing has been designed to accommodate the bulging biceps, fearsome forearms and wasp waists common to men who work out.

"The Gladiator collection of fashionable tailored clothing has been thoroughly thought out and designed to address this new body of men," says Mitchel Nichnowitz, president of Botany 500, which distributes the line.

Suit jackets have 8- and 10-inch drops and feature fuller chests and shoulders to define and fit broad shoulders and backs. The sleeves are wide and the armholes are cut to fit large biceps.

Trousers are fuller at the thigh and seat, though waists are smaller and have a lower rise to balance the silhouette.

Conventional suits have 6-inch drops, which means a 6-inch difference between the measurement of the shoulders and that of the waist — a size 40 jacket would be paired with trousers with a 34-inch waist. The Gladiator line pairs 42-inch jackets with 32- or 34-inch waist trousers. Popular executive-style suits, sports jackets and slacks are included in the collection.

The country trend continues to grow, and men will find serious-casual jackets, sweaters and pants in rich soft fabrics with napped and suede finishes, in rich autumn colors, in the menswear lines at J.C. Penney stores.

"Men are ready for a break from the fast-lane, city-slick kind of look," says Joe Sapienza, vice president and fashion director at the chain. "It's a whole focus on the ex-urban thing — guys wanting to look like they're going to the country for the weekend."

Country looks in the store's collections include soft cottons and flannels that are napped, stone-washed, sand-washed, or brushed. Denim is a big item, though, he says, not necessarily in obvious cowboy styles. And there is lots of leather and suede.

"The demand for suede and leather from the customer is phenomenal," says Sapienza. Shetland wool sweaters and jackets feature suede and leather trims for shoulder and elbow patches.

"Traditional patterning in sweaters remains popular, with Indian, kilim carpet, blanket, Nordic and Fair Isle predominating. Jackets are done with plaids and country checks, but not limited to the usual tans and grays; they also can be found in rich royal, pumpkin, plum, teal, green and brown tones.

More urban but still casual is the style for men from Claiborne, featuring easy-fitting trenchcoats, blazers, bomber jackets, cuffed trousers and twill shirts.

Traditional paisleys, foulards, florals and medallion prints are found in the neckwear line, and fancy shirts have rich cream backgrounds striped with navy, charcoal, antique red and willow.

New polyester feels like silk

NEW YORK (AP) — It's four times finer than wool, three times finer than cotton and more than twice as fine as silk. It can be woven or knitted, is lightweight yet strong, can be washed yet is water-proof.

It's microdenier polyester, a fabric the Polyester Council of America assures us we will be hearing a lot more about. The council says a number of America's leading fashion designers, including Calvin Klein, Liz Claiborne, Evan Picone, Leslie Fay, J.H. Collectibles and Searle, already are showing it, with more to come in the 1991 spring and fall collections.

The council says microdenier yarns are so strong they can be sanded or sued for a velvety texture. Within five years, some industry experts predict, nearly half of all the polyester and polyester blend fabrics sold in the United States will be microdenier.

PAMPA PROUD...

TWO PEAS IN A POD

Several months ago the citizens of Pampa and the surrounding areas joined forces to develop industrial and economical growth by attempting to secure a prison site in our area. With careful, tedious research and planning they identified the various hurdles and obstacles.

Through the tenacious leadership of a few, and the continuous efforts of many, each hurdle was identified and cleared allowing the citizens of Pampa and the surrounding area to succeed in their quest.

It is this spirit of combined determination rising up from our community that we salute. This spirit of continuing and completing the race, win or lose, that make us.....PAMPA PROUD.

'Presumed Innocent' joins ranks of best courtroom dramas

By DOLORES BARCLAY
AP Arts Editor

In their publicity material for the movie Presumed Innocent, Warner Bros. asks reviewers not to reveal the ending or say whether Rusty Sabich (Harrison Ford) is innocent or guilty.

It's an interesting request, considering that the 1987 Scott Turow best-selling novel sold more than 1 million in hardback and millions more in paperback. Needless to say, a lot of people know Rusty's fate.

But nothing that happens at the beginning of the Alan J. Pakula courtroom thriller, or even as it unravels, sets up the end.

The movie is plump with twists, turns and blind alleys. Who can be trusted? Who is innocent? Who is guilty?

The novel is set in mythical Kiddle County, in an unidentified Midwest city with Chicago-style politics and corruption. The movie was shot in Detroit.

Rusty, a married, top-flight prosecutor, is assigned to investigate the murder of another prosecutor, Caroline Polhemus (Greta Scacchi), with whom he had been sexually involved. Polhemus was found bludgeoned to death and tied up in what appeared to be an act of sexual bondage.

But a glass containing a little beer and Rusty's fingerprint is left in plain view, making it real easy for police to point a finger. A telephone check also finds numerous calls made from Caroline's number to Rusty's number and vice versa, including a call made the day of the murder.

Rusty wasn't the only man bedding Caroline. His boss, Raymond

Horgan is in the midst of a bitter campaign for his seat against the smarmy Nico Della Guardia. Horgan (Brian Dennehy) loses the election and serves up Rusty — on a platter, once he discovers Rusty's relationship to Caroline — to his former foe.

lawyer around, the scholarly and elegant Sandy Stern (Raul Julia), and the game is afoot.

Woven into the courtroom suspense is a thread of corruption that goes back to Polhemus' days as a probation officer and somehow involves Della Guardia's sidekick, a moldy little prosecutor named Tommy Molto (Joe Grifasi).

The strength of Presumed Innocent is its rich gallery of well-developed characters. Its weakness is perhaps in execution of the final plot turn.

Caroline Polhemus is a nasty piece of work, disliked by men because she's aggressive and beats them at their own game.

Polhemus is sexually attracted to Rusty because he represents power in her office and is just a step away from the No. 1 spot, a spot she covets.

But why is Rusty drawn to her? There is no chemistry or sexual tension between them. But he falls into her arms after a tough child abuse trial like a lovesick puppy.

Ford plays Rusty straight, almost too straight. He loves his wife, we surmise, and is happily married, we suppose. Or, is he bored by a wife who whines about being a housewife and mother?

Scacchi, a European beauty, is seductive and hungry as Caroline. She can be an ice queen, but has a gentler side as when she coaxes an abused child into testifying against his mother.

As Rusty's wife, Barbara, Bonnie Bedelia radiates compassion, frustration, love and fear. It is one of her strongest performances.

Julia puts in a good turn as Sandy Stern, and Paul Winfield adds charm and humor to courtroom prancing as the trial judge, Larren Lytle.

There's also good support from Brian Dennehy as Raymond Horgan and John Spencer as the hard-working detective whose loyalty and sense of duty figure importantly in the end.

Pakula (All the President's Men, Sophie's Choice) takes his time unraveling the story from the screenplay written by himself and Frank Pierson (Dog Day Afternoon). He plays for reactions, underlying motives, the quirky human element.

And here, he has a great similarity to Otto Preminger's handling of courtroom suspense in 1959's Anatomy of a Murder with James Stewart. But missing is the hard-edged tension Billy Wilder sculpted in 1957's Witness for the Prosecution.

Both are gripping dramas. Both rely on the element of surprise to make a compelling film. And both are among the best courtroom dramas ever made. Now Presumed Innocent has joined the ranks.

Presumed Innocent is a Mirage Production, produced by Sydney Pollack and Mark Rosenberg with Susan Solt as executive producer. It is rated R for strong sexual content and unpleasant shots of the murdered victim.

Private actor most at home in Big Sky country

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Just in from the Big Sky country, Harrison Ford faced a peril as hazardous as any encountered by Han Solo and Indiana Jones: the press tour.

Ford is a private man, and he approaches an interview with the zest of Roseanne Barr facing a diet. His verbal fencing, especially on personal matters, is notorious among reporters.

Jim Brown of The Today Show recently tried to wheedle Ford into disclosing the sex of his unborn baby. Ford knew, but declined to state. The baby turned out to be a girl, born June 30.

Unlike some major stars, Ford feels a responsibility to the studios who pay him huge salaries for his work (upwards of $7 million). Hence he came here for two grueling days of radio, TV and print interviews for Presumed Innocent, the Warner Bros. film based on Scott Turow's blockbuster book.

Also taking part were co-stars Bonnie Bedelia, Brian Dennehy,

Raul Julia, Paul Winfield and director Alan J. Pakula.

His co-workers had revealing things to say about Ford.

Bedelia: "(The film) was the first time I had met him. He's a very interior type of person; he keeps his own counsel. I think he's a marvelous actor. In this picture he was very — soulful. ... He was very giving, generous, sensitive. A lovely man."

Winfield: "Harrison and I first met when we were both under contract to Columbia Pictures (in the mid-1960s). I was brought in after the Watts riots because the studios decided they needed angry young men, and I fit into that category. It was the end of the contract period, and the only friend I made was Harrison. ... He was the same as he is now. Except he's a lot richer."

Pakula: "I thought of Harrison from the beginning. I wanted someone who was like Everyman, who had an All-American kind of quality. ... I am interested in characters who are two-sided, who can be a collection of opposites."

"Harrison is very bright, he has a sense of storytelling, especially a complicated story like this one. It's great to have someone who says, 'Have you told that?' 'Does the audience understand that?' 'Explain that to me.' I said to my wife, 'Harrison asks simple questions that sometimes have very complicated answers.'"

Pakula added that he had worked with three persons who became Academy Award directors: James L. Brooks, Warren Beatty and Robert Redford. Ford could have equal success, Pakula said, if he wanted to turn director. He doesn't. Acting is enough challenge for him.

'I like doing different kinds of films, I like facing different kinds of challenges.'

In Presumed Innocent, Ford portrays a married prosecutor accused of murdering a beautiful colleague (Greta Scacchi) with whom he had a flaming affair.

The role calls for greater depth of feeling than Ford has displayed on the screen before.

The role is far, far removed from Ford's portrayals in the Star Wars and Indiana Jones movies. Mixing drama and action has been part of his strategy:

"It has always been my intention that that might help to keep my career alive. I like doing different kinds of films, I like facing different kinds of challenges."

Chrissie Hynde is changing; her music isn't

By DAVID BAUDER
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Critics can be found in the strangest places. Try the back seat of Chrissie Hynde's car.

One evening this spring, the Pretenders leader popped a working tape of her band's new album into the cassette deck of her car. She drove in circles around Regents Park in London, trying to decide if the running order of the songs made musical sense.

Hynde's 5- and 7-year-old daughters were dozing in the back seat — or so she thought. Suddenly, a small voice peeped up from behind.

"Mummy," her youngest daughter asked. "Can we hear 'Sense of Purpose' again?"

Smart kid. The longing-for-love ballad is probably the best of 12 songs on Packed, the first new Pretenders album since 1986.

Since the early 1980 release of a debut Pretenders album that has aged into a classic, Hynde's life — and band — have changed considerably. Her music hasn't.

Hynde is the only constant in the Pretenders' life. Over the years, she's seen two band members die drug-related deaths, fired a drummer and seen another guitarist quit to join Paul McCartney's band.

She insists the Pretenders are still a band, although she and drummer Blair Cunningham are currently the only members. The search is on for a guitarist and bass player in time for a tour of the United States expected to start in late September.

Hynde's two daughters are aware of what their mother does for a living, but the car ride was the first time she remembered them reacting to her work. They usually listen to their nanny's opera or classical recordings.

"I feel like I'm more humanitarian because of my relationship as a mother," she said during a recent interview. "When I walk through Central Park, I want to be seen in the community as a mother. I don't want to be seen as a celebrity or a show business figure."

Her children are the product of relationships with fellow musicians Ray Davies of the Kinks and Jim Kerr of Simple Minds. She married Kerr, but they're now separated.

The differences in her life have obviously changed her approach to work. It's the chief reason why there was a four-year gap between Pretenders albums.

"Since I've been in the hotel the past week, I wake up at 6 o'clock in the morning and the first thing I do is reach for a guitar," said Hynde, who was over from London for a publicity tour.

"I haven't done that for years," she said. "When I'm home, the first thing I do is go downstairs and turn the television off and get breakfast together for the kids."

Packed is a combination of hard-nosed rockers such as "Hold a Candle to This" and "Downtown (Akron)" and such ballads as "Let's Make a Pact" and "When Will I See You."

Hynde's musical career took shape in London's fertile punk scene during the late 1970s.

These days, she's found planning a tour is a lot more complicated than piling everyone into a van; Hynde may be the first rocker whose work schedule may be partly governed by her nanny.

"My nanny's in school training to be a dance therapist for deaf children," she said. "I am sort of planning my career around her schedule because I like her, she's part of the family and it's important to have a secure setup. It's give and take."

Beachcombers find beauty and surprises walking along eroding shorelines

By WILLIAM G. SCHULZ
Smithsonian News Service

As temperatures climb this summer, a lot of us will pack up swimsuits, sunglasses, sunscreen, beach blankets and the latest best seller for a sojourn at the seashore.

Seeking some real beach action, other people will rush to bring garden trowels, buckets, sieves, magnifying glasses and field guides. They are the beachcombers.

All along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of the United States—some 12,000 miles of shoreline in all—beachcombers walk the water's edge on the lookout for seashells and other unique creations of nature at the boundary of sand and sea.

And while lessons are hardly necessary to enjoy this usually solitary pastime, familiarity with the coastal environment can add to the pleasure of a stroll in the sand.

Recently, a group of beachgoers attended a short course on the art of beachcombing held by the Smithsonian Resident Associate Program at Delaware's Cape Henlopen State Park. The group also saw how their hobby may be threatened by erosion.

Instructor Gary Pettit, a marine biologist, points out that beachcombing can begin even before the sound of the surf is audible. The shores of open ocean are characterized by the rolling hills of sand dunes and, at Cape Henlopen, stands of scrub pine. The branches of the pine trees grow inland, away from the salt air, which inhibits plant growth.

The rolling dunes, Pettit says, result from the high-energy surf, keeping the mounds of sand constantly "walking" along the shore. Along the low-energy environment of bay shores, the land is flatter, the sand moved around mostly by the wind. There is more vegetation, particularly taller trees.

In recent years, Pettit says, Americans have become more aware of the ocean's power. As he walks, he points out a steep drop-off due to erosion along the shore of the state park. "This is another phenomenon of a high-energy beach," he says. "In really bad years, even dunes farther back from the shoreline are eroded away."

Increasingly, erosion of the beach on both coasts has stolen more than sand. Expensive beachfront homes, condominiums and other buildings have also been washed away by the relentless action of the surf. The problem is exacerbated, experts say, by the sheer number of people who want to live on or near a beach. The U.S. Census Bureau, for example, estimates that a whopping 75 percent of all Americans live within 50 miles of either coast.

Despite the crowds, the beach is densely populated with organisms that have no affinity for volleyball or saltwater taffy. Sifting sand through his fingers, Pettit says, "There are probably 10,000 to 15,000 animals in a handful of sand. Nothing leaves by itself—something humans need to better understand."

These animals are mostly small creatures like the "beach flea," a crustacean about an inch long with eyes that cover most of its head and bristly walking legs. Beach fleas can leap a foot or more, but are usually found burrowed in the sand or beneath logs or other debris. Other animals are smaller still, even microscopic.

are animals like the horseshoe crab, as big as 2 feet long and 1 foot wide. The horseshoe crab is so named because of the distinctive shape of its hard outer shell or exoskeleton. The shells of dead horseshoe crabs are a familiar sight on Atlantic coast beaches, where the crabs mate and lay eggs. After one or two years, the young crabs move to the open ocean.

Horseshoe crabs are not prey for any other animal, Pettit says, because they lack appetizing musculature.

Interestingly, horseshoe crabs are closely related to spiders and can live up to 200 years. Their shells also make a good "substrate" to which other animals, such as snails and some types of sea-dwelling worms, attach.

Another type of crab is the ghost crab, known for its nocturnal activity. But ghost crabs can be found easily in the daytime, too. Burrowed in the sand at water's edge, their bubbling air holes give them away. Clams also have air holes—a distinctive pair actually—much to the delight of people intent on a surfside clam bake.

Seashells, of course, are the stock-in-trade of many beachcombers. The familiar conch shells come in a wide variety of sizes, shapes and colors. The shells of razor clams, so-called because of their shape, add interest to any shell collection. And sand dollars and sea stars—both belonging to a class of animals known as echinoderms—make good mementos of a trip to the shore. But Pettit and other naturalists remind beachcombers to leave live specimens behind.

Garden trowels are good for digging into sand and mud, Pettit says. Sieves can be used to sift out any number of small animals that live just below the surface of the sand. A magnifying glass can help show interesting details of finds such as the tiny whorl-shaped shells crowding the translucent egg case of the sea wheel. A variety of field guides are available to help steer beachcombers on their forays along the coast.

Jetties—piles of rock stretching from the shore out to sea—are good places to look for animals, such as barnacles, that need a surface on which to attach themselves. The rocks, though, are often covered with slippery algae.

Artificial jetties are one means to stabilize a beach's shifting sands. Snow fences can also prevent some erosion and off-shore sea walls can—for a time—reduce the force of waves crashing into shore and carrying away the beach.

Nonetheless, these are all "local" measures that simply intensify the forces of nature farther down the coast. In addition, powerful winter storms and hurricanes on the East Coast can render these measures useless.

"Most of the time, procedures to stabilize beaches don't work well," says marine biologist Dr. Ivan Valiela, at Boston University's marine program, the Marine Biological Laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass. "You end up robbing Peter to pay Paul."

It is difficult to measure the effect of erosion on organisms that live on or near the shore, Valiela says. Many of these animals are highly adaptable, ready programmed by evolution to survive in an ever-changing environment. Loss of habitat can occur from erosion, but pollution, unfortunately, is a much greater threat to most organisms—including man.

Beachcombing is safe just about anywhere sand and water meet. And it's a delight in almost any season. A better appreciation of this unique environment might help preserve it for years to come.

As Pettit told the Smithsonian group, "Keep your eyes open when walking along the shore. The beach is teeming with life."

BEACHES VICTIMS OF EROSION

All along the 12,000 miles of U.S. shoreline, beaches are disappearing, victims of the natural and ongoing process of erosion. "Beach nourishment" is one measure that can help restore these beaches, but at high cost. This simply involves replacing sand that has washed away.

For seaside communities that depend on seasonal tourist dollars, cost is hardly a consideration. A 10-mile stretch of Miami Beach in Florida was rejuvenated with a brand new 300-foot-wide beach. The price tag: $65 million.

The beach at Ocean City, Md., was recently nourished at a cost of $5 million. However, within 10 days—during the start of the fall storm season—more than 60 percent of the new beach washed away.

Most scientists agree that the sea level has been rising during the past century, contributing to the problem at least to some degree. Scientists disagree about the rate of sea-level rise and, therefore, about the severity of future erosion scenarios. The widely recognized phenomenon of global warming may contribute to this rise if the polar ice caps melt as a result of a rising world temperature.

But for now, building close to the sea can accelerate erosion at noticeable rates. When high beachfront dunes—covered with grasses that naturally stabilize the movement of dunes—are bulldozed in favor of condos, an effective barrier for breaking wave action is destroyed.

Building along the approximately 300 barrier islands of the Atlantic coast has accelerated erosion on inland shores.

Some coastal states have enacted legislation to protect their shorelines.

Now AmWest can give you something few banks can...

A good night's sleep.

Now AmWest has "DreamSaver"—a savings program designed to bring peace of mind to all those who worry about saving money.

Here's how it works: You tell AmWest how much you want to save every month, (as little as $25 if you like) and they'll deduct it automatically from a free checking account (that's right, free checking) and put it into a CD account. Keep your money there for a full 12 months and it will earn a high-interest CD rate. Take it out early, and you'll get a penalty—three months interest or $50.

So "DreamSaver" not only helps you save money on a regular monthly basis—it helps you keep your hands off it too. And with a little money in savings—a good night's sleep will come a whole lot easier.

Put Your Money on Texas.

Substantial penalty for early withdrawal. Interest paid quarterly. Rates subject to change without notice.

Forget about those killer bees - fire ants are really the dangerous ones

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Killer bees, humbug! It's the ornery red, imported fire ant that is threatening life and limb in the South these days.

And the situation keeps getting worse, says the Agriculture Department. In 1957, fire ants occupied about 27 million acres. By 1985 their domain was 230 million acres, stretching from Texas to Virginia and Puerto Rico.

Regina Wiggen of the department's Agricultural Research Service said people throughout the South "have grudgingly surrendered ground" to fire ants since the pests were first seen in the United States near Mobile, Ala., in 1918.

Wiggen, associate editor of the agency's Agricultural Research magazine, wrote that fire ants are a threat to humans and livestock. They also destroy or disfigure the landscape with their mounds.

"In the ants' wake, playground and picnic areas lie abandoned, parks disfigured, golf courses churned up and cemeteries damaged," she said. "No one who is hypersensitive to stinging insects should risk being stung."

All of this is old stuff to millions of Southerners who have learned to look carefully where they sit or lie in the great outdoors. But the ants may be getting antsy about moving on.

For years, Wiggen said, scientists believed the ants have a limited tolerance of cold weather. In their native Argentina, they don't range south of 38 degrees latitude, which is comparable to the pests' northernmost range in the United States.

But lately there has been concern that the imported red fire ant has been mingling with black varieties, which might produce a cold-tolerant fire ant.

Isolated colonies have been spotted in Arizona and California. The December 1989 issue of Nursery Digest warned that once established in California, fire ants probably will spread to much of the western seaboard.

The USDA for many years worked with states to fight fire ants with chemicals and poisoned bait. Wiggen said that between 1957 and 1977, millions of acres were treated with the insecticide Mirex, but "without enduring avail."

Now, she said, "We know that widespread application of toxic chemicals may put the environment at more risk than the ants."

The magazine's cover story by Jessica Morrison Silva tells about the life cycle of fire ants, how they threaten homeowners, public lands and farming areas. The colony is based on a queen, which has a rather bizarre sex life.

"After a virgin queen mates in midair, she descends to the ground," Silva said. "No longer needing wings, she now chews or breaks them off. The remaining wing muscles are used as a nutritional source for her in establishing the new colony and in egg production."

Parasites and other natural weapons are being examined as possible methods of curbing the pests. Scientists are seeking a complex of fire ant disease and natural pests that will do the job.

Grand champion organic onion growers win with their first crop

By DONNA M. LESTAGE
Tyler Courier-Times-Telegraph

NOONDAY, Texas (AP) — Bobby Freeman and Brent Phillips plan to take some of their first-year profits from B&B Farm and buy some farming equipment.

It's only right. With all the technological conveniences available in agriculture, the grand champion Noonday Sweet Onion growers should at least have a tractor.

It was mostly with a union of hands and hoes in the hot sun that Freeman and Phillips, both 22, farmed their 2 acres of granex onions from the Rio Grande Valley into the best peck of onions at the Noonday Sweet Onion Festival in June.

They are the youngest and among the newest members of the Noonday Onion Growers Association. Their first harvest as B&B Farm won the title based on taste, formation, size and color, explained Phillips, showing the golden tint of a sack of onions.

"It really surprised us," Phillips said. "We just took our little peck of onions and hoped to win a ribbon."

They lugged home a couple of giant trophies: one to keep and one passed along each year to the new winner.

B&B's last six bushels of onions were loaded on a flat bed trailer recently, ready for the young farmers' first visit to the Farmers Market in Tyler. It was an unusual year for Noonday onions. B&B, like many Noonday onion farmers, did not sell out this year, Freeman said.

Phillips said the grand champion designation helped sell their onions because several people requested B&B's onions specifically to get "the best."

Old-timers in the onion business were excited about the youthful winners.

"They said it was good to see young people get involved," Phillips said.

After the competition, E.B. Shelton, whose crop was named grand champion the last three years of the 4-year-old festival, offered his advice whenever the young farmers needed it, they said.

The five and half acres — 330 plants — planted in January produced about 80 bushels of onions. Bushels weigh 50 pounds.

Although it was the first crop as B&B, the farmers didn't go into the fields inexperienced.

Freeman and Phillips, well-schooled in vocational agriculture at Robert E. Lee High School, are third-generation Noonday farmers.

Freeman said his family has always grown onions for the family and friends, but not as a cash crop. Phillips, whose grandfather was an onion farmer by trade, helped the Freemans with their onions for years.

"We're like brothers, you know," Freeman said of his business partner. The two hunt and fish when they find time between full-time jobs and farming on the side.

Just about everybody in Noonday grows onions, even if it's not a source of income.

"Every onion grower in the association, I probably worked for them," Freeman said.

"Kids always know they can get a job when it's time to plant,"

Phillips said.

The B&B field, "about three pastures over" from the garden patch behind the Freeman's parents home, was worked by hand

"because we can't afford a $55,000 tractor," Phillips said.

The crop was profitable, though, and with hopes of a larger operation in the future, B&B will buy some equipment, Freeman said.

Before the harvest in June, there were lots of weeds to pull. The first has to be moved away from the plant to let them grow. Noonday's sandy soil is a key ingredient for the success of the sweet onion, farmers

A B&B difference was Freeman and Phillips decision not to use pesticides or herbicides.

"We put our backs into it," Freeman said.

Phillips said they had decided they did not want to spend the money on the chemicals. Then after he read about the chemicals used, they decided with a crop as small as theirs to grow organically.

B&B's harvest was one very

vacation to get in the crop with

Freeman helping after work.

MESQUITE-BRUSH-TREE CONTROL

Rangeland owners need to keep a constant look-out for mesquite and be reminded that mesquite will gradually take over. Some rangeland in Gray County already has fairly thick stands of mesquite in some areas. I cannot stress too much the importance of widespread control of mesquite. Bean seed can be spread by various animals/birds.

A good example of how mesquite can quietly infest rangeland occurred to myself last Saturday. I was horseback in a couple of pastures and within one hour I discovered two small mesquite bushes that had been growing for several years. These had been unnoticed and undiscovered until I happened to ride by close enough to see them.

These pastures have some sage and shiner which makes it more difficult to observe a new mesquite. On short grass country, mesquite are generally quite easy to see. It is just a matter of priority by the owner to see that appropriate control methods are followed.

As we discuss mesquite control, there are other trees and brush that can also develop to be just as bad in certain sandyland areas along creeks and draws. These include hackberry, western soapberry, Tree of Heaven and red cedar. The growth of these trees can get so bad that you cannot ride in/through horseback and the only way to get cattle out is on foot.

When situations are this bad, it should be easy for the landowner to see that control is necessary and a big expense. This kind of brush uses a lot of water with no real economic benefit. The water used by these trees could grow a lot of grass if the trees were cleaned out. Many times this kind of tree growth occurs on the wettest and best land in a pasture.

Mother nature works slowly in that most of us do not realize what is happening until it has already happened. If you are a rangeland owner with some of these trees growing, I challenge you to closely inspect the amount of small trees growing in and around the edge of these areas. Then stop and think what this area will be in 10-20 years when these small trees become big trees.

There are several different control methods for trees and brush. Each situation can be different so control methods need to be adopted to what is best for your situation. Come by the Extension Office and we can outline some of these methods for your consideration.

ANNUAL A&M BEEF CATTLE
SHORT COURSE IS AUG. 14-15

Texas beef cattle producers and industry leaders will want to mark their calendars for Aug. 14-15 and travel to Texas A&M University for the upcoming Third Annual Beef Cattle Short Course.

This year's short course will be held in the Kleberg Center with live animal demonstrations being conducted in the Louis Pearce Pavilion on the Texas A&M campus.

Highlights of the short course program will include discussions on:

- Expected Progeny Differences, or EPDs, including basic knowledge, predictability of next year's calf crop, use of the method to improve the herd, and a producer panel discussion on use of the method for genetic advancement in their herds. Research in gene markers for value-based marketing will be discussed by animal scientists.

- A cow-calf nutrition program will start with the basics and cover major mineral programs, micro-mineral programs and diagnostic techniques for identifying problem areas. An in-depth discussion of recent Texas cattle mineral problems with copper will be included.

- A total management session will use a multi-disciplinary approach of plant-animal relationships, pasture-forage hay programs, calving season, heifer development, managing the heifer before calving and other management practices.

- One afternoon will be allocated to a live animal session at the Louis Pearce Pavilion. Topics to be covered will include ultrasound for evaluation of carcass traits and reproduction characteristics, animal identification ranging from tattoos to computer microchip implants, DNA fingerprinting, health and vaccination techniques, and live animal visual selection application.

Another feature will be a trade show that includes from 30 to 50 beef industry commercial representatives who will exhibit products and be on hand for discussions during program breaks.

In addition, educational booths and research information will be displayed by Texas A&M departments, educators and researchers. Participants will have an opportunity to visit with scientists of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station on various areas of research and education.

A registration fee of $40 will be charged for producers and $20 for spouses.

1990 Property Tax Rates in Gray County

This notice concerns 1990 property tax rates for Gray County. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

	General Fund	State Indigent Health Care	Special Road/Bridge Fund
Last year's operating taxes	$.1996	$.0236	$.0507
+ Last year's debt taxes	$ 0	$ 0	$ 0
= Last year's total taxes	$.1996	$.0236	$.0507
+ Last year's tax base	$ 1,055,346,355	$ 1,055,346,355	$ 1,045,550,985
= Last year's total tax rate	$.1996	$.0236	$.0507
	$.2739
This year's effective tax rate:
Last year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$ 2,102,843.11	$ 248,632.75	$ 528,652.68
+ This year's adjusted tax base (after subtracting value of new property)	$ 1,049,452,606	$ 1,049,452,606	$ 1,039,379,976
= This year's effective tax rate for each fund	$.20033	$.023690	$.050860
Total effective tax rate	$.274690

(In the first year a county collects the additional sales tax it must insert the following lines unless it made its first adjustment last year.)

- Sales tax adjustment rate $ 0

= Effective tax rate $ 0

* 1.03 = maximum rate unless unit publishes notices and holds hearing $.283126

This year's rollback tax rate:
Last year's adjusted operating taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$ 2,102,843	$ 247,579	$ 528,653
+ This year's adjusted tax base	$ 1,049,452,606	$ 1,049,452,606	$ 1,039,379,976
= This year's effective operating rate	$.200370	$.23590	$.50860
* 1.08 = this year's maximum operating rate	$.216399	$.023477	$.054928
+ This year's debt rate	$ 0	$ 0	$ 0
= This year's rollback rate for each fund	$.216399	$.023477	$.054928
This year's rollback rate	$.294804

- Sales tax adjustment rate $ 0

= Rollback tax rate $ 0

- HUD is not responsible for any errors, or omissions that may appear in this ad.
- Brokers may contact this office for further information to become a HUD participating Broker.
- HUD requires that all sales be closed with 60 days of contract acceptance date. Title companies have been instructed to cancel any outstanding contracts on the 61st day. If an extension is needed prior to the 60 day period, brokers must request an extension on the form provided by HUD, together with a certified check for $270.00, representing a 15-day extension at $18.00 per day. This must be received prior to the 60th day or the sale will be canceled.
- HUD Properties are offered for sale to qualified purchasers, without regard to the prospective purchaser's race, color, religion, sex or national origin. Interested persons should contact the broker of their choice.
- The listing price is HUD's estimate of fair market value. HUD reserves the right in its sole discretion to accept offers less than the listing price, but only the highest acceptable offer will be considered.
