MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

By H. N. F.

"This the most palatial city I ever saw. City and country in Germany very busy. Work from sunrise to sunset. Big crops, big loads on wagons with one horse and long trains with small engines. Everything is being made to do its most. Country women do the work. They look tired and sad. In cities all look cheerful." Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bagley are motoring over Germany, Austria, Italy, Switzerland, France and Belgium. The exerpt quoted above is from a letter written by the former Texas publisher to H. N. F. Hamburg is the city he describes as the most palatial he ever saw. They are working in Germany from sunrise until sunset. This bears out the oft told statement that the Germans are coming back. It is in the blood. They are gluttons for work; they are gluttons for thrift; they are the tireless plodders of Europe. They have been disarmed. They are not taxed to keep up an army or navy. They must pay 33 billions in forty years and they are paying those billions in the depreciated marks of their government. This may not be cheerful news to those who hold Germany responsible for "the crime of the centuries," the world war with all its horrors, but the truth should be told. Unless other nations disarm the Germans are certain to become the economic masters of Europe and perhaps of the world.

R. H. Wall is in our mist. He has been selling cigars for a quarter of a century. He has been on the road for a quarter of a century. He is known to the trade everywhere. He is known in the ranks of the commercial evangelists everywhere in the southwest. H. N. F. knew Dick when he was a sprightly youth. Of course he is a sprightly youth now but a debenair as in days of yore. He has taken on a serious mein; he's more cheerful as well as more sedate. Dallas was his headquarters all these years. Now Wichita Falls is his headquarters. He has connected himself with the Goodner Wholesale Grocery Company. They are all coming to Wichita Falls is going to be the distributing center of a vast territory. This is not a prediction. It is a well established fact.

This is the day of the builder. This is the day of the worker. This is the day of the man of vision and pluck. In a survey on building statistics in 20 cities in the United States just completed for the month of July the American Contractor points out that there was a 24 per cent gain over the same month a year ago. Of these 44 cities have exceeded the one million dollar mark valuation of building permits for one or more months. Cincinnati ranks eleventh with a six month's valuation of $8,673,320. The June valuation was $1,557,970 and the July $1,467,345. In discussing the situation throughout America the American Contractor says: "July building statistics reported from 201 cities total $163,104,856 in valuation and show a 242 per cent gain over the corresponding month of 1920. Considering that in many cities estimates are being figured on a dollar an hour wage scale, whereas a year ago a dollar and a quarter was used, and that material prices have declined very appreciably, the 24 per cent gain in monetary value of permits if computed in contemplated square footage would be increased. Thus far this year 44 cities have exceeded the one million dollar mark valuation of building permits for one or more months. During July 28 of these cities crossed the line as against 12 in January, 16 in February, 23 in March, 28 in April, 29 in May and 30 in June. Comparing 41 of these cities for which the records are complete for the year shows a 11.1 per cent gain for July over June, and also that the valuation for July is 22 per cent of the total valuation for the first six months of the year." Dallas ranks twelfth in the forty four cities going over a million dollars in one or more months of 1921. New York comes first; Chicago second; Los Angeles third; Detroit fourth; Cleveland fifth. This is the showing made by Dallas: Six months valuation, $7,544,305; June valuation $1,247,933; July valuation 61,289,029. Dallas and Houston are the Texas cities listed in the forty-four for the period enumerated. This is the showing made by Houston: Six months valuation, $4,576,840. June valuation $910,156; July valuation $869,040. All Texans are proud of their state. It is something to be told that at least two Texas cities are enlisted among the great building cities of 1921.

A. G. Jenkins of Caldwell, has been designated to take examinations March 7, 1922, for entrance to the United States Military Academy July 1, 1922. An appointment of interest to Texans was the designation by the president of Frederick Funston of San Francisco, a son of the late Gen. Funston, to take examinations March 7, 1922, for entrance to the United States Military Academy, July 1, 1922.

Discussing the packer supervision bills in the United States Senate recently, Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas drew a vivid picture of the disparity between the ruinously low prices paid the farmer and stockman for their products and the extortionate rates charged the consumer. He pointed out that, according to figures compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, while prices paid to farmers had dropped 53 per cent in 12 months, and wholesale food prices 47 per cent, retail prices had declined only 28 per cent during the same period. The leading hotels at Washington, he said, were still charging anywhere from $2 to $4 a pound for steaks, which brought to mind the case of a Nebraska cattlemen who last October

Grand Jury Indicts Tom Scruggs and John Canada for Hold Up of Local Man in Apartment Here.

Jewels Taken Later Recovered in Dallas from Man and Woman Who Claimed They Found Them.

Tom Scruggs and John Canada, the former a local oil man and the latter a former peace officer, were arrested by members of the sheriff's department Saturday night following the return of indictments charging complicity in robbery with firearms in connection with the bolding up and robbing of A. L. Huey of $2500 worth of diamonds at his apartment on Eighth street last month. The two men were released under $5,000 bond each. John Davenport, C. C. McDonald and Bernard Martin represented the defendants.

Red Holmes, alleged to have been one of the two men who actually perpetrated the holdup, was charged in an indictment with robbery with firearms. Holmes is in the county jail.

The alleged robbery occurred on the night of July 25, being made by two masked men who obtained entry into the Huey apartment at 1008 1-2 Eighth by way of a rear screen and conducted the robbery at the point of a .45-calibre pistol. The men evidenced a thorough knowledge of the apartment, Mr. Huey said, and were also well informed as to the jewels likely to be there—making inquiry for a piece or two which they did not find in their first round.

Details of the robbery came out with the holding of J. J. Dunnan and his wife by authorities, together with the recovery of the gems. The authorities said at that time that the Dunnans had no connection with the robbery, and that they took the jewels from those concerned in the robbery. Following the recovery of the gems Huey charged that others beside those actually committing the robbery were implicated in it.

The jewelry taken from the apartment, according to Mr. Huey, consisted of a two-karat diamond stud, four diamond finger rings, a diamond bar pin and a diamond cluster containing about eighteen small diamonds; two watches and $26 in currency.

NEFF VETOES BILL RAISING SALARIES OF COMMISSIONERS

AUSTIN, Sept. 3.—Governor Neff today vetoed the bill raising the salaries of the highway commissioners, signed the bill rewriting the Dean prohibition law, signed the bill appropriating $175,542 for the penitentiary system and vetoed items amounting to $175,315 in the miscellaneous claims bill.

The highway bill proposed to fix the maximum salary of the commissioners at $10 per day for 150 days. The present law allows that amount for a maximum of 100 days.

LEGION CONDEMNS ATTACK ON MAJOR

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 3.—Resolutions condemning criticism of Major Charles C. Cresson in a minority report of the house investigating committee on the Bergdoll case were adopted here tonght by Alamo Post No. 2, American Legion. The resolution voice the post's confidence in Major Cresson's "integrity, honesty and courage."

TEXANS CONTINUE FIGHT ON RATES

GALVESTON, Sept. 3.—If the eight cent differential in favor of Gulf ports over eastern points is not sufficient to attract wheat shipments, a petition for further reduction to Gulf ports will be made by the Industrial Traffic league, which will meet in Dallas, September 7. This was decided by the Texas Ports association in session here today.

FOREST FIRES IN IDAHO NOW UNDER CONTROL

MISSOULA, Montana, Sept. 3.—All but six of the forest fires in Montana and Idaho were reported under control last night. Winds have died down and rain is falling in this vicinity. Reports received from forest rangers state that control lines are being established around fires. Forestry service officials said they believed all the fires should be under control in a few days.

PRESIDENT ARRESTED AFTER ILLINOIS BANK FAILURE

DANVILLE, Ill., Sept. 3.—P. E. Wiggins, president of the Wiggins Bank at Homer, Illinois, which failed November 28, 1918 with $260,000 involved, was arrested there last night by the sheriff of Champaign county on a warrant charging him with receiving deposits with the knowledge that the bank was insolvent. He was released on bonds of $60,000.

GOVERNOR CALLS UPON PEOPLE TO HONOR LABOR DAY

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Sept. 3.—In a proclamation today Governor Neff urged the citizens of Texas to observe Monday, September 5th as Labor Day. He issued the proclamation "as a special mark of respect to labor," and urged that the American flag be displayed on public buildings as a mark of respect to labor.

OUSLEY CASTS POLITICAL HAT IN MAELSTROM

Denton Man Announces Candidacy for Senatorship Now Held by Chas. A. Culberson.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Sept. 3.—Hon. Clarence Ousley has thrown his hat into the ring as a candidate for United States senator. This city is his home and he will open headquarters here at the proper time. A Georgian by birth Clarence Ousley came to Texas after graduation from college and settled in Ellis county where he taught school and became a contributor to the newspapers. In a few years he connected himself with the Belo organization and was of the staff of the Dallas-Galveston News. He resigned from the News to edit and publish the Galveston Tribune, an afternoon newspaper. Reverses came to his newspaper when a tidal wave almost destroyed the Island City. It was then he moved to Fort Worth and became the founder as well as the editor and publisher of the Morning Record. Eight years ago he sold his interest in the Record to William Capps and Hugh Nugent Fitzgerald succeed as editor. Mr. Ousley traveled in Europe and on his return became assistant secretary of agriculture and the right hand man of the Hon. David F. Houston, who was called to a cabinet position by Woodrow Wilson. On his retirement with the Agricultural and Meto Bryan and resumed his work as director of the extension department of the Agricultural and Mechanical College. His newspaper activities of more than a quarter of a century and his close intimacy with the leading figures on the political stage of action during all this time have given him a wide acquaintanceship throughout the country. He has been the close political and personal friend of Joseph Weldon Bailey for many years but remained loyal to the Wilson administration during the memorable contests of 1920. Following is his informal announcement:

Fort Worth, Texas, Sept. 1.—Having finished my temporary engagement with the Agricultura land Mechanical College, I am free to say that at the proper time I shall be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator. I have no intention of precipitating a contest thus far in advance of the primary, for I am sure the people are unwilling now to plunge into next year's politics.

Still, it seems to me well for the people to be informed as early as practicable who the candidates are likely to be. The senatorship is an office of large responsibility and the term is for six years. Hence ample time ought to be given for voters to make inquiries and to confer among themselves as occasion permits in order to reach just conclusions in their own interest. They should realize that they are the owners of the greatest national estate upon the earth and that it is to be administered by the trustees whom they elect to office. Not only is this estate to be preserved for our children but it is to be administered for the present benefit of every man, woman and

WAGGONER IS DENIED BOND; EXPECT FIGHT

Was Released Following Death of Huckster After Quarrel Over Cat Killing Several Days Ago.

C. M. Waggoner, member of the city police department, indicted for murder by the special session of the grand jury in connection with the killing of J. W. Webb, local vegetable vendor, on the afternoon of Sunday, August 21, was arrested Saturday and is being held without bond. Waggoner had been held to appear before the grand jury under a $10,000 bond which was made on the day of the killing.

Waggoner's bond was fixed by agreement with District Attorney Wilson following the killing.

Following failure of the district attorney, and Judge H. F. Weldon of the 30th district court to agree on bond Saturday, it is expected that the first step in the case will be a fight for bond on a habeas corpus proceeding. E. H. Elpson and John Davenport are representing the defendant.

Webb was shot and killed by Waggoner when it is asserted he made a firearms display when Waggoner placed him under arrest for discharging a friearm within the city limits. A shot gun loaded with buckshot was the instrument used.

Webb and H. T. Scott better known as "Scotty", were engaged, according to the latter, in hunting a cat which had run under a floor on Webb.'s place, and in hopes of scaring it out, had fired a pistol several times.

Waggoner, according to a statement made after the killing by his attorney, had once before warned members of the Webb family about firing within the city limits, which had led to words with Webb down town. On the afternoon of the killing, hearng the shots, Waggoner, who was at his home near Second and Lake, across the street from Webb's, took his shot gun and went to arrest him.

According to the story told after the killing Webb advanced to meet him, and just before Waggoner got there, was handed a pistol by "Scotty." Waggoner claimed that he fired first after Webb raised the pistol. He fired three times in all. He says that Webb fired once and missed.

This part of the testimony is contradicted, it is said, by Scotty, who ran from the place of the shooting, and by Mrs. Webb.

SHIPPING BOARD TRANSFERS TEXAS AGENT TO GEORGIA

By Associated Press.

GALVESTON, Sept. 3.—C. H. Marshall, former agent for the United States shipping board here, will leave Sunday night for Savannah, Ga., where he will be director for the south Atlantic district succeeding George J. Santa Cruz, who has assumed charge of Gulf affairs at New Orleans.

Mr. Marshall's successor here has not been named.

BOTTLE TRAVELS 2,000 MILES OVER WASTES OF OCEAN

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 3.—A bottle containing greetings to the finder and dropped into the ocean off new Foundland by Rev. Dr John L. Blandit, minister of Muskogee, Oklahoma, from the steamship Corsicana, while the vessel was stranded among icebugrs, September 10, 1920, was picked up by a fisherman off Harbore on the western coast of Denmark, July 10, last. Dr. Bandit passed through here yesterday and told of receiving a letter from the finder. He said the bottle traveled approximately 2,000 miles.

FAILURE OF PHYSICIAN TO REGISTER BOY'S BIRTH SEVEN YEARS AGO MAY ROB HIM OF FORTUNE LEFT HIM IN RUSSIA

Failure of a Wichita Falls physician, now dead, to comply with the birth registration law seven years ago, is today keeping a little Wichita Falls lad from gaining possession of a fortune of approximately $100,000 left several years ago by relatives in Russia.

This became known through Dr. W. P. Lowrey, city health officer, in course of an inquiry as to the vital statistics for Wichita Falls and Wichita Falls county for the month of August.

Those interested in the little boy's claim may—eventually, after considerable wandering through the legal labyrinth that accompanies such cases, make satisfactory proof to the estate for the child. But the law in foreign countries are very strict in matters regarding inheritances.

Were the physician living now, who attended the birth of the child a certificate could be supplied. Not even the books of the deceased doctor contain sufficient evidence to make them available for a substitute for the birth certificate.

And, Doctor Lowrey says, this circumstance is likely to occur in many other instances, where property is left in foreign lands, or in this country, to children born in Wichita county at the present time, for only a negligible number are ever recorded. There is a state law requiring birth registration, but it appears to have been overlooked locally. And while it may not be as costly to others as it has so far proven to the little heir to the Russian fortune, there may be a number of Wichitans who in future may be embarrassed at their inability to prove by proper certificate when they were born.

ARMED FORCES BREAKING UP IN VIRGINIA WHILE TROOPS TAKE POSITION

By Associated Press

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 3.—Gradual clearing up and dispersion of armed bands who for days have been opposing state and county forces along the Boone-Logan county line is foreseen here tonight as a result of the surrender of a body of 400 men to federal troops under command of Brigadier General H. H. Bandholtz.

After the capitulation, which included the surrender of 80 men upon whom firearms were found, the prisoners were sent to St. Albans under the protection of Colonel Carl Martin of the 19th Infantry. Here they were allowed to go to their homes, after the precaution had been taken of recording the names of all who carried weapons.

Further progress toward quieting the disturbed areas is expected tonight and tomorrow as the federal forces spread out and take up operations farther away from their bases.

In establishing themselves in the trouble zone the federal forces met with no opposition anywhere and they do not anticipate any.

General Bandholtz tonight would not say whether he would compel the state and county forces who have been holding the armed bands back from invading Logan county.

Authorities in Control

"They are now under control of the federal authorities and they will do just as they are told," the general said.

The federal commander also stated he will not permit any assembly of miner, or other citizens in the disturbed area at this time. He made this announcement in reply to a question as to whether union men would be permitted to go into unorganized sections under the protection of the federal authorities and try to hold meetings. Any one arrested by the federal troops will be turned over to the civil authorities, General Bandholtz said.

Military rule, and civil authority, it was said at army headquarters can run concurrently and no difficulty will be experienced in seeing that all persons are treated justly.

Troops Take Positions

The federal troops took up positions today behind the lines of the opposing forces on the Boone-Logan line. Military headquarters were established at Madison, Boone county, in the rear of the armed bands and at Logan, county seat of Logan county, which was the base from which the county and state forces operated against the invaders.

The regiment which was hurriedly made up of parts of the 19th, 100th, and 40th regiments, recruits detachment and other troops for duty in West Virginia was in complete control of the areas where they were placed.

General Bandholtz expressed confidence federal control will bring order rapidly in the affected areas. The question of martial law being proclaimed in Kanawha, Fayette, Boone, Logan and Mingo counties is still held in abeyance. There is, however, a general feeling here that if armed bands disperse without resistance, there will be no need for proclaiming martial law.

In Three Districts

The disturbed areas have been divided into three military districts. The coal river district comprises that part of the area known as Coal river valley, extending from St. Albans to Blair. The Kanawha district includes Fayette county and parts of Kanawha and Boone counties not included in the Coal river district.

The Logan district comprises Mingo county and parts of Boone county not in the Coal river district.

Airplane observation flights were made over Boone and Logan counties today by army fliers. They reported everything quiet.

With the federal troops in control there was less activity at the West Virginia state office.

PACT COUNCIL GIVES TIME TO ARMS MEETING

French Delegate Proposes That League Covenant Be Discussed in Washington During Conference.

By Associated Press.

GENEVA, Sept. 3.—The extent to which the Washington conference in November occupies the attention of these participating in the work of the league of nations here was demonstrated today during the discussion on disarmament and amendments to the covenant. While hope of satisfying the United States on mandates was reflected in the council's consideration of the American reply to the principal powers on that question, the note from Washington was not officially before the council, but the representatives of Great Britain, France, Japan and Italy have the text of the note, the substance of which was known to the whole council. After reviewing the main features all agreed that progress had been made toward a satisfactory settlement.

The Washington conference was referred to by M. Noblemaire, the French delegate to the amendments commission, who took the ground that revision of the pact should be discussed in Washington with the representatives of the United States before anything should be done to prejudice the question. The council, however, decided to proceed with the consideration of the amendments.

The council rejected the Canadian proposition to eliminate article X and adopted a suggestiou by Arthur J. Balfour, one of the English delegates, to appoint a committee to draft texts modifying article X so as to remove the obligation of members to participate the territory of other members.

The discussion of disarmament also reflected the sentiment of several members not to participate in action in advance of the Washington conference. H. A. L. Fisher, British member, led the opposition to the demand for immediate application of some measures of publicity such as were proposed last year relating to the disclosure of their armaments by the various nations.

The disarmament commission at its meeting decided after considerable discussion to recommend to the assembly that an international congress on private manufacture and traffic in arms be held at a time to be fixed later. It also decided to recommend that all nations be asked to furnish detailed statistics of their armaments.

GIRL KILLED IN GOTHAM STORM

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Showers of hail stones that covered the sidewalks of Jamaica section with slush, featured a brief electrical storm that swept over New York City early tonight and relieved the hot spell in which the city has sweltered.

Lightning struck and killed Hazel Donohue, 20, in the shallow waters of Rockaway Beach today while she was hurrying out to join her mother in a search for shelter when the storm broke. The bolt struck in the midst of a throng of bathers. Several men were temporarily stunned.

FLICKERS MARK BOY'S CLOSING PULSE BEATING

By Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 3.—Flickering electric lights in thousands of San Francisco homes at the dinner hour last night caused comment and question. At breakfast this morning the morning newspapers explained that the flickering marked the final pulse beats of 14 year old Fordner Abbot, electrocuted at play. Young Abbott, playing with other boys, climbed a high tension power pole, slipped and fell across the electric wires. Two other boys on the pole saw a flash like lightning snuff out their playmate's life. The body interfered with electric transmission until removed.

LACK OF TEETH COSTS LIFE OF AGED RESCUER

By Associated Press.

HARRISBURG, Ill., Sept. 3.—Lack of teeth cost the life last night of Thomas Ritson, aged 54, member of the mine rescue team investigating the explosion which killed eleven miners in the Harco mine last Wednesday.

Ritson was killed by mine gas because he was unable to hold the mouthpiece of his helmet in proper fashion, his companions said.

SINN FEIN REPLY CAUSE OF CONCERN

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—The Press Association says the Sinn Fein reply is regarded in government circles as a definite rejection of the government proposal of a dominion status. The situation, according to the Press Association, is considered extremely grave.

WILL PUBLISH REPLY

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—The reply of the Dail Eireann to Mr. Lloyd-George which is now in the hands of the British premier, will be given out tomorrow evening for publication, notwithstanding the fact that the British cabinet has yet to take it under advisement.

That announcement was made officially tonight at Dublin and was the outstanding news of the day relative to the Irish negotiations. Reports from Scotland indicate that the members of the cabinet are on their way to Inverliness, where a cabinet council will be held next week.

Whitehall has been the scene of lively activity on the part of the ministers whom the premier's summons found in London. General Sir Neville MacReady, commander of the troops in Ireland, arrived at Gairloch, Scotland, today on a destroyer from Dublin to confer with the prime minister. In view of the cabinet meeting, Lord and Lady Seaforth have placed Brahan Castle, near Dingwall, at the disposal of the premier.

GREEKS CHECKED BY COUNTER FROM TURKISH FORCES

By Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 2.—The Greek advance toward Angora has been delayed owing to the vigorous counter attacks of the Turks who have occupied muntain opsitions dominating the 11 Ija river. Withdrawing slowly the Turks are counter attacking for the purpose of covering the retreat of their main forces to the east of Angora.

The Greeks are running several trains daily between Eski-Shehr and Sarakeuy, thus moving supplies to the front with the greatest rapidity. The water supply difficulty is being overcome as the Greeks are approaching a fertile region and flourishing villages.

IN ACCORD ON PROBLEM OF PETROLEUM

Secretary of the Treasury Adolfo de la Huerta Announces That Questions Amicably Settled.

American Committee Representing Producers Scheduled to Leave Mexican Capital Sunday.

By Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 3.—Secretary of the Treasury De la Huerta and the representatives of American oil companies who came here early in the week to discuss oil questions with the Mexican government, have reached an agreement. President Obregon's signature is necessary to complete the agreement.

The oil men will return to the United States tomorrow, according to Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, "well satisfied and happy."

Secretary De la Huerta admitted unofficially that an agreement had been arrived ta, saying a complete statement would be given later.

GRAHAM NATIONAL BANK AS SOLID AS ROCK OF GIBRALTAR

Special to The Record News.

GRAHAM, Texas, Sept. 3.—News of the arrest of Frank McDowell in the city of New York by agents of the department of justice, has been received here. McDowell was at one time engaged in the banking business in this city but has been a stranger in the place for some months.

This former Texan was arrested in New York City on information furnished the police authorities by an agent of the department of justice at Dallas, Texas.

The story carried by the Associated Press is misleading as the Graham National bank is on a rock bottom basis, splendidly officered and has the confidence of the people of Graham and Young counties.

Walter Corbett is its president; H. L. Tidwell is vice president and Virgil Tidwell is also vice president, H. D. Hemphill has been cashier until this week. The bank is capitalized at $100,000 and is looked upon as one of the strongest institutions of its kind in Texas. Mr. Hemphill sold his stock at a handsome profit this week and all the officers of the bank are men of the highest integrity with ample resources.

With the exit of McDowell the bank was reorganized and its officers and depositors are among the leading citizens of Young county.

McDowell's arrest did not create a sensation here; neither was it unexpected, but the Associated Press correspondent at Dallas was in error in the story he sent over the wire to the newspapers that carried the press reports gathered by his association. In order that no injustice may be done to the bank or its official or to the people of Graham and Young counties the Associated Press has been requested to correct its misleading report and The Record News to give the widest publicity to this news story.

HOLD McDOWELL ON $10,000 BOND.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Frank McDowell, who, it is charged, embezzled $35,406 from the National Bank of Graham, Texas, of which he was vice president, was held in $10,000 bail by United States Commissioner Hitchcock today for a hearing September 13. He was arrested last night at a hotel here as a fugitive from justice. it is stated the embezzlement occurred about April 10 last.

M'DOWELL FORMERLY IN WICHITA FALLS

Frank McDowell, under arrest in New York in connection with activities while connected with a Central West Texas bank, was formerly the proprietor of the McDowell store and of the La Petite Maison of this city. He was also at one time the owner of a number of moving picture shows at Graham, Breckenridge and at other oil field towns, as well as the proprietor of a number of small hotels in these places.

The McDowell store was thrown into involuntary bankruptcy here some time ago. Assets were given as $5,000, with liabilities as many times that sum.

BOOK SPACE FOR COTTON SHIPMENTS

By Associated Press.

GALVESTON, Sept. 3.—Many advance bookings for movements of cotton abroad have been made this week, 300,000 bales having been slated for shipment to the Far East and between 400,000 and 500,000 bales for Havre.

BABSON DECLARES TEXTILE INDUSTRY GROWING BETTER

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 3.—"Business, today," he says, "stands at 77.5 points, below normal, as compared with its position 100 points above normal in January, 1920. The clouds, however, are already breaking; the opportunities of the coming period of improvement are already beginning to appear, and the man who recognizse and takes advantage of them first will profit most.

"The first industry to get hit was the clothing industry. Directly after the war, the textile people did a whirlwind business. Five million men were turned back into the industry from the army and navy within a few months. Most of them celebrated the event by buying a new suit of clothes. Not only that, but their wives and sweethearts felt that it would be well themselves, when the boys got home, so they bought clothes also. The result of this was that the textile industries experienced an unprecedented boom. In fact, the industry went so far above normal, that the reaction which inevitably follows, according to the law of action and reaction, carried it into a critical condition. As it was first to prosper after the Armistice, it was only natural that it should be the first to be hit in the depression.

"The women are still buying, but the men have not been buying for the past year or more. Many textile mills have been shut down and a great many clothing stores have been operating at a loss. Furthermore, the mild winter which we had last year, only made matters worse, and added to the general depression of the clothing industry.

"Conditions, however, are now changing in the textile field. The price of wool is very low, the average grades are selling at 60 to 65 cents a pound in New York, compared with $1.65 per pound compared with June, 1920. Cotton is selling for about 15 cents a pound, compared with 43 cents a pound, the price ruling in July of last year. The men in the textile mills are doing a better day's work for lower wages. In short, the clothng industry is getting on a sound basis. This winter the people will be able to get good clothes, made of good material, at a fair price. This means they will begin buying again in something like normal standards. If we have a real cold winter, there may even be a shortage in some cities, as many clothing stores will not be able to fill the necessary demands."

MAY EXTEND PARDON FOR EUGENE DEBS

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—The possibility that President Harding, after the formal conclusion of peace with Germany, may through extension of executive clemency, open the doors of the Atlanta penitentiary to Eugene V. Debt the socialist leader, was suggested today by administration officials.

Speculation as to disposition of the Debs case has been widespread in Washington for several weeks. Reports were general until a few days ago, although without official confirmation, that Attorney General Daugherty would recommend that the socialist leader be pardoned. This belief, however, was lessened and in some quarters entirely dissipated by the emphatic stand taken by Mr. Daugherty in his American Bar association address of last Wednesday against release of which he called "political offenders."

Several officials on having their attention called to the stand taken by the attorney general, immediately pointed out that a distinction existed between a pardon and an extension of executive clemency. A pardon, it was explained, would operate to restore Debs to the full rights and privileges of citizenship in addition to freeing him from prison while the extension of clemency merely would allow him his freedom.

These officials were strongly of the opinion that in view of the socialist leaders advanced age and because his offenses have been held to be of words rather than deeds, the question of clemency might be considered by the attorney general and president.

Assertions also were made by these officials that approximately 200 offenders against the war laws now serving prison sentences might be treated apart from Debs on the question of amnesty.

FIFTY HAVE TEETH FIXED DURING MONTH

Fifty children during the month of August attended the dental clinic the newest branch of activity of the Wichita county health and home nursing service, according to the monthly report, made by Miss Dorothea Dorpat, supervisor of nursing activities, who succeeded Miss McBride a few weeks ago.

Eighty treatments were given during the month by the dentists of the city, who volunteered their services for this work, and twenty further appointments were made. The dentists are giving from three to five hours weekly in this free work, the report adds.

More than two hundred children were examined and treated during the month at the health center, conducted weekly, the report adds, and on hundred and fifty mothers have brought their babies and small children. The cases are divided: babies, 71, children over two years, 134; adults over 16, 14.

The establishment of the health center work at Iowa Park, during August, and the plans for opening up a similar center at Burkburnett on September 28 are also reported.

REFINERIES CONSOLIDATE

Consolidation of the K. M. A. Refining Company of Wichita Falls and the Hines Oil and Refining company of Duncan, Okla., is announced, the consolidation taking the name of the Rock Island Refining and Pipeline Company. The Hine Company owned a pipeline and loading rack six miles south of Duncan, and the K. M. A. Refining company, a plant of ten thousand barrels capacity, in the Kemp Manger Allen field.

The new company is incorporated under the laws of the state of Oklahoma, with a capital stock of $300,000. The officers are: C. H. Verschoyle, president; John A. Keys, vice-president; L. B. Simmons, secretary and treasurer.

The K. M. A. company was owned by J. A. Kemp, W. S. Langford, Reese Allen, L. B. Simmons and C. H. Verschoyle.

A group of Marion, Ohio, capitalists and investors, headed by former Congressman John A. Keys, owned the Hines Company.

The plant is reported now running to capacity, with a splendid business outlook.

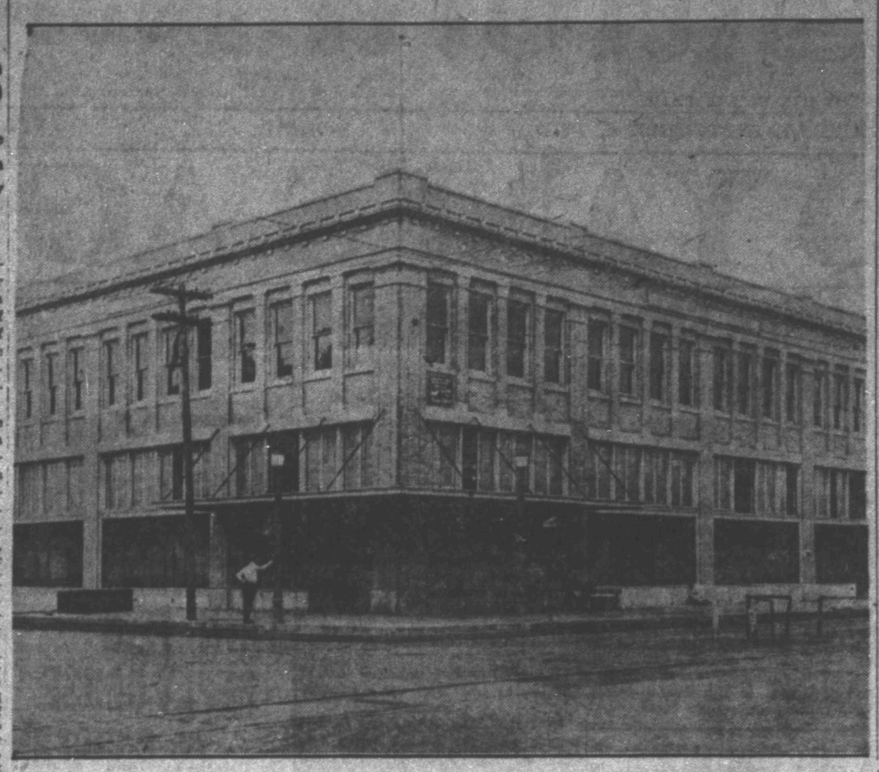

JUDGE KAY WILL ADDRESS CLASS SUNDAY MORNING

Judge John C. Kay, well known local attorney is announced as the principal speaker before the men's Sunday school class which meets at the Olympic theater Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

In addition to the usual song service is announced a vocal solo by Paul Von Allman and a special organ number by Mrs. J. W. Akin, Jr.

Busy people are always interested in saving time. They find it convenient to bank with the City National Bank of Commerce which by reason of its central location, efficient organization and up-to-the-minute equipment enables them to transact their banking with a minimum expenditure of time and effort.—Adv.

In June of 1914, a young business man came to Wichita Falls from New York city, set himself up on Indiana street between Sixth and Seventh in what he now smilingly terms a "two by four" store, tacked up his sign on the front and announced his motto as "Trade With Saul and Have Money in the Bank."

All this young man says he had was ambition, energy and faith in this city as a place to establish a business. The money he had was "about a dollar and a half" he says.

He was the manager, floorwalker, window dresser, cashier, in fact he was the "whole cheese" and his only assistant was his wife.

The story of the growth of the business of Saul Lebanson, (for he is the hero of this modern "Horatio Alger" story) up to the present time when he is just about to move into a handsome two-story brick department store building at Seventh and Indiana one of the finest and most modern in North Texas, is a story that brings out the principle that honest dealings, business foresight and good values will spell business growth.

Tuesday, September 6, the fine big new store which will house the Sauls store will open, with a complete stock of mens' and ladies' furnishings, shoes, millinery, piece goods, and in fact every line that goes to make up an up-to-the-minute department store. Formal opening will be held later in the fall, Mr. Lebenson says, when he return from buying goods in New York.

The new home of Sauls store has 15,000 square feet of floor space, including two stories and a basement and will employ 50 salesmen and saleswomen and office workers.

On the main floor will be the men's and ladies' ready-to-wear, shoe department, piece goods department and general merchandise lines. The balcony around the entire main floor will accommodate the children's and ladies' department, while in the basement the "Saul's Bargain Basement" will be found.

Modern furnishing and conveniences characterize the store throughout. A rest room capable of seating 30 people, drinking fountains with ice cold running water and usual features of an up-to-date convenience of this nature are in the rear part of the main floor.

To get back to the growth of Saul's store from the time when he ventured into Wichita Falls business life, more people were attracted to his store by his fair dealing and good values, Mr. Lebenson says he added a clerk to his force. His business continuing to grow in August 1917, he moved into a new two-story brick building on the Northeast corner of Seventh and Indiana, which place he occupied up to the time of moving into his present quarters. This move enabled him to increase his stock of goods about five times, he says, and gave him an opportunity of putting some of his latest ideas into execution.

The new building, which will be the home after Tuesday of the Saul store, is owned by Mr. Lebenson, who bought the lot and started construction of the building April 15 of this year.

Construction work progressed with good speed and the building was ready for occupancy on schedule time. W. Roberts is the architect. The building contractor is Charles Bialkowski, Sam Schatt, the electrical contractor, Mack and Mack the plubers and W. S. Martin, painting contractor.

Mr. Lebenson announces that the policy of the store will be continued to be the same that has caused such a remarkable growth in the past 7 years, that of real values, depending on the volume of sales for the profit, honest dealing and "never knocking the other fellow."

child in the republic. Therefore, we should make the public business our personal concern.

I cannot help feeling that if more of our citizens would exercise their right of original selection we might escape much of the disagreeable, expensive and oftimes unseemly self-seeking of these latter days. Present political practice limits us to making choice of pubic servants among those who seek office. In all other relations of life we seek out the man whom we prefer, the man who can serve us best but in the administration of political institutions that have power over our very lives and liberties, we confine ourselves to men who apply for the job. It would be a happy departure from bad practice, I think, if between now and next spring the Democratic voters of Texas should contrive to indicate in some rather definite manner the problems and the type of men, even the individuals, they prefer to consider, without waiting for candidates to present themselves and precipitate issues which they prefer for mere political expediency. While this is not easily practicable, it is not altogether impossible if the people set their monds to it. While it is fitting for men to aspire to leadership and to propose issues, it is well for the people to take forethought of their public concerns lest they be led unawares into contests of passion and prejudice. At this juncture in the affairs of the nation and the world the efficient legislator is the man of understanding, patience and preserverange with a well informed body of public opinion behind him.

Without attempting now to indicate a platform or a program, I submit the view that our most important present problems are economic and fiscal. Happily, we have settled for all calculable time certain issues that have vexed the body politic for a third of a century, and we seem to be in a state of mind and a state of need for the determination of measures and methods that hereafter will avert, as nearly as is humanly possible, a recurrence of the cruel experiences through which we have passed durng the last fifteen months. Without neglecting social and moral well-being. We should give earnest study to governmental policies affecting material welfare. There have been some sad blunders in the recent past, and while we shall never entirely escape economic disturbance, there is much we can do to prevent destructive shock.

I am willing to believe, for example, that statesmanship is incapable of devising a less burdensome and less heddlesome system of taxation, a wiser system of credit or wiser administration of credit than we now endure. Our commerce stagnates, our banks are embarrassed, our laborers are unemployed, our families are deprived of comfort, though there is abundance in the land, and all in large part because our farmers and stock-raisers, those who produce our food and raiment, are unable to meet their obligations and to buy freely the commodities of manufacture and merchandise from the profits of their industry. This situation affects most painfully those who depend upon their daily labor for sustenance. Economic injustice reacts upon all classes and sooner or later breeds political and social disaster.

Prosperity cannot be enacted by law or decreed by authority, but in our financial and fiscal systems and in our trade relations there are conditions and practices which statesmanship must ameliorate if we are to have dependable and enduring relief.

My profound interest in these problems, with a feeling that I can contribute something definitely constructive in their solution, is my chief reason for putting myself fforward as a candidate for the senatorship. I hope this observation does not sound immodest. There seems to be no other means of directing attention to what I consider the paramount need of our people.

Moreover, having decided to take the step, I owe it to many friends who have spoken to me on the subject and to a few whom I have consulted, to announce my intention without delay. I promise not to trouble them or the people with untimely solicitation, for until next spring I shall confine myself strictly to private affairs. At the proper time I shall present my views upon all pertinent questions and enter the campaign with zeal and candor.

CLARENCE OUSLEY.

JUNIOR A. & M. SCHOOLS TO OPEN ON SEPTEMBER 19

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, Sept. 3.—The fall semester at the junior colleges in the A. and M. college system will begin two days in advance of the opening date of the senior institution. Both John Tarleton college at Stephensville and Grubbs Vocational college at Arlington will open on September 19 and Prairie View State Normal and Industrial College at Prairie View, a branch of the A. and M. college for the training of negroes will begin work on the fall term September 7.

The two junior institutions are co-educational and offer courses in agriculture, industrial arts, business administration and vocational education to boys and courses in food nutrition, general home economics, clothing and textiles and household arts to girls. A diploma from the schools entitles the holder to full admission to the junior class of a similar course in A. and M. college or other institution of like character.

Both institutions maintain units of the Reserve Officers' Training corps for giving the boys military instruction with the object of developing the student physically by systematic drill and exercise, to incalculate unhesitating and unconscious obedience to constituted authority so essential to good citizenship and to aid the national goverument in training men for service in time of national need.

At the opening of school this fall for the first time both colleges will offer a course in home demonstration work, the purpose being to train women workers for the extension service in Texas and to teach boys "crocheting, canning and coating."

CHARLIE CHAPLIN SUED FOR $10,000 AS LAWYER'S FEE

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—The complaint in a suit against Charlie Chaplin, served on him while he was posing here for a portrait minus flat shoes, derby and mustache, was filed in court today. The suit is brought by Fred E. Gildsmith, who seeks $10,000 as a fee for inducing the defendant to pay Mildred Harris Chaplin $100,000 in settlement of alimony claims.

Goldsmith said the questiin in the case was whether his services were a necessity to his client who was still married to Chaplin when she retained the lawyer. Chaplin claims they were a luxury, the attorney said.

IOWA PARK YOUTH DIES FROM WOUND

Succumbing to wounds received late Friday when he was shot in the right cheek by a .22 calibre bullet, which ranged downward, shattering his right jaw and lodged in his throat, Wesley Thompson, 16-year-old son of Mrs. E. H. Christopher of Iowa Park, died Saturday morning at 3.45 o'clock.

The Thompson boy, whose condition was not at first deemed serious, told officers that the shooting was an accident.

Albert Adcox, 12 years old, and his father, A. L. Adcox, proprietor of a small restaurant at Iowa Park, who were taken into custody and removed to the county jail here were brought before the grand jury Saturday. At a late hour Saturday night no charges had been filed in connection with the case.

Officers say that citizens of Iowa Park assert that boys have been in the habit of annoying the Adcox boy during the absence of his father. The boy told officers that he was passing the 22 calibre rifle across the counter to the Thompson boy for him to inspect when it was accidentally discharged, inflicting the fatal wound.

The body of the deceased youth was removed to Iowa Park for burial.

FIRE DESTROYS AUTOMOBILE TRUCK

Carelessness with a lighted cigarette while working on a motor truck with gasoline being used as a cleaning agent was reported by firemen to have occasioned the blaze which destroyed one motor truck and seriously damaged another in the Wheeler Produce Co., warehouse, 610 Seymour street, Saturday afternoon about 4 o'clock.

The damage was estimated by firemen to be approximately $1,250.

Movie Cop, They Call Him at Depot

Wichita Falls now has a regular "movie policeman."

At least this is the declaration of Night Patrolmen Blasingame and Jensen.

It all happened when Officer Tom Shook, who patrols the union depot beat, made his appearance Friday night the instruction of Commissioner Fitts.

The new uniforms are of blue serge with prominent brass buttons and nattily tailored in the latest fashion.

Officer Shook, being the first member of the force to receive his uniform, and being neat of build and not uncomely of appearance, was the cause of considerable comment when he made his initial appearance in his new regalia.

Officers Blasingame and Jensen declare that a waitress near the union depot on seeing the officer appear for the first time in his new and natty attire exclaimed "Well who in the world is our 'movie cop'."

"And we guess it'll have to stick until we get ours," the officers added.

AUTO TRADE IMPROVEMENT IS REPORTED

"Conditions are undoubtedably improving," said F. G. Gildhouse, Saturday. "People are getting money from somewhere, and they are beginning to spend it. My store began a special sale Friday, and the response from the public was most encouraging. The store was crowded to capacity Friday and Saturday, and the visitors bought liberally—more so than at any time since the oil exictement subsided.

"There is money in Wichita Falls," continued Mr. Gildhouse, "and all that was needed to bring it into circulation was a return of confidence on the part of the public. I am convinced that confidence is rapidly being restored."

COMMANDER OF TEXANS IS BURIED

By Associated Press.

QUINCY, Ill., Sept. 3—The funeral of Brigadier General Henry R. Hill, whose body arrived here from France Friday, took place this afternoon. Business was suspended. The funeral was in charge of the American Legion.

Brigadier General Hill was made a brigdier commander of the 63rd division when the troops left Camp Logan in Texas, having previously been a brigadier general of the Illinois National Guard.

Going to France as a major he was given an order to clean out a German machine gun nest in the Argonne. He called for volunteers to accompany him, explaining before starting that it probably meant death. He was killed while leading his men on this mission September 18, 1918, and was buried near Epionville with military honors.

Before the world war and while a state brigadier general, he was in command of troops at the east St. Louis race riots. He also saw service along the Mexican border.

His rank was restored by congress after his death, and the distinguished service medal was sent to his aged mother.

END ARGUMENT IN WESTERN FREIGHT CASES

Special to the Record News.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Presentation of testimony and argument involving freight rates on grain and hay, brought before the interstate commerce commission by twenty western states was completed with arguments by representatives of the states and shippers intended to show that relief from the depression in western agriculture rests in a measure with the commission.

The hearings, described by the shippers as the most important before the commission since the general rate increases of last year, consumed more than two weeks while oral arguments occupied a week or more.

Clyde M. Reed, chairman of the western grain committee and chairman of the Kansas public utilities commission, urged in final argument today that the commission before reaching a decision consider whether the railroads were being operated honestly, economically and efficiently as provided by law.

John E. Benton, counsel for the state railroad commissions, contended that no consideration should be given whether the railroad labor board increased or decreased wages of railroad employes, in fixing rates.

Motto Gives Insight Into Character Of Man on Whose Wall It Is Hanging

Every well regulated office is supposed to have several mottos handing on its walls, nuging the occupant and all whose gaze, chance or studied, happens to fall on its wise legends, and in this respect offices in the downtown district of Wichita Falls are no exception to the rule.

A study of the tone of these mottoes often gives an insight into the character, aspirations and individuality of the occupant or occupants of the office. Mottos often gives an insight into the character, aspirations and individuality of the occupant or occupants of the office. Mottos are as varied as men and a little observation will bear out this rather broad statement that as the man is so are the mottos on his office walls.

For instance, the individual who lets the other fellow do his thinking for him, at least in the more subtle things of life, may buy several highly embossed and expensive mottos, bearing stereotyped expressions something like the following: "Honesty Is the Best Policy"; "A Bird In the Hand Is Worth Two in the Bush"; "Come In Without Knocking and Go Out the Same Way"; "A Rolling Stone Gathers No Moss," and countless others of the school copy book variety. This man may be an earnest, well meaning person who loves his wife and family but he surely uses very little individuality in the selection of his wall decorations.

Then there is the artistic sould who delights in mottos from Omar Khayam and whose questioning attitude in matters of the future and fate are clear from his inanimate companions the wall decorations.

Then comes the blunt forward spoken business man. "Be Brief" is a legend that stimulates his mental nature. He may spend several hours with companions playing the "toddle top" or look up his office and go to one of the electric boards and hear the gong ring out defeat or victory for the "home brew" but as long as one is in his office one should take heed to the sign.

But the most expressive sign in the judgment of the writer, and one that shows the spirit which should characterize such an organization is the one in the local Chamber of Commerce rooms: "Little Men Are Too Busy; Big Men Find Time."

This implies that no detail which affects or may in the future have some bearing on the growth of the "City That Faith Built" is neglected because at that particular moment the staff of the commercial body may be engaged in some routine work.

Just at this time there is another motto which has so far appeared but once in a local office, most men being content to use it in connection with their rooting at ball games or "make believe" games while the team is on the road. It is Red Phillips' immortal slogan, "Pour It On 'Em."

TESTED RECIPES.

Cheese Biscuits—Sift together two cups of flour, four teaspoons of baking powder and a half a teaspoon of salt; rub in with the finger tips two tablespoons of any preferred shortening and moisten to a soft dough with about one cup of rich milk. Roll thin, handling as little as possible, divide into two parts and cover one-half thickly with grated chese. Dust lightly with paprika and lay the other half of the dough over the cheese. Cut through into small biscuits and bake in a very hot oven.

Southern Succotash—Boil for five minutes six ears of young corn in well-sugared water. Drain, score the kernels and press out the pulp. Mix this with an equal quantity of cooked yiung lima beans (they can not be too small) and season with salt and paprika to taste, two rounding tablespoons buter and four tablespoons of thick cream. Turn into the uper part of the double boiler and let steam over hot water for five minutes, with strips of crisp bacon laid across the top.

CANNING RECIPES

To Can Tomatoes—Pour boiling water over tomatoes to remove the skins. Put boiling water on stove and put a small handful of salt in it. Put in tomatoes whole and boil until you can run a toothpick clear through them. Have jars ready by putting on the stove in cold water and letting come to a boil; put tomatoes in and seal tight.

Vegetables for Soup—One large bunch of celery, two quarts of green beans, eight carrots, six ears of corn, six sweet peppers. Cut corn off the cob and cut other vegetables up small. Take one-half peck of tomatoes, peel, put on to cook; let come to a boil, skim off the top, add the other vegetables. Let all boil slowly one hour. Have jars hot, fill, seal and put away.

Celery for Chicken Soup—Wash celery, cut fine, boil in salt water twenty minutes. Seal in pint jars.

Sweet Pickles—One peck cucumbers. Make a brine of one cup of salt to one gallon of water. Scald this. Let cucumbers stand in this five days, then wash off and cover with clear boiling water; let stand over night. In the morning cut them in inch pieces; put them between horseradish leaves and cover with boiling water, with one teaspoon of alum to the gallon. Let boiling water, take out. Mix one gallon vinegar, twelve cups of sugar, ten cents worth of stick cinnamon, one-half box mixed suices, add the pickles and let boil five minutes.

SPUDDERS WRAP UP YE OLDE BALLE GAME IN TISSUE PAPER AND PRESENT IT TO CATS, 7-8

By C. F. CARTER

The Spudders dropped the last game of the series to Fort Worth yesterday.

No, that's wrong. The Spudders kicked away the last game of the series to Fort Worth yesterday.

Wrong again. The Spudders wrapped the last game of the series up in tissue paper, put a pretty red ribbon around it, and begged, nay, implored Fort Worth to accept it.

Right, at last. A gift it was and nothing else. After battling their way to a two-run lead in the ninth, the Spudders presented the game to the Panthers in the last of that final frame. We can't make alibis for the boys always—perhaps we can, but we don't intend to. We didn't see the game, and can only judge from study of what the wire operator handed us. But our judgment tells us that Walter Salm erred sorrily in the ninth when he left Abe Bowman in after the first Cat had doubled and the second had walked. With the tieing runs on base, and no one out—well, it seemed to us Big Abe had gone far enough.

It was a heart breaker to lose, gang, after such a desperate uphill battle into that ninth inning lead. What can we say? We don't want to put anyone on the pan in the midst of a heated race like this, yet we haven't the dishonesty to say hard luck and nothing else lost the Spudders that game.

Guess, we've just got to take refuge in the optimistic thought that the boys open against Dallas this afternoon still leading the league. The Spuds' lead is nothing to rave over; merely a half game—but it's a lead, and we've all got to pull hard for the gang to pour it on Dallas and Shreveport. Then when we get the Cats in our own back yard—well, we'll just naturally bust 'em cold!

Danny Hits Homer.

The Spudders grabbed the first tally yesterday, when Danny Clark crashed one over the new right field grandstand for the circuit. But the lead didn't last long, as the Cats pushed over two in their half on a single and a brace of two baggers. Ziggy Sears opened with a single to rigal, and held the bag while Stellbauer was flying out to Miller. Kraft doubled to left, sending Ziggy to third, and both runners scored when Hoffman took hold of one of Rabbit Derough's shoots and laid it against the center field fence for two sacks.

That was a starter—where did the Cats get their other runs? Without going too deeply into detail right at this point, we wish to arise and state that they made three of them via the double steal route—and against that game we wish to protest. When a double steal is attempted with a man on first and third, the advantage is always with the thieves, never with the defense. Despite that, Frank Kitchens twice in yesterday's game, with two men out, went through with the defense tactics of making the short peg to second when a double steal was attempted. One run came in the first time, and on the second attempt the Cats scored twice when Kitch made a bad peg.

Double Steal Ruinous.

No man, woman or child in this wide, wide world may desire our opinion, but we herewith express it just the same, namely: THAT WITH TWO MEN OUT, AND MEN ON FIRST AND THIRD, WHEN A DOUBLE STEAL IS ATTEMPTED THE CATCHER SHOULD, IN NINE CASES OUT OF TEN, EITHER NOT THROW THE BALL AT ALL OR "FAKE" HIS THROW TO SECOND AND THEN WHIP THE PILL TO THIRD BASE IN AN ATTEMPT TO GET THE MAN KICKS OFF THE BAG. That's the way we believe the defensive play against a double steal should be worked in a tight game which may be decided by one run. Don't forget, fans, that on each occasion TWO MEN WERE OUT.

With the score 5 to 2 against them, the sluggin' Spudders laid down a barrage in the eighth, and beneath its cover drove in two more tallies. Josefson filed out to Sears on the first ball Tiny Goodbred pitched, Tanner walked and went to second while Kraft was taking care of Tex McDonald's grounder. Both Clark and Miller walked, filling the bases. Jack Johnston, batting for Allen, singled to center scoring Buddy and Danny, Bill Whittaker replaced Goodbred on the hill, and Blachoff went to bat for Works. "Smiler" made the third out by flying to Taylor in right.

In the ninth the Spudders scored three runs, and apparently had the game cinched. Kitch walked, and Ramsey, batting for Dorough, beat out an infield hit to short. Pate replaced Whittaker for Fort Worth, and Josefson worked the big southpaw for free transportation filling the bases. Buddy Tanner hit to Rigney who kicked the pill away, Kitch scoring. Tex hit to Dutch Hoffman, who imitated Rigney, and Ramsey also counted. Clark fouled out to Kraft, and Griggs forced Josefson at the plate, Buddy scoring, however, when Haworth threw to first base in an attempt to complete a double play. Blachoff grounded to Haley who threw him out at first.

And then the Cats raised Ned in their half. Bowman went to the hill for the Spuds, and Chink Taylor promptly doubled to center. Abe weakened, and walked Sears. Stellbauer brought Taylor home with a two-bagger to center and stuck Sears on third base. Salm at last pulled Abe, and sent in Jimmy Sewell. Jim hit Kraft in the ribs and filled the bases, and then walked in the tieing run by passing Hoffman, Haley forced Stellbauer at the plate, Tanner to Kitchens—and the game ended when Phelan, batting for Rigney, scored Kraft with a sacrifice fly to Red Josefson.

BOSTON, Sept. 3.—Captain Everett Scott of the Red Sox took part in his 800th consecutive major league game yesterday. His continuous play, long since a record, started June 20, 1916.

The modern record was held by Fred Luderus of the Philadelphia Nationals, who in 1919, completed 535 consecutive games. The longest known previous record of organized baseball, 577 games without a break, was made by George Pickney of Brooklyn American association team over a period from 1885 to 1890.

WOMAN COVERS 20 MILES OF LONG 150-MILE SWIM

HUDSON, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Miss Mille Gade, the Danish woman swimmer, who is trudgeoning her way from Albany to New York, passed here this morning, nearly 20 miles below the starting point. She was plounking through the water at a fast clip, Wear Athens, she took a few moments rest, holding on to the boat that is accompanying her.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Babe Ruth knocked out his 50th home run today in the third inning of the Yankees' game with Washington with two men on. Courtney was pitching.

HORNED FROG LETTER MEN AWAIT CALL

FORT WORTH, Texas, Sept. 3.—Every old letter man from the "Horned Frog" team of last season who is eligible for football this year is on the ground and just waiting for the first day of scrimmage to roll round. The letter men include Captain-elect Fowler, quarter back; "Dutch" Meyer, end; "Freshman" Cherry, a half; "Billy" Acker, a tackle; Jackson, a half-back; Levy, guard; Bishop, guard; "Pete" Fulcher, guard; "Cowney" Ogan, center, and Loren Houtchens, end. Rab Ryan, full back, is expected to report today. These men are the nucleus around which Coaches Driver and McKnight expect to build another winning team this season.

Quite a number of new men have been invited to football training camp which will start at T. C. U. on the 6th of September, but just how good they will be or how many of them are of varsity calibre, it is impossible to say. New material this season is not plentiful as most of the high school stars do not finish high school for a year or two. However, some of the new men will doubtless make good on the T. C. U. team this season and earn a varsity letter.

Headquarters for the football training will be at the new gymnasium at T. C. U., one of the finest in the southwest. One hundred new steel lockers have just been installed in the dressing rooms for the first and second teams. The swimming pool will be open for use and the T. C. U. grid warriors will have the finest training quarters of any club in the Southwest. The "Horned Frog" football schedule has been arranged as follows:

September 24.—Canyon City Normal at Amarillo, Texas.
October 1.—Simmons College (West Texas Fair) at Abilene, Texas.
October 8.—Oklahoma A. & M. at Stillwater, Oklahoma.
October 15.—Trinity University at Fort Worth, Texas.
October 29.—Phillips University at Enid Oklahoma.
November 4.—Missouri School of Osteopathy at Fort Worth, Texas.
November 11.—Southern Methodist University at Dallas, Texas.
November 18.—Haskell Indians at Fort Worth, Texas.
November 24.—University of Arkansas at Fort Worth, Texas.

WISDOM and WORSE

By C. F. C.

Billy Bee says that the number of telegrams he received from this city asking what alibi he would have for the loss of the first game only proved that the Star-Telegram had more readers in Wichita Falls than the two local papers combined. No, Billy, it merely proved that a sport writer cannot retain the good will of his readers by considering his neighbor his enemy and by seizing every opportunity to belittle him.

Personally, we believe and have so stated on many occasions that the Panthers have a splendid baseball club—and we are quite proud that no Fort Worth fan has ever indignantly telegraphed us to ask what alibi we had to offer for a Spudder defeat at the hands of the Cats.

"A road schedule on which a ball club must depend to win a pennant is conceded to be an adverse break in fortune. That it can not interfere materially with the fighting heart of a good ball club is evidenced by the present case of Wichita Falls in the Texas league, and the Yankees in the American—here are two teams that have proven so far their ability to rise above the vicissitudes of the road"—The Dallas News.

Pretty soon we're going to move to Dallas, if some of those genial sport scribes over there continue showing such splendid appreciation of our gallant Spudders.

San Antonio opened the cellar door and kicked Galveston down the stairs—which makes it our turn to crow at last. Away back when the Sand Crabs were leading the league, we looked 'em over here in the Falls and stated that in our opinion the Crabs were not even a first division ball club, that good management and good pitching due to an early southern start were the only factors that had placed them at the top. They couldn't hold the pace, we argued. Then the following day the Crabs licked the Spudders good and proper—and every time a Sand Crab busted the ball on the nose, his fellow players would stick their heads out from under the roof of the bench, wave their flippers at the press coop on top of the grandstand, and yell:

"Hey, Carter, whadda ya think of this second division outfit now?"

We hadn't a word to say. There was nothing we could say. So we shut up, and waited and watched. Day after day the Crabs slipped; day and day they kept on dropping points in the percentage column, and now at last they're the cellar champions of the league with the season just about over. And accordingly we arise to utter one long, loud glorious how! right back at those boys, thusly:

GALVESTON HASN'T GOT A FIRST DIVISION CLUB!

We also ran a little "pome" away back when the Spudders were basement tenants, as follows:

"The slipping Spudders in the cellar
Can't help but pain the loyal feller
Who lives on hope's one burning ember,
They may be up there in September."

And, by the Great Horn Spoon, gang, it's September, and they're up there! Which proves that "faith will move mountains," and that you'll never get anywhere if you weaken.

TY COBB NOW ONLY THREE POINTS BEHIND HEILMAN IN AMERICAN LEAGUE BATTING RACE, CLOUTING .395

CHICAGO, Sept. 3.—With the close of the baseball season a month away, Ty Cobb, pilot of the Detroit Tygers, enters the home stretch only three points behind Harry Heilmann, his slugging outfielder, for the batting honors of the American league, according to averages released today. The averages include games of Wednesday.

Heilmann suffered a slight slump, dropping from .403 to .398 for the leadership, while the Georgia Peach closed the gap considerably by bringing his average from .392 to .395.

Tris Speaker, leader of the Cleveland club, advanced from sixth to fourth place with an average of .373, which ties George Sisler, the St. Louis star. Babe Ruth continues in third position with .384. Ruth, however, stretched his total of runs scored to 142 and his 163 hits have given him a total of 364 bases, which is far in front of his rivals. Besides his fourply blows, the Yankee slugger has cracked out 37 doubles and 10 triples.

Other leading batters for 70 or more games: Tobin, St. Louis, .368; Veach, Detroit .347; E. Collins, Chicago .344; Jacobson, St. Louis .340; Williams, St. Louis .340; Strunk, Chicago .340; Severeid, St. Louis .339; O'Neill, Cleveland .333; Sewell, Cleveland .331.

Hornsby Holds Lead

Rogers, Hornsby, star of the St. Louis Cardinals, is giving promise of being the National League leader in several departments. He not only has increased his batting average to .415, but is threatening to grasp the home run honors of the league from George Kelly, the Giant's slugger. Kelly failed to add to his string of 22 homers during the week, while Hornsby smashed out three round trip blows and is pushing the New York first baseman with 20. As a run getter, the St. Louis player broke the tie shared with Bancroft of New York, and is leading this department, having registered 110 times for his club. He hard smashed out 202 hits, for a total of 324 bases.

The veteran, George Cutshaw of the Pirates is the runner-up to Hornsby for batting honors, being 64 points behind with an average of .351.

Other leading batters for 70 or more games: Roush, Cincinnati .347; McHenry, St. Louis .342; Fournier, St. Louis .340; Young, New York, .338; Mann, St. Louis .338; Cruise, Boston .335; Bigbee, Pittsburgh .333; Groh, Cincinnati .332; E. Smith, New York .330; Frisch, New York .329; Meusel, New York .329; J. Smith, St. Louis .329.

BLACK SPUDDERS LOSE TWIN BILL WITH CATS TODAY

The Black Cats poured it on the Black Spudders yesterday at Athletic park, winning 8 to 5, although out-hit by the locals. The flunky Spudders contributed a number of costly errors to the pastime, however, which counted heavily in the scoring.

doubleheader this afternoon, the first doubleheader this afternoon, the first game starting at 3:00 o'clock. Roberts, who has not lost a game on the home grounds this season, will hurl the opened for the Black Spuds, while "Big Boy" Hicks will go against the Dark Cats in the closing contest. According to Manager Blanton of the black Spudders this is an absolute guarantee of a double victory.

The returns of the doubleheader between the white Spudders, Texas league leaders and the Marines in Dallas will be given to the fans between innings.

FOOTBALL STAR NO MATCH FOR WIFE; SEEKS ANNULMENT

CHICAGO, Sept. 3.—James Martin, former football star, has entered suit for annulment of his marriage, his attorneys announced today on the grounds that he is "no match" for his wife. The suit speaks of her as a "cave man." Martin accuses his wife of trying several times to shoot him, also of trying to run over him with his own automobile. He was too agile for her. The grounds for annulment is that she had not been divorced a year when she married him.

HARMSWORTH RACES SET AHEAD TO MONDAY

DETROIT, Sept. 3.—The first heat of the Harmsworth trophy race, scheduled for today, was postponed until Monday when it was announced that Maple Leaf VII., had developed a broken gear.

BRAVES AND PHILS SPLIT DOUBLE BILL

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 3.—Boston divided a doubleheader with Philadelphia in their final series here today. Ring held the Braves to four scattered hits in the opening game and the Phillies were 4 to 1. In the second Boston got 21 hits and a 15 to 4 victory. Score.

FAVORITES HOLD LEAD IN AIRDOME VOTING CONTEST

Jake Miller finally overtook DeMaggio in the fans' voting contest at the Airdome yesterday, in the balloting to determine a representative All-Star Texas league team. This gives the Spudders, in the opinion of the Airdome fans, six men out of nine on the popular choice team.

The results yesterday follow:

Bescher	151
McDonald	150
Clark	150
Rigney	99
Kraft	95
Kitchens	93
Connolly	86
Miller	71
DeMaggio	67
Holly	63

CLEVELAND GETS READY TO HANDLE BIG SERIES CROWDS

CLEVELAND, Sept. 3.—Despite the fact that the American league race is far from decided, the Cleveland Baseball company is getting its world's series office machinery set up for handling tickets in the event the Indians again become possessors of the bunting. Many applications have been received durinug the last six weeks, Business Manager E. S. Barnard declared, but applicants have been notified it will be necessary to write another letter after Sept. 8.

In the event the Indians win the pennant, twice as many fans will be able to witness games as last year, when two tickets were allotted to each person for each of the four games. This year tickets will be distributed for the first two games and when the supply is exhausted allotments will be made for the next two. The only excepton will be where the applicant specifies that he wants tickets for games 3 and 4.

Tomorrow night at the Park theater on Scott street the Atlantic and Pacific coasts will battle for pugilistic honors, when Herman Turner, of Los Angeles, and Sailor Henson, of New York, will don the war pads and mix it over the ten-round route. Both men have reputations for being clean-cut boxers and hard fighters, and although there is some disparity in their weights, Promoter H. L. Martin expects the bout to be an interesting one throughout. Turner tips the beam at 145, and will have to spot his New York antagonist 20 pounds.

A number of preliminaries by local talent have been arranged, the first bout starting at 8:45 p. m.

RECEIPTS AT FORT WORTH VERY SMALL

By Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Sept. 3.—Livestock en route to other markets or sent direct to local packers made up the chief end of today's receipts. The supply amounted to 100 head of cattle, 150 calves, 150 hogs and 250 sheep. The cattle supply was on through billing and the sheep came direct to the killer. Calves sold on a steady basis and hogs were unchanged. No good hogs were here, a couple sales being made at $8.00 and one car going at $7.00. Pigs brought $6.50. Quotations:

Cattle: Beeves, $3.50@5.50; stockers, $2.50@4.50; cows, $2.00@4.25; canners, $1.00@2.00; heifers, $3.00@7.00; yearlings, $3.50@7.60; bulls, $1.50@2.50; calves, $2.00@6.50.

WHEAT GAINS SHARPLY WITH ACTIVE BUYING

CHICAGO, Sept. 3.—Sharp gains in wheat prices were shown near the finish of today's market on the board of trade here, the market ruling 2 1-4 to 3 1-4 higher than the ruling spots yesterday. There was persistent buying to strong commission houses in evidence all through the day and much of this was done by concerns with eastern connections. Outside investment orders were increased and the local crowd also was more disposed to reinstate lines. Corn closed 5-8 to 1 1-4 higher and oats 3-8 to 1-2 up.

Corn stayed within narrow limits early but when wheat advanced the course, followed suit closing at the highest figure for the day.

There was little trading in oats and the market followed the course of corn, finishing rather firm.

Trade in provisions was confined to lard and this product ruled 2 1-2 to 12 1-2 higher. A private report from a well known packing house stated that the buying for foreign accounts was extraordinary, the purchases of lard being phenomenal.

.300 PACE TOO FAST FOR OLD WAR HORSES

BY WILLIAM B. RUGGLES, Statistician, Texas League.

As the Texas League season draws to a close, the .300 pace is growing to swift for many of the hard-hitting war horses. Only twenty-two are left hingling above the charmed circle. Bob Bescher's stationary figure of .361 was all alone on the heights of the mountain Wednesday night. Clarence Kraft and Hack Eibel were tied 16 points below him, a hard stretch to make up in the remaining half month of the campaign. Bill Holden and Bischoff were dropping back. The rugged McDonald, Danny Clark and Jim Galloway are the only players with a fair chance to overtake the leaders. Clark is threatening Kraft's run-scoring lead with 113 to the big fellow's 116.

Kraft Hammers in Runs.

Clarence Kraft has a bare lead over his slugging rival, Hack Eibel, in driving in runs. The Panther first-sacker had hammered 128 across through Wednesday's games to the 126 of Eibel. Danny Clark is the only other batsmen with over the century to his credit. Leaders in the run manufacturing league are:

Clark (FW), 128, Eibel (St.) 126, Clark (WF.) 105, McDonald (WF.) 95, Jackson (St.) 89; Connolly (SA.) 87, Galloway (Ds.) 78, Kitchens (WF.) 75, Whiteman (Hn.) 74, Miller (WF.) 73, Sears (FW.) 71, Rigney (FW.) 71, F. Henry (SA.) 70.

Fred Henry of the Bears has taken the lead in base stealing with an even 40 through Wednesday's game. The leading ten pilferers are: F. Henry (SA.) 40, E. Bailey (Hn.) 36, Jackson (St.) 33, Connolly (SA.) 27, Fuller (SA.) 26, J. Miller (WF.) 26, Schliebner (Gv.) 25, Blades (Hn.) 24, Taylor (FW.) 22, Rigney (FW.) 22, Distel (Gv.) 22, Ewoldt (St.) 22.

Pitching Averages.

With seven more victories to his credit than any other pitcher in the circuit has achieved, Joe Pate is assured of turning in the best record of victories of the season. Pate and his teammate, Wachtel, each won 28 games last year. This season the left-hander has already gained the decision in 28 and so far has lost one less game than his record showed last season. His average is nearly 50 points better than the winning percentage with which he led the circuit in 1921 and at this time he seems certain to go above 30 victories.

Hollingsworth, the Wichita Falls sensation, ran his strikeout mark up to 202 Wednesday and is now only 14 short of the figure Bill Bailey set last year. The leading winning pitchers through Wednesday's games follow:

U. S. RETAINS DAVIS CUP NET TROPHY

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 3.—The United States retained the Davis cup, international trophy, today when the doubles teams of Williams and Washburn defeated the challenging Japanese pair, Kumagee and Shimidzu, 6-2, 7-5, 4-6, 7-5. The Americans won both singles matches yesterday. The cup belongs to the winner of three out of five matches, so that the singles scheduled for next Monday will not affect retention of the emblem.

The winning of the doubles match today, in conjunction with William M. Johnston's victory over Kumagee and William T. Tilden's win from Shimidzu in the singles yesterday gave the American players the necessary three out of five victories.

On Monday Tilden will play Kumagee while Johnston crosses racquets with Shimidzu. The outcome of these two singles matches, however, will not affect the status of the international play for the season of 1921.

The victory of the American doubles pair which culminated in the retention of the cup against the challenges of twelve nations was not as closely fought out as the scores would appear to indicate. Williams and Washburn as a team, were clearly superior to Kumagee and Shimidzu, particularly in the finality of their strokes. Streaks of erratic playing and errors making at times marred the play of the victors.

HEDRICK AND SPOONTS NO. 1, FIRST EXTENSION OF BUNGER SAND, FLOWING 100 BARRELS

Making a couple of million feet of dry gas, when first drilled into the 1900-foot sand, the Hedrick and Spoonts No. 1 Driver, two thousand feet north of the discovery well of the Bunger pool, is now flowing at the rate of 100 barrels daily, with the tools hung in the hole, promising, according to latest reports from the field, to be an exceptionally good producer. This is the first extension from the Ross and Tyrell well, on the Owens, drilled in a couple of weeks ago, and is the principal happening of interest in the South Bend district this week.

The Union Oil Company's No. 1 Askew, which has been on top of the 1900-foot sand for several months, and progress delayed by a fishing job, is reported to have the hole cleaned out, and ready to go ahead with completion. Indications at present are said to be for only a small well, this probably being due to the montne of trouble. The Union well is two and a half miles southeast of the Ross and Tyrell.

Del-Tex Completed.

Second only in importance to the extension of the Bunger sand is the completion of the Del-Tex Oil Company's No. 1 Emma West, in a new sand at 3,600 feet and reported flowing 125 barrels. The well was given a shot of two hundred and ten quarts of nitro, the hole bridning over. After cleaning this out, the well started flowing, and in continuing, according to reports. This is the deepest production in the South Bend field. The Del-Tex well is a short distance due east of the town of South Bend.

The river bend pool has two new wells reported, a 200-barrel producer on the Oklahoma Petroleum and Gasoline Company's McCluskey lease, and the No. 10, Graham, Lease A, of the Eureka Production Company, formonly the Shamrock property the latter reported good for 250 barrels.

Trading Is Spurred.

Trading has been spurred on by the strike of the Hedrick and Spoonts to the north, in the Bunger district, and there are indications of unusual activity for this section within the next week or ten days, some eight to twelve new tests being due to start. Well located acreage is bringing around $400 to $500 in cash and considerable activity is reported.

The Del-Tex well though of small production for this depth, is also considered important as an indication. It is understood that there are several tests in this general neighborhood that have been temporarily abandoned at shallower depths that will probably be deepened to the 3,000-foot level as soon as is expedient.

In the old pool, along the river, operations are slower now than has been the case for some weeks, though the recent developments on the east side in the 1900-foot sand, give grounds for considerable new operations, and a number of new locations have been made. Drilling is due to open up here in the next week or two. One new location is reported here this past week, the No. 3 McCluskey of the Eureka Production Company, which is just west of a location of the North American-Roxana on the Ford.

POLICE FIND STOLEN GOODS WITHIN HOUR

Packed, tagged and express payments made for shipment to Fort Worth, approximately $350 dollars worth of silk clothing stolen about an hour before from the home of Homer Crawford, 1808 Lucille street, was recovered Saturday night an hour later at the local express office by Policemen Blasingame, Bryan, Shook and Howell.

The list of plunder obtained by the thieves, who gained their entrance by prying loose a window screen, ncluded about 20 silk shirts, two automatic pistols, three suits of clothing, silk underwear, silk pajamas, an ivory toilet set and a cameo brooch.

Part of the plunder belonged to Belton Matthews, who lives at that place and part to W. Stanley Crawford, father of Homer.

The quick recovery of the goods was directed by Night Chief McDonald, who suspected the movements, likely to be made.

MRS. T. J. STRONG AND SON ENDING LONG VACATION

Dr. T. J. Strong received a telegram late Saturday evening from his wife in Roanoke, Va., stating that she and their youngster Jack would be leaving for Wichita Falls September 15th —and "Doc" cheerfully spread the news broadcast that he was "waiting for some real home cooking." Mrs. Strong and her son have been visiting relatives in Virginia since early summer, and Dr. Strong declared last night he is a complete wreck from hospital work and hasty restaurant meals. He added the further information that he intended to start shooting frogs and doves, put them in cold storage and "wait for a real cook to fix 'em."

PLANS NEW TPYE OF ROAD FOR COUNTY

An experiment in road making with the object of building a semi-permanent road at a moderat cost, is being considered by County Commissioner J. P. Jackson of the Wichita Falls precinct, according to a recent statement. Commissioner Jackson expects to try out his experiment on a half mile stretch of dirt road some place in his precinct.

After preparing his grade, he plans to use a layer of hot asphalt, with another layer of dirt on top—scarified or harrowed topped off with another layer of asphalt with a top layer of dirt, the entire surface to be pressed down with a heavy roller.

It is the belief of Mr. Jackson that this strip of road, which is a modification of roads tried in several parts of the country, will prove a durable and camparatively cheap type of improved road.

LEE WILSON HURT IN FALL ON MOUNTAIN

Lee Wilson, owner of the Eureka rilling company, and oil operator known throughout Texas and Louisiana, had a narrow escape from serious injury, while on Pikes Peak Friday, according to advices received from other members of the party. Lightning striknq the ground a few feet from Mr. Wilson hurlled sim over a precipice, a drop of about twenty feet, according to the report from J. A. Gardner, a member of the party. He was in a stunned condition for some time, it was stated but wil suffer no ill effects.

According to the reports reaching Wchita Falls Saturday night Mr. Wilson with a number of friends, were on the cog road sightseeing car. Mr. Wilson decided to leave the car before the ascent had been completed, and had just gotten out when the bolt of lightning came.

ARCHITECTS LEAVE QUEER MOTIF MARKS

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Devoting spare hours to careful inspection of public buildings in the hope of finding satire in stone has become a fad.

It began with the discovery by a reporter that architects had carved a dollar sign as a twin motif to the lovers' knot over the "bridge's entrance" to St. Thomas's Church on Fifth Avenue. A few days later some one leaving the Sunday services observed for the first time that miniature faces of modern men and maids of the avenue had been chiseled above the main door of the edifice. A congregation that went to pray remained to laugh.

Some of these caricatures wore monocles, others wore smiles; some were surely tired business men and good housewives while others manifestly were flappers and boulevardiers. Everybody conceded that they represented modern Fifth Avenue "types."

One face was not so modern, however. It was a year or two behind the times. On its nose was the unmistakable bulge of a "rum blossom." Another had such a bored look observers were sure it was a man who went to church to please the wife.

Rumors that many well known buildings in New York had been subjected to jocose treatment by the artisans who worked upon them moved whole flocks of people to sally forth, some with spy-glasses or lorgnettes, to look for sculptured jokes. Architects gave interviews explaining how serious the satire was; this sort of humor has been practiced since the middle ages, not in a spirit of levity, but with the design of presenting to the people examples of right and wrong in thought and action, they said. Skeptics persisted in believing the architects had just had their little joke, and none would have been surprised in finding a bust of Lenine concealed in the decorations of the New York Stock Exchange, or a carving of Falstaff at the headquarters of the Anti-Saloon League.

At New Haven it was noted that Harkness Memorial Quadrangle—which every Yale man considers the last word in college architecture—in America—sheltered among the nooks of its buildings many faces, figures and symbols of college life. There was the placid bull-dog with horned rimmed spectacles and a grim-visaged bull-dog wearing a football helmet, and there were many shades of Blue history revived in stone.

The students, unlike some of the parishioners of St. Thomas' Church were pleased with the decorative work. It is believed no Yale student will raise a single sigh of objection unless somebody discovers a Harvard man graven in the structure.

Designers of Gothic buildings always have been possessors of a humorous drafting pen. Their satiric chuckles at clergy and laity have come down through the centuries in the stone of many of the sober old cathedrals of Europe. The medieval craftsmen were downright boisterous in some of their Caricatures. Gluttony is portrayed in clerical robes on the battlements of Magdalen College, Oxford. In a Yorkshire church "Eccliesiastical Sincersity is rendered by two foxes, representing the sporting clergy of the Middle Ages, listening to a bishop's instructions. Out of their hoods peep the heads of stolen geese.

Thirteen century fun-makers guffawed mightily at all orders of clergy in an ornamentation of the Strasburg Cathedral depicting "The Funeral of the Fox." This sculpture created so many irritating embroglios among churchgoers that it was demolished in the middle of the nineteenth century. Wandering minstrels of the iMddle Ages were satirised for the fondness of free meals, one of the stalls of Westminster Cathedral showing a fiddling pig.

Architects have said that many church of America, unknown to their congregations, contain humorous decorations. Prevailing interest in finding them is expected to increase church attendance.

Speedy Trial and Vigorous Prosecution Urged as Only Method to Suppress Crime

By Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 3.—The history of organized government demonstrates that the speedy trial of criminal cases and the swift and certain punishment of criminals effects a reduction in the volume of crime, Edwin W. Sims, president of the Chicago Crime Commission told the American Bar Association at its meeting here.

"On the other hand," Mr. Sims continued, "increased crime follows closely on the heels of delayed trials and deferred pnishment. In short, crime increases or decreases in the proportion that punishment is swift and certain. The speed with which a crime is punished has a great deal more to do with the preservation of law and order than the severity of punishment.

"Criminal laws bear close analogy to natural laws. A child puts its hand in the fire but once. One experience is sufficient. It is not necessary that the injury be severe.

"Existing criminal laws in America are the evolution of centuries of practical experience. As they have been developed they are invaluable. There are those, however, who attack the theory of punishment and who, contending that crime is a disease, recommend and urge that punishment be abolished and some other form of treatment substituted. It is a grave mistake to in any way interfere with, impede or hamper the enforcement of existing laws which have been centuries in development, at least until the experiment has been thoroughly tested and found to be practical.

"Three years ago the Chicago Association of Commerce appointed and financed a Crime Commission. It does not of itself undertake the apprehension nor the prosecution of criminals. The commission limits its activity to an investigation of crimes of violence, murder, burglary and robbery. It early reached the conclusion that crime flourished because criminals escaped punishment and that the principal avenue of escape was the delay in the trial of criminal cases.

"The commission was organized in the year 1919. Data collected for that year showed there were 110 murders to one million of population in Chicago as against nine to the million in Great Britain and thirteen to the million in Canada. This meant that during the year 1919, there were more murders in Chicago, with a population of 3,000,000 than in the British Isles with a population of 40,000,000.

"For years in Great Britain and Canada, murder cases have been generally disposed of within 60 or 90 days. In American cities there are practically no murder cases being tried within 90 days.

"On April 1, 1920, 135 persons previously indicted for murder were awaiting trial in Chicago. In 104 cases the accused were at liberty on bond. The situation was brought to the attention of the courts and officials by the Crime Commission with the result that four judges then in the Civil Courts volunteered to sit in the Criminal Court and try cases until the murder docket was cleared. The trial of these cases resulted in the sentencing of twelve to hang and twelve to the penitentiary for from one year to life.

"The effect on the number of murders in Chicago was electrical. Immediately the murder rate there dropped 51 per cent., where it has since remained. The record for the first seven months of each of the last three years is, as follows:

"In compiling its report on continuances, the Chicago Crime Commission ran across a case, and in December, 1919, eight and one-half years after the crime was committed, the defendant was placed on trial. The evidence seemed to be convincing, and the case was ably presented by the prosecuting attorney, ntwithstanding which the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty."

"The jurors in explaining how they came to reach that verdict in the face of the evidence presented, stated that they felt there was some reason which was being withheld from them for the nearly nine-year delay, and that under such peculiar circumstances they concluded to reutrn a verdict of "not guilty."

VERNON DECORATES AND GETS READY FOR SHRINERS, GOING THERE BY SPECIAL EXCURSION

The city of Vernon is decorated in regular Fourth of July style for the Shriners Labor day celebration and barbecue to be held Monday, September 5th, in honor of Maskat Temple divand, band, patrol, chanters, stage crew and members. In addition to the elaborate decorations, the Vernon Shrine club has made ample preparation for feeding the Shriners in a bounteous way. Four large beeves have been obtained for the barbecue, and very member of the Vernon club has been requested to bring plenty of cakes and chicken along with them for the dinner. Provisions have also been made for a variety of drinks, so that no one will be compelled to go thirsty.

The all Shrine special train will leave the Union station at 8:15 a. m. On arrival at Iowa Park at 8:40 a. m. a parade will be given for the benefit of the Shriners there. The train will leave Iowa Park at 9:05 a. m. and will arrive at Electra at 9:40 a. m., where a parade will be given for the benefit of the Electra Shriners. Leaving Electra at 10:05 a. m., the train will arrive at Vernon at 11 a. m.

It is expected that a great many Shriners and their ladies will join the train at the two towns where stops are made.

L. G. Hawkins, high priest and prophet of Maskat Temple, and president of the "Vernon Shrine club, advises that plans are complete, and that everything is in readiness to receive and entertain the visitors in truly Shrine fashion.

The organizations leavin½ Wichita Falls will be in full uniform and all the Shriners and ladies will wear their red and white fezzes. The Vernon program calls for all Shriners to wear fezzes and assemble at the Denver depot to meet the train and greet the visitors. On arrival of the train at Vernon, a parade will be formed under the supervision of the parade committee, composed of Nobles E. O. Youngblood, R. H. Bratton and I. S. Sewell. Maskat Temple band and the Electra drum corps will head the parade. Following the band, will come the Maskat Temple patrol, and then the nobles. The parade will move south on Main street as far as Wilbarger; east on Wilbarger to Cumberland; north on Cumberland to Pease, and west on Pease to Main.

After an exhibition drill by the patrol and a concert by the band, nobles will be taken in automobiles to the Hill Crest Country club.

At the club house, in behalf of the citizens of Vernon, Mayor Harry Mason will deliver the address of welcome. Noble R. D. L. Killough will then give a welcome from the Bernon Shrine club. These addresses will be responded to by Illustrious Potentate Walter D. Cline of Maskat Tempie, Wichita Falls.

From that time until the special train leaves Vernon at 10:15 p. m., the guests are supposed to take full charge and have a good time, as no program has been mapped out to follow the addresses. The guests will have the privilege of enjoying themselves at golf, tennis, swimming, playing cards, dominoes, or dancing. And last, but not least, the all-day luncheon will be served in the basement of the clubhouse, starting at 1 o'clock.

Noble Hawkins has requested the wives and daughters of nobles, and the wives and daughters of members of the Hill Crest Country club, who drive automobiles, to have their cars at the Denver depot at 10 o'clock Monday morning, in order that the automobile committee can make satisfactory arrangements to take care of the transportation of the ladies accompanying visiting nobles.

On account of the illness of Noble R. E. Shepherd, who has been confined to his bed for several days, Noble Martin D. Rowe will act as captain general of the train and trip.

Walter D. Cline arrived home Saturday and will be on hand to fill his part of the program at Vernon.

The advance sale of tickets is entirely satisfactory, with about 150 sold up to noon Saturday. The committee are all still working, and it is anticipated that fully 300 Shriners and their ladies will be on the special train leaving Wichita Falls.

Labor Fears Dumping of Aliens

A GREEK

YOUNG WOMEN FROM ROUMANIA

SWEDISH IMMIGRANT CHILDREN

Big Chiefs of American Federation Denounce the Policy of Importing "Undesirables" By Wholesale—Say It Threatens Our Prosperity and Is a Menace To the Country's Economic Future

BY RENE BACHE

OUR standards of living, our prosperity as a nation, and the welfare of coming generations of Americans are threatened by the vast swarms of low-grade immigrants now getting ready to leave Europe for our shores.

This is the belief of American labor as a body, and its leaders are urgent in the protest they are making on the subject.

Says Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor: "Time was when the American people could declare that the United States should be a haven for the oppressed of all nations, and invite all who desired a new home to come to America. At that period the industries of our country were in their infancy, our lands were undeveloped, our resources far greater than we knew. The immigrants who came did so at their own volition; they cast in their fortunes with those already here, harmonized and blended with them.

Today there is a condition of affairs wholly different. There is not an industry that is not overcrowded with workers who vainly plead for an opportunity to work.

Undesirable Elements

"We cannot keep on forever absorbing the enormous numbers of aliens who come to our shores. With all this great complexity of peoples, with this constantly increasing immigration, there can be no improvement in the condition of our republic, economically or otherwise. The pressure is terrific, and it threatens the American standards of living. The suggested policy of distributing the immigrants would, if carried out, have a tendency to make the influx greater in volume."

Says Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers: "I do not believe in the idea of taking alien workers out of the cities and dumping them in the rural districts. 'Return to the soil' is a popular watchword at the present time. It is a beautiful idea in theory, but it will take more than a touch of soil to put principles into the man of anarchist inclinations and to make him a good American citizen. He will have to be born again.

"In the old days, in our western country, no windows were fastened, no doors were locked; everybody felt safe. You went away to the mill, or to market, and left your wife and children at home in safety. Today that is all changed. You do not dare to leave your wife and children alone in the farming communities. Why? Because of this very element that is dumped upon the rural districts from the cities.

Sentiment Out Of Place

"Our laws governing immigration had their inception in the needs of a new country. We needed workers, and the building of our republic was accomplished to a great extent by foreign-born people of a desirable kind. But the bulk of the immigration that now comes to us is quite the reverse of desirable, and necessity demands that we put up the bars. It may be selfish to deny the right of others to compete with us for wages, but sentiment will not feed or clothe our families, and we cannot expect to maintain our present standards if this unrestricted wage competition continues. Sentiment for somebody else is well enough in its proper place, but it has no place where it threatens the welfare of our national life.

"It is the duty of organized labor resolutely to oppose invasion from any source of labor supply that threatens our standards of wages, or that will not assimilate with our people. Unrestricted immigration has already had a deplorable effect upon the living conditions of our wage-earners. The consequences are noticeable in a social, financial and moral way in every occupation affected by the flood of newcomers. The policy of filling the country with so many people that there are two men ready for every job threatens our livelihood and our homes.

Influence Upon Wages

"We must bar out the undesirable, criminal, illiterate, defective, and pauper aliens who furnish the sweatshops with victims and the slums with their wretched population. They are a menace to all labor. The low wages for which they toil and the deplorable conditions under which they exist have an increasing tendency to lower the standards of living for the American laboring man."

Says former Grand Chief Garrettson, of the Order of Railway Conductors: "There can be no question that the continuous inflow of a million aliens a year, largely drummed up by not over-scrupulous steamship agents and runners, and induced directly or indirectly by employers of cheap labor, does tend seriously to affect wages and conditions of employment even in such highly skilled trades as ours, just as wages paid in the mills or mines are bound to have an effect upon wages paid on the farms.

"We were interested in the exclusion of Chinese coolies during the eighties, and of Japanese in 1907, for some of the very same reasons that render us opposed to permitting swarms of aliens, mostly adult males, to come from Europe to this country for the purpose of earning, by lowering wages and standards, a few hundred dollars with which to return to their native lands, as from 300,000 to 700,000 of them do every year.

"It is no surprise to find the Immigration Commission reporting that wages and conditions have been seriously affected, that 'an over-supply of unskilled labor' is a result, and that 'substantial restriction is demanded by economic, moral and social considerations.'"

The Immigration Committee of the House of Representatives in a recent report summing up the results of an investigation, gave the following reasons for recommending restrictions upon the wholesale importation of aliens:

Large unemployment in the United States.

Lack of housing facilities in this country.

The presence already in the United States of 10,000,000 or more unnaturalized foreigners.

Danger of introduction and spread of contagious and loathsome diseases.

Bound For The City Slums

Recent reports from agents of our consular service in foreign countries are to the effect that a majority of the Europeans who are now threatening to overwhelm us with their swarming numbers are "physically defective," "economically undesirable," and of "low standards of living."

The above-mentioned committee, in its report, says: "Belief is confirmed that the major portion of the recent arrivals come without funds. It is apparent that a large percentage are incapable of earning a livelihood. A study of the new immigration from central Europe indicates that the arriving immigrants are not those who might go to farms; that they are not agriculturists, but mainly additional population for our large coast cities and congested industrial districts."

At Ellis Island, during the last year great numbers of immigrants have been arriving with less than $5 each. Past experience has shown that these aliens inevitably flock to centers where their compatriots are already congregated.

Our farmers do not want them as workers. It is estimated that 2,000,000 hands are available for farm labor this summer who were not available a year ago. It is highly significant that at the fortieth annual session of the Farmers' National Congress, held last November at Columbus, Ohio, with delegates from thirty-odd States in attendance, the following resolution was unanimously adopted: "That we are unalterably opposed to the proposed diversion and distribution of aliens over the farming districts until immigration is rigidly restricted numerically or otherwise."

Foreign-born Toilers

It cannot be said that the foreign-born do not at present have a fair "show" as workers in the United States. Mr. Gompers writes that one-fourth of all our bricklayers are foreign-born. Among carpenters the proportion is somewhat less. One in every eight plumbers is of foreign birth, and the same remark applies to steamfitters. Fifty per cent. of our bakers are of alien origin, and 30 per cent. of our cigarmakers. In the textile trades a large majority of the workers are foreign-born, the percentage in woolen mills being about 85. Seventy-five per cent. of the toilers in the iron and steel industry are not Americans by birth, and they work seven days in the week, twelve hours a day, and 365 days in the year.

Duty Of Exclusion

Mr. Gompers further says: "To allow any great portion of the discontented millions of Europe to come here is not likely to aid in the reconstruction of Europe. Their responsibilities are there, not here. Discontent over there, moved hither en masse, will add to discontent here. We have our own troubles, and we have no right to saddle such an additional load upon the already heavily burdened coming generation of Americans."

AMONG THE MOVIE STARS

MARY ALDEN IN "THE OLD NEST"

TAYLOR HOLMES AND VIRGINIA VALLI IN "THE VERY IDEA"

THE HARRY CAREY'S — SR AND JR.

WALLACE REID AND GLORIA SWANSON IN "THE AFFAIRS OF ANATOL"

Irene Castle—"The Affairs of Anatol"—Mother in "The Old Nest"—"The Very Idea"—"The Lying Truth"—The Harry Careys.

IRENE CASTLE, internationally famous for her dancing with her late husband, Vernon Castle, is to return to the screen in a story called "With Flying Colors." Great interest is attached to this story, as it will show Mrs. Castle doing her first exhibition dancing since her successful stage play "Watch Your Step." Years have passed since Mrs. Castle has done this sort of dancing, ever since the tragic death of Mr. Castle near Fort Worth, Texas, when he, at that time an instructor, with a student, attempted an Immelman turn, while up in the air, in order to avoid a collision with another plane.

Mary Alden

Mary Alden, who has sprung into such prominence in the motion picture world through her marvelous performance of the mother in "The Old Nest," is not an elderly nor middle-aged woman as one would imagine after having seen her performance in that photo play. She is still a young and beautiful woman.

But she has specialized—not intentionally at first—in mother parts. Her first motion picture engagement was as the mother in D. W. Griffith's "The Battle of the Sexes." This was in 1914. In the six intervening years she has played many parts on the screen, all of them with a few minor exceptions, being wife and mother roles.

Her depictions of the mother in the screen version of "Ghosts," "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance" as well as "The Battle of the Sexes," were regarded as the greatest mother interpretations upon the screen until her own performance as Mrs. Anthon, in "The Old Nest."

"The Affairs Of Anatol"

From every standpoint—investiture, its all-star cast, sumptuousness of settings, brilliance of directorial execution, richness of costumes, quality of story and general artistry, "The Affairs of Anatol" marks a distinct epoch in screen production of the decade.

The story, written by Jeanie Macpherson, and suggested by the famous play by Arthur Schnitzler, deals with an impressionable young man of wealth who finds time to interest himself in the affairs of others and who learns by practical experience that it pays best to attend to one's own affairs and let others do the same.

The cast is superb and includes such stars as Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson, Elliott Dexter, Bebe Daniels, Monte Blue, Wanda Hawley, Theodore Roberts, Agnes Ayres and Theodore Kosloff.

"The Very Idea"

Mr. Holmes takes part of Gilbert Goodhue, a young husband who has been pampered all his life and who finds, after his marriage, that his wife is of the same sort. The thing they both want above all things is a baby, and doctors have assured Gilbert that Edith (Virginia Valli) is too frail.

There are so many babies in the world, grown up and otherwise, that it would seem on first thought an easy matter to get one of them without its being missed. But the story of "The Very Idea" belies this assumption. Edith's brother, an authority on eugenics, comes to the rescue confidently. That is only the start of the trouble. What follows forms one of the most absurdly funny, yet none the less human and appealing comedies ever written.

"The Lying Truth"

The story of "The Lying Truth" concerns the editor of a small town daily whose sensational efforts to place his newspaper on a paying basis brings him the enmity of the town's most influential citizen.

Unknown to the young publisher who has just taken over the paper, the town leader is involved in the tenderloin activities of the community. His daughter, in love with the editor, is faced with circumstantial evidence that arouses the community against the newspaper man. Events pile on one another leading up to a lynching of the editor which is about to be executed when the true evidence is disclosed clearing the publisher.

Fair Exchange No Robbery

Harry Carey, Sr., has made a trade with Harry, Jr. The youngster ought to be satisfied with the trade, but apparently he isn't. Spurs and a sombrero may be all right but they can't take the place of a bottle of milk when a two-months baby starts to get hungry.

Jimmy Aubrey's new comedy will be called "The Applicant." Jimmy has played all sorts of vocational roles in his comedies, and hopes to make "The Applicant" a combination of all the fun he has created in the past, plus much new comedy business. Several exterior scenes, elaborate for a two-reel film, will necessitate some long trips away from the Hollywood studios.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION.
THE STATE OF TEXAS,
TO THE SHERIFF OR ANY CONSTABLE OF WICHITA COUNTY, GREETING:
You are hereby commanded to summon Lonzie Hawkins by making publication of this citation once each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, to appear at the next regular term of the Eighty-ninth District Court of Wichita County, to be holden at the court house thereof in Wichita Falls, on the first Monday in October, A. D., 1921, the same being the 3rd day of October, A. D., 1921, then and there to answer a petition filed in said court on the 14th day of July, A. D., 1921, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said court No. 11178-C wherein Fannie Hawkins is plaintiff and Lonzie Hawkins is defendant and said petition, alleging, This is a suit for divorce. Plaintiff alleges that during their married life defendant treated her in a cruel and harsh manner, that he would curse and abuse her, and on various occasions struck her inflicting serious bodily injury and that on or about the 1st day of September, 1916, defendant abandoned plaintiff and that said desertion and abandonment has now been for a longer period of time than three consecutive years. Wherefore, plaintiff sues, prays for service upon this defendant, for judgment dissolving said marriage relations, for all costs of suit and for general and special relief.
Herein fail not, but have before said court, at its aforesaid next regular term, this writ with your return thereon showing how you have executed the same.
Given under my hand and the seal of said court, at office in Wichita Falls, Texas, this the 3rd day of September, A. D., 1921.

SIX HUNDRED TEACHERS EXPECTED TO ANSWER ROLL CALL TOMORROW MORNING WHEN INSTITUTE OPENS

Approximately 600 teachers are expected to answer the roll call of instruction from four counties when the inter-county teachers' institute is called to order Monday morning at 9 o'clock at the High school auditorium by Superintendent E. L. Donohey, chairman of the inter-county executive committee.

The inter-county institute, a novelty in this section of the state, is declared by educators to have been proven a success as a means of bringing nationally known educators and thinkers to address the gaitherings, thus bringing to the teachers the latest and broadest view of education.

H. W. Witt of Chicago university, who conducted courses in the University of Texas during the summer months, is announced in charge of the institute program.

Miss Annie Webb Blanton, state superintendent of education, will arrive here for the institute early Tuesday morning and is scheduled for an address Tuesday afternoon. A special address for the public will be given by Miss Blantch at the First Christian church Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

A special public address by Dr. Nutt on the responsibility of the community to constructive education, scheduled for Tuesday evening, will be given at the First Christian church on Wednesday evening.

Dr. Penick to Speak.

A special address before the institute by Dr. A. D. Penick of the University of Texas during the Monday morning session was announced Saturday.

Superintendent Lee Clark asked that all techers, immediately on arrival, register at the office of County Superintendent Burl Bryan, who will assign them to rooms. Superintendent Clark also announced that arrangements have been made to house many of the teachers in private homes, where they will be furnished with their morning and evening meals. Citizens with automobiles are asked to see Mr. Bryant, who will be at his office at the court house all day Sunday, and co-operate with local school officials in transporting incoming teachers from the depot to Mr. Bryant's office and to their boarding places.

Program.

PLAINVIEW.

PLAINVIEW, Texas, Sept. 3.—Fresh home-grown strawberries, of the ever-bearing kind, are now flowing freely to the market at Plainview. The watermelons and cantaloupe crop of the South Plains country is now also matured and is being rapidly marketed at both Plainview and Lubbock.

Efforts were recently made to secure special rates for the shipment of South Plains strawberries, cantaloupes and watermelons to Colorado markets. Efforts are also being made to expand the market for these products to Fort Worth and North Texas.

KNOX COUNTY NOTES.

GOREE, Texas, Sept. 3.—Foard county's first bale of cotton was raised by J. M. King of the Phalia community. It was sold at auction on the streets of Crowell, bringing 17 1-2 cents. A premium of $30 was given Mrs. King as she did most of the picking. The Kings have 20 acres and expect to pick 15 bales.

Scattered showers have fallen over the entire country and have materially benefited crops. Some fields of late cotton will make much more than their owners expected.

Mrs. Frances Wright has gone to Denton where she will enter school at the College of Industrial Arts.

J. C. Cooper has returned from Graham where he recovered a Ford car stolen from his place.

Mrs. Rubye Covey has returned to her home at Waxahachie. She had been the guest of her brother, E. L. Covey for some weeks.

Christian churches of the Goree district are to hold their annual convention here beginning Friday, September 9. Fifty delegates are expected. There will be dinner on the ground and all are invited.

Goree public schools open Monday at 9 o'clock. A program has been arranged and the patrons and friends of the school promise to attend in force.

Baseball friends regret the Goree team closed the season with a game at Seymour winning with a score of 8 to 6. The Goree team won seven of the last eight games played.

A cotton warehouse at Bomarton and all contents were destroyed by fire. Wesley Harrison lost $12,000 on farm implements. Other losses on buildings and cotton estimated at about $35,000 with $18,000 insurance.

SEYMOUR.

SEYMOUR, Texas, Sept. 3.—Advices have been received by Robert L. Graham of this city that the body of his son, Private Noel H. Graham, killed in France, had arrived in Hoboken, N. J.

Private Graham was a member of Company L, 142 infantry, and was killed in action on October 8, 1918. He was mentioned in orders for gallantry in action and was awarded the Croix de Guerre with silver star for exceptional bravery in battle. This decoration with the following letter from the war department has been received by his father: "He bravely laid down his life for the cause of his country. His name will ever remain fresh in the hearts of his friends and comrades. The record of his honorable service will be preserved in the archives of the American Expeditionary Forces. Signed: John J. Pershing, commander in chief."

The body is expected to arrive in Seymour for reinterment next week when it will be taken in charge by the Silas Baker Post American Legion and be buried with military honors.

STAMFORD.

STAMFORD, Texas, Sept. 3.—Stamford cotton reached its highest point for the season today when the price was 17 3-4c. The steady advance in the cotton market is having a very beneficial effect on business in all lines.

The rain of yesterday covered a portion of Stamford's trade territory, however, some damage was done to the northeast by hail and wind. There was considerable hail in the city but no material damage was done other than the destruction of flowers and in breaking window glasses. One house was blown off its blocks, but no further damage done.

Bishop Edward A. Temple of the first district diocese authorized an appropriation for the construction of a rectory in the city to be built near the present Episcopal church building. Porter A. Whaley, general manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, was made chairman of the building committee and has just completed arrangements for the rectory. It will cost in the neighborhood of $4000, and will house the Rev. Frank Steadman, rector of the local church and also missionary in charge of the churches at Albany and Spur. The plans for the rectory are being drawn up and the contract will be let at an early date.

This is the beginning of the erection of a number of residences in the city and town property is becoming active as building material and wages swing back to pre-war prices. Several residences are under construction at this time including one being built by J. C. Pinson, local manager of the Bell Telephone company. This building is being made of concrete and is located in what is known as the College Addition.

Plans are being drawn and arrangements being made for several residences in the addition now being built by Judge J. M. Hanna of Fort Worth. A general building campaign is being fostered by the local Chamber of Commerce.

The meeting of the local dry goods men and representatives of the Chamber of Commerce held today it was decided to have Stamford's semi-annual fall style and automobile show on September 16. And a full quota of committees were appointed to arrange for this affair. At the same time it was decided to inaugurate a trade excursion to visit all the neighboring towns, this event to take place on September 13 and 14.

ELECTRA

ELECTRA, Sept. 3.—Depression over the oil situation is gradually disappearing and oil men are regarding the future in an optimistic light. The industry is gradually shaping itself to meet the new demands and operators are adjusting themselves to new conditions.

C. E. Edens will coach the high school football team this year. Many old players have reported. Coach Dinsmore says that no man will be able to hold his position without competition. Electra will have a strong line this season and having lacked only two or three teams last year of winning the state championship they hope to win it this year.

Peter Kelly has returned from a visit around Ferris, Ellis county. He states that the cotton crop is not up to normal and that the yield will be about one-forth of a bale to the acre. Ellis, Williamson and Bell are the banner cotton producing counties. All report greatly reduced production.

Many citizens of Electra attended the Wilbarger County Fair and enjoyed the races. This was the first held in two years and many new features were added.

Electra is to have a post of the American Legion. It is announced that the state executive committee has made favorable report on the application for a charter and has forwarded the papers to the national body.

CHILLICOTHE

CHILLICOTHE, Texas, Sept. 3.—Cotton is going up rapidly and from the reports it will sell on the streets of Chillicothe for 20 cents before the first of the year. Cotton sold here yesterday for 15 1-2 cents; cotton seed is bringing $20 per ton.

The Chillicothe high school will open tomorrow morning September 5. There are more than 200 pupils enrolled than the old building is able to accommodate but the school board hopes to have the new $75,000 high school building complete by September 1922.

A committee from the Chamber of Commerce has been appointed to improve the public highways of the county. It is urged that if the roads are placed in a first class condition, Chillicothe should set a thousand more bales of cotton from the Farmers Valley section.

Jimmie Higginson was killed at a siding at Indiahoma on the Frisco road. He was a brakeman on a freight and lost his life while out on the road.

Quanah had a midnight parade of K. K. K. masked riders. They appeared in regular regalia and uniform. A man guilty of gross immorality is said to have decamped before the invisible empire could take him in hand.

MEMPHIS

MEMPHIS, Texas, Sept. 3.—It is announced that the Panhandle District Christian Endeavor convention held in Hereford was a fine success. Four young people signed a pledge for full time service and $345 was pledged for the state work quota.

O. E. Burk of the Newlin neighborhood brought the first bale of new cotton to Memphis. It weighed 510 pounds and was bought by J. A. Whaley who paid 18 cents for it. The Chamber of Commerce made a donation of $25 to Mr. Burk. Hall county will produce a fine crop of cotton this year and it is now opening rapidly.

There is no demand for cottonseed meal and cake now among cattlemen and the output of the Memphis mill is going to Galveston for export.

Hon. Lucian W. Parrish, congressman from the Clay County district and candidate for U. S. senator from Texas, will deliver an address in this city on September 15th, the second day of the fair, at 10:30 a. m., at the fair grounds, in front of the grandstand. He is one of the best speakers in Texas and will speak on the problems confronting the nation. He is personally acquainted with many people here.

It is announced that the second annual Hall county fair will open greater and better than ever before September 14. There is a fine program and Governor Neff may attend, coming here Thursday, September 15. Governors of Colorado and New Mexico also have been invited to attend.

W. N. Orr for thirty years a citizen of Hall county and one of its best farmers, has traded his holdings for property near Tulia and departed for that place.

BOWIE

BOWIE, Texas, Sept. 3.—A proposition for a 3,000 foot test well on the Summer Hour track nine miles south of Bowie is now an assured fact. A representative of the Raymond Oil company stated before leaving for Wichita Falls that the deal was closed and things will near begin to happen right away.

The Chamber of Commerce held its first open house entertainment this week at which time all citizens of Bowie and citizens of the rural districts were invited. A hundred guests were present. It has been decided to hold these open house meetings on the last Tuesday in each month in order that the people of city and town may be drawn closer together.

Bowie public schools will begin Monday, September 12. There is a very large enrollment.

M. A. Speer of Fort Lupton, Col., representing some oil people of Dencer, Col., is in Montague county looking over the county, inteding to drill a deep test somewhere in this county for oil or gas. Should they find a location in the county they will make Bowie their headquarters.

Rev. W. A. Hancock of Fort Worth has closed the annual revival meeting at the First Baptist church, 38 converts are the fruits of his endeavors.

Bowie paid 15 cents for the first bale of cotton. Nocona paid 13.65 for its first bale and Gainesville paid 13 cents. Cotton is coming in.

CLARENDON

CLARENDON, Sept. 3—Miss Bess Edwards, district agent for the Home Demonstration work of A. & M. College was in Clarendon this week. Miss Edwards is much impressed with fair work and will return to help with final plans.

Miss Maybelle Haynes, who has rendered service in home demonstrating clubs leaves this week for Wheeler to continue the home demonstrating work.

Another evidence of the success of diversification farming in Donley county is found on the farm of C. H. Bugbee, northwest of Clarendon. Mr. Bugbee came to this county some years back from Massachusetts, looked over the different tate carefully and finally decided Donley county was one that presented a very promising future. He started on the diversification plan, raising good cattle, hogs, chickens and turkeys, putting part of his lan din wheat, alfalfa, cotton and sorghum grains.

Mr. Bugbee has cut his alfalfa for the fourth time, this is evidence of what the "panhandle can do, when we consider much of the irrigated land in some states is only cutting alfalfa twice. Donley county has passed its experimental stage in raising alfalfa. Wheat has been cut on this farm with a very fair average and on the same land, hay is now being cut averaging better than a ton to the acre. Next will be the maize and other sorghum grain, prospects for the small grain crops have never been more promising.

He raises Poland China hogs and each year ships a car to the market, also fine chickens and turkeys. Taking the above diversification, it is hardly possible for a failure.

FRANCE WILL GET MATERIAL FROM GERMANS

By Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 3.—Details for the delivery to France by the German government of 7,000,000,000 gold marks worth of building materials within three years as provided for by the recent agreement between Louis Lochaur, French minister of the liberated regions, and Walter Rathenau, German minister of reconstruction, were made public here today.

The transaction will be handled by two companies, one to be organized by Germany and the other by France, each to be under government control, but to allow participation by some private capital. The German company is to look after the assembling of material ordered by the French companies at the shipping points. Transportation and delivery by the German company at suitable terminals and on suitable dates also is provided for, the payment to be made to the manufacturers out of German government bonds issued especially for this purpose. The French company will take the material thus delivered and sell it in the open market exclusively for rebuilding northern France. The French government, according to the terms of the agreement, will take care not to cut prices below a reasonable competition with private interests which hitherto have been strongly opposed to Germany's supplying material to the detriment of French manufacturers.

PRODUCE MEN TO FIGHT MISSOURI MARKETING LAW

By Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 3.—Judge Kimbrough Stone of the state circuit court late today took under advisement an application filed yesterday by three local produce men to restrain Jesse Barrett, state attorney general, from enforcing the provisions of the Miles marketing law signed by Governor Arthur M. Hyde last July 28. Judge Stone set September 15 as the date for the hearing on the application, announcing in his order that the case did not seem to be an urgent one and that he would grant temporary injunctions in the event members of boards of trade wished to transfer memberships. The suit also would restrain members of the local board of trade from complying with the law.

Counsel for the plaintiffs today made it plain that the suit has nothing to do with the Capper-Tincher marketing law, recently enacted by congress, as was erroneously stated in a dispatch here last night. The Miles law however, is for a state bureau of marketing and authorizes the state board of agriculture to appoint a marketing commissioner. It also requires commission men to procure licenses where the gross volume of business is within a defined scope.

R. L. Hargis, president of the local board of trade, said there was no objection here to the provisions of the Capper-Tincher law, but asserted that there was opposition to what he termed "this radical state law."

KEMP WILL CONFER ON BOND SALE

J. A. Kemp is to confer with bend houses figuring on the Big Wichita project bond issue in St. Louis Wednesday, according to a wire received from him Saturday directing that all papers and data connected with the propect be forwarded to him at that place.

Mr. Kemp expected to go to St. Louis earlier, but deferred the trip through the absence of the head of one of the houses interested in the issue.

KELL RETURNS FROM VISIT WITH FAMILY.

Frank Kell returned Saturday following a visit with his family, who are spending the summer at Colorado Springs, trips to the New Mexico ranch properties operated by himself and associates, and a visit to the Kell mill at Amarillo.

Jefferson Potlocks and his family spent Monday afternoon at Bounding Billows seeing the town. To keep from getting through too quick, part of them looked at the store while the others were inspecting the blacksmith shop.

MAIDEN TAKES MELO-DRAMATIC PLUNGE INTO CONTEST WHEN SHE SEES BEAUTIFUL CAR AS PRIZE

A MAIDEN'S FALL.
(Melodramic melodrama in three acts)
Music by the Campaign Manager—
Lyric by others.
Act 1.
Time: Monday 3 p. m.
Place 605 Scott street.
Girl: (Can't tell yet.)

The big shows opens with the heroine tripping along Scott street near Sixth. She comes to the Excelsior Motor Company display room, No. 605 Scott street, looks in, stops and gasps for breath. She'd almost faint, but for support of a girl friend with her; for there in all its grandeur, stands the wonderful $1495 Studebaker first grand prize in The Record News famous automobile and prize campaign.

The heroine recovers her speech and stars talking in a rapid, excited tone: "Goodness gracious! Is THAT one of the cars the News is going to give away? Land sakes alive! And here I have been nominated in that contest, but hadn't paid much attention to it. Why that car costs—$1495—and here I have been just wasting the last two days I could have been out getting votes! Here's where I get busy, very pronto. Come on, Mabel."

She grabs her friend by the arm, and they both "Beat it" double time in a general southern direction.

Act II.

Scene: Campaign Office, second floor, Record News building. Office girl, stenographers, campaign manager and staff, votes, subscriptions, ballot box, adding machine, desk, electric fans, candidates, etc., etc.

The heroine rushes in and dashes for the campaign manager's desk, narrowly missing the waste basket.

"Give me a receipt book; right away. Make it snappy, sir, make it snappy, I say—I am in a hurry."

The campaign manager: "Yes, ma'am, to be sure. Now what is your name, please?"

I haven't got time to bother about names now. I've just seen the Studebaker. That's why I'm after the receipt book—can't delay any longer—got to get right out and get busy—going to lead the whole field—see you later."

The campaign manager (sinking into a chair and wiping perspiration from his forehead):

"Well, I'll be daggoned. Now ain't that Texas women for your Judges to heroine: "I take pleasure in presenting to you, as reward for your energy and ambition the car for which you fell, the $1495 Studebaker Six)"

Heroine: "Aye, aye, sir! I knew all the time I would win it."

"Honk! Honk!"

Curtain.

And there you have it. The story of success. Of course, it all hasn't come true yet. But part of it has. Not only has the "Heroine" but a number of others have started the merry vote gathering all over the territory, city and country, young women are starting out to get the votes that will win The Record News big motor car.

Many are hastening to take advantage offer of 100,000 extra votes for $30.00 clubs of subscriptions, and are starting to build their clubs with might and main. Practically every candidate in the list declares she will have at least a club before the big special offer closes on October 1st. An effort will never count for more, for after October 1st, subscriptions will not be worth as many votes as they are now, nor will they ever be during the entire campaign. Every $30 worth of subscriptions turned in before the offer expires counts 100,000 votes, over and above all regular votes. This is the greatest opportunity that will ever be offered, and the votes that will win the five big cars may be obtained during the next three weeks—so great and liberal is the special offer.

The Other Cars.

The other cars to be awarded in the Prize); $975 Maxwell; $835 Overgreat $10,000 campaign are: $1895 Haynes Six Touring car (Capital land and $582.61 Ford—all of them the latest model touring cars, straight from the factory and ready to drive away.

The Record News is going to give these cars free, without one cent of cost to young women of Wichita Falls and the surrounding towns who secure the highest vote totals in the great circulation campaign which has just started. The campaign ends on October 29th—just a few short weeks from now.

An attractive feature is that every candidate entered no matter where she lives has an equal chance to win.

And after all the cars have been given away, there are the victrolas, floor lamps, kitchen cabinet, Sealy mattress and cash connections.

Memorable Campaign.

The great campaign is attracting attention all over Texas and Oklahoma, and that it will be a memorable one in newspaper annals in this section is certain. Since the day of announcement interest has grown more and more, and now there are few people in Wichita Falls or many miles around who are not acquainted with most of the details.

Any young woman who desires to take advantage of this tremendous opportunity has but to fill out the nomination coupon, which will be found elsewhere in this paper, and send it in. Full details will be sent by return mail.

PAT CARRIGAN POST STIRRED UP TO FRENZIED HEAT OVER ELECTION OFFICERS TUESDAY

Considerable interest has been reported in the ranks of members of the Pat Carrigan Post, American Legion, in the annual election of officers which will take place Tuesday night at 8:00 o'clock at the Legion club rooms, 812½ Ohio. Two tickets are to date in the field, with a possibility of a third being framed from nominations from the floor.

Evidence that there will be a shakeup in the present administration regardless of the way the voting goes, is given by the makeup of the two tickets.

Luther Hoffman, formerly an officer in the 90th division, and later engaged in important work at Camp Travis in the adjutant general's department, where he made a brilliant record, seems to be the choice of those nominating both tickets already announced or the chief builder of the post—in other words for post commander. Mr. Hoffman is a local attorney, being a member of the firm of Bullington, Boone, Humphrey and Hoffman.

Zeb V. Nixon, local attorney, seems to be the choice of both tickets for the post of adjutant, to which he was named following the recent resignation of T. R. Brunson.

In most other respects, however the tickets differ, with the principal difference that the ticket named by its backers as the "Independent" ticket makes a greater change from the present administration than the one which was nominated by the committee of three named by E. J. Bartels, present commander, and composed of T. R. Brunson, R. C. Thaxton and C. V. Chenault.

Regular		Independent
	Post Commander
Luther Hoffman		Luther Hoffman
	Vice Commander
J. W. Chatham Jr.		Charles Chenault
	Post Adjutant
Zeb V. Nixon		Zeb V. Nixon

NEGRO FAILS TO PAY EMPLOYES

Alleged by complaint of employees to have failed to pay them for their work, a negro proprietor of a cafe in the Flats district was lodged in the city jail Saturday night, where he is being held for investigation.

The officers assert that they have received numerous complaints from negro girls alleging that the negro attempts to escape paying for their labor through declaration that he does not have the money.

The negro declared that he was merely asking for a few days time so he could raise the money.

Opens September 15

—With an enlarged and perfected organization, offering the same courses as are offered in the public schools up to and including the 7th grade.

—Our pupils receive individual instruction and upon finishing can pass examinations admitting them into the high school.

—A modern Kindergarten will be an added feature of the school this year. This department, as all other departments, will be under the personal direction of Mrs. Burris. Thoroughly trained teachers only will be employed who have made a close study of the handling of small children. The most modern equipment manufactured has been purchased to aid in this Kindergarten work.

—Parents and guardians who wish to enroll children in either department are requested to communicate promptly with Mrs. Burris, as the indications are that there will be more applications than can be cared for.

THE PICTURES

Mrs. Joseph Pickens was before her marriage, which took place Thursday in Fort Worth, Miss Caro Bell Blair, of this city.

Masters John W. Jr., and Billie Thomas are sons of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Thomas, and grandsons of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stringer and Mrs. Mollie McElroy. They are spending their summer in Colorado, but will return in time for Master John to take part in the "Rabbit" chorus in Style Show exhibition, September 15.

Miss Opal Castleberry of Dallas is spending several weeks the guest of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Oates at 1600 Taylor street.

BLAIR-COLEMAN NUPTIALS SOLEMNIZED THURSDAY.

Of unusual interest in Wichita Falls, and with a great beauty of detail in it's solemnzation, was the marriage of Miss Caro Belle Blair to Joseph Pickens Coleman in Fort Worth on Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Merrill, 1122 Pennsylvania avenue uncle and aunt of the bride.

Quiet because of the recent bereavement in the family of the bride, the wedding was attended by only the most intimate friends of the young people, from Wichita Falls, Dallas and other cities, in addition to the members of the family, but in its simplicity there was all the traditional dignity and beauty of the nuptial day.

Fall asters in purple tones, and pink roses gave the color note which the bride had chosen.

The flowers were used with the Southern smilax and feru in the reception suite, and on the stairs, down which the bride, preceded by her only sister, Jocelyn, as maid of honor, and on the arm of her brother, Merrill W. Blair, who gave her in marriage before an improvised altar, where they were met by the groom and his best man, Holland Harp of Mount Pleasant, Texas, and the Rev. Lee Heaton, who read the double ring service. The small cousin of the bride, Robert Jocelyn Merrill, was the ring bearer.

There was an exceptionally beautiful musical setting for the wedding the nuptial song being Guy D. Hardelot's "Because," sung by Mrs. Ed A. Hathorne, with Mrs. H. L. Rudmose accompaning on the piano. For the entrance of the bridal party Mrs. Rudmose played the Lohengrin March and through the ceremony played Massenet's "Meditation" from "Thais" very softly. The Mendelssohn recessional followed the close of the service.

The bride wore her traveling costume, a malay pavelaine, beaver trimmed, with all accessories harmonizing. Her flowers were Madam Butterfly roses and valley lilies, en shower.

The beautiful color harmonies of the floral decorations were accentes in the frock of the maid of honor, a lavender taffeta, with appliqued motifs of delft blue and pink rosebuds. Her flowers were pink rose buds and lavender asters, in a quaint old fashioned nosegay effect.

Mr. and Mrs. Coleman left immediately after the wedding for a two weeks wedding stay in the Ozarks, and after September 15 they will be at home at Brook Manor, this city.

Guests at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. Merrill W. Blair, brother of the bride and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Freedrick J. Elbert, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Berney, Mr. and Mrs. James C. Humphrey, Mrs. S. M. Foster and Harry Moss and Lester Aaron, all of Wichita Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Blair of Dallas, cousins of the bride, and their family, Miss Kathleen Blair, Mrs. Herbert Hughes and Jimmie and Edwin Blair, and Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Maupin of Dallas.

Thursday's wedding is of wide interest to the friends and acquaintances of the principals in Wichita Falls, where the bride has made her home for a number of years, and the groom has been in business since his discharge from the service.

The groom is a graduate of Rice Institute, and is now a member of the firm of the Plains Paving Company, of this city. Both young people have enjoyed unusual popularity among their immediate circle and despite the necessarily quiet nature of the wedding, which precluded the customary prenuptial compliments there have been many evidences of the esteem and favor which both are regarded made since the informal announcement.

CAPTAIN HEALY BRINGS BRIDE HOME THURSDAY.

Captain R. S. Healy and his bride, formerly Miss Maggie Dean Vaeth of Gainesville, are at the Kemp hotel, and preparing their apartments at Brook Manor, where they will be at home within a short time.

The wedding was solemnized very quietly in Gainesville at the St. Mary's church Thursday morning, September 1, with Rev. Father Kealy officiating, and with only the immediate family of the bride and the most intimate friends present. Mr. and Mrs. Healy came immediately to Wichita Falls, where on Thursday night they were honored with a wedding dinner at the Kemp with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hobbs as host and hostess.

For the dinner party a large table was arranged, and centered with asters and tube roses. The guests included the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Campbell, Misses Esther Cammack, John Bonner, Bess Taylor, Helen Pelling, Messrs. Vaeth and Hamilton, the host and hostess, and Alta and Melvin Hobbs.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Vaeth of Gainesville, and is a sister of J. E. Vaeth, with the Danciger Oil and Refining company of this city. The groom is connected with the Texas Chief Oil company, with headquarters in Wichita Falls, having come to this city shortly after his discharge from the service, when he was captain in the Amstralian army, with an extensive overseas record. Since coming to Wichita Falls he has become prominent in business and club circles.

WOMEN'S SHOES RUSH FACTORIES

BOSTON, Sept. 1.—Orders for fall are about all in with the exception of a few novelties. Factories producing women's shoes especially are busier than those producing men's shoes. If the Brockton district produced only men's shoes there would be very litle doing there at the present time. At least about 50 per cent of the output is made up of womens' footwear. Novelties continue to form a large part of the output of factories. There is, howeevr, a tendency to go back to simple designs, especially now that black is extremely fashionable. aMnufacturers who have made quite a showing during the past year as producers of fancy shoes exclusively are eager to return to more simple designs, not only from the standpoint of economy but also to reduce their problems to the minimum. In the meantime strap effects, either with buttons or buckles, continue very popular, and all kinds of openwork are also quick sellers. Current demand is centering upon patent leather and another season ought ot see this leather as the leader. Ideas about next spring styles are quite confusing, but we shall undoubtedly see much black, and also plenty of light shades or tan.

In the men's lines no radical change is noted. Lasts have medium round and round toes and more black shoes are being sold. Patterns are very simple and the excess of perforations and decorations so prevalent last spring is now lacking. Dark shades of tan are the best sellers; also Scotch grain or its imitation, chiefly the genuine article. Oxfords will be worn this fall to a large extent. Prices continue to decline and the majority of the lines are now offered at wholesale from about $2.75 to $7. There is a growing demand for work shoes that will be very much larger within the next few months. The Southern States are not in a position to purchase expensive footwear and laborers are looking for the kind of shoes they wore before the days of prosperity.

CROSBYTON.

CROSBYTON, Sept. 3.—Rain is badly needed in this section, the long drought hardening farm lands to such an extent that farmers are unable to break it for sowing wheat.

Feed crops are fair and ready to harvest, but farmers are reluctant to market it because of the low prices offered.

Cotton acreage is light and the yield is not good, although some planters will gather half a bale the acre.

Scout Courier

BY THE RANGER SCOUT

A SCOUT IS OBEDIENT.

By Rev. J. W. Loving.

Scout Law Number Seven: "A Scout is obedient. He obeys his parents, Scout-master, Patrol Leader, and other duly constituted authorities."

It has been well said that the highest function of any created intelligence is to obey orders from duly constituted authorities. No man can fail to acknowledge his dependence. He is not here of his own initiative, that he is dependent on others for his very coming into the world. Likewise he is dependent on others at every stage of his life. His first contact is with his parents in the home, that is the normal situation. Of course some lose their parents early, and all recognize this as an irreparable loss. The parents by virtue of their relationship and responsibility are entitled to obedience from the children. In fact, it becomes the duty of the parents to enforce obedience to their commands. In practicadlly every case obedience must to a degree be enforced, and it is a positive dereliction in duty not to enforce obedience to their commands. This failure to enforce obedience has started many a youth on the path to ruin. No child is competent to choose for itself. The task of choosing is often thrust too early on young shoulders.

No man is qualified to command others if he has not previously learned to obey orders from others. So it is that the failure on the part of parents to enforce obedience results in a lamentable disqualification for commanding others. Many a life has been crippled and handicapped just in this way. This edefect is ever overcome often costs years that might have been profitably invested had the lesson of obedience been early learned.

Now a Scout has arrived at that period of life when he can appreciate the obligation to obey. It may be safely laid down as a rule that there is little to be expected in the way of dependable obedience from one who has failed to learn the lesson in the home. With his power to appreciate responsibility, a Scout who is not obedient in the home gives little ground for hope that he will be dependable as in his relation of Scouthood. The very object of Scouthood is designed to make better men, so if enforces the obligation first in the home.

Then as a Scout his first relation is to his Scoutmaster. This master does not just happen to occupy his place; he has been trained, he must have learned obedience to others before he can expect it from others. Just as is the case of parents, the Scoutmaster occupies a position of responsibility for the Scout. He cannot discharge his duty towards the Scout unless the Scout give obedience. By virtue of his acceptance of the conditions of entrance into a troop the Scout is pledged to obedience. This is an appeal to the Scout to discharge his obligations thus voluntarily assumed.

The Scout is obedient to his Patrol Leader. This leader is appointed by the Scoutmaster or elected by the Patrol. The manner of his induction into the office entitles him to obedience from the patrol. This leader is responsible to the Scoutmaster, and he can render a good account if the Patrol fails to support and obey him.

This habit and principle of obedience is so thorough-going and so comprehensive that it extends to all duly constituted authorities. There is no more imperative need in the world today than that of obedience to properly constituted authorities. If a man be allowed to choose and to obey only such authorities as he may please, little can be expected in the way of obedience. When a man deliberately decides to disregard or disobey any law it is only a matter of time until the number of laws so disobeyed will be greatly, if not indefinitely increased, and the safety of men and communities greatly imperiled.

So Scouthood has come into being under a program of strict obedience to all duly constituted authorities. When this shall become universal we shall have made long strides upward as individuals, communities, and as a nation. Let every true Scout diligently consider this law and see to it what so far as he can help this law will be honored and obeyed in its true spirit.

Weep not, thou tenderfoot fair,
Weep not for clocks or pie;
There is no pastry in the air,
Nor doughnuts in the sky.

"Correct."

How many clerks work in your office?
Oh, about half of them.

Teacher: Johnny, did you ever have an accident?

Johnny: No ma'am, teacher, I never did.

Teacher: Johnny, a scout is truthful. Wasn't that an accident when your father's mule kicked you last Spring?

Johnny: No, teacher. That bird did it on purpose!

First Scout: I often drive a mile a minute. What's your best time?

Second Scout: We kept no record, but the party I took out riding yesterday evening said the telegraph poles looked like a fine tooth comb.

FOOTBALL PRACTICE BEGINS.

The Ranger scout is mighty glad to see the number of football teams already practicing. Getting a good start is going to make our football schedule race pretty interesting. Troops one and six meet in a practice game next Saturday morning at the Junior High school grounds.

Troop seven under the leadership of Eagle Scout Bill McClure are perfecting a smooth working back field machine. They have some large scouts and that backfield promises to hit the line hard, which means that Troop four' last year's champions, have a hard road to win this year's championship.

Troop one under Coach E. A. May are sure to put out a hard hitting, smooth working machine. They are practicing at Library park regularly now.

Troop six comes out with a heavy backfield and a good strong line. They are sure to have a say in who is to win this championship rag and cup.

Troop four has not started their practices but as they will have much the same line-up as last year, a good strong team is assured. Scoutmaster Chester Powell knows football, and the fourth troopers will try to duplicate last year's stunt.

SUGGESTIVE PROGRAM.

Following our announcement to make this department a medium for exchange of ideas, the scoutmasters have offered several suggestive programs for scout meetings that have been successful. Here is one that is sure to provide snap and pep to any scout meeting:

7:45 p. m.—Fall in and roll call. Each patrol leader reporting same as army style.

7:55 p. m.—Ten minutes of setting up exercises.

8:10—Business session. Thirty minutes only.

8:40—Games. Twenty minutes. Use such games as slap, bean ball, fire, bums, and chip on rock.

9:00—Scoutmasters minute. Take some scout law and drive home a few points along that line.

SCOUT BENEDICTION.

"May the great Scoutmaster of all good scouts be with each and every one of us until we meet again.

"Amen!"

The forgotten benefiction has been universally recognised as the scout benediction and at present is becoming the proper way of dismissal of each scout meeting. Of course, the scout laws and the scout oath should precede the benediction.

Scout troops in Wichita Falls should adopt this as their benediction and use it. That is only keeping the twelfth scout law—Reverent—and it is much better to dismiss the meeting in an orderly manner than otherwise.

SCRIBES ATTENTION.

Efficiency blanks should be in headquarters by Monday at 5 p. m., to receive the points offered for promptness in returning them.

Mr. Taylor has a good supply on hand, and every scribe should have several with his troop record book. Let's make this contest interesting. Troop six is walking away with the second contest so far with troop one tagging at their heels. The race is not over as there is one more month to go on this contest and then a new one. Pep it up, scouts. Let's make the efficiency contest efficient.

SCOUT LEADERS MEET.

Last Tuesday evening a number of the scoutleaders met at the Floral Heights Methodist church to start their regular meetings for the fall.

Committees to outline a course of instruction for the scout leaders, to form a football schedule, and to nominate officers for the scoutmasters association were appointed by Scout Executive Taylor. A model troop of the scout leaders will likely be formed and all members of the troop started as Tenderfoot and will be promoted as they pass the required tests. The course will extend through a period of twenty weeks as the scout leaders will meet twice monthly.

Scoutmasters from Iowa Park, Electra, Burkburnett and other places will be invited to attend the course of instruction. For the present, the meetings will be held in the gymnasium of the Floral Heights church.

An athletic association to supervise all scout athletics will be appointed from the scoutmasters and assistants. The council will also have charge of the football schedule. The scout leaders will meet again September 8.

HEAR YE! SCOUTS.

All you football players who will want some equipment this fall can save heap much money by seeing the scout executive or Mr. White at headquarters as they have made arrangements with a local sporting goods company to give the scouts a special reduction on football equipment bought from them.

The prices of all equipment are down somewhat this year and this company is willing to cut their profits to nothing in order that the scouts may have football equipment. By consolidating the order quick delivery is assured. This order must be sent off within the next two weeks if the reduction is to be realized.

That leaves it up to you scouts, no matter if you only want a nose guard or a sock you can save money by ordering through headquarters. A first class complete uniform will cost approximately $15.00 and up.

Troops that will have teams should pool their order and send it in to headquarters at once.

Fat: Yes, thank you.
Thin: Well, then, please give me a little.

WHAT A BOY SCOUT'S MOTHER SAYS OF SCOUTING.

The mother of a boy scout wrote recently to a scout executive, "To us whose hopes are centered in these boys of ours, the greatness of the Scout organization does not lie only in the fact that through its work they are kept absorbedly busy in wholesome occupation every moment of their out-of-school life, but that we know that the boys whose hearts are in their scout work have no time or thought for the things that destroy true manliness—that he must be straight, clean, honest, helpful, patriotic, through all his life—a 'good sport', 'good scout' through all the ups and downs the years will bring him. These things have entered into the fiber of him, as the fresh air and freedom and joy of the out of doors which his scouts life gives him, have helped to build his body."

A splendid verdict, this, boys, and one which ought to make each one of us work a little harder to deserve such praise.

HUH.

How many clerks in your office? Oh! about half of them.

"A GOOD REASON."

The benevolent citizen spied a little tot weeping and said:

"Now be a good litle boy and stop crying."

"Well, here's a cent. Tell me why you can't be a good boy and stop crying."

UNEMPLOYED IN LONDON HOLDING THEIR GROUND

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—London's unemployed today were continuing to hold their own as the news feature of the day, following the sensational developments of last night, involving the arrest and imprisonment of several members of the Popular borough council and the more or less peaceable but determined all night siege of the guardians at Woolwich by those demanding heavy unemployment maintenance.

Nine members of the Popular council including the mayor, spent their first night last night behind bars for refusing to comply with the London country council's demands for levying further taxes on the town.

They accepted the situation complacently as martyrs.

ROSE MARION ART CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

FOWLS THAT MOULT EARLY POOR LAYERS

By F. W. KAZMEIER,
Poultry Husbandman, Extension Service, A. & M. College, College Station, Texas.

Many a flock of harbors a number of so-called boarders, or individuals that eat feed costing more than the value of eggs they produce. A half-day spent in culling your flock this fall (in the average flock) will mean a saving of not less than fifty dollars.

The best time to cull your flock is during September, October and November. It is during these three months that the poor and unprofitable birds go on a "strike" and cease to produce. Once a year every flock should receive a very systematic and thorough culling. It pays to cull the average flock once a month, but most farmers do not take the time to do it. Once a year, however, this is absolutely necessary for best results.

The culls should be fattened and disposed of on the market. The sooner the better.

One very vital fact to remember is that a weak, sick or ailing hen cannot possibly be a profitable fowl. She is a money loosing proposition.

Many farm flocks harbor individuals with the outward appearances of having been born in 1492. They are too old to be profitable. An old hen has rough shanks and long spurs. As a rule, when the average Texas hen passes the three-year mark, she has ceased to be profitable.

Cull out early individuals, because they are poor layers. A poor layer molts early, because she has nothing else to do. The hen that molts in July and August should be culled out. She gave up too soon. A hen molts after she has almost entirely laid the number of eggs she is going to lay in that year. Good layers frequently lay while they are shedding their plumage. Few hens can lay while growing their se coat of feathers. The good layers molt late and quickly. Some of the high record hens show no indication of molting until November and December. Sell the individual that has an entirely new and clean coat of feathers in August and early September.

Among yellow-shanked varieties such as the Leghorns, Rocks, Reds, Wyandottes, etc., those individuals with bright yellow-colored shanks, toes, toe nails, skin and beak, at the end of the laying season—that is, in September and October—are very, very poor layers. The reason those parts of the body are full of the yellow pigment, is because they have not laid sufficiently to perceptibly reduce the supply of pigment (fat and wellow color) in those parts of the fowl. A laying hen takes this pigment and fat out of her shanks, toes, toe nails, skin, eye ring and beak and uses it in the coloring of the yolk (yellow) of the egg. For this reason, the good layers among the previously mentioned breeds, may be noticed about the yard, at the end of the laying season, in September, October and November, with very faded and pale shanks, toes, toe nails, eye ring, skin and beak, until some time after they have completed the molt.

In connection with this, it might also be well to state here that the majority of Texas farm poultry flocks, even though not standard-bred have a predominance of blood lines with yellow shanks, skin and beak, so that the above indications apply in most scrub flocks.

The poor layers stop laying in July. The good layers lay steadily during July, August and even a part of September. The hen that lays in October is an exceptionally good layer.

It is a mistake to conclude that the early molters are the winter layers. It does not work out that way in practice.

The comb of a poor layer, is small in size, pale in color, cool to the sense of touch, hard and course and covered with whitish scales.

In the poor layer the lay bones (pelvic bones) will be found thick, rigid, course, and close together. The distance between the end of the kees bone and lay bones will be short, and the abdomen is hard, small, contracted and the skin dry.

In the good layer the lay bones (pelvic bones) are widest apart (three or four fingers) very thin and very flexible. The same applies to the distance between the end of the lay bones and the keel bones, sometimes called capacity. The abdomen is expanded, large, soft and pliable.

The poor layer has small and wrinkled ear lobes; a pale and full face, shrunken eyes, long beak, the eye ring is yellow in color, and the wattles are small and pale.

The good layer has large soft and full ear lobes; bright red, but rather thin face; bright, clear and prominent eye; the eye ring is pale; the wattles are round, full and bright red in color.

At the end of the laying season the poor layer is fat and blocky in appearance, while the good layer is light in weight and thin.

The good layer comes off the roosts early in the morning, goes back on the roosts late in the evening and roams the farthest away from the roosting quarters in search of food. She goes to roost with a full crop. She is very active, nervous and hungry. At feeding time she may be seen close to the feeder, while the poor layer acts "scary" and stays around the edge of the flock. The good layer may frequently be heard singing, and nearly always will be scratching and digging. She is a working individual and may be seen with working men's clothes at this time of the year, while the poor layers are loafers and frequently at this time may be seen in an entirely new and clean dress.

Pullets.

The early maturing or laying pullets are the best layers, bearing in mind the time they were hatched. In some way mark or brand all such, so that you will be sure to keep them. Remember vigor is of prime importance.

Cockerels.

The cockerels, showing signs of early maturity, are the ones to save for breeding purposes, placing due regard to the time they were hatched. The cockerel that starts to crowing early is the one to keep, provided he comes up to the standard in other respects.

Standard Requirements.

When practicing selection in standard-breds, we, of course, always bear in mind the great importance of standard requirements. Birds with any disqualifications are discarded, as are also those with serious defects. It is our duty to encourage the breeding of a combination of these two.

Pure-bred or thorough-bred used in describing chickens is incorrect. Standard-bred is the proper term to use in the above sense.

Mongrel Stock.

I have no intention of saying anything for the standard-bred fowls or against mongrel stock, in this article. However, standard-bred stock are a money-making proposition and mongrel or scrub stock are not.

Selection.

Selection is the key note to success in livestock or poultry husbandry.

For free poultry bulletins address the writer, or see your agricultural agent or home demonstration agent. It may be that you can arrange with these for a demonstratioin.

VERNON

VERNON, Texas, Sept. 3.—More than a hundred teachers from Vernon and Wilbarger county will attend the institute which will be conducted at Wichita Falls, September 5 to 9 inclusive. Eighty will go from the rural schools and thirty-five from the Vernon.

W. T. Wilbarger, Jr., returned the first of the week from a visit in Colorado with his father.

District court in Vernon will commence Monday, September 5, with the heaviest docket in its history. Civil cases will demand a great portion of time of the court; the grand jury will meet Monday and the first week will be devoted mainly to calling the petit jury and setting the docket.

Mrs. J. A. Napier and little son, John, went to Wichita Falls Wednesday to visit Mrs. C. E. Basham.

Mrs. Frasier Bell went to Wichtia Falls Thursday to visit a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Wilson have returned from California where they went early in July.

Three hundred bales of cotton have been received by local gins. At this time last year the local gins had not fired up. Local buyers reported a price of 18 cents yesterday. This is an increase of 5 cents a pound over the price paid Ernest Suer for the first bale on August 13. Farmers are willing to sell but many of them expect 20 cents bid within a few days.

Plans are complete for welcoming Wichtia Falls Shriners to Vernon Monday. Mayor Harry Mason will deliver an address of welcome; Mayor Walter D. Cline of Wichita Falls will deliver the response and an interesting program has been prepared for the entertainment of the visitors.

A communication from the state fire commission suggest methods to cut the insurance key rate. City authorities are advised to enlarge the capacity of the pumping station and to employ five paid firemen.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hardy are visiting relatives after an absence of ten years. Mr. Hardy is a pioneer Texas editor having sold his finterest in his newspaper at Snyder about a year ago.

Dr. B. D. Franiken and family have returned from a motor trip which included Colorado, Utah, Idaho and Wyoming. They visited Yellowstone Park and other show places of the mountain country.

New Modes

Spic span new winsomely chic yet reasonably priced

—Any shopping tour nowadays will prove a zestful affair, if in its cycle it includes the purchase of a new Frock, Suit or Coat. For the Fall Displays are replete with a beauty and style far removed from anything commonplace, yet prices have a practical trend.

achieve a smart simplicity by means of their slender silhouettes, but make up for it in their method of trimmming and luxurious fabrics. New colors of Fez, Terra Cuite, Balsam and Sorrento are worthy rivals of the very stylish black. Twills, duvetyn, Canton Crepes and satin are the new fabric favorites. $19.50 to $95.00

SUITS—

seem bent on pleasing everyone, for styles are so varied. The woman who wants a conservative, tailored model will find it, while beautiful styles are developed in the newest fabrics, richly fur trimmed, with decided tendencies toward wide sleeves, irregular hems, and wide panels. $25.00 to $149.50

are variable as to hems also, and have strong leanings toward side closings panels and low shoulder lines. And if they possibly can, they make themselves up along cape lines. Fur is everywhere—especially the gray furs, and black Caracul. Panvelaine, Geronda and Marvella are new fabrics. $39.50 to $195.00

THE CRY OF THE WORLD IS OIL.

The cry of the world is for more oil despite the propoganda put out by the larger interests that there is a great over-supply of crude now on hand.

After an extensive investigation, we find that during the ouster proceedings against the Pierce Oil Corporation in the state of Texas during the early part of 1912, the officials of that company testified on their oath that at all times was it necessary to have at least 12 months supply of oil in storage.

Today oil storage in the entire United States amounts to only a four months supply. This is nearing the danger point, for with drilling curtailed in all the Mid-Continent fields, this small surplus of oil will dwindle fast, as sixty-two and one-half per cent of this supply is represented by flush production.

The signing of the peace treaty with Germany is one of the brightest spots in oil history during the last 20 years, for it issues a satisfactory basis of credit, and with us now in the midst of a great famine for both manufactured and raw materials, all of our industries must necessarily speed up as never before to meet the demand.

This increased domestic oil consumption—combined with the millions of barrels which must be supplied to Europe—must be met with a greatly increased production, for America has always been called on to supply 80 per cent of the world's oil.

The independent producer is the key to the situation, for it is he who produces over half of America's oil, and both American and foreign manufacturers are as dependent on him for oil as Russia is dependent upon American farmers to feed her hungry hordes.

Independent producers—you must awake—for you are the financial soldiers of the world, ever striving to keep the wheels of prosperity turning forward—for without oil the world would still be in the stone age.

The major companies already see the handwriting on the wall and are now in the midst of the greatest drilling campaign ever carried on in the Mid-Continent district.

Realizing the tremendous world-wide need of petroleum products, which is now being reflected in a permanent change for the better in all the world's business, the powerful Standard interests are leaving no stone unturned to command increased oil supplies.

Today the Standard Oil combine is directing its attention solely to the great fields of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana, which fields hold out such great possibilities.

Wildcatters are also becoming active in practically every county and parish in the states of Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana. These men are the princes of the oil business, for it is upon their nerve and judgment that vast oil fields are opened.—Texas Oil Ledger.

Yes, the cry of the world is for oil. This is the cry everywhere.

A distinguished British statesman makes known to the world that his government has obtained control of the Mesopotamia oil fields after a battle royal that lasted for ten years.

When the world war was on General Allenby, at the head of a powerful British army, invaded Asia. He knew what he was doing.

His government knew what he was doing.

He was after petroleum possessions for Mr. John Bull.

Fate of nations was hanging in the balance. When it became known that America had enlisted on the side of the allies, Mr. John Bull knew that it would be well to cast an anchor to the windward and prepare for the trade battle to come after the sword had been returned to its sheath.

Now Mesopotamia is a British possession and its rich oil fields are controled by the British government.

The battle is to the shrewd and the strong, to the cunning and the powerful.

The world over the cry is for oil; the world over Titans are playing the game; the world over billions are behind those who are scouting for undiscovered fields.

These are inspirational items as well as sparks from the wire: "Bears cautious in stock market." "Cotton is strong at higher level." "Mexican outlook is better." "Cotton takes upward turn." "Steers sell at slight advance." "Jobbing trade in south improving." Do you grasp the upward trend in the commercial activities of the country?

China is coming to the Peace Conference with one demand—the return of Shantung. Some day China will be an ugly customer for the other nations of the earth to tackle.

SECRETARY FALL AND OIL SHALE

"Eventually, why not now?" summarizes Secretary of the Interior Fall's view respecting the development of a difinite oil shale program. The secretary's statement made to a congressional committee in support of an appropriation for a three-year investigation constituted an unanswerable argument for the adoption of a clear and continuing policy, and that without further delay.

Disagreement obtains as to the life of our known petroleum fields and the probable extent of resources yet to be discovered, but no one disputes the assertion that the demand for petroleum products will continue to become greater and greater and that the known supply must at some time be augmented by new discoveries or the development of substitutes. In the latter event, oil shale offers the most likely recourse. It is conceded that its potentialities are great and that shale products will ultimately become commercial factors of the first importance. Secretary Fall takes the view that the country should be forehanded enough to conduct its preliminary investigations at once and be ready to meet the emergency whenever it may arise and howsoever pressing it may be.

Many problems, both practical and scientific, must be solved. What is the best method of mining shale? What process of distillation will lead to the recovery of the greatest amount of highest grade oil at lowest cost? What are the possibilities for production of by-products, and what will be the market demand for them when they are produced? Will a long and expensive campaign of education be necessary before the public will consent to use shale products? These and many other questions must be answered, and the sooner investigation to that end is completed the sooner will the shale-products industry be established on a commercially profitable basis.

Secretary Fall estimates that three years will be required to secure the preliminary information which must precede the establishment of the oil shale industry upon a sound basis. The cost of carrying out the research program of the Bureau of Mines will be $240,000, or $140,000 for the first year and $50,000 for each of the two years following. It has been estimated that the shale beds of a few western states alone would yield sufficient oil, at the present rate of consumption, to supply the United States for one hundred and twenty-five years. Government assistance to such an end would be economical even at a cost of $240,000,000. Secretary Fall is altogether justifed in asking for an appropriation of one per cent of this amount.

These are the views of the Mining Congress Journal. Petroleum is the greatest of all games. Petroleum appears to be the uncrowned king of minerals. All the nations of the earth are seeking for a supply of fuel oil. All the ships of the seven seas are being equipped with oil burners. All the American railways are planning to substitute oil for coal burners in their locomotives. This reminds The Record News that recent investigations by the Geological survey are held by its experts to indicate that in the Rock Mountain states, "there are enormous quantities of oil shales which can be bade to yield hydrocarbon oils to a much greater extent than we can hope to obtain from our oil wells."

The shales are said to constitute a tremendous potential oil reserve.

"The oil shales of this country," says the report, "contain enormous quantities of oil, but large amounts of money will have to be invested before the oil-shale industry becomes of commercial importance. Estimates by various engineers of the cost of a complete retorting plant, handling 1000 tons daily, are between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000.

"In this country the oil-schale industry cannot be developed overnight, and probably cannot attain success until large sums of money have been spent in perfecting mining, retorting and refining methods. A company, to be successful, whenever oil-shale operations become commercially feasible, must be able to emply the best technical, business and engineering skill available, be prepared to operate on a large scale, and be financially strong enough to wait several years for any large return on the money invested."

The report declares that it is "unfortunate that a large number of the many companies organized to deal with oil shale are devoting their efforts to stock selling rather than assisting in building a firm basis for the industry."

A summary of the report, in brief, continues that there are no commercial oil-shale plants operating in this country at the present time, although there is a well-established industry in Scotland.

Many American shale deposits are richer in recoverable oil than Scotch shales now being worked, and probably nearly equal in nitrogen content, which is a measure of recoverable ammonia.

Market conditions for shale products are less favorable in this country than in Scotland.

Great quantities of American shales are of greater thickness and better suited for mining than Scotch shales.

As yet no process for obtaining oil from oil shale has been used in actual commercial practice in this county.

Indications are that the United States can not continue long to depend on domestic petroleum production to supply completely the demand for petroleum products, and that sooner or later our oil shales will have to be used to help supply the deficit.

The oil shale industry can not hope to supplant the petroleum industry in a large way for many years, but will probably grow up from local industries in favorable places.

Cost of oil shale operations can not be reliably estimated until commercial practice in this country furnishes the necessary basic data.

The quality, quantity and value of products and by-products to be obtained from oil shale in this country are not known with any degree of certainty.

The oil shale industry is alarge scale, low-grade raw materials manufacturing enterprise, requiring large capital, high technical and business ability, and probably making slow return on the investment. Once economic conditions become favorable for the development of the oil shale industry and satisfactory mining, retorting and refining processes worked out and markets established, there should be only ordinary business risk connected with the industry, the report concluded.

Bradstreet's last review, issued September 2, says, "jobbing trade reports are much more cheerful, especially from the south and west and this access of optimism seems to have had a fairly good basis in all larger volumn of trading for near by fall account." Reads good.

A SCATHING INDICTMENT

And it has come to pass that Federal Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis has met the unqualified condemnation of the American Bar Association for conduct "unworthy of the office of judge, derogatory to the dignity of the bench and undermining public confidence in the independence of the judiciary." Never before in American history has the American Bar Association voted an indictment so scathing against a federal judge. Landis must be thick-skinned if he fails to shiver when he read the indictment.

Net operating income of the railroads as a whole for July will reach 75 million dollars, according to estimates made in Wall street. The 51 million dollars reported for June was the largest since last autumn at the peak for 1920. The government guarantee of net income for the railroads was based on the average for the three years ended June 30, and 1917, the best three years in the history of the railroads. It averaged 75 million dollars monthly from 65 million early in the year to 95 million in October. If July shows net income of 75 million it will be the first time in many months that the government guarantee was anywhere earned. The 6 per cent called for in the new transportation act was based on government guarantee figures.

Now a movie merger of gigantic proportions is announced. Chicago was the place of its birth and $50,000,000 was tossed into a pot to help the movie business out of the trenches. In Chicago the Associated First National Pictures was born. It controls 3500 movie theaters and some of the great stars of movieland. Thomas H. Ince is the head of the combination and the contract signed is for a period of three years. In combination there is co-operation; in co-operation there is success.

Reverend Father J. M. Kirwin of Galveston, preaching a military sermon over the body of an American hero who died in France, declared there are no 100 per cent Americans except those who fought in the great war and his denunciation of masked midnight regulators is said to have been a masterpiece of oratory and patriotic fervor. Surely, if there are 100 per cent Americans, they are the millions who put on the uniform to fight and die for liberty and the flag.

Governor Neff voted items aggrigating $6,945 in the department appropriation bills. Most of the reductions were made in the first year. Very few jobs were eliminated by the governor's blue pencil. Signing of the department bill brought considerable relief to department employes who were fearful that they might lose their jobs. There are thousands of governmental employes who are fearful they may lose their jobs.

A Texarkananan negro is missing. He was taken from an officer by six masked men calling themselves K. K. K.'s. President Harding is notified that there are men the country over, beyond the borders of West Verginia, who are law unto themselves. They flout the written law of the land. Now why do they not get behind the constituted authorities? There is only one safe road and the written law points the way.

Baltimore is greatly disappointed over the authority by the Interstate Commerce Commission to the Gulf lines to reduce the export grain rate 5½ cents a hundred pounds. Oriole city shippers say that grain will be diverted from Baltimore to Galveston and New Orleans and Mobile. Now why should a city on the eastern shore expect to get the wheat shipments from the middle west and the southwest.

Governor Neff signed the Pink boll worm bill. He permitted to become laws without his signature the Johnson truck bill, the bill by Senator T. W. Davidson providing a systematic method of road maintenance and a bill requiring the renumbering of automobiles in Texas during the year 1923. Every year congress and 48 state legislatures grinds out hundreds of new laws.

Charles M. Baughman of Brownwood is the new commissioner of markets and warehouses. He fills the vacancy created by the retirement of D. E. Lyday of Fannin county. Mr. Lyday did not care to continue as commissioner of markets and warehouses. He is one of the leading farmers of the state and prominent in the councils of farmers' organizations.

Dallas has a bonehead club. Former Mayor Frank W. Wrosencraft isn't a bonehead but he is a member of the club. Frank is a Rotarian. Rotarians are not boneheads. Neither are they squareheads. A bonehead walks with his front to the west and his face to the east; a squarehead doesn't walk at all. He is the original man who stood still.

Federal Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis was denounced by the American Bar association "for dragging the ermine into the mire" by holding two jobs at one time. Judge Landis has a life job on the payroll of Uncle Sam; he is to receive $42,500 per annum for seven years from the base ball magnates of the country. He should worry.

There will be a meeting of Oklahoma Republicans in Oklahoma City, September 17. Chairman James A. Harris of the state committee has called the conference. While the session is on he may tell his fellow Republicans why foreign hides and oils are kept on the free list by a Republican congress.

Major General Leonard Wood has accepted the post of governor general of the Philippines. General Wood is one of the ablest executives of the country and is certain to add to his laurels in the far east. He has retired from the army and his retirement is a distinct loss to that branch of the service.

Governor Neff has practically abolished the state tax commissioner. Governor Neff is of the opinion that the work can be done by additional office help in one of the departments. There are many jobs that could be abolished. Who ever heard of an overworked state officer or state employe?

DeWitt county is the home of the Texas turkey. There are more turkeys grown in DeWitt than in any county in any state in the union. Experience has taught the DeWitt farmers that 20 bronze turkeys will make more than 40 acres of cotton in a short crop year. All hail the Texas turkey.

Your wife is coming home in the near future. This is not written with the intention of depriving you of the pleasure of the few remaining days of liberty and happiness, but to help you. Forget that summer name. It would be fatal for you to call you better half Mildred when her name is Alice. You have perhaps acquired the habit of being polite. The same politeness may make your wife suspicious. Get back to normal, but if you have decided to treat your sweet wife with more consideration do so gradually. Be warned, as women are clever and have intuition. You have probably come to the conclusion that your helpmate is not so bad and that women are very similar after all—that is, when the novelty wears off. The return of a wife is often tragic. MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

"shipped to his feed lots 102 head of beef steers, which cost him $10,810 delivered in his lots, or 10 1-2 cents a pound. He sold them seven months later on the Chicago market for $10,684, or 7 1-2 cents a pound—to pay a freight bill of $892 for shipping the cattle to Chicago. In other words, he bought 102,000 pounds of live steers for $10,810 and sold 142,800 pounds of beef on hoof—just 40,800 more pounds of beef than he bought—for $10,864, taking a loss of $126, a loss of seven months' work, a loss of all the alfalfa and corn he fed these steers and a loss of seven months' interest on $10,810. A rather heavy penalty for having contributed more than $40,000 pounds of additional beef to feed his fellow countrymen." Naturally, Mr. Capper argued, the continuance of such a situation would result in curtailed production with a further increase in the tax levied on the consumer; and he related the following instances of the absurd discrepancy between prices which the farmer as a producer receives and those which he as a consumer has to pay. "A farmer feed sa hog 10 bushels of corn to make 100 pounds of pork, but he pays 11-2 bushels of corn for 1 pound of bacon. For 5 pounds of wool—enough to make a genuine all-woll suit—a farmer is now glad to get $1, but to buy such a suit of clothes costs him 500 pounds of wool. Last year a good pair of shoes could be bought with one cowhide. Today it takes five cowhides to get the same kind of shoes. To buy his wife a pair of $10 shoes, a Kansas farmer recently sold 25 bushels of corn for $7.50 and a big cowhide for $2. Then he had to pay 50 cents to boot to close the transaction." Surely, a condition so radically out of joint calls for radical remedies.

SEVEN YEARS TO BE MINIMUM AGE

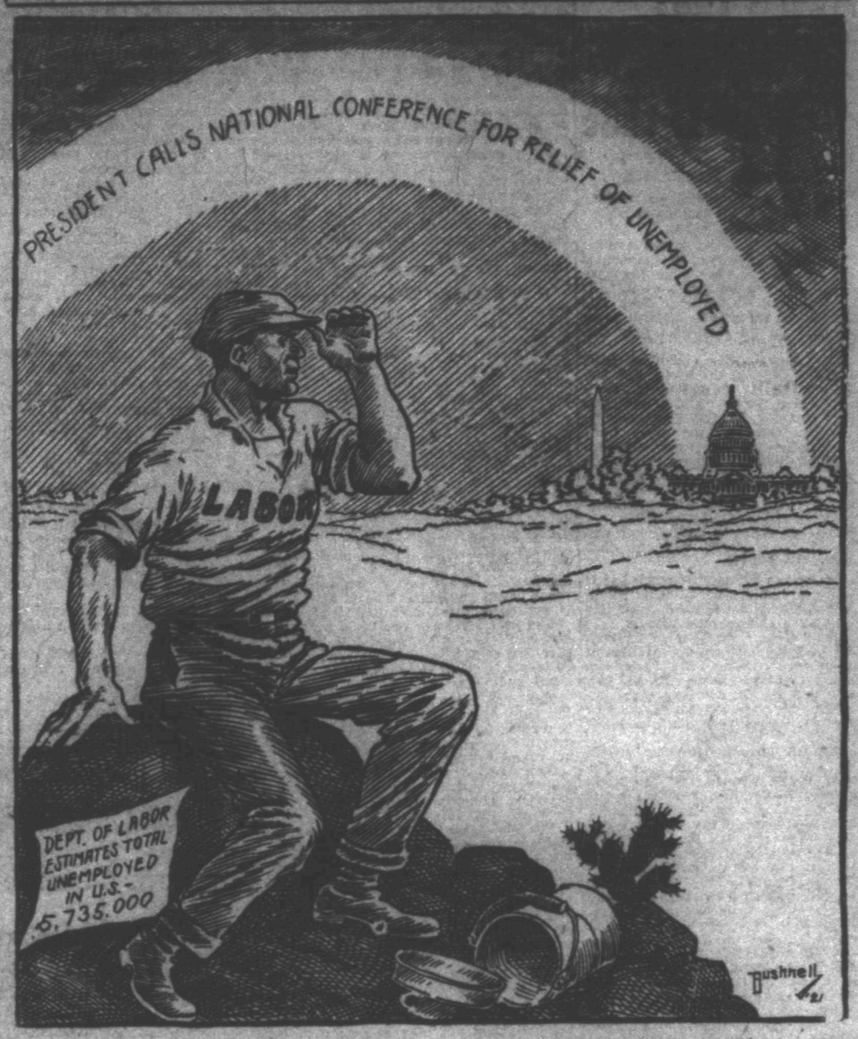

SCHOOLS NOT TO ACCEPT STUDENTS YOUNGER THAN THAT AGE.

No children below the age of seven years will be accepted in the city public schools during the scholastic year, which opens Monday, September 12, it was announced Saturday by Superintendent Lee Clark.

Mr. Clark said that plenty of room nas been provided to care for all pupils within the legal scholastic ages, without holding half day sessions to care for classes. He declares that to accept children below the ages would be a detriment to the work of children of scholastic age, and that officials felt this move for the best interest of the city at large.

BOWIE KNIGHTS CONFER DEGREES

SPECIAL CONCLAVE HELD FRIDAY NIGHT BY COMMANDERY.

Bowie Commandery, U. D., held a special conclave Friday evening and conferred the orders of Knighthood upon I. S. Galloway and J. A. Irons.

The new commandery is growing rapidly, and has had a net increase of about thirty-five members since they were instituted in June.

W. Y. Hammack and Warren Smith, of Wichita Falls, attended the meeting.

Oficers of Bowie Commandery are now qualified to confer the work without any outside assistance, and it is anticipated that Bowie will have one of the ranking commanderies in northwest Texas in a short time.

They still have forty or forty-five petitions on hand to receive the work.

ASK NEW STUDENTS TO ARRANGE CREDITS

New students who contemplate entering senior high school and have not yet had their credits approved are instructed to report to Principle S. H. Rider at the senior high school building between 8 and 9 o'clock on Monday or Tuesday morning, it was announced Saturday.

Examinations for those whose credits are deemed unsatisfactory will be held Saturday afternoon, according to the announcement.

COL. WILLIAM N. HASKELL.
"A typical American," is the expression used by those who know him to describe Col. William N. Haskell, the man delegated by Herbert Hoover to handle the difficult task of administering America's contribution to the famine stricken hordes of Russia. A typical American he undoubtedly is, and for the last twenty years or more he has been a sort of "handy man" when America has had a difficult job to be done.

COL HASKELL

Born in Albany, Colonel Haskell is known far beyond the borders of New York through his connection with the old Sixty-ninth regiment, N. G. N. Y. It was Haskell who commanded it on the Mexican border and Haskell who took it to France in the "Rainbow" division as colonel of the 165th.

Haskell was called upon just after his graduates from West Point in 1901 to hel porganize the Twenty-ninth infantry, U. S. A., authorized for the Philippine war. He served six years in the islands and has been doing things ever since. The various service schools have taught him all they know, and although only a colonel by army system—born in 1878—he has served in such high capacities as chief of staff of the Second army, A. E. F., and high commissioner to Armenia by order of the allied supreme council, where he disbursed more than $20,000,000 in relief supplies and funds at the end of the war.

Colonel Haskell is the kind of a red blooded soldier that General Pershing seems to have the faculty of drawing around him. Pershing has drafted Haskell many times, and it is probably true that he had something to do with this latest designation to duty.

It is a position fraught with many piffalls. One of these is the reported agreement to foreso the use of the American flag in Russia.

HOTEL REPORTS LOSS OF GUEST REGISTER

Police were puzzled Saturday by the reported theft of a hotel register book from the lobby of the St. Paul hotel, 605 1-2 Scott street. The register was taken from the hotel some time during the early morning hours of last Thursday, according to the report.

A desire on the part of some one to hide their movements by destroying the register is the only known reason for which the book could be taken, police declared.

ASK PROSPECTIVE NIGHT SCHOOLS TO MEET MONDAY

Every one in Wichita Falls above the age of 14 years, who wish to study in a night school are requested to meet with Lee Clark, superintendent of city schools, Monday evening at 7 o'clock at the senior high school building, it was announced Saturday.

Mr. Clark announced that courses will be given in any subject for which he receives ten or more applications. The work will be given free of charge and regular public school credits allowed. The work is under the supervision of the public school authorities and the instruction given by public school teachers.

SHALL CHARLES A. CULBERSON BE GIVEN A FIFTH TERM? IF NOT WHO WILL TAKE DOWN THE TOGA OF SENATOR? A SURVEY OF THE FIELD WITH PERSONAL SIDELIGHTS

By H. N. F.

Texas is the banner democratic state. Texas has been known to roll up a majority of nearly three hundred thousand for the democratic ticket. Texas has been as brutally democratic in other years as Pennsylvania or Vermont have been brutally republican.

Charles A. Culberson is the senior United States senator. If he lives until March, 1923, he will have served twenty-four years in the upper house of the American congress. He is nearing the end of his fourth term and those who are close to him say he will ask the democrats of Texas to give him another term of years. Thomas H. Benton served thirty consecutive years in the Senate of the United States and there are others equally as distinguished served fully half a life time in the halls once trod by the master minds of America—in the eventful years and more eventful times since the fathers created this republic.

Senator Culberson served the people as Governor and attorney general for eight years before he was elected to a seat in the upper house and his father, David B. Culberson, served the people of the old First district more than twenty years in the lower house where he became known to his countrymen as one of the greatest constitutional lawyers of his age. As a matter of fact, the Culbersons, father and son, have represented the people of Texas in the national halls of legislation for more than forty years. David B. Culberson was ambitious to round out his public career in the senate of the United States. Fate ordained that his son should become a popular idol, the father buried his ambition and stepped aside for the son and the son won the office and has held it for almost a quarter of a century.

A Son of the West.

Unless all the signs in the political skies are misleading, there is to be a battle royal for the senatorial toga and the democratic voters of Texas, men and women, will have a large field to pick from. Out of the west comes the defi of Congressman Lucian W. Parrish of Clay county, a native son, now serving his second term in the lower house. Parrish has decided to risk his all, speaking of political honors, for he will let go his grip on his seat in the lower house in a determined race to wrest the toga from Culberson and all other entrants in the senatorial sweepstakes. It is Parrish's announced ambition to win a seat in the upper house of congress, to devote his ability and his time to a study of the problems which confront the world as well as America and to consecrate his career so to speak and all that he possesses to the cause of good government as a servant of the people of the Lone Star state. Parrish has youth and health and wealth, is a hard student and tireless worker. He is a giant physically and his friends say that he will begin a speaking campaign early in 1922 that will carry him to every section of Texas and to every county in the state. Furthermore, his friends say, he will discuss the issues of today and tomorrow and not the issues of yesterday—dead issues which are saturated with the poison of personal hates and personal prejudices which grew out of the ugly as well as the memorable campaigns of the past.

Orator and Publicist.

Hon. Cullen F. Thomas of Dallas, Tennessee born but a Texan since early boyhood, is another aspirant for senatorial honors. He is a gifted orator, an incisive writer and is widely known throughout the Southwest. Senator Morris Sheppard is his brother-in-law, but as a man is not responsible for his relatives, there is no reason why that relationship should be expected to cut even a narrow swath in the coming campaign. Thomas is a lawyer and has been a member of the bar for more than a quarter of a century. He was a youthful member of the lower house of the legislature from McLennan county when Charles A. Culberson stepped into the shoes of James Stephen Hogg as Governor of Texas. In after years he served as prosecuting attorney of McLennan county and came within an ace of defeating the Hon. Robert Lee Henry, who was the sitting member at the time. Moving to Dallas, Thomas never lost his interest in politics or welfare work. He became a staunch churchman, a staunch prohibitionist and became widely known as a champion of a dry America as well as a dry Texas, years before John Barleycorn was outlawed. An original Wilson man, in 1912 he was one of the forty immortals sent to the Baltimore convention and there the former President of Princeton University and the Governor of New Jersey, after a long drawn out contest, was made the standard bearer of the democracy and in November of that year, elected President of the United States.

Where the Immortals Lost.

Thomas did not attend the St. Louis convention in 1916. Governor James E. Ferguson and former Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey joined forces in the city of San Antonio, controlled the state convention, kept the forty immortals at home, elected Judge William Poindexter, national committeeman, defeated the attempt of certain Texas democrats to launch a boom for Newton D. Baker as vice-president and played havoc generally with the pre-arranged program of the Immortals and their leaders. All this may be ancient history but Thomas went down fighting, went down smiling and four years later or in 1920, he was a delegate at large to the San Francisco Convention and voted for William Gibbs McAdoo on every ballot. He is the close personal friend of Dr. Samuel Palmer Brooks and Governor Pat Morris Neff and was a Neff man from start to finish in the campaign of 1920.

National Committeeman Thomas B. Love has been in Texas since 1896. A Missourian by birth, he imbibed his democracy in the Ozark mountains and was active in the politics of Missouri before he came to the promised land. He was the personal and political friend of William Jennings Bryan before he abandoned Missouri for Texas and in the campaign of 1896 when the money chests of the world were closed to Bryan, Love raised large sums in the southwest to enable the Bryan national committee to make a spirited campaign against fearful financial odds. Just now Mr. and Mrs. Love are at Naples. They were in Italy when Enrico Caruso died. They will return in November and those who are behind the scenes say the National Committeeman will let loose his formal announcement and take up the cudgel in defense of his candidacy and his claims and the cause of democracy.

Love as a Politician.

Thomas B. Love is one of the most adroit and masterful politicians the country knows. He served several terms in the lower house of the legislature and was speaker of that body. Thomas M. Campbell was the governor and Campbell made Love his insurance and banking commissioner. It is claimed for Love that he is responsible for the banking and insurance laws of Texas, which are looked upon as the best that any commonwealth enjoys. He was an original Wilson man; he was one of the forty immortals that nominated Wilson at Baltimore; he was one of the forty immortals that Bailey and Ferguson bludgeoned in the Alamo City in 1916. He was assistant secretary of treasury under William Gibbs McAdoo and, his friends say, more largely responsible than any man for the war insurance law for the soldiers and sailors and its splendid results. There was a memorable campaign in 1920 and three decisive battles were fought in that campaign. Love was on the firing line first and last and all the time for Woodrow Wilson and the achievements or laws or policies of the Wilson administration. He lost the national committeeship in the Alamo City in 1916. He won by acclamation four years later. He was a delegate to the San Francisco convention where he led the McAdoo forces. McAdoo was not a candidate for the nomination. He did not want the nomination. He flatly said so many times. On the morning that Cox was nominated, thirty minutes before the coming of the final ballot, a message was received from McAdoo imploring his friends to heed his wishes and select another as the Democratic standard-bearer.

Died in the Last Ditch.

Texas delegates voted for Mr. McAdoo on the first ballot; they voted for him on the last ballot and many of them expect to vote for him on the winning ballot in 1924.

Love is a lawyer and a farmer. Love Ridge, seven miles from Dallas, is a beautiful spot. National Chairman George White called Love to New York after Cox had been nominated. Love remained in New York at national headquarters until the political slump of all the centuries happened in November, 1920. Early in the summer, accompanied by his family, he sailed for Europe. Before sailing he threw his hat in the ring. On his return, unless like Saul of Tarsus, who saw a great light as he was coming down the road, Love sees another, the national committeeman is expected to begin the hardest fight of his career.

West Texas to Be Represented.

West Texas has never had a governor and West Texas has never had a senator. Congressman Lucian W. Parrish, during the recess of congress, came home to tell his friends that he was in the race to a fighting finish and many hailed him as the man from the West, as well as the first candidate for senatorial honors to ever hail from the West.

The Record News this morning carries the announcement that there is to be another Richmond in the field—Clarence Ousley of Fort Worth. Ousley has been prominent in political and newspaper circles in Texas for many years. A Georgian by birth, he came to Texas before he had attained his majority. He pitched his tent in the heart of the blackland country, in Ellis county, where in normal years there is more cotton grown that in any county in America. He taught school; he contributed to the press; he lectured; he invaded the newspaper field, be became a member of the Belo organization and for a time was on the staff of the Galveston News. Finally he branched out for himself as the president and editor of the Galveston Tribune, an afternoon newspaper. He prospered.

Swamped by the Galveston Tidal Wave.

Came the tidal wave and the Island City was almost wrecked and thousands lost their all in that storm of the centuries. Ousley journeyed to Forth Worth where, with his friends, he established the Fort Worth Record and was its president and editor until 1913, when he retired from the newspaper business to become the director of the extension department of the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Bryan. He visited Europe in the same year and on his return to America Commissioner of Agriculture David F. Houston appointed the Texan first assistant secretary of agriculture. He remained with the government until early in the year 1920, when he resigned, returned to Texas and resumed his activities as director of A. & M. extension college work.

When James E. Ferguson announced his candidacy for governor, Ousley also tossed his hat in the ring, but the political complications were so numerous that he finally yielded to the advice of his friends and recalled his name as a candidate after six days' run. He is known for his ability as a writer and brilliance as an orator the Southwest over and his announcement no doubt will create a genuine surprise or sensation in the political circles of Texas.

Joseph Weldon Bailey ran an unsuccessful race for governor last year, but he polled almost a hundred and eighty thousand votes in the run-off primary. This in the face of the fact that he had denounced many of the laws of the Wilson administration, declared the eighteenth and nineteenth amendments violative of the rights of the state and in defiance of the teachings of Thomas Jefferson and all illustrious leaders of the Democratic party, either living or dead. Mr. Ousley has ever been the political and personal friend of the former senator. There has never been an hour in the life of the former senator that the editor and educator was not his champion or defender.

Bailey Not a Candidate.

Politicians say that Bailey will not be a candidate for the senate, that twenty-four years of congressional life satiated him, that he won all the honors that fall to the lot of a national statesman and has no ambition to re-enter the public service in the national field.

Col. John Henry Kirby is another prominent Texan, a warm friend of Bailey and Ousley. Men have said that Kirby has ambition to wear a senatorial toga. He has made no sign to date, no announcement to date, and no tip has been given. He is the founder and head of the Southern Tariff Association and his influence is certain to go to the senatorial candidate who comes nearest reflecting his tariff views.

Regardless of all this, one hundred and eighty thousand Democrats voted for the former senator for governor. Where will they go and for whom will they vote on senatorial primary election day in the month of July, 1922?

There is an aggressive, a resourceful and bouyant Texan in the race for senator who boldly declares that his candidacy for the senatorship represents the cause of the fathers or the doctrine of the right of the state to control its own affairs and to make its own laws which do not conflict with the constitution of the United States. Earl B. Mayfield is to the manor born. He is less than forty and has been a political winner. He began life on his Bosque county farm, and he was a successful farmer. He assisted in the organization of farmers' movements or organizations. He was elected to the state senate by the farmers of his district.

Defeated an Old War-Horse.

He defeated John L. Wortham for the office of state railroad commissioner and he won a re-election hands down. His first election was a genuine surprise. The man he defeated was one of the old guard and the old guard did not stand for Earle B. Mayfield in that campaign. Mayfield could have been governor when Hobby announced as a candidate for that office after the editor-publisher had served out a part of the second term of James E. Ferguson. He kept his word. Hobby made the race and Hobby won. Mayfield did not wait until the coming of the holiday season. He did not wait until next year to take the people into his confidence. He is going over the state making medicine. He is telling the people of all parties that the Interstate Commerce Commission has destroyed the railroad commission of Texas, destroyed the Hogg stock and bond law, destroyed the rate-making power of the commission and placed the people of the commonwealth "at the mercy of a few plutocrats who control the railroads and all great industries of America."

There are other avowed candidates and there are men who would like to become candidates. Hon. William E. Hawkins of Breckenridge and Austin and Dallas has announced his candidacy. He is a native of Tennessee. He lit in Dallas county in his extreme youth. He read law and began its practice in Dallas county. He was bank and insurance commissioner when Thomas M. Campbell was governor. Hawkins is as aggressive as a bulldog. As commisioner, he had many run-ins with private citizens; he had many rows with banking and insurance associations. Finally he crossed swords with the governor one day and when the smoke of battle had cleared away, Hawkins was a private citizen and the Sage of Palestine looked as ugly and as glum as a little idol in a Chinese joss house.

How Hawkins Defeated Dibrell.

Hawkins moved to the lower Rio Grande country—to Brownsville, and at an opportune hour he announced his candidacy for justice of the supreme court of Texas. Hon. Joseph B. Dibrell, who was a candidate for re-election, was regarded as one of the foremost lawyers and ablest jurists Texans have ever honored. Then the unexpected happened. When the ballots were counted, Hawkins had won by a tremendous majority. He was defeated for re-election in 1920 by Judge William Pierson of Hunt county. Hawkins has made the start. Will he finish? He told the writer last week that he was in the race until the ballots had been counted, and he expected to be the successor of Charles A. Culberson in the senate of the United States.

Sterling P. Strong is another. He began in Wise county, where he held important local offices. He made an ideal county treasurer and decided to use it as a stepping stone to higher things. He builded his fences and jumped into the race for state treasurer. He failed to land. Then he became a notable worker for the prohibition cause. In those days the Anti-Saloon League was in flower and Sterling P. Strong became its state superintendent and guiding force. For fifteen years he was on the stump for prohibition and a program he was pleased to term "righteous laws." Since his retirement from politics he has been in the insurance field and is said to have been very successful.

Former Governor Oscar B. Colquitt may or may not be a candidate. Colquitt has a remarkable career to his credit in the political field. A Georgian by birth, his people lost their all in the civil war. His father, a maimed Confederate veteran, brought his family to Texas a few years after the surrender. Oscar B. Colquitt walked in a rocky road. He was a plow boy on a farm; he was a devil in a country printing office; he owned his own newspaper before he was twenty and was a political power in his district before he was twenty-five.

Colquitt and His Career.

He served in the senate of Texas and was the author of many tax laws. He was elected railroad commissioner and re-elected. He announced for governor and was defeated by Thomas M. Campbell. Four years later he announced again and was elected and re-elected. Four years ago he was a candidate for the senate and it must have been the irony of fate that made Culberson and Colquitt the leaders in the run-off when Colquitt ran first at the general primary. Colquitt has been successful, so men say, in his oil ventures. He is tied up in business deals. Should he see a chance to cut loose, then he is going to take another whirl in politics and hopes this time to go under the wire a winner.

Former Governor Thomas M. Campbell "is among those mentioned." He was mentioned when he ran a few years ago and that's all. Former Governor William P. Hobby had senatorial ambitions. His friends say he has cast them away. He owns two flourishing newspapers in the city of Beaumont, he is one of the directors of the Hobby Investment Company in which his brother, Edwin, is president and manager, and those who know him best declare that he looks upon politics as a losing game unless the player has a fixed income and no other worries.

Blanton and His Tongue.

Hon. Thomas M. Blanton of Abilene is serving his third term in the lower house. Blanton is between the devil and the deep blue sea. He is crazy to run and fears to let go. A congressional bird in the hand is worth a thousand senatorial birds in the bush. Blanton loves official life. He loves the center of the stage. He loves publicity. He loves to perform spectacular stunts. He does not strut like a peacock, but when he walks along the street he would have the band play, "The Cock of the Walk." Blanton has a strong grip or hold on the people of his district. Politicians over there say the job is his as long as he cares to fill it. They say he is a rabble-rouser extraordinary, has no scruples on the stump and is as glib-tongued and as resourceful as any Tammany politician that ever attempted to round up or inflame or enthuse "the eighty-seven per cent."

Blanton's tongue has won him a national reputation. His fight upon organized labor has won for him powerful friends who are contributors as well as powerful and lasting enemies who "say it with flowers" by throwing brickbats. He knows every man and woman and child in his district. He has kissed more babies than any other man in Texas, complimented more women on their personal charm, and called more men "brother." Just now he is sending letters from Washington to men of influence in Texas asking them to feel the public pulse as to his candidacy in order that he may be able to make up his mind to let go of a substance and chase a shadow. If Blanton decides to enter the race, mud should be selling at a premium before the campaign is half over.

Woman Has the Ballot.

Woman has the ballot. Senators Culberson and Sheppard voted for the nineteenth amendment. A Texas legislature ratified the nineteenth amendment, but before ratification took place the lawmakers of the state bestowed upon women the primary ballot. There are men in the race for the senate who were for the nineteenth amendment and ratification when the battle was on. There are men in this race who were silent when the battle was on. There are men in this race who boldly announced their opposition when the battle was on.

The writer reminds all candidates for senator and all candidates for state and local ofices in the campaign of 1922 that the women hold the balance of power.

They make or unmake political careers.

They made William P. Hobby governor.

They defeated Democratic leaders who were arrayed against Woodrow Wilson in the campaign of 1920.

They may name the successor of Charles A. Culberson.

There is a new law. A husband may pay the poll tax for his wife or the wife may pay the poll tax for her husband, or either member of the firm may pay the money and receive both the tax receipts for both members of the family.

Women are better organized than ever before.

They have tasted blood, politically speaking, in the United States.

They re-elected Woodrow Wilson in 1916.

They elected Warren G. Harding in 1920.

They do not vote as their husbands vote. They do not vote as their fathers or brothers or sweethearts vote. They are to be reckoned with as a potential force, not only in the political life of Texas, but in the political life of America.

MASKAT SHRINE PASSES FIRST ANNIVERSARY ON AUGUST 31; OFFICERS RECALL ITS GROWTH

August 31 was the first anniversary of Maskat Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. No one who was in Wichita Falls at that time will soon forget the first celebraton and ceremonial session, which commenced two days before the temple was instituted. On August 31, last year, after the usual preliminaries, Maskat Temple was instituted by Imperal Potentate Ellis Lewis Garretson, of Tacoma, Washington, member of Afifi Temple, with a membership of 420, and under the most favorable circumstances. The famous Hella Temple, of Dallas, and loyal Ben Hur Temple of Austin, with their bands and patrols, helped to start the new temple off in real Shrine fashion. The officers of Hella Temple conferred the degrees of the Mystic Shrine upon the initial class of 216 novices.

The temple has made very satisfactory growth in membership during the past year, with 1225 on its membership rolls at present and with over 200 applications for membership on file.

While under dispensation Maskat Temple has accomplished a number of noteworthy things. The largest government hangar at Call Field has been acquired and is completely equipped with all modern conveniences necessary for the conduct of ceremonials, and it perhaps affords the largest space for dancing to be had in northwest Texas. The building will comfortably seat 2500 people for other Shrine entertainments. The auditorium, however, is only a temporary proposition, as the temple purchased a site at Ninth and Travis streets, several months before the date of its institution, and a Shrine Mosque will be erected there at some future time.

The temple can feel justly proud of her musican organizations, her Arab patrol and trained stage crew.

The all-Shrine band, consisting of fifty pieces under the management of Joe E. Ward and the direction of L. L. Lawler, ranks high among similar organizations in the state, and within a very short time Maskat Temple band will be second to none in Texas.

The Maskat chanters, under the direction of Noble Paul J. Vn Allmen, have gained an enviable reputation as entertainers of rare talent and training.

The Arab patrol, with Horrace Robbins as captain, consists of forty active members and three officers. They also have a large honorary membership, as well as a long waitng list of applicants. There is at all times a keen interest manifested among the members of this organization, and its untiring efforts during the past year have contributed very materally toward the success of the new temple.

A stage crew of twenty picked men has been organized by Noble Al Ellis, class director, and from what can be learned, they are well qualified to conduct novices across the hot sands of the desert to the shades of the palms.

On June 16, of this year, a permanent charter was granted to Maskat Temple at the imperial council session held in Des Moines, Iowa, and plans are now being made for the constitution of the temple and the entertainment of Imperal Potentate Ernest A. Cutts, of Savannah, Ga., member of Alee Temple, when he comes to deliver the Charter on September 22.

Walter D. Cline, has served the temple during the past year as its first potentate, and will no doubt be re-elected at the business session when the temple is cinstituted, because no honor is conferred by serving a temple under dispensation, it being necessary that he serve one term after the temple is constituted before he is entitled to the honor of past potentate.

The divan, band, patrol, chanters, stage crew and members of the temple have accepted an invitation to be guests of the Vernon Shrine club for a Labor Day picnic and barbecue, to be held at the Vernon country club on Monday.

DEMAND FOR NASH AUTOS INCREASING

The Nash Motors Company have again ended the month in an oversold condition. The demand for Nash cars followed immediately the price reduction July 2, and has continued since that time. Both the Milwaukee and Kenosha plants of the company are making every effort consistent with high standards, to catch up to the demand but August orders on the books are fifty per cent in excess of production. Indications point to an unusually busy fall season at practically all Nash distributing points.

"There is just one reason, in my opinion, for the demand for Nash cars in its present proportions," said Charles B. Vorrhis, vice-president and general sales manager of the Nash Motors Company, "The buying public in a market such as this naturally turns to that product in which it has confidence. I am stating no secret when I say that since the very day it was established the Nash Motors Company set out deliberately to win confidence in itself and in its product. More than that, the same deliberate and determined effort has been made to hold that confidence, for we regard confidence as the very cornerstone upon which business of this company is built. "This confidence on the part of the automobile buyer is reposed very firmly, I believe, in the product itself, in the Nash Motors Company which stands back of that product and in the Nash organization of distributors and dealers with whom the public comes into direct contact. Every effort is being made to catch up with the demand for cars, but in spite of an oversold condition increased production is being attained only through methods that will continue to safeguard the quality of the Nash product so that confidence on the part of the owner, the most highly prized asset of our business, will in no way be impaired."

BELLEVUE

BELLEVUE, Texas, Sept. 3.—120 property owners in this precinct signed a petition calling for the $2,000,000 road bond election. More than two-thirds of the voters here will sign it. The petition calls for the election on October 18.

Public schools will open on Monday morning, September 12. Superintendent C. B. Breedlove says that a splendid corps of teachers has been engaged, a fine library has been added to the equipment and the coming term promises to be one of the best in the history of Bellevue schools.

Mrs. Sarah Jane Wilson died at her home in the country last week. She was 73, settled in Clay county 44 years ago, was the mother of six children and the Rev. Crutchfield of Electra whom she had known from infancy preached her funeral.

NEW PROCESS FOR GRINDING CYLINDERS

A cylinder grinding machine, costing $5,000, one of the same type in use in large quantities in the Marmon, Packard and other factories making high priced cars, which is said to be far superior to the old method of reboring the worn cylinders, has been installed by the W. R. B. Machine and Tool company, at the north end of the Wichita river bridge.

This machine, according to C. S. Bennett, manager, is a step in advance of reboring the cylinders of a motor which is losing power, wasting gas and oil, the "reboring" process affording only temporary relief.

"Boring or reaming," Mr. Bennett says, "is done with steel cutting tools and produces a porous like surface that is subject to constant wear and as a result the cylinder bore is soon oversize."

"Grinding," he continues," is accomplished by the new machine by the grinding wheel which revolves in a perfectly true circle, cutting away the iron until a round and straight hole is produced without either high or low spots and having a beautiful smooth and mirrorlike surface throughout.

"By this method," Mr. Bennett says "all of the disadvantages of boring or reaming are overcome. The high grade cylinder grinding machine produces a true straight accurate bore, the limits of accuracy being usually within one thousandths of an inch."

Arrangements have been made by Mr. Bennett, he says, whereby any local garage man will examine the cylinders of a car and, if the owner desires, turn the motor over to this machine shop to grind the cylinders.

There Is Work to Be Done

By ROGER W. BABSON

This series of articles began with the following words:

"Fundamentally, this country is sound.

"Temporarily, its business is sick.

"It is a good thing when we are sick to become well again, but it is a better thing to seek a way to stamp out our malady for all time to come.

"There was a time when men and women looked upon small pox as a scourge from God, terrible, but unavoidable. This was before we learned how to combat it. Today small pox is no longer a plague.

"There was a time when whole communities were shattered, and—in an economic sense—were all but anihilated by terrible crop failures. The farmers still have their troubles. Crop failures are still reported. But a modern crop failure is mild indeed compared with the devastating ruin that befell farmers in previous decades. Crop failures are no longer a plague.

"Business, I believe, is ill with a preventable malady. Business depressions are a plague that could be stamped out if we but knew what to do.

"Can we eliminate this disastrous succession of reckless ups and sickening downs? I believe so.

"Can we make prosperity permanent? I believe so."

Let us review specifically the things that have been done to eliminate crop failures and see if the principles might not be followed in eliminating the plague of periodic business depressions.

1. Farmers have been educated to diversify their crops. Instead of staking all upon cotton, the more progressive farmers of the South are developing food crops and livestock. The same principle is being worked out in other sections. The one-crop system is everywhere being replaced by diversification. If one product is a failure, the farmer has other products to fall back upon.

2. Instead of working blindly in the dark the farmer now has information to guide him, both in production and distribution. If he sees a tendency toward excessive production of some one product—as clearly indicated by the crop reports from year to year—he can gradually shift his production to other crops. If a certain market is reported as glutted, he can divert his product to a point where conditions are more favorable.

3. The farmer has been educated to better methods. A superior agricultural technique has been developed and taught. Farm efficiency has increased. Farm equipment has improved.

4. At least a beginning has been made in educating the public to regulate their purchasing by common sense rather than by fad or habit. That great buyer, the housewife, has been partially taught to buy rice when rice is abundant and potatoes are scarce. And she has been partially taught to direct her other purchases in accordance with market conditions. It is true that only a little has been accomplished along his line, but is a step in the right direction.

These same principles which have made farm prosperity far more permanent than in earlier days can be applied to make business prosperity more permanent. In detail, this works out as follows:

Diversified Interests Needed.

1. Business men will be educated to diversify their interests. The "one-crop" system must be abandoned in the factory as well as upon the farm. The automobile manufacturer will make both trucks and trailers, so that a depression in truck sales will be offset by activity in trailer sales. The merchant will be prepared to cater either to classes or masses according as the two groups see-saw up and down the teeter-board of fundamental conditions. The same man will operate a woolen mill and shoddy mill, one of which will always be active when the other is dull. There will also be diversification of sales territories; and there will be seasonal diversification.

2. Government Production Report.

If sufficient pressure is exerted, the Government will provide business information as well as crop information. It is a national disgrace that no Government report can be found to tell which lines of industrial production are becoming overcrowded and which markets threaten a glut. The census of manufacturers is a beginning which must be perfected and supplemented by a census of trade.

3. Technique of Business.

There can be developed a technique of business, comparable with the improved methods of agriculture. Even modern business is hardly more than hit-or-miss—largely miss. The "systematizing" movement and the "efficiency" movement are but intimations of what awaits to be done for better business. Moreover, both of these movements were concerned primarily with mechanical matters—and business is not essentially mechanical but human. Illimitable possibilities will be opened up when we develop the human side of business, with attention to those main springs of action—the emotions.

4. Educating Purchasers.

Purchasers must be taught their power and how to use it. Send your money to the bank and it builds houses, factories, machinery, and other capital wealth. Send your money to the jewelers and it opens diamond mines. Both jewels and flour mills are well to have,—but in proper proportion. Proportion is the essense of the whole subject. There is no such thing as overproduction; the trouble is always due to unbalanced or ill-proportioned production! For every pair of silk hose produced, there must be produced a proportionate volume of garden hose. Otherwise, panic and depression. The buyer is the supreme court that can diversify and proportion the nation's activities. When this duty is recognized and fulfilled a panic will be as rare as a dinosaur. In this connection, not WHAT A DOLLAR WILL DO:

$1 spent for a lunch lasts 5 hours.
$1 spent for a necktie lasts 5 weeks.
$1 spent for a cap lasts 5 months.
$1 spent for an automobile lasts 5 years.
$1 spent for a water power or railroad grade lasts for 5 generations.
$1 spent in the service of God lasts for eternity.

This does not mean that we should put our income in the contribution box and starve to death, but that we should wake up to the terrible responsibility that accompanies purchasing power. We speak of the "almighty dollar." In one sense this is true. Don't abuse that power. Use it in making good. Get the vision.

I said that smallpox, save in isolated cases, has been conquered. As a national plague, it has been abolished. Not for a long time can we hope to eliminate the occasional business failure. But we can eliminate panics and depressions as national epidemics. We can do this, as has been explained in detail above by following identically the same principles which have been so successful in agriculture and in health work. Tuberculosis has been shaken in its hold on the world by better methods of living. Panics can be stamped out by better methods of doing business.

Our Immediate Problem.

So much for the general problem. Now for the immediate problem of getting out of the period of depression that we are already in.

Everyone i sinterested in the answer to this question: "How long will this period of depression last?"

It will last until the inflation of the past few years is taken out. The actual length of time will depend on how this is accomplished.

The Towel Analogy.

To illustrate what I mean, let us assume that before me is a bowl of water and a dry, clean, healthy hand towel. The towel in that condition, represents normal business conditions, when business is on the medial X-Y line, as for instance 1911-12. Then it was in the state of this towel, neither inflated nor deflated, but clean and healthy, ready for use. During 1917-19, however, the towel became saturated with later. This is just what happened to business. The drops of water that fall off the towel when lifted out of the water may be indicative of the orders for goods which fail to use during such inflated times. The saturated towel represents business when we were at the highest point in January, 1920, thoroughly saturated with water. Such saturation must be taken out. We must always get the towel dry again.

There, however, are two ways of getting a towel dry. If I took a towel and hung it up to dry—when dripping—it would take four hours for such a towel to dry. But there is another way, which our mothers used. Instead of letting the towel take four hours to dry, they would put the towel through a wringer. Now, after the towel has been put through a wringer, it can be hung out in the same sunshine, the same air and same temperature and it will dry in one hour.

We're in the Wringer.

Business was ut into the wringer in 1920 and 1921. Although you and I do not like to go through a wringer, nevertheless it is very much better for all jf some of us go through the wringer once in so often. If we cut a dog's tail off at one clip, the dog suffers a lot for a short time, but soon forgets it. If, however, we cut off the dog's tail a quarter inch per month for thirty-six months, at the end of that time the dog will be pretty well discouraged.

Hills and Valleys.

It is to be expected that the extent and intensiay of this present period of depression will correspond rather closely with the extent and intensity of the recent era of prosperity. Along the new uneven road of business the hills approximately equal the valleys and the valleys approximately equal the hills.

It makes a great deal of difference when the highest point of a period of prosperity or the lowest point of a period of depression is reached. Four years of prosperity with the peak in the first year is much less satisfactory to business men than four years of ever-increasing business with the peak coming near the end.

Conversely two or three years of depression seem less serious if the worst point comes at the outset and conditions become less severe from then on. To have a severe slump followed by a long period of sinking—cutting the dog's tail by inches—is most discouraging of all.

Prosperity comes when service replaces selfishness. The sooner we put this principle into actual practice, in our own lives the quicker will we prosper again.

PROPOSED BAN ON "RUNNERS" DRAWS PROTEST

Protesting the proposed city ordinance regulating hotel runners, which would prohibit them from soliciting from sidewalks, a petition, signed by the proprietors of twenty local hotels and rooming houses was presented before the adjourned session of the city council Saturday afternoon asking that the proposed ordinnace be reconsidered.

The petition was presented by Arch Dawson, local attorney. Action on the petition was postponed until the next regular session of the city council, which meets on Tuesday evening, rather than Monday, which is labor day. The session was presided over by Mayor Walter D. Cline, who returned early Saturday.

Ordinance 383 authorizing the mayor to borrow not to exceed $200,000 to cover the existing deficit in the city treasury was passed on its third and final reading.

City Clerk George Thornburn announced to the council that he has collected $1,000 from various fees and bills due the city and believed that on Monday he could collect sufficient the funds to meet the city pay roll, without using any borrowed funds at this time. He said that approximately $2,200 was needed to pay employees, prior to the collection of the $1,000.

IOWA PARK

IOWA PARK, Texas, Sept. 3.—Shelton Smith brought to Iowa Park the first bale of cotton. He hauled 1560 lbs. to Wichita Falls and had it ginned. His first bale was sold at auction and was knocked down to the First State Bank for 19 1-2 cents. It weighed 480 pounds. This cotton was picked in August and was the first bale to be hauled over the new concrete road.

Bruce Cobb Post of the American Legion has been organized with 35 members and an invitation to join has been extended to all former service men.

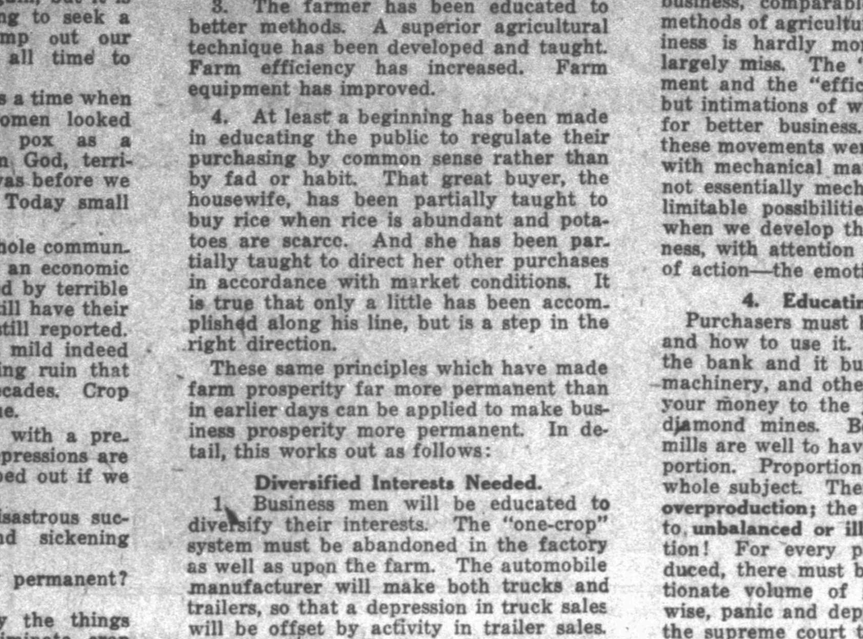

It is announced that the Barr-Daye lease consisting of 60 acres southeast of Electra has been purchased by the Griswold Oil Company for a consideration of $200,000. There are 12 producing wells with a daily production of 250 barrels and five producing wells on this lease and less than one-third has been developed. E. F. Griswold is one of the most active oil producers in this section and has expended a lot of money in developing the shallow field around Iowa Park.

B. L. Bradford has been appointed principal of the public school and will have supervision over the agricultural and athletic departments. He is an A. & M. College man and also has been appointed boy scout master.

School opens Monday, September 12.

BARRYMORE AT STRAND MONDAY

Lionel Barrymore, who is starred in "Jim the Penman," the Associated First National Pictures, Inc., production, which will be the attraction at the Strand theatre beginning Monday, enacts a role in this photoplay entirely different from any he has ever done for the screen. The production is an up-to-date Americanized version of a melodrama that has been popular on the English and American stage for many years.

Mr. Barrymore has the role of a bank cashier who has a remarkable ability for imitating signatures. The first time he uses this talent dishonestly is to save the president of the bank, who is also the father of the girl the cashier loves, from disgrace.

The forgery is discovered and he barters his services to a ring of international criminals for a peperiod of twenty years. The climax comes when the criminals insist on him committing a forgery which will ruin the young man to whom his daughter is engaged.

BYERS.

BYERS, Sept. 3.—The First National bank of this city, which is believed to be one of the finest in the county, and is fitted up on the inside with marble and latest banking furniture, was occupied today. Citizens of Byers are very proud of this new building and of L. J. Curtis, local banker, who has made the new building possible.

Seven G. A. R. members of Dodge City, Kansas, have formed a fife and drum corps and will have a conspicuous place in the parade of ex-service men at the coming national convention of the American Legion at Kansas City.

HEREFORD

"The Old Nest" Subject for Essay Contest

RECORD NEWS OFFERS PRIZES FOR BEST STORY ON MOTHER LOVE IN THE MODERN HOME

The Record News, by arrangement with the Olympic Theatre, is launching a Mother Love Essay contest with prizes for the first, second and ten next best essays. The writer of the best essay will have at his or her disposal ten choice seats at the Olympic's presentation of "The Old Nest," a drama of mother love playing at the Olympic September 14, 15, 16 and 17. The second best, five choice seats and ten honor prizes to the ten next best essay writers to a seat each on the main floor.

All letters must be mailed to the Mother Love Contest Editor, Record News, before midnight Saturday, September 10th, and should not be more than 300 words in length.

Trueness to life and neatness will be the two main things considered in judging the stories. If there is an incident in your own life to write about, so much the better. The background upon which the picture, "The Old Nest," unfolds is simply the old-fashioned home of a typical American family. The incidents that transpire in this atmosphere; the rearing of the brood from babyhood to full growth, the flight from the old nest, and the sudden happy home-coming of the flock is so unerringly true to life that one is constantly assailed by the shock of memories long hidden beneath the dust of years. It pictures the over-forgiving mother and brings before us the universally known episode of life—the best of children can forget their parents. In the picture, Mary Alden plays the role of the mother and is declared by critics to equal if not surpass Bera Gordon's famous "mother" of "Humoresque."

Illustrated stories of "The Old Nest" and the contest essays will appear daily in the Record News, the writer's names being published or held in confidence as they wish.

The Olympic management considers "The Old Nest" one of the most heart-touching and human documents that has ever come to this theatre's screen and is preparing a special presentation for it which will include a beutiful prologue and a synchronised musical score will be used. Hence the prizes offered should bring hundreds of essays on Mother Love to the Record News.

TEAM PLAY MAKES PICTURE POSSIBLE

Rarely in the history of any art that requires the co-operation of several distinctive elements do we find a combination of forces needed to create a notable work. When such a combination occurs, it is often a matter of chance. The absence of such perfect co-operation in the creation of motion pictures is, doubtless, responsible for the comparatively few masterly pictures that are presented to the public.

The forces that coalesce in a finished film are the author, the director, the cast, and the producer. At last, here in America, such a combination has achieved what film audiences have long wished and hoped for. A genuine photoplay achievement has come to pass. To the untnitiated, it will be known by its title, "The Old Nest." But to those who care for particulars, let it be said that Rupert Hughes has written a story with universal appeal, that he has found in Reginald Barker a director with the sympathy necessary to catch the pathos and humor of the story, as well as the ability to give it concrete form. Moreover, the author has found a producer in Goldwyn, with all the facilities to make a complete, unstinted production, and a case of such excellent merit that every scene is played as though it were the only one in the entire picture. And in this cast the leading character, an old mother who sees her six children leave the old nest one by one, is played by Mary Alden, an actress of long experience and of such versatility that she plays equally well the young wife, the middle-aged matron and the old grandmother.

Editor's Opinion.

"If I had been asked a short time ago what particular play of the screen we could, above and beyond all others, recommend as the best and most completely satisfying picture for all classes of the American people, a play which really enriched and embellished the art of narration, we would have asked time to think it over.

"If the same question were to be asked today we would reply promptly—"The Old Nest"—and our reasons are these: Rupert Hughes has contrived a screen story from his own Saturday Evening Post story, which Reginald Barker has produced for Goldwyn, and has succeeded without a plot in placing before us a series of short and well-told and continuing chapters out of life itself. He has with deft and clever hands drawn aside the curtain from the soul of an American family, permitting us to see the deep pathos of a noble mother's sacrifice for her children and the aching emptiness of her great heart.

"The great cry has gone up from the public to the theatres for worthwhile pictures. 'The Old Nest' will answer that cry.

"We congratulate Rupert Hughes most heartily and extend the greeting to Mr. Barker and to the Goldwyn company. We congratulate Miss Mary Alden, whose portrayal of the mother will live as long as the screen endures. We praise the flawless cast and the manner of presentation, but most of all, we felicitate the moving picture business on this triumph which will shed glory upon it and redound immeasurably to its eternal credit."

In the case of a photoplay in which all the forces concerned in its production must be perfect results, it is difficult to analyse the work of each. Rupert Hughes did not give the preparation of his scenario to another, but did the work himself. He is unusual among photoplaywrights, in that he knows how to attain technical effects, and is capable of directing a picture himself.

Director Enthusiastic.

Furthermore, the director, Reginald Barker, found in Mr. Hughes' story the material he has always been eager to present on the screen. Author and director together worked out effects and scenes until the final photoplay became the visualization of their hopes. Finally, the work of Mary Alden in the role of the mother developed into a revelation to everyone concerned with the making of "The Old Nest." Miss Alden has had long experience as a character actress, but never before has she had a chance to show how marvelously she could portray the emotions of a woman at various periods of her life from youth to old age. Not only are the emotional moments poignant and true, but Miss Alden presents the bradually debilitated woman as life leads her, step by step, down the ladder of time.

A great motion picture has at last been made. And it bears the label, "Made in America." It will be shown at the Olympic theatre for four days, beginning Sept. 14.

TRAMP HERO WINS LOVE IN PICTURE

Mr. Moore is starred in this picture with Eileen Sedgwick. His sensational introduction to her is followed by a whirlwind of action until it culminates in his rescue by her from the gallows.

When Moore first enters the restaurant which she conducts he proceeds to hold up the occupants, all of them cowpunchers, but when things assume a menacing attitude he hastily explains that he is hungry, broke and merely wants a bite to eat. They all see the funny side of it and proceed to ply him for food.

Later he is accepted as a member of the cowpunchers outfit and succeeds in saving Kate from a runaway team. When he is accused of a murder she leaves nothing undone to secure his pardon from the governor.

The story is given a very unusual turn at this angle and a startling situation is worked out that gives the picture an unusual interest. It is a thoroughly human story with a cast of characters that were selected for their ability to interpret the roles assigned to them.

press agent. How mistaken we can be!

NOTE THE EMBRYO ACTRESS.

"In 'Beau Revel' I had to get Florence Vidor to cry. I deliberately faked a quarrel with her, criticised her gown (no lady likes this!) and wouldn't let the company go to lunch when they were very hungry. Miss Vidor became so incensed that she started to weep—which was just what we wanaed," says John Griffith Wray, her director.

Cleo Ridgley.

Cleo Ridgley, who made her debut in the early days of the films, is returning to the screen. Miss Ridgley was a great favorite when she left four years ago after her marriage to James W. Horne, motion picture director. Since retiring from the screen Miss Rodgley has been busy as a model housewife and mother. She is very proud of her young twins, Jim and June.

When she stages her comeback she will play the part of a villainess. This fits in with the American creed that all screen villains and villainesses spend their time off the screen playing croquet with the children or knitting. This belief has supplanted an older one, which press agents fought desperately to keep alive, namely, that stage villains were equally sinister and dangerous fellows in their private lives.

THE BELOVED VILLAIN.

Lowell Sherman, who made such a hit as the villain in "Way Down East" and later played in "Molly O," is much in demand by various companies. He has recently been added to the cast of "Grand Larceny," the Albert Payson Terhune story which Goldwyn is producing. The cast for the picture now includes Elliott Dexter, Claire Windsor, Tom Gallery, Roy Atwell, Richard Tucker and Lowell Sherman, which sounds interesting and promising.

FANCY THIS!

A thrilling bit of news comes from the Goldwyn office to the effect that "movie favorites have their own favorites!" It even goes father than that and tells you just as plain that they have favorite authors. John Bowers, for instance, reads Ibsen (Oh, the highbrow!); Helen Chadwick reads "Omar Khayam" (she doesn't know evidently that he's passe); Tim Moore reads his own poems; Will Rogers prefers Ibsen, and some of them read Kipling, Tolstoi and Shakespeare. And here we'd been thinking all along that the favorite author of any star was his own

POSTMASTERS WILL GUIDE ALL TOURISTS

By BASCOM N. TIMMONS
Record News Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Postmaster General Will Mayo has undertaken to take the joy out of the life of this humorous bumpkins who delight in giving the wrong information to persons traveling through the country, as well as those who have to fill daily the "wit and humor" columns of the country, by destroying their oldest joke.

Hereafter, if the postmaster general has his way, it will not be necessary for a tourist in a strange country to travel many miles out of his way to find that he has been given the wrong directions, for it is his plan to turn every postmaster in the country into a human guide post.

Whether the postmaster general has been induced through his own experience to call upon postmasters to give reliable information to ourists is not stated at the postaffice department, but Mr. Hays must have some intimate and personal knowledge of the may in which tourists are told in the country that it is so many miles to ——— and are then permitted to go that many miles in the opposite direction, for he is trying to make the postoffice assume the responsibility of directing all tourists whether traveling in automobiles or on the tracks of railroad cars, so as to find their destinations with as little trouble as possible.

In a recent order to all postmasters Mr. Hays has given the following directions, which he evidently expects to be carried out:

"Thousands of tourists are now motoring up and down the country and postmasters and postal employes have the opportunity of being of practical help to such strangers in the communities, whose greatest difficulties lie in securing reliable information concerning the territory through which they are passing and catching up with their mail from home. It is suggested that the posmaster or some designated clerk in each office might without any loss of time in his regular work so equip himself as to be able quikve quick and reliable data to inquirers concerning directions, etc., and other general information that may be useful, in addition to giving careful and cheerful attention to the traveler's mail inquiries."

Willis Pure American.

Senator Willis of Ohio is an American first of all. He is a Republican and protectionist, but his Americanism sticks out more than any of his other attribuates. They are telling a story of an answer he gave to a constituent who wrote him with regard to the pending tariff bill, which indicates his sentiments with regard to this country.

In a communication to the Ohio senator, one of his constituents made a vigorous protest against the imposition of a tariff duty on razors made in Germany. He insisted that he had never been able to find an American-made razor from which he could get satisfactory service, but that he owned several razors made in Germany, every one of which gave perfect satisfaction. He protested that the American men should not be deprived of the best razors they could get, nor be taxed in order to get them.

"If I could not find an American razor that I could use, I would let my beard grow." was the senator's reply.

Cannon Gets Laugh.

Former Speaker Joseph G. Cannon, who is known to most of the United States as "Uncle Joe," is serving his twenty-third term in congress, having been a member of the house for almost forty-five years, during a portion of which he was the speaker. As a result of his long service and the conspicuous position which he has occupied in the house for many years, it has been thought in Washington that he was well known throughout the United States.

"Uncle Joe" is laughing to himself over the story which came to him a few days ago of a woman from Texas who was visiting in Washington for the first time and was taken into the gallery of the house of representatives. A friend pointed out several notables on the floor of the house and seeing "Uncle Joe" up near the speaker's desk, pointed to the venerable congressman and said, "There is Uncle Joe Cannon."

"Who is he?" asked the Texas woman.

"She was from Texas," said Mr. Cannon, "and she wouldn't be expected to know anything about me."

Hop Crop Short.

There is sorrow and regret among the "home brewers" since the report of the department of agriculture shows a failure in the hop crop with the indication that the prices on this article of very common consumption these days will be much higher during the coming season.

The indications, asannounced by the department of agriculture, are that the hop crop of New York, which amounted to 2,288,000 pounds in 1920 will not exceed 718,000 pounds in 1921. The crop in Washington is estimated at 4,320,000 pounds, compared with 5,730,000 pounds last year. The California crop, which amounted to 21,000,000 pounds in 1920, is estimated at 15,725,000 this year. And only the Oregon crop is expected to be slightly greater than it was in 1920.

The total crop for the United States is expected to be more than 5,000,000 pounds short of last year's total. This fact, together with the ever-increasing demand, is expected to add even "home brew" to the list of articles contributing to the high cost of living.

Joke's on Harding.

President Harding sprung a surprise on the newspaper men at Washington a few days ago when a delegation called on him and asked if he would present a prize to the winner in a golf tournament, which a number of the newspaper men were arranging, to be participated in only by writers for the press.

"I will present the prize," said the president, "but I want it understood in advance that I may present the prize to myself, for if there is any golf tournament among the newspaper men I propose to enter. And I propose to play to win."

The president played, but as high as he could get out of about fifty contestants was third place. The boys made him write an article for his paper at Marion, Ohio, before allowing him to qualify as a Washington correspondent so that he could enter for the tournament.

Hiram Curious.

Senator Hiram Johnson of California manifested considerable curiosity in a speech made in the senate and printed in the Congressional Record of August 10th. He showed considerable curiosity as to why the United States paid England more than $100,000,000 for carrying American soldiers to Europe during the war and bringing them back, when England owed the United States billions of dollars of borrowed money and millions of dollars in interest. He wanted to know why the United States is spending a million dollars or more to keep American soldiers in Germany and various other things.

But Senator Johnson seems to have a lot of curiosity and not all of it has been gratified yet.

BLOW-OUTS ALONG THE ROW

BY COLD PATCH

Dan Rubsam, the genial manager of the Marshall-Huff Motor Co., protected by a corps of faithful friends has gone to Waco t bring back a bride. This should be a lesson to all unmarried members of the dealers association. T&ke heart, boys, you too might some day find a lady who will listen to reason.

A new slogan has been adopted by the Automotive Dealers Association: Fire! Water! Fire! Water!" was the new slogan proposed by Carl Thompson and adopted unanimously on last Friday night.

How many horse-power did you say it had?

B. S. Mackbusch and H. C. F. Hackbusch have been placed in charge of the Oil and Gasoline Department of the S. Bemrod Auto Supply Company. These are energetic boys and judging from the volume of business they seemed to be doing when we passed there on Friday, they are destined to become the chief dispensers of our city. Cold Patch knows these lads and wishes for them all the success in the world.

And now comes another reduction in Fords. It is announced in a full page announcement in this edition of the Record News. Truly things are getting on a basis where a poor man can enjoy some of the pleasures of life along with his rich brother.

Victory Motor Company announced a reduction in the price of Oldsmobiles on Friday of this week. Since the announcement Brown has been kept busy caring for the prospects who have come in to get the details of the drop. Many new models are on the floor but if we are anything of a profit they will not remain long with the new price in effect.

Both J. M. and Julian McFall of McFall Brothers were called out of the city on Friday on account of the death of a little niece of theirs in Weatherford, Texas. The condolence of the association is extended to these boys in their sorrow.

We owe Karl Thompson an apology. He did go over the trade territory just as he claimed he was going to do. He had absolutely no motive in mind in taking this trip than to confer with his dealers—we know this because he said so. We take back all we said about "boys will be boys" in a recent issue of Blowouts.

D. L. Fritz announces a sale of a seven-passenger Marmon Touring car to Robert H. Clark of the Model Laundry. H. R. London, who recently joined the Fritz Motor Company forces is credited with the sale.

F. D. Keim went to the country and brought us back some good news. He took several days off this week and visited his dealers in Vernon, Henrietta, Archer City, Electra, Burkburnett and Bowie. F. D. found all the boys in good humor and incidentally received orders for one and one-half carloads of Studebakers. The rise in the price of cotton has helped much of this territory especially the district around Vernon, Bowie and Archer City.

L. L. Dixon and his dealers are having a hard time of it, trying to keep a demonstrator in the new Buick Four, which is causing quite a bit of talk in auto circles as well as among prospective buyers. "Dick" tells a story of J. F. Robertson of Electra. It seems that Mr. Robertson left Wichita Falls with a new Four to be used as a demonstrator at Electra. When he drove into Iowa Park, a man ran out and hailed him and asked him if that was the new Buick Four. Robertson confessed that it was and after looking it over, it was paid for in cash and Robertson sent on his way on foot.

Charlie Nolen of Nolen-Stringer Company announces the sale of a four passenger Haynes 45 Touring to A. C. Walker. The used car business has also been unusually active this week according to Charlie.

Hall of the Lloyd Weaver Motor Company says that things are certainly picking up. Since the announced reduction in Hudson and Essex cars there have been more The Essex went to J. M. Allen, U. S. prospects in the salesrooms than in a long time. Three Essex and one Hudson were sold during the week. Marshall to G. F. Jarrett and to Clifford Mooers, president of the Burk Gas Company of Burkburnett. The Hudson went to Earnest Jones of this city.

MAXWELL SETS ANOTHER NEW ENDURANCE MARK

With the low and intermediate gears removed, and carrying three passengers, a Maxwell stock car traveled 565 miles over mountain and through mud valleys without trouble of any kind.

The famous Turtle Creek Hill just out of Pittsburgh, the Summit Mountain at Uniontown, and the Laurel Mountains at Elkins were included in the trip.

Mr. T. L. Cordray, general manager of the Hall Garage Company, Inc., Maxwell-Chalmers distributors at Fairmont, personally supervised the trip, driving the car himself most of the time.

"Rainy weather had made the roads very bad," says Mr. Cordray, "but the Maxwell went through without trouble of any kind, covering the entire 565 miles on 31 1-2 gallons of gasoline; an average of 18 miles to the gallon.

"The test not only proved the goodness of the Maxwell, but confirms the opinion of all Maxwell owners that it is a remarkably economical car.

"At its new price the Maxwell is indeed fulfilling the promises of the new organization behind it.

"They said they would make a car so good that its value could not remain for a moment in question. Not only have they done this but they have thrice reduced the price while making these improvements."

NEW LAW IN EFFCET ON ARIZONA HIGHWAYS

TUCSON, Ariz., Sept. 3—The new highway travel law now is in effect in Arizona, but there is no evidence of its enforcement at any point. It provides that all vehicles must carry a light at night, that headlights must throw a beam rising not over forty-two inches from the roadway, that cutouts must not extend downwards to the possible injury of the roadbed, that no unusual noises shall be made and that a person who drives from an accident in which he participated may be guilty of a felony.

GAS SUPPLY PROBLEM LESS SERIOUS NOW

In spite of the fact that motor fuel is comparatively cheap and plentiful at the present still, nevertheless the fuel problem still exists and will hold up its head again. In these circumstances the car owner will be glad to know that there is no likelihood that motor fuel will ever run out. Even if our supply of petroleum ran suddenly dry there would still be hope, and here is the story:

Get More Power.

Our so-called gasoline of today contains much of what formerly went into kerosene. Undoubtedly, further improvement along this line will be perfected, so that our annual supply of gasoline will be increased, even though the production of crude oil should fall off. In the second place, by employing more extensively devices for heating the motor's fuel on its way to the combustion chamber we can get more power from the gas; in other words make a given quantity do more work.

But even supposing that in spite of all efforts our gasoline supply should prove inadequate to our needs, still there remain certain alternative fuels which will serve to keep the motors of America turning. To begin with, we have kerosene and distillate, derivatives of crude oil, which are in some use now as motor fuel. From coal we get bensole and "coal gas," which have the great advantages of being derived from a base independent of crude oil. This applies also to alcohol, which we get from a number of sources. Finally, we may utilize steam as the direct active power, employing kerosene or another heavier fuel to generate it.

Few Changes.

To utilize kerosene as an engine fuel no essential change in design of our present motors would have to be made. Certain minor details would have to be altered, a different carburetor would have to be installed and some efficient method of preheating the fuel would have to be universally used. Kerosene carburetors are already a practical development and it only needs a sufficient demand to produce scores of these instruments efficient enough to meet the demands. Distillate is much used on the Pacific coast, particularly by motor trucks. Crude oil is the ordinary fuel of engines of the Diesel type, and possibly the future may hold some development along these lines for the automobile field.

The great advantage of the fuels deriving from coal is prodigious supply of that base which is now in sight. Whereas, the present known supply of crude oil at the present rate of consumption will be exhausted in less than twenty years, the coal supply is almost unlimited.

High In Cost.

Bensole at the present time in this country is prohibitively high in cost. This is a by-product of coal, resulting in the manufacture of anilines, coke, etc. When we have developed our dye making industry to the point that Germany's was before the war, we shall have bensole in plenty, but to use up coal to make bensole alone makes the cost of the latter prohibitive.

In England, where every drop of gasoline that can be imported is needed to drive the machines of war and commerce, they are using with much success coal gas as motor fuel. This is carried in ungainly canvas and rubber containers, which are not ornamental, to put it mildly. Recently there has appeared a new type of container taking the form of sausage shaped cylinders, carried on the running board. They hold an amount of gas equal to about two gallons of liquid gasoline. This is a totally new development and there is no question that with experience the containers will be made more sightly, in fact methods of compressing the gas may be found so that it will make it just as easy to use as liquid fuels.

No carburetor is used in feeding the coal gas to the center. The inlet manifold is generally tapped for the gas supply and the aid is taken in through the regular passages. A control is provided that must be manipulated according to the needs of the engine, and when the latter is stopped the gas must be shut off. Provision is made to prevent backfiring and ignition of the gas in the container. Among the advantages accruing from the use of coal gas is the fact that there is no danger of this fuel mixing with the lubricating oil, as sometimes happens with gasoline. Also, the coal gas leaves no watery deposit and carbon deposits are much less, in fact this trouble is practically eliminated.

The ordinary engine of today will burn coal gas without a whimper and it only remains to develop satisfactory means of carrying it to have an alternate fuel, beyond reach of fluctuations of the crude oil supply.

Also Alcohol.

And there still remains alcohol, which can be produced in almost limitless quantities from a variety of sources—wood, grain and vegetables. The fuel has certain decided disadvantages among which is the rapidity with which it evaporates. To use it, changes would have to be made in our present engines, compression would have to be increased and other alterations made. But, nevertheless, alcohol is a possible fuel that must be taken into consideration in any discussion of the fuel problem.

From all this it appears that we have almost unlimited resources of motor fuel, even in the unlikely event that the gasoline supply should run short. With motoring on its present plane of an economic and social necessity, there is no need to cry over the danger of our being left motorless in a cold world.

PLEASED WITH MARMON AFTER LONG SERVICE

"My Marmon 34 is the first car of high grade quality which I have ever possessed," writes W. W. Hibbard, of Rochester, member of New York Stock Exchange, "although it is the fifth in line of manufacture since I began to operate an automobile; but I cannot conceive of greater perfection than is contained in the make-up of the Thirty-four. I am driving this car for the fifth summer, having covered about 55,000 miles, and I am particularly impressed just at this time because I have just completed a trip of over 2,500 miles during the month of July, and I want to say to you that I did not touch the engine during the entire trip, except to oil it and inspect it carefully, and of course, keep it in the usual careful condition I try to keep it in.

"This perfect performance is, of course, due to a very great extent to the excellence of the manufacture, but much of the pleasure of driving on this trip was due to the splendid condition in which you put it just before I left. Unless some unheard of construction is produced, I shall never contemplate or desire to drive any other car than a Marmon, and I hope I shall be able to have a new one next year."

The letter referred to was received by Paul LeHardy, Marmon distributor for Rochester, N. Y., on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of his organization.

OWNERS OF OVERLANDS BOOST CARS

It is sometimes said that the modern automobile owner has lived by the time when he sits about with his friends and boasts of the performance of his car. Those who hold to this view are inclined to say, "Oh! the automobile owner of today just drives along without a thought as to what his car is doing."

But manufacturers' experience does not show that this is the true situation. The Willys-Overland Company, manufacturers of the Overland and Willys-Knight motor cars, have found in a compilation of their records that the number of testimonials received in the past six months from owners is far in excess of any similar period in the history of the company.

It has been found that owners, especially those who use their cars in touring, or to save the cost of railroad fares, are costs prone today than ever before to keep careful record of the costs of operation of their cars. And they are also forming the habit of telling the manufacturer just what their car is doing.

A letter received this month is a typical example of the letters being sent in daily. It is from W. L. Taylor, president of the United Federal Securities Company of Davenport, Iowa. In this letter after stating that the Willys-Knight car discussed was purchased in July, 1920, being a Model 20, Mr. Taylor says:

"We have driven our car over 13,000 miles, still using the original tires that came with it, and this mileage includes a trip this summer to New England and return.

"On our return trip we had three adult passengers and 225 pounds of baggage. For my own information I kept a strict account of the gasoline, oil and water consumed on the return trip, nearly 1,400 miles.

"On the excellent roads of Massachusetts and New York, we averaged 20 miles to the gallon of gas. On the entire trip, which included nearly 250 miles of detours in Michigan and Illinois, over bad roads and through fields, we made an average of 18.5 miles per gallon of gas. We used 12 quarts of oil, which included one complete drainage and refilling of the crank case. The radiator consumed four gallons of water. At no time during the entire trip did the motometer show any signs of a heated motor.

"Our motor developes considerably more power now than when the car was new, and I am fully convinced that the motor improves with use. In all my experience I have never seen an automobile engine of a similar size that would equal the "Willys-Knight Motor in power."

DEPENDABILITY IN DODGE CARS FOLLOWS COST

"Potential buyers of automobiles today are asking themselves a great many more questions than formerly and the question—"What comes after the purchase price?"—is receiving more consideration today than ever before," said J. M. McFall of McFall Brothers, Dodge Brothers dealers for Wichita Falls and vicinity.

"While there is no question but what the dollar will buy more in automobile comfort, appearance and reliability today than ever before in the automobile industry yet the potential buyer looks farther and wants to know what follows the purchase of the car of his choice. And this question can only be answered by the past performances of the car itself.

"For the past month there has appeared in the newspapers, over our signature, the advertisement 'What comes after the purchase price?' and we have left it to the more than 600,000 owners of Dodge Brothers motor cars to answer. We have left it to the farmer operating his Dodge Brothers car over rough country roads, we have left it to the merchant using his Dodge Brothers business car to solve his delivery problem, and we have left it to 'just folks' who use their Dodge Brothers car for business, for pleasure, and for economy. They are the ones who can answer the question 'What comes after the purchase price?' with the strong conviction born of favorable experence and satisfied ownership. The question of dependability was one which Dodge Brothers asked themselves when they first started to manufacture the car which bears their name nearly seven years ago, and which they answered by building into the car the vital factor of dependability of operation under all conditions.

"Judging from the shortage of Dodge Brothers car which we have been experiencing for quite some time now," said Mr. McFall, "there are many automobile buyers who have answered the question of 'What comes after the purchase price' in a manner satisfactory to themselves."

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

To the Automobile Editor:

Answer.—One reason for opening the petcocks to see if all the cylinders are firing. The other is to study the color of the flame to see if the carbureter is giving the right mixture. A red flame, particularly if there is black smoke from the exhaust, shows too rich a mistuxe. A very light blue, almost colorless flame shows too much air (too lean a mixture.) The correct mixture gives a reddish-blue flame. But a multiple cylinder engine is apt to miss in one or more cylinders if it is run throttle down as a large quantity of the burnt gas remains in the cylinders and there is not enough fresh mixture admitted to explode. This is aggravated by opening the petrocks, as fresh air is sucked in on the admission stroke, diluting the mixture still more. If some cylinders are observed to be missing, open the throttle and speed up the engine. This will usually bring them all to life. If one or more fail to fire under these conditions they are missing explosions and the cause should be sought in the ignition or fuel systems or, more rarely, in the compression.

To the Automobile Editor:

Could you be going down a steep hill in second speed and have your foot all the way in on the clutch? E. M.

Answer—This will prevent the engine from working as a brake and so defeat its purpose. The rear wheels drive the gears and the gears drive the engine through the clutch. If the foot is pressed on the clutch pedal the connection is broken and the car will run free, requiring the use of the brake. The object in using the gears and the engine is to save the brakes. It also gives you another and very reliable way to control the speed of the car.

To the Automobile Editor:

Would it be advisable to keep your foot all the way in on the clutch going down a steep hill? J. M.

Answer—If you are only going a short distance this may be done, the car speed being controlled by the brake, or the gears may be shifted to neutral and the left foot removed from the clutch pedal. If the gears are to be used as a brake, the clutch pedal must not be touched while this is being done. See answere to E. M. above.

To the Automobile Editor:

What is the fastest and most powerful and enduring automobile? B. M.

Answer—The World would not attempt to answer this. It is probably open to argument, which The World will keep out of.

To the Automobile Editor:

The clutch pedal on my Ford car does not come back poperly so as to go into high speed. I have to hook my toe under it to pull it back and am afraid of hitting something, as I cannot always get it back in time. How can this be remedied? A. S. A.

Answer—The low speed band is badly worn, requiring the pedal to be pushed too far forward to operate it. This can be easily adjusted from the outside of the transmission case. It is on the right side, secured by a lock nut. Loosen the nu tand turn the adjustment in until the pedal operates properly. Then remember to set up the lock nut as tight as you can.

RENT PAYERS HERE NUMBER 8 HUNDREDS

It has been estimated by taking the average opinion of several local real estate men that there are 800 rent houses in Wichita Falls out of something like 4,600 dwelling houses of all kinds and descriptions and that these 800 rent payers pay to their respective landlords something like $36,000 every month.

Of course these figures are necessarily not accurate to the "nth" degree nor have the statistics been figured out by a house to house canvas, but they are thought to be as accurate as can be determined without an extensive survey.

The amount of rent paid out each month by the tenants has been figured on a basis of $40 a month, this amount being estimated as being the average. There are numerous small houses on which the rent is as low as $15 and $20 a month but the houses which are rented at $65 and $75 a month raise the average figure considerably, real estate men say.

A small percentage of the houses now being rented were built for the purpose of letting them out to tenants, real estate men say, the majority being built for homes and later sold to people owning several houses or being turned back on account of failure to discharge the indebtedness. Unfortunately, they say, this latter condition is found in a good many cases in the past year. Part of the houses now being rented are owned by non-residents, they having removed from the city for various reasons.

Wichita Falls can well be proud of the large proportion of citizens who own their own homes, one real estate man said. The fact that the percentage of renters is as low as it is is seen in the organization of building and loan associations and the attitude of local financial institutions and material dealers who make the burden as light as possible on the couples who desire to build their own home.

DURANT PUTS STOP TO SEVERAL RUMORS

DETROIT, Sept. 3.—That Durant Motors, Inc., have not changed their plans regarding locating a plant in Flint was the response of W. C. Durant, president of the corporation, to a query sent him by a Flint newspaper. His reply says:

"On January 18 last, I wired the citizens of Flint as follows:

"'You may rest assured that one of the plants or Durant Motors will be located in Flint.' Nothing has developed since that teelgram was written and nothing is likely to develop to change the plans of Durant Motors, Inc., in so far as those plans apply to the city of Flint."

FORD SETS HIGH RECORD OF OUTPUT

317,587 CARS AND TRUCKS PRODUCED IN THE LAST QUARTER.

DETROIT, Sept. 3.—The production of cars and trucks at American plants of the Ford Motor Company for May, June and July exceeded that for any similar period in the company's history, according to an announcement made today. The total output for the quarter reached 317,587 cars and trucks, a monthly average of 105,862.

"The exact output of the American plants for July was 107,149 cars and trucks," the announcement says. "This figure is somewhat lower than was anticipated at an early date, but July 4 when the Highland Park plant and Ford plants throughout the country were closed, meant a loss to the month's record of somewhat more than 4,000 cars and trucks.

"There are twenty-seven working days in August, and it is expected that June's record of building 108,962 will be eclipsed. June was the highest month in production the company has so far experienced and there are possibilities that August will establish a higher figure. The schedule for August calls for 109,700 cars and trucks.

"The highest daily production figure was set on July 14, when the output reached 4,461 cars and trucks.

"Foreign plants showed increasing capacity in July, especially in European countries. The outlook in the automobile industry in Europe is the most encouraging it has been for six months."

TALK NOW ABOUT BOOSTING PRICES

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—No further price reductions in automobiles were forthcoming the past week. The names of a few contemplating such a move have been mentioned, but it is doubtful if announcements will be made before the first of September.

Strange enough, while there is talk of further reductions there also begins to be heard in trade quarters talk of an increase in prices by several manufacturers on or after January 1.

RADIATOR CLEANER.

A very good compound for cleaning the radiator is made as follows: Dissolve as much concentrated lye as a quart of water will hold. Drain a little water out of the radiator and pour in the lye solution. Run the engine for fifteen minutes. Drain the lye solution out and flush the water system out half a dozen times, or until all traces of the lie are removed.

SEDAN SCREENS.

To obviate dust and dirt getting into the sedan or similar closed cars during warm weather it is a good plan to get a screen of fine mesh wire, commonly used in Pullmans, over the lower half of the window.

LINCOLN

MOTOR CARS

It was not especially surprising at the outset that motorists were disposed to regard the representations concerning the LINCOLN car as perhaps a little enthusiastic. With the several fine cars with which they were familiar, it was naturally difficult for them to conceive it possible to evolve a car of even more compelling appeal. And it is quite gratifying that our own estimates of the LINCOLN are abundantly substantiated by the expressions from owners.

I am frank to say that I considered the preliminary advertising of this car to be considerably overdrawn; and perhaps the best way for me to express my feelings about the car, now that I have become the owner of one, is to say that it is in all respects as advertised.

I have owned other cars of similar type, and also one of the best built cars in America, and I have been entirely satisfied with their performance. But nevertheless I find something about the LINCOLN—a certain smoothness, quicker acceleration, easy riding, a correct braking system—which in my mind puts it in a class by itself.

LINCOLN

Remarkable claims were made in the preliminary advertising of the LINCOLN. After having owned a LINCOLN touring car for about six months, during which time I have driven it 6,500 miles, part of which has been over some of the roughest roads in California, I want to say that it is absolutely all that the factory and distributors claimed it to be.

SPLASH SYSTEM OF AUTO LUBRICATION IS SIMPLEST

By ALBERT N. ATKINSON.

The simplest way to oil the working parts of an engine is to provide a pool at the bottom into which the connecting rods can dip. As they revolve they spatter the oil in all directions, making a perfect mist which reaches all parts in the interior of the engine; the main bearing of the crank-shaft, the upper and lower ends of the connecting rods, the cam shaft and the lower ends of the cylinders. The action here is more direct, as the oil is actually picked up and thrown into the cylinders. A great deal of it flows back into the pool by its own weight and part of it is pushed out by the piston as it descends, but enough remains for purposes of lubrication. It is caught in the piston rings and carried up to the top of the cylinders, being spread in a thin film over their entire surface. With the adddition of a few more details the system will be complete.

An open oil hole must be placed above each bearing so as to catch the oil and lead in into the bearing. Grooves are cut in the soft metal leading, from the oil holes so as to distribute the oil to every part of the bearing. The surplus oil drains out, carrying any dirt with it. There is usually a small metal projection or fin, called a splasher, pointing downward from the connecting rod cap to assist in picking up the oil. Sometimes a hole is placed in this fin or near it in the cap, so that the oil is forced up into the bearing from below. The connecting rod should merely tuch the surface of the oil. If it dips at all deeply the cylinder will be flooded with oil and badly carbonized. The wrist pin in the piston is made hollow to save weight, but it also plays a part in the lubricating system, as it collects a small amount of oil and serves as a reservoir in case the supply from the bottom should temporarily run low. A series of partitions must be run across the pool at the bottom between the connecting rods, so that the oil will not run to one end on a hill. Of course some means must be provided for filling the base with fresh oil. Usually the breathing tube serves for this purpose. A drain plug must be located at the lowest point of the bottom so that all the old oil can be removed when it is used up. A guage to show the height of the oil is necessary so that the driver can tell when more oil is needed and how much. Usually two try-valves are provided. Oil is poured in until it flows out of the upper one. In use the oil burns up and evaporates so that it will no longer flow from the upper outlet, but as long as the lower one has oil the engine is reasonably safe. If no oil flows from the lower one the level is too low and more must be added immediately, as there is danger of burning out the bearings or having a seized piston.

Such a system will work satisfactorily so long as the engine is kept filled with oil, but it requires frequent attention. The oil level is constantly falling, giving less and less oil to the cylinders, so that if neglected too long trouble will follow. Some of the early cars using this system had an oil box on the dash with a hand pump. Whenever the driver happened to think of it he forced in some more oil. But if he didn't happen to think of it!!——

As worked out on the Ford car this system has proved to be satisfactory. The housing back of the engine serves as a reservoir. The fly-wheel dips deeply into this and as it revolves throws the oil in all direction. There is a small funnel conventionlly located which catches some of this and leads it forward through a long tube to the front of the engine, where it falls into the timing gears. It then passes down to the bottom of the crank case, usually called the oil base, and runs into a series of troughs, one under each connecting rod. This is necessary, as the continued splashing would soon empty them. The oil flows in faster than necessary and the surplus runs back into the tank under the fly-wheel and is used over again.

The oil gradually deteriorates in use, due to scorching, evaporation, carbon working down by the pistons, dust from the road and general wearing out. Every 1,000 miles it should be removed, the case flushed with kerosene and the engine run a few seconds—not over 15 or 20—under its own power. Then open the drain plug with the engine still running but stop as soon as the kerosene stops flowing freely. Our object is to splash as much of the kerosene as possible out of the troubles, but not to run the engine too long on kerosene, as it is not a lubricant. Now let stand a minute or so until most of the drip has stopped and then replace the plug and fill up to the upper try-valve with fresh cylinder oil. On the Ford car this will require just one gallon.

The proper test for valve tappet adjustment is to have the engine as hot as possible without overheating. If there is the slightest possible click or the valve lifter can spin between the fingers the adjustment is correct. If there is a decided click the adjustment is too lose. If the lifter is tight it may be holding the valve open. This may be tested for loss of compression by the use of the starting handle. Open all the petcocks except the one on that cylinder and crank by hand. If there is a good resistance due to compression there is nothing to be feared. If there is little or no resistance the lifter should be adjusted and the compression tested again.

Watch for lost motion in the steering mechanism and have it attended to. Few drivers realize how much their safety depends on the steering gears. If the lost motion in the steering wheel is found to be increasing rapidly one of the ball and socket joints of the drag link is coming loose and will soon fet go. Stop the car immediately and investigate. It is easily tightened with a large screwdriver. Set it up as tight as you can and secure it with a long cotton pin or piece of wire.

AUTO WHEELS LEAD MARCH TO NORMALCY

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 3.—The automobile industry continues to demonstrate that it is the leader in the march back to normalcy, the past week witnessing no let-up in production.

Discussing a statement from the Automobile Chamber of Commerce, which places passenger car and truck production for the second quarter of 1921 as 87 per cent of that for a similar period of 1920, the record production year, one allowance for elimination of the export business in 1921, production for the period of this year was practically equal to that of a year ago, which he adds "is not true of any other larger industry.

Eighty Per Cent.

Hupmobiles is credited with having delivered in the first seven months of this year more than 80 per cent as many cars as in a like period one year ago.

Dodge Brothers is credited with midsummer production of 500 cars a day, or practically 100 per cent capacity; the Studebaker corporation with a production in April, May and June of 89 per cent greater than a year ago. Demand for the Packard car has doubled since July 1, it is said, while the Cadillac is turning out its normal allotment of eighty cars daily.

The Hudson company has produced and sold upword of 3,000 cars in July, and has orders for a greater number in August; Paige-Detroit is making and selling approximately 1000 cars a month. The Nash company is turning out about 130 cars daily. The Ford company is far behind on orders, although 4,000 cars are being produced daily. The Buick company at Flint is making 500 cars daily, while the Chevrolet has been forced to run nights and Sundays to scupply the demand for its product.

Convincing Proof.

Activities of these plants furnish convincing evidence that any manufacturer with a good product properly priced can even in these times find a market for his cars.

Not only are present conditions betetr than had been hoped for, but indications continue to develop and multiply to forecast a reasonably active fall and winter in the automobile industry in Detroit and other centers of automotive manufacture. Reports from factories and sales organizations continue optimistic.

Not the least hopeful among the more recent statements are those from the parts and accessories manufacturers. When the shutdown in production came, many motor car makers were caught with large stocks of parts on hand and the parts makers were the first to feel the depression. All during the summer months when the motor car companies were using up the material on hand, the parts makers stood idle. Now they are showing signs of activity, some reporting more orders than they can fill.

Closed cars for the winter market and new models are responsible for this activity to a large extent. The Fisher Body Company reports its production capacity entirely covered by orders for closed bodies and other body manufacturers in Detroit, Lansing and Cleveland report equally good prospects.

Soon in Market.

With these conditions prevailing the automotive industry is doing a fair share toward the returning of all industrial conditions toward normal. With the manufacturers again active, they will soon be entering the market for more raw material.

Those familiar with the truck situation see signs of improvement. This branch of the motor business suffered to a certain extent by the reimportation of motor trucks shipped to Europe during the war, but it is said that this supply will soon be absorbed, while the quickening of the general business pulse has already been begun to increase the demand for heavy duty vehicles.

Students of the business early in the summer never failed to lament the apparent lack of purchasing power in the country. This power, they now declare, is now everywhere in evidence. The response which followed general price reductions has not died out, as many manufacturers expected, but appears to be of a stable, lasting character. It is because most manufacturers expected the stimulus to flare up and then died down that many are now behind with deliveries—they under-estimated the demand and are frankly surprised to see it continue.

Will Continue.

That this purchasing power will continue, is indicated, students declare, by agricultural conditions. The South reports prosperity; agricultural business in the West and Middle West is reported exceeding expectations, while the increasing momentum of manufacture in the East promises a return of buying power in that territory.

The buying power of the farmer is already reflected in the hub of the auto industry. President Harry M. Jewett of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company reports that fully 70 per cent of the orders now coming in are from the rural districts. Previously the great majority of new business came from the city buyers.

And not only does this return toward normal business increase the passenger car output, but it also makes certain the improvement in commercial vehicle manufacture. The movement of crops and merchandise is dependent more and more upon motor truck transportation, and with increased commercial activity and in the returning of large crops the truck manufacturers see the proof of their oft-repeated statement that the truck industry is yet in its infancy.

Wheel Bearing Adjustments.

The wheels of the car should be jacked up once a month and tested for smoothness of operation and for side play. If a sharp click is heard when spinning the front wheel, or if its motion is momentarily checked, it is possible that one of the balls or rollers is broken or split. In this case the pieces should be removed at once and a new bearing substituted. In the case of ball bearings, regarding may be resorted to.

RUBBER CEMENT.

When rubber cement has stood exposed to the air even for a short time it becomes so thick that it does not give good result in application. Many motorists thin cement with gasoline, but the ordinary grades of gasoline contain considerable oil, which has a decidedly adverse action on the cement. High test gasoline or bisulphate of carbon is best to use for thinning.

NOTES FOR MOTORISTS

The remedy for squeaks is oil, the only trouble being to find out where to put it. By jouncing your weight on the running board the general location may be determined and then it is a matter of forcing oil in with a heavy oil gun until it is stopped. Friction between the body and the frame, mud guards, springs and springs clips, tire carrier, hood, radiator supports and many other places will cause a noise. Squirt oil into all the likely places and most of the unlikely places and you will finally stop it.

While cleaning the gearset or differential and long-handled paint brush will be found useful for reaching grease and dirt which have stuck to the sides of the case and are not reached by the kerosene. Get what the painters call a sash tool. It can also be used in cleaning dust and dirt out of corners, around the springs and other places.

Keep close watch on your engine for misfiring by using the muffler cut-out or the compression cocks, if equipped. Otherwise short circuit the plugs with a screwdriver. A missing cylinder not only loses power

IMPAIRED FUEL FEED.

It is a fact that a deep dent in the gasoline pipes may so restrict the flow of fuel that the action of the carburetor will be impaired and misfiring and general erratic behavior will result. In some cases a too abrupt, upward bend in the fuel line will permit the formation of air pockets, interfering with the flow of fuel. Trouble in both of these cases will be likely to develop at high speed. If a trap in the fuel line is alleged to fill up with foreign matter trouble will follow through restriction of the gasoline flow. Twice a season, anyway

CHANDLER CHIEFS ARE OPTIMISTIC

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 3.—Directors of the Chandler Motor Car Company meet for divided action early in September, and the dominant interests in the board state that no change will be made in the $6 annual rate now prevailing.

Earnings at present are running at a rate sufficient to cover dividend charges, and the manner in which retail sales have picked up the past few weeks encourage the belief that the third quarter will show a good volume of production.

RUST PREVENTATIVE.

While the usual mediums for preventing rusting of the rims are shellac and graphite, it is possible to use beeswax in this connection with very satisfactory results. The rims should be heated slightly with a blow-torch and the beeswax should be rubbed on while they are still warm.

Have Your Motor Cylinders Ground

—Nearly all medium and low-priced motor cars, and all motor trucks, are equipped with bored cylinders. After a short time the bored cylinder shows an uneven inner surface and things begin to happen to your car. A waste of oil and gas and frequent visits to the repair shop are the consequences. Re-boring of the cylinders gives only a temporary relief and the trouble soon returns.

Your Cylinder Must Be Bored Straight

—To obtain the proper compression in your motor, for you cannot fit correctly machined rings into an oval-shaped hole. Illfitting rings cause gas leakage, make the motor skip and the gas will eventually reach the crank case, rendering the oil useless. This often happens to new bored cylinders as well as to worn ones—the bored cylinder has too many inaccuracies to be dependable. It is a fact, accepted by the best automobile manufacturers and expert mechanics, that grinding is the only solution. It gives the cylinder a perfect inner surface —no chance for warping or damaging friction, but promotes the smooth action and the long life of your car.

Have Your Cylinders Tested

—All the leading motor factories have modern grinding machines, such as ours, having found from experience that the bored cylinder is a trouble breeder. If your car is giving you trouble—using too much oil and gas, producing a rattling that you can't account for put it up to your garage man, let him test your cylinders and he will send them to us to be put in perfect condition. We are prepared to turn your crank-shaft bearings, furnish pistons, rings and pins and fit your pistons.

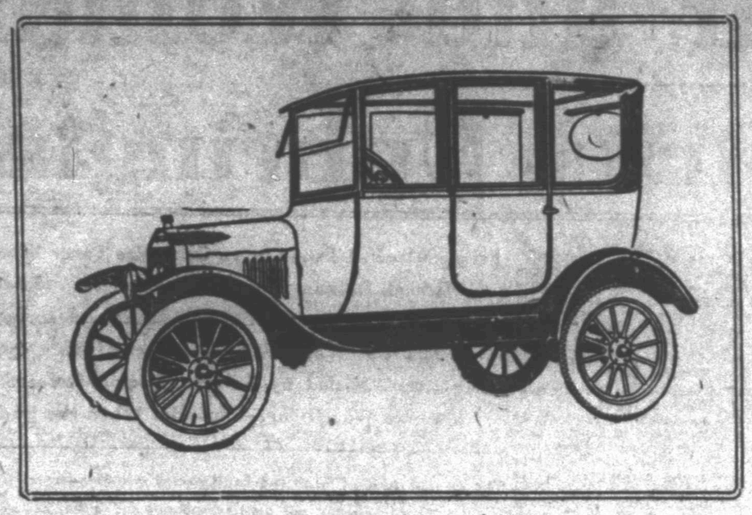

Any garage man will tell you that there is no comparison between the bored cylinder and one that is PROPERLY GROUND

—The grinding machine used by us has the endorsement of, and is sued by all the leading factories in the country. Owners of pleasure cars, Tractors, Trucks, and Airplanes can save money and motor troubles by using our method of grinding. Phone us for any information you may desire about our grinding process. The expense is small.

Imperious Victoria, Queen and Woman

How EDWARD VII Balked Strict Upbringing

Prince Had Deep-seated Repugnance to Every Form of Mental Exertion—Wept When He Read Remarkable Rules Drawn By His Parents For His Education.—Victoria Very Angry With Him and Father Keenly Disappointed.—Father Caught Fatal Chill on Journey to Cambridge University to Reprimand Him.

Prince Albert, Likened to an Operatice Tenor When First Married, Became More Like a Butler in Middle Age.—Was Unhappy in Strange Land and Developed a Mania for Work, Which Snapped His Strength.—Victoria, Misled by Favored Doctor, Refused to Believe He Was Dying.—Shrieked When the End Came.

All the capitals of Europe can furnish tales of gayeties of Victoria's eldest son (Edward VII) when he was Prince of Wales. Incognito he traveled over the Continent in manifold adventures and choosing the smart sets for his comradeship. At home he bestowed his attentions on many beautiful women, including Mrs. Langtry, and patronized the sporting set.

How different Victoria and Prince Albert would have had his life is shown in the extract below from Mr. Strachey's book, "Queen Victoria," which has created a sensation on both sides of the Atlantic.

Mr. Strachey has had access to the secret documents on Victoria's life preserved in he British Museum. He has seen not only her letters and journal and letters of others concerned, but the suppressed memoirs of persons who were in position to know the inner secrets of the court.

Prince of Wales at Age of Three.

By LYTTON STRACHEY
(Author of "Eminent Victorians")

A family of nine must be, in any circumstances, a grave responsibility; and Prince Albert realized to the full how much the high destinies of his offspring intensified the need of parental care. It was inevitable that he should believe profoundly in the importance of education; he himself had been the product of education; Baron Stockmar had made him what he was; it was for him, in his turn, to be a Stockmar—to be even more than a Stockmar—to the young creatures he had brought into the world.

These considerations, of course, applied pre-eminently to the education of the Prince of Wales (the future Edward VII). How tremendous was the significance of every particle of influence which went to the making of the future King of England! Albert set to work with a will.

But, watching with Victoria the minutest details of the physical, intellectual, and moral training of his children, he soon perceived, to his distress, that there was something unsatisfactory in the development of his eldest son. The Princess Royal was an extremely intelligent child; but Bertie, though he was good-humored and gentle, seemed to display a deep-seated repugnance to every form of mental exertion.

This was most regretable, but the remedy was obvious; the parental efforts must be redoubled; instruction must be multiplied, not for a single instant must the educational pressure be allowed to relax. Accordingly, more tutors were selected, the curriculum was revised, the timetable of studies was re-arranged, elaborate memoranda dealing with every possible contingency were drawn up.

It was above all essential that there should be no slackness; "work," said the Prince, "must be work." And work indeed it was. The boy grew up amid a ceaseless round of paradigms, syntactical exercises, dates genealogical tables, and lists of Capes. Constant notes flew backwards and forwards between the Prince, the Queen, and the tutors, with inquirie, with reports of progress, with detailed recommendations; and these notes were all carefully preserved for future reference.

Even Play-Times Supervised by Precise Father.

It was, besides, vital that the heir of the throne should be protected from the slightest possibility of contamination from the outside world. The Prince of Wales was not as other boys; he might, occasionally, be allowed to invite some sons of the nobility, boys of good character, to play with him in the garden of Buckingham Palace; but his father presided, with alarming precision, over their sports.

In short, every possible precaution was taken, every conceivable effort was made. Yet, strange to say, the object of all this vigilance and solicitude continued to be unsatisfactory—appeared, in fact, to be positively growing worse. It was certainly very sad; the more lessons that Bertie had to do, the less he did them; and the more carefully he was guarded against excitements and frivolities, the more desirous of mere amusement he seemed to become.

Albert was deeply grieved and Victoria was sometimes very angry; but grief and anger produced no more effect than supervision and timetables. The Prince of Wales, in spite of everything, grew up into manhood without the faintest sign of "adherence to and perseverance in the plan both of studies and life—as one of the Royal memoranda put it—which had been laid down with such extraordinary forethought by his father.

For certaintly the Prince of Wales did not take after his father. Victoria's prayer had been unanswered, and with each succeeding year it became more obvious that Bertie was a true scion of the House of Brunswick. But these evidences of innate characteristics only served to redouble the efforts of his parents; it still might not be too late to incline the young branch, by ceaseless pressure and careful fastenings, to grow in the proper direction.

Everything was tried. The boy was sent on a continental tour with a picked body of tutors, but the results were unsatisfactory. At his father's request he kept a diary which, on his return, was inspected by the Prince. It was found to be distressingly meager: what a multitude of highly interesting reflections might have been arranged under the heading: "The First Prince of Wales visiting the Pope!" But there was not a single one.

"The young Prince pleases everyone," old Metternich reported to Guizot, "but he has an air embarrassed and very sad."

On his seventeenth birthday, a memorandum was drawn up over the names of the Queen and the Prince informing their eldest son that he was now entering upon the period of manhood and directing him henceforward to perform the duties of a Christian gentleman.

Bertie's Tears Flowed When He Read Rules.

"Life is composed of duties," said the memorandum, "and in the due, punctual and cheerful performance of them the true Christian, true soldier, and true gentleman is recognized. * * * A new sphere of life will open for you in which you will have to be taught what to do and what not to do, a subject requiring study more important than any in which you have hitherto been engaged.

On receipt of the memorandum Bertie burst into tears.

At the same time another memorandum was drawn up, headed "confidential: for the guidance of the gentlemen appointed to attend on the Prince of Wales." This long and elaborate document laid down "certain principles" by which the "conduct and demeanor" of the gentlemen were to be regulated "and which it is thought may conduce to the benefit of the Prince of Wales." "The qualities which distinguish a gentleman in society," continued this remarkable paper, "are:

"(1) His appearance, his deportment and dress.

"(3) His desire and power to acquit himself creditably in conversation or whatever is the occupation of the society with which he mixes."

A minute and detailed analysis of these subheadings followed, filling several pages, and the memorandum ended with a final exhortation to the gentlemen:

"If they will duly appreciate the responsibility of their position, and taking the points above laid down as the outline, will exercise their own good sense in acting upon all occasions upon these principles, thinking no point of detail too minute to be important, but maintaining one steady consistent line of conduct they may render essential service to the young Prince and justify the flattering selection made by the royal parents."

A year later the young Prince was sent to Oxford, where the greatest care was taken that he should not mix with the undergraduates. Yes, everything had been tried—everything * * * with one single exception. The experiment had never been made of letting Bertie enjoy himself. But why should it have been? "Life is composed of duties." What possible place could there be for enjoyment in the existence of a Prince of Wales?

Prince Albert suffered a serious loss when in 1857 Baron Stockmar had paid his last visit to England. For twenty years, as he himself said in a letter to the King of Belgians, he had performed "the laborious and exhausting office of a paternal friend and trusted adviser" to the Prince and the Queen. He was seventy; he was tired, physically and mentally; it was time to go. He returned to his home in Coburg, exchanging, once for all, the momentous secrecies of European statecraft for the tittle-tattle of a provincial capital and the gossip of family life.

Apparently, indeed, his "purpose" had been accomplished. By his wisdom, his patience, and his example he had brought about in the fullness of time, the miraculous metamorphosis of which he had dreamed. Prince Albert (who had now assumed the powers of a King) was his creation. An indefatigable toiler, presiding, for the highest ends, over a great nation—that was his achievement; and he looked upon his work and it was good.

But had the Baron no misgivings? Did he never wonder whether, perhaps, he might have accomplished not too little but too much? How subtle and how dangerous are the snares which fate lays for the wariest of men! Albert, certainly, seemed to be everything that Stockmar could have wished—virtuous industrious, persevering, intelligent. And yet—why was it?—all was not well with him. He was sick at heart.

For in spite of everything he had never reached to happiness. His work, for which at last he came to crave with an almost morbid appetite, was a solace and not a cure; the dragon of his dissatisfaction devored with dark relish that ever-growing tribute of laborious days and nights; but it was hungry still.

There was something that he wanted and that he could never get. What was it? Some absolute, some ineffable sympathy? Some extraordinary, some sublime success? Possibly, it was a mixture of both. To dominate and to be understood!

He Strove in Vain to Change Ways of His New Land.

Who could appreciate him in England? The terrible land of his exile loomed before him a fetid, an impregnable mass. How feeble and futile his efforts seemed against the enormous coagulation of dullness, of folly, of slackness of ignorance, of confusions that confronted him! England lumbered on, impervious and self-satisfied, in her old intolerable course. He threw himself across the path of the monster with rigid purpose and set teeth, but he was brushed aside. He believed that he was a failure and he began to despair.

Yet Stockmar had told him that he must "never relax," and he never would. He would go on, working to the utmost and striving for the highest, to the bitter end. His industry grew almost maniacal. More vast grew his correspondence; more searching the examination of the newspapers; the interminable memeranda more punctillious, analytical, and precise. His very recreations became duties.

Victoria noticed that her husband sometimes seemed to be depressed and overworked. She tried to cheer him up. Realizing uneasily that he was still regarded as a foreigner, she hoped that by conferring upon him the title of Prince Consort (1857) she would improve his position to the country. "The Queen has a right to claim that her husband should be an Englishman," she wrote.

But unfortunatery, in spite of the Royal Letters Patent, Albert remained as foreign as before; and as the years passed his dejection deepened. She worked with him, she watched over him, she walked with him through the woods at Osborne, while he whistled to the nightingales, as he had whistled once at Rosenau so long ago.

The handsome youth of twenty years since with the flashing eyes and the soft complexion had grown into a sallow, tired-looking man whose body, in its stoop and its loose fleshiness, betrayed the sedentary laborer, and whose head was quite bald on the top. Unkind critics, who had once compared Albert to an operatic tenor, might have remarked that there was soemthing of the butler about him now.

Beside Victoria, he presented a painful contrast. She, too, was stout, but it was with the plumpness of a vigorous matron; and an eager vitality was everywhere visible—in her energetic bearing, her protruding, inquiring glances, her small, fat, capable, and commanding hands. If only, by some sympathetic magic, she could have conveyed into that portly flabby figure, that desiccated and discouraged brain, a measure of the stamina and the self-assurance which were so pre-eminently hers.

Taste of Death Overwhelmed Queen Victoria.

Shortly afterwards, the Queen underwent, for the first time in her life, the actual experience of close personal loss. Early in 1861 the Duchess of Kent (her mother) was taken seriously ill, and in March she died. The event overwhelmed Victoria. With a morbid intensity, she filled her dairy for pages with minute descriptions of her mother's last hours, her dissolution, and her corpse, interspersed with vehement apostrophes, and the agitated outpourings of emotional reflection.

In the grief of the present the disagreements of the past were totally forgotten. It was the horror and the mystery of Death—Death, present and actual—that seized upon the imagination of the Queen. Her whole being so instinct with vitality recoiled in agony from the grim spectable of the triumph of that awful power.

Before the year was out, a far more terrible blow was to fall upon her. Albert, who had for long been suffering from sleeplessness went on a cold and drenching day toward the end of the November, to inspect the buildings for the new Military Academy at Sandhurst. On his return it was clear that the fatigue and exposure to which he had been subjected, had seriously affected his health. He was attacked by rheumatism and he complained that he felt thoroughly unwell.

Three days later a painful duty obliged him to visit Cambridge. The Prince of Wales, who had been placed at that university in the previous year, was behaving in such a manner that a parental visit and a parental admonition had become necessary. The disappointed father, suffering in mind and body, carried through his task; but, on his return journey to Windsor, he caught a fatal chill.

Prince Averted American War When Near End.

During the next week he gradually grew weaker and more miserable. Yet, repressed and enfeebled as he was, he continued to work. It so happened that at that very moment a grave diplomatic crisis had arisen. Civil war had broken out in America, and it seemed as if England owing to a violent quarrel with the Northern States, was upon the point of being drawn into the conflict.

A severe dispatch by Lord John Russell was submitted to the Queen; and the Prince perceived that, if it was sent off unaltered, war would be the almost inevitable consequence. At seven o'clock on the morning of December 1, he rose from his bed, and with a quavering hand wrote a series of suggestions for the alteration of the draft, by which its language might be softened, and a way left open for a peaceful solution of the question. These changes were accepted by the government, and war was averted. It was the Prince's last memorandum.

He had always declared that he viewed the prospect of death with equanimity. "I do not cling to life," he had once said to Victoria. "You do; but I set no store by it." And then he added: "I am sure, if I had a severe illness, I should give up at once, I should not struggle for life. I have no tenacity of life."

He had judged correctly. Before he had been ill many days he told a friend that he was convinced he would not recover. He sank and sank.

Nevertheless, if his case had been properly understood and skilfully treated from the first, he might conceivably have been saved; but the doctors failed to diagnose his symptoms; and it is noteworthy that his principal physician was Sir James Clark. (Sir James had been kept in his post by Victoria's authority in spite of attacks on him in the Hastings scandal and in spite of errors in other cases.)

When it was suggested that other advice should be taken Sir James pooh-poohed the idea. "There was no cause for alarm," he said. But the strange illness grew worse.

At last, after a letter of fierce remonstrance from Lord Palmerton, Dr. Watson was sent for; and Dr. Watson saw at once that he had come too late. The Prince was in the grip of typhoid fever. "I think that everything so far is satisfactory," said Sir James Clark.

"One cannot speak with certainty; but it is horrible to think that such a life may have been sacrificed to Sir J. Clark's selfish jealousy of every member of his profession," said the Earl of Clarendon to the Duchess of Manchester.

Victoria Refused to Believe Prince Was in Real Peril

Victoria's distress and agitation were great, but she was not seriously frightened. Buoyed up by her own abundant energies, she would not believe that Albert's might prove unequal to the strain. He refused to face such a hideous possibility. She declined to see Dr. Watson. Why should she? Had not Sir James Clark assured her that all would be well?

The Princess Alice tried to tell her the truth, but her hopefulness would not be daunted. On the morning of December 14 Albert, just as she had expected, seemed to be better; perhaps the crisis was over. But in the curse of the day there was a serious relapse. Then at last she allowed herself to see that she was standing on the edge of an appalling gulf. This whole family was summoned, and, one after another the children took a silent farewell of their father.

"It was a terrible moment," Victoria wrote in her diary, "but, thank God! I was able to command myself, and to be perfectly calm, and remained sitting by his side."

For a moment toward the evening she went into another room, but was immediately called back; she saw at a glance that a ghastly change had taken place. As she knelt by the bed, he breathed deeply, breathed gently, breathed at last no more. His features became perfectly rigid; she shrieked one long wild shriek that rang through the terror-stricken castle—and understood that she had lost him forever.

The death of the Prince Consort was the central turning-point in the history of Queen Victoria. She herself felt that her true life had ceased with her husband's, and that the remainder of her days upon earth was of a twilight nature—an epilogue to a drama that was done.

There is a darkness over the latter half of that long career. The first forty-two years of the Queen's life are illuminated by a great and varied quantity of authentic information. With Albert's death a veil descends. Only occasionally, at fitful and disconnected intervals, does it lift for a moment or two; a few main outlines, a few remarkable details may be discerned; the rest is all conjecture and ambiguity.

The sudden removal of the Prince was not merely a matter of overwhelming personal concern to Victoria; it was an event of national, of European importance. He was only forty-two and in the ordinary course of nature he might have been expected to live at least thirty years longer. Had he done so it can hardly be doubted that the whole development of the English polity would have been changed.

Britain Escaped a Contest With Prussian Ideals.

Already at the time of his death he filled a unique place in English public life; already among the inner circle of politicians he was accepted as a necessary and useful part of the mechanism of the state. Lord Clarendon, for instance, spoke of his death as "a national calamity of far greater importance than the public dream of," and lamented the loss of his "sagacity and foresight," which, he declared, would have been "more than ever valuable" in the event of an American war.

influence must have enormously increased. For, in addition to his intellectual and moral qualities, he enjoyed, by virtue of his position, one supreme advantage which every other holder of high office in the country was without; he was permanent. Politicians came and went, but the Prince was perpetually installed at the center of affairs.

It is easy to imagine how, under such a ruler, an attempt might have been made to convert England into a state as exactly organized, as elaborately trained, as efficiently equipped and as autocratically controlled, as Prussia herself. Then perhaps, eventually, under some powerful leader—a Gladstone or a Bright—the democratic forces in the country might have rallied together, and a struggle might have followed in which the Monarchy would have shaken to its foundations.

Or, on the other hand, Disraeli's had always disapproved of exaggerated manifestations of feeling, and her one remaining desire was to do nothing but what he would have wished. Yet there were moments when her royal anguish would brook no restraints. One day she sent for the Duchess of Sutherland, and, leading her to the Prince's room, fell prostrate before his clothes in a flood of weeping, while she adjured the Duchess to tell her whether the beauty of Albert's character had ever been surpassed.

At other times a feeling akin to indignation swept over her. "The poor fatherless baby of eight months" she wrote to the King of the Belgians, "is now the utterly heart-broken and crushed widow of forty-two! My life as a happy one is ended! The world is gone for me! * * *

"Oh! to be cut off in the prime of life—to see our pure, happy, quiet, domestic life, which alone enabled me to bear my much disliked position, cut off at forty-two—when I had hoped with such instinctive certainty that God never would part us, and would let us grow old together (though he always talked of the shortness of life)—is too awful, too cruel!"

The tone of outraged Majesty seems to be discernible. Did she wonder in her heart of hearts how the Deity could have dared?

One of the most bitter episodes of the life of Queen Victoria is related in the extract from Mr. Strachey's book to be printed next Sunday. Her worship of her dead husband caused her to have vast accounts of his activities printed. He was held up as a perfect man to the English people, but they only smiled and shrugged at the picture. For this the Queen held a grudge against her subjects.

Prince of Wales at Age of Seven.

him, tried to console him by declaring with passionate conviction that she would carry on her husband's work. He smiled a sad smile and looked into the fire. Then he murmured that he was going where Albert was—that he would not be long. He lingered for eighteen months, and then, with his pupil, explored the shadow and the dust.

With appalling suddenness Victoria had exclaimed the serene radiance of happiness for the utter darkness of woe. In the first dreadful moments those about her had feared that she might lose her reason, but the iron strain within her held firm, and in the intervals between the intense paroxysms of grief it was observed that the Queen was calm.

She remembered, too, that Albert had always disapproved of exag-

Pipeline runs in the Wichita Falls district varied only a few hundred barrels in the daily averages for the week past, the total for all pools daily averaging between 74,500 and 75,000 barrels. The number of wells brought in is very small, and the total production is inconsiderable, as well.

The daily average runs, by pools, follow:

Burgburnett, all pools, 47,200.
Kemp-Munger-Allen and Iowa Park Shallow, 3,400.
Texhoma and Holliday, Archer county, 1,850.
Petrolia, 380.
Young County, 10,300.

New Sand Feature.

A new deep sand in the shallow pool on the Mattie Parker, seven miles due west of the city of Wichita Falls, and one which is said to give promise of production, constitutes the week's feature in oil developments in the Wichita Falls district. This sand is in the No. 1 Mattie Parker of Goodale, Temple and Key, and was drilled into at 2082 feet. Four feet of sand has been drilled, according to reports, and there is considerable gas in evidence. Preparations are being made to set casing and test, but about a week's delay is expected in the testing.

This new test is about two-thirds of a mile due north from the producers in the 1200-foot sand, and is a couple of thousand feet east of the shallow pool on the S. R. Munden, where Goodale has been operating for several years, and where he has a number of shallow producers.

First Deep Sand.

It is the first deep test to the north of the shallow producers, and is the first to get a deeper oil sand. About a thousand feet to the west, and slightly north, the McPoe Petroleum company drilled a test several months ago, on the Munden, down to 1400 or 1500 feet without results. Other tests across the river have been dry in the 1200 and 1300-foot levels. The Goodale et al test got the shallow sands, which however did not test out productive. Several other tests have been carried down when the 1300-foot sand did not make production, all closer to the line of production. The log of the new test is said to follow the logs of these others down to the 1800-foot depth, but from there on to difer widely.

The testing of this new sand will be watched with interest, particularly since the 1300-foot sand, which showed up splendidly at first, but proved very limited in area of extent.

In the other fields the lack of water is still hampering drilling operations, thus increasing the lethargy brought about by the long market for crude, coupled with the normal hot weather shut-down.

Planet Drilling Another.

The Planet Petroleum is drilling its No. 2 Burnett to go down to the new sixteen hundred foot sand which it opened up in its No. 2 Burnett a couple of weeks ago, and preparations are being made to drill several other tests for this new sand, which has every appearance of being the original North Electra 1600-foot sand. The discovery well is reported to be still making from 80 to 100 barrels natural, without being drilled any deeped into the sand since the day it came in.

Offsetting the new deep well, the Gladiolus company is reported moving on for its No. 26 Burnett. Definite locations for other tests known to be contemplated have not yet been made. The lack of water is reported particularly acute in this South Electra pool, but the threatening weather for the lost several days has given hope that there may be some relief, by rain, within a short time, and companies that had stated they would wait for water are making preparations to resume operations.

Gulf Gets 680 Sand.

In the shallow pool to the east of the Gladiolus, Planet et al companies in South Electra, the Gulf Production company's No. 15 Burnett, Lease A, is reported on the oil sand at 680 feet and preparing to complete. This is the pool opened up a number of months ago by the No. 13 Burnett, Lease A, of the Gulf, the original well getting the sand around 900 feet. Later drilling has developed production from 280, 500 and 600-foot sands, while 1900 and 2,000-foot sands have been drilled that made some production, but which have not really had a satisfactory test.

Old Wells Deepened.

Several old producers in the shallow sands have been drilled deeper recently by the Magnolia Petroleum company with fair results, in the old Electra field. The No. 16 Cross Brown is reported a 35-barrel well drilled down to the 1400-foot sand, and the No. 38 Francis Sumner is reported a 40-barrel well, drilled down to 1850 feet. The No. 51 H. and T. C. of the Magnolia is reported a completion at 1840 feet, good for 85 barrels.

Reports from the scattered operations of the county show little change from last week.

The Gulf has not yet finished drilling in the No. 4 Potter-Lewis, in the west K. M. A. 1500-foot pool, having trouble in drilling out the plug. The C. W. Wallace No. 2 Ferguson, the Brown Oil company No. 1 Ferguson and the Universal Oil and Gas company No. 7 Lewis are new tests in this shallow pool.

New tests in the Electra neighborhood, in addition to those mentioned in the Planet section, include the No. 3 P. P. Langford of Baldwin Brothers, the No. 3 Burnett of the Simms Oil company, and the No. 9 M. A. Eads of the Shannon Oil company. This latter is in the south Sunshine Hill district.

The Sanders Taylor Oil company's No. 11 Evans has a junked hole around 1400 feet, according to reports, and the rig has been skidded a short distance away, and is now preparing to drill a new hole. This is in the old Burkburnett field.

Two wells are reported due for speedy completion in the Waggoner pool, Burkburnett Northwest, the Bryan Oil corporation No. 3 Taylor, Lease A, being reported with casing set and cemented, and the No. 6A, Waggoner, Lease B, of W. G. Skelly is reported drilling in. This latter well is in Block 87.

The Wilson, Wright et al No. 4 C. T. Taylor, also in the Waggoner pool, is reported drilling around 1300 feet, and the No. 4 Taylor of R. H. Kirby is reported to have a fishing job below 1100 feet.

In the Texhoma-South Burkburnett pool the New-Tex Refining company's No. 1 Rexford is reported to have set casing on a sand below 1300 feet. This is to be tesed.

The No. 1 Rexford of Haynes et al is reported pulling casing to abandon, around 1400 feet.

The No. 5 Rexford of the Jones-Light Oil and Gas company is reported drilling around 1690 feet.

C. I. A. WILL OPEN SESSION ON SEPT. 20

Special to the Record News.

DENTON, Texas, Sept. 3.—The College of Industrial Arts will open its nineteenth annual session September 20, 1921, with the brightest prospects in its history, according to announcement made today by Dr. F. M. Bralley, president of the college. During the eighteen years of the history of the college, 15,244 Texas young women have entered its halls of learning and have carried away increased knowledge and better equipment for the duties of good citizenship and better home life.

During the academic year which closed August 31, the college conferred one hundred and fourteen (114) bachelor degrees, awarded fifteen (15) diplomas in public school music, six (6) diplomas in the kindergarten training school, fifty (50) certificates evidencing the completion of vocational courses, making a total of one hundred and eighty-five (185) Texas young women who received credentials from the College of Industrial Arts. This does not include about three hundred young women who did work in the College of Industrial Arts for which they received teachers' state permanent and state first-grade certificates from the state department of education.

The new, modern gymnasium building will be completed and equipped at a cost of $170,000 and ready for use at the opening of the next session of the college.

The new auditorium and music hall has been located on the campus, by the board of regents, just south of the household arts building, and work has started on it. This building is to be completed by March 1, 1922. The seating capacity of the auditorium is to be 25,000 and, according to announcement made at the college, will be, perhaps, the most attractive building on the campus.

Speaking of the atetndance at the College of Industrial Arts for next session, President Bralley said: "We are expecting a large attendance and have made all necessary arrangements to care for all who come."

LEOPARD CANNOT CHANGE SPOTS
Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Tells the Treachery of Calomel.
Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.
When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and you can not salivate.
Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild-cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tone which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.—Adv.

COLLEGE OF INDUSTRIAL ARTS
Denton, Texas
(State College for Women)
The College of Industrial Arts offers the following advantages to Texas girls: (1) a pleasant, healthful, and accessible location in the State of Texas, (2) an unimpeachable moral and religious environment, (3) freedom from distracting internal and external influences which tend to lower the morale of the student body and the value of the work of the College, (4) a standard of living that discourages extravagance, and promotes a democratic spirit in keepinng with sound economy and with the best American traditions, (5) courses of study that combine sound culture and accomplishment with preparation for practical, useful living; that chiefly keep in view the needs of the present and the future; and that are flexible enough to allow, within safe limits, conformity with the aptitudes and inclinations of the individual student, (6) a faculty of college and university trained specialists—men and women of maturity, scholarship and demonstrated teaching ability, (7) an administrative system that develops initiative, resourcefulness, and self-control on the part of its students, and fosters the highest ideals of character and conduct.
It is a College of the first-class and gives literary, technical, and vocational training of the best quality, designed to develop mental discipline, social culture, spiritual vision and efficiency. It confers the degrees of bachelor of arts, bachelor of science, bachelor of music, bachelor of business administration, and bachelor of literary interpretation; awards vocational diplomas and certificates and issues teachers' state certificates.
The next session of the college opens Tuesday, September 20, 1921. For further information or for the latest catalogue, address
