Andrews isn't 'wild' for well

By RANDALL HACKLEY
Associated Press Writer

ANDREWS — The proposed drilling of a wildcat oilwell near downtown Andrews and about 150 residences has raised local citizens' ire.

"I'm kind of shocked," said secretary Linda Drake. "I don't want a well or any blowout beside my house."

Drilling of a 2½-mile-deep oilwell in this well-to-do West Texas town is proposed to start next month, following the city's approval of permits that allow Legacy Petroleum Inc. to drill within 250-feet of a notorious private club.

The Redman Lodge, described by locals as a place where "Wild Bill Hickok would drink if he came to Andrews," is the closest facility to the drilling project.

About 150 Andrews residences, including 72 apartments about 450-feet from the site, also are dangerously close to the rig, residents say.

But officials in this city of 13,000 near the New Mexico border dispute allegations the well could explode.

"We don't think there's any real danger," City Attorney Robert Barber said Wednesday. "This is oil country, so we just learn to live with it."

Critics contend the well could endanger resident's lives because the area where they are drilling may be part of a poisonous hydrogen-sulfide gas field.

"There's some danger the well could blow out if it hit a pocket of gas, but the final orders are being drawn up with safety regulations," Barber said. Final drill permits will be ready next week, he said.

Safety regulations on the 18-acre site where the drilling is proposed include the deepening and enlarging of a dry lake bed beside the rig site, where flood runoff can flow to, and fencing the drill site from wayfaring children.

Residents became fearful during hearings last week that schoolchildren could wander onto the site, and that traffic from oilfield vehicles in the area could endanger the tranquility of the town.

"Children play in this area," Malcolm Davis told the Andrews County News. "I know that children don't seem to count much when dollars are concerned, but right now, I'm not afraid to have my child play in that area. After this well is drilled, I'm not sure I'll feel this way."

The well is expected to be both safe and profitable, said Legacy representatives based in Midland. Drilling will take about 60 days to reach a propose depth of 13,300 feet, the company says.

Drilling costs and the expenses of building an enlarged drainoff area and a pipeline nearly a mile out of town to the storage tank may cost up to $1 million, city officials say.

Andrews presently has two oilwells operating inside city limits that were built about 15 years ago, but they are about one third as deep as the proposed wildcat well.

Few seriously fault the idea of safe wells operating inside the city limits, as long as resident's well-being is ensured.

"Monahans (60 miles southwest of Andrews) has lots of wells inside their city limits," said News Editor Jerry Johnson. "And You know, the reason Andrews exists is because of oil."

Natural gas bill faces crucial test

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's campaign promise to remove all price controls on natural gas with assurances that consumers will be protected from skyrocketing bills faced its first crucial test today.

The Republican-controlled Senate Energy Committee scheduled a "sense of the committee" vote on the administration's proposal to remove price ceilings by 1985 on "old" gas discovered before April 1977, now about half the nation's supply.

An informal Associated Press poll Wednesday of the 20 committee members, 11 Republicans and nine Democrats, showed eight senators against Reagan's proposal to deregulate old gas, with seven supporting it and five undecided.

"I have some idea how it's going to come out, but I don't know," said Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, the chairman of the committee and chief sponsor of the White House bill.

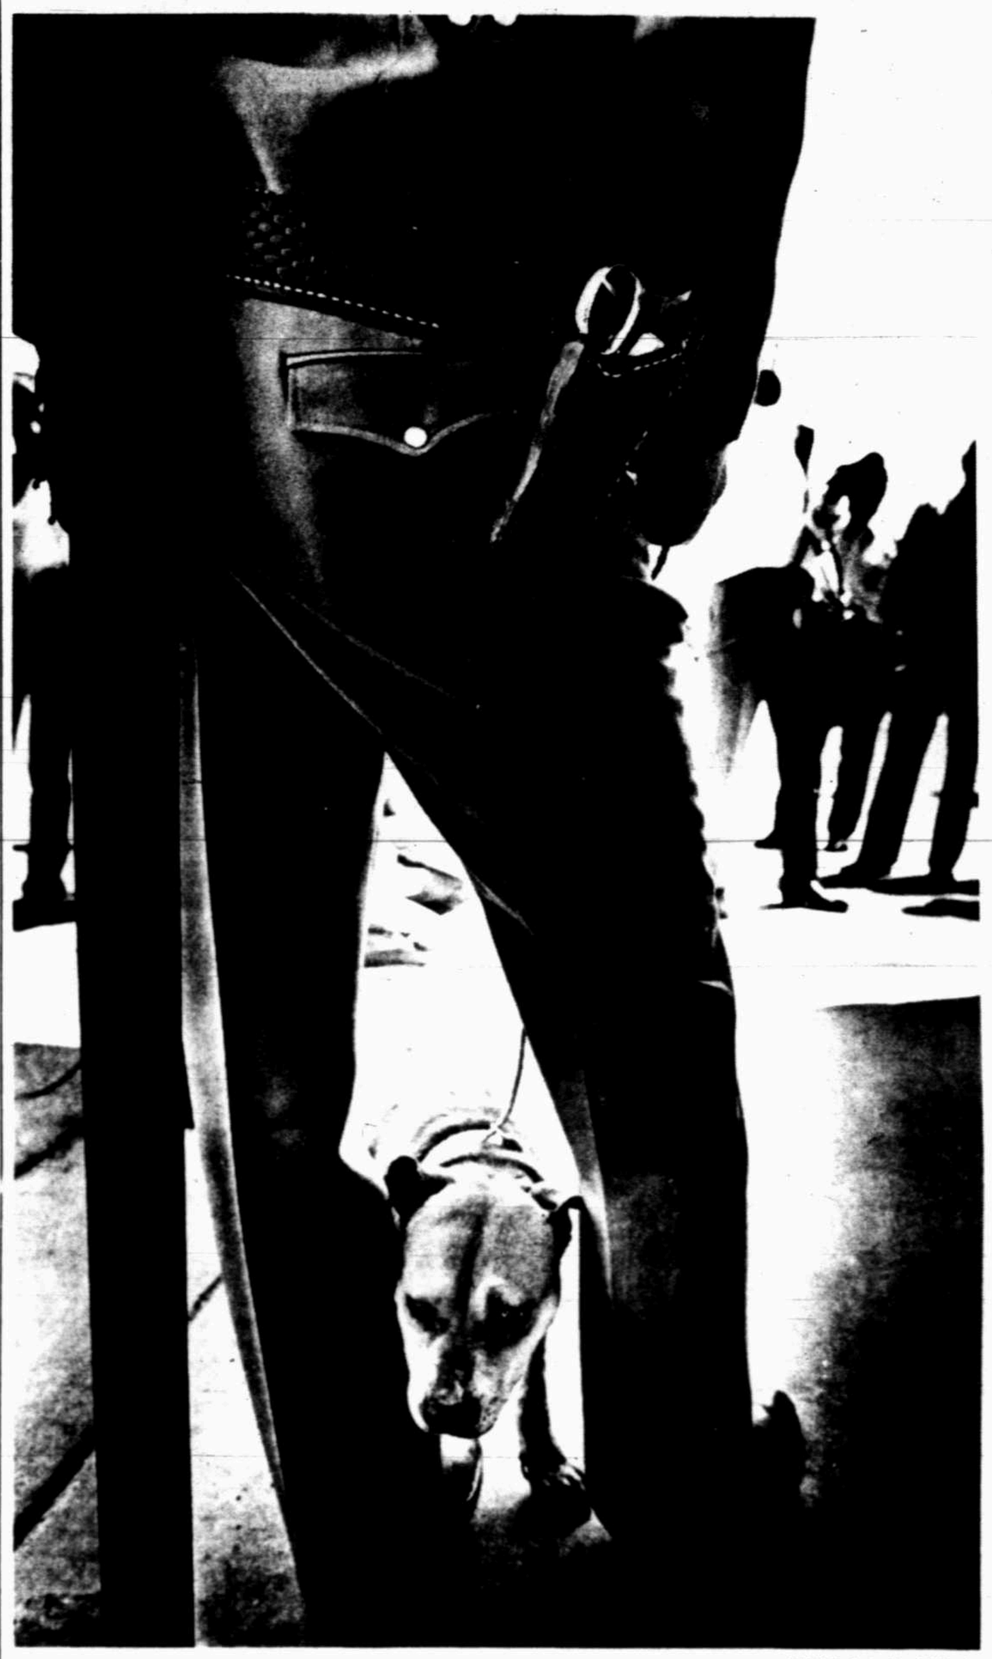

"We're optimistic; we're certainly not pessimistic," said Tom Cantrell, an Energy Department official bird-dogging the issue on Capitol Hill. "There's no question that it's close, but we're committed to making a free market for natural gas."

Opponents, led by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and including several consumer and labor groups, contend that decontrolling the old gas will give the oil companies that own it a $40 billion windfall profit.

But Charles M. Butler, chairman of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission that regulates old gas prices, told a House subcommittee Wednesday that full decontrol would "should reduce gas costs by 20 cents to 35 cents" per thousand cubic feet.

Pit bulldogs sell for $330

New leash on life

A pit bulldog brushes against Midland County Constable Tom McGinnis as she waits her turn on the auction block. The dog sold for $80.

Four dogs, whose calling was fighting, may never again be pitted in an arena.

Dog-rightists June Dotson and Jeanette Probandt spent $330 in out-bidding others for the pit bulldogs in a constable's auction Wednesday afternoon.

"It's a day I wish we didn't have to face," Mrs. Dotson said, while some pit bulldog breeders fretted over a proposed state law which would make dog fighting a felony — a penitentiary offense. "If we had a different law, we wouldn't be out here today," Mrs. Dotson lamented. "It's like all things: It's got to have a finish."

The "different laws" Mrs. Dotson proposed would make dogs confiscated in fights "wards of the county and," she hastened, "drop it right there." As it now stands, those dogs by law must be auctioned to the highest bidder or destroyed. If they're auctioned, they could be returned "right back where they came from," she feared.

The top bid on a dog was $100, which Mrs. Dotson paid for the only male in the sale. She out bid Karl Brosig's offer of $70 to claim title to the dog.

"I just liked the dog," said Brosig, who placed no more bids; he wanted the male. "It would have made a good watch dog."

Mrs. Probandt bid $60 for the second dog, a brindle female, and offered $80 for the third dog, a brown bitch. Mrs. Dotson paid $90 for the fourth dog, which seemed more timid than the others and unlike the others, did no tail wagging during the dog-by-dog auction on the parking lot of Tall City Veterinary Hospital. The dogs were auctioned separately. "I'm sure they'd fight" if they came in contact with one another, Constable Tom McGinnis said later.

"They don't look like killer dogs, do they?" observed Mark H. Dettman, assistant county attorney who had prosecuted four of eight defendants charged with cruelty to animals by fighting the pit bulldogs southeast of Midland on the night of Aug. 29. Three were convicted, placed on probation and fined a total of $2,750. One was acquitted, and four jumped bail and forfeited $4,000 in bond.

Of six pit bulldogs confiscated in the raid by sheriff's deputies, two died at the veterinary hospital. One, a female runt, was a "chronic poor-doer." Despite treatment, "She'd go downhill," said Dr. Robert Boyd, a veterinarian. "Something was genetically wrong with her." The other dog, a male, died from a "twisted intestinal tract...I don't think it was related to fighting at all."

After the sale the dogs, which had run up a $4,000 county bill in their stay at the veterinary hospital, were transported by Midland Animal Control to the city's Animal Shelter until Mrs. Dotson and Mrs. Probandt can find "proper" homes for them.

"I just don't want them to go back to where they've been," said Mrs. Dotson, adding the dogs "may have to be destroyed" if they're not placed in proper homes.

Mrs. Dotson indicated she was prepared to pay any amount to buy the dogs and keep them out of pits.

"It (funds) was unlimited, sir, thanks to some good people," she said. "This dog fighting thing is a serious situation everywhere."

As serious as the dog-rightists were pit bulldog breeders Jeff McVey and Gary Dodd, who said they raise the dogs for pets. Both were campaigning against passage of Senate Bill 557 which would make "willful instigation of a dogfight" or "maintaining equipment or facilities for dogfighting" a third-degree felony, which is punishable by a two to 10-year term in the penitentiary and a $5,000 fine.

FNB won't respond to Journal article

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

The First National Bank of Midland has no official response to a Wall Street Journal report which says out-of-town depositors withdrew almost $300 million from the bank beginning in September.

The figure represents nearly one-fifth of the bank's total deposits. During the same period, deposits at Midland's eight other banks grew.

"Our policy is not to comment or respond to articles by the press," Guy McCrary, vice president of marketing for the bank, said Wednesday.

Management is devoting its time and attention to the bank's normal operations, he added. Since the sudden resignation two weeks ago of Charles Fraser, chairman, president and chief executive officer, First National has been run by a six-man executive committee and interim CEO Donald L. McCall.

"There is depositor money here to be protected — that's why we are so close-mouthed," McCrary said.

Rumors, a depressed energy economy, over-eager expansion of the bank and a high percentage of bad loans combined to create the deposit loss, which the Journal called a run on the bank.

Insiders say the story in Tuesday's Journal was fairly accurate in depicting the bank's history for the last six months.

Institutions which had placed large deposits in FNB through Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith were the first to withdraw money from the bank, starting after Labor Day 1982, the Journal said. The immediate loss was about $150 million, or half the eventual decline in deposits.

First National has "fallen from grace," according to the Journal, but many Midlanders express confidence in the bank and hope it will regain stability.

"What reasonable person would question 'The Bank' which almost single-handedly built this town?" asked Realtor Harvey Langston.

A teller said Wednesday many customers have commented about recent news articles appearing in this paper and the Journal, but they have not appeared worried or withdrawn their money.

An unidentified Lubbock law enforcement officer escorts Clarence Allen Lackey to the car that returned him to Lubbock County early Wednesday afternoon. Lackey, a 28-year-old former construction worker, was sentenced to death by a Midland County jury Saturday. He was retried here last week after an appeals court overturned his 1978 conviction and death sentence for the 1977 rape and murder of 23-year-old Texas Tech secretary Toni Diane Kumpf. Lubbock authorities are expected to hold Lackey there until an automatic appeal of his death is heard.

MMH has no news on rating

But Midland's talk of Wall Street

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

While Midland Memorial Hospital officials caught plenty of chatter on Wall Street about Midland's economic situation early this week, they left the "Big Apple" without any definite news on a bond rating for its $15 million expansion.

"There was quite a bit of interest on Wall Street about Midland," Ray Branson, MMH president, said, referring to recent reports about an ecomonic slump in Midland.

"Apparently, we're really watched, but it doesn't seem to have impaired our situation. But it (economic climate) was discussed in general."

Branson and four aides returned from New York Tuesday, after a one-day trip presenting facts and figures about MMH's plans for a 77-bed expansion to Standard & Poors Corp. and Moody's Investors Service.

The state-approved expansion project could have been financed with general obligation bonds, which have slightly lower interest rates than revenue bonds and require an election. But hospital officals voted for revenue bonds.

Because construction costs and overall interest rates have dropped, MMH's publicly-elected directors opted to bypass voter approval by financing the $15 million expansion through revenue bonds.

The bond rating agencies will research MMH's financial statistics and securities and then assign the revenue bonds a rating. Bond ratings will be based not only on the financial health of the hospital and ability to repay that loan but also on the city's general economic situation.

According to Branson, a rating for the revenue bonds is expected within a month. MMH plans to sell the bonds immediately following the rating.

"This was a meeting to determine what other information they may need," Branson said.

"These were preliminary, exploratory meetings to present the best information. We made it very clear on the need for these beds," said Joe W. Smith, a financial representative from First Southwest Corp. of Abilene.

Four pit bulldogs sold at auction to local animal rights advocates

Under the present cruelty-to-animals laws, dogfighting is a Class A misdemeanor. Maximum punishment for such an offense now is up to a year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

In addition, the proposed law would prohibit "owning, training or keeping any fighting dog" and would outlaw "any service in the furtherance of dogfighting."

"If these was against fighting, that'd be all right," McVey, 21, said of the bill. "That's going to make people scared to ever buy a dog."

McVey, who said he has nine pit bulldogs, including a three-legged dog he bought in the aftermath of the Aug. 29 raid, said some of his dogs are "tore up" and scratched."

"They have been fought by the people I bought them from."

McVey said he sells his purple-ribbon dogs for $100 to $500 each. He estimated that the dogs in the auction were worth about $200 each.

"They use them for pets," he said of the bulldogs. "They're durable, they're tough, they're not known to bite a person. You just make the dog what you want to."

Dodd was even more outspoken in his stance against the proposed law.

"This new bill is wrong," he said. The present law "should be adequate."

Of dog fighting, Dodd said, "That's against the law; I wouldn't do that," but he did not say whether or not he had fought dogs.

Dodd, who said he raises show horses and dogs, noted the anti-dogfighting law did not specify breeds of dogs.

"Who sets the law on what is a fighting dog?" he asked.

Odessa man killed in collision

SEMINOLE — An Odessa man died and a Seminole man was injured when the trucks they were driving collided at a rural intersection near here late Wednesday morning.

Pronounced dead at the scene by Gaines County Justice of the Peace Fred Connally was 43-year-old Vernon Loyd Lindsey of Odessa. His body was taken to the Connally Funeral Home in Seminole.

Admitted to Seminole Memorial Hospital for observation was Tyra Michael Browder, no age available, of Seminole.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Browder was westbound on FM 1066 and Lindsey was northbound on FM 303 when the late model Mack trucks they were driving collided at the intersection about 11:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Shooting suspect remains in jail

A 29-year-old Midland man remains jailed today under $50,000 bond set Wednesday by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine in connection with the Tuesday night shotgun slaying of the man's 31-year-old common-law wife.

Luther Massingill of 1304 S. Atlanta St. is charged with the murder of 31-year-old Shirly Dianne Bolton Long of the same address. She died of a shotgun wound to the neck suffered during an apparent argument in the couple's home about 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Massingill was arrested at the scene. Services for the woman are pending at Thomas Funeral Home.

Transplant sought for Texas child

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — In Cook Children's Hospital, 8-month-old Ashley Bailey and her mother are waiting for a flight to Pittsburgh and an operation that might save the small girl's life.

The child needs a liver transplant, and surgeons at the University of Pittsburgh agreed earlier this week to consider her as a transplant candidate because "there are no other options" open to her.

Ducts needed to drain bile into her small intestines are missing — a condition known as biliary artesia, which doctors say occurs once in about 10,000 births. Death usually occurs before age 2 unless the condition is corrected.

"If she doesn't get the transplant, her chances are very, very poor," said Dr. Lyn Hunt, a pediatric specialist at the Fort Worth medical facility.

"It's the only option, and her parents are very determined that she's going to live," Hunt said.

Hunt said doctors at the Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh agreed Tuesday to evaluate her for their program, "if she can live to make it up there."

Dick Riebling, public information officer at Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh, said 54 liver transplants have been performed there since the first was done May 11, 1981.

"She's been sick ever since she was born, but I feel hopeful," said Annette Bailey, her mother, who is from Clyde, a small town in Callahan County, about 15 miles east of Abilene.. "No matter what anyone says, I'll still try. If Pittsburgh won't take her, I'll go somewhere else."

Ashley was born in Abilene last Aug. 15, but came to Fort Worth when she was 15 days old for surgery to remove a cyst blocking her common bile duct.

The cyst was removed, and her intestine was connected to the liver in what is known as the Kasai procedure.

"Normally you can cut out the cyst and reconstruct the ducts, but when the surgeon got it, he found the bile ducts were very, very tiny. Part of the intestine was connected to the liver anyway, in hopes that the bile would drain through the small ducts. Otherwise, bile backs up into the liver and it becomes cirrhotic, fibrous and hard," Hunt said.

Ashley's mother said the procedure worked "pretty good" for a while.

"But she was never really well, and when we brough her in for a checkup March 14, they did X-rays and found the liver wasn't working right," Ms. Bailey said.

Surgeons tried a second Kasai procedure, but the bile still refused to drain. It built up in the girl's body, causing her skin to become a greenish-yellow color.

During the second operation, the girl's blood lost its ability to clot and she had to be given 51 units of plasma, platelets and packed white cells.

Youngster's transplanted liver fails; Another organ needed

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Thirteen-month-old Brandon Hall was fighting for life today as doctors issued a nationwide appeal for a donor liver to replace the transplanted organ he received last week, not functioning now because of a clogged artery.

Officials said Brandon was in critical condition, his outlook "more desperate" than before the first transplant, which was performed April 13 hours after Brandon's mother appealed to a congressional committee for federal aid to transplant patients.

"The blood supply to his liver no longer exists," Dr. James Williams of the University of Tennessee Center for the Health Sciences told reporters at a news conference. "We noticed about 36 hours ago that he was showing signs of liver deterioration. He was turning yellow, jaundice.

"The only treatment for this is to get him a new liver, and we have initiated an all-out call for another pediatric liver."

"If we find a liver, maybe we can save his life," said Brandon's mother, Willie Hall, on ABC News' "Nightline" Wednesday. "If we can't find one within the next couple of days, Brandon will die."

Peach grower B.A. Thomas of Watkinsville, Ga., looks over some buds in his orchard. He fears he'll lose his crop as a result of recent freezing weather.

Freezing weather endangers crops

By The Associated Press

Fruit and vegetable growers across the Southeast struggled to save what remained of their crops today as freezing weather hit again one month into spring, chilling prospects for a good harvest and low prices at the supermarket.

Nolan Duke, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said frost would settle today into many low-lying areas of Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia and the Carolinas.

It was 29 degrees at Greer, S.C., in the heart of the state's peach growing area, at 4 a.m. today, the weather service said.

"This is the fourth straight morning of subfreezing temps there and it looks like it'll last at least another day," Duke said.

Frost has damaged peaches, apples, strawberries, tomatoes, blueberries, tobacco and eggplants as far south as Georgia and in sections of Illinois and Indiana.

The damage was done even though some farmers tried keeping their orchards warm by burning old tires, piping heated water around their plants, covering them with plastic or spraying them with water which froze, insulating them from frost.

"Most of the tender plants like tomatoes, peppers and eggplants are gone, even though people tried to cover them," Ken Palmer, a Greenville County, S.C., extension agent, said Wednesday.

"The more I look, the more dead ones I find," Watts Auman, a Moore County, N.C., peach grower, said Wednesday. "It looks like we lost just about everything. It's going to be rough."

Jerrold Watson, who lives near Batesburg, S.C., said that two consecutive frosts have wiped out his 930-acre peach crop.

The loss will put as many as 400 people out of work on his farm, Watson said Wednesday night. Migrant crews that have arrived from Florida to help with crop thinning will be sent home. Others will be told not to report, he said.

Ninety workers in Watson's packing shed now won't have anything to pack. "I don't know what anybody's going to do," he said.

Investigation of mauling completed

Sheriff Dallas Smith, whose investigators probed the mauling of a 31-year-old church janitor by a police dog April 6, in a press conference today said his job was not "to present opinions" on the grand jury's findings but rather to present results of his investigation into the incident.

The sheriff said his investigation is finished "unless there's something new brought to light."

Midland County Grand Jury last Friday exonerated police officers who had ushered the dog — a German shepherd — into the downtown First United Methodist Church after they found a door ajar about two hours after midnight on April 6. Earlier, another police officer had observed a pickup truck and two or three men near the church.

Police searched the church and the dog cornered the custodian, 31-year-old Raul Paredez, in a mop closet. Paredez, who had been entrusted with keys to the building by church officials, had been sleeping there after he had a disagreement with his family.

Paredez was "bitten and injured to some extent, to quite an extent," the sheriff said of the incident. Paredez required plastic surgery on his face.

The sheriff said he launched his probe after Darrell F. Smith and Sandy Torres, attorneys for Paredez, requested an investigation. The sheriff said he is required to conduct probes when requested to do so by citizens. "That's the law," he said. Joining in the sheriff's investigators were Texas Rangers and the District Attorney's investigators.

Police Chief Wayne Gideon had called for a grand jury inquiry into the incident. The sheriff said his office and the police department "always" have cooperated in investigations.

FNB focuses on current operations

"There's nothing to worry about," she said.

"It (news coverage) hasn't changed me," said oilman Robert L. Monaghan. "People are concerned, of course, but most of what's been reported we were pretty much aware of — maybe not the details."

Monaghan said most people he's talked to say they hope the bank will not merge with an out-of-town bank which would be less interested in local affairs. Acting CEO McCall said last week the bank has no intention of merging with any other institution, as has been rumored since last Fall.

First National would not say Wednesday whether it has changed its policy of courting big depositors outside of Midland. The bank has reduced new loan activity and toughened its policy with customers holding outstanding loans, the Journal said. Bank officials have confirmed this.

First National's financial reports, which are public information regularly printed in the Reporter-Telegram, show that at Sept. 30, 1982, deposits were $1.33 billion. This figure was down from the high point of $1.48 billion three months earlier at June 30. Deposits declined again to $1.25 billion by the end of March 1983, representing a net loss of $230 million since September.

First National Wednesday would not comment on its problem loans.

"We're not going to talk about specific credits," McCrary said. "It's just between the borrower and the lender."

Both Ike Lovelady Inc. and MGF Oil Corp., two Midland oil firms, are negotiating to rewrite their debt arrangements with the bank and their other lenders, the Journal said.

Banks traditionally do not disclose any more than that required by federal regulators, and they seek to maintain a confidential relationship with their customers.

In recent months, First National has classified between 8 and 10 percent of its loans as problem loans. In a Feb. 16 letter to shareholders, Fraser said First National charged off $16.7 million in bad loans in 1982.

By comparison, InterFirst Bank Dallas, Texas' second largest bank holding company, has a higher percentage of poor quality loans. Chairman Elvis L. Mason said in March that InterFirst classifies 12 percent of its loans as non-performing. InterFirst has been a correspondent bank of First National's since 1929.

Regardless of what has happened in the past, First National is now taking, or has taken, steps to beef up its balance sheet. It's failure would be unlikely, the Journal said.

Acting CEO McCall said last week the bank will show a profit in the first quarter 1983 statement to be published soon, although earnings will be less than they've been in the past.

Earnings for 1982 declined 45 percent from the previous boom year.

Most of the money First National borrowed from the Federal Reserve System in recent months to offset the deposit loss has been repaid, said the Journal. Through the sale of its headquarters building, and a stock offering of $30 million last August, the bank was able to increase its total capital from $107.5 million in 1981 to $184.6 million.

These figures include equity capital, subordinated notes and a $50 million reserve for loan losses.

"By any measure, we are vastly stronger," director John Hendrix said a few weeks ago. "We've done it quite intentionally."

New management is in place, and with it a more prudent loan policy, although officials say the bank is still making loans.

According to McCall, "You're going to see the bank a lot more conservative than it has been. Loan policy will be more discerning."

Unconfirmed reports indicate some staff cutbacks are imminent. Last week McCall said expenses will be reduced, but he would not give details.

The bank has changed its advertising philosophy. McCrary said in the past, ads promoted the bank as an institution, a bulwark of the community dedicated to Midland. Now, the ad budget will concentrate more on specific products the bank offers, such as money market accounts.

At the same time, First National is expanding its physical plant. Construction of additional lobby space in downtown Midland is almost complete and will be officially announced about the time of the annual stockholders meeting scheduled for May 26.

Also, the city of Midland recently issued building permits for four automatic bank drive-in centers for First National. They are located at Oak Ridge Square, Westwood Village, 904 North Loop 250 and Spring Park Drive off North Big Spring Street.

Breathing gasoline fumes may be risky

WASHINGTON (AP) — Male rats exposed to high doses of unburned gasoline fumes during most of their lifespans developed kidney cancer, a finding that may indicate a potential human risk, according to a petroleum industry study.

The report, made available earlier this week, did not speculate about potential human risk from exposure to gasoline fumes. But it suggested further animal work and studies of gasoline industry workers for further evidence of toxic effects.

Results of the study, sponsored by the American Petroleum Institute, were sent early last year to federal regulatory agencies, including the Environmental Protection Agency and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

Courtney Riordan, EPA assistant administrator for research, said the agency's Cancer Assessment Group still was reviewing the study and had come to no conclusions about the findings or what should be done about them.

When a substance appears to cause cancer in such animal studies, the results do not prove that it has the same effect in man. But, according to the National Cancer Institute, such a substance should be considered a potential hazard to man and be further studied.

It has long been known that one component of gasoline, benzene, causes cancer in animals, and perhaps humans. But it is not clear whether benzene or some other component of gasoline might be responsible for the tumors seen in the latest study.

The two-year study showed that male rats developed the kidney tumors at all levels of exposure, but similar results were not seen in females.

In the study, hundreds of rats and mice of both sexes were forced to inhale fumes from unleaded gasoline for six hours a day, five days a week during most of their adult lives.

Animals in low-dose groups inhaled gasoline vapors making up 67 parts per million of the air in their chambers. Medium-dose groups were exposed to 292 ppm gasoline vapor and high-dose animals breathed in 2,056 ppm.

Art Wiese, a petroleum institute spokesman, said people filling the gas tanks of their cars are exposed to between 0.5 ppm and 3 ppm of gasoline vapors at the time. While this exposure may last two or three minutes for a customer, gas station attendants would inhale this level for longer periods of time, he added.

Examine lawn before charging ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many of America's lawns are getting their first grooming of the year, and safety experts say it can pay to look things over before charging ahead with the mower.

Over the winter lawns can accumulate debris, such as sticks, rocks, bottles and cans. And many of these items can lie hidden in the quickly growing spring grass.

Hitting unexpected objects can damage the mower, and in some cases the operator if he or she is struck by flying parts of the debris.

If your mower has been sitting unused all winter it may resist starting. This is a good time to clean it, change the oil and tighten the blade and sparkplug.

The federal government estimates that as many as 51,000 people are injured by lawn mowers each year. Safe handling of these machines can eliminate many of those injuries. To help, here are some safety reminders from the national council of Better Business Bureaus.

—Store fuel in proper metal containers and add it to a mower only outdoors. If the engine is hot, let it cool before adding fuel.

—If you need to clean a clog, stop the mower and wait a moment for the blade to stop moving. Never, ever, put a hand under or near the blade of a running mower.

County has hard time rustling up jurors

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (AP) — It's calving season here and lawyers in a murder case are having a hard time rustling up a jury in the ranching communities of Douglas County.

"We're finding a lot of people who keep livestock and can't spare the time," said Jim Sell, chief deputy district attorney for Arapahoe County, which is handling the case.

Jury members would have to be sequestered through a two-week trial for Badawi Wafaie, 42, of Denver, who is accused of shooting his brother, Said Wafaie, 41, and his sister-in-law, Debra Ann, 29, last July 4 while visiting their home near Parker.

After two weeks of jury selection, some 200 potential jurors have been narrowed down to 35.

Sell said the 35 people tentatively approved aren't enough to fill a 12-member jury because they could be disqualified.

Mondale: Give education 'A'

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Vice President Walter Mondale, now running for the nation's top office, says he is committed to spending "substantial funds" for education and told Texas lawmakers they should be, too.

In a speech to a joint session of the Legislature on Wednesday, Mondale was interrupted by applause when he told lawmakers, "It is time to reward, respect and thank" public schoolteachers.

But at a news conference later, he would not go so far as to suggest that Texas increase taxes to pay for a teacher pay raise.

"It isn't for me to come in and tell other states how to handle their matters," he said, although he praised Gov. Mark White for targeting public education as a priority of his administration.

Legislators have been told they will have to raise taxes to pay for a 24 percent teacher pay hike supported by White.

Mondale said as president, he would propose "substantial additional funds" for education, which he called "the best investment we can make."

Mondale said it is no accident that areas of economic prosperity are near research and learning centers. He gave Austin, which consistently has one of the lowest unemployment rates in the state, as an example.

"Texas knows that all wealth does not flow from the ground," he said. "In fact, you know that most wealth flows from the mind."

Mondale took the opportunity of Texas' economic situation to criticize the Reagan administration economic program, which he called "nuts."

"Here in Texas, look what's happened in the past two years. This was a prosperous state years ago," he said. "Now you've got unemployment. You've got a budgetary problem where you never had any before."

Students to be excused for holy days

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has approved a bill that would allow school districts to excuse students of all religious faiths on religious holy days without financial penalty.

State aid to schools is determined on average daily attendance, and Sen. Carl Parker's bill would authorize the district to count the students as present if they were absent for a holy day.

The students would be given reasonable time to make up their work, and would not be penalized if the work was satisfactory.

White gets credit for rate compromise

AUSTIN (AP) — Backers of a compromise effort to lower credit card rates hoped to get an initial test in the Senate today.

The maximum rates on credit card purchases average 18 to 19 percent and are allowed by law to float between 18 and 24 percent, but the compromise calls for a ceiling varying between 14 and 22 percent, depending on the U.S. Treasury bill rate.

Sen. Bob McFarland was expected to bring the issue to a vote today, said Rep. Bill Coody, D-Weatherford, chairman of the House Financial Institutional Committee, who had been working on the compromise.

"McFarland has the the amendment now and a bunch of senators are looking at it," Coody said. "Hopefully he will be able to get it up Thursday in the Senate. That would be much quicker for the Senate to act on it first."

The House bill is still in Coody's committee.

Wednesday, a consumer association spokesman said the compromise worked out among legislators and bankers could give Texans the lowest credit card interest rates in the nation.

If put into effect immediately, the compromise worked out by the governor Tuesday would mean the highest interest rate allowable for credit card charges would be about 16.3 percent.

"The effect of it is that the consumer could pay the lowest bank credit card rates in the United States," said Jim Boyle, legislative director of the Texas Consumer Association.

The measure would go into effect July 1 if it wins legislative approval.

Gov. Mark White, who urged lower credit card interest rates during his campaign last year, entered the negotiations last week. Little progress was made until Tuesday when White made an unscheduled visit to the Texas Bankers Association headquarters.

China, U.S. flying into new dispute

By MICHAEL PARKS
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

PEKING — China and the United States are heading into a new dispute that could lead to the suspension of air service between the two countries.

China is strongly protesting Pan American World Airways' planned resumption in June of flights to Taiwan, indicating that if Pan Am proceeds its flights to Peking and Shanghai will be suspended.

The Reagan administration has let it be known privately, according to diplomatic and business sources here, that if Pan Am's flights are suspended then those of the Chinese national airline to Los Angeles, San Francisco and New York will be suspended in response.

The issue could come to a head when the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board rules, probably before the end of the month, on the formal Chinese objection to Pan Am's plans.

The board is expected to reaffirm its approval of the four flights a week from Tokyo to Taipei, extending Pan Am's trans-Pacific service. Pan American chairman Edward Acker said in Hong Kong last month that the airline will proceed regardless of China's objections.

Financially troubled Pan Am calculates that it will earn $15 million a year on the service to Taiwan, according to airline industry sources, while the service to Peking and Shanghai is generally unprofitable.

"There is going to be trouble," a well-informed Chinese source said Friday of the situation. "This problem must be viewed against the background of Sino-American relations, which are not very good now and still deteriorating. Unless Pan Am drops its present plans and the Civil Aeronautics Board abrogates its original approval so that proper consultations can be held, there will be serious trouble, I am afraid."

The principal Chinese objection is that Pan American decided to resume its Taiwan service, suspended in September 1978, and the Civil Aeronautics Board approved its plan without consulting the government here.

"Had there been consultations, there probably would have been no objections," another Chinese source suggested, noting that Philippine Airlines, Thai International Airways, Cathay Pacific Airways of Hong Kong and, through a subsidiary, Japan Air Lines all fly to both Taiwan and the Chinese mainland.

Similarly, China has raised no objection, this source said, to plans by Northwest Orient Airlines to continue service to Taiwan when it begins flights here next year.

What China wanted, and the United States has so far refused to give, was official American acknowledgement of Peking's legitimate authority over Taiwan, regarded here as a rebellious province.

Although the United States explicitly recognized the Communist regime in Peking as China's legitimate government and Taiwan as a part of China when diplomatic relations were established four years ago, Chinese officials feel that the Reagan administration has reneged on that commitment in practice and they accuse the United States of pursuing a "two Chinas" policy that gives effective recognition to Taiwan as well as the mainland.

Balloons released in protest

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet police questioned a Boston lawyer and his New Mexico friend for two hours today after they staged an unusual protest in a Moscow luxury hotel lobby on behalf of the lawyer's Russian son-in-law, who wants to emigrate to the United States.

Lew Pollock, the 53-year-old Boston lawyer, strode into the lobby of the Cosmos Hotel carrying six red and blue balloons and wearing a T-shirt reading "Free Boris."

Pollock said he wanted to draw attention to the case of Boris Molchanov, 35-year-old Moscow music teacher, who is seeking to emigrate and join Ann Pollock, his 26-year-old wife — the lawyer's daughter.

Pollock released the helium-filled balloons that floated to the ceiling of the two-story lobby trailing a banner that also read "Free Boris." As bystanders looked on, Pollock circled the lobby throwing small cards into the air that told the story behind the protest in four languages — English, Russian, German and French.

Four other Americans peeled off sweaters and jackets, exposing T-shirts that read the same.

"We want to bring this to (Yuri V.) Andropov's attention," Pollock told reporters who witnessed the protest. He said he believed Boris would be allowed to leave if the case were brought to the attention of the Soviet leader.

"We think it's a matter of petty corruption," he asserted. "Somebody wants a payoff and they aren't getting it."

Pollock and a fellow protester, Paul Gonzales, 29, an American Indian from Santa Fe, New Mexico, were taken into custody by uniformed police at the hotel. They were released two hours later.

Ms. Pollock, who uses her maiden name, is staying with her husband at the hotel. She was not present for the protest but returned with Molchanov to the hotel after it was over.

She said authorities told her she should apply to live here with him. "They seemed shocked when I said I had and was refused," she said in a telephone interview. She said emigration authorities who had come to the hotel told Molchanov "his time for being refused was almost over."

The Boston lawyer said officials who questioned him said his son-in-law was being refused permission because some members of his family knew state secrets. "I told them that was ridiculous. Boris is a teacher and was a swimmer in the army 10 years ago. His parents are retired blue-collar workers."

Miss Pollock, who arrived in Moscow before the protesters, said earlier in the week that Soviet authorities have told Molchanov he could emigrate if he agreed to act as an agent for the KGB secret police.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Queen Isabella I of Spain, nuclear physicist J. Robert Oppenheimer and writer Henry Fielding were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actor-director Jack Nicholson, producer Aaron Spelling, singers Glen Campbell and Peter Frampton, musician Yehudi Menuhin and basketball's Spencer Haywood. Trust your first impressions and everything should go well in the months just ahead. Steer clear of those who try to control you by making you feel guilty. Luck, love and money are all linked together. Family ties grow even stronger. Choose partners who share your ambition and curiosity. You may decide to revive an old romance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Expect good news today. A company or individual is willing to take a chance on you. Romance brings new contentment. A student may decide to change his or her major.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Better organization and greater self-discipline will put you back on top. Take a calculated risk. The payoff will be worth it. Mate provides the strength you need.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Use your personal contacts in a job search. Couples need time alone. Plan a weekend away from home. A hobby provides extra income when you need it most.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Small ventures produce better profits than big ones Your past efforts bring honors. Do not let a roommate or co-worker take advantage of you financially.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A romance with your employer will cause more trouble than it is worth. Do what you know is best for you and your family. Be careful what you say when angry.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You gain a major concession. Negotiations end on a high note. Call a former romantic partner before making plans for the weekend. You find happiness the second time around.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not wear your unhappiness over a business decision on your sleeve. Free-lance writing earns you extra income. Watch out for a friend who likes to gossip.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Boredom is all that really stands between you and happier romance. Do not let things just happen. It is those small gestures that count. Plan ahead. Mate needs to feel appreciated.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Intellectual pursuits pay off today. Show what you can do when under pressure. Be honest with the children.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Share your feelings about a business decision with those directly involved —not with outsiders. A lifelong acquaintance shows a sudden romantic interest in you.

Comedian has coat of arms

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Morey Amsterdam may be one of the few comedians with a family coat of arms.

It goes back a number of centuries, to the time his ancestors were driven from Spain during the Inquisition.

"My Spanish forebears migrated to Holland, where they were given a land grant and a coat of arms," Amsterdam says. "The family name was changed to Van Amsterdam, but later they dropped the Van."

Amsterdam brings his talent, if not his coat of arms, to the family show "Believe You Can...And You Can" on the syndicated SFM network tonight. Amsterdam, best known as Buddy Sorrell, the wisecracking comedy writer on "The Dick Van Dyke Show," plays the Fantasyland problem-solver at Disneyland.

"He's a kind of wispy character," Amsterdam explains. "I think this is the kind of show that could be a perennial."

Heather O'Rourke, the little girl kidnapped by ghosts in Steven Spielberg's "Poltergeist," also stars in the special. She plays a girl who is uncertain about the new life awaiting her family when her father takes a new job far from home.

The whimsical, hour-long show was filmed at Disneyland and also includes such well-known Disney characters as Mickey and Minnie Mouse and Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.

Amsterdam grew up in San Francisco and entered the University of California when he was 14. At the age of 10, he had been a boy soprano for radio station KPO in San Francisco. He made his first television appearance in 1939.

"I was a cellist at the University of California," he says, "but I soon got into vaudeville. My brother and I paid $500 to have an act written. We were almost cancelled our first night it was so terrible. So I began making up my own jokes. I discovered I had a talent for comedy.

That talent for comedy carried Amsterdam through a number of shows until 1961.

"They were looking for someone to play Buddy Sorrell," he says. "They wanted someone who could write and had been a a comedian. Rose Marie said, 'How about Morey Amsterdam?'

"I was living in Yonkers at the time, and I'd just come in from shoveling snow when they called me from California. I said I'd come out even if it was just to see a show."

In Yonkers, Amsterdam recalls that he lived across from a Catholic seminary. "That was good for four hours of religious jokes," he says. "The people at the seminary arranged for me to have a private audience with Pope Pius XII. Later, I had an audience with Pope Paul."

North judged well in the auction. When South persisted in looking for game despite the fact that his partner had promised nothing, North decided that his king-third in partner's first-bid suit and doubleton in the other merited a shot at game.

West led the king of hearts and declarer considered the possibilities. If trumps were 2-2, he could handle even a 4-2 club break. If trumps were 3-1, it seemed that declarer would have to rely either on a 3-3 club break or a finesse for the jack. But there was an even better line that allowed for a 3-1 trump break and a 4-2 club division.

West continued with a second heart, ruffed by declarer. The ace-queen of trumps revealed that that suit was indeed divided 3-1, so declarer turned his attention to clubs.

He cashed two high clubs and, when both defenders followed, declarer could claim. He ruffed a low club with the king of trumps, returned to his hand with a heart ruff and drew the outstanding trump. After running clubs, declarer conceded a spade and claimed his contract.

Sen. John Tower, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee is flanked by Secretary of State George Shultz, right, and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger prior to the start of the Committee hearing. Weinberger and Shultz testified on President Reagan's proposed plan to base the MX Missile in existing Minuteman silos.

Joint staff testifies for new basing plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's top military leaders, who split sharply over the now-abandoned "dense-pack" MX missile basing plan, are uniting behind the new proposal for housing the strategic nuclear weapon in Minuteman silos.

The five members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff were called to testify today before the Senate Armed Services Committee on a presidential commission's recommendation that about 100 of the 10-warhead weapons be built and placed in underground silos now occupied by Minuteman III missiles.

All were expected to urge support for the proposal, which was sent to the White House on April 7 and endorsed by President Reagan on Monday.

The Pentagon issued a statement saying the chiefs "are unanimous in their support for the decision" and had "concluded that the crucial need for an advanced, highly capable ICBM (intercontinental ballistic missile) can best be met by the deployment of MX in Minuteman silos."

The chiefs also fully support the commission's call for development of a small, mobile, single-warhead missile that could be deployed in a decade, the statement said.

This unanimity contrasts with what occurred last Dec. 8 when the joint chiefs' chairman, Army Gen. John W. Vessey Jr., told the Senate panel that only he and the Air Force chief, Gen. Charles A. Gabriel, supported the dense-pack method of basing the missiles in silos clustered in tight formation.

Two of the other chiefs, Army Gen. Edward C. Meyer and Navy Adm. James D. Watkins, were said to have favored the use of the more widely scattered Minuteman silos, while the Marine commandant, Gen. Robert H. Barrow, was noncommittal.

The split in the ranks was seen as a key factor in Congress' eventual decision to scrap the dense-pack plan and prompt the new presidential study.

Hometown prepares for Glenn's candidacy

NEW CONCORD, Ohio (AP) — Main Street was festooned with "Welcome Home" signs today for U.S. Sen. John Glenn, a former astronaut who selected a high school named in his honor as the place to officially announce his candidacy for president.

With the announcement, Glenn becomes the sixth Democrat officially seeking the party nomination.

The merchants of this community of 1,800 people put up banners welcoming Glenn and his wife, Anna. One restaurant offered 98-cent "Glennburgers."

Technicians installed telephone lines and television lights for an estimated 200 reporters expected at John H. Glenn High School for the 10:30 a.m. speech.

Principal Don McKendry said about 140 of the school's 630 students would participate by directing traffic, acting as ushers or playing in the band.

He said it was a "once-in-a-lifetime educational opportunity" for the students, the oldest too young to remember Glenn's historic Earth orbit in 1962, but who will be old enough to vote next year.

Eccentric man charged with threatening Reagan

DETROIT (AP) — An eccentric 52-year-old man has been charged with threatening the life of President Reagan, authorities said.

Thadeusz Nowoselecki, of Detroit, was arraigned Wednesday and released on personal bond pending a May 4 preliminary hearing.

U.S. Magistrate Lynn Hooe Jr. denied prosecutors' request for stiffer bond, noting that Washington is a long way from Detroit and that Nowoselecki apparently has little money.

Ex-mayor's relative charged

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A son-in-law of former Mayor Frank Rizzo was free on $25,000 bail today after being charged in what police called "the biggest bookmaking business on the East Coast."

Joseph V. Mastronardo Jr., 33, of Huntington Valley, faces a preliminary hearing Monday in municipal court following his arraignment late Wednesday.

Mastronardo was among 15 people named in warrants as members of the alleged ring police say spans three states and takes in $30 million annually. Rizzo has been out of office one term and now is running for the Democratic mayoral nomination.

Fraternity put on probation

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — The fraternity member behind a plan to freeze a kitten in a block of ice used in a punch bowl at a party will face a conduct review, Montana State University officials say.

Assistant Dean of Students Rolf Groseth said Wednesday that the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity has been placed on probation by the university and by the national fraternal SAE organization following the incident at a party April 9.

Department makes mistake

CHICAGO (AP) — More than 100 people received unnecessary rabies shots, and others needlessly destroyed their pets, when a health officials misdiagnosed 10 cases of animal illness as rabies.

Cook County Public Health Department spokeswoman Mary Huck on Wednesday acknowledged the misdiagnosis of the animals, but said, "We would rather err on the side of precaution."

The faulty tests involved use of a substance that normally sticks to organisms that have been infected with rabies and glows under fluorescent light, she said. In the Cook County tests, the material stuck to non-rabid organisms.

New water line may be installed

BYRNESVILLE, Pa. (AP) — An emergency surface pipe may be installed for this northeastern Pennsylvania village, which was left without water after a cave-in caused by an underground coal mine fire.

A hole about 15 to 20 feet wide opened up in the ground Tuesday night or early Wednesday and ruptured the village's 4-inch water line about 200 yards south of neighboring Centralia, said James Shober of the state Department of Environmental Resources.

Men sentenced to life in prison

MIAMI (AP) — Two men convicted of murdering one federal agent and wounding another in a shootout at a Miami hotel were sentenced to life in prison plus 50 years, and five other men involved in the attack were sentenced for lesser crimes.

U.S. District Judge James Lawrence King on Wednesday sentenced Mario Simon, 41, and Augustino Alvarez, 42, both convicted of the first-degree murder of Ariel Rios, an agent with the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms.

Three others were sentenced to shorter terms for second-degree murder, conspiracy to distribute cocaine, cocaine distribution and assault. Two others were sentenced only on cocaine charges.

Bacteria forces shampoo recall

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pennsylvania company is recalling 234,000 bottles of baby shampoo because of bacterial contamination that can infect scratched or cut skin and eyes, the Food and Drug Administration says.

The shampoo was packaged by Pennex Products Company Inc. of Verona, Pa. It is sold under more than two dozen house brands.

Consumers with bottles of the shampoo should return them to the place of purchase for a refund, the FDA said.

Pennex began the recall after FDA tests showed the bacteria in one isolated lot. But further tests by the company and by FDA showed the problem to be more widespread and led to the broad recall.

The company has stopped using equipment which it believes is the source of the contamination.

Pennex distributed the product nationally as Soothex and Mara Lynne brands or with a generic label saying simply "Baby Shampoo."

The product also is sold as the Treasury brand baby shampoo by the Treasury Drug Division of J.C. Penney Co., New York, N.Y., and as the Army and Air Force Exchange Service's AAFES Baby Shampoo.

In addition, it was sold in the Northeast as Baby-Mate, distributed by Adams Drug Co. of Pawtucket, R.I.; Courtesy by Port Washington Distributor of Port Washington, N.Y.; Drug Guild by Drug Guild Dist. of Seacaucus, N.J.; Filene's by Filene's and Sons Co. of Boston; Happy Harry's by Merchandisers Inc. of Newark, N.J.; Heck's by Tri-State Distributors Inc. of Nitro, W.Va.; LSA by L.S. Anster and Co. Inc. of Westbury, N.Y.; Medalist by Spectro of Jenkintown, Pa.; Tops by Niagara Frontier Services of Buffalo, N.Y.; Top Value by S & P Drug of Brooklyn, N.Y.; and West Medical by West Medical Inc. of Framingham, Mass.

In the South, the baby shampoo was sold as Kerr brand by Kerr Discount Drug Stores of Raleigh, N.C.; Our Brand by SAS Products of Jacksonville, Fla.; Rose's by Rose's Stores of Henderson, N.C.; and Shopper's Drug Mart of Shopper's Drug Mart Inc., Boca Raton, Fla.

In the Midwest, the affected baby shampoo brands are Baby Touch, distributed by B and E Sales Inc. of Detroit; Coop brand by Universal Cooperatives of Minneapolis, Minn.; Elder-Beerman, distributed by Elder-Beerman Stores of Dayton, Ohio; Gold Circle by Gold Circle Division of Federated Stores, Worthington, Ohio; Seaway by Seaway Foods, Cleveland, Ohio; and Sunfresh, distributed by Sunfresh Inc. of St. Paul, Minn.

In the West, the product was sold under the brand name F & D by a company of the same name in Benicia, Calif.

FDA: Patients should be examined by scanners

WASHINGTON (AP) — Patients shouldn't hesitate to undergo examinations by sophisticated diagnostic machines despite reports that one brand of scanner releases more radiation than it should, the Food and Drug Administration says.

Christopher Smith, a spokesman for the FDA, said Wednesday that the agency is examining claims by a consumer group that two models of CAT (computerized axial tomography) scanner made by Technicare Inc. emit excessive radiation on one setting.

But meanwhile, "If you are a consumer, you shouldn't be concerned," Smith said. "The risk of not having the medical examination at this time outweighs any risk of radiation."

He also said the group's estimate that the scanners emit 30 percent to 70 percent more radiation on the one setting than they should is probably too high.

A CAT scanner produces three-dimensional images of the body by looking at cross sections of a body part. These images enable physicians to diagnose a wide range of problems, from cancer to injuries.

To take a life

Now that the "ultimate" man-inflicted penalty has been assessed by a Midland jury — the death penalty handed down Saturday to Clarence Allen Lackey for the 1977 rape and murder of Toni Diane Kumpf — it's worthwhile to reflect on that severity of punishment. Is it worth it?

The reality of what they were doing obviously grasped the jurors, many of whom wept as they left the courtroom. It's the type of trauma which can only be comprehended by those who have experienced it — deciding that the only just punishment for a vicious crime like the one in question is taking from the ciminal his own life.

The crime in question occurred in Lubbock and involved Lubbock residents. Some of the jurors may have even questioned the validity of Midland people handing down a death sentence to a Lubbock man. Was it their right? Was it their responsibility?

Of course the answer is an unequivocal yes. Under the rules of our society, we each have the right — and the responsibility — to make decisions of life and death. The evidence in the case strongly supported the verdict of guilty. Testimony revealed the defendant kicked in the front door of the woman's Lubbock apartment, abducted her and drove her to his apartment where he raped and then killed her in his bedroom and slashed her throat until her body was decapitated. That is violent, brutal crime.

Any question of rehabilitation pales in the light of the circumstances of this case. The nature of the crime cried for the death penalty.

Still, even those of us who believe the death penalty must be retained — and utilized — if true justice is to be possible in certain cases are dismayed by the brutality of our own system of justice.

The question, though, asks whether the death penalty is worthwhile. Yes, in this instance. In some other cases the death penalty will be justifiable, too. The living and the memory of the dead demand it.

Good neighborliness

One of the weaknesses in American foreign policy has been the ignoring of our two closest neighbors, Canada and Mexico. Not only have we ignored them, but on several occasions some of our leaders have been guilty of outright rudeness.

This climate of coolness seems to be changing, thanks in no small measure to the statesmanship of Secretary of State George M. Shultz. Two recent events have underscored his good neighborliness.

— Secretary Shultz visited Mexico this week.

— Canada's Foreign Minister, Allan J. MacEachen, called on Shultz in Washington the other day.

Neither visit warranted fat headlines but in the course of hemispheric history both could be significant.

Our secretary of state's sojourn to Mexico was, among other things, an effort to explain some of Washington's attitudes and policies concerning Latin America. But it also was part of a continuing effort by the Reagan administration to cement relations with the people below our southern border, and to pave the way for closer political and economic cooperation.

MacEachen's trek to Washington was the result of an agreement seven months ago between him and Secretary Shultz to hold quarterly reviews of relations between the two nations. Those relations were at a low ebb three years ago, perhaps the lowest since the War of 1812. But they have been improving, as the United States Ambassador to Canada, Paul H. Robinson, Jr., told us the other day.

He said: "There's no doubt about it, it has been basically a success story ... the relationship has demonstrably improved since George Shultz took over."

If Secretary Shultz does nothing in the next few months but bring Ottawa and Mexico City closer to Washington, he will have earned his diplomatic stripes. It is no idle dream to think the day may come when there will be a North American Common Market, whose members will be Canada, Mexico, and the U.S.A. George Shultz is laying the groundwork.

Another View:

Residue of civil war

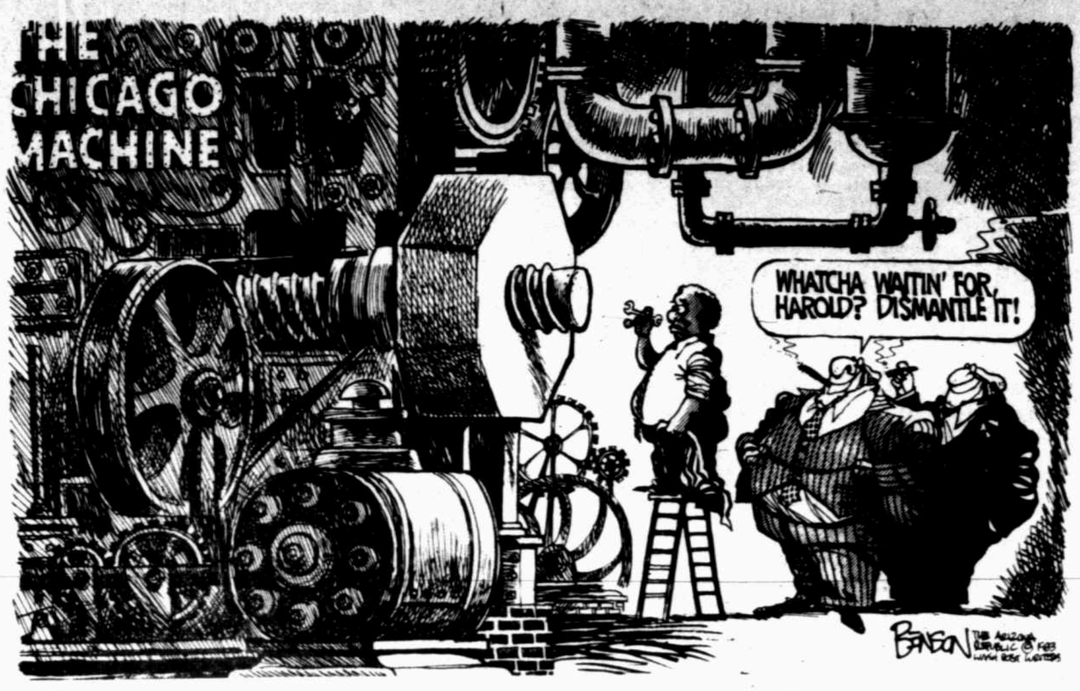

Any hope that Beirut may have seen an end to the carnage and horror that have been its savage lot in recent years was shattered Monday when the American embassy was bombed in a terrorist attack. With that attack fresh notice has been served that sudden violence in Beirut and elsewhere in Lebanon remains a potent and grisly reality, unpredictable in its timing and indiscriminate in its victims. This was by far the worst outrage committed against Americans and American property in Lebanon. It may not be the last.

President Reagan, in condemning the bombing, pledged that no act of terrorist vengeance or attempted intimidation will deter the United States from its goals in Lebanon or elsewhere in the region. In a world that is inherently dangerous, in an area that is ever threatened by instability, in a country where anarchy has yet to be controlled, risks to Americans are inescapable. It is inescapable as well that the United States will not and cannot afford to be frightened off by those risks.

Given the threat, which is by no means confined to Lebanon alone, new efforts must be made in cooperation with host governments to improve security at American installations abroad. External security at the embassy was the responsibility of Lebanese officials. The apparent ease with which explosives were brought close to the embassy building illustrates, if not a failure in that responsibility, then a clear inadequacy in existing security procedures. Clearly, more remains to be done to protect American lives and property, in Lebanon and elsewhere.

Minutes before the embassy explosion Col. James Mead, the Marine commander in Lebanon, identified a Moslem militia group with close ties to Iran as having been responsible for other recent attacks against Marines in the Beirut area. The same group may have been behind the embassy bombing, though there is no shortage of other candidates as well. That is part of the awful residue of Lebanon's long years of civil war and manipulation by foreign forces. There is a long way yet to go before that residue is finally eliminated.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

No country wants ex-fascist

WASHINGTON — Hans Lipschis, a former SS guard at Auschwitz, is scheduled to be deported to West Germany today. He will be the first suspected Nazi war criminal, according to the Justice Department, to be expelled.

Jack Anderson

Lipschis is a small fry. This is the story of a big fish. He is Valerian Trifa, once a power in the Iron Guard in his native Romania. During the Nazi occupation, the Iron Guard was Romania's home-grown version of the Nazi party.

Trifa was an ideologue, stridently militant with a unique gift for incitement, the author of violently inflammatory anti-Semitic tracts. He is held largely responsible for inciting a bloody pogrom in January 1941, in which hundreds — perhaps thousands — of Romanian Jews were butchered.

In 1955, I discovered that Trifa had escaped with the fleeing Nazis and had obtained secret refuge in the United States. I exposed his dreadful background, which he had tried to hide behind a cleric's collar.

Over the next 28 years, I continued to protest not just his presence in the United States, but the sympathetic treatment he has received from a succession of U.S. administrations. For example, he was invited, as bishop of the Romanian-American Orthodox Episcopate, to lead the Senate in prayer on May 11, 1955. As late as May 1, 1979, he was given a friendly interview on Radio Free Europe. Two broadcast employees who complained were fired.

Finally, last Oct. 7, the Justice Department announced that the Nazi hunters in the Office of Special Investigations had succeeded in bringing a deportation order against Trifa. The ex-fascist had come to the end of the line.

Or had he? More than six months later, Trifa is still living in the Detroit area.

The reason, according to Neal Sher, acting director of the Special Investigations office, is that no country will take Trifa. The government can't just dump him beyond the three-mile limit like a load of garbage — however fitting that might seem.

Under the law, a deportee is given his first choice of destination. Trifa picked Switzerland, but the Swiss refused to accept him.

That left it up to the government to find a country willing to give Trifa refuge. The Justice Department first tried Italy, from which Trifa had emigrated to this country in 1950. Italy refused to take him back, despite Trifa's personal entreaty.

The department then tried West Germany. Nothing doing.

What about Romania? After all, that's where Trifa's outrages occurred. A suitable justice should await him there.

A Justice Department source suggested that the Romanians had been asked to accept Trifa, but there has been no response to date. A Romanian Embassy official told my associate Lucette Lagnado that his government had helped with the U.S. investigation of Trifa.

So the search continues, and it is being closely monitored by the House Judiciary Committee and its chairman, Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J. Meanwhile, Valerian Trifa — who admitted his membership in the Iron Guard and to lying about it on his immigration application 33 years ago — continues to live comfortably in this country, the spiritual leader of 35,000 Romanian-American Orthodox Church members.

COMMUNIST CASH-IN: The Reagan administration is trying to figure out how to keep the Vietnamese government from cashing in on the 250 tons of merchandise — some $16 million worth — that Vietnamese refugees in this country send to relatives back home each month.

Hanoi, which profits handsomely from items that are purchased through special catalogs in the United States, encourages gift giving.

The gifts are purchased through Vietnamese government catalogs at retail price plus airmail shipping cost. But Hanoi actually buys the stuff wholesale in Hong Kong or Singapore and pockets the savings.

Packages sent direct by purchasers to relatives in Vietnam are also heavily taxed. A State Department spokesman said the administration may at least try to ban cash transfers to Vietnam. Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., has already offered such a bill.

FILM FUROR II: Two months ago, I reported that the Interior Department had tried to confiscate a documentary film started under the Carter administration — but had been unable to browbeat the National Wildlife Federation into giving up its copy, which had been purchased directly from the producer.

The federation has been showing the movie — about the advantages of steel vs. lead buckshot — to interested groups. So Interior officials have instructed employees to describe the film as "a rough work print" and to denounce the federation for showing it.

An internal memo orders officials to say, when asked about the film, that "release of the contents of the incomplete, unapproved production in its present form has not been authorized; hence any public display or dissemination ... is unauthorized, illegal and a gross misrepresentation."

HOORAY FOR HOLLYWOOD: When Jerry Lewis visited the White House on behalf of the Muscular Dystrophy Association, a "photo opportunity" with President Reagan was set up. Reagan suggested that Lewis move in closer for the cameras, and the comic reproved his old Hollywood friend: "There you go, directing again."

GEORGE F. WILL

Central American crisis looms

WASHINGTON — To begin, a two-question quiz.

George F. Will

First question: Since detente was codified at the Nixon-Brezhnev summit in 1973, the Soviet Union has forced a nuclear alert by threatening to intervene with troops in the October, 1973, war in the Middle East (a war incited and financed by the Soviet Union); has organized and financed the destruction of the Paris accords and a U.S. ally; has intervened with Cubans and others in Angola, Ethiopia, Yemen, Cambodia, Nicaragua and El Salvador; has invaded Afghanistan; has orchestrated the crushing of Poland; had made a mockery of the Helsinki agreements; has repeatedly violated the informally agreed to threshold test ban treaty (although we even changed the way we measure violations, in an effort to avoid the need to make protests that would dampen detente); has tried to murder the pope; is violating the terms of SALT II (an amazing feat, considering that SALT II is a tissue of loopholes and ambiguities); is funding and organizing terrorism worldwide; and is continuing an arms buildup unambiguously designed for political intimidation and military aggression. The first quiz question is: Why is there a "return to the Cold War"?

Answer: President Reagan gave a speech referring to the Soviet Union as an evil empire.

Second Question: The Soviet Union has an army brigade (2,600-3,000 men), 2,500 military advisers (increased 500 last year) and 6,000-8,000 civilian advisers in Cuba. It gave Cuba 66,000 metric tons of military supplies in 1981, 68,000 in 1982 (worth $1 billion). Moscow's annual economic aid to Cuba is $4 billion (more than one-quarter of Cuba's GNP). Cuba has 200 MIGs, including two squadrons of MIG-23 Floggers, at least 650 tanks, at least 90 helicopters, including MI-24 attack helicopters, a Koni-class frigate, two Foxtrot attack submarines, at least 50 torpedo attack boats, two amphibious assault ships. A Grenada minister says Cuba will use Grenada's new airport when supplying Cubans in Africa. Cuba, with one-seventh of Mexico's population, has military forces twice the size of Mexico's. The Soviet Union is giving 20 times more military assistance to Cuba than the United States is giving to all of Latin America. In the newest Soviet satellite, Nicaragua, 39 percent of all males over 18 are in uniform, and the regime intends to build a 250,000-persons armed force, so one in ten Nicaraguans will soon be in the military or militia. (All of Honduras' security forces total 20,000. El Salvador's total 32,000.) Nicaragua's regime has built 36 new military bases and garrisons (the previous regime had 13). Nicaraguan pilots and mechanics are being trained in Bulgaria. The regime has received, so far, 50 Soviet tanks, 1,000 East German trucks, 100 anti-aircraft guns, Soviet 152-millimeter howitzers with a range of 17 miles. Cuba has 4,000 to 5,000 civilian advisers in Nicaragua, plus 2,000 military and security advisers. There also are East Germans, Bulgarians, North Koreans, Soviets and members of the PLO. The second quiz question is: About what in Central America does Congress seem most worried?

Answer: Fifty-five U.S. trainers in El Salvador.

Events in Central America are spinning rapidly toward a decisive moment in U.S. history. None of the fictions that was used to rationalize acceptance of defeat in Vietnam can be used regarding Central America. The threat there is close, clear and indisputably communist. There the United States will show — will learn — whether it is any longer capable of asserting the will a great power requires, or whether the slide into paralysis is irreversible.

Governments such as Costa Rica's and Panama's are listening as congressional complaints mount. The complaints are against U.S. assistance to armed opponents of Nicaragua's Stalinists, and about even minimal aid for the democratically elected government of El Salvador that is under attack from forces that are extensions, through Nicaragua and Cuba, of the Soviet Union.

The conjunction of these complaints can mean, in effect, the extension of the Brezhnev doctrine in this hemisphere. That is, communist attacks on a regime leech away the regime's legitimacy, and produce pressures for negotiations aimed at "power-sharing" with Stalinists who do not believe in sharing power. But a communist regime, however freshly planted and dependent on foreign totalitarians, as in Nicaragua, must be treated as legitimate and irreversible.

There is a war raging and if all the substantial, determined military assistance is one-way, there can be but one result. The result will be a communist Central America, and an Iran just a wade across the Rio Grande.

ART BUCHWALD

War's big business is a profit

There was lots of nostalgia about the Falkland Islands war a few weeks ago. The British celebrated, the Argentines mourned, and we were all treated to a tour of the battleground by the TV networks.

Art Buchwald

What wasn't mentioned was that as soon as hostilities ceased, the world's arms merchants descended on Argentina to replenish the loser's arsenal.

The French arrived first and said to the Argentine military, "We're sorry you didn't do as well as you expected, but the good news is that we can sell you our Exocet Missile again."

"Where were you when we needed you?" an Argentine general wanted to know.

"We couldn't ship you the missiles while the war was going on because we didn't want to upset Margaret Thatcher. But now that things have quieted down, we can sell you anything you want. Since you demonstrated to other countries how accurate our Exocet is, we'll give you a free one for every dozen you buy. But you better act fast because we have a lot of countries standing in line for the missile."

The Argentines put in their order immediately.

As soon as the French left, the West Germans walked in. "We told you you couldn't win a war against the British if you didn't have enough sea power. If the fight for the Malvinas proved anything, it's that your country needs a strong, modernized Navy. West Germany is prepared to build Argentina the most modern ships on the high seas, including first-rate attack submarines. You'll never be militarily humiliated by England again."

The Argentine military chief of staff said, "I thought West Germany and Great Britain were both members of NATO."

"NATO is NATO," the Western Germans told him. "Business is business. Give us a billion dollars and we'll turn over four ships to you tomorrow."

The Argentines signed the order and mortgaged their grain crop for five years.

Next came the Israelis, the Belgians and other Western arms salesmen. No one left without an order.

Needless to say, the Pentagon was upset when they heard about the arms sales. It had nothing to do with the fact that Argentina was getting back into shape to take on the Brits again. It was that President Carter had imposed a military embargo on Argentina because of its human rights abuses, and U.S. weapons exporters were left out in the cold.

The Pentagon dealers complained to the White House. "We're losing our best South American market to the French and West Germans. The Argentines are committed to becoming a first-class military power, and need our stuff to do it. If we don't give them a waiver on human rights, we'll have to close down our Buenos Aires store. Worse still, the Soviets might offer to supply them with the hi-tech equipment just so they can give the British a bloody nose."

President Reagan, when informed that U.S. military equipment wasn't selling in Argentina, started pushing Congress to lift the embargo immediately, and promised he would deal with the human rights problem later.

In the meantime, private arms dealers in Virginia assured the Argentines they could order any U.S. equipment they wanted through third countries, who would rather have the cash.

The Argentines, according to reports, are now in hock up to their ears, but will soon be militarily stronger than they have ever been before. They are the first to admit they couldn't do it alone.

While most of the countries supplying Argentina with new weapons are Great Britain's closest allies, they haven't put any conditions on their sales. When you're a major arms-producing country, it's much more profitable not to take sides.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1966, surgeons in Houston used an artificial heart to keep a patient alive while awaiting a transplant.

One year ago: A nine-month ceasefire between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization ended after an Israeli soldier was killed by a land mine in southern Lebanon and Israeli planes bombed guerrilla positions north of Beirut.

Today's birthdays: Actor Anthony Quinn is 68 years old. Queen Elizabeth II is 57.

Thought for today: "Though familiarity may not breed contempt, it takes the edge off admiration." — William Hazlitt, English essayist (1778-1830).

Baby boom gives birth to baby boom

WASHINGTON (AP) — An echo of the post-World War II crush of students into elementary schools will be experienced as classes begin for children now 5 years old and younger, the fastest growing segment of the nation's population.

The Census Bureau reports that the big population group born during what is known as the post-war baby boom is giving birth to another population bulge.

The resurgence is a modest one, but a definite change in pattern, said Don Starsinic, the bureau's branch chief for state and national estimates.

The under 5 age group totaled 17.4 million as of last July 1, according to the bureau, up 6.3 percent from the 1980 census count.

"They will begin to affect the school age population in the next few years," Starsinic said in an interview.

"So we're going to have sort of a wave effect...there will be some interesting patterns over the next 10 years, some changes that will shake people up," Starsinic said.

The baby boom children have worked their way through high school. Enrollment in those grades, and colleges, will likely decline in coming years, while elementary school attendance will level off or grow somewhat, he said.

He noted that high schools and some colleges are already feeling the effect.

While the youngest are the fastest growing group, baby boomers — which includes the 18-to-44 age group — represent the nation's largest segment, according to the new Census study.

There were 97.5 million Americans in that group, representing 42.1 percent of the national total. That's up from 40.9 percent in 1980.

The nation's second largest age group is aged 5 to 17, making up 19.6 percent of the population. But that is a decline from their 20.9 percent share in 1980.

The 45 to 64 age group also lost some of its share, dropping from 19.6 percent in 1980 to 19.2 percent in 1982.

Robots ham it up for crowds

CHICAGO (AP) — It looks like a huge elephant's trunk, but it can delicately pick up an egg and put it in a holder or take a ball and drop it through a basketball hoop.

Although the robot from Sweden is not yet dunking shots, it is one of the flashiest players at the Robots 7 Conference and Exposition that has turned McCormick Place — Chicago's lakefront exhibition center — into a wonderland of 250 hissing, whirring, light-blinking contraptions that can do about everything but clean fingernails.

The exhibit is billed as the biggest industrial robot show ever staged, drawing products from 175 robot builders in 12 countries — $750 million worth of engineering.

Thw show is open to the public, but the exhibitors mostly hope to attract manufacturers interested in buying robots for their factories.

Many of the robots are programmed to ham it up to draw crowds to the various booths, like the 13-foot model from Spine Robotics, with its elephant-trunk-like arm able to reach nearly 16 feet.

"The Spine Robot can reach everywhere — from behind, from below, from the front and around," said Per Lenschow, control systems manager.

In a United States Robots display from King of Prussia, Pa., three blue robots warm up like football players — raising and lowering their "necks" and stretching their "arms." Then it's game time and they go to work putting together smoke detectors on an assembly belt.

The "Smokies" going at top speed "can turn out 2,800 smoke detectors on an eight-hour shift," said Mitchell Weiss, director of advanced development of the company. "It takes five humans to produce 2,000 in eight hours.

"Among the many things these robots can do on a diet of electricity is put together their own motors," he said. "It's the nearest thing to propagation in the robot world."

There are robots for everything. One model 10 feet high can lift three auto engine blocks at a time and stack them for shipment. Another squirts sealant into freezer liners and boasts a 2,000-position memory with capability of handling 99 different programs.

A sleek little robot from Japan follows a thin cord snake-like, coating it on all sides and smoothing it over. It would be used for applying plastic or other coating to wires or ropes.

Another robot can pick out specific machine parts from piles of different kinds and store them.

One of the biggest showoffs at the exhibit is "T3-726," the brainchild of Cincinnati Milacrom. It lures crowds to the company's exibit by dealing cards, explaining the rules of blackjack, calling out point totals and announcing winners. It keeps track of what has been played and knows how many cards are left in the deck and what their values are.

When the robot has a blackjack hand totaling 16 points — with 21 points needed to win — it points to the ceiling and says, "Look at that," and pulls a 5-card from behind its back.

In other words, it cheats.

Britons coin funny names for unpopular new pound

By MICHAEL WEST
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — The Round Pound, Funny Money, Mickey Mouse Money — these are just a few popular names for new one pound coins that went into circulation today on Queen Elizabeth II's 57th birthday.

Designed eventually to replace the traditional green one pound banknotes, the coins, measuring three-quarters of an inch in diameter, have pleased businesses, banks and vending machine operatives.

But the little gold-colored pieces of copper, nickel and zinc alloy weighing 0.3 ounces have forcibly brought home to Britons the fallen value of the once mighty principle unit of their currency.

"It's small, yellow and unloved," grumbled the Daily Mail. "The pound coin is today in your pocket because the pound in your wallet has been savaged and soiled by inflation."

The pound, worth $1.54 today against about $4 when the queen came to the throne in 1952, buys 1½ pints of beer in a pub, nine apples in the greengrocers, or eight seconds on a supersonic Concorde flight to America.

It's shrunk to a fifth of the value it had in 1970 and is worth an eightieth of the sovereign, the old solid gold one-pound coin that went out of circulation in 1920.

The Daily Telegraph lamented: "Currency in Britain has...for long been a symbol of the...strength of the nation. It is a pity, in this respect, that such a coin should have been introduced under the first prime minister in recent years to halt the slide in our national affairs, to stem inflation."

Britain's new one pound coin is slightly smaller than an American quarter.

Salvadoran guerrilla commits suicide

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A top leader of El Salvador's leftist guerrillas committed suicide in Managua after he learned his comrades had betrayed him and murdered his chief deputy, the Nicaraguan government says.

The Nicaraguan Interior Ministry said in a communique late Wednesday that Cayetano Carpio took his life April 12 in Managua shortly after he arrived to attend the funeral services of Melida Anaya Montes, known as Commander Ana Maria, who was murdered here April 6.

The leftist government announced the arrest of six Salvadorans, members of Carpio's guerrilla group, in connection with Ms. Montes' murder and claimed the suspects were acting on behalf of the Central Intelligence Agency. U.S. officials in Managua have termed the charge of CIA involvement "absurd."

There were no details about the manner in which Carpio died. The government said it delayed announcement of his death so it could notify guerrillas in El Salvador.

Carpio, 63, was head of the Popular Liberation Forces, the oldest and most radical of the five guerrilla groups fighting to overthrow the U.S.-backed government of El Salvador. He was a leading member of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, the umbrella organization of the guerrilla groups.

Shots fired near embassies

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two shots were fired near the British Embassy today, sending Marine guards and bystanders diving for cover at the bomb-shattered U.S. Embassy 750 yards away, witnesses said.

"Apparently someone didn't stop at a checkpoint," a secretary at the British Embassy told The Associated Press.

U.S. Marine warrant officer Bill Henderson said the shots were fired at about 11:15 a.m. (4:15 a.m. EST) by soldiers guarding a stretch of coastal highway between the two embassies.

Weapons may be Brazilian

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The weapons bound for Nicaragua on four Libyan planes seized by Brazilian authorities may have been manufactured in Brazil, a leading Rio newspaper reported today.

The Jornal do Brasil also quoted the navy minister, Adm. Maximiano da Fonseca, as saying, "I don't know what the cargo is, but (Libyan leader Col. Moammar) Khadafy has sold our arms to many countries."

Khadafy said Wednesday in Tripoli that the four planes were loaded with weapons for the leftist Sandinista regime in Nicaragua, adding he regretted any problems caused to Brazil.

Argentine families barred

LONDON (AP) — Britain will bar relatives of Argentine war dead from visiting graves on the disputed Falkland Islands because they rejected Red Cross supervision, the government announced.

The London Times reported today that Britain's stance resulted in a death threat against its Buenos Aires correspondent, Andrew Thompson.

Lee's historic track team faces final hurdle

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — On thin paper it appears that the Midland Lee track team is only one Friday night away from its most successful year on the oval. The culprit in the way is the District 4-5A track war here at Ratliff Stadium.

Lee has won seven meets in a row. The Rebels have never done that before. In that respect, Lee has already had it's most successful team ever. But if you don't win the big one when expected, it can become an awfully big and unwanted scar.

And scars come easily in the zany world of 4-5A track. Unknowns shine. Favorites often falter. This is the pressure meet of the year. It is a war with few holds barred.

AS MUCH as Lee would like to cap the team season with a victory, the 4-5A meet comes down to basic individuals. Since so much can be earned in this meet alone, amazing efforts from dark horses become almost common place.

The top two finishers in each event earn advancement to the Region I meet in two weeks in Lubbock. That's where state berths can be earned under the same formula. You can win races all year, but if you don't win at district, you are forgotten rather quickly. All of this forms the most exciting meet of the year.

If everything goes Lee's way Friday, the Rebels could qualify for the Region I meet in 12 events, but eight events is probably more achieveable. Midland High appears to have hopes in only three events, and that may take some doing.

At the top of Lee's list is Damon Polk, who is unbeaten this year in the high hurdles with a best of 13.88 this year. Odessa High's Reggie Jones and San Angelo's Mike Fanning appear to be the major threats.

Polk is also favored in the intermediate hurdles, winning five of seven races this year. However, his main threat may be teammate Luther Johnson, who has beaten Polk once this year with a fine 38.22 and was ahead in another race before tumbling over the final hurdle. This could be a Lee sweep, but Abilene High's Roger Wolf and Odessa Permian's Roger Bracy are contenders.

100 Meter Dash: Darren Williams, Midland Lee, 10.56, 1982.

400 Meter Dash: Randy Bartlett, San Angelo, 48.98, 1981.

200 Meter Dash: Arthur Williams, Midland Lee, 20.97, 1981.

300 Meter Intermediate Hurdles: David Piccolo, Midland Lee, 38.82, 1981.

1600 Meter Run: Robert Schooler, Midland Lee, 4:20.40, 1981.

1600 Meter Relay: Midland Lee (Barber, Goodley, D. Williams, A. Williams), 3:18.36, 1981.

NOTE: 1980 was the first year for District 4-5A to compete in meters and the above records do not include previous record holders in yards.

THE TEAM race may swing on how Lee and Permian perform in the relays and sprints, where the two teams have gone head-to-head all year.

Permian's Randy Ensch is favored in both sprints, but has been hurt and has not raced in either the 100 or 200 the past two weeks. Will Permian use Ensch in both relays and one of the sprints or both sprints and one relay? And is he healthy?

If Ensch is healthy, he will be favored to win whatever he runs in. Lee sophomore Walter Jones should be in both sprint battles, but there is also Allen Foret of Midland High, who seems to be coming strong in both events and Lee's Carlton Johnson is a major threat in the 200. Abilene's Reggie Moore and OHS' Jones are contenders also.

Lee is expected to win the sprint relay and place second to Permian in the 1600 relay. At least, that's the way its been most of the year. Disqualifications could play a role that could make or break either Permian or Lee.

LEE IS also expected to win the shot put where Isaac Garnett owns a 58-2½, four feet better than any competitor. The battle for second is where eyes will fall here.

Lee's Carl Piccolo is the defending district champion in the 1600 run, but he enters this race as a dark horse, even for a Region berth. Abilene's Russell Mangum and Eric Morris along with San Angelo's Mike Dotson all have better times in the 4:20 range. Mangum is also favored in the 3200 with Dotson and Piccolo hoping to make their own bids.

Midland High's Chuck St. Germain owns a district best of 1:57.21 in the 800 and was a Region I qualifier last year. However, Germain finished fifth in his last 800 after a bout with flu and is now a question mark. Emmons and Bruce Bennett of Permian are the best bets and Lee's David Myers the dark horse if St. Germain can't return to form.

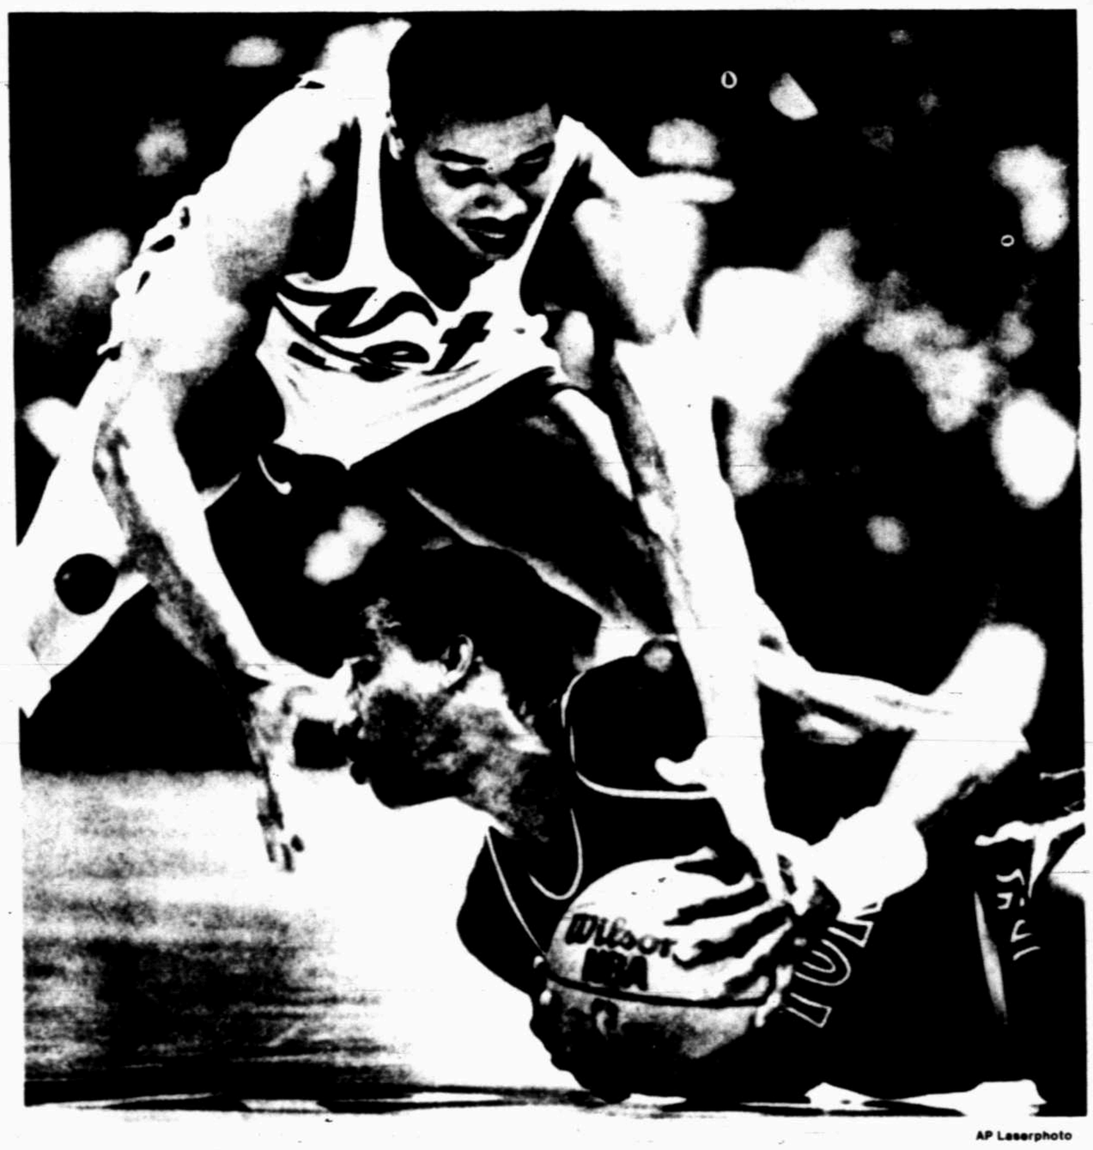

Lee's Luther Johnson and Permian LaVanson Rhone are expected to wage a battle in the long jump with both over 27-feet this year. No upsets are expected here.

The pole vault is a question mark. Lee's Wayne Brandt has a best of 13-6 this year, but none of the vaulters have been consistent. Joey Carlin of Abilene and Arlon Carroll of Permian are major contenders.

THE HIGH jump is another mystery. Odessa's Thomas Taylor is the best with a 6-10 this year, but he has been going down hill and finished fifth two weeks ago. If Taylor falters, Lee's Michael Barton, who has also been inconsistent despite a 6-6, could sneak in. San Angelo's John Johnson may be the favorite.

Cooper's Jon Matthews is the favorite in the discus with a 164-11 while Hollis Williams of Permian and Frank Alcazar of Cooper are major contenders. OHS may borrow Boyd Cowan from baseball for this event.

Friday's action starts at noon Friday with field event finals. Running preliminaries will be staged at 1:30 p.m. and the running finals will start at 7 p.m.

Girls face Region I test

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Six Midland girls take their state track hopes to Lubbock Friday and Saturday at the Texas Tech oval. The Region I girls meet is the last stop before the state meet in Austin in two weeks.

Midland High has qualified five girls for six events and Midland Lee will have one representative in the Region I shootout where the owners of the top two places in each event will be Austin bound.

"Everything becomes important when you get to this stage of the track season, but I think our girls will compete well," said MHS coach Brenda Mitchell. "It's been a season of injuries for us, but the girls have kept coming back."

MIDLAND'S BEST hopes may hindge on junior Claire Hardy, who has qualified for both the 3200 and 1600 meter runs. Hardy was a state qualifier in cross country last fall and her name is known across the Region I area, which includes all of West Texas.

"Claire has been phenominal this year," Mitchell said. "She started slow this spring, but came on strong to set six two-mile records and one record in the mile. El Paso, however, always has great distance runners and she will have to perform well to get to state."

Hardy owns an 11:45 this year in the 3200 and a 5:33 best in the 1600, times she didn't match in the District 4-5A meet due to cold conditions.

Senior Penny Griffin is another two-event Region I qualifier for MHS, winning berths in the long jump and triple jump. Tina Knight, a sophomore, is also in the triple jump for MHS.

"Penny was really the surprise in the triple jump. She had never won in that event until district and came through with a 36-1½. She has had leg problems all year," said Mitchell. "Tina had won in the triple jump a couple of times."

Griffin owns an 18-3 in the long jump and will have to do much better in that event if she wants a state berth.

MHS also will have its 1600 meter relay team in the Region I meet, but this is the dark horse. It may be difficult for this team to qualify for Saturday's finals. Connie Sutherland and Charlotte Hines will join Knight and Griffin on that team. Sutherland is a junior and Hines is a sophomore. Only Griffin is a senior. The team owns a best of 4:11, which came only last week.

"This is the first time we've all been healthy and it may be too late. But we knocked eight seconds off our district time (4:19) in one week. I think they can make the finals if everyone performs. Then who knows?" Mitchell said.

LEE'S ONLY entry in the Region I meet will be Felicia Farias in the high jump She has a best of 5-4 this year, and if she could duplicate that Saturday, she may be on her way to Austin.

"I think 5-4 will take second place at least, but I think you will have to have that height to go to Austin," Farias said. "There are a couple of girls who have gone as high as 5-4."

Griffin will compete in the long jump finals at 11 a.m. Friday. The running event preliminaries will be held at 1:30 p.m. Friday with the top eight in each event moving to the finals. Griffin and Knight will triple jump at 9:30 a.m. Saturday while Farias will go in the high jump at 11 a.m. Saturday.

Dodgers halt Cub streak

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

San Antonio's Dodgers rode a stiff wind to left for three home runs and got combined five-hit pitching from Steve Martin and Shayne Hammond to end the four-game winning streak of the Midland Cubs, 8-2, at Cubs Stadium Wednesday night.

However, the real secret to the game's outcome may have been the Dodgers' ability to keep Bill Hatcher and Rick Baker, the Cubs' first two batters, off the bases while Dodger centerfielder Cecil Espy was continually getting on for the Dodgers.

THE SAN Antonio leadoff batter didn't do that much actual damage, but he worries a pitcher to death.

"He's a good player, isn't he," San Antonio Manager Terry Collins beamed. "He stole close to 80 bases for me last year at Vero Beach. And tonight he gave us a chance to be aggressive."

"Last year, he was our catalyst, but when we got in the playoffs, they managed to keep him off the bases and we died."

After two straight losses to Midland, Collins' strategy was to make Midland swing the bat and not put runners on with walks, "so that Tom (Midland Manager Harmon) couldn't run like he did the first two nights. Midland really came at us and got the key hits. We couldn't let them do that again."

Martin and Hammond helped carry out the strategy, although seven Cubs walked. Midland batters continually were pounding the ball into the dirt and only two of their 10 fly ball outs went to left, the direction the wind was blowing.

MARTIN, 3-0, went the first six, stiffened up and was relieved by lefthander Hammond, who didn't give up a hit, but walked three and hit two batters.

Both runs off Martin were unearned. Hatcher singled to open the game for Midland and eventually scored on an infield error.

Espy was on first as a result of an error, stole second and took third on the overthrow and then Mark Sheehy hit his two-run homer off Midland starter Carlos Gil, 0-2, whose concentration might have been effected by Espy's base-running antics.

Robbie Allen hit a two-out solo homer in the fourth and R.J. Reynolds hit a two-run job in the fifth to give San Antonio a 5-1 lead.

Midland's other run in the sixth when Tommy Johnson doubled to center, took third on Don Hyman's single to right and scored on the error by Reynolds as he tried to one-hand the ball on the run.

The Dodgers collected 13 hits with Reynolds knocking in three runs. Stu Pedersen, who has hit safely in 13 straight games, waited until his last at bat to keep the streak alive, tripling in the eighth and scoring on a wild pitch.

The victory boosts San Antonio's Texas League West lead to 1½ games over the Cubs while El Paso and Beaumont are two games back after El Paso defeated Beaumont, 7-3, Wednesday night.

In the Texas League East, Tulsa bombed Shreveport, 10-4, and Arkansas escaped with a 3-2 victory over Jackson.

Midland and San Antonio wrap up the current series with games tonight and Friday and the Cubs could take over first place with a sweep of the final two games of the homestand.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Stan Kyles (1-0, 5-3) goes for Midland in tonight's 7 p.m. game while Jody Johnson (0-1, 5.40), picked up from the Mets' organization, goes for the Dodgers...A.J. Hill, out since the first game of the homestand with a severe case of the flu, is on the mend for the Cubs and should be ready to play soon...Hatcher stretched his hitting streak to eight games, but Rick Baker's nine-game string ended...Trey Brooks, however, has a nine-gamer going...

Road teams shock homers

By The Associated Press

The Portland Trail Blazers and New York Knicks, who didn't clinch playoff berths until the final days of the regular season, played like they have no intention of making their postseason stay a short one.

Both teams registered victories on the road Wednesday night in the openers of their National Basketball Association playoff series. Portland whipped Seattle 108-97, while New York blasted New Jersey 118-107.

The Knicks could wrap up their best-of-3 series tonight at Madison Square Garden, while the Blazers and Sonics will play Game 2 in Portland Friday night. Tonight's other playoff game has Phoenix at Denver, with the Suns leading 1-0.

Bernard King hit 16 of 21 shots and scored 40 points, the most in the NBA playoffs in two years, to lead the Knicks over the Nets.

"The important thing was winning, not how many points I scored," said King, who hit 11 of 12 shots and scored 25 points in the first half, which saw the Knicks take a 58-50 lead. "I wasn't aware of the number of shots in a row I had. I knew my rhythm was good and my release was right."

New York never trailed en route to winning its first postseason game since 1978. Meanwhile, the Nets are now 0-5 in the playoffs since coming into the NBA for the 1976-77 season.

King's 40 points were the most by an NBA plaer since Moses Malone had 40 for Houston against San Antonio on April 26, 1981. He was only three points short of the all-time Knicks playoff record set by Willis Reed in 1969.

At Seattle, Mychal Thompson and Jim Paxson scored 25 points apiece for the Trail Blazers, who will meet defending NBA champion Los Angeles if they can beat the Super-Sonics.

Portland, which split six regular-season games with Seattle, led 59-45 at halftime and didn't let the Super-Sonics get closer than seven points in the second half.

Portland's biggest second-half lead, early in the third quarter, was 16 points.

Damon Polk, Luther Johnson test teammate concept

Damon Polk and Luther Johnson just don't seem to fit the mold of teammates. But they are teammates in that they attend Midland Lee and compete for the Rebels in both football and track.

I'm not even sure if they like each other, but I intend to ask them that question one of these days. It just seems strange to call them teammates.

It all started in football. Both played wide receiver. Both couldn't play at the same time. Before the first game was played, I said that Polk would go deep six (long touchdown pass reception) before Johnson. Johnson said he would win hands down. After all, Johnson was the starter.

POLK WON the bet, going over 50 yards in the second game of the year in El Paso. Johnson went on to become the top receiver in District 4-5A and win a football scholarship to the University of Texas-El Paso.

Then came track. Both run the 300-meter intermediate hurdles. Both are class hurdlers. Polk has been on top in this "teammate" approach, beating Johnson four of six times. Ironically, Johnson's 38.22 is the best between the two.

Johnson's last bout with Polk came in the Tall City Relays. He had Polk beat only to tumble over the last hurdle. Polk wins again.

"I knew I had him (Polk) beat. But I'll get him," Johnson said with a scowling face. Polk replied, "Yea, he had me beat, but I won. I didn't fall."

Oh, the stuff teammates are made of.

FRIDAY NIGHT the two will go head-to-head again, but this time in the all-important District 4-5A meet. Lee ms hoping for a 1-2 sweep in the 300 hurdles for Polk and Johnson. From coach Sam Volpe's point of view, it doesn't matter which one finishes first and which one second. The points are the same — all 18 of them.

Coach Volpe, as all coaches, preaches the team concept. But in track teammates compete for the same finishing tape. Both can't win. It's a fact of life.

"Both are competitive individuals and neither likes to lose," says Volpe. "But that's the kind of kids you like to have. I would like to see them battle for first and second every week. If we come in first and second in the 300 hurdles, both go to the regional meet. I would like that."

Of course, Johnson and Polk would like that too. But it would start all over again. It makes little difference of who is really best at what. Both have given Lee dependable service.

One thing that eases the competitive spirit between the two is that the 300 hurdles is not the end of the world for either. Polk is unbeaten in the high hurdles, an event Johnson doesn't run. Johnson is a good bet to win a region berth in the long jump. Polk and Johnson both run on what appears to be region bound relay teams.

IF THINGS go to form Friday in the 4-5A meet, there is going to be enough gravey for both competitors and the Lee Rebels. If beating each other is an incentive, let it be. It provides track fans with a lot of thought.

But just because both wear Maroon, do we have to call them teammates? Volpe would say, "Yes!" I will say, "I'm not sure!"

Seaver, Carlton roll on

Baseball Roundup

By The Associated Press

Tom Seaver and Steve Carlton, the 1-2 leaders in career shutouts among active National League pitchers, added to their totals with masterful performances Wednesday night.

Seaver pitched a three-hitter and tripled home a run in New York's three-run second inning, pacing the Mets to a 6-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates in the first game of a doubleheader for his 55th career shutout. The Mets completed a doubleheader sweep with a 7-5 victory as Mookie Wilson snapped a 5-5 tie with an RBI single in the eighth inning.

CARLTON NOTCHED his 53rd, hurling the Philadelphia Phillies to a 2-0 decision over the Chicago Cubs with a four-hitter.

The victory was Seaver's first decision of the year, despite performing well in two previous starts. Seaver has pitched 22 innings this season and given up only two runs on 11 hits. Against the Pirates, Seaver struck out nine and walked three.

Carlton struck out 10 and walked three against the Cubs and Joe Morgan provided him with all the runs he needed with a two-run homer. It was Carlton's 288th career victory, leaving him 12 sly of becoming the 16th pitcher in baseball history to win 300 games.

In other National League action, Cesar Cedeno's two-run double keyed a six-run fifth as the Cincinnati Reds beat the Houston Astros 6-4.

Rain postponed the San Diego-Atlanta game and the St. Louis-Montreal contest was postponed by cold weather.

In the American League, Jim Rice belted a game-tying, two-run homer with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning and Tony Armas walked with the bases-loaded with two out to lift the Boston Red Sox to a 5-4 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Dave Stieb pitched his way out of a no-out, bases-loaded jam in the first inning and went on to record his second complete-game victory of the season as the Toronto Blue Jays defeated Cleveland 4-1, handing the Indians their fourth consecutive loss.

Jim Sundberg and Mike Richardt drove in two runs apiece as the Texas Rangers scored seven of their nine unearned runs in the third inning and defeated the Baltimore Orioles 11-2.

GEORGE BRETT belted three homers and drove in seven runs, including a two-run shot in the top of the ninth inning that gave the Kansas City Royals an 8-7 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

New York's Dave Righetti flirted with a no-hitter for 5 1-3 innings and allowed two hits in eight shutout innings as the Yankees defeated the Chicago White Sox 6-4.

Minnesota's Gary Gaetti backed the five-hit pitching of Bobby Castillo and Rick Lysander by driving in three runs with a single and double as the Twins posted their fourth straight triumph, an 11-2 rout of the Seattle Mariners.

Seattle's John Moses jumps in vain for fly ball off the bat of Twins' Tom Brunansky.

The Oakland-California game was postponed by rain.

In a late NL game on the West Coast, Jack Clark's bases-loaded, fielder's-choice grounder with one out in the 10th inning broke a tie and gave the San Francisco Giants a 3-2 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Trout, redfish may be poor, but sheepshead good off season bet

BY RODNEY RIEHLE

TROUT AND redfish conditions may be poor during the early spring days, but the sheepshead is considered an excellent off-season fish at that time. "Winter is one of the best time s to catch two-to-five pound sheepshead along the lower Texas coast," says Kenneth Rice, TPWD biologist.

Sheepshead tend to become active this time of year, prior to spawning, and can be found around piers and jetty rocks. Rice says live or dead shrimp or small crabs fished close to the structures are good producers.

BAY FISHERMEN who operate boats in shallow bay areas near Rockport should be aware of a potential hazard to their motors' health. TPWD biologist Joe Martin said during winter months and early spring dead grass and other aquatic vegetation sometimes sheds after cold fronts, and the material collects on water surface.

"The prudent boater should keep an eye on his motor's discharge spout," Martin said. "If the thin stream of water slows or stops while your motor is running, you should immediately turn it off and free the water intake."...

THE NATIONAL Marine Fisheries Service has started a king mackerel tagging program in the Gulf of Mexico and officials are asking the cooperation of fishermen in recovering the tags.

Crews tagged 311 kings off Grand Isle, La., in Janurary. The TPWD biologists anticipate that some of the tagged fish will migrate to Texas waters in the spring and summer.

The tagged fish can be identified by a plastic streamer protuding from the abdomen. The tag must be cut from the fish's body. Return the tags to the NMFS, 3500 Delwood Beach Road, Panama City, Fla. If you don't happen to be in the area, send the tags to any Parks and Wildlife Dept. office.

WHITE BASS began to bite at Lake Spence over the weekend while black and striped bass action continued to be brisk.

Bill Burns, Robert Lee, caught 15 whites while Odessa's Jerry Anderson landed a 30-pound blue catfish and Jake and Don Rhodes, Odessa, took 11 blacks to four pounds. All catches were out of Cracker Barrel Grocery.

Heather and Kevin Coe, Odessa, reported 10 and seven pound stripers, but the biggest striper catch was by Chester Banta, Snyder, who took six stripers, the biggest at 17 3/4, in two days. He also had 14, 9½ and 8½ pounders.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept. is offering two free handbooks dealing with local park, recreation and historic site project development.

One of the publications, "Foundations", gives the mechanics of how to form foundations for preserving historic sites or open space in the local community. It explains the advantages of using private funds, or a combination of private and public funds, for accomplishing projects.

The book entitled "Scrounging" deals with how to utilize resources, normally used or wated for outdoor recreation.

To obtain either, write Comprehensive Planning Branch, TPWD, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, 78744.

25 fish hatcheries to get ax from U.S.

ATLANTA (AP) — The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service wants to close 25 fish hatcheries this year and give four more to the Bureau of Indian Affairs. If the proposals go through, the agency will have disposed of half its hatcheries in two years.

The closings, in 21 states, represent a loss of about 53 million fish a year, one-third of the total raised by the service, according to federal figures.

The service closed 16 of its 89 hatcheries last year, and the current proposal will leave it with only 44.

In addition, the National Marine Fisheries Service is planning to close 19 of its 24 salmon hatcheries, all in the Columbia River basin, meaning its trout and salmon production will be cut from 120 million fish per year to 30 million.

"I think this whole program (of closing hatcheries) is just an affront to the American angler," said Rudolph Rosen of the National Wildlife Federation.

If the hatcheries close, "we would probably lose at least 75 percent of the cold water fish that are now available to us, so 75 percent of the waters we now stock would not receive fish," said Pete Pfifer, director of fisheries in Kentucky.

"If they close all those hatcheries, we will be lucky to get any fingerlings at all from the federal government, and we currently get all of our fingerlings from the federal government," said Georgia Chief of Fisheries Mike Gennings.

The proposed closings are part of efforts to cut federal spending, said Meg Durham, a Fish and Wildlife Service spokeswoman in Washington. She said hatcheries being closed are those which primarily provide fish to state-owned or state-managed waters.

"It's the feeling that the states should pick up these programs if they want to continue them," she said.

Hatcheries to be closed in fiscal 1983 include Neosho, Mo.; Crawford, Neb.; Cheraw, S.C.; Pisgah Forest, N.C., and Senecaville, Ohio.

Hatcheries to be closed in fiscal 1984 include Tishomingo, Okla.; Inks Dam, Texas; Uvalde, Texas.

Olajuwon reportedly met with Lee Fentress, an attorney who represents Philadelphia's Moses Malone. "It is a big decision and a difficult decision to make," Olajuwon said. "I will definitely have to make the decision by May 14, but I would really like to have it done by May 12 or sooner."...

Oilers set goal record

By The Associated Press

The Edmonton Oilers, with a record-breaking performance against Calgary, and the Chicago Black Hawks advanced Wednesday night to the Campbell Conference championships, the semifinals of the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup playoffs.

The Oilers blew out the Flames 9-1, setting the record for the most goals in a five-game, six-game or seven-game playoff series by putting the puck in Calgary's net 35 times in five games.

The Black Hawks won the Norris Division title, also in five games, by defeating the Minnesota North Stars.

IN THE two divisions of the Wales Conference, the New York Islanders took a 3-2 lead in their best-of-seven Patrick finals by beating the New York Rangers 7-2 and, in the Adams, Boston went up 3-2 on Buffalo by blasting the Sabres 9-0.

Defenseman Paul Coffey's second goal of the game, at 1:39, triggered Edmonton's five-goal burst in the second period. Coffey's power-play goal at 12:09 of the first period opened the scoring and Mark Messier made it 2-0 after one period.

Coffey, Randy Gregg, Pat Hughes, Don Jackson and Wayne Gretzky all scored for Edmonton in the second period, and Glenn Anderson and Ray Cote scored for the Oilers in the third period after Steve Konroyd had ended Andy Moog's shutout bid at 9:32.

Doug Wilson and Rick Paterson scored shorthanded goals for the Black Hawks. Denis Savard put Chicago ahead with a power-play goal at 7:24 of the first period, then Bob Murray of the Black Hawks drew a penalty at 17:49 of the period and Wilson fired a 45-footer past Gilles Meloche with 38 seconds permaining in the period.

Murray drew another penalty at 3:21 of the second period before Paterson, who had scored all three of Chicago's shorthanded goals during the regular season, intercepted a pass and beat Meloche at 4:13 of the second period.

BOB BOURNE paced a four-goal blitz in the second period in the Islanders' romp. He had a goal and three assists in the game, including a length-of-the-ice rush for the goal which capped the middle period. The Islanders outshot the Rangers 43-20.

Rick Middleton and Barry Pederson had two goals and two assists apiece and goalie Pete Peeters stopped 27 shots for the Bruins. Boston drove Buffalo goalie Bob Sauve to the bench on goals by Bruce Crowder at 2:16 of the first period and Middleton on a power play 58 seconds later. Phil Myre took over after the second goal, but the assault never let up.

The Islanders and Bruins can clinch their division titles on the road Friday night.

Midland golfers falter, Rankin gains state berth

LUBBOCK — The Midland High girls were searching for a way to pick up at least 46 strokes as last round play began here today in the Region I Girls golf tournament, but Rankin is going to Austin.

The Bulldogs shot a first round 408 Wednesday at the Lubbock Municipal Course to find themselves mired in seventh place with Big Spring. Round Rock leads the 5A chase with 358 and Hurst Bell owns a 362. The top two teams earn advancement to the state tournament in Austin, May 5-6.

Big Spring's Patricia Jones is a surprise contender in the medalist race after Wednesday's round of 82. Kim Dirk of Arlington Heights also shot an 82.

No individual scores were available for the Midland team.

Midland High will have to catch Hurst Bell to earn a trip to Austin while hoping none of the other four teams in the hunt make up ground.

Midland High is making its fifth straight appearance in the Region I meet under Coach Mary Baird. The team has won seven district titles under Baird and has produced four trips to state since girls golf began at MHS in 1973.

MHS won the state crown in 1975, finished second in 1973, third in 1981 and sixth last year.

However, a return trip to the state meet may not be in the cards for MHS this year after Wednesday's 408.

Rankin's girls earned a state golf berth Wednesday with a second place finish in the Class A regional tournament in Levelland. Sundown won the Region I title with a 756 while Rankin had a 769. Booker finised third with 810 and Iraan was fourth with an 844.

Medalist honors went to Mona Jennings of Wheeler and Cathy Cadell of Sundown was second.

Rankin was paced by Angela Reece with a two-day 191 while Susie Smith had a 192. Other Rankin scores were Kim Nicholson, 195; Trina Wheeler, 198; and Elma Rubio, 203.

Ways and Means to vivisect independents

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee will, on May 5 and 6, conduct hearings into the equity — or inequity — of special tax breaks enjoyed by independent oil and gas producers.

Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the panel's Oversight Subcommittee, said Wednesday the review will focus on the "differences in tax treatment between intergrated oil companies and independent producers."

Though the Democrats deny this, independent producers claim the hearings are politically motivated.

This could be, at least partially, true. Democrats on Capitol Hill have long complained that the independent producers have become a major source of contributions to the Republican Party and its candidates and that the oilmen field their own slates of candidates even against those Democratic incumbents who vote with the oil industry.

To qualify as an independent, a producer can refine no more than 50,000 barrels of oil a day, and can sell in the retail market no more than $5 million worth of oil a year.

Prior to 1975, the tax law treated income from domestic oil and gas extraction essentially the same regardless of whether that income was received by a major (integrated) company or an independent producer, or an individual or a corporation.

Since then, Congress has enacted in a piecemeal fashion a series of tax laws that distinguish between various types of oil and gas producers.

Among special tax breaks enjoyed by the independents is a provision allowing them to write off 100 percent of intangible drilling costs. Major oil and gas companies immediately can write off 85 percent and the remaining 15 percent over a three year period.

Another break gives independents the right to claim percentage depletion on up to 1,000 barrels of oil or the equivalent amount of natural gas a day while major producers receive no favorable tax treatment.

Independents also pay far lower rates under the windfall profits tax than the majors and pay no windfall tax at all on oil from stripper wells that produce at a very low rate. Majors are also required to deposit their windfall tax faster than the independents.

Rangel said the panel will inquire into the extent to which the present law "favors certain kinds of oil and gas producers relative to others, whether tax treatment which is not uniform is good tax and energy policy, and whether the specific provisions to provide differing treatment work as they were intended."

TARIFF AND TRADE BILLS HEARINGS

The House Ways and Means Subcommittee on Trade will hold hearings April 27 and May 5 on a package of tariff and trade bills that would provide permanent duty-free entry, duty reduction, temporary suspension of duty, classification change, and duty increases.

Among duty-free measures are bills that would permit duty-free entry of warp knitting machines, water chestnuts and bamboo shoots and semiconductors.

The duty reduction package includes measures to reduce duties on disposable surgical drapes and sterile gowns, unwrought lead, fish-netting and fish-nets, and fancy and odd shaped watch crystals for a period of three years, plus caffeine until the end of 1985.

The package of duty suspension measures includes bills that would provide for a three year suspension of the duty on B-naphtol, menthol feedstocks, parts of spindle motors suitable for computer memory disck drives, crude feathers and down, synthetic rutile, unwrought alloys of cobalt and benzoid chemicals.

According to the proposals, duty would be increased on imported roses, wool from Argentina and Uruguay, honey, cooper, copper ores, materials and melamine.

CAPITAL FORMATION FOR SMALL FIRMS

Small firms would be aided in capital formation under legislation introduced by Sen. Lowell Weicker Jr., chairman of the Senate Small Business Committee.

Under the Small Business Capital Formation Act of 1983, small business owners would see a reduction in the corporate tax rate, a 20 percent increase in the capital gains deduction for equity investments in small businesses, a 10 percent tax credit for that same investment, and a capital gains deferral on sale of property if the proceeds are reinvested in a small business within one year.

In addition, the measure would establish a 20 percent maximum corporate capital gains rate for small business equity investments, permitting small businesses which elect to do so to use a cash receipts method of accounting.

Weicker said that he and cosponsors Alfonse D'Amato, R.-N.Y., Sam Nunn, D.-Ga., and Thad Cochran, R.-Miss., had agreed on the provisions after reviewing the results of a Government-Business Forum on Capital Formation held last September.

COGENERATION PRAISED

The Congressional Office of Technology Assessment claims that cogeneration, the combined production of steam and electricity, could contribute significantly to reduced costs and greater planning flexibility for electric utilities and "to increased energy efficiency in industrial facilities, commercial buildings, and rural agriculture areas."

In a bulky report to Congress, the panel said that costs could be 20 to 40 percent lower per kilowatt for commercially available cogenerators than central station generating capacity.

The panel warns, however, that along with all of its contributions there do remain some problems. The industries are limited by many constraints: difficulties in using lower cost solid fuels, competition from conservation measures, and the high cost of investment.

The General Electric Co., which has manufactured cogeneration equipment for 25 years and is the nation's biggest single supplier, is now expanding its marketing efforts to include financial incentives and technical service to buyers.

Cogeneration's main appeal for much of this century has been to big users of process steam — chemical companies, food-processing plants, paper mills — which attached turbines and generators to their boilers to wring useful energy out of the exhaust.

DENY INDUSTRY PROTECTED

A National Planning Association three-year study found that contrary to claims that U.S. industry is highly protected the protection is small and declining.

Following a study of such programs and institutions as U.S. government procurement practices, Export-Import financing, discounted government loans, loan guarantees and technical assistance to U.S. firms, the study determined the U.S. offers less import protection or export incentives than its industrial competitors.

The association warned that by 1985, the protection received by most manufacturing industries "should be substantially reduced" from pre-Tokyo Round levels, due to the implementation of the Round's agreements and recent federal budget cuts."

The Tokyo Round of Multilateral Trade Negotiations took place in 1979 to discourage national policies in trade-impacted as well as high technoloy industries that protected domestic industry. Six codes covering government procurement, subsidies and countervailing duties, standards, import licensing, customs valuation, and dumping were negotiated to reduce or bring non-tariff barriers under control.

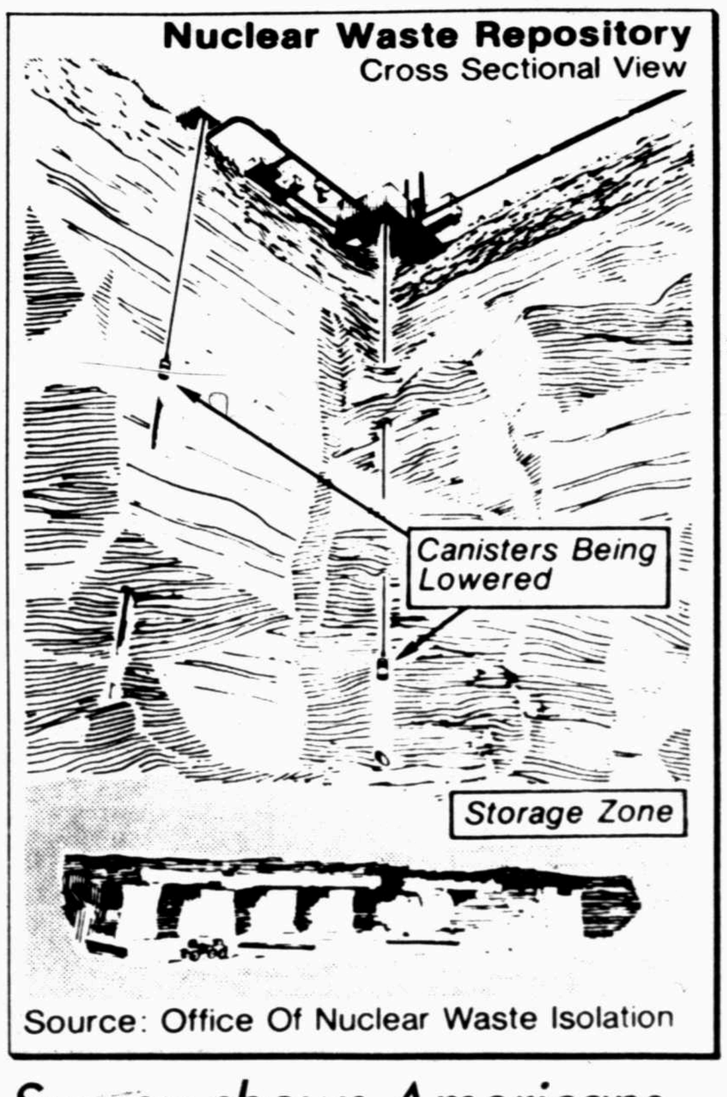

NOT DISRUPTED MARKETS

The U.S. Court of Appeals has ruled that the General Services Administration has not unduly disrupted the tin market by its sales of surplus tin from the National Defense Stockpile.

The GSA, through the Federal Property Resources Service, is responsible for disposing of surplus materials in the stockpile. In 1979, Congress authorized GSA to dispose of some 35,000 tons of surplus tin. Since the U.S. uses 40,000 to 60,000 tons of refined tin per year — 27 percent of free world consumption — care must be taken by GSA not to unduly disrupt domestic and world tin markets in carrying the Congress' sales mandate. The decision was on a suit filed by Associated Metals and Minerals Corp., the only U.S. tin smelter, which alleged that GSA's sales methods were disrupting the tin market.

Sen. Wilson introduces drilling bill of his own

By LINDA BREAKSTONE
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON - Republican U.S. Sen. Pete Wilson, the recipient of $150,000 in contributions from oil-related industries, didn't like Democrat U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston's five-week old bill to ban drilling off portions of the California coast, so yesterday Wilson introduced one of his own.

Wilson's measure differs from the one sponsored jointly by the two powerful Democrats, Cranston and Sen. Ted Kennedy,of Massachusetts, in three ways:

— Wilson's bill would ban the drilling in designated areas for only 10 years rather than Cranston's proposed year 2000.

— An exemption clause is included in Wilson's bill to give the president the authority to order exploration in the event of a national emergency.

— The Wilson bill drops the other states, such as Massachusetts, included in the Cranston-Kennedy measure.

On the Senate floor yesterday, Wilson informed President Reagan, whose administration with the help of Interior Secretary James Watt has pushed ahead with efforts to drill off the California coast, that his bill is "not to declare California Camelot and off-limits to efforts to achieve national energy self-sufficiency."

Rather, he said, it was intoduced "because of the greater risk and the magnitude of harm on-shore possible from a near-shore outer Continental Shelf drilling mishap."

Cranston refused to join the Wilson bill, saying, "It's a lessor bill in terms of the goals and it gives the president authority to short cut it at any time." Asked if he didn't believe national security, as Wilson suggested, was sufficiently important to require the provision for the president, Cranston, who is one of six candidates seeking the Democratic presidential nomination, quipped:

"The oil is not going to be made available that swiftly so it wouldn't serve any national purpose. But it would be an excuse for some president - sometime after I've been in the White House - to short-cut it."

The senior senator also said it was important to join forces with the East Coast representatives, such as Massachusetts, "as a major strategic or tactical" move to enhance the chances of the bill's passage.

But Cranston emphasized that he and Wilson were not competing with their legislation. "We have a similar goal. I'm glad that he introduced a bill and I would like to join with him, but I just think it's better for us to have the two separate approaches."

The introduction of Cranston's bill about five weeks ago was unfortunately timed for Wilson since that very night he was the benefactor of a fundraising event being held at the home of an oil company executive in Washington.

As mayor of San Diego, Wilson had fought moves in the past to drill for oil off his city's shore. But when Cranston called him to join the original measure, Wilson said he told his staff, "Let's just watch it (the legislation)."

Yesterday, Wilson made a case against the need for California off-shore oil. He said the recoverable oil from California - 2 and 1-3rd percent of the national total - represents only slightly more than one year's annual national consumption. "The other 97 and 2-3rds of domestic recoverable oil represents a supply to accomodate annual consumption fo more than 42 years."

He also took a shot at Watt, a fellow Republican. "At the very least this legislation is required to prevent what may be an altogether unnecessary hazard and certainly a risk that is premature and unjustifiable in February 1984, which is Secretary Watt's target date for subjecting California's Outer Continental Shelf to the exploration and production which carries such risks to California's coastline."

Both pieces of legislation affect approximately the same areas in California: from Pismo Beach north to the Oregon border, Newport Beach south to the Mexican border, the Santa Monica Bay area and the Channel Islands National Marine Sanctuary.

In reaction to Wilson's move, Friends of the Earth, a San Francisco-based national conservation organization which supported Wilson's opponent, Jerry Brown, in the Senate race last year, released a statement commending the senator. "Sen. Wilson deserves a big round of applause. Most people probably don't realize it, but there's already a tremendous amount of oil drilling going on off the California coast. Wilson's bill recognizes that enough is enough."

Survey shows Americans believe economy changing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new survey shows many Americans believe the base of the U.S. economy is changing permanently from heavy industry to high-technology fields such as computers and communications.

Two-thirds of 1,007 adults surveyed at random by telephone in mid-March believe the country's high unemployment and plant closings are the result of a fundamental shift from a "smokestack" economy to a "hi-tech" economy, according to the findings released Wednesday by the New York Stock Exchange.

Only 24 percent of those surveyed felt the current high unemployment was the result of a normal economic recession, according to the survey released at a stock exchange conference here.

Three-quarters of the respondents said they expect the structural change to lead to economic growth within a few years. But when the recovery comes, 57 percent said, most new job opportunities will be in hi-tech industries rather than in revitalized basic industries, which traditionally have led the way out of economic downturns.

The survey results support the view of many economists that the nation is in the midst of a permanent change toward a service-oriented and highly technological economy.

"Our fellow Americans do not regard high unemployment levels and plant closings in basic industries merely as unpleasant accessories of the most recent recession," said William M. Batten, chairman of the stock exchange.

"Rather, they show keen awareness that the economy is undergoing a fundamental transition — that many aspects of our national economic way of life are changing."

Northern Tier line dropped, environmentalists cheer

SEATTLE (AP) — The abandonment of Northern Tier Pipeline Co.'s plan to build a 1,500-mile crude oil pipeline from Washington state to Minnesota has drawn cheers from environmentalists but dire predictions from some industry spokesmen.

Northern Tier announced Wednesday that soaring costs, time and the possibility of another refusal of its site application brought about the decision to end the eight-year dream of a group of businessmen.

"I'm pleased that Northern Tier finally looked at the marketplace and understood that there is no justification for the project," said Norma Turner, president of No Oil Port, Inc., which opposed the pipeline plans.

Ms. Turner and others have opposed the $3 billion pipeline project on environmental and economic grounds, claiming a pipeline to transport Alaska crude oil from Port Angeles, Wash., to Clearbrook, Minn., would not be economically feasible.

Port Angeles Mayor Dorothy Duncan said she was glad the whole thing was over. "It's taken a tremendous amount of our time, resources and energy," she said.

But the executive director of the Northwest Petroleum Association said the consequences could be dire for consumers if foreign sources of crude oil are cut off for any reason.

"It would have created a secure source of crude for our refiners and, of course, the cost to the citizens of Minnesota down the road is hard to estimate — in the millions," said Jerry Everett, whose organization represents distributors in Minnesota and North Dakota.

Washington Gov. John Spellman last April rejected Northern Tier's application to build the pipeline, saying it would endanger the environment of Puget Sound.

Economist: Free enterprise in agriculture just a myth

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The notion that "there is free enterprise in agriculture" is simply a myth, an economist said Wednesday night in the fourth of a series of free enterprise lectures at Midland College.

"A myth is a notion based more on tradition than on fact," said Dr. Ronald Knutson, marketing economist for Texas A&M University's Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "People like myths because they are easy to accept."

President Harry S Truman, who could ruffle people, was not a teller of soothing myths, he suggested.

"'I never give them hell,'" he quoted Truman. "'I just tell the truth, and they think it's hell.'"

Speaking to a sparse audience of mostly high school students in the college's Allison Fine Arts Center, Knutson talked about five major myths surrounding agriculture.

—AMERICAN agriculture is the last major American industry wherein free enterprise exists. "That's a myth," he said. "Virtually the only way to get into agriculture today is through a relative or, more likely than not, through inheritance."

People can afford to get into agriculture if there's oil on their land and if they have rights to that oil. Many years ago, an aspiring farmer could launch his career as a farm hand, become a tenant farmer and, eventually, a landowner.

"You can't do it anymore." Today, $250,000 to $500,000 in assets is needed to set up a farming operation, he said.

Government's role in agriculture precludes it from being free enterprise. The "popular" Payment In Kind (PIK) program whereby the government pays the farmer "not to produce is in direct conflict with free enterprise."

The PIK program is to help reduce agricultural surpluses and thereby increase the prices farmers get for their goods.

Even cattlemen who "pride their independence" are under government's protective import quotas. "That's not free enterprise," Knutson said.

"Certainly, we're not free enterprise," he said. To think so is "hogwash."

"Agriculture is as far from free competition as any industry I can think of."

"America can't survive or live on myths. Agriculture can't survive or prosper on myths."

—Dr. Ronald Knutson

—THE UNITED States can dictate terms of agricultural trade. "That's myth." And he cited an example: "The great Russian grain embargo probably did more damage to U.S. agriculture than any policy" adopted by this country. That the United States could "bring Russia to its knees" by withholding wheat was a myth. The U.S. "could not" do so because of the country's "relatively small share of grain" it produces.

Knutson noted that the U.S. produces only 1 percent of the world's No. 1 consumed grain — rice — and produces 17 percent of the world's supply of wheat and 32 percent of the world's feed grains.

"There's plenty of grain around in the world if you're willing to pay for it, just like there's plenty of oil around the world if you're willing to pay for it."

The United States does not control agricultural prices around the world. "In fact, there's very few things we control."

—THE AMERICAN Agriculture Movement propounds a myth. It's a myth that a prosperous agricultural economy will mean a prosperous national economy. Whatever has the greater share of the Gross National Product (GNP) affects the economy, the economist said. Agriculture makes up 5 percent of the GNP.

—Agriculture would fare better if there were no government farm programs. That the "government is bad, and the government does no good" is a myth, said Knutson.

Farmers' net income last year was $15 billion, but government farm subsidies totaled $18 billion. "The government bailed out agriculture in 1982, just like they're bailing agriculture out in 1983...Agriculture is inherently unstable."

In their pride, cattlemen will say, "'We don't get anything from the government,'" Knutson said. "That's baloney." The government imposes restrictions on beef imports, and cattlemen get tax concessions. The oil industry benefits from government concessions. "That's not free enterprise." The cattleman may benefit more from the government's grain program than does the grain farmer.

—The FAMILY farm will survive. It may not. "The family farm is not as resilient as you think it is." Knutson noted that "young people are no longer willing to work their butts off for the old man" and are leaving the farm.

Large corporate farms generally are operated more efficiently than are family farms, have more options, are better managed, take advantage of more government programs, and get better (by 10 percent) prices for their goods.

More than anything else, survival "depends on the quality of management," Knutson said.

"America can't survive or live on myths. Agriculture can't survive or prosper on myths," he said.

Though Knutson said he believes "American agriculture has a bright future," he admitted that "I have no solution for the farm problems." To propose solutions, he said, would go against his philosophy as a professor and economist.

Winning contestants find 'good things come to those who wait'

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Tension thick as $20 prime rib draped over the starting line Wednesday morning as contestants gathered for the start of Midland's First Annual Waiter Race.

Waiters and waitresses from the Wall Street Bar and Grill, racing rookies dressed functionally in jeans, shorts and baseball T-shirts, chattered among themselves as the start drew near.

Two black-tied Frenchmen, wily veterans when stacked against their American opponents, looked the part of early favorites as they conducted a pre-race parley in their native tongue.

A lone entrant from El Centro, sporting a lime green jacket, black slacks and red tie, stood quietly, his "game face" hidden behind dark, wire-rim glasses.

On a nearby table sat the "order" of the day — a tray, a thick-glass tumbler and a white wine bottle, Robert Mondavi 1981.

Ahead lay the course, a two-block figure "8," tougher than a customer with a lap full of soup — and almost as demanding.

Contestants would travel from the Paragon Building entrance south a block on Big Spring Road. Then west a block on Tennessee Avenue to Marienfeld Street, north to Michigan Avenue and east a block to Big Spring, north to Louisiana Avenue, then west to Marienfeld, culminating in a final block to the finish.

"The idea is to kind of replicate the famous waiter races in Paris, New York and Washington, D.C.," said Grier Brunson, race organizer and owner of The Last Tycoon restaurant, sponsor of the event.

"Once you get it going and kind of get it annual, it becomes a matter of civic pride. Kind of like the marathon is to Boston," said Brunson, noting that he hopes to charge each racer a fee next year and donate the proceeds to charity.

Brunson was quick to point out that waiter racing is best enjoyed with a heaping side order of humor. Serious sports fans needn't bother checking the television listings for "Wide World of Waiters."

"It's just a lot of fun. They're hilarious. It appears that they're trying to maintain their dignity and still try to be fast. It's just a comical situation."

With a towel draped on one arm and with no help from the other, waitresses covered half the course carrying a glass three-fourths filled with water. Waiters traveled the full course carrying both bottle and glass.

With a one-second penalty for each quarter-inch spilled and an automatic disqualification at the sound of breaking glass, the best combination of speed and spillage would eventually produce a winner.

"Coordinating the two is what we're going to have to get together," explained Don Brown, who said that while Last Tycoon waiters practiced a bit for the race, like all waiters, "we 'practice' when we wait the tables."

Before the start, Benoit Pouchelon, a waiter at Lionel Daury's French Cuisine, said waiter races are "very usual" in France, where more than 1,000 waiters may compete in a 10-mile race.

Race handicappers lost heart early, however, when Christophe Granger, Pouchelon's partner, bobbled his glass while sprinting toward the finish during the first heat.

Granger's training regimen may have contributed to his troubles. When asked before the race about the secret to successful waiter racing, he said: "Have some wine in the morning when you get up."

The second heat produced the race's only injury, when Last Tycoon waitress Lisa Neptune tumbled into a flower patch on her way to a disappointing finish.

Sixteen contestants representing five restaurants eventually tackled the course. First place trophies and prize money went to Lisa Johnson from Wall Street, who spilled an inch and a half on her way to a 2:02.7; and to Bob Lapergola of El Centro, who clocked a 3:36.5 while spilling two inches.

When the time came for awarding the prizes, Ms. Johnson had already left the scene for work — her real-life race course.

Lapergola lingered in the winner's circle, basking in the attention and glory — the good things that come to those who wait.

Business community can be ally, not competitor, TSTA head says

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A stranger was introduced to teachers Wednesday night.

Long considered powerful yet uncaring of classroom catastrophies, the business community previously has provided more competition than cooperation to education.

That view has changed, according to the president of Texas State Teachers Association.

"We have been guilty of disregarding the business community as a potential ally," Barbara O'Neal told more than 50 attending the Midland Educators Association's first spring banquet.

And in times of local budget cuts and small state funding increases, the business community may be a good friend to have.

Ms. O'Neal, a graduate of Baylor University and a former classroom teacher in Waco, cited an article in Texas Business Magazine which supports an increase in teacher salaries despite the possibility of a increase in taxes.

The industry community also supports solving another problem faced by teachers facing students everyday — discipline.

"We are not only dealing with issues of taxpayers and political promise," Ms. O'Neal said, "we're also realizing that the teaching salary increase, voted by the Texas Legislature, is not a special interest issue. The stakes are much higher than that."

The business community is aware of the need to provide quality education for students in the state of Texas, she said.

Barbara O'Neal

The article supported a tax increase to pay for teacher salary increases, according to Ms. O'Neal. It also mentioned the need for special schools and detention centers for problem students.

Although some school districts have such facilities, the state should step in and help foot the bills, she said.

According to the article, short term consequences of a state tax increase would be less "disastrous" than the long-range effects of not providing quality education, increased salaries and stronger discipline.

The business community recognizes education builds strong, working citizens and government, she added.

"Texas ranks 10th from the bottom in most methods of taxation," Ms. O'Neal said. "Our responsibility is to let the business community know (what is needed and can be accomplished in education.)"

The authors of the article said although they disagree with some of Gov. Mark White's policies, "We're glad he is taking some stands."

The article also recommends salary increaes similar to those TSTA proposed: $16,000 for beginning level teachers with a four-year college degree and teaching certificate, to $38,000 for a 20-year veteran teacher with a doctorate. "I could live with that, couldn't you?" she asked.

The Legislature is recommending a starting salary of $11,110 for a teacher with no experience and a maximum of $21,100 for a teacher with 25 years of experience, she said.

The 9 percent increase in salaries would add only $30 to $40 a month to a teacher's paycheck, she said.

"There might be a resource in the business community," Ms. O'Neal said. "They just might be able to help us. We certainly haven't been able to solve discipline problems by ourselves.

"I'm asking you to stand with me before the Legislature and the public and demand the state squarely meets its responsibilities.

"We've got some tough problems ahead," she said, "but I'm very optimistic. We've had tough problems before."

SWCID officials glad school declared ward of state

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — A ruling by Attorney General Jim Mattox that Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf is not a public junior college but rather a ward of the state is being hailed by SWCID officials as a landmark decision.

"It's probably the best news we've gotten pertaining to our legislative effort (for adequate funding)," said SWCID Vice President Sam Hill.

"What that means is that we are officially recognized for what we really are. We're not a typical junior college in that we don't serve a local population. We're atypical in that we serve students from all over the state of Texas. It allows us to spend legislative appropriations to cover the whole operation of SWCID."

"What that means is that we are officially recognized for what we really are. We're not a typical junior college in that we don't serve a local population. We're atypical in that we serve students from all over the state of Texas. It allows us to spend legislative appropriations to cover the whole operation of SWCID."

Mattox issued the opinion to Rep. Bill Presnal, D-Bryan, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, who asked whether the institution is "eligible to receive state appropriations for construction, operations, or other purposes."

In his opinion, Mattox concluded that SWCID is a "post-secondary education institution providing instruction for hearing-impaired students preparing for a career or for enrollment in a senior college or university." Although SWCID is under control of the board of trustees of Howard County Junior College, he added, the institution is "a creature of statute."

By law, a junior college must rely on local tax revenues to fund certain expenses, while a state-sanctioned institution is supported solely by legislative appropriations.

Mattox ruled that henceforth SWCID would be controlled by Chapter 131 of the Education Code and that it is now authorized to receive "gifts, grants or donations of land, equipment and buildings, from whatever source." He noted, however, that "we express no opinion as to whether a community college district may be empowered to make such a gift or grant."

"(The ruling) gives us our own identity as far as the legislature is concerned," explained Hill. "We are now a state agency."

While the ruling did not address SWCID's immediate problem — that of obtaining adequate funding from the legislature — Hill sees it as having a positive effect in that it clears up misconceptions about SWCID.

"(Funding) is still a battle," he said, "but this interpretation tells the legislature we are a responsibility of the state, as opposed to being something Howard College started and is trying to pawn off on the state."

DA's office needs spelling primer

AUSTIN (AP) — The spelling of Donald Yarbrough's name continued to be a problem for the Travis County District Attorney's office when the former Texas Supreme Court judge was re-indicted Wednesday.

Yarbrough is serving a five-year sentence for a perjury conviction.

Two years ago, Yarbrough was indicted for failed to appear in court, but his last name was misspelled. When prosecutors decided recently to prosecute Yarbrough on that charge after he was arrested in the Carribean and returned to Texas, they chose to get a new indictment to correct the spelling to avoid any possible legal problem.

That second indictment was returned Wednesday, and prosecutors misspelled what should have been the easy part: Yarbrough's first name. The indictment, which was presented to the grand jury by Assistant District Attorney Bill Willms, charges one "Doanld Yarbrough" with committing th e alleged crime in "Trvis County."

"We may have to re-indict him," said Executive Assistant District Attorney Steve McCleery.

Exotic Indian cuisine easy as stew

Copley News Service

When Christine Harrison was growing up in her native Ceylon (now Sri Lanka), her mother, who cooked by feel and instinct, encouraged her to participate in preparing favorite Indian dishes and to note cooking methods so that recipes could be passed on.

She didn't follow her mother's advice — at the time.

"It was only after I had been in this country several years that I realized what my mother had wanted me to do," said Harrison, 30, now well-nestled into California living. "You see, sharing the special cuisine of a family or of a country is a sharing of love. It brings people closer together. When I wanted to share Indian cuisine, I had no recipes."

So in 1981, Harrison returned to the tiny independent island nation of Sri Lanka (about 25 miles off the coast of India), and began to research favorite recipes to determine exact measurements. The result is her recently published "Cuisine of India," a bright, unpretentious collection of 35 recipes described best by Harrison:

"They are exotically simple recipes that the housewife or career woman can make easily, and they will come out perfectly. Like a stew, you can walk off and leave them."

Harrison's recipes call for commercial curry powder as a convenience to the cook. Other spices are also used.

For people concerned about salt consumption, Harrison suggested a substitute of spices to perk up their meals in a healthier way.

In addition to designing, testing and sharing recipes of Indian cuisine, Harrison, who lives in El Toro, Calif., works as a coordinator of recreational activities at Fluor Corp. in Irvine, Calif., and teaches music privately. (She studied music theory and composition at Trinity College in London.)

"Sharing cooking with someone is like touching," said Harrison at a recent cooking demonstration. "When we touch, we share feelings, warmth, thoughtfulness — and love. When we put these energies into cooking, we cannot help but prepare good food because of this caring."

Though Harrison worked hard to be exacting in her recipes, she compares following a recipe to following music.

"Be creative," she said. "Don't be too rigid. Understand the basic recipe, but then go on your own if you feel it. Who would tell Beethoven not to add 10 more notes?"

To Harrison, a happy life has three ingredients: the experience of love, a good environment and good food.

Following are her recipes for "good food."

Irving Chais, a third generation "doll doctor" in New York City, examines a turn-of-the-century model, adjusting its eyes to open and close after cleaning them.

Surgeon treats dolls

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — "We pride ourselves on performing the impossible," Irving Chais says. "We've never lost a patient, and we don't bury our mistakes."

Chais is a third-generation doll doctor — the chief surgeon, internist, neurologist and psychologist at the New York Doll Hospital, one flight up at 787 Lexington Ave.

His grandparents started the business at the end of the last century in a shop on Third Avenue, where the Roosevelt Island Tramway terminus is now. They first operated a beauty parlor there.

"At that time," chais says, "it used to take a whole day for women to have their hair done, with their long curls. So they would bring their children with them. And the children would bring their dolls, and they often wanted the dolls' hair done."

It was time-consuming and costly to wash, coif and dry the hair of dolls, just as it was for people. So his grandparents began importing doll wigs from Germany. "We had very little doll industry here at that time," Chais says. The hair work led to other repairs.

"After a while, they were getting so much doll work that they decided to drop the beauty parlor and become the New York Doll Hospital."

Chais learned the trade from his parents. "But I've improved upon it appreciably since then," he says. "We specialize in dolls that are 50 or 100 years old. They can be restored with the better adhesives and paints that are available. And we can now wash and reset wigs. We pride ourselves on quality workmanship. Often we even make clothes to order, even restore sections of antique doll costumes.

"We also do a lot of work on toy animals, like teddy bears. And we buy and sell antique dolls and appraise them."

Chais, who is 56, recalls a woman who once came in with only half of the face of a doll. It was all that was left from her days in a concentration camp. It was easy to see how much it meant to her, and he told her he could restore the head and would attach a body to match it perfectly.

"When she came back and I handed her the restored doll, she broke down and cried, then hugged and kissed me."

Chais has been at the present address for about 30 years. "From time to time, I teach someone the trade," he says. "You have to come here to learn it; there are no schools. The student must have color sense, be mechanically inclined and a student of psychology.

"We've been transplanting parts for years, and we've never had a single rejection."

Clean sewing machine lasts longer

Copley News Service

A clean sewing machine will serve you well for years to come. Here's how.

Unplug machine. Remove needle. Remove throat plate, bobbin race and all cover plates. Get your machine down to the bare essentials down where all the work goes on.

With a narrow, soft brush, remove all lint and dirt.

Turn the hand wheel several times so you can see what parts move. Doctor each junction of moving parts with one drop of sewing machine oil. Place one drop oil on the post of the bobbin race, one drop in the circle where the bobbin goes.

Place a folded scrap of fabric under presser foot and operate machine rapidly back and forth over scrap. This will work excess oil down into fabric.

SKILLET SANDWICHES

The good old ham and egg combination

4 large eggs
1 tablespoon water
½ pound cooked ham, diced ½ inch
Salt and pepper to taste
1 tablespoon butter
4 slices bread
Chili sauce, preferably homemade

Beat eggs and water until foamy; stir in ham; salt and pepper. In a 10-inch non stick skillet melt the butter, add egg mixture. Over moderately low heat as eggs set, draw a large plastic spatula over bottom of pan so fluid part on top runs down; cook in this fashion until eggs are as set as you like. Meanwhile toast bread. At once make sandwiches with toast, egg mixture and chili sauce. Cut each into 2 triangles and serve at once. Makes 2 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Teenager needs own life

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We have a mildly retarded 17-year-old son. (I'll call him "Bill.") We can't leave him home alone (especially at night) except for short periods, and he is too old for a "sitter," so we take him with us wherever we go. Bill is friendly, well-mannered, neatly groomed, and he's not a source of awkwardness or embarrassment to anyone.

Our problem: When we are invited to a dinner at someone's house, is it all right to call the hostess and ask if Bill may be included? After all, he's not a small child — he's almost an adult. Sometimes the hostess is a stranger — for example, when we're invited to a wedding and don't know the bride's family.

Most folks, when they learn the situation, are happy to include our son, but occasionally they don't want an extra person. How can we tactfully find out if Bill is welcome?

I might add, if we can't bring Bill, we won't go either. — BILL'S PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: You say your mildly retarded 17-year-old son can't be left home alone, yet he is too old for a sitter. If he can't be left home alone, regardless of his age, he NEEDS a sitter, and you should make provisions for one rather than take him everywhere with you.

When you call your hostess whom you hardly know and "explain the circumstances," whether she wants an extra person or not, she will find it almost impossible to exclude your son. That's not fair to her.

I know you mean the best for Bill, but he needs a social life of his own, and by denying him one, you are further handicapping him.

Rather than refusing all invitations that do not include Bill, please consider helping him build a life of his own. He will not always have you around to look after him.

DEAR ABBY: I have yet to see this problem in your column and would appreciate some help from you.

I have this thing about married men. If I meet two men of equal charm and one is married and the other is single, I'll go for the married one every time. I'll even choose one who is engaged, or living with someone, instead of an eligible bachelor who's up for grabs.

I've dated loads of eligible men, but I've yet to find one who does a thing for me.

I would like to get married someday, but I'm 36 and have never met an eligible man I'd want to marry. — LIKES MARRIED MEN

DEAR LIKES: The experts in the field of human behavior would say that you are not ready for a serious commitment, so as an unconscious protective device you find yourself attracted only to men who are unavailable — and therefore safe.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Resort seeks senior citizens

By DR. ADELE M. SCHEELE

Q. — My family and I bought a small vacation resort in Maine last year. Our clientele was all senior citizens and we did pretty good. Though we have repeat business, we need a lot more to survive. How do we get more senior citizen leads? We've advertised in the Maine publicity bureau booklets and tried the American Association of Retired Persons. We've written to many chambers of commerce in the Northeast as well as bus companies. How do we keep ourselves going?

A — So far so good. How did your first clients hear about you. From the previous owners? Then find out what they did. Ask for letters of testimony from last year's group to include in your brochures. Search out church groups and senior citizen centers. Talk to their program directors and advertise in their newsletters.

Be more aggressive with A.A.R.P. and suggest a story for their magazine. Do the same for local magazines. Be creative. The editors don't want to promote you but they are eager for stories that will interest their readers. Now that you're in the business, join your own professional association and read the trade magazine for marketing ideas.

Q. — I've been a psychiatric nurse for the last seven years and I'm feeling burned out. I see no room to grow professionally. I've applied for graduate study since I have a B.S. in nursing, but I doubt I can make it scholastically. I'm only interested in psychiatry, and not other aspects of nursing. I'm 32, male, worried and depressed.

A. — If you can decide what is causing your burn-out, you've got something to go on. My hunch is that you should be a therapist, since you like the psychiatric parts of nursing. So, deal with your fear of graduate school by visiting some traditional and non-traditional programs.

Call a therapist who specializes in some aspect that interests you (such as marriage or family counseling, drug addiction, children — both in private practice and in organizations, even businesses) and ask for recommended programs. Then go to the institutes and hang out for a few days. Or volunteer your services for a few months at a free clinic or hot line to test the waters.

These "hands on" clinical settings will probably appeal to you more than the strenuous science background of nursing.

Getting up initiative to overcome depression is hard, but as anyone who's done it will tell you, it beats the living death of constant anxiety.

Q. — After four years of running a senior citizen center, I am eager to switch to the private sector. I feel I'm a late starter in the career world. Can I reasonably get going at 45?

A. — Yes, but to go into the private sector you must use the contacts you already have or develop some fast. How? By using the opportunity at hand.

Make the senior citizens' center into a showcase for special seminars or regularly scheduled breakfasts with business and political leaders. Invite them to tell about their outside business lives and connections and afterwards talk to them about yourself and how you would like to join them.

And don't overlook the networks your own group of senior citizens might well have for you.

Frozen diet food is hot now

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Stouffer's nutritionists have developed a formal diet regime spelled out in a company brochure. "The 14-Day Lean Look Plan is not a fad diet," it reads, but stresses sensible eating that integrates the frozen dinners with fresh fruits, vegetables, grains and dairy products — and exercise.

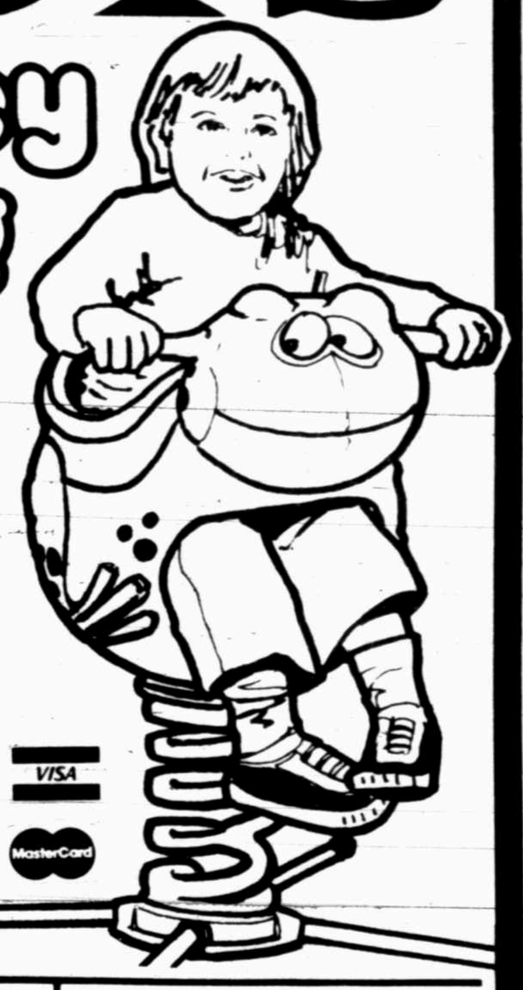

Stouffer's diet philosophy, said Cocarri, stems from its original market surveys that reported the reason diets fail is because "diet food doesn't taste good."

And what do the dieters think? "I found they taste all right and I'm satisfied," said Janie Gordon, from Baltimore, who lost 25 pounds in three months after exercising, eating nothing for breakfast, a sandwich for lunch and popping a Lean Cuisine in the oven every night.

Lean Cuisine's most popular item is the glazed chicken; Weight Watchers cites its southern fried chicken patty as the No. 2 product behind lasagna; Dinner Classics claims sirloin tips as its largest seller.

Midland string quartet set to appear on Today Show

Midland's Thouvenel String Quartet guest stars on NBC's Today Show Friday.

The quartet was selected by NBC from more than 30 other Texas artists to promote the May 14 through June 5 San Antonio Festival. The five-minute segment, which includes the Thouvenel playing for 2½ minutes, will be aired live from San Antonio. The Today Show is aired here from 7 to 9 a.m.

The Thouvenels will perform at the festival May 24-25. Included in their program will be Franz Schubert's Quartet in D-minor, "Death of a Maiden."

The Thouvenel's local chamber music series ends May 15 with a 3 p.m. concert at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Newton tickets still on sale

To date about 3,000 tickets have been sold for Wayne Newton's Sunday performance at Chaparral Center. This tour marks Newton's third in the past 10 years.

Tickets, priced at $15 and $12.50, may be purchased at Endless Horizons in Midland and Odessa, Hastings Record Store in Hobbs, N.M., and Chaparral Center.

Concert time is 8 p.m.

Domingo gives lie to his name

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Opera star's Placido Domingo's name means "peaceful Sunday," but don't make fun of opera in his presence.

"I just won't allow it, you see," says the Spanish-born tenor, who stars in the movie version of "La Traviata."

"It's as if they were making fun of my family," he says. "If it happens, I get up and walk out. That's how seriously I take my work."

Domingo has been working hard to turn people into opera buffs. One recruit, Franco Zeffirelli, who made the "La Traviata" movie, thinks Domingo can become a box office attraction in other films.

Roberta Peters

Opera star set to sing Tuesday

Metropolitan Opera star Roberta Peters will perform at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. Miss Peters' Midland performance is for the benefit of the Midland Jaycees.

Miss Peters held audiences captive several seasons ago during her two performances with the Midland-Odessa Symphony. Her Tuesday performance marks the fourth concert in the Renwood Inc., Select Series. The concert will feature arias for which she is famous as well as selections in a lighter vein.

Tickets, priced at $65, may be purchased by calling the Jaycees at 694-4621 or Renwood Inc., at 687-5812. Price includes complimentary hors d'oeuvres, champagne, coffee and dessert. Doors open at 7 p.m. A cash bar will be provided by Midland Community Theatre.

Herb Poole is in charge of the 300 or so Jaycees involved in selling tickets.

Homestead altered

Congress doubled the standard homestead maximum of 160 acres in grazing areas of certain Western states on Feb. 19, 1909.

Nothing to stunts, crippled actor says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Les Jankey says he wishes the people on the ABC series, "Tales of the Gold Monkey," wouldn't worry so about his safety during a stunt.

Jankey, who plays Guishi, part owner of the Monkey Bar, has been confined to a wheelchair since birth.

"Even the simplest stunt, where I'm pulled out of my chair and roll around on the ground caused a tremendous amount of anxiety," he said. "There was nothing to it, but everybody was worried whether the scene would get past the network broadcast standards department."

Jankey was born with a congenital birth defect. Before joining "Tales of the Gold Monkey," he made brief appearances in "Lou Grant," "Quincy," "The Incredible Hulk" and the film version of "9 to 5."

'Works by Women' continues at Museum of the Southwest

The Gihon Foundation art collection, "Works by Women," is on display at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., through May 30.

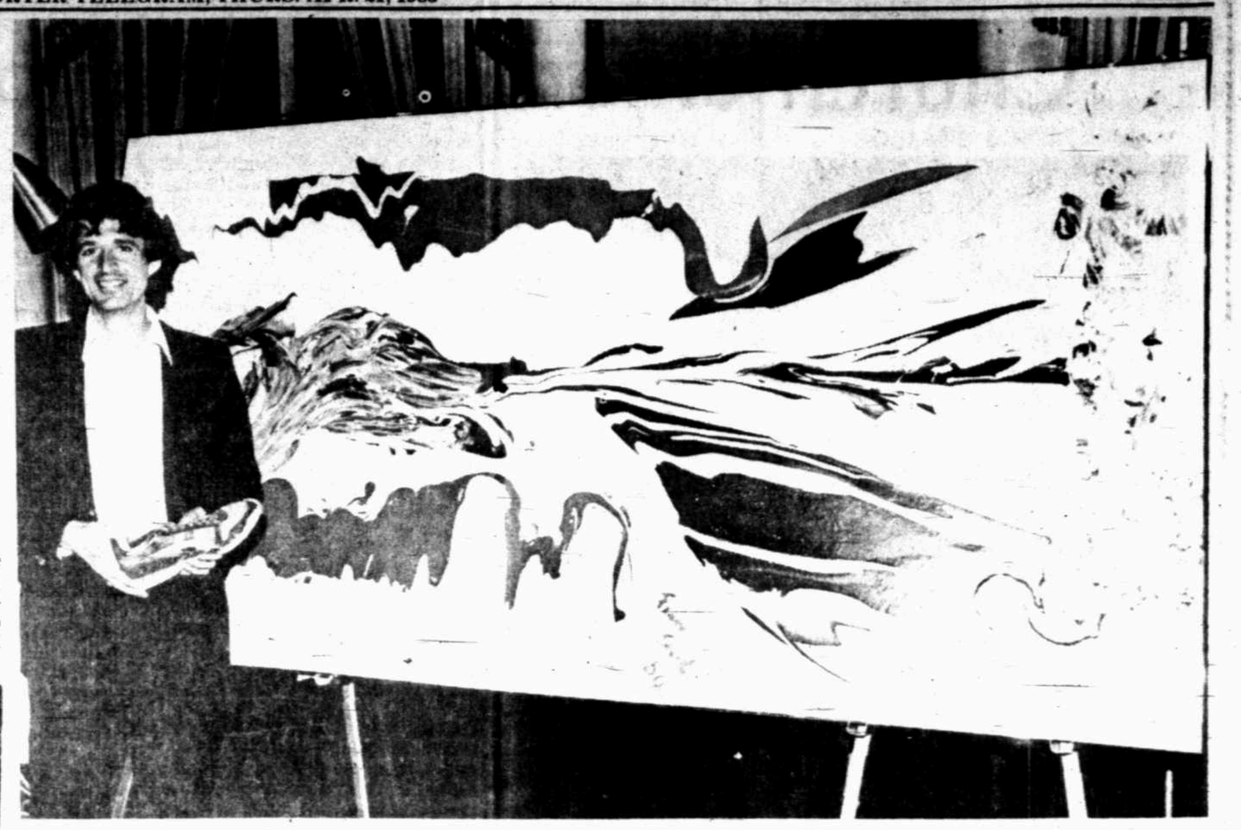

The collection of 15 works by 13 women artists provides an opportunity to view almost a century of growth in American art. Each artist was selected because of her demonstrated independence of thought, assertiveness in style and vigor of spirit. For example, the effective use of light by both Helen Frankenthaler, "White Makes Four," and Janet Fish, "Red Vase and Yellow Tulips," awake strong emotional responses through uniquely individual styles.

Bette C. Graham, inventor of Liquid Paper correction fluid, established the Gihon Foundation in 1978 in a desire to contribute to the cultural, spiritual and intellectual development of society and acknowledge the role women play in that development.

The Gihon art collection exhibited in the Museum of the Southwest's Stables Gallery was assembled by Ms. Graham to showcase outstanding women artists. The collection contains works by major American artists who have notably influenced the development of artistic expression in America. Art work by Georgia O'Keffe, Nancy Graves, Mary Cassatt and former Midlander Nancy Chambers is included in the exhibit.

In addition, the museum has on display the 22rd annual Student Art Festival through May 16.

Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. There is no charge to view this or any exhibit at the museum.

Distance runner Frank Shorter poses with the art he created which symbolizes his gold medal performance in the 1972 Olympics. His and other works created by Olympic gold medalists are on display at Midland Park Mall.

Budweiser backs fine art of Olympics

The Budweiser Olympic Art Collection is on display through Saturday at Midland Park Mall. Commissioned by Budweiser, the collection's six works were painted by former U.S. Olympic gold medal winners Bill Russell, basketball; John Naber, swimming; Wilma Rudolph, track; Frank Shorter, track; Al Oerter, discus; and Mike Eruzione, ice hockey.

The showing is part of a three-year project by Budweiser to raise $1 million-plus for the 1984 U.S. Olympic Team. The program began with commission of the works and their subsequent sale at auction by Christie's May 13, 1981, for $86,500. All of the works were created with acrylic paints on large canvases. Each athletic was asked to use the "tools" with which he or she competed, as a result, all of the works are executed in an impressionistic modern style.

The athletes have said of their works:

Russell — "The longer I was at my painting the more fun it was and the more creative I could be. My work depicts the U.S. victory over Russia in basketball in 1956; the gold is the U.S. and the red is Russia."

Naber — "I call mine the '100 Meter Backstroke.' At the top are the three flags, the second place American, mine on top and East Germany — that's Roland Mathes of East Germany, three who dominated the event for seven years. You see a splash of blue as I enter the water; it narrows as I approach victory."

Miss Rudolph — "Running is a free sport. The butterfly I created represents that freedom. It's an expression of my coming out of the starting block. That was the slowest part of my running. When I competed they called me the 'Black Pearl' and the 'Black Gazelle.' In the same spirit I wanted to create something graceful and beautiful."

Shorter — "I tried to create the sense of the race situation — a mass of people at the start, funneling down to one winner at the finish more than 26 miles later."

Oerter — "I was trying to show the intensity of training and the impact the discus makes with the colors radiating upwards and out. It took me 6½ hours to do my first canvas. Who knows what it will come to."

Eurzione — "I call mine 'Mayhem.' It depicts my winning goal against the Russians — you can see the patch of the puck. There are dozens of Picassos, but only one Eurzione."

Limited edition, signed lithographs of each work may be purchased for $198.40 each. Total run is 1,984 of each. In addition, poster reproductions may be purchased for $25 per set of six or $4.84 each. To order write Budweiser 1984 Olympic Games Art Collection, P.O. Box 1984, Maryland Heights, Mo. 63043, or call toll free 1-800-325-1488. Proceeds go to the U.S. Olympic Team.

Anheuser-Busch, Inc., is a corporate partner in the 1984 U.S. Olympic program.

Museum presents 'Posters for Victory'

[illegible] through May 13.

From 1941-45 the public [illegible] and style presentation [illegible] Posters for Victory" will be presented by Michael Moss at Odessa's Presidential Museum at 2 p.m. Sunday. The lecture is in conjunction with the museum's exhibit of 24 original World War II posters on display through May 13.

From 1941-45 the United States government undertook a major public relations campaign to gain support for its war effort. As part of this campaign, thousands of colorful posters were produced by government agencies and private companies to encourage saving fuel and scrap metal, stress the need for security and self-sacrificing and promote the sale of war bonds.

Many of the posters' designers were known to the public by their illustrations in national magazines. Norman Rockwell and Earl Christy are among the well-known illustrators included in the exhibition.

Organized by the West Point Museum, United States Military Academy, the show is circulated by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition service. The Odessa show is funded by a grant from the City of Odessa.

Moss, curator of art at West Point Museum, will discuss the role these posters played in aiding the war effort in a pre-television era.

The Presidential Museum is open free to the public Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 to 5 p.m.

Jazz festival has 41-concert lineup

NEW YORK (AP) — A 41-concert lineup was announced earlier this week for this summer's Kool Jazz Festival New York, described by sponsors as "the biggest and the best" of the 22 festivals to be held around the country.

At a news conference, officials also announced that Cleveland, St. Louis and Louisville, Ky., will be added this year to the circuit of summertime jazz bashes.

More than 2 million people heard 1,900 musicians in 400 Kool Jazz Festival concerts last year, according to Kool spokesman Brad Broecker.

George Wein, the jazz impresario who created the series, yesterday outlined for reporters the schedule for the June 24-July 3 New York Festival.

Trumpeter Chuck Mangione, who represents a jazz player who made it in the commercial world, Wein said will play at Avery Fisher Hall on opening night June 24 while Ella Fitzgerald sings at Carnegie Hall.

Wein called Toshiko Akiyoshi "the person who has the ability to write the best big band music in the business."

Church enters computer age

AP Laserphoto

The Rev. Joe Fagg reviews a computer printout in his office of the Seventh Street United Methodist Church in Temple. The church is entering the computer age with the use of a local firm's computer, which will simplify the church's record keeping.

TEMPLE (AP) — Members of the Seventh Street United Methodist Church here soon will be feeling the effects of high technology.

The church has entered the computer age and members soon will receive the church newsletter addressed with labels printed by computer.

The Rev. Joe Fagg, pastor, said the church has obtained use of a word processor with math functions at Collier Electronic Co. Inc. The idea was conceived by Dan Volney, church treasurer and a Collier employee.

"We were interested in some kind of demographic information," Volney said. "We started brainstorming at a finance committee meeting, and this was an idea that sprang forth from that."

Officials at Collier agreed to let the church use its computer without charge, and donated the personnel to enter information into the system.

The machine has made obsolete the burdensome and outdated index card system previously used to document the church's membership roll.

"Now we can look at the printout and see everybody at once," Volney said. "We had 10 volunteers who spent about two weeks making telephone calls and gathering the information."

The church has entered information into the computer such as each member's name, address, telephone number, date of birth, sex, marital status, date of membership and occupation.

"Now we can look at the printout and see everybody at once. We had 10 volunteers who spent about two weeks making telephone calls and gathering the information."

The total, which includes parishioners and immediate family members, is 756 members, representing about 320 family units, Fagg said.

"We wanted to go to a computer form because there are so many things you can do with it," he said.

Among other functions, he said, the computer will allow church officials to more easily plot financial growth and determine the age breakdown of congregation, total membership, average number attending church school and age-sex relationships.

"It takes a long time to get that information together," Fagg said. "Now we are able to go to the computer, and it will come."

Volney said the computerized list will enable officials to discover talents among members that may help the church.

"Even if they are retired, they may have done something during their life that could help the church," Volney said. "We could put their expertise to use."

The machine will allow officials to run a list of all the female members, or only those members who attend Sunday school. And it will be easier to maintain an accurate mailing list, Fagg said.

The idea of merging computers with churches is not a new one, he said.

Former fire starters work with firefighters

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Youngsters who once got their kicks by setting fires are now working with former "opponents" — firefighters — in a program that attempts to cure juvenile arson with friendship instead of punishment.

The National Firehawk Foundation, which works much like Big Brothers, is the idea of fire department volunteer Pamela McLaughlin. Working with psychologist Jessica Gaynor, she began the foundation in the belief that children who cross the line from natural curiosity to deliberate destruction with fire are crying out for help and attention.

Juvenile arson is "generally an expression of underlying social or personality problems," said Ms. Gaynor. The answer is treatment, not punishment, she and Ms. Laughlin said.

In the 2½ years the program has operated, 29 boys have been teamed with firefighters. The result, the women said, is 100 percent success. None of the boys has resumed setting fires.

Arson has increased 325 percent over the past decade, according to the U.S. Fire Administration. More than half were set by boys under 18, including 11 percent under age 10, the organization said. Research by the Los Angeles Fire Department indicates a trait common to young firebugs is an absent or inattentive father.

Ms. McLaughlin, working as a volunteer at the San Francisco Fire Department, decided there must be a better answer than a stint in juvenile hall to cure young firebugs. She noticed the positive interaction of her own two boys with firefighters, and thought such contact might be the medicine for juvenile arsonists.

Such close relationship could teach youngsters about the devastation wrought by fire and give them heroic models on which to pattern their behavior, Ms. McLaughlin said. The firefighters also try to instill in the youngsters confidence and feelings of self-worth that make such attention-getting behavior unnecessary.

The firefighters are required to devote at least eight hours a month to their charges and be available by phone anytime.

Auctioneer's harmonics warm up horsey crowd

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — About 200 people are already in the grandstands at the Dane County fairgrounds when auctioneer Arnold Hexom pulls out his harmonica.

"It's a good way to start a sale here, get people in a good mood," he explains, then reels off a series of melodies, including one old fiddle tune, "The Golden Slippers," that his grandfather taught him.

Only then is the first horse led into the ring, and the county's second annual draft horse auction officially under way.

The horse is a sorrel with a white mane combed over his right shoulder, a Belgian stallion that stands a head taller than his handler and probably weighs 1,600 pounds.

Hexom, who has been selling horses for 50 years, describes the animal as "a 1978 model" and tries to start the bidding at $2,500, but that doesn't work. He finally gets a first bid of $1,000, and it eventually sells for $1,475.

Demand for draft horses is higher today than it was in the days when they were the main source of horsepower on farms, but the economy has put something of a dent in prices lately, Hexom, 70, says afterwards.

He says he often starts an auction with a few tunes on the harmonica because it takes people's minds off high interest rates and the economy.

Hexom has been trying for some time now to retire to his home in Waverly, Iowa, — he pronounces it Ioway — but one auction and then another prevents him from staying home with his own 42 horses.

In the sale barn, most eyes follow the stallion back and forth across the dirt floor more intently than conventioneers ogling a dancer at a burlesque show.

New officers will be installed at the dinner, which starts at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Midland Holidome on West Highway 80.

Grindstaff joined the Ballinger Lions Club in 1954. He was elected district governor in 1964 and served as an international director in 1972-74.

He is a past president of the Texas Lions League for Crippled Children and has maintained a strong interest in the Crippled Children's Camp at Kerrville.

In recognition of his many years in the Lions Club, he has received two extension awards, the Melvin Jones Fellow Award, 11 international president's awards and the Ambassador of Good Will award.

Grindstaff is a 1954 graduate of Baylor University where he received a law degree.

He will be introduced by District Gov. George Weis, who is a member of the Downtown Lions Club. This is the second largest Lions Club in the U.S. with more than 400 active members.

Land by river has split personality

KENTUCKY BEND, Ky. (AP) — If there ever was a place where the saying, "You can't get there from here," applies, this is it.

A traveler has to leave Kentucky and go through Tennessee, or cross the Mississippi River, ride through a bit of Missouri and cross the river again to get here from there.

Known variously as Kentucky Bend, New Madrid Bend or Bessie Bend, depending on the home address of the speaker, the 16,000-acre spit of land juts like a swollen thumb into the Mississippi River, which surrounds it on three sides, from its "hand" in Lake County, Tenn.

By road, it's about 20 miles from the Kentucky state line here to the Kentucky state line used by the rest of the state.

According to legend, the area is part of Kentucky only because a loyal Kentuckian played a trick on a crew of surveyors in the early 1800s.

It seems the landowner, whose identity has been lost over the years, knew quite well that his property was not connected to Kentucky. But after a night of revelry, he pointed the surveyors toward the Mississippi to the west and noted that the southern border of Kentucky was 36 degrees 30 minutes north latitude. The landowner must have chuckled all the way to the Fulton County seat of Hickman, which is 33 miles distant, to register his deed.

Adrienne Stepp tells the story with relish. She and her husband, Alfred, own a good piece of the bend.

Stepp leased the land in 1927 and bought it in 1938. Now 90, he has lived here since, moving only when the river forced him out.

The area acquired the name Bessie Bend from a small settlement, near the Tennessee border, that was destroyed in the 1937 flood. A road sign in Tennessee still refers to it as such.

Mrs. Stepp, who moved from Hickman to the bend in 1954 when she became Stepp's second wife, most assuredly does not consider it Bessie Bend.

"We call it Kentucky Bend," she said proudly. "We're Kentuckians, not Tennesseans."

A few people have tried to get the land incorporated into Tennessee.

WE'VE SET NEW STANDARDS ON THE USED CARS WE SELL.

Not too long ago, we could accept trade in cars and place nearly all of them for sale in our used car department. But today...people are keeping their cars a lot longer, putting on thousands more miles before trading for a new model.

This means we have to be extra careful in choosing those trade ins that measure up to our standards. Our reputation for offering good value for the money is your best assurance...buying your used car.
