Rivals say Armstrong seems unbeatable in Tour de France

By Michael McDonough
Associated Press

PAU, France — Stronger, faster, leaner than ever before, Lance Armstrong is turning this year's Tour de France into a Tour de Force.

A rare third consecutive title in the world's toughest cycling event is within easy reach six days from the finish, thanks to his stunning performance in the Alps and the Pyrenees.

But more impressive is the Texan's complete domination of the field that has rivals and observers in awe.

"Simply unbeatable," is how Armstrong's main challenger, Jan Ullrich of Germany, described the two-time champion and cancer survivor. "This year, he is stronger then ever."

Ullrich, the 1997 champion, is widely regarded as in his best ever form. Yet in almost every mountain stage, he has pulled ahead of Armstrong only to be overtaken and left stranded in the final stretch.

"I don't know what I should do," Ullrich said after Armstrong won the grueling first mountain stage between Aix-les-Bains and L'Alpe d'Huez. "I did everything well — except for Lance."

The Team Telekom rider had led the main pack for most of the day when, at the foot of the last climb, Armstrong moved in front. He looked behind, star-

Husband-wife team to leave Midland, gain new challenge

■ Midland's Chamber of Commerce and Arts Assembly lose two talented directors.

By Mella McEwen and Georgia Temple

Midland suffers a talent loss this September when Bruce Partain, communications and membership director for the Midland Chamber of Commerce, and his wife Linda Bond, director of the Arts Assembly of Midland, move to Nacogdoches.

Partain, who has served as communications and membership director for 11 years, is headed to the 40,000-population community in East Texas to serve as president and chief executive officer of the Nacogdoches County Chamber of Commerce. He begins in early September.

Partain

Bond

"This was something that came up," Partain said. "It was posted in an industry newsletter. I wasn't really looking for anything, but I thought I would see how I stacked up. I really didn't think they'd respond, but they responded really fast."

"It's going to be a terrible loss to the community," Greg Dove, president of the Arts Assembly, said of the couple's move. "It's a wonderful opportunity for Bruce and a really good career move. Beyond everything else, the way I feel is that I'm losing very good friends."

Dove's words were echoed by others when contracted about the couple's move.

"Bummer. Wow," said Midland City Councilman Berry Simpson. "I didn't know that. I certainly wish them the best. That's our loss on many fronts — the Chamber and the Arts Assembly. They certainly deserve all the success that comes their way. They are one of the most talented couples in Midland.

"One thing I always liked about Linda — she had huge dreams about doing things that were the right size for Midland — stage plays and history plays.

"In fact, she's one of the examples I use about why I like Midland. Not all towns have people with big dreams and the talent to pull them off. And we're really fortunate that we have lots of people with talent like that, and she was one of the best of them."

"I am sad, but I am so happy for him," said Frances Stapp, director of the Scarborough-Linebery House where several of Ms. Bond's History in the House productions have been staged. "They're both talented people."

"As happy as I am for Bruce, I'm sad that they won't be in our community," said Danny Holeva, curator of the Museum of the Southwest. "It's Nacogdoches gain, and our loss."

Cheryl Adamson, chairman of the board of the Nacogdoches County Chamber of Commerce, said it was Partain's 11 years experience at the

Body found at city landfill

By D. Lance Lunsford
Staff Writer

A city garbage truck dumped an unidentified human body from its cargo in Midland Monday around noon.

According to police, a private citizen dumping trash at the City of Midland Landfill watched the garbage truck release its compacted waste into a giant pile, when the witness saw what appeared to be a human body amid the debris as it squeezed from the trucks storage.

Midland Police Spokesman Tina Jauz said the collection of the trash occurred Monday morning.

"It had to be somewhere between 10 and noon," Ms. Jauz said. "Apparently, (police) said it was something like 80 Dumpsters of trash."

Midland detectives and patrol officers descended on one of the landfill's barren hillsides, examining the trash. Investigators in white work suits combed through debris and trash attempting to get to the body without damaging the scene's clues. One investigator, perched atop a front end loader, reached with a rake to remove trash from the top of the pile the victim laid beneath.

The investigators used rakes to hook and grapple trash, pulling it away from the pile. They loaded a series of brown paper bags into the back of a police van to be hauled away for investigation.

One item of evidence appeared to be a denim shirt or jeans placed into one of the paper bags held by one officer while another attempted to squeeze the material into the bag as it swished in the heavy winds.

Finally, officers made it to the body, finding a white male, with a height between five-foot-10-inches and six feet tall and weighing approximately 180 pounds, according to Ms. Jauz. They found the man with a black and white horizontal striped Polo shirt and black shorts, but without identification.

Ms. Jauz said there was no indication as to how long the man was dead, but according to preliminary reports, police believe the man was not in the Dumpster for more than 24 hours.

"Right now, we're classifying this an 'Unattended Death' investigation," Ms. Jauz said, adding that clues were sketchy as to the length of time the man was dead. "(The investigators') guess is not for that long. Probably in the last 24 hours ... with the shape of the body."

Stem cell research: Where morals meet politics?

By Kristine Aleman
MRT Correspondent

"A free and virtuous society, which America aspires to be, must reject practices that devalue and violate human life ..."

Pope John Paul II gave his statement to President Bush during their meeting at the Vatican Monday discussing stem cell research — a medical breakthrough that would destroy human embryos to find cures for diseases including Alzheimer's disease, Parkinson's, diabetes and spinal cord injuries.

However, even though the issue leaves many Americans wondering where morals meet politics, some are adamant in their beliefs.

"My mother has Alzheimer's. She doesn't know who I am," said the Rev. Tom Kelley, pastor at Our Lady of San Juan Catholic Church. "I understand and empathize with the potential good that could come from it, but the end does not justify the means."

The issue of providing federal funding for the research, which has split the Republican Party, may alienate some 44 million Catholic American voters if passed.

"It's certainly a moral issue, as far as I'm concerned," said Republican

Will Midland, Odessa have company in Senate district?

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

While Midland and Ector counties are expected to fall in the same state senatorial district, the number of other Permian Basin counties that will be joining them will be revealed today.

The members of the Legislative Redistricting Board will convene in Austin at 2 p.m. today to vote on adoption of plans for new maps of the Texas State Senate and Texas House of Representative districts.

Around the Permian Basin, the biggest question is how many counties will be joining Midland and Ector, which are expected to be placed in what is currently known as District 31.

Andrews and Gaines counties could also be in the district, which will shoot up the western border of the South Plains and join a group of counties in the northern Panhandle.

It has been the hope of many around Midland-Odessa that more Permian Basin counties could be added. Some counties up north would then be placed in District 28 (which surrounds Lubbock).

"We are optimistically confident that Midland-Odessa will be well represented and will end up with a district which is more favorable than we ever had," Odessa's Bob Barnes said. "We have asked for all the counties which touch Midland and Odessa to be part of our deal."

Barnes also said they have asked for Howard County, because Big Spring is regarded as a "very important sister city and we need them to be a part of everything we do, including this district, economic development opportunities and MOTRAN (Midland-Odessa Transportation Alliance) issues."

Every 10 years after new census figures are released, the state must redraw boundary lines for statewide and federal political subdivisions. The Legislative Redistricting Board has been charged with redrawing the Texas House and Senate district boundary lines.

Any way the lines are configured, the Republicans are expected to come away as the big winners. Going in, the Democrats control the House, 78-72. By the end of the day, Republicans are expected to have 80-88.

"There is no doubt about it," said State Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland when asked if Tuesday would be a big day for the Republicans. Craddick will have a great deal of interest in the outcome. Should the House go far enough in the Republican's favor, Craddick could be in line to make a run at the Speaker's seat.

> 'We are optimistically confident that Midland-Odessa will be well represented and will end up with a district which is more favorable than we ever had.'
> — Bob Barnes, Odessa businessman

Republicans already hold a 16-15 edge in the Senate. That is only supposed to get larger.

Members of the LRB are Attorney General John Cornyn, Speaker of the House Pete Laney, Comptroller Carole Keeton Rylander, Lt. Gov. Bill Ratliff and Land Commissioner David Dewhurst. All but Laney are Republicans.

Cornyn and Laney have proposed maps for the House, while Ms. Rylander, Ratliff and Dewhurst have proposed redistricting maps for the Senate.

"David Dewhurst, Carole Keeton Rylander and John Cornyn, I am convinced are all friends of West Texas. They are tuned into what we say," Barnes said. "They have recognized Midland was a conservative town when conservative wasn't even a word in Texas. I think they are appreciative of that long standing conservative effort Midland has stood for. They know it is time for the Midland-Odessa area to have an opportunity to have better representation, but we need more. We have a lot at stake here. Our whole future is tied to what happens in West Texas in the next 10 years, and this redistricting is a 10-year effort. It is worth the fight."

Redistricting Note: According to Craddick, the House district he represents would change from Midland, Reagan and Glasscock Counties to Midland, Martin and Dawson.

and former Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo. "I think despite the fact that that's what it is, it also has political ramifications like most other issues do."

That leads to the question of morals — how does a voter decide which stance to take if legislation favors political opinion, but not moral opinion?

"There's no question. You go with the moral position, if it's a position you agree with," Angelo said. "There would be no question to banning abortion if all of us agreed about it taking a life, which I believe it is."

Angelo said the key point in the stem cell research issue is the president's speaking out against the federal funding of embryonic stem cell research in the past.

"I've read a fair amount that says there is a lot of research being done on other stem cells as opposed to embryonic stem cells that don't take a life," he said. "That's the kind of research that needs to be promoted and supported."

The Catholic Church has expressed its opposition to embryonic stem cell research, in part from the Pope's reaction Monday to the President's legislative proposition.

"Along with the Pope, a lot of Catholics are realizing that there are distinctions to be made, but there is something going on that worries me," Kelley said. "My problem comes with what the embryos are doing in those laboratories already."

Kelley admits there may be some good in developing embryos in petri dishes and labs for families who cannot have children, but he calls an in-depth examination of the process "disturbing."

"What I think the Pope is opposed to, and what I am opposed to, is in a sense, because it can be done, we believe it should be done, or because we may have a good result, we should just indiscriminately do it," he said.

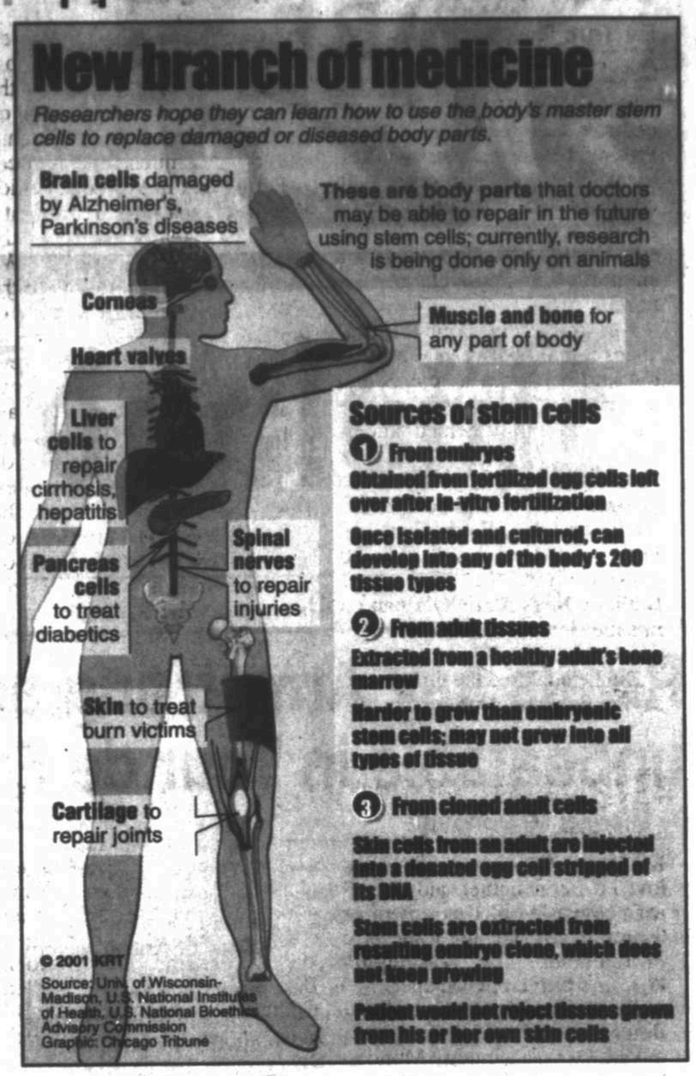
Kelley says the embryos used for the stem cell research have the potential to become human beings and for that very reason, they are human.

"A butterfly is a caterpillar," he said. "I'm not so sure the sacredness of human life is being respected in the embryo. Are we sensitive enough in regards to that — the basis of human life?"

Two Republican congressmen, Rep. Lamar Smith and Rep. Larry Combest, both of whom represent portions of Midland County, continue to support the president's proposition, despite the moral dilemma, adding ethics to their stance.

"Rep. Smith supports research on stem cells ethically obtained from adults and will continue to support its funding because scientists believe they hold great promises in our search to cure diseases," said Brad Bennett, Smith's press secretary. "Furthermore, he can be expected to support the president's decision."

Combest, who has taken a pro-life position throughout his career, also supports some research.



"As a pro-life member of Congress, I also want to ensure that all research is conducted in the most ethical manner and that it remains consistent with my pro-life views," he said.

TOUR: Armstrong not sure he will return in 2004

(From 1A)

ing into Ullrich's sunglasses, then sped off into the distance.

A familiar pattern emerged in two other mountain stages: the stretch from Perpignan to Plateau de Bonascre and the leg between Foix and Pla d'Adet, which Armstrong won.

He also triumphed in the uphill time-trial from Grenoble to Chamrousse, taking the start after Ullrich and slashing one minute off the German's blistering time.

"Lance Armstrong once said that Jan Ullrich is the greatest talent in cycling. This doesn't seem to be the case," Ullrich said afterward. "But I am not giving up, despite everything, and I'll try everything. I've never been in such good shape."

He did beat Armstrong once — in Sunday's Tarbes-to-Luz-Ardiden stage — but that was because the Texan let him.

"At this point, it's not worth being any more aggressive than we need to be," Armstrong said of his fourth-place finish behind Ullrich.

By the time Armstrong reached Luz-Ardiden he was in the overall lead, ahead of Ullrich by 5 minutes and 5 seconds — an almost unbeatable advantage with only six flat stages remaining before the race finish in Paris on July 29.

"This year, we worked even harder than we did in 1999 and 2000," said the U.S. Postal Service rider, explaining his performance. He won the first title after an extraordinary comeback from life-threatening testicular cancer that required brain surgery after it had spread.

The dedication hasn't escaped the attention of his rivals.

"Armstrong is someone who lives 12 months a year, 24 hours a day, for his job. That's the difference with Jan," said Ullrich's team manager, Walter Godefroot. "Armstrong is an exceptional champion, who takes his place among the all-time greats."

Armstrong has been dogged in France by speculation about drug use. On Monday, he said this was inevitable because of cycling's tarnished reputation: the 1998 Tour de France was nearly wrecked by a doping scandal that led to the conviction of several people.

"I have a questionable reputation because I'm a cyclist," he said. "People love to single out cycling. This is an issue of sport. The problems are not exclusive to cycling or the Tour de France or Lance Armstrong."

Armstrong admitted his relationship with Dr. Michele Ferrari, an Italian linked to drug use, might appear questionable and said he would review it after the doctor's September trial.

But Armstrong reiterated that he believes Ferrari is innocent.

"People are not stupid," he said. "They will look at the facts. They will say: 'Here's Lance Armstrong. Here's a relationship. Is it questionable? Perhaps.'"

"But people are smart," he continued. "They will say: 'Has Lance Armstrong ever tested positive? No. Has Lance Armstrong ever been tested? A lot.'"

Armstrong has never failed a drug test.

Even the most experienced observers agree Armstrong is set to become one of cycling's legends.

"We can already say that he is a great champion," said Jacques Augendre, a former journalist and now the race's official archivist, who is covering his 50th Tour de France. "Armstrong has already won three titles, he is perfectly in control and he's better prepared than his rivals. I think he will win more."

The 29-year-old already is set to equal fellow American Greg LeMond's tally of three Tour titles — although LeMond didn't win them consecutively.

According to Augendre, Armstrong has a chance of breaking the record of five titles held by Miguel Indurain, Eddy Merckx, Jacques Anquetil and Bernard Hinault. Only Indurain won five in a row.

"I wouldn't be surprised if he broke the record," said Augendre, who began covering the Tour in 1949. "He dominates so completely. He is one of the greats. He's an all-rounder."

Although he's nearly halfway there, Armstrong isn't yet contemplating a record six victories.

"To tie a record or to break a record has never been my motivation," he said. "I don't look at myself as an Indurain, or a Merckx or an Anquetil or a Hinault. I look at myself as a lesser rider.

"My career is going to be played out year by year," he added. "Will I be here in 2004? I don't know. The record won't keep me here. Happiness will."

LEAVE: Couple looking forward to move

(From 1A)

Midland chamber, combined with his strength in marketing and membership that made him a prime candidate.

"He's very enthusiastic," she said. "He has set some aggressive goals for the chamber. We were looking for someone in a chamber president that can take us from a $150,000 chamber to where we want to be, a $250,000 or $350,000 or more chamber of commerce. Our goals are to have a membership campaign, a capital campaign and eventually purchase a permanent location."

K. Michael Conaway, chairman of the board of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, said Partain "has been a wonderful staff member. He's done great work in membership and we're disappointed to lose him. We're excited about his new opportunity in running the Nacogdoches chamber and wish him well. We'll miss him and his family."

Ms. Bond has served as director of the Arts Assembly for six years, and is the co-founder (with Sonny Buck) of Texas Best, which counts among its projects Summer in the City and the History in the House summer productions. Previous to that, she was director of development and marketing for Midland Community Theatre and host of the "High Noon Show" at KOSA TV.

Before returning to Midland in 1977, Ms. Bond was a fashion editor at Women's Wear Daily. An actress and writer, she has written two off-Broadway shows. Her most recent show, "Big Blondes," was performed in England in March.

"I feel a little bad about taking Linda from Midland," Partain said. "She's done so much for Midland, and I appreciate all she has done. I know this is a sacrifice for her. She's been so successful that I know she'll take those abilities with her."

For her part, Ms. Bond said, "I'm excited Bruce has this new challenge, and I'm looking forward to supporting him in this new opportunity. It's hard for me to leave because Midland is my home. I have many projects I am heavily involved in that I will finish, even if it means coming back to Midland. I know I will do a big historic show here next summer."

One benefit of the move, she said, is that Nacogdoches is home to Stephen F. Austin University, which has an enrollment of 10,000 students and has a great play writing and theater department.

Nacogdoches considers itself the oldest community in Texas and Partain observed that "for someone who writes historic dramas, I can only imagine what Linda can find there."

Partain said the deep East Texas community seems to be a good fit, because it shares similar challenges with Midland in that neither community is a large metropolitan area, transportation issues are important and membership issues and helping small businesses achieve all they can achieve.

Partain said he wished he could take Midland with him. "That's the hard part. I've lived and worked here most of my adult life. I don't have any complaints against Midland. This is an opportunity to develop myself and face new challenges."

Ms. Adamson said, "I feel Bruce and Linda will be an asset to the community, bringing new energy, talent and leadership to Nacogdoches."

With new leadership at the City of Nacogdoches and at the university, she said, the timing was right for new leadership at the chamber.

FIND: Cause of man's death still unknown

(From 1A)

Although blood was found on the man's clothing, Ms. Jauz said no indications of the actual cause of death were apparent. She said police believe the blood might have been the result of the dump truck's trash compaction.

Investigations included a search of the area where the trash was collected. Later in the day, police seized a Dumpster from the north alley of the 3600 block of Gaston. Detectives continued combing the area of Thomason, Waverly, and Gaston for clues, but Ms. Jauz said it is unclear whether the Dumpster will reveal any information.

While some 10,000 Dumpsters are in the city, 17 routes and trucks pick up trash at each Dumpster twice each week. Luckily, police knew exactly which truck delivered the victim, and which route the truck traveled for the two hours prior to the final delivery at the landfill.

The Midland Police Department as well as the Midland Sheriff's Office have no reports of a missing person fitting the description of the man found.

Justice of the Peace David Cobos called for an autopsy to take place in Dallas to determine the cause of death.

U.S. Missile, nuclear arms talks with Russia seen as plus for both Bush, Putin

By Tom Raum
Associated Press

■ News analysis

WASHINGTON — The arms control deal struck in Italy by President Bush and Russian President Vladimir Putin gives both countries some breathing space on the divisive issue of a U.S. missile shield, and both leaders a summit success to claim back home.

But important policy differences remain between Washington and Moscow, as competing statements made Monday by Bush and Putin helped underscore.

A day after the two agreed to tie missile defense plans to arms-reduction talks, Bush suggested Putin would have "ample time" to consider how the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty's ban on missile defenses could be overcome.

But he qualified the time frame, saying he wanted such an agreement sooner rather than later. "Time is of the essence," he told reporters in Rome, suggesting the United States would go ahead on its own with a missile defense shield if too much time elapsed.

Putin, back in Moscow, denied that the Genoa summit brought a "principal breakthrough" in the missile defense dispute. "We confirmed our adherence" to the ABM treaty, he told a meeting of top Cabinet officials.

That, of course, is the very treaty Bush hopes to scrap, or to heavily modify. It expressly bars either Russia or the United States from deploying a nationwide defense against ballistic missiles. Bush considers it a relic of the Cold War, and his administration hopes to develop a shield as soon as 2004. But Russia, many European leaders and congressional Democrats consider it a cornerstone of arms control.

While denying a breakthrough, Putin cited "significant forward movement." Noting that U.S. national security adviser Condoleezza Rice was coming to Moscow this week to kick off talks on the newly linked issues, he said the negotiations should "play their own positive role in resolving these difficult issues."

Rice said her talks with her Russian counterparts would not be formal negotiations, but more like "defense planning talks."

"We don't expect this to be a set of discussions that goes on for a very, very long period of time, taking years to get to what should be a fairly simple matter," said Rice, an expert on Russia.

The United States and Russia are obligated to reduce strategic nuclear weapons to between 3,000 and 3,500 each — about half current stockpiles — under a START II agreement that took years to negotiate and remains unratified. Putin says he wants to cut back to 1,500 each.

Those on both sides of the missile defense issue were heartened by the unexpected Putin-Bush agreement, even if it fell short of a true breakthrough.

"The Europeans can give a sigh of relief. Democrats in Congress will have to wait and see before voting on funds. This has the effect of building time into the process and pushing it down the road," said Spurgeon Keeny, director of the private Arms Control Association.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and a missile defense skeptic, said the agreement suggested to him that the administration wouldn't abruptly pull out of the ABM treaty so long as the talks were continuing. "And I think that's very good news," he said.

Rep. Curt Weldon, R-Pa., one of Congress' most outspoken missile defense advocates, said Bush and Putin "have struck the right chord." He predicted the new atmosphere of cooperation could lead to larger U.S.-Russian agreements in other areas, including environmental protection, social programs and debt relief.

He said he was untroubled by Putin's comments in Moscow on adherence to the ABM treaty, saying, "That's for home consumption."

Both Bush and Putin were able to reap gains in prestige from their weekend understanding, analysts suggested.

For Bush, it was a chance to demonstrate his ability to make important deals on the world stage. The former Texas governor took the job with little foreign-policy experience and European allies feared his missile defense plan could spark a new arms race with Russia. It also gave Bush a chance to demonstrate that he wasn't espousing a go-it-alone, or unilateralist, foreign policy.

For Putin, the agreement allows him to claim he's still a global player and remind other world leaders that Russia remains a daunting nuclear power. It also gives Putin leverage in holding Bush to his campaign promise of reducing nuclear warheads and, possibly, in limiting the eventual scope of a U.S. missile shield.

Both Bush and Putin "are advantaged by continuing to talk about this," said Sandy Berger, former President Clinton's national security adviser. "They both want to appear reasonable to the rest of the world."

Still, Berger added, "The easiest thing in the world to agree to is to talk. Now comes the hard part."

Graham remembered for grace, grit in leading Washington Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Katharine Graham would have loved it, her daughter said: America's elite assembled to remember the grace, grit and humor she used to transform The Washington Post into a great newspaper.

"What a way to go!" declared Ben Bradlee, her longtime executive editor, in a eulogy Monday that recalled Mrs. Graham's hearty guffaw, her thirst for a good story and her "love for a piece of the action."

Mrs. Graham, who served as chairman of the Washington Post Co. for two decades, died last Tuesday at 84 from injuries in a fall in Sun Valley, Idaho.

Her funeral at Washington National Cathedral drew a crowd of more than 3,000 including leaders from business, government and journalism. Vice President Dick Cheney, former President Clinton, Microsoft Chairman Bill Gates and cellist Yo Yo Ma were among hundreds of notables who paid their respects.

Yet for all the high-powered names, many of the recollections of Mrs. Graham were of small kindnesses and of friendships remembered from years marked by personal tragedy, political battles and journalistic showdowns.

Mrs. Graham's daughter, journalist Elizabeth "Lally" Weymouth, spoke of her mother's "incredible transformation" from the early years of self-doubt, recalling how her mother would practice saying "Merry Christmas" with her children before heading for the Post's Christmas party.

"Ultimately, she found her voice," Weymouth said, adding, "She would have loved this funeral."

Mrs. Graham's son and successor, Donald Graham, recalled his mother as "a believer in the oldest journalistic virtues."

"She loved scoops," he said. "Her only question was, 'Are you sure you are right?' She loved a good story and burst with pride with the people who wrote them."

Mother of septuplets goes home

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Saudi Arabian woman who gave birth to the nation's second surviving set of septuplets less than two weeks ago was discharged from Georgetown University Hospital on Monday.

The woman, whose last name is Al Qahtani but whose first name has not been released, had been remained at the hospital until now at her own request since giving birth July 12, said Dr. Craig Winkel, chairman of obstetrics and gynecology at the hospital.

While Mrs. Al Qahtani, 28, was slow to regain her strength, Winkel said she could have been released late last week, but asked to stay at the hospital so she and her husband could make arrangements for the lifestyle adjustments that come with having seven babies.

"You go from a family of three to a family of 10 — I don't think there's a van that'll hold seven baby car seats," Winkel told The Associated Press.

The family has been looking for a new home and has been trying hard to protect their privacy, he said.

"It is a beautiful day to be able to escort my wife out of the hospital today, after such a long road we have traveled," said Fahad Al Qahtani, father of the septuplets, said in a statement released by the hospital.

The five boys and two girls will remain in the hospital's neonatal intensive care unit for at least seven to 10 more weeks, said Winkel, and may be discharged from the hospital intermittently as they become strong enough. Currently six of the babies are breathing on their own and one remains on a ventilator.

Window film saves, beautifies, protects

The eyes may be windows to the soul, but windows are your eyes to the world. Like closing your eyes against bright light, you want to protect your home against the sun's heat and ultraviolet rays. Window film from Mid West Glass lets you keep out the harmful elements without plunging your home into darkness.

Mid West installs a variety of types of window film, some of which blocks out up to 80 percent of the sun's heat and 100 percent of its damaging UV rays. UV rays, over time, can fade carpet and other furnishings and can 'dry rot' curtains that are exposed to the most sunlight.

Without some type of protection, west-facing windows can let in heat much of the year. Curtains or shutters darken the room. Window film cuts heat and UV rays while giving you a choice of how much light to let in.

Highly reflective film reduces glare and improves security by making it hard for others to see in. Security films are very hard to break with a hammer or cut with a knife. These films also hold glass together if it breaks, reducing the danger of being cut by sharp fragments.

A variety of attractive architectural tones are available to add beauty both inside and out, for years to come. Residential films include a lifetime warranty on the color and against peeling, bubbling or cracking.

Another beauty of window film is that it is much less expensive than installing new windows and may even pay for itself in reduced air conditioning costs. Installation usually goes quickly, with minimal interruption of your life.

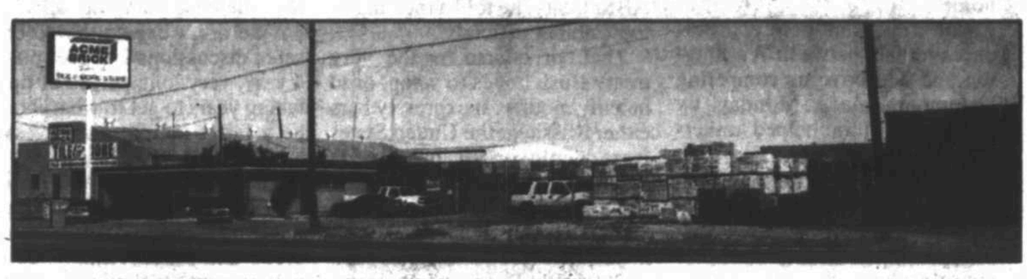
Window film goes on anything with glass—bay windows, French doors, sliding patio doors—and any shape glass—square, round, oval, or other decorative patterns.

This is an attractive and simple way to fight back against the harsh elements of the sun, while letting in the light and the view you enjoy. Call Mid West today for a free estimate.

Mid-West Glass offers glass and windows for any use, as well as patio enclosures. Located at 906 W. Front, the phone number for a free estimate is 682-7373.

Acme Brick is much more than brick

Acme Brick has been the industry leader in quality brick for over 110 years. You may not realize that they now also offer tile, natural stone, concrete and clay pavers, glass blocks and much more.



Above: Here's the Acme showroom; stop in the next time you drive by.

You may automatically think concrete when you're planning projects like walkways, borders, pool areas, even patios and driveways. Acme's Midland Branch Manager Brent Keesee says brick and concrete pavers from Acme offer advantages over a concrete slab.

"Pavers are much less likely to crack than a huge expanse of concrete," he notes. "Second, brick or concrete pavers look more attractive than even a colored concrete slab. Pavers come in a variety of sizes and designs featuring warm earth tones." With preparation, pavers can be installed by the homeowner.

Acme carries a huge variety of brick and concrete pavers by companies like Featherlite, which they own. See their selection of gardener units (like those that might encircle a tree, or a flowerbed), landscape blocks and retaining wall systems.

Re-doing a floor, countertop or wall in a kitchen or bath? Acme also owns American Tile, one of the largest tile distributors in the United States, giving them access to a huge selection of porcelain and ceramic tiles of all sizes, from the traditional smaller sizes to the currently popular 12"x12", 18"x18" and even larger types. "More and more people are replacing floors that were previously carpeted with ceramic tile," Brent reports, citing tile's durability and ease of cleaning.

Natural stones are popular for flooring, countertops and shower walls. American Tile's access to quarries throughout the world allows Acme to offer selections in granite, marble, slate and limestone in a vast variety of colors, textures, and sizes.

If you're looking to brighten a kitchen, bath or elsewhere without sacrificing privacy, consider Acme's glass blocks, as installed in the IBP glass block grid system. This system greatly facilitates installation by using an aluminum framework instead of mortar.

Have questions? Acme's people can provide you with expert advice and many installation tools.

You really just have to go by their showroom to see what's there. Let Brent and his staff show you the possibilities.

Acme Brick's showroom is located at 3020 West Front, just east of the big turn in the road. Hours are 7:30-5:00 weekdays, 9:00 to noon on Saturday. Phone 699-5017 or 522-5084.

Ceramic Tile? Of course!
Acme Brick Tile & More is your best source for ceramic tile from across the country or around the world. With tools, supplies, grout and a great selection of marble, granite, and tile, you can't go wrong. Please visit our showroom today to learn more.

Five strategies for sound investments

Mention the word "investing" at any party today and you're likely to spark a spirited conversation. Joe's brother-in-law struck rich on a "dot.com" stock and then lost most of his gain on a sinking technology issue. A friend who quit her job as a corporate attorney makes more money "day trading" stocks these day.

Brett Riley

You've heard them all by now. With 44 percent of U. S. households owning stocks, phrases like "portfolio mix," "asset allocation," "risk management" and "expense ratios" are now part of the national lexicon.

Even though investing has become a cultural phenomenon, statistics show that two out of three Americans still don't have a strategy for saving or investing.

Here are five simple strategies for you to consider:

1. Make a shopping list. Investing, like shopping, is easier when you know what you need. Jot down your goals, such as saving for your children's college education, buying a vacation home, starting a business or retiring early. Then, determine how much money you'll need for specific goals and when you'll need it. Finally, develop your strategy, planning for both short- and long-term needs.

2. Know what you are buying. Accurate financial information is the key to creating a sound plan. Don't take advice from your neighbors or work-out partners at the gym unless they happen to be professional financial adviser or brokers.

Doing a little homework can make you a more successful investor. Good information is easy to find on the Internet. Visit any of the popular Internet research sites. Read annual reports and prospectuses. Ask questions.

For mutual funds, check sources such as Morningstar, a fund-rating company. Learn the differences between "no load" and "no fees" and study such factors as historical performance, investment objectives, peer-group comparisons, expense ratios and minimum investments. Learn the difference between growth and value strategies. For stocks, look at price/earnings (P/E) ratios, dividend payment history, market capitalization and other important equity criteria.

3. Don't chase returns. Ignore the "hot" stocks if you're not actually sure they fit your investment plan. Personal finance magazines sell subscriptions with headlines like "Buy These Stocks Now" and "Best Funds for Big Returns," but you could be losing thousands acting on tips. By the time a "hot" stock becomes news, it frequently is no longer even warm.

A better strategy is to replace tips and guesswork with a solid, well-planned investment discipline based on your individual goals.

4. Diversify. Investments have risks, but you can help manage risk by diversifying. A balanced portfolio might include large- and small-capitalization stocks, bonds, mutual funds, international investments and cash. Spread your investments over several industry sectors (for instance, technology, financial, health care and others). Markets don't move in lockstep—the gain in one might offset the loss in another, allowing you to ride out market fluctuations. Focus on the performance of your entire portfolio, not just a single investment.

Review your portfolio at least annually. Financial markets change, as do personal circumstances, needs and goals.

5. Get professional help. Investment professionals generally have a wealth of knowledge and resources. They can review your entire situation—assets, financial goals, risk tolerance, tax bracket—to develop a well-balanced plan to match your goals.

The bottom line: Making investments is easy, but making the right investments for your unique goals takes more than luck. By following these five investment strategies, you'll build a better foundation for a secure financial future.

ED sales tax to be taken to City Council

The ball is now in the court of the Midland City Council with regard to the proposed economic development sales tax.

The City Council meets at 10 a.m. today, and during the meeting our city leaders will be presented with at least 3,470 signatures of Midlanders who have said they would like to see the economic development sales tax issue on an upcoming ballot.

Jerry Morales, leader of a citizen effort to put the economic development sales tax proposal on the ballot, had needed to gather at least 2,889 signatures, the equivalent of 20 percent of the electorate that turned out for the most recent election. A last-minute surge of signature-gathering appears to have put them well over the top.

The signatures will be presented to the City Council today and it will have two public readings on the issue, Aug. 14 and Aug. 28, before ultimately deciding whether to move ahead and place the measure on the ballot on Nov. 6.

Gaining approval of the City Council ought to be a relatively easy hurdle to clear. Mayor Mike Canon made economic development the central theme of his mayoral campaign this past spring and easily coasted to victory over a field of formidable rivals. Council members Berry Simpson and LuAnn Morgan are already on record as being enthusiastically in support of the economic development sales tax that will add one-quarter of one cent to the city's existing 8 percent sales tax rate.

Morales apparently has not let the signature-gathering success go to his head. He knows that after winning the city's approval, the toughest battle is still ahead.

Midland voters can be a hard-to-convince lot. Voters insist in knowing all the facts, all the reasoning and all the costs. They aren't easy to win over. An economic development sales tax was twice rejected in the1990s.

So Morales' group of citizens pushing this initiative still have a great deal of work ahead of them.

For them, the timetable is short. School starts in two and a half weeks and then Nov. 6 will be right around the corner.

It's a challenge to be taken step by step, one day at a time.

For the moment, our eyes are on the Midland City Council.

We urge our city leaders to embrace this effort and for them to talk up the economic development sales tax initiative at every opportunity.

Finally, we once again want to congratulate Morales and his group of volunteers on gathering more than enough signatures as they head to the City Council meeting this morning.

Good work — and keep it up.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, July 24, the 205th day of 2001. There are 160 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 24, 1969, the Apollo 11 astronauts returned from man's first lunar landing and splashed down safely in the Pacific.

On this date:

In 1783, Latin American revolutionary Simon Bolivar was born in Caracas, Venezuela.

In 1862, Martin Van Buren, eighth president of the United States, died in Kinderhook, N.Y.

In 1866, Tennessee became the first state readmitted to the Union after the Civil War.

In 1923, the Treaty of Lausanne, which settled the boundaries of modern Turkey, was concluded in Switzerland.

In 1929, President Hoover proclaimed the Kellogg-Briand Pact, which renounced war as an instrument of foreign policy.

In 1937, the state of Alabama dropped charges against five black men accused of raping two white women in the Scottsboro Case.

In 1959, during a visit to the Soviet Union, Vice President Richard M. Nixon engaged in a "Kitchen Debate" with Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev at a U.S. exhibition.

In 1975, an Apollo spacecraft splashed down in the Pacific, completing a mission which included the first-ever docking with a Soyuz capsule from the Soviet Union.

In 1998, a gunman burst into the U.S. Capitol, opening fire and killing two police officers before being shot and captured. Russell Weston Jr., diagnosed as a paranoid schizophrenic, was found incompetent to stand trial.

Ten years ago: Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev announced a final agreement on a treaty designed to preserve the Soviet federation while giving more power to the republics.

What? Did his mentor, former Vice President Al Gore, vanish into a black hole in outer space?

Means

The 2000 Democratic nominee is by definition the party's titular leader, having won the popular vote and held Gov. George W. Bush's victory in the Electoral College to a slim margin. What that actually means in terms of future political power is uncertain, but it clearly offers Gore a substantial opportunity to seize the party podium a second time.

Political parties have a pragmatic habit of turning their backs on presidential nominees defeated by a wide margin, such as Michael Dukakis in 1988, Walter Mondale in 1984 and Bob Dole in 1996. Dukakis and Dole never resurfaced in national politics after their embarrassing loses. Mondale settled for an appointive post as U.S. ambassador to Japan.

Gore disappointed many Democrats, who feel cheated because Bush outmaneuvered him during the chaotic Florida vote recount crisis. But Gore came so close that he still has a claim on party loyalty — if he is prepared to campaign humbly and energetically for it.

Lieberman's restrained reaction may reflect his own interest in seeking the presidency in 2004. He has been visiting key states and cozying up to key fund-raisers, but he says that he will not run if Gore does. Deferring to the man who made him a national figure is wise. A campaign to beat Gore in the primaries would be viewed as unseemly.

Pressed for names of potential Democratic leaders, Lieberman mentioned Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, who has displayed little White House ambition, and House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, who has shown a great deal of ambition. He also listed former President Bill Clinton, who is still popular with party loyalists and in demand for speaking engagements but is constitutionally forbidden to seek a third term at any time.

Only belatedly did Lieberman think to say "former Vice President Gore."

This may or may not be a signal that Gore would have a tough time ginning up another race for president. Putting down Gore may be merely wishful thinking on Lieberman's part.

Gore has deliberately stayed out of the public spotlight for the last six months, getting over an admitted post-election depression and giving Bush enough time and policy rope to hang himself. But he has begun to stir lately, organizing a political action committee, contacting longtime fund-raising allies and setting up a training school for young party operatives to work for Democratic congressional candidates in the 2002 elections. He is spreading the word that he will also be available to campaign for those candidates next year. And he has attended more than a dozen "thank you" dinners around the country for donors and other past political benefactors.

Once he has fully re-emerged this fall, voters will remember that Gore is the best-known Democrat in the business, next to Clinton. And this time he would not be in Clinton's shadow, nervously gauging what to say and do about a polarizing president he didn't respect and couldn't ignore.

As we used to say about Ronald Reagan, let Gore be Gore. The original, Vice President Gore was thoughtful, eloquent, dignified, compassionate and relentless in pursuit of good ideas and policies.

The Gore on display during last year's campaign was something less, a stiff personality who often seemed unsure of himself. Unfortunately, he came off like a victim of permanent dyspepsia.

My own feeling is that Gore is convinced he was cheated and won't rest until he has a chance to run again and correct that wrong. There is ample precedent: Vice President Richard Nixon, who finally reached the White House after winning in 1968, plotted his comeback practically from the day Sen. John F. Kennedy defeated him in 1960 in an election Nixon thought Kennedy had stolen.

If Gore is to win the 2004 nomination, however, he will have to work for it, proving himself to grassroots voters and the party's liberal base. One big hurdle may be the labor unions, which were central to his victory in many big states but are conspicuously uncommitted this time. It is too early to expect labor leaders to take sides. But Gephardt in particular has powerful ties to organized labor, having worked tirelessly for union causes such as a higher minimum wage and opposition to the North American Free Trade Agreement.

Ultimately, much may depend upon Bush. If the Republican president is doing badly and looks vulnerable, a host of Democrats will crowd the field and test Gore's resilience. If Bush seems unbeatable, Gore's party rivals may back away, letting him become the sacrificial lamb.

In the meantime, don't listen to Lieberman. Keep your eye on Gore.

Nancy Reagan has shown courage over the years

WASHINGTON — Hats off to Nancy Reagan. She joins the public debate about stem cell research at a crucial time.

I admire her courage for endorsing federal support for stem cell research, a very touchy issue that has split the Republican Party. On one side are those whose anti-abortion beliefs are so strong that they cannot abide the notion of killing human embryos to harvest their stem cells.

Thomas

On the other side are those who believe the prospect of medical breakthroughs through stem cell research justifies federal support. Supporters say stem cell work could produce cures for diseases such as Alzheimer's.

Because she is helping her husband cope with Alzheimer's disease, Mrs. Reagan's endorsement of federal support for stem cell research is so personally poignant. She made her views known through two former Reagan staffers, Michael Deaver and Kenneth Duberstein, who passed her message to the White House and to key Republican leaders on Capitol Hill.

The former president's progressive affliction was first diagnosed in 1994. Like thousands of other caretakers taking care of their family members, Mrs. Reagan has been keeping vigil over her husband, who no longer recognizes friends or relatives.

This is not the first time that she has shown courage. In 1994, she took on retired Lt. Col. Oliver North when he ran for a U.S. Senate seat from Virginia. North had been fired from the White House because of his role in the Iran-Contra scandal, which erupted in her husband's second term in the presidency.

North and others on the White House staff were accused of engineering covert arms sales to Iran and using the proceeds to aid the Contra rebels then fighting the Marxist regime in Nicaragua.

Eight years later, when North was running for the U.S. Senate, the former first lady told an interviewer a month before the election that North "has a great deal of trouble separating fact from fantasy." She also said that North "lied to my husband and lied about my husband" in his Iran-Contra dealings.

Mrs. Reagan was irate over North's claim that Reagan had "authorized the Iran-Contra arms deal." In his book, "Under Fire: An American Story," North wrote that he was "convinced President Reagan knew everything."

The effect of her statement was devastating to North and helped defeat him in his bid for elective office.

In these days of personal sadness, Mrs. Reagan should look back with pride at her time in the White House.

While helping her husband in the spirals of Alzheimer's, she also has been making frequent hospital visits to see Reagan's daughter Maureen from his first marriage to actress Jane Wyman. Maureen is suffering from cancer. The former first lady and Maureen became very close during the White House years.

In her latest book, "I Love You, Ronnie," a compilation of Reagan's letters, Mrs. Reagan describes her husband's illness as akin to traveling down a path where there is no place to go but down — and "no light at the end of the tunnel."

She wrote that she and her husband decided to disclose their illnesses to arouse public awareness and understanding. Nancy Reagan underwent breast cancer surgery in 1987.

The former president's moving letter to his "fellow Americans," dated Nov. 5, 1994, announcing he had Alzheimer's, concluded with the memorable words:

"I now begin the journey that will lead me into the sunset of my life. I know that for America there will always be a bright dawn ahead."

CHARLEY REESE

A society lacking morality becomes a dangerous one

Totalitarianism is American liberalism carried to its logical conclusion. America's current liberals — and please don't confuse them with earlier generations who wore that label — think that you can run a society without religion or morality.

In other words, decisions will be made on the basis of reason, and on the basis of cost-benefit ratios, without regard for any moral consideration. And those decisions will be enforced by the power of government.

People cannot be trusted to make their own decisions, the modern liberal inevitably concludes. Well, go ahead with being a liberal, and you'll find yourself perfectly aligned with the communists.

Reese

Does anyone out there think that it is not more economical to execute the hopelessly disabled than to care for them? Of course it's more economical to kill them. Abortion and euthanasia place economics, convenience and productivity ahead of human life.

You know, of course, that the Holocaust had its beginning in the euthanasia of the hopelessly insane and retarded. I warn you, however, that it is not a far step from that point to deciding that certain people are simply surplus, economically unproductive and therefore a drain on society's resources.

Let's take someone who's been on welfare for three decades. He or she will never be self-supporting, so why not execute him or her and free the productive members of society from the burden of supporting that person? Why continue to arrest and imprison a chronic criminal? Kill him or her and be done with it. A bullet only costs 15 cents.

A society without religion and morality is a dangerous society. Who will become its ultimate victims depends entirely on who wields the power and what their eccentricities and prejudices happen to be. It might be ironic, but it is not surprising that the Israelis learned from the Holocaust that it is better to be like the Germans than to be like the Jews.

They are now the murdering bully boys to the Palestinians. I think it is ridiculous for people who have already decided that it is moral to kill babies in the womb to show some squeamishness about destroying human embryos in a petri dish. That's like some guy saying he didn't mind shooting 6-year-olds, but he wasn't sure about 2-year-olds.

Once you decide to become a child-killer, their ages no longer matter. Nor do the numbers. Damnation of your soul is completed with the first one. American liberals are likely going to get everything they think they want, and then they will discover that what they've created is a hellish, nightmarish society devoid of compassion or kindness or love or mercy. All of these are religious and moral concepts.

They have nothing to do with reason or science or economics. Thomas Jefferson wanted to replace an aristocracy of birth with an aristocracy of merit. Today's liberals want an aristocracy of mediocrity. Having discarded religion, they really can't think of any reason why a sodomite should not share a tent with a 12-year-old Boy Scout.

Science doesn't condemn sodomy. Science is morally neutral. It views sodomy as just another of the human race's many aberrations, like necrophilia (a sexual preference for dead bodies) or sadism or masochism. Having decreed egalitarianism, having discarded religion and morality, modern liberalism's only answer to nature's obvious inequality is to lower standards on everything and to declare everything is permissible.

Palestinian teens, jailed for throwing stones and firebombs, allege abuse

By Jamie Tarabay
Associated Press

HUSSAN, West Bank — It starts with a knock on the door in the middle of the night. Israeli troops drag a Palestinian teen out of bed for questioning. Pick him up in an hour, parents are told. But by then, their son already is in prison.

There he may stay for months, depending on an Israeli security court's sentence, for anything from throwing stones to firebombing Israeli cars.

Young Palestinians come out telling of torture by security guards and assaults by adult inmates. And, Palestinian psychologists and rights activists say, they are hardened and looking for revenge.

Salim Zaoul, who marked his 14th birthday during a seven-month sentence for throwing stones and firebombs at Israeli cars, recalled an older prisoner slashing his left thigh with a razor blade in Megiddo prison in northern Israel.

He said he was lucky — he saw a youth from east Jerusalem who was cut from his right eye down his cheek by another inmate.

"Many don't want to go back to school, they want to do something against Israel," said Khaled Quzmar, a lawyer at Defense for Children International, an organization that represents many of the minors brought before Israeli military courts.

More than 400 Palestinians younger than 18 — who live in areas Israel still controls — have been arrested and sentenced to Israeli prisons since violence broke out in September, according to Defense for Children International. Most have been released; about 180 are still detained.

In a report last week, the Israeli human rights group B'Tselem said during interrogation many minors have been forced to stand or sit in awkward positions for extended periods and have been abused and slapped by security forces until they signed documents written in Hebrew, which most could not read.

Israeli officials were hardly eager to discuss the topic.

Raanan Gissin, spokesman for Prime Minister Ariel Sharon, said questions should be put to the police and the military. Police spokesman Gil Kleiman said the report was with the Justice Ministry for investigation, and therefore "we are not able at this time to comment until the investigation is complete."

Israel's military spokesman said anyone who commits an act of violence against Israel will be arrested and sentences are at the courts' discretion.

Many minors are held with common criminals rather than in prisons for those held as threats to Israel's security. This means, their lawyers say, that the teenagers cannot be indoctrinated by older Palestinians — but it also puts them in the path of drug traffickers or thieves, and some tell of being beaten or stabbed by fellow inmates.

The army spokesman said there were no plans to move minors to separate jails because the numbers are too few to justify building a juvenile detention center. Aides to Public Security Minister Uzi Landau, who is responsible for shaping policy on arresting minors, repeatedly said the minister was unavailable for comment.

While he was in custody, Salim Zaoul shared a cell with Mansour Zaoul, 16, from the same village of Hussan, near Bethlehem in the West Bank. The tight-knit community of 6,500, all members of the same clan, is in an area under Israeli control, making it easy for Israeli police to make arrests.

Villagers closely follow the cases of the 40 minors from Hussan who are in custody.

Mansour Zaoul said he was taken in October to a police station in Gush Etzion, a settlement in the West Bank, and made to stand nearly naked in the brisk autumn air.

"It was 1 o'clock in the morning. I was still blindfolded, they threw cold water at me and kept on kicking me until I couldn't breathe," he recalled.

Zaoul said after more than two hours, he succumbed to demands he sign a confession admitting to throwing stones and petrol bombs.

Council to decide whether to pursue transportation funding

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

At its meeting today, the City Council will vote on whether to give the City Manager's office authorization to apply for state and federal assistance for a public transportation project and pursue the feasibility of a joint project with Odessa.

The Council is likely to pass the item since most members have publicly stated they favor some form of public transportation, and since the application is not a binding commitment to use the funds.

Also, the state deadline for transit funding for the next fiscal year is Aug. 1.

"Hopefully, we will know before Sept. 1 if we get the money," Assistant City Manager Marcus Johnston said.

The idea of a joint creation with Odessa is not only a way for the two cities to work together as a Metropolitan Statistical Area, but is expected to increase the odds of the two cities getting funding.

"It certainly will be helpful," Johnston said. "One thing TxDOT (Texas Department of Transportation) does like to see is the creation of an urban transit district prior to any funding being given to the cities. We were going to create the districts after we find out if we were funded. We don't want to waste time going through the creation of a district."

The two cities are seeking nearly $1.5 million in discretionary funds, which is expected to help since the Texas legislative session resulted in a decrease of some 11.3 percent (nearly $8 million) in mass transit appropriations for the state's non-metropolitan areas.

The public transportation issue is being revisited as city leaders proclaim Midland has changed significantly since the last public transportation system — MidTran — failed in the 1980s.

"There are many people who don't own cars, and with the gas prices fluctuating like they are, usually at a higher rate, and with the elderly needing transportation at various times, a public transportation system is very well needed," District 2 City Councilman James Bradford said. "There are students who need to get to various places and even get to a school who do not have private transportation. A public transportation system would greatly assist those citizens."

Estimates are a Midland transportation system would reach 190,000 riders per year.

Johnston said the system would be a fixed route system that would be able to deviate from its route three-quarters of a mile to drop off a rider, and with enough notice, pick up a rider in need.

According to city documents, it would take at least three years to get any system off the ground.

Johnston has previously stated that if the city purchases the equipment needed, a public transportation system would carry a start-up cost of $500,000 to the city. That is in addition to a $135,000-a-year operation budget. A leasing option would cost $170,000 a year.

"We now have to look at all sources," Johnston said.

Even if the state decides to fund Midland with contingency funds, the city isn't obligated to take the funds until it signs a formal application.

"That will be the drop dead time when we have to decide," Johnston said. "Even then, there is language in the state agreement which allows us to opt out at about any time we want to."

Sign ordinance critics to challenge Council

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

Proposed amendments to Midland's sign ordinance will encounter opposition today as the City Council debates the need to outlaw new billboards in the city or in the 3 1/2 mile extra-territorial jurisdiction.

The billboard issue, one of three proposed amendments dealing with the sign ordinance, would allow for damaged or dilapidated billboards to be rebuilt, but no new billboards would be allowed or moved to another area.

The proposal is expected to have a long-term impact toward protecting the city's gateways and visual quality.

However, opponents believe this oversteps the city's right as a governing entity. One, District 1 representative LuAnn Morgan, believes government shouldn't tell people how to run their business. That is why she believes there will be modifications.

"I have a problem putting people out of a job," Ms. Morgan said. "That really both-

Couple's struggle with paralysis could lead to loss of home, livelihood

In one instant, leading a normal life can forever change into the least expected.

That is what happened to Marilyn Brooks, a former ICU nurse at Midland Memorial Hospital. For 32 years Mrs. Brooks cared for the sick, but roles were switched when she suffered a brain aneurism that left her paralyzed and unable to speak.

On Friday, March 9, 2001, Barry Brooks, a former Baptist preacher, received the daily phone call from his wife telling him she was on her way home from work. At around 7:30 p.m., on her way home, Mrs. Brooks was struck with an aneurism as she backed out of her parking space.

"After hitting a pick-up behind her, Marilyn came to and tried to walk back into the hospital, but was too weak," Brooks said. "A co-worker found her in the parking lot. She was a God-send."

■ A bank account has been opened through the Comanche Trail Shootists with Bank United. The account number for anyone wishing to help the Brooks's during their time of need is 9004216330.

The co-worker went to get a wheelchair after putting Mrs. Brooks back into the car.

Mrs. Brooks was taken to the emergency room, and at 1:30 a.m. was transported to Zale Lipshy Hospital in Dallas where surgery was performed Saturday morning.

"The doctors told us that 25 percent of brain aneurism patients have a stroke. They told us there was a chance it could happen, but we hoped it wouldn't," Brooks said.

Child care facilities praise loan forgiveness legislation

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

One million federal dollars can go a long way.

Local child care workers are hopeful that a $1 million allocation to a Child Care Provider Loan Forgiveness Program will help to alleviate the crucial needs of children in day care and early learning facilities.

"For every qualified teacher I get, I'll have 10 unqualified applicants," said Gayle Woodruff, staff supervisor at the Midland Child Care Center. "It's incredible the amount of unqualified workers you get. Then they come here and get experience, then after a week, they decide they don't like working with kids and they're gone."

Before the allocation was voted on as part of the 2001 Consolidated Appropriations Act and passed in the state legislative session last month, many child care companies had to take matters into their own hands. KinderCare Learning Centers, which operates a large facility in Midland and hundreds nationwide, has an educational assistance program for its workers.

Other local companies, like Envirokids Preschool and Child Care Center, joined forces with the National Association for the Education of Young Children.

Leanna Trost, the owner and director of Envirokids, said as a one of NAEYC's four-star facilities for four years, her company's employees are eligible for scholarships if they adhere to child care and child development curriculums. She also said more incentives are needed to attract young, qualified workers to child care institutions.

"This industry is always looking for qualified individuals," Ms. Trost said. "Whatever is available for me to acquire and retain qualified individuals, I'm all for it."

Ms. Woodruff said it is harder and harder to find individuals who will work for a child care technician's pay, and that problem gets worse when employees get college degrees.

"The problem is that they get an education, and then they want more money," she said. "Then the government can't pay it, so they want to be teachers. Then they get paid even less."

Sheneka Anders is a teacher at Number 1 Wee Care Learning Center in Midland, and is also a student at Midland College. She hopes to be an early childhood education specialist after she graduates — and now that she may have forgiveness of her loans, she said she can do that much easier.

"It'll help out a great deal," she said. "Because after graduation, you spend all of your money instead of living off of it. I'm sure it'll help a lot of people."

Wee Care Director Helen Price already believes in the benefits of having students and future teachers working at her facility, and said this financial help will serve as an incentive to get more excited and qualified teachers.

"Students in the field, they come in wanting to be teachers," she said. "And what we're doing is helping someone come into the community. So it's a good deal, not just for the community, but for Midland as a whole."

— It is always a weird feeling when you find out some of your younger co-workers weren't even born when all of that was happening.

— It's the same with the Vietnam War. You starting talking about it and you are met with blank stares, kind of like what my generation does when our parents start reflecting on the Great Depression.

— It is just hard to relate if you weren't there.

— Someone ought to come up with a mouse-flavored cat food.

— I've always loved these words of wisdom first uttered by the Swiss critic Henri Frederick Amiel: "The man who has no inner life is the slave of his surroundings."

— One man's opinion: British golf fans are more knowledgeable than their American counterparts. And better behaved.

— If you run into actress Lynda Carter today, wish her a Happy Birthday ... and maybe tease her a little bit, too. She turns 50.

— Just wondering: Wouldn't it seem logical that a psychic would occasionally win the lottery?

— And today's final quote comes from Jose Ortega Y Gassett, who once said, "Living is a constant process of deciding what we are going to do."

COUPLE: Group opens account to aid Brooks family

was left paralyzed on her right side and unable to speak.

After five weeks in Dallas, Mrs. Brooks returned to Midland on April 13. She stayed in Health South as an in-patient until June 26. Currently she is an out-patient staying at home and requiring constant care.

"In our last family conference, they asked us what our goals were," Brooks said. "Marilyn said her goals were to get the use of her arm and leg back, drive and go back to work."

Each morning the couple wakes up around 6:30. Brooks prepares breakfast, dresses his wife, fixes her hair and even applies her make-up before leaving to daily rehab.

"I come home to do housework, laundry, grocery shopping — the type of work a housewife does," he said. "I pick her up around two or three in the afternoon, depending which day it is, fix supper, bathe Marilyn and go to bed."

While Mr. and Mrs. Brooks are learning to cope with the changes and concentrate on improving Mrs. Brooks' condition, they also are dealing with an unfortunate financial situation, and what might have to be done in the future.

The Dallas hospital bill was around a quarter of a million dollars, the ambulance flight to Dallas reached over $11,000 and the five-weeks worth of medication reached $41,000, Brooks said. Insurance covers 80 percent of the charges, which still leaves a large total for two people who can no longer work.

Brooks, who cares for his wife, is now unable to work and has had to put their house on the market because of overwhelming medical bills and no source of income. He and his wife are now living off their savings.

"The doctors told us about four live-in facilities that provide rehabilitation every waking hour. Two patients and a therapist live in an apartment together," Brooks said. "We're not sure if the insurance will cover that or what, but when you have a stroke, you only have a certain window of opportunity. Marilyn will get more out of that than what she can get locally."

While the Brooks's still have much to look into for the future, Brooks said he'll follow his wife wherever she goes, even if it means living in his trailer, where he lived for five weeks in Dallas.

Now friends of Mrs. Brooks and her husband want to help as much as possible.

"We've got some great neighbors," Brooks said. "They raised about $1,000 for us through a garage sale. That paid our house bill and utilities for a month. We've gotten a lot of support."

A bank account has also been opened through the Comanche Trail Shootists, a club which Mr. and Mrs. Brooks founded in June of 1995. The account at Bank United is named the Aimless Jane Recovery Club.

"In the Cowboy Club, we always shoot with an alias," said Charles Stephens, president of the Cowboy Pistol Shooter's Club and fellow member of Midland Centennial Lodge No. 1448. "Marilyn always shot under the alias of Aimless Jane."

The account number for anyone wishing to help the Brooks's during their time of need is 9004216330.

"Marilyn's taken care of thousands of people here in Midland," Brooks said. "I hope it never happens to you or any of your loved ones. It can turn your life upside down in just a few seconds."

SIGNS: Alternatives include 'cap and replace' system

ers me."

It also bothers Guy Speck, who owns Lamar Advertising, which operates an estimated 80 of those 100-plus billboards citywide. He says this proposal would "take a lot of good corporate citizens and completely shut them out," and is against everything Mike Canon stood for when he ran for mayor during the spring.

"One of the things Mayor Canon ran on was economic development, balanced growth for the community and a friendlier City Hall," Speck said. "What is coming out from City Hall, we don't consider it to be too friendly. To disallow any new billboards is a pretty drastic measure for good corporate citizens to have to bear."

Canon, for one, says he has not made up his mind on the issue, saying he knows there are people who rely on advertising billboards as a means of livelihood.

"If we don't have a unanimous group (on the Council), that wouldn't surprise me at all," Canon said. "I think there are strong feelings out in the community. I think there probably are on the Council."

One alternative to the proposal is a cap and replace system. This caps the total number of billboards at a certain number and allows for sign companies to replace a sign whenever needed.

"If you cap the signs at 100, you would never have 101," Speck said. "It gives us the ability to relocate it to another spot and maintain our numbers."

At-large Bill Dingus said the cap and replace system has merit, but not in a community — like Midland — that has stopped growing.

"If our city was growing at 20 percent a year, I wouldn't mind the cap and replace, because we are still decreasing the signs over time, but Midland is not growing that fast," Dingus said.

Dingus is an advocate for the proposal and expects a vocal group in opposition to the proposal to be at City Hall today to, in his words, "bemoan the horrible things we are going to do to them and we will cave in as a Council."

A subcommittee had the task of revising the existing sign ordinance to include various new and revised definitions, regulations and proposed enforcement tools.

According to the proposal, portable signs will be allowed for a 45-day onsite/off-site periods instead of the current 60-day period for 36 months following the sign code adoptions. When the three-year window expires, portable signs will be permitted up to 45 days a year. Also, other temporary signs may be used for a maximum of 45 days per year.

DEAR ABBY

Church's scare tactics cause family to flee from the fold

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Last year, our family went through the most traumatic experience of our lives: We left the church we'd been attending for more than a decade.

I always suspected our church was a little "unusual," but because I saw what appeared to be positive changes in people's lives, I kept telling myself we couldn't possibly be involved in a "cult."

My family and I were led to believe we were members of a "special" group — that we had a "different" calling than other churches, which was why we had to work harder and sacrifice more than the average Christian. We were ordered to terminate any activity or relationship that pulled us away from our church obligations or planted seeds of doubt in our minds.

Finally, things got so weird my husband and I could ignore it no longer. We informed the pastor we would not be coming back. He said if we did, we would become "shipwrecked" — doomed to divorce, and our kids would not serve God when they grew up. Then two church leaders called to beg us not to "leave the fold."

By the grace of God, we escaped. I suffered nightmares, depression and total mistrust of any other church for a long time after that. We, who were once part of the trusted few, the "elite inner circle," were now the enemy. We lost all our friends. We had known some of them more than 10 years. Although they claimed to love us, they were forced to cut us off — the same thing we had done to those who had left before us.

Please print my letter as a wake-up call to let people know that scare tactics, manipulation and mind control techniques are very much alive. They are not just reserved for "cults," but are used by some churches. It's called "spiritual abuse," and it's as real as any other form of abuse. Books on the subject can be found at local bookstores and public libraries.

Thankfully, we now belong to a church that does not control our lives, does not shame us when we ask questions, does not resort to belittling and name-calling, and does not blame us for their failures. Instead, our church serves as a positive symbol and source of strength.

If people have doubts about an organization or church to which they belong, they should check it out. If it's a legitimate organization, it will stand up to scrutiny. Please, Abby, urge your readers not to ignore their conscience or bury their feelings. If someone feels something is wrong, there's a good chance it is. Sign me ...

FREE AT LAST

DEAR FREE: You are 100 percent right in saying that if something feels uncomfortable, it's time to examine it more closely and do something about it. It's not a sin; it's healthy, mature behavior. Anything that requires all your time and money is depriving you of a balanced life.

O'Brien apologizes for late-night show's racial slur blunder

PASADENA, Calif. — Conan O'Brien says it's his fault that a racial slur aired on his late-night talk show.

O'Brien and NBC have been criticized for the July 11 episode, in which comedian Sarah Silverman used a racial epithet for people of Chinese descent.

The network said in a statement last week that airing the word "chink" was a mistake, but O'Brien apologized over the weekend during the Television Critics Association annual summer meeting.

"The ultimate responsibility to drop audio on something like that is mine. It's my show, 'Late Night with Conan O'Brien,'" he said. "If I had to do it over again, I understand that word is offensive to people, it hurts people. I would say, 'Let's drop audio on it.'"

O'Brien said he'll be more vigilant about what his guests say from now on.

"We have a lot of different voices come on the show, we have a lot of really intelligent, bright people, and I'm very reluctant to edit people," he said. "In this case, we clearly should have done that. To those people who got hurt hearing that word, I apologize."

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Attorney F. Lee Bailey, who in recent years has gone from representing famous defendants to fighting his own legal battles, is suing the government for millions of dollars.

Beginning Monday, Bailey, who represented Dr. Sam Sheppard, admitted Boston Strangler Albert DeSalvo, Patty Hearst and O.J. Simpson, will be defending his right to reclaim more than $10 million he says the government owes him in a breach-of-contract case.

The lawsuit, filed in the U.S. Federal Court of Claims in Washington, D.C., is about how much Bailey is due for his work in getting convicted French drug smuggler Claude Duboc's foreign assets ready to be liquidated for the government.

Bailey maintains that the government agreed to let Duboc give Bailey $6 million in Biochem Pharma stock for fees and expenses. He says the U.S. government breached an oral agreement to give him that Duboc stock so he could manage Duboc's overseas assets.

In criminal cases, the government can take over assets acquired through illegal activity. In Duboc's case, that included securities and cash in Luxembourg, real estate in Hong Kong, two houses in France, a yacht and several cars.

The homes in France required extensive and expensive repairs and maintenance to eventually sell them for the best possible price.

But the stock's value tripled, and the government demanded it back. A federal judge jailed Bailey for 44 days in 1996 until he could raise enough money to repay what he had used from the fund.

The tussle also prompted the Florida Bar in March to ask the Florida Supreme Court to permanently disbar Bailey, who has offices in West Palm Beach and Boston and lives in Manalapan.

The Florida Bar has alleged that Bailey violated ethics rules in handling the Biochem Pharma stock.

Judge Marian Blank Horn, who has twice denied requests to have the case thrown out, will decide the case, which is expected to last two weeks.

NEW YORK — A spiritual, emotional Lauryn Hill took the stage to tape an episode of MTV's "Unplugged," singing of God and freedom with tears streaming down her face during several songs.

Dressed in blue jeans, a denim jacket and a New York Yankees cap, Hill sat on a stool and strummed an acoustic guitar Saturday night.

"I used to get dressed for y'all but I don't do that no more," Hill joked as she began her set. "It's a new day."

The 26-year-old Grammy winner sang all new songs, some of which don't even have titles yet.

Later, she spoke seriously about her faith and shunning the trappings of fame, and several fans in the audience shed tears with her.

"I'm a mess but God is dealing with me every day," she said. "That's what all these songs are about: problem, cause and solution."

Hill's "Unplugged" appearance is scheduled to air on MTV2 in the late fall, and will rerun on MTV afterward.

BEAVERTON, Ore. — Dennis Quaid jumped on stage barefoot to perform with his band at the annual Taste of Beaverton party.

The actor, better known for his rustic good looks on the big screen than as a musician, says he always performs without shoes because it makes him feel like he's in a living room.

Quaid has been playing guitar since he was 12, growing up in Texas. The group, Dennis Quaid and the Sharks, has been together about eight months.

"I get nervous before I go on stage so I like it, it gets you going," Quaid said Sunday at the Beaverton event. "We've had really good crowds, you know, and people having fun and that's what we want."

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, July 24, 2001:

Use your natural abilities to enhance your professional standing and your personal status. You might overspend in this effort, so keep to a budget. Others help pave the way to success. Networking remains critical. Develop an even stronger circle of friends. You will enjoy the communication and the mutual caring. You also might feel as if you can reveal more of yourself. If you are single, you could meet someone who is already attached or simply not available. Be smart. Walk away. Within your circle of friends, someone could develop into a lot more. If you are attached, share more of your vulnerability, and your mate will become much closer and more caring. LIBRA likes to party with you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ What ailed you yesterday can be resolved today. Feel good about your potential and about solutions that come forward. Dig into your well of creativity when dealing with a co-worker or associate. Let good feelings infiltrate work. Tonight: Accept an invitation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Let your imagination speak right now. You will add extra zest to your life and relationship. Take your time and enjoy a leisurely visit with a pal at lunch. You might not want to mix play and business. Keep discussions separate. Tonight: Work a little late.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★ Deal with basics, whether working with an investment or a family. Knowing what it is that you want allows you to make good choices for yourself as well as others. What makes one person feel secure might make someone else feel quite different. Keep this in mind. Tonight: Find fun.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ The more pleasantly you express your concerns, the more positive another's response will be. Finances will end up in the mix. You have many more opportunities than those of which you are aware. Think about increasing your security. Tonight: Be a couch potato.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Financial concerns become a lot easier. You might opt to do your thing and not worry about funds. A friend has a way of lightening you up. Your instincts help you understand what you need to say to help someone. Communication flourishes in the late afternoon. Tonight: Visit with a pal.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ You help those around you to lighten up. A boss might become so jovial that you cannot get your job done. You might not care, either. An opportunity could cost you a lot more than you anticipate. Follow your instincts about a money matter. Tonight: Your treat.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ You don't need to say much, as your jovial manner says it all. News from others could keep you skipping along. Keep everything hush-hush until later. A relationship becomes even more important than it previously was. Tonight: Whatever puts a skip in your step.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Make a scheduled meeting, network and examine what is going on. Reach out for a higher-up, parent or boss. You know that this person will be on your side. Examine possibilities with an eye to more business opportunities. Seriously consider a course of action. Tonight: Take a personal night.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Spring into action at work. You're finally at a point where you and a boss can work together easily. Focus on one task at a time, with an eye to the future. Make calls, and let others know more of where you are coming from. Tonight: Where your friends are.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Think in terms of success and incorporating new ideas. Make calls to friends and associates, letting them know of your news. If you do the prep work, you'll find that everything falls into place later. Schedule a meeting over dinner. Tonight: Have that hot talk.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ Deal with others on a one-on-one level. Others admire your light and easy style. Swap ideas, and see what is possible here. Your sense of humor and your creativity bring new possibilities. Break past a rigid thought pattern. Get information about a class or workshop. Tonight: Go to the movies.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ Others come to you. Listen to feedback from them. You are personality plus. Share more of your feelings with a child or loved one. Establish a new beginning, be it at work or in your health and diet patterns. Tonight: Follow another's lead.

Opening lead: Three of ♡

The Good Book informs us that there is a time for everything under the sun. But make sure the time is right.

The auction was an exercise in simple arithmetic. As the cards lie, five clubs cannot be defeated, because the king of hearts is finessable, but three no-trump is a far superior contract.

The low heart was ducked in dummy and declarer captured East's nine with the jack. A low spade was led to the queen, and a club was returned. East shot up with the ace and reverted to hearts, and declarer's queen was covered by the king, which was allowed to hold. West cleared hearts and, on gaining the lead with the king of clubs, cashed two more heart tricks to defeat the contract by a trick.

South did well to lead the first club from the table. East did better by rising with the ace to revert to hearts — had East routinely followed low, West's entry to the hearts would have been removed and the game would have cruised home. Still, declarer should have made the contract.

The opening lead and play to the first trick marked West with the king of hearts. South should, therefore, have allowed East's nine of hearts to win the first trick! That renders the defense helpless.

On the heart return declarer plays the jack, and whether or not West covers is immaterial. Declarer wins as cheaply as possible and leads a club. If East wins, the defender is out of hearts (if not, the suit breaks 4-3 and the defenders collect only two heart tricks) and cannot force out the last heart stopper. If West rises with the king to remove declarer's remaining high heart, there is no entry back to cash the established hearts. Either way, two clubs and a heart are all East-West can amass.

Early planning is necessary for education of blind child

By T. Berry Brazelton, M.D.
N.Y. Times News Service

Question: I have a lady friend who has a 4-year-old son who is totally blind. She is beside herself on how to properly raise this fine young man. Are there any agencies or books that could help her along? — E.G., Oxford, Mich.

Dr. Brazelton: Your friend should have been including this boy in an early intervention program by now. She would be learning as much as he would be. Almost all children's hospitals have referrals for such centers. I know that the University of Michigan would be able to help her find one. I'd advise your friend to call there or call the children's medical center nearest to her to find a professional who can evaluate her son. Then, a program for his future learning can be laid out.

Brazelton

Such planning is vitally important. I have a child in my practice who has been blind from birth. She is in the second grade now and doing very fine work, using Braille. Her mother has been working with the Perkins School for the Blind in Boston since the girl was an infant.

Your friend's son can expect a rich, exciting life if he (and his mother) can adjust to his disability and learn how best to deal with it. But they will need help from professionals who specialize in helping blind children.

Books on tape, special computers that sound out the letters as they are typed, Braille and seeing-eye dogs all offer important assistance. I'm sure there are other advances that I don't know about.

Question: Are there any reference materials or studies showing the detrimental effects of kids being shuttled back and forth on airplanes between the divorced households of Mom and Dad in different states? I've seen children in the airports with their "unaccompanied minor" stickers on their shirts.

I've spoken with other divorced parents in this situation and have heard the anguish in their voices as they describe watching their little ones march bravely down the boarding ramp. Now it's happening to us — or trying to. (The court date is in three weeks).

Please help me locate reference materials that will help us show this is not in the child's best interest. — Name and address withheld

Dr. Brazelton: I don't know of any studies specific to this situation, but in a book I wrote with Dr. Stanley Greenspan, "The Irreducible Needs of Children" (Perseus Publishing, 2000), we discuss issues related to custody and divorce. I would love to see more written about this.

The ones who suffer the most in a divorce are the children. They should be the centerpiece of our thinking. I agree with your anguish.

Those who make custody decisions need to take into account children's needs for ongoing nurturing relationships. Every case — and every child — is different, of course. In general, however, children should not be separated from the primary nurturing parent for overnight visits until the age of 3 — unless the child sees both parents many times a week and feels secure with both parents. Overnights should be started gradually between the ages of 3 and 7, beginning with one overnight and then another several months later, building up to longer visits. Longer visits should be adapted to the child's age and also to his comfort level with the noncustodial parent.

I hope these children who travel between households feel passionately wanted at each end of the airplane trip. They are certainly learning to cope with separations and with being independent too early.

Kobe's Gifts

Mom collects toys for special-needs kids

By Joann Livingston
Waxahachie Daily Light

ENNIS — When an occupational therapist started working with Kobe Trojacek, who was born with Down syndrome in July 1999, she told his mother some of her other patients didn't have any toys at home.

"I'm thinking, where are the grandparents? The church? What do you mean, they don't have toys?" Sandy Trojacek recalled. "She told me how they were trying to stimulate the child with a wooden spoon or something like that. These children aren't going to be stimulated with a brown spoon."

Mrs. Trojacek, and her husband, John, decided to do something to help. The Kobe's Gifts toy drive for special children is now under way in Ellis, Navarro and Johnson counties for a second year. Sandy is again spearheading the drive, which ends July 31.

Kobe participates in the Early Childhood Intervention program, which assists children ages 3 and under with special needs. His family wanted to give back to the program they have found so helpful.

"He didn't really need any more toys because everyone has been so generous and helpful, and wouldn't it be neat if every child in the program could get a toy?"

When Kobe's first birthday came around, it was more than a party. It was a celebration of Kobe's overcoming several serious health problems.

Kobe spent almost the first four months of his life in the hospital, and had open-heart surgery as a 3-month-old. He's allergic to protein and remains on a special formula. Kobe also was born with a very rare form of leukemia, for which he undergoes periodic testing to determine its status. He also is being treated for hypothyroidism.

He's done well in the last few months, however.

"We've been hospital-free for a long time," Mrs. Trojacek said. "In looking back, I wonder how we ever did all of that."

Kobe's first birthday party marked the first collection for Kobe's Gifts, with all the family members and friends attending asked to bring a toy for the ECI program.

"We collected 155 toys, enough to cover every child in ECI in Ellis, Johnson and Navarro counties," Mrs. Trojacek said.

This year, in addition to collecting toys from Kobe's relatives and friends, Mrs. Trojacek has invited the public to participate.

The ECI program continues to grow in the numbers it serves, and more toys are needed. At this time, about 180 children are enrolled across the three-county region.

"He's been so blessed," Mrs. Trojacek said of Kobe, who continues to make great progress in his work. "He started walking this weekend. He works hard. ... I'm learning day by day how smart he is."

'A lot of times, with a cute toy, you can put it across the room, and they will crawl or roll to get to it. It gets them motivated and interested. Whatever they are working on, a toy can be used in their therapy.'

— Lisa Marak
coordinator of
Early Childhood Intervention program

Because Kobe is expected to talk later than most children, he has learned sign language to have an effective way to communicate. He knows about 20 words now and continues to add more as the weeks go by.

He recently showed off his new walking skills and readily signed words back and forth to his mother, his ECI therapist and visitors in his mother's shop.

Taking a break from eating his Cheerios, he crawled over to a tent filled with colorful plastic balls, diving in headfirst to retrieve one before rolling it merrily around the room.

"He'll have speech therapy up until he goes to school because he probably won't speak until much later," Mrs. Trojacek said. "When he's ready to speak, he'll drop the sign language."

Kobe has enjoyed tremendous family and community support, Mrs. Trojacek said, gesturing around the large playroom at her store where different colorful toys abound.

"You can see why he doesn't need any more toys."

Kobe will participate in ECI, receiving physical, occupational and speech therapy through age 3, when he will enter another program, such as prekindergarten or Head Start.

Children are eligible for ECI if they are delayed in any one of six areas, according to ECI coordinator Lisa Marak.

"We have all types of children: Down's, speech, bedridden, cerebral palsy, globally delayed. There are a lot of different reasons a child is eligible for ECI.

"We serve children ages 3 and under. At age 2, we start discussing options and work towards their transition into another program. By age 3, they know their options and they knew where to go."

The toys are important because they are used to work with children's fine motor skills and eye-to-hand coordination, Ms. Marak said. They can be used to teach a child to point, use his hands and rotate his wrists.

They can help a child learn to pick up, to grasp, to tolerate different textures against his or her skin and to draw visual interest so as to encourage a child to move his or her eyes. Placed a little ways away from the child, the child can be encouraged to move toward the toy.

"A lot of times, with a cute toy, you can put it across the room, and they will crawl or roll to get to it," Ms. Marak said. "It gets them motivated and interested. Whatever they are working on, a toy can be used in their therapy."

"It was a whole new learning experience," said Mrs. Trojacek, who said she never realized how important a role the right toys can play. Holding up what at first glance appears to be a simple stuffed alligator, she pointed out its different aspects, including its different textures ranging from smooth to knobby, and its different colors and patterns, ranging from red to yellow to green and from stripes to solids to circles.

"There's so many things this one little toy can do," she said.

The toys are not expensive.

"These toys cost $5 or less in the infant section at the store," she said. "The brand names are Sassy, Kids 2 and Fisher Price. They have different colors, patterns and textures — anything that will stimulate a child's interest."

PARENT'S PERSPECTIVE

Timer doesn't keep cartoon junkie from his favorite shows

By Lana Cunningham

My husband keeps threatening to get rid of the televisions in our house.

It's not because he thinks I'm watching TV all the time (I'm doing good to watch an evening newscast), but he doesn't like the effect it's having on Christopher.

Christopher's goal in life, at this point, is to become a couch potato.

I enrolled him in a summer program to get him away from the television set.

No matter what we do, he always manages to sneak back into what he refers to as his living room, and switch on the set. He knows what shows come on which channels and at what time.

During the spring, he decided to be a pre-school dropout. "What are you going to do all day?" I asked him.

"Watch television." He then complained about his pre-school. "All we ever do there is work, work, work!"

"That's life and you'd better get your body in the car now," I answered, ignoring the whines.

My biggest complaint is with Cartoon Network, which advertises special blocks of shows for the weekend. On Friday mornings, when Christopher gets up, he recites the special showings and what time they will be coming on Cartoon Network and whether it will be Saturday or Sunday. His conversations on Friday are filled with news about these shows.

Cunningham

It's not that all the shows are bad. Christopher's favorites are "Scooby Doo" and "Dexter's Laboratory." I kinda like "Scooby Doo" and my husband has gotten caught up in "Dexter's Laboratory."

One evening he was bringing Christopher to the dinner table from the television set. It seemed to take my husband a long time and when I checked on him, he and Christopher were both wrapped up in a Dexter's Lab segment. "It's pretty good," he said. "I'd like to finish the show." I gave him one of "those looks" and he turned off the set and brought the screaming child to the table.

Christopher claims he gets ideas for experiments by watching Dexter'sLab and if he can't watch it, he'll "never, never, ever do another experiment." Gee, who wants to crimp his creative style?

Television does have some positive influence on him. He has picked up Spanish words from Dora, learned colors and numbers from "Sesame Street," and gets ideas for building from Bob the Builder.

One evening I turned it to Discovery Channel and we watched a show on roller coasters. As soon as it ended, Christopher was in his room designing a roller coaster for little children, using his Thomas the Tank Engine track. From Bob the Builder, he got an idea to create a Mini-land using Legos.

Recently, my husband thought he would solve the problem of too much TV watching by putting a timer on the set. "He can only watch two hours a day now," he said after installing the timer.

Later that day, he caught Christopher watching shows at a time not programmed into the timer.

"I wanted to watch my cartoons, Daddy, so I took the timer off the TV," Christopher said innocently. (I cracked up laughing.)

A few days later, a cable television person tried to sell me on the new digital equipment and showed me all the additional channels we would get.

"You don't understand," I told him. "We're trying to cut back on watching television." He then explained a feature that would let us turn the television on only at certain hours.

When I showed the plan to my husband that evening, he summed up the offer this way, "You mean we pay more money to keep the TV off?"

I don't think the company can count on us as new customers.

Midland College drops women's golf

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Despite three straight national championships, Midland College officials have decided to terminate the women's golf program, effective immediately. And the decision simply came down to numbers.

The factors involved in the decision include:

■ Currently, there are 27 women's golf teams in the NJCAA with only five programs in Texas.

■ Currently, there are only three teams competing in Region V. Midland College has the only women's golf program in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

■ The small number of teams participating has contributed to a weakened level of competition among the women's golf programs in the NJCAA. Of the top three finishers at the 2001 National Championship, there were 97 strokes between first and third place.

■ Scheduling is very difficult due to the lack of teams in the region or country.

To comply with Title IX, Midland College will add women's volleyball starting in the 2002-03 school year. In contrast to golf, volleyball's advantages cited by Midland College are the following:

■ Currently, there are 287 volleyball teams in the country, with 28 competing in Texas, 10 in the region and three competing in the WJCAC (Clarendon, Frank Phillips and New Mexico Military Institute).

■ Due to the larger number of teams, there would be stiffer competition and scheduling games would be much easier.

■ A volleyball program would also consist of 15-18 student-athletes.

Just two months ago, the Lady Chaparrals captured their third straight national title with a four-round 1,264 total, 21 shots better than McLennan Community College and 97 shots better than Tyler Junior College. Angela Finlay also became the third straight Lady Chaparral to win a national medalist title.

This season, the Lady Chaparrals also went through a little turmoil when head coach Joe Williams was dismissed from his duties just a couple of weeks prior to the national tournament for unspecified reasons.

At the time of Williams' dismissal, Midland College athletic director Ron Jones said the college had no intentions of terminating the program. Jones said that after interviewing five candidates for the job as head women's golf coach, questions were raised about whether or not it was worth keeping the program due to the number of teams participating and the cost of travel to reach some of the tournaments. Jones did emphasize that money was not the determining factor in terminating the program.

The Reporter-Telegram did confirm that Andrews girls golf coach Mike Campbell was one the candidates interviewed for the job. Campbell said, "I didn't want the job. I'm happy here at Andrews." Campbell was surprised to learn that MC was dropping the program after the success it's had the last three years.

Dickson, Beck head City field

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The 2001 Midland Women's City Golf Tournament moves to Midland Country Club today with two very famaliar names in the hunt.

Lisa Beck and Jo Dickson are both three-time winners of the city title and will be in the match play field of eight today when action begins at 8:48 a.m. over the tough MCC layout.

Beck, playing out of Midland Country Club, has won the last two city championships and also won in 1993. Dickson won her last city title in 1996 but also won this event in 1989 and 1986.

Beck is trying to win the title three years in a row for the first time since Georgia Bray turned the trick in 1971-73.

In fact, the tournament this year is being played in the honor of Bray, who died recently. Bray won four city titles.

Beck, being the defending champion, didn't have to play in Monday's qualifying round at Ranchland Hills Country Club. She earned a championship flight berth exemption by winning last year.

However, the rest of the field had to qualify at the RHCC course on Monday. Maybe it shouldn't be a surprise that Dickson, who is playing out of RHCC, took medalist honors with a 73.

Trina Albright, who has also qualified for the championship flight, was the only other qualifier out of 48 golfers to break the 80 barrier, firing a 79. Albright, who is playing out of Green Tree Country Club, has been in the championship run many times, but the title has eluded her.

Shelly Winchell, a former Midland High and Midland College golfer who is playing out of Hogan Park, had an 80 to get into the championship field

MIDLAND ROCKHOUNDS

Ranger shuts down 'Hounds

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

On Monday, it was the Midland RockHounds' turn to fall victim to some good pitching.

Aaron Myette, on a spot start from the Texas Rangers, handcuffed the 'Hounds through six innings to lead the Tulsa Drillers to a 4-1 victory at Christensen Stadium.

Myette wasn't even scheduled to start on Monday but the Rangers' pitching rotation was recently thrown out of whack because of last week's train derailment and subsequent chemical spill in Baltimore that forced cancellation of two games. The originally scheduled starter, Justin Duchscherer, a product of Lubbock's Coronado High School, was called up to the majors to pitch in Wednesday's doubleheader against the Orioles in Arlington.

"It was good to get on the mound," said Myette, who is scheduled to pitch for the Rangers Saturday against Tampa Bay in Arlington. "I haven't been throwing much lately because of that train wreck in Baltimore, so it was good to get out and get some innings."

Myette performed like a big leaguer should against Double-A competition as he went through six innings almost without a scratch. At one point Myette retired 13 RockHounds in a row. Myette then gave way to Tulsa closer Spike Lundberg, who picked up his sixth save of the season.

"I was able to have command of my fastball, which set up my off-speed pitches," said Myette who allowed just three hits, struck out two and walked just one. "I was also getting them to swing at my pitches."

"You've got to tip your hat to him," said Midland manager Tony DeFrancesco about Myette. "He came in and did his job. The first six innings he shut us down. We got a couple of hits off him but we really didn't hit the ball very hard against him. We had our chances late in the game. We just didn't get any timely hits."

The 'Hounds biggest chance came in the eighth inning when they had bases loaded and nobody out. But the only run for the 'Hounds was off a fielder's choice by Todd Mensik.

DeFrancesco can't fault the work of his starter Justin Lehr (10-8), as he kept the 'Hounds in the game by allowing just two runs on eight hits in 5 1/3 innings of work.

"He threw pretty good today," said DeFrancesco about Lehr.

After the four-game series split with the Drillers, the 'Hounds now welcome the El Paso Diablos for four games at Christensen. On a recent road trip to El Paso, the Diablos took three out of four from the RockHounds.

"They're playing just as good as anybody in the league," said DeFrancesco

New Dallas Cowboys quarterback Tony Banks (3) is no Troy Aikman, who retired after last season with three Super Bowl rings in his possession. But Banks is showing confidence as camp opens.

Banks displays calm confidence in taking over as Cowboys' QB

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

WICHITA FALLS — The new starting quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys wears No. 3 and has diamond studs in both ears. He's lost 11 more games than he's won and he's never completed a pass in a playoff game.

Tony Banks is no Troy Aikman. And the Dallas Cowboys aren't expecting him to be.

"We asked Troy on a number of occasions to win the football game for us. We're not asking our quarterbacks to do that now," coach Dave Campo said. "They're going to manage games, do what they do best and get the ball to the guys that have a chance to win games for us."

Banks is the first player other than Aikman to go into training camp as Dallas' starting quarterback since Steve Pelleur in 1988.

But making fans forget Aikman isn't even on Banks' radar. At 28, going into his sixth season and third team, his biggest concern is to finally establish himself as an NFL quarterback.

"I think I've got one year left, maybe, with the potential label," Banks said, smiling. "I'm almost past my limit."

Banks was a second-round pick by St. Louis in 1996 and became the starter right away. He lasted two more years but wasn't consistent enough, so he was traded to Baltimore.

While the Rams were on their way to winning the Super Bowl, Banks got off to a good start with the Ravens, going 6-4 and throwing a career-best 17 touchdown passes. He remained the starter going into last season, but lost the job to Trent Dilfer in October.

Dilfer remained in charge all the way to a Super Bowl title. Banks threw only five more passes all season.

This off-season, the Cowboys were the only team offering Banks a chance to step in as a starter so he accepted an offer of $500,000 for one year, with no signing bonus — and the onus of replacing Aikman.

"I know there's a lot of tradition and legend there with Troy, but I'd rather come in after a guy like Troy and expectations are high than come in after a guy who didn't do anything and have no expectations," Banks said.

The 6-foot-4, 230-pound Banks is more mobile than Aikman and has the arm strength to zing the ball downfield and let speedy receivers Joey Galloway and Raghib Ismail run under it.

Banks isn't as accurate on the short- and medium-range timing passes that were Aikman's specialty. He's also been fumble-prone and has thrown nearly as many interceptions (58) as touchdowns (61).

"The offenses I've been in before have had a lot more freedom to audible," he said. "Basically this is call-the-play-and-run-it. That makes it a little easier."

The Cowboys aren't looking to Banks as their long-term answer at quarterback, especially not with owner Jerry Jones already putting that tag on top draft pick Quincy Carter. Dallas also likes Anthony Wright, who broke into the NFL in the final four games of last season.

But there's no question Banks is the starter. How he handles this third chance will determine where he's playing next year and for David Duval basks in the glow of the scoreboard after winning the British Open Sunday at Royal Lytham and St. Annes golf course in England. It was Duval's first victory in any of golf's four major tournaments.

Duval earns major win after realizing it's just silly game

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England — Somewhere along the path toward his first major championship, David Duval realized it was only a game.

Tied for the lead after 54 holes in the British Open, he spent the evening taking money from his house guests in a game of gin. The night before, after a 40 on the back nine left him thrilled just to make the cut, he had a chipping contest in the backyard of his rented house.

"He was really at peace with himself all week," said Buck Levy, a retired doctor from Sun Valley, Idaho, who met Duval on the slopes a few years ago.

The wraparound shades and a stoic face suggest Duval is all business. He certainly looked that way Sunday, when he put together a 4-under 67 to pull away from the pack for a three-stroke victory at Royal Lytham & St. Annes.

The experience of seven previous opportunities in the majors taught Duval that good golf doesn't always breed good results. He twice closed with a 67 at the Masters, only to watch someone else slip on a green jacket.

"You get four chances each year, and you have to have a lot of things go right those weeks to even get into a position to win the golf tournament," he said. "Then you have to do it. There's no way around it."

Duval had been there before.

He was a runner-up three times during his rookie season on the PGA Tour in 1995, and endured four more second-place finishes over the next two years as people began to wonder if he knew how to win.

In the early fall of 1997, Duval took a month off to fish and surf around his home in Jacksonville, Fla., then won his next three tournaments.

That was the start of a blistering stretch in which he won 11 times in 34 tournaments, shot the only final-round 59 in PGA Tour history and replaced Tiger Woods at No. 1 in the world ranking.

The majors were another matter.

In one of those Masters, Mark O'Meara birdied three of the last four holes to win by a stroke. Three months ago, Duval missed birdie putts of 12 and 5 feet on the final two holes, and Woods won at Augusta by two shots to made it a clean sweep of the majors.

"He never got too frustrated about not winning a major," said Duval's fiancee, Julie MacArthur.

He never quit trying, either. Duval worked himself into fighting shape for the U.S. Open this year, got into the hunt once again and then faded quickly on the weekend.

Four chances every year — and Duval watched two of them slip away.

So, how did he get ready for Royal Lytham?

A year ago, he joined Woods and O'Meara on their annual voyage to Ireland to fish and play links golf in the wind. This time, he retreated to Sun Valley for fishing, running, and mountain biking.

"They play too much golf," he joked.

Duval didn't hit a ball until he arrived at Lytham last week. Even amid the possibility of a wild shootout in the final round Sunday, he felt an eerie calm.

"As much as anything, I realized it's still a silly old game," he said. "I was just trying to hit it solid and move it forward, go hit it again and make some putts. It sounds stupid, but it's funny how much is made about it because we are playing a game.

"I've made it a lot bigger than it is, too," he said. "Maybe that's some of the reason I felt so good. Maybe I realized it's just a game."

No one played it better over the weekend.

Duval made only one bogey in each of his final two rounds, a 65 that shot him from a tie for 35th into a four-way tie for the lead, followed by a 67 that enabled him to build a two-stroke lead going to the back nine.

From there, no one had a chance.

Duval's only mistake was a 6-iron into the bunker on No. 12 that led to his lone bogey. He escaped with par despite driving into rough on No. 14. In deep rough from 210 yards away on the next hole, he muscled a 6-iron within 15 feet for another par.

The final three holes were a ceremonial stroll. He never paid attention to the leaderboards, not even realizing the size of the lead when he belted a driver 299 yards down the 18th fairway.

He left Sunday night for Canada to take part in a Skins game with Mike Weir, Sergio Garcia and Vijay Singh. After that, he teams with Karrie Webb in a mixed-team TV exhibition against Tiger Woods and Annika Sorenstam, followed by the International in Colorado.

There, Duval will be introduced on the first tee as the British Open champion.

Where will it lead?

"I wasn't thinking one, I was thinking several," Duval said. "I would imagine what it would do is intensify my desire to do it again."

His name is beneath Woods' on the claret jug, which Duval found appropriate.

While he was the only player other than Woods to be No. 1 in the world over the past three years, Duval understands that a tie for 25th by Woods at Royal Lytham makes him no less great.

"You can argue if he's the best player ever or the best player of his generation," he said of Woods. "Time will tell. But you know, I beat them all this week, and I feel really good."

Then he paused, the silver jug not far from his reach, and added: "It feels wonderful."

Ripken's last ride is selling some tickets

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Baseball's Iron Man has become solid gold at the box office.

Since Cal Ripken Jr. announced on June 19 that he would end his 21-year career after this season, his march to retirement has created a nonstop parade to the ticket window in Baltimore and ballparks throughout the country.

The Orioles sold 33,000 seats on the day of the announcement, and more than 200,000 tickets over the past month. The team usually sells about 30,000 tickets a week.

"It's been a huge spike for us," said Matt Dryer, the Orioles director of sales. "People are excited about this young team, but Cal is the major factor in our increased numbers."

Ripken's popularity long ago extended beyond Baltimore, and for that reason the future Hall of Famer also has been a huge draw on the road this summer.

Four days after hitting a dramatic home run in his final All-Star game, the 40-year-old third baseman helped attract a sellout crowd of 50,069 on July 14 for his final game in Atlanta.

The Ripken Show arrived in Miami the next day, and the Florida Marlins drew 25,285 fans — some 8,000 more than their average this season. The Orioles play the Rangers at The Ballpark this week.

Everyone, it seems, wants to see Cal.

"His presence definitely helped," Marlins spokesman Devin Edmunds said.

Ripken has received standing ovations at every stadium he's appeared in since the announcement. Twice in Atlanta, he sheepishly emerged from the Baltimore dugout for a curtain call.

"You don't often get that sort of treatment at other ballparks," Ripken said. "To have the crowd ask for curtain calls on the road, that's a strange feeling. A good one, but it's strange at the same time. So far, it's been just one big celebration."

Ripken hasn't been this popular at the box office since 1995, when the Orioles' durable third baseman reached Iron Man status by breaking Lou Gehrig's remarkable record of playing in 2,131 straight games. Ripken went on to play in 2,632 consecutive games before voluntarily ending the streak in 1998.

Now, as he enters the final stage of his remarkable career, Ripken is again a major drawing card.

The Orioles spent millions of dollars this season promoting "The Kids" on a revamped roster, yet the team's oldest player remains its most marketable attraction. Ripken is no longer an everyday player, but he can still put fannies in the seats.

The Orioles sold out the final home series of the season, Sept. 21-23 against the New York Yankees, on the day of Ripken's retirement announcement.

Baltimore's Cal Ripken Jr. has spent a lot of time acknowledging fans' ovations, especially since he announced that he will be retiring after this season.

Now the team is moving toward selling out the rest of its home games in September.

"As the window of opportunity closes, people are looking to take their third and fourth choices," said Bill Stetka, the Orioles director of public relations. "We normally sell a lot of weekend dates over the summer, but every game is picking up."

It's become a nationwide phenomenon. Within 24 hours of Ripken's retirement announcement, Yankee Stadium sold out for Sept. 30, the Orioles' last scheduled game of the season.

For at least one day, the most coveted ticket in the Big Apple won't be for Broadway's "The Producers."

The Orioles are working out plans to celebrate Ripken's career during his final 21 home games, a number that coincides with the years he's been in the majors, all with Baltimore. Stetka said the tribute will intensify during the last eight games (Ripken wears No. 8), and will reach a climax for the final home series.

Barring an injury, Ripken most certainly will play in all three games against the Yankees. But there will be times before then when Ripken will spend the entire game on the bench.

"The days I'm not playing, I just try to do the best I can to be more visible before the game. I'll sign autographs or throw near the dugout before the game," he said. "Of course, the best way to be seen is in the game. I've been playing two out of three, but I don't rule out the possibility that at some point I could play all three games of a series."

Even when he's replaced by a stand-in, the star of the show is still in the house. For most fans, that's enough.

"He's visible, whether he plays or not," Dryer said. "People just want to see him. That in itself is something, and now they've only got two more months to see him in uniform."

Cubs split with Astros

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Corey Patterson and Miguel Cairo homered as the Chicago Cubs beat the Houston Astros 6-2 Monday night for a split of their four-game series.

Chicago left Houston with a three-game lead in the NL Central, the same margin the Cubs brought with them to Texas last Friday.

Kerry Wood (9-6) won for the first time in four starts since July 3, allowing two runs and 10 hits in 5 2-3 innings and striking out five.

It was only the second victory in seven starts since June 17 for Wood, who tied the major league record for nine innings when he struck out 20 against the Astros on May 6, 1998.

Roy Oswalt (8-2), who had been 6-0 in eight previous starts this year, gave up four runs and six hits in six innings. Houston had been unbeaten in his previous starts. He also made eight relief appearances.

Houston, which alternated wins with the Cubs in the series, stranded 10 runners.

Patterson and Cairo each hit their second homers of the season for Chicago, which returned to Wrigley Field following a 3-3 road trip.

Matt Stairs hit an RBI single in the first after Delino Deshields tripled, and Cairo homered leading off the second, the last hit off Oswalt until Ricky Gutierrez singled with one out in the sixth.

Houston tied it on RBI singles by Craig Biggio in the second and Jeff Bagwell in the fourth.

Patterson followed Guttierez's sixth-inning hit with a home run that put the Cubs ahead 4-2.

Chicago got two runs in the seventh off Nelson Cruz when Deshields hit an RBI single and scored on Sammy Sosa's double. Sosa is second in the major leagues with 93 RBIs, trailing only Arizona's Luis Gonzalez.

Notes: The Cubs are 47-7 when scoring four or more runs, 10-34 when scoring fewer than four. ... The 12th sellout of the season, 42,958, set an Astros' home record for a four-game series at 172,340.

MC: School drops winning program

(From 1C)

Jones said that Midland College would honor the scholarship agreements of the four players who were expecting to return to play golf at Midland College — Pamela Feggans, Stephanie Smith, Abby Lasater and Vanessa Gonzalez. Jones said the college would also help the student athletes find another college if they wanted to transfer. There were two recruits — Brooke McCutchen from Bronte and Afton Messenger from Borger — but both have since decided to go elsewhere, Jones said.

"Any time you drop a program and there are people involved, you want to treat them fairly," Jones said. "But at the same time, we have to do what is best for Midland College. When I told the girls, they were naturally disappointed. But they had been out there and played against that competition and understood that there weren't a lot of schools out there."

Still, the decision was tough to take for some players and their parents. Stephanie Smith's mother, Brenda, expressed her disappointment.

"These girls have brought home three national titles and I would think that would bring more support from the school and the community," said Ms. Smith from her home in Phoenix. "Three national titles, I don't what else they can do."

Ms. Smith said that Stephanie was looking to go to another school but since it's so late in the summer, there are a lot of last-minute decisions that have to be made.

"They (Midland College) kind of hung us out to dry," Ms. Smith said.

Williams, the former coach, was also upset at the termination of the program he started three years ago.

"What they're doing to these girls, I think it's terrible," Williams said. "They could all return and win another championship. This late in the summer, they have no place to go. You just don't do people this way."

Unfortunately for the women's golf program, this is not the first time Midland College has terminated the sport because of numbers. In 1982, the college's board of trustees, citing lack of competition, shut down the program after winning a national championship. In 2001, lack of competition contributed to the program's termination.

Now the attention for Midland College turns to volleyball, which will be played in the Physical Education Building's gymnasium. Jones said the school would ideally like to have a coach in place by January or February of 2002 to begin the recruiting process.

about the Diablos. "They've got some aggressive hitters on that team. We're just going to have to continue to pitch well."

ROCKHOUND BITES: Midland first baseman Todd Mensik has been named the Texas League hitter of the week for July 16-22. During that time, Mensik hit .640 with four home runs and 10 RBIs... The game against the Drillers Monday was the last for Midland this season. Midland finished 6-10 against Tulsa this year... El Paso comes into the series trailing the 12-20 RockHounds by just one game in the Texas League West Division. El Paso beat Wichita, 8-5, Monday to improve to 11-21.

"A one-year deal doesn't mean I'm retiring after this season. I've got to sign another deal some time," he said. "I don't know what the money situation here is, and it's not really under my control or any of my business.

"All my efforts are to try to play as well as I can this year, get us some wins, do some good things and then let the chips fall where they may."

Extra points: Starting LT Flozell Adams hurt his left knee in a morning workout and had to be carted off the field. Trainers are hopeful it's only a ligament sprain, although they've scheduled an MRI for Tuesday to be sure. ... Third-round pick Willie Blade, a defensive lineman from Mississippi State, arrived at camp Monday and became the final draft pick to sign a contract. Dallas also signed LB Bubba Alexander to replace Joe Bowden, who was released Sunday. ... All-Pro RG Larry Allen recently wowed teammates by bench pressing 700 pounds. "I think it was awesome," running back Emmitt Smith said. "The more awesome thing was seeing 40 guys cheering him on. That's a good way to get this training camp started and a good way to end the off-season workout program."

Crude up

NEW YORK — Crude oil futures moved higher at the New York Mercantile Exchange Monday, as traders reacted cautiously to reports that the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries plans to cut production to lift prices.

September crude futures, in their first day as the front-month contract, closed at $26.12 a barrel, up 18 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

OPEC ministers plan to convene an emergency meeting in Vienna, Austria Aug. 6 to cut oil production quotas by at least 1 million barrels a day, an OPEC source said Monday.

The exact size of the reduction has yet to be decided, but several OPEC officials have informally endorsed a cut of at least 1 million barrels a day, effective Sept. 1.

OPEC Secretary General Ali Rodriguez said Monday the producer group will cut its oil production quotas by 1 million barrels a day to 1.3 million barrels a day, while Saudi Oil Minister Ali Naimi said Saturday OPEC was considering an output cut of 1 million barrels a day to 1.5 million barrels a day.

OPEC has cut its output quotas twice this year — by a combined 2.5 million barrels a day — in an effort to counter the effects of a slowing global economy on oil demand and to keep the price of its reference basket of crudes at $25 a barrel.

The basket price has averaged about $25 a barrel this year, but in recent days dropped sharply as inventories swelled and data pointed at weak oil consumption due to the global economic downturn.

In other products, August natural gas futures rose 2.3 cents to $2.978 per 1,000 cubic feet. August gasoline futures fell 1.06 cent to 71.32 cents a gallon. August heating oil rose .28 cent to close at 68.39 cents a gallon.

Dollar rises

LONDON — The U.S. dollar rose Monday against other major currencies in European trading. Gold prices fell.

In late European trading, the euro was quoted at 86.84 cents, down from 87.33 cents Friday. Later, in midday trading in New York, the euro traded at 86.82 cents.

Other dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Friday, included 124.15 Japanese yen, up from 122.92; 1.7336 Swiss francs, up from 1.7214; and 1.5458 Canadian dollars, down from 1.5462.

The British pound was quoted at $1.4199, down from $1.4290.

In midday trading in New York, the dollar bought 124.16 Japanese yen, and the pound was worth $1.4186.

Based on late European euro rates, the dollar was worth 2.2512 German marks, up from 2.2380; 7.5501 French francs, up from 7.5061; 2.5365 Dutch guilders, up from 2.5223; and 2,226.67 Italian lire, up from 2,215.67.

Gold falls

Gold in London closed at $268.90 bid per troy ounce, down from $269.20 Friday. In Zurich the bid price was $268.65, down from $268.75. Gold fell 80 cents in Hong Kong to $269.45.

Silver closed in London at $4.26 bid per troy ounce, up from $4.23.

Changes pending at supermarkets

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Midland shoppers may soon see changes at two of the grocery chains serving the Tall City.

Boise-based Albertson's, with three stores in Midland, announced last week it will be closing 165 underperforming stores in 25 states.

At the same time, Albuquerque-based Furr's Supermarkets is selling its assets to Fleming of Dallas, which is in turn marketing the stores to other independent grocers or chain supermarkets, a transaction that is expected to close in early September.

Tom Garrity, a spokesman for Furr's, said the two companies are in the process of doing due process.

Jeannette Duwe, a spokeswoman for Albertson's, said closing of the 165 stores will be a year-long process and the company will not be identifying the stores to be closed until September and after associates at the stores have been notified.

"Our goal is to sell as many of those stores as possible and identifying them would put us at a disadvantage," she explained. "If we can sell them, it will minimize the impact on the communities."

Likewise, Fleming believes selling the Furrs stores would better serve those communities.

"Fleming has a strong track record of successfully facilitating the transfer of stores from regional chain companies into the hands of quality independents and chain supermarket operators," said Steve Davis, Executive Vice President and President, Wholesale. "Rather than see all of these stores liquidated and closed, this plan offers a growth solution. We believe this is the best use of the properties and the best opportunity to preserve jobs and shopping alternatives in the communities where these stores operate."

Fleming Spokesman Randy Hatcher said the company has had a good response in its efforts to find buyers for the 66 Furrs locations. The company will continue to serve as supplier.

Fleming, he said, will operate 10 of the stores as a price impact retail format as part of its retail group. Those of the remaining 56 stores that are not sold could be turned back to Furr's Supermarkets, he said.

"There are about 10 stores we will own and operate; the rest will be in the hands of buyers or Furr's," he said.

The United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of New Mexico on July 2 approved Fleming's bid for Furr's real estate assets and certain inventory, a bid totaling $57 million plus inventory.

Said Garrity, "The ball is in Fleming's court. The stores are still open. Those communities still have a need for them and we are now determining who will facilitate those stores in the future."

Ms. Duwe said the closing of the 165 Albertson's stores — along with the reduction of its operating divisions from 19 to 15 and elimination of 15 to 20 percent of its managerial and administrative jobs above store level — are part of the new chairman of the board and chief executive officer's vow to improve the company's financial picture.

"In April we brought in Larry Johnston, our new CEO, to help Albertson's improve its bottom line," she said.

She went on to note 25 percent of the stores being closed will be stand-alone drug stores the company operates as Osco Drug and Sav-On stores. Grocery stores include Albertson's, Acme Markets, Jewel Food Stores, Seessel's, Super Saver and Max.

She further added the company typically closes 75 to 80 underperforming stores a year so the 165 to be closed represent 6 percent of the company's facilities.

"We also plan to open an additional 70 food and 40 drug stores this year and a number of stores will be remodeled," she said.

Stocks fall as investors see no reason to buy

By Amy Baldwin
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market fell sharply Monday as skittish investors sized up more second-quarter earnings and braced for the likelihood that the economic slowdown will mean another spate of profit warnings.

The Dow Jones industrial average finished the day down 152.23, or 1.4 percent, at 10,424.42.

The broader market also finished lower with the Nasdaq composite index falling 40.81, or 2.0 percent, to 1,988.56 and the Standard & Poor's 500 index declining 19.82, or 1.6 percent, to 1,191.03.

Among Monday's biggest losers were companies that warned of tough business ahead. Lexmark International, which beat second-quarter expectations but reduced its forecast for the third quarter, slid nearly 64 percent, down $9.14 at $49.51. Goodyear Tire, which met expectations but said production must be curtailed, fell $1.80 to $29.84.

Dow industrial 3M stumbled $1.68 to $111.32. The company beat expectations but warned that slower growth abroad and the strong dollar would hurt results for the remainder of 2001.

Wall Street's losses were spread across most sectors, a sign that investors doubt that any business is capable of doing well in the slowing economy.

Microsoft sank $2.09 to $67.09, General Electric tumbled $1.33 to $45.30 and Wal-Mart fell $1.25 to $53.03. All three are Dow components.

Only three Dow stocks moved higher. American Express, which met earnings forecasts, inched up 15 cents to $38.13, while McDonald's, which was upgraded by Merrill Lynch, rose 25 cents to $27.77 and IBM advanced 15 cents to $105.85.

Other gains included Cisco, up 28 cents at $18.27 on an upgrade to "buy" from "hold" by UBS Warburg, and toy maker Hasbro, up 48 cents at $15.48 after reporting a second-quarter loss that was 2 cents a share less than Wall Street was expecting.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers slightly more than 3 to 2 on the New York Stock Exchange. Consolidated volume came to 1.17 shares, down from the 1.36 billion shares traded on Friday.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Montford to join SBC

John Montford, outgoing chancellor of Texas Tech University and a former State Senator, will join SBC Corp. as senior vice president, external affairs effective Sept. 3.

In his new position, Montford will be responsible for the company's regulatory and legislative operations throughout its 13-state territory. SBC, parent company of Southwestern Bell, has operations from California, where it owns Pacific Bell, to Connecticut where it owns Southern New England Telecommunications. SBC also owns Ameritech and Nevada Bell.

"I'm certainly excited about the opportunity," Montford told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal in its online edition Monday. "I have great respect for the CEO (Ed Whitacre Jr.) and the team he has in place."

"He brings a distinguished record of public service as Chancellor of the Texas Tech University System and 14 years serve in the Texas Senate," said Chris Talley, spokesman for SBC. "His insight and leadership in the public policy arena will be very valuable to SBC, given the multitude of public policy issues the telecommunications industry faces."

Before joining Texas Tech, Montford served in the Texas Senate, where he was chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and president pro tem.

In his new job, he will report to Cassandra Carr, senior executive vice president, external affairs.

Area Taco Bells closed

Eight Taco Bell restaurants in Midland and Odessa, Big Spring and Andrews were closed Sunday due to poor performance, said Mike Treadwell, president of TB Foods, owner and operator of the restaurants. He said they will not reopen.

Only the Taco Bell at 3807 E. 42nd Street in Odessa remains open.

Treadwell said the eight KFC restaurants and the KFC/Taco Bell 2n1 restaurants in Midland and Odessa were not affected by the closure. Employees of the closed Taco Bell locations have been offered jobs at the KFCs and KFC/Taco Bell 2n1 restaurants in the area. These restaurants are owned and operated by Restaurant Systems Inc. of Springfield Mo.

TB Foods, an affiliate of Restaurant Systems, purchased the Taco Bells in August 1998 from Taco Bell Corp.

"The Midland-Odessa KFC and 2n1 restaurants are healthy, thriving businesses," said Carlye Wannenmacher, a Restaurant Systems spokeswoman. "With the improved economy in the Midland-Odessa area, most of our KFC restaurants have been enjoying double digit sales increases this year. We will be serving these communities for many years to come."

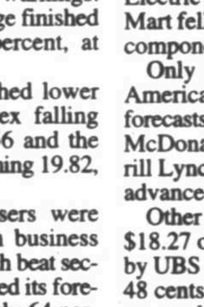
INVESTORS' GUIDE

When salespeople advocate poor moves, investors suffer

By Eric Tyson

Q: About a year ago, I "inherited" a brokerage account worth about $200,000 to care for my mother, who is suffering from severe dementia. I moved her from California into satisfactory assisted living, which costs $2,000 per month, near my home outside Seattle. She is physically healthy and at age 79 could easily live another 10 years. The money in this account had been conservatively invested into 80 percent AAA, long-term bonds paying between 8 percent and 11 percent; 10 percent CDs; and 10 percent stocks. I consulted a financial adviser with whom I'd done business before, and she persuaded me, in May 1999, to sell all the bonds, except for two CDs worth a total of $50,000, and move the money into eight diverse funds overseen by an insurance company. My $200,000 initially jumped to $212,000, and I was thrilled. Unfortunately the account has sunk to $165,000, and I'm looking at having only enough money for about six years of my mom's care (assuming her condition doesn't worsen). Needless to say, I'm furious with the financial adviser but even angrier with myself, since I realize now I should have left things as they were. Is there anything I can do besides cry? Should I leave things as they are or sell the losers and reinvest in bonds and CDs again?



Tyson

A: First, you should learn from the mistakes you made. The financial adviser, who is actually a commissioned-based salesperson, steered you into new investments in order to earn a large commission (more than $10,000) for herself. Your prior investments were much better (appropriate and cost-effective) than what the salesperson put you into.

In addition to being too aggressive a portfolio, the load funds you were sold generally have high ongoing operating expenses of more than 2 percent per year. Some of the funds were heavily invested in technology stocks that helped your returns initially but have harmed returns since early last year.

Since you're going to be using the remaining money to care for your mother, it should be invested conservatively, with the bulk in safe bonds, like what you held before. I would suggest that you use a well-managed, cost-effective, shorter-term bond mutual fund. You could also put a portion — 10 percent to 20 percent— in a money market fund.

Q: I'm planning a first-time investment in stocks with about $1,000. Since this isn't a lot of money, I don't know whether I should invest in one stock or more. What do you advise?

A: Proper diversification requires numerous stocks in various industries that represent the diversity of our economy. Studies that I've seen that examine how risk is reduced as more stocks in various industries are added to a portfolio suggest that, at a minimum, you invest in at least one dozen stocks and preferably two dozen stocks for a reasonably well-diversified stock portfolio.

To do individual stock picking well, you will need to spend many hours of your free time on research. To purchase this many stocks, even if you use a discount or online broker, you will incur brokerage costs that will gobble a relatively large percentage of the amount you're investing.

I think you're a perfect candidate for investing in a well-diversified, cost-effective mutual fund. Ideally, you can contribute your $1,000 into a retirement account, such as an IRA, not only for the tax benefits but also because most funds have a lower minimum for initial investments.

You should consider some of the excellent funds comprised of other funds, which provide tremendous diversification (U.S. and international stocks, bonds) for a low investment amount. Vanguard's Life-Strategy funds and T. Rowe Price's Personal Strategy Balanced fund have $1,000 minimums; TIAA-CREF's Managed Allocation fund has a $250 minimum.

Judge backs IU's firing of Knight

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — A lawsuit claiming that Indiana University trustees broke the state's open meetings law the day before coach Bob Knight was fired can proceed to trial, a judge ruled.

"I think this is IU's worst nightmare," said Gojko Kasich, the lead attorney for a group of alumni and basketball fans who are challenging whether the university legally fired the Hall of Fame coach last year.

The university wanted Judge Cecile Blau to decide the entire case in its favor without going to trial, but she ruled a portion of the claim dealing with the open meetings law should move forward.

Kasich said the ruling, issued last Thursday, means he can begin deposing IU President Myles Brand and IU trustees to find out what happened during a series of small group meetings held the day before Brand fired Knight last September.

"That's the one thing they wanted to avoid more than anything, was to expose Brand and the trustees to depositions," Kasich said. "I haven't seen the ruling but I think (Blau) would want to know what went on behind closed doors."

No trial date has been set.

Blau granted part of the university's summary judgment request by ruling that Brand had acted within his powers when he fired Knight.

IU spokeswoman Susan Dillman said university attorneys were pleased with the ruling and were discussing their next step.

The lawsuit claims that meetings between Brand and separate groups of four trustees were public meetings as defined by state law. As such, the lawsuit argues, the university should have given 48 hours notice so the public could attend.

The suit also argues that Brand did not have sole authority to fire Knight.

Brand met with trustees in small groups on Sept. 9 and announced Knight's firing the next day, saying Knight had violated a "zero-tolerance" behavior policy imposed in May 2000.

The university contends the Sept. 9 meetings did not trigger the open meetings law because fewer than half of the nine trustees attended any one meeting with Brand.

Blau, from Clark County, was appointed to hear the case as a special judge by the Indiana Supreme Court.

Plaintiffs' attorney Roy Graham said he had not seen the judge's ruling yet, but considered it a victory that the case would go to trial.

However, Blau's ruling that Brand can fire a university employee without trustee approval is something IU faculty members should be concerned about, Graham said.

"If you have a job at IU and you're a tenured professor, all you've got to do is get a letter from Myles Brand and you're fired," he said. "I don't think the professors at IU are aware of this."

Knight was fired for breaking a no-tolerance behavior policy when he grabbed a student by the arm for referring to him by his last name. He has since been hired to coach at Texas Tech.

Tyson could fight in Copenhagen

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mike Tyson could be headed to Denmark for his first fight in almost a year.

"It looks good," Shelly Finkel, Tyson's adviser, said Monday of the possibility that Tyson would fight Danish boxer Brian Nielsen on Sept. 8 in Copenhagen.

Mogens Palle, Nielsen's promoter, told Danish media that he has sent a "ready-to-be-signed contract" to Finkel.

Finkel declined further comment, but a source close to the negotiations, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press that talks have been going on for a few weeks, and an agreement could be reached soon.

Showtime has a contract with Tyson, and HBO has a deal with Lennox Lewis. The networks have talked about cooperating on a non-title bout between those two fighters. HBO, however, prefers that Lewis first get a shot at regaining the WBC and IBF titles in a rematch with Hasim Rahman.

As the No. 1 WBC contender, Tyson is in line for a mandatory challenge in November. Whether that will happen is unclear.

Meanwhile, Tyson needs to get in fighting shape because he has not fought since Andrew Golota quit after two rounds Oct. 20 at Auburn Hills, Mich. In fact, Tyson's last three fights have lasted a total of only 10 minutes, 41 seconds.

Whether Nielsen can knock much ring rust off Tyson is doubtful despite the 36-year-old Dane's 62-1 record, with 43 knockouts. His best-known opponents were former champions Larry Holmes and Tim Witherspoon.

Nielsen scored a 12-round decision over Holmes in 1997, when Holmes was 47. Witherspoon was 42 when Nielsen knocked him out in the fourth round in 1999. In his only loss, Nielsen was stopped in the 10th round by journeyman Dick Ryan in 1999.

All but five of Nielsen's fights have been in Denmark.

Tyson was supposed to fight David Izon on June 2, but that fell through when it appeared Tyson might get a fight against Rahman. A federal court judge ruled, however, that Rahman must fight Lewis next or not fight for 18 months. Lewis can have a bout before fighting Rahman.

Tyson fine gets distributed to 12 charities

LANSING, Mich. — Twelve charities are splitting $200,000 that Mike Tyson was fined for refusing to submit to a pre-fight drug test last year at The Palace of Auburn Hills.

Tyson paid the fine as part of a settlement with the Michigan Department of Consumer and Industry Services. He refused to submit to a urine test before his Oct. 20 fight against Andrew Golota, who quit after the second round.

Tyson tested positive for marijuana in a test taken after the fight, according to a complaint filed by the state. But the settlement made no mention of that positive test, and Tyson has never been tried on that charge.

State regulators also suspended Tyson's Michigan boxing license for 90 days and made him pay an additional state fine of $5,000.

Consumer and Industry Services Director Kathleen Wilbur said the settlement money will go to groups that help at-risk children as well as several youth boxing associations.

"The disciplinary action against Mike Tyson sends a strong message to all boxers that they will be held accountable for failing to abide by Michigan's state laws, regardless of their celebrity status," Wilbur said in a news release.

"Thanks to the $200,000 settlement, this unfortunate incident of unsportsmanlike behavior has turned into a positive for so many young people."

Apartment denies unit to Packer

Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Being a member of the Green Bay Packers would normally get you first-class treatment in Wisconsin. In Edwin Kehl's case, his status as a Packer got him turned away from renting an apartment in De Pere.

Kehl, a guard, was signed to the practice team. When Kehl recently tried to rent an apartment in nearby De Pere in time for Packers training camp, he and girlfriend, Brooke Klein, found what they thought was a nice apartment at a reasonable price.

But, when Kehl was ready to sign the lease agreement at Nicolet Gardens, the apartment manager told him the building owner, Hillcrest Properties, LTD, had rejected his application.

"She said I can't rent to you because you're a Packer," Kehl said.

The problem according to Kehl, was that Hillcrest had previous experience renting to a player who trashed the apartment. Kehl was told he needed to have someone from the team co-sign the rental agreement.

"I said you're discriminating against me. What if I worked at ShopKo or 7-Eleven? You going to make my manager sign a guarantee?" Kehl said.

Nicolet Gardens and Hillcrest Properties declined to specifically comment on the matter, but issued a statement which said in part that it developed a formal rental policy for Packer players many years ago.

The policy was designed to provide additional financial security in case the player's employment situation changed, the statement said.

Bon Keomany, Northeast Wisconsin Fair Housing Council investigator, said Hillcrest Properties was within its rights in declining to rent to Kehl.

"The landlord has the right to ask for a co-signer if they think the applicant isn't permanent when it comes to their employment," Keomany said.

Keomany said the law protecting against discrimination based on race, religion, gender, marital status, sexual orientation, disability and other protected classes does not apply in this case.
