Oil price trend linked to strike, likely temporary

NEW YORK (AP) — A cutback in world oil supplies caused by a strike in Norway sent prices sharply upward on futures markets, but analysts suggested the rally could be temporary.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, gained $1.59 over Friday's close to settle at $14.33 a 42-gallon barrel Monday.

Among May contracts for refined products, unleaded gasoline settled up 3.45 cents from Friday, at 45 cents a gallon, while heating oil gained 4.51 cents to close at 44.43 cents.

Caterers who service Norway's North Sea rigs went on strike Sunday, shutting down that country's entire offshore output.

Since the loss of that oil would make a significant dent in the world surplus, estimated at somewhere between 1.5 and 3 million barrels a day, traders rushed into the London and New York markets.

"This was giving rise to technical buying," said Madison Galbraith, an analyst at Merrill Lynch Energy Futures. He said pre-programmed buying orders were being executed on the New York exchange as prices reached certain levels, adding more fuel to the rally.

Despite the market's advances from last week's low of $9.75, analysts said the Norwegian cutback is about all there is to support higher oil prices. Without the strike, there is still a large surplus of oil supplies and no agreement among the producing nations to restrain that supply enough to drive prices back up.

"I think it's more wishful thinking than anything else," said William Byers, an analyst with the Bear, Stearns & Co. securities firm, referring to Monday's rally. "I don't see any fundamental change taking place.

"They're taking 900,000 barrels a day out of Norway's production. It didn't disappear. It's just postponed," he said.

Bush says U.S. resolved to keep gulf open

By TERRENCE HUNT

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Vice President George Bush today told Bahrain officials, who fear Iranian attacks on Persian Gulf oil tankers, that the United States is committed to keeping gulf shipping lanes open.

To underscore U.S. resolve, Bush planned to visit the USS La Salle, the command destroyer of a U.S. naval task force that has patrolled the Gulf since June 1983. The task force includes four frigates and the destroyer.

Bush arrived Monday on the second stop of a four-country tour of the gulf and Arabian Peninsula.

He met today with Bahrain's emir, Sheik Isa Bin Sulman al-Khalifa, and presented him with a letter from President Reagan. Its contents were not disclosed.

However, Sheik Mohammed Bin Mubarak al-Khalifa, Bahrain's foreign minister, said both sides "stressed their concern (about the Iran-Iraq war) and expressed their willingness to cooperate" toward its peaceful end.

A chief purpose of Bush's Middle Eastern swing has been to demonstrate U.S. resolve to helping prevent an expansion of the 5½-year-old Iran-Iraq conflict which has threatened to strangle oil tanker traffic in the strategic gulf.

Recent Iranian attacks on oil tankers in the gulf worry gulf nations because of the threat to oil shipping lanes, said Bahrain's foreign minister. "This is a world problem, not only a Gulf problem, and the world should also help us stop this kind of action," he said.

Marlin Fitzwater, the vice president's press secretary, said most of the discussion between the emir and Bush centered on the war. "We share their concern for the security of the area and would like to see a peaceful resolution," Fitzwater said.

Al-Khalifa also expressed concern about the drop in oil prices, some of which have dipped below $10.

But Fitzwater quoted Bush as saying he was not here on a mission to drive up prices. "He said market forces should set prices. He would not speculate on any specific prices."

Bahrain, a cluster of islands, feels "very vulnerable, sort of sticking out like a sore thumb into the Gulf, and so we will be seeking to reassure them of our interests in the area," said a senior administration official who offered a preview of the trip Monday. He spoke on condition he not be identified.

Bahrain allows the U.S. Navy access to its facilities, and the United States, in turn, is helping country improve its defenses. A $90 million tank sale was announced by the Pentagon last year.

At a news conference Monday, Bush also expressed the United States' commitment to the stability of members of the Gulf Cooperation Council, which includes the conservative Arab states of Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Oman, Qatar, Kuwait, and the United Arab Emirates.

"We do not want to see Iranian expansion (of the war) result in a change in the balance of power in this area," Bush said.

Persian Iran and Arab Iraq have been at war since September 1980.

Four given awards for victory of spirit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Actress Ann Jillian, who recently underwent a double mastectomy, was one of four people honored Monday with a "Victory of the Human Spirit" award for demonstrating the ability to overcome serious handicaps.

The awards were presented as part of a benefit for the National Rehabilitation Hospital.

Other recipients were singer Teddy Pendergrass, who was partially paralyzed in an automobile accident, and Edward M. Kennedy Jr., who lost his right leg because of cancer. He is the son of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

The other recipient was Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., whose right arm and shoulder were shattered by gunfire during fighting in Italy in 1945. The senator has only partial use of the arm.

Actor Robert Blake, in presenting the award to Dole, said, "His tenacity, his unwillingness to accept defeat are inspiring to all people. His spirit, his humor and his busy career prove that you don't have to give up, no matter how the odds are stacked against you."

Disaster plan urged at tornado talk

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

April showers bring May flowers. But those springtime showers in West Texas also are frequently accompanied by thunder and lightning, hail and tornadoes — violent conditions that result in the total destruction of cities and people.

"Weather in West Texas is probably the most volatile weather in the world," said William Alexander, a spokesman with the National Weather Service in Lubbock. "It's not a question of will it happen, it is a question of when will it happen and will we be ready."

Alexander told Midlanders during a severe weather safety program Tuesday in the Midland College Allison Fine Arts auditorium that it is essential for communities to take the proper safety measures to protect against death or serious injury when violent storms occur.

The program was presented by the National Weather Service in cooperation with the Midland Office of Emergency Management.

"Severe storms often begin in this area and it's important that we have a proper disaster plan," he said.

About 5 percent of all thunderstorms produce tornadoes, said Alexander, but he added that it is important to be cognizant of the fact that the violently rotating column of air is capable of destroying everything in its path if it touches ground.

"Most tornadoes that occur in West Texas are small to medium in nature, but remember the Dallas tornado that touched down on April 2, 1957 was a medium-sized tornado and caused millions and millions of dollars worth of damage," he said.

Buildings in the Tall City are "relatively safe on the interior from these forces, but there's a lot of glass," said Alexander.

Alexander noted that the National Weather Service routinely works with communities to develop disaster plans and to communicate safety measures to the general public.

In severe weather, Alexander urged persons to adhere to the following suggestions:

- Obey the proper citywide disaster plan;
- Listen to a weather radio;
- Be cognizant of developing storms;
- Don't ignore severe thunderstorm and tornado warnings;
- Don't try to escape the storm in a automobile or truck;
- Take cover in a building, ditch or ravine, not in a mobile home;

Weinberger blasts Vietnamese tactics

SURIN, Thailand (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger today lashed out at Vietnam's "brutal invasion tactics" as he visited civilian victims of border fighting and toured an artillery base along the Thai-Cambodian frontier.

Weinberger's 2½-hour visit to the border was seen as a major demonstration of American support for an ally facing Soviet-backed forces in neighboring Cambodia.

Later in the day, a bomb exploded in the parking lot of a Bangkok hotel about 90 minutes before Weinberger was to arrive for a state dinner, and three people were reported injured, two seriously. Weinberger was at the Hilton Hotel when the bomb went off, but was to have passed within five yards of the site on his way to the reception.

There was no immediate claim of responsiblity for the bombing at the government-owned Erawan Hotel. The state dinner was moved to the Hilton, where Weinberger is staying during his three-day visit.

About 150 students and workers rallied today opposite Government House in Bangkok, where Weinberger and Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda were meeting, to protest protectionist U.S. trade legislation and a plan to establish a stockpile of U.S. armaments in Thailand from which the southeast Asia country could draw in an emergency. The demonstrators carried banners reading "Stop suppressing our economy" and "Stockpile, no thanks."

A government release said Prem and Weinberger discussed security matters, joint military exercises and other issues. It said the stockpile plan would designed "to enhance the ability of the Royal Thai Armed forces to resist outside aggression."

At the border, an entire village of about 1,000 people, including farmers, children and wizened elders who had been driven from their homes by the fighting, welcomed Weinberger to the region with American flags and traditional dances.

The U.S. defense secretary flew by helicopter to the frontier where Thai and Vietnamese forces have clashed periodically since Hanoi's invasion of Cambodia in late 1978.

Plans to be made for new U.S.-Soviet summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz said today he will meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze next month to lay the groundwork for a second summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Arrangements for the meeting were made during a 75-minute session between Reagan and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin.

Shevardnadze will visit Washington in mid-May, but Shultz did not say whether that would allow the two sides enough time to prepare for a summit within the pre-August timetable set by Reagan.

Shultz said Dobrynin made it clear the Soviet side would not establish any preconditions for the meeting, but he said both sides expressed an interest in "substantive" results.

The arrangements for the Shultz-Shevardnadze meeting were made even as a setback was occurring in a key area of superpower relations. The United States was preparing an underground nuclear explosion at a Nevada test site despite a Soviet warning that the U.S. action would lead to an end to a unilateral Soviet moratorium on such testing.

Dobrynin was recently elevated to the Communist Party Central Committee and his visit to the Oval Office was in the form of a farewell call. Shultz said the meeting was "very substantive and constructive and advanced matters."

He said Dobrynin brought a letter to Reagan from Gorbachev.

The Reagan administration has been pressing for a summit in either June or July in the United States as a followup to the Reagan-Gorbachev meeting last November in Geneva.

But the administration has accused Moscow of dragging its feet in making the arrangements, raising doubts as to whether the president's timetable can be met.

As an alternative, administration officials have indicated that if Reagan's preferred time frame cannot be met, the summit may have to be put off until November or later.

Texas-Israeli interests grow despite small Jewish population

By STEPHANIE SLEWKA
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — There are fewer Jews in one town in Texas than in most apartment complexes in Brooklyn, but they have been the driving force behind a a budding coalition to protect mutual Texas-Israeli interests.

When the American Israel Political Action Committee (AIPAC) set up its office in Texas a few years ago, where 80,000 Jews account for half of 1 percent of the state's population, it had access to "hardly any" Texas members of Congress, said Marshall Brockman, Southwest chairman of the AIPAC at the group's annual conference Monday.

"Now, we have access to almost every member of the (29-strong) delegation," he said at a session on the importance of the relationship between state officials and Israel.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace, and Land Commissioner Gary Mauro were featured speakers at AIPAC's 27th annual policy conference.

Coalitions of Israeli and Texan agriculturists, and Northeastern Jewish leaders and Texas oilmen have sprouted recently, partly due to AIPAC's efforts.

"For political clout, we have to 'coalition' everywhere we can," Brockman said of AIPAC, whose effectiveness in influencing legislators in Washington to hearken to its stated goal of a strong Israel is acknowledged in lobbying and political circles.

Gov. Mark White, Hightower, Mauro and Wallace in recent years were persuaded by Texas AIPAC members to visit Israel, with interesting results.

Hightower and Mauro's visits resulted in the creation of the Texas Israel Exchange (TIE), an agricultural undertaking using Israeli farming techniques to try out new crops.

A seemingly odd couple is last year's marriage of convenience between Texas oilmen and New York Jewish leaders who want to protect the oil and gas industry's tax breaks in any tax reform legislation.

They are united by a shared desire to end U.S. dependence on OPEC oil, especially oil from Saudi Arabia.

Wallace, who as railroad commissioner oversees regulation of oil in Texas, helped found the coalition, called Council for a Secure America.

Speaking at the Monday session, Wallace said the council had been influential in retaining a tax write off of intangible drilling costs, such as labor and fuel, and percentage depletion in the tax reform bill currently in the Senate Finance Committee.

Wallace told an appreciative audience he would do all he could "to see this nation has an energy policy so that it doesn't have to bow on its knees to Saudi Arabia or anyone else."

He also said that Saudi Arabia had a lot of money to spend on terrorism and that, "We are pledged to fight U.S. arms sales to Saudi Arabia until they are pledged to peace in the Middle East."

AIPAC has consistently opposed U.S. sales of arms to Middle Eastern countries such as Saudi Arabia and, most recently, Jordan, which it calls "enemies of Israel."

Hightower's speech focused on Texas' agriculture. He said the state needs Israel's help to diversify its crops and get out of its current deep depression.

Because Texas and Israel share similar soils and climates, Texas can reap valuable benefits from the advances Israel has made in dry-land agriculture, new crop development and water-conserving technologies, Hightower said.

Texas currently grows crops like pinto beans, watermelons, blueberries, and grapes — "not for Chateau Bubba either," Hightower said — and under the TIE plan, could grow pistachio trees and asparagus, cut flowers and get into Israeli-style poultry production, Hightower said.

Israelis have helped set up a demonstration farm in West Texas for pistachios and asparagus, and are currently "inventorying" aquaculture in Texas for eventual shrimp farming, Mauro said.

Mauro acknowledged that drip irrigation was originally developed at the University of Texas, and that Texas A&M developed a shrimp-breeding program, but he said neither had been intensively applied or had grown beyond preliminary testing stages.

Funding for TIE comes from private businesses, corporate and private investments.

Judge considers man's new job 'compliance' with shoeshining order

HEMPSTEAD (AP) — When a Texas judge ordered Charles A. Martin, a black man, to start shining shoes to finance child support payments, Martin could find no customers who would pay $10 per shoe.

Martin said the judge's order was demeaning and he found work, instead, as a cement pourer and has agreed to pay $225 per month to his ex-wife to help support their six-year old son.

State District Judge Oliver Kitzman ruled Monday that Martin had complied with the spirit of his order.

"I believe we have compliance, and that's what this is all about," Kitzman said. "If for some reason his plan fails, it will come to my attention in the normal course of business."

When Martin claimed last month he could not find a job and therefore could not pay the court-ordered child support, Kitzman handed him a shoeshine kit and told him to hit the streets to earn the money.

Although Martin found little use for the shoeshine kit, he says he's keeping it.

"He's (Kitzman) not getting it back," Martin said as he left the Waller County courthouse. "He gave it to me."

Martin said he didn't have a single customer in his shoeshining business.

"People said I was too high," said Martin, 31. "I was charging $10 a shoe, because that's the only way I could make money and pay child support."

Martin said Kitzman's order made him angry, but the judge said he received favorable responses from throughout the United States and some foreign countries.

"A judge in Minnesota said he thought it was demeaning," Kitzman said.

Sheila Gage Martin, Martin's ex-wife, said she saw nothing discriminatory in the judge's decision.

"A bunch of black people I know said the judge would have done the same to a white man," Mrs. Martin said. "I feel there was no race involved. It's five years we've been going through this."

Don L. Dickson, Mrs. Martin's attorney, said there should be no criticism of Kitzman's ruling.

"She and the child are the ones who suffered," Dickson said. "Usually, when he (Martin) came to court, he was very insolent. We gave him every chance to pay."

The Martins were divorced in 1981 and Kitzman charged Martin with contempt of court in May 1985 for failure to pay $200 per month. Martin was behind $1,900 in payments and spent almost five months in jail.

Mrs. Martin said she worked at odd jobs to help support her family. Martin said his new job will pay between $3.35 and $4 per hour.

Car bomb explodes in Lebanese city square

JOUNIEH, Lebanon (AP) — A car packed with explosives blew up today about 50 yards from offices of President Amin Gemayel's Phalange Party in this Christian port's main square, and police said at least 10 people were killed and 110 were wounded.

Officials reported 10 charred bodies were dragged from the rubble of two high-rise commercial centers housing banks, beauty parlors, clinics and stores. The wounded, some badly burned, were taken to hospital in Jounieh and Christian east Beirut.

The square was packed with shoppers and employees leaving their offices for their lunch break when the bomb exploded at 1:05 p.m. (6:05 a.m. EST). Police estimated the car that blew up contained 165 pounds of explosives.

Rescue teams clawed through the wreckage as cars and shops burned. Christian militiamen sealed off the square, firing U.S.-made M-16 rifles in the air to clear the way for ambulances in this city 13 miles north of Beirut in the Christian heartland.

Police said most of the casualties were employees of the Credit Libanais and Brazilian banks in the two buildings.

The Central High School and the Saint Famille school were damaged by the explosion, but there were no reports of injured students or teachers.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the bombing.

Jounieh police appealed for help from civil defense and Red Cross teams in Beirut to extinguish fires and rescue victims.

Christian east Beirut has been battered by a chain of bombings since right-wing Christian militiamen cracked down on Syrian-backed rivals in a bloody power struggle Jan. 15.

But today's blast was the first in Jounieh, the Christians' main outlet to the Mediterranean.

At least 50 people have been killed and more than 300 wounded in the earlier bombings.

The most recent such explosion occurred in east Beirut's main residential neighborhood of Ashrafieh on March 26, killing 10 people and wounding 80.

Most of the attacks were outside offices of Gemayel's Phalange Party.

The right-wing Christian militia led the January crackdown against Elie Hobeika, a dissident Christian militia commander who had signed a Syrian-sponsored peace pact with Moslem chieftains. The Dec. 28 accord was aimed at ending Lebanon's 11-year-old civil war.

Leftist and Moslem factions backed by Syria have been calling for Gemayel's ouster since the feud began among Christians.

Gemayel, a Maronite Catholic, has refused to step down before his six-year term expires in September 1988.

Syria, the main power-broker in Lebanon, has scorned Gemayel and the Lebanese Forces militia allied to his Phalangists since January and bowed out of efforts to restore peace.

Syria's refusal to negotiate with the new pro-Israeli leadership of the Lebanese Forces since Hobeika was defeated prompted militia commanders to accuse the Syrian army of rekindling sectarian violence by shelling the Christian heartland.

Reagan plans to go on vacation in August and will be occupied with legislative matters and the fall congressional election campaigns between September and the first week in November.

Asked about the prospects for concrete agreements at the summit, Shultz said, "When you have a meeting of the president and the general secretary, each one expects that ... the important questions that are at issue are going to get addressed."

House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Dante Fascell, D-Fla., and William Broomfield, R-Mich., met with Gorbachev for nearly three hours last week, and Broomfield on Monday described the Soviet leader as very friendly and willing to talk.

He said Gorbachev readily discussed issues dividing the two nations and was willing to talk about his country's internal problems, but that he warned the congressmen not to "underestimate them on the question of military (force). They'll do whatever they have to."

Broomfield said he took with him to the Soviet Union a list of more than 40 Soviet citizens, many of them Jewish "refuseniks" — or those who have been denied permission to emigrate.

"We were promised that they would review and reconsider all those that we resubmitted," Broomfield said. "Im not overly optimistic about a crash program, but I got the feeling they definitely will review these on a case-by-case basis. I'm hopeful we will be seeing some of these people released."

In addition, Alexander said persons may keep abreast of developing storms by tuning to their local television stations for updated information.

"Television stations normally have the equipment to detect severe weather; however, the only problem is that TV weathermen are not trained to use the equipment like a meteorologist," he said.

Alexander said Midlanders can be assured that National Weather Service personnel are confident that storms are developing when they issue severe weather warnings.

"False warnings create apathy with the public, so we try to cross check our information," he said.

According to Alexander, the National Weather Service and the Midland Office of Emergency Management will participate in exercises on April 24 to test the city's emergency plan and response capability. The site of the path of destruction will be announced at a later date.

The Vietnamese toppled the communist Khmer Rouge government and installed the pro-Hanoi government of Heng Samrin. Vietnamese soldiers remain in Cambodia despite U.N. resolutions calling for their withdrawal.

The Khmer Rouge and two noncommunist resistance groups continue to battle the Vietnamese along the border.

Speaking to the villagers of Ban Charat, Weinberger said: "It is very inspiring to see people who have suffered and who continue to stand firm in their homes and villages despite brutal invasion tactics that have caused injuries to you and your families."

Ban Charat, located five miles from the border, was shelled by Vietnamese artillery last April, according to Thai officials. Its residents had earlier lived closer to the frontier but had to be evacuated as have thousands of others caught in crossfires.

"We want you to know that we are with you. We support the things you do," Weinberger told the villagers through an interpreter.

Weinberger was flown from Bangkok, the capital, to the provincial capital of Surin, 215 miles to the northeast, where a regional army commander briefed him. He also inspected Vietnamese weapons, including rocket launchers and mines that the Thais say they captured inside their territory.

At the base, situated about five miles from the border, he watched an exercise in which the Thais were faced with a hypothetical Vietnamese incursion and had to rapidly adjust their howitzer fire.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Gavin stepping down

MEXICO CITY (AP) — U.S. Ambassador John Gavin is stepping down May 15 after five years in which he drew frequent but, as he once said, predictable criticism as head of the largest U.S. diplomatic mission in the world.

The former actor, whose 55th birthday is today, made the surprise announcement Monday and gave no hint of his future plans except that he would "return to the private sector...to meet new challenges."

In his letter of resignation, Gavin said that although he had been asked to stay on until President Reagan completes his term, his resignation would take effect in mid-May.

Embassy officials said they had no information on what Gavin would do after leaving Mexico, and there was no information on who might replace him. One name that surfaced in the past as a possible successor was Harry Shlaudeman, one of Reagan's special envoys for Central America.

The Mexican government has said nothing officially about Gavin's announcement.

Surveillance increased

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Authorities say they have increased surveillance of the Libyan embassy and tightened border controls in the wake of a terrorist bombing at a popular West Berlin nightclub that killed a U.S. soldier and a Turkish woman.

But a special 100-member commission of U.S. and West Berlin military police probing the Saturday attack that also injured 230 people said it still has "no concrete clues" as to who was responsible for the bombing.

"Since the attack site was frequented by American military personnel, it cannot be ruled out that the attackers came from Arab terrorist circles," Dieter Piete, head of the inquiry, said Monday.

A government official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said "precautionary security measures" were taken at the Libyan embassy, but that West Germany had no concrete indications that Libyans were involved in the bombing.

Fire broke out on plane

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investigators say a fire broke out toward the rear of a Mexicana Airlines plane before it slammed into a Mexican mountain last week, and they have not ruled out the possibility of a bomb, according to sources close to the probe.

The investigators believe the fire could have been either in the cargo hold or passenger cabin, the sources, who spoke on the condition they not be identified, said Monday.

The crash of the Boeing 727, which was en route from Mexico City to Los Angeles, killed all 166 people aboard. The aircraft went down on 7,792-foot El Carbon mountain, 90 miles northwest of Mexico City. Eyewitnesses on the ground had said the plane was on fire before it crashed.

Questions had arisen early in the investigation over whether one of the aircraft's Pratt & Whitney JT8D engines had failed and caught fire. The JT8D engine has been involved in a number of incidents in recent years, including two fatal accidents last year.

British general retires

LONDON (AP) — Gen. Sir Michael Gow, Britain's last serving officer to have fought in World War II, has retired after 44 years of service.

The Scots Guards' pipe and drum band paraded and played music on Monday in a ceremony marking Gow's departure from the Wellington Barracks in London.

Gow, 61, who enlisted as a private in 1942, was in the Allied advance across the Rhine in Germany, fighting in a tank battalion. Among his comrades were Robert Runcie, now Archbishop of Canterbury, and William Whitelaw, now Lord Whitelaw, the deputy prime minister.

Economic plan revealed

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, saying Japan can "no longer be an isolated island of prosperity" created by heavy exporting, today announced a plan to invigorate domestic demand and reduce huge trade surpluses.

The "comprehensive economic measures" approved by economic ministers include cuts in utility rates and some import prices, an acceleration in public works spending and promotion of housing construction and other private investment.

The seven-point plan was drawn up amid a crisis in Japan's export-dependent industries due to the recent appreciation of the yen against the U.S. dollar, and pressure from trading partners to redesign its export-oriented economy.

U.N. archives extensive

UNITED NATIONS (NYT) — There are the handwritten notes of Secretary General U Thant from his Havana hotel room during the 1962 Cuban missile crisis; the secret investigation into the plane crash that killed Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold, and the working papers, drafts, notes and verbatim minutes of the San Francisco conference at which the United Nations Charter was drafted.

That, and more, can be found in the United Nations Archives, 50 million pages of documents crammed into two floors of an office building in Manhattan. Until a controversy erupted recently over former Secretary General Kurt Waldheim's record in World War II, few New Yorkers were aware of the existence of the archives, much less its location at 345 Park Avenue South.

"The whole history of the U.N. is here, positive and negative," said Dr. Alf Erlandsson, the chief archivist since 1971, looking out over a maze of shelves of gray cardboard boxes that take up over 40,000 square feet on the two floors.

Greek industrialist slain

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A gunman shot and killed an elderly Greek industrialist today as he walked to his office in the center of the capital.

Police said responsibility for the attack was claimed by a left-wing Greek terrorist group that in the past has said it attacked Americans living in Greece.

The industrialist, 79-year-old Dimitris Angelopoulos, was shot at least four times on crowded Kanari Street in the Kolonaki district, city police chief Manolis Bosinakis said.

He said the attack took place outside a supermarket, and that the gunman got away on a motorcycle driven by an accomplice.

Fragments discovered

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Pathologists say they found the nub of an explosive device in the body of a man who was killed instantly when a mid-air explosion blew four American passengers out of an Athens-bound TWA flight.

The other victims, two women and a baby, died after falling 15,000 feet, U.S. and Greek forensic officials said Monday.

Nikos Benardis, the Greek forensic pathologist who supervised autopsies on the four people killed in last Wednesday's blast, said metal pieces were found in the body of Alberto Ospina.

"We found a little nub of the explosive mechanism. We believe that it belonged to the bomb," said Benardis.

Ospina, 39, of Stamford, Conn., occupied seat 10F on the Boeing 727 where officials say the bomb was concealed.

Goodwill visit approved

PEKING (LAT) — China has given Britain the go-ahead to send two British navy ships on a goodwill visit to Shanghai in July, a Foreign Ministry official said Monday.

The move could set a precedent for the first U.S. Navy visit to China in nearly four decades, some observers said.

The United States and China failed to reach final agreement on an anticipated U.S. Navy visit to Shanghai last year after Communist Party General Secretary Hu Yaobang said that U.S. ships would not be carrying nuclear weapons when they made the port call. Hu and a senior Foreign Ministry official indicated in an interview that the U.S. government had given assurances to this effect.

Collapse of Contadora conference may influence vote on Contra aid

WORLD

By REID G. MILLER

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The breakdown in Central American peace talks probably dealt a crippling blow to hopes by congressional opponents to defeat President Reagan's plan to send $100 million in aid to the Contra rebels.

Negotiations among 13 Latin American foreign ministers collapsed Monday as Nicaragua's three neighboring countries accused the leftist Sandinista government of blocking all attempts to reach an accord.

But Nicaragua's foreign minister blamed the United States for pressuring Costa Rica, Honduras and El Salvador to back away from an earlier agreement containing a sharp renunciation of Reagan administration policies.

Nicaragua has previously accused the Reagan administration of trying to sabotage the Contadora peace process, begun in January 1983 by Colombia, Mexico, Panama and Venezuela to negotiate a regional nonaggression pact.

The meeting, which began Saturday and ran an extra day, brought together the foreign ministers of Argentina, Brazil, Peru and Uruguay, who support the Contadora effort, and the five Central American nations, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua.

Whoever was to blame for the stormy breakdown, one thing was clear: the latest round of talks had failed, and with them almost any lingering hope of congressional opponents for defeating Reagan's bid to help the Nicaraguan rebels, known as Contras.

The mostly Democratic House last month narrowly rejected the president's plan to give $100 million in military hardware and other aid to the Contras, but will reconsider the matter April 15. The Republican-dominated Senate approved the proposal on March 27.

Rep. Bill Richardson of New Mexico, one of three Democratics in Panama City to observe the negotiations, said the breakdown in the talks was a strong setback.

"Realistically, if these talks break down, the vote on Contra aid is lost" to supporters of the Reagan proposal, Richardson said.

Richardson spoke as he and colleagues Michael Barnes of Maryland and Jim Slattery of Kansas prepared to return to Washington. A few hours later, the talks broke off.

The congressmen had come to Panama at the request of House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, who led the earlier, successful fight against Reagan's plan. They arrived Saturday night full of hope.

"I'm much more pessimistic," Richardson said on departing. His colleagues nodded agreement.

Richardson, referring to Nicaragua's negotiating position, put it this way: "Just because one sourpuss doesn't go along doesn't mean we should give up our attempt to reach a negotiated settlement."

Nicaragua's foreign minister, Miguel d'Escoto, later said his country was indeed willing to go along, but not down the path chosen by Costa Rica, El Salvador and Honduras.

At issue in the talks was a new proposal to set June 6 as the deadline for signing a Contadora peace treaty.

The new proposal called for a nonaggression pact among the five Central American countries, which also include Guatemala; denounced foreign interference or aid to "irregular forces or insurrectional movements that operate in any of the countries of the region;" and urged national reconciliation in the two countries beset by civil war, Nicaragua and El Salvador.

A stumbling block was that in reconciliation, the Sandinistas have repeatedly said they will not hold talks with armed Contras.

The foreign ministers of Costa Rica, Honduras and El Salvador said only Nicaragua among the 13 nations participating in the talks had refused to sign the document.

But Nicaragua's d'Escoto said the new proposal varied sharply from an earlier agreement known as the Document of Carabalieda, signed Jan. 12 by the foreign ministers of the Contadora and support groups. That document was later ratified by all five Central American nations in Guatemala.

"The document of Carabalieda is the central document," d'Escoto told reporters after the Panama City meeting.

"That document says that it is absoluetely indispensable ... for the United States to stop providing assistance for irregular forces in the region," d'Escoto said.

Peres insists finance minister be replaced

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's prime minister reportedly told members of a small swing party that he will not back down from his decision to replace popular Finance Minister Yitzhak Modai, a move that could rupture the fragile coalition government.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres, head of the Labor Party, gave the right-wing Likud bloc until Sunday to replace Modai, a Likud member, and find a compromise to rescue the 17-month-old government.

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, head of the Likud bloc, so far has rejected Peres' demand that Modai resign.

Modai sharply criticized Peres in newspaper interviews published Friday, saying the prime minister "does not understand economics" and deserved no credit for the recovery plan that reduced the annual inflation rate from 445 percent to a projected 25 percent.

While Peres was visiting the United States last week, Modai called him the "flying prime minister" who squandered money on the Histadrut trade union federation to the point of "robbery." Modai also said Peres had no understanding of economics.

Modai was angered by Peres' decision to spend $350 million on failing companies owned by Histadrut.

Modai apologized Monday but refused to retract his words.

The political crisis overshadowed the three-day Labor Party convention which opens tonight, and provided ammunition to Labor Party members advocating an end to its uneasy partnership with Likud.

"I insist that Modai be replaced as finance minister, and if not, he will have to be fired," Peres was quoted as saying in a closed meeting Monday night.

Referring to a similar crisis last November in which he threatened to sack Likud's Commerce Minister Ariel Sharon, Peres said "I gave in once. I won't do it twice."

Opening lead: Ten of ♠

There are many hands where you have no guaranteed line of play. Indeed, on some your only hope is in a line which is considerably against the odds. All you can do is hope for the best.

North upgraded his king of spades, since the ace was marked with West. Rather than try for an 11-trick contract, he chose to gamble on three no trump.

West led the top of his interior sequence in spades, declarer correctly played the king from dummy and East unblocked the jack. The outlook for nine tricks was anything but rosy. There were two legitimate chances for the contract.

One was that West held the king-queen of diamonds. The other was that he held a doubleton queen of clubs and the king of diamonds. Obviously, if East ever gained the lead, a spade through the queen would doom South's contract. (It would not help to find split honors in diamonds, for West could always unblock under the ace of diamonds to make sure that East won their side's trick in the suit.)

It was essential to combine these lines, and to do so in the right order. It would be fatal to cash the ace of diamonds first because of the unblock. Declarer cashed the ace-king of clubs, and when West obligingly dropped the queen, the contract was halfway home. Declarer came to hand with the jack of clubs and led the jack of diamonds.

West had a Hobson's choice. If he covered with the king of diamonds, declarer would allow him to hold the trick. If he refused to play the king, declarer would rise with the table's ace and then return a diamond, forcing West to win the trick and in the process setting up the long diamonds. With West on lead, the queen of spades was safe from attack and the contract was secure.

Anniversary ride less than 'lofty'

BEAVERTON, Ore. (AP) — A hot air balloon carrying a couple celebrating their 30th wedding anniversary Monday snagged on a light post, stranding them and the pilot more than 100 feet in the air for four hours before they slid down a cable that rescuers rigged.

Paul Stuckenschneider received the balloon ride as a gift from his wife, Gail, said their 18-year-old daughter, Joanie Stuckenschneider.

Pilot Greg Ashton, owner of Oregon Balloon Adventures, was trying to land the balloon about 7:15 a.m. when a gust of wind "pushed us right into the pole," he said. "The light standard hit the balloon dead center and it just started ripping and the balloon just hung itself on the pole."

Ashton wrapped the craft's drop line around the pole to keep the gondola from swaying.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jazz singer Billie Holiday has been honored with a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame 26 years after she died in a New York hospital from the ravages of alcohol and drug abuse.

Miss Holiday's star was implanted Monday as old friends and fans looked on and recalled the sweet sounds and stormy life of the celebrated Lady Day.

"Billie Holiday represented love to me," said actress Maria Gibbs. "She was born out of love, and she suffered for lack of love, and she died for want of love. All her music was about love."

Among the notables who paid homage to the woman whose voice shaped generations of jazz vocalists were singers Rosemary Clooney and Carmen MacRae, and jazz critic and pianist Leonard Feather.

Miss Holiday died July 17, 1959, in New York City while under arrest in her hospital room, her longtime addiction to drugs and alcohol taking her life as they had earlier taken the better notes of her once-silky voice. She was 44.

Among the best-known of Miss Holiday's recordings were "Lover Man," "Strange Fruit," "Fine and Mellow," "God Bless the Child," and "Love For Sale."

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Actor Rod Steiger said he was afraid terrorists might harm him after a photographer took his picture in a street here, according to a published report.

Steiger, who is in Israel to do a film about the exploits a crack Israeli security agency, told the photographer "don't publish the picture. The terrorists will get at me," the daily Hadashot reported Monday.

The Oscar-winning film star is playing in a Canadian-Israeli co-production called "Gideon's Sword," which recounts some of the recent exploits of Israel's counter-espionage organization, the Mossad, in the war against terrorism.

SUNDANCE, Utah (AP) — Actor Robert Redford says he opposes lengthening a four-lane highway through Provo Canyon even though it would improve access to his ski resort.

"For me the canyon is symbolic of many things, and it's something that I want to preserve," said Redford, who moved to Utah 22 years ago and owns Sundance Resort.

Last summer, state crews widened the entrance to the canyon and built a four-lane road reaching four miles into the canyon, the site of at least six fatal accidents during the past two months. Plans call for continuing the four lanes even further.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer Rudy Vallee will probably be hospitalized for several more weeks while recuperating from surgery for throat cancer, a hospital spokesman said.

It was thought earlier that Vallee might be released next week from Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, said the spokesman, Ron Wise.

Vallee, 85, was listed in fair condition Monday after two months at the hospital.

Vallee suffered a slight stroke during the hospital stay, impairing movement on his left side, said Chris Harris, the entertainer's spokesman.

TOKYO (AP) — A spring visit to the United States by Crown Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko will be postponed several months so the princess can recover from surgery, reports said today.

The 51-year-old princess is recovering in the Imperial Hospital from a successful March 24 operation to remove a tumor in her uterus, an Imperial Household official who refused to be identified quoted her doctors as saying.

Thanks candidates

Last Saturday's elections should be considered a resounding success by all of this community's residents.

Not only were they successful in the fact voters selected for political office a slate of individuals who appear by virtue of their experience and longevity in Midland to be more than qualified to provide the leadership necessary for the various governmental entities, but also because of the quality of the campaigns waged. The fact that the candidates addressed the issues and waged their campaigns in admirable fashion speaks well for both the candidates and the citizens of Midland and Midland County.

Another particularly bright note in the election was the voter turnout — 9,300 voters or 16.98 percent of those registered in Midland. In many recent elections voter apathy has been more than apparent and it was good to see so many voters cast ballots in these elections. Granted, the number of voters who did go to the polls was not overwhelming by any means but the 16.98 percent of registered voters was significantly larger than in some previous city elections.

Of course even more elections will be coming up in less than a month and that fact means voters won't be able to relax too long before acquainting themselves with all the candidates for Midland Independent School District board, Midland County offices and various other state and regional offices. Those elections will ensure that this political year will be far from dull.

Now that voters have elected their future city, Greenwood school, hospital and college district leaders, the new officeholders should strive to uphold the qualities and programs they embraced in their campaigns. Each should strive to make this community the best possible in terms of not only quality of life but also quality of leadership.

In that way, the political process for this community will once again have come full circle.

Again, congratulations to all the winners and thanks to all those who offered themselves for public service. The effort is appreciated by all Midland residents.

Penalties too weak

Americans seeking explanations for the high incidence of serious crime in this country may find at least one in the shocking report just released by the U.S. Bureau of Justice Statistics.

Figures compiled in a 30-state survey by the bureau, the Justice Department's research arm, demonstrate that the sentences imposed by the courts in the most grievous of offenses are often little more than a mockery.

Almost a fifth of the convicted criminals who drew life sentences were back on the streets after serving three years — or less. More than half the convicted murderers served only seven years behind bars and half the convicted rapists put in less than four years in confinement.

This seems a contemptibly small price for the offenders to pay for the lifetime loss and suffering they inflicted on their victims and the victims' families. And for many of these criminals the time spent in prison amounted to only a temporary lull in a violent career to be resumed as soon as they were outside the penitentiary gates.

Obviously one reason for this turnstile operation in our penal institutions is overcrowding. Harassed correction officials are working constantly to thin out their colonies before the cell blocks become cauldrons that threaten to erupt into more savagery and killing.

Since the rehabilitation programs' track record is unimpressive, more prisons may be the answer. In the meantime, however, parole boards should strive to be more selective about the recidivists they are turning loose to prey again on the law-abiding public.

Another View:

Milking the system

One of the most regulated products in America is milk. The milk-marketing provisions in the Code of Federal Regulations take up 1,375 pages. The government is dealing here directly with Mother Nature; the problems are that milk is perishable, and cows can't be turned off. How best to ensure that the right amount of milk will be produced each day, within shipping distance of those who will buy and drink it? Some would rely on the market; in America, milk is drawn forth by prices carefully set by the government.

The trouble is that the pricing system is often called upon to achieve contradictory results. A choice example occurred in last year's farm bill. The dairy cooperatives that buy and market the milk of individual farmers wanted higher price supports, and Rep. Tony Coelho, the chairman of the House dairy subcommittee, wanted to indulge them. But higher supports, by eliciting greater production in a time of surplus, would force the government to buy more cheese, for which it is already spending $2 billion a year. How to help the farmer without incurring the taxpayers' wrath?

The coops and Mr. Coelho came up with a plan to tax back part of the legislated price increase through an assessment. Part of the money would be used to buy up the herds of producers who agreed to go out of business; that is now being done. Part would be used to hold the taxpayers harmless in case the herd buy-outs failed to reduce production enough and the government still had to retire more than a certain amount of surplus. The cost of the program would be shifted from the budget to the supermarket, where it would be less visible. A mortal lock — but then it turned out that not all dairymen have the same interests either. The Southeast, a region where there are barely enough cows to meet demand, would not go along. The last time there was a herd buy-out, so many of its producers left the field that there were shortages; milk had to be imported from the Upper Midwest, at considerable cost. To guard against a repeat performance, Mr. Coelho had to give southeastern producers a special price increase. Then other regions wanted something too. Congress, while dropping other parts of the Coelho proposal, ended up fine-tuning minimum prices in 35 of the 44 milk-marketing areas; the marketing mechanism became a political toy.

Now members from the Upper Midwest — Dairy Central — have introduced bills to undo these increases. Their constituents, the nation's most efficient producers, currently sell a lot of their milk to the government. They argue it would be better all around — certainly better for the taxpayer — to let them sell to consumers instead.

Does it still make sense for every part of the country to have its own dairy herd? For the government to labor so hard to ensure that result? Could the OPEC of milk in the Upper Midwest be safely relied upon for more of the national supply? Would prices in a freer system go up or down? For many years the present maze of price supports and marketing orders worked fairly well. Now it has become too generous, there are too many farmers, and some will have to go. The most efficient or the nearest-by? Congress needs to decide.

Constitution's birthday plans odd

WASHINGTON — In nearly two years of bureaucratic wheel-spinning, the Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution has yet to accomplish anything more substantial than creating an occasional controversy.

Jack Anderson

First the commission angered the press and other interested parties by closing its meetings to the public. Then, as we reported recently, historians were outraged at a commission staff proposal to erect a $150 million monument to the Constitution on the already overbuilt Mall in Washington — even though the precious document's existing repository, the National Archives, is badly in need of repairs.

Now the commission is beset by rumors of another strange plan: sending an actual page of the Constitution aloft in the space shuttle. ("To see if it would fly," cracked one bemused rumormonger.)

A commission spokesman told our associate Donald Goldberg he had no knowledge of such a proposal, but added, "That doesn't mean it didn't happen." National Archives officials acknowledged having heard the bizarre rumor, but no memo or formal proposal was ever received from the commission or the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

But an internal Archives memo indicates the idea was taken seriously, if only for a short time.

"This is not to say that NASA was not interested in the idea," the memo states in reference to a Dec. 10 interagency meeting sponsored by the commission. "At that meeting a woman representing NASA suggested that her agency might like to borrow a page of the Constitution to send up in the space shuttle. ... There was no discussion of her offhand remark."

According to the Archives memo and interviews with a number of officials, the commission prepared a fall-back position for a spaced-out Constitution: sending posters of the document up in the shuttle if Archives declined to make the real thing available.

The proposal almost got off the ground. Commission staffers contacted Archives production officials about the possibility of obtaining 100 copies of the Constitution poster that tourists have been buying for years. The posters would be sent up in the shuttle, then autographed by the astronauts and "other dignitaries" on the shuttle's return.

The signed posters would be distributed to state governors for display in their capitol buildings; commission members would also get copies for their recreation room or office wall. Colortone Press, a Washington printer, was contacted about providing the posters and agreed to do it for free.

Unfortunately, the posters are printed on heavy stock, and would have taken up too much room. Officials could not say whether consideration was given to an obvious alternative: printing smaller, lighter posters.

Archives officials say that's the last they heard about the aborted project. "To the best of our knowledge," the memo writers stated with evident relief, "that is the extent of (Archives') involvement in the 'Constitution in Space' fiasco."

WHAT'S IN A NAME: Henry E. Hudson, county prosecutor in the Washington suburb of Arlington, Va., has been nominated for a U.S. attorney's opening by President Reagan. Local police admiringly dubbed him "Hangin' Henry" for his dogged pursuit of crooks, while civil liberties activists have been upset by his anti-pornography zeal, which led to the removal of soft-core magazines from local stores. Would Hudson's conservative fans be shocked to learn that he is a charter member of the Hookers Club, made up of Arlington cops and prosecutors? No cause for alarm; it's a fishing club he has belonged to for more than 10 years.

UNDER THE DOME: One reason so many members of Congress are opposed to aid for the Nicaraguan contras is that, no matter how staunchly anti-communist the rebels may be, they're not the kind of people you'd want to leave your wallet with for safekeeping. The General Accounting Office recently reported that it had been unable to trace tens of millions of dollars given to the contras over the past five years. But our sources say the auditors' disclosure of what actually happened to the millions was censored out of the final report. "They stole it," one source said of the contras. "But they couldn't put that in the report."

Reverse realignment threatening Republicans

MARSHALL, Minn. — Rep. Vin Weber, who fought supply-side battles at the 1984 Dallas convention and met contras in the Nicaraguan jungle in 1985, spent Easter recess 1986 trying to soften the anger of desperate farmers flashing danger signals of reverse realignment in the Upper Midwest.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The Minnesota 2nd, America's most rural congressional district, is no longer the safely Republican redoubt carved out after the 1980 census. Polls show deepening disapproval of Ronald Reagan. The Republican fall-off has made the Democrats the majority party in dying small towns with abandoned store fronts and farm land values not yet bottomed out. The ultimate specter: foreclosure and bankruptcy.

Reverse realignment is evident in Weber's stolid opponent, a life-long Republican who switched parties in February. Weber has temporarily abandoned the optimistic rhetoric used by him and other young congressional followers of Rep. Jack Kemp. In a climate where desperation could turn to violence, he might arouse a lynch mob talking about "morning in America."

"I like President Reagan, but I don't agree with everything he's doing," he tells audiences. He opposes Reagan farm policy and voted for rigid federal controls sponsored by Iowa's liberal Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin.

He has become the farmer's ombudsman. We spent three hours in his Marshall office with him last week overhearing complaints from more than 30 voters. Typically, they pleaded for help with hard-nosed federal farm credit bureaucrats holding up their loans. Patient Vin Weber took notes and promised help.

That's a far cry from riding shotgun for Rep. Newt Gingrich in the Conservative Opportunity Society (COS). Indeed, the COS is a premier target of Dave Johnson, Weber's newly-converted Democratic foe. "He (Weber) and his friends on the extreme right want to impose their ultra-conservative views on you," Johnson told the Kiwanis Club in his hometown of Hector last week.

A rich 53-year-old farmer (1,800 acres) who flies his own plane, Johnson presents himself as a substantial citizen intent on "preserving a way of life." Weber, 33, has been in politics since college and Congress for three terms. To Johnson, he is nationally ambitious political pro and a "Johnny-come-lately" in agriculture.

Johnson became a member of the "Weber Club in 1981," contributing $500 a year to the congressman and flying him around the 30-county district. He was Republican National Convention delegate and only last August was seeking the GOP nomination for state treasurer.

How did he so quickly become a close ally of State Attorney General Hubert H. Humphrey III, a rising star in Minnesota's Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party (DFL)? His "gut-wrenching" conversion, he told us, stemmed from revulsion over "the Republican right-wing agenda" — specifically, Central American and farm policy. But Weber contends Johnson is a "right-wing farmer" and anti-abortion member of the fundamentalist Church of God who "was very much in tune with us."

Johnson's problems with Weber started when the congressman axed him from the 1984 National Convention delegate slate — because he had not been on board in 1980, says Weber; because he opposed Central American policy, says Johnson. He was elected delegate anyway, then pounded Reagan's farm policy in Dallas.

Johnson's past conservatism worries suspicious DFL regulars, but he has turned against "free market farming." His Kiwanis speech was standard Democratic fare, right down to Central America: "If the incumbent had this district's interests in mind, he'd use that money to send Minnesota food to the Nicaraguan people, not guns to guerrillas."

Not one of the 13 Kiwanians present suppports contra aid. Criticism of Weber's pro-contra vote was the one issue other than farm credit we heard from voters here. Weber reverts to COS fire-eater in characterizing claims that contra-aid deprives Minnesota farmers "as cruelly demagogic ... flat-out lying to the people."

Otherwise, the Reagan Revolution is ignored by Weber. He has soured on tax reform and finds the protectionist tide here hard to face. A national Democratic target in a campaign where spending may approach $1 million for each candidate, Weber needs hard-pressed Canby farmer Robert Olsen and others like him. DFL partisan Olsen distrusts "turncoat" Johnson and respects Weber's help on farm credit. That may be the Reaganite hope for surviving reverse realignment.

CHARLEY REESE

Communists merely totalitarian zealots

I feel the same way about communists that comedian Redd Foxx feels about midgets — I hate 'em.

First of all, a communist is a totalitarian and being partial to liberty, I despise all totalitarians. A communist, if he gets a gun to your head, will use the Bill of Rights for toilet paper.

Charley Reese

Secondly, a communist is a zealot and I can't stand zealots. To a communist there is only one truth — his truth — and one way to do things — his way.

Third, a communist is a thug who kills people for the "crime" of disagreeing with him. I hate people who kill people because of differences of opinion.

Fourth, a communist is an anti-intellectual liar. The basis of civilization is communication and the basis of communication is a mutual respect for truth. The essence of science is a respect for truth. The essence of democratic government is to effect change by persuasion, not force.

The communist is against all of these things. Being a secular religious zealot who defines truth in his own twisted brain, a communist sees language only as another weapon in his revolutionary arsenal. He will lie, engage in elaborate deceptions, dupe people, and do anything else which he thinks will further his goal of gaining power. The communist has a simple moral code: whatever furthers the revolution is good, whatever hinders it is evil.

Such a person is a criminal psychopath. There is no clearer signal of contempt that one person can send to another than to deliberately deceive them. When you seek to manipulate, rather than persuade people, you are declaring that they are non-persons. Their minds and their honest convictions mean nothing to you. You are looking at them as if they were mindless robots which you will program to do your bidding.

For all those reasons, it baffles me that any decent human being — liberal, conservative, or whatever — would have anything whatsoever to do with a communist for any reason whatsoever. The communist is the antithesis of every ideal that men and women, East and West, have ever aspired to achieve. The communist stands for tyranny, not freedom; for force, not reason; for brutality, not humanity; for obedience, not consent; and for elitism, not equality.

Yet American liberals are forever joining hands with communists. The liberal and communist positions on issues are frequently identical and if you don't believe me, I invite you to pick up a copy of any of the several official Communist Party publications available.

I suppose, for one thing, most liberals are at heart democratic socialists and believe that no other socialist can be all bad. That's ironic because no one hates and despises the democratic socialist more than the communists, as some of the captured Grenada documents so eloquently reveal.

I suppose, too, there is that same perverse quirk that causes people who never went to funerals of the victims to gather outside death row to bemoan the fate of the murderers. Liberals, who act like the Ku Klux Klan when it comes to dictators of the right, are infinitely tolerant and apologetic of communist dictators. Compare, for example, their attitudes toward Somoza and Ortega, the past and present dictators of Nicaragua, or their attitudes toward Pinochet of Chile and Castro of Cuba.

Well, in 1986, with the historical record so clear, there is simply no excuse for any literate human being supporting or defending communism or, for that matter, being duped by its incessant lying.

Communism, as an evil religion, is monolithic. There isn't a dime's worth of difference between the communist thugs in Moscow, Peking, Ethiopia, Hungary, Poland, Romania, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, El Salvador, Nicaragua, Cuba, Afghanistan, Hanoi, Kampuchea, and those in the United States. They are one cancer in the flesh of humanity.

They share a common bigotry, a common hatred for human liberty, a common fear of the unfettered human mind, a common contempt for democracy, and common brutality.

To paraphrase Gen. Phil Sheridan, the only good communist is a dead one.

Bill makes permanent federal cigaratte tax

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan signed into law Monday a measure that makes permanent the 16-cent-a-pack federal cigarette tax and sends billions of dollars of offshore oil revenue to the federal government and coastal states.

The bill, which is supposed to cut deficits by $18 billion over the next three years, was an outgrowth of the fiscal 1986 budget debate, designed to meet some of the deficit-cutting goals. However, the final version was expanded to include language making permanent a 21-year-old drinking age, a new tobacco program, and continued aid to workers who lose jobs to imports.

More than a quarter of the red ink saved by the bill, $1.7 billion a year, would come from the cigarette tax. The tax, doubled in 1982, rolled back to 8 cents on March 15 after Congress failed to extend it. The bill includes language to impose the full tax retroactively as well as extend it permanently.

The cigarette tax is joined in the law by a sweeping new tobacco price support program.

Tobacco price levels would drop more into line with those of foreign competition. Cigarette companies get discounts on government tobacco stocks that could total $1 billion over five years and get a major say in how much tobacco will be grown each year. Tobacco farmers will pay less for the price support program.

The formula for sharing offshore gas and oil receipts between the federal government and seven coastal states ends a dispute that dates back to the late 1970s. Nearly $6 billion has collected in an escrow fund pending resolution of the dispute.

The states would get 27 percent of the escrow money and future income from rents and interest on the leases. Freeing the escrow account will send Louisiana alone at least $600 million, with Texas, California, Alabama, Alaska, Mississippi, and Florida also benefiting.

Another section of the law forbids hospitals from turning away, or "dumping," patients who need emergency care on grounds they don't have cash or health insurance.

The provision would impose fines on hospitals that turn away a patient before stabilizing the patient's condition and finding another institution to take the patient. A hospital with a pattern of abuse could be suspended from the Medicare program.

The legislation also:

• Cuts the Small Business Administration operations by about $2.5 billion over three years.

• Extends for six years the Trade Adjustment Assistance program, which provides money to workers who lose jobs to foreign competition, at a cost the Congressional Budget Office estimates at $275 million over three years.

• Authorizes $2.15 billion in Farmers Home Administration rural housing loans for fiscal 1986, $100 million higher than the current limit.

• Reauthorizes Amtrak through fiscal 1988, but reduces the local rail service assistance program from $12 million this year to $8 million by fiscal 1988.

• Makes permanent the federal program encouraging states to adopt a 21-year-old drinking age by withholding 10 percent of federal highway money from states that refuse.

• Reauthorizes the Corporation for Public Broadcasting at $200 million for fiscal 1987, $214 million in fiscal 1988, $238 million in fiscal 1989 and $254 million in fiscal 1990.

• Requires new fees for users of the government's energy regulators, including the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

IRS extends phone service

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's crunch time at the Internal Revenue Service, and the agency is extending the hours for its toll-free telephone service to accommodate the millions of Americans who are waiting until the last minute to file their tax returns.

The special IRS phones will be operated during normal business hours the rest of this week and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. local time on Saturday and Sunday. Questions also will be answered two hours past normal closing time April 14 and 15.

It likely will require a wait to get an answer during the next few days. And, the IRS cautions, "You should know that you are responsible for the accuracy of your return. If we do make an error, you are still responsible for the payment of the correct tax."

The toll-free number for your city is listed in the back of the tax-forms package you received from the IRS. If there is no special number for your city, you may use the national number, 1-800-424-1040.

For Texas the toll-free numbers are: Austin, 472-1974; Corpus Christi, 888-9431; Dallas, 742-2440; El Paso, 532-6116; Fort Worth, 263-9229; Houston, 965-0440; San Antonio, 229-1700.

U.S. renewing efforts to cut off Libya from its European trading partners

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is renewing its effort to cut Libya off from its European trading partners as President Reagan weighs military and other options following two terrorist attacks on Americans in Europe last week.

Six people — including five Americans — were killed in the attacks, which administration officials believe may be linked to the Libyans.

Reagan refused to answer reporters' questions going to or from the White House. His only public comment on what action he planned against Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy was a "no comment" issued Sunday as he returned from a California vacation.

White House spokesman Edward Djerejian said that following the two recent terrorist incidents involving Americans, the United States is seeking "the possible closing of more Libyan Peoples' Bureaus known to be the source of terrorist planning and activity."

Although the European allies have declined in the past to go along with U.S. attempts to coordinate the economic and diplomatic isolation of Khadafy and his oil-rich Arab republic, Djerejian said the latest terrorist incidents, "both on European soil, have sensitized the Europeans to the danger, that the danger is really at their doorstep, not only at our doorstep."

Djerejian said that in its various diplomatic communications, the United States is stressing that "it's imperative for the civilized community to work together much more effectively than ever in the past."

The United States has detailed contingency plans for retaliation against Libya, including five potential military targets there, CBS News said Monday night. It said the Joint Chiefs of Staff met in special session Monday.

Attorney General Edwin Meese called off a trip to California in order to remain in Washington for a series of meetings on terrorism, Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten said.

Ambassador Richard Burt, the U.S. envoy to West Germany, said there were "very clear indications that there was Libyan involvement" in a nightclub bombing last week that killed an American Army sergeant and a Turkish woman in West Berlin.

When asked if he favored military action against Khadafy in retaliation for the attack, Burt said, "I'm not going to close the president's options...He's studying this issue right now."

Burt, interviewed on NBC-TV's "Today" show, said Khadafy must recognize that he is fighting not only the United States on this issue, but like-minded nations around the world.

Djerejian said the administration would "have to reserve final judgment on exactly who was responsible until we make further progress on the investigations" into the nightclub explosions and the bombing last week of a TWA jetliner over Greece.

He pointed out, however, that those attacks followed the "pattern of indiscriminate violence which we have traced to the types of terrorist activities that Colonel Khadafy has sponsored in the past."

Inmate recaptured after escaping 20 years ago

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A man who walked away from a Virginia prison farm where he was serving time for forgery nearly 20 years ago was recaptured when he went to collect his Social Security check, a police spokesman says.

Police acting on a tip from Virginia authorities arrested William Lee Caniford, 67, Monday, spokesman Bill Robinson said.

Caniford had served about 40 days of a 17-year term for felonious use of credit cards when he disappeared from the Baskerville Prison Farm on June 9, 1966, Robinson said.

Virginia authorities called San Diego police last week, saying they believed Caniford was in the area, the spokesman said. He had been living in San Diego for the last 10 years.

"The guy used his real name. Once we knew who we were looking for, it didn't take long to find him," he said.

Caniford is being held in the San Diego County jail, and Virginia authorities said they would extradite him to serve the rest of his term.

Court rejects recall case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today rejected an appeal by a Michigan gubernatorial candidate seeking to recall from office Gov. James Blanchard.

The court, citing a lack of jurisdiction and indicating a lack of interest in the merits of the case, let stand a ruling that threw out a lawsuit by John Lauve. His suit said Michigan's recall law makes it too difficult to remove an officeholder.

Lauve, a Grosse Pointe Woods engineer seeking the Republican gubernatorial nomination this year, challenged a state law provision that requires the gathering of 760,002 signatures from registered voters within 90 days to force a recall election.

Lauve launched the recall drive in 1983 after Blanchard signed into law a temporary 38 percent increase in the state's income tax. The tax rate has since returned to its pre-increase level.

Lauve, who said he collected some 500,000 valid signatures in the recall drive, filed suit in state court challenging the 90-day limitation as unconstitutional.

State courts threw out the suit without ruling on the merits of Lauve's claims.

Air Force secretary resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russell A. Rourke, secretary of the Air Force since December, has resigned for personal reasons, a spokesman for the Defense Department said today.

"Mr. Rourke expressed deep regret" and cited "extraordinary personal and private circumstances" for his decision, said Defense Department spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Chris Baumann.

The 53-year-old Rourke, who served as the Pentagon's chief lobbyist, was sworn in as the Air Force's top civilian on Dec. 10.

Wet weather may be in store

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders may be in for some cool and wet weather through Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight will be cloudy with a 60 percent chance of thunderstorms predicted. Winds will be out of the east and gusty at 20 to 30 mph. Tonight and Wednesday will be cooler with high temperatures expected in the upper 60's.

A 50 percent chance of thunderstorms and easterly winds at 15 to 20 mph also is forecast for Wednesday.

The highest temperature recorded for Monday's date was 92 degrees in 1946. A low of 28 degrees was recorded in 1938 for today's date.

STATE

Scattered thunderstorms, including some that may reach severe levels, were forecast for most of Texas through Wednesday.

The National Weather Service warned of the possibility of severe thunderstorm activity in Northeast Texas and West Texas through tonight.

A weak cold front pushed its way across Northwest Texas early today. The front was located at dawn from Southwestern Oklahoma across the South Plains and into the mountains of West Texas.

Forecasts called for variable cloudiness with scattered thunderstorms across most of the state through Wednesday.

Lows tonight will be in the upper 40s in the Panhandle and in the 50s and 60s over the rest of the state. Highs Wednesday will be mostly in the 60s and 70s, ranging from the 50s in the Panhandle to near 90 in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

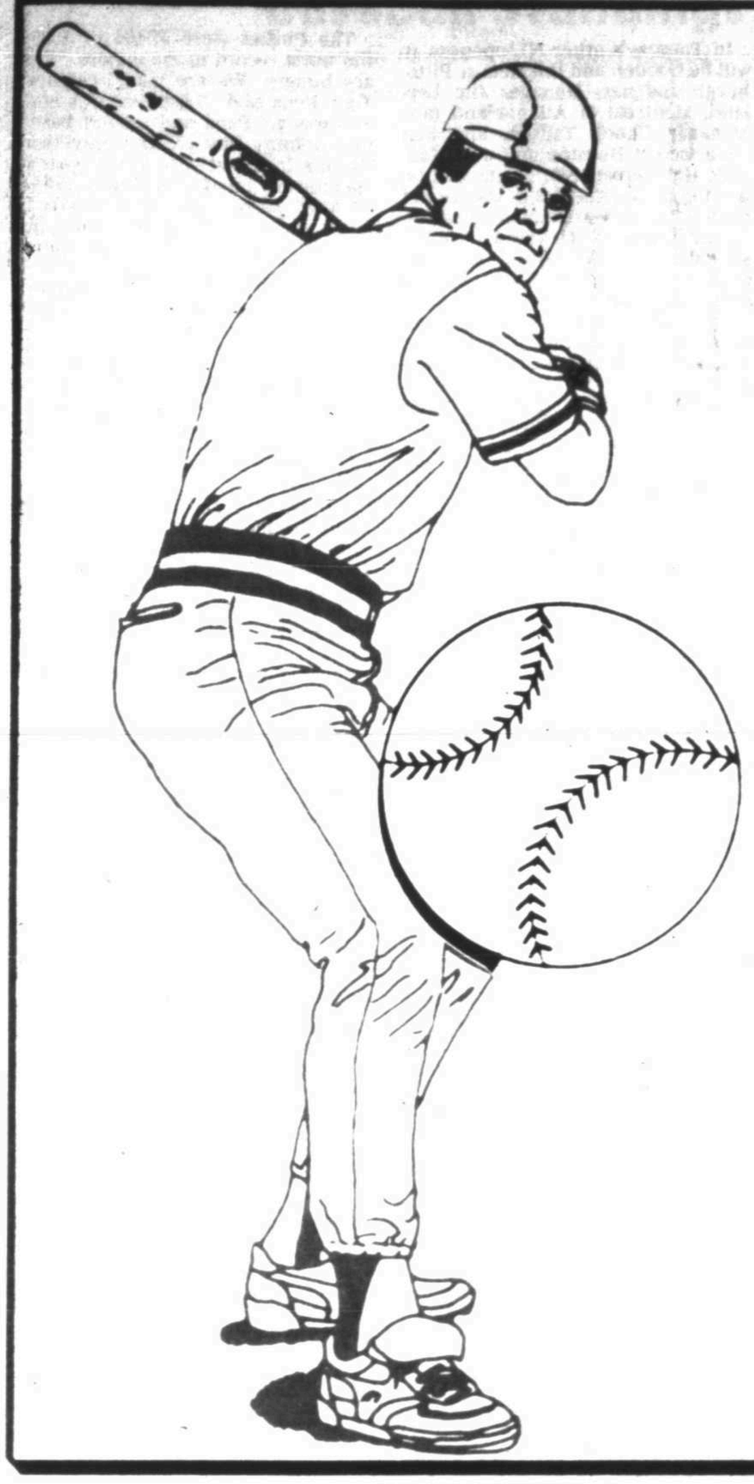
Some light fog was being reported along the coastal plains early today while high clouds cover the rest of the state except in far South Texas where skies were clear along the Rio Grande.

NATION

Northern Maine had snow today while a cold front pushed showers and thunderstorms from the nation's midsection into the Deep South, triggering flash flood warnings and severe thunderstorm watches.

Severe thunderstorm watches were in effect early today in central and southern Arkansas and sections of northwest and west central Mississippi. A flash flood warning was posted in Benton and Madison counties of Arkansas.

Showers and thunderstorms also spread from western Pennsylvania to Vermont while snow powdered northern Maine.



For openers, it's Dodgers, Reds...

Associated Press

Fernando Valenzuela and Steve Carlton make a habit of Opening Day starts. Valenzuela likely will continue that tradition. Carlton probably won't.

At least after Monday's performance, it would seem that way. The 25-year-old Valenzuela handcuffed San Diego, allowing 10 hits but striking out nine and going the route in a 2-1 Los Angeles Dodgers victory.

Carlton, meanwhile, struggled for four innings, surrendering nine hits and all of Cincinnati's runs as the Reds beat Philadelphia 7-4. Carlton, 41, tied Tom Seaver's National League record with his 14th Opening Day start. But, coming off a shoulder injury which sidelined him for most of 1985, Carlton's future is a question mark.

Dodgers 2, Padres 1

Valenzuela had a superb spring and he continued his mastery in the opener before 49,444 fans. Making his fourth straight Opening Day start and fifth in six years, he was reached for a run in the ninth on singles by Kevin McReynolds, Steve Garvey and Garry Templeton.

"I felt good the whole game, in the ninth inning, too," Valenzuela said. "This was my best spring. My control was good in the spring and today. I threw my curveballs for strikes."

In 31 innings of preseason work, Valenzuela allowed only two earned runs for an 0.58 earned run average.

Mike Marshall homered and scored both Los Angeles runs.

"I really wasn't concerned about not hitting any homers during the spring," Marshall said. "It's just different down there (in Florida). I work on a lot of things to get ready for the season.

"The extra run gave Fernando a cushion. It's important to get him off to a fast start. He's capable of having a monster year."

Reds 7, Phillies 4

Despite an erratic performance by starter Mario Soto, who still earned his fourth consecutive victory in an opener, Cincinnati had too much for Philadelphia and Carlton.

Soto's fielding error aided the Phillies' three-run first, highlighted by Glenn Wilson's sacrifice fly and Von Hayes' two-run double. Soto lasted just 5 2-3 innings, giving up six hits and three walks.

But Carlton served up a three-run homer to Eric Davis in the second inning to put the Reds ahead 4-3. Mike Schmidt tied the game with a solo homer in the third, but Bo Diaz knocked in the go-ahead run in the bottom of the inning with the second of his three singles.

Dave Parker led off the fifth with a long homer to center field, and Carlton was gone before the inning was over.

Parker thinks Carlton is far from through.

"He didn't have that good location with his pitches," Parker said. "He definitely had a good breaking ball. When he gets his location, I think he's going to come back and dazzle the league like he has in the past."

Carlton, of course, wasn't talking.

"It was just a bad outing. He pitched super this spring," said Phillies Manager John Felske. "It was just one of those things. When he made a mistake, they hit it. You can't make mistakes against a club that hits like Cincinnati."

...Tigers, Indians and Brewers

Associated Press

Kirk Gibson remembers happier times — say October 1984. He's thinking about a repeat of those glory days — in, say, October 1986.

Gibson got April 1986, and the American League baseball season, off to a rousing start for the Detroit Tigers on Monday. He went 4-for-4, including two prodigious homers, and drove in five runs. Gibson's two-run shot in the seventh inning lifted the Tigers past the Boston Red Sox 6-5.

"It was just too good to be true," said Gibson, who waved his glove at the cheering crowd when he returned to right field after the first homer, then tipped and doffed his cap after the second one.

"I put a lot of pressure on myself to justify all I went through over the winter," he added, referring to bitter contract negotiations with the Tigers. "The last day I can compare this with is the last game of the 1984 World Series. This doesn't happen very often."

In the the fifth game of the '84 World Series Gibson also hit two homers and drove in five runs as Detroit beat the San Diego Padres 8-4 at Tiger Stadium to take the Series in five games.

Tigers 6, Red Sox 5

An opening day crowd of 51,437 roared its approval as Gibson slammed a pair of homers. That offset four home runs by the Red Sox, including one by Dwight Evans on the first pitch of the game from Tigers ace Jack Morris.

"I was prepared to swing at the first pitch," Evans said. "I plan to swing at the first pitch more often this year."

Morris didn't have his best stuff Monday, but he thought he'd at least be safe on the first pitch.

"I had to smile," Morris said. "I couldn't believe he wouldn't at least take a pitch. It was a fastball over the plate. It was strike one, supposedly."

Thanks to Gibson, though, Morris wound up with a victory, despite his problems with the long ball.

Gibson's first homer came in the fourth when he smashed the first pitch from Bruce Hurst into the upper deck in center with Dave Collins on base to put Detroit ahead 4-2. He sped around the bases and gave Collins a lusty high-five at the plate.

"It was a very emotional moment," Gibson said. "But I don't ever like to show another team up and I thought maybe I demonstrated more than I'd like, so I just told myself to get my butt around the bases on the second one."

He did, after producing in a tight situation, something he likes to be faced with.

"You can't think of pressure in these situations," Gibson said. "I thrive on these situations. I was happy as heck to be up there at that time."

Indians 6, Orioles 4

Rookie catcher Andy Allanson contributed three hits and drove in a run in his major-league debut and last-minute sub Mel Hall drove in two runs after starter Carmen Castillo aggravated a calf injury in practice.

Ernie Camacho, the Indians' top reliever in 1984 but out almost all of the '85 season with an elbow injury, earned a save.

"In the overall picture, Allanson was our catcher of the future," Manager Pat Corrales said, "but he became our catcher of the present by progressing a little faster than anticipated."

"This is something to be stored away for years to come," Allanson said. "My entire family was here."

"We have a young bunch of guys and nobody is counting on us to do anything," Cleveland's Andre Thornton said. "But we're not a bad club, and we've got to get better."

Mike Flanagan was charged with five runs in two-plus innings. He walked three Indians and all three scored.

"I never got any rhythm going," said Flanagan, who missed the first half of 1985 with a torn Achilles tendon. "I never got into the flow."

Incaviglia debut nears for Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — On his first day in training camp, Texas Rangers rookie right fielder Pete Incaviglia hit a line drive that knocked a hole in the outfield fence.

Tonight in Arlington Stadium, Incaviglia will try to knock a few holes in the Toronto Blue Jays' defense in his major league debut and the Rangers' opening game.

A crowd of about 40,000 was expected to greet the Rangers, who finished in last place in the American League West last year, and the Blue Jays, defending champions in the AL East.

Incaviglia, who jumped to the majors right from college, hit 48 home runs for Oklahoma State last year and blasted seven homers for the Rangers at the Florida spring training camp.

The hard-hitting Incaviglia, called "The Fat Kid" by Texas Manager Bobby Valentine, will bat in the cleanup spot.

Montreal originally drafted Incaviglia, but traded him to the Rangers after a salary dispute and discussion over whether he would get to start his career in the major leagues.

"Pete will have to learn the strike zone better and hit the off-speed, breaking pitches," General Manager Tom Grieve said. "He'll strike out some but we think the more experience he gets the better he will get.

"And there's no doubt what happens when he gets into a pitch."

Another rookie, Jose Guzman, gets the opening game pitching assignment for the Rangers because of a handshake.

Texas rookie Pete Incaviglia takes few swing in preparation for his first major league game at Arlington Stadium tonight. He is only the third player to jump from college to the major leagues.

Guzman, who was 3-2 for the Rangers late last year after being called up from the minor leagues, will face Toronto veteran Dave Stieb.

The 22-year-old Guzman got the assignment after veteran knuckleballer Charlie Hough broke the little finger on his right hand in a trick handshake with a friend at training camp.

Houston faces opener with piecemeal lineup

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros open their National League season against the San Francisco Giants tonight with a piecemeal lineup comprised of seasoned veterans and fresh rookies.

New manager Hal Lanier didn't plan it that way but a series of spring training injuries has forced him to open with two rookies in his starting outfield.

Starting outfielders Jose Cruz, recovering from minor knee surgery, and Terry Puhl, suffering from a sprained ankle, were placed on the 15-day disabled list Monday.

Rookies Eric Bullock and Tony Walker are their replacements. Bullock appeared in 18 games for the Astros last season and Walker is making his major league debut.

Nolan Ryan, who became the first pitcher to surpass 4,000 career strikeouts last year, will oppose Giants starter Mike Krukow in the 7:35 p.m. CST opener in the Astrodome.

Ryan would like to improve on his 10-12 record and 3.80 earned run average.

"I feel good for the end of spring training," Ryan said. "I look at how I feel and my velocity more than spring time statistics."

Krukow is the opening day choice for new manager Roger Craig. Krukow compiled an 8-11 record and 3.38 era last season.

Lanier broke his first training camp with only nine spring training victories.

"We accomplished what we wanted to do in spring training and that was to get fundamentals in their minds and to establish ourselves as aggressive baserunners," Lanier said.

The Astros committed 47 errors that led to 30 unearned runs. Shortstop Dickie Thon committed eight errors and third baseman Denny Walling had seven.

Houston stole 33 bases and runners were caught stealing 15 times.

Lanier's patience wore thin several times during the spring as he watched the home runs mount and the errors continue.

"We just wanted to get it into the players' minds what has to be done," Lanier said. "We're not going to win if we can't accomplish the fundamentals.

"It's my job to get that point across to the players. I'm not one to stay quiet if I see something wrong."

"I'm more excited than nervous," Walker said. "I'm sure I'll be nervous by tomorrow but I think I'm ready. I'd like to stay here the whole year, hit .300, be known around the league and respected by the manager."

Thon will open at shortstop, continuing his comeback from a 1984 beaning incident.

Craig, who managed San Diego to fourth and fifth place finishes in 1978 and 1979, is starting his first full season as manager of the Giants. He guided the Giants through the final 18 games of last season.

Local football schedules complete

From Staff Reports

The 1986 football schedules for Midland High and Midland Lee have been released by Gil Bartosh, athletic director of the Midland schools.

Both teams will play three non-district and six district contests. As a result of UIL realignment, which dropped Big Spring from Class 5A to Class 4A, Lee will have an open date Oct. 17 and Midland's free weekend is Oct. 24.

The traditional season's windup between Midland and Lee this year becomes the first district game of the season, marking the first time in league history that the two schools haven't ended the season against each other.

Midland High has been designated as the home team against Lee, giving MHS season ticket holders the reserved seats as part of the regular season package.

Once again, Odessa Permian will come to Midland to play Lee, the team against whom it has battled for district honors the last four seasons.

Last year, because of the limited seating in Memorial Stadium, the Lee and Permian game was played on Thursday and televised, which attracted national attention to the game.

Midland High won't have to wait long to find out whether it is a district contender. After Lee, the Bulldogs face Permian on the road, host San Angelo and travel to Abilene High on successive weekends.

In the non-district slate, Lee will travel to Lubbock Coronado and El Paso Eastwood and will host Plainview, the new entry on the Rebel schedule.

MHS will host both Lubbock Monterey and Lubbock Coronado in non-district action and will travel to Andrews. Coronado is the new entry on the Bulldogs' schedule.

Midland Lee's 1986 Football Schedule

Putter gives Andy Bean confidence for Masters' race

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Andy Bean is neither coy nor bashful about assessing his chances this week in the 50th Masters golf championship.

"As good as anybody that tees it up — maybe better than that," Bean said.

There's a reason for his bounding, unabashed confidence going into Thursday's start of the first of the season's recognized major championships.

"To win this golf tournament, you have to putt well. There's no two ways about it. You just have to putt well," said the big, red-haired man known to his fellow tourists as "Li'l Abner."

And right now, Bean is putting better. A lot better.

"I'm putting much better than I have in the last three, four, five years," Bean said before a practice round over the hilly fairways and undulating greens of Augusta National.

Earlier this season, he had consecutive tournament finishes of second and first — and wasn't putting well at the time.

"When you can do that, play that well with a bunch of three-putts, then you've got to be hitting a lot of good shots. Then, when you can put those good shots together with good putting, look out," Bean said.

His 1986 victory, at Doral, snapped a two-year non-winning string for the 6-foot-4, 220-pound Bean and provided him with the 10th triumph of his 11-year career.

He followed up with a strong, come-from-behind bid that fell just short last week at Greensboro, N.C., a performance that pushed him into the No. 3 spot on the year's money-winning list with more than $216,000 and stamped him as a force to be considered this week.

"I did play well. And that gave me a very positive attitude coming into Augusta," said Bean.

A notoriously poor dresser, Portland's Kiki Vandeweghe said after being selected one of the five worst-dressed athletes by Gentlemen's Quarterly, "I've got to wear a sports coat. I can't wear tennis shoes. It's tough. I've had to rearrange my whole wardrobe."

Fridge tossed from ring; Hulk wins title

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — The Fridge got most of the cheers from the Wrestlemania II fans, but when it came down to the last headlock and finger in the eye, Andre the Giant emerged as champion of the ballyhooed Battle Royal.

William "The Refrigerator" Perry of the Super Bowl Champion Chicago Bears was one of a half dozen pro football players mixed together in the ring at the same time Monday night with 13 wrestlers, including Andre the Giant, whose 500-pound bulk outweighed the Fridge by 200 pounds.

"I definitely rooted for the Fridge,' said Mike Drake of Arlington Heights, who admitted he was a new wrestling fan. "Andre shouldn't have won, He was getting beat up in there."

YET, THE crowd of more than 10,000 at the Rosemont Horizon in this Chicago suburb was happy that the "bad-guy" wrestlers, including Big John Stud and The Iron Sheik, didn't come out on top.

Lynnda Kleiner of Arlington Heights, a wrestling fan for 10 years, rooted for the "good guy" wrestlers, including The Killer Bees, Bruno Sanmartino and Hillbilly Jim.

And, she booed the football players.

"What are those football players doing in there, anyway? They're just there for the money and promotion," she said.

Under the rules for the free-for-all, anyone thrown over the ropes was eliminated and the last man in the ring won.

Perry was thrown out of the ring by Big John Studd, with Studd and four other beefcakes still in the ring, but the rookie Bears lineman got his revenge by tricking Studd out of the ring.

The Bears' management had worried about Perry and teammate Jim Covert getting injured, and the players had to sign waivers releasing the National Football League team from responsibility for their contracts if they were injured.

Perry was tossed through the ropes, but no one appeared hurt after the free-for-all.

Other NFL players on hand were Ed "Too Tall" Jones of the Dallas Cowboys, Russ Francis of the San Francisco 49ers and Bill Fralic of the Atlantic Falcons.

It was part of a whacky mixture of sports, entertainment and third-rate acting that made up the three-city Wrestmania II extravaganza, a World Wrestling Federation sequel to their first Wrestlemania event last year in New York.

In Los Angeles on Monday night, wrestling fans watched Hulk Hogan successfully defended his WWF championship against King Kong Bundy in a steel cage.

"Good always triumphs over evil," said Peter Weinstraub, 42, a stock broker from Santa Monica who was among the 16,000 West Coast fans on hand.

At Nassau Veteran Coliseum outside New York, the top attraction was a boxing match between wrestler Rowdy Roddy Piper and the actor, Mr. T, who won by disqualification after four rounds.

John Tudor of St. Louis, who was shelled by Kansas City in last year's final World Series game, and Bud Black, one of the few Royals' pitchers to get tagged by the Cardinals in baseball's world championship, will be on the mound Tuesday when the rest of the major league teams swing into action.

Tudor, 21-8 last year and runner-up to Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets for the National League Cy Young Award, will start against the visiting Chicago Cubs. In his final game of 1985, the Royals raked him for five runs in 2 1-3 innings en route to an 11-0 seventh-game victory in the World Series.

"If we can go out and do half as well as last year, it's going to be an exciting year," Ozzie Smith, the St. Louis shortstop, said.

Rick Sutcliffe, the 1984 NL Cy Young winner when he was 16-1 but only 8-8 last year when injuries put him on the disabled three times, will go for the Cubs, who faded from the 1984 NL East championship to fourth place last year.

BLACK, 10-15 in 1985 and relatively ineffective (0-1, 5.06 earned run average) against the Cards in the Series, goes for the Royals against Ron Guidry and the Yankees at New York.

Guidry was 22-6 last year and runner-up to Kansas City's Bret Saberhagen in the American League Cy Young voting. The Yankees, who finished two games behind the Toronto Blue Jays in the AL East last year, start the season with Lou Piniella as their new manager. Piniella took over when Billy Martin, who had replaced Yogi Berra early last year, was dismissed.

Also Tuesday in the AL, it will be the Blue Jays and their new manager, Jimy Williams, at Texas, California at Seattle and Minnesota at Oakland.

Baseball Openers

In Tuesday's other NL openers, it will be Gooden and the Mets at Pittsburgh and new Manager Jim Leyland, Montreal at Atlanta and new Manager Chuck Tanner, and San Francisco at Houston and new Manager Hal Lanier. San Diego will be playing at Los Angeles in the second game of their season-opening series.

Jose Canseco, Oakland's rookie slugger and left fielder, is being counted on by the A's to display some "Ruthian power."

Two other rookie starters are first baseman Wally Joyner of California and Seattle second baseman Danny Tartabull.

Joyner has a particularly tough role, following Rod Carew, the seven-time AL batting champion. The Angels disposed of Carew and his hefty contract.

Gooden takes the mound hoping to match or improve upon his 24-4 Cy Young season of 1985, and he starts in good physical health, this after throwing a king-sized scare into the Mets over the weekend when he reportedly told them he'd been involved in an auto accident. He later said he had told them a friend had been involved in the accident. Nevertheless, Manager Davey Johnson was sufficiently jolted by the incident that he fined Gooden.

The Pirates were 57-104 in 1985, the worst record in the majors. "We are hungry. We are mad," catcher Tony Pena said. "Last year was embarrassing." Pena and second baseman Johnny Ray are the only two starters from last year in this year's opening-day lineup. Pittsburgh traded away some older, higher-priced talent, including Jason Thompson, in a move toward younger, less-expensive and lesser-known players like Sid Bream, Thompson's replacement at first base. Thompson now is with Montreal.

The Braves, coming off a 66-96 season, have only one new player — catcher Ozzie Virgil — in their opening-day lineup. They got Virgil from Philadelphia for pitcher Steve Bedrosian.

But seven other newcomers will be in Tanner's dugout, among them catcher-first baseman Ted Simmons and outfielder Billy Sample. "What are you supposed to do, stay with the same people who were ineffective?" Tanner mused. "I don't expect 96 losses again. I expect us to be a contender right away. We'll get it done."

Home runs by Rob Deer and Ernest Riles off Tom Seaver — making his 16th Opening Day start — paced the Brewers and Ted Higuera, a 15-game winner as a rookie last season, picked up the victory.

Deer stunned an opening day crowd of 42,265 with a home run that landed onto the left-field roof of Comiskey Park. The Sox moved home plate back eight feet this season to cut down on such home runs, but that didn't make any difference to Deer.

"I don't think I've ever hit one that far," Deer said. "I knew I hit it real well, but I didn't see it. I didn't know it landed on the roof until I reached the dugout."

12 WEEKLY GAMES 6 MYSTERY SONGS WEEKLY

CAN YOU IDENTIFY CLASSIC T.V. THEME SONGS?
GAME RULES:
The Midland Reporter-Telegram, A.M. 1510 KMND Memory Music T.V. Game is based on skill in identifying (6) T.V. show theme songs each week. There will be 12 weekly games beginning Monday, April 7th and ending Friday, June 27th. There will be weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners.
Two excerpts from each of the (6) T.V. show theme songs will be broadcast over A.M. 1510 KMND each week. Excerpts will be broadcast at least six, times daily between 6:00 AM and 6:00 PM Monday through Friday. Each show's two excerpts will be broadcast at least twice during the week, with both excerpts from each theme (12 total) being broadcast at least once by 6:00 PM Thursday of each week.
Excerpts will be numbered one through six. The answer (the title of the show) must be printed or typed on the correspondingly numbered line on the official Midland Reporter-Telegram A.M. 1510 KMND Memory Music TV Game Entry Form. Each week's official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Hand drawn facsimilies of the entire entry form will be acceptable, BUT MACHINE DUPLICATED COPIES ARE PROHIBITED.
CONTESTANTS MAY ENTER ONLY ONCE PER WEEK. The weekly game number must be marked on the lower left of the envelope on the address side. Envelopes must be postmarked by midnight Friday of each week. NO POSTAGE MACHINE CANCELLED ENVELOPES WILL BE ACCEPTED. ONLY ENVELOPES BEARING THE CORRECT POSTAGE AND CANCELLED BY THE U.S. POSTAL SERVICE OR ENTRIES HAND DELIVERED TO THE CONTEST ADDRESS BY 6:00 AM SATURDAY WILL BE ACCEPTED.
The weekly first prize will be awarded to the entrant with the most or all (6) TV shows correctly identified. In the case that more than one entrant has all the shows correctly identified a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd will be awarded to the two entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again in the case more than one entrant having identified all (6) TV shows, a drawing will be held to determine 2nd and 3rd place winners.
The correct answer and the theme song itself along with the two excerpts will be played back twice on A.M. 1510 KMND Saturday morning between 6:00 A.M. and noon. Answers will also be published in Sunday's Midland Reporter Telegram. Weekly winners will be announced each Wednesday afternoon by A.M. 1510 KMND and in the Midland Reporter-Telegram.
It is not necessary to purchase the Midland Reporter-Telegram to play the game. Copies of the MRT are available for free examination at the Midland Reporter-Telegram, 201 East Illinois and the Midland County Public Library.
All winners must sign a release form acknowledging that both the Midland Reporter-Telegram and A.M. 1510 KMND shall have the right to publish, publicize and broadcast his/her name, picture, voice and the fact that he/she won a prize. If the winner is a minor, a parent or guardian must sign a minor's release form prior to the prize being awarded. Winners are responsible for all taxes incurred on prizes.
Judge's decisions will be final in any interpretation of the rules of this game. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Bakcor Broadcasting, Inc. and members of their immediate families are ineligible. The Grand Prize, a cruise on The Mississippi or Delta Queen Steamboat is worth up to $4,000. Does not include bar tab, shore tours or gift shop purchases. It may be used at your convenience based on a 30 day space available basis. It includes round trip airfare to New Orleans.
The winner of the cruise will be determined by a drawing at the end of all 12 weekly games. All weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prize winners will be entered in the drawing.

Jordan guiding Bulls' playoff run

Associated Press

Michael Jordan's return to the Chicago Bulls came just in time to lift them back into the NBA playoff race.

Jordan, who criticized the Bulls' management for limiting his playing time and for trying to delay his return from a broken foot that sidelined him for most of the season, scored 26 points on Monday night as Chicago defeated the Central Division champion Milwaukee Bucks 107-101.

The triumph gave the Bulls a one-game lead over Cleveland in the race for the final Eastern Conference playoff spot. The Cavaliers lost to Detroit 128-104.

"I have not yet found the pace to go all out because I have not played a full game," said Jordan, who returned to action March 15. "But with every passing day my enthusiasm grows stronger and my desire to win gets even better.

"Now that we are one game ahead of Cleveland for that last playoff berth, I can feel the confidence building in this team."

Orlando Woolridge, who also has been hobbled by injuries this season, added 24 points for the Bulls, who will have to play Boston in the first round if they make the playoffs. The Celtics are 64-14, but Jordan said Chicago is ready to challenge any playoff-bound team.

"The Bulls proved they can take the pressure and beat a good team, and with Woolridge coming back, we will be able to handle the added problems in the playoffs," Jordan said.

Woolridge also held high-scoring forward Terry Cummings to nine points before Cummings left the game in the third quarter with a sore left leg. The Bucks, who will play either Washington or New Jersey in the first round of the playoffs, played without leading scorer Sidney Moncrief, who has a sore foot.

"But the bottom line is, that we nearly overcame a 19-point deficit, and I got to see some young players," Bucks Coach Don Nelson said. Reserve Jerry Reynolds paced Milwaukee with 17 points.

Chicago led 98-85 with 5:12 left before the Bucks' Randy Breuer led a comeback with eight points as Milwaukee closed to 100-97 with 2:06 left.

But a pair of free throws and basket by Woolridge ended Milwaukee's five-game winning streak.

Woolridge's 10 third-quarter points helped the Bulls lead by as many as 19 midway through the period. They maintained an 87-74 advantage going into the final 12 minutes.

Nuggets 131, Suns 123

Alex English, who is in a close battle with Dominique Wilkins and Adrian Dantley for the scoring title, scored 11 of his 38 points in the fourth quarter for Denver.

English is third in the scoring race, but the Denver forward is only eight-hundredths of a point behind behind Dantley and .14 behind Wilkins, who is averaging 29.84. All three players have three games remaining.

The defeat put Phoenix two games behind San Antonio in the race for the eighth and final Western Conference playoff berth. The Suns, who face the Spurs Wednesday night, have four games remaining in their attempt to qualify for postseason play for the ninth straight season.

The score was tied 31 times — the last at 119-119 with 3:13 remaining. Calvin Natt, who had 10 of his 28 points in the final period, put Denver ahead to stay, 121-119, on a layup with 3:03 left.

Phoenix, losing for the sixth time in its last seven games, got 25 points from Larry Nance.

Knicks 106, Pacers 104

Louis Orr's hit an 18-foot jumper with three seconds left to break an eight-game losing streak for New York and extend Indiana's loss string to nine.

The Pacers were ahead 103-94 with 2:48 remaining. But New York scored 10 consecutive points, pulling ahead 104-103 on Chris McNealy's two free throws with 22 seconds left.

Indiana's Vern Fleming made a free throw with 13 seconds to go, tying the score and setting up Orr's game-winner.

The victory also guaranteed that the Knicks would not set a team record for losses. New York, 21-59 in 1961-62, is 23-57 with two games to play. Indiana is next worst at 25-54.

Rookie Gerald Wilkins had a career-high 29 points for New York and Orr had 22. Herb Williams led Indiana with 23 points.

Kings 122, Mavericks 115

Reggie Theus had 19 points, including five free throws in the final 76 seconds that assured Sacramento's triumph. Otis Thorpe and Eddie Johnson added 18 points each for the Kings.

Mark Aguirre led Dallas with 24 points, while Rolando Blackman had 23.

Pistons 128, Cavaliers 104

Kelly Tripucka tossed in 23 points and four other Detroit players hit double figures. The Pistons broke the game open in the third quarter with a 15-1 spurt that broke a 79-79 tie.

Vinnie Johnson and Bill Laimbeer added 19 points apiece for the Pistons, who won a club-record 31st home contest.

A&M, LSU game moved

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The Sept. 6 season opener between the Louisiana State University and Texas A&M football teams has been switched to Sept. 13 so ESPN can televise it live nationally that evening from Tiger Stadium, LSU announced Monday.

Sept. 13 was an open date for LSU and became one for Texas A&M when the Aggies' season-opening opponent, North Texas State University, agreed to move its Sept. 13 game against Texas A&M to Sept. 20, said a news release from LSU.

This will be LSU's first appearance on ESPN since its 10-0 victory last season against Kentucky, while ESPN televised six of Texas A&M's last 13 regular season games, the news release said.

Catherine Claggett, owner of Sewing Machine Supply in the Village Shopping Center, is proud to offer the Memory Craft 6000, which is being featured in a special craft series.

With Mother's Day, graduation and many spring weddings just around the corner, Sewing Machine Supply, located in the Village Shopping Center, is proud to offer Singer, New Home and Husqvarna Viking machines. Memory Craft 6000 and the New Home Combi owners can learn how to really enjoy their machines. The Crafts Video Magazine on U.S.A. Cable Network TV started this last Saturday and will air the next 12 weeks at 9:30 a.m. on Saturday. It will teach techniques such as reverse applique, French machine sewing, machine quilting, fagoting, pin-tucking, cross stitch, machine embroidery, monogramming and much more.

"If you've never seen a Memory Craft, come in today for a free demonstration," Ms. Claggett said.

It offers little extras like alligators, butterflies and elongated stitches.

The New Home Combi is also a great sewing machine on one side and an overlock on the other side. It's the best of two machines in one.

Because the New Home machines are made in Japan, the cost is quickly increasing, Ms. Claggett said. So don't delay putting that Mother's Day, graduation or spring bride's gift on layaway.

B and J gets even the deep-down soil out of your carpet, upholstery

Wouldn't you like for your carpet to look like the cleaned portion of the carpet shown? You'll be amazed at the way B and J's Von Schrader method can revive the beauty of your carpet and upholstery. Regular cleaning protects these investments. Call 697-0444 for a demonstration.

Betty and Jerry Massey shampoo upholstery and carpets of every kind, everywhere - your home, your automobile, your store, restaurant or office.

You can remove loose dust by vacuuming and brushing your carpet and furniture, but to remove the soil you must have it shampooed. It revives the colors and makes your home more sanitary and more attractive.

The Masseys recognize that carpet and upholstery is an investment which should be treated with care. Thus, they did a lot of research before they purchased their Von Schrader equipment which replaces antiquated and wet shampooing systems.

The Masseys concluded that the Von Schrader carpet extractor method is the only safe way to clean carpets. You'll understand why.

Ever see a man on hands and knees sponging a carpet? Such old-fashioned procedures will brighten the surface but can't remove the dirt deep in the pile. Result: embedded dirt works up quickly to the surface to resoil the carpet.

In the "steam" method, the "steam" is only hot water that is sprayed into the carpet. And in most cases, little more than half of the dirt bearing water is extracted from the carpet. The remainder is left and can result in soggy carpet, browning, mildew, shrinkage, or damaged backing, padding and floors. Drying time can run up to 24 hours - a long time for any carpet area to be unusable.

Equally inefficient are rotary brush cleaners. The brushes simply scrub into the surface of the carpet, leaving the deep down dirt untouched or even carried deeper into the pile. Then separate vacuuming is required to remove the soil and water.

Only the Von Schrader Carpet Extractor applies a dirt emulsifying dry foam, brushes it thoroughly into the carpet and removes both foam and dirt immediately before it can sink back down into the carpet. This simultaneous operation is an important benefit.

With this revolutionary method, a cylindrical brush shampoos down to the base of the carpet, then a powerful suction lifts out dirt laden foam in seconds.

For carpet and upholstery, the odorless detergent used is beneficial to fabrics. No dirt-attracting soaps or toxic dry cleaning fluids are used by B and J. Because no liquid touches the fabric, just a soft, gently dry foam, that separates the dirt from the fabric, cleaned furnishings are ready to use the same day.

Even your carpet is ready for use in an hour or so. And, there is no danger of shrinkage, dry-rot, browning or mildew. Restaurants and other businesses appreciate the speedy drying, because it means that if the carpet is cleaned in the evening, it will be dry and ready for business the next morning.

That's right, stores and offices with upholstered furniture and carpet who let B and J come in after they close for the day, will find it ready to use the next morning and looking more beautiful than ever.

If you call (915) 697-0444, the experts at B and J will be glad to examine your furniture or carpet and give you an estimate at no obligation. People in surrounding towns are invited to call COLLECT.

For upholstery jobs, the Masseys will take a Von Schrader Upholstery Extractor to your place and quickly get the job done with no mess or odor. The Von Schrader Company pioneered on-location upholstery cleaning nearly 50 years ago.

Just call 697-0444 in Midland (out-of-town customers please call collect) and ask Jerry or Betty for a free demonstration.

The Defensive Driving School makes course enjoyable, worthwhile

Did you know that traffic accidents cost American businesses over $4.3 billion last year? Were you aware that from 1900 to 1984, 2,533,765 Amercians died in U.S. highway accidents? Compare that to the fact that from 1775-1984 1,186,654 Americans died in all the U.S. wars.

The Defensive Driving School, San Miguel Square — Suite 162, teaches specific techniques for preventing traffic accidents. Individuals can enroll in the class. In addition, many companies have found that they can reduce accidents and losses, by sponsoring a defensive driving class for their employees. The Defensive Driving School is ready to provide informative, interesting classes.

While individuals are learning how to improve their performance behind the wheel, they will also be on the way to lowering their insurance rates or, perhaps, removing a traffic violation from their record.

Instructor Bill Wiley also works for the Midland Fire Department. His years of experience as an ambulance driver is one thing that convinced him that an INTERESTING, well-organized and informative defensive driving course is desperately needed by many Midlanders.

"I've pulled so many bodies out of cars," Bill explains. "It makes you start thinking, 'Maybe we can change the attitude of the general public.'"

The Defensive Driving School's eight-hour course is designed to acquaint drivers with changes in law, behind-the-wheel procedures and driving hazards. The course, which Bill presents in an upbeat manner, guides drivers through clear decision-making processes which can be utilized when split second life and death choices have to be made.

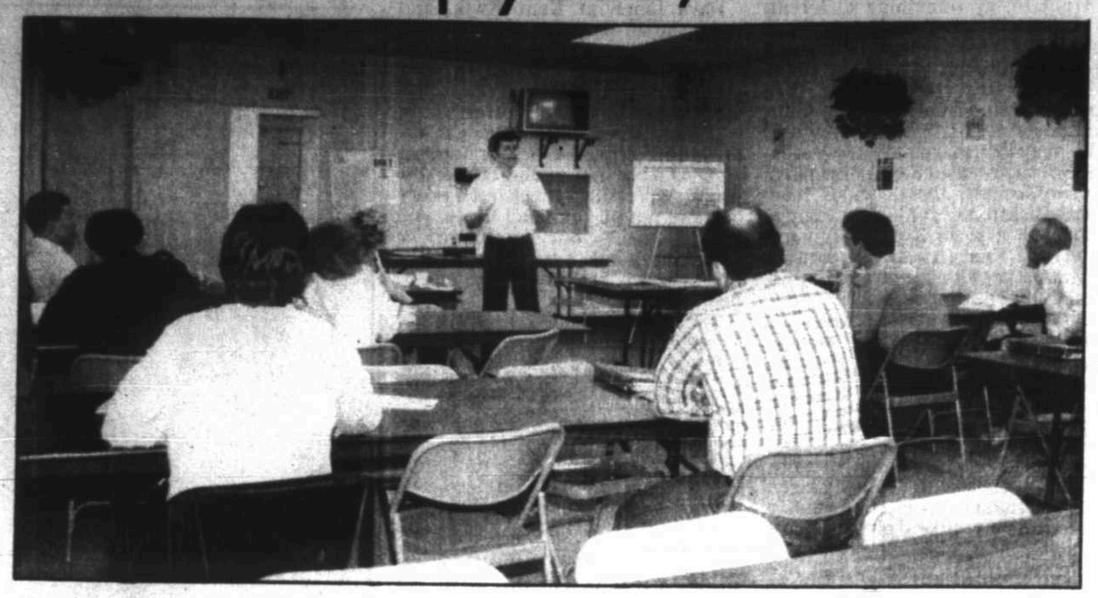
The course is so effective that insurance carriers regulated by the State Board of Insurance can give a ten percent liability insurance premium discount to drivers who complete the course. This results in an average insurance savings of about $40 per year, while the course itself costs only $15. Drivers can take the course every three years to continue to qualify for the discounts.

Another benefit of the course is that one traffic violation can be removed from an individuals driving record every two years. This can help drivers keep satisfactory driving records.

The Defensive Driving School in San Miguel Square gives special attention to making the classes interesting. Classes are held every Monday and Tuesday evening from 6:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. For those who prefer a weekend class, the course is also offered Saturday from 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Recently, Bill has been holding classes for defensive driving instructors. Soon he will be offering a safety program for bus drivers.

With long vacation trips just around the corner, it's a perfect time to learn how to drive defensively. Call (915)697-4578 for registration. The Defensive Driving School, a member of the National Safety Council, is licensed by the Texas Department of Public Safety and is certified by the Texas Safety Association.



Instructor Bill Wiley of The Defensive Driving School in San Miguel Atrium makes the classes interesting as well as informative. Call 697-4578 to find out how these classes will help you cut insurance cost and remove traffic violations from your record.

Add color to your yard now with bedding plants from Lanham's

Midland is in its prime planting season, says Bob Lanham of Lanham Nursery and Landscape Supply. Lanham's, located at 1402 Loop 250 WEST, has bedding plants, vegetable plants, spring bulbs, trees, shrubs and a wide variety of wildflower seeds. In fact, they have just about anything you could want for your yard.

Lanham's recently-completed greenhouse has rows and rows of colorful flowering plants, beautiful tomato plants and healthy pepper plants. All types of container-grown plants can be planted until the warmest part of the summer, Bob says. The selection is tremendous, and now is a great time to brighten up your yard and get your garden growing!

Lanham's even has a special way that apartment dwellers can enjoy a fresh tomato or pepper crop of their own. Just go by Lanham's to learn the secret.

This year, Lanham's has Nature Scape wildflowers. The fact that the seeds come in a can is rather unusual, but the best thing about these seeds is that they are specially blended for Texas.

Lanham's is commited to offering plants which will flourish in the West Texas environment. That's one reason that Lanham Nursery has a complete supply of cactus which is native to this area and the Big Bend.

Lanham's is constantly receiving more and more quality outdoor plants and landscape supplies. You'll find trees, shrubs, grass and summer flowering bulbs at this complete landscape center. Lanham's has everything from small trees to large oak and pecan trees, which they are ready to install for their customers.

Bob says that if you haven't already fertilized your flower bed and lawn, it's time to do it. You'll find just the fertilizer you need at Lanham's.

In addition, Bob warns, "Pay closer attention to your plants this year, because of the warm winter the insects are out in full force."

Aphids, fleas and ticks seem to be the worst this year. Lanham Nursery, Midland's complete landscape supply store, has a wide selection of insecticides, including ready-to-use insecticides and herbicides for the home owner that doesn't like mixing concentrated chemicals and water.

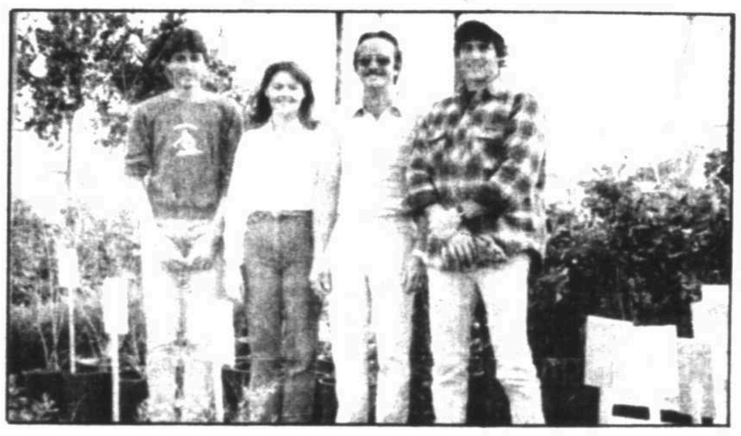
To complete your landscaping tasks, Lanham's has a wide variety of medium and commercial grade tools. Nancy Lanham says they offer quality tools that a homeowner can depend on for a lifetime. Shovels, rakes, Nelson sprinklers and supplies, hoses and hose repair kits are just a few of the items you will find.

One thing that makes Lanham's different from many nurseries is that it does have a complete stock of landscape supplies including rock, railroad ties and boulders. Even PVC parts are kept in stock so if you have a problem with your sprinkler system on Saturday or Sunday, you don't have to wait until Monday to get the needed parts.

For those who like to bring the excitement of gardening inside, Lanham has a wide variety of indoor plants and pots. Bob suggests that growing herbs can be a fun indoor project. Oregano, lemon balm, chives, sweet basil and thyme can all be easily grown in a special bag which comes with the proper soil and enough seed for two crops.

You will always find a knowledgeable person on hand at Lanham's Nursery and Landscape Supply to answer your questions. In addition, Lanham's has a complete rack of free gardening tip materials. If you have a question about your yard, you'll probably find the answer on this rack of helpful hints.

Lanham's Nursery and Landscape Supply is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday from noon to 5:30 p.m.



Manager Curtis Schmid (left to right), owners Nancy and Bob Lanham and landscape foreman Cary Griggs of Lanham Nursery and Landscape Supply offer landscape supplies and expertise, along with plants. They are located at 1402 Loop 250 West.

Allison center to screen for breast cancer

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

In an effort to catch breast cancer even earlier than what can be detected with a self-examination, Allison Cancer Center, in cooperation with Radiology Associates, will initiate a new service beginning Monday — the Allison Breast Screening Service.

"The breast screening will be conducted with state-of-the-art mammographic equipment sensitive enough to detect greater than 90 percent of carcinomas while they are still at a minimal stage," said Allison spokesman Bob Bregant. "The overall concept of this facility is to detect breast cancer while it is still small, localized and manageable."

According to Radiology Associates spokesman, Dr. Ward Terry, early detection of breast cancer "results in a significant increase in survival rates."

"Routine breast self-examination, routine skilled physical examination and routine mammography will significantly decrease the morbidity and mortality rate associated with breast carcinoma in women," said Terry. He added that "current recommendations from the American College of Radiology concerning mammographic screening include initial mammograms at age 40 or earlier if there are symptoms present; screening mammography every other year between the ages of 40 and 50 and annual mammography thereafter."

According to Bregant, self-examinations may not be enough precaution in detecting breast cancer.

"Once you can actually feel a lump, the cancer is at a more advanced state than what can be detected with mammography," he said. "The survival rate is much better if you can catch it while it is at an earlier stage."

While the presence of a lump, dimple, discharge or pain in the breast may be cause for concern, it may not necessarily be cancer, according to Liz Tipps, medical oncology supervisor at Allison.

"Just because a woman has a lump doesn't mean anything," she said in an earlier interview. "Eight out of 10 breast lumps are benign (noncancerous.)"

Still, breast cancer remains a leading cause of death among women, accounting for 18 percent of all cancer deaths among Texas women. Eighty-nine percent of those deaths were among women 45 years of age and older.

Locally, 20 percent of all malignancies diagnosed are breast cancer cases, with about 70 percent of those patients in the early stage, meaning their disease is treatable and easily controlled because it has not had a chance to spread.

Bregant believes women should take the time to get a routine mammogram.

"It's like going for a pap smear. They should go annually," he said.

Breast cancer detection also is a priority item for Women's and Children's Hospital in Odessa, which opened the Regional Breast Care Center a year ago. While the Odessa facility provides both diagnostic, educational and screening services, the Allison center will be for those women who have had no prior signs of possible breast cancer.

"If they have any symptoms at all, they should consult a physician first," said Bregant. "We won't accept anyone with symptoms."

Bregant added the opening of the service is not meant to provide competition for the Odessa center.

"We don't feel we're doing this out of competition," he said. "It's not a profit-making venture. It's a community service."

The new facility will include a patient reception/registration area, waiting room, dressing rooms and a procedure room where the mammograms are performed. The mammograms, along with a radiologist's interpretation, will be sent to the referring physician, or if the patient has no physician, to a physician the patient chooses from a rotating list. Total cost for the screening service is $45. The new service is located on the ground floor of Allison.

"The breast screening will be conducted with state-of-the-art mammographic equipment sensitive enough to detect greater than 90 percent of carcinomas while they are still at a minimal stage. The overall concept of this facility is to detect breast cancer while it is still small, localized and manageable."

Judges: Women in office need toughness

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Family support and toughness are two things women need before they run for office, said several female Permian Basin judges Monday night.

"You have to be so tough. You can't cry. You can't get mad. You can't show your feelings," said Upton County Judge Peggy Garner, who is serving her third term in an elected office.

Ms. Garner was a member of a six-women panel which discussed "Women In Law" at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. The event was sponsored by the American Association of University Women.

"I would never encourage anyone to run unless they really wanted it in their hearts," Ms. Garner said.

Winkler County Judge Frances Clark said women should have encouraging husbands who are not threatened.

"Family has a lot to do with it. It takes a lot of time," Ms. Clark said.

Ector County Judge Jan Fisher said honesty is important when running for a public office.

"It's important to be very honest with people. Also, anytime someone goes into politics, it's a family decision."

Ector County Court-At-Law Judge Carol Gregg said she would not encourage women to run for office unless they really wanted it.

"I don't encourage people to run for office. It's such a traumatic experience. The price for running for office is quite taxing on the soul, pocket book and self-esteem," Ms. Gregg said.

The judges said they did not have higher political ambitions.

"I don't have the ego. I could not subject myself to any more than this," Ms. Gregg said.

The women related humorous stories on being female and practicing law in West Texas.

Ms. Fisher told the audience about being accidentally locked in a cell with a sexual offender for hours after a guard shift change. Ms. Fisher said she went into the cell to counsel the offender on some misdemeanor charges before he was sent to Huntsville. Expecting to be in the cell only a short time, Ms. Fisher ended up being locked in with the inmate for hours after a new guard was unaware she was in the cell.

"They finally let me out. The difference in being a women is that our fears are different," Ms. Fisher said.

Ms. Gregg talked about the awkwardness of reviewing pornographic films with other male law enforcement officials.

"This is something you have to do and you try and act like 'Hey it's no big deal,' " Ms. Gregg said.

Although more women are entering legal professions, Ms. Gregg said it is still an "uphill battle." She said many men become fearful of the large numbers of women entering the profession. What used to be considered a novelty is now seen by some men as a threat with masses of women driving them out of the profession, Ms. Gregg said.

Smith announces she is MISD board candidate

From Staff Reports

Smith

Dorothy Smith, 404 E. Wadley Ave., has announced her candidacy for Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees District 1. She is owner of Juneteen Scholarship Pageant Systems Inc. and is a former employee with MISD, serving as a substitute teacher and home liaison for the federal Title I program.

Mrs. Smith, a Midland resident the past 16 years, attended San Angelo Junior College and Angelo State University where she studied elementary education and psychology.

In announcing her candidacy, Mrs. Smith summarized her reasons for seeking election: "I can see a chance to have a black member of the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees and this is a historical time. Never before have we been able to share that our community does have qualified, potential people to serve on the board.

Salazar announces school board candidacy

From Staff Reports

Salazar

Raul Jimenez Salazar has announced his candidacy for Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees District 2. Salazar, 50, is a delivery man with Domino's Pizza.

Salazar is a member of Permian Peace and Justice Commission, Commission in Solidarity With the People of El Salvador, American Friends Service and the Anti-Draft Council.

He and his wife, Irma, have two children attending Midland High School.

In announcing his candidacy, Salazar summarized his reasons for seeking the District 1 seat: "I was sitting this one out, but several Mexican-Americans convinced me to run. The people that approached me said they wanted someone with guts to serve on the board.

"I am very concerned about the present school board in that it is very, very conservative. As a trustee, I would monitor their actions, if nothing else," he said.

Salazar has resided in Midland the past 37 years. He attended Midland High School and served with the U.S. Army. Afterward, he attended Midland College and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Salazar said his major concern would be to ensure equal rights among minority students. "In some cases they're not being treated fairly," he said.

Women, children to be back on food program

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

About 550 women and children cut off from a federal nutritional program in the Permian Basin will be reinstated, said Rhonda Gage, director of the area Women, Infants and Children program.

No more participants will be cut from the program that had its caseload decreased by 2,600 on April 1.

"The health department feels taking people off in midstream like that can cause more damage in the long run," Ms. Gage said.

The WIC program provides formula, eggs and other nutritional foods to low-income pregnant women and their children.

About 550 women and children in a 17-county area around Midland/Odessa were cut to meet a caseload allocation of 3,400.

The program's case load was cut from 6,000 to 3,400 on April 1 because expected additional funds were not awarded. However, not all 6,000 caseload slots were filled when the cuts became effective. Statewide about 26,000 women and children were to be cut from the food program to meet the decreased budget.

The Texas program is expected to be sustained through the remainder of the year by a 15 percent share of $10 million in supplemental appropriations from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The money will be drawn from an "equity" fund reserved for 32 states including Texas.

The fund is reserved for states that help less than the national average of potential clients. Texas serves about 27 percent of the eligible persons, while the national average served is about 40 percent, said Nancy Cise, state nutrition coordinator for WIC.

In addition to asking for the equity fund release, a delegation of Texas congressmen are seeking an appropriation of $20 million from Congress. The bill was submitted March 27, but a vote on it was delayed due to the Easter recess. Congress is expected to vote on the extra funds by next week, Ms. Cise said.

"The health department has full confidence that the Texas congressional delegation will succeed in obtaining the release of funds currently undistributed by USDA and pass a supplemental appropriation that will sustain the WIC program in Texas at the current level of participation," Ms. Gage said.

Officials: Penalties undeserved

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — Midland officials told the Texas Water Commission Monday they did not deserve administrative penalties for a four-month violation of a state discharge permit, said Max Woodfin, environmental coordinator with the commission.

The city showed the three-member commission that Midland Regional Airport sewage plant had met state standards during March, Woodfin said. City officials attending the hearing included Utilities Director John Lowe, Deputy City Manager Fred Poe and City Attorney David Reagan.

The city could face fines of up to $10,000 per day for violating state discharge permits. The airport sewage plant did not meet state requirements from September to December because of broken equipment, said Lowe.

The commission will decide within the next month whether or not to fine Midland, Woodfin said. If a fine is imposed, a report will be issued and the city has 20 days to respond and request another hearing, he said.

Justices subpoenaed in judicial investigation

AUSTIN (AP) — A Texas Ranger has delivered subpoenas to members of the Texas Supreme Court, setting up a potential showdown between a House investigating committee and high court justices.

Chief Justice John Hill, saying the subpoenas would not be honored, Monday pledged to try to cooperate with a legislative probe. But he said the subpoenas of two justices and some court records violate constitutional princples.

"I want to assure you that we mean no disrespect to the committee in refusing to allow individual justices to respond to the legislative subpoenas, but we believe them to be improper under the separation of powers doctrine," Hill said.

Despite his position against the subpoenas, Hill said he and other justices would be willing to meet openly in a Supreme Court conference room with the House Committee on Judicial Affairs, which voted 6-0 Monday to subpoena Associate Justices C.F. Ray and William Kilgarin.

"Just the principle of a justice of the court being subpoenaed — I don't think that's appropriate. I don't think it's necessary," Hill said.

Committee Chairman Frank Tejeda, D-San Antonio, said the panel is looking into allegations about the proposed transfer of two multi-million-dollar cases involving San Antonio lawyer Pat Maloney Sr. from the 4th Court of Appeals to another appeals court.

The committee subpoenaed Ray to appear Friday to testify on the transfer of cases, communications between court members with attorneys having cases before the court, and the conduct of court members or its employees involving pending cases.

Kilgarlin was subpoenaed to testify about transfers, communications and acceptance of gifts by the court or its employees from attorneys with cases pending before the court.

The subpoena also asked that Hill or another court officer provide records of phone calls between the court offices and Maloney.

Hill said the justices would answer questions about the transfers to "clear the air."

"I want to assure you on behalf of the Supreme Court of Texas of our desire to cooperate completely in every appropriate way with the investigation into these matters," Hill said in a letter to Tejeda.

He also said further allegations — if there are any — should be referred to the State Commission on Judicial Conduct, which was created by the Legislature to investigate charges of misconduct by Texas judges.

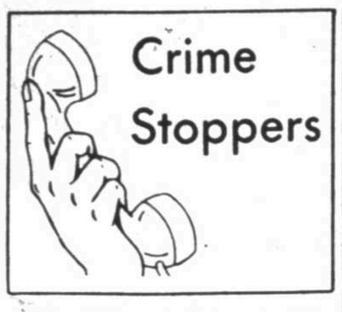
Crime Stoppers seeking information on assault

This week, Crime Stoppers is seeking information on an aggravated assault which occurred in the parking lot of the Pan American Ballroom at 2215 E. Murphy in Odessa.

On Saturday, March 15, Pete Rodriguez was deliberately run over by a Chevrolet Blazer in the parking lot. Rodriguez, who owns the club, was attempting to flag down the vehicle when it ran over him about midnight. After hitting two parked vehicles, the Blazer left the parking lot and was last seen heading north on Grandview.

The Blazer was described as blue and white, and is believed to have damage to the front of the vehicle. Its occupants were two men, one of whom wore a cowboy hat.

Information leading to the arrest and felony indictment of the person or persons responsible for this attack is worth $1,000 cash, this week only, from Crime Stoppers. The program pays cash rewards for tips on other felony crimes. Call 694-TIPS in Midland or 333-TIPS in Odessa, and remember callers can remain anonymous.



Plane makes emergency landing for medical aid

From Staff Reports

A 40-year-old TranStar Airlines co-pilot was hospitalized in critical condition Monday after his airplane made an emergency landing in Midland so he could be treated for heart problems.

TranStar Flight 863, with about 85 passengers aboard, was enroute from Austin to Los Angeles when the first officer, John Nolan of League City, developed heart problems, according to TranStar spokeswoman Shari Cohen.

"The plane was diverted to Midland" about 8:45 a.m., and Nolan was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital, she said this morning by telephone from Dallas.

After another co-pilot was flown to Midland Regional Airport, the flight took off about noon for Los Angeles, Ms. Cohen said.

Nolan remained in critical condition this morning, an MMH spokeswoman said.

TranStar, formerly known as Muse Air, had discontinued its Midland service last week.

In other reports, a 23-year-old Odessa man was listed in stable condition in Odessa Medical Center Hospital this morning after being hurt in a Monday evening traffic accident, according to hospital and Department of Public Safety reports.

Lance Howard was injured about 8 p.m. on West County Road near 42nd Street when his 1982 Datsun pickup ran into the back of a truck-tractor, according to DPS reports.

The truck was driven by James Bonner of Corsicana. Both vehicles were driving south on West County Road when the accident occurred, reports said.

In Sheriff's Office reports, a rural Midland woman reported $252 worth of damage caused by somebody who kicked in the door of her mobile home.

Valinda Draughn, Route 2, Box 198, told sheriff's deputies somebody kicked in her storm door Monday and broke a window in the house, reports said.

Two air conditioners were reported stolen from a house at 409 W. Hamby by Gary Gallagher of Kerrville, according to reports from the Midland Police Department. The burglary occurred sometime between Sunday and Monday. No value was given for the missing items.

Mabee Foundation makes $200,000 grant to CAF

From Staff Reports

HARLINGEN — The J.E. and L.E. Mabee Foundation has made a $200,000 grant to the Confederate Air Force for "aircraft restoration."

The gift is the largest ever received by the CAF from a foundation and is one of the largest cash gifts in the CAF's 29-year history.

Joe Mabee, a Midland rancher and oil operator who is a trustee of the foundation, notified the CAF of the grant.

"We are extremely pleased with the generosity of this award," said Col. Ralph Royce, CAF executive director. "On behalf of all the colonels in the Confederate Air Force, I want to express our gratitude to the trustees of the Mabee Foundation for their confidence, trust and support."

Trustees of the Mabee Foundation are Guy Mabee, chairman, Joe Mabee, John W. Cox, John H. Conway Jr. and Donald P. Moyers.

The CAF recently has developed its American Airpower Heritage Program which has received support of the U.S. Air Force. The program's objective is to project the airpower history of "a great era" — the 1939-1945 World War II period.

"The Mabee Foundation's investment, along with many other gifts," said Royce, "will help to ensure that the CAF fulfills its primary mission: to restore and preserve in flying condition the combat aircraft of World War II."

The CAF is an all-volunteer, nonprofit corporation which restores and flies World War II planes, including trainers, fighters and bombers. The CAF also maintains an "interpretative museum for the display of artifacts and memorabilia used by all United States military services during World War II."

The CAF has membership in all 50 states and in 26 foreign countries. The CAF is active in the Midland-Odessa area through the CAF's West Texas Wing.

Ector commissioners want to replace computer system

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County Commissioners, faced with a possible decrease of about $2 million in revenues over the next three years, also are looking at updating or replacing a computer system that can no longer meet county needs.

In a special session March 31, Ector commissioners met with computer company representatives to hear preliminary proposals and costs for upgrading the county system.

Data processing director Joe Franell brought in what he considered a cross section of computer company representatives to familiarize commissioners with systems that would give the county the flexibility it requires to meet the needs of all departments.

Monday, commissioners again met with computer representatives and heard specific proposals from Basin Business Computing Inc. of Midland and the Dallas-based The Software Group Inc. A representative of the Midland firm estimated it would cost about $400,000 to upgrade the county's computer system to handle all county business, as well as provide for future updating. A representative of the Dallas company said his company has proven software that would allow the county to meet its expanding computer needs.

According to Tom Pace, county fiscal services director, the county's goal is to have all the necessary departments, including the sheriff's office, on the county's main computer. Pace says the county is looking for a total computer package that would also allow the auditor's office to be included. He indicated the county hopes to have the new system operational by Oct. 1.

Estimated cost of upgrading the county's computer system range from $400,000 to almost $1 million. The computer now in use, a Sperry Univac System 80, was installed in the early 1970s.

Precinct 1 Commissioner Bill Tolbert said Monday afternoon Commissioners Court will probably make a final decision next month.

Midlanders give $20,000 to TRC candidate campaign

From Staff Reports

If financial support means votes, State Rep. Ed Emmett is winning the Republican primary for State Railroad Commission in Midland, according to a news release from the candidate's office.

All the candidates were required to file a contributions report with the secretary of state. Eighty-five Midland residents have contributed $20,000 to Emmett's campaign, according to his campaign report.

The largest contributors were H.L. Brown Jr., $5,000; Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Wagner Jr., $2,000; Mr. and Mrs. Jack E. Brown, $2,000; Edward H. Leede, $1,000; Mr. and Mrs. T.B. O'Brien, $500; Mr. and Mrs. James W. Lacy, $500; R.W. Kuzmich, $500; Joseph I. O'Neill Jr., $500.

Reflecting on the level of contributions from this area, Emmett stated, "The contributions are particularly meaningful in light of the current economic situation. It is a clear statement that the Railroad Commission is important and new leadership is wanted by the public. I'm proud of the support."

Emmett currently serves as chairman of the Energy Committee in the Texas House of Representatives. He lives in Harris County and is the son-in-law of T.B. and Winnie O'Brien of Midland.

Cattle raisers blame USDA for drop in prices

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Beef cattle raisers say the U.S. Department of Agriculture has caused the sharpest drop in beef cattle prices in history, and they have asked a judge to stop the USDA from selling dairy cattle for slaughter.

In a copyright story in Tuesday's editions, the San Angelo Standard Times reported that representatives of three beef cattle associations asked U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward to temporarily stop the USDA from selling dairy cattle and to consider a permanent injunction until a more gradual marketing program is established.

Presenting their request to Woodward for a temporary restraining order were representatives of the National Cattlemen's Association, the Texas and Southwestern Cattleraisers Association and the Texas Cattle Feeders Association.

U.S. House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, asked the Secretary of Agriculture Monday to suspend the USDA's dairy cattle buy-out program until a more orderly marketing system is devised, the newspaper reported.

To reduce the country's milk surplus, last year's farm bill authorized the whole-herd buyout program for dairy animals over the next 18 months.

On March 27, the USDA announced it would pay dairymen $1.83 billion to sell 1.55 million dairy cattle for slaughter to reduce milk production.

During the first week of the sales, March 31-April 4, the USDA put more dairy cattle on the market than beef cattle raisers expected. Fed cattle prices dropped $4-$5 a hundredweight or about $35-$45 a head.

That was the sharpest price drop in history for fed cattle, said Texas and Southwestern Cattleraisers Association President John E. Birdwell. He said the industry lost $25 million in one week, and lost $2 billion in equity.

The buyout was scheduled over three periods — April-August 1986, September 1986-February 1987 and March-August 1987 — but Birdwell said USDA figures indicate "that 82 percent could be marketed within the April-August period."

De la Garza said, "it was never the intent of the Congress that they (USDA) would go and buy the top number up front. We wanted to keep a balance, and as a matter of fact, we wrote (the legal language of the buyout) with the advice of the beef cattle industry."

De la Garza said the USDA is within the letter, but not the intent, of the law. He said he sent a telegram to Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng asking Lyng to suspend the program "until a more orderly marketing system is devised which will eliminate or at least minimize the harm being done to the cattle markets nationwide."

Dollar declines

LONDON (AP) — The dollar declined against nearly all major currencies in early European trading today. Gold prices rose.

One Frankfurt dealer said the dollar was weakened partly by reports Monday that U.S. manufacturers' after-tax profits in the fourth quarter of 1985 were an average 3.3 percent of sales, compared with 4.1 per cent in the last three months of 1984.

The dealer said the news also helped focus market attention back on the dollar following Sunday's currency realignment by the eight member nations of the European Monetary System.

However, in Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar gained for the fourth straight trading day. It closed at 181.45 yen, up 0.30 yen from late Monday. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 180.80 yen.

In London, the dollar also fell against the the British pound, which was quoted at $1.4710, compared with $1.4523 late Monday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $340.25 a troy ounce, compared with late Monday's $339. At midmorning Tuesday, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $340.65.

In Zurich, the bid price was $340, up from $339.50 late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $3.32 to close at a bid $340.16.

In New York on Monday, gold rose $4 to close at $339.50.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.35 a troy ounce, up from Monday's $5.31.

Bush attempting to clarify postion on oil prices

By GERALD M. BOYD
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — As Vice President Bush ended the first part of his four-nation tour of the Middle East on Monday, he sought to end the confusion over his views on oil pricing.

The confusion began last week when Bush said there must be "stability" in oil prices and the United States must "not just have a continued free fall" in prices. President Reagan's position has been that market forces should determine prices.

On Monday, Bush and his staff tried to make sure they appeared to be in step with administration policy.

The vice president, who met with Saudi leaders during the weekend, held a news conference in the Saudi oil town of Dhahran. He said, "We didn't go in there trying to lean on somebody to do one thing or another."

From the Saudi viewpoint, "the stronger the price for international oil the better," he said, adding: "That does not coincide with the best interest of the United States."

At the news conference, which followed a a two-and-a-half hour meeting with King Fahd, Bush said the interests of Saudi Arabia and the United States were "not identical" when it comes to oil prices. Unlike the Arab country, he said, the United States benefits "greatly from low prices and ought to be pleased."

Bush declined to specify a price at which the oil market would be considered stable. "I honestly can't set a price," he said. "I don't know where we find this balance."

CRAIG L. FULLER, Bush's chief of staff, said in a telephone call from Bahrain, the party's next stop, that the vice president was attempting to use a news conference to put to rest the criticism and confusion that followed his remarks in Washington early last week.

Fuller said the vice president had stressed to the Saudis that he was not presenting any change in the administration's market-oriented policy.

At the same time, he said, Bush made it known that the administration supports a strong domestic oil industry and that rapidly declining oil prices have the potential of disrupting that industry.

"What he had been doing in the last two days in Saudi Arabia was to talk to them to some extent that when oil prices fall rapidly to low levels there is some displacement in the oil industry," Fuller said. "The fact that he's got good understanding of the issue and the region allowed him to elaborate more on the problem."

Oil prices have plunged about 60 percent since last autumn, with a flood of oil — much of it from Saudi Arabia — glutting the market. In Monday's trading, petroleum rose above $14 a barrel on news that Norwegian oilfield workers had gone on strike.

In his opening statement at Monday's news conference, Bush said the weekend discussions had focused "for the most part" on security and economic issues and that he had "reiterated the desire to see market forces at work." He added that he supported "the lowest possible prices consistent with the fact that we need a strong domestic oil industry for our national security."

FULLER ACKNOWLEDGED on Monday that Bush had failed to make his position clear at a March 31 Washington news conference, where he said he would talk about price stability while in Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil producer.

In the United States the fallout from Bush's remarks raised questions within the administration about his handling of sensitive policy issues and about whether Bush was intentionally deviating from administration policy or had simply discussed oil prices in more detail than he should have.

The vice president comes from Texas, a major oil-producing state, and started his career as an offshore oil driller in Texas.

At the Washington news conference, the vice president added a warning that when oil prices fall rapidly to low levels, there is a possibility that some workers in the oil industry can be "economically displaced" and that national security considerations are raised by a potential lack of oil.

Edward P. Djerejian, a White House foreign affairs spokesman, said on Monday that Bush, in the talks with Saudi leaders, had not discussed setting oil prices and that such an objective had not been a part of the mission.

Speaking for the administration, Djerejian said: "We continue to believe that the way to achieve real price stability is to let the free market work. We do think that real price stability will be obtained by allowing the free market forces to work."

ALTHOUGH Djerejian said that there was no difference between the vice president and Reagan on the issue, another senior administration official said that Bush had made a mistake.

Seminar explains how to obtain financing for small businesses

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

It's not always easy to get, but there is financing available for small businesses who want to expand or need capital, a group of about 30 businessmen and women were told last night.

They were attending a seminar on "Small Business Expansion and Diversification Financing," sponsored by the Midland Chamber of Commerce, Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, the Eastside Economic Development Task Force and the Governor's Small Business Revitalization Program.

Sally Lovelland, a director with the National Development Council, a non-profit economic development council, told the audience that small businesses create the most new jobs, usually permanent jobs. "We want jobs. And by helping small businesses grow and diversify, we create new, permanent jobs," she stated. She noted that, however, small businesses often can't get long-term financing at a fixed rate with low down payments.

"My job is to put public funds with private funds and help businesses do the paperwork in a manner that it will be accepted," she said. "The Council is trying to develop a skilled staff at the state level who know loan programs inside out - the kinds of deals, the bankers and their personalities, so they can match them with businesses who qualify." She is working closely with the Texas Economic Development Commission, which was started by Governor Mark White when he took office. The rule of thumb for these programs is that businesses should create one job for every $10,000 to $15,000 of public money. She said lending cannot cross state lines.

Union Carbide selling assets, cutting jobs

By PETER S. HAWES

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — Union Carbide Corp. continued its reorganization Monday by announcing that it intends to sell an additional $1 billion of assets, eliminate 1,200 more jobs and turn its 611-acre corporate campus into a commercial park.

The company said in a separate statement that it had sold its worldwide battery products business — except in India — including the brand name Eveready as well as manufacturing facilities in the United States and 23 foreign countries, to the Ralston Purina Co. for $1.4 billion.

Battery products is the first substantial chunk of Carbide's consumer businesses to be sold according to a January agreement in which the proceeds are to be distributed to shareholders as a special dividend. Still to be sold are the company's Glad plastic products and STP and Prestone automotive products operations.

Seagull nominates director

HOUSTON (SWN) Sam F. Segnar, recently retired Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of HNG/InterNorth, Inc., has been nominated to serve on the Board of Directors of Seagull Energy Corporation. Segnar will stand for election to the Board at the Company's 1986 annual meeting in Houston on May 13.

Segnar, who now resides in The Woodlands, Tex., retired from Omaha-based HNG/InterNorth in late 1985 after a career with InterNorth that began in 1961. He became an officer in 1966, President of a subsidiary in 1971 and President and Chief Operating Officer of InterNorth, as well as a Director, in 1976. He was elected Chief Executive Officer of InterNorth in 1980 and Chairman of the Board in 1984.

"We are delighted that Mr. Segnar has consented to be nominated for election to our Board," said Seagull Chairman Barry J. Galt. "His proven abilities and exerience will be invaluable to us as we direct Seagull during the difficult times that currently beset our industry."

In a related development, Seagull also disclosed that the Board has amended the Company's bylaws to provide for a classified Board of Directors.

The amended bylaw provides for the Board to be divided into three classes, each serving for staggered three-year terms, effective with the election of Directors at the 1986 annual meeting. At that meeting, shareholders will be asked to elect three Directors to terms expiring in 1987, three others to terms expiring in 1988 and three more to terms expiring in 1989.

In connection with classifying the Board, the Directors have amended other bylaw provisions so that Directors may be removed only for cause. As amended, a vote of two-thirds of the Company's shareholders would be required in order to amend the new provisions.

You hear a lot of talk about tax reform these days. But that's all it is. A lot of talk.

Briercroft Savings has actually done something about it. We came up with a one-year CD that can defer your taxes on the interest earned. We call it the TaxBreak CD.

Here's how it works.

Deposit as little as $500 in a TaxBreak CD. Then wait. For one year.

When a year's up, you collect your interest in one lump sum. Only at that time are you liable for taxes on the interest earned.

If you'd like to take a break from paying taxes on your interest earned this year, and who wouldn't, sign up for Briercroft's all-new TaxBreak CD.

GM heads Fortune 500 list as Exxon slips to second

NEW YORK (AP) — The dropping oil market greased the skids as Exxon Corp. slipped from atop the Fortune 500 list of biggest U.S. industrial corporations, allowing General Motors Corp. back into the top spot after a six-year absence.

Fortune magazine said Monday that GM's revenue last year of $96.4 billion, an all-time high, easily lifted the automaker over New York-based Exxon, which had revenue of $86.7 billion and was bumped into second place.

The Time Inc. business publication, which first put out the list in 1955, compiles it on the basis of annual revenue. GM held the No. 1 spot for the first 20 years but Exxon dethroned it in 1975, when oil companies were profiting immensely from the energy crisis.

GM regained the title in 1978, held it in 1979, dropped to No. 2 in 1980, slid to No. 3 behind Exxon and Mobil Corp. in 1981 and 1982 and moved back to No. 2 in 1983 and and remained there in 1984.

In an advance release of the list's annual publication in its April 28 issue, Fortune said the latest ranking reflected serious troubles in U.S. industry, which has been struggling because of fierce foreign competition.

Overall sales advanced only 2.8 percent, less than the inflation rate, and profit sank 19.1 percent, the worst performance since the 1982 recession, the magazine said.

"Unable to wring satisfactory returns from their traditional businesses last year, many of the 500 companies put efforts into rearranging their existing resources and buying new ones," it said.

At least 173 companies repurchased significant amounts of their own stock, the magazine said, while 14 bought other companies on the list.

The magazine said 11 others were transformed by leveraged buyouts, transactions in which the companies were purchased with mostly borrowed money, repaid through their earnings or the sale of some of their assets.

The depressed oil market forced most big U.S. petroleum companies down in rank, with the exception of Mobil, which retained the No. 3 spot because of its acquisition of Superior Oil Co., and Chevron Corp., which moved from No. 11 to No. 7 because of its takeover of Gulf Oil Corp.

Texaco Inc. was bumped from No. 5 to No. 6 by International Business Machines Corp., Amoco Corp. fell from 10th to 11th and Shell Oil Co. fell from 13th to 14th. In addition, lower revenue from Du Pont Co.'s Conoco Inc. subsidiary pushed it from seventh to ninth.

Elsewhere among the top 10, Ford Motor Co. remained at No. 4, AT&T repeated at No. 8 and General Electric Co. fell to No. 10, down from No. 9.

Other notables included 4-year-old Compaq Computer Corp., which made the list in record time, debuting at No. 463. Apple Computer, now No. 192, was the former record holder, making the list in 1982, five years after its founding.

CARBIDE—

The agreement, combined with a stock purchase plan, helped the company fend off an attempted takeover by GAF Corp.

The company last week sold its interest in Sony-Eveready, a Japanese venture, to Sony Corp. for $12 million.

Carbide Chairman Warren M. Anderson said negotiations were continuing for the sale of the remaining consumer units, but he could not predict when those business would be sold.

Union Carbide's president and chairman-designate, Robert D. Kennedy, said the additional divestitures announced Monday will make Carbide by year's end a "somewhat smaller and much more focused" company lower in debt and improved in both short-term earnings and cash flow.

Kennedy said the company should have annual sales of about $7 billion. In 1984, Carbide's sales were $9.5 billion. Last year, they were about $9 billion.

Since Jan. 1, 1985, Union Carbide had sold more than $2.1 billion in assets, including the battery sale, and has promised to unload about $1.1 billion more. It has trimmed nearly 8,000 people from its international workforce, which as of mid-1985 numbered more than 98,000.

Kennedy said in a letter to employees that the divestitures announced Monday will take place over the next 18 months.

Kennedy said the 1,200 new jobs eliminated would be among corporate and company staff, both domestic and international.

SEMINAR

She went on to say that there are a number of programs for fixed asset programs - building and equipment, some working capital programs, but virtually no venture capital programs or refinancing.

She described various programs available, such as the Industrial Revenue Bond. IRBs allows cities, counties and conservation and reclamation districts to form non-profit industrial development corporations and issue tax-exempt bonds for manufacturing and industrial projects. The rate is usually 70 to 80 percent of the current prime, and buyers of the bonds pay no income taxes on interest earned on the bonds.

Another program is the Texas Small Business Industrial Development Corp., which is the statewide issuer of tax-exempt industrial revenue bonds. Under this program, the corporation can collect projects across the state and pool them under one umbrella bond, which are then sold to a bank or other entity, lending the proceeds to a private user at a lower interest rate. This is useful for smaller projects in the $250,000 to $750,000 range, Lovelland said.

She also mentioned the state's Economic Development Revolving Loan Fund. "The state makes a grant to the city, who makes a loan to you, and you pay back the city," she explained. Applications are made quarterly. The money comes from the state's block grant fund. According to Lovelland, Texas gets about $40 million in block grant funds. This program will only lend 50 percent of the financing, and can only lend between $100,000 to $500,000. Lovelland mentioned that cities with populations over 50,000 gets their own money, estimating that Midland gets $660,000 and Odessa about $1 million in grant money.

Another program discussed is the Rural Loan Fund, which provides 40 percent financing for small industrial projects.

One of the most successful financing programs is the Small Business Association's 7(a) program, according to Lovelland. This is a guarantee program in which the SBA will guarantee up to 90 percent of a loan, which can then be used to finance working capital or fixed asset acquisition. Working capital loans are generally for 3 to 7 years, and the SBA will guarantee up to 20 years for fixed assets loans. Lovelland stated that research indicates that at least 50 percent of the long-term working capital loans are SBA guaranteed. For this reason, she said, it is unlikely the SBA will be abolished.

A similar program is the SBA 503, which offers small businesses fixed interest loans at below market rate in order to acquire fixed assets. The SBA provides 40 percent of the cost and asks the bank to provide 50 percent with the business putting up 10 percent of the equity. Lovelland noted that Texas is fourth in the nation in generating 503 loans.

She said that, in most cases, the public lender takes a second or third lien position, giving the commercial lender first priority in being repaid. She also noted that, in every case, the business should have complete a complete business plan, including financial statements, business projections, and a clear reason why the loan is wanted. She stressed that the National Development Council and the Texas Economic Development Commission do not charge for their services.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

IRAs have been around since '74

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have been employed by a bank for about six months and am amazed at the large amounts a number of our customers have in individual retirement accounts. I don't see how they could have accumulated so much, in such a relatively short period of years.

IRAs have been available only since 1982. My bank doesn't pay high enough interest for IRAs to have grown to the huge balances these customers show.

Each of the customers has made the correct annual IRA contribution on every transaction I have handled. But I don't want to get in trouble with the Internal Revenue Service for aiding and abetting wrongdoers. Could it be that these people evaded income tax, by putting into their IRAs much more money than the law allows in previous years?

Doyle

A. That's most unlikely. The IRS computers are programmed to spot excess IRA contributions. Your bank and every other IRA trustee is required to keep tabs on those contributions and report them on Form 5498. One copy goes to each IRA participant, the other to the IRS.

You're mistaken about the life span of IRAs. They were first authorized in 1974 by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act.

Back then, only working people who had "earned income" — from salary, wages, commissions, tips, fees and such — and who were not in a tax qualified retirement plan could make annual contributions to IRAs. And the annual IRA contribution was limited to 15 percent of earned income or $1,500 — $1,750 for a spousal IRA of a married couple, only one of whom was working.

The big change came in 1982, when the Economic Recovery Tax Act allowed everyone to make annual contributions of 100 percent of his or her earned income, but no more than $2,000 — $2,250 in the case of a spousal IRA.

Also, since 1974, anyone who receives a lump sum distribution representing an employer's contribution to a tax qualified retirement plan has been allowed to put it into a rollover IRA.

Some of your bank's IRA customers might have started making annual IRA contributions 12 years ago. Others might have set up rollover IRAs involving very large amounts.

• • •

Q. My individual retirement account is at a local savings and loan association. I put $1,500 a year into my IRA from 1974 through 1981 and $2,000 a year into it from 1982 through 1985 — a total of $20,000. My Dec. 31, 1985, IRA statement shows a balance of $32,043.27.

I feel my balance should be much higher. Where did I go wrong?

A. "Wrong" is too strong a word. There's no doubt that you could have done better by putting your IRA money elsewhere. Then, again, you might have done worse.

When you have an IRA at a S&L or bank, you money usually goes into certificates of deposit. Different S&Ls and banks pay different interest rates on CD. Obviously, your S&L is not a high interest payer.

At this point, it would be logical to move your IRA. You can do that through a "trustee-to-trustee" transfer, with no tax consequences. But, before you do, check to be sure the S&L won't levy early withdrawal penalties. You can avoid those bites by moving part of your IRA money, each time an IRA CD matures.

• • •

Q. I am aware that every bank, savings and loan association and credit union can set the interest it pays on certificates of deposit. But isn't there some rule that they all have to pay the same rates on individual retirement account CDs? If there isn't, there should be.

A. There's no such rule. Each depository institution is free to pay whatever interest rate it decides on all types of deposits. That includes IRAs and other accounts.

• • •

Q. Do the wild swings in the stock market that often take place on days stock index options and futures contracts on stock index options expire have anything to do with the basic values of individual stocks?

A. Not if you judge a stock's basic value by the intrinsic worth of the company in which it represents a share of ownership — the company's assets, earnings and dividends.

Nonetheless, the value of any stock on any day is the price at which it can be bought and sold in the marketplace. A change in the stock's price — brought on by any reason — certainly changes that basic value.

Imelda Marcos: Elite feet

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — What's longer than the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge? Taller than the World Trade Center, the Empire State Building, the Sears Tower and the Chrysler Building combined? What would take nearly 10 years to wear and several lifetimes to wear out?

Imelda Marcos' 3,000 pairs of shoes.

A world-class shopper and an acquisitor of galactic proportions, Imelda Marcos, in her flight from the Philippines last month, left behind a staggering personal inventory: 500 black bras, 3,000 pairs of panties, five shelves of Gucci handbags, 167 racks of dresses, 68 pairs of gloves. And that's just for starters.

But nothing — not her $40,000 flower bills, not her Harry Winston baubles, not even her $10,000 Pratesi bed sheets — has better captured the world's outrage over the excesses of the Marcos regime than Imelda's 3,000 pairs of size 8½ shoes.

Not since the days of Marie ("Let-them-eat-cake") Antoinette has there been such an uproar. Photographs of THE SHOES — assembled on racks like sale days at Bloomingdale's — have been seen 'round the world. They've become the focus of controversy and the butt of countless jokes. And for those who dare to look inward, perhaps a subject too sensitive to touch.

"I can't imagine 3,000 pairs of shoes," said Alison Lurie, the author of "The Language of Clothes," who counts about 20 pairs of shoes in her own closet. "The human life is just not that long. That's a pair of shoes every day for almost 10 years."

NO ONE knows precisely what Imelda's shoes cost, but shoe designer David Evins, who has crafted footwear for Nancy Reagan, ventured a guess. "From what little I know, those were very expensive shoes," he said. "So if you multiply 3,000 by an average of $200, that's $600,000 worth of shoes."

Just about enough to feed, clothe and house 1,000 Filipinos for 12 months. Most people live in poverty in the Philippines, where the average per capita income is estimated at $600 a year.

Just how much do 3,000 pairs of shoes represent?

Well, that figure is less than the inventory at Saks Fifth Avenue. The Manhattan branch alone, a spokeswoman said, stocks 79,000 pairs of women's shoes.

Still, if a woman bought 10 pairs of shoes a year, it would take 300 years to catch up with Imelda.

Then there is this to consider: A standard size 8½ woman's shoe measures 10¾ inches in length, according to the National Shoe Manufacturers' Association. Laid toe-to-heel, 3,000 pairs would stretch 5,375 feet — 95 feet more than a mile.

What do you think of a woman who has 3,000 pairs of shoes? "I'd say she was very well-traveled," Barbara Cartland, the romance novelist and step-grandmum of Princess Diana, said from England the other day. Asked about the former first lady of the Philippines, Cartland, who has about 250 pairs of shoes, said, "I paraphrase the duchess of Windsor when she said a woman can't be too rich, too thin or have too many pairs of shoes."

There are some on this side of the Atlantic who might agree.

Susan Bennis, who is one-half of the shoe design team of Bennis and Edwards, owns 95 pairs — and never lets the number go over 100. "When it does, I give the balance to charity," she said.

ANOTHER SELF-AVOWED shoe freak is Anne Fox, a New York actress whose 100 pairs fill one of the three rooms in her apartment.

Although Fox said the prospect of owning 3,000 pairs of shoes would be "a real peak experience," she sees a darker side to the issue. "With Mrs. Marcos, I think the penchant reaches further than shoes," she said. "There are the political implications. She's supposedly a leader figure and people in her country were starving."

"I have absolutely no idea how many pairs of shoes she has," said Wendy Weber, a spokeswoman for First Lady Nancy Reagan.

Mrs. Reagan's Soviet counterpart, Raisa Gorbachev, doesn't claim to be profligate either. "I don't know how many pairs of shoes she has," said Valentin G. Karymov, senior counselor at the Soviet Embassy in New York. "Maybe 10 pairs. No more. It couldn't be more because there's no need to have more. My wife has just about a dozen. Another Soviet woman has maybe more, maybe less. But I'd say just about 10 pairs of shoes. It's enough for all seasons."

What a Difference a Month Makes: At the Malacanang Palace in Manila, Imelda Marcos' shoes are among the items that Philippine President Corazon Aquino displays to underscore the opulent lifestyle of the former first family. But presidential spokesman Rene Saguisag said the other day that he doesn't recall Aquino's ever discussing the shoes, esthetically or otherwise.

Aquino has long maintained a low-key public image, usually wearing a simple yellow dress, which was her campaign color. But Saguisag noted that she has surprised aides three times in the first month of her six-year term by showing up at the office clad in other than yellow. But he hasn't noticed whether she has worn different shoes.

"I always look at her in the eye, not the feet," he quipped.

DEAR ABBY

Plane carries heavyweight customer

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A reader recently recommended a solution for fat people who couldn't fit into a regular seat on a commercial airline: Buy two coach seats and remove the arm rest between them. For some heavyweights, that may not be enough.

I submit the following Associated Press release, March 6:

"FRANKFURT, West Germany — Japan Air Lines removed six seats from the first-class section of a Boeing 747 Wednesday to make room for an 875-pound man flying to Tokyo.

"Albert Pernitsch, 29, of Graz, Austria, claims to be the world's heaviest man. He told reporters at Frankfurt airport that he was traveling to Japan to exhibit himself at a Tokyo fair.

"Japan Air Lines removed six seats and reinforced the plane's floor to install a special seat for Pernitsch, airport spokeswoman Sigrun Weiss said.

"They also installed a toilet with a desk-sized seat concealed by a curtain and a specially designed safety belt for the extra-large passenger, she said.

"A Japan Air Lines spokesman in Frankfurt declined to say how much Pernitsch paid for his flight." — VERMONT READER

DEAR READER: At least no one had to ask, "Where's the beef?" It was in first class.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to respond to "William in Butler, Pa.," who describes himself as "34, fairly good-looking, unemployed and tired of being turned down by greedy women because I'm broke."

I am a 36-year-old single woman, and although I would dearly love to meet a nice man, I, too, would hesitate to date a man like William. I'm not after anyone's money, as I have a good job and can support myself. It's just that I expect an adult person to work.

William, if you are unemployed because you were recently laid off from your job, you have my sympathy. But perhaps your priority at this time should be finding another job, rather than trying to date.

Are you unemployed because you dropped out of high school, or never bothered to get any vocational or professional training? No sympathy. Get some.

Are you unemployed because you refuse to take any of the low-paying jobs that seem to be available right now? No sympathy. Check the want ads. Any job is better than no job.

Are you unemployed because you are physically disabled? I personally know paraplegics and quadriplegics who hold down good jobs that require mental and verbal skills. This goes for deaf and blind people, too, who develop their skills. No sympathy.

Maybe the women who refuse to date you are not greedy. They may assume that you lack motivation. Or perhaps they are afraid to try a relationship that they may have to finance. My advice — stop whining and get a job. Nobody likes a loafer. — DUTCH TREAT IN MASTIC, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in connection with the letter concerning the cousins who came to a wedding celebration and filled their plastic bags with food to take home. You said it wasn't proper.

Your answer was right on the button, but this problem was discussed 3,500 years ago, and the answer can be found in the Old Testament in Deuteronomy 23:24: "When thou comest into thy neighbor's vineyard, then thou mayest eat grapes, thy fill at thine own pleasure; but thou shalt not put any in thy vessel." — GEORGE H. HARTMAN, PURCHASE, N.Y.

AT WIT'S END

Television viewing takes away time

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

You'll pardon me if I don't have a clever beginning to this column. I don't have time.

There are 24 hours in every day. I used to watch television six hours and 44 minutes a day, leaving me with 17 hours and 16 minutes.

After I scheduled seven hours and five minutes to sleep and two hours and 15 minutes to eat, it only left me seven hours and 56 minutes to write.

Then we got cable television and what with the news channel, first-run movies, MTV, country western, spiritual, entertainment and sports, my viewing cut into my work day. Then my husband said, "While you're watching that channel, you're missing a good show on the other channel," so we bought a VCR so we could tape one show and watch another.

But when do you watch the shows you've taped?

I took time away from my two hours and 15 minutes for eating and ate in front of the TV. Naturally, we began to buy cassettes to fit the VCR. I bought Jane Fonda so I could get my body in shape, but I had to take time away from my seven hours and 5 minutes of sleep to do it.

On my birthday, a son rented two movies as a present. I panicked. They had to be viewed by 10 a.m. the next morning. Already, I had a stack of shows that had been taped that I hadn't had time to view. I put the movies ahead of the tapes, rescheduled Jane Fonda for 4 a.m. and watched "Terms of Endearment" and "Easy Money" at 5 and 7 a.m. It was close but I made it.

Other scheduling problems were not so easily resolved. Before dinner one night I approached the VCR with my Julia Child cassette. My husband was watching Dan Rather. When I asked him to watch Dan in the bedroom, he said it wouldn't do any good as he was taping a "MASH" rerun on the other channel. I went into the kitchen, turned on another set and watched "Wheel of Fortune" and we didn't eat until 9:30 in front of "Hill Street Blues."

As the weeks go on, I feel the pressure more and more. With the VCR taping shows day and night, with my husband running from room to room, channel-searching to see what we're missing, the new cassettes on everything from how to repair your plumbing to how to be more assertive, the new films and video music, we're falling behind.

Already, we're beginning to cut corners. We've got "60 Minutes" down to 30, "20-20" to 10-10 and anything on World War II, we fast-forward because we know the ending.

Wheelchair chic sold

Copley News Service

Schoolteacher Hollyn Fuller, permanently disabled by an auto accident and confined to a wheelchair, found that none of her clothes fit anymore.

"My pants rode high above my ankles and my blazers bulged open at the bust," she said.

Shopping for new clothes still left her unsatisfied, since ready-made clothing wasn't cut for the seated figure. She still wished to be well dressed and "wanted flattering clothing that fit well and didn't catch in my wheelchair wheels."

So she established Pirca Fashions, a mail-order house offering custom-fit, stylish fashions for disabled men and women in versions for both standing and seated figures.

GENERAL NEWS

Colonialism leaves legacy of tribal conflict

EDITOR'S NOTE — Borders drawn in the palaces of Europe in the last century lie today at the root of many of modern Africa's problems. Borders sliced through ancient tribal territories, dividing different ethnic groups under different colonial flags. In today's Africa, national borders and national politics still separate many tribal peoples, their cultures and way of life.

By DAVID CRARY

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — From Sudan to South Africa, on shantytown streets and desert battlefields, tribal conflicts are fragmenting Africa's nations and tormenting its peoples.

Even the anti-apartheid movement in South Africa often is beset by tribal rivalry that in recent months has seen black groups fighting each other, sometimes shattering black unity in the battle against white government.

African tribalism has triggered wars and toppled governments, just as it has wrecked courtships and thwarted job-seekers.

In Kenya, a woman of the Luhya tribe trying to buy corn meal during a drought-induced food shortage is turned away by a shopowner selling only to his fellow Kikuyus.

In Uganda, where guerrillas who took power in January now are preaching national unity, tribal affiliation has cost more than a half million lives during two decades of chaos.

"It is common knowledge that tribalism is a killer," said Willie Masururwa, a political commentator in Zimbabwe, where the Ndebele and Shona tribes have been sparring for 150 years. "Anybody who has been hanging around since Africa began to rule itself has seen tribalism butchering many people on our continent."

Before colonialism, the tribes functioned as distinct nationalities. They sometimes warred with one another but were rarely locked in the day-to-day friction that began when they were lumped together by Europeans who drew the borders of their possessions without regard for the peoples, languages and cultures within them.

THE KENYAN sociologist Katama Mkangi wrote in a recent article that colonial powers encouraged tribal jealousies as part of a divide-and-rule strategy. He said the divisions have been maintained since independence by Africans with a stake in preserving the status quo on a continent with not enough to go around.

"It is very safe to say that the producers, sustainers and purveyors of tribalism in Africa are the rich, the powerful and the educated," Mkangi wrote.

In South Africa, most anti-apartheid activists accuse the government of exacerbating tribal differences through the establishment of 10 black homelands.

Recent fighting in Natal between Zulus and Pondos is considered tribal conflict by the South African government, but critics say the homeland system aggravated the problem. Zulus living in the KwaZulu homeland felt threatened by Pondo squatters, who came illegally to the fringes of Durban to compete for scarce jobs since there are far fewer opportunities in their homeland of Transkei.

Tribal divisions are a factor also in current civil wars in Chad, Angola and Sudan, as they were in the devastating Biafran war in Nigeria in the late 1960s.

Tens of thousands of people were slaughtered during power struggles between the Tutsi and Hutu tribes of Burundi and Rwanda in the 1960s and early 1970s, and the toll continues to climb across the continent.

Despite the awkwardness of the colonial boundaries, today's African leaders have repeatedly endorsed their validity in the quarter-century since much of the continent became independent.

The late Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana, among others, argued that redrawing borders along ethnic lines would produce a continent composed of hundreds of small tribal states.

MANY AFRICAN countries have adopted one-party political systems in an effort to blunt the influence of ethnic factions, and many leaders denounce tribalism as an obstacle to national development. But their words often go unheeded.

In Kenya, where the largest of roughly 40 tribes comprises less than 20 percent of the population, President Daniel arap Moi describes tribalism as a cancer and "the foundation of all evil." He has ordered employers to stop hiring on a tribal basis and urged teachers to counter ethnic prejudices among their pupils.

But in spite of Moi's appeals, the lonely hearts ads in Kenya's Express magazine carry such strictures as "partner should not be a Luo" or "Kikuyu — prefers same."

Uganda's new president, guerrilla commander Yoweri Museveni, says his National Resistance Army is committed to ending tribal conflicts.

Julius Nyerere, who recently retired as president of Tanzania, was relatively successful in creating a sense of national identity in his country, which has more than 100 tribes. One of his tactics was to encourage the use of Swahili as the national language.

President Jean-Baptiste Bagaza of Burundi has sought to heal the rift between his minority Tutsi tribe and the majority Hutus who were slaughtered by the tens of thousands in 1972. He now says there are no Tutsis or Hutus, only Burundians, and he has brought Hutus into the government for the first time.

But some aspects of tribalism are beneficial. Tribal links often create an informal welfare system, helping people in the big, polyglot cities obtain food and financial support through tribal connections. In an alien metropolis, contact with a fellow tribesman is a powerful antidote to homesickness.

AFRICANS ADHERE to their tribes for the same reasons other people adhere to their own ethnic groups — a sense of belonging to an extended family, shared traditions and language, resentment toward groups perceived as economic or political rivals.

Africa's main distinctions are the high number of tribes and the relative newness of its nations. National identity and patriotism are relatively unfamiliar to many Africans, although in most cases they are becoming steadily stronger.

Many Africans resent the contentions of others that tribalism is exclusively an African problem. They contend that their ethnic conflicts are not essentially different from those that have sparked wars and violence in Europe and elsewhere for centuries.

The European drive for formal political control of Africa did not start in earnest until the 1880s, even though commercial contacts and slave trading began almost four centuries earlier.

An international conference in Berlin in 1884-85 — often described as the forum where Africa was carved up — did not in itself partition Africa but set guidelines for the Europeans to do so without major squabbling among themselves. The participants were the Austro-Hungarian Empire, Belgium, Britain, Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Portugal, Russia, Spain, Sweden, Turkey and the United States.

The conference secured free trade in the Congo Basin, free navigation on the Congo and Niger rivers, and bound the 14 signatories to respect any annexation of coastal Africa if accompanied by effective occupation.

BRITAIN, FRANCE and Portugal already had major colonial efforts under way, but the conference spurred Belgian and German initiatives to claim territory. By 1900 all of Africa except Morocco, Ethiopia and Liberia was controlled by Europeans.

One article of the Berlin act called for "preservation and improvement of the native tribes," but the colonial governments interpreted this in whatever manner seemed convenient.

In some cases, colonial borders cut through a people's domain. The warriors of the Masai tribe, for example, were split between Kenya and Tanganyika (now Tanzania). The the Somalis now live in four different countries, and in one instance provoked a war between Somalia and Ethiopia.

Long-running tribal feud dominates politics in young Zimbabwe

By MICHELLE FAUL

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — One of Africa's longest-running tribal feuds is in Zimbabwe, the continent's youngest nation.

More than 50 years before Britain annexed the territory as Southern Rhodesia in the 1890s, Ndebele tribal warriors invaded from South Africa. They drove Shona tribespeople from land they had farmed for eight centuries, seized cattle and women, plundered crops and forced Shona men into slavery.

Today, the tribes carry the banners of political parties and wage some of their fighting at news conferences, but the conflict remains bitter and bloody.

Armu soldiers who are predominantly Shona and loyal to Prime Minister Robert Mugabe and his Zimbabwe African National Union have been in the Ndebeles' Matabeleland region for three years, hunting armed dissident supporters of Joshua Nkomo, leader of the opposition Zimbabwe African People's Union.

Some missionaries say thousands of civilians have been killed. Matabeleland residents report being lectured angrily by Shona soldiers on how Ndebele warriors subjugated the Shonas in the 19th century.

"ZANU's rule over the last five years has divided the country into racial and tribal groups such as we have not seen before," Nkomo said last year.

In the late 1950s and early 1960s, the rivalry subsided when Nkomo united the tribes to crusade for independence from Britain. But Shona leaders broke away in 1963 to form ZANU, complaining that Nkomo was not militant enough in opposing government by whites.

> "ZANU's rule over the last five years has divided the country into racial and tribal groups such as we have not seen before."
> — Joshua Nkomo

During the seven-year guerrilla war that led to independence in 1980, Nkomo commanded a Ndebele-dominated ZAPU army based in Zambia and Mugabe headed a mainly Shona ZANU force based in Mozambique. They were united in their war effort but split afterward along political and tribal lines.

In pre-independence elections, Mugabe's party won 57 of the 80 seats allotted to blacks, while Nkomo's ZAPU won 20.

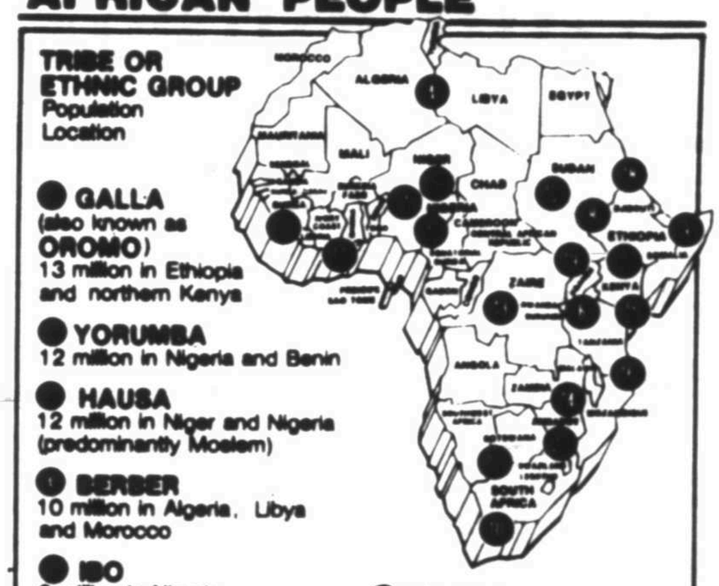
Mugabe gave Nkomo a Cabinet post, but later accused him of plotting a coup, fired him, and detained hundreds of his supporters and party officials.

In elections this past July, the first since independence, Mugabe strengthened his hand, winning 63 assembly seats while Nkomo won only 16 — all in Matabeleland.

Mugabe often speaks out against tribal division, but he has resisted making major political concessions to Nkomo's group.

His government blames underdevelopment in Matabeleland on dissidents in the southwest province. But Ndebeles, who make up about 20 percent of Zimbabwe's 8 million people, contend their region gets an unfairly low share of funds simply because they are not Shonas.

AFRICAN PEOPLE



Centuries-old tradition holds tribes together

BY ROBERT WELLER

ENUGU, Nigeria (AP) — Centuries-old traditions and cultures hold Africa's tribes together. Sociological structures of more than 1,000 African tribes vary from region to region, but the nature of tribal life is generally the same.

A typical African tribe is the Afikpo, one of several hundred that make up the Ibo people in Nigeria. The tribe lives in dozens of villages ranging from several hundred to several thousand around Afikpo, 60 miles southeast of Enugu.

A key feature in Afikpo society, as it is in many other tribes, is the sharp division of sexes.

Men, for example, grow the desired yams, while women raise less valuable crops.

Farmland is owned by groups controlled by men, although land ownership is based on matrilineal descent.

Most men are polygamous, and they are responsible for supplying each wife with yams, meat or fish for feasts. Wives provide the rest.

Women usually marry at age 15 or 16 and men around 30. Divorce is common, but it takes effect only when the woman remarries.

When Afikpo couples marry they live with the husband's father, who is responsible for them. Extended families sometimes number as many as 30 people.

Men and women maintain age grades, with the men's grades forming the basis of tribal government. Under the system, people of similar ages join together and move from one grade to another as they age.

The male grades conduct meetings and raise money for local projects. Younger men carry out the orders of male elders and handle such tasks as policing the villages.

Men in the 65-83 age group wield most of the power. Unlike many tribes, however, the Afikpo have no royal line.

The elderly are highly regarded, and in some villages are called "eze" (chief). But they may not overrule fellow elders.

The elders' powers range from punishing those who break tribal laws to settling disputes.

Women's age grades are less developed. But they set rules for farming, harvesting and marketing, including how many pots, for example, can be sold on market day.

Legal disputes are handled either informally with both parties agreeing to accept a few elders as arbiters, or in a formal meeting of litigants in the central market. Witnesses are called and questioned by elders. Decisions are by consensus.

Religion is based on the worship of ancestors and a class of spirits associated with nature, including animals.

Europeans who shaped nations of Africa listed

Associated Press

These are some of the Europeans who played key roles in the shaping of Africa into what it is today:

OTTO VON BISMARCK — The German chancellor was the host for the 1884-1885 Berlin Conference, at which the major European powers set some of the rules for the colonization of Africa. His government asserted control of what today is South-West Africa, Togoland and Cameroon and sent a naval squadron to express interest in Zanzibar.

KING LEOPOLD II — Suspecting his subjects had no stomach for colonialism, the Belgian monarch carved out a private, harshly governed empire in the Congo that was 80 times larger than his homeland. It was called the Congo Free State, then the Belgian Congo and now is independent Zaire.

HENRY MORTON STANLEY — The famous British-American journalist pioneered European exploration of Central Africa and later helped set up King Leopold's Congo Free State. Stanley became more widely known, however, for finding the Scottish explorer-missionary David Livingstone — "Dr. Livingston, I presume" — while the latter searched for the source of the Nile in 1871. Africans resented Stanley's treatment of them and eventually international complaints about repression in the Congo Free State pressured Belgium into taking formal responsibility by making it a colony in 1908.

PIERRE SAVORGNAN de BRAZZA — This French explorer was credited with preventing the possible spread of Belgian influence north of the Congo River. He founded Brazzaville, capital of today's Congo Republic across the Congo River from Kinshasa, the capital of Zaire. From 1875 to 1878 he traveled across most of the Congo on foot, and on his next expedition signed a treaty with the king of the Teke tribe to block Stanley from extending Belgium's territorial aims northward. De Brazza, who later became France's commissioner for West Africa, won an unusual degree of respect from Africans. He once told European settlers: "Don't forget that you are the intruder who was not invited."

LORD SALISBURY — As Britain's prime minister for most the last 15 years of the 19th century, he helped set boundaries in West Africa and committed Britain to seeking control of the Nile River at its source in Uganda in East Africa. He made a deal with the Germans in 1890 to gain recognition of British rights in Uganda, and the elite Buganda tribe helped Britain spread its colonial rule. But this alliance contributed to the tribal conflict that caused the Buganda endless trouble during the ensuing decades. The quest to secure Uganda also prompted Britain to build a railroad from the Kenya's coast across deserts, rolling savanna and mountains to Lake Victoria. The railway cost 8 million British pounds, an astronomical sum in its day.

CECIL JOHN RHODES — After he made a fortune in the Kimberly diamond fields of South Africa, his British South Africa Co. created for the flag of the United Kingdom the territories of Southern Rhodesia, Nyasaland and Northern Rhodesia, which now are Zimbabwe, Malawi and Zambia.

SIR FREDERICK LUGARD — A British colonial administrator, he was responsible for the creation of modern Nigeria, Africa's most populous country, by combining the British protectorates of northern and southern Nigeria in 1914. The arbitrary merger lumped the largely Moslem tribes of the north with the Christian and animist tribes to the south, as well as sweeping together several formerly independent, centuries-old kingdoms.

UTEP schedules conference of Chicano studies group

EL PASO (AP) — More than 1,000 people are expected to attend the 14th annual conference of the National Association of Chicano Studies set for this week, the University of Texas-El Paso said Monday.

"In this year of the Texas Sesquicentennial, El Paso and its university are especially significant," said Roberto Villareal, conference coordinator and UTEP Chicano Studies Research Program.

"El Paso is the largest city in the U.S. that is located directly on the Mexican border," he said. "It has the largest Mexican-American population by percentage of any major city in the U.S."

The April 10-12 conference involves some 65 panels represented by nearly 100 institutions such as universities, government agencies, research centers and social and cultural groups. Topics will include immigration, politics, business and the arts.

Police identify body

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Police have identified a body found in a field March 6 as that of a 24-year-old Kansas woman, officials said Monday.

Police Commander Robert J. Sullivan said Frankie Johnson of Emporia, Kansas, was wanted on a felony warrant for possession of a controlled substance.

An autopsy showed she died of a drug overdose or strangulation and had been dead a week or 10 days, said Joseph Rupp, Nueces County medical examiner.

Police were searching for a man who came with her to Corpus Christi.

"We would like to question the man. He may be able to give us some information as to what led to her death," he said. "We're suspecting she died of an overdose, possibly black tar heroin."

Suspect found incompetent

ABILENE (AP) — An Abilene man charged with murder in a Christmas Eve slaying has been found incompetent to stand trial.

Judge Bill Thomas on Monday ordered Ricardo Vinnie Hernandez, 22, committed to Rusk State Hospital for the Criminally Insane after a district court jury ruled Hernandez incompetent.

Psychiatrist Dr. John Carey Cooke III said in a deposition that Hernandez is incompetent to stand trial in the stabbing death of Andrew Davis, 34.

A 16-year-old Abilene boy, Gilbert Grimaldo, has been certified to stand trial as an adult in the same case. His trial is set for April 22 in district court.

Escapee caught in Dallas

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A convicted bandit who escaped from a jail hospital ward where he was recovering from a gunshot wound suffered in an earlier escape attempt has been captured in Texas.

Lionel H. Franklin, who fled a hospital ward at the Santa Clara County Jail last November wearing what was left of a set of leg irons, was arrested on Friday in Dallas, according to Richard Held, who heads the FBI office in San Francisco.

Expert expects 'whopping' tax increase

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Democrats are hoping tax reforms will return the party to the mainstream, while Republicans are hoping their support of tax reform will attract more blue-collar families to the GOP, an economic adviser to President Reagan says.

"The problems facing our nation deserve more serious responses than such exercises in cheap or perhaps expensive, politics," said Dr. Murray Weidenbaum, director of Washington University's Center for the Study of American Business.

Weidenbaum's remarks Monday came at the National Petroleum Refiners Association's International Petrochemical Conference here.

The Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Amendment was passed because Congress and the president are not willing to make needed budget cuts — largely for political reasons, he said.

"For every sacred cow that is now being offered for slaughter, another remains shielded from the budget cuts," he said.

The key to reducing spending, Weidenbaum said, is "the rare ability to say no.

"Meanwhile, politicians in both parties have discovered a neat way of diverting attention from the difficult questions involved in cutting the deficit," the economist said. "They call it tax reform."

Whichever version of the tax reform bill passes Congress, American business and investors will absorb "whopping" tax increases, said Weidenbaum, a member of President Reagan's Economic Advisory Board.

"That is how the personal cuts are to be paid for," he said.

Corporate taxes would be raised by about $140 billion over the next four years by the House tax bill or $172 billion by the Senate's version, Weidenbaum said.

More than $9 million due in parking fines

HOUSTON (AP) — City Councilwoman Christin Hartung is urging the city to take measures to collect about $9.2 million in delinquent parking fines.

"It certainly wouldn't solve all of our problems, but $9.5 million would really go a long way toward improving our current financial situation," Ms. Hartung said, since the city is facing a $72 million budget shortfall.

There are about 450,000 outstanding tickets ranging from $10 to $250 dating back four years, Houston Municipal Court records indicate.

One motorist has more than 330 outstanding tickets and owes more than $7,600, according to the court records.

A shortage of marshals has kept the city from getting as tough as officials would like, said A.A. Jones, chief municipal court clerk. But a few dozen newly trained city marshals will change that, he said.

"A lot of people don't realize it, but we're talking about a criminal offense here," Jones said. "We will be filing charges against people who don't pay their tickets. Ultimately, we will make some arrests."

In the current fiscal year, which ends June 30, the city budget counts on the tickets to generate $4 million, but court officicals estimate it will be closer to $3.5 million.

About 30,000 parking tickets a month are issued in Houston.
