Shopping center slumbers as deadline begins to dawn

By JIM STEINBERG

More than 13 months after the Midland City Council approved two sites to "let free enterprise take its course" in the development of a regional shopping center here, there has been no visible progress.

And unless the building project gets under way during the first quarter of next year, the developers of the only project now viable will be hard-pressed to meet a Sept. 10, 1978, deadline, Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. said Saturday.

However, the mayor added he was "optimistic" that the developers of the prospective shopping center, located at Midkiff Road and FM 868, will be in a position to announce groundbreaking near the first of the year.

That optimism was echoed by a spokesman for Mel Simon and Associates of Indianapolis, Ind., who six months ago purchased an option to buy the land held by Murphy and Rochester of Odessa.

"It's on the front burner," Ted Fratrik said of the proposed shopping center, adding that an announcement could probably be made after the first of the year.

Simultaneously approved by the council on Sept. 14, 1976, were the northwest shopping center site and one to be located at U.S. 80 West and Holiday Hill Road. Hopes for that second location were killed shortly after the council's decision, said Lawrence Hahn, local developer for the project.

"The only thing to do was to put on the gloves and let them both have a go at it," Councilman Carroll M. Thomas said of the decision.

Hahn said it was the approval of both that really killed the only chance for a regional shopping center Midland would have — one that had to located on the west side.

Mayor Angelo said that his understanding both from developers and prospective renters was that road access problems ended the west side prospect.

It is generally known among business circles in Midland that two national full-line department stores are committed to the northwest center site. And representatives from a third store, part of a quality department store chain, will be in the city for site inspections "in the next few days," Fort Worth Real Estate Broker Sid Uberman said on Saturday.

"We have had a few problems to work out," Uberman said of the protracted negotiations to secure three anchor stores for the center. "I hope this isn't the first shopping center I have taken an option on that doesn't work out," he added.

When probed for the nature of the "problems," Uberman said only that there are "always problems with any shopping center. There can be city problems, zoning problems, highway department problems or problems with environmentalists."

Speculation has abounded in Midland during the past year surrounding the identity of that third store needed to finalize the 400,000-square foot center.

Among the latest is that a store thought to have been a top prospect is now wavering from its committment. It was a rumor Uberman did not deny outright.

"We are entering a very crucial stage with the negotiations. I don't want to say anything to jeopardize the deal," he said.

One business observer said it was "unrealistic" for the city to hold out for a high quality fashion merchandise store as the third shopping center anchor because the city is too small to attract one.

"Sometimes people not in retailing demand something that is not "possible," he said. A waver of the 400,000-square-foot foundation requirement may be necessary to get the project started. And more stores could be added later, the observer said. (By comparison, the Winwood Mall in Odessa is 480,000-square-feet.

U.S. woos Park once more with exchange offer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is offering to dismiss the federal indictment against Tongsun Park in exchange for the names of members of Congress who received money from him in the Korean influence-buying scandal.

In a report to Congress, the Carter administration confirmed Saturday that the Justice Departmnt would seek dismissal of Park's 36-count indictment in return for his help in the Korean probe.

President Carter said in the report that last Monday the South Korean government sent to the United States "an important new proposal" on the interrogation of Park.

"Our two governments are in the midst of active and delicate discussions," he said, stating that it was "inappropriate and premature" to give any details of the talks.

Seoul's failure to persuade Tongsun Park to testify in the probe of South Korean influence-buying so far "was not the response expected of a close ally," the report said.

The report outlined the administration's attempts to secure South Korea's cooperation in establishing Park's alleged efforts to give favors to members of Congress in exchange for their support for the Seoul regime.

The report said that in talks in South Korea last month, Assistant U.S. Atty. Gen. Benjamin Civiletti proposed dropping the charges against Park, a South Korean businessman indicted on 36 corruption charges, if he would cooperate.

It said the United States suggested that Park be interrogated "in a third country" and that, "If sufficient evidence were thereby gained of indictable offenses by United States officials, Mr. Park's later appearance would be required in the United States for trial testimony."

"The United States proposed that, if Mr. Park faithfully completed these steps, the Justice Department would seek dismissal of the indictment against him," Carter said.

It was at least the second U.S. offer to make such an arrangement with Park to secure his testimony. In early July, Carter said, the United States said Park would be given complete immunity from criminal prosecution if he returned to the United States and testified about illegal payments involving U.S. officials. That was before his indictment was announced.

According to Carter, the Korean government said it tried to persuade Park to return to the United States, but that it could not force him to do so.

On Sept. 21, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Korean Foreign Minister Tong-jin Park met in Washington.

HOUSTON (AP) — Leon Jaworski, special prosecutor looking into an alleged influence peddling scheme in Washington, said saturday he "wants no part" of the proposed dismissal of charges against South Korean businessman Tongsun Park.

PA spanking necessitates correction

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas elementary school vice principal admitted Friday that he had administered a sound spanking to a youngster — a paddling that was broadcast live over the school's public address system.

Donald Gafford, who said students are "more noisy and excited around Halloween," arranged for the Monday spanking to be aired over the public address system for the 850 students to hear.

"It seemed to have a quieting effect on the kids," he said.

The unidentified student was told to place his hands on a chair in front of the public address system console in the principal's office. Then Gafford issued five swats to the youngster who had been accused of attempting to hit a teacher's aide.

When first contacted about the incident, Gafford said the broadcast was a mistake. But he later admitted he deliberately turned on the public address system.

The spanking was heard through small speakers atop blackboards in the classrooms.

Tracking the scent of drug use in city schools: opinions vary

"I think the dog is like more insurance than you need."

Fourteen students in Midland's high schools have been suspended this year for possession of illegal drugs, according to Assistant Schools Superintendent Garland Chapman. During 1976-77, 32 students were suspended, he said.

Midland school administrators have agreed to cooperate with the city in the purchase and use of a $3,000 dog to find drugs on school campuses.

Yet, several students at Midland High School agreed that the problem on the campuses was not drugs as much as "booze."

"It (drugs) doesn't seem as obvious. You hardly ever see it. The main problem is hearing about it," said Midland High senior Phillip Daw.

"Unleas you are in a situation where you do it yourself, you don't see anybody who's really messed up," said Melinda Hodges, sophomore at Midland High.

"My little brother in San Jacinto (Junior High School) has already been offered drugs. The thing is, the younger kids don't know when to get it out of sight. They're not smart enough to leave it alone," said Midland High senior Larry Barthel.

"I think it (the dog being purchased by the city) is like more insurance than you need," said Becky Wilson, Midland High sophomore.

Nine of the 14 high school students suspended this year for possession of illegal drugs are from Midland High, according to Principal Audrey L. Gill.

"We have always had a problem," Gill said. "We do not find it as extensive as it was about five years ago."

"We know we have users. What we are trying to do is see that it is not distributed or brought onto this campus.

"We have a growing number of students who choose to use alcohol rather than drugs," he said. "Generally speaking, we will have youngsters more involved with alcohol coming on campus than we will with drugs. Of course, it is somewhat easier to detect alcohol than it is drugs."

Gill said he is sure that the dog being purchased would be used on the Midland High campus, but that he expects the use to be rather infrequent.

"I definitely see us using the dog," said Lee High School Principal Joe T. Smith, "but I feel like we do not have a large problem with drugs on this campus. This particular year, I think we have processed five youngsters as far as drug-related offenses."

"I think if we did (have a problem), more of it would surface," he said.

Smith said marijuana primarily was involved in the

Carter shuts off reactor with 1st veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter used his first veto Saturday, rejecting a bill that would have authorized $80 million for a breeder reactor that would produce weapons-grade nuclear material.

Carter said the reactor project, located on the Clinch River in Tennessee, would imperil his effort to stop the spread of nuclear weapons and technology.

The president indicated he would consider impounding funds for the project if his veto is overridden "to ensure that no further unnecessary expenditures on this facility are made."

Carter said the government-industry venture at Oak Ridge, Tenn., designed to demonstrate the feasibility of breeder reactors, would be "technically obsolete and economically unsound."

The bill cleared Congress on Oct. 20, winning 366-52 approval in the House and passage by voice vote in the Senate. It would take 67 votes in the Senate to overturn the veto and 290 in the House.

"There are now on the drawing boards better technologies," said Stuart Eizenstat, Carter's assistant for domestic affairs and policy.

Eizenstat said Carter was confident the House and Senate would sustain the veto.

The measure authorized funding for fiscal 1978, which began Oct. 1, for the Energy Department's nuclear and non-nuclear energy research, development and demonstration projects. New legislation for projects other than the Clinch River project, would have to be passed if the veto is sustained.

Breeder reactors produce more nuclear fuel, plutonium, than they consume. The fuel can be converted for use in atomic bombs and Carter has stated that his efforts to end the project were part of his program to halt the spread of weapons-grade nuclear material.

The federal government's share of the project had increased from $250 million, when it was first authorized in 1970, to $2 billion.

Carter said in his veto message that his administration is committed to "a strong research and development program for advanced nuclear technologies" but that the Clinch River project was not needed.

The bill, Carter said, was "inconsistent with my strong belief that proceeding beyond completion of the systems design phase of the Clinch River facility would imperil the administration's policy to curb proliferation of nuclear weapons technology."

'Country town' library seeks wider spaces

MIDKIFF — This community is having growing pains. But they're not the kind that make headlines and the 10 p.m. newscast.

Books, books, books. Books are giving them "pains."

They've got more books than people here, which is nothing astounding — considering that you'd really have to search pretty hard to find 450 people both in "town" and in the countryside.

Midkiff, indeed, is "country."

There's many a virtue to be had in living in the country ... even if you have to work in town to afford it.

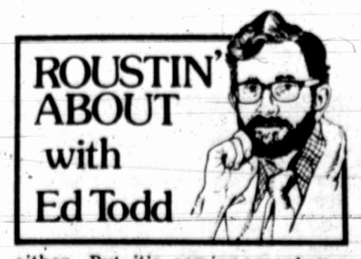

But a well-stacked (and stocked) library usually is not one of the advantages.

It hasn't been at Midkiff, either. But now, they've got books, about 3,500 of them. They've got room, just one. And they call it a library. It ain't much, but it's making the grade.

They need some room to grow in.

"We've got books stored all over creation, because we just don't have enough room," lamented book fan Jean Hester. Many of those 3,500 volumes are stored with the neighbors.

They don't have much money, either. But it's coming, maybe, so they can have more books, more space, more shelves, more readers.

"The nearest library to any of us is 35 miles (away)," Mrs. Hester said. "You can't hop in the car and drive 35 miles ..."

Of course, you can. And they do for shopping things not available in Midkiff.

But they had rather do their book browsing right here.

And thanks to the Midkiff Study Club, the people here have been able to do that right here for the past two years.

It was then that the 15 women in the club got together and put about 1,100

'Lie detector' used by ad researchers

NEW YORK (AP) — Advertising researchers are borrowing techniques from sophisticated lie detectors in an attempt to find out what consumers really want — rather than what they say they want.

"People often cannot say what they believe. They don't understand themselves what influences them," says Ron Nelson of the Consumer Response Corp., ,which specializes in voice pitch analysis.

Brain wave analyses and nervous system responses are also being used in marketing surveys.

The techniques are used to judge an audience's reactions to pilot commercials or proposed products. The tests ordinarily take place in special "testing lounges," set up in shopping areas.

The findings are used to help companies decide how to develop their advertising campaigns or whether a market exists for a new product.

Company officials say the system evolved from research done for law enforcement and government security agencies to find mtre reliable methods of lie detection.

Nelson, who is vice president in charge of the voice stress program, says it is used to eliminate polite "lip service" responses and to find out how strongly people really feel about what they tell researchers.

In voice pitch research, for example, tape recorded replies are analyzed by computers to determine what levels of involuntary changes in voice pitch occur as answers are given to an interviewer about a commercial or product.

The greater the change in voice pitch, the greater the commitment to the answer, says Nelson.

In one case, people were quizzed about their attitudes toward violent television. An overwhelming majority said there is too much violence on TV, and voice pitch analysis showed that almost all were truly committed to that view.

But of the 63 percent who said they avoided watching violent shows, "very few people actually meant what they said," Nelson reported.

Sidney Weinstein of the Neurocommunications Research Laboratories in Danbury, Conn., is a specialist in brain wave analysis. To provide an example, he said a man who watched a chewing gum commercial featuring a model in a skimpy bikini told researchers he found it boring.

"But his recordings were jumping all over the place," Weinstein said. "People will tell you things that physiological tests just don't reflect."

Edgar Rolls, president of the Advertising Research Foundation, guesses that aoout 10 percent of all agencies may be using some type of physical measurement in their research.

But claims for such methods do not sit well with others in the advertising industry.

"I don't believe any amount of physiological measurement can tell you about a person's state of mind, or how he feels," says Jerry Ohlsten, a vice president at Cunningham & Walsh.

"Especially when you are dealing with a product that is not a major commitment. How excited can someone get about a type of hand lotion or hair spray?"

Two presidents preferred beer

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Washington and Samuel Adams were among illustrious Americans who favored beer as a beverage, says Philip C. Katz, senior vice president of research services, United States Brewers Association.

Thomas Jefferson, another beer fancier, went on record as saying, "I wish to see this beverage become common," he adds.

Katz illustrated how common it has since become by pointing out that in 1975 the United States ranked first among countries of the world in beer production with 160,600,000 barrels.

Sadat renews call for early talks

By THOMAS W. LIPPMAN
The Washington Post

CAIRO — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, aligning himself with the Syrian view that a Geneva Middle East peace conference now would be premature, apparently has eliminated any possibility that the conference could be held this year.

But by renewing his call for a preliminary conference to work out the terms for Geneva he has broken a diplomatic stalemate that could have prevented the Geneva conference from taking place at all, informed analysts believe.

A week ago it appeared that the impasse over the issues of Palestinian representation and the future of the Israeli-occupied Arab territories was jeopardizing the entire concept of Geneva, despite the optimism emanating from Washington.

Sadat, who in the opinion of many observers here needs to preserve at least the illusion of progress toward peace in order to preserve political stability in Egypt, has now offered a format for dealing with those issues without risking failure at Geneva.

After consultations with King Khaled of Saudi Arabia, Sadat has again declared that "Geneva is not an end in itself." He called for a preliminary conference to ensure that Geneva, if it takes place, will deal with substantive issues, not procedural matters.

That fits in nicely with the view held all along by the Syrians that a Geneva conference was only worth holding if certain basic principles, notably Israeli withdrawal from all territories occupied in the 1967 war, were agreed to in advance. Syria wants no part of a ceremonial Geneva that would leave fundamental issues unresolved.

Up to now, diplomatic analysts here believed Sadat would go to Geneva on almost any terms if only to be able to claim some success for his policy of endorsing American initiatives and offering Israel peace for territory. But as prospects for Geneva began to fade after the chilly Arab response to the U.S.-Israel working paper on the terms of the negotiations, Sadat has sought another formula.

In an interview on Egyptian television Friday night, he said that the United States, the Soviet Union, Israel, Egypt, Jordan, Syria, Lebanon and "the Palestinians" should participate in the preparatory conference. This proposal was was believed to have been discussed at a meeting Saturday between Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy and Mikhail Sitenko, Soviet undersecretary for Middle East affairs, who came here after stops in Syria and Jordan.

Sadat recently visited Romania, the only country in Communist Eastern Europe that still maintains diplomatic relations with Israel. Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin was there before Sadat. Observers here believe Sadat had Romania in mind when he told the editor of the newspaper Al Akhbar that the proposed "working group" should assemble for profimity talks, or indirect contacts, in some neutral country.

Sadat acknowledged that the working group plan was same as the proposal he made during the Middle East tour of U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance last summer.

It was rejected then by Syria. But this time it comes after weeks of intensive consultations among the major Arab countries in which Egypt has moved closer to the Syrian position on some sensitive issues, and they have apparently worked out a coordinated stance.

Sadat pledged recently that Egypt would never sign a separate peace agreement with the Israelis. This was clearly intended to allay Syrian fears that Egypt's economic woes would compel it to accept such a solution. Informed diplomats say they believe Sadat is sincere on this point.

In addition, Egypt is espousing the Syrian view that there can be no Geneva without the Palestine Liberation Organization, which Sitenko said in Damascus is also the Soviet position.

Carter postponing trip until program completed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has decided to postpone his trip abroad this month until after Congress completes its work on an energy program, probably not before mid-December, it has been learned.

The White House would not confirm the postponment.

But in Paris, French officials said President Valery Giscard d'Estaing was informed today that Carter's planned visit to the French capital on Nov. 29 — the seventh stop of the trip — has been postponed.

Elysee Palace officials said U.S. Ambassador Arthur Hartmann delivered the U.S. message today, citing the congressional debate on energy policy. French officials said no new date was suggested.

In New Delhi, India, an Indian government spokesman said a letter from Carter, delivered today, indicated that Carter is postponing his scheduled Nov. 27-29 visit to India because of "compelling domestic reasons."

Carter had been scheduled to leave Nov. 22 on a trip that was to have taken him to Venezuela, Brazil, Nigeria, India, Iran, Saudi Arabia, France, Poland and Brussels.

Officials said the administration was considering rescheduling the trip early next year.

New mayor will face money ills

By JACK EGAN
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — This Tuesday New York City elects a new mayor. A week later, the city makes its first attempt to borrow money on its own in the public credit markets since the ffscal crisis erupted more than two and one-half years ago and shut the city out of the debt markets.

Edward I. Koch, the Democratic candidate in this overwhelmingly Democratic city, is well ahead in the polls and already is considered the presumptive mayor by many.

There is somewhat less certainty on the outcome of the city's note offering. It will in effect be a ginger testing of the waters to see how investors have reacted to the last two years of retrenchment, cutbacks, accounting reforms and debt restructuring that were accomplished by New York City under the constant threat of bankruptcy.

A successful note offering will go some small distance to bolster the city's financial soundness, which still hangs by a slender thread, and it also will give a sign of whether the city can start to shed the combination of multi-billion-dollar federal loans, city employee pension fund investments and state financial aid that has permitted New York to remain solvent in the interim.

Even the most optimistic observers say it will be a number of years before New York City can handle all of its own financing needs.

"Despite a significant record of achievement by the city that many would have not expected three years ago, the hoped-for result of the city's ability on July 1, 1978, to meet all of its credit needs — though these are much reduced, disciplined and limited — on its own is a goal that will not be realized," said city controller Harrison J. Goldin.

With a number of credit problems and uncertainties still to be resolved, Goldin estimates that it probably will take three more years to reach self-sufficiency with the city able to borrow more in successive stages.

But a well-received initial debt offering could make that date sooner, rather than later, and also could smooth the way for extending a scaled-down version of the federal seasonal loan program to New York City

Oilfield thefts sap time, energy of most petroleum companies

By GEORGE H. JOHNSTON

Oilfield thefts have long been a problem for oilmen and drillers in the Permian Basin.

As long as there has been equipment in the field, there have been thieves ready and willing to take it.

Most rig sites are vulnerable to thefts. They are in remote spots and there is usually no one there to guard them.

And when thieves do hit, the operator can suffer losses of both money and time. A diamond drill bit, which can easily be thrown into the trunk of a car or back of a pickup, may cost up to $3,000 to replace. And operators can lose valuable time because of the missing part or tool.

As Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith put it, "You can't walk down to the store and buy (another one)."

Pieces of oilfield related equipment are not the only things taken from a well site, according to Smith. Other equipment includes welding units, lights and generator motors.

"Because you can't just plug it in, you've got to make it all (at the well site)," Smith said.

Drill bits, according to Smith, are not the only expenesive items that can be stolen from a rig.

"Slips, tongs and elevators can cost anywhere from $500 to several thousands of dollars, depending on the type, size, condition and demand," he said.

Hydraulic tongs, which is a sophisticated piece of equipment, can cost $20,000 and can easily be thrown into the back of a pickup, Smith added.

While pipe and tubing are not as easy to remove, Smith said, they are still a target for enterprising thieves.

Usually the thieves will steal a truck designed for hauling pipe and tubing, remove the items from the site, then later abandon the truck, Smith said.

Thefts are not a problem limited to the Permian Basin rig sites, but for all oil producing areas in Texas, according to Capt. J. P. Lynch of the Texas Rangers.

"They (thefts) are generally a problem wherever there are oilfields," Lynch said. East Texas has some of the same problems. In fact, some of the thieves work back and forth from East to West Texas, Lynch added.

Smith said he does not know about other areas of Texas, but the problem concerns producers in eastern New Mexico also.

In order to try to protect their equipment, both lawmen urged operators to mark all of their equipment and to report any suspicious activity.

"The operator needs an inventory showing the serial numbers which will stand up for identification in court," said Lynch.

Some people, Lynch added, provide a service of marking or branding equipment.

Smith said numbers branded on equipment are hard to erase because most numbers can be raised by law enforcement officials. "Those numbers can be raised one-half to one inch," Smith said.

"It is discouraging to a thief to find a set of tools with a name scratched in them," Smith added.

In addition, Smith urged operators to report all thefts and suspicious activity immediately.

"There are people who are not reporting (thefts) to either us or the (Texas) Rangers. I say for sure report because if you don't, then we don't have a chance (of returning the property)," Smith said.

If reports are made, Smith said, then the sheriff's office has something to refer to when an arrest is made and property is recovered.

One way to prevent thefts, Smith said, is to report the location of any new rigs so that deputies can patrol the area.

In addition, he said, if a piece of equipment breaks down, such as a truck, and it has to sit overnight, then the deputies will know to patrol by if it is reported, Smith said.

Lynch said many companies are beginning to bring in expensive equipment from the well site, rather than letting it sit out.

Many companies will not bring out drill bits until they are ready to drill, then will take the bits back to town after they are finished, Lynch said.

"They used to leave it (equipment) lying around, but they are getting pretty good about taking care of the equipment," Lynch said,

One man who seems to take care of his equipment is R. D. Morgan, supervisor for a local drilling company.

Morgan said Friday his company has been fortunate in that thefts have not been a big problem for it.

Morgan's last theft, he said, was in August when two drill bits valued at $3,000 were taken.

And before that, he added, his last theft was two years ago when a set of elevators was taken.

Morgan attributes his theft prevention to having a man to watch each well site and also having a man living at the equipment yard east of the city.

When he does have a theft, Morgan said, the first thing he does is call the sheriff "as quickly as possible."

"The sheriff's office has been real receptive. I feel like they are trying to help," Morgan said.

Morgan said he also works with the Rangers in trying to prevent oilfield thefts.

When some oil was being stolen, Morgan said, a Ranger asked to ride around with Morgan's men. The Ranger's car, Morgan added, would have alerted the thieves.

While oilfield equipment is not something that a thief can take to his local pawn shop to sell, all three men agree there is still a good fencing market

The demand for oilfield equipment is great, which leads to a good price, according to Smith.

Lynch said a thief can sell the stolen equipment "anywhere he can find someone willing to buy a bargain."

Smith said a good fence is an unscrupulous parts dealer who will not ask too many questions.

However, Smith said most dealers are reputable businessmen willing to turn down shady deals.

"We ask them to give us a call when something doesn't look right," Smith said.

"The guy who steals something is going to find someone in the oil business who is interested in it," Smith said.

Some of the equipment, Smith said, is sold locally, but others go out of the state and the country.

Smith urged any operator to report someone who is trying to sell questionable items.

Morgan said no one approaches him about buying questionable equipment mainly because "the word is out that I won't fool with them."

"I won't hardly let them in here (the yard) at all," he added.

Morgan said he will not buy equipment from anyone but a reputable dealer. "If a man comes, I won't listen to him," Morgan said.

"I can't believe people buy it, but I know they do."

As long as there is a petroleum industry in the Permian Basin, there more than likely will be thefts.

"What is there that you can't just leave lying around and someone not steal it?" Smith asked.

Parade money set

More than 1,500 in prize money will be awarded to floats entered in the non-commercial division of the seventh annual Midland Christmas parade scheduled Dec. 10.

Sam Blanck, chairman of the 1977 parade, sponsored by the retail committee of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, said plans now are being completed for the event and announced that more than 300 invitations have gone out to area schools, churches and organizations.

"We have moved the parade one week further into December to allow our local bands and school groups to participate, and we feel this will help make it a more enjoyable and enthusiastic parade for everyone," Blanck said.

There is no fee for entry and all groups and organizations wishing to participate in the parade may contact the Chamber or Commerce at 683-3381. Entry deadline is Dec. 2.

Theme of the 1977 parade is "Christmas Stories" which Blanck said he thinks will allow creativity and imaginative planning on the part of participating groups. While not strictly limited to books or stories about Christmas, Blanck said float entries should deal with well-known stories that might also be included in famous poems or songs. Floats entered for judging in the parade will be judged on the basis of color use, adherence to theme and general design of the float.

Blanck said that commercial groups in the community also are being encouraged to participate in the parade. Trophies will be awarded to winning entries in the commercial division. "Many of our local stores have promotions and advertising gimmicks that would fit in perfectly with the parade, and we feel it is a good way to get an advertising message to a large group of people," Blanck added.

Airlines records boom

DALLAS — October was the largest passenger traffic month in the history of Southwest Airlines, with 243,653 passengers compared to 140,545 during October 1976, a company spokesman said.

Revenue passenger miles for October climbed to 72,349,105, up 97 percent over October 1976's 36,777,737 passenger miles.

The passenger load factor for the month was 65.7 percent, comapred to 64.2 percent during October 1976. Average length of passenger journey during the month was 297 miles versus 262 miles one year ago.

During the first 10 months of 1977, 1,870,933 passengers have traveled 535.3 million miles on Southwest.

Defense officials back off from Carter optimism about SALT pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense officials said Saturday they would be surprised to see U.S. and Soviet negotiators reach agreement this year on a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty, despite President Carter's optimism.

The officials also are reserving judgment on whether the two countries have made balancing concessions in seeking a new treaty, adding that they are awaiting the outcome of further negotiations on many unsettled and nettlesome details before reaching that judgment.

In telling reporters their doubts that a new SALT treaty can be signed this year, the officials took what appeared to be another step backward from the optimistic forecasts by Carter about a month ago.

Carter had predicted that "within a few weeks we will have a SALT agreement that will be the pride of the country." He later modified his position, saying there is "a fairly good prospect" of a description of the general terms for a settlement." But he said nailing down details "would take long and tedious negotiations."

Defense officials indicated they are uncertain whether the final agreement will assure means of verification that are good enough to prevent any undetected cheating that might upset the nuclear balance.

While they said the Russians have agreed to some limitations on the new Soviet Backfire bomber, the U.S. officials made it clear that the fine print is not yet set. Therefore, they said, they are not ready to say whether these limitations are good or not good enough.

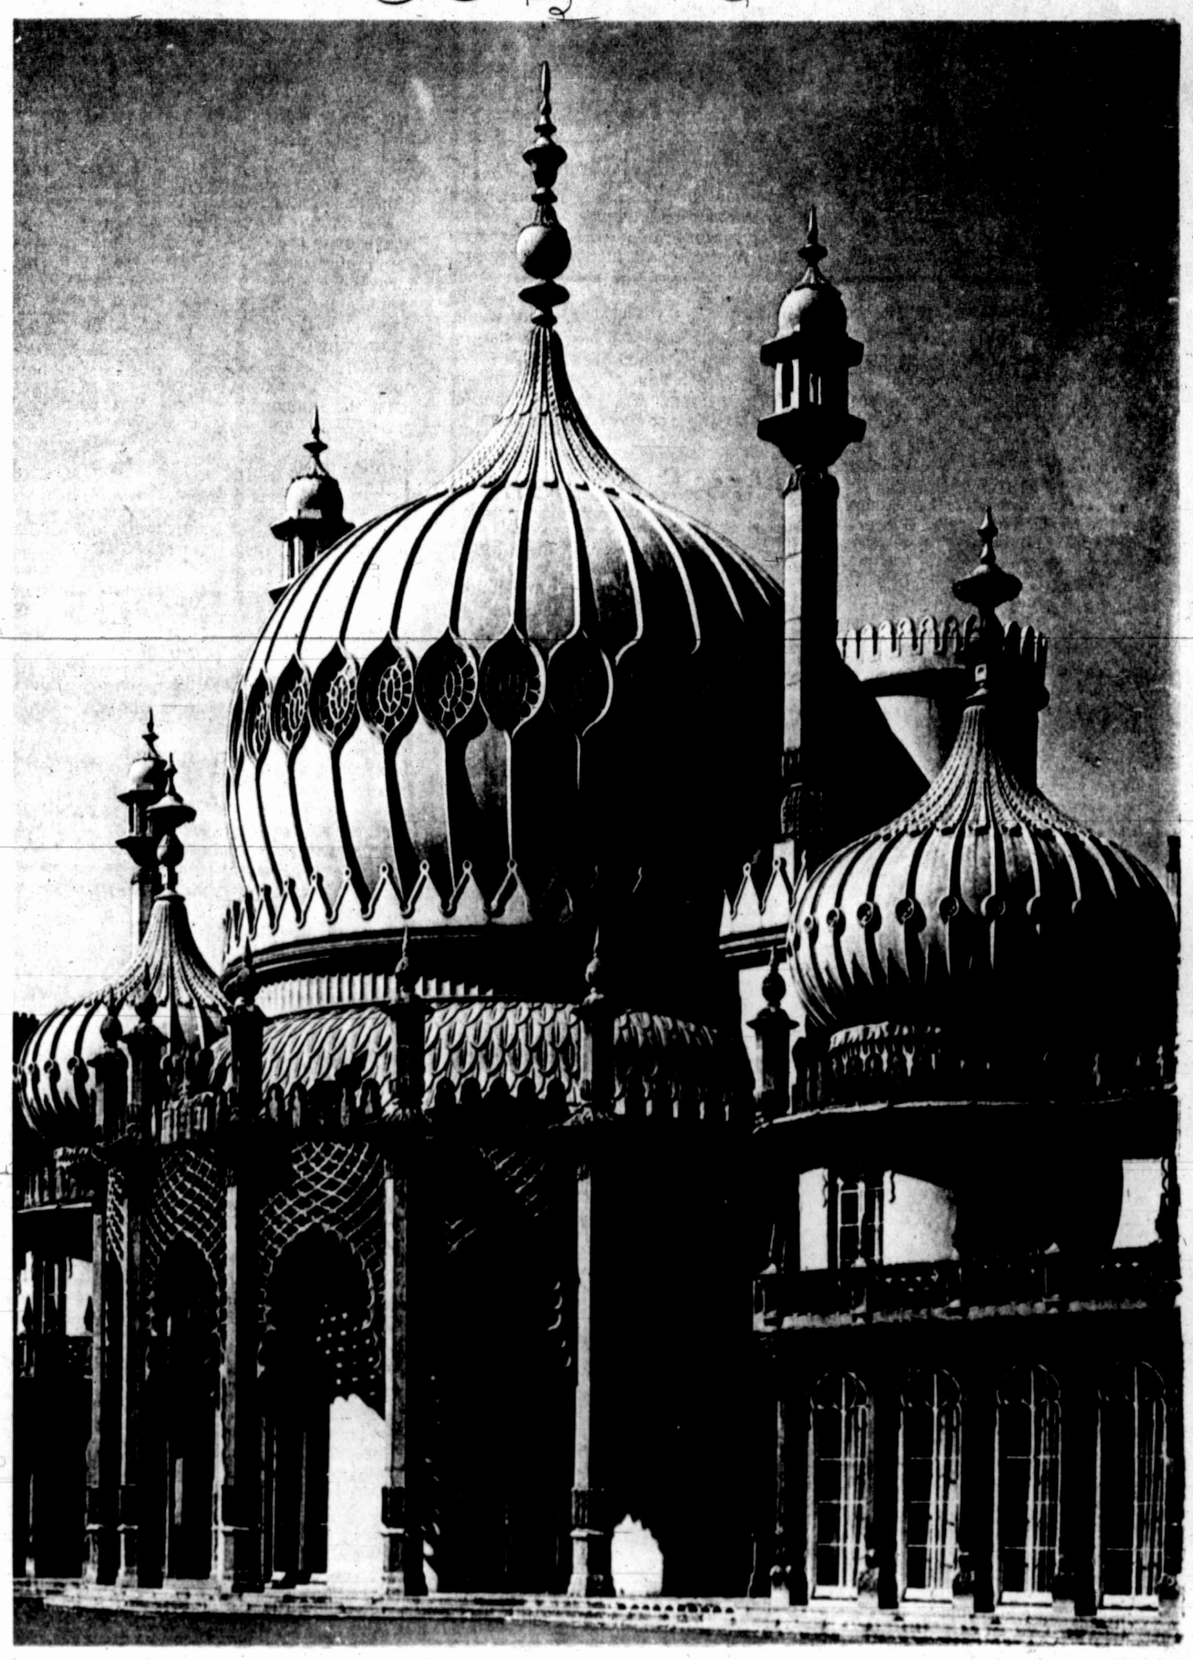

Defense officials are hopeful — but obviously far from certain — that the Russians will agree to measures that would effectively curtail development of new types of intercontinental ballistic missiles and submarine-launched missiles. The Carter administration has said in the past it considers it vital to cap the qualitative, as well as the quantitative, arms race.

Despite uncertainties, defense officials insist that the proposed eight-year U.S.-Soviet treaty now taking shape would make it possible for the United States to retain strategic parity with the Soviets.

They disputed the contention of Paul H. Nitze, a former SALT negotiator, that the United States would be locked into "inherent inferiority" under terms tentatively worked out.

THE Royal Pavilion at Brighton

MIDLAND —The Royal Pavilion at Brigton in England is the sort of castle a small child might build out of the sands of Brighton on a clear summer day when all things seem possible and dreams soar like a balloon. The pavilion's great domes topped with spires, its tall arched windows and elaborate tracery make a fitting palace for a fairytale monarch.

Brighton Pavilion is, by any definiton, a folly. On the outside it's style is a romanticized hindoo; on the inside it's far, Far Eastern, and the whole is a rococo roll that became the Regency period. Brighton Pavilion was built from 1787 to 1822 as the pleasure dome of George IV, first as regent and later king-and at all times a man to whom the luxuries of life were necessities.

A taste of Brighton was being offered through May 22 at Cooper-Hewitt, the Smithsonian's National Museum of Design, which is housed in the former Andrew Carnegie Mansion. Eight rare pieces of the pavilion's original furniture and decorative objects now customarily housed at Buckingham Palace are on loan from Queen Elizabeth II, including an Indian sandalwood chair mounted with engraved ivory and carved with monstrous heads on the back and acanthus leaves on the knees with palmettes flanking the feet; a sideboard veneered in rosewood and satinwood with gilded carved dragons; and a set of enameled bronze candelabra in the form of a Chinese lady, matching the Chinese drummer boy clock.

The show was suggested by one of the prizes of the Cooper-Hewitt holdings: 87 drawings of the interior decoration of Brighton Pavilion by the firm of Frederick Crace. On loan from the pavilions own collections are 168 pieces of furniture (a pedestal lamp is made of Spode porcelain sides, flanked by ormolu dragons with a dolphin base and-topped with a flower shade); architectural elements (including a silvered and painted giant serpent originally suspended from the saloon ceiling); prints and drawings, including 25 plates from John Nash's "Views."

After New York, the show will travel, though unfortunately there are yet no plans for it to come to Midland. This is the second exhibit in the newly restored and opened Andrew Carnegie Mansion.

The show honors Queen Elizabeth on the occasion of the silver jubilee of her reign. It was organized with John Morley, director of the pavilion, Vincent Ciulla, exhibition designer, and Dorothy Twining Globus and Elaine Evans Dee, coordinators, are responsible for the well-done installation which highlights but doesn't over shadow the objects.

The Brighton show comes at a time when there is a swing in taste back to the romantic in decoration. For years, such extravagant fantasies were laughed at as excessive or just plain bad taste. But after years of living with purity of line, many people are becoming tired of the stripped-down, holier-than-thou look of international architecture and design. And so the pendulum swings away from the classic clean look and back to the romantic, magpie nest of fun and fan tasy. Already there has been a stirring of romantic design in furniture and accessories for the home, oriental rugs from the revival of the China trade; bedspreads, fabrics and brass from India; foil wallpaper; fabric and paper wall-size murals; sheets made from museum reproductions; lush fabrics like velvets, leathers and satins; and the massing of collectibles even on apartment walls. The current show at the Cooper-Hewitt is likely to be a strong influence in pushing such "more is more" decorating trends.

According to Morley writing in the catalog, George IV (then Prince of Wales) in 1785 brought his morganatic wife, known as Mrs. Fitzherbert, to the Marine Pavilion at Brighton. (Though the marriage was acknowledged to be legal by the Pope, the king later married the royal Caroline of Brunswick.)

Form and Function

He was a man who cared strongly for every flip of a fringe, every dart in a drapery. He hired Henry Holland to incorporate the existing farmhouse into a pavilion of Palladian design, with delicate wrought iron work as a softener. The inside was decorated in the Chinese manner 1801, thanks to a gift of Chinese wallpaper. The interior decorations were largely done by the Frederick Crace firm, which managed to hold onto the job through various architects and contractors.

Before long, William Porden and Humphrey Repton were asked to submit proposals for an oriental remodeling of the exterior. Both were rejected, but the East Indian-style circular stables domed with glass were built in 1808. Architect John Nash-closely watched by the king (who ascended to the throne in 1820)-remodeled the pavilion in the romanticized East Indian-style between 1815 and 1822, using brick covered with stucco to form porticos, minarets and pillars. Decorations were in Bath stone and cast iron was also used.

Nash wrote, "It was determined by His Majesty that the Pavilion should assume an Eastern character, and the Hindoo style of Architecture was adopted in the expectation that the turban domes and lofty pinnacles might from their glittering and picturesque effect, attract and fix the attention of the Spectator..." Of the cost, a contemporary account said, "No regular estimates were made, nor were they required and if they had been made with the greatest care they would not have corresponded with the expenditure."

Much of the inside decoration was designed by Robert Jones for Crace. Morley says it took 35 people to paint the music room. Eighteenth-century Chinese porcelains embellished with rococo ormolu were among the glories of the house. One entered through the octagon hall with its pink, lilac and red-tinted ceiling. The red drawing room was covered with dragons topped with trompe l'oeil bamboo frames. A door in the present exhibition has wood graining which upon close inspection turns out to be dragons. An elaborate overdoor (also at Cooper-Hewitt) illustrates the Indian influence. The corridor in its later decoration had ivory and sandalwood chairs reflected in mirrors upon mirrors.

The banqueting room, as Morley says, is "one of the most astonishing and exhilarating rooms in th world... the inner dome with its trompe l'oeil plantain leaves (some in three-dimensional painted copper)."

The kitchen also had great copper palms topping iron columns. The saloon was in red and gold Best of all, Morley likes the music room, "a great lacquer box" with six huge Yung Cheng porcelain pagodas.

Since 1850 and the reign of the more staid Queen Victoria, the pavilion has been owned by the township of Brighton and used for assemblages, exhibitions and such. Though Victoria did not want the pavilion, she did want its fripperies. Almost everything that was loose, and some things that weren't, was carried away to Buckingham Palace, which also profited from the sale of the pavilion.

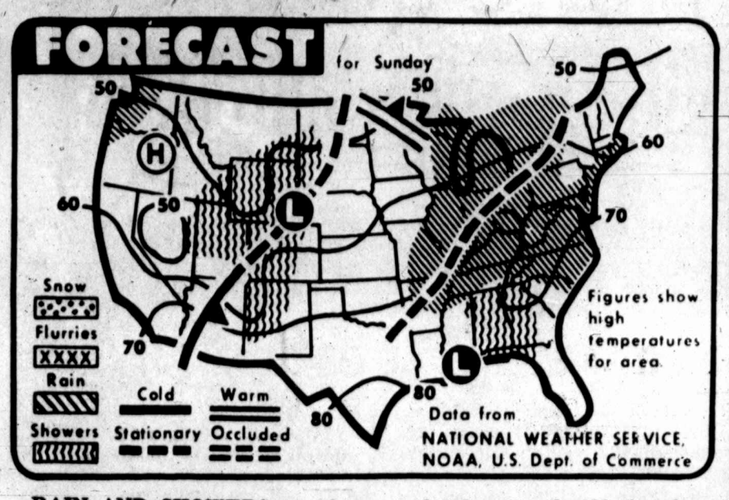

In 1914-18 the pavilion was a hospital for wounded soldiers from East Indian regiments. They must have thought their minds wounded as well when contemplating its wonders through their fevers. Since 1945, the pavilion has been under serious restoration, greatly helped by the permanent loan by Queen Elizabeth of much of the original furniture. Layer by layer the varnish and bronze paint of its Victorian mistreatment are being removed-in many cases revealing the original gold leaf in restorable use underneath.

Lisa Taylor, the Cooper-Hewitt's director calls the show "Lisa's Folly," in part because she hasn't yet figured out a way to pay all its $200,000 cost, a modest sum, when compared to some blockbuster shows like King Tut, Taylor is mounting a Regency Ball with the hope of raising at lleast half that amount (The show's catalog with magnificent color pictures. $5, and posters will also help.)

Those of us who see it, will find the Brighton Pavilion a vicarious substitute for not being born kings and queens. And surely we owe George IV some small appreciation for spending his money, if not for the general good, at least for the general amusement. And who's to say that luxury is not a necessity after all?

Opinions vary on drug use

cases of the five youngsters who were suspended at Lee.

"Weed's not a drug problem. That (a drug problem) is heroin," said Lee sophomore Lisa Shearod.

"It's not a real bad problem. I don't think that many people smoke pot around here except maybe at lunch," said Susie Alexander, a junior at Lee.

"Sometimes going from here (the main school building) to the Youth Center for lunch you can smell it," Jana Robinson, Lee junior, said.

"It's true that they smoke in the bathrooms," said Lee junior Dee Dee Poole.

"If they want to get caught, they will go ahead (and use drugs on campus). If not, they will just wait until the proper time," Gloria Bowens, a junior at Lee, said.

"The fact that the dog is there (on campus) and they know it is going to be a tremendous deterrent," said former District Attorney James Mashburn.

"It'll scare the hell out of those kids who have it in school, and I hope the first place they put it is in the ninth grade.

"It's available to 100 percent of the students, not only the high school students but in the junior highs and in the ninth grade if they want it," he said.

"They're bringing marijuana in every weekend, if not two or three times a week, from Big Bend.

"The worst problem we have is not marijuana, but we have a tremendous increase in cocaine," Mashburn said.

The problem is less acute in Midland than anywhere else because of the quality of the kids, he said.

"Of course, if we have even one student using drugs around the school campus then I think we have a drug problem," said Schools Superintendent Dr. James H. Mailey.

"There's bound to be additional drugs used on campus that we have been unable to detect. We are not at all certain that as many people are using drugs as once were, but they seem more blatant in their use," Mailey said.

"I definitely think the dog will help with the drug situation on campus," said Police Chief Wayne Gideon.

"And that's our intent, to try to rid our campuses of it," he said.

'Good rating' hoped for speech

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's congressional allies are hoping his televised energy address this week will generate new support for his beleaguered energy program.

The president's speech, scheduled for Tuesday, "will make our job easier," said Rep. Thomas L. Ashley, D-Ohio, Carter's leading spokesman on the congressional conference committee working on a compromise version of the energy legislation.

"The people watch him. He still has a pretty good rating. When he talks about his energy program — it helps," Ashley added. Other Democratic congressional leaders also say Carter needs to work harder with individual members of Congress who have a role in framing the final bill, which is stalled in a House-Senate conference committee.

But administration critics argue that nothing Carter does or says this late in the game will make much difference.

However, some Republican leaders are privately conceding that the president may already have the votes he needs to get most of his program through — although not without a battle.

Neither Carter's scheduled nationwide address on Tuesday nor the expected cancellation of his overseas trip scheduled for later this month are likely to influence the course of the energy bill, said Rep. Clarence J. Brown, R-Ohio.

"I don't think he wants to make that trip and I think he's using the energy issue as an excuse," said Brown, the most outspoken Republican on the energy conference panel.

"The president's influence in the conference committee might be diminished," Brown added. He said administration handling of the energy issue "has been so poor that I don't think anything can help him."

Although this week's talk will be an effort to further build public support for his proposals, it is the House and Senate energy conferees whom he really must persuade.

The conferees have already held 13 sessions attempting to reconcile wide House and Senate differences between energy bills passed by each chamber.

Congressional leaders hope that the work can be speeded up this week when a second conference unit — dealing with energy taxes — goes to work. A final bill is expected sometime in December.

Major issues still facing the conferees include:

—The president's proposal for a crude oil tax that would add about seven cents a gallon to the cost of gasoline and other petroleum products. The House passed the tax but the Senate ignored it entirely, voting instead for more than $40 million in energy tax breaks.

—A decision on natural gas pricing. The House passed Carter's proposal to raise the federal price lid from $1.47 per 1,000 cubic feet to $1.75, but the Senate turned around and voted to free newly discovered gas from price controls entirely after two years.

'Country town' library seeks wider spaces

new and used books in the far north room of the Baptist church here and called it a library, the Midkiff Public Library.

(You can give the ladies a gold star for not calling it a "learning resource center.")

Now, they want to move the books over to where the Methodists "camp." They've got more room there—in the church's old youth building, now being transformed into a community center. Still, that won't be enough room for all of those 3,500 books.

For starters, the club some day will get a corner in the center. And they need to add a room on to that, so that they'll have space for all of those 3,500 books and others that are coming by way of gifts and purchase orders.

In short, they want money, money, money.

They've got money to operate the library from the Upton County Commissioners Court at Rankin. It's not much.

And they're asking for more money ($10,000) from the commissioners in Midland. That money could get them the extra room they need.

The commissioners didn't turn them aside. They just want to check into the legality of giving money for a project in a county not their own.

On the surface, it seems like an odd request.

But Midland County has more money than Upton County. Here's the possible clincher: Though the "town" of Midkiff is just barely in Upton County, many of the people live in Midland County and most drive to Midland to do their shopping.

So, Mrs. Hester, who's president of the Midkiff Study Club, and Marilyn Midkiff, who's chairman of the library, simply reason that Midland should be obliging.

While they're waiting for the commissioners (and anybody else) to "shell out," the Hester-Midkiff team and other library boosters will seek money elsewhere.

They would be happy, too, to take on more books and to place them in storage until they get their library fixed up.

You might know it. But they wouldn't be adverse to free-will offerings of books shelves and other assorted items a destitute library needs.

Yes, they're proud. But they're also hungry for a well endowed library.

It's not easy putting one together, either.

Mrs. Hester recalled those times in 1975, when the study club women started working toward a library.

"We're just 15 people, ordinary, run-of-the-mill women who had no earthly idea what starting a library was all about."

They're learning — learning everything from cataloging and indexing via the Dewey decimal system to repairing books to raising that necessary cash.

Ideas may be free, but books aren't.

Center's fate slumbers as limit dawns

according to a spokesman for the center.)

Another speculative thought was that the developers might be preparing to ask for an extension of the time limit.

Neither of these ideas met favorable responses from city council members and all six of them denied they had been approached separately or as a group with a request to extend the time limit or reduce the square foot requirements of the proposed center.

"We don't need another 'Ma and Pop' shopping center," said Councilman Mark S. Martin to the idea of reducing the size requirement.

"This was not our proposal," said Councilman G. Thane Akins. "Four or five months ago the council heard that there would be an announcement within 60 days. We have heard nothing since. Asking for an extension at this point would cause quite a bit of adverse feelings. I can't imagine what the delay is. In the meantime people here go to Lubbock, Abilene and Dallas.

"If ever we are going to get a decent shopping center here, this ought to be the time," said Councilman Carroll M. Thomas, adding, "although I have to admit nobody else is banging at our doors to build one."

Councilman Gordon G. Marcum II and Councilwoman Doris Howbert also expressed unfavorable reactions to the prospects.

One real estate man familiar with shopping center development, said that among the reasons for the Midland shopping center's delay was that new centers set for construction in San Angelo and Abilene have tied up store resources for investments and opening operations. In other words, these stores have prior committments to meet before they can move into Midland, the real estate man said.

Councilman Martin said he voted against the northwest shopping center because he said he felt it would be the only shot Midland would have at getting a truly regional shopping center.

Councilman Marcum said he was growing suspicious about the way the project has lingered. He said he wondered whether or not the delay might be to see if there is an attempt to build a large complex on the east side of Odessa, either as an expansion to the Winwood Mall or on new ground.

A move along those lines would kill any hopes Midland might have for its own center, he added.

But this rash of rumors and speculation about Midland's proposed new shopping center may be ended — in another 60 days.

Solons making seasonal escape from Washington

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most members of the Senate and House are escaping Washington until early December when they hope to take final action on energy legislation that may become the standard for judging the performance of the first half of the 95th Congress.

House and Senate members trying to resolve differences between the energy bills passed by the two bodies will continue their work while most of their colleagues are scattered around the globe.

With the Panama Canal treaty certain to be a major issue next year, several members of Congress plan to visit the Central American country. Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and eight or nine other senators plan to head for Panama on Wednesday. Assistant Majority Leader Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said he hopes to go in January.

The Senate was in session until early Saturday morning to complete work on legislation providing for major increases in Social Security taxes to bring in the additional revenue needed to restore the financial stability of the system. There are significant differences between the Senate bill and the measure passed by the House. They will have to be resolved by a conference committee.

A third major issue left pending for action in December is the volatile question of the use of federal funds for abortions. So far, a conference committee has been unable to reach a compromise on the issue. The House has taken a hard-line anti-abortion position, but the Senate supports federal payment for abortions under government medical programs in cases of rape or incest or when a woman would suffer "severe and long-lasting physical health damage" because of pregnancy. The House would permit abortions only when essential to save the life of the woman.

With large Democratic majorities in the House and Senate, the 95th Congress convened last January in an atmosphere of heady anticipation over the prospect of working with a Democratic president after eight years of Republican control of the White House.

But the traditional honeymoon began on a sour note when some of Carter's choices for Cabinet posts and other key jobs ran into outspoken criticism on Capitol Hill.

High of 80 due today

A repeat of Saturday is expected weatherwise in the Permian Basin today.

So look for a high temperature in the upper 70s and a low tonight in the upper 40s.

But watch out for Monday.

It's going to get a little cooler, with a high predicted in the upper 40s. And there is a chance for rain.

The high temperature Saturday was 80 degrees and the overnight low 42 degrees.

It was warm, clear and not a bit like fall weather on Saturday in Andrews, Odessa, Rankin, Stanton, Big Lake, Crane and Lamesa.

Auto kills Odessa man

BIG SPRING — A 50-year-old Odessa man was killed in a car-pedestrian accident two miles east of here on Interstate 20 Saturday night.

Eugene M. Shepard of Odessa was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Bobby West shortly after 7 p.m. Saturday, a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety in Midland said.

Shepard walked from a parked car onto the traffic lane of the north service road of I-20 when the accident occurred. The driver of the car was Kay Wilson, 20, of Big Spring, troopers said.

Lost uranium investigations evoke more questions

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Documents released Saturday by the federal government reveal persisting suspicions that triggered three investigations in the last 11 years to see if uranium was diverted from a Pennsylvania factory to Israel for nuclear weapons production.

The first investigation was directed in 1966 by the now defunct Atomic Energy Commission and the last two by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, in 1969 and in 1976. All three investigations sought to find out if weapons-grade uranium ever was smuggled to Israel from a factory in Apollo, Pa., operated by the Nuclear Materials and Equipment Corp. (NUMEC) and owned by a man named Zalman Shapiro who had known nuclear business interests in Israel.

Each time, the federal investigators cleared NUMEC and Shapiro of any conspiracy to divert uranium to Israel or anywhere else. Each time Shapiro was cleared, fresh suspicions emerged to trigger a fresh investigation.

The latest FBI investigation, which took more than a year and was turned over to the White House no moe than twomonths ago, concludes there are no grounds to prosecute Shapiro for any crime "because there is no evidence of any crime.

In documents that cover the investigations of 1966, 1969 and 1976, one internal memo in 1967 to then AEC Chairman Glenn Seaborg is repeatedly quoted. The memo says: "It cannot be said unequivocally that theft or diversion has not taken place, but the most probable explanation is that NUMEC consistently underestimated its plant process losses and that the difference between actual estimated losses was passed on from completed jobs to new jobs."

When investigators exhumed a burial pit outside the NUMEC factory looking for the missing uranium, they found fewer than 10 pounds of the 206 pounds that was lost. The following 1966 telephone conversation between Curtis Nelson and James Haycock of the AEC was transcribed:

"Are they still digging up there?" Nelson asks.

"No, they've completed that," Haycock replies.

"Didn't turn out to be so rich after all, did it?" Nelson says.

"It's quite evident they've understated the amount of loss they've had to both the atmosphere and the river," Haycock goes on. "In addition, NUMEC has finally agreed they'll have to admit they used material from one contract to another. They hesitate to make this admission because their contracts said they were not to do it but with the amount of material being unaccounted for, then it's necessary to look at these transfers between contracts."

These are some of the things that emerge from 32 volumes of documents declassified by the Department of Energy Saturday on the three investigations of NUMEC.

In 1966, NUMEC was unable to account for 206 pounds of weapons-grade uranium that had been in its possession for more than two years. The uranium had gone to NUMEC from the Oak Ridge National Laboratory for fabrication into fuel elements for nuclear submarines and the Rover nuclear rocket engine then under development.

The documents show that at first the Atomic Energy Commission and the Central Intelligence Agency suspected the uranium may have been stolen by the Chinese because nuclear debris left in the atmosphere by the first Chinese atomic test in 1964 resembled in content the uranium missing from the NUMEC factory.

Once the AEC concluded that China had its own source of weapons-grade uranium, the investigation turned on concerns that Zalman Shapiro had close business ties to Israel and that he routinely shipped nuclear fuel components overseas.

"The concern has been expressed," the AEC staff wrote in a May 10, 1966, memo "that uranium could theoretically have been diverted by a mechanism of overshipping and understating the true quantities on the transfer document."

Shapiro's firm had a contract to build two nuclear generators for Israel. Shapiro was half-owner with the Israeli government of Isorad, a company based in Israel that made equipment to preserve foods by nuclear radiation. In a letter to then FBI director J. Edgar Hoover, the AEC asked if Shapiro should not register himself as a foreign agent. The FBI replied that he did not have to.

Chamber, SBA workshop Tuesday

Midland Chamber of Commerce Retail Committee and representatives of the Small Business Adminiatration will conduct a two-hour workshop at 9 a.m. Tuesday in the Midland Hilton ballroom.

The program, "Increasing Small Store Sales," is directed at store owners and employees who are interested in attracting and retaining customers and generally increasing sales.

Gene Bartus, chairman of the Retail Committee, said the workshop is being offered to Midland and area businesses as part of the committee's continuing program of "keeping shoppers in Midland and keeping customers coming back."

Topics to be discussed at the workshop include methods of attracting customers, how to compete with larger stores, how to emphasize customership and the uses of motivational selling, and effective advertising.

"We think the program will be very informative and stimulating, and we hope store owners and employees alike, will come and participate in the program as long as possible before having to return to their stores," Bartus said.

Persons or groups interested in taking part in the program may telephone the Chamber of Commerce office at 683-3381 to register.

Man OK after assault

A Midland man was treated for facial injuries at Midland Memorial Hospital and released after he was reportedly assaulted by two men outside of his apartment about 4:45 p.m. Friday, police were told.

Fidel Ramon of 119 W. Gist Ave. told police he was standing in the yard of the apartment complex when two men and two women started to threaten him with pistols.

The two men, Ramon told police, then jumped on him and beat him.

PURSE, PISTOL TAKEN

A purse containing a .38-caliber pistol, valued at $162, was taken from Lois Graham of 1200 block of East Golf Course Road while she was standing in the 1100 block of East Illinois Avenue about midnight Friday, she told police.

Graham told police she was standing on the sidewalk with the purse laying beside her on the ground when someone ran up and grabbed the purse.

Champ's condition improves

HOUSTON (AP) — A spokesman for Baylor College of Medicine said Saturday that former heavyweight champion Joe Louis' condition had improved to very satisfactory.

It was the best report on the 63-year-old former fighter since he underwent heart surgery earlier this week.

Late Friday night Louis was listed in satisfactory but stable condition. But early Saturday a hospital spokesman said Louis' status had "improved to very satisfactory and he is progressing quite well."

Louis is under the care of famed heart surgeon Dr. Michael DeBakey. The "Brown Bomber" was transferred to Houston from a Las Vegas hospital on Oct. 28.

Thomasville has brought that unique style back to life, reviving with it the romantic concept of fashionable furnishings for today's smart decorating. The pieces you see represented here are just part of an entire collection Thomasville is painstakingly producing. Special detailing includes cane and caned effects, the look of split bamboo and sika rattan wrapping, splayed legs, and other casually elegant accents. Gem, mineral show to have rare pieces

A xylophone carved out of sandstone, logs of amethyst and a tree with opal petals and leaves will be among the exhibits at the 15th annual gem and mineral show being sponsored by the Midland Gem & Mineral Society.

The show will be open to the public from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Nov. 12 and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Nov. 13 in the Midland County Exhibit Building on East U.S. Highway 80, club member Win Brown said Friday. Tickets are $1 for adults, 25 cents for children, ages 6 through 12, and free for children under 6.

At the show, Louise and Elmo Nolan, both of Mississippi, will be demonstrating how to create designs by filling wine bottles with naturally colored sands. Also, Jo Jennings of Irving will show how she makes jewelry from wax molds.

Dean Powell will show his skill at making jewelry out of silver sheets and wires while Barbara and Robert Johnson, both of California, demonstrate the art of gold plating, Brown said.

Included in the displays will be a fluorescent mineral exhibit, shone under a black light. The display is being provided by John Chalmers of Abilene. Also, a miniature room made of glass and a group of tiny metal men that move like human beings at the push of a button will be at the gem show. Both are the creations of George Mater of California.

A replica of a once-familiar sight on the American landscape, the grist mill, will be on exhibit. It is the project of Harold Snellen of Oklahoma. Also, Harry Elliott Jr. will display a rare mineral speciman—several emeralds in a matrix. Usually, emeralds are found scattered in a muddy substance, not in a hard matrix.

A farmer in everyday life, Fred Mattke of Helotes first started welding metal into shapes of windmills. Now he has branched into other things commonly seen on a ranch, such as a wagon. His metal sculptures will be on exhibit at the show, too.

Although the gem society members will not be selling any of their work with precious stones, nine dealers from eight states will be selling jewelry and other items they have made, as well as showing their collections of agate, petrified wood, cut gems and other minerals.

Like "show and tell," club members will have their work in faceting, silversmithing, gold and silver casting, jewelry and other crafts for the public to see, Brown said. One of the examples of stone faceting is the Lone Star gem cut. Using the state gem, a blue topaz, Gary Warden and Paul Warden Jr., both of San Angelo, with the aid of a computer, figured out how to cut the stone so that when persons look into it directly, they can see a five-pointed star, Brown said. On May 25, Gov. Dolph Briscoe signed the House Concurrent Resolution which made the "Lone Star" gem cut, the state gem cut. So far, Texas is the only state to have an official gem cut.

Food and drinks will be provided by the West Side Lions Club.

The Midland Gen & Mineral Society, organized in 1957, uses the proceeds from the show to finance classes in faceting, silversmithing, cabochon (a style of gem cutting) work and other educational programs.

First prisoner swap expected next month

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal prison officials say the first group of Americans brought back from Mexico under the new prisoner exchange program will be flown to a federal jail in San Diego for processing.

The prisoners will be held in the high-rise Metropolitan Correctional Center there until they are released, paroled, or transferred to prisons close to their homes.

Justice Department official Mike Abbell, who is running the exchange program, has said that the government hopes to return the first group of 240 prisoners on Dec. 9.

Abbell said he anticipates that about 50 of the prisoners will be given their freedom immediately because they have enough time off for good behavior coming to them. Such credits are available in U.S. prisons but not in Mexico's.

He estimated that another group, at least as large, will quickly win parole and be released within a month. The others may have to serve a further portion of their sentences before being paroled.

Based on preliminary interviews, Abbell said less than half of the 585 Americans now held in Mexico are likely to come home in the first group. The remainder are either unwilling to return or ineligible for various reasons.

Abbell said that 188 of the group have been arrested but not tried yet; another 50-80 have appeals going in the Mexican courts. Prisoners who wish to return to their native countries must have been convicted and exhausted their appeals to be eligible.

Abbell said another 32 are ineligible because they committed political crimes or crimes against immigration laws. Another dozen, while technically U.S. citizens, have been domiciled in Mexico, he said. And Abbell said there are 60 who say they don't want to come home.

Abbell said that number might increase as government defense lawyers make plain to the prisoners that to come back they must agree to waive their opportunity to file suit for their release in U.S. courts on grounds their convictions were tainted by improper procedures.

Both the United States and Mexico agreed not to review each other's legal system in the treaty negotiations. Several legal experts have predicted that prisoners who do not gain quick paroles will file suit challenging their convictions and the validity of the waivers.

The U.S. has negotiated a similar treaty with Canada, but the Canadian government has not yet ratified it.

The prisoners in Mexico are mostly people who were caught acting as "mules," or couriers, for drug smuggling operations. They and their families have complained about the justice system and prison conditions in Mexico.

Abbell said government privacy laws prohibited him from releasing the names of the prisoners held in Mexico.

Trustees to eye bid by teachers

The Midland school board will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday to consider a request for official recognition from the newly charted Midland Federation of Teachers.

On Oct. 19, the federation mailed a formal request for recognition to Schools Superintendent Dr. James H. Mailey.

According to the letter, neither the Texas Federation of Teachers nor the Midland Federation of Teachers demand the right to strike. The purpose of the union is to provide quality education for students and a dignified professional existence for teachers, said Dan Howard, president of the organization.

The request was not presented at the Oct. 26 board meeting because the administration was making an effort to discover what "formal recognition" entailed, Mailey said.

"Mailey said he does not [illegible] taken during the board meeting.

The board also will consider sharing utility costs at the Opportunity Center for Handicapped Children, preliminary plans for the vocational facility at Midland High School and proposed revisions of budgeting procedures.

In an executive session, board members will consider a real estate matter.

Control of eye impaired

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Nanette Fabray has lost control of one eye as a result of a severe concussion she received while working on a film, her publicist says.

The 57-year-old actress was reported in good condition Friday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, where she has been recovering since being knocked down by an elephant.

Publicist Dan Jenkins said in a statement that Miss Fabray was improving but still suffering "neurological deficits" after the accident Monday during filming of "Harper Valley PTA."

Miss Fabray fell backwards after being hit by the elephant, suffering a brain-stem concussion. Witnesses said a prankster frightened the elephant.

Wallace prepares for race

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace's press secretary says the governor's cabinet and closest aides met this week in preparation for a race by Wallace for the U.S. Senate next year.

Billy Joe Camp, doubling as campaign director, said the meeting was held to "clear up confusion" about the campaign and to tell those attending "how to make contributions."

Camp said those cabinet officials and aides who were still in doubt about whether Wallace intended to seek the seat now held by Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., "were assured that he is running."

New 'Super' High Protein Pill Gives Fast Weight Loss
LOS ANGELES (Special) — Great news for overweight people! A spectacular breakthrough in the field of weight reduction has just been made by medical science, and it is sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss. It's an amazing new improved version of the popular high protein diet featuring the use of a new "super-charged high protein pill" that makes weight loss easy without starvation or hunger pangs.
Eat All You Want
According to many doctors and medical publications, it is the surest, safest, and easiest way to lose weight ever developed. Yet, it enables you to become slim, trim and attractive "while still eating almost as much as you want."
The new version is very simple, and it tastes good. It features a delicious chewable (candy-like) super high protein pill that puts an end to the (old) inconvenient mess, fuss and high cost of mixing and blending liquid protein drinks several times a day.
Lose 10 lbs. in 1 Week
Reports indicate that the average weight loss is about 10 pounds in one week. Total weight losses of 20 to 30 pounds are common, and even 50 to 100 pounds were reported.
Estimates indicate that already as many as one million people are now easily losing weight every day with high protein diets in one form or another.

Light Texas turnout seen Tuesday for vote on constitutional changes

By GARTH JONES
By The Associated Press

Texans cast a vote Tuesday on seven proposed amendments to the state's much-amended constitution, with Houston and Dallas expected to provide most of the votes.

Most polling places will open at 7 a.m. All must close at 7 p.m.

The Texas Election Bureau estimates that only about 20 percent of Texas' 5.9 million eligible voters will bother to cast ballots. Most of these will be in the Houston and Dallas areas where controversial local issues will pull voters to the polls.

The secretary of state has no estimate but hopes there will be a turnout of more than 20 percent.

Local issues that will dictate turnout in a number of areas include:

—In Houston, voters will make a decision in a 12-way mayor's race, a city council contest, name a new city comptroller, and select four school board members.

—In Dallas, the voters will name a new state representative and determine the outcome of a $215 million bond package designed to finance a new courthouse, jail and other capital improvements.

—San Antonio has the proposition of a metropolitan transit authority, coupled with a one-half percent increase in the city sales tax rate.

—Austin will be filling a state representative vacancy and deciding if $17 million should be spent to build a new jail and remodel the courthouse.

—Amarillo and El Paso will be selecting new state representatives.

Since the present state constitution was adopted by voters in 1876, there have been 221 changes accepted and 130 other proposed amendments refused.

The seven proposed amendments on the Nov. 8 ballot were approved by the 1977 Legislature along with eight other proposals that will be on the November 1978 ballot.

Two of the current proposed constitution changes have attracted more attention than the others.

The first proposition on the ballot would increase the size of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, one of the most overworked appellate courts in the nation, from five to nine members. It also would permit judges to sit in panels of three to speed review of cases appealed to them from local district courts.

Proponents say the change would speed up justice and relieve the court's workload. Opponents say Texas has too many judges already, and it would be better to merge the criminal and civil courts, rather than encourage separate divisions.

The No. 6 proposition, probably the most controversial on the ballot, would let the legislature authorize Texas' national and state banks to use electronic devices in shopping centers and other remote locations to pay bills, make deposits, withdraw money and make other fund transfers. Supporters say it would augment the present checking system, giving customers an optional and speedier method of handling their money. Opponents see it as a foot-in-the-door for branch banking, which is prohibited by the constitution.

Proposition No. 2 would provide another $200 million for the veterans land program, plus allowing unmarried widows of veterans to buy land under the low down payment, lowinterest terms. Proponents say the extension of the 30-year-old program is needed to be sure all Vietnam veterans are included. Opponents say the federal government provides adequately for veterans.

Proposed amendment No. 3 would allow a district court to deny bail to a person accused of a felony while out on bail following a previous indictment. It also would deny bail to a repeat offender who is caught using a deadly weapon in committing another felony. Proponents say it would curb crimes. Opponents argue it violates personal rights.

Proposition No. 4 would allow the legislature to grant exemptions from state property taxes to preserve cultural, historical or natural history sites. Opponents say this erodes the tax base, particularly in central sections of older cities.

Another proposed amendment, No. 5, would permit the legislature to let producers of poultry, livestock and other raw agricultural commodities to form associations and collect assessment on sales of their products to promote their business. Opponents say it means consumers will end up paying higher food prices.

Amendment No. 7 would change the name of the State Judicial Qualifications Commission to the State Commission on Judicial Conduct. It also would enlarge body from nine to 11 members. Opponents say this would leave only four judicial members on the commission and would be a threat to an independent judiciary.

Dees named to command Midland Region of DPS

Ira William Dees has been promoted to regional commander of the Texas Department of Public Safety's Region Four, headquartered in Midland, Col. Wilson E. Speir, DPS director, announced recently.

Dees, 47, was promoted to major and named commander of traffic law enforcement and DPS support operations in the Midland Region, which includes 49 West Texas counties.

Dees was highway patrol captain in the Corpus Christi District for the past six years.

Dees joined the DPS in 1957 as a patrolman-trainee. He was a DPS trooper in San Antonio, and was promoted to sergeant and stationed in El Paso in 1963. In 1967, he was named lieutenant and assigned to Beaumont. He transferred to Corpus Christi in 1972 and was promoted to captain.

Dees was born in Alvarado and reared in Kyle. He completed a tour with the U.S. Army and saw service in the Korean War.

Dees and his wife, Lorene, have a son, Terry Wayne, who is serving with the U.S. Army in Alabama, and a daughter, Sharon, who is a student at Edison Freshman School.

"We are looking forward to being residents of Midland and serving the citizens of Texas in this area," Dees said.

Aide says crude price hike caused ills in '70s

By MARTIN MERZER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The recession of the mid-1970s was caused primarily by the fourfold increase in Mideast oil prices. Now, a chief economic aide of President Carter says the nation's continued emergence from that recession can be blocked by another energy crisis.

"The potential exists for a bright economic future," Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, told about 1,800 bankers during a speech this past week.

"But there is one critical premise which underlies that conclusion: We must have in place an effective national energy policy."

It came as no surprise that a close Carter aide was seeking support for the President's energy plan as it was being discussed and altered in Congress. But the scenario presented by Schultze of a nation without a comprehensive plan to deal with oil and natural gas shortages was bleaker than most.

This is his view of what would happen economically by 1992 if we don't begin planning ahead for energy:

—"Energy prices in the U.S. would skyrocket as a worldwide scramble for increasingly short oil supplies ensued.

—"We would be pressed into hastily fashioned and draconian measures to force conversion to coal and other resources; to limit automobile use; to ration heating oil and gas; and to spend huge sums of taxpayers' money on crash programs.

—"Industries that depend heavily on energy would begin losing money, laying off workers and scrapping their productive capacity.

—"Mounting energy prices would mean accelerating inflation, even as the number of jobs available in the economy declined.

—"U.S. products would become increasingly uncompetitive on world markets; the value of the dollar would ultimately fall; and the cost of products we import would rise rapidly.

—"Finally, because business firms can predict that this would be the outcome in the absence of an energy policy, their investments in the intervening years would begin to dry up. We won't have to wait until the inevitable crisis occurs before its anticipation costs Americans jobs and incomes."

Schultze said he was concerned that if a comprehensive energy plan were not in effect, the administration's ambitious economic plans for the next three years would be blocked.

The administration believes it can reduce personal and business taxes, fund youth and minority employment programs, continue the economic upswing and balance the federal budget by 1981, he said.

"Without an energy framework for the future, however, the best laid plans will eventually come to naught," he added.

He pointed out that other industrial nations have increased oil and gas prices to the point where significant conservation is underway.

In a related development, a study released by the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation predicted that the nation would become increasingly reliant on oil imports even though the growth rate of energy consumption and the actual amount of gasoline used in the United States would decrease through the 1980s.

The President wants to reduce imports to 6 million barrels a day by 1985, but the foundation — which has a reputation for independence although it is partially supported by oil companies — estimated that imports in 1985 would be around 9.6 million barrels a day.

In other business developments this past week:

—The Labor Department reported that the nation's unemployment rate edged up from 6.9 percent to 7 percent in October, showing little change for the seventh consecutive month.

Unemployment has fluctuated between 6.9 percent and 7.1 percent since April, and department analysts said that showed the economy was not growing fast enough to account for the steady increase in the labor force.

—Several major retailing firms reported double-digit percentage increases in October sales, with the other firms reporting smaller rises as the industry prepared for the busy Chstmas shopping season.

Analysts said the strong figures continued a trend that began in August and likely would carry through the Christmas season.

—The nation's money supply, closely watched as an indicator of future inflation and the source of a dispute between the Carter administration and federal banking officials, increased in the latest reporting week.

Such hikes, if not quickly checked, are believed by many economists to foreshadow an increased rate of inflation. The latest boost was expected by analysts, and came despite recent moves by the Federal Reserve Board to reduce the supply.

TV stations put ban on gold advertising

NEW YORK (AP) — Three New York television stations no longer will accept advertising for South African Krugerrand gold coin, which many Americans have been purchasing as investments.

The decision by WABC, WNBC and WCBS — flagship stations of the ABC, NBC and CBS networks — was disclosed Friday, the day the United Nations clamped an arms embargo on South Africa in response to that nation's actions against black nationalists.

The action by the New York stations does not mean the South Africans are locked out of the American market, said a spokesman for the Doyle Dane and Bernbach advertising agency, which handles accounts on the coin.

The spokesman said other New York media outlets — including TV stations and newspapers — would carry advertising. Ads also are scheduled in 24 other cities, he said.

A spokesman for WNBC-TV said the station notified the agency Oct. 28 that it would no longer carry the ads because of recent developments in South Africa.

WABC-TV spokesmen said the ads "would be potentially offensive to a sizable segment of our viewing audience" and that the station had stopped taking the ads Monday.

WCBS-TV also decided to reject ads Oct. 28, but would not comment on its reasons.

The spokesmen for the ABC and NBC affiliates said the decisions were made independently.

The Krugerrand coins are advertised as "a hedge against inflation." The coins are about the size of a half-dollar, contain one ounce of gold and cost approximately $179 apiece, depending on the current price of gold.

"Buying the Krugerrand is like buying the blood of black miners in South Africa," said Paul Irish, associate director of the American Committee on Africa.

BUSINESS NOTEBOOK

Employers will get word on new increase

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas employers, already faced with the prospect of increased Social Security taxes, apparently will get word of another increase — though not in the same league — when the State Board of Insurance takes up worker's compensation rates Thursday (Nov. 10).

SBI actuaries aren't ready to release figures on the increase, but report the change should be "under five percent."

No one is likely to welcome reports of any increase, of course, but SBI officials anticipate both the increase — and opposition to it — will be "minimal."

Another matter to be taken up by the SBI this week is the question of whether so-called "deposit term" life insurance policies — which require payment of a "deposit" or additional premium in the first year of a 10-year term ($10 per $1,000 of coverage).

Those "deposits" are to be repaid double at the end of 10 years, but are lost if the policy is allowed to lapse before the end of that period.

Those policies have been banned in a number of other states, and the SBI is being asked to do the same thing in Texas. (That hearing — or more properly that continuation of an earlier hearing — is set for Wednesday.)

•

A recent survey of commercial banks involved in permanent real estate mortgages shows three Texas banks, two of them in Lubbock, were among the top 100 in the nation in that category for the 12 months ending June 30.

Lubbock National Bank showed $160,850,580 (representing 6,311 mortgages) to rank 22 nationally, with Plains National Bank, Lubbock, No. 66, at $44,275,000 (2,907 mortgages).

At the No. 55 spot was Broadway National Bank, San Antonio, with $60,577,406 (2,752 mortgages).

That survey also showed Lomas & Nettleton Financial Corp., Dallas, the largest mortgage company in the U.S., with $5,521,703,951 in mortgages services during that 12-month period.

•

Seven applications to sell a total $5,634,155 in securities in Texas were filed with the State Securities Board in the past week, Securities Commissioner Richard D. Latham reports.

The five included those of Equitx, Inc., Rockwall, for $2,000,000, and State Bancshares, Inc., Olton, for $1,538,355.

Five permits for a total $5,305,687 were granted, including Tracy-Locke Co., Inc., Dallas, $405,687.

•

The Texas Supreme Court, in Southwestern Investment Co. vs. Robert W. Mannix (from the 10th District Court, Bexar County), issued an opinion on a motion for rehearing to distinguish between "buyer-provided" and "seller-procured" insurance in retail installment contracts.

The court had held earlier that where a retail installment contract requires insurance, the agreement must specify the "kind, coverage, term and amount of premium" for each insurance coverage required.

That opinion, the court said, should have made the distinction between instances where the seller obtains the coverage, and instances where the buyer provides the insurance.

The court noted that "abuse in the area of insurance requirements in credit transactions has been prevalent in at least two areas in the past . . . charging for insurance coverage where the buyer had no notice he was buying (insurance) . . . and . . . requiring insurance and selling it at exorbitant prices without giving the buyer the opportunity to acquire better terms."

Those problems arise, however, the court said, with "seller-procured" insurance and not where the buyer is providing his own, existing insurance.

Gas prices increase

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock said Friday that the price of natural gas produced and sold in Texas crept upwards 19 percent during the first half on fiscal 1977.

During the same period, Sept. 1, 1976, to Feb. 28, 1977, Texas-produced natural gas cost Texas purchasers more than twice as much as buyers from out of state, Bullock noted.

An analysis compiled for "Fiscal Notes," the monthly financial statement published by the comptroller's office, shows that the price for all Texas natural gas averaged 81.1 cents per thousand cubic feet for the six-month period.

This is 11.8 cents over the fiscal 1976 average price of 69.3 cents per mcf for Texas natural gas.

The average price of Texas-produced natural gas to in-state buyers during the six-month period was 97.1 cents per thousand. This is 19 per cent over the 81.5 cents average for intrastate sales in fiscal 1976.

Inventors losing out to quick-buck artists

By DENISE A. CARABET
Copley News Service

Amateur inventors are a special lot. Not only must they nuture their ideas through to working designs in their spare time, but also must fight their way through a veritable jungle of invention-promotion firms which offer to help them — for a fee.

There are companies that are on the up-and-up. And then there are others. Three years ago, the Federal Trade Commission launched an industry-wide investigation of the patent development and marketing firms across the country. It is continuing, said an FTC spokesman recently, "a first-hand look into a more than $100 million-a-year industry...sometimes inhabited by quick-buck artists."

One year ago, the San Diego, Calif., district attorney's office brought to trial and won indictment of seven people and five corporations doing business under a San Diego-based parent company named Development and Marketing International (DMI).

At the time of indictment, the complaint stated the invention-promotions company had bilked 2,000 amateur inventors across the nation out of "development" fees of $3.6 million.

Recently, the Securities and Exchange Commission filed a complaint against New York-based Lawrence Peska Associates, a 4-year-old invention-promotions firm. The complaint states that Peska failed to register what the SEC considered securities in its course of business.

The SEC also alleged in the complaint that the company and its president were involved in "a scheme to prey on the hopes and dreams of amateur inventors." The way this was accomplished, said the SEC, was the company offered and sold securities in the form of investment contracts relating to invention-development programs in which the inventors were offered, for a hefty fee, a package that would evaluate, promote and patent an invention.

According to the SEC, the company, which has 15 offices in the United States, Canada and overseas, used advertisements to solicit inventors and charged fees of more than $1,600 for services that the SEC termed of "inferior quality."

The Peska firm's promotion and publicity service amounted to no more than a "fill-in-the-blank" type of press release to newspapers and other periodicals. The rest of the release was dedicated to extolling the services of the Peska company.

According to the Better Business Bureau, an inventor would pay two fees to the Peska company. The first is a preliminary Product Research Agreement, which cost between $150 and $250. The second is the Introduction to Industry Agreement, which the inventor would sign at the same time he or she made out a check for between $800 and $1,000.

The SEC claimed that the company made substantially all of its income from the fees paid by amateur inventors and not from royalties generated from successful marketing of inventions.

The SEC also charged that none of Peska's 4,000 clients ever made a profit, and the usual return was less than the paid fee. In fiscal 1976, Lawrence Peska Associates grossed $1.5 million, according to the complaint.

TI sales hit record level

DALLAS — Earnings per share, backlog of unfilled orders and net sales reached record levels during the third quarter of 1977, Texas Instruments, Ind., officials reported today.

Net sales billed for the quarter were $516,597,000, an increase of 21 percent over the third quarter of 1976. Net income was $29,534,000, and earnings per share were $1.29, both up 22 percent over the same quarter a year ago.

TI Chairman Mark Shepherd Jr. and President J. Fed Bucy said in a report to stockholders: "The demand for TI's products and services continued at a high level in the third quarter, with the backlog of unfilled orders increasing to $879 million as of Sept. 30, 1977. This is an increase of $201 million over the backlog a year ago, and $70 million from the end of the second quarter of 1977."

Dividend declared

AMARILLO — The board of directors of Pioneer Corp. has announced a regular dividend of 37½ cents per share, payable to stockholders of record Nov. 17. The dividend is payable Dec. 2.

The directors announced consolidated net income for the third quarter of 1977 was $8,832,706 compared to $8,585,036 for the same nine months of 1976.

Earnings per share for the quarter were reported as 95 cents, compared to 92 cents for the third quarter of 1976.

Passenger record set

DALLAS — Southwest Airlines' October passenger traffic increased 73 percent when the airline carried 243,653 passengers.

The same figure for October 1976 was 140,545 passengers.

Revenue passenger miles climbed to 72,349,105 up 97 percent over October 1976 when 36,777,737 passenger miles were logged.

October was the largest passenger traffic month in the airline's history.

by Bill Beattie

"What is funny about us," a noted educator observed, "is precisely that we take ourselves too seriously. We are rather insignificant little bundles of energy and vitality in a vast organization of life. But we pretend that we are the very center of this organization. The less we are able to laugh at ourselves the more it becomes necessary and inevitable that others laugh at us."

There was a time when foreign visitors commented enviously on American friendliness, optimism, generosity and good humor. The national mood today might well be characterized by long, gray faces punctuated with turned-down mouths and very deep frowns that scowl at the slightest annoyance.

Carlyle said, "True humor springs not more from the head than from the heart. — It is not contempt; its essence is love. — It issues not in laughter, but in still smiles, which lie far deeper."

In times of trouble Abe Lincoln stated that he would surely die if he could not laugh. When the times are out of joint, people need the soothing salve of good humor. We need to ward off pretence, phony status symbols, bigotry, folly, and traits which society tries to camouflage with socially acceptable labels.

Joel Wells, editor of Critic Magazine, recently said that Americans are in danger of losing their ability to think clearly and positively unless they regain their sense of humor. He also said that humor is losing out to computers, to forms, to charge cards and traffic jams; to hatred, bigotry and commercialism; to rampant technology and frightening change. In times of unnerving tensions, what is needed by everyone is good humor.

Humor is a defender of the human order, for it can help the individual preserve his self-respect. Humor can make a troubled world a tolerable place, a more decent place for everyone.

Good HUMOR is the health of the soul; sadness is its poison.

President Hodge

Midland's own Mrs. J. Howard (Veda) Hodge is a truly remarkable person .... a good citizen who gives generously and unselfishly of her time, effort and means in serving her community and multiple worthwhile causes and institutions here and across the state and nation.

This service to and for others has gained for her numerous honors and much well-merited recognition, and it also has brought added acclaim to her home city, of which she long has been a loyal and most effective booster.

In recent years, much of her interest and effort have been in the field of higher education, and it is in this particular area from which her most recent recognition has come.

Mrs. Hodge has been elected president of the board of trustees of Howard Payne University, Brownwood, of which she is a long-time friend, benefactress, graduate and trustee.

She is the first woman to head the governing body of the Baptist school, from which she also holds an honorary degree. She also was the first woman to receive Howard Payne's "Ex-Student of the Year" award.

Mrs. Hodge also is a substantial contributor to and supporter of Midland College. A contribution by Mrs. Hodge to North Texas State University was announced recently by the Denton school.

These are great, meaningful gifts which will benefit college students for many, many years to come, all made possible by the interest and generosity of Mrs. Hodge and her late husband, who also was the holder of a an honorary degree from Howard Payne.

Long active in club work in Midland, Mrs. Hodge is a past president of the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs. She also is active in civic and church affairs here.

She has served as a delegate to the National Democratic Convention and as a member of several White House committees. She has been recognized on a statewide "Outstanding Women of Texas" program.

Mrs. Hodge recently was reappointed by Gov. Dolph Briscoe to another term on the Texas Commission on the Arts and Humanities.

She accepts all the honors in a most gracious manner, in keeping with the gracious lady which she is, as she keeps right on striving for an improved system of higher education and the betterment of her community, state and nation.

Congratulations are in order for Mrs. Hodge on her election as president of the Howard Payne University Board of Trustees, along with all best wishes always from her fellow Midlanders.

More; or less(?)

The United States Postal Service reports the mails were stuffed with 92 million pieces in the fiscal year ended September 30. This is 2 million more than the previous fiscal year.

The senior assistant postmaster now is predicting a budget surplus in 1979, which would be the first ever for the service. And, as a result, he also predicts lower rate increases.

Some persons are bound to wonder, however, if the senior assistant isn't pressing the service's prophetic luck.

After all, it was only a year or so ago that the postmaster general himself, as gloomy as his senior assistant now is cheerful, predicted that, far from exceeding 90 billion, volume would slump during the next five years to "83 or 84 billion — and never recover."

That's the way with predictions both in and out of the Postal Service.

Anyway, we like and appreciate the cheerfulness of the senior assistant and hope that his predictions concerning a budget surplus and lower rate increases are somewhere in the ball park.

HOUSE REJECTS BILL:

Reform too tough for lawmakers to swallow

By BENJAMIN SHORE
Copley News Service

Benjamin Shore

WASHINGTON — Does the public care how efficiently and economically the House of Representatives, which costs $250 million a year to operate, runs itself?

House members who voted against a carefully planned reform package are gambling that voters next year will think nothing of it.

"This was not ethics, it was housekeeping," an aide to Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., said in an interview.

By a 160-252 vote, the broad-ranging package of streamlining and accounting proposals was shelved not only for this year but also for many years to come, the aide said.

Even though O'Neill said just before the vote "the public wants this place cleaned up," the majority was not impressed.

"If there is anything that is mismanaged, it is the internal operations of this Congress," the speaker said to no avail.

The House last March adopted a tough ethics code, sparked in large measure by public outrage over the Rep. Wayne Hays-Elizabeth Ray affair.

A special House Commission on Administrative Review, headed by Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., was created to study various proposals and present recommendations to the House.

The ethics code, featuring financial disclosure, was the first part, management reform the second.

But the ethics code was so difficult for many to swallow that their resentment killed the housekeeping proposals, according to several commission members.

"There was no way we could invoke Liz Ray's name on this one," a member said in an interview, referring to the former Ohio congressman's secretary whom he hired primarily for sexual favors.

"This was strictly internal House politics, and if any (election) opponent tries to make an issue of it next year, he'll bore the voters to tears."

Various public opinion surveys tend to bear this out. While voters indicate concern over ethical behavior, few have an interest in the inner workings of the Congress.

The Obey commission's main recommendations were for the appointment of a special committee to plan a reduction of the present array of legislative committees that consume so much of the representatives' time, and the appointment of a full-time House administrator.

Other proposals called for:

— The creation of a grievance committee to hear complaints of race, sex and age discrimination in congressional jobs (federal discrimination laws don't apply to Congress).

— The hiring of an auditor to check House books.

— A $12,000-a-year allowance for congressmen wanting to buy computer services.

All House Republicans voted against the package, arguing that they were blocked from offering toughening amendments during the floor debate.

The GOP argued that it wanted, for example, an independent outside auditor to examine the House accounts, and also wanted tougher guidelines to curb abuse of congressional expense accounts.

But Obey, whose commission worked all year at a cost of $750,000, says the Republicans just didn't want the Democratic majority to get credit for "cleaning up the place."

That kind of argument implies a belief that these housekeeping reforms could be turned into a political issue. But aides to O'Neill and Obey agree with the polls that the public really doesn't care.

O'Neill believes some of the commission's proposals will be adopted next year in separate pieces put forth by reform factions and the House Administration Committee.

"But it won't have the same impact (on the public) that a fat package would have had," O'Neill's aide said, "assuming the public gives a hoot.

"There are a lot of politicians up here betting that it doesn't."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Richard Nixon's attempted coup

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Perhaps the most audacious of the Watergate schemes was Richard Nixon's attempt to Nixonize the federal bureaucracy and bring it under his tight, personal control. Without the consent of Congress, he intended to increase the power of the presidency in a revolutionary way.

If he had been able to pull it off, it would have amounted almost to a coup against our existing form of government. He succeeded to a degree in subverting the Civil Service Commission, which is supposed to protect the professional bureaucracy from political encroachment.

The story of Nixon's attempted coup has never been fully told and the conspirators have never been held accountable. In fact, the commission is still populated at its upper levels by officials who helped him subvert the civil service system. Here are the details:

Richard Nixon had an intense distrust of the millions who composed the permanent government. He often complained that the federal bureaucracy was dominated by "liberals" and "academics." He would confide to intimates that a "Jewish cabal" had taken over this office or that agency. He issued orders that no more "Ivy Leaguers" should be appointed to high positions.

Nixon's denigration of the civil service system led the White House to begin a quiet political purge. Those who were considered unreliable were shunted into obscure jobs and replaced by people with Nixon credentials. The White House also set up a political clearance system, which checked the political philosophies and connections of hundreds of new applicants for government jobs.

This subversion of the regular institutions of government, of course, was conducted in the utmost secrecy. Even in the backrooms of the White House, Nixon aides were careful not to refer to it in political terms. Admonished the White House hatchetman in charge of the purge, Fred Malek: "I propose we stop calling it 'politicalizing the executive branch' and instead call it something like strengthening the government's responsiveness." The euphemism stuck and the operation became known thereafter as the Responsiveness Program.

By executive decree, President Nixon also sought to create around himself a super-cabinet of loyal aides who would have total power over the bureaucracy. They would force his policies upon the government through White House agents who would be installed in every department.

Nixon, meanwhile, intended to encapsulate himself from unnecesary turmoil, devote his energies to formulating policies and deal regularly only with those select few who were on his personal wave length. He would leave it to them to enforce his edicts through a political system that would turn the bureaucracy into an unquestioning, subservient arm of the White House.

But he found out that a seething enterprise like the federal government could not be compartmentalized, cordoned off and led from a glass bubble. He left behind, nevertheless, civil service officials who not only supported his power play but who allegedly destroyed documents to prevent Congress from learning of the abuses.

The transition team, which helped turn over the reins of government to Jimmy Carter, was sharply critical of several career people at the Civil Service Commission. Although the transition papers have been kept secret, inside sources say the final report pointed an accusatory finger, for example, at John Cole.

He heads the powerful Bureau of Personnel Management Evulation, which had the authority to examine the personnel practices of any government agency. Yet despite the critical evaluation of his own performance, Cole is still evaluating others. Furthermore, the commission has no plans to transfer him.

This has upset Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., who has been keeping a watchful congressional eye on the commission for years. He has written a stinging, secret letter to President Carter calling for the removal not only of Cole but of the executive director, Ray Jacobson.

Declares the letter: "Suspending the authority of (Jacobson and Cole) is essential. Until questions of document destruction and concealment of the commission's role in violating the merit system are answered, these individuals should not be allowed to exercise authority."

Some of the past abuses may yet wind up in court. Congressional critics complain that the Justice Department has been less than vigorous about investigating these excesses of the Nixon era. But Civil Service Chairman Alan Campbell says he was assured by high Justice officials only last week that the investigation is still active.

Another scandal, meanwhile, has been bubbling at the Civil Service Commission. This is the agency that is supposed to enforce anti-discrimination standards throughout the government. Yet, apparently, the commission itself is guilty of discrimination. Its equal employment director, Clinton Smith, complained in a memo, meant for official eyes only, that top commission officials are impending efforts "to effectively enforce internally the very laws and regulations the Civil Service Commission is responsible for enforcing in the government-wide merit system and (equal opportunity) programs."

NICK THIMMESCH

On Richard Helms and Adam and Eve -- and others

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — The American public probably couldn't care less, but there is a lot of buzzing in this town over how Richard M. Helms, one-time CIA director, got off on charges of lying before a Senate committee.

Most Americans these days are alternately enjoying the glorious autumn season or fretting over how to meet the expenses of the upcoming holidays and the tough winter which might follow.

In Washington, however, there was discussion and debate this past week over whether Helms, who admitted lying under oath for what he believed was the good of the country, should have been appropriately punished or treated in the mild fashion he was.

Back in 1970 the Nixon-Kissinger axis was concerned that Marxist Salvatore Allende would become president of Chile in the scheduled free election. Since the Soviet Union and other Communist nations had long helped subsidize Leftist forces and publications in Chile, the Nixon White House reasoned that the United States should do the same for the opposition to Allende.

Millions of dollars were funneled to these pro-American forces in Chile, some of them through the branch of an American bank in Uruguay. The CIA was in charge of this operation, though its specialists had already declared that "the U.S. has no vital interests within Chile," yet also claimed there would be "tangible economic losses" if Allende became president. The CIA also saw such an event as a "psychological setback" for the United States, while noting that it would not significantly alter the world power balance.

Nixon-Kissinger were worried about such matters as American strength and the balance of power, so they enlisted Helms in the anti-Allende effort. Helms was in up to his neck.

But when he was questioned about it under oath in early 1973, Helms waffled and wavered and did not tell the truth. When Watergate rushed and the CIA investigation followed, Helms was found out. The Department of Justice initiated its inquiry into Helms' testimony two years ago, and the Carter administration was left to see the case through.

Now Richard Helms had been in trouble before in this town and was never prosecuted. While Watergate figures were scorned and literally spat on in public, Helms was feted at small dinner parties by leading members of the Establishment, including senators, journalists and others who ostensibly should have been investigating him.

That was his good luck as a long-certified member of the Establishment. Henry Kissinger enjoys the same good luck. Kissinger also lied under oath a fair number of times, but show me the person who will prosecute him, and I will show you a ghost of the Revolutionary War. The Hon. Leon Jaworski, once confronted with allegations that Kissinger had lied under oath, sputtered: "But Henry is the only pillar left in this Administration."

Helms lied under oath, but so did others who were prosecuted and wound up in the slammer. Helms cited national security in his defense. So did John Ehrlichman, but he never could get it into the record, and he now works nights in a federal prison camp.

In this town there are many connections between law firms, corporations, labor unions, foundations, special-interest organizations, layers of upper-level bureaucrats, lobbyists and hangers-on. Put them altogether and they spell Establishment. Launch a major assault on the Establishment, and you are in trouble. Be fortunate enough to be a central, even quiet, figure in the Establishment, and you wind up pleading no contest to misdemeanor charges. Your name? Richard Helms.

Some purists in this town complain there is a double standard of justice, and indeed there is. Some declare that if Helms gets off this way, others in the Establishment will lie to congressional committees in the future. Indeed, they will. Some people say that life itself is unfair. Yes, it is.

There haven't been too many basic changes in human nature since Adam and Eve.

(Helms Friday was fined $2,000 and given a suspended two-year prison sentence.)

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Problem: Where do we begin in cutting governmental red tape?

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — "Of making many books there is no end," so the writer of Ecclesiastes admonishes us, "and much study is a weariness of the flesh."

Paraphrasing that to apply to regulations and rules by state government doesn't take too great an effort — and undoubtedly there are lots of folks who would agree that the list of regulations by state agencies seems endless, and produces a good bit of weariness and discomfort.

That point was driven home recently when the secretary of state's office issued a special bulletin, in eye-straining size type, listing for 157 pages just the titles and subdivisions of rules by state agencies.

Everyone, it appears, has a rule or regulation. Most folks have dozens. Some, thousands.

That includes the governor's office, the attorney general's office, the board of examiners in the fitting and dispensing of hearing aids, the Texas Feed and Fertilizer Control Service and the Texas Structural Pest Control Board, and every agency up and down the line.

A scanning of the listed rules reveals some of the fascinating — or perhaps horrifying — trivia which has been worthy of the attention and regulatory efforts of someone in the state bureaucracy.

Take the secretary of state's rule 004.14.531, bearing the formidable title, "Status of Sale of Commemorative Editions of the 1975 Texas Inaugural Magazine for $10 a Copy at the Victory Dinner Sponsored by the Texas Democratic Party to Honor the State's Newly Elected Officials on the Evening of January 20, 1975."

That is, admittedly, more informative than, say, 380.03.00.001 (hopefully that's correct) of the Texas Board of Chiropractic Examiners, called "Rules and Regulations."

Some have a certain degree of intrigue for those not associated with the industry or profession being regulated.

What, for example is the "Chandler Policy" of the State Board of Examiners in the Basic Sciences?

What is involved in the Texas Cosmetology Commission "Cold Waving and Related Theory" (or "Wigs and Hairpieces and Related Theory")?

Or who are the people who hold permits falling under parks and wildlife's "Exotic Shellfish Culture Permit Issuance Procedures?" Or has P&W ever suspended, as its rules provide, anyone's "Rough Fish Removal Permit?"

And just what is required under the department of health's requirements for "French Custard Ice Cream" labels — or sanitation in pecan shelling plants?

All this isn't just to take a cheap shot at what one politician used to call "pointy-headed bureaucrats."

Those regulations, in many cases, were made under mandate from the legislature to pass just such regulations.

And in many cases, they're important to the folks who fall under them — and to the public.

For instance, lots of us have an interest in finding out just what is going into the French custard ice cream which we may be buying. And if it includes axle grease, we may want to reconsider.

Nor would most of us want to buy pecans from Ol' Bubba Dwayne's Pecan Plant if Bubba Dwayne is stabling his milk goats in the shelling house.

But who really cares about the 1975 Texas Inaugural Magazine at $10 a Copy, etc.?

That is the dilemma which state government, and those who want to change, find themselves in — everyone agrees the red tape in government is suffocating and strangling, but just where does one start cutting?

There aren't any easy answers.

But obviously, some trimming is in order.

ART BUCHWALD

The role of little black box

WASHINGTON — The new sport in the United States is television ratings. Every week the newspapers print the box scores concerning what network had the biggest share of the viewing audience. Since there are only three networks, the game gets pretty boring. The only reason people keep watching it is that so many executives' lives are at stake.

In football there are enough teams so that if you come in first, second or third it is not the end of the world. But in television being first is everything, coming in second is embarrassing, and ending up third is a mortal sin.

The fact that all three networks are making zillions of dollars has no effect on their standings. This fall, ABC is No. 1, NBC is No. 2 and CBS is No. 3. Because of this, heads are rolling at NBC and CBS. Grown men in Brooks Brothers suits are throwing themselves in front of commuter trains. Others, who used to travel around the country in private company jets, are now taking the bus to their new homes in the South Bronx.

My wife, who doesn't know how the game is played, thinks by switching her dial she can save a network executive's life.

The other night we were watching a TV show on ABC and she said, "Why don't we switch to CBS?"

"What for?" I asked.

"They need the business," she replied. "I just read they were No. 3 in the ratings."

"We can't help them by switching the dial," I told her.

"Why not?" she wanted to know.

"Because we don't have a black box. You see, the ratings hinge on 1,200 homes. Mr. Nielsen puts a black box in each one of them, and then on the basis of that he knows how many people in the United States are tuned in to any particular show."

"But suppose we're not watching the same show as the person who has a black box?"

"That's not Mr. Nielsen's problem. He has to assume that we are watching the same program as the person with the black box. That's how the ratings are made."

"Well, why don't we get a black box and help out CBS and NBC? I don't see why ABC always has to be first."

"You can't get a black box just by asking for it. Mr. Nielsen decides who gets the black boxes and who doesn't. If everyone had a black box Nielsen would never be able to tally the results. He doesn't have the staff to check 100 million black boxes. In fact, he'd go broke installing them."

"I wonder who has our black box?" my wife asked.

"What do you mean, who has our black box?"

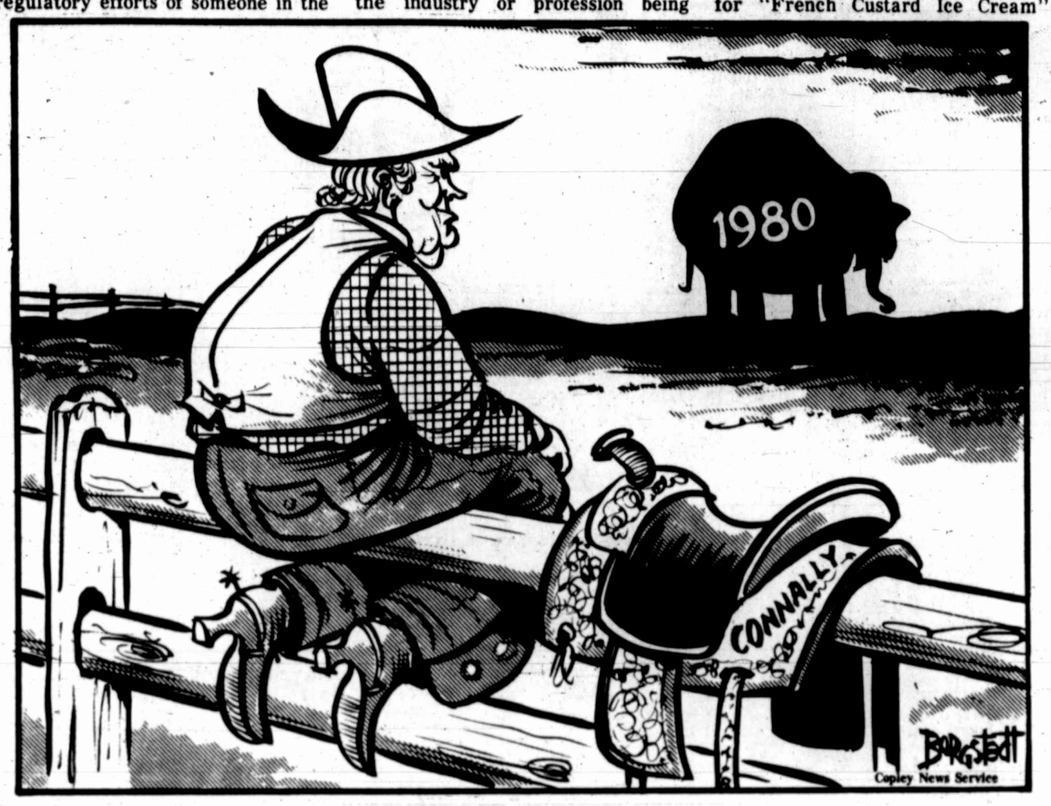

"Well, somewhere out there in America someone has a black box, and Nielsen assumes whatever he or she is watching we're watching, too. If we could find out who the person is we could call her and tell her what network we were tuned into just in case she was viewing something else."

"Nielsen doesn't tell anyone who has his black box. He makes people take an oath of secrecy when he puts one in their house. Otherwise everyone would be calling them up and they wouldn't have time to look at television."

"It's hard to believe that so many jobs and so much money is at stake because of 1,200 little black boxes. What would happen if someone with a black box watched public television instead of a network show?"

"Nielsen would probably come to the house himself and rip it out of the set, and he'd see to it you never got a black box again."

She thought about it for a moment and then said, "I'm glad we don't have a black box. I don't think I could stand the pressure."

Time to saddle up?

A promise made

To The Editor:

John Wayne is right (see R-T 10/26), even though he is joined in defending the present Panama treaty by the Communist Party U.S.A.

I do not want to see the U.S. "give away" the Panama Canal. Few do. But two very pertinent points are being overlooked.

(1) The United States owns the Panama Canal but does not have sovereignty of the soil. (Any landman can explain the term; when the Spanish Explorers landed on our coasts in the 16th century, they bent low and kissed the soil, proclaiming its sovereignty for the queen of Spain.

An example: You may own your home here; paid for by your money, and you have a homestead with certain recognized rights, but you do not have sovereignty rights. These rights still belong to the United States of America. If you doubt it, try failing to pay the federal income taxes for a year or two.

Notice that the treaty with Panama of 1936 recognized the sovereignty of Panama in the Canal Zone. General Eisenhower allowed the Panama flag to fly alongside the Stars and Stripes, much to the dismay of many U.S. citizens.

(2) Most of us have forgotten that, in order to settle student riots in Panama in January 1964, in which several were killed, then-President Lyndon Johnson promised a new treaty which would in time turn possession of the canal to Panama.

It's too bad, but that was a promise from the United States of America, and Robert W. Service said, "A promise made is a debt unpaid!"

A cruel trick

To The Editor:

This letter is directed to the individuals who so boldly drove up to our front door, walked onto our front porch, and so gingerly stomped one small hand-carved jack-o-lantern, and then stole two large, beautiful carved jack-o-lanterns which had been placed outside for the enjoyment of the children who were supposed to enjoy Halloween and its traditional "Trick-or-Treating."

Would it interest the guilty ones to know that the jack-o-lanterns belonged to a 10-year-old boy who bought the small one with his own money which he had saved. Oh, yes, by the way, he bought it from a fine Christian school festival.

The other two were purchased three weeks before Halloween. Would it matter that a great deal of shopping went into finding nice well-shaped pumpkins? That a premium price was paid for them? That a 10-year-old child drew the faces on them and then very patiently waited three weeks before being able to carve them?

I dare not forget to tell you they were short lived once they were placed on the front porch immediately on either side of the front door. They existed 25 minutes, and then you came along. There is no doubt you saw us sitting in the living room, and you could not help but hear the three of us talking.

Our neighbor heard you, but you were turning the corner out of the upper-middle class neighborhood cul-de-sac in the northwest part of our fine, educated, benevolent-minded city of Midland that is such a wonderful place to bring up children.

We are still at a loss that stealing pumpkins could possibly bring on a thrill. It's a very cheap sort. Kinda like the time a pair of ladies hunting boots, size 7, were removed from a rear-entry garage and then dumped in a field after the thrill was gone. Wonder which field you dumped the burning jack-o-lanterns in?

Who said goblins and witches are funny?

POSITIVE THINKING

Good humor can save a marriage

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

One of the most frequent problems about which I am consulted is marital difficulties. And, on thinking about the various forms these problems of married life take, I am more and more convinced that just ordinary good humor is one of the most important attributes a husband and wife can have to avoid discord.

A man came to see me once to complain that his wife was becoming very difficult. "When I first met her," he told me, "she was a nice quiet girl, but I remember even back then thinking that there were times when she was a bit sharp. However, she never really showed her claws until after we were married. Now I don't understand her at all. But you, Dr. Peale, you know all about women, don't you?"

"Thanks for the compliment," I said, "but I've never met any man who did."

"But you certainly can tell me," he insisted, "why she is so snappy."

We discussed his problem. She seemed to be healthy, so that didn't enter into the picture. Then I made a suggestion. "Try the objective method of solving your problem," I said. "Don't think of her emotionally, as a person annoying you, but view her scientifically and objectively. Take a dispassionate view."

And so the next time the wife began one of her tirades, the husband took a pad of paper and sat down in the living room. He wrote quietly as she talked. As her voice rose, he continued to study her and write down his impressions.

Finally, feminine curiosity would not be denied. "What are you writing?" she snapped. Then she walked over and grabbed the pad from his hands.

This is what it said: "Under ordinary circumstances her voice is soft and sweet; now it is harsh. Normally her eyes are the softest and kindest in the world; now they have a metallic glint." She thought for a few minutes, then took the pencil from her husband, wrote on the pad and passed it to him.

"Stupid sometimes, but the nicest man that ever lived," were her words.

This exchange between them was the beginning of a new, objective and good-humored approach to their mutual problems. It worked, and today they have an understanding far more satisfactory than their previous relationship.

Lose humor and you lose your objectivity. There is always a reason people act as they do. Try to understand. Be objective and, in being objective, slow down. Instinctive emotional reaction is always quick. Slow it down. Emotions by nature are hot. Keep them cool, ice cool.

It isn't easy to preserve good humor under all circumstances. But a certain university, so I'm told, thinks it is so important that it has installed a course on the subject. I don't know what rules it teaches, but I have three suggestions of my own.

First, be intellectually quick and keen. Get the whole picture before you act. Second, be spiritually discerning. Understand the significance of the situation. And third, be emotionally objective and slow. Take a dispassionate attitude.

Try these suggestions next time you're annoyed or irritated. Keep your good humor going.

Who will save us?

To The Editor:

Recently, President Carter changed the traditional prisoner of war code so that it is no longer a disgrace to reveal more than name, rank and serial number if captured and tortured during wartime. The possibility of being disgraced plus the sense of loyalty and responsibility between the fighting men may have been a source of strength to a POW which could enable him to hold up during torture and incredible pressure.

Now, however, divulging military secrets and strategies will not even be embarrassing thanks to Mr. Carter. Perhaps, during the next war both sides can simply gather around the campfire and trade secrets.

President Carter insists that the things he does are to save the United States from the adversities of the world. I am curious to know, however, who will save us from him?

Airport misadventure

To The Editor:

In this day and time, with the high and increasing crime rate, it would appear the Midland Police Department could well find something better to do than harass the general public by impounding their automobiles at the Midland airport under the color of authority of a city ordinance for "Abandoned Vehicles."

Having flown out of Midland Regional Air Terminal Friday night, we arrived back from a weekend in El Paso last Sunday afternoon, only to find our late model automobile gone.

Although such car was locked, our first thought was that perhaps it had been stolen.

We went back to the terminal and made inquiry of a Midland policeman, who informed us (while sitting down with his hands on the waist of a cute young blonde facing him) that he didn't know anything about our car, but it might have been impounded, and we'd have to telephone the city police department to find out. He stated he didn't know when or under what circumstances they did so, it just depended upon who was on duty, etc. . . . and went back to his conversation with the girl.

We then saw another police officer, sitting inside the glassed-in portion of the terminal, and made inquiry of him. When we gave him a description of the car he informed us that it had been towed away and impounded and that we would have to go through the Midland police to get it back, paying towing fees, fines, etc. for overparking.

We rented a car, drove to the police department, and there were treated very courteously while we paid our fine and towing charge of $21 — and retrieved our auto — drove back to the airport and returned the rent car (another $26) — and arrived back in Big Spring some three hours after arrival at the airport.

The main point of this letter is we felt somehow "taken" because there were no warning signs that our car would be impounded — especially in light of the major construction and general confusion at the airport — and the obvious go-to-hell attitude of the police officer we first encountered.

Start, stop, start...

To The Editor:

When the Midland traffic control methods were first devised, they were a great success; drivers had a chance to check their buggies, and the horses seemed to enjoy the rest. However, since the advent of the internal combustion engine and automobiles, more advanced communities such as Crane, Wink, and Notrees have successfully experimented with SYNCHRONIZED traffic lights.

I am not complaining. Our city council has recognized the threat to our survival posed by the windmills on the high plains and, in true Quixote fashion, is taking appropriate action. Then, too, someone still must teach the federal bureaucrats how to run welfare programs. Maybe someday.

Garbage time

To The Editor:

I have had it with the matter of Coach Jim Acree's guilt or innocence and, more to the point, I have had it with Paul Domowitch. I refer to Mr. Domowitch's column of Oct. 25, 1977.

As a student of Robert E. Lee High School during the early years and a 1964 graduate of that fine school, I remember my time there with pride and fondness. I feel that same pride to this day. I am certain that there are other former students which feel as I do when the Rebel Band plays the fight song and alma mater or the Rebel flag flies.

Consiquently, when I read garbage such as Mr. Domowitch's column, I feel sick. I feel that Mr. Domowitch's remarks, although directed at Coach Acree, are meant for the people of West Midland, current students and former students of Lee.

Since the inception of Robert E. Lee High School (a) conspiracy has existed. Shortly after Lee was completed the former coach of Midland High School was appointed athletic director of Midland public schools. I am certain . . . this gentleman had no prejudice against Lee. When Midland High had new jerseys etc., and Lee played in faded maroon and white jerseys, I feel certain this was simply because he had not found time to purchase new ones for the Rebels. Conspiracy?

I do not want this to be construed as being against Midland High School and the fine people of that area. I do not mean that. I mention Midland High often as a means of proving my point . . .

I wonder if someone like Don Sparks, who cares, might not scare someone like Mr. Domowitch. I personally thank Mr. Sparks for his courage.

At a time when the backers of the Lee Rebels should be 100 percent behind the team, there comes forth a modern day Judas to open wounds rather than heal them. Haven't the boys of the Rebel team paid and suffered enough? How about letting them and Coach Acree finish this year and playing season with some dignity and pride?

Cloud of dust

To The Editor:

My hat is off to Paul Domowitch after viewing last Friday night's game in Odessa between Lee and Permian.

Number 1. Lee and or Acree came to play football but not to win! With between four and five minutes left to play Lee had the ball on Permian's 35 to 40 yard line, fourth down, six yards to go. Acree sent in the kicking team to punt. Lee passed up its last opportunity to make a comeback.

Number 2. Up until that point Permian had run Lee ragged with misdirection, reverses and sweeps. Lee's defense was superior with the exception of a few of Permian's razzle-dazzle plays. With five minutes left to play, Lee had run less than eight plays outside their tackles. Up the middle all night.

Number 3. As I watched the game, Lee's fans became increasingly dissatisfied with Acree's three grunts and a punt. Hundreds of us began to scream at Acree to try something wide or a pass.

All at once I observed Mrs. Acree climb through two rows of Lee fans and attempt to strike another Lee fan three times for his vocal criticism. She finally sat down after making a complete fool of herself.

Number 4. Paul Domowitch hit the nail on the head in his Oct. 25, 1977 article. Some of the finest talent in this state has gone to waste this year thanks to the antics of Mr. Acree. Maybe next year Lee will be rid of "up the middle three times and punt Acree." Evidentally Coach Acree knows his play book about as well as he knows the rules. I have talked with a few of his players on occasion. They all told me that they do have some other plays besides off right guard, off left guard, and punt.

Bill to delay saccharin ban now on Carter's desk

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed 18-month delay of a federal ban on saccharin is on President Carter's desk after receiving final congressional approval, even as a new study linked the artificial sweetener to cancer in animals.

The Senate approved the measure on a voice vote Friday after a House-Senate conference committee ironed out differences in two versions passed earlier this year.

The bill would require products containing saccharin to carry labels warning that the substance is a potential health hazard in humans and has been found to cause cancer in laboratory animals.

The legislation would affect millions of calorie-conscious consumers who regularly use diet foods and beverages.

Meanwhile, a congressional report reaffirmed earlier findings by Canadian scientists that saccharin is a potential cause of cancer in humans. But the new study called the sugar substitute one of the weakest cancer-causing agents ever detected.

The report, by the Office of Technology Assessment, said current testing methods, including high-dose animal tests, "can predict that a particular substance is likely to cause cancer in humans."

But the office, which advises Congress on scientific matters, said its study found there is no way to reliably assess the human cancer risk posed by saccharin.

In reassessing animal test data with saccharin and comparing this with data for known carcinogens, the study said "saccharin was found to be among the weakest carcinogens ever detected in rats."

But the study noted that even though saccharin is a weak carcinogen, its potential risk to humans could be substantial if many people are exposed to it regularly.

The researchers said that if 200 million persons drank one can of diet soda per day, the number of additional cancer cases could range from 600 to 15,000 each year.

The congressional compromise calls for placing the following warning label on products containing saccharin, the only major artificial sweetener left on the market:

"USE OF THIS PRODUCT MAY BE HAZARDOUS TO YOUR HEALTH. THIS PRODUCT CONTAINS SACCHARIN WHICH HAS BEEN DETERMINED TO CAUSE CANCER IN LABORATORY ANIMALS."

The FDA had proposed earlier this year to ban the sale of saccharin following a Canadian study showing that the artificial sweetener caused bladder cancer in laboratory rats.

Veterans bill ready to sign

WASHINGTON (AP) — A measure boosting educational benefits for veterans and giving veteran status to a group of World War II women pilots needs only President Carter's signature to become law.

The Senate on Friday approved the bill by a voice vote. The House had given its approval on Thursday.

It would raise monthly educational benefits for veterans by 6.6 percent, effective Jan. 1, increase the amount a veteran may borrow, and in some cases extend elegibility for benefits beyond 10 years after discharge from service.

The women pilots — members of the Women Airforce Service Pilots — have never formally been recognized as having been in military service, although during World War II they ferried planes 70 million miles, tested new jet aircraft, towed live-fire targets and performed other duties under military discipline.

The legislation would make them eligible for veteran benefits if the Pentagon certifies that they served on active duty and left with honorable discharges. The Pentagon has indicated it would do so.

Of the 1,097 WASPS who performed during World War II, about 800 are still alive.

The monthly education benefits would rise from $292 to $311 for single veterans, from $347 to $370 for a veteran with one dependent, and from $396 to $422 for a veteran with two dependents.

Senior citizens get series on TV

Older people are finally getting a national television series for and about themselves. It's scheduled for viewing starting Nov. 14.

The Permian Basin Area Agency on Aging has announced that the program will be carried by the Public Broadcasting Service over KERA, channel 13, at 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The programs will present a variety of subjects and issues of interest to older people, their families and friends, and others concerned with the well-being of older people.

The program will be hosted by veteran television personality Hugh Downs and produced in public television station KQED's San Francisco studios.

Funded with $2.23 million from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and $1.75 million from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, the series will contain 130 shows running Monday through Friday during the 1977-78 television year.

Each half-hour show will be handled in a magazine format in which major segments will be devoted to guest celebrities, with detailed reports on subjects such as nutrition, health, medicine, money management, housing, legal rights of older people and portraits of older Americans who have found imaginative ways to cope with and thrive in their later years.

Judge inspects kidnap vehicle

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The judge in the Chowchilla kidnapping trial has seen for himself the filthy, cluttered moving van once buried underground with 26 children and a bus driver inside.

Superior Court Judge Leo Deegan, who will hear testimony next week about the effect imprisonment in the van had on the children, went to the Santa Rita Rehabilitation Center on Friday to see evidence stored in a warehouse.

The white-haired judge was silent and grim-faced as he peered into two panel trucks allegedly used to transport the kidnap victims to their underground cell in a gravel quarry. The truck windows had been boarded up during the incident.

Then the judge climbed into the body of the moving van, where the children and driver were imprisoned for 16 hours in July 1976.

The three confessed kidnappers, brought to the warehouse in handcuffs, showed no emotion as lawyers, spectators and reporters gathered around the van.

The trio — James Schoenfeld, 26, Richard Schoenfeld, 23, and Fred Woods, 26 — have admitted they kidnapped the victims and buried them. But they claim they caused no injury to anyone.

If found guilty of kidnapping with bodily harm, they could be sent to prison for life with no chance of parole.

Retired CIA employees empty pockets in defense of ex-chief

By THOMAS WELLS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former CIA director Richard Helms, fined $2,000 for not being truthful with a Senate committee, will be able to pay the debt with money collected in wastebaskets at a meeting of retired CIA employees.

The retired CIA workers, meeting after Helms was sentenced Friday, put two wastebaskets atop a piano and tossed in checks and money to pay the former spy chief's fine.

Helms, who appeared at the scheduled meeting at a suburban country club, got a standing ovation from the more than 400 former CIA officers.

It wasn't known how much money was collected, but one member of the organization of retired CIA employes said: "The baskets were filling up fast when I left. I think it is safe to say there was more than enough contributed to pay the $2,000 fine."

Other CIA and retired CIA employees said they contributed for weeks to a defense fund to help defray Helms' legal costs.

In addition to the fine, Helms also got a two-year suspended sentence after pleading no contest to two counts of failing to fully answer questions put to him during a 1973 Senate hearing.

The Justice Department and Helms claimed that government secrets would have come out and national security would have been jeopardized if Helms had gone to trial on the charges.

He claimed his oath of secrecy to the CIA prevented him from making a full disclosure to Congress about spy activities that led to the downfall of Chile's elected socialist government and the death of President Salvador Allende in a 1973 military coup.

"You can pick up any book on Western civilization and find this same defense," said U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker, who sentenced Helms.

"At the Nuremberg trials, we had that threat running through there, and more recently in the Watergate trials," the judge said. Nazi war criminals tried at Nurenberg, Germany, after World War II frequently claimed they were only doing their duty in acts considered after the war to have been war crimes.

Parker, who criticized the plea bargaining between the government and Helms, said he did not accept Helms' argument that his CIA secrecy oath kept him from honoring his obligation to tell the truth to the Senate committee, and that other government officials must not use national security interests as an excuse to escape from testifying.

"Their obligation isn't to an agency or to sweep something under a rug that they think shouldn't be disclosed," Parker said in an interview Saturday. "Their obligation is to the Constitution."

Parker said he was certain the United States had not seen the last effort of a government official to condone his actions by saying he was working in the interests of national security.

ACTION LINE-FISH chairman Delores Gunn, left, observes volunteer Susan Edwards handling of a telephone call. The information and referral service is conducting a series of "Know Your Community Resources" programs for its volunteers beginning at 12:30 p.m. Monday in First Presbyterian Church. Other sessions are scheduled for 12:30 p.m. Nov. 14 and 21 in First Presbyterian Church.

Odessa seeking funds

ODESSA — Members of the New Town Comittee are seeking $400,000 in federal Community Development funds to provide a new police facility, library and activities center for downtown Odessa.

The committee, a blue ribbon panel commissioned by the Odessa city council, will make the request to the council during a public hearing at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Odessa High School auditorium.

In addition, the committee is seeking funds to revitalize the downtown area.

According to Jo Ben Shepperd, a co-chairman of the group, the two major roadblocks to redeveloping the downtown area in the past have been the lack of local government support and out-of-town parties' ownership of buildings.

By providing some cultural attractions, good restaurants and other improvements, the out-of-town owners will have an incentive to improve their property or sell out, Sheppard said.

The target area of redevelopment was established as the area bounded by Hancock, Golder, 10th and May streets.

Traffic deaths escalate

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas' traffic death rate is slowing approaching the high figures reached before the 55 miles-per-hour speed law became effective in 1973, the Department of Public Safety says.

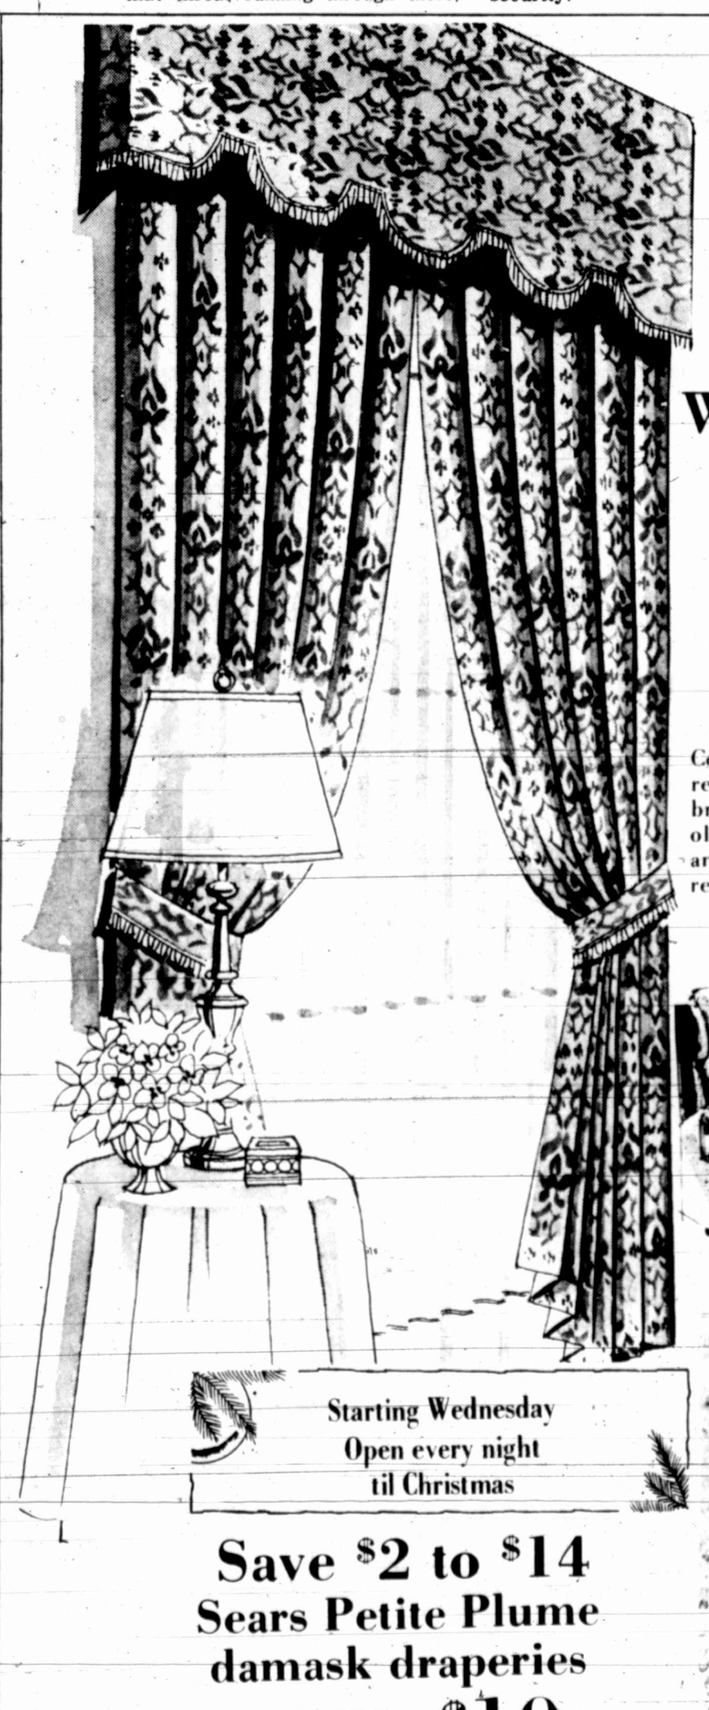

DPS statisticians said Friday that deaths on Texas streets and highways so far this year total 2,908 compared to 2,654 in 1976, a 10 per cent increase.

The 1973 total for the same period was 3,074 deaths.

DPS said there have been 2,555 accidents this year in which deaths occurred, compared to 2,291 last year, an increase of 12 percent, up from the 11 percent increase at the end of August.

Water district nears 20 billion-gallon year

Another 20-billion gallon year remained within reach of the Colorado River Municipal Water District at the end of October, according to a water district representative.

The 17,495,438,486 gallons delivered to customers so far this year mean that in November and December totals of 1976 can be matched, the district will pass the 20 billion mark.

As has been the case for several months, municipalities were the ones showing gains, while oil companies dropped off.

In October, municipal deliveries amounted to 956,089,000 gallons, a gain of 10.24 percent, or about 89 million gallons. Oil and industrial users, however, took only 549,205,262 gallons, a decline of 10.55 percent, or about 64 million gallons.

Through the first 10 months of the year, municipal deliveries have totaled 11,955,944,700 gallons, up 10.86 percent, but oil and industrial deliveries of 5,539,493,786 are down by 1.56 percent.

Odessa led the way in October deliveries with 385,967,700 gallons, up 26.17 percent. Big Spring, despite the closing of Webb AFB, had 212,036,000, up 7.18 percent.

Other cities and their deliveries were Snyder with 78,701,000 gallons, up 42.88 percent; Stanton with 7,861,000 gallons, up 9.21 percent, and Midland had 258,577,000 gallons, down by 9.58 percent in order to relieve some of the load on the CRMWD system.

Robert Lee, which took no water a year ago, required 12,947,900 gallons in October.

There will be a sale of duplicate publications and books from the county library. Proceeds will be used to buy new books for the genealogical section of the library.

Amarillo Pottergate keeps brewing

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — It started in December 1974 with a routine arrest. An Amarillo attorney was charged with driving while intoxicated.

For the most part the Panhandle political problems sparked by that arrest have been overshadowed by the capital murder trial of millionaire Cullen Davis. But local newsmen who have been watching the simmering scandal have dubbed it, perhaps inevitably, "Pottergate."

The DWI charge against the prominent local lawyer was dropped one month after it was filed. Instead, he paid a $152.50 fine for "no driver's license."

Three weeks later 16 members of the errant motorist's law firm made a $510 political contribution to Potter County Attorney Kerry Knorpp — who handled the case. But the contribution was the only one reported by Knorpp and 1975 was not an election year.

Pottergate was underway.

Knorpp and two lawyers from the firm were indicted for bribery. Subsequent grand juries indicted the county attorney on a misdemeanor grand jury tampering charge and five counts of stealing almost $6,000 from the county treasury.

Allegations began to fly around the yellowed walls of the Potter County Courthouse.

The grand jurors asked State District Court Judge George Dowlen for help.

"The grand jury requested I convene a court of inquiry that would go into just why our system was such that it would be possible for someone to steal money as easly as this apparently had been done," Dowlen said.

The judge tapped Hugh L. Russell, a local attorney who would later become part of the Davis defense team, as special counsel to the court of inquiry.

But prior to the first session of the special court the commissioners summoned Russell to a closed-door session.

During that 45-minute meeting County Judge Branch A. Archer resigned to fill a vacancy on a misdemeanor court bench.

Special counsel Russell became County Judge Russell.

On Sept. 1 Dowlen issued the oaths of office to to Archer and Russell. Within a quarter-hour, Knorpp filed complaints alleging the commissioners had violated the open meetings law.

Several weeks later the commissioners renamed Archer and Russell to their new jobs. In the interim, Knorpp was suspended with pay from his post pending his trial.

Wizard brands Carter a 'traitor'

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The Imperial Wizard of the Invisible Empire of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan branded President Carter "a traitor" and called for a 2,000-mile fence to be erected along the Texas-Mexico border.

"Carter has already legalized more things than any other president in our history," Bill Wilkinson said Saturday from this border city where he said he has spent the "last few days" scouting the Rio Grande for signs of illegal alien activity. "Carter wants to legalize aliens. He wants to legalize marijuana. The next thing he'll want to legalize is murder and rape.

"He's a traitor to the United States," continued the 35-year-old Wilkinson who lives in Denham Springs, La., where he is an "electrical contractor and I dabble in real estate."

Dressed in a light blue plaid three-piece suit, Wilkinson held a press conference in the sunlit courtyard of a Brownsville motel. "The manager wouldn't let us rent a conference room," he explained.

Hanging inside his motel room, however, were the white robes traditionally associated with the white supremist group.

The man who claims to be the KKK national leader had called several Rio Grande Valley media outlets Friday to announce the press conference but had not specified a time or place.

Many ephemerists don't know hobby has name

EDITOR'S NOTE — For years, parents have saved kids' recital programs and report cards and paper doily Valentines. Vacationers save travel brochures, diners collect matchbooks. Saving paper pasts has a name, and if you're serious enough about what you save, you might qualify for membership in a recently formed society for savers.

By GEORGE ESPER

BENNINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Uh, hold it.

Don't throw this away.

Save it.

This is ephemera.

You could be an ephemerist but don't know it.

At the recent "This Is Ephemera" exhibition at the Bennington Museum, people came out of curiosity then commented:

"I thought it was a disease."

"I throw that junk out."

"That's trash."

That's right.

Ephemera is wastebasket archeology, the collecting of printed or hand written material meant to be thrown away.

"The whole field," says Calvin P. Otto, "is intended to be those things which man normally does not keep."

Product labels, bills, greeting cards, ticket stubs, menus, newspapers, posters, parking tickets, tour guides, honorary certificates, promotional material, to name a few.

Why would anyone keep them?

"Why does man keep anything in the sense of a historic nature," Otto responds. "What we're really trying to preserve and what in fact has been preserved are historic records in print. It's a copy of that part of society."

Otto became an ephemerist when he quit being a philatelist — stamps are in a class by themselves. Now he is one of eight founding fathers of the two-year old Ephemera Society and chairman of its North American office headquartered in Bennington.

"If you're a collector, you're probably an ephemerist but don't know it by its name," he says.

Otto, 47, is the president of the Wood Fong Corp., of nearby Hoosick Falls, N.Y. His company, which makes wood fiber board used by newspapers in making the curved, one-piece plates necessary in letter press printing, also has a plant in England.

A few years back, Otto was ephemerizing in a market in London. A friend introduced him to Maurice Rickards, an Englishman who has written 23 books on ephemera, including the interpretation of World War I through posters, which were a strong propaganda medium.

"It just happened to be a circumstance that we met one another and one thing led to another. We realized each other's interests and the next thing you know a society is born," Otto said.

Of the eight founders, Otto is the only American. The others are Englishmen, all professionals in graphic arts or design. The society's president is Sir John Betjeman, poet laureate of England.

Byrd advocates early tax cut

By PAUL E. STEIGER
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., said Saturday that if the nation's economy needs the stimulation of a tax cut early next year — and, based on current data, he thinks it will — the measure should not be entangled with President Carter's efforts at comprehensive tax reform.

Instead, Byrd told a press conference in his office, the tax cut should be enacted separately, and as quickly as possible. The tax revision issue would be considered later.

Byrd's stance appeared to snuff out Carter's already flickering hopes of achieving any broad, structural overhaul of the nation's tax code before 1979. Originally, tax reform was one of Carter's major legislative goals for the early part of his presidency, ranking on some lists behind only energy in his lineup of key domestic issues.

At the same time, however, Byrd's position visibly increased momentum toward major tax relief for individuals and businesses next year.

Administration officials already have said that substantial tax cuts would be necessary by 1981 to assure adequate growth of consumer purchasing power and of jobs in private industry. They expect to make their decisions soon as to whether some or all of the tax reductions should take effect in 1978.

Byrd's comments added to the growing belief that, without a dramatic upsurge in the economy in coming weeks, the president's budget submissions to Congress in January will contain just such a proposal.

Noting that the nation's unemployment rate has floated between 6.9 percent and 7.1 percent of the work force for the past six months, Byrd said that after another two or three months "the administration ought to be in a position to determine whether a tax cut is desirable."

"As of now," he added, "it appears to me that a tax cut will be needed.... Growth has to be stimulated to take care of that unemployment." A 7 percent jobless rate is simply too high, he said.

As for tax reform, Byrd declared, "If in the early part of next year the economic indicators suggest a tax cut, I don't think it should wait on tax reform, which could take months and months."

Asked if Congress would have time — particularly in a congressional election year — to enact two major tax bills, Byrd said that it might be possible, but only if the tax overhaul measure were narrowly drawn and if it avoided complex, controversial issues.

Complexity and controversy, of course, are the major hallmarks of the massive tax overhaul bill on which Carter and his aides at the White House and in the Treasury Department have been laboring much of this year.

The measure, not yet formally unveiled, involves such potential objects of contention as a proposal to abolish the special tax benefits now afforded income from capital gains on the sale of stock, real estate, or other assets, as well as a plan to curb the tax deductibility of the three-martini lunch and other business entertainment expenditures.

Teen's poem incites court battle

BOSTON (AP) — School officials in a small New England town have decided that a poem about men ogling women on the street is not fit for high schoolers to read — even though it was written by a 15-year-old girl.

The high school's librarian has taken the issue to court, claiming that officials do not have the right to remove a book from the library after it is accepted by a librarian.

And students and parents have been packing the federal district court here since the trial started Wednesday.

The controversy began last July, when the School Committee in Chelsea, on the northern edge of Boston, was informed of the content of a 21-line poem called "The City to a Young Girl." The poem, part of an anthology of verse by teenagers, describes in earthy language the girl's disgust at being appraised as a "piece of meat" by men on the street.

In one passage, she describes the city as:

"One million horny lipsmacking men

"Screaming for my body."

The committee ordered librarian Sonja Coleman to clip that poem from the book or remove the entire book, entitled "Male and Female Under 18."

She removed the book, but with some supporters formed a group called the Right to Read Defense Committee, which asked the federal court to restore the book to the shelves.

In August, Judge Joseph L. Tauro ordered the book temporarily put back in the library. But he said students who wanted to read it would have to show a note of parental approval.

The non-jury trial, which began last Wednesday, is expected to end this week.

Andrew Quigley, the feisty former mayor who is head of the School Committee, testified that the poem is "tasteless, filthy trash."

"A girl reading that without proper instruction could arrive at the opinion that every man walking down the street is considering her only as a sex object to be violated," he said.

Dr. Gaines appointed

SAN MARCOS — Dr. James F. Gaines of Midland has been appointed to the steering committee of the Southwest Texas State University Parents' Club, which recently held its first homecoming breakfast meeting.

Country club set to elect officers

Four new directors of the Midland Country Club will be elected at its regular fall meeting of stockholders to be held at 7:30 p.m., Nov. 14, in the clubhouse, according to Secretary Joe P. Liberty.

The nominees for the four vacancies are Robert Caudle, Bob Duke, Ed Dwyar, Cecil Rhodes, Rodney Satterwhite, George Staley, Tom Welch and Gary Wisener.

Alamo Y to offer Over-30s basketball

The Alamo YMCA is offering "Over-30s Basketball," a recreational program for men over the age of 30.

Planners of the event said men will be offered the fun and exercise of basketball without all the running. One of the key rules of the program is that a defensive team getting a rebound must wait eight seconds before shooting, which allows players ample time to get down court.

The basketball program will get under way Nov. 30, but teams should form early to begin practice, planners said. Fee for the recreational activity will be $5 for non-members of the YMCA. There is no charge to members. Additional information on the program may be obtained from the Alamo YMCA at 3910 Cedar Spring St., telephone 694-9571.

Houston mayoral race crowded

HOUSTON (AP)—The money is being spent, the hands are being shaken, but the 12 candidates for mayor of the nation's 5th largest city are are finding a voter attitude of "who cares."

The city election is scheduled Tuesday and political observers predict one of the lightest turnouts in a decade.

The contest takes a back seat in bars and restaurants and at parties to the fact that the University of Texas, 160 miles away, is rated No. 1 in The Associated Press college football poll; and complaints about President Carter's energy program; and the good times last month up at the Texas prison rodeo.

With a dozen candidates, it appears certain a runoff election will be necessary.

City officials say absentee voting has been slow, about 50 per cent below that of two years ago.

Mayor Fred Hofheinz, who held the post for four years, is not seeking re-election and that opened the door for those who had tried in the past and those who have never tried before.

The field embraces every segment of this growing city— black, Mexican-American, female, rich and poor—and includes a feminist advocate, a member of the Nazi party and a few who have been dancing on the rim of the political spotlight for years.

The major issues concern the performance of the police and fire departments; mass transportation and city services—the same themes sung in the 1973 and 1975 elections.

The candidates are:

Dana McNatt, 28, a contractor, and secretary of a unit of the Houston Nazi party.

Frank Briscoe, 51, attorney, former Harris County district attorney, and beaten in a runoff for mayor in 1975.

Dick Gottlieb, 53, advertising firm owner, former city councilman and unsuccessful candidate for mayor in 1973 and 1975.

Ovide Duncantell, 40, a minority business consultant, and beaten six years ago for the city council.

Allan Vogel, 34, a longshoreman, member of the Libertarian party, and a loser in the 1976 race for Congress.

Diane Sarge, 30, machine operator, active in the Equal Rights Amendment fight and a leader in the movement to end the Vietnam war.

Arthur E. Abrego, 29, an Xray technican, and a political newcomer.

Bette Graham White 38, community organizer, and a worker in the 1975 Hofheinz campaign.

Jim McConn, 49, a builder, and a city councilman for four years.

Larry M. Robinson, 31, auto parts salvage firm owner.

In reports filed with the city secretary's office recently, the three top contenders—Briscoe, McConn and Ginther—listed expenditures of more than $1 million for a job that pays $20,000 with a $5,000 expense account.

But the mayor of Houston does have power. He can hire and fire the police chief and fire chief and appoint numerous top city officials.

The reports show that Briscoe has spent $466,589; McConn $428,116 and Ginther $290,492.

Most of the funds have gone for television, radio and newspaper advertisements.

But Vogel, the Libertarian Party candidate, topped them all by having a two-minute film strip on his candidacy shown at several X-rated movie theaters in the city.

As Vogel said, "City Hall has no business telling us what movies we may see, what we may smoke, or what kind of relationships we may have with other human beings."

If a runoff is necessary, the voting would be Nov. 22.

Big Brothers, Sisters seek volunteers

A volunteers introduction meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Commercial Bank & Trust Co. for persons interested in joining Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Midland.

The program is primarily geared towards providing adult friends for children of one-parent families. After being approved, volunteers are asked to spend two to three hours a week with their little brother or little sister.

Lamesa building permits climb past $2 million

LAMESA — October building permits here pushed the total for the year over the $2.1 million mark, city engineer L. E. Petty said.

Petty said permits totaled $269,300 in October, raising the total for the year to $2,194,264. He predicted the total would continue to climb during the final two months of the year.

The year's total exceeds the totals for both 1976 and 1975. 1976 permits totaled $1,704,055, while 1975 permits totaled $1,197,130.

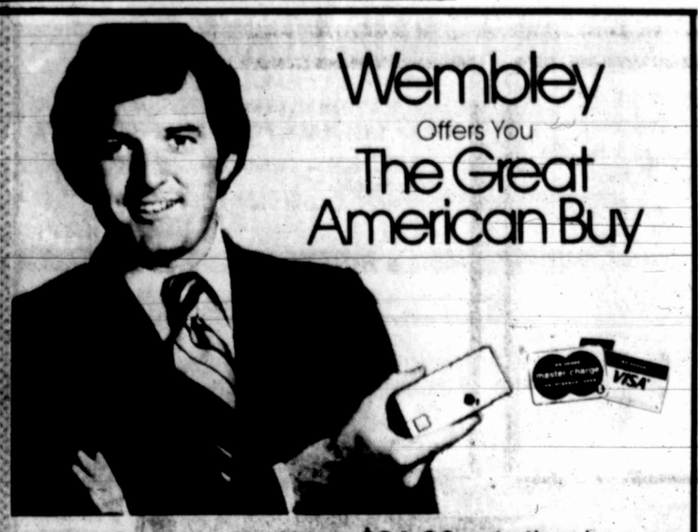

Like father like daughter

NEW YORK (AP) — A survey of young people between the ages of 14 and 25 found that "women whose fathers were college graduates or had some college education were more likely to choose an executive professional life as their ambition than men whose fathers had similar educational background."

The study by the American Council of Life Insurance also found that "among women whose fathers had a high school education or less, only 30 percent preferred the executive life style."

It said that among the young men surveyed, those who had fathers with a college background, "were no more likely to be attracted to the executive professional style than those whose fathers had less schooling."

Reading, math skill reports due this week

Results from reading and math tests, called the Midland Assessment Program, administered at the beginning of the school year to fourth-, fifth- and sixth-graders, are scheduled to be mailed to the students' parents this week.

The test items show which basic math and reading skills students already have mastered and which skills need to be learned this year, said Bryant Saxon, director of program development and research for the school district.

"Determining strengths and weaknesses at the beginning of the school year helps the teacher evaluate each student's needs so that each child may be given individualized instruction," Saxon said.

"This is not a test on ability. It just determines what has been learned and what needs to be learned," Saxon said.

At the end of the school year the same test will be given again to see if each student has mastered the skills needed for competency at or above grade level, he said.

Questions which evaluated mathematical skills included common subtraction, multiplication and addition questions with fractions and stated problems at the higher grade levels.

The reading test, administered as part of the Partners in Reading program, evaluated basic skills through questions on comprehension, vocabulary, phonics, word attack and study skills, according to Saxon.

"We urge parents to call the school for an appointment with the child's teacher so that parents and teachers can work together to help each child progress at the best of his ability," said Schools Superintendent Dr. James H. Mailey.

During the fall semester, an additional reading teacher will be provided for each fourth, fifth and sixth-grade class. A traveling teacher for each cluster plus an aide for each school will help math teachers, according to Mailey.

Emphasis will change to mathematics for the spring school term, with additional teachers being provided for each class to help with mathematics while aides and traveling teachers will assist with the reading program, he said.

In addition to additional personnel, each principal in the 4-5-6 grade cluster schools was given $1,600 for reading and mathematics materials.

The reading portion of the test was developed jointly by Science Research Associates, an education testing and materials firm based in California, and the University of California. The math section was developed solely by SRA.

Oakar says cardinal supports her battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Josef Cardinal Mindszenty asked Mary Rose Oakar to do all in her power to make certain the Crown of St. Stephen is never returned to Hungary until human freedoms are restored there.

The cardinal made the plea to Miss Oakar two years ago, and now she has a chance to make good on her promise to fight any effort to return the 1,000-year-old crown to a communist regime in Hungary.

"Life is kind of funny, isn't it," said Miss Oakar, now a member of the House of Representatives. "Never in my wildest dreams did I envision I would have a chance to come through for him."

Miss Oakar, an Ohio Democrat, is resisting State Department plans to return the crown to Hungary. It symbolizes Hungary's religious, cultural and national heritage.

On Friday, the feisty congresswoman lost a fight to get the House to pass legislation to keep the crown in this nation. But the House International Relations Committee agreed to hold a hearing Wednesday to listen to Hungarian federations — organizations representing Hungarian refugees.

Miss Oakar said she feels betrayed by the Carter administration.

She said the State Department, in meetings and letters, promised her and Hungarian federations that the crown would remain in the custody of the United States.

Benefit scheduled

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — One of Elvis Presley's imitators says he will hold a benefit concert for a young woman who was seriously injured in front of Presley's mansion two days after the singer's death.

Bill Haney said Friday that proceeds from his performance on Dec. 4 will help pay medical bills for Tammy Baiter, 17.

Bodyguard business flourishing

PARIS (AP) — "Rent-A-Gorilla" firms are beating their chests in Paris, muscling in on the violence trend by offering male and female bodyguards for as little as $10 an hour.

Budo Brothers, a 3-year-old protection outfit, opened a women's branch called Budo Sisters early in 1977. A third firm, KO!, recently entered the field.

All offer employees skilled in a variety of martial arts and languages. Emphasis is also put on good grooming and athletic appearance.

"This is a profession like any other," Sully Desplan, director of Budo Brothers and Budo Sisters, said in an interview. "There's nothing secret or illegal about it. There's a problem of escalating crime and violence in the world, and the need for our service proves it.

Desplan said budo is a Japanese word designating the ensemble of martial arts. He said he had 60 male and 15 female employees, and that fees range anywhere from $10 to $40 or up, "depending on the circumstances."

Desplan said business was booming but declined to give figures. Asked if his agents carried arms, he said, "only if the occasion calls for it."

One of the Budo Sisters, Catherine Pruvot, a 23-year-old secretary who speaks English and Spanish in addition to her native French, said she had joined the firm to supplement her income. Recent missions included guarding a businessman in Hamburg and a child in Paris.

Claudine Dory, a 23-year-old university student waiting for a job with an international organization as an interpreter in English, Italian, Spanish and French, said she too wanted extra money. So did 25-year-old singer and actress Stephanie Oihenart.

All agreed that staying in good condition was another benefit, and said that they trained regularly in a specially-equipped room provided by the firm.

Like their Budo counterparts, most of the men from KO! are recruited from sports clubs and are seeking extra money to supplement their regular jobs. KO! fees are slightly higher, however, beginning at about $12 an hour.

Diplomat Brewster envoy with a mission

LONDON (AP) — William Brewster sailed to Plymouth, Mass., aboard the Mayflower in 1620 vowing with 100 other dissident fellow Pilgrims to recover the religious freedoms they began losing in the England of Queen Elizabeth I.

Today, the descendant of that refugee, Kingman Brewster, is the U.S. ambassador to the Court of Elizabeth II.

The irony of that bit of political symbolism has not escaped the erudite envoy, former president of Yale University, who, soon after presenting his letters of credence last spring, was quoted by a British interviewer as saying: "It is satisfying for the descendant of a dissident refugee from Elizabeth I to present his credentials to Elizabeth II."

Of course, Elizabeth I had been dead 17 years by the time the Mayflower sailed. But even while she was alive, the Pilgrims felt they were being persecuted to the point that they began breaking away from the Church of England and setting up their own Congressional houses of worship.

Brewster's ancestor William may well have taken pride in the emphasis the ambassador of today places on the need to preserve not only the liberties but also the unity of the English-speaking world.

"The American political experiment sprang from English values, traditions and institutions," the ambassador told The Associated Press in an interview. "Indeed it was to vindicate the rights of Englishmen that the Colonies, in exasperation, reluctantly rebelled."

"The rights of Englishmen" spelled out by the 17th century Pilgrims broadly resemble those standards of human dignity and freedom which President Carter would like all nations to respect.

Brewster had been talking about the importance of those rights to the English-speaking world long before Carter was elected. In the 1975 Churchill Lecture he voiced his conviction: "It is our first obligation to see that 'the rights of Englishmen' are not lost, that they are protected and nurtured in their natural home."

That "natural home" to him is North America, Britain itself and Australia, which he said provides "a global strategic base" from which the Englishspeaking peoples could defend their principles against any assailant.

It was more than a matter of political identification that seemed to impel Carter to pluck Brewster from the post he had held at Yale since 1963 in order to rekindle as ambassador here the "special British-American relationship" to which both say they are devoted.

"At Yale, Brewster had engaged in the sort of activities that Carter would almost surely have endorsed. He led an anti-Vietnam war demonstration to Washington. He was influential in having more women, more blacks, more minority elements in the university. Through the 1960's he was a force for moderation when student passions ran high.

Brewster's structured, sometimes serious, often witty speeches already have attracted the attention of many Britons in England, Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales, where he made a point of becoming visible soon after settling in.

In the interview the 58-year-old former Navy pilot discussed the sunnier outlook Britain faces after decades of economic travail; popular yearnings for peace in northern Ireland; the way an academic sees the span and variety of his role as chief of a big diplomatic mission, and one of his pet theories that treasury masters of the Western world should transform their tax systems so that people would pay on what they spend rather than on what they earn.

On the outlook of Britain awaiting the full flowering of the North Sea oil bonanza, Brewster said the country now has every chance to escape from "ancient woes" and approach "a more productive and equitable society." As he sees it "the first job is to make Britain more competitive, more productive so that it can restore its basic capacity for growth" and a great deal will depend on the next five years.

Many types of lock hardware currently available are effective in protecting the home from burglars. Persons who know little about such hardware, however, are encouraged to consult a locksmith.

'Dead bolt' locks aid in home protection

By RICHARD M. DANIELS
Copley News Service

Residential burglaries don't attract the public attention that more violent crimes do. However, the burglary toll is most significant in dollars and cents.

There are two things people can do to make the burglary profession a more risky one: make their own homes secure against easy entry and watch out for their neighbors.

All a citizen has to do, the police emphasize, is to call the police when anything suspicious in nature is occurring at an unoccupied residence or establishment. The citizen's involvement ends right there — the police do the rest.

Burglarproofing a house is not as big a project as most people fear, according to the police. While there is a lot of lock hardware on the market, the police suggest residents consult a locksmith if they are not experts themselves on lock hardware.

All outdoor entrance doors should have a one-inch dead bolt with a hardened cylinder guard. If there is glass within 40 inches of the locking hardware, a double-cylinder dead bolt should be used.

While the house is occupied, a key should be left in the inside keyhole to allow a speedy exit in case of fire. But be sure to remove the key when leaving hone.

To protect a door from being lifted from its hinges by pulling the hinge pin, here are steps to follow:

— Remove two screws opposite each other from both leaves of the hinge and insert a screw or concrete nail into the jamb leaf, protruding one-half inch. Drill out the opposing screw hole in the door. Do this in the top and bottom hinge of the door. When closed, the pins may be removed, but the door will remain firmly in place.

Hasps must be of hardened steel and installed with carriage bolts through the door or gate. Be sure to use large washers on the inside. After the nuts are secured, deface the threads of the bolt ends with a hammer to keep the nuts from being removed.

With windows, the primary goal is to secure them to eliminate entry by prying them open. Double-hung window latches may be forced open. If the window is not used, screw it shut.

For windows in use, drill a downward-sloping hole into the top of the bottom window through and into the window and insert a pin or nail. Be sure to leave one window in each bedroom on the ground floor and second story available as a fire exit.

With sliding windows, the primary objective is to keep the window from sliding or being lifted up and out of the track. Metal screws installed in the upper track and adjusted will prevent this. The same holds true for sliding glass doors.

A simple way to secure an inside door is to drill a sloping hole downward through the top channel into the top portion of the sliding door frame. Insert a pin. Another way is to install a slide bolt.

Purchasing an inexpensive padlock may be false economy.

The most common way a burglar deals with a padlock is with a large bolt cutter or pry bar. Here are the minimum specifications a padlock should have to provide the security intended:

A padlock should be of hardened steel with at least a two-inch shackle; it should have a double-locking mechanism heel and toe and a five-pin tumbler. The key should have a retaining feature that prevents it fron being removed until the padlock has been locked.

Never leave a padlock unlocked. This is an open invitation to have the padlock removed so that a key can be made and the lock later returned to its location. The burglar then is able to return and enter the premises at his own leisure.

Good exterior lighting is important to home security, particularly when the yard area is obscured by high, nonremovable shrubbery. The best possible location for outside lights is under the eaves. This makes ground-level assault on the house more difficult and risky. There are inexpensive timers and photoelectric cells available that will automatically turn the lights on at dusk and off at dawn. Also, simply leaving the front and back porch lights on, using 25-watt bulbs, will do much to discourage unwelcome visitors.

Another discouraging technique for burglars is "Operation Identification." Residents can borrow an engraving tool free of charge at many locations. With the tool, mark valuable properties with a driver's license number or Social Security number.

This not only discourages theft, but will increase the chances of recovering the property if it is stolen. Window stickers that inform a would-be intruder that Operation Identification is in effect in the house may discourage the potential burglar from breaking in and entering the house.

Louvre windows are bad security risks. They should be removed and replaced with solid glass or other types of ventilating windows.

Youth today addicted to violence

EDITOR'S NOTE — Violent crime is a young man's game and for another dedade at least sheer numbers will ensure plentiful supply of players. If the teeming prisons neither deter nor reform, what other ways are open?

By JOHN BARBOUR

CHICAGO (AP) — While bulging prisons struggle to contain the tide of law-breakers, street crime, violent crime, still pays and the flow of youths through the criminal justice system continues unabated.

The young gangs that terrorize inner city streets play the odds, and by the time they are caught and the later time they are imprisoned they are committed to a life of predation.

Serious crime has risen in the United States by 70 percent in the last 10 years, while the population has grown 7 percent.

"And the gap between the amount of crime reported and the amount of crime experienced is vast," says Norval Morris, dean of the University of Chicago law school.

"It is authoritatively estimated that only half of all robberies of individuals and household burglaries, less than half of all assaults, rapes and attempted rapes, and less than a third of household larcenies are reported."

Even though crime statistics are considered grossly inadequate, there is no doubt that most serious crimes are committed by relatively young people, and criminals are getting younger all the time. The peak age for violence is now 16, and there is no decline in the 15-20 age group until at least 1980.

"The pill came late to the ghetto," Morris says.

"There is no reason to expect that the most serious forms of youth crime — homicide, rape, armed robbery and serious assault, which are concentrated in center-city poor minority populations — will have been reduced by 1990."

The expert consensus is that the certainty of capture and punishment would likely reduce street crime.

There is no such certainty now, and none in the foreseeable future. Street youths know it.

"They've gambled the odds," says Norman Carlson, director of federal prisons. "They know very well that the odds of apprehension are fairly small. And they know they can plea bargain and the chances of imprisonment are pretty low."

In the last seven years, more than half the states have reformed their criminal law codes or are in the process. Congress, for the second time in recent years, is studying a bill which would recodify the federal code. Even these efforts would not produce uniformity.

Bank robbers average 17-year sentences in Georgia and 5½ years in northern Illinois. But federal judges may sentence bank robbers to anything from probation to 25 years in prison. The new federal codification would at least modify that.

"Sentencing maximums are inconsistent and irrational," says Sen. Edward Kennedy, who with Sen. John McClellan, is sponsoring the bill. "If one robs a federally insured bank today, a 25-year term of imprisonment is possible; but if one robs a post office, the maximum term is only 10 years."

"Let's face it," says prison director Carlson, "we play games. The courts give long sentences knowing full well that it will be written up as 99 years. But hell, the judge knows, the inmate knows, the defense counsel knows that the guy isn't going to serve 99 years. He's going to serve five, six, seven, something like that."

The new federal code would establish a sentencing commission to set guidelines. Sentences would be firm, after appeal, and the prisoner and everyone concerned would know how long he would stay in prison.

The new federal code also would establish four firm measures of culpability. A crime would be judged on whether it was intentional, knowing, reckless or negligent. The code has 80 such levels now.

It would provide standard measures of crime, standard sentences, fixed punishment. Presuming breakers of the law are also students of its severity, this would soon filter down to would-be offenders.

It could also serve as a model for state codes.

Morris proposes that police deal only with crimes such as homicide, robbery and arson. Civilian agents or undercover officers would handle nonviolent crimes such as embezzlement, drug trafficking and prostitution.

Criminal law, he says, should not be used "to regulate the private moral conduct of citizens and to coerce them into virtue ...

"We annually set our police to arresting four million assorted drunks, addicts, loiterers, vagrants, prostitutes and gamblers ... We overload our criminal justice system to a degree that renders it grossly defective where we most need protection from violence and predation ...."

Most experts agree that the best answer to crime is prevention — a way somehow to intervene in young lives before they become committed to crime. But how far can society go?

"We know that most of the offenders we deal with have not come from stable family backgrounds," Carlson says. "It doesn't matter if it's an impoverished black kid from a ghetto family in New York, or a wealthy kid from the suburbs of Milwaukee who lived near a golf course. The lack of family solidarity is responsible for most of the social breakdown in this country."

But he would not break in on the family and take the child away to more stable situations. "I grew up in a time when we talked of boys' and girls' homes. I don't think that's any better and might be even more disastrous than letting them grow up in a family situation. At least they have some contact with a real mother or father."

Sherry Simpson, left, president of Midland's Desert Winds chapter of Sweet Adelines, and chapter member Judy Smith were excited over their trip to London to attend the international convention of the Sweet Adelines organiation, held this past week.

Group to fill air with song

Barbershop harmony — as American as the Fourth of July or apple pie — will be in the air Saturday night when Midland's "Lady Barbershoppers," the Sweet Adelines, present their first public show, "Entertainment on Parade."

The show, which hopefully will become an annual event, is scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday in Midland's Theatre Centre, 2301 W. Indiana Ave. Admission will be $3, and tickets are now being sold by Sweet Adelines members.

Tickets may be ordered by telephoning 694-5844 or 697-1003.

The show will feature plenty of good old-fashion barbershop singing by the Desert Winds chorus and the Standing Room Only quartet of the Sweet Adelines local chapter, joined by the Sun Spots, a men's barbershop quartet in Midland, and by the Natural Flair quartet from Houston.

Emcee for the show will be Mike McLaren. The Desert Winds chorus is under the direction of Louis A. Pare.

Sweet Adelines Inc., is an international, non-profit organization with chapters throughout the U. S., and in the Canal Zone, Canada, Great Britain, the Virgin Islands and Saudi Arabia, with additional chapters now being formed in several other countries. Basic purpose of the organization is to teach and perform the American folk art of four-part harmony, "barbershop-style," and, through performances, to encourage a universal appreciation of that unique musical form. This basic goal is being reached through the creation and maintenance of choruses and quartets which promote the spirit of friendliness and harmony among women everywhere.

Adherents of barbershop harmony point out that it differs from other kinds of choral singing. First of all, it does not use instrumental accompaniment of any kind. Second, the music is based on one part (called the "lead") which carries the melody, surrounded by three voices singing harmony. The other parts are tenor (the natural harmony part — sung high), baritone (the fourth note of the chord which weaves an intricate pattern through songs), and bass (the part that attracts the "hams" as well as those with low voices).

Midland's Desert Winds chapter of Sweet Adelines was organized in May 1965. The chapter presently has approximately two dozen members who often sing in nursing homes and before clubs and civic groups, as well as at community events such as Septemberfest.

According to Mrs. Marlin Simpson, current president, the chapter is funded by membership dues and donations received for singing engagements. The proceeds are used to pay for costumes, for director's expenses to special music schools and seminars, and to fund a yearly donation to a worthy local charity. It is hoped that the upcoming "Entertainment on Parade" will net the chapter enough to pay the entire membership's expenses to regional Sweet Adelines competition next April.

The Midland chapter is in keen competition with other chapters in this region of the U. S. This year, the chapter's Desert Winds chorus placed 10th among 28 choruses in regional singing competition at Houston. In the chapter's only previous trip to a regional event, in 1971, the chorus placed 14th out of 18 choruses, so local members definitely feel they're "coming up" in the world of barbershop harmony!

Sweet Adelines Inc., was founded in Tulsa, Okla., in 1947 and now has more than 650 chapters and 29,000 members an the U. S. and abroad. The organization is divided into 22 geographical regions governed by a board of directors or executive committee form of administration. The top regional officer is the regent.

The 1977 international competition of the Sweet Adelines took place just this past week in London, England. Two members of the Midland chapter, Mrs. Simpson and Mrs. Ed Smith, joined a group of Lubbock Sweet Adelines in making the trip to Britain. In all, some 4,500 Sweet Adelines were in attendance at the gathering.

The motto of Sweet Adelines Inc. is "Harmonize the World." The international organization's theme song is "The Voice of Harmony."

Houston Grand Opera to open with season's second offering

HOUSTON — The Houston Grand Opera's second production of its new season, Richard Strauss' "Arabella," opens Thursday night in Jones Hall for the Performing Arts in downtown Houston.

Additional performances are scheduled Nov. 13, 15 and 18 in the HGO's "International Series," featuring acclaimed New Zealand soprano Kiri Te Kanawa and Texas-born Metropolitan Opera baritone Thomas Stewart in the leading roles.

In addition, HGO will present "American Series" performances of "Arabella" on Nov. 12 and 14, featuring Jeanne Cook, a rising young singer originally from Arizona, in the title role, joined by Joshua Hecht, distinguished American baritone who has sung with many of the world's leading opera companies, as Mandryka.

"Arabella" is being staged by John Cox, director of production for Britain's Glyndebourne Festival Opera, who also staged HGO's highly-acclaimed season-opener last month, Rossini's seldom-performed "Tancredi."

Sets and costumes for the Strauss opera have been designed by another Briton, Elisabeth Dalton, who collaborated with Cox on HGO's 1975 production of Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier."

Celebrated British conductor Charles Mackerras will be on the podium to conduct all "International Series" presentations of "Arabella." The English language American Series performances will be conducted by John DeMain, HGO's principal conductor.

In addition to the leading singers, other members of the "Arabella" cast include soprano Ashley Putnam who has made a name for herself at the Santa Fe Opera the past two summers, is scheduled for a number of important arrangements in the U. S. and Europe during the current season, as Zdenka, joined by Jerold Norman, one of the nation's finest new tenors, in the role of Matteo. (These roles will be taken by soprano Erie Mills and tenor Barry Busse respectively, in the English-language performances.) Michael Langdon and Peter Harrower will be in the role of Count Waldner in the International and American series respectively, while Fredda Rakusin will sing Count Waldner's wife Adelaide in both series.

Houston Grand Opera's new production of "Arabella" brings to Houston audiences Strauss' famous love story full of luscious melodies and 1860s Viennese characters. In this opera, Strauss and his talented collaborator, Hugo von Hofmannsthal, sought to do for 19th Century Vienna what they had done earlier for the 18th Century Vienna in their most famous collaborative effort, "Der Rosenkavalier."

Tickets for all "Arabella" performances, ranging in price from $2.50 to $22, are now on sale at the Houston Ticket Center, or they may be reserved through the center, 713-227-3625.

'Bad writing' questioned

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The question isn't whether episodic television is suffering because of bad writing. The question is why, and the battle lines are clearly drawn, with the networks on one side and the writers on the other.

Fred Silverman, president of ABC Entertainment, accused the writers of "letting us down" and said most series proposals submitted to ABC are "simply awful."

Silverman's cannonade came during a debate at the Writers Guild of America on "What's Wrong With Network Television?" Writer Richard Powell fired back later, "Deep in my heart of hearts, I know that if I brought 'Hamlet' to Fred Silverman, he would put a dog in it."

The question wasn't really resolved during the debate and merited further inquiry.

"No network is going to force a writer into writing badly, nor would any writer of integrity respond to that kind of pressure," says William Self, CBS vice president for motion pictures and mini series and former president of 20th Century Fox Television.

"The real problem is that good writers are overtaxed."

Robert Dellinger, who is forsaking episodic TV for movies and novels, says, "I've seen it from both sides of the fence. I understand what Silverman means when he says the quality of writing is poor. I know that as a story editor I have been disappointed with some of the stories turned in by 'name' writers. They looked like they were just written off the wall.

"On the other hand, I feel the networks, by the nature of the collective decision-making process, impose restrictions upon writers, and they are frequently more interested in subjects that are safe and non-controversial than they are in the originality and execution of an idea."

NBC's 'Godfather' finally ready for broadcast

By GARY ARNOLD
The Washington Post

In the summer of 1975 Paramount announced that it had reached an agreement with NBC to lease the rights to a single showing of what was described as "an approximately nine-hour spectacular" composed of "The Godfather" and "The Godfather, Part II," the Academy award-winning epics about dynastic succession in an Italian-American gangster family, the Corleones.

It was reported that the network had paid the studio $15 million for the rights to this showing, which would be edited under the supervision of director Francis Coppola, then known as Francis Ford Coppola, and would incorporate previously unseen footage "to create the definitive portrait of the Corleone family from the turn of the century to the 1950s for what will be, in effect, a totally new film — 'The Godfather' story in its entirety."

NBC paid a record-setting $10 million to telecast "The Godfather" over the course of two evenings in November of 1974, shortly before the theatrical release of "Godfather II." In announcing the follow-up deal, network president Robert T. Howard said, "Coppola will, in effect, start all over again. He will reassemble all the material of both films and integrate several hours of film not shown because of time limitations to present the Godfather story chronologically."

In a separate statement Coppola himself commented, "We are going to restructure the story, altering the flashback technique of Part II to create a totally new epic, encyclopedic technique especially appropriate for the subject matter. My main incentive in approaching this was the hope to utilize a vast library of scenes prepared for Parts I and II, which were never seen by theatrical audiences."

The projected air date of fall, 1976, was missed by a year, presumably because of Coppola's commitments to a new epic movie project, "Apocalypse Now." On four consecutive nights beginning Saturday, Nov. 12, NBC will finally air what promises to be not "totally new" movies but somewhat augmented reassemblies of the original movies, entitled: "The Godfather: The Complete Novel for Television."

"The Godfather" ran 2 hours, 54 minutes when it was released theatrically, and "Godfather II" 3 hours, 20 minutes. However, Coppola evidently felt compelled to cut the sequel himself to a certain extent after discovering that some exhibitors in second-run situations were omitting a reel here and there on their own authority.

NBC cut approximately a minute of footage from "The Godfather" during its initial telecast, and one can assume that similar minor cuts, provoked by profanity or unusual graphic violence, will affect the sequel.

Both films were rated "R," and the telecast will include an advisory noting that "This motion picture classic presents a realistic depiction of self-destructive effects of crime and violence, and although it has been edited for television, parental discretion is advised."

The four-part telecast will encompass nine hours of air time. The first segment, occupying the "Saturday Night at the Movies" slot from 8 to 10 p.m., appears to be drawn from the flashback sequences of Godfather II — the episodes depicting the flight of young Victor Corleone from Sicily at the turn of the century and the beginnings of his criminal career in New York's Little Italy from about 1918 to 1923.

MERLIN THE MAGICIAN, right, confronts sorceress Morgan LeFay in "Arthur and the Magic Sword," a dramatic play based on the life of King Arthur of England which will have a performance at 2:30 p.m. today in Theater Center, 2301 W. Indiana Ave. Scott Morris portrays Merlin and Doni Douglas is seen as Morgan LeFay. Both are members of the Pickwick Players, the young people's performing company of Midland Community Theater. Tickets for today's matinee will be for sale at the box office before curtain time. (Staff Photo)

'Gin Game' well suited to stars, offers many rewarding elements

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy there is an apt element of reward in their new Broadway play.

The distinguished acting couple are among theater's most indefatigable travelers and have spent more time than other stars in residence with regional companies.

What could be nicer, then, than to uncover a script well suited to their adroit skills in one of those far from the Main Stem stages?

"We always try desperately not to repeat," says Cronyn of how he found "The Gin Game" at the Actors Theater in Louisville, Ky.

The drama, by newcomer playwright D.L. Coburn, concerns two lonely elders who meet in a welfare home and become locked in comic-tragic togetherness. A theme far removed from their early paean to matrimony, "The Fourposter."

Critical praise for the actors was unanimous and the production at the Golden Theater appears set for an SRO run.

Cronyn was on an inspection tour last year for the National Endowment of the Arts of nine resident troupes when Louisville director Jon Jory showed him Coburn's script, slated for presentatitn there a bit later.

"I read it, I bought it and I sent it to Mike Nichols," the man from London, Ont., describes the selective process. Nichols agreed to direct him and Miss Tandy. They did an test run at the Long Wharf in New Haven, Conn.

Noted harp ensemble sets Odessa concert

ODESSA — The noted New York Harp Ensemble comes to Odessa Tuesday as the second attraction of Odessa Civic Concert Association's current season.

The 8 p.m. event will be in the auditorium of the Fine Arts Building at Odessa College, in place of Bonham Junior High School auditorium where Civic Concert Association programs usually are held.

The Harp Ensemble, under the artistic direction of Aristid von Wurtzler, consists of four harpists whose instruments can play different roles and present different harmonic lines to provide distinct, and distinctly pleasing, ensemble effects.

Members of Midland's Community Concerts Association may hear the concert at no charge.

New Dawn Singers set performance at MC

The New Dawn Singers, a vocal-instrumental ensemble from Frank Phillips College in Borger, will present a free concert at 11 a.m. Wednesday at Midland College.

The ensemble has won several national collegiate music competitions and has performed at numerous colleges and universities in the Southwest and elsewhere. The upcoming Midland College engagement will be the 16-member group's first concert here, said MC student activities director Dr. Jim Cook.

The public is invited to hear the Wednesday program in the Midland College Student Center.

Longhorns avenge year of embarrassment

HOUSTON (AP) — Top-ranked Texas, ignited by Earl Campbell's three touchdowns and quarterback Randy McEachern's field generalship, stunned the Houston Cougars 35-21 in a Southwest Conference game Saturday and avenged a year of embarrassment.

The Longhorns, held to 24 yards rushing in a 30-0 loss to Houston last year, took a 14-13 halftime lead on touchdown runs of six and two yards by the powerful Campbell, who rambled for more than 100 yards for the seventh straight time this season.

He also galloped 40-yards for a touchdown in the third quarter to turn the tide for the Longhorns and later raced 43 yards to set up a one-yard touchdown run by McEachern.

McEachern, who spiced Texas' running game with his passes, hit Ronnie Miksch with a 16-yard scoring pass in the fourth quarter to kill the Cougar chances.

The Cougars, inspired by cries of "Probation!" from Longhorn fans, opened the scoring on a 44-yard scamper by Alois Blackwell in the first quarter. It was the first touchdown scored on the ground against the Texas defense this season.

The Cougars, placed on one-year probation this year by the NCAA for recruiting violations, rallied in the first half behind quarterback Delrick Brown, who showed some of the big play qualities of the injured Danny Davis.

But the awesome performance by Campbell, who became the No. 6 career NCAA rusher during the game, finally wore down the Cougars.

Campbell, the nation's leading collegiate rusher, finished with 173 yards on 24 carries in the game and now has a career total of 3,887 yards.

After Blackwell's touchdown run, the only first-half points Houston could muster came on field goals of 27 and 43 yards by Kenny Hatfield.

The Cougars scored once more with 40 seconds left in the game when Brown hit tight end Don Bass with a two-yard touchdown pass and then passed to Bass again for the two-point conversion.

Russell Erxleben, Texas' more-heralded kicker and NCAA co-record holder, unsuccessfully attempted field goals of 56 and 59 yards.

Blackwell, a marked man for the Texas defense all afternoon, ran eight yards and Brown kept for 13 yards on key third-down plays to keep Houston's first-quarter touchdown drive alive.

Blackwell broke off the left side of the Longhorn line into the secondary on his touchdown run. He ran over safety Johnnie Johnson and outran Ricky Churchman to the end zone, despite losing his shoe in the process.

McEachern, a third-stringer pressed into service by injuries this season, finished with 16 completions in 25 attempts for 161 yards and a touchdown.

He pulled the Longhorns even by the end of the first quarter, keying an 80-yard drive with a 14-yard pass to Olympian Johnny "Lam" Jones and a 17-yarder to Alfred Jackson.

B. T. Express routs TCU

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Texas Tech fullback Billy Taylor notched a school-record five touchdowns Saturday as the Red Raiders pistol-whipped Southwest Conference rival Texas Christian 49-17.

The burly senior, nicknamed the "B.T. Express," bulled across three times from the one, struck again from the six and rolled like a bowling ball 40 yards for another.

The homecoming contest marked the return of limp-legged quarterback Rodney Allison, who twice guided the Raiders from behind to hype their record to 6-2 and 3-2.

TCU got two quick touchdowns in the second period, both on passes from Steve Bayuk to Mike Renfro, and trailed at halftime by only four points, 21-17.

The Horned Frogs, now 2-6 and 1-4, took a 3-0 lead on Steve Morman's 45-yard field goal but Taylor banged out two of his short-distance touchdowns before the first quarter ended.

Taylor hyped the count to 28-71 early in the third period with his 40-yarder, shaking off several tacklers and breaking lose behind a crunching block by Gregg Adkins.

The record-breaking score also occured in the third quarter after linebacker Gary McCright picked off a TCU pass and returned it 37 yards to the threshhold of the goal.

Eric Felton lashed through to block a Horned Frog punt minutes later, falling on the ball in the end zone for his first touchdown of a sparkling defensive career.

Tim Orr wrapped up the scoring with a Tech touchdown from the two.

The Raiders got off to a shaky start as Steve Barnes intercepted Allison's first pass of the afternoon at the Raider 34 and set up Morman's field goal.

But Allison came right back to guide the Raiders 80 yards in 15 plays with Taylor scoring from the one.

Within minutes, Taylor scored again from the one after a TCU punter fumbled the snap from center and Tech took possession a step from the end zone.

TCU stormed back for its two touchdowns, getting the first after Wesley Roberts recovered a Raider fumble at the Tech 29. John Ferguson pounced on another Tech miscue at the Raider 12 and Bayuk winged the 12-yarder to Renfro one play later.

Allison directed scoring drives of 64 and 80 yards to put the game out of reach, Taylor added one more touchdown for good measure and then Felton's blocked punt applied the finishing stroke.

Taylor rambled 151 yards on 26 carries during the warm, windy, sunswept afternoon to the delight of a homecoming crowd of 42,124.

He also caught four passes for 15 yards and took an unsuccessful shot at passing himself that was batted down in the TCU end zone.

Tech gives fans nervous feeling

BY TED BATTLES
R-T Sports editor

LUBBOCK — For a half it looked like one of those old-fashioned upsets that have haunted this storied West Texas rivalry was in the making at Jones Stadium Saturday and old grads on hand for homecoming shifted uncomfortably in their seats as Texas Tech, the heavy favorite, snuck off the field with a tenuous 21-17 halftime lead.

Then, a three-touchdown explosion in the third period blew away young and building Texas Christian's ambush and it wound up 49-17, about the way most folks thought it would end.

It turned out to be a memorable day for halfback Billy Taylor, the acrobatic senior from San Antonio Jay, who scored five touchdowns to set a Tech single game record for points, 30, and gained 151 yards in 26 carries.

IT WAS also a day to remember for linebacker Gary McCright, the 6-1, 221-pound senior from Midland Lee, who picked off a Steve Bayuk pass and light-footed it 37 yards to set up Taylor's last touchdown and help take the game out of reach in the 21-point third period.

"Yes, it was my longest run," McCright said modestly of the trek that ended on the four.

"I thought I had a touchdown when I cut back," Gary described in the vernacular of all great open field runners. "But I mistook the five for the goal."

That run set up Taylor's third vaulting one-yard leap into the end zone, a trademark of the 6-0, 216-pounder.

"I took gymnastics and played basketball and I guess that helps my leaping ability," he explained.

HIS LONGEST TD was a 40-yard tour early in the third quarter that opened the 21-17 halftime edge to a 28-21 gap, but it also was his most disappointing. "Greg Adkins, a tight end, was out in front running interference all the way. It was embarrassing," he grinned. "I'm supposed to be one of the fastest men on the squad."

Quarterback Rodney Allison, who suffered a broken bone in his leg in the Texas A&M game back in September and played only briefly against Texas last week, started and Coach Steve Sloan said it was a last minute decision that "gave us a mental lift."

"Rodney did a good job even though he was only at half speed, but it brought back memories of what he was before," Sloan added.

WITH ALLISON in the lineup, Sloan admitted Tech had to junk some of its offense, "But fortunately they didn't start taking the pitch-man until late in the game."

The crowd of 42,142 responded with a cheer when Allison trotted out with the offense team, but it turned to a groan when his first pass was intercepted and set up a 45-yard field goal by Steve Morman.

"Even after the interception, I knew we'd come back," Taylor said. "He's the sparkplug of our offense. He may not be 100 per cent, but he's our offensive leader."

Tech drove 80 yards on its next possession to go ahead 7-3 and then the game turned into a series of turnovers that kindled visions of a possible upset.

TCU TOOK advantage of fumble recoveries to score twice on Bayuk to Mike Renfro passes in the space of 14 seconds. The first was a 33-yarder down the middle.

"We had the blitz on," explained McCright, "And the secondary was supposed to go man-to-man, only trouble was the cornerback and safety both took the same man and Renfro was wide open."

After a fumbled pitch out, Renfro made a diving catch in the corner of the end zone on an 11-yarder that made it 14-10. "He just ran a turkey route, zigging inside and zagging outside and made a good catch," McCright said.

Sloan credited, "Our kicking game and defense" for turning the game around.

Tech drove 64 yards to forge ahead 21-17 with 45 seconds left in the half.

AFTER TAYLOR'S 40-yard run and McCright's inter-ception led to the first two third-period scores, Eric Felton blocked his fourth punt of the season and recovered it in the end zone for another TD, which ended any lingering suspense.

"Eric gets a good jump and has good quickness and speed, plus he's a super athlete," McCrignt explained Felton's knack for getting to the punter. "Besides, it's something we work hard on all week."

Bowls? "Sure they're on our minds, but with SMU, Houston and Arkansas left, we can't afford to look beyond the next game," Gary said.

TCU quarterback Bayuk said he felt TCU had Tech on the ropes when it was 17-14; "But then we let it go. That's the best pass rush I've faced this year. I was throwing high all day."

Coach F.A. Dry, in his first year of rebuilding the Horned Frogs, said, "Their quickness told more and more as the game wore on...Tech has a better range from its linebackers than most teams we play."

Bulldogs win state net title

WITCHITA FALLS—Jeff Rea stood out on the court here at the Hamilton Park Tennis Center, the weight of the world — or at least his world — resting on the youngster's 16-year-old shoulders.

After 17 matches, 75 sets and some 360 games in this final round match of the Texas State Team Tennis Tournament between Midland High and San Antonio Churchill, the Pack's hope of winning this title for the second year in a row hinged on the outcome of Rea's match with Kevin Mullins. It was his to win — or lose, and the MHS junior won it in Jack Armstrong style.

Rea battled furiously back from a 4-2 deficit in the third and decisive set to defeat Mullins, 6-3, 5-7, 7-6 and the state team title was Midland's once again.

Rea's win tied the match at 9-9, and both teams were also tied in sets, 38-38. But the Bulldogs were declared the winners by virtue of a 194-173 edge in games.

It was the only tough match of this two-day event for the Bulldogs, who battered Euless Trinity, 18-0, in their opening round match on Friday, defeated San Antonio Alamo Heights 12-6 in the quarters, and trounced Corpus Christi King in Saturday morning's semifinals, 14-4.

Churchill made it to the finals with a 10-8 victory over Dallas Richardson in the semis.

"All the pressure and money was on him and he came through by playing probably the finest tennis of his life," said a proud Coach Larry Burgin of Rea.

Rea wouldn't have even gotten the chance to salvage victory for the Pack though were it not for his teammates Mary Morgan and Dinah Boyd. They both won "must" matches down the stretch to keep Midland alive.

After Tim Baird was beaten by John Massari, 6-4, 7-6, the Bulldogs were down 9-6 with only three matches still going on — Boyd's, Morgan's and Rea's. Morgan, a talented sophomore playing number three singles, came through by disposing of Churchill's Jorjan Bietrich, 7-6, 6-2. Then Boyd, who didn't lose a match in the tournament, bested Linda Klar in three sets, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3 to set the stage for Rea.

Down 4-2 when he got the news that everything rested in his hands, the scrappy junior proceeded to break Mullins' serve, hold his own twice, and win the match by blasting Mullins in the all-important tie-breaker, 5-0.

As was the case last year when they won the title, it was the girls who carried the load for the Pack. They won seven of their nine matches against Churchill, while Rea and Jeff Bramlett were the only male netters who could come through with victories in the final. Bramlett, playing number one singles, blasted Churchill's top player, David Wilson, 6-1, 6-0.

Besides Boyd, only two other Midland players, Vicki Vasicek and Cary Garton, went through the four rounds of the tournament without a loss. In the final match, Vasicek, the number one girls performer, tripped up Tracy Gingrass, 6-1, 6-0, while Garton, playing number two, downed Mary Taylor, 6-2, 6-0.

Norton captures split decision over Young

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Ken Norton overcame the slight-ofhand style of Jimmy Young with a blasting body attack that carried him to a split 15-round decision Saturday night and kept him in good position for a rematch with heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali.

Norton, unable to attack effectively to the head of the elusive Young, scored well to the body and closed out the fight with a tremendous body attack as the crowd openly rooted for Young.

Leading the cheers for Young was Ali, who at the beginning of the 14th round shouted: "I'm tired of fighting Norton. Win, Jimmy."

But Norton ruined the champion's plans and apparently set up a fourth fight with the 35-year-old Ali, who won two of the first three.

The World Boxing Council has decreed that Ali must sign within 60 days to fight Norton or be stripped of title recognition.

"It was a very long 15 rounds," said Norton, "A very tough fight."

At the end of those long 15 rounds, which were nationally televised, judges Art Lurie of Las Vegas and Jim Rondeau of the state of Washington had it 147-143 for Norton. Judge Raymond Baldeyrou of France saw it 144-142 for Young.

The referee, Carlos Padilla, did not score. The Associated Press had it 143-142 for Norton.

Sooners slaughter Cowboys, 61-28

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma quarterback Thomas Lott engineered a 61-28 slaughter of Oklahoma State Saturday to keep the Sooners firmly in control of the Big Eight Conference lead.

Lott rushed for 103 yards on 17 carries, including an 80-yard touchdown jaunt, and passed for 85 more yards before leaving the game late in the third quarter with a slightly bruised shoulder. Lott's injury was not serious, but there was no need for him to return to action as Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer began emptying his bench.

Lott also hit Elvis Peacock with a 48-yard scoring pass and set up another touchdown with 37-yard pass to Steve Rhodes that carried to the Oklahoma State 2-yard line. David Overstreet then scored on a 1-yard plunge.

Oklahoma State opened the game as though the Cowboys were going to make a game of it. They took the opening kickoff and drove 75 yards in nine plays for the score, a 2-yard burst by Terry Miller. Then a few minutes later Miller tacked on a 71-yard scoring burst to give the Cowboys a 14-7 lead.

But the Oklahoma Sooner defense slapped the clamps on Miller and company and gave up nothing the rest of the game. The Cowboys got 14 more points to open the second half, but both were silverplated "gimmes" by the Oklahoma offense, which fumbled twice on its own 5-yard line. Other than that, the Oklahoma State offense could do nothing against the Sooner defense.

Thanks to his 71-yard run, however, Miller was able to keep his string of 100-plus yards alive at 17.

Oklahoma State's other scores came on runs of 3 yards by Miller and one-yard by quarterback Harold Bailey.

Oklahoma scored on field goals of 58, 22 and 19 yards by Uwe von Schamann, a safety, a 3-yard run by Freddie Nixon, a 57-yard run by Peacock, a 10- yard pass from Dean Blevins to Victor Hicks and a 55-yard pass-run-lateral play from Blevins to Steve Rhodes to Overstreet.

Huskies upset California

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Quarterback Warren Moon ran for two touchdowns in the decisive third quarter and Michael Jackson of the ball-hawking Washington defense intercepted two passes as the Huskies, sharing the Pacific-8 football lead, beat 17th-ranked California 50-31 Saturday.

Washington trailed 21-17 at halftime before exploding for 21 points in the third period. Moon scored on runs of 1 and 12 yards, halfback Joe Steele got his second touchdown of the game on a 1-yard plunge and linebackers Jackson and Bruce Harrell made the third and fourth interceptions of the day for the Huskies.

The victory set up an important clash next Saturday in Seattle between Washington and Southern California. The Huskies, Southern Cal and UCLA share the conference lead with 4-1 records.

Moon, a senior, set up Washington's first two touchdowns with long passes and enjoyed perhaps the finest day of his varsity career. Steve Robbins, the Huskies' placekicker, took the Pac-8 scoring lead with two field goals and six extra points which gave him 70 points for the year.

Moon's 12-yard touchdown run on an option play to the right sent Washington ahead in the opening minutes of the third period. Harrell's interception came a few minutes later at the Cal 14-yard line and Moon followed with his second touchdown on a sneak to give the Huskies command in the high-scoring game.

Chap netters prove to be tough hosts

The Midland College men's tennis team edged by New Mexico Military Institute 5-4 Saturday and captured top honors in the MC Team Tennis Tournament which was held at the Chaparral courts.

The narrow victory over NMMI in this round-robin event gave the Chaps a two-day total of 38 points, two better than the runnerup New Mexico team. Odessa College was third with 22 points.

In the girls event, quantity not quality was the downfall of Midland, as a shortaqe of netters cost them the title and gave it to University of Texas at the Permian Basin. UTPB finished with 20 points, while the Chaps, South Plains and Odessa all tied for second with 18.

Tony Luttrell, Ron Cetrone and Mike Burch all came through with victories in the decisive men's match with NMMI. The Chaps held a 33-32 lead going in and the 5-4 victory clinched the title for them.

The Midland girls team only has three girls, which meant that they automatically forfeited two points in every match they played. They went through the tourney undefeated, as did Odessa which was also playing two girls short, but the two-point forfeiture cost them both a shot at the title and gave it to UTPB.

USC shoots down Cards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Southern California shot down Stanford's aerial circus and surged over the Cardinals by air and land as Rob Hertel threw for two touchdowns and Charles White ran for a pair in a 49-0 victory Saturday.

Handing Stanford its first shutout, the Trojans sent their Pacific-8 Conference football record to 4-1 and a tie for the conference lead with UCLA and Washington.

The whitewash virtually eliminated Stanford, 4-2, from further Rose Bowl consideration. USC plays at Washington next Saturday.

On an afternoon that opened with a shower, Hertel threw scoring passes of six yards to tight end Dan Burns and 22 to White, the sophomore speedster who also scored on runs of 14 and 2 yards.

Stanford's Guy Benjamin, the nation's leading collegiate passer, hit 19 of 38 throws for 208 yards, but was intercepted four times and sacked when the Cardinals mounted their best offensive effort.

The action started when Rick Bashore hit Theotis Brown on a nine-yard pass play that ended on the 34. Two plays later, a personal foul penalty moved the ball to the 12. Bashore ran for four yards, then threw an eight-yard scoring pass to Brown with barely a minute left in the half.

Maravich hopes sixth win omen

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Pete Maravich doesn't discount the strength of numerology, and he sometimes sees omens in common phenomena—one of them being the sixth victory of the season for the New Orleans Jazz.

"Last year we were 5-1 for our first six games, then we lost six in a row," Maravich said after his team beat Golden State 105-102 Saturday. "This year we won our sixth game, and I hope that means something good for our future."

Maravich changed his jersey number to "7" before last season and wound up the National Basketball Association's leading scorer. He said the number has always been lucky for him, but he deadpans a lot of putons.

He wasn't kidding anyone, however, when he looked ahead at the immediate future for the Jazz in its fourth NBA season.

"We're going on a very difficult road trip next week," he said. "If the puzzle is ever going to fit together, we'll find out next week. If we can win two of those games on the road, we'll be very fortunate.

"We play at Denver Wednesday, Phoenix the next night and Los Angeles the next night. And Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar) will probably be back for the Lakers.

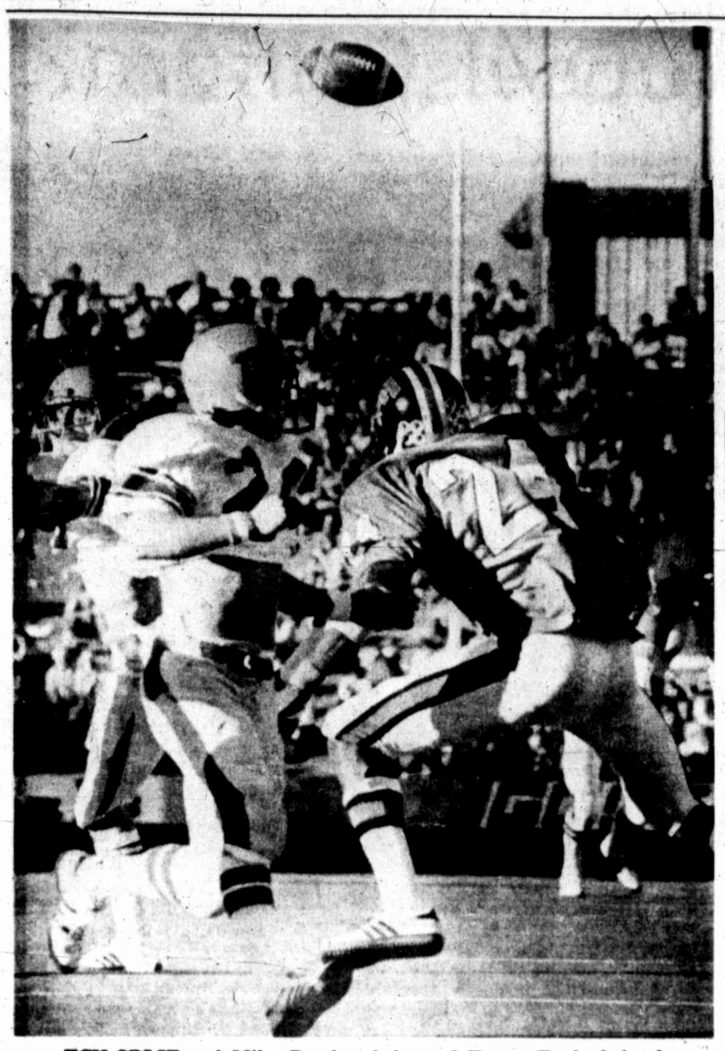

"We have Seattle Sunday, and they'll be playing well, and then we fly 3,000 miles to play the Knicks Tuesday."

Before beginning the road trip, the Jazz meets Washington Sunday night at home.

Last year's team finished 3547.

"We're a different team this year," Maravich said. "Nobody knows whether the results will be any better.

"Leonard Robinson is the best addition the Jazz ever made. He's improved the club dramatically." Robinson, the free agent forward acquired from Atlanta, is averaging 25 points and 17 rebounds a game.

Colorado slips past Iowa State, 12-7

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Tailback Mike Kozlowski, who missed most of the season with a punctured lung, returned to the Colorado lineup Saturday and ran 42 yards for a touchdown to lead the Buffaloes to a 12-7 victory over Iowa State in Big Eight Conference football.

Pete Dadiotis gave Colorado a 6-0 lead on field goals of 28 and 26 yards before Kozlowski ripped the longest gainer of the game for a touchdown three minutes before the half.

The Buffaloes, 2-2-1 in the Big Eight and 5-2-1 for the season, dominated Iowa State in the first half, allowing the Cyclones just 15 yards rushing.

Iowa State did not get a first down until just over a minute remained in the half.

Kansas State rally falls short of mark

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Kansas struck for a threetouchdown lead on Max Ediger's 71-yard run early in the second half then fought off a furious Kansas State comeback to defeat the Wildcats, 29-21, Saturday in Big Eight football.

The loss, Kansas State's 19th straight in league play over three seasons under Coach Ellis Rainsberger, may have put his job in deeper jeopardy.

However, the Wildcats, now 0-5 in conference action and 1-8 overall this year with games remaining against Iowa State and Colorado, kept fighting ur il a late Kansas pass interception broke their backs. They are 5-26 overall since Rainsberger became coach.

It was Kansas' first conference victory in what has been a long seasonfor the Jayhawks as well. Kansas is 1-3-1 in the Big Eight and 2-6-1 for the season with games left against Nebraska and Missouri.

Army douses Air Force

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Senior halfback Greg King, finding running room around the Air Force flanks, dashed for 165 yards and two touchdowns to power Army past Air Force 31-6 Saturday in an interservice football rivalry.

Quarterback Leamon Hall ran and passed for two more scores as the Black Knights raised their record to 6-3, insuring their first winning season since 1972. The victory snapped Army's 20-game losing streak on the road, and was the Cadets' first triumph in Falcon Stadium since 1967.

King, having his second straight game over 100 yards rushing after a 212-yard effort last week against Holy Cross, bolted to the outside and ran 44 yards midway through the second quarter, putting Army on top 10-6. He finished off the Falcons early in the final quarter, taking a pitchout and running 15 yards around the right side for a 24-6 lead.

Freshmen lead Mustangs past Rice Owls, 41-24

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist freshman quarterback Mike Ford accounted for three touchdowns and frosh tailback Derrek Shelton bolted four yards for the clinching score Saturday as the Mustangs subdued the frisky Rice Owls 41-24 before their smallest crowd in Cotton Bowl history.

Only 6,918 fans showed up for the Southwest Conference game in perfect 72-degree weather and were rewarded with a wild offensive show. It was the smallest turnout since SMU began playing in the Cotton Bowl in 1940s.

SMU evened its SWC record at 3-3 and is 4-5 for the year. Rice is 0-6 and 1-8.

Ford scored on a one-yard run, slipped a 15-yard touchdown pass to Anthony Smith and nailed Emanuel Tolbert with a four-yard scoring strike.

Ford, the leading passer in the SWC, completed 17 of 21 passes for 205 yards.

Rice's equally talented freshman quarterback, Randy Hertel, outgunned Ford in the first half as the Owls posted a 24-21 halftime lead.

But the Mustangs rallied in the second half and scored three fourth-quarter touchdowns while intercepting Hertel twice.

The day started poorly for the Mustangs when Ford and running back Arthur Whittington collided on their own one yard line and Rice's Don Parrish accepted the gift fumble.

Earl Cooper scored on the next play.

After SMU went ahead 7-6 on Ford's touchdown run, Hertel completed a 21-yard touchdown pass to Darrell Mouton.

SMU padded the score to 21-12 on a touchdown pass to Smith and Whittington's oneyard touchdown run.

Rice struck for two quick touchdowns just before the half on a 33-yard scoring pass from Hertel to David Houser and Cooper's one-yard run.

SMU took command after holding Rice without a first down in the third period. SMU capped the scoring when Whittington bulled anross from two yards out with 2:44 left in the game.

Whittington romped for 131 yards on 28 carries but was guilty of two fumbles which cost the Mustangs touchdowns.

Hertel, who masterminded the Owl offense so effectively in the first half they didn't have to punt, completed 18 of 38 passes for 265 yards but had four attempts intercepted.

Ironically, Harold Perry, who was twice beaten on touchdown bombs, intercepted two passes and knocked down two conversion passes.

Rice was handicapped because Coach Homer Rice refused to let placekicker Wes Hansen suit out for disciplinary reasons.

Rice's first extra point attempt by freshman Don Wood was blocked to set the tone for the Owl placekicking ineptitude for the day.

SMU drove 62 yards to go ahead 28-24 with 12:52 left in the game.

Then the Mustangs got a big break when Hertel fumbled and James Wright recovered the ball at the Owl 42.

Shelton, a six-foot, 180-pounder from Silsbee, carried eight out of nine plays on the scoring drive. Ford completed a 17-yard pass to tight end Elton Garrett to the Rice 14. Shelton then ripped off six runs in a row climaxed by his two-yard touchdown gallop.

Permian nails down 5-4A title

By BOB DILLON
R-T Sports Writer

ODESSA — Odessa Permian reigns as District 5-4A football champions.

It wasn't easy and the Panthers had to come from behind to nail the championship by downing the San Angelo Central Bobcats, 16-13, before more than 15,000 fans in W.T. Barrett Stadium Saturday night.

The score was 7-7 at halftime as the two 5-4A rivals went after each other hammer and tong.

Permian scored nine points in the final period to pull out the hard-earned victory. It gives Mojo a 9-0 season record and no matter what happens next week against Odessa High, the Black Cats of Coach John Wilkins will face Denton in the opening round of the Class AAAA state playoffs in two weeks.

CENTRAL SCORED first after holding Mojo at its 34, halting a game-opening drive which started at the Panther 31. With fourth and two at the Bobcat 37, Permian's Greg Rodriguez got off a four-yard punt off the side of his foot.

In four plays, the Bobcats scored. Quarterback Vin Smith found end Mike McLaughlin wide open for 15 yards and two plays later, Smith broke on a 47-yard touchdown run with 5:54 left in the first period. Carl Brainard booted the PAT for a 7-0 lead.

Permian moved the ball well on the Bobcats following the touchdown, going from its own 20 to the Central 46 where split end Brian Vickers fumbled after catching a pass from Vic Vines with Neville Leverett recovering for the Bobcats.

The Panthers struck quickly in the second period, going 85 yards in only four plays, to get back into the game. Fullback Mark Graves gained seven yards and Barry Babcock one. Vines broke for 22 yards.

ON THE next play, fullback Alan Swann skipped 43-yards for the score and Robert Orosco booted the PAT to tie the game, 7-7 with 11:01 left in the second period.

Phil Herd led a tough Bobcat defense on Permian's next two possessions and Central did manage to move the ball down to Mojo's 31 as the half ended on a 31-yard pass from Smith to Brainard.

The third quarter was scoreless, but Permian did drive all the way to the Bobcat one where Central held. Chris Soape had recovered a Bobcat fumble at the Angelo 20, but the Bobcat defense rose to the occasion.

Permian went in front to stay by driving 62 yards in three plays. Vines hit Byron Taylor with a 32-yard pass that was tipped into the air by a Bobcat defender and then Babcock skipped 29 yards for the go-ahead TD. Orosco's kick was true for a 14-7 lead with 8:45 left in the game.

CENTRAL WAS not through, however. On the first play following the ensuing kickoff, the Bobcats used a halfback pass play from Smith to Brainard, good for 55 yards. Smith switched jersey numbers from 15 to 44, usually the fullback's number and hit Brainard who raced to Mojo's four. On then the next play, Abbott scored. The Bobcats tried to pass for the two-point conversion, but it failed, making it 14-13, in favor of Permian with 8:25 left in the game.

Byron Taylor recovered a Smith fumble later in the period at the Bobcat 43 and Mojo drove to the Central seven where Orosco tried a 12-yard field goal which was good, but Central was offsides and Permian took the penalty instead of the three points to nail the Bobcats on their own one.

It paid off, because on the very next play, the center snapped the ball over the quarterback's head for a safety to make it 16-13 with 21 seconds left.

Permian got the free kick and ran out the clock.

PERMIAN NOW faces OHS next week before entering the playoffs for the seventh time in the past 11 years.

San Angelo is 6-3 on the year and 4-2 in 5-4A play with its final game next week with Big Spring.

Permian had 234 yards on the ground with Babcock and Swann paving the way with 87 and 69 yards, respectivley while Abbott led Central with 58 yards.

Arkansas belts Baylor Bears

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Ron Calcagni passed for two touchdowns and set up another TD with two big completions as eighth-ranked Arkansas whipped Baylor 35-9 Saturday night and remained in the thick of the Southwest Conference race.

Arkansas is now 7-1 for the season and 4-1 in the SWC — one step behind Texas and Texas A&M. Arkansas plays A&M next Saturday in College Station, Texas.

Arkansas, protecting a 6-0 lead, exploded with 15 points in less than a two-minute period in the second quarter.

Calcagni floated a 40-yard scoring pass to Donny Bobo and then hooked up with tight end Charles Clay for a two-point conversion that made it 14-0 with 10:40 left in the half.

Arkansas took over at the 50 after a Vaughn Lusby pass interception and Calcagni quickly overcame first and 25 by completing two passes for 28 yards.

On third and 7 from the 16, Gary Stiggers took a pitch on the flanker around and scored untouched with 8:46 remaining.

Arkansas upped its advantage to 28-3 midway in the third quarter driving 46 yards for the score, after a 1-yard punt by Luke Prestridge.

Calcagni covered 30 yards with two passes, and then, on third and goal from the 6, tossed a screen pass to Micheal Forrest, who vaulted the last Baylor defender for the touchdown.

Calcagni completed 12 of 19 passes for 168 yards against a Baylor secondary that was second in the league in pass defense prior to the game. Alternate quarterback Houston Nutt completed two of five for 60 yards including a 47-yard scoring pass to Stiggers in the final minutes.

Steve Little kicked field goals of 34 and 57 yards to give Arkansas a 6-0 lead. Those were Little's 47th and 48th field goals, leaving him three shy of the NCAA career record held by David Lawson of the Air Force Academy.

Baylor's best offensive thrust of the first half came when the Bears moved from their own 19 to the Arkansas 16 on the running of Greg Hawthorne and quarterback Greg Wood. Facing second and 7 Jim Howard and Jerry Saxton dropped Wood for an 11-yard loss and the Bears had to settle for a 43yard field goal by Robert Bledsoe. Those were the first points Arkansas had allowed in the second quarter all year.

After Calcagni's TD pass to Forrest, Baylor took the ensuing kickoff and moved 68 yards for its only touchdown. Gary Blair went the final 12 yards for the score and made it 28-9 with five minutes left in the third period.

Baylor got another chance at the Arkansas 37 less than two minutes later when Lester Ward recovered an Arkansas fumble. Defensive tackle Jimmy Walker made two big plays and noseman Reggie Freeman contributed a third and the Bears wound up punting from the Arkansas 38.

Syracuse routs Navy, 45-34

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP)— Junior quarterback Bill Hurley passed for three touchdowns and ran for a fourth Saturday as Syracuse defeated Navy 45-34 in a college football game.

Hurley completed 20 of 31 passes for 281 yards, giving him 1,309 for the season, and breaking the Syracuse season passing record of 1,121 yards set by Bernie Custis in 1949.

A&I upset by Lions, 7-6

COMMERCE, Texas (AP) — Danny Rogers snared a 79-yard touchdown pass from Terry Skinner and Tom Hay added the key extra point Saturday night as East Texas State shaded NAIA No. 1-ranked Texas A&I 7-6 and snapped the Javelinas' string of 46 games without a loss.

The Javelinas, who have won three straight NAIA championships, had won 42 straight games until Oct. 8, when they were forced to rally and tie Abilene Christian 25-25.

The last time Texas A&I lost was Nov. 10, 1973.

Texas A&I scored late in the second quarter when Elvis Hartsfield heaved an 80-yard touchdown pass to Glen Starks. But on the extra point attempt, Starks, the holder, took a high snap and was forced to unsuccessfully attempt a pass.

The Javelinas punched inside the Lions 40-yard line twice in the second half, but Robbie Spencer missed on a 45-yard field goal attempt and the Javs failed on a fourth down play.

Texas A&I was able, however, to compile 261 yards rushing, including 119 by the Lone Star Conference's career record-holder, Larry Collins, and 178 yards passing.

Pinpoint passing by Skinner kept East Texas' ball-control offense alive. Skinner ended the game with 12 completions in 25 attempts for 205 yards.

Shepard says victories to come

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston freshman quarterback Darrell Shepard appeared in the game for only one play but he still was a topic for discussion following No. 1-ranked Texas' 35-21 shellacking of the Cougars in a Southwest conference game Saturday.

"We'll get them the next three years," said Shepard, whose second quarter fumble produced Texas' second touchdown and gave them the lead for good. "All the talk about probation didn't bother me, I just wasn't ready to go into the game."

Shepard came to UH following a heated recruiting battle with the Longhorns. The Cougard later were placed on NCAA probation for recruiting violations involving Shepard amid rumors that Texas reported the infractions.

Posters surrounding Rice Stadium echoed the feeling the Shepard incident had on the pregame buildup.

One read, "Texas' motto — If you can't beat 'em probate 'em." Another said, "Darrell is our Shepard, Texas shall not get."

The Longhorns had further motive for revenge because of a 30-0 loss to the Cougars last year during Houston's run for the SWC co-championship.

But Longhorn halfback Earl Campbell, who gained 173 yards on 24 carries and had three touchdowns, said Texas only was interested in winning the game.

"There was nothinbg special about getting them back for last year," Campbell said. "You can't do anything about last year and we didn't have anything to pay them back for. They won last year and we won this year."

Despite its powerful rushing game which ranks eighth nationally, Longhorn quarterback Randy McEachern used his air game effectively against the Cougars.

"We threw the ball more than I expected," said McEachern, who completed 11 of 25 passes. "But the receivers didn't have trouble getting open, especially on the short plays."

McEachern suffered a strained knee late in the game but the injury was not believed serious.

Campbell's eye-popping perfgormance impressed Houston Coach Bill Yeoman.

"He is one of the best running backs we've run into this year," Yeoman said. "No one has anyone like Earl Campbell."

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — Lee Trevino of the United States shot a final-round 73 for a 283 and won the $70,000 King Hassan II Golf Toiurnament by 4 strokes over American Billy Casper Saturday. Casper finished with a 72 for a 287.

Severiano Ballesteros of Spain had a final-round 72 and was third at 289.

Bud Allin of the United States wound up fourth with 293 after firing a 74 Saturday and American Curtis Strange finished fifth at 294 with a final-round 76

Peter Jacobson of the United States posted a 74 and was in a three-way tie for sixth with 297. American Ron Cerrudo finished in a three-way tie for 10th with 301 after fashioning a final-round 81. Tommy Aaron of the United States had a 76 and wound up tied for 13th at 303.

Hipp's replacement helps down Tigers

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Richard Berns, subbing for an injured I. M. Hipp, scored two touchdowns and Billy Todd booted field goals of 37, 27, and 42 yards Saturday as Nebraska beat Missouri 21-10.

Berns, who lost his job early this year when Hipp emerged as one of the nation's hottest running backs, scored a disputed touchdown at 7:11 of the fourth quarter and clinched the victory.

After Jim Pillen intercepted a Pete Woods pass at the Missouri 18, the Huskers pounded to a third-and-goal situation on the 1-foot line. Berns hurdled the stacked-up defense into the end zone.

Missouri players jumped in jubilation because they thought they had recovered a fumble. After a prolonged discussion among officials, the touchdown was signaled. The fifth largest crowd in Missouri football history, 67,261, was hushed.

The victory leaves the 11th-ranked Cornhuskers 7-2 over-all and in a strong position in the Big Eight race with a 4-1 mark.

Wilson shakes NCCA pass mark

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Brigham Young quarterback Marc Wilson broke the NCAA single game passing yardage record Saturday, throwing for 571 yards and five touchdowns as 14th-ranked BYU rolled over Utah 38-8.

The sophomore quarterback, who became a starter four games ago when Gifford Nielsen was injured, broke the NCAA mark of 561 yards set by Tony Adams of Utah State in 1972.

Nielsen had been leading the nation in passing until sidelined for the season with a knee injury. Wilson fired seven touchdown passes in his first varsity start, and now has 17 scoring strikes this season.

Against Western Athletic Conference opponent Utah, Wilson connected on touchdown passes of 11, 72, 14, 26 and 8 yards to four different receivers. He hit on 26 of 41 passes and had three intercepted.

BYU is now 7-1 and 5-0 in the WAC. Utah dropped to 2-6 on the season and 1-4 in conference.

BYU scored on its first three possessions of the game, first on a 23-yard field goal by Dev Duke. Then Wilson followed with two first-quarter scoring tosses, 11 yards to fullback Todd Christensen and 72 yards to flanker Mike Chronister.

Utah then threw up a stubborn defense, holding BYU scoreless in the second and third quarters while controlling the ball for more than 10 minutes in each of those periods.

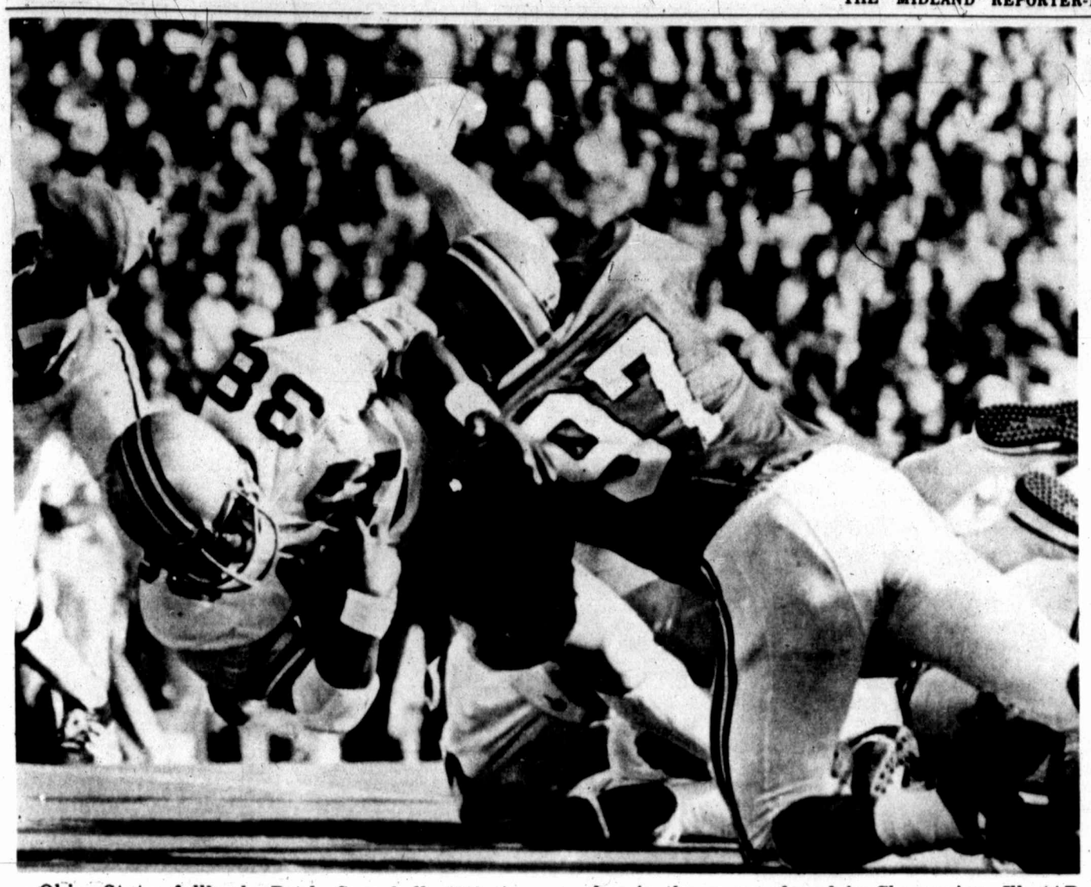

Utah was awarded a safety in the second quarter when Wilson grounded the football in the end zone and Rocky Liapis scored Utah's lone touchdown in the waning minutes of the third quarter on a 12-yard run.

Kentucky State earns forfeit

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky State was awarded a 1-0 college football forfeit victory Saturday when Livingstone Coach Baxter Holman took his players off the field late in the first half.

With 18 seconds left in the first half, Kentucky State running back Ruie Hannah caught a pass from Curt Sullivan to put the ball on the Livingstone 43.

Kentucky State, leading 8-0 at the time, was called for clipping and late-hit penalties on the play, which precipitated a scuffle between the two teams.

Ohio State fullback Paul Campbell (38) is brought to a quick stop by Illinois linebacker John Sullivan (97). Campbell picked up five yards on the play in the game played in Champaign, Ill. (AP Laserphoto)

Illinois finally tumbles

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Ohio State's fourth-ranked Buckeyes, held to one touchdown in the first half, erupted for three in the third quarter — two in a span of 13 seconds — and rolled to a 35-0 victory over Illinois Saturday to remain undefeated in the Big Ten.

Five different players scored for the Buckeyes, who boosted their Big Ten record to 6-0 and 8-1 overall. Illinois dropped to 2-4 in the conference and 3-6 for the season.

Limited to only eight plays in the first quarter, Ohio State finally put together a 73-yard drive in the second quarter with Paul Campbell scoring from the 1-yard line for a 7-0 halftime lead as a Homecoming crowd of 66,973 cheered the Illini when they left the field.

Ohio bstate took the secondhalf kickoff and marched 75 yards for another touchdown with Joel Payton scoring from the 1-yard line. Seconds later Illinois's James Coleman fumbled and Mike Guess recovered. Ron Springs, who rushed for 132 yards, then ripped off a 15-yard scoring jaunt to give Ohio State a comfortable 21-0 lead.

The next time the Buckeyes gained possession, they drove 65 yards for another score with flanker James Harrell carrying the final 5 yards.

Early in the fourth quarter, with the reserves taking over, the Buckeyes went 88 yards in 15 plays for another touchdown with Ricky Johnson scoring from the 15-yard line.

Alabama slaps LSU, 24-3

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Tony Nathan scored two touchdowns on one-yard plunges and fired a 20-yard touchdown pass as second-ranked Alabama overcame a rash of fumbles to down Louisiana State 24-3 Saturday and capture its sixth Southeastern Conference football championship in seven years.

The victory over the 18th-ranked Tgers combined with Mississippi State's 27-13 triumph over Auburn gave the Crimson Tide the SEC's automatic berth in the Sugar Bowl game.

Alabama took control in the nationally-televised battle late in the third quarter when LSU failed to cash in a fumble recovery at the Crimson Tide 46.

Alabama drove to the Tiger 14 early in the game, but Roger Chapman missed a 32-yard field goal try. He came back later in the quarter to kick a 44-yarder that gave the Tide a 3-0 lead.

With LSU trailing 10-3 and facing a fourth-and-seven, Wayne Hamilton slammed Steve Ensminger for a 16-yard loss at the Tiger 45 and Alabama moved from there to a game-breaking touchdown, helped by a 26-yard pass interference penalty.

Nathan scored that touchdown on a one-yard run in the final minute of the third quarter and came back early in the final period to throw his 20-yard halfback scoring pass to Keith Pugh.

Nathan's first touchdown came at the end of a 94-yard drive with only 25 seconds left in the half, with Nathan accounting for 53 yards on seven carries, including a 33-yard scamper.

While Nathan was taking care of the scoring, 227-pound fullback Johnny Davis punched out 126 yards for the Tide.

It was the seventh straight victory for Alabama since an early defeat by Nebraska and lifted the Tide's record to 8-1 overall and 6-0 in the SEC.

It was the 15th conference championship for Alabama, including 10 since Coach Bear Bryant returned to his alma mater 20 seasons ago.

John Adams, who turned in several big plays in the first half to stop Alabama, recovered a fumble at the Tide 33 to set up LSU's only score. That came on the first Tiger field goal of the season, a 31-yarder by Mike Conway that tied the game at 3-3 with just under 10 minutes left in the half.

Alabama put together its 94-yard scoring march in the final seven minutes of the first half, requiring 15 plays which ate up most of the clock.

LSU had two scoring chances in the third quarter, sending Charles Alexander 25 yards to the Tide 42 on the first possession but bogging down eventually and Conway missed a 35-yard field goal attempt.

Alabama marched to the Tiger nine where Adams recovered another fumble and Ozzie Newsome fumbled a punt later in the quarter which Sam McCage recovered at the LSU 46 seconds before Hamilton's key fourth-down sack.

The Alabama defense clamped a lid on LSU's vaunted running game, although Alexander did manage to rush for more than 100 yards, most of it on runs of 25 and 20 yards in the third quarter — the latter when he stumbled over his blocker and the final defender at the Alabama 30.

Alexander finished with 110 yards on 22 carries.

Irish erupt again, 69-14

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame quarterback Joe Montana passed for 273 yards and three touchdowns, scored another on a one-yard sneak and ran for a two-point conversion, leading the fifth-ranked Irish to a 69-14 romp over Georgia Tech Saturday in a college football mismatch.

Vagas Ferguson and Jim Stone also scored two touchdowns apiece for the 7-1 Irish, who scored 48 points in the second half.

The Irish trailed 7-6 after Eddie Lee Ivery returned a kickoff 97 yards for a second period touchdown. But Montana, a 6-foot-2 junior, guided the Irish 63 yards on their next possession, passing 15 yards to Kris Haines at the Georgia Tech eight and hit Terry Eurick for the goahead touchdown on the next play.

Montana, whose touchdown run earlier gave Notre Dame a 6-0 lead, then ran around right end for two more points and the Irish were ahead to stay.

The Yeltow Jackets were unable to dent the Irish defense except for Ivery's long run until a 18-yard pass from Gary Hardie to Drew Hill with two minutes left in the game.

A fumble by Rodney Lee later in the second quarter at the Georgia Tech 35 was recovered by Notre Dame's Willie Fry. A 13-yard run by Jerome Heavens and a four-yard pass to Eurick put the ball at the 18, and Montana threw to Haines on the next play for a 21-7 Irish halftime lead.

Montana, whose previous career high was 260 yards, capped a 91-yard drive with a 68yard third quarter touchdown pass to Dave Waymer. On the next series, he hit Ken MacAfee on passes of 13 and 16 yards and Eurick for two more before Heavens ran in for the score from the two.

Louisiana Tech crushes Lamar

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Keith Thibodeaux scored two touchdowns and completed 14 of 22 passes for 247 yards Saturday as unbeaten Louisiana Tech crushed Lamar 23-6 to clinch the Southland Conference title and the host berth in the Independence Bowl.

Thibodeaux scampered 17 yards in the second quarter to climax a 97-yard drive and give the Bulldogs, now 6-0-2 for the season and 4-0-1 in conference, a 9-6 halftime lead.

He then plunged for a one-yard touchdown in the third quarter. Larry Anderson iced the game and the berth in the Shreveport, La., bowl game in the fourth quarter with a 71-yard punt return.

Louisiana Tech had taken an early 3-0 lead on a 29-yard field goal by Keith Swilley, but Nalan Mitchell's field goals of 38 and 37 yards enabled Lamar to grab a short-lived 6-3 lead in the second quarter.

The Cardinals, held to only 155 yards total offense, fell to 1-8 for the season and 0-3 in the Southland Conference.

Relph paces Colgate

HAMILTON, N.Y. (AP) — Bob Relph passed for four touchdowns and ran for another score Saturday as undefeated Colgate ran up its ninth straight victory of the college football season, a 49-17 romp over Bucknell.

The senior quarterback got the Red Raiders going by running 29 yards for Colgate's first touchdown.

UTA drops 20-3 game

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Tailback Ben Garry raced for 143 yards on 22 carries and one touchdown Saturday to ignite Southern Mississippi to a 20-3 nonconference victory over Texas-Arlington.

Garry, who keyed a 293-yard rushing performance by Southern Mississippi, plunged over for a three-yard touchdown late in the first quarter to give the Golden Eagles a 6-3 lead.

UTA's Tom Skoruppa had booted a 32-yard field goal as the Mavericks took an early 3-0 margin.

Fullback David Hoseman galloped 13-yards in the third quarter to extend the Southern Mississippi lead to 13-3 and Dane McDaniel flipped a nine-yard touchdown pass to Larry Harrington in the fourth quarter for the Golden Eagles' final score.

The victory raised Southern Mississippi's season record to 6-4, while the Mavericks dropped to a 6-3 mark.

Biddle's field goal ties Clemson, 13-13

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina kicker Tom Biddle hit a 30-yard field goal with 1:02 left in the game to give the Tar Heels a 13-13 tie with No. 13 Clemson in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game Saturday.

Bittle's kick ended a desperate North Carolina drive after Tiger tailback Lester Brown ran two yards for a go-ahead touchdown early in the fourth quarter. Clemson place kicker Obed Ariri missed the extgra point attempt, his first miss of the season after 17 PATs, after Brown's touchdown to allow the tie. Brown's score capped a Clemson drive that began on its own 17. The tie ended Clemson's winning streak at seven.

The tie, before representatives of six post-season bowl games, left North Carolina 6-2-1 overall and 3-0-1 in the ACC. Clemson is now 7-1-1 overall and 4-1-1 in the conference.

Tulsa pounds Drake, 33-23

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Sophomore Quarterback Bill Blankenship ran for one touchdown and passed for another to lead Tulsa past Drake 33-23 in Missouri Valley Conference football Saturday.

The Golden Hurricanes jumped to a 10-0 lead in the first quarter on a 23-yard field goal by Steve Cox and a 16-yard touchdown run by Blankenship.

Blankenship competed nine of 12 passes for 164 yards. Drake got its only score of the first half on a 22-yard Mark Mendenhall field goal.

Tulsa upped its lead to 20-3 at the half on a one-yard pass from Blankenship to David Powell and a 32-yard field goal by Cox.

Panthers strike hard against W. Virginia

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Matt Cavanaugh stormed three yards for a second-period touchdown after digging Pitt out of a first-and-39 hole and the 12th-ranked Panthers rolled to a hard-hitting 44-3 college football victory Saturday over bitter neighborhood rival West Virginia.

Pitt, 7-1-1 after dropping its opener to Notre Dame, spotted West Virginia a 3-0 lead on Bill McKenzie's 45-yard field goal with just 2:33 gone after record-setting quarterback Dan Kendra became the Mountaineers' career pass yardage and total offense leader by completing two passes for 45 yards.

However, the Panthers, who were stymied on their first possession when West Virginia nose guard Joe Jelich made three consecutive tackles, each for a one-yard loss, swung the momentum their way when career interception leader Bob Jury swiped his 17th pass and returned it 36 yards to the fiveyard line.

Fred Jacobs took a pitch-out around left end from the four for the touchdown and Pitt was off and running with a 7-3 lead.

Cavanaugh's second-period touchdown and Mark Schubert's 36-yard field goal gave the Panthers a 17-3 halftime lead and they stunned the Mountaineer Field crowd of 37,031, largest of the season, with a pair of third-period touchdowns just 13 seconds apart.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Calvin Prince picked up two touchdowns and 163 yards Saturday as Louisville pounded out a 51-21 college football victory over Wichita State.

Louisville, now 5-3-1 on the season, converted three of the Shockers' eight turnovers into scores and substituted frequently after building up a 35-14 halftime lead.

Herrmann leads Purdue

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Freshman sensation Mark Herrmann set up two scores and passed for 174 yards, surging into second place on the alltime Big Ten single season passing list, to lead Purdue to a 22-0 college football victory over punchless Wisconsin Saturday.

Mike Brown scored from a yard out midway in the first quarter and defensive end Keena Turner rapped up the Boilermakers' third successive victory by intercepting an Anthony Dudley pass and racing 65 yards to score with 57 seconds left in the game.

Purdue climbed to 5-4 overall and 3-3 in the Big Ten. Wisconsin, which has scored just seven points in its last 17 quarters, slipped to 5-4 and 3-4 with its fourth successive defeat.

Herrmann, who completed 10 of 20 throws, boosted his season passing yardage total to 2,215, surpassing the 2,062 accumulated by Gary Snook of Iowa in 1964. Mike Phipps of Purdue set the Big Ten record of 2,527 yards in 1969.

Michigan St. wins big

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Quarterback Ed Smith threw second-half scoring passes of 51 and 85 yards to flanker Kirk Gibson and Chris Nielsen kicked three field goals as Michigan State overwhelmed Minnesota 29-10 Saturday to tighten its hold on third place in the Big Ten.

Nielsen's second field goal of 52 yards barely cleared the crossbar and gave the Spartans their first lead at 13-10 early in the fourth quarter. He added another field goal of 44 yards late in the game to give him 41 for his career, a Big Ten record.

Smith shook off three Minnesota interceptions and rallied the Spartans from an early 10-0 deficit to hand the Gophers their first home loss in six games this season. Minnesota dropped to 2-4 in the Big Ten while the Spartans improved their record to 4-1-1.

Fitzkee's grab saves Penn St.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Split end Scott Fitzkee grabbed an 11-yard touchdown pass from Chuck Fusina with 58 seconds left to give ninth-ranked Penn State a 21-17 football victory Saturday over North Carolina State.

Fusina's pass, which capped an 83-yard drive, climaxed a game in which he broke three Penn State passing records. Fusina had 22 completions in 37 attempts for 315 yards.

N.C. State had an offensive star of its own in running back Ted Brown, who broke his own one-game school rushing reiord of 228 yards and scored one touchdown.

The Wolfpack had taken a 1714 lead on its first possession of the fourth quarter when fullback Billy Ray Vickers took the ball from quarterback Johnny Evans on a draw play and plunged over from the 1-yard line.

Penn State scored first, taking a 7-0 lead less than three minutes into the game on a 36-yard pass from Fusina to flanker Jimmy Cefalo. Cefalo scrambled free of State's defenders to gather in the pass at the 5 and dash in untouched.

N.C. State's first score, a 25-yard field goal by Jay Sherrill in the second quarter, came after the Wolfpack drove 67 yards for a first-and-goal at the Penn State 7. The drive was stalled when Penn State's Joe Dimminick tackled Brown for a 6-yard loss that pushed the Wolfpack back to the 13.

N.C. State went ahead 10-7 in the third quarter on Brown's 7yard run on a handoff from Evans. The score was set up by a 66-yard run through the middle by Brown to the Penn State 14.

Leach bombs Northwestern

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Quarterback Rick Leach ran for two touchdowns and passed for two others Saturday in a third-quarter barrage as sixthranked Michigan buried winless Northwestern 63-20 in Big Ten football.

Leach broke open a 14-7 halftime lead with a 21-yard touchdown run after 2½ minutes of the third period. Northwestern's Todd Sheets fumbled the ensuing kickoff and within two minutes Leach scored again on a 4-yard sweep.

The rout continued five minutes later as the Wolverines, 5-1 in the Big Ten and 8-1 overall, drove 62 yards in nine plays, climaxed by Leach's 26-yard scoring pass to freshman tailback Stan Edwards. Just three minutes after that, Leach hit wingback Ralph Clayton for a 41-yard TD pass.

Northwestern, 0-7 in the Big Ten and 0-9 overall, briefly stunned Michigan by taking a 7-0 lad at 10:25 of the first quarter on Scott Stranski's 1yard quarterback sneak. The touchdown was set up by a 68yard Stranski to Mark Bailey pass.

Michigan's first two touchdowns came in the second quarter, the first on a 4-yard run by Harlan Huckleby and the other when Gene Johnson recovered teammate Russel Davis's fumble in the end zone. The other Wolverine touchdowns came in the final quarter, Lawrence Reid scoring on a 19-yard run, Mike Smith from 15 yards out and Alan Mitchell catching a 34-yard TD pass from John Wangler.

Northwestern's other touchdowns came in the fourth quarter. Stranski hit Sheets with a 28-yard TD pass for one and in the final minute connected with Bailey for a 7-yarder.

Kentucky romps past Vanderbilt

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Quarterback Derrick Ramsey and running back Joe Dipre scored two touchdowns each Saturday to lead determined Kentucky past Vanderbilt 28-6 in Southeastern Conference football.

The Wildcats won their seventh straight in running their season record to 8-1 and conference mark to 4-0. Vanderbilt lost its sixth in a row, slipping to 1-7 overall and 0-4 in the SEC.

Kentucky's second-half surge snapped a y-6 halftime tie and an unyielding match of hardnosed defenses.

In the first half, Vanderbilt managed just four yards rushing on 15 carries against Kentucky which came into the game as the top SEC defender against the rush, holding opponents to about 113 yards per game. The Wildcats managed 85 yards on the ground in the first half.

Ramsey, a senior, scored his second touchdown o a 2-yard dive on Kentuicky's opening possession in the second half and Dipre notched a 2-point conversion, putting the Wildcats ahead 14-6.

Dipre scored on short runs in the third and fourth periods to ice the game for the visitors.

Cody Whitt accounted for all of Vanderbilt's scoring on field goals of 32 and 34 yards in the first half.

Ramsey put Kentucky ahead briedly 6-3 when he scored from 4 yards out on a run around right end, capping a 65-yard drive in 13 plays.

Streater, Finch lead Vols past Tigers

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Quarterback Jimmy Streater ran for two touchdowns and tailback Kelsey Finch added a third to give Tennessee a 27-14 college football victory over cross-state rival Memphis State Saturday.

Streater scored on a one-yard plunge and a 25-yard dance over the middle in the second quarter after Finch's one-yard touchdown in the first period to give the Vols a commanding 246 lead at the half.

The victory ended a threegame losing streak for Vols, now 3-5, and their coach, Johnny Majors. For Memphis State, dropping to 5-4, it was the last chance to beat Tennessee until the early 1980s. Tennessee has won all six games against the Tigers since the series began in 1968.

Memphis State opened the scoring the first time the Tigers had the ball with an 11-yard touchdown run by tailback James King on a pitchout around the left side. After 19 successful extra point conversions this season, kicker Rusty Bennett missed his first attempt.

Maryland slips past Villanova

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)— George Scott ran for a school record of 237 yards, and scored three touchdowns and Maryland overcame a string of second half turnovers to beat Villanova 19-13 in college football Saturday.

Scott, starting at tailback because of injuries to Steve Atkins and Alvin Maddox, carried 42 times to help the Terps boost their season record to 5-4.

His rushing yardage, which nearly doubled his season total, easily topped the previous Maryland mark of 215 yards by Atkins against Syracuse last year.

The 6-foot-2, 210 pound sophomore scored the winning TD on a five yard run with 5:01 left to play capping a 69-yard, 11 play drive. Scott carried on all but one of the plays.

Jerusalem native leads Indiana win

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Senior Indiana kicker David Freud, a native of Jerusalem, kicked a 23-yard field goal with 16 seconds left in the game to lead the Hoosiers to a 24-21 Big Ten Conference football victory over Iowa Saturday.

Freud, 26, married and the father of a five-month-old son, has a season record of 10-13. One of the three misses came earlier in the fourth quarter when Indiana was ahead 21-14.

Iowa quarterback Tom McLaughlin, his team once in the lead 14-0, managed a oneyard touchdown run to tie the score at 21-21 on the series of plays that followed the field goal attempt.

Turner starts looking

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner was to meet here with New York Yankees first base coach Bobby Cox Saturday, but a spokesman for the National League club said a new Braves' manager will not be chosen until Turner talks to former Cardinals' third basemen Ken Boyer next week.

"As far as I know, Cox is still the frontrunner," team spokesman Bob Hope said. "But Ted has never met him, and, who knows, they may not like each other."

Hope said Turner and Braves General Manager Bill Lucas "had a commitment" to meet with Boyer, a minor league manager with St. Louis, on Monday. Boyer's brother, Clete, a former all-star third baseman with the Yankees, recently was hired by the Braves as a minor league instructor.

Hope said Cox "had done real well" during the five years he managed in the Yankee farm system, and that the Braves were "looking for someone who was up-and-coming."

Cox was brought up to coach first base for the world chhampions champions last season.

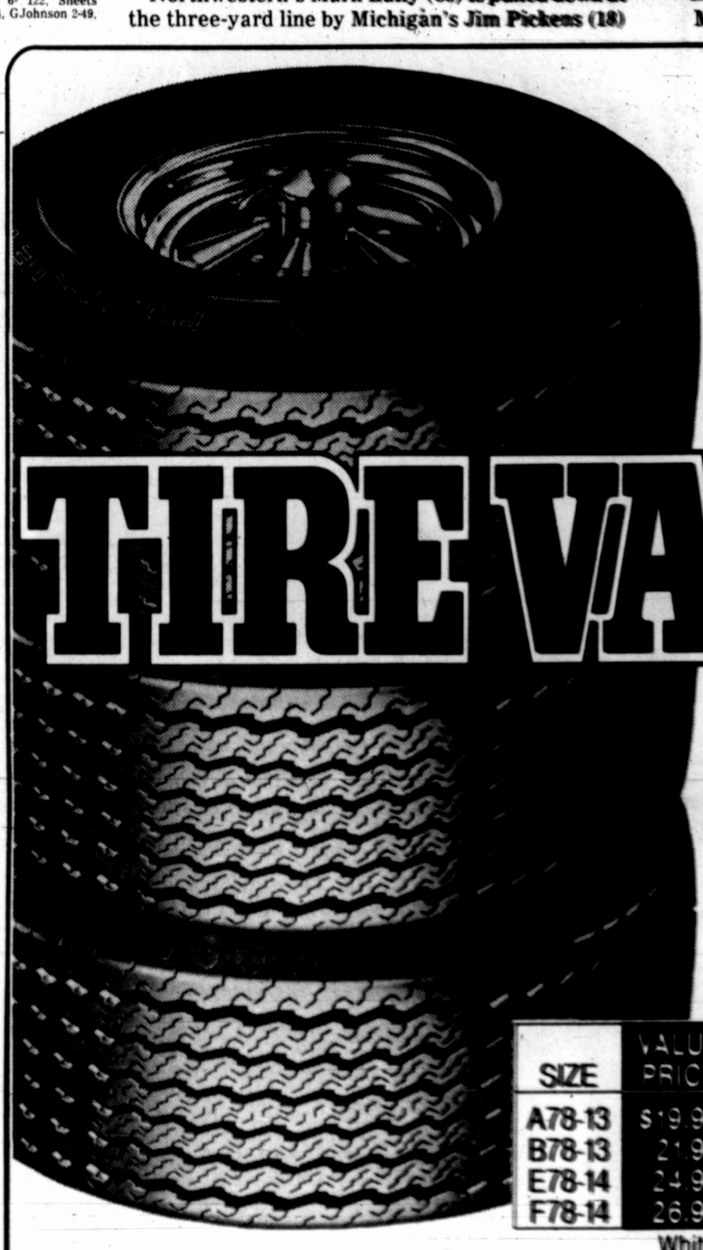

Hope said he had heard "from some New York writers that (Cox) was not in Billy Martin's favor because (owner) George Steinbrenner wanted to hire him to replace Martin during the controversy over the summer."

Martin had a number of highly publicized clashes with several of his players and with Steinbrenner, but the 1977 Series victory assured him another year with the team.

Turner is under a one-year suspension from baseball, but it was lifted temporarily so he could participate in the search for a new manager.

Billie Jean King delivers an overhead smash in a singles match against Chris Evert Saturday during the finals of the Colgate Series Championships. (AP Laserphoto)

Evert stops King in straight sets

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Chris Evert, her machinelike ground strokes working to perfection, overwhelmed Billie Jean King 6-2, 6-2 Saturday to win the $250,000 women's tennis Series Championships.

Evert, who earned $75,000 for her victory in the round-robin tournament, completely dominated the foe she has replaced as the first lady of women's tennis.

King had won three straight tournaments on the championship series circuit going into this event at Mission Hills Country Club, but her game was definitely not up to par in the final against her old rival.

King's only real threat in the nationally televised match came in the third game of the opening set, when she led two games to one and seemed near a service break with Evert down 0-40.

But Evert, usually at her best under pressure, came back to win that game and went on to coast through the next four.

The second set was all Evert, as she broke King's service in the third and fifth games.

King, saying she was very disappointed with her play, added that Evert always seems to be at her best when they meet.

"She's always loose when she plays me," the 33-year-old King remarked. "She feels like she has nothing to lose. But of course today my game was absolutely shocking."

Evert, 22, who first began playing King when she was a teen-ager, said that her attitude toward her long-time opponent remains the same today.

"I was 14 or 15 when I first started playing her," said Evert. "She was, and is, a living legend, and I felt I had nothing to lose. I never feel nervous playing her and I always seem to be at my best."

Both Evert and King have been bothered by physical ailments in the past year.

King underwent the third knee operation of her career about a year ago, and has been slowly working her way back into shape.

Evert, who took time off from the women's series recently with a stress fracture in her leg, said she was not as sharp Saturday as she might have been.

King won $40,000 for her second-place finish in the tournament that pitted the eight top point winners on the circuit. She had made it tothe championship finals with a 3-0 mark in her division of the round-robin play, while Evert, in a tougher division, had a 2-1 mark.

Virginia Wade also was 2-1 in Evert's group, but Evert's victory in their head-to-head meeting puts her into the championship showdown.

Third and fourth place, worth $20,000 and $16,000, will be determined Sunday when Kerry Reid meets Wade. The other four players in the tournament, Martina Navratilova, Dianne Fromholtz, Betty Stove and Wendy Turnbull, collected $9,000 each.

The tournament is sponsored by the Colgate-Palmolive Co.

Gilbert, Jones share team lead

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Gibby Gilbert and Grier Jones blended their talents for a back-9 29 that propelled them to a 3-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $200,000 Walt Disney World National Team Golf Classic.

"The only really nice thing about a third-round lead," said Jones, "is that you know if you play good the next day you're going to win. If you're trailing, you can play good and not win."

Gilbert and Jones had a better-ball score of 61, a whopping 11 under par on the rainsoaked, 7,197-yard Magnolia Course at Walt Disney World and compiled a 54-hole total of 187, a dizzying 29 under par.

Tied for second at 190 were the teams of Tom Weiskopf and Hale Irwin and Chi Chi Rodriguez and Mexican Victor Regalado. Weiskopf and Irwin combined for a better ball 63 in the cloudy, threatening weather, while Regalado and Rodriguez clowned their way to a 65.

"We've still got a lot of golf to play," warned Gilbert. "And we've got some tough teams behind us—Irwin and Weiskopf aren't gonna be easy to handle. I just hope we can do it.

"Our strategy is to put two balls on every green and give us a par-option-birdie opportunity."

Steve Melnyk and Andy North were 4 strokes bank at 191 after a 64.

Rodriguez and Regalado held a 1-stroke lead going into the third round and obviously were disappointed with their performance.

"Overall," said Rodrguez, "we played lousy. We played just like a Puerto Rican and a Mexican."

Eddie Pearce and Terry Catlett had a 64 for 192 and were tied at that figure with Morris Hatalsky and Don Pooley, who had a 63.

Johnny Miller, playing with Japan's Tsuneyuki Nakajima, had a 64 and a 193 total. They were tied with veterans Charles Coody and Lou Graham, George Burns and Ben Crenshaw, Lon Hinkle and Craig Stadler. Hinkle-Stadler had 66, Burns-Crenshaw 62, Coody-Graham 64.

Former champions Mac McLendon and Hubert Green, the current U.S. Open titleholder, were 66-195.

Rodriguez and Regalado started slowly and opened the gate for a massive rush of challengers. At one time or another, nine different teams led or shared the lead until the backside rush by Jones and Gilbert put them in commanding position.

Gilbert, who missed much of the season with back trouble, chipped to six feet for birdie on the 10th and Jones birdied the 11th from 12 feet. Gilbert holed a 10-footer on the 13th.

On the 15th, Jones started a three-hole birdie-binge that put them in front. He scored on putts of 15, 6 and 12 feet and Gibby capped it off with a 22footer for birdie on the 18th.

Dallas places streak on line

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Perfect through the first half of the National Football League season, the Dallas Cowboys place another streak on the line Sunday when they face the New York Giants.

The Cowboys, with a 7-0 record and their best start in the 18-year history of the franchise, have won six consecutive games against New York and have not lost to the Giants on the road since 1970. The last time New York defeated them was in 1974 at Dallas and overall, the Cowboys hold and impressive 21-9-2 edge in the series.

Their fast start has propelled the Ctwboys into a three-game lead in the NFC East and their 37-0 shutout against Detroit last week was the first one for the club since 1974. Roger Staubach completed 16 of 25 passes for 179 yards and three touchdowns in that game and Tony Dorsett led the ground game with 13 carries for 48 yards.

Staubach leads all NFC passers, completing 60.2 of his attempts. He has thrown eight touchdown passes and has been intercepted only once all season.

Dorsett, who pushed his season rushing yardale total to 433, started for the first time in the second half against Detroit. Cowboy Coach Tom Landry has insisted that he would not rush the former Heisman Trophy winner in his rookie season in the NFL.

"Tony will be a starter when I have the feel," said Landry. "I think we have been very effective in the way we have been using him. This has been a learning phase for him."

The Giants come into Sunday's game off their own shutout, but they were on the wrong end of a 28-0 score Monday night in St. Louis.

Despite the blanking, New York accumulated 301 yards in total offense against the Cardinals but quarterbacks Joe Pisarcik and Jerry Golsteyn were sacked a total of six times and threw three interceptions.

Pisarcik will start against the Cowboys but two other Giants are questionable. Defensive tackle Troy Archer has an injured big toe and running back Doug Kotar, who sat out the Cardinal game with a sprained ankle, is still hurting.

Texas' Robert Moody wants A's to move

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Galveston, Texas, millionaire Robert Moody confirmed Friday night that he is part of a group making Charlie Finley a concrete offer to buy the Oakland A's and move them to New Orleans.

Moody said he understood an offer would be made to Finley in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., sometime this week. Moody said there were three or four people involved in financing the proposed purchase, including A. Ray Smith and Phil Stover.

Smith and Stover ran the New Orleans Pelicans' minor league team this season. Smith has been trying to bring major league ball to New Orleans for some time but as late as Thursday night denied that there were any immediate plans to meet with Finley or his representatives.

New Orleans television station WVUE said Friday night that the offer for the A's would be made Saturday morning.

Moody, who is reportedly worth $400 million, would not say how much the group would offer for the A's. Finley has said he wants $12 million for the team.

Moody said he did not know when Finley would decide on the group's offer or if he would accept.

"It's like any other deal. They don't always work out," Moody said.

Moody said he has never been involved with a baseball team before although his father owned the minor league Galveston Bucaneers in the 1930s. Moody owns an off-shore boating company and an insurance firm.

Swink, Meredith head Hall of Fame entrants

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Two former collegiate All-Americans, Jim Swink of Texas Christian and Don Meredith of Southern Methodist, along with former coach Gil Steinke of Texas A&I, have been elected to the Texas Sports Hall of Fame.

Also named by a 19-man Texas Sports Writers Association selection committee were Warren Woodson, an outstanding athlete at Baylor in the 1920s and coach of five undefeated college teams, and the late J. V. "Siki" Sikes, a three-sport letterman at Texas A&M and later head coach at Kansas and East Texas State.

The five will be enshrined in the Texas Sports Hall of Fame at the annual luncheon in Dallas Dec. 30.

The luncheon, long a highlight of Cotton Bowl week, is co-sponsored by the TSWA which governs the Hall of Fame, and the Salesmanship Club of Dallas.

Swink played on successive Cotton Bowl teams at TCU in 1955 and 1956. His finest year was as a junior when he paced TCU to a Southwest Conference title, gained 1,283 yards (second in the nation), scored 125 points, was a unanimous AllAmerican and runner-up for the Heisman Trophy to Howard Cassady of Ohio State.

After winning all-state honors in both football and basketball at Mount Vernon, Meredith won All-American honors in 1958 and 1959 at SMU where he set a national collegiate record for passing accuracy with 61.9 on 213 of 344 for 2,828 yards.

He quarterbacked the Dallas Cowboys from 1960 through 1968 and led them to the eastern division titles in 1966 and 1967.

When Steinke retired last year, his Texas A&I team had won 39 consecutive games—the second longest streak in collegiate history. His teams won three straight NAIA championships.

In all, Steinke's teams won six national college division titles and ten LSC championships. In post-season play, his teams lost only once in 15 played. His teams posted an overall mark of 182-61-4. The NAIA named him coach of the year four times.

Woodson, in 38 years as head coach at six colleges—Tarleton, Arkansas State Teachers, Hardin-Simmons, Arizona, New Mexico State and Trinity—his teams won 247 against 112 defeats and 20 ties. He had five undefeated teams, five which lost only one game and eight conference championship teams. Nine went to bowl games and seven won.

As an undergraduate at Baylor, he won All-Southwest conference honors in basketball and captained the tennis team.

Sikes, after coaching at Kansas from 1948 to 1953 with an 82 team in 1951, he shifted to East Texas State and coached there until his death in 1963. He compiled a 63-34-4 record for the Lions and two of his teams were victorious in the Tangerine Bowl.

He is a member of the Texas A&M Hall of Fame. He won All-SWC honors in football in 1927, was captain of the basketball team in 1928 and gained All-SWC honors in baseball in 1928. He was head basketball and assistant football coach at Texas A&M from 1935 to 1938.

Princeton falls hard to Yale, 44-8

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Top Ivy League rusher John Pagliaro rambled for 151 yards and two touchdowns to pace Yale to an easy 44-8 victory over Princeton here Saturday, assuring the Elis of at least a tie for the Ivy League football crown.

Pagliaro scored his touchdowns in the second and third quarters on runs of 54 and 24 yards and raised his league rushing total to 987 yards.

Seminoles edge Virginia Tech

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Junior quarterback Wally Woodham passed for one touchdown and ran for another and Dave Cappelen booted three field goals, including the gamewinner with 4:47 left, as Florida State's 15th-ranked Seminoles edged Virginia Tech 23-21 Saturday.

The victory was the Seminoles' fifth straight and improved their record to 7-1, while the Gobblers dropped to 1-6-1.

Woodham, who completed 17 of 27 passes for 219 yards in a game played in a steady rain, hit wide receiver Mike Shumann with a 10-yard scoring pass in the second quarter and ran one yard for another touchdown in the third period.

Cappelen's field goals came from 42, 26 and 29 yards.

The game-winning field goal came after Virginia Tech had driven 77 yards to take a 21-20 lead with 8:27 to go after the Gobblers earlier had led by 14-3 and 14-10 in the first half.

Duke punishes Wake Forest

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Quarterback Mike Dunn passed for one touchdown and ran 26 yards for another Saturday as Duke slogged to rain-soaked 38-14 win over Wake Forest in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game.

Dunn marched the Blue Devils up and down a soggy field for four touchdowns as Duke improved its season record to 5-4 and evened its ACC mark at 2-2.

Wake Forest, which made it inside the Duke 20 yard line only three times, dropped to 1-8 overall and remained winless in the ACC with six conference losses.

Virginia loses to VMI, 30-6

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Quarterback Robby Clark, scoring one touchdown and passing for two others, led Virginia Military Institute to a decisive 30-6 victory over the University of Virginia here Saturday in a nonconference game that clinched the mythical Big Five championship for the Keydets.

Florida rally earns win

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The Florida Gators shrugged off two fumbles and roared to a pair of second-half touchdowns by Wes Chandler for a 22-17 comeback victory over the Georgia Bulldogs in a nationally televised football thriller.

Georgia led 17-10 at halftime as Willie McClendon ran wild for 153 yards and two touchdowns, but Florida's wishbone offense, guided by fleet-footed quarterback Terry LeCount, dominated the second half.

The Gators drove deep into Gerogia territory four times after intermission. Fumbles stopped them twice at the 25 and 35 and Berj Yepremian missed a 44-yard field goal attempt. A Georgia fumble added 25 yards and set up the winning Florida drive, mostly on Chandler's run off the left side. He sprinted 18 yards for one touchdown and smashed 1-yard for the last one.

Yepremian and Georgia's Rex Robinson traded field goals in the first half.

Chandler also scored Florida's first-half touchdown on a 12-yard pass from LeCount after a Georgia fumble. The victory gave Florida a 4-2-1 seasons record and 3-2 in the Southeastern Conference. Georgia is 5-4 overall and 2-3 in the SEC.

NBA rosters face big trim

By The Associated Press

Now that arbitrator Peter Seitz has ruled that National Basketball Association teams must reduce their rosters to 11 men, what happens to the 22 players who must be cut by a week from Monday?

Bill Sharman, general manager of the Los Angeles Lakers, has a solution.

"The possibilities are real that expansion may be resurrected," said Sharman. "It's a good idea. The ABA was in existence for nine years and when the merger took place it really upgraded the quality of play in the NBA and that means that the two dozen or more guys who will be cut were good enough to make an NBA team."

Players would be available for two additional teams from the "12th man" cuts mandated by the decision handed down Friday. Seitz' ruling was every bit as important to professional basketball as his earlier decisions in the baseball reserve clause arbitrations involving pitchers Catfish Hunter, Andy Messersmith and Dave McNally. Ironically, his opinion in the NBA case was handed down on the same day that baseball held its re-entry draft for free agents, a process that is a direct outgrowth of the Seitz decisions in that game.

Opinion was split among NBA people over the ruling and its effect on the game with many general managers, coaches and players unhappy over it while owners, given an opportunity to cut payrolls, applauded it.

Irv Levin, chairman of the board of the Boston Celtics, was pleased. "I think it will sharpen up competition and strengthen the game. It will make players fight harder to make the team," he said.

But Pat Williams, general manager of the Philadelphia 76ers, took a different view. "It will cause a few teams, including ourselves, something of a problem because it will mean we will have to let go of a pretty good player," he said.

"It is going to be very difficult for us," said Jack Ramsay, coach of the NBA champion Portland Trail Blazers. "I would have preferred to keep it 12 and we have until the 14th (to cut), so I wouldn't be surprised if it stayed at 12. It would take another vote of the owners."

It was the owners who legislated for the nut from 12 to 11 and Ramsay admitted he had heard no rumors about them changing that stand, especially in the wake of Seitz' favorable ruling. But the Portland coach quickly added, "I never heard of changing the roster sizes after the season started, either."

New Orleans won't have to cut anybody. The Jazz, perhaps anticipating the ruling, already were at 11 players. But General Manager Lewis Schaffel still opposed the decision.

Luis Gomez is first free agent signee

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Minnesota infielder Luis Gomez became the first baseball free agent to agree to terms following Friday's re-entry draft but his contract with the Toronto Blue Jays isn't quite in the class another ex-Twin, Lyman Bostock, expects to get.

Agent Abdul Jalil, opening talks in Oakland for Bostock, anticipates a considerably fatter deal for his client than the Blue Jays had to give Gomez.

Jalil spent Saturday fielding phone calls from the California Angels, Chicago White Sox, New York Yankees and Toronto and making appointments to begin negotiations next week.

"I expect the White Sox, Angels and Milwaukee to be here on Monday and Toronto on Wednesday," said Jalil. "You have a basic idea about where you will start with each team you talk to. A player like Lyman might be more important to some teams like Texas, Milwaukee or the Yankees than he might be to some others, like maybe Oakland and San Francisco."

Jalil said Bostock, who earned barely more than the major league minimum of $19,000 while batting .336 for Minnesota in 1977, had established his value by his performance on the field.

"This guy is the second best hitter in baseball," said the agent. "The dollars and cents are going to be there. But there are other things to consider as well."

Bostock was the hottest property in the free agent draft, selected eight times on the first round alone and picked by the maximum 13 clubs.

"Some teams may be willing to give more money than others but what if that team plays in a city where Lyman doesn't want to go?" said Jalil. "A team has to meet Lyman's demands, no matter what they may be. First, you merely want to establish guidelines."

Jalil said Bostock's final decision would rest totally with the player.

"My job is to get all the benefits I can in the contract," he said.

Sam Houston falls from elite list

By The Associated Press

A shocking 43-12 loss to District 8-4A foe Arlington Lamar booted fourth-ranked Arlington Sam Houston out of the unbeaten ranks in the next-to-last week of regular-season schoolboy action.

Five other teams ranked in The Associated Press poll were beaten.

Lamar's upset victory over Sam Houston threw the two teams into a three-way tie, along with Arlington High, in 84A.

Also in Class 4A, untouted Dallas Highland Park, which has been unable to break into the Top Ten ranks this season, clinched District 10 with a 48-7 victory over Garland. The Scots face 9-4A winner Carrollton Turner Nov. 18 in bidistrict play.

Top-ranked Port NechesGroves blasted Beaumont Charlton-Pollard 45-0, while No. 2 Temple blanked Copperas Cove 34-0.

No. 5 Sherman downed Richardson Berkner 52-7 to boost its season mark to 8-0-1. But Plano, which tied Sherman in a controversial game earlier in the season, clinched 13-4A with a 28-6 win over Denison. The Bearkats, formerly ranked No. 1, can do better than a tie for the district title, and have no chance for a playoff berth.

In 3A, No. 4 Mount Pleasant was upset 12-9 to Atlanta and No. 10 Beaumont Hebert fell 146 to Silsbee.

Top-ranked Gregory-Portland crushed Flour Bluff 69-28, while No. 2 Humble downed Aldine Eisenhower 34-13.

Bellville, ranked No. 1 in Class 2A, shut out Magnolia 540. In the only upset among 2A ranked teams, No. 7 Slaton lost 9-7 to Tahoka.

No. 1-rated Seagraves led the parade of Class A victors with a 55-0 victory over Plains. No. 2 Shelbyville blanked Tenaha 44-0 and third-ranked Celina downed Sanger 27-14.

No. 6 Axtell and No. 10 Motley County were both losers in their Class B outings — Axtell in a 29-13 loss to No. 7 Valley Mills and Motley County in a forfeit to ninth-ranked Groom.

Motley County, which already clinched its zone, forfeited the game because of injuries to seven starters.

In other B action, top-rated Wheeler defeated Booker 43-6 and second-ranked Italy won 44-13 over Rio Vista.

Wendell C. Hardesty

Long tour completed

Wendell C. Hardesty, senior engineering technician in the Engineering, South District in the Midland offices of Atlantic Richfield Co., has completed 25 years of service with the company.

He was presented a service award at a recent safety meeting in Monahans, by Marvin Pringle, Permian District Engineering Manager.

Hardesty joined ARCO in the Block 31 area in Crane, working as plant operator, first operator, loading rack man, plant tester, instrument man and lease pumper. He was promoted to engineering aide in Midland in 1969 and has been in his present post since June 1974, working out of Odessa.

D & D Club meeting set

The Desk and Derrick Club of Midland will meet at 7 p.m., Thursday at Ranchland Hill Country Club.

The annual business meeting will be a spin-off on the Johnny Carson Show. Annual reports will be presented by committee chairmen.

The meeting also will be an observance of the 26th anniversary of the formation of the Midland club.

WTGS plans luncheon

The West Texas Geological Society will hold its luncheon meeting at 11:30 a.m., Tuesday in the Midland Hilton.

Charles G. Groat, chairman of the Department of Geological Sciences at The University of Texas-El Paso, will present the program. His subject will be "Texas Alternative Energy Resources."

His talk will focus on the development and use of lignite, uranium and geothermal sources, all found in Texas, which uses and consumes more energy resources than any other state in the U.S.

Groat holds an A.B. degree in Geology from the University of Rochester and a M.S. degree in Geology from the University of Massachusetts. He earned his Ph.D. degree, also in Geology, from The University of Texas-Austin.

He worked for the Bureau of Economic Geology at UT from 1968-1976 and also was a research geologist from 1968-1971.

Groat was associate director for administration from 1971-1975 and served as acting director from 1975-1976.

P. Fred Sollars

Aminoil adds P.F. Sollars

HOUSTON — P. Fred Sollars has joined Aminoil USA, Inc., as vice president, exploration and has been elected a member of the board of directors and executive committee. He will be headquartered in Houston. In his new position, Sollars will direct Aminoil's domestic exploration activities.

For the past year Sollars has been an exploration consultant in Denver, Colo. Prior to that he spent more than 30 years with Exxon in domestic and international exploration management. He elected to take early retirement from Exxon in 1976.

During his Exxon career, he served as manager of exploration and production Esso Europe; Western Division manager of Humble Oil & Refining Co., Los Angeles; exploration manager in Anchorage; and region staff geologist in New Orleans. He also held assignments in Houston and Midland.

Tipperary has interest in Alaska oil discovery

HOUSTON — Exxon Co., U.S.A. has announced the results of the first production test of its Point Thomson wildcat on Alaska's North Slope.

The Exxon No. 1 Point Thomson Unit well is on the Beaufort Sea coast approximately 50 miles east of Prudhoe Bay.

It was drilled to a depth of 13,298 feet and a 4½-inch liner was set at 13,295 feet. The liner was perforated from 12,963 to 13,050 feet and, on an 8-hour test, the well flowed 18.5 degree oil at an average rate of 2,300 barrels per day, with an average gas-oil ratio of 5,800-1.

The wildcat was drilled on a 40,000-acre state unit. Companies in addition to Exxon which have an interest in the unit are Chevron, Mobil, Phillips, Cities Service, Atlantic Richfield, Continental, Pennzoil, Al-Aquitaine, Carling National Breweries, Coastal States Gas Corp., Forest Oil, Trans World Oil & Gas, Ltd., Newmont Oil, Oil Resources, Sunlite International and a group headed by Tipperary Corp. of Midland on whose 640-acre farm-in the well was drilled.

New store announced

SHREVEPORT — M. L. Sutton, The Bovaird Supply Co. Southern Area Manager, has announced the opening of another supply store in Madisonville, Tex.

The decision to open the new facility was to meet the growing demands of drilling and production supplies in the area, about 95 miles north of Houston.

WASHINGTON OIL

Schlesinger may leave energy for budget post

By CLYDE LA MOTTE

WASHINGTON — There is a persistent rumor in Washington that Energy Secretary James Schlesinger may leave that post to become director of the Office of Management and Budget. The OMB position is the one that was held by Bert Lance before his resignation.

If Schlesinger is going to depart, as the rumor has it, Charles Curtis, currently the chairman of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, may be given the DOF assignment.

Most observers anticipate that if these developments do occur, they will not do so until Congress has finished its work on the energy package.

The reasoning behind the possible move is that Lance was the principal member of President Carter's inner circle who appealed to conservatives and that Schlesinger would fill this need, especially since as OMB director he would be dealing with governmental budgets and fiscal policies and programs.

Also, Schlesinger's long experience in Washington and his frequent exposure to congressional committees has made him a person of considerable stature.

The energy industry and industries heavily reliant on energy have mixed views on Schlesinger's performance on energy-related matters.

These people for the most part are unhappy with the Carter administration's over-all energy approach and therefore some tend to blame Schlesinger for his role in helping shape the program and in helping sell it to Congress.

Even so many are convinced that Schlesinger is aware of the need for placing more emphasis on domestic energy development and on reliance on private enterprise rather than governmental agencies in bringing about this development of the nation's energy resources.

They note he has indicated a willingness to compromise on some aspects of the pending energy legislation, including a higher price for domestic natural gas and even for gradual phasing out of wellhead price controls.

Those who know Schlesinger well say the role of director of OMB would appeal to him even more than his presenc assignment because it would enable him to play an important role in planning and in decision-making on a wide front while at the same time not being thrust into a "selling" role. That is, he would operate more behind the scenes but might well have more impact.

In his present role he is beset by political forces seeking to have an impact on the shape of the energy program. Thus, some of the decisions being made by the administration necessarily must have a flavor of politics rather than resting solely on what type of energy program would actually produce the best results. This is known in Washington as being politically realistic.

If Schlesinger does leave the energy post, it is a good bet that the administration's energy emphasis will likely move toward more governmental involvement in energy matters, not less. Certainly there is little reason to believe that any change would be in the direction of giving the energy industries more leeway.

Schlesinger may not have been a "friend" of the industry up to this point but he has not been an "enemy" either. So, if Schlesinger goes, a new energy "czar" could well be more militant and more anti-industry.

Public opinion polls continue to indicate that the energy issue has not caught fire to create a setting in which major, positive steps could be taken. There is still a great deal of public apathy and public suspicion.

In such a situation, there will be slow progress in launching any type of effective energy program.

It may be that Schlesinger fully realizes this and, therefore, would prefer to move to another government post than to stay on at the Department of Energy to struggle with an unpopular program having little prospect of attaining any substantial results.

Wood said an exceptionally large attendance is expected at the Thursday reception.

'Replacement cost not mysterious': Martin

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP)—William F. Martin says replacement cost pricing really isn't a mysterious concept.

"Anyone who has sold his home in the last 10 years understands it," said Martin, chairman and chief executive of Phillips Petroleum Co.

Martin said replacement cost pricing has been one of the basic issues in the National Energy Plan debate in Washington.

"Some people say American producers shouldn't be allowed to receive today's prices for yesterday's oil discoveries," he said.

"The real question is this: Will producers have the capital available to find and develop tomorrow's oil supplies? The issue centers around the question of replacement cost prices for domestic discoveries of oil and natural gas."

Martin discussed replacement costs in Philnews, an employe publication, saying no one who bought a home for $20,000 in 1967 could buy the same home for that price today.

"Unless you received much more than $20,000 for your home you probably couldn't afford a comparable residence," he said.

"Why? Because the cost of land, labor and materials has shot up since 1967."

Martin said that what is true about the price for houses is just as valid when speaking about the price of oil and natural gas.

"In the last 10 years, the cost of drilling equipment, supplies, and of labor has skyrocketed," he said.

"And as the country gradually uses up petroleum reserves, wells must be drilled deeper and in high cost, higher risk areas, such as offshore or in Alaska."

He added that it costs about eight times as much to drill offshore as it does to drill onshore.

"And drilling in wilderness areas, such as Alaska, can be even higher," he said.

"Take as an example Phillips' Big River No. 1 well in Alaska, completed early this year. It cost the company $12.5 million to drill and it was a dry hole. In 1967, just 10 years ago, for $12.5 million, we could have drilled more than 200 average onshore wells."

Martin also used Alaska's North Slope crude oil as an example.

"When this oil was discovered in 1968, domestic crude oil was selling for only $2.94 per barrel," he said. "If prices had stayed at that level, this oil would stay in the ground."

Martin said the reason is simple.

"Production and transportation costs have jumped," he said. "For transportation alone, it costs more than $6 a barrel just to bring the oil to

Rotary tally accounts for 297 rigs in Basin

The Permian Basin rig count jumped by six units last week, for a total of 297 rotaries in operation, according to the weekly survey conducted each Friday by Reed Drilling Equipment.

During the first week of November last year, 283 rigs were making hole, and last week, 291 rotaries were working.

Eddy County, N.M., Pecos and Ward counties were the leaders in drilling activity with 25, 24 and 23 reported by Reed, for each county, respectively.

Eighteen rigs were counted in Lea, N.M., while Crockett had 17, Gaines and Reeves had 11 each, and Yoakum had 10 rotaries in operation.

D-Jax offers new durable dynamometer

Let the people with the D-Jax Corporation help you, Mr. Production Man. Discover how the D-Jax dynamometer can assist in lowering your lifting cost and will help conserve energy. Consider the following. By cutting a dynamomter card to determine if your wells are pumping down and pounding fluid, so that corrective measures such as: more efficient pump sizing, decrease in S. P. M., shorter stroke length; or in many instances, careful consideration should be given to an efficient pump cycle.

By running routine dynamometer surveys to quickly detect downhole conditions that contribute to rod and pump failure, sticking pumps, "bumping bottom" and friction thus helping to stop costly down time (waiting on pulling units and lost production).

By being able to check a large number of wells in a relatively short time, with ease and safety, thus making it possible to check responding waterflood areas much more often on a routine basis.

Fluid level shots give very good information, if accurate, especially in areas being monitored for any bottomhole pressure change brought about by an injection program utilizing water and steam; but if an abnormal fluid level is detected, what then? The logical thing to do is to cut a dynamometer card and determine the condition of the pump. Since this can be done in a matter of minutes with the D-Jax Dynamometer why wait around for the well to be retested? However, since the D-Jax Dynamometer can be rigged up in an average of one minute, doesn't it make sense to run a dynamometer survey first and if the card indicates the well is pumping down and pounding fluid then, normally, there is no need to add the expense of shooting a fluid level.

By checking your unit for proper counterbalance. This is important as a well not properly counterbalanced can greatly increase your power cost as well as shorten the life of your prime mover and rod string.

If after running a dynamometer survey and the well is not pumping down, it is determined that the traveling valve, standing valve and pump are in good condition, a fluid level and well test should then be obtained to determine the advisability of increasing the strokes per minute, the stroke length or possibly a larger pump size.

While the dynamometer is also beneficial in determining the best pumping speed or pump cycle, in so doing you are at the same time increasing pump efficiency and extending the life of the pump and sucker rod string and lowering your energy cost in the process.

As far as the graph, or card, is concerned, the D-Jax Dynamometer duplicates qualitatively any other pumping well dynamometer, including readings relative to standing valve, traveling valve, fluid pounding, pump sticking friction, over-travel and under-travel.

Since the D-Jax Dynamometer uses neither the polished rod clamps, spacer, or electric wires but simply hooks onto the existing horse head cables on the pumping unit, this new friend of the production man can be run safely by relatively inexperienced personnel. Most card interpretation can be correctly achieved with a small amount of training but if the petroleum engineer, technician, pumper or others desire to become more proficient in dynamometer card interpretation, there are a number of excellent books available, or better yet, one can attend a dynamometer school and two of the best such schools are located in the Midland area.

Let the people with D-Jax Corporation show you how you can conserve energy and lower lifting costs by using their innovative, durable and accurate dynamometer, which can be purchased directly for under $2500. or on a lease purchase or a rental basis. Just call 915-683-5710 to schedule an office or field demonstration; or "Ask the man who owns one."

Juarez Prison most crowded, says envoy

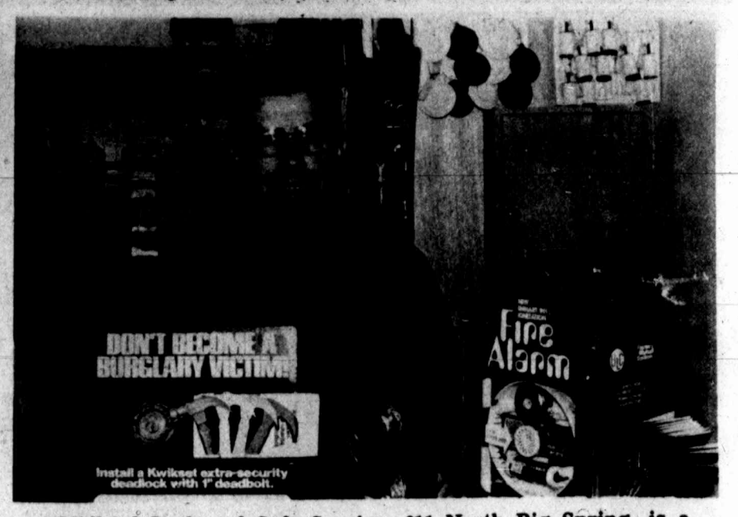

JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — The Juarez Prison, which holds 550 prisoners in space originally designed for 155, is the most crowded prison in Mexico, according to U.S. Ambassador to Mexico Patrick J. Lucey.

Lucey made the remark Friday after visiting with the 21 Americans held there, including eight who have met the requirements for the pending prisoner exchange between the United States and Mexico.

Earlier last week, Lucey had been in El Paso and Juarez for the meeting between Mrs. Rosalynn Carter and Mrs. Carmen de Lopez Portillo, when the two first ladies spent the day touring the area.

Cats blamed for plague

ATLANTA (AP) — Domestic cats appear to be the most likely source of human infection in two cases of bubonic plague in California this year, the national Center for Disease Control said.

"Cats and dogs have been shown experimentally to be susceptible to plague infection, although cats may develop more severe illness," the CDC said Friday in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

Epidemiologists said veterinarians in the West and Midwest, where plague is not uncommon, should be aware that domestic pets brought to their offices for treatment may have plague.

Fifteen cases of bubonic plague in humans have been reported in the United States this year, compared with 16 cases last year and 20 in 1975.

Kit Dollin climbs corporate ladder

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — Kit Doolin is climbing the corporate ladder—literally.

She's an environmental engineer for Phillips 66 and part of her job is climbing towers and stacks.

One of her first assignments was to climb the incinerator stack at a new gas processing plant in Luling. She was to see if the incinerator was properly burning the plant's waste gases.

"First, the other engineer and I had to hoist about 200 pounds of test equipment up the stack and then we went up to take samples of the gases within the stack," Miss Doolin said.

Working with Miss Doolin on the project was Clyde Mathis, a Phillips retiree brought back to train young engineers on stack testing techniques.

"It's not fair to Kit to say she is a good young woman engineer. She is a good engineer, period," Mathis said.

Miss Doolin is one of a team of enviornmental engineers working with computer analysts to determine possible emissions for projects plants, long before the first shovel of dirt is turned for plant construction.

"Computer modeling is really interesting work, and it's vital in planning future plant expansions in a way that will keep plant emissions at safe levels," Miss Doolin said.

"As environmental engineers, we have to find a way for a new, larger refinery to operate putting out less total emissions than the current refinery. Even with modern technology, that's a big assignment.

"But it's those challenges that make it interesting to be an environmental engineer"' Miss Doolin said.

Huge wind unit planned

The Los Angeles Times

It has been no secret to the folks who live around Boone, N. Car., that the wind blows a lot on Howard's Knob, a little peak in the Blue Ridge Mountains not far above town.

That fact has now been officially recognized by the U.S. Department of Energy, which has decided to take advantage of that breezy condition.

The department announced this week that it plans to build the world's largest wind machine atop Howard's Knob as part of a $23 million experimental program to turn the wind into useful electric power.

The massive two-bladed turbine will be designed to generate two megawatts of electric power at top speed, enough to supply the annual electric power needs of more than 500 homes, the department said.

The department will work with the local utility, the Blue Ridge Electrical Membership Cooperation, over a two-year period beginning late next year to test the wind-powered generator.

Howard's Knob was chosen from 17 sites throughout the nation on the basis of a variety of factors, including the wind.

The wind machine is being developed by General Electric Co. and will have a total blad span of 200 feet, comparable to the wing span on a 747 jumbo jet, the department said. It will be mounted on a 150-foot tall tower.

Britons receive first North Sea dividends

By BERNARD D. NOSSITER
The Washington Post

LONDON — Britons got their first dividend from North Sea oil last week, a package of tax cuts and pension increases worth $1.8 billion.

To underscore the dramatic change in the nation's fortunes, a briskly confident Denis Healey, chancellor of the exchequer, also told the House of Commons that Britain would pass up the next $360 million slice of its huge loan from the International Monetary Fund. The country doesn't need the foreign currency now so Healey will also permit vacationers and businessmen to spend more abroad.

All this amounts to the opening shot in the Labor government's re-election campaign. No one knows when Prime Minister James Callaghan will go to the polls, but Healey drew laughs when he said Wednesday's bundle was part of an 18-month economic program. The Tories hope and expect an election sooner, by next fall at the latest.

There is little question, however, that Healey's mini-budget Wednesday is a blend of economics — stimulus for a sluggish domestic economy — and politics — Christmas pudding for the voters.

All this is a stunning turnaround from a year ago. Then the pound plunged to $1.56, and Healey desperately sought an IMF loan to keep it from falling further. Now the pound has reached $1.78, and the government is busy shooing away foreign currency to keep the pound from rising more. It is this change in the overseas accounts, with British oil replacing Arab crude, that has given the government the maneuvering room to make Wednesday's tax cuts.

Until now, the average citizen has benefited little from the new financial state of affairs. Inflation is still around 14 per cent although it is coming down. Output is stagnant so unemployment hangs above 6 per cent and is even higher on a U.S. measurement.

The extra spending power from tax cuts is expected to stimulate demand, output and jobs.

The bulk of the package, the tax cuts, enlarge the personal exemptions or tax-free income each Briton is allowed. Healey made this retroactive to the start of the budget year, last April. That way, every taxpayer will get a rebate around the start of December, just in time to help with the Christmas bills.

The average single man will collect $17.80 and another $1.15 a week thereafter. The average couple will pick up $62.30 and save another $1.85 each week.

This does nothing for those who pay no taxes. So Healey will give 10 million pensioners a 10 pounds or $17.80 bonus, again just in time for Christmas.

The world at large is likely to be most impressed by Healey's decision to stop drawing on the IMF loan. He has already collected $1.9 billion of the $3.9 billion credit, which means $2 billion is unspent. London was due to get another $360 million next month, and this is what Healey is foregoing. Assuming things continue as they are — and the oil flow is increasing almost daily — no more will be taken.

In another move to reduce Britain's swollen reserves of foreign currency, Healey will let vacationers spend more than $1,000 abroad and allow businessmen a daily outlay of $178. The limits had been $575 for tourists and $133 for businessmen.

All this will come as no surprise to those who understood the impact oil would make here. Instead of importing 2 million barrels a day and paying out, in current prices, $14 a barrel in foreign exchange, Britain will be producing one million barrels of North Sea oil daily by the end of this year. Sometime in the first half of 1979, Britain's output will match demand and from then on the country is an exporter of oil.

This balance of payments bonanza is the prize at stake in the next election. Callaghan is not required by law to call one until October 1979. But he won't wait until the last minute to avoid getting boxed in.

The Tories are privately expecting a fall election, but Callaghan could wait until the spring, hoping to provide more stimuli for the economy at home.

RRC task force to check borderland gas wells

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission of Texas will dispatch a task force of engineers and technicians into 23 gas fields in Zapata and Webb counites Monday to witness deliverability tests at more than 200 wells.

Data gathered in the sweeping operation will be made part of the record of a commission-called hearing Nov. 14 at which Good Hope Refineries, Inc., its subsidiary, Southern Pipe Line Co., Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. and other operators have been ordered to appear and explain their production and marketing operations in the borderland fields.

The hearimg is set for 1 p. m. in the Old Supreme Court Room in the Capitol Building.

Chairman Mack Wallace and Commissioners Jim C. Langdon and Jon Newton ordered the hearing on the heels of complaints that some operators and their affiliates are overproducing and that the overproduction threatens to result in an 11-cent increase in gas costs to the City of San Antonio because of take-or-pay contracts that supplier Lo-Vaca has with Good Hope.

Last Monday, the commission took emergency action aimed at prohibiting production of natural gas in excess of market demand. The commission adopted an amendment clarifying its emergency rule on gas market demand determination, gas well allowable allocation and ratable take.

"The emergency rule, as originally adopted, has been interpreted by certain persons to whom it applies in a manner inconsistent with the commission's intent," the amendment states.

"This faulty interpretation has resulted in significant overproduction of natural gas, problems with ratable take or natural gas and could have a substantial adverse effect on the rates paid by many customers of certain gas utilities in Texas," the amendment adds.

Chief Engineer Bob R. Harris of the Oil and Gas Division, in ordering the well tests, advised 11 affected operators that initial meter readings are to begin Monday, with 24-hour deliverability tests to commence Tuesday.

"All wells are to be produced under normal producing conditions," Harris said in letters that were scheduled to be in the operators' hands by last Saturday.

"It will not be permissible to shut in a well to increase the deliverability on other wells," he emphasized.

Harris further directed operators to report names of representatives and how they can be contacted in the field for the testing. Also, the representatives should have available to members of the commission task force all information to calculate the volume of gas from each well, he instructed.

Clarence H. Stumpf Jr., assistant director of the Oil and Gas Division's field operations, has been designated task force leader.

Members of the task force have been drawn from six of the Oil and Gas Division's regulatory enforcement districts across the state and the District 4 staff at Corpus Christi. The fields to be tested are in District 4.

The 26-man task force will assemble at the Ramada Inn in Laredo today for a briefing and coordinating session at which Harris and Phillip R. Russell, director of field operations, will participate.

Stumpf, the task force leader, has scheduled briefing sessions each night that the testing operation is under way.

Operators in the 23 fields to be tested are:

Good Hope Refineries, C. F. Braun & Co., Gulf Oil Corp., Continental Oil Co., Colorado Oil Co., Inc., and National Exploration Co., all of Houston; Morgan Enterprises, Inc., of Corpus Christi; Sanchez & O'Brien of Laredo; Viking Drilling Co. of San Antonio, Consolidated Oil & Gas, Inc., and Chevron U.S.A., Inc., both of Denver.

The fields to be tested are:

Laredo (Lobo), Laredo (5680), Laredo, South (Queen City); Laredo, South (Queen City, East), Laredo, South (Wilcox 5500); Puig (Wilcox), Ramireno (Wilcox), Ramirez (Wilcox 8400), Vidaurri (Wilcox), Cinco De May (8500), Dye (Wilcox 8200).

Approximately 90 of the 200 wells to be tested are in the Laredo (Lobo field.) Another 45 are in the J. C. Martin (Lobo) field. Most of the fields have one to ten wells.

Study claims industry exaggerating its need

By STAN BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new economic study sponsored by a conservative research organization suggests the petroleum industry is exaggerating claims that it needs higher profits.

The study, commissioned by the American Enterprise Institute, says the apparent low profits of oil companies in past years were actually higher than average for the amount of investor risk involved.

The petroleum industry's money-making record thus seemed good enough to attract investment money, said the study released Monday.

That conclusion seems to challenge one of the oil industry's chief arguments for deregulation of oil and natural gas prices. The industry has contended that controlled prices make profits too low to attract investors, thus hampering exploration and development of new energy sources.

The analysis was prepared for the Washington-based institute by Shyam Sunder, assistant professor of accounting at the Graduate School of Business of the University of Chicago.

Sunder first figured out the profits of the oil industry over the past 15 years by the usual measurements, such as return on net worth, or return on assets. He concluded, as others have found, that the industry's profits lagged behind U.S. industry in general until the steep price increases associated with the Arab oil embargo of 1973-74.

Sunder said recent profits only made up for the lower profits of earlier years and may not represent a future trend.

But in his analysis, Sunder noted that standard profit measurements fail to take into account an investor's isk.

To include the risk factor, he did a series of unusual and complicated calculations.

First, Sunder figured out how much oil industry profits fluctuate compared with all other industries — a measure of uncertainty or risk known to stock analysts as a "beta coefficient."

From that, Sunder figured a normal range of profits and calculated how much the oil industry's earnings deviated from the norm for the years 1961 through 1975.

On that "risk-adjusted" basis, Sunder concluded that oil industry profitability was actually a bit higher than the average for all other industries.

The reason for the contradiction, he suggested, is that investors face less risk when they put their money into the oil industry. He said the investors' rate of return is good for the risk they are taking.

Stephen P. Baker

S. P. Baker promoted

Stephen P. Baker has been promoted to district drilling engineer for Texas Oil & Gas Corp. in Midland.

He was serving as West Texas District production engineer at the time of his promotion.

Baker joined the district office here as a production engineer. Before joining the company, Baker was with Texaco Inc. in Midland.

He is a graduate of Oklahoma State University with a B.S. degree.

Discovery completes

CALGARY, Alberta — Sabine Canada, Ltd., a subsidiary of Sabine Corp. of Dallas, has announced the completion of a triple zone discovery well in the Blackie area, some 20 miles southeast of Calgary.

The well successfully tested gas from the Devonian Crossfield formation at 8,300 feet and the Cretaceous Belly River formation at 3,800 feet. It is completed as an oil discovery with an initial potential of 320 barrels per day, from the Mississippian zone at 6,800 feet.

Bruce O. Barthel

B. O. Barthel appointed

Coninco American Inc. of Spokane, Wash., has announced the appointment of Bruce O. Barthel as district manager, Oil and Gas.

Barthel, a graduate petroleum engineer from Colorado School of Mines, has more than 20 years experience in the petroleum industry. He will be responsible for planning and directing company-run as well as contracted oil and gas activities.

He initially will be based in Midland where he has resided several years.

Cominco is a nationwide natural resource oriented company with interests in mining, metals, chemicals, fertilizers and oil and gas.

Proposals for moving of Alaska oil by pipeline from complete

TULSA — The oil industry's proposed pipelines to move surplus Alaskan crude oil from the U. S. West Coast to Midwest refineries are far from completion, the Oil and Gas Journal says.

Five pipelines have been proposed to move Prudhoe Bay field crude to its logical inland markets, but only one is in sight of completion.

The Oct. 31 issue of the weekly business magazine says pipeliners blame government's involvement, not industry's reticence.

Next spring, surplus Alaskan oil — now about 150,000 barrels daily - will swell to 500,000 barrels daily when the big Trans-Alaska pipeline hits its full 1.2 million barrels daily flow.

Much of that crude is needed by refiners in Montana, North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. They are losing feedstocks due to Canada's phaseout of its oil exports to the U. S.

Canadian exports, which were 1.1 million barrels daily in 1973, will be only 164,000 barrels daily next year — mostly heavy, high-sulfur oil that few of the northern U. S. refineries can use.

The U. S. Departent of Energy predicts refineries in those northern states will be hard-pressed to secure enough crude in the next few years.

Significant shortages are predicted for Montana, where petroleum products will be 28,000 barrels daily short of demand in 1978 and about 48,000 in 1980. Eastern Washington, which is supplied partically by Montana refineries, may have shortages of 10,000 barrels daily in 1978 rising to 13,000 in 1980.

The Journal says the oil industry's proposed solution is to build west-to-east pipelines. So far, the only one not to fall victim to bureaucratic, political, or environmental delays has been Atlantic Richfield Co.'s reversal of the snall, 28,000 barrels daily Four Corners pipeline. It will move Alaskan crude from Long Beach, Calif., to refineries and pipelines in the Four Corners area when the project is completed next year.

Projects have been proposed by Standard Oil Co. (Ohio), Northern Tier Pipeline Co., Kitimat Pipeline Co. Ltd. and Trans Mountain Pipe Line Ltd., but none is likely to be in operation until 1980 at the earliest.

Meanwhile, surplus Alaskan oil will have to be moved by tanker through the Panama Canal to the U. S. Gulf Coast and East Coast at far greater expense than by pipeline.

The crude-short upper U.S. refiners, several of whom will be operating their plants at less than 50-percent of capacity in a couple of years under the current outlock, say the only solution is to import foreign crude to eastern Canada in exchange for Canadian domestic production in the Midwest.

But so far, Canada has insisted that all exchanges be U. S. domestic crude for Canadian domestic crude.

The refiners tell the Journal that all Upper Midwest pipelines are running full, and they can arrange only very small exchange volumes. They say their only hope is cabinet level negotiations between the U.S. and Canada.

PB Graduate Center announces course

The Permian Basin Graduate Center announces the beginning of "Oil and Gas Fundamentals — II," a course for office managers, secretaries, production clerks and other personnel, stressing procedures necessary in an oil office.

The course will be held in the PBGC classrooms in the basement of The Metro Building in Midland, Monday evenings from 7 to 10 p. m., Nov. 14-Dec. 12.

Fee for any four sessions is $50, $15 for individual sessions or $60 for the complete course. There are no prerequisites.

Jack Huff, Burleson and Huff, will cover oil and gas and mineral leases, definition of basic terms, delay rentals and division orders in the first session.

Donald S. Johnson, CPA, will cover oil and gas accounting in the second session.

Beginning production reports will be covered in the third session by Patricia M. Beck of the graduate center, while a more advanced production report session will be given by Rosellen Busby, State Oil Reports, the following week.

Kim Kunkel, CPS, and Mrs. Beck, CPS, will cover office procedures during the last session.

Additional information can be obtained by contacting the Graduate Center office, 104 Gulf Building, Midland.

Firm adds one to staff

Peppard-Souders & Associates, petroleum consultants firm, has announced the addition of Debbie Cramer to its Midland staff.

Also, David L. Adams, petroleum engineer, recently moved from the Houston headquarters offices of the firm, to the Midland office.

Peppard-Souders also has offices in Denver, Colo.

Gas opener potentials

DALLAS — Maynard Oil Co. has announced completion of a natural gas discovery well in Nueces County, Tex., that tested a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 35 million cubic feet of gas per day, plus 16 barrels of condensate per million cubic feet of gas.

The well is No. 1 Cecilia and Eleanor Kelly, and it was completed in the Frio M-3 formation at 7,976 feet. Drilled to 9,000 feet, two other zones at 7,280 and 7,830 feet, also were shown to be productive in sidewall core and log analyses.

Maynard owns 25 percent of the well and has the option to earn 25 percent in 1,700 surrounding acres. Other participants in the well are Maynard's No. 6 Fund, 25 percent; Crystal Oil Co., 25 percent, and Edwin L. Cox, 25 percent.

Addition completed

TULSA, Okla. — A 40,000-barrels-per-day hydrodesulfurization unit has been completed at Getty Refining and Markecing Co.'s El Dorado, Kan., refinery.

Howard H. Belew, vice president of manufacturing for GRMC, said the new umit removes sulfur from the feed stock for the fluid catalytic cracking unit, thus reducing sulfur emissions and improving the yields of gasoline and other lighter petroleum products from the "cat cracker."

The new hydrodesulfurization unit enables the refinery to utilize more of the higher sulfur content foreign and domestic crude oil, and increases the refinery's production of sulfur to about 50 tons from 15 tons per day.

The new unit, which was under construction almost two years, uses a process patented by Exxon Research and Engineering and licensed to GRMC, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Getty Oil Co.

Replacement costs high

the lower 48 states."

Martin said there is growing recognition that domestically produced oil and natural gas have not been priced at their replacement costs. As evidence, he quoted a White House document on the National Energy Plan as saying, "Both oil and natural gas are now priced domestically below their marginal replacement costs, and as a result they are overused."

"Nevertheless, price controls on oil and natural gas continue," Martin said.

"About 86 percent of the country's oil production and all natural gas sold across state lines are under federal regulations which hold prices far below replacement costs. This is the main reason why the country is using up its oil reserves faster than new ones are being found."

Just as homeowners cannot sell today's homes at yesterday's prices, Martin said, the oil industry cannot be expected to sell the energy used today at yesterday's prices.

"It costs more to find, develop, and produce oil and natural gas than it did in the past," he said.

"If our nation is to reduce its dependence on foreign oil, it will have to pay a fair price for oil and natural gas, a price that reflects the rising costs of future energy."

Dividend reported

AMARILLO — The board of directors of Pioneer Corp. has announced a regular dividend of 37.5 cents per share, payable to stockholders of record Nov. 17. The dividend is payable Dec. 2.

The directors announced consolidated net income for the third quarter of 1977 was $8,832,706, compared to $8,585,036 for the similar nine-month period during 1976. Earnings per share were 95 cents for the first quarter, compared to 92 cents for the third quarter of 1976.

For the first nine months of the year, consolidated net income was $30,350,787, compared to $29,892,506 for the first nine months of 1976. Earnings per share for the nine months were $3.26 compared with $3.22 for the like period in 1976.

In making the earnings announcement, President K. B. Watson said oil and gas sales through two subsidiary companies contributed significantly to the earnings picture.

Amarillo Oil Co. and Pioneer Production Corp. participated in a total of 77 completed wells during the first three quarters of 1977. Drilling, said Watson, resulted in 40 producing wells.

Explorations scheduled in 3 West Texas areas

Wildcat operations have been staked in Crockett, Fisher and Tom Green counties, and the fifth well has been added to the Ownby (San Andres) field in Yoakum County.

CROCKETT TEST

J. Cleo Thompson of Dallas spotted location for a 9,000-foot Ellenburger wildcat in Crockett County, 11 miles northeast of Ozona.

Location is 660 feet fmom north and 467 feet from west limes of section 9, block EF, GC&SF survey. The site is 1⅛ miles east of the Ozona, Northeast (Ellenburger) field which also produces from the Canyon and Strawn.

FISHER TEST

Roark & Hooker of Abilene No. 1 A. E. Rollans is to be dug as a 5,300-foot wildcat in Fisher County, four miles west of Longworth.

It is 660 feet from northwest and northeast lines of section 54, Gillespie County School Land survey No. 305. Site is 2⅞ miles southwest of the one-well Longworth (Flippen) field.

TOM GREEN TRY

Tucker Drilling Co., Inc., of San Angelo announced location for a wildcat in Tom Green County, four miles north of Carlsbad.

It is 690 feet from north and 630 feet from east lines of section 17, block 16, H&TC survey and it is a southwest, twin to Tucker No. 1 Harper Estate, a 7,100-foot failure.

YOAKUM WELL

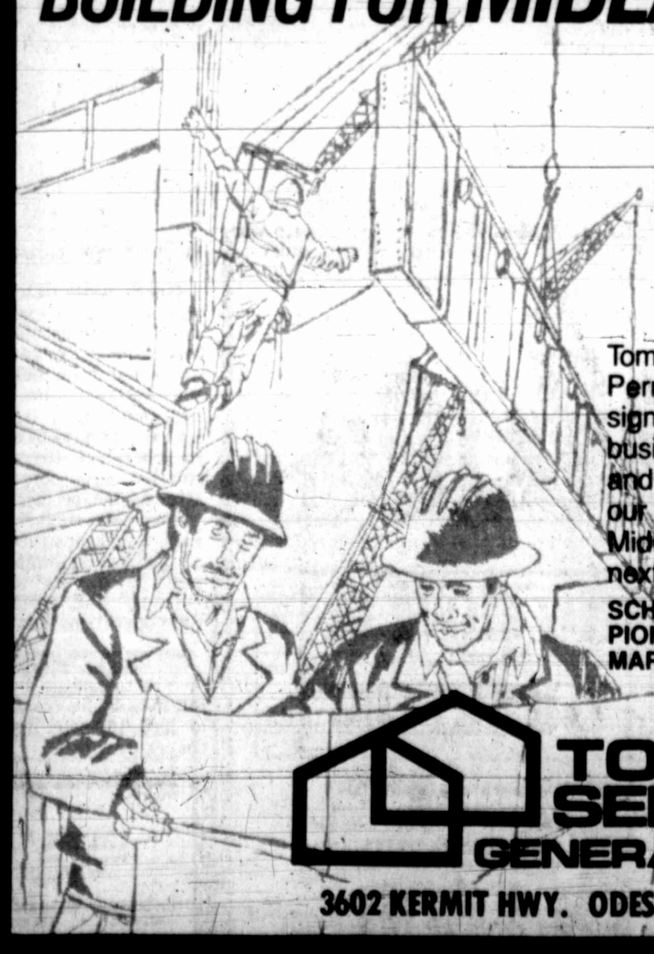

Sun Oil Co. No. 5-A Mattie Powell has been completed as the fifth well in the Ownby (San Andres) field of Yoakum County.

The well finaled for a 24-hour pumping potential of 260 barrels of 25-gravity oil, plus two barrels of water, through perforations fmom 7,910 to 8,204 feet after 1,000 gallons of acid and 40,000 gallons of fracture solution.

The well is 1,900 feet from north and 450 feet from east lines of section 4, block D, John H. Gibson survey, abstract 1259.

Hole is bottomed at 8,500 feet where 5½-inch casing is cemented.

'Gardening for Food, Fun,' latest yearbook by USDA

By CHARLES GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent

Cotton harvest continues as the major farm activity in the Midland area. Harvest is limited to those fields artificially dried with chemical desiccants. The weather remains dry and open, which is of benefit to cotton harvest operations, but the lack of moisture for fall-seeded small grains and subsoil-moisture storage dims agricultural prospects for next year.

Alfalfa is a good cash crop and a good soil-building crop and helps keep under control many weeds, insects and plant diseases. All or part of these benefits can disappear if the stand becomes too old, according to Gordon Hoff, extension agronomist, New Mexico State University. When the stand thins from age, yield and profits are reduced. Weeds begin to compete with the alfalfa and use up much of the fertility added to the soil by the alfalfa. Weeds also are a host for many plant diseases such as verticillium wilt and for insects such as aphids, fleahoppers and mites.

The main reason alfalfa stands thin out is because of the various diseases that attack the crown and roots. After alfalfa is three or four years old, it should be checked closely for dead, dying or weak plants. The best time to do this is when the last cutting is about a foot high. Above-ground symptoms of disease plants are wilting of the leaves, stems shorter than other plants in the field, or an uneven height of stems on the same plant. Dig up some of the plants and examine the crown and roots for dead or diseased tissue. Healthy alfalfa roots are white, so any brown or other dark discoloration indicates the presence of one or more disease organisms.

Many of the diseased plants will die during the winter, or be too weak to produce much hay. If the remaining healthy plants do not average four to five plants per square foot, the yield will be less the next summer, and you will also start losing some of the benefits of having the alfalfa on rotation. Then decide whether or not it is time to plow out the alfalfa when you make the field inspection, says Hoff.

"Gardening for Food and Fun" is the title of the 1977 Yearbook of Agriculture just off the press. The yearbook is a practical book for all types of gardeners from beginners to those with "green thumbs." The book's 400 pages feature numerous color pictures, and the text is organized into four sections: "Introduction to Gardening," "Home Garden Vegetables," "Fruits and Nuts," and "Home Food Preservation."

Of special interest should be chapters on garden tools and equipment, managing garden soil, a gardener's glossary, a guide to home canning and freezing, and proper storage of home-preserved foods. The new yearbook should be popular because of the increased interest in gardening throughout the country. About half the hoseholds in the nation have a garden, and in Texas that number is even higher.

Home gardening has increased rapidly in recent years because consumers prefer the taste of homegrown fruits and vegetables, it allows them to save on the food budget and it is an excellent hobby. The yearbook is available for $6.50 from government bookstores or the U.S. government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. U.S. senators and representatives also have a limited number of the books for free distribution.

Imports of foreign meat during the first six months of 1977 fell considerably below a year ago — down 81 million pounds or 12 percent, notes a livestock marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Beef and veal imports were down 14 percent, lamb imports were off 28 percent, and pork imoprts were down 4 percent. Imports of live cattle increased 12 percent during the same six-month period while sheep imports fell 82 percent.

NAMED FEDERAL EXECUTIVE of the Year is Louis A. Pare, assistant manager of the Federal Aviation Administration's Midland Airway Facilities Sector. Pare was given the honor by the Permian Basin Federal Executive Association at its last quarterly meeting. Erven Fischer Jr., association president, said Pare was recognized for his involvement and achievements in both Midland and Odessa, and for his work in the growth of the association. (Staff Photo)

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Youth has its problems

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband has had a bothersome little cough for weeks now. I'd like him to go to see the doctor about it, but he says he can't be bothered. I don't remember him ever having anything like this, so I am quite at a loss about what to do. What do you think?—Frieda G.

Dear Frieda: By all means, keep after your husband and get him to see the doctor. A cough that hangs on can, of course, be perfectly harmless—sometimes just the dryness in steam-heated rooms is enough to do it. But on the other hand, it may also be the sign of serious trouble—chronic bronchitis, emphysema or even cancer. It is a symptom that can't just be dismissed with a cough drop or two.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband and I have been somewhat concerned about our son. He is 16, very bright, and doing well in school. But the past few months, he has been extrmemely moody and less and less like himself. We know that growing up has all sorts of difficult phases and is fraught with problems everyone has to try to struggle with and his own answers for. But how would you know if your child is having more troubles than he is able to handle, and he needs professional help? We are anxious to do the right thing, but we also want to be sure we don't make a false move.—D.

Dear D.: There is no cut-and-dried answer to this. If, however, a young person is beset by a persistent problem that keeps him from functioning adequately, either at school or with friends or in his own home, it is wise to have a word with the family doctor. He is generally the best person to start out with. If he thinks it is a problem requiring psychiatric help, then he can recommend a specialist.

Some very sensible guidelines for sizing up an adolescent's difficulties were given in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association by Dr. Mark J. Blotchy of the Timberlawn Psychiatric Hospital in Dallas. Their purpose is to help family doctors decide if a young person is just going through a normal development phase or whether there is a serious problem calling for special help.

Dr. Blotcky says five areas should be considered, starting off with family relationships. Are there any particular stresses or difficulties? Do arguments linger in a smoldering fire or excessive withdrawal?

The second area is peer relationships. By adolescence, a normal boy or girl has developed the capacity for solid friendship. So, does the young person have friends or is he lonely and shy? Also, by mid-adolescence, there should be a definite interest in the opposite sex and by late adolescence, at least tentative dating. Dr. Blotcky says a very good way to find out if his peer-relationships are OK is to ask him what his best friend is like. The normal youth will give you a fairly clear picture—one with depth. A disturbed youngster's description often has only one single characteristic and is two-dimensional and monotonous.

School performance is the third area. How do his grades compare to his native ability? Is he hampered by anxiety, inhibition, poor tolerance of frustrationm or depression? Do teachers like him? Has he been skipping classes of withdrawing?

Fourth comes extracurricular activities. The average adolescent is not bored—he pours his energy into all sorts of things. You can find out a lot about how he feels from the kind of activities he enjoys after school and on weekends.

Dr. Blotcky's fifth category covers antisocial, self-destructive and bizarre behavior. Has there been any drug abuse or promiscuity? Any illegal acts? Any attempt to run away?

Dr. Blotcky notes that parents often find it hard to face up to some of the issues these questions cover. But they do give you a good idea of the kind of things to look for—and which are the most important concerns.

Even GM bigwigs outdated

DETROIT (AP) — The nation's biggest automaker is paying for driving lessons for some of its top executives.

It comes in connection with the transfer of about 800 General Motors Corp. employees from the GM building in New York City to the GM building in Detroit.

"We found that some of the oldtimers and spouses had lived in New York so long that they never learned how to drive," a GM spokesman said Wednesday.

Others who once knew how to drive are out of practice, he added.

So as part of a package deal to move to Detroit, GM is paying for lessons at "official driving schools" for employees and spouses who request them.

Kissing can't be assault

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Trying to kiss a policewoman may not be proper but that doesn't mean it's assault, says City Prosecutor Jack Morgan.

On Wednesday Morgan dismissed complaints filed by two policewomen who said men they stopped for traffic violations tried to kiss them.

Bondsmen beat bad risk 'rap' in many ways

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

"They all tell you they're not guilty, even the drunks," bondsman Carol Hebert said of the people she helps get out of jail.

"Right away, they start their defense with the bondsman. I'm really not interested in whether they're guilty or not," Mrs. Hebert said.

What is of concern to Mrs. Hebert and other Midland bondsmen is whether the jailed individual has money to pay his bonding fee and is likely to stay in town and appear in court on schedule.

"You're not there to judge them. That's what they go to trial for, remember," Mrs. Hebert said.

Bondsman Ed Brown agrees: "You don't talk to very many who are guilty. They were all set up. Of course, we tell them we don't care."

When an individual is arrested, be it for driving while intoxicated or a violent crime, bail must be posted before he is released from jail. That bail is returned if the individual appears in court when he is ordered to do so.

Frequently, however, the individual does not have the amount of the bail, so he goes to a bail bondsman, who pledges a bond of property or insurance valued at twice the amount of the bail. In return, the individual pays the bondsman a fee, usually 10 percent of the value of the bond.

"Then his body belongs to the bonding company until the time he goes to court. . . It's really like a probation office," Mrs. Hebert said.

What makes a jailed person a good risk to the bondsman? "Mostly whether they've got family here or around Midland and if they're a substantial family," bondsman Kenneth Ivey said.

Brown said "stability" is the major factor. "If they don't have community ties, we're not interested," he said.

"They'll promise you the moon when you're up there (in jail talking to someone)," Brown said.

Mrs. Hebert said community ties, such as a job and family, are a factor. She also relies on "woman's intuition" in deciding who makes a good risk, she said.

All the bondsmen interviewed said they sometimes make arrangements for people to pay their bonding fee on credit.

Mrs. Hebert said she does not like to do that, and does it only if "they've got a family and the family might be hungry if they're in jail" or if she knows the individual from having written previous bonds for him.

Brown said about 95 percent of the felony bonds he writes involve some kind of credit arrangement. There is some risk in that, however, because, "If they don't get you paid off before their trial, you don't really have any recourse."

When the bondsman can't locate the person, he can file a motion to go off the bond and have the individual rearrested. The bondsman pays expenses for having the person rearrested, but does not have to forfeit the bond if the individual is found, Mrs. Hebert said.

What if the person is arrested and charged with a second offense? "A lot of people do two things in a row," she said. Mrs. Hebert said she is not likely to go off the bond if the individual has paid the fee and reported in regularly.

"All we sell here is service. If people let you, you can service them well. If not, you can't afford to," she said.

"I guess we've just been in the business long enough that we're finding out it's repeat business," said Brown, who has been in business since the first of the year.

"If we don't write it, there's four or five other companies that will," bondsman Charles Eiland said.

Mrs. Hebert said persons charged with felony crimes are a minority of those she gets out of jail on bond.

"Most of the bonds we do are DWI's. Most of them are common ordinary people," she said, who were arrested while "out on the town."

Brown said he does not worry about the people he gets out on bond being on the street: "I'm sure that a lot of them did what they say, but I can't think of any that's just sorry."

Mrs. Hebert noted that women as well as men get arrested and have to be bailed out. "We've got a girl now who has jumped bond. I'm not going to tell you who she is because we might be able to pick her up sometime," she said.

Sometimes, she said, she gets involved with her clients — "It gets to be a personal thing. You don't want it to be."

She told of one client, a 19-year-old, who "just needs somebody to care. His mother calls me when he's in trouble and he does when he's not."

The bondsmen interviewed are in their business for different reasons.

"It's the most interesting job I've ever had. It feeds my two children," Mrs. Hebert said.

For Brown and Eiland, it's a sideline to their major business, a gun store.

"I had been in law enforcement 16 years and watched the bail bond business for those many years. I thought it would be just about as exciting (as law enforcement)," Ivey said.

The least enjoyable part of the job? "When they start running and hiding and not showing up in court," Ivey said.

Davis jury excluded during testimony about threat

By JIM BRIGANCE

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A key defense witness in the capital murder trial of millionaire Cullen Davis testified Saturday that W.T. Rufner once threatened Davis' estranged wife and Stan Farr, her live-in lover.

"I'll get that tall son-of-a-bitch and I'll get that (deragatory term for Mrs. Davis)," Sandy Myers, 27, said Rufner, an Arlington electrician and one-time boyfriend of Priscilla Davis, told her in March 1975. The testimony was outside the presence of the jury.

Farr was shot to death and Mrs. Davis was critically wounded in August 1976 during a midnight attack in which her daughter, Andrea Wilborn, 12, was slain, and Gus Gavrel, 22, family friend, was seriously wounded.

Davis, 44, is on trial in the death of Miss Wilborn.

Mrs. Myers, her high cheekbones framed by a cascade of long brown hair, calmly quoted Mrs. Davis intimating to her shortly before the mansion slayings that "something heavy is coming down. I want to talk to you."

Mrs. Myers added, "But I never learned what it was. She said it was not about her divorce though. She was very nervous and tense."

Mrs. Myers is now on 10-years probation on a narcotics conviction. She testified she lived at the Davis mansion at Mrs. Davis' invitation after Davis had moved out during the couple's divorce proceedings.

Questioned about a surprise birthday party for her on Sept. 20, 1974, Mrs. Myers said there were more than 100 people present at the Davis mansion and that she observed a "white powdery substance all over the house, along with pills and green and brown leafy substances."

Mrs. Myers, whose husband Larry is serving a 30-year robbery term, said while the jury was excused that she and Rufner and Mrs. Davis talked at a Fort Worth night spot on one occasion and that Mrs. Davis had said she wanted to "get rid of Stan but she didn't know how."

State District Judge George Dowlen would not permit the jury to hear that testimony, although over prosecution objections he did allow her testimony concerning the "something heavy's coming down" quote attributed to Mrs. Davis.

Mrs. Davis, in earlier testimony, denied making the remarks. She has also denied accusing Farr of theft but Mrs. Myers contradicted her, saying that Mrs. Davis had told her Farr had stolen some of her property.

Dowlen indicated he would decide Monday whether to permit the jury to hear Mrs. Myers' testimony about the threats, and some of the testimony of Valerie Faulkner, 20.

Mrs. Faulkner, whose husband also is in prison, testified Saturday that she had been around Mrs. Davis on several occasion when substances conceded to be drugs were present.

Prior to her testimony, Dowlen granted a prosecution motion to test for relevance any defense questions regarding the sexual conduct of Dee Davis, 19, and Beverly Bass, 20, both prosecution witnesses.

The motion claimed Davis' defense team has "clearly established a pattern of character assassination, innuendo, suggestion of misconduct and guilt by association" against prosecution witnesses.

Dowlen permitted Mrs. Faulkner, outside the jury's presence, to testify about various occasions when she said she observed Mrs. Davis having sex with men other than her husband.

One one such occasion she said, she, Mrs. Davis, Rufner, and Myers were all nude in Myers' bedroom. She said Myers and Mrs. Davis were engaged in sexual intercourse while she and Rufner sat on the side of the bed and watched.

At that time, however, she said Rufner "got jealous" and poured a drink on Mrs. Davis.

She also testified that during a July 4, 1974, trip to College Station, she observed Mrs. Davis, Rufner, Myers, and couple from Oklahoma engaged in group sex in the back of a recreational vehicle.

Dowlen has already ruled that testimony inadmissible.

Burger-lover journeys to famed first arches

DES PLAINES, Ill. (AP) — The pilgrim approaches the historic shrine in awe, trembling.

Searching for the marker he knows must be there, his palms moisten, his breath quickens. He feels the anticipation Dr. Leakey must have felt in the dust of the Olduvai Gorge, the seedbed of humankind.

At last, on locating the bronze marker at the base of the flagpole, he knows the unrestrained joy of Archimedes when his search was over. Eureka.

There before the pilgrim's gaze stands the absolute original, the archetype, the primordial, the very first McDonald's hamburger joint on earth. The bronze plaque gives its date of birth:

"The national chain of McDonald's was born on this spot with the opening of this restaurant on April 15, 1955."

"We do take great pride in it, yes, we do," said Jim Cherry, the manager. "When I hire new employees I always explain to them that this is no ordinary McDonald's, this is the first, and they should try to reflect the pride that goes with that honor."

Well, certainly. Think about it.

Of all those 23 billion sold, the very first was sizzled on this griddle. The very first french fry was deep-greased, salted and sacked right here. Of all the 4,454 McDonald's that were to follow, this was the first. Wow.

Touring the shrine, the realization slowly comes that they don't make 'em like this anymore. The colors are wrong.

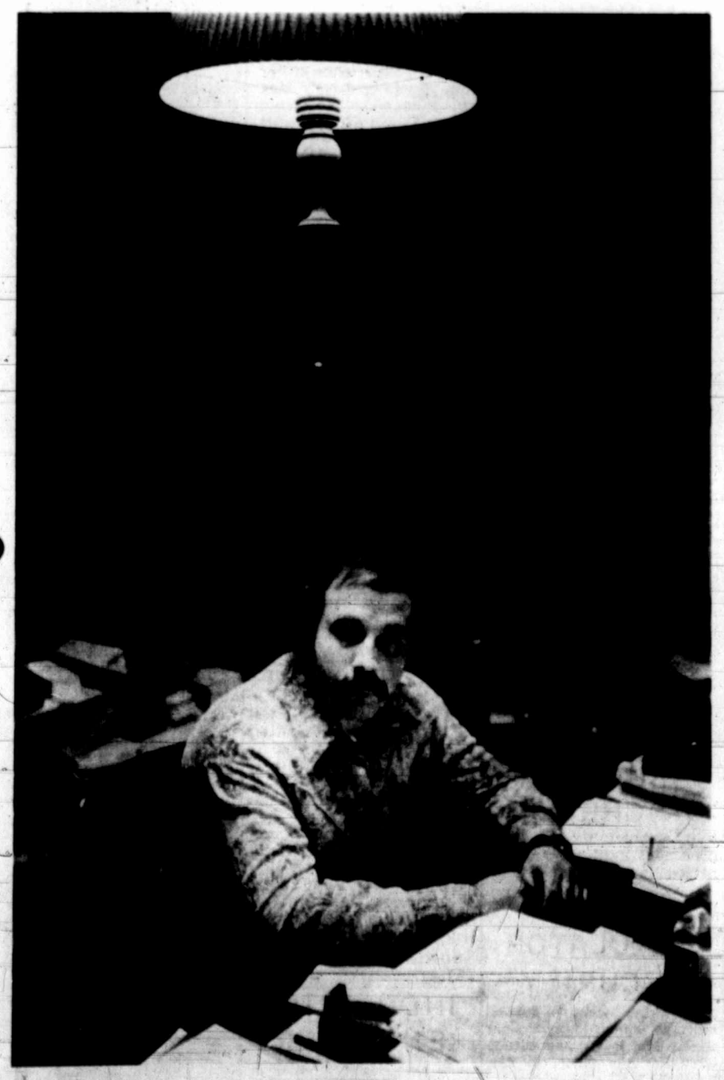

"That is correct," Jim Cherry said. "The first ones were called red-and-whites. The sign — yes, that's the original sign — remains red and white. The red and white tiles are still on the rear wall. Would you like to see?"

Who wouldn't!

Jim Cherry led a rare private tour back into the sanctum sanctorum, past the original red and white wall down into the basement.

"That's the original walk-in refrigerator," he said, pointing to a relic. "We've added more, of course. Back when this was built they thought that would be enough. They just had no idea."

The arches are wrong, too. They are the right color, but they are the wrong shape. They are on the roof, front to back, one on either side and they are perfect half-circles. Today's jaunty "M" that decorates nearly every intersection, shopping mall and exit ramp from horizon to horizon is clearly an improvement, esthetically.

Cousteau wins Yugoslav nod

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — French explorer Jacques Yves Cousteau has received permission from Yugoslav authorities for three days of exploration of the Yugoslav side of the Adriatic Sea.

Cousteau, whose films about submarine life are highly popular on Yugoslav television, will research pollution in the Adriatic next month.

A retired French navy officer, Cousteau was appointed by the French Academy as chief of an international commission for scientific research of the Mediterranean.

Gas prices increased

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Comptroller Bob Bullock says natural gas prices in Texas increased 19 percent during the first half of the state's business year.

Bullock said his analysis for Sept. 1, 1976 to Feb. 28, 1977, showed that the price for all Texas natural gas averaged 81.1 cents per thousand cubic feet (mcf) for the six-month period. He said this was 11.8 cents over the fiscal 1976 average price of 69.3.

Bullock said the average price of Texas-produced natural gas to in-state buyers during the six months was 97.1 cents per mcf compared to the 46.8 cents that out-of-state buyers paid.

Texas' natural gas production during the six months was 3.75 trillion cubic feet with slightly more than two-thirds being sold within the state.

Basketball teams may register

Teams wishing to enter the Midland YMCA Boys' Basketball program may register until Thursday, according to Craig Reynolds, program director.

All teams must have a representative attend a coaches meeting at the Central YMCA, 800 N. Big Spring, at 7 p.m. Tuesday or Thursday, Reynolds said.

Church League games are scheduled to begin Nov. 28, and the "A" League finalists may qualify for state regionals following the season.

Further information about the programs may be obtained by telephoning Reynolds at 682-2551.

Insurance queen named

Robin Malone of 2105 Winfield St. has been named "Miss Farmers Insurance Group of Midland."

She will compete in the state contest, with the winner of the state contest to compete in the national contest. The national winner will be queen of the Farmers Insurance Group float in the 1978 Pasadena Tournament of Roses parade Jan. 2.

SUPERVISING AND CONTROL OPERATORS.
(Sulfur Plants)

Most of the energy-related projects now in progress in Saudi Arabia are being directed by Aramco, the world's largest oil producing company. Because of the rapid growth and expansion of oil, gas and associated facilities, Aramco is in urgent need of Sulfur Plant Supervising Operators and Control Operators and will make the job financially rewarding to you if you're qualified and interested.

As a rule of thumb, you can expect your Saudi Arabian take-home pay to be approximately equal to your gross pay in the U.S. Also, advancement opportunities are excellent.

The job.

Working an eight-hour shift, Supervising Operators will be responsible for the operation of the Claus type units in the NGL Center near Jubail, Saudi Arabia. These are two-train, 1,000 ton each, nominal design thru-stage units. Additionally, the plant contains a sizeable freon refrigeration unit for chilling inlet feed gas.

Duties include supervision of control and outside operators in attaining maximum possible conversion to bright sulfur of inlet feed gas containing a mixture of hydrogen sulfide and carbon dioxide, as well as the proper and safe operation of plant equipment.

Control Operators will assist the Supervising Operator but will generally control the plant from panels located in a central control house for the Sulfur Plant.

The requirements.

Applicants for Supervising Operator must have a minimum of 12 years' experience in associated type gas plant operations with at least 5 years in sulfur recovery plants including 3 years in a supervisory capacity. Control Operator candidates should have at least 8 years' operating experience with at least 2 years in sulfur plants.

A high school diploma is required by all applicants.

Why work for Aramco?

Besides the challenge and career opportunities of your job, working for Aramco overseas offers several excellent advantages. You'll receive a good salary and savings plan, plus a generous tax-protected expatriate premium.

And you can travel the world if you wish, because on the average of every 12½ months you receive 40 fully paid vacation days, as well as round trip vacation travel fare to the U.S. Add to this an average of 12 paid holidays each year.

In addition, medical care for you and your family is furnished at no charge by the company while you are in Saudi Arabia.

Interested?

If so, and you're qualified, please write for an application. We'll be back in touch with you as soon as possible.

REACH out for recovery with group's aid

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

"Roses are red,
Violets are blue,
Bosoms are neat,
But who needs two?"

A small, square plaque with this poem handwritten on it hangs on a wall in the home of Mary Virginia Saxe. Given to her by a friend, it is a reminder of the mastectomy Mrs. Saxe had a few years ago.

But, the plaque's message carries much farther than the Saxe home. It is a message to all women who have had mastectomies—that they are no different as a person after the surgery. It also is a message carried by Reach to Recovery, an organization designed to help women who have had mastectomy surgery in recovering.

In explaining the organization, Mrs. Saxe related her own experiences with her surgery and recovery with help of the group sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

Three years ago, Mrs. Saxe found a lump on one of her breasts, went to the doctor immediately and was scheduled for surgery. Before the operation she had no idea if the lump would be removed, or the whole breast if the lump proved malignant.

The doctor did not know, either, until tests on the lump showed it was malignant. Following common surgical practices, the breast and lymph nodes in the arm were removed.

Facing reality hurts

When she awakened from surgery, she was told the news, but the blow was softened by having her family and friends with her. It was later that she faced the reality of her surgery.

That night, alone in her room she said out loud, "I have cancer," and the reality hit her. Then, a feeling that she says is hard to explain, came over her and "I felt God say, 'But you're going to be alright.'"

Mrs. Saxe is chairman of the Midland Reach to Recovery which was started about six years ago.

To work with the group, a woman must have had a mastectomy at least two years before she wants to join the group. Then, she undergoes a two-day training session.

Houston woman started it

The program was started by Terese Lasser of Houston who had the surgery in 1952. She wanted to talk with a woman who had the same surgery, but no one was available. When told to do exercises by her doctor, none had been designed to strengthen her arm and get it back to its normal capabilities.

Through trial and error, she learned how to cope with her problems and find solutions. But, the idea for Reach to Recovery did not come until several months after her surgery when she was asked to talk with a woman who had just undergone the same operation. By this time, Mrs. Lasser had resumed her active life and the other woman noticed this.

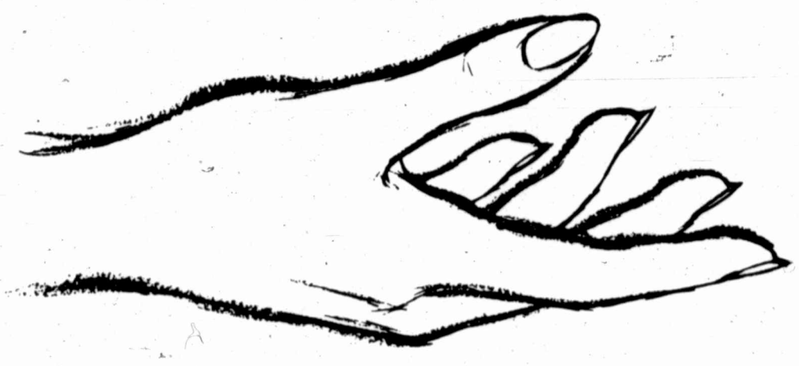

Mrs. Lasser worked alone for many years, and then trained volunteers. In 1969 Reach to Recovery was merged with the American Cancer Society.

Every woman reacts differently to the operation, Mrs. Saxe said. It is a traumatic experience for all, but even more so for a younger woman, especially one who has never been married.

Physician must request it

Reach to Recovery women will call on a woman in the hospital only at the request of the woman's physician. The R to R woman has gone through several hours of instruction on how to deal with each patient and how to answer questions.

They help women to recover physically and emotionally

"You can put your mind in a sling, or your arm in a sling and say you can't do it. But, the sooner you start doing things, the sooner you forget you had surgery."

Mary Virginia Saxe

They are told what type of mastectomy the woman had and the type of exercises the doctor wants the patient to do. While the Reach to Recovery representative deals with the patient in a straightforward manner, she is not cold nor can she get emotionally involved.

The representative also can not discuss her type of surgery and followup treatment. While each surgery is different, so is the followup treatment. What one woman had may be more than another, or less, and talking about it only increases the patient's fear, according to Mrs. Saxe.

"We are there only as an auxiliary, an assist to the woman's recovery."

When they first walk into the room, Mrs. Saxe said the patient looks to see if that woman is leading a full life, and that she is not on her last leg.

Representative gives initiative

The women are armed with a kit from the American Cancer Society which includes a booklet on exercises and recovery by Mrs. Lasser, various items for doing exercises and a Leisure bra with a temporary breast form. Various lists name the types of permanent prosthesis and name brands of clothes the woman can purchase to suit her needs.

When the Reach to Recovery woman called on Mrs. Saxe and started showing her the exercises, it was her ability to do them as any other person would that prompted Mrs. Saxe to get up and start hers. "That woman really helped me tremendously," she said.

"You can put your mind in a sling, or your arm in a sling and say you can't do it," she added. "But, the sooner you start doing things, the sooner you forget you had surgery."

The first feeling a woman has following surgery, other than facing the reality of cancer, is that of not feeling like a complete person, that their husband will no longer care for them and that they don't feel or look nice.

A Reach to Recovery woman gives the optimism needed at this stage, said Mrs. Saxe. "You are still the same individual after that surgery as you were before. And if a marriage depends upon that breast, then it's not much of a marriage," she reasoned.

Be thankful for life

Instead of not wanting to face life, the woman should be thankful there are ways to keep her alive and with her family. "I appreciate my family more now," Mrs. Saxe said. "If my husband lost a foot, I wouldn't love him any less—probably more."

The exercises are basically reaching exercises to help a woman regain the strength and complete use of her arm, which is where the name Reach to Recovery comes from.

They start out with brushing the hair and crumpling paper, which can be done while still in the hospital. A rubber ball attached to an elastic string is supplied with the American Cancer Society kit. The woman starts with squeezing the ball. She then ties the elastic string to her middle finger, throws it and tries to catch it. She must "reach" to catch the ball.

Woman 'climbs the wall'

To climb the wall, the woman must stand facing the wall and try to reach her hands a little higher each day above a pencil mark where she had reached the day before.

Other exercises involve a rope, tying it to a doorknob and drawing circles in the air with it.

While the woman is recovering the use of her arm, she also wants to look nice in her clothes. Several years ago, this was hard to do. Through Mrs. Lasser's efforts, things have changed greatly. Today, prostheses are manufactured by many companies and even available for a lower price through major department stores.

Nightgowns and swimsuits also also have been designed for the woman with a mastectomy.

While the program, approach and exercises are proven, Mrs. Saxe said the originator is not adverse to improvement. She will add a new technique if it has been proven. She recently added exercises for men who have the operation.

Odessa has no Reach to Recovery group, and the Midland organization said they are available if any Odessa physician requests them. They can contact Mrs. Saxe, 682-3324, or the American Cancer Society in Midland, 563-0204.

See physician immediately

Everyone says they know people who get cancer, but that it won't happen to them, Mrs. Saxe said. "But, they do get it, and they should go to a doctor as soon as possible. When you wait, you're giving the cancer a chance."

If the woman detects the warning signal early and still needs the mastectomy it is not the end of the world, Mrs. Saxe stressed. "God gives you the grace to accept this and that is your first ally. Then it comes to you how fortunate you are. You are still the same person."

There are reasons why things happen to a person, Mrs. Saxe feels. "I would never have chosen this, but it's a lot better than some things."

Because of her surgery, Mrs. Saxe has been helping others learn how to "reach for recovery" and there is nothing that has meant more to her, she said.

"I think this is one of the most fabulous programs the American Cancer Society has. It is an aid to actually restoring women to physical and emotional health."

'Fraulein' talks them out of suicide, ropes goats

"You meet all different kinds of people on the road. They say there are lunatics out there, and there are, but I've never come across any.

Pat Kessner

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

She didn't know if she could do it that first time. Even though she had taken classes in psychology, it was a different thing to talk a man out of committing suicide, especially if you were trying to do it over a Citizen's Band (CB) radio.

But, Pat Kessner did it. And the man is alive today.

Miss Kessner is a member of the Midland County REACT team, and is the one person they call on for help when someone, talking over a CB channel, threatens to commit suicide.

Since she started working with the CB radio and REACT team about three years ago, the brunette has experienced several odd events, talked people out of committing suicide and helped round up animals.

She is known by the name, or handle, of "Fraulein," which is a nickname she was called when a child. She became interested in the hobby through a brother who is a trucker out of Dallas. Even though he would pass by Midland he could not stop to visit, so they would visit on the CB. Her circle of CB friends, most of whom she has never seen, has grown until she now is known in several states and talks to about 500 per day.

Her first attempt at suicide prevention was a trucker who had suffered a heart attack, but felt he no longer was a man since he could not continue driving a truck.

"This guy called me and said he didn't have anything to live for, and asked me not to stop talking," Miss Kessner recalled.

"I had to keep my voice very calm and cool, but I was talking about 90 miles a minute. I reminded the Houston man of his family and what he had to live for."

That first week he did not go through with his suicide plan. He called her again the next week and went through the same routine with her. By the third week, her mother had suffered a heart attack in another state and chances for her survival at the time the trucker called were slim.

I lucked out, she said, in telling him that her mother could die, but she didn't have that choice. That turned his thinking around, and he and his wife are now leading a happy life, Miss Kessner said.

But, not all episodes have ended so happily. One resulted in the woman, who had threatened suicide, being given a divorce from her husband, who also was committing her to a hospital.

When not working on suicide prevention, she calls herself the "No. 1 goat roper," after an episode last spring.

When the tornado hit Monahans the rest of the county was experiencing heavy rains and hail. Meanwhile, Miss Kessner was on I-20 roping goats.

She was driving on I-20 when she spotted a nanny goat with two kids. She called for help through REACT, but their CBs were tuned in to Monahans, she said, explaining that the tornado had higher priority than roping goats.

With the help of two other men who stopped, one a trucker, she rounded up the goats and took them home. "Talk about smelly," she said with a laugh. "Wet goats are no Chanel No. 5." The owner later was found, she added.

Her work has not been strictly with CB friends. She admitted she has assisted Midland police officers on some cases, but would not tell details of them. Even so, they too have been added to her list of friends.

You're like a family, she said. Even though she seldom meets any of the people she talks with, she is interested in every event in their life.

There was Junkyard Dog who was an 18-wheeler truck driver. He once told "Fraulein" he was thinking about trying "dope," and "I tried to talk him out of it," she said. They had many other conversations since then. Recently, she was told by another CB friend that Junkyard Dog had died of a heart attack. While she never saw him face-to-face, it was like losing a good friend, Miss Kessner admitted.

While living in Midland her house was burglarized once and several valuable items taken, including her CB radio and antenna. Some CB friends heard about it, she said, and a few days later she received a new CB radio in the mail. The note with it only said, "From your CB friends." Today, she admits she still does not know who sent the radio.

One requirement for talking on the CB is to be a good listener, Miss Kessner said. The CB brings people closer together and takes away the generation gap.

One night she was having "an educational talk on psychology and how it deals with the child and the parent.

"We had about 30 people ranging in age from 15 to 80 who gave their views," she said. "One 15-year-old boy said he felt his parents didn't understand him because they didn't take the time to listen. They would just hand him money to go do something."

"Helping someone," seems to be her creed, and she admitted she feels if she can help someone, that is reason enough to continue talking on the CB.

There was the time she let a college girl on her way back to school stay overnight in her house, and the winter night she called for a wrecker when a family's car had broken down on the Garden City Highway. Or, she can't begin to count the number of times she has given directions to someone passing through the town and needing information.

Truckers make up a large percentage of her audience. And Miss Kessner is willing to spend hours talking to one to keep him awake while driving or waiting for help by the highway.

"You meet all different kinds of people on the road," she summarized. "They say there are lunatics out there, and there are, but I've never come across any."

There are several children in Midland who can credit their knowledge of working CBs to Miss Kessler, she said. They like to talk on the CB, but most do not know how, and she gives lessons over the air. Laughing over one incident, she recalled a boy who wanted to talk to some 18-wheeler truckers. He broke into the conversation following Miss Kessner's advice, but could not understand when no one talked. "He forgot to ask for the truckers," she said.

The CB world is a world Miss Kessner never ventured into until three years ago. Now, she said, it is a world she enjoys, even when she may have to spend half the night talking someone out of a suicide attempt.

'Women should be able to control their lives'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

Guadalupe Arizpe DeLa Vega believes strongly that women should be able to control their lives and their ability to conceive.

She and her husband have money and live in Juarez. But, the combination of seeing women in poverty having more children and believing they should be able to control their lives gave Mrs. DeLa Vega the push she needed. In 1972, she and several other women joined forces and opened a family planning clinic in the Mexican border city.

Speaking at the Permian Basin Planned Parenthood, Inc. annual dinner, Mrs. DeLa Vega outlined her philosophy for women, the need for family planning and her experiences with the Juarez clinic.

The "simple woman" is the one who needs the family planning, but seldom is she asked for advice by those setting up the programs and clinics, Mrs. DeLa Vega said. "In setting up these programs we lose contact with the simple women who express their needs.

"These women need fewer children and less poverty. They need a service, simply and directly without complications," the woman said.

Somewhere in the world is setting millions of contraceptives, but the privileged people are making it practically impossible to deliver them to the consumer. "They are sacrificing the needs of the people because of rules," Mrs. DeLa Vega said.

For centuries, the manifest destiny of woman has been motherhood. She has been brainwashed into feeling guilty if she did not want all those pregnancies "and the result has been generations of women with feelings of guilt."

What is needed in a family planning program is a place where women can talk about their feelings, "a place where they can share their gripes, needs and hopes. A place where we can teach them to become masters of their own destiny," Mrs. DeLa Vega said.

The Juarez clinic is answering this need. "The experience of encounter has brought the realization that they are not alone in their wants," the family planner added.

To explain the effects of the clinic, Mrs. DeLa Vega outlined one woman's case. Maurine, with above-average intelligence, was born in the barrio. Her father left her mother and 13 children when she was three years old. At the age of 12, her mother died of tuberculosis, and she was sold by relatives to be a farm girl.

At the age of 15, Maurine ran away with a man, 38. She went to the clinic when she was 36 and already had 10 children. After inquiring about the cost of a tubal ligation, she explained she had no money, but would clean the clinic every day to pay for the sterilization.

The woman today is education director for the clinic and gives programs in schools. "She has been converted into a true promoter of family planning," Mrs. DeLa Vega said.

Recalling one humorous incident with the clinic, Mrs. DeLa Vega explained her daughter works with children in the barrio, and one day a woman with several children approached her and asked the the daughter if she would like to have some of her children.

Mrs. DeLa Vega's daughter explained to the woman she did not need to have children if she did not want them, that she could have her tubes tied, and gave the address of her mother's clinic.

The next day this woman walked into the clinic and asked "for the woman who would tie her legs so she would not have any more children," Mrs. DeLa Vega said, laughing. "The woman was relieved to hear it was her tubes and not her legs."

People in northern Mexico are more liberal about the clinics and family planning than those in the south, and the Catholic churches have not given them any problems.

Mrs. DeLa Vega has two brothers who are priests, and she is friends with the Catholic bishop.

Recalling a telephone conversation, Mrs. DeLa Vega said the bishop called one day and said he had heard she was doing some type of work in Juarez, and he was curious about it. Her first reply was that it was "charity work." When the bishop asked for an explanation, she listed the various services the clinic offered, including the sterilization surgery.

"But, that is mutilation," the bishop said. Mrs. DeLa Vega agreed that it is for a woman who wants to have more children, or for those who feel that the only purpose of women is to have children. But, the others should be given the right to control their lives. After explaining her view, the bishop agreed, she said.

When the clinic first opened, people whom the women felt might criticize it was asked to help with it. "We could not afford criticism," the family planner explained. "If you get the people in touch with the problem, then they won't criticize it."

The clinic receives no monetary help from the government. Money to keep it open comes from selling old clothes donated to them, having bazaars, selling food at a county fair and sponsoring parties where people are charged for admittance.

"My husband asked if I didn't feel bad about charging people to enter my house for a party," she said, laughing. "I said, 'No. If they want to come, they can pay the cost of one operation, which is $20 per person.'"

The success with the first clinic has resulted in a second one to be opened soon, which also will include facilities for delivering babies.

During the PBPPI business session, the Margaret Sanger award, the highest given to any person for work in family planning, was presented to Mary Schmidt and Dr. Viola Coleman.

Dr. F. Keith Oehlschlager, chairman of the medical committee, was recognized for his work with the first Silver Stirrup.

When television food expert cooks, she means business

NEW YORK (AP) — When Ann Zehauskos cooks, she means business.

Three turkeys in the oven, a vat of cranberries bubbling away on the stove and two dozen beautiful yams waiting on the dining room table.

Thanksgiving dinner this early in the fall? No stranger than what she was doing last winter—putting up batches of strawberry jam in 19-century jelly jars and sealing them with paraffin.

Who would make Thanksgiving dinner or strawberry preserves so out of season? Ann Zehauskos, whose mouth-watering concoctions are used in television commercials and shows.

The holiday feast preparations were for a cranberry commercial and the strawberry jam was part of the preparation for "The Best of Families," the new dramatic series produced by CTW, showing on public television this fall.

The series, a social history, is set in New York City in the last two decades of the 19th century. And Ms. Zehauskos was responsible for all of the food in the production.

It ranges from soup-bone scraps for a poor Irish family in their tenement flat to an elaborate meal for 24 in the opulent town house of a Fifth Avenue society family of that era.

For the series she relied heavily on a book called "Eating and Drinking Habits of New York City from 1780 to the Present Time," plus cookbooks from just before the turn of the century.

"I needed to know how families on three different economic levels ate in the 1880s and 1900s," Ms. Zehauskos explains. "The upper class Wheelers? Probably lamb chops. The middle class Baldwins? Lamb roast. The poor, working class Raffertys, who had so many more mouths to feed? They had to create meals from leftover meats attached to the bones.

"Once I've determined what's to be served," she adds, "I go ahead and shop. And that's not always as simple as you might think."

If a client needs tangerines in January, she knows which food broker can produce them from Australia on two weeks' notice. Peaches in January? A source in Chile can come up with them.

Ingredients in hand, she goes home to her renovated 1884 town house on New York's Upper West Side, where she prepares the food.

"Remember," she says, "this house was built in the era when the kitchen was tended by servants who weren't allowed the luxury of complaining. Kitchens were usually small. My kitchen is a galley, only 9 feet long but proof that what's most important is good planning and efficient design. All the space in the world won't work unless it's laid out properly."

A home economist, Ms. Zahauskos came to New York against the advice of friends and relatives in Kingston, Pa. In three weeks she found her first free-lance assignment as assistant to a home economist who prepared food for magazine photography.

Later she won over 15 other candidates the responsibility for commercials on the "Sealtest Big Top," one of television's early extravaganzas. Since then, she's been guiding photographers, art directors and producers as a free-lance — what?

"There's really no one word for what I do," she says. "On the set of "The Best of Families," for example, the people who didn't call me Ann just referred to me as 'the food lady.'"

On every job she has to do some research, on the kinds of food that should be prepared and the etiquette involved.

"I've got an enormous collection of cookbooks — actually about 2,000," she says. "Everyone I know brings me cookbooks from estate sales, auctions, country bookshops. Friends bring me old cookbooks they've found when neighbors are cleaning out their houses. Of course, I can't resist bookshops, especially the ones that sell used books. They're a treasure chest."

Because there are so many takes on a television set, Ms. Zehauskos has to be prepared to bring back that turkey or jelly roll or ice cream cone, looking its best, as many times as necessary.

HERE'S WHAT SOME SATISFIED PATRONS HAVE TO SAY:

"Since beginning the Pat Walker program, I have lost 35 pounds and 51½ inches. I feel great and I have more energy than I've had in years. I must say that I enjoy Pat Walker's to the fullest extent for many reasons. Their kindness is way beyond words. You will have to come and be one of us to really know what all it can do for your body like it did for mine."

Mrs. Newton Borth

"'You are going to look so good in a size 9 or 10.' That's what my consultant said as I was leaving Pat Walker's after my free demonstration and figure analysis. I remember smiling to myself then, but now I can't help smiling because I'm actually wearing size 10 dresses and my newest pant suit is an 8.

Best of all, my husband is just as pleased as I am, in fact he is my most enthusiastic supporter. With over 30 pounds gone, 42 inches slimmer, and still losing, who wouldn't be pleased? I wouldn't hesitate to recommend Pat Walker's to anyone with a weight or figure problem."

Sincerely,
D'Loris Evans

"P.S.: Now I'm counseling at Pat Walker's. It's exciting for me to work with other patrons because I know how great they will feel when they see the same results I did."

"If you've tried to lose weight but haven't been successful, you haven't tried Pat Walker's Figure Salon. It was the greatest way for me to lose weight, to firm and tone and get properly proportioned as you lose inches in the right places—and you will really look forward to each treatment. You learn to relax. You feel each time how tension leaves you. I have been a patron of Pat Walker's for some time now and truly feel that this was the BEST INVESTMENT I EVER MADE."

Henrietta Boyer

Ms. Mildred Huseman before treatment.

Ms. Mildred Huseman's story:

"'A nice dressy dress', I said to the saleslady. She looked me over and said 'Well, let's see if we have anything to fit you!' Hurt? Yes, I was hurt. The truth was the saleslady was right. I was very overweight and unhappy about my appearance. My clothes did not look good on me and I never felt pretty.

Then I discovered Pat Walker's.

I have lost 47 pounds and 60¼ inches and I'm not through yet.

I enjoy buying clothes now, I get outside to do yard work, our family goes boating, my husband and I have joined a square dance club. I am enjoying life. Thank you Pat Walker's."

DEAR ABBY

U.S. lags behind world

BY ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am boiling mad and need to let off some steam, so you're elected.

When I start thinking about that metric system they (whoever "they" are) want to put over on us Americans, I get so mad I can hardly contain myself.

It will cost millions of dollars to change textbooks and other publications, not to mention highway signs!

Our system was good enough for our forefathers and it's good enough for me. If our neighboring countries don't like us to be different from them, let THEM change their system!

It's too hard for us older people to change. I am 82, and proud of it.—MAD IN ALABAMA

DEAR MAD: Sorry old-timer, but the United States is the ONLY major nation in the world still clinging to pounds, inches, gallons and acres. The whole world is adopting the metric system of weights and measures. And the benefits to this country of promoting an "international language of measurements" are too numerous to detail here.

DEAR ABBY: How do you tell a 60-year-old sister that stretch pants are not for her?

My sister is 5 feet 2 and weighs about 150 pounds. She carries most of her weight in her behind, and she also has a protruding stomach.

She always wears stretch pants, and people laugh at her behind her back. But nobody will tell her how unbecoming those pants are.

Why do clothing manufacturers make stretch pants in such large sizes?—SIS

DEAR SIS: Manufacturers will make anything they think will sell. Tell your sister she's stretching things too far, and maybe she'll snap back into something more appropriate for the shape she's in.

DEAR ABBY: Recently my husband and I attended a wedding. We sent the newlyweds a sterling silver candle snuffer for a gift. I just received a note from the bride, thanking us for the "darling little gravy dipper!"

I was stunned when I read it. Should I call the bride and tell her? I'm sure she'd be very much embarrassed if she had guests for dinner and used the candle snuffer to ladle gravy.—SHOCKED

DEAR SHOCKED: If you really fear that she will use the candle snuffer as a gravy ladle, call her and tip her off.

DEAR ABBY: Apropos complaints from wives and other relatives who are obliged to listen to stories told by some of us oldsters, may I come to the defense of some of my fellow storytellers with the following:

I once heard a very entertaining gentleman who was up in years say, "Don't stop me if you've heard this one. There is no reason why a good story should not be enjoyed more than once. Imagine how little good music there would be in the world if, for example, a conductor refused to play Beethoven, Tchaikovsky or Mozart because his audience had probably heard it before."—GRAMPS

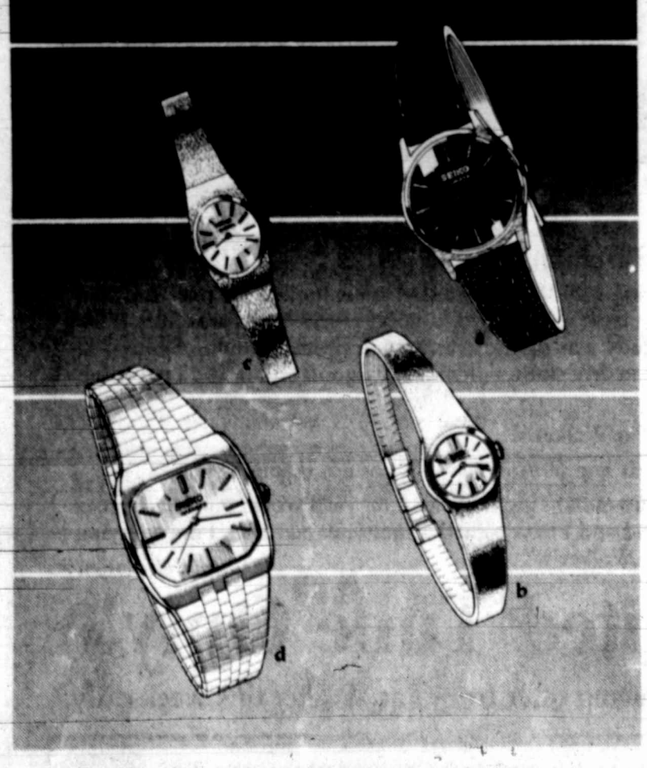

DEAR GRAMPS: Beautiful! Play it again.

AT WIT'S END

Women over 35 enter college with work excuses in hand

By ERMA BOMBECK

When it comes to homework, educators have heard every excuse in the book.

"My mother wrapped the garbage in it."

"I put it in the family Bible to hold my place and forgot to take it out."

"My little brother peed on it."

The excuses often showed more imagination than the assignments turned in and invariably involved a third party who was totally responsible for their deficiency.

This fall, 850,000 women over 35 are returning to the classrooms as students. They're not entering the academic world empty-handed. Thanks to their children, they have a couple of years' supply of excuses. Only a few words have to be changed to get them off the hook.

"I was going to do my homework last night, but my husband put me to bed early."

"My paper was typed neatly and ready to turn in when my brother spiled his martini all over it at the breakfast table."

"I had every intention of going to the library, but I couldn't find my car keys."

"My children were hanging on the phone all night and I couldn't call my best friend and get the assignment."

"I didn't feel well. I went into false labor 10 months early."

"I picked the same topic every other person in the class picked...The Evolution of Storm Doors in the Ming Dynasty... and all the books were out."

"Our dog is being paper trained...you may have noticed."

"I was absent yesterday because I was waiting for the washer repairman and didn't know you had made an assignment."

"Do you think just because this assignment is done in yellow crayon, my kids did it for me?"

"My husband wrapped his gum in it."

As the child of one of my best friends told his Mother at breakfast one morning, "You just tell your teacher we got home late last night and we felt your sleep was more important to your health than that stupid assignment."

That's easy for him to say. He's not a 58-year-old second-semester Freshman.

Royalty submits recipe

Shortly after she had married Prince Rainier and was living in the Palais de Monaco, the Serene Highness Princess Grace (formerly movie actress Grace Kelly of Philadelphia and Hollywood) contributed a recipe to a charity cookbook published in California.

It is for a Tourte de Bletfes.

SAVORY PEAR PIE A LA MONACO

Pastry for a 2-crust 10-inch pie (see Note below)
6 large ripe Bartlett pears, about 2¼ pounds
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 large onion, finely chopped (1 cup)
½ cup long-grain rice, cooked according to package directions (1¾ cups loosely packed)
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
3 large eggs, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Prepare pastry.

Peel, halve and core the pears. In a steamer with a solid-bottom insert pan, without adding any liquid to the insert pan, steam the pears until they are very soft and juicy; mash fine with the juice. There should be about 4 cups. Set aside to cool.

In a large skillet gently cook the onion in the oil until golden; stir in the pear, rice, Parmesan, eggs, salt and pepper.

Line a 10-inch pie plate with half the pastry; add the pear filling; add top pastry, turning edge under and sealing well. Cut vents in the top pastry. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until golden brown — 1 hour. Cool partially on a wire rack and serve warm.

Makes 10 servings.

The Jaycee-ettes of Midland will have their fifth annual Starving Artist Sale Thursday through Saturday in the Dellwood Plaza Mall. The Mall will be kept open late the first two days of the sale for the convenience of shoppers.

Artists from throughout the Southwestern United States will be displaying their works, which will include oils, watercolors, charcoal and acrylic paintings and a variety of crafts and jewelry.

The Jaycee-ettes also will sponsor a food booth and a gift wrapping booth.

Proceeds will be used for various Jaycee-ette community projects, such as Teen Challenge, Permian Center for Mental Health and Mental Retardation, Opportunity Center and an adopted family.

Shoppers will be urged to register for free Thanksgiving turkeys, which will be awarded each day of the sale.

Recipes corrected

Corrections on the following recipes printed in the Recipes '77 cookbook or in subsequent Thursday editions are:

The Chocolate Buttermilk Pie recipe by Mrs. Marjorie Dodson should have 2 tablespoons of cocoa; Date Pecan Cake by Mrs. Omer T. Cook should have 2/3 cup of honey; and the Yum Yum Cake by Paula Ann Schigut should have 2 cups of crushed pineapple, undrained.

The Five Minute Devil's Food Cake by Ruth Boyd should read, "Mix sugar and oleo."

The drinking habit of America has changed, and wine producers and distributors are profiting from it. In the past year, a wine magazine estimated that the demand for premium (wines costing over $2.00) table wines has increased 20%. This search for better wines by Americans has grown faster than the supply, especially in the finer white California wines. If you have a favorite in this group, better stock up before it is all gone

Stock up on your favorite wines and liquors from IMPERIAL LIQUORS, 3209 W. Wadley, 694-4256 for the holiday season ahead. Wine is the perfect accompaniment to a festive holiday meal and is also an ideal hostess or Christmas gift. And at the home of the friendly moustache, you'll find and outstanding array of imported and domestic wines for your selection in a wide range of prices. Open: 10-9 Mon-Sat.

WINE WISDOM:
Dry riesling wine is good to drink with meals rather than with cheese and crackers.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) The situation with your mate or love one can be confusing, but if you keep quiet, all clears up soon. Spend time updating wardrobe.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Use good practical sense at home and get good results. Straighten out a troublesome situation. Pay bills on time and avoid penalties.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get into the personal interests you like the most early in the day, but do not give in to any temptations later. Plan future activities so that you gain the most from them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Meet with a good adviser confidentially and discuss your problems with this person. Wait for a better time for handling one matter in particular.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Look to a good friend to give you advice that will help you gain some important aim. Avoid an untrustworthy person or you could lose a good deal. Be more circumspect yourself, also.

SAGGITARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Find the best way to gain the favor of bigwigs who can help you, especially where public matters are concerned.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get out of that dull routine and look into new opportunities that are all around you. Get your credit affairs handled properly.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Show that you know what partners expect of you and be sure to cooperate with them more. A situation arises that you do not comprehend very well, but deep thought shows you how to handle it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take time early in the day for working out a new plan of action that will give you greater abundance in the future. Be kind to others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can gain the favor of friend who has been acting rather strangely of late. Allow time for attending a social affair.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Early in the day is best time to take care of civic duties. Later you'll have time to engage in social activities with congenials.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You want to expand in your business activities and this is a good day to do just that. A higher-up can be most helpful to you now.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Know what is expected of you by associates and then strive to be more cooperative than you have in the past. Be alert for an opportunity.

PTA recording views of television violence

By STEVE CASEY
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The preamble to the code of the National Association of Broadcasters states that:

"The viewer also has a responsibility to help broadcasters serve the public. All viewers should make their criticisms and positive suggestions about programming and advertising known to the broadcast licensee."

Goodness me. A clarion call for citizen participation in television programming if ever one there was.

No less potent a force than the six-million member PTA has answered that call, much to the consternation of some of those same broadcasters who drew up the code.

PTA members and nonmembers alike are being recruited to sit in front of the telly and tally incidents and kinds of violence.

The tallies will become part of the record being compiled nationwide and, if the national organization finds that television has not significantly improved, may lead to a national boycott of programs, networks or advertisers.

The television establishment calls such efforts censorship. Further, it alleges, the PTA and other pressure groups are too late with their concerns about violence, for the networks themselves are moving, from what they insist upon calling, "hard action" programs.

"I won't accept the word censorship," said Betty Cayot, state PTA coordinator for the monitoring project in California.

"The PTA isn't in favor of censorship and won't participate in it."

Nationally, she said, the PTA studied television, held a series of eight hearings into television violence and its TV commission made findings which cited an overabundance of gratuitous violence.

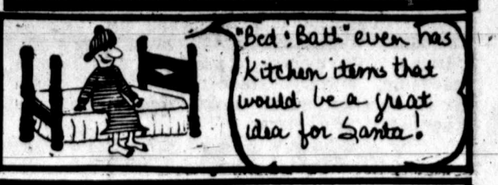

"We're happy to admit that any of these (violent) things are a necessary part of a dramatic story," said Cayot. But, she also observed she has "lived a lot of years" and has never seen real-life violence the likes of which she can find on her television screen on any given day.

An endless stream of violence, the PTA monitors said, warps the perspective of viewers — presenting adults a paranoid view of the world, and teaching children who cannot differentiate between fact and fancy that violence is the way to resolve human conflicts.

NEEDLEPLAY

Stitchery questions reviewed

By ERICA WILSON

The controversies about needlepoint live on. Scores of readers have asked me to repeat my column of a couple of years ago on that very subject. It touched upon some of the "touchier" questions concerning the craft—and attempted some answers. Here it is:

ON MEN AND NEEDLEPOINT: People don't seem to blink an eye when a man takes a spatula in hand, but look out if he dares to pick up needle, thread and canvas. Fortunately, there are increasing numbers of men who are putting down their male defenses and picking up needlework. At recent stitchery shows all over the country, some of the most impressive exhibits were done by men.

When I recently got into a taxi outside my apartment, I received one of the nicest compliments of my career. The cab driver leaned back, slid open his bulletproof partition, and said, "You're Erica, aren't you?" He then went on to tell me how he'd joined his wife one day to watch my TV show and, because of it, had been intrigued enough to take needle in hand. Now, he said, when he pulls over to wait for a fare, instead of snoozing he's stitching.

ON EXPERIMENTATION AND NEEDLEPOINT: Moving right along with the times, the craft of needlepoint has undergone many changes. The new plastic canvas and the dozens of great new needlepoint stiches have prompted a few letters that protest: "My grandmother taught me petit point when I was 6, and to me it's still the only true needlepoint form."

Not so. The exciting thing about these new areas of the craft is that the diehards don't have to go along with them if they choose not to. But there's some intriguing experimentation in store for those who want it.

A few years ago, I created "crewelpoint" (or at least I thought I did—till I came across an 18th century sample of it at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston)—a combination of crewel and needlepoint. It has the rich, overall covering of needlepoint, but with raised crewel stitches on the canvas, giving it a three-dimensional effect. In the accompanying illustration is a "crewelpoint" stitch called "Fishbone stitch."

For your next project, why don't you try it on plastic canvas?

ON THE LAW AND NEEDLEPOINT: When you buy a needlepoint kit you do not buy the right to copy the design for sale. Once a copy is made, it is in clear violation of the law. However, a single copy for a friend or relative would not put you behind bars.

ON CREATIVITY AND NEEDLEPOINT: A question that keeps popping up in letters is: "Erica, do you think working on pre-designed canvas is uncreative?" I've been asked that for years—in my classes, at seminars, on tour—and my answer is always an emphatic "No!" When you cook a wonderful dish, is it any less creative because it isn't your recipe?

Some find that working from pre-designed canvas gives them every bit of creative satisfaction they need. Others start with pre-designed canvas and move on to their own designs after they've gained experience. Still others create their own designs from the very beginning. But when it comes down to it, whoever does whatever in needlepoint, it's all part of the creative process.

Computer, fork hit diet world

By MARIAN BURROS
The Washington Post

The gimmicks to help people diet are legion: operations to bypass the intestines or to wire jaws shut; the grapefruit diet; the Mayo clinic diet. There are high-fat, low-carbohydrate, high-protein diets. Fasting. Drinking. Eating all you want. And, of course, the latest fad — liquid protein.

Actually, it is not the latest. There are two much newer developments in dieting equipment; One is a computer; the other a fork.

Not just an ordinary fork, but a fork guaranteed to make it impossible to pick up any food. Advertised as "a new twist in wight control," the silverplated, $6.95 number is available with directions on its other uses: It can be bent into a napkin or scarf ring; or shaped to wear as a choker. The tines can be turned up to make it a wall hook. In other words, it can be used for many things, but not for eating.

It is, according to the brochure that accompanies it, "...designed to not pick up food. We could have offered you a handle," the copy goes on to say "but that would be silly."

If you want to spend a great deal more, you can purchase a minicomputer, part of the Countdown Permanent Weight Loss System. The complete package also contains a guidebook, two nine-week bite charts, a progress chart, a grease pencil and the battery to operate the computer. It costs $24.95 and is described by its manufacturer, Teledyne Water Pik, as "an electronic learning device that monitors the amount of food you consume and the speed of your food intake."

The concept behind the computer is actually quite sound. If tries to deal with how you eat rather than what you eat.

GEM WISE

HOW MUCH IS A DIAMOND?

Because we have a solid background in gemological training, we are American Gem Society jewelers, we welcome questions that test our knowledge. A typical query—often asked—is what price should I pay for a diamond? Our typical rejoinder is how much should you pay for a dress?

Dresses can be snatched from the rack in the five-and-dime and supermarket for a very few dollars. Or they can be hand sewn, stitch by stitch in the salons of Paris and cost several hundred dollars. We saw an ad in a tabloid weekly recently, offering mail order diamonds for $15 down and $15 a month. Richard Burton, at the other end of the scale, is reported to have paid over $1 million for diamonds for Elizabeth Taylor. We don't stock either variety.

Our point is that diamonds are available at all prices. There are factors which give each individual diamond its price. Gem diamonds are not as alike as peas in a pod, they are as diverse as fingerprints. Nature doesn't mass produce this most popular of gemstones. Far from it.

An excellent way to arrive at the cost of a diamond is to consider four factors. These are its CUT, its COLOR, its CLARITY and its CARAT WEIGHT. The popular press usually stresses the final factor. (So and so paid such and such for a forty-carat diamond.) But this is just one of four important consideraions. Did the diamond cutter do his best work? Does the stone's body color approach crystal clarity (very rare) or does it show a yellowish tinge? Are interior inclusions visable to the naked eye?

Come in and let us fully explain the Four C's of evaluating a diamond.

THE VISIBLE WOMAN

Wives to benefit from credit act

By JANET LOWE
Copley News Service

Like thousands of other married couples, my husband and I this summer received, along with our credit account statements, innocent-looking slips, which turn out to have great significance to wives.

In compliance with the requirements of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act, couples are being asked if they wish to have the wife's name listed side-by-side with the husband's on the credit records.

To many women, and to families as well, this little slip of paper, which can easily be overlooked among the offers for luggage and electric blankets is a great boon.

Yet what is good news to many women can be a two-edged sword for others.

Those women who benefit most from the provision to list husband and wife in each name on accounts are those who have never held jobs, or who have never established their own credit history. Some women are not independently credit worthy as a marriage partner.

The new way of listing is especially helpful in case a woman becomes divorced, separated, widowed, or in case the husband is struck by disability or long-term unemployment. Women who have managed the family finances for years see this move as a right as much as it is a privilege.

The other edge of the sword, and this one has as much cutting power as the other, is that with rights go responsibilities.

If the husband has a tarnished credit record, you may inherit that as well. You're just as likely to reap the negative aspects of a credit history as you are the positive ones, and this is only logical. If you are to be listed on the accounts, you are expected to share the responsibility of seeing that the bills are paid. Even if you are not at fault, the law may hold you responsible for unpaid bills.

This warning is doubly important to women living in the community property states of Arizona, California, Idaho, Louisiana, Nevada, New Mexico, Texas and Washington. You have a "community" of assets in these states; you also have a community of liabilities.

Even here, it is possible for a woman to have separate property and to establish a separate credit record, but since the rather complex laws vary from state to state, residents of community property states are encouraged to ask their state's Commission for Women which laws particularly apply to them.

There are alternatives. The Equal Credit Opportunity Act has guaranteed, among other things, that women who hold jobs and have established a credit record can be credit worthy on their own, regardless of marital status or change of marital status, and regardless of the credit history of their husbands. Naturally such women will have to comply with the same requirements that any applicant for credit would have to meet...a steady source of income, a good record of payment...but if they've met these, women will be given equal access to our expanding credit system.

Even before the slips began arriving, my husband and I had chosen an alternative that suited us. Since I'd already had credit on my own before our marriage, we decided that I should keep a credit record of my own. Though we share certain accounts which both of us use, he has some accounts of his own, for which he is responsible, and I have accounts of my own, for which I am responsible. Because we both had been married and divorced before, and knew some of the difficulties of unmarried women with the credit establishment, we were particularly interested in maintaining some of my financial independence.

This is a practice that is also recommended by the Credit Corp. of America, a nationwide lender, in their booklet, "Women: To Your Credit," which explains in detail the provisions of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act, and offers practical advice for married, single, divorced or separated women. The free booklet can be obtained by contacting a nearby office of Commercial Credit, or by writing to the director of Public Relations, Commercial Credit Corp., 300 St. Paul Place, Baltimore, Md. 21202.

'Punk chic' becomes fashionable, but not for long

By NINA S. HYDE
The Washington Post

"For me, punk is dead. Once it becomes fashion it is no longer punk."
—Designer Karl Lagerfeld

PARIS — It was planned as a "nice party for all Karl Lagerfeld's friends," explained Count Xavier de Castella, who was dressed in a fluorescent orange-and-silver Star Wars getup. He was leaning over the catwalk above the black-walled, barren warehouse lit only by criss-crossing green laser beams. Below, more than 3,000 of the "friends," all dressed in black as required on the invitations, gyrated to blasting electronic music.

The scene was La Main Bleue, Europe's biggest disco located in Montreuil on the edge of Paris, an area where many African workers live.

Castella, a wealthy architecture student from Belgium, and Jacques de Bascher de Beaumarchais, a film-maker and close friend of designer Lagerfeld, had sent 3,200 engraved invitations to fashion designers, models and groupies, the leather crowd and the punks. "I know the leaders of all groups," insisted Bascher, in a Star Wars suit to match that of his co-host. "They are all my friends and all so intelligent and nice, so why shouldn't they get along?"

Lagerfeld was there. So were Paloma Picasso, Phillippe Niarchos and a batch of the "nouvelle vague" (not yet established) designers. The rest were a costumed mix heavy on black leather jackets and leather hats. There were a handful of black-robed "monks," a man in a black cape and black jockey shorts, a girl in black fishnet tights and stiletto heels.

Meanwhile, Bernard Ozer, vice president of a huge American fashion buying service, also surveyed the scene. "I didn't come to judge, only to view," he said, adding that from such extremes a designer might find an idea for a new collar or a color. "It may well affect the New York designers," he said thoughtfully. "But I hope not."

If anyone thinks the term "punk chic" contradicts itself, he's underestimating this fashion capital's genius for importing a trend, using it to amuse itself and then selling it back to the world at a higher price.

The garbage-can liners, ripped T-shirts and swastika appliques that surfaced a year ago among disgruntled London youths have been taken over here by social and fashion groupies who have made punks their heroes as well as their fashion inspiration and favorite dinner guests.

Chic is the last word you would have used to describe the London punks. In Paris this year, "punk chic" is the last word, its appeal inherent in the contradiction. It is the fashion establishment twitting itself while it quietly co-opts any potential threat.

Last week, during the fashion marathon in Paris, punks were guests at the Kenzo spring fashion presentation for JAP and his party on a "pirate ship" on the Seine afterward. They were in the black-garbed mob at La Main Bleue. And the following night, punks, including Paris "punk queen" Edwige, were among the social mix at a party Michel Klein gave for his pals after his fashion collection.

Last week, too, a real estate auction of a small piece of property in the Savoie was turned into a media event with the help of punks who interrupted the staged affair with minor explosives and hurled red paint at Paris personality Fred Forrest, who had alerted the press beforehand. The result was a total sale and a brouhaha in the lobby of the Hotel Crillon where Henry Kissinger was staying upstairs.

One estimates that there are as few as 1,000 real punks in Paris, though thousands more are said to read the punk paper "Facade," now in its fifth issue. A punk shop called Survival is about to open.

But for the French, the real anti-establishment punks are lumped with what the French call "Rockers," petty thugs who wear black leather jackets, and the 400,000 motorcycle owners and their companions who wear such jackets as simply the most practical garb for such endeavors.

Appearing more publicly by small degrees is the leather crowd of homosexuals, who till recently have stayed totally underground.

Once harassed by the French police, the "Leathers" have recently opened their own bar called "Le Bronx."

On the fashion runway, punk is as diverse as it is on the streets. At Claude Montana, the show began with 12 models marching on stage to loud band music in black leather jackets and leather caps and pants. Silvery chains looped through epaulets caused some viewers to assign a Nazi inspiration to the look.

"To me those ideas are crazy," said Montana, the 29-year-old nouveli vague designer who has been designing in leather for 2 1-2 years as well as designing very soft clothes for Ferrer y Sentis. "These clothes have nothing to do with politics and the music wasn't German, as some were saying. I didn't want to make dresses in leather but rather jackets that one could wear for 10 years. The hat and the chains were just another way of showing this strong look, but not a political statement." (Neiman Marcus has bought Montana's leather collection for Ideal Cuir).

At Thierry Mugler, black leather and safety-pin jewelry showed up on the runway worn by cool, blonde Edwige Gruss.

Mugler says he is not a punk but finds the punks very romantic. "They are looking for another way. They refuse what exists and therefore they dream of an escape. For me they are sweet, young and nice. So that gave me the idea to design those things."

The French are not the first to exploit punk fashion. British fashion designer Zandra Rhodes incorporated rips and tears and safety pins into $600 silk crepe dresses a season back. Stores like Sakowitz in Houston sold them "rather well," according to Robert Sakowitz, the store owner.

What's next for punk? Gruss, 20, the tall, lithe blonde, leaned against the hood of her friend Michel Klein's Cadillac outside the disco, Nashville, where Klein had invited his friends to celebrate.

Author of 'Sensuous Woman' turns focus onto total love

By DIANE CLARK
Copley News Service

Joan Terry Garrity, the woman who flew to fame on her initial "J" in 1970 as the author of "The Sensuous Woman," is back with a new book, "Total Loving."

This time, Garrity has turned her attention from increasing sexual sensitivities by jumping into bathtubs of Jell-O and stroking fur to the elements of long-lasting total love.

Sensuality and sex are still an important part of lifetime love — but they are only a part — is J's new message.

Recognizing "Mr. Right" and going through all life's trials — financial worries, child-rearing, infidelity and the golden years — as a happily married couple is the focus of her new research.

Doing the research on her latest book, more than four years in the making, opened her eyes in a lot of respects, Garrity confesses.

For one, after examining the pros and cons of Mr. Right, Garrity broke her three-year engagement to her fiance with whom she'd been going with for five years.

She realized she had been unconsciously delaying marriage for superficial reasons when she began drawing up a list of personality traits, "Is he right for me?" for the book. Her fiance flunked.

"In all fairness I was not right for him either. Our marriage would have been a disaster," she concluded.

This latest broken engagement followed a string of others. Garrity, now 37, has never been married but has been engaged so many times she has lost track of them... "about 10, I guess. I'd have to go back and count."

"I loved getting engaged. But when it came to marriage I always chickened out. I just wasn't ready for it."

Garrity, who calls herself a "late bloomer," said she now is ready for marriage and wants to step into it. But, then again, not untll it's with Mr. Right.

"I'm now going through a courtship pattern that's slow and easy. I'm seeing three men right now," she said.

As much as she would like to get married after interviewing several happily married couples for "Total Loving," she insists that no one should rush into it.

"Women panic and think that they're not going to get married unless they do it right now.

"There are a lot of divorces, but it's not marriage that's at fault. It's the people who choose marriage who aren't ready for it and can't make it work. Too many women get married because they're enamored with the idea of marriage or they're terrified of being alone," Garrity said.

She stressed also that too many women are calmly waiting for prince charming to come along and make them happy ever after.

"A woman must do things for herself. Women expect someone else to make them happy, but that won't work.

"If an affair is right, then that's what you should do. If marriage is might, that's what you should do at the particular stage you're in.

"But, whatever you do, be independent. Don't marry because it's a couples' world and all your friends are getting married," Garrity urged.

She pointed out that Helen Gurley Brown, the editor of Cosmopolitan, didn't marry until 37, and Nancy Kissinger was two weeks shy of 40 when she married.

Garrity explained that when she was writing "The Sensuous Woman" she had been under the impression that it was a matter of luck for the right man to come along.

Nevada's Yoakum fights for wildlife

By BOB WELKOS

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The tiny Warm Springs pupfish has a friend in James Yoakum. So do the South American vicuna that climbs the jagged cliffs of the Peruvian Andes and the skitterish pronghorn antelope that darts across the sagebrush-covered hills of the American West.

But friends can only do so much.

While Yoakum has had success in saving the pupfish and the vicuna, a relative of the llama, from "extirpation" or extermination by man. he is clearly worried about the survival of several species of wildlife in this sparsely populated state.

"We are winning certain battles but losing the over-all war," Yoakum said. "Wildlife habitat is, in general, declining in this state."

Yoakum, a wildlife biologist who has headed the U.S. Bureau of Land Management's wildlife habitat management program in Nevada for 16 years, makes this startling statement:

"Within the last 100 years, six to 10 species of fish have been extirpated or wiped out by man, 50 per cent of which were in Nevada. Most of it occurred down in the Las Vegas area within the last half-century."

Yoakum, the first wildlife biologist hired by the BLM, is credited with helping save the Warm Springs pupfish, 90 per cent of its number existing in a bathtub-size pool on federal land in southern Nevada.

At one point, Yoakum said, the pupfish population was down to only 200. Yoakum and the BLM set about building two more bathtub-size pools, fenced off the area and now there are about 400 Warm Springs pupfish.

Yoakum, who lives in Verdi just west of here, works in Reno but he's on the road "50 per cent of the time." His fourth-floor office is adorned with pictures of antelope — an animal for which he has had a special passion.

Once it was estimated there were 40 million to 60 million pronghorn antelope in North America, Yoakum said. By 1915, there were about 10,000. Commercial hunters slaughtered the herds, but game management has increased the population to about 500,000 today, he said.

Yoakum said controlled hunting and a conservation-minded public was responsible for the increase in the pronghorn population.

Yoakum's work in Nevada led him to South America in 1968, where he was sent to help the threatened vicuna, prized for its fur.

"In 1968, they were doomed to extirpation," Yoakum said. "There were less than 10,000 left."

He said that the vicuna, a member of the camel family, was the "most expensive large wild animal in the world" at the time. Two vicuna furs could provide an Indian with a year's income.

With Yoakum's help, the Peruvian government saved the vicuna. Several countries ordered bans on the importation of vicuna fur, and the population has increased by 500 per cent.

When he isn't traveling through Nevada, Yoakum vacations in Mexico or Canada. He's built a log cabin in the Canadian wilderness and lives there a month each year.

Students set split record

DARIEN, Conn. (AP) — It took about 100 high school students from Greenwich and Darien just 86 seconds to consume a 100-foot-long banana split Halloween night.

The ice cream — 178 scoops of chocolate, 174 scoops of strawberry and 173 scoops of vanilla — filled a long metal trough lined with plastic wrap and was covered with various sauces, heaps of cherries and mounds of whipped cream.

The young people devoured the giant dessert in what they hope was record time by scooping it up with their hands as they knelt next to the trough in a church parking lot.

They hope their effort will earn them a world record.

No category for banana split eating is listed in the Guinness Book of World Records.

SHOULD U.S. ADOPT CANADIAN PLAN?

Some major banks are advocating that mortgage lending policies be changed to emulate those in Canada. They claim that the Canadian policies make it possilbe to eliminate periodic feast and famine cycles which bring periods of shortages and surpluses of mortgage money in this country.

In essence, the Canadian plan calls for issuance of five year mortgages at a fixed interest rate with amortization based on 20-30 years. At the end of the five-year term, the home owner can either pay the balance in full with no penalty, or he can renegotiate a new loan at the rate of interest in effect at that particular time. The new rate will be payable for an additional five year term subject to another renegotiation at rates then if effect. This way, lenders don't have the problem of being locked into a low rate for a long period of time as they do in this country. As a result, Canadian bankers are less hesitant to make mortgage loans, even during a recession.

Young gopher killer uses secret weapon

RAMONA, Calif. (AP) — Young Dickie Cessna has added gopher hunting to his manure sales, and the state of California wants to know his secret weapon. Dickie says he'll never tell.

State law requires pest exterminators to be licensed and pesticides to be registered if a person claims he is killing pests, said Nuell Lunde, who heads the Downey office of the state agriculture department.

"There is a $40 registration fee," said Lunde. But a thick bundle of blank license application forms has been mailed back to Lunde.

An interoffice memo of the Department of Agriculture asks, "Are we prepared to file a criminal complaint on Dickies?"

Kidco Inc., which gained national attention last spring when the state tried to tax its sales of manure, is making money on its gopher-killing work, but Dickie, the 13-year-old Kidco president, refuses to say how much.

He and his two sisters, Ne-Ni, 9, and Bette, 11, and half-sister, June Cole, 14, left the next move up to California in a test of free enterprise vs. government.

Cecil Millimer, the agriculture department's Downey field representative, drove 120 miles to Ramona to tell the young entrepreneurs they might be using a dangerous chemical.

"Us little kids don't understand all this," wrote Dickie to Lunde. "All we do is kill gophers. We think you should be getting after people with rats in their houses who don't do anything about it."

Richard Cessna formed Kidco Inc. to teach his children business methods. They refused to pay back taxes on sales of manure collected from the horse stables which Cessna manages at San Diego Country Estates.

After much publicity, the California Board of Equalization agreed to collect only on future sales.

Former Gov. Ronald Reagan commented about their enterprise and hard work on his radio broadcast. A local state senator, John Stull, told the Cessna children they could count on him in the future.

Funds available for handicapped

ODESSA — About $1.05 million of federal funds are available to buy vehicles and related equipment for the transportation of elderly and handicapped citizens, the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation has announced.

The money will be allotted only to private, non-profit agencies under the Section 16b(2) program during fiscal year 1977.

Presently, two 16b(2) vehicles are in use, one in Odessa and one in Midland. Applications for additional vehicles under previous fiscal year apportionments are being studied for Pecos and Fort Stockton.

Interested individuals or organizations can obtain information and applications for 16b(2) grants at the department's district office in Odessa. Inquiries may be directed to A. Henry Pearson, district engineer, P. O. Box 474, Odessa 79760.

New loaf planned

HOUSTON (AP) — Six Houston bakeries, where union employes are on strike, have temporarily abandoned competitive claims and will produce a new loaf called "Enriched Bread."

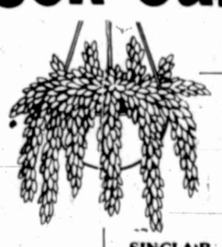

The single label represents a "unified stand" by the companies being struck by the Bakery Workers Union, Clayton Baird, president of the Texas Gulf Bakers Council, said last week.

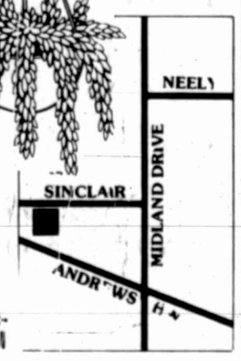

Union officials could not be reached for comment.

The Black Experience vs. College and University Admissions: "The black oriented Defender recently said in an editorial: "There is much more at stake in the controversial Bakke case than the matter of preferential admission to a professional school. Important as the case undoubtedly is, the outcome will have an impact on the framework of the struggle to bring monorities into the main stream of American life."

On the other hand, the Constitution, as the New York Times points out, "can be read to mean that public institutuions must be wholly color-blind, or it can be read to mean that past discrimination requires compensatory measures on the basis of color or ethnicity." This is the central legal question which many defenders of Bakke are trying to evade. Once it is decided that race and color can be taken into consideration to some degree and in some situations, eliminating any provision of numbers is an insufferable hypocrisy, some observers point out.

Only six blacks are involved in the admission dispute; the others are eight Chicanos and two Asian-Americans. Bakke's application has been turned down by 13 medical schools in the last three years. Bakke's suit completely disregards the fact that 36 whites with lower grades than his were admitted by the UCLA medical school. But he chose to raise no objection to them.

U.S. Rep. Yvonne B. Burke of California says the term "reverse discrimination" is a fraud. The phrase suggest that black people are discriminating against white people. Even Bakke knows better than this. On trial is not Bakke's right to admission but "the legitimateness of affirmative action anywhere that we attempt to correct inequities in our educational system and economic institutions."

Nationally there is one white physician for every 600 white persons but only one black physician for every 5,000 black persons. Thus the evident need for special admissions programs in schools, in jobs and elsewhere, believes Ms. Burke. Yet according to the Defender, "anyone who has followed the mood of the Nixon-appointed court can scarcely entertain any doubts on the direction in which the high court will move. We hope justice will be done."

Paul Harvey Speaks in Hobbs, N.M.: One of the nation's outstanding radio and news commentators declared in Hobbs recently that in spite of the headlines that give us a lot of bad news these days "this is a great time to be alive." He said that capitalism without God is no better choice than communism as a form of government. "It was the purpose of our founders that the law of the Lord should be the law of the land."

Harvey's most recurrent theme was "Self government without self-discipline won't work." He concluded with the theme that those of you who live in the great Southwest are really blessed and that "it's just a matter of a few short years" that you will have sovled the so-called energy crunch. He cited "windmill power, nuclear power, solar energy as alternate forms of energy that will soon make our problem of "shortages" a thing of the past.

Ms. Carolyn R. Payton, 52, a psychologist and director of the University Counseling Service at Howard University Washington, D.C., has been nominated by President Carter as director of the Peace Corps.
