Museum may get new funds

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

A grant by an anonymous Texas-based foundation could boost the permanent fund of the Petroleum Museum by $2.5 million if efforts to secure matching funds are successful, says Ed Rowland, museum director.

The grant could provide the museum's permanent endowment up to $250,000 a year in matching funds for new contributions over next five years.

At present, interest from the endowment provides only 1 percent of the museum's $613,000 operating budget. Museum directors and administrators hope that once the five-year challenge goal is met, interest will provide as much as one-third of the operating budget.

Historically, the museum's operating budget has come equally from self-generated funds, annual membership contributions and foundation grants.

"One-third of the budget coming from the endowment fund would allow the Petroleum Museum to designate more funds to expanding and improving exhibits," said Rowland.

The welcomed challenge grant comes at a time when the economy is at a low point, but museum expenses continue to grow, he added.

Yasser Arafat

Arafat denied U.S. visa

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has rejected Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat's application for a visa to visit the United States to address the United Nations, the State Department announced Saturday.

Secretary of State George Shultz revealed his decision in a two-page statement issued to reporters.

The PLO applied for a visa so Arafat could travel to New York to address the U.N. General Assembly on Dec. 1 when it opens its debate on the Palestine questions.

Shultz said he could not recommend granting the visa to Arafat because of the PLO's positions.

"The U.S. government has convincing evidence that PLO elements have engaged in terrorism against Americans and others," the statement said. Moreover, Arafat, as PLO chairman, "knows of, condones, and lends support to such acts," and is "an accessory to such terrorism."

When the PLO applied for the visa earlier this week, department spokesman Charles Redman said the United States would "severely scrutinize Arafat's application."

The U.S. government has been under intense domestic pressure from Jewish leaders and others to deny a visa to Arafat. Jewish groups praised the department's decision, but Arab-Americans condemned it.

Victims' advocate seeks aid with emergency fund

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A drive to establish an emergency cash fund for crime victims in Midland has been launched by a leading victims' advocate who claims the need is not being met.

"We want to let the community know we are trying to establish this fund, that we need the help," said Tedda McAnear, coordinator of the Victim-Witness Assistance Program of District Attorney Al Schorre's office. "If an older burglary victim gets a lock broken, we'd like to be able to repair or replace that lock right away on a referral from the police or sheriff's office. That way, maybe we can prevent it from happening again. That would be a primary thrust of the emergency fund."

Sexual assault victims after they seek police help almost always are in need immediately of essential items, such as clean clothes and toilet articles that often aren't available.

"We need funds for that," she said. "We have some toilet items that were donated to us, some toothbrushes, and some sweatsuits have been given to us. One of our victims was an elderly lady, and they (police) had to keep her dress for evidence. She only had one other dress, and literally had nothing else to wear. That would be the kind of thing the fund would be used for."

In another case, a woman was the victim of an abusive husband and had her utilities cut off — which may not have happened had the funds been available to pay the utility company.

The coordinator hoped to set aside some money from the program's 1989 grant from Gov. Bill Clements' office, but the grant — $44,000 — fell short even of 1988-level funding.

"I asked for $50,000," Ms. McAnear said. "But they had so many requests we didn't even get much money for incidental items, like stamps and printing."

The grant is a major portion of the program's annual budget, estimated at around $109,000. The county funds part of the program, including Ms. McAnear's salary, the city pays for gasoline and some vehicle maintenance, and private funds make up the rest.

Ms. McAnear — who says she spends much of her time writing grant applications — has asked the Junior League of Midland, Inc. for $10,000 for the fund. But any donation from any organization or individual is appreciated.

"We will take whatever we can get," she said. "We could easily spend $250 a month on emergency funding. Right now we can get the essentials taken care of, but we always have to ask for donations of everything."

Ms. McAnear also has an answer for skeptics — tax-paying skeptics — who are reluctant to donate funds to a county program.

"There are other issues that have a high priority in the county, such as roads and things like that," she said. "Victimization is way down the list. But it is still a responsibility of the community."

Schorre, who established the victim assistance program when he took office in 1985, is a staunch advocate of crime victims and supports the move to establish the distress fund, Ms. McAnear said. The prosecutor was out of town and could not be reached for comment, but another person who sees victims frequently said the fund was a "worthwhile idea."

"Anything that can help a crime victim is worth it," Sheriff Gary Painter said. "We've been too long going the other way, trying to protect the defendant.

"I think it is time we started doing something to help the victim."

Program employees and volunteers have worked with more than 400 victims, most of them women and children, since October 1. They constantly are facing new challenges, Ms. McAnear said.

"We got our first call from the fire department just the other day," she recalled. "There was a car fire, and the car had four men living in it."

"We found places for them to stay."

Even with its shoestring budget, the victim-witness program operates a 24-hour hotline — 688-1273 — that workers say has plenty of callers.

"What we desperately need are more volunteers to man our hotline," Ms. McAnear said.

Is SSC project doomed?

DALLAS (AP) — The chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee said the superconducting "super collider" project is doomed because of funding problems and opposition from the science community.

Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Michigan, told John McLaughlin on McLaughlin's weekly syndicated show "One on One" in Washington that the collider probably would be sacked by federal budget constraints.

"I think the super collider's in trouble for two reasons," said Dingell, who represents one of six states that lost a competition for the project to Texas. "The first is that you have the overall budgetary problem. The second reason is that you have most of the scientific community, outside the high-energy physics people, opposed to it.

"And quite honestly, the way the program has been set up, the consequences are that there's really very limited support outside of one particular state," he said. "I haven't said it's going to go down the drain, but it's in serious difficulty."

The U.S. Department of Energy earlier this month announced it had selected a 16,000-acre site in Ellis County, south of Dallas, for the project. The sophisticated atom smasher would be the world's largest and most powerful.

OPEC postpones meeting for Iranian response

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A new OPEC production agreement hinged Saturday on whether Iran's oil minister could persuade his government to approve it.

Iraq's oil minister, Issam Abdul Raheem Chalabi, crossed his fingers when reporters asked him to describe the prospects of the accord worked out by the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Gholamreza Aghazadeh, the Iranian official, made a quick trip to Tehran to consult with government leaders before accepting the package.

"He is still optimistic," said an Iranian delegate, who was in contact with Aghazadeh on Saturday morning. The delegate demanded anonymity.

The other oil ministers postponed resumption of their winter meeting from Saturday evening until today to give Iran time to consider the plan.

IRNA, the official Islamic Republic News Agency, reported from Tehran that Aghazadeh said the nation's response will be announced today.

The news agency quoted the minister as saying he would talk Saturday to the heads of the executive, legislative and judiciary branches of government. The report said he would discuss the matter in a Cabinet session.

"Then we will inform OPEC of Iran's decision," he was quoted as saying.

The proposed deal would trim current production by about 4 million barrels a day from the present 22.5 million barrels to 18.5 million barrels in the first six months of 1989.

It also would retain the cartel's benchmark of $18 a barrel.

Prices have been running $4 or so below that because of a market glut. The new accord is aimed at curbing overproduction and raising prices.

IRNA quoted Aghazadeh as saying the new production ceiling would boost prices to a range of $16 to $18 a barrel.

Each one dollar rise in the price of crude oil theoretically means an increase of 2.5 cents a gallon in retail gasoline prices, although oil companies do not always pass along the full increase.

The ministers began their winter meeting Monday, then adjourned for closed-door talks to try to end a bitter dispute between rivals Iran and Iraq.

Oil prices could rise temporarily if accord signed

NEW YORK (AP) — An agreement to curtail OPEC's rampant oil production could produce a temporary rise in petroleum prices, but any change is likely to be short-lived, analysts say.

Ministers from the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were expected to meet again today in Vienna, Austria, to ratify a proposed six-month oil reduction accord.

But analysts remained skeptical over just how long the deal would last or how much impact it would have on prices.

"In reality, we'll see whatever potential gains are going to come from this accord on Monday," said William Byers, an analyst with Bear, Stearns & Co. "The market will level off after Monday."

On the International Petroleum Exchange in London Friday, prices for January delivery of Brent, the benchmark North Sea crude oil, climbed $1.65 a barrel to $14.42.

U.S. petroleum exchanges closed early Wednesday for a four-day Thanksgiving holiday, but analysts said U.S. markets would match the European gains if the OPEC ministers signed a final accord over the weekend.

Former Midland City Councilman John M. Hills, 78, dies in El Paso

From Staff Reports

EL PASO — Services for John M. Hills, 78, a former Midland City Council member and civic leader, were held Tuesday at the University Presbyterian Church with the Rev. Gordon Bowie officiating. Burial was in Memory Gardens under the direction of Harding, Orr & McDaniel Funeral Home.

Hills died November 20.

He was born March 15, 1910, in Oak Park, Ill. He graduated from Lafayette College in Easton, Pa., with a bachelors of science degree in 1931. He received his doctorate from the University of Chicago in 1934. He came to Midland in September 1934 with Amerada Petroleum Corp.

In 1941, he became a consultant with Lloyd, Penn & Hills, and for many years was associated with Penn, Hills & Turner. In Midland he was a deacon and elder at the First Presbyterian Church. From 1949 to 1953 he was a member of the City Planning Board, and was chairman of the Red Cross. He was chairman of the Midland County Library Board and president of Friends of the Library.

He served on the City Council from 1953 to 1955.

South African government releases aging black leaders

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government released two aging and ailing black leaders Saturday, both colleagues of African National Congress chief Nelson Mandela and prisoners for more than a decade.

Harry Gwala, 69, a longtime member of the outlawed ANC, and Zephania Mothopeng, 75, president of the Pan Africanist Congress "were released unconditionally on medical-humanitarian grounds," the Prisons Service said in a brief statement.

Gwala was freed from Westville Prison in the Indian Ocean city of Durban and Mothopeng was released from Diepkloof Prison in the Soweto township outside Johannesburg.

Gwala has spent more than 20 years in prison and was serving a life sentence for his involvement with the ANC guerrilla movement.

"I'm very much excited, this came unexpectedly," Gwala said from his home in the southeastern city of Pietermaritzburg.

Gwala is suffering from "motor-neuron disease," a degenerative neurological disorder with no known cure. He said the illness has left his arms paralyzed, but his mind is clear.

Mothopeng, who has been seriously ill for several months, was a member of the ANC during the 1940s and 1950s. He broke from the organization in 1959 to help establish the Pan Africanist Congress.

Both organizations are engaged in armed resistance against the white-led government. However, the Pan Africanist Congress favors black self-sufficiency in the struggle for political rights, while the ANC supports a multiracial approach.

Mothopeng was arrested in 1976 and sentenced to 15 years in prison for his involvement with the outlawed organization. He was elected president of the Pan Africanist Congress in 1986.

Gwala and Mothopeng became friends when they were both imprisoned on Robben Island off Cape Town in the early 1960s, Gwala said.

The releases are likely to further fuel speculation that Mandela will be freed in coming months.

"One is thankful that it looks like the milk of human kindness is not running dry with our government," Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu said of Gwala's release.

However, Tutu added: "The track record of our government does not give us too much hope that they are likely to act on only humanitarian grounds. They take political considerations into account much more than acting on humanitarian grounds."

Gwala said he still "fully supported the goals of the ANC," the largest black guerrilla movement in South Africa. He said he did not know if he would resume his political activities due to the "tough conditions under the state of emergency."

State-of-emergency regulations in effect since 1986 restrict reporting about unrest, security force actions, treatment of detainees, some forms of protest, and a broad range of statements the government considers subversive. Enforcement of the regulations has not been comprehensive.

Gwala joined the then-legal ANC in 1944 and helped organize anti-apartheid protests during the following decade. He served in prison from 1964-72 following a conviction on sabotage. He was arrested in 1975 and detained for two years. In 1977, he was sentenced to life in prison for involvement with the ANC.

Mothopeng was a member of the ANC Youth League in the 1940s and helped organize anti-apartheid protests. In 1960, a year after he helped found the Pan Africanist Congress, he was arrested and sentenced to two years in prison for his political activities.

Mothopeng was a teacher and education administrator in the Soweto township outside Johannesburg and was detained for varying lengths of time in the 1960s and 1970s.

Quake causes little damage, no serious injuries

TORONTO (AP) — Eastern Canada's strongest earthquake in 53 years, which caused minor damage and no serious injuries, produced banner headlines Saturday, from "All Quebec Trembles" to "Shake, Rattle 'n Roll."

The jolt in Montreal disrupted the filming of a syndicated television show during an earthquake scene, and in Toronto, a man blamed his strange sensations on too much drinking.

The earthquake at 6:48 p.m. EST Friday lasted more than two minutes and measured 6 on the Richter scale, said John Adams of the Ottawa-based Geological Survey of Canada.

The quake cut power and telephone lines in some cities, shook buildings from Nova Scotia on the Atlantic coast to the western Ontario city of Sault Ste. Marie and buckled railroad tracks.

Quebec City police said a pedestrian was hit and killed by a car in an intersection during the blackout.

The tremor was felt in the United States from Michigan to Washington, D.C.

The Canadian Press news agency reported that about 50 people were treated for cuts and bruises or shock in Chicoutimi, about 90 miles northwest of Quebec City.

Publicist Jonathan Holiff of "Starting from Scratch," a syndicated comedy starring Connie Stevens and Bill Daly, said that several props were set up to fall during the show's earthquake scene, "but a few more things fell off the wall than were expected."

The Montreal newspaper Le Devoir, which headlined, "All Quebec Trembles," added, "The Earthquake Sows Fear but Causes Nothing More than Light Damage."

The tabloid Toronto Sun headlined "Earthquake!" and the Montreal Daily News said "Shake, Rattle 'n Roll."

"I just thought I was drinking too much," said Charles Miles, a 66-year-old Toronto resident. "The landlord was fixing my sink but he didn't notice anything. That's why I called (the newspaper) to find out if it was me or an earthquake."

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo said he was in the Executive Mansion in Albany when "the chandelier shook. The floor moved. It lasted about 10 seconds but it was something I'll remember for much longer than that."

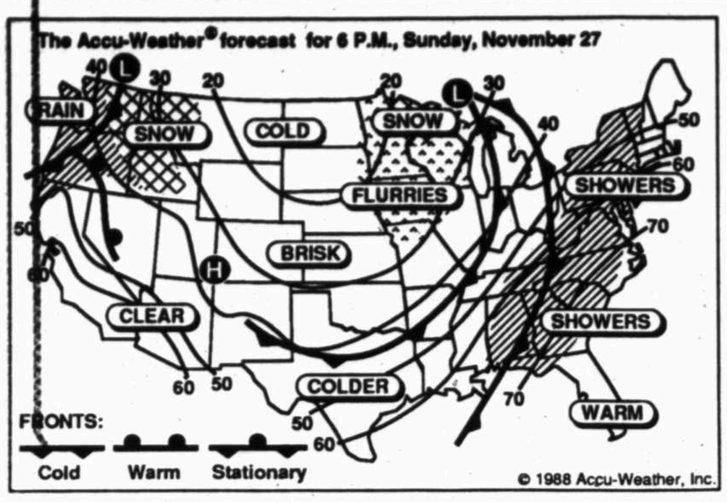
WEATHER SUMMARY



Clear, crisp conditions due

From Staff Reports

Today should be a gift to those who revel in the outdoors in late autumn — sunny day and clear and crisp night.

The National Weather Service at Midland International Airport is calling for a high temperature in the lower 50s. Winds are to be northwesterly to northerly at 15 to 25 mph and gusty.

Tonight, under clear and crisp skies, the low temperature is to be chilly — in the mid-20s.

The high temperature Monday is to be in the mid-50s under sunny skies.

Saturday's high temperature was 61 degrees, while the record high for was 83 degrees, set in 1961. Saturday's low was 48 degrees.

STATE

Light snow fell in the Texas Panhandle on Saturday while thunderstorms prowled through Northeast Texas, unleashing large hail, torrents of rain and strong winds.

Rivers throughout East Texas were reported at or near flood stage from rains Friday night and early Saturday. Many towns throughout East Texas reported losing power for several hours because of the storm.

A motel in Mount Pleasant lost its roof during the storm, officials said. "We've had very little damage, but we've got water everywhere," said John Moseley, a writer for the Mount Pleasant Daily Tribune.

The National Weather Service warned campers to beware of camping near riverside campsites and suggested that animals be moved from low-lying areas. Motorists were warned against trying to cross submerged culverts or roadways.

A Union Pacific train derailed near the town of Fruitvale, 70 miles east of Dallas, approximately 7:30 p.m. Friday, about the same time a tornado was reported. Residents within a 2-mile area were evacuated because of ammonia fumes. About 20,000 gallons of poisonous anhydrous ammonia spilled onto the ground during the derailment.

A tornado watch was in effect until 1 p.m. Saturday for parts of East Texas and a small part of Southeast Texas.

No severe weather was reported Saturday morning in Southeast Texas, the weather service said, but its radar indicated scattered thunderstorms with the potential for damaging activity.

High wind warnings were posted for mountain passes of far West Texas. At 9:15 a.m. Saturday, winds at Guadalupe Pass — 100 miles east of El Paso — were recorded from the west at 46 mph, gusting to 61 mph, the weather service said.

Wind gusts to 75 mph could be expected in the mountain passes later in the day, the weather service said.

A cold front continued its slow push through the state Saturday morning. It stretched from Paris to College Station to near Laredo.

Another front, with colder air behind it, stretched from near Wichita Falls to a low near Lubbock to El Paso. It was this frontal system, along with an upper-air disturbance, that helped to trigger the thunderstorms, the weather service said.

Snow in the Panhandle was light and probably would amount to little more than a dusting, the weather service said.

Winds were generally at 15 to 25 mph across West Texas on Saturday, except for the mountainous regions. In North Texas, west winds blew at 10 to 20 mph but were expected to increase. Winds of 10 to 15 mph were reported in South Texas.

Temperatures on Saturday were in the 70s along the Gulf, 30s in the Panhandle and 50s and 60s elsewhere.

NATION

An area of low pressure and a cold front trailing southward produced severe weather with tornadoes Saturday over the lower Mississippi Valley and snow in the upper Mississippi Valley.

A line of thunderstorms moved from eastern Texas into western Mississippi during the morning and early afternoon.

A tornado destroyed at least four houses and damaged an estimated 25 others at Ruleville, Miss., but no serious injuries were reported, officials said. The twister, reported to be about 100 yards wide, also caused extensive damage to the high school, the junior high and a service station in the town of about 3,500.

Another tornado was spawned by a thunderstorm near Mound, La., the National Weather Service said.

Strong thunderstorm wind damaged a church and a store at Carthage, Texas, the weather service said. Hail as big as golf balls fell near Fruitvale and Mexia, Texas.

Rain from the thunderstorms was heavy over the lower Mississippi Valley and fell on already soaked ground in Arkansas and Louisiana. Overnight totals included 6.11 inches at Hope, Ark.; 4.94 inches at Fulta, Ark.; 3.55 inches at Nashville, Ark.; and 3.13 inches at Plain Dealing, La.

In the six hours up to 1 p.m. EST, 2.41 inches of rain fell at Barksdale Air Force Base at Shreveport, La.; 1.95 inches fell at Pine Bluff, Ark.; and 1.81 inches fell at Memphis, Tenn.

Bush, like fish, just won't take bait

By TOM RAUM

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — George Bush went fishing Saturday, but he had no more luck hooking trout than reporters had in getting him to bite on questions about upcoming Cabinet appointments.

"Hey, look, you guys, you're scaring the fish away. There aren't any here anyway. The more you talk, the further away they go," Bush said as he fished for in the nearby Kennebunk River.

However, Bush told reporters he would turn his attention to defense appointments and defense policy next week in Washington.

Bush will also meet on Monday with Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole, according to aide Stephen Hart.

Bush and his onetime rival for the Republican presidential nomination had wanted to meet for some time, Hart said.

"It's of mutual interest," he added.

Hart said Bush has yet to make a decision on either defense policy or on naming a secretary of defense.

Commenting on a story in Saturday's editions of the Washington Post that Bush would consider a wide array of possible defense cuts next week, Hart said:

"During the transition process, the vice president is welcoming discussion on a wide variety on policy considerations and on people.

"Simply because options are being given to him and being discussed and raised, doesn't mean they're going to be accepted."

The story also said former Armed Services Chairman John Tower of Texas remains the front-runner for the job, and that Bush had decided to keep on CIA Director William Webster, at least for the time being.

Bush worked for several hours in the small cottage he uses as an office on the grounds of his family compound here, then went fishing with two old friends.

Asked by reporters what he was fishing for, Bush said, "basic brown trout." However, he added, "We usually catch nothing right here, nothing at all."

Why then, he was asked, was he fishing?

"Because I like casting," the vice president replied.

Asked if he had thought about his defense team, Bush said: "I'm thinking mainly about fishing. Haven't gotten into the defense team up here. Will as soon as we get back, though." Asked specifically about whether he will name former Sen. John Tower to the post, Bush said, "hey gang, c'mon."

PLO criticizes U.S. decision

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Palestine Liberation Organization officials on Saturday accused the United States of violating international law by forbidding PLO leader Yasser Arafat to visit the United Nations headquarters in New York.

Bassam Abu Sharif, chief spokesman for Arafat, told reporters the United States had made "a big mistake by breaching the agreement ... Between the United Nations as an institution and the United States government."

Abu Sharif made the statement a few hours after Arafat arrived in Amman from Baghdad on a Middle East tour.

Abu Sharif said Arafat would not comment on the U.S. move until he had read a text of the State Department refusal to issue him a visa to enter the United States.

Abu Sharif said the PLO has "a lot of friends in the U.N." and would take "all steps necessary to address the United Nations session."

Prime Minister Zaid Rifai met Arafat on arrival in Amman and later visited him for about 30 minutes at the heavily guarded government guest palace in the capital.

PLO officials filed the visa request on Friday with the U.S. Consulate in Tunis, Tunisia, where the PLO has its headquarters. On Saturday, Secretary of State George P. Shultz announced in Washington that Arafat's application was rejected because of the PLO's positions.

The PLO had requested the visa so Arafat could travel to New York to address the United Nations on Dec. 1 during its debate on Palestinian issues.

"The U.S. government has convincing evidence that PLO elements have engaged in terrorism against Americans and others," said a statement issued by Shultz. Moreover, Arafat, as PLO chairman, "knows of, condones, and lends support to such acts," and is "an accessory to such terrorism."

When the PLO applied for the visa, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said the United States would "severely scrutinize Arafat's application." The U.S. government has been under intense domestic pressure from Jewish leaders and others to deny the visa.

In Jerusalem, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres praised the U.S. decision. A spokesman said Peres sent a telegram to Shultz expressing Israel's "appreciation of this decision."

Arafat's aides have been referring to the upcoming address as a matter of fact. Earlier this week, a PLO spokesman said Arafat would use the speech to ask the General Assembly to grant the new Palestinian state U.N. membership.

The PLO was granted U.N. observer status in 1974, following Arafat's last address before the assembly. In August, the Reagan administration lost a legal battle to close the PLO's U.N.missionon grounds the PLO endorses terrorism.

Shortly before Shultz announced his decision, Arafat said in Kuwait that he would call for the U.N. debate on Palestinian issues to be moved to Geneva if the United States rejected his visa to visit New York.

There was no immediate reaction from U.N. officials on Arafat's call for the proceedings to be moved.

Arafat later stopped Jordan after visiting Kuwait and Iraq. He is touring 22 Arab League countries to gain support for the independent Palestinian state declared by the Palestine National Council, the PLO's parliament-in-exile.

The council proclaimed the Palestinian state in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip at a meeting in Algiers, Algeria, on Nov. 15. The declaration implicitly recognized the right of Israel to exist.

The United States has said it will not negotiate with the PLO until Arafat explicitly recognizes the right of Israel to exist and renounces terrorism.

ARAFAT

"The whole civilized world was shocked when he wore a gun upon last addressing the United Nations, and we see no reason to think that he is any less supportive of terrorism or any less an enemy of Israel than he was then," said Ira Silverman, exe ve vice president of the Americ Jewish Committee.

James Abourezk, chairman of the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee, said it is "embarrassing" and "shameful" that Shultz "would allow Israel to dictate whom the American people can or cannot hear."

President-elect George Bush, asked about the visa while jogging in Kennebunkport, Maine, said, "No comment."

White House spokesman Ben Jarrett, in Santa Barbara, Calif., where President Reagan is vacationing, said Reagan was aware of the State Department's decision, but "had no role in it."

Shortly before Shultz announced his decision, Arafat said in Kuwait that he would call for the U.N. debate on Palestinian issues to be moved to Geneva if the United States rejected his visa to visit New York.

There was no immediate indication from United Nations officials how officials would react to Arafat's call for the proceedings to be moved.

"The U.S. administration has regrettably failed until this moment to grant me an entry visa," Arafat told reporters. PLO officials said they filed the visa request with the U.S. consulate in Tunis, Tunisia where the PLO has its headquarters.

Arafat, who is on a tour of the Arab nations to gain support for an independent Palestinian state, last addressed the United Nations in 1974.

Shultz' statement spelled out the relationship between the United States and the New York-based United Nations. The United States is obligated by the 1947 U.N. Headquarters Agreement to allow people to enter the United States on U.N. business.

But Congress has stipulated that the United States has the right to bar entry to aliens to safeguard the nation's security. In this regard, U.S. law excludes members of the PLO from entering the United States because the organization engages in terrorism.

However, the PLO has observer status at the U.N. and some of its members have routinely been granted visa waivers, the department said.

"The PLO therefore has had, and continues to have, ample opportunity to make its positions known to the membership of the United Nations" it said.

Earlier this year, Congress passed legislation to close the PLO's observer mission at the U.N., but the measure was overturned by a federal court.

Lawrence Schilling, an attorney who represented the PLO in the observer mission case, called Shultz' decision unwise and said he would not rule out a similar court challenge on the denial of a visa to Arafat.

"There can be no reasonable claim that Mr. Arafat represents any kind of security problem and his visit to the United Nations is very much in the interest of peace," Schilling said in an interview from his New York office.

Clovis Maksoud, the League of Arab States' ambassador to the United States, said his organization would join Arafat's call to move the U.N. debate on Palestine issues to a "more accomodating venue."

Maksoud said the reasoning offered by Shultz "renders U.S. policy on the Palestinian question hostage to Israeli idocyncricies, responsive to Israeli false allegations and in tandem with Israel's priorities and annexationist designs."

"It is now for the U.N. to salvage the credibility of its resolutions, the integrity of its deliberations and the reputation of its enhanced stature," he said.

The State Department listed terrorist incidents linked to the PLO, but said the United States "firmly believes that Palestinian political rights must be recognized and addressed."

High-energy physicists believe that the super collider could hold the key to basic questions about Earth and matter.

Dingell said other scientists are critical of the super collider, saying the multibillion project will take funds from other scientific projects.

U.S. Sen Phil Gramm, R-Texas, acknowledged there would be competition for federal funds, but said he is optimistic. The funding issue is "a tough battle but not an insurmountable one," he told the Dallas Morning News.

"The project is going to be in Texas, but it's not going to be a Texas project," Gramm said. "It is an American project."

He said one option for funding might include making an appeal to the science communities in Europe and Japan to help build the project, Gramm said.

Congressmen from the six other states that bid for the project — Arizona, Colorado, Illinois, Michigan, North Carolina and Tennessee — have been critical of how Texas was selected for the project.

A letter from seven senators, including both from Michigan, signed a letter to President Reagan that said there was "a widespread perception that this decision was not based on scientific valuation" and hinted funding support could be in jeopardy unless there was a complete investigaiton of the decision.

HILLS

Hills was an honorary member of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, a fellow of the Geological Society of America, a member of the New Mexico Geological Society, and past president and honorary member of the West Texas Geological Society.

Hills also was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi, and the Chancellors Council of the University of Texas system. He was a recipient of the Monroe Cheney award from the Southwest Section of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists.

In 1967 he joined the Department of Geological Sciences at the University of Texas at El Paso. He retired as Professor Emeritus in 1980. He was a member and elder of the University Presbyterian Church in El Paso.

He is survived by his wife, Sally Ward Hills; two sons, Edward E. Hills of Sacramento, Calif. and Joseph W. Hills of Springfield, Ill.; a daughter, Mrs. Glen H. Lambertson of Oklahoma City; three brothers, Rev. N. Grier Hills of Normal, Ill., Rev. Sidney O. Hills of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Thomas M. Hills, of San Diego, Calif.; and seven grandchildren.

The family asks that memorials be directed to a favorite charity.

MUSEUM

Rowland noted that it costs an average of $12 per visitor to operate the museum. Tax-deductible contributions are directed toward telling visitors from around the world the story of the oil and gas industry.

The five-year grant will be in effect until July 31, 1993, in an amount not to exceed the sum of $250,000 during any twelve-month period. For purposes of this challenge grant, the term "qualifying gifts or grants" means that only gifts of cash or cash-equivalents will be applied toward the match.

Gifts or grants of money will be matched two-for-one for first-time gifts, if the donor has not given since Jan. 1, 1987. The two-for-one match applies only once. After that, any increase of $100 or more from the previous year's contributions will be matched on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum has become an integral part of the community, providing educational, cultural and an entertainment event, according to Rowland.

He said the museum's educational programs reached about 18,000 school children in the 1987-88 school year, with the early months of the 1988-89 school year running on a similar pace.

The permanent exhibits are complemented by an active feature exhibit program. An upcoming exhibition, "The People of Dongying: Midland's Sister City," will feature a series of programs concentrating on the Midland-Dongying sister city relationship.

A special fund-raising benefit performance of the Peking Opera is scheduled on Feb. 2 to climax the exhibit. Hosted by the museum, the Peking Opera will present an 8 p.m. performance at the Lee High School auditorium. All net proceeds of the performance will be directed to the museum's operating account. The proceeds also are eligible for matching funds from the foundation grant.

Museum members also receive additional benefits from their contributions: the "Museum Memo;" discounts on field trips, educational programs and lectures; and free admission tickets. Many firms choose to allow the museum to arrange the donation of their admission tickets to needy charities such as the Boys' and Girls' Clubs, scouting groups or nursing homes. Additional benefits also apply, according to Joyce Montgomery, the museum's director of development.

"Thanks to the matching grant," said Ms. Montgomery, "there's never been a better time than today to invest in educating the public about oil and gas."

Ms. Montgomery is engaged in a development campaign with a committee of 23 Permian Basin civic leaders from Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Kermit, Monahans and Roswell. She said the committee, chaired by Herbert "Bud" Boles, sees the five-year challenge grant as an opportunity to secure funds for a self-sustaining museum.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Lawmakers from East, West meeting

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lawmakers of 33 countries began a conference Saturday, with some Western leaders endorsing free trade unions and objecting to one-party rule, the official PAP news agency reported.

Organizers say the three-day meeting of about 150 leaders from Europe, Canada and the United States is the first to assemble parliament leaders from both the East and West blocs.

"Freedom is our right and it is our obligation, when need be, to criticize others. But this does not mean interference in the internal affairs of others," PAP quoted Netherlands parliamentary leader Dirk Dolman as saying.

"There is one law of East European states to which Western Europe objects principally: That is the special role, laid down in the constitution, of one party — the Communist Party," he said.

Swedish Parliament Speaker Thage Peterson told the conference: "One important factor in the democratic process is an open dialogue with free and independent trade union organizations," PAP reported.

It appeared to be a reference to Polish authorities' ban on Solidarity, the East bloc's first independent trade union outlawed after Poland's 1981 martial-law crackdown.

Arab teen shot to death

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops shot to death a 16-year-old Arab, and a soldier was slightly wounded Saturday when a Palestinian hurled a homemade bomb at an Israeli army patrol in the occupied West Bank, the military command said.

Palestinian witnesses said 100 to 150 Palestinians were detained after the bomb attack in Ramallah, 10 miles north of Jerusalem.

Clashes between stone-throwing Palestinians and soldiers occurred Saturday in the occupied Gaza Strip, where Palestinians staged a partial commercial strike. Arab doctors said nine Palestinians were wounded.

Seven Palestinian teen-agers were shot at the Nuseirat refugee camp and the village of Zawaydah, said officials at Gaza's Ahli Arab and Shifa hospitals.

Farid Rajab Ilmaghari, the 16-year-old wounded in the head in Nuseirat, died in Israel's Tel Hashomer Hospital, according to reports.

In Ramallah, troops opened fire at the assailant after the bomb attack but missed. Soldiers closed the area and conducted searches, arresting several suspects, the army said.

Palestinian witnesses in Ramallah told The Associated Press the bomb was thrown at an army jeep close to several other military cars parked at the city's central Manara Square. The residents said troops fired about 50 rounds of ammunition, mostly in the air.

Chess players marry

SALONICA, Greece (AP) — The captain of the American Olympic chess team secretly married a Soviet woman ranked second among the world's female chess players and left with her for the United States on Saturday.

John Donaldson, 31, and Elena Akhmilovskaya, 32, were married at noon Friday in a civil ceremony at City Hall, then returned to the playing hall to watch the United States women's team hold the Soviets to a draw.

"It's a real love match. A marriage, not a defection," said Inna Izrailov, a Soviet who plays for the American women's team.

The couple's elopement deprived the U.S. men's team of its captain at a crucial stage in the Olympiad, a biennial world team championship that began in Salonica earlier this month.

Yasser Sierawan of Seattle, America's top player and Donaldson's closest friend, said the couple hoped Ms. Akhmilovskaya's daughter would eventually be allowed to join them in the United States. The 7-year-old girl is with her grandmother in the Soviet Union.

Donaldson, an international master also from Seattle, and Ms. Akmilovskaya first met three years ago at a world championship qualifying tournament in Havana, Cuba.

Cruise ship fire traced

MOSCOW (AP) — A fire aboard a Soviet cruise liner that killed 11 people in May has been traced to a passenger's use of a heater to make a cup of coffee, the official news agency Tass reported.

Y. Dubinin "decided to make coffee, put an immersion heater into a glass of water, switched it on and fell asleep," Tass said in a brief dispatch.

The news agency said Friday that Dubinin faces criminal charges and could be sent to prison for up to three years.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

U.S. Gov't. Approves Patent Claims for New Diet Pill

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)— An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and calorie reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors claims for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally"

Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising".

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Automatically" Lose Fat

According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat-bonding process is a "lazy way" to lose weight because the pills alone "automatically" reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public

If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W841 Beverly Hills, CA 90211. Soviet, French blast off for joint mission

MOSCOW (AP) — A team of Soviet and French astronauts blasted off from Central Asia on Saturday and headed for the Soviets' orbiting space station Mir.

The three cosmonauts aboard the Soyuz TM-7 were scheduled to rendezvous aboard the Mir with three men already in orbit for what Tass called the first practical preparations of an international team for a manned expedition to Mars.

French President Francois Mitterrand, wearing a coat and scarf, peered through binoculars from a viewing stand at the Baikonur Cosmodrome as the rocket lifted off in the darkness.

Also present at the launch were two members of the British rock group Pink Floyd, a favorite of French astronaut Jean-Loup Chretien.

The launch was carried live by Soviet and French national television.

An hour after takeoff, the Soviet space center said all systems were operating normally.

Chretien is to remain aboard the Mir until Dec. 21, when he is scheduled to return to Earth with two Soviet cosmonauts who will have spent 365 days in orbit.

With him in the launch vehicle were mission commander Alexander Volkov and flight engineer Sergei Krikalev, who are expected to spend about six months in space.

Soviet television showed the cosmonauts in their space capsule before the launch and apparently during the initial ascent.

Volkov said in a prepared statement he read minutes before launch that all equipment on board was in order.

Chretien expressed his pride at being included as his country's representative on the flight and told Mitterrand he appreciated the Socialist president's presence at the launch.

Chretien, a music lover, took with him a portable organ to play aboard the Mir space station.

"It will be interesting to see how a man can accomplish delicate tasks in weightlessness, and music is delicate," said Patrick Baudry, who flew on a U.S. space shuttle mission in 1985. Baudry was interviewed on French television.

Because Chretien told a recent news conference that he liked the rock group Pink Floyd, the crew was carrying one of the group's albums into space, and two members of the band watched the launch at Baikonur.

During his mission, Chretien is to become the first West European to make a walk in space.

He is also planning to carry out scientific experiments prepared by experts at France's National Center for Space Studies.

In his first meetings with Gorbachev on Friday, Mitterrand and the Soviet leader talked about disarmament and improving economic ties, according to Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov and Mitterrand spokesman Hubert Vedrine.

France has harshly criticized the Soviet Union in the past for alleged human rights violations, but its spokesman refrained from commenting on that issue at Friday's news briefing.

Officials also announced that French banks led by Credit Lyonnais are extending a $2 billion credit line to the Soviet Union.

The Soviets also signed a joint venture agreement with the French government-owned Pechiney SA metals group to build a $172.4 million factory in Armenia for manufacturing aluminum packaging.

French chefs prepare meals for astronauts

PARIS (AP) — Cosmonauts aboard the Soviet space station are dining on compote of pigeon and oxtail fondue after the French made their most sumptuous effort to put haute cuisine into outer space.

Only wine and those famous French sauces — which would float away in the gravity-free atmosphere — are missing from the menu.

Twenty-three products ranging from bread rolls to ham and fruit pates are stocked aboard the Soyuz-TM-7 space module, which blasted off Saturday from the Baikonur Cosmodrome in Soviet Central Asia. The spacecraft is headed for the Mir space station, where five Soviet cosmonauts and French astronaut Jean-Loup Chretien will live until Dec. 21.

"We looked for difficult things to make, things that are out of the ordinary, that give some pleasure," said chef Lucien Vanel, who prepared four gourmet dishes for the astronauts.

Vanel's creations, made with the help of chef Pierre Roudge, include compote of pigeon with dates and dried raisins, duck with artichokes and oxtail fondue with tomatoes and pickles. The food is all canned, "to be opened like you open fois gras," Vanel said.

"This is not food to be eaten every day," the chef said. "It's not to survive on, just to give them a little pleasure."

But he said he regretted a good bottle of wine could not make the journey into space.

"French cuisine is inconceivable without wine," he said.

Saute de veau Marengo and cheeses also are making the trip, along with high-energy bars made of nuts, coffee and chocolate.

The project was sponsored by several French food companies.

The chefs worked under three limitations: the dishes had to be small and contain neither bones nor sauce.

Sauce would be transformed into flying droplets, Vanel said, so the meat was made to absorb the sauce during cooking.

This is not the first time French cuisine has gone into orbit. In 1982, Chretien shared his country's dishes with Soviet colleagues in space, and in 1985 French astronaut Patrick Baudry treated fellow astronauts aboard the U.S. shuttle Discovery to a meal "a la francaise."

Vanel said his dishes closely resemble those prepared in his Toulouse restaurant. "Only here at the restaurant we serve the entire pigeon.

"In a couple years, we'll see sauce and bones and wine go up there."

South Koreans enthralled by TV hearings

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Clustered around television sets, South Koreans have been watching the first political hearings in the nation's history.

The National Assembly has been conducting extensive public hearings into corruption, human rights violations and other abuses under the authoritarian government of former president Chun Doo-hwan.

The hearings, which began early this month and could go into 1989, have bewitched millions of South Koreans. The live broadcasts have set new viewing records as people have flocked around TV sets to catch latest developments.

"What was seen (on television) was so shocking, although it had vaguely been guessed at, that people lost even the strength to speak out," said Chong Un-bung, an editor of The Korea Times newspaper.

Koreans have witnessed former generals and ministers questioned, berated and denounced by lawmakers demanding answers about the repressive Chun years. People who endured the restraints of the Chun government shake their heads in wonder at how the political situation has changed.

Office employees routinely gather around televisions at work to watch the hearings; televisions in train and bus stations and airports are thronged by watchers; and shops and restaurants show the hearings to attract customers.

Some colleges delayed examinations because many students were too busy watching the hearings.

Police report that traffic has dipped when major figures have appeared at the hearings. People say they rearrange their work and social schedules to accommodate the hearings.

The National Assembly had limited powers to hold hearings in the past, but a 1987 constitution empowered the legislature to investigate government affairs.

South Koreans, accustomed to decades of censorship and authoritarian governments, have been astonished by the flood of revelations. It has fueled even more anger and resentment against Chun.

"All misdeeds and corruption must be exposed," said Lee Kyung-jai, a journalist.

Political analysts say the hearings are part of a shift toward an enduring democratic system for the first time since the nation's creation in 1948.

"It probably will change the style and quality of Korea's politics for good," said analyst Rhee Chong-ik.

Bush still focusing on defense post

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — As George Bush focused on his national security team, job-seekers eyed the remaining top positions with some speculating the president-elect would soon turn his attention to vacancies at Commerce and Health and Human Services.

John Sununu, Bush's designated White House chief of staff, said in an interview broadcast Saturday, "I think next week you'll see action in a couple of areas associated with defense."

Bush aides did not have a schedule for when the president-elect would make his next appointments. He returns to Washington today after a Thanksgiving vacation at Kennebunkport, Maine.

Sununu, appearing on CNN's "Evans & Novak" show, also said he has asked Robert M. Teeter, co-director of Bush's transition office, to serve as his deputy chief of staff. "He's considering it and...I would hope that he says yes," said Sununu.

Teeter's co-director, Craig Fuller, has been asked "to make suggestions as to how he can make a contribution" in the administration, said Sununu, governor of New Hampshire.

But Sununu said Fuller "probably has a higher likelihood of not being in" the administration because after losing out to Sununu in the competition to become chief of staff, Fuller said he would return to private business next year.

There has been widespread speculation that former Texas Sen. John Tower is the front-runner to become the Pentagon chief, despite questions about his personal life and his commitment to procurement reform.

Tower, who chaired the Senate Armed Services Committee during the massive defense build-up in the early years of the Reagan administration, was divorced last year.

Rep. Nicholas Mavroules, D-Mass., a member of the House Armed Services Committee and a supporter of eliminating Pentagon waste, said Bush's choice must be someone "dedicated to cleaning up that mess at the Pentagon."

Before he left for the Thanksgiving holiday last week, Bush named retired Air Force Gen. Brent Scowcroft as his national security adviser. There is some thinking that Bush may keep CIA Director William Webster on the job in an interim appointment.

Once his national security team is in place, Bush is likely to set his sights on two other big agencies, Commerce and HHS, according to a source close to the transition.

Bush's aides have said there is no set timetable for having a government in place.

For the Commerce post, Robert Mosbacher, a Houston oilman and Bush's old friend, is thought to have the edge over the other candidates. If both he and Tower are picked, Bush would have at least four Texans in high-ranking jobs. Others are James A. Baker III, the designated secretary of state and Lauro Cavazos, the education secretary.

Rep. Willis D. Gradison Jr., R-Ohio, has emerged as a leading candidate to head HHS, the huge federal agency that runs the costly Medicare and Medicaid health insurance programs as well as Social Security, the Food and Drug Administration and the National Institutes of Health.

Gradison, a classmate of Bush's at Yale, is ranking Republican on the Ways and Means health subcommittee that deals with Medicare, an $80 billion program expected to expand at more than double the rate of overall inflation over the next few years without spending cuts.

Another serious candidate is Monroe Trout, who runs a chain of nonprofit hospitals in California and serves with Barbara Bush on the board of directors of Morehouse College, a black institution in Atlanta. A physician and lawyer, he headed a major pharmaceutical company and was active in Republican politics in Connecticut before moving to California and has been in Washington this month talking with various people about his interest in the job.

Among other names bandied about the the job are Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Ill, Surgeon General C. Everett Koop and Dorcas Hardy, the Social Security commissioner.

To head the Labor department, a name that has been given serious attention recently is that of Constance Horner, head of the Office of Personnel Management. Martin is another candidate for this job, as is Rep. Thomas Ridge, R-Pa.

Former Rep. Henson Moore of Louisiana says he is under consideration for the Department of Energy job. "From the best we can tell, it's getting serious," he said in an interview. Another possible candidate is Frederick Khedouri, a former Bush aide. Sen. James McClure, a Republican on the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, is publicly backing Peter Johnson, a former administrator at the Bonneville Power Administration, for the job.

Baby snatched from hospital found unharmed

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A sickly infant snatched from her hospital bassinet was found in apparent good health Saturday after a woman showed off a baby she claimed was born three hours earlier, police said.

Two people were held in Washtenaw County Jail Saturday on kidnapping charges in connection with the incident, Ann Arbor Police Sgt. Jim Tieman said.

The 4-pound, 8-ounce girl was reported taken at 6:35 p.m. Friday from C.S. Mott Children's Hospital in Ann Arbor. The premature baby was recovered about 11 a.m. Saturday at the suspects' apartment in Howell, about 20 miles away, Tieman said.

He would not release the suspects' names, but described the woman as being in her 30s and the man as in his 40s. He said they were not related to the baby's 17-year-old mother.

At the time she was taken, the 2½-month-old infant, Debra Lynn Moore, was receiving medication for breathing problems and was hooked up to electronic monitoring equipment and required feeding every three hours to prevent dehydration.

An alarm went off when she was removed from a bassinet Friday evening, but the baby was gone when hospital workers reached the room, said police Sgt. Mark Jones.

"She seems to be in good condition," said Catherine Cureton, a spokeswoman for the University of Michigan Medical Center, which operates Mott Hospital. "She was doing remarkably well before this happened and is doing well now."

Tieman said a caller Saturday morning notified the department that the suspects showed up in Howell with the baby at 9:30 p.m. Friday saying she had given birth to the baby at a hospital three hours earlier.

Police investigating the tip went to the apartment and while there, the suspects drove up with the baby.

Tieman said he did not know the motive for the kidnapping.

The suspects were to appear in 15th District Court in Ann Arbor on Monday.

The baby's mother, whom officials declined to identify, was not at the hospital when her baby was taken. Debra's twin brother, in a nearby bassinet and receiving oxygen, was unharmed, Tieman said.

Father found guilty in death of daughter

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — A man who a psychologist testified has multiple personalities has been found guilty of first-degree murder in the shooting death of his 19-year-old daughter a year ago.

A Camden County jury returned its verdict against Thomas Lee Bonney on Friday. His daughter, Kathy Carol Bonney was found dead last November along the Dismal Swamp Canal, just south of the North Carolina-Virginia border.

Bonney, 45, of Chesapeake, Va., pleaded innocent by reason of insanity, saying he suffered from a multiple personality disorder and that one of his nine other personalities was in control at the time of the shooting.

Bonney revealed the personas of "Satan," his dead grandmother and three other of his 10 personalities in videotaped interviews with Dr. Paul F. Dell, a psyuchiatrist retained by the defense.

The jury will return Monday to consider whether Bonney should receive the death penalty or life imprisonment.

"I'm pleased with the jury's verdict," District Attorney H.P. Williams said. "It shows we did our work, although we've got a lot more work to do before next week's hearing."

He had argued that Bonney deliberately killed his daughter out of a possessive anger over her relationship with a married man.

Michel apology tearful

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — House Minority Leader Robert H. Michel gave a tearful apology to black ministers for racial remarks he made on television and one clergyman says his conciliatory tone was genuine.

"He was very heartfelt in saying he made a mistake," said the Rev. Harold Dawson, president of the Southside Pastors Association. "I don't think those tears were phony," Dawson said. "I think Congressman Michel will make a sincere effort to do things differently."

In an interview two weeks ago on the "USA Today" television show, Michel reminisced about his days as an amateur singer in Peoria. He imitated the Amos and Andy comedy team and sang a few bars of "Old Man River," saying he still wanted to use the song's original lyrics which referred to blacks as "niggers."

In the interview, Michel, R-Ill., went on to say, "It's too bad that...we can't do some of the things that were part of our heritage."

After Friday's meeting, Michel told reporters that the ministers had given him a list of problems and concerns facing the black community. "We're going to turn a negative into a positive for the community," he said.

Michel first apologized for his remarks shortly after the show aired.

Bills have unusual questions

ALBANY, Ore. (AP) — Forms asking for information on suspected drug activity have been included in bills mailed to the city's water customers to give people a chance to snitch in private about possible criminal activity.

"There's a number of people in the community who are fearful for their own safety — whether real or imagined — and this provides a way...we can look at it," Police Chief Darrell Pepper said.

The forms state that they are not official complaints and ask for as many details as possible. They also carry this message: "Your help is very important, but do not take unnecessary risks or actions on your own."

The forms have spaces for license numbers of suspicious cars, locations of suspicious activity, and ask questions that include: "Have you seen apparent drug transactions or drug paraphernalia at or near the vicinity of the residence?" and "Do you know what kind of drugs are being sold? How do you know?"

Pepper said returned forms come directly to him. He destroys any that seem inappropriate or vindictive.

So far, about a half dozen forms have been returned. None has contained information about suspected criminal activity the police didn't already know about, Pepper said.

Some people have written notes on the forms comparing the mailing to the Nazis asking people to spy on their neighbors, Pepper said.

Concrete chunk kills man

MONEE, Ill. (AP) — Two pranksters on an interstate highway overpass tossed a foot-square chunk of concrete into the windshield of a pickup truck, killing a man, authorities said.

Police said the death Friday was the first casualty to result from more than two dozen similar rock-dropping incidents in the area south of Chicago.

There were no arrests and no suspects, police said.

Charles Layfield, 57, of Chicago was sitting between the driver and a sleeping passenger in the truck's cab when the concrete slammed through the windshield and struck his head, killing him, said state police Sgt. Tom Watson. The two other men were not injured.

The driver said he noticed two people leaning over the Interstate 57 overpass before the windshield exploded, Watson said.

Reagan hopes for greater access to foreign markets

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan urged Americans on Saturday to reject "the siren song" of trade protectionism and vowed to push in December for greater U.S. access to overseas markets.

In his last nationally broadcast radio address from the presidential ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains near here, Reagan pledged to have U.S. trade negotiators fight in Montreal next month for more protection for U.S. intellectual property rights, investments and trade in services, as well as goods.

The president was referring to a mid-term review of the so-called Uruguay Round of negotiations under the auspices of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, a multilateral pact in which the United States and some 95 other countries meet and discuss problems sin the field of international trade and competition.

Reagan used Saturday's adddres to again hail the election victory of Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney early last week, saying the voters of Canada sent a message to the world rejecting protectionist sentiment.

In this country, he said, the multimillion-dollar trade deficits of recent years had "led some misguided politicians to call for protectionism, warning that, otherwise, we would lose jobs. But they were wrong again. In fact, the United States not only didn't lose jobs, we created more jobs than all the countries of Western Europe, Canada and Japan combined.

> "We too often talk about trade while using the vocabulary of war...But commerce is not warfare. Trade is an economic alliance that benefits both countries. There are no losers, only winners."
>
> — President Reagan

"We too often talk about trade while using the vocabulary of war. In war, for one side to win, the other must lose," he said. "But commerce is not warfare. Trade is an economic alliance that benefits both countries. There are no losers, only winners."

Reagan argued that "today, protectionism is being used by some American politicians as a cheap form of nationalism...Our peaceful trading partners are not our enemies. They are our allies. We should be beware of the demigogues who are ready to declare a trade war against our friends."

He said the expansion of the international economy "is not a foreign invasion. It is an American triumph."

Reagan said that when the multilateral trade talks open Dec. 5 in Montreal, "we will be in the forefront of efforts to improve this system."

"We want to open more markets for our markets, to see to it that all nations play by the rules, and to seek improvement in such areas as dispute resolution and agriculture," he said.

"Our negotiators will be working hard for all of us," the president promised.

Reagan, as he has in the past, raised the ghost of the Smoot-Hawley Act of 1930, a tariff law which he said had led to the Great Depression, in which one out of four Americans lost their jobs.

"Ever since that time, Americans have stayed true to our heritage by rejecting the siren song of protectionism," Reagan said.

The five-minute radio address, broadcast from a make-shift studio step up in a house-trailer on Reagan's 688-acre property, was Reagan's last from the ranch.

The president concludes a six-day vacation Sunday and flies back to Washington.

Byrd stepping down as leader of Senate

Bryd

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert Carlyle Byrd, former butcher, grocer and shipyard welder, this week quietly relinquishes one of the nation's most powerful elective offices.

Byrd is stepping down as majority leader of the Senate. He leaves confident he has revitalized the Senate's role in American government, but doubtful his successor can stem growing complaints that life in the chamber isn't what it should be.

Tempered by poverty in the West Virginia coal fields where he was raised, Byrd, who turned 71 last week, has little sympathy for the complaints of younger men who see the Senate as a cumbersome body that works too late, too often.

"We can't operate on a punch-the-clock basis," says Byrd, who was elected to his sixth, six-year term on Election Day. "I did that once — when I was a welder in a shipyard."

His successor as leader of the Senate will be elected Tuesday when the 55 Democratic senators of the 101st Congress gather for an organizational meeting in the Capitol.

The majority leader, a position formally recognized in 1911, controls the Senate's schedule, including which bills are considered and when they are debated.

For the first time since his election as majority whip in 1971, Byrd won't be running for a leadership role. But he won't be without power, as he assumes the chairmanship of the Senate Appropriations Committee and becomes president pro tempore — the senior statesman — of the Senate. That also puts him third in line for the presidency, behind the vice president and the speaker of the House of Representatives.

"I look back on my years as leader with satisfaction," the silver-haired senator said. He has served as leader of his party in the Senate since 1976, half that time as majority leader.

"I have brought the Senate back to where it is now a stronger voice than it had been for a while," Byrd said. "I have insisted on checks and balances with the executive branch to make it a potent and strong force."

In explaining how he "revitalized the Senate's unique role," Byrd refers to the Senate's exhaustive work in approving President Reagan's missile treaty with the Soviet Union and its rejection of Robert Bork and subsequent approval of Anthony Kennedy for the Supreme Court.

Looking ahead, Byrd is skeptical about the election promises of those seeking to replace him as majority leader.

"I don't intend to offer advice," Byrd says. "They're all three capable and expert on legislation and each has his own special talents."

The three — Daniel Inouye of Hawaii, Bennett Johnston of Louisiana and George Mitchell of Maine — each are promising to improve the "quality of life" in the Senate. By "quality of life," they mean to shorten a grueling regime of long hours and unpredictable schedules.

"I believe first in the quality of work," Byrd said. "One can't adjust the needs of the nation to one's comfort."

He believes the task facing his replacement, and Congress in general, is daunting.

"The hangover will soon be felt," Byrd said of the budget deficit and national debt crises facing the Bush administration and the Democratic-controlled 101st Congress.

"We've got a very terrible problem that will be overriding," Byrd says. "Congress will work with Mr. Bush. But he has to show leadership.

"He comes to the presidency a more knowledgable man, with a respect for the federal government."

Byrd grimaces at the mention of the outgoing administration and offers two observations of Ronald Reagan, who he has criticized often for his confrontational approach to the Congress.

"One, he's a very charming and likable man. Second, he's going to leave a legacy our children and grandchildren will pay for — a national debt. We were the world's greatest creditor eight years ago, now we're the world's biggest debtor nation."

Byrd says he holds two former presidents in highest regard:

"My favorite Democratic president was Truman. I served under him for 17 days," Byrd says, referring to the brief transition period when he was taking his seat in the House of Representatives in 1953 and Harry Truman was turning the White House over to Dwight Eisenhower.

The Republican president he holds in highest regard was Richard M. Nixon, a man he describes as "very, very able, equipped to be president. He understood government and he knew how to work with Congress."

Family finally reads letter father wrote during WWII

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — A love letter that a soldier wrote to his wife while he was being shipped overseas during World War II was finally opened 44 years later by his daughter.

"It was a love letter from my father to my mother," said Karan Johnson of Fresno, who opened the letter Thursday at the family's Thanksgiving celebration.

Because of a careless crew member, the letter Master Sgt. Morris Johnson penned in May 1944 never reached his wife, Roberta. The couple has since died.

"There are some fun things about the letter," said Ms. Johnson. "His handwriting was so much better then. And opening it was emotional."

"It was very sweet. My father asked about the baby — my older brother Warren, had been born a month before — and my father said how much he missed the baby and how much he missed my mother," she said.

Johnson wrote the letter while aboard the USS Caleb Strong, which was taking him and other servicemen to Algeria. A crew member was supposed to mail 235 letters written by 92 soldiers when he got back to the United States.

But in 1986, a pest exterminator found the duffel bag full of letters in an attic in Raleigh, N.C.

James Althoff, president of the 781st Bomb Squadron Association, spent two years trying to match the wayward letters with their recipients. The association delivered all but eight of the letters.

Finding Johnson's relatives was difficult because there was no forwarding address for the family's San Francisco address. Althoff finally learned from the Veterans Administration that Johnson, a pharmacist, had died in 1966 and his death certificate listed a Fresno address. Further digging led to the discovery of Karan Johnson and delivery of the letter on Sept. 27.

Ms. Johnson said her brother, who was on hand for the letter opening, was excited about the contents.

"When my brother was in Vietnam, he was about the same age as my father when he wrote the letter to my mother," she said. "He said he remembered writing the same type of letter to his wife."

"It had a very sweet P.S. It said, 'Dear Warren: Take care of your mommy and I'll be around to check on you when I can.'"

Narressa Clark shares her affection with puppies just as others share their love and concern for the 6-year-old Midland girl, the victim of an arterial disease. Proceeds from Dec. 3 and 4 showings of the animated movie "Pound Puppies" at the UA Cine in Midland will go toward the child's medical expenses.

Girl's joy in living strong despite disease

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Narressa Clark is blessed with an innate yearning for living life fully.

At 6 years of age, she is joyfully full of life — but not always. Sometimes she gets dreadfully tired, fatigued, and bleeds internally.

But she is marching onward into life despite her arterial blood disease, cavernous transformation of the portal vein — blockage of the vein leading to the liver.

"She's just a real little trooper — a darling about it," said Carol Winkel, a friend and fan of the child.

The disease has thrown her body into portal hypertension, which is associated with increased blood pressure and increases dangers of internal bleeding.

"I think it probably will take a miracle from God to save her," Mrs. Winkel said. "And I don't discount that happening. There's always hope. She sure has all the support of world coming in. It's just West Texas shining through."

The Clark family, said Mrs. Winkel, is "not morose" about Narressa's plight.

Narressa is the oldest of three children — all girls — in the Malcolm and Lenora Clark family of Midland. Her sisters are Ashlie Ann, 5, and Melissa, 15 months.

Other than an occasional bellyache, the radiant child reflected unobstructed health until six months ago, when she started to vomit blood. Her condition was diagnosed, and expensive treatments in Cook/Fort Worth Children's Medical Center were ordered.

"I was scared," said Narressa, who nevertheless boldly submitted herself to the surgical therapy.

Her mother said that the child's illness is a Catch-22 situation.

"She needs the spleen to hold her extra blood, but the spleen is eating her (blood) platelets, which stop her from bleeding."

Insurance pays most — 80 percent — of the monthly $2,400 surgical-hospital costs for Narressa's therapy. But travel, lodging, medicine and other costs are getting the family deeper into debt.

'Working knowledge' moves man up hall

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

Keith Stretcher is moving up the hall — City Hall, that is.

Stretcher, first assistant city attorney, was named assistant city manager last week in a move applauded by the Midland City Council.

"I think he'll fit in just fine," said City Manager Fred Poe. "He has a real good working knowledge of the city, having worked in legal ... we think it will make us more efficient."

Stretcher — who came to Midland in July 1983 — will take over his new duties Jan. 1.

City officials say the promotion finally will return the city manager's office to full strength. The position had been eliminated in January 1987 following the retirement of former City Manager Jim W. Brown. The energy downturn forced the cost-saving measure.

Stretcher, a former elementary teacher whose father was a school superintendent for 30 years, spent most of his life in Millsap, located about 50 miles west of Fort Worth.

While he still has a penchant for teaching, the city attorney said he was always interested in practicing law. Following graduation from Texas Tech Law School in May 1981, Stretcher joined a private practice in Marshall, but gave it up after two years to accept the Midland job.

"My wife and I decided we wanted to come back to West Texas ... to be honest, I thought I'd be in the job one year and get back into private practice, but this turned out to be really enjoyable."

Stretcher credits the city and his boss David Reagan for the opportunity to enter municipal law in Midland — a community he now calls home. "It's a good town, a friendly town and a great place to raise a family."

However, he didn't know what to think about Midland until two weeks before he left Marshall, when he ran into a woman who had just moved to his old home.

As he recalls, the woman didn't care for Marshall. She told him she just left a wonderful town called Midland. "When she heard I was going there, she kept telling me how much I'd love it, and I do."

Petroplex sales tax rebates rise

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Monthly sales tax rebates sent to Midland and Odessa rose again this month, marking a 14-month streak of consecutive increases.

Midland's payment of $968,848 made up the state's first installment into the Fiscal Year 1989 account and brought the city in at about 7.3 million for the calendar year, compared to $6.4 million for the comparable period in 1987.

The monthly installment represented a 3.2 percent increase in Midland's share of sales tax this month compared to the $809,668 received in November 1987.

November's check represents taxes collected by monthly filers in September and taxes collected by quarterly filers in July, August and September.

Meanwhile, Odessa's $786,753 check represented a 9.5 percent increase over the $718,118 the city garnered in November 1987. With those receipts, Odessa's calendar-year-to-date sales tax reimbursement has climbed to $6.3 million, a figure 16.3 percent ahead of last year's pace.

"The payments to cities and counties continue to improve. The state's economic recovery continues to pick up steam," State Comptroller Bob Bullock, said in releasing the monthly data.

Statewide, the 1988 year-to-date payments to cities are up 12.4 percent over last year.

Checks totaling $52.6 million were sent to the state's six metropolitan transit authorities and one city transit department. This reflected a year-to-date increase of 12 percent over the same period last year.

Checks totaling $10.2 million were also mailed to 81 counties that collect the one-half percent county sales tax.

Midland County, which began collecting the half-cent sales tax in January, received a $494,273 check this month, compared to October's check of $304,421. That brings the county's year-to-total to a little over $3 million.

Judy and Mike Golden travel through much of West Texas in raising funds to help blind people help themselves. They are affiliated with Christian Record Services, which formerly was known as the Christian Record Braille Foundation. The couple work out of Big Spring.

Big Spring-based couple reaching out to help blind

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

What's the saying? "There ain't no such thing as a free lunch?"

Well, there is and there isn't.

For persons afflicted with blindness, Mike and Judy Golden can help arrange many "free" study aids and reading and listening materials. But there are many volunteers who pay the bills.

"Everything is free," Mrs. Golden said. "No postage, no nothing. They just ask for them (materials and aids), and they are sent free."

"Every bit of the services we provide for the blind are free," said her 36-year-old husband.

The couple's mission is raising money by door-to-door calls on businesses. It's a low-key technique adopted years ago in a more spirited manner by old West Texas "drummers," who offered their wares and potions for sale.

The Goldens solicit money so that others might be served.

"We have our business calls, and we have our blind visits," said Mrs. Golden, 37. "We call on businesses for funds and ask them to help in any way they feel they are able to. Sometimes they donate money, or they donate a room (for the Goldens to stay while they are away from the Big Spring area, where they live) or they donate eye-glasses." Donations are tax-deductible, she said.

Mother identifies man killed in mishap

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A 26-year-old Midland man who was identified at a local funeral home by his mother was trying to run across Loop 250 early Thanksgiving morning when he was struck and killed, an investigator said Saturday.

The victim of the accident was identified as Raymundo Castillo Sanchez, 4315 Neely Ave. No. 502, according to Officer Joey Heinemann. Sanchez was recognized by his mother at Ellis Funeral Home, where she went Saturday after hearing of the accident and missing her son, the officer said.

Sanchez was fatally injured 3:15 a.m. Thursday after he was struck by a car driven by 21-year-old Daniel Paul Colwell of Midland near the intersection with Fielder Drive just north of Midland Park Mall, Heinemann said.

"As near as we can tell, he was running across from north to south, and was struck in the southern-most, or median, lane of the westbound lanes," the officer said. "But we don't know where he was coming from or where he was going. That's a long way from Neely, where he lived."

Sanchez was pronounced dead at the scene. Colwell was treated for cuts at Midland Memorial Hospital and released.

The victim had a set of car keys in his pocket at the time, but Heinemann said officers hadn't been able to locate the man's car.

No charges have been filed in the case, according to Heinemann.

Thoughts ramble from old sports heroes to holiday spirit

Ott

More rambling thoughts from a semi-tangled brain that keeps wondering if money is really the root of all evil:

■ With all of the sporting events that have been on television this weekend it has become increasingly obvious to even the most casual observer that we are missing some of the more colorful characters from our past. What ever happened to people like Bobby Layne, Dick Butkus, Ted (The Mad Stork) Hendricks, Casey Stengel, Don Meredith, Mean Joe Greene, Earl "The Pearl" Monroe, Deacon Jones, Mickey Mantle, Joe Dimaggio, "Champagne" Tony Lema, Doug Sanders, Walter Hagen, Bubba Smith, Joe Namath, "Snake" Stabler, Sonny Jurgensen and Alex Hawkins?

■ Where did they all go and, as George Jones once sang, "Who's going to take their place?"

■ It has been suggested that big money changed everything. Suddenly professional sports became a lucrative business instead of a game played by grown men. It all began when 300-pound defensive linemen started carrying briefcases to the office. Somehow, I can't see Bubba Smith or Dick Butkus doing that.

■ Best country saying heard recently: "You've got to take half of what that silly S.O.B. says and divide it by two."

■ Does anyone buy those Christmas albums — "featuring your favorite country-western stars singing your favorite Christmas carols" — that are constantly being advertised on cable television?

■ Have you ever noticed how many seemingly normal human beings pick their nose when stopped at a red light?

■ Here's a standing bet: When President Bush finally gives in to a tax increase, it will be billed as a "sin tax," featuring hikes for cigarettes, beer and alcohol.

■ As you get older you tend to feel more guilty for not telephoning your parents on a regular basis.

■ Of course, that guilt doesn't necessarily translate into more phone calls.

■ Is there anything more boring than watching a parade on television?

■ Call me idealistic, but I still get a kick out of watching small children of all races playing games together on a schoolyard, not caring, or realizing, that some of their more educated elders find the behavior most peculiar.

■ I have a sudden craving for boiled shrimp and Puerto Rican rum.

■ It must be a post-Thanksgiving hangover.

■ Although as a general rule I take great pride in not being a worrier, some time is going to have to pass before I agree to go rafting down the Rio Grande.

■ Try though I will, I can't get into the Christmas spirit this early.

■ There must be something terribly seductive about politics at the national level. Have you ever noticed that when a candidate leaves office he rarely returns to his home district? He remains in Washington, working as a consultant or as a lobbyist or as an administrative aide. The power must be intoxicating.

■ People really do seem nicer during the holiday season.

■ The saddest people in life seem to be those who are so wrapped up in a cause that they can't open their eyes to new ideas and philosophies.

■ Those are the same people who usually are afraid to meet new and interesting people.

■ You no doubt have heard the old story about the elderly couple who spent some 50 years together — sharing the highs and lows of life's journey. Suddenly, out of the clear blue, the wife dies of cancer. Six months later, the husband dies of a broken heart.

■ I know it sounds corny, but I hope love that strong really exists.

Holiday auto accidents kill 18

Associated Press

A 17-year-old Fentress youth became the 18th person to die on Texas roads during the Thanksgiving holiday weekend when the car he was riding in hit a tree.

Duane Todd Williamson died Friday night when the car driven by his friend Jack Irish III, 16, of Luling lost control and struck a tree on Farm-to-Market Road 20 about 11 miles east of Seguin.

Irish was in stable condition in the intensive care unit at the Guadalupe Valley Hospital in Seguin.

Williamson was one of three people to die on Texas roads Friday as the Associated Press continued its unofficial tally of traffic deaths since 6 p.m. Wednesday. The count continues through midnight Sunday.

Earlier Friday, a 20-year-old Floresville man died when his car flipped into a rural culvert.

Daniel Rene Garza, a grocery store stocker, was driving southbound on Loop 181 north of Floresville about 1 a.m. when his car hit a bridge guardrail in rural Wilson County, the Texas Department of Public Safety said.

A 16-year-old San Antonio boy, Robert Minor, was thrown from the bed of a pickup and died earlier Friday when the truck collided with a car on Interstate Highway 35 in San Antonio. The driver of the car, Roland Inojose, 28, was charged with involuntary manslaughter.

Eleven people were killed in accidents Thursday, including a 31-year-old Abilene woman who was struck while walking her dog.

Four others were killed Wednesday in three separate accidents.

Delia Jernigan and her pet were killed around 8:45 p.m. Thursday on State Highway 351, about 1⅛ miles northeast of Abilene. Officials say the animal ran across the highway and was hit by a vehicle. When Ms. Jernigan tried to reach the pet, she, too, was struck by a vehicle.

El Paso police said a man was killed and his female passenger injured about 9 p.m. when the motorcycle they were riding collided with a van. Two other men were killed in El Paso in a one-car rollover Thanksgiving morning. Their names weren't immediately released.

Another man was killed and his wife was injured about 5:30 p.m. near Orange when their motorcycle collided with a car on an Interstate 10 service road. A male pedestrian was struck and killed shortly before 3 a.m. in Midland, police said. Robert Burns Scherer, 80, died when his car ran off the road and struck a tree near Anahuac Thursday.

Gabino Juarez, 33, and Jorge Emilio Torres, 18, were killed when their car slammed into a utility pole in downtown Houston. Bryan Keith Valentine, also of Houston, died about 2:30 a.m. when he was thrown from a car, police said.

Felipe Villarreal Duenez, 27, was killed about 6:30 p.m. Thursday on Farm Road 345 just north of San Benito when he lost control of his car and it overturned and skidded into a ditch.

On Wednesday, Kevin Lee Henne, 34, of Killeen, was killed in a Dallas motorcycle accident.

CHILD

Clark, a draftsman, is far from affluent. And the family's income recently was slashed when his wife, a legal secretary who formerly managed a retail clothing store, left her job to care for Narressa, who requires increased attention.

The Clarks lost their house, spent their savings on medical expenses and moved into rental quarters.

The mother is beset by guilt over the affliction and for not being financially able to care for her daughter as both she and her husband would like.

"It's such a disheartening feeling," Mrs. Clark, 24, said Saturday. "We are her parents and should be able to provide for her. We are all that she has."

But the guilt is lessening, as is the worry.

"As far as worry, we turned that over to God months ago," she said. Her minister-brother helped her deal with a mother's grief over the prospects of losing a daughter.

"You can't help but worry," she said. "But you can't let it overrun to the point you can't function."

Narressa, she said, is "such a beautiful child.

"For six years, she was fine," the mother said. However, the child did complain of stomachaches. "The doctors thought nothing of it," Mrs. Clark recalled, and reasoned that some children will feign aches just to get attention or to avoid work.

After the illness was diagnosed, the Clark family sought treatment for Narressa from Dr. Lyn Hunt in Fort Worth.

"You trust your doctor," Mrs. Clark reasoned. "We're certainly trusting the one in Fort Worth."

"We told her that we would be a little slow in paying and that we weren't a wealthy family," Clark said. "And she lowered her office visits (fees)."

Apparently, the surgical treatments on Narressa are "not working," Mrs. Clark said. Dr. Hunt, a pediatric gastroenterologist, "is more disappointed than I am," the mother said. "It's all she knows to do."

Narressa, who has an understanding of the gravity of her condition, is not giving up.

" 'Momma, I'm not ready for God to take me away to Heaven,' " the mother said her daughter told her.

Narressa, who has lost her two front baby teeth but never her humor, is "perfect for that old song, 'All I Want for Christmas Are My Two Front Teeth,' " Mrs. Winkel smiled.

Mrs. Winkel is coordinating fund-raising drives for the child's medical expenses. An upcoming fund-raiser is the Dec. 3 and 4 showings of the animated movie "Pound Puppies" at UA Cine 4 in Midland. Proceeds from the showings will go toward paying for the child's medical expenses. Additionally, a trust in Narressa's name is set up at ClayDesta National Bank in Midland.

Routine medical treatments are "buying time" for research into the illness and time for the body's own healing powers to restore the child to health, said Mrs. Winkel. "It's treatable."

BLIND

The Goldens seek out free-will donations to help fund Christian Record Services. They make personal visits to blind people to ascertain that they are eligible for the organization's free services. Those services include the providing of inspirational home-reading material, audio-cassette tapes, books and magazines in braille and in large print for the visually handicapped, such as Mrs. Golden, who is legally blind.

Services also include sponsorships for blind people to summer camps, where they may participate in arts and crafts, swimming, sailing, skiing and archery. In archery, for example, the blind archer "aims" at a beeping sound emanating from the center of the bull's-eye. The bursting of a balloon behind the target signals a hit.

"I imagine there are some good ones (blind archers)," Mrs. Golden said, "because the ears are real sensitive."

"I've been around blind people all of my life," said Mrs. Golden, "and have an appreciation for the blind." As a result, her work in soliciting funds to help the blind lead fulfilled and productive lives is "more than just a job for me," she said. "I'm working with people I understand."

Before the Goldens entered their ministry with Christian Record Services earlier this year, they worked at the Beacon Lighthouse for the Blind in Wichita Falls. Mrs. Golden was a rehabilitation teacher, and Golden was a driver who "helped to get the blind where they needed to be."

Golden said his wife was a strong influence in bringing him into the Christian Record Services ministry.

"I've tried to figure out what it's like to be blind," Golden said. 'I like to help people."

Because their ministry in West Texas is just under way, Mrs. Golden said that some people are a bit wary of their solicitations.

" 'We've never heard of you. Who are you?' " she said some people will ask.

"There's a lot of good causes out there. We're just another one coming through. We just walk in (to businesses) and ask for the manager or owner and ask if they are able to help us. There's no pressure put on them."

"If they give, that's fine," Golden said. "If they don't, that's fine, too."

The Goldens' work is legitimate, Mrs. Golden said, and can be verified through the Better Business Bureau.

"With the economy like it is now," she said, "a lot of people say, 'I'd like to help, but right now, I can't.' "

Many businesses and individuals donate funds to United Way campaigns, Mrs. Golden noted, and can hardly give more.

"We appreciate that they are helping people," she said. "The people who can't help say 'Maybe next year.' "

In their ministry to blind people, the Goldens seek out examples of blind people who have succeeded in endeavors — from sports and the performing arts to scholarship and business.

"It ain't easy (to succeed)," Mrs. Golden said, "but they can do it. It's not easy to make it in a world when you've got a handicap. It's inspiration to (other) blind people" when challenges are met and goals are accomplished.

Revenue to cities in the metropolitan areas increased again this month. Houston is still in the lead with a year-to-date increase of 20.8 percent over 1987. Dallas had an increase of 8.3 percent and San Antonio saw an increase of 8.8 percent. El Paso gain 11.8 percent and Fort Worth increase 10.2 percent. Austin's allocation was up 7.9 pecent.

Other West Texas cities reaped increased sales tax rebates this month.

Andrews' $67,534 payment represents an 11.8 percent increase over the $60,272 which the city garnered in November 1987.

Lamesa collected $64,406, an 18.4 percent increase over the $54,385 received during the same period last year.

A $180,171 check sent to the city of Big Spring represented a 2 percent increase over last year's check of $176,531.

Stanton's year-to-date totals also came in higher than last year: $61,955 compared to $45,449. The city received $7,878 this month. Last November, Stanton received $7,088.

Stretcher remains a staunch supporter of Texas Tech, his alma mater, where his wife, Sheryl, became one of the first students to attain a masters degree to teach blind children. "She's taught children all over West Texas," says her proud husband.

When Stretcher isn't mulling over city contracts and ordinances, he can usually be found in the stands at Lubbock's Jones Stadium or at Midland High or Midland Lee football games.

"I go to nearly every home game at Tech ... and Midland Lee-Midland High, they play a real good brand of football as well," he says.

Poe is looking forward to having Strecher in the manager's office, where he and Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor now oversee 16 different departments, with little time to spare for the details of each one.

"We haven't defined exactly what he's doing yet, but we do plan to divide up the departments a little further," Poe said.

Added Stretcher: "It's going to be a different world from legal, but I'm looking forward to it."

Texas columnist dies

FORT WORTH (AP) — George Bernard Dolan, front page columnist of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram for 30 years, died Saturday of an extended illness. He was 65.

Dolan began working on the Temple Telegram in 1939 and became city editor before leaving in 1943 to serve in World War II.

He rejoined the newspaper after the war and joined the Fort Worth Star-Telegram as a general assignments reporter in 1948. After a brief return to the Temple newspaper as managing editor, Dolan became the Star-Telegram's featured columnist in April 1957.

Dolan's light, humorous writing style was a popular front page feature of the Star-Telegram. He also wrote two books, "Slightly Left and Right of Center" in 1967, and "Come Quick! Rodger's Had a Fit" in 1970.

Dolan is survived by his wife, Melba Jones Dolan of Fort Worth; two daughters, two sons, six grandchildren, one great granddaughter, a brother, and several nieces and nephews.

A funeral service is scheduled for noon Tuesday at First United Methodist Church with burial at Greenwood Memorial Park in Fort Worth.

Celebrators consume 17,000 pounds of meat

Gathering in Westminster Hall after the coronation of George IV in 1821, celebrators consumed 17,000 pounds of beef, veal and mutton, together with a vast quantity of sweetbreads, cows' heels and calves' feet, 160 geese, 1,160 chickens, 1,730 pounds of bacon, 160 dishes of fish and more.

Jean Brownfield

BROWNFIELD — Mrs. Lee (Jean) Brownfield, 71, of Brownfield died Friday in a Lubbock hospital following a brief illness.

Services will be held 2 p.m. Monday in the First United Methodist Church with the Rev. Kenneth Metzger, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in the Terry County Memorial Cemetery under the direction of Brownfield Funeral Home.

Mrs. Brown was born on June 24, 1917, in Hamilton County to Frank and Maggie Luckie and moved with her parents to the Slaton area in 1923 and to Brownfield in 1932.

She married Lee Brownfield in Post Dec. 5, 1935.

Mrs. Brownfield was founder and past president of Alpha Omega Study Club, was a member of Maids and Matrons, and was a past worthy matron of the Order of the Eastern Star. She helped organize the Telephone Reassurance Program and was active in the Meals-on-Wheels program. She was a member of the First United Methodist Church.

Survivors include her husband, Lee Brownfield of Brownfield; two daughters, Mrs. B.P. (Mary Jane) Young of Midland and Mrs. Glaze (Linda) Sacra of Midland; a sister, Margaret Herring of Odessa; and five grandchildren.

The family has requested that memorials be made to the Meals-on-Wheels program, Girls Town, Terry County Heritage Museum, or donors' favorite charities.

Jesse P. Snipes

Graveside services for Jesse P. Snipes of Midland have been set for 2 p.m. Sunday at Fairview Cemetery with the Rev. Gordon Estenson, associate minister of Our Savior Lutheran Church, presiding.

Snipes died Wednesday morning at a local hospital.

He was born May 19, 1921, in Drumright, Okla. He worked in the oil fields of Oklahoma and eastern New Mexico most of his life, and moved to Midland in 1962. He worked for the Challenger Rig Company as parts manager before his retirement in 1983. He served with the U.S. Army in the Pacific during World War II and also in Korea. He was affiliated with the Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife, Ruby Snipes of Midland; a son, Karl Paul Snipes of Lake Elsinore, Calif.; a daughter, Sandra Brazil of Midland; a stepson, Michael Hall of McCamey; his mother, Mrs. Edna Snipes of Midland; seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

The family requests that memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, the American Cancer Society, or a favorite charity.

Survivors include two daughters, Carla Erwin of Gardendale and Rhonda Delcore of Odessa; a son, Curtis Johnson of Round Rock; and eight grandchildren.

Developments in diabetes care to be shown at free screening

From Staff Reports

The most recent developments in drugs for treatment of diabetes, diabetic supplies and foods will be displayed and open to the public when the Diabetes Center of the Southwest holds an open house from 1 to 5 p.m. Tuesday.

The Diabetes Center, located in Suite 190 at ClayDesta Towers, represents the newest concept in comprehensive care for the diabetic patient by providing all the physicians and facilities under one roof. The idea for the clinic was formulated by Dr. G. Murthy Gollapudi, an endocrinologist who practices in Midland and Odessa.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony is scheduled for 2 p.m. by the Chamber of Commerce M-Squad.

A free blood sugar screening for the public will be conducted throughout the afternoon. Pharmaceutical firms, diabetic supply manfucaturers and diabetic food representatives will supply information about the latest developments in their fields.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Carillon setting for second MC Merry Christmas program

By H.A. TUCK

Midland College's "MC Merry Christmas" celebration is scheduled for Thursday at 6:15 p.m. and you are invited to attend. It's the second such observance.

Tuck

The celebration started last year with lights on the Hodge Carillon Tower and on the Murray Fasken Learning Resource Center. This year the lighting is being expanded to include portions of the Administration, Allison Fine Arts, Abell-Hanger Science Faculty, and Occupational-Technical Buildings. The oak trees in the Beal Plaza also are being festooned with lights.

Hot wassail punch and gingerbread cookies will be served, starting at 6:15 p.m. Members of the Faculty Senate are in charge of the refreshments.

Then keyboard instructor Dr. Betty Morris plays a live carillon concert at 6:30 p.m. Lights on the Carilloon Tower come on at 6:30 p.m., followed by a program by the college Jazz Singers, who then will lead in group caroling. The program is scheduled to end at 7:05 p.m.

Several hundred Midlanders joined students, faculty, and staff in last year's event. This year's celebration should be even larger, and organizers hope to make it an annual tradition.

Adding to the holiday decorations will be luminarias lining the sidewalks leading to the Carillon Tower. These are being built and installed by members of the Student Senate and members of the Abell-Hanger Scholarship Club.

The lights will remain on nightly through January 2, so you can bring your out-of-town guests out to the campus during the holidays to see the lights. Christmas music also will be playing on the Carillon Tower on a daily schedule of 12 noon, 4 p.m., and 8:20 p.m.

• • •

Right after the MC Merry Christmas, you can attend the Midland College-Howard College basketball game. That starts at 7:30 p.m. in Chaparral Center and marks the first home conference game of the season.

The Howard College Hawks have a new coach, Steve Green, and a flock of great players this year.

Getting back from a three-day tournament in Great Bend, Kan., sometime today, the Chaps get back on the bus tomorrow and travel to Snyder for their conference opener against Western Texas College in the Scurry County Coliseum.

All the Chaparral conference games will be carried live on KCRS Radio, 550 AM, for those of you who can't attend the game.

Would you like to take and complete a three-hour college course in just three weeks? It's possible with a mini-semester session which begins Monday. You can choose from economics, English, legal assistant, government, sociology, or psychology. Registration will take place at 2 p.m. Monday in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium, with classes from 2-5 p.m. Monday through Friday, ending Dec. 16. For more information about the mini-semester, call 685-4501 or come to the Allison auditorium.

If you have school-age cheerleaders, or would-be cheerleaders, around your house, take note of this: The Midland College cheerleaders and mascot will present a special workshop on Saturday, Dec. 10. The session from 8 a.m.-12 noon that day is for students in the first through sixth grade and the 12 noon-4 p.m. session is for those in grades seven through twelve. Cost is just $10 per person.

For more information, call the MC cheerleader coach Betty Murrah at 685-4575.

EDUCATION

Jack Sherman Chevrolet and the Chevrolet Motor Division of General Motors presented the college with a new 1988 Chevrolet Spectrum last week. It's a slightly damaged unit which will be used by the Automotive Technology instructors for classroom and lab purposes. The car can never be licensed, sold, traded, or driven.

But it can provide excellent lab experiences for future auto technicians.

On behalf of the Lone Star Chevrolet Dealers Association, Jack Sherman also recently presented MC with a $2,500 cash grant which will be used for auto technology scholarships.

The college is always grateful for such contributions from the business community.

• • •

Dr. Michael Jordan and a number of his students will present a free concert Friday at 8 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium. The college Chorale, Chamber Singers, and Jazz Singers will present a wide assortment of music taken from such composers are Brahms, Halsey Stevens, Palestrina, Copeland, and Haydn. We particularly urge you to see the performance by the newly formed Jazz Singers, who use choreography, special costumes and contemporary music for their presentations.

• • •

Friday also is the final day for the exhibit of prints by Miquel Cortinas of San Antonio. You can see the show in the McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building. Hours this week are 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Coming next is the annual Fall Student Show, which opens Dec. 6 and closes on Dec. 11.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

Odeessan wins college's first poetry prize

From Staff Reports

Alice King Greenwood of Odessa was named winner of the first Hilda Simmons Levitt Poetry Award at Midland College.

Her poem, "Miss Maggie", was selected as winner of the $500 cash award and plaque during award ceremonies Monday. Named as second place winner, which receives $200 and a plaque, was Karen Bingham Pape of Midland.

Her poem was entitled "Sin Eater."

The Levitt Poetry Award was instituted this year by Stanley Levitt of Midland in memory of his late wife, Hilda Simmons Levitt.

"We had a number of outstanding entries for the contest, which we expect will draw even more entries in future years," said Larry D. Griffin, Midland College instructor in English and coordinator for the contest.

Poetry was accepted from current students, as well as those who had been enrolled in English classes at Midland College during the past two years. The award will be presented each year.

Deficit dilemma needs resolved

When George Bush officially assumes residence at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue one of the first decisions likely to confront him will be whether to swallow his "read my lips" campaign pledge of no new taxes or stand by it with veto pen in hand. At issue is the question of how well-off every American may be over the next four years.

Bush will face a Congress potentially more hostile to his economic game-plan than any faced by his predecessor, Ronald Reagan, and with the numbers to back up its intent. There's little doubt, in fact, that Bush will have to resort to the veto to enforce some of his policies — if he believes in them strongly enough.

His now infamous statement of opposition to new taxes may have been a ploy designed to win votes. From the results of the election, one can assume that it worked. Yet it could be a statement he'll regret making. If the actions of other political leaders lately are any indicator, there's ample uncertainty around concerning the right course to take in regard to the economy:

■ The General Accounting Office has called for the closing of all insolvent savings and loans, and criticized the policy of keeping problem institutions open with government funds. The policy threatens to undermine the economy by compounding the nation's fiscal dilemma.

■ Both former Presidents Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford have urged Bush to raise taxes and limit Social Security benefit increases in order to trim the federal deficit. If a tax increase were to be enacted, it certainly should not be borne by only one group of taxpayers, such as the elderly. Rather, it should be levied across-the-board. That's only fair. But is even a fair approach on taxes wise at this point?

In the rush to a tax increase as a panacea for mounting fiscal troubles, not everyone believes the road to financial wellness runs through the forest of tax hikes. In fact, a report by the Heritage Foundation, a respected public policy research institute, argues that not only would a tax hike fail to solve the deficit crisis, it would also compound the problem by wiping away some of the progress made during the Reagan years.

The report, authored by Stephen Moore, says that Bush and the Congress already have in place what is needed to balance the budget by 1993, as required by the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings legislation. But that's conditional on Congress holding the rate of spending growth to less than 4% per year, and for Congress that may be impossible. Moore also contends that a tax increase at this time would result in higher spending, not lower budget deficits, and could spark a recession. Moore's report states plainly that the way to reduce the deficit is by restraining spending and maintaining the economic growth started during the Reagan years.

The author asserts, "A balanced budget at higher levels of taxes and spending will reduce the living standards of Americans."

According to Moore, virtually every economist agrees that without a strong economy, the budget cannot be balanced. So, a tax increase, which would further weaken the economy, would only compound the economic woes. Moore notes that a number of studies show that when Congress raises taxes, the economy grows at a slower pace, which adds to deficit pressures.

The problem still comes back to Congress's inability to live within its means. As one case in point, the report notes that Congress, in 1982, convinced Reagan to accept a $100 billion tax increase on the basis that the money would be used to cut the deficit. It wasn't, however, and in 1986 the deficit had climbed by $100 billion.

A conservative approach to resolving the deficit dilemma appears to be wisest. Yet Bush should not close his eyes to any solution. While Bush may have been short-sighted to remark that there will be no tax increase, the evidence offered by the Heritage Foundation strongly supports a continued policy of no new taxes.

Bush should certainly weigh all possibilities in choosing the proper fiscal course for the nation, but for the present that appears to be through the approach pledged: no new taxes.

Promising study

Many of the 1.5 million Americans who fall victim to heart attacks annually are routinely undergoing an unnecessary procedure that is potentially dangerous and expensive, according to a major study funded by the federal government.

The study demonstrated that patients receiving prompt, normal treatment with the clot-dissolving drug TPA did not always need the additional and sometimes risky procedure of angioplasty, in which a tiny balloon is threaded into an artery on a catheter and then inflated.

This operation, which widens the artery to permit a freer flow of blood to the heart, is performed routinely at many large hospitals.

But the results of a 50-hospital study directed by Dr. Eugene Braunwald, of Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, showed that persons treated with TPA gained no additional benefit from angioplasty in the short run.

The study involved 3,262 heart-attack patients and is widely regarded in the medical profession as having settled one of the most controversial questions in modern cardiology.

Dr. Braunwald, who presented the results of his study at the yearly scientific meeting of the American Heart Association, said a change away from the practice of routine angioplasty could eliminate thousands of unnecessary operations and save the Medicare program as much as $750 million annually.

Persons living in remote areas will also find comfort in the test results. They indicate that most heart patients can be treated in community hospitals where angioplasty is not normally available.

But patients treated with TPA in community hospitals can be transferred to tertiary care centers later, if angioplasty is needed.

Dr. Braunwald's study cites cost savings of $2,347 a patient by adopting the wait-and-see approach before resorting to angioplasty. But just as important is the change in medical treatment suggested by the test results — a gradual swing away from the mechanistic approach and cardiac catheter laboratories that have dominated modern techniques for dealing with heart attacks.

The landmark Braunwald study could well stimulate beneficial changes in nationwide standards of practice, starting with a more conservative strategy of watching and waiting to see if angioplasty is really necessary.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Nov. 27, the 332nd day of 1988. There are 34 days left in the year.

Ten years ago, San Francisco Mayor George Moscone and City Supervisor Harvey Milk, a gay-rights activist, were shot to death in City Hall by former Supervisor Dan White.

WASHINGTON — Remember candidate Ronald Reagan's harangue about the Chicago welfare mother who drove a Cadillac to pick up her check?

Jack Anderson

Here's the 1988 variation on the theme of feeding at the public trough — 4,050 savings and loan executives and their spouses ringed by palm trees and catching rays on Waikiki. They gathered for the annual convention of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, the industry's oldest and largest trade group.

It should have been a wake, not a party. The nations 3,048 thrifts lost $7.5 billion during the first six months of this year. Bled by 500 busted institutions and another 400 crippled ones, the industry is losing more than $1 billion a month. Greed, hyperspeculation, shoddy underwriting, self-serving appraisals and fraud are etched on the tombstones of the fallen thrifts.

The final bailout tab will exceed $60 billion and could approach $100 billion. It will be borne by the taxpayer. League officials have been secretly angling for such a bailout for years, but only in recent months have they demanded that taxpayers foot the bill.

For the industry as a whole, the coming bailout will be the equivalent of about a five-year, all-expense paid vacation in Las Vegas (gambling debts included.)

The bank board told insolvent thrifts not to pay for their executives to attend the Hawaii meeting. Their healthier sister-institutions share a collective guilt for the collapse, but they didn't let that stand in the way of paying for the festivities. In almost mocking contempt for the taxpayer, thrift executives gathered in Hawaii for some conspicuous consumption, and a big pat on the back from their cheerleader who is supposed to be their chief regulator, Danny Wall, the chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

"Hold your heads high," intoned Wall, who espouses no-fault greed. It doesn't matter who is responsible for the crisis, he said, swatting away reporters' pesky questions.

A dispute over the cost of the bailout pits Wall against his own economists, the General Accounting Office, private financial consultants and even trade groups. Wall still refuses to concede that a taxpayer bailout is needed. Given his record with figures, he must be calculating the rescue math on his fingers and toes.

There is an unspoken "gotcha" in the industry's behavior. Thrift executives know that if they go down, so go billions of dollars in insured savings and the safety of the entire financial system. Such a cavalier attitude is not excusable in Wall. He is a poor regulator and he should be removed.

The spectacle of the savings and loan league crying for a taxpayer bailout recalls the old tale about the child who killed his parents and then threw himself on the mercy of the court because he was an orphan.

According to numerous regulatory and congressional officials, the U.S. League of Savings Institutions has blocked repeated attempts over the years to curb industry high fliers, strengthen regulations and pass legislation that would recapitalize the depositor insurance fund through the sale of bonds.

"In private conversations, some industry leaders told me personally that the strategy was to keep the amount of the FSLIC (Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.) recapitalization down to $5 billion or less, which clearly wasn't enough. If it was kept down that small, by 1989, there would be a new administration that would find itself with the problem so bad that only a massive taxpayer bailout would solve it," Gray told our associate Michael Binstein.

It's time again for New President Buildup!

NEW YORK — This is the time when media and politicians connive in the old New President Buildup. The new president is suddenly discovered to possess virtues that must surely lead us into a new age. Now at last the golden American future and the good old days will become one, the rest of the world will stop behaving so inconveniently and everyone's liver bile will flow at the rate of two pints a day.

Russell Baker

It is a great time to be alive, provided you turn off your thinkpiece and bask in the gush. Jimmy Carter and Rosalynn, for instance, getting out of their limousine and walking — actually walking — down Pennsylvania Avenue! It was the most wonderful thing that ever happened.

Or almost. Before electing a president who would walk down Pennsylvania Avenue, we had Gerry Ford, who made his own breakfast toast right there in the White House.

Imagine: The president of the United States, world's most powerful man and all those other heavy-breathing, network-news modifiers that weigh him down. Making his own toast.

When they told us that after he'd been in the White House a day or two, it was obvious the Millennium was already at Silver Spring and coming down Georgia Avenue fast. If you were in Washington that week you still remember the thrill in the voices of the people reading the news on the radio:

"Made his own toast again this morning."

Maybe you remember hugging a loved one over the frying pan where eggs and bacon were cooking for the first time since the Truman Administration. Remember saying, "Now that we've finally got a president who makes his own toast, those boring doctors will soon be telling us we can eat bacon and eggs after all, without prematurely shuffling off the old mortal coil."

It was one of the best buildups we ever had for a new president. Then one morning Ford came on the buildup box to say he was pardoning former President Nixon, just in case anybody was planning to indict him.

You knew the buildup was over when you waited, in vain, all that day and half the next for the TV, the radio, the press, anybody for Heaven's sake to tell you whether the president had made his own toast that morning.

Alas, the toast news was over forever. With Nixon pardoned, the world resumed. Debt and terrorism resumed. Human truculence resumed. No wonder we elected Carter. The man carried his own suitcase. If he spent the night at your house, he made the bed next morning. He walked down Pennsylvania Avenue.

If you lived in Washington and saw the walk and remembered the making of the toast and the ruined hopes of that bygone buildup, maybe you were a little skeptical about the Carters walking down Pennsylvania Avenue.

And why not? As a Washingtonian, you knew how dreary it was to walk down Pennsylvania Avenue. Absolutely nothing in that sterile expanse to entertain the eye or brighten the spirit.

Nobody sensible ever walked down Pennsylvania Avenue. With all that tonnage of grim federal marble, it looked like a cemetery in Brobdingnag and felt seven years long.

Maybe you felt a sneaky impulse to say, "Anybody who knows so little about Washington that he'll walk down Pennsylvania Avenue is going to have a grim stay at the White House."

Well, of course you didn't dare say that. Not because you were afraid the media buildup team would call you a shameful example of the unAmerican spirit created among card-carrying Washingtonians by living "inside the Beltway." In 1976, no one had yet discovered the vile condition of society "inside the Beltway."

You knew, though, that betraying the slightest sign that you were in touch with reality might ruin you as long as the buildup was in progress.

Then we discovered that walking down Pennsylvania Avenue was a cover for schemes to let Arabs cut off our gasoline and Iranian fanatics kidnap a whole embassy. And wasn't it great to get a new president whose power to make the media rave about White House glamor, class and elegance would stop the insolence of kidnappers, make America top-of-the-world-ma, and balance the budget?

Now it's Bush's turn. Though his time is still some weeks away, we can glimpse an outline of the coming buildup. What a gorgeous family guy! What a chooser of talent! Just last week the penultimate accolade was given his anointed White House staff chief, John Sununu.

Sununu "does not suffer fools gladly." That's the buildup line on Sununu. At this stage who dares point out that, if the line is true, Sununu is absurdly unfit for the job?

GEORGE F. WILL

Proxmire leaves senate 'golden' legacy

WASHINGTON — William Proxmire's 31-year Senate career, now winding down, peaked early. He says the high point was his arrival in 1957 at National Airport, where he was greeted as a hero by the Senate's Democratic grandees whose world he had saved. Because of several Senate deaths, his unexpected victory in a special election prevented a 48-48 tie which Vice President Nixon would have broken and enabled Republicans to organize the Senate.

George F. Will

The day he arrived, when the world was young and Strom Thurmond was a Democrat, Thurmond was in full flight, conducting a 24-hour filibuster. South Carolina specializes in mavericks. So does Wisconsin. Proxmire is a product of Wisconsin populism.

At times it seems Wisconsin should take a sedative and go sit under a tree. Since 1957, Proxmire has held the seat vacated by the death of a populist whose jingle proclaimed, "Nobody loves McCarthy but the pee-pul And we jus' love our Joe."

Robert La Follette, founding father of progressivism, first was governor and then, from 1906 until his death in 1925, senator. From 1925 until 1947, his son, Robert, Jr., was senator. Then came Joe. So for 82 years the seat Proxmire occupies has been held by live wires.

Until recently, when his knees began to protest, Proxmire, who is 73, ran the four miles from home to office. He has the slightly cadaverous look of the aggressively healthy. Some senators will be dry-eyed about the departure of this unclubbable man, but his departure will further dilute the Senate's institutional memory.

Although the Founders thought the Senate would be a lagoon of stability, there is more turnover there than in the House, which is supposed to be a toy for the turbulent masses. This year 99 percent of House incumbents seeking re-election won. Fifty-six of the 435 seats were uncontested. Twenty winners won with 90 percent of the vote. In 369 districts, the winners got more than 60 percent. And if 55 percent makes a landslide, there were 401 landslides.

Today Proxmire is third in Senate seniority behind Thurmond and John Stennis. The retirements of Proxmire and Stennis will remove 72 years of Senate experience. When the new Senate convenes, there will be just two members who were elected in the 1950s (Thurmond and Robert Byrd) and 10 from the 1960s. The average seniority will be just 10 years.

Proxmire's favorite senator was Paul Douglas (D-Ill.), "the only world-class economist ever to serve in Congress." Douglas' motto, says Proxmire, was that you do not have to be a wastrel to be a liberal.

Proxmire spent $145.10 getting re-elected in 1982 ($33.65 less than in 1976). He thinks most senators could do the same. But (this is the kind of Proxmire talk that sets some senators' teeth on edge) "they like the ego trip of taking other people's money and spending it on television telling people what great guys they are." The man who won Proxmire's seat this year spent $5 million of his own money.

Of course Proxmire, like other senators, spends millions of government dollars on newsletters, home offices and other aids to self-promotion and re-election. Proxmire knows how to get noticed, as with his monthly Golden Fleece award, ridiculing what he considers foolish government spending. Some of his awards have been Philistine, but populism often is.

A survey of network news coverage in a recent year showed that 10 senators received 50 percent of the coverage, 20 senators got 68 percent and 17 senators never appeared on any of the 1,095 broadasts. Proxmire, chairman of the Banking Committee, has deservedly been one of the most noticed.

A graduate of Yale and Harvard Business School, he worries about the things populists have worried about since William Jennings Bryan. They are economic giantism (for example, he dislikes interstate branches of banks) and the quantity and value of money and credit.

But his worries have a conservative cast. He thinks the $2.5 trillion federal debt and $3 trillion household debt and $4 trillion corporate debt denote a constituency for inflation. And he denies that the government should try to avoid recessions "at all costs." It should ameliorate the business cycle, but recessions are a price of a free economy.

Proxmire thinks Senate procedure is too replete with blocking mechanisms, and that the Senate needs something like the House Rules Committee to limit amendments and debate.

He has long been a burr under the Senate's saddle. He once delivered a blistering speech on the Senate floor, protesting Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson's cattle-prod style of leadership. Many colleagues praised him, but did so in calls to his home, not his office. That was back when the world was young and senators worried that their office phones were tapped.

Attack by snipers should escalate our 'war on drugs'

All those people who've not stepped forward to volunteer to fight in the "war" against drugs got another reason to do so last weekend. A sniper attack on a couple rafting the Rio Grande, which left the man dead, and his wife and their guide wounded, made it crystal clear that the drug "problem" is everyone's problem.

Officials could not say with certainty early this week that the shooting incident was drug-related, but since the area where it occurred, a stretch of the Rio Grande near Lajitas, is notorious for drug-trafficking and smuggling, it's routine to suspect the rafters may have stumbled onto a drug transaction or been the targets of individuals acting under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

The other alternative, although not even mentioned to this point, is not likely. It would be that Mexican residents fired on the rafters because they did not want them on the river. That would be a violation of international law and could spark a border war. I say not likely to that possibility because Texas has shared a border with Mexico for more than 150 years, and relations between the two nations have generally been good.

But suspecting involvement by drug-traffickers is justified, not only because the area has experienced that illicit activity for years but also because of recent reports by the media about drug-traffickers using state and national parks as sites to grow their illegal plants and produce their drugs. Those reports also have detailed how the drug-traffickers have booby-trapped their sites with deadly traps to injure of kill unsuspecting people who might stumble onto them.

The Rio Grande shooting, which killed 40-year-old Michael Heffley and injured his wife and their guide, says clearly that it isn't necessarily safe to go into the outdoors any longer. So now it seems that the drug-dealers aren't content to make the average American feel uncomfortable in his own home or with his kids attending the neighborhood school. Now they want you to be uneasy when you go on vacation or take the family on a trip.

Yes, the drug problem is crashing home in a powerful way. Americans have seen it in glimpses: a husband who takes pills to stay awake while he works; a wife who acquires a drinking problem that's more than "social"; a child who's kicked out of school for selling drugs. Those were indications that a problem was looming.

But now, more than ever, we're being shown in ways that even if we've cleaned up our act in other respects, the drug problem may still beat us. Like being shot to death on a rafting trip.

How long will it be before we're angry enough to join the "war" against drugs and fight back for our very lives?

Allison 'missing man' in Bush's formation

EDITOR'S NOTE: This guest column by Peter Roussel is about the late Jimmy Allison, former publisher of The Reporter-Telegram and longtime friend and political associate of President-elect George Bush. Roussel is a former deputy White House press secretary under Ronald Reagan. The column originally appeared Nov. 17th in the Dallas Times Herald and is reprinted here with permission.

By PETER ROUSSEL

Just as the missing-man formation is flown by air groups in honor of a fallen comrade, so there was a silent presence in George Bush's campaign — James N. Allison Jr.

Before there was James A. Baker III, there was Jimmy Allison. While Baker comes close to taking his place in present day terms, I think even he would agree that Allison's role in Bush's rites of passage from the sinecure position of Midland County chairman for the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket in 1956 into the arena of high-stakes elective politics was a uniquely special one. Aide, confidant, campaign manager, source of joke material, alter ego — Allison and Bush were bonded by an uncommon loyalty.

He came out of Midland, of a family that published the town's newspaper. It was there that he and a young high flier out of the oil patch by way of Connecticut decided to join together in a political call to arms that would ultimately do much to help free Texas from its one-party bondage.

The first time he passed before these eyes was 1969. He and Congressman Bush had come to Austin, where, aside from signing me on as press secretary, the congressman confided they were "taking a look at this Senate thing (race)." That night I was interviewed and hired by Allison, the negotiations concluding with a handshake and several libations at a local soda shop.

Allison was gifted with a buoyant optimism which he transmitted through sparkling eyes that gleamed excitedly like wet stones. No matter how bleak the situation, his approach was always one of "Gee Whiz" boyish enthusiasm that suggested inevitable triumph regardless of the odds. During Bush's congressional tenure, he was so revered by coworkers that he was known simple as "The Aide." This symbolized the high regard in which he was held, including by his boss.

The last time I ever saw Allison was in 1978. He was dying, a body ravaged by disease, but a spirit refusing to ebb. I entered the hospital room with Baker, who was running for attorney general of Texas. Allison gamely struggled to sit up in bed, the chalky face brightening for a moment with that flush of anticipation that only incurable political passion can bring. "Hey, fellas," he said weakly. "What do the polls show?"

The day of his funeral in Midland, as I stood at the rear listening to the eulogies, my mind drifted back to that first meeting in Austin. As we had begun to part that evening, Allison had paused as if he was going to continue on and say something else, but he didn't. It was a bittersweet moment. We both wanted to say something but we didn't know how to say it. And yet we both understood.

Then, simply, with a half-wave of his hand, he said, "Pete, stick with George. Some day he's going to be president." Then he turned and walked off into the splendor of the Texas evening.

Vote of thanks due Innovative Solutions

I have been following your articles on Innovative Solutions, Inc.

I have recently taken the "Threat Awareness" class first and then their "Defensive Handgun Safety" course and I feel that I benefitted by both of them.

However, the reason I am writing this letter is to simply tell your readers that I think maybe Midland should become more "aware" of what these people are doing for us.

In my case personally, I overcame a morbid fear of guns and now I even feel confident that I could handle myself properly and more safely should a potentially dangerous situation arise.

A big thanks to Innovative Solutions, Inc.

It's time to respond to storm over smoking

Since I was the one who appeared before the Midland ISD board and created the current storm of letters regarding smoking, it's time to respond.

Regarding tax dollars: Smokers also pay taxes to support local schools and governments. According to the Texas State Comptroller's Office, during the 1988 fiscal year, $417 million were generated on tobacco excise taxes (12.4% of all revenues generated). Three percent is designated for the Permanent School Fund (which includes Teacher Retirement) or $12,510,000. The remaining 97% goes to the general fund where 47% was allocated to education in the state in 1988 which amounted to $190,110,300.

It was stated that it would be difficult to estimate how much in state sales taxes was generated in addition. However, $389,821,817 came from excise taxes on cigarettes alone. At 26 cents per pack, this comes to 150 million cartons. The 6% state tax at $11.89 per carton produces another $106,500,000 for the general fund. The 47% share for education generates another $50,055,000.

If all municipalities charged the 1½% sales tax, as does Midland, an additional $27,000,000 would be returned. These figures are purposely on the low side and do not include the estimated sales tax generated from the remaining tobacco products sold. (Also not included is the 16 cents charged for every package of cigarettes by the federal government.) These figures come to a total of $252,675,300 for education produced through direct and indirect state taxes on tobacco. If tobacco use were to be banned, who do you think would pick up the tab for the lost revenue? Of course, tobacco users also pay local taxes which go to support schools.

Regarding role-models: The next step might be to have stickers made up for all businesses in town. They might read "Tobacco In Use" so that all the people with severe allergies, etc., could simply avoid going in. Following that, yard signs could be made up for all the homes and apartment buildings in town. Further, it could be demanded that all tobacco users wear a scarlet "T" around their necks so that they could be easily identified and mothers could hide their children's eyes when one approached.

Regarding the double standard: Since the majority of students in school are not allowed to drive, it could be mandated that no teacher be allowed to drive either.

I have been a teacher in this district for 27 years. This issue should help reinforce students' understanding of how events like the Salem witch trials, the Holocaust and the Inquisition took place. All it takes is for people to stand by and say nothing as a group of people is singled out for persecution.

Coin toss, possession of bell stir concerns

I am deeply concerned with the issues involving the coin toss and also how the possession of the district bell was determined.

To set the record straight, only the superintendents of Abilene, San Angelo, Odessa and Midland have a vote in determining our rules and regulations which also must be in accordance with the UIL Constitution.

The district procedures for handling ties have been established for many years. However, during this period of time, suggestions have been made to change these procedures. Dr. Joe Baressi was the only superintendent who voted against having the winner of the toss to have sole possession of the district bell, and he had offered several alternatives.

There is something we can do to help solve these problems. We can all write letters protesting the manner in which ties in district football competition are handled and that the schools involved in ties should be allowed to share in possession of the bell. All schools involved deserve some recognition.

Dr. Baressi has suggested that perhaps Lee High School be allowed to keep the district bell and that Midland and Permian purchase their own to ring at the football games next year. There is a logistics problem in moving the district trailer and bell as well as the trailer has always been painted with school colors.

So let's help eliminate these problems by writing to the following superintendents. Vent your frustrations to the proper individuals and then perhaps some fair determinations can be made. The District 4-5A Committee will meet again in January, so I urge you to write as soon as possible: Mr. Charles Hundley, Supt. Abilene ISD, Box 981, Abilene 79604; Dr. Hugh Hayes, Supt. Ector Co. ISD, Box 3912, Odessa 79760; Mr. Bill Graves, Supt. San Angelo ISD, 1621 University, San Angelo 76904; Dr. Joe Baressi, Supt. Midland ISD, 702 N. 'N' Street, Midland 79701.

Panel offers thanks for meeting's success

The II Annual Step Up To Success Youth Conference was held at Midland College on Nov. 5th. The Education Committee would like to thank all the volunteers, corporate sponsors, and especially the Rotary Club of Midland for sponsoring the 200 T-shirts. Without the generosity of these people our efforts to help prevent our students from dropping out would not be possible.

This year because of the fine support in this community we will be taking 12 enthusiastic freshmen students from both Lee and Midland Freshmen to the state Step Up To Success Conference in Austin, all expenses paid.

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce salutes Midland for its volunteer spirit, once again. To Nick Sanchez, Education Chairperson, and all the members of our Education Committee, the presenters, facilitators, registration, Midland Independent School District, food providers, Refreshment Vending and Midland College, you were just great! To the Migrant Program, Jumburrito, New Method Cleaners, our women's department, AT&T, Southwestern Bell, Permian Basin LULAC, Energas, Permian Distributing Inc., Midland Boys and Girls Club of Midland, IBM, Bill Black, Dr. Glenn Rogers, Dr. Sylvia Garcia, and Ricardo's Restaurant, with our children's futures in mind, we thank you all.

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce will continue to work hard to ensure the equal opportunity to all students in their quest for education.

Pitts places himself in notable company

I clipped John Pitts' article "Wondering when and why it all went wrong" and used it to mark the pages of my personal copy of a book found in our public library called, "The Christian History of the Constitution of the United States of America — A Christian Self-Government." It was ironic that my treasure was called "journalistic trash" by the Kreutzfeld's letter in the Opinion section Nov. 20. I don't know Pitts' world view, but I found his musings very appropriate for the Business section. It would do us well to return to the principles of our forefathers which guided the creation of this great country and economy. Our real hurts are found in our turning away from Biblical, Christian morality.

My book mark was found on page XIV marking the introduction to John Locke's "Of Civil Government." Samuel Adams, who highly regarded the philosophy of Locke, was quoted on this page as follows:

"Let divines and philosophers, statesmen and patriots, unite their endeavors to renovate the age, by impressing the minds of men with the importance of educating their little boys and girls, of inculcating in the minds of youth the fear and love of the Deity and universal philanthropy, and, in subordination to these great principles, the love of their country; of instructing them in the art of self-government, without which they never can act a wise part in the government of societies, great or small; in short, of leading them in the study and practice of the exalted virtues of the Christian system ..." — Boston, October 4, 1790.

If indeed Pitts' viewpoints are "extremist," his are found among some very distinguished company.

I've long enjoyed Pitts' pithy views

I have many times in the past had good intentions of writing to let you know how much I enjoy John Paul Pitts down-to-earth, pithy articles. His article in the Sunday, Nov. 13, edition regarding the general decline in moral values in our nation since the infamous Supreme Court decision banning prayer in schools, was no exception. I thought it was very timely and extremely well written.

I was looking forward to the following Sunday edition "Letters to editor section" to read all the accolades I just knew would be there regarding the aforementioned article.

Imagine my surprise when alas there was not even one. To make matters worse there was one venomous attack on the article. I wonder how much sicker this nation must get before people such as the authors or the letter berating Mr. Pitts' views begin to wake up! Yes, folks, there is a place in business, and in the business section of the paper for espousal of morals, honesty, and integrity. Keep up the good work, John!

'Much ado' about deficit skirts truth of America's strength

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — Our country as a whole had much to be thankful for on Thanksgiving Day and I hope the Pilgrims' spirit of thankfulness is still with those who are reading my column this Sunday.

Hearst

Our nation is at peace, a large majority of our people are still enjoying the prosperity President Reagan's economic recovery brought us, and the outlook for the future is not as bleak as the pessimists predict.

Evidence of that is to be found in a report by economists of the highly regarded Brookings Institution. While it stresses the need to reduce the deficit, the report concludes the chances are the United States can, and probably will, carry the burden of deficits for a long time with relatively little pain.

This confirms what my good friend Lord Lever told me in London during my recent visit there. Renowned as one of Europe's most brilliant economists who served as chief financial adviser to the Labor governments of Prime Ministers Harold Wilson and James Callaghan, Harold Lever said the basic economic strength of America is so strong that we could have a deficit of $100 billion for a prolonged period and still maintain prosperity. So the problem for the incoming Bush administration and Congress is to agree on cutting by $30 billion the $130 billion deficit that the Office of Management and Budget projects for fiscal year 1990. My hunch is they will, and a serious recession will be averted.

There is a lot of over-excitement about the budget imbalance, but Brookings research director Charles A. Schultze told the Washington Post: "The problem is not that the wolf is at the door. It's more like termites in the woodwork."

It's difficult to understand what all the fuss is about. Granted a deficit of any kind is not desirable, but a very rich person can owe more money than a poor person, and we are a very rich nation.

Furthermore, our deficit is actually falling as a percentage of gross national product (GNP), the total of American goods and services including foreign assets. Also, as the Wall Street Journal pointed out recently, the percentage of our federal government debt in relation to gross domestic product, or goods and services produced within the country, is considerably better than some of the other major industrialized nations.

The WSJ published a chart showing the percentage figures for government debt in relation to gross domestic product (GDP) during the 1980-86 period. For 1986, the figures in percentages were: United States, 28.7; Britain, 46.5; Italy, 99.2; Canada, 33.7; Germany, 22.1 and Japan, 26.3. Canada's debt rise in relation to GDP between 1980 and 1986 was the highest — about 22 percent. The U.S. debt rise was only about 9 percent.

The WSJ editorial said that from an American viewpoint two features of the chart were noteworthy. "First, the U.S. is far from being the worst sinner in running budget deficits. Secondly, the level of the U.S. ratio is by no means an outlier (unexpected or unusual event). We are in the same ballpark as Japan and Canada."

Other good news this past week was the re-election of Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney with a comfortable conservative majority in Parliament to ratify the virtually free trade pact he concluded with President Reagan. The pact has already been approved by Congress and signed by the President.

Mr. Mulroney's liberal opponent, John Turner, ran an anti-American, demagogic campaign which was just as bitter as the "No truck or trade with the Yankees" campaign that in 1911 blocked the first major bilateral trade pact with the United States.

...ne Minister Mulroney's victory was particularly gratifying to me because my Pop advocated the closest possible relations with Canada. He hoped Canada might become part of the United States, but it is understandable that the Canadian people wish to retain their national identity.

Canada and the United States are each other's largest trading partners, with an annual $160 billion exchange. The new pact will create an almost duty-free market of 270 million consumers, and it is expected to produce gradually hundreds of thousands of additionmal jobs on both sides of the border. America's trade representative, Clayton K. Yeutter, said the agreement "will bring prosperity to both countries for years to come." That is indeed greatly encouraging news when there is so much gloom-and-doom speculation about our economic future.

Midland College accepts 1988 Chevrolet for use in auto program

From Staff Reports

Midland College has accepted a 1988 Chevrolet Spectrum from Jack Sherman Chevrolet of Midland for use in its Automotive Technology program.

The automobile, which was slightly damaged in transit, will be used to train students through the latest in automobile advancements.

Making the presentation, along with Jack Sherman, were Les Mitzel, customer assistance coordinator for the Chevrolet Motor Division, Dallas; and Bob Smith, service manager at Jack Sherman Chevrolet.

Accepting the auto were Dr. Jess Parrish, college president; Dr. Wayne Holcomb, chairman of vocational studies at Midland College; and Johnny Moore, automotive technology instructor.

Parrish also noted that Sherman earlier this month made a $2,500 contribution to Midland College on behalf of the Lone Star Chevrolet Dealers' Association. The gift will be used to fund scholarships for students taking automotive technology courses.

"We appreciate the efforts of Jack Sherman, the Lone Star Chevrolet Dealers' Association, and General Motors in providing both funding and equipment which allows our students to be trained in the latest technological advances and encouraging students who otherwise might not be able to complete their college studies in this field," Parrish said.

MAKING THE GRADE

Blandi McNeil of Midland has been awarded the Burg Scholarship from Hardin-Simmons University.

McNeil

This scholarship was established by Kenneth and Viola Burg at the Baptist Foundation of Texas. Characteristics influencing student selection include overall potential Christain impact and influence, overall potential of contributing to the community, engagement of meaningful extracurricular activities and willingness to take courses in high school and college that are considered difficult.

• • •

Sewell

Sewell, a senior at Robert E. Lee High School who maintains a 4.7 grade point average, is currently enrolled in four honors courses, serves as president of the National Honor Society and as president of SAD (Students Against Drinking), as well as participating in All-Stars and Bio-Med. He has also received the PTA Academic Award during his sophomore and junior year. Sewell's future plans include attending Texas A&M where he will major in biomedicine in order to pursue a career in veterinary medicine.

• • •

Latorrey Gilbert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Gilbert of Midland, has been chosen by the Negro Business and Professional Women's Club as their student of the month.

Gilbert

Gilbert, who is attending high school as a foreign-exchange student in Germany, was a member of the National Honor Society at Midland High School. He also distinguished himself as a member of the Spanish Club, varsity football team, and Student Organization for Unity and Leadership. While at Midland High he served as president of Texas Alliance for Minorities in Engineering, and was nominated Outstanding High School Student of America. He is now participating as a recipient of the Bundestag Foreign Exchange Schlarship Award and is a member of the German basketball league in Jever, West Germany. After graduation, Gilbert plans to pursue a career in the medical field and will attend either Baylor University or Texas Tech.

McCamey woman honored as School Nurse of the Year

Katherine Jones, McCamey ISD school nurse, received the School Nurse of the Year award from the Texas Association of School Nurses Nov. 12 in Austin.

Nurse Jones was nominated by Juanita Lively, Iraan school nurse, and selected by the State Committee to receive this outstanding honor in recognition for her work in the school, community, local agencies, and in several regional health care organizations. Letters of recommendation from the County Judge, local school officials, area medical professionals, students, friends, and regional nurses. Also included were copies of Jones' certificates of appreciation from Governor White, Texas Department of Health, West Texas Opportunities Center, Headstart, and letters from local professionals working with Jones.

The notebook containing these letters will now be sent to the National Association of School Nurses to be considered for the 1989 National School Nurse award. The Texas Nurses Administrators Assoc. has established a scholarship in Jones' name.

Along with the 600 school nurses attending the noon luncheon and the award presentation were her husband Clayton Jones, their two children, Michael and Missy and their spouses. West Texas Opportunities Center Director Joyce Young, retired McCamey teacher Mrs. Ila Wheat, John Wheat, PRV diagnostician Sally Bogart, Region 18 school nurses and other friends.

Arrangements are being made to host a public reception for Nurse Jones in the near future. The announcement will be made in area newspapers.

Abell-Hangar Club plans enchilada meal

From Staff Reports

An enchilada dinner is being served at the Midland College Student Center on Thursday, Dec. 1, from 5:30-7:30 p.m. as a fund-raiser for the college's Abell-Hanger Club.

The $5 price includes two meat enchiladas, rice, beans, salad and drink. The enchiladas are being prepared by Tampico Restaurant.

"This meal will be the same night as the 'Midland College Merry Christmas' celebration, so we are encouraging people to come out early or stay after the ceremony for the meal," said Dr. Stan Jacobs, club sponsor.

A portion of the proceeds will be returned to the community as a part of one of the club's community service projects. The Abell-Hanger Club is comprised of MC students attending the college with the help of financial aid offered to all graduates of Midland High, Midland Lee, and Greenwood high schools the past three years by the Midland-based Abell-Hanger Foundation.

JOIN THE Spirit of Christmas
AT TEXAS AMERICAN BANK

You can make the wishes of a needy child come true this Christmas by joining Texas American Bank's "Spirit of Christmas" program.

Just come by the lobby of any Texas American Bank and select a card with a child's name, age and particular wants or needs. Then shop for your child, wrap the gift and return it to our Spirit of Christmas Tree by December 19th.

The child you are shopping for is one of many abused or neglected children whose names have been provided by the Texas Department of Human Services. Many are in foster homes this Christmas or come from single parent families where gifts are impossible.

Please, join the Spirit of Christmas and help make Christmas bright for a special child.

Sponsored by TAB in conjunction with The Texas Department of Human Services.

MC, OC presenting seminars for CPAs

From Staff Reports

The Continuing Education Departments of Midland College and Odessa College are presenting identical seminars for Certified Public Accountants and Enrolled Agents.

The eight-hour seminar is being presented at Midland College on Thursday, Dec. 8, and at Odessa College on Tuesday, Dec. 13.

Both will meet from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. The Midland seminar will be held in the Health Sciences Building Lecture Hall and the Odessa seminar at the Continuing Education Annex B, Room 102. Fee for either session is $60, including lunch. The sessions offer eight hours of Continuing Professional Education credit.

Topics for the seminars are: "1988 Update on Income Tax Filings", four hours presented by members of the National Association of Accountants; "Tax-Free Investments and the New Medicare Act", one hour presented by Edward D. Jones & Co.; "Portfolio Construction and Managements", one hour presented by Edward D. Jones & Co.; "Mutual Fund Investing", one hour presented by Edward D. Jones & Co.; and "Stress Management for Tax Professionals", one hour presented by a local psychologist.

This is the first in a series of a planned 40-hour continuing education program for CPAs to be presented by Midland College and Odessa College during the next 12 months.

Interested, qualified persons may register by calling Midland College, 685-4518, or Odessa College, 335-6583.

FBC invites city singles to banquet

From Staff Reports

All area single adults are invited to a banquet at the First Baptist Church fellowship hall at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 3. Tickets are $6 each and may be reserved by calling Oralee Cowan, 687-4515, or the Singles division of the church at 682-1646 by Nov. 30.

Donna Smith, associate to the Singles' minister at First Baptist Church of Euless, will be the featured entertainer. She has performed all over the United States, and was a featured performer at the first Southern Baptist National Singles' Convention which was held in Nashville during the Memorial Day weekend.

Entertainment will also be provided by many of the talented members of the Singles division at First Baptist Church.

Bank again staging gift program for needy, institutionalized youth

Texas American Bank hopes to make Christmas morning brighter for needy and abused children in Midland by sponsoring for the sixth year the "Spirit of Christmas," an annual gift-giving program held in conjunction with the Texas Department of Human Services.

The theme of this year's program is, "Join the Spirit of Christmas — give a gift to a special child."

The public is invited to visit the lobby of Texas American Bank beginning Monday and choose a card listing a child's name, age and particular needs or wants. Each participant then may shop for his or her special child, wrap the gift and return it to the bank's "Spirit of Christmas" tree before Dec. 19.

Each child's name is provided by the Texas Department of Human Services. Many of the children live in foster homes or institutions or come from single-parent homes where Christmas gifts are impossible.

The Department of Human Services will deliver the gifts to the children before Christmas.

"The 'Spirit of Christmas' program is a special one because participants know their 'adopted' children will receive the gifts selected especially for them," said Jan Munn, assistant vice president.

Texas American Banks will be honored at a ceremony in Austin by the Texas Department of Human Services as the winner of the Outstanding Volunteer Service award in the corporate category. The program also received a Presidential Citation Award for Private Sector Initiative.

In 1987, the "Spirit of Christmas" program provided more than 25,000 gifts for 8,000 children through 34 Texas American Bank locations.

"Last year our 'Spirit of Christmas' program was a very rewarding experience. Knowing that so many special children will have an unforgetable Christmas morning is truly heartwarming," said Charles Grimes, president of Texas American Bank /Midland N.A.

Killer whale gives birth at Sea World

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Baby Shamu, a killer whale calf about 6½ feet long and weighing about 300 pounds, was born Saturday at Sea World of Texas, officials said.

"Both the calf and mother appear to be in excellent condition," said Glenn Young, vice president and general curator for Sea World of Texas.

The calf was born at 12:10 p.m. in the 7 million gallon killer whale breeding facility at the 250-acre marine life park. The mother, Namu, a killer whale estimated to be 14 years old, weighs more than 7,000 pounds, Young said.

Labor began at 10:45 a.m. and concluded with a textbook delivery, Young added.

Only animal science staff members were on hand to witness the birth, but a couple of hours later, park officials allowed visitors to view the mother swimming with her new offspring, said Bob McCullough, director of public relations for Sea World of Texas.

"The guests were just ecstatic to see the baby and mother. It was quite a heartwarming scene," he said. McCullough estimated 10,000 people came by to see the new calf.

For Namu, it was her second offspring. Several years ago she gave birth to a calf that died a few days later of apparent heart trouble, McCullough said.

McCullough said the Sea World staff was observing the mother and offspring to see signs of bonding between the two whales. "That should take place pretty soon."

The pregnancy first was suspected several months ago. Laboratory tests, observations and body measurements confirmed the suppositions in the following weeks.

Working from the date of confirmation and assuming a gestation period of 17 months, it was determined that Namu was impregnated at Sea World of California, Young said.

The father of the newborn, Orky, died of natural causes several weeks ago, said McCullough. "Orky lives on in his offspring," he said.

Previous successful killer whale births at Sea World include Baby Shamu at Sea World of Florida on Sept. 26, 1985, the first killer whale to thrive in the care of man; a killer whale calf born on Sept. 23, 1988, at Sea World of California; and another calf born on Nov. 4, 1988 at Sea World of Florida.

Sometimes all you need in life is a little reinforcement.

It's a tough world out there. Sometimes life feels like nothing less than a full-scale battle.

It's a lot easier, though, when you have some reinforcement.

We all need someone who understands us. Someone we can really talk with. A person who wants the best for us and who'll help us through difficult times.

Unfortunately, not everyone has a person like that. Even those of us with lots of friends and family. But that can change, thanks to Glenwood's Evening Programs.

When you call Glenwood, we'll set up a free and confidential consultation for you. At your convenience. And, because the programs are offered in the evenings, you'll be able to continue your responsibilities while you work with our caring, professional staff on resolving your problems.

Some people call us with symptoms of depression. Others for family difficulties. Many need help managing stress.

Call Glenwood's Evening Programs. After all, you don't have to look far to find conflict in this world. The good news is, now you don't have to look any further to find reinforcement.

Derailment cleanup to end with vacuuming of material

FRUITVALE (AP) — Authorities Saturday night continued to neutralize a pool of anhydrous ammonia drained from a derailed freight train that forced the evacuation of at least 250 residents.

"After we finish boiling off the vapors, we'll inject water into it to form ammonium hydroxide," said Capt. David Schlottach of the Tyler Fire Department Hazardous Materials Response Team. "Then we'll vacuum it up into a storage truck."

Environmental workers and hazardous waste handlers hoped to complete the cleanup Saturday night and allow residents back to their homes.

Two motels in nearby Canton were full of evacuees.

"We have quite a few rooms, about 25 that are just the evacuees," said Lottie Adams, desk clerk at the 60-room Best Western Canton Inn. "We're booked full with construction people who are working on cleaning it up...It's been hectic."

Ms. Adams said railroad officials periodically advised the motel's guests of the progress of the cleanup.

One witness said the Union Pacific train might have been hit by a tornado, causing 35 of its 89 cars to derail. Though a tornado was reported near the tiny northeast Texas town at the time, authorities said they were uncertain what caused the Friday night accident.

More than two-thirds of a car containing 30,000 gallons of anhydrous ammonia spilled, officials said. Schlottach estimated 6,000 to 7,000 gallons had to be drained from the car before the cleanup could begin. Workers drained the ammonia into a pit they dug near the wreckage.

John Bromley, a spokesman at the railroad's Omaha, Neb., headquarters, said anhydrous ammonia is shipped as a liquid, but a puncture would cause a gas cloud.

"It's a fertilizer, what farmers put on their fields," Bromley said.

Another car carrying the fertilizer and one carrying chlorine, which also is hazardous, were not leaking, said Alex Tice, the railroad's regional director for public relations.

The train derailed about one-half mile west of the community of 400, which is about 70 miles east of Dallas. Authorities closed two nearby roads and evacuated residents within one mile to the north and three-fourths of a mile to the south as a precaution, Schlottach said.

Helping in the cleanup effort were volunteers from Grand Saline, Mineola, Canton, Van, Emory, Edgewood and Dixie.

Also on hand were representatives of the Environmental Protection Agency, Department of Public Safety, Texas Water Commission, Texas Railroad Commission, American Association of Railroads and the Salvation Army, as well as Union Pacific.

The train's four-member crew was not injured, said Tice. However, two people who were driving near the derailment were overcome by ammonia fumes and taken to Terrell Community Hospital. An emergency room supervisor said the two were kept overnight, but were not seriously injured.

James Boyd, whose home is about a third of a mile from the derailment, said what he believed was a tornado "toppled 15 to 20 cars" on Highway 80.

"It knocked down trees, toppled our TV antenna," he said.

Hubcap theft suspect leads police on chase

HOUSTON (AP) — A man suspected of stealing hubcaps from the parking lot of a crowded mall was shot by a Houston policeman after leading officers on a high-speed chase, authorities said.

A 34-year-old man was reported in fair condition Saturday at Ben Taub Hospital with a gunshot wound to the chest.

He was shot Friday afternoon by officer M.L. Pierce after police surrounded the suspect's small pickup near downtown Houston. Pierce fired a shot through the windshield of the man's truck, apparently because he feared the man was going to run over him, said police spokesman J.C. Mosier.

The man earlier tried to hit other officers with his truck during a chase that at one point was called off by police when the suspect drove the wrong way down a busy freeway, Mosier said.

The police department and district attorney's office are investigating the shooting, he said.

"We'll wait and see what happens with the investigation, but we can't expect our people to stand in front of cars when people are clearly and have been clearly trying to run over them," Mosier said.

The chase that led to the shooting began around 1:30 p.m. Friday when a woman told police she saw the man and another man trying to steal the hubcaps from her car, which was parked at Gulfgate Mall.

Oil company beginning to drill where no one has drilled before

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Sonat, a Birmingham-based company, is building a reputation for drilling oil wells where no one else has drilled before.

A Sonat subsidiary, Sonat Offshore Drilling Inc. of Houston, Texas, recently added a 27th mobile offshore drilling rig to its fleet. The new Sonat Richardson, named after retired Sonat Offshore President George Richardson, cost close to $70 million to build in South Korea, company officials said.

"What's really been good for Sonat Offshore is that we've been able to differentiate ourselves by drilling in deep water and harsh environments," said Sonat Offshore Chairman William C. O'Malley.

The Sonat Richardson is now on its way to drill a well off the coast of Oman. From there, it will go to the Gulf of Mexico, where it will become part of a three-year project drilling in 5,000 feet of water for Arco Oil and Gas Co.

"The big attraction about this is that it entailed some risk on the part of Sonat to build it, and right from the start we have a very good contract which helps to justify the construction design," O'Malley said.

Other companies such as Sedco, Reading & Bates, Penrod Drilling Co., and even Zapata Offshore, founded by President-elect George Bush, drill deep. But Sonat's offshore rigs have drilled deeper.

According to the trade magazine Drilling, Sonat Offshore's drillship Discover Seven Seas holds the world depth record, drilling in 7,520 feet of water in the Gulf of Mexico earlier this year.

The results of that well for Shell Oil have not been announced, but Sonat's drill ship Discoverer 534 already holds the record for the Gulf's deepest announced oil discovery at 3,560 feet. Amoco and Exxon share an interest in that discovery.

The tools of the deep-water trade come in two varitiees: The semisubmersibles, such as the Sonat Richardson, which look and function like a floating production platform, and the drill ships, which look like conventional vessels with midship drilling equipment.

Mike Kimmit, spokesman for Mobile Oil Corp.'s U.S. exploration and production subsidiary, said the need for deep-water exploration is obvious.

"The easier to find, more accessible reserves have been discovered and depleted. We're finding ourselves moving farther and farther from shore."

O'Malley said Sonat Offshore has no plans to add any more offshore rigs, but engineering studies are in the works to build rigs capable of drilling at 10,000 feet or more.

While Sonat Offshore is building a reputation for drilling deep, O'Malley said low oil prices caused by oversupply mean this is not a good time for the offshore drilling industry.

"We've had several times when half or less of our rigs were working," he said.

"Right now, 19 out of 27 are in use, which is a relatively high percentage compared to what's been going on the last two or three years. If we were in good times, which we're not, 24 or more would be working," he said.

But while offshore drilling in generally down, industry statistics show that drilling in very deep water is up from three wells drilled at more than 3,000 feet in 1982 to 17 last year.

North Texas Methodists' ex-bishop dies of leukemia

DALLAS (AP) — W. McFerrin Stowe, who was bishop of the North Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church from 1972 to 1980, has died of leukemia at Baylor University Medical Center. He was 75.

A memorial service for Stowe, who died Thursday, will be held at 2 p.m. Monday at Highland Park United Methodist Church.

Stowe was lauded as an able administrator who presided as spiritual leader of North Texas Methodists, who numbered more than 280,000 during his tenure.

He was an outspoken opponent of leaglized gambling, capital punishment, and of stockpiling nuclear arms, and supported aid to refugees and undocumented aliens.

Stowe was born in Franklin, Tenn., held degrees from Hendrix College in Arkansas and Duke University in Durham, N.C., and obtained his doctorate from the Boston University School of Theology.

He was ordained in 1937, continuing a century-old tradition of Methodist ministry. Stowe was pastor of churches in Texas and Oklahoma before his election as a bishop in 1964 when he presided over the Kansas area for eight years before coming to the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Since 1980, Stowe had taught and served as bishop-in-residence at Southern Methodist University.

Irish repel Troy's bid, 27–10

USC flanker Gary Wellman breaks up interception attempt by Notre Dame free safety Pat Terrell.

By MALCOLM MORAN
New York Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Playing the most significant game of the season without its leading receiver and rusher, Notre Dame extended its perfect season and preserved its top ranking with a surprisingly convincing 27-10 victory over second-ranked Southern California Saturday afternoon.

Despite the loss of Ricky Watters, a sophomore who was the leading receiver, and Tony Brooks, a sophomore and the leading rusher, who were sent back to South Bend, Ind., for what university officials described as "repeated irresponsible tardiness," the Irish overcame the powerful Trojan defense and limited Rodney Peete, USC's quarterback.

Notre Dame, 11-0 for the first time since 1973, will meet undefeated West Virginia in the Fiesta Bowl with a chance to claim its first unofficial national championship since 1977.

The second-ranked Trojans (10-1) will play Michigan in the Rose Bowl with the bitter memory of an opportunity lost. USC was first in the most recent New York Times computer ranking; the Irish were fourth.

The 60th meeting in one of college football's most highly publicized rivairies, played for the first time by Irish and Trojan teams with perfect records, turned on two of four Trojan turnovers and the ability of the Irish to contain Peete, who completed 23 of 44 passes, none for touchdowns, for 225 yards, with two interceptions.

Before an overflow crowd of 93,829 that sat in the bright sunshine of Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, the Irish offensive and defensive units built a lead with big plays that jolted the confidence of the Trojans and their crowd.

Southern California's first shock came on the first Irish possession of the game.

Backed up to the 2-yard line by a Trojan punt, Notre Dame's junior quarterback, Tony Rice dropped into his end zone, slipped, and threw a 55-yard pass up the right sideline to Raghib Ismail, a freshman receiver. The Irish gained just 5 more yards, and were forced to punt from the Trojan 37.

But Rice had established an important point, and soon the Trojan defensive front, which began the day with the nation's leading defense against the run, was quickly reduced from dominant to vulnerable.

Over all, Rice completed five of nine passes for 91 yards. He gained 86 yards on 13 carries and scored one touchdown.

The Irish gained 94 rushing yards in the first half, most of which came on one play. On the third play of the next Irish possession, following another Trojan punt, Rice went to his left on an option play and turned upfield for a 65-yard touchdown.

Scott Ross, an inside linebacker, was unable to fight through blockers to establish position outside. Mark Carrier, the free safety, was left alone and had to concentrate on the tailback Mark Green.

Panthers make joke of Nimitz

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — How long did it take Odessa Permian to win a Region I Class 5A football playoff game against Irving Nimitz Saturday at Ratliff Stadium? About as long as it took junior running back Chris Comer to carry three times for 94 yards and two touchdowns.

You knew it was over after that. The only thing left to do was decide on a final margin of victory and the Mojos finally decided on 48-7.

Comer ended the day with 221 yards rushing on 26 carries, which was good for four touchdowns. Those figures could have been even more staggering, but he had a 59-yard touchdown called back on a clipping penalty and was taken out of the game with 7:12 left in the game.

Eastwood wins Tall City title

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

After a year at Midland Lee, Damon Clay is back in Andrews. And Gym Bice says that makes things easier for him.

Clay and Bice combined for 46 points to lead the Mustangs to third place in the Tall City Basketball Tournament with a 70-56 win over Lee at Chaparral Center Saturday.

Tourney MVP Victor Salazar led El Paso Eastwood to the 23rd annual tournament's championship with a 69-62 win over El Paso Hanks.

After two disappointing losses, the Midland High cagers salvaged a seventh-place finish with a 63-57 win over Odessa High. Big Spring was trounced by Amarillo High in the fifth-place game 78-58.

Teams tended to sag on Bice last season, though he averaged 24 points per game as a junior. But the addition of Clay and the emergence of junior center Ara Baten changed all that, he said.

"The team getting better helps me a lot," Bice said. "With Damon and Ara, the other teams won't be able to chase me a lot."

Bice immediately shook the Rebs with two three-point shots in the opening minute. That drew double coverage from Lee, but Clay came through with three first-quarter buckets of his own to key a 21-11 Andrews lead at the end of the period.

The 'Stangs never trailed, but Lee made it interesting by outscoring Andrews 19-11 in the third period. Eleven unanswered points early in the fourth quarter proved to be too much for the Rebs, however.

Lee mentor Paul Stueckler blamed his team's fourth-quarter collapse on inattentive play underneath.

"I saw a lack of intensity and concentration by our inside people," Stueckler said. "They got too many offensive rebounds."

Miami survives Hog scare on late FG, 18–16

By STEVEN WINE

MIAMI (AP) — Carlos Huerta kicked a 20-yard field goal with 5:38 left and the third-ranked Miami Hurricanes held Arkansas to minus 14 yards in the fourth quarter Saturday to hand the No. 8 Razorbacks their first loss, 18-16.

Huerta's field goal, his third, capped a 10-play, 74-yard drive. Arkansas' Steve Atwater dropped a potential interception in the end zone one play before the kick.

Arkansas, a 17-point underdog that lost to Miami 51-7 last year, generated just enough offense — including Barry Foster's 80-yard touchdown run — to stay in the game. But the Hogs managed no first downs in four possessions in the fourth quarter.

The Cotton Bowl-bound Razorbacks fell to 10-1. Miami, which will play in the Orange Bowl, stayed in contention for the national championship it is defending by improving to 9-1.

Two trick plays in the first quarter helped the Hurricanes score their only touchdown. On fourth and 1 at the Miami 46, Maurice Crum ran 9 yards on a fake punt. The Hurricanes faked an end-around on the next play, and Steve Walsh threw long to Dale Dawkins for a 44-yard gain to the Arkansas 1.

Cleveland Gary dove over on the next play for the touchdown.

Walsh completed 33 of 50 passes for 361 yards but failed to throw a touchdown pass for the first time this season.

Ware's 5 TD passes pace Houston, 45-14

HOUSTON — Houston's Andre Ware threw five touchdown passes and Jason Phillips and James Dixon became the first teammates in NCAA history to finish 1-2 in the nation in receiving as the 14th-ranked Cougars defeated winless Rice, 45-14.

Rice finished its season 0-11 and extended the nation's longest losing streak to 18 straight losses. Houston, 9-2, plays Washington State in the Aloha Bowl Dec. 25 in Honolulu. It is the Cougars' best regular-season record since a 10-1 finish in 1979.

Ware completed touchdown passes of 1 and 64 yards to Phillips, who caught 11 passes for 207 yards to finish the season with 108 catches, second on the all-time list to Tulsa's Howard Twilley, who caught 134 passes in 1965.

Dixon had 15 catches for 108 yards against the Owls and finished the season with 102 receptions.

Ray Floyd finds new thrill in golf

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) — Ray Floyd made a discovery.

After more than a quarter-century as one of the world's most accomplished touring pros and the winner of four major titles, he found pro golf still had new experiences to offer.

"I never felt anything like that in my life," Floyd said Saturday of the four-foot putt he confronted for a $75,000 prize in golf's Skins Game.

"I can't describe it. I can't explain it. I've stood over lots and lots of putts to win tournaments.

"But this wasn't like that. This was right now. Immediate. In a tournament you kind of ease into it.

"But this is a very different thing. Something I can't explain. It's instantaneous."

Floyd, making his first appearance in the four-man, two-day, 18-hole Skins Game, made that important putt, won five skins and then added another $15,000 with his fourth birdie of the day on the sixth hole.

Jack Nicklaus, showing no evidence of the back troubles that bothered him most of the season, birdied the last two holes Satuday and won $75,000 at the halfway point of the made-for-television event.

Lee Trevino, whose hole in one propelled him to a Skins Game win last year, and heavily-favored Curtis Strange were shut out.

Another nine holes, with a total of $285,000 up for grabs, will be played Sunday at the difficult PGA West course.

"I know Raymond wants to go out and play nine more — at least nine more — right now, but I'm just as happy to take a break and sleep on it and come back and try to get it right tomorrow," said Strange.

USC, Peete gag on bitter taste of defeat, lost hopes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Southern Cal Trojans' frustration went even beyond their losing the game, their shot at the national championship and, quite likely, their quarterback's chances for the Heisman Trophy.

"This was the most bitter loss in my coaching career because we didn't give ourselves a chance to win," Larry Smith of Southern Cal said Saturday after the second-ranked Trojans were beaten 27-10 by top-ranked Notre Dame.

"Whenever you play a big football game, you can't make a lot of big mistakes, and that's exactly what we did. Notre Dame is a fine football team and they did what they needed to do to win."

Southern Cal outgained the Irish 356 yards to 253, including 225 passing yards by Trojan quarterback Rodney Peete.

But Southern Cal self-destructed with two lost fumbles, two interceptions, some untimely penalties and a couple of critical defensive lapses as they lost to the Irish for the sixth straight time.

Notre Dame, which converted a Trojan fumble into one touchdown and returned an interception for another, had just one turnover of its own.

"There was no letdown," said Peete, who had guided the Trojans to a 31-22 Rose Bowl-clinching victory over UCLA the previous weekend. "Our goal was to win the national championship and we were ready to play. We just didn't play well."

Peete, who overcame a bout with the measles to play against UCLA, earlier this week had laryngitis and couldn't talk. And, after the loss to Notre Dame, he left the Coliseum with his left arm in a sling with team doctors diagnosing the injury as a mild shoulder sprain.

Peete completed 23 of 44 passes, but with two interceptions and no touchdowns.

He said going into the contest that he probably would need an outstanding performance to win the Heisman over Barry Sanders, the record-setting Oklahoma State runner.

"I don't vote so I don't know what people will say about the Heisman," Peete said when asked about his prospects for winning the award.

The senior quarterback added, "Right now, this loss is just tough to take because the seniors on this team never beat Notre Dame and we have to live with that for the rest of our lives.

"Now we have to regroup and get ready to play Michigan in the Rose Bowl."

While the Trojans will have to be content with trying to end their campaign on a winning note against Michigan on Jan. 2, the Irish will be shooting for the national championship in the Fiesta Bowl against West Virginia in a match of the nation's only unbeaten teams.

"I've said all along that this isn't a national championship game," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said after the victory over the second-ranked Trojans.

"I haven't looked at our bowl game all that much, but I have all the respect in the world for West Virginia. They beat Pitt by a much bigger margin than we did, and Penn State, too."

Holtz added: "I'm completely beat right now; I have absolutely no emotion. I am thrilled for the players."

PERMIAN —

COMER WORE himself out — and the Nimitz Vikings — on touchdown runs consisting of 121 yards. The first two times Permian had the ball, Comer broke TD gallops of 49 and 41 yards and the Vikings were sent packing from playoff trips with a 10-2-1 record while 11-2 Mojo gets another set of Vikings from Arlington Lamar at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Ratliff back yard for a quarterfinal game.

Lamar was a 41-0 winner over Amarillo Palo Duro, the team that eliminated Midland Lee from the playoffs. Lamar is 12-1, losing to this same Nimitz team, 42-35, in the opening game of the season.

Tough game for Comer?

"Well, yes it was," said Comer without any signs of 26 carries on his body. "We know we have to work hard for every game at this time of year to get the job done."

Permian quarterback Mike Winchell, who called an audible at the line to send Comer on the way to his 41-yard TD run, said, "It was just a matter of finding out what they (Nimitz) were going to give us and Comer had the big day."

It wasn't Comer's best day on the gridiron. He had 254 yards rushing last week against El Paso Andress. Comer now has 1,867 yards on the year.

WINCHELL added a nine-yard TD pass to Lloyd Hill and Don Billingsley got another on a 14-yard run. Permian ended the scoring with a fourth quarter TD from reserve Joe Gibson on a one-yard plunge.

But as awesome as the 435 yards of offensive production was by Permian, Mojo coach Gary Gaines was even more pleased with his defensive unit, aided by Ivory Christian, Coddi Dean and Felipe Davila.

"We knew we would need great pursuit by our defense," said Gaines. "Our defense rose to the occasion and met the challenge. We probably had several of our defensive players turn in their best game of the year.

"You never expect a score like this deep into the playoffs, but our defense did a great job and our offense did their part, too. The best defense is a good offense. We kept the ball away from them a lot."

The Permian defense gave up 140 yards to Nimitz. The hearided Rodrick Walker, who came into the game with over 2,000 rushing yards, was held to a meager six yards on his first 11 carries before he broke for a 43-yard TD with 10:43 left in the game against the Permian second defensive unit.

Permian scored on seven of 10 possessions, including Comer's 19-yard TD run with no time left on the first half clock.

High, swirling winds played havoc with the game as umpires had to hold the ball in place until the teams were ready to snap the ball.

"I've never seen a game where the wind was such a big factor," said Gaines. "I think it was to our benefit that we had the wind advantage in the first quarter."

PERMIAN was dancing in the street with a 20-0 lead after the first period of play.

Had Palo Duro managed to beat Lamar, Permian would have been headed back to Amarillo next week. But now they have Lamar at home, but Gaines had mixed emotions.

"Certainly, we are happy to be packing in for another week, but I don't know if I'm excited about playing them (Lamar) or not. We've seen them play one half and they look very good to me. At this time of year, you're going to be playing a good team."

Ware hit Dixon with a 3-yard touchdown pass in the first quarter.

Phillips took a short pass and turned it into a 64-yard touchdown run in the third quarter, breaking open a 14-14 halftime deadlock. Ware also hit Patrick Cooper with a 3-yard touchdown in the third quarter.

Roman Anderson kicked a 27-yard third quarter field goal and Ware added his fifth touchdown pass, a 10-yarder to Jet Brown, with 11:47 left in the game.

Phillips and Dixon became the fourth and fifth receivers in NCAA history to catch 100 or more passes in a season.

The Owls, who haven't won an SWC game in two seasons, lost three first-half fumbles but still scrapped their way to a 14-14 tie.

Lorenzo Cyphers ran one yard in the first quarter and Roper rolled two yards for another score in the second quarter.

GRAY DAY THREATENS GREY CUP— A 90 percent chance of rain is forecast for the Grey Cup, the CFL championship game, between the British Columbia Lions and the Winnipeg Blue Bombers today. The Blue Bombers are underdogs, just as they were last Saturday when, in a heavy rain in Toronto, they upset the Argonauts, 27-11.

WING LIVES LIKE HE PLAYS— Detroit Red Wing Joe Kocur faces charges of assault and battery after a Faneuil Hall lounge employee complained that he beat her during a recent trip, allegedly punching punched Kim Cavanaugh, 23, in the face at 2:45 a.m. Monday, according to the Boston Herald. Cavanaugh filed a formal complaint Wednesday against Kocur, who led the NHL in penalty minutes during the 1985-86 season.

PASTORINI GETS A RIDE— Former NFL quarterback Dan Pastorini has secured a ride for next season in the IMSA Camel GT sports car series and will switch to circuit racing in 1989 with the Fabcar All-American Racing team, which fields a car for IMSA's GT Prototype series.

WINS POLE WITH RECORD— Geoff Brabham, picking up against new competition where he left off in the IMSA Camel GT regular season, Saturday drove his Nissan prototype racer to the pole position for today's GTE World Challenge by turning a track record lap of 1-minute, 7.205 seconds, which translates to 101.778 mph.

ZARAGOZA KEEPS TITLE— Daniel Zaragoza of Mexico stopped Valerio Nati of Italy at 1:06 of the fifth round and retained his WBC super-bantamweight title Saturday night. A lightning left hook to the jaw by the 30-year-old champion ended the fight. "It was easier than expected," said Zaragoza, who successfully defended his crown for the second time.

PORTER NOTCHES NO. 7— Pat Porter, 29, took a comfortable lead with about two miles to go Saturday and went on to win his seventh consecutive U.S. Cross Country Championship, tying the record for most consecutive victories held by Don Lash, who won from 1934-40 while representing Indiana University and the Indiana State Police AA. Porter finished in 31 minutes, 7 seconds, while Robert Kempainen was second at 31:20.

SANDERS HONORED— Barry Sanders of Oklahoma State, the nation's leading rusher and top scorer, was named winner of the 1988 Walter Camp Trophy. Sanders, 5-8, 197-pound junior has rushed for 2,296 yards in 10 games, scored a record 35 touchdowns and averaged more than 7.5 yards a carry. With 2,897 all purpose yards, he has a per-game average of 289.7 yards, bettering the record of 246.3 set in 1937 by Byron "Whizzer" White of Colorado.

IRISH

With Ross kept away and Carrier occupied on the outside, Rice made the longest run against a USC team in nine years, and added some serious doubts to what had been a confident unit.

Those doubts began to spread quickly. With USC suddenly trailing by a touchdown, the tailback Aaron Emanuel, a hero of the victory over UCLA last week, fumbled at the USC 19-yard line. Five plays later, on third-and-goal from the Trojan 2, Green powered ahead, found a small opening with a second effort, and scored for a 14-0 lead.

Notre Dame's defense, meanwhile, was challenging the Trojans' quarterback, Rodney Peete, with a series of blitzes that were both simple and complex. The complexity could be found in the variety of blitzes: from the outside in an attempt to contain Peete, and from the inside in an effort to pressure him into bad throws. The simplicity came at the end of each play, when the defenders would punish Peete after the ball was thrown.

One of those blitzes, near the start of the second quarter, led directly to a mistake that could have given the Irish a commanding lead. Peete's throw over the middle, behind the tight end Paul Green, was intercepted by the Irish safety George Streeter and returned to the Trojan 22.

But two plays later, with a chance to take a 21-point lead, Rice fumbled when Ross' foot came up and knocked the ball loose. Ross recovered the ball at the 22, and the Trojans had made the type of play that could eventually save a game.

Later in the quarter, the Trojans seemed to be doing just that. Peete rolled out to avoid the big Notre Dame defensive line and led a 66-yard drive that brought the Trojans to within 7 points.

Peete completed a 26-yard pass to Erik Affholter on a third-and-11 play that went to the Notre Dame 41. With the help of a personal foul against the Irish, the Trojans drove to the Notre Dame 15. Emanuel gained 3 yards on third-and-1, then 5 yards to the Irish 7, then 6 yards to the 1.

Emanuel was stopped on first-and-goal, but on second down, Scott Lockwood scored and the Trojans had seemed to end their crisis with 4 minutes 5 seconds to go in the half.

Notre Dame gained 3 yards on its next possession, for a total of 10 yards in the 11 offensive plays since its second touchdown. A 21-yard punt by an Irish sophomore, Jim Sexton, gave the Trojans the ball at the Notre Dame 49 with 52 seconds to go in the half.

But on first down, with the Irish blitz coming again, came the shocking play that eliminated so much of the progress the Trojans had made.

Peete threw left, where the junior receiver John Jackson slipped. Stan Smagala, a junior cornerback, intercepted the pass and ran 64 yards up the sideline for an Irish touchdown.

Reggie Ho, the junior kicker, missed the extra point.

But for the Trojan fans in the Coliseum, that small reason for hope in a 20-7 deficit was obscured by the sight of a fallen Peete, the victim of a punishing block on the interception return, slowly getting to his feet with a perfect season beginning to slip away.

Norwich ups lead despite tie

LONDON (AP) — Norwich City was held to a 2-2 tie at home by lowly Luton Town but still increased its lead in the First Division of the English League soccer standings Saturday.

Arsenal, two points behind before Saturday's games, squandered a lead and a chance to go on top by losing 2-1 at Derby County.

None of the top five managed to win as third-place Millwall played a 2-2 tie at fifth-place Southampton.

Defending champion Liverpool, in fourth place, was held to a 1-1 tie at home by Wimbledon after defender Steve Nicol scored in his own net with only three minutes remaining.

The results left Norwich three points in front with 29 points from 14 games, Arsenal second with 26 in 13 and Millwall third with 24 from 12.

FLOYD

"I played OK. I just didn't make the putts when I needed to," said Strange, who won the U.S. Open and three other American titles this year.

"I just didn't play very well," said Trevino, who kept up an almost constant stream of chatter over the nine holes.

"I made a putt (a birdie from about 20 feet) on the first hole, but Raymond tied me. I played OK on the second, but I really wasn't in it much after that," said Trevino, who had two "x's" on his card.

"If I don't win a skin tomorrow, if I get blanked out again, I guess I'll just have to go to the bank and visit all that money I won last year."

Nicklaus also talked of money.

"It just occurred to me — that's more than twice as much as I won in the whole tour season," said the only man who has played in all six Skins Games. "I like that."

Nicklaus said his back didn't bother him.

"My back was terrific. If you'd asked me two weeks ago if I'd be playing, I'd have said 'no chance.'

"So when I hit that tee shot off the first and pushed it right, it didn't bother me at all. I was thinking, 'That's OK. I'm walking down the fairway,' " Nicklaus said.

Floyd, 46, made the first breakthrough.

The four giants of the game played the first four holes to no conclusion: all holes were halved, including birdies by Floyd and Trevino on the first and Floyd and Nicklaus on the fourth.

With the carry-overs, that made the fifth hole worth $75,000.

Trevino drove into the water and eventually picked up. Nicklaus and Strange were short of the green on the par-5 hole in two, but Floyd hit a 1-iron second shot to the back fringe and got down in two for a birdie-4 that won the hole and the $75,000.

LA QUINTA, Calif. — Cards for the first nine holes Saturday in the Skins Game at PGA West:

Par out:	444	353	454—36
Trevino out	34x	3x3	454- x
Nicklaus out	444	253	443—33
Strange out	444	353	454—36
Floyd out	354	242	454—33

MIAMI

Quinn Grovey hit Foster with a 16-yard touchdown pass on third and goal to give Arkansas a 16-15 lead with five minutes left in the third quarter. Grovey scrambled to elude Miami's pass rush before throwing to Foster, who ran in from the 5.

The pass was Arkansas' second completion. The first came earlier in the 73-yard drive, when Grovey hit Foster on fourth and 2 for a 31-yard gain to the Miami 9.

Foster also scored untouched on an 80-yard run up the middle in the first quarter. Foster flashed through a gaping hole at the line, split the Miami safeties and pulled away from them as he raced downfield.

The run was the Hogs' longest in 12 years, and the touchdown was the first this season against the Hurricanes in their six home games.

Arkansas also scored on Kendall Trainor's 23rd straight field goal without a miss, a 58-yarder that hit the crossbar and bounded over. The kick was the longest of Trainor's career but 9 yards shy of the school record.

Miami took a 12-10 lead in the second quarter when defensive end Bill Hawkins tackled Grovey for a safety. Grovey was trying to run wide on an option when Hawkins caught him a yard deep in the end zone.

Huerta opened the scoring with a 36-yard field goal and added a 45-yarder with three seconds left in the first half. Huerta now has 19 field goals, breaking the one-season school record of 17 set last year by Greg Cox.

The victory was Hurricanes' 24th straight in the Orange Bowl. They conclude the regular season next Saturday at home against Brigham Young.

Italian finds U.S. hot bed for soccer

TURIN, Italy (AP) — Luca Cordero di Montezemolo, who heads Italy's organization for the 1990 World Cup, on Saturday reported an unprecedented interest in soccer in the United States.

Montezemolo said that for the first time in the history of the World Cup U.S. television networks will telecast live all 52 matches of the 1990 competition in Italy.

The Italian official also said that demand for tickets, along with tourist tours in Italy, already was significant from the United States and Japan.

American interest in soccer has been growing after the United States was awarded the 1994 World Cup.

Villanova's trip to Puerto Rico proves nightmare

Associated Press

Puerto Rico has been no vacation for the Villanova Wildcats.

Southern Illinois routed the 11th-ranked Wildcats 102-81 Saturday night at Bayamon, Puerto Rico. Tournaments also continued in other exotic locales, Hawaii and Alaska, and several ranked teams had easy games against outmanned opponents.

"This is the biggest win at SIU since the 1967 NIT win over Marquette," Southern Illinois coach Rich Herrin said. "It may not carry the same magnitude, but for us, as we try to build our program back up, it's just as important."

Southern Illinois outshot Villanova 49 percent to 43 and had a much better free-throw percentage (88 to 72). The Salukis also had more rebounds (30-27) and fewer turnovers (12 to 18).

"You have to give them a lot of credit," Villanova coach Rollie Massimino said. "We got beat. They shot well and did a great job."

In other games involving ranked teams, it was No. 1 Duke 93, The Citadel 52; No. 7 Iowa 77, McNeese State 56; No. 9 Illinois 85, Illinois-Chicago 59; No. 15 Florida 83, Alaska-Anchorage 72; No. 16 Ohio State 72, DePaul 70; and No. 18 North Carolina State 110, Columbia 54.

In late games, No. 4 Oklahoma met No. 8 Nevada-Las Vegas and No. 3 Michigan faced Memphis State at Lahaina, Hawaii; and No. 2 Georgetown met Hawaii Pacific at Kaneohe, Hawaii.

Junior college transfer Freddie McSwain did the most damage for Southern Illinois, scoring 17 of his 24 points in the second half. Forward Rick Shipley finished with 23 points, including 11-for-12 from the free throw line.

"I thought our defense was the key to the game," said McSwain, who played at Northern Oklahoma Junior College last year. "Our offense comes automatically if we just hustle and play well on D."

Center Tom Greis led Villanova with 22 points on 10-for-13 shooting. Star guard Doug West was held without a field goal in the first half and finished with 14 points before fouling out.

The Salukis led by 24 points with seven minutes remaining in the second half.

A&M 69, Drake 63

SHREVEPORT, La. — Forward Donald Thompson had six points in the final 30 seconds as Texas A&M, 2-1, held off Drake, 0-2, in the consolation game of the Century Cellunet Classic.

Guard Tony Milton had 16 points for the Aggies, forward Darren Rhea added 13 and Thompson ended with 10.

Arizona St 89, Baylor 73

RICHMOND, Va. — Tarence Wheeler scored 23 points as Arizona State's Sun Devils defeated Baylor for third place in the Central Fidelity Holiday Classic.

Arizona State, which lost 84-83 in overtime to Alabama on Friday night, improved to 1-1. Donnell Hayden scored 18 points to lead Baylor, which fell to 0-2.

For Baylor, freshman Matt Hankinson added 16 points.

Arizona State shot 62.8 percent for the game and hit eight of 12 three-point tries. Baylor shot 42.1 percent, up from its 24.5 percent effort in a 56-38 loss Friday night to Richmond.

Duke 93, Citadel 52

DURHAM, N.C. — Danny Ferry scored 18 points and reserve John Smith sparked top-ranked Duke early in the second half.

Smith scored seven of his 11 points during the stretch, mostly on short jumpers. Alaa Abdelnaby scored 16 points for Duke, now 2-0.

SISU 102, Villanova 81

BAYAMON, Puerto Rico — Freddie McSwain, 6-5 transfer from No. Oklahoma JC, scored 17 of his 24 points in the second half as Southern Illinois upset No. 11 Villanova in the semifinal of the San Juan Shootout.

Villanova's Mark West was held without a field goal in the first half and finished with 16 points before fouling out with 2:30 left. Center Tom Greis led the Wildcats with 20 points on 10-for-13 shooting.

Ohio St 72, DePaul 70

LAHAINA, Hawaii — Jay Burson didn't score as many points, only 28, but this time he got Ohio State a victory, driving for a layup with three seconds to play Saturday gave No. 16 Ohio State in the consolation round of the Maui Classic.

"They left me alone," said the 6-foot, 156-pound Burson, who scored 38 points in the Buckeyes' first-round loss to No. 4 Oklahoma. "The big guys set screens for me and I started driving and they kept backing up like they were afraid to foul me. Next thing I knew I had a layup."

NC StateB 110, Columbia 54

RALEIGH, N.C. — Sophomore Chris Corchiani scored 17 points, leading five players in double figures as 18th-ranked North Carolina State routed Columbia in the season opener for both teams. Columbia committed 19 turnovers in the opening period.

Chucky Brown added 15 points for N.C. State, while Lester had 14, and Rodney Monroe and Brian Howard 13 each.

Florida 83, Anchorage 73

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Dwayne Davis' 21 points helped 15th-ranked Florida bounce back in the consolation bracket of the Great Alaska Shootout. Florida, a 73-58 loser to California on Friday, wore down the smaller Seawolves in the second half and sank 18 free throws.

Florida, 1-1, will play Utah for fourth place Sunday, and UAA, 4-2, will play Iona for seventh.

UH 89, Iowa St 82

AMES, Iowa — Richard Hollis, one-time NMJC star, scored 26 points and grabbed 13 rebounds, and Houston came from behind in each half to hand the Cyclones their first loss in a home opener since 1975.

HOUSTON (89) Hollis 10-23 2-2 26, Fernandes 3-6 4-4 10, Daniels 1-5 9-15 11, Morris 5-8 0-0 10, Chaney 5-8 3-3 15, Totals 30-60 22-31 89. IOWA ST. Hofstra 74, Manhattan 53

NEW YORK — Hofstra scored 16 straight points in the opening minutes and went on to defeat Manhattan and give Butch van Breda Kolff a victory in his return as coach of the Flying Dutchmen. The well-traveled van Breda Kolff, who has coached five professional teams and at four colleges, compiled a 136-43 record at Hofstra from 1955-62.

All is well again in Taskerville, N.M.

It turns out there was nothing wrong with Ralph Tasker that a little basketball talent and modern medicine couldn't cure.

Back-to-back state championships and a hip replacement this summer have made New Mexico's most successful high school basketball coach a picture of contentment and rejuvenation.

"The last two years have been just great," Tasker says.

A six-year drought, including a 1986 season in which the Eagles failed to reach the State Tournament for the first time in 25 years, provided evidence for speculation that time and opposing coaches had finally caught up with the wily Tasker.

The Man, the critics said, was about to become the myth.

But Tasker and the Eagles returned to form in 1987, demolishing the state tourney field en route to a 10th state championship under Tasker's leadership.

Last year, Hobbs lost three times to District 4AAAA rival Alamogordo during the regular season, but with the state championship trophy at stake, the Eagles trounced the Tigers, 110-95, in the finals.

This month, the 69-year-old Tasker begins his fourth decade of teaching the Eagles the finer points of the fullcourt press, and not even the loss of eight players from last year's championship team can dampen his enthusiasm for a new season.

Tasker, who in the past has viewed the four-corner offense and Albuquerque with equal disdain, even has a new appreciation for the state's largest city, annually the home of the State Tournament.

A month after the Eagles beat Alamogordo last March, Tasker returned to Albuquerque to undergo hip replacement surgery. The operation was such a success that Tasker says he hasn't felt this good in 20 years.

"Albuquerque was real good to me last year," he says.

Tasker fractured his hip while jogging in 1979 and the injury had forced him to walk with the help of a cane in recent years.

Tasker, with a 44-year career record of 934 wins and 241 losses, including an 837-208 slate at Hobbs, has few milestones to conquer. The thought of 1,000 victories, he says, does not cross his mind.

Tasker and the Eagles may have to look no further than the confines of District 4AAAA to spot an immediate threat to their bid for another state title.

The Clovis Wildcats are loaded — so much so that Coach Steve Henry speaks of this year's squad in comparative terms to the 1979 state championship team that produced such major college players as Bubba Jennings (Texas Tech) and Nelson Franse (New Mexico).

Clovis went 12-14 last year with a team dominated by juniors and sophomores. Those underclassmen have matured and grown, and Henry says his only problem is finding the guards to get the ball inside to players like 6-foot-5 senior Drew Douglas, 6-foot-6 junior Mike Brewer and 6-4 junior Pete Robbins.

It has been five years since Clovis made the State Tournament, and Henry says a trip to Albuquerque in March will have to be booked by his guards.

In Albuquerque, the Manzano Monarchs also return an abundance of height with players such as Jason Thrash (6-5) and Chris Poll (6-5). Coach Mike Bachicha also had a solid guard to run the show in senior Ray Encinias.

Manzano, beaten by Hobbs in the first round of the State Tournament last March, had only one senior on that team.

Sandia went through the Albuquerque Summer League undefeated, while Albuquerque High's bid to return to the state tourney after a one year absence will ride the shoulders of multi-talented Eddie Flores.

Farmington High School has won two state championships in the '80s and Coach Marv Sanders has seniors Evan Noyes (6-3) and Eddie Overstreet (6-4) back from last year's 21-7 team that took third place at state.

Socorro, the surprise team in Class AAA last season, is the team of promise this year.

Led by senior center J.J. Griego, Socorro's Warriors took Roswell Goddard to the wire before losing 82-76 in the title game last March. The 6-foot-7 Griego, who is headed for the University of New Mexico next year, has put on 15 pounds and is coming off a summer in which he attended basketball camps in Kentucky, Texas and California.

Goddard captured the AAA title last year behind the leadership of senior Tim Fitzpatrick.

Combined eight-for-29 shooting by Torval Crisp and Ed Brown didn't help Lee, either.

"Shots begin in the legs," Stueckler said. "When you play that many games, your legs get tired, and when your legs go, your shot goes.

Clay's shots didn't go awry, however. The senior said he was pumped for Saturday's game.

"I just wanted to get onthe court and hustle," Clay said. "I'm still best friends with them (Lee players) off the court, but on the court we play ball."

Andrews coach Frank Bice was pleased with his team's fourth-quarter resurgence.

"Lee has outstanding athletes, but we answered a fourth-qaurter challenge."

Jared Edwards led Lee with 20 points, while Ed Hartman added 10. Andrews was bumped into the third-place game with a 64-63 loss to Hanks, while Lee lost to Eastwood 72-57 in the other championship bracket semifinal.

Four Mustangs are returning

From Staff Reports

Midland Christian High School girls basketball team returns four lettermen, two of whom were all-district performers, for the 1988-89 season, which continues Nov. 29 at Grandfalls.

Last season Coach Gordon Autry's girls were 17-10 for the season for a third place finish in district.

Leading scorer and rebounder Elizabeth Coffman, 6-0, senior post with three letters, and 5-6 Kim Jackson, junior forward, are the all-district returnees. Coffman was named all-league in 1986 and 1987.

Junior post Christy Boles, 5-7; and Diane Womack, 5-6 junior guard, both lettered last year. Jill Fuller, 5-6 forward, and Angie Tudor, 5-4 guard, lettered as sophomores last year.

Jeanette Moralez, 5-5 guard, and Erin Cochran, 5-8 post, are freshmen making this year's team.

In the opener, MC defeated Midland JV, 30-19.

The Schedule: Nov. 29— at Grandfalls, 6:30 p.m. Dec. 1-3 Southland Tournament. 2— Grandfalls, 6:30 p.m. 8-10 Sanderson Tournament. 16 at Abilene Christian, 6 p.m. 17 Amarillo Alamo Catholic, 2 p.m. Jan. 5-7 Grandfalls tournament. 9 at Midland Lee sophomores 6 p.m. 10 Midland High JV 6:30 p.m. 13 at Lubbock Christian, 4:30 p.m. 17 Midland Lee Sophomore 6 p.m. 21 Abilene Christian 2 p.m. Jan. 26-28 Christian Schools Tournament. 31 Lubbock Christian 6 p.m. Feb. 3 at Amarillo Alamo Catholic 6 p.m. 4 at Amarillo Christian 2 p.m. 7 Amarillo Christian 5 p.m. Feb. 10-11 TAPS Regional. 17-18 TAPS State.

Former Duke coach, Cameron, dies at 86

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Eddie Cameron, 86, one of the founders of the Atlantic Coast Conference, as well as former Duke athletic director who also coached both football and basketball there, has died.

From 1942 through 1945, Cameron coached the Blue Devil football team to a 25-11-1 record, including a victory over Alabama in the 1945 Sugar Bowl. His teams won three Southern Conference titles.

Heisman Report Card

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Oklahoma State's Barry Sanders makes a late gallop for the coveted Heisman Trophy.

Want to win the Heisman Trophy?

The best way to go about it is to be a running back or quarterback because traditionally, the Heisman voters ignore the nasty business that goes on in the trenches, leaving those players for the Outland, Lombardi and Butkus trophies, and zero in instead on the glamour positions.

It will be the same way Saturday when New York's Downtown Athletic Club announces the results of its annual balloting to identify America's outstanding college football player.

One year after Notre Dame wide receiver Tim Brown became only the fourth winner who didn't play one of those positions, the Heisman spotlight is back in the backfield, where the four top candidates perform.

And three of them are quarterbacks.

Going into the season, passers Rodney Peete of Southern Cal and Troy Aikman of UCLA were the Heisman hotshots. Both are seniors. Both play in the media hotbed of Los Angeles, in high profile programs across town from each other. Both came off brilliant junior seasons, always a good warmup for Heisman candidates. And, perhaps most importantly, both are quarterbacks who brought enthusiastic endorsements into the race.

"Troy is the best quarterback we could ever hope to have," UCLA Coach Terry Donahue said of Aikman. "He has all the ability in the world ... the size, tremendous arm strength, courage and intelligence."

What more is there?

Well, check out what Southern Cal Coach Larry Smith said about Peete. "He's everything you look for in a quarterback — great arm, great mobility, great mind and great leadership."

Peete came into 1988 owning 12 Southern Cal records and added three more in the course of a 10-0 season, before Saturday's game against Notre Dame. Aikman, a transfer from Oklahoma, had played only one year at UCLA before this one but still was among the top three passers in school history in a half dozen categories when the season started.

Predictably, both Peete and Aikman were featured on the covers of their school's football press guides, trumpeted as the nation's leading Heisman candidates. It was a natural rivalry but, despite impressive seasons, the LA passers couldn't prevent others from joining the race.

Aikman led the nation with 209 completions and 327 attempts. He passed for 2,599 yards, second only to Timm Rosenbach of Washington State, who had 2,791. Those were the positives. The negatives were two losses, one against Rosenbach and Washington State, the other against Peete in a head-to-head showdown that thrust Southern Cal into the Rose Bowl.

PEETE'S Heisman argument includes the Trojans' No. 2 ranking in an unbeaten season going into the showdown against No. 1 Notre Dame. Before Saturday, he threw for 2,429 yards, completing 185 of 294 attempts, substantial numbers but only fifth in the national rankings.

Neither Aikman or Peete has thrown for as many touchdowns as Miami's candidate, junior quarterback Steve Walsh.

Walsh's Heisman campaign actually began last January when he led the Hurricanes to the national championship, a feat Vinny Testaverde, his Heisman predecessor at the school, never managed.

His 28 TD passes, going into Saturday's game against Arkansas, were five more than Aikman and 10 more than Peete (before the Notre Dame game). Walsh is third in the national quarterback rankings, ahead of both California candidates but behind Rosenbach and Mike Gundy of Oklahoma State.

Walsh, though, is a junior and that sometimes is a turnoff for the 917 Heisman balloters who are divided through six geographical sections of the country. There have been just a half dozen underclass winners since the award was initiated in 1935. And only one of them, Ohio State's Archie Griffin, repeated the victory in his senior year.

NEVERTHELESS, this season's major non-quarterback candidate is a junior — Oklahoma State running back Barry Sanders. He is the lone non-passer given a serious Heisman chance and he comes into the race equipped with credentials that are every bit as substantial as those of the passers.

Sanders really reached this position in a most unusual way, forcing his way into consideration after the season began. Playing in the shadow of senior Thurman Thomas a year ago, he gained 622 yards on 111 carries, barely earning him a line in the Heisman winter book.

But Sanders turned it on when the season began, breaking 12 NCAA records. He did it with remarkable week-by-week rushing production that stretched to 2,296 yards after 10 games, just 46 short of Heisman winner Marcus Allen's record set at Southern Cal in 1981.

SANDERS scored 35 touchdowns, breaking the record of 29 that had been set by Lydell Mitchell of Penn State in 1971 and matched by Heisman winner Mike Rozier of Nebraska in 1983. He had three 300-plus yard games and missed a fourth last week by just seven yards. He scored four or more touchdowns five times in 10 games, and broke NCAA yardage records for two, three, four and five consecutive games.

Perhaps most impressive, though, were his 2,897 all purpose yards in 10 games. That is a per-game average of 289.7 yards, bettering the record of 246.3 set in 1937 by Byron "Whizzer" White of Colorado.

Sanders could be held without a single all-purpose yard in Oklahoma State's final game against Texas Tech — a most unlikely circumstance — and still finish with an average of 263 for the season, well ahead of White's record, which was the oldest mark in the NCAA book.

"I am flattered by the attention," he said. "I never thought this would happen to me."

SANDERS' game against Tech could be a problem for the Heisman people, though. It is scheduled for Saturday in Tokyo, the same day they open the envelope at the Downtown Athletic Club and announce the winner.

He also gives his school a unique opportunity at a baseball-football individual award sweep.

Earlier this month, Oklahoma State's Robin Ventura won the Golden Spikes Award as the nation's best amateur baseball player. The award ceremony was hosted by the DAC, home of the Heisman, and Ventura's trophy is on display there.

Reds fire two in big shuffle

CINCINNATI (AP) — The general manager of the Cincinnati Reds says he plans an announcement Monday about changes in the team's player development department following the firings of two executives.

Murray Cook on Friday confirmed the dismissals of Branch Rickey III, director of minor leagues for the team, and Tom Kayser, assistant director of player development. He said Chief Bender, assistant general manager, would resume the post of vice president for player development which he held from 1967 to 1987.

"I'm just not making any comment other than that," said Cook when asked about the latest in a series of firings and resignations in the Reds' minor league and scouting operations. Marge Schott, the team's president, was not available for comment.

"I would not have quit a job that in my estimation I have just begun," Rickey said in a story in Saturday's editions of The Cincinnati Enquirer.

"I consider this year to be one of my more successful. I find nothing but pride, not in what I achieved, but in what the minor league system was able to achieve. I'm not unhappy about leaving. I'm very satisfied I've given the Reds a first-class effort and made a favorable impression on several people I've worked with."

Rickey offered no details on the reasons for his dismissal or where the move originated.

"I can only tell you who told me," he said. "Murray told me. He said ... 'This is one of those decisions that had to be made.' The nicest thing that I can do is not to damage people in my departure."

The performance of the Reds' minor league teams this past season was not one to suggest a department in trouble. Nashville finished second in the Class AAA American Association. Chattanooga won the championship in the Class AA Southern League, as did Cedar Rapids in the Class A Midwest League, while Greensboro was in the playoffs in the Class A South Atlantic League.

Rickey joined the Reds in November 1987 after directing the Pittsburgh Pirates' farm system since 1981.

His grandfather, Hall of Fame member Branch Rickey, and his father, Branch Jr., were baseball executives with the St. Louis Cardinals, the old Brooklyn Dodgers, and the Pirates.

Kayser joint the Reds in November 1987 after serving as assistant minor league director for the Pirates from 1981 to 1986.

World's first 12-hole course

By ANDREW WARSHAW

LONDON (AP) — The only way to get there is by boat. The course has only 12 holes. And the near-freezing weather is so unpredictable golfers are given 10 days to finish the three-round tournament.

Sound like a golfer's nightmare?

Not so, say organizers of a unique amateur tournament being staged next week at Blackwaterfoot on the Isle of Arran, a remote beauty spot off the west coast of Scotland.

"I can't think of a place more healthy or bracing to play golf," said Graham Williams, whose Glasgow-based public relations company is putting on the Arran Challenge, a three-round, 36-hole event open to any amateur golfer with a handicap.

"But getting to the island may be a problem," Williams said. "Sailings are often held up by wind and snow. That's going to be more of a challenge than the event itself."

Believed to be the world's only 12-hole golf course, the Shiskine links at Blackwaterfoot are separated from another Scottish island, Kintyre, by a narrow strip of sea known as the Kilbrannan Sound.

The only way to reach the course is by ferry from Ardrossan on the Scottish mainland 11 miles to the east, then drive across the 8-mile-wide island. There is no airport and no railway.

Temperatures on the island are likely to be just about freezing but, says Williams, the tournament will be a golfer's paradise, with fairways and greens almost as good as Troon and Turnberry, two of the nearby Scottish links that host the British Open.

"The west coast of Arran is particularly good weather-wise all the year round," Williams said in a telephone interview. "If it snows, which is rare, the snow won't lie on the greens. It's also a very dry course and absorbs rain. The snow doesn't lie and the frost doesn't bite."

Club secretary Fiona Crawford said the tournament represents the ideal winter break, regardless of its 12-hole format and the possibility of a stormy sea crossing.

"It's a beautiful island, very relaxing," she said, "away from all the worries and cares, the hustle and bustle."

Shiskine was originally designed in 1896 as a nine-hole course by former British Open champion Willie Furney. Sixteen years later, another ex-Open winner, Willie Park, enlarged it to 18 holes but World War I forced six holes to be turned into farmland, leaving it with only 12.

In 1937, James Braid, who also won the British Open, was commissioned to put back the missing six holes but then came World War II, and Braid's work never began.

Today, Shiskine's 3,000-yard, par-42 course has 300 members. The course record by a pro is a 6-under-par 36. No amateur has bettered 39.

Because of the difficulties getting to Arran — there are only two sailings daily — all players entering next week's tournament are being given 10 days, between Dec. 2 and 12, to complete their three rounds.

"If the boat suddenly doesn't run for a couple of days, we don't want to be held responsible," Williams said. "We are asking people just to turn up and play. Entry cards are only being issued on the scene."

Local sponsors include the Kinloch Hotel, which is adjacent to the course and is awarding a cup to the winner.

'Noles take no prisoners

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Chip Ferguson's three first-quarter touchdown passes sparked fifth-ranked Florida State to a 52-17 victory Saturday night over Florida.

Ferguson's passes to Lawrence Dawsey, Tom O'Malley and Sammie Smith shot the Seminoles to a 21-7 lead. Coach Bobby Bowden removed his starters in the third period after the Seminoles opened up a 45-10 cushion.

Florida State, which takes a 10-1 record into the Sugar Bowl against Southeastern Conference co-champion Auburn, racked up 132 yards on offense and 11 first downs in the first period against Florida's defense, which was ranked second nationally going into the game.

It was Florida State's largest margin of victory over Florida and its 10th straight win since losing to No. 3 Miami in the season-opener.

Florida, which will meet Illinois in the All American Bowl in Birmingham, Ala., finished the season 6-5 for the second straight year.

Dawsey gave the Seminoles a 7-0 lead with a spectacular individual effort, catching the ball at the Florida 15, faking out one defender and tripping into the end zone. He touched the ground four times with his hand to keep his balance.

Tony Lomack's 46-yard kickoff return and a 27-yard Kyle Morris to Mark McGriff pass set up Emmitt Smith's 1-yard touchdown run as Florida tied the game 7-7 midway through the opening quarter.

Ferguson's 15-yard scoring pass to O'Malley gave Florida State a 14-7 lead.

Kelvin Smith's interception of a Morris pass at the Florida 24 set up the Seminoles' third touchdown, which came on Ferguson's 8-yard pass to Sammie Smith.

LSU 44, Tulane 14

BATON ROUGE, La. — Greg Jackson returned an interception 71 yards for a fourth-quarter touchdown, and Tommy Hodson threw for 222 yards and two touchdowns to lead 16th-ranked Louisiana State.

LSU, bound for the Hall of Fame Bowl against Syracuse, finished with an 8-3 regular season. The Tigers were 6-1 in the Southeastern Conference, tying for first place with Auburn. Tulane finished at 5-6.

Hodson completed 15 of 21 passes, including a 15-yard touchdown pass to Eddie Fuller to open the night's scoring and a 30-yarder to Tony Moss with 8:13 left in the game.

David Browndyke kicked field goals of 28, 27 and 30 yards for LSU. Calvin Windom scored on a 1-yard plunge in the second quarter, and Jay Egloff rammed over from a yard out in the fourth quarter.

Tulane closed to 17-14 midway through the third quarter on touchdown runs of 30 and four yards by quarterback Terrence Jones.

But Browndyke's second field goal and the touchdowns by Egloff, Jackson and Moss ended the upset hopes of Tulane, a 20-point underdog.

Georgia 24, Tech 3

ATHENS, Ga. — Wayne Johnson passed for 167 yards and one touchdown and Wycliffe Lovelace returned an interception 33 yards for a score as No. 20 Georgia gave Vince Dooley his 200th coaching victory. Dooley, completing 25 years at Georgia, is only the 10th coach in Division I-A history to reach the 200-victory plateau. His record is 200-77-10.

The Bulldogs, 8-3, will now await a Jan. 1 Gator Bowl date with Michigan State. Tech finished 3-8.

Georgia went to the air, an uncharacteristic method of attack for the Bulldogs, with Johnson completing 14 of 24 attempts, including a 5-yard scoring pass to Keith Henderson on the first play of the final quarter.

Vols 14, Vandy 7

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Tennessee tailback Keith Davis rushed for 162 yards and scored the winning touchdown on a 5-yard run in the third quarter to lift the Vols to an SEC victory, the fifth in a row for Tennessee, which began the season with a school record six-game losing streak. The win allowed the Vols, who have won their last five meetings with Vandy, to end their SEC season with a 3-4 mark.

Vanderbilt, a loser in eight of its last nine games, finished 3-8 overall and 2-5 in conference.

Davis capped a 67-yard drive on Tennessee's first possession of the second half with his scoring run.

Ole Miss 33, MSU 6

JACKSON, Miss. — Mississippi quarterback Mark Young threw three touchdown passes, two to Pat Coleman, to tie a school record.

Young's 13-yard scoring pass to Willie Green put Mississippi ahead 23-6 with 6:57 to play in the third quarter. The touchdown pass was the 31st of Young's career, tying him with Archie Manning, 1968-70, and Kent Austin, 1981-85.

College Football

The victory in the annual season-ender for both teams raised Mississippi's record to 5-6 overall and 3-4 in the SEC. Mississippi State extended its losing streak to 10 games, falling to 1-10 overall and 0-7 in the conference.

Coleman pulled down a 27-yard scoring pass in the second quarter to put Ole Miss ahead 9-3 and extended the Rebels' lead to 16-6 with a 43-yard touchdown reception with 10:39 remaining in the third quarter.

A&I 34, Martin 0

KINGSVILLE, Texas — Texas A&I fullback Heath Sherman rushed for 128 yards and scored four touchdowns to lead Tennessee-Martin in NCAA Division II quarterfinal football action Saturday. The win advanced the 10-2 Javelinas to the playoff semifinals next weekend against an opponent to be named Sunday.

Sherman scored on runs of 2, 26, 13 and 12 yards. His first two scores came in the first period and the third was in the second to give Texas A&I 21-0 halftime lead.

After a scoreless third period, the Javelinas scored twice in the fourth. Tailback Johnny Bailey scored on an 8-yard run, and Sherman got his 12-yard scoring run.

Bailey rushed for 121 yards.

Quarterback Leon Reed led the Tennessee-Martin attack with 132 passing yards. He completed 13 of 33, and had two intercepted.

Texas A&I is champion of the Lone Star Conference.

SFA 24, Jackson St 0

NACOGDOCHES, Texas — Cornerback Johnnie Hendrix returned an interception 48 yards for a touchdown to lead Stephen F. Austin, 10-2, to victory in a first-round NCAA Division I-AA game.

The Lumberjacks got their first score on a 73-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Todd Hammel to Joe Bradford. The first-quarter touchdown was the only scoring in the first half.

Jackson State finishes its season at 8-1-2.

SE Okla 21, C. Ark 14

DURANT, Okla. — Versie Graham scored on a 1-yard run in overtime and Corey Ransom rushed for 107 yards and one touchdown Saturday as No. 4 Southeastern defeated top-ranked Central Arkansas in the first round of the NAIA Division I playoffs. Southeastern, 10-0, hosts 16th-ranked Adams State of Colorado on Saturday.

The Savages got on the scoreboard first on a 12-yard run by Ransom in the opening quarter. Neither team scored again until Central Arkansas' Scott Williamms threw a 35-yard touchdown pass to Al Walker as time expired at the end of the third quarter.

Southeastern took a 14-7 lead with 6:08 left in the game on quarterback Greg Neece's 1-yard run.

Mike Wallace, replacing the injured Williams, threw a 70-yard touchdown pass to Willie Davis on his first play from scrimmage with 1:43 left to tie the game.

Marshall 7, No. Texas 0

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. — John Gregory hit Mike Barber with an 8-yard touchdown pass after a muffed punt to lift Marshall to victory in Saturday's first round of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs. The sixth-seeded Thundering Herd, 11-1, killed North Texas' last scoring chance when Rondell Wannamaker intercepted a Scott Davis pass at the Marshall 35 with 43 seconds left.

Gregory had set up that Mean Green Eagle drive by fumbling the snap at the North Texas 45 with 1:27 left in the game as Marshall was trying to run out the clock.

Marshall, which won the Southern Conference's automatic bid to the playoffs, advanced to a second-round game against Southern Conference co-champion Furman. North Texas, the third-place team in the Southland Conference and the 10th-seeded team in the tournament, ended its season 8-4.

Game called off

MONTICELLO, Ark. — The University of Arkansas-Monticello Boll Weevils were scheduled to make their first-ever appearance in NAIA Division I postseason play Saturday, but threatening weather forced postponement and the game against Washburn University of Topeka, Kan., was rescheduled for 1 p.m. Sunday.

When the decision was made to postpone the contest, the southeastern portion of Arkansas was under a tornado watch and flash flood watch.

Simms doubtful as starter tonight

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — New York Giants Coach Bill Parcells says he will wait until just prior to Sunday night's game against the New Orleans Saints before deciding whether injured quarterback Phil Simms will play.

Simms, who suffered a bruised right shoulder in last Sunday's 23-17 loss to the Philadelphia Eagles, has not practiced all week.

"It will be an 11th hour decision," Parcells said Friday. "If he has any limitations, he won't play. I'm not going to send a guy out there who can't play their position."

MC opens loop play at Snyder

From Staff Reports

SNYDER — Midland College opens conference action 8 p.m. Monday against Western Texas College in Scurry County Coliseum.

Tony Mauldin, in his second year as head coach at WTC, has had a good recruiting season and is expected to be tougher this year than in his initial season. And at least one Chaparral will have strange feelings when he looks down at the WTC bench.

MC sophomore Louis Clay might be excused for even waving at the West Texas assistant coach. In fact, he might even speak to him after the game. Mauldin's new assistant is Don Clay, Louis' father.

Louis originally planned to continue at MC this year only as a student. But he had second thoughts and decided to play a second season for the Chaparrals. He's a reserve point guard who has seen spot action so far this fall.

But MC head coach Reggie Franklin is more concerned about his players' legs.

The Chaps were in Great Bend, Kansas, last weekend for a three-day Thanksgiving tournament, then had to make the long bus trip back to Midland today. After a day of classes, it's back on the bus for the trek to Snyder.

"This is going to tell us how tough our team is, both mentally and physically," Franklin said. "But long bus trips are a fact of life in this conference and our players have to get used to that. Since it's our conference opener, they should be ready to play and that's the way they have to be in college."

Midland returns to Chaparral Center 7:30 p.m. Thursday against Big Spring's Howard College Hawks.

"We get Western Texas on the road, play at home against Howard College and South Plains, then have the long trip to Roswell for the New Mexico Military Institute game before this fall schedule ends," Franklin noted.

Chaparral conference games are carried live on KCRS Radio, 550 AM. The complete WJCAC schedule for the week includes Clarendon College at South Plains, Frank Phillips at Howard, Odessa at New Mexico Junior ollege, and New Mexico Military open on Nov. 28; South Plains at NMMI, Western Texas at Clarendon, NMJC at Frank Phillips, and Odessa open Dec. 1.

Lady Longhorns lose to Purdue

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Guard MaChelle Joseph scored 22 points, leading Purdue to a 76-71 victory over Texas Saturday in the women's championship game of the Boilermaker Classic.

Texas, which dropped to 1-1, was led by Clarissa Davis, who scored 30 points and grabbed 13 rebounds. Purdue improved to 2-0.

Dallas Carter wins as TV crew is kicked

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Fans may be talking for years about Dallas Carter's 31-7 victory over Lufkin in the Class 5A regional semifinal Saturday at Kyle Field.

But don't look for any highlight films.

A television station crew assigned to cover the game was kicked out of the stadium by a man who said he was an official from the University Interscholastic League, according to KTRE-TV in Lufkin.

UIL officials were not immediately available for comment.

The video ban stemmed from a pre-game agreement signed by the coaches of the two teams.

The agreement banned game filming by crews of either high school. This is not uncommon, since coaches do not want the opposition reviewing films at halftime.

But the agreement was interpreted by a UIL official at the stadium as a ban of all TV filming, according to Craig Cecil, the weekend sportscaster at KTRE.

"They kicked us out of the game, and they threatened our photographer saying, 'You shoot, you get arrested,'" said Cecil.

Cecil said Lufkin coach Pat Culpepper was angered over the decision that sent KTRE packing. The television station airs a coach's show during the week featuring Culpepper.

"Culpepper couldn't believe it. He was furious," said Cecil.

Lufkin viewers were not the only losers in the incident. At least one other station, WFAA-TV in Dallas, was counting on receiving footage of the game from KTRE.

Unrelated to the TV ban, a hearing was scheduled Thursday to decide whether Carter can continue in the playoffs amid allegations that a football team member received an inflated grade.

Chaps hold off Northeast for 3rd

From Staff Reports

GREAT BEND, Kan. — Midland College held off a furious second half rally by Northeast Junior College here Saturday night to take an 85-80 victory and third place in the Barton County Community College Coca-Cola/McDonald's Invitational basketball tournament.

The Chaps won two of three games in the tournament, boosting its record to a 6-3 mark for the year, but the sixth victory didn't come easy.

Leading 66-45 with 14:36 left in the game, Northeast put on a big rally to close to within 83-80 with 1:20 left in the game, but MC's Darryl King sank two free throws to ice the decision down the stretch.

Chap freshman Tim Owens paced the victory with a season high 26 points while King added 17, Keithus Hanks 14 and Randy Williams 12. Sophomores Charles McCovery and Sydney Rice were held to four and two points respectively.

The Chaps had a lot of trouble with Jordan, who hit a game high 33 points and May hit for 22.

The Chaps broke to a big 12-0 lead in the first 3:12 of the game and held a 31-14 margin with eight minutes left in the first half. MC continued to build its lead with the beginning of the second half, but Northeast finally caught fire and made things interesting.

The Chaps now play for keeps. They open Western Junior College Athletic Conference play in Snyder Monday against Western Texas College at 7:30 p.m. The money now goes on the line as the Chaps make its bid for another Region V berth, which is obtained from only conference records.

Probe failed to look under rug

Probe missed more than it found at WVU

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A published report says West Virginia University officials overlooked more than they uncovered while investigating allegations of cash payments and other gifts to former All-American tight end Rob Bennett.

In a copyright story in an early Sunday edition, The Pittsburgh Press said the university found major violations beyond the lone technicality it admitted in a report filed in 1986 with the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Citing a four-month investigation, the newspaper alleged that:

— Assistant Athletic Director Roger Jeffries, who conducted WVU's investigation, himself paid $400 bail to keep Bennett out of jail;

— A booster paid a $2,870 debt Bennett owed to the Social Security Administration;

— One or more boosters gave Bennett a used car valued at $1,000;

— Someone helped Bennett pay off car loans exceeding $5,000;

— A booster loaned Bennett a car and $140.

— A booster allowed Bennett to charge clothes and gasoline to the booster's account.

In addition, the newspaper said Bennett claimed to have been paid $100 a month and to have received other gifts and services during his college career from 1981 to 1984.

The Mountaineers program never has been cited for a major NCAA violation and the organization took no action over the Bennett case because the university's report on the matter has disappeared from NCAA files, the paper said.

The Press said it obtained a copy of a May 1985 letter from Bennett's mother, Hope Mills, to her son's agent, Gary Kovacs, in which she said boosters had provided her son with $10,900.

According to the newspaper, the letter said the cash and gifts started flowing after Bill Morton of Bridgeport, W. Va., and other boosters met with her son in July 1981 and persuaded him not to turn down a Mountaineers football scholarship. Because of their promises of financial help, Bennett dropped his plans to go to work to support himself and his family.

Morton denied promising at the July 1981 meeting to pay the Social Security debt. But the Press said he began paying it in July 1982 when Bennett came to him with a letter from the federal agency threatening prosecution.

"He was absolutely scared to death," Morton is quoted as saying.

The newspaper said Morton agreed to pay Social Security $50 to $100 a month until the debt was settled and had the notices sent to his address. In return, the Press said Bennett agreed to patrol a 28-acre mine refuse site near Morgantown for $5 per hour of duty two or three times a week.

West Virginia's report to the NCAA said Bennett worked for Morton during the school year, a violation for athletes on full scholarship. That technical violation is the only NCAA rule West Virginia cited.

Bennett said he never worked for Morton or repaid any money to him.

The newspaper said Morton made the final payment on Bennett's Social Security debt in June 1986, six months after AD Fred Schaus and Jeffries interviewed him.

NCAA rules would have been violated even if Bennett had repaid Morton, but West Virginia's report does not cite an infraction on that issue, according to the Press.

Bennett also said Morton gave him money several times, the newspaper reported. Morton said he gave Bennett money once.

"I do remember I did help him buy a tire or something for his car," the Press quoted Morton as saying.

No such cash gift was mentioned in West Virginia's report.

The newspaper also said another booster gave Bennett a 1976 Ford Gran Torino station wagon valued at $1,000.

Bennett claimed boosters also helped him with another vehicle, a 1978 Jeep Renegade he bought in May 1981 with loans of $5,300 in loans from two banks.

The Jeep broke down a few months after Bennett bought it.

"I told them I needed some wheels," he said. "They got it fixed, paid it off and sold it somehow."

The Ford station wagon was registered to his name the following September, four months after Bennett bought the Jeep. Bennett said he does not know who bought the Jeep, did not receive any money for it and did not pay off the bank loans.

Mrs. Mills said Gale Ervin, president of Lewis County Savings & Loan told her Morton paid the balance of the $1,300 it had loaned on the Jeep.

The West Virginia report says booster Dale Riggs swapped the Ford for the Jeep, paid the loans on the Jeep and had it titled to himself.

The Press said it learned that neither the Ford nor the Jeep ever was titled to Riggs.

Bail receipts in Monongalia Magistrate Court show that Jeffries paid $400 bail to keep Bennett out of jail over an April 1983 arrest on assault and battery charges, the newspaper said.

In an interview, Jeffries said three times he could not remember doing so. When a reporter cited the court records, the assistant athletic director said, "Let's see. I remember that now. I exactly remember that," and he conceded that the payment violated NCAA rules, the newspaper said.

Schaus found nothing wrong with Jeffries paying bail.

Since 1982, Jeffries has headed the Mountaineer Athletic Club, the fund-raising arm of the athletic department. Four of the people he investigated in connection with Bennett's case were contributors to the university. Jeffries said he saw no conflict of interest in investigating people from whom he seeks money.

Among other things, the newspaper said booster Homer Bennett of Weston, W.Va., who is not related to the former player, arranged for a Ford dealer to lend the player a replacement for his disabled car and gave him $140 to make a trip to Philadelphia around Easter 1984. Homer Bennett said Rob Bennett was to repay the favor by working for him.

Bills, Bengals top Sunday in NFL

Cardinals try Eagles without Lomax

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

On Jan. 8 of this year, the day of the AFC championship game, it was 45 degrees in Buffalo. On the other hand, when the title game was played in Cincinnati in 1982, the wind-chill factor was 56 below zero.

So if the Bengals-Bills game Sunday at Riverfront Stadium decides the site of the conference title game, for which team do you root to avoid an Ice Bowl?

NFL

For both coaches, particularly Sam Wyche of the Bengals, it's more a matter of getting there first.

The Bills, whose 11-1 mark is the league's best, clinched the AFC East title last week over the Jets. But the Bengals, at 9-3 after a 38-24 win in Dallas, still have to contend with 8-4 Houston and 7-5 Cleveland in the Central.

Which is why the Bengals will be working while the Bills may be celebrating.

"This one's going to have a lot of significance to us," Wyche said. "To us, it makes a difference because a loss could knock us into a tie with Houston."

Buffalo can celebrate again if they beat the Bengals. A victory would clinch home-field advantage for the playoffs, putting the Bills three games ahead of the Bengals with three to go and giving them a tie-breaker edge and giving them the edge in division record over Houston.

Cleveland (7-5) at Washington (6-6)

"If we win all four of our games, I think we can make it," says Washington Coach Joe Gibbs, whose team has lost three of four.

Winning against a team that still may be the AFC's best, is going to be tough, particularly since the Redskins are having problems running the ball and defending against the other team's thrower. In this case, the party of the second part will be Bernie Kosar.

Gibbs is going with Mark Rypien over Doug Williams, who the coach describes as "a little tired and a little worn down." As for the running game, Washington ranks 24th in the league and is without Kelvin Bryant.

Phoenix (7-5) at Philadelphia (7-5)

The Eagles suddenly look like the winner of the four-way NFC East race, if for no other reason than they're getting the breaks.

They probably would have lost to the Giants last week had not Phil Simms been knocked out of the game, and they scored on two fumbles, the second when Clyde Simmons picked up his own team's blocked field goal and carried it in in overtime.

Now they get Cliff Stoudt instead of Neil Lomax at quarterback for the Cards.

Giants (7-5) at New Orleans (9-3)

Simms, his right shoulder bruised, will probably be at quarterback for New York, which has lost control of a division it once seemed on the way to winning.

The defense is playing better — it sacked Randall Cunningham five times and pressured him numerous other times, which may help against the Saints, whose weakness is its offensive line. But New Orleans seems to be peaking — Bobby Hebert was 20 of 23 last week in a 42-0 win against Denver.

Raiders (6-6) at Seattle (6-6)

A key game in the division nobody wants, the NFC West and the first of two meetings between these two in the final four weeks.

It's taken these Raiders 15 quarters to score their last 37 points and they haven't had a touchdown since they scored in the final quarter against San Diego three weeks ago.

Rams (7-5) at Denver (6-6)

Who can figure the Broncos, 30-7 winners at home over Cleveland, 42-0 losers in New Orleans. Actually, they're rather easy to figure — that Cleveland game was the only decent one they've played this year.

The Rams have lost three straight, the latest a 38-24 whomping in San Diego.

Pats (7-5) at Indianapolis (6-6)

The Flutie-kazooties are still chasing a wild-card spot and so are the Colts.

Chris Chandler, lifted after going just 5 for 14 for 45 yards in a 12-3 loss to Minnesota that broke a six-game winning streak, will probably be at quarterback over Gary Hogeboom.

But the key should be Eric Dickerson in what may be the year's fastest game — Flutie does little but hand off to John Stephens and Chandler and Dickerson play the same game.

Green Bay (2-10) at Chicago (10-2)

This always seems like a game the Bears can mail in and ends up with some noteworthy feature, like William Perry running for a touchdown, or Charles Martin stuffing Jim McMahon on his head. They also seem to end up 16-14 or such, although the Bears breezed in Green Bay 24-6 earlier this year.

Frisco (7-5) at Diego (4-8)

The 49ers and Joe Montana looked like the old 49ers and the old Montana Monday night but "old" is the way to describe Joe's body.

After upsetting the Rams, the Chargers are actually within two games of the lead in the AFC West.

Miami (5-7) at Jets (5-6-1)

The Dolphins are playing out the string the Jets may soon be. The first game was a 44-30 New York victory in which Dan Marino threw for 521 yards.

KCity (3-8-1) at Pittsburgh (2-10)

The Chiefs are blowing the Troy Aikman sweepstakes with consecutive wins over Cincinnati and Seattle. A couple of more and they may save Frank Gansz' job.

Tampa Bay (3-9) at Atlanta (4-8)

The thing to remember about these two teams is that the Falcons are 4-5 and when Chris Miller plays and the Bucs are 3-8 with Vinny Testaverde.

Super Bowl hex strikes again

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

And so, another Super Bowl winner bites the dust ... literally.

If you have to point to one reason why the Redskins are 6-6 and just about out of the playoff race it's the running game, the staple of the two Washington Super Bowl winners of the '80s.

How did it happen?

Easily.

While the Redskins have the usual answers — "Some guys seem to lose just a little bit of intensity," says General Manager Bobby Beathard — there are some more obvious problems, like the running game, turnovers and the secondary.

First, George Rogers ran out of gas last year, depriving the 'Skins of the heavy-duty running back on which they've always based their offense. The hope was that Timmy Smith would gain confidence from his 205 yards in the Super Bowl last year and replace him.

Instead, Smith plodded through the first four games with a 3-yard average and Coach Joe Gibbs finally gave the job to Kelvin Bryant, brilliant but injury-prone.

That's exactly what Bryant turned out to be — he averaged 4.6 yards a carry, caught 42 passes and then went down three weeks ago with knee and neck injuries. After he left the field, it was announced in the press box that "he might return" later in the game.

He hasn't returned since and the Skins are now down to Jamie Morris, Joe's Brother, who gained all of 19 yards in eight carries Monday night against San Francisco as Washington gained all of 56 yards on the ground.

Two other problems — pass defense and turnovers.

Cornerbacks Darrell Green and Barry Wilburn have been playing hurt and it shows — Washington is 23rd in the league against the pass.

And after turning the ball over four times Monday night — twice on fumbles by Smith, who gained six yards in 12 carries — they have now lost the ball seventeen more times than they've taken it away. The only teams that are worse are 3-9 Tampa Bay and 2-10 Dallas.

WINNER'S LUCK

Sometimes luck is more important than skill:

— The Philadelphia Eagles, in a three-way tie with the Giants and Cardinals in the NFC East, probably have the best shot at winning the division. But if Phil Simms hadn't been hurt last week, they probably would have lost to the Giants, who were dominating them and this week they get to play the Cards with Cliff Stoudt at quarterback for the injured Neil Lomax.

— With Minnesota leading Indianapolis 9-3 last week with 1:44 left and a fourth down and a long one at the Colts 31, Coach Jerry Burns had three choices. A missed field goal attempt or a failed try for first down would give the Colts good field position; a punt would leave them at the 20.

He chose the least likely, a field goal, which might also be blocked and returned for a game-winning touchdown. Moreover, kicker Chuck Nelson was just 8 for 29 outside the 40 during his career, zero for four this year.

Nelson made it.

AS THE WORLD TURNS

One year, Harry Carson was going to quit the Giants and join the Air Force.

Another time, he was going to become an actor — he even had a cameo in a soap opera.

So is it any surprise that the retirement that Carson announced two weeks ago may not be a retirement at all?

Naturally, it revolves around television, the medium the 34-year-old nine-time Pro Bowler wants to enter when he finally does quit.

Last Sunday, Carson went on NBC and CBS to say how angry he was that he was placed on injured reserve after undergoing arthroscopic surgery on his knee. He intimated that if he did play again, it wouldn't be in New York.

Then he met on Wednesday with Coach Bill Parcells and recanted ... both his retirement (perhaps) and his anger.

"I think Sunday I was speaking emotionally," Carson said. "I think anyone who saw the interview could tell I was somewhat upset about some things. I am not going to detail what these things were but I'm not thinking about it too much now."

What was Carson upset about?

A guess: if Carson is selected to the Pro Bowl once more, he will set a record for the most selections and probably go straight to the Hall of Fame without passing go. If he played no more — this year or next — he wouldn't go.

Carson is a team player, who suffered through half his 12-year career on an awful team before captaining a Super Bowl winner. But he's also a proud man and a 10th Pro Bowl trip would make him prouder.

RAMMA LAMMA DING DONG

The Los Angeles Rams were the surprise of the first half of the NFL season.

Now, with three straight losses, they're also the surprise of the second half.

What went wrong?

For one thing, Jim Everett has started throwing interceptions — seven in those three losses. And he is, after all, really just a second-year man after missing most of his rookie season holding out before being traded from the Oilers to the Rams.

"I think he still gets rattled if you get in his face early," says a scout for an opposing team. "That happens with young quarterbacks and that's what's been happening with him."

For a second, the "Eagle" defense — two down linemen and five linebackers — is finally catching up to Los Angeles. Like most novelties, other teams are beginning to figure it out.

One stat — Kevin Greene, the linebacker who had nine sacks in his first five games now has 11. What happened? He's been double-teamed and at 220 pounds he's just worn out.

JUANITA SEALES
DON HARVEY REALTORS

Juanita Seales may be a new face and name at Don Harvey Realtors, but by no means is she new in the Real Estate industry. Juanita has been associated with real estate 10 years, and before moving to Midland owned and managed her office for five of those years.

Juanita realizes the great financial and psychological risks involved in the buying and selling of homes, and works at building a lasting relationship of trust and confidence with all her prospects. She can get you the best financing available for you as an individual and guide you right up to the day of closing your transaction. Her goal is not only to sell your home or sell you a home, but to do it in such a professional and friendly manner that not only will you contact her for future housing needs, but will refer your friends, relatives and work associates to her, also.

Juanita has a neat small, two story, three bedroom, two bath home on the market located in Gardendale on 1¾ acres, that could be a doll house. If you like country living don't wait long to call her at 683-5333 or 561-8351.

Helen G. Pogue, Broker
Chaparral, Realtors
Work: 686-7000
Home: 697-6303

Helen Pogue was Valedictorian of her High School graduating class and was awarded a two-year scholarship to Hardin-Simmmons University where she majored in business. She and her husband moved to Midland in 1955. In 1964, her husband opened a real estate office, A. W. Pogue, Realtor, and she obtained her real estate license. In 1966, the Pogues moved to Dallas where she trained extensively with Ebby Halliday Realtors, one of the largest real estate firms in the world.
Evenings she studied appraising at SMU.

Helen realized early in her career that a home is one of the largest single investments most people make in their lifetime. The equity in their home for many people represents their greater accumulation of savings. Helen really cares for the people she serves, whether buying or selling, and is always "up front" with them.

Helen also learned early on that there is a buyer for every property, that there is no such thing as an unsaleable listing.

Helen's back, and she's placed her real estate broker's license with Chaparral Realtors, and she's excited about that. If you are looking to buy or sell real estate, or know anyone who is, give Helen a call. She will not let you down....

Honesty, hard work, knowledge, and ENTHUSIASM are the keys to any successful real estate transaction.

VICKY GARRETT
Action REALTY

Vicky began her real estate career in Kermit. She has been a licensed real estate broker since 1979. Her experience includes having worked as a commercial leasing agent, appraiser as well as residential sales. She & James have been married for 17 years and have one son. Judd, who is a 7th grader at San Jacinto Junior High. They are members of Trinity Presbyterian Chruch. She is a member of Midland Chamber of Commerce, Permian Aimees, a member of the National Association of Realtors as well as the Texas Association of Realtors.

Her hobbies include tennis and gardening.

JO DENNIS
1 FIRST Realty of Midland

A Family Affair

The family room is only one of the gathering places in this two story home. Any family would enjoy watching a favorite movie together in front of a warming fire.

Text by Jill Hancock

This week's featured home definitely revolves around a busy, active family and the floor plan was designed to meet each family member's individual needs, regardless of age. Downstairs, there are many rooms for friends and family to gather - in the formal living, dining and family rooms. Another reason this home is wonderful for a family is due to the open arrangement of the kitchen, breakfast and adjacent sitting area. Upstairs, three bedrooms and two baths are situated, as well as a study with a fireplace, making this part of the house a perfect hide-a-way for kids.

A glass door enables a visitor to have a glimpse of the fashionable decor that the home affords. The entrance opens into a staircase which leads upstairs, the sequestered master bedroom, to the left and a formal living and dining rooms, to the right. The entrance hall has a brick floor, plantation shutters on two large windows and a rose, mauve and blue petite print wallcovering.

Stepping down into the formal living and dining room, a visitor immediately notices the three shuttered windows which brightened this spacious room and a mirrored wall. Pale gray adorn the walls of this room which is ideal when entertaining guests formally.

Down the hall from the living room the brick floor leads into the family room. An inlaid carpeting in hunter green and cream walls add color to this room. One wall in the room is highlighted by a large window that provides a grand view of the backyard. A red brick fireplace is situated along an adjacent wall and features bookcases on both sides that the current homeowner uses to display duck decoys. An entertainment cabinet is located on a third wall.

Next to the family room, a door leads into the breakfast room and kitchen. A tiny blue plaid print wallpaper creates an attractive contrast to the lightly stained kitchen cabinets. The breakfast room has a built-in server with a blue tile cabinet top. With a door also leading into the formal dining room, the arrangement of these rooms are great when families and friends gather during the holidays.

The kitchen is designed around a work island, complete with a chopping block top. The sink is placed in front of a corner window and has a wonderful view of an aged oak tree where a mother can see her child swinging in a tire swing. The kitchen appliances include a General Electric stove top, Spacesaver microwave, a self-cleaning oven with a warming drawer; a Maytag dishwasher and a Compactall trash compactor. Blue tile which matches the server in the breakfast room is also used as back splashes in the kitchen. Shades of peach and blue highlight the wallcovering in the kitchen.

One reason the arrangement of this part of the home is so appealing is due to a small sitting area at the far end of the breakfast room. This area is very adaptable to any family needs and during the busiest part of the day - the late afternoon - a mother would be handy to all of her children as she was preparing her family's dinner. This area is a great place for toddlers to play and a TV could be placed on the built-in cabinet so older kids could watch a favorite children's program or movie, while still being close at hand. Mom could even answer questions of school age children while their homework was being completed at the built-in desk.

A half-bath and L-shaped utility room are found between the breakfast area and kitchen. The utility room has storage cabinets and leads into the two car garage with automatic door openers.

French doors lead outside onto a brick patio in the backyard. This yard has plenty of room for children to play and a separate fence surrounds the backyard pool so smaller children can still enjoy their play house and swing set without access to the pool.

The sequestered master bedroom is situated to the left of the home's entrance. This colorful room has a mirrored wall and is brightened by three windows with plantation shutters. A two tone wallpaper in shades of blue adorn the other walls. A walk-in dressing closet features racks for shoes and shelves for sweaters.

Teal green tile highlight the master bath which has a built-in shower and a sunken tile tub. The bath also has two marble vanity areas - one with a sink and the other with a make-up area. A door provides access to the backyard pool during the summer. The bath also has two large closets that are situated across from each other.

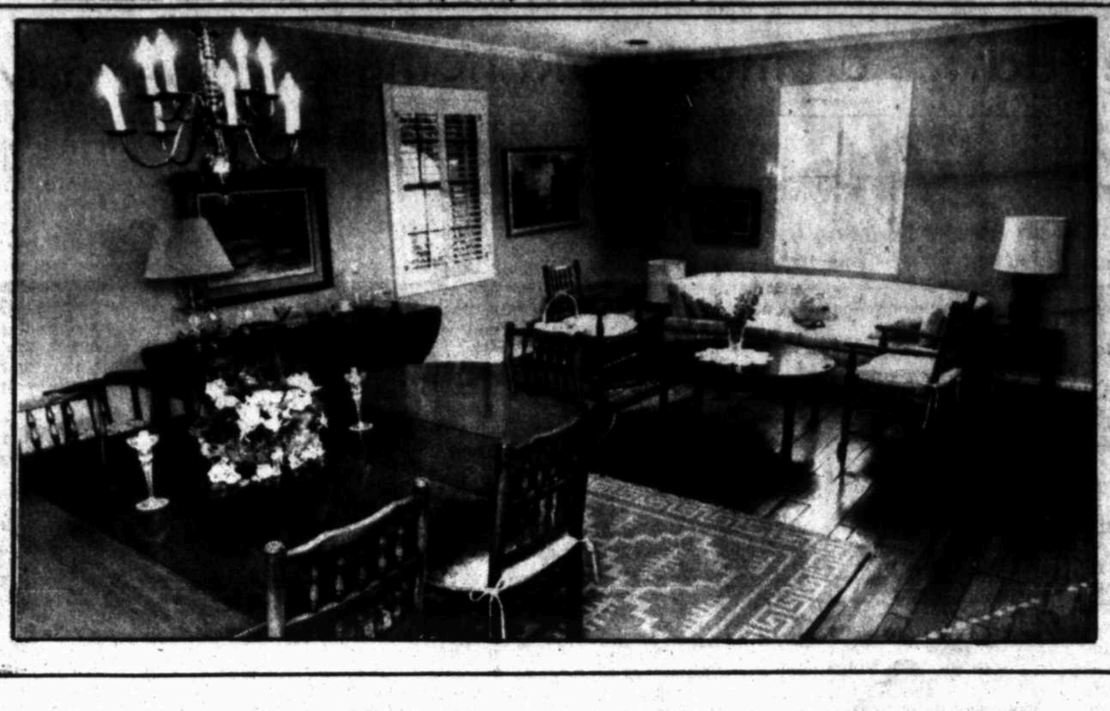
The staircase with wooden landing and steps lead upstairs to the children's three bedrooms. The front two bedrooms have a windows which overlooks the front yard.

The upstairs study has a brick fireplace with bookcases. With the addition of a TV and VCR, this room would be a haven for teenagers and their friends.

Across from the study, a spacious hall bath is located. The bath has two sinks, a make-up vanity and a tub/shower.

The third bedroom is found beyond the hall bath. This enormous room has a study area in the front part of the room and a sleeping area at the other end. This bedroom has a private bath with a built-in shower and three storage closets.

Located in an older established neighborhood, the 3,800 square foot home is being offered by Chaparral, Realtors for $266,000.



The formal living and dining rooms are found to the right of the entrance. This spacious room features hardwood floors, plantation shutters and a mirrored wall. With access to the family room and kitchen area, the flow from the living and dining room help make this home ideal when entertaining friends, especially during the holidays.

Private Party Automotive Advertising

REAL RESULTS

Classified Means Advertising Results!

...and to prove to you the power of classified advertising, the Midland Reporter-Telegram is offering a limited time special for in-column private party automotive advertising with "Guaranteed Results" at a super low rate for a minimum 3 line ad or greater. We are so confident of the result-getting power of classifieds that we are offering a "Guaranteed Results Program" *which assures the sale of your vehicle or we will run your ad FREE for 10 additional days.

Ad Prices:

3 Lines = $12.00
4 Lines = $16.00
5 Lines = $20.00
6 Lines = $24.00
7 Lines = $28.00
AND UP at .40¢ Per Line For 10 Days.

TO QUALIFY for the Guaranteed Results Program:

1.) The ad must contain no more than one (1) vehicle.
2.) The vehicle must be priced.
3.) Cancellations are allowed at any time, however, no refunds or rate adjustments are given for ads cancelled prior to the expiration date of the first 10 days scheduled.
4.) In the unlikely event that your vehicle does not sell within 10 days, call us within 48 hours and reduce the selling price of the vehicle 10% at which time your ad will be re-scheduled FREE OF CHARGE for 10 additional days. If the advertiser elects to re-advertise the vehicle at original price they may do so at the regular private party open rates.
5.)We reserve the right to determine fair market value of your vehicle.

*Guaranteed Results Program rates apply to private party, non-commercial, non-contractual advertisers of vehicles for sale. All other classifications such as pets, real estate, etc. are excluded. The ad must run a minimum of 10 days.

Realtor gives advice on marketing home

According to Anita Noles of Don Harvey, Realtors and past president of the Midland Board of Realtors, many prospective home sellers don't know what they should look for in a Realtor or what they can do to help with the marketing effort.

Ms. Noles said, "To help the sellers be better prepared to select the right Realtor and be better able to assist the Realtor in the market effort, they should consider the following when selecting a Realtor.

Tract Record: Usually the best indicator of future performance is a proven tract record. Some things the seller might determine are:

- How long have they been in business?
- What is their reputation in the community?
- How many successful transactions do they complete each year?

Market exposure: Can they provide comprehensive effective exposure for their property. Some indicators are:

- How many full time agents do they have available to be actively engaged in selling your home?
- How many yard signs do they have throughout the community. This is an indication of how active they are in listing and selling homes. In addition, most of the prospect calls a Realtor receives come from their yard signs. Therefore, the more yard signs they have, the greater their chances of finding the right buyer for your home.
- Do they also use the other creative forms of advertising to generate prospects.
- Are they a member of one or more major national referral networks that would send them prospective buyers?
- Do their agents have the needed knowledge, experience and training. Do they have an ongoing training program to keep them informed of changes in the market and industry as a whole?

Service orientation: Make sure you select a Realtor that is truly committed to conscientious service as exemplified by such things as:

Anita Noles

- Will they stay in touch with you on a regular basis?
- Will they keep you always informed of your marketing progress and share the feedback they've gathered?
- Will they be constantly working to generate excitement and activity about your home in the real estate community as well?
- Will they be easily accessible at all times to answer questions and help you solve problems?
- Do they clearly understand the Principal/Agent responsibilities: i.e. the person paying the fee, usually the seller, is the client even if they are also working with the buyer?

There are certain things a homeowner can do when the Realtor comes to list your home, try to have the information and documents readily available that will enable them to list your home accurately and market it effectively. An example of some things to have ready are:

- Deed
- Mortgage information
- Homeowner insurance
- Title insurance policy
- Copy of your survey
- Association of neighborhood fees you pay
- Record of your utility costs
- Information about your school district
- When your home is being shown, there are a few things a homeowner can do to help insure a more effective showing. They are:
- Have all the lights on when they arrive.
- Open curtains and blinds to make the house brighter.
- Open closet doors and other doors that might conceal important areas.
- Keep the room temperature comfortable.
- Turn off the T.V.
- Have soft music in the background.
- Have pets well out of the way.
- Try to be gone yourself if possible. If you must remain, try to stay as much in the background as possible.
- Make sure the house is filled with pleasant odors.
- Do not try and sell personal property to prospects. Let them decide to buy your home fists and then you can talk to them about personal property.

In summary, to successfully market your home, first be sure you've selected the right Realtor with the information and tools they need to approach the job with accuracy and effectiveness. Stay in touch with your Realtor and be prepared to participate in and approve necessary decisions about marketing changes as they are needed. Always have your home preened and ready to make its best impression. Then, when your Realtor brings prospects, stay in the background and let the Realtor do what they're supposed to do - sell your home.

Cooper advises homeowners about taxes

According to a recent home buying survey, the two major reasons for home ownership are tax and investment purposes. And when a home serving as a principle residence is purchased or refinanced, there are a number of consum er costs and tax questions that follow.According to Brian Cooper of First Realty of Midland Better Homes and Garden, the tax treatment and deductability of these costs is not always clear.

Cooper

Points - a lender specified percent service charge based on the amount of the mortgage, sometimes called prepaid interest, are often one of the most misunderstood items a taxpaying homeowner faces.

"Deductibility of points depends on how they are paid at closing," said Cooper. "If a home buyer pays for the points from his or her own funds, then they are deductible as interest in the year paid. However, if the lender simply withholds the points payment from the loan proceeds, they are treated as a loan discount and must be deducted ratably (amortized) over the loan's term. So to ensure the deductibility of points from taxes, they should always be paid directly out of the taxpayer's own funds at the time of closing."

Non-deductible services fees are those such as document preparation, notary service and appraisal fees.

Currently, if a taxpayer is simply refinancing an existing mortgage, there is no deduction for points. Points in these circumstances can, however, be capatalized and deducted ratably over the life of the loan. This portion of the law is currently under examination by Congress.

If the taxpayer refinances for more than the existing mortgage and uses the extra money to make improvements, the points allocated to the improvements are currently deductible.

Most homeowners are aware of the value of the home mortgage interest deduction that was retained by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. And now that the deduction for interest on personel loans is being systematically reduced, homeowners even have an advantage when it comes to borrowing money for consumer purchases and deducting the interest, because the law still generally allows, through ceiling restrictions do apply in some cases, deduction of interest on loans secured by a qualified residence.

"If a homeowner refinances a first mortgage, takes out a second, or obtains a line of credit secured by equity in an eligible property, he or she can claim interest deductions," said Cooper. "The interest is deductible on loans obtained for any purpose up to an amount equal to the original purchase price of the property plus the cost of improvements. Beyond that level, interest is deductible only on borrowing for educational or medical expenses. The total debt, however, may not exceed the fair market value of the home at the time the last debt was incurred."

In addition, if a home qualifies as a second home, mortgage interest is fully deductible on loans up to the cost of the home plus improvements to the home.

More information on how taxes affect the homeowner may be obtained by calling First Realty of Midland Better Homes & Gardens at 689-7700.

Brian Cooper is co-owner of First Realty of Midland Better Homes & Gardens.

Toothpaste, credit cards are furniture restoring tools

By The Associated Press

Toothpaste and credit cards are among the "tools" a furniture restorer says can use to clean up water spots, cigarette burns or gashes on wood finishes.

Toothpaste, says Homer Formby, is a gentle abrasive and can be used to remove water spots and rings on wood furniture. Just squeeze toothpaste on to a wet cotton rag and buff the spotted area, he says. For stubborn rings, combine the toothpaste with equal parts of baking soda.

For cigarette burns, dip a cotton swab into nail polish remover and rub it lightly across the burned area. If any discoloration remains, scrape it gently with a pen knife. If a slight hollow is left, mix equal parts nail polish remover with clear nail polish and apply the mixture with the nail polish brush. Allow each coat to dry for several minutes until the hollow is filled; it may take seven or eight coats.

For scratches, melt a crayon the color of your wood finish and let the colored wax drip into the gash until it overflows, says Formby. Let the melted crayon dry 30 minutes and use a credit card to gently shave off the residue.

Here's the scenario: It's the holiday season and it's the first time the entire family has been together in awhile. So, for a family outing, everyone agrees to go see a movie. So far, things are simple enough.

After looking over the selection of holiday releases being shown at the local theaters, everyone agrees on one which seems appropriate for the whole family, from grandpa to the gradeschool age children. The film is rated PG-13 and the adults hope that this means there will be only a minimal amount of sex, nudity and profanity.

EVERYONE SETTLES into their seats and the movie begins. There are a few laughs, a few touching moments, than bingo — the screen fills up with a bigger-than-life sex scene so physically and vocally graphic that mom and dad don't know whether to cover their child's eyes or ears, or both.

It happens to all of us — we get surprised by something unexpected at the movies. One time you see a film that for no discernable reason is rated R, and another time you see a PG-13 rated film and wonder just how it slipped by without an R-rating. Parents are left defenseless against a confusing system in which labels encompass a wide range of moral questions.

Just how much sex, nudity, drug use or violence is permitted in each rating range is a viable question for which there is no definite answer.

Parents want some direction, but, unfortunately, the Classification and Rating Administration (CRA), which rates films with the PG, PG-13, R and X ratings symbols, are only intended to be an opinion rating. The CRA employs nine persons in Los Angeles who watch films and think about them in terms of how films will affect children under the age of 17. The nine CRA members (each must be a parent) come from all walks of life — except the entertainment industry. They discuss each film they view and vote on its ratings.

THERE ARE NO working guidelines for the CARA, it operates on collective judgement. However, there are some unofficial guidelines according to Motion Picture Association of America (MPAA) President Jack Valenti.

In a recent interview released by the Associated Press, Valenti said one sexual word (used in its literal sense, rather than an expletive) results in an an automatic R. However, in the case of "Planes, Trains and Automobiles," the aforementioned word used repeatedly as an expletive earned the film an R. So, there are discrepancies.

According to Valenti the chief guideline given board members is: "If you had to meet with the parents of Wichita Falls tomorrow, do you believe they would find what you want to rate this picture to be fair and reasonable?"

Valenti says the ratings are a mirror of society's values and that the board's nine members are "neither gods nor fools. They're just people who like movies, and they're parents and they're intelligent."

THE MPAA, which represents the interest of movie producers, and the National Association of Theater Owners (NATO) submit their films to the CRA for classification. NATO also agrees to display the ratings in advertisements for the films and restrict admission to films rated R or X to those who are over age 17. Submitting films to the CRA is completely voluntary. Films can be distributed — and sometimes are — with no rating at all. A film maker also can appeal the rating board's decision. The appeal board can change the rating to anything it votes to make it — and the appeals board is made up entirely of movie industry people: half from the MPAA, half from NATO.

Although an X rating is considered the kiss of death to filmmakers, R and PG-13 films seem to be demanded by the public. And even though some film critics insist that there is a new film puritanism sweeping Hollywood, R rated films are becoming more explicit. Some films (such as "D.O.A" which shows Meg Ryan and Dennis Quaid kissing, then the camera cuts to a shot of an electric fan and leaves the rest to the viewers imagination) are becoming positively chaste. Other films, such as "Fatal Attraction," "No Way Out" and "The Presidio," are unforgettable because of their daring, sexual, eye-popping romps.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

While home from their respective universities for the Thanksgiving holidays, the Minuet Club debutantes have been honored at a series of parties.

This year's debs are Cristina Beal, Amy Black, Caroline Bolger, Kelly Dodson, Shannon Fergeson, Kathy Kleine, Edie McGuire, Shelley Morrow, Leslie Satterwhite, Debi Sport, Beth Ann Williams, Lissa Wilson and Sherwood Wagner.

Honoring Kathy and Sherwood and to welcome all the debs home, Joanie and Bobby Holt hosted a hamburger party Wednesday evening at their home.

Friday's festivities began with a luncheon honoring Debi and given by her grandmother, Elva (Mrs. H.W.) Stoltenberg, at Midland Country Club. A cocktail buffet that evening was given for Beth Ann by her grandmother, Elsie Lee Mackey; Marg. Samples and Carol and Peter Crain at the Samples home.

Activities began on Saturday with a luncheon for Shelley at Midland Country Club. The hostesses were Bodgy Essex, Dorothy (Mrs. Charles) Ervin, Elma Jean (Mrs. Richard) Henderson, Fern (Mrs. F.H.) McGuigan and Billie Ruppe.

All the debs were honored with a tea Saturday afternoon at the home of Mable Henderson. The co-hostesses were Gertrude Alstrin, Mabel Shaw, former Midlander Sandra (Mrs. Ed) Voorhees of Bakersfield, Calif., and her daughters, Valerie and Shawna.

The day concluded with a dinner-dance at Midland Country Club given by Lissa and Cy Wagner to honor their daughter, Sherwood.

The party whirl will continue for the debs at Christmastime, highlighted by the Presentation Ball on Dec. 28 at the Petroleum Club.

TO CELEBRATE the mid-December opening of a new Midland restaurant, Chez Nous, (French for "Our Place") and to introduce their new business associates, Patricia Wettstein and her daughter, Laura, hosted an elegant champagne buffet at their home recently.

Coming out from Dallas for the occasion were Fred Galini, owner-operator of the French bistro and piano bar; his brother, John Galini, who will be the manager; pianist-vocalist Tony Shepherd, who entertained the partygoers, and the chefs, who provided the buffet, including escargot and shrimp scampi, which were cooked in front of the guests.

In addition to a champagne fountain, guests had their choice of wines and mixed drinks.

Among those enjoying the evening were Penny (Mrs. Ernest) Angelo, Virginia and Arthur McGonegal, Charlotte and Ralph Williamson, Ceci and Todd Westmoreland, Lynn Mashburn, Graham Mackey, Marcia and John Ingram, Naomi and Henry Tillett, Tanya and Charles Godfrey and Roberta Fraser.

MARTY (MRS. JIM) CONINE entertained members of the Midland Country Club Ladies Association and their guests with a Broadway musical review at the group's November luncheon.

Accompanied by Alice Moxey and former Midlander Shirley Hansen of Atlanta, Ga., Marty reviewed the delightful "Woman of the Year," which opened on Broadway in 1981 with Lauren BAcall in the starring role. Marty is well-known to Midland Community Theatre audiences and numerous other groups, for which she has performed.

Preceding the association's last meeting of the year, the women lunched on Turkey Mornay and pumpkin pie. Colorful fall floral arrangements were awarded to those with birthdays closest to Thanksgiving Day.

Hostesses for the social hour were Norma Jean (Mrs. Bud) Boles, Bonnie (Mrs. Orman) Hubbard and Babs (Mrs. Richard) Sevier.

Among those spotted in the crowd were Carolyn Roden, Elizabeth Locker, Gloria (Mrs. William L.) McGavran, Angie (Mrs. Carroll) Grafa, Violette (Mrs. Bill) Blanks, Okemah Weaver and Tressye Burrell.

FREELANCE FLORAL DESIGNER Jackie Thaggard-Witte of Dallas presented an entertaining and informative program, "Christmas Decorating Made Easier," when the Green Tree Country Club Ladies' Association held its November meeting.

"It's difficult to say what the one new look for Christmas is," Jackie stated, "because we all have different styles and colors in our homes." She then proceeded to demonstrate three different themes: the traditional, with reds and greens; and English Garden look, with pastels and chintz, and a Southwestern style, featuring folk art and wreaths fashioned with dried foliage in a copper look.

While lunching on Shrimp Creole and bread pudding with vanilla sauce, the audience enjoyed informal modeling, with the clothing from Expressions and the jewelry by Cherry's Accessories. The tables were decorated with Christmas wreaths, which were later awarded as prizes.

A few of those attending were Julie (Mrs. Pat) Brower, Roseilen (Mrs. Horace) Busby, Jan (Mrs. Arnold) Brown, Mary (Mrs. Tom) Mann, Gina (Mrs. Ray) McKim, Gayla (Mrs. Walt) Taylor and Jan (Mrs. Jess) Moore.

Film world fascinated with Christmas

Yuletide season features time-worn tales in movies

Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD — The film world has long been fascinated with the yuletide season.

Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol," the time-worn tale of Scrooge and Tiny Tim, may well be the most recurrent of the Christmas movies. It appeared in several versions during the silent era, then MGM made a 1938 "A Christmas Carol" with Reginald Owen as Scrooge.

In 1951, the English did their own version with Alistair Sims as the legendary penny-pincher (the British had done an undistinguished "Scrooge" in 1935).

Albert Finney was unrecognizable in the title role of the 1970 "Scrooge," and a recent version starring George C. Scott has become a television perennial.

A couple of years ago, the Walt Disney company enlisted all of its cartoon stars for a featurette "Mickey's Christmas Carol."

The song "White Christmas," sung by Bing Crosby in the 1942 film, "Holiday Inn," became Irving Berlin's greatest hit and resulted in the 1954 movie, "White Christmas."

Frank Capra's unabashed sentiment often resulted in Christmas scenes, notably in "Meet John Doe" and "It's a Wonderful Life." The latter shows up regularly on holiday television.

Oddly, most films with "Christmas" in the title have fared poorly at the box office.

"The Christmas Tree," starring William Holden and Virna Lisi, was a 1969 bomb.

In 1944, Universal cast its biggest star, Deanna Durbin, in a grim melodrama with Gene Kelly, "Christmas Holiday." Audiences voted overwhelmingly for Deanna to return to musicals.

Other misfires: "Christmas Eve," three wayward sons (George Raft, Randolph Scott, George Brent) return to their mother (Ann Harding) for the holiday (1944); "Christmas in July," a tame satire of the advertising industry by Preston Sturges (1940); "Christmas in July," a soap opera with Barbara Stanwyck and Dennis Morgan (1945).

Disney had little luck with "One Magic Christmas," a Capra-esque fantasy starring Mary Steenburgen and Harry Dean Stanton.

The producers of "Superman" thought they would have another box-office bonanza with a big-budget "Santa Claus: The Movie," starring David Huddleston in the title role and Dudley Moore as chief elf. They thought wrong. The film was the turkey of 1985.

The most successful film about Christmas has been George Seaton's "Miracle on 34th Street," starring Edmund Gwenn as a department store Santa Claus who claims to be the real thing.

The film, which also starred Maureen O'Hara, John Payne and a young Natalie Wood, has become a television perennial and has now been colorized — much to the distress of purists.

Some other films featuring Christmas: "The Holly and the Ivy" (1952), "The Inn of the Sixth Happiness" (1958), "The Bells of St. Mary's" (1945), "The Man Who Came to Dinner" (1941), "Young at Heart" (1954), "The Apartment" (1960), "The Glenn Miller Story" (1954), Not to mention "Santa Claus Conquers the Martians" (1960).

Movie violence, sex reported

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO
Lifestyle Writer

According to recent issues of "Premiere" magazine, the following statistics pertaining to horror and violence in the movies apply:

- There were 36 horror movies made in the United States in 1977; the number produced in 1987 was 105.
- The number of people killed by the Blob in the 1958 film "The Blob" was 118; the number killed in the current remake was 163.
- The first nude male back seen on screen (excluding Tarzan) was Marlon Brando's in "A Streetcar Named Desire."
- The youngest actress to do a nude scene was Brooke Shields (age 12) in the 1978 "Pretty Baby."
- The longest onscreen kiss almost went to (believe or not) Pee Wee Herman and Valeria Galina (3-plus minutes), but it was edited to 45 seconds in the final version of "Big Top Pee Wee." So the winners are Regis Toomey and Jane Wyman for their 3-minute, 5-second kiss in the 1941 "You're in the Army Now."
- The most kisses in one movie goes to the 1926 "Don Juan." The star of the film, John Barrymore, managed to kiss women 127 times.

Scenes that were clipped by the Hays Office include:

- A whole slew of scenes featuring Jane Russell in the 1943 "The Outlaw." Scenes left on the cutting room floor include Ms. Russell leaning over the bed, leaning over the fire, leaning over to pick up a stone, and a scene where her clothed breasts were reflected in a mirror. One enraged member of the Hays Office said, "Yesterday we had the exhibition of breast shots ... which outdoes anything we have ever seen..."
- Percentage of movies rated G by the Motion Picture Association of America in 1969: 32, 1988: 2
- Percentage of movies rated PG by the MPAA in 1969: 39, 1988: 21
- Percentage of movies rated R in 1969: 23, 1988: 58
- Percentage of movies rated X in 1969: 6, 1988: 0
- Total number of movies rated X by the MPPA in the last ten years: 183 out of 3,524 rated.
- Total number of movies rated X by the MPPA in the last five years: 9 out of 1,542 rated.

Christmas 'spirit' abounds onscreen in ghostly forms

MYRA LEE SALCEDO
Lifestyle Writer

Christmas is a time of togetherness, shopping and visits to Santa. It also is a time when a whole slew of blockbuster films are released.

The onslaught of holiday box office pleasers began with the releases of "Oliver and Company," "The Land Before Time," "Ernest Saves Christmas" and "Scrooged."

With films such as "Oliver and Company" and "The Land Before Time," movie companies are hoping to lure holiday trade — particularly children dragging mom and dad along — with cute canines and cuddly baby dinosaurs in animated forms.

Another popular Chirstmas favorite — yet another version of it anyway — is the release of "Scrooged," a remake of the seasonal favorite by Charles Dickens, "A Christmas Carol." In this version, Bill Murray romps with literal onscreen "spirits." For more "spirited" adventures, the romantic comedy "High Spirits" stars Daryl Hannah as a 200-year-old ghost who falls in love with Steve Guttenberg. "Cocoon 2: The Return" and the soon to be released "My Stepmother is an Alien" also feature otherworldly visitors.

Industry sources estimate that the holiday season will bring $300 million dollars worth of films since the most expensive films are released at the end of the year. But there are still more holiday releases to come. Other movies scheduled to be released nationally by Christmas include:

■ THE ACCIDENTAL TOURIST. STARS: William Hurt, Kathleen Turner and Geena Davis. PLOT: With the help of an eccentric dog trainer (Davis), a travel writer who hates to leave home (Hurt) recovers from the death of his son and the loss of his wife (Ms. Turner).

■ BEACHES. STARS: Bette Midler and Barbara Hershey. Directed by Garry Marshall. PLOT: Two girls who meet at a young age form a lifelong friendship.

■ MY STEPMOTHER IS AN ALIEN. STARS: Kim Basinger, Dan Aykroyd and Jon Lovitz. Directed by Richard Benjamin. PLOT: When a scientist (Akyroyd) searchs for extraterrestrial intelligent life, he sends a radar signal into outer space and blows up his lab. Then at a singles party thrown by his swinging brother (Lovitz), the scientist falls for the mysterious Celeste (Ms. Basinger), who desperately wants him to repeat the experiment.

■ MISSISSIPPI BURNING. STARS: Gene Hackman, Willem Dafoe, Frances McDorman. Directed by Alan Parker. PLOT: Two FBI agents (Hackman and Dafoe) search Mississippi for three missing civil-rights workers. The film is loosely based on a true story.

■ OLD GRINGO. STARS: Jane Fonda, Gregory Peck and Jimmy Smits. Directed by Luis Puenzo. PLOT: In the early 1900s, a repressed American (Ms. Fonda) goes to Mexico to teach. Once there, she meets an American expatriate journalist (Peck) and a passionate, dangerous revolutionary (Smits).

■ RAINMAN. STARS: Tom Cruise and Dustin Hoffman. Directed by Barry Levinson. PLOT: During a colorful cross-country trip, Charlie Babbitt (Cruise) attempts to trick his idiot-savant brother, Raymond (Hoffman), out of the $3 million he inherits from their dead father.

■ THE NAKED GUN. STARS: Leslie Nielsen, Priscilla Presley, Ricardo Montalban, O.J. Simpson and the late Houseman. A slapstick comedy directed by David Zucker. PLOT: A Los Angeles businessman (Montalban) is hired by terroists to assassinate the Queen of England when she visits Southern California.

■ TEQUILA SUNRISE. STARS: Mel Gibson, Michelle Pfeiffer and Kurt Russell. Directed by Robert Towne. PLOT: Two friends from high school — a retired drug dealer (Gibson) and a cop (Russell) — clash when the cop is assigned to put the former dealer behind bars. Caught in the middle is the woman (Ms. Pfeiffer) who loves them both.

■ TORCH SONG TRILOGY. STARS: Harvey Fierstein, Anne Bancroft and Matthew Broderick. Directed by Paul Bogart. PLOT: A love-starved drag queen (Fierstein) finds a mate and adopts a son. When the mate is murdered, he raises his son alone.

■ TWINS. STARS: Arnold Schwarzenegger and Danny De Vito. Directed by Ivan Reitman. PLOT: Julius (Schwarzenegger) and Vincent (De Vito) are scientifically created twins who were separated at birth. Julius, who grew up on a deserted South Seas island, arrives in the U.S. to search for his brother, and then the twins team up to find their mother.

■ UNFORGETTABLE. STARS: Cybill Shepherd, Robert Downey Jr., Mary Stuart Masterson and Ryan O'Neal. PLOT: Corine Jeffries (Ms. Shepherd) is obsessed with the memory of her late husband, until she meet her daughter's boyfriend (Downey), who is really her husband experiencing another life.

■ WHO'S HARRY CRUMB? STARS: John Candy, Jeffrey Jones, Annie Potts and Tim Thomerson. Directed by Paul Flaherty. PLOT: When a wealthy young woman (Ms. Potts) is kidnapped, bumbling detective Harry Crumb (Candy) is put on the case.

■ WORKING GIRL. STARS: Melanie Griffith, Harrison Ford and Sigourney Weaver. Directed by Mike Nichols. PLOT: Tess McGill (Ms. Griffith) is a smart, hardworking secretary in a New York brokerage firm. Katherine Parker (Ms. Weaver) is her idea-stealing boss. Jack Trainer (Ford) is the love interest. Tess tries to climb the corporate ladder (a la "The Secret of My Success") by pretending to be an executive in her spare time.

RATINGS

Hollywood seems to be sending a dual message. One extreme, which formed as a result of the AIDS consciousness, has characters abstaining from sex or in the case of "Cross My Heart," Annette O'Toole suggesting she and Martin Short be tested for AIDS and come back and date after their test results are in. The other extreme has Ms. Ryan suggesting she and Mark Harmon, whom she has jsut met, forget the introductions and "cut to the chase" in "The Presidio."

Despite its explicit — and adulterous — sex scenes, film makers say that "Fatal Attracation," which emphasizes the dangers of promiscuity, has set the agenda for films of the late 80s. Although "Fatal Attraction" emphasizes the importance of monogamy, it glorifies sex in the process.

Despite the popularity of "Fatal Attraction" at the box office, many films aren't imitating the blatant sex scenes. For instance, Frances Ford Coppola's "Tucker: The Man and His Dream" was a quality adult film with no sex scenes. Likewise there were unconsummated romantic relationships in "Broadcast News" and "Punchline."

SOME SCREENWRITERS have suggested that "less is more" in the late 80s, and that films made in the early 80s would be less suggestive if made today. According to screenwriter Lea Thompson, the risque Tom Cruise vehicle "Risky Business" would not be made today. In a recent issue of Premiere magazine the screenwriter referred to Cruise's dalliances with prostitutes in "Risky Business," saying, "Everybody's got to be thinking, 'Are all these kids going to get diseases from these women?' Besides, the hero is too unrepentant."

Even James Bond was down to two women in his last film versus the usual multitudes of women who parade through his bedroom.

In this era of safesex, filmmakers are having to carefully consider all adult situations. For scripts that call for spontaneous (read: irresponsible) sex scenes, screenwriters are playing it safe by setting the films in the pre-AIDS past. According to Ms. Thompson, if the film is set in the present and there is promiscuous sex, the characters either have to die or otherwise be punished.

Of course some films go too far. Movies of the horror genre are infamous for punishing characters — especially teenagers — who indulge in sex with grim consequences including mutulation and death.

Some producers think people want to see sexual fantasies on the screen that they're afraid to undertake in real life, which may explain why R films usually fare best at the box office. Last year, 294 of the 483 films rated by the CRA were rated R, 102 were rated PG, 73 were PG-13, 11 were G and only three earned an X rating.

A statement by a small anonymous film company which specializes in R-rated films was quoted in a recent issue of "Premiere" as stating that the R-rating quota requires "two-to-three scenes that have dance strippers in the background and one or two nude scenes with the lead." A spokesperson for the company also said that R-rated movies also are favored by actors and actresses since fees "go up as the clothes come off."

ASIDE FROM being concerned about sex scenes, parents also may be concerned about graphic violence. While onscreen sex is becoming more subdued in some films, violence is becoming more explicit. Gone are the days when the camera would cut from a raised hand holding a knife to a shower drain ("Psycho") or a raised hand holding a garden trowel to a swinging light bulb ("Night of the Living Dead"). Instead of implying violence, filmmakers insist on closing in on the grue, leaving nothing to the imagination.

Ratings for films with violent content seem even more questionable than ratings for films with sexual content. For example, "Killer Klowns," a horror film which shows a man beheaded, has a PG-13 rating, which means parental guidance is strongly suggested for children under 13. Other adventure films, made for younger audiences, also manage to get pretty grim. Consider the face melting scene in "Raiders of the Lost Ark" or the heart being ripped from the man's chest in the PG-rated "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom." A PG rating is pretty tame for a film with a heart being ripped from a chest.

BEAR IN MIND that ratings are merely an opinion handed down by nine parents. Considering the enormous amount of artistic (and not-so-artistic) human expression these parents have to pigeonhole into a few classifications, they do fairly well. Although better, more specific classifications could be used, members of the film industry fear too much censorship would be damaging to artistic works. So, when you take the entire family out to the movies, consider the ratings, but also consider how much they encompass.

If you are a parent who feels that the ratings system has let you down, complaining to the movie manager may make you feel better. Unfortunately he is helpless to do anything about ratings. But if your really want to make your opinion known, write to the appropriate people:

■ DISAGREE WITH A MOVIE RATING? If you think a film was given an inappropriate rating, write to the chairman of the Classifiction and Rating Administration, who also is a voting member of the ratings board: Richard Heffner, Classification and Rating Administration, 1133 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y., 10036.

■ DISAGREE WITH POLICY? If you think there needs to be another classification, something between PG-13 and PG, for example, or you think advertisements should offer more explanation of why a rating was applied, or you think a movie poster was misleading, write the president of the MPAA: Jack Valenti, Motion Picture Association of America, 1600 Eye St. N.W., Washington, D.C., 20006.

Ratings are defined as:

■ — GENERAL AUDIENCES. All ages admitted.

■ PG — PARENTAL GUIDANCE SUGGESTED. Some material may not be suitable for children.

■ PG-13 — SPECIAL PARENTAL GUIDANCE STRONGLY SUGGESTED FOR CHILDREN UNDER 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.

■ R — RESTRICTED. Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

Space travellers Art (Don Ameche) and Joe (Hume Cronyn) return to Earth and head for the beach in "Cocoon: The Return."

Study: Women as mothers, wives

Hearst News Service

SEATTLE — Female equality has not been achieved, according to a new theory, because of male domination of the marriage relationship.

The focus on women-as-wives, rather than women-as-mothers, is what's novel about Miriam Johnson's new book, "Strong Mothers, Weak Wives," published by the University of California Press.

It's a book that seems bound to stir controversy, although it won't be the kind of storm generated by Shere Hite's "Women and Love," which found that 84 percent of women queried were "not satisfied emotionally" with marriage or romantic involvements.

Johnson, a University of Oregon sociologist, has conducted a more reflective and more scholarly "search for gender equality." Nevertheless, in slang terms, the book is going to rattle cages. Here are some points she makes: — Mothers vs. wives: "Women as mothers have always had a strong image. Think of the Virgin Mary and of fertility goddesses. But women as wives are not powerful. What is it to be a good wife? A good wife is someone who doesn't upstage her husband."

- Fathers: "If a boy is too attached to his mother, we think of him as deeply ill. But we think that the father-daughter relationship is 'cute.' It's all right for girls to attach themselves to their fathers. It's not that difficult for daddy's girl to transfer that subordinate relationship to her husband."
- Rape: "Rape law isn't so much designed to prevent rape as to establish the rules by which the practice of rape is organized and legitimated. If any woman did not put up a terrific struggle, then a sexual attack on her was not rape because she must have led him on."
- Marital roles: "Men have never defined themselves as husbands as totally as women have defined themselves as wives. The larger truth is that even though marriage may constrain men a bit, it empowers them a lot. Everybody needs a wife, but it is men who get them."
- Love: "For a loving, egalitarian relationship to work, it would need to be patterned more like women's relationships to women than 'normal' heterosexual relationships. What most women seek is not power but the absence of domination."

Johnson disagrees that everything would be solved if men would share child-rearing. It's better for working women to have reliable, professional child care, she says.

Married to another University of Oregon professor, Benton Johnson, for more than 30 years, Miriam Johnson joined the university's sociology department in the 1950s. She quit in 1963 to be a wife and mother, but returned in 1973.

Liechtenstein tiny European country

VADUZ, Liechtenstein (AP) — Located on the west bank of the Rhine River between Austria and Switzerland, the Principality of Liechtenstein covers 61 square miles, less than the area of Washington, D.C.

It contains two Alpine peaks higher than 8,400 feet.

Founded in 1719, Liechtenstein became independent in 1866. Two years later its army was abolished and the little country has stayed neutral and undamaged in all subsequent European wars. Women were granted the right to vote here in 1984.

Lifestyle policies

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle sections of The Midland Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographes will be published only for winners, not runner-ups. These announcements are published Tuesdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Friday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted. The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Prime Time...

A focus on the Permian Basin's mature citizens will be published every Saturday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Prime Time will provide a calendar of events, as well as special features geared towards our older, active community.

Candlesticks retain a warm, preeminent place in home

Associated Press

Like dancing shadows, or like Christmas itself, candlesticks, whether in shimmering crystal or homey wood, flamboyantly decorative or bare-bones functional, come rife with possibility.

According to Country Home magazine, their original purpose was utilitarian: to serve as a safeguard from candle burns, drips and fires. "The first thing a housekeeper should teach a new servant is to carry her candle upright," wrote an 18th century woman.

With the prehistoric torch as its forebear, the candle was introduced in Roman times. The invention of the candlestick, rudimentary and functional only, soon followed. These first candlesticks probably were no more than hollowed-out wood or stone, unembellished, or some sort of crude pricket. The earliest candlesticks of interest date from the 11th and 12th centuries. Used for ecclesiastical purposes, they featured the best bronze and brass craftsmanship of the day.

Quickly, candlesticks were imbued with a certain elitism as both holy and royal accoutrements. In 1250, Henry III presented Westminster Abbey with a pair of silver candlesticks. Two centuries later, Henry IV owned a gold pair inset with sapphires, rubies, emeralds and pearls.

But by the 14th century, candlesand candlesticks had entered the mainstream. No longer exclusively sacrosanct and opulent, candlesticks gained a new diversity.

Today, they are found in nearly every material: brass, silver, pewter, porcelain, Lucite, iron, tin. They feature the craftsmanship of glassblower, woodturner and potter as well as the factory stamp of domestic and foreign manufacturer. And not only is there the candlestick, but the candelabra and candle holder, too.

Their raison d'etre has changed over the centuries, but candlesticks retain a preeminent place in the home, as vehicles for that special kind of warmth no lamplight can purvey. Holidays and children's dreams simply would not be the same without them.

Mayan ruins at Tulum fascinating

Copley News Service

It isn't Mexico's oldest archaeological site, nor is it the largest. But certainly it qualifies as one of the country's most dramatically and beautifully situated.

Tulum is perched on a cliff overlooking the turquoise Caribbean Sea, about 70 miles south of Cancun and 25 miles east of Coba, another fascinating but lesser known archaeological site.

Tulum, a product of the Post Classic period after the apex of Mayan civilization, may date from 700 to 1,000 A.D. European sailors apparently were familiar with the area in the 1500s, according to historical accounts, although it was not until the 1800s that exploration there began. Three private expeditions were conducted, and from 1916 to 1922 the Carnegie Institute began to study the area. Since then, the Mexican government with its National Institute of Anthropology and History has maintained the site and continues to study the remains.

Tulum means wall, named for the huge U-shape rock wall which encloses the ruins and fronts on the sea. The 19-foot-thick wall varies in height from 4 feet to 17 feet and has five entrances. The wall is nearly 400 yards at the base with two 170-yard side sections. Inside are the ruins of various complexes of buildings including what are called castles, temples, palaces and funerary platforms.

Romance writers trade tips about sex, profits

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
New York Times News Service

ATLANTA — Sandra Chastain leaned forward and listened intently as the three women surrounding her, the last customers in the darkened Atlanta restaurant, launched into hard-hitting criticism.

Her land couldn't have been in the family for 100 years, they said.

And calling a 4-year-old horse a colt is silly, they said. Incorrectly, as it turned out.

And how could someone named Consuela be Irish?

But when they finished their sharp critique, Chastain was happy. She had a list of suggested improvements for her latest novel.

"No, it doesn't matter if you think you know what I mean. If (one person) doesn't understand, then something's not clear," she said, jotting notes on her manuscript. "But they've been really nice to me tonight; you should have heard them tear into last week's chapter."

Her new novel, a historical romance set in Australia, has yet to be seen by an editor or publisher, but when it reaches one, much of the editing already will have been done, chapter by chapter, by this group of friends, a critique group of the Georgia Romance Writers.

THE 96-MEMBER Atlanta branch of the Romance Writers of America serves as a support group for aspiring fiction writers.

The group, a writers trade association, helps with education, contacts and support. The biweekly sessions, where fellow writers read and edit material before it goes to an agent or editor, are one of the group's most valuable tools, said club president Pat Potter.

"We can then rewrite the sections before we send them off," she said. "We really look at major problems with character consistency — is the scene complete, is the plot plausible, does it flow naturally? We're so close to our own stories, we know what we mean, but we may not make it clear.

"I wrote in the closet for a long time, and I wouldn't have gotten published if it wasn't for the club," said Potter, fingering a Maggie Award silver rose pendant that she always wears, a symbol of what she calls romance writing's Pulitzer Prize. "You've got to be a careful writer, especially if you're new."

THE WRITERS meticulously research each book. Although they say historical novels are harder to write, even contemporary settings take knowledge.

"The general public doesn't really know how much work goes into this. You don't write about anything you don't know or can't find out about," Chastain said. "I had a fisherman call me from the Gulf (of Mexico) to tell me everything I wanted to know about mackerel for a story. What better place to find out?"

"Our readers are very knowledgeable, and they know which authors do their homework. They're reading a fantasy because they need to escape to a fantasy, but they're not dumb," Norcross author Anne Busyhead said. "They want good writing, and they want it without factual mistakes."

Her rule of thumb in dealing with real events is to stay as close to reality as possible.

The critique groups help authors find out if they have strayed too far in their historical references. Trading their historical knowledge and references saves time researching in libraries or the embarrassment of getting wrong information published.

"Putting out something wrong can ruin you in this business," Chastain said. "Anne here has a book on what everybody wore for two centuries — did you know men have worn socks at least since the Viking days?"

In addition to the critique groups, Georgia Romance Writers offers workshops to help writers improve their product and market it to Harlequin and other publishers. The struggle to become published is frustrating, they say, often taking years of rejections.

"I'm the only overnight sensation that took nine years to get there you'll ever meet," Chastain said.

ATLANTA AUTHOR Deborah Smith said without Georgia Romance Writers, she would have quit writing before November 1986, when she sold the first of her 16 books to Bantam.

"I'm on a good streak now, but if I hadn't had the other writers to offer sympathy and encouragement to me, I would have quit years ago," she said.

Smith, who joined the club five years ago, would work each day and write for five hours each night "and then have to face rejection. If I didn't have workshops to attend to help me learn how to handle agents, plus writers to tell me not to dare quit, I wouldn't have sold my first book."

Though the club is a professional trade organization, it offers vital information to amateur writers, national president Marianne Shock said.

"We report breaking market news, show published authors how to enhance their careers, put aspiring authors with agents and editors, and provide valuable survey information, like a mock royalty statement, that lets members know which publishers do what," she said.

The Atlanta chapter of the Romance Writers of America, founded in 1981, was one of the first. Although such clubs had been active in England and Canada, they didn't spread to the United States until Western romance writers in Texas began the club in 1981.

Tom Hanks a potential best actor nominee

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Oscar campaigns begin earlier every year, and already the guns of autumn are firing for such potential nominees as Tom Hanks, Jodie Foster, Sigourney Weaver and Don Ameche.

The studios and publicity offices are readying trade paper ads to offer films and performances "for your consideration." The ads will feature reviewers' comments that a certain actor's work is deserving of Academy Award recognition. The champ in that department is Tom Hanks.

The affable Hanks has been the subject of the biggest publicity blitz since last year's blast for Cher, who ended up with the best-actress Oscar for "Moonstruck."

First with "Big" and then with "Punchline," Hanks has been the recipient of glowing reviews, many of which mentioned his Oscar chances.

A HANKS NOMINATION seems certain, but for which movie? If Academy voters judge by financial success, they might choose his role in "Big" as the youngster who is transformed overnight into a 30-year-old. But they might consider his troubled comic in "Punchline" more of a challenge.

Some observers believe Weaver is overdue for an Oscar, and she is likely to be nominated for her role as the obsessed naturalist Dian Fossey in "Gorillas in the Mist." If the Academy had an award for bravery, she would certainly win it for working intimately with the wild gorillas.

Two recent performances have drawn Academy predictions from many reviewers: Jodie Foster's rape victim in "The Accused"; Don Ameche's innocent among the Mafia in "Things Change."

Unlike 1987, when most of the Academy hopefuls were clumped in the final weeks, this time an impressive array of films and performances has been spread out over the year. Although more potential nominees will appear in late December, it's possible to offer a survey of possibilities thus far.

As with last year, the strongest race appears to be among the female stars. Aside from Weaver and Foster, other performances which have attracted strong support include: Shirley MacLaine, "Madame Sousatzka"; Barbara Hershey, "A World Apart"; Meryl Streep, "A Cry in the Dark"; Whoopi Goldberg, "Clara's Heart"; Sally Field, "Punchline"; Gene Rowlands, "Another Woman."

JOINING HANKS and Ameche as possibilities for best actor: Forest Whitaker, "Bird"; Sam Neill, "A Cry in the Dark"; Ben Kingsley, "Pascali's Island"; Willem Dafoe, "The Last Temptation of Christ"; Edward James Olmos, "Stand and Deliver"; Kevin Costner, "Bull Durham."

However, so far no runaway has been sighted for best picture of 1988. Here are some possibles: "Big"; "Gorillas in the Mist"; "Punchline"; "A Cry in the Dark"; "Bull Durham"; "Madame Sousatzka."

THE OSCAR RACE will undoubtedly change as new entries reach the marketplace. The most promising works include:

- "Rainman," with Dustin Hoffman, Tom Cruise.
- "Torch Song Trilogy," starring Harvey Fierstein in the film version of his hit play, with Anne Bancroft and Matthew Broderick.
- "Mississippi Burning," starring Gene Hackman and Willem Dafoe.
- "Talk Radio," with Ellen Green and Alec Baldwin.
- "The Accidental Tourist," co-starring William Hurt and Kathleen Turner.
- "Beaches," with Bette Midler and Barbara Hershey.
- "Working Girl," starring Melanie Griffith, Harrison Ford and Sigourney Weaver.

The 61st Annual Academy Awards will arrive early next year — March 29. For the second year the ceremonies will be held at the Shrine Auditorium, and city authorities have promised more control over the traffic. Allan Carr is producing the show, and Marvin Hamlisch has been announced as musical director.

Tom Hanks (above) is a shoo-in for a best actor nominee for his work in "Big" and "Punchline." Meryl Streep (below) may garner a best actress nominee for "A Cry in the Dark," a movie soon to be released.

Movie critics are predicting Edward James Olmos (above) will be nominated for best actor for his portrayal as Jaime Escalante, and some critics agree Sigourney Weaver (below), who recently starred in "Gorillas in the Mist"), is long overdue for an Oscar.

Movie critic selects contenders for Academy Awards

By JANET MASLIN
New York Times News Service

Anyone who has recently seen Shirley MacLaine in "Madame Sousatzka" is sure to feel sorry for her, because Ms. MacLaine looks a fright.

Heavy makeup accentuates every line in her face, and the age spots on her hands look conspicuous and real.

She walks with a slight limp, weighed down by clattering jewelry, and her costumes give her a thick, ungainly silhouette.

However, there's a limit to the sympathy this ought to generate, because next spring Ms. MacLaine is liable to be laughing all the way to the Academy Awards.

In fact, this is exactly the sort of performance that wins prizes, and not only Oscars at that; many a Golden Palm or a Silver Bear has been awarded by a jury swayed by similar considerations.

Ms. MacLaine has reached the stage at which lifetime achievements begin to be recognized, and although she is a recent Academy Award winner (for "Terms of Endearment"), she has been a bridesmaid with enough frequency (nominations for "Some Came Running," "The Apartment," "The Turning Point" and "Irma La Douce") to remain eligible for another win.

And her showy, external role in "Madame Sousatzka" is designed to be remembered.

Disguising one's appearance is a superficial but foolproof way of indicating a major personality change, and the elaborate means by which Ms. MacLaine transforms herself into an aging, imperious piano teacher is itself a sizable achievement.

WHAT'S MORE, the character isn't far from home.

The formidable, caustic, defiantly eccentric Madame Sousatzka is recognizable as an extension of the actress's own personality, which underscores the rightness of this role.

Although he gives an incredible performance as twin gynecologists in "Dead Ringers," Jeremy Irons is unlikely to be nominated for best actor due to the content of the psychological thriller.

There's another thing that makes the performance award-worthy, but within this scheme of things it's relatively minor: the fact that it's actually quite good.

However, since Madame Sousatzka needn't seem genuine, undergo real change or even have much inner life to be entertaining, the actress need not do many of the things normally associated with great acting to make a great impression.

Awards do acknowledge superb work from time to time, but they have much more to do with luck, sentiment and being in the right place and the right time.

What Whoopi Goldberg does in "Clara's Heart" is at least as prizeworthy, if measured by the same criteria, but Ms. Goldberg's luck may not be as strong.

"Clara's Heart," though every bit as quaint as "Madame Sousatzka," doesn't provide as effective a backdrop for its star.

Unlike Ms. MacLaine, who is surrounded by a colorful group of supporting players to hide the fact that the film has no real story, Ms. Goldberg, playing a similarly heart-warming and attention-getting figure, is largely on her own.

As the motherly, omniscient, good-as-gold Jamaican housekeeper of the title, dispensing the kind of aphorisms that ought to make this a dream role, Ms. Goldberg unfortunately operates in a vacuum.

THOUGH NEIL PATRICK Harris does a good job as the boy whom Clara raises, the adults in the film are too wan to hold their own in any conversation with the irrepressible Clara, which leaves Ms. Goldberg sounding overbearing where she ought to sound wise.

Still, Ms. Goldberg is warm and funny, and she really does bring this character to life.

Her performance might well have emerged as a sentimental favorite if the film itself weren't so thin.

Although acting gimmicks have a way of winning prizes, they can also backfire, as may be the case with Jeremy Irons's astonishing pas de deux in "Dead Ringers."

If Irons were a little less good here, the artifice of his performance might be less easily taken for granted (Meryl Streep often has the same problem).

As it is, he plays the film's twin brothers so effortlessly that neither his work nor the remarkable technical tricks that make it seamless really stands out.

What's more, a film about half-mad, drug-addicted twin gynecologists, no matter how good, is sure to lack something in mass appeal.

Though this is easily Irons's best film work, he will probably go prizeless until a more one-dimensional and likable character comes along.

Either that, or an unexpectedly vicious one; whichever role ("Big" or "Punchline") brings Tom Hanks his Oscar nomination this year, it will be the latter, nastier performance that puts this nice-guy actor over the top.

Hanks in "Big" was a boyish delight as well as a technical marvel, but the manic, bitter energy he brings to the stand-up comic of "Punchline" is sufficiently out of character to look like acting rather than charm.

And the "Punchline" performance has a rough side, which in awards-givers' terms often translates as something real.

JODIE FOSTER, another likely nominee this year, gives a devastating performance in "The Accused," and in terms of awards it helps that the tough-talking rape victim whom she plays has so much grit.

Rude, angry and uneducated, she's a clear departure for Ms. Foster, and it helps that much publicity has been focused on the sheer physical arduousness of the role.

Gene Hackman must have experienced his own physical difficulties filming "Bat 21" in the jungles of Malaysia, but Hackman isn't the sort to let this show.

Nor is he awards material by the usual standards (though his "French Connection" character brought him an Oscar).

In "Bat 21" and "Another Woman," there's no identifiable quality that makes Hackman stand out; he simply makes himself outstandingly vital and real.

This isn't what wins prizes, but it's something other actors surely understand.

Movie buff disdains new colorized films

By DON FREEMAN
Copley News Service

I don't want to wish any ill upon Ted Turner but now that he has colorized "Casablanca," may his Perrier be secretly bottled in Tijuana! And may he be cursed further by swallowing a trolley car and having the conductor's bell clang all night so that he can never sleep a wink!

Small curses they are for what this man has done.

Now if I were a rich man, as Tevye the milkman sings in "Fiddler on the Roof," there is one thing I would not do and that is add color to cherished old black-and-white movies.

But Ted Turner, may the cream in his coffee curdle without warning, is a rich man. And now, to obtain more coin of the realm, he has imposed color on our most cherished of black-and-white film — "Casablanca."

As Ted says about this deplorable practice of his: "I own these films and I can do anything I want to them."

He's absolutely right. This is America, isn't it? This isn't Russia where they might send Ted Turner to Siberia for such an offense, may he eat only beets and have borscht continually squirt from his ears.

I'm not saying that we should send Ted Turner to Siberia, just that we might give the matter some thought.

I simply do not want the Ted Turners of the world fooling around with the past. What they do with their color brushes is distort our heritage, which is what these great old movies are.

As a friend of mine puts it: "We see a movie made in 1943, it's supposed to look like a movie made in 1943. That's a part of what it means to turn on the TV and look at a movie made in 1943."

Absolutely. If today's tint is added to a black-and-white film of 1943, it's an intrusion from the computer age of the '80s.

It's an attempt to alter time. And time cannot be altered.

In "Casablanca," all the characters look pasty faced.

Bogie has got a yellowish-pinkish cast to his face and he looks weird. Bogie looks wimpy. Bogie doesn't look like Rick Blaine, hard-boiled proprietor of the Cafe Americain.

And with the colorization, the vandals put a beige suit on Bogart who is strictly gray pinstripe.

I'll tell you what's really awful — the colors have brightened up Rick's place. Gone is the atmosphere of the sinister cafe with its mystery and intrigue and shadows. This joint is supposed to be in wartime Casablanca. With all those bright and happy colors, you'd swear it's in Mister Rogers' neighborhood.

The romance of "Casablanca" is indestructable and it tugs at our sentiment: Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman — Rick and Ilsa:

"Let's see, the last time that we met," she says.

"Was the Belle Aurora," Bogie says.

"How nice. You remembered. But, of course, that was the day the Germans marched into Paris."

"Not an easy day to forget."

"No."

"I remember every detail," Bogie says. "The Germans wore gray, you wore blue."

And now, with colorization, we actually see the Germans wearing gray and Bergman wearing blue.

But when we see those colors, the gray and the blue, something intangible is lost. Subtlety gets flattened into the literal.

And as for you, Ted Turner, I shall close by borrowing from Johnny Carson's storehouse of Carnac curses and say as follows: May a delirious dromedary squat on your semolina pudding!

World War II Remembered

Midland man took part in historic mission

Text by LINDA ANDERSON Photo by BRIAN ADAMCIK

For most people, history is something they read about in books. But for a few, history is something they have experienced.

Joel Adcock is one of the few who has experienced it.

Adcock likes to say that he has lived in Midland since 1940, "except for a few years when I was otherwise occupied."

Those "few years" were the years he spent in the Army Air Force during World War II. Adcock entered the armed service in April 1942, married his wife, June, Nov. 18, 1942, and two weeks and two days after his wedding, was sent to the South Pacific.

"I served two and a half years," he said, in such places as New Caledonia, Guadalcanal, the Solomon Islands, New Guinea and Middleberg Islands. "The Philippines had already fallen when I got there," Adcock said.

Although serving in the Armed Forces during the time of World War II is not that unusual, the fact that he was with the 339th fighting squadron on April 18, 1943, when they shot down Japanese Adm. Isoroku Yamamoto, commander in chief of the Japanese combined fleet, is.

Yamamoto was a "supreme commander in chief of all Japanese Navy, Air Force and South Pacific," Adcock said. "That would have been everybody."

Yamamoto wrote in his diary that in order to promote Japanese expansion — a Japan that was hemmed in by China and Russia, both too big for conquest — it would be necessary to look to the west, Adcock said. The admiral's plan was to build up the Japanese military over a period of many years, then take the Hawaiian Islands and from there move on the United States mainland.

"In 1923 he started planning the attack on Pearl Harbor," said Adcock. "From the mid-20s to 1939, they built as many ships as they could build, and had as many men trained as they could train." Yamamoto "was considered almost a god by the Japanese people, especially the military."

But in 1938, the government of Japan "voted to start a war with the United States," Adcock said. "Yamamoto disapproved. He said, 'You are wakening a sleeping giant.' ... He wanted to wait another 20 years. He was overruled."

DEC. 7, 1941, the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, and the world was at war. The attack "nearly destroyed the whole Navy," Adcock said. Adcock himself "didn't have to go into the war until April, 1942," he said. "I started out as a private. I was assigned to the 339th fighter squadron in early 1943," and stayed with that squadron until he was rotated back home.

As part of the ground crew of the 339th, Adcock was an airplane mechanic. "I was crew chief with the rank of technical sergeant. I was promoted to technical sergeant in about 14 months" after entering the service.

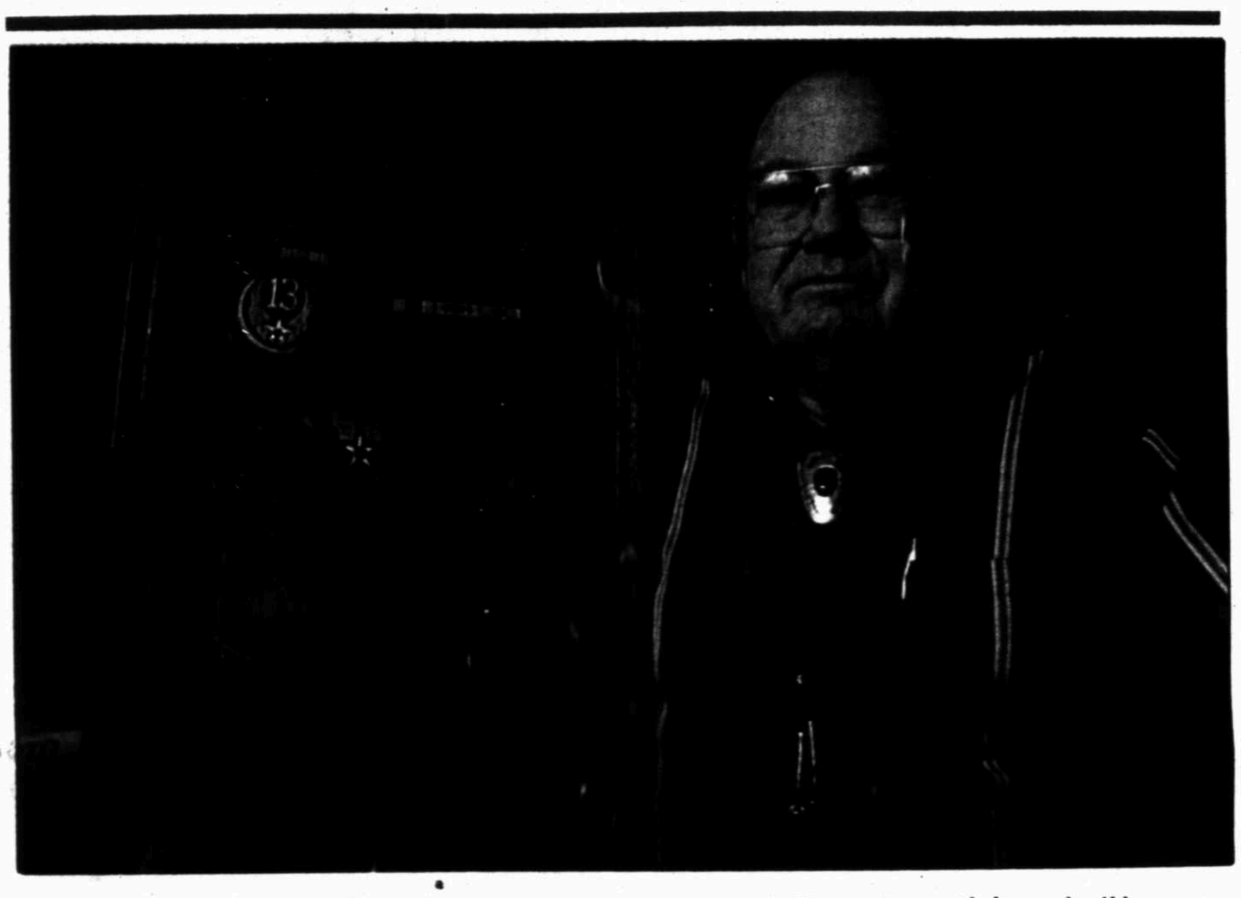
"There was a very strong bond between a pilot and his crew chief," Adcock said. "I was more a propeller specialist than a crew chief. I had two MOS numbers (identification of rating) — one was propeller specialist, one was crew chief."

The squadron flew P-38s, which Adcock called "the sweetest airplane ever built. If you don't believe that, ask those old boys that flew it. In its time, it was the fastest airplane in the world — there wasn't a Japanese Zero that could catch it. Due to its weight and size, Zeros could out-maneuver it at low altitudes," but at higher altitudes, "they (Zeros) didn't stand a chance.

"The Japanese pilots were afraid of the plane itself," he continued. "It had air cooled machine guns in the nose and 20mm cannon, and every fifth shell was a tracer ... the guys just instinctively followed that tracer — the pilots used the tracers more than the sights."

"(The P-38 is) the sweetest airplane ever built. If you don't believe that, ask those old boys that flew it. In its time, it was the fastest airplane in the world — there wasn't a Japanese Zero that could catch it."

— Joel Adcock



Midlander Joel Adcock displays some of his World War II service medals and ribbons.

In April 1943, Yamamoto planned an inspection of the Japanese garrisons at Bougainville, Shortland Island and Ballale Island. His inspection was scheduled for the 18th of the month, and his exact time of arrival was set.

But, unknown to the Japanese, "our intelligence had broken their (Japanese) code and knew when he left and the route he would travel," Adcock said, and the mission to shoot down Yamamoto was set in motion.

Commanding officer of the 339th at the time was Maj. John Mitchell. "He planned the complete mission, chose the pilots to fly with him and assigned all of the spots in the flight," Adcock said. "He was 26 years old at the time and had already become an ace."

The plan was conducted with eight P-38s from the 339th and eight from another squadron, he said. The shooters Mitchell chose were Thomas G. Lanphier, Rex T. Barber, Besby Holmes and Ray Hine.

THE FLIGHT from Guadalcanal to the projected point of interception on Bougainville was about 430 miles. "The P-38 was the only plane the Air Force had at the time that had enough to go that far and get back to base," Adcock said. To increase the planes' ability to make the trip, the ground crews stayed up all night loading 310-gallon belly fuel tanks onto each plane. "All of them operated except one," Adcock said. "Each plane was carrying two 310-gallon tanks."

The mission took off from Guadalcanal at the exact designated time.

When they intercepted Yamamoto's flight, "he was less than a minute off schedule after flying 430 miles," Adcock said. "He was flying strictly by compass, estimating speed ... (and) altitude. He was very precise."

He also appeared to have some kind of sense of his own death, Adcock added. Yamamoto seemed to know "in his own mind (that) he would not live through it."

Six Zeros were escorting Yamamoto's bomber and a second bomber that day when the Air Force flight launched its attack. Both bombers and several of the Zeros were shot down. Yamamoto, supreme commander of the Japanese forces, was dead. The mission was complete.

The 339th was not without its own losses in the mission, Adcock said. Lt. Ray Hine did not make it back.

Throughout the years since this successful mission was completed, the question of who actually shot down the Japanese supreme commander has been in dispute.

Both Lanphier and Barber claimed to have shot his plane down, and for years both were credited with one-half a kill.

But recently, Adcock said, proof was given that Rex Barber actually shot Yamamoto. Adcock said that when Barber arrived back at base after the mission, the crew counted 104 bullet holes in his P-38.

"Rex is still alive," Adcock said. "Tom died this past December."

This year marked the 45th anniversary of the Yamamoto mission, and in commemoration of the event, members of the squadron, their families and guests, met for a reunion in Fredericksburg.

Although the group has had other reunions since the war, this one was special because "every member of the Japanese or American pilots who participated in the raid were on stage at the same time in Fredericksburg," Adcock said.

ALTHOUGH THE Yamamoto mission was a major victory in the U.S. war effort, the war didn't end until two years later, and Adcock didn't come home until then.

His war service is reflected in the medals and citations he was awarded — Good Conduct Medal, World War Victory medal, Guadalcanal, Eastern Mandates, Western Pacific, New Guinea, Southern Philippines, Northern Solomons, Bismark Archipelago, American Defense, Presidential Citation given to the squadron, and seven battle stars, both silver and bronze.

Adcock said his worst experience occurred near the end of his time in the service, when he and a friend were huddled in their foxhole, waiting for an air raid to end. "We heard the bomb coming — we knew it was a big one because we heard it whistling from the time the old boy dropped it."

In spite of their conviction that the bomb "had their names on it," it hit about 25 feet away from their foxhole. "It knocked both of us silly."

The next morning, the men saw the hole left when the bomb hit. "It had hit the runway about 25 feet from the foxhole," Adcock said. "It had to be a 500-pounder (bomb) because it destroyed an area about 50 feet wide ... and 15 feet deep."

Adcock's war adventures didn't stop, even on the way home. "We nearly had a mutiny on the liberty ship coming home," he said. "They almost starved us to death."

The ship, carrying ambulatory patients who were servicemen, was heading for San Francisco. According to Adcock, the mess sergeant on board was serving the passengers only two meals a day while making a profit selling the food they were supposed to be served.

"We went for 20 days and they fed us twice a day," Adcock said. "One meal a day was what they called 'split pea soup,' which meant the cooks opened cans of peas, heated them and called it "soup."

"The only bread we had was World War I hardtack," Adcock continued. "It had been stored 20 years or more. The cooks would heat it over and be sure it was hot. But the main reason for heating it was to kill the weevils" that infested the bread.

Eyes ultimate weapon at 'Topdome University'

By ROBERT DIETRICH
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Cmdr. David Ersek is the head of the nation's newest air combat "university," which teaches military tacticians how to use sophisticated long-range radar systems to win battles.

But Ersek does not overlook that most ancient piece of warrior equipment: the human eye.

Ersek tells Navy and Air Force fliers attending "Topdome University" at Miramar Naval Air Station in San Diego that a pilot's eyesight is the only absolute method for making a positive identification of a radar blip that appears hostile — or one that is hostile and has been practicing electronic deception, perhaps masquerading as a commercial airliner.

"You've got to figure out whether or not they're coming out to do you harm," Ersek said in an interview.

"There's nothing on any sensor on any airplane that I know of that would be able to give you that information — other than the pilot's eyeball."

"Topdome" — named for the 24-foot diameter radar disc atop the Navy's E-2C Hawkeye electronic surveillance aircraft — is the command-communications-intelligence counterpart of Miramar's "Topgun University," which teaches advanced dogfighting to Navy and Marine fighter pilots.

Officially it's the U.S. Navy Carrier Airborne Early Warning Weapons School.

"Part of my charter is to teach Navy interoperability to Air Force personnel who fly in E-3 AWACS (airborne warning and control system) aircraft — teaching them how to operate in a Navy battle group environment," Ersek said.

CNS Photo

A trainee receives information relayed from a Navy E-2C Hawkeye electronic surveillance aircraft as it flies above Miramar Naval Air Station near San Diego.

ERSEK'S STUDENTS aren't normally assigned to Hawkeyes, but they rely on the information that the E-2Cs relay to them.

The twin turbo-prop E-2C Hawkeyes are the largest aircraft assigned to a carrier air wing.

Prowling at 30,000 feet over a warship battle group, their "active mode" radar antennae "see" everything in the air, on the water or just below the surface within a 250-mile radius.

Switched to "passive mode," the radars can clandestinely pick up the electronic "signatures" of everything within a 500-mile radius.

Three naval flight officers — each with a minimum of three years' system training — operate radar and communications equipment linked to computers capable of simultaneously monitoring 600 friendly, neutral and non-friendly air and surface communications.

The system is based on knowing positively which radar blips or electronic contacts are military "friendlies" or civilian non-combatants.

Hostile aircraft, Ersek explained, are radar contacts that fail to give that day's secret military IFF (identification — friend or foe) code or the IFF number given commercial aircraft by a civilian air control center.

"We know which of our airplanes are out there," Ersek said. "You can tell in a heartbeat which are U.S. Navy or U.S. Air Force. As far as any other planes out there, I'm not going to know who he is. He might be using IFF, but I'm not going to be privy to who assigned him the code."

He was talking about deception — perhaps the most agonizing factor that combat commanders face in missions such as the U.S. Navy's tanker-escort operations in the Persian Gulf.

IN THE air-sea engagements of last April 18, two Iranian U.S.-built F-4 Phantom fighter-bombers used IFF codes assigned to commercial aircraft.

And so far, U.S. officials have not revealed the source of an IFF code — signifying an Iranian F-14 U.S.-built Tomcat fighter — received aboard the cruiser USS Vincennes on July 3.

It just preceded the downing of an Iranian civilian airliner by a missile from the cruiser. The death toll was 290.

Defense Department press officers said no U.S. military aircraft were airborne as the action developed — which might have provided "eyeball" identification.

Ersek, who worked with the cruiser USS Valley Forge — similar to the Vincennes — on Persian Gulf reconnaissance missions last year, was ordered to avoid comment on the Vincennes incident.

Navy Department officials in Washington permitted Ersek to be interviewed only on the grounds that the incident not be discussed.

But the top Pentagon leadership — Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci and Adm. William Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff — recommended the "eyeball" system when civilian and military aircraft are flying over U.S. warships.

"Visual identification is the only positive means to distinguish friendly or commercial aircraft from potentially hostile aircraft," they said in recommendations sent to the Navy leadership after a formal investigation into the sequence of events on board the Vincennes.

Topdome's students include veteran combat aircrew personnel and tactical staff officers who work with Hawkeyes in the fleet.

"The idea is to make them understand how we work, what our capabilities are," Ersek said. "We want them to go back to their units and pass on what they learned — and come back to us with suggestions."

AMONG THOSE suggestions: how to recognize enemy deception.

Ersek said some Soviet military aircraft are fitted with navigation radars that can be tuned to frequencies transmitted by civilian airliners giving passive Hawkeye radar a false "signature."

"It's not a foolproof way by any stretch of the imagination because the Soviets are well aware of what frequencies the airliners use and you better believe they put some of their own radars in the same frequency spectrum as a commercial airliner.

"There are enough ambiguities out there to make you question whether or not it's an airliner or a Soviet (military) platform."

The Hawkeye's primary role is to provide instant intelligence on the location of enemy air, surface and submarine units moving against a carrier group, according to Ersek.

"Using our passive radar, we're going to be able to pick up anything that has active electronic gear that sends energy out in the air. It could be an aircraft radar; it could be a cruise missile; it could be SAM (surface-to-air missile) sites on the ground. It could be just basic air traffic control radars, ships, submarines at periscope depth emitting signals."

The Hawkeyes can relay battle information to ships and aircraft too far from one another for secure radio links. They also can use a target coordination system the Navy calls Datalink to give a warship accurate missile-aiming information at a target the warship's own radar cannot see.

"THE SOVIETS have a lot of airplanes in their inventory dedicated to taking out the carrier battle group," Ersek said.

"Among them is the TU-95 Bear. Although it's an old airframe, it's still a significant threat — it has a lot of distance, it carries a lot of weapons and it's not an easy airplane to knock down. It's bigger than a B-52 and can carry a MiG fighter that is converted to a cruise missile.

"The really bad actor as far as the Navy is concerned is the Backfire (bomber) — a very fast airplane capable of going long distances and carrying a lot of missiles. It's a tough guy to contend with. This is the primary threat to the battle group.

"The problem with the Navy battle group is that as you get closer and closer to the (enemy) motherland, you have to deal with their land-based fighter defenses, such as the very sophisticated MiG-29 fighter which has a lot of capability.

"Even though you've got past the outer air battle and you've survived the Backfire and you've knocked down their ability to take out the carrier battle group, you're now in the regime of their fighters — a very significant threat.

"Obviously they are going to use their submarines as a threat to the battle group also. The E-2C is the one airplane in the Navy that not only deals with the aircraft, but the submarine threat and the surface ship threat.

"The real bad surface actor is the Kirov-class cruiser — a nasty machine with a lot of guns, a lot of missiles.

"The E-2C is in every phase of every mission to take on every one of these platforms."

As more types of missions for Hawkeyes are ordered, Ersek said, the Navy may have to increase the number of E-2Cs in a 90-aircraft carrier air wing from four to six.

"Everybody wants a piece of the mission. That would mean subtracting some other aircraft from the wing."

HISTORY

Naturally, the returning servicemen did not appreciate this treatment. "The patients decided they had to get something to eat," Adcock said. "You take 200-300 guys and they can near take over a ship. They decided to throw the mess sergeant overboard."

Fortunately for the mess sergeant, Adcock, as senior non-commissioned officer, was selected to discuss the situation with the ship's commanding officer, who was taken by surprise by the unrest, investigated the men's grievance and made sure it was corrected. Talk of mutiny died.

However, "When we landed in San Francisco, I weighed 124 pounds," said Adcock. "Twenty-two days later my weight was 155 pounds."

Adcock returned to Texas by way of Tarrent (SP) Field in Fort Worth. He was discharged Sept. 9, 1945.

When he returned to Midland, Adcock and his wife, June, resumed their life together. Mrs. Adcock worked in banks for many years, both during the war and after. Adcock worked for White's Auto until 1962, when left to go to work for a carpet company. He retired in 1982.

Adcock still maintains friendships with many of the men he served with in the Pacific. Maj. Mitchell, who planned the Yamamoto raid, remained in the military for several years. When he retired, he went into the oil business. Mitchell now lives in California. "I see him and Rex Barber once a year at our reunions," Adcock said.

The Adcocks still live in Midland, having raised their son, David, here. They are both active members of the community, and proud grandparents of Cynthia Ann, 7.

But they also are proud of this country's history and their part in it. In spite of "Hollywood history," John Wayne really didn't win World War II. It was won by millions of people like Joel and June Adcock.

'Underwater buses' offer new views of ocean

Associated Press

Tourists of the future will be able to tour the ocean in transparent acrylic-hulled underwater buses that offer panoramic views of the ocean depths well below scuba-diving limits.

Today's tourist submersibles are converted research vessels and oil-seeking subs, according to an article in a recent issue of Popular Mechanics, but they are dinosaurs compared to the new subs that will offer climate control, public address systems and other amenities.

Two models have been developed by Hyco Technologies of Vancouver, B.C., a firm that is pioneering acrylic submersible design.

Aries is a sea-bus that will carry 46 passengers down to 250 feet and Gemini, an eight-person deep diver, will be able to descend as far as 2,580 feet.

The first transparent tour sub — a Gemini — will arrive next year at Grand Cayman in the Caribbean, according to Hyco's founder, Phillip Janca.

Of the two designs, Gemini has the more radical look — three acrylic spheres sandwiched in a stainless steel-fiberglass framework.

Unlike glass, acrylic is a good thermal insulator and doesn't shatter catastrophically if it fails under pressure. An acrylic layer must be thick, however, to withstand substantial water pressure.

While Gemini is more radical and deeper-diving than Aries, with its 250-foot depth limitation, it is Aries that has drawn more interest from potential tour operators because of the 46-passenger payoff.

"Aries is a shotgun approach to the tourist market," said Janca, a Texas-born Cayman Islander. "But also not everyone has 1,000 feet of water in his backyard like we have in Cayman.

"Aries would be ideal for a site in the Mediterranean, while Gemini would be good for, say, the Galapagos Islands or deepwater basins in the Pacific."

Gemini will carry an $870,000 price tag, while each Aries will run $2 million.

While Aries is strictly a tourist vehicle, Hyco hopes Gemini will lure commercial, scientific and military purchasers.

Its acrylic hull allows 350 degrees visibility, ideal for exploring unknown deep-sea locales.

Several navies have expressed interest in Gemini as a deep-water rescue vehicle, said Hyco managing director Chris Metcalfe.

Her hull also would present a reduced magnetic signature, offering potential applications for the defense community as an underwater stealth vehicle.

Gemini's other features include the ability to maintain station in the vertical column like a hovering helicopter and a frame made of stainless steel instead of aluminum, allowing operators to leave the sub in the water for weeks without worrying about corrosion.

'Women and Alcohol Awareness Week' set

From Staff Reports

The National Council on Alcoholism and the Association of Junior Leagues, in cooperation with Blue Cross and Blue Shield Association, have announced Nov. 28-Dec. 2 to be "Women and Alcohol Awareness Week."

According to information from the Midland Council on Alcoholism, women drinkers face many alcohol-related problems, including:

- Women who drink heavily — defined as more than 60 drinks a month — have more physical problems that women who are light or moderate drinkers.
- Fetal Alcohol Syndrome, infertility, miscarriages and stillbirths are associated with heavy drinking in women.
- Female drinkers are more lively to develop liver disease than their male counterparts, and these women run a greater risk of dying once the liver has been injured.
- Women are more likely than men to combine alcohol with prescription drugs — potentially a fatal combination.
- Alcohol abuse plays a role in family violence, child abuse, teen pregnancy, crimes against women, mental disorders and AIDS.
- Women's problems with heavy drinking often are seen as less serious than men's, and their condition may be more likely to be misdiagnosed.
- Alcoholic women are more likely to attempt suicide than other women or alcoholic men.
- Alcoholic or drug-addicted women report a high rate of sexual abuse, including rape and incest.
- Regular drinking is common among high school girls. One 1983 survey found that 31 percent of those girls polled had five or more drinks at least once in the previous two weeks.
- Women are the targets of many alcoholic beverage advertising campaigns, but, currently, manufacturers of alcoholic beverages fail to urge women to avoid drinking alcohol during pregnancy. Warning labels are scheduled to appear on bottles of beer beginning in December 1989.

The National Council on Alcoholism, founded in 1944, is a non-profit organization fighting alcoholism and other drug addiction and related problems. Its programs include prevention and education, public information, medical and scientific information, public policy advocacy, conferences and publications. NCA's toll-free help referral line is 1-800-NCA-CALL.

The Associaton of Junior Leagues, an international organization which promotes volunteerism and community involvement, is sponsoring a "Woman to Woman" project on women and alcohol. The program includes information about gender-related differences and dangers in using alcohol, and educational activities and interventions for women in the workplace.

Beer bottle labels to carry warning

Hearst News Service

ALBANY N.Y. — When you crack open a bottle of beer a year from now, for the first time in history you'll know for certain that what you're drinking actually contains alcohol.

Just read the label.

You'll also know that what you're drinking poses serious risks to your health.

A little-publicized provision attached to the omnibus drug bill passed by Congress last month requires all alcoholic beverages to carry the following labes starting December 1989:

"GOVERNMENT WARNING: According to the surgeon general, women should not drink alcoholic beverages during pregnancy because of the risk of birth defects. Consumption of alcoholic beverages impairs your ability to drive a car or operate machinery, and may cause other health problems."

Comparable warnings have appeared on cigarette packs since 1971. The label will appear on every bottle or can of beer, wine, liquor or wine cooler.

While the label information may sound self-evident, such health caveats have been consistently opposed by distillers since the 1960s. Even the present version of the warning represents a compromise, as some label backers had pushed for references to possible addiction, coma and death.

Most advocates in the field of alcohol abuse, however, are pleased with the appearance of any label at all.

Although she termed the wording "watered-down," Doris Aiken, co-founder of Remove Intoxicated Drivers in Schenectady, N.Y., said: "For the first time there is a clue that there's alcohol in a can of beer. Right there is a big victory."

Unlike most other products, there's a lack of information on alcohol labels.

"They don't tell you the ingredients, they don't tell you the calories. There are more elaborate labels on dog food," said Richard Chady, spokesman for the N.Y. state Division of Alcoholism and Alcohol Abuse.

Chady made no grand claims for the value of the labels. "It won't deter an active alcoholic, but it may educate others. The label has to be part of a much broader effort."

The legislative push for warning labels was lead by medical, consumer and alcohol education groups, including the National Council on Alcoholism. Bob Lindsey, executive director of its New York affiliate in Albany, said: "The more the public knows, the more careful drinkers they'll become, and maybe they'll drink less."

Lindsey dismissed charges by label opponents that a warning would confuse consumers: "There's nothing confusing about it. It's just straight, simple information."

While some label advocates were disturbed that the warning provision was tagged onto a larger anti-drug bill, Lindsey said, "It gives recognition to the fact that alcohol has been, is, and always will be, our No. 1 drug problem."

The label also alerts drinkers to fetal alcohol syndrome (FAS). The disorder affects the unborn children of drinking mothers. The American Academy of Pediatrics estimates that 5,000 babies born each year in the United States suffer from FAS, and another 50,000 are born with milder forms of alcohol-related defects.

Depending on the amount of alcohol consumed during pregnancy, FAS babies can display a panoply of malformations: growth deficiencies, facial distortions, loss of fine motor functions, mental retardation.

Eating disorder information given

Copley News Service

Until recently, eating disorders were not recognized as such by the medical establishment. Only in the last few years have anorexia nervosa and bulimia been brought into clear focus as the life-threatening diseases they are.

Along with this focus came a stunning awareness of how prevalent the problem is. Fortunately, greater awareness of the problem has led to more resources for help. One such resource is the American Anorexia-/Bulimia Association (AABA), which will send you an information packet for the asking.

The packet will include: a current issue of the AABA quarterly newsletter, which presents information and perspectives from physicians, other health professionals and those who are recovering from anorexia or bulimia; a leaflet on how to handle the anorexic/bulimic child in the family; and a 12-page booklet that not only provides information on these diseases and what the AABA is doing to help, but also provides an extensive resource list that includes reading and audiovisual materials.

Odds are that someone in your life is affected by these eating disorders.

Send a postcard to AABA Information Packet, 133 Cedar Lane, Teaneck, N.J. 07666. Ask for Anorexia-/Bulimia Information Packet.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Positive attitude improves life

By STEVE EDWARDS

Edwards

In today's society, the traditional "fear of death" is being replaced by the "fear of living too long."

Because there are longer life expectations and we now have a greater understanding of age-related changes, some people have been led to believe that aging is just a process of decline and deterioration.

Some younger people seem to be declaring, "I will not grow old gracefully."

The current attitude seems to be that to be productive is to be valuable and "only the strong survive."

Many persons are angered by the elderly's loss of independence, skills or abilities.

Age brings changes. Physical energy declines, and tasks are accomplished more slowly.

Retired persons are sometimes percieved to be "non-productive," and therefore useless.

Statistics taken from people aged 65 and older show that most of these people have one or more chronic physical conditions.

However, when older people themselves are asked how these conditions affect them, they usually do not feel their disabilities prevent them from leading productive and fulfilled lives.

Most elderly persons don't see themselves as old, and do not "feel" their ages.

As Bernard Beruch said, "To me, old age is always 15 years older than I am."

Aging is a total process of change. Ongoing studies take into account the physical, psychological, sociological, situational, behavioral, spiritual and intellectual aspects of aging.

The results suggest that individuals age — and adjust to aging — in individual ways.

Some 60- to 65-year-olds are mentally and physically older than some still-active 92-year-olds.

Successful adjustment is due to a multitude of individual factors.

Successful adjustment to aging depends on how much change is experienced at once; how rapidly the change takes place; how many supporters there are to rely on; and how the individual learns to cope.

Some people adjust to aging better than others because they are better able to transcend and compensate changes of aging.

People who have learned to cope successfully earlier in life will usually continue to do so into old age.

Complications may occur when elderly persons find most of their social supports are no longer available.

Dramatic changes in health, finances, shelter, medical care, religious support, recretation and social support at the same time can cause tremendous amount of stress.

Elderly people should feel positive, productive and involved.

Social supports from family, friends or church members should be strong.

People can overcome much grief, pain and suffering if they know they are not alone.

As Ramond Michel said, "It takes about 10 years to get used to how old you are."

Successful living at any age can be achieved with a positive attitude and a willingness to compensate for limitations.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

Pilgrims' Plymouth Rock landing debated

Some historians contend that one reason the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock instead of going on to Virginia was that they had run out of beer.

THIS CAN BE THE BEST YEAR YOUR CHILD EVER HAD IN SCHOOL.

JUST TWO HOURS A WEEK CAN BRING OUT THE CLASSROOM WHIZ THAT'S HIDING IN YOUR CHILD.

Sylvan Learning Centers are located in major cities across America. We teach reading and math. An independent study by clinical psychologists shows that Sylvan students gain an average of more than one school year in reading or math in the first 36 hours of instruction.

AT SYLVAN YOUR CHILD DOESN'T HAVE TO COMPETE TO LEARN.

There are never more than three students per instructor, so your child receives constant "individualized attention. Experienced, certified teachers use innovative teaching methods and modern technology. This, combined with continuous praise, encouragement, motivation and rewards, builds your child's confidence and desire to succeed.

ENROLL YOUR CHILD NOW.

Remember, because we hold the line at just three students per instructor, enrollment is strictly limited. And the sooner your child begins, the sooner you'll see positive results reflected in his classroom work.

Sylvan offers flexible after school hours and requires no contracts or long-term commitments. You simply pay monthly tuition. Don't let this learning opportunity pass your child by.

Minuet Club announces 1988 debutantes

From Staff Reports

The Minuet Club will present 13 debutantes during the 33rd Annual Presentation Ball. Parties for the debutantes began during the Thanksgiving holidays and will continue through the holiday season.

The Minuet Debutantes are sponsored by the Minuet Club, a social club founded in 1933. The presentation of the debutantes is a tradition started in 1956 during the presidency of Mrs. M.T. Stallter.

The 1988 debutants to be presented are:

Cristina Helen Beal

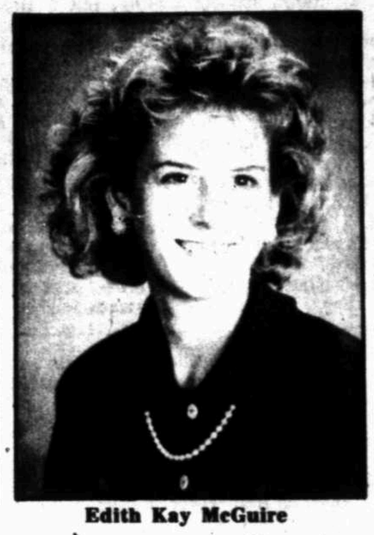
Amy Elizabeth Black

Caroline Elizabeth Bolger

Kelly Shane Dodson

Shannon Kay Fergeson

Kathleen Elizabeth Kleine



Edith Kay McGuire

Shelley Sue Morrow

Leslie Ann Satterwhite

Deborah Anne Sport

Sherwood Noel Wagner

Beth Ann Williams

Lissa Dawn Wilson

CRISTINA HELEN BEAL

American film makers offering innovative, quality films

By VINCENT CANBY
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — It almost seems to have been a conspiracy.

Ever since the 26th New York Film Festival, last Sept. 25, Manhattan's movie theaters have been suddenly offering more films by talented and innovative American film makers than have been seen here at any one time in years: Jonathan Demme's "Married to the Mob," Francis Coppola's "Tucker," Paul Schrader's "Patty Hearst," Martin Scorsese's "Last Temptation of Christ," Errol Morris's "Thin Blue Line," Sidney Lumet's "Running on Empty" and John Sayles' "Eight Men Out."

It was a coincidence, not a conspiracy, but the message could have been written by the most xenophobic of Hollywood publicists:

Do you really want to see that new subtitled film by the unknown director from Antarctica more than you want to see the new Scorsese, the new Coppola, the new Lumet or the new Sayles?

This year's festival had no films from Antarctica, but there were far more selections from comparatively arcane sources (South Africa, Romania, South Korea, among others) than in recent memory.

This country was represented by one Hollywood film (Clint Eastwood's "Bird"), one "major work" (I quote from the festival program) by John Cassavetes ("Opening Night," made in 1978 but never released in New York), a program of avant-garde films and Marcel Ophuls's "Hotel Terminus: The Life and Times of Klaus Barbie," which looks and sounds French but travels on a United States passport.

The relationship between the annual Lincoln Center event and the commercial American film industry has always been an edgy one. At its most intimate level, it has the manner of a marriage of convenience. Each partner professes profound respect for the other and then goes its own way.

Hollywood lends its films to the festival when it is convenient, and the festival seeks Hollywood films when they suit its purposes. This is not only the way things are, but also the way they probably should be.

Most main-line American films will find their way into release, with or without the festival, though something as risky as "The Last Temptation of Christ" might have benefited by being shown initially under the festival's auspices.

SO, TOO, "Patty Hearst," which, with a fine screenplay by Nicholas Kazin, is Schrader's best film to date, though it's not one that will send audiences out of the theater feeling good about the dread misfortunes of others.

It's going to be a hard sell with the public. "Patty Hearst" is no ordinary docudrama. It's as angry and tight-lipped as its heroine and just as reluctant to offer soothing answers to impossible questions.

The festival, in fact, did want "The Last Temptation of Christ," but the distributor decided to go into immediate commercial release to cash in on the well-publicized controversy surrounding the film.

A much more obvious festival entry would have been the independently made "Thin Blue Line," an unusual, disturbing contemplation of a real-life Texas murder mystery. Morris cross-cuts between interviews with the actual principals in the Texas case and lushly photographed "re-enactments," which make their own comments on justice and on the connection between journalism, as presented in documentaries, and the fiction that journalism can inspire.

Morris is an original. His essay on a pet cemetery, "Gates of Heaven," was one of the hits at the 1978 festival.

That film was responsible for one of Les Blank's funniest, most deadpan films, "Werner Herzog Eats His Shoe," in which the German director, who had promised to eat his shoe if Morris would stop fooling around and finish "Gates of Heaven," eats his shoe in front of an appreciative audience in Berkeley, Calif.

Even without the festival's prestige to support it, "The Thin Blue Line" is doing very nicely at the Lincoln Plaza Cinema here. Home cooking isn't always great, but it can be reassuring.

EARLIER THIS year, it seemed quite possible that American movies were in the hands of the trivia experts. However, the last six weeks have shown that some American movie makers, at least, and the people who finance them, are still full of vitality, liberating lunacy and the guts to take a long shot.

One doesn't have to like "The Last Temptation of Christ" to be fascinated by some of its non-bibical revelations. The chief revelation here is that all attempts to visualize the passion of Jesus must make dumbfoundingly literal a story whose landscape is the spirit, not a reconstructed Holy Land filled with rented livestock.

Thus the results must always be as offensive to some as they are laughable to others. (The first words spoken to Lazarus on his rising from the dead: "How do you feel?") This holds true whether the film is "The Greatest Story Ever Told," produced with ecumenical reverence and an all-star cast on a blockbuster budget or the far more modestly conceived "Last Temptation," which, for all of its sincerity, seems to be the longest movie ever made.

If anything, Scorsese and Paul Schrader, who wrote the screenplay, aren't bold enough in dramatizing the idea, held blasphemous by some, that Jesus at least thought He had a choice.

The theology seems as muddled as the film's most furiously partisan critics allege, but for different reasons. Having raised the dead, given sight to the blind and changed water into wine (in a scene that depicts Jesus as the perfect dinner guest), it is difficult to accept His doubts as seen in the last temptation, the film's dreary, anticlimactic vision of what His life on earth as an ordinary man might have been.

There's far more sense of the conflict between the flesh and the spirit in almost any one scene of Scorsese's vivid, brutal "Taxi Driver," also written by Schrader, than in all of "The Last Temptation."

Further, the viciousness of the attacks on the movie, for non-cinematic reasons, suggests that there remain a lot of people who would rather not be reminded that Christianity sprang from Judaism and that, after all, Jesus was a Jew.

JOHN SAYLES, whose "Return of the Secaucus Seven," was one of the discoveries of the 1980 New Directors-New Films Festival, continues to go his independent way, but very few of his films could ever be called really offbeat. The subjects are sometimes unusual, but the method is that of a good, tough-minded, conventional movie maker.

His newest film, "Eight Men Out," demonstrates his strengths and weaknesses. The story, based on Eliot Asinof's book, is a terrific one, a dramatization of the 1919 scandal about the White Sox players who threw the World Series. It's as American as the Teapot Dome scandal and far more heartbreaking.

Though the movie is continually engrossing, it is never as tough or sharp as it means to be. Part of the problem is technical. Sayles, as his own screenwriter, has trouble dealing with so many principal characters (more than eight, in fact), and then he has cast the movie with, in two cases, pairs of actors who look so much alike that one spends too much time trying to figure out which is which.

These are the sorts of things that simply wouldn't happen in a more orderly (and boring) film-making setup. Even with its confusions and oversimplifications, "Eight Men Out" does credit to the current film scene.

Among the splendid performances are those of John Cusack, David Straithorn and, playing half of a two-man Greek chorus, Studs Terkel, as the skeptical sports writer who breaks the story of the fix. The other member of the chorus, Ring Lardner, is played by Sayles, who, being dark-haired, lean and very tall, certainly looks like a Lardner, but whose performance is uncomfortably smug.

In a crucial scene, Sayles has himself sing, in a most lofty manner, "I'm forever blowing ballgames" to the guilty ballplayers. One longs for a vaudeville hook to pull him off-screen.

LUMET'S "RUNNING on Empty" also is based on a good idea, the potential of which isn't fully realized in Naomi Foner's screenplay, which knowingly chooses sentiment over grit.

It's about Annie and Arthur Pope (Christine Lahti and Judd Hirsch), radicals left over from the early 1970s, who have been on the run with their children ever since a protest against a napalm lab nearly killed a night watchman.

One must admire the fact that, sentimental or not, such a story could ever have reached the screen in this era of predigested sequels and Eddie Murphy spinoffs of himself.

That's Lumet.

The film also has exceptionally fine performances by Lahti and River Phoenix, as her 17-year-old son who finally rebels against the notion that he must bear guilt for the sins of his parents.

Coppola's "Tucker: the Man and His Dream," about the short-lived career of the automotive genius Preston Tucker, is an ebullient comedy in which a heroic man is crushed by system, a sort of dark lark.

It's the best, most ornery Coppola film in a very long time, a movie whose cheery manner constantly contradicts the meaning of what's happening on the screen.

The jazzy production seems to be a reminder of Coppola's initial impulse to make the film as a musical.

The Arnold Schulman-David Seidler screenplay sometimes plays like a libretto in need of songs.

However, Jeff Bridges's big, breezy performance in the title role goes a long way toward filling in the gaps between the missing production numbers.

Over the years, a lot of directors have been favorably compared to Preston Sturges, but only one man, Jonathan Demme ("Handle with Care," "Melvin and Howard"), is in the Sturges league (as well as his own).

"Married to the Mob," Demme's latest, is an unqualified charmer about the attempts of a pretty young Mafia widow to get out from under a family that is not hers.

"Married to the Mob" is not as spiky and abrasive as Demme's "Something Wild."

It's less risky, perhaps, but it is also more coherent.

It brings a Sturges-like, madcap folksiness to the milieu of "The Godfather."

Michelle Pfeiffer heads the dream cast that includes Matthew Modine as an FBI man, Dean Stockwell as the mob kingpin and Mercedes Ruehl as the kingpin's raucously needy wife.

From beginning to end, "Married to the Mob" is a big smile, interrupted here and there by belly laughs.

With the exception of Schrader, each of these American directors has at one time or another been presented by the New York Festival or its associate, the New Directors-New Films Festival.

The good news in this recollection is that most of the films that starred at the film festival are all in form and in the theaters, where they belong.

DEAR ABBY

Burden of retarded daughter heavy

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You are probably sick of hearing people say, "I never thought I'd be writing to you," but, Abby, I have to talk to someone about this because the guilt is killing me.

I have a 10-year-old daughter who is legally blind and mentally retarded. "Maria" is able to walk and talk, but she has the mind of a 2-year-old. She is almost as big as I am, and I have to feed, bathe, diaper and dress her. I can't leave her alone for a minute. I am 33 years old and have no life of my own. My husband helps as much as he can, but he's at work all day.

Maria is physically abusive. Baby sitters quit after one day. If I try to get her to do something she doesn't want to do, it turns into a wrestling match. Abby, I love her. She is my child, but I can't understand why God did this to me. I used to go to church, but I can't take Maria, and no one will stay with her. I have planned my suicide, and the only reason I haven't gone through with it is because I believe in hell. If I ever kill myself, I will take Maria with me. She has already suffered enough on this earth. She had cancer when she was 2 and had one kidney removed. When I look at her while she is sleeping, she looks so beautiful and normal. My heart is broken.

I love her, Abby, but caring for her is killing me. We live in a rural area and I would like to find a boarding school in the area, but when I mention it, my family shames me — yet no one offers to take her for even one day.

Abby, do you know of a good school for mentally retarded children that is not too far from my town? Maria needs to learn to do things on her own. I am with her every minute and I do everything for her because it's easier than fighting with her.

Please help me find a place for Maria. I will find a way to get her there. — JUDY IN WEST VIRGINIA

DEAR JUDY: Please accept no guilt or shame. You have done everything a loving mother could possibly do for her child. For information about boarding schools in your area, write to: Association for Retarded Citizens, National Headquarters, P.O. Box 6109, Arlington, Texas 76005. There is no charge for the information, but please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for a reply.

You are not alone, Judy. One out of every 10 families in the United States has a retarded family member.

Rose Kennedy wrote a book titled "Times to Remember." In it, she described how painful — but necessary — it was to place her retarded daughter, Rosemary, in a home. The book, published in 1974 by Doubleday, is now out of print, but your public library probably can find a copy for you.

For now, I send my love. Good luck and God bless you. I care.

DEAR ABBY: The extent to which this younger generation thinks only of itself was demonstrated most painfully to me last week. My 28-year-old son announced that he was marrying a girl he had known for two years. I was very happy until he said he didn't want me to come to the ceremony. They wanted to be alone!

Since he is my only son, I suggested that it would be very meaningful for me to be there — that I didn't care how they got married, whether they had a large wedding or a small one, I just wanted to be there.

To my everlasting shame, my son told me that this was their business, and I wasn't to be present! I said nothing, nor have they called me since.

Am I stupid to be hurt? Somehow, I expected his fiancee to be more understanding of a woman's point of view, but she didn't say a word. Can you enlighten a stupid mother? — CRUSHED

DEAR CRUSHED: I am just as "unenlightened" as you about this mysterious affront. You say your son told you that he didn't want you to come to the ceremony — they want to be alone and this wedding was "their" business. One wonders why your son bothered to tell you he was getting married. Something is terribly wrong here.

There must be a reason for your son's cruel behavior. Should you find out why he behaved as he did, please enlighten this curious columnist.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HURTING: Cry your eyes out. Let yourself go, and let the tears flow. Give your grief a chance to express itself. It's healthy. Don't try to put on a "brave" show. It takes honesty, strength and courage for a man to express his emotions. That is real manliness. The weak man hides his feelings.

Exercise builds muscular endurance, helps resist fatigue

Copley News Service

Muscular endurance enables you to resist fatigue. As you develop it, the capacity of your muscles to utilize oxygen is increased, allowing your body to work longer before producing the lactic acid that makes you tired.

Such stamina can help you breeze through a hectic workday or participate in an impromptu volleyball game with friends.

The only way to build endurance is to participate in exercises like bicycling, swimming, rowing and fitness walking that use the body's large muscle groups. Most people know that these activities provide a good cardiovascular workout, says Dr. Michal Ross, president of Herald Square Fitness Center in New York. What people don't realize is that they also build muscular strength and endurance.

Another dividend: While these activities build muscle, they also burn fat.

Recovering at home from minor — or even major — surgery, you are ready to relax, to let others take care of you for a while. However, there are some things they simply don't know how to take care of — and neither do you: Where can they purchase all those medical supplies that the hospital had so readily available? And how do you or they get the bandages and special accessories that made your stay in the hospital fairly comfortable?

Turn to the current edition of the Bruce Medical Supply catalog, in which you will find solutions to most of your home-care needs. Approximately 56 pages long, this fully illustrated catalog carries everything from massage products to diabetic testing supplies to walking equipment. You will find items to make life simpler (such as button fasteners, zipper pulls and no-rinse shampoo) and vital necessities (like ostomy pouches, crutches and hand-held showers). With this dandy catalog in hand, you can shop without having to leave home — and you will receive full Medicare reimbursement for supplies purchased.

For different 'Holiday,' check the map

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Holidays are here, the Holidays are there, the Holidays are, in fact, nearly everywhere.

America must love its holidays, at least judging by the files of the federal government, since the nation has no fewer than 110 places called Holiday. From Holiday Hills, Ark., to Holiday Acres, Del., and from Holiday Shores, Mo., to Holiday Resort, Tenn., these festive appellations sprinkle the land.

And that's not all. A look at the U.S. Geological Survey's Geographic Names Information System shows 89 Christmases across the country, along with seven places called Santa Claus, three Yules (all in Colorado) and even one poinsettia — Poinsettia Park in Polk County, Fla.

The U.S.G.S. names information system, which has collected more than 2 million names of places and geographic features for use in federal mapping and data programs, shows Texas is tops in Christmas country with 10 places using that name, while there are three Christmases in Florida and seven each in Arizona and California.

Presiding over Christmas are the seven Santa Clauses, including the community of Santa Claus in Toombs County, Ga. Others include Santa Claus churches in Alaska and Indiana; locations called Santa Claus in Arizona, Indiana and Minnesota; Santa Claus Spring in Nevada and Santa Claus Rock in Utah.

For the decorative, there are 542 spots nationwide called holly, more than enough to decorate the lone wreath: Wreath Hill in Campbell County, Wyo.

Folks more inclined to snuggle up and kiss on the holidays can find ample comfort in a dozen Mistletoes. Mistletoe Mine in Nevada might be a good spot, since it's no longer active; or perhaps Mistletoe State Park in Columbia County, Ga. They could walk Mistletoe Trail in Maryland, study their skills at Mistletoe School in Shasta County, Calif., drift across Mistletoe Lake, Minn., and perhaps even end their days at Mistletoe Cemetery in Goliad County, Texas.

Looking for a white Christmas? Perhaps it can be found at the nation's 563 "snow" place names. There's Snow Hill, Conn., where a white Christmas is likely, and Snow Brake in Tallahatchie County, Miss., where the chance is smaller. Others include Snow Lake, Neb., Snow Pond, N.H.; Snow School in North Dakota and Snow Cemetery in Windham County, Vt.

Anniversary couple goes for gold

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

WARNING: This column is high in empty calories and contains material that might be considered obscene to couples who contend "you don't have to have a piece of paper to be married."

Fifty years ago on Thanksgiving Day, my parents paid $2 for a "piece of paper." It was a wedding license. After my dad plopped down the two bucks, he had $4 left in his pocket.

Mother wore a wine-colored dress; my dad wore his only suit. They stood flowerless and without music before a justice of the peace. Following the wedding, their friends had a half-dozen people to dinner and afterward they went square dancing. On Monday, both returned to work.

As a stepchild, I have watched every day of that marriage and its march to the "gold." I thought it was going to crumble the night I heard them arguing in the kitchen after he had stopped off with the guys after work and drank too much. It didn't.

I thought they would go separate ways in the silence that ensued after Mother miscarried the only child they would ever conceive together. They didn't.

When he returned from the war with tuberculosis and she rode that solitary bus every night to the VA hospital to visit, I thought the stress might end it. But it didn't.

There were a million times when jealousy, words spoken in anger, disappointment, disagreements, in-laws, money, exhaustion from the struggle and despair threatened to pull them apart. They didn't.

After a while, I stopped worrying. I realized there was nothing that could drive them apart. Even last year, when my dad was rushed to the hospital and the spiritual adviser told Mother he had had a full life, she said he was going to have a fuller one because "next year my daughter is going to give us the biggest party the city has ever seen."

It was not the biggest party the city had ever seen, but it was the wedding my parents never had — complete with flowers, music, and a crowd of 60 of their friends.

As I glanced around the room, I did some fast figuring. There were 1,181 years of marriage represented in that gathering. Eleven couples had been married 50 years or more. One couple had been married for 59 years.

When I mentioned this to one of my son's friends, he shook his head in disbelief and said, "Our generation doesn't have that kind of attention span."

I want to thank my mom and dad for the great gift they have given my husband and me and their grandchildren. They gave us stability in a world that has little. They set an example for us to follow. They gave us a seat on the 50-yard line of two lives that weren't always perfect — but always with enough love to make up for it.

Mom reminisced, "Your dad's ring only cost $3. Mine cost $10." And then she whispered to me, "They weren't real diamonds, you know."

They thought they were. That's what was important.

Jet-hopping broker sells lush islands

By TOWN & COUNTRY
A Hearst Magazine

Most businessmen make their fortunes over the telephone from air-conditioned skyscrapers, but Bob Douglas conducts his multimillion-dollar business by island-hopping around the world.

Douglas, 48, a former Baptist minister, is the world's pre-eminent island realtor, according to an article in the current issue of Town & Country, and over the past 18 years he has earned the title "the island king" by selling hundreds of islands.

He currently has more than 300 of them for sale, ranging in price from $5,000 to $5 million.

Many of them are no more than a quarter of a mile off the coast of Nova Scotia, near his home in the village of Mahone Bay, where a New York attorney and restaurateur, a German architect and a Canadian oil baron all own their own islands, not far from the one owned by a Tokyo businessman who won his as the grand prize on a Japanese TV quiz show.

Douglas meets prospective customers in a gold-colored Mercedes, wearing khaki trousers and a short-sleeved shirt.

"The only time I break out a suit and tie is if I'm trying to borrow more than a million dollars from the bank," he said.

Among the would-be island owners who have traveled to Mahone Bay are a grandson of Andrew Mellon, a Tennessee businessman whose horses have raced in the Kentucky Derby and a cousin of Britain's Prince Philip, who Douglas took up in a seaplane to view islands off the coast of British Columbia.

The walls of his firm, R.W.B. Douglas & Associates, are covered with aerial pictures of island properties, from Fiji to Greece to the Bahamas, including a banana and mango plantation off the cost of Panama once owned by John Wayne.

Douglas was a successful real estate developer in Halifax in 1969 when two businessman asked to see any islands he had for sale. It was the beginning of his life's work, although today he has branched out and presides over nearly a dozen companies, including a salmon hatchery, a timber company and a $60 million residential project under construction in Halifax. Islands are unlike other real estate, Douglas said.

"Islands outside the United States, especially, present an odd, complex set of legal, geographical and geopolitical factors that determine their price and how they're marketed," he said.

When Douglas was in Indonesia, for instance, he found many beautiful islands for only $5,000. The catch was the Indonesian government, hoping to boost employment, required new owners to maintain at least three fulltime local servants.

Islands in the Grenadines may house squatters, often people who are using the small, uninhabited islands as a base for a brisk smuggling trade in Barbados rum and disassembled Isuzu trucks. Courts often find in favor of the squatters.

Once he has spotted an island, he must calculate how to civilize it. Where could a client build a tennis court? How could he install a fresh-water desalinization plant, a solar-energy generator, wireless phones and a prefabricated wharf?

Douglas is in the market for his own dream island — Palmyra, a tropical Pacific atoll 900 miles south of Honolulu.

"I want to make my own laws, and be recognized as the smallest independent empire on the planet," he said.

He said he would buy it in a minute if the United States would agree to give up jurisdiction. He has discussed the matter with the State Department.

Drive-through video stores

Laborer develops franchise concept

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

In 1986, Michael Grozier, his wife and another couple were sitting in a Dairy Queen in Cleburne, Texas putting down Belt Buster burgers and Dr Peppers when it was suggested the couples rent a movie at a local video store to cap off the evening.

Grozier, 28, says he doesn't even remember the name of the movie, but he does remember what he thought when he went to the video rental store and found out that the store was out of that title.

"I thought: Not again! Why doesn't somebody open a video rental store that stocks enough of the top movies so that everyone can rent one!

"It seems everytime I went to a video store to rent a popular title it was always out. Here were these 10,000 square-foot stores full of everything except what I wanted — the latest release," Grozier recalls.

Thus was born the dream of a small, drive-through video store, heavily stocked with only the top 40 movies.

The dream took on feet the next day when he was driving past a pasture near Cleburne and saw that it was full of old Foto Mat kiosks that had been removed from various parking lot locations around North Texas.

He asked the property owner if the tiny one-man buildings were for

OIL PRICES

Several factors hold income transfer down

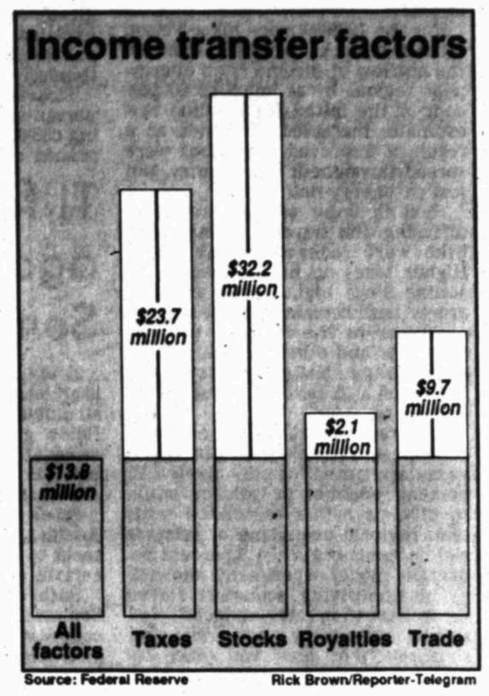
By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

The influx and outflow of income for oil-rich regions as a result of up and down jolts in oil prices are not as great as conventional wisdom would dictate, according to a Federal Reserve Bank economist.

Clarence W. Nelson, a vice president and economic adviser for the Minneapolis Fed bank, has developed a sophisticated economic model of the United States to measure income movement between energy-rich and energy-poor regions.

Nelson's research, using the 1979-80 price hike as a case study, led him to conclude the economic impact is not as severe as it appears on the surface.

Nelson's results lend credence to the argument that the windfall cash Texans supposedly lined their pockets with in 1979-80 was never as plentiful as assumed by those in consuming regions.



Fed economist Clarence Nelson experimented with his economic model to determine the effect of suppressing each of the four major factors for redistributing wealth.

The four primary factors which help spread income gains and losses economywide, Nelson found, are:

- Cross-regional ownership of stock in energy-related companies;
- Federal taxes and transfer payments;
- Inter-regional economic trade of non-energy goods; and
- Cross-regional holdings of mineral rights and royalties.

Without these factors at work during the price hike, Nelson estimates that $62 billion would have flowed from energy-poor parts of the county to energy-rich regions. However, because of those four interacting forces, he estimates the real impact of oil prices doubling during that period was roughly $14 billion — about 75 percent less than the original estimate.

In a telephone interview from Minneapolis this week, Nelson said the same income re-channeling factors are applicable for price jolts in the opposite direction as well. The adverse impact of a price crash such as the one in 1986 on energy-producing regions is somewhat softened by inter-regional factors.

"The 1986 crash of relatively the same magnitude — prices halved, versus doubling in 1979-80 — largely reversed the earlier income transfer and, adjusting the 'real price' levels of energy for inflation, we're basically back to where we were before 1978," Nelson said.

The premise that all domestic crude energy production is confined to the energy-rich region means that neither the producing nor consuming regions in the model corresponds with any grouping of states.

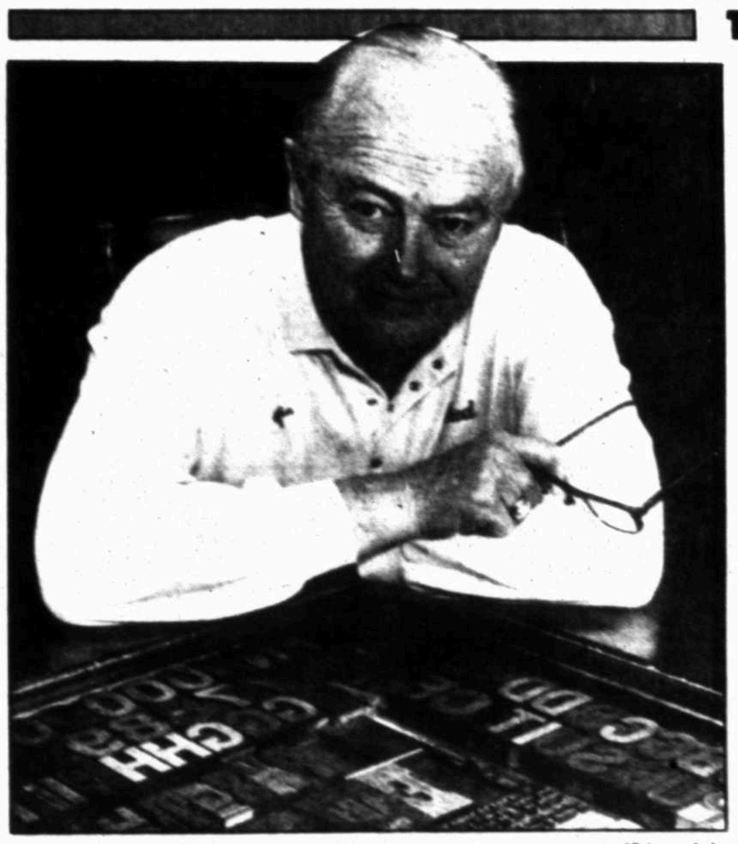
TEXAS BUSINESS

Franchise had humble start

Kwik-Kopy founded by high-school dropout



AP Laserphoto

Houston entrepreneur Bud Hardfield was running $230-million-a-year business when he earned his high school diploma.

By JEFF AWALT

HOUSTON (AP) — By the time Bud Hadfield got his high school diploma he was running a $230 million-a-year franchise business and lecturing would-be entrepreneurs at Columbia University on the success of his Kwik-Kopy Corp.

By then he was 64, and the honorary degree from Cranston (R.I.) High School came was a belated ending to a school career cut short when he was thrown out of school as a teenager for disciplinary reasons.

The interruption didn't blunt his business acumen.

The scrappy Hadfield started Bud Hadfield Printers in 1948 with a $250 downpayment, hopping city buses to make deliveries from a shop with no running water.

In 1967 he started franchising and soon created Kwik-Kopy, which he built into a worldwide business. Kwik-Kopy sells the entrepreneurial dream in the form of ready-made printing centers, along with the training and support to help make them profitable.

It claims to be the world's largest privately owned franchiser of instant printing businesses, with corporate headquarters on a 131-acre wooded tract in northwest Houston. It is second only to publicly held Postal Instant Press in the number of franchises, Kwik Kopy officials say.

Despite his Columbia lectures, Hadfield says college is no place to learn about being an entrepreneur.

"The world of academe is all wrapped up in entrepreneurial schools, but what the hell do they know?" he says.

"I'm sick and tired of all these washed-out, sugar-sweet and, I think, completely irrelevant explanations of what an entrepreneur is all about," he says. "How do you know unless you're one?"

The Kwik Kopy founder and chairman also says he couldn't do today what he started 21 years ago.

"The laws are different and I knew nothing about franchising," he says.

"A guy told me I should franchise, so I went out and bought a book and I read it that weekend. The next week I sold a franchise to the guy who suggested the idea, and he became my first president a few years later."

In those days Hadfield did it all — selling the franchises, helping start them, mailing ads and making promotional calls in the towns where each printing shop opened.

The company now has more than 130 employees, along with experienced franchise owners who serve as on-site trainers and consultants to new owners.

"I looked around at several of the franchises, and the main reason I went with Kwik-Kopy was because of the kind of help they promised after the training ended," said Joe Wallace, a longtime banker who was preparing to open a franchise in Temple.

"That two or three weeks training is great, but there's no way you're going to learn everything you need to know in that amount of time," he said. "I just had a trainer helping me here, and another one coming in a few days. That's the kind of help you have to have when you're getting into a business you're entirely new to."

Retail sales in for the fiscal year ending February 1988 totaled $234 million, compared to $215 million in fiscal 1987. Of the $13.1 million in fiscal 1988 earnings, $9.6 million came from franchise service fees, the company said.

The coup that gave America the big bird

Pitts

When most Americans sat down Thanksgiving Day to consume piles of roast turkey, little did they know they were the fulfillment of one of the biggest merchandising coups in the history of marketing — the selling of the turkey.

Had it not been for that coup, Americans would probably be eating venison and fish for their Thanksgiving feast, and instead of turkey farmers, cod fishermen and deer ranchers might have been the prime holiday beneficiaries, reports Associated Press Business Writer Skip Wollenberg.

Wollenberg says turkey became the official holiday bird as the result of a very skillful marketing campaign by turkey producers shortly after the Civil War.

Thomas V. DiBacco, professor of business history at American University's School of Business in Washington D.C. agrees: "There is no rhyme or reason for us to have turkey on Thanksgiving except that business promoted it." DiBacco, who has studied the relationship of holidays to business, says the Pilgrims most likely ate fish and venison as their main dishes on that first Thanksgiving in 1621.

It seems that Thanksgiving began as a regional festivity in New England, much like Texas' Terlingua Chili Cookoff.

When businessmen in other states saw the crowds flocking to New England to observe the Thanksgiving holiday, they decided to capitalize on the occasion by declaring holidays in their own state, says DiBacco. Finally, as a sign of unity, President Abraham Lincoln proclaimed a day of thanksgiving and prayer in 1863 — in the midst of the Civil War.

After the war, poultry producers in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland started pushing turkey as the main dish for Thanksgiving.

An expensive and special once-a-year treat, turkey also had the status thing working for it. Over 120 years ago turkey sold for about 10 cents a pound, while the average wage was 10 cents an hour. A worker would have had to work 10 hours just to pay for a Thanksgiving turkey. Today a West Texas roughneck works only about 45 minutes to pay for the holiday bird.

Thanksgiving, as the kickoff of the Christmas shopping season, has also played a major role in American retailing, according to the business professor. Since some retailers will do up to 40 percent of their annual sales during the Christmas holiday season, businessmen in 1939 persuaded President Franklin D. Roosevelt to move Thanksgiving from the fourth to the third Thursday in November. However, the move created so much confusion that it was moved back to its original date in 1941.

Thanksgiving also plays a role in the economies of other nations. Many Canadians celebrate Thanksgiving as do many Mexicans along the Texas-Mexico border where American holidays have been adopted. This season Mexican citizens along the border beseeched the government to relax restrictions on turkey imports so that there would be a plentiful supply.

But there are other worlds yet to conquer. They don't celebrate Thanksgiving in China, Brazil or Australia. There's no good reason those countries can't be thankful too — a thought I'll bet that has already occurred to the merchandising genius of America.

Kentucky Fried Chicken reported this week that the number one outlet among its 7,700 stores worldwide is Beijing, China. The 12,000 square-foot store seats 510 and does $3 million a year in sales.

If KFC can do that with chicken, can the turkey be far behind?

TRANSFER—

Nelson built on state data from Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana — which produced half the nation's energy in 1978 — adding portions of states where energy production dominates.

The entire energy-rich region encompasses about one-sixth of the nation's population.

However, ownership of energy company stock by the other five-sixths of the population is a major factor in decreasing the impact of oil price jolts on income flows. Although the fact that energy stocks are more likely to be owned by residents of energy-rich area was built into the model, stock ownership was shown to be the primary transfer diluter.

For the 1979-80 price hike, Nelson estimated stock ownership lessened the outflow of income from energy-poor regions by as much as 50 percent of the initial $61.9 billion raw estimate. Increased dividends as a result of improved operations were spread throughout the country, not just in energy-rich areas.

Next in order of significance to diffusing the impact of the price hike were federal income taxes. Higher taxes on higher income resulting from higher energy prices are in part returned to the energy consumer in the form of transfer payments and other federally funded programs. Nelson estimated the impact as a 38 percent reduction in income transfer.

Inter-regional trade in non-energy goods, particularly manufactured items, accounted for only about a 15 percent reduction in transfer, while royalty payments associated with cross-regional ownership of mineral rights accounted for a 3 percent reduction, model experiments showed.

The underlying economic forces — conservation and reduced consumption of energy when prices rise, substitution of labor and other resources for higher-priced energy and businesses raising prices to reflect higher energy costs — are "roughly symmetrical," Nelson said.

Former con man will address bankers' group

From Staff Reports

Frank Abagnale Jr., known as the world's greatest retired con man, wil be the guest speaker at a seminar sponsored by the Midland chapter of the American Institute of Banking. The seminar, "You Catch A Thief," will be Thursday at the Midland Center from 7 to 9 p.m.

Abagnale is retained by financial institutions, department stores, hotels and other businesses to instruct how to recognize forged checks, counterfeit bills, bogus credit cards and short change artists. He does not glorify or condone the con artist, but explains his methods so businesses can be better prepared to protect themselves.

Tickets for the seminar are $18 per person and can be reserved by calling 688-6321. Tickets can also be purchased at the door.

TI files suit against fellow Sematech firm

DALLAS (AP) — Sematech research consortium member Texas Instruments has filed a lawsuit against fellow group member Micron Technology Inc. claiming patent infringement in the production of semiconductor memory chips.

Filed in federal district court in Austin, the Texas Instruments suit seeks to stop Micron from producing certain semiconductor chips.

Both companies are members of Sematech, the Austin-based research cooperative whose goal is world leadership in semiconductor technology by 1993.

At issue in the lawsuit are dynamic random-access memories and video random-access memories.

sale, and was told he could have one for $200.

In short time, Grozier — a sheet-metal worker who has been engaged in one type or other of manual labor for most of his life — found a location for his store, a supplier of video movies in Dallas, and the first chapter of a "rags-to-riches" story was written.

"It was strictly a shoestring operation. I did everything myself. I had never worked cement before, but I poured the slab myself. I used 39-cent stick-on letters for my sign.

"My outside lights were metal rain gutters turned upside down with fluorscent lights inside. My total investment was $3,500, including an inventory of 97 tapes." says Grozier, who was born in Dallas and raised in Cleburne.

The budding entrepreneur says the concept was a hit right from the start.

When he opened, he said would have been happy to rent 50 tapes a day. The first week cars were lined up 20 deep to rent the most popular videos.

By the end of the second week, he had increased his tape inventory to 160 and was renting nearly all of them. He increased inventory time and time again to meet the demand.

"Some weekend nights we would rent 250 tapes," said Grozier.

"People kept telling me that I ought to franchise the concept."

Now Grozier is doing just that. He was in Midland this week to scout locations and interview 15 prospective franchisees in Midland-Odessa for his three-month old franchise business Vidtron International — a name he hopes to make a household word.

The task may not be too difficult judging from the enthusiastic response. After only one appearance at a Houston franchise show, he has sold two Vidtron franchises in Houston, two in San Antonio, one in Austin and one in Corpus Christi, all of which are under construction.

Grozier offers a turnkey franchise, which includes training, building, site location, inventory and "know-how" for about $45,000.

"This is a lucrative business. Our cost is so low that we can break even on only 45 tapes per day. To not rent 45 tapes a day, you would have to turn the fire hose on waiting customers," he joked.

"Video Digest reports that only 12 percent of video customers actually find what they are looking for."

A big part of the expertise, Grozier says is knowing which tapes to buy and how to get rid of the stale inventory: "We use a point system that includes the star, director, distributor and other factors. We assign a point value to each factor and that tells us which releases to buy and how many.

"We later cross-check our formula with Billboard magazine, and its ranking of top releases to make sure it is working correctly." Grozier says new releases have to be purchased far in advance of Billboard's listings, otherwise the opportunity has already been lost.

"We can't afford to have a tape on the shelf that might rent. We have to have a sure-thing."

To make room for new releases he sells his "stale" tapes to wholesalers who in turn resell to convenience stores.

Grozier says he hopes to sell 1,000 units by 1992, a goal that will safely put the former manual laborer into the millionaire ranks.

He expects to have locations in Midland-Odessa within a few months.

TEXAS

Most of Kwik-Kopy's income is derived from a percentage of each store's gross sales. Royalties range from 4 percent to 8 percent, depending on the gross monthly sales of an individual franchise.

"You sell a guy a printing press, so you make $2,000 on it — what have you done? That's not our business," Hadfield said. "My job is to do two basic things for franchise owners: what they can't do for themselves, and what they won't do for themselves."

Few of the franchisees get their supplies from or have vendor contracts with Kwik-Kopy.

Because most of Kwik-Kopy's growing income flows from franchise fees, the company concentrates instead on improving the profits of individual franchises through marketing and close monitoring of each operation.

"If you and I have an oil well, we make sure that damn thing's greased and running well or the oil won't come up," Hadfield said. "We make sure our centers are running right. The royalties can't come if the sales drop."

Kwik-Kopy is 30 percent employee-owned, which Hadfield said gives employees a personal incentive to solve the problems of franchise owners. The company also has created a computer tracking system to assure that every franchise problem or request is answered quickly, he said.

"In today's economy and changing technological patterns, I think their research with new equipment and new methods of doing business is probably the greatest help," said Jim Spencer, who opened a Kwik-Kopy center in Houston 12½ years ago.

"A small business owner doesn't really have time to do things like that, but if you're off by yourself you could be obsolete in a few years the way this industry changes."

To Hadfield, who recalls the early days in Houston when meals did not always come regularly and he was "never more than three paychecks from being medically indigent," the company he founded has fostered the same type of entrepreneurial drive with far fewer risks.

"We furnish discipline for them and we structure it for them," he said. "They have to try very hard to hurt themselves."

Basin, U.S. rig tallies rebound

From Staff Reports

The U.S. rig count rebounded from its 45-rig drop last week, and the Permian Basin count continued to rise, Baker Hughes Inc. reported. .

The U.S. tally jumped 26 to stand at 923, the company reported.

At the same time, the Basin total rose three to stand at 110.

Lea County, N.M. continues to be the most active in the Basin, with 14 rigs at work. Second is Eddy County, N.M. with nine. Midland County remained stable with six rigs.

Runnels County and Roosevelt County N.M. each gained new activity, while Coke and Hale counties were left with no drilling activity this week.

Among major oil producing states, Louisiana posted the biggest gain with 16 additional rigs, followed by Oklahoma, 10; North Dakota, two; and California, Colorado and Ohio, one each.

Michigan had the biggest decline with 3 fewer rigs, followed by Kansas, New Mexico, Pennsylvania and Wyoming, with two each. Texas was unchanged for the week.

Drilling expenditures, completions fall

From Staff Reports

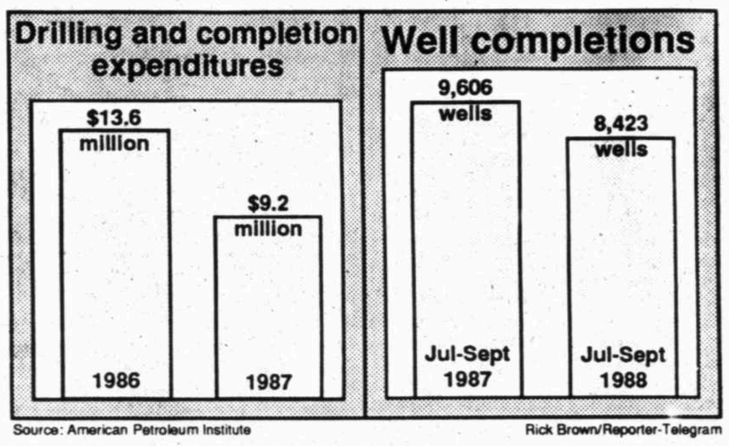
Total expenditures for drilling and equipping oil and gas wells and dry holes in 1987 fell 31.8 percent from the previous year, according to the American Petroleum Institute's "Joint Association Survey on Drilling Costs."

At the same time, the API's quarterly completion report noted that estimated completions of oil wells, natural gas wells and dry holes during the third quarter of 1988 were off 12.3 percent from the same three months in 1987.

The joint survey, conducted by the API, the Independent Petroleum Association of America and the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association found that total expenditures for drilling and equipment totaled $9.2 billion, down from $13.6 billion spent in 1986.

The survey also found that the total number of producing wells and dry holes declined in 1987, as did total footage drilled. The average depth per well increased slightly due to greater oil well depths. The average cost per well and the drilling cost per foot fell sharply from 1986 levels. Dry hole costs fell by one-third, gas well costs fell 25 percent and oil well costs were down 15 percent.

The total cost of offshore wells and dry holes completed last year amounted to approximately $2.1 billion, a plunge of 42.9 percent from 1986.



Source: American Petroleum Institute

Rick Brown/Reporter-Telegram

API's quarterly report indicated that a total of 8,423 oil or gas wells and dry holes were completed during the July to September period, down from 9,606 completed in the same three months of 1987.

For the first nine months of the year, estimated completions were 1.1 percent below those of a year ago — from 25,222 to 24,951 this year, the API said.

The API found a decline in oil wells and dry holes drilled and an increase in gas wells. Despite the decline in estimated completions, the group reported that footage drilled rose from 114,983,000 to 121,285,000.

The number of exploratory wells drilled declined during the third quarter and was stable during the first nine months of 1988. The estimated number of exploratory wells, gas wells and dry holes completed totaled 1,748, down from 1,797 during the same period of a year ago. The estimated number of completions during the first nine months amounted to 4,834 — slightly more than the 4,814 completions during the January-September period of 1987.

More drilling permits issued in October

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — The number of drilling permits issued by the Railroad Commission rose in October, the commission reported.

In October, a total of 1,139 permits wer issued, up from the 1,125 issued in September.

The October total included 772 permits to drill new oil and gas tests, 37 to re-enter existing well bores, 32 to deepen exiting holes, 157 to plugback existing holes, and 15 for other wells. Operators were also issued 126 amended drilling permits.

Of the permits for new oil and gas holes, 88 were issued in the Midland area (District 8), 82 in the Lubbock area (District 8A) and 53 in the San Angelo area, (District 7C).

The 1,139 permits issued in October included 488 oil permits, 199 gas permits, 395 oil and gas permits, 37 injection permits, 10 disposal permits and 10 other permits.

In the first 10 months of 1988, the commission has issued 11,954 drilling permits, a 14.7 percent decrease from the 14,020 issued during the same period of 1987.

Gas completions up, oil completions down

AUSTIN — Texas oil and gas operators reported 241 gas and 454 oil completions in October, according to the Railroad Commission. In September, operators reported 192 gas and 509 oil completions.

There were nine gas completions and 88 oil completions in the Midland area.

Average crude production lower in August

AUSTIN — Texas crude oil production averaged 1,869,788 barrels daily in August, according to preliminary figures from the Railroad Commission.

This compares with preliminary July production of 1,879,744 barrels daily. Final production reports for Luly indicated average production at 1,893,019 barrels daily.

Natural gas production increases in August

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission reported that Texas oil and gas wells produced 480,541,287 Mcf of gas in August, up from the 465,592,739 Mcf produced in July. August production was 5.7 percent higher than August 987 production of 454,627,494 Mcf.

Commissioners grant 22 pipeline permits

AUSTIN — Railroad Commissioners issued 22 permits for new pipelines in October, up from the six granted in September.

Of the new permits, 13 were for gathering pipelines, six were for trunk transmission lines, one was for a distribution line, and two were for multi-purpose and other lines.

Daring farmers en'dive' into specialty farming

Harvests range from fish to fowl to tires

By DAN GILLMORE
New York Times News Service

Belgian endive may not have been the biggest issue of the recent presidential campaign, but it made news in the farm belt.

In a campaign stop in Omaha, Dan Quayle attacked Gov. Michael Dukakis's one-time focus on Belgian endive as the kind of alternative crop that American farmers should consider. "He suggested blueberries and Belgian endive," said the Republican vice-presidential candidate, holding aloft an endive and drawing laughs from his farm audience.

"Endive," he continued as the laughter died. "Well, if you start growing these little white things, don't count on paying off the farm."

Well, in fact, a growing number of farmers in the Middle West and elsewhere are not amused.

They are looking to pay off their houses and equipment from the sale of endive, blueberries, broccoli and an assortment of other specialty products in addition to such traditional crops as hay, corn and soybeans.

"Diversification" is the popular byword, and it has come to mean a variety of crops and techniques. It stands for a farmer's desire to become less dependent on the whims of commodity traders in Chicago.

Thousands of farmers are finding new niche opportunities in producing a variety of new crops and marketing old ones in fresh ways.

There are no numbers to chronicle the spread of farm diversification, but anecdotal evidence abounds.

"It's dangerous to generalize," said Richard Krumme, editor of Successful Farming magazine, which sponsors an annual conference on diversified agriculture. "But there is a lot of interest in diversification, and some action. We've seen quite a few success stories — and a few failures."

The Successful Farming conferences have drawn a total of 10,000 participants since they began two years ago, and Krumme said "not a week goes by" that he isn't asked to speak on the subject.

NEARLY EVERY agriculture state, he said, has opened an office to provide farmers with growing and marketing advice linked to diversification.

For farmers in the corn belt and the Great Plains, diversification recalls a past era when farms were small, self-sufficient and grew many crops. But, since World War II, industrial-scale single-crop farms largely took over, aided by new machinery and low energy and chemical costs.

While this allowed farmers to enjoy some economies of scale, it also left them more vulnerable to the vagaries of the market and the weather.

Middle West farms are just beginning to rebound somewhat from the near-Depression conditions that prevailed in the mid-1980s, when commodity surpluses led to falling prices and widespread bankruptcies.

This summer's drought has dramatically slashed the surpluses in major commodities such as wheat, corn and soybeans, which, in turn, has boosted prices for farmers who have these crops to sell. And, the high prices may encourage other growers to plant more of these traditional crops next year.

But the diversification move has already gained its own momentum since it began about five years ago. And it may be strengthened over time by the risks inherent in the single-crop approach.

A return to normal weather in the coming years could bring back oversupplies and with that, lower prices.

THE RELENTLESS SUN of last summer baked Russ and Diane Erdman's farm in Alma, Mo. But unlike some Missouri growers, the Erdmans at least had something to sell this year: blueberries, blackberries and tomatoes, all of which survived with irrigation.

The Erdmans planted these dinner-table crops in recent years to supplement, and perhaps someday even replace, the family's more traditional dairy, hay, corn and soybean operations.

It cost about $5,000 per acre to prepare the land, including installation of the irrigation system, for these crops. The berries, which are sold on a pick-your-own basis, and the tomatoes, which supply a Kansas City-area supermarket, are bringing in an operating profit, although it will be several years before the capital investment is paid off.

Bill and Becci Ehm of Creston, Iowa, veterans of the diversification trend, began to grow specialty crops seven years ago and opted for new twists on old standbys.

Besides weaning their fields from chemicals, the Ehms planted edible beans, alfalfa hay and popcorn to supplement traditional row crops. And they started a custom-feeding operation that supplies hay and grain for other farmers' livestock.

The Ehms are making money. The edible beans, for example, command substantially higher prices than regular soybeans, and the high-quality hay is in great demand.

"I made a long-term commitment, and I'm going to stick it out," Bill Ehm said.

Other specialty crops currently being grown or tested include birdseed, asparagus, herbs, shiitake mushrooms and ginseng. And, farmers with wood lots are even selling Christmas trees and firewood.

Small-scale animal production is appealing as well. Some farmers have taken to raising such creatures as buffalo, mink, llama, gamebirds and deer. One Oklahoma man even operates an ostrich farm.

YET ANOTHER MAJOR, and apparently very promising, area is aquaculture: fish farming.

In 1980, American aquaculture produced 200 million pounds of fish and shellfish from farms, according to Bille Hougart, director of the USDA's Office of Aquaculture. By 1987, this rose to to 700 million pounds and had a market value of $500 million, the USDA's Economic Research Service reports. The department is spending $20 million this year on aquaculture research.

"Catfish is now the biggest cash crop in Mississippi," said Hougart, adding that it accounts for some 25,000 to 30,000 jobs.

Diversification, for all its benefits, is no panacea. While there are many markets for growers near major cities, the same is not true in rurul areas. If just two farmers in the same rural county raise broccoli, they could glut the local market.

"The niches are very small," said Krumme at Successful Farming magazine. "By the time you've read about it, the niche is filled."

EURICIC ACID vegetable oil, an extract from a large group of plants, including rapeseed and crambe, is not recommended as part of the human diet because it can severely damage the liver. But scientists have devised ways to chemically rearrange it into something resembling crude oil. From that state it can be further refined into plastics and other useful products.

Rapeseed and crambe, which grow in several areas including the Great Plains, are among the plants that researchers and farmers are increasingly viewing as possible new sources of industrial raw materials and other products. Agriculture Department officials predict that some 5 million acres could be turned over to these crops in the years ahead.

"There isn't going to be a single wonder crop," said Melvin G. Blase, professor of agriculture economics at the University of Missouri-Columbia. "But we do see a number that have significant industrial potential."

Blase was a member of the secretary of agriculture's New Farm and Forest Products Task Force, which urged last year that greater attention be paid to such crops, both for economic and strategic reasons. Not only would farmers benefit, the report said, but national security would be enhanced.

Defense officials, for example, are concerned about the supply of natural rubber, which is used in aircraft tires among many other products. All of it is now imported.

The Departments of Defense and Agriculture are sponsoring a pilot project in Arizona to grow and process guayule, from which they will extract natural rubber and other materials.

Hevea trees, found mostly in Southeast Asia, now account for the vast majority of the world's natural rubber. Guayule, a drought-tolerant, latex-producing shrub that grows well in the American Southwest, is not yet cost-competitive with hevea, said Richard Wheaton, director of the Agriculture Department's Critical Materials Office.

BUT THAT MAY CHANGE in a few years, especially if other useful substances can be derived from guayule. Wheaton estimates that if the United States were to supply 25 percent of domestic natural rubber needs with guayule, it would require nearly 1.5 million acres of production.

Still another promising plant is kenaf, a fiber product that grows best in the South. Kenaf already has been used to produce newsprint, and a newsprint mill that will convert kenaf to paper is now being built in Texas.

"These are all non-food products," Wheaton noted. "It's a different way of looking at agriculture's role."

IT'S ONE THING to produce an alternative crop. It's another to sell it.

Local grain elevators and cooperatives, futures trading and other components are all part of a well-tuned, international marketing infrastructure that takes grains from the farm to the market.

But with the exception of farmers' markets in towns and cities, no such framework exists for small growers of fruits, vegetables and other edible alternative crops to get to market.

Because of this, public and private groups, including governments at every level and a growing number of businesses and foundations, are beginning to devise ways to bring crops and consumers together.

States, in particular, are promoting home-grown crops. Among the most successful are fresh fruits and vegetables.

Take tomatoes, for example: Consumers, long resigned to the pulpy baseballs called tomatoes that arrive from California, gleefully scoop up the fresher local tomatoes — even if they do cost more.

States along the East Coast — Massachusetts and New Jersey, in particular — boast some of the most ambitious programs designed to link local farmers with consumers.

Providing market information is a vital task for the state and local agencies. "People have to ask first whether they have a market before they start growing things," said Chris Carlson, county agent in Madison County, Neb.

Missouri's program, like most others, started small, but has experienced steady growth.

AgriMissouri, which began in 1985 and now receives about $200,000 a year in funding, is a state program to make consumers more aware of Missouri products and help growers find markets. This still, however, is small when compared to programs for traditional crops.

The Erdmans, the Missouri family that grows berries and tomatoes, contacted AgriMissouri when they began selling their tomatoes, said Mark Russell, program coordinator of domestic marketing at the Missouri Department of Agriculture. AgriMissouri helped set up a promotional display of the Erdmans' tomatoes and another farmer's bacon at a Kansas City-area supermarket that now sells the tomatoes.

BY THE END of the year, Russell said, some 200 grocery stores and supermarkets will be promoting Missouri products. "Quality, value and freshness are the terms we want to be linked to Missouri products," he said.

PBPA examines fiscal issues

From Staff Reports

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association and Peat Marwick Main & Co will co-host a seminar on fiscal projections for the oil and gas industry Thursday at the Midland Hilton Hotel.

The seminar will feature Michael O. Landers, a Peat Marwick principal in New Orleans and a specialist in oil and gas regulations, along with Thomas A. Petrie, managing director of First Boston Corp. for international investment banking and James LeBos, a senior tax analyst with the State Comptroller's office in Austin.

The seminar is designed to provide oil and gas producers and other energy related executives with an updat on current energy developments including: federal regulation, state fiscal policy, projected taxation and energy valuation and investment trends.

Seminar topics include mergers and acquisitions, drilling economics, prospects for capital flow, regulatory changes in pricing and transporation, natural gas marketing, market opportunities and revenue sources.

The seminar will also look at state budget estimates for 1989-90 and issues facing the 71st State Legislature.

HDTV key to electronic sales growth

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The United States could lose its lead in international markets for personal computers, automated manufacturing equipment and semiconductors if American industry fails to become a leading player in the emerging market for high-definition television, the American Electronics Association warned Tuesday.

The trade group released a study that said that high-definition television — which is expected to produce pictures as sharp and detailed as movie images — will have a broad impact on other areas of the electronics industry.

Analysts expect consumers to spend about $50 billion a year on high-definition equipment, like video-cassette recorders and television sets, by the end of the next decade.

The technology that will produce high-definition television, known as HDTV, is expected to have applications in other fields. For example, the advanced semiconductors, video display screens and other components that would be used in new transmission equipment and television sets could also be used in the next generation of personal computer products or manufacturing equipment.

Many industry analysts have predicted that foreign manufacturers, led by the Japanese, would dominate the HDTV market as they now control other areas of consumer electronics in the United States. The Zenith Electronics Corp. is the only big maker of television sets left in America. And Zenith is under pressure from a dissident shareholder group that wants the television operations sold to foreigners.

"HDTV will provide the very lifeblood for existing and future technologies — non-participation in HDTV means a loss of both broad technological know-how and an expanded potential for skilled electronics employment," Pat Hill Hubbard, the association's vice president, said in a statement.

The group's study was based on a statistical analysis of the electronics industry and interviews with industry executives, market research firms and trade officials.

The report said the U.S. share of the worldwide personal computer market, which now stands at 70 percent, would drop to 35 percent by 2010 if American companies obtain less than 10 percent of the high-definition market. To maintain its 70 percent stake, the United States would have to claim 50 percent of the new market.

Although America produces about 35 percent of the world's automated manufacturing equipment, it could lose 7 percent of this market if it does not gain at least 30 percent of the HDTV market by 2010, the survey said.

American semiconductor manufacturers control 41 percent of the international market, but the survey said that stake could erode to 21 percent by 2010 if the United States share of high-definition television is 10 percent or less.

Ms. Hubbard said the study was aimed at promoting discussion about the impact of high-definition television on the nation's economic and technological competitiveness.

She said the electronics association, which represents about 3,500 high-technology companies had formed a task force to study ways of getting domestic companies to participate in the new market.

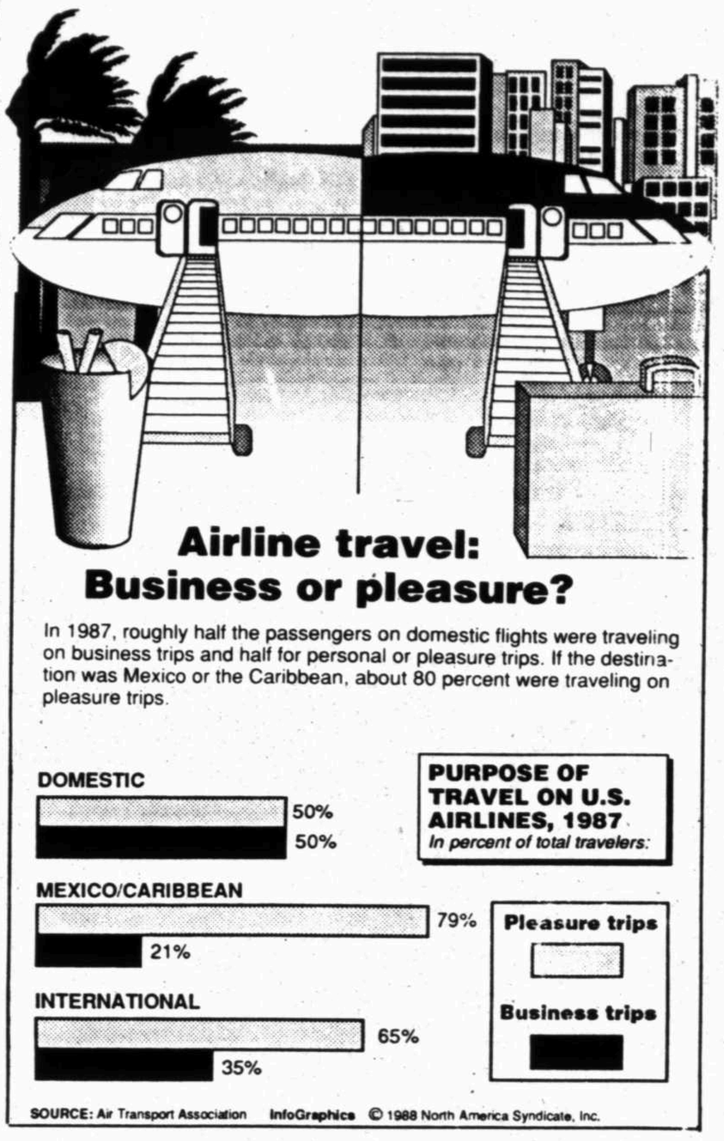
BUSINESS TRAVEL

Eurostyle hotel comforts wary, weary in New York



By CHRIS BARNETT
Copley News Service

NEW YORK CITY — Tired of king-size Big Apple hotels that herd you around like less-than-prime beef on the hoof? That are so far uptown or downtown, bunking in becomes a costly commute? Or, are so expensive you need Donald Trump's per diem just to walk in the door?

Check out one of Manhattan's best-kept secrets — The Grand Bay Hotel — located in an area once avoided by just about everyone except playgoers and panhandlers. But its West 51st and 7th Avenue address, on the edge of the Theater District, has long been convenient and now it's becoming chic.

Better yet, the 178-room hostelry is quiet and, thanks to its relatively low profile, uncrowded.

That appeals to travelers like Frank Dietrick, a paralegal with a Philadelphia law firm, who works regularly in its New York office, and recently discovered the Grand Bay.

"This place is quiet, classy and I don't want to stay anywhere near noisy conventioneers. Plus, I love the giant bathtubs."

Dietrick is not kiddi..g. Indeed, you can have an intimate two-person meeting in one tub and have room to spare. But Dietrick, who claims he "can stay anywhere I want in New York," checks in here because "it's small, friendly and they remember your name."

The Grand Bay clearly has an Old World ambience, sort of like a hide-away hotel you might find off a side street in Florence or Venice.

The lobby floors are Italian marble, the furnishings are Louis XII and a mammoth crystal chandelier spreads a warm glow over the main floor and the Lobby Lounge where Dietrick and I are sitting at the bar.

What is more, this isn't "instant" Old World. The Grand Bay is the once-glamorous 65-year-old Taft Hotel with a $150 million face-lift.

The hotel seems to have invested in friendly people, as well. Somehow, an end-of-the-day $7.50 martini made with Bombay's new Sapphire gin doesn't seem outrageously priced when you consider it includes the wit and wisdom of barkeeps Brian Sharkey and Charlie Lynch, the friendly smile and pleasant personality of cocktail waitress Shauna Ellis and the mellow sounds of jazz pianist Harold Danko who tickles the ivories in the lounge.

And when you add in the delicate, complimentary canapes — no cheddar and crackers, but shrimp in dill sauce, smoked salmon, eggs sprinkled with caviar — and a setting that feels like the private bar of an Italian count, that martini is a bargain.

As for the congenial crew, it turns out they aren't hotel lifers but talents whose name or face may someday grace marquees and magazine pages.

Lynch, an actor, made his Broadway debut with the original company of "Hair." Ellis has appeared in advertisements for Karl Lagerfeld fragrances. Danko's repertoire of Jerome Kern, Rodgers and Hart and Broadway show tunes keeps his calendar booked.

And it may also explain why the little-known Lobby Lounge in this discreet hotel has attracted the likes of Mick Jagger, Johnny Carson, Julio Iglesias and Richard Dreyfuss.

Upstairs, the Grand Bay's regular rooms, starting at $235, are not all that spacious but they are plush and comfy. (There are also 52 suites of various sizes if you need more room.)

Each room has a desk, two-line telephones so your customers never get an annoying busy signal. There is free Evian water, a mind-boggling array of TV and cable channels and a TV in the bathroom so you can soak in that monster 55-gallon tub and catch the evening news before going out.

A thoughtful amenity: for $15, you can rent a beeper. A shortcoming: no views of the Manhattan skyline.

Depending on your budget and your schedule, client dinner dates can be a problem here. The Grand Bay has a dining room all right, but it's only opened for breakfast at this point. Otherwise, make reservations elsewhere for lunch and dinner.

Now if you have a brawny expense account or a host who wants to impress you, this is surely the place to stay. No more than 25 steps from the front door are four of the hottest — and priciest — restaurants in New York City.

Bellini's by Cipriani has waiters who are so attentive, it is almost an embarrassing restaurant. Harry Cipriani, who owns/runs the Harry's Bar in Venice where Hemingway did actually, honestly, hang out, drink and write, has a nice, bright bistro where champagne, Manhattans and appetizers for two cost me about $80, plus tip.

Across the street in the Equitable Center is a trio of restaurants favored by Wall Streeters when they are dining uptown — Le Bernardin and Palio (raves all around) and actress Mariel Hemingway's new place, Sam's. Otherwise, you might have to walk a block or two to the Carnegie or Stage delis for a pastrami on rye.

While the hotel is ideally situated for walkers — all the best corporate addresses are only a few blocks away — runners have Central Park nearby. And if you have to go downtown, notes Sales Director Robin Wald, there's a free limousine at your disposal. Just ring the concierge. There is one on duty around the clock — a service few hotels in the world offer.

The man-who-makes-it-happen is Giorgio Finocchiaro, chief concierge and a member of the prestigious Les Clef D'Or. He can get super-scarce "Phantom of the Opera" tickets, but expect to pay $150 per, immediate reservations at his favorite classic Italian restaurant, San Domenico on Central Park South, a pair of cuff links or a contract typed, copied and faxed.

Business travelers bearing brunt of latest round of air fare hikes

DALLAS (AP) — Jettisoning of most Dallas flights by Braniff Inc. has caused the types of air fares most often used by businesses to skyrocket, and travelers are complaining about the increases.

Travelers buying tickets a day or so before they have to fly, a common occurrence for business customers, said they are paying almost double what they paid only six months ago.

Rich Lantz, who flies from Dallas to Boston on business, sometimes takes an unwanted side trip to Houston. Although it adds at least three hours to his round trip, the detour saves Lantz's company $247 in fares.

"It's cheaper for me to fly to Houston and catch a flight there to Boston than it is to fly non-stop to Boston from Dallas," said Lantz, a district sales representative for a Boston-based company that makes electron microscopes.

"I'm under a budget, and I have to fly to Boston once a month," he said Monday. "I'm willing to change planes to save that much money."

Rivals American Airlines Inc. and Delta Air Lines Inc. until recently matched Braniff's unrestricted discount fares in major business markets, such as New York, Washington, D.C., Chicago and Los Angeles.

An unrestricted fare has no advance purchase requirements, cancellation penalties or Saturday night stay requirement.

But after Braniff was acquired last summer by an East Coast investment group with financial aid from American, it dropped almost all of its routes out of Dallas. Soon, American and Delta discontinued their own unrestricted discount fares for business travelers.

Travel agents in the Dallas area say that their business clients are becoming so frustrated with mounting fares that they have cut back on their trips.

"I have a bunch of businessmen who are up in arms about American Airlines," said Kathy Thompson, manager of Park Central Travel Agency Inc. in Dallas. "I don't see why they're penalizing the segment of the population that supports them so strongly — the business traveler."

American spokesman Steve McGregor said the Fort Worth-based airline did not like Braniff's low fares "but we had to match them in many markets for competitive reasons. When Braniff left those markets, they took those fares with them."

Options for business travelers will narrow even more later this month, when so-called junk fares, discounts that require only a three- or seven-day advance purchase, will be discontinued by most major U.S. carriers.

MUG SHOT OF THE WEEK
As the crime continues yet two more Midland companies reported being mugged by Temporary Resources.
Marie Romero of Calgon Corp. and Brynda Kenney of Oxy USA Inc. told authorities that Patricia de Little of Temporary Resources mugged them and left as evidence T-shirts and a free for two a Jorge's.
Ms. Romero said that after trying other companies she had decided that Temporary Resources had the best workers and most prompt service she had ever seen. Ms. Kenney agreed, adding that Oxy U.S.A. had used workers from Temporary Resources for more than 8 years.

Arguing for fiscal fairness proves taxing

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — Nobody in recent years has been able to demonstrate that taxes are fair. The claim is made — every time the tax laws are changed, in fact — but the proof isn't provided.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Is it right, for example, to impose big tax burdens on young singles who have few items to deduct? Should corporate dividends be taxed twice, as they are? Do homeowners really deserve the tax shelter they have?

Almost anyone can compile a list of "inequities" in the tax laws. They write to Congress, and Congress then rearranges the tax laws. It has done so every year of this decade, closing loopholes, opening others.

And next year, if President-elect George Bush follows through on campaign indications, Congress may be asked to deal with an aspect of the tax law that many people consider to be not just inequitable but just plain foolish.

It is the tax on income that never was made, on buying power that never existed, on funds that the person taxed never had the use of. It is the capital gains tax which, as it exists, taxes a person for inflation.

For example, assume an investment of $5,000 in stocks has been held seven years. If the appreciation avéraged 10 percent over that time you will have approximately doubled your money. Your capital gains would be $5,000, your tax about $1,400.

While you might appear to have earned 10 percent in current dollars, you really would have earned only 6 percent a year. Why? Because the value of the dollar changed. Inflation probably eroded 4 percent a year.

At 6 percent a year your money will not double in seven years. It will grow only to around $7,000. Nevertheless, you will pay capital gains taxes as if it had grown to $10,000. You will pay $1,400 in taxes.

Deducting the taxes from the inflation-adjusted total amount earned will leave you with just $5,600 — an average gain of $100 a year or less for having invested your savings in the American economy.

As the law exists, capital gains — which are long-term gains and thus vulnerable to inflation — are taxed at the same 28 percent rate as ordinary income, which suffers relatively little from inflation.

It is for reasons such as this that Bush mentioned the possibility of pushing back the capital gains tax rate, which was raised in the 1986 tax reform measure. But there is more to it than the inequity.

The repercussions of the current level of capital gains shows up every day in the securities markets, where individual investors refrain from buying stocks and opt instead for the lower risk of interest-bearing bonds.

Paying taxes on money never earned isn't restricted to the securities markets. In fact, the most common abuse of common sense occurs in the taxing of capital gains "earned" on the inflated value of personal residences.

In this latter instance, however, homeowners are accorded various tax benefits that offset some of the damage. In most other investments, however, there is no relief.

In such investments, the investor simply pays taxes on "income" that was never made.

GAO seeks S&L liquidation

By BILL MINTZ
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The General Accounting Office has recommended that insolvent savings and loans be liquidated since the policy of keeping troubled thrifts alive in Texas and elsewhere has failed.

"The time has come to move as quickly as possible to close insolvent institutions," said the GAO, the investigative arm of Congress. "Trying to keep ailing thrifts open...simply delayed the inevitable while adding to the eventual costs."

The recommendation was included in one of a series of GAO reports on issues that will face Congress and the Bush administration.

Resolving the crisis will cost an estimated $50 billion to $100 billion, the report said.

The GAO blamed the crisis on poorly implemented deregulation, mismanagement and depressed regional economies.

Under its Southwest Plan for dealing with problems in Texas, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board is merging groups of troubled thrifts with money from private investors and large doses of government funds.

Ten deals involving 55 Texas thrifts have already occurred, costing the government $15 billion. The Bank Board is working on several more deals involving dozens of Texas institutions.

The GAO said the Bank Board should close insolvent thrifts and pay off depositors.

Regulators are showing signs of agreeing with the GAO. Roger Martin, a member of the Bank Board, said last week that some deeply troubled Texas institutions would be liquidated.

The statement marked a shift from earlier comments by Bank Board officials, who said all ailing Texas thrifts would be resolved through mergers and other Southwest Plan transactions.

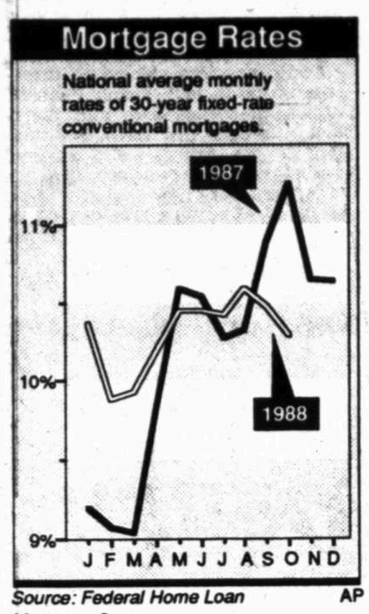
Mortgage rates expected to rise in 1989



Source: Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. AP

By RALPH BIVINS
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Home buyers will face higher mortgage interest rates at the beginning of next year, followed by a decline in rates at the end of 1989, the chief economist for the National Association of Realtors said this week.

Association economist John A. Tuccillo said, "We're looking for a period of 11 percent or 11.5 percent early in 1989 and a decline in rates by the end of the year."

The policies of the Federal Reserve Board to control inflation will cause interest rates to increase in the face of pressures from the federal deficit and the savings and loan crisis, he said.

David F. Seiders, economist for the National Association of Home Builders, predicted mortgage rates will increase even more — to as much as 12 percent by mid-1989.

But Laurence Meyer of Washington University, another economist participating in a panel discussion at the National Association of Realtors annual convention, predicted mortgage rates will remain stable.

The Realtors group predicts an annual average rate of 11.1 per cent on 30-year home loans in 1989, up from the 10.6 percent average expected for 1988.

The rising rates contribute to a bleak outlook for the construction of new homes in 1989.

"Higher rates are never good for housing," Seiders said.

The Realtors group and the home-builders association expect a 6 percent decline in new home starts in 1989 from this year's level. Meyer forecast a 3 percent decline in housing starts.

Other forecasts for 1989 by the Realtors association include:

A 5 percent decline in sales of used homes, meaning 3.3 million houses will be sold next year, compared to 3.5 million in 1988.

A 5 percent increase in home prices. The annual median price of the nation's single-family house will rise from $90,000 in 1988 to $94,400 next year.

A 6 percent increase in the median price for new homes, from $114,000 in 1988 to $121,000 next year.

An average initial adjustable rate mortgage rate of 8.2 percent, up from 7.6 percent in 1988.

A slowing in the construction of apartments, townhomes and condominiums, from 392,000 units in 1988 to 368,000 in 1989.

Several of the economists expressed concern about the multi-family housing industry, saying high vacancies in apartments were "disturbing" and that few markets offered opportunities for profitable new construction.

But Emmett DeMoss, executive vice president of Grubb & Ellis Co., said a slowdown in new home purchases will increase demand for apartments. That will cause more investors to be attracted to apartment projects, he said.

DeMoss said pension funds, which own about $72 billion in U.S. real estate will be seeking to expand their real estate portfolios in 1989.

Markets shaky despite steady economy

BUSINESS NEWS ANALYSIS

By LOUIS UCHITELLE
New York Times News Service

With the dollar's latest plunge and the drop in stock prices, one might think that the financial markets were reacting to dangerous or disastrous developments in the economy.

But that is not the case.

The economy has been perking along at the same moderate pace for two or three months, and economists say it might continue to do so next year as well.

"There was nothing in the latest data to change this assessment," said Albert T. Sommers, a senior economist at the Conference Board, a business organization.

Indeed, most of the economic news in recent days would have been regarded earlier in the year as good news for the markets.

The Commerce Department, for example, reported that exports had reached a record level and imports had dropped in September — just the sort of shrinkage in the trade deficit that had prompted stock market rallies last summer.

"It was the trade number everyone wanted and expected and yet the stock market collapsed," said Stephen S. Roach, senior economist at Morgan Stanley & Co., referring to the 38.59-point drop in the Dow Jones Industrial average last Wednesday, the day of the report.

In addition, the latest figures on retail sales, industrial production, inventories and housing — all released in the past 10 days — tended to endorse a widely held view that the economy continues to grow, but with few inflationary pressures.

The dollar and stock prices do not do well in inflationary periods. Shareholders often switch to bonds or other interest-bearing securities to earn the high interest rates that usually come with inflation.

The dollar often declines because inflation chips away at its purchasing power, prompting foreign investors to sell their dollars for stronger currencies.

But inflationary pressures have not increased in recent months, economists say.

"There is still the same mixture of strengths and weakness that have been evident all along," said Edward McKelvey, a senior economist at Goldman, Sachs.

Richard Freeman, a Harvard economist, added, "The economy is growing, but with as many signs of disinflation as inflation."

Clearly, the markets, in dropping over the past two weeks, were reacting chiefly to fears that the industrial nations might not continue to support the dollar after the election, or that President-elect Bush will not act soon enough or toughly enough to reduce the budget deficit.

But while these fears were real, the actual economy had not really changed, nor had the seriousness of the budget deficit, now being financed in part by foreign investors.

If they were to withdraw their support, interest rates might rise and borrowing and spending could drop, possibly causing a recession.

The budget problem has existed for most of the Reagan years and has been the subject of frequent warnings from Federal Reserve chairmen — first Paul A. Volcker and lately Alan Greenspan.

Last week Greenspan frightened the markets by repeating the warning that interest rates will have to rise if the administration and Congress fail to reduce the budget deficit soon.

Greenspan has made this statement before, without roiling the financial markets.

Until the stock market crash last year, many economists and market experts had thought that stock prices reflected the outlook for the economy and for corporate profits.

The crash, according to this view, should have ushered in a recession.

But one did not develop.

Quite the contrary, the October crash came at a time of strong economic growth.

Many economists, partly as a result, have become skeptical of theories linking the behavior of the economy and of market prices — not only stock prices, but also the value of bonds and the dollar.

To be sure, nearly everyone acknowledges some linkage, but economists have turned increasingly to other explanations of why stocks, bonds and foreign exchange fluctuate in value.

"Most people are coming to realize that it is very hard to pin day-to-day changes in the markets on what is really happening in the economy," said Peter L. Bernstein, an economic consultant in New York.

Instead, psychological factors are cited, like the fears engendered by the deficit, or the tendency among managers of multibillion-dollar portfolios to mimic each other's investment practices.

Whatever the explanation for the market turmoil, the economy itself has remained on a fairly steady course, explained by two prevailing views.

One is that the economy is growing more slowly today than it was in the first half of the year, as measured by the gross national product.

The second is that no one can divine yet, from the available data, whether the slowdown will continue, thus tilting the economy toward recession, or whether the growth rate might reverse and accelerate again.

The most recent statistics fail to resolve the uncertainty.

They suggest that the economy could go in either direction.

Retail sales, for example, rose sharply in September, the Commerce Department reported. That would seem to signal an acceleration in economic growth, if not for the fact that the increase mostly offset earlier declines, McKelvey said.

Opera star thinks music God's will

By GEORGIA TODD TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Just as the tenor was supposed to sing, "But sir, he was only doing his duty," a remarkable thing happened on the opera stage.

"They had a live horse," recalls soprano Paulina Stark during a recent telephone interview.

She begins laughing. She can't stop. After several minutes of listening to peals of laughter, the line becomes quiet again as Mrs. Stark fights for composure.

"The opera was the 'Gypsey Baron' by Strauss," she says, speaking very fast. "The horse walked halfway across the stage and — how do I say this? — fertilized the stage. The tenor changed his line and sang, 'But sir, he was only making his doodie.' The audience was in a shambles. I'm already crying thinking about how funny that was. We were on stage cracking up."

We are on the phone cracking up. Then, Mrs. Stark says, pragmatically, "You never want animals or children on stage with you because they are going to steal the show."

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Christmas Pops does not feature any live animals or children. The performances, scheduled for Thursday in Midland and Saturday in Odessa, do feature Mrs. Stark singing such selections as "Panis Angelicus" by Franck, "Ave Maria" by Schubert, "Jesu Bambino" by Yon and "Cantique de Noel" by Adam.

"I have done a lot of symphony pops concerts all around with many different orchestras, and I get a special pleasure out of doing those kinds of concerts," she says.

In addition, the program includes "A Christmas Treat" by Bowden, "The Many Moods of Christmas," Suite No. 1, by Shaw Bennett, "Winter Medley" arranged by Carmichael, an audience sing a long, "A Christmas Fantasy," by Hermann, "Christmas Ornaments" by Bass, "Sleigh Ride" by Anderson and "Silent Night Recessional" by Gruber.

The Midland performance, sponsored by Texas American Bank and Hy-Bon Engineering, is sold out. Tickets are available for the Odessa performance, sponsored by Shell Oil Company, at Odessa Holiday Inn Centre at 8 p.m. Saturday. For more information call the Symphony Concert Line, 563-5269.

A Rice University graduate, whose mother "even graduated from Rice," Mrs. Stark was born in Columbia, South America, and raised in Texas beginning at the age of 4. Most of her training was received in Houston, where she was frequently a leading soprano with the Houston Grand Opera.

"They would bring in the most famous singers in the world, and I would sing opposite them — Cornell MacNeil and John Alexander. Then I started singing a lot with orchestras including the Houston Symphony.

"Houston was my center, really my base. Then I started traveling and doing things nationally and internationally."

Her career began with winning a talent show.

"I was a winner on the Arthur Godfrey National Talent Scout Show — I can't believe I'm saying this," Mrs. Stark says. She laughs, recalling how long ago that competition was held.

Mrs. Stark feels she was destined to be in music.

"I think that was just God's will always. I was always destined to be in music. It kind of fell in my lap. I just was always, through even junior high and high school, the lead in this and the lead in that. It just never stopped. I probably wouldn't be good at anything else."

She considers herself "very lucky" to have three children and rear them in a stable home life and have that much experience as a performer without moving to New York.

"How did I manage to live in Texas and end up with a pretty good career?" she asks herself before she can be asked the question.

"I was in the right place at the right time. There's always an element of luck."

Numerous opportunities existed at the time she was living and working in Houston. By living in one place and performing in the community there rather than traveling to perform a "speciality," she developed an ability to handle many styles.

"I sang Bach Society concerts, chamber music concerts, opera, pops, Polish, French and on and on. I developed an enormous repertoire and a closet full of formals." She laughs again and says, "I became very, very versatile."

She has appeared as a soloist with, among others, the Halle Orchestra in England, under the direction of Sir John Barbirolli; with the Monte Carlo Opera Company, under the direction of Lawrence Foster; in concert with chamber orchestra under Lukas Foss; and on National Public Television with composer-conductor David Amram, who has referred to her as "truly a great artist."

When she performs, Mrs. Stark is "in communication with some of the great genius of all time — Brahms, Beethoven. It's more than just recreating the music — recreating the music and doing one's best to be truly a vessel worthy of the music that's flowing through you. It's important to treat it with care and attention to detail. You're not only entering this world, but bringing the audience with you. I hope."

Currently, Mrs. Stark is associate professor of voice at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, a job for which there were 300 applicants.

"That's sobering," she says. "The fact is there are lots of professionals who are not supporting themselves, and they are bleeding."

She tells her students, "If you want to be a performer, do not expect to support yourself through performing, at least not until you are launched. Unless you can get on some sort of contract in Europe — mostly Germany — where they pay a good living wage and constant work."

In the United States, she says, "You're paid when you perform. What if you have a month with no performances? Unless your fee is enough, you can't make it. It's realistic to think many of my students will get jobs in public schools."

For Mrs. Stark, the "most normal progression in the world" for a performer is to want to teach. Performers want to "share what they have learned."

While she is in West Texas, she will give a master class from 2 to 4 p.m. Friday at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin's Founders Building. Those interested in watching the class are invited to do so. For more information call the symphony, 563-5269.

As a performer and as a teacher, Mrs. Stark views music as communication.

"Music is a communication on a different level than the level that we use just to have a conversation. It's communication on a highly spiritual level for me. That's what I get from my music, and that's what I hope to give back to people."

Benatar's star still rising

By GEORGIA TODD TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

In the early 1970s, Brooklyn-born Patricia Andrzejewski, the daughter of a sheet-metal worker and a beautician, intended to use her four-octave voice to pursue a career in opera.

"We were too poor to have air-conditioning, and so we had to keep our windows open during the hot weather," she says.

"I used to do my vocal lessons everyday, and the kid across the street would shout 'shut up' and throw rocks at me. So I had to run across the street all the time and beat him up."

Accepted for admission at the Juilliard School, she backed out at the last minute and enrolled at the State University at Stony Brook with a major in education. The next year she married her boyfriend and, when he was drafted, moved to Richmond, Va., where she worked as a bank teller and moonlighted as a lounge singer.

"I was singing 'Feelings' in a bar at the airport wearing a leopard skin dress with guys spilling drinks all over me."

They returned to New York when his tour of duty was finished and she landed a regular slot as "filler" between comics at Catch A Rising Star, a nightclub on Manhattan's Upper East Side.

"The world is nuts. It's just when you're making records and touring constantly you're not living in the real world. Time kind of stops, and you're not participating. When you finally get a chance to stop and look around at what's going on, sometimes it's not pleasant, and sometimes it's a little frightening..."

— Pat Benatar

She says, her voice "sounded like hell — like Beverly Sills sings 'Satisfaction.'

"I was hiding. You'd go on at 3 a.m. and everybody would be so drunk, no one would pay attention. Then one day in 1978, I started to really come together vocally."

In 1979, she divorced Dennis Benatar and, along with Neil Geraldo and drummer Myron Grombacher, cut her first album — "In the Heat of the Night," which included the singles "Heartbreaker" and "We Live for Love."

Finally, Pat Benatar's star was rising. By 1986, she had amassed five platinums, one double platinum and one quadruple platinum album, four consecutive Grammy awards, a stunning bank account, had remarried and was the mother of a daughter, Haley.

Then, she took a break. For the past few years she has been living in California with her husband, guitarist and producer Neil Geraldo, and their daughter, now 3½ years old.

"Some musicians try to be what they're not. The only time I ever really notice that people get in trouble is when you try to alter what you think is true. When you try to fabricate or do what you think is expected of you rather than what you expect of you, that's when you get in trouble.

"I've certainly learned a lot of big lessons in 10 years. The most important one to me is that you have to just do it for yourself, play it for yourself and write for yourself. You can't even predict what anybody else wants."

Now, she's back with a new album that critics are calling perhaps her best to date, "Wide Awake in Dreamland," co-produced by Geraldo and Peter Coleman. She is on a three-month tour which lands in Odessa this week.

"This record says much of what I wanted to say — things that have been on my mind for a long while," she says.

Ms. Benatar, with her special guest Rhythm Core, will be appearing at the Ector County Coliseum at 8 p.m. Friday.

Tickets, priced at $15 advance and $16 day of show, are available at Endless Horizens in Midland and Odessa, Video To Go in Hobbs, Dan's Records in Pecos, and at the Coliseum Box Office on the day of the show.

When asked if she was concerned that her audience would have forgetten her during the past few years when she was working on this album and not touring, she says, "Of course, absolutely. It's a frightening thing to stay away so long but, at the same time, if you feel that you have to do it, you just have to take your chances.

"In the past, we tried to force ourselves to work quickly so that wouldn't happen. It was a mistake because the records came out prematurely, and the songs hadn't evolved. Having done that, you try something else and hope your fans will understand and be there. The most important thing is that if they aren't, you did the right thing for yourself, which is all you can do."

While much of her past work has dealt with romantic relationships being fought on a battlefield of emotions, "Wide Awake In Dreamland" acknowledges the need for love in honest rockers like "One Love," "Let's Stay Together" and "Don't Walk Away."

On the song "Suffer The Little Children," Ms. Benatar returns to a topic she first explored in "Hell Is For Children," this time based on a true story about a youngster abducted and buried alive.

"I can only write about what genuinely moves me," she says. "That story saddened and disgusted me. I had to write about it."

Similarly in "Cool Zero," Ms. Benatar takes aim on corporate greed: "Watch 'em sell his soul for shoes/ And dance upon his grave."

She has no corporate sponsor and does not endorse products.

"It's not for me. I have nothing against someone making a living — this is America, you have the freedom to do whatever you want.

"The thing that bothers me is that you have a very powerful position and your image, your pictures or whatever, it's associated with a certain image you project — which is music or sports or whatever, that kind of thing. It irritates me to see people using that image to promote products, because that influences people to buy the products solely because of the fact that you're endorsing it.

"And this is especially true...of kids. Kids don't have any idea, they just see so-and-so selling sneakers. They're not buying the sneakers because they like them, they're buying the sneakers because you told them to buy them. It's too incestuous, and it's sending the wrong signal.

"I hope I never have to be in a position where I need the money so bad. But most of the people who do it don't need the money. I don't know why they do it."

The "Wide Awake in Dreamland" album reflects the attitudes and experiences Ms. Benatar and her band members gained during their hiatus.

"The world is nuts. It's just when you're making records and touring constantly you're not living in the real world. Time kind of stops, and you're not participating. When you finally get a chance to stop and look around at what's going on, sometimes it's not pleasant, and sometimes it's a little frightening. That's what's happened to all of us.

"We all have families now, and we've pretty much slowed down our schedules of how we do things. So now you get a chance to really live life like everybody else, instead of being in studios all the time and closed environments that aren't affected. It's really scary for me. When I look around, I can't believe how people treat each other.

"We wanted to write the record because we wanted to say what we were feeling. We have children now, and children make you look at things a lot differently. It's not like your life is over...It's not that selfish anymore. Now you have to worry about life after your life."

MasterPeace of Lubbock plays for the Midland Symphony Guild's Christmas ball, "Mistletoe and Music," set for Friday at ClayDesta Atrium.

'Mistletoe and Music' scheduled

From Staff Reports

The Midland Symphony Guild's Christmas spectacular, "Mistletoe and Music," is set for Thursday through Dec. 4.

Events include "A Christmas Spectacular" presented at the Holiday Inn Convention Center in Midland by the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Thursday and at Odessa's Holiday Inn Centre at 8 p.m. Saturday.

The Symphony Guild Ball, "Mistletoe and Music," with the theme Christmas in the Old South, a Silent Auction, buffet dinner, and Belle Presentation is planned for Friday. Cost for this gala, which will be held at ClayDesta Atrium is $125 per couple.

Performing for the Symphony Guild Ball will be MasterPeace of Lubbock.The group's repertoire consists of popular top 40s hits, nostalgic rock'n'roll, country western music, soul and jazz selections.

A "Mistletoe and Mink" Brunch and Style Show is scheduled for Saturday with furs and holiday fashions shown by Julian Gold. The show begins at 11 a.m. Cost is $25 per person.

Then, from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 4, a "Mistletoe and Music" Open House will be held at ClayDesta Atrium. The free event features the Lone Star Brass, the Midland-Odessa Chorale and and handbell choirs. ClayDesta merchants will be open for business during the open house.

Book shows Sandburg's silly side

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Carl Sandburg may be remembered as the author of such serious works as his biography of Lincoln, but a new book may put the prairie bard in a different light.

Called "Fables, Foibles and Foobles," the book of prose by Sandburg shows a silly side to the Pulitzer Prize-winning writer.

George Hendrick, an English professor at the University of Illinois, said the stories were stored with other Sandburg papers in an Asheville, N.C., bank vault after his death in 1967.

After Sandburg's oldest daughter, Margaret, introduced Hendrick to the material in 1982, he proposed to put them into a book.

Here's an example:

"A fly, a flea and a flick talked about books and reading.

"The fly said he always counted the pages first to see whether there were too many or not enough.

"The flea said he always ran through the book first and marked the pages to skip.

"The flick said, 'I always begin reading a book wherever I open it.' Then yawning, 'And the farther back the better.'"

Sandburg is mostly identified with the biography of Lincoln, which won him a Pulitzer, and "Chicago," the stirring poem that gave the town its moniker "City of Big Shoulders."

"What people tend to forget is he always had an outrageous sense of humor," Hendrick said.

"Sandburg wrote these fables over a long period of time," he said. "Some were written when his family was in Chicago, some in Michigan and some in North Carolina. He probably had in mind to tell them to his grandchildren."

Like a troubadour, Sandburg enjoyed traveling between towns to deliver public readings and lectures. After the crowds had gone home, he would hold private readings for friends and bring out the funny verse.

"He clearly was having fun with the sound of words," Hendrick said, "and the whole idea that was going around in the 1930s and '40s, a real serious one, about how to read a book. Sandburg made it into a comedy."

"Fables, Foibles and Foobles," published in September by the University of Illinois Press, deals with critics, the subject of reading, politics and "just fun," the professor said.

Why did Sandburg fail to publish these works when he was alive?

"That is, of course, a great mystery," Hendrick said. "Clearly it wasn't material that would embarrass anyone; it's funny. I think Sandburg saw this material as work for his private hours."

'Oklahoma' will be staged at Globe

ODESSA — Guest artist David Corman of New York City will command center stage as Curly in Odessa College's theater department production of "Oklahoma."

Corman, baritone, will play the lovelorn cowboy in the Rodgers' and Hammerstein's musical, set to open at 8 p.m. Friday, Dec. 2 at the Globe Theatre.

Other performances are 8 p.m. Dec. 3, 8, 9, and 10 and 2:30 p.m. Dec. 4.

Currently studying voice with Marlena Malas, a New York City Metropolitan Opera vocal coach, Corman has served as an apprentice in the Santa Fe Opera and the Pittsburgh Opera and sang in the Yale Opera.

Corman has performed numerous opera and musical theater roles. While at the Yale Opera, he portrayed Marcello and Schaunard in "La Boheme" and at the Santa Fe Opera, he performed in the operas "Friedenstag" and "Feursnot." Prior musical drama roles include Billy Below in "Carousel," Arthur in "Camelot," Harry Beaton in "Brigadoon" and Paul in "Carnival."

The two-year Rhodes Scholar nominee received a master of music degree in voice from Yale University where he also studied acting and dance.

Reservations for tickets may be made by calling 1-335-6618, from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Admission for all performances is $10 for adults and $7 for students and senior citizens.

California couple wins chili cookoff

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. — Kenton and Linda Stafford from Fillmore, Calif., were winners at the 1988 World's Championship Chili Cookoff.

The husband and wife team received a $25,000 check for their first place finish.

Eighty contestants from as far away as Great Britain and Germany competed in the cookoff, which is presented each year by The International Chili Society.

REVIEWS

Bumbling 'Ernest' entertaining

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO

Salcedo

Ernest (Jim Varney), that bumbling yokel last seen in "Ernest Goes to Camp" is back and this time he comes to the aid of Santa Claus (Douglas Seale) in "Ernest Saves Christmas." Ernest's latest escapade is delightful to those young enough — in mind or spirit — to buy his slapstick hijinks. If you believe that someone can demolish an entire house just by trying to yank a stubborn cord out of a wall plug, and what's more, if you believe that this would be hilarious to watch, then run don't walk to "Ernest Saves Christmas."

Here Ernest is a cabdriver in Florida — where Disney, the company behind the film, just happens to have a studio. An exhausted Santa, on the verge of retirement, just happens to come to Florida to seek his successor. There is also a weak subplot about a runaway teen-ager who learns the true meaning of Christmas.

For the most part the bumbling Ernest is entertaining and the special effects (which include flying reindeer) are done well. Children 10 and under were delighted with Ernest's antics and many of the tiny tots were also riveted to the screen.

However, there were brands intruding on the film, from the conspicuous logos for an airline and a pen to glimpses of a rental truck, a beer sign and a billboard advertising a floral delivery service.

"Ernest Saves Christmas" was directed lifelessly by John Cherry, who also directed the first Ernest film and all those commercials. But despite all the commercialism, the younger members of the audience clearly enjoyed Ernest's familiar face and silliness. And even better, there was no objectional material in the film. By the time Ernest says "Merry Christmas to all and to all a good night — you know what I mean," the preschool set were out of their seats and applauding. "Ernest Saves Christmas" is innocuous family fare if you leave your adult perceptions at the door. Take someone small to see it.

"Ernest Saves Christmas, rated PG, is playing at the UA Cine 4 on Cuthbert.

Myra Lee Salcedo is movie critic for the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Austin symphony to perform

AUSTIN — The Austin Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Maestro Sung Kwak, announces the December Subscription Concerts, at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Dec. 9 and 10 in the Bass Concert Hall on the UT campus. The program includes excerpts from Prokofiev's romantic ballet Cinderella, and highlights from Handel's Messiah with the Austin Choral Union and vocal soloists.

Tickets for these two performances will be available at the Symphony office, 1101 Red River. On performance dates, Dec. 9 and 10, tickets will be available from noon to 8 p.m. at the Bass Concert Hall Box Office at the Arts Complex. You may reserve tickets by phone 1-512-476-6064.

Also, "Candlelight Christmas" in historic Symphony Square is a gift to the city from the Symphony Square Committee and is set for Friday, Dec. 16 and Saturday, Dec. 17.

At 7 p.m. Friday, Dec. 16 there will be a concert of Christmas music for the entire family featuring Steve Fromholz, Robert "Beto" Skiles, the Capital Brass, Jess Walters and the Austin Children's Choir. It will be an eclectic mix of Christmas offerings.

From noon until 5 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 17 is Children's Day, with crafts, cookie decorating, animated story-telling, pinatas, balloons, caroling, a juggling and magic-making clown, a visit from Frosty the Snowman, Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer and, Santa — all within a giant tent.

Symphony Square's Candlelight Christmas is an opportunity for the public to share in one of the things that makes Austin great and everyone is invited to attend.

Canadian Brass to be in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH — The Canadian Brass, a popular brass ensemble whose musical mastery ranges from classical to jazz to contemporary pop music, will be featured with the Fort Worth Pops Orchestra for the second Pops concert of the season, at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Fort Worth Convention Center Theatre.

The Canadian Brass was the first brass ensemble to play in Carnegie Hall and has appeared on the "Tonight Show" with Johnny Carson, the "Today Show" and on PBS with John Williams and the Boston Pops.

In addition, the Fort Worth Chamber Orchestra, John Giordano, music director, presents the third concert in its "1988/89 Virtuoso Series" at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 29, in the Landreth Auditorium of Texas Christian University.

Giordano will conduct an all-orchestral program featuring music of Respighi, Rorem and Mozart.

Since his 1972 appointment as music director of the FWSO, Giordano has conducted the Belgian National Radio Orchestra, the Amsterdam Philharmonic, the English Chamber Orchestra, the Orchestra Del Pomerissi Musicali in Milan, the Manila Symphony and the Hong Kong Philharmonic as well as orchestras in Belgium, Brazil, El Salvador, Portugal and Argentina.

Museum displays cowboy spurs

OKLAHOMA CITY — "Artistry in Iron," an exhibition of cowboy spurs and their makers, is on display at the National Cowboy Hall of Fame.

More than 100 pairs of spurs are included in the exhibition, which examines the legacy of the cowboy spur through a treatment of its origin, stylistic variation, outstanding makers and embellishment. Particular attention is focused on the Texas-style spur, which evolved around the turn of the century and continues to dominate in the Great Plains region.

Drawn from more than a dozen private and public collections, the exhibition represents the work of such well-known spur makers as McChesney, Crockett and Kelly, along with lesser-known but sought-after artisans like Bianchi, Bischoff and Bayers. A selection of contemporary makers who produce spurs in the traditional handwrought fashion also is included.

The exhibition will remain on display through March 31, 1989.

For more information call 1-405-478-2250.

Italian paintings at art institute

ODESSA — "Five Centuries of Italian Painting, 1300-1800" exhibition is on display through Jan. 8 at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin, 4909 E. University.

The exhibit, sponsored by TuElectric, Bank of Odessa, the Odessa Cultural Council and the Sarah Campbell Blaffer Foundation, represents a broad survey of paintings produced in Italy from the late 14th century through the 18th centuries. Most major schools of Italian painting are represented by the 49 Blaffer paintings. The exhibition includes works by such artists as Botticelli, Tiepolo, Tintoretto, Uccello and the Master of the Sforza Altarpiece.

"It is rare to have such high quality european masters exhibited in West Texas and the Art Institute is fortunate that Mrs. Blaffer has left us this legacy," says a release from the Art Institute.

Hours at the Institute are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. No admission is charged. For more information call 1-368-7222.

Odessa Opree winners to perform

ODESSA — The Odessa Brand New Opree presents 1988 contest winners in the Annual Awards Night At The Opree to be held at 8 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 17 in the Globe Theatre.

The Country Western Division Band of the Year is "Country Express." Vocalists Joel Galimore and female vocalist Mada Whitmire won the adult division with Nike Prentice and Tony Corimi winners in the youth division. Jason Lucas and Jerrod Lucas won the youth instrumentalist catagory.

"Heavens Choice" is the Gospel Music Band winner and Pat and Chris Wafer are the winning singing group. The winning vocalist soloists are Mike Ogin and Niki Prentice.

All the winners will be performing along with the MC of the year, James Whitmire, in this show.

Tickets may be purchased at the Globe Box Office from 7-8 p.m. on the night of the performance and from 1-5 p.m. Monday through Friday. For more information, call 1-332-1586.

Exhibit explores 'Pueblo gods'

HOUSTON — The Museum of Fine Arts is presenting "Pueblo Gods and Myths" through Dec. 24, an exhibition consisting of approximately thirty objects by Pueblo artists including tepera paintings, kachina dolls, masks, and pottery.

The exhibition, which is drawn from the permanent collection of The Museum of Fine Arts, Houston explores some of the spiritual beliefs and practices of the Pueblo peoples of the southwest United States. The Pueblo peoples, including the Hopi and the Zuni, observed a cycle of ceremonies during the year to bring forth the protection of the spirits and to ensure the fertility of the land.

"Pueblo Gods and Myths" is made possible by a grant from William Hill Land & Cattle Co., and Alice C. Simkins.

Christmas trees decorate museum

HOUSTON — A beautiful array of festively decorated Christmas trees will be displayed at the Houston Museum of Natural Science Dec. 5 through Jan. 1, 1989.

The Museum Guild and project chair Mrs. Mary Sherman Willson have organized this year's display using the theme "Look to the Heavens." The trees will be decorated by the Museum Guild and a wide variety of local clubs, each offering a different rendition of the theme.

The Houston Museum of Natural Science is located in Hermann Park across from Miller Theatre, and is open Sunday and Monday from noon to 5 p.m. and Tuesday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $2, $1 for children 5 to 11, and free for children under 5 and members. For more information, please call the Museum at 1-713-639-4600.

Museum exhibits African art

DALLAS — The Dallas Museum of Art will host an exhibition of installations of African objects entitled ART/artifact running through Jan. 15, 1989.

The exhibition consists of 160 objects of art and ethnography from three anthropology collections all founded in the 1860s: The Buffalo Museum of Science, The Hampton University Museum, and The American Museum of Natural History.

ART/artifact raises questions for the viewer such as, "How does a museum deal with art made by people who do not call it art?" and "How does it decide which pieces to exhibit as art and which as artifacts?" ART/artifact considers four different ways Westerners have exhibited and interpreted African objects. Over the past century, different ways of defining African art have been reflected in different styles of presentation. Through these installations, the viewer will see that the West has changed its evaluation of African objects from Artifact to Art.

ART/artifact is free to the public. Dallas Museum of Art hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday; 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday; 12 noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Santa Fe Ensemble to perform

SANTA FE, N.M. — The Santa Fe Ensemble presents its Christmas Concert at 6 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Dec. 23 and 24, in the Loretto Chapel.

Musical selections will include Alinoni's Concerto in C Major for Oboe and Strings; Vivaldi, Concerto in F Major for Flue and Strings "La Notee" and Concerto in A minor by Oboe and Strings; Sonata in D Major, No. 13 for violin and Basso Continuo by Handel; Gluck's Minuet and Dance of the Blessed Spirits; and Fasch's Concerto in G Major for Flute, Oboe and Strings.

Tickets are $15 for front-row seats and $12. For more information call 1-505-988-4640.

Sculptures project of Columbus commission

From Staff Reports

El PASO — The XII Travelers Sculpture Walk and Onate Park, conceived by sculptor John Sherrill Houser and now underway for the City of El Paso, has just received international recognition as an "official project" of the Christopher Columbus Quincentenary Jubilee Commission for its "exceptional contribution" in dramatizing the epic history of the American Southwest.

This $5 million sculpture project will take from six to eight years to complete and is the largest single commission of its kind in the United States.

The theme is 450 years of history across the ford of the Rio Grande at El Paso, a strategic gateway of crucial significance to the development of the United States.

Beginning with Cabeza de Vaca, 1535, the artist will sculpt 12 over life-size bronze groups, each one unified by a personality and event characterizing an aspect of Southwest history.

Together they will form a historic sculpture walk culminating along the international border in Onate Park, named for Don Juan Onate who led the first successful colonizing expedition into the Southwest.

Here two bronze colossi shoulder a ledge from which issues a waterfall. This allegory of the United States and Mexico with the Rio Grande between them towers above a procession of Onate colonists.

In the foreground is a large reflecting pond with a monumental fountain sculpture — the 12th group — of the Onate family and two Indian guides.

Houser is a nationally recognized artist with studios in El Paso and Tucson. He was born in 1935 in South Dakota where his father was assistant sculptor on Mount Rushmore. His work has been widely exhibited and is included in public and private collections.

Other official projects of the Columbus Quincentenary Commission include the Chicago-Seville World's Fair, the AmeriFlora '92 Festival in Columbus, Ohio, and the tall ships regatta on the east and west coasts.

The Quincentenary Celebration — 1987-1993 — commemorates not only Columbus' Discovery of the New World, but also the period of exploration and colonization which followed.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1988

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Financial affairs remain confusing. Seek experts' advice before making new investments. A co-worker's view conflicts with your own. Talk things out calmly and rationally. Avoid making accusations.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Loved one's emotional reaction to your plans could catch you off-guard. Recognize mate's special needs. Set your sights high and move in new directions. Romance turns serious. Know your own heart.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A special project must be completed on time if you are to receive a bonus. Reschedule non-essential appointments. Keep costs in mind.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An optimistic attitude will get you back on the right track. Your financial situation will be improved by hard work and good luck. Be more open and affectionate with romantic partner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Use your charm to regain the attention of an important person. Romantic interests strongly influence a decision regarding finances or career. A close friend offers sage advice. Follow it to the letter.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Influential person gives your career a boost. Get everything in writing, even if working with close friends. Do not overreach when making a family decision. Ask loved ones for their views first.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Give careful consideration to your partners' feelings. You need to play a more prominent role at work even if you must put in unpaid overtime. A close relationship begins to improve. Be affectionate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Diplomacy helps you win big in the marketplace now. Avoid embarrassing others. Unexpected events could slow you down. Do not fret! Use the extra time to good advantage.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Deal with any tedious tasks you have been shirking. Close associates are cooperative; the bottom line improves. A personal relationship needs more nurturing. Spend time together.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Avoid extravagance if concerned about your credit rating. Overseas contacts take on greater importance. A quick decision will probably be correct regarding a personal relationship. Keep your own counsel.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Joint financial affairs require cautious handling. Day trips are less expensive and more productive than longer journeys. Influential person gives good advice: follow it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Those who work in sales should reap a handsome profit. Real estate transactions are favored. Do not allow your emotions to prejudice your thinking where career or finances are involved. Be practical.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ◇

The theme of today's hand is a situation that is misplayed almost as often as it is handled correctly. It is a simple combination that crops up frequently at the table.

The bidding was simple. South's opening bid showed a balanced 21–22 points (he correctly added 1 point for possession of all four aces). North probed for a major-suit fit with Stayman, then settled for the no-trump game after South denied a major.

West made the textbook lead of fourth-best from his longest and strongest, hitting declarer's weak spot. There were only six fast tricks—the remaining three would have to come from the club suit via a finesse.

Declarer made the technically correct play of holding up the ace of diamonds for two rounds, discarding a spade from dummy on the third round. Now everything hinged on which defender held the king of clubs.

We know that many declarers would cross to dummy with the king of hearts to lead the queen of clubs. When that won the trick, they would continue with a club to the ten and then cash the ace of clubs in an attempt to drop the king. When that didn't work, they would have to concede down one.

Since declarer holds the J–10 of clubs, the queen and nine are equals. But it is most important which card declarer leads from dummy for the finesse. He must play the nine! When that wins, declarer can next lead the queen. If that is not covered, declarer is still in dummy to take a third finesse to bring in the whole club suit and land his contract.

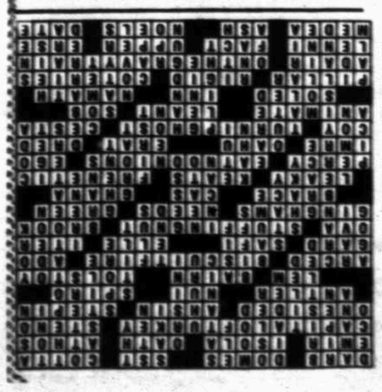
PUZZLE ANSWER



New choral group to perform

A new choral society, the Permian Basin Meistersingers, has chosen as its premier work the Christmas portion of "Messiah," by George F. Handel.

The piece will be performed at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 18, at the First Baptist Church. Future presentations will be given in other churches with multiple performances in other cities and will be free to the public.

"Choristers were carefully selected for their vocal and musical abilities, devotion and commitment to choral music and the cultural community in which they live, and include members from Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Andrews and Stanton," says a release from PBM.

The orchestra consists of members from the Midland/Odessa Symphony.

Permian Basin Meistersingers is made up of volunteers who share a professional level of musical pride and is a chartered, charitable corporation.

Founders/Directors are Dr. William R. Lucas, Charles Tighe and Dr. Joan Lucas. Board members will be named at a later date.

OC station to broadcast radio plays

ODESSA — Odessa College's radio station, KOCV-FM, 91.3, has scheduled classic radio plays and live broadcasts of the Metropolitan Opera this winter.

These broadcasts are available to KOCV-FM as part of its National Public Radio programming. The station was accepted as an auxiliary member of the NPR in May.

The radio station is broadcasting classic radio plays at 4 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. They began Monday, Nov. 21. The science fiction series, "X...Minus One," is scheduled for Mondays and Tuesdays. "Hall of Fantasy," the suspenseful program, is set for Wednesday afternoons. Continuing segments of the radio comedy, "Fibber McGee and Molly," will be broadcast on Thursdays and Fridays.

The student-operated station will also broadcast live and in stereo the 21 performances of the New York Metropolitan Opera's 1988-89 season. The broadcasts, featuring celebrated playwriters and composers, are each Saturday afternoon, beginning Dec. 3 and continuing until April 29.

For more information about these programs, contact KOCV-FM, at 1-335-6336.

GHS student designs winning directory cover

The Permian Basin School Board Association has announced the winners of a directory cover art contest.

The contest, open to all school districts in the association, offered a $25 first place cash award.

The winning entry was submitted by Darla Graham of Greenwood High School, who will be presented with the first place check during Student Recognition at the Greenwood School Board meeting Tuesday. The directory has been printed and distributed to all 33 school districts with Miss Graham's design on the cover.

Honorable mention awards were printed within the directory and are listed as follows: Jennifer Peyton, Permian High School; Christina Lopez, Fort Stockton High School; Mike Smith, Permian High School; George Galindo, Fort Stockton High School; Jeff Whitsell, Permian High School; Willie Martinez, Odessa High School.

Judges were Dr. Stan Jacobs and Mr. Warren Taylor of Midland College and Mrs. Mavis Murphy of the Midland Arts Association.

Dancers chosen to perform at Soviet festival

COLLEGE STATION — Sparkle and glitz will accompany the tap and jazz routine Ella Trumpfeller choreographs for her dancers in the performance of a lifetime.

Her students at the Dance Centre in College Station have been invited to dance at the Fourth Summer Festival of the Performing Arts, to be held July 18-31, 1989, in the Soviet Union. They have chosen Texas Dance Artists as their touring name.

Ms. Trumpfeller is the daughter of long time Midland residents Tommy and Katherine Woodward. She danced for 12 years while growing up in Midland and was a member of the Permian Civic Ballet Company for several years.

She has lived in College Station for 12 years where she opened her own dance studio in 1983 under the name Dance Centre. Since that time her Troupe has won several first place medals along with many silver and bronze medals in dance competition in Houston and Austin.

Odessa poetry society meets

ODESSA — Eleven members of the Odessa Chapter, Poetry Society of Texas, met at the Presidential Museum on Nov. 6. where winners in the October club contests were announced.

Gayle Briscoe of Dallas was critic judge for both contests. The Special contest was a Haiku seasonal sequence.

First place went to Alice Greenwood for "Cycle," second place to Denise Stallcup for Untitled, third place to Priscilla Frake for Untitled, and Honorable Mention to Pat Peak of Midland, for "Orchards in Four Seasons."

The general contest features 28 lines or less, any subject, any form. First place winner was Pat Peak, of Midland, for "Perchance to Dream," second place to Denise Stallcup for "Love in the Bookstore," third place to Alice Greenwood for "First Day Assault," and honorable mention to Debbie Bleam for "The Soccer Player."

Father and son jazz guitarists scheduled to perform at Hilton

The West Texas Jazz Society will host noted jazz guitarist Bucky Pizzarelli and his son, John Pizzarelli, at the Midland Hilton at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

John Pizzarelli, who sings and plays guitar, has performed at the Hotel Pierre, the Odessa Jazz Festival and jazz rooms throughout the East Coast. He has recorded with his dad on Stash Records, "2x7 = Pizzarelli," an album of seven-string guitar duets.

Pizzarelli has paid his dues as a musician. He played guitar for nearly a decade in Vaughn Monroe's big band, and then in the '50s and '60s, after coming off the road and settling in the New York area, he was in considerable demand as a studio musician. He did record dates with Frank Sinatra and Ray Charles and with Dion and Neil Sedaka. He played in the Tonight Show orchestra and became something of a musician's musician.

While his name was basically unknown to the general public, it was highly respected by his peers. Benny Goodman and Sinatra, for example, both tapped him to play with them at private parties at the White House.

He has authored two guitar instruction books, published by camerica: "Power Guitar" and "Pro's Approach."

Bucky Pizzarelli

John Pizzarelli

Pizzarelli was nearly 50; however, before public recognition began coming his way. In the mid 1970s, he joined forces with George Barnes to form a guitar duo that won both critical and public approval in performances at New York clubs and at Carnegie Hall.

He teamed up next with Les Paul, again playing clubs and Carnegie Hall, and recorded numerous records in partnership with such diverse figures as Zoot Sims, Joe Venuti, Stephane Grappelli and Buddy Rich.

He and his son formed their partnership in 1980.

Tickets at the door will be $15, students $10, and members will be admitted free. Reserved seating is available for an additional $10.

Historical commission offers free museum directory

Where can you see the 70-foot long skeleton of a Diplodocus and learn about this and other early Texas dinosaurs?

Where can you see restored classic automobiles of the 1920s and 1930s, board a reconstructed historic sailing vessel, or visit a living history farm?

The answers to these and hundreds of other similar questions are provided in the "1988 Texas Museum Directory," offered free to the public by the Texas Historical Commission.

Texas' museums are both educational and entertaining. They are also popular. A recent survey conducted by the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation shows that visiting museums is one of the highest ranking activities enjoyed by tourists, both from Texas and from out of state.

Free copies of the directory are available from Highway Department Tourist Bureaus in the following cities: Amarillo, Anthony, Austin, Denison, Gainesville, Langtry, Laredo, Orange, Texarkana, Valley, Waskom, and Wichita Falls.

Limited copies also are available from the THC by writing to P.O. Box 12276, Austin, 78711.

'War and Remenbrance' rates below expectations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — TV viewers chose laughter over war last week as six comedies ranked in the top 10 and the best an episode of ABC's miniseries "War and Remembrance" did was 10th, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co.

Four episodes of the World War II epic based on the novel by Herman Wouk placed in the top 20, but fell below expectations for a miniseries that cost $104 million, was heavily promoted and widely lauded by critics.

NBC won the week, with ABC coming in second. Five NBC comedy series placed ahead of the highest-rated episode of the miniseries, as did one ABC comedy show, CBS' "60 Minutes" and "Murder, She Wrote."

ABC reportedly told its advertisers that "War and Remembrance" would average 20.2 in the Nielsen ratings. Only the first episode the previous week exceeded that at 21.8.

"War and Remembrance" is the sequel to "The Winds of War," which got a 38.6 rating and a 53 share over 18 hours in 1983. The first 18 hours of the sequel is being shown in seven episodes over 11 nights. Two more episodes were to be telecast this week. The final 12 hours will not be telecast until May.

Bob Wright, an ABC spokesman, said there would be no comment on the ratings until after the final episode of the first 18 hours.

The future of longer miniseries does not look good in view of the disappointing ratings for "War and Remembrance" and the loss ABC will take. Prior to the telecasts, ABC had forecast a loss of $20 million.

NBC, which had predicted the ABC miniseries would sweep the ratings, took it on with a vigorous promotion of its comedy shows.

"Our calculated plan of youth-oriented counterprogramming, coupled with aggressive and creative promotion, had the absolute right effect with the viewing audience," said Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment.

"I'm happy NBC has kept its prime-time win streak alive in the heart of the November sweeps."

Here are the rankings, ratings and shares for the episodes telecast last week: Part III, in 10th place, 19.9 rating, 31 share; Part II, in 11th place, 19.0, 29; Part V, 17th place, 17.0, 26; Part IV, tied for 18th place with NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries," 16.8, 25.

NBC won the week with an average rating of 15.8; ABC had 14.9 and CBS 12.4.

Each ratings point equals 904,000 homes with television. The share is a percentage of the sets in use.

For the season to date, NBC stayed ahead with an average 15.5 rating; ABC had 13.8 and CBS 12.3. NBC also led in the Nielsens for the November sweeps, the period used to determine advertising rates. The ratings: NBC 15.4, ABC 13.6, CBS 12.2.

Here are the top 10: "The Cosby Show," "A Different World," "The Golden Girls," "60 Minutes," CBS; "Cheers," "Empty Nest," both NBC; "Growing Pains," ABC; "Murder, She Wrote," CBS; NBC Monday Night Movie, "Too Good To Be True," NBC; "War and Remembrance," Part III, ABC.

Fox Broadcasting's "Married...With Children" got the highest prime-time rating to date for the "fourth network" with a 10.0 rating and a 14 share. The next show was Fox's "America's Most Wanted." Both shows did better than 12 series from CBS and ABC.

Among news show, "ABC World News Tonight" was first with an 11.3 rating. "The CBS Evening News" was next with 11.2. "The NBC Nightly News" had 10.5.

Christmas tree ornaments at San Antonio museum

SAN ANTONIO — German-influenced Christmas tree paper ornaments, on loan from the Smithsonian Institution, are the focus of one of the trees in the Witte Museum's exhibition, "A Witte Merry Christmas: Tannenbaums to Tumbleweeds," opening Sunday, Dec. 4, at the Witte Museum, 3801 Broadway, San Antonio.

The German art of paper cutting, used to create the ornaments from the Smithsonian Institution, was brought to Pennsylvania in the early 1600's by German settlers.

The tree on which the ornaments are displayed is called "Christbaumschnitte." Made by children at the Smithsonian Institution, the German-style paper cuttings are known as scherenschnitte.

Christmas "Scherenschnitte" cards and tree embellishments preserved the scarce supply of paper. Paper from family baptism and wedding certificates, as well as paper that had been made from rags were transformed into family treasures.

A Texas horn tree, fashioned of deer antlers and topped with a Texas flag, will be displayed in the foyer of the museum.

"A Witte Merry Christmas: Tannenbaums to Tumbleweeds" opens Dec. 4 with the Witte Museum's traditional Christmas party for the community from 2-4 p.m., and will remain on display through Jan. 2.

In addition, the sparkle of green and cranberry American cut glass ushers in Christmas Dec. 4 at the Witte Museum in an exhibition entitled "Splendor in the Glass: American Cut Glass from the Wallace and Mary Rogers, Jr. Collection."

IN this exhibit, 150 pieces from the San Antonio Museum Association's Rogers Collection cover the period 1875-1925. Reflected in the exhibition are pieces from Bergen, Clark, Dorflinger, Hawkes and Libbey.

Desert Chorale to give programs for Christmas

SANTA FE, N.M. — "Christmas with The Desert Chorale" concert series will present two programs.

"The Reluctant Dragon, A Fable For Christmas" is entertainment the whole family can enjoy. John Rutter's delightful holiday musical is about a sensitive dragon and a young boy who befriends him. Familiar Christmas favorites and a sing-along round out this hour-long concert which will begin at 6 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 21 and Friday, Dec. 23 in the James A. Little Theatre, 1060 Cerrillos Road. Tickets are $8 for adults and $5 for those under 18.

"A Merry New Mexico Christmas" brings to life the magic of familiar holiday carols — the warmth and passion of Spanish Renaissance Christmas music, from the deeply spiritual to the joyously festive, the glorious sound of harp and voices lifted in Christmas praises. The program is scheduled for 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 23 in the Santuario de Gudalupe, 100 Guadalupe. Tickets are $12 per person, and visitors are invited to stay for a post-concert Yuletide reception and caroling.

Both programs will also be playing in Albuquerque on Thursday, Dec. 22 in Keller Hall on the University of New Mexico campus.
