Mayor Gives Health Ultimatum

Better Farming Prospects Now Than In 4 Years

Main Crops With Exception Of Wheat Promise Well, Says Report

JARDINE'S STATEMENT

No Large Surplus of Major Products Probable Declares Secretary

WASHINGTON, July 2. From present indications farmers have better financial prospects this year than in most of the years since 1919, the department of agriculture declared today in the July report on the agricultural situation.

Much can happen before the fall harvest, the report pointed out, but "taken as a whole, the main crops promise fairly well except in the case of winter wheat," and the present nice balance in both livestock and crop production is a tribute to the readjustments made by American farms since the fall of 1921.

The main fact seen in the present outlook was that while production will be ample to meet consumption needs agriculture will not be in the market this fall with any large surplus of the major products. Present tendencies in the general business session were found to indicate little change in prices of non-agricultural commodities and consequently, no marked change in the purchasing power of farm products.

Wheat harvest is in full swing, the report related.

The outlook in the corn belt is apparently good. Hogs are relatively high priced and may go higher. The pig survey shows a decline of 11% in the number of spring pigs compared to last year.

THE WEATHER

LYRICS OF LIFE
By Douglas Malloch.
Pray For Me.

PRAY for me each night, my dear—
Not for joy, for joy is here
Every hour I think of you—
Pray for me that I may do
Morning's toil and evening's task
As my better self would ask.
And, when I have done my best,
Calm my spirit with your pray'r
As you once your fingers there
Pressed upon my weary eyes;
Heavily life's burden lies
On my heart so many nights;
Still the noises, dim the lights,
Let me sleep—where'er I be
Lovely angel, pray for me.

Pray for me, my dear, each night;
Keep my dreams forever bright,
Keep my purpose ever pure;
There is much I must endure,
There are tempters who will speak;
Sin is strong and men are weak.
Gird me 'round with holy pray'r,
Give me armor I may wear
In the battle all day long—
Sin is weak when love is strong.
You have little need to pray.
Living like a rose each day.
But, when shadows start to fall,
When the night enshrouds us all,
Sing some little melody
For yourself—and pray for me.

Two San Antonio Dupes Tricked Out of $18,000 By Old Gag In New Gown

SAN ANTONIO, July 2.—Rivalry between two San Antonioans to acquire a $400,000 fortune, consisting of diamonds and securities nestling in safety deposit box in the Bank of England has sent overseas in quest of his prize and the second has just returned from New York, having got that far on his European journey before realizing he had been victimized.

The alleged smooth slicker who sent the two wealthy men on two wild goose chases is sought by federal officers, wanted on charges of swindling.

The first victim, who set out with a key to the safety deposit box after paying to his would-be benefactor $8,000, was stopped in New York by a telegram, from the alleged swindler, who regretfully advised him that he had overlooked presenting him with credentials he would need to gain access to the fortune and that they were being forwarded by mail to his New York hotel. After waiting some time and receiving no further word, he wired San Antonio friends and learned the truth.

In the meantime, the second victim, after paying $10,000 to the man with a fortune in England for sale at a bargain, had packed his traveling bags and was en route to New York to catch a boat sailing for England. As far as his local friends know, he has not "fallen to the scheme," and is on the high seas guarding a "pass word" that will give him access to nearly half a million.

Vernon Man Knows A Little of Ways Of County Growth

In speaking of West Texas progress, A. M. Bourland, pioneer farmer of Wilbarger county, knows a little about it himself.

"Twenty-five years ago this month," he says, "I came through Electra on my way to Vernon. It wasn't Electra then but was known as Beavers Switch, a small water tank for passing cattlemen. There wasn't any town here at all. I passed on into Wilbarger county and leased a big tract of land for cattle and farming purposes."

The rest, of the story is left untold. Electra is today a town of ten thousand people, and has untold wealth in its natural resources. From a small farmer Mr. Bourland has become one of the wealthiest farmers in the entire county. His farm is said to be a model in the dry farming line.

He states that his cotton this year is the best that he has ever seen in his twenty-five years of dry farming experience.

"We Are Lonely And Want a Phonograph," Writes a Jail Inmate

"We are lonely here and want your prices on a phonograph, nothing fancy desired. Mail your answer to box 107, Archer County Jail." Such was the letter received yesterday by B. G. Ripley of the Ripley-Jones Music Company.

The writer explained that the seven inmates of the bastile had decided that a phonograph would be the logical thing to liven their cells up with. By pooling their resources they believe they will be able to purchase a cheap one "just so it will make noise." Stress was laid on the warning that nothing fancy was wanted.

Mr. Ripley stated that he was considering sending the prisoners a first-class phonograph as a compliment of the store.

BLOOD BOILS AT THINGS HE SAW ON TRIP AROUND CITY

Shepherd Tells City Health Department it Is Time To do Something

TOO MUCH TYPHOID

Patton Pleads Lack Of Funds to Make Proper Inspections Here

A red hot volley of oratory against property owners here who refused to connect their premises to the city's sanitary sewer system, followed by promise that these offenders were to be summarily dealt with in the interest of public health provided plenty of fireworks Tuesday night when the public health committee of the chamber of commerce met with city officials to discuss the typhoid epidemic no win the city.

Shep Raps Causes.

Mayor R. E. Shepherd unloaded without stint on those whose neglect, he said, was without doubt responsible for by far the majority of typhoid cases in Wichita Falls. Parts of the talk he made tread none too lightly on the toes of the city health department; while in the end he pledged himself, and was joined by Health Commissioner J. H. Petton in a promise to use every device the law allowed to force connections of all houses with sewers. This will be effective, of course, in those sections where sewer service is available and it was indicated that there were now very few parts of the city where it was not.

The discussion of the typhoid situation came at what was really the second meeting of the night. Over an hour was devoted by the committee to a meeting with druggists in which the matter of sanitation at soda fountains was taken up. This, however, had no particular connection with the typhoid situation and it was made plain by Dr. A. F. Leach, chairman of the public health committee of the chamber of commerce, that the druggists were not being singled out as responsible for any sanitary situation, or lack of it in town.

This second meeting ended with adoption of motions by the committee, recommending to the city council that it pass a law making compulsory an inspection at least once a month of all establishments handling foodstuffs or drinks; a grading of these establishments on a sanitation basis, and a public display of the grade at every store. A motion was also adopted recommending that the council pass an order requiring washing of glasses in drug stores after every service with hot water of at least 110 degrees temperature and a cleansing at least once every day with some cleansing agency such as soap or washing powder.

Not Enough Funds.

In connection with discussions of these features, the matter of finances came up, of course, and Commissioner Patton voiced doubt several times as to where he could find funds to pay for all these inspections. He said it would necessitate the addition of another man to his staff and that his budget for the year was not so arranged as to allow for paying any extra help.

Wilford Harrison, a prominent local druggist, made several attempts to have written into the motion a clause calling for a nominal monthly assessment against every store receiving the inspection; revnue from this source to be applied on paying a competent inspector.

"I'd rather pay a dollar or two a month for inspections from a man I had confidence in than take a chance on the inspections we'd probably get from the city with its finances in the shape they are," he said.

Mayor Shepherd started things in the second meeting when, after a short introduction by Dr. Leach, he launched into a bitter diatribe against the open toilets.

"I just want to say a few words to you men about this typhoid fever business," the mayor began, "because I'll confess that in the past few days it has been worrying me a good deal. There are too many cases of typhoid in Wichita Falls now, and I say that without attempting to set any figure as to the exact number.

Personal Responsibility.

"Newspaper reports have said there are as many as 58, while our health department claims there are not that many. I don't know and don't care particularly which figure is right, but it makes me heartsick to know we have 10 or 20 or 30 or 58 or whatever number there may be. Any one of those is entirely too many and what I want to do now is to work out with you gentlemen some way to correct this matter. I feel as mayor of this city that I have a personal responsibility to perform in any matter that concerns the welfare of the community, and I know of nothing that I would rather guard more jealously than the health of our men, women and children.

"For the past day or two I have been about as busy as a man could be and I haven't been able to take time to give this thing the personal attention I would like. But yesterday

A short distance northeast of the well, Owens Pace et al recently drilled two holes on the Mitchell land, one a deep test in which the 1,200-foot startum was penetrated with a big bit and another just a few feet away that was a water well in the 1,200-foot stuff.

Intermittent swabbing yesterday had more than filled the slushpit and at an estimated rate of better than 200 barrels a day.

Oil Gossip

T. L. Coplin, deputy supervisor for the oil and gas section of the Texas railroad commission, stationed in North Texas, Bruce Frazier, and W. J. Carden, both of whom work under Mr. Coplin returned yesterday from Austin where they attended a meeting of the district supervisors and their chief, Judge H. A. Bell.

The conference recommended a change in the reading of ruke 39, section 8, to omit the words "Into an open Pit" as being in conflict with the construction placed upon rule 40 with reference to the use of a vacuum or swabbing in a well. Rule 39, if revised as recommended, will abolish waiting wells after ten days following completion, or for any other purpose than cleaning out.

There were thirteen present at the conference which took place in the commissioner's offices at the capitol at Austin, according to Mr. Coplin.

MEXICAN FACES CHARGES.

Embezzlement of $11,500 in Southern Republic Charged.

SAN JACINTO, July 2.—Augustine Bravo is being held in jail here pending extradition to Mexico on charge of having embezzled 23,00 pesos ($11,500) in railroad bonds in 1922. The arrest was made following the request of the main government made through the state department.

Bravo will be held until August 12 at which time he will be given a preliminary hearing before the United States commissioner.

Upon his arrest Wednesday, Bravo said that he was arrested on the same case about six years ago but he was released. He was not removed to Mexico because at that time the country was not recognized by the United States.

BAR PRESTIGE NOT SLIPPING LAWYERS TOLD

Associate Supreme Court Justice Defends Profession at Meeting

AUSTIN, July 2.—(AP)—Entrance of the United States in the permanent court of international justice was urged in a resolution adopted today by the forty-fourth convention of the Texas Bar association, with the explanation that disputes between nations should be adjudicated, just as disputes between individuals. The resolution was introduced by H. M. Garwood of Houston and was adopted unanimously.

Former Governor James E. Ferguson's defense of his wife's pardon record, his condemnation of wealthy liquor law violators, and his criticism of lawyers and the methods of administering justice furnished inspiration for the liveliest convention gossip of the bar meet.

May Form Council

The next legislature may be asked to submit a constitutional amendment providing for the creation of a judicial council which would have power to make rules for court practice and procedure. This proposal was introduced by Judge C. H. Jenkins of Austin. The resolution was referred to the committee on judicial administration and remedial procedure. Action will be taken Friday. According to terms of the proposal, members of the judicial council would serve without pay.

During the ensuing year an effort will be made to double the membership of 1,000. Report of Leon Green of Austin, chairman of the membership committee, showed that 228 members had been added during 1924. For the first time the secretary will be paid a salary.

The district judge is the most important member of the Texas judicial system, and should be given greater discretionary powers, a more secure tenure of office, and more salary William Pierson, associate justice of the Texas supreme court said.

"It is before the district judge that law is really practiced. Everything possible should be done to strengthen his position."

The speaker denied the legal profession was losing prestige. "Whether the bar is living up to its opportunities for services, and not whether it is losing prestige, is the vital question," Judge Pierson said.

Lauds Law Institute

H. M. Garwood of Houston, lauded the work of the American Law Institute in its 10-year program of making an authoritative and comprehensive restatement of common law. "There has never been such a work undertaken, and the need is great for common law deals with the rights of the individual," he said. "The most astute and learned legal minds in the country are engaged for the American Law Institute in this undertaking. Their combined talents will make this work of law a greater contribution than the works of "Justinian."

Thursday noon the visiting ladies were entertained by wives of the members of the Austin bar with a luncheon at the Austin Country club. Thursday night Edward J. White of St. Louis, addressed the association on the "Authorship of the Junius Letters."

Selection of the officers and of the board of directors will feature Friday's program. A. H. McKnight of Dallas, present vice president is in line for the presidency, while T. W. Davidson of Marshall, chairman of the board of directors is in line for the vice presidency.

Houston has asked for the 1926 convention.

HIGHWAY DEPT. "PROBE" IS NOT PLANNED--DAN

Moody Declares Newspaper Anticipation Is an Incorrect One

AUSTIN, July 2.—(AP)—No state department is under investigation by the attorney general's department Attorney General Dan Moody declared in a formal statement issued tonight. The statement is a sequence to the publishing of a purported interview with Assistant Attorney General C. A. Wheeler by a North Texas paper this morning to the effect that a "sweeping investigation" is being made by the attorney general's department into the highway department.

The statement explains the questions relative to a highway contract in Liberty county, which the story carried, and said that the "purported" interview was not authorized by the attorney general.

The text of Attorney General Moody's statement follows:

"One of the papers of general circulation carried in an interview which had been given out by an assistant in the attorney general's office. This interview was not authorized by me.

"The conception which I have of the duties of the attorney general is that he has the responsibility of advising heads of state departments and other state officials on questions of law and representing the interest of the state in certain litigation in the courts. The relation sustained between the attorney general and the public officers, whom it is his duty to advise, is similar to the relation existing between an attorney and his client. If any information came to me that any state department had, through mistake, misunderstanding of the law, or otherwise, transgressed any provision of the law I would, as any lawyer ought to do where the same relation existed, advise the parties at fault of their mistake and suggest a correction, if possible, before taking any other action. Certainly I would not give out, newspaper interviews imputing a wrong to any one whom the department is supposed to advise, or otherwise act to their embarrassment before an opportunity had been offered for the correction of the mistake.

"To this extent the newspaper article is calculated to create a wrong impression as to the attitude of the attorney general's office.

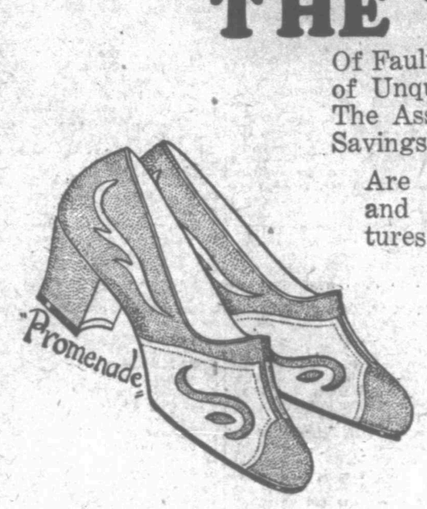

"A county officer has written to me with reference to a contract affecting public highways in his county and I have acknowledged receipt of his letter and placed the matter in the hands of one of the assistants with the direction that he give the gentleman advice. No investigation is being conducted by this office at this time of any department of the state government. I make this statement in fairness to parties who might be injuriously affected by the article."

WHOLLY AT SEA.

Vice-President Dawes sadly hesitated and faltered when he sought to carry the war on the senate rules into the "enemy's country." Speaking to the chamber of commerce of Manchester, N. H., the home state of Senator Moses, president pro-tempore of the senate, who is unalterably opposed to cloture for the upper house of congress—the vice-president undertook to answer recent criticism of his proposal. In doing so, he unwittingly placed himself on the defensive, and a very poor defensive at that. He succeded only in giving force to the arguments he sought to overthrow.

In the first place, Mr. Dawes admitted that any legislative reform sought at the present time should look to a reduction rather than an increase in the number of congressional enactments. Again, he conceded that the minority deserves protection on questions which peculiarly affect it. And, finally, he was reduced to the necessity of making a counter-argument to get around the claim that unlimited debate in the senate serves to give needed publicity to proposed legislation. He was even led in the extremity of his logical difficulties to descend to a species of disingenuousness.

Without sufficiently explaining himself, Mr. Dawes presented figures showing that during the last five congresses the senate, with no cloture, passed more bills and resolutions than the house, which had a cloture rule. It is not necessary to examine in detail the figures given by Mr. Dawes since he did not say how many resolutions were passed by the senate on executive appointments, nor how many bills it passed by way of initiating legislation instead of finally enacting it. Without any argument or investigation, it is perfectly obvious that since the vice president is championing a change to expedite legislatve business he should be in favor of more enactments instead of fewer enactments.

On the subject of minority rights, the vice president covered his confusion by weakly inviting those senators who fear federal encroachment upon state powers under cloture in the senate "to protect some modification of the rules, which, while providing majority cloture on all questions which affect ordinary legislation, will permit unlimited debate upon those few occasions when legislation involving alleged encroachments upon the constitutional rights of the states is under consideration." This is too hard a riddle to solve. No formal rule can be established which can be depended upon to work at one time to achieve one purpose, and at another to achieve exactly the opposite purpose. But the present rule in the senate applying to debate really accomplishes what Mr. Dawes asks. It can be invoked to shut off debate on motion of two-thirds of the membership, and only permits unlimited discussion when the minority is up in arms against the majority, with the sympathy of many of the latter's members.

TO SAVE TEXAS.

About the middle of July a select group of earnest men will gather in the city of Houston to concert plans for the economic and financial salvation of Texas. This state, it is believed, is suffering acutely for want of investment funds. Something must be done to relieve its needs. Texas is hampered in its development, and its magnificent resources locked away from human accessibility, for the lack of enough outside capital to aid in the vigorous promotion of private enterprise. The perfect answer to this lamentable condition is, in the opinion of the prophets of a new salvation, to be found in the repeal of the Robertson insurance law.

So simple a remedy for so complicated a situation was rejected by the legislature in its recent session. But, undaunted by this refusal to accept their ideas, the advocates of repeal are resolved to renew their fight. They propose to go to the people, and, particularly to line up the business leaders for a great drive on an unresponsive body of lawmakers. It is hoped, by those who claim a clearer vision than is possessed by most of us, that with popular support and the influence of prominent men, the legislature will be compelled to yield to the demand for repeal, however reluctanty.

The one difficulty, of course, is to persuade the people that their industry is stagnating and their commerce gradually disintegrating on account of the Robertson law. From the city of Houston, in which our band of forward looking men are to assemble, came reports but a short time ago that Texas had established a record for the repayment of federal farm loans, indicating that Texas farmers are able both to secure financial accommodation and to meet the obligation thereby incurred. The real difficulty before our farmers is the production of their usual crops, not the borrowing of more money. As to our industrial development, the whole country has lately been informed that Texas has become the leading exporting state and that her manufacturers are worth more than $1,000,000,000 a year. The average observer, whether here or in another state, must say that we are doing fairly well.

PEN POPULATION GROWING.

It is said that the prison population of the Texas penitentiaries increased by 85 convicts during the month of May and shows an increase in June. The plain English of this is that the prison population is greater than it was when Pat Morris Neff stepped down and out.

As for the rangers, they are down on the Mexican border, chasing narcotic smugglers and whiskey runners and making life miserable for the aliens who attempt to swim the river in order that they may become citizens of the greatest republic that time has known.

There hasn't been a mob organized in Texas since Sheriff Schuyler Marshall of Dallas county planted Winchesters and machine guns on the top of the bastile in the month of May.

WHY THE DENIAL?

Colonel E. M. House entered a prompt denial to the story cabled from London that he was in the old world as a special ambassador from the court of Dr. Coolidge, the noted republican economist and administrator. Why the denial? Dr. Coolidge has no special ambassadors, either here at home or roaming the wide world over.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE.

HOURS OF EASE.

"What do you do with your vacation," I asked a well known editor and author.

"Write, most of the time," was his reply.

"I should think you would want to change your occupation, and get a rest."

"Writing is a rest for me, if I write about something that I don't have to write about every day. I spend my vacation either writing fiction or thinking up ideas for fiction. I have to have leisure in order to work on that kind of thing."

This man whose name you would all know if we were permitted by him to mention it—which we are not—regards leisure as a time to work.

And he works so hard and so successfully in his leisure that he makes more money from his books than he does as an editor—although he is a very good editor, and is very well paid.

He has the kind of a mind that can never be idle or dormant.

He likes to swim and sail and play golf, but usually he is getting ideas while engaged in these occupations—and while he does not take continuous notes as some authors we read of do, he generally jots down any ideas that have come to him on a pad at the end of the day.

He told me that of a hundred ideas he gets he is able to use possibly one.

That one he puts in a convenient recess of his mind where he can get it out and think it over, and in a week or two he finds that it has drawn to itself a cluster of other ideas, and he is able to start on it and make a story of it.

You will find that the men who are the best producers of good work are busy most of their waking hours, even if some of these hours are spent in different scenes from those in which most of their working time is spent.

The change of the actual character of occupation is sufficient to give them the relaxation they need. They do not regard it as necessary to loaf entirely, forgetting their callings altogether.

It is impossible for a man to think of one thing while he is doing another thing which requires any degree of concentration.

But sometimes while at what he calls play his mind freed from exacting details will think more clearly, and it is then he is able to put originality and "zip" into what he is doing.

Everybody needs change, relaxation and vacations. But the mind which knows how to take advantage of leisure, and continue to operate, merely changing the direction of its effort, is the mind that gets the best results.

Often we get too close to our work to do it well and get too far away from it to see it at all when we rest.

If we can still keep within seeing distance on our vacations and holidays, our output will be greatly benefitted.

A NEW BASIS FOR THE TARIFF

Chairman Thomas C. Marvin of the tariff commission has a suggestion to offer on the improvement of the method of operating the "flexible provision" of the present law, which it is expected will be embodied in the commission's forthcoming report to congress. Discussing the commission's rather unsuccessful experience with the provision, Chairman Marvin says: "The proper basis for the operation of a flexible tariff is not the one element of difference in cost of production, but the difference in competitive conditions which would require ascertainment of invoice prices for competitive articles from foreign countries, and wholesale prices of domestic articles packed and ready for delivery."

If this suggestion were adopted it would effect a compromise between the "American" 'and "foreign" valuation in levying import duties, which caused such a fight in the framing of the present tariff law and made the result so unsatisfactory to advocates of the rejected "American" valuation. The "flexible" provision was inserted to appease supporters of the "American" valuation. It has never worked well. Now, the head of the group responsible for the "flexible" provision proposes a compromise between the valuation. He does more. He would not only compare articles at home and abroad, in order to arrive at the right import duty, but would substitute selling price for production cost in actually effecting a reconciliation between the value of articles in the home market and the value in principal markets abroad.

In the event that a workable system could be developed from this idea in outline, we would have a tariff that would really adjust the domestic and foreign price levels without being either prohibitive or discriminatory, and without artifically fostering one home industry at the expense of another. Obviously, this is the direction in which we must travel if we are ever to solve the difficult questions which underly the framing of a just and adequate tariff law. But a "flexible" provision could have no place in that kind of law, which would have no defect to be obscured by such a sorry makeshift.

UNCLE SAM'S TANKER FLEET.

Uncle Sam owns 402 oil tanker ships with a gross tonnage of 2,507,854 pounds. Uncle Sam surpasses John Bull in both number of tanker ships and gross tonnage and is the leader when it comes to the petroleum department of the merchant marine.

Uncle Sam has 45 per cent of the gross tonnage of the world and 39 per cent of the total ships available for the transportation of petroleum and other oils and molasses.

Great Britain ranks second. Holland and Norway tie for third place with France and Italy running neck and neck for fourth place. This is not surprising as the United States is the principal petroleum producing and oil exporting nation. Wherever a tanker floats, the Standard flag is there.

ARGENTINE COTTON CROP

Now comes the news that the cotton crop which is just being picked in Argentine is estimated at 74,700 bales of 478 pounds. While this estimate or above the 68,800 bales reported for 1924, it is small considering that the area planted amounted to 259,000 acres as compared with only 155,000 last year. First came the drouth, then the leaf worm and then a swarm of locusts in the cotton growing regions of the Pan-American republic.

Life for the cotton grower in many countries is "just one d— thing after another." There are spots in Texas where the hot winds and the drouth have combined to burn off the earth every green thing in sight. There are many spots in Texas where the cotton patches are desert wastes.

SLAVS BUYING AMERICAN COTTON.

Soviet Russia bought about 30 per cent more cotton in the United States the present crop year than last. More than 243,000 bales of American cotton was sold to Soviet Russia agents. This is said to reflect the increased buying power of the Russian peasant. Fifty years hence, Russia will be one of the great world powers. Just now, Russia is an outlaw among the nations of the earth.

CANCER.

Today's planetary aspects are rather complex; during the forenoon they are distinctly favorable. In the afternoon, they are quite adverse, but undergo a decided change in the evening, and become benign and restful. All your forceful efforts should be utilized in the morning, and the occasion is particularly propitious one for decisive action, as you will experience a sense of confidence and self-reliance which should not be ignored. Thereafter, abstintion from new adventures is the only safe course to follow, and nothing should be tackled that calls for irrevocable resolution. Later on, as the adverse conditions abate, a feeling of equanimity will be sensed, and there will be present stimulating vibrations tending towards an atmosphere of ease and tranquility.

Good health and material success will be the portion of the boy born today, while if the new arrival be a girl, she will suffer much from sickness, she will not destined to derive that happiness from life which is the inherent right of one and all. The boy will be healthy and robust, and have a character and temperament in keeping with such conditions. He will be a "hail fellow well met," and, by personality and ability, achieve much success. The girl will be variable in temperament, never knowing her own mind, and more liable to be a victim of infatuation than a beneficiary of love. Her ideals are liable to be shattered and her hopes frustrated.

While sympathetic and kind, you, if today is your birthday, are self-opinionated and dictatorial. You are lacking in judicial temperament, and can only see and appreciate your own point of view. You are always convinced that you are right, and that those who do not agree with you, must be wrong. You trust more to your intuition than to your judgment, and are both independent and self-contained. Your popularity with members of your own sex is rather negative, but you elicit a certain degree of admiration from those of the opposite sex, to whom you always appear as a convincing talker and a successful "raconteur." Not only are you self-contained, but you are also self-centered, and, in a rather selfish way, get a great deal of enjoyment out of life, although you do not radiate either happiness or contentment, so far as others are concerned.

Successful people born on this date are: Samuel Huntington, jurist; Henry Hitchcock, lawyer; David McC. Smyth, inventor; Henry Inman, soldier and author; Mary Lowe Dickinson, author; Ripley Hitchcock, author and critic.

HOW IT STARTED

The "Midshipman."

The "midshipman," or "middy," as he is sometimes called "for short," in the United States and British navies, is the seaman next in rank below a commissioned officer. That is, he is not a common seaman, and yet not an officer. It is not, however, from this "middle" position, as it were, of his rank or grade in the service that he takes his name, but from a circumstance in the nurtering of men of his class more than two centuries ago!

The title "midshipman" in the British navy had its origin in the British navy over two hundred years ago. It was derived from the fact that the "young gentlemen" as contemporary records refer to them, who were under instruction on British-men-of-war for the purpose of becoming officers, were given quarters "amidships" abreast on the lower deck!

With the organization of the navy of the American colonies, the practice of the British navy was followed with regard to this as well as other ranks. A few years after the Civil war the title of "midshipman" at the naval academy and on probation at sea for two years afterward, was changed to "cadet midshipman." In 1882 it was changed to "Naval Cadet," but in 1902 the title of "midshipman" was restored. Today midshipmen no longer serve two years at sea after graduation, but are commissioned as ensigns as soon as they leave the academy.

CHAPTER XXI

Working Back.

"We get this call from Tony Remetti," explained Bill. "Tony's the boss bootlegger down around Washington Square—he's the one all the janitors around here have to buy from, see—that's his territory. And Tony's been getting his hootch down in Jersey—down at the Highlands. But he's got to find a new place; they ain't runnin' his kind from Canada much, no more. So he hooks up with this crowd here—this is his first trip. And the boss takes me off my cab because I know my way round, see, and I've driven Tony before."

"Your boss takes chances, doesn't he" said Pete. He was perfectly sure that Bill winked, even though he couldn't see.

"So I drive Tony down, and figure all I've got to do is curl up in the car and pound my ear until they're ready to load her up and start back. But pretty soon along comes Tony with some of the other gang, holding you up, sort of, and shoving you along, and Tony tells me to take you home, and they gave me the song and dance about you hittin' the hootch and passing out. It's all the same to me, see—so we starts off.

"Now the way I dope it, Tony didn't know much more'n I did about you. He ain't the kind o' wop that goes lookin' for trouble—and if he did, it'd be in a dark alley, with a knife."

"What's your plan, Bill?" inquired Pete.

"Don't know, ye. Tactics, though — that's our lay. They got the weight —we gotta have the science—see?"

Pete was abnominably tired; each step was harder to take than the last had been. But the headland was not far away now, and when they came up to it and faced the task of getting around, Bill called a halt.

"It's a barefoot dancing act from now on," he said. "Take off your shoes and tie the laces—in a good, stiff knot. Then sling 'em round your neck. And remember — if you swing those shoes the lad that gets 'em on his jaw'll know something hit him."

He proved that three minutes later. They had to wade the last few feet of the journey around the headland; the wash of the surf was about their feet among the rocks. For a moment they paused. The cove lay before them; rocks poked their noses up out of the water to their right — and provided shelter for their journey to the beach —a journey Bill had greatly feared, and had been planned to avoid, if necessary, by a detour around the road and inland. They could see the house, dim and neutral against the background of sand and low shrubs.

It was Bill, not Pete, who first saw the lurking figure by one of the rocks; Bill, who put his hand out swiftly to check Pete, and then crept forward while Pete, fascinated, stood watching, gun in hand, lest Bill need help. But Bill needed no help at all. His heavy shoes were as good a weapon as he had foreteld; swung at arm's length, with all of Bill's considerable strength, they sent the sentry down without a cry. Bill was on him like a cat; had him tied hand and foot with tire straps even before Pete reached him.

"Ought to be gagged, too," he said. "Never thought of that—"

He stood frowning, puzzling. It was Pete who was inspired, now, and reached down to bring up a handful of seaweed.

"Dirty trick," he said in a whisper. "It won't taste nice when he comes to!"

"We should worry. Here—stuff him good! That's the eye. Now a handkerchief to keep it in. Good night, nurse!"

"That's a good job well done!" said Pete.

"Means this much, too," said Bill. "They got something to be afraid of that you can come at this way. Way I dope it, there must be a tunnel that comes up to your cellar back there—see? They land the stuff—run it right up through the tunnel—and there you are!"

"Hello," said Pete. He was looking out to sea.

"What now?"

"Why, a minute ago I saw three white lights out there—and now there's nothing again. Wait—they may come again."

They did—but red, this time, and then, a moment later, white again.

"That's their runner!" said Bill, and drew a long breath. "Now, I wonder—"

"What?"

"How they work it here. Whether they have to go out, or they show a signal and the runner sends a boat in! You want to root for them to go out, boss! That's the biggest part of my plan! Attaboy—gee! What a layout they got! Look, boss—quick!"

Between two rocks the nose of a motor-boat appeared. She came on out slowly—a long, low black craft, her lines proclaiming speed.

The boat gathered speed. Its engine was muffled; there was none of the noise such a craft usually makes, but only the low hum of a powerful motor.

They crept along among the rocks, well sheltered; clouds had begun to scud across the sky, anyway, and it was a dark, obscure night that made it hard to see anything clearly a hundred feet away. Their objective was fixed now, it was the opening in the rocks through which the boat had come. Here, plainly, was a queer freak of this sandy coast; a natural cave of some sort, probably open to the sea at low tide. With this seaward side of the cove, of course, Pete wasn't familiar at all; he had no chance, before, to examine it.

It was tricky going. They were in a foot or more of water most of the time, and there were plenty of sharp rocks about. Half a dozen times Pete stepped on one, and had all he could do to suppress the sharp cry that rose to his lips.

CHAPTER XXII

Watchful Waiting.

They could see the opening now, and paused a moment to study it. Just at first it seemed to them that they were balked. The formation was as queer as Pete had reasoned it must be. Deep water ran in between two overhanging rocks; unless a shelf narrowed the opening there was no way didn't like the idea of swimming into the cave—not with the possibility of encountering tricky whirls and eddies. He had a fleeting admiration for the seamanship of the bootleggers taking a boat in there was something requiring nerve and steadiness. But then, of course, they knew the way—and he and Bill didn't.

"Hold on," said Bill. "There's another way in—must be. They used this tunnel at high tide—and they couldn't have gone in this way then. There's a side door—bound to be. And my guess is it's on the left as we go in. Let's play that first anyway."

It was blind hunting, but at least they knew, within a few feet, the line upon which the entrance must be found, if at all. And suddenly a low sound of talking stopped them both dead, and set them to listening. They couldn't make out anything that was said, but they had their clue. Bill moved about, groping with his hands; straightened up at last, triumphantly.

Pete crept over to him, and Bill took his hand and guided it to an iron ring fastened to a wooden door, such as is used over cellar openings in old-fashioned houses.

"It gives," he whispered. "They're so sure they're safe they didn't even bother to fasten it inside. Boss, this is so easy it sort of scares me."

Even as he spoke the wooden door was pushed up. It threw Pete over backward; as he scrambled up, rising on hands and knees, Bill flung himself through the door. They struggled for a moment; from the first, Bil had him. But he couldn't keep him from giving an alarm, and at once there was a sound near by, seemingly from the sand itself, of shouting and running.

"Bet!" Pete shouted—no use being cautious now! "We're here — we're coming after you—"

He heard Elizabeth's voice then in the midst of a cry it was silenced. Furiously he plunged down the opening the door had covered; staggered and fell as he landed, and then was up flashing his light about. He was in a long passage, roughly timbered, dark as pitch, save for the needle of light he sent prying here and there. He could hear the sound of men running; just too late he caught a glimpse of a dark mass moving away from him and the sea, and toward the house.

At once he gave chase. But he was still thirty feet away when a door was flung shut before him, and he reached it only to be thrown back by the force of his own impact against boards so heavy that he realized at once that there was no chance of smashing them without weapons far heavier than he and Bill could hope to command.

As he stood baffled, sick at heart, Bill came up and brought his light, too, into play. We whistled.

"We've got to get through — we've got to!' 'cried Pete. "I tell you they took her through—"

"All right, all right, I know it," said Bill. "But when you ain't got strength enough you got to use your bean—get me boss? Here's where we separate. You take your artillery and beat it for the house, quick as the Lord'll let you—see? I'll stay here and operate as a detached unit—see?"

"We're in their secret tunnel—see? And these guys know it—but the ones in the boat don't. They don't know how many of us there are—nor who we are, for sure. For all they know we're revenue men, see, or state police. They got to get word to the boat — that's the only thing they got their minds on now, see? And they got to get a man out through the house to do it. You go choke him off — and don't worry about hurting him, either, if you got to."

"Right!" Pete's mind was by no means at par yet, but he could follow Bill's extremely accurate thinking, and he could obey orders. He backtracked along the tunnel, got out into the open, and made his way slowly toward the house. He dared not go inside; they might be anticipating an attempt to force an entrance. And if Bill's guess had been right, if they had only two, or at the most, three men, to deal with, the garrison that the main body of the bootleggers had left behind was distinctly up against it.

It had to warn the men in the boat; it had to keep some sort of watch upon him and Bill; it had to guard Elizabeth—who was, by now, an extremely important hostage. His common sense told him they wouldn't dare to hurt her; that now, thinking their position desperate, they were unlikely to do anything to make it worse. But his common sense had extremely little to with his feelings; only the need for swift and continued action kept him from going mad. He knew at least how men feel when they rush into a burning house.

He tried to estimate how far the door in the tunnel was from the walls of the house, but couldn't satisfy himself at all. It reminded him of a game he had been wont to play with himself in the New York subway, when he was riding on an express, and would close his eyes, trying to determine just when the train reached each local station. He hadn't opened his eyes at the right spot one time in ten. Somewhere, he decided, there must be a hiding-place for the liquor they brought in. They must use this spot for storage; obviously it couldn't always be practicable, and it certainly wouldn't always be safe or desirable, to carry off the stuff that was brought ashore at once. It wasn't in the house; that much he was ready to swear. Probably the cache was on the other side of the door that had belted him and Bill, and from that, again, the mysterious entrance into the cellar of his house must open.

He wished that he had had time to follow the tunnel back to the water—but Bill, no doubt, had done that, by this time, and would know all it was necessary to know. He could afford to move about freely in the tunnel; no one could open that door without his knowledge.

Pete, on the other hand, was as firmly fixed in the vantage spot he chose as if he had been chained to a post. He had selected the almost flat top of a small sand hill, where he could hollow out a place and lie himself unseen, and still be sure of seeing anyone who might come from the house. As minute after minute passed without the display of any signal, it became more and more certain, it seemed to him, that sooner or later a man must try to make his way down to the beach, to warn the boat and its crew as it came back. They knew in the house, of course, when to expect the boat back: no need to send the messenger out too soon.

Peculiar Accident Has Taken Burkburnett Lad's Life After Six Days

BURKBURNETT, July 2.—The funeral of little David Westland Bouslog, 4 years old, who died in the Wichita Falls general hospital Wednesday night, will be held in this city tomorrow afternoon at the Owen's Funeral Home at 5 o'clock, Rev. M. L. Hamilton officiating, interment following in the Burkburnett cemetery, by the Owens' director.

The child's death was caused from a most unusual accident last Friday when he pulled a cloth from his mother's refrigerator on which had been placed a four-pound iron weight. The weight struck him in the stomach, rupturing an intestine. He was hurried to the hospital for surgical treatment but succumbed to peritonitis.

David is the only child of an adult family, the next older child, a brother, being 10 years of age.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Bouslog, and sister, Mrs. J. M. Battle, also survive him, together with the maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Scott of Grapemont, Okla., who have been with the family since the accident.

750-Gallon Pump Arrives Thursday

The new 750-gallon pump and combination hose wagon, built by the American-La France Fire Engine Company and purchased several months ago by the city council, arrived here Thursday morning and will be unloaded by firemen and an engineer of the company sometime today. The addition of the big machine brings the city's active fire fighting equipment a step nearer the mark it should be to be at full strength. Three pumper and hose trucks, two hose trucks, a hook and ladder truck and two chemical trucks, with an antique machine that does reserve duty occasionally now comprise the fire fighting apparatus.

The truck for the present will be housed at the central station and the hose wagon kept there sent to station No. 4 on Seventh street. The truck regularly in use there is to go to the paint shop for a long needed redecoration.

When this machine is finished more departments heads are frankly up against it. All existing stations are full, and a new one had been counted on for the housing of this machine. A continued delay in starting on the station, however, complicates matters considerably.

KLAN ISSUE TO FACE COOLIDGE SOON, IS CLAIM

Secret Order Will Invite Him to Review And Address Members

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., July 2.—(AP)—The ku klux klan controversy threatens to take a new turn as a result of the announced intention of the organization to invite the president to review its parade and address its members in Washington early in August. No formal invitation has been received, but is considered unlikely here that the president will be able to accept, particularly as he has indicated that he still will be summering here at the time.

The announcement that an invitation will be extended, however, has brought communications to Mr. Coolidge from a number of individuals and organizations opposed to the klan, urging him to emphatically decline and in some instances appealing to him to do something to prevent the holding of the Washington meeting.

HEALTH WEEK

afternoon I just dropped things and took the time to go with a good citizen here and make an inspection; and gentlemen, some things I saw there virtually made my blood boil.

The Visit With Jones.

"A couple of days ago Mr. Joe Jones who lives over on the north side came to my office and said: 'Mr. Shepherd, there are some conditions over in our section of the city that I think you ought to know about and I wish you'd go with me and look them over. I think you'll find out about this typhoid business if you'll just go.'

"Well, I told Mr. Jones if he'd come back to my office at 2.30 the next afternoon I'd go with him and make a personal inspection of those things he wanted me to see. He said he'd be back, so the next day, that was yesterday, he came back and I got hold of Street Commissioner Clifford who had some other things to look after over there and we went.

"When we got there Mr. Jones showed us aplenty. In one point, in point, in a radius of four blocks I counted 30 open toilets, and in that same radius were 12 cases of typhoid fever. That was bad enough, but the thing that got me most of all was the fact that a city sewer line was running down the alley behind every one of those unconnected houses; and I learned that 15 of those 30 houses were owned by two men, either one of whom could probably buy the whole north side, yet despite the persistent pleas of the city they had refused to spend the money to connect their rent houses from which they were getting big monthly payments to the sewers.

One Man to Die.

"Mr. Jones pointed out to us one place where a house was connected to the sewer all right, but on each side of him were houses that had these open toilets in back yards. 'There's an old man in there that won't pull through,' Mr. Jones told us, and it made me tingle all over to think of that fellow who in all probability had contracted his case of typhoid from one of those toilets, lying there dying because of some one's niggardliness."

The mayor then went on to explain that Mr. Patton had sought a number of times to get these large property owners to connect their houses, but that so far they had not done it.

"It's come to the point now," the mayor continued, "when I think the city council will say to Mr. Patton, 'you go get this thing done; we'll back you to the limit in any action you take but get it done.' You gentlemen have done some fine work in getting things started toward sterilization of glasses and in inspection of milk and water and all that, but I don't think all those things put together are as important as this thing of open toilets right in our thickly settled residence sections. The city clerk tells me that there are 1,500 open toilets in Wichita Falls now and that over half of them can be connected to the sewer. It seems to me that's a thing for all of us to work on."

Whitworth Is Heard.

With Mayor Shepherd's speech concluded, Dr. J. M. Whitworth, city physician, took the floor and told the committee he had personally visited every house in town where a typhoid fever case had been reported, had checked up on the water supply, milk supply and sewage facilities and had found that 40 percent of the cases originated in residences that were not connected to the city sewer lines.

"There is no question in my mind," Dr. Whitworth said, "but that these open toilets are the chief source of infection. Mayor Shepherd is absolutely right when he says they ought to have attention right away."

Commission Patton himself was the next one. He heartily seconded the mayor's sentiments and gave some more data which named such streets as Filmore, Kemp, Buchanan and Grant which ran far out to the southwestern rim of town where "the number of open toilets is disgraceful." He went on to explain that he was ready to "bring these folks into court any time, but it's like the old third reader story, we've hollered wolf so often I don't much think we can scare them any more."

Mr. Patton went into some detail in explaining how he had served notice time and again on these persons and how he had ordered a number of arrests for refusing to make the connections. He said it seemed like a pretty hard matter, though, to enforce this city ordinance.

Discuss Procedure.

A rather lengthy discussion of what methods to pursue to force these connections followed. It was agreed that stiff fines in court were the most effective means, and some members of the committee suggested the newspapers give prominent publicity to the matter and print the names of all persons charged with violation of the sanitary ordinance. This idea fell through, though, when reporters present recalled that police court proceedings were not privileged and a flock of libel suits would probably result from such publications, even if the papers looked favorably on such a scheme.

It all ended when Commissioner Patton, at the suggestion of Mayor Shepherd, said he would start a man in the morning notifying property owners unconnected to the sewer that they had one week in which to make these connections. If this had not been done then, he said, they would be brought into court and asked why, with the presumption of a fine to follow. One hundred dollars was a figure indicated as reasonable in such a case.

Mr. Patton remarked during the discussion that he didn't know where he'd get the money to pay for this extra employe the work would require, but Mayor Shepherd told him to "go ahead, we'll find the money for you somewhere. After we've fined ten or a dozen of these guys the first morning we'll have plenty of money to pay your men."

The meeting ended with the appointment by Dr. Leach of a committee composed of Dr. J. H. Fletcher, J. N. Shears and Joe Huckins to appear before the city council next Monday night and recommend to it that it take drastic action to enforce these connections.

Druggists Cooperating.

Discussion of the committee, druggists and city officials on "soft drink stand" sanitation was of a lengthy nature in the first meeting. It developed right at the start that drug stores were not under fire and that the meeting was called simply in the interests of a move which, it was thought, would rebound to the benefit of all concerned. Dr. Fletcher brought this out early in the night when he asked "why all this discussion anyhow? Who started it and is all this typhoid fever business being blamed on the druggists?"

Dr. Leach assured him it was not and that the meeting had no connection at all with the typhoid scare. He said newspaper reports of previous activities of the committee had conveyed a mistaken idea of the situation.

It was here Dr. Fletcher suggested that in fairness to the drug stores, the name "soft drink stands" be substituted. Before it was over, cafes, meat markets, bakeries, groceries and all establishments handling food products in bulk were included.

Stripped of a lot of discussion pro and con on unimportant phases, the meeting finally hit on the washing of glasses in hot running water after every service, and washing them once a day in some cleansing solution. It was pointed out that not over half a dozen soda fountains in town were equipped with hot water service, but a number of druggists present acquiesced in belief that installation of hot water systems would not be prohibitive. It was their opinion that washing it hot water was a reasonable safeguard and that they could do it without any great amount of inconvenience.

Dr. Leach asserted emphatically it was not the wish of the committee to impose any hardship on them and that all that was wanted was a practical means of cleansing glasses more thoroughly than was being done now.

Mr. Patton was doubtful again when they got around to the inspection proposition. He said he hadn't neither the men nor the money to "do things the way Dallas does," this being in reference to a study the committee made on the inspection and grading system employed by the Dallas health department. He finally admitted, though, that it would be a good thing and he would co-operate all he could.

Motions were finally passed, after considerable recommending, that the committee recommend to the city council a compulsory inspection of all food and drink establishments at least once a month, that these be graded on their sanitary basis and the grades given posted in a conspicuous place.

WICHITA MTS. BECKON TEXAS FOR JULY 4TH

Plenty of Attractions Are Available; Roads Good

The Wichita National Forest is becoming more and more popular with North Texas people. Craterville park in the south edge of the Wichita mountains is only a sixty-five mile drive from Wichita Falls by way of the Grandfield bridge and straight north from there through Grandfield, Chattanooga and Cache.

Roads Are Good.

The road leading north from Craterville park to Medicine park is a beautiful drive over smooth mountain roads. Towering canyon walls, jumbles of massive boulders, and ever changing color resulting from the play of sunlight and sunlight product delightful scenery. Cool mountains and wooded and grass carpeted parks provide ideal camping grounds.

Craterville park and Medicine park have made preparations to accommodate crowds of visitors on July 4.

Indians Will Dance.

Craterville park is staging a three-day rodeo and rund-up, July 3, 4 and 5. Frank Rush, manager of Craterville park, has secured many entertainment features. The new grandstand and half mile race track have just been completed. There will be Indian dances, and fireworks displayed from the surrounding mountain sides at night, and Indian pony races, wild bronco riding, steer riding, bulldogging, and calf roping as well as many other features during the day.

Fishing and Swimming.

Swimming, dancing, boating and fishing will be the principal features at Medicine park. A sunrise dance with music furnished by the Lone Star five, a seven piece orchestra from Dallas is offered for the morning of the fourth. The Sooner Serenaders will furnish music for the afternoon and evening dancing. The bath house will be kept open all night the third, fourth, and fifth, to accommodate the celebraters who would rather swim than sleep. Although all hotel and cottage reservations have long since been taken, free camping grounds are there for those who wish to bring a blanket.

The military forces from Ft. Sill will stage their mammoth National Defense Day parade in Lawton on the Fourth of July morning.

Huge Cotton Crop Is Seen In Forecast

WASHINGTON, July 2.—(AP)—A crop of 14,339,000, equivalent 500-pound bales was forecast today by the department of agriculture as this year's probable cotton production. Should favorable conditions prevail from now until time of picking and the quantity forecast today materialize, the crop would be the third largest in cotton history. It would exceed last year's crop by almost three quarters of a million bales.

The prospective bumper crop is the result of an exceedinly large acreage probably the largest ever planted, and the favorable conditions generally of the growing plants. There were 46,448,000 acres in cultivation on June 25. That is 3,807,000 acres more than in cultivation a year ago. The increased acreage is due to the planting of considerable new land, substitution of cotton on land used last year for various other crops and the planting of land that was idle last year. In every state except Virginia, Missouri and Arizona, the area exceeded last year's.

The condition of the growing plants was better than a year ago everywhere except in Texas. The average condition was 75.9 per cent of normal. That is 4.7 points above the June 25 condition last year and 1.9 points above the ten year June 25 average. In the last month the crop as a whole declined 0.7 points as compared with a ten year average improvement of 2.0 points. In Texas the decline was six points whereas the improvement there is about three points. Rain is badly needed for cotton there.

New Ice House On Tenth Is Planned

Aided by a $75,000 permit for construction of a newice house at Baylor and Tenth street, building permit records for Thursday nibbled at the $100,000 mark and when the day closed ten permits with a combined valuation of $94,850 had been issued by the city clerk. The total for the entire week has now gone well above the $100,000 figure.

The other construction work authorized was for smaller buildings, mainly moderately priced residences.

The new ice house is to be built by E. R. Brinker of Sulphur Springs, who is establishing a chain of such concerns in northwest Texas. It will represent a total investment of about $100,000 and will be housed in a two-story brick building, 60 by 100 feet in dimensions. It will have a capacity of 40 tons a day and will sell only on a platform basis. No deliveries will be made.

It Was a Hard Night And Wild One For Jack Thursday, The Big Bum

Jack's batting average in the Mentality league slumped again Thursday morning.

"All right, you big bum," Sergeant McConnell snorted when a limping and bedraggled hound struggled into the police station. "You've been out on another wild party and got the tar licked out of you. I'll fix you up, but I ought to kick you out and give you another licking. Aren't you never going to learn?"

It seems that the cops official mascot never will. He is already on the shady side of life, and the scars he wears as badges of many a losing encounter evidently serve as no reminder whatsoever of that adage "discretion is the better part of valor." He still insists on battling anything that comes along—and he still gets whipped.

He had a hard night Thursday, it seemed. One forepaw was chewed raw and the right side of his head bore deep and painful gashes where some bulldogs teeth had sunk home. A veterinarian was called to attend to him and for the balance of the day he cowed under McConnell's chair. Even the clamor of fire trucks racing from the station failed, for once, to excite him.

Nobody knows where or why he met disaster last night, but the cops suspect he got young ideas all at once, shined up to some flapper and ran afoul of the flapper's sweetie.

TO ENLARGE COMPRESS

GALVESTON, July 2.—Bids for the construction of a concrete cotton compress, which will be an addition to the Merchants and Planters Compress and Warehouse company will be opened July 8.

The new structure will be one story and will be constructed of concrete, according to D. W. Kempner, it will house another compress and storage facilities. Work will be started within the near future and be completed in time to handle next season's crop.

RAINS NEEDED IN NO. TEXAS SAYS CO. AGENT

Situation Not Serious However, Declares Guy R. Jones

Another heavy rain in North Texas would be a welcome boon to farmers just now, County Agricultural Agent Guy R. Jones said Thursday, in commenting on agricultural conditions generally. The situation now is by no means serious, he pointed out, but he said a continued lack of rainfall would be increasingly detrimental as time wore on.

Cotton so far has withstood the dryness very well, it having obtained sufficient moisture in the driving downpours of a month or six weeks ago to hold up for some time yet. Garden crops, however, are badly in need of rain and plenty of it.

Conditions now are about like they were last year when a rain the Fourth of July proved a salvation for practically all agricultural sections in the north part of the state.

TOLL BRIDGE

Henrietta had little opposition for the 1926 district convention.

The much anticipated fight over the fencing in of Lake Kemp did not develop. It was thought from pre-convention rumors that a spirited fight would be inaugurated by the delegates against the action of W. P. Waggoner in fencing in the land surrounding Lake Kemp. The subject was not brought up except in an indirect way and no resolution was passed.

Carl L. Pool, head of the Pool Manufacturing company of Sherman and former president of the Texas Manufacturing association made one of the best industrial addresses ever heard here, in which he told how the chamber of commerce could be instrumental in securing new industries for a community.

Col. C. C. French, industrial agent for the Fort Worth Stockyards company spoke on the development of cotton and livestock in West Texas. He stressed the need of more pork raising in the Panhandle and western part of the state.

His chief interest however, he stated, was in the development of the cotton industry. Taking the chief subject ofthe convention, he showed how cotton would in time be the only real product of the state certain to make Texas wealthy. Boll weevils were pointed out as a constantly growing menace to the great product of the southwest. Unless this menace was blotted out, he expressed the belief that in time cotton production in Texas would sink back to nothing. His opiion was that the only practical way in which to blot out the weevil was through turkeys and fowls, which when turned loose in the cotton field would soon destroy the insects.

Tells of Milk Industry.

Dr. A. L. Lush, of the department of dairy husbandry of the Texas A. & M. college, brought out the highlights of the milk industry in West Texas and the Panhandle. He admitted that there was no enormous wealth in the industry but that if handled properly contained both a future and prosperity. With the facilities adaptable for dairying in the western part of the state, Mr. Lush expressed the belief that within the next few years, the state was due to see a rapid rise in dairying in this section of Texas.

M. B. Oates, agricultural agent of the Fort Worth and Denver railroad took up the subject of poultry. He pointed out that the chicken and turkey industry was especially adaptable to West Texas. Here again, he stated, was another industry that as yet had not been developed as it should. His belief was that in a short time chicken and poultry farms would begin to supplant the truck farmers and the dry farmers, for poultry raising is an industry that can carry on in the face of drouths that will kill crops raised by the dry farming method.

V. H. Schoffelmoyer of Dallas, creator of mor ecotton on fewer acres, gave an account of the cotton contest being conducted by The Dallas News with the support of the chamber of commerce. The aim of the contest was to increase the amount of cotton per acre and also to better the quality of th eproduct, he said.

R. A. Highsmith, convention manager of the West Texas chamber of commerce, told just what the organization stands for. It was organized seven years ago, he stated, when all the crops of the state had been killed by a severe drouth, when the entire nation had lost faith in the Panhnadle and the western part of the state. Taking the money appropriated by the state legislature the organization had set out to sell West Texas to the world. As a result her industries were gradually becoming known to the world. In less than seven years, over 8,000,000 inches of publicity had been sent out by the sectional organization. It now had a membership of over 7,000 and was reckoned the second largest chamber of commerce in existence

Mayor R. E. Shepherd of Wichita Falls made an afterdinner speech in which he brought out the need of cooperation in building communities "It was co-operation that built the world," he stated. "Only through cooperation can we hope to attain any sort of success either individually or in the community." Going back to Biblical times the mayor showed how the Lord and Adam co-operated to build the world and how the world later fell in the time of Noah due to lack of co-operation.

Welcomed to Electra.

G. E. McDavid, president of the Electra chamber of commerce made the address of welcome at the morning session, in which he bade all the visitors welcome to Electra, setting out that the city boasted a population of 9,000 people and was believed one o fthe best developed cities in the state. A. M. Bourland, one of the pioneer farmers of Vernon responded to the address.

Dinner for the delegates was served by the ladies of the First Baptist church. Several short talks were maed by delegates from each of the towns represented. Two vocal solos were sung by Mrs. Carrol N. Cameron of Electra with Mrs. Louis Moad also of Electra at the piano. The Rotary club quartette of Electra gave several song offerings. Following the convention the delegates were taken on a short automobile tour through the surrounding farming and oil fields.

Out-of-town guests in attendance were. George N. Wells, O. P. Maricle, Wayne Sommerville, H. L. Hunter, Hubert Harrison, L. E. Stone, C. C. Kimberly, C. L. Allen, B. A. Slayton, R. E. Lenick, A. A. Kuehn, R. D. Donnell and Noble Gray, B. G. Ripley, Aubrey Rogers, Jean P. Montgomery, Fred L. Haskett, Oral Jones, Walter Cline, Jimmie Allison, W. R. Carter, L. D. Parnell, J. N. Lewis, J. T. Harrell, W. F. Ivers, Louis Boarmaster, D. C. Littlepage, J. Will Gray, Guy R. Jones, Judge B. D. Sartin and Mayor R. E. Shepherd, all of Wichita Falls.

W. H. Cook, I. F. Ancorn, R. C. Green, F. O Moore, Howard Prugsett, Doris Kelly, Carl W. Kuehn, Butler, F. H. Shabner, T. B. Slagle, L. C. Kelly, J. L. Green, P. N. Newvelle, J. A. Haskane, C. A. Caruthers, Homer Block, C. B. McDonald, G. E. Gates, Lloyd Gates, and Boy Scouts Lloyd Biggerstaff, Dick Honey, Henry Nutter John Dodd, Preston Douglas, Harriford Green, O. T. Lisles, Owen Smith, Earl Calloway, G. P. Jones, Coye Sandeford, Ira Childs, G. R. McNeil, Wayne Cocknum, Billie Elkins, Haskell Sandeford, Dick Wiseman, W. H. Kerbow, Charlie Keller, Dean Loftin, Charlie Brandy, Fred Williams and Paul Teague, scoutmaster all of Henrietta.

S. S. Dates, L. P. George, L. D. Lovett, I. Rhodes of Graham; R. H. Nichols, R. M. Fieder, A. M. Bourland of Vernon; R. F. Anglin and B. L. Bradford of Iowa Park; C. R. Cowins of Bankhead, John Boswell, V. H. Schoffelmoyer, D. McDowell and T. V. Murray of Dallas; C. C. French of Fort Worth; G. L. Lush of A. and M. college; E. A. Siber of St. Louis; Carl Feel of Sherman; Howard D. Wade of Stamford, and R. A. Highsmith of Morsn.

The resolutions follow:

The efficiency and constructive work of the West Texas chamber of commerce is so well known and thoroughly appreciated that we deem it unnecessary to ass enconiums with reference to the organization.

We feel it a duty, however, that the Red river valley district of the organization should wive unqualified and unstinted support to the parent organization. We express full satisfaction and deep interest in the program of intense diversified farming and pledge full co-operation to this splendid program. We take the further pledge that the executive officers will have our full support in their activities for the constructive development of West Texas.

1. We believe that the progress and development of the state of Texas depends upon the construction of good roads and bridges in the state. There is now a barrier between Texas and her sister state, Oklahoma in the form of toll bridges, and this interference with the trade and recreation and commercial intercourse that should exist between the two states. Efforts are being made to break down this barrier by the elimineton of these toll bridges, and we respectfully urge and recommend that the State Highway commission take such action as will abate the toll bridge as speedily as possible.

2. We urge the need of more railway transportation in West Texas, but in this connection we point to the need of proper support. We point to the fact that the Fort Worth and Denver railway has announced a program of extension in West Texas that appears practical and needful and we record this district convention as giving its hearty approval to the practical extensions of new lines that are in contemplation by the said Fort Worth and Denver railroad or by any other system or company.

3. We recognize in automotive transportation a vital factor in the development of West Texas. We submit, however, that it is unwise to permit the highways to be used indiscriminately for automobile and freight service by irresponsible and unregulated carriers. In those states where the greatest efficency has attained in automotive transportation there has been strict supervision and regulation by state authorities, with power to grant licenses regulate tariffs and establish liabilities. We therefore urge our legislature to enact laws that will accomplish this result.

4. One of the greatest present assets of the Red river valley of the West Texas chamber of commerce is the oil and gas industries. We express full and thorough satisfaction that the 39th legislature passed no legislation that would retard the development of these great industries. We commend this attitude to the 40th legislature or to any special session of that body that may be called.

5. Giving full endorsement to the program of intense and diversified farming in all that those terms imply, and pledge our various communities to helpful cooperation along these lines.

6. We express the greatest hope for the continued development of the irrigable lands in Wichita valley irrigation district and point to this great project with just pride and satisfaction and also commend it as an example of progress that all sections in the Southwest may follow with profit.

7. We reaffirm the resolutions passed at the annual meetings of the West Texas chamber of commerce calling for a comprehensive tax survey of Texas. This with a view of securing equality and uniformity of taxes in Texas. We also record the Red river valley district of the organization in opposition to an income tax in the state, and express the conviction that an inheritance tax is unwise and unnecessary.

TOM MIX HERE JULY 4

"The Deadwood Coach" Starts At The Strand July 4 Insted of Sunday

It was Tom Mix himself who suggested that "The Deadwood Coach" be filmed among the Bad Lands of South Dakota. Tom had heard much ofthat country and saw in it tremendous possibilities as a background for a picture—especially the sort of picture which involves stunt riding and daring plunges over precipices.

The years went by, and the opportunity never came for the first Mix picture filmed proclaimed the big ranchman as king of all cowboys, and other pictures followed thick and fast in its wake. Other responsibilities came, too—a family and a ranch in Arizona which needed attention in the few breathing spaces allowed between pictures.

And so it happened that Tom Mix never saw the South Dakota Bad Lands until he stood at the edge of a rock ledge and looked across them a few months ago. Director Reynolds stood beside him, and they both were very silent. Even Tony, who stood gazing out at them over his master's shoulder seemed under the spell.

The finished picture has been considered a photographic triumph and, more important than that to Mix fans, it has been pronounced the most daring and thoroughly thrilling film Tom has ever turned out. In fact, the results were so entirely satisfactory that the Bad Lands are being seriously considered as a permanent location for Mix productions.

Comedy in "Are Parents People?" At the Olympic Starting Sunday

"Are Parents People?"

Is this picture entertaining

Its a new Paramount production, coming to the Olympic Sunday. Directed by Malcolm St. Clair, who made "The Lighthouse by the Sea." "Are Parents People?" is a story of a young girls efforts to bring about a reconcilliation between her parents who quarrel almost incessantly over petty matters and finally separate.

Adolphe Menjou, Betty Bronson and Florence Vidor are featured in the picture, which was adapted for the screen by Frances Agnew from Alice Duer Miller's story, which ran serially in the Saturday Evening Post.

The picture opens on the scene of Menjou and Miss Vidor, with trunks packed, all ready to set out—one for Paris, the other Reno. They have telegraphed Betty, the daughter, who is away at an exclusive young girls' boarding school, to come home and decide which one she is going with. The fun starts when Betty decides to go back to school and tells her parents that they are acting like a couple of kids. The laughs start right here in the first scenes and don't let up for a single moment until the fade-out.

More Truth Than Poetry

STATISTICS

If all the flivvers ever made
Were parked in series end to end,
From Jersey City to Belgrade—
And on to Melbourne they'd extend.

The savage words that General Dawes
Has said about the senate, and
Its tedious mode of making laws
Would cover twelve square miles of land.

If all the world's synthetic gin
Were poured tomorrow in the sea,
No fish that wears a tail or fin
But could embark upon a spree.

If all the drives you get away
Had gone exactly half as far
As you believe they did, you'd play
The course in sixteen under par.

If all the promises we hear
From statesmen who campaigning come,
Each Autumn, should be kept, next year
We'd be in the Millenium.

If from the hours we've loafed away
The chance they brought us we had got—
We might be millionaires some day.
Though very likely we should not.

The value of this stuff is nil,
As you by this time must have found
And said so forcibly, but still
Statistics make the world go round.

Wacoans Rout Lefty Winn To Stop Spudders Crew, 10 To 6

Ludlam and Riggs Stops Monroe's Travelers

TOP O' MORN STUFF

By BLONDY CROSS.

HOORAY! TEXAS LEAGUE IS SAVED AGAIN.

It has been annual custom in seven other Texas league cities on the eve of each split to prophesy the home team will now proceed to beat the Cats out of the second half gonfalon.

* * *

Different this year. Only six can make the boast. Beaumont is not in the league.

* * *

After simmering the situation down still further we'll drop Jinx Tucker and Waco from the list. Waco doesn't expect to win anything, anyhow.

* * *

So that leaves only five teams that are going to grab the gonfalon: Houston, San Antonio, Dallas, Shreveport and Wichita Falls.

Spuds Take First Shot.

The Spudders have been accorded the privilege (?) of starting the furiou Felines on the wornward path in ths split season opener Saturday at Fort Worth.

Opportunity for a double killing, for it's a bargain bill that is slated.

* * *

Dick Morgan and Bob Osborn are our mound selections. We shall wire Manager Tanner immediately about this.

It looks like Sutherland will carry the burden in the final game with Waco this afternoon. Buddy ought to pitch Bodie, or maybe Distel, thus saving Suds for the new start.

NO CASUALTIES.

Loud explosions in Waco last night. Nope, no enemy attack nor earthquake, but premature celebration with Fourth of July fire works. Wacoans actually got the better of our noble Spudders. But it doesn't mean anything.

"DEATH VALLEY"

This Scott, pitcher used by Tanner late in the affray, is not the original "Death Valley" George Scott, but that's what sports writers call him down around Austin where he has performed off and on the past several seasons.

* * *

Scott is a tall right hander, and packs a streaking speed ball, but his trouble yesterday, wildness, has been his great drawback all along. He has a world of stuff, but doesn't seem to be able to keep it under control.

* * *

Only trouble with Tanner's threeman pitching staff, Morgan, Osborn and Sutherland, is a double header. Best way out would be let one of 'em pitch both games.

Fred Ankerman, Buff sec who set up a huskey squawk against spliting the season, would have league moguls agree at the start of each season against voting a split for any time later on. The great Mr. Gray, Spudder secretary, observes exactly the converse. "Let them," says the great man, "Let them vote at the start of the season for a split always instead of waiting."

* * *

Another victory of mind over matter?

* * *

Coyboy Padgett has fought all the best welters in the country, the only drawback being that he lost to 'em.

* * *

Why is a southpaw, anyway?

Now let us do a little left-handed thinking. Who, we have been asked, do you believe will whip up on the other, Trammel or Padgett? And the answer by us, strange to say, is Trammel.

Kirkwood Loses Out in Glen Eagles Golf Tournament

GLEN EAGLES, Scotland, July 2. (AP)—Joe Kirkwood from the United States, and three professional golfers from France were eliminated from the Glen Eagles thousand-guineas tournament in the first day's play, leaving the British for the first time in a long while to fight it out among themselves for one of their principal golfing prizes.

After gaining a victory in the first round match this morning with C. H. Corlett, a West England player, Kirkwood this afternoon found himself against an opponent who could not make a mistake. He was Harry Amos and Kirkwood lost to him at the fifteenth hole.

The other overseas entries, Aubrey Boomer, Jean Gassiat and Arnaud Massey, were eliminated in the first round this morning. The eight survivors tonight are Percy Allis, Abe Mitchell, Arthur Havers, H. C. Kinch, Harry Amos, A. Compston, Charles Whitesombe and Tom Williamson.

FIPP KNOCKED UNCONSCIOUS

NEW YORK, July 2.—(AP)—Wally Pipp, Yankee first baseman, was knocked unconscious by a pitched ball thrown by Charles Caldwell, young Princeton university pitcher, in the batting practice prior to today's game with the Athletics at the Yankee stadium.

BLADES POLES TWO HOMERS

CHICAGO, July 2.—Ray Blades, star outfielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, today smashed out successive home runs in the first and second innings in the first game of the double-header with Chicago. Elmer Jacobs was on the hill for Chicago. It brought his total four-baggers to eight.

SMITH CREW POLES LUCKY 13 SAFE HITS

Rawls Connects for Home Run, Two Doubles, And Single

Ludlam and Riggs went into a triple tie for second place in the Twilight league with Texhoma and Monroe's Travelers Thursday afternoon by defeating the Travelers 12 to 6. Riley Rawls celebrated his new role as manager by collecting a single, two doubles and a home run in four tries. Hard hitting by both sides featured the game. Four doubles, three triples and four home runs were slammed during the game. Len Smith hit one for the circuit but failed to touch second base and was retired.

Don Faichney, playing his first game of the season, didn't look as if he had just recovered from a long sickness. Len Smith also had a great day at first base.

Clothiers Get Jump at Start.

A single by Herb Brown, Shaw's walk, Powell's sacrifice, Hanrel's triple, an error in centerfield, and Doke's triple gave the Clothiers a five-run lead in the first inning and sent Murrell from the hill.

A single by Lesley, a double by Rawls, and Delaney's timely single scored a pair for the Travelers in the first inning.

Hank Shaw hit a home run in the second for Ludlam and Riggs' sixth tally.

Rawls' long home run in the third scored another for the Travelers.

In the fourth Doke walked, Griffin singled, Herb Brown forced Doke at third, Griffin and Brown pulled a double steal when Shaw swung and missed the third strike. Both runners scored on Powell's sharp single to left.

Freddie Boone hit a home run in the fifth to give Ludlam and Riggs another tally.

Never Let Up.

Johnson went to left field in the fifth and took his first turn at the bat in the sixth and singled to left. Taylor doubled to left. Rawls doubled to center, scoring Johnson and Taylor.

Despite their lead Ludlam and Riggs never let up. In the seventh a trio of markers wer crushed over the pan. After two men had grounded out Ward lost the ball in the hedge back in deep center. Boone walked, stole second and third, and scored on Doke's double to center. Griffin singled to center, scoring Doke. Herb Brown bounced out, Taylor to Fachney.

Padgett No Veteran, But He's Fought Most of Top-Notchers

COWBOY PADGETT.

Cowboy Padgett, colorful western welter who now calls Chicago his home, is rated the odds-on favorite in his ten-round bout tonight with the youthful Duke Trammel of Fort Worth at the American Legion arena, Eleventh and Ohio. Padgett is given this ranking by Wichita Falls fistic followers because of his experience, socking ability and toughness, but not because of any exceptional cleverness.

Trammel, in the minds of a few of the closer students of the game, is believed a better battler, but there is fear held out thst Duke will not be at his best under the psychological strain of meeting the highly press-agented walloping westerner, the most formidable opponent, gathering from past performances, the Fort Worth lad has ever been matched with.

Cowboy's well known rushing tactics and swarming style may throw the Texas youngster on the defense at the start, and cause him to stay on the run too long for him to come back late in the fight with sufficient offense to grab the laurels, is the fear of the select ring fans who hazard that Duke is really the better manner.

Padgett, though by observing his battle scarred features one would be led to believe has been fighting at least a century, really has a short career behind him. He began professional scrappin, in 1922. In this year he fought Mickey Walker a ten-round decision go, met Jack Britton in another ten-round no-decision bout, lost to Dave Shade in 12 rounds, and mingled mittens with a number of lesser boxing luminaries. Walker stopped Padgett in 12 rounds in 1923. Cowboy lost to Britton in 12 rounds the same year, knocked out Jimmy Jones in six rounds, and later fought Jones a ten-round no-decision battle. Padgett fought very little in 1924. In fact, the only bout the record book shows for him was a ten-round no-decision affair with Jimmy Finley.

This year Cowboy has been quite active, taking the good boys and bad ones alike. Some of the boys he has fought who are well known to Wichita Falls and North Texas fans are Warnie Smith, Ray Long, Speedy Sparks (Sparks won the decision), and Bobby Green, who originally had been matched to box Duke tonight. Padgett defeated Green in a slambang tiff.

Cowboy is matched to meet Tillie Kid Herman in San Antonio July 7, he said yesterday.

Both Trammel and Padgett completed their training Thursday with very light workouts, and each has declared himself in fit condition.

Tabby Levine and Blas Rodrigues, semi-finalists matched for an eight-rounder, also are said to be in tip-top shape.

There are to be three four-round preliminaries, announced Promoter Wofford last night, including a negro battle.

CAL NOT BE ABLE TO REFEREE

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 2.—(AP)—A message from President Coolidge regretting that previous engagements would make it impossible for him to act as honorary referee at the international intercollegiate track meet here July 11 was received by the Harvard college authorities today. The meet will bring the combined track teams of the English universities, Oxford and Cambridge, against a Harvard-Yale team.

TEMPLE PLAYERS SUSPENDED

MEXIA, Texas, July 2.—Catcher Henderson and Pitcher Pipkin of the Temple baseball club have been indefinitely suspended from the Texas association by J. D. McIntosh, president of the league. It was announced today. The action follows an alleged attack on Jack Stewart, umpire, at Austin yesterday, when he ordered the game between Temple and Austin forfeited to Austin, the president said.

as a starting pitcher. Ty Cobb suffered a wrenched leg in the fourth inning and had to retire from the game. The score:

Ed Hughes' Column

SOMETHING TO SEE.

Can you think of any baseball game you'd rather witness than one of a world series? No? Then read this and blow yourself to a change of mind:

"Fort Worth, Texas (U. P.).—The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan here have organized an amateur baseball team and the team has been admited to the Fort Worth Amateur association. In the same league is a team organized by the Knights of Columbus. The schedule for the season calls for several games between the two teams. The practice field is bounded by a cemetery for Jewish people, and on the other side is a Catholic hospital. The uniforms of the players will bear a flaming cross on a white background, while the letter 'K' will adorn the cap."

Americans Learned From British?

An illuminating article from the pen of A. B. George, famous British runner, explaining why, in his opinion, we are the masters of the English in field events:

"The idea that the wonderful performances accomplished by American pole vaulters, shot-putters, hammer throwers, etc., is due to teaching by professional coaches who were superperformers at these games is entirely wrong.

"In the early eighties a small band of American athletes and officials visited England, partly to study our methods and also to show English sportsmen that in L. E. Myers the land of the Stars and Stripes had a super-runner.

Baxter Taught Pole Vaulters.

"Both the Manhattan Athletic club and the New York Athletic club have sent several teams to England since then, while in addition small teams of British athletes visited America as the guests of Mr. Gus Sachs, of the Manhattan Aathletic club, in the eighties, while a representative London athletic club team were the guests of the New York Athletic club in 1895.

"It is merely a simple statement of fact to claim that the example of English and Irish athletes has had a great bearing on the wonderful development of athletics across the Atlantic.

Olympics Helped.

"Gradually the standard improved; though it needed the revival of the Olympic games, in 1896, to give that fillip which led to remarkable all-round improvement.

"It may be added that Hugh Baxter has never lost enthusiasm and he has played a big part in the coaching of many famous American athletes.

"This rather discounts the idea that amateur coaches are of little use, and why Baxter's advice was less valuable because he, being a millionaire, gives it gratis, than if paid for his services, is never explained by those who so loudly acclaim the professional coach.

Irish Come Over.

"In 1887, a team from Ireland visited America, when the hammer throwing of W. J. M. Barry and Dr. Daly greatly impressed their hosts. Jim Mitchell and J. J. Flanagan were other champions of Ireland and England who went to the United States a few years later, and the example and teaching of these super-athletes is the direct cause of the development of America's great weight exponents.

Greb Outpoints Walker In Fast Go; Wills Kayos Weinert

WELTERWEIGHT CHAMP SLUGS TOE TO TOE WITH TOPKICK OF MIDDLES IN FURIOUS STRUGGLE

Two Title Holders Stage Most Thrilling Scrap Held in Gotham Since the Dempsey-Firpo Go

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, July 2.(AP)—In fifteen rounds of terrific fighting tonight, Harry Greb of Pittsburgh, retained his world's middleweight championship against Mickey Walker of Elizabeth, N. J., welterweight king, before a colorful throng of 65,000 spectators in the main bout of a benefit show for the Italian hospital fund.

Lashing gamely back in the closing rounds, Walker saved himself from a knockout by a courageous stand which brought the crowd to its feet in a tribute which has seldom been given a beaten man in the historical ring of the National league baseball park. But Greb had piled up a tremendous lead on points throughout the fight, and the judges returned a speedy verdict for the title defender.

Twenty-four rounds of terrific fighting crammed the card that carried the immense audience to the heights of enthusiasm and then dropped it with a stunning thud as Harry Wills, negro heavyweight battered Charley Weinert of Newark, N. J., to the canvas in two brief rounds of a scheduled 15-rounder, and Dave Shade of California stretched the sensational Jimmy Slattery of Buffalo on the canvas with an unexpected right in the third round of a carded six-rounder.

Greb Aggressor.

The sensation Firpo-Dempsey battle, fought in the same arena, was repeated in the final battle, Walker and Greb, with knockdowns omitted. It was a meeting of moden cave men armed with five ounce gloves. They battered each other back and forth across the ring and out of it. They wrestled in the clinches. They milled around the referee with such fury that four times he was thrown to the canvas, on the second trip so hard that his leg was injured and he had to carry on as third man limping from gong to gong and often holding himself up by the ropes.

Greb at 159 pounds was seven pounds heavier than the welterweight champion and he used the margin to advantage throughout the battle. The Pittsburgh fighter, a master of all the tricks of the game, was too clever for his challenger. He was on top of Walker in every clinch with a right which never tired and which flew in all directions.

Round By Round Report

Walker came into the ring at 8:35 eastern standard time wearing the well known purple sweater and trunks. Greb followed a minute later. Both boys looked fit for their title match.

Greb enjoyed a seven-pound advantage over his welterweight challenger, the middleweight title holder weighing 159 with Walker scaling 152. Virtually every corner of the Polo grounds was filled as the main go got under way. The fight by rounds follows:

Round One—Walker took the lead at the bell, boring into Greb. Walker's right caught Greb at the belt. They fought furiously in the center of the ring, trading rights and lefts reckless. A stiff right uppercut rocked Walker's head. Walker countered with two rights to the jaw and Greb went back to the ropes. Greb measured Walker with a right to the jaw. They both were fighting willingly, trading punches at will. The pace was in an uproar. They sparred for an opening at the bell.

Mickey Goes to His Knees

Round Three—They continued the waddening pace, both fighting openly. A terrific left to the ribs shook Walker. They clinched. Walker scored heavily to Greb's body. At close quarters Greb landed five times to Mickeys' face and body. Both landed rights to the head. A stinging downward right to Walker's face slowed the welterweight king. They were engaged in an exchange of blows at the bell.

Greb Leads in Fourth

Round Four—Walker landed a left to the body. Greb countered with a stinging right to the face which staggered Walker. Another beautiful right to the face sent Walker back on his heels. A third one weakened Walker. They traded punches to the head. They wrestled in a neutral corner. Greb was in and out to the body before Walker could counter. The maddening pace was slackening and the boys were dancing around at the bell.

Round Five—Greb landed his right to Walker's uncovered jaw but Walker countered with a harder blow to Greb's jaw. Blood began to show from Walkers' mouth. They mixed it furiously. They traded body blows at close quarters. Walker landed his left to Greb's body but took a stiff right to the body and head in return. They were sparring for an opening as the bell halted the round.

Welter Wins Sixth

Round Six—Greb opened up his windmill tactics and drove both gloves to Walker's jaw with lightning rapidity. Walker doubled Greb with a left to the body. Walker landed another beautiful body blow. They traded blows in a neutral corner. Greb having an advantage. Greb landed four left uppercuts and crossed with his right to the jaw. A left to the jaw backed Greb. They were locked tight at the bell.

Eighth Greb's

Round Eight—A trip-hammer right bored its way to Walker's head, six successive times it found its mark. Walker landed prettily to the body but took four on the head in exchange. Walker missed an uppercut but took one in exchange. Greb rushed Walker to a neutral corner, battering him with blows from every direction. They stood toe to toe and slugged. They traded blows at close quarters. Walker's head rocked from the force of Greb's right just as the bell sounded.

Round Nine—They met in the center of the ring, both slugging rapidly and both landing effective blows. A straight right to Walker's face sent him to the ropes. Walker took another on the chin but fought gamely against Greb's fierce attack. Walker rushed Greb to the ropes. They clinched. Greb measured Walker but Walker beat him to the punch to the head. They were mixing it fast in center of the ring at the bell.

Round Ten—Greb landed a left to the jaw. Greb was covering nicely. He staggered Walker with a vicious body blow. Walker sank back on his heels when the one-two punch landed to his jaw but he came back strongly. A stinging right to the jaw turned Greb half around. It was a beautiful shot. Walker landed again to the head, trying in the resulting clinch. Both were serving straight for the head and landing telling blows. Four times Greb's right found Walker's chin just as the bell rang.

Walker Leads Eleventh.

ROUND ELEVEN: They wrestled around the ring neither landing effectively. A clean right staggered Greb when it landed on his uncovered jaw. Greb missed his right and Walker scored twice to Greb's jaw. The fighting was tremendously fast. Walker landed to the head with both his right and left and Greb drove to cover as the jammed park yelled its applause. Another clinch upset the referee again. They stood in a neutral corner and punched furiously at will while the referee was struggling to his feet. The bell ended the milling.

ROUND TWELVE: They smashed at each other's jaw, both landing cleanly. In a maddened exchange of blows they punched each other at will. Walker staggered Greb with a vicious righ to the head. Walker landed effectively to the body and head and Greb clinched. Greb landed with terrific force to Walker's jaw but the welterweight king came up for more. The crowd gasped as the battlers stood up under the fierce punishment. They were locked in a clinch at the bell.

ROUND THIRTEEN: They stood toe to toe in Walker's corner and matched blow for blow. Walker's left eye started to swell as Greb continued to pepper at Walker's face. Greb missed a downward right. The one-two punch backed Walker to the ropes. They continued to batter each other openly at long range. Greb rushed Walker to the corner and the bell interrupted an interesting skirmish.

Mickey Nearly Out.

ROUND FOURTEEN: Greb continued his aggressive but Walker was willing and they smashed away openly, both landing telling blows. Greb started to dance and Walker came into a one-two punch which forced him to clinch. A stinging right to the jaw rocked Walker to his own corner and he reeled about the ring helpless against Greb's furious attack. He was almost out but he pulled himself together and staggered Greb with a short left to the face. Gamely Walker fought on, badly battered but taking everything Greb could throw and standing upright under the tremendous punishment. The bell saved Walker further punishment.

ROUND FIFTEEN: They shook hands. A right to the head reeled Walker around. He countered gamely with a left, rallying beautifully. Mickey put all in a furious charge at Greb, sending him back to cover. With blood streaming down his face from a cut on his left eye, Walker bored in, holding his own in a toe to toe exchange of blows that threatened to sweep both to the floor of the ring. Walker staggered Greb with a wicked left to the head. Walker charged Greb driving him to his own corner as he recklessly poured his driving gloves at the middleweight king. The bell found them battling away at full speed.

Marvin Avers He'll Knock Out Moco in Vernon

Carpenter Training Here, Not so Sure of Being Tipped Over

VERNON, July 2.—Tommy Marvin, veteran pugilist, arrived in Vernon yesterday and announced himself ready for his bout with Moco Carpenter of Wichita Falls which will take place at the local arena Saturday night. Marvin worked out yesterday afternoon with his sparring partners, Tabby Levine and Cyclone Burns, at the Elks club gymnasium and appeared to be in the best of condition.

The veteran fighter says he never felt more certain of winning a bout in his life. In the work-out yesterday, he handled his sparring partners roughly, and local leather-pushers who had agreed to give him practice refused to face him.

Vernon fans are taking an unusual interest in this bout, and the odds seem to favor Marvin for a knock-out. Marvin himself freely expresses his confidence.

Carpenter, who has been in Wichita Falls the past two days, worked out yesterday with Wildcat Monte. Moco seems in pretty good condition, and believes that Marvin will go the same route other fighters have traveled who have tangled with Carp over the past several months.

As for being knocked out, Carpenter avers that if there is to be any kayoing done he expects to be on the one shooting the sleep punch.

Monte, who has been training Carpenter, recently returned from Dallas where although knocked down in the first round, he defeated Mickey Riley of San Antonio in a ten-rounder.

Lawrence was Fort Worth's last hope in the tournament.

New Drive To Swing Under Way Saturday

Wichita Falls Opens Last Half Scramble In Cowtown

DALLAS, Judy 2.—The schedule of the Texas league season will be divided and games of the second half will begin July 4, it was announced by J. Doak Roberts at the close of the special meeting of club owners called here today. All postponed games pending will be eliminated, he said.

The vote, while not officially announced, is understood to have been six to two for the division, with San Antonio, Dallas, Wichita Falls, Shreveport, Waco and Beaumont voting for, and Houston and Fort Worth against it.

The decision was reached after a brief conference in the offices of the league president. The San Antonio franchise sale as well as other matters were considered.

Fort Worth will be declared winner of the first half and will meet the winner of the second half in a post-season play-off for the pennant, providing the Cats themselves do not win the second half, it was said.

The new race, beginning tomorrow, July 4, is to be ushered in with double headers in four cities. Wichita Falls invades Fort Worth for a double bill, jumping the next day to Shreveport for a two-game series. Beaumont plays in Houston, Shreveport at Dallas, and Waco in San Antonio.

Shade Scores Technical K. O. Over Slattery

Lynch Fights Shawkey To Four-Round Draw Verdict

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, July 2.—(AP)—Sixty thousand persons were in attendance at the Polo Grounds when the fighters in the first preliminary took the ring in the Italian hospital fund matches tonight.

Joe Lynch of New York, former world's bantamweight champion, fought a four-round draw with Jack Sharkey of New York in the first preliminary. The fight was fast all the way, both men landing damaging punches.

POLO GROUNDS, July 2.—Dave Shade of California scored a technical knockout over Jimmy Slattery of Buffalo, N. Y., in th ethird round of what was programmed to be a six-round semi-final match. Shade weighed 153 and Slattery 162 1-2. The Buffalo lad was knocked to the floor three times before the towel of defeat was tossed into the ring by Slattery's manager. The end came after one minute and 18 seconds of fighting in the third round.

WHITE MAULER NO MATCH FOR BLACK FIGHTER

Newarker, Outclassed At Start, Goes Out In Second

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, July 2.—(AP)—Harry Wills, negro heavyweight of New York knocked out Charley Weinert of Newark, New Jersey, in the second round of their scheduled fifteen round match in the Italian hospital fund bouts tonight. The end came after one minute and 45 seconds of the round had been fought.

Weinert was no match for the giant negro at any stage of the brief fight, proving an easy target for Wills' heavy body blows and his staggering blows to the jaw. In the first round Weinert fell through the ropes out of the ring from a stiff right. In the second round Wills poured a furious battery of rights and lefts to the body and jaw of his opponent which knocked him from his feet to have the referee's ten count him out.

Wills weight was announced at 213, while Weinert came at 184 1-2. The fight by rounds follows:

Round One: Wills started to rush Weinert as he sprang from his corner but the Newarker tied him up. Wills scored twice to Weiner't body, Weinert countered with a left to the chin and Wills backed up. They exchanged body blows at close quarters. Wills continued to batter away at Weiner't ribs. A stiff right evaded Wills' guard and the negro backed up. Wills missed a right. Wills battered Weinert in a corner hitting relentlessly, as the New Yorker covered up. A stiff right knocked Weinert from the ring but he got back before the count had started. The bell found them in a clinch.

Round Two: Wills was warned for hitting on the break in the first skirmish. Wills landed five straight blows with his right to Weinert's jaw without a return. Another right almost floored Weinert. The New Yorker was absorbing plenty of punishment. Weinert went down for a count of ten, helpless against the aggressiveness of his opponent.

American Doubles Team Advances To British Semi-Finals

WIMBLEDON, July 2.—(AP)—The two thousand or more tennis devotees, who braved England's latest heat wave to sit in stands at Wimbledon today, found their reward in some of the best tennis of the all-England championship tournament.

Today's tests decided the complexion of the finals in the men's singles, in which as during last year, two Frenchmen, Borotra, the champion, and Rene Lacoste, will meet. The play also insured the Americans, Ray Casey of California, John Hennessey of Indiana, a chance at Jacques Brugnon and Henri Cochet in the semi-finals of the men's doubles and sent Lenglen and Borotra in the finals for the mixed doubles. Also J. D. P. Wheatley and Mrs. Lambert Chambers of England, got a place in the semi-final round of the mixed doubles by winning from Jean Washer, Belgium, and Mrs. Satterthwaite.

Lacoste and Borotra won their place in the sun in the doubles by eliminating J. O. Anderson, the Australian champion, and Cochet, while Hennessey and Casey found easy victims in the English pair, F. R. L. Crawford and F. M. B. Fisher, who were defeated 6-4, 4-6, 6-0, 6-1.

The ordinary person gives little thought of why and how he is furnished with electricity. The push of a button and the room is flooded with light—the turn of a control and great motors hum, generating power that keeps the wheels of industry turning—the turn of a switch and there is heat for his food.

All these conveniences are accepted in a matter of fact way, the power is always there and is accepted, and it is right that it should be. The Wichita Falls Electric Company is your electrical servant to command whenever you may want to. An army of efficient workmen is awaiting your command—building and expanding with the city—always keeping abreast of the times.

Industrial Survey Is City's Need

POOL, SHERMAN INDUSTRY HEAD, VISIONS FUTURE

"Put Your House in Order" Theme of Address Before Delegates

AT WEST TEXAS MEET

Manufacturing President Warns of Fake Promoters In Large Cities

facilities was to "patronize home industry." By this he meant a use of local capital, selection of local managers and leaders and an enlistment of 100% local support. He cited a few examples of reputable businesses in Texas which had failed because of a lack of proper moral backing.

Mr. Pool strongly advocated the scientific survey to determine what was most needed in a community. A business enterprise that could perform a real service in its home town, he said, was blessed with a great advantage over that which depended on foreign patronage. He stressed the fact that too thorough a survey of the needs and possibilities could not be made.

Matter of Finance

The speaker devoted a considerable portion of his address to the detailed launching of a business enterprise, eH touched on the matter of financing, the kinds of stock to be issued, the selection of the manager and other chief executives and the actual organization of the working force.

His address in full was as follows:

"Texas and the Southwest is facing what is generally believed to be the greatest era of development that Texas has ever witnessed. Business men and financiers from all parts of the United States are looking do Texas and watching the development, and if we wish to get the greatest good from this promised opportunity, it means that we must have the very highest type of team work among the different communities, towns and cities in Texas, if we make the most of this opportunity. Naturally each of us are for our own towns first. It is right that we should be, but if we can not get what we want, it is decidedly to our interest to help our neighbor get it, for we can not build a wall around our own towns and it is decidedly better for us to have a neighbor that is prosperous than to have one that is a dead one. There is no progress or development in Texas but what practically every one of us is benefited. If the towns and cities of Texas will develop the team spirit for Texas, we will put Texas over big and we will be all the better for it.

Center of Stage.

"This new opportunity promises big things in a good many different lines, but the biggest and most outstanding opportunity is the industrial development, and this is now holding the center of the stage. And with this brings the desire of every city and town for additional manufacturing plants of one kind or another. Every progressive business man is glad to see these plants come to Texas if they are the right kind, developed in the right way, and have the right men at the head of these institutions. But unless this industrial development is carried out in the right way, it will kill the future development of our state and the wrong kind of development should be guarded against very carefully.

"Professional promoters in many instances in Texas are doing a harm to every community and town that they are working in and I am afraid that it will take us a long time to get over some of the things that are being done. The particular industry in which they are operating will get the blame when it does not deserve it. The men that are putting their money into it deserves the blame for not knowing their man and the proposition into which they are putting their money and for going into it without the proper investigation. I always feel about some of the men with the exceptionally good propositions for a town like the fellow that Henry Ford gave a helping hand.

"Henry Ford, who believes in using his own cars, was in the suburbs of Detroit one day and saw a driver of a Ford car trying to start his machine. Ford got out of his car and tendered his services, and in a few minutes the stalled car was ready to run again. The owner pulled a half dollar from his pocket and offered it to Ford, saying: "Stop at the first place and get yourself some cigars."

"The money was declined with the statement: "I have more money now than I can find use for, and I was only too glad to help you get your car started again."

"The owner of the rejuvenated car looked at the Good Samaritan and then at Ford's car, and said with emphasis: "You're a liar. If you had more money than you knew what to do with you wouldn't be running a Ford."

Sounds a Warning.

"And that is the way I feel about these promoters. If these men had such good propositions they would not have to feel such a friendly interest in these towns and communities that they would just have to let them in on the ground floor of something that would make every investor a fortune.

"There is a right way and a wrong way to get manufacturing plants and this right way is the big question that has not yet been answered. But the most conservative and the surest plan is the development of the plant from within your own town or community with your own finances, your own people, and with the moral support of every citizen in your community behind your project.

"First, if you are going to get manufacuring plants and develop your manufacturing plants, you will have to stop your local men with money from investing their capital in stocks and bonds which are floated to develop some other section of the country. This money is going to have to be reinvested in the town or community that is producing this profit for your citizens and get to work building your town. It is folly to expect citizens from other sections of the country to come into your town and spend his money to build your town into a city. Your success must come by keeping your money at home.

"Second, your merchants and people will have to be educated and encouraged to support the manufacturing plants that you have already in operation within your town, for the loyalty of a home people for the products manufactured there is the biggest inducement to other plants to come to your town or is the biggest insurance that you can have of making local plants a success. I recently had occasion to make an investigation in one of the largest cities of the state and found that the home merchants were thoroughly disloyal to their manufacturing plants and that the local manufacturers could get practically no business in the home town, and the chamber of commerce was dispensing hot air instead of getting down to the real business for which they were oranized.

Keep Boys at Home.

"Third, the business men and the manufacturers must take active steps to keep capable boys at home by puttin them in positions that have sufficient opportunity in them to keep these boys from leaving for the cities in order to get the opportunity they want. The smaller towns and cities will never make any strides if they permit the brightest of the boys and young men to leave and using their brains and energies in building other towns and cities.

"Last, there must be more schools in Texas, teaching industrial engineering, business administration, manufacturing, etc., if we expect to get our manufacturing down on the basis that our Northern and Eastern neighbors are doing. They have put in thorough schools of training along these lines in the universities, colleges and how can we ever expect to go against such intensively trained men unless we give our boys a training that will put them on the same footing?

"Now then, if we are going out to organize a plant in a community, what is the first thing to do? We want to know if we have any conditions that would warrant the starting of a plant and conditions that would keep one in operation. We must make a survey. And a survey is merely the getting of all the facts necessary to industry. And I will say further that everything must be facts and all the facts possible that have any bearing on an industrial plant.

A Thorough Survey.

"And this survey must be thorough. It is the overlooking of some little and seemingly unimportant point that puts the venture on the rocks after it is finally launched. This is well illustrated by the man that built what is the largest oil mill in the world. This mill was actually built in North Texas, and it was a big and wonderful accomplishment. It was estimated that this mill could grind more seed and at a less cost and make more money than any oil mill that was ever operated. The demand for the product was unquestioned, the labor and the ability of the labor to produce could not have been better suited, and the mill was right in the center of the largest supply of cotton seed that could possibly be found. There was only one slip and that was that there was not enough seed obtainable to keep the mill running but a very short time during the busy season of the year, and the overhead expense gradually absorbed all the capital. Your survey is important and nothing should be overlooked.

"In your survey, the labor market must be covered thoroughly. This should consist of the wages paid to labor of all classes, and the amount of labor available, whether male or female, just how skilled this labor is and along what lines, nationally, religious belief, whether English speaking, if composed of foreign birth, whether there is a radical tendency among the laboring classes and whether unionized or not. There should be a history of the labor troubles if there have been any, and the experience of present manufacturers in the town or city with labor.

"The freight rates should be considered from every angle. And this should be considered on every commodity being considered for manufacture as well as basic raw materials.

How Many Consumers.

"A survey of the consuming population or consuming firms of the different products under consideration. This in all cases should be considered to the point where the freight rates to a certain point equaled by the freight rates from your competitive points in every direction.

"Of course each commodity considered would vary in this regard as the buying customs of the trade would have to be taken in each individual case.

"There should be a survey made of the water, the maximum amount of water available, the cost of the water, a chemical analysis of the water and the continuity of the supply of water, and with this considered, the cost of power, and kinds of power available, cost of electricity, the present capacity of the electric plant, the cost of oil delivered, and cost of coal delivered to your city and the sources of supply of both of these items.

"Among the other things necessary should be the rate of taxes, property values for plant site and residential property values, cost of living, and the cost of everything that would enter into the operation of any given manufacturing plant.

"The natural resources should be surveyed thoroughly for it is impossible to tell when the occasion will arise that natural resources might play an important part in some of the plants being considered.

"A survey should be made of all the existing manufacturing plants, their size, and the ginds of products manufactured, the comparative quality of goods manufactured, and the extent of their trade territory. This will have a very important bearing on other industries coming in for several different reasons. In this should be made an analysis of the amount of business that the home merchants are giving to each of these plants and what proportion does this bear to the total amount consumed. The co-operation beween h prant manufacturing plants should not b overlooked.

After Factories.

"During the war, Rock Island, Ill., had one of the largest factories in the country, and one that employed a great number of people. When the war was over, this left the city with a large quantity of skilled labor that they could not use. They went after other manufacturing after making a survey that was the most complete that I have ever heard of. They even went so far that they had a record of the percentages of tardiness and absentees during the time the government plant was in operation. They had a list of all the labor and the amount of skilled labor for every kind of manufacturing. It is needless to say that with that kind of a survey, they got what they went after.

"After your survey, the second step is the selection of the line or all the lines that fit into the local conditions according to the survey. If the survey has been thorough, you should be able to determine just the lines and kinds of articles that could be manufactured successfully from a production standpoint.

"A financial survey will be necessary at this point to determine the amount of capital available providing the line selected will meet with the approval of the investing public. This will very likely eliminate quite a few of the proposed lines of manufacturing, and after this further elimination, the most promising lines should be selected for the purpose of a market survey or market analysis. If the final analysis of the market survey is not satisfactory and something indicates that this would not be promising, then the next most promising item should be selected and a market survey made of this one. This same thing should be done until the entire list is run or a suitable item chosen which would seem to be a good risk based on this analysis.

"This market analysis should get all the information possible about the product in question.

"1. Is the article salable in the proper quantity

"2. Can it be manufactured at a price to enable us to compete?

"3. Is the present production on this article overdone?

"4. From what section does the competition originate?

"5. Are the present manufacturers in position to lower the price still further to make it impossible for a new concern to enter the field successfully

"6. What method of marketing will be necessary and is the proper sales organization available?

"7. Are the present operatnig companies making a profit?

"8. Has competition been studied thoroughly from the standpoint of

"(a) Price

"(b) Quality

"(c) Location

"(d) Ease of transportation

"(e) Merchandising methods

"9. Is there a tendency to combine among the competitive companies?

"10. How large are the competitive companies?

"11. To whom do the competing companies sell their products?

"12. Do their customers buy on account of "Tradition

"Personal contact or friendship?

"Quickest deliveries?

"Advertising

"Quality?

"Price?

"Terms?

The Biggest Problem.

"Your survey should be very thorough and every point should be covered and every slant taken on the product in question. A small slip at this state of the game might prove a serious handicap after the plant was once in operation. Marketing is usually the biggest problem of any manufacturing plant. It is usually conceded that any group of men can successfully manufacture a product, but the real test comes in manufacturing and selling it at a profit.

"The third step is the organization of your company. The question of what kind of stock will have to be issued, common, preferred, or classified, has to be solved depending on the local conditions and according to the people who will subscribe for it. The distribution of this stock can be made a big help if the proper effort is made to get it placed with business men or people who can be of a direct benefit to the company in one way or another. This particular feature will have to depend on the nature of the product manufactured and the method of distribution.

"There is one thing that it is very important to remember and that is the capital must be sufficient to maintain the necessary economic level during the establishment period. This level will likewise depend on the commodity or product to be manufactured and the method of distribution.

"The fourth step in the organization work is the board of directors. The usual method of a group of citizens in getting together to pick out a board of directors for a community project is to have a meeting without any previous plan for the directors. When the meeting is called, some one of the crowd looks around and sees several of his friends who are good conservative men of means that look like they would be all right, so he names them, one man that is probably a retired merchant, another that is probably a retired farmer, another that is probably an excellent real estate man, and so do down the line. When the meeting adjourns the new corporation is loaded down with a board of directors who are all fine men and probably men of financial means, but who know nothing about manufacturing or merchandising in general or nothing of the particular line selected for manufacture. Consequently the new company finds that it will have to succeed in spite of the board of directors if that is possible, and in many cases it is not possible. Many a concern can trace its failure to the wrong board of directors, or a lack of harmony among the directors.

Care in Selection.

"Now in selecting your directors, this must be kept in mind: The success or failure of the business may hinge on the men with the right kind of ability and experience. So you will need men who can qualify under the following classifications:

"A merchandiser;

"An experienced manufacturer;

"A director in the technical field of commodity to be manufactured;

"An accountant;

"A sales manager or a salesman.

"It is hardly possible to get this entire lineup in the average town or city, but it is highly desirable to attempt to carry this idea out so far as your local conditions will permit.

"In selecting the above board of directors, young men that are alive and thoroughly progressive but conservative should be given the preference for the man that was up to the minute ten to twenty years ago in business of any kind is a back number now unless he has kept pace with the times and kept his business and business methods right up to the minute. And this is a condition that we rarely find in men who have retired from active business or have reached the age when they should do so or have permitted themselves to get in the rut. Also men who are open minded should be given the preference, for a directorate should always tackle every problem in an open minded unprejudiced attitude. And every suggestion should be weighed carefully before final decision for or against the management.

"The last step is the selection of the manager, and the selection of the manager is a hard job. Some may take the attitude the duty of the secretary of the chamber of commerce is through before this, but I feel that the secretary should keep investigating and hammering until the right man is found and put in the place of power by the board of directors unless the board of directors are a keen, alive, wide awake group of men that have time and will look up the right kind of a man for this place.

Kind of Manager.

"Your manager should be a man with unlimited energy and have the driving force that carries through everything that he attempts. There are a good many other points that should be taken into consideration in selecting a manager, first of which should come his mental characteristics and second his qualification acquired by experience or study.

"In getting a line on the man with the mental characteristics the good manager should be

"Open minded, fair and progressive;

"Able to select efficient subordinates;

"Able to delegate authority;

"Know how and when to provid understudies;

"Able to make quick decisions;

"A scientific optimist;

"A good loser;

"A hard fighter.

"Through his experience, the manager should know

"What and how he is going to make and sell;

"Standardization and reducing the variety of his product to a minimum;

"Handling sales to take the risk out of selling;

"Eliminating financial risks;

"Getting the most out of advertising;

"Determining the sane credit policy;

"Organization for low production costs;

"How to get the prices right from selling standpoint;

"What it costs to make and sell;

"How to analyze his market and know the market thoroughly.

"It goes without saying that a man that will fill all these requirements would be hard to find, but the man that will come nearest to fulfilling these requirements will be needed and the nearer you can come to filling the requirements the greater the success your plant will make.

"Mr. Secretary, you like the good manager must be a good fighter, because before you carry this program through you are going to be beset with every kind of discouragement, and it is going to take all the fight your manager has to put your project over, and I don't know what covers the ground more thoroughly if you will just remember:

"It is easy to cry you are beated and die;
It is easy to crawfish and crawl
But to fight and fight when hope's out of sight,
Why, that's the greatest game of them all.
And though you come out of each gruelling bout
All battered and beaten and scared.
Just have one more try, it is so easy to die,
It's the keeping on fighting that's hard."

JIM ATTACKS LAWYERS AS TOO SELFISH

Before State Bar Association He Renews Pardon Excuses

AUSTIN, July 2.—(AP)—Striking at lawyer critics of Governor Miriam A. Ferguson's pardon record, ex-Governor James E. Ferguson today before the Texas Bar association, in convention here, pleaded for a fair deal, asking that criticism be made only after a thorough investigation of particular pardon cases.

"I bring you greetings from the governor. She told me to tell you that you could violate the law, if you saw fit, and that she would pardon you, despite the howls of the maniacs and politicians," the former governor banteringly said.

"Each day the newspapers print letters of criticism from prominent lawyers, condemning the pardons issued by the governor. Not one of those lawyers has taken time to investigate the situation, and certainly no fairminded lawyer should pass on a case without knowing the facts," declared Ferguson.

"Conduct of lawyers is not such as to inspire confidence in the Texas judiciary," continued Ferguson. "You lawyers are too selfish. You are too much inclined to lose yourself in your own business, and to neglect in the broadest sense of the term, the administration of justice.

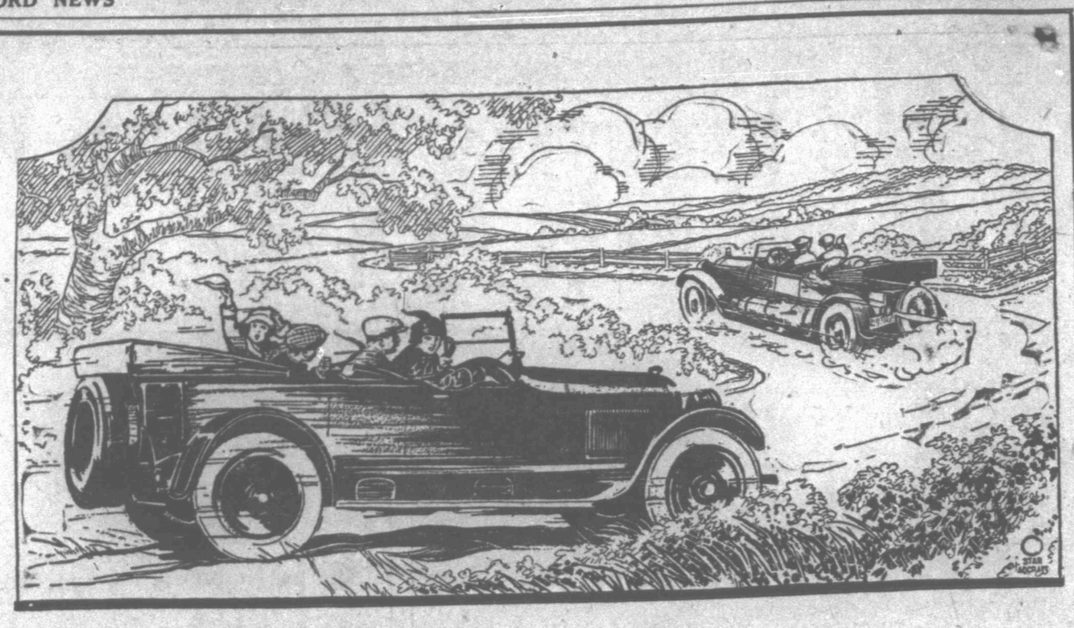

"Justice is not administered as it should be. In the Texas penitentiaries today for violation of liquor laws, are 400 men, and not four are worth $500. But all of you know at least 100 prominent lawyers who every day are violating the liquor laws of this state. Your governor is thinking very seriously of offering a reward of $250 for conviction on a liquor charge of every man worth over $5,000. She is quite confident she will pay but little money for rewards.

"The American people are losing all responsibility for the law. Unless there is speedy reform in the administration and expedition of justice the people will do as the Romans did, burn the law books and that will be the end of lawyers," concluded Ferguson.

BERGDOLL IN AFFIDAVIT ON TREASURE SUM

Draft Dodger Claims $240,000 in His Buried Pot Of Gold

PHILADELPHIA, July 2.—(AP)—Grover C. Bergdoll says that the pot of gold he buried in the Maryland hills contains more than $240,000. This was revealed yesterday in a sworn statement by him submitted at a hearing of counter suits filed by Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll, his mother, and Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian. The statement, witnessed by a notary public in Baden, Germany, was sent to Mrs. Bergdoll to aid in her contention that she had turned over all her son's property to the alien property custodian. Bergdoll has been living in Baden since a spectacular escape in 1920.

An intimation that his mother also had buried a large sum of money also was contained in the statement.

"The $105,000 which my mother claims to have buried is absolutely her own," said the statement. "The $240,000 which I concealed (the gold buried in the ground) and the gold notes I took along to Europe were my own property. No person living outside of myself has the slightest idea as to where I took the gold after I loaded it in my car in Philadelphia."

Bergdoll escaped from army guards at his mother's home here while on a trip to dig up the treasure after he had been sentenced to serve five years in prison for evading the draft. A master recommended that the custodian be ordered to return to Mrs. Bergdoll $140,000 in cash and securities worth several hundred thousand dollars.

Santa Barbara Is Safest In U. S. Say Optimistic Experts

SAN FRANCISCO, July 2.—(AP)—Two of California's outstanding authorities on earthquakes believe Santa Barbara today is one of the safest places in the United States so far as immunity from earthquakes is concerned.

Dr. Bailey Willis, Stanford university geologist, who predicted the trembler at Santa Barbara and journeyed from Palo Alto to a suburb of the quake-stricken city in time to witness the shake-up, and Captain T. J. See, scientist and government astronomer at Mare Island arrived at the same conclusions in independent statements today.

Judge L. Gough, of Amarillo, is in charge of the plans for the celebration which is expected to be larger than any before held. The T-Anchor ranch was one of the first established in the Panhandle, and contained many of this region's best counties.

EXHIBITORS WEEK SET APART

West Texas State Teachers College To Exhibit Wares.

CANYON, July 2.—The week beginning July 13 has been designated as exhibitors week at the West Texas State Teachers college by President J. A. Hill, of that institution. During this week school supply houses will be given space and an opportunity to show their wares to as many of the eighteen hundred students as are interested.

In setting apart a week for this purpose President Hill is giving to each school supply company equal advantage with every other. Companies will be required to furnish the Teachers' college the name of their agent who will be in charge of their display.

Many big concerns will probably take advantage of this opportunity and students will have an excellent opportunity to compare values.

NEED TRAINED TEACHERS

CANYON, July 2.—The Teachers-Placing committee of the Bureau of Public Service of the Teachers college of this city finds itself unable to supply the demand for well trained teachers. Teachers of science, home economics, Spanish, and coaching combined with some literary subject seem to be most in demand.

Schools all over the Panhandle region are endeavoring to secure trained teachers who have degrees to meet the requirements of their rapidly rising standards of work.

Through A Woman's Eyes

IT MAY BE FOR THE BEST.

She had been leading the carefree, enchanted life of a debutante daughter of wealth; laughter, music, gaiety, pretty things, no responsibility, never the need of thinking of anything unpleasant—when the crash came and everything that had meant life to her had suddenly washed away.

Without money the old life was impossible. So her home, her friends, all the old associations vanished at once as by the stroke of a thunderbolt. Of course life did not seem worth while. But one must eat—so she set about to earn her living.

Today she is a successful writer, married to a well known author and getting more real happiness out of one hour in the day than her whole previous existence had brought her.

In the fashionable school that she had attended in those prosperous years it had been discovered that she had brains and the ability to write. But not until kindly fate took a hand and made it necessary for her to earn her own living had there been occasion for her to develop either. Then they soon asserted themselves and she worked, not only because of what it would give her but because she loved it, because it took her into a fascinating world of which she had never dreamed before.

She married a man who had all those interests in common with her and as she looks back to the catastrophe that at the time seemed ruinous, she knows it for the beginning of everything worth while in her life.

I know too a girl who was the happiest little bride-to-be in the whole wide world. She was only seventeen and engaged to the handsomest and wealthiest young fellow in the town. He was tall and athletic with wavy brown hair and great dark eyes which he could use in a way that would have sent any girl in the town to the end of the world with him.

And such a voice! It was soft and rich and mellow—why he was so charming it was a joy to her just to be near him. And to think it was all for her—the dark eyes to gaze adoringly into hers and the beautiful voice to say he loved her! The world was fairyland until—his mother came to tell her that he had gone off with a divorcee in the next town.

Heartbroken? It wasn't the word. She thought she would just have to die. For weeks she was really very ill and it was more than a year before she was herself again.

Today? She is just 24 and has just had her first baby. She lives in the big city with the real man she married two years ago. And he is not the least bit like the boy she would have married. In the first place he loves her, not himself or his manly beauty. But particularly there is all the difference between the men that is natural between the choice of a girl of 17 and the same girl at 22.

At 17 she was satisfied with the flash of a boy's beautiful eyes and the dapper way about him. At 22 she wanted qualities of a different nature entirely and which in this case her first love would never have. So if she had married him when it was the only thing in the world that could make her happy she would be a disillusioned and unhappy woman instead of the radiant wife she is today.

It is all very well to plan our lives and to take each step with the consciousness that upon it may depend all our future happiness. But it is a good thing that a providence which knows all things better than we occasionally interferes, and through defeating our purpose and leaving unanswered our prayers, puts us on the road that is going to turn out for the best and make us infinitely happier in the end.

PLAN GATESVILLE ROAD

Paved Highway From Boys School Control Board Plan.

AUSTIN, July 2.—(AP)—Conference was held today by S. B. Cowan and R. B. Walthall, members of the board of control, and Judge L. M. Stinnett of Coryell county, on the proposed construction of a paved highway on the three-mile road from the state juvenile training school to Gainesville. The state highway department has promised $20,000 Mr. Cowan said, and it will be decided at the July 15, meeting of the board of control, what aid the board will give.

At the July meeting supervisors of the 18 eleemosynary institutions, under the board's control, will be named. Nearly all are expected to be re-elected.

MACMILLAN'S FLAGSHIP IS WAITING SISTER

Boudoin Now at Battle Harbor Delayed by The Peary

WASHINGTON, July 2 (AP).—The Bowdoin, flagship of the MacMillan Arctic expedition, is at Battle Harbor, Labrador, waiting the arrival of its companion ship, the Peary. Fog, ice floes and a falling barometer indicate departure of the expedition may be delayed even after arrival of the other ship.

A radio from the expedition picked up by L. E. Caldwell and R. J. Lewis, amateur operators of East Cleveland, Ohio, and made public today by the National Geological Society says:

"We have a good shelter on a foggy and rock-bound coast, scene of early fighting between Indians and Eskimos and now one of the world's great fishing centers.

"The loudest huskie dog chorus in the world is most active at 3 o'clock in the morning. Here is the northernmost all-year radio station in the world and this is last postoffice we shall touch on the American continent.

"Benjamin H. Rigg, National Geographic Society meteorological observer, is making magnetic observations and the expedition's photographers are at work despite inclement weather.

"The Bowdoin's crew were entertained by the International Grenfell Association. Fog, ice floes and a falling barometer may make short delay necessary even after the Peary arrives. All well."

Detective Kills Man In Sister's Bedroom

NEW YORK, July 2. — (AP) — Lewis Wood, 37, of Brooklyn was shot and killed early today by William Fitzmaurice, a private detective, in the bedroom of the detective's sister, Miss Clara Fitzmaurice, 35 years old, in Brooklyn.

Miss Fitzmaurice was acquainted with Wood, police intimate. Her brother is held on a charge of homicide.
