There were two rigs offshore, and there weren't any in inland waters.

New Mexico was unchanged at 48 rigs.

At this time last year, there were 231 rigs in Texas and 18 in New Mexico.

United States

The U.S. saw five more rigs this week for a total of 602, the highest oil rig count since Oct. 9, 2015, when 605 were recorded. Gas rigs tallied 151, down two. The miscellaneous count was unchanged at one.

In total, the U.S. had 754 rigs, up three. The tally on land was 733, up three; inland

Seliger hopes his legislation lowers tuition costs

Texas universities will be more affordable for students if state Sen. Kel Seliger has his way. The chair of the Senate Committee on Higher Education filed bills this legislative session aimed at lowering tuition costs.

"We would like college to be both accessible and affordable," Seliger, an Amarillo Republican, said. "Texas is competitive in tuition. We want to make sure it remains that way."

The lawmaker shared his comments with the Midland Reporter-Telegram during a public meet-and-greet and lunch on Friday. His office provided free meals for up to 400 people at Mac's Bar-B-Q.

The event celebrated Governor for a Day, a tradition that honors the president pro tempore of the Texas Senate, according to a press release from Seliger's office. He also planned to meet Senate District 31 constituents in Odessa, Big Spring and Amarillo.

"Normally, Governor for a Day is on the capitol grounds and has big lunches and speeches," Seliger said. "I wanted to go to the places where I have a lot of friends and interact with the people who sent me to the Senate."

J.D. Faircloth, former mayor of Midland, has attended other Seliger events. He appreciates that the lawmaker chose to meet with constituents face-to-face.

"The senator knows the Legislature is in session," Faircloth said. "He has the opportunity to chair a significant committee. It's a good way to receive input from citizens."

Release sought for immigrant who asked for protection order

By Astrid Galvan
Associated Press

EL PASO — The arrest by federal authorities in El Paso of a transgender woman who was seeking protection from an abusive boyfriend has led to questions about what lengths authorities will go to apprehend people under newly stepped-up immigration policies.

Advocates say Irvin Gonzalez's abuser tipped off authorities about her court hearing, resulting in her Feb. 9 arrest by a task force composed of Border Patrol agents and Immigration and Customs Enforcement officers who surrounded the exits of the courthouse until she was detained.

Her federal public defender on Wednesday filed a petition for her immediate release, saying in court documents that a Border Patrol agent perjured himself when he wrote in an affidavit that Gonzalez was arrested outside the building when surveillance shows agents conducting the arrest inside. Gonzalez, 33, is transgender and began transitioning two years ago, according to one of her attorneys, Melissa Untereker. Gonzalez is distraught and suffering from the side effects of stopping her hormone therapy, which she hasn't been able to get in jail, she said.

Gonzalez is in the custody of the U.S. Marshals Service while she faces a federal charge of illegal re-entry into the United States.

"She's very emotionally fragile right now," Untereker said. "She's afraid of her abuser, and she's afraid of what's going to happen to her going forward."

Gonzalez has been deported six times since 2010 and has a recent conviction of possession of stolen mail, ICE spokeswoman Leticia Zamarripa said.

"Gonzalez also has a lengthy criminal history with at least eight convictions on charges including false imprisonment, assault, larceny, domestic violence and illegal re-entry," Zamarripa said. Gonzalez was most recently deported to Mexico on Jan. 23, but she quickly returned to the U.S. She then sought a protective order against a boyfriend she accused of severe physical abuse and death threats on three occasions during their nine-month relationship. An El Paso judge granted the order on Feb. 9, and she was arrested after her hearing.

Advocates say her case is a classic example of the vulnerability faced by immigrants who lack legal status because their abusers often threaten to turn them in to immigration authorities if they report the abuse.

Untereker said she believes Gonzalez's boyfriend was the one who tipped off ICE because nobody else knew about the court date. ICE says it was notified by a law enforcement agency but provided no specifics about the tip.

The arrest sparked outrage among local officials and domestic abuse victim advocates who said a courtroom that issues protective orders is no place to arrest someone.

Rep. Beto O'Rourke, a Democrat from El Paso, requested a meeting with local ICE officials last week and said he was told the arrest inside the courthouse was an anomaly and being handled internally. O'Rourke was told by an agent that "there are lessons to be learned" and that the agency will use this example in future trainings. The agency said it doesn't publicly comment on internal matters.

The woman's lawyers hope Gonzalez will be released based on information the agent, John Urquidi, wrote in his signed criminal complaint affidavit.

He wrote that agents spotted Gonzalez after she walked out of the courthouse and that they detained her along a sidewalk. But surveillance video released by court officials shows agents escorting Gonzalez out of the courthouse as more than a dozen women sit in a waiting area.

Sen. Ted Cruz praises Trump, Republican unity

Crowd gives standing ovation at annual Conservative Political Action Conference

By Kevin Diaz
Houston Chronicle

Coming Sunday

See part 3 of Trevor Hawes' Q&A with Sen. Ted Cruz in Sunday's edition.

WASHINGTON — After a standing ovation Thursday at the annual Conservative Political Action Conference, U.S. Sen. Ted Cruz talked in triumphal tones about his recent visit to McAllen, on the Texas border with Mexico.

"Since Inauguration Day," the Republican told the sympathetic audience, "illegal crossings have dropped 50 percent." His source: Unnamed Border Protection agents in the Rio Grande Valley.

Though large drops are not unusual in winter, Cruz's number could not be officially confirmed by the White House or the Department of Homeland Security.

A U.S. Customs and Border Protection official, who asked that his name not be used because the latest figures still are being tallied, said arrests are "markedly" down in the Rio Grande sector, but not to the extent suggested by Cruz.

"This is the time of year when they typically go down some, but this is a steeper decline than in recent history," he said.

Cruz, making his first appearance before a national conservative audience since the Republican National Convention in July, said agents could not give him a reason why, but that they suspected it may have something to do with President Donald Trump, who has ordered expanded deportations of immigrants living in the U.S. illegally.

"They assumed it was because, with the new administration, they understood we have an administration that will finally, finally, finally enforce the law," Cruz said.

He chided the media for not reporting the drop, saying viewers did not see it "on the 6 o'clock news." His office, however, cited as backing for his claim a recent CNN report on preliminary Customs and Border Protection numbers showing that total apprehensions along the southern border in January decreased by 27 percent, "in line with yearly seasonal trends."

Cruz was just one speaker in a powerhouse lineup that included White House chief of staff Reince Priebus and White House chief strategist Stephen Bannon, whose remarks drew the most attention when he said that atop the Trump administration agenda was the "deconstruction of the administrative state" — meaning a system of taxes, regulations and trade pacts that the president and his advisers believe stymie economic growth and infringe upon one's sovereignty.

"If you look at these Cabinet nominees, they were selected for a reason, and that is deconstruction," Bannon said. He called Trump's announcement withdrawing from the Trans-Pacific Partnership "one of the most pivotal moments in modern American history."

Priebus and Bannon also sought to discredit speculation in the media that the two frequently were at odds and their relationship filled with tension.

"Not only is it not going to get better, it's going to get worse every day," Bannon said of the media's treatment of Trump. "They're corporatist, globalist media. They're adamantly opposed to the economic nationalist agenda President Trump has."

The crowd cheered Bannon's assessment.

Vice President Mike Pence spoke Thursday night, promising "an orderly transition" to a new health-care system." Trump will address the event Friday.

For Cruz, his 23-minute appearance with nationally-syndicated radio talk show host Mark Levin was a homecoming of sorts, reestablishing him firmly in the constellation of leading national conservatives after the bitter divisions of his losing primary race against Trump.

Returning from the political wilderness, he proved he still could be controversial, pugnacious and armed with a quiver full of new arrows for his opponents.

Levin, in an interview after their joint appearance, billed as a "conversation about the Constitution," said Cruz has earned his position.

"We don't have roles in the conservative movement," he said. "You're a conservative if you're principled and you attract people to your arguments and your positions ... It's not something you run for and become."

For long-time Cruz partisans at the convention, the largest and most influential conservative gathering in the nation, it was a chance to display unity and commitment to a conservative agenda now being led by Trump, Cruz's erstwhile foe.

"I'm happy where we are now," said Houston businesswoman and tea party activist Deborah Kelty. "We've got cohesion, and we've got a great team."

Cruz lived up to the moment Thursday by praising Trump and his conservative cabinet, and taking shots at prominent Democrats, like former Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid of Nevada. He also praised Trump's Supreme Court pick, Judge Neil Gorsuch, and predicted better days ahead for conservatives on the nation's high court.

"I think we'll have another Supreme Court vacancy this summer," he said, without specifying which of the current eight justices would have to make way, or by what means.

He predicted a tougher confirmation fight for the next vacancy.

"As much as the left is crazy now, they will go full Armageddon meltdown," he predicted.

Cruz, who faces reelection in 2018, also touted his proposal for congressional term limits, calling it "one of the first and biggest steps we can take to actually drain the swamp."

He rebuked Democrats for resisting Trump's moves to crack down on illegal immigration, dismantle the Affordable Care Act, and ease environmental regulations, saying "they're now opposing everything," even minor procedural measures in the Senate.

Cruz's complaints echoed those of Senate Democrats when they were in the majority.

Invited by Levin to comment on Democratic chatter about impeaching Trump, Cruz responded that "Democrats right now are living in an alternative universe. ... They're in denial and they're angry."

In the middle of a crowded bar, a 51-year-old former air traffic controller yelled at two Indian men – Kuchibhotla and Alok Madasani – to "get out of my country," witnesses said, then opened fire in an attack that killed one of the men and wounded the other, as well as a third man who tried to help on Thursday in Olathe, Kan.

Witnesses: Bar gunman shouted 'get out of my country'

By Jim Suhr
Associated Press

OLATHE, Kan. — In the middle of a crowded bar, Adam Purinton yelled at two Indian men to "get out of my country," witnesses said, then opened fire in an attack that killed one of the men and wounded the other, as well as a third man who tried to help.

Hours later, the 51-year-old former air traffic controller reportedly told a bartender in another town that he needed a place to hide because he had just killed two Middle Eastern men.

In India, the father of one of the wounded men called Wednesday's attack in the Kansas City suburbs a hate crime, but authorities on Friday declined to discuss a motive as they investigated. The shooting swiftly stoked fears about the treatment of immigrants, who feel targeted by President Donald Trump's promises to ban certain travelers, build a wall along the Mexico border and put "America first."

Purinton

The president has been especially vocal about the threat posed by Islamic terrorist groups. Both of the Indian men were Hindu.

The slain man was identified as Srinivas Kuchibhotla, 32. His widow said he came to the U.S. in 2005 to pursue a master's degree at the University of Texas at El Paso and worked in Iowa for six years before moving to the Kansas City area.

"He did not deserve a death like this," Sunayana Dumala said Friday at a news conference organized by her husband's employer, the GPS device-maker Garmin. "I don't know what to say. We've read many times in newspapers of some kind of shooting happening somewhere. I was always concerned, 'Are we doing the right thing staying in the U.S. or America?' But he always assured me good things happen in America."

Though she did not mention Trump by name, she directed anger at the U.S. government, asking what officials would do to stop hate crimes.

"Not everyone will be harmful to this country," she said.

Purinton was jailed on murder and attempted murder charges. His first court appearance was scheduled for Monday.

A bartender at Austins Bar and Grill in the suburb of Olathe said Purinton used racial slurs before firing. He was taken into custody about five hours later after speaking with another bartender at an Applebee's some 70 miles away in Clinton, Missouri.

The Kansas City Star reported Purinton's comments to the second bartender. The paper did not cite its sources.

The other men who were shot were identified as 32-year-old Alok Madasani, who was released from the hospital Thursday, and 24-year-old Ian Grillot, who remained hospitalized.

Madasani's father, Jaganmohan Reddy, said he had spoken with his wounded son by phone from India and was worried about his safety.

"I request other parents to think twice before sending their children to the United States," he said.

As engineers for Garmin, Kuchibhotla and Madasani worked at the company's main campus just a mile from the scene of the shooting. Garmin is one of the region's best-known employers.

Local police were working with the FBI. Spokeswoman Bridget Patton said the federal agency's role is to help determine if a civil rights violation occurred.

Purinton, who is being held on $2 million bond, was moved Friday from Missouri to Kansas. Because he has not yet appeared in court, he did not have an attorney formally assigned to his case.

Beverly Morris, who has lived next door to Purinton in Olathe for about 20 years, said he never made her feel unsafe.

"He seemed like a good guy," Morris said, but "anybody who knew him knew he had a drinking problem."

Another neighbor, Michael Shimeall, told the Star that Purinton seemed friendly and never showed a temper "or anything like that."

He recalled that Purinton was helpful with neighbors when they had to dig out after snowstorms or pick up a tree blown down by wind. He said Purinton had photos of the ships he served on in the Navy and other Navy items in his home.

FAA records from the 1990s indicate that Purinton was a pilot and was licensed to work in an airport control tower. Agency spokeswoman Elizabeth Isham Cory says Purinton left the FAA 17 years ago in 2000.

At the time of the attack, bar patrons were watching a college basketball game on television. When Purinton began harassing the two men, Grillot "stood up for them," bartender Garret Bohnen told the Star.

Witnesses also told the newspaper about Purinton's yelling about leaving the country.

As the gunfire began, Grillot hid under a table until nine shots had been fired. Believing the suspect's magazine was empty, he chased the gunman in hopes of subduing him.

A bullet went through his right hand and into his chest, just missing a major artery but fracturing a vertebra in Grillot's neck.

"Another half inch, I could be dead or never walk again," he said Thursday from his hospital bed in a video from the University of Kansas Health System.

He did not describe what led to the shooting, saying only that he felt compelled to intervene to help others.

"I was just doing what anyone should have done for another human being," he said.

The Indian government said its diplomats would monitor the Kansas investigation. Kuchibhotla was from the southern state of Telangana, and his body was to be transported to the capital city of Hyderabad, where his family lives.

Mourners poured into Hyderabad. His parents have another son working in the United States.

Texas gas prices drop

COPPELL — Retail gasoline prices in Texas have dropped by 2 cents while the national average price remains unchanged.

AAA Texas on Thursday reported the average price at the pump statewide fell to $2.08 per gallon. Nationwide gasoline prices remained at $2.28 per gallon.

The association survey of metro regions in Texas found that drivers in El Paso are paying the most on average at $2.13 per gallon, while motorists in Corpus Christi and San Antonio are paying the least at $2.02.

AAA experts say prices continue to remain flat because of low driving demand and an oversupplied market as a result of increased U.S. production.

Mallory Matthew has her picture taken with Senator Kel Seliger on Friday as he has lunch and talks with his constituents at Mac's Bar-B-Que in Midland.

SELIGER

students spoke to Seliger about education earlier this month. Matthew said the lawmaker's tuition bills could make a difference when she transfers to a state university.

"I'm thinking about costs," Matthew said. "I have to look into scholarships."

This legislative session, Seliger hopes lawmakers will limit funding cuts for higher education institutions.

"Because it's going to be a tighter budget all together, universities should expect the budget to be austere," Seliger said. "We're working to make sure they don't receive a higher cut."

Seliger also serves on the Senate finance, education and natural resources and economic development committees. Midlander Sue Brannon said the District 31 tour gave people in this region an opportunity to share thoughts about topics that are important to them.

"He always comes and has meetings," Brannon said. "He's here in Midland really often. He's accessible and listens to our comments."

Black marchers, white re-enactors find common foe in Selma

By Kim Chandler and Jay Reeves
Associated Press

SELMA, Ala. — The mayor of Selma refused to back down Friday in a fight that has united unlikely allies — black civil rights marchers and white Civil War re-enactors who refuse to pay thousands in fees to hold their events.

Both groups say the city is squeezing them with demands for thousands of dollars in up-front payments to stage annual events that bring tens of thousands of visitors to an otherwise sleepy community where unemployment is high and boarded-up homes and businesses are a common sight.

Plans for next month's Selma Bridge Crossing Jubilee, which commemorates the Selma-to-Montgomery voting rights march of 1965, are up in the air over the city's demand. And the re-enactment of the 1865 Battle of Selma, involving hundreds of history buffs in Civil War garb, has been canceled because organizers couldn't afford the tab.

The jubilee draws mostly black people, the battle re-enactment mostly white people. So now, two groups with different interests and membership rosters are united in being upset with Mayor Darrio Melton and other leaders who say the city can't afford the police overtime, fire protection and cleanup the events require.

For a change in Selma, where race sometimes seems like a factor in everything, something isn't solely black and white.

"Maybe we've been able to bring two opposing sides together for a month," the first-term mayor of Selma — a city of around 20,000 people, about 80 percent of them black — said with a chuckle Thursday.

State Sen. Hank Sanders, a black Selma Democrat, said organizers of the four-day Bridge Crossing Jubilee still plan to hold the celebration March 2-5 but won't pay the demanded fee. The event in part recalls Bloody Sunday, when black marchers were beaten by white police at the Edmund Pettus Bridge.

"We will not pay in 2017 to commemorate sacrifices made and celebrate victories won in 1965," Sanders wrote in an opinion piece in The Selma Times-Journal. Sanders and his wife head the group that organizes the jubilee.

But the city says that without the payment, it won't close streets or provide assistance as usual until the climactic final day, when thousands typically gather to walk across the bridge. That means plans for three days of street concerts, vendors and other events are uncertain.

On Friday, Melton again said that people will be free again to march. But he questioned why the city should have to pay for other related events.

"People marched and they bled on that bridge. They weren't marching for commercial purposes, to commercialize off the event. They were marching for voting rights," Melton said.

The city offered to lower the bill Friday from nearly $24,000 to $17,000, but organizers refused: "That is not reasonable considering what this event does for the city," Faya Rose Toure said.

A few weeks ago, organizers of the far-smaller Battle of Selma re-enactment canceled over a similar demand for $22,054 from City Hall. Volunteers who stage that event say their total budget is only $28,000 and they simply can't afford it.

"It's disappointing. But I certainly understand the need to have a balanced budget," said Candace Skelton, a former Selma tourism director who now chairs the committee that stages the Battle of Selma.

The jubilee includes a music festival, a beauty pageant and workshops, while the Battle of Selma has days of simulated fighting and a military-style ball, plus encampments for the re-enactors at a city park.

Losing either gathering could hurt the economy in Selma and surrounding Dallas County, which has one of Alabama's highest unemployment rates at 9.2 percent. Visitors spent $81.7 million in the Selma area in 2015, according to the state tourism agency.

Although planners of the two events haven't actually joined forces to try to overturn the city's decision, battle re-enactment organizer James Hammonds said there have been "casual conversations" about such an alliance.

Even that is unusual in a city where black residents have fought a Confederate statue in a cemetery and white residents typically send their kids to private academies rather than public schools. But Hammonds said both black and white people want to promote history and generate tourist dollars.

"Selma is so unique to have two tracks of history that draw from different groups that may not be interested in one part but are interested in the other," he said. "I think to not utilize that uniqueness is the wrong way to go."

NYC mayor meets with campaign corruption probe investigators

By Larry Neumeister
Associated Press

NEW YORK — New York City's mayor met for several hours Friday with federal authorities looking into allegations that donors to his mayoral campaign were promised favors.

Mayor Bill de Blasio met about four hours with authorities as part of his administration's continued cooperation with the probe by the office of U.S. Attorney Preet Bharara, City Hall Press Secretary Eric Phillips said in a statement.

The Democratic mayor, who faces re-election this year, did not speak to reporters when he left the law offices of his attorney Friday afternoon. Those seen entering the building before the meeting included Andrew Goldstein, the head of Bharara's public corruption unit, and Assistant U.S. Attorney Russell Capone.

Two people with knowledge of the probe told The Associated Press that the mayor faced questions about whether people were promised favors in return for donations to his 2013 mayoral campaign. Investigators are also trying to learn whether promises were made to donors to de Blasio's since closed nonprofit, the Campaign for One New York. The individuals spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to speak publicly.

"We remain confident that at all times the mayor and his staff acted appropriately and well within the law," Phillips said. "We hope our continued cooperation will help bring a swift conclusion to the U.S. attorney's review. In the interest of protecting the integrity of this process, we will refrain from any further comment at this time."

The statement was in line with the mayor's repeated statements that he had done nothing wrong.

A lawyer for the mayor did not immediately comment. A spokesman for Bharara declined comment.

Texas, Trump administration seek to delay voter ID hearing

By David Saleh Rauf
Associated Press

AUSTIN — The U.S. Justice Department joined Texas' attorney general Wednesday in asking a federal court to delay a hearing on the state's voter ID law, the latest signal that the federal government might drop its opposition to the law now that Donald Trump is president.

In the joint filing, the Justice Department and Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton asked to delay next Tuesday's hearing until summer because the Texas Legislature is considering changes to the existing law, which a federal court has found to be discriminatory. Barack Obama's Justice Department had joined the lawsuit contesting it.

Senate Republicans this week introduced a revised voter ID bill that could address problems courts have identified with the existing Texas law, namely the lack of an affidavit process for voters who are unable to obtain one of seven forms of state-approved photo identification.

Last year, U.S. District Judge Nelva Gonzales Ramos required Texas to allow people without an accepted ID to vote by signing a sworn declaration stating they have a reasonable impediment to obtaining one. Twenty Senate Republicans backed a bill that would make the affidavit option permanent and would also create stiff criminal penalties of two to 10 years in prison for lying on a sworn declaration. Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick has made the legislation a priority.

In the filing, the Justice Department and Texas asked for the hearing to be pushed back until after June 18, the last day Gov. Greg Abbott has to sign or veto legislation.

"If new Texas state voter identification legislation is enacted into law, it will significantly affect the remainder of this litigation," Texas and the Justice Department argue.

Just hours after Trump was sworn in as president, the Justice Department asked for a January hearing to be delayed to February, saying they needed more time to brief new leadership. Lawyers in the case say it's still too early to know for sure if Trump's Justice Department changed positions in the case.

In August, Ramos denied a request from Texas to delay hearings in the case until after the legislative session wraps up in June.

"The question to be determined at the hearing is whether there was intent to discriminate during the legislative session in 2011," said Houston attorney Chad Dunn, who is part of a legal team representing Democrats and minority rights groups challenging the law. "Whatever happens with this bill doesn't address that question."

Paris mayor, Clooney fire back at Trump for insulting city

Associated Press

PARIS — Paris Mayor Anne Hidalgo, France's foreign minister and an American cinema luminary pushed back at U.S. President Donald Trump for insulting the City of Light on Friday in a speech.

Trump evoked his friend Jim, "a very, very substantial guy," in an address at the Conservative Political Action Conference. Jim used to be a regular visitor to Paris, Trump said, but hasn't made the trip in four or five years because "Paris is no longer Paris."

Hidalgo tweeted a photo of herself alongside Mickey Mouse and Minnie and said: "To @realDonaldTrump and his friend Jim, in @LaTour Effel we celebrate the dynamism and spirit of openness of Paris with Mickey and Minnie."

In another tweet, with the hashtag #Donald&Jim, Hidalgo said American tourist reservations are up 30 percent in 2017 so far compared to last year.

French Foreign Minister Jean-Marc Ayrault offered his own proof that Americans like not just Paris but all of France: "3.5 million Americans visited France in 2016," he tweeted. "They will always be welcome."

George Clooney used the red carpet to speak up for Paris as he headed into the awards ceremony for this year's Cesar, the French version of the Oscar, where he received a "Cesar d'honneur" for his work.

"Yes, no one wants to go to Paris anymore because it's horrible here, apparently," he said as he entered the theater. "We have some things to work on in the United States," he said, without ever naming Trump. In a veiled illusion to France far-right presidential candidate, Marine Le Pen, Clooney added, "I think you guys have some of the same issues here so ... good luck."

Trump hammered France in his speech.

"Take a look at what's happened in France. Take a look at Nice and Paris," the president said in an apparent reference to last year's Bastille Day attack in Nice and the 2015 Paris attacks.

He said Jim used to visit Paris each summer. "It was automatic ... He wouldn't miss it for anything."

"Now he doesn't even think in terms of going there. Take a look at what's happening to our world folks, and we have to be smart. We have to be smart. We can't let it happen to us," Trump said.

Apache upgrades Alpine forecast

Christmann: Field has greater potential than originally thought

By Ryan Maye Handy
Houston Chronicle

The Alpine High oil and gas field, touted by Houston-based Apache Corp. as a major find, has greater potential than the company initially reported despite disappointing early production results, CEO John Christmann IV assured shareholders Thursday.

Apache announced the discovery on the West Texas oil and gas field in September, estimating it holds the equivalent of 15 billion barrels of oil and gas. But production results released earlier this month disappointed analysts and investors, many of whom have been skeptical of Apache's find, because other companies had drilled in the area near Balmorhea without much success.

In a call with analysts following the release of Apache's fourth-quarter earnings, Christmann attributed the lower-than-expected output to a lack of equipment and pipelines in the remote area, which has limited hydraulic fracturing operations and the amount of oil and gas that can be extracted. But Christmann promised that, with the completion of a pipeline in July, the company's enthusiasm for Alpine High would be justified.

"We are very pleased with where we are, and the scope and scale of this field has increased since we first disclosed it," Christmann said.

But some analysts say they remain cautious. It's still too early to know if Apache's expectations for the field will bear out, said Hassan Eltorie, a principal energy analyst for IHS Markit. Eltorie said that Christmann seemed to suggest that there would be more-thorough exploration to come.

"We never reacted with optimism," Eltorie said of Apache's discovery. "We still reserve judgment, as there is more to be done."

The discovery of Alpine High was a highlight last year for a company recovering from major losses during the oil downturn. Apache Corp. on Thursday said it narrowed its losses in the fourth quarter, ending a year that was significantly better than 2015.

The Houston exploration and production company said it aggressively cut costs while meeting production targets, shrinking its loss for the three months ending in December to $182 million from $4 billion in the same period a year earlier.

For all of 2016, Apache reported a loss of $1.4 billion compared with $10.4 billion in 2015. Revenues in the fourth quarter slipped 2 percent to $1.45 billion from $1.48 billion in the same period in 2015. Annual revenues declined more than 20 percent to $5.4 billion from $6.9 billion in 2015.

Apache said it earned an average of $47.39 per barrel of oil in the last three months of 2016, compared to $39.79 in the same period a year earlier. Christmann called 2016 "an important step in Apache's transformation."

"We are poised for excellent long-term, organic growth through 2018 and beyond, which will be driven primarily by our high-quality acreage positions in the Delaware and Midland basins," he said in a statement.

The majority of Apache's investments in 2017 will focus on the Permian Basin, with $500 million over the next two years going to developing Alpine High, where Apache will have to build the pipelines it will need to transport gas, he said

Conservative free market group opposes NY nuclear bailout

By David Klepper
Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. — A conservative free market group has joined liberal environmental advocates criticizing New York's plan to charge ratepayers up to $7.6 billion to keep three aging upstate nuclear plants operating.

Citizens Against Corporate Bailouts director Gregg Keller says state lawmakers should reject the deal, which he says amounts to "corporate cronyism."

"This is clearly a bailout of the nuclear power industry," he told The Associated Press earlier this week. "The market is going to be the best arbiter ... this is not a partisan issue. This is about free markets."

A spokesman for Democratic Gov. Andrew Cuomo said Friday that Keller's group is just doing the bidding of the fossil fuel industry and posing as a group of concerned citizens.

"No one is fooled by this poor attempt to pass off a Beltway Astroturf front for a legitimate grassroots group," said Richard Azzopardi. "These D.C. shills are clearly carrying Big Oil's water and don't care about saving New York jobs, stopping utility bills from skyrocketing or, you know, telling the truth."

Keller said the organization is supported by free market "enthusiasts" and also opposes nuclear subsidies in Illinois. The organization's website says it is a coalition of New Yorkers.

Cuomo argues the nuclear deal is a responsible way to ensure stable electrical rates while the state transitions to renewable sources of energy, like wind and solar, and weans itself off fossil fuels. The subsidies, which will be paid over 12 years, are tied to New York's plan to generate half of its power from renewable sources by 2030.

Trump blasts media, anonymous sources — after WH uses them

By Nancy Benac and Mary Clare Jalonick
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump unloaded on the news media Friday for using anonymous sources — just hours after members of his own staff insisted on briefing reporters only on condition their names be concealed.

Unleashing a line of attack that energized an enthusiastic crowd at the nation's largest gathering of conservative activists, Trump said unethical reporters "make up stories and make up sources."

"They shouldn't be allowed to use sources unless they use somebody's name," he declared. "Let their name be put out there." Trump told the Conservative Political Action Conference that while not all reporters are bad, the "fake news" crowd "doesn't represent the people. It will never represent the people and we're going to do something about it."

Trump didn't expand on what he had in mind or which news organizations he was talking about. But his broadsides represented an escalation of his running battle against the press, which he has taken to calling "the opposition party."

The president has chafed at a number of anonymously sourced stories, including numerous reports describing contacts between his campaign advisers and Russian intelligence agents, which the White House has sharply disputed.

However, members of his White House team regularly demand anonymity when talking to reporters. That was the case Friday morning when Trump officials briefed reporters on chief of staff Reince Priebus' contact with top FBI officials concerning the Russia reports.

Later Friday, after Trump's speech, several news organizations including The New York Times, The Los Angeles Times, CNN and Politico were blocked from joining a White House media gaggle, according to news reports. The Associated Press chose not to participate following the move by White House press secretary Sean Spicer. Lauren Easton, the AP's director of media relations, said in a statement: "The AP believes the public should have as much access to the president as possible."

Trump's appearance at CPAC represented a triumph for both speaker and audience — each ascendant after years when they were far from the center of the political universe.

Elizabeth Connors of New York recalled past gatherings as collections of the "downtrodden."

Today, she said, "it's energized" after years in which "we've been just pushed down, pushed down, pushed down."

Nicholas Henderson of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, was there in his "Make America Great Again" hat and pronounced Trump's speech rousing.

"He touched on a lot of things we'd already heard before, which is reassuring, tells us he's still committed to those promises he made during the campaign," Henderson said.

Trump, who first appeared at CPAC as a reality TV star six years ago, recalled his past visits with nostalgia, saying the crowd helped put him on the path to the presidency.

"I loved the commotion," he said. "And then they did these polls where I went through the roof and I wasn't even running, right? But it gave me an idea."

From there, Trump's latest speech played out like a greatest hits reel from his 2016 campaign.

He reminisced about his victory in the Republican primaries. He vowed to "build the wall" along the Mexican border. He denounced Hillary Clinton's characterization of some of his supporters as belonging in a "basket of deplorables."

The crowd responded to his Clinton criticism with chants of "Lock her up!" just as they did at Trump rallies last year.

Further blurring the line between candidate and president, Trump departed the stage to the Rolling Stones' "You Can't Always Get What You Want," the same exit music he used during his campaign.

As for Trump's criticism of anonymous sources, Gregg Leslie, legal defense director for the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, said such arrangements are "essential to good reporting" in many cases.

"There are just some things that people will come forward about anonymously that they cannot discuss openly," Leslie said, citing potential threats to jobs and even personal safety.

The Associated Press uses anonymous sources only if the material is factual information, not opinion or speculation, and is vital to the news report. It must come from a person who is reliable and in a position to have accurate information.

Long ago, Trump himself played fast and loose with sourcing. In the 1990s, when his personal life was tabloid fodder, a "spokesman" who identified himself as John Miller, would call to offer details about the businessman's failing marriage and the girlfriends he was juggling. But The Washington Post reported it was actually Trump, posing as his own publicist. In later years Trump denied it, but he had owned up to it at the time, describing the Miller calls as a "joke gone awry," according to the Post.

All presidents have their moments of tension with the press, but Trump's first weeks in office have brought a frontal attack unlike anything from any other president.

After his newest jibes, Trump turned his CPAC speech into a recitation of his top agenda items, promising bold action on health care, trade, immigration, energy and more.

"One by one, we're checking off the promises we made to the American people," he said, telling the group, "I will not disappoint you."

He told the conservatives the health care law he inherited from President Barack Obama threatens to bring about "total catastrophe," reiterating his promise to repeal and replace it. On illegal immigration, he said that "as we speak today, immigration officers are finding gang members, drug dealers and criminal aliens and throwing them the hell out."

He promised changes to the welfare system, saying, "It's time for all Americans to get off welfare and get back to work," adding that: "You're going to love it."

Judge won't throw out Bergdahl case over Trump comments

By Jonathan Drew
Associated Press

President Donald Trump's campaign-trail criticism of Army Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl, while "problematic," hasn't prevented the soldier from getting a fair trial on charges that he endangered comrades by walking off his post in Afghanistan in 2009, a military judge ruled Friday.

Bergdahl's lawyers had argued that Trump violated their client's due-process rights by repeatedly calling him a "traitor" and that the judge should dismiss charges of desertion and misbehavior before the enemy. Bergdahl is scheduled for trial in April, and could face life in prison on the latter charge.

The Judge, Army Col. Jeffery Nance, wrote in his ruling that Trump's comments were "disturbing and disappointing" but didn't constitute unlawful command influence. Nance agreed with prosecutors' arguments that Trump's comments amounted to campaign-trail rhetoric, and the judge wrote the comments shouldn't harm potential jurors' impartiality.

"The accused was merely the foil for delivering that political message," Nance wrote. "All reasonable members of the public and potential panel members will know that was what he was doing and will not allow the rhetoric to affect their impartiality."

Nance did say, however, that he would allow defense attorneys wide leeway to question potential jurors about Trump. He said they can renew their request to dismiss the charges once they've sought to find out how Trump's comments affected potential jurors.

Nance wrote: "We have a man who eventually became President of the United States and Commander in Chief of all the armed forces making conclusive and disparaging comments, while campaigning for election, about a soldier facing potential court-martial. ... The Court recognizes the problematic potential created by these facts."

Bergdahl's lead defense attorney, Eugene Fidell, said that he planned to appeal Nance's ruling and would "pursue the matter vigorously."

White House spokesman Michael Short declined comment.

The defense's motion, filed shortly after Trump was sworn in as president, cites more than 40 instances of Trump's criticism at public appearances and media interviews through August 2016. Defense attorneys argued that it would be hard for potential military jurors to ignore what their commander in chief said.

Prosecutors argued that Trump's comments were campaign rhetoric aimed at actions taken by President Barack Obama's administration to bring Bergdahl home after he was held captive for five years by the Taliban and its allies. Obama's decision in May 2014 to exchange Bergdahl for five Taliban prisoners prompted some Republicans to accuse the president of jeopardizing the nation's safety.

Bergdahl, who is from Idaho, has said he walked off his post to cause alarm and draw attention to what he saw as problems with his unit.

Peru's president tells Trump he prefers 'bridges to walls'

By Franklin Briceno and Joshua Goodman
Associated Press

LIMA, Peru — The first Latin American president to visit Donald Trump at the White House told the U.S. leader Friday he prefers "bridges to walls," sending him a gentle rebuke of his controversial proposal to build a wall along the border with Mexico.

Peruvian President Pedro Pablo Kuczynski, a U.S.-educated former Wall Street banker, has emerged as an unlikely leader in Latin America, taking a strong stand against Trump's "America First" agenda while many in the region remain silent.

Kuczynski, 78, characterized his meeting with Trump as "cordial and constructive" and said he told Trump he was interested in the free movement of people — "legally," he emphasized —and also spoke about trade and economic development.

Kuczynski harshly criticized Trump during the U.S. presidential campaign, joking he would cut diplomatic relations with the U.S. "with a saw" if Trump followed through on his pledge to build a wall with Mexico, which he compared to the Berlin Wall. On Friday, he made a point of saying "we prefer bridges to walls."

Leaders in the region, even staunch critics of the U.S. like Venezuelan President Nicolas Maduro, have largely avoided rallying to Mexico's side for fear of jeopardizing their own relations with the Trump administration. Despite such past criticism, it will be hard for Trump to dismiss Kuczynski's advice, said Brian Winter, vice president of the regional group Council of the Americas.

Kuczynski, who renounced U.S. citizenship to run for Peru's presidency, speaks Trump's language, not just flawless English but that of a successful businessman with deep influence in the power circles of New York, where he lived and worked for years.

He is also bolstered by Peru's standout performance creating jobs and growth. Buoyed by high metal prices, Peru's economy has boomed an average 5 percent each year since 2000 — almost twice the regional average.

"This is the positive side of the Latin American story that Trump may be unaware of," said Winter. "Because of his biography, but also the success of Peru, Kuczynski may have more credibility than any other president in Latin America to talk straight to Trump."

In brief remarks in the Oval Office before their meeting, Trump said the two men have known each for some time and that it was an honor to welcome him to Washington.

"Peru has been a fantastic neighbor," Trump said. "We've had great relationships, better now than ever before." Trump also announced that he would authorize the sale of U.S. military vehicles to Peru — though Kuczynski later downplayed the purchases, saying his government's priority is not acquiring military equipment but providing clean water to all Peruvians.

Peru is among a handful of South American nations with a free trade agreement with the U.S. and Kuczynski has not hid his admiration for the United States. But despite being ridiculed at home as a "gringo," Kuczynski has said he worries the U.S. has been taking Latin America for granted. Not for nothing, his first trip abroad after taking office last July was to China.

One area where the two men likely see eye-to-eye is Venezuela — though Kuczynski said the topic only came up tangentially in their conversation.

Kuczynski has been outspoken criticizing Venezuela's socialist government, calling for humanitarian aid to the country and giving visas to exiles.

Within 30 days of taking office, Trump has already slapped sanctions on Venezuela's vice president for his alleged role in facilitating large cocaine shipments to the U.S., and met with the wife of the country's most-prominent political prisoner.

If Kuczynski manages to earn Trump's respect, it could pay bilateral dividends. Earlier this month, Kuczynski telephoned Trump to ask him to deport former President Alejandro Toledo, who is believed to be in the San Francisco area. Toledo faces an arrest order for allegedly taking $20 million in bribes from a Brazilian construction firm.

Kuczynski said Friday the two men briefly discussed the case and that it will have to work its way through the both nations' judicial systems.

Godley rolls past Greenwood in third quarter

By George Watson
MRT Correspondent

LUBBOCK — Greenwood girls basketball coach Quint Anthony had a choice of where to focus his defense in the Rangerettes' Class 4A regional semifinal against Godley on Friday night.

Does he try to match up with the Lady Cats' inside game or try to take away Godley's tremendous 3-point shooters? Turns out, it was a struggle to do either for any length of time.

Makaila Tyer led three Lady Cats with 18 points and was 3-for-4 from the 3-point line, and 6-foot-3 center Tori Shoemaker added 12 points and 13 rebounds for Godley in a 65-44 victory at the Rip Griffin Center.

"I thought (Shoemaker) stepped up her game tonight. She hadn't been scoring like that, and that was big," Anthony said. "We knew we would have to play really good defense and we were sometimes and they were still scoring. It was just a difficult thing."

Greenwood's season ends at 25-13 while Godley (34-4) advances to the regional finals to face either Levelland or Stephenville at 7 p.m. on Saturday.

Cassi Mebane led the Rangerettes with nine points as no Greenwood player scored in double figures. Caity Payne, Natalee Karcher and Cylie Mebane had eight points each.

Jaycee Pannell added 15 points for the Lady Cats, who hit 47 percent (8 of 17) from the 3-point line and 42.6 percent (20 of 47) overall from the floor. Greenwood was 0 for 9 from the 3-point line and hit 37 percent (17 of 46) overall.

Despite the presence of Shoemaker, Greenwood dominated in the paint, outscoring Godley 28-18, while Godley won the rebounding battle by just three (31-28). But that was not enough to hold off the Lady Cats forever.

Trailing 30-23 at halftime, the Rangerettes were outscored 21-8 in what proved to be the decisive third period. Shoemaker had six of her points during a 9-0 run midway through the period that turned a 35-27 Godley advantage into 44-27 with 2:17 to play in the third. Four straight points by Tyer then made it a 20-point advantage at 49-29 and the Rangerettes could not recover.

"That was a good quarter for us for sure," Godley coach Mark Chauveaux said. "I think we got way out-hustled in the first half and Greenwood played with a lot of effort. We weren't doing much wrong, we just didn't have a lot of effort in the first half. Maybe toward the end of the second quarter it got better, but definitely in the third quarter I thought we played really well."

Greenwood did a good job in the game's opening 12 minutes of not only keeping Godley from getting its offense

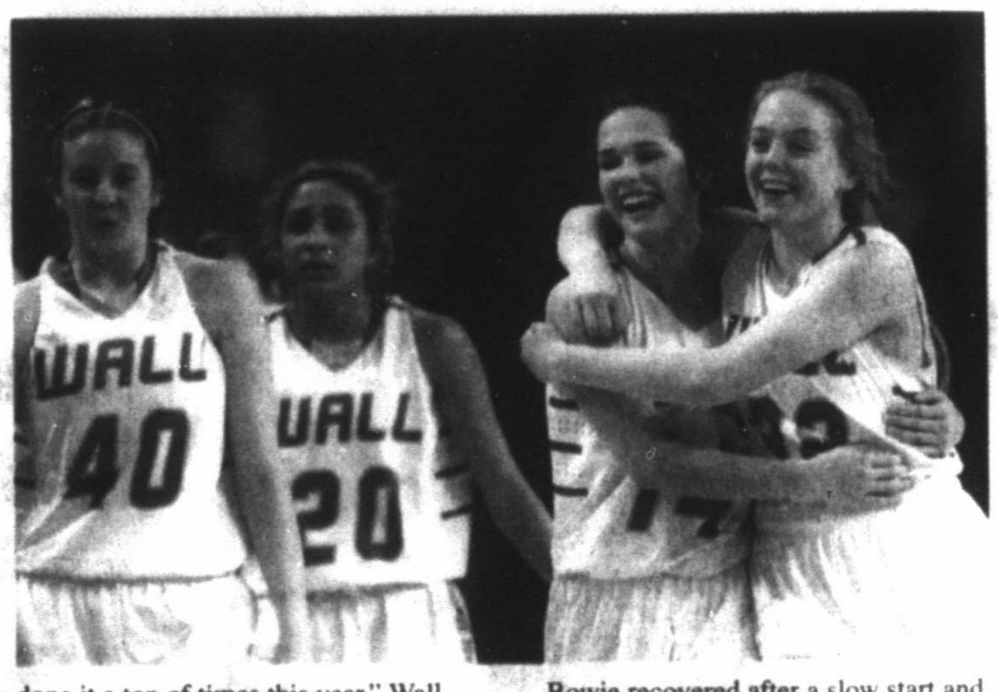
Wall wins 47-45 thriller over Bowie

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com



No. 10-ranked Bowie could have made No. 3 Wall very nervous late in the game when the Lady Rabbits cut the deficit to just two points.

But the Lady Hawks have been there and done that as they have had their share of close games during this playoff run and they were able to make enough free throws down the stretch to hold off Bowie 47-45 in a Region I-3A semifinal game at Chaparral Center.

With the win, the defending region and state champions Lady Hawks will get an opportunity to head back to the state tournament in San Antonio when they meet No. 1 Canadian in today's 1 p.m. final.

Wall (27-7) led 41-34 with 3:46 left in the game behind a three-point play by Landry Oliver, but like they did the entire game, the Lady Rabbits (33-2) found a way to claw back.

Two quick buckets pulled Bowie to within 41-38 and then the Lady Rabbits fouled to put the Lady Hawks at the free-throw line.

Wall responded by making 6 of 10 down the stretch, which was just enough to give Bowie a chance at the end.

Unfortunately for the Lady Rabbits, they couldn't get a potential tying shot to fall despite a couple of attempts, as Wall lived to play another day.

"I told our kids to get one stop, we've done it a ton of times this year," Wall coach Tate Lombard said. "I would have loved to have a rebound somewhere around in there, the ball was bouncing around for a while. I was just proud of our kids with the way they battled."

Early on, it didn't look it was going to turn into such a nailbiter as Wall jumped out to a 14-6 lead after the first quarter.

"I thought we had a good start to the game," Lombard said. "We made some good drives, we made some good plays early, but then we kind of settled a little bit in the second quarter."

Bowie recovered after a slow start and pulled to within 22-19 at the half.

Wall never had a lead larger than seven the rest of the way.

The Lady Hawks said the last two playoff games against Shallowater (a 43-31 win) and a 43-41 win over Idalou got them battle-tested for this game.

"I think the past two games we were really good for us," said junior Kelsey Powers. "Against Shallowater and Idalou they came back on us and did a really

Lady Kats beat Klondike, reach region final

By Brandon McAuliffe

ABILENE — Garden City girls basketball coach Joe Crabb could not have hoped for a better start Friday night for his squad in the Region II-1A tournament at Abilene Christian University's Moody Coliseum.

The No. 4-ranked Lady Bearkats scored the first 12 points of their game against Klondike and rolled to a relatively easy 45-33 win and a berth in today's 5 p.m. regional final.

Madison Hastings and Kortney Halfmann led the Lady Bearkats (26-6) with 14 and 13 points, respectively.

Garden City coach Joe Crabb was pleased with what he saw in the win against a team it lost to in the Irion County Tournament in December.

"They beat us earlier this year, so this feels really good," he said. "(Kortney Halfmann) was awesome as she has been all year and she's our leader. You can't say enough good (things) about those two."

The Lady Bearkats also forced 18 turnovers while committing just seven.

"I was very thrilled and that's what we do," said Crabb. "That's what we base everything on with the defense getting turnovers. We haven't been a very good offensive team all year, but we put together a pretty good game."

After falling behind 12-0, Kameron Riddle finally got Klondike on the board with 2:43 left in the opening quarter off an assist from Macy Sharp.

Garden City then scored five of the next eight points to take a 17-5 lead.

In the second, the teams traded scoring opportunities with Gruben closing the gap to 24-16 with 2:16 left in the first half. Madison Hastings, who had a game-high 14 points, answered with a 3-pointer at the other end to push the lead back up to 11 points.

Garden City took a 29-16 lead into the locker room and pushed it to a game-high 16 point advantage with a basket by Hastings with 3:25 left in the third quarter.

Klondike didn't fold and go away quietly though, as the Lady Cougars slowly

Risley's 31 points leads No. 1 Canadian past Brock

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@mrt.com

With a trip to the regional final at stake, Canadian senior Haevyn Risley took over the fourth quarter Friday night, much to the chagrin of the Brock girls basketball team.

Risley scored 13 of her 31 total points in the fourth quarter to lead the No. 1 Lady Cats to a 56-41 win over the No. 20 Lady Eagles during the Region I-3A semifinal at Chaparral Center.

Canadian (32-3) advanced to today's 1 p.m. final and will meet defending state champion Wall (27-7), a 47-45 winner over Bowie.

With Canadian leading 38-33 through three quarters, Risley began the final period with a block on the defensive end of the court and followed with eight consecutive points, pushing the Lady Cats to a 46-33 advantage with 5:45 left to play.

Risley even stymied a Lady Eagles' offensive possession with a defensive rebound, which began a fast break that resulted in a layup by Salym Cook and increased Canadian's lead to 48-34 with 4:50 remaining.

"She's just a basketball player," Lady Cats head coach Kevin Richardson said of Risley. "I thought she was the difference in the game. We just had a better player than they did at that position. She kind of took over when we needed her to. She should. She is a four-year starter and we needed her to arrive today and she did."

The 5-foot-9 Risley showed versatility, beating Brock with both her post game and her ability to drive to the basket from the backcourt.

"I really play anywhere coach puts me," said Risley, who considers herself a natural point guard. "He's moved me around a lot this year."

The Lady Eagles (27-10) were able to stay within reach for three quarters, but didn't hold the lead at any point other than the first two seconds of the game.

Eventually, foul trouble was too much for Brock to overcome, as it lost both multi-dimensional point guard Rylee Lavender and Friday's leading team scorer Lindy Drillette (13 points) to foul outs.

It took five minutes for the Lady Eagles to make their first field goal in the fourth quarter, a layup by Drillette, which shortened their deficit to 48-36.

"They wore us down," Brock head coach Chance Westmoreland said. "We were in foul trouble, so that kind of affected the way we guarded them and really (Risley) just took over. She made some good shots. I felt like the whole game, which we were, we were playing from behind and it just finally wore on us.

"We kind of messed up a few things defensively and it kind of affected what we did on our shooting. They're a great team and that's kind of how they play. They kind of wear you down and they did it."

Risley stood out on the defensive end as well, recording two steals and two blocked shots.

Risley made 12 of 17 free throws, with nine of her free throws made occurring in the final period.

"The whole team, we just said, 'We can't lose,'" Risley said. "Losing is never on our mind. We just came out with intensity and aggressiveness. We all encouraged each other. We were just positive and lifted each other up the whole time. I think that's the main success of the quarter."

chipped away closing to 39-29 with a basket by Riddle with 6:24 to play.

The Lady Bearkats, however, never let Klondike get the deficit down to single digits in closing out the win.

Garden City advanced to play the winner of the late game between O'Donnell and May. That game was still ongoing at press time.

GREENWOOD

going, but also holding the Lady Cats to one shot — or oftentimes no shots — down the floor.

The Rangerettes outrebounded the Lady Cats 17-11 in the first half and forced five turnovers in the first quarter. Greenwood was also outstanding in attacking the basket despite the presence of Shoemaker, who had just one point and grabbed seven of Godley's 11 first-half rebounds.

Greenwood opened the game with five straight points before Godley found its rhythm. The Lady Cats answered with five points and hit a pair of 3-pointers in the first quarter to forge a 15-13 lead.

The Rangerettes again started the second quarter strong to regain the lead and led 19-17 when Godley made its big push.

Two straight layups by Makaila Tyer and two free throws by Kaylee White gave Godley its biggest lead of the half to that point at 23-19. After a Cassi Mebane jumper, Sierra Lenz-Ross hit a trey from the left corner and one of two free throws to push the lead to 27-21 with 1:30 left in the first half.

Blaike Thompson temporarily stemmed the tied with a 16-footer, but White drained a 3-pointer from the corner with 18.6 seconds left to finish a 13-4 run to end the half and give Godley a 30-23 lead at the intermission.

"Godley is really good and shot the ball well," Anthony said. "It's tough to beat someone like that when you're not getting the shots to go in. But the girls battled hard and I thought they came out in the fourth quarter, really went to the basket, tried to push the ball, get some steals and do some things like that. I couldn't be any prouder of them."

NASCAR seeks boost with strong Daytona 500

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — The good news for NASCAR is that all signs indicate Dale Earnhardt Jr. has a legitimate shot to win the Daytona 500.

A victory for NASCAR's most popular driver, in his return to racing after a concussion sidelined him the second half of last season, would be a massive boost for the sagging series. Earnhardt's star power has been one of the bright spots of Speedweeks and his strength on the track has been obvious every time he's behind the wheel of his Chevrolet.

Earnhardt was part of a Hendrick Motorsports qualifying sweep for Sunday's season-opening race. Chase Elliott won the pole, and Earnhardt will line up next to him on the starting grid. Elliott added a win in a qualifying race, and Earnhardt led 53 of 60 laps in a second qualifying race before he was passed at the end .

So the Hendrick cars have speed, the drivers aren't cowering from the Toyota teamwork that dominated last year's race, and they are ready to go bumper-to-bumper with the Team Penske fleet.

It means Sunday could be a strong opening day for NASCAR, particularly if Earnhardt can pull off his third victory in "The Great American Race." He's not ready to call himself a favorite, and thinks he'll have his hands full with the Joe Gibbs Racing group and Penske drivers Joey Logano and Brad Keselowski.

"Watching the last several plate races, I think the Gibbs guys have the market cornered on the favorite," he said. "The Penske guys are really strong. So I think it's their race to lose. The Hendrick cars are going to be up there trying to mix it up."

NASCAR needs Sunday to go off without a hitch.

The series is under heavy scrutiny because of sliding attendance and television ratings, plus the title sponsor deal with Monster Energy came in at a fraction of what NASCAR was looking for when it began shopping the naming rights almost two years ago.

NASCAR celebrated its deal with Monster in a Las Vegas announcement, and has hitched its wagon to the hope that Monster can attract a younger demographic and raise the

Mustangs lead Tall City

Andrews High's Rachel Huffman follows her tee shot Friday during the Tall City Invitational at Green Tree Country Club.

Defending state champ Andrews leads Invite

By Will Korn
wkorn@mrt.com

The Andrews girls golf program has won countless tournaments en route to notching its state-record six consecutive state championships between 2011-16.

Andrews has already won a pair of tournaments this spring season, one of them a dominant 63-stroke victory at the Class 4A state preview at Horseshoe Bay earlier this month.

The Mustangs find themselves in very familiar territory after Friday's first round of the Girls Tall City Invitational at Green Tree Country Club.

Paced by junior Rachel Huffman's 78, Andrews is leading the team standings by one stroke wtih a 332 over El Paso Eastwood's Gold team. Lee sits in third with a 335, followed by fourth-place Wolfforth Frenship (336).

The tournament's final round will begin with a shotgun start at 8:30 a.m. at Hogan Park Golf Course.

Huffman said that despite her team's slim lead over a strong field, the Mustangs weren't in top form on Friday.

"Overall as a team, I don't think we played our best today," said Huffman, who played for Andrews' varsity state champion team last year as a sophomore. "A lot of our short game was a big issue today."

Senior Kateylnn Savell, who carded the Mustangs' second lowest score at 83, said she's confident her team will iron out the details of its game and improve its score in Saturday's final round.

She said her team's camaraderie, which has been one of the backbones of the program's dominance over the last half decade, will serve it well in today's round and over the rest of the season.

"As a team, I think we all get along really well, we're all friends, we all support each other and help each other out whenever someone is feeling down," Savell said. "(We try to) be big sisters to each other. I'm the mom out of the group, checking in on all my little kids.

"We need to work on our short game, get our acts together where we're reading the greens, reading our putts. We'll come back and play better tomorrow."

The program is also playing with some special inspiration. The Mustangs have dedicated this season to the memory of their late coach Randy Peel, who recently passed away and who was instrumental in the team's state championship run last season.

'Play for coach Peel' is how we're approaching this season," Savell said.

Huffman added that another key for the team is to simply enjoy its time on the course, rather than worry about the scores or pressure from competition.

"Instead of winning and thinking

Carroll's new star pair making a statement at TC Invitational

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@mrt.com

Southlake Carroll's Arman Dave and Alec Reusche have reached the pinnacle of high school tennis in the state.

And both Dragon tennis players have the shiny UIL gold state championship medals to prove it.

Dave

Dave won the 2016 Class 6A singles championship when he defeated Harlingen South's Jeremiah Gonzalez, 6-3, 6-1, in College Station last May.

However, Dave entered this tournament season wanting a new challenge than defending his singles title.

Reusche

Reusche and Matt Landers paired up to win the Class 6A state doubles title in 2016. But Reusche's partner Landers graduated, so he was seeking a new sidekick on the court.

The answer was Reusche and Dave decided to team up to create a super doubles pairing. The Southlake Carroll tandem shined by winning three matches during Friday's Tall City Invitational at Midland College and advanced to today's 8:30 a.m. semifinal at Bush Tennis Center.

Dave, an accomplished USTA singles player, believed that doubles play would improve his all-around game.

"I definitely want variety," said Dave, a junior. "I want the opportunity to win at singles and doubles."

Reusche welcomed having a new partner too because the change brings a new test and a new level of excitement.

"They definitely have very different games, so it's not like it's the same thing," Reusche said of Landers and Dave. "This year I get a different look, a different thing. That makes it a lot more fun, whereas if it was just repeated, it wouldn't be as fun. Arman is a great partner to have too as well. I think it will be fun."

Amazingly, Reusche and Dave didn't even play during the fall tennis season, so they're learning each other tendencies and trying to mesh on the court now.

Reusche is more of a net player, while Dave likes being on the baseline and using his ground strokes.

"They have a good chemistry together, so it was only natural to put them together," Dragons coach Corey Aldridge

Ryan Palmer, Wesley Bryan now share lead at Honda Classic

The Palm Beach Post via AP

Ryan Palmer walks off the green after finishing the ninth hole during the Honda Classic golf tournament in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., on Friday.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — Ryan Palmer has reason to believe that better days are ahead, with his golf game and at home.

Palmer made seven birdies Friday on another day of ideal scoring conditions at PGA National for a 5-under 65 that gave him a share of the lead with PGA Tour rookie Wesley Bryan (67) going into the weekend at the Honda Classic.

Rickie Fowler was a shot back after his second 66, and Anirban Lahiri was another stroke behind after a 68.

Starting a new year packed with uncertainty over matters far more important than golf, Palmer returned from a four-month break and missed the cut in his first four events. He signed up for Riviera only because his game needed work, and he saw enough go right to find some momentum going into Florida.

The long break was to be at home with his wife, Jennifer, who is recovering from breast cancer.

She was diagnosed with Stage 2 cancer in late July while he was at the Canadian Open. She had surgery about five weeks later. Palmer's season ended in September, and he spent the rest of the year helping her cope with chemotherapy and at home with their two children.

"I watched a few tournaments," Palmer said. "There were times when she said I should have gone and played. I was going to play Vegas and I was going to play Malaysia, but after that, there was no way I could play golf. Enjoyed time at home, took care of the kids. But it was a lot of hard times, for sure."

She was diagnosed relatively early, and the timing helped in other ways.

Palmer was able to reach out to Stewart Cink, whose wife is battling breast cancer. And the week after he learned his wife had breast cancer, Palmer sought out Phil Mickelson at the PGA Championship. Mickelson's wife was diagnosed in 2009.

Lyons fans 18 to help Weatherford knock off Chaps

From staff reports

WEATHERFORD — Behind a late push in the eighth inning and a dazzling 18-strikeout performance by starter Jake Lyons, Weatherford College edged No. 10 Midland College 3-1 on Friday in non-conference play.

Lyons allowed a run on three hits over seven strong innings, while walking only one. His run surrendered came on a home run by MC's Hill Alexander in the seventh. Lyons struck out every MC starter at least once.

Brock Barger got the start for the Chaparrals (7-2) and allowed two runs on six hits while striking out nine over seven solid innings.

Weatherford took a 1-0 lead in the sixth and after Alexander tied the game with his solo shot in the seventh, Weatherford rallied with a pair of runs in the bottom half.

Alex Salcido went 2-for-3 for MC, which managed just four hits in the loss. Landon Gray led Weatherford by going 2-for-4 with an RBI.

The two teams will play again in a doubleheader at 1 p.m. today.

Wieters joins Nationals; Judge hits homer for Yankees

Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Matt Wieters finally has a new team. One crazy accident turned his free agency into a harrowing experience.

Wieters cut his left wrist when a five-gallon glass water container broke in his garage on Nov. 1, delaying his offseason preparation — and, he thinks, his chance to find a deal.

"It's tough finding a team when you can't do anything baseball-related," Wieters said Friday, when the catcher took batting practice and ran conditioning sprints at spring training with the Washington Nationals after his signing was announced. "They told me I was very lucky that it wasn't worse than it was."

Wieters agreed to a $21 million, two-year deal worth $10.5 million annually, one that gives him the right to terminate the agreement after this season and become a free agent again. It includes $2.5 million each year in deferred salary.

Now Wieters is working on getting up to speed with the pitching staff for the reigning NL East champions. The Nationals' first exhibition game is Saturday against the New York Mets.

"There's definitely enough time," Wieters said. "As a catcher, I'd love to have as much as possible. Being able to listen (to the pitchers) and how they pitch will help me out a lot."

He joins a crowded clubhouse of catchers. Jose Lobaton and Pedro Severino played in Washington last season, and the club traded for San Diego's Derek Norris. In all, there are six catchers on the 40-man roster.

"He'll DH tomorrow. He's fine to hit. But he's not OK to defend and throw. Until we have that, his shoulder feeling good coming off the end of last year where he had the soreness, it doesn't make any sense at all to be playing defense in the WBC or for us."

Bryan Price, Cincinnati Reds manager

General manager Mike Rizzo described Wieters as "a leader in the clubhouse and on the field" for the Baltimore Orioles, the only major league club the four-time All-Star has played for until now.

Sticking around

The Chicago Cubs and reliever Pedro Strop agreed to a contract adding $6.35 million in guaranteed money through 2018, a deal that includes a club option for 2019.

Strop agreed earlier this month to a $5.5 million, one-year contract. The new deal calls for a $5.85 million salary in 2018 and a $6.25 million club option for 2019 with a $500,000 buyout. If the option is exercised, he could make $750,000 in performance bonuses in 2019: $250,000 each for 45, 50 and 55 games finished.

Strop went 2-2 with a 2.85 ERA in 54 appearances last year, helping Chicago win the World Series for the first time since 1908. Strop, known for wearing his hat off to the side, and ace right-hander Jake Arrieta were acquired in the same July 2013 trade with Baltimore.

Ailing

Dilson Herrera has inflammation in his right shoulder and will not throw for a couple days, taking the Colombian infielder out of the World Baseball Classic and hurting his chances for making the Cincinnati Reds.

Herrera, who turns 23 next Friday, also experienced shoulder soreness for parts of last season, including during spring training. He said it started bothering him again about a week ago.

The Reds acquired Herrera when they traded Jay Bruce to the New York Mets last sunmer.

Reds manager Bryan Price said Herrera probably won't throw again until Monday or Tuesday.

"He'll DH tomorrow. He's fine to hit," Price said Friday. "But he's not OK to defend and throw. Until we have that, his shoulder feeling good coming off the end of last year where he had the soreness, it doesn't make any sense at all to be playing defense in the WBC or for us."

For Rubio, passing of trade deadline brought relief

By Tim Reynolds
Associated Press

MIAMI — Ricky Rubio was trying desperately to take his own advice. Minnesota's point guard told anyone who would listen to him not to worry about the trade deadline, or fret about what moves might be coming.

Rubio

Practicing what he preached was a little difficult.

"Until it doesn't go down," Rubio said, "you don't believe it."

In his case, nothing went down Thursday — and that brought a clear sense of relief. Trade deadline day came and went with only seven deals involving 14 players, the smallest number of players affected since only four got moved on the big day in 2007. Rubio was one of many linked to various moves in the days leading up to the deadline, though nothing wound up happening in most of the high-profile cases.

"It was, like, boring," said Miami President Pat Riley, whose team looked and listened but made no deals.

Paul George, Jimmy Butler, Carmelo Anthony and Derrick Rose all stayed with their various teams. Cleveland, Golden State, San Antonio and Boston — the top two teams in each conference — didn't make any last-minute trades either, though the Cavaliers are likely to add Deron Williams once he clears waivers in the coming days.

The day wasn't much ado about nothing. But it came close.

"Like we always say, a lot of times very little happens at the deadline," Knicks coach Jeff Hornacek said before New York opened the post-All-Star schedule with a loss in Cleveland. "Now that it's over, guys can just go out and play."

That's what they're hoping in Indiana, Chicago and other points around the league as well.

George and Butler were believed to be under serious trade consideration — with Boston linked to both players, the thinking there being that either could seriously enhance the Celtics' chances of challenging Cleveland for Eastern Conference honors.

But the Pacers kept George, Butler stayed with the Bulls, and both have games awaiting Friday.

"You know, it's kind of a dark moment of uncertainty," said George, who didn't know what was really going on regarding any trade talks the Pacers were or weren't having. "That was the frustrating part. You want me to be your guy here, I thought I'd have been in the loop a little more on that."

It's been a trying season for Anthony: The Knicks are struggling, some cryptic tweets from Phil Jackson created headlines, and the situation between Madison Square Garden chairman and former Knicks star Charles Oakley — who was dragged from the arena, arrested and briefly banned — created headaches.

So that led to talk that Anthony might waive his no-trade clause and look to begin anew elsewhere. It didn't happen.

"I'm at peace. I've been at peace," a smiling Anthony said Thursday night. "I'm happy I won't be talking about trades or any of this stuff the rest of the season."

The most prevalent rumor on the Rubio front involved a swap for Rose, who played for Minnesota coach Tom Thibodeau for years in Chicago.

Rose never heard anything from the Knicks or his agent about the prospects of a move, so he figured nothing would happen. Turns out, he was correct.

"I'm happy that it's over," Rose said. "This is the first time I've been through this."

It wasn't the first time Rubio has been through this. That didn't seem to make things any easier, and Rubio knows that it's likely his name will be in trade talks again before long — probably when the draft rolls around in about four months.

"There's people who decide where you're going to play," Rubio said. "You can't control that."

FROM WIRE REPORTS

TIMBERWOLVES 97

MINNEAPOLIS — Karl-Anthony Towns had 26 points and 18 rebounds and Andrew Wiggins scored 27 points to help the Minnesota Timberwolves beat the Dallas Mavericks 97-84 on Friday night.

Ricky Rubio added 13 points and 14 assists a day after the Timberwolves declined an opportunity to trade him to the New York Knicks for Derrick Rose. The Wolves shot 52.6 percent to pull within 2 1/2 games of Denver for the eighth seed in the Western Conference.

Towns had seven turnovers, but scored 14 of his points in the fourth quarter to turn back the Mavericks.

Seth Curry scored a career-high 31 points and Harrison Barnes added 20 points and six rebounds for Dallas. Dirk Nowitzki was just 4 for 14 and Wes Matthews was 2 for 9 as the Mavs dropped three games back of the Nuggets.

The Mavericks acquired Nerlens Noel from Philadelphia on Thursday, but he wasn't able to join the team in time for the game. They sure could have used him.

LAKERS 110
THUNDER 93

OKLAHOMA CITY — Russell Westbrook scored 17 points in his 28th triple-double of the season, and his new teammates fit in seamlessly as the Oklahoma City Thunder defeated the Los Angeles Lakers 110-93 on Friday night.

Westbrook also had 18 rebounds and 17 assists for the 65th triple-double of his career.

It was the first game for new Thunder players Taj Gibson and Doug McDermott, acquired Thursday in a trade with the Chicago Bulls. Gibson scored 12 points and McDermott added eight, even though they arrived Thursday night and weren't even available for shootaround on Friday.

Alex Abrines and Andre Roberson each set a career high with 19 points, and Steven Adams added 15 points and 10 rebounds for the Thunder.

D'Angelo Russell scored 29 for the Lakers.

Westbrook didn't make a field goal until 3:15 remained in the first half, but he went 8 for 9 from the free throw line before the break. He had 13 points, eight rebounds and eight assists in the first half to help the Thunder take a 58-51 lead.

Westbrook clinched his triple-double in the first few minutes of the third quarter. Abrines hit three 3-pointers in the opening minutes of the period to give the Thunder a 73-58 lead.

WIZARDS 112

PHILADELPHIA — Richaun Holmes was the forgotten big man until now.

Holmes had 12 points, 10 rebounds and five blocks to help the depleted Philadelphia 76ers beat the Washington Wizards 120-112 on Friday night.

Robert Covington had 25 points and 11 rebounds, and Dario Saric added 20 points and 11 boards as the Sixers stopped the streaking Wizards, who won 15 of 17 before the All-Star break.

"Holmes is the person people forget about because of the logjam at center," coach Brett Brown said. "He's handled it well. He's a great teammate. He's competitive."

On a day the Sixers announced No. 1 overall pick Ben Simmons will not play this season, Holmes and other young players stepped up to make up for the absence of star center Joel Embiid and the trades of center Nerlens Noel and forward Ersan Ilyasova. Noel and Ilyasova were dealt before Thursday's trade deadline and Embiid missed his 12th straight game with a left knee contusion.

JAZZ 109
BUCKS 95

MILWAUKEE — Gordon Hayward scored 29 points, Derrick Favors added 19 and the Utah Jazz beat the Milwaukee Bucks 109-95 on Friday night, dominating the paint in their first game back from the All-Star break.

Hayward finished 11 of 17 from the field, breaking free for short, open jumpers or dunks. The 6-foot-10 Favors shot 9 of 14, often going strong to the hoop.

Center Rudy Gobert had 15 points and 16 rebounds for Utah, which held a 52-34 edge on points in the paint. The Jazz led by 13 at halftime, with the Bucks rarely trimming the lead to single digits.

This was just the way Utah hoped to open a three-game road trip after the break, with trips to playoff contenders Washington and Oklahoma City also on the itinerary.

Giannis Antetokounmpo had 33 points and 12 rebounds for Milwaukee, which had its three-game winning streak snapped.

The Bucks opened the game with an 11-3 run, fueled by the energetic play of Michael Beasley and Antetokounmpo. Utah coach Quin Snyder called timeout after a dunk by Beasley with 8:47 left in the first quarter.

PACERS 102
GRIZZLIES 92

INDIANAPOLIS — CJ Miles made five 3-pointers and scored 17 points. Paul George had nine points and nine rebounds after remaining with Indiana following the trade deadline, and the Pacers snapped a six-game losing streak with a 102-92 victory over the Memphis Grizzlies on Friday night.

Monta Ellis finished with 16 points, Myles Turner scored 12, and Lavoy Allen, Jeff Teague and Thaddeus Young each added 10 for the Pacers.

George was one of the biggest names involved in trade speculation Thursday and Pacers fans showed they were happy he wasn't dealt, giving the All-Star forward perhaps the loudest ovation he's received all season during player introductions. They are that a contract extension will be worked out before George becomes a free agent after the 2017-18 season.

He shot just 3 for 12 but the Pacers outscored the Grizzlies 64-42 across the middle two quarters and never relinquished their lead, leading by as many as 27 points in the second half. The Grizzlies finished the game shooting 41 percent from the floor (35 for 84).

Johnson leads Iowa State women in upset of No. 6 Texas

By Mark Rosner
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Seanna Johnson scored 22 points, including 10 straight for Iowa State in the third quarter, and the Cyclones upset No. 6 Texas 70-66 Friday night for their fourth straight victory.

Down two with seven minutes remaining, Iowa State (17-11, 8-9 Big 12) took control with a 9-0 run.

Bridget Carleton scored points 18 for Iowa State, but she committed two turnovers in the final minute to give Texas an opportunity. The Longhorns (21-7, 14-3) had a chance to tie it after the second turnover, but Carlton blocked Ariel Atkins' driving shot with nine seconds left and then made two free throws.

Jadda Buckley added 14 points for Iowa State.

Texas has lost three straight games for the first time this season. Brooke McCarty led the Longhorns with 12 points, Brianna Taylor added 11, and Joyner Holmes and Alecia Sutton had 10 apiece.

McCarty, the Longhorns' leading scorer this season, had just two points in the first half. She left midway through the second quarter after picking up her second and third fouls in a span of 37 seconds.

Iowa State led by seven at the time, and Texas managed to cut that deficit to four at halftime.

Benn's goal breaks tie in 3rd, Stars beat Coyotes

Associated Press

DALLAS — Jamie Benn scored the tiebreaking goal in the third period, and the Dallas Stars beat the Arizona Coyotes 5-2 on Friday night.

Jordie Benn sent a long pass to his brother at the left side of the net. Jamie Benn took the puck behind the cage and scored on a wraparound before Arizona goalie Louis Domingue could move across to the right.

The Coyotes twice took a one-goal lead. Radim Vrbata scored in the first period and Martin Hanzal in the second on an assist from Vrbata.

Dallas replied with a goal by Devin Shore in the first period and another by John Klingberg on the power play to tie the game at 2 after two periods.

Lauri Korpikoski and Cody Eakin added third-period goals for Dallas.

Stars goalie Kari Lehtonen made 25 saves, while Domingue had 32.

Jamie Benn and Shore each had a goal and an assist for Dallas. Esa Lindell had two assists.

Vrbata scored on a slap shot at 7:06 of the first period, taking a pass in the slot from Max Domi for the one-timer.

Shore tied it at 14:12 with a wrist shot into the upper left part of the net from the top of the slot. Jiri Hudler set up Shore with a pass across from the right side.

"I said, 'I am all about it. If we feel like that's where our strongest possibility going the furthest and let's do it.' So far they have done nothing but play well. They haven't disappointed at all."

Dave has aspirations of playing at a Division I level.

The 5-foot-11 Dave says he is influenced by Kei Nishikori, the ATP's No. 5 player.

"He's one of the smaller guys on the tour, probably similar in height and build to myself," Dave said. "A lot of these guys in the modern game they're all big and a lot of them are physically developed. It gives me inspiration to see a smaller guy doing so well."

Reusche, a senior, doesn't plan to play intercollegiate tennis when he attends TCU in the fall, so this spring season will be his last hurrah. His advice for a successful doubles team is strong communication.

"That's mainly the biggest thing because if you don't talk, there's a lot of momentum you can easily lose," Reusche said. "Obviously you need to be able to play well, but I feel like communication is the biggest part just because in doubles you're not the only one on the court."

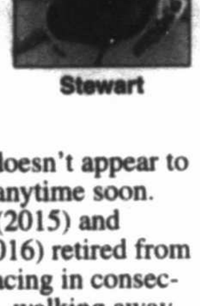
Going, going, gone: NASCAR stars starting to step away

By Mark Long
Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Jeff Gordon is working in the broadcast booth. Carl Edwards is spending time with family. Tony Stewart is hanging out at dirt tracks.

Gordon



Stewart

Some of NASCAR's biggest stars have stepped away over the last 15 months, a thought-provoking trend that doesn't appear to be ending anytime soon.

Gordon (2015) and Stewart (2016) retired from full-time racing in consecutive years, walking away with a combined seven championships. Edwards called it quits last month, abruptly leaving before the final year of his contract with Joe Gibbs Racing. Edwards said his decision was personal and private. What made it so bizarre is that Edwards was 10 laps away from winning his first championship just two months earlier.

Even if Edwards returns to the series next year, it probably won't do much to stop NASCAR's ongoing face-lift.

"When I first started watching the (Washington) Redskins, a lot of wide receivers and cornerbacks were playing into their mid-30s regularly and now they're not," NASCAR star Dale Earnhardt Jr. told The Associated Press this week. "Nowadays, at 30, they're starting to look for somebody else and wondering how much more mileage they got on them.

"I think we're seeing that in NASCAR as well."

Other aspects of the issue, Earnhardt said, include drivers starting racing careers much younger than ever and the constant demands on those who reach NASCAR's pinnacle, the Monster Energy Cup Series.

Earnhardt estimated about 90 sponsor or team commitments during the series' 36-race schedule, leaving little room for downtime, family time or me time.

"Back in the 70s and 80s, when guys were racing into their 50s, they were running 28 races and had a lot of time off," he said. "They didn't have sponsor responsibilities. Ninety days of work off the track? What was Bobby Allison doing in '83 with Miller? Twelve days off the track, maybe? They had a lot of time to do what they wanted to do to unplug and keep their battery charged."

Throw in escalating salaries over the last two decades, and it should be no surprise to see drivers choosing a less-stressful lifestyle — even with safety advancements making the sport seemingly as safe as possible.

Michael Waltrip, a 53-year-old former team owner/driver who has raced a part-time schedule since 2009, is making his final NASCAR start in the season-opening Daytona 500 on Sunday. Veteran driver Greg Biffle, 47, announced last week that he won't race full time in 2017. Biffle accepted a recurring role as a guest analyst on NBC Sports' "NASCAR America" show.

Others might soon join them on the outside looking in.

excitement level at all the events. But there was little signage around the track during Speedweeks, and one of the few indications Monster is the new sponsor were the scantily-clad women around for some of the pomp and circumstance. There's been no television advertising and NASCAR was even the subject of a critical examination in the Wall Street Journal.

NASCAR has countered with a JGR announcement that defending race winner Denny Hamlin and FedEx have signed long-term extensions , while Team Penske locked in Logano and Shell-Pennzoil through 2023.

"People are talking about the health of the sport, and this is a watershed moment," Roger Penske said of an extension that took nearly a year to complete with Shell.

Both FedEx and Shell-Pennzoil are major sponsors who spend something close to $20 million a year to brand the race cars and market to the NASCAR audience.

"This is a very positive story in our sport, to see the commitment of a very large company like Shell and Pennzoil are and for them to be able to sign up with this team really makes a statement for not only where Team Penske is, but for where NASCAR is as a sport," Logano said.

Problem is, NASCAR doesn't yet know exactly where it is.

NASCAR will launch a new advertising campaign on Sunday called "Ready. Set. Race." and a crash-filled 30-second TV ad was revealed Saturday to promote the 500 .

In an effort to add excitement to the racing — something both the television partners and Monster wanted — all events will be run in segments this year. It means the Daytona 500 won't exactly be a 500-mile race of attrition, but will instead be cut into three parts. There are points on the line for each segment, giving drivers incentive to race hard for the entire race, and one final long push to the checkered flag.

It's a risky move for NASCAR, but one embraced publicly by drivers. Some fans, particularly longtime watchers, are horrified at the gimmicks NASCAR is using, but a rising crop of young drivers are eager to give it a try.

Indeed, the faces are rapidly changing in NASCAR as the stars are aging out of their rides.

Jeff Gordon is now a television analyst and will drive the pace car on Sunday. Tony Stewart retired at the end of last season. Carl Edwards decided in late December he didn't want to race this year after coming 10 laps short of winning the championship. Greg Biffle has committed to a television job.

With all those open seats, the series is starting to shift and there's more attention for drivers like Elliott, Gordon's replacement a year ago, and Daniel Suarez, the Mexican driver who turned his Xfinity Series championship into a promotion to the Cup series when Edwards retired.

Transgender boy wins first 2 matches of girls tournament

By Kristie Rieken
Associated Press

CYPRESS — Mack Beggs won two matches at the Texas state championships Friday. But the larger conflict — over whether a 17-year-old transgender boy should be wrestling girls — remained unsettled.

Beggs' family has said he would rather be wrestling boys. Some girls and their advocates agree, arguing that the testosterone treatments Beggs has been taking while in transition from female to male have made him too strong to wrestle fairly against women. But under the state's governing policy for athletics, students must wrestle against the gender listed on their birth certificates.

Beggs beat Taylor Latham in the 110-pound class Friday. The score was 18-7.

It was a match Latham's mother didn't want to happen. Her daughter, she said, was wrestling someone whose body was chemically toned for strength.

"I wanted her to forfeit as a protective mom," Lisa Latham said. "She's a fighter. She's not a quitter. She's a senior. She's fought for the last three years to get here. She was going to see it through even though I wasn't sharing the same opinion."

At match's end Beggs shook hands with Latham before pointing high in the stands to cheering fans wearing the colors of his school, Euless Trinity. He celebrated for a few seconds. Then Beggs and his grandmother, led by his coach, jogged across the mats and into an area restricted to athletes and coaches.

While many cheered Beggs, others said the match was unfair. Patti Overstreet, a self-described wrestling parent, left her seat shouting, "that's cheating" and "big cheater!"

"Look at how beefed up she is," Overstreet said, referring to Beggs. "It's because she's taking an enhancement. Whether she's a boy, girl, wants to be purple or blue it doesn't matter. When you're using a drug and you're 10 times stronger than the person you're wrestling because of that drug that (shouldn't be) allowed."

Later Beggs beat Mya Engert 12-4 to push his record to 54-0 and leave him two victories away from a state title. Beggs got a bloody nose during that match and had to stuff gauze up his right nostril to stop the bleeding. It didn't slow him down much as he added several points after that to capture another decisive win.

Beggs hugged Engert and pumped his fist in the air after the win before darting off the mat. Engert was weeping as she walked away, and her coach shooed reporters from the area with a stern: "No comment."

Beggs will resume competition in the semifinals on Saturday morning.

The controversy over Beggs' participation in the women's sport comes at a crucial moment, as the public and politicians debate how they should react to the growing belief that gender is fluid. Just this week, the Trump administration announced an end to federal protections which allowed transgender students to use facilities based on their gender identity, leaving states and school districts to determine their own policies.

And in Texas, lawmakers are considering a bill similar to the controversial HB2, a law in North Carolina that prompted the NBA to move this year's All-Star game out of that state. If passed, the Texas version, called SB6, would require transgender people to use the bathroom of their "biological sex."

As Beggs arrived for weigh-in on Friday morning, several girls excitedly ran up and embraced him as he smiled and laughed. Soon after that he pulled a gray hoodie down so low that it all but obscured his shock of bright blond hair. Standing in line among a sea of girls, he gnawed the nails of his left hand aggressively, perhaps nervous about the match — or the controversy surrounding it.

The University Interscholastic League, which oversees athletics in Texas public schools, enacted the birth certificate policy on Aug. 1.

Attorney Jim Baudhuin tried and failed to get injunctions before both the district and regional meets to prevent Beggs from competing while he transitions. He told The Associated Press earlier this week that he doesn't blame Beggs for the situation, but faults the UIL.

"The more I learn about this, the more I realize that she's just trying to live her life and her family is, too," Baudhuin said of Beggs. "She's being forced into that position. Who knows, through discovery we may find out that's not the case. But every indication is, the way the winds are going now, the blame rests with the UIL and the superintendents."

Despite criticism of the policy, UIL executives don't envision a change.

"Ninety-five percent of the school superintendents in Texas voted for the rule as it was proposed, which was to use birth certificates," UIL deputy director Jamey Harrison said. "So any rule can be reconsidered, but ... given the overwhelming support for that rule, I don't expect it to change anytime soon."

Beggs reached the state tournament after two opponents forfeited at the regional competition amid concerns about the testosterone treatments. Harrison refused to concede that such forfeitures taint the tournament.

"We never like students to avoid the opportunity to compete. That's the whole point of having competitions," he said. "But to answer your question specifically: Do we believe that any accomplishment by an individual or the overall event in itself is somehow tainted or painted in a negative light because a student may choose to forfeit? No we do not."

HONDA

From 1C

"And he went right to work and made phone calls for me," Palmer said. "I can't think him enough for what he did. It's been a long ride."

Bryan had a rough start to his rookie season until turning it around last week at Riviera, where he got within two shots of Dustin Johnson at one point in the third round until the new world No. 1 pulled away to win easily.

On the other side of the country, the player famous for his trick-shot videos with brother George Bryan was right back at it. Along with five birdies, his biggest moment was a bogey on the 13th hole when his only option was using a putter to get out of the trees. He holed an 8-foot bogey putt to keep in range, and then he holed a 10-foot birdie putt on the 18th to tie for the lead.

"Don't like making bogeys, but any time you find yourself using a putter out of the trees for your second shot, it's not good," he said. "Glad to settle for bogey there and glad to get one on 18, tied for the lead going into the weekend."

The cut was at even-par 140, matching the highest cut since the Honda Classic moved to PGA National in 2007.

Among those missing the cut was Shawn Stefani, but not without doing all he could. One over the cut line with four holes to go, he drove into the water on No. 6, stripped down to his underwear and blasted out to the fairway. He still made bogey.

Palmer said he kept his swing in good shape during the time off. The problem was his putter.

"The greens, all hell broke loose — the nerves, anxiety right hand. I spent four weeks going through that," he said.

He worked with Dave Stockton and his son on putting during the three days leading to the Genesis Open at Riviera, opened with a 68 and saw good results, even though he tied for 49th.

"Felt like it was the best putting I've done in a year and a half, and it's carried over to this week," he said.

Fowler also started 66-66 a year ago, becoming the first player to go bogey-free over the opening 36 holes at PGA National, which has been the site of the Honda Classic in 2007. But he went 71-74 on the weekend and was never a factor.

Fowler feels as though his game is in good shape. Now he'd like to finish it off. He hasn't won anywhere since Abu Dhabi a year ago, and his last PGA Tour victory was over Labor Day weekend in 2015.

"I feel like it's time for me to start finishing off some more events when I am in this position," Fowler said.

Cal Poly dorm closed for rest of school year as hill slides

SAN LUIS OBISPO — More than 270 college students have moved out of a dorm at Cal Poly San Luis Obispo because a nearby hill continues to slide toward the building.

The university says it was necessary to close Fremont Hall by Friday because another storm predicted to arrive during the weekend is expected to further compromise the hill.

The dorm was evacuated last Saturday and after the decision to close it for the remainder of the academic year, students returned Thursday to pack up their belongings.

Don't assume a pregnancy unless you know for sure

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: Recently, while making a purchase at a local store and handing the cashier my money, she asked, "How many months along are you?" I was confused for a moment, until I realized she had assumed I was pregnant. (I'm not.) When I told her I wasn't, she just shrugged and said, "Oh."

Abby, my feelings were hurt. I will most likely never see that cashier again — and I do not know her — but I would like to know how to respond to this in the future. I don't believe people should assume a woman is pregnant unless they know for sure that she is. What she said made me instantly want to lash out. However, I knew that responding with more rudeness would do no good. So, what should I say if this ever happens again? — NOT PREGNANT IN ALABAMA

DEAR NOT PREGNANT: You handled the situation appropriately. The cashier was presumptuous. If it happens again, either handle it the way you did with that clerk or say, "Why do you ask?" and let the person squirm. The choice is yours.

DEAR ABBY: I'm an eighth-grader with a good life. I go to a good school, have good friends and a happy family. But at school, there is this boy who follows me around. I tell him to stop, but he keeps doing it. When I tell my friends about it, they laugh and think it's funny. I don't feel like it's a joke. It's creepy.

I have tried to tell adults, but they don't do anything. Recently I dyed the tips of my hair blue, and at lunch he walked up, grabbed my hair and felt it. I feel like it was an invasion of my personal space. Because he won't stop following me around and being creepy, my grades have dropped. I'm distracted in class and nervous. What do you think I should do? — INVADING MY SPACE

DEAR INVADING: If that boy were younger, I would suggest that he has a crush on you. But by the age of 13 or 14, he should have learned what "no" and "stop" means. I don't blame you for being concerned because the young man is acting like a stalker. Nobody has a right to touch you — or your hair — without your permission. You have a right to feel safe.

Do your parents know about this? If you told a teacher about what has been going on and were ignored, tell a counselor or the principal of your "good" school about it.

DEAR ABBY: My 30-year-old son insists that I should help pay for the orthodontia he feels he should have had as a child. He is a grown man now with three children of his own, and I am not sure if I, his dad, should financially help him with this. What do you think? — BRACING FOR AN ANSWER

DEAR BRACING: I am going to assume that when your son was a minor, you could not afford to get him the orthodontia he needed, which is sad. That said, if you wish to help him now and doing so would not put undue financial pressure on you, go ahead and help him out.

However, if you are being guilted into paying because your financially independent son thinks he is "entitled" to it, then forking over the money would be a mistake.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Feb. 25, 2017:

This year you head in a new direction. Your determination to get past a problem, or perhaps several problems, only enhances your drive and stamina. You could act in unpredictable ways, especially with your funds. If you are single, know that not everyone is going to be to your liking. Remain easygoing, and get to know a person well before considering making a commitment. If you are attached, the two of you need plenty of one-on-one time. Sometimes you play into a sense of drama that exists between you. A fellow PISCES knows how to make you smile from ear to ear.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Friends surround you, no matter what you are doing. You could be going to watch a basketball game or heading out for a drive. Someone close to you might act in a most unexpected way. Unusual opportunities are likely to emerge as a result. Tonight: Don't overthink a problem.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ You could be stiff and perhaps not as fluid as you'd like to be. Make a call, head out the door and touch base with a loved one. You might be under duress. Please note how helpful a younger person wants to be. Resist the urge to say too much. Tonight: Play it cool.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ You might want to rethink a decision more carefully. Ask yourself how the other involved parties feel, and determine what would be best for each individual. In the process, a loved one will remind you how caring you can be. Tonight: Accept your role.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ One-on-one relating proves rewarding and fulfilling. Your way of handling a personal matter could change as a result. Caring surrounds you, especially on the homefront. Don't hesitate to express your concerns. Others want you to feel comfortable. Tonight: Off to a concert.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Someone clearly appreciates your time and attention. You might want to handle certain responsibilities first, before getting together. A friend or loved one wants to share more of his or her feelings. You could be surprised by what you hear. Tonight: Enjoy the attention and caring.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ You might want to indulge a child or loved one. Someone close to you tends to create uproar when you least expect it. Goodwill comes forward in a discussion that allows you to clear the air with this person. Tonight: Do what you want. Enjoy a favorite sport or hobby.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ You could be doing things in multiples. You might want to get a stronger sense of what is possible regarding your ability to handle certain situations. Call upon your self-discipline to tame a tendency toward excess. Strong feelings emerge from out of the blue. Tonight: Pace yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ Stay close to home during the day. You might be heavily involved with a project or simply want to get some R and R. Express your caring to the people in your immediate circle. You will find that it could be a lot easier than you had anticipated. Tonight: With a favorite person.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You could be surprised to hear what a friend is doing, and you might decide to join him or her. You will enjoy hanging out in your neighborhood or taking a ride not too far out of town. Your seriousness could put a damper on things, but this mood will pass quickly. Tonight: Hang out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ You seem to be too confident for your own good right now. You could be out and about doing some price comparison. An older relative or friend might have a suggestion that no one has thought of yet; think seriously about this suggestion. Tonight: You don't need to go far.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ Enjoy all the laughable conversations happening around you. A friend could add a very serious tone that might make you rather uncomfortable. Ask yourself what bothers you about this behavior. Coming up with the answer will be important. Tonight: Treat a friend to dinner.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ Take some much-needed personal time. If you want to be a couch potato, make it so. In any case, you are at the end of a quiet period where the action is likely to ramp up. Do a better job of listening when having an important talk. Tonight: Out and about, strutting your stuff.
