Senate axes tougher auto emission rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's rejection of tougher auto pollution controls deals environmentalists a setback on the compromise clean air bill.

"This is the one that we thought was the most significant" of the attempts to strengthen the clean air bill in the Senate, said Richard Ayres, executive director of the Clean Air Coalition.

By a 52-46 vote Tuesday night, the Senate defeated a proposal to require tougher tailpipe-emission controls on automobiles, greater use of clean fuels by fleet operators and production of 1 million cars capable of burning alternative fuels.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, called the defeated amendment a "prescription for deadlock" on the clean air bill.

"Do we want 13 more years of speeches or do we want a bill? Do we want to make statements or do we want to make law?" Mitchell said.

Still unresolved was a proposal to give federal aid to coal miners who would lose their jobs as a result of the clean air measure a plan described by Senate leaders as a "deal breaker."

Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., is seeking $700 million in aid for the miners over four years if they lose their jobs because of tougher acid rain controls at coal-burning powerplants in the Midwest.

The White House contends the assistance is too expensive.

Sen. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., said Tuesday that Byrd "appears to have a majority of the votes" for his proposal. However, an aide to Mitchell said it was uncertain whether the amendment would pass if it came to a vote.

White House officials and Senate leaders were trying to work out a compromise with Byrd.

Byrd for more than a decade has fought additional controls on sulfur dioxide from utility plants because such curbs would threaten the jobs of thousands of coal miners.

Workers move across Texas in search of homeless

Associated Press

Local census workers, like their counterparts across the state, visited shelters, alleys and abandoned houses in search of the homeless for a count that many say will surprise government officials.

It was an attempt to include the homeless in the 1990 Census count and will allow cities and counties to obtain additional funds.

"If they get a halfway decent idea how many homeless people there are, somebody might do something," said Lennox Jarvis, who was contacted at the Austin Street Shelter in Dallas. "There's a lot more than people actually think. It's terrible."

Jarvis came to the shelter Tuesday night for a shower, a meal and a place to sleep.

"Homeless people are just like anybody else," said Tom Perrine, 55, who was contacted at the Day Resource Center in Dallas. "I think it's a good idea to count all the country's citizens."

Five teams of Midland census workers visited "pre-identified" shelters, street locations, low-cost hotels and boarded-up and abandoned houses early this morning, according to city census coordinator Rick Menchaca.

In San Antonio, workers contacted many from Mexico and Central America.

"I was given a large form, about six pages," a 37-year-old illegal alien from Puerto Cortes, Honduras, told the San Antonio Express-News. "It asked how many hours in the week I worked, well, without papers, I don't work very many hours."

The Honduran, once a circus performer who said he would like to work someday in a U.S. circus, said he had been in this country four months.

"They did not ask us why we came to this country. The only thing the (enumerators) did was explain how to fill out the forms," said one man found in San Antonio who claimed to be from Mexico. "It took more time to explain how to do it than to do it," he added.

Sharon Allison, district office manager for the Waco District Office of the U.S. Census Bureau, said 38 people spread out across a 12-county Central Texas area to count the homeless.

She said that even though the workers would go into alleys and under bridges, they didn't take a police escort at Waco.

"Police would tend to scare away the type of people we want to talk to," he said, adding that workers were instructed to leave the area if they felt threatened.

At least two of Waco's homeless are glad to be counted in the census.

Williams 'less comfortable' about opposing a woman

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Clayton Williams, the Republican candidate for Texas governor, said here Tuesday that he would be "less comfortable" running against State Treasurer Ann Richards than Attorney General Jim Mattox because Richards is a woman.

Richards and Mattox will face off in the April 10 Democratic runoff, and the winner will oppose Williams in the general election this November.

Williams, 58, who spent two days here in strategy meetings with top Republicans, including President Bush on Tuesday, made the remark about Richards to reporters over fajitas and salsa at a Capitol Hill restaurant.

"I would be less comfortable in battling with a woman," Williams said. "I'm just not as comfortable in that arena as I would be against Mattox. In political combat I think it (running against a woman) is probably more

Oil talks focused on environment

Associated Press

The environment was the prime topic Tuesday at a state of the oil industry meeting in Fort Worth.

Glenn Brant, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, one of 25 leaders in the Texas energy industry told the gathering: "A punitive income tax structure and unreasonable environmental constraints has produced a hostile economic climate for surviving oil and gas operators."

He asked the Texas Railroad Commissioners, sponsors of the energy briefing, to become more involved in federal and state initives to prevent "overkill" through costly and unrealistic regulations for protecting the environment, and said a real danger existed in "the environmental hysteria" that was sweeping the nation.

The Midland independent and consultant has offered regulation of benzene, xylene and toulene, which are occassionally found at oil and gas production locations as an example of "overkill."

"To make oil production sites free of such minimal emissions would be cost prohibitive and result in the plugging of thousands of wells which would have to pay high compliance costs," he explained in a position statement.

Several of the country's leading oil and gas companies who presented similar views at the meeting said oil spills and a nationwide drive to clean up the environment had handcuffed industry attempts to increase production.

"In California, we're involved in a partnership that has invested more than $2 billion in an offshore oilfield," W.W. Allen, a senior vice

Ranch afforded 'sense of freedom'

SCARLET BLOODLINE

Second in a series

EDITOR'S NOTE: Despite problems of the past, Bruce Parker jumped at the chance to return to the Hill Country empire of his pioneer ranching family. Linda Parker recalls those happy days but remembers also her husband's fear that the happiness might be short-lived. This installment of "Scarlet Bloodline," the story of the Parker family's violent legacy, focuses on the events preceeding Bruce's mysterious death.

By Mike Cochran

HARPER, Texas (AP) — A carpenter by profession but a cowboy by preference, Bruce Parker looked and lived the part of a young man born and raised on a sprawling Texas ranch.

Darkly handsome, hard working and easy going, Parker rarely dressed in anything other than boots, jeans, western shirts and cowboy hats, whether on a horse in Harper or a beach in the Bahamas.

He loved animals, rodeos and C&W dances, said his widow Linda, then and now an employe of the state hospital at Kerrville and chairman of a state council on disabilities.

"He laughed a lot and made other people laugh a lot," she said. "There was no fluff to Bruce. What he thought was what he said."

He was an avid hunter, both with guns and bow and arrow, and trophy animals would one day decorate the home he built on his own Parker land.

Only 19 when his father died and his family was cast out by a feud among relatives, Bruce bounced from place to place and worked at an assortment of jobs. However, he never referred to anywhere but Kimble County as home.

"It wasn't that the land was so important, but this is where his home was," Linda said. "Being away was like a great big empty hole in him."

Linda and Bruce were married in 1983, both for the second time, and it would be a good marriage if hardly an idyllic one.

"We did have hellacious arguments," she smiled.

Not long after the wedding, Bruce took his auburn-haired wife out for a horseback tour of the ranch. Stopping atop a hill, he looked out across the land and said:

"As far as you can see, looking in any direction, all this property belonged to my great-grandaddy."

That, she said, "was the sense of freedom he missed."

As fate would have it, Jess Parker, the family patriarch known as "Big Daddy," bequeathed a parcel of land to his grandchildren at his death in 1986. It was this property that brought young Bruce scurrying back into the family fold.

Probate records show "Big Daddy's" estate valued well in excess of $1 million.

In the fall of 1986, just a short time after receiving his inheritance, Bruce returned to the ranch and again guided Linda to a hilltop, one guarded by cedar and scrub oak and commanding a regal view of the countryside below.

To her surprise, he produced blueprints for a two-story home.

"How would you like a house like this built right here?" she recalled him asking, her green eyes becoming misty.

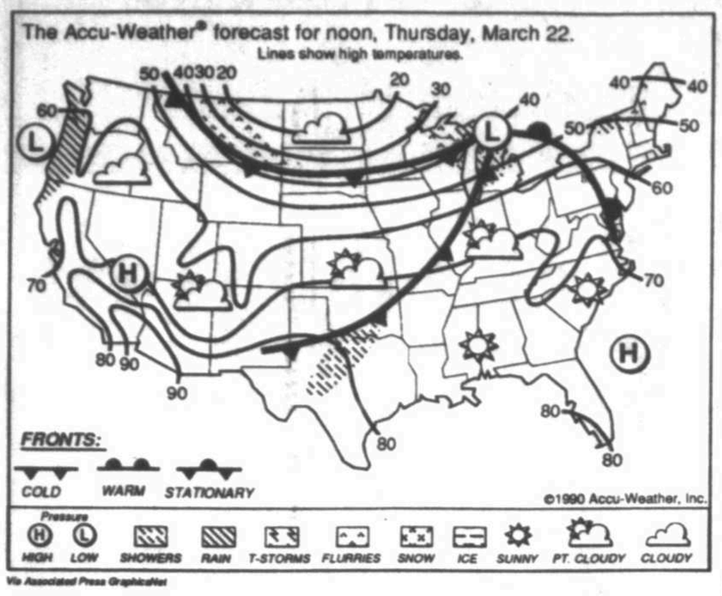

"I remember telling him I would never love him as much as I did at that moment."

Bruce himself built the house, a spacious, two-story country home constructed in part with native rock, not unlike what his great-grandfather used more than a cen-

Mild temperatures anticipated

Staff Report

Fair skies and mild temperatures are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport, with the low near 50 and winds from the south at 5-15 mph.

Thursday is expected to be sunny and warmer with the high in the lower 80s and winds shifting to the southwest at 10-20 mph.

Tuesday's high of 73 was 16 degrees cooler than the record high of 89 set for that date in 1934. The overnight low of 41 was 16 degrees warmer than the record low of 25 set for this date in 1989.

STATE

Pleasant weather was in store for all of Texas tonight and Thursday.

Forecasts called for clear to partly cloudy skies over all of South Texas where skies were to be mostly cloudy over South Texas early Thursday with skies expected to clear during the day.

There was no mention of any sort of precipitation through Thursday.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 50s, ranging from the 40s in the Panhandle to the 60s along the coast in South Texas.

Highs Thursday will be in the 70s and 80s except in South Texas where readings will be in the 80s.

There were a few high level clouds over the Panhandle and a few low level clouds near Laredo in South Texas, but the rest of the state had mostly clear skies as the first full day of spring dawned.

A ridge of high pressure in the upper levels of the atmosphere was responsible for the pleasant weather.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 40s and 50s, ranging from the 30s in the mountains of Southwest Texas and in portions of extreme East Texas to the 60s along the coast. Extremes ranged from a chilly 34 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 61 at Corpus Christi.

president for Phillips Petroleum Co., said.

"We've taken steps to make it one of the most environmentally safe oil and gas projects ever undertaken on federal land. But we still can't get the permits from local authorities to start production," Allen said.

S.F. Goldmann, general manager of Exxon Co., U.S.A., lamented last year's massive oil spill off the coast of Alaska, the nation's largest, acknowledging the accident created new grounds for attacks on the industry by environmentalists.

"We have become a symbol of protest for environmentalists," Goldmann said. "But I want to assure you Exxon has shown, and will continue to show, leadership in taking responsibility for such a situation."

Officials from more than 25 Texas-based oil and gas companies, including Mobil Exploration & Producing U.S. Inc., Exxon Co., U.S.A., Phillips Petroleum Co. and ARCO Oil & Gas Co., testified before the Texas Railroad Commission not only on environmental concerns but a variety of issues.

The oil and gas leaders aired concerns about gas proration rules, a shortage of production and reserves in America and an increasing dependency by the U.S. on oil and gas imports.

David F. Work, vice president of Amoco Production Co., said tax breaks and other incentives are needed to increase oil and gas production.

Without them, drillers will leave the United States to set up exploration and the country's reliance on foreign imports will continue to rise.

"Our industry faces the inescapable fact of significantly reduced exploration and production opportunities in Texas," Work said.

"Compared with frontier areas overseas, which have a much greater potential for large discoveries, this country is becoming a less attractive target for exploration and production spending."

Industry reports show U.S. crude oil imports increased last year by 700,000 barrels per day over 1988.

Officials were split on proposed revisions to several natural gas proration rules.

SUIT: Jury may begin deliberating Thursday bid for a third term to current Sheriff Gary Painter in the 1984 Republican primary.

Painter was expected to be a main witness today.

On Tuesday, defense attorneys called a half-dozen witnesses to the 238th District Courtroom, including three that were not listed among a pool of 225 potential witnesses.

Smith's attorney Tom Sims sternly objected to the last-second strategy used by defense attorneys Bill Wade and Bill Moss, including the introduction of certain evidence.

However, Sims' objections were overruled by visiting District Judge James Gregg of Granbury, who began hearing testimony in the controversial case eight days ago.

Wade and Moss used the full-day to their advantage, utilizing testimony to suggest that Smith was a short-tempered man, who bullied and intimidated those around him, including his ex-wife, his deputies and commanders and average people.

The longest and potentially the most damaging testimony of the day came from Midland County Deputy Robert Settles, an employee and supporter of Painter, who testified about Smith.

Settles was among three witnesses objected to by Sims.

In his testimony, Settles characterized Smith as a sheriff who wanted control of all law enforcement activities, taking a special interest in Gideon's management of the police department.

"Because of the conflict with Gideon, anytime he (Smith) could get involved, he would do so," said Settles.

He testified that Smith wanted Gideon to "bend down to him," and that the former sheriff appeared to "take pleasure" in that. "Dallas is a very smart man. When he wants to turn on the charm, he does, but there's another side to him."

Settles said Smith would continually harass officers he didn't care for, pushing them to the point where they would often quit.

He said those deputies who couldn't afford to do so, stayed and took the abuse heaved on them.

Settles claimed that most department employees did not respect Smith, rather tolerated him for fear of their jobs. "Most of the officers were just scared of him. Dallas thought he was better...smarter then anyone else and he let everyone know about it."

According to Settles, morale could not have been any lower at the department. He said when Smith wasn't verbally abusing someone, he managed to get rid of a few more qualified officers through physical aptitude tests or written tests on the law.

"He (Smith) was more concerned with officers who could run, than experience," testified Settles.

When Settles moved over to the district attorney's office as an investigator, he said relations between himself and Smith cooled over the sheriff's secretary that the deputy eventually married.

Settles said Smith was "taken by her," and wanted her for a girlfriend, but that she wasn't interested.

He said when the two were engaged, Smith made the remark that he had the "money," "title," and "power," and that Settles was a "nobody." Settles also claimed that Smith harassed his future wife right up to time she quit, making her do petty errands from filling his personal car up with gas to picking up the sheriff's laundry.

Captain Richard Sexton, also employed by the sheriff's department, concurred later with Settles testimony about Smith's outbursts in the department which he said were directed at everyone.

Sexton, who was injured when a prisoner kicked him in the groin, testified that while he was in the hospital, he was shown pictures of his beaten assailant, who, in addition to other acts of violence, had been pistol-whipped by the sheriff, according to testimony.

Sexton said he thought that was too much. "I do not like violence...I have never agreed with any inmate violence."

Like Settles, Sexton testified that morale was a "big problem" at the department, adding that a large number of deputies got behind Painter when the Smith had been defeated in the primary.

During Smith's so-called "Alamo speech," the ex-sheriff reportedly called a mandatory meeting to announce his write-in campaign.

It was during that meeting that Smith refused to allow officers to respond to a burglary in progress call "until he was done," according to Sexton's testimony.

When Smith finished, Sexton testified that a majority of the department walked out when the ex-sheriff began seeking volunteers, promising no reprisals if they didn't want to help him.

The defense also portray Smith's temper outside the department, even when he was officer of the Department of Public Safety.

One of those who testified who said he felt Smith's rath was Odessan Victor J. Carter, who contacted Gideon last week to volunteer as a witness at the trial.

Carter said in 1970, he and his wife were returning home from Midland when DPS Officer Smith pulled him over for a faulty headlight.

Carter testified that Smith ordered him out of the car and back to his patrol car.

Like other testimony, Carter said he felt threatened by Smith, who he said used profanity repeatedly for no reason, before finally releasing him with a warning.

Incensed by the incident, Carter wrote the DPS, which investigated, but took no action.

Carter said when he talked to his Midland customers about his experience, he said "almost all of them had something negative to say about Smith."

Counters prowl streets to tally U.S. homeless

By Robert Dvorchak
AP National Writer

A government trying to shed light on how many of its citizens live in the shadows wrapped up an unprecedented 14-hour survey today to count the homeless.

Free meals, blankets and parties helped lure the homeless to government workers carrying clipboards and flashlights. But the counters, some of them homeless themselves, also encountered gunfire in Brooklyn, a spring snow in Vermont, robbers in Florida, and the protests of critics and elusive targets everywhere. And many of the homeless fell, once again, between the cracks.

Although results of the homeless census won't be known for months, the Census Bureau declared it a success. "Nationally, the operation went very smoothly," Census Director Barbara Everitt Bryant said at a morning news conference in New York.

Ms. Bryant noted that there were a few spots, including Cleveland and Washington, D.C., where the census workers didn't finish and would return tonight.

Around the nation, some homeless people took comfort in the very fact of being counted.

"It shows that they're starting to recognize us as humans and not the scum of the earth," said Chester Broadwell, 21, a resident of the Waystation shelter in Burlington, Vt.

But in Toledo, Ohio, 28-year-old Robert Allen snubbed U.S. Census officials.

"What are they going to use the numbers for anyway? To tell us there ain't no homeless problem? Hell, I'm a living example that there is a problem," Allen said. "We need jobs, not surveys."

A total of 15,000 enumerators — the federal term for headcounters — were dispatched to seek the name, age, sex, race and marital status of a segment of society that considers itself forgotten.

The $2.7 million effort, the most ambitious ever undertaken to count the homeless, focused on every city of 50,000 or more residents. The tally will be added to the conventional census that begins April 1 as part of the constitutional mandate to count citizens every 10 years.

The homeless were sought out at shelters, missions, flophouses, cheap hotels, bus depots, subway cars, underpasses, bridges, railroad trestles, bank machine chambers, park benches, trash bins and abandoned buildings.

WILLIAMS: Visit to capital includes strategy talks

(From 1A)

Asked to elaborate, Williams said:

"The world from whence I came was a male world. When I was at (Texas) A&M, it was an all male, all-military school. The two years (I spent) in the army (and) in building pipelines, it was a male workforce in the field."

"I guess maybe I could give you this comparison: The language I used to motivate a group of roughnecks building a pipeline was different" from the language he used in speeches to "the Republican women at a coffee."

Asked by a reporter whether his remarks might lead people to consider him a sexist, Williams replied firmly, "I am not. I think that the best example of my relations there are the fact that I named my Claydesta businesses after myself and my wife and the fact that I replaced my top man with a woman."

"Claydesta" is a combination of Williams' first name and Modesta, his wife's first name. Williams, a millionaire oilman and rancher from Midland, Texas, also owns the Claydesta National Bank and Claydesta Corp., a real estate company. Modesta Williams serves on the board of the bank and is vice president of the real estate firm.

Earlier, the flamboyant, outgoing Williams went to the White House, where he met briefly with Bush, a former Midland oilman himself. Williams and his wife then lunched with the president and Barbara Bush and Lee Atwater, GOP national chairman.

Afterward, Williams said Bush had made a firm but unspecific commitment to campaign for him in Texas.

The candidate said he asked the president "to come and campaign wherever and whenever he can. He's got some wonderful coattails in Texas, and I'd like to grab ahold of them ride 'em like a buckin' bronco."

Atwater told reporters that for Bush, "Texas is a top priority. It's his home state, and he realizes that in a year like this, we can't afford to lose the governorship of Texas." The current GOP governor, Bill Clements, is not running for reelection.

Atwater said that Republican chances of retaining the statehouse with Williams as the candidate "have dramatically improved."

"I really believe this guy (Williams) is a political phenomenon. You don't have but one or two every year. This is the political phenomenom of 1990."

Williams ended two days of hectic canvassing for political advice and funds here by attending a reception in his honor given by Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas and the state's GOP house members.

On Monday, Williams met with Gramm, national drug policy director William Bennett and White House congressional liaison Fred McClure, a fellow Texan.

Williams' first appointment Tuesday was with Energy Secretary James Watkins. They discussed energy issues, particularly the future of the superconducting super collider, the giant, $7.1 billion atom smasher to be built south of Dallas.

Talking to reporters afterward, Williams showed he was still rough on names and titles. He mistakenly referred to Watkins, a former Navy admiral, as "ambassador" and called Deputy Energy Secretary Henson Moore "Vincent Price" before correcting himself.

TEXAS: Local counters join in about the problem of homelessness.

"Instead of just talking, they need to take a count," he said at the Salvation Army temporary shelter in Waco.

Not all of the homeless wanted to participate.

"In all this time they haven't done anything yet, so I don't see what they're going to do now," said a man at the Crossroads Mission in Dallas who identified himself only as "J."

"Whatever money they have, they send it to other places," he added.

Larry Seawright, an enumerator working the streets and shelters in Dallas, says he figures he had an advantage over many of the other workers. He's homeless.

"I can communicate with them better," Seawright, 32, said. "Some of them can't fill out applications."

The final figures on the homeless, like the final figures on the rest of the 1990 Census, will not be available until early 1991.

Menchaca said city-by-city tallies of homeless will not be made available from the compiled data, but rather the count is being made to get an estimate of the overall homelessness problem.

Assistant city editor Allen Howland contributed to this report.

'Messy' oil-transport business begs for change, environmental study shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of gallons of oil will be spilled on land and water year after year unless the United States changes its approach to oil, says the Wilderness Society in a report called "100 Spills, 1,000 Excuses."

The report released this week details the 100 worst spills since the Exxon Valdez accident broke all records when the tanker ran aground March 24, 1989, dumping 11 million gallons of crude oil into Prince William Sound, Alaska.

"The sad fact is that while the past 12 months have featured a number of large and widely publicized spills, this has been, in most respects, a typical year," said George Frampton, president of the society.

"No one has final figures, but experts estimate that there have been roughly 10,000 spills since the Exxon Valdez tore open," said the report. Those spills have caused the loss of 15 million to 20 million gallons of oil, it said.

"Oil is inherently messy business. Accidents, lots of accidents, will happen," said the report.

The Wilderness Society said the report is based on its own records and those of the Coast Guard, the Alaska Department of Conservation, the National Park Service, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management and World Information Systems of Cambridge, Mass.

Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., chairman of the House Interior subcommittee on water and power resources, starts hearings Thursday to continue Congress' investigation of the Exxon Valdez spill's impact.

Miller said the hearing will consider the extent of oil pollution in Alaska due to the Valdez, future cleanup options and whether industry can handle another spill of the same magnitude.

Miller plans another hearing next week to look into environmental problems associated with operation of the trans-Alaska pipeline, including corrosion.

Congress is working on a liability bill that will determine who should pay for future spills. The legislation, now in a House-Senate conference committee, also would establish regulations for handling oil.

The most hotly contested issue is a House proposal to require all tankers calling on U.S. ports to have double bottoms within seven years and double hulls within 15 years. All new tankers would have to be built with double hulls.

Senate conference committee members want new tankers and barges to have double hulls or any alternative that the National Academy of Sciences decides would provide protection.

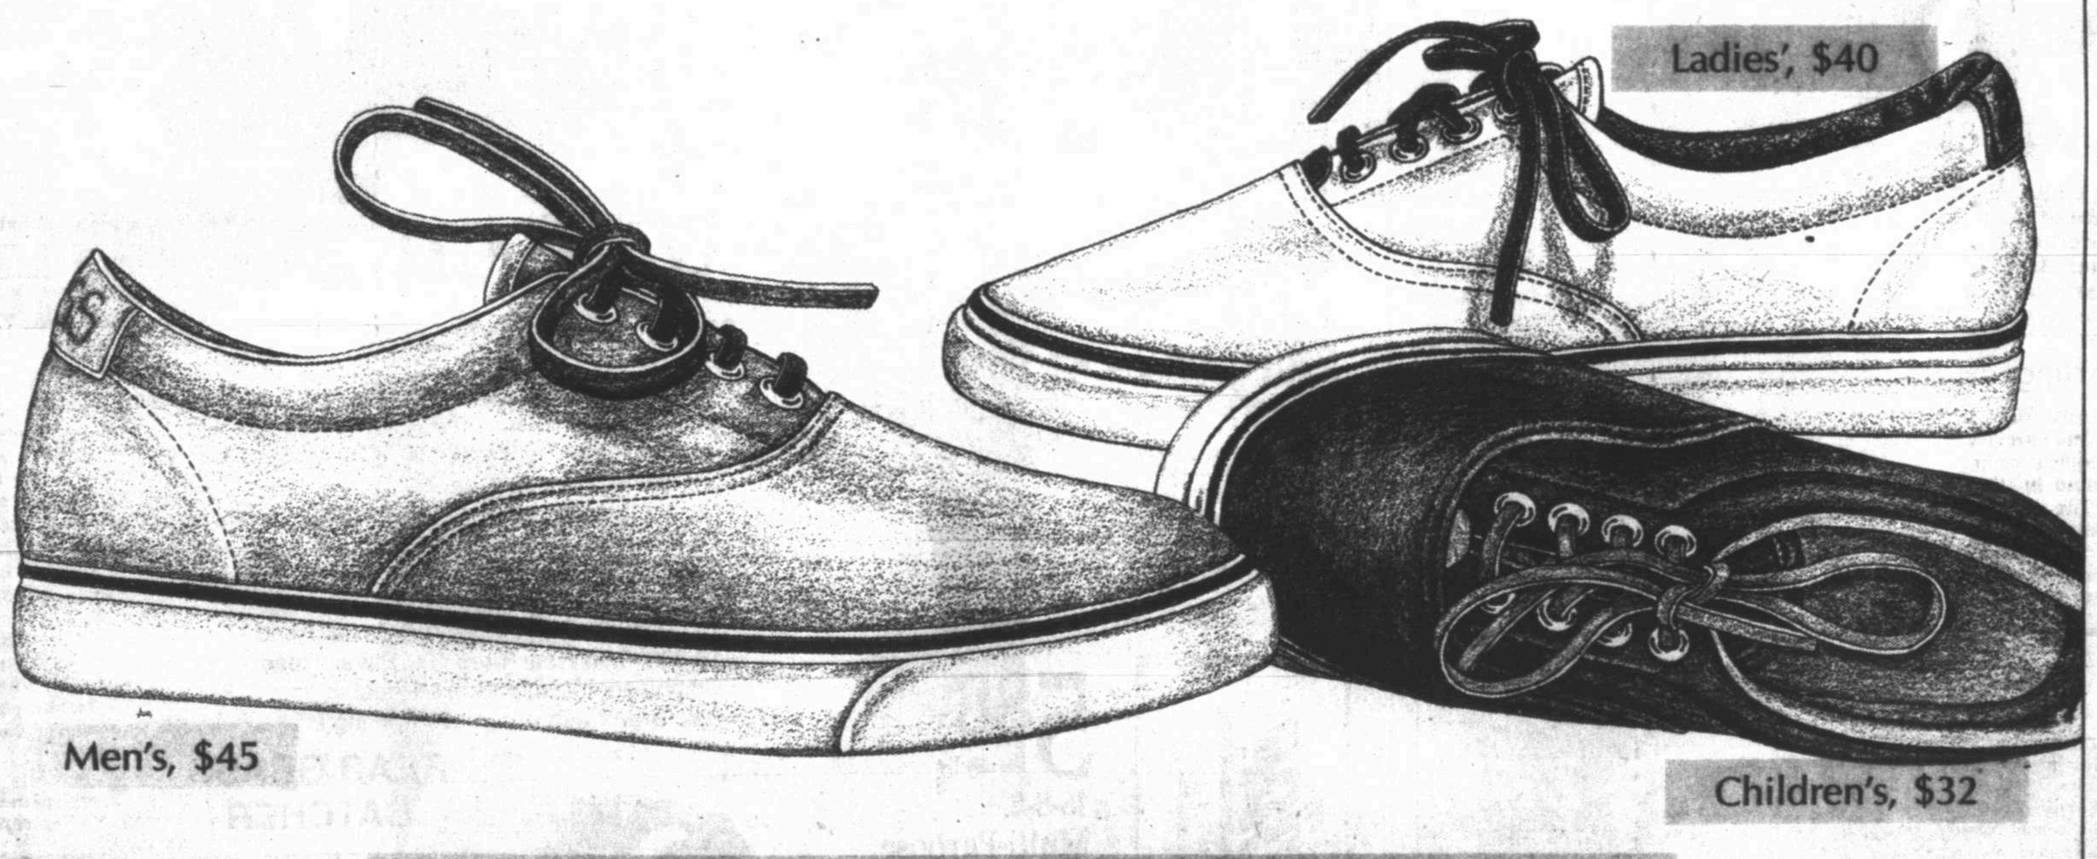

The past year's spills include three in one weekend in June when a Liberian tanker left a 20-foot by 2-mile sheen in Delaware Bay, Del.; an Amoco pipeline spilled 96,000 gallons of gasoline at Knox County, Ill., and 34,700 gallons of diesel fuel were dumped from a pipeline near Newtown, N.D.

BLOODLINE: Parker built house like 'Big Daddy's'

tury ago at the "Old Ranch."

Each room was designed with a view of the countryside, and the upstairs master bedroom and deck looked out over an expanse of Parker land that was not much changed from the day pioneers Jim and Tildy Parker arrived in the early 1870s.

"Bruce was a perfectionist when it came to his work," Linda said. "He could do everything. His father was like that. His dad was very creative."

Other than a windmill, the only signs of civilization evident from Bruce and Linda's house were an antenna and a mobile home so far in the distance that they were barely distinguishable.

"Bruce would get up every morning and fuss because it was getting too crowded," Linda said.

The couple drank coffee and watched their horses graze, sometimes catching glimpses of wildlife foraging for an early morning meal. It was one such morning, Linda remembered, that Bruce made an unusual statement.

"I am so happy," he said, "I'm afraid somebody's going to come and take this away."

"Nobody can take this away from you," she replied. "It's yours."

Despite a stormy marriage and divorce from his first wife, Bruce remained close to his two sons, Bart, the 24-year-old whom he raised, and Ben, now 13, who lives with his ex-spouse.

In both good times and bad, Linda said, "Bruce was always very proud to be a Parker."

They are an extraordinary and strong-willed family, she said.

"They are wonderful, honest, hard-working people. Very much Old West, Big Ranch. There is nothing superficial about them. They work hard. They play hard.

"They're either for you or against you," she added pointedly. "There is no in-between.

"Maybe they do things differently than you and I, but they live in a different world. They've had some difficulties. It's a huge family. Just because one person did something wrong, it doesn't make them all bad."

Most of the Parkers were supportive after Bruce's death, she said.

On that fateful weekend last October, the couple attended a Friday night football game at Harper High School, where Bruce once played quarterback. With them was Bandit, their half cocker, half poodle.

The next day, Bruce and son Bart attended a gun show in Fredericksburg with two of Bart's friends.

Bruce also spent much of the weekend working on a hunting cabin and setting out feed at deer blinds on his Uncle Raymond's ranch, where he had leased the hunting and fishing rights.

He drove along Little Devil's River, where years ago the Parker clan would gather under shade trees across from Big Rock to cook and sing and dance to live music, often until dawn.

In those days, the men would barbecue steers and goats in pits at the river's edge while the women set picnic tables laden with food and the kids played games and splashed about in the water.

On a lesser scale, the family reunions continued at Big Rock up until "Big Daddy's" death.

"This was Bruce's favorite spot in the whole world," Linda said.

If anyone knows who or what lured Bruce Parker to the bluff above Big Rock that Sunday last fall, they have not said so publicly.

There was no hint of trouble, Linda said, but she remembered an unrelated but unusual occurrence the night before.

"Bruce was never cold," she said, "but he woke up three times during the night and said he was cold."

When he didn't mention it the next morning, she forgot about it.

"He was in a good mood all day Sunday. I don't think anything was bothering him."

She said she knew of no recent falling out between Bruce and any of his relatives. If there had been renewed friction, she maintained, "I think we would have known it."

Linda probably was at church when Bruce dropped by Dauna's, a gas station and convenience store and Harper's favorite spot for cold beer, hot coffee and current country gossip. There, by coincidence, he ran into his friend, sheriff's deputy Bill Beard.

After church, Linda met Bruce and tried to persuade him to stay in town for lunch.

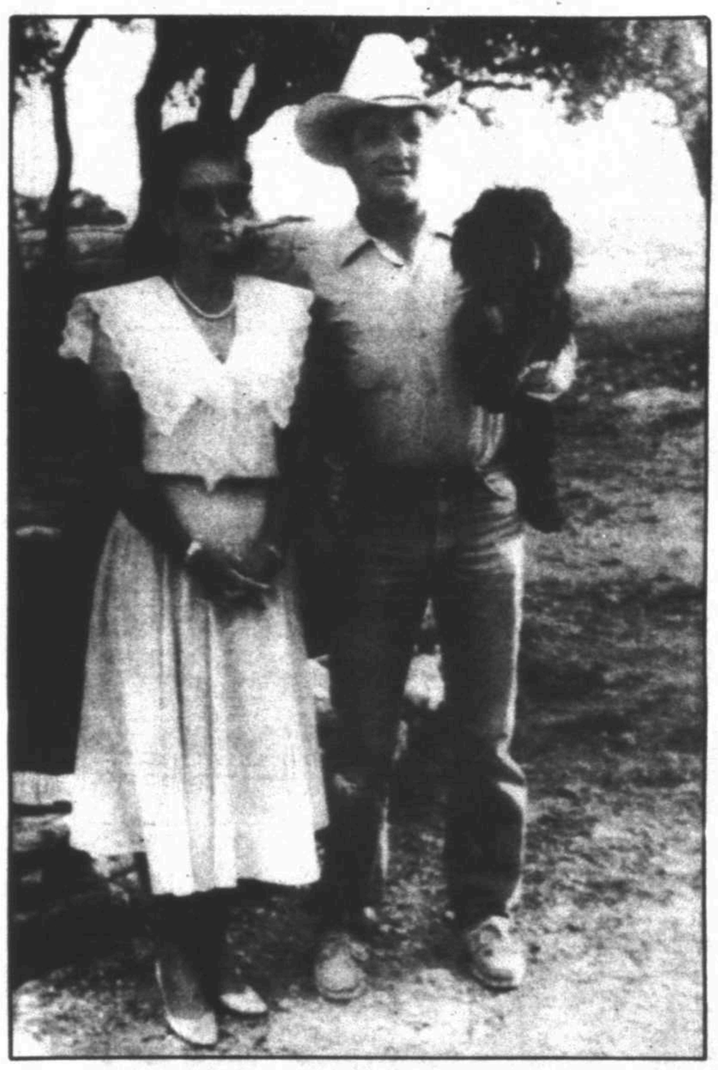

"I've got to put some oats in the ground," he said. "It looks like rain."

She last saw her husband alive down at the camphouse where he was working that afternoon. As Linda left on an errand, he turned and looked at her, glanced downward and said:

"Be careful."

THURSDAY: Suspicion

Linda and Bruce Parker pose with their dog, Bandit, at the site of their secluded Hill Country home near Harper. They had returned to build on a parcel of land left Bruce by his grandfather. Bruce died of a gunshot wound last October in what some observers feel was another chapter in longstanding family conflict.

Arlington painter focuses on skyscapes

ARLINGTON (AP) — The sky is the limit for Karla Taylor.

She specializes in painting skyscapes dotted with majestic clouds on people's ceilings, but she refuses to include anything not normally found in the sky.

The Arlington woman will paint stars, but no cars. Moons, but no balloons.

"I had a request to do balloons," Taylor said. "I knew that was not going to look good. All you would see would be the bottom of the balloon."

SPELLING BEE 1990

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1990 Regional Spelling Bee March 31 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 30. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

tri'əl

trial (noun) — One meaning of "trial" is the act of trying, testing or putting to the proof. If someone has been accused of committing a crime, he or she may have to go on "trial." A "trial" is the method, in our judicial system, which helps to determine a question of fact in a court of law. "Trial" is traced to the early Latin word "triare," which meant "to sift or pick out." A "trial" is a time "to sift" through the information given in court, to finally determine the truth.

Gramm opponent says abortion key issue

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Senate candidate Hugh Parmer has portrayed Republican incumbent Phil Gramm as a man on the "extreme fringe" of Texas politics, and says their views on abortion will be a major theme of the 1990 campaign.

Parmer said Gramm, R-Texas, has "five times cosponsored constitutional amendments that would outlaw abortion all across this country, even for rape and incest victims."

State Sen. Parmer, D-Fort Worth, made the comments at a Tuesday news conference unveiling a 30-second television spot, which had just run for the first time, in the Austin area.

In part, the ad said, "If a victim of rape or incest becomes pregnant, shouldn't she have the right to choose what to do? Phil Gramm would take away that right. ... Phil Gramm's law would treat victims like criminals."

Parmer said 85 percent "of the people of Texas disagree with Gramm's position that a woman who becomes pregnant as a result of rape ought to be required to have that rapist's baby. The people of Texas just don't believe that, but Phil Gramm does."

Gramm's press secretary, Larry Neal, said Parmer is "broke and desperate for help from anybody, and suddenly wants to become America's leading abortionist."

Parmer "doesn't care about abortion, he cares about abortion money. He's using the issue to raise campaign money," Neal said. "He's trying to draw profit from human misery."

Parmer said the ad will be moved from the Austin TV market around the state, and will "run long enough for everybody to see it."

"This is a major theme of my campaign because it so clearly illustrates the fact that Gramm is just out of step with the values of most of the people of Texas on a number of important issues, this being one of them," Parmer said. "Nobody but an extremist could believe that a woman ought to be forced to bear her rapist's child. But Phil Gramm believes that."

STATE

Neal, in Gramm's office, said Parmer is "developing a national reputation for running a crummy campaign, especially on his advertising."

In other political developments:

■ Brownfield seed dealer Gene Duke, third-place finisher in the Republican race for Texas agriculture commissioner, endorsed state Rep. Rick Perry, who faces Stafford geologist Richard McIver in a runoff for the GOP nomination.

The winner of the April 10 runoff faces Democratic incumbent Jim Hightower in the November general election.

Perry, R-Haskell, said Hightower "is in for the fight of his life."

■ Morris Overstreet, county court-at-law judge in Amarillo, was endorsed for the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals by statewide elected officials, other candidates and black and Hispanic groups.

Overstreet, who is in a Democratic runoff against Austin lawyer Frank Maloney for the criminal court, was endorsed by Hightower; Land Commissioner Garry Mauro; Mexican American Democrats; Black Legislative Caucus; attorney general candidate Dan Morales; and Railroad commission candidate Bob Krueger.

Parmer is "broke and desperate for help from anybody, and suddenly wants to become America's leading abortionist."
— Larry Neal, press secretary for Phil Gramm

Coffee breaks get officer suspended

AUSTIN (AP) — A police officer was suspended for a day without pay after his superiors accused him of spending too much time in a doughnut shop.

Senior Patrol Officer Ray Sullivent was accused of dereliction of duty and failure to devote his attention and time to the job.

An investigation showed that Sullivent spent too much time at a Dunkin Doughnuts shop in South Austin, said Sgt. Gary Fleming of the Austin Police Department's internal affairs division.

Jury deliberates Hazelwood's fate

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A prosecutor portrayed Joseph Hazelwood as a reckless drunk, while a defense attorney called the skipper a scapegoat before the criminal case in the nation's worst oil spill went to the jury.

Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone turned over the 7-week-old case to jurors late Tuesday after intense closing statements.

The jury retired for the evening after meeting briefly behind closed doors and was to gather again today.

Assistant District Attorney Brent Cole accused Exxon Corp. of maneuvering behind the scenes to win Hazelwood's acquittal; defense attorney Dick Madson said the oil company might be more interested in transferring its own share of the blame to Hazelwood, skipper at the time of the Exxon Valdez.

Cole responded angrily when Madson called Hazelwood a scapegoat.

"A scapegoat?" exclaimed Cole. "The state of Alaska didn't put a glass of vodka in Captain Hazelwood's hand and force him to drink it."

The bearded, balding Hazelwood listened without expression as Cole called him a gambler and a risk-taker who imbibed before boarding his ship. Cole said Hazelwood risked his tanker and the lives of his crew.

"He gambled that drinking would not affect his judgment," said Cole. "He was wrong ... because alcohol never improves judgment."

Madson pointed out that 21 witnesses testified Hazelwood appeared sober when he boarded the ship and said many of them vouched for his competent seamanship on the night the tanker ran aground on a jagged reef, spilling nearly 11 million gallons of Alaska North Slope crude oil.

"Twenty-one witnesses said he was not impaired," Madson said. "What does that mean? That means Captain Hazelwood wasn't impaired by consumption of alcohol. There has to be proof of impairment."

The accident occurred a year ago Saturday. The tanker's hull was ripped open, blackening hundreds of miles of shoreline and killing fish, birds and other wildlife.

Hazelwood, 43, a veteran mariner from Huntington, N.Y., is charged with one felony, criminal mischief, and three misdemeanors: reckless endangerment, operating a vessel while intoxicated and negligent discharge of oil. If convicted, he could receive 7¼ years in prison and $61,000 in fines.

Alaskans adjusting to 'new' environment

Hearst News Service

NATION

CHENEGA, Alaska – The view from Paul Kompkoff's window is picture postcard-perfect. Beyond peaks of fir trees he sees snow-wrapped mountains hugging the green waters of Sawmill Bay. But where strangers marvel, Kompkoff sees damage and loss.

"This was beautiful country before," he says.

To the Native Alaskan grandfather, it may never be the same as before – before last year, when the oil came to Prince William Sound. Kompkoff misses the seals, sea lions, otters, eagles. Some are here, he says, but not nearly as many as before last March 24, when the crippled Exxon Valdez bled 10.8 million gallons of North Slope crude oil into the waters to the northeast.

"Before, when it was good weather, we'd say the table was set," the veteran hunter recalls with a fleeting smile.

But now, he says, "There's nothing swimming around like there used to be. It is a different world altogether."

Last year's oil spill washed over the lives of many Alaskan communities in a swath of more than 450 miles. Today, most of the oil appears to be gone, but for many natives of the area it has left behind a residue of loss and fear.

Perhaps no place was hit harder than this tiny village of fewer than 100 people on the southwest rim of Prince William Sound. When northeast winds sent black oil and its brown, frothy, "mousse" streaming away from Exxon's crippled tanker, Chenega was the first human settlement in its path.

A year later, surface oil is hard to spot on the coastline here; but you can find it, buried in the gravel and clinging to rocks. Strings of brown-stained booms in the harbor recall the struggle mounted here to fend off the oil from the nearby salmon hatchery at Sawmill Bay.

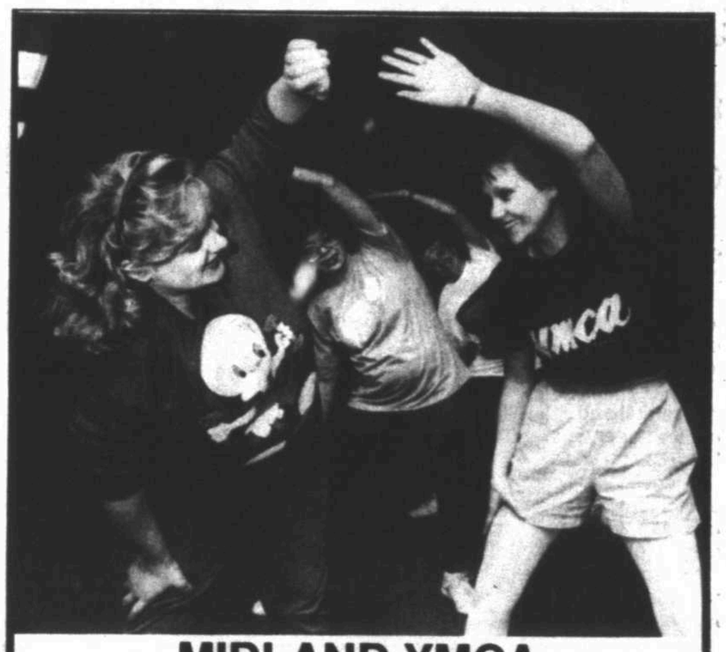

For Chenega, the Valdez accident isn't over. Sharon McClintock, an investigator for the Alaska Oil Spill Commission, reports: "People aren't crying openly, even about the loss of their subsistence resources, but inside there is tremendous grief."

Subsistence – the traditional collection of native foods by hunting, fishing and gathering – has long provided part of the food in this village. Subsistence is a way of life and Kompkoff relishes native foods more than most, says neighbor Darrell Totemoff. So Kompkoff's life has changed.

"Ever since it happened I've been feeling homeless, like I'm in a strange country," he says. "I don't know where I'm at. I get nervous thinking about the things we used to do and have around here."

Innovative Eastern firm earns cash from society's trash

BOSTON (AP) — A Massachusetts company is making money out of garbage through new recycling methods for cities swimming in the refuse of a throwaway society.

Public landfills are clogged with paper, glass, aluminum and plastic, and less than 10 percent of 160 million tons of garbage produced yearly in the United States is recycled, according to David Spencer, president and founder of wTe Corp. in Bedford.

His company develops methods for processing waste to recover ferrous metal and other substances. The company also runs trash-to-energy plants under contract with cities, and joined with such companies as Dow Chemical Co. to develop plastics recycling technology.

Spencer, 44, believes recycling and recovery, which is the process of extracting certain components of trash, will become increasingly important as cities run out of land to bury refuse, long the cheapest and easiest disposal method.

"Everything we manufacture in this country finds its way into the waste stream. ... It all winds up on a trash truck," Spencer said in a recent interview.

Spencer acknowledged that recovery and recycling operations are costly for cash-strapped municipalities, which must weigh such expenses as housing for the elderly against recycling programs.

It often may be less expensive in the short run to bury garbage in a landfill, but in the long run "yesterday's landfill is today's superfund site," he said.

Baseball back where it belongs

Things are looking pretty bright again for baseball. The major league's 32-day labor lockout has ended. A full 162-game schedule is set to proceed. And players and owners have a new, four-year agreement that is basically an extension of the old contract which expired Dec. 31.

So why all the kicking and screaming? Why the bitterness and hard feelings that turned this protracted bargaining session into the second-longest work interruption in major-league baseball history? What took them so long?

For all of its bluster during initial negotiations, the Major League Players Association allowed management to call the tune. Once salary arbitration had been established as the major bargaining point, the players maintained for weeks that they would not give an inch in their demand that eligibility be lowered from three years to two.

But first they compromised by settling for 2½ years. Then many of the players realized that only 83 of their number would be affected if the year of eligibility for arbitration were lowered. Why jeopardize the new $100,000 minimum salary, a 47 percent rise, for so few? Why take a chance on the owners' offer to increase their pension fund contribution from $39 million to $55 million in each of the next four years? Why, indeed? In the end the players tamely cut a deal. Now only 14 of the 83 affected players will qualify for arbitration.

While the players dithered, the owners sowed confusion. For nearly 10 weeks they wasted everyone's time with a proposal for a system of revenue-sharing and salary caps. It had no hope of success and they knew it. To force acceptance, they ordered the spring training lockout. Then, incredibly, they dropped the whole idea and tabled what was essentially an extension of the old basic agreement.

Of course, the approach of opening day hastened the signing of an agreement. The nervousness felt by fans about a year without baseball was nothing compared with the agitation of owners and players who stood to lose millions of dollars.

Now the whole sorry episode is over, the start of the season has been pushed back a week to April 9 and the immediate problem is to make up the games lost. Presumably we'll be getting more double-headers and games on previously unscheduled dates. But the main thing is that baseball has finally dragged itself away from the negotiating table and returned to the ballpark, where it belongs.

Moving inmates not solution

Moving 600 prisoners out of the Harris County Jail is a welcome relief for the county. But where do the prisoners go? To the Texas prison system, which is already crowded? Out on the streets?

The reduction, ordered by U.S. District judges William Wayne Justice and James DeAnda, does not solve the problem.

True, it is a victory for Harris County and especially for Sheriff Johnny Klevenhagen. For years Klevenhagen and the county commissioners have rightfully been trying to get the state to accept prisoners bound for state prisons. For years the state has refused, citing its own federal court orders against overcrowding.

Now the two federal judges have ordered that the county cut its number of inmates from the current level of 6,700 to 6,100 by Aug. 1. The judges also said the county could not replace the removed convicts with others.

This still leave the county with overcrowded jails. Because even with the cuts, facilities designed to hold 4,700 inmates still will be enormously over capacity. Much of this is due to the state's refusal to take prisoners it should, by law, accept.

The prison system won't take more convicts until it gets more prisons. This won't be done until it gets more money to build more prisons. And this won't happen until the Legislature and taxpayers agree to pay more. Lots of luck on that one.

Registering easier

New Mexico is one of many states where people are talking about simplifying voter registration. So is Congress.

Texas already has made it easier to register, and the number of potential voters greatly increased. It is at the polls on primary election day that Texas voters must say which party's ballot they wish to punch. And this is done all over again at the next primary.

In New Mexico, a potential voter must register and declare political affiliation before the last Monday in January, when the governor proclaims the date of the primary election, which this year is June 5. New voters can register and list their affiliation up to the May 8 deadline. A voter in the primary election can only receive the ballot of the party that has been designated at the time of registration.

This situation, a patchwork of different rules among the states, is why Congress is considering legislation for national voter registration procedures that would make it easier to register ... The U.S. House of Representatives already has passed a bill allowing eligible citizens to register when they buy their drivers licenses or at libraries, state agencies or by mail. It has been sent on to the Senate.

... Sponsors of the House bill claimed between 6 million and 10 million people would register if it could be done more easily.

As the U.S. population becomes more and more transient, it may even be time to consider federal election laws governing all aspects of this frequently exercised ritual of citizenship ...

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, March 21, the 80th day of 1990. There are 285 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Twenty-five years ago, on March 21, 1965, more than 3,000 civil rights demonstrators led by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. began their march from Selma to Montgomery, Ala.

On this date:

In 1685, composer Johann Sebastian Bach was born in Eisenach, Germany.

In 1790, 200 years ago, Thomas Jefferson reported to President Washington in New York as the new secretary of state.

Drug smugglers' ruse fools radar

HOUSTON — Drug-running planes are skipping from Mexico to south Texas like stones skipping the waters of a pond. It's an elaborate ruse to fool the radar of U.S. drug enforcement agents.

Anderson

A confidential report recently delivered to Attorney General Richard Thornburgh by federal drug agents on the scene describes the technique.

A smuggler will fill his plane with drugs in northern Mexico and fly to a Mexican airstrip near the U.S. border. The pilot approaches low so it appears on radar that he is coming in for a landing, but once below radar he skims over the airstrip and heads across the border. All that the radar has "seen" is a plane that took off from one Mexican airstrip and landed at another, and that's not the business of U.S. drug agents.

Once in U.S. territory, the pilot goes through the same motions. Still beneath the radar, he heads for a known American landing strip, preferably a quiet one where no one is around to get suspicious. He skims over it and then gains altitude until he registers on the radar again as a plane taking off. Anyone following him on radar will assume the flight originated in the United States. He flies on to a clandestine airstrip and drops his cargo.

The report on south Texas smuggling techniques was one of several that Thornburgh ordered from U.S. attorneys throughout the country to update him on the drug war in their districts.

The south Texas geography makes it a welcome mat for drug smugglers. The land is flat and mostly deserted.

"Air and land smuggling has been described by the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA), U.S. Customs and Border Patrol as 'rampant' in this district, with air smuggling perceived as the primary interdiction method of major traffickers operating in this area," the report says.

Smugglers can pick from isolated airstrips and urban runways. There are 125 airfields serving Houston alone, according to the report. And if a drug smuggler is bold enough, and creative enough, he can stash his cargo on airliners flying from drug-producing countries right into Houston Intercontinental Airport.

The smugglers who don't fly commercially can use the stone-skipping method, or they can simply cruise across the border below the radar ceiling and toss the booty out the window at a drop site without ever having to land. With commercially available homing devices, the report says, a pilot can "drop his cargo with accuracy almost anywhere in South Texas."

The smart smuggler times his flight during busy travel hours so he can get "lost in the crowd" of legitimate planes filling the radar. Night trips are tougher, but modern technology is keeping up with the demands of drug smugglers with the money to buy toys. Night vision goggles are the gadget of choice for the late runs.

Sometimes, with a lot of work, our feds get lucky. A few years ago, according to the report, a Colombian drug lord unwittingly hired DEA agents to set up a reception point near McAllen, Texas.

His plan was to deliver 100,000 pounds of marijuana and 5,000 pounds of cocaine from Colombia. But the DEA closed in when the first shipment of marijuana arrived. The agents got the pot — but not the drug lord. He is still a fugitive.

For all the small successes noted in the report, there is a tacit admission that the smugglers still have the upper hand in south Texas.

Questions need asking in wake of hanging

WASHINGTON — Saddam Hussein, widely feared as "the Butcher of Baghdad," last Saturday ordered a demonstrate in front of the British Embassy because he took offense when Mrs. Thatcher's government dared to protest — as "an act of barbarism deeply repugnant to all civilized people" — his hanging of a reporter for The London Observer.

Safire

"Mrs. Thatcher wanted him alive; we gave her the body," crowed the Iraqi propaganda minister, after the remains were turned over.

The journalist, Farzad Bazoft, had heard reports of an explosion at a plant to the southwest of Iraq's capital.

Reporters were denied permission to investigate; suspecting trouble at one of Iraq's poison-gas or missile plants in that area, the reporter disguised himself and went anyway.

He was caught, tried as a spy, and promptly hanged.

Not all the people of the civilized world found the lynching repugnant: "moderate" King Hussein of Jordan, no relation to Saddam, deplored "a concerted attack on Iraq for a long period of time without any reason to justify it."

Arab apologists are busily trying to besmear the victim: Bazoft had a prison record in his early 20s, was stateless, confessed to spying under the always-gentle Iraqi interrogation, etc.

The PLO's Salah Khalef broadcast support of Iraq's gleeful leader.

Saddam sent no demonstrators to the U.S. Embassy for good reason: the Bush administration's reaction was of such studied indifference as to border on condoning it.

President Bush refused to join in the worldwide appeals for clemency.

After the hanging, the president's spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, said only that "we regret those (appeals) went unheeded..."

At the State Department, spokeswoman, Margaret Tutwiler, read "We deplore Iraq's decision," but when asked what our government intended to do about it, she said "I did not think to ask ..."

A couple of questions we should all ask:

■ What terrible secret was the journalist trying to uncover? Bush knows, from the same satellite observation that showed poison-gas production at Libya's Rabta plant, that Saddam is producing poison gas at 10 different locations. Was the damaged plant producing gas, rockets or nuclear weapons?

■ Why is Bush so eager to help the dictator of what has become the world's most dangerous nation? When Congress identified Iraq as a terrorist nation to be denied U.S. favor, Bush invoked an exception enabling him to ignore this ruling "in the national interest."

That's why Iraq still gets loan guarantees from us on grain purchases.

Even after the scandal broke, and our agriculture secretary promised a Senate committee no new loan guarantees would be issued without notification, Secretary Clayton Yeutter supplied an additional $500 million guarantee.

When these fishy dealings were outlined in this space, with wonderment at Bush's needless exposure of U.S. taxpayers, the Iraqi press counselor in Washington, Abdul Rahman Jamil, wrote to my editor to insist our aid was used for grain, not missiles, explaining:

"It is not uncommon to expect delays of payments in financial arrangements."

That tipped off future repayment problems.

"Mr. Safire ought to be reminded," Jamil added, "that a little knowledge is dangerous, and he is using this knowledge dangerously."

A colleague cheerily passed this along with "Hope you weren't planning a holiday in Baghdad."

(I did not take Jamil's reminder to be intimidation, noting it only as a misquotation of Alexander Pope's "A little learning is a dangerous thing.")

So now they're hanging foreign journalists in Iraq and nobody in the Bush administration gives a damn.

What hold does the Butcher of Baghdad have on the president of the United States?

Is it fair when NCAA imposes sanctions?

There is no doubt that life is unfair. For many of us life couldn't be more unfair than when the NCAA declared sanctions against Rimshot Tech's basketball team. Rimshot Tech, located in the heart of Maryland's low-ball country, had one of the most outstanding records of any school in the Hurricane Zelda Conference. There was even serious talk of the school going to New Orleans for the Jambalaya Playoffs.

Art Buchwald

Brad Teicher, who rides shotgun in our car pool to Rimshot games, said, "You'd think that the NCAA Committee on Sports Infractions would have something better to do than look for recruiting violations in a university's athletic program."

Chili Kohlmeyer asked, "What's wrong with giving an incoming freshman a small BMW if he needs transportation to get to and from practice at night?"

I was in the back seat of the car. "Here's what I think. If the alumni didn't give them $600 weekly handouts, the players would go to school in another state. All our alumni do when they subsidize a good player is guarantee that he won't leave his Mommy and Daddy and go far from home."

Danny Hawke, who was taking it harder than the rest of us, said, "They announced that Rimshot couldn't appear on television for two years since the school had provided parents of players with free housing at the Trump Tower. NCAA action like that only makes it tough on kids who are looking for a good education."

Brad added, "They want to put Coach Savory on ice because a couple of players shaved points in their last game."

"It's the NCAA's word against the coach's. He didn't see anything, he didn't hear anything, and he says that he was making popcorn with a meter maid during that particular evening," Chili told us.

I was really mad. "How can anyone have a good basketball team if they're going to make a federal case out of every tiny infraction? I haven't heard of one kid who was ever corrupted in sports because the school gave him a brand-new Harley-Davidson motorcycle."

Brad tried to sound upbeat, "I like the way the president of Rimshot is handling this. At the press conference this morning, he announced that the school really got a raw deal. He vowed that he would stand by his team no matter what penalties were meted out by sanctimonious members of the NCAA. In order to make up for the loss of athletic scholarship funds that Rimshot Tech had to return, the president said that he was going to give the team the money originally set aside for a new science library. Now there's a man who knows his priorities."

Brad said, "What bothers me is that with all the heat, many high school recruits may bypass Rimshot and go to another college which hasn't been caught yet by the NCAA."

"No way," I yelled. "There isn't a university with the reputation of Rimshot when it comes to basketball perks. We can match any school's recruiting program and still have cash in the bank for someone who runs out of 'laundry money."

Danny chimed in, "The thing I hate about college sports investigators is that they don't give a hoot about the fans. To the schools we're nothing but warm bodies that fill up seats and buy franks and draft beer. Yet we're the ones who support the teams and make sure that the school turns out winners. Basketball and football are the keys to a university's reputation in the community. The NCAA never cares about the pain they are causing the fans when they rap a school's knuckles."

Brad announced, "Let the word go forth to the NCAA that, while we admire their efforts to keep sports from corrupting the students, no school of higher learning can maintain its scholastic reputation if the viewers aren't able to see how well the basketball team is doing on television."

Bush presses Congress for action on Third-World plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tangle of problems awaits President Bush's proposal to send $800 million to bolster new democracies in Panama and Nicaragua and threatens to delay the measure past the president's Easter deadline.

Bush met with congressional leaders Tuesday to press for quick action on the package. Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger argued on Capitol Hill that it is crucial to the survival of the new democratic governments of Panamanian President Guillermo Endara and Nicaragua's president-elect, Violeta Chamorro.

"Early success ... is going to be fundamental to whether Mr. Endara and Mrs. Chamorro are going to make it," Eagleburger told the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations.

Bush said the aid not only would demonstrate tangible benefits of democracy, but would turn up the heat on Cuba's Fidel Castro, the hemisphere's lone communist holdout.

"I'd like to see him shift from that highly militarized island and let democracy have a chance," he told lawmakers at a White House meeting. "I think if we are helpful to Nicaragua and Panama, it will simply increase the pressure in that marvelous island of Cuba for change."

Eagleburger sought to reassure senators by saying the $500 million for Panama is a one-shot economic infusion that won't likely be repeated, and that Nicaragua's $300 million in aid won't flow until leftist President Daniel Ortega fully turns over power to Mrs. Chamorro.

But he seemed to acknowledge the tough job ahead, and several senators pointed to a thicket of potential problems that could delay the package beyond April 5, when Congress recesses for Easter.

The most immediate problem is how to pay for the package. The administration is negotiating with Congress on its proposal to cut Pentagon spending to free money for the aid bill. Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis., said he believed those talks would be completed in the next two days.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., the appropriations subcommittee chairman, said it was almost certain that some lawmakers would seek to cut U.S. military aid to El Salvador to signal displeasure over that government's failure to bring to justice the killers of six Jesuit priests.

Nicaragua still must find a way to reintegrate the Contra rebels, who have fought the government for the past decade, into peaceful society. The U.S. government says 15,000 Contra fighters and 45,000 family members need to be repatriated, and most are in Honduras.

Eagleburger acknowledged that suspicions are deep on both sides and that all the rebels are unlikely to lay down their weapons and move back by Mrs. Chamorro's April 25 inauguration. The package includes about $42 million for Contra repatriation, and anti-Contra lawmakers likely will want to debate that issue.

Leahy accused the administration of having its priorities wrong, suggesting he might seek to divert some money to help bolster fledgling democracies in Eastern Europe. Nicaragua and Panama are of "slight economic, security and foreign policy importance" compared with Europe, he contended.

Other amendments also await the bill, including a Kasten-Leahy proposal to offer $400 million in housing loan guarantees to Israel to build homes for Soviet Jews moving there under the Soviet Union's relaxed emigration policies.

Eagleburger seemed to soften the administration's position on that proposal, saying it would support the idea "on the assumption that we can obtain adequate assurances with regard to those funds" on Israel's plans for settlements in the occupied territories. The statement was less categorical than recent statements by Bush and by Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

In addition, as the first must-pass legislation to come along in this year's congressional session, the Panama-Nicaragua bill will become a popular target for pet projects of lawmakers. Dozens of members already have indicated an interest in offering amendments.

"It seems to me we have to establish the emergency nature of this ... in a stronger way," Kasten said.

Diary safe, judge rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Reagan does not have to produce some three dozen diary entries requested by John Poindexter for his Iran-Contra trial, a federal judge ruled today.

U.S. District Court Judge Harold Greene said that production of the diary entries "is not essential to the achievement of justice in this case."

The judge's ruling came as Reagan's videotaped testimony was being shown at Poindexter's trial.

"The claims of executive privilege filed on behalf of the former president and of the incumbent president are sufficient" to defeat Poindexter's request, said Greene.

Poindexter's lawyers were presenting the Reagan tape in a bid to offset evidence presented by Iran-Contra prosecutors, who brought their case to a close Tuesday.

In 7½ days of testimony, prosecution witnesses told the jury the former national security adviser destroyed a presidential document and sent false letters to Congress about covert aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

On Tuesday, Greene denied a defense motion of acquittal, saying there is evidence suggesting Poindexter adopted false information "designed to obstruct Congress."

Savage holds on

CHICAGO (AP) — A defiant Congressman Gus Savage, D-Ill., lashed out at "the white racist press" after a narrow victory in Illinois' primary, and GOP Secretary of State Jim Edgar subdued a conservative insurgency to win his party's nomination for governor.

Savage, who faced the toughest primary of his 10-year career after allegations of sexual misconduct involving a Peace Corps worker, defeated Mel Reynolds, who had called the incumbent "totally ineffective."

Savage, who called the race a warm-up for Chicago's 1991 mayoral race, also said, "I believe that we shall beat (Chicago Mayor) Richard Daley and the Democratic machine and the white racist press in 1991."

In the GOP gubernatorial primary, Edgar, a pro-choice moderate, outdistanced conservative political organizer Steven Baer by nearly 2-1 after an ideologically charged race that drew attention from President Bush.

Reward offered

BOSTON (AP) — Two international auction houses agreed to underwrite a $1 million reward — no questions asked — in the theft of a dozen uninsured art treasures from the Gardner Museum.

"Our firm has never done this before, but there has never been such a catastrophic art theft," said Diana D. Brooks, president of the Sotheby's auction house.

Museum Director Anne Hawley indicated Tuesday the reward might even be paid to the thieves if the art was safely recovered. Eleven paintings and drawings by Rembrandt, Degas and Vermeer and other old masters were among the works stolen.

The Gardner's art collection, gathered and donated for a museum by the late Isabella Stewart Gardner, was only insured for restoration and conservation, not for theft.

The cost of theft insurance would be more than the museum's annual $2.8 million operating budget.

U.S. export experts wary of Japanese trade reforms

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON – U.S. negotiators were guarded Tuesday in response to signals that Japan may make trade concessions to the United States, saying they still are waiting for proposals from Tokyo in talks aimed at eliminating specific Japanese trade barriers.

In a report from Japan, Tuesday's Washington Post said officials there are preparing proposals in response to U.S. demands that Japan reduce its trade surplus. The proposals range from pledges to buy U.S. satellites and supercomputers to tougher actions against Japan's business monopolies, the Post said.

The developments follow discussions here last week in which U.S. officials reported virtually no progress in attempts to get Japan to lift barriers curbing imports of satellites and forest products, another area of trade tensions between the two countries.

Negotiations concerning U.S. supercomputers sales to Japan will resume today.

Despite the report from Japan, American participants in the talks and U.S. trade experts were only guardedly optimistic about prospects for achieving significant breakthroughs.

Deadlines for the discussions are fast approaching, and calls for retaliatory tariffs against Japan are expected to gain ground in Congress unless progress can be demonstrated.

The talks, which have been stalemated in numerous rounds during the past year, took on a new atmosphere of urgency after a meeting this month between President Bush and Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu.

"By making trade a top priority, Bush and Kaifu virtually collapsed the timing of the talks," according to Cal Cohen, vice president of the Emergency Committee for American Trade, an association of major U.S. exporting firms.

"The Japanese can no longer tell themselves they have time to work things out. They are good negotiators so they won't give away their compromises, but they now know the time has come to make their offers while they still have the chance to hold off whatever severe decree might be in the offing," Cohen said.

With the trade act of 1988, Congress gave the president the authority to impose retaliatory tariffs of up to 100 percent against any imports from countries that the office of the U.S. Trade Representative concludes are still violating principles of fair trade even after discussions aimed at eliminating such violations.

The law requires that the administration decide in the coming weeks whether Japan should be targeted for unfair trading practices during the coming year. The country was cited last year for blocking high-tech imports.

1970 marijuana user could be 1990 candidate, Bennett says

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON – Drug czar William Bennett said Tuesday that it would be "ridiculous" for past use of illegal drugs to disqualify a political candidate.

"If some kid smoked marijuana once 20 years ago and that kid –boy or girl – should now be disqualified for public office... I think that's ridiculous," the Bush administration's drug policy coordinator said in response to a question at a Heritage Foundation conference on drugs.

Bennett addressed the question about past drug use that is dogging Democrat Ann Richards in the Texas gubernatorial race. While in Texas last week, he said the question of past drug use was a legitimate one to ask of a candidate.

Bennett said Tuesday there are cases where a candidate should be disqualified but it depends on "facts and circumstances." "When did the person use drugs? How old was the person? What was the person's responsibility? Was the person a student or a teacher? Was it 1968, 1978 or 1988? How many times? What drug?

"Does any previous drug use automatically disqualify a candidate? Of course not," said Bennett.

A candidate's past drug history "is an appropriate area of inquiry for the press and public" he said.

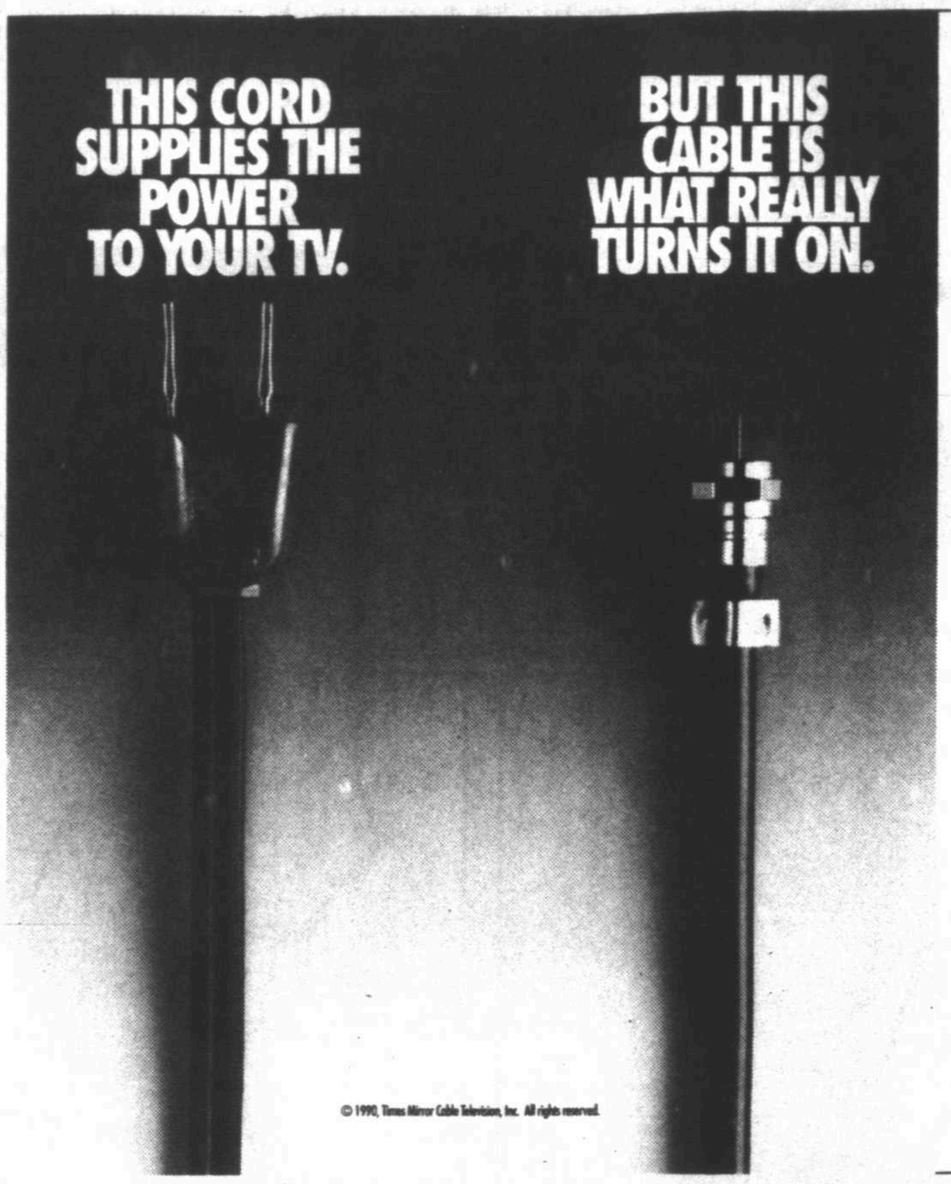

But, Bennett derided politicians, who in an attempt to pre-empt public outcry, confess past use of illicit drugs.

"I think we would be honor-bound to ask for the resignation of all these people who have come forward in this rather undignified parade of public confession following the Ginsburg situation," Bennett said.

Douglas Ginsburg, nominated by President Reagan for the U.S. Supreme Court, withdrew after admitting he had used marijuana. His statement led two candidates for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination – Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee and Bruce Babbitt, former governor of Arizona – to admit they had previously smoked marijuana. A number of Massachusetts politicians from both parties recently confessed to smoking marijuana when they were younger.

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox has been pushing Richards in the gubernatorial race to disclose whether she has ever used illegal drugs.

Richards has refused to answer saying that might deter an addict from seeking help.

Panel OKs $450 million education plan

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A $1.2 billion, Senate-approved school finance measure was discarded on Wednesday in favor of a $450 million plan that a House chairman said will provide more equity to poorer districts.

Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice and chairman of the House Public Education Committee, said that with the House bill, the quality of education no longer would be related to the location of a district.

Instead, the determining factor would be "what kind of sacrifices the people living in the district are willing to make" as far as a tax rate, she said.

The Senate on Monday approved the $1.2 billion measure, adding 25 minor amendments in the process.

Tuesday's committee action, a 6-1 vote in favor of sending the bill to the full House, came in anticipation of a Thursday school finance debate in that chamber.

The current special session started Feb. 27 and ends midnight March 28, dates set by Gov. Bill Clements after a recent Texas Supreme Court decision.

The court this past October unanimously found that the current school finance system is unconstitutional and discriminatory against students in poorer districts.

While money spent on students continues to come from a combination of local property taxes and state taxes, the local share has become so dominant that students in poorer districts are at a disadvantage, the court said.

To fix the problem, the House committee's plan would provide an initial $65 million to make up for a budgetary shortfall projected by the Texas Education Agency for the coming school year.

School districts would receive the remaining $385 million in first-year revenue under an already existing TEA-administered formula.

During the succeeding four years, the state's education system would receive progressively larger doses of aid until state spending tops out at $1.8 billion above the current $5.6 billion level.

Both House and Senate versions rely on an aid distribution system that rewards districts with more state money for maintaining higher local tax rates.

But Ms. Glossbrenner said the House version is better because it would give all districts the same access to revenue as districts whose spending per student is in the top five percent.

With the Senate version, a district's access to more revenue is tied to how close its tax rate is to the state average, she said, which results in less help for poorer districts.

Tuesday's 6-1 committee vote came under the eye of House Speaker Gib Lewis, who said his presence at the meeting carried no special significance.

MISD teachers tell lawmakers views on school bill

By David Morris
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — State legislators wrestling with the issue of school finance reform have an abundance of special interest groups to contend with, not the least of which is teachers.

Texas Federation of Teachers (TFT) representatives, including three from the Midland Independent School District, were in Austin Tuesday telling lawmakers that reforms should include more money for teachers.

"We support a bill of $1.2 billion for school finance with 65 percent of that used for salaries, in particular teachers' salaries," said Midland TFT President Sam Manning from Austin Tuesday. Manning is a social studies teacher at Lee High School.

Other Midland teachers in Austin Tuesday were LHS teachers Billy Gilbreath and Teresa Kerley.

The State Senate Tuesday passed a bill that would inject the school system with $1.2 billion in additional state money next year, but the House is favoring a more modest $450 million spending increase.

Lawmakers are in the midst of a special session to restructure state school financing methods. The Texas Supreme Court ruled the current funding method unconstitutional last October because it discriminates against property-poor school districts.

Manning said the TFT supports the $1.2 billion Senate bill, but he was not optimistic about its ultimate success since it differs considerably from the House bill under consideration.

"Basically, that's what we're looking for," Manning said of the Senate bill, although only about 58 percent of the money it calls for would go toward salaries. "I am heartened that the Senate did what it did. I'm disheartened that the House hasn't done anything more solid than it has."

Gov. Bill Clements, meanwhile, has vowed to veto the Senate bill if it reaches his desk. He has said he wants to spend no more than $300 million in new money for education next year and will not support a tax increase for finance reform.

Manning said the stigma associated with calling for tax increases to pay for finance reform promises to reduce the impact of the special session.

"It just seems to me like...somebody in this state would have demonstrated more financial leadership over this," Manning said. "The problem in my mind is that we need to have people who are statesmen...to solve this problem."

Manning said 100 TFT representatives from 14 school districts lobbied in Austin Tuesday. Legislators have been receptive to the pleas of teachers, Manning said.

"I think they listen," he said. "We're part of their constituency, but they have to listen to a lot of people. They are inundated with information."

MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi said he supports teachers' calls for a salary boost, but said teachers must be prepared to face changes in the classroom in return for more money.

"To pay the same people more money to do the same things they've been doing for years will not improve achievement," Baressi said. "I'm not suggesting that a pay increase is not warranted or needed. We need to change behavior in addition to salary increases."

Baressi, who expressed his views to legislators during a March 8 trip to Austin, said the state will have to pay more to achieve financial parity among school districts.

"The real issue is equity," he said. "I don't think there is any question that if the system is to be equitable, the state has to fund a greater proportion."

Maripaz Castano, left, of Manila, has finally had a chance to meet longtime friend Velera Jones of Midland after corresponding for 45 years.

Pen pals meet after 45 years

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Velera Jones of Midland and Maripaz Castano of the Philippines have known each other 45 years.

It wasn't until earlier this week, however, that they finally got to meet face to face. They hadn't heard each other's voices until a month ago.

The two have been corresponding since Mrs. Jones' father, Captain Walter Williamson, M.D. met Mrs. Castano's family in 1945, when he entered the Philippines.

Mrs. Castano has been touring the United States and Canada since June 1989, when she left for Hawaii. Along the way she has been attending conferences, visiting with fellow Filipinos now living in America and writing stories about her trip for a New York-based Filipino newspaper and the three community papers she edits back in Manila. She is also managing editor of a newspaper for senior citizens.

She's enjoying her tour of North America, and meeting Mrs. Jones and her family. "I'm having a ball. I've always dreamed of coming here," she says.

She hopes the Immigration and Naturalization Service will allow her to stay in the United States through the end of June, because she and another Filipino writer and a Filipino artist are trying to collaborate on a book about Filipinos who have become successful in this country.

She'd also like to join her husband, Amado, when he visits Oregon this June for an international Rotary Club convention.

Not only is Mrs. Castano a writer, she is a teacher, having taught psychology and sociology for the past 27 years. She has bachelor's degrees in psychology, English and political science. She had originally planned to study law before turning to teaching.

She recalls that she was a sickly child, and her health was made worse by the pri-

Substance-free graduation bash again on tap

By David Morris
Staff Writer

The idea of a "chemical free" graduation celebration may be catching on among Midland high school students.

Organizers of Project Graduation, Midland's second drug- and alcohol-free graduation party, are confident that many students will take part in this year's event.

"Because of the positive PR from last year's kids, we'll probably have a much bigger turnout," said Donna Hewett, Midland High School parent and Project Graduation co-chairperson. "And last year's was a successful turnout."

She said that about 600 seniors and their guests attended last year's party, and at least 900 are expected this year.

Last year, one lucky reveller walked away from the party $5,000 richer. Gail Rowland, project financial co-chariperson, said scholarship prizes will be offered this year.

"All money raised will be given as scholarships funds to further their education," Ms. Rowland said.

Cheri Hill, Lee High School parent and project co-chairperson, said the prospect of winning a scholarship should draw many students to the party.

"Those will help keep the kids there," Ms. Hill said, explaining that students who leave the party forfeit their eligibility in the prize drawings.

Ms. Hill said local businesses are being asked to donate door prizes for the event, scheduled for May 31 from midnight to 5 a.m.

Although students will be allowed to leave the party if they wish, no students will be admitted after midnight on graduation night, Ms. Hewett said.

"The purpose is to provide a totally chemical-free party for all the seniors to spend what will be their last night together and leave with lots of good memories," Ms. Hewett said. "If they leave they will not be allowed back in the party, and if anyone arrives at the party who is obviously under the influence parents will be called to pick them up."

Ms. Hill said Midland's Project Graduation was started by parents concerned about student safety on graduation night, when many students consider getting drunk a "rite of passage" into adulthood.

"If they are drinking, that possibly also means party-hopping, and party-hopping means driving, and driving under the influence means possibly death," Ms. Hill said. "We are really interested in them developing a new tradition of partying without substance use."

Ms. Hewett and Ms. Hill, along with other parents and a "steering committee" of 80 MHS and LHS seniors, began promotion of the post-graduation blowout this week.

The party, which will again be held at The Midlander athletic club, will feature dancing to a live band, racquetball and handball tournaments, swimming, bingo, a casino and "food served all night long," Ms. Hewett said.

Although it will be similar to last year's party, Ms. Hewett and Ms. Hill agreed that this year's event will be bigger and better because organizers have gotten an earlier start than they did last year.

Student enthusiasm for the party also is up this year. Only 15 students helped organize the party last year, compared with 80 this year.

"Their excitement, shared at the schools, is what I think will 'make' this party," Ms. Hill said. "Their enthusiasm is key."

Student committee member Teya Rowland, 17, an MHS senior, said she plans to tell her classmates that the Project Graduation party will be "the place to be" on

2 drug suspects out on bond

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Two of six people charged with possessing about 300 pounds of marijuana have been released under $50,000 bonds, a third is jailed in lieu of posting bond, and three others were denied bail by U.S. Magistrate Robert Sykes.

The six people — five men and one woman all in their early to mid-20s — were arrested Feb. 13 in the South Ranchito Estates southeast of Odessa following the surveillance of a tanker truck which law-enforcement officers suspected held a concealed compartment.

Released under $50,000 bonds were Martin Tovar of Dallas and Esau Franco of Odessa. Sykes granted Hector Garcia of Odessa bail but as of Wednesday, he was still jailed in the federal wing of the Midland City Jail.

Denied bail on grounds that they were dangers to the community were Janet Moreno of Dallas, Jose Valenzuela of Odessa and Jose Acosta of Gardendale.

An undercover U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) special agent testified this week in a hearing before the magistrate that between 20 and 25 DEA, U.S. Customs, and Texas Department of Public Safety agents and an Odessa Police Department SWAT team took part in the arrest.

"We suspected marijuana was being unloaded from the tanker truck," said the DEA agents, who requested anonymity.

The truck, which lawmen initially surmised was a water truck but which turned out to be a crude-oil tanker, had been under suspicion since October 1989, when Odessa Crime Stoppers received a lead on

Lawmakers repeat calls for partisan judicial election

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Black and Hispanic lawmakers Tuesday repeated their calls for partisan, single-member election of district judges in nine urban counties, including Midland and Ector counties, this fall.

As the Legislature enters the final week of a monthlong special session, Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, chairman of the Senate State Affairs Committee, said he hopes to get a bill out of committee today, even as a special task force on judicial selection continues to study ways to satisfy a federal court order.

Judicial selection was one of the issues that brought lawmakers back to Austin for a special session after U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton of Midland ruled countywide election of district judges in Bexar, Dallas, Ector, Harris, Jefferson, Lubbock, Midland, Tarrant and Travis counties dilutes minority voting strength and violates the Voting Rights Act.

Bunton ordered election of district judges from subdistricts, such as legislative districts or commissioner precincts, in the case of Midland and Ector counties, to give minorities an opportunity to elect judges.

The 5th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals set aside Bunton's order, although it threatened to reinstate Bunton's ruling if the Legislature fails to act.

Montford said the committee got off to a slow start because senators were preoccupied by the March 13 primary election and the overhaul of school financing.

Senators are concerned that the state should exhaust its appeals before changing the system, Montford said, but their overriding concern is to keep electing judges. He said there is little support for appointment of judges with later retention elections, favored by Gov. Bill Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis.

Montford proposed to elect county and district judges in the nine urban counties through a "limited" voting system, where each voter would be permitted to vote for 60 percent of the seats up for election. That would allow minorities, voting as a bloc, to elect at least one judge.

But most minority legislators, the Texas Democratic Party and the plaintiffs in the federal lawsuit have endorsed judicial elections by single-member districts, as contained in House Bill 133 and its companion Senate Bill 2.

House Bill 133, filed Tuesday, had 42 co-sponsors and would void March 13 primary results for two judicial seats in Midland and three seats in Ector County. It calls for primary elections Aug. 11, with runoffs Aug. 25, leading to the general election Nov. 6.

"Of any piece of legislation, this is the piece that is most likely to gain the necessary number of votes," said Rep. Larry Evans, D-Houston, author of the bill.

His co-author, Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, said the speaker is keeping an open mind. "I think Gib is looking for a consensus and I am hoping we can show it to him," he said.

The only Hispanic representative who has not joined as a cosponsor of HB 133 is Rep. Henry Cuellar, D-Laredo, a member of the House Judicial Affairs Committee who is supporting a compromise plan that would elect judges from subdistricts, followed by countywide retention elections.

Cuellar said he would support the single-member plan if it reached the House floor.

The only black representative who has not joined HB 133 is Rep. Sylvester Turner, D-Houston, another Judicial Affairs member who is pushing his own single-member district plan.

Speaker Lewis said he has asked Rep. Pat Hill, D-Dallas, Judicial Affairs Committee chairman, to seek a compromise bill, but Lewis said prospects for a solution by the end of the current session are "not very realistic at all."

A change in judicial selection normally would require a constitutional amendment, approved by a two-thirds majority in both houses and a statewide referendum. A federal court order could overrule the state Constitution.

San Angelo homeless counted

SAN ANGELO (AP) — One by one, nine recovering drug addicts living in a clapboard, barrio church left a religious service to be counted among the homeless.

They were nervous about personal questions, but eager to be included in the U.S. Census effort because they so often feel forgotten.

"I think they should know how many people we have," said 18-year-old Julie, who asked that her last name not be revealed.

Late Tuesday and early today, eight pairs of census-takers fanned out across this West Texas oil and cow town, adding up the unfortunate.

The homeless may be more visible in major cities than in towns like San Angelo (population: 90,000), but those who work with the indigent here say they are eager to show that small communities have a problem, too.

"People don't believe it when you tell them there are in excess of 100 street people in San Angelo," said Lloyd Thompson, manager of a Salvation Army family shelter.

The census duos visited 37 shelters, motels and churches in the San Angelo area Tuesday. This morning, they checked under bridges crossing the Concho River, street corners and city parks as part of the census count of the homeless in towns as small as 50,000 people.

After nearly two hours of searching the streets before sunrise, 10 census workers reported finding only deer, cottontail rabbits, a lawn chair and a water heater laying on its side under a bridge.

They said they believed most of the homeless spent the night indoors because of cool temperatures.

"I think there's quite a few homeless here," said Judi Chappa, a homeless advocate in San Angelo.

Land analyst files for council seat

Staff Report

Mary Kniffen said Tuesday that she wants to bring an employee-oriented perspective to the Midland City Council.

Kniffen

Mrs. Kniffen, 52, has filed in the District 4 race to represent west Midland. Tom Johnston, 39, has also filed for that position.

"I believe it's time for another point of view," Mrs. Kniffen said. "Present members of the City Council have a tendency to focus their view on upper managers while ignoring other city employees."

She is a temporary land analyst for Meridian Oil Inc.

A 28-year Midland resident, Mrs. Kniffen has worked as a legal secretary for Exxon Corp., the Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin and Browder Inc. law firm and the Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe and Dawson law firm.

She also has worked for Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe and Dawson as an oil and gas legal assistant for six years.

Mrs. Kniffen is a graduate of Midland College and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, where she received her bachelor's of arts degree in management with honors. She also was named outstanding graduate in management in 1986 by the UTPB faculty.

She is married and has two children, ages 33 and 15. She is a charter member of the Legal Assistants Division of the State Bar of Texas and the Legal Assistants Association of the Permian Basin.

She is secretary of the Lee High School Tennis Boosters Club and a member of the Permian Basin Church of Religious Science.

She also serves as a member of a city of Midland panel which is conducting a salary study of city employees.

"I intend to represent the people of Midland who work between 8 and 5 and have no opportunity to attend City Council meetings," Mrs. Kniffen said. She said she is also concerned about representing "the people who are concerned about the safety of their homes and children, about putting food on their table and clothes on their backs, about the high cost of medical care and insurance and about house payments, car payments and the ever increasing tax bite."

the tanker.

The bob-tail tanker, which had a yellow cab and a black tank, had been sighted in making trips far south of Alpine.

In early March, said the DEA agent, the tanker had traveled 65 miles south of Alpine on Texas Highway 118 not far the Texas-Mexico Rio Grande. The tanker returned to Odessa with an apparent escort of a pickup truck and one and then a second sedan.

"It was very difficult to distinguish which individual was which due to the darkness," the DEA agent said after the tanker had been parked in a "remote" area southeast of Odessa.

After the arrests officers secured probable-cause search warrants to conduct searches of the tanker and the surrounding area of stables.

In the tanker, officers found kilos of marijuana "bricks."

"The marijuana had a little bit of oil on it," the DEA agent said.

And outside the tanker on bales of hay, agents found automatic and semi-automatic rifles and bolt-action rifles.

In the magistrate's hearing, the government was represented by Assistant U.S. Attorney David Rosado, and the defendants were represented by lawyers Tony Chavez and Richard Alvarado.

Landman files for MCHD

Staff Report

Seeing a need to help guide the Midland County Hospital District, Richard Key Dulaney has filed for the District 4 post.

Dulaney

If elected, Dulaney would represent central Midland.

"Midland Memorial Hospital is one of our finest assets," Dulaney said. "I want to have a part in maintaining its excellence and continued growth."

A 1974 graduate of Austin College in Sherman, Dulaney, 38, has been a petroleum landman since 1976.

He moved to Midland 11 years ago and worked as an independent landman and businessman.

He is a general partner and founder of Southwest Land Records Limited, which owns seven title companies in the Permian Basin and operates a title information business.

Membership to area organizations include the Permian Basin Landowners Association and Permian Basin Petroleum Association. He is past president of the West Texas Producers Forum and a 1989 graduate of Leadership Midland.

A member of the Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, he is married and has three children.

vations of war. She credits Captain Williamson with improving her health, saying that when he wasn't treating the men of his unit, (the 308th Aerodrome), he'd treat the people in the village. He and members of his unit were active in the local church, providing music and directing the choir.

Mrs. Castano said that during the war her father worked for the U.S. Army. His pension was cut off, and the only food the family had was what they could grow.

Though her father was retired from the army, he was incarcerated by the Japanese. Her family, which included seven children, was taken to a village near where he was held, and Mrs. Castano witnessed torture and public executions. Her family did not escape — she says a nephew was beheaded, and her mother's cousin, the village mayor, was forced to dig his own grave and then was killed with a bayonet.

Still, she says, she has made her peace with the Japanese, especially after a visit to the University of Tokyo in 1964, where she confronted some young Japanese who hadn't experienced the war.

A teen-ager in high school when Captain Williamson arrived, Mrs. Castano now has three sons and four grandchildren. One son sent her pictures of the recent coup attempt against President Corazon Aquino, and she says "it was sad, because it looks worse than any we've had."

Her children participated in the peaceful "People Power" revolution that brought Mrs. Aquino to power, but now she says, they are disillusioned with her.

She and her husband are known for their nationalism, but she likes the United States and supports keeping the U.S. bases there open — at least until provisions can be made for helping the workers that would lose their jobs.

As she keeps an eye on events in Manila and works with her partners on her book, Mrs. Castano is enjoying her tour and reunion with Williamson and his family.

"I'm having a ball. They really are terrific hosts."

PLAN: House bill called too high

had said lawmakers might consider designing an education reform plan and leaving money issues to a later date.

Faced with such a bill, the governor "could leave it, or sign it or veto it," said Lewis. "That's his determination at that point."

Later, the chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, Rep. James Hury, D-Galveston, said splitting the two issues is "not very likely."

Lewis said House members would have a "difficult" time adopting an education spending level as high as the one senators endorsed.

"I look for a compromise on some numbers (so) that if we have to pass a tax bill, it will be a reasonable tax bill," said the speaker.

Even the House's $450 million, first-year level was too high for one committee member, Rep. Alan Schoolcraft, R-Universal City, who cast the lone dissenting vote.

Schoolcraft also felt that the bill's dollar allocation formula is too similar to the current system to represent reform. He also feared the system would tend toward dis-equalization in the long run.

Another committee member, Rep. Kent Grusendorf, D-Arlington, who helped draft the original committee bill, said he could not support the measure once it reaches the House floor.

Grusendorf said he would offer a replacement that uses the Senate's money allocation formula, but at a far lower level of first-year spending.

STATE IN BRIEF

General recalls Noriega surrender

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The U.S. Army officer who negotiated in Panama for the surrender of Manuel Noriega said his delicate job required balancing military concerns with the sanctity of the Catholic Church.

"I thought I was going to be excommunicated and court-martialed," said Maj. Gen. Marc Cisneros.

He said he vividly recalls a Spanish priest — the Vatican emissary to Panama — angrily punching his chest with a finger in the midst of long, sensitive negotiations to coax Noriega from the Vatican embassy, where the deposed dictator had taken sanctuary.

President Bush had appointed Cisneros the official negotiator when a defeated Noriega sought sanctuary in the church embassy in Panama City after the U.S. invasion in that country in December.

Cisneros said he and Msgr. Jose Sebastian Laboa, the Vatican representative, engaged in tense discussions.

After days of negotiations and subtle pressure on Noriega from Vatican officials, Cisneros said, Noriega agreed Jan. 3 to give himself up.

Noriega had requested that Cisneros personally accept his surrender, but the general declined.

"I didn't want to give him the dignity of having a U.S. general there," he said. "I didn't want history to capture me with Noriega."

Spill cleanup continues

ARDMORE, Okla. (AP) — Officials say the cleanup of about 3,6000 barrels of oil is continuing along the Red River from near Ringling to Lake Texoma.

The spill happened last Tuesday when a break occurred in a 12-inch crude oil line that runs across the river north of Spanish Fort, Texas, Earl Sims, an ARCO Pipeline Co. spokesman, said Tuesday.

Officials believe all of the spilled oil went into the river, which was in flood stage from recent heavy rains.

As the waters have receded, numerous small pockets of oil have been discovered, officials said.

Sims said the pipeline, which runs from Houston to Cushing, Okla., was shut down late Tuesday after the leak was discovered. He said the pipeline was put back in service on Saturday.

ARCO Pipeline is a division of the Atlantic Richfield Co.

Beach cleanup set

AUSTIN (AP) — The Legislature has declared March 31 as the "Great Texas Beach Trash-Off Day" and is urging Texans to help clean the state's beaches.

Since 1987, more than 39,000 volunteers have picked up over 1,200 tons of beach trash along the Texas coast.

Serial killer, rapist sentenced to die

CONROE (AP) — Serial killer Daniel Lee Corwin was sentenced to death by injection for the 1987 slayings of three women.

Montgomery County jurors in State District Judge James Keeshan's court deliberated just 35 minutes Tuesday before deciding on the death penalty for Corwin, who already is serving 99 years for the 1988 attempted capital murder of a Texas A&M student.

Corwin was convicted Friday under a new state law that allows capital prosecution for slayings committed at different times and locations, but which follow the same pattern.

His death sentence faces automatic appeal.

A year ago, Corwin, 31, confessed to a Huntsville detective that he was involved in the slayings of Alice Martin, 72, of Normangee; Debra Ewing, 27, of Grangerland; and Mary Risinger, 36, of Huntsville.

All three women were attacked in public places. Ms. Martin was abducted while taking a walk near her home on Feb. 13, then tied, strangled and stabbed four times in the back.

Ms. Ewing was abducted at gunpoint July 10 from a Huntsville optical shop where she worked and then was raped and stabbed twice in the chest at Lake Conroe.

Ms. Risinger was stabbed in the throat at a Huntsville car wash on Halloween as her 3-year-old daughter looked on.

During the punishment phase of the trial Monday, three rape victims described chilling details of their attacks by Corwin.

One rape victim told jurors she was a Temple High School student when Corwin, also a student, abducted her at knife-point from the school parking lot in May 1975. The woman, now 31, said Corwin drove her in her car to an abandoned gravel pit, raped her, stabbed her, cut her twice in the throat and tried to grind his knife into her heart before leaving her buried in trash. She was able to stumble to a roadway and flag down a car.

Corwin was sentenced to 40 years in prison for that attack, but was paroled after nine years. He was still on parole when he abducted a 21-year-old Texas A&M student at knife-point from a school parking lot. She, too, was raped, tied to a tree, stabbed and had her throat slashed.

Another rape victim told jurors she was 13 when Corwin, then 14, attacked her at knife-point at a neighbor's house in Temple where she was babysitting a 15-month-old child. He was not charged with that attack when prosecutors were unable to prove he was the assailant.

Salvation Army will head for Eastern bloc

DALLAS (AP) — With the Cold War rapidly being put in the deep freeze, the Salvation Army is adding Eastern Europe to its battle plan.

Gen. Eva Burrows, the head of the International Salvation Army, says her group is facing opportunities in communist countries that it hasn't had since being expelled from most of them decades ago.

"It caught us very much by surprise," said Ms. Burrows of the rapidly changing political shift toward democratic reforms. "Everyone is working a little bit in the dark."

Ms. Burrows, who is Australian, said she had been trying to figure out last year how to return the group to service in Eastern Europe. She had hoped to negotiate first with Hungary, intending to use the liberalizing of that nation as a foothold. But events overtook her dreams.

Plans for services to be offered across newly opened borders are still sketchy, but Ms. Burrows, said she has a few ideas.

"One thing the Russians wouldn't mind is help with their alcoholism problem," she said.

The Salvation Army also should find new opportunities to expand the Christian aspect of its mission, she said.

"People will be more open to the Christian faith, as well," Ms. Burrows told The Dallas Morning News.

Wearing a military-styled blazer with an "S" on each lapel, Ms. Burrows also discussed how the organization has tried to cope with a number of crises worldwide, including the re-examination of apartheid in South Africa and the AIDS epidemic in Central Africa.

Mrs. Burrows, who was in Dallas to address the 100th annual meeting of the Dallas County Salvation Army Advisory Board, is the spiritual and secular head of the international charitable organization.

"I'm like the pope," she explained Tuesday after arriving in Dallas. "I'm the head of the Salvation Army family around the world."

Ms. Burrow said she has recently discussed morality with the president of Zimbabwe; chatted with Mother Teresa in India about taking their respective ministries into Eastern Europe; and spent time in Great Britain where a management consultant recently recommended changes to bring the organization "into the 21st century."

But she says she takes the great amount of travel in stride.

"Wherever the general goes, the Salvationists feel they belong," she said.

Italian chef suggests lamb, peas for Easter dinner

By Charles Britton
Copley News Service

With five books to his credit and one more on the way, Giuliano Bugialli has emerged as the leading exponent of Italian cooking in the United States.

He has become a trans-Atlantic commuter, dividing his year between his cooking schools in his native Florence and New York.

He passed through town recently, so I took the occasion to ask him to select a typical Italian menu for Easter Sunday.

His nomination for a main course would not surprise most Americans: "Lamb," he said, with an Italian accent as rich as mascarpone cream cheese. "In early spring, the baby lamb becomes available, so that is what we would have on Easter. Then we forget about it for the rest of the year."

Most Italians do not consume much lamb, particularly not in Bugialli's central province of Tuscany. And north or south, "Italians do not like pink lamb," he said — well-done is the rule.

Bugialli suggested that the main dish might be a spezzatino, a kind of stew or saute in which the meat is cut into pieces, browned and then cooked in flavorful liquid. He specified the classic combination of rosemary and garlic.

This is the recipe I expanded from his verbal instructions.

SPEZZATINO OF LAMB

1½ to 2 pounds lean lamb
2 tablespoons olive oil (or as needed)
3 cloves garlic, peeled and chopped
¾ cup dry white wine
1 sprig fresh rosemary or ½ teaspoon dried
Salt, pepper

Trim meat of excess fat, cut into 1-inch pieces. In large, deep frying pan, heat enough olive oil to cover bottom. Dry lamb pieces so that they will brown easily. Brown lamb over brisk heat. Do this in batches, if necessary, so as not to crowd pan. When last of lamb is almost finished browning, add garlic pieces so that they, too, can brown. Don't let them burn.

When garlic becomes nicely tan, quickly pour in wine. Return any reserved lamb pieces to pan, and add rosemary, salt and pepper.

Simmer lamb, covered, for about an hour, until it is fork tender. Add more wine if sauce cooks down too much.

Here, from Bugialli's works, is a typical way with leg of lamb.

LEG OF LAMB IN THE ITALIAN STYLE

1 leg of lamb, around 6 pounds
About 6 cloves of garlic, peeled and cut into slivers
10 whole cloves
¼ cup olive oil
Salt, pepper

Have your butcher bone the leg or not, as you prefer. The small Italian legs of lamb would weigh about 5 pounds; ours are likely to be larger.

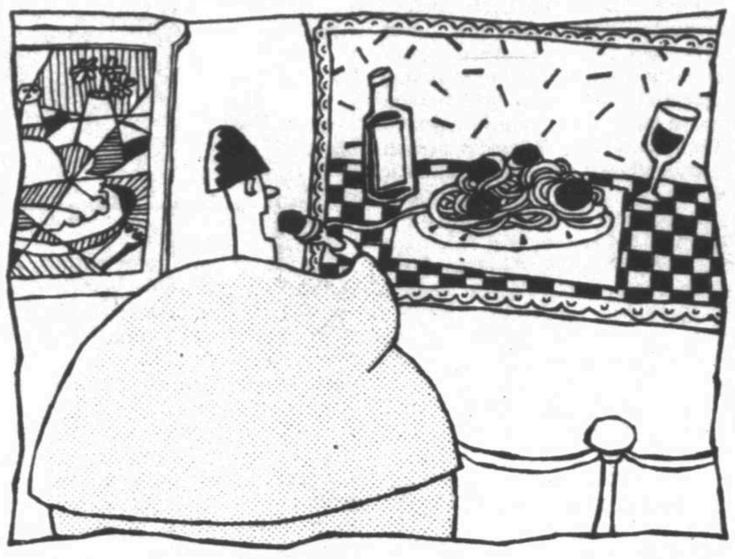

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

With small knife, poke holes in meat and insert slivers of garlic and cloves, distributing them evenly over surface.

Or, if leg has been boned, spread out untied meat, spread garlic, cloves, salt and pepper over cut surface and tie up meat into neat, elongated package. Salt and pepper exterior, to taste.

Pour oil into baking dish, add lamb, and cook meat to taste — at most very slightly pink, to follow the Italian style, about 165 degrees on meat thermometer.

For a 6-pound bone-in roast, allow about 14 minutes per pound for well done, about 11 minutes for medium rare. For a 4-pound boned roast, allow 30 to 35 minutes per pound for well done, 25 to 30 for medium rare. However, the thickness of meat will determine cooking time, so you are best off checking with a thermometer.

CNS Graphic

Peas would be classic contorno or accompaniment, indeed virtually a necessity. Fresh young peas are another signal of spring, although in the United States we might use the frozen product.

Here are peas in style of Bugialli's hometown:

PEAS IN THE FLORENTINE MANNER

1½ pounds shelled fresh peas or 2 (10-ounce) packages of small frozen peas
4 ounces pancetta
4 or 5 sprigs parsley, preferably flat-leaf Italian type
1 large clove garlic
1½ tablespoons olive oil
Salt, pepper
¾ cup beef broth
1½ tablespoons sugar

Coarsely chop pancetta (unsmoked Italian-style bacon, available at Italian markets), parsley and garlic. Heat oil in heavy saucepan, then add chopped ingredients and saute very gently for 5 minutes.

Add peas, season with salt and pepper. Stir in about ⅓ cup of broth. Simmer uncovered slowly until broth has evaporated, about 15 minutes. By then, peas should be cooked. If not, add remaining broth and cook several minutes longer. Stir in sugar and simmer for 1 minute more. Serve immediately.

Mint sauce is a favorite with lamb in Italy, too, but this version has a notably fresh appeal:

ITALIAN FRESH MINT SAUCE

1 cup fresh mint leaves
Juice of 1 lemon
2 tablespoons sugar
⅓ cup red wine vinegar
Salt to taste

Tear mint leaves into thirds. Place in sauceboat with other ingredients and mix until sugar is dissolved.

This recalls the sweet-sour sauces that, Bugialli said, were highly characteristic of Italian cooking until modern times.

Bugialli has little liking for the various "new cuisines" that come down the strada. He dislikes the fussy arrangement of food on the plates as practiced by modern chefs, and fundamentally his attitude toward cooking is conservative.

"More or less, everything has been done," he said with the vivacity and gestures you couldn't do better with a call to Central Casting. "I don't want to invent anything. Why should we give up what we have?"

Instead, Bugialli has traced back many dishes to their roots. Often the trail leads back through the centuries.

"The 'Decameron' has a story about a party and how hard everybody works to make ravioli, which they serve with butter and cheese," he said. "That's the first mention of pasta in Italian literature."

In common with most authorities, he scoffs at the theory that Marco Polo introduced Italians to pasta, imported from China.

However, pasta assumed its present central place in the Italian diet with the industrial revolution, which mechanized pasta production and turned the food into an everyday item. Bugialli's research has convinced him that tomato sauce for pasta came along as late as the 1840s.

Pasta just happens to be the subject of one of Bugialli's books, called, neatly enough, "Bugialli on Pasta" (Simon & Schuster, $24.95).

By and large, he said, Italians remain utterly attached to their pasta. "It's part of our life, like going to Mass, almost," he said. "The Italians will give up every other food, but not pasta."

Besides the works mentioned, Bugialli is the author of "Classic Techniques of Italian Cooking" (Simon & Schuster, 1982) and "Foods of Italy" (Stuart, Tabori & Chang, 1984).

In a large mixing bowl, beat egg whites until foamy. Gradually add remaining ¼ cup sugar, beating until stiff peaks form. Stir about ½ cup beaten egg whites into cocoa mixture. Gently fold cocoa mixture into remaining egg white mixture, blending well. Spoon batter into prepared pan. Sprinkle almonds over top. Bake 25 to 30 minutes or until top springs back when touched lightly in the center. Cool in pan on wire rack. Cake will settle and pull away from edges of the pan slightly during cooling. Passover celebration includes traditional dishes

By Faye Levy
Copley News Service

Passover is a weeklong festival, beginning at sunset April 9, that commemorates the deliverance of the Hebrews from slavery. The Bible relates that as the Jews rushed to leave Egypt, they did not have time to let their bread rise; the resulting flat "bread" became the first matzos.

The Seder, or ceremonial dinner for the first and second nights of Passover, features other foods that recall the Jews' life as slaves and the escape to freedom.

SALMON STEAKS WITH HERB SAUCE

1½ to 2 pounds salmon steaks, about 1-inch thick
2 shallots, chopped
Salt and pepper
¾ cup dry white wine
HERB SAUCE:
10 spinach leaves
¼ cup watercress leaves
¼ cup parsley sprigs
2 tablespoons tarragon leaves (optional)
1 cup mayonnaise, homemade or good-quality brand
2 to 3 tablespoons warm water (optional)
Parsley sprigs (for garnish)
Lemon wedges (for garnish)

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Oil gratin dish or other shallow baking dish large enough to contain salmon steaks in 1 layer. Sprinkle shallots in dish. Set salmon steaks on top and season with salt and pepper. Pour wine over them. Cover with oiled parchment paper or foil. Bake about 15 minutes or until just tender and flesh near bone has changed color to light pink. Carefully transfer steaks to plate and let cool.

Herb Sauce: Remove stems from spinach and rinse leaves thoroughly. Plunge spinach, watercress, parsley and tarragon into saucepan of boiling water. Bring back to boil and drain thoroughly. Rinse under cold running water and drain thoroughly. Squeeze hard to remove excess liquid.

Puree leaves and herbs in food processor until smooth. If necessary, add 2 to 3 tablespoons mayonnaise to help make smoother mixture. Add remaining mayonnaise and blend until smooth. Trasfer to bowl. Taste for seasoning. If sauce is very thick, whisk in warm water, 1 tablespoon at a time, until sauce is just thin enough to be poured.

Carefully pull off skin from each salmon steak and cut steak in 2. Transfer to platter. Garnish with parsley sprigs and lemon wedges. Serve sauce separately.

LEEK FRITTERS

4 pounds leeks
2 large eggs
¼ cup matzo meal
½ teaspoon dried leaf thyme, crumbled
Salt and pepper
Freshly grated nutmeg to taste
Lemon wedges (for serving)
Vegetable oil for deep frying (about 5 cups)

Discard very dark green parts of leeks. Split leeks lengthwise twice, leaving root end attached, and rinse well. Cut in about 4-inch pieces. Put in large pan of boiling, salted water and cook about 10 minutes or until tender. Drain well. Finely chop with knife; you will have about 4 cups leeks. Drain again in strainer and squeeze firmly by handfuls to remove excess liquid. Transfer leeks to bowl. Add eggs, matzo meal, thyme and salt, pepper and nutmeg to taste.

CNS Graphic

Shape mixture in flat cakes, using about 2 tablespoons mixture for each; if mixture won't hold together in cakes, stir in a little more matzo meal, by teaspoons. Put cakes on plate.

Heat oil in deep-fat fryer or heavy medium saucepan to 350 degrees to 360 degrees on a deep-fat thermometer, or until oil sizzles vigorously when a small piece of leek mixture is added.

Fry in batches until light golden brown, about 1 to 1½ minutes. Drain on paper towels. Keep fritters warm in low-temperature oven while frying remaining ones and until ready to serve. Serve with lemon wedges.

ROAST LAMB WITH GARLIC, ONIONS AND POTATOES

8 garlic cloves
1 (5½-pound) lamb shoulder, boned and tied in rolled roast (about 3½ pounds after boning), bones reserved if possible (see note)
Salt and pepper
8 medium baking potatoes
2 medium onions, sliced
⅔ cup water
1 large tomato, peeled, seeded and chopped
¼ cup chopped parsley

Note: Ask butcher to trim fat and skin from lamb, to bone it, roll it and tie it for you.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

Cut 12 very thin lengthwise slivers from garlic; chop remaining garlic. Pierce lamb with point of a sharp knife. With aid of knife, hold slit open and insert garlic sliver. Repeat piercing and inserting garlic slivers, spacing them fairly evenly. Sprinkle lamb with salt and pepper. Put lamb bones in center of large roasting pan and set roast on top of them.

Peel and quarter potatoes and put in pan around meat. Sprinkle potatoes with remaining chopped garlic, salt and pepper. Add sliced onions to potatoes. Add water to pan. Cover with foil. Bake 1 hour. Uncover and stir potatoes gently. Bake 30 minutes. Add tomato to juices, stir and roast until lamb is very tender and meat thermometer or instant-read thermometer registers 155 degrees to 160 degrees, about 1 hour, 10 minutes. During roasting, baste lamb and potatoes occasionally and add a few tablespoons water to pan if it becomes dry.

Let meat rest on cutting board 10 to 15 minutes before carving. Meanwhile, spoon juices over potatoes and keep warm in low oven. If bones are meaty, cut meat from bones; discard bones. Remove strings from meat. Carve into about ½-inch slices, using very sharp large knife. With small knife, remove excess fat, if desired, from slices.

Sprinkle potatoes and lamb with parsley and serve hot. Season juices to taste with salt and pepper; serve separately.

ZUCCHINI CASSEROLE WITH DILL

2 pounds medium zucchini
1 large onion
5 eggs
¼ cup chopped parsley
2 tablespoons snipped fresh dill
⅓ cup matzo meal
Salt and pepper
3 tablespoons olive oil

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

Grate zucchini and onion using large holes of grater. Put both in strainer and squeeze firmly to remove excess liquid. Transfer zucchini and onions to bowl. Add eggs, parsley, dill and matzo meal. Season quite generously with salt and pepper so mixture will not be bland. Mix well.

Put 2 tablespoons oil in shallow 8- to 8½-inch square baking dish. Put dish in oven briefly to heat oil. Add zucchini mixture to hot dish. Sprinkle with remaining oil. Bake 50 minutes to 1 hour or until set. Let stand about 5 minutes before serving. Serve hot.

Entertaining easy with brunch

By Carol Cutler
Copley News Service

There are all sorts of sound reasons that weekend brunches have become so popular.

First of all, the mornings, especially Sunday, tend to be lazy mornings — sleeping in and wading through the pounds of newspapers.

Since breakfast is eaten later than usual, no one is ready for lunch. Why not bridge the two — breakfast and lunch combined — and so was born the once-novel idea of brunch.

On the practical side, entertaining at home with a brunch party is one of the easiest and least expensive meals you can offer to guests. Meat and fish play relatively minor roles in the menu. The emphasis is more on eggs, cheese, breads and even pastas.

Unless you are the kind of person who wakes up bright-eyed and bouncy, prepare as much of the menu as possible the night before. Also set the table, check the bar and give the house a quick once-over. A last-minute touch-up to the bathroom should wait until morning.

Brunch can easily stretch into a long, lazy afternoon, which provides the perfect occasion for experimenting with unusual alcoholic and non-alcoholic beverages. Bloody Marys and Mimosas are popular choices, but instead of champagne, why not try a fruity white wine such as a Mosel from Germany or a Sylvaner from Alsace.

YOU MIGHT try a punch based on sparkling wine or some hot mulled wine on a chilly afternoon. If you can't decide whether your budget is beer poor or champagne rich, pour them both and enjoy a Black Velvet.

Fruit juice punches are very refreshing and pretty, especially when sliced fresh fruit garnishes each cup.

Bottled waters are a necessary item on today's bar list. Don't spend the extra money to buy flavored waters. Pass them up and squeeze in your own fresh lemon, lime or orange.

The main course of a brunch can reach into many directions. By staying away from meat and fish dishes, you will save a lot of money. Pancakes and waffles would be a great treat.

To make them really special, provide several unusual toppings, in addition to the requisite maple syrup (pure, please). Beat orange juice into softened butter; a few drops of orange liqueur adds extra kick. Stir maple syrup or raspberry jam into softened cream cheese. Fresh apple compote makes yet another distinctive garnish.

If you are adept at poaching eggs (really an easy matter), classic Eggs Benedict would bring praise. But even plain old scrambled eggs, with a twist, could star. Just before the eggs are completely cooked, stir in some mashed kiwi fruit. Your guests will be surprised how crisply the slightly acidic edge of kiwi cuts into the richness of the eggs. Even a wee bit of smoked salmon can highlight scrambled eggs.

QUICHES AND tarts are very reliable and substantial main courses. The fillings can star tomatoes, mushrooms, onions, asparagus and any variety of cheese. Has Quiche Lorraine been out of fashion long enough to bring it back? I hope so.

A Sunday afternoon also is a perfect time to rediscover why the soda fountain of yesteryear was such a popular institution. Offer ice cream sodas and milk shakes and watch your guests' eyes light up.

Whatever else you are planning for dessert, provide some fruit for those who would rather eat lightly at midday. Coffee should be plentiful and strong, of course, but don't forget your tea-drinking friends.

Without having to rush back to the office, you will find that guests linger. This is good catch-up time. Usually, we don't allot time for just talking. A brunch party provides the perfect opportunity, as well as starting off the day with a sparkling good time.

Inexpensive main courses that take only minutes to prepare can still be unusual. Spaghetti with Parsley Sauce is one such example. The pasta is delicately sauced, not overwhelmed.

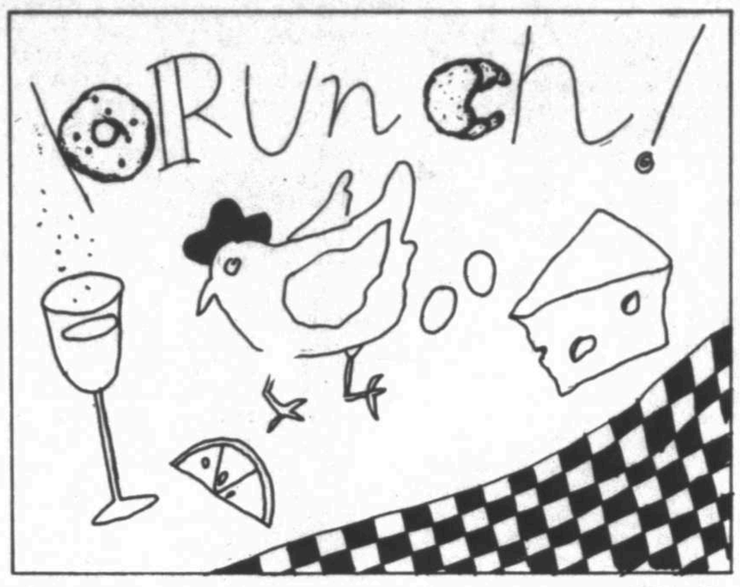

SPAGHETTI WITH PARSLEY SAUCE

3 tablespoons oil
1 tablespoon salt
1 pound spaghetti
½ cup butter
2 garlic cloves, minced
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese; extra cheese optional
Salt and pepper
3 cups roughly chopped parsley leaves

Bring about 4 quarts water to boil and add 2 tablespoons oil and salt. Add spaghetti slowly to maintain rolling boil and cook uncovered for about 7 minutes or until al dente. Drain at once and shake colander vigorously to extrude as much water as possible.

Meanwhile, melt butter with remaining tablespoon of oil in large, flat, preferably heavy skillet. Add garlic and simmer just a half minute while stirring with wooden spoon. Add cooked spaghetti, Parmesan cheese, a little salt and generous grinding of pepper.

Toss well to coat spaghetti strands with butter. Cover, reduce heat and reheat for 1 minute. Turn off heat, add parsley and toss well. Transfer to a deep, warmed serving bowl. Pass optional extra Parmesan cheese.

Pear muffins brighten brunch

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

These muffins get appetizing golden-brown, bumpy tops as they bake. Yogurt makes them light and moist; pears and lemon make them tangy-sweet.

PEAR YOGURT MUFFINS

2 cups all-purpose flour
⅓ cup sugar
1½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 slightly beaten egg
1 8-ounce carton plain yogurt
¼ cup milk
¼ cup cooking oil
1 teaspoon finely shredded lemon peel
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 8-ounce can pears, drained and diced

In medium bowl stir together flour, sugar, baking powder, baking soda and salt. In small bowl stir together egg, yogurt, milk, oil, lemon peel and lemon juice. Add to dry ingredients along with diced pears. Stir just until mixed. Fill lightly greased muffin cups ⅔ full. Bake at 400 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes, until golden brown.

Health-oriented foods manufactured

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are interested in "healthy" eating — and food manufacturers are responding with new foods, says Food Engineering magazine.

The magazine says the market for cereals that appeal to health-conscious adults now accounts for nearly 20 percent of the $6 billion ready-to-eat cereal category — and is growing. Other trends:

■ Rice bran is gaining popularity, with products such as cereals and cookies being introduced.

■ Several cheese manufacturers are formulating cheese substitutes using vegetable oils instead of dairy fats.

■ Low-fat mayonnaise now represents about 15 percent of the total $600 million mayonnaise market.

Food Engineering says the effort to reduce total fat in the diet has taken several different directions. According to the magazine, Americans are consuming less red meat, butter, whole milk and eggs, but are consuming more cheese, frozen desserts, yogurt, sour cream and oil.

Food Engineering serves food and beverage manufacturers in North America.

DEAR ABBY

Mother-in-law not welcomed

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have two married sons who move frequently in their work. Recently they both moved to the same city about 2,000 miles from us. As both sons had been asking us to visit them, we thought this would be a good time.

Van Buren

We called our sons before getting our tickets and were told they'd be waiting. Five minutes after I called the younger son, he called back to say his wife had told him that I wasn't welcome in their home! I was shocked. They've been married for 15 years and I had been in their home many times. (Once she had insisted that we stay two weeks when we'd planned to stay only one.)

I called and asked her what I had done to her. She said that 12 years ago, when they were visiting us, we had a family picture taken and she hadn't been asked to be in it. Abby, I always thought a family picture included the mother, father and the children they had raised.

At first we decided not to go because we didn't want to cause any trouble between our son and his wife, but the older son insisted we come anyway, so we went. He and his wife were wonderful, showing us the sights, great meals, etc. Our younger son took two days off work to be with us, brought the grandchildren out, and even took us to see his lovely new home one day when his wife was gone. (She's intelligent, college-educated and has good manners.)

When we got home, I wrote her a letter, apologizing for excluding her from the family pictures and telling her how proud I had always been of her, and hoped we could put this misunderstanding behind us. Well, my letter was returned marked "Refused."

Abby, what could I have done that I didn't do? I feel terrible and don't know what to do. — HEARTSICK

DEAR HEARTSICK: Consider this: Intelligent, college-educated people with good manners are not immune to physical and mental disorders.

Your daughter-in-law's sudden, hostile personality change could be a symptom of some kind of disorder. Tell your son that his wife should be examined physically and psychiatrically. It would be a kindness.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "Danny's Mom" in Knoxville, Tenn. It seems her son, Danny, had gone back to college at the age of 36 and, after seven years, he was graduating with honors at the age of 43. Danny said he owed it all to you because he read a letter in your column from a man who was debating about whether he should return to college for his degree. The man had written, "In seven years, I will be 45 years old." Your reply: "So how old will you be in seven years if you don't go back?"

Well, I can top Danny. After 14 years of working days and going to school nights — taking one or two courses at a time — on June 3, 1990, I will graduate magna cum laude from Elmira College with a degree in psychology.

I expect to have four grandchildren in my audience, and will be celebrating my 57th birthday in August.

Abby, keep right on telling people it's never too late to learn. — PATRICIA GOODRIDGE, ELMIRA, N.Y.

DEAR PATRICIA: Congratulations. If anybody can top you, I'm sure I'll hear about it.

Custom of having 'tea time' on rise

Associated Press

Americans have finally recovered from the Boston Tea Party and today tea drinking is at an all-time high in the United States.

Soft drinks are the most popular American drink, according to an article in the current issue of Country Living, but the custom of afternoon tea has enjoyed a revival.

The British enjoy two versions of tea time — "low tea" and "high tea." The traditional low tea is served at 4 p.m., using the host's loveliest and most ornate china pieces to display sweets and savories.

High tea, often thought of as the aristocratic relative of afternoon tea, is served late in the afternoon. The meal is typically informal, and a hot or cold savory dish is offered in addition to the sweet cakes, tarts, buns, scones, crumpets and tea sandwiches generally served.

Legend has it that tea originated in China when the emperor found leaves from a nearby tree in his cup of hot water. The emperor liked the taste of the accidental brew so much he and his court drank it often.

From China, tea was brought to Japan and other Far Eastern lands, soon becoming the drink of aristocracy.

Tea was originally brought to Europe by the Dutch. The British became involved through trade with China and India. Tea first arrived in New Amsterdam, present-day New York, in 1650.

Though there are hundreds of tea varieties, all are grown, harvested and spread out to dry in the same way. They are then rolled, at which stage the major differences emerge.

Teas fall into three categories, depending on whether they are left in their natural state or fermented. Green tea, which is not altered, is unfermented. Pale and mild, it usually is served with meals in the Orient.

Black teas are most familiar to Americans. They are moistened and oxidized, or fully fermented. The brew is dark, robust and tannic.

The last type is oolong, a semi-fermented tea, producing a light-brown brew.

Orange pekoe and souchong tea are not types but refer to the size of the tea leaves. Orange pekoe leaves are long while souchong leaves are rounder.

Tea leaves acquire character from the soil, location and weather conditions during cultivation. Most are blends of tea leaves. Certain teas are better for afternoon tea than others.

Some favorites for afternoon tea are Darjeeling, the "champagne of teas"; delicately scented Earl Grey, a blend of tea and natural oil of bergamot; full-bodied English Teatime, and Keemun, one of the finest black teas from China.

Any tea you choose must be correctly brewed. David Bigelow, president of R.C. Bigelow tea blenders, gave these instructions:

Start with cold tap water that has run freely for a minute or so, becoming fully aerated. Air adds body to the taste of tea.

In a kettle, bring water to a rolling boil. Meanwhile, warm up a porcelain or china teapot — never metal — with hot water rinsed through it.

Just as the water comes to a boil, pour it over the tea and allow it to brew for one minute, or slightly longer if you like your tea stronger.

If you have selected an herb tea allow it to brew for at least three minutes or you could end up drinking tinted water with little flavor.

Whole-wheat loaves delicious, healthy

By Nancy Byal

Associated Press

Low-fat foods don't come much leaner or fuller in flavor than these little whole-wheat loaves that are virtually fat- and cholesterol-free. The nutty, whole grain flavor goes great with soups, stews and salads. Wrap and freeze unused baguettes the same day you bake. Store up to 8 months.

FAT-FREE BAGUETTES

2½ to 3 cups all-purpose flour
2 packages active dry yeast
1 tablespoon sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
2 cups warm water (120 to 130 degrees F)
2 cups whole-wheat flour
1 slightly beaten egg white
1 tablespoon water

In large mixer bowl stir together 2 cups all-purpose flour, yeast, sugar and salt. Add warm water. Beat with electric mixer at low speed for ½ minute, scraping sides of bowl constantly. Beat 3 minutes at high speed. Using spoon, stir in whole-wheat flour and as much of remaining all-purpose flour as you can.

Turn out onto lightly floured surface. Knead in enough of remaining all-purpose flour to make a stiff dough that is smooth and elastic (8 to 10 minutes). Shape into ball. Place in lightly greased bowl; turn once to grease surface. Cover and let rise in warm place until double (1 to 1¼ hours).

Punch dough down; turn out onto lightly floured surface. Divide dough in thirds. Cover; let rest 10 minutes. Roll each third into 12x10-inch rectangle. Roll up tightly from long side; seal well. Taper ends. Place, seam side down, on greased baking sheet. Brush with mixture of egg white and water.

Cover and let rise until nearly double (30 to 45 minutes). With sharp knife, make three diagonal cuts about ¼-inch deep across tops of loaves. Bake at 450 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes or until done. Serve same day or freeze.

Low-fat cooking requires nutritional re-education

NEW YORK (AP) — Puritan Oil's American Mealtime Survey, a poll of 1,000 family cooks, shows that while Americans want to eat healthier, they haven't figured out how to do it.

When asked to rank five foods in order of cholesterol content, not one of the 1,000 family cooks could do it correctly, according to the survey.

The survey also found that while 87 percent of family chefs claim that they try to prepare meals low in saturated fat and cholesterol, 52 percent actually cook meals that contain dishes higher in saturated fat and cholesterol than is recommended by the National Cholesterol Education Program.

"Family cooks are suffering from information overload," says Tom Gougeon, Puritan Oil's manager of nutrition research. "The glut of information on cholesterol — and to a lesser extent saturated fat — is simply staggering."

The National Cholesterol Education Program and the American Heart Association recommend a well-balanced diet for adults that contains no more than 30 percent of total calories from fat, including less than 10 percent of total calories from saturated fat and less than 10 percent from polyunsaturated fat; 15 percent of total calories from protein; 55 percent of total calories from carbohydrates.

According to Puritan Oil, to stay within the guidelines of 30 percent of calories from fat, the average man who consumes 2,400 calories a day can consume 80 grams of fat including 27 grams of saturated fat. The average woman who consumes 1,800 calories each day can consume 60 grams of fat including 20 grams of saturated fat.

To meet these guidelines, it is recommended that consumers choose foods such as lean beef, poultry without the skin, fish, low-fat dairy products, whole-grain breads and cereals, vegetables and fruits.

The following low-fat recipe for Beef-Mushroom Stir-Fry was developed by Puritan Oil:

BEEF-MUSHROOM STIR-FRY

¾ pound beef top round steak
⅓ cup water
3 tablespoons reduced sodium soy sauce
2 teaspoons cornstarch
½ teaspoon instant beef bouillon granules
1 tablespoon oil
5 green onions with tops, sliced (1 cup)
1 sweet red or green bell pepper, sliced
1 clove garlic, minced
1½ cups sliced fresh mushrooms
1 8-ounce can water chestnuts, drained
1 6-ounce package frozen snow peas, thawed
1 tablespoon oil
2 cups hot cooked rice

Trim excess fat from meat; partially freeze meat. Cut meat diagonally across grain into thin strips. Combine ⅓ cup water, soy sauce, cornstarch and bouillon granules; set aside.

Heat 1 tablespoon oil in large skillet or wok. Add onions, pepper and garlic; stir fry for 1½ to 2 minutes. Remove from skillet. Add mushrooms, water chestnuts and snow peas; stir-fry for 3 to 4 minutes. Remove vegetables.

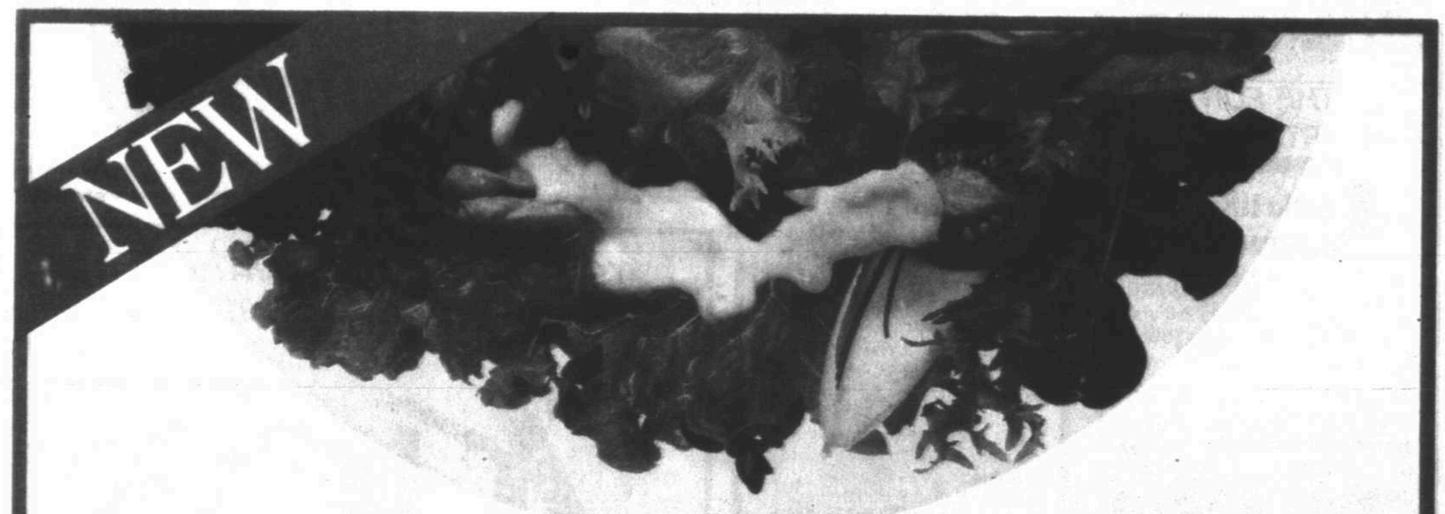

Add remaining 1 tablespoon oil to skillet. Add beef and stir-fry for 2 minutes. Add soy mixture to meat; cook until bubbly.

Return vegetables to skillet; toss to coat. Cook, covered, 1 minute or until heated through. Serve over rice. Makes 4 servings.

Chaps hold off foes to win own tourney

The Midland College Chaparrals staved off a steady closing charge by the San Jacinto Gators and escaped their own 54-hole Midland College Invitational golf tournament with a four-stroke victory, Tuesday.

MC totaled 880 strokes to San Jacinto's 884 in claiming the top prize at Green Tree Country Club.

The Gators, led by first-place medalist Jamey Cherry who carded a two-under-par 70 over the final 18 holes, closed from what had been a seven-stroke gap at the start of the round.

Cherry finished regulation play tied at even par 216 with Mike Felker of Bossier Parish Community College, but took top honors after a one-hole playoff.

"He just caught a bad break," Cherry said of Felker's second shot of the playoff, a shot that fell behind a tree and denied him the par that Cherry achieved.

"I got a little nervous, but I just stuck with it," Cherry added.

Just missing the playoff were MC's Mark Kochan and San Jacinto's Lance Matthews. Each finished at 217 and shared third place.

Officials try to fill in schedule

Baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — Today, a place might be found for some missing baseball games.

A decision is likely on the regular season, and it is expected the schedule will be restored to 162 games. Because opening day was delayed a week by the lockout, teams were assured of just 158.

"The issue is not totally resolved," Commissioner Fay Vincent said Tuesday. "They're still working on it."

Baseball would prefer to add games at the end of the season. Other choices include playing doubleheaders or filling open dates.

"I guess that would be ideal," Vincent said of extending the season. "It would be so much easier to transpose the week. It would be crisp and clean."

If games were added in October, it would push back the playoffs and World Series. CBS holds the rights for the postseason and must give its approval before that change can be made.

"Baseball initiated discussions with us yesterday on giving consideration to moving the postseason back," Jeremy Handelman, vice president of program planning at CBS Sports, said. "We have not established a position, we're examining it.

"We're in a business partnership with baseball, we have a collective interest here," Handelman said. "I can appreciate from a fan's standpoint that what happens in October is not an immediate concern. But there are numerous things that are affected within CBS."

Meanwhile, the exhibition schedule has been revised. The spring season had been set the go through April 1 — the day before the original Opening Day — but was changed when openers were delayed until April 9.

Spring training began Tuesday and exhibition games start March 26. All teams will play at least 13 times and the Chicago Cubs will play the most, 16. Some split-squad and "B" games are being added daily.

But Memphis, Des Moines and some other cities that were to play host to big-league exhibition games lost them. Teams that had been scheduled to play on the road on their way to opening day now will stay longer in Florida and Arizona.

Las Vegas, Jacksonville, Fla., Oklahoma City, Columbus and Greenville, S.C., also were among cities that lost exhibitions.

Seattle and San Diego were to play March 30 in Las Vegas, home of the Padres' Triple-A team. Instead, the clubs will meet that day at the Padres' spring training home in Yuma, Ariz. Tickets never went on sale in Las Vegas for that game as officials waited to see whether it would be played.

Louisville and Washington, D.C., will retain the exhibition games that had been scheduled. Baltimore and St. Louis will play at RFK Stadium, home of the old Washington Senators, on April 7 rather than March 31, and on April 8 at Louisville, home of the Cardinals' Triple-A team. A Kansas City-Baltimore exhibition set for April 1 in Washington was canceled.

Hitters may turn tables this spring

Associated Press

The pitchers are usually ahead of the hitters in spring training at this point.

That may not be the case this season as major league baseball teams finally get into full swing this week.

"We're just going to have to see what kind of shape the pitchers are in and play it by ear," pitching coach Mark Wiley of the Cleveland Indians said. "It's not going to be easy."

In the wake of the 32-day lockout, major leaguers settled into spring training camps on Tuesday and teams began the race to get ready for opening day on April 9.

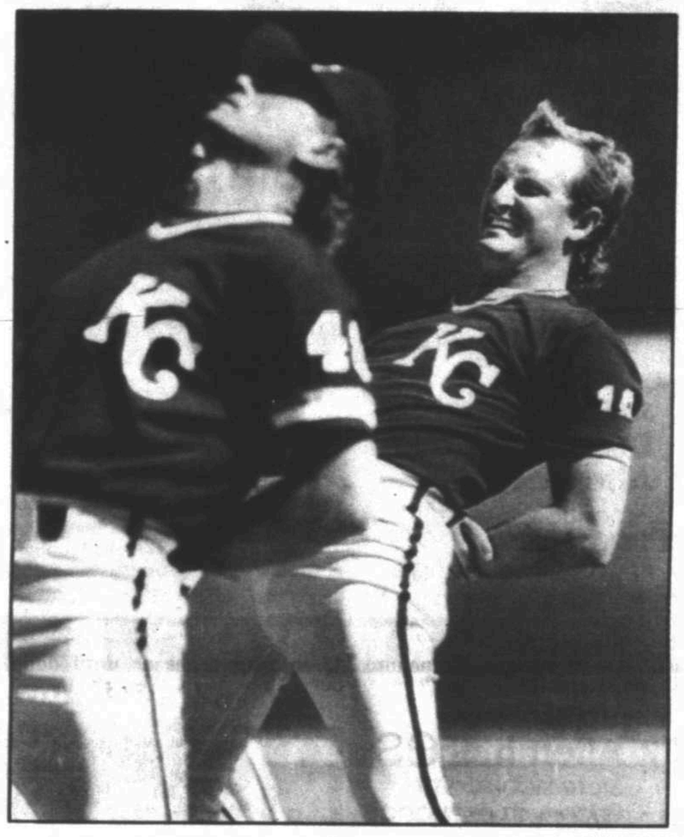

With most of spring training wiped out by the owners' lockout, conditioning was the foremost consideration for most teams.

Pitchers and catchers normally report several days before the rest of the team to begin the spring training process. This year, of course, they're starting dead even with everyone else because of the lockout.

In general, the teams acknowledged that their biggest conditioning concern is pitchers.

"It's obvious they've all been throwing," Atlanta pitching coach Bruce Dal Canton after observing his pitchers each throw 10 minutes of batting practice. "Their breaking balls were crisp and their control was good. We just have to determine how far along they are."

He said the starters all would get at least three or four starts in camp, and by opening day should be able to be in condition to go five or six innings.

"Getting the extra week makes a big difference. If opening day were the second, they would be only able to go three, four innings at the most."

The teams have been warned to expect a fast-paced spring practice.

"Hitters are going to have to go right into the batting cage against live pitching, whether they want to or not," Cleveland manager John McNamara said. "It's going to take a lot of work with a lot of long days."

The owners and players agreed to a new contract in the wee hours Monday after months of haggling. The result pushed back opening day a week, with rosters expanded to 27 players for the first three weeks to account for the lack of training for pitchers. Scoring rules also were altered for that period so that starting pitchers can earn a victory by pitching three innings instead of five.

The layoff didn't hurt players on the Atlanta Braves, according to manager Russ Nixon.

"Everybody looks in good shape," he said. "It makes me feel good. They're ready to play. They've been working at home, there's no doubt about it.

"This is the way it should have been all along. It's not like coming in Feb. 15. The guys are in good shape, although I figured most would be. They had a lot of time to get it together."

The opening of training camps did not exactly signal a rush back to work by the players, though. Scattered returns were reported by several teams, with many players still out.

With such a short time to get his team's already suspect pitching ready, New York Yankees manager Bucky Dent was concerned that only one projected starter, Greg Cadaret, had arrived.

"I'm a little disappointed about the pitchers, but not as upset as I

Tar Heels deal with Madden injury

NCAA Midwest

DALLAS (AP) — The Sweet 16 has turned sour for North Carolina.

The Tar Heels' Kevin Madden, who hit all 10 of his field goal attempts in the NCAA basketball tournament subregionals in Austin, Texas, injured a knee in practice and is out for the rest of the tournament.

North Carolina (21-12) is making its 10th straight appearance in the Round of 16 and faces Arkansas (28-4) in Thursday's NCAA Midwest Regional semifinal opener at Reunion Arena. Texas (23-8) meets Xavier of Ohio (28-4) in the second game.

Madden, a 6-foot-6 senior from Staunton, Va., tore the anterior cruciate in his right knee while driving past another player on a one-on-one drill.

Madden, averaging 10.1 points and 4.7 rebounds, scored 12 points against Southwest Missouri State and 14 against Oklahoma.

North Carolina coach Dean Smith said the loss of Madden will change the Tar Heels' look.

"Of course, we're extremely disappointed that Kevin will be out," Smith said. "We've been using Kevin as a big guard-small forward. That means Rick Fox ... will be at small forward, and then (Henrik) Rodl will give Fox some rest.

"Then Rodl, Hubert Davis and Jeff Denny will see more action in Kevin's spot," Smith added. "It changes the look of our team a great deal."

Madden will accompany the team to Dallas, Smith said.

"I think we're all just under a shock right now. Kevin's handled it well. ... He wants to be with us," the coach said.

"They put a form of a cast on so he can't hurt himself anymore and they'll operate as soon as our season is over because he wanted to be with the team."

Clemson coach Cliff Ellis said the Tar Heels' loss of Madden will "takes away some team chemistry."

"I think it will affect them from a chemistry standpoint, but they play a lot of people anyway," said Ellis, whose Tigers face Connecticut in the East Regional.

"I think from an emotional standpoint I'm sure Kevin will get his team fired up. Any time you see one of you own hurt and you're a family, sometimes players respond to that in a positive way."

To add to North Carolina's woes, it'll be like a home game for the Arkansas Razorbacks, and North Carolina knows it.

Irsay has no clue to balky star

Football

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indianapolis general manager Jim Irsay says he's had no serious contract discussion with Eric Dickerson since July, and isn't sure what the star running back wants.

Dickerson, mainly through occasional interviews, has hinted he wants a renegotiated contract for more money, a trade or even retirement.

"There has been obviously a lot of different signals," Irsay said Tuesday, a day after an Indianapolis television station aired an interview in which Dickerson said he would rather quit the NFL than stay in Indianapolis.

"I hope Eric can come back with a clear mind and we can get to the bottom of this," Irsay said. "It's hard to put a finger on what it is he wants. We're trying to be patient."

In January, Dickerson told an Atlanta newspaper he plans to report to the Colts' training camp this summer although there was a chance he wouldn't. A perennial Pro Bowl running back, Dickerson came to the Colts after a dispute with the Los Angeles Rams in 1987 — one of the biggest swaps in NFL history. He has one year left on his current contract, and Irsay said the Colts expect him to honor it.

"When he came here, we had many discussions. With his past history with the Rams, we had a concern just for this reason. We made it very clear in the wording of the contract that gives us tremendous protection. There would be tremendous penalties, in excess of seven figures, if he were not here."

Irsay said the Colts' plans for the NFL draft this spring would not be affected by the uncertainty surrounding Dickerson, who first dropped hints of retirement on a television talk show last fall.

"We can be a very good team" without Dickerson, Irsay said. "Albert Bently gives us an individual who is better than a majority of backs in the league.

"You have to take the best players available (in the draft). We're not in a position where we're definitely looking for a running back."

Dickerson ran for 1,311 yards, third-best in the NFL, despite a nagging hamstring injury. He said one reason for his decision was the inability of the offensive line to protect him.

"I mean, it's like taking a revolver and putting a bullet in it and spinning it around and sticking it to my head, and sooner or later a bullet is going to come out and kill me.

Kochan added a 73 Tuesday while Matthews fashioned a solid 71 over the nine-hole West and North courses at Green Tree.

MC's Dean Robertson, who was two under and atop the field along with Robert Joyner of New Mexico Military Academy after the first 36 holes, dropped into a tie for fourth place with a 76 Tuesday and a final 218 total.

Also in at 218 was Jeff Peck of Grayson College. Peck's 69 was the best score over the final round. It lifted him on to the leader board from the middle of the pack.

Joyner fell back to 219 with his final 77, a total aided by a birdie pitch from sand on the last hole.

"I guess that's as good a way to finish it off as any," he said after finishing alone in fifth place.

The Chaps other contributors were Mark King, whose last round 77 gave him 220 and sixth place for the invitational, and Brad Wells and Mike Johnson who tallied 230 and 231, respectively.

"This was truly a team effort," said Chap golf coach Delnor Poss. "Mark (Kochan) really came through for us, and yesterday (Monday) the others played the way we should be playing all the time.

"I'm really proud of our players. Of course we were due to play better after Florida," Poss referred to the Chaps' last outing, a disappointing 11th-place effort at the West Florida Invitational.

Toronto manager Cito Gaston said his main concern was keeping everyone healthy.

"There's not much you can do to change the routine, not many things you can do differently than if you've been here all along," he said. "The main thing is we just don't want to get anybody hurt. You rush guys too much, and you'll wind up with two or three guys on the DL."

Pirates pitching coach Ray Miller, who maps his pitchers' throwing routine weeks in advance, said, "The starting pitchers aren't a problem because you get them on a regular schedule.

"The biggest problem and biggest unknown is the bullpen, because it takes a long time to build their arms up to where they can throw in the bullpen two or three times a game, then come in and pitch."

Bobcats drop Rebs

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — San Angelo pitcher Ethan Lopez allowed but three hits and a single earned run as the Bobcats took Midland Lee by surprise here Tuesday, 4-3.

The loss gives the Rebels a 1-2 record in District 4-5A, and dropped their overall slate to 6-6. Meanwhile, the Bobcats made a move into a three-way tie for third place with Midland High and Abilene High. All three are 1-1 in district play, while Odessa High brings up the rear at 0-3. Odessa Permian leads the league at 3-0, and Abilene Cooper is in second place with a 2-1 4-5A mark.

Lee hurler Jeff Johnston took a tough road loss to send his record to 4-3. The Rebels are back in district action Saturday, when they host Abilene High at 2 p.m. on the Lee diamond.

Bulldogs stay sharp with win

Staff Report

BIG SPRING — Midland High used is District 4-5A baseball open date to keep its edge honed, as the Bulldogs defeated Big Spring 4-3 in non-district play here Tuesday.

The 'Dogs were behind 5-4 going into the top of the seventh, but scored two runs for the come-from-behind win. James Madrid earned credit for the win as he entered in relief in the sixth. Greg Galvan toosed the majority of the game for MHS, leaving after five innings with four hits and five earned runs on his pitching line.

MHS will return to 4-5A play Saturday, when the Bulldogs travel to Abilene for a critical confrontation with second-place Abilene Cooper. MHS is 1-1 in loop play and 10-6 overall, while the Cougars are 2-1 and 8-4.

King gets career-high 24 for streaking Chicago

Associated Press

While Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was having his number retired in Los Angeles, David Robinson was putting on a Hall of Fame performance in Seattle.

Robinson scored 39 points, 20 in the fourth quarter, and had 10 rebounds and seven blocked shots as the San Antonio Spurs routed the SuperSonics 128-106 Tuesday night.

It was the second victory in two nights for the Spurs, and Robinson scored 73 points in the wins over Phoenix and Seattle. Against the Sonics, he made 13 of 17 shots and all 13 free throws.

"The people of Phoenix and Seattle got a real treat," San Antonio coach Larry Brown said. "Playing against good athletic teams like these brings out the best in him."

Lakers 109, Hornets 97

Byron Scott scored 21 points for Los Angeles, which clinched a playoff berth and celebrated the retirement of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's uniform number.

Despite the absense of All-Star forward James Worthy because of back spasms, the Lakers extended their record against the second-year Hornets to 6-0 and clinched a playoff berth for the 14th year in a row. The Lakers had actually gotten in earlier in the evening when Portland beat Houston.

Bulls 122, Bullets 97

Scottie Pippen scored 10 of his 24 points during a third-quarter barrage and Stacey King came off the bench to score a career-high 24 points for Chicago. King also had three blocked shots and three steals.

Michael Jordan, the NBA's leading scorer, had 21 points, only the eighth time in 63 games that he failed to lead the Bulls in scoring.

Pistons 117, Bucks 96

James Edwards scored 21 points and Detroit took command early to extend its second-longest winning streak ever to 12 games, two short of the mark set in March 1980.

Trail Blazers 120, Rockets 110

Clyde Drexler scored eight of his season-high 41 points in the final three minutes, leading Portland to a club-record 10th straight victory.

Magic 121, Knicks 118

Scott Skiles set or matched career highs in three categories, Nick Anderson scored a career high with 29 points and Michael Ansley had all 16 of his points in the fourth quarter as Orlando broke a nine-game losing streak.

Pacers 112, Heat 98

Detlef Schrempf scored 20 of his career-high 29 points in the first half as Indiana took a huge lead early and snapped a five-game losing streak.

Sparked by a 3-point basket and two free throws by Chuck Person, who scored 25 points, the Pacers ended the first quarter with a 15-3 spurt that put them up 32-19.

Warriors 105, Timberwolves 101

Nuggets 119, Clippers 112

Alex English scored 28 points and had two key assists in the final quarter.

Walter Davis and Michael Adams had 24 points each and Joe Barry Carroll had 16 points, five blocked shots and 10 rebounds for Denver.

NBA Roundup

Lakers retire No. 33

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who holds a host of NBA records, surely must be approaching some sort of record for ceremonies.

Abdul-Jabbar, who retired last year, was honored Tuesday night by the Lakers, who retired his No. 33.

He recently was in a similar ceremony at UCLA, where his 33 and Bill Walton's 32 were retired.

Last season, Abdul-Jabbar was honored in each NBA city on his "farewell tour."

"I had almost overdosed on ceremonies last year," he recalled. "But it's good to come back for one after a break. Seeing my number hanging up there (in the Forum) will be a visual confirmation of everything that's happened in my career."

A sellout crowd of 17,505 gave Abdul-Jabbar a 2½-minute ovation before a plaque with a likeness of his uniform was unveiled on the arena's north wall.

"We have all grown together over the years," he told the crowd. "And through all the joys we shared and the tough moments, you people have shown me that all the things I've done were the right things."

There will be more confirmation to come. The Milwaukee Bucks, who won the NBA title in 1971 while Abdul-Jabbar was their center, plan to retire his No. 33 Bucks jersey next season in conjunction with the 20th anniversary of their only league championship.

Down the road a little, the Hall of Fame awaits.

Abdul-Jabbar, speaking Tuesday afternoon about the tribute he was to receive that evening, took the opportunity to pay tribute to some others.

"You don't get to be held in that kind of esteem unless you've been on good teams," he said. "I felt like I was always particularly vulnerable, the most obvious player, along with Magic Johnson, for other teams to focus on. I got a lot of support from all my teammates, who sometimes didn't get much recognition of their own.

"I would read sometimes where I did it all. That's certainly not true."

Abdul-Jabbar said he also was fortunate to have played with two of the greatest guards ever in the NBA.

Panthers widen lead

Staff Report

ABILENE — Odessa Permian maintained its stranglehold on the top spot in the District 4-5A baseball race, as the Panthers pounded out nine hits in a 7-3 win over Abilene High Tuesday at the AHS field.

Mojo hurler Breech Nolen moved his season record to 5-1 with the complete-game outing, while Permian hitters Arvey Villa and Alan Wyles hit for extra bases. Villa claimed a double while Wyles hit a triple in the win.

The Panthers are undefeated in 4-5A with a 3-0 district record, and are 8-2-1 overall. The Eagles fell to 1-1 in loop action with the loss, and are 4-4 for the season. AHS moved into a three-way third place tie with Midland High, which did not a 4-5A game Tuesday but beat Big Spring 6-5, and San Angelo, a 4-3 winner over Midland Lee Tuesday.

Lobos reach 3rd straight quarterfinal

Associated Press

Darwyn Alexander's streak is over. As a result, New Mexico's is still alive.

Alexander was fouled with 23 seconds left in a second-round National Invitation Tournament dogfight with New Mexico. With the score tied 88-88, it looked like money in the bank when the Cowboys' 83 percent foul shooter stepped to the line having made 24 in a row.

"If I had to pick one player to shoot a free throw with the game on the line, it would be Darwyn Alexander," Oklahoma State coach Leonard Hamilton said.

Not this time. Alexander missed the front end of the 1-and-1 and New Mexico's 7-foot-2 Luc Longley came down with the rebound. The Lobos worked the clock down to five seconds and Rob Robbins put up an off-balance 17-footer that was short, his only miss of the night.

Longley also grabbed that rebound — his 12th of the game but first at the offensive end — and finger-rolled it home for just his second basket of the game. The 90-88 victory sends New Mexico to the NIT quarterfinals for the third year in a row. The Lobos are appearing in a record seventh straight NIT.

Hawaii 84, Long Beach St. 79

Terry Houston scored 27 points and grabbed 10 rebounds for Hawaii, which was able to control the tempo in the second half against the run-and-press 49ers, who led 48-43 at halftime.

DePaul 61, Cincinnati 59

Stephen Howard's bank shot with two seconds left won the game for DePaul. David Booth led the Blue Demons with 18 points, Kevin Holland added 15 and Howard had 13. Andre Tate paced Cincinnati with 17, Levertis Robinson had 16 and Louis Banks 15.

The game was played in DePaul's on-campus Alumni Hall, where the Blue Demons won 42 consecutive games before moving to the suburban Rosemont Horizon in 1980.

St. Louis 58, Wis.-Green Bay 54

Anthony Bonner had 18 points and 17 rebounds and the Billikens rallied from an eight-point deficit in the second half. Don Oberbrunner had 19 points for Wisconsin-Green Bay (24-8).

Cooper's only 4-5A loss came at the hands of Abilene High in the district opener. The Eagles upset the Coogs 2-1, but Cooper has won two consecutive games since.

Special Olympian bowlers earn praise

They don't ask for much. Just that we make the lanes and equipment available to them.

They never complain about how hot or cold it is in the bowling center. They just have fun.

They come in large groups, all of whom are the most-courteous and friendliest of people.

So well-mannered are they that they would do any parent proud.

Velasco

The group I speak of is the Special Olympics. A class organization of truly special people. Those in Sepcial Olympics compete with the greatest of intensity, yet keep competition in its proper perspective.

What perhaps is most enjoyable is that each of them displays the true meaning of sportsmanship. Cheering and helping each other along, they clearly send a message from which everyone can benefit. The message being that sports are played for fun — and fun only. If a Special Olympics bowler does not knock all the pins down, he or she knows tomorrow will still come. And tomorrow will bring with it another chance to try and knock those pins down again.

So to all the coaches and organizers of the Special Olympics, please accept congratulations for the fine job you do.

Opening lead: Eight of ◇

"I never hold any cards," is the standard lament of bridge players the world over. Here's a case where South could legitimately complain of too good a hand.

Even dyed-in-the-wool four-card majorites would raise to two spades with the North hand. With three excellent trumps and a ruffing value, the more encouraging raise should clearly be preferred over a dampening one no trump. South's leap to game was automatic.

West led the eight of diamonds and East's jack was captured by declarer's ace. After drawing two rounds of trumps, ending in dummy, declarer tried the club finesse. West's king won and two diamond tricks were banked by the defense. East shifted to the jack of hearts and declarer's only remaining decision was to choose which defender won the setting trick in hearts.

South's problem was his hand had one too many court cards! Change the queen of clubs to an insignificant spot and declarer would surely have found the winning line.

After taking the first trick with the ace of diamonds, declarer should test trumps by cashing the ace from hand. Should either defender show out there is no recourse other than the club finesse. But when both defenders follow, declarer can claim the contract as long as clubs are no worse than 4-2.

Next, South cashes the ace of clubs and continues with the queen to West's king. Let's presume the defenders then take their two diamond tricks and, as before, East shifts to the jack of hearts. Declarer wins in dummy, ruffs a club high, returns to the table with a trump and ruffs another club to set up a long club in dummy. Declarer can get back to the board with a trump to discard his losing heart on the established club and claim his contract.

Singer injured in bus-truck accident

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — Singer Gloria Estefan was in stable condition today after suffering a broken vertebra when a truck ran into her band's bus on a snow-covered highway in the Pocono Mountains, authorities said.

"The potential is that she'll be fine," Dr. William Pfeifer, a trauma surgeon at Community Medical Center, said Tuesday.

He refused to say if surgery was planned.

Among the well-wishers who called the hospital were Dick Clark of "American Bandstand" fame, and a representative from the White House, where Miss Estefan and her husband met Monday with President Bush to discuss her anti-drug work.

Miss Estefan, the 32-year-old star of the pop group Miami Sound Machine, was listed in stable condition early today at the hospital.

Five other people and the truck driver were treated at the hospital and four were later released. They included the singer's husband, Emilio Estefan Jr., 37, who suffered head and hand injuries, and their 9-year-old son, Nayib, who suffered a neck injury.

Miss Estefan's personal assistant, Barbara Arencibia, 25, was in stable condition with a back injury, the hospital said.

The group was headed to Syracuse, N.Y., to join the rest of the band for a Tuesday night concert. The accident occurred about noon on westbound Interstate 380 near Tobyhanna in eastern Pennsylvania.

"The road was wet and snow-covered," said Trooper Joseph Kearney, the second officer on the scene. "It was light snow at that time and slippery. Traffic had stopped.

"He (the truck driver) came up on them and was unable to stop. ... He was unable to stop and he should have been. That's the bottom line."

Kearney said the truck driver, identified as Heraldo E. Samuels of Scarboro, Ontario, was cited for driving at an unsafe speed.

The Estefans' driver, Ron Jones, said he had stopped on the highway when a tractor-trailer jackknifed in the snow and a truck and bus stopped behind it. Jones said the bus was pushed into the truck when another truck rammed it from behind.

Rescue workers stand between a bus and truck involved in a crash on a snow-covered highway in Tobyhanna, Pa., Tuesday. Singer Gloria Estefan and six other people were injured in the incident.

Miss Estefan was asleep on a couch and was thrown to the floor by the impact, said Jones, who suffered cuts and bruises.

Constant phone calls about Miss Estefan kept a receptionist busy in the hospital's lobby, while deliverymen dropped off flowers and fans left cards at the desk.

Miss Estefan was nominated in February for best pop vocal performance by a female for the single "Don't Wanna Lose You" in the Grammy awards.

Her new album, "Cuts Both Ways," a collection of dance songs and ballads, was 26th on the Cashbox magazine pop chart last week.

For 10 years, she and Miami Sound Machine have attracted listeners worldwide with the sounds of salsa, samba and conga. Their hit singles include "Rhythm Is Gonna Get You" and the No. 1 "Anything for You."

Miss Estefan was a baby when her family fled from Cuba in 1962. She grew up Glorita Fajardo, the shy daughter of a former bodyguard for the wife of deposed Cuban dictator Fulgencio Batista.

She attended the University of Miami, where she met Emilio Estefan Jr. in 1974. Miami Sound Machine was formed in 1975 under his direction and played Hispanic music as well as Top 40 songs in small halls in Miami.

SPRINGFIELD, Va. (AP) — Bill McAda, a veteran Texas journalist who served as director of news and information for the Federal Emergency Management Agency, died of cancer Monday at his Virginia home. He was 57.

McAda was chief spokesman for FEMA at major disasters, including last year's earthquake in San Francisco and Hurricane Hugo after the storm devastated a vast area of South Carolina last fall.

Before joining FEMA's staff at their Denton office in 1977, McAda worked for The Dallas Morning News, the Dallas Times Herald and D Magazine in Dallas.

He won the Texas Headliners award in 1969 for coverage of the moon landing. McAda worked as night city editor at The Dallas Morning News and was assistant city editor, science writer and chief of the rewrite desk at the Times Herald.

In addition to coverage of the moon landing, McAda also worked on coverage of the 1966 University of Texas sniper attack, the prosecution of Jack Ruby and Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot's peace efforts in 1969 and 1970 during the Vietnam War.

McAda was a native of Gladewater and attended East Texas State University.

May contracts open higher

Staff and Wire Report

The May contract for delivery of West Texas Intermediate opened on a bullish note as the April contract expired on a down note.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, May contracts were up 11 cents to $19.88 in mid-morning trading. The contract had lost 19 cents Tuesday.

The April contract expired with a 32 cent loss, closing at $19.28 after falling as low as $19.07.

Analysts said a late round of arbitrage buying helped lift the contract off its lows on the final day of trading before it expired.

The fall was enough to prompt some crude purchasers, such as Marathon and Texaco, to lower their posted price 25 cents to $18.75. Permian Corp., however, remains at $19.

Gasoline futures rebounded Tuesday while crude oil prices continued to sag, pressured by concern about short-term plentiful supplies and slowing demand.

Dollar up as pound slides

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against most major foreign currencies in early European trading today, while the British pound plummeted on the heels of Tuesday's budget.

Exchange Rates

- 1.7025 West German marks
- 1.5199 Swiss francs
- 5.7477 French francs
- 1.9207 Dutch guilders
- 1,256.75 Italian lire
- 1.1783 Canadian dollars

Gold prices were sharply lower, falling by as much as $9 an ounce, the lowest level since late last year.

The Bank of England reportedly intervened to stop the pound's slide, which began minutes after foreign exchange markets opened in London.

Currency dealers said Chancellor of the Exchequer John Major's first budget, delivered to Parliament on Tuesday, was too soft on inflation and increased pressure for another rise in interest rates.

The dollar gained support from several international events, dealers said, including concerns about Soviet troop movements along the Lithuanian border and fears that the cost of German unification will be far greater than expected.

The dollar was also perked up by Tuesday's release of a relatively good U.S. trade report for January, traders said.

Markets were closed in Tokyo for Spring Equinox Day, a national holiday. In London, the dollar was quoted at 154.25 Japanese yen, compared with 153.65 at Tuesday's close in Tokyo.

In London, the dollar strengthened against the British pound, and was quoted at $1.5950, compared with $1.6105 late Tuesday.

Bullion dealers said the rising dollar was helping to fuel gold sales, although many linked the metal's weakness to disinterest in buying.

Gold was down $8.10 a troy ounce in London and $9.25 in Zurich.

The metal in London at a bid price of $393.70, down from $398 bid late Tuesday. At midmorning, the city's major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $389.90.

Silver fell in London to a bid price of $5.05 a troy ounce, from Tuesday's $5.09.

Stock market turns lower

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. stock market showed resilience but finished lower Tuesday in the face of negative economic reports and another steep tumble on the Tokyo exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 16.89 points to 2,738.74.

Declining issues outnumbered advancing ones by about 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 892 down, 598 up and 495 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board totaled 177.32 million shares, up from 142.30 million in Monday's session.

After shrugging off negative economic news to rise early in the session, stocks turned lower in the afternoon and lost most of the ground just before the close. Wall Street has posted an impressive advance in recent weeks.

"It was just an overbought market that got a little bit ahead of itself," said Charles Jensen, an analyst at MKI Securities Corp.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Oil imports fuel surge in trade deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit widened sharply to $9.3 billion in January as record demand for foreign oil offset an all-time high in sales of American products overseas, the government reported Tuesday.

The January gap between imports and exports was 20.5 percent larger than December's $7.7 billion deficit, which had been the best monthly showing in five years.

Financial advisor pleads guilty

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — An adviser to prominent takeover specialists of the 1980s pleaded guilty to stealing $1 million from his clients and evading and falsifying state income taxes.

Donald C. Carter, 41, chairman of The Carter Organization, Inc., waived indictment and pleaded guilty Tuesday in state Supreme Court in Manhattan to grand larceny and filing a false and fradulent personal income tax return.

Ailing S&LS may get tax dollars before failing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Savings and loan regulators are considering a controversial program that would pump taxpayer dollars into ailing thrift institutions before they fail.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. on Tuesday chose eight states whose institutions would be eligible for open thrift assistance, but postponed until next week approval of the program itself.

The states, picked because they are economically depressed, are: Alaska, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas.

Greyhound credit rating slips

DALLAS (AP) — The credit rating of Greyhound Lines Inc. dropped a notch as contract talks remained stalled in the strike of the nation's only intercity busline.

Citing the nearly three-week drivers strike and a $380 million debt from a 1987 leveraged buyout, Wall Street's premier bond rating company Tuesday downgraded the company's credit from B to B-.

Talks, which broke off over the weekend in Arizona, have not been rescheduled.

"We wish they would be. The company walked away from the table about 10 a.m. Sunday, but the union stayed at the table," Nick Nichols, spokesman for the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions, said late Tuesday.

"As far as we are concerned, we are still at the table, waiting for them to come back," he said.

Standard & Poor's Corp. said the strike by unionized drivers that began March 2 "initially halted most bus operations and has caused substantial losses."

The company "remains on CreditWatch with negative implications, where it was listed Feb. 19," said a prepared release by the rating company.

But George Gravley, a spokesman for Dallas-based Greyhound, responded: "We don't have anything to say about that. We have a good financial condition, and we're not at all concerned.

"I don't know why they did it. It doesn't change our plans at all," Gravley added.

The busline's new management has improved revenue generation and operating efficiency, but interest on the debt and rentals on leased buses "remain a heavy burden," said Standard & Poor's.

Meanwhile, a replacement driver hired by the company to substitute for strikers and arrested by California police as a military deserter was turned over to Army authorities Tuesday, said a Del Norte County, Calif., sheriff's dispatcher.

Martin Arthur Shaw, 28, of Portland, Ore., was arrested Saturday in Crescent City, Calif., after a Cal-

Strike violence against Greyhound still growing

DALLAS (AP) — Here are major incidents of violence recorded by Greyhound Lines Inc. since the bus drivers strike began March 2, according to company attorney Melanie Scofield and other reports.

In addition to those listed, the company has reported at least 46 bomb threats and numerous other incidents of threat or vandalism, such as vacant buses set on fire.

Norton employees protest takeover

By Michelle Locke

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Thousands of Norton Co. employees on Monday protested a British firm's hostile takeover attempt, burning the Union Jack and marching around City Hall, where officials were to meet with the bidder.

"It's more than just $75 a share. It's our livelihood, it's our jobs," said John Schafer, an organizer of the two-hour rally by 3,000 people timed to coincide with the visit of BTR PLC's chief executive John C. Cahill.

Cahill wants to buy Norton for $1.64 billion.

The restive employees of the abrasives manufacturer, enlivened by chants, renditions of "God Bless America," and even the torching of a Union Jack, did not seem to deter Cahill, although he did change one venue to skirt the crowd.

"I think this is a very healthy sign. They're showing loyalty and support," said Cahill, who mingled with some of the early demonstrators around 6 a.m.

Biggest chambers endorse equal funds

AUSTIN (SWN) — Six of Texas' largest metropolitan chambers of commerce today announced their collective support for school funding equalization through state revenue enhancement measures if major fundamental changes are undertaken to raise the overall standards of the state's education system.

Leaders from the Austin, Corpus Christi, Dallas, El Paso, Fort Worth and San Antonio chambers issued a consensus position statement on school funding after meetings with Gov. Bill Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker of the House Gib Lewis.

In presenting their position, the chambers, which represent almost 20,000 businesses in the state's largest cities, warned that an effective public education system is the paramount challenge facing Texas in the next decade and ensuing century. The position statement was developed after almost four months of research and input from the chambers, educators, including representatives from the Texas Association of School Boards and the Texas Association of School Administrators, and school districts in each chamber's community.

"The future belongs to those states that can provide a good supply of literate and skilled workers. Quite simply, the economic health of our state and the quality of life in our communities rests heavily on the successful restructuring of our education system," said John F. Crawford Jr., chairman of the Metropolitan Chambers Education Task Force and vice chairman of public affairs for the Greater Dallas Chamber.

Specifically, the chambers stated that any new school financing structure should take into consideration a district's effort, and should not penalize districts which meet a defined tax effort by a simple redistribution of funds. The chambers also emphasized that new school funding plans should in no way come at the expense of higher education and that districts must retain the ability to enrich individual programs beyond state-supported levels.

Stock Market Gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed this morning in light trading, buoyed by strength in blue-chip issues but restrained by an uncertain earnings outlook for a broad range of American companies.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 7.88 points to 2,746.62 as of noon EST. Broader indicators were up marginally or slightly lower.

Rising and falling issues were about even on the New York Stock Exchange, with 612 up, 642 down and 533 unchanged. Volume on the Big Board tottaled 61.67 million shares in the morning, vs. 85.28 million Tuesday morning.

Brokers attributed the mixed behavior partly to profit-takers worried about the endurance of the market's recent strength, particularly in the face of extraordinary weakness in the other major world stock market, Japan.

They also said first-quarter earnings of many U.S. companies, due early next month, could show worse-than-expected results that would depress the value of American stocks.

The Tokyo stock market, which plunged on Monday and Tuesday, had a respite today for a national holiday.

The NYSE's composite index of all listed common stocks was up 0.13 to 187.84.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 0.26 to 363.16.

Citicorp was the most actively traded NYSE issue, up ¼ to 24 on volume of 936,000 shares. The biggest U.S. bank's chairman, John Reed, told securities analysts on Tuesday he expected earnings to triple by the mid to late 1990s.

Among actively traded blue chips, General Electric was up ½ to 64⅞, General Motors was up ¼ to 47⅞ and AT&T was up ½ to 42¼.

Mining company stocks were largely down, partly because of a sharp drop in gold prices tied to the dollar's growing strength. Newmont Gold fell 1¼ to 49¾, Homestake fell ⅝ to 19⅛ and Hecla fell ¼ to 14⅜.

CREDIT: Violence up as Greyhound credit slips

(From 8C)

ifornia Highway Patrol officer pulled over the bus and discovered that Shaw was charged with deserting the Army, said police Sgt. Robert Munz.

He said he didn't know why the bus was pulled over. About 30 passengers who were aboard the bus at the time of the arrest waited about an hour before another driver arrived, Greyhound spokesman Steve Scarpino said.

Greyhound hired Shaw on March 2 but had not completed his background review, said Scarpino.

Elsewhere, Superior Court Judge B.C. Ellis in Fayetteville, N.C., issued a temporary restraining order against the Greyhound union council and Local 1493, prohibiting them from any illegal activity in the state, said Gravley.

Prohibitions in the judge's order included mass picketing and blocking entrances to bus stations. A union official said he was not surprised by the move.

"We really expected it," David Jones of Garner, vice president of Local 1493, told The Fayetteville Times.

The company has succeeded in obtaining a total of 16 restraining orders against the union, he said. A hearing on an application for a preliminary injunction in the latest order is scheduled for March 29.

During the often-bitter talks, the company and the union have accused each other of stonewalling and not negotiating in good faith. Unions representing 6,300 drivers and an estimated 3,000 other Greyhound workers walked out over wages, job security and grievance procedures.

NORTON: British firm says it wouldn't move company

(From 8C)

Waving U.S. flags and signs that read "Ban the Brits" and "Don't Sell Out America," the protesters borrowed freely from revolutionary imagery.

"Unfortunately we didn't have Paul Revere riding down the street," said 14-year employee John Shocik, referring to the surprise nature of Cahill's bid, announced Friday.

Workers said they don't trust Cahill and fear that a successful bid could put them out of a job or bring in stringent profit ratios.

"I am the third generation of my family to be working at the Norton Co. and we don't want to give it up," said Schafer, a quality engineer.

He said employees will try to dissuade stockholders from agreeing to the bid and encourage fellow workers to hang on to their shares.

In Boston, Gov. Michael S. Dukakis said he saw few ways Norton would benefit from a takeover since it already holds its own in the international marketplace.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Do brokers get too-free use of clients' money?

By Bill Doyle

Q. At a seminar conducted by a "certified financial planner," we were told it is advisable to place our stocks and bonds in a trust to avoid probate. We have a trust drawn up by our attorney and, after making photocopies of our stock and bond certificates, we gave the original certificates to the financial planner. He turned the certificates over to a broker to have the registration changed to trust form, with my wife and myself as trustee.

Historied Gruene Hall hosts scouts by day, stars by night

Kelley Shannon

GRUENE, Texas (AP) — By day it's a quiet little town overlooking the rocky Guadalupe River. Travelers hunt for antiques, eat barbecued brisket and sip cool drinks.

After dark it's a different story. And Gruene Hall is the tale.

Local regulars and big-city curious line up at the century-old saloon to order longneck beers and beat the boards to the sounds of the Fabulous Thunderbirds, Jerry Jeff Walker or Bo Diddley.

"A lot of great, sweaty nights happen here," says singer-songwriter Hal Ketchum, leaning back in an old chair near the hall's bar. "There's nothing like a good 105-degree day in here with your band."

The hall that by day is a meeting spot for Girl Scouts and debutantes by night has become one of Texas' hippest honky tonks. It's pictured on album covers and serves as folksy stage set for videos and television specials.

It brings thousands of music fans to Gruene (pronounced "green"), a historic district that has remained a community unto itself despite being incorporated into the larger town of New Braunfels.

The hall was built in the 1870s as a social center by town namesake Henry Gruene. Local farmers came to the hall to weigh their cotton before delivering it to the gin next door. Families flocked to it on Saturday nights to dance, bedding down their children next to the wall while the fun went on.

It hasn't changed much.

There's a wood-burning stove and an old hardwood floor. Signs dating to the 1920s hang overhead.

The hall and several other Gruene buildings are owned by New Braunfels' Jane Nalley and Pat Molak of San Antonio. Molak bought the hall and reopened it 15 years ago after it had been in disuse for several decades.

It long has been a favorite haunt of country-and-western, blues, rock and folk musicians, and in the last few years gained some national renown.

George Strait, who played here about once a month for six years before rocketing to country music stardom, returned in January to tape commercials promoting his upcoming tour and its beer sponsor.

June Carter Cash — Johnny Cash's wife and Roseanne Cash's stepmother — arrived in January with her three sisters to film a documentary about their musician mother.

Despite its success, Molak and Ms. Nalley keep Gruene Hall a laid-back place. There aren't any advance ticket sales and there aren't any dressing rooms for the musicians — no matter how big they've gotten.

Truth is, Gruene Hall is just a beer joint. It's a dive, as Molak likes to call it.

The place holds 500 people, and those who frequent it say there's no place like it when the dancing starts during a live performance.

"They have good concerts, I know that. For a town this small, it's amazing how they attract big-name people in here," said John Graves, a 23-year-old student at nearby Southwest Texas State University who likes to hang out and play pool at the hall.

Country singer and recent Grammy winner Rodney Crowell heard about Gruene Hall and called one time wanting to play here, Ms. Nalley said.

Another Grammy winner, Lyle Lovett, also played the hall as have Michael Murphy, Delbert McClinton, Gary P. Nunn and dozens of others whose pictures dot the walls near the bar.

Ketchum, 37, hopes to one day count himself among the famous who got their start in Gruene.

The New York native had never heard of the hall when he moved nearby eight years ago. But it gave him his first chance to play one of his own songs in public, and now he and a five-piece dance band play there about six times a year.

Ketchum's looking beyond Gruene these days, writing country blues for Forerunner Music Co. and recording an album in a Fredericksburg horse barn.

But he considers Gruene Hall his music school in a way — a place where he was able to hear some of the greats.

"There's a lot of old notes hanging in the air here," he said.

TRUE STORIES LIKE THIS HAPPEN EVERY DAY

Ken, a foreman at the shoe factory, took the afternoon off to babysit for his two-year-old nephew. He loved spending time with the little boy.

SUDDENLY HE HEARD THE CHILD SCREAM.

Ken ran to the utility room where the boy was standing amidst a sea of blue-white crystals, rubbing his eyes and screaming — the empty can of Drano lying at the child's feet. Ken scooped up the child and ran to the phone. In a panic he dialed "O" and asked for an ambulance.

The dispatcher was on the phone with him almost immediately. "I'll send an ambulance right away. But don't hang up." The child was screaming even louder now. "What kind of poison is it?" He asked Ken. Ken stared at the can and tried to describe the crystals.

BUT KEN COULDN'T READ.

"What does the can say?" asked the voice. Ken didn't know what to say. Ken heard the siren of the ambulance, so he hung up the phone.

This happens more often than you think! Even today, about one out of every five adults can't read adequately.

AND THE PROBLEM INCREASES DAILY.

How many children must suffer before America wakes up to this serious problem of adult illiteracy and does something positive to eliminate it?

Ken's anguish over not being able to help his beloved nephew is just one example of the pain and embarrassment felt by millions of illiterate adults.

Almost all blame themselves — see themselves as stupid, inadequate — and see no hope in their future. They usually feel alone in the world, unaware that others share their problem and that help is available.

Romanian troops patrol city shaken by violence

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Romanians and ethnic Hungarians took to the streets of a northwestern city again today, and the army sent reinforcements to quell ethnic violence that has left at least six people dead.

Troops cordoned off the town after armed ethnic Romanians on Tuesday night poured in from neighboring villages and battled ethnic Hungarians, who were protesting an attack a day earlier on their political association headquarters.

Also today, a government fact-finding panel went to Tirgu Mures, a Transylvanian city 250 miles northwest of Bucharest.

Vice President Cazimir Ionescu said leaflets distributed by the fascist Iron Guard had caused the fighting by falsely claiming that the Hungarian minority centered in Transylvania is seeking political autonomy.

"They scared the Romanians with the idea that the Hungarians want to take over Transylvania, and they are telling the Hungarians that some requests they have made (to the government) will not be granted," he said in an interview.

"It's a movement that wants to create panic, but we don't know exactly what it wants," the vice president said.

Since the December revolution toppled Communist dictator Nicolae Ceasescu, Romania has been inundated with propaganda signed by the Iron Guard calling on Romania to expel ethnic Hungarians and other ethnic minorities.

This morning more than 2,000 ethnic Hungarians gathered in Tirgu Mures' central Square of Roses, witnesses said. Groups of Romanians were gathering on the outskirts of the city and heading for the square, the witnesses said.

A government commission of inquiry flew to Tirgu Mures this morning, and additional troop reinforcements were sent in from neighboring areas to try to quell the violence that government radio said left six dead and 300 injured. One witness in the city of 250,000, Ioan Pol, said some ethnic Hungarians threw firebombs during the fighting Tuesday. He said he heard what appeared to be gunfire, but its origin was unknown.

Among those hospitalized was Kevin Harvey, a British photographer working for The Associated Press, who was beaten and clubbed.

25,000 'liberated' Namibians cheer as South African flag lowered

WINDHOEK, Namibia (AP) — The world's newest nation celebrated its birth today with parties, tribal dancing and parades, and ex-guerrilla leaders were sworn in as ministers of the new government.

About 25,000 Namibians cheered wildly at a sports stadium as the South African flag was lowered in Africa's last colony just after midnight, replaced by the red, green and blue banner of newly independent Namibia.

Tens of thousands lined the main street of Windhoek, the capital, for a three-mile parade.

"Africa's last colony is from this hour liberated," President Sam Nujoma said in his inaugural address after U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar swore in the former guerrilla leader. Nujoma led the 23-year fight to end rule by neighboring South Africa.

As a fireworks display lit up the sky, Namibians began impromptu parties throughout the capital of Windhoek and car horns blared through the night.

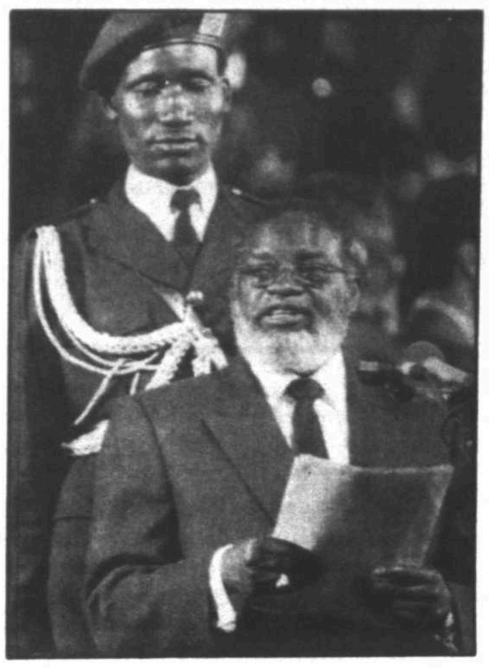

"This is beautiful. We are all thrilled. We have waited so long for this day," said Olga Basson as she watched gold and red fireworks ripping through the night sky.

President F.W. de Klerk of South Africa, who held his hand across his heart as he watched his nation's flag being lowered, called for an end to violence in southern Africa.

"I stand here tonight as an advocate for peace. The season for violence has passed for Namibia and the whole of southern Africa," de Klerk said.

"It is above all a moment for hope. Hope that the future of this vast and beautiful land will bring peace."

As thousands watched the parade, middle-aged black women from the Herero tribe, wearing colorful ankle-length Victorian dresses and two-pointed headdresses, marched in front of white teen-age baton twirlers. Floats depicted the country's ethnic diversity, including the primitive Bushmen, and modern bands rode flatbed trucks to the stadium.

Namibian President Sam Nujoma reads his inaugural speech this morning, as his personal bodyguard stands behind him. Nujoma was sworn in at an independence ceremony, which ended South African rule that had lasted 75 years.

Many young blacks cheered loudly when Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat, his car blocked by the parade, stepped out and walked a few paces along the side of the parade before slipping into a hotel.

Later, the National Assembly was sworn in, and it adopted a coat of arms with the Namibian motto: "Unity, Liberty, Justice."

Forty-one of the 72 members belong to the South-West Africa People's Organization, the guerrilla movement that fought South African rule then captured U.N.-supervised elections in November.

Seven parties, ranging from black Marxists to right-wing whites, are represented in the assembly, which wrote a democratic, Western-style constitution that has earned praise both inside the country and from abroad.

De Klerk has pledged to end South Africa's apartheid system of racial segregation and the date chosen for the ceremony was rich in symbolic meaning for his country.

It marked the 30th anniversary of the "Sharpeville Massacre," when 69 unarmed demonstrators were shot and killed in South Africa while protesting racial segregation laws in a black township south of Johannesburg.

Sharpeville was the turning point for the African National Congress, which broke with decades of nonviolent protest to fight against South Africa's white-run government.

"The day was chosen as a sign of solidarity not only for the people of Namibia, but also with the people of South Africa," said Hifikepunye Pohamba, home affairs minister in the new government.

South African black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela drew a fervent burst of applause when he entered the stadium.

Others attending included Secretary of State James A. Baker III, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze and the leaders at least 12 African nations.

They used the occasion for behind-the-scenes consultations throughout the day, with the United States, the Soviet Union and others holding meetings.

The huge, arid territory of 1.3 million people on Africa's southwest coast was a German colony until it was captured by South Africa during World War I.

Some whites expressed concern about the new black government, but said they wanted to support the new nation.

South Africa agreed in December 1988 to grant independence to Namibia under a regional peace treaty that also calls for Cuba to withdraw its 50,000 soldiers from Angola by mid-1991.

South Africa retains control of Walvis Bay, Nambia's only deep sea port, which was a British colony before Germany occupied Namibia. South Africa says the port is part of its territory, but Namibia is demanding it be incorporated into its boundaries.

South African blacks protest '60 massacre

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Tens of thousands of blacks went on strike today and crowds stoned vehicles and built barricades to mark the 30th anniversary of the "Sharpeville Massacre," in which police killed 69 blacks.

Thousands of blacks took part in a "stay away" protest in Johannesburg, Durban, Pietermaritzburg, East London and other cities and towns nationwide to mourn those killed during a 1960 march that protested racial segregation laws in Sharpeville, a town outside Johannesburg.

The government-run South African Broadcasting Corp. reported that from 20 percent to 70 percent of black workers stayed away from work in many areas. Press reports said participation was higher in some areas, with up to 99 percent of the workforce on strike in parts of Durban.

But there was no way to estimate how many people were taking part overall.

In a memorial service in the black township of Soweto, an anti-apartheid leader demanded the government end violence.

"Let it not be said we are a violent people ... we are a very tolerant people and if you think about the oppression we have suffered, it goes beyond human endurance," said Cassim Salojee, vice president of the anti-apartheid United Democratic Front.

A police report today said five men were stabbed to death and their bodies burned in black factional fighting during the past 24 hours, but the deaths did not appear linked to the strike.

The 1960 massacre, condemned internationally, was a turning point for the African National Congress, which broke with decades of nonviolent protest to fight South Africa's white-run government.

Crowds of youths stoned cars and buses in some parts of Durban and other cities to stop people who wanted to work. Protesters put up barricades to block off some black townships and closed streets with rows of burning tires.

Black schoolchildren in some areas attacked schools to enforce the strike and police said a crowd of students set fire to a school in Umlazi in Natal.

Police in the eastern province of Natal warned motorists to stay away from some areas because protesters were stoning and burning vehicles. A mob seized a truck and cars and blocked a main road near Pietermaritzburg, they said.

Most protests were peaceful, with people organizing marches and meetings. Crowds marched in black townships chanting anti-apartheid slogans and dancing.

Taiwan assembly elects leader despite protests

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — President Lee Teng-hui was chosen today to lead the country for six more years amid increasing calls for a more democratic system that includes the president's election by the people.

The National Assembly that elected Lee is dominated by elderly deputies who have not faced reelection since before the ruling Nationalists fled China in 1949 after their defeat by the Communists.

The vote came one day after Lee, the 67-year-old chairman of the ruling Nationalist Party, responded to the growing pressure for democratic reform by agreeing to an emergency conference to discuss changing the political system.

Lee said today in a statement that he would "devote my utmost endeavors to garner all forces to strive for constitutional democracy, economic progress and social stability in the coming six years."

But he said he would wait until he is sworn in May 20 to make concrete proposals.

Hundreds of protesters demanding a general presidential election tried to stop today's vote a suburban meeting hall, which was guarded by about 2,000 police officers.

One delegate was pulled from his car but appeared unharmed, while a police officer was injured in a scuffle with the demonstrators. The crowd smashed windows of at least two cars.

Thousands of students maintained a sit-in for democracy in downtown Taipei.

Lee, the only presidential candidate before the assembly, received support from 641 of its 668 voting members. The others cast invalid ballots.

The 11 assembly members from the opposition Democratic Progressive Party were not allowed to vote because they refused to swear allegiance to the Nationalist government.

The Nationalist deputies, many in their 80s and 90s and in poor health, remained in office in support of the Nationalist claim to still be the legitimate government of all China. Several voted from wheelchairs or used canes to walk to the ballot box.

Public pressure on general elections has increased sharply, particularly after some deputies proposed increasing the assembly's powers and the salaries of its members.

A student sit-in at a downtown Taipei park began Friday with 200 participants but their ranks had swelled today to 2,000. Many said they would stage a one-day hunger strike to promote democratic change.

Premier Lee Huan visited the students early today and said the government would consider their demands.

Under the president's proposal for an emergency conference, Nationalist and opposition politicians would be invited to participate in the conference, the statement said. No date was set for the meeting, which was welcomed by the opposition party.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Lithuanians protest Soviet maneuvers

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Lithuania's breakaway government sent a strongly worded protest to the Kremlin demanding an end to maneuvers by Soviet troops, tanks and warplanes in its territory.

In a telegram Tuesday night, Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene complained about the unannounced military moves, which Lithuanians consider an attempt to intimidate them into backing down on their declaration of independence.

"The people of Lithuania are deeply disturbed about the actions of the Soviet armed forces: the intense mobilization of armored vehicles and tanks, the intensified flights of military air force planes, and unauthorized sorties into Lithuanian territory by paratroopers involved in intelligence activities," she said in the cable.

In Moscow, a bill establishing tough requirements for secession passed its first legislative hurdle. The Supreme Soviet's Council of the Union, one of two chambers, gave the bill preliminary approval and sent it to the other chamber.

Deputies said the secession procedure, which requires a republic-wide referendum and a transition period of up to five years, would have to be observed by Lithuania, even though it has already declared its independence.

Mongolia elects leader

ULAN BATOR, Mongolia (AP) — The Communist-dominated legislature today elected a new president and nominated a new prime minister, continuing a sweeping change of leadership demanded by pro-democracy protesters.

The nation's half-dozen opposition groups did not immediately comment on the legislature's choices.

But in the past the opposition has accused the leadership of shuffling Communist Party and government posts as a cosmetic gesture and of dragging its feet on providing legal guarantees for free and democratic elections.

A government official said today that a draft constitutional amendment and a new election law under consideration by the legislature will contain no mention of opposition parties.

Symbol may be dinner

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The kangaroo may soon become common cuisine in the country's most populous state now that New South Wales plans to make it legal to dine on Australia's national symbol.

"Quite clearly this is a food product which is very much going to waste and there does seem to be a certain demand for it among restaurateurs and among people who like game meat," said Ian Armstrong, the state's agriculture minister.

The New South Wales Parliament is considering a bill to legalize kangaroo consumption and Armstrong predicted it would pass during the current legislative session.

Animal welfare groups oppose New South Wales' plans and promised today to picket restaurants or butchers selling kangaroo meat.

Crook got 40 months instead of 40 years

Man let out of prison early; arrested in slaying of three

How prison policies slash years off criminals' terms

It started with reports on crime. And the high incidence of parolee crime in Michigan. And ended by placing the blame for much of that crime on prison officials.

Officials who, in an effort to ease prison overcrowding, were themselves breaking the law.

It aroused public outrage and forced the state to make changes in the system.

Changes that wouldn't have occurred if a few reporters at a Detroit newspaper hadn't been looking for a story.

Parolees returning to cells; state admits release errors

It's an example of how individual rights can be protected when the public is kept informed.

It's an example of how a free press works in a free society. And what could go on without it.

PART-TIME $$$$$ AVAILABLE APRIL 1

Effective April 2, the Midland Reporter-Telegram will become a morning newspaper instead of an afternoon newspaper. As a result we have several routes which will need to be re-filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Due to this one-time large number of routes becoming available, now is the best time ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 50% adult and 50% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a part time job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $150 to $500 monthly! Some motor routes make even more, although currently none are expected to be available. Depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Some collecting in person will be necessary though.

When do the papers have to be delivered by?

6:00 am Monday - Friday, and 7:00 am Saturday and Sunday.

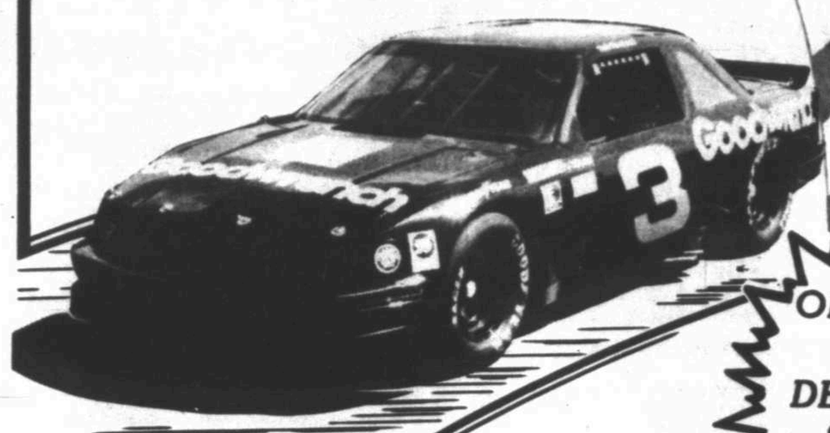

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
