Perot speaks out

WASHINGTON — Ross Perot urged a House-Senate reform committee Tuesday to "eliminate all of the perks" and set new ethical standards for a Congress that he said has lost the people's confidence. "The American people cannot be expected to sacrifice while their elected servants continue to live in royal splendor," Perot said./6B

Double attacks

EDINA, Minn. — A woman was watching paramedics work on her husband's failed heart when she had a heart attack herself. "I've only seen it once before in 20 years," said Dr. David Justis, an emergency room physician. Virginia and Ernest Nelson remained hospitalized in critical condition Tuesday in the Minneapolis suburb of Edina. Both are in their 70s. Authorities were called to the Nelsons' apartment Monday after Mrs. Nelson reported that her husband had collapsed. He had a heart attack just as paramedics arrived. "We were about to start an IV, when all of a sudden we heard a big thump," paramedic Bob Lawson said. "I looked over and his wife had collapsed." Lawson said Mrs. Nelson's heart had stopped beating. With her husband attached by cables to the defibrillator, the paramedics used paddles from the same machine to get her heart beating again, Lawson said.

Koresh won't surrender

Standoff continues with members of cult

■ At least 14 people died in shootouts, sources say.

Associated Press

WACO — At least 14 persons died in Sunday's assault on the Branch Davidian compound, sources said Tuesday as a promised surrender by the sect's leader never occurred.

A well placed federal official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said there were at least 10 people dead inside the Mount Carmel compound. Other reports placed the count between seven and 15.

Four federal agents and one other cult member were known dead in the initial assault Sunday morning, with another cult member killed in a second gun fight Sunday night. That body apparently was retrieved by cult members.

pound, and there were reports that peace justices, who serve as coroners in some Texas counties, had been called to the scene. One of the justices said they waited for two hours at a checkpoint, but did not enter the compound.

In a taped statement broadcast earlier Tuesday, cult leader David Koresh had said he would come out "peacefully," but the standoff continued hours later. Negotiations went on into the night, said Jack Killorin, a spokesman for the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Killorin said agents were prepared to wait "a long time . . . we don't have a time frame for this."

Killorin said he expected that the cultists had "ample stocks of water and food" to hold out for a long while, but he said officials were "working so it does not go on for a month." "

Early Tuesday, eight more children and two adults were released from the compound. Then about 8 p.m., several buses and minivans left. There were reports another 20 children had been released, but ATF agent David Troy said the reports were not true and other agents said the activity was merely a shift change.

State Children Protective Services spokesman Bryan Gilbert earlier said the agency was expecting another 20 children to be released.

Ex-leader says he warned FBI about Koresh

VERNON (AP) — The man who lost control of a religous sect to David Koresh said he had warned authorities about the cult leader whose followers killed four federal agents during a violent gunbattle.

George Roden, who lost control of the Branch Davidian sect during a 1987 shootout with Koresh, said he had warned the FBI and other authorities that Koresh was dangerous. He said Koresh wanted to die.

"They didn't believe me then," said Roden, a patient at the Vernon State Hospital. "I think they do now."

Children seem to be in good shape emotionally

WACO (AP) — They're the littlest victims of the madness at the Mount Carmel religious cult — the children, but those freed by Tuesday were doing remarkably well, authorities said.

Although they had hidden under beds during Sunday's shootout, "these kids are in good shape. We were surprised," said Karen Eells, regional director of the state Children's Protective Services division. Eighteen children had been released by Tuesday evening.

Ms. Eells said reports indicated as many as 40 children may have been in the compound.

"We had (mental health department) counselors with them all day yesterday. The therapists report that, under the circumstances, these kids are in good shape emotionally," Ms. Eells said.

The circumstances were horrific. The children had been living in the remote compound located 10 miles east of Waco and ruled by Branch Davidian cult leader David Koresh. They were there shortly before 10 a.m. Sunday when some 100 federal agents

Koresh has 'magnetic quality,' leader's former follower says

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press writer

WACO — Whether an inspired liar or a charismatic lunatic, religious cult leader David Koresh cast an intense and mystic spell over his tiny band of followers.

The self-proclaimed Lamb of God assumed power over the Branch Davidians in 1987 and ruled the bizarre sect with an apparent mix of fear, intimidation, spiritual wizardry, violence and inspiration.

A former leader of the group, himself deposed in a violent confrontation with Koresh, said Tuesday his adversary was a deluded rapist, arsonist and embezzler.

Others have praised Koresh, also known as Vernon Howell, for his magnetism and his biblical knowledge. Koresh freely admitted he practiced polygamy and stockpiled weapons, but he denied darker allegations of sexual abuse of children.

"He is not a vicious person. He's not the monster experts say he is," said his mother, Bonnie Haldeman, although a fierce gun battle at Koresh's Mount Carmel compound took the lives of four federal agents on Sunday.

Reporters Darlene McCormick and Mark England of the Waco Tribune-Herald spent eight months exploring the shadowy world of the man they labeled "The Sinful Messiah." Their seven-part series had just begun when agents tried to arrest Koresh, precipitating the battle and subsequent armed standoff.

The portrait that emerged from the newspaper stories was both mysterious and monstrous. It included relentless pursuit of women and lurid tales of seduction.

At least two self-described victims dismissed him early on as arrogant and a bit ludicrous but both even-

Attorneys continued to question potential jurors one at time Tuesday for the trial of Curtis Dean Purser, 20, accused of the Nov. 13, 1991, capital murder of a local church secretary.

Six jurors have been selected with eight more needed, two to serve as alternates. Jury selection began in mid-February.

Testimony, which had been scheduled to begin March 22, may not start until April, court officials indicated.

President discusses economic package with Republican leaders

Combest: Clinton seems sincere

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — After he and other Republican lawmakers met privately with President Clinton Tuesday and heard him lobby for his economic program, Rep. Larry Combest of Lubbock praised the president's effort but said his economic ideas still come up short.

"I think it was a good gesture, because adults who disagree ought to be able to sit down and discuss issues," said Combest of his first face-to-face meeting with Clinton. "I don't question his sincerity at all."

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton broke bread with Republicans Tuesday in a political gesture that won no new support for his economic plan but produced talk of cooperation on overhauling the nation's health care system.

"We want to be players in health care reform," said Sen. Bob Dole, the Senate minority leader.

While Clinton was meeting with Republican leaders, House Democrats were looking for $3 billion to $4 billion more in spending cuts in the president's package.

CLINTON: President meets with GOP leaders man Martin Olav Sabo of Minnesota said his committee was eyeing both defense and domestic programs, but has made no final decisions.

The administration has indicated that budget director Leon Pannetta, who was speaking to the House Democratic caucus Wednesday, would back a modest package of additional cuts.

Further spending reductions, while not large, would enable the administration to come under the $538.94 billion cap on discretionary government spending for the 1994 budget year, which begins Oct. 1, and thus blunt Republican criticism that the administration was abandoning the fiscal restraint of the 1990 budget agreement.

Clinton promised during his campaign to pursue a bipartisan agenda, but Tuesday's meetings were the first with the opposition party since his inauguration. He conferred first with House Republicans, then lunched with their Senate counterparts, seeking to break the ice.

Republican opposition to Clinton's economic plan has hardened, and the meetings did little to soften that.

"I don't think he gained any votes," and he won't so long as major tax increases remain in the plan, said Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho.

White House spokesman George Stephanopoulos said Clinton "was very encouraged by the groundwork that was laid today." Still, he acknowledged, disagreements are inevitable "and you can't wish those away."

According to Republicans who attended the meetings, Clinton got an earful.

"Many Republicans expressed a lot of a concern about some of the president's proposals," including defense cuts and increased energy taxes, said Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla. He said Clinton's overall economic program relies "way too heavily on taxes, and we're afraid it's going to put people out of work."

House Republican Leader Bob Michel said the GOP needed to know more about Clinton's plans. "I told him that's an absolutely intolerable situation to expect us to be players when we don't even have the specifics of your budget," Michel said.

Responding to Clinton's challenge that they produce specifics if they wanted to alter his budget, several Republicans said they were stepping forward.

Sen. Hank Brown, R-Colo., said he gave Clinton a list of more than $600 billion in spending cuts.

Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, the senior Republican on the House Budget Committee, said he would soon make public a plan to cut the deficit. His plan would cut about $300 billion over the next four years, without tax increases, according to Republican sources.

Clinton proposed a $325 billion cut in the deficit in four years, partly through higher taxes on the wealthy, better-off Social Security recipients, and energy.

House Republicans said Clinton left them with the impression that his plan would have looked more like what they were drafting, with lower taxes and more cuts, but he did not believe the congressional Democrats would go along.

"The president of the United States is a charming fellow and he does represent change," Kasich said. "The problem is his change program is being blocked by his own party."

President Bush never made a similar trip to the Capitol to meet with the Democrats. Clinton told the GOP lawmakers they would do it again, maybe next time at the White House.

House and Senate Republicans said Clinton also promised a bipartisan approach to foreign policy, and he apologized for not notifying their leaders sooner about the Bosnia airdrop.

It was constructive "just to know that when we invited him, he came," said Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo.

"I think we can get a bipartisan health care bill if they're patient with us," Simpson said.

While Clinton was meeting with the GOP, his wife, who is in charge of his health care task force, sought to involve the House Black and Hispanic caucuses in the search for consensus on health care reform.

"I think it's very important to hear what members of Congress hear from the grass roots," said Hillary Rodham Clinton, who had reached out for Republican advice earlier, before her husband did.

Caucus members said the first lady listened and took pages of notes but gave no indication that any of those decisions have been made.

Asked if the administration is considering raising taxes on alcohol as well as tobacco products to help pay for the health care plan, Mrs. Clinton twice responded,

Prior to his GOP meetings, Clinton consulted with top Democrats, who emerged with some all-or-nothing tough talk.

"Passage of the president's economic program is being interpreted by the American people as a metaphor on whether our government works, whether gridlock is in fact over," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell. "This will be the crucial test for members of Congress."

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., repeated his assertion that he'll get the budget through the House by April 2.

There has been talk of combining the economic and health care plans, but the Republicans oppose that idea.

SINCERE: Clinton begins dialogue, Combest says minutes meeting privately with about 50 House Republicans, in what House Minority Leader Robert Michel of Illinois called a session "all in good spirit."

Afterward, Combest, referring to a cake Clinton presented to Michel for his 70th birthday, said of the president: "I'll tell you, he's smooth. He literally had us eating out of his hand."

The West Texas congressman added that "it's been a long time since I have seen anybody appear as sincere as Bill Clinton did today. I think he truly believes. You can't fault somebody for that."

Clinton declined to characterize his meeting with the House Republicans, which they said he requested. "I tried to get them to play golf with me," he joked. It was Clinton's first visit to Capitol Hill to meet solely with Republicans.

Combest, who was included in the meeting because he is a ranking GOP member of the House Intelligence Committee, said he was satisfied with the session because "we know for certain that our position on things has been presented."

Combest said he and other Republicans reminded Clinton that they oppose his economic blueprint because they believe it relies too heavily on tax increases and not enough on spending cuts.

"Did he change anybody's mind?" Combest said. "No ... but it's beginning of a dialogue ... at least they've extended the olive branch of discussion."

Combest said Clinton's personal appeal would do little to persuade Republicans to "give the Democrats a blank check to do anything they want." He said he believes most of his constituents in the 19th Congressional District oppose Clinton's proposals, particularly his call for higher energy taxes and new income taxes on the wealthy.

TRIAL: Lawyers question potential jurors

neys, has sported a grey suit. His mother has watched quietly and visited during breaks.

Prospective jurors must be interviewed individually, as opposed to in a group, during a capital murder trial. About five people are questioned each day.

Queries directed at potential jurors have included whether the death penalty could be considered for someone convicted of capital murder.

If convicted of capital murder, Purser faces either death by lethal injection or life imprisonment. If found guilty of the lesser charge of murder, Purser can be sentenced from five to 99 years or life in prison.

In addition to jury selection, 238th District Judge John Hyde has waded through several pre-trial motions.

On one issue, the defense contends that the prosecution offered Purser a plea bargain that was later withdrawn. If the alleged offered had been accepted, Purser would have escaped the death penalty and probably testified against a co-defendant, who has since accepted a plea agreement with the state.

The prosecution claims such an offer to Purser was never made and any talks were merely negotiations.

The judge has not ruled on the disagreement.

Last week, Hyde denied a defense request to suppress statements made by Purser.

The judge also determined that the grand jury that indicted Purser did have representation by minority groups. The defense argued that the selection of the grand jury was racially discriminatory.

Despite the barrage of motions filed by the attorneys and pre-trial publicity concerns by the District Attorney's Office, court observers expect the trial to proceed.

The case involves the murder of 28-year-old Brenda Branch, who was stabbed 36 times and robbed, and her partially disrobed body abandoned in a back-room storage area of the Living Way Four Square Church, 419 Alta Ave.

The next day, Gearld Benjamin Kelly was arrested for violation of parole and charged in the murder two weeks later.

Purser was arrested for the crime on April 15, 1992.

Kelly entered a plea agreement on Feb. 10 and was subsequently sentenced to life in prison. He will be eligible for parole in 35 years.

District Attorney Al Schorre has declined to reveal whether Kelly will testify against Purser.

Today's high to be in 60s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the mid-60s and northwest to north winds at 10-15 mph. Tonight should be clear with a high in the mid-30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-60s.

After an overnight low of 38, Tuesday's high reached 67, compared to the record high for that date of 86 set in 1986. The record low was 15 set in 1971.

STATE

Northerly winds brought cooler, drier air to Texas on Tuesday, with the only rainfall amounts noted in far southern parts of the state.

The dry air pumped in from northern Mexico through West Texas helped keep skies mostly clear to partly cloudy across the state.

Skies in East Texas and much of the central portions of North Texas were cloudy as an upper-level disturbance remained poised to the west.

High temperatures ranged mostly from the 50s to 60s statewide, with some low 70s in far South and West Texas, the National Weather Service said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

tually came under his spell, sexually as well as spiritually.

"You had to give him your mind ... your body," said Robyn Bunds, who claims Howell fathered her son, Shaun. She said she was one of his 18 wives when she fled from the cult.

At a news conference in La Verne, Calif., Ms. Bunds said Koresh established a Branch Davidian colony that eventually included several dozen members. Koresh created a rock 'n' roll band to attract new converts, she said.

"This guy had a very magnetic quality to him," said one man in California who requested anonymity. "A little bit of charm and you get to the point where you believe this, you believe that, and you come so far, it's just that you believe all of it."

That depiction was consistent with the conclusions of Chris Hatcher, a psychology professor at the University of California at San Francisco, who has studied how cult leaders rise to power.

"You don't see a lot of what's popularly called brainwashing or programming," said Hatcher on Tuesday. "What you do see is attention to individual dreams."

The leader is one who convinces the individuals that, by believing, their dreams will be realized. "It is a person-to-person sales job," Hatcher said.

His mother put it another way. "I may not have always agreed with everything, but I've never heard anyone teach like him," Mrs. Haldeman said.

Even so, according to police accounts, Koresh was no stranger to armed force to gain or maintain his leadership. He prevailed in a 1987 shootout at the Mount Carmel compound with George Roden, the former leader who accused him on Tuesday of rape.

Roden, now in a state mental hospital, said he warned officials before this week's bloody siege that Koresh was dangerous. "He's no Jesus Christ anymore than Satan is."

Roden, whose father and mother led the sect before him, said Koresh used sleep deprivation and other intimidating tactics on sect members and "converted the leadership to Nazism."

Of the followers, Roden said Koresh recognized "he has to be gentle to people to get their attention." But he added: "Once he gets his hooks into them, then he puts the screws to them."

Hatcher's research on violent cults showed future leaders did not join with a plot to assume command already in mind. "They join with the idea specifically to learn the rhetoric of the group," he said.

"I don't think he set out to become their leader," said Mrs. Haldeman, who joined her son's cult temporarily. "I guess it evolved ... When he first went to Mount Carmel, he was having a hard time ... He wanted to know the truth and he was searching for the truth. He was always searching truth."

A psychiatry professor, Dr. Louis West of the University of California at Los Angeles, believes otherwise, comparing Koresh to the Rev. Jim Jones, who led followers into a mass suicide attempt. Already intent on manipulating and exploiting people, such a leader "uses the religious context to gain control over others and aggrandize and enrich himself," West said.

"I don't think for a minute he was a sincere believer in his own divinity," West said.

Former sect members Bruce and Lisa Gent told the Waco Tribune-Herald reporters Koresh showed up at their home in Melbourne, Australia, in 1988 to lay claim to Gent's daughter, Nicole, then 19. Koresh said she was a gift to him from God.

Wooed with round-the-clock scripture, the young woman accompanied him back to the Texas compound.

Then Nicole appeared one night at the Gents' bedroom and said: "Vernon wants me to be his teddy bear for the night. Will you give me your permission?"

The Gents consented, saying they believed Nicole had been chosen for a holy purpose.

"At that point in time, yes, I was very influenced," Gent says now.

"Nicole had spent four days with him being convinced of the message. It wasn't for me to say yes or no ... she was going to have children for the Lord. I shudder when I say that now."

Said Lisa Gent:

"It's like he cooks women. He prepares them for the fire by the way he gives his studies. It's mind manipulation."

and heavily armed cult members dueled in a 45-minute firefight that killed four agents and wounded at least 16.

After negotiations between authorities and Koresh, which included radio broadcasts of some of Koresh's religious messages, the children gradually have been freed in small numbers.

Most of those released ranged in age from an infant to a 10-year-old.

The pictures were heart-wrenching: little children, heavily bundled against the cold, looking even smaller strapped into seats of the vans that federal agents used to carry them from the violence.

One little girl, about 4 years old, clutched a Coke can and stared fixedly at the huge number of television cameras filming through the van's windows.

Ms. Eells said the children first were being taken to an undisclosed central receiving location. Counselors talked with the children and other needs were being met.

Physically, she said, "they're in pretty good shape." A 3-year-old boy was taken to Hillcrest Baptist Medical Center on Monday night, treated for a fever and released, said hospital spokeswoman Marsha Jepson.

As emergency court orders are signed, the children are being placed in foster homes, Ms. Eells said.

On Monday, District Judge Bill Logue signed emergency orders for the first six children and scheduled a March 9 hearing in which the Texas Department of Human Services Children's Protective Services will seek to be named temporary managing conservators for the children.

Ten more orders were signed on Tuesday.

Ms. Eells said court hearings would be held for each group of siblings. Some of the children carried notes identifying them and giving names of grandparents, she said.

She said court proceedings eventually would determine whether partental rights are terminated, whether the children are placed with relatives or made available for adoption.

Ms. Eells said the children are being placed in state care based on the section of the Texas family code citing "immediate danger to the physical health or safety of the child."

She said the counselors who have talked with the children about their experiences were encouraged by what they hear.

"They know what's going on. They talk about their fear. They are able to tell us what happened," she said.

"They described the gun battle, hiding under the bed. That's a real healthy sign they're able to talk about it."

Ira Iscoe, a professor of psychology at the University of Texas-Austin, said the children's conversations were a positive sign.

"That's very good," he said in a phone interview. "The more they can talk about the trauma, the better. The more they can talk about their 'coping' the better," he said.

Iscoe said, however, that it can take several days for the full effects of such a crisis to become apparent.

"Kids, like adults, manage to live through certain emergencies. They make it through the incident and it's later that you begin to see the effects," he said.

One serious concern for the children, he said, will be the fate of their parents.

"These poor kids, there's going to be a hell of a lot of wonderment and worrying about their parents," he said.

According to an eight-month investigation of the cult by the Waco Tribune-Herald, allegations of physical, psychological and sexual abuse of children had been made about the cult.

Welfare workers had visited Mount Carmel at least twice, the newspaper reported.

The Tribune-Herald's report said a sheriff's department officer and an unidentified former cult member said child welfare workers contacted Mount Carmel before the visits.

Bob Boyd, director of the Children's Protective Services office in Waco, denied that to the paper. He did not return repeated calls Tuesday from The Associated Press.

But Brian Gilbert, a CPS official, said Tuesday, "I do not believe that's true."

KORESH: Several people leave compound named sources, reported Tuesday that the children said at least seven people were killed in the firefight. The paper also said agents believed they had killed as many as 15 people.

A state source, who would not be quoted by name, said he had heard that at least seven cult members had died and up to 40 people were wounded. Officials have said about 75 people were in the compound, but Koresh has claimed more.

The Dallas Morning News, in Wednesday editions, quoted an unidentified local official as saying law officers at the scene believed as many as 14 people were dead and "a whole lot" were wounded.

Koresh said in the tape recorded message played Tuesday afternoon:

"I, David Koresh, agree upon the broadcasting of this tape to come out peacefully with all the people immediately,"

Although buses and other vehicles moved nearer within minutes of the broadcast's start, there was no immediate indication of people leaving the Mount Carmel compound.

Federal officials canceled a mid-afternoon news conference because "they advised they are still in a standoff situation," said Sgt. Malissa Sims, a spokeswoman for the Waco police department.

At late morning, two area hospitals were advised to prepare to receive an undetermined number of injured people. There was no indication of the type of injuries.

Koresh's rambling 58-minute sermon, in which he discussed the so-called Seven Seals of the book of Revelation, appeared to draw a correlation between himself and Christ.

"Even a man like Christ has to meet with unbelief," said Koresh, who later echoed Jesus at the Crucifixion, saying "Father, in your hand I commit my spirit."

"I'm sure you're all aware of how I'm involved in a very serious thing right now ...," Koresh said on the tape. "I am really concerned about the lives of my brethren here and also really concerned even greater about the lives of all those in this world."

In pre-dawn conversations Monday with Dallas radio station KRLD, Koresh had said he would surrender if his message could be heard.

"We made an agreement with ATF agents that they would allow me to have national coverage of this tape that I might give to the world all my ... information that I have tried so hard to share with people, that if I would do this that all the people here at the facility here, at the compound, will give ourselves over to the world, give ourselves out to you, this is what I promised, this is what I am going to keep," Koresh said.

The standoff started about 9:30 a.m. Sunday with a 45-minute firefight that killed four federal agents and one cult member, including apparently Koresh's 2-year-old daughter. A second cult member died later Sunday when a trio tried to leave the compound.

ATF agents were trying to serve arrest and search warrants on Koresh, who was accused of federal firearm violations.

Although some questioned the bureau's timing and tactics, officials defended their preparations, saying conditions inside the compound were deteriorating and Koresh appeared unstable.

The eight children released Tuesday brought to 18 the number of children who have left the compound. The women were the first adults to come out.

Koresh gained control of the Branch Davidians through his ability to mesmerize followers with scripture and his armed invasion of the compound in 1987.

About 90 minutes before Koresh's broadcast began, the man he ousted as leader of the Branch Davidian's accused his successor of being a rapist and arsonist.

"He recognizes he has to be gentle to people to get their attention, but once he gets his hooks into them, then he puts the screws to them," George Roden told reporters at Vernon State Hospital, the mental institution were he was sent after being found innocent by reason of insanity in an unrelated shooting in Odessa.

RODEN: Koresh is 'no Jesus Christ,' former leader says the votes needed to remain president of the sect, has accused Koresh of arson, rape and embezzlement of the church sect's funds.

"I believe he's deluded about himself," Roden said of Koresh, who has referred to himself as Christ.

"He's no Jesus Christ. He never has been. He never will be," Roden said. "He's not Jesus Christ any more than Satan is."

Roden said Koresh uses sleep deprivation and other intimidating tactics on sect members and does not adhere to their principles, including prohibitions against consuming meat and liquor.

"He recognizes he has to be gentle to people to get their attention, but once he gets his hooks into them, then he puts the screws to them," Roden said of Koresh.

The 55-year-old Roden was committed to the state hospital in 1991 after he was found innocent by reason of insanity in the 1989 slaying of an Odessa man. But Roden contended Koresh was responsible for putting him at the state hospital because Koresh had sent the Odessa man to kill him following the power struggle.

Roden said Koresh isn't even a member of the church sect he took over.

"He converted the leadership (of the sect) to Nazism," said Roden, who spoke for an hour with reporters. "That's why I find myself in here at this time."

The sect's power struggle began in the mid-1980s after Roden's mother, Lois, took over leadership following the death of Roden's father, Ben. Koresh then challenged the younger Roden for control of the cult.

In 1987, Roden said he filed a $200 million lawsuit against Koresh, contending that Koresh was responsible for arson of a church building and embezzlement of its funds.

Later, a federal court threw out the lawsuit. In response, Roden said his attorney filed a motion in court asking that God inflict AIDS and herpes on judges.

Roden said he was sent to prison for nine months for contempt of court after filing the lawsuit. He said during that time, Koresh solidified his grasp on the church leadership.

In November 1987, Roden was injured in a shootout with Koresh and seven others at the sect's Mount Carmel compound.

Cult members faced attempted murder charges after the confrontation, but they were acquitted. Koresh's trial was declared a mistrial and charges against him later were dismissed.

Roden contended that he still controls the votes needed to remain president of the sect — a post he claimed in spite of Koresh's leadership — but the current leader has power over an executive committee which runs the group.

In the mid-1980s, Roden said he and his followers kept weapons at the compound to use in defense against people like Koresh.

Roden, with a long grey beard and his hair slicked back, spoke in a monotone and seemed nervous at times, rhythmically twitching his arms and legs.

Roden's attending psychiatric physician, along with several guards, stood by him during his news conference.

"I don't know how long he will last," Roden said of Koresh.

Prosecutors criticize tactics employed by federal agents

HOUSTON (AP) — Prosecutors who unsuccessfully tried followers of cult leader David Koresh in 1988 are criticizing the tactics federal agents used in confronting the sect and the return of a gun stockpile to the group.

One of the former prosecutors is convinced those weapons were used in a shootout between federal agents and members of Koresh's Branch Davidian cult near Waco on Sunday. Four Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents and two cult members were killed.

Sunday's siege "was a vulgar display of power on the part of the feds being met with fear and paranoia on the part of the Davidians," said former McLennan County District Attorney Vic Feazell, head of the office when Koresh was prosecuted earlier and now an Austin attorney. "If they'd called and talked to them, the Davidians would've given them what they wanted."

"We had to arrest them to prosecute them in 1987," he said. "We had no problem."

"We treated them like human beings, rather than storm-trooping the place," he said. "They were extremely polite people."

Koresh and other Davidians were prosecuted for a 1987 shootout with rival cult leader George Roden. The others were acquitted and charges against Koresh, then known as Vernon Howell, were dropped.

"I'd represent these boys for free if they'd surrender without bloodshed," Feazell said.

"It's sad for the Davidians. And it's sad for our government."

Feazell said the Davidians are protective of their land, viewing it as Muslims view Mecca and Jews regard Jerusalem.

During the 1988 trial, the county seized and held for more than a year crates of brand-new M-16 rifles, AR-15 rifles, compact Uzi-type automatic weapons and also sidearms that included .45-calibers, .357-caliber Magnums and Luger pistols. The cache also included five full cases of ammunition, said El-Hadi Shabazz, who prosecuted the Branch Davidians.

All were legal.

"With the arms we seized they could have held off every deputy in McLennan County, all of the Waco Police Department and the local National Guard for a month to two months," he said.

Shabazz said he believed some of the same weapons were used in Sunday's gun battle.

"The main tragedy was we had to return all the weapons and the cases full of ammunition to the defendants. We had a court order that we had to do that," said Shabazz, now a California attorney.

Guns in the cache, he said, were traced to different gun dealers in Palestine, Texas. Each was legally purchased in the name of Howell or one of his followers.

Crime standards must not decline

Crime and punishment are topics that millions of Texans are concerned about every day. With thousands of paroled felons on the streets now, due to overcrowded conditions in the Texas Department of Corrections and policies that promoted early release of inmates, there has been increasing alarm in recent months about the effects on the state's crime rate and the safety of citizens.

The situation isn't favorable, according to State District Judge Janice Warder of Dallas, who was luncheon speaker in Midland on Saturday at a meeting of the Landrum Society.

In fact, the judge noted, Gov. Ann Richards' "New Texas" has put 16,500 parolees on the streets of Dallas County. Judge Warder called Dallas "a dangerous place" now and noted she has heard business men and women remark that they would not office in downtown there if the office space were provided to them rent-free.

Part of the problem is a result of the more liberal release policy the TDC had adopted, which left the county jails of the state — including those in Midland County — holding thousands of convicted felons in addition to their traditional duty of holding those awaiting trial. That fact costs local taxpayers, both from the standpoint of having to house additional prisoners and from the standpoint of rising crime, plus putting county jails in the position of being prisons which they were not intended to be.

Judge Warder also noted that prisoners recognize they will spend less time behind bars now for crimes they commit. In fact, she said, prisoners in Dallas County Jail say they spend only 22 days there for every year of prison sentence they receive in court. "They seem to know more about it than anybody," she remarked.

To make a bad situation worse, the Texas Penal Code — the body of criminal statutes that defines illegal activity — will be "sunseted" out of existence on Jan. 1, 1994, and a new proposed penal code has been recommended by the Texas Punishment Standards Commission headed by State Sen. Ted Lyon.

The TPSC recommendations have been criticized as "decriminalizing" most felony crimes in Texas. Judge Warder added her assessment to that view by noting that under the TPSC recommendations the state would be lowering the punishment rate for crime.

Bluntly, decriminalizing felonies is the wrong action for a state facing a larger threat from criminals. Wisely, the Texas County & District Attorneys Association opposes the TPSC recommendations.

Judge Warder noted that her experience both as a prosecutor and judge indicate that for punishment to work "it has to be uncomfortable to commit crime." Decriminalizing felonies will not make criminals uncomfortable. It will make ordinary citizens more uncomfortable and unsafe.

The Texas Punishment Standards Commission's recommendations are obviously in need of serious revision.

Detroit drags heels on conservation duty

Japanese automakers are working intently to develop more and more fuel-efficient engines. It appears that the same cannot be said of American automakers; they fought hard against the most recent push in Congress for a further increase in mile-per-gallon requirements over the next few years.

This again showed Detroit's failure to accept its obligation, as producer of the largest drain on our energy reserves, to help create a national energy conservation strategy. Historically, it has acted to improve mileage only as ordered to by Congress.

In partial extenuation, it can be noted that this heel-dragging reflects Americans' not very likely interest in cars advertised as fuel-efficient. Automakers like to say that they just give the consumer what they want, and there is quite a bit of that. . . .

But there is a national policy as to whether buyers' whims, and the auto industry's catering to them, should determine how well we do on automotive energy-saving. Oil reserves, domestic and worldwide, are inexorably dwindling.

Concerted action is needed to make the most of what remains, meanwhile learning to exploit alternative energy sources. If we do not do this, future generations will have the right to say that our generation was incredibly short-sighted.

Bureaucrats need a 'meeting meter'

WASHINGTON — Bernard De Koven, founder of the California-based Institute for Better Meetings, thinks it's high time that the federal government convene a meeting to ban most meetings.

De Koven has invented the "meeting meter," a $39.95 computer program that he calls a "taxi meter for meetings."

Anderson

Before your meeting, you punch in the hourly salary of each participant and then you put a little flag down as if you were a cabbie. It lets you gauge how much the meeting is costing you — minute by minute.

"I would donate it to the federal government if they would use it consistently," joked De Koven. "The amount of money that's being spent on meetings is phenomenal. And it's even more true in the government world than the business world."

De Koven said that it would have even been an effective tool during the Pentagon procurement scandal, when Pentagon brass were spending $400 for hammers and $640 for toilet seats. "I can imagine them all sitting around the table, deciding that my meter cost too much money and buying a ($7,400) coffee pot instead," he said.

De Koven believes that Clinton's vow to reinvent government will have to start in the meeting room. "Government meetings themselves have to be re-invented," De Koven said.

"They're more ceremony than actually result-oriented. I think that's symptomatic of a government that's become more focused on its politics than on its productivity. If (bureaucrats) get paid to go to meetings, they find that it's easier to not communicate well at these meeting because that way they'll get invited to other meetings."

De Koven would target meetings like one we reported on last year. Some 85 executives from the Labor Department's Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration flew to San Francisco for an annual management conference that included a class on "cultural diversity" which cost $18,000 to arrange plus travel, meals and lodging for all the executives.

Recently, we learned that the PWBA was planning to continue its management studies next month, with a five-day junket to Atlanta.

A phone call from our associate Ed Henry gave them second thoughts.

The next morning, the agency's acting director announced the cancellation of the Atlanta trip during a regularly scheduled executive staff meeting. The director, Alan Lebowitz, cited President Clinton's push toward austerity as the reason for the cancellation.

Not all federal agencies have grounded their junketeers.

Less than 12 hours after Clinton delivered his stirring call for sacrifice in the State of the Union Address, 19 executives from the Environmental Protection Agency descended upon the eastern shore of Maryland for a two-day junket.

The fact that Clinton's speech included an across-the-board pay freeze for federal employees didn't faze these officials. Their getaway to the Harbortown Golf Resort and Conference Center had been booked a couple of weeks before Clinton took office.

"This idea of going on a retreat for planning purposes is common for the government," said Mark Greenwood, director of EPA's Office of Pollution Prevention and Toxics, whose budget was slashed 30 percent from last year.

"We needed to get away from the office so we could avoid the interruptions of phone calls as much as possible," explained Greenwood. "If you stay in town and try to do it there you tend to get pulled away by phone calls. It was a pretty austere meeting. We just had senior managers sitting around a table trying to make some decisions."

Leaders set political stage for road show

WASHINGTON — At a recent Moscow luncheon hosted by the Russian foreign minister, Andrei Kozyrev, an octogenarian former summiteer summed up his host's political-diplomatic dilemma:

"If you seem to walk in lockstep with America," said Richard Nixon, "you give a weapon to your political opponents to beat you over the head. If you don't, the American opponents of aid to Russia will beat you over the head. That's why foreign ministers seldom get elected president."

Safire

Young Kozyrev is in Switzerland this week, meeting with Secretary of State Warren Christopher; we can hope that a "working summit" will be scheduled in Europe next month between their bosses.

Boris Yeltsin, the first president elected by the Russian people, is in the political-diplomatic bind described by Nixon. This is the Russian winter of discontent with its leader: he is damned at home for selling out to the West, and damned in the West for throwing reformers from his sled to appease apparatchik wolves.

Worse, rumors are flying that Yeltsin is off on one of his legendary two-week toots. Some say an occasional bout of drinking is his form of therapy; others say he was boozing gloomily until recently, and is now on vacation drying out; still others who have seen him recently insist the rumors are lies, and his "enormous recuperative powers" are both physical and political.

He appears jumpy, less self-assured; mafias and marchers sap his popularity. He interrupted his vacation to meet with Ruslan Khasbulatov (HOZ-bu-LA-tov), speaker of the Russian Parliament, who has been trying to draw power away from the reformist president to the go-slow legislature, but who cannot gain the presidency himself because he is Chechen, not Russian.

Yeltsin is listlessly defended by Aleksandr Rutskoi, his vice president, a military man who wants to replace him. First test of Yeltsin's comeback ability may be a referendum in April to see if Russians want a presidential or parliamentary system; Melor Sturua, my longtime Izvestia counterpart now teaching at the U. of Minnesota, notes that this expression of democracy could be scuttled if Khasbulatov insists on tying it to a vote of confidence in the weakened Yeltsin.

Though down, the Russian leader is far from out; he retains more clout than anyone. We know the interests of freedom are best served by the success of the capitalist reformers whose champion remains Yeltsin. How can we help?

First, President Clinton should meet with Yeltsin quickly in Europe. Russia is no mendicant; it has a bargaining chip in its influence with fellow Slavs in Belgrade. Yeltsin could improve the Vance-Owen proposal and station Russian troops alongside a new U.S. and NATO force in Macedonia, protecting the Kosovo Albanians and putting muscle into Bosnian warending.

At the same time, restructure the debt owed us by Russia in grain-credit debt — it's in default by $360 million already, with more to come — quietly tied to internal reforms and restraint on arms sales. Make a big public deal out of our humanitarian aid as well as encouraging oil and gas joint ventures. The summit success would provide a boost for Yeltsin as a partner, not a puppet, of the U.S.

Next, take the Clinton campaign to Russia. Set up a weeklong state visit in late summer, starting in Moscow but barnstorming through the Urals to Siberia. Flatter the Russian people with ringing rhetoric about two great nations in the process of change. Press the flesh; go on TV talk shows with Russian kids; answer questions at a town meeting in Novosibirsk.

Who is better at this than Bill Clinton? Though he is still inexperienced in global affairs, nobody is more adept at using mass media for the aggressive assertion of humility.

The serious purposes of Clinton's Russian road show would be to bolster the reformers; to preach protection of minority rights; to show an understanding of the sacrifices required by political change. (Russian change is in the right direction, toward free markets.)

Such a one-two punch — summit followed by state visit — would help insure our own planned defense budget cuts. By creating connective tissue between peoples, Clinton would prepare the way to do business with whoever ultimately follows Yeltsin.

William Safire's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

Clinton's economic plans lack sex appeal

The problem with President Clinton's economic plans is that they have no sex in them. It's impossible for you to follow the daily adventures of the deficit, the budget and growth of the economy without falling asleep in your chair.

How can we make the economy more interesting? By treating it as a sex scandal.

Buchwald

From The New York Post:

WASHINGTON — An anonymous source in the capital announced today that members of the Clinton Administration abused the military budget to the tune of $100 billion. When senators told the Administration personnel to stop making lewd remarks to the Stealth bomber proponents, the Administration replied that they weren't abusing anybody, and the White House had the right to proposition the armed forces in any manner it saw fit.

No charges have been brought against the Clinton people, but an ethics committee is conducting an investigation and will decide whether the $100 billion hug could be considered government or private business.

In the meantime, upper-bracket taxpayers claimed that they had been sexually harassed by Clinton's tax program. "Anybody who taxes you against your will," said the spokesman, "should be put against the wall and shot."

The White House denied that it was raping the rich.

"All we are doing is holding their feet to the fire. Some might say it's painful, but on cold nights the majority of the rich people find it very sexy."

The big gossip on Capitol Hill is that, despite President Clinton's plea for a reduction in deficit spending, many congressmen and senators are still in bed with their lobbyists. Photographers crashed in on a finance subcommittee and discovered three senators fondling the arguments of private health care advocates.

As photographers took their flash photos a lobbyist cried, "I don't care what you do to me — I will always kiss Sen. Bones' feet."

The proposals in the committee were naked ones and therefore were not printed in the New York Times.

Secretary of Commerce Ron Brown called a press conference today and announced that the tax credit plan for business was his baby. He told reporters that it was conceived one foolish night in a hotel room in Kansas City. But he accepted paternity for it and said that the Commerce Department would pay for the child and raise it as its own.

A Republican in Texas claims that he had been molested by Clinton's tax-and-spend program. "I just went up for one drink, and before I knew it they had put a surcharge on my income."

The White House responded, "He was asking for it."

This just in from the National Enquirer:

President Clinton's economic proposal was born with two heads. It was, explained scientists at the Federal Reserve, an aberration but not that special as most presidential budgets have two heads. There was some question whether the two-headed monster would survive until spring.

If it dies it will be put in a bottle of formaldehyde and placed on a shelf with all the other two-headed monstrosities proposed by previous presidents.

The National Star reports that President Clinton is considering a "love tax" for people making more than $200,000 a year. A source said, "They are the people who can afford it the most and, knowing how the rich think, Clinton's advisers assure him they will pay the excise tax without a squawk."

U.S. soldier dies in accident; Kismayu unrest claims four Somalis

KISMAYU, Somalia (AP) — U.S. special envoy Robert Oakley said Tuesday foreign troops have made Somalia safe for aid deliveries, but four Somalis died in a third straight day of unrest in this southern port.

The violence has claimed 10 lives, all Somalis. Marine Col. Fred Peck, the U.S. military spokesman, said a grenade blast Tuesday killed three people and wounded 16. And he said a Somali man who tried to stab a U.S. soldier was shot to death by another soldier.

Also Tuesday, a U.S. Army soldier died in a traffic accident northwest of Baidoa, the military command reported. He was the fifth American to die in the Somalian operation; two Marines have been killed by gunfire, a civilian attached to the army died in a mine explosion and one other died in a traffic accident.

The soldier, whose name was not released, was a passenger in a vehicle that spun out of control after the driver swerved to avoid some civilians. The driver was slightly injured.

Relief agencies in Mogadishu say their workers have been unable to distribute food in Kismayu because of the violence. Belgian forces have been bringing food and water to 10 camps in the city.

Marine Col. Peter Dotto, who represents the U.S.-led military coalition at the talks, said the next step would be to agree on a date for the groups to gather in designated areas so disarmament could begin.

At a farewell press conference in Mogadishu, Oakley said the U.S.-led coalition had stripped warlords of their military might. He said further unrest was expected but it would be less serious without heavy weapons.

"The problem of clan warfare, which has taken so many lives, is virtually gone," said Oakley, who is scheduled to leave Somalia on Wednesday. "That's not to say that anywhere in this country you won't find a lot of violence."

He cited the widespread feeding programs that have ended starvation in most areas patrolled by foreign troops and the start of rebuilding projects.

"You find children, not dying but going to school," he said. "That's a big change."

Oakley received a medal and citation from the commander of the coalition forces, Lt. Gen. Robert Johnston, crediting him with saving lives in Somalia.

Oakley, a former U.S. ambassador to Somalia, was one of the main forces behind getting warring factions to begin peace talks.

Fighting in Kismayu erupted Sunday between supporters of warlords Col. Omar Jess and Mohamed Said Hirsi.

Peck said Jess has handed over some armed vehicles and agreed to comply with a Tuesday midnight deadline to take his fighters and weapons at least 50 miles from the city.

The U.S.-led coalition arrived Dec. 9 to halt clan warfare so relief agencies could distribute food and medicine. Some 350,000 Somalis died last year due to warfare, famine and disease.

The Americans are expected to turn over control of the mission to the United Nations and withdraw most of the more than 15,000 U.S. forces. Peck said that would take at least two months.

St. Petersburg's residents get first taste of capitalism

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia (AP) — An estimated 450,000 people in this city of 5 million had their first brush with capitalism in the form of a gigantic Ponzi scheme.

Now they want their money back, and their street protests have taken on an increasingly anti-government tinge. Officials have promised some compensation, but worry the swindle could set back Russia's privatization drive.

Police have charged three firms with fraud and are investigating at least nine others. Two suspects have been arrested.

Taking advantage of widespread confusion about Russia's privatization program, as well as of citizens' lack of business experience, the firms promised to take any sum of money and increase it 250 percent in 90 days.

They said the money and vouchers were being invested in various stock and currency exchanges. Russia had issued the property vouchers to most citizens last year as part of its program to sell off state property.

Business was done in run-down, one-room offices guarded by men wearing police uniforms. Applicants attracted by a blitz of television, radio and print advertising stood in long lines to trade their money or privatization vouchers for stamped contracts.

The victims of the scam held several demonstrations in February. At a protest immediately after the crime was revealed, some tried to break into city hall.

Communist activists have sought to harness the anger of the victims.

Serb leader suggests U.N. protection for disputed areas

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The leader of Bosnian Serbs proposed Tuesday that disputed areas of the war-ravaged state be placed under temporary U.N. protection, but peace mediators quickly rebuffed the idea.

The proposal comes during a reported Serb offensive in the eastern Bosnian, where the United States has staged three relief airdrops. Serb leader Radovan Karadzic said in an interview that the assault merely countered Muslim attacks, and suggested fights could break out over U.S. aid bundles.

Yet mediators Cyrus Vance and Lord Owen denounced the latest Serb offensive. Bosnia's President Alija Izetbegovic, a Muslim, said the attacks were "incompatible" with negotiations.

The Bosnian government Tuesday night requested an emergency meeting of the 15-nation Security Council on the reported massacres. It was not immediately known if the council would agree to the request.

The discord at the talks symbolizes the troubled efforts to end the ethnic war, which began nearly a year ago after ethnic Croats and Muslims declared independence from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

The Serb proposal was put forward by Karadzic during his meeting with the mediators.

He said the 20 percent to 30 percent of Bosnia disputed by the warring parties be put "under U.N. protection, and then, in the course of time, resolve where they are going to belong."

The suggestion is a variation of a plan Karadzic made several months ago. Then, he asked that a referendum be held in the disputed areas so residents could decide whether their governments would be run by Bosnian Muslims, Serbs or Croats.

But Vance and Owen dismissed the proposal, saying they didn't "think this is a productive way to go," their spokesman, Fred Eckhard, told The Associated Press.

Territorial disputes are the main sticking point in the talks. Vance and Owen have proposed dividing Bosnia into 10 provinces roughly along ethnic lines, but all sides have not been able to agree on the proposed map.

Government accuses captain in ferry accident

BRAZZAVILLE, Congo (AP) — Witnesses and government television accused a ferry captain Tuesday of pulling away from the dock prematurely, causing at least 147 people to tumble into the Congo River and drown.

The victims of Sunday's accident were mainly Zairians trying to beat a Friday deadline Congo set for illegal aliens to leave the country.

Thousands of Zairians were lined up to get onto the 200-passenger ferry for the 20-minute ride across the river to Kinshasa, Zaire's capital, when a gangway collapsed and scores of people fell into the fast-moving river, police said.

It was one of the world's worst river ferry disasters in years.

Police did not report the accident until Monday, and initially said it had occurred earlier that day. Thirty-three bodies were recovered from the river late Monday and another 114 on Tuesday.

Congolese state television and witnesses said the captain pulled away before loading was concluded, breaking the gangway and spilling passengers into the river. Police said as many as 3,000 people were trying to board the aged vessel.

Group previews conference with video

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

People interested in changing education may have to start at "ground zero" was the message of an afternoon presentation Tuesday.

The Midland Education Partnerships Committee showed the videotape "Discovering the Future: The Business of Paradigms" twice Tuesday. The tape was shown at noon in the Junior League of Midland building at noon and to educators and citizens in the administration building of Midland Independent School District at 4 p.m.

The late afternoon audience included reading-recovery teachers from Midland public schools.

The partnerships committee showed the videotape as a preview to an upcoming conference.

"We are very convinced that the success of the conference depends on the education community," committee member Martha Manulik said.

The committee has planned a March 19 and 20 education forum. The "Education Combination," operating on the theory that "it takes an entire community to educate a child," will feature George MeKenna, Ph.D. McKenna, the superintendent of Inglewood Unified School District in California.

"As a principal, McKenna turned the school on its ear," Ms. Manulik said. She noted that conference organizers expect projects resulting from the conference to be ongoing. "We don't see the conference as being an end in itself," she said. "We see it as a beginning."

Another guest speaker slated to speak at the conference is Daniel W. Merenda, president and CEO of the National Association of Partners in Education.

Joel A. Barker, narrator of the videotape, challenged viewers to ask themselves what about their businesses or systems they would like to see changed. "Ask what today is impossible to do, but if you could do it, it would fundamentally change what you do," he said. "What's impossible today may become tomorrow's norm."

Barker said people are resistant to change and to changing paradigms, or patterns.

"It's easy to say no to a new idea. There is less work that way," Barker said. "Good ideas are shot down by people who believe the future is an extension of the past."

The film narrator suggested it's usually "outsiders" or people on the fringes of organizations, businesses or systems who create new paradigms, an idea that intrigued Jones Elementary School Principal, Marillyn Odum.

"Teachers are really having to prepare to shift paradigms," Ms. Odum said.

Some of the reading recovery teachers attending the presentation were interested in the topic "Reading on Grade Level by Third Grade," which will be addressed at the conference.

"Basal readers have really changed from skills-based to literature-based," Ms. Odum said. "Teachers used to having three reading groups and always a bottom group will have to make a shift in thinking to use the new strategies. A real leap of faith will have to be made at the first grade level."

MIA officials: Repairs won't affect traffic

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Midland International Airport officials expect ground traffic at the airport to continue as normal despite an anticipated ten months of work on an extensive airfield resurfacing project.

The repairs, made possible by a $3.36 million Federal Aviation Administration grant, will go toward two general aviation runways and several major taxiways. Under terms of the federal grant, the city will pay 10 percent or about $336,000 toward the project, officials said.

"Basically those parts of the airfield were failing. In some places the pavement is breaking up," said Ken Day, director of airports. "This is nothing more than the normal on-going rehabilitation project. We're trying to maintain the integrity, it's like buying a new set of tires. They've reached their useful lifespan."

Day said that the runways will be rebuilt from the base while the taxiways will receive a two-inch overlay.

He said the decay of the airfield was caused by constant usage and weather conditions over the years.

"They have been used and used since World War II without repair," he said. "General wear-and-tear and the weather have created the problem. Nothing more."

Construction, which will be handled by Jones Brothers Dirt & Paving Contractors in Odessa, is expected to start this month. The FAA approved the project after the Midland City Council accepted that bid and approved the design proposal.

The work on the two runways will complete a comprehensive airfield rehabilitation project started in 1988.

"We started with a lighting project and replaced all the electrical systems installed during World War II in an attempt to bring us up to date," Day said.

Since that time, additional work at the airport has included the installation of security fences, the

Bush can sit where he wants

By Steven Long
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — When Pamela Glowski and Randy Davis came to the Astrodome to see country music superstar George Strait, they found someone in their seats.

It was former President Bush and his family.

It happens all the time at the world's biggest rodeo, but these interlopers didn't move Sunday night.

"They were already in our seats when we got there," Glowski said. "We thought it was a mix up on our part at first, but the Astrodome people looked at our tickets and said they were in our seats."

"Mr. and Mrs. Bush refused to get out of our seats," she said. "The Secret Service said for us not to say anything."

Glowski and Davis, along with two friends who had come to see the performance, were moved to the rear of the field boxes.

"He could have sat anywhere in the Astrodome if he wanted to," said Glowski, who said she did not vote in the last presidential election. "He could have sat in a lawn chair in the arena, and they wouldn't have said anything. Instead, he sat in our seats."

The incident was confirmed by Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo Assistant Manager Lori Renfrow, who said that it was an accident that the Bush party was sitting in somebody else's seats.

Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo General Manager Dan Gattis confirmed that an incident did occur regarding the seating of the Bush party, but could provide few details.

"I really don't know what happened, but I know that the (former) president would never do anything to displace anyone from their seats," he said. "We offer our apologies to those people."

Bush chose to sit with the regular rodeo crowd, rather that watching the show from a more private box.

Lawyers to give grant to restitution center

Staff report

The Midland County Young Lawyers Association will present a grant to the Midland Restitution Center during its board meeting at noon today at the restitution center, 215 W. Industrial.

The grant is for $2,209 and will be used for the purchase of educational videos. The grant will enable the center to "significantly augment" its on-site resources.

"Educational videos are an important educational tool for the center because the average learning ability of its residents is between the 4th and 6th grade," according to a press release provided by the Young Lawyers Association. "This makes it difficult, if not impossible, for them to comprehend complicated reading materials. Video tapes can assist these individuals in assimilating educational information for their rehabilitation and reintegration."

The Midland Restitution Center will use the grant to purchase several videos for use with group and individual counseling sessions on addiction. Through them, the center expects that 60 percent of the residents will, with six months to a year, learn more effective ways to deal with recovery and relapse. The residents will be taught alternative means of dealing with situations that can lead to relapse, thus increasing the opportunities for them to lead more productive, crime-free lives.

The center, a program of the Midland Judicial District, provides 24-hour-a-day supervision for 48 felony probationers who reside in the facility, work in the community on regular employment, as well as perform community service for various civic organizations and participate in the center's rehabilitation programs.

The center's mission is to provide "residents with an opportunity to learn appropriate ways to address their family responsibilities, their community responsibilities, their educational deficit and their addictions."

Board appoints District 2 director

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Josie D. Ramirez, who finds reward in working toward preventative medicine for Midlanders who are without health-care funding or insurance, has been appointed director of the Midland County Hospital District's District 2 for south and southeast Midland.

"I care about people," Mrs. Ramirez said Tuesday. "It brings me a lot of joy" to spread the news of a health-care coalition involving Midland Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, Casa De Amigos and the Southeast Senior Center.

Beginning at mid-year, Memorial Hospital will be setting up adult medical clinics at Casa De Amigos and at the Southeast Center.

"It just gives me joy to know that there are things happening" that "hopefully will make people healthier," Mrs. Ramirez said.

Mrs. Ramirez, 51, is succeeding the Rev. Sylvester Ferguson on the hospital district's seven-member board of directors. She will serve out the remaining time on Ferguson's two-year term, which ends in May. And she may campaign for the board in the May 1 election.

Filing deadline is March 17 in the hospital's administrative offices.

In addition to the District 2 post now held by Mrs. Ramirez, three additional posts are up for re-election. Those seats are held by Margaret Williams, District 1; Richard Dulaney, District 5 and Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld, District 6. The new terms would be for three years and subsequently would be four-year terms instead of the current two years.

Ferguson, pastor of Greater St. Luke AME (African Methodist Episcopal) Church in Midland since the mid-1980s, resigned his board position to accept a ministry in Athens in East Texas. In 1990, he succeeded Oralia "Lilly" Corrales on the hospital board.

Mrs. Ramirez was appointed to the District 2 post following a search for candidates.

"We are just so pleased to have her on the board," said Margaret Williams, board president. "She has a lot of experience in serving on community-service boards and in community work. We hope she will run for election."

Mrs. Ramirez, who is a library assistant at DeZavala Elementary School, serves on the United Way of Midland board and has been involved in several programs, including Project Blueprint, a minority leadership development program; the Boys Scouts, Family Services and the Parent-Teacher Association. She and her husband, Emilio, have three children: Reuben Ramirez, Michael Ramirez and Lisa Kay Garces, all of Midland. Additionally, they are raising a 9-year-old grandson, Christopher.

In the late 1960s and early 1970s, Mrs. Ramirez she was a volunteer for the hospital's Auxiliary.

Jane Wolf, executive director of Midland's United Way, said that Mrs. Ramirez has "excellent capabilities, is conscientious, cares about her community and takes a leadership role in the community. Whatever she says she'll do, she does," Ms. Wolf said. "She's a willing worker as well as a leader."

Mrs. Ramirez said that extending health care to adults in east and southeast Midland "certainly will be beneficial to adults." The adult medical clinics will save tax dollars through preventative medicine and by avoiding costly hospital visits for indigents, whose care is funded by tax dollars.

"I just wanted to be able to spread the word" about the adult medical clinics, Mrs. Ramirez said. "The (Memorial) Hospital has been very good to me when my loved ones were there."

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Josie Ramirez, 51, has been appointed to the board of directors of the Midland County Hospital District.

And Mrs. Ramirez is particularly focused on preventative medicine since both her brother and sister died of treatable conditions.

Her brother, Reuben De Los Santos, died at age 45 in 1988 of an aneurysm. He had suffered from hypertension, high-blood pressure, but refused to consult a physician.

"He, being a man, absolutely hated it (going to the doctor)," Mrs. Ramirez said.

Blues bring East Texas guitarist lifetime of joy

By Cheryel Wilson
Associated Press Writer

KILGORE — The old home where he reared four spirited children is no longer the place it used to be.

Through a window, John T. Samples watches yellow flowers in bloom on the nine-acre farm where children used to run and play.

Not a day or night goes by he does not think about the good times and his wife who shared more than 50 years of his life until her death five years ago.

Samples, who Jan. 10 turned 95, said much in his life has changed.

At this small, quiet house in the deep Piney Woods of East Texas, it's just him, his dog "Joe Boy," and the old guitar.

Samples said he wrote "Living By Yo' self," because that is the way he feels.

On other days, the lyrics to "Make Me Down A Pallet On The Floor," "Nobody's Business What I Do," and "I like Those Skirts" and the sound of the guitar ring through empty rooms where photos of children and grandchildren hang on walls and sit on tables.

When he doesn't feel like picking the strings on his guitar, he plays those same songs on the piano in the back room of the house. Sometimes he takes a pencil and paper from the cabinet to write down a few lyrics that come into his head.

"I could've been famous," he said. "But I didn't have no help. This is a talent the good Lord gave me."

In his younger days, Samples said he was one of West Texas' best guitarists. He went to Sweetwater from Kilgore in 1928 to pick cotton, and while there formed a three-member blues band.

They played for dances and at cafeterias throughout West Texas, including Lubbock, until 1931, when the oil boom hit East Texas and he returned home to work and marry.

He remembers playing with some East Texas' greats — Tommy Austin and Sam Neil.

That blues era gradually came to an end, but Samples refused to put away the guitar he'd been playing since age 5.

"Hesitating stockings. Hesitating shoes. Hesitating women got the hesitating blues."

Samples said those lyrics don't make him sad.

teen-ager in 1970 of sugar diabetes and had been taking medication.

"There were three of us (children) and now I am the only one left," Mrs. Ramirez said.

"This was the good Lord leading me" to health care and preparing her for a position on the hospital district board. "I do not do anything for show. I do it because I care."

Mrs. Ramirez, who suffers from high-blood pressure, said, "I do what I need to do" to control hypertension. She sees her doctor and takes medication.

And by the adult medical clinics being set up at Casa De Amigos and at the Southeast Senior Center, many Midlanders who cannot afford health care will visit the clinics.

"Doctors are very expensive," Mrs. Ramirez said. "And medication is very expensive."

The costs, if anything, to patients at the clinics will be nominal.

Syndii McCreary, Memorial Hospital's vice president for patient care, noted that the United Way's Midland Introspective project in the late 1980s identified the need for health-care services in east and southeast Midland. United Way has committed $43,000 to start up the services. Additional funding, including Medicare, is being pursued.

Medical staff will be treating adults at the clinics in a cost-effective fashion in which prenatal and pediatric care is administered at the hospital's Community Health Care Clinic.

"There are many people in east and southeast Midland who are just not going to come out of their neighborhood," Ms. Wolf said. Many are isolated by lack of transportation and funds and by their culture. "There is a certain neighborhood comfort zone," Ms. Wolf said. And many of those people likely would visit the clinics in their neighborhoods.

"We are going to focus on hypertension, diabetes and chronic pulmonary problems," Ms. McCreary said. "And, lastly, we want to do some cancer screening."

By placing the medical services in the community, there likely will be a good response to preventative medicine.

Already established at Casa De Amigos is a part-time clinic operated by volunteer doctors, nurses and interpreters, said Lael Cordes-Pitts, Casa De Amigos executive director. The Southeast Senior Center operates a wellness program and limited screening.

The Casa De Amigos clinic, which operates one night a week, serves the "working poor, and that has gone well," Ms. Cordes-Pitts said.

The per-visit fee is $5 donation if they can afford it. "If they can't, we don't push the issue," Ms. Cordes-Pitts said.

"So many of the working poor don't have health insurance," Ms. Cordes-Pitts said. "When they do go to the emergency room or to the hospital, that (cost) comes back to you and me, the taxpayers," in the form of a tax rate to pay for indigent care.

At mid-year, when the two adult medical clinics are to open, Memorial Hospital "will provide the professional services with a paid staff and will see more people, and our (Casa De Amigos clinic) still would be supplementary," Ms. Cordes-Pitts said.

Committees consider judicial election reforms

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Attorney General Dan Morales told a Senate subcommittee Tuesday that his proposal to reform the way state district judges are elected would increase minority representation.

"Today we are living with judicial selection methods that may have served us well when they were established almost 120 years ago, but now fail us in many key respects," Morales said in testimony before a special subcommittee on redistricting, ethics and elections.

His proposal consists of a system of electing state district judges in subdistricts in Texas counties whose population exceeds 100,000. He has said such a plan would affect about 28 counties. He also has proposed campaign spending reforms that would cover all state district judicial races.

The Senate panel is considering several measures to reform the countywide election of some Texas judges.

A federal appeals court has ruled that the at-large system of electing state district judges in eight urban Texas counties discriminates against black and Hispanic voters. The counties are Harris, Dallas, Tarrant, Bexar, Jefferson, Lubbock, Ector and Midland.

purchase of land for a runway protection zone for approaches and the rehabilitation of air carrier runways.

In 1991, crews finished construction on an aircraft rescue firefighting maintenance building.

Last fall, airport officials accepted a bid from a Dallas engineering company to work on a sign-improvement project ordered by the FAA.

Additionally, the council approved the purchase of an aircraft rescue vehicle valued at $297,438. That vehicle, expected to arrive from Oshkosh Truck Corp. in Oshkosh, Wis., in about a year, will replace the existing 12-year-old vehicle.

The total cost of those two projects exceeded $600,000, which was mostly paid for by FAA grants. The city paid $60,739 of the bill.

Religion scholars: Splinter sects look to return of Christ

By Cecile Holmes White
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Most splinter Christian sects emphasize the return of Christ and have a charismatic leader they believe has a special understanding of Scripture.

Religion scholars say followers trust their leader to have a clearly defined sense of mission and purpose.

But most such believers do not resort to violence, and only some, such as the Branch Davidian, are led by a self-proclaimed messiah like David Koresh. The cult leader signaled on Tuesday his interest in bringing an end to the bloody standoff with law enforcement officers gathered near the group's compound at Mount Carmel near Waco.

"They would typify most groups like this in which a charismatic leader comes along and appeals to people who are very threatened by the instability of the world around them," said Lorin Cranford, a professor of New Testament at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth. "This leader typically gives black-and-white answers to every issue."

From a sociological perspective, such groups are most closely linked to extreme cases of psychological manipulation and violence.

Perhaps the best-known example is the mass suicide 15 years ago at Jonestown, Guyana, when more than 900 followers of the Rev. Jim Jones joined him in death by drinking Kool-aid laced with cyanide.

"Seldom do such groups grow very big," said Rice University sociologist William Martin. "A lot of people back off, but the ones who stay are likely to be the ones capable of the highest degree of fanaticism."

Baylor University religion Professor Bill Pitts, who has studied the Branch Davidians and other groups, said they share a "great emphasis on the imminent return of Christ" with Seventh-day Adventists.

"That's the key doctrine," Pitts said. "With that, they have to have some means of interpreting when that will occur. Of course, the answer is to be found in the Bible, and their leaders are understood to have special knowledge of Scripture."

Koresh is reported to claim to be Jesus Christ. His followers are said to believe he possesses the secret to opening the seven seals described in the apocalyptic final book of the New Testament, Revelation. Most Christians believe only Jesus would possess such power.

Frequently near the end of a century, groups spring up who believe the end of the world will come soon. Rice's Martin said rapid industrial change, political upheaval and social mobility set the stage for more such groups.

Monday, the Seventh-day Adventists disavowed any remaining connection with either the Branch Davidians or the Davidians.

Slain teen's mother urges anti-gang bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The mother of a Richardson teen killed by gang members last year urged the House Urban Affairs Committee Tuesday to approve a package of anti-gang bills.

Julie Cooper told lawmakers she had believed her family was safe from the type of violence that took her son's life — the type of violence associated with big cities, not the middle-class suburb in which she lives.

"I always thought I was immune to it, but we all have gangs. They can go wherever they want to," Mrs. Cooper said.

Sean Cooper, 17, was fatally shot Nov. 6 by a marauding gang after attending a Berkner High School football game.

Three weeks later, two 18-year-olds were killed when a group of young men tied up three employees at a Richardson sporting goods store and cut their throats.

Justin S. Marquart and Frederick J. Banzhaf, who also attended Berkner High School, were killed in the incident.

Family members of all three youths attended the committee meeting. Earlier, they appeared before the full House when Rep. Fred Hill announced three resolutions honoring their sons.

"These families lost their sons to the sickness of the '90s which is urban violence," said Hill, R-Richardson.

Mrs. Cooper urged the committee to pass any legislation that might help combat crime, specifically gang violence.

"It seems as though the gangs are getting younger and younger and violence is getting worse," she said. "The kids need something like (the proposed bills)."

The gang measures, sponsored by Rep. Eddie de la Garza, D-Edinburg, would stiffen penalties for drive-by shootings and shootings into people's homes or businesses. One proposal would provide for better tracking of youths with a history of gang violence.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 3, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your loyalty and dedication will be richly rewarded as business conditions improve. Beginning in May, you find a host of ways to boost your income. Be less insistent on always getting your own way and your co-workers will become more cooperative. Your home is apt to be both beautiful and comfortable. In the fall, be careful not to mistake infatuation for true love. As the winter holidays approach, spend most of your time with friends who share your goals.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Olympian Jackie Joyner-Kersee, comedian Tim Kazurinsky, photographer Arnold Newman, socialite Lee Radziwill.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day to separate the wheat from the chaff. Real kernels of information surface in the sifting of recent events. The only answer to a relationship stalemate is flexibility.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A satisfactory agreement can be reached regarding a family matter. Keep personal problems strictly private. Co-workers help by showing more understanding.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Try to clarify instructions before getting involved in an important project. You can rely on your mate for financial advice. Devoting more time to the needs of older family members pays off.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your creativity and resourcefulness come to the forefront. An innovative approach helps solve an old problem. There is new emphasis on the basics.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The pace accelerates at your place of business. Plan your day so that you have plenty of time to get to important appointments. Word your correspondence so it says exactly what you mean.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An outstanding day for romantic relationships. A short business trip will promote your career or financial aims. If making investments, take a long-range view.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An unusual business offer is featured. Keep your personal enthusiasm for a risky venture under control. In family conflicts, be willing to make certain concessions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Sharing a secret with your mate leads to deeper rapport. Dress traditionally for an appointment with a conservative person. You find yourself thrust into the limelight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A busy day lies ahead. Present your creative ideas to the right people. A business associate could begin to view you as a potential romantic partner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A predawn hunch about a business or vocational project could point the way to success. Avoid discussing topics that could lead to bickering with a loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Although it is easy to reach an agreement with your mate or a friend this morning, you could run into a stumbling block later in the day. Promote a special writing project.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Travel or social prospects may have you keyed up, probably because of the romantic implications. Careful attention to detail will lead to the profitable conclusion of a real estate venture.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are deeply affected by their surroundings. They have a keen eye for beauty and can spot it in the most unlikely places. Sensualists by nature, these Pisces are fond of soft fabrics and beautiful artwork.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ◇	2 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ◇

In a perfect world the guilty would be punished and the innocent admired. Unfortunately, that is the case neither in life nor at the bridge table.

East's overcall of two diamonds would be made by every player we know, yet all it succeeded in doing was making declarer's life easier. Note North's decision to bid four hearts, thereby taking the strain off partner. There had to be play for game no matter how weak South's free bid at the two-level.

In response to partner's overcall, West led the ace of diamonds and declarer now had a relatively smooth passage. East won the trump switch with the ace and exited with a trump. Declarer won, cashed the king of diamonds for a club discard and the ace and king of spades and ruffed a spade. When that suit could not be established, declarer led a club to the king. East was forced to win with the ace and had to solve declarer's problem by returning a club or yielding a ruff-sluff.

Shifting to a club at trick two would allow declarer to make the contract in a different way. After forcing out the ace of trumps, drawing trumps and testing the spades, declarer cashes the king of diamonds and then runs all his trumps. To guard against dummy's ten of spades, West must keep a spade and let go a club, so declarer knows the jack of clubs will drop under the queen.

If East does not enter the auction, West might lead a club. Now East can win the ace and return a nondescript diamond to West's ace for the lead of another club. Declarer must guess the position immediately to land the contract.

Salman Rushdie receives divorce from American wife

LONDON — Salman Rushdie, in hiding from an Iranian death threat, received an uncontested divorce decree on Tuesday after more than two years' separation from American writer Marianne Wiggins.

Rushdie, 45, plans to remarry soon, sources close to the writer said last month. His future wife was reported to be a poet, but Scotland Yard asked that her name not be released for security reasons.

Rushdie and Ms. Wiggins, who were married in 1988, separated in July 1989, five months after Iran accused Rushdie of blaspheming Islam with his book, "The Satanic Verses" and called for his death.

The couple went into hiding after Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini condemned Rushdie on Feb. 14, 1989. They separated the following July, Ms. Wiggins has said.

Ms. Wiggins, 45, lives in New York.

Rushdie remains in hiding under police protection, occasionally emerging briefly for an unannounced public appearance.

Rushdie, who has a 14-year-old son from a previous marriage, petitioned for divorce on the basis of more than two years' separation.

KATMANDU, Nepal — British tabloids, which published transcripts of what was allegedly an intimate taped phone conversation between Princess Diana and a male friend, said she would be snubbed by Nepal's royal family because of her marital troubles. Not so, though.

Princess Diana

Crown Prince Dipendra, who was educated at the elite British school Eton, and Prime Minister Girija Prasad Koirala greeted the Princess of Wales at the Tribhuvan Airport in this rugged Himalayan kingdom.

On Thursday, the princess is scheduled to dine with King Birendra and Queen Aishwarya at the royal palace.

Diana, who separated from Prince Charles in December, is on a private four-day visit. She met with with officials and volunteers at the Nepal Red Cross office, then signed a grant totaling $264,000 from the British Red Cross that will allow the local agency to build a new warehouse and purchase jeeps, food and blankets.

At the airport, Diana was greeted by five young girls in flowing red skirts. She chatted with some of the 140 students from a British primary school who turned out to welcome her.

"She is pretty. . . . She really has a royal look. I wish her to be a queen," said Maya Chettri, a 72-year-old woman who walked three days to see Diana at the airport.

ATLANTA — Guns N' Roses singer Axl Rose is coming to Atlanta for the first time since 1987, but officials don't plan to give him a key to the city. They haven't forgotten his last appearance here.

The heavy metal band is to perform April 15 before a sellout crowd at The Omni. Apparently, the promoters thought it would be entertaining to give him a key, or at least a piece of paper signed by the mayor.

But official city image protector Joel Babbit said no way.

"I don't think it's appropriate that you give a key to the city to a guy who hits a policeman on his last visit here," Babbit said Monday.

On the group's last trip to Atlanta, Rose was arrested for brawling with security personnel at The Omni.

"I think he ought to be the one giving something to us — maybe 1,000 bulletproof vests for police," said Babbit, Mayor Maynard Jackson's spokesman. "Plus, I don't like his music."

LOS ANGELES — Simon and Garfunkel played such hits as "Sounds of Silence" and "Bridge Over Troubled Water" in a benefit that raised $1 million for the Los Angeles Children's Health Project.

Neil Young also performed Monday night, and Steve Martin offered comedy between sets. Celebrities in the audience included Jack Nicholson, Alec Baldwin, Kim Basinger and David Crosby. Tickets cost $100 to $500.

"You've done your part — now it's up to us," Paul Simon told the crowd as he introduced Young, who opened the show at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion.

Simon and Art Garfunkel — in a rare reunion performance — joined Young during the singing of "Helpless," blending their smooth harmonies with Young's thin, haunting voice. Young sat in on "Sounds of Silence."

The Children's Health Project is a traveling program for homeless youngsters already established in several other cities. It was organized by The Children's Health Fund, created in 1987 by Simon and a doctor.

Simon and Garfunkel broke up over personal and professional differences shortly after winning a Grammy in 1970 for "Bridge Over Troubled Water." They reunited in 1980 for a concert in New York's Central Park and again in 1983.

Perot criticizes Clinton's staff, congressional perks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ross Perot, bearing sharp words for both Congress and the White House, exhorted lawmakers Tuesday to abandon lives of "opulence" and accused President Clinton of surrounding himself with aides "who never created a job or ran a business."

The 1992 independent presidential candidate told a House-Senate committee on congressional reform that he intended to begin citing a "pork-of-the-month" project to highlight wasteful spending.

"You must eliminate all of the perks and practices that have caused the American people to lose confidence in Congress," Perot told the panel. "The White House must do the same," said Perot, who visited Capitol Hill on the same day as President Clinton. They did not encounter one another.

The fiery Texas billionaire, whose independent challenge won him 19 percent of the vote, was cheered by supporters and students as he entered a packed hearing room. Perot then proceeded to lecture lawmakers about congressional perquisites and to cast doubt on the ability of Clinton's economic plan to create many jobs.

Perot said Congress should clean up its act. It should do away with all its fringe benefits, end "the junkets, the trips," slash the number of committees and ban all foreign lobbying, he said.

"Do you really believe that most of us here are crooks?" asked Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind. "Are we really that bad?"

The Dallas businessman said that Americans felt Congress "is not responsive to the people. It is responsive to the special interests." And, he added, "We get funny talk we don't understand."

Perot got a standing ovation from the audience, which included many of his supporters, as he began his testimony and was at first treated deferentially by committee members of both parties.

But, as he heaped criticism on both the Clinton White House and Congress, some of the exchanges between Perot and the committee became testy.

Perot voiced clear skepticism about Clinton's $30 billion stimulus package the White House claims will create 500,000 jobs over the next few years.

"The government does not have a good record creating jobs," Perot said, adding that Clinton should get someone on his staff that knows how to make things work.

He said Clinton had "a tremendous and creative team (but) none of them ever created a job or ran a business."

That brought protests from both Sens. David Pryor, D-Ark., and Harry Reid, D-Nev., who noted that Clinton's chief of staff, Mack McLarty, was a self-made millionaire businessman from Arkansas.

"OK, fine, you've got one in the barrel," Perot said. "I hope they'll listen to him."

Perot suggested that McLarty had not been all that successful as a businessman — bringing further complaints from Pryor and Reid. McLarty was former chief executive officer of Arkla Inc., a Fortune 500 gas utility with 1992 operating revenues of $928.1 million.

When McLarty left Arkla last year, the company had just reported a $27.6 million third-quarter loss. Supporters say Arkla had problems adjusting to industry deregulation under McLarty's predecessor and McLarty moved quickly to sell off assets and reduce expenses.

"He is a fine fellow," Perot said sarcastically of McLarty. "I regret that anything came up that people would have to fall on their swords to defend him."

Reid claimed Perot used misleading facts and figures in condemning Congress and the administration on its efforts to get spending under control. "Get your facts straight," Reid told Perot.

Perot said Congress — and the administration — must start calling a tax a tax, decrease the influence of lobbyists and wasteful spending, and streamline both branches of government.

Senate adopts budget proposal

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate approved a proposed $69.7 billion, two-year state budget Tuesday that the Finance Committee chairman said would accomplish the painful task of staying within the state's means.

"We've had to turn away a lot of people that needed help that we just didn't have the money to help," said Sen. John Montford after senators took about a half-hour to approve the budget proposal with a 29-2 vote.

The measure goes to the House, where the Appropriations Committee is working on its version of the 1994-95 state budget. Differences between the Senate measure and the bill that's ultimately approved by the House can be worked on in conference committee.

"It's pretty painful when you have people who are incapacitated, who really are disabled, who have very serious physical problems, emotional problems, to keep saying no," said Montford, D-Lubbock. "We don't have bragging rights on human services, but we certainly feel this is as responsible as we can do within our means."

Legislative leaders have said there won't be a state tax increase this year.

But the Senate budget proposal would increase spending about $7 billion, or 11.1 percent, over the current two-year budget, according to Montford. That takes into account federal funds, state general revenue, user fees and special funds.

State general revenue spending alone would go up about $4 billion, or 8.3 percent, making up about $38.9 billion of the $69.7 billion total.

The proposal anticipates that lawmakers will approve about $2.2 million in cost-cutting ideas proposed by state Comptroller John Sharp, Montford said.

Senators last week approved $1.4 billion of those savings, with more than half of that coming from bookkeeping measures such as speeding up some tax collections and delaying some state payments.

The increase also includes an anticipated state revenue increase due to economic growth, and higher federal funding.

Additional spending, for items including a teacher pay raise pushed by Gov. Ann Richards, would be contingent on lawmakers finding further savings or other revenue, Montford said.

According to a summary of the budget proposal from Montford, state general revenue spending on public safety and corrections would go up $794.8 million, or 35.4 percent. That is mainly for criminal justice facilities, including the staffing of prisons that are under construction.

Montford's summary shows a 3 percent state general revenue increase for public and higher education, or $584.3 million, over the next two years. That includes a net $437 million for public education.

However, that figure does not include an additional $249 million for public schools that would not be paid until right after the two-year budget cycle ends. Delaying the payment keeps it off the books for 1994-95.

Study: Two-thirds of Americans who need cholesterol treatment don't get it

CHICAGO (AP) — More than two-thirds of Americans who need treatment for high blood cholesterol aren't getting it, government researchers estimate after surveying more than 150,000 adults.

"This is a good news, bad news story," said Dr. Wayne H. Giles of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, which coordinated the study.

"The good news is there have been very substantial increases in screening, awareness and treatment of high blood cholesterol."

The study, published in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association, found that the proportion of U.S. adults who had been tested for the artery-clogging condition rose from 46.6 percent to 62.1 percent from 1988 to 1991. Those treated — most with dietary changes alone — rose from 7.6 percent to 11.7 percent over the period.

The CDC estimates that 36 percent of U.S. adults need treatment — probably most through diet only — based on previous nationwide nutritional data collected from 1976 through 1980.

"That's very remarkable, given only a three-year period," Giles said Tuesday from Atlanta. "But the number of people treated is still less than one-third of those needing treatment. That's the bad news."

The CDC estimates that 36 percent of U.S. adults need treatment — probably most through diet only — based on previous nationwide nutritional data collected from 1976 through 1980.

Some outside experts said the CDC is overestimating the number of people who need treatment.

Dr. David Naylor, chief executive of the Institute for Clinical Evaluative Services in Ontario, said 11.7 percent of adults "is about as many as you would ever want to see treated."

Naylor said many risks — such as not wearing seatbelts — threaten young adults more than high cholesterol.

He supports healthier eating habits, but said studies show doctor-ordered dietary changes generally produce little reduction in blood cholesterol. They also leave patients feeling like failures if they can't stay on their diets and do little to reduce heart attack rates, he said.

Dietary change is a centerpiece of the National Cholesterol Education Program. The federal campaign, launched in 1988, encourages people to lower high cholesterol levels to combat heart disease.

Its guidelines say all people over age 20 should have their blood-levels tested at least every five years.

Those whose cholesterol is lower than 200 milligrams per deciliter of blood need only another test in five years, the guidelines suggest.

Those with levels above 200 should talk with their doctors to see if they have other traits that might increase their chances of developing heart disease.

Officials comb trade center for evidence of terrorist activities

NEW YORK (AP) — Investigators combing the World Trade Center bombing site said Tuesday they were focusing on terrorist groups, including a Palestinian organization that allegedly threatened to set off a bomb here a month ago.

"We're looking at several groups. I wouldn't want to name the groups. I'd probably leave some out," said James Fox, head of the FBI's New York office.

Pieces of a van were recovered from the garage where the bomb went off Friday, although Fox's office wouldn't comment further on a reported link between the vehicle and the blast that killed at least five people.

The names of two groups came up in response to questions at the news conference: the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, an extremist Palestinian group, and Hamas, a Muslim fundamentalist group that has opposed negotiations with Israel.

In a Jan. 22 phone call to the U.S. Embassy in Algeria, someone claiming to represent the PFLP threatened a bombing in New York City within 48 hours unless Palestinian deportees were returned to Israel, Police Commissioner Raymond Kelly said.

A second call two days later extended the deadline to Jan. 26, which passed without incident. Kelly said such a threat was not uncommon in New York, and that authorities receive 10 to 12 terrorist bomb threats a year.

While investigators searched for clues and suspects, authorities took another approach in the search for the bombers: a $200,000 reward for information leading to their arrest and conviction. Half the money came from the city, its biggest reward offer ever; the rest came from the Port Authority, which operates the trade center.

Play through

MIAMI (AP) — New penalties for slow play, including disqualification, will go into effect on the PGA Tour this week at the Doral Open.

The penalties were ratified Tuesday by the Tour's Policy Board, commissioner Deane Beman said.

Beman said the tougher guidelines were the result of requests from the players. The rule is that if a player takes too much time twice during a round, he will be fined $1,000 and lose a stroke.

A third too-much-time penalty calls for another $1,000 fine and stroke loss. A fourth penalty in the same round will result in disqualification.

Beman also announced that Augusta National has agreed to unspecified participation in a new golf Hall of Fame to be located near the Tour's headquarters in Ponte Vedra, Fla.

The LPGA, the U.S. Golf Association and the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews said earlier they would participate in the hall of fame project.

Beman said groundbreaking is tentatively set for next year, with an opening in either 1995 or 1996. He added that the only major organization not involved is the PGA of America.

"I have spoken with them as late as this morning and they are reviewing their options," Beman said.

The PGA currently is affiliated with the financially troubled World Golf Hall of Fame in Pinehurst, N.C.

Lee playoff run over

30-percent shooting stops Rebels cold, 52-46

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

ALPINE — Midland Lee tried to pucker for a Sweet 16 party, but El Paso Hanks would have no part of it.

The Hanks Knights eliminated the Rebels, 52-46, here at Sul Ross State University Tuesday night to earn a Region I berth Friday at Chaparral Center. Of course, that keeps Lee from coming home to its own stomping grounds and keeps it from a final 16 round. It will also end the Rebels' grip on the No. 10 state ranking they carried through the end of the season.

This night was a matter of Lee going stone cold from the field as the Knights were up to the task of defending Lee's outside game.

Lee hit only 18 of 59 shots in the game. That darn ball just wouldn't drop.

"I think if we played four times we would probably split them," Jon House, Lee coach said. "The ball just wouldn't drop for us, but Hanks did a good job of defending and we couldn't establish the tempo of the game like we wanted. We probably didn't go to the inside game enough, but I take the blame for that."

But shooting wasn't the strong point for Lee in this one. Single season scoring champion David Wilson (ending the season with 775 points) hit only six of 21 shots from the field and was 0-for-6 from three-point range.

Martin Lattibeaudiere did hit an average 4-of-9 from the field, but scored only 12 points as Hanks guard Adrian Torres did a good job defending.

Lee controlled the game for the first nine minutes of play, holding eight-point leads, 16-8 and 19-11, as Lattibeaudiere hit eight points in that stretch.

But that lead was a mirage as the Rebels went stone cold, scoring only five points in the second period of play and three of those points came from Lattibeaudiere in the first eight seconds of the second period. Lee went over five minutes without a basket and clung to a narrow 21-20 lead at the half. It was the lowest scoring half of the year for the Rebs.

"We were awful in the first half, too," noted Hanks coach Danny Lopez. "Our big guy (6-7 Jason Tollette) hit only 2-of-11 shots in the first half and he's a great shooter.

"We just hoped to come back and shoot better in the second half and we did. It is a credit to our kids in this one, but Lee is the best team we have played this year.

"We were surprised by their quickness in the first quarter and it took some time to catch our breath. I think we were a little nervous.

"But we made it to Midland and I'm sure Lee wanted to be there for that show."

The second quarter was bad enough, but Lee only scored eight third quarter points. Ryan Tucker had six

Red Devils squeak by Bulldogs

By Tom Ruiz
MRT Correspondent

ANDREWS — For nearly four months the Anton Bulldogs had been waiting to get back at the Rankin Red Devils. The two schools had last met in an athletic event in the area round of the 1992 gridiron playoffs.

And in that game, the Red Devils made Anton look like bullpups, 55-6.

Tuesday night in Andrews in the Class A Area hoop tilt, Anton got its chance to bite back.

With Anton ahead 66-64 and :50 seconds left to play, Rankin forced two turnovers and the Bulldogs were unable to nail down key free throws. Thus it left the door open for Rankin. After Edmundo Rey tied the game, Juan Bautista drove the left baseline and pulled up to drained a 10-foot jumper as time

■ The District 5 playoff representatives are set after a loss Midland Lee loss and a Midland High win.

By Pete Herndon
MRT Correspondent

The playoff teams representing District 5 soccer were officially decided Tuesday as Abilene High, Midland High and San Angelo Central are in.

With a week and a half left in the season, all that remains to be decided is the order of finish.

"Because the way the playoffs are set up, it's really an advantage to be the district champion," Abilene coach Randy Allen said after his unbeaten Eagles recorded their 11th shutout of the season in beating Midland Lee, 2-0.

Abilene raised its record to 17-0 overall, 9-0 in District 5. Lee, the league champion last season, fell to 8-8, 4-6. Wins by San Angelo and Midland High, both 7-2 in district play, eliminated the Rebels from the playoff race.

San Angelo defated Odessa High, 11-2. MHS defeated Cooper, 2-0.

Teddy Fernandes scored an unassisted goal in the 22nd minute when he flicked the ball in with a back kick to the far post. Goalkeeper Cutter Jones recorded the shutout with three saves.

"I think that's our fifth shutout in a row. Our defense just needs to keep it up," Allen said, referring to a match against San Angelo Saturday.

Lee had more offensive opportunities, outshooting Abilene 11-7 in a game marred by 27 foul calls.

Midway through the first half, a tackle by Lee sweeper Tommy Tipton forced an Abilene player out of the game and brought Allen out on

No decision reached on NHL-Dallas matter

Associated Press

DALLAS — The meeting between Minnesota North Stars owner Norman Green and Dallas city officials ended Tuesday with no clear decision to move the NHL franchise to Texas.

"Things went very positively, but both sides need to do some homework," said Lisa LeMaster, Green's spokeswoman. She said Green and the city would meet again on Friday.

Speculation that the move would be announced soon has been increasing since Green said last week that no major stumbling blocks remained in his path.

Green ignored pleas Monday from Minnesota Gov. Arne Carlson and corporate leaders in Minnesota urging him to take one more look at downtown Minneapolis.

The last-minute appeals included pledges from various organizations to buy season tickets if the team remained in Minnesota. But Green said it was too late because it hadn't met his Jan. 15 deadline.

"What I told them is it's interesting," Green said. "But it's too bad that had

Bulldog kickers earn playoff bid

ABILENE — The Midland High boys soccer team clinched a playoff berth here Tuesday, taking a 2-0 decision over Abilene Cooper.

The Bulldogs (13-2 overall, 7-2 in District 5) are tied for second place with San Angelo, while unbeaten Abilene High sits atop the league standings. Wins by MHS and San Angelo (11-2 over Odessa High) qualified them for the postseason when coupled with fourth-place Midland Lee's 2-0 loss to AHS Tuesday.

MHS scored both of its goals in the first half. Ross Hunter scored on a penalty kick to put MHS ahead 1-0 in the 23rd minute, as Dustin Arras got the assist. The Bulldogs went on top 2-0 when goalkeeper Jeremy Hernandez assisted Emanuel Sanon's goal with a 90-yard punt in the 29th minute.

The Bulldogs return to play Saturday, when they host Odessa High at 2 p.m. on the MHS field.

Lady Rebs win 4-3

ABILENE — Midland Lee's Lady Rebel soccer team defeated Abilene High 4-3 here Tuesday at the Lee Soccer Complex.

The Lady Rebs were paced by two goals from Stephanie Smith. Alishia Siruta and Shay Peters also scored one goal apiece.

Lee will return to action Saturday, when the Lady Rebels travel to San Angelo.

MHS girls fall 3-1

Midland High's girls soccer team dropped a 3-1 decision to Abilene Cooper Tuesday at the MHS field, dropping the Lady Bulldogs' record 2-7 for the season.

Cooper scored all three of its goals in the first half, taking a 3-0 lead at intermission. MHS' Kenye Kay Butts scored the Lady Bulldogs' goal in the 65th minute of the game.

MHS returns to play Saturday, when it hosts Abilene High in a 2 p.m. affair at Hogan Park.

Four Buffs take honors

Buffalo senior Jeremy Stallings was named to the first team for the third straight year, while senior Robin Barnes was named second team. Receiving honorable mention for Stanton were senior Shane Louder and sophomore Eric Martel.

The Buffs finished the season with a 9-17 record.

EP Coronado to open with Dunbar

By Bill Price
Staff writer

Call it a perilous mix of good and bad fortune.

For the third straight year El Paso Coronado's boys basketball team has qualified for the regional tournament. And for the third straight year, the Thunderbirds will face Class 5A Region I powerhouse Fort Worth Dunbar in the regional semifinals.

Coronado, which defeated Amarillo Palo Duro 49-33 Tuesday night at Chaparral Center, returns to the Chap Friday for the regional tournament. Dunbar, which defeated Cleburne Tuesday night 90-48, has downed Coronado at the same juncture in the playoffs the past two seasons (55-40 last year and 58-32 in 1991). The Dunbar-Coronado game is set for 7:45 p.m. Friday.

■ Region I Basketball

The other Region I semifinal will be played at 6 p.m. Friday at the Chap Center, with Hurst L.D. Bell facing El Paso Hanks. Hanks downed Midland Lee Tuesday in the regional qualifier, 52-46, while Bell defeated Fort Worth Western Hills 78-60.

After the T-Birds' victory over the Dons Tuesday, Coronado head coach Kenny John talked of a possible psychological advantage leaning toward Dunbar.

"Maybe there is. But I don't think it will be there so much with this team. If Dunbar beats us, it'll be because Dunbar beats us," John said.

"We've got two guys (forward Matthew Baskind and center John 'Rocky' Coppinger) who have been there both years. They've been there before and been beaten by Dunbar. I don't think they'll be bothered by it (the Dunbar mystique). If they beat us it will be because they're a better team."

On Tuesday, it became evident that the T-Birds (27-2) were the better team against Palo Duro (19-15). Running its clock-murdering offense and suffocating zone defense the whole game, Coronado was ahead 13-4 after the first quarter and 28-16 at halftime.

Baskind scored all 13 of his points in the first half, with two three-pointers and a pair of 18-foot two-pointers opening up the Don defense. Once out to a significant lead, the T-Birds were able to frustrate Palo Duro with their spread offense and penchant for passing.

David Jordan finished the game with 12 points for Coronado, while the Dons were led by Wesley Flowers and James Jackson, who had six points each.

"They played an excellent game and their defense was great. I see why they're 27-2," said Palo Duro head coach Gerald Tucker.

Tarkanian doing well after angioplasty surgery

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Jerry Tarkanian said he was feeling well Tuesday after undergoing an angioplasty procedure to clear a heart artery that was 80 percent clogged.

Tarkanian underwent the procedure Monday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles, where he spent the night before being released Tuesday.

"I'm on my feet today," Tarkanian said Tuesday from his daughter's home in Los Angeles. "Everything went well. I'm feeling good."

The former UNLV coach, fired only a few weeks into this season as coach of the San Antonio Spurs, said he had been apprehensive about having the procedure done.

"The doctor told me the odds of anything going wrong were small, but we had a 14-point lead against Denver this year and the odds were small we'd lose that game and we did," he said. "I started comparing the two. I thought maybe this was one of my years."

Paula Correia, an associate director of public relations at the hospital, called the procedure "very routine."

But she said Tarkanian spent the night in the hospital's coronary care observation unit "as a normal precaution."

The angioplasty procedure involves inserting a catheter in the artery, then inflating a tiny balloon to clear out the obstruction.

Tarkanian, a longtime coach at UNLV, has been involved in an ongoing battle with school officials following the announcement of his resignation in June of 1991. He coached his final game at UNLV on March 3, 1992.

He underwent a complete physical after he was fired in December as coach of the San Antonio Spurs in the NBA. He had experienced chest pains on a couple of occasions while coaching the Spurs.

Tarkanian says he has spent the past couple of months getting caught up at home and spending time with his grandchildren. He said he plans to attend some college games the rest of this season, including the Final Four.

He refused to attend any UNLV home games because of his dispute with the university's administration. He attended the UNLV game at Santa Barbara on Feb. 22, his first Rebel game in the stands.

the field. Allen and a Lee player exchanged words before the coach returned to the sidelines and play resumed.

Although the play was aggressive, with each team receiving a yellow card, there were no serious fouls called in the penalty zones.

Lee coach Eddie Bull said the referees' reluctance to call those penalties hurt the Rebels in the second half.

"There was some uncontrolled calling in the second half," Bull said. "That hurt us, but that's not an excuse. We didn't put the ball in the net and they did.

"That's the gist of it. It's happened before this year."

Trailing 2-0, Lee's Jason Meyers almost got the Rebels back in contention in the 59th minute. However, his 20-yard kick to the center of the goal bounced off the crossbar and just in front of the Abilene goal. After a scramble, Abilene was able to clear the loose ball to end the threat.

"It was a bad break," Bull said. "But we've had those kind of breaks all year. Last year, we hit them."

Abilene's second goal had come on a similar break. Lee Hernandez scored unassisted when he was able to net the ball after a save by the Lee goalkeeper in the 35th minute.

A victory over San Angelo Saturday would ensure Abilene no worse than a share of the district title. According to Allen, winning district means getting a much easier road through the state playoffs.

"All three teams get a bye in the first round," Allen said. "In the second round, the first-place team from this district plays the third-place team from the Wichita Falls district. Our third-place team will play their first-place team.

"Our second-place team gets another bye, but then they will more than likely have to play one of the first-place teams."

Burkburnett leads the other district, Allen said, followed by Wichita Falls Rider and Wichita Falls High.

Mavs' ineptitude continues

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

MILWAUKEE — The hapless Dallas Mavericks stayed winless on the road Tuesday night, losing their 25th straight, as the Milwaukee Bucks used a third-quarter surge to post a 120-86 victory.

The Mavs trailed by 10 at the half before the Bucks broke open the game with a 24-5 run to open the third quarter. Blue Edwards and Eric Murdock had 11 points each in the quarter, which ended with Milwaukee leading 90-62.

Frank Brickowski led the Bucks, who have won only four of their last 14 games, with 17 points. Edwards and Murdock had 15 each.

Sean Rooks led Dallas, which has lost 11 straight overall, with 14.

The Bucks went on a 12-0 run early in the second quarter, built their lead to 17 late in the period and settled for a 49-39 halftime lead.

Each team was 16 of 44 from the field — 36 percent — in the first half.

Dallas can tie a club record for road futility in Chicago on Wednesday night. The Mavs lost 26 straight last season before winning their final two road games.

Knicks 107, Hawks 98

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing had 30 points as the New York Knicks snapped out of a scoring slump with a victory over Atlanta despite 42 points from the Hawks' Dominique Wilkins.

The Knicks, who went 11-3 in February despite losing their last two games by an average of 27 points, led just 59-55 early in the second half before taking control.

Charles Oakley scored the first six points of an 11-4 run that put the Knicks in front 70-59. Later in the third period, a basket and two free throws by Ewing and a hook by Charles Smith gave New York an 82-67 advantage.

The Hawks closed to 102-96 with two minutes left on two free throws by Wilkins.

Pacers 109, Spurs 95

INDIANAPOLIS — Detlef Schrempf had team-highs of 26 points, seven rebounds and nine assists, leading Indiana over the San Antonio Spurs — the Pacers' third staight win.

Reggie Miller added 20 points, George McCloud came off the bench for 18, and Rik Smits had 16 before fouling out, offsetting 37 points and 12 rebounds by David Robinson.

Robinson was the only Spur to score in double figures and San Antonio shot only 39 percent, including a 3-of-18 effort by Dale Ellis.

The Spurs, who have lost four of their last five games and are 1-3 so far on a 7-game road trip, led only once all night at 3-2.

The Pacers made nine of their first 12 shots in racing to a 20-5 lead. Miller scored eight, including two 3-pointers.

The Spurs closed within eight by the end of the first quarter and six on Vinny Del Negro's jumper to open the second period, but the Pacers went on a 14-4 run midway through the quarter to go back up by 17.

Magic 108, Timberwolves 89

ORLANDO, Fla. — Jeff Turner came off the bench to spark an early fourth quarter run that carried the Orlando Magic over the Minnesota Timberwolves.

Turner scored 10 of his 22 points in the first 4:00 of the final period as the Magic turned a 5-point lead into an 88-71 advantage. Minnesota never got closer than 14 after that.

Shaquille O'Neal led the Magic with 25 points and 16 rebounds — his 11th straight double-double — while Scott Skiles added 13 points and 11 assists.

Bulls 87, Nets 80

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Being without the injured Kenny Anderson against the Chicago Bulls was bad enough for the New Jersey Nets.

When Sam Bowie's flu, Drazen Petrovic's foul problems, Chris Morris' shattered backboard and a little too much Michael Jordan were added in, it ended up as the worst offensive performance of the year for New Jersey and yet another win for the Bulls.

Jordan scored 24 points and ignited a 14-2 third-quarter run with a monster dunk to lead the Bulls to an 87-80 victory over the Nets.

Trail Blazers 102, Suns 97

PORTLAND, Ore. — Rod Strickland scored nine points in the final 5½ minutes as the Portland Trail Blazers came from behind to beat Phoenix 102-97 Tuesday night, handing the suddenly struggling Suns their third loss in four games.

Terry Porter scored 26 points and Cliff Robinson added 22 for the Blazers, who erased a 5-point deficit in the final period with a 13-2 run.

Strickland had a three-point play and capped the surge with a 12-footer that put Portland ahead 93-87 with 3:03 remaining.

Mario Elie added 14 points, including a driving layup over Charles Barkley to put Portland ahead 99-93 with 54 seconds to play. The Blazers outscored the Suns 22-12 over the last six minutes.

Barkley and Dan Majerle scored 20 apiece for Phoenix.

Nuggets 127, Lakers 115

DENVER — Marcus Liberty tied a career-high with 25 points and Chris Jackson added 22 as the Denver Nuggets beat the Los Angeles Lakers.

Denver, which posted its 12th victory in its last 13 home games, never trailed after scoring the first 8 points of the game.

The Nuggets made 61 percent of their shots in the first half and opened a 69-46 halftime lead. All five starters scored in double figures in the first 24 minutes.

Wolverines drop Hawkeyes, 82-73

■ Top 25 Roundup

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Chris Webber was held to a season-low six points, but Juwan Howard had 19 and Jalen Rose 16 Tuesday night as No. 4 Michigan cruised past No. 15 Iowa 82-73.

The victory was the seventh in eight games for the Wolverines (23-4, 12-3 Big Ten) since an 88-80 loss at Iowa. They have won 12 straight home games against Iowa (19-7, 8-6) dating to 1981-82.

Michigan led 40-28 at halftime and Iowa couldn't put together a sustained run. They cut the lead to 44-38 early in the half, but Michigan scored the next five points. Michigan's lead stayed between seven and 13 points the rest of the game.

Ray Jackson added 13 points for Michigan and Jimmy King had 11.

Webber had scored at least 10 points in 29 straight games, but he's now failed to reach double figures in two straight games.

Acie Earl led Iowa with 18 points and Val Barnes added 14.

No. 7 Vanderbilt 90, Tennessee 82, OT

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Vanderbilt held off Tennessee in overtime to lock up a share of its first Southeastern Conference title in 19 years.

The Commodores, who trailed most of the night, scored the first eight points of the overtime and made 10 of 12 free throws in the extra session.

No. 18 Xavier, Ohio 73, La Salle 58

PHILADELPHIA — Xavier, Ohio clinched the Midwestern Collegiate Conference regular-season championship for the fifth time in eight years with a 73-58 victory over La Salle.

Brian Grant scored 23 points and Jamie Gladden added 19 in leading the 18th-ranked Musketeers (21-3, 12-1 MCC) to their ninth straight victory. They lost their first conference game of the season and have since won 12 straight.

RANKIN: Regional tournament next time ran out, leaving the Bulldogs with another disappointing loss, 68-66.

The win propels 28-2 Rankin into the Class A Regional Tournament Friday at the South Plains College Texan Dome in Levelland. Rankin will play the winner of the Petersburg-Farwell game at 8:30 p.m. Friday.

But for nearly three and a half quarters, Anton had Rankin and its 22-game winning streak on the ropes. Twice in the final period, the Bulldogs had leads of eight and nine points.

After all, the Red Devils had breezed past their opponents during the long winning streak.

But Anton wasn't intimidated by Rankin's winning ways, and was determined to payback the Red Devils for what they had done to them on the football field.

"When you get to this round in the playoffs it doesn't matter if your 50-0, or No. 1 in the state, one loss and your sitting home," said Anton coach Ken Campbell.

And for Campbell and the Campbell Kids, as they were nicknamed this year, they almost made Red Devil soup of Rankin.

"I told our kids that Anton was going to remember what our football team had done to them and they were coming to get us," Rankin coach Shannon Hooker said.

In the opening minutes of the game, Anton's Anthony Trantham, a 200-pound guard who played more like an offensive tackle, bullied his way in into the paint for four first-quarter points.

It was that muscle that prevented Rankin from penetrating the middle as much as it wanted too.

Instead the Red Devils were forced to shoot from outside, where they went 5-for-19. Nonetheless, the Red Devils trailed by only one, 17-16, entering the second period.

Both teams pumped in 15 points each in the second quarter, but Anton still led, 32-31 at the break.

Anton came out on fire to begin the second half and went on a 8-2 run to begin the third. But it was a key three-pointer by Rankin's Jeff Jones that got the Red Devils within six points.

Again and again, Anton caught Rankin back on its heels to establish leads for seven and eight points heading into the final period.

"I felt they were somewhat tired and we had them playing our game," said Campbell.

Hooker countered by saying, "Sometimes during the season we get near the edge of falling over, but I believe that our kids were in better shape and we were confident."

But in the end it wasn't conditioning that mattered. It was Anton who missed three of four from the charity stripe and Bautista's clincher that shelved Campbells Kids for a little while longer.

Rankin (68): Jimmy Low 18; Edmundo Rey 10; Juan Bautista 10; Joey Varela 10; Jo Jo Guerra 8; Jeff Jones 7; Dionicio Sifuentes 4; Roy Abalos 3.
Anton (66): James Stewart 20; Deshon Jenkins 17; Calvin Kilby 12; Anthony Trantham 9; Jamie Rendon 4; Clint Conkin 3.

Score by quarters:
Rankin	16	15	13	24—68
Anton	17	15	18	16—66

Three-point goals: Rankin 4 (Jones 2, Abalos, Rey), Anton 1 (Conkin). Total Fouls: Rankin 13, Anton 19. Fouled Out: Trantham. Technical Fouls: none.

Pena elbow may require surgery

Associated Press

■ Spring Training

The Cincinnati Reds are anxious to see what kind of shape Kevin Mitchell is in. Unfortunately, the Pittsburgh Pirates already have found out what kind of shape Alejandro Pena is in.

The Pirates said Tuesday in Bradenton, Fla., that Pena, a 33-year-old right-hander, has stopped throwing because of persistent pain in his pitching elbow that may require surgery.

He apparently has not recovered from problems that sidelined him most of the final two months last season with Atlanta.

"When we signed Pena, I was assured that he was sound," Pirates general manager Ted Simmons said. "To say that I am disappointed in this situation would be a gross understatement."

Pena signed a one-year, $1.35 million contract with Pittsburgh, and Simmons said Pena's doctors misrepresented his condition. Simmons recommended the Pirates sign Pena without a physical examination.

"The last seven or eight years, he's had on and off tendinitis in his elbow. When a guy has that sort of thing, it's not something that just goes away," Simmons said.

Mitchell arrived in the Reds' training camp at Plant City, Fla., Tuesday too late to make Cincinnati's workout.

Mitchell arrived in Tampa on an overnight flight Tuesday and checked into the team hotel in Plant City. He showed up at the training facility during an afternoon intrasquad game, but didn't participate.

Mitchell is expected to work out with the club Wednesday, baseball's mandatory reporting date. The outfielder customarily waits until shortly before the deadline to show up.

The Reds were eager to find out how much Mitchell weighs. He was overweight last year, when injuries limited him to nine homers in 99 games for the Mariners. Mitchell had promised to report to the Reds' camp in good shape.

For the third straight year, Rickey Henderson was the last player to report to the Oakland Athletics' camp on Tuesday in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Minutes before Henderson arrived, manager Tony La Russa talked about how he would like his left fielder to become baseball's highest-paid player. Henderson is eligible for free agency at season's end.

"My goal for Rickey is to be the first $10 million man," La Russa said. "If he has the kind of season he's capable of having ... This is his opportunity to catch up for slipping down that list."

Henderson signed baseball's biggest per-year contract in December 1989, a four-year deal for $12 million. But by opening day he was down to 12th highest-paid and within a year was No. 40.

In Clearwater, Fla., the Philadelphia Phillies signed third baseman Dave Hollins to a two-year contract. In his first full season in 1992, Hollins hit .270 with 27 homers and 93 RBIs.

"The club didn't have to go to two years, but they did it and that shows me something," Hollins said. "I'm glad to get this part over with, and I'm ready to play ball."

The Cleveland Indians, meanwhile, are hoping to sign left fielder Albert Belle to a multiyear deal. He made just $175,000 last year and isn't eligible for artibration until after this season.

Belle, 26, who led the Indians with 34 homers and 112 RBIs last season, says he's going to arbitration.

"You know, you keep an eye on those situations," Indians manager Mike Hargrove said.

had not happened by Jan. 15. "If it had happened by Jan. 15, we might have been in downtown Minneapolis. Now I'm focused completely on Dallas."

Green, unhappy about attendance in Minnesota, has been talking with members of the Dallas International Sports Commission since December about the possibility of moving his franchise.

A survey taken by the sports commission has indicated that the season-ticket market is strong enough to support the team, Green said.

Reunion Arena, on the west edge of downtown Dallas, is used primarily for Dallas Mavericks basketball games.

Dallas Mayor Steve Bartlett and other city officials have been briefing Mavericks owner Don Carter on negotiations and reassuring him that the NBA team, which has used the arena since 1980, would remain the primary tenant.

Improvements costing about $5 million would be required at Reunion Arena to accommodate hockey, said Frank Poe, director of convention services in Dallas.

The improvements would include some new seating, adjustments to existing seating, risers, dasher boards and renovation to locker rooms and storage areas. Reunion Arena seats 17,502 for basketball.

minute.

It didn't take long for him to get going, either.

Lemiuex scored his 40th goal of the season 1:54 into the second period from the left face-off circle to cut Philadelphia's lead to 3-2. He then assisted on Kevin Stevens' goal at 3:29 of the period to help tie the score.

But the Flyers came back to beat the Penguins 5-4.

It was the first game appearance since Jan. 5 for the three-time NHL scoring leader, who was diagnosed with Hodgkin's disease after removal of an enlarged lymph node from his neck. He began a month of radiation treatments Feb. 1, the last on Tuesday morning.

His teammates were ready for his return.

Prices slip

NEW YORK — Energy futures prices settled lower on Tuesday in light trading as dealers looked forward to the release of weekly domestic inventory figures.

There was little news about the supply or demand of oil and refined products to influence trading in another shortened session at the New York Mercantile Exchange, dealers said.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in April settled at $20.47 per barrel, down 13 cents. During the day, prices fluctuated within a 10 cent margin.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $19 per barrel.

The Nymex has been operating on a curtailed schedule since a bomb in the basement of the World Trade Center knocked out many of the building services to the exchange floor.

Exchange officials were able to open the floor for shortened sessions and hope to operate a normal schedule by the end of the week.

Traders and analysts said that recent announcements by some members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries that they had begun implementing spring production cuts have supported the market.

But sellers brought the price down on Tuesday in anticipation of the supply figures from the American Petroleum Institute.

Early Tuesday evening, the API said refineries had reduced production more than many had expected.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar settled lower on world currency markets Tuesday as prospects dimmed for lower interest rates in Germany.

In New York, the dollar settled at 117.73 yen, from 118.70 yen on Monday.

In New York it cost $1.4485 to buy one pound, more expensive than Monday's $1.4385.

Stocks soar

NEW YORK — The stock market soared in late trading Tuesday, encouraged in part by reports from Washington of broadening support for President Clinton's economic plan.

The Dow Jones industrial average jumped 45.12 points to 3,400.53.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Stocks moved steadily higher throughout the afternoon, buoyed by low interest rates and the latest news on the economy. Traders said investors were also increasingly comfortable with Clinton's proposals for the economy.

The Nasdaq composite index jumped 8.21 to 677.72. The NYSE composite index rose 2.78 to 246.54. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.53 to 410.07.

Economic indicators inch up

■ Slight increase in forecasting gauge suggests steady expansion in nation's economy.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government's main forecasting gauge of future economic activity inched up in January, suggesting a steady but modest expansion this year.

Meanwhile, new home sales plunged during the month. Analysts weren't unduly alarmed, though. They said the drop was partly related to bad weather and they expect low mortgage rates will entice more people into buying homes later this year.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday its Index of Leading Indicators edged just 0.1 percent higher in January. Usually that would be taken as a prognosticator of near stagnation, but it followed a large 1.7 percent jump in December, the biggest in nearly a decade.

Taken together, the two months portray an economy poised to grow at a healthy, though far from spectacular pace, analysts said.

"The economy slowed somewhat in early 1993 but it still has a lot of forward momentum. . . . We should do pretty nicely the first half of this year," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch.

In a separate report, the department said new home sales in January plunged 13.8 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 561,000. It was the biggest drop in 11 years.

Analysts expect increasing home sales in the months ahead will be one of the economy's bright spots, with spin offs into manufacturing as people buy new furniture and new appliances to put into their new homes.

"The housing sector will continue to be a leading sector for the economy. . . . The only impediment is the jobs sector and that should improve as the year progresses," said economist Mark Zandi of Regional Financial Associates of West Chester, Pa.

Economists predict overall growth between 3 percent and 3.5 percent this year in the gross domestic product, the sum of all goods and services produced in the United States.

That's a marked improvement over 2.1 percent for all of last year but more subdued than the 4.8 percent pace in the fourth quarter.

"We will see further improvement but that improvement will be moderate and modest," Zandi said.

The leading index, although far from perfect, is designed to predict movements in the economy six to nine months in advance. Three consecutive declines often are taken as a warning signal of an impending recession.

With January's small increase, the index now has risen for five consecutive months. It last fell in August.

Five of the index's 11 forward-looking indicators were positive. In order of their contribution, from largest to smallest, they were:

- A rise in the inflation-adjusted backlog of unfilled orders at factories.
- An increase in the price of raw materials.
- An increase in the average factory employee's workweek, to 41.4 hours from 41.2 hours.
- A slowdown in product delivery times, indicating increased demand.
- A rise in new orders to factories for consumer goods.

The negative indicators, listing the worst first, were:

- A decline in the money supply after adjustment for inflation.
- A rise in new claims for unemployment insurance, from an average of 333,000 per week in December to 363,000 in January.
- A drop in consumer confidence after three months of increases.
- A dip in building permits.
- A decrease in new orders from businesses for equipment and buildings.
- A slight drop in stock prices as measured by the Standard & Poors 500.

The various changes left the index at a seasonally adjusted 152.9, up 4.5 percent from a year ago and 2.5 percent from three months ago.

Ford Motor Co. presented its Mondeo sedan Tuesday at the 63rd International Motor Show in Geneva.

Ford introduces sedan to be marketed in Europe, U.S.

GENEVA (AP) — Battling to rebound from its worst-ever loss, Ford Motor Co. on Tuesday unveiled a risky new venture — its first "world car" to be produced simultaneously in Europe and the United States.

The Mondeo, as it will be known in Europe, will compete in the mid-size sector hotly contested among European, American and Japanese automakers. A name has not yet been chosen for the car in the U.S. market.

Its introduction comes at a crucial time for Ford, smarting from a $7.4 billion loss worldwide in 1992 — the worst performance ever for an American corporation except for GM's $23.5 billion loss.

Ford officials seemed genuinely excited by the Mondeo. "It's the best car we've made," said Ford of Europe President William Fike.

"It has all the properties of a best-of-class vehicle — design, handling, braking, acceleration, you name it," he said in an interview at the Geneva Auto Show, where the car was introduced.

The Mondeo resembles the cars it replaces — the Ford Sierra in Europe, the Ford Tempo and Mercury Topaz in the United States — but with sleeker lines and a more aerodynamic design.

Thin headlights peer from either side of a minimalist grille, and the teardrop-shaped taillights wrap around the rear corners.

The automaker boasts that the Mondeo's components will be made of 85 percent recycled materials.

Most importantly, however, it is the first time a U.S. automaker has introduced an essentially identical model in U.S. and European markets. Ford tried it in 1991 with the Escort, but ended up with vastly different models.

The move will save Ford money through economies of scale, especially by providing a single design for the engine and transmission — the most expensive and time-consuming part of the design process.

'Swbyp's' is to be new Southwestern Bell logo

Staff report

ST. LOUIS — Southwestern Bell Yellow Pages Inc. and the walking fingers logo — for three decades one of the most recognized advertising symbols in the world — are taking separate paths.

The move is designed to help people more easily distinguish Southwestern Bell Yellow Pages from other companies, including a few who have confused businesses by using the walking-fingers logo on advertising solicitations that can be mistaken for bills.

Mac Geschwind, president and chief executive officer, said the St. Louis-based company will replace the venerable symbol on directory covers, customer bills and other materials with a unique new Swbyp's logo that has become widely recognized as part of the company's current advertising campaign.

Swbyp's (pronounced Swah-bips) is an acronym for Southwestern Bell Yellow Pages. The advertising campaign positions the Southwestern Bell Yellow Pages directory as the "place" where people can get the products or services they want.

The next edition of the company's El Paso directory will be the first to feature the new logo on its cover when it is distributed in April. Customer bills are expected to reflect the change beginning in May.

"We'll rely on the Swbyp's logo to create a unique, strong brand identity that distinguishes us from other legitimate publishers as well as those who prey on customer confusion," Geschwind said.

"While the walking-fingers logo served us well over the years, we'll help ease confusion by using our distinctive logo. It will help people see immediately that they're looking at our directories and bills."

In addition to the new Swbyp's logo, they also can check for the company's name and the bell-within-a-circle trademark.

Geschwind said Southwestern Bell Yellow Pages has received an increasing number of calls and letters in recent years from customers throughout its five-state territory confused over the identity of companies mailing out Yellow Pages solicitations. In some cases, businesses have remitted payment to other companies for what they assumed was Southwestern Bell Yellow Pages advertising.

Since the problem began to intensify six years ago, Southwestern Bell has sent out news releases, included messages on customers' bills and placed articles in customer newsletters, and other directory companies have taken similar steps.

The company urges customers not to assume a bill or solicitation for Yellow Pages advertising is from Southwestern Bell Yellow Pages or any other directory company. Bills or solicitations from Southwestern Bell will carry the company's name and the bell-within-a-circle trademark and, in May, the Swbyp's logo.

Customers are advised to examine the mailing to determine if it's a solicitation or an invoice. Solicitations resembling bills are required to carry the disclaimer, "This is not a bill. This is a solicitation. You are under no obligation to pay the maount stated unless you accept this offer."

Customers are also urged to contact the local Better Business Bureau, state attorney general's office or postal authorities if they feel they have received a deceptive mailing.

Southwestern Bell Yellow Pages publishes and sells advertising for more than 400 Yellow Pages directories distributed in Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas.

Introduced by AT&T in the 1960s, the walking-fingers emblem quickly became one of the most recognized symbols in the world. Cementing its place in consumers' memories was the advertising tag line, "Let your fingers do the walking through the Yellow Pages."

Geschwind added, "The walking-fingers logo has been a good friend for many years. It's just time for our particular company to move on."

Tortilla soup is tasty favorite

By Kitty Crider
N.Y. Times News Service

Tortillas take to soup like corn flakes to milk, only the result is much tastier. It's no wonder so many Texans are passionate about this potage, seeking a tortilla soup fix as frequently as a Tex-Mex meal.

We know which days different restaurants make the soup (as well as who makes it daily), who adds chicken to the bowl, who stirs in avocado. We argue over who has the best bowl, or what makes good tortilla soup. And sometimes the arguments get as hot as the soup because, like fajitas, today's versions may depart from their roots.

Tortilla soup migrated from Mexico, where it is basic to the cuisine. There it is a chicken broth, flavored with tomatoes, onion, garlic, chiles and cilantro.

"In Mexico, tortilla soup is more of a peasant soup and usually there is no chicken in it," says Lucinda Hutson, an Austin cooking teacher and author who has traveled and studied the foods south of the border extensively. "But Mexican cooks always have chicken broth, tortillas and tomatoes, which is the base of the soup. Usually the tortilla strips are placed in the bottom of the bowl and the broth is poured over them. However, tortilla soup is very varied throughout Mexico. It can be thick or thin."

What makes the soup, she adds, are the garnishes or condiments sprinkled on top: queso fresco (cheese), avocados, crumbled toasted pasilla chiles, sour cream.

And everybody has a favorite. Often more than one. Because readers always are requesting tortilla soup recipes from favorite restaurants, here's a round-up of several who have shared.

At Artz Caboose and Rib House, the spicy tortilla soup is rivaling the eateries' prize-winning ribs. In fact, they have to make the colorful soup every day because of customer demand, says Art Blondin, who worked on his recipe for seven years.

ARTZ CABOOSE AND RIB HOUSE TORTILLA SOUP

3 tablespoons butter
1 large onion, chopped
5 fresh jalapenos, seeded and chopped
4 cloves garlic, minced
1 quart rich chicken broth or vegetable broth
4 10-ounce cans tomatoes and green chiles
28-ounce can whole peeled tomatoes
3 tablespoons dried cilantro flakes
Lightly salted tortilla chips
Grated cheddar cheese

In a large soup pot, melt butter over medium heat. Add onion and jalapenos and cook until almost caramelized, stirring frequently. Add garlic and saute one more minute. Add broth and scrape any browned bits from the pot. Puree green chiles and tomatoes and add to pot. Drain whole peeled tomatoes, puree and add to pot. Add dried cilantro flakes. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer at least one hour. If too thick, add more broth. To serve: Place a handful of tortilla chips in bowl and pour soup over. Sprinkle generously with grated cheese.

With corn, three cans of Ro-Tel tomatoes and eight chicken breasts, this version adapted from "Bon Appetit's Favorite Restaurant Recipes" is hardly the t pical tortilla soup. But it's so colorful, tasty and hearty. And it makes a gallon, perfect for a big Super Bowl crowd.

TORTILLA SOUP

8 chicken breasts or 1 large chicken
2 cans chicken broth
Water
½ head garlic, peeled and halved
1 teaspoon celery seeds
1½ tablespoons whole peppercorns
3 cans Ro-Tel tomatoes, diced
10- to 14-ounce can tomatoes, chopped
1 large onion, chopped into 1-inch pieces
1 teaspoon ground cumin
3 chicken bouillon cubes
3 cups water
⅓ cup uncooked rice
16-ounce package frozen yellow corn
½ cup chopped fresh cilantro leaves
2 cloves garlic, chopped
Tortilla chips
Garnishes: grated Cheddar and Monterey Jack cheese, chopped green onions and/or fresh cilantro

Place chicken breasts and chicken broth in a gallon soup pot. Add water to cover chicken. Make a cheesecloth pouch with the ½ head garlic, celery seeds and peppercorns. (If you don't have any cheesecloth, tie them in a clean coffee filter.) Add pouch to chicken, cover and cook on low heat for about an hour, until chicken is tender. Remove chicken and pouch from broth. Add remaining ingredients, except tortilla chips and garnishes to the pot. Cut chicken into bite-size pieces. Add to soup pot. Squeeze liquid from spice pouch into pot. Simmer mixture long enough to heat thoroughly and cook rice.

To serve: Place a handful of grated Cheddar and Jack cheese in a bowl. Crumble tortilla chips on top of cheese. Ladle hot soup over. Garnish with green onions and cilantro if desired.

Ever since Kerbey Lane Cafe shared this recipe in the Specialty of the House column in 1991, I have received numerous requests for reprints. A spicy verison, it is sort of a cross between sopa de tortilla and sopa de lima.

KERBEY LANE CAFE'S TORTILLA SOUP

1 whole chicken, cooked and chopped into chunks
2 fresh serrano peppers, very finely diced
1 tablespoon oil
1 large onion
1 small can diced green chiles
1 ounce canned chipotle peppers, finely diced or blended
8 cups chicken stock or broth
Handful of cilantro, chopped
2 large tomatoes, chopped
Garlic to taste
Ground cumin to taste
Salt to taste
Juice of 2 limes
4 corn tortillas, torn into pieces (optional)

Boil the chicken in 3 quarts of water until cooked and tender. Remove chicken from pot. Remove bones and skin and chop meat into chunks. Strain the remaining stock. Set aside.

Cut serrano peppers in half and remove the center with the seeds. Wash hands well and do not touch eyes. Heat 1 tablespoon oil in a small pan.

Stir in serrano peppers to cook for a few seconds. Add onion, green chiles and chipotle pepper. Stir to combine.

Heat 8 cups of chicken stock in a 5-quart pot. Add pepper, onion and chile mixture. Add cilantro. Add tomatoes and chicken. Add garlic, cumin and salt to taste. Add lime juice and tortillas. Serves 6.

Note: Kerbey Lane actually uses the whole 7-ounce can of chipotle peppers, but that may be too fiery for some. Start with an ounce and add to taste.

HUDSON'S-ON-THE-BEND PHEASANT AND TORTILLA SOUP

5 cups rich pheasant stock or rich chicken stock
½ cup fresh corn kernels
½ cup diced onion
½ cup diced celery
½ cup diced carrots
1 cup chopped cilantro, or to taste
4 serrano peppers, diced, to to taste
1 cup lime juice
1½ cups pulled (shredded) cooked pheasant meat

Heat stock and add remaining ingredients. Salt to taste and simmer for 45 minutes. Ladle in crocks. Sprinkle with strips of fried corn tortillas and grated Monterey Jack cheese. Place crocks under broiler just long enough to melt cheese. Garnish with sliced avocado on top of melted cheese. Serves 4.

New 'lean' product seems OK but bland

By Linda Anderson

A few years ago we tried Hot Pockets, a microwaveable cross between a pot pie and a sandwich which was basically a crust wrapped around some kind of filling (pizza, ham and cheese, etc.) that you just heat and eat.

Anderson

Now Hot Pockets has a younger, leaner sibling called Lean Pockets, which is the same thing only lower in fat and therefore "healthier." At least, that's what the manufacturer, ChefAmerica, claims.

Well, when it comes to cooking, fast and easy are my two favorite flavors, so of course we bought a box of Lean Pockets to see how they compared to Hot Pockets. The Lean Pockets we sampled were filled with Turkey, Broccoli and Cheese, but the product also comes with Glazed Chicken Supreme, Pizza Deluxe, Beef and Broccoli, Chicken Parmesan and Chicken Fajita fillings.

A 9-ounce "Value Two Pack" (that's what it says on the label) of Lean Pockets cost $2.29, or about $1.15 per pocket.

Label Advertising claims Lean Pockets are "Fast & Healthy," as well as having "Great Taste - Lowfat;" and "Fits into your busy lifestyle; Fits into a healthy balanced diet;" is "93 percent Fat Free, containing only 7 percent fat by weight" and "Only 3 g saturated fat" and "Only 28 mg cholesterol!"

According to its nutrition label, one Lean Pocket contains 280 calories and 9 grams of fat — that's 81 calories from fat (multiply the number of grams of fat by nine, which is the number of calories in a gram of fat, and you get the number of calories from fat). That is less than the recommended limit of 30 percent of calories per day from fat, but it sounds like a whole lot more than 7 percent to me. Actually, the label says Lean Pockets contain "7 percent fat by weight," which is not the same thing as how many calories actually come from fat content. Always check the nutrition label for that.

The taste-test proved to be very interesting. I know turkey, broccoli and cheese won't appeal to everyone, but I like broccoli (thank you President Bush) and since I got to pick...

Anyway, I was the main taste-tester, and I discovered that the crust can be a little tough (to be fair, I could have zapped it in the microwave too long) and the filling was a little bland (these "healthy" foods nearly always are), but all in all, I thought it was — well, OK.

I might buy Lean Pockets again — they weren't bad — but it will depend on the mood I'm in at that particular time. They are quick and they are easy — and they didn't taste awful, just bland — and Chicken Fajita does sound interesting ...

Chef shares favorite St. Patrick's Day memories, recipes

By Patrick Healy
Associated Press

In Ireland, St. Patrick's Day is a religious occasion and a cause to celebrate. As a child, I remember waking up on March 17, attending mass and waiting for the St. Patrick's Day parade.

The following are some of my favorite Irish recipes. Happy St. Patrick's Day!

LAMB FILLETS WITH ONION AND SAGE PUREE

2 tablespoons butter
1 large onion, finely chopped
½ cup chicken broth or water
1 teaspoon freshly chopped sage
2 teaspoons freshly squeezed lemon juice
6 tablespoons sour cream
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
Salt and ground black pepper
8 lamb fillets (rib or loin chops), each 1½ inches thick
Sage sprigs to garnish

Melt the butter in a saucepan over medium heat. Add the onion and saute, stirring frequently until the onion is a light golden color, about 5 minutes.

Add the chicken broth and water, sage and lemon juice and bring the sauce to a simmer. Simmer for about 5 minutes. Remove it from the heat. When cooled, stir in the sour cream. Puree the sauce in a blender and set aside.

Heat the oil in a frying pan. Dust the lamb with the flour; season it with salt and pepper to taste. Saute the lamb for about 2 to 3 minutes on each side. Remove them from the pan and place on a heated platter or plates. Pour off any fat in the frying pan, add the sauce, and heat the sauce over low heat just until it is hot. Don't let the sauce come to a boil. Pour the sauce over the lamb and garnish with sage. Makes 8 servings.

WATERCRESS POTATO AND BACON SALAD

1 pound very small new potatoes, scrubbed
4 strips lean bacon, chopped
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 tablespoon white-wine vinegar
Salt and ground black pepper
1 bunch watercress, rinsed, dried and roughly chopped

Cook the potatoes in boiling salted water until tender. While the potatoes cook, saute the bacon until it is browned. Remove the bacon bits with a slotted spoon, drain on absorbent towels; reserve.

Pour off all but about 1 tablespoon of the bacon fat; add the oil and vinegar to the pan. Stir well; heat over low heat until hot. Add salt and pepper to taste.

Drain the potatoes. Cut them in half and transfer to a heated serving dish. Scatter the crumbled bacon bits on top; add the chopped watercress. Pour the warm dressing over the potato salad and toss well, until all of the ingredients are coated. Serve the salad while it is still warm. Makes 4 servings.

BALLY COTTON CURRANT SODA SCONES

4 scant cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
2 teaspoons cream of tartar
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup sugar
6 tablespoons lard or shortening
½ cup currants
½ cup golden raisins
¼ cup chopped citrus peel
¾ cup buttermilk, well-chilled
2 tablespoons whole milk

Preheat oven to 425 degrees F. Sift the flour, baking soda, cream of tartar and salt together. Place in a mixing bowl and stir in the sugar.

Add the lard or margarine and rub it into the dry ingredients just until the mixture looks mealy. Add the currants, raisins and citrus peel. Stir in the buttermilk just long enough to make a fairly smooth dough.

Turn the dough out onto a floured work surface and pat it into an even layer about ½-inch thick. Use a biscuit cutter to make round scones, or cut into wedges.

Place the scones onto a lightly greased baking sheet, brush the tops lightly with some milk and bake in a preheated 425-degree F oven for 8 to 10 minutes, or until the scones are golden and risen. Serve warm. Makes 20 scones.

DEAR ABBY

In spite of critics' carping, strive to persevere

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Don Richter of Leesburg, Ga., wrote: "Stick to the advice to the lovelorn, Abby, and stop being a public forum for crybabies."

Van Buren

Abby, I think Mr. Richter is out of line. Be that as it may, when Fiorello La Guardia was the mayor of New York City (1933 to 1945), he hung above his desk at City Hall this pronouncement by Abraham Lincoln:

"If I were to try to read, much less answer, all the attacks made on me, this shop might as well be closed for any other business. I do the very best I know how — the very best I can; and I mean to keep doing so until the end. If the end brings me out all right, what is said against me won't amount to anything. If the end brings me out wrong, 10 angels swearing I was right would make no difference." — ARTHUR H. PRINCE, MEMPHIS, TENN.

DEAR ARTHUR PRINCE: What a reassuring treasure your letter is!

I may take a page out of Mayor La Guardia's book, and have Abraham Lincoln's eloquent pronouncement framed to hang over my desk.

DEAR ABBY: What can we do about a co-worker who has a serious body odor problem? This has been going on since last year. We have attempted, to no avail, to alert her to this problem, but she has not followed through.

I am the office manager, and all the employees are asking me to speak to this individual again. I don't know how to broach the subject. The situation is causing a problem with the staff. This is no joke, Abby. It may result in her dismissal. She is a valued employee who has been here for many years, and I can't seem to find the words. Please help me. — DESPERATE

DEAR DESPERATE: Call the woman into your office and say, "Last year, I told you that your co-workers had complained about your body odor. Apparently, you did nothing about it because they have complained again.

"If you bathe daily, use a deodorant and wear fresh undergarments, and yet still have an odor, you could have a medical problem, in which case you should see your physician.

"Whatever the problem, please remedy it promptly. It is unfair to subject your co-workers to such unpleasantness."

DEAR ABBY: Enclosed is a photocopy of a letter I have carried in my wallet for more than 20 years. Although I have never been a smoker, I've always thought this was one of the most thought-provoking stories I'd ever heard. Perhaps it's worth a rerun. — BOBBIE BERNSTEIN, MADEIRA BEACH, FLA.

DEAR BOBBIE: Thanks for sending it. Here's the letter:

DEAR ABBY: On a recent trip to Scotland, I stayed with my 73-year-old maiden cousin, who made our trip most enjoyable with her humor and gracious hospitality.

One morning she said, "Where's the newspaper? I want to see who quit smoking."

Amazed at this, I asked, "Do they publish the names of people who quit smoking in the Scottish newspaper?"

"Aye," she said, "in the obituary column." — FRANK GALLAGHER, KENT, WASH.

DEAR ABBY: Six years ago, when my husband and I were both in our late 20s, we loaned my parents $7,500. My mother asked for the money, and it's possible that Dad was not even aware of it because my mother always handled the finances.

Since Mother borrowed the $7,500, we have seen them buy a new automobile, sell a time-share condo unit and buy new furniture. Apparently, paying us back never occurred to them.

Even though we are not in need of the money right now, a monthly payment of $50 would show good faith. At least it would let us know that they are aware of the debt. We didn't ask them to sign a note, and there is no way I could bring it up now without hurting their feelings and embarrassing them. My husband keeps saying, "Let it go." He thinks my mother may have forgotten about it, but my mother has always been very good at remembering even the smallest details — although $7,500 can hardly be called a "detail," right?

We have been arguing about this a lot lately. My husband keeps saying, "Thank God we had the money to help them out when they needed it. Now just let it go!"

I love my parents very much, but I honestly don't think we should let it go. I need some sound advice, Abby. How would you handle it? — NO NAME OR LOCATION, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: I wouldn't let it go. When you and your mother are alone, don't hem or haw, simply say: "Mom, when can we expect at least a partial payment on that $7,500 we loaned you six years ago?"

To order a collection of Abby's most memorable — and most frequently requested — poems and essays, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's "Keepers," P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Irish dish traditional

By Carol Deegan
Associated Press

Pull up a chair to a hearty traditional Irish meal of corned beef with dumplings and cabbage, potatoes boiled in their jackets, basic brown soda bread and Irish whiskey cake.

"Classic Irish Recipes" by Georgina Campbell (Sterling Publishing, $5.95) and "In An Irish Country Kitchen" by Clare Connery (Simon & Schuster, $32) are two cookbooks filled with Irish recipes. There's plenty of inspiration here for a St. Patrick's Day table.

Campbell's cookbook, "Classic Irish Recipes," is a collection of traditional Irish recipes — stew, lamb, scones and coddle, a mixture of bacon or ham, sausages, onions and potatoes. The book is illustrated by Marlene Ekman.

Clare Connery's "In An Irish Country Kitchen" is a collection of 150 recipes from both the past and present, including leek and oatmeal broth, Dublin Bay prawns, Irish spiced beef, griddle scones and potato-to-apple cake.

This colorful, 160-page book contains a history of Ireland, a bibliography and photographs by Christopher Hill. Connery has a food consultancy and catering company in her native Belfast.

The following recipe for Soda Bread is from Connery's "In An Irish Country Kitchen." She suggests handling the bread as quickly and gently as possible. "In fact the less you do to it, the better the bread."

IRISH SODA BREAD

1 pound all-purpose flour
1 heaped teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 to 3 tablespoons sugar
2 to 4 tablespoons butter
1¼ to 2 cups buttermilk

Sift the flour, baking soda and salt into a large mixing bowl. Add the sugar. Rub in the butter until well dispersed through the flour. Make a well in the center; pour in almost all the buttermilk in at once. Mix with a broad-bladed knife, working very quickly and gently until all the dry flour has been drawn together to form a spongy dough, a bit like thick oatmeal.

Turn into a lightly greased 7-inch round or 6-inch square tin, 1½- to 2¼-inches deep pan, leaving the surface rough but level. Sprinkle generously with whole-wheat flour, set on a hot baking sheet and bake in a preheated 425-degree F oven for 10 minutes before reducing the temperature to 400-degrees F and baking 40 to 45 minutes. The bread is cooked when it is well risen, golden brown and feels firm to the touch. Remove from the oven and cover the top with a clean cloth. Leave in the pan until cool before turning out and completely wrapping in the cloth to store. This helps to soften the crust and keeps the bread moist.

The dough can also be shaped into a round cake and cooked on a floured cookie sheet without the cake pan. In this case, the dough needs to be slightly stiffer, so that it can be worked by hand and cooked without losing its shape. Makes 1 loaf.

Is Your Child Too Small?

Growing up always has its hazards, but for some children just the process of growing can be difficult. For these children, a normal growth rate does not occur because they lack an essential hormone.

By three years of age, children should grow at least two inches a year until they are 10 to 14 years of age, when they experience an even faster growth. If children are not growing at this rate and are smaller than children their own age, they may have hormone deficiencies.

Odessa Women's and Children's Hospital is offering a FREE Growth Screening for children. By taking an accurate measurement of height. We can determine if their height is normal for their age group. And, if below normal, further evaluation and assessment will be recommended.

CAP ROCK ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE, INC.

NOTICE OF RATE CHANGE REQUEST

Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc., on the 12th day of April, 1993, and pursuant to Sections 16, 17, 37 and 43 of the Public Regulatory Act (Article 1446(c), V.A.S.C.) and the Public Utility Commission of Texas Substantive Rule 23.23(c) will file a Statement of Intent and Petition for Authority to Change Rates effective June 12, 1993, with the Public Utility Commission of Texas and all cities exercising original jurisdiction over its rates and tariffs.

Prior to filing, copies of the proposed revised tariffs and other pertinent data may be inspected at the office of Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc., P.O. Box 700, Loop 214, Stanton, Texas 79782, Telephone (915) 756-3381. Upon filing, copies of the proposed tariffs and supporting testimony and other pertinent data may be inspected in the office of the Cooperative.

A Member Rate Advisory Committee, made up of customer representatives of different rate categories are participating with the Cap Rock board in making this announcement. Cap Rock Electric has had no rate change since 1991 and the proposed 5% increase will align revenues more closely with rising inflation. Streamlining this rate filing process and addressing all intervening parties through the staff of Cap Rock will save you, the Cap Rock member, approximately $100,000, compared to traditional rate filing procedures.

All of Cap Rock's customers will be affected by the proposed change. The proposed change will increase Cap Rock's test year revenues for that class. The expected dollar increase by class is: General Service, $737,266; Small Commercial, $782,942; Irrigation, $121,947; Industrial Service, $123,266; Large Commercial, $6,735; Cotton Gins, $64,316; and Security Lights, $6,598.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify Cap Rock immediately at the above listed address and telephone number. Inquiries should be directed to Mr. John Parker.
