Clinton names jurist

Stephen Breyer is high-court nominee

■ President calls judge 'outstanding jurist of our age.'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton nominated federal appeals Judge Stephen G. Breyer to the Supreme Court on Friday, filling the second high court vacancy of his administration. In Breyer, Clinton chose a moderate consensus builder with deep Senate support.

"Without dispute, he is one of the outstanding jurists of our age," Clinton said of the 55-year-old chief judge of the 1st Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston.

Clinton offered the lifetime appointment to Breyer in a telephone call about 5 p.m., just an hour before the announcement was made. Breyer said in Boston his role on the court would be "to make the average person's ordinary life better."

Breyer would replace Justice Harry A. Blackmun, who announced in April that he would retire this year. "Big shoes to fill," Breyer said.

Immediate reaction from the Senate was enthusiastic; Democrats and Republicans alike predicted swift confirmation. "An excellent choice," said Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.

The Judiciary Committee chairman, Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, called Breyer a judge of "intellect and dedication to the law."

"He's a fine man," ranking Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah said.

MC honors graduates

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

More than 160 graduates participated in the 21st Midland College commencement exercises at the Chaparral Center late Friday, marking the end of the 1993-94 year.

Although there were about 250 graduates, not all were available for the commencement, MC officials said.

Speaking at the event was Midland College President David E. Daniel, who elicited laughter from the audience when he said, "As you may have noticed, there is no guest speaker this evening — please hold the applause."

Daniel read a moving piece written by MC graduate Elizabeth Rankin who spoke of the profound effect her time at Midland College will have on the rest of her life.

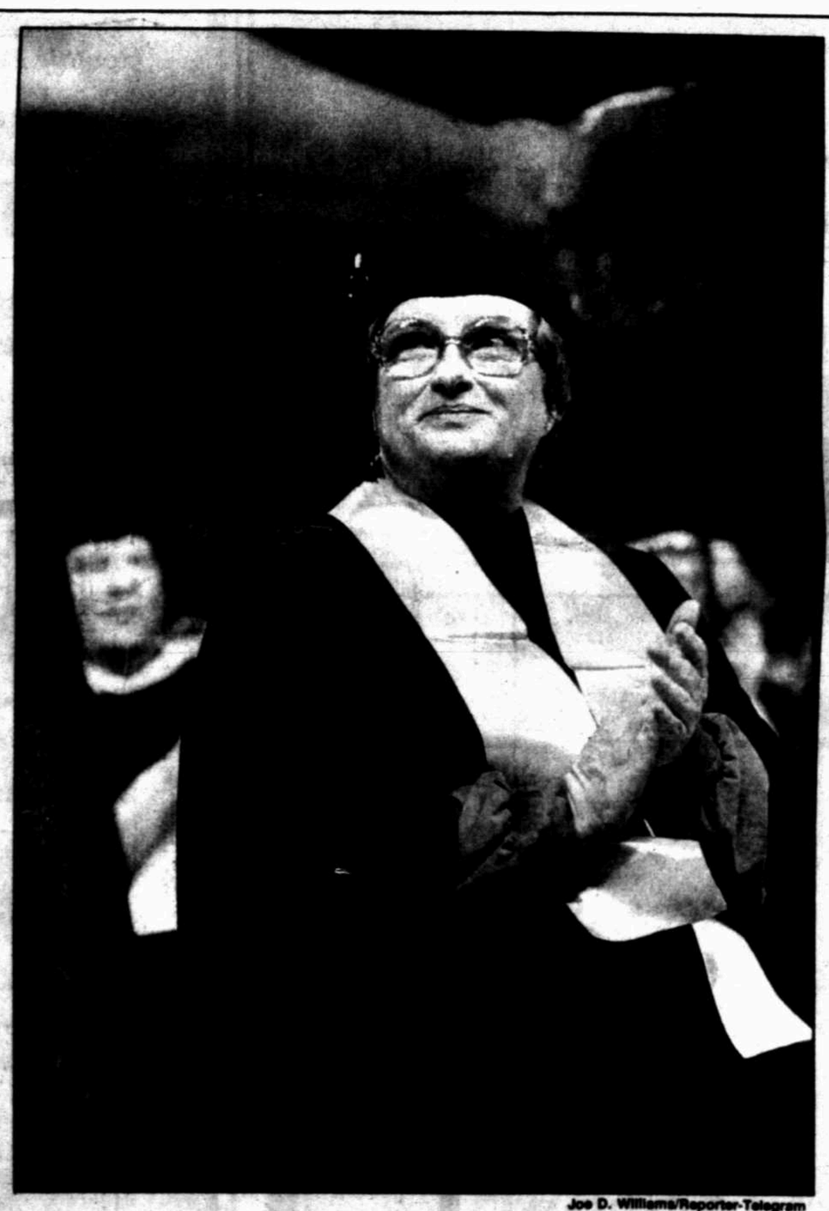

Although wheelchair bound, Ms. Rankin has managed to commute daily from Rankin to attend MC. She graduated with honors and was listed in the USA Today newspaper as a member of the national Academic All American team.

After garnering her associate's degree in business administration, Ms. Rankin is contemplating continuing her education at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

"I don't know if I'll be going in the fall," she said.

Israel ends Jericho occupation; town is to be home of PLO

JERICHO, West Bank (AP) — A Palestinian policeman waved his flag triumphantly from the roof of Israel's former military headquarters. Down below, two Israeli officers quietly folded the Star of David banner that had fluttered over this city for 27 years.

The occupation of Jericho ended on this historic Friday, celebrated by Palestinians as the day their nation was born.

The pace of change was breathtaking.

At sunrise, two Israeli soldiers guarding the iron gate to the military base still ordered away Palestinians waiting outside to catch a glimpse of the handover ceremony. It was the usual curt shout of "Go, go."

By afternoon, the gate to the forbidding compound was flung open and eight buses carrying some 400 Palestinian policemen from the Iraq-based Al Aqsa Brigade rolled into the courtyard. Many raised their Kalashnikov assault rifles — once a symbol of guerrilla warfare and now of Palestinian sovereignty — proudly into the air.

"Jericho marks the beginning of a Palestinian state," the commander of the forces, Brig. Gen. Haj Ismail, told a boisterous crowd of hundreds of Jericho residents who waved flags, danced in circles and hugged the policemen.

Strictly speaking, the PLO-Israel accord that put Jericho and the Gaza Strip under self-rule did not create a state. But most Palestinians, and more than a few Israelis, believe it is a first step.

On Friday, the last Israeli soldiers also pulled out of the southern half of the Gaza Strip, leaving at about 4 a.m.

Smithsonian display to depict Woolworth lunch counter sit-in

By Michael Landweber
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — On Feb. 1, 1960, four black college students sat down at an all-white lunch counter in Greensboro, N.C., and helped energize the American civil rights movement.

Now that counter is going on display in the Smithsonian Institution.

The Smithsonian's Museum of American History will house an 8-foot section of the counter, four stools, a soda fountain, pie case and other articles from the Woolworth's store in Greensboro, which closed recently. The items were donated by Woolworth Corp.

Joseph McNeil, one of the four protesters who climbed onto those stools 34 years ago, called the items "symbolic of a very small part of a massive movement to improve the conditions of mankind."

"I think it is important to have those types of artifacts around to never let us forget from where we've come as a country, so we never have to revisit those things again," McNeil said in a telephone interview.

Quartet makes unofficial debut

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Music filled Bush Elementary School on Friday as the Everest String Quartet made its unofficial Midland debut.

"We're very excited to be here and to become part of the community," said violinist Stephen Rose, who received his master's of music degree in performance and literature from The Eastman School of Music.

"All of the enjoyment, excitement we feel playing string quartets is only heightened when we get to share that with people," said cellist Brant Austin Taylor, who received his master's of music degree from Indiana University.

"Performers need audiences and we're very much looking forward to West Texas audiences."

The quartet, which replaces the Midland-Odessa Symphony's Thouvenel String Quartet this fall, came to Midland-Odessa this week to perform the final concerts in this year's string quartet series.

Nations join to endorse Bosnia peace plan

GENEVA (AP) — The United States, Russia and West Europeans joined Friday in endorsing a formula for peace in Bosnia and urged warring Serbs and Muslims to begin negotiations on it within two weeks.

"None of us here wants to impose a settlement on the parties," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said in announcing the results of a six-hour conference at the U.S. mission in this sunny Swiss city.

He said all the ministers — Russia, Germany, France, Britain, Belgium, Greece and the Netherlands joined him — were determined "to try to put this awful war to an end."

The conference was held under the shadow of a French threat to withdraw its peacekeeping force from Bosnia-Herzegovina if Serbs and Muslims did not negotiate on the basis of a formula proposed "firmly" by the allies.

"We have resolved to maintain the pressure," French Foreign Minister Alain Juppe said afterward. Raising the threat again, he said if the parties shunned the proposal for a territorial compromise "perhaps we will change the logic of our deployment."

Bosnian Serbs, in a two-year war, have taken control of more than 70 percent of the former Yugoslav republic. The proposal, initially advanced by European mediators, would give them control of 49 percent, with the Muslim-led government and Bosnian Croats controlling 51 percent.

"Ministers urge the parties to reach an agreement on this basis," the communique said.

Three ministers, Juppe, Klaus Kinkel of Germany and Karolos Papoulias of Greece, referred to the formula as a European approach. Negotiations between Serbs and Muslims broke down last month as Serb artillery hammered the mostly Muslim town of Gorazde for two months until NATO's threat to bomb the Serbs lifted the siege.

"We have laid a foundation for a new stage," said Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev.

The cease-fire proposed throughout the country by the eight nations would run for four months initially. The Muslims, who have seen much of their territory lost, were reluctant to agree to a long-term cease-fire that could permit the Serbs to consolidate their gains.

Mediators, including Lord Owen of Britain and Thorvald Stoltenberg of Norway, have tried a variety of territorial compromises.

Report: Iran, others smuggle guns to Muslims

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) —, The Muslim-led government army received weapons and explosives smuggled from Iran and elsewhere in violation of a 1991 U.N. arms embargo, a senior Bosnian military source said Friday.

The reported shipments came after a day after the Senate voted to urge President Clinton to work to lift the U.N. arms embargo on the Bosnian government, which is outgunned against the Serbs.

Bosnia's government has long pleaded for an end to the arms embargo, which has effectively left it the only faction in the country without heavy weapons.

The Bosnian source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Bosnian army received hundreds of anti-tank rockets. The source claimed they were American-made but would not say what country sent them.

He said the rockets reached the Croatian coast aboard a ship from Brazil.

A U.N. military analyst in Sarajevo, speaking to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, said he had no knowledge of such a military shipment to Bosnia.

The Bosnian army source also confirmed that explosives and other raw material for ammunition had come from Iran.

The Washington Post reported Friday that Iran delivered about 60 tons of these supplies to Croatia's capital, Zagreb, last week. They were in crates marked "Humanitarian Aid" and "No Smoking," the paper said.

Citing unidentified diplomats and Bosnian Muslim sources, the Post said an Iranian Boeing 747 jumbo jet delivered the shipment May 4, two days before a visit to Bosnia and Croatia by Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati.

Cmdr. Eric Chaperon, a U.N. spokesman in Sarajevo, said he found it hard to imagine that an Iranian jumbo jet could land in Croatia, which also is under the 1991 arms embargo, and that no one policing the embargo would have inspected the goods.

The apparent U.N. doubts about the reports raised speculation that the Bosnian army might want Serb troops to think they have more sophisticated weaponry than they actually have.

In Zagreb, Josip Rajcic, a Croatian Defense Ministry spokesman, denied his country played any role in violating the embargo, and Interior Ministry spokesman Mladen Lackovic denied any knowledge of weapons smuggling.

Croatian officials impounded a large shipment of rifles and ammunition that arrived in Zagreb aboard an Iranian-owned Boeing 747 in September 1992. That shipment, listed as humanitarian aid, was believed to have been intended for Bosnian Muslims.

PLO: Israel ends 27-year occupation of West Bank town of Jericho to avoid having Palestinians looking on — or throwing stones. Israeli forces are expected to be completely out of the strip, where 750,000 Palestinians live, by Wednesday.

The transfer of power pulls Israeli patrols off Arab streets. But thousands of soldiers will remain to protect the 4,000 Jews in settlements and man borders with Egypt and Jordan. They will also join Palestinian police to patrol roads used by Jewish settlers within the autonomous zones or along their borders.

Soldiers leaving Jericho were being redeployed in a West Bank army base near the autonomous zone, the army spokesman's office said. Troops leaving Gaza will either be restationed around Jewish settlements and along the border with Egypt, stationed in Israel, or sent home.

After Israeli soldiers left their last headquarters in southern Gaza, in Khan Younis, men and women streamed in to hug their own police. Outside, militants who fought the Israelis fired guns in the air.

But the end of occupation in Jericho, which is to be the seat of PLO chief Yasser Arafat's autonomy council, was the defining moment for many who had been disheartened by months of tortuously slow negotiations with Israel.

"This is a very large festival that we have dreamed of in the past," said Samir Sinj Lawri, a 22-year-old PLO activist who spent three years in Israeli jails. "We are seeing now that these dreams are coming on the ground."

Throughout the day, the old ways were turned upside down.

In joint patrols, it was the Palestinian jeep that took the lead, followed by the Israeli vehicle. During breaks, Israeli and Palestinian patrolmen chatted in Arabic, slapping each other on the shoulder and drinking tea together.

The seventh-century Peace Upon Israel Synagogue, until now a rallying point for right-wing Israeli opposition to the autonomy plan, was guarded by five armed Palestinian policemen. One was briefly posted on the roof of the two-story building, standing next to a large metal menorah, a seven-branch candelabrum that is a symbol of Judaism.

The Israeli flag that had hung from the front wall was taken down, but the commander of the guard detail, Capt. Lutfi Mohammed Hassan, later prevented a Palestinian woman from hoisting a Palestinian flag on the building.

"I have instructions not to permit anyone to put up Palestinian flags here," Hassan later explained.

Jewish settlers will eventually be permitted to worship under Palestinian guard, he said. But on Friday, Israel kept its own citizens out of the self-rule area, and army officials said the ban would remain until the Palestinians had taken firm control.

Meanwhile, PLO leaders were looking toward the future with concern.

"I'm sure in a while, the welcoming party will be over and people's expectations in my opinion are much, much higher than what will be available in reality," said Saeb Erakat, one of 24 members of the Palestinian National Authority that is to run Jericho and Gaza until elections in October.

The people of Jericho didn't only awaken Friday to a town under Palestinian rule, he said. "They awakened to the fact that it is the beginning of a long journey of building, of development, of hard work."

Erakat said he hoped the autonomy council would hold its first meeting by May 25, likely in Jericho.

Already, there were some rumblings of discontent in the dusty backwater of 15,000.

The leaders of Jericho's six large clans, representing several thousand people, were angry that Arafat had appointed close aides, most of them based abroad, to run the city in the interim period.

"We struggled, we fought the occupation, we lost our sons," said Asaad Khamis, a member of the clan council.

The handover of Jericho had a tragic moment, too. A 6-year-old got hold of a Palestinian police officer's submachine gun. It was supposed to be unloaded; it wasn't.

A brother, an aunt and a man standing nearby were wounded in a burst from the weapon. The 12-year-old brother, Ammar Al-Shawa, was pronounced dead at a Jerusalem hospital.

Sunny skies on tap for weekend

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high in the mid-80s and north to northwest winds 15 to 20 mph and gusty, according to the National Weather Service.

Tonight will be mostly clear with a low in the upper 50s.

Sunday is expected to be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 52, Friday's high was 84 compared with the record high for that date of 102 set in 1960. The record low for today's date was 41 set in 1953.

STATE

An outbreak of tornadoes and severe thunderstorms plagued Texas on Friday, causing heavy damage to scattered towns in South Texas and the Coastal Plain but no severe injuries, officials said.

Tornadoes were spotted near Marble Falls, Galveston, San Marcos, Bastrop, Halletsville and Lufkin.

In the Hill Country town of Marble Falls, a twister touched down about 11:30 a.m., damaging a Wal-Mart store and several other businesses.

A twister hit Galveston about 6:30 a.m. Friday, causing minor damage to the McDonald Ironworks building but injuring no one, said City Manager Doug Matthews.

Heavy rains were reported in the Hill Country between Bandera, Fredericksburg and Kerrville. As much as 6 inches of rain was measured in some parts of that area, the National Weather Service said.

Late afternoon thunderstorms also cropped up in the Panhandle. Otherwise, skies were cloudy over much of North Central Texas and the Edwards Plateau but sunny elsewhere.

NATION

Tornadoes ripped through several Texas cities Friday, damaging buildings as a system of dangerously turbulent spring weather continued its grip on the state, and rain pelted much of the South. Some areas got a record chill.

The National Weather Service said a tornado was reported in Marble Falls, and witnesses said a Wal-Mart store and several other businesses were damaged. Texas authorities said no serious injuries were reported.

The weather service said another twister touched down near Vienna in the afternoon; a trailer home was destroyed, power lines were downed and debris covered the roadway.

A tornado that hit Galveston caused minor damage but injured no one, City Manager Doug Matthews said.

A slow-moving, upper-level low pressure system over the eastern Rocky Mountain states precipitated large amounts of rain, with totals approaching 6 inches between midnight and noon in the hill country of south Texas.

Roads in many Texas counties were closed because of flooding.

Nasty weather has tormented Texas since late April, when a tornado hit the Dallas suburbs of Lancaster and DeSoto, killing three people and causing millions of dollars worth of damage.

Around the rest of the country, early afternoon temperatures were in the 70s and 80s across the Southwestern deserts, the central Plains and the Gulf Coast states.

The mercury stood in the 50s and 60s across the Great Lakes region, the Northeast, the Rocky Mountain states and the Pacific Northwest.

Readings in the 30s and 40s were reported in parts of Upstate New York, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

Cloudy skies covered a large part of the country by early afternoon, but parts of central California and the Great Lakes had clear to partly cloudy skies.

Showers and thunderstorms hit parts of the Rockies, most of the Plains, the middle Mississippi and Tennessee valleys, parts of Florida and the extreme Northeast.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

COURT: Senate supports judge

(From 1A)

Breyer was named to the federal appeals court in 1980 by President Carter, becoming chief judge in 1990. He was a law clerk for Justice Arthur Goldberg in the 1960s and an assistant Watergate prosecutor later. He also served as chief counsel to the Senate Judiciary Committee, which will now sit in judgment.

Last year, Breyer was summoned from a hospital bed to be interviewed by Clinton and for a time was considered the favorite for last year's nomination. But that spot ultimately went to Ruth Bader Ginsburg.

This time, Clinton turned first to Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine. But Mitchell said he wanted to focus on getting health care reform passed this year and was worried the confirmation process would prove too distracting.

That sent Clinton back to his search, and again he came down to Breyer, Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt and another federal appeals judge, Richard Arnold of Arkansas, a longtime Clinton friend.

Babbitt was criticized by Hatch and other Republicans as being too liberal and political for the closely divided court. And Arnold was viewed as suspect by women's groups that support abortion rights. He also has lymphoma, a form of cancer that his doctor said is not life-threatening.

In his more than 13 years on the bench, Breyer has occasionally waded into controversial areas. For example, he issued a ruling against the Bush administration's ban on abortion counseling at clinics that receive federal funding.

Clinton announced Breyer's appointment standing solo in the Rose Garden — a formal White House ceremony with Breyer and his family on hand was planned for Monday.

"He has a clear grasp of the law, a boundless respect for the constitutional and legal rights of the American people," Clinton said.

"He has proven that he can build an effective consensus and get people of diverse views to work together for justice sake."

As a Senate aide, Breyer helped write the legislation to deregulate the airline industry, and on the bench developed a reputation as a man who is wary of government interference in commerce.

Breyer is a graduate of Stanford, Oxford and Harvard. He is married to the former Joanna Hare and has three children. Financial disclosure forms show he is worth several million dollars in stocks and bonds; the Supreme Court annual salary is $164,100.

Breyer's chances last year were hurt in part by the revelation he had failed to pay Social Security taxes for a household worker. Breyer then paid back taxes on the cleaning woman, but later received a refund when the Internal Revenue Service ruled that he had never been liable for taxes on her, according to White House aides.

Clinton praised Babbitt and Arnold as exceptional candidates clearly qualified for the court. Before announcing his choice, Clinton called both men to let them know they had not been selected.

"I couldn't bear to lose him from the Cabinet," Clinton said of Babbitt, a former governor of Arizona. Clinton said Arnold's cancer was a concern, but voiced confidence he would beat the disease and be a top contender if he gets a third vacancy.

Special Counsel Lloyd Cutler said that in the end, the decision came down to selecting "the one who had the fewest problems but had the same qualities of excellence."

He said all three finalists were in the running to the end, with senior aides hustling in and out of the Oval Office throughout the day Friday as the final decision was being hashed out.

Babbitt issued a statement saying: "As enticing as the Great Indoors was, the Great Outdoors is where I want to spend my time. I have the job I want, it's where I want to stay, and I think the president made a great choice."

Arnold said in Little Rock, Ark., that Clinton has called him to tell him of Breyer's selection and said that was OK with him. "He's a brilliant legal scholar," Arnold said.

POLICE REPORTS

Drug charges

A 64-year-old man was charged with possession of a controled substance — six rocks of crack cocaine — early Thursday, according to the Permian Basin Task Force.

Jake Whitley of 3101 Midland Drive was arrested in the 600 block of Watson Street after the task force and Police Department responded to a tip, officials said.

A 1984 Cadillac was also seized along with the drug.

Whitley posted a $5,000 bond and was released from the Midland County jail, officials said.

Thursday

Robbery: An unidentified person was robbed in a parking lot of Albertson's grocery store at 1002 Andrews Highway. The victim, who was robbed of her purse, was pushed down by a black man that she described as 6 feet tall, 180-190 pounds, last seen wearing an old brown leather jacket. The incident was reported at 2:44 p.m.

Burglary of a vehicle: A vehicle was broken into and nothing taken. The incident at 1003 S. Midkiff Road and Lexington Street was reported by Alton Hill at 4:47 p.m.

Friday

Stolen vehicle: A blue 1985 Chevrolet Suburban was recovered at 400 N. Bentwood Drive about 7 a.m. The incident was reported by Raul Rosales from 402 Sweetbriar Drive.

Vandalism: Windows were broken out of three vans at 3301 Sinclair Ave., reported Arlene Armstron at 8:41 a.m.

Burglary of a vehicle: A telephone was taken from an unlocked vehicle at 2808 Kessler Ave., reported Matt Curry at 8:33 a.m.

Vandalism: A window was broken out of a vehicle at 2508 Harvard Ave., reported J.W. Campbell at 10:27 a.m.

Stolen vehicle: An attempted car theft by a 13-year-old white boy wearing dark-colored shirt, a cap and baggy jeans. The incident was reported by Frances Loya at 12:55 p.m.

DEATHS

Martin died Wednesday at home.

Pallbearers are to be Nolan Allen, Bob Bigard, Corwin Laging, Loyd L. Martin, Gayland Martin and David Martin.

Andrews grand jury indicts driver

Staff Report

ANDREWS — An Andrews County grand jury indicted an Andrews man for involuntary manslaughter in connection with an automobile accident in which a woman died.

Rolando Zamora, 18, was indicted this week for a May 7 accident in which Maria Leone, 54, was killed. Ms. Leone was a nurse at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center in Midland.

A Department of Public Safety spokesman said alcohol was apparently involved in the cause of the accident.

The accident occurred at 5:45 a.m. on May 7 four miles east of Andrews on State Highway 176.

Ms. Leone was driving a four-door sedan eastbound when her vehicle was struck on the left front, head on, by a westbound pickup driven by Zamora.

A DPS official said Zamora's vehicle crossed the center stripe and hit Ms. Leone's vehicle.

No area jail reported having Zamora in custody.

Group to recognize volunteers

Staff Report

Junior Achievement will host its annual recognition event today at the "JA Night at the Ballpark" when teachers, volunteers, investors and special friends will be honored.

DEBUT: String quartet plays

(From 1A)

The Midland performance was Friday night; the Odessa concert is at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin, 4909 E. University.

"We heard from Gene (Purdue) and Sally (Chisholm) that Midland-Odessa audiences are very supportive, and that's inspiring," said violinist Jeanne Preucil Rose, who received her master's of music in performance and literature from The Eastman School of Music.

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale is to present its new resident quartet — The Everest String Quartet — in concert at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin.

Featured on Sunday's program will be Haydn's Quartet in D Major, Opus 76, No. 5, Joaquin Turina's "La Oracion del Torero (The Bullfighter's Prayer)" and Brahms' Quartet in A minor, Opus 51, No. 2.

Tickets to the concert, which is sponsored by Odessan Megan Thouchton, may be purchased at the door.

The members of the Everest Quartet began performing together in 1992. The fourth member of the quartet, violist Joan DerHovsepian, also is a graduate of The Eastman School of Music where she received her master's of music in viola performance.

"My interest was always in orchestra," said Ms. DerHovsepian.

"I always thought I would be a violist in one of the big orchestras in the United States. But, when we read, it just really clicked with the four of us. It was something really special."

The Everest Quartet will return in time for the outdoor pops concerts in August, which opens the MOSC's 1994-95 season.

COUNTER: Participant calls items symbolic of movement

(From 1A)

McNeil was 17 years old when he and three fellow students at North Carolina A&T State University — Frank McCain, Ezell Blair Jr. and David Richmond — decided to challenge laws barring blacks from many public facilities in the South.

Their action led to similar sit-ins in 50 cities in nine states. Woolworth lunch counters were opened to all on July 25, 1960. The company lost $200,000 in business during the sit-ins, according to later reports.

McNeil quotes McCain when asked how he felt as the demonstration began.

"I think my friend Frank McCain characterizes it aptly when he says, 'What we were doing in retrospect was putting a down payment on our manhood,'" McNeil said. "It took some courage."

Throughout the first day of the sit-in, which began at around 4 p.m., a police officer stood nearby, occasionally slapping a billy club into his palm. However, the four students were not threatened with arrest, and the store closed a half-hour early at 5 p.m.

McNeil said that Woolworth was chosen as the site of the sit-in because it was a national institution. At the time, the well-known chain only segregated its lunch counters in the South.

William Yeingst, a Smithsonian specialist who spearheaded the acquisition, said he plans to put the counter on display some time this summer. He said the museum will consult with residents of Greensboro and the sit-in participants "because it's their history, their story."

McNeil now lives in Hempstead, N.Y., where he is a manager in the Flight Standards Division of the Federal Aviation Administration.

Although a great deal has changed in the three decades since the sit-in, McNeil said that there are still many issues to be dealt with in race relations. "We need to keep pressing for those things that are right," he said.

McNeil hopes the display will teach people, particularly children, that they can have an impact if they believe in their cause.

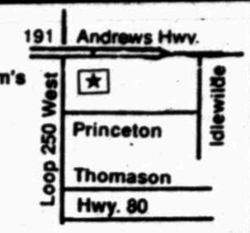

"It may take some time, but you can make change," McNeil said. "Have some faith that human beings are fundamentally decent people. They can change."

Almost all seniors pass TAAS test

AUSTIN (AP) — Ten years after the passage of sweeping state education reforms, 90.5 percent of Texas high school seniors have passed a test required for them to get their diplomas, officials said Friday.

That leaves 14,043 of the 178,889 seniors who enrolled last fall, or 8 percent, failing to pass the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills as of March.

About another 2 percent of the students either left Texas public schools or were absent for the reading, writing and mathematics test, according to preliminary results released by the State Board of Education.

Seniors had another chance to take the test — their sixth opportunity since it first was administered when they were juniors — last week and this week. But scores from that test won't be available until about May 25, Texas Education Agency spokeswoman Della May Moore said. Some schools have commencement exercises before then, she said.

Many of those failing in March also did not have enough credits to receive a diploma, and so couldn't graduate anyway, officials said.

The Class of 1994 had its first chance at the academic skills test in fall 1992, with 184,023 students in the original test group. The passing rate is 88 percent of that original group, one percentage point higher than the 87 percent rate for the Class of 1993's initial test group.

The exit-level test now is given for the first time when students are sophomores.

Of high school juniors, 76 percent already have passed the test. That's a 7 percent increase over the passing rate for juniors in spring 1993, and a 9 percent increase over the previous year.

Half of this year's sophomores passed all sections of the test on their first try in March, a slight increase over last year's 49 percent.

This year's sophomores and juniors were in first and second grade right after 1984 reforms were passed, including class size limits in the lower grades; a requirement that students pass their courses to participate in extracurricular activities; and the institution of state basic skills testing.

"It does take a decade, or 12 or 13 or 14 years, for these kids to roll through the pipeline having experienced ... the reform movement. That's where you get your payoff," said Education Board member Will Davis of Austin. Davis served on the special committee headed by Dallas businessman H. Ross Perot that recommended the 1984 reforms.

Officials particularly hailed the jump in performance for this year's juniors, noting that a record 208,063 students were in that class's original test group. The increased passing rate amounted to 30,460 more juniors who succeeded on the test compared with last year.

Davis said he wasn't concerned that just half of the sophomores passed, noting that the exam is a school exit test. Students get eight chances to pass the test before graduating.

"I think it's unfair to test a sophomore and say hey, you didn't pass the high school graduating test," he said. "But if you have 50 percent of them doing it, I think that's pretty good."

Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno credited local educators with the higher passing rate for juniors, saying schools have been given flexibility in their education programs.

Students must correctly answer approximately 70 percent of all items on each section of the test in order to pass. They only have to re-take the sections they fail.

China tries to meet Clinton's demand by freeing dissident

BEIJING (AP) — China released a leading dissident Friday in an apparent concession to Washington's demands for progress in human rights before low trade tariffs can be renewed.

The release of Chen Ziming comes weeks before the Clinton administration must decide whether Beijing has made enough progress in human rights to keep low-tariff trade privileges worth billions of dollars. Clinton must decide whether to renew the trade status in early June.

Chen was sentenced in 1991 to 13 years in jail for his leading role in the 1989 democracy movement.

He was released Friday on bail for medical treatment, China's official Xinhua news agency announced Saturday. He contracted skin, stomach and kidney problems in Beijing's No. 2 prison, his sister said.

Chen Zihua said her brother left with his wife, Wang Zhihong, and a police guard early today to rest outside Beijing.

He was in good spirits, but not in good health, his sister said in a telephone interview, adding the family did not know his precise location.

China rejects linking trade to human rights. But in recent days it has made small, relatively painless moves aimed at winning good will in Washington.

honored for their academic accomplishments as part of the commencement exercises.

A large percentage of MC graduates wore colored banners that signified membership in the Phi-Theta-Kappa honors fraternity for community colleges.

In conferring degrees to the graduates, Daniel said, "There isn't a prouder moment in anything I do professionally than this," he said.

Daniel told graduates to "remember that learning is a life-long process."

The Midland College Community Band played traditional music for the graduation and the group VocalPoint sang for the President's Reception immediately following graduation ceremonies.

Thousands of Palestinians vow to fight on

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP) — While most Palestinians danced in the streets to celebrate self-rule, several thousand opponents of the peace accord gathered in a sports stadium Friday to pledge their continued fight against Israel.

"Hamas will not abandon the path of holy war until all of Palestine is liberated," read a banner by the outlawed Islamic Resistance Movement, which dominated the gathering.

The rally of Islamic and secular protestors was the first since the Palestinian police began deploying in the Gaza Strip Monday — a show of defiance by activists who have dedicated their lives to eliminating Israel.

But the organizers do not seek open confrontation. A few minutes after the 2,000-strong crowd had vowed to fight and not give up, Israeli troops threw a few rounds of tear gas outside the stadium at stone-throwers.

Hamas organizers quickly canceled the remaining speeches and told the crowd not to provoke the Israelis, promising them "other chances to do it." The youths marched to Palestine Square, where they prayed and dispersed peacefully.

The opposition groups have a dilemma. Few think they could garner more than 20 percent against the mainstream PLO Fatah group in an election, yet they want to influence the future government without actively participating in it. They want the experiment to fail, so that they can be seen as the only viable alternative.

Their main vehicle for attracting followers has been attacks against Israelis. But that would stir the ire of the new authority and possibly the public, eager for stability after years of occupation violence. Attacks against fellow Palestinians would also prove unpopular, and they have vowed to avoid them.

Hamas, Islamic Jihad and the secular groups, Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, have voiced fears that the Palestinian police will act as a surrogate occupier, cracking down to appease the Israelis. The agreement demands that the Palestinians stop any violence against Israelis.

Dr. Omar Farwaneh, a Hamas sympathizer, said he feared the Palestinian police would prevent attacks that opponents still consider legitimate while occupation exists elsewhere in the territories.

"I'm very scared that in the next few months we will be caught between two fires, the Israeli fire and the Palestinian fire," he said. "The new police force should realize that we have suffered a lot."

Indians debate whether to keep King's English

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The language that British colonialists thought would unite the people of this diverse country still provokes debate from southern India all the way to Parliament.

Ever since the British left India 47 years ago, people have argued about the continued use in government of a foreign language, instead of a national language, such as Hindi.

That argument flared again this week when lawmakers in Parliament debated about the English-language tests that all people competing for civil service jobs must take. The legislators want all the tests to be given in the 15 languages recognized by the Constitution.

In a parliamentary debate Thursday, they said that bureaucrats who grow up speaking English — the colonial legacy — are out of touch with most of the Indians who still live in villages.

But other legislators said that discontinuing English would split the country along linguistic lines and isolate India.

The governing Congress Party is unlikely to do away with English in the tests because many people in the South would see that as a victory for the Hindi-speaking North.

Even though only 4 percent of India's 880 million people know English, that group includes most of its upper-middle-class urban people and nearly everyone who controls the bureaucracy.

Hindi is spoken by one-third of the population, mostly in the four northern states known as the Hindi belt.

Southerners say Hindi is being rammed down their throats by the federal government through state-run television and radio.

With 31 states, most with their own cultures and languages or dialects, India is more a continent than a nation.

More than 20 years ago, people in the southern state of Tamil Nadu launched a violent anti-Hindi campaign. They burned trains and federal government offices and defeated the Congress Party in an election for the state legislature.

IRA plants bomb that kills man, injures family

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — An IRA bomb killed a janitor Friday and injured his wife and their two children, police said.

The Irish Republican Army said it planted the bomb that blew up under John Frederick Anthony's blue Skoda in Lurgan, 25 miles southwest of Belfast.

Police said Anthony, 38, worked as a civilian cleaner at the Lurgan police station. His wife, their 3-year-old daughter and 9-year-old son were hospitalized, the Royal Ulster Constabulary said without elaborating.

The constabulary's divisional commander, Tim Lewis, said Anthony "posed no military or political threat to the IRA or any other organization."

The IRA, fighting to end British rule in Northern Ireland, regards anyone working for the security forces as a legitimate target.

Judge reverses his drug kingpin order

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A judge who ordered the release of a drug kingpin accused of smuggling tons of cocaine into the United States reversed his order Friday amid complaints from the government and U.S. drug agents.

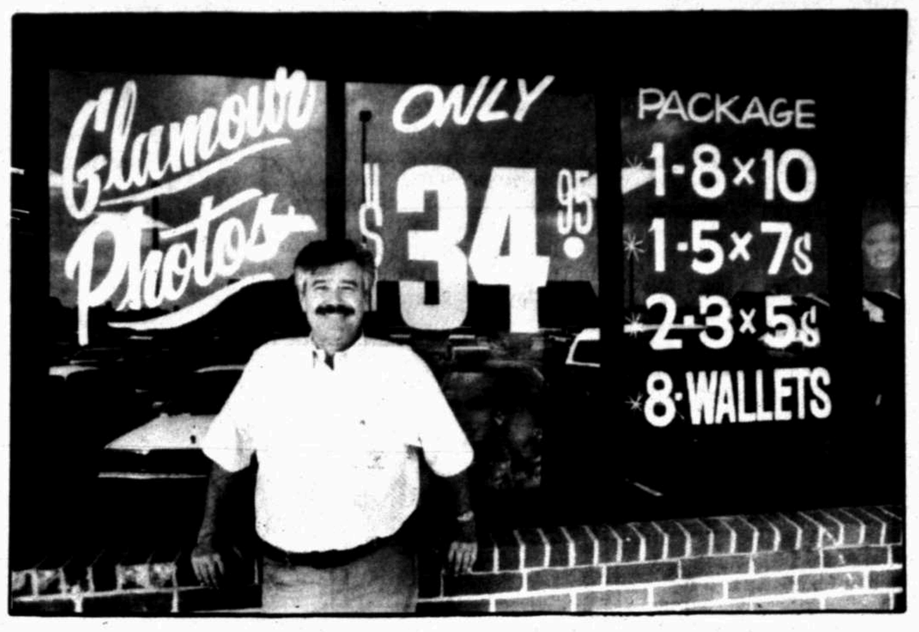

The release order, made Thursday, had threatened U.S.-Colombian relations. Washington has blasted Colombia for what it perceives as coddling of traffickers who flood the United States with cocaine.

Japanese discover Holocaust at exhibit on Jews, Anne Frank

By Peter Landers
Associated Press

TOKYO — Like most Japanese, Rika Oshima never was taught much about the Holocaust or Judaism. And if she picks up a book about Jews at the local bookstore, it's likely to be full of outdated stereotypes.

Now thousands of Japanese are lining up for a different perspective: an exhibition on the Holocaust and Anne Frank featuring artifacts and displays describing the Nazi slaughter of 6 million Jews.

"Actually seeing the pictures of concentration camps puts the tragedy right before your eyes," said Oshima, 26. "I feel like I'd like to read more about why Jews received such persecution."

Among the highlights of the exhibit at Tokyo's City Hall, arranged by the Los Angeles-based Simon Wiesenthal Center, are letters written by Anne Frank to an American pen pal in Iowa, on display in public for the first time.

One panel describes the courage of Chiune Sugihara, a Japanese diplomat who saved thousands of Jews during World War II by issuing them visas to the Far East against orders from his government.

While many Japanese are familiar with the story of Anne Frank because her diary is often assigned in school, the rest of the exhibit is providing a reminder of how little most know about the Holocaust.

"We didn't learn anything about this in school," said college student Junichi Oshiro, 22. "You get a vivid impression of Hitler's dictatorship."

Until recently, World War II got little mention in high school history books, which focused almost exclusively on the war in the Pacific. With no indigenous Jewish population or firsthand experience with anti-Semitism, Japan gave the Holocaust little notice.

Exhibit organizers say they hope the exhibit will also serve as an antidote to the stream of sensationalist books in Japan depicting Jews as a sinister race conspiring to take over the world economy.

Although such books are usually based on centuries-old stereotypes about Jews, many Japanese, knowing nothing of the history of anti-Semitism, consider them simply amusing speculation.

"It is unfortunate both for Japan and for the Jewish community that Japanese have imported European anti-Semitic ideas and used them as the basis for judging Jews before they knew the true picture," writes Hebrew translator Yoshito Takigawa in a just-published guide to Jewish culture.

Real nightmare exists in small Rwandan town

By Mark Fritz
Associated Press

KARUBAMBA, Rwanda — Nobody lives here any more.

Not the expectant mothers huddled outside the maternity clinic, not the families squeezed into the church, not the man who lies rotting in a schoolroom beneath a chalkboard map of Africa.

Everybody here is dead. Karubamba is a vision from hell, a flesh-and-bone junkyard of human wreckage, an obscene slaughterhouse that has fallen silent save for the roaring buzz of flies the size of honeybees.

With silent shrieks of agony locked on decaying faces, hundreds of bodies line the streets and fill the tidy brick buildings of this village, most of them in the sprawling Roman Catholic complex of classrooms and clinics at Karubamba's stilled heart.

Karubamba is just one breathtakingly awful example of the mayhem that has made beautiful little Rwanda the world's most ghastly killing ground.

Karubamba, 30 miles northeast of Kigali, the capital, died April 11, six days after Rwandan President Juvenal Habyarimana, a member of the Hutu tribe, was killed in a plane crash whose cause is still undetermined.

The paranoia and suspicion surrounding the crash blew the lid off decades of complex ethnic, social and political hatreds. It ignited a murderous spree by extremists from the majority Hutus against rival Tutsis and those Hutus who had opposed the government.

This awesome wave of remorseless mayhem has claimed 100,000 to 200,000 lives, say U.N. and other relief groups. Many were cut down while cowering in places traditionally thought safe havens: churches, schools, relief agencies.

One stroll past the bleached skulls, ripped limbs and sunbaked sinews on the blood-streaked streets of Karubamba gives weight to those estimates.

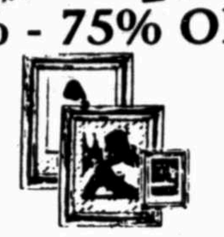

Almost every peek through a broken window or splintered door reveals incomprehensible horror. A schoolboy killed amid tumbling desks and benches. A couple splattered against a wall beneath a portrait of a serene, haloed Jesus Christ.

Peer into the woods every few hundred feet along the red-clay road to Karubamba and see piles of bodies heaped in decaying clumps.

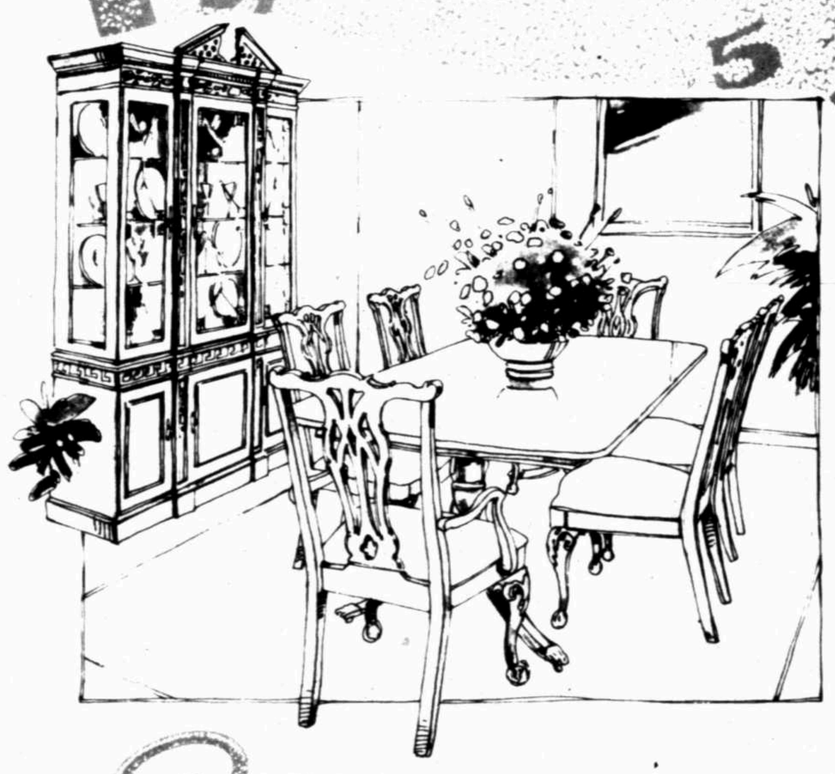

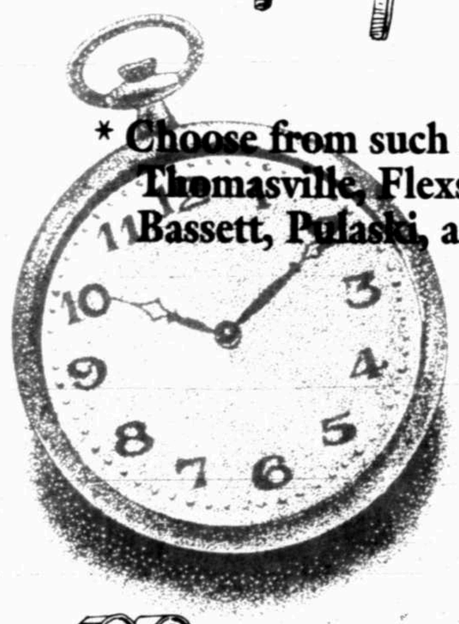

News from Rwanda has been dominated by accounts of the carnage in Kigali or of millions of refugees living in mud and filth in vast encampments.

Mexican presidential candidates begin race with historic debate

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A historic debate by Mexico's top presidential candidates opened a three-way race for power Friday, elevating a new opposition challenger who strongly attacked 65 years of one-party rule.

But Mexicans who watched Thursday night's televised exchange, the first by major candidates, debated whether the encounter would be a first step toward a fair election on Aug. 21.

"Sure we've now had a debate but will we have free elections? That's the really big question. Every six years the same party wins," scoffed taxi driver Alberto Rojas, one of an estimated 20 million viewers.

President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, who cannot run again, is ending his six-year term amid growing clamor for democratic reform, a guerrilla revolt and the March 23 assassination of Luis Donaldo Colosio, his chosen candidate.

The debate turned into a blistering attack on Salinas' Institutional Revolutionary Party, known as the PRI, putting replacement candidate Ernesto Zedillo constantly on the defensive.

"The question we must ask is why hunger, why unemployment, why insecurity, why guerrillas?" asked Diego Fernandez de Cevallos, of the conservative National Action Party, declared the winner in newspapers.

"Nobody is better off today than they were in 1988," declared Cuauhtemoc Cardenas, of the left-leaning Democratic Revolutionary Party, borrowing a famous line from Ronald Reagan.

Zedillo, who replaced Colosio after his assassination at a Tijuana campaign rally, conceded more economic and democratic reforms were needed.

As former education secretary and Colosio's campaign manager, he said he was the youngest candidate at 42 but the most experienced.

'Sure we've now had a debate but will we have free elections? That's the really big question. Every six years the same party wins.'

— Alberto Rojas, taxi driver

"I must recognize that many Mexicans have been harmed by injustice, insecurity, violence, police corruption," said Zedillo, whose party agreed to the debate to help shed its undemocratic reputation.

Zedillo promised this election would be "the cleanest in Mexico's history."

The governing party has not lost a single presidential election since its 1929 founding despite frequent opposition cries of voter fraud. And preparations for the vote got underway Friday as election workers loaded more than 1 million ballots, contained in cardboard boxes, onto trucks for delivery to major cities from a Mexico City warehouse.

"We have a country, what we need is a good government," said Fernandez, a bearded, cigar-chomping former congressman. "Let's all go vote, and vote freely, so that we can achieve the democracy that is our destiny."

In 1988, Cardenas waged a bitter battle against Salinas, who squeaked out a bare majority after computers tallying the vote mysteriously crashed on election night.

But Thursday's debate suggested Cardenas would have to face a surprising strong adversary in Fernandez, in addition to Zedillo.

"Diego Wins!" declared Reforma, a respected daily that said Fernandez had upstaged both Zedillo and Cardenas.

Fernandez sharply attacked Cardenas as not representing a true opposition, saying he had conducted a "Marxist-Leninist" style of government as ruling party governor of Michoacan state in the mid-1980s.

Norwegians get hijacked, robbed on bus in Miami

MIAMI (AP) — A hotel shuttle bus carrying five Norwegian tourists was hijacked early Friday by two men who robbed the passengers of their jewelry and money.

Police said the hijackers boarded the bus with the Norwegians at Miami International Airport. As the bus pulled out of the airport, one of the men pulled a gun and ordered the driver to head east on a nearby highway. The other man then robbed the tourists, striking and injuring one, police said.

The pair fled after ordering the driver to pull off the highway at the first exit.

"This is a singular incident," said Metro-Dade Police spokesman Steve Ellison. "We haven't seen anything like this. It's new to us totally, and we are taking measures at this point to try and counter it as best as possible."

The tourists were in Miami for a cruise on Royal Caribbean Cruise Line's Nordic Empress. Police said they spent the rest of the night at their hotel before boarding the ship late Friday morning.

Norwegian Consul Odd Holm said two of the tourists came to the consulate Friday for replacement passports.

"It's regrettable, but I hope that this is an isolated incident," he said. "I have never heard of this happening before."

Police did not identify the victims.

Tourism officials are working to dispel the notoriety the state received over the killings of 10 foreign visitors in a 12-month span that ended last fall.

This month, the state is playing host to thousands of travel agents, tour operators and industry representatives from around the world at trade events in Orlando, St. Petersburg and Miami.

Commerce Secretary Charles Dusseau also traveled to England this spring to address 1,200 British travel agents and tour operators.

Figures released Thursday showed that the number of visitors to Florida dropped in February for the third month in a row, compared with the same month in the previous year. But officials said preliminary estimates for March and April look more positive.

Researcher ranks cities based on level of hostility

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The City of Brotherly Love could use a little more, according to a researcher who ranked Philadelphia the No. 1 city for hostile residents and high death rates.

Among cities with high death rates, New York's hostility score was second-highest, followed by Cleveland, Chicago and Detroit. Honolulu had the lowest hostility score and the lowest death rate.

The Gallup Organization poll, commissioned by Dr. Redford Williams of Duke University Medical Center, measured levels of anger among 200 people in 10 cities from states with high and low death rates. Residents were asked about such things as loud rock music, supermarket checkout lines and traffic jams.

The survey found that five selected cities with high death rates also have high levels of hostility. Five other cities with relatively low death rates have low hostility levels.

Philadelphia, known as the City of Brotherly Love, had the highest hostility score and highest death rate, according to the poll.

"There is a very strong association between hostility and all-cause death rates," the poll concluded. "There is also a very strong association between the coronary death rates of the states containing the 10 cities and the hostility levels in the cities."

The poll used three questionnaires to measure anger. And a hostility score was devised for each city, taking into account adjustments for race, education, age, income and gender.

Among the cities with low death rates, Seattle had the second-lowest hostility score, then Minneapolis, Denver and Des Moines.

Duke researchers have concluded that people with personalities prone to mistrust, anger and aggression are at a higher risk of dying.

In the book, "Anger Kills," Williams and his wife, Virginia, contend that crowded conditions, noise, traffic, fear of crime and lack of social support play some role in hostility differences among cities.

Dole warns against hasty invasion of Haiti

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, warning against any hasty decision to invade Haiti, proposed Friday that a bipartisan panel be formed to develop a new policy toward the nation.

"It's high time for cooler heads to prevail on U.S. policy toward Haiti," Dole, R-Kan., said in a Senate floor speech. "The administration appears to be lurching toward the use of military force in Haiti without thoroughly considering the consequences of such action and the history of U.S. involvement in Haiti."

The comments came hours after U.S. officials denied that a huge mock invasion this week that involved 44,000 military personnel had anything to do with a Haitian invasion scenario.

"Anything that happens in this hemisphere, whether it be a troop movement or an exercise, people are trying to tie to reports of a Haiti invasion. It's just not valid," a spokeswoman for the U.S. Atlantic Command, Air Force Maj. Jamie Roach, told The Associated Press.

President Clinton has said he has not ruled out military action involving the impoverished Caribbean nation.

■ More nation news/7C

Dole said Congress should authorize any deployment of military forces in Haiti.

He proposed the establishment of a bipartisan fact-finding commission whose recommendations could form the basis of a new Haiti policy. He said he had suggested this idea to Clinton.

The press has been full of invasion rumors.

On Wednesday, the Pentagon and the White House strongly denied a Los Angeles Times report that the United States was planning a military operation with the aim of "purging" the Haitian army, which overthrew Haiti's elected president, Jean-Bertrand Aristide, in 1991.

Judge orders trial for suspect in Klaas case

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — Richard Allen Davis was ordered Friday to stand trial for the kidnapping and murder of 12-year-old Polly Klaas, whose abduction at knifepoint from her home during a slumber party touched off a nationwide search.

Municipal Judge Robert Dale said he didn't find parts of Davis' confession credible. Petaluma Sgt. Michael Meese had testified about the confession during a three-day preliminary hearing.

Davis had told authorities he didn't remember kidnapping Polly because he had smoked some marijuana and drank a few beers, Meese testified. Davis also said Polly was alive when his car got stuck and two sheriff's deputies helped him free his car.

Dale said he believed Davis was telling the truth when he told authorities he had Polly in his car, strangled her and left her body in a shallow grave.

"I can't believe any of the rest of it," Dale said. "It borders on the insane . . . inconsequential, incongruous and just makes no sense whatsoever."

Davis was ordered to stand trial on nine felony counts, including murder, kidnapping and attempt to commit a lewd act with a child. Polly was snatched from her home in nearby Petaluma on Oct. 1 as two friends watched in horror.

The girl's abduction touched off an extensive search that ended after Davis' arrest Nov. 30.

"He could have stopped. He could have left. He did not," Dale said. "This is not a person who was intoxicated. This is not a person who was confused."

Dale also discounted Davis' statements in which he said he didn't sexually abuse Polly. Dale noted that the girl's skirt was pushed above her waist and her shirt was untied when authorities found her badly decomposed body Dec. 4 near Cloverdale.

"I can't believe all that clothing got that way by being dragged into brush," Dale said.

Polly's father, Marc Klaas, sat through the judge's ruling with his head down. Outside the courtroom, Klaas said he was satisfied with the ruling, but won't feel good until Davis "ceases to exist."

Davis' lawyer, Barry Collins said he expected the ruling.

Davis was scheduled to be arraigned May 31 in Superior Court.

Court: American copyright laws good only in U.S.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A distributor can market a film legally overseas without the copyright holder's consent, a court ruled Friday in a dispute over video rights to the Beatles' "Yellow Submarine" movie.

U.S. copyright law applies only in this country, and it doesn't cover someone in the United States who authorizes overseas copying and distribution, said the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in an 11-0 ruling.

The ruling would overturn half of a $2.2 million damage award against MGM-UA Communications Co. unless its foreign video distribution of "Yellow Submarine" was found improper for some other reason.

Subafilms Ltd. and Hearst Corp., the film's producers, have claimed that the distribution also violated their contract, a claim the ruling failed to resolve.

The animated film was first shown in theaters by United Artists Corp. in 1968 but did not appear on video until 1987, when MGM-UA, the successor to United Artists, authorized domestic and foreign video distribution.

Subafilms and Hearst Corp. objected, saying the video deals violated their copyright in the film and their contract with United Artists. They were awarded $2.2 million in damages by U.S. District Judge John Davies, an amount divided evenly between foreign and domestic video distribution.

A three-judge panel of the appeals court upheld the damages last year, ruling that MGM-UA had violated the Copyright Act.

Rebels can avenge loss

■ Midland Lee ends a three-week layoff today in an area-round playoff against the team that put them out of the state baseball playoffs last year: El Paso Coronado.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

EL PASO — Most coaches — high school, college or professional — will not admit it. But Midland Lee coach Jesse Benavidez cannot avoid it: His Rebel baseball team will be out for a measure of revenge as well as a win in today's area playoff matchup against El Paso Coronado at noon (CDT).

It was Coronado that halted Lee's playoff march last season in a 12-0 decision at Thunderbird Field, the site of today's game. Then-senior pitcher Rocky Coppinger held Lee to two hits in the game.

Midland Lee enters today's game on a 16-game winning streak and a 22-3 overall record. The Rebels became the first team in school history to go through district play undefeated. Abilene Cooper's 1987 state championship team was the only other league team to go undefeated in District 4-5A play since 1970.

A win today would put the 1994 Rebel team in elite company. The last time Lee advanced past the area round of the playoffs was 1978 when the Rebels lost to Lubbock Monterey in the quarterfinals.

"Coach is always telling us that we have some things that some teams have never done in the past," said third baseman Raymond Martinez. "I think we just take it up a notch whenever he tells us that. I think we are going to do great because of the tradition that is here."

El Paso Coronado is on a nine-game winning streak of its own after a two-game sweep of El Paso Ysleta Hanks last weekend to earn the right to meet the Rebels in the area round for the second straight year.

"I think (revenge) will be on the players minds," said Benavidez. "A lot of the players on this team were on that squad and it was embarrassing to lose the way we did last year."

The Rebels have been waiting in the wings for three weeks for a playoff game. Lee last played a regular season game on April 26, in a 19-16 win over Abilene Cooper. Since then, Lee defeat-

Central bumps Lee from hilltop

■ Midland Lee's Lady Rebels make an early charge Friday but fail to catch San Angelo Central in their attempt to win back-to-back state golf championships.

By Terry Williamson

AUSTIN — District 4-5A still reigns supreme in the world of Class 5A girls golf, but Bobcats are in and Rebels are out.

Midland Lee failed in its attempt to retain the Class 5A Girls State Golf Championship at the Jimmy Clay Course here Friday, finishing third. But San Angelo Central stepped in to grab the crown and keep royal jewels in the family with a 630 team two-day total.

"The championship is still in District 4-5A," said a relieved San Angelo coach Rick Harvey after the win. "I'm just glad that some Bobcats own it this time. This is a first state championship for me. The girls just did a super job."

San Angelo held a 6-stroke lead over the field, going into the final round, but Humble rallied to finish at 632, just two strokes off the pace.

Bobcat Julie McMahon sank a birdie putt on the final hole to ice the victory for San Angelo.

"I really didn't know how big that putt was. I'm glad I didn't know, but this is just great. We're state champs," McMahon said.

Lee finished ten strokes back at 640, leaving 4-5A with two of the top three girls golf teams in the state.

"San Angelo has beaten us all year and we would have had to been near perfect to pull off another championship," Lee coach Phyllis Sutton said. "There was a lot of pressure on the team this year."

Lee made an early charge, and at one time had pulled to within three strokes of the lead. Kaimi Fuller and Kim Fisher led a charge. Fuller had a 37 on the front side, but finished with a fine 77.

"I would love to have No. 16 back," said Fuller, who had a 73 on Lee's state championship final day last year. "I had a double bogey and went into the water. I should have waited to play that shot."

Fisher was just the opposite with a 41 on the front side and a 36 on the back for another 77. Fisher double bogeyed No. 1 for two straight days.

"I don't know about No. 1," Fisher said. "I had a double both days and I had pars on that hole last year. Still, I came back strong after a shaky start."

But Lee needed something solid to go with those rounds and didn't get it. Heather Albright, last year's hero who went from 94 to one-under par 70 from first round to second round, didn't have another miracle left in her pocket and came up with a toss-out 83.

"I hope my college coach never sees this round. He'll kill me," said Albright, who will attend the University of Mississippi next fall.

Jennifer Dickson, who along with Albright had 79s on Thursday, came back with an 82, the same as Kelly Thompson. Dickson had a brillant 37 on the

Preakness loses Holy Bull

One day after it lost Brocco, the Preakness lost a star of even greater magnitude Saturday when Holy Bull was withdrawn with a mild infection and was aimed instead for the Metropolitan Mile at Belmont Park 10 days later.

"It's not serious," said Jimmy Croll, the owner and trainer of Holy Bull.

The loss of Holy Bull removed the star of East Coast racing from next Saturday's event, just as the loss of Brocco removed the star of West Coast racing. And it left the Preakness without the two favorites for the Kentucky Derby and hurting for Triple Crown horses.

It still has Go for Gin, who won the Derby at 9-1 odds. It still has Tabasco Cat, Powis Castle and Ulises from the Derby cast, and possibly Blumin Affair, plus some colts who did not make the Derby.

Angels take split in return after rain

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

Midland's Luis Raven picked up his 13th and 14th home runs of the year on the same night but not in the same stadium.

Because of a rain-forced double header between the Midland Angels and the Jackson Generals, the renaming of Angels Stadium to Christensen Stadium, originally scheduled to take place before Friday's last game of a five-game series with Jackson, took place in between the doubleheader.

The Angels, however, didn't christen the new name with the first win. Midland held on to take a 6-5 win over the defending Texas League champions after three days of rain delay. The Generals, however, broke open a 6-6 tie in the second game with three straight RBI doubles and another RBI single to blast the Angels out of Christensen Stadium 10-6.

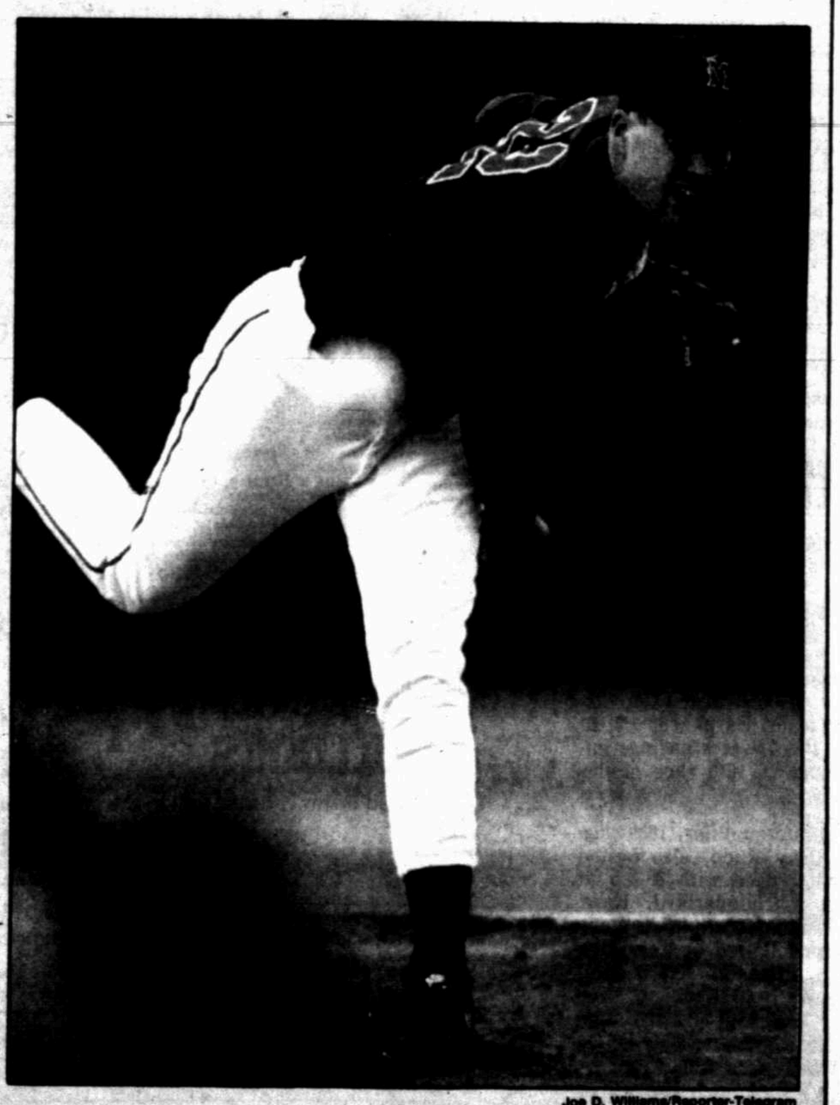

The Midland Angels honored Max H. Christensen, who co-owned the Midland Cubs from 1977 to 1985, in between games. Ken Forsch, the California Angels Director of Minor League Operations, was in town Friday and will remain today, and helped the organization rename the stadium.

Since the 1950s, Christensen has been an integral part of youth baseball in the Permian Basin and received a standing ovation from the 3,219 fans in attendence, many of which played Little League ball in Midland under Christensen's guidence.

In his acceptance speech, Christensen reminded the crowd that baseball is still America's game and pointed out the many children in attendence.

"Many of these kids can still dream of playing baseball," Christensen

Steer jumps to title

■ Big Spring triple jumper Drexel Owusu overcomes delays and a nagging injury to win the Class 4A state triple jump championship.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

AUSTIN — Friday the 13th, May, 1994, could always be remembered by Big Spring's Drexel Owusu as the nightmare of his life — if the ending hadn't been so sweet.

Owusu became a state champion Friday here at Memorial Stadium, leaping to the Class 4A triple jump crown with an effort of 48-feet, 8 1/4 inches. But he had to do it through a real Friday the 13th scenario, one that included beating an injury, opponents, weather, delays and maybe even a bit of himself. At least Jason wasn't present.

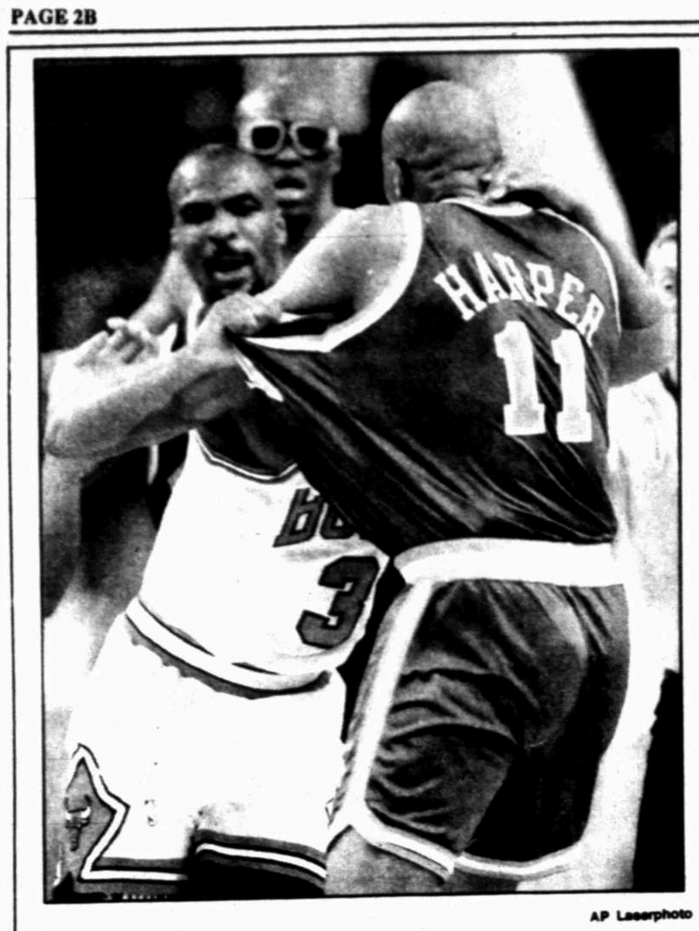

It took the junior 4 1/2 hours to claim the title. The event was supposed to start at 2 p.m., but ended at 6:30 p.m. after endless weather delays as Austin skies dumped heavy rains in the afternoon.

"Going through all the delays was the toughest part," Owusu said. "I think I did a good job of adjusting to all that. I did some stretching, visiting, sleeping, anything I could think of.

"I knew I had a chance to win this if I

New York Knick Derek Harper and Chicago Bull Jo Jo English get into a fight in the second quarter of their game Friday in Chicago. Both players were ejected.

Kukoc's shot beats Knicks

■ NBA Playoffs

CHICAGO (AP) — Scottie Pippen and Phil Jackson had an argument at the worst possible time, the Chicago Bulls and New York Knicks had a wild fight and Toni Kukoc had another game-winning shot in a memorable night of playoff basketball.

Kukoc hit a 19-foot turnaround jumper at the buzzer and the Bulls, after blowing a 19-point fourth-quarter lead, beat New York 104-102 Friday night to cut the Knicks' playoff series lead to 2-1.

"The ball came into my hands again and there was not much to think about,' Kukoc said. "Every other player has to shoot if he gets the ball. I had a pretty good look at it. There's no name for the play. Maybe it's 'Critical.'"

It was a critical victory for the Bulls, who kept the Knicks from taking a 3-0 lead in the best-of-7 series. Game 4 is Sunday at Chicago Stadium.

Kukoc's fourth game-winning shot of the season came with Pippen, the Bulls' star, sitting on the bench. He had put up a wild shot in the Bulls' previous possession that ended in a 24-second violation.

Rockets 118, Suns 102

PHOENIX — Vernon Maxwell scored 31 of his 34 points in the second half and the Houston Rockets bounced back from their Game 2 collapse to defeat the Suns 118-102 for their first victory in the best-of-7 series.

In a series punctuated by big comebacks by the visitors, this time it was the Rockets who played catch-up.

Phoenix led 29-15 after the first quarter and 49-41 at halftime. But Maxwell had 15 points in the third quarter when Houston regained the lead for the first time since early in the game.

Maxwell scored 16 more in the fourth, including a 3-pointer with 1:51 to play that gave Houston a 112-102 lead after Phoenix twice cut its deficit to seven on 3-pointers by A.C. Green and Kevin Johnson.

Hakeem Olajuwon then grabbed a loose ball under the Suns basket and fed a driving Maxwell for a layup which put the game out of reach.

Olajuwon had 26 points and 15 rebounds, and Otis Thorpe scored 16, helping the Rockets fend off a 38-point, 12-assist effort by Johnson.

Rice crushes TCU

■ SWC Tournament

AUSTIN (AP) — Matt Williamson had two hits and scored four runs and David Brooks had three RBI as Rice eliminated Texas Christian from the Southwest Conference tournament 10-3 on Friday night.

Rice (34-20) advances to play the loser of the winners' bracket game between Texas and Texas Tech.

TCU (37-20), the regular-season conference champion, was eliminated after consecutive losses to Texas and Rice.

The Horned Frogs were the first regular-season titlist to lose its first two tournament games in the 17-year history of the playoff.

Freshman Chad Ferris (8-2) picked seven innings, giving up six hits and three runs to earn the win. He struck out seven and walked five before surrendering a solo home run to TCU's Darren Tawwater.

Derek Lee (5-1), the first of five Horned Frog hurlers, allowed six hits and three runs in three innings of action to take the loss.

Kerby Smith and Rob Johnson had two hits apiece to lead the TCU offense.

The Rice-TCU contest, initially scheduled for Friday afternoon, was delayed to a night game by a heavy afternoon rainstorm.

The Texas-Texas Tech game, originally scheduled for Friday night, was rescheduled for Saturday afternoon.

Irvan knocks off Martin

SONOMA, Calif. (AP) — Ernie Irvan, the final driver on the track, knocked fellow Thunderbird driver Mark Martin off the provisional pole Friday in qualifying for the Savemart 300 Winston Cup stock car race at Sears Point Raceway.

Martin, running ran late in the afternoon's 2½-hour qualifying session, reached 91.374 mph in overtaking a lap of 90.836 posted early on by defending race champion Dale Earnhardt.

Irvan then put together a lap at 91.514 over the 2.52-mile road course, one of only two on the Winston Cup schedule. The Modesto, Calif., native won the Save-Mart Supermarkets 300 in 1992 and finished second in the 74-lap race last year.

He admitted his late spot in the qualifying order, when the temperature were lower, worked to his advantage, although his missed Earnhardt's year-old qualifying record of 98.783.

"As long as it beat everybody else, that's what it's all about," Irvan said. "I thought I had a good lap, I just didn't know how good it was."

The pole was Irvan's third of 1994, tops on the Winston Cup circuit. He leads Earnhardt by 25 points in the driver standings entering Sunday's 10th race of the year.

A third late qualifier, 1989 race winner Ricky Rudd, also bested Earnhardt's pace with a lap at 91.203 in a Thunderbird. Earnhardt wound up fourth in the starting lineup, followed by Terry Labonte's Lumina at 90.806. Jeff Gordon, Wally Dallenbach, Ken Schrader, Michael Waltrip and Kyle Petty completed the top 10 first-day qualifiers.

Twenty-five positions in a field of up to 44 starters were set Friday. The remaining spots will be determined Saturday morning.

Drabek's four-hitter lifts Astros

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

HOUSTON — Doug Drabek, continuing to rebound from a terrible 1993 season, pitched a four-hitter to win his fifth consecutive decision as the Houston Astros beat the Colorado Rockies 4-2 Friday night.

Drabek (5-1), who went 9-18 last season, allowed both runs — homers by Andres Galarraga in the second and Ellis Burks in the seventh. He struck out six and walked two.

Jeff Bagwell, the NL leader in RBIs with 37, homered into the fourth of five decks off Marvin Freeman (3-1) in the seventh for a 3-2 lead. It was his ninth off the season. Pinch-hitter Sid Bream added an RBI single off Bobby Munoz.

Freeman had won six consecutive decisions since a 3-2 loss to Houston in relief on Sept. 19, 1992, when he was with Atlanta.

Phillies 12, Pirates 1

PHILADELPHIA — Mariano Duncan drove in four runs and Danny Jackson won his fifth straight decision, leading Philadelphia past Pittsburgh.

Lenny Dykstra went 4-for-4 — giving him seven hits in two nights — and scored four runs as Philadelphia won for just the third time in 10 games.

Jackson (5-0), who went 2-for-4 at the plate with an RBI and a run scored, scattered nine hits in his third complete game this season. He struck out nine and walked two.

After stranding 17 Thursday night, Pittsburgh left 10, giving the Pirates 99 in their last 10 games.

Expos 9, Cardinals 1

MONTREAL — Mike Lansing went 4-for-5 with a pair of doubles and a home run, leading Montreal to a rout of St. Louis.

Jeff Fassero (3-2) allowed three hits in six innings, struck out five and walked two. John Wetteland got four outs for just his second save in six chances.

Vincente Palacios (0-2) retired the first nine batters but wound up allowing three runs and five hits in 6 2-3 innings. He struck out six and walked three.

Ozzie Smith homered in the fourth, his first home run since May 30, 1993, when he connected off Pat Gomez of San Diego.

Braves 7, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Tom Glavine allowed three hits in 7 2-3 innings, leading Atlanta past New York and stretching the Braves' winning streak to four.

Glavine (4-3), who had lost three of his previous four decisions, struck out 11 and walked none. Glavine, who struck out 10 or more for the eighth time, was followed by Greg McMichael, who got four outs for his eighth save in nine chances.

Bobby Jones (4-3), who had won four of his previous five decisions, allowed five runs and 10 hits in 6-1-3 innings, struck out four and walked one.

Atlanta took a 2-0 lead in the first when Ryan Klesko and Fred McGriff singled and David Justice and Javier Lopez hit RBI singles.

Cubs 6, Marlins 4

CHICAGO — Mark Grace's two-run single sparked a five-run seventh inning, and Willie Banks pitched a strong game as Chicago rallied for a victory over Florida.

Grace's bases-loaded hit off reliever Yorkis Perez scored Tuffy Rhodes and Shawon Dunston to give the Cubs a 3-2 lead. Derrick May followed with an RBI single before Grace scored on a wild pitch by Richie Lewis, and Rey Sanchez added a run-scoring hit.

The Marlins, held hitless for 6 1-3 innings by Banks (3-4), erased a 1-0 deficit on RBI singles by Carl Everett and Kurt Abbott. But Banks, who allowed three hits while striking out eight and walking three in seven innings, got out of the jam by striking out Ron Tingley and inducing losing pitcher Charlie Hough to line out.

Randy Myers, the third Cubs pitcher, got the final out for his seventh save. He walked pinch-hitter Benito Santiago to fill the bases and gave up a two-run single to Chuck Carr before pinch-hitter Rich Renteria lined to right to end the game.

With one out in the Chicago seventh, Rhodes singled, Dunston reached on a bunt single and Ryne Sandberg walked to load the bases. Perez replaced Hough, and Grace singled sharply up the middle.

Giants 9, Reds 5

SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds hit a three-run homer and had four RBIs, and Willie McGee hit an inside-the-park homer and drove in three runs as San Francisco beat Cincinnati.

San Francisco scored four unearned run in the second.

Gonzo, Oddibe spark Ranger explosion

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — Juan Gonzalez went 4-for-5 with four RBIs Friday night, leading the Texas Rangers to an 11-7 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Gonzalez hit a two-run triple in the first inning, and added three singles for his eighth career four-hit game.

Oddibe McDowell went 3-for-4 with two steals and Dean Palmer added a two-run homer after coming off the disabled list before the game for the Rangers, who banged out 14 hits.

The Rangers took a 7-4 lead with a three-run fifth for starter Kenny Rogers (3-3), who allowed five runs and eight hits in six innings.

Cris Carpenter pitched two innings of no-hit relief, striking out four for his first save.

The go-ahead run scored when Jose Canseco hit into a double play and Will Clark followed with an RBI double. Gonzalez capped the inning when he produced an RBI single to drive in Clark and chase Jack McDowell (2-5).

they scored 18 on July 14, 1991.

Gubicza, whose last complete game was May 17, 1992, allowed four runs in the eighth, the last two on Geronimo Borroa's homer.

Macfarlane hit a three-run homer in the first and the Royals batted around to score five runs in the third off Bobby Witt, who has Oakland's only two victories in the last 23 games.

Gubicza struck out four and did not walk a batter, going to three balls on only one batter. He gave up bloop doubles to Scott Hemond in the third and to Mike Aldrete in the fifth before Hemond hit a solid single in the sixth.

Witt (3-3) had won three in a row, but gave up 10 runs, eight earned, on eight hits in 4 1-3 innings. He walked four and struck out three.

Indians 2, Tigers 0

CLEVELAND — Mark Clark pitched his first American League shutout and kept Tim Belcher winless in eight starts as Cleveland beat Detroit, stopping a five-game losing skid.

Detroit lost the opener of a six-game road trip after going 9-2 on its homestand. Cleveland returned home from a 1-7 trip.

Clark (3-1), who had lasted just 1 2-3 innings in his previous start, gave up six hits, walked five and struck out three in Cleveland's first shutout of the season. Clark's only other career shutout came for St. Louis in 1992.

Belcher (0-7) gave up two runs and six hits but became the first Detroit pitcher to lose his first seven decisions in a season since Ted Gray lost nine in a row at the start of 1953.

Alvaro Espinoza, making his seventh consecutive start at shortstop in place of injured Omar Vizquel and slumping Mark Lewis, drove in Cleveland's first run with a third-inning single, after Sandy Alomar hit a one-out double.

Twins 4, Orioles 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Kirby Puckett hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning to hand Ben McDonald his first loss of the season as Minnesota defeated Baltimore.

McDonald (7-1), trying to become the majors' first eight-game winner, took the loss despite carrying a one-hitter into the sixth.

Royals 16, Athletics 6

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Mark Gubicza went 7 2-3 innings in his longest outing in two years and Kansas City hit three home runs to beat Oakland, the Athletics' 21st loss in 23 games.

Mike Macfarlane, Terry Shumpert and Gary Gaetti homered for the Royals as they scored their most runs this season. It was the most runs for the Royals since

Red Sox 5, Blue Jays 3

BOSTON — Joe Hesketh won his first game at Fenway Park in more than a year, allowing two runs in six innings as Boston defeated Toronto.

The Red Sox have won three straight after a five-game losing streak. Toronto has lost four in a row and 13 of 18. In those 18 games, the Blue Jays have been outscored 100-70.

REBELS: Lee tries to stay sharp over layoff ed Class 4A Wolfforth Frenship 6-2 in a practice game at Angels Stadium last Saturday.

(From 1B)

Rains canceled a scheduled game against Big Spring on Tuesday.

"(The layoff) could be bad, not staying in the same kind of routine that we had as far as going on Tuesday and again on Saturday," said Benavidez, "but I'm trying to keep our pitchers throwing by having intrasquad games. Its going kind of slow because the kids are getting kind of anxious. You can see it in there eyes, they are getting tired of facing each other and going through the motions."

Coronado, the runner-up in District 1-5A behind El Paso Burges, defeated El Paso Hanks 11-1 and 13-3 last weekend to setup the rematch. The Thunderbirds picked up wins from righthanders Will Steinnann and Troy Altus against Hanks. Altus (7-3) is expected to start in today's game.

"Altus throws a lot of breaking balls," said Benavidez. "He will throw a lot of off speed stuff, so we will have to be ready for that."

"The way we pitch is pretty much the way we play," said Coronado coach Juan Orozco. "If we don't pitch well then we don't have much of a chance.

"We face Lee earlier this season and they thumped us pretty good, (13-5 in a game shortened by darkness) so I know they have a good baseball team. We hit the ball pretty well. We are a good hitting team, we are as big and strong as Lee, though."

The Thunderbirds enter the game batting .365 as a team with leadoff hitter Freddie Varagas leading the team with a .435 average.

Second baseman Wayne Marley and left fielder Grant Randall are both hitting .400 or better to lead the offense.

"We have our entire infield, with the exception of our first baseman, back from last year," said Orozco. "Both of our pitchers were on the team last year, so I think our guys know what to expect Saturday."

Marley, Randall, third baseman Issac Lofton, Varagas and Altus were all on the 1992 T-Bird team that advanced to the state tournament in Austin.

Sophomore pitcher Mark Holly (6-0) will get the start for Lee. The Rebels pitching depth of Lance Watters (6-0), Britt Harper (5-0), Alex Hale (2-0) and Sean Low will give Benavidez a wide array of options if the need arises.

"That's the reason we wanted to face them in a one game series," said Orozco. "We know they can hit, but their pitching staff is pretty solid."

Offensively, Lee is hitting .395 as a team with seven players averaging over .400.

Junior Kevin Jordan leads the attack with a .472 average followed closely by Harper (.463), left fielder Chris Connally (.458), Martinez (.455), shortstop Eric Benavidez (.452), left fielder Travis Stephens (.423) and center fielder and lead off hitter David Galvan (.415).

REBEL NOTES: KCRS (AM 550) will provide inning-by-inning reports from El Paso ... a win by Lee would match them against either Lubbock Monterey or El Paso Riverside in the regional quarterfinals next weekend at a site and time to be determined ... Coronado spent $30,000 in renovations of its field over the past year.

STEER: Hip injury doesn't slow Owusu jumped well, but you never know about the weather. I had confidence that I could do good here."

Owusu's state championship opportunity almost never happened. He has had a hip injury most of the season and has only been jumping five weeks without practicing at all.

"I had some run throughs this last week and that was all the practice I've had for the last six weeks," Owusu said. "The muscle is beginning to pull off the hip bone and the doctor says I need two months rest to heal it.

"I was scared when the injury happened that I wouldn't be able to compete again this year. I took only one jump at district and jumped three times at regional before the injury slowed me again. But I was able to come back."

Owusu took only five jumps here, but not because of the injury.

"I wanted to set a personal record, so I saved my energy for my last jump, so I skipped the fifth jump," he said.

And the reason he wanted a personal record so bad? Drexel's father, Josh Owusu, was a standout for Angelo State. Josh had a 49-11 in high school, a mark Drexel wants to beat.

"My father has been a big influence in my jumping, but I do want to beat his record," Drexel said. "I still have a ways to go since 48-9 is my best."

Friday the 13th was a nightmare for defending Class 4A state champion San Angelo Lake View. The Chiefs saw their chances of keeping the crown crushed early when they dropped the baton in the sprint relay, losing a possible 20 points in the event, and then finished a dismal sixth in the 1600 relay.

That left the door open for La Marque to win the boys 4A team crown with 38 points. La Marque didn't even have to have a team in the 1600 relay to do it. Mineral Wells was second with 30 points.

In the girls 4A division, Port Arthur Lincoln won the championship by a 54-45 margin over Dallas Madison by winning the last event of the day, the 1600 relay. All other conference team championships will be determined today. Class 4A was the only division fully completed Friday.

In other 4A action Friday, Pecos' Willie Mata, a junior, rallied from as far back as fifth place to win the 800 meters in a blistering 1:52.8.

"I was really nervous when the race started and I got really far behind and knew I had to run to catch up," Mata said. "I just had it in me this time, I guess."

Mata tried the same tactic in the 400, which worked for second place, but it was a distant second to Lake View's Terrence "Rocket" Norris, who blazed to a 46.60. Mata fell as far back as fifth place again, but rallied at the end. However, Norris had things decided by the time Mata moved.

Big Spring's Justin Taylor never recovered from a bad start in the 110 high hurdles and finished last with a 17.9 after hitting three hurdles.

Big Spring's Kathy Smith also had no luck in the girls long jump, placing seventh with a 16-11, almost a foot under her state qualifying effort in the region meet.

Sweetwater's Kat Jackson placed third in the shot put with a 38-9 while Fort Stockton's girls 800 relay team was eighth and last.

Monahans' Luis Leyva had a fifth place in the shot put (52-6) and a sixth place in the discus (156-1) while Andrews' Rosendo Lopez placed eighth in the 800 with a 10:22.2, 24 seconds over his state qualifying time. Lamesa's Robert Wagner didn't place in the 1600.

In Class 3A, Reagan County's Alicia Thompson, who is headed to Texas Tech on a basketball scholarship, set a new record in the discus with a 148-4 after a lengthy rain delay. Thompson will try to repeat as the shot put champion at 10 a.m. today.

Andrews boys 8th in shortened play

AUSTIN (AP) — Rain wiped out the second round of the boys competition in the Class 4A State Golf Tournament Friday leaving the Andrews in eight place with a 322. Austin Anderson won the state title based on its total of 301 from Thursday.

Rockwall was second with 305, while Austin Westlake and defending champion Dallas Highland Park finished in a third-place tie with 307.

Bay City's Brandt Kieschnick won the medalist competition.

In the girls competition, which was shortened to 27 holes in team and medalist play, Bastrop easily defended its state title, shooting 454.

Andrews girls finished fourth after shooting 158 for nine holes Friday. The Lady Mustangs' Tori Hester shot a 38 Friday to finish sixth in the medalists race with a 27 hole total 114. Other Andrew's scores were Shannon Rollins 40-123, Marissa Mainord 38-124, Jennifer Bristow 42-133 and Marissa Fleming 43-134.

Dallas Highland Park's girls were second (479) and Austin Westlake was third (481).

Kelli Kuehne, of Dallas Highland Park won medalist honors after shooting a 32 over nine holes on Friday to go along with a 67 in Thursday's first round for a total of 99.

Christy Cervantes of Bastrop was second (108) and teammate Amanda Workman was third (110).

Crashing thunderstorms preserved Brad Elder's hold on first place as Plano won the Class 5A team title.

Plano (289) edged Amarillo (298), Round Rock (302) and San Antonio Clark (308).

ANGELS: Midland, Jackson split double header said. "Because you don't have to be 7 feet tall or weigh 300 pounds."

Meanwhile, while Raven officially nailed the last homer in Angels Stadium, he didn't get to claim the first one hit in Christensen Stadium.

That honor went to Jackson's Gary Mota, whose three-run shot got the Generals off to a 3-0 lead in the first inning of the second game. Raven's shot which rocketed from his bat, however, was by far the more impressive.

Reserve Brian Grebeck, who started the second game at third base for Chris Smith, instantly pulled the game back into a 3-3 tie in the bottom of the second with a two-run double.

The game went back and forth from there until the sixth when the Generals managed to tie the game at 6-6 after Raven's second homer of the night drove in Chris Pritchett to give Midland what would be its last lead of the night at 6-5 in the fifth.

In the first game, Pete Janicki got his first win of the season.

Midland hosts Arkansas today at 7 p.m.

front side, but the back nine took its toll.

"The back is easier. It's more open than the front, but I think the pressure is much greater on the final nine of a tournament like this," Sutton said.

Class 5A team play finished just in time as heavy rain hit the Austin area just as the final foursome came through. Just one group of golfers, including Odessa Permian's Kristin Kight was left on the the course. All team play was finished, however.

Fisher, who will join Lee grad Paula King at the University of Oklahoma next fall, said confidence was the key factor when comparing last year to this year.

"I think last year we knew we had it," Fisher said. "We had beaten nearly everyone all year long and we just knew we were going to do it.

"But we all had doubts this year. We weren't really sure if we could do it again. Maybe we should have. We tried, but we just never believed it like last year."

It was even more simple for Fuller, who is headed for North Texas next fall.

"The difference between last year and this year? That's easy," Fuller said. "Last year we were first and this year we were third."

Fuller has a way of cutting to the bone, but she knows how to cut red tape. She should have added, however, that it still wasn't a bad day of work for District 4-5A.

Class 5A Meadlist: Holly Carriker, San Antonio Churchill, 70-136.

1. San Angelo (630): Julie McMahon, 75-149; Amy Marsh, 83-161; Sarah Honaker, 80-163; Mesha Shelburne, 77-162; Kari Alexander, 85-165.
2. Humble (632): Shere Noble, 72-149; Amy Willmon, 75-153; Nicole Rodriquez, 83-163; Christi Elston, 81-167; Jodi Clark, 95-184.
3. Midland Lee (640): Kim Fisher, 77-159; Kaimi Fuller, 77-159; Jennifer Dickson, 82-161; Heather Albright, 83-162; Kelly Thompson, 82-166.
4. Kingwood (647): Liz Cameron, 81-158; Jane Hiburn, 80-160; Patricia Lopez, 86-163; Katrina Snowgren, 82-166; Elizabeth Allen, 87-172.

Orange Bowl will be Jan. 1

MIAMI (AP) — With New Year's Day falling on a Sunday, the Orange Bowl will be the only major bowl game played on Jan. 1.

The Rose, Sugar, Cotton and Fiesta bowls are will be played Monday, Jan. 2. The Orange Bowl decided last week to remain on New Year's night.

"We just saw nothing but positives from the decision in terms of our game, the fans and our festival activities," executive director Keith Tribble said Friday. "We felt we would not run into any opposition on the major networks with any games."

It will be the first Sunday night kickoff (8 p.m. EST) in the Orange Bowl's 61-year history. The Sugar Bowl will begin at 8:30 the next night.

"We had some conversations with the Sugar Bowl, because they're the only other bowl traditionally played in prime time on Jan. 1," Tribble said. "I think it's better for both games."

Two other games are scheduled for Jan. 1 — the Gator Bowl (7:30 p.m.) and the Peach Bowl (8 p.m.). Two NFL wild-card games are also scheduled.

Non-winnners lead in PaineWebber Invite

Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Butch Baird and Bobby Nichols, non-winners on the Senior PGA Tour since 1989, got off to good starts to possibly break the string at the PaineWebber Invitational on Friday.

Nichols, who has come close to winning at the TPC at Piper Glen the previous two years, fired a 6-under-par 66. Baird was the first to reach the clubhouse with that total as he birdied his last three holes.

Jay Sigel, Larry Ziegler and Bob Dickson played in the same threesome and matched one another with 68s. Jim Colbert and Jim Dent also shot 68. Ten golfers were at 69 and leading money-winner Ray Floyd and runner-up Lee Trevino were at 70.

Defending champion Mike Hill was at 71. Arnold Palmer, who designed the course and is the designated host for the event, struggled in with a 75.

Baird and Nichols admitted their scores were far different from recent performances.

"It's been a non-productive three or four years as far as what I'd like to see myself do," Baird said. "You're always striving out here to improve your areas that you feel you're a little deficient in."

Baird pointed to putting as a problem, but he had seven birdies to get his share of the lead. He made four putts of at least 14 feet for his birdies, including a 20-footer on the par-5, 16th, the first of three in as many holes.

"Anytime you hit the ball halfway decent and roll the putts, you're going to shoot a real good number," Baird said. "I was very happy with the putting because we've been working on it very hard."

LPGA Championship

WILMINGTON, Del. — Patty Sheehan blew past the competition with a 3-under-par 68 to gain a share of the lead after two rounds of the windswept LPGA Championship.

Sheehan, the defending champion, started the day in a 10-way tie for 17th place. She had four birdies and one irksome bogey for a 2-under 140 total, tied with Robin Walton.

Walton offset a double-bogey and a bogey with four birdies for a 70. Alice Ritzman shot a 73 for a 141.

Sheehan, Walton and Ritzman were the only players under par after two trips over the 6,386-yard DuPont Country Club course. For a second straight day, players had to contend with swirling winds up to 30 mph.

"The wind gusted and came from everywhere," Ritzman said. "It seemed like it changed direction every five seconds. It was a nightmare."

Nelson Classic

DALLAS — For the second day in a row, overnight rains washed out play in the Byron Nelson Classic and placed in jeopardy officials' hopes to get in three rounds of play.

Another inch of rain fell on the already saturated TPC at Las Colinas early Friday, flooding the course and again delaying the start of this weather-plagued event.

Tournament chairman Plack Carr said that a second course will be used Saturday, when the 156-man field will play as many holes as possible.

The plan calls for the field to be split, half on the TPC at Las Colinas and half on the Cottonwood Valley course across the street.

After the completion of 18 holes, the players will change courses and play until darkness.

Marquee lineup advances to semifinals in Italian Open

Associated Press

■ Tennis Roundup

ROME — The baseline brigade is out. The big servers are in.

Pete Sampras, Goran Ivanisevic and Boris Becker advanced Friday to the semifinals of the Italian Open, a marquee lineup more akin to the grass of Wimbledon than the red clay of the Foro Italico.

Jim Courier, last year's Wimbledon runnerup, played a night match against Slava Dosedel.

Sampras, the reigning Wimbledon champion and top seeded player, served 17 aces as he overpowered Italy's Andrea Gaudenzi 6-3, 7-5 for his 25th straight match victory this year.

The fourth-seeded Ivanisevic matched Sampras with 17 aces of his own — including four straight in the last game — to beat Jacco Eltingh of the Netherlands 7-6 (7-5), 6-3.

Becker got through to the semis by default after his German rival, No. 2 Michael Stich, pulled out of the tournament a few hours before the match. Stich cited a back ailment for his withdrawal, but he also had off-court distractions: his wife was stopped by police in Germany this week on suspicion of speeding and drunk driving, and his brother is getting married on Saturday.

German Open

BERLIN, Germany — France's Julie Halard battled Steffi Graf at the German Open for two hours before her missed volley allowed the world's top-ranked player to escape with a 6-3, 4-6, 7-5 win.

The top-seeded Graf, who has played below par during the tournament, allowed the world's 28th-ranked player to win four straight games in the third set and seize a 5-4 lead.

The 12th-seeded Halard took the first two points against Graf's serve in the next game, but then netted an easy backhand volley. Graf, who has lost just once in 1994, was saved from facing three match points.

"That's why I lost," Halard said of the blown volley. "Then Steffi didn't miss anything."

Jana Novotna of the Czech Republic will be Graf's opponent in Saturday's semifinal. The tournament's third-seeded player ousted Argentina's Ines Gorrochategui 6-2, 6-2.

In Saturday's other semifinal, Germany's Anke Huber will meet Brenda Schultz of the Netherlands, a 6-2, 6-2 winner over American Ann Grossman.

The 19-year-old Huber beat Russia's Elena Makarova 6-0, 6-1 after the two battled 30 minutes to decide the match's first three games.

Penske car makes first misstep at Indianapolis 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Mercedes-powered Penske cars made their first misstep of the week at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway when Paul Tracy crashed Friday while practicing for the Indianapolis 500.

The speed is a question mark, the weather is suspect and now Tracy's status is in question. The only certainty seems to be that a Penske car still is favored to win the pole for the race May 29.

Saturday, the first of four days of qualifications for the race, is the day that Roger Penske's incredible gamble either begins paying dividends or drawing snickers.

Penske, the most successful car owner in the history of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, with 10 pole positions and nine race wins, took advantage of a loophole in the rules of the U.S. Auto Club, which sanctions Indy, and built from scratch a stock-type, push-rod engine.

What is now the Mercedes-Benz turbocharged V8 that is powering the three Penske entries — defending race winner Emerson Fittipaldi, Tracy and Al Unser Jr. — was an idea in August, a drawing in September and is now a reality.

It is being built by Ilmor Engineering, the same company that designed and built the Chevrolet Indy V8s that have dominated in recent years. Chevy pulled out after last season, but Penske, who owns 25 percent of the company, enticed Mercedes into the sport.

The competition believed before Tracy's crash that the fearsome engine, which reportedly can produce up to 150 more horsepower than the conventional Indy V8 turbos, was a lock to sweep the front row. Penske insists the engine is a true gamble.

"It's still a developmental project," insisted Penske, whose cars swept the front-row positions in 1988. "We think it will be a good engine, but we really don't know what it can do, yet."

Late in Friday's session, the last full day of practice, Fittipaldi held the fast lap of the week at 230.438 mph. He backed that up early Friday with a 230.138.

His fastest straightaway speeds have been in the 244-245 mph range, numbers not seen before at Indy or on any other oval.

Even Fittipaldi, who won the Indy pole in 1990 after winning the race in 1989, was impressed.

"I've never gone that fast before," he said. "I don't even want to know what that is in kilometers."

Raul Boesel, a Brazilian countryman of Fittipaldi, is second fastest so far at 230.403 in a Ford Cosworth-powered Lola. But that lap was reportedly helped along by the draft from other cars on the track, while Fittipaldi's fastest lap, which came late in Thursday's session, was apparently unaided.

Tracy was third overall at 229.961 and had a fast lap on Friday of 228.693 shortly before crashing coming off turn four after something appeared to break in the right rear of his car.

The 25-year-old Canadian was knocked unconscious by the collision and, after coming to, complained of pain in his left foot. He was transported by ambulance to nearby Methodist Hospital for X-rays and further examination and was expected to be held overnight for observation. That would put his participation in the opening round of time trials in jeopardy.

FIA moves to make Formula One safer

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — With two racers dead and a third in a coma, the organization that runs Formula One auto racing decided Friday to take drastic measures to make the sport safer.

Overriding its agreement with Formula One teams, the International Automobile Federation (FIA) unilaterally imposed measures designed primarily to reduce speeds in a sport where cars are sometimes clocked at 200 mph.

"Anything that needs to be done — anything that we think usefully can be done — will be done," FIA president Max Mosley said. "We don't have any choice."

FIA has been under pressure to act since the deaths of Brazilian three-time world champion Ayrton Senna and Austrian Roland Ratzenberger in high-speed crashes during the San Marino Grand Prix two weeks ago.

Then on Thursday, the first day of competitive racing since Senna's death, Karl Wendlinger of Austria crashed during a warmup before the opening qualifying session of the Monaco Grand Prix.

Some of FIA's new regulations would take effect immediately after Sunday's race.

Producer: 'SNL' stays on course

'Saturday Night Live' remains top-rated show in late night

By Phil Rosenthal
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — It was about midnight on a Friday, and on the floor of Studio 8-H in Rockefeller Center, rehearsals were under way for the next evening's edition of NBC's "Saturday Night Live."

It was going much the way Friday night rehearsals have gone since the show's premiere 19 years ago, which is to say it was a bit rocky. The writers hadn't finished the script until about 4 a.m., frustrating the crew. And the cast was struggling to keep up with all the last-minute changes still coming down.

Upstairs, meanwhile, in an office overlooking the studio, "SNL" creator and executive producer Lorne Michaels was recalling a bizarre sketch from the show's early days. Dan Aykroyd was forced, at the last minute, to condense a 7½-minute piece into just 3½ minutes. And, rather than cut his material, Aykroyd chose to do everything at double speed.

"When it was over, Anne Beatts, who was then a writer on the show, said, 'A blow for surrealism!'" Michaels said. "We weren't sure it made any sense whatsoever, but it went out on the air. People used to put up with that stuff and say, 'I wonder what they were getting at there.'

"I was here in what is now called the golden period, and I can say with some confidence that what is now called the golden period was not in any way a golden period.

"From 1976 on, after Chevy (Chase) left and we made our first transition into Bill Murray coming here, (the stories were) all 'Saturday Night Dead.' The headlines have been the one consistent thing about the show."

The thought made Michaels laugh, in part because the headlines are back as "SNL" concludes its 19th season, which ends Saturday with Heather Locklear as guest host and Janet Jackson the musical act.

The thing is, going into season No. 20, "Saturday Night" is nowhere near dead. Its audience has shrunk 12 percent from last year, when it won an Emmy — from an 8.8 rating to a 7.7 — but it remains the top-rated program in all of late-night television.

Critics can cite the program's inconsistency, but that is as much an "SNL" tradition as "Weekend Update" or the guest host's opening monologue.

"We're the show that's never living up to expectations as far as the press goes, or not fulfilling our potential, which is what it said on all our report cards at one point or another," said Michaels, who is not quite 50 and also executive producer of CBS' "The Kids in the Hall" and NBC's "Late Night With Conan O'-

Up from the tube ... and down the drain

By Rick Marin
N.Y. Times News Service

Dana Carvey is doing what he does best: impressions, characters, voices, faces — anything for a laugh. He's like a human remote control.

(italics) Zap, (end italics) and he's Cary Grant arguing with Alfred Hitchcock on the set of "Suspicion." (italics) Zap, (end italics) and he's a droning high school valedictorian. (italics) Zap, (end italics) and he's Uncle Charlie from "My Three Sons" if he were a therapist: "You think you got problems? I got three kids at home!"

He has been doing this all day — 45 television interviews in six hours — and he's still at it in the back of the limousine transporting him from his New York hotel to Newark Airport. Carvey spent seven years on "Saturday Night Live," popularizing his political impersonations (Bush, Perot) and a repertory of characters: the Church Lady; Wayne's intense sidekick, Garth, in the Wayne's World sketches; Hans, of the Schwarzeneggerian duo Hans and Franz.

But strangely the movie he's promoting, "Clean Slate,"

Carvey, friends hit with 'Slate'

By Michael H. Price
N.Y. Times News Service

Bob Hope could take this kind of movie for granted in his heyday, but Bob Hope never had the wonderful Valeria Golino for a co-star. So who has got it better — Dana Carvey in "Clean Slate," or Bob Hope in the glory years of Old Hollywood?

Probably a tossup, but any way you figure it "Clean Slate" is a delightful mystery-comedy in the timeless tradition of all those wartime escapades Bob Hope and Danny Kaye used to pull. Carvey has hit this level of ordinary-guy charm once before, in the mild caper picture "Opportunity Knocks," but the new arrival supplies material better suited to his talent.

Most likely inspired by Hope's "My Favorite Blonde" and its companion films of the '40s, "Clean Slate" pitches Carvey as a private detective whose latest case has caused him to develop a peculiar form of amnesia: Sleep causes him to forget the day that has just passed. The humor issues mainly from Carvey's refusal to mug for the camera or wink at the audience, and he hints throughout at a darker side to his nice-guy presence.

So even though he might know the caller (Golino) who knocks in-

30 years later, Floyd still dazzles fans

By Steve Dollar

ATLANTA — To put things in the words of its core audience: Dude, cool laser show!

Pink Floyd's much anticipated performance at Bobby Dodd Stadium Tuesday night was an extravagant case of the spectacle upstaging the music. And given the elaborate props, sound effects and stunning light design on display — with lasers and video projections galore — that was probably as intended.

Thirty years down the line from its origins in the British blues and psychedelic explosion of the 1960s, the supergroup has little to prove to its fans, but it still wants to dazzle them in a manner no other act is likely to attempt.

After all, those fans have seized on the band's current tour and new No. 1 album, "The Division Bell" (Columbia) — its first release in five years — as meteoric experiences unlikely to soon be repeated.

And they paid as much as $60 a ticket to sit on dinky plastic chairs amid drizzly cold weather and soggy Astroturf. Spanning generations, the audience included aging hippies, fraternity row party hounds and giggling, stumbling teenagers whose mile-wide pupils implied use of hallucinogens for some added '60s spirit.

Those kids wouldn't have been disappointed. From the opening "amoebas under glass" imagery that accompanied "Astronomy Domine," to the surreal, allegorical video that illustrated "Shine On You Crazy Diamond," to the surround-sound effects that signaled "Money," the concert emphasized state-of-the-art technical wizardry. For the second half of the show, at least, the music, too, could be engaging, as the band offered a selection of greatest hits, reaching a climax with "Another Brick in the Wall," prompting the singalong chorus of "We don't need no edu-

Cable channel possibilities endless

On July 4, "AT," or "All Talk" a new cable channel with, you guessed it — all talk — will make its debut on cable systems across the country. Seems there's a cable channel that caters to virtually every subject these days.

Patterson

Well, most every subject. There are a few ideas they've forgotten, but we'd like to see. And some we hope we never see:

■ The Coupon Channel. Brought to you by the friendly folks at the Home Shoppers' Channel. As soon as they figure out how to teach people to clip coupons directly from their TV screen this channel is a go.

■ The Baby Channel. For people who enjoy viewing sonograms and fetal monitors 24 hours a day. A nightly feature in the works is rumored to be "Birth of the Day," complete with all the trimmings. One thing TBC will defenitely need for the Birth of the Day segment will be censors.

■ The Gilligan Network. Hey, if they can have the Golf Channel, anything's possible.

■ The Rain-Delay Network. An alternative to all those busy sports on ESPN, this network will feature non-stop non-action at various baseball locales around the country in the midst of rainouts. Should be very popular in the Mississippi Valley and other points midwest.

■ The Willie Nelson Network. Movies, videos and in April each year, a two-week special on properly preparing your taxes.

■ Geriatric Comedy Central. An off-shoot of the popular cable outlet, Geriatric Comedy Central offers old movies from Laurel & Hardy, Groucho Marx Charlie Chaplin and George Burns.

■ The Obituary Channel. Keep updated on the latest deaths across the country. Hosted by Willard Scott.

■ Gregorian Chant Television. First a wildly-popular CD, now 24-hours worth of chanting from litte known monks from near a small Spanish villa.

■ Dittohead TV will feature 24-hours of conservative republican viewpoints. When not hosting one of his three daily talk shows, network president Rush Limbaugh will be constantly seen by viewers in a

'Mrs. Doubtfire' price

In video outlets, no guideline flies out the window faster than that ball-park figure referred to as the suggested retail price. Whatever the movie for which a studio suggests whatever amount, the price immediately heads south in a highly competitive marketplace. This week, for example, there is "Mrs. Doubtfire," released by Fox on April 27 and now No. 1 on some best-seller lists. Fox suggests $19.98, which is roughly $5 below what studios usually suggest for a hit movie, but stores surveyed by Video Business magazine report actual prices that don't come within $3 of that figure. The highest price was $16.97 at Kmart in Seattle, and the lowest was $10.99 at Target in Phoenix. The average price was $14.12. Some people, of course, pick up "Mrs. Doubtfire" for considerably less on street corners and in other places where dealers aren't scrupulous about operating within authorized channels of supply. Amid technological advances like CD-ROM, video piracy has been making its own strides. In recent years, piracy has been most publicized abroad, particularly in Asia and such countries as Russia, where association members haven't distributed videos and, consequently, every tape has been pirated. In the United States, Adamski said, pirate operations are increasingly carried out in large plants that distribute bogus tapes from coast to coast. Meanwhile, at or near the top of the current pirate best-seller list are "Sliver," "The Fugitive" and "Mrs. Doubtfire."

New video releases

Into the West
1993. Touchstone. 97 minutes. Closed captioned. PG.

A magical white horse appears in Dublin and enters the lives of two boys (Rory Conroy and Ciaran Fitzgerald) and their father (Gabriel Byrne), who has relinquished his title of King of the Travelers in western Ireland and settled in the city.

Kino
1991. 107 minutes. No rating.

When Kaige's cryptic, beautiful film, a young boy is put under a magical spell, told to dedicate his life to music and informed that he will be blind until the 1,000th string on his banjo breaks. The story then leaps ahead 60 years to a time when the boy is a man (Liu Zhongyuan) and events assume metaphorical proportions in a variety of settings, from windswept battlefields to an enchanted noodle shop beside a waterfall.

Batman: Mask of the Phantasm
1993. Warner. 77 minutes. PG.

Set in the 1940s, Eric Radomski and Bruce W. Timm's noir cartoon purports to explain the origins of Batman. As long as he is involved with Andrea Beaumont, a cross between Lauren Bacall and Veronica Lake, the reclusive Bruce Wayne suppresses the urge to avenge his murdered parents.

COMICS: 'SNL' alumni have hard time on big screen which opened Friday, allows him to use none of the talents that made his name. The movie is a noirish comedy about a private eye with amnesia. He plays no wacky characters. He wears no funny makeup. "This wasn't an attempt to do another blockbuster," he says of "Clean Slate," as if to pre-empt criticism that it is not another "Wayne's World." "It was a small movie."

When asked about his unfortunate first small movie, "Opportunity Knocks," Carvey says: "Sometimes I sense this anger. Like, 'He was so cool on "Saturday Night Live," and now he's in this stupid movie.' No one wants to be in a stupid movie."

And Bernie Brillstein, one half of the Brillstein-Grey management team, which handles Carvey and other "SNL" alumni, adds: "People think we stay up at night and say, 'How lousy can we make this? Boy, let's put him in this bomb!' That's not the way it works."

Maybe not, but the result is often the same. Television makes comics marketable and gives them a built-in following. These comedians are deluged with movie offers and often persuaded to appear in films that have weak characters and shaky plots, films over which they have little artistic control.

"When Funny Comedians Do Stupid Movies" could be the title of a self-help book for the cast of "Saturday Night Live," "In Living Color," "SCTV" and other sketch-comedy television shows known for their repertory casts, parodies, characters and set pieces.

The most successful graduates of "Saturday Night Live" — Chevy Chase, Eddie Murphy, Bill Murray — each had his own persona. Each one seemed to be playing himself no matter what sketch he was in.

Character comics, on the other hand — people like Mike Myers, Martin Short, Tracey Ullman, Phil Hartman — are composites of different personas. Most of them have never found starring movie roles commensurate with their chameleonlike talent.

"It's very hard to wave $3 million to $4 million in front of someone and have them keep their common sense," says Lorne Michaels, the founder and executive producer of "Saturday Night Live."

Occasionally, audiences flock to the box office (as they did for "Wayne's World"); more often, they follow the critics' advice and stay away. Martin Short's recent flop "Clifford" was described as "more a stunt than a movie," by the critic Caryn James in The New York Times, and it disappeared rapidly from theaters.

Mike Myers — the other half of the "Wayne's World" duo — saw his film "So I Married an Axe Murderer" dumped quickly into video stores. Last year's "Coneheads," based on a vintage "Saturday Night Live" sketch, was amusing but widely ignored. David Spade, another "SNL" cast member, is currently in "PCU," a film that Janet Maslin, writing in The Times, called "surprisingly lame."

Nonetheless, more such movies are in the works. Damon Wayans, of "Saturday Night Live" and "In Living Color," stars in "Blankman," about a ghetto superhero, due later this summer. Al Franken begins shooting "Stuart Smalley" this month for Paramount, based on his "SNL" self-help guy. The cast of "The Kids in the Hall" is making a movie. This fall, Julia Sweeney's ambisexual "SNL" character makes it to the big screen in "It's Pat." And Myers is shopping around his "Coffee Talk" sketch as a feature.

What each comic aspires to be is a runaway success. Jim Carrey, perennially described as "the white guy on 'In Living Color,' " starred in "Ace Ventura: Pet Detective," which earned $67 million earlier this year.

Carrey's next screen venture, a special-effects-laden comedy called "The Mask," which will open in July, has been described by insiders who have attended early screenings as the Next Big Thing. Carrey has reportedly been paid $7 million to star in a new film, "Dumb and Dumber."

"Because of 'Wayne's World' and Jim Carrey, there is this frenzy at the studios to put out these movies," says Brad Grey, Brillstein's partner. "The Jerky Boys," a film inspired by an album of prank phone calls, is now in production in New York.

Even Michaels can't resist a joke about the trend. Asked to comment about the phenomenon of sketch comedians making the transition to the big screen, he cracks, "Short piece," alluding to the small proportion of "SNL" alumni who have succeeded in film: Eddie Murphy, whose "Beverly Hills Cop 3" opens May 25; Bill Murray; Dan Aykroyd, once he went serious; Chevy Chase, who can still draw crowds on opening weekends; and Billy Crystal, whose "City Slickers II" is being touted as an early summer hit.

Julia Sweeney swears she didn't want to do a "Pat" movie. "I resisted it completely," she says. "I just didn't know how we could make it last for two hours. But Fox was really keen; our producer was really keen. So we thought, O.K., we'll write the script. And after three months, we fell madly in love with the script. Unfortunately, Fox did not."

"It's Pat" was shelved at Fox, and Touchstone Pictures wound up producing it. The plot revolves around Pat's romance with the equally sex-ambiguous "Chris" (played by Dave Foley of "The Kids in the Hall") and culminates in a wedding. Ms. Sweeney promises that the character is now "multidimensional."

Martin Short, a veteran of both "SCTV" and "SNL" whose charm and talent are a matter of record, has made nine movies since "Three Amigos" in 1986.

SEASON: 'Saturday Night' to end 19th year on top in late night

(From 1C)

Brien" as well as several movies, including "Wayne's World" and "Coneheads."

"The show has always been uneven and will continue to be uneven because it goes from blank page to on-the-air in six days. Some weeks, it's going to be better than others."

Admittedly, the "Saturday Night Dead" or "Saturday Night Lifeless" perception is there. "We were much hotter last year," was the midseason assessment of cast member Phil Hartman, whose Bill Clinton impersonation has not caught fire the way now-departed co-star Dana Carvey's George Bush did last season.

And it hasn't helped that "SNL's" highest-rated show in six seasons was the one on March 12 this year with figure skater Nancy Kerrigan as guest host. Forced to perform off the ice and without skates, Kerrigan had all the grace and timing of "The Chevy Chase Show."

"She's 24, she's never acted before, and people were going, 'She's not good!'" Michaels said. "They weren't going to cut her any slack. She was being reviewed as if she were Katharine Hepburn. But when (athletes) Joe Montana or Bill Russell did (the show), nobody was going, 'Wait a minute, they can't act.' But I guess the level of expectation with her was very high."

Yet, Michaels understands that expectation is a big part of why viewers tune in to see "SNL."

"When there's something that everyone's talking about, (David) Letterman and 'The Tonight Show' deal with it in a topical way," Michaels said. "They're the newspapers and we're the magazine. We're a weekly. So our caning piece should be definitive. At least we've had lots of time to think about it."

What has changed, after almost 20 years, is the level of that expectation. The cast is continually changing, one reason the show seems assured of surviving for some time to come.

If memories of what "SNL" once was exceed what it now is, it's partly because those recollections are sweetened by the reruns shown on Comedy Central and VH-1 in which the sketches that bombed have been edited out and forgotten.

"The show is always in a state of becoming. It's never what it was," Michaels said. "We've always gone through these transitions. We lost a lot of key writers at the end of last season.

"To me, there have been three or four shows this year that have been as good as anything we've ever done. And there have been ones where..."

His voice trails off. "What's happening," he said, "is the cast is shaking out, and, on the writing staff, there's two or three new voices where you go, 'Oh, that's going to be interesting.' Some people have done remarkable work. And they're younger, much younger."

During the show's first five seasons, Michaels never fired anyone. "I don't think, in those years, I would have been emotionally equipped to do that," he said.

But when Michaels returned to the show in 1985, after five seasons away and following two complete cast overhauls — a disastrous one by executive producer Jean Doumanian in 1980, and another to save the franchise by Dick Ebersol the following year — he installed a totally new cast and swore he never would make the same wholesale changes ever again.

Instead, he has slowly made changes each year. The nucleus of his 1985 cast consisted of Dennis Miller, Nora Dunn and Jon Lovitz. The next year, he added Hartman, Dana Carvey, Kevin Nealon, Jan Hooks and A. Whitney Brown. Mike Myers came later, then David Spade, Rob Schneider and Adam Sandler. Chris Farley, Tim Meadows, Ellen Cleghorne and Julia Sweeney arrived the year after that.

With the additions inevitably come subtractions. Damon Wayans, who would go on to star on "In Living Color," for example, was cut after one season in '86.

"The beautiful thing about that show, and I think Lorne should do this periodically, is it was ruthless in its pruning," said Miller, now doing a live weekly show of his own for HBO. "You know what I mean? The best bush on your lawn is the one you hacked off at the right length. Lorne doesn't hack off enough anymore. It's about young kids."

There have been reports that Michaels might consider leaving the show himself when his contract expires, though that is some years off. On some days, leaving probably seems like a good idea. On others, it surely does not.

"My feeling is 'Saturday Night Live' has been, for lack of a better phrase, my life's work," Michaels said, cognizant of the launching pad his show has become. "I believe in it. I think there are times of extraordinary frustration for me, when I know what it can be and I know it's not being that.

"It's very easy for young people, in the first flush of success, to be confused and paralyzed because they yearn for people to pay attention to them and now way more people are paying attention. They're getting an enormous amount of conflicting advice. They are, in the phrase of the industry, 'hot.'

"They're being offered all sorts of things. They're distracted and not focused. It's my job to continually bring them back and make them focus on the show because I know if they suddenly leave the show or if we pull the rug out from under them and they're gone, it isn't necessarily written (that they stay 'hot')."

Former "SNL" star Miller describes Michaels' approach as a bit more direct than that.

"Rent 'Spartacus,'" Miller said. "Pay strict attention to the gladiator-school scenes. I'm sure Lorne watched that when he was setting up the office flow charts because, every once in a while, you'll go back to the mess hall and somebody will be hanging upside down above a soup bowl. It's a tough place."

It has to be, though, according to Michaels. As he told O'Brien before plucking him from relative obscurity to replace David Letterman on "Late Night," toughness is an absolute necessity in show business.

"If you can't take the beating, you don't belong in the game," Michaels said. "The beating is part of the game. It's what toughens you. If 'Saturday Night' hadn't been always beaten up, somehow we wouldn't be what we are now."

And "Saturday Night Live" is what it always has been.

■ Liberal Viewpoint TV. So far, no talent and no sponsors have been lined up.

■ 911 All-Nite. A channel with cameras stationed in police headquarters in major cities across the country. View police dispatchers in action, and hear all the excitement on the police radio while small stage troupes recreate crime and tragedy as it happens.

■ The Dallas Cowboy Television Network. Hosted by, sponsored by, produced by and directed by Jerry Jones who, as we all know, makes a success out of darn near everything lays his hands on. Popular movies scheduled for airing include a sequel to the classic film "Exodus." "Exodus '93: Mass Departure at Valley Ranch" tells the story of the Cowboys' anticipated 1994 downfall through the eyes of the once-popular Cowboy owner. Another film slated for exclusive screening on the network includes "Jerry Does Dallas."

■ The Pet Net. Stupid Pet Tricks, Underdog, Lassie and Flipper make up just a portion of the programming expected to come your way on the Pet Network.

■ Plant and Garden TV. Watch flowers bloom and grass grow, and get timely advice from well-known green thumbs on this exciting 24-hour outlet for horticulture buffs.

FLOYD: Performer still dazzles fans after 30 years

cation . . . " from a strongly collegiate crowd.

Yet, it was difficult to hear the performance as much more than a smoothly flowing aural backdrop for the visuals. Even with a sound system that made every guitar solo ring crisply, the concert verged on the "virtual." As one fan joked with a friend en route to the show on a MARTA train, "Man, you're only imagining you're going to a Pink Floyd show. You're really at home watching TV."

The musicians, who include veteran members David Gilmour, Nick Mason and Rick Wright, may have tinkered with arrangements and lengthened a few instrumental passages, but the performances were close to versions heard on "classic rock" radio.

Since a new generation has remodeled psychedelic rock as an inspiration for all-night "raves," manufacturing new dance-or-trance genres like techno and ambient, Pink Floyd could come off rather grandfatherly, the tasteful elder statesmen of mind- expanding concept rock.

None of the songs from "The Division Bell," which filled much of the first hour, had much of a chorus for listeners to grab onto or melodies likely to stick in anyone's head. But this half of the concert at least offered an abundance of Pink Floyd's signature motifs: David Gilmour's deep, wrenching chords alternated with screaming high notes; gut-pounding percussive accents; a trio of female backup vocalists belting out wordless hymns to the infinite; and surging washes of synthesizer, all shuffled about interchangeably.

And for most of the crowd, the musicians were specks on the monster Hollywood Bowl-inspired stage. There were some who didn't see the musicians at all, but under the circumstances it didn't matter.

"I don't need to see, just hear because their technology is so amazing — such a great sound," said Sam Adler, a 21-year-old MCI employee listening to the show and watching the explosions of light from a parking lot adjacent to the Georgia Tech power plant.

Still, other fans who didn't expect to see the show, which was technically sold out, found that an entry because of bargain-priced tickets, such as those being offered by Kevin Brown of Marietta. After turning down an offer of $2 each for the seats, Brown sold them for $10 each to a delighted duo of Tech students, John Scroggs and Lee Copeland.

"We just stumbled into this," Scroggs exulted. Copeland simply pronounced himself a "major" Pink Floyd fan and split for the entrance.

Floyd: Rare Vintage Lasts

■ Pink Floyd returns: Rock bands of their vintage (circa 1965) weren't built to last long, much less mount stadium spectacles for multi- generational masses into their fourth decade of existence. And yet, probably against anyone but their accountants' expectations, the quintessential British psychedelic outfit is on tour again, with a new album ("The Division Bell") at No. 1 on the Billboard pop chart.

■ No members called Floyd: The group's name derives from the names of American bluesmen "Pink" Anderson and Floyd Council.

■ A parting with Roger Waters: Former bassist Roger Waters left the group in 1985 amid considerable rancor. An original member, Waters used his cynical world view and conceptual, suitelike compositions to transform the band from the hippie-trippy space musicians who recorded "Saucerful of Secrets" in the late 1960s, to the brooding consciences of FM album-rock radio, where "Dark Side of the Moon" took hold in 1973 and never let go.

■ No eclipsing this "Moon": Any enduring reputation Pink Floyd enjoys is owed to the album "Dark Side of the Moon," an extravaganza of swirling sonic special effects and Orwellian gloom burnished by the bitter bite of Waters's vocals and guitarist David Gilmour's streaking acid-blues guitar work. Adolescent rock fans were in its thrall, from the mysterious prismatic illustration on the record jacket to the ubiquitous cash-register "ching" that kicks off "Money," the band's rare hit single and, if not for "Stairway to Heaven," the most overplayed tune of the young decade.

■ Other recordings: "Wish You Were Here" (1975) — perceived as a tribute to drug casualty Syd Barrett, who first led the band, wrote subversive pop songs such as "See Emily Play," and cracked up by the end of the '60s ■ and "Animals" (1977) were worthy follow-ups. But as the group's theatricality became more pronounced, it became easier to reduce its appeal to merely the sight of a giant, inflatable flying pig — a concert prop — Waters's gushing bile ducts, and the signature ear-wash that made its records perfect for teenagers armed with headphones and mild psychotropic drugs.

■ Another brick: Another generation or two of fans can date its appreciation of Pink Floyd to its 1979 double-album opus, "The Wall," reborn as an Alan Parker movie and still a popular midnight show at suburban multiplexes and college campuses. It yielded the band's other hit, "Another Brick in the Wall." The song's anti-authoritarian chant — "We don't need no education" — rang out like the last word of its once-repressed British schoolboy lyricist.

■ Coming full circle: Back in 1976, about-to-be rock anti-hero Johnny Rotten wore a Pink Floyd T-shirt with the words "I Hate" scrawled across it.

CARVEY: New movie suits actor's talents

sistently at his door, Carvey's failed memory qualifies her as the "mystery woman" who is a requirement of such fusions of film noir and screwball romantic comedy.

Robert King's screenplay makes the mystery a life-or-death matter by bringing in an evil businessman (Michael Gambon, doing the George Sanders role) who seems to believe he has already done away with Golino; a loyal colleague (James Earl Jones) who has suffered injuries worse than Carvey's loss of memory; a best pal (Kevin Pollak) who refuses to believe Carvey may have done him an injustice; and a trusted physician (Michael Murphy) who stands to benefit from Carvey's forgetfulness.

It's not really a funny-animal movie, but "Clean Slate" also benefits from the presence of Barkley, television's "Full House" pooch, seen here as a sort of canine Mr. Magoo — he keeps bumping into objects. Barkley must wind up holding a key to Carvey's mystery, and the dog's scenes are wonderful.

Director Mick Jackson, best known for the 1992 smash "The Bodyguard," brings an assured touch that recalls his wistful handling of the Steve Martin picture "L.A. Story." The tone is nostalgic without feeling like a throwback, demonstrating that the plain-entertainment values that sustained Old Hollywood can be just as relevant today, given the right cast and an engaging new story.

Most likely inspired by Hope's 'My Favorite Blonde' and its companion films of the '40s, 'Clean Slate' pitches Carvey as a private detective whose latest case has caused him to develop a peculiar form of amnesia: Sleep causes him to forget the day that has just passed.

Hanky BONNET®
The most charming bridal or baby shower gift ever.
From the artists who create this paper's Thoughtful Moments.™
Give it as a wedding hanky to a new bride. Later, it's stitched into a christening bonnet for her first child. • Give as a bonnet to an infant. Years later, the stitches are snipped and the bonnet becomes a wedding hanky. • Beautiful poem, in calligraphy, in each kit.
INFANT kit $6. ppd.
BRIDAL kit $6. ppd.
Any combo of 6 $30. ppd.

Phone technician hopes to become Cuba's only native-born rabbi

■ David Levy, 22, may be first person ever granted permission by Castro government to study at Jewish university in U.S.

By Joe Ungaro
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The traditions began with Abraham and they've been passed down faithfully for nearly 4,000 years. But they came close to dying out for a generation of Jews in communist-controlled Cuba.

Fidel Castro never said they could not worship but most of Cuba's Jews fled the island after he took control in 1959. Many others gave up going to the synagogue and the island was left without a rabbi.

One man now hopes to become the only native-born rabbi in Cuba.

David Said Levy, a 22-year-old telephone technician from Havana, began classes at Yeshiva University here last Sept. 1.

Administrators at Yeshiva say he is the first Jew ever granted permission by the Castro government to study at a university in the United States.

Levy's schooling was arranged by Barry Katz, a Jewish businessman from New Orleans. While in Cuba for the Pan American Games in 1991, Katz went to a synagogue in Havana to worship and there he met Levy.

There are four synagogues but only about 800 Jews in Havana, down from about 13,000 in pre-Castro Cuba. Levy estimates there are only about 1,200 left in the country of over 10 million people.

A generation gap, of sorts, has emerged among Jews in Cuba.

Levy, speaking English with the help of an interpreter, said most of the middle-aged Jews lost interest in religion but older people had continued worshipping.

The government left the temples open and the people who used them maintained them.

The older people taught the younger but the community had no ordained leader of its own. A conservative rabbi from Mexico, Canada, or Argentina would occasionally come to the island to supplement the teachings and perform important ceremonies.

In the last few years, Levy says, many young people began rediscovering their roots. Levy was one of several young Jews spending a lot of time in the synagogue when Katz came to visit.

"He was in the synagogue every day," Katz said. "He really impressed me with his sincerity."

Levy had even taken a position of responsibility in the Jewish community. An 80-year-old man taught Levy the ritual slaughtering techniques necessary to produce kosher chicken and beef.

Before Levy left for New York, he taught the techniques to his younger brother so there could continue to be kosher meat in Cuba.

"There is no one in Cuba to do the circumcisions, or burials or to teach," Katz said. "He had a sincere interest in becoming a rabbi and serving his community."

Katz said people were constantly asking him to help them get out of the country during his visit to Cuba.

"You walked down the street in Cuba, people ask you 'Can you help me get out?' but this young man was very sincere about learning how to become a rabbi so he could teach," Katz said.

The Cuban government was willing to let Levy leave if he could get a commitment from a rabbinical school.

Katz, a 45-year-old real estate investor, knew some people at Yeshiva University so he called the admissions director and the head of the school's Sephardic Studies department to make inquiries.

"They said if I could get the young man out and get him to America, they would give him a scholarship and help him become a rabbi," Katz said.

ADOPT-A-GOLFER

HELP! Forty golfers are going to risk total exhaustion, sunstroke and a possible coronary to help make a difference in the lives of our young people. You too can help these kids by sponsoring a golfer in Birdies, Bunkers & Bogeys -- the Second Annual Midland Boys and Girls Club Golf Marathon.

Each golfer's goal will be to play 100 holes of golf or more on June 27, 1994. Will you sponsor one golfer at 50 cents, $1.00, $2.00, or even $5.00 a hole? Just indicate the amount you would like to pledge on the slip below.

As the Boys & Girls Club continues to grow, so do our needs. Community support is a primary factor in providing club members with the equipment, programs, facilities and staff necessary to make a positive impact on these young people. What these kids need is your help!

For further information call Jon Farr at 683-5297. Proceeds from Birdies, Bunkers & Bogeys will benefit the Midland Boys & Girls Club in their continued efforts to provide a "Positive Place for Kids."

Policeman's killer to get radio talk show on PBS

■ Ex-Black Panther, radical MOVE group supporter to get national audience Monday on National Public Radio.

By Kelly P. Kissel
Associated Press

HUNTINGDON, Pa. — Mumia Abu-Jamal — journalist, black activist, convicted police killer — will take to the airwaves Monday for National Public Radio to describe life behind bars at the prison where he awaits death.

Police in Philadelphia believe NPR is giving a monster a soapbox.

Abu-Jamal, who was once a mainstream radio news reporter, is no stranger to controversy. He is a former Black Panther and supporter of the radical group MOVE.

He was accused of shooting police Officer Daniel Faulkner to death in 1981 after Faulkner stopped Abu-Jamal's brother driving the wrong way on a street. Abu-Jamal, who was on duty as a cab driver and saw the traffic stop, denied shooting Faulkner but was convicted and went to prison in 1982.

The U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear Abu-Jamal's appeal and the state Supreme Court twice rejected his case. No death date has been set. Gov. Robert P. Casey has traditionally waited until all appeals are exhausted.

Since then, he has been at the center of protests and counter-protests. Supporters say he was singled out for prosecution because he is black and because of his political activities, and have staged rallies as far away as Germany and Australia. Some congressmen and activist celebrities such as actor Ed Asner have spoken out on his behalf.

NPR said it won't allow Abu-Jamal to discuss his own case. His short commentaries, to run in the afternoon on "All Things Considered," are a way for NPR to broaden its coverage of crime and punishment, said Ellen Weiss, the popular show's executive producer.

Weiss said she first heard of Abu-Jamal through his work at the Prison Radio Project.

"We read his material and evaluated its content. He is a good writer and brings a unique perspective to the air," she said. Since going to prison, Abu-Jamal has also been published by The Yale Law Journal.

Officer Michael Lutz, president of the Philadelphia Fraternal Order of Police, responded angrily to NPR's plans.

"I was under the impression he was supposed to be punished," said Lutz. "This man is a coldblooded killer

Mumia Abu-Jamal, a convict on deathrow for killing a police officer, is getting a commentator slot on National Public Radio's 'All Things Considered' program beginning next week to talk about prison life. Network claims it's broadening its crime-punishment coverage. Police say it's giving monster an electronic soapbox.

INS judge rules against deporting energetic illegal

By Michelle Locke
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — A decade after he slipped across the U.S.-Mexico border, Servando Molina Garcia is an all-American success story.

He graduated as co-valedictorian of his high school, maintains a B-plus average at Stanford University and is looking forward to a bright future in civil engineering.

That future got even brighter Friday, when an Immigration and Naturalization Service judge ruled against deporting Molina to Mexico. Instead, Judge Bette Stockton granted Molina permanent residency, saying he has made a significant contribution to this country and is likely to continue to do so.

Afterward, the 22-year-old Molina stood outside the courtroom beaming.

"I am just really grateful that I have come this far," said Molina, who entered the United States illegally nearly 10 years ago.

Molina's mother was granted permanent residency under the 1986 amnesty program. But, unlike other modes of legal entry, it didn't automatically extend to children. Each family member had to qualify individually. Molina failed to do that because he came to the United States after the arrival cutoff of 1982.

Changes in the law allowed children to petition for status, but Molina's petition was still pending when he turned 18. That put him into the adult category, which meant a much longer wait.

Reluctant to spend six to eight years waiting — years in which he could not get married or travel freely — Molina decided to take his case directly to a judge.

"My whole family is here. If I went back to Mexico, I really don't think that I could live there again," he said.

While INS officials argued that Molina's achievements didn't change legal requirements, his supporters said sending him back would be the United States' loss.

"I always felt that Servando would make a difference in this world; he is such a good person and ideal citizen," wrote Jeffery Wiggam, a teacher and coach at Reedley High School in central California.

Molina spoke almost no English when he crossed into the United States on the night of his 13th birthday, walking all night to evade detection. But he was a quick study, maintaining an A average at Reedley while working summers picking grapes and peaches.

"He has an extremely bright future. For some technicality or other to stand in the way — it would be a real travesty," said Jeffrey Koseff, one of Molina's civil engineering professors at Stanford.

"Yes, maybe this person came into this country illegally," said Koseff, "but he's done everything right since then. We should be cheering him on, not penalizing him."

Jurors award dad accused of child abuse

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Two therapists destroyed a father's life by implanting false memories of child abuse in his daughter's mind, a jury ruled Friday. The jurors awarded the father $500,000 in damages.

Former winery executive Gary Ramona had sued the two therapists and a hospital, saying their work with his daughter Holly Ramona had destroyed his family and cost him his $400,000-a-year job. He had sought $8 million in damages but said he was satisfied with the verdict.

"This is a tremendous victory. This verdict means that the jury saw what I've always known, that Holly's supposed memories are the result of defendants' drugs and quackery, not anything I did," Ramona said.

His ex-wife, Stephanie, who had sided with their 23-year-old daughter and the therapists, said she was bitter.

"I don't think he should have gotten a penny for raping his own daughter," said Stephanie Ramona.

One of the defendants, Marche Isabella, cried and was comforted by her attorneys.

The other defendant, Dr. Ricahrd Rose, called the ruling "a very strange verdict."

The jury voted 10-2 in favor of Ramona's major malpractice allegations. Under California law, a jury in a civil case can reach a verdict with a minimum of nine votes rather than the unanimous vote required in criminal cases.

Ramona accused Isabella, a family therapist, and Rose, a psychiatrist, of combining his daughter's early medical problems and phantom images in her mind into unfounded memories of being raped by her father.

The key event was a March 1990 session at Western Medical Center Anaheim with the sedative sodium amytal, which Ramona said the therapists falsely told his daughter was a "truth serum."

Holly Ramona had confronted her father with the sex abuse accusations the following day. Her mother immediately divorced him, and Ramona, 50, later lost his international marketing job at the Robert Mondavi Winery.

Some of the nation's leading supporters and opponents of recovered memories — the concept that buried recollections of child abuse can surface in adulthood — testified during the seven-week trial.

Elizabeth Loftus, a University of Washington psychologist and critic of recovered memories took the stand for Ramona. She said the verdict should be a wakeup call.

"These beliefs have invaded the creme de la creme of clinicians," she said. "People have to realize that engaging in activities that lead people to create wild memories is hurting all of society."

Electric-car requirement moves ahead in California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California probably will stick with its requirement that electric cars be on the market by 1998, despite protests from carmakers and questions about whether consumers will buy them, a state official said Friday.

Technology for a marketable electric car is within reach and carmakers must be pushed to pursue it, said Jacqueline Schafer, chairwoman of the California Air Resources Board.

"I think we're going to stick with the mandate," Schafer told reporters. "It's still a positive force for advancing cleaner transportation technologies in California."

Her comments came near the end of a two-day review of regulations, adopted in 1990, that require 2 percent of the cars offered for sale in the state in 1998 to be electric.

The requirement rises to 5 percent in 2002 and 10 percent by 2003. It applies to companies selling 35,000 or more cars a year in the state.

During the review, automakers said they can't build an electric car with the range, speed and extras — like power steering and air conditioning — that drivers want.

Some executives said electric cars would be limited to only 80 to 100 miles between battery charges. The board's staff testified that some batteries could offer a 200-mile range.

But board member Brian Billbray said electric vehicles have advantages that might outweigh their limitations. For example, they could be recharged overnight in a driver's own garage.

"Wouldn't you like to wake up with a full tank in the morning?" he said.

Documents: Tobacco firms shelved safer cigarettes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Internal industry documents indicate numerous tobacco companies knew of the dangers of smoking and had discovered allegedly safer cigarettes 30 years ago.

The first inkling that tobacco companies were developing safer cigarettes came a decade ago in a lawsuit against Philip Morris Cos. Documents released in the Rose Cipollone case showed Philip Morris was developing a "medically acceptable" cigarette in the early 1960s.

Now, internal documents show the Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. was on the same trail, developing in 1963 a cigarette that didn't burn.

The newest documents indicate "this knowledge was industry-wide, and was an attempt on the part of an industry that knew their products caused disease to try to find ways to keep their products on the market," Scott Ballin of the Coalition on Smoking Or Health said Friday.

According to company memos obtained by The Associated Press, Brown & Williamson patented the Ariel cigarette prototype but never marketed it, citing concerns that scientific studies hadn't proven its biological effect, that it might make the company's other products look bad and that Ariels simply might not sell.

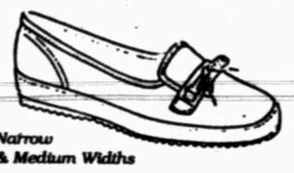

The Ariel cigarette basically was charcoal that sent hot air over tightly packed nicotine pellets and flavorings, giving the smoker the "vapor" of a cigarette without the smoke. Whether it truly was safe has never been determined, Ballin said.

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. used the same concept in its Premier brand in 1988, but it failed to sell and was withdrawn from the market.

Brown & Williamson declined comment except to say the memos had been stolen from the company.

The Brown & Williamson memos, first reported Friday by The New York Times, also show the nation's top tobacco companies were conducting dozens of studies into the dangers of smoking as early as the 1960s.

SATURDAY, MAY 14, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You may be tempted to act on impulse now. Better wait a bit longer before making a major career move! The telephone can be a valuable tool in finding new business. Go after what you want. A careful budget analysis will show you how to stretch your money. A long-cherished dream could come true early in 1995. Do not take a close ally for granted. Relationships can wither if you forget to nurture them.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: baseball great Tony Perez, movie producer George Lucas, actress Francesca Annis, opera singer Patrice Munsel.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The actions of a family member or friend could cause some frustration. Discuss a difference of opinion in a constructive way; it may be possible to reach a compromise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Invest profits wisely; then go out and make more. A show business career is favored if you have the right connections. Listen to your mate's ideas even if you do not agree with them.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Whoever is left holding the bag this morning will get pretty steamed up about it. Explain a legal matter or change in travel plans as best you can.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not pass up an opportunity to promote a project that is in your best interest. Postpone buying non-essential personal items. Plans you make with the approval of your family will bring much happiness.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your talents and enthusiasm for your work win a newcomer's admiration. Reserve part of the day for quiet reflection. An idea you get while alone will be a real gem.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Confusion over certain details may slow you down this morning. Do not hesitate to ask questions. Secret transactions will not help your reputation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A positive attitude can help you move mountains. Singles find that romance is happier than in the recent past. Be sympathetic to someone who is under stress. Avoid making new demands.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your timing is excellent now. A last-minute change will work in your favor where finances are concerned. Romance is in the air! Use diplomacy to settle any differences at home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your knowledge about a special subject serves you well in a delicate situation. A business is entering a more profitable phase. Friends may prove better company than relatives this weekend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A domestic power struggle may tempt you to take sides. Avoid being drawn into the conflict. Concentrate on putting your financial affairs in better order.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your love for someone has put you in a difficult spot. Confide in those closest to your heart; they will want to help. Accept a last-minute invitation to go out tonight. Adventure beckons.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Today's brisk social pace may leave you wishing for greater privacy. Be skeptical when given unsolicited advice. Trust your instincts; someone may have an ulterior motive.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are self-starters, always coming up with new ideas and projects to pursue. Good students, they often do even more than their teachers ask of them. Careful planning helps these Taureans find success where others have encountered failure.

Mexican novelist Fuentes wins Spanish literary prize

MADRID, Spain — Mexican novelist and former diplomat Carlos Fuentes was named the winner Friday of Spain's Prince of Asturias award for literature.

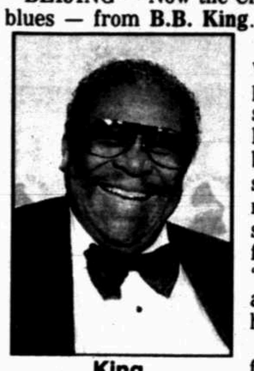

Fuentes was honored for his "defense of the liberty of imagination and dignity of thought, and for his support of culture and universal solidarity," award organizers said in a statement.

The award is one of eight Prince of Asturias prizes presented annually. Considered the Hispanic world's version of the Nobel Prize, the awards carry a cash prize of $38,500 and a sculpture designed by Spanish artist Joan Miro.

Fuentes was Mexico's ambassador to France and taught literature at Harvard, the University of Pennsylvania and Princeton. His novel "The Old Gringo" is a fictionalized account of the last days of American writer Ambrose Bierce. The book was made into a film starring Gregory Peck and Jane Fonda.

BEIJING — Now the Chinese can get the blues — from B.B. King.

King

"I heard there was a billion people in China that said they would like to hear some blues music," the seven-time Grammy Award winner said at a news conference Friday. "I've dreamed about coming here."

King will perform at an invitation-only concert at the opening Saturday of China's first Hard Rock Cafe. He will also stop in Hong Kong and Japan.

China's Communists frown on rock music, so few shops sell it and few Chinese have heard it.

King is one of a handful of Western artists ever allowed to perform in China.

"They have a lot to see, a lot to listen to, and a lot to learn from a lot of these people if they allow them to come and perform," King said.

Leno said the jokes were not meant to be mean-spirited and Wisconsin fans in the audience seemed to enjoy the teasing.

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Grammy-winning producers Jimmy Jam and Terry Lewis were trying to avoid a hit for change. A tax hit, that is.

The duo, which has produced hits for Janet Jackson, George Michael and Herb Alpert, challenged a property valuation all the way to the Minnesota Supreme Court. The court rejected their appeal Friday.

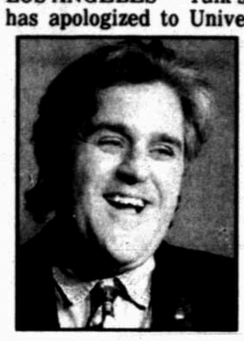

The partners challenged the Hennepin County assessor's determination that a building in Edina that houses their recording studios was worth $1.17 million in 1990. The determination is used to figure property taxes.

They contended the studios were equipment, not real estate. A tax court disagreed and calculated the value at $1.15 million. After they were denied a new trial, Lewis and Jam — whose real name is James Harris III — appealed and lost.

A call to their studio Friday was not immediately returned.

LOS ANGELES — Talk show host Jay Leno has apologized to University of Wisconsin football fans for poking fun at them about ticket problems and the 1994 Rose Bowl game.

Leno

"If I wasn't concerned, I wouldn't have made a half-dozen phone calls to people who wrote me letters" of complaint, the "Tonight" show host said in an interview published Thursday in the Wisconsin State Journal. Leno said he received about 150 letters.

About 1,000 Badger fans who purchased tour packages from travel agencies weeks before the game wound up without tickets for the Jan. 1 Wisconsin victory over UCLA. Ticket brokers increased the prices by several hundred dollars.

The incident has prompted investigations and lawsuits.

A group of fans who couldn't go were invited to Leno's show. During one show, Leno joked that travel agents were setting up a special deal: "For $200, they can get you tickets to the big Beatles reunion-Barbra Streisand-Rolling Stones concert tomorrow in Fond du Lac. Give me money upfront and I'll see that the tickets are mailed to you."

LOS ANGELES — The widow of Oskar Schindler and a woman who hid Anne Frank from the Nazis have been honored for aiding Jews during World War II.

Emilie Schindler and Miep Gies received the "Righteous Among the Nations" award Thursday from the Simon Wiesenthal Center, which fights anti-Semitism and other bigotry.

Texas prepares to move prisoners into tents

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas prison officials said Friday they're ready to start moving several hundred inmates into tents beginning this month as part of an emergency program to ease crowding in county jails and state prisons.

"I think this is a real exciting work program and hopefully we can expand this work program," Carol Vance, chairman of the Texas Board of Criminal Justice, said at a board meeting.

About 1,200 state prison inmates are involved in the emergency program, along with another 6,300 state prisoners housed in county jails.

Of those, about 600 prison inmates will be assigned to tents at state wildlife management areas near Palestine in East Texas and Cotulla in South Texas. They'll be put on work details for the state highway and parks and wildlife departments.

Others are to be relocated from Chase Field near Beeville to a boot camp at an abandoned warehouse near Childress. The Chase Field facility then will be used to house jail inmates.

Under a $25 million program, counties are building temporary facilities to house up to 6,300 medium-security inmates.

Jack Crump, director of the county jail program, said he hoped as many as 3,500 new beds would be ready by the end of this month. The rest should be available by early June.

Vance said new prison beds, part of an unprecedented building program, should continue to be added through the summer, with a total of 21,000 beds coming on line by August.

"That ought to make a huge impact on this entire system," Vance said. "That's good news. We've had bad news for a long time."

At Friday's meeting, which lasted more than four hours, board members also approved 1,000-inmate state jails to be built by private companies in Williamson, Willacy and Travis counties.

The votes, however, came after sharp debate over the selection of those counties as jail sites since bids recommended in some cases were not the low bids.

"This process has run amuck," board member Allan Polunsky, who voted against the selections, said.

But Rufus Duncan, another board member, noted that while he was disappointed the bid process did not take the low bid, he was confident the jails would be "first rate."

The Willacy County jail project passed by a 4-3 vote with one absention.

White worker at HUD claims discrimination

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Housing and Urban Development employee has filed a reverse discrimination lawsuit against the agency alleging she was denied a promotion and demoted because she is a white woman.

Jamie Jamison, a former equal opportunity supervisor for HUD's regional headquarters in Fort Worth, is seeking at least $300,000 in compensatory damages and an unspecified amount of punitive damages.

Ms. Jamison alleges that she was treated unfairly by HUD, Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros and his senior adviser, Frank Wing Jr., because she is a white woman and because she fired a Hispanic man who had worked for her.

In the lawsuit, Ms. Jamison said Wing's "willful and malicious actions" against her were due, in part, to past complaints that she was passed over for promotions because she is white. Ms. Jamison also accuses former HUD Regional Director Sam Moseley and his administration of promoting "only black males or Hispanic males" to high positions.

A HUD spokesman in Washington, D.C., said the department could not comment on pending litigation.

The lawsuit, filed Wednesday in federal court in Fort Worth, accuses Wing of transferring Ms. Jamison partly because he was angered over her participation in the firing of the Hispanic man. The lawsuit contends Ms. Jamison fired the worker because of his "discriminatory acts and conduct toward black employees."

Irene Jackson, an Irving lawyer who represents Ms. Jamison, said Ms. Jamison was transferred "abruptly" three weeks ago. Ms. Jamison now works in HUD's Washington office with a lesser rank of equal employment specialist, Ms. Jackson said.

"As far as we can see, there was no legitimate reason" for Ms. Jamison to be moved out of Fort Worth, Ms. Jackson said.

Ms. Jackson said that in addition to the inconveniences caused by the transfer, Ms. Jamison has had to move away from doctors who are treating her for undisclosed medical problems.

"It's not a case where she's going to die tomorrow, but it could be a problem down the road if she doesn't have access to doctors who have her full medical history," Ms. Jackson said.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
- ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
- ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
- ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

A small deposit is required.

LAWN SWING

Lazy summer afternoons, lemon phosphates, courting on the backyard swing ... you can revive that era by building this glider swing. It's as popular today as it was then. We used rough fir, but any lumber will do. Trace the full-size pattern parts onto wood, saw out and follow our step-by-step directions. You'll find lots of diagrams to guide you in construction. Then sit back and enjoy.
