Board OKs changes to multigrade classrooms

■ Board members Tuesday moved forward by unanimously accepting a proposal to abolish the previous system of multigrade bilingual classrooms.

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

Although they maintain "the ordeal" of Midland Independent School District's battle for unitary status is far from over, board members Tuesday moved forward by unanimously accepting a proposal to abolish the previous system of multigrade bilingual classrooms.

Board President Dale Strauss said before Tuesday's board meeting the ability of the board to even approve the action was unclear, since U.S. District Court Judge Edward Prado's office delivered the surprise ruling that dismissed the unitary status case last Friday evening. After a closed executive session with legal counsel, the board approved the plan.

"We've taken a baby step today in addressing the bilingual needs of our children," said Strauss. "This is a time for reflection, not for anyone to say 'I won,' or 'I lost'... because in that case, the children lose."

Strauss also said the unitary status lawsuit could loom for months, but the bilingual issue needed to be dealt with immediately.

"The order the judge signed is a new document," he said. "And the interveners certainly have procedural rights. But this is one of those issues where we need to proceed ... because this is the best thing for these kids."

Board member Charles Tighe, who also is a lawyer with Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe and Dawson, said the approval of the action could be explained and justified if questions arose later.

"We're supposed to exclude political, legal, or any other considerations," he said. "A judge or anybody else will understand what we're doing and why we're doing it."

Board member James Fuller agreed, and said the decision will allow for greater opportunities for the district's children.

"Our focus is on the young people," he said. "Now, we can

Children learn lesson of freedom from vets

Two of America's greatest generations had the opportunity to share their stories with each other and learn about the history of our country's yesterday at "A Salute to Old Glory." The Women Veterans Association hosted their annual presentation for local children to honor the 225th birthday of our country, our flag and the Declaration of Independence.

"This is an annual program the association presents to the community as a community spirit program. It is mainly to educate children as to the reasons why we celebrate the Fourth of July and why people were willing to give their lives to fight for the freedom we have today," said Ritzie Williford, coordinator of the event and who served in the Navy from 1944 to 1946.

The program, in conjunction with the Midland County Public Library Children's Department, and its Summer Reading Program 2001, included storytelling, Posting of the Colors by Girl Scout Troop 541, singing

Odessa mayor Bill Hext eulogized for service to Christ, community, family

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The reoccurring theme was Billy Robert Hext's love for and service to Christ.

And that was the foundation of his life, his devotion to his family, his work ethic, his service to others and his dedication to the city — Odessa — that he loved and served as mayor.

"Christ was the center of his life; that is what drove him," Hext's son-in-law, Tim Spencer of Midland, said in eulogizing Hext in a Tuesday funeral service attended by about 1,800 people at Odessa's First Baptist Church.

Hext, who died of cancer on June 20 at age 61 in Seattle, Wash., where he was a bone-marrow transplant patient, was an "extraordinary man" and a man of vision who accomplished extraordinary feats, Spencer said.

Yet, he was not at all pretentious, for with Hext, "What you saw is what you got," Spencer said.

After he retired from the oil industry in 1997, Hext and his wife, Jane, established the Hext Family Foundation and the Heritage Family Limited Partnership in service to others.

Hext's last words, his widow recalled, were simply: "'Thank you, Jesus. I love you.'"

Odessa City Manager Jerry McGuire said that "I will always remember Bill's calm demeanor."

Hext had a penchant to "help those in need."

His longtime business partner, B.D. Berryhill, said working with Hext was "pure delight."

Hext's son-in-law Mark Palmer of Midland recalled Hext's "compassionate heart" and noted "the least of his concerns was to be politically correct.

"He showed his faith openly" and witnessed and told of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

"He may not have been politically correct, but he was morally right," Palmer said.

Les Bowling, pastor of Grace Christian Fellowship where Hext attended church, said "Bill was convinced that God loved him" and told

The $15-million Stage II of Manor Park's $25-million expansion project got a boost on Tuesday in the revealing of a $1-million gift from the Helen Greathouse charitable trust fund.

"It's our lead gift in the capital campaign," Lucy Woodside, Manor Park's director of development, said on Tuesday at the announcement of the $15-million Stage II to build 90 new apartments in a three-story building at Manor Park to replace the 1970-opened Trinity Towers retirement center at 2800 W. Illinois Ave.

Manor Park is a Midland-based private, non-profit continuing-care retirement center that currently houses 425 residents at two sites about three miles

Father plans to remember his five children in eulogy

By Pam Easton
Associated Press

HOUSTON — A day after his wife was arrested for drowning his five children, Russell Yates remembered how his 7-year-old son won a one-on-one basketball game for the first time just a few days earlier.

Russell Yates was to deliver the eulogy at his children's funeral today and remember each child individually. Visitation for the children was to be held Tuesday.

"I want to say something about each one of them if I can keep from crying," Yates said during a candlelight vigil last week for his five children, who were found dead by police on June 20.

While Russell Yates prepares to bury his five children, his wife, Andrea, remains jailed without bond since her arrest.

Andrea Yates, 36, has been charged with one count of capital murder for the deaths of her two oldest children. More charges may follow, prosecutor Joe Owmby said.

Since her arrest, the family's front yard has become a memorial filled with teddy bears, flowers, balloons and crayon drawings by friends of the Yates children: Noah, 7; John, 5; Paul, 3; Luke, 2; and Mary, 6-months.

Police say after they arrived at the home last week, Andrea Yates confessed to killing her children and led police to the four youngest — still wet, lying on a bed, covered with a sheet. The oldest, Noah, was found in a bathtub.

Bush urges reluctant Sharon to press forward with peace plans

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush pressed Ariel Sharon on Tuesday to move forward on a U.S.-backed Middle East peace plan, but the Israeli prime minister said violence must end first. "One should not compromise with terror," Sharon said.

The Oval Office meeting, a second for Sharon since Bush took office six months ago, highlighted their disagreement over how to proceed with a peace process amid continuing violence. It also reflected the administration's stepped-up role in the Middle East after being accused of neglecting the region early in Bush's term.

A fragile cease-fire hung in the balance, with Sharon under pressure at home to respond with force to violence blamed on the Palestinians. Secretary of State Colin Powell headed to the region late Tuesday to meet with Israeli and Palestinian leaders, including Yasser Arafat.

Sitting stiffly in straight-back chairs, Bush and Sharon struggled to praise each other for working toward peace without conceding their bottom lines: Bush wants the cease-fire to hold and progress to continue toward peace talks while Sharon insists that little can be done until there is a "full cessation of hostilities."

"I believe he's shown patience and is willing to lead," Bush said. "I understand the pressure he's under."

AP Photo
President Bush shares a laugh with Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon as they meet in the Oval Office of the White House, Tuesday. This is the second meeting between the two leaders since Sharon was elected in March. Bush asked Sharon to help bolster a fragile cease-fire to set the stage for peace negotiations in the Middle East.

Replied Sharon: "We regard your administration to be a very friendly one."

Diplomatic niceties aside, the leaders met against a backdrop of nine months of violence: Sharon says there have been dozens of attacks on Israelis since the nation declared a unilateral cease-fire; Palestinians blame Jerusalem for the killing Sunday of a Palestinian militant.

Despite the violence, Bush said he was optimistic the peace process could resume. "We're gaining by inches," he said. "Progress is in inches, not miles but nevertheless an inch is better than nothing."

"Today is my opportunity to once again to look (Sharon) in the eye and tell him he's got no better friend than the United States, and as well to tell him that we all must work to break the cycle of violence so that we can begin the process of implementing the Mitchell agreement," Bush said.

An international commission headed by former Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell urged both sides to begin with a cease-fire before entering into a "cooling-off period," making gestures to each other and returning to negotiations.

In advance of his meeting with Sharon, Bush advisers said the president intended to urge the Israeli to declare a cooling-off period regardless of whether violence has completely ceased. Afterward, advisers said Bush did not insist that Sharon take that next step toward peace, though he urged the Israeli to keep moving forward.

Bush himself stopped just short of calling for a cooling-off period in a public session with reporters, but suggested that Israel may not have "a realistic assessment of what is possible on the ground." He also said, "We're going to talk to the prime minister about his attitudes."

Sharon was more blunt, saying peace can only be achieved if the parties are "very strict" with the Palestinians. "Israel will not negotiate under fire and under terror," he said during the photo opportunity with Bush.

Afterward, the prime minister said he wants 10 days of no violence before beginning the next stage, the cooling-off period. Previously, he had talked about a violence-free period but had not spelled out the 10-day concept.

"One should not compromise with terror. And therefore, I believe that if we stick to what we have been saying for such a long time that it should be a full cessation of terror before we move to the other phase," Sharon said.

He also met with Powell, who was heading to the Middle East Tuesday evening under orders from Bush to urge Arafat to "take better control of his security forces."

Sharon was the first Middle East leader Bush invited to the White House after the U.S. election, and while several Arab leaders followed, Arafat has not been invited. There are no plans to invite him, a sign that the United States gives greater weight to Israeli positions.

Arafat was a frequent visitor when Bill Clinton was president. Palestinians have complained that the Bush administration was favoring Israel.

Both Bush and Sharon agreed that peace is possible, though they to differed on strategies. At times, Bush seemed to labor in his bid to inject Sharon with a sense of optimism.

"Progress is being made," Bush said. "I am here to tell the prime minister, I know there's a level of frustration, but there is progress being made."

Pressed to explain why the administration wants to move to the next step in the Mitchell timeline before violence has ended — and, apparently, before Israel is ready to do so — Bush said, "Both parties will understand when the level of violence has gotten down to the point where there can be some progress. We just want to make sure that there's a realistic assessment of what is possible on the ground. And we believe that at some point in time we can start the process of Mitchell."

Senate leaves door open to patients' rights suits against employers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate struggled in quiet negotiations to end years of gridlock over patients' rights legislation Tuesday as the bill's supporters defeated a proposed ban on lawsuits against employers.

The 57-43 vote came as backers of the bill prevailed over Republican predictions that businesses would cancel insurance rather than run the risk of legal liability.

The vote was accompanied by a series of private meetings in which senators, prodded by the White House, labored to resolve differences over the employer liability question, pre-emption of state laws in the area of patients' rights and other sticking points.

"There's a lot of moving parts around here, and there's a chance they can all move in the right direction," said Sen. Judd Gregg, R-N.H., an opponent of the Democratic-backed bill who nevertheless has said he believes a compromise is possible.

President Bush, meantime, called key senators in what his spokesman described as an intensifying effort to reshape the measure to the administration's liking. Bush "thinks patients need and deserve protections" from their HMOs, said Ari Fleischer.

But in words that recalled a formal veto threat issued last week, he added that "the president hopes that the Senate will put progress first and not ... participate in an exercise that leads to a bill that will go nowhere."

The Senate grappled with the liability issue as House Republicans put forward a measure that would open the door to suits against HMOs in state courts under limited circumstances. Bush is expected to endorse the House measure today.

GOP leaders hope to attract enough support for the measure to prevent passage of legislation patterned after the bill pending in the Senate. No House action is expected until after Congress returns from a July 4 recess.

In the Senate, though, Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., has said he wants to remain in session until a bill is voted on, and time pressures appeared to have intensified discussions on a compromise.

Sen. John Breaux, D-La., circulated a proposed compromise on broader liability issues, including limits on damages, and when and where suits may be brought, as well as the narrower question of employer exposure to suits.

Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C., told reporters at day's end discussions were also under way to address the concern of senators who oppose interfering with strong, state patients' rights laws. Other discussions involved the extent of an HMO's obligation to provide medically necessary treatment that exceeds its coverage.

The legislation, advanced by Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Edwards and John McCain, R-Ariz., was crafted in response to HMO horror stories of health care delayed or denied, often with disastrous results. It provides for access to emergency care, medical specialists and other guarantees.

Democrats made patients' rights legislation their top priority when they gained a Senate majority last month, and the debate, now in its second week, is unfolding against a backdrop of campaign-style public events and dueling public opinion polls.

Minority homeownership up in many states, but gap persists

By Genaro C. Armas
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Minority homeownership rates edged up during the 1990s, census data from several states show, but a decade's worth of economic prosperity did not erase racial disparities.

States with large urban centers and established minority communities saw some of the biggest increases, according to data released for 15 states and the District of Columbia.

Still, the existing gap between whites and minorities suggested the need for tougher monitoring of fair housing violations and predatory lenders, critics said.

In Illinois, 46 percent of homes headed by minorities — all people other than those identified on the census only as non-Hispanic whites — were owned last year. That was up from about 40 percent in 1990.

By comparison, the ownership rate in 2000 for non-Hispanic white alone-occupied homes in Illinois was 75 percent, while the state's overall homeownership rate was 67 percent.

And of the data released so far, Indiana and Vermont saw slight declines in minority homeownership rates, though the actual number of minority homeowners increased.

Meanwhile, homeownership rates for non-Hispanic whites were up in all 15 states.

"Things are better today than they were 10 years ago, there's no question about that," said Hilary Shelton, executive director of the Washington bureau of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"But that has to be looked at relatively — we still have a long way to go to achieve parity," Shelton said.

The homeownership information is part of the latest wave of data released so far covering questions asked on all census forms.

Nationally, 66 percent, or 69.8 million of the country's 105.5 million occupied housing units, were lived in by the owner, regardless of race. That was up from 64 percent a decade ago.

> 'Things are better today than they were 10 years ago, there's no question about that.'
> — Hilary Shelton, NAACP official

A national breakdown of homeownership by race and ethnicity was not yet available, and all 50 states are scheduled to get their figures by August. Also, direct comparisons by race between 1990 and 2000 were impossible because last year's census was the first to allow people to identify with more than one race.

But a look at several major cities revealed:

■ The overall homeownership rate in Chicago in 2000 was 44 percent. It was 52 percent for people who are only non-Hispanic white, 40 percent for Hispanics, and 37 percent for blacks, regardless of ethnicity.

■ In fast-growing Las Vegas, 66 percent of homes lived in by people who are only non-Hispanic whites were owned, compared with 62 percent of Asian homes and 46 percent for Hispanic homes.

"I'm here for the long haul. I'm like a kid in the candy store," said Jacqueline Massey, who closes on her first home Friday after living 15 years in a public housing project in Washington. The minority homeownership rate in the District of Columbia was 37 percent, but it was 49 percent for non-Hispanic whites.

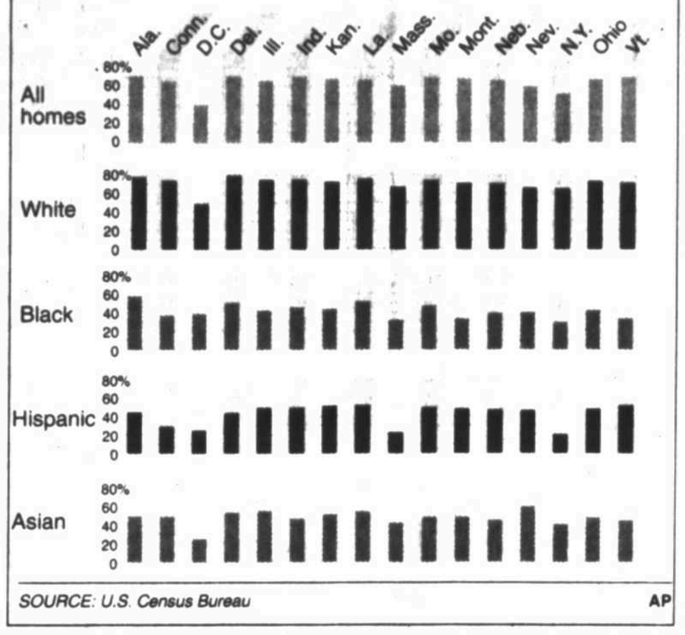

The strong economy of the 1990s and stricter enforcement of fair housing regulations helped give blacks, Hispanics and other minorities more opportunity to own homes, said University of New Orleans economist Tim Ryan.

Census2000

Uneven homeownership

The national homeownership rate increased to 66 percent in 2000 from 64 percent in 1990. That is, 69.8 million of the country's 105.5 million occupied housing units were lived in by the owner last year. But a decade's worth of economic prosperity did little to erase racial disparities in homeownership, according to data released for 15 states and the District of Columbia.

Percentage of homes owned by occupant in 2000, by state

But a disparity still exists in part because minorities historically have had lower levels of income and education than whites, Ryan said. Both money and schooling are indicators of homeownership.

Nationally, recent government surveys have shown that homeownership rates increased for blacks from 43 percent in 1994 to 48 percent in 1999, and from 41 percent to 46 percent for Hispanics.

Despite the increases, the disparity has drawn renewed interest from the White House, lawmakers and interest groups hoping to boost homeownership overall.

President Bush has said both the government and the private sector must play a role in stimulating increases. He has proposed the American Dream Downpayment Fund to provide $200 million to help 130,000 low-income families buy homes.

And the Congressional Black Caucus announced in April it was pushing for a program to make 1 million black families homeowners by 2005. Government-chartered mortgage giants Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, along with other major banks, mortgage companies and community groups, are participating.

Rick Davis is president of the Homeownership Alliance, a separate coalition started by Fannie Mae. Efforts must be made on simple things like giving minorities in low-income housing more information about the home-buying process, Davis said.

The 15 states to receive the latest wave of census data so far are: Alabama, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New York, Ohio and Vermont.

Hollywood gathers to remember 'Archie Bunker' star O'Connor

By Anthony Breznican
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Celebrities and entertainers said farewell Tuesday to Carroll O'Connor, the gruff actor who satirized prejudice as the buffoonish bigot on "All in the Family."

Among the nearly 1,000 people at his funeral were comedian Carl Reiner and his son, actor-director Rob Reiner, who played the liberal son-in-law famously dubbed "Meathead" by Archie Bunker, O'Connor's character on the popular sitcom.

Comedian Don Rickles, "Dallas" star Larry Hagman, Martin Sheen of "The West Wing" and former Gov. Jerry Brown also attended the service in West Los Angeles.

The 76-year-old actor died Thursday following a heart attack.

"He was a master theatrician, Mr. Bunker was," Carl Reiner said as he arrived for the funeral. "It's funny how we keep calling him Bunker, and we keep calling my son 'Meathead.' That's the kind of an impact they ('All in the Family') had, even on a father."

Sally Struthers, who played Bunker's daughter, Gloria, on "All in the Family," said O'Connor helped fill an emotional need after her own father died. Working with him was a joy, she said.

"We were a family of four and now we're a family of three," Struthers said about the cast of the show. Jean Stapleton, who played Bunker's wife, Edith, was not at the funeral. "It doesn't feel the same. I shared such an incredible time and space with Carroll."

Cardinal Roger M. Mahony, the archbishop of Los Angeles, presided over the traditional Catholic Mass. He said O'Connor's life showed moments of "great joy and great rejoicing and others of great sorrow and disappointment."

About 950 people spanning all races and ages gathered inside the church for the emotional service that concluded with a violin solo of the mournful Irish ballad "Oh, Danny Boy."

Hagman and Sheen read Scriptures. Six of O'Connor's nephews served as pallbearers, carrying the casket from the church amid spontaneous applause. Outside, 76 white doves were released and circled above the church.

O'Connor's remains will be cremated and buried privately.

FIGHT: Board says unitary status battle 'far from over'

look for greater successes on these campuses."

In the 2001-02 school year, bilingual students from several schools with smaller bilingual populations will be bussed to a host school. Where there were previously 20 elementary schools with bilingual programs, there will now be 11. Designers of the program, like MISD Bilingual/ESL Director Maria Mata, say the change will increase the availability of resources to each school, maximize support from the district and have greater possibility for smaller class sizes.

Ms. Mata did emphasize the program will not be a return to the cluster schools design.

"We didn't want to bus children across town," she said. "That would defeat the purpose of neighborhood schools. Each child will be sent to a host school closest to his or her home."

The board also heard an update on the redistricting process from David Mendez, a lawyer from Austin's Bickerstaff law firm, hired by the district to prepare a redistricting plan based on Census 2000 data. He presented a tentative schedule to help MISD and the city through the redistricting process.

Mendez said the firm would present an initial, illustrative plan to the board, and after that was approved, the details of the plan would be discussed with the public at open sessions. The city will not adopt precincts until Oct. 1, so the board agreed to discuss approval of the preliminary report in August or September.

MISD Superintendent Robert Nicks also presented a report to the board about possible changes in the intern program. He said in his tours of campuses and discussions with administrators in his first several weeks on the job, he believes the program should be re-evaluated.

Among the points Nicks listed as being in need of reconsideration were the length of time each intern is required to spend in training, and the problems that arise when interns serve as assistant principals without the benefit of the salary or title.

Most importantly, he said, each position will need to be rationalized. Nicks suggested some interns may need to split their time between more than one campus, or be rotated back into the classroom until an administrative position becomes open.

"The ultimate goal is cost savings for the district," he said. "The rationale that 'I need an intern because everyone else has one' is not a luxury we can afford to support."

The board will hear another version of that report, including input from interns and school administrators, at the next board meeting on July 17.

In addition to the acceptance of revised board policies regarding class ranking, student records, equal employment and educational opportunities and student conduct regarding sexual harassment and sexual abuse, the board unanimously approved a revised copy of the student handbook and code of conduct.

The addition to the packet was a bold-typed statement on the front cover detailing the district's "zero-tolerance" policy regarding drugs and weapons on school property. Strauss said the district must ensure no favoritism is given to any student in regard to the policy.

"There's always an anecdotal incident, but we need to support the zero-tolerance policy in that we continue to stay comfortable that it is uniform," he said. "Even one anecdotal incident undermines the policy."

The board also unanimously approved the hiring of Terra Singletary as principal of Bowie Elementary School.

FUNERAL: Hext 'more than colleague' to Burns

(From 1A)

others of God's love for them.

Hext's brother-in-law, Bob Cheek of Odessa, said Hext "looked forward to the day when he would join Him (Jesus Christ in Heaven).

"We can rejoice," Cheek said.

In Midland, Midland County Judge Bill Morrow noted Hext's "generosity of giving himself to the community was of the highest order and much more."

Former Midland Mayor Bob-by Burns said Hext was "a very strong leader. And one-on-one, you had to love him, and you had to respect him.

"This is a man with a very strong Christian presence about him," Burns said of Hext. "It showed through. His Christian presence was overwhelming at times.

"His love for his city, and his love for his Lord was very clear," Burns said. "It came over and over again in his daily work and in the way he walked his life.

"From my point of view (as mayor), he was very easy to work with and very trustworthy and a real partner," Burns said. "Of Midland and Odessa working together, you didn't have to worry about Bill Hext. He was going to work for his city, but he was never going to hurt his sister city of Midland.

To Burns, Hext was "more than a colleague. He was a good friend of mine. It's not just a professional loss. It's a personal loss for the Burns family. Losing Bill was tough for our family"

Midland Chamber of Commerce Chairman Mike Conaway said Hext "obviously ... was a huge supporter of Midland and Odessa as a region and not Midland by itself or Odessa by itself.

"He was strong proponent of the two communities working together and making the entire region a better place to live," Conaway said. "Obviously, Odessa has lost a mayor and a really fine, fine individual. We will all feel the loss."

TRAGEDY: Family still struggling with children's deaths

services will be held, to the cemetery where they will be buried.

Funeral Director Ron Crowder said Russell Yates plans to place a memento in each of his children's caskets before they are taken from the church.

Many who knew the family are still struggling to understand the children's deaths. Russell Yates has said his wife suffered from postpartum depression after their fourth child, Luke, was born. Russell Yates said his wife again became depressed after Mary's birth and then began spiraling downward even further following her father's death three months later.

The children "were just precious," said Joanne Juren, co-owner of a bookstore where Andrea Yates bought school materials for her children, whom she homeschooled.

"They were just little stair steps," Juren said of the children. "They were all so well-behaved. They were just the perfect little children. I told Andrea the last time she was here that if we had a gold star to give for the best children we would give it to hers. Andrea just beamed."

Terry Arnold, who runs the bookstore with Juren, said it was obvious when Russell Yates wasn't around his oldest son was the "man" of the family.

"Noah was quite a little man," Arnold said. "He would always open the door and shake my hand."

Arnold said the Yates family quickly became her and Juren's favorite customers. She said each time the family entered the store, Andrea Yates would be pushing Mary in a stroller with each of her four boys hanging onto it.

"Joanne and I liked the children so much that we would argue over who would get to play with them," Arnold said. "They were fun and sweet."

But it wasn't only the kids the business owners liked.

"Andrea was more and more friendly each time and I hoped that we would become personal friends," said Arnold, who has five children of her own. "I liked the way she was just so genuinely loving with her children. There was a real open, honest affection there.

"You looked at them and thought, 'This is a really great family.'"

BUILD: Facility gets $1-million Greathouse gift

(From 1A)

Once the new Trinity Towers at Manor Park project is completed, Hale said the old Manor Park's trustees would "like to pursue the possibility of converting" the older Trinity Towers to low-income housing for elderly people.

apart — the 31-year-old Trinity Towers and the 1984-initiated Manor Park development near Loop 250 and Sinclair Avenue in far west Midland.

"It's a place that looks like home — smaller residential feel, carpeted, very attractive residential interior decorations," Alan Hale, executive director of Manor Park Inc., said of the $15-million "new" Trinity Towers project.

The new Trinity Towers at Manor Park, which is the proposed name of the new $15-million retirement center, will offer accommodations for three stages of senior-citizen residents: independent living, assistant living, and assisted living for memory-impaired seniors.

"I think the 'upperclassmen' are doing a great job," Arnold O'Neil said of the officials and supporters behind the project. He and his wife, Dorothy, who are "over 60 and under 100," live in a Manor Park townhouse.

The project will be on the 60-acre Manor Park grounds that offer townhouses, cottages and apartments for independent seniors and health-care units for others, including disease patients.

The $10-million Stage I of the $25-million development was launched two years ago and includes 27 new residential homes that equate to $3.64 million. Stage I also includes roadway expansion that opened undeveloped land for cottages, homes and villas.

The Stage II project is being designed by Parkhill, Smith & Cooper Inc., a Midland firm of engineers, architects and planners.

Once the new Trinity Towers at Manor Park project is completed, Hale said the old Manor Park's trustees would "like to pursue the possibility of converting" the older Trinity Towers to low-income housing for elderly people.

The current replacement cost of Manor Park's facilities, including the old Trinity Towers, is $38 million, Hale said. The value would increase to $53-million with the addition of the $15-million "new" Trinity Towers project.

Helen Greathouse's late husband, Barney Greathouse, was also a supporter of Manor Park Inc., and was a trustee in the early stages of Trinity Towers. Mrs. Greathouse later on became a trustee.

Of the $15-million "new" Trinity Towers at Manor Park project, Bob Estes said, "It's great." His wife, Gretchen, said Barney and Helen Greathouse "did a lot of good for us."

Sue Houghton, who lives in a Manor Park townhouse, said "I love it" — living there.

"With Mrs. Greathouse on our side, it (the new project) sounds like it will come into being faster," she said. The $1-million Greathouse trust-fund gift "takes a lot of pressure off of little guys like us" at Manor Park.

VETS: Boy appreciates lives lost for freedom of the Star-Spangled Banner by Maria Mata, educational director of the Bilingual Department and a "Salute to Veterans" interpreted in sign language.

"This is really a wonderful way for us to give information to the children during the summertime. It doesn't mean a whole lot until they actually understand the history and the genealogy of our country," Mrs. Williford said. "The nicest part, I think, is the fact that we've made this into an intergenerational program so children can meet veterans themselves."

The program encouraged children to visit the library and take advantage of the materials and books it offers on the history of the country's independence.

"I think events like this awakens the young people and teaches them that women did do something for the country," said World War II Pilot Ruth Florey, who also said this year is just as special as the last. "Once you hit 80, they're all the same."

A veteran autograph party followed the presentation and allowed the children to meet with some of our country's veterans who helped provide them with the freedom they enjoy every day.

"My granddad was in the Navy, and he's taught me a lot about the War," said Caleb Carr, 11, who understands the value of his freedom. "People laid down their lives just so someone else could have freedom. I'm very appreciative of that."

Conservative wins GOP nomination in New Jersey governor's race

By John P. McAlpin
Associated Press

TRENTON, N.J. — Conservative Bret Schundler won the Republican nomination for governor Tuesday, easily defeating a moderate former congressman in a race with the ideological direction of New Jersey's GOP on the line.

Schundler, the mayor of Jersey City, just west of New York, grabbed support from the Jersey shore and counties in the southern part of the state in early returns. His lead over former Rep. Bob Franks grew through the night.

With 48 percent of precincts reporting, Schundler had 57 percent of the votes, or 94,762, to 43 percent, or 72,331 votes, for Franks.

Franks conceded about 90 minutes after polls closed and asked his supporters to back Schundler. Franks, who served in Congress for four terms, said he would likely no longer hold public office.

AP Photo
Republican gubernatorial primary candidate Bob Franks, accompanied by his wife, Fran Smith and daughter Kelly, concedes the primary to Bret Schundler in Plainsboro, N.J., Tuesday.

Schundler will face Democrat Jim McGreevey in November's general election. McGreevey coasted to the nomination against a little-known opponent.

In the weeks before the election, analysts and political insiders said a Schundler victory would take the New Jersey GOP in a dramatically conservative direction, abandoning decades of moderate-to-liberal policies that got candidates like Christie Whitman and Tom Kean elected governor.

Schundler, 42, who opposes abortion and supports gun ownership, spent nearly two years building a network of conservative groups and single-issue supporters. He largely ignored social issues in his campaign and focused on school choice and lower property taxes and auto insurance, branding Franks "just another tax-hiking liberal."

Franks, 49, a moderate four-term congressman, had the backing of nearly all the state's county Republican chairmen and sought to portray Schundler as a far-right extremist. He warned that the GOP would go down in defeat in November if the conservative won the nomination.

Franks positioned himself as a reformer, pledging to rewrite election financing laws and create an elected auditor to monitor state finances.

The same internal battle between social conservatives and centrists is being fought by Republicans in several states, including Virginia, the only other state with a governor's race this year.

Franks resigned from the House to run for the Senate last year, losing to Democrat Jon Corzine, a former investment banker who spent a record-shattering total of more than $60 million.

Franks did not join the race until April, after acting Gov. Donald T. DiFrancesco withdrew over critical news coverage of his business dealings. DiFrancesco became governor when Whitman left to join the Bush administration as head of the Environmental Protection Agency.

On the Democratic side, McGreevey won easily against Elliot Greenspan. McGreevey, who lost narrowly to Whitman in 1997, has been campaigning for most of the past four years.

Jury deliberates charges that doctor slashed wife's throat to keep porno, prostitutes secret

DEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — A jury began deliberating Tuesday in the murder trial of a doctor accused of slashing his wife's throat in a park to keep her from exposing his secret life of porn and prostitutes.

In closing arguments, a prosecutor said bloody gloves pointed to Dr. Dirk Greineder as the killer, while Greineder's lawyer said the prosecution's case was guesswork.

Greineder, a 60-year-old allergist, could get life in prison without parole if convicted.

His wife, Mabel, 58, was killed while the couple were walking in the woods in Wellesley.

The defense said she was killed by someone else after the couple separated during their stroll. The doctor testified tearfully that he returned to find his wife lying on the ground with her throat cut.

Under cross-examination, Greineder admitted that a week before his wife was killed, he hired a prostitute during a business trip to New Jersey and e-mailed a couple who had advertised on an Internet site seeking group sex. He agreed that it would have been upsetting to his family and career if that had become known.

Defense attorney Martin Murphy attacked police for not considering other suspects, even though there were similar unsolved homicides in the area.

Prosecutor Richard Grundy noted that Greineder had no blood on his hands even though the doctor claimed to have tried to help his wife. Gloves with the woman's blood on them were found in storm drains nearby.

The defense decided not to call a surprise witness who made an 11th-hour claim she had seen a suspicious man the day of the killing not far from the park. The woman acknowledged a history of mental illness.

Fox says U.S. slowdown has tarnished shine of Mexico's economy

By Niko Price
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — President Vicente Fox said Tuesday that the U.S. slowdown is delaying the economic boom he promised Mexico, and he vowed to make his country a world leader — cooperating closely with his good friend George W. Bush.

In an interview with executives and directors of The Associated Press, Fox said he engages in a lively, back-and-forth exchange with the U.S. president.

"We talk on the phone. He says, 'Fox, it's your turn, now move.' So I move. And I say, 'Now you have to.' So we're really working like partners," Fox said, speaking in English.

"We are playing the role of being a bridge to Latin America," he said, adding that the two presidents have worked together on issues regarding Venezuela, Colombia and Cuba.

Bush took office only seven weeks after Fox, and shares his taste for cowboy boots and life on the ranch. But Fox said the two still have many differences — he called the U.S. embargo on Cuba "nonsense" — and said Mexico would seek a more forceful, independent foreign policy. It is already campaigning for a seat on the U.N. Security Council.

"We want to move Mexico from being a country that hides away to a country that participates in global affairs, to be one of those 10 or 15 nations that conducts the world," he said. "We want to be in that sphere."

AP Photo

Homeless people share food on a Mexico City street Tuesday. President Vicente Fox, in an interview with executives and directors of The Associated Press, said the U.S. economic slowdown has delayed his promise of an economic boom for Mexico.

Fox said he has strengthened the Mexican economy, and boasted that interest rates under his administration have fallen from 18 percent to 8 percent, forcing banks to begin lending money again to make a profit.

But Fox said the U.S. economic slowdown is holding Mexico back — he has revised his growth estimates for this year from 4.5 percent to 2.5 percent — and jokingly appealed for intervention from Mexico's patron saint.

"We need to go to the Basilica and pray to the Virgin of Guadalupe so the United States comes back," he said. "Because we have everything to move, except that markets are extremely slow."

Fox described a scandal over $443 towels and $1,060 sheets purchased for the presidential residence as an example of his government's openness. He said previous governments would never have disclosed such expenditures.

Fox's comptroller, Francisco Barrios, announced later Tuesday the resignations of three officials from the president's purchasing committee, including its president Carlos Rojas, at one time one of Fox's top advisers.

Fox, while he didn't mention any names, said the investigation implicated "some people very close to me, dear friends. They have problems."

Fox took office on Dec. 1 as the first opposition president after 71 years of single-party rule. He said his administration would soon ask congress to create a citizens' "truth commission" to investigate past political misdeeds.

But he advocated a limited role for the commission, saying it must have a clear time frame and a carefully defined scope.

"I think people in Mexico are much more (eager) to have income, to have something to eat, to have their kids in school, to have a health system," he said. "And if we keep confronting ourselves that will never happen."

Many Mexicans have demanded the opening of secret archives about a 1968 massacre of students, the army's "disappearance" of leftists in the 1970s and other shadowy episodes in Mexico's past.

"We need to look to the future and forget about the past; forgive the past," Fox said.

He promoted his long-term goal of improving Mexico's economy enough so that the United States could open its borders to its southern neighbor within 20 years.

He suggested the United States could aid Mexico, much as wealthier European countries helped diminish the gap between their economies and those of Spain, Portugal and Greece before they joined together in the European Union.

"We're thinking in the long term we can open our borders," Fox said. "All we have to do is narrow that gap."

Fox said the United States needs to realize that Mexican migrants are essential to U.S. economic growth.

"We must move from seeing migration as a problem to seeing it as an opportunity," he said.

He proposed a program to legalize migrants already in the United States, giving them temporary permits in areas where there are domestic labor shortages, such as in gardening, construction and software design. Fox already has the support on that idea of Bush and of U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, who plans to introduce a bill in the U.S. Congress.

"Those Mexicans that are working in the United States should be considered legally working in the United States," Fox said. "It's legal, it's fair, it's convenient for the United States. That's why they are here."

U.N. AIDS gathering draws thousands for talks on killer pandemic

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — One after another, African leaders at the United Nations' first global gathering on HIV/AIDS made emotional pleas for help Monday in ending the devastation wrought by the epidemic. Nigeria's president warned that entire populations face extinction.

Secretary-General Kofi Annan, seeking $7-10 billion for a global AIDS fund, said AIDS spending "in the developing world needs to rise to roughly five times its present level." The Americans pledged to provide more aid, but did not say how much.

Annan, a native of Ghana who has made the fight against AIDS his personal priority, opened the three-day special session by urging world leaders to set aside moral judgments and face the unpleasant facts of a disease that has killed 22 million people and ravaged many of the world's poorest nations.

Kenya and Nigeria are each home to more than 2 million HIV patients. In Botswana, more than 20 percent of the adult population is infected, and in South Africa, AIDS will knock off 17 years of life expectancy by 2005.

"The future of our continent is bleak, to say the least," Nigerian President Olusegun Obasanjo said. "The prospect of extinction of the entire population of a continent looms larger and larger."

Obasanjo and others called for "total cancellation of Africa's debt," which takes badly needed money away from health and social programs including the fight against AIDS.

"The undeniable fact is that with the fragility of our economies, we simply lack the capacity to adequately respond to the magnitude of the HIV/AIDS epidemic," the Nigerian leader said.

Secretary of State Colin Powell, leading the U.S. delegation, said more money would come from the United States — which has already pledged $200 million in seed money — "as we learn where our support will be most effective."

"Our response to AIDS must be no less comprehensive, no less relentless, no less swift than the pandemic itself," Powell told the General Assembly.

Several speakers, including Powell, acknowledged that the global response to AIDS has been woefully late. Britain's Clare Short, secretary for international development, went a step further by criticizing the very gathering she addressed.

"We waste too much time and energy in U.N. conferences and special sessions. We use up enormous energy in arguing at great length over texts that provide few if any follow-up mechanisms or assurances that governments and U.N. agencies will carry forward the declarations that are agreed," she said.

Indeed, the Monday morning session ended in more than two hours of arguments over whether to exclude the U.S.-based International Gay and Lesbian Human Rights Commission from the conference. Eleven unidentified countries wanted to keep the group out, but Canada led a successful vote in the assembly to include it.

Elsewhere in the building, diplomats squabbled over a final conference document that will map out a global strategy to halt the disease and reverse its effects. Muslim countries and the United States object to language that specifically names vulnerable groups in need of protection, including men who have sex with men.

Noting the weeks of infighting among delegates leading up the gathering, Annan told the 189-nation General Assembly: "We cannot deal with AIDS by making moral judgments or refusing to face unpleasant facts, and still less by stigmatizing those who are infected. We can only do it by speaking clearly and plainly, both about the ways that people become infected, and about what they can to avoid infection."

But expectations for a successful gathering remained high and varied for many of the 3,000 participants, including health experts, politicians, scientists, AIDS activists and patients working to find an end to the scourge.

Three days of conferences and meetings touch on everything from drug prices to homosexuality, AIDS orphans and funding.

To allow some delegates to participate, the United States waived visa restrictions that prevent those with HIV or AIDS from visiting the country.

U.N. radio and an online Webcast will broadcast many of the events around the world in the six official languages of the United Nations — Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish.

Yugoslavia president says U.S. pressure key to decision to hand over Milosevic

By Aleksandar Vasovic
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Yugoslavia's president singled out U.S. pressure Tuesday as a main reason for his country's change of heart on extraditing Slobodan Milosevic to the U.N. war crimes tribunal.

While President Vojislav Kostunica, a staunch critic of the court, sought to distance himself from the impending extradition, Prime Minister Zoran Djindjic of Serbia, the main Yugoslav republic, said the handover was a virtual certainty.

Milosevic's lawyers are appealing a government decree making the extradition of Yugoslav citizens possible. But Djindjic said not even a ruling by the highest court, the Constitutional Court, would overrule the tribunal's claim on Milosevic.

Tribunal statutes will be "directly applied, (even) if the Constitutional Court rules that the decree is unconstitutional," he told reporters.

Milosevic lawyer Veselin Cerovic depicted the former president as "proud but resigned," saying his imprisoned client refused to speak to Investigative Judge Goran Cavlina when Cavlina asked Milosevic for a statement on the extradition procedure. Instead, Milosevic demanded to see his lawyers, Cerovic said.

"Milosevic feels that he is NATO's prisoner," said Cerovic. "He believes that this is a gravest violation of his civil rights."

Mirjana Markovic, right, the wife of former Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic, and daughter Marija Milosevic, arrive at the Belgrade Central Prison to visit the former president Tuesday. Milosevic's lawyers met Tuesday with the head of the Belgrade District Court, which is to rule on a request from the U.N. war crimes tribunal to surrender the former president.

Some 7,000 Milosevic supporters gathered Tuesday evening in Belgrade's main square, demanding his release from prison and protesting extradition.

"We will give our lives for Slobo," some chanted. Riot police cordoned off Belgrade's Central Prison, where Milosevic is being held, concerned the crowd would march on the prison.

The rally ended without major incidents, but the state Tanjug news agency reported an isolated attack on a group of protest participants by youths, leaving several people hurt.

Washington has linked U.S. financial aid for Yugoslavia to Milosevic's extradition for trial for alleged Kosovo atrocities. Keeping up the pressure for his handover, the United States has not said whether it will attend an international conference Friday in Brussels, Belgium, meant to raise the money Yugoslavia needs to rebuild after 13 years of misrule under Milosevic, Kostunica's predecessor.

State Department spokesman Richard Boucher expressed approval of the latest legal developments against Milosevic on Tuesday, in comments indicating the Americans were leaning toward participation.

"We very much welcome the moves that the Yugoslav government, the Serbian government have been taking," Boucher said.

Kostunica said Milosevic cannot be extradited by Friday.

"The decree cannot be implemented in 48 hours, because that would mean that the defendant is deprived from his right to appeal and from some other rights," Kostunica said.

Kostunica, who considers the tribunal in The Hague anti-Serb, sought to distance himself from Milosevic's approaching handover, repeating previous arguments that local courts should have priority.

But he acknowledged moves to extradite Milosevic were the result of U.S. pressure — and pressure from within the government from those wanting extradition.

"My attempt to have our citizens put on trial in our country was prevented by two things; pressure from Washington ... and me and my party being a minority" within Yugoslavia's governing coalition.

Earlier Tuesday, Milosevic's lawyers met with the head of the Belgrade District Court who will rule on the extradition request from the U.N. war crimes tribunal.

One of the attorneys, Branimir Gugl, said Milosevic now has 24 hours to choose a defense lawyer, after which he will be questioned and will also have a three-day appeal period if the court decides that he should be handed over.

"The earliest possible time when the appeal process will be over is midnight on Monday," Gugl said. But he suggested that the authorities could try to speed up the process.

Milosevic, imprisoned since April 1 for investigations of abuse of power and corruption, is sought by The Hague court for alleged involvement in atrocities committed in Kosovo during the crackdown on the Serbian province's majority ethnic Albanian population that ended two years ago.

Panel recommends halt to routine self-exams for breast cancer

TORONTO (AP) — Contradicting the advice women have been getting for years, a government-funded medical advisory panel recommended Tuesday that doctors stop routinely advising women aged 40 to 69 to examine themselves for breast cancer.

The recommendations were issued by the Canadian Task Force on Preventive Health Care, which draws up guidelines for Canadian doctors on preventive health care. It goes against a longtime practice in Canada and the United States, where women have been told that regular self-examination for unusual growths in their breasts can be crucial to early detection of cancer.

According to the task force, women aged 40 to 69 — the group considered at greatest risk for breast cancer — should stop being routinely taught how to do breast self-examination.

In its report published Tuesday in the Canadian Medical Association Journal, the task force said evidence exists that self-exams do little to save lives and can cause harm by bringing unnecessary stress and medical attention over benign growths.

"There is harm," said Dr. Nancy Baxter, who conducted a review of studies on breast self-examination for the task force. "And one of the basic principles of good, preventive care is to avoid harm to patients."

The task force made no recommendations on self-examination for women under 40 or over 70, saying it lacked sufficient evidence.

In the United States, the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force — similar to the Canadian task force — said in 1996 that insufficient evidence existed to recommend or oppose self-examination for breast cancer.

The director of cancer screening for the American Cancer Society questioned the study's conclusion. The key to beating cancer is early detection, said Dr. Robert Smith, and self-examination can contribute to that.

"Anything that we could do to even incrementally reduce mortality from breast cancer is something I think we certainly should do," Smith said.

The Evaluation Committee of the European Society of Mastology concluded in 1993 that routine breast self-examination offered no benefit.

The chairman of the Canadian task force, Dr. John Feightner, said the panel recommends that women aged 50 to 69 receive regular mammograms and that women from 40 to 69 receive regular clinical examination for abnormal breast tissue.

"I think that it is quite important for women to realize that there are these other strategies that are important to pursue, even if breast self-exam doesn't appear to be effective," Feightner told The Canadian Press.

Some breast cancer experts said they fear the task force recommendation may deter women from seeking other forms of breast cancer detection, such as mammography and clinical breast examinations.

Homeowners would appreciate lower tax rates

With a spike in mineral values, taxable valuations in Midland County are way up.

It will mean more money in the pot for our public taxing entities and provides Midland Independent School District, as well as Greenwood Independent School District, a unique opportunity to lower their tax rates.

Yes, we said the tax rate.

Both school districts currently are at the highest possible rate the law allows — $1.50 per $100 valuation for maintenance and operations. Neither can go any higher except for debt retirement, which has a 50-cent cap. (The maximum public-school combined tax rate, without voter approval, is $2 per $100 valuation. MISD's debt is 67.6 million and its current tax rate is $1.639. Of that 13.9 cents goes toward debt retirement.)

But the surge in mineral values will add up to a lot more money pouring into the school districts' coffers.

At MISD, Superintendent Robert Nicks has done a sound job of sending signals that there will be a balanced budget next year and letting staff know all purchase orders are being closely scrutinized. He also has warned that cuts are inevitable.

Still, in many respects, MISD's future looks bright. Nicks has been welcomed with open arm, and we have the strongest school board in place we've seen in decades. There are even signs serious lessons have been learned as a result of the thrashing the district took in this past October's failed high-school bond referendum.

Midland Central Appraisal District Chief Appraiser Ron Stegall's preliminary numbers released this week should be great news for the school districts. Again, it provides a unique opportunity for the school districts to modify their tax rates and give homeowners and businesses relief that no doubt would greatly be appreciated.

Yes, MISD has a lot of costly issues to face, including high schools in dire need of replacement and teachers who want — and deserve — more money.

But MISD's leadership knows it needs a stronger relationship with the community and this might be MISD's golden opportunity to give the taxpayers a break and gain a little respect in the process.

The story in Greenwood is far different from the story at MISD.

Greenwood residents have a close relationship with their school district, which is debt free and famous for a disciplined approach to learning. But Greenwood in particular will be raking in bushels of dollars thanks to the hefty increase in taxable valuations.

Therefore, we challenge school administrators to put their pencils to this "problem" and take advantage of this windfall.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, June 27, the 178th day of 2001. There are 187 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 27, 1950, President Truman ordered the Air Force and Navy into the Korean conflict following a call from the U.N. Security Council for member nations to help South Korea repel an invasion from the North.

On this date:

In 1844, Mormon leader Joseph Smith and his brother, Hyrum, were killed by a mob in Carthage, Ill.

In 1847, New York and Boston were linked by telegraph wires.

In 1893, the New York stock market crashed.

In 1942, the FBI announced the capture of eight Nazi saboteurs who had been put ashore from a submarine on New York's Long Island.

In 1957, more than 500 people were killed when Hurricane "Audrey" slammed through coastal Louisiana and Texas.

In 1969, patrons at the Stonewall Inn, a gay bar in New York's Greenwich Village, clashed with police in an incident considered the birth of the gay rights movement.

In 1973, former White House counsel John W. Dean told the Senate Watergate Committee about an "enemies list" kept by the Nixon White House.

In 1980, President Carter signed legislation reviving draft registration.

In 1985, the legendary Route 66, which originally stretched from Chicago to Santa Monica, Calif., passed into history as officials decertified the road.

In 1990, NASA announced that a flaw in the orbiting Hubble Space Telescope was preventing the instrument from achieving optimum focus.

Ten years ago: Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall, the first black to sit on the nation's highest court, announced his retirement. The Supreme Court ruled that juries considering life or death for convicted murderers may take into account the victim's character and the suffering of relatives.

Administrators should listen to teachers

WASHINGTON — When you used to hear the word engagement, it usually meant someone had just agreed to be married. These days, it seems to connote significant give-and-take diplomacy almost as often. "Engagement with China" was the order of the hour in the last years of the Clinton administration. But engagement isn't limited to foreign relations, either. Even public-school superintendents have taken to public engagement.

Anderson

Few people had heard of public engagement when pollsters from Public Agenda contacted them about the concept. Once they explained that it was a chance for parents to talk with teachers and school policy-makers, however, interest grew.

Superintendents are still probably the most excited about the idea. Since they pay the highest price for public dissatisfaction, they know they need to interact with parents. As one of them said, "You really have to take the time to talk to parents. If you don't, it's a lethal mistake. The rumors spread like wildfire."

It might surprise that superintendent to know that parents are not so receptive. Over half said their involvement is limited to giving children guidance at home. Teachers applaud this approach. They stressed that it is far more important for parents to watch over their children's homework and inculcate respect for learning than it is for them to spend their time at committee meetings, haggling over education policy.

Those with no children at home have little interest in the public schools except to attend an occasional performance or football game. Detachment from school policy-making isn't limited to them. Two-thirds of the general public and 50 percent of the parents reported that they could not name their superintendent. Similar percentages could not identify a single member of the school board. Mostly, people seem willing to let educators do their job without interference.

There are, however, some big exceptions: agitators who show up at board meetings week after week and dominate the proceedings with their complaints and demands. Board members told the study that they deplore this repeated intrusion. Nonetheless it is at those meetings that they get most of their feedback from the public, who they view as concerned mainly with spending issues.

Even though board members hear quite enough on that subject, they would be wise to seek the opinion of calmer voices than they are accustomed to hearing. Of all those surveyed, the most troubled were teachers. When first asked, 70 percent had never even heard of public engagement. When prodded, though, 42 percent recalled such an effort in their districts.

Many of them feel completely left out of important planning, and 70 percent believe that when administrators talk to them it's only to sell programs they've already adopted, not to seek the views of teachers. Half the school-board members concurred that teachers are excluded from decisions that affect their work.

The situation has grown so strained that teachers now take a jaundiced approach to that most precious word in education: reform. They know that a new regime cannot be far away, and today's reforms will give way to tomorrow's enthusiasms and so on. All they have to do is nothing. Time will relieve them of the obligation to change. Anyone reading this survey will see immediately that the most vital area for engagement is with the teachers. They are the indispensable people.

Jack Anderson's (with correspondent at large Lee Cullum) and Douglas Cohn's column is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

CAL THOMAS

Doctors getting bum rap in health care debate

When my car needs servicing, I call a mechanic. When I need help managing money, I contact a financial adviser. When I want medical expertise, I call a physician, not a politician.

My doctor, who is no dummy (he has an M.D., a Ph.D. and decades of experience), thinks the politicians have duped people into believing that the so-called Patients' Bill of Rights is a good deal. He thinks government intrusion into medicine has created many of the problems government wants to repair.

Thomas

The last thing this overly litigious society needs is another reason for people to file lawsuits. Trial lawyers are already gorging themselves with more money than most doctors will make in a lifetime of practice.

My doctor says managed care organizations don't deny care; they can only deny payment for care. Many, if not most, physicians and hospitals treat their patients professionally and well, he says, whether or not they get paid. No doctor he knows will allow a patient to die just because of the stinginess of an HMO. The basic problem, says my doc, is not that patients are being denied care. It is that providers are not being paid for what they do and those providers are understandably reluctant to treat people for free.

My doctor reports he is $150,000 in debt, mostly because insurance companies argue over the tiniest of fees and then sometimes refuse to pay. He also suffers financially because of second-guessing government bureaucrats from Medicare and Medicaid who have never seen his patients but dispute charges as small as a $20 office visit. He has rent to pay and costly malpractice insurance to maintain, because too many patients already file too many lawsuits. After years of expensive education and dedication to helping others, he justifiably resents being seen as a money-grubbing cheat who must be dictated to by politicians interested only in re-election.

My doctor's solution to improving doctor-patient relations is one the politicians will never accept because it would deprive them of power. He would restore medical decision-making to the physicians. Doctors have the moral, ethical and legal responsibility for their patients, so why not restore the autonomy they have lost to managed care organizations and the government? Providers should be paid for what they provide, according to some reasonable scale. That might reduce costs.

My doctor thinks health insurance premiums should reflect reality. By that, he means at least the following: A) We are all going to die and our health insurance, lifestyles and expectations should be designed with that in mind; B) medicine has allowed us to live longer, but health costs increase commensurate with our advancing age; C) we have more disposable income than any other nation in the world. It is a myth that health costs are going up "too fast." Too fast for what in terms of what we get in return?

No one complains about the cost of chiropractors, aromatherapy, gourmet dog food, vitamins or herbal health remedies. Let people spend their money on what is important to them. Let society help the poor, partially through government, but also through private agencies, and let the well-off choose how much, and what kind of health insurance they wish to purchase. Opening up medical savings accounts for all, which are now restricted mostly to the self-employed, would expand treatment options.

The Wall Street Journal recently editorialized: "We in the United States seem to have arrived at the point in our social relations where many people, and certainly the entire Democratic Party, believe that no private institution will act in good faith absent the possibility of being torn to pieces by a lawsuit."

A major reason medical costs have escalated is because of government controls and regulations. Allowing lawyers more avenues to file suit would insure even higher costs and less care, as many physicians would simply close their doors because they can't afford to practice. This would bring us closer to the nationalized health care program Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton (D-N.Y.) has said she intends to legislate "piecemeal" since her failed 1993 attempt to unilaterally impose it on the country. It will be as big a disaster in pieces as it would have been if it were served-up whole.

CHARLEY REESE

Israel ought to withdraw from Palestine land

It's the occupation. That's the complete summation of the Palestinian-Israeli conflict. In 1967, Israel occupied the West Bank, East Jerusalem and the Gaza Strip. For 34 years, Palestinians have lived under Israeli military rule. They are now determined to be free of it.

Unfortunately, the Palestinians have only the facts, morality and international law on their side. The Israelis have a powerful army and the U.S. government, which not only gives Israel an annual $3 billion subsidy but also blocks any and all international efforts to make Israel comply with United Nations resolutions and the Geneva Convention.

(Americans ought to ask themselves why their children are expected to die to enforce U.N. Security Council resolutions directed at other countries if the United States is going to block enforcement of all those directed at Israel.)

Reese

Right now, the Israelis are spinning the line that they made a generous offer and that because the Palestinians rejected it, why, they must not want peace. The fly drowning in that glob of salad dressing is that it wasn't a generous offer. It was, in fact, an offer that no Palestinian could have accepted.

First, Palestinians would have had to kiss goodbye West Bank and Gaza land already confiscated by the Israelis. They would have had no control over their borders or the water under their feet. They would have had to endure Israeli "military supervision" for an indefinite period. They would have had to write off the rights of Palestinian refugees and acknowledge Jewish ownership of the land underneath the third-holiest site in Islam, and they would have gotten, in return, a nonviable country cut into giblets and at the mercy of the Israelis.

In fact, the only thing to be negotiated is the timetable for Israel's complete withdrawal and dismantling of all the Jewish settlements. Palestinians have already conceded 78 percent of their country. They are not going to concede hunks of the remaining 22 percent.

Furthermore, the Palestinians are daily victims of war crimes. The score card, according to Dr. Mustafa Barghouthi, director of the Health, Development, Information and Policy Institute, runs thus since the intifada started:

More than 500 Palestinians killed, a third of them children; 27,000 trees uprooted; 12,000 dunums of land (a dunum is 1,000 square meters) leveled in the Gaza Strip; 3,200 buildings destroyed, of which 1,200 were homes; and 23,000 Palestinians wounded. In comparison, he said, 106 Israelis have been killed and 760 injured. The numbers might have changed since he addressed the Center for Policy Analysis on Palestine, a Washington think tank.

It's not fair to call Palestinians terrorists. It is not they who have used tanks, advanced warplanes and helicopter gunships against civilians; it is not they who use death squads and assassinations; it is not they who imposed collective punishments on innocent civilians. The Israelis are doing all of these things, which are war crimes, to the Palestinians with American-made military equipment.

I know that it's hard for Americans to undo so many years of pro-Israeli brainwashing. Just remember that the Palestinians, like the Founding Fathers of this country, are trying to throw off a foreign occupier of their homeland. They are resisting a powerful military government with the only means they have. They want liberty. They want the right to govern themselves. If we believe our own Declaration of Independence and our own Bill of Rights, then we must support them and not their oppressor.

One day a just God will give the Palestinians their freedom. I wonder what will have happened to ours by then? We certainly are not earning it.

Macedonian leader urges security forces to back him after riot casts doubts

By Colleen Barry
Associated Press

SKOPJE, Macedonia — Macedonia's president appealed Tuesday to police and soldiers to back his peace efforts after rioting triggered by the U.S.-assisted evacuation of ethnic Albanian rebels from a besieged town cast doubt on their loyalty.

Boris Trajkovski said the rioting led by armed reservists outside Parliament Monday night could have brought Macedonia to civil war. Security forces present did not intervene, even after rioters opened fire with automatic weapons on Parliament.

Rioters were angered when American troops provided Humvees, trucks, buses and ambulances on Monday to support a NATO effort to evacuate about 500 armed rebels from Aracinovo, a town near the capital, Skopje, on Monday as part of a cease-fire.

Protesters saw it as an unnecessary concession since the rebels had reportedly raised a white flag to surrender to government forces.

Trajkovski on Tuesday strongly defended a NATO-brokered deal to remove the rebels from Aracinovo, saying they now no longer pose a threat to Skopje, just four miles away, or the nearby airport. He also pledged to regain control of rebel-held territory within Macedonia's boundaries.

"We are not fighting against one another. This is what the enemy wishes. If we accept that way, defeat will be inevitable," Trajkovski said in a taped evening broadcast on state television.

Still, in separate televised comments, Prime Minister Ljubco Georgievski expressed pessimism over chances of a negotiated solution as long as fighting continued with the rebels.

A regular Cabinet meeting and a news conference by the foreign minister were canceled following the rioting.

"I do not agree but I understand the revolt of the population," Trajkovski said. But "I do not understand why the shooting occurred, why the people and those gathered reservists shot at the Macedonian Parliament. The shooting could have easily turned to a civil war."

Trajkovski was trying to preserve his peace plan calling for amnesty for most rebels who disarm voluntarily and greater inclusion of ethnic Albanians in state bodies and institutions.

The spokesman for the Albanian Party of Democratic Prosperity, Zahir Bekteshi, said his party would continue to support Trajkovski's efforts toward peace.

And Iljaz Halimi, the deputy chairman of the Democratic Party of Albanians, part of the coalition government, said the rioting "should not reflect negatively on relations among the parties."

In Washington, White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said the violence is "a reminder of how delicate the situation is in Macedonia and why the only solution to the problem there is a political one, not a military one."

Calm returned to Skopje Tuesday but scattered gunfire was reported in Macedonia's second largest city, Tetovo, and in Nikustak, the village to which the rebels evacuated from Aracinovo were taken.

The government also reported a mortar round fired at a plastics factory on the outskirts of the northern city of Kumanovo.

An ethnic Albanian threat to march into major cities, meanwhile, also heightened tensions. Commander Sokoli, a rebel leader, said there were "two brigades on the outskirts of Skopje." Fighters from other areas stood ready to "protect the Albanians if they become targets of violence," he said.

The lack of progress toward peace has dismayed European Union leaders, trying for months to persuade the two sides to compromise and avert civil war in the country of 2 million people.

The NATO escort Monday marked the force's first direct role in the conflict since fighting broke out in February, when militants began taking over villages near the border with Kosovo — whose population is predominantly ethnic Albanian — to demand more rights.

NATO Secretary Lord Robertson and Javier Solana, the EU top foreign policy and security chief, held crisis talks on Macedonia Tuesday in Brussels, Belgium.

Robertson defended the decision to allow the ethnic Albanian rebels to leave Aracinovo, which had been under siege by Macedonian forces for three days.

"This evacuation is an important first step to achieve a cessation of all violence throughout the country. A political solution ... is the only way forward," Robertson said.

In a bid to appease the country's Slavic majority, Robertson condemned "the armed extremists for challenging democratic institutions inside Macedonia."

Although there is a cease-fire in the neighboring village of Aracinovo, sporadic fire in the village of Nikustak between ethnic Albanian rebels and Macedonian security forces continues.

Cingular's tax abatements win approval

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

The tax abatements associated with the deal that brought Cingular Wireless to Midland were passed by the City Council Tuesday and sent to the other taxing entities for their approval.

The completion of the abatements is a piece of history since they are the first abatements in the city's history. What the abatements aren't, according to City Attorney Keith Stretcher, are a complete exemption from all taxes.

The two abatements were part of an economic development package approved by the City Council on April 24, which brought Cingular Wireless, a communications company, to Midland. Also included in the deal was a $1.25 million forgivable loan ($1 million of which was taken from the city's water and sewer funds).

As is the case with the loan, the tax abatements are only good if Cingular meets certain property and job requirements.

"If they don't, obviously, the agreement is terminated," Stretcher said.

Like the rest of the economic package given to Cingular, there are misconceptions concerning the abatements, city officials said. The first is the abatements provide an exemption from paying all city taxes.

Concerning the first abatement passed by the Council on Tuesday, Southwestern Bell Wireless, LLC. — the parent company of Cingular — receives an abatement from all taxes on tangible personal property added to the call center property before today.

"Anything placed on the premises prior to June 27 will be taxed," Stretcher said.

How much property will be taxed is not known yet.

"They (the Midland Central Appraisal District) will determine the value of the tangible personal property," Stretcher said.

According to city records, Cingular is adding computers and other tangible personal property to the building that records estimate will exceed $7 million.

The agreement abates new city taxes on the tangible personal property for 10 years. For the first five years, there is a 100 percent exemption. During the next five years, the

Electricity item dies after lack of a second

By Stewart Doreen

The list of things to talk about at this weekend's City Council retreat got a little longer after Tuesday's Council meeting.

On Tuesday, a resolution, which would have allowed the City of Midland to participate in the Houston Galveston Area Council Aggregation Program, died after a lack of a second to the motion to bring it to a vote.

The Houston program has been involved in cooperative purchasing and the City of Midland occasionally purchases some items through them for a considerable savings. Participation would not have been a commitment but an opportunity to look at their pricing and options — concerning the supply electricity — as a deregulated market approaches.

"We will have the opportunity to enter that cooperative if that is to our advantage," said at-large City Councilman Bill Dingus, who moved the item for a vote but was not followed with a second. "It sounds like we need to make a decision pretty soon on how to proceed. I don't want to get into a situation where we don't have plenty of options."

According to Mark Phillips in Tuesday's meeting, the City of Midland spent $3.3 million on electricity for its facilities and buildings last year. He estimated that number would be $3.5 million this

Workshop offers straight talk on sex

ODESSA — Straight talk came straight from the heart during a recent Planned Parenthood sexuality workshop.

The program focused on such issues as puberty, hygiene, sexually transmitted diseases, birth control, abstinence and responsible decision making.

"Doing this program is really what Planned Parenthood is all about," said Carla Holeva, vice president of community affairs for Planned Parenthood. "We believe in honest education."

And some experts attribute that honest education with the most recent statistics that show teen pregnancy rates are down. It is believed teens can make wiser, more responsible decisions about their bodies if they have honest, accurate information.

"There is so much misinformation out there these days," said Ms. Holeva. "We want to provide children with information that will help them make responsible decisions."

Planned Parenthood is also an advocate of parental involvement.

"We believe parents should be the primary sex educator," Ms. Holeva said. "We encourage children to talk to their parents. Our main objective is to open the doors of communication between a parent and their child."

Ms. Holeva noted there is no comprehensive sexual education available in this area and statistics show children who have access to such education can make better, healthier decisions.

Many participants felt they would make wiser choices if given the facts.

"I feel like I am capable of making the right choice now when the time comes," said 12-year old Michelle Reid.

Some teens wile away summer volunteering for community groups

By Jonathon Carrasco
MRT Correspondent

Despite preconceptions that teens are lazy during the summer and doing little more than lying around the pool and wasting away hours sitting in front of the TV playing video games, many high schoolers actually spend their summer volunteering their time to help the community.

Since dedication of time and service to the community is largely factored into the decisions of college and scholarship panels, more and more students are electing to spend their summers volunteering.

"It's a chance for me to both help out and work toward some scholarships," said Cynthia Tarlton, a volunteer with Casa de Amigos.

Miss Tarlton lives in Missouri, but during the summer visits her grandmother, who works at Casa de Amigos. So while in town, she volunteers her time helping Midlanders.

Teens often volunteer to receive scholarships or achieve graduation honors, but with so many school activities during the year it can be hard to find enough time to dedicate to volunteering.

"We try to be flexible with our hours and allow teens to come in when they can. That way they don't have to be concerned about giving up their entire summer, especially if they have jobs or other commitments," said Dinah Doggett, volunteer coordinator at Casa de Amigos.

Students and organizations agree summer vacation offers students a chance to work around their schedules and donate as much time as they can. The added flexibility allows teens to do as much as they can without overcommitting themselves and still enjoy their summers.

"Many of our junior and senior volunteers are here to work toward their Texas scholar hours or toward the Abell-Hanger scholarship offered by Midland College," said Trelisa Grismore, high school program coordinator for Big Brothers Big Sisters of Midland.

The Texas scholar program and the Abell-Hanger scholarship program offer high school students a chance to learn how to work within their community. The programs encourage students to volunteer their time to try and make the community a better place.

"The (Texas Scholar) program is offered throughout the state. It teaches students to work toward being better citizens," said Karen Wentworth, a counselor at Midland High School.

"Students learn that they get out of the community what they put into it."

Local numbers reflect dwindling number of female police officers

By D. Lance Lunsford
Staff Writer

A nationwide survey shows female law enforcement officers represent an extremely low population of officers, and Midland is no exception.

According to the National Center for Women and Policing (NCWP), a division of the Feminist Majority Foundation, women comprise only 13 percent of all law enforcement positions nationwide.

Sgt. David Garcia, a recruiter with the Midland Police Department, said the numbers in Midland match those in the study.

"Across the board, numbers are down. It's not for a lack of trying to recruit female officers," Garcia said. "We really try to hire females. They have to meet the same fitness standards. That's pretty standard."

The Midland Police Department employs 15 female officers out of 161. Of that 15, two are sergeants, and none are lieutenants. However, the MPD does employ four female detectives. The Midland County Sheriff's Department has 20 patrol deputies, one of which is female, while DPS officers in Midland and Ector Counties pool five female troopers of 25-30 uniformed troopers.

Although the numbers are low, Midland County Sheriff Patrolman Freda Blythe said the opportunities for women have never been better.

"You can't beat it. You can go as far as you want," Ms. Blythe said.

Garcia pointed to the success of the economy coupled with the open opportunities to women in the job market as keys to the low number of female officers. Working four shifts on and three off, in 10-hour shifts — sometimes at night — Garcia feels that women are seeking other opportunities outside of law enforcement.

Garcia, whose wife once served as an officer, said once he and his wife started their family, his wife's role as an officer took a back seat, forcing her to find another line of work.

Midland Police are not the only ones finding this small number of female employees. The Department of Public Safety also parallels the numbers reported by the NCWP.

DPS spokesman Tom Vinger said the department has the same problem in the recruitment process.

"We meet with mixed success on recruiting women," Vinger said. "Women are a tougher dynamic for several reasons. They're coveted by all. We do target women for recruiting.

"It's not that we don't encourage women to come into law enforcement," Vinger said. "These days, they can do whatever they want. Law enforcement is a dangerous, high-risk profession, and traditionally, females have not been responsive to law enforcement recruiting."

Vinger said female recruitment is difficult because all employers want female employees, and with the negative factors concerning safety and hours, females are seeking jobs outside of law enforcement.

"I think the doors are open to women in law enforcement, but you've got to get them to walk through them," Vinger said.

Although the problems may be linked to females not desiring a job in law enforcement, the NCWP said women do not desire to enter for other reasons. It cites discrimination, harassment and intimidation of women who enter policing forces.

Benefit set for 11-month-old child

By Jonathon Carrasco
MRT Correspondent

A benefit will be held this week for Dawson Hansen, an 11-month-old boy born premature with a congenital heart disease and a metabolic imbalance calling for three separate surgeries.

Parents and friends of Dawson have arranged a benefit for 4-8 p.m. Friday at Kent Kwik #307, 4101 E. Highway158, where participants can enjoy food, fun, games and prizes while helping the family to pay the costly medical bills.

"There will be a dunking booth and we'll have hot dogs, a bake sale and door prizes donated from local businesses," said Tamara Hansen, mother of Dawson and clerk at Kent Kwik.

Dawson underwent surgery for pyloric stenosis (an inability to pass food from the stomach to the intestines) and two separate heart surgeries, one to repair several holes in his heart and another to install a pacemaker. He now takes three different heart medications and a thyroid medication.

"I don't know how he does it. He's been a fighter since day one and he's doing much better now," Ms. Hansen said.

"Everyone has been extremely helpful and concerned for both me and my son. I appreciate the support of our friends and family."

Those who are unable to attend the benefit this weekend can make a donation to an account at Medical Community Credit Union in Odessa, account number 37446.

POLICE: NCWP cites harassment as deterrent

(From 1B)

Executive Vice President Katherine Spillar said, "In addition to the discrimination they face, women candidates are repelled by an overly aggressive and paramilitary image of policing."

The group also claims women and men are equally capable of police work, but "widespread bias in police hiring, selection practices and recruitment policies keeps the numbers of women in law enforcement artificially low."

The NCWP also targets law enforcement hiring practices, saying recruiters keep standards stringent for females in entry exams. It claims there is an overemphasis on upper-body strength in fitness exams, which washes out many qualified women — "despite studies showing that physical prowess is not related to job performance."

As a patrolman with the Midland County Sheriff's Department, Ms. Blythe could not disagree more, saying the physical fitness requirement was a necessity to effective law enforcement.

"I think that anything a man does, a female should be required to do," Ms. Blythe said. "I don't think my partners see me as a female, they see me as a fellow officer."

DPS Recruiter Leo Arrieta said the requirement of physical strength is imperative to the safety of officers as well as the public.

"Police work is a profession where you do have physical contact with the public," Arrieta said. "When push comes to shove, they're going to have to get physically involved."

Arrieta said a DPS Web site outlines all requirements for applicants, which posts physical requirements, so that all are aware of the testing and qualifying demands.

"We have males who fail it (the physical testing). We lose men as well as women in that situation," Arrieta said. "I couldn't care less whether my partner was male or female, as long as they went through the same academy."

Garcia said the fitness standards exist for the public's safety.

"They have to meet the same fitness standards across the board. That's pretty standard," Garcia said, highlighting the requirement of written tests, which accompany other requirements for placement and advancement. "Everybody's afforded the same opportunities on the written test, and we take the top seven score wise."

SEX: Variety of resources offered

(From 1B)

"Straight Talk" targeted the fifth-to-eighth grade segment of the community because, according to Ms. Holeva, that is about the time children begin asking questions. And in many instances, parents don't have the answers.

"I've tried to talk to my parents, but I didn't know what to say," said Brian Menser, 13.

Planned Parenthood offers a wide variety of resources to parents.

"We host parent educating parties," said Ms. Holeva. "We tell parents what resources are available to them, how to talk to their child, even offer anatomy lessons. Some people are surprised that we encourage and educate both parents and teens to communicate about sexuality."

OBITUARIES

Kathryn K. Burleson, 74, went to be with our Lord, Saturday, June 23, after a brief illness.

"Jimmie" Kathryn was born February 3, 1927 in Dallas to James L. and Nola McKee Kendrick. Soon after she moved back to Midland. She was a member of a pioneer Midland County family. Kathryn graduated from Midland High School in 1944 and enrolled in Texas Tech University where she received her BS degree in Home Economics in 1949. After graduation she taught in Midland Public Schools. On June 16, 1951 she married Lewis Burleson. They resided in Roswell, NM and Lake Charles, LA before moving back to Midland in 1954.

Kathryn was a dedicated homemaker and mother and a devoted disciple of the Lord. She was a member of First Presbyterian Church where she served as an elder. Kathryn dedicated her life to prayer and intercession for her fellow man. She was an active member of the High Sky Emmaus Community and a reunion group. Kathryn supported the College of Human Sciences at Texas Tech University and founded the Kathryn K. Burleson Fund for Excellence, which recognizes faculty and students alike. In later years, she used and supported alternative medicine in her battle with cancer.

She is survived by her husband of 50 years, Lewis Burleson; daughter and her husband Nancy & Ray Egan and their children Ryan, Zachary & Lance Hayes of Midland; son and his wife, Steven & Elizabeth Burleson and their children, Brett, Eric & Alyssa Burleson of Midland; sister, Mary Feldman and her husband Colonel Albert Feldman of San Antonio; sisters-in-law, Merle Burleson Taylor of Midland and Betty Burleson of Richmond, VA; nephews Colonel James K. Feldman of Colorado Springs, Robert Feldman of Beaverton, OR, Brian Burleson of Plano & the Netherlands, and Alan Burleson of Boston; cousins, Royce Bedford of Farmington, NM, Scott McKee of Midland, Billie Springer of Odessa and Bennett Johnson of Las Cruces, NM.

A memorial service to the glory of God will be held at 10:00 a.m., Wednesday, June 27 at First Presbyterian Church with Steve Wilkins and Richard Braun officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

In lieu of flowers, contributions can be made to a favorite charity or the Kathryn K. Burleson Fund for Excellence at the Texas Tech College of Human Sciences in Lubbock.

TAXES: Abatement will be received only on improvements made to building percentage drops successively to 80-60-40-20-10.

Assuming a constant tax rate of $0.6510 and $7 million in improvements, the proposed city taxes abated would be $45,570 in the first five years. Then abatement works down to $36,456 in the sixth year before falling off to $4,557 in the last year. It is discontinued in year 11.

Another misconception is Cingular is the only company receiving an abatement. Mid Builder Company L.C. owns the facility, where the call center is located. It used to be the old Builders Square property.

As the owner, it will receive an abatement only on the improvements being made to the building. The value of the land and property as of Jan. 1, 2001, can't be abated by law. That value as of Jan. 1 is $5,302,500.

According to city documents, the owner of the Builders Square property paid $34,519.28 in city taxes for the 2000 tax year. The 2001 taxes are due in October of this year. If the improvements to the Builders Square building equal a value of $6 million, the city taxes abated during the first year will be approximately $39,060. It is estimated that the actual improvements to the property will be greater than $6 million, and thus, the abatement will be greater.

Like the abatement for Cingular, the agreement abates the ad valorem taxes for 10 years. For the first five years, there is a 100 percent exemption. During the next five years, the rate drops successively to 80-60-40-20-10.

According to Stretcher, the amount of tangible property Cingular is moving onto the property is $7 million and the improvements in the building itself are at least $6 million.

"They are doing massive work," Stretcher said.

"It is significant," added Midland Mayor Mike Canon of the city's first tax abatements. "It was the right time to do it, and we anticipate receiving significant economic benefits from them coming to town. Hopefully, the numbers we anticipated in terms of return to the community and return to City Hall in other forms become reality."

Cingular Abatement

Assuming a constant tax rate of $0.6150 and $7 million in tangible personal property improvements, the proposed tax abatement is as follows:

Year	Percentage	Estimated City Taxes Abated	Estimated New City Taxes to be paid
1	100	$45,570	0
2	100	$45,570	0
3	100	$45,570	0
4	100	$45,570	0
5	100	$45,570	0
6	80	$36,456	$9,114
7	60	$27,342	$18,228
8	40	$18,228	$27,342
9	20	$9,114	$36,456
10	10	$4,557	$41,013
Totals		$323,547	$132,153

Mid Builder Company Abatement

Assuming a constant tax rate of $0.6510 and $6 million in improvements, the proposed tax rate is as follows.

Year	Percentage	Estimated City Taxes Abated	Estimated New City Taxes to be paid
1	100	$39,060	0
2	100	$39,060	0
3	100	$39,060	0
4	100	$39,060	0

7	60	$23,436	$15,624
8	40	$15,624	$23,436
9	20	$7,812	$31,248
10	10	3,906	$35,154

COUNCIL: Ordinance passes to remove structures

"This electric issue is something we need to look at," Mayor Mike Canon said. "That is more than 3 percent of our total budget. We could be looking at significant costs savings if we do things correctly. Saving $300,000, that is not insignificant."

Other issues bound to come up this weekend at the retreat include the naming or renaming of a Midland street or thoroughfare after Martin Luther King, public transportation, economic development, downtown revitalization and the city's property taxes.

In other Council notes.

■ The Council passed an ordinance that would allow no more than eight residents to live in a residential unit in two-family zoning district — provided the entire building structure is owned by the same owner.

Also, other residential structures would abide by state regulations, which would allow for the housing of no more than six people.

■ The Council passed a motion calling a special meeting on July 9 to hold a workshop on the fiscal year 2000-2001 budget at City Hall.

■ The Council passed an ordinance ordering the removal of structures from eight different addresses — 2200 S. Lamesa Rd.; 2105 Rhode Island, 805 S. Weatherford, 1204 W. New Jersey Ave., 1304 E. Pennsylvania Ave.; 508 S. Mineola St. and 2301 N. Pecos St. The owners have 30 days to complete the demolition of the dilapidated and abandoned structures; if not, the city will move forward with its own demolition.

■ The Midland High baseball team, which recorded a 34-7 mark en route to the school's second state baseball championship, was recognized and presented a proclamation for winning the Class 5A state baseball title.

Man condemned for killing San Antonio guard executed

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE — A former pimp who became a church group leader while in prison was executed Tuesday evening for fatally shooting one of two hotel security guards slain during a robbery in San Antonio more than 22 years ago.

Richardson

Miguel "Silky" Richardson, 46, with a history of violence and attempted escapes, was the ninth condemned inmate to receive lethal injection this year in Texas, where a record 40 convicted killers were put to death last year.

"I feel so much love," he said as witnesses filed into the chamber.

Richardson spoke for nearly eight minutes about love, smiling and winking the entire time. He then began chanting in a foreign language, his voice rising and falling with a tear running from his right eye, before shouting "take me! I'm ready!"

"I'm your friend, I'm not a monster being executed. I am a minister of love," he said.

As the drugs began flowing, Richardson remarked it was a "good day to die. Take me God."

He took several deep breaths and uttered a slight gasp before slipping into unconsciousness. He was pronounced dead at 6:28 p.m. CDT, 13 minutes after the lethal dose began.

Richardson adopted the nickname "Silky" after the lead character in a 1970s book about a Harlem, N.Y., pimp.

At the time of the March 1979 shootings of security guards John Ebbert and Howard Powers at a San Antonio Holiday Inn, Richardson was sharing a room with three prostitutes, two 17 years old and one 16.

The security guards confronted him after responding to a complaint from a woman across the hall that someone was trying to break into her room. Testimony later showed Richardson had coveted the expensive jewelry worn by the woman staying in that room.

When Richardson — wearing a woman's wig — was being escorted down a stairwell to the hotel lobby, the two unarmed guards were robbed and shot to death. Richardson was arrested a few days later in Denver during another robbery and fought extradition to Texas for two years.

Over the 20 years since his capital murder conviction, Richardson's case went to the U.S. Supreme Court at least six times, including an 11th-hour review that was rejected by the justices late Tuesday afternoon.

"He had all those chances when my husband had no chance," Ebbert's wife, Debra, said after watching Richardson die. "I'm angry but I do feel justice was served."

Russell Crowe to entertain teen-age daughter of Texas governor

AUSTIN — The Texas governor's teen-age daughter should have a memorable birthday in August: Actor Russell Crowe is set to entertain guests with his rock band, 30 Odd Foot of Grunts.

The Academy Award-winning star of "Gladiator" spoke with Gov. Rick Perry, first lady Anita and their two children, Griffin and Sydney, over dinner earlier this year, saying he wanted his band to play a benefit at an Austin nightspot, The Dallas Morning News reported Tuesday.

Crowe suggested he and his band play the benefit for Sydney's 15th birthday party and donate the proceeds to a charity of her choice. Sydney chose Settlement House, an Austin program that helps troubled teen-age girls.

The event, tentatively scheduled for Aug. 18 at Stubb's BBQ in Austin, will kick off a U.S. tour by Crowe's band.

Crowe got to know Perry last year while 30 Odd Foot of Grunts were recording an album in Austin.

MIAMI — A man who police said was hit on the head by rap star Juvenile has filed a $5 million lawsuit against him, his attorney said.

Jackson Saintagne of Miami filed a lawsuit in Miami-Dade County Circuit Court seeking damages for pain and suffering. His attorney, Andrew Boros, said his client has been hospitalized several times since the fight with the 26-year-old Juvenile, whose real name is Terius Gray.

In March, the rapper was arrested and charged with aggravated battery with a bottle, battery on a law enforcement officer, disorderly conduct and resisting arrest without violence, police said.

Morton Fry, the rapper's attorney, said Monday his client was innocent of the charges.

The incident occurred outside the Improv Comedy Club in Miami's trendy Coconut Grove section as audience members were leaving, police said. Four fights broke out, including the one in which the New Orleans rap artist hit Saintagne with a bottle of Moet champagne, police said.

The 28-year-old fell unconscious and was taken to Mercy Hospital, where he was treated and released, police said. Witnesses told police Saintagne had approached Juvenile during the show and was disrespectful.

The lawsuit, which was filed last week, denies Saintagne provoked the beating.

Juvenile, who also grabbed an officer by the shirt and shouted profanities, was arrested inside a tour bus, and release on $17,000 bond, police said.

The rapper won the Billboard award for Album of the Year for his 1998 album "400 Degreez." His hits include "Ha" and "Back That Thang Up."

DETROIT — A Macomb County judge has denied a request by Eminem's mother to reconsider a settlement concerning a pair of defamation lawsuits.

Debbie Mathers-Nelson will receive a $25,000 settlement for what was once an $11 million lawsuit filed against her son, whose real name is Marshall Mathers III.

Macomb County Circuit Judge Mark Switalski denied a motion for reconsideration of the settlement. Mathers-Nelson claimed her son defamed her in lyrics and magazine interviews.

Mathers-Nelson contends she was pressured into settling the case for the small amount. But court records produced at a hearing earlier this month include a transcript of a voicemail message she left for Eminem's attorney on May 9, saying she would settle for $25,000.

The judge ruled last week that the voicemail tape is indisputable and that Mathers-Nelson clearly accepted the terms of the settlement.

Peter Peacock, the rapper's attorney, said the case is over unless Eminem's mother appeals.

"We're very pleased with this," Peacock told the Detroit Free Press Monday.

Mathers-Nelson's attorney, Michael Marsalese, said his client has not decided whether to take the case to the state Court of Appeals.

NEW YORK — Vin Diesel attended stunt-driving school in Las Vegas for his role as a streetwise racer in "The Fast and the Furious."

"School started at 6 a.m., and I'd be just getting back to my hotel room thinking, 'How can I at least make it look like I slept," Diesel tells Details magazine in its June issue.

Diesel plays Dominic Toretto, king of the Los Angeles street-racing scene. The film follows his uneasy friendship with a new kid on the block (Paul Walker), who turns out to be an undercover cop.

His previous films include "Saving Private Ryan," "Boiler Room" and last year's sci-fi horror flick, "Pitch Black."

Is "The Fast and the Furious" the vehicle that will propel him to stardom?

"Every actor has a moment when he either breaks out or waves crash over his head," Rob Cohen, the film's director, tells the magazine. "This was Vin's opportunity, and he pulled it off. And Vin's not a pretty boy. As Arnold Schwarzenegger and his ilk get older, there's a vacuum Vin can fill."

Later this summer, Diesel co-stars with John Malkovich and Dennis Hopper in the gangster film "Knockaround Guys," and next year he stars in the drug thriller "Diablo."

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, June 27, 2001:
Speak your mind. If you value yourself more, so will others. Family has always been a high priority, but they will be even more important this year. Real estate and investments in general might gain your interest, as you seek to establish greater security. Your intuition serves you and helps you make good choices. If you are single, a strong emotional tie becomes an important reality — one you are likely to create after July. If you are attached, a new addition or purchase to enhance your domestic life draws both of you closer. LIBRA can frustrate you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ In the morning, move on a work project that demands your focus and attention. Later on, you might lighten up some and enjoy associates. A meeting demonstrates differences, yet it also reveals a common thread. Tonight: Accept an invitation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Use the morning for a creative project, and you'll gain. Others discover how many rewarding solutions you can come up with. What you think is important might not be to someone else this afternoon. Go with the give-and-take of being a team. Success will result. Tonight: Put up your feet and relax.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Deal with a family or domestic matter with your customary optimism. You have the ability to pull a rabbit out of a hat. Why not now? Creativity soars in the afternoon when you meet a challenge head-on. Be careful of a financial commitment. Tonight: K k up your heels.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Speak your mind, and don't hold back. Assume this person will understand. You could be overwhelmed by another's demands. Deal with a personal or domestic matter later in the day. Tonight: Your home is your castle.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ A bright idea pays off before noon. A friend or group of associates congratulates you on a job well-done. Keep communication flowing. Check in on someone. Return calls. Networking brings information that could be a bit unnerving. Tonight: Catch up on a friend's news.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ You're the cat's meow. Make decisions in the morning, when others respond to your inquiries. Seek out information. Later on, you'll discover that a financial matter needs your hands-on approach if you want to gain. Of course, you'll follow through as needed. Tonight: Treat yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Step back and analyze the facts before you assume someone else's conclusion. Once you have sorted things out, you might opt to take charge. Others look up to you. Not only do they like your style, but they admire how you bring others together. Tonight: In the limelight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ Work with others in the a.m., when you seem to be able to move them along the same path as you're on. In the afternoon, do some quiet work and think through a recent decision. You might not be as sure of yourself as you would like others to think you are. Tonight: Get a good night's sleep.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Aim for what you want — professionally or within your immediate circle. Increase your self-awareness and listen to feedback. Don't miss a meeting that allows you to network, even if it might not be directly related to what you are doing. Tonight: Where your friends are.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Handle calls in the morning, when others seem to be more available. What is important is to gain an overview. Your high energy helps you bring a project to the finish line. Understanding helps you lead and make others feel confident in your decisions. Tonight: Work as late as need be.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ Work with someone and let this person know just how enthusiastic you are. You inspire others more than you realize. Seek out others' opinions if you hit a snafu. Don't assume you have the right answer. An e-mail contains nuggets of information. Tonight: Off to the movies.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Think in terms of success and gaining a bigger networking base. Every person counts, ultimately, so don't burn any bridges before you need to. Deal with an associate on a one-on-one level, especially if it involves finances. You make headway as a result. Tonight: Togetherness works.

Some contracts have no play — they are destined for defeat because of bad breaks or injudicious bidding. Others, however, might be salvaged if you are able to spot the distribution which will permit you to sail home safely. Consider this hand.

Since the early days of contract bridge, jump-raises of partner's suit after an intervening takeout double are pre-emptive. When four-card majors were prevalent, one of the criteria for the jump-raise was five-card trump support, but with the rise of five-card majors it has become popular to do so with only four cards in partner's suit, if the hand is suitable in other respects. Here, North, fearful that the opponents might have a big fit in the minors, elected to jump to game — unnecessarily aggressive since the opponents could not make anything above the two-level without help from the defense.

Defending against four spades, West briskly cashed three diamond tricks and, when East followed with the nine on the third round, suggesting a card in hearts, exited safely with a low heart. Declarer won perforce and needed to bring home the trump suit without a loser — not a very appetizing prospect.

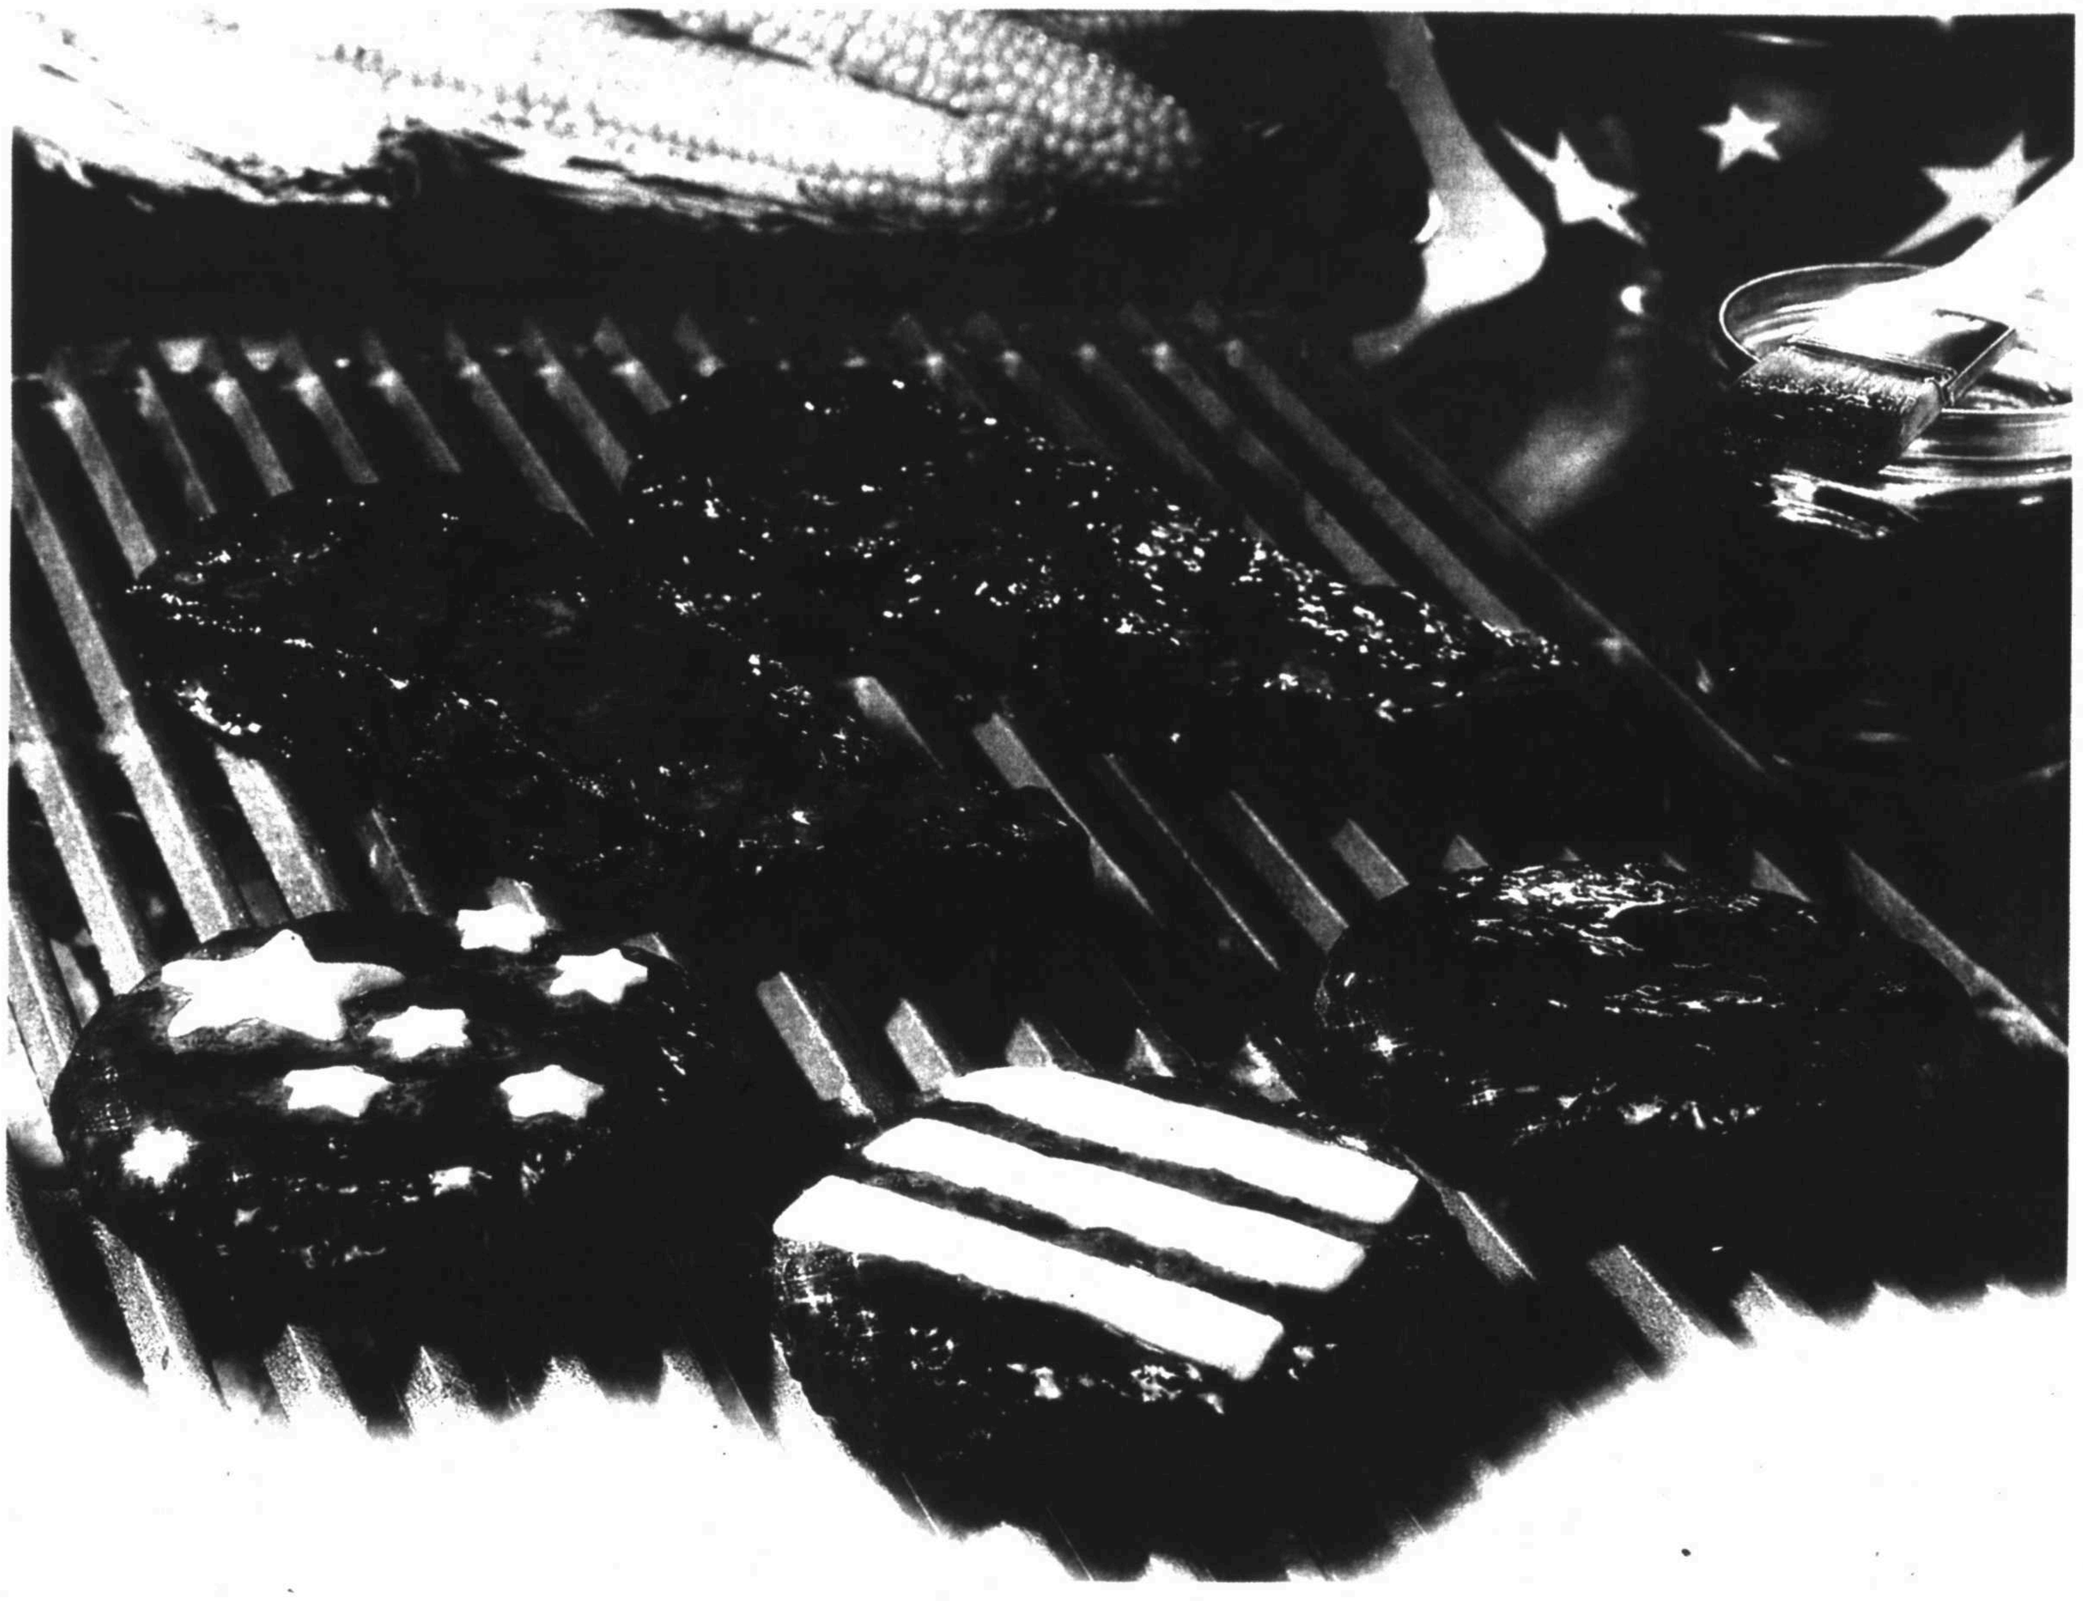

Having recognized the problem, finding the only lie of the cards that would allow that was not too difficult to spot. South cashed the ace of clubs, ruffed a club in dummy and led the queen of spades! That pinned West's singleton ♠ J, whether East covered or not, a repeat trump finesse would land 10 tricks. Another club could be ruffed on the table, and the remaining club could be discarded on the king of hearts.

Suppose there had been a fifth spade in dummy and, say, one fewer heart. Now the percentage play would be to lead the ace of trumps and hope to drop a singleton king. That is twice as likely as leading the queen to trap a singleton knave in the West hand.

FOOD

Dear Abby/7B

Star-spangled grilling

From the morning parade that gets everyone in a festive mood until the fireworks finale in the evening, the Fourth of July is a day set aside for star-spangled celebrations. That means lots of fun and food!

Grills begin lighting up at lunchtime for some, later in the day for others — either way, cooking outdoors is a time-honored tradition on Independence Day. So fire up your grill and let the celebration begin!

Adults and kids alike love a juicy burger and these All-American Cheeseburgers will appeal to both. While the burgers grill, baste them occasionally with a simple blend of zesty steak sauce accented with a touch of honey. Add cheese, cut into stars and stripes, just before the burgers come off the grill. The kids will enjoy cutting the star shapes using cookie cutters in various sizes.

Along with the burgers, grill Sassy Steaks & Corn. The tender beef top loin steaks (sometimes called strip steaks) get their sassy flavor from a new hickory marinade combined with salsa — it adds a complementary kick to the ready-to-use marinade. Reserve a portion of the marinade mixture to serve as a sauce with the steaks and corn, or use it to season canned pinto beans for a quick "baked" bean side dish.

This all-American holiday comes but once a year, so make it a celebration that will be remembered until the flag flies over next year's parade.

ALL-AMERICAN CHEESEBURGERS

Total preparation and cooking time: 30 minutes

2 pounds ground beef
4 to 6 slices American cheese
8 hamburger buns, split
Lettuce
Tomato slices
Burger baste:
1/2 cup original steak sauce
1/4 cup honey

1. Lightly shape ground beef into eight 1/2-inch thick patties. Combine baste ingredients. Remove and reserve 1/2 cup.

2. Place patties on grid over medium, ash-covered coals. Grill, uncovered, 11 to 13 minutes to medium (160 degrees) doneness or until centers are no longer pink and juices show no pink color, turning occasionally. Generously brush with remaining 1/4 cup baste during last 5 minutes of cooking.

3. Meanwhile cut cheese slices into thin stripes and/or stars using small star-shaped cookie cutter. Approximately 1 minute before burgers are done, place cheese stars and stripes on top of burgers.

4. Line bottom of each bun with lettuce and tomato; top with burger. Close sandwiches. Serve with reserved baste.

Makes 8 servings.

CLASSIC BEEF KABOBS

Total preparation and cooking time: 35 minutes
Marinating time: 30 minutes to 2 hours

1 boneless beef top sirloin steak, cut 1 inch thick, about 1-1/2 pounds
3/4 cup steakhouse marinade, divided
1 package (8 ounces) mushrooms
1 medium red onion, cut into 1-inch pieces
1 yellow or red bell pepper, cut into 1-inch pieces

1. Cut steak into 1-1/4-inch pieces. Combine beef and 1/4 cup steak marinade in large bowl; toss to coat. Cover; marinate in refrigerator 30 minutes or up to 2 hours.

2. Alternately thread beef and vegetables onto 12 8- to 10-inch metal skewers.

3. Place kabobs on grid over medium, ash-covered coals. Grill, uncovered, about 10 to 12 minutes for medium rare to medium doneness, turning occasionally and brushing with remaining steak marinade. Season with salt and pepper, as desired.

Makes 6 servings.

SASSY STEAKS & CORN

Total preparation and cooking time: 30 minutes
Marinating time: 30 minutes to 2 hours

6 boneless beef top loin (strip) or ribeye steaks, cut 3/4 inch thick
6 ears corn on the cob in husks
Sassy Sauce:
3/4 cup hickory steak marinade
3/4 cup salsa
1/3 cup packed brown sugar
2 tablespoons sliced green onions

1. Combine sauce ingredients. Remove and reserve 1 cup. Place steaks and remaining sauce in large food-safe plastic bag; turn steaks to coat. Close bag securely and marinate in refrigerator 30 minutes or up to 2 hours.

2. Pull back husks from corn leaving husks attached to base. Remove corn silk. Fold husks back around corn; tie with string or strip from one of the husks. Soak corn in cold water 30 minutes or several hours before grilling.

3.Remove steaks from marinade; discard marinade. Remove corn from water. Place corn on grid over medium, ash-covered coals. Grill corn, uncovered, 20 to 30 minutes or until tender, turning occasionally. Grill steaks 10 to 12 minutes (ribeye steaks 6 to 8 minutes) for medium rare to medium doneness, turning occasionally. Season with salt, as desired.

4. Heat reserved 1 cup sauce until warm; serve with steaks and corn or use to prepare Sassy Beans.

Makes 6 servings.

Cook's Tip: For Sassy Beans, combine 2 cans (15 ounces each) pinto beans, drained and rinsed, with reserved sauce. Cook, covered, over medium heat until warm, about 8 minutes.

Makes 3 cups.

STEAKHOUSE POTATO SALAD

Total preparation and cooking time: 40 minutes
Marinating time: 6 hours or overnight

1 beef top round steak or 2 chuck shouder steaks, cut 1 inch thick, about 1-1/2 pounds
3/4 cup steakhouse steak marinade, divided
12 small new red potatoes, halved (about 1 pound)
4 tablespoons olive oil, divided
1 package (10 ounces) mixed Italian salad greens
1 cup red or yellow cherry tomatoes, halved
Crumbled blue cheese or feta cheese (optional)

1. Place steak and 1/2 cup marinade in large food-safe plastic bag. Close bag securely and marinate in refrigerator 6 hours or overnight, if desired.

2. Thread potatoes onto four 12-inch metal skewers, leaving a small space between pieces. Brush with 1 tablespoon oil.

3. Remove steak from marinade; discard marinade. Place steak on grid over medium, ash-covered coals; arrange potato skewers around steak. Grill steak, uncovered, 16 to 18 minutes (chuck shoulder steaks 16 to 20 minutes) for medium rare to medium doneness, turning occasionally. Grill potatoes 25 to 30 minutes or until tender, turning occasionally. Season with salt, as desired. Let steak stand 10 minutes.

4. Meanwhile combine remaining 1/4 cup marinade and 3 tablespoons oil. Carve steak into thin slices. Combine steak, potatoes, salad greens, tomatoes and marinade mixture; toss gently to coat. Sprinkle with cheese, if desired.

Makes 6 servings.

Add pizzazz

A.1. Steak Sauce is famous for adding that tangy, one-of-a-kind steakhouse flavor to burgers and steaks. Serve it on the side, or add an extra ingredient or two to make a flavorful basting sauce. For best results, baste during the last few minutes of grilling. Try these easy combinations.

- Thai-Style—add sesame oil and peanut butter.
- Citrus—add lemon, lime or orange juice.
- Zesty—add sautéed chopped onion and salsa.

Marinades come in several flavors, ready to add special taste to steaks after marinating as little as 30 minutes.

Hickory marinade imparts a bold taste of hickory smoke in tandem with the tangy flavor of steak sauce. Classic Steakhouse does what the name says — it provides steakhouse flavor in every bite.

Use these versatile marinades as a time-saving jump-start to other delicious marinades, even salad dressings, sauces or sandwich spreads. Add herbs, green onions, salsa, vegetable oil, citrus juices, minced garlic, soft cream cheese, sour cream, chopped fresh tomatoes, soy sauce or other favorite ingredients.

Beef basics

- Always marinate in the refrigerator, never at room temperature. Never save and reuse a marinade that has been in contact with raw meat.
- Use medium temperature coals (or the equivalent on an electric or gas grill). If the grill is too hot, beef can char on the outside before the inside is cooked to the desired doneness.
- To determine doneness, insert an instant-read thermometer into the steak or burger near the end of cooking time; check the temperature.
- Cook burgers to medium (160 degrees) doneness or until the centers are no longer pink and the juices show no pink color.
- Cook steaks to an internal temperature of at least medium rare (145 degrees) doneness. To visually check the doneness of a boneless steak, make a small cut near the center of the steak and check the color. For bone-in steaks, make a small cut near the bone. At medium rare, the center is very pink, turning slightly brown toward the outside portion.
- Refrigerate leftovers (or put in a cooler with ice packs) promptly after serving, within two hours of cooking or less time if outdoors. If in doubt, throw it out.

Set the table with star shapes for the Fourth

By The Associated Press

No reason why food can't add a festive air for the Fourth. Red, white and blue stripes may be a little tricky to reproduce in holiday cooking, but it's relatively easy to put stars on party plates.

Many favorite foods can be fixed in star shapes and will perhaps even taste better because you'll smile as you munch.

Get your hands on whatever star-shaped cutters and pans you can find, or improvise with a knife, exercise cutting skills and some deft shaping of malleable edibles on a flat wood board. Colored sugars and icing, and food coloring, plus a few little paper flags can make toppings.

■ For a hearty first course, add grated cheese, to taste, to hot-roll mix and bake star-shaped buns. Split and fill buns with burgers made of ground chuck seasoned with salsa and baked in star molds for 15 to 20 minutes in 350 F oven.

■ For a potato-salad side-dish you can prepare ahead of time, add red pepper, radishes and corn to a potato-mayonnaise mixture and pile into a star shape.

■ For a simple make-ahead dessert course, top meringue stars with blueberries, red raspberries and whipped cream.

■ Make a fruit cobbler, mixing strawberries and blueberries, or other seasonal fruits, with pastry star cutouts on top.

■ Decorate brownie cup cakes with cream cheese and colored-icing stars.

■ For fruit kabobs, thread star cutouts of fruits and cheeses on skewers.

■ Make white chocolate mousse or cheese cake stars in star molds, top with raspberries and blueberries.

Uncle Sam's Potato Salad, front, and star-shaped burgers, right rear, with starry fruit meringues as dessert, are bright choices for a Fourth of July meal.

UNCLE SAM'S POTATO SALAD

1 cup low-fat mayonnaise
1 cup light sour cream
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
1 tablespoon lemon juice
3 1/2 pounds petite red potatoes, unpeeled
1/3 cup chopped red pepper
2 green onions, finely chopped
1 fresh ear corn or 1 package (10 ounces) frozen corn, thawed, drained
1/3 cup radishes, sliced
3 ribs celery, coarsely chopped
2 1/4-ounce can black olives, sliced
4 tablespoons parsley, chopped
1 tablespoon salt
1/2 teaspoon seasoned salt
1/2 teaspoon black pepper
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder

In small bowl, whisk together mayonnaise, sour cream, mustard and lemon juice to make dressing. Set aside.

Lightly spray star-shaped pan with vegetable spray. Line with plastic wrap.

Boil potatoes in skins until tender. Cool then cube potatoes. Combine potatoes, red peppers, green onions, corn, radishes, celery, olives, parsley, seasoned salt, pepper and garlic powder in large bowl. Gently stir in dressing. Adjust seasoning, if needed. Place potato salad in prepared pan. Pack down. Cover with plastic wrap. Refrigerate several hours or overnight.

Unmold to serve.

Note: Best when made a day in advance. (Recipe from Wilton Industries.)

STAR SPANGLED BERRY COBBLER

(Preparation 20 minutes, cooking time 40 minutes)

Nonstick cooking spray
3 cups (about 1 pound) halved stemmed strawberries
2 cups (about 12 ounces) blueberries
1/2 cup plus 1 tablespoon sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons butter, cut into small pieces
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 sheet frozen puff pastry (1/2 of 17.3-ounce package), thawed
Vanilla ice cream (optional)

Preheat oven to 400 F. Lightly coat 8-inch-square baking dish with cooking spray; set aside.

In large bowl, combine strawberries, blueberries, 1/2 cup sugar, cornstarch, butter, lemon juice and cinnamon, tossing to mix well. Arrange in baking dish; set aside.

Unfold pastry sheet. Using 3-inch star cutter, cut out 9 stars. Arrange over fruit mixture; sprinkle with remaining 1 tablespoon sugar. Bake 35 to 40 minutes or until filling is bubbly and stars are lightly browned. Serve warm or at room temperature with ice cream, if desired.

Makes 8 servings.

Fourth of July Ice Cream Tower is sweet salute to flag

By The Associated Press

Many Fourth of July celebrations feature the flag, blowing in the breeze from porches, printed on clothing, flying from bikes and borne aloft in parades.

A dessert of stars served on stripes, made with berries, cake and ice cream, should inspire happily patriotic reactions. Fourth of July Ice Cream Tower is cooling, sounds richly decadent and, best of all, is simple to make.

The marionberries suggested as an ingredient in this recipe are a high-quality kind of blackberries; you can substitute regular blackberries with good result. Equipment you should have at hand includes a 3- or 4-inch star-shaped cookie cutter, jellyroll pan (or disposable aluminum baking sheet), plastic squirt bottle, mesh sieve or food mill, food processor and 2 cookie sheets.

FOURTH OF JULY ICE CREAM TOWER

7 cups fresh or frozen red raspberries (thaw frozen berries)
5 cups fresh or frozen marionberries or any other blackberries (thaw frozen berries)
2 gallons vanilla ice cream, softened
Red food coloring (optional)
1/2 cup heavy cream
Purchased angel-food cake (any shape, standard size)
Marionberries, red raspberries and red currants for garnish
(other blackberries may always be substituted for marionberries)

To make red-raspberry ice cream:

Puree red raspberries in a food processor, and strain through a fine sieve or grind berries in a food mill to make puree. Reserve 1 cup puree and put in squirt bottle. Mix remaining puree with softened ice cream in a food processor. You may wish to use a few drops of red food coloring when mixing to increase the coloration of the ice cream (optional).

Pour ice cream-puree mix in a jellyroll-type pan (disposable aluminum baking sheets work well) as deep as the cookie cutter. Freeze for 6 hours or overnight.

To make marionberry ice cream:

Proceed as in above recipe substituting 5 cups of marionberries, fresh or frozen. It is not necessary to reserve any of this puree, and food coloring will not be needed.

Cutting star shapes:

Cover two cookie sheets with wax paper, wrapping ends underneath. Pre-cool in freezer for 20 to 30 minutes. Place star-shaped cookie cutters in warm water. Remove ice cream-filled jellyroll pans from freezer one at a time, only as using.

Remove cutter from warm water, shake off excess water, and working quickly depress cutter into ice cream, carefully sliding up to unmold. Use spatula to place ice-cream cutouts on pre-chilled cookie sheets, cover with a sheet of wax paper and return to freezer for 20 minutes or up to 24 hours. Repeat, to cut out all star shapes.

When ready to serve:

Slice angel-food cake in slices as deep as the cookie cutter you are using. Cut star shapes out of angel-food cake. Spoon a pool of heavy cream on each serving plate. Using red-raspberry puree in squirt bottle, draw wavy red lines across plate, and through cream.

Take ice-cream stars from freezer and stack one marionberry star, one angel-food cake star and one red-raspberry star on prepared plate, being careful not to disturb red lines. Garnish with berries and currants. Serve immediately. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Museum to add hands-on roller coaster exhibit

From Staff Reports

HOT SPRINGS NATIONAL PARK, Ark. — G-forces will grab your attention this summer as the Mid America Science Museum in Hot Springs presents "Scream Machines: The Science of Roller Coasters."

"Scream Machines," which gives an actual demonstration of the G-forces and thrills associated with riding a roller coaster, runs through Labor Day.

"'Scream Machines' is a combination of thrilling hands-on fun and a learning experience that exemplifies what Mid America Museum is all about," said Glenda Eshenroder, the Museum's director. "Large-scale components such at The Revolver duplicate the forces that act on your body to make riding a roller coaster such a thrilling experience."

"Scream Machines" is interactive exhibits and hands-on demonstrations, including:

■ G-Force: a bicycle set inside an 18-foot-tall loop that leaves visitors pedaling upside-down while experiencing astronaut G-force levels.

■ The Revolver: visitors feel what it's like when a roller coaster hits a curve, but their bodies seek to keep moving forward in a straight line.

■ Ride the Great Ones: visitors have the heart-pounding illusion of actually riding the world's most terrifying and famous roller coasters.

■ Build Your Own: an exhibit that lets visitors build their own scale-model roller coaster and see how the laws of science govern how real "Scream Machines" operate.

For more information, call Mid America Science Museum at 501-767-3461 or 800-632-0583 or visit www.midamericamuseum.com.

DEAR ABBY

New neighbor's modesty raises temperature of hot tub guests

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: We installed a hot tub several years ago. We are always naked when we use it. However, when we entertain guests, we let them know in advance that it is their choice whether to wear bathing suits or not. If they opt to wear suits, we ask if they care if we or other guests are naked. Most guests opt to soak in the nude; those who don't have any problem with others being naked.

Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

Recently we invited new neighbors to our house for a welcoming party with other neighbors. They informed us they would be uncomfortable if other guests were nude. We have no problem with this — after all, we have plenty of opportunity to enjoy our spa naked — but some of our neighbors did. They felt put out that after years spent enjoying our hot tub in the buff, they now had to cover up.

This has created dissension in the neighborhood, and our efforts to be respectful of others is backfiring. Have you any suggestions on how we can resolve this? — DOIN' WHAT COMES NATURALLY

DEAR DOIN': Yes. Don't let your straitlaced new neighbors throw cold water on your hot tub tradition. Entertain them separately so your less-inhibited neighbors can enjoy all the therapeutic benefits of soaking in their birthday suits without anyone pointing fingers. I'm sure everyone would prefer it.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I moved into a new house with our son about six months ago. After we moved, we realized we needed to set some house rules. One of them has to do with overnight guests.

The rule is simple: If a family member or friend asks to spend the night, each of us must check with the others before agreeing. We do this in case there is a conflict and out of respect for each other.

Last week, my sister, "Lisa," who lives out of town, called to ask me if she could spend the night. I told her I needed to check with my wife and son, but I didn't think it would be a problem. Lisa was appalled and insulted that I would have to check with my wife and son before "allowing" her to stay. In her wildest dreams, she couldn't imagine ever having to check with her husband and kids. After she hung up, she told a bunch of her friends about it. She told me they, too, were flabbergasted that I would say such a thing to my sister.

Abby, my wife, son and I have had no conflicts since we established that rule. Should I have gone ahead and told Lisa it was OK to stay without checking first? (By the way, my wife and son had no problem with my sister staying with us.) — LITTLE BRO IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR LITTLE BRO: No. You did the right thing. Your marriage is a true partnership, and you're teaching your son consideration for others. There would be far less conflict in most families if more people communicated as effectively as you do. Your sister owes all of you an apology.

DEAR ABBY: I live in a four-unit apartment complex in a lovely neighborhood. A young couple occupies the unit directly above mine. Although the apartments provide some privacy, I have a hard time ignoring the couple upstairs when they reach the highest peak of their passion.

Is there a subtle way to let them know I can hear their most intimate moments without embarrassing them — or me? — SLEEP-DEPRIVED IN SCHENECTADY, N.Y.

DEAR SLEEP-DEPRIVED: The next time it happens, consider dropping a subtle hint. Play "Love Is a Many-Splendored Thing" on your stereo and turn up the volume. It may not work the first time, but after a while they'll get the message.

Dear Abby is written by Pauline Phillips, aka Abigail Van Buren, and daughter Jeanne Phillips. Their column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

One name dominates draft talk: Jordan

■ Michael Jordan's Wizards hold all the cards in NBA draft with first overall selection.

By Jim O'Connell
AP Basketball Writer

NEW YORK — As 14 of the players expected to be among the first taken in Wednesday night's NBA draft gathered in a hotel ballroom, one name dominated the conversations.

Whether it was the high school stars who would soon be millionaires or the few upperclassmen set to round out the lottery, Michael Jordan was talked about for a lot of reasons.

As the man who runs the Washington Wizards, the team with the overall No. 1 pick, Jordan will get the draft started at Madison Square Garden with either a selection or a trade.

Most of the players the NBA invited to be at the draft have worked out for Jordan and it seems, until their name is called, that would lead the list of personal highlights.

"We talked for a while," 7-foot Tyson Chandler of Compton, Calif., one of six high school seniors available in the draft, said Tuesday. "The workout was really good. It went really well."

Then Chandler was asked about what it would be like if Jordan were to make a comeback and play again in the NBA.

"That would be a dream for any player of any age," he said. "If he came back it would be a great opportunity for whoever they draft."

Kwame Brown, a 6-11 center from Brunswick, Ga., started talking about his workout for Jordan in a businesslike tone, then started sounding more like a 19-year-old.

"Everybody knew what it was for so we came in and played," Brown said. "He was really good, though. He joked around a lot. Even though he wasn't on the court with us, he still had an impact."

Each of the players said they would love to play with Jordan, but they also said they would want to play for him as well.

"Michael Jordan is the greatest player to ever play the game," said Charlotte freshman Rodney White. "If you can't learn from him, who can you learn from?"

Jordan hasn't given any indication of his plans for the No. 1 pick. No high school player ever has been the overall No. 1, with Darius Miles' selection at No. 3 last year by the Los Angeles Clippers the highest one has gone.

Notre Dame junior Troy Murphy has heard the rumors that the Wizards may trade down to get more immediate help and that the two-time Big East player of the year might be the one Jordan would then choose.

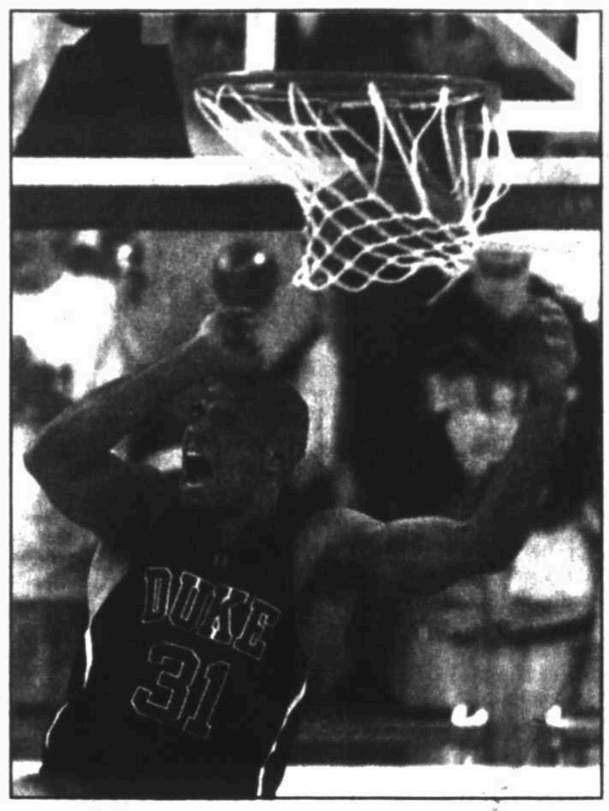

"That would be an honor, definitely," Murphy said. "Just to be the guy drafted by the greatest player would be great but if he went out of his way to get you it would be something to tell for years to come."

And what about the chance to play with him? "That would be even better," Murphy said.

The Clippers have the second choice, followed in the top 10 by Atlanta, Chicago, Golden State, Vancouver, New Jersey, Cleveland, Detroit and Boston, which also holds the 11th and 21st picks.

With the draft less than 24 hours, away there were plenty of scenarios for who would be going where.

"I thought I would know by now," Seton Hall freshman Eddie Griffin said. "I don't even think any of the teams know yet. This is a deep draft with a lot of players the same. All I know is it will make it real hard to sleep tonight."

Duke's Shane Battier reacts as he scores two of his 34 points in Duke's win over Georgia Tech in this file photo. Battier is a possible first round pick in the NBA Draft.

Williams, Agassi, Davenport avoid 2nd round upsets

By Howard Ulman
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Venus Williams began defense of her Wimbledon title Tuesday with her first win in more than a month as order returned after Martina Hingis' startling opening-day loss.

Lindsay Davenport, Andre Agassi, Pat Rafter and Lleyton Hewitt advanced with straight-set victories. Last year's surprise semifinalist, Vladimir Voltchkov of Belarus, was eliminated.

The performances of Williams and Davenport also signaled a return to form at the tradition-bound All England Club. They're the last two Wimbledon champions but neither has had an outstanding year.

Williams, who won Wimbledon and the U.S. Open last year, is playing in only her eighth tournament this year. She won two of them but lost her last match before Tuesday, in the first round of the French Open on May 28.

"I don't think I'll ever get over it," she said. "I don't think I worked hard enough. I deserve to be in this position but it's OK. I'm not doing that bad."

Neither is Davenport, who missed three months of competition, including the French Open with a bruised right knee. She returned as a champion, winning the Eastbourne tuneup for Wimbledon last Saturday, then won an unexciting match Tuesday and said her knee was fine.

"I was so nervous before I played because I just want to do so well here," she said. "It's always been tough for me the first round or two in Grand Slams. Things normally turn around."

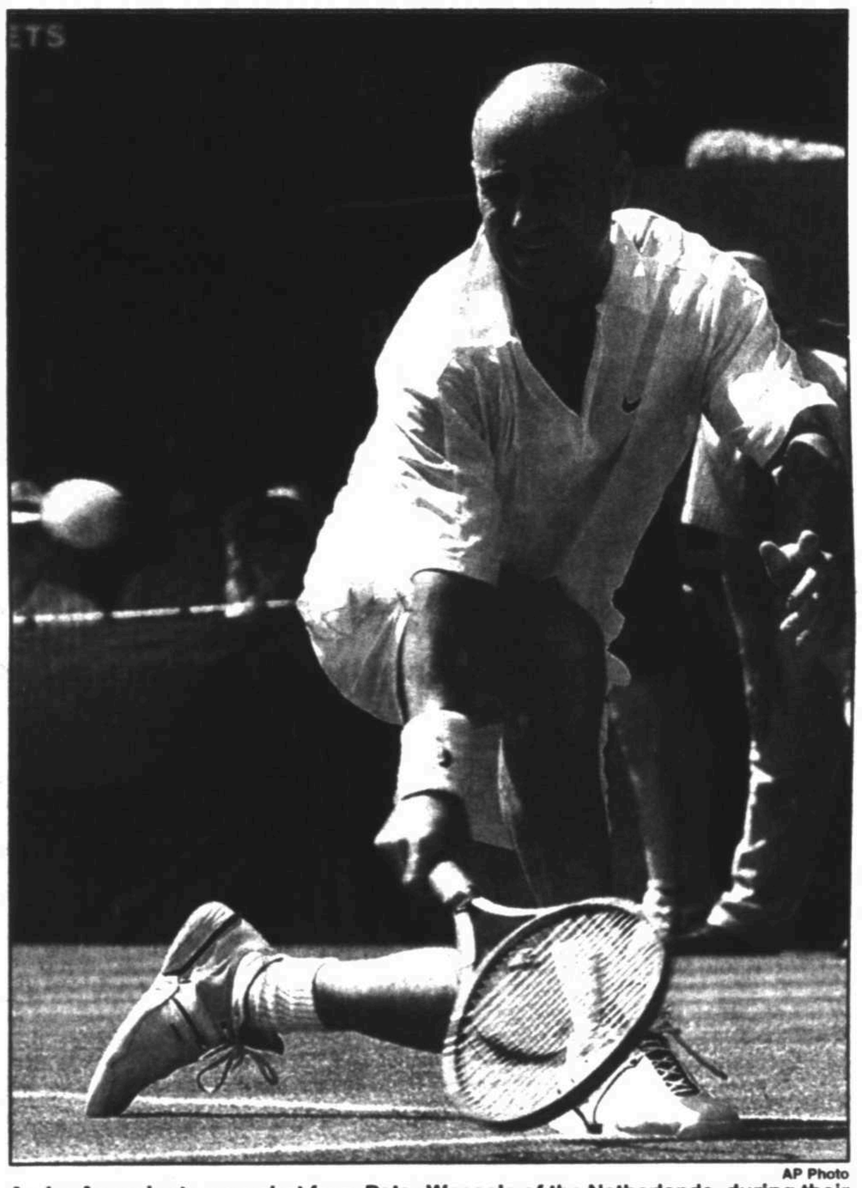

Davenport, seeded third, beat Martina Sucha of Slovakia 6-3, 6-3, while Williams, seeded second eliminated Shinobu Asagoe of Japan 6-2, 6-3. Capriati, seeded fourth, and Serena Williams, seeded fifth, advanced Monday.

That's when Hingis lost to the world's 83rd-ranked player, Virginia Ruano Pascual of Spain 6-4, 6-2. Hingis said later she was slowed by tendinitis in her lower back, her first mention of the ailment.

That loss improved Capriati's chances of getting three-quarters of the way to the Grand Slam. She's already won the Australian Open and French Open. The U.S. Open begins in late August.

Capriati "has the best results, so you'd have to say that she's doing the best,"

Agassi in search for another Grand Slam run

By Robert Millward
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Andre Agassi is in the mood to start his Grand Slam sequence all over again.

He began his run of Grand Slam titles at Wimbledon nine years ago. He won another six at the Australian, U.S. and French Opens.

If Agassi's opening match is anything to go by, he could again find himself on Centre Court come the final.

That he will not have to meet seven-time champion Pete Sampras along the way makes matters only easier. And a couple of expected opponents already are out of the field.

Agassi, seeded second, scored a 7-6 (1), 6-4, 6-4 victory over one of the tournament's dangerous floaters, Peter Wessels. The Dutchman had beaten Marat Safin and Pat Rafter in Wimbledon tuneups.

But Agassi blunted his serve and then imposed his own game to move smoothly into the second round.

"It's a tough opponent to have," Agassi said. "He was serving, I believe, 85 percent first serves going into the tiebreaker. But I served well. I took care of my serve today and I was executing my shots."

Agassi's first Grand Slam championship came at Wimbledon in 1992. He has since won three times at the Australian Open, including this year, twice at the U.S. Open and once at the French Open.

Although at 31 his age could be working against him, Agassi has no plans to stop playing.

"I suppose every athlete has their own ideas as to how they see their career ending," he said. "For me, I don't know

Mavs' Nelson looks forward to quiet draft

By Joel Anderson
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Although Don Nelson insists he won't be up to his usual draft-day craziness Wednesday, the Dallas Mavericks' coach and general manager is saying little else about his plans for the 44th and 54th picks.

"Well, it's really no one's business," Nelson said.

Maybe Nelson is pleased with the core of a roster that won 53 regular-season games and upset the Utah Jazz in the first round of the playoffs.

Or maybe he's still itching to make a deal, as he's done the previous four years he's run Dallas' draft.

Last year, the Mavericks entered the draft armed with the 12th overall pick, the second pick of the second round and the last pick of the two-round draft.

Although they took Etan Thomas, Dan Langhi and Pete Mickeal, swaps with Orlando, New York and Houston produced a rookie class of Thomas, Courtney Alexander, Eduardo Najera and Donnell Harvey. In the process, Dallas also gave up this year's top pick, which would've been No. 23.

Alexander and Thomas were traded in midseason to Washington along with three veterans in the deal that yielded Juwan Howard, Obinna Ekezie and Calvin Booth. That left Najera, a spot starter last season, and Harvey, who rarely played, the only remainders from last year's busy draft day.

Spurs look toward future in draft picks

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — For the San Antonio Spurs, the tension likely will mount as July 18 draws closer.

With the 28th, 55th and 57th picks in Wednesday night's NBA draft, the Spurs probably won't be pulled to the edge of their chairs.

"The 28th player in the draft is historically not someone who comes in and makes a big difference," coach Gregg Popovich said. "We're looking for somebody that down the road could be a player on our basketball team."

However, the Spurs may feel a little jittery in the next couple of weeks; free agents can sign with any team beginning July 18.

The Spurs, who had an NBA-best 58 wins last season but were swept by the Los Angeles Lakers in the Western Conference finals, are expected to work hard to re-sign Derek Anderson, a shooting guard who brought athleticism and quickness when he joined the team a year ago.

David Robinson, who is a free agent after 12 years with San Antonio, reportedly may have to take a pay cut from last season's $14.7 million to free up salary-cap room for Anderson.

The fourth-year guard, who was San Antonio's second-leading scorer during the regular season, signed last summer for the $2.25 million exception. The Spurs may offer him a multiyear deal worth about $5 million to $7 million a year.

Rockets look to deal with three first round choices

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — This much is certain: the Houston Rockets have three first round picks in Wednesday's NBA draft and they want to trade for a higher pick.

After that, there's not much that general manager Carroll Dawson is ruling out as the Rockets, once a playoff fixture, try to get back to championship caliber.

"We started right away as we do every year (looking for trades) but there's more to talk about this year because we have more ammunition," Dawson said. "With three first round picks, you don't get the door slammed in your face as quickly."

The Rockets have the No. 13, No. 18 and No. 23 picks in the draft but they'd like to package one or more picks in a deal that would give them a selection higher than No. 13.

"I think this is one of those drafts where you can look back in five years and a good number of these guys will still be on rosters," coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "We are looking for guys to fit our system and also we've got to look at size. I think we are one of the smaller teams in the league."

The Rockets are looking for a forward to complement their guard tandem of Steve Francis and Cuttino Mobley.

"If we keep the three picks, we hope to get a blend of those needs," Tomjanovich said.

Keeping the picks wouldn't be too bad in Dawson's opinion.

"You don't see drafts this deep too often," Dawson said. "In past years, we might not want the three picks. This year we're comfortable with all three."

Bourque retires as Stanley Cup champion

By John Mossman
AP Sports Writer

DENVER — For 22 seasons, Ray Bourque performed like few others on the ice. On Tuesday, he showed he knew how to make a grand exit, too.

Bourque announced his retirement 17 days after hoisting the Stanley Cup with tears streaming down his face.

Bourque's pursuit of the elusive cup made him a sentimental favorite in this year's playoffs.

"It took a long time, but the timing was perfect," he said. "For me, this is a pretty neat finish. It means I retire as a champion."

Bourque

An emotional Bourque dabbed at his eyes and choked back tears several times at a news conference.

"Many of you have asked why I am retiring at a time when I am still playing pretty well," Bourque said.

"By far the most important factor is my desire to be around my children," said the father of three.

"Frankly, I also have had a strong commitment to myself never to stay too long in the game. Also, we are still on cloud nine having won the Stanley Cup and having achieved that goal kind of rounds out my career.

"It's been a wonderful, happy, terrific 22 years."

Bourque, 40, the highest-scoring defenseman in HNL history, was a five-time winner of the Norris Trophy as the league's best defenseman and played in a record 19 consecutive All-Star games.

Nix makes All-Star team

SAVANNAH, Ga. — Former Midland High graduate Laynce Nix recently played in the Class A South Atlantic League All-Star game in Hickory, N.C.

Nix was selected to the South team as an outfielder representing the Savannah Sand Gnats, which is a farm team of the Texas Rangers. Nix was 0-for-4 in the All-Star game that was played on June 19 while playing for the Southern Division squad. The South beat the North by a 5-2 margin.

Nix is in his second year as a professional player. He played last summer in the Gulf Coast League.

Through his first 52 games this season, Nix was batting .299 with 61 hits in 204 at-bats. He had scored 29 runs and had driven in 29 runs with four home runs. Nix had only two errors and stole four bases.

MHS seniors play in Classic

Matt Bose and Madison Edwards, both members of Midland High's state championship baseball team, recently played for Texas in the Sun Belt Classic in Oklahoma.

Texas won that tournament with victories against Oklahoma, California, Georgia, Florida and Ohio.

The Sun Belt Classic is for outstanding seniors from around the nation. Bose and Edwards were the only Permian Basin players selected to play for the Texas team.

Rockets down Odessa Cats

The West Texas Rocket Baseball Academy 15-U defeated the Odessa Cats in a doubleheader with 7-4, 7-0 wins.

Mark Shatzer took the win in the first game and Erik Paulson struck out 12 batters while giving up only three hits in the second game. Jacob Baccus and Josh Wilson both had doubles and had two hits each.

Locals win bicycle race

VENUS — Midland's Ken Pittaway and Kelly Brown won the Texas State Bicycle Championship Time Trial, tandem division on Sunday.

They posted a time of 54:08 for the 40 kilometer course, averaging 27.5 miles per hour.

Pittaway placed second in the individual time trial for men's age group 50-54 over the same course in a time of 58:31.

Blalock hits for cycle as Drillers defeat 'Hounds

Staff Report

TULSA — Hank Blalock hit for the cycle at Drillers Stadium Tuesday night to propel the Tulsa Drillers to an 8-1 victory over the Midland RockHounds.

Blalock, playing in only his sixth Double-A game, hit a three-run homer in the first inning to start his cycle bid. He then had a leadoff triple in the fifth and a run scoring single in the sixth. The cycle clincher was a double to right in the eighth.

It was the first cycle by a Tulsa player at Drillers Stadium in the 25-year franchise history.

Blalock was directly involved in seven of the eight Driller runs.

Midland was held to just three hits, scoring only in the fourth inning when Oscar Salazar scored from third base on a ground out by Ryan Ludwick.

Tulsa starter Colby Lewis (4-3) got the win and had 11 of the Drillers' 15 strikeouts against Midland.

Esteban German saw his 15-game hitting streak come to an end, but he did have a walk. German has now reached base safely in 37 consecutive games. Brian Luderer got a single to extend his hitting streak to 10 games.

Justin Lehr (9-5) took the loss for Midland.

The Drillers have now won two in a row over the RockHounds as Midland falls to 3-3 in the young second half Texas League race.

A crowd of 8,280 watched the Tuesday night contest. The Drillers, who had 13 hits on Tuesday, now have 28 hits in two games against Midland.

The two teams play again today at 7:30 p.m.

Ford Motor Co. donates $5 million for Muhammad Ali Center to promote peace

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Muhammad Ali's quest to build a center to promote peace accelerated Tuesday with a $5 million donation from Ford Motor Co., one that has organizers envisioning the start of construction.

The automaker's gift, the largest private donation yet for the Muhammad Ali Center, pushes fund raising to the point that "we can see ground breaking right around the corner," said Ali's wife, Lonnie.

So far, $32 million has been raised and organizers say $60 million is needed to start construction. They also need to raise another $20 million for operating costs. They hope to break ground early next year and open in late 2003.

The former three-time heavyweight champion envisions the center as a crowning achievement to his humanitarian efforts around the world.

Lonnie Ali, speaking on her husband's behalf, said the center would continue the former heavyweight champion's humanitarian ideals.

"We know Muhammad will not be able to travel and work as he does forever," Lonnie Ali said. "But we believe that his legacy must continue to inspire people to respond to each other with kindness."

The center will commemorate Ali's boxing career but will emphasize his philosophy, not his achievements in the ring, his wife said.

"It is about values, it's about faith in oneself, it's about recognizing a common good, about sharing our strengths and our experiences with one another," Lonnie Ali said. "Hopefully, by teaching our children these values, conflict will be diminished and peace will describe where we are, not where we hope to be."

The center, in partnership with the University of Louisville, will feature an institute aimed at conflict resolution.

Ali, who has Parkinson's disease, did not speak at the announcement but was the center of attention. After posing with Ford officials and his wife while holding an oversized check, Ali tucked the check under his arms and began to walk from the stage, drawing laughter from the crowd gathered near the waterfront.

Janet Mullins Grissom, vice president of Washington Affairs at Ford, called Ali a "tireless crusader for right and for good" and said the center could become "a powerful instrument" to improve society.

The contribution comes from the Ford Motor Co. Fund, a not-for-profit corporation that supports initiatives to enhance education, the environment, health and welfare, civic affairs, and arts and humanities.

Ford has two production plants in greater Louisville and employs about 10,000 people.

Before Ford's donation, the largest private contribution had been about $4 million from an anonymous donor.

Relievers must play beat the clock

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Relief pitchers are playing a new game: Beat the clock.

In a move that could spark more John Rocker-like sprints to the mound from bullpens, baseball has instituted a two-minute limit on warmup tosses when relievers come in during an inning.

Pitchers are limited to eight warmup tosses at the start of an inning or when they relieve, with several exceptions: the first inning, if they replaced an injured pitcher and following a rain delay.

At the start of an inning, the warmup limit is 1:40, unless the game is on national television, in which case they get two minutes.

Ralph Nelson, vice president of umpires in the commissioner's office, said the move to rush relievers was made as part of baseball's renewed effort to speed games. Thus far, the average time of a nine-inning game is 2:55 this season, down just two minutes from last year.

MAVS: Team needs low-post bulk

(From 1C)

"Now we're trying to get older," Nelson said. "We got a little taste of the playoffs and want to go back. You don't become a better team by getting younger."

NBA scouting director Marty Blake said the Mavs can still find a prospect or two with their late picks.

"This is the deepest draft that I've ever seen," Blake said. "For a team like Dallas, they could take a guy and develop his talent."

Even if Nelson trades up, he'd only be after bench help. Dallas could use more low-post bulk and a consistent outside shooter, skills he's more likely to address through free agency.

"It's the second round," Nelson said. "We have no idea who will be available when we're picking. You can't be specific when you're picking that low."

SPURS: Elliott, Johnson are free agents

(From 1C)

Sean Elliott and Avery Johnson, who complemented Robinson and fellow All-Star Tim Duncan when the Spurs won the 1999 NBA championship, are also free agents.

Elliott has hinted he may retire.

The 33-year-old forward, a key to the title two years ago, came back in March 2000 after a kidney transplant but was plagued by a knee injury this year.

"You look at all the possibilities," Popovich said. "With him being on your team, not being on your team. You're forced to do that. Free agency forces you to do that."

Starting forward Danny Ferry, who played 10 seasons with the Cleveland Cavaliers before joining the Spurs last summer, is also a free agent.

ROCKETS: More roster work to be done

(From 1C)

The Rockets could end up wheeling and dealing as they did with their two picks last season.

The Rockets drafted Joel Przybilla of Minnesota in the first round last year and traded him to Milwaukee for Jason Collier of Georgia Tech. They picked Eduardo Najera of Oklahoma in the second round and traded him to Dallas for Dan Langhi of Vanderbilt.

Dawson has been getting calls from teams with lower picks, trying to move up in the draft.

"We're trying to go the other direction," Dawson said. "We want to come up and we're getting a million calls from people wanting our 23rd and 18th picks. This is the busiest we have ever been that I can remember."

When the Rockets finish with the draft, they still have more roster work.

The Rockets have six free agents, including future Hall of Famer Hakeem Olajuwon, 37, who plans to play next season and might return to the team, if it can fit him under its adjusted salary cap.

Forward Maurice Taylor, also is a free agent and likely would seek work elsewhere if the Rockets are successful in the bidding for forward Chris Webber. Other free agent Rockets are Shandon Anderson, Matt Bullard, Moochie Norris and Sean Colson.

The Rockets were the first team to miss the playoffs with 45 victories since the NBA expanded to a 16-team playoff format in 1983-84.

The off-season has been a tough one for Dawson and Tomjanovich, both trying to figure all the angles.

"There are a lot of options out there and I wish it wasn't that way," Dawson said. "We wouldn't look like this (sleepy). I don't think we've slept in a week. If it would stay the same, we could leave. But everyday we come in and everything is different."

Knight's potential lawsuit against Indiana University likely on hold for a few months

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech coach Bob Knight and Indiana University officials likely will meet to discuss a settlement, putting a potential lawsuit against the university on hold for a few months, attorney Russell Yates said Tuesday.

A letter from Yates, Knight's attorney, to IU in March said Knight was wrongfully terminated from the school in September and claimed more than $7 million in damages. IU officials have failed to respond to Knight's notice of intent to sue.

IU officials have refused comment, citing policy not to comment on pending legal matters.

Yates, a longtime friend of the coach, has said he would prefer an out-of-court settlement to legal action. Yates previously said the "only option" would be a lawsuit if IU officials continue to refuse negotiations.

"It'll probably be another couple of months," Yates told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal in its Tuesday editions. "We'll give them a little more time to negotiate. If they don't negotiate, we'll go from there. We've still got plenty of time. We've got another year and a half to sue them."

Knight's claims against IU, President Myles Brand, and the IU board of trustees include violation of the Indiana open door law, slander and libel.

Brand fired Knight for violating a so-called "zero-tolerance" behavior policy at IU.

"(A lawsuit) would be the only option, unless it goes away," Yates said.

Commission proposes limits on college sports

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Colleges with low athlete graduation rates should be banned from postseason play, a commission said Tuesday in chiding universities for an emphasis on winning.

Player uniforms also would be stripped of corporate logos and a new coalition created to promote tougher academic standards under the plan by the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics.

"We're not in the entertainment business, nor are we a minor league for professional sports," said the Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, president emeritus of Notre Dame and commission co-chairman.

About 42 percent of men's basketball players and 48 percent of football players graduate from the major universities, according to the latest NCAA statistics. The rate is lower for the 114 largest basketball programs, 34 percent.

The commission wants colleges to graduate at least half the students who play in each sport. Teams with rates lower than that would be barred from conference championships and other postseason games.

The plan was released one day before the NBA draft. Several of the top prospects are high school graduates who opted to skip college.

AGASSI: Next match is with Delgado

(From 1C)

how my career's going to end or when it's going to end.

"I can say I hope it ends at the time when I just can't do it any more, can't win any more. I hope it happens no later and no sooner than that."

It doesn't look like that will happen at this Wimbledon.

He made a tough opening match look easy, and next meets British wild card Jamie Delgado, who downed Andrei Medvedev in the first round.

Agassi's expected fourth-round opponent, 14th-seeded Wayne Ferreira, quit because of heat exhaustion while trailing by two sets and 3-0 to Andrei Stoliarov.

Also gone from his half of the draw is 17th-seeded Tommy Haas. The German pulled out because of injury while trailing Wayne Black. No. 16 Vladimir Voltchkov, who surprisingly reached the semifinals last year, was ousted by Mikhail Youzhny.

If he stays on course, Agassi could meet fifth-seeded Lleyton Hewitt in the quarterfinals. The Aussie won two grass-court tournaments leading to Wimbledon.

By that time — if he gets there — Agassi's game should be finely tuned.

On Tuesday, he blasted trademark winners from the baseline and unleashed a rock-solid serve. He didn't have a single break point against him. He had one game in which he served three aces, yielded just nine points on his last 10 service games and finished the match serving to love.

After the first set went with serve, Agassi raced through the tiebreaker 7-1 helped by two double faults from Wessels.

Agassi then broke in the opening game of the second set. He went up two sets up a forehand winner and virtually wrapped up the match by breaking at love for 2-1 in the third.

"I felt very clean on my groundstrokes and I made my first serve when I really needed," he said. "So I felt pretty good about it."

TENNIS: Seles, Pierce, Kournikova absent

(From 1C)

Venus said, "whereas the rest of us have been trying but it hasn't exactly happened."

The list of contenders was shortened by the absence of three players because of injuries — Monica Seles, Mary Pierce and Anna Kournikova.

But 2000 semifinalist Jelena Dokic of Yugoslavia and 2001 French Open runner-up Kim Clijsters of Belgium advanced Tuesday.

Agassi, seeded second, beat Peter Wessels of the Netherlands 7-6 (1), 6-4, 6-4 in his 200th Grand Slam match. He was runner-up in 1999, a semifinalist last year and won this year's Australian Open.

"I'm experienced enough not to get ahead of myself," he said. "At the same time, I'm still trying to make sure I step up with the same intensity. Every year, it does get harder."

He won Wimbledon in 1992 before top-seeded Pete Sampras, who won Monday, began his run of seven titles in eight years.

Rafter, seeded third, beat Daniel Vacek of the Czech Republic, 6-2, 7-6 (7), 6-3. Last year, Rafter was runner-up to Sampras despite being seeded 12th.

"Last year gave me that little bit extra confidence that I probably can do it now," the Aussie said.

Hewitt, an Australian seeded fifth, eliminated Magnus Gustafsson of Sweden 6-1, 6-2, 6-4. Voltchkov lost 6-3, 6-7 (9), 7-6 (8), 7-5 to Mikhail Youzhny of Russia.

For the second consecutive day, unseasonably steamy temperatures heated the players and spectators but there was no hint of rain that usually falls during the tournament.

Venus Williams had little trouble with either the 91-degree temperature on Centre Court or the pressure of defending the most prestigious title in tennis.

"I don't feel any pressure to defend," she said. "I'd just like to win again."

She wasted no time celebrating, breaking into a big smile even before Asagoe's final service return landed long. Her last win came in the round of 32 at the German Open in May.

If Williams was affected by not having played in nearly a month, it didn't show as she won the first three games Tuesday.

But Asagoe, ranked 62nd in the world, won the next two before Williams went ahead 5-2. Asagoe served the next game, fighting off six break points before Williams wrapped up the set with a backhand winner.

Asagoe, who lost her ninth straight opening-round match, went up 3-1 in the second set. But Williams saved three break points and held serve for 3-2, then won the last four games while dropping just four points — none in the final game.

Serena watched from the stands, at one point holding a cell phone to her ear. Their father, Richard Williams, took pictures.

Any chance of a championship match between Venus and Hingis ended with Hingis' exit.

"I think Jennifer right now is the favorite, definitely," Hingis said.

She said her own prospects dropped about a week ago when the tendinitis surfaced. Acupuncture helped, but there wasn't enough time for a full recovery.

As late as Saturday, she said, she thought about skipping the tournament but "I didn't want to miss Wimbledon."

Now, all she has to show for her shaky performance is another blemish on her Grand Slam scorecard. She hasn't won any of the last 10 events despite being seeded first in all of them.

"There are no excuses whether you're injured or not. If you step out there, you should play," Hingis said. "I was just afraid to move."

Ruano Pascual probably won't last much longer, but savored the victory that brought a wide smile to her face.

"I'm still dreaming now. It's unbelievable," she said. "I feel very comfortable today out on the court."

Talks between Saints and state break off

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Talks to keep the Saints in New Orleans broke off Tuesday, and the state's chief negotiator said the team's owner was trying to force up the price to potential buyers while threatening a move to Mississippi.

Saints owner Tom Benson countered that he was "shocked and frustrated by the allegation that the Saints acted in bad faith."

"The opposite is true," he said.

Benson and Steve Perry, Gov. Mike Foster's chief of staff, exchanged their comments hours apart following the collapse of a two-hour negotiating session aimed at keeping the Saints in New Orleans.

Perry said the Saints had not even countered the state's latest proposals and left the meeting without making any demands. Benson said the state slammed the door on the Saints, although his team had left the meeting expecting to be talking with state officials again later.

Perry said the Saints are still under contract to play in the state-owned Louisiana Superdome through 2005 — an obligation the state was willing to renegotiate as part of a sweeter deal.

"Under that strategy of walking away from us, they're walking away from $100 million here in the next few years while they're bound to play in the Dome," Perry said. "It doesn't make sense from any business point of view for this to be done unless they have an attempt to go out and try to pit suitor against suitor to try to leverage it and put it together quickly."

Benson, visibly upset and at times pounding the desk at the news conference, was flanked by photos of proposed stadiums in the New Orleans area, including one near Canal Street about 10 blocks from the Superdome, where the Saints now play.

He acknowledged that they talked about moving to Mississippi if negotiations with Louisiana did not work out. Failing that, Benson said, there was talk of selling the club.

The deal in Mississippi would include a new stadium, training facility and a sports-themed amusement park, with parking and tailgating areas, according to Jack Capella, a lawyer for the state agency that runs the Superdome. The complex would be just off Interstate 10. Five casinos would guarantee suite sales under the deal the Saints outlined, Capella said.

Moving the franchise to the Mississippi coast, where casinos have become one of the primary industries, might not be feasible, said Andrew Zimbalist, a sports economist at Smith College in Northampton, Mass.

Selling suites to casinos is one thing, but when you start depending on them for advertising and signage, will the NFL allow that?" Zimbalist said. "The NFL may have some reservations about leaving New Orleans for a gambling strip in Mississippi."

NHL: Spent 21 seasons with Boston

(From 1C)

He played for 21 seasons in Boston, but requested a trade to a contender in March 2000 in hopes of winning the Stanley Cup. He finally got it when the Colorado Avalanche beat the New Jersey Devils in Game 7 on June 9.

Although Bourque's stint in Colorado lasted just 15 months, his No. 77 jersey will be retired and will hang from the rafters of Pepsi Center, Avalanche general manager Pierre Lacroix said.

"Ray's contributions to our hockey club were tremendous and will never be forgotten," Lacroix said.

Bourque's jersey is the first to be retired in the six-year history of the Avalanche and the fifth in the history of the franchise, which originated as the Quebec Nordiques.

Despite his long career in Boston, Bourque said, "I am a Colorado Avalanche, and I am retiring as one. So it is only right that I have returned to Denver to make this announcement."

Bourque recalled reporting to the Boston Bruins' training camp in 1979, "hoping to make the big team. I was a shy, quiet kid from St. Laurent, Quebec. I believed I could play in the NHL, but you never know until you get there.

"Over 1,800 games and 22 years later, here I am having exceeded my wildest dreams. I have been honored to play with great players on terrific teams. I have been very lucky along the way. I've avoided devastating injuries. I've won a few awards. And I've capped my career by being part of a Stanley Cup-winning team."

Family matters became more important for Bourque since his trade to the Avalanche. Bourque's wife, Christiane, and their children, aged 17, 15 and 10, stayed in Boston after he was traded.

Other than spending more time with his family, Bourque said he had no immediate plans for his future.

"This summer is going to be very busy, especially with a visit from my new friend, Stanley," he said. "I've had that cup twice now with me, and next week it's going to Montreal with me.

"I suppose once I get to the fall, I'll be able to sit back and think about some business options and other opportunities."

He called winning the cup "an unbelievable feeling," but insisted he had "absolutely no regrets" about leaving the game now.

"To compete at the highest level of this game, you have to be mentally prepared every night," he said. "Honestly, that gets tougher and tougher to do after 22 seasons.

"I could have played another two or three years, but I don't think I would have played at the same level. I've always wanted to go out on my terms and playing at the level I've been accustomed to playing. There are some things you can't do anymore. You make some adjustments, but you just can't react as quick, and I knew I wasn't going to get any quicker."

Asked what he will miss most, Bourque said, "Just messing around with the guys, having fun playing a kid's game. I am 40 years old and go to the rink every day and play a game for a living. It doesn't get much better than that."

Bourque said he decided last summer that the 2000-2001 season would be his last, regardless of his team's accomplishments.

"The voice in my head kept saying the same thing. I knew I was leaving after this year. I was just hoping it could finish like this. This is the one thing I was chasing for so long and hoped I was going to be able to hoist."

Asked what legacy he hoped to leave his teammates, he said, "I think the passion and just the joy of playing the game."

Futures fall

NEW YORK — Crude oil and products futures at the New York Mercantile Exchange fell moderately Tuesday, mostly because of forecasts for further growth in inventories. With little news to react to and no real strong technical indications, trade was largely directionless, analysts said.

August crude futures fell 27 cents to settle at $26.98 a barrel.

July gasoline futures fell 1.23 cent to settle at 77.79 cents a gallon, and July heating oil subtracted .70 cent to settle at 73.19 cents a gallon.

Heating oil and gasoline, both called to show builds in weekly inventory reports, put pressure on the complex early until traders stopped to question the wide range of estimates for crude oil.

"Some are expecting a big build from the cargoes that were delayed at the Louisiana Offshore Oil Port during Tropical Storm Allison, but others are saying the LOOP has already offloaded the backed up cargoes," said Chris Schacte, an analyst with GSC Energy.

That pushed the market up in the morning. People then took profits, which led the complex lower in the afternoon, he said.

After markets closed, industry data for the week ended June 22 increased stocks of motor gasoline, crude and distillates, which include heating oil and diesel fuel.

Natural gas futures on the New York Mercantile Exchange settled at $3.3397 per 1,000 cubic feet, a decrease of 4.9 cents.

In London, Brent crude for delivery in August fell 8 cents to $26.99 a barrel.

After markets closed Tuesday, the American Petroleum Institute reported that the U.S. inventories of crude oil rose by 565,000 to 313.4 million barrels, up from a revised 312.9 million barrels last week.

Dollar mixed

LONDON — The U.S. dollar was mixed Tuesday against other major currencies in European trading.

The euro was quoted at 86.14 cents in late European trading, up from 86.04 cents Monday. Later, in midday trading in New York, the euro traded at 86.20 cents.

Other dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Monday, included 123.93 Japanese yen, up from 123.87; 1.7663 Swiss francs, up from 1.7656, and 1.5164 Canadian dollars, down from 1.5188.

The British pound was quoted at $1.4154, up from $1.4132.

In midday trading in New York, the dollar bought 123.84 Japanese yen, and the pound was worth $1.4157.

Gold higher

Gold in London traded at $274.10 per troy ounce late Tuesday, up from $273.90 Monday. In Zurich the bid price was $273.95, up from $273.05. Gold rose $1.60 in Hong Kong to close at $274.25.

Silver up

Silver closed in London at $4.33 bid per troy ounce, up from $4.31.

Fed ponders rate reduction

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After cutting interest rates five times in six months, Federal Reserve policy-makers are pondering what more they need to do to restart the ailing economy.

The Fed's mid-afternoon announcement today is widely expected to be that the central bank is cutting interest rates for a sixth time. But economists on Tuesday were split over whether the Fed will stick with the half-point moves it has been making so far this year or switch to a smaller quarter-point reduction.

"We know they are going to cut rates, but it will be the closest call this year on just how much," said David Jones, chief economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. in New York.

The Fed's answer probably will depend on what carries greater weight — recent glimmers that the economy is starting to pull out of its yearlong economic funk or concerns that the recovery could still be derailed if Americans suddenly grow worried about their job prospects and stop spending.

Three reports released Tuesday as the central bank began its deliberations all depicted an improving economy but were not enough to lift spirits on Wall Street. The Dow Jones industrial average suffered its third straight losing session, falling 31.74 to close at 10,472.48. The Dow had lost more than 100 points on both Monday and Friday as investors fretted about a stream of company profit warnings and layoff announcements.

The economic indicators were more favorable, however. Consumer confidence rose for a second straight month, orders to U.S. factories for big-ticket manufactured goods from cars to computers jumped by 2.9 percent in May, the biggest gain since February, while sales of new homes rose a solid 0.8 percent with all parts of the country enjoying increases.

Some analysts said they believed these latest reports would convince the central bank that only a quarter-point cut in rates is needed to assure a solid rebound in the second half of this year, especially in light of recent comments by some Fed members of the potential danger of overdoing the credit easing and spawning inflation problems next year.

"The Fed is trying to walk a fine line between those who still want more aggressive easing and those who think they may have already done too much," said Bill Cheney, chief economist at John Hancock Financial Services in Boston. "Given that, I'm expecting they'll probably compromise and do a token quarter point."

Beginning on Jan. 3, the Fed has cut interest rates five times in half-point moves that marked the central bank's most aggressive credit easing in 19 years.

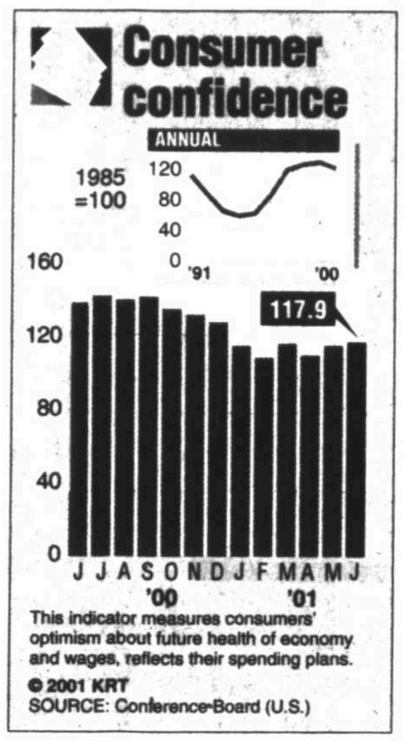

Those cuts have pushed the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge each other, from 6.5 percent down to 4 percent, a move that has been matched by commercial banks, which have lowered their prime lending rate, the benchmark for millions of consumer and business loans, from 9.5 percent down to a seven-year low of 7 percent.

All those reductions were made in an attempt to jump start a sluggish economy, which has been posting sub-par growth rates for a year.

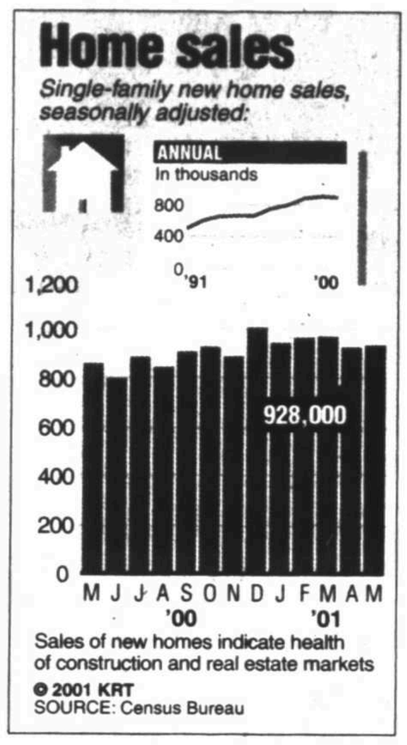

Economists who are looking for a sixth half-point cut in rates today said they believed the central bank is still not convinced it has done enough to prevent an outright recession, something the country last experienced in 1990-91, the only downturn during Federal Alan Greenspan's 14 years as Fed chairman.

"I don't think Chairman Greenspan wants to take any chances of another recession," said Sung Won Sohn, chief economist at Wells Fargo in Minneapolis. "He still wants to buy a sizable insurance policy."

While economists are split on the size of today's rate cut, they are in general agreement that the rate reductions are drawing to a close.

This indicator measures consumers' optimism about future health of economy and wages, reflects their spending plans.

Stocks end mixed, hurt by big profit warnings

NEW YORK (AP) — Blue chips fell for the third straight day Tuesday, toppling on a swath of profit warnings and layoff announcements from big companies, including Merrill Lynch.

The market was also awaiting a decision on interest rates by the Federal Reserve, which was meeting Tuesday and today and is expected to cut rates by 0.25 percentage point. The central bank has already cut rates five times this year, a total of 2.5 percentage points, to reinvigorate the economy.

The Dow Jones industrial average ended down 31.74 at 10,472.48, after falling more than 100 points both Friday and Monday.

The market's broader indicators finished mixed. The Nasdaq composite index advanced 13.75 to 2,064.62, while the Standard & Poor's 500 index slipped 1.84 to 1,216.76.

While prior rate reductions have inspired rallies, analysts say investors now need signs that companies are beginning to benefit from the lower borrowing costs before they start buying again.

"The issue is not will the Federal Reserve cut interest rates. The issue is will there be a payoff, and if so when?" said Hugh Johnson, chief investment officer for First Albany Corp.

The market punished the latest companies to announce profit warnings, including Merrill Lynch, down $7.54 at $58.91. The brokerage warned that second-quarter profits have suffered due to sluggish equity volume and will be 52 cents to 57 cents a share, missing the 82 cents Wall Street had expected. Merrill Lynch also said it has cut 3,300 jobs this year.

Outback Steakhouse fell 70 cents to $27.25 after announcing it will miss analysts' second-quarter earnings expectations of 52 cents a share.

Network equipment maker 3Com fell 19 cents to $4.84 before announcing at the end of the session that it lost 61 cents a share, 4 cents more than Wall Street was expecting. It slipped further, down 12 cents, in extended-hours trading.

International Paper, a Dow industrial, eked out a small gain, up 10 cents at $35.50, after announcing Monday it was cutting 3,000 jobs, or 10 percent of its U.S. work force.

Workforce board given extra $1.4 million by state

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The State of Texas has divvied up more than $700 million in allocations to the 28 Workforce Development Areas overseen by the Texas Workforce Commission for the upcoming 2002 fiscal year.

The Permian Basin Workforce Development Area is set to receive $15.56 million for the year, which runs Sept. 1 to Aug. 31, up from $14.1 million in the previous fiscal year.

Willie Taylor, executive director of the Permian Basin Workforce Development Board, which is comprised of Andrews, Borden, Crane, Dawson, Ector, Gaines, Glasscock, Howard, Loving, Martin, Midland, Pecos, Reeves, Terrell, Upton, Ward and Winkler counties, said any increase in funding is good news.

The additional money, he said, will "absolutely" allow the board to help more Permian Basin residents find work or find better jobs.

Michelle Seglem, assistant director of the Texas Workforce Center of Midland, said the center will be able to serve more people and offer more workshops both for its customers and employers.

"With our new extended hours" of 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, she said, "this money comes at a good time."

Of the allocation, Taylor estimated that about $8 million will go to fund child care services, which he said is an issue across the state.

Ms. Seglem agreed, observing, "It's hard to get a job when you don't have someone to care for your child. That is the No. 1 need, that and transportation. Put that money into transportation and child care and we could make a difference."

Other funds, Taylor said, will be put into programs under the Workforce Investment Act that offer employment and training services for disadvantaged adults and youth in programs for those who have lost jobs in massive layoffs or plant closings.

Taylor said the extra $1.4 million will also go to Choices, a program to prepare welfare recipients to go to work.

Other programs the allocation will fund include employment, training and assistance for food stamp recipients and employment services to help employers find qualified workers and job seekers find new jobs.

BUSINESS SCENE

Four Corners to offer fine dining with international flair

By Mella McEwen

Set to open in early July at 4400 N. Big Spring St. in Mission Square Shopping Center is FOUR CORNERS RESTAURANT.

McEwen

Antonio McGuire, who has experience as an executive chef and food service director and a partner in the new restaurant, described Four Corners as "country club-style dining" without the monthly dues.

The restaurant will offer a breakfast and lunch menu and lunch buffet and "table cloth service" at dinner. McGuire described the menu as international, with dishes from the four corners of the world — Italy, Germany, Mexico and the United States — as well as local favorites like steaks and chicken fried steak. There will be a variety of veal dishes and seafood from mahi mahi to swordfish, and the lunch buffet will always include beef or pork, chicken and fish items, potatoes, pasta or rice, two vegetables and a salad bar.

"We're trying to hit every palate," said McGuire, who is hiring for his new restaurant.

Hours will be 6 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 5 to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 6 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 5 to 11 p.m. Friday, Saturdays from 6 a.m. to 11 p.m. and Sunday for brunch from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Returning to the Midland business scene is Jack Grunenwald, who has opened JACK'S APPLIANCE PARTS at 4200 W. Illinois Ave. in the Westwood Village Shopping Center.

The business was formerly known as JG Specialty Products and continues to offer quality parts service for major appliance needs.

Grunenwald has more than 30 years experience in the business and can get any part, if still available from the manufacturer, for any brand appliance, quickly.

Temporary store hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

THE FACTORY HOME has joined the group of merchants in ANTIQUES ETC., 2101 W. Wadley Ave. in Plaza Oaks Shopping Center.

The Factory Home, owned by Carol Anderson, known for her collectible and designer clothes and accessories, offers hand-painted and embellished vintage furniture and home furnishings.

Hours for Antiques Etc. are 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays.

Sporting a new name but the same staff, mission and location at 1601 W. Texas St. is STAFFING RESOURCES, formerly known as TEMPORARY RESOURCES.

Patricia Little, president, explained that the new name better reflects the company's offerings, which have grown over 21 years from temporary placement to include permanent placement, temp-to-hire, executive search, payroll service, outsourcing and computer training and evaluation.

MIDLAND PARK MALL will host the QUALITY ARTS AND CRAFTS SHOW Thursday through Sunday. Operated by Randy and Judy Doss of Spring, this is the second time the show has come to the mall.

Also at the mall, AQUILAR JEWELRY REPAIR will open a kiosk in front of BEALLS on Sunday. Maria Aguilar of Fort Worth will offer repair service on all types of jewelry and display wax samples of custom-made jewelry.
