Poker--Anger--Shot--Death

MAN WHO SAT IN GAME TELLS HOW ONE WAS KILLED

Fortune Fails To Smile; Wrangle Starts And Death Wins

KILLING AFTER GAME

Heated Words Grow Into Gun Battle After Game

BY ONE WHO PLAYED

That pioneer instances when poker games were settled with the six-shooter and all mooted questions relating to love, booze and line fences arbitrated by the gun-powder or lead route, are no more, is possibly true.

The days when youths, overcome by wanderlust, middle-aged men seeking to retrieve lost health and fortune, and old men desiring a last adventurous sensation before shuffling off into the beyond did not pass with the California gold rush of '49 or the Klondike begins later on. Gold rushes were few and are now practically over. A new incentive just as elusive, holding out just as much promise of fortunes being made over night and demanding the same payment in heartbreaks, dissipation, recklessness and finally death, still appeals to those who would wander.

Oil

Though the prairie schooners are gone, the long carbines and muzzle-loaders taboo, the Yellow Dog saloon and dance hall disappeared, like the gold, the desire to extract from fate all the thrills possible to be crowded into one short life time remains. To all lotus-easters the one thing which momentarily appeases that insatiable longing to reach some other place and perhaps find there ease and contentment, is the cards.

In the Texas oil fields the same kind of people who always gather where fortune is supposed to be just around the corner, are to be found.

I am one myself.

I know cards.

I think I know poker.

I know I know what always happens when a man spends all his earnings seeking to get the earnings of others who think they have the same chance to win the pot.

Stranger

I have just arrived in this section of the country.

Only 24 hours had I been at the Freeman-Hampton oil field and I saw the Goddess of Chance receive another human sacrifice in death and reap a further libation possibly, when another of her pawns is called on to explain the demise of the first. One man has played his last game of chance, has finally found the end of the rainbow, which in its quest lead him to lose his life.

They told me at the camp that Summers was a professional poker player. During the day, while the game was being ribbed up, all spoke of Summers' uncanny ability to win out in poker games. When the game started that night I realized that it was no place for an amateur.

They boast of the gamblers they had back there in '49, and seem to think that those gray-bearded sires and lock-skinned, two-gunned miners were the only ones who could sit behind a pair of low cards and bluff 'em all off the board and cause those holding two pairs and with full houses to throw their cards to the center and not stay.

Youth

Some might think that those boys who swung the pick during the day and drank red liquor at night could sit behind their long beards and maintain the most stony, expressionless gaze with thousands of dollars involved and never bat an eye. Poker faces and guts and damn good bluffing, I say, these miners doubtless had.

I maintain, though, that their sons and grandsons who work around a derrick instead of a mine shaft; who bring oil to the surface instead of gold, did not inherit all the weak qualities of their "pas" and granddads. In the present generation, the desire to play poker and take a chance—yes, and shoot guns—is just the same in the oil fields as it was

Jealous Man Races to Death Rendezvous

International News Dispatch

ATLANTA, Ga., June 8.—While two men sped toward a [illegible] dezvous at Atlanta, one in ignorance of the impending meeting, the other with death in his heart, a frantic woman in St. Louis today besought police of that city and Atlanta to avert the tragedy.

F. E. West of St. Louis, speeding in a fast roadster from that city, and with six days' travel behind him, intends to meet and kill Joseph P. Mosely of Otto, N. C., also en route to Atlanta, according to Mrs. West's terrified appeal to Wm. F. Rundle, chief of police of St. Louis. Rundle wired Chief James Beavers of Atlanta the warning.

The woman's frantic appeal to the local police department followed the receipt of a letter in which West declared he thought Mosely responsible for their separation. The letter was mailed in East St. Louis and stated that West hoped to be in Atlanta by tomorrow morning.

"I plan on being in the room when he arrives," the letter reads, according to police. "And probably you will not need any legal action to be free. I have tried to forget, but have not succeeded."

The letter told Mrs. West to watch the Atlanta papers to "see how I feel about it."

According to Mrs. West's story, she formerly lived in Wilson, N. C., and about a year ago took an automobile trip with her brother to her old home in Franklin. En route, they passed through Otto, where they bought gasoline from Mosely, and, the woman says, this meeting later brought about the trouble with her husband. The woman denied to police that Mosely was to blame in any way for her husband's action.

West's letter, according to police, stated that he had been arranging the meeting with the unsuspecting stranger for about three weeks before Mosely agreed to it. West referred to the meeting at the gasoline station in a sarcastic manner.

Unwarranted jealousy led to the affair, says the woman in St. Louis.

"IS THAT ALL?"

International News Dispatch

OTTO, N. C., June 8.—James F. Mosely, the "other man" with whom F. E. West of St. Louis claims he had arraigned a death rendezvous, this afternoon asked Atlanta police to hold West when the St. Louisan arrived in Atlanta.

When first told of West's announced intention to kill him, Mosely's first comment was: "Is that all?"

But a few minutes later he called Atlanta and asked that West be held. Mosely said he had heard nothing of the alleged rendezvous previously. He is married and has one child. He admitted knowing Mr. and Mrs. West.

DOCTOR HELD IN POLICE QUIZ OF NURSE MURDER

Butler Caught About To Hurl Woman's Body Into Bay

BLOOD SPOT FOUND

Portieres Similar To Death Wrapping Found In Home

Associated Press Dispatch

NEW YORK, June 9.—Dr. G. B. McAuliffe was being questioned by police early today concerning the death of Miss Blossom Martin, a nurse said to have been in his employ, whose body was found wrapped in a bundle ready to be thrown into the bay off Staten Island. A Filipino butler of the physician was arrested as he was about to throw the body into the water.

At 2:30 o'clock this morning newspaper reporters, detectives, and Dr. McAuliffe were locked in the doctor's home and no one was permitted to leave.

At the conclusion of the questioning in Dr. McAuliffe's home, police said they believed Miss Martin had been murdered in his home. A blood spot was found in a bedroom on the top floor which Dr. McAuliffe said the Filipino butler occupied and two green portieres were missing from another part of the house. The nurse's body, when examined, was wrapped in a green portiere.

Berlin Rejected By Poincare While U. S. Considers Favorably

FIGHT! FIGHT!

Why, It Lasted All of Half An Hour—And Right in Center Of Town at That

A fight that lasted, according to spectators, "anyhow a half an hour" provided considerable amusement for a capacity crowd at Eighth and Scott streets late Friday night. At midnight no arrests had been made in connection with the affair, but police asserted they knew the combatants.

A prominent Wichita Falls physician and the son of a second doctor were reported to have been the battlers. Both came out considerably the worse for wear, according to spectators, but neither was badly injured.

Those who watched the fight were unable to say what started all the trouble. It was the unanimous opinion, however, that it surged over and around the corner for an unduly long time. When the patrol wagon eventually arrived in response to an urgent message, the principals and their seconds had made an escape.

Washington Likely To Be Represented If Reparations Meet Is Agreed Upon.

Associated Press Dispatch

PARIS, June 8.—Premier Poincare absolutely rejected the German reparations proposals tonight in his first official expression since the receipt of the night from Berlin when he appeared before the senate commissions on foreign affairs and finance to answer a long questionnaire on the operations in the Ruhr.

The premier said the French and Belgian governments had agreed not to consider any proposal from chancellor Cuno unless it was preceded by complete and final cessation of the German passive resistance campaign. He assured the senators that the government's relations with the Belgians were entirely satisfactory and that everything was going well in the Ruhr.

U. S. FAVORABLY INCLINED

Associated Press Dispatch

WASHINGTON, June 8.—If an international conference is arranged to fix the maximum amount of Germany's reparations, as proposed by Berlin in the latest German note to the Allied powers, the United States in all probability will be represented, it was learned here today from official sources.

Germany has met France "more than half way," according to the opinions privately voiced by administration officials and members of congress, and it is the belief of many of these officials that the compliment of believing her latest offer sincere, and that it represents the maximum limit to which any government could go at this time and still remain in power.

WILDCAT MAKES 300 BARRELS ON SAND SURFACE

Drilling Ordered Halted For Casing By State Department

ON UNIVERSITY LAND

Oil Thrown High Over Derrick At 20-Hour Intervals

Associated Press Dispatch

SAN ANGELO, Texas, June 8.—The wildcatter's dream—bringing in a gusher in the middle of miles of leased-up territory—scouts here representing the largest oil companies of the nation tonight believe has been realized after watching the wildcat Santa Rita well gush thick green oil high over the derrick for 20 minutes this afternoon. They pronounced it the first real oil well in Texas west of Ranger.

Center of University Land.

The well was throwing from 100 to 300 barrels of oil at regular intervals of about 20 hours. A report on the quality received today showed it to be of 36 gravity.

Besides bringing untold riches to the little company, the Texon Oil Land company, that owns the wells, the Santa Rita stands in the center of the greatest tract of 74 sections owned by the University of Texas.

If this field is proved, this school will be one of the richest in the world, if not the richest, it is believed.

Drilling Ordered Halted.

The well proves the lease of the company and gives the company clear title to the lease of university land in Reagan county, adjacent to the well.

The gusher is but 100 yards off the right-of-way of the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient railroad, long in progress, and will, now is at a depth of 3,050 feet. Representatives of the entire company, the directors of the ordered the company not to drill into the sand further until 300 feet of casing in the bottom of the hole has been set. Storage and casing will reach here tomorrow.

Company Believed Subsidiary.

A special Orient train will run over to the well Sunday morning and is being timed so that it will reach the field a short time before the scheduled flow.

The Texon Oil and Land company is believed here to be a subsidiary of the Texas company. Its offices are in New York, although Haymon Krupp of El Paso is president.

Your Heart and Home Problems Solved By Elizabeth Thompsun

Dear Mrs. Thompsun: Ever since I was a child my aim in life has been to be a nurse. I have tried to like different kinds of work, but find it impossible. The only thing that is hindering me for entering a training school is that I cannot obtain the consent of my parents. Please tell me how I can persuade them to let me enter next September.

Do you think a fellow really cares for a girl if he writes only once in three of four weeks? He is too far away to come to see her.

WORRIED.

If you are in your twenties, I would advise you to enter nurses training school regardless of the opposition of your parents. Since your desire is so strong, they really ought not stand in your way. Probably the best thing for you to do is to quetly go ahead with your plans. You have tried to make your parents see your point of view, and further arguing would be just as useless. If you are not in your twenties take up the work they favor until you are old enough to be independent.

If the boy really loved the girl, I think he would write oftener.

Dear Mrs. Thompsun: About three months ago I went with a boy for about two weeks. Then he was sick for a few days and I did not see him at school. He told his chum to walk home from school with me every night. When he did come back to school I did not care for him any more and so I went with his chum whom I seemed to like better. In a couple of days I forgot about the first boy.

For two months everything went well, but about a month ago my friend started to get jealous. He thought I went with another boy, whom I did not even know to speak with. I think it was the first boy who was the cause of our trouble. He became angry with me and we did not speak to each other for about three days. Then he made up with me and asked me to keep it a secret, which I did. The next day we quarrelled again because I would not tell him something a girl friend of mine said about him.

Since then he has not spoken with me except one time to ask me a question about my brother. It seems as if he cares for me, but he does not speak. He is not going with any other girl. I have tried to forget him during the past month, but I love him more now than I did before he got angry.

My mother and dad think he is a nice boy and would not object to my going with him. Can you tell me what to do? LEDDY.

It is your place to speak to the boy first. Perhaps if he saw you were willing to speak, he would be willing too. If, however, he completely ignores you when you meet, I would not advise you to see him either.

Try not to show that you are upset because of the way he is treating you. If you remain pleasant, but indifferent, he will probably get over his absurd feeling and will seek your company again.

It never pays to try to get along with some one who is touchy and always looking for trouble. If the boy continues to quarrel, you might just as well forget about him.

Dear Mrs. Thompsun: If a young man comes to see me is it proper for me to sit on the davenport with him?

TWO LIPS.

Yes, it is all right to sit on the davenport. But it would not be all right to sit there and spoon.

May Brings Out Colored Lingerie

By ELOISE

May brings out more than spring flowers and three buds, as the windows and counters of the lingerie shops show. No flower bed could be more colorful than a counter of the new silk and cotton underthings for summer. Pinks, blues, orchids, lilac, flame, apricot, yellow, green, and, of course, pure white all bid for attention in the window displays. There are distinctively tailored garments with no trimming save perhaps an embroidered initial or a bit of picoting at the edges. Then there are more elaborate models with lace embroidery and satin ribbons much in evidence.

Not all of the colorful lingerie is silk, either. Some of the most attractive and daintiest of new lingerie is of colored batiste hemstitched and ruffled in the most fetching style. It is much less expensive than the silk and washes very well indeed. Perhaps the sub-debs who want silk underwear like big sister's will be quite happy with some of this colored cotton wear.

Terrell Opposes Federal Prohibition Men In Texas

Associated Press Dispatch

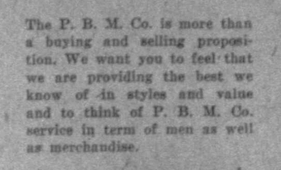

GALVESTON, June 8.—Efforts of federal prohibition officers should be concentrated on those states where state laws are not adequate, said George B. Terrel of Austin, head of the state department of agriculture, in an address before the Texas Press association today.

"Local officers of Texas, with the aid of rangers in some localities could enforce the prohibition laws better if there was not a federal officer in the state," he declared.

Harry Gray and Others Assail This Feature Of Traffic Laws

Considerable opposition to some provisions of the new traffic laws drafted by Chief of Police George Hodgins may develop before the rulings become effective, it was indicated Friday when the matter was discussed at length by the chamber of commerce business council. A committee consisting of Frank Queisser, E. S. Goodner and W. W. Anderson was appointed to appear before the city council with ference to the laws before they were finally adopted.

The chief grievance lies in the left-hand turn prohibition. This feature of the code was roundly assailed by Harry Gray and several other speakers, and it was declared that such a law would work untold hardship on operators of motor fleets in the city. Under the new laws, no left-hand turns would be allowed within business areas bounded by Scott, Ohio, Tenth and Seventh streets. Mr. Gray gave as an example of the workings of this law the route necessary to drive from the Freear furniture store to the telephone building, just across the street. An eight-block trip would be necessary, he said, going north on Scott to Eighth, east on Eighth to Indiana, south on Indiana to Tenth, west on Tenth to Lamar, north on Lamar to Eighth, east on Eighth to Scott, and south on Scott to Ninth again.

Such a procedure, he said, was ridiculous. Bert Bean and several other speakers supported Mr. Gray's stand on the matter, and it was eventually decided that some remedial steps should be taken.

Cantwell Says Parents Not Taking Needed Interest in Children

A warning that present-day parents were not taking the needed interest in the welfare of their children was sounded Friday by Superintendent of Schools Cantwell in an address before the chamber of commerce business council. Superintendent Cantwell was a guest at the luncheon and was called on for a few remarks.

He blamed the absorbing element of business life as being responsible for much of the indifference found among parents. A feeling that "everything will come out all right, some how," seems to pervade many homes, he said, with the result that school children in many instances are allowed to go their way, largely unrestrained by parental influence.

Superintendent Cantwell complimented Wichita Falls on the moral tone as he had found it, and stated that he believed this city to be one of the best in the country so far as the moral influence of the desirable kind was concerned.

IRRIGATION

By A. M. M'PHERSON
Kahn Bldg., 8th and Indiana
Consulting Engineer

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Are They Going to Irrigate Any More Land Than Is Now Included in the Two Irrigation Districts?

Fifth Installment.

In previous issues we have discussed the location of land to be irrigated and pointed out that the land in the Holliday creek drainage in Archer county is the most feasible from every standpoint.

Now if land is to be irrigated there must be water to irrigate with. So, the question of whether or not there will be enough water to irrigate additional land is a matter of importance.

The capacity of Lake Kemp is officially estimated at 525,000 acre feet, but as a matter of fact the lake will probably hold considerably more than is now thought. The mere fact that you have a place to put your water in does not mean that you are going to have the water.

Vernon L. Sullivan, an engineer who made a report on this project in 1920, said that gaging had been made on the Wichita river daily since 1910 and that from 200,000 to 1,000,000 acre feet had passed Wichita Falls each year. He estimates that as Lake Kemp is 50 miles further up the river only 70 per cent of this amount would have passed the dam site and been available for storage. This means that in some years, in his opinion, there would only be enough to fill the lake less than one-third full and in other years it would fill and about one-third more.

Jas. D. Schuyler, an eminent engineer, made a report to Mr. Kemp in 1905. He gives as typical the years 1900 in which the rainfall was very heavy and says that probably 560,000 acre feet could have been impounded, and the year 1901 in which the rainfall was below normal and says that for this year only 194,000 acre feet could have been stored.

Mr. Schuyler says in commenting on this run-off, "It is evident, however, from these stream gagings that the usual ratio of rainfall and run-off are not maintained on this watershed (the Wichita), but a much smaller percentage runs off than is ordinarily observed on such sheds."

All of the above would point to the fact that to insure an adequate supply of water each year it would be best to always carry over a certain amount of stored water from one year to another.

Tomorrow we will discuss some other phases of the water supply question.

SLAYER CLAIMS HOME WRECKED

"Drug Store" Beall Also Charges Infidelity On Part Of Wife

Charges of infidelity on the part of his wife and of disruption of his home at the hands of the dead man were made by Ira "Drug Store" Beall, negro, arrested Friday morning in connection with the slaying early Thursday of Willie Bush, negro theatrical man.

Beall, who was arrested three miles beyond Iowa Park, after a continual hunt since the time of the shooting, made a long statement to Assistant District Attorney Allred Friday afternoon, and explained the reasons for his slaying and shooting at his wife. He charged Bush with having made improper advances in his home, and with alienation of his wife's affections.

On the nigh of the shooting, he said, he went home at 2 o'clock in the morning, found Bush with his wife, and opened fire.

The negro explained that he spent the night after the shooting in a pasture not far from his home, and that all day Thursday he kept in hiding on Holliday creek. After dark he walked to Iowa Park and was captured by a night watchman there, but succeeded in making his escape, only to be captured later in the day while taking a rest at the side of the road.

RAINS, FAIL TO DELAY TRAINS

All southbound Fort Worth & Denver trains coming into Wichita Falls yesterday were on time, despite the heavy rains near Amarillo Thursday. A bride was washed out over the Canadian river Thursday morning and indefinitely delayed all southbound trains, a special being made up at Amarillo. Repair work began at once, and all trains were running according to schedule Friday.

BEAN HITS CURB GASOLINE STATIONS

Curb gasoline stations were roundly assailed Friday by Bert Bean when, in speaking before the chamber of commerce business council, he declared that these should be removed and thus prevented from interfering with traffic on downtown streets.

Mr. Bean stated that other business men were compelled to keep their business in private buildings, and there was no reason why the gasoline men should be allowed to operate at the expense of the public.

A committee appointed to represent the business council in traffic matters was also instructed to investigate the filling station complaint.

CHECK FORGER IS ARRESTED

Gene Liepold's Name Used For $150; Man Run Down

A man was arrested in Fort Worth Friday morning in connection with the passing of a forged check on Gene Liepold, local clothier, several days ago. Word of the arrest was received here by Chief of Police George Hawkins, who has been working on the case personally since it was reported.

The man is said to have forged Loepold's name to a check for $150 and to have obtained money on it.

FORD STOLEN

A Ford touring car owned by T. D. Webb, living east of the city on the Henrietta road, was stolen from Scott avenue at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon, according to reports made to the police by Mr. Webb. It is believed that the identity of the thief is known.

The car bore a license number, 532-131, and a motor number, 293-8917.

"Down Among the Sleepy Hills of Tennessee"

OUR dancing friends will vote us a big "Thank You" testimonial for this delightfully melodious and wondrously rhythmic fox-trot, "Down Among the Sleepy Hills of Tennessee."

It has all that come-on-and-dance lure that brings the whole crowd right out on the floor, bright eyed and "rarin' to go," with their enthusiasm mounting higher at every step.

As an added attraction there is another fox-trot on the other side, "Beside a Babbling Brook," that is as smooth as peaches and cream.

This record—A-3869—is only one of the many fine selections listed in this newest Columbia Release. All of these new records are Columbia New Process Records—made with the superquiet surface from which the scratch and scrape of surface noise is so delightfully absent.

PETROLEUM

Governor Neff vetoed a concurrent resolution by Representative J. E. Winfree of Harris county creating an alleged oil trust in Texas, giving his reason as follows:

"House concurrent resolution providing for a committee of five members of the house and three of the senate to investigate ownership of stock and general business transactions of oil companies doing business in Texas vetoed for the following reasons: There is no limit placed on the committee as to the extent of its operations either geographically or financially. The courts of this state have recently held that a committee, organized as provided, in this resolution, has no authority to compel the attendance of a witness or to punish in any way a witness for declining to testify before said committee to perform would committee. In view of this court decision the work outlined for this committee to perform would necessarily be ineffective. This bill, therefore, is disapproved and vetoed."

This reminds the American that such an investigation has already been made and all the facts, or the alleged facts, or available to those who desire to study them. Under senate resolution number 295 the committee on manufactures of the United States senate made a very thorough investigation of the entire subject of production, prices and control of gasoline and other petroleum products and the findings are published in United States senate report 1263.

Perhaps the governor is of the opinion that it is not possible for a committee of the Texas legislature to make a more thorough investigation of the subject than is embodied in this congressional report as it covers the following subjects.

1. The stocks of crude oil, gasoline and other petroleum products at refineries or elsewhere in the United States at the end of each month for the past three years and the holders are owners thereof.

2. The price of crude oil, gasoline and other petroleum products during the several months in said years and their relations to each.

3. Whether or not the recent increases or other changes in the prices of gasoline or other petroleum products have been made generally or uniformly by all companies, and whether there have been marked local differences in the price changes made.

4. The profits of companies refining and marketing petroleum in the United States for the years 1920, 1921 and 1922.

5. Whether there is any natural reason for the changes of prices of crude oil, gasoline and of other petroleum products, or whether there has been any misunderstanding or agreement between various oil companies to raise or depress prices, or whether there are any conditions of ownership, or control of oil properties or of refining and marketing faculties in the industry in any part of the country or branch of the business which prevent effective competition.

6. All such facts as bear upon the recent changes in prices of crude oil, gasoline or other petroleum products, or upon any other of the foregoing matters.

The American has been reminded by a distinguished democrat and official that this report is available and is very thorough consisting of 70 printed pages and that it is not possible for a committee of the legislature to possess more power and authority to secure more facts and general information on the subject than is presented in the report.

Regardless of all the patter indulged in there will be no investigation of the petroleum companies by Texas lawmakers this year or next year. Lawmakers or laymen who are dissatisfied are referred to United States senate report 1263. It is rather heavy for summer reading but there are men who just eat that variety of literary pabulum.

WHY THE THIRST?

And now comes the Chicago Tribune with this comment: "We do not know of any Georgia law making the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments enforceable in the state courts."

Why this thrust at Georgia? Neither the fourteenth of fifteenth amendment is a rum-pulverizer. And then the editor of the Tribune asks this one:

"If Georgia does not have laws enforcing the fifteenth amendment, why does New York have to have a law enforcing the eighteenth?" The Georgia answer is:

The brother in black was down in Georgia accepts the situation and does the best he can. Just as the editor of the Tribune would do if he were a brother in black away down in Georgia.

GOVERNOR JACK ON DECK

Governor Jack Walton of Oklahoma is on deck. Governor Jack was elected by the democrats and farm-laborites. He made a clean sweep of the political platter last year. Many conservative democrats looked upon him as ungodly in his democracy, impious in his teaching of the Jeffersonian gospel and profane in his touch of the democratic bible.

This did not frighten the Hon. Jack Walton nor cause him sleepless nights. He announced that he is for the farmer and the laborer and incidentally willing to do justice to all concerned, but he gave warning that the producers, or wealth makers, as he classified them, came first.

Oklahoma had gone overwhelmingly republican in 1920 and the voters had sent a republican to the senate and captured five congressional districts that were looked upon as democrati cpreserves. Jack Walton reversed this. He redeemed his state. He recaptured the congressional districts which he said had been stolen by republican political high-binders and he hopes to go to the senate after he has served the Oklahomans four years in the office of governor.

Oklahoma has an agricultural and mechanical college. This the radical farmers claim as their own pet school. These radical farmers do not care to have their boys inducted into the mysteries of Greek and Latin. They demand that their progeny shall be informed from raw material into finished agricultural product—trained farmers, as it were.

"To the victors belong the spoils." Governor Jack named three regents of the agricultural and mechanical college of Oklahoma. There were two hold-overs. This gave the Waltonites a majority of one. They elected George Wilson president of the college. George is without a college degree. He did not inherit one. He did not acquire one. He did not have one thrust upon him. He is a noted organizer. He is a noted platform speaker and lecturer upon agricultural topics. He is a noted rabble-rouser. He has a large stock of philosophy all his own.

Now the American Legion has resented his selection. Many of the student body revolted. Many of the Greek and Latin scholars declared it to be a burning shame. To cap the climax, the faculty of the college organized a strike, appointed a cheer leader, named walking delegates and moved out in a body.

They are having in politico-educational circles in Oklahoma what Don Marquis would term a "helluva time." Hundreds of students say they'll not go back. All the educational strikers say they will never return. All the Oklahoma newspapers are first paging the principals. It is a burning issue in the state known as the step daughter of Texas.

Governor Jack is a stand-patter His advice, speaking of the revolters, is, "Give them the air." He is telling all concerned that the people of Oklahoma own the college, that they pay taxes, that the farmers are in the saddle, that they have a right to say who shall be president of their college and what he shall teach.

First there were threats to give President Wilson a summer suit of glossy tar and white feathers. This was abandoned. Governor Jack said he would call out the national guard if necessary to put down an incipient riot and to enforce law and order.

Earlier in the game he had notified the official of certain counties in Oklahoma that if they didn't put down white-capping and midnight floggings he would declare martial law in their counties and make it decidedly interesting for the wild riders who loved to look at the moon. This is the slogan that Governor Jack has originated for the college and its students: "We teach the aristocracy of labor and the dignity of toil." Oklahoma is an agricultural and oil producing state. Seventy per cent of its people are farmers or oil workers.

They are the men who placed Governor Jack in office. But back to President Wilson who is without a faculty but says he knows where he can get one. President Wilson has a plan all his own. It follows:

"To convert the school's thousand-acre farm into communistic plant, erect a canning factory, raise all the vegetables and fruits and produce all the dairy products necessary to sustain the students who desire to work their way through school. He figures each student could earn 30 cents an hour for work. All the products of the farm would be used to establish a common dining room where the students will be fed in return for labor.

President Wilson admits his inability to flash a college degree. He makes no apology for non-ownership of the prize bauble. President Wilson is a unique character. This is his defense:

"I could have gone to the university at Norman and sat there under a lot of hatchet-faced old fossils who never made as much money in their lives as I made on the lecture platform—and sat there, I say—until I was given an A. B. degree or some other degree. But I didn't have the time nor the money for that."

Governor Jack is on deck. President Wilson is holding the fort. There is a strike on of well trained deans. There is hades to pay in Greek and Latin circles. There are American Legionaires who swear by all that is holy that they are going to get the scalp of the man who succeeded an A. & M. college president who gave to the world a thesis on "The Effect of the Orations of Cicero on the Clergy of the Following Generations," when he should have been giving all his time to the sprouting of turnips and radishes and beans and cabbages.

On with the battle. But where or where was blind orator Gore when the intellectual light went out.

UNCOMMON SENSE

BY JOHN BLAKE

KEEPING IT UP

One observation of his still persists to plague the indolent.

The fact that it well remembered by employers and bosses of many lands has brought sorrow and anxiety and incidentally considerable benefit to people who are disposed to be identified with little success.

The observation in question was made by Bonaparte when an admirer of one of his generals described to him the brilliant manner in which that commander had won a victory a few days before.

"Yes," said Napoleon, "but what did he do the next day?"

The executive head of a great American business concern asks that question repeatedly when told about the good work done on a particular occasion by one of his subordinates.

Always the subordinates are offended or irritated when they hear what the "old man" said of their achievements.

Nevertheless they are spurred by it to greater efforts than they would have put forth had they been showered with praise.

It is easy to preen oneself on a little accomplishment, and to feel that something attempted, something done has earned a week's reponse instead of a night's repose.

But it is keeping it up that results in real accomplishment, not merely starting bravely.

The world is filled with Brilliant starters, who do things that look big and important, and then spend the next few years in trying to look big and important themselves.

An observer of it- and men once said that he did not like to meet great men, because they were so busy being great that they had no time to be interesting.

But it is not really great men who are busy being great. It is little men who have managed to do something that seems great, and who get so "set up" over it that they never have time to do anything else.

We are not speaking now of genius, which makes it own rules, and pays little attention to customs or conventions.

We are speaking of plain ordinary ability, which can accomplish very useful and important results if it keeps at it.

But if the owner of the ability thinks that climbing one little hill at the foot of the mountain is going to keep him famous, he is sadly mistaken.

It is a long way to the important summits, and one must climb hill after hill to get there. Once there it is well enough to rest. But few arrive there early enough to rest very long before they enter into their long rest.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

BY MARY BLAKE

GEMINI

Astrologically the influences are of a very ordinary nature but somewhat favorable for the accomplishment of commonplace matters. Venus is the ruling planet today, which governs the throat and neck.

A child born today will be energetic with considerable self-will.

You are a romantic temperamentalist if today is your birthday, and your life will be either a glorious success or a glorious failure — at least you will see it that way, but in reality it might easily be the usual humdrum existence.

Things are seldom what they seem to you. Your mind paints every chosen scene in its own chosen colors and every thought in its own rich words quite regardless of fact. But it must be said for your optimism that it is quite as adept at turning failure into defeat as success into victory. You are a good loser and a good winner.

You express yourself well, if inaccurately, and you should have a marked talent for writing and for public speaking, but your style is apt to be florid and sentimental—effective and spell binding but not necessarily profound.

You are extremely affectionate and not too discriminating in the choice of people to whom you declare your undying esteem and favor. You like to startle people and this is simply one of the easiest ways of doing it.

You are a good mixer in more ways than one and extremely fond of human companionship in spite of your temper which is frequently involving you in all manner of disputes and quarrels.

You are foolishly loquacious and often talk too much in your eagerness to be entertaining. This may gain for you the reputation of being a bore in some circles where there are intellectuals and serious minded people. You can talk yourself into some very good things and then again you can talk yourself out of a lot of worthwhile things.

You are both affectionate and amorous but extremely inconstant. Look before you leap and you will not leap so often.

Well known people born on this date are: John Howard Payne, author of 'Home, Sweet Home;" Peter Henderson, horticulturist; Henry T. Eddy, mathmetician and educator.

Gasoline is not cheap in the Near East, speaking of New York and Pennsylvania points. Refiners have a selling price of 13 1-2 cents a gallon which represents a gain 2 1-2 cents over early May prices. There are a half million auto tourists on the road and gas consumption is ever on the increase. This is the good old summer time.

IT TAKES MORE THAN THAT TO CHANGE HEAD OF PARTY

The BLOOD SHIP

By NORMAN SPRINGER

THE ACTION UP TO THIS POINT

Captain John Shreve, a commander of sailing ships, tells the story. It is the tale of a voyage, his first as an able seaman in the clipper ship The Golden Bough. Shreve, just come to sea manhood, becomes a lodger at the "Knitting Swede's" one of the lowest sailors' resorts in San Francisco. He notes one lodger of quite, austere manner with a scar on his face. Young Shreve defeats the Swede's runner and wins his girl, but determines to go back to sea. He and the mysterious man, known as Newman, sign for a voyage in The Golden Bough, in spite of the ship's reputation for cruelty. Shreve encounters a wreck named Beasley and Newman sees him. Beasley confesses to Newman his part in many dirty plots against Newman. He speaks of a Mary and an unprincipled man who is master of a ship. Taken aboard the Golden Bough by the Swede, Shreve and Newman learn that there is a lady aboard.

Captain Swope lives up to his reputation as a brutal master by beating Nils, a young sailor. Swope's wife appears on deck. The men learn that she is the angel of the floating prison.

The Lady warns Newman, by means of a lore, to be on his guard. By order of Swope she is restricted to her cabin. "Boston" and Blackie," two tough members of the crew, are rebuffed by Newman and hint that he has been a convict.

"Boston" and "Blackie" fan the hatred among the crews for the officers over the ill treatment of Nils, the boy beaten by Swope, and other cruelties. An apparent attempt by the captain on Newman's life nearly ends Shreve's. "The Lady" acts as nurse to the abused members of the crew. "Boston" hints that Newman is being "double crossed." Shreve goes in search of him.

Newman is put in irons.

Shreve resolves himself to kill Swope, but accidently enters the Lady's cabin. She takes away his revolver, begging him not to kill her husband. They bore a hole in the flooring, and from the lazaret beneath comes a moan from Newman and the voice of Swope.

Shreve finds Newman trussed and suspended from a beam of the ship. Captain Swope sits before him and taunts him with the threat that he intends to give his wife to Fitzgibbon the mate. As Swope continues to insult Newman, the mutiny breaks.

Fitzgibbon had been thrown overboard by a darky sailor and their fight started a battle on the deck. Newman, realeased, calls out to the men.

"It Is Ended."

"Stop fighting lads! Stop it, I say! It is I—Newman! Stop fighting and go for'ard!"

If ever a human face showed amazement and discomfiture, Swope's did. He had been so busy at his game of potting his officer he did not see Newman until he walked into his range of vision and sent forth his hail.

He could have shot Newman then, and I could have not prevented, for he had his weapon leveled. But this sudden apartition seemed to paralyze him; he just lowered his arm and stared.

It startled and paralyzed all hands. The struggle on the main deck ceased abruptly.

It was the strangest thing I ever beheld, the way Newman's thunderous command seemed to turn to graven images the men on deck.

Newman repeated his command. He did not beg or entreat; he commanded, and I don't think there was a sailor or stiff on the main deck who, after his first word, dreamed of disobeying him.

There was Mister Lynch, arrested by Newman's voice in midstroke, as it were.

There was Swope, standing palsied and impotent, with a growing terror in his face.

"Go for-ard, lads! Go below! Come up here, Lynch! Not another blow, men—for'ard with you!"

The frozen figures on the deck came to life. There was a murmur, a shuffling of feet and Lynch lowered his great club. But it was an obedient noise.

From the quarter came the single note of dissent. The man in the main rigging sang out. It was Boston's voice.

"Go aft, mates!" he shouted. "We've got them—we've won—don't listen to him!"

Then he threw his voice at Newman. "Damn you, Big 'Un, you've spoiled the game!" A flash followed the oath and a splinter flew from the deck at Newman's feet.

There was a flash from my gun as well. I fired without taking conscious aim; I swear, an invisible hand seemed to lift my arm, a finger not mine seemed to press the trigger—and that greedy, murderous rascal in the rigging screamed, and loosed his hold.

He struck the sheer pole in his descent, and bounced into the sea.

The shots seemed to awaken Captain Swope from his surprise and terror. he had suddenly moved with catlike swiftness; when I lowered my eyes from the rigging I saw he had left his refuge from behind the mizzenmast and was standing in the open deck.

Aye, there he stood in that light, which had reached its maximum, revealed to all eyes—and stamped upon his face was an expression of insane fury so terribly and deadly he seemed not a human being at all but a mad beast crouched to spring.

His lips were drawn back from his teeth and a froth appeared upon his black beard. The crowd forward saw the demon unmasked in his face, even as I saw it, and from them rose a gasping "A-ah!" of horror.

The sound caused the lady, who was standing at Newman's elbow, to turn around; or perhaps it was the feel of Swope's burning eyes that spun her about so quickly.

He was raising his arm, the arm that held the gun, not quickly but slowly and carefully. With a stab of horror I saw him aim, not at the man but the woman.

No outside power this time seemed to aid me, I shot. I should have hit the beast, he was not 10 paces distant—but only a click answered when my hammer fell.

My gun was empty! I threw up my arm, intending to hurl the weapon, and I think I cried out.

Swope shot—and the lady threw up her hands and fell.

You must understand, this all happened in a brief instant of time. Aye, it was but a short moment since we had stepped out on deck. What happened after that shot must be measured by seconds.

For the lady was still falling and my hand was still reaching behind me to gather energy for a throw, when Newman bore down upon his enemy.

I had not seen him turn around even, and there he was at arms grip with the captain. There was another flash from Swope's revolver in Newman's very face.

It was a miss, for Newman's hands—helpless lumps of flesh but a few moments before closed upon Swope's neck.

I saw Newman's face. It was a terrible face, the face of an enraged god smiting god. The great scar stood out like a dark line painted upon his forehead!

He lifted Swope from his feet with that throat grip. He whirled him like a flail, and smashed him down upon the deck, and let him go.

And there Yankee Swope lay, sprawled, and still, his head bent back at a fatal angle.

A broken neck—as a glance at the lolling head would inform—and, as we discovered later, a broken back as well. It was death that Newman's bare hands dealt in that furious second.

Newman did not waste so much as a glance at the work of his hands. He had turned to the lady with a cry in his throat, a low cry of pain and grief—which changed at once to a shout of gladness. For the lady was stirring, getting to her feet, or trying to.

Newman gathered her slight form into his great arms. I heard him exclaim, "Where, Mary? Did it"—and she answered, dazedly, "I am all right—not hit." He took a step toward me, toward the companion. The swelling murmur from the deck arrested him.

He walked to the break of the poop, with the woman in his arms. She seemed like a child held to his breast. He spoke to the men below in a hushed, solemn voice.

"It is ended," he said. "Swope is dead."

As he stood there, the flares commenced to go out. One by one they guttered and extinguished, and the black night swept down like a falling curtain.

Five bells chimed in the cabin.

NEW GEMS BY O. HENRY

A Treasure Trove of Humor From His Newly Discovered Newspaper Writings.

AN UNPARDONABLE BLUNDER

The polite stranger who called to see the city editor rose to his feet in alarm as he heard some man who was just leaving the room complaining at a terrible rate. He was roasting the paper from editor to "devil," and calling down all sorts of maledictions on the heads of everybody connected with the office.

"Don't be alarmed," said the city editor as he drew a match from his pocket and asked the stranger for a cigar, "that's one of the most prominent and well known citizens in the city. You see we had a man interview him yesterday to get his views on a certain subject, and he made the reporter solemnly promise he would not print what he said in the paper."

"I see," said the polite stranger. "And it got in owing to some mistake and was published and made him mad."

"No," said the city editor, "it was accidentally left out."

DELAYED

There's a good time coming, so the optimists all say;
When everything will be alive and humming,
And we'll have lots of money and sing and dance all day;
It may be so—but it's a good time coming.

RECOGNITION

The new woman came in with a firm and confident tread. She hung her hat on a nail, stood her cane in the corner and kissed her husband gaily as he was mixing the biscuit for supper.

"Any luck today, dearie?" asked the man as his care-worn face took on an anxious expression.

"The best of luck," she said with a joyous smile. "Today has come when the world recognizes woman as man's equal in everything. She is no longer content to occupy a lower plane than his, and is his competitor in all the fields of action. I obtained a position today at $50 per week for the entire season."

"What is the position?"

"Female impersonator at the new theater."

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

AN ALARMING PROSPECT

(A scientist says that the race will in a few thousand years be composed exclusively of hatchet-faced men.)

The heavy jowled cave-man is gone to his grave
Swiftly is passing the moon-faced Chinee,
Nothing the beetle-browed Russian can save—
A type that must speedily vanish is he.
To narrowing skulls is the trend of the race,
It is brains and not ivory we moderns will need,
The artist who pictures the future will trace
A highly ethereal hatchet-faced breed.

The narrowing forehead, the skull, paper thin,
Gives room at the rear for the process of thought,
And thought is the thing that is destined to win
The prizes the species should always have sought.
The razor-edged nose may not photograph well,
The man of tomorrow may look like a fright;
But men so constructed will surely excel
In the art of annexing whatever's in sight.

We've known a few types of this hatchet-faced chap,
All utterly lacking in personal charm,
But always around, with a law book on tap,
To foreclose the mortgage they held on the farm.
We've seen 'em in business; we've seen 'em in trade,
We've seen 'em in sundry industrial deals
And they gave us a feeling we couldn't evade
A feeling we have in the presence of eels.

This may be a more intellectual earth,
When the plump rounded visage no more is on view,
And the rule that's esteemed as of paramount worth
Is "Do unto others as they'd do to you."
But we feel sort of glad that our book will be closed,
And the world will have long disappeared from our ken
But the time it is wholly and solely composed
Of over-intelligent hatchet-faced men.

Gassers Victims of Spudder Attack, 6 to 4

CARLSON WINS PITCHING DUEL AND SALMITES TAKE OPENING MELEE BY TWO-RUN MARGIN

Jolly Hits Freak Homer Through Knot Hole In Score Board; Shreveport Rally in Eighth Fails to Tie Wichita Score.

SHREVEPORT, June 8.—After carrying a lead throughout the nine-inning pitchers' battle between Carlson and Schilling here today, the Spudders weathered a fast rally of the Gassers in the last two stanzas, holding the Shreveporters to four counters and winning 6 to 4. The Gasser rally started in the eighth when Jolly, who went in to hit for Schilling, knocked the ball through the score board manipulators peep hole in the fence for a homer, scoring two counters.

The game opened with Carlson and Schilling hurling almost perfect ball, and a duel between the hurlers lasted throughout the battle, with the Spudders getting the better end of the scoring, although Carlson allowed 11 hits, while the Gasser twirler held the Wichitans to only seven. Carlson kept the bingles of the Gassers scattered, and by clever pitching saved several scores, pitching himself out of tight places, and seemingly holding the home club whenever necessary. At least he had the better end of the game until the eighth and ninth stanzas, when the Shreveport crew started a rally that threatened to tie the count. They fell short by two runs, however, and the Spudders emerged with a win after having held a small lead from the start.

Coombs Chased By Ump

In the first inning Bescher started out by getting to first on balls, then was caught off second stealing, on a throw from the plate that caught him several feet from the bag. Coombs, called out on strikes, nearly mixed things with the umpire, protesting so heatedly that she was ordered to the showers by Umpire Wear. Tanner went out on strikes. Throughout the first four innings the Spudders were unable to score, as were the home players, although they were hitting Schilling at intervals. They repeatedly go to first, but failed utterly when it came to making the first hit count by following it up, and the Gatts opened with the possibility of a scoreless tie resulting.

After White had fouled out to Riley in the fifth stanza, Berger walked, stealing second. Bischoff accounted for the first run when he hit a smashing single to right field, scoring Berger from second. He went out attempting to duplicate Berger's steal, and Carlson ended the Spudder chances by fouling out to Burns. Carlson had the Gassers eating from his hand and they did not score until the seventh after the Spudders had counted another run. In the sixth he sent the first three batters out, one on a pop-up to the infield and two swinging.

The second score of the Salmites came after Elliott went out at first, when Grigsby walked. He made an attempt at a steal to second, and barely escaped being thrown out, Sargent dropping J. Burns' throw and putting Grigsby in position to make home. He scored on Berger's center, after White went out at the initial sack. Berger went to third when Riley's throw to second got by Stow, but Bischoff, who has kept up an almost uninterrupted string of base hits for more than a week, went out swinging.

The scoring of the Gassers in their half of the inning was a simple affair, caused by a hard triple to center by Simmons who scored on Wight's single to right field. Moore grounded out at first, and Wight took third, failing to get across the plate before J. Burns sent a high one to Ruth, making the third out.

In the eighth the Spudders counted four more, while the Gassers forced a couple across the plate. Carlson singled to center, and after Bescher went out on a high one, Ruth walked. Tanner got a hot double base hit to center, scoring Carlson, and sending Ruth to third, Ruth and Tanner scoring on Elliot's single to left field against the boards. Grigsby fouled to Moore, and Elliott stole second, taking advantage of a wild throw from J. Burns to make the third sack. White's single to left sent him across the plate, White ending the half inning by going out stealing.

Jolly batted for Schilling, hitting a freak ball that went throug a knot hole in the score board for a home run. Baggan beat out a bunt to first, and after Sargent struck out, went to second on Riley's single to left, being scored on Simmons' hard double to the left pasture. Riley stayed at third, while Wight and Moore made the last two outs.

With three runs necessary to knot the count, the Gassers made a desperate attempt to score in the last stanza, getting one counter across. Stow and J. Burns were out on short taps in front of the plate, and Chaplin, pinch-hitting for Johnson, sent a long triple to left, scoring on Baggan's single through short. Sargent lined to Bescher.

Wheezes From The Press Coop

By Don Weldon

The Spuds annexed another yesterday. The Gassers failed to gas.

* * *

And the Cats were beaten! Dallas broke loose from its period of rotten baseball and handed the top notchers a 6 to 1 drubbing. The more the Cats lose while the Spudders are winning, the smaller that gap. Thanks, Dallas!

* * *

Just how the Spuds managed to get six runs out of seven hits is better explained by the players themselves, but it is a pretty good sign that they did better base running than they showed at Dallas Thursday. They got the little end of the hitting, although keeping a good lead in scoring, the Gassers getting 11 safe bingles off of Carlson.

* * *

That freak home run of Jolly's in the eighth failed to clear the high scoreboard in left field, but went through a knot hole in the wall. Even that luck failed to win for the Gassers though, and the Spudders made their seven hits count.

* * *

Schilling had the Salmites baffled in the first few stanzas, but they pounded him in the eighth, four runs crossing the plate in one inning.

* * *

The locals seem to have beaten the jinx of the road trip that hung with them for a long time at the beginning of the season. They are playing good ball behind good pitching, and prospects for a bunch of wins before they come into the home port are good.

* * *

Hook Cotter, Spud firstsacker who went to the hospital following the Dallas game Sunday, is out and around again. He intends to join the club within a few days. His injured ankle is improving, and Hook says he will be ready to play by the end of the week.

* * *

We wonder, however, what Salm will do with the valuable first baseman, for with Elliott hitting well over .300, it is doubtful if he will be relieved. Cotter may be sent to the outfield, or he may be given a chance to rest up a bit on the bench. He is too good to be left out of the game long, and Skipper Salm will probably find a place for him.

GIBBONS LAYS OFF FIGHT TILL SUNDAY

SHELBY, MONT., June 8.—No boxing will be done by Tom Gibbons before Sunday in his coming preparing for the greatest battle of his life career, with world heavy-weight champion, Jack Dempsey, here on July 4. The St Paul challenger declared here today he is feeling so fit he need little condition. Meanwhile he is taking it easy and viewing the sights around Shelby.

A great deal of road work is being taken by the big Minnesotan. A sixteen mile hike was one of his stunts and today he planned to do practically the same amount of road hounding.

Ticket sales continue good, according to promoters, Collins and Molumby. An additional order from New York for 200 today brought the quota for the metropolis to 400.

Shelby Lawlessness "Without Foundation"

SHELBY, Mont., June 8.—Reports of lawlessness in Shelby, where the Jack Dempsey-Tom Gibbons heavyweight championship bout is to be staged July 4, are "without foundation," says a statement issued today by C. B. Roberts, state senator and president of the Shelby chamber of commerce. Denial of alleged wide open conditions in the fight city, followed a demand by the attorney general of Montana that Shelby must "clean up" on penalty of losing the heavyweight battle.

Golf Faults

"Don't Be Off Balance For Mid-Iron Shot"

Proper Stance for Mid-Iron.

By GENE SARAZEN
World's Champion Golfer.

Having disposed of the various positions and mechanics of the driving stroke, practically all of which can be applied also to the brassie, it is now in order to discuss the mid-iron. And the instructions given here for the use of this club can be applied to the cleek, the jigger and No. 1 and No. 2 iron. All of these shots are made practically in the same manner, with slight variations in the stance.

In playing a full iron shot it is absolutely essential that you get set properly before you start your swing, because you can never hit a mid-iron shot, which calls for plenty of power, if you are off balance.

Here again I use the open stance, the width of which is about 20 inches. In the position pictured here the right toe is 24 inches from the ball and the toe of the left foot is 26 inches away. If the left foot were advanced to the line of the right foot each would be 24 inches away from the ball, but the distance between each foot would be virtually the same 20 inches.

Have the left arm practically in straight line with the club and play the ball slightly more off the left foot than the right. Whenever in doubt play the ball from a centre position between the two feet. Keep the hands down and quite close to the body. It is best to play this stroke a little forward rather than upright, as there is less chance of missing the ball then; that is, take the club around the right hip on the up swing rather than straight up.

You will notice in this picture that my head is turned slightly toward the right shoulder. This helps me keep the head in fixed position and my eye on the ball. Thus, instead of looking straight at the ball when I take the club back, I am looking at it out of the corner of my eye.

In playing a mid-iron, or any iron shot, the club must be held very firmly, with the right hand turned well over and doing most of the work in guiding the club.

Edington, former Exporter manager, was used at first base, substituting for Strong, who is suffering with a fractured rib. He handled 13 chances perfectly, several of them difficult. The score:

Benny Leonard Gone, Verdict Of Fight Fans

By DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, June 8.—Broadway and its habithes have turned thumbs down on Benny Leonard, the esteemed light-weight champion, following rather dubious performance against Pinkey Mitchell and the subsequent testimony of men who witnessed the affair. Leonard, they aver, is absolutely through and declare the first contender with a punch will "take" him like a suicide takes poison.

This is an old story that had exhumed many times in the last several years, yet the existing reports have a very plausible ring. For example, Pal Moore, the bantam weight, declares Leonard boxed like a wooden man against Mitchell and would have been easy for Charlie White or Lew Tendler on the night in question. Pal's opinion, obviously, is sincere and entirely disinterested.

Rarlews of the fight written by A. J. Schinner, Ben E. Smith, Sam Levy and other western fight experts, agree that Mitchell acted the part of the champion and Leonard the confirmed second runner. Leonard, they said, was so badly outboxed that he confined all of his attention in trying for a one punch knockout. This tendency usually is the hall-mark of the losing fighter.

Seemingly permanent retrogression in Leonard in his loss of speed. Gone is the dazzling footwork, the change of pace, and the ability to feint an opponent silly. Instead he now stands back on his flat feet and places all reliance in his punch. The change in style has brought Leonard, a great champ, down to the level of many challengers and the punishment he has taken during the last 12 months is hardly compatible with his reputa-

LAUNDRY BEATS M. AND E. TEAM

Pitchers' Duel Goes to Conley In Seven Fast Innings

Ponds Laundry was winner by a margin of one run in yesterday's Twilight league game between the Laundry and the Mill and Elevator teams, Conley getting the best of a pitchers' duel with Lewis. Each allowed five hits in the seven innings of play, but the Laundry twirler kept those made off of him scattered.

The winners scored all four of their counters in the fourth stanza when they hit Lewis to the four corners, but were unable to get further runs across. The losers' part of the score came in the first, sixth and seventh innings, when they forced single runs across. The score:

MAN WHO—

in the gold fields. The old heads make fun of the present generation, but I know poker players who are clean shaven instead of grizzled, with oil on their trousers instead of mud, who shoot automatics and Winchesters instead of cups and balls and muzzle-loaders, who could win all the gold in one night that those birds could mine in three life times.

Suspicion

Summers is a guy who I would back to beat some of these make-up nesters we see in the wild west movies. Like so many poker games, when one man begins to get all the money and some other fellow is losing a whole lot, the games begins to get technical. Then if the same state of affairs continues to exist, the loser begins to want to know how in the hell he keeps losing. There is only one thought that keeps arising in his mind. First a suspicion and soon a burning conviction, he thinks the winner is cheating him.

I looked for a break when Summers kept winning. Little remarks began to pass, and soon these began to get personal. Next Bolander began to accuse Summers of cheating.

"You have marked those cards and that's why you are winning," Bolander said to Summers as well as I remember.

"The hell I did," was Summers' rejoinder it seems.

A big pot was on the table and both men claimed it.

Bolander raked in the pot and Summers said it was not his.

They quarreled around and the game broke up.

Madness

I had a hunch the matter wasn't settled, for both men were mad and each one thought the pot belonged to him. The last words I remember either of them saying was when Bolander came back a few minutes after the game is broke up.

As I recall Summers went out and said:

"Give me that money."

Bolander replied:

"You ——, I won't do it."

Then we heard shots and came out and found Bolander dying.

Death

I was in hopes Bolander would live 'til we could get him to the hospital, but he died before we could get to Wichita Falls.

It is bad—bad on Bolander, and maybe much worse on Summers, but all I can say is that as long as there are men there are some who are going to be dissatisfied. There are some of us who looks like we are always trying to get somewhere where we'll be satisfied, and it looks good away off yonder, but after we get there the same old urge to keep going is in us.

Some bird in a movie I remember one time called "Earthbound" said we fellows are still connected with the other world some way, and that we have something there we want and will never be satisfied until we die and get there.

I hope I never see another poker game end like that one. I hope I can quit and be like other folk, but I am not making any promises. Don't gather by this that I am a professional gambler. I work hard, harder than most of you who are reading this, and I pay my debts and try to follow the golden rule. It's just the old Kipling and Robert W. Service stuff, I reckon, of always wanting a thrill and finding so damned few.

I have tried everything but death, and I think I know.

LITTLE LESSONS IN Big Sports

Answered by

LAURIE AYTON

Always a consistent place winner in the big tournaments—National Open, Metropolitan Open, Western Open, and sectional tournaments. Famed for his accuracy and steadiness under fire.

He certainly can. Indoor golf schools and driving into a net are two good ways. What I consider the best, and simplest, method, however, is one which I use myself, and which I call the mirror method. It consists of standing in front of a mirror and practicing the swing for the drive and practicing putting. In doing this, the eyes should be focused on some particular point of the image reflected in the mirror and each point should be practiced until no flaws can be detected in the mirror image. This mirror practice is especially good because the player is not so intent on trying to hit the ball for the last yard of distance and therefore pays more attention to form. Get the proper form and results will follow quickly.

Fight Fans Wonder As Champ Takes Things Easy Before Bout

International News Dispatch

GREAT FALLS, Mont., June 7.—Those who knew Jack Dempsey as he was in Toledo and as he was in Jersey City gaze at him these days—and then ask themselves:

"Is he playing tag, or what's it all about, anyway?"

For the fact has become obvious that the king-pin gladiator is dawdling more than working.

"Is Dempsey taking Tom Gibbons too lightly—or is he just going easy in his training now for fear he will go stale before July 4—that is another question. So far Dempsey hasn't let himself out in any department of his working. All of it has been good enough from the Great Falls standpoint. But it isn't on the eyes of those who saw his "prepping" for Fulton, Willard, Miske, Brennan and Carpentier.

Dempsey insists the fight day is too far away to make hard work necessary for another week or 10 days, and he may be correct. But those who remember him in 1919 and 1921 insist the champion needs plenty of work, and that four solid weeks would not be too much.

So far this week Dempsey has punched the big bag, then the inflated one and boxed a few rounds with his small sparring partners. Beyond that he has done a little real work—nothing else.

"Jack will begin to speed up about Monday or Tuesday," says Jack Kearns. "Then watch him go. He's at the peak of his career—a greater fighter by far than when he whipped Willard. He will be in perfect condition for Gibbons."

International News Dispatch

GREAT FALLS, Mont., June 8.—A vow was made today by Jack Kearns and it is this:

"Never again will I let anyone spar with Jack Dempsey until I know he is a boxer and not a "billy goat" and as the vow was uttered Dempsey himself joined in the chorus.

It may be recalled that Kearns permitted one Rocco Stragmaisi to mingle blows with the "Utah mauler" Wednesday, since which time the following untoward things have happened in the Dempsey camp:

A world's champion wears a huge plaster over his left eye, thus hiding while healing the abrasion caused by the aforesaid Stragmalia; Dempsey had to knock off needed sparring Thursday because of the bruised optic, and probably won't work in the ring again until Sunday or Monday, perhaps later. And the monetary loss will be probably $500. It costs 55 cents to see Dempsey do the "loop the loop" and his other tricks. If he does not do 'em the cash customers do not drop around. The daily receipts run in the neighborhood of $150 to $200, which means that if Dempsey is forced to lay off three or four days there'll be quite a few hundred less dollars in the bank-roll than if Stragmalia had not butted the champion.

Or didn't he butt? did this unknown really rip open the champion's skin with a blow? Some folks allow he did—that it was not a butt at all, but just a plain wallop.

But Kearns holds to his first finding: Dempsey was butted, and repeated:

"No more billy goats."

FEDERAL—

that when the woman's husband interferred, the agent attempted to draw his pistol. This was promptly knocked from his hand and in the fight that followed the officer received considerably the worst of the argument.

It was said that the newspaper employe sided with the officer in the fight.

Although brief, the battle was decisive and in the end, the civilian lined up the government official and the newspaper employe and marched them at the point of his gun two blocks to the city hall. A capacity crowd that watched the encounter trailed along behind.

It was stated at the city hall last night that the cases of the two prisoners would be called in police court this morning.

When searched at the station the agent had papers and telegrams showing that he was vested with the authority of asecret service agent. He also had in his possession several $1 bills, cleverly riased to the denomination of tens. A number of these have been circulated in this vicinity recently and it is presumed that the agent was here investigating this case.

Curing Your Golf Troubles

By Jim Barnes

Dear Jim:

One of the most puzzling things to me in golf is how to play a ball that stops in a cuppy lie. Take for example a case where there is a depression deep enough so that the center of the ball is little if any higher than the surrounding turf—that is, where the depth of the depression is about half the diameter of the ball. In a lie like that I almost invariably strike the turf back of the ball in such a way that I top the ball. How should such a shot be played? W. T. K."

Playing a shot from a cuppy lie is, of course, almost an individual matter. That is there is such a wide range of possible lies of this kind, that you have to study the case at hand each time. I can give this general advice, however.

It is always best to use a club with plenty of loft. If the turf is soft enough to cut through, which may be the case, the job of cutting through will, of course, check the club head some, which means that the hands will travel proportonately faster, and this tends to straighten the face of the club as it reaches the ball. So use a club with loft to allow for this.

If you are going to cut through the turf this way, you have to figure the task something as you would in studying where to strike in an explosion shot from the sandtrap—How far back must I start cutting the turf?

And remember you must drive the clubhead through and under the ball. Therefore, don't get your weight too far back on the right foot, so that the clubhead starts up too soon after striking the turf. If you do, you are going to take the ball on the upstroke, and the club may start up too soon, and strike the ball about the center or above.

Some times, it may be necessary to send the club in sharply behind the ball, without trying to cut through the turf, where the surface of the ground is hard or pebbly. In that event, you have to use a rather upright swing, with a club having lots of loft, driving the clubhead down and depending on the loft of the club to get the ball up.

(Jim Barnes will suggest a remedy for your golf faults. Write Jim care of the sport editor, enclosing stamped envelope, if you want a personal reply.)

REACTION SHOWN BY INDUSTRIALS

Railroad Issues In Demand Despite Profit Taking And Shorts

Associated Press Dispatch

NEW YORK, June 8.—Intermittent profit taking and short selling imparted reactionary trend to industrial shares in today's more active stock market, but the railroad issues, particularly the low priced stocks, were in good demand at advancing prices.

Strength of the railroad issues was based on reports of good earning, the April figures showing a return of 6½ per cent on the tentative property valuation, unusually heavy car loadings for this season of the year and speculative expectations of a resumption of dividens by some roads and a higher rate for others.

New York Central Leads.

New York Central was one of the outstanding features, rising 1 3-8 points to 101 1-4, a new high for the year. Buying of this issue was attributed to reports of the stock being placed on a $6 or $7 basis at next week's meeting of the board of directors.

American express dropped five points to a new low for the year. California petroleum lost nearly the same amount on profit taking. Reports that the European demand for sugar this year had been largely satisfied caused active selling of the sugar securities, Cuba Cane preferred, Cuban American, Manati and Punta Algre dropping 2 to 3 points.

Call money held at 4 3-4 per cent throughout the day. There was no change in the time money and commercial paper rates.

The feature of the foreign exchange market was the creation of a new low record by the German mark below .0012. Cable reports indicating France's rejection of the latest German reparations offer resulted in a slight lowering of the other continental rates. Demand sterling dropped nearly a cent to $4.61 3-8.

Raw Sugar Unsettled

Associated Press Dispatch

NEW YORK, June 8.—The raw sugar market was unsettled today, owing to the sharp decline in futures. Prices were easier with Cubas declining to 6¼, cost and freight, equal to 8.03 for centrifugal, with sales of 10,000 bags at that level.

Raw sugar futures suffered a severe decline today under rather general liquidation. The close was unsettled at 20 to 30 points net lower. Closing: July 5.98; September 6.05; December 5.50.

The market for refined sugar was unsettled, but there were no changes in quotations, which were quoted at 8.75 to 9.90 for fine granulated. Refined futures nominal.

FORT WORTH LIVESTOCK

Associated Press Dispatch

FORT WORTH, June 8.—Despite the fact that the cattle market was very sluggish, Friday's prices were not quotably lower, when compared with the extreme low time of the week, all classes of cattle, the choice fed kinds, excepted, being generally $1 lower than on last Saturday. The calf trade was steady, and the market looks well in line with last week's settling basis. Receipts amounted to 2,800 head of cattle and 500 calves.

With less than 500 hogs here the market was not really put to a test of its strength, but the deal was called fully steady. Two cars sold to a shipper at $7.00. Wagon hogs clearing the packers, brought 6.90.

Steady prices were paid for sheep and lambs and the market was very active with 1,500 head recorded. Good wethers again brought $6.00.

Favorable Harvest Weather In Oklahoma Helps Price Change

Associated Press Dispatch

CHICAGO, June 8.—With prospects apparently less promising for a settlement between Germany and France with harvest weather favorable in Oklahoma, bears had an advantage in the wheat market today. Crop estimates from Washington proved moderately bullish as to wheat, but were issued after the trading here had ended. Closing prices for wheat were unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to 1¼ cent lower, July 1.10¼@1.10½ and September 1.08⅝@1.08⅞. Corn closed at ⅛ decline to ¼ advance, oats unchanged to ¼ off, and provisions 15 to 30c down.

Scarcity of offerings made corn prices average higher. Oats were depressed by erroneous bearish forecasts of the crop reports as to oats. Provisions turned weak in sympathy with hog sales.

Associated Press Dispatch

NEW YORK, June 8.—There was a continued demand for July contracts in the cotton market here today, but it seemed to be pretty well supplied on an advance to 27.90 for that position and the price later broke to 27.50. Later months were relatively weak during the entire day and when July eased off, October contracts sold down to 28.93, or 67 points net lower. That month closed at 24.15, with the general market closing very steady at net declines of 15 to 69 points.

The market opened relatively steady at a decline of 8 to 24 points. Better weather reports from the eastern belt were a factor on the decline which soon extended to 24.13 for October and 23.19 for January or about 47 to 57 points net lower on the new crop positions. There were reports that the larger spot business reported at two or three of the southern markets had been the result of an improvement in the export demand, and the advance to 27.90 for July carried the price here into new high ground for the movement. The demand tapered off at this level, however, and offering of new crop positions became heavier. The decline went to 23.35 for December and 22.89 for January or about 67 to 87 points net lower on these deliveries. July sold 28 points net lower, but met renewed covering on the decline, and closing prices showed rallies of about 15 to 20 points from the lowest.

Exports today 612 bales, making 4,480,461 so far this season. United States port receipts 5,446. United States port stocks 3,263,951.

WOOL REVIEW

BOSTON, June 8.—The commercial Bulletin will say tomorrow:

"A sluggish, irregular market prevails in wool and prices except for the finer staple qualities are on the easy side. Further shipments of low wools are being made to Europe, which offers a better market for some types than does the home trade. At the mills the situation has changed little, if any.

"In the west the dealers have lowered their limits in many sections and are getting some wool at the lower levels. Wool is moving rather more briskly in some of the bright wool states.

Increase Shown In Winter Wheat Forecast By U. S.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—This year's winter wheat crop as forecast from June 1 condition today by the department of agriculture is 2,713,000 bushels more than last month's forecast based on May 1 conditions. The spring wheat crop was forecast at 34,000,000 bushels less than last year's crop.

The condition of the crops, in percentage of a normal on June 1, was reported as follows: Winter wheat, 76.3; spring wheat, 90.2; oats, 85.6; barley, 89; rye, 81.1; hay, 84.4; pastures, 84.8; apples, 75.5; peaches, 66.7.

The condition of winter wheat and forecast of production in bushels by principal producing states include; Kansas, condition 65, production 104,625,000; Texas, 70 and 18,224,000; Oklahoma, 73 and 41,661,000.

BRADSTREET'S SEES BETTER CONDITIONS

NEW YORK, June 8.—Bradstreet's tomorrow will say:

"Retail trade, jobbing distribution of light summer goods and crop reports have shown betterment this week, being aided by the arrival of long belated reasonable weather, aiding the growth of more cheerful feeling due to this cause, is also the continuance of the slightly more optimistic sentiment visible in recent weeks in large primary and industrial lines. The chief gains in actual business have been largely in the light wearing apparel trades, wash goods, dresses, fancy shoes, etc., which have hitherto lagged. That there is a full disposition to take advantage of the more favorable trend of weather is proven by the pushing of sales by both jobbers and retails, the intent apparently being to take full advantage of long delay seasonable weather. In purely wholesale lines there is little new activity to be noted, and collections as a whole still lag, while the check to new blulding projects first noted in April at New York seems to have spread to other cities in May.

Weekly bank clearings $7,641,241,000.

FEATURES

Day's total sales 661,400 shares.

Twenty industrials averaged 96.66; net loss .51. High 1923, 105.38; low 92.77.

Twenty railroads averaged 83.31; net gain .30; high 1923, 90.63; low 80.13.

Red River Receiver To Deliver Indian Lands

Associated Press Dispatch

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The government today asked the supreme court to direct the receiver, placed by the court in charge of certain oil properties in the Red river bed which were in controversy in the Texas-Oklahoma boundary dispute, to release to the secretary of the interior land included in the Maggie Turtle Mountain Reid, the Robert Dogmothy, the Ray Do-Yah and the Tah-Too-Ah-Ni-Pay allotments.

The lands have not been returned by the receiver because he has not recovered the amount of money expended on them and he does not feel authorized to turn them over to the interior without an order from the court.

TODAY'S RECIPES

French Toast—Beat two eggs well, add a quarter of a cup of milk, season with salt and pepper. Dip slices of bread in mixture and fry in butter and serve with syrup.

Escalloped Corn—Make a good creamy gravy, add beaten egg if liked, mix with a can of corn, put in buttered baking dish, put bread crumbs on top and bake about 15 minutes in hot oven.

Stuffed Veal Heart—Cleanse heart thoroughly and stuff with dressing of bread crumbs, onions and melted butter, seasoned with salt, pepper and sage. Place in roaster with little water and bake at least one hour.

SUGGESTIONS

Use for Corset Eyelets—Cut eyelets from discarded corsets with enough material to turn under, and stitch. Put these on children's underwear using two for garter pins. Thus the waist is not torn.

For Burning Papers—A good wire container in which to burn papers outdoors is made from four feet of chicken wire, 24 inch size. By shaping the wire in circular form and fastening firmly into ground with three or four pieces of angle iron, you have a handy and economical container.

Crash Towels—Joseph's coat had nothing on the crash towels of today, for they are in all imaginable colors and combinations. Dyes are not guaranteed, and there is nothing as ugly as a faded towel. It is safer to stick to plain white ones with colored, striped borders. Salt should be put in the water to set colors when towels are washed for the first time. Blue or pink is safe while lilac and green are apt to fade. Bath mats come in colors to match bath towels, and here, again, the same choice in colors holds good. Some women buy terry cloth or crash toweling and make towels just the length and width they like, in which case they buttonhole stitch a narrow hem to the ends, then crochet on a narrow, scalloped edge. These towels are apt to be of a better quality than those ready made, and so last longer. When towels begin to wear out they may be used up for floor cloths and make excellent ones. Wash clothes may be had in striped borderings like the big towels.

Uses Griddle for Baking—It is just as interesting to find new uses for old kitchen utensils as to accumulate new ones. Try using your aluminum griddle, be it long or round, for baking cookies, biscuits and even Parker House rolls. It bakes excellently, requires no greasing and almost no washing. If you have no aluminum griddle fry your griddle cakes in your smooth aluminum skillet. An aluminum skillet will do all its own lines of work and that of any cooker you lack for use on burner or in oven.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION
THE STATE OF TEXAS.
To the sheriff or any constable of Wichita county; greeting:
You are hereby commanded to summon Edgar Combs by making publication of this citation once each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, to appear at the next regular term of the Eighty-ninth district court of Wichita county, to be holden at the court house thereof in Wichita Falls, on the first Monday in July A. D. 1923, the same being the 2nd day of July, A. D. 1923. Then and there to answer a petition filed in said court on the 7th day of June A. D. 1923, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said court No. 14,452-C wherein Maude Combs is plaintiff and Edgar Combs is defendant and said petition alleging, that plaintiff and defendant were lawfully married in the month of July, 1918 and lived with him, until on or about the month of July, 1921. That defendant for more than a year prior to their separation commenced a course of unkind, harsh and tyrannical treatment toward her that forced her to leave him, since which time she has not returned. That defendant would curse and abuse her, call her all kind of vile names, that he would strike and choak her, all of which has rendered their further living together as husband and wife insupportable.
That there was one child born of their marriage, Nellie Fay Combs, now 3 years of age.
Wherefore plaintiff prays that defendant be cited to appear and answer herein, and that upon final hearing hereof she have judgment dissolving the bonds of matrimony, and that she be awarded the care and custody of her child, for costs of suit and for such other and further relief, that she may be entitled to.
Herein fail not, but have before said court, at its aforesaid next regular term, this writ with your return thereon showing how you have executed the same.
Given under my hand and the seal of said court, at office in Wichita Falls, Texas, this the 8th day of June. A. D. 1923.
A. F. KERR, Clerk.
District Court, Wichita County, Texas
By EUNICE JACKSON, Deputy.

BUYING OF OIL URGED IN MEET

Stagnation of Industry Is Feared In Convention At Chicago

Associated Press Dispatch

CHICAGO, June 8.—The possibility of stagnation in the petroleum industary because of over-production of crude and excessive stocks of gasoline was presented today in statements before the American Oil Men's association, representing producers, refiners, jobbers and distributors throughout the country. A vigorous buying movement by jobbers and distributors was urged as the solution.
Unless such a buying era comes soon, oil men said, the condition of complete occupation of storage capacity will arrive which, in turn, will necessitate a serious curtailment of refining.
"In some producing sections, notably in the mid-continent field," said H. G. James, Joplin, president of the Missouri Oil Men's association, "only 50 per cent of the refining capacity is in operation today; and we now have approximately 1,410,000,000 gallons of gasoline in storage in the United States."
Many refiners have been offering gasoline to jobbers at less than production cost for weeks, James said. He urged distributors to fill their empty storage tanks at once so that production might be continued.

Texas Gets Top Of Sand At 1,326 In Swastika Area

The United Royalty company in its Richardson No. 1, one-half mile northeast of the discovery well, got the sand at 1,315 feet. It does not appear to be as rich as the sand in the well of the Texas company.
A test is to be drilled by M. Logan, W. H. Champion and associates in Young county on block 339 T. E. & L. survey, 11 miles south of Megargel and west or Orth. The contract depth is 2,000 feet. A rig is on the road for the test.

OFFICERS IN CAR ACCIDENT

Collide With Automobile Truck In Hurried Chase To Get Beall

Narrow escape from serious injury was made Friday morning by three deputy sheriffs when an automobile in which they were rushing the Iowa Park ran into a truck, overturned and was badly wrecked. Deputies Frank Watkins, R. W. Morgan and George Hawkins were in the car and received bad shakings, but otherwise were unhurt.

A call had come in that Ira Beall, wanted on a murder charge, was in hiding in a thicket near Iowa Park, and that officers were wanted. Beall was eventually caught by City Detectives Will Lay and Harry Hendricks, who have been at work on the case since Willie Bush, negro, was shot to death early Thursday morning.

The deputies' car, after leaving the paved road near Iowa Park, approached a large truck, which pulled over to the left side of the road instead of the right to allow the car to pass. Unable to pass on the right hand side, there was nothing to do but crash into the rear end of the truck.

The Ford emerged considerably the worse for the mixup, and must undergo extensive repairs before being ready for service again.
