Hostages freed; Hijackers leave

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Shiite Moslem gunmen slipped out of a Kuwaiti jet at dawn today — reportedly with a promise of safe conduct — and their 31 hostages were freed, ending a 16-day hijacking ordeal.

The hijackers left Algiers for an unknown destination, according to sources in the Persian Gulf who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity. The Kuwait News Agency said no deal was made with the hijackers except safe passage to Iran or Lebanon.

The Algerian government had mediated with the hijackers, who the hostages said numbered about eight but the Kuwait News Agency said numbered nine. The government and the hijackers said they reached a solution but did not say what it was.

The gunmen had killed two passengers since seizing the Kuwait Airways Boeing 747 on April 5. But Kuwait refused to bow to the hijacker's demand that 17 pro-Iranian terrorists imprisoned in Kuwait be released.

Most of the 31 freed hostages were believed to be Kuwaiti, including three members of Kuwait's royal family. It was reported previously that about 35 hostages were aboard the plane.

An official source in Kuwait, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Algerian Foreign Minister Taleb Ibrahimi promised the hijackers safe passage when he met with them aboard the plane on Tuesday.

The hijackers were whisked out of the jet at about 5:40 a.m. (12:40 a.m. EDT) and taken in unmarked cars to an undisclosed location, said Algerian officials.

Floodlights that had bathed the blue-and-white airliner nightly since it landed here a week ago were turned off at 9 p.m. Tuesday, allegedly for a technical reason. They never came back on and the area around the jet was dark.

Anware Al-Sabah and Ibtesam Al-Sabah, second cousins of Kuwait's emir and the only two women among the hostages, were the first to deplane.

The women, wearing black veils, were escorted to a car and taken to a hospital with their brother, Fadel Khaled Al-Sabah, who rode in an ambulance, a doctor said. The brother was suffering from a nervous disorder.

The rest of the hostages boarded a bus and cars and waved to reporters on the tarmac as they were driven to the airport VIP lounge. The men were unshaven, looked haggard and dazed and stared vacantly.

"We lived in fear. We were very frayed. We had lost hope that it would turn out this way," said Kuwaiti student Youssef al-Angeri, 24.

Passengers and crew said the hijackers always wore light blue hoods in their presence. "The worst moment was when they put a gun to a passenger's head," said the plane's purser, Abdel Mon'em Mahmoud, an Egyptian.

Interior Minister Hedi Khediri, who led the mediation team, announced the release without giving details.

Asked what would become of the hijackers, he said: "That is a question which regards Algeria."

Dukakis celebrates win; Jackson criticizes Koch

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Dukakis today celebrated a resounding New York victory that put him on a fast track toward the Democratic presidential nomination and a fall showdown with Republican George Bush. Jesse Jackson praised Dukakis for steering clear of attacks in the bitterly divisive primary, saying, "Good for him and good for America."

Sources said Sen. Albert Gore Jr. was ending his presidential bid after a poor third-place finish behind Dukakis and Jackson. One source, commenting on condition he not be named, said the only question was whether Gore would formally withdraw or merely suspend his campaign in order to retain his delegates.

The Tennessee senator scheduled an announcement for Thursday in Washington.

Jackson today singled out New York Mayor Edward Koch for blame in a campaign in which Jackson said "people were driven into hysteria" by negative campaigning against him. But he said on CBS-TV that Dukakis "resisted the temptation to take the campaign to the gutter."

During the often raucous New York campaign, New York City Mayor Edward Koch had no such inhibitions. He accused Jackson of lying under pressure and said Jews and other supporters of Israel would "have to be crazy" to vote for Jackson.

Koch supported Gore.

Dukakis, in interviews on NBC-TV and ABC-TV, said, "I want to be a unifier...I think we can put it back together. I'm somebody who hates the politics of division."

Dukakis won 51 percent of the New York vote, Jackson 37 percent and Gore 10 percent.

"The Democratic Party's going to be unified and we're going to stop George Bush this November," Gore said, sounding a unity theme that must have been music to Dukakis' ears.

Gore had staked everything in New York with an expensive television campaign and a sometimes barb-tongued effort to pose himself as an alternative to Dukakis and Jackson.

Dukakis ended up handily winning the ethnic white vote, both Jewish and Catholic. Jackson had more than 95 percent of the black vote and enjoyed a narrow, 411,903 to 405,486 victory over Dukakis in the precincts of New York City. Networks said the black vote made up 22 to 27 percent of the 1.5 million statewide Democratic vote.

Victory brought Dukakis 164 of New York's 255 delegates. He now has 1,051 national delegates, just over half the 2,081 he needs to clinch nomination. Jackson had 89 to bring his total to 841.

Vice President George Bush continued his roll toward the GOP nomination and declared Dukakis "a good bet" to be his Democratic opponent in the fall. He said he looked forward to the competition, and Dukakis gave him a taste of the battle to come during a Philadelphia appearance Tuesday evening.

"This fall George Bush is going to be judged by a legacy of...pink slips for our workers, golden parachutes for high rollers, and greenmail for sharp operators on Wall Street," said the Massachusetts governor.

"I want to make that American dream come alive again, not only in Trump Towers, not only in fancy apartments all over this country, not only in a few privileged neighborhoods."

Dukakis flew from Philadelphia to a New York victory rally within walking distance of Trump Tower, where he told cheering supporters, "I love New York. Friends, if we can make it here we can make it anywhere.

Bullock: Most Texans doubt recovery

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

■ Related story — 2A

Texas' darkest economic days are behind it, but the state continues to suffer from an attitude hangover that is holding back further recovery, says the state's chief financial officer.

State Comptroller of Public Accounts Bob Bullock said that he senses skepticism among audiences throughout the state when the talk turns to economic turnaround.

Midland's per capita income state's third highest

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midland County can boast of having the third highest income figures in Texas even though the topsy-turvy oil market has forced many residents from the job market, Census Bureau rankings of per capita income reveal.

Midland County had an estimated per capita income of $14,077 — finishing third in Texas behind Loving County's $34,173; and the South Texas county of McMullen with $14,761, according to the figures released Tuesday.

Loving County's 100 residents, who primarily tend oil wells and do a little ranching, also brought home the nation's fattest paychecks.

John Fowler, executive director of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, expressed cautious optimism over the income figures since the report details per capita income in 1985.

"Part of the problem is the three-year lag time," he said. "We're not too sure just how reflective they are of the economy day to day."

Still, the chamber's chief administrator was encouraged by the report, saying, "Midland has for many years has had the highest or near the highest per capita income in the nation despite the recession in the local economy."

The report, which Fowler described as one of a number of measurements used to paint a picture of the community, can "illustrate the underlying strength of the economy despite the recent problems."

While Texas can boast of having the nation's richest county, it also has one of the poorest. Starr County checks in on per capita figures as being seventh from the bottom, behind five sparsely populated counties in Nebraska and a sixth in Montana, says Census Bureau statistician George Patterson.

The state as a whole falls right in the middle of the bureau's rankings of per capita income in 1985.

Loving County's residents far outdistanced the nation's second and third place finishers Falls Church, Va., and Alexandria County, Va., at $20,699 and $20,094, respectively, said Patterson.

At the other end of the scale is Starr County, a rural and rocky spot on the Rio Grande where residents took home a meager per capita income of $3,312 — a 24.1 percent increase from 1979 earnings of $2,668.

Starr County had 36,100 residents in 1986, compared with the sixth lowest finishers. All had populations of less than 2,500, four of them with populations below 1,000.

Just as those minute populations may skew the picture of whether the country's poorest counties are actually worse off than Starr County, Patterson says the scant population of Loving County may also distort the picture at the upper end of the scale.

Loving County appraiser Mary Belle Jones says, "Oil is our main source of income out here," she said. The county has felt the pinch of the oil crisis, "just like anybody else, but it's going OK."

Mayors think opportunity will knock on Basin's door

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

The Permian Basin is poised on the threshold of opportunity according to the mayors of Midland, Odessa and Big Spring.

At an annual Society of Petroleum Engineers banquet Tuesday, Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas, Odessa Mayor Don Carter and Big Spring Mayor Cotton Mize agreed that the downturn in the oil industry had fostered an urgency to diversify and a new era of cooperation that will enable the Petroplex to capture a significant new industry, paving the way to a brighter future.

"When things look blackest the opportunities are the greatest," Mize said during the mayoral panel discussion at the Permian Basin section of the SPE's annual community relations function.

The mayors also agreed that the regional bid for the Superconducting Super Collider that failed last year played an important role in forging a new focus and new attitude about development in the Permian Basin.

"We realized," said Mize, "that when the Permian Basin grows, Big Spring grows. We would have gotten tremendous spill-over from the super collider project.

"We gathered information on the super collider project that will be invaluable for future projects. It was money well spent."

Carter called the proposed Garden City site unquestionably the best site in the United States. "When you considered the super collider project you knew why God made West Texas the way He did. The super collider could have rewritten the history of West Texas.

Local jobless rate drops to 7.1 percent

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

Continued shrinkage in the available labor pool during March drove the local unemployment rate down, even though Midland's total employment figure slipped as well.

The jobless rate in the Tall City dropped 0.6 percent to 7.1 percent last month, according to figures released by the Texas Employment Commission Tuesday. In Odessa, the unemployment rate fell 0.7 percent to 8.4 percent during the month.

The March work force figures show that "we are still leveling out from students and other temporary employees dropping out of the labor pool after the holidays," said Joe Hatcher, office manager for the TEC in Midland.

Both Midland and Odessa saw their total employment figure decline by 200 during the month. In Midland, a total of 45,500 in a work force of 49,000 were employed during March, leaving 3,500 jobless. Those figures compare to total employment of 45,700 among 49,500 available workers with 3,800 unemployed during February.

Last month in Odessa, employment totaled 48,900 in a labor pool of 53,400 for a remainder of 4,500 jobless. Those numbers were down from 49,100 employed, 54,000 available workers and 4,500 out of work a month earlier.

"Even though we're into late April which seems far removed from the holidays and school breaks, you must realize that this month's comparisons stretch back to February," Hatcher noted.

Bullock starts lieutenant governor campaign in Odessa

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — In approximately 23 months, the familiar name of Bob Bullock will be on election ballots in the race for lieutenant governor of Texas.

Asked Tuesday at a Holiday Inn Centre reception that drew 300-to-400 Democrats, with a liberal sprinkling of well-known Republicans, why he was starting his campaign so early, Bullock, a Democrat, said, "Since I first ran for statewide office there's been a 40 percent increase in population in Texas. Texas has gotten very big, with five million new people, so I announced early."

He currently serves as state comptroller.

"I wanted to try to do it in the same manner I did it when I ran for comptroller," he said. "I want to get out and go to every town, every newspaper, every county courthouse and shake as many hands as I can and the only way I can do it is to get out early."

Bullock concluded brief remarks to those attending the reception with the observation that "when a tax collector can pull out a crowd like this he must be doing something good."

He might also be a little superstitious.

Noting that he began his campaign for state comptroller 12 years ago with a reception in Odessa, Bullock said he felt it appropriate to start his race for lieutenant governor here, as well. "I believe a little bit in luck," he said.

Bullock earlier had been mentioned as a possible gunbernatorial candidate. He chose, instead, to pursue the lieutenant governor's race.

"I've always been more interested in the legislative end of it than I have the executive," he stated, noting he had worked in the governor's office at one time and "to be honest with you, I've eaten about all the barbeque I can eat and I've cut all the ribbons I can cut. I like the action where it is, in the senate and the house, that's where the policy of Texas is determined."

Bullock said moving from the comptroller's office to the lieutenant governor's office would be "just a lateral move," to a position where his experience would allow him to have an impact on legislative decisions.

And, many of those decisions will deal with the economy.

"I think jobs is one of the big things in Texas," Bullock said. "Our office, I suppose, tracks the economy closer than any other elected office I know of. We estimate the amount of money Texas has. We have a say so about how some of it is spent and, based upon the experience I've had in that office, that's really what the Legislature does. It's a policy matter of where they place our money and what priority it has."

Saying there's no question Texas has had its problems, Bullock added, "We see those problems dissipating somewhat. We see an improvement (in the economy). Maybe we're the only ones that do see it, but we think that Texas hit its bottom last June. We think business has increased since that time. In fact, we know it has," he said. "We know that manufacturing has increased, even the oil business. We see an improvement there. We think that this year the economy is going to grow a little bit faster in Texas than it does nationwide and that next year there's a good possibility it may grow twice as fast as it does nationwide.

"We're doing a lot better than some people may think," Bullock added. "It's kind of hard to tell that to a person, and for them believe it, when they're about to have their car repossessed or lose their home. But, really, Texas is on an upward movement and we think it's going to really show the latter part of this year and next year."

As to economic diversification and how he could impact in this area as lieutenant governor, Bullock said he would be able to make sure the type of legislation passed is fair to everyone and that it would create a good business climate in Texas.

"After all, what's jobs? It's business. That's the name of the game. A job means a payroll, a payroll means kids in school, families. All of the policy matters dealing with Texas are decided in the Legislature. The governor makes his recommendations but, in all of the years I've worked with the Legislature, I've never seen a governor's program taken in total and passed. It's always amended and changed somewhat and hopefully for the better," Bullock said.

He said the political climate in Texas is changing. "Texas today is a two-party state. Voters are independent. They vote for the person instead of the party. That's true generally throughout Texas. You can look at elections for the last 15 years and that's the way it's been."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Warmer weather forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Warmer temperatures are expected tonight according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. Skies will be fair with a low in the upper 50s. Southwest gusty winds should blow at 15-25 mph but diminish to 10-20 mph before midnight.

Thursday's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high predicted in lower 90s. Winds will continue to be southwesterly at 15-25 mph and gusty.

Tuesday's high of 84 was 10 degrees below the record high of 94 set for that date in 1964. Today's low of 53 was 26 degrees above the record low of 27 set for this date in 1933.

STATE

Clear skies and warmer temperatures were forecast for all of Texas through Thursday.

Forecasters say the next chance for rain across the state will likely come Thursday night or perhaps Friday and the rain would take the form of widely scattered showers or thunderstorms.

Some light fog was reported before dawn along the coastal bend in South Texas. Forecasters said the fog resulted from moisture being pulled in southern portions of the state from the Gulf of Mexico by a high pressure system located over the southeastern states.

NATION

A storm anchored off the Northern California coast brought drenching rain and thunderstorms to much of the state and snow to the Lake Tahoe area, but authorities anticipated little relief from the dry winter.

Elsewhere, a cold front resulted in showers today from central Ontario across the northern Plains.

Showers and thunderstorms spread across southern Florida as a cold front sagged southward across the area. Thunderstorms were accompanied by heavy rain across parts of southeast Florida.

Nearly an inch of rain was measured at downtown Sacramento, Calif., and street flooding was reported Tuesday evening across northeast Sacramento County.

BULLOCK

"That's because they're not feeling it yet in their cash registers and pocketbooks; but they will because the signposts are there," the four-term Democratic official told about 60 alumni of the Leadership Midland program at a Tuesday luncheon.

Another factor in Texans' disbelief of the recovery, Bullock said, is an inherent suspicion of elected officials. "When I was predicting darker days ahead, people called me 'Mr. Gloom' and said I was playing politics by sounding the dire warnings.

"Now they say the same thing about my brighter forecasts," Bullock said in a post-luncheon interview.

"There's nothing but good in store for the state for the rest of 1988 and 1989." Job creation, unemployment, oil and gas rig counts and overall economic growth are among the indicators already showing improvement which is expected to continue through the year, Bullock said.

Since the state hit rock-bottom last June "we have created 86,000 new non-farm jobs in Texas which have been filled by Texans," said the 58-year-old Hillsboro native.

Unemployment, which is still slightly above the national average, is dropping and Bullock and his staff predict it will drop another point and a half to 6.5 percent next year.

Rig counts are expected to continue running about 11 percent ahead of 1987 as they have for the first three months of the year, he added.

"All in all, we predict the Texas economy will grow by almost 3 percent for the balance of 1988, a little faster than the 2½ percent the national economy is expected to grow.

"And, in 1989 we predict the Texas economy will grow even faster — around 4 percent — perhaps twice as fast as the national economy."

Oil prices are expected to rise by roughly $2 per barrel this year over last, with continued escalation through the end of the decade. "Our projections are in terms of a taxable price of oil — somewhat below the spot market and posted prices," explained the former secretary of state.

"Following about $15 average taxable price for 1987, we expect $16.99 for this year as a whole, with $18 prices for 1989 and a $20 comparable average by 1990.

Despite these economic improvements, the state's fiscal problems cannot be immediately relegated to the history books because of "the new face of the state's economy," Bullock said.

Texas' tax structure remains tied to the "old economy of natural resources. The new economy of services is largely untouched," even though it accounts for more than half of all consumer spending in the state, the comptroller noted.

As a member of the Legislature's Select Committee on Tax Equity, Bullock is helping study possible changes in the tax system which can close the gap between the old system and the new economy.

"I don't have all the answers, but I don't believe we should continue raising the rates of a system out of step with the economy."

The select committee is "at least a step in the right direction," toward finding answers to fill in the gap left since 1984 when the oil and gas industry contributed more than 25 percent of all state tax dollars. Today, that share has fallen to only 8 percent, Bullock said.

The 32-year political veteran declined to speculate on what potential changes the committee might endorse in its recommendation, which he expects to be made by the end of the year.

However on the topic of taxation of services, he said that Florida's ill-fated tax on all services "went too far."

Florida made no distinction between in-state and out-of-state services and tried to do too much, but taxation on some professional services is one area the state needs to explore, he said.

"I can't put a dollar figure on the amount of money that will be needed from the next tax bill, only the Legislature can determine that," he said.

But he credited the state's lawmakers with doing a good, tough job of establishing spending priorities.

"The saying goes: The hotter the furnace the harder the steel," Bullock said in concluding his speech.

"Well if that's true, we've been through the fire and it's time to get down to the business of forging a new greatness for Texas and a little better state than we've had in the past."

MAYORS

"Unfortunately we didn't count on Washington. But there will be other projects, and we will be ready," said Carter who has lived in Odessa for the past 47 years.

Thomas compared the failed bid which enlisted the cooperation of Midland, Odessa, Big Spring and San Angelo to a wildcat drilling venture:

"It was a rank wildcat, but you have to drill wildcats sometime. It had romance, good economics and good land. We drilled it, and unfortunately, it was a dry hole. But we learned a lot of things and forged friendships that will help us when another regional project comes along," said Thomas.

He said other possible regional high-tech projects that could be as significant to West Texas as the super collider are the rail gun and homopolar generator projects. Both are space-age programs which will be components in the Strategic Defense Initiative, Star Wars defense.

Thomas said the Permian Basin stands a good chance of getting the space-age projects because of connections to the University of Texas, the fact that OIME of Odessa had already built components of the homopolar generator and because of the flat terrain for testing. He said plans have been discussed to test the rail gun, which propels metal projectiles at super-high velocity, at a site near McCamey.

Another project Thomas has his eye on is an assembly complex centered around Midland International Airport that would use robotics to assemble electronic parts and fly them to various destinations around the world. Thomas said the complex could be patterned after one proposed by Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot.

"We want to get Perot down here to look at our airport and see what he thinks about such a complex here. In many ways Midland International is superior to the airport proposed by Perot," said Thomas.

The Midland mayor also has a vision for a Petroplex Center near the airport. "We need to look to building future recreational facilities, rodeo arenas, entertainment facilities, stadiums and other area interests at a spot north of the airport. I visualize about 600 acres of facilities that could be used by either city," he said.

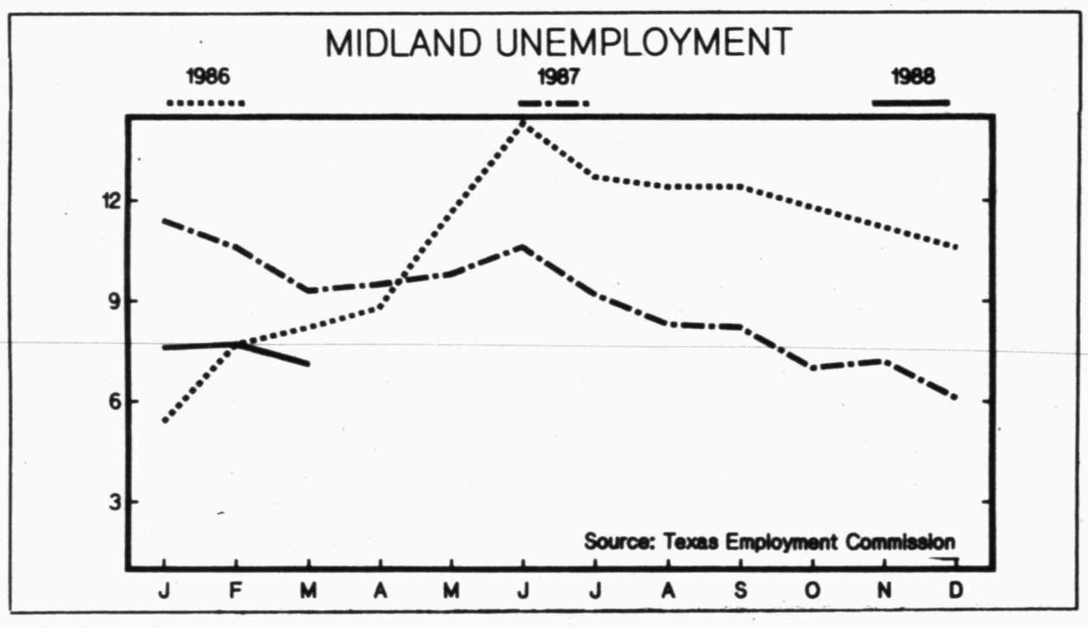
While economic diversification will be a new thrust for the towns of the Permian Basin the mayors agree that the oil industry will be the mainstay of the economy for decades to come.

Thomas, a geologist cum stockbroker, would like to see the oil industry more diversified in the Permian Basin: "Oil companies are into marketing, chemicals, refining and many other areas. We would like to see some of those operations located in the Permian Basin." He said one oil company has been approached to relocate its credit card operations to Midland.

Carter said the three communities needed to take care of the needs of the oil industry and see that the industry grows while pursuing diversification.

Said Mize: "The more oil companies let us know of their needs the better we will be able to take care of them."

Said Thomas: "Oil has made Midland a great place to live and will make it a great place to live for decades to come. There's still lots of oil in the ground. That will increase in value and there will be a lot of us here trying to get it out." Thomas foresees a new petroleum era in the Permian Basin in which production and not exploration will carry the economy.



JOBLESS

At that point, temporary employees were still filtering back out of the job market, he said.

Another element in the TEC computations is a lower statewide jobless rate which factors into the local metropolitan area estimates, Hatcher said. The Texas rate dropped 0.4 percent to 8.3 in March, from 8.7.

Across the state, the highest and lowest rates remained in the same cities, although each was down 0.5 percent: McAllen at 19.7 percent and Bryan-College Station at 5.0 percent. Midland and Odessa maintained their rankings among the state's 27 metropolitan areas in February, at 8th and 18th respectively.

Both Midland and Odessa show significant improvements from last March, TEC statistics show.

Last month's total employment of 45,500 was up 1,100 from 1987, when 9.5 percent — 4,700 job seekers — were out of work in a pool of 49,100 in Midland.

Odessa employment is up even more, 2,200 from 46,700 last year. Last March, the jobless rate in Ector County was 13.0 percent — 7,000 in a work force of 53,700.

Outlying Permian Basin employment performance was a mixed bag, with percentages rising slightly in Howard and Ward counties and dropping a full point in Dawson County.

Howard and Ward counties' rates were up 0.2 percent each to 8.3 percent and 7.7 percent respectively. Dawson County dropped to 9.1 percent.

Other rates were: the area-low in Andrews County, 5.9 percent down 0.3; Winkler County, 7.3 percent, up 0.1; Pecos County, 9.2 percent, down 0.9; and the region's highest rate 13.0 percent in Reeves County, down 0.5 percent.

INCOME

Texas overall falls into 24th place among the states and the Washington D.C., in its estimated per capita income of $10,373 in 1985 — a 44 percent increase from the $7,203 income in 1979. Nationally, per capita income rose 47.9 percent during that span, from $7,295 to $10,797.

Despite the 44 percent increase in Texas, the state failed to budge from the 24th spot it held in 1979, Patterson said.

That growth, however, eludes much of the border and portions of West and South Texas, the Census figures revealed.

J. Michael Patrick, director of the Center for Entrepreneurship and Economic Development at Pan American University, said unemployment in Starr County some years has reached 50 percent in the summer and fall.

He said Starr County has little employment base except for seasonal agricultural work and jobs with the county and school district.

"I would say maybe half the population does not hold a full-time job," Patrick said.

The retail, service and migrant farm jobs available usually pay minimum wage, he said.

Most of the other poorest counties are also along the border — Maverick, $3,897, Hidalgo with $5,563, Cameron with $5,921, Webb with $5,419, Presidio with $4,880. Others — Briscoe at $5,837 and Culberson at $4,837 — are in West Texas, and La Salle at $5,877, Dimmit at $5,295, Zavala at $4,447; and Willacy at $5,362 — are in South Texas.

The richest counties encompass the state's largest cities and their suburbs — Dallas and Harris County, but are also scattered across West Texas.

Following Loving in per capita wealth are McMullen in South Texas, $14,761; Midland, $14,077; Rockwall, near Dallas, $14,044; Collin, $13,999; Randall in the Panhandle, $13,226; Dallas, $13,014; Denton, in North Texas, $12,537; Harris, $12,497; Fort Bend near Houston, $12,449.

Only one county — sparsely populated Kenedy in South Texas — posted a decline in per capita income, falling 28 percent from $10,078 in 1979 to $7,244 in 1985.

More than a dozen counties posted increases of more than 50 percent, with McMullen leading the pack with an increase of 81.9 percent — jumping from $8,116 in 1979 to $14,761 in 1985. Collin County near Dallas posted the second-highest jump, a 66.1 percent increase from $8,430 to $13,999. Other big leaders were Loving, 57.7 percent; Coryell, 58.9 percent; Travis, 59.1 percent, Rusk, 57.4 percent; Hays, 57.3 percent; and Williamson with 56.5 percent. Dallas increased 50.2 percent and Bexar by 51.2.

DUKAKIS

"In Iowa we won the bronze," Dukakis said, reading from a text at his victory rally. "In New Hampshire we won the gold. Tonight we won the Oscar." At his side were his wife Kitty and his Oscar-winning cousin, actress Olympia Dukakis.

Dukakis said he expected to the remaining contests with Jackson to remain free of animosity. "We have a message of hope and optimism. Neither of us believes in cutting up the other guy is a way to win elections or the presidency," he said. Gore met with Jackson after midnight Tuesday. Jackson aides described the meeting as a "courtesy call." Earlier, when Jackson was asked if he might get the senator's support, he replied, "I don't know what he is going to do. But I do respect him very much."

For the two Democratic survivors, the next battleground is Pennsylvania next Tuesday, a state where Dukakis was assured of winning a major share of the 178 delegates at stake regardless of the outcome of a non-binding presidential preference vote.

"We could win the state and lose 80 percent of the delegates," lamented Jackson delegate coodinator Steve Cobble. Dukakis has a strong organization in the state, while Jackson lacks candidates for about one third of the delegate slots.

HOSTAGES

The gunmen said in a statement in Arabic over the plane's radio at 4 a.m.: "We declare to the Moslem people and people who seek freedom today, on the third day of Ramadan, that we will end the Kuwaiti airplane operation, giving our best regards to the Kuwaiti people. We salute the offer made by the Algerian government."

Ramadan, the Moslem holy month, started in Algeria on Monday.

The shades on the airplane's windows were raised for the first time since its arrival April 13 in Algiers, the third stop on an odyssey that began April 5 when the jet was seized on a Bangkok-Kuwait flight with 112 people aboard.

The bodies of two Kuwaiti hostages, beaten and shot, were thrown off the plane in Cyrpus, where the hijackers released 13 hostages in exchange for fuel and the plane sat for five days before flying to Algiers.

One of those released in Iran, Bert Watson of Guisborough, England, said he was "immensely glad" that the other hostages had been freed.

But he said it would be a "travesty" if the hijackers were allowed "to quietly slip away from Algeria because it will end up with them doing exactly the same again. These completely ruthless people should be locked up and the key should be thrown away," he said. "If I had my way they would be hanged."

Senators reject proposal that nominees not testify in public

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — A task force recommendation that Supreme Court nominees no longer testify openly at confirmation hearings is drawing fire even from conservatives who complained about the handling of Robert H. Bork's unsuccessful nomination.

"It's a nice idea in theory, but practically it won't work," Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, said Tuesday after The Task Force on Judicial Selection issued a report recommending that Supreme Court nominees no longer testify in public before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The privately financed committee of lawyers, headed by former Gov. Hugh Carey of New York, concluded that "the confirmation process has become dangerously close to looking like the electoral process."

But Hatch, a member of the Judiciary Committee, said any nominee who refused to testify would almost certainly be rejected by the committee and by the full Senate, because the testimony has become "a matter of custom and practice."

Still, he added, "There should not be a political process like in the Bork case."

The report said Senate review of Supreme Court nominees "has become very much a national referendum on the appointment, with media campaigns, polling techniques and political rhetoric that distract attention from, and sometimes completely distort, the legal qualifications of the nominee."

Television also came in for criticism in the study, which said TV coverage of the hearings "invited abuse of the confirmation process."

The report said "the White House, the Department of Justice, senators, witnesses, and even nominees now seem tempted to use televised hearings as a forum for other purposes, ranging from self-promotion to mobilizing special interest groups in order to influence public opinion."

The fight over Bork's nomination was waged not only in the hearing room, but in newspaper ads, television commercials and news conferences.

The nominee received an unfavorable recommendation from the Judiciary Committee and was defeated by the Senate last October, 58-42.

Critics attacked Bork's narrow reading of constitutional protections, calling him anti-civil rights, anti-consumer, and against equal rights for women.

Supporters accused opponents of distorting his record, and painted the nominee as a compassionate man who believed that judicial rulings should track the intent of the Constitution's framers.

Sen. Charles E. Grassley, R-Iowa, said the public relations blitz that Bork endured should not be repeated, but the added that the report's suggestion of ending a nominee's testimony "wouldn't fly."

"We ought to have public dialogue," he said.

Sen. Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania, a Republican who voted against Bork, called the report "an over-reaction to the Bork proceedings."

"Any Supreme Court nominee who refused to appear before the Judiciary Committee would not be cleared by the committee," he said.

The report was commissioned by the Twentieth Century Fund, a private foundation.

California Secretary of State March Fong Eu displays the gun used by Sirhan Bishara Sirhan to assassinate Robert Kennedy in Los Angeles 20 years ago.

RFK assassination scholar seeks probe of destroyed evidence

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A scholar who pushed for release of the Robert Kennedy assassination files says the newly disclosed destruction of 2,410 evidence photographs is "deeply suspicious" and should be investigated.

Greg Stone, a University of Wisconsin political scientist who has devoted years to studying the assassination, said he was shocked that Tuesday's opening of the files also brought word of destroyed evidence.

"Far and away, the blinding central fact in this event is the unbelievable destruction of these photographs," said Stone. "That is an outrage and an insult to the American public...This performance (by the Los Angeles police) would be a disgrace in a routine auto accident."

"This is deeply suspicious."

Stone's comments came after California Secretary of State March Fong Eu opened the long-secret files to the public and displayed significant items of evidence for reporters. She held aloft a boxed .22-caliber gun used by convicted assassin Sirhan Sirhan to kill the U.S. senator on June 5, 1968, after his victory in the California Democratic presidential primary.

Among the documents displayed was a certificate showing that 2,410 police photographs in the assassination case were burned on Aug. 21, 1968.

The state's chief archivist, John Burns, who cataloged the massive file for release, speculated that the destroyed photos could have been duplicates, but said the files contain no such statement.

Less surprising, said Stone, was confirmation that police also destroyed door jambs and ceiling tiles from the kitchen of the Los Angeles Ambassador Hotel where Kennedy was gunned down. Stone and other experts maintain those items might have shed light on how many bullets were fired and on a theory there was a second gunman.

Sessions vows not to slam book on Library Awareness Program

By J. KINGSBURY SMITH
National Editor
The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — FBI Director William S. Sessions is prepared to modify but he will not abandon the bureau's 15-year-old program to block foreign spies and their recruited-in-America agents from obtaining in public libraries information about advanced U.S. technology.

Such information could enable a potential enemy to increase its offensive capability against this country.

The former federal judge from San Antonio and El Paso, Texas, made clear his determination to keep the bureau's Library Awareness Program in an exclusive interview with the Hearst Newspapers.

Sessions strongly defended the right of everyone, including foreigners, to have access to public libraries for "legitimate" purposes.

But he said it is necessary to stop foreign agents from collecting what he described as a "substantial" and others have called a "massive" amount of technological military and economic information from libraries since the end of World War II.

In one instance, a Soviet employee of the United Nations, Gennadi F. Zakharov, persuaded a foreign student at Queens College to obtain photocopies of material on artificial intelligence and robotics from libraries at Columbia University, Princeton and the University of Connecticut. The student, Leakh N. Bhoge of Guyana, became a double agent for the FBI. Zakharov was arrested and deported in 1986.

Under its awareness program, the FBI has asked librarians to provide information about people with foreign sounding names who make a habit of requesting books and other publications on advanced U.S. military and economic technology.

FBI agents have visited or contacted about 25 libraries, mostly technical or scientific ones, in major cities. According to one librarian, the agents asked whether foreigners with Russian or East European sounding names used the library and, if so, what they were interested in and whether they requested any computer searches.

For more than a decade, these inquiries were a little-noticed part of a larger FBI program designed to warn defense contractors about Soviet spies. It was not until last fall that library officials in the New York City area publicly complained about the program.

The American Library Association has joined in demands that Congress force the FBI to abolish the program.

While noting that he had agreed to review it, Sessions did not detail how he would modify the program. He defended it as critical to the FBI's counterintelligence operation and said Americans must understand that libraries are "where people are being recruited for foreign and hostile intelligence sources."

He added: "The suggestion that there is a nationwide attack by the bureau on the great freedom of these institutions to have academic research, needs, I believe, to be taken in context when you look at the technical and scientific aspects of it.

"It's important that we not be naive and that we actually accept that there are people who don't wish us well and who would use the libraries for these purposes."

Asked whether he felt the librarians' critical attitude toward the FBI's efforts to curb foreign espionage infiltration of the public libraries reflected a lack of patriotic understanding of what such free access to our advanced military and economic technology could mean for the security of the country, Sessions replied:

"Oh, I would not ascribe to them any less of a patriotic sense of duty or responsibility than you or I have. I think they simply have a different point of view and probably are offended, as they say they are, by anything that would impede the ability of American citizens and people using libraries to gain information."

Did he think it was the intent of the Founding Fathers that the Constitution should prevent efforts to ascertain the identity of foreign espionage agents seeking to obtain clandestinely from our public libraries important military, scientific and economic information apparently not otherwise available to them?

"I might," he replied, "sidestep that by noting that Ben Franklin, truly one of our Founding Fathers and the man who made it possible for us to finally get a Constitution, was very strong on libraries. He started the first society in Boston for lending of materials, making it available and building up resources.

"Now I don't know what the Founding Fathers would say, but I would say that Mr. Franklin might have a point of view similar to that of the Bureau — that people who use those libraries should use them for legitimate purposes and not for espionage means that are hostile to the well-being of the United States of America."

Florida's worst tornado in 20 years kills four

MADISON, Fla. (AP) — Residents began rebuilding their lives and town today after Florida's worst tornado in two decades killed four people and left millions of dollars in damage. A college was ruined but its 2,000 students were spared.

"Thankfully, it happened when it did and not four or five hours later because the death toll would probably have been in the hundreds," said William H. McCoy, president of North Florida Community College.

The tornado struck at 4:30 a.m. Tuesday, tossing families out of bed while windows exploded and their homes collapsed on them. It left 18 people injured and a 12-mile-long, half-mile-wide path of destruction in which 17 homes were destroyed, authorities said.

Gov. Bob Martinez, after assessing the damage in a helicopter, declared a state of emergency, paving the way for state agencies to assist Madison County in cleanup efforts.

The tornado was one of four that struck Florida in stormy weather Tuesday, destroying several homes elsewhere and heavily damaging others. Twisters also struck Colorado, North Carolina and California, although no major damage was reported.

Senate OKS lobbying bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Advocates of closing Washington's "revolving door" are optimistic following Senate approval of a measure to restrict lobbying by former members of Congress and top executive branch officials.

"I think we stand a chance" in the House, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said Tuesday after voice-vote Senate passage of a bill that includes the first prohibitions on lobbying by former senators and representatives.

Ann McBride, senior vice president of Common Cause, the self-described citizens' lobby, said that "the real question now is what happens in the House. Whether the bill becomes law rests with the House Democratic leadership."

The ethical issue of post-employment lobbying is scheduled for its first recent House airing on Thursday at a hearing by the Judiciary subcommittee on administrative law and governmental relations.

Gulf confrontation 'closed'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the United States considers its confrontation with Iran in the Persian Gulf "closed" following attacks that left two Iranian oil platforms destroyed and Iran's Navy heavily damaged.

"It seems to be quieting down and we hope it continues that way," Reagan said Tuesday.

Reagan also said he was not surprised by Iran's decision to fight back Monday after U.S. forces destroyed the platforms in retaliation for the mining that damaged a Navy ship last week.

The U.S. Navy later sunk or damaged six Iranian warships in the day-long warfare.

Speakes regrets error

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House spokesman Larry Speakes says he regrets concocting quotes that he passed off as President Reagan's own words and acknowledges he has "provided fodder" for the president's critics.

"I have wronged President Reagan, a man whom I deeply admire and respect" Speakes said Tuesday. "And I have provided fodder for those who would aim their cannons of criticism at the president I served loyally for six years. I deeply regret it."

His comments were reported in today's editions of The Washington Post.

House clears education bill, dial-a-porn amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sweeping education bill expanding services to the nation's students was headed for certain Senate approval, but a section outlawing pornographic telephone messages seemed sure to wind up in court.

■ Related story — 4B

The House passed the multibillion-dollar education measure on a 397-1 vote Tuesday, but only after a series of complicated maneuvers to attach a total ban on dial-a-porn phone services. Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., was the lone member voting no.

"No court has ever upheld a complete ban on non-obscene, so-called 'indecent' speech," said Barry Lynn, legislative counsel to the American Civil Liberties Union. He said the ban, born of concern for children, intrudes on the privacy and free-speech rights of American adults.

The Hawkins-Stafford School Improvement Act authorizes up to $8.3 billion in spending next year on elementary and secondary school programs, with more than half the money going to disadvantaged children at risk of failing.

It contains new programs to prevent dropouts and help high school students with weak skills, and greatly expands drug abuse education and magnet schools. New money also was earmarked for math, science and foreign-language programs.

"This is one of the most important bills that we will ever pass, one that we want to pass if we want to be competitive," said Rep. William Goodling, R-Pa.

The bill, a compromise between the versions passed by the House and Senate, was named for Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, and retiring Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., former chairman of the Senate education subcommittee.

Passed with only one dissenting vote in each chamber, the bill would have glided through House-Senate negotiations and through the House except for the telephone pornography ban grafted onto the Senate measure by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Negotiators had agreed on a compromise under which telephone customers in most of the country would not have access to the lewd messages unless an adult called the phone company to request a hook-up. The compromise ultimately was killed and the Helms ban restored.

U.S. response must be measured

President Reagan's decision to order military retaliation against Iran for mine damage to a U.S. ship in the Persian Gulf was on target. No less important, however, was the fact that congressional leaders exhibited solidarity by backing Reagan in his response to the Iranian mining.

Reagan's decision constituted a measured response to a measured "attack" by Iran and in that regard, there's little, if any, reason to doubt that he was right to order the attacks on Iranian oil drilling rigs in the gulf.

"We've taken this action to make certain the Iranians have no illusions about the cost of irresponsible behavior," said the President. "They must know that we will protect our ships and if they threaten us, they'll pay a price."

That is an undisputably fair and unemotional approach to maintaining U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf which, for years, has held the potential for even more widespread violence. For what it is worth, the United States is there to project a degree of international stability by protecting the shipping lanes from Iranian or Iraqi attacks. Such a posture sets the U.S. forces up for attacks and, of course, the only logical course is to give those forces the ability to respond to attacks.

Even House Speaker Jim Wright expressed support for Reagan's position early this week, saying, "He is the commander-in-chief, and when action is taken by the United States, it certainly behooves all of us to close ranks and to give the world a view of a nation that is united."

The fact that Reagan consulted with congressional leaders before approving this week's attacks certainly helped in gaining their support which could prove vital if the situation in the gulf worsens. Unlike the situation last October when Reagan ordered a similar move, there was no outcry this time that he invoke the War Powers Act. That's good because U.S. forces must be permitted to respond to such Iranian actions.

At the same time it goes without saying that Reagan must continue to proceed in a measured fashion. The United States is not in the Persian Gulf to make the situation worse, but to inject a measure of calm and order in a corner of the world that threatens to explode at any minute.

Greenwood votes, too

Allow me to correct the article in the March 24th Reporter-Telegram concerning local races. Voters will choose persons to sit on the governing boards of four, not three, taxing entities in addition to Midland Independent School District. Not only will MISD, Midland City Council, Midland County Hospital District and Midland College district trustees be elected May 7th, but Greenwood Independent School District voters will also be casting votes for three positions on their board. Two places are three-year terms with two candidates for each position, and one place is a one-year unexpired term with three candidates.

Greenwood exists as a result of the school, which has grown from a small Class B school to a 3A school in a very short period of time. The residents of Greenwood earn and spend in Midland, but choose to educate their children in a smaller public school. There is no "town" in Greenwood, unless you consider four churches, two volunteer fire departments, a barber shop, several convenience stores, and various other businesses spread from County Road 1140 to the Martin County line to the Glasscock County line to parts of Highway 158 a "town".

I am very disappointed that our local paper overlooked the existence of GISD. I realize that many residents of Midland are unaware of Greenwood, but I expect the news media to be aware of a local school that on "Teams" scored math and reading sections at or above 90% at all grade levels tested, graduated 50 seniors with over half continuing on to college, is partnered with Texas Tech in an effective schools model, and won both boys and girls District 4-3A basketball titles. I invite you to visit our students, staff, and facilities.

To those in Greenwood who prefer keeping our low profile in order to avoid the rapid growth of previous years, I apologize. We have many things to be proud of, including the fact that we have seven individuals willing to volunteer hundreds of often thankless hours serving as a trustee. I encourage everyone to get to know your current trustees and the candidates, then vote! After all, it is your child's education, your "community," your tax money, and your school.

Volunteers help YMCA

The YMCA is truly a volunteer organization. The development of volunteers is a primary goal of our YMCA. It would be impossible for us to operate without the 500-plus volunteers who serve in helping to develop programs and policies.

Volunteers are truly the heart and soul of our organization and they deserve the highest commendations and appreciation possible.

Because the Y is owned by the community and is an integral part of it, the life of the Y continues beyond staff persons. Staff people move on but the local Y will continue because the volunteers will see to it.

The staff of the Midland YMCA is continuously grateful to the Y volunteers from Arden Grover, president of the Metropolitan Board of Directors, to Tom Worley, coach of a sixth grade boys basketball team.

We salute not only our Y volunteers but all volunteers in our community for the wonderful work they do that makes Midland a great place to live, work and raise families.

J. Durwood Owen
General Director
Midland Metropolitan YMCA

Very special volunteers

The staff and directors of the Midland Rape Crisis Center would like to say "thank you" for all of the hard work and dedication of our volunteers. We know that those are such small words for all the hours they put in to help victims and families of sexual assault. It takes a very special person to do the things that they are called upon to do. Their commitment, concern, compassion, and selflessness is something they can be very proud of.

There are at least 579 victims of sexual assault and their families and over 2,200 people who have called the hotline for counseling that would not have had the help they needed when they reached out if it were not for the volunteers. They truly are the Midland Rape Crisis Center!

North's notebooks reveal his anxiety

WASHINGTON — The secret notebooks of Lt. Col. Oliver North reveal that the gung-ho Marine was afraid of someone blowing the whistle on him for nearly a year before his arms-for-hostages game was finally exposed.

Jack Anderson

That is because we had the goods on North's scheme and his notebooks show that he knew it.

Independent Counsel Lawrence Walsh and the grand jury tried unsuccessfully to legally get their hands on North's notebooks. The congressional investigating committee, which provided North limited immunity, got thousands of pages under subpoena, but only released a few pages to the public. The rest are officially classified as "secret."

We have seen a few of those classified pages which make it clear that North was sweating over how much we knew and how much we would print about the arms-for-hostages dickering with the Iranians.

Here is a chronology:

December 1985 — Dale Van Atta confronted the Pentagon's top man on terrorism, Noel Koch, about the involvement of Gen. Richard Secord and ex-CIA official Thomas Clines in the sale of arms to Iran through Israel in return for hostages. During the Iran-contra hearings, Koch testified that Van Atta had the facts straight. "He came to me and asked me about it. ... I simply said, 'Would you please drop it? I think if you go with this story ... you may get somebody killed.'"

Dec. 12 — An associate of North's on the National Security Council called our office to chew us out for a column which said the CIA station chief in Beirut, William Buckley, had been tortured to death in Iran. At the time, the United States was sticking to the story that hostage Buckley was still alive.

Feb. 21, 1986 — North wrote in his notebooks that an associate of his was "called by Dale Van Atta re Secord/Tom Clines in Israel re hostages."

Feb. 24 — In an interview with Van Atta, President Reagan confirmed the arms-for-hostages story and asked that the information remain secret until the hostages were free. Adm. John Poindexter, Reagan's former national security adviser, later testified in the Iran-contra hearings that he was "very nervous" that Reagan had been so candid.

April 28-June 29 — We published a series of four columns giving the bare outline of the arms-for-hostages deal. In early July, North wrote in his notebooks that our knowledge of the deal had been discussed at a staff meeting.

July 10 — North sent a secret message to Poindexter including references to our information. "It is disturbing that the visit (Robert McFarlane's visit to Teheran) may also be common knowledge."

Aug. 20 — A Washington Post reporter asked North's nominal boss, Howard Teicher, whether our columns were true. Teicher said no. He later told us he was concerned that he would risk the lives of hostages if he confirmed our story.

Sept. 17 — North wrote another secret message to Poindexter making a case for keeping Secretary of State George Shultz in the dark on one aspect of the arms-for-hostages deal. North speculated that the leaks of information to us started with Shultz — that Shultz would confide in someone, who would tell someone else, who would tell someone else. The person at the end of the chain "could well be the source of the Jack Anderson stuff we have seen periodically," North wrote.

By denying our stories, North and others were able to hold the press at bay until November, nearly a year after we first confronted the administration with what we knew.

North's notebooks are full of insights into the depths to which he would sink to get the hostages back. That is clear in a new book by top investigative reporter Steven Emerson of U.S. News & World Report. He is the only journalist who has had extensive unofficial access to most of the notebooks.

His book, "Secret Warriors: Inside the Covert Military Operations of the Reagan Era," reveals that North said in his notebooks that he would be willing to pay $10 million for the release of the hostages.

The money was headed for some of the sleaziest thugs in the Middle East including Sheik Fadlallah, the spiritual head of the Hezbollah terrorist organization. He reportedly blessed terrorists with a ticket to Shiite heaven before they blew up our Marine barracks in Beirut in October 1983 killing 241 Marines. Also on North's payoff list was Hussein Mussavi, a man who was actually kidnapping American hostages and was behind the deaths of 264 Americans, including the Marines.

ROBERTSON IN 1992 — Pat Robertson has no intention of giving up on his quest for the presidency. He is already looking ahead to 1992 and has set up a strong grass-roots organization in 20 states that will serve him well. This year, Robertson will use his organization to rally support behind the Republican nominee. Robertson has confided to us that he does not like George Bush and that he is convinced that Bush sabotaged the Robertson campaign. But he intends to be a loyal Republican and will try to convince his Christian fundamentalist followers, Democrats and Republicans alike, to support Bush. After the election, Robertson will use his nationwide organization to promote his conservative political philosophy.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The recent Academy Awards ceremony passed over a little Japanese film which should have been entered in a category of its own, Best Backstabbing. The film, apparently produced by a powerful union of Japanese farmers, implies that the Japanese will be deformed, disfigured and poisoned by American food imports allegedly treated with toxic chemicals. That won't mean much in Hollywood circles, but in world trade circles, it is a tacky salvo in the battle over the quotas on beef and citrus imposed by the Japanese on our exports to that country.

BIBLE VERSE

And many false prophets shall arise, and shall lead many astray. Matt. 24:11

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Jot down those words; they're memorable!

WASHINGTON — "This is Safire," candidate Richard Nixon said in 1967, introducing me to his innermost circle, "absolutely trustworthy, worked with us in '60. But watch what you say, he's a writer."

William Safire

That half-in-jest remark from a man not yet secretly taping everything is not just a vague recollection. I wrote it down at the time and quoted it verbatim in a book of memoirs later. It's a solid quote, for what it's worth; a historian can trust it.

Not every presidential quotation reported by an aide is exactly accurate. When the nation's capital was in danger of capture by the Southern rebels on April 24, 1861, President Lincoln bitterly noted the absence of federal troops by snapping, "I don't believe there is a North."

That's the way John Hay, his junior secretary, jotted down the remark in his diary that night; when the time came three decades later for the writing of his history, however, Hay softened the line to "I begin to believe there is no North," lest his mythic Lincoln be thought to have doubted the ultimate triumph of the Union.

Aides have long edited, punched up or prettified the remarks of their bosses. W.C. Hudson, a newsman working for Grover Cleveland in the campaign of 1884, found a line in a dull speech saying "We are the trustees and agents of our fellow citizens," and turned it into the snappy "Public office is a public trust." Hudson asked Cleveland if he would stand for the change in the interest of brevity; Cleveland reluctantly agreed to "make his own" the phrase he became famous for, but went to his grave truthfully denying that he ever said it that way.

Cleveland's aide acted properly in getting his boss's approval for the change; Lincoln's aide acted improperly in shading the quotation to fit his image-making; Ronald Reagan's press aide Larry Speakes acted corruptly in pretending to report two statements that President Reagan never made.

"Corrupt" is a rough word, but deliberate distortion of moments in history is a rupture of the trust that should exist between the spokesman and the spoken-to.

The memoir-selling aide has already paid the price in his reputation and in the loss of his post-White House job, and deserves some credit for confessing and correcting the record; but the confession was less out of remorse than out of an attempt to show how smart and powerful he had been when his boss was inadequate to the moment.

The Washington reaction has been cynical: After all, aren't most presidential statements cooked up by some speech writer anyway? That misses the ethical point by a mile.

When a leader chooses to accept the suggested prose of a subordinate, the words become "his own" when delivered or released — because the leader's judgment is at work in selecting them. But when a subordinate cooks up a phony quotation after the fact, the aide is lying, demeaning rather than glorifying his boss and undermining the principle that we all rightly associate with Grover Cleveland.

The brouhaha over The Quotations That Never Were should serve to remind the other busy memoirists of the importance of accuracy. Reagan-era books have fallen far short of the richly detailed Roosevelt-era works of Robert Sherwood, Samuel Rosenman and Harold Ickes, or of the foreign policy insight in the impressive books of Henry Kissinger and Richard Nixon (absolutely trustworthy, but watch what you say, he's a writer now).

So far, Reagan-watchers have seen the embittered manipulations of David Stockman, the discreet frustrations of Al Haig, the pitiful pretensions of Mike Deaver and now the get-even sniping of Larry Speakes.

Soon we can expect the more interesting justification of Don Regan, the more pulsing reporting of speech writer Peggy Noonan and the longer-view observations of Martin Anderson (whose work may have a provocative Iran-contra angle). All will be redeemed in the end, we hope, by the historian-in-residence, Ed Morris.

What can we ask of them, and of the new bunch now getting started in the Bush and Dukakis camps?

Make contemporaneous notes. Write down the funny, poignant or passionate things your tigers say in private. It's not kiss-and-tell; they'll thank you later for remembering.

And peel an eye for the revealing detail. I unloaded a heap of what I thought was insightful historical stuff on Stewart Alsop, the all-time best columnist, and he winnowed out one item to mark a turning point: when Richard Nixon stopped putting a towel on the silk ottoman in front of the chair before putting his feet up. That was the day the president first felt comfortable in the Oval Office.

Did Reagan say that? Only Speakes knows

Larry Speakes has been roundly criticized for putting words in President Reagan's mouth.

As press secretary he made up quotes that he attributed to the President, causing untold damage to Mr. Reagan's reputation as the commander-in-chief of everything he utters.

Art Buchwald

People in the White House press corps were not so much amazed at Speakes' resorting to such subterfuge as they were puzzled about why the President permitted him to do it.

The best explanation is that President Reagan never worried about what Speakes said at his briefings as long as it sounded good to the public.

There were some close calls for the Gipper, however. One time Speakes came into the Oval Office and said, "Sir, we have just secured Grenada. Is there any statement you'd like to make?"

"How about, 'Fourscore and seven years ago our forefathers brought forth on this earth a new nation and that is why we have nothing to fear but fear itself'?"

"It's a bit wordy," Larry said.

"Well, you have the idea, just kick it around and use anything you want to."

"I will say, 'This is one of the greatest victories against communism in our lifetime and is a signal to our foes that we will never negotiate out of fear nor fear to negotiate.'"

"That's fine. Good night."

"But, sir, it's 4 o'clock in the afternoon. You have to make a speech this evening at your state dinner for Margaret Thatcher."

"What are you going to tell the press I said?" the President asked.

"I might tell them that you said Prime Minister Thatcher has brought us nothing but blood, sweat and tears."

"I hadn't planned on saying that. Why can't you report when I made my toast I had no comment."

"The press doesn't like that. Don't worry, I'll think of something."

"You're very good, Larry."

"I see it this way, Mr. President. A press secretary's job is to make the President look better than he really is. If I can have you expounding brilliant things we both win."

"How do we both win?"

"You come out of it as the Great Communicator and I get a much higher advance on my book."

"Larry, are we doing anything wrong?"

"Of course not. I am your spokesman. What difference does it make if you say it or I say it, as long as you get credit for it?"

"Suppose they find out the words aren't mine?"

"Only you and I know that, sir, and I sure as heck am not going to tell. Look, I won't make up quotes all the time. If you ever come up with anything original I'll use it."

"And you don't think it will hurt us when it comes out?"

"Not on your life. You don't think Abraham Lincoln said everything he was credited with?"

"Can I give you my statement now on how we won the war in Afghanistan?" the President asked.

"Try it out on me, and I'll see if I like it."

"You really take over, don't you, Larry?"

"Better me than Gorbachev."

Iran orders volunteers to report for duty

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iran today told all volunteers to report for duty and put its bases on alert to face what it called "bestial aggression" from the United States and Iraq. Kuwait said Iran fired a missile into its territory before dawn.

Iran said it launched a new thrust into northeastern Iraq, and both Iran and Iraq reported exchanging air strikes.

Shipping executives said commercial vessels were avoiding the Persian Gulf and Iranian warships were reportedly staying in port.

The U.S. Navy sank or damaged six Iranian vessels and destroyed two offshore oil platforms Monday in the heaviest fighting with the Iranians since the U.S. Navy began escorting Kuwaiti ships in the gulf last July.

Kuwait's Defense Ministry gave no details of where the "Scud-type" missile exploded today or whether it caused casualties or damage.

A source who spoke on condition of anonymity said the missile fell near desert oilfield operated by Getty Oil in the vicinity of Wafra, which is on the Saudi border.

The Scud is a Soviet-designed surface-to-surface missile with a range of about 180 miles. Iran has used such missiles against Iraq in the 7½-year-old gulf war.

Iran last year fired several Chinese-made Silkworm missiles into Kuwait's coastal waters from the Faw peninsula.

Tehran Radio, announcing the nationwide mobilization, declared: "Today our revolution and our heroic nation is faced with the onslaught of the evil triangle of America, Iraq and the reactionaries."

It said all volunteers should report to their bases throughout the country "and get ready for departure" to the battlefront. The broadcast did not mention numbers, but Iranian leaders have claimed more than 3 million Iranians have undergone military training in the last six months.

The radio added: "At this critical juncture, in order to respond to the bestial aggression of America and regional reactionaries, all basij (volunteer) forces" should immediately report for duty.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, said Iranian forces killed or wounded 300 Iraqis and captured more than 250 in the Shemiran mountain region of Kurdistan in the new offensive.

The agency said Iranian warplanes bombed "military and economic targets" in the northern Iraqi city of Erbil soon after dawn today, causing "heavy" damage and casualties. The Iraqis reported civilian casualties, but gave no numbers.

IRNA said Iraqi warplanes bombed residential areas of the western cities of Dezful, Hamedan and Boroujerd, causing civilian casualties.

Iraq claimed its forces were mopping up Iranian pockets of resistance in the Faw peninsula, which it recaptured this week. Iran seized control of the strategic peninsula two years ago.

The search continued today for a U.S. Marine attack helicopter and its two-man crew, missing since going out on a night mission following Monday's fighting.

The AH-1 Cobra gunship and its two-man crew failed to return to the guided missile cruiser Wainwright from the Monday night flight.

A Navy spokesman, Lt. Cmdr. Mark Van Dyke, said there was no evidence the helicopter had been shot down.

There was no estimate of Iranian casualties Monday, but Navy officers said they presumed them to be heavy.

Iran has maintained the U.S. attacks on Iranian oil platforms were planned in concert with Iraq.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, denying that assertion, insisted the United States is neutral in the gulf war and said the American presence in the gulf is "nonconfrontational."

The Reagan adminstration said it attacked the Iranian oil platforms in retaliation for the mine that damaged the USS Samuel B. Roberts last week, wounding 10 crewmen. The Navy said other Iranian targets were fired on only after they threatened U.S. forces.

President Reagan said there was no doubt Iran planted the mine that damaged the Roberts. He said it was quieter in the gulf Tuesday and "we hope it continues that way."

One gulf-based marine salvage executive said the gulf appeared "ghostly" today from lack of shipping. He and others, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said commercial vessels were avoiding the waterway.

Pro-Iranian group threatens retaliation

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A pro-Iranian group holding two Americans said early today it will retaliate against "America's aggressions" in the Persian Gulf, where U.S. and Iranian forces clashed this week.

"We will not sit back and watch America's aggressions in the gulf," said the Revolutionary Justice Organization, in a handwritten statement delivered shortly after midnight to the independent daily newspaper Al-Nahar.

"There will be retaliations and retaliations to punish the aggressors and make them understand they will regret their actions," said the statement, written in Arabic.

The statement did not specify what measures the group would take but included a photograph of Joseph James Cicippio, one of the two Americans the group is holding.

Cicippio, 57, of Valley Forge, Pa., was acting comptroller of the American University of Beirut. He was kidnapped in the Lebanese capital on Sept. 12, 1986.

Edward Austin Tracy of Burlington, Vt., a writer who was abducted in west Beirut on Oct. 21, 1986, is the other American whose kidnapping was claimed by Revolutionary Justice Organization.

In the photograph, Cicippio was clean shaven and wearing a navy blue track suit with white stripes on the shoulder. He appeared thinner than he did in the last picture released by the organization, on Jan. 17, 1987.

U.S. women injured in Costa Rica explosion

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Two American women and four Costa Ricans were wounded by a fragmentation grenade that exploded near the American-Costa Rican Cultural Center, officials said.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for Tuesday's attack, which Public Security MinisterHernan Garron called "a terrorist act."

He said officials had no suspects.

The Intelligence and Security Directorate said the blast apparently was caused by an M-67 fragmentation grenade tossed onto a sidewalk near the Cultural Center. Three cars were damaged, its report said.

The blast occurred shortly after 8 a.m. (6 a.m. EDT) about 50 yards south of the Cultural Center building in the eastern Los Yoses district, said U.S. Embassy spokesman Mark Krischick. The building was not damaged, he said.

He said Tuesday night that U.S. officials had been unable to verify that the explosion was caused by a grenade. However, he noted that Costa Rican officials "were collecting evidence all day."

"We haven't had the opportunity to review the evidence," Krischick said. Earlier Tuesday, Krischick had said the explosion was believed caused by a malfunctioning power line transformer.

Red Cross officials identified the wounded Americans as Alice Feister, a professor at the Cultural Center from the Washington D.C. area, and Shelly Bartain, a student from California.

Hometowns and ages were not immediately available.

Feister underwent surgery for several hours at Calderon Guardia Hospital after suffering a severe artery wound. She was reported in fair condition Tuesday night and was "expected to pull through," said Krischick.

Bartain suffered lacerations and bruises but was in good condition, Krischick said. She was expected to return to the United States today, a doctor at the hospital said.

The other wounded were identified as Alvaro Salas Parra, 23; William Quesada Solano, 22; Oscar Eric Bogantes, 17; and Virginia Sanchez Cruz, 26, all Costa Rican citizens.

Garron said evidence collected at the scene indicated the grenade was thrown onto a sidewalk near the Cultural Center, although it may have exploded beneath one of the three damaged cars parked near the Center.

Jorge Luis Ulate, an explosives expert with the security ministry, said the device appeared to be an M-67 fragmentation grenade, capable of inflicting serious damage up to a distance of 100 yards.

Ulate said the device normally would explode between two and six seconds after its pin is pulled.

By Tuesday night, police had not located any witnesses.

One person, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, said he was near the site, heard a loud explosion and later saw a cloud in the vicinity of the Cultural Center. He said one person next to the nearby Anglo-American school appeared to have been hurt by the blast.

President Oscar Arias visited the injured in the hospital and condemned the incident.

"This country, which is a haven of peace, one day could turn into a Costa Rica invaded by terrorism and violence if we don't adopt energetic measures to prevent it," he said.

The explosion follows a violent demonstration April 7 in Honduras by students enraged by the forced extradition of a suspected drug dealer to the United States. The students sacked and burned the U.S. Consulate and offices of the U.S. Information Service in Tegucigalpa, the Honduran capital.

WORLD in brief

Remains of 13th century pope taken from chapel

L'AQUILA, Italy (AP) — Police said Tuesday they are following a lead in the theft of the remains of Pope Celestine V, which were taken earlier this week from a cathedral.

Authorities said investigators had narrowed the leads to one but declined to give any details.

Celestine's five-month papacy in 1294 was marked by incompetence and subservience to Charles II. Acknowledging his incompetence, Celestine declared on Dec. 10 of that year that popes had the right to resign. Three days later, he resigned.

Fearing that Celestine could become the center of schismatic intrigue because of the resignation, his successor, Pope Boniface VIII, decided to keep Celestine in custody at the castle of Monte Fumone. He died in 1296.

The Vatican newspaper said Tuesday there was "profound indignation in L'Aguila for the grave sacreligious act."

Thieves took the mummified remains either Sunday night or early Monday after forcing open a chapel door and a silver urn in the Cathedral of Santa Maria di Collemaggio.

Americans climbing peak

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — An American team scaling 28,162-foot Mount Kanchenjunga, the third-highest peak in the world, has established a base camp half way up, it was reported Tuesday.

The expedition set up its camp 16,334 feet up the Himalayan mountain's flank at Pangpema on April 3, according to reports reaching Katmandu on Tuesday. The Americans are trying to climb the peak from its northern side.

The 14-member team is led by Carlos P. Buhler, 34, a mountaineering teacher from Bellingham, Wash.

The peak ranks as the third highest mountain in the world after Mount Everest and K2, both also in the Himalayas.

Their exact heights have been disputed in recent years. The latest detailed survey, done last summer by Ardito Desio of Italy using satellite technology, pegged Everest at 29,100 feet and K2 at 28,260, according to George Wallerstein of the University of Washington.

East German scales wall

BERLIN, West Germany (AP) — A 31-year-old East German man dodged salvos of bullets to scramble over the heavily guarded Berlin Wall and dashed unhurt to West Berlin, police said.

West Berlin police spokesman Peter Glaser said the man used a homemade ladder to scale fences on the East Berlin side of the wall near the Neukoeln district before dawn Tuesday.

He reached the wall under cover of darkness, but East German border guards finally spotted him and began firing, police said. West Berlin witnesses told police they heard three salvos of automatic weapons fire.

The man climbed over the barrier and dashed across a narrow strip of East German territory to safety.

Meanwhile, a 22-year-old East German border guard in uniform on Tuesday escaped to the West German state of Lower Saxony, police in Hanover said.

They said the guard, a second lieutenant, fled unnoticed while on duty.

Rapes expected to continue

TORONTO (AP) — A rapist who has assaulted five women is getting bolder and will likely attack again — soon, say police and a rape center spokesman.

"This man is a serial rapist," said police Sgt. Pat Tallon. "There is a pattern. He frequents side streets, strikes always at night, intimidates with a knife. He is brazen. He doesn't hurry. He doesn't rush."

The victim of the latest attack was a 19-year-old student who was grabbed from behind as she left a bus to walk to her home Monday night in suburban Scarborough.

She struggled, but he punched her and dragged her between two houses, where she was sexually assaulted for about 30 minutes, police said. She treated and released from hospital after the attack.

Previous assaults have lasted up to an hour.

"This is a very sick individual — his controls are shot," said Judith Hoilett of the Sexual Assault Care Centre at Whitby (Ontario) General Hospital. "He seems to be attacking in twos and he probably will strike again soon," she said. "The viciousness has been increasing with each assault."

Mexico names ambassador

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Juan Jose Bremer was named as Mexico's ambassador to the Soviet Union, the Foreign Ministry announced.

Bremer has been president of the Chamber of Deputies' Foreign Relations Committee since 1985. He was an ambassador to Sweden in 1982 and from 1976 to 1982 had held the position of director general of the National Institute of Fine Arts. He was named to the new position Tuesday.

President Miguel de la Madrid earlier this year named Deputy Foreign Minister Ricardo Valero Becerra as ambassador to the Soviet Union but withdrew the nomination before he ever reached Moscow.

The developments prompted widespread speculation about controversy inside the Foreign Ministry.

School board candidates speak out

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

The entire throng of 23 candidates running for the school district's Board of Trustees is in favor of raising taxes given a "proven need," a questionnaire says.

The pack — all gunning for one of seven spots on the board — had answered 11 queries on a "key issue questionnaire" prior to meeting the public Tuesday night at a forum sponsored by the Midland City Council PTA.

Surveying candidate's answers on the questionnaire, only District 7 candidate Connie Reeves advocated abolishing the district's setup of two equal high schools and the elementary school "cluster system."

All 23 candidates said they were in favor of teaching abstinence in Midland Independent School District sex education classes in the senior and junior high schools, and all but one advocated adding two or more MISD drug counselors.

Bettering communication between MISD factions, assuring quality education, improving teacher morale and reducing the dropout rate were the platforms of choice for most candidates Tuesday night.

And though it was the opening night of Little League baseball in Midland, a crowd of about 150 turned out to hear the candidates speak.

The District 1 race pits James Fuller against Edia Hernandez.

Ms. Hernandez was instrumental in leading the fight to get single-member-district representation on the school board. Fuller serves on the district's community panel publicly supporting the upcoming $11.8 million bond election.

Both candidates advocate reducing the dropout rate in MISD.

Fuller said the district should hire qualified minority teachers who would improve the self-esteem of students deemed dropout risks.

Ms. Hernandez said implementing dropout prevention measures early on would achieve that end.

Both District 1 candidates support an $11.8 million bond proposal that would enlarge the number of MISD classrooms. Maintaining two separate high schools also is a position both candidates take, they said.

The field of candidates in the District 2 race consists of Tony Carrillo, Adela Marmolejo and Clarence "Putty" Zachery.

All three support two high schools and the bond election, they said.

Carrillo said he was against the district's current 24-hour drug policy and its closed campus policy.

Ms. Marmolejo, who began her speech with an introduction in Spanish, wants the school board to meet at night, she said.

Zachery adamantly spoke against meshing the city's two high schools, citing what he believes is an uneven high school situation in Odessa.

"If I ask you who was going to win a tiddlywinks game between Odessa and Permian High, you could tell me," Zachery said.

Zachery was the only candidate to voice his support for keeping MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi on board, although none spoke against the superintendent.

District 3 candidates Don Aldridge, Ken Morrison and Price Parker said they support two high schools and the bond election, but were against the current school board's 1985 high school boundary change.

Aldridge and Morrison expressed concern for the average kids in MISD who don't necessarily excel, but don't appear to be a dropout risk.

Parker voiced his opposition to any "steering committees" that try to affect the outcome of the school board race and to the district's closed campus policy.

The District 4 field consists of Jim Builta, Joe Chavez and Jackie Hamilton, all of whom support two high schools and were in favor of the 1985 high school boundary change.

Builta said he is bent on making the seven single-member-district board work and wants to bring discipline back to schools by giving teachers and administrators more authority.

Supporting computer-based education and better money management are two plans Chavez would implement if elected, he said.

Ms. Hamilton wants abstinence stressed in teaching students about sex, drugs and suicide, she said, adding that "with clean minds and clean bodies, they can concentrate on studies."

The largest area, District 5, has four candidates running: Roy Marshall, incumbent Betsy Robinson, George Staley and Robbie Warley.

All favor the upcoming bond election; all but Ms. Warley answered the questionnaire in support of two equal high schools. Staley said he was in favor of the 1985 boundary change, while Marshall and Mrs. Robinson said they were not.

Mrs. Warley entered no answer to the questionnaire query on the 1985 boundary change.

Marshall advocated moving the meeting to evenings and claimed the way to improve teacher morale was through a better communication between the board and the faculty.

Mrs. Robinson reiterated her record with the district and took credit for implementing a drug policy and other positive peer leadership programs in place in the district.

The incumbent wants to add "town meetings" to her district so that she can obtain feedback on board issues to present at school board meetings, she said.

Staley, mirroring Parker's stance, is against any steering committee's attempt to influence the candidates or the outcome of the race.

Ms. Warley's greatest concern, she said, is what she sees as dropping academic standards in the district.

"The former school board was too concerned with controversies," she added.

The $11.8 million bond election and maintaining two separate high schools are two issues supported by all the District 6 candidates — Dianne Anderson, Mona Craig, incumbent Joe Reed, and Bob Rich.

Ms. Craig did not support the boundary change, while Ms. Anderson and Reed did, they answered on their questionnaire. Rich didn't answer the boundary question.

Man accused in two attempted murders held without bond

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

An 18-year-old Midland man twice accused of attempted murder was ordered held without bond early today, a move a prosecutor said was necessary to "prevent this kind of thing from happening again."

Alfredo Vela, 911 N. Lamesa Rd., was ordered held at the county jail by 142nd State District Judge Pat Baskin. The ruling — which the judge made without comment — followed an hour-long hearing.

Vela is accused of the stabbing early Sunday of Enrique Lara, 31, of Midland. Lara remained in serious condition today at Midland Memorial Hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The Sunday assault occurred while Vela already was under indictment for attempted murder for an August 1987 assault. After he was charged with attempted murder Monday in the latest case, Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set bond at $500,000.

Prosecutors immediately began working on a motion to revoke Vela's bond, District Attorney Al Schorre said.

At the hearing, Casamina Colunga, 41, of Odessa, testified she saw Lara and Vela's brother, Valentin, fighting at a family reunion and birthday party. The party was being held at a residence in south Midland.

After Lara took off his belt and began swinging it, Vela "backed off," she told an interpreter. After she asked Lara to leave, he began to do so, but was stopped by the defendant, she said.

Lara was walking away from the area and was unlocking the door to his vehicle when the defendant "called him back," Ms. Colunga told prosecutor Will Lundy.

Vela called Lara a "wetback," which angered Lara to the point that he took off his belt — with a large metal buckle — and began swinging it again, she testified.

The defendant then pulled out a knife, "ducked under" the swinging belt and stabbed Lara several times, she said.

Under cross-examination from court-appointed defense attorney Matt Blair, Ms. Colunga said Lara swung the belt before Vela stabbed him.

Blair did not present any evidence at the hearing.

Vela was arrested a few hours after the stabbing, according to investigators. The knife has not been found.

In his argument before Baskin, Blair said testimony proved both men had weapons.

"It is very clear that the defendant has a good case for self-defense," the attorney said.

MC trustees elect three new officers

From Staff Reports

Midland College trustees elected three new officers at their Tuesday afternoon meeting, one of whom is seeking re-election this May and is running unopposed.

Ralph Way was elected president of the nine-member board and John Cooper was elected vice president.

William Kleine, running for another six-year term, was elected secretary/treasurer.

Officers serve one-year terms and the president may serve no more than two consecutive terms, said H.A. Tuck, college spokesman.

Other members of the board include past-president, Gloria Hinojosa, Jack Huff, Parker Humes, Steven Kiser, Kenneth Peeler and Fred Wright Jr.

Mrs. Hinojosa and Humes also are running for re-election this May.

In other board action, the accounting firm of Grant Thornton was selected to conduct the college's required year-end audit next fall.

Absentee turnout for city elections 'slow'

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The election will culminate on May 7 when the majority of registered voters cast ballots for an $11.8 million school bond election.

Midland Election Administrator Bettye Calvert — surprised by the "slow" absentee turnout in city elections — had hoped the seven contested school board races would generate some interest among voters.

"I expected a much heavier turnout," she said. "There seemed to be so much interest in the school board election and the school bond election that I thought we'd have more people turn out.

"We had people come in during the (March) primary ready to vote on the bond election. I don't know where they are," she said.

Mrs. Calvert reported a total of 40 ballots cast in person by voters since absentee voting began Monday, but added that another 124 voters have requested absentee ballots by mail.

"I would have to characterize the turnout as surprisingly slow," she said, observing that the deadline for casting absentee ballots is May 3.

The election will culminate on May 7 when the majority of registered voters cast ballots for an $11.8 million school bond election as well as for mayor, City Council and school, college and hospital trustees.

Greenwood voters will decide the fate of school board, hospital and college candidates.

At the polling places, voters will cast ballots on the county-owned lever voting machines rather than the paper ballots used in the past two elections, said Mrs. Calvert, observing that the county leased its optical counters only for the primary and runoff elections.

The paper absentee ballots will be counted by hand, she said.

With 16 different ballots, Mrs. Calvert worries that voters may not know at which polling place they are to vote. Single-member-district elections for the school trustee and City Council races necessitated the printing of different ballots.

To simplify the process, election officials printed the district number on each voter registration card. "I hope this will help people in the future," she said.

Workshops on alcoholism, chemical dependency offered

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

John Reed

Two workshops on alcoholism and chemical dependency will be held in Midland April 30 as part of the Midland Council on Alcoholism/Drug Abuse's continuing educational programs, according to John Reed, the council's executive director.

Both seminars will feature Dr. Anand W. Mehendale, a Kerrville neurologist-addictionlogist who is medical director of La Hacienda, an adult residential chemical-dependency treatment center in the Texas Hill Country.

The upcoming programs include:

— "An Overview of Chemical Dependency and An Introduction to Chemical Dependency Treatment for Health-Care Professionals" from 9 a.m. to noon in the Ramada Hotel Ballroom at 3100 W. Wall Ave.

— "Supervisory and Management Training Pertaining to Chemical Dependency Among Employees" from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. in the Ramada Hotel Ballroom.

The morning workshop on an "Overview of Chemical Dependency" will provide an "in-depth understanding of chemical dependency," Reed said. The workshop will address chemical dependency as a "primary disease" — the genetic and neuro-chemical basis of addiction. The workshop will focus on symptoms of chemical dependency and will address the "legal and ethical licensing issues" pertaining the health-care profession.

The afternoon workshop on chemical dependency in the work place will zero in on identifying "troubled employees," how to intervene as a step to direct the employee to treatment, the treatment program and re-placing the employee in the work place.

Al Salazar, a substance-abuse counselor and a registered hypnotherapist, will join Mehendale in conducting the afternoon workshop. Currently, Salazar is director of industrial marketing for the Horizon Hospital Network.

Both workshops are accredited by the Texas Association of Alcohol and Drug Abuse Counselors.

Both workshops are open to the public and specialists in the drug-abuse fields. The fee is $15 per person for each workshop.

Reed said that Mehendale and Salazar "will be available to address any specific questions that employers might have" about chemical dependency in the work place.

The workshops are part of a continuing education program coordinated by the Midland Council on Alcoholism, Reed said.

Earlier this year, the council produced a seminar on "Alcoholism, Family Issues and Co-dependency."

Robinson to run again for school board slot

Robinson

School board trustee Betsy Robinson recently announced she will seek re-election in the May 7 Midland Independent School District race.

She is running for the District 5 position.

"I am committed to academic excellence, effective schools, an atmosphere conducive to learning and positive peer leadership training," she said.

During her current three-year term, she said she has learned valuable lessons in networking, research and accomplishing goals in a bureaucracy.

"As a new trustee in 1985, I discovered MISD had no policy or programs attacking drug abuse. As a full-time volunteer, I tackled the problem.

"By working with community leaders I led the school board to adopt strong policies and programs that received state and national recognition. We now have excellent counselors, trained staff and insight classes for students and parents," Mrs. Robinson said.

The trustee added that she "encouraged students to say 'yes' to life" by bringing in the ALL-STARS program, Lions-Quest, teen court and evangelist Dave Roever.

"I will bring the balance of integrity, commitment and experience to the new board," she said.

Issues she said she feels are important to the race include striving for academic excellence, preventing substance abuse, leadership training for students and the teaching of abstinence in sexually transmitted disease education.

Mrs. Robinson has a bachelor's degree from Wayne State University and is a former teacher on the junior and senior high levels and also taught adults.

She has been a Midland resident for 12 years.

Her other community activities include the Midland Crime Prevention Commission, Neighbors Against Burglary and Drugs Inc., Council Against Substance Abuse, Midland County Families in Action, Neighborhood Watch, PTA and the Midland College Advisory Council.

She is married to Jerry Robinson, a pilot, and has three children.

Mrs. Robinson has received recognition from the governor's office for her "invaluable service to youth," she said.

Israeli statesman praises U.S.-backed peace plan

DALLAS (AP) — Speaking near the eve of Israel's 40th anniversary, Israeli statesman Abba Eban praised the latest U.S. peace plan for the Mideast.

Eban said "we cannot hope to avoid war" unless Israel reaches a territorial compromise with Arab states.

"If we maintain our present territorial structure," Eban told 2,500 people Tuesday at Southern Methodist University, "we cannot hope to avoid war. Would anybody make peace with us if we kept 100 percent of the territory?"

The Palestinian uprising in the West Bank and Gaza Strip would eventually unite the Arab World and pose a risk to Israel, he said.

Eban urged Americans to support U.S. Secretary of State George Schultz's proposal for an international conference on the Middle East to negotiate an alteration of Israel's borders.

Israel celebrates its 40th anniversary of independence Thursday.

Eban called the history of the modern Jewish state "a noble adventure" that rescued two million Jewish immigrants "out of the depths of despair" after World War II. They came to a country with a growing modern economy, he said.

Eban contrasted praise for Israel's "swift growth" with anxiety over Israel's survival if its policy toward the occupied West Bank and Gaza territories doesn't change.

Eban urged listeners not to let the Schultz peace plan die.

"We need to make a choice," said Eban, 73, Israel's first ambassador to the United Nations and a member of the Israeli parliament.

"Do we want to breathe in a slightly more compact Jewish state or suffocate in a larger state?"

WORKSHOP

Recently, the council promoted an alcohol-free weekend to encourage drinkers to abstain in order to gauge their compulsion to drink and to reflect on the impact of alcohol on their lives.

"We wanted people to have an introspective on their lives and to weigh the importance that alcohol may be playing in their lives. "How important is alcohol to you?"

Reed said that those who were "not able to stick with" a commitment not to drink over the weekend "need to take a look at their lives and how important alcohol is to their lives."

"It was a success," Reed said of the alcohol-free weekend.

"We are not a temperance society," Reed said of the Midland Council on Alcoholism. "We are not against the sale of alcohol. We want to be there for people who get in trouble with their drinking."

The council will conduct a seminar on "Alcoholism and The Aging" this summer, Reed said.

"All we are trying to accomplish is to make the community of Midland aware of our services that are available on a free basis," he said.

The council maintains a film and literature library, provides educational programs on alcoholism and drug abuse, and offers referral services to troubled people who may benefit from "agencies and treatment alternatives that are available in the community," Reed said.

Reed, who views alcoholism and chemical abuse seriously, said he is disturbed over the use of the terms "workaholic" and "chocoholic" which tend to "trivialize and take away from the seriousness of the disease of alcoholism."

HEARING

"Mr. Lara attacked Mr. Vela...he defended himself at that time," Blair said.

But Vela's alleged action — pulling a knife and stabbing Lara at least four times — "far exceeded" what he needed to do to defend himself, Lundy argued.

"The defendant knew what he was doing," he added.

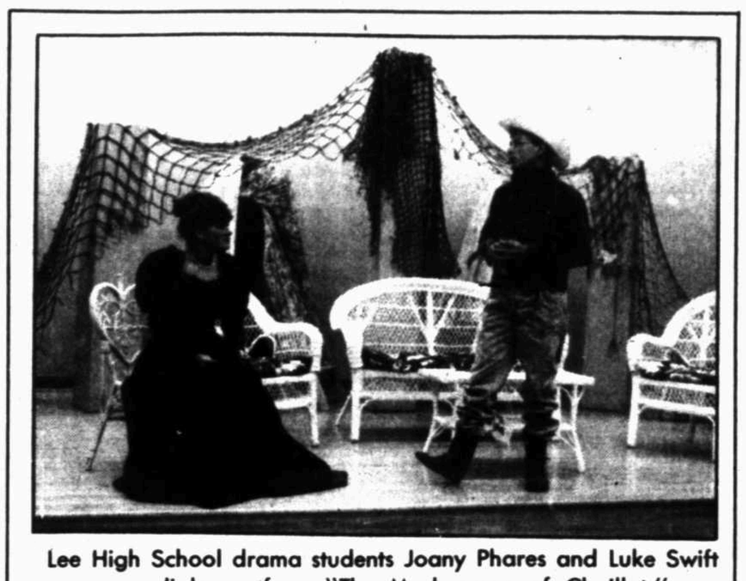
Denial of any bond was the "proper and necessary action to be taken to prevent this kind of thing from happening again," Lundy told the judge.

In the earlier attack, Vela was among several men indicted for attempted murder and aggravated assault March 9, according to 142nd State District Court records.

Eduardo Salcido, 18, 309 E. Cuthbert Ave., was "stabbed and kicked" several times Aug. 16, 1987, by a group of youths that approached him in he 700 block of North Dallas Street.

He was paralyzed by the attack and remains a quadriplegic, according to Lundy.

Following the hearing, Baskin set both cases for trial the week of May 17.



Lee High School drama students Joany Phares and Luke Swift carry on a dialogue from "The Madwoman of Chaillot."

Lee students take honors in drama

From Staff Reports

Lee High School drama students captured the spotlight in one-act play district competitions recently, earning more team and individual honors than any other group in district competition.

The group captured UIL district honors for their performance of "The Madwoman of Chaillot," a humorous play by Jean Giraudoux featuring a number of "characters."

A large and talented cast was required for this particular setting.

In individual district designations, Laura Griffin was named as best actress, by a unanimous vote of the judges, Joany Phares and Scott Lunsford were named to the All Star cast and Sonia Hancock received an honorable mention.

Considering the quantity and quality of talent in the competition, these titles are highly coveted by the contestants, said local school officials.

Area competitions, a geographic grouping stretching from the panhandle to the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex, garnered additional accolades for drama students. Miss Griffin and Miss Hancock did replays; Miss Griffin again as an all star cast member and Miss Hancock again as an honorable mention.

"It has been many years since Midland students have ranked so well in dramatic competition. Lee High School and Midland should be very proud of these groups of dedicated young people," said Horace Griffin, drama coach.

Other cast and crew are: Toni Perry, Rico Enriquez, Karen Herne, Brenda Drake, Jennifer Lane, Dee Rose, Luke Swift, Paul Paget, Scott Thompson and Kathy Dees.

Clements says session on school financing possible

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A special legislative session this year to consider a constitutional amendment that would ratify the current Texas public school finance system is possible, Gov. Bill Clements said Tuesday.

The Republican governor, however, rejected Democratic Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's assertion that such a move would mean "the state would back away from its historic commitment to education."

A Clements-appointed task force has spent the past three months studying the current school finance system before it begins drafting a plan that would pass constitutional muster. It planned to present its suggestions to the 71st Legislature, which convenes in January.

In 1987, Travis County District Judge Harley Clark ruled that the present system is unconstitutional because it does not provide students in rich and poor school districts with equal access to education funds. The state has appealed Clark's ruling, but Clements and other state leaders predict it will stand.

Speaking in Houston Monday, the governor said "the only real solution" to the problem is a constitutional amendment. Clarifying that statement Tuesday, he told reporters that state attorneys are drafting several possibilities.

"We're a long way from coming down on specific language that would cure the so-called unconstitutional language," Clements said. Asked if that change in the Constitution would "more or less preserve" the current system, he said, "I would think so. I think that would be the purpose of it."

Asked further if he will call a special session on the issue this year, Clements said, "Everything is possible."

Hobby also predicted that any solution would require a constitutional amendment "with some other things along with it." Any attempt to ratify the current system with a constitutional amendment would have trouble obtaining a two-thirds vote in the Legislature and winning voter approval, he added.

"I certainly don't think the state would back away from its historic commitment to education."

MC offering courses on hunter safety, real estate

From Staff Reports

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer two short courses beginning next week.

Courses are as follows:

Hunter Safety will be taught by Duane Ervin on Monday through Thursday from 7-10 p.m., April 25 through April 28.

A complete course in Hunter Education, this course will include instructions in rifle, shotgun and bowhunting handling and safety, outdoor ethics, laws and regulations, conservation, hunting traditions, wildlife identification, field care of game, and wilderness first aid and survival. Course fee is $10.

Real Estate Exam Review will be taught by Wes Cordeau on Friday, April 29 from 6-10 p.m. and from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. on Saturday, April 30.

This course will include a review of the Real Estate Licence Act, real estate economics, estates, title principles, agent relationships and real estate math. This course will also include study techniques and test-taking strategies followed by a practice exam. Course fee is $60.

For more information on these and other Continuing Education short courses come by the Office of Continuing Education in the Administration Building or call 685-4518.

Ms. Anderson said the board must "turn away from a Band-Aid approach to problem solving."

Ms. Craig blamed what she sees as poor education on the lack of communication between the board and the parents and faculty and said she wants more elementary counselors and instructional material available to teachers.

Assessing "every program not mandated" was also something Ms. Craig advocated.

"I will listen and represent...not rule," Ms. Craig promised.

Reed stressed that the new school board should stress experience and new ideas and supports tight fiscal control of the district's $60 million budget.

"I am committed to making single-member districts work," Reed said.

Rich sees a chance to improve the district in this "crucial transition phase.

"I am convinced the past performance of the school board dictates a change," Rich said.

The new board must be "task-oriented, not crisis-oriented" and must run the district like a business, he said.

When tackling a problem, Rich said the board must use wisdom — "draining the swamp when you find you're up to your ears in alligators" — and ask itself "does this enhance academic achievement?"

The last group, District 7, is composed of four candidates: Murphy Horton, John Kennedy, Ken Marks and Ms. Reeves.

All but Ms. Reeves are in favor of current plans outlined should the bond election pass May 7 and for the maintenance of two high schools, they said.

"All will be strangers on the new board and must come together quickly," Horton said. He wants to improve the teacher evaluation policy as a means of improving their morale, he said.

Kennedy said stressing academic fundamentals is important because that is what "carries them through for life."

He also reminded the crowd that the new board is not tied to spending the $11.8 million in bond money according to mandates set forth by the current board.

"I can address these issues and provide strong leadership," Kennedy said.

Mark's main goal, if elected, is to provide for the "welfare of the child," he said.

The biggest problem the new board will face will be "establishing credibility with the community," Marks said.

Ms. Reeves wants to abandon the district's elementary clustering system — whereby students attend three schools during the course of their kindergarten through sixth grade education.

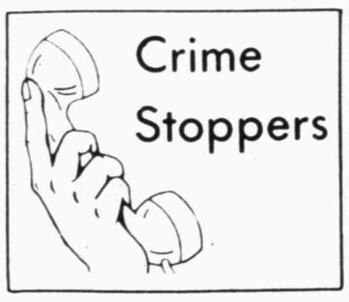
She said the clustering works against stability in the children's school lives.

Ms. Reeves agrees with a 24-hour drug policy but doesn't like the idea of two high schools, she said.

The school board and bond election is slated for May 7.

Midland County Election Administrator Bettye Calvert foresees runoff elections in all but the District 1 race because there are more than two candidates in the other six district races, she said today.

Odessa Crime Stoppers seeks data on burglaries



Odessa Crime Stoppers this week is asking for the public's help in solving four business burglaries.

The burglaries occurred at the Clinic Pharmacy #1, 1511 N. Texas, Clinic Pharmacy #2, 850 Tower, the Glass Pharmacy, 1522 N. Texas, and the University Pharmacy, 4850 E. University.

In each case, someone entered the businesses between the hours of 1 a.m. and 4:35 a.m. by breaking out pane glass windows, according to investigators. Once inside, codeine-based cough syrups and other pharmaceutical items were stolen. In addition to those break-ins, there have been several attempted burglaries, investigators said.

Information that leads to the arrest and indictment of the persons involved could be worth up to $1,000 this week only. Callers do not have to give their name.

In Midland, Crime Stoppers can be reached at 694-TIPS, and in Odessa at 333-TIPS.

Few amnesty seekers leave driving to INS

HARLINGEN (AP) — Immigration officials say they should not be faulted for trying out a free bus ride program for amnesty applicants that has been largely ignored.

"If we hadn't done it, I would have had regrets, as well," said Virginia Kice, an Immigration and Naturalization Service spokeswoman for the lower Rio Grande Valley. "Two or three years from now, I'd hate to look back and think 30 miles came between someone and a chance for U.S. citizenship," Ms. Kice said.

A total of 11 people used the 47-seat buses the first two days the INS chartered them for round trips to help applicants at the southern tip of the state.

Another trip was planned for today for the 25-mile trip from Brownsville to Harlingen, with repeat runs scheduled from Rio Grande City, McAllen and Brownsville next week. Total cost of the bus program is about $1,500, officials said.

Ms. Kice said the agency started the ride program in response to suggestions from immigration attorneys that applicants might not be showing up at the Harlingen legalization center because it was too far from some parts of the region.

"You can't say we didn't listen to citizen input," Ms. Kice said.

Only four aliens showed up Tuesday for the 35-mile trip from McAllen to Harlingen, she said.

And Monday, the first day of the ride program, only seven took the 90-mile trip from Rio Grande City on the 47-seat bus chartered from Valley Transit Co.

"I don't know if they're mistrustful," Ms. Kice said. "Maybe they don't want to ride on a bus we're sponsoring. I'm real disappointed."

Jerry Sewell, INS district director in Harlingen, said he wants to give the ride program a chance.

"If we don't get anybody on there, we may have to take another look at it," Sewell said. "We're not going to waste taxpayers' money if it's not being utilized."

He said the bus trips were widely publicized in the local Spanish media.

Other publicity in the past two months helped to more than quadruple the response at the Harlingen center, Ms. Kice said.

Those events included remote radio broadcasts, a live three-hour telethon, public service announcements, Boy Scouts distributing INS fliers in neighborhoods, airplanes pulling advertising banners and an INS employee recording a Spanish song called "Amnistia."

With the May 4 deadline approaching, applications at the Harlingen center have jumped from 250 a week in January, to more than 1,400 last week, she said.

But in the Harlingen district and nationwide, the turnout is lower than expected.

The one-time amnesty offer is part of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, which was designed to pay for itself through application fees.

Most applicants must prove they have lived illegally in the United States since before Jan. 1, 1982.

INS critics say the cost of applying has hindered many eligible aliens, who are among the nation's poorest people. The agency charges $185 for adults, $50 for children, and a maximum of $420 for an entire family.

In addition, each applicant must undergo a physical examination, for which doctors' fees vary.

Jury fails to indict judge who set low bail in assault case

EL PASO (AP) — A grand jury declined to indict a city judge who in February set bail at $100 for a man who was accused of trying to sexually assault actress Tracy Scoggins the week of the Miss USA pageant.

The day after the Feb. 25 attack, a state district judge ordered the rearrest of Pedro Concepcion Padilla when he learned of the low bond. State District Judge Brunson Moore re-set bail at $100,000, which Padilla posted.

The grand jury investigated Padilla, Municipal Judge Rodolfo Romero and former Assistant City Attorney Enrique Medrano on charges of tampering with government records, and looked into charges of official misconduct by Romero, Assistant District Attorney Gonzalo Garcia said.

Padilla at first gave an alias and was released on $100 bail set by Romero and paid by Medrano.

Romero has been suspended from the bench pending an investigation by Chief Municipal Judge Robert Duran. Medrano resigned his part-time job with the city.

Police began an investigation after receiving reports that Padilla and Romero are longtime friends. Investigators noted that Romero and Medrano are also private lawyers whose offices are in the same building.

Garcia declined to comment on the grand jury probe except to say the panel considered all the evidence before issuing a no-bill.

Padilla still faces a possible indictment for the alleged assault of Miss Scoggins in a hotel elevator.

Miss Scoggins, who was in El Paso to co-host the Miss USA Pageant March 1, said a man got in a hotel elevator with her, ripped the front of her dress and tried to push her to the elevator floor. She said she fought the man off until hotel guests and employees came to her rescue and held the man until police arrived.

El Paso films video to show it's not blowing smoke over pollution

EL PASO (AP) — City officials claim that much of El Paso's air pollution wafts over from the border city of Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, and they've made a videotape to try to convince the Environmental Protection Agency.

At issue is an August deadline for complying with the Clean Air Act — a deadline that El Paso is virtually assured of not meeting.

"The reason for this video and this study is to document everything that we have been talking about for years," said Jesus Reynoso, supervisor of the air pollution division of the City-County Health District. "We can now graphically show the problems that we have along the border."

The videotape explains that open burning of tires, wood and kerosene is common in Juarez. About half the streets are unpaved, contributing to the pollution, and cars there are older and not as well maintained.

"We have to convince the EPA that we can't control our pollution here," Howard Applegate, research associate for the University of Texas-El Paso's Center for Inter-American and Border Studies, said Monday.

Reynoso said Juarez' lower vehicle emissions standards are enforced by one person in a city of 1.1 million.

In contrast, he said, El Paso has 13 employees to enforce emissions standards in a population of about 500,000.

In addition, long traffic lines at the city's four international bridges contribute a lot to the cities' air pollution, Applegate said.

Before showing the 20-minute video Monday, officials talked of EPA officials' ignorance of El Paso's location and its special problems.

Justice of the Peace Arnaldo Corpus weds Sam McSpadden, 44, and Connie Morris, 41, of South Padre Island, on the Los Ebanos International Ferry between Mexico and the United States.

Couple's wedding a true 'ferry tale'

LOS EBANOS (AP) — With the Rio Grande flowing underneath them, a couple took the plunge aboard a hand-pulled ferry that serves as an international bridge in this border town.

Sam and Connie McSpadden's brief ferry tale wedding found them tying the knot Tuesday as crewmen pulled ropes to propel the vessel across the narrow river crossing.

Los Ebanos International Ferry is the only hand-pulled ferry used at any U.S. port of entry.

"It's the last one of its kind, I'm only planning on making the same mistake once, which I just made a while ago, and it's weird," McSpadden said after the ceremony while drinking a beer under an ebony tree near the federal inspection offices.

McSpadden, 44, and his 41-year-old bride live in South Padre Island and said they always visit the historic ferry on frequent trips to Rio Grande City.

"It was kind of mutual," she said, when asked whose idea it was to marry on a ferry with Mexico in the background.

Hidalgo County Justice of the Peace Arnaldo Corpus said he has married people aboard an airplane, but never on a boat at the border.

State judicial panel reprimands JP

AUSTIN (AP) — A Bell County justice of the peace, reprimanded for convicting a man without a trial, says he did so because the defendant had pleaded guilty to related charges.

But the State Commission on Judicial Conduct said Tuesday that Justice of the Peace Floyd L. Campbell erred. The commission issued a public reprimand of the 76-year-old judge.

"Although Judge Campbell may have earnestly been attempting to do his duty, it was the commission's conclusion that Judge Campbell (violated the Code of Judicial Conduct) by convicting and fining a defendant who pled not guilty to a criminal charge without affording such individual a trial," the commission said in the reprimand.

Campbell said Tuesday, "I don't see any point in doing what they're doing, but that's their business."

According to commission records, a defendant charged with disorderly conduct was brought to Campbell's Belton courtroom on Nov. 22, 1987. The man pleaded innocent, but Campbell immediately convicted him.

"That was an old boy that was running down the highway at 115 mph. The highway patrolman, the deputy sheriff and the game warden had to head him off and stop him at gunpoint to get him to stop," Campbell said.

"He had several other charges filed against him. He pled guilty to all the other charges except this disorderly conduct charge. I took it on myself to find him guilty and make him pay the fine. That's what I was called up for," he said.

PUC steps back from banning 976 services

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Despite a huge public outcry, state regulators Tuesday stepped back from issuing a ban on controversial 976 services, including so-called "dial-a-porn" numbers.

Instead, Public Utility Commissioners voted 2-1 to consider a proposal from Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. that would limit 976 numbers to companies providing non-controversial programming and move "objectionable" messages to a different prefix on a subscription-only basis.

"Sexual (messages) would not be permitted, vulgar would not be permitted, confusing or deceptive would not be permitted," said Southwestern Bell spokesman Bill Free. "In general those are the kinds of topics that would be listed in the contract for which we would not permit 976 prefixes to be used."

The 976 service currently is available in the Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth and San Antonio areas, but could expand to other parts of the state. The service allows phone customers to call a number beginning with the 976 prefix and for a fee listen to a recorded message featuring sports scores, news, prayers, time-and-temperature, adult entertainment and other information.

Under its proposal, Southwestern Bell would not provide billing and collection services for companies that offer programming "contrary to what we perceive is our best corporate image," Free said. Those kinds of services would be available by subscription only and under a different prefix, he said.

Under its proposal, Southwestern Bell would not provide billing and collection services for companies that offer programming "contrary to what we perceive is our best corporate image."

Although Southwestern Bell's telephone network will remain available to all service companies, "We are simply not going to allow our name through billing to be associated with those kinds of objectionable messages," he said.

Southwestern Bell until now has tried to deal with the controversy by offering free blocking for customers who do not want 976 services such as "dial-a-porn" called from their phones.

In the past two months, the PUC has received more than 23,000 letters and telephone calls on the 976 issue.

"This is the largest number of comments the public information office has received regarding a single issue," PUC spokesman Bill Dunn said in a memo to commissioners. "The overwhelming majority of persons contacting our office wanted either 976 service to be eliminated or 'dial-a-porn' to be eliminated."

The PUC was considering rules that would ban all 976 services or make them available by subscription only. The three-member panel postponed action on the matter following a February public hearing.

Most commercial vehicle operators missed deadline

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — About half the affected commercial vehicle operators missed an April 1 deadline for registering their vehicles and providing proof of liability insurance, the Railroad Commission reported Tuesday.

Two new laws passed by the 70th Legislature require most operators of commercial vehicles weighing more than 10,000 pounds to register with the commission and file proof of insurance coverage.

Confusion may have been caused because the Department of Public Safety postponed until September 1989 its enforcement of federal safety standards for trucks operating in Texas, said Tom Clowe, director of the commission's transportation division.

"We feel that many businesses that own and operate trucks have confused this postponement of DPS safety enforcement with the registration and liability insurance requirements of these two laws, which are still in effect," Clowe said.

DPS has indicated it soon will begin issuing citations for violators of the registration requirements, he said. Violators may be subject to criminal penalties of $100 per day, but the commission also can assess administrative fines of up to $10,000 for violations.

Under commission rules, owners of commercial vehicles weighing more than 10,000 pounds must register and provide proof of insurance coverage. No additional liability insurance other than that required by the Texas Motor Vehicle Safety Responsibility Act is required of vehicles weighing between 10,000 and 48,000 pounds, but owners still must register and file proof of insurance. Operators of trucks weighing more than 48,000 pounds must maintain a minimum $500,000 combined single-limit liability coverage.

Farm and ranch vehicles, trucks carrying alcoholic beverages under a wholesale permit from the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission, tow trucks regulated by the Department of Labor and Standards and certain other vehicles are exempt from the registration and insurance requirements.

Complex private prison financing plan approved

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Despite lawyers' and consultants' fees 22.5 percent above average, a complex plan to finance the construction of the state's first four private prisons won approval from the Bond Review Board Tuesday.

The Texas Correctional Facilities Financing Corp., a non-profit corporation that Liberty County Commissioners Court is expected to create Monday, will issue $50 million in tax-free bonds to build the 500-bed prisons in Liberty, Johnson, Hays and Wise counties.

The Texas Department of Corrections will lease the four prisons from the financing corporation for about $4.5 million a year for the next 22 years at an estimated interest rate of 5.95 percent. Upon payment of the $50 million principal and $42 million in interest on May 1, 2010, the state will own the four minimum-security lockups.

Meanwhile, TDC will enter into agreements with two private companies — Becon-Wackenhut and Corrections Corporation of America — to operate the prisons. The state will pay each firm $34.79 per inmate per day, which includes the cost of retiring the bonds.

Legal and consultant's fees for the bond project will total $1.35 million, or $27 per $1,000 of bonds. A 1987 state Treasury study of 21 recent state bond sales found that fees averaged about $22 per $1,000 of bonds. The dollar-difference between the prison project and the state average totals about $248,000.

Tom Pollard, executive director of the Bond Review Board, cited the $134,000 to be paid to Sanwa Bank Ltd. for a letter of credit and the $138,000 used for "advertising, copying,...postage, shipping, travel, computer, etc." as the two main reasons for the higher-than-average costs.

"This is a first of a kind financing that has taken an extremely long time to get under way," Dallas attorney Ray Hutchison, bond counsel for the project, told the Bond Review Board Tuesday when asked about the project's expenses. "In the future our costs will be lower."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, acting chairman of the Bond Review Board, asked Hutchison if the state is "paying a premium for this type of financing" rather than issue typical general-obligation bonds.

Hutchison replied that the complex plan has certain legal advantages. The letter of credit from Sanwa Bank and a contract that makes the private firms liable for any increased interest costs will also save the state money, he said.

"Costs are high," Hobby said later, "but I don't know of any way of avoiding it on this particular kind of thing."

The bonds are scheduled for sale on May 1, with delivery of the money set for one month later. TDC Executive Director Jim Lynaugh said prison construction should take eight to 10 months.

STATE IN BRIEF

Sailors treated at center

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Four sailors, injured when the USS Samuel B. Roberts hit an Iranian mine in the Persian Gulf, will be treated at the burn center at Brooke Army Medical Center, officials said.

The four were to fly into San Antonio this afternoon and were scheduled for treatment at Brooke.

They have been identified as Chief Petty Officer Alex Perez, 38, of Port Smith, R.I., but originally from San Antonio; Petty Officer Larry A. Welch, 27, of Athens, Ohio, a gas turbine systems electrical technician; Petty Officer 3rd Class David J. Burbine, 23, of Ashaway, R.I., a gas turbine systems mechanic; and Fireman Wayne J. Smith, 18, of Clearfield, Pa., a fire-fighting specialist.

Perez suffered three broken lumbar vertebrae, second- and third-degree burns, a collapsed lung and an injured eye. He also swallowed oil when water rushed into the compartment he was in following the explosion, said his sister-in-law, JoAnn Almaguer of San Antonio.

The other three seamen suffered extensive burns, but military officials have not announced the full extent of their injuries.

Ten sailors were injured when a hole was blasted in the side of the missile frigate as it traversed an unidentified mine field in the central gulf 55 miles off Qatar.

Man sentenced to death

LUBBOCK (AP) — Jurors Tuesday sentenced a man to die for fatally stabbing two women who lived in the apartment next to him.

Orien Cecil Joiner, 38, was convicted Saturday for the Dec. 17, 1986, deaths of Carol Lynnette Huckabee and Eva Marie DeForest.

The jury deliberated 1½ hours before sentencing Joiner, who showed no reaction at the pronouncement, to die by lethal injection.

"I'm just glad that he's due to get his just reward," said Lynn Huckabee, Ms. Huckabee's father.

During closing arguments of the punishment phase, co-prosecutor Tanya Northrup called Joiner "a master of terror," who didn't just massacre his victims but raped Ms. Huckabee after she was dead.

Peach growers optimistic

FREDERICKSBURG, Texas (AP) — Hill Country peach growers say they are expecting their best peach season in three years despite two late freezes and a frost.

Production estimates Tuesday ranged from 40 to 60 percent of the mid- and late-season peaches.

After losing entire crops for two consecutive years, any peach production is welcomed by Hill Country producers. Peaches are a major industry and a big tourist attraction for Gillespie County.

The peach crop in Gillespie County is a $3 million business for about 30 commercial growers.

Production estimates are well above the prediction of a 25 percent crop that followed freezing temperatures in the area March 13 and 14. After those unseasonable cold blasts, a frost hit parts of the area last week to take another bite out of the crop.

PUC steps back from banning 976 services

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Despite a huge public outcry, state regulators Tuesday stepped back from issuing a ban on controversial 976 services, including so-called "dial-a-porn" numbers.

Instead, Public Utility Commissioners voted 2-1 to consider a proposal from Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. that would limit 976 numbers to companies providing non-controversial programming and move "objectionable" messages to a different prefix on a subscription-only basis.

"Sexual (messages) would not be permitted, vulgar would not be permitted, confusing or deceptive would not be permitted," said Southwestern Bell spokesman Bill Free. "In general those are the kinds of topics that would be listed in the contract for which we would not permit 976 prefixes to be used."

The 976 service currently is available in the Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth and San Antonio areas, but could expand to other parts of the state. The service allows phone customers to call a number beginning with the 976 prefix and for a fee listen to a recorded message featuring sports scores, news, prayers, time-and-temperature, adult entertainment and other information.

Under its proposal, Southwestern Bell would not provide billing and collection services for companies that offer programming "contrary to what we perceive is our best corporate image," Free said. Those kinds of services would be available by subscription only and under a different prefix, he said.

Under its proposal, Southwestern Bell would not provide billing and collection services for companies that offer programming "contrary to what we perceive is our best corporate image."

Although Southwestern Bell's telephone network will remain available to all service companies, "We are simply not going to allow our name through billing to be associated with those kinds of objectionable messages," he said.

Southwestern Bell until now has tried to deal with the controversy by offering free blocking for customers who do not want 976 services such as "dial-a-porn" called from their phones.

In the past two months, the PUC has received more than 23,000 letters and telephone calls on the 976 issue.

"This is the largest number of comments the public information office has received regarding a single issue," PUC spokesman Bill Dunn said in a memo to commissioners. "The overwhelming majority of persons contacting our office wanted either 976 service to be eliminated or 'dial-a-porn' to be eliminated."

The PUC was considering rules that would ban all 976 services or make them available by subscription only. The three-member panel postponed action on the matter following a February public hearing.

Couple's wedding a true 'ferry tale'

LOS EBANOS (AP) — With the Rio Grande flowing underneath them, a couple took the plunge aboard a hand-pulled ferry that serves as an international bridge in this border town.

Sam and Connie McSpadden's brief ferry tale wedding found them tying the knot Tuesday as crewmen pulled ropes to propel the vessel across the narrow river crossing.

Los Ebanos International Ferry is the only hand-pulled ferry used at any U.S. port of entry.

"It's the last one of its kind, I'm only planning on making the same mistake once, which I just made a while ago, and it's weird," McSpadden said after the ceremony while drinking a beer under an ebony tree near the federal inspection offices.

McSpadden, 44, and his 41-year-old bride live in South Padre Island and said they always visit the historic ferry on frequent trips to Rio Grande City.

"It was kind of mutual," she said, when asked whose idea it was to marry on a ferry with Mexico in the background.

Hidalgo County Justice of the Peace Arnaldo Corpus said he has married people aboard an airplane, but never on a boat at the border.

State judicial panel reprimands JP

AUSTIN (AP) — A Bell County justice of the peace, reprimanded for convicting a man without a trial, says he did so because the defendant had pleaded guilty to related charges.

But the State Commission on Judicial Conduct said Tuesday that Justice of the Peace Floyd L. Campbell erred. The commission issued a public reprimand of the 76-year-old judge.

"Although Judge Campbell may have earnestly been attempting to do his duty, it was the commission's conclusion that Judge Campbell (violated the Code of Judicial Conduct) by convicting and fining a defendant who pled not guilty to a criminal charge without affording such individual a trial," the commission said in the reprimand.

Campbell said Tuesday, "I don't see any point in doing what they're doing, but that's their business."

According to commission records, a defendant charged with disorderly conduct was brought to Campbell's Belton courtroom on Nov. 22, 1987. The man pleaded innocent, but Campbell immediately convicted him.

"That was an old boy that was running down the highway at 115 mph. The highway patrolman, the deputy sheriff and the game warden had to head him off and stop him at gunpoint to get him to stop," Campbell said.

"He had several other charges filed against him. He pled guilty to all the other charges except this disorderly conduct charge. I took it on myself to find him guilty and make him pay the fine. That's what I was called up for," he said.

Most commercial vehicle operators missed deadline

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — About half the affected commercial vehicle operators missed an April 1 deadline for registering their vehicles and providing proof of liability insurance, the Railroad Commission reported Tuesday.

Two new laws passed by the 70th Legislature require most operators of commercial vehicles weighing more than 10,000 pounds to register with the commission and file proof of insurance coverage.

Confusion may have been caused because the Department of Public Safety postponed until September 1989 its enforcement of federal safety standards for trucks operating in Texas, said Tom Clowe, director of the commission's transportation division.

"We feel that many businesses that own and operate trucks have confused this postponement of DPS safety enforcement with the registration and liability insurance requirements of these two laws, which are still in effect," Clowe said.

DPS has indicated it soon will begin issuing citations for violators of the registration requirements, he said. Violators may be subject to criminal penalties of $100 per day, but the commission also can assess administrative fines of up to $10,000 for violations.

Under commission rules, owners of commercial vehicles weighing more than 10,000 pounds must register and provide proof of insurance coverage. No additional liability insurance other than that required by the Texas Motor Vehicle Safety Responsibility Act is required of vehicles weighing between 10,000 and 48,000 pounds, but owners still must register and file proof of insurance. Operators of trucks weighing more than 48,000 pounds must maintain a minimum $500,000 combined single-limit liability coverage.

Farm and ranch vehicles, trucks carrying alcoholic beverages under a wholesale permit from the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission, tow trucks regulated by the Department of Labor and Standards and certain other vehicles are exempt from the registration and insurance requirements.

Hostage release hailed as victory

KUWAIT (AP) — Kuwaitis hailed today's release of 31 hostages and the end of the 16-day hijacking of a Kuwaiti jumbo jet in Algeria as a victory for their government's firm stand against terrorism.

The Kuwaiti government had steadfastly refused to meet the gunmen's demand it free 17 convicted pro-Iranian extremists.

The state radio broke into its regular programs to announce the release.

Ali Khaled al-Sabah, a member of Kuwait's ruling family and the brother of three royal family members among the freed captives, told The Associated Press: "My happiness in indescribable. I feel as if my brother and two sisters have been resurrected from an inevitable doom.

"We feel deeply indebted to the Kuwaiti leadership and the government of Algeria," he said in a telephone interview.

Algerian officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the hijackers left the Kuwait Airways Boeing 747 about 20 minutes before the hostages were freed. They said the gunmen were taken by unmarked cars to an undisclosed location.

The radio broadcast a special song glorifying the emir of Kuwait, Sheik Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, and his government for their "triumph" over terrorism.

People telephoned the radio and state-run television network to ask for news of the hostages.

Many people called in to congratulate the government on its firm stand against the hijackers, who had killed two Kuwait passengers. The plane was seized April 5 on a flight from Bangkok to Kuwait with 112 people aboard.

"This is a happy moment for the nation," a radio announcer declared. "We congratulate ourselves, our government and our emir, and we offer the leadership garlands of roses and jasmine."

Television technicians and announcers were summoned to broadcast unscheduled live satellite coverage of the release of the 24 passengers and seven crew members in Algiers.

The Kuwait news agency quoted Kuwait's ambassador in Algiers, Jassem al-Boursali, as saying that all the captives had been freed and were in good health.

He said a team of Kuwaiti technicians was flying to Algiers to examine the aircraft.

A special Kuwait Airways jet was expected to fly to Algiers and bring back the freed passengers and crew members later today or Thursday.

The 17 men whose freedom the hijackers sought were convicted and imprisoned for the December 1983 bombings of the French and U.S. embassies in Kuwait.

PLO chief buried in refugee camp

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of Palestinians today mourned PLO military commander Khalil al-Wazir when he was buried in a cemetery at Syria's largest refugee camp.

Al-Wazir, 52, better known as Abu Jihad, was assassinated Saturday by commandos who burst into his home in suburban Tunis. Israeli sources have said Israeli security forces carried out the attack. There has been no confirmation by the Israeli government.

The Palestinian leader's coffin, draped in a Palestinian flag, was carried by a gun carriage from the morgue at Mouwasat Hospital to the Martyrs Cemetery at Yarmouk refugee camp.

The mass funeral was attended by al-Wazir's mother, wife and five children and top Palestinian Liberation Organization figures.

PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat and Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi, who were said to be on their way to Damascus to attend the funeral, did not attend. But Palestinian officials said they expected Arafat and Gadhafi to arrive later in the day.

Hundreds of thousands of Palestinians marched behind al-Wazir's coffin when it left the hospital before noon under heavy Syrian protection.

Thousands of other Palestinians, chanting slogans and flashing "V" for victory, stood on both sides of the road as the convoy drove across Damascus' main Baramki thoroughfare.

"You are the martyr of the uprising," shouted the marchers, referring to the 4½ months of Palestinian rioting in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Bulldogs take step closer to state baseball playoffs

From Staff Reports

ABILENE — The Midland High Bulldogs moved one step closer to cinching a district playoff spot with a 5-1 victory over Abilene High Tuesday afternoon.

The 'Dogs picked up 14 hits during the contest as starting pitcher Eric Boyt went the distance, striking out nine and moving his district mark to 4-1.

MHS IMPROVED its team batting average to .310 as catcher Scott Mowles went 3-for-4 with two doubles and two RBI. Left-fielder Kevin Rychell went 3-for-4 and scored two runs.

The problem for the Abilene High Eagles was clearly evident at game's end: Of the 12 men they left scattered on the base paths, 10 were left in scoring position. In the first, second, third and fifth innings, men were left stranded at both second and third.

Midland High, up 2-0, struck their final blow in the top half of the fifth when, with two out, both David Danley and Rychell laid out weak pop-up singles to center. Rychell stole second to put men on second and third, and designated hitter Clark Crawford singled over the second baseman, driving both runners in.

Second-baseman Jason Stone, who knocked out his first triple of the year, singled home Rychell for the Bulldogs' fifth and final run in the seventh.

"I was worried as heck about this one," Bulldog head coach Tim Whalen said. "Abilene High is going to be strong as mustard gas next year.

"I'm not counting my chickens, but when you come down here you've got to play well. There's still a long way to go, but I think Cooper's still got to be the favorite."

With the win, though, the Bulldogs continue to send the message out to Cooper — winners of five straight district titles — that defense of its championship may not be so easy.

Almost beyond a shadow of a doubt, the district season will come to a head Saturday, April 30, in Abilene when the 'Dogs meet Cooper.

Before that, though, MHS will play Hobbs, N.M., in a non-district game Friday in Hobbs, and will be back in district action Tuesday, hosting the unpredictable Odessa High Bronchos.

District 4-5A playoff possibilities

From Staff Reports

With two Midland High games remaining, several possibilities exist that would affect the outcome of the top of the district standings as they are now.

With a record of 8-2, all the 'Dogs have to do is win one of their remaining two games to ensure themselves of a playoff spot.

Here are the possibilities:

— If MHS wins its remaining two games (against Odessa High and Abilene Cooper), they win the District 4-5A title outright.

— If the Bulldogs beat Odessa but lose to Cooper, and if Cooper wins its remaining games, MHS will finish 9-3 and in second place, but with a playoff spot.

— If Midland High beats Cooper but loses to Odessa High, MHS would either win district or be tied for first, depending on what Cooper does in its remaining two.

— If Midland High loses its last two and Abilene High finishes with three straight wins — including a win over Cooper — MHS and AHS will be tied for second and a playoff game will occur.

Cougars 12, Panthers 0
(Five innings)

Meanwhile, the Abilene Cooper Cougars remained strong in the hunt of first place in District 4-5A, notching a 12-0 victory over the Odessa Permian Panthers in a game called after five innings due to the 10-run rule.

Starting pitcher Jason Satre pitched a one-hitter in running his district mark to 6-0. First baseman Scotty Pugh went 2-for-3 with two doubles and five RBI.

Cooper, now 7-2, remains one-half game out of first place; The Panthers, 1-9 in district, are in last place, seven games out with just three remaining.

Bronchos 4, Bobcats 2

Odessa High pitcher Hilbert Anaya improved his district record to 4-1 by pitching a five-hitter as the Bronchos defeated San Angelo 4-2 Tuesday.

Odessa High catcher Mario Morales was given credit for the game winning RBI, doubling in James Villalobos as OHS scored three runs in the top of the first.

Although the Bronchos have been eliminated from a playoff spot, they did manage to move into sole possession of fourth place with a 5-5 district record. San Angelo, also out of contention, is in sixth with a 3-6 record, 4½ games behind district leader Midland High.

Angels nab first home win

Extra inning victory sparks controversy

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

In a game marked with controversy, perhaps it was fitting that the winning run scored on a disputed call in the Midland Angels' 6-5, 10-inning win over San Antonio at Angels Stadium Tuesday.

Midland's Jim McCollom slid home with the winning run on a single by C.L. Penigar, despite having to move San Antonio catcher Darrin Fletcher ever-so-slightly away from the plate. Both Fletcher and Missions manager Kevin Kennedy vehemently protested the call and Kennedy had few kind words for plate umpire Brian Owen afterwards.

"It's too bad the players put so much effort into the game and the umpires don't let the players decide it," Kennedy said. "There was no question about it.

"We teach our catchers to block the plate with both knees on the ground, and when he does that correctly, he should get credit for it," Kennedy said. It was a major league play with minor league umpires."

OWEN HAD earlier ejected Midland manager Max Olivares after a minimum of discussion and had been questioned on called third strikes by both sides throughout the game.

McCollom had reached base off San Antonio reliever Mike Schweighoffer on a fielder's choice. Mike Knapp singled him to second, before the usually light-hitting Penigar looped a single into center field to end the Haloes' four-game losing streak.

Shortstop Dario Nunez ...making the play

For his part, McCollom said he touched the plate with his foot before Fletcher applied the tag.

"He blocked the plate real good, but I just pushed him back far enough," he said.

Midland reliever Colby Ward retired three straight Mission batters in the top of the 10th to pick up his second straight relief win of the season. But the Angels came close to winning the game in regulation.

Angel reliever Vinicio Cedeno was trying to save the game for fellow reliever Shane Young in the ninth, but San Antonio's Manny Francois stretched a single into a double and advanced to third on a routine fly to left by Fletcher.

McCollom then made a diving stop of a grounder by Juan Bustabad, forcing Francois to hold at third. But Cedeno uncorked a wild pitch to score Francois and tie the game at five-all.

The Angels put runners on second and third with two outs in the bottom of the inning, but Missions reliever Phil Torres came on to strike out Tom Alfredson to send the game into extra innings.

Alfredson had put the Angels ahead with a two-run homer over the center field wall in the seventh.

Orioles extend losing streak to 13 games

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Anyone seen Brooks Robinson lately? Wasn't it just yesterday he was diving in the dirt at third base for the Baltimore Orioles and magnificently coming up with the ball in time to throw the runner out at first?

Brooks is in the Hall of Fame and the broadcast booth now, and the Baltimore Orioles of a bygone era are nowhere to be found.

Sure Frank Robinson, another Hall of Famer, is managing. But there are few other traces of the proud franchise that once had baseball's best minor league system, one that emphasized the fundamentals from the lowest levels up to the majors.

These are the Orioles of 1988 — just five years removed from a World Series championship — and they have lost 13 straight baseball games in a horrid start that has tied the major league record for futility.

For 12 games the Orioles couldn't hit. Then, in the 13th, they couldn't hit or pitch and they lost Tuesday night to the Milwaukee Brewers 9-5.

"One man can't do it all by himself. The pitchers have to do their job, fielders have to do their job and hitters have to do their job. That's the way you win ball games," Frank Robinson said after the Orioles lost for the seventh time since he replaced Cal Ripken Sr. as manager.

The Orioles joined company with the 1904 Washington Senators and the 1920 Detroit Tigers, who also lost 13 straight to open the season. A 14th straight loss tonight in Milwaukee would also tie a franchise record set in 1954 in Baltimore and twice when the team was in St. Louis.

Baltimore will go for the record tonight when Mike Boddicker opposes the Brewers' Bill Wegman at County Stadium.

"It's going to come together. It's got to end," said shortstop Cal Ripken Jr., who ended an 0-for-29 streak with a homer and single.

"The key is to win some games and have some fun. It's got to end because baseball is baseball.

"There is no other way to play baseball, and that's to be a winner."

Entering the game with a team batting average of .186, the Orioles' bats came alive Tuesday night as doubles by Eddie Murray and Rich Schu produced a 3-0 lead in the first inning off Juan Nieves, 1-2.

But four errors led to four unearned runs and Paul Molitor's three-run homer in the second off Mark Thurmond, 0-3, put the Orioles back in a 5-3 hole and they didn't recover.

"We made some mistakes out on the field which I think I can correct and have to correct if we're going to play good baseball," said Robinson.

"Sure, a win will stop the streak, but if you go out and lose 10 more in a row that doesn't do much good."

Schu's error on Robin Yount's grounder led to a pair of Milwaukee runs in the first, and then Molitor hit his first homer of the season, a 430-foot shot to left, in the second after singles by Dale Sveum and Jim Gantner.

Ripken made it 5-4 with his homer in the third. But then the Orioles turned the fifth inning into a baseball bloopers segment with three errors. Right fielder Joe Orsulak's overthrow scored one run and Murray missed a grounder that scored another. Orsulak later overran a fly ball for the third error.

"There is nothing I can say," Robinson said. "We went out and scored three runs and came back and gave them two. We didn't play well and didn't pitch well and we missed some signs. It was just not a well-played game."

"Thank goodness their line drives were at people," Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "We can't worry about their situation. We have enough to worry about."

Schembechler now Michigan AD

DETROIT (AP) — Michigan's Bo Schembechler will succeed Don Canham as university athletic director while remaining as football coach, a university spokesman said today.

The university scheduled a news conference for today to announce a successor to Canham, who is retiring.

"All I know is there will be a press conference and they will announce Bo," said Bruce Madej, sports information director for Michigan. "It's 99.9 percent sure."

Schembechler, the Wolverines' 59-year-old football coach, was the board of regents' first choice to oversee the university's men's and women's intercollegiate sports and an annual budget of $18 million. He turned down the job in February after learning it required that he resign as football coach after next fall.

Creighton lands OC's Bell

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Creighton University basketball coach Tony Barone said Tuesday his team's defense will get a boost from a new Texas recruit, Troy Bell of Odessa Junior College.

Bell, a 6-foot-5 sophomore foward, signed a national letter of intent to play next year for Barone's Blue Jays in the Missouri Valley Conference.

"He has the ability to defend the best player of any team we will play next year. He has great defensive ability, great defensive quickness," Barone said.

Bell was the only Odessa player to start every game the last two seasons. He averaged 13.9 points and 8.9 rebounds last year. He is Creighton's final recruit for next season, Barone said.

In November, the Blue Jays signed Latrelle Wrightsell, a 6-foot-1 guard from Gary, Ind., and Tony Ball, a 6-foot-6 forward from Northeastern Oklahoma A&M Junior College.

In other signings Tuesday, the University of Nebraska-Omaha landed a sharp-shooting guard in Thad Mott of Pekin, Ill., Mavericks Coach Bob Hanson said.

Mott, 6-foot-2, averaged 19 points per game and hit 54 percent of his shots from the field last year. He became the second player to sign with UNO, along with Phil Cartwright of St. Louis Park, Minn.

Celtics dominate Pistons

Mavs beat Rockets, Spurs lose to Lakers

Associated Press

The Detroit Pistons are keeping a stiff upper lip after losing their season-long battle to earn a homecourt advantage in a potential playoff meeting against the Boston Celtics.

"I can't explain it, but eventually it's going to end," Isiah Thomas said after Boston clinched the top spot in the NBA's Eastern Conference playoffs by beating the Pistons 121-110 Tuesday night. It was the Celtics' 21st consecutive victory over Detroit at Boston Garden.

The winning streak includes four straight in last year's Eastern Conference finals, during which the Pistons easily won their three home games. If the teams meet in a seventh game this year, Boston again would be at home.

"We play harder here and they play harder there," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said.

"We had our problems this year and still finished with the best record in the East," said Kevin McHale, who matched his season high with 33 points. "Now we have to go out and see if anyone can beat us."

Mavericks 104, Rockets 96

Dallas held off Houston's fourth-quarter rally and kept pace with Denver as Rolando Blackman scored 27 points.

Trailing 81-70, the Rockets outscored Dallas 12-2 at the start of the final period to close the gap to 83-82 with 7:33 to go. But the Mavericks responded with their own rally, including a steal and layup by Roy Tarpley and a steal by Blackman that led to a basket by Mark Aguirre.

Akeem Olajuwon led the Rockets with 33 points.

Lakers 133, Spurs 126

Los Angeles clinched a homecourt advantage throughout the playoffs as James Worthy scored 28 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Byron Scott added 25 each against San Antonio.

The Spurs, who need one victory or a Phoenix loss in the last three games to make the playoffs, trailed only 125-124 with 1:03 left, but a dunk and a pair of free throws by Abdul-Jabbar put the game away.

The Lakers' effort nullified a season-best performance by Spurs guard Alvin Robertson, who scored 27 of his 40 points in the second half. Robertson also had 10 assists.

Suns 122, Warriors 107

Phoenix kept its slim playoff hopes alive as Armon Gilliam scored 19 points against Golden State.

Gilliam, who had nine first-quarter points, keyed a 16-4 run to close out the period, givin the Suns a 32-22 lead. The Suns increased the margin to 64-51 at halftime.

The Warriors, down 97-78 entering the fourth quarter, got no closer than 12 and lost their 10th straight road game despite 25 points by Chris Mullin.

Bulls 121, Knicks 118

Chicago won its seventh straight road game and Michael Jordan scored 15 of his 47 points in the fourth quarter, helping the Bulls withstand a 43-point New York barrage.

Scottie Pippen keyed a 21-10 spurt with nine points in the last 4:42 of the third quarter, giving Chicago the lead for good at 86-75. The Knicks got as close as one point in the final minutes.

The Knicks, who got 26 points each from Gerald Wilkins and Patrick Ewing, dropped into eighth place in the Eastern Conference, one-half game behind Washington and one-half game ahead of Indiana.

Nuggets 134, SuperSonics 114

Denver won for the 15th time in 16 games, defeating Seattle as Lafayette Lever had 31 points and 12 rebounds.

The win was the Nuggets' 53rd of the season, an NBA club record, and kept them 1½ games ahead of Dallas in the battle for first place in the Midwest Division.

The Nuggets also got 27 points from Alex English, and Michael Adams hit a 3-point basket in his record 41st straight game. Seattle was led by Tom Chambers' 29 points and 21 by Xavier McDaniel.

The Nuggets, who have won nine straight at home, led only 59-55 at halftime, but made 15 of their 18 shots from the floor in the third quarter to clinch the victory.

76ers 115, Bucks 102

Philadelphia celebrated the retirement of Julius Erving's number with a victory as Charles Barkley scored 28 points against Milwaukee.

The 76ers, trying to catch New York, Washington and Indiana in the four-team battle for two playoff spots, also got 22 points from Cliff Robinson and 21 by Mike Gminski.

Ricky Pierce had 25 points and Terry Cummings 23 for the Bucks, who lost their fifth straight game and seventh consecutive road game.

Jazz 129, Blazers 122

Karl Malone had 38 points, his fifth straight game with 36 or more, pacing Utah over Portland.

Thurl Bailey came off the bench for 29 points, and John Stockton had 25 points and 18 assists for the Jazz. Clyde Drexler scored 35 points for Portland, 15 of them in the third period, while Jerome Kersey and Kevin Duckworth had 24 each.

Malone scored five consecutive points to give the Jazz a 118-105 lead with 3:37 remaining. The Trail Blazers responded with a 10-0 spurt, including four each by Duckworth and Kersey, to get within three with 1:58 to go. But Malone's dunk clinched the victory.

Hawks 119, Nets 109

Atlanta outscored New Jersey 12-2 in overtime and got 32 points from Dominique Wilkins to hand New Jersey its 14th consecutive loss.

The Hawks scored the next eight points of overtime to pull away from a two-point lead.

New Jersey's Roy Hinson sent the game into overtime when he hit two free throws with 18 seconds to play, and Buck Williams finished with 21 points and 14 rebounds for the Nets.

Kings 120, Clippers 105

Reggie Theus scored 33 points and Sacramento broke a four-game losing streak by beating Los Angeles.

Otis Thorpe added 21 points and 12 rebounds for the Kings, while Eric White scored a career-high 20 points for the Clippers. Michael Cage had 17 points, 19 rebounds and seven steals for Los Angeles.

The Kings built a 91-76 margin with 36 seconds remaining in the third period with a 10-0 run, and they later took their largest lead — 104-85, with 7:04 left.

Navratilova, Evert win

HOUSTON (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova and second seeded Chris Evert each struggled briefly before scoring first round victories in the $250,000 Virginia Slims of Houston tennis tournament.

Navratilova, although feeling subpar, recovered quickly to defeat Iva Budarova of Czechoslovakia 7-5, 6-1 Tuesday.

Evert, who defeated Navratilova in the finals of last year's tournament, was broken in the first game of the match but then easily defeated Sweden's Maria Lindstrom 6-2, 6-2.

"I've been feeling this way all day," Navratilova said. "My head feels like its not attached to my body. I lost my serve twice the whole tournament last week and I lost it twice tonight. That ought to give you some idea how I felt."

Navratilova finally hit her stride in the second set when she got her serve and volley game under control. "It's tough to get a rhythm against her, either she hits a winner or it's out," Navratilova said.

Budarova now is 0-6 in career matches against Navratilova and has won one set in all those matches.

Lindstrom, who lost to Evert 6-0, 6-0 in their only other meeting in 1986, broke the defending champion in the first game when Evert's backhand sailed wide at break point.

ANGELS

The Angels drew first blood on a triple by Dan Grunhard and a double by Lee Stevens in the first inning, but San Antonio touched Angel starter Tim Burcham for single runs in the second and fourth innings.

McCollom put the Angels ahead with a two-run homer in the sixth after Stevens had stroked his second double, but San Antonio drove Burcham from the game with two runs in the top of the seventh before Alfredson again put the Haloes ahead with his two-run shot in the bottom of the inning.

Midland relievers Young, Cedeno, Kurt Walker and Ward combined to pitch 3⅔ innings of three-hit ball to please pitching coach Tim Kelly.

"Shane was outstanding. Kurt got the one batter I wanted him to face, and Colby did a good job."

Kelly, who led the team to the win along with roving instructor Bruce Hines after Olivares was ejected, said the young Midlanders needed a one-run win after several close losses.

"It was getting old," Kelly said. "Each mistake we made seemed like it was costing us. We weren't getting any slack from our mistakes. You don't expect to lose on one mistake."

Olivares said the extra-inning win reflected the mettle of his team.

"These kids have shown some character," he said. "They come back - never give up. That's what we're trying to teach them."

The cellar-dwelling Angels can pull within a half-game of third-place Wichita in the Western Division race with a win tonight. Todd Eggertsen, 0-2, will start on the mound for Midland against San Antonio's John Wetteland, 0-1.

In other Texas League action Tuesday, Jackson nipped Arkansas 3-2 in 15 innings, Tulsa slaughtered Shreveport 13-5, and El Paso whipped Wichita 10-7.

ANGEL NOTES: Olivares felt Owen overreacted to a comment the skipper made in the fourth inning.

"I told him he was missing a good game," Olivares said. "They're doing a decent job, but sometimes they have rabbit ears.

"They forget we have a job to do too," Olivares added. "All I want them to do is put themselves in my position."

Olivares was near the Angel dugout when Owen gave him the heave-ho, but charged toward home plate to give the ump an earful. First base umpire Dale Luker was finally able to mediate the heated discussion.

Grunhard extended his hitting streak to 11 games with his first-inning triple. He went hitless the rest of the game, however, dropping his average to .415.

San Antonio outfielder Jim Kating may be out as long as six weeks after injuring an ankle while rounding third base in the second inning Tuesday. Kating told reporters after the game that he would seek a second opinion from an orthopedist today, however.

Joe Kesselmark, another Mission outfielder, continued to tattoo Angel pitching with a three-for-five performance, making him 10-for-16 against Midland in three games this season.

Impressed with the crowd of 1,381 at the Angels' home opener Monday? How about the reported throng of 13,284 that attended Tulsa's home opener with Shreveport Monday. The Drillers outdrew major league games at Seattle and Detroit that day and are reportedly angling for a Triple-A franchise that may be available if the major leagues expand.

Good lands big bass

Midland's H. "Willy" Good caught a near record 33-pound striper bass at Lake Amistad, April 14.

"It was one big fish," noted Good. "They told me the Amistad record was 34 pounds. They didn't have scales big enough to weigh it, so we had to take it into town to get the official weight."

Good used a shad lure while casting from his boat to land the fish. Good said his fishing party intended to start fishing by day light, but "we were late and I didn't make this catch until around 9 a.m. The bass stopped biting right after that and we went to catfishing."

Good, who is 73, said, "It just goes to show you that you never get too old to land the big one."

24-hour baseball possible in 1990

NEW YORK (AP) — A cable television network that broadcasts baseball 24 hours a day could be in place for the beginning of the 1990 season, baseball officials say.

"It would come on with the first game at noon Eastern time and would not go off until 2 a.m. or the last West Coast game ends," Commissioner Peter Ueberroth said.

When there are no live games, there could be tapes of the previous day's games, minor-league games, highlight films, scoreboard shows and scrolls of boxscores and averages, according to Ueberroth and Bryan Burns, baseball's senior vice president for broadcasting.

The network would be part of basic cable, meaning that consumers would not have to pay an additional fee for the channel, as is the case for Home Box Office or Showtime.

Ueberroth said the network would have a fixed schedule, but it would be able to switch to any game of interest.

"It would have the ability to go to any different time zone and any different ballpark," Ueberroth said last week. "If (Paul) Molitor has a batting streak and he's up, it could switch to Milwaukee for his at-bat. Or if there's a no-hitter somewhere we could go there."

Games from local teams could be blacked out so as not to interfere with local stations, and an out-of-town game could replace it in that market, according to Burns.

Burns said that regulation changes under consideration by the Federal Communications Commission could hurt superstations such as WTBS in Atlanta and WGN in Chicago, and that if enacted, the rule changes may make a baseball cable network more advantageous than superstations.

"You would be able to watch the same number of games but have a better mix," Burns said, pointing out the most cable systems carry only one or two superstations because of the cost.

Planning for the network is in a preliminary stage, Burns said. Its start depends in part on whether ABC and NBC exercise their rights to extend the current contracts, which expire after the 1989 World Series, through 1991.

"There are clauses in our current network agreements that do not allow us to be in the advertiser-supported basic-cable business," Burns said.

The networks must make their decisions to extend between Dec. 1 and Feb. 1, 1989. If ABC or NBC extends, which is unlikely, a baseball network could not start operation until 1992 at the earliest, but Burns said the technology already is in place.

"If we wanted to start this thing, from a production standpoint we could do it in 30 days," Burns said.

The expiration of the current contracts following the 1989 season gives baseball an opportunity to shape its marketing.

Montreal haunts playoff Bruins

Associated Press

The Boston Bruins can only hope that returning to the Montreal Forum Wednesday is not another replay of "The Haunting."

The Bruins, who haven't beaten the Montreal Canadiens in their past 18 Stanley Cup playoff series, were true to form Monday night, losing to Montreal 5-2 in the opener of their seven-game NHL quarter-final series. Not only did they lose, but a Quebec-wide power failure in the first period left the game to be played with emergency generators lighting the ice.

Boston Coach Terry O'Reilly attributed the problems in the Adams Division final to the way his team played, not gremlins.

"No ghosts," O'Reilly said. "I don't know if it was opening night jitters or what. We'll have to make our own breaks. There aren't any excuses."

In the other game Wednesday night, the Washington Capitals will take a 1-0 lead into their game at the Capital Centre with the New Jersey Devils. The Capitals celebrated their first appearance in the Patrick Division finals with a 3-1 victory over Devils Monday night.

The Bruins will be facing a lot of history Thursday night.

Not only have they lost 18 straight series to Montreal dating back to 1943, but they are 2-21 against the Canadiens in their last 23 playoff games.

Moreover, they got just 22 shots at Montreal goaltender Brian Hayward, just 13 in the first two periods.

But Montreal remains wary, particularly after barely edging the Bruins in the regular season series 4-3 with one tie.

"They can't be too happy," said Mike McPhee, whose short-handed goal with nine minutes gone in Monday night's game gave the Canadiens a 2-0 lead. "I think they'll play better, but if we play our game, they'll have to adjust to us."

The Devils, who advanced by beating the New York Islanders in only their second playoff series in a 14-year history in Kansas City, Colorado and New Jersey, had more offense than Boston. But Pete Peeters turned away 33 of 34 shots to keep the Devils away.

"We had guys right in his face," New Jersey's Ken Daneyko said. "But he stands his ground. We just hit him in the pads."

Interestingly, New Jersey Coach Jim Schoenfeld said he may shake up his offense by changing his defense, namely rookie goaltender Sean Burke, who stopped 28 of 31 Washington shots in the first game. Burke's replacement would be veteran Bob Sauve, who beat the Islanders in Game 2 of the Devils' opening series.

Stanley Cup

"I might use Sauve, but it wouldn't be a surprise this time," Schoenfeld said. "Burke didn't have a bad game. We just didn't score any goals."

NORRIS DIVISION
Red Wings 5, Blues 4

Shawn Burr scored twice, including the go-ahead goal at 6:09 of the third period, as the Red Wings won the Norris Division opener.

Burr picked up a loose puck in his own end, skated the length of the ice and beat Blues goaltender Greg Millen for his third goal of the playoffs and a 4-3 lead.

Gerard Gallant's fourth playoff goal, off a pass from Adam Oates, gave Detroit a 5-3 lead at 7:46.

St. Louis made it 5-4 with 6:28 left when Gino Cavallini deflected Doug Gilmour's pass behind goaltender Greg Stefan. But the Blues were unable to get the equalizer, even though they pulled Millen with 1:04 remaining.

SMYTHE DIVISION
Oilers 3, Flames 1

Jari Kurri's goal with 6:37 remaining broke a 1-1 tie and Wayne Gretzky added a breakaway goal less than three minutes later as the Oilers won the Smythe Division opener in Calgary.

Kurri picked up a pass from Esa Tikkanen just outside the Flames' blue line and beat goaltender Mike Vernon over the left shoulder with a 20-foot slapshot from the right circle.

Gretzky then took Kurri's breakout pass at center ice, raced in alone and beat Vernon at 16:18.

Brenham's Peters runs record to 35

BRENHAM, Texas (AP) — Jon Peters allowed six hits and struck out nine as he pitched Brenham to a 12-2 victory over Waller in a District 10-4A baseball game Tuesday night that stretched his consecutive career high school record to 35 wins without a loss over three seasons.

Peters established a new national high school record a week earlier in a one-hit victory over Conroe Oak Ridge.

Peters is 7-0 this season with 89 strikeouts in 47 innings. He has allowed only 4 earned runs all season for Brenham, the two-time defending state champions of Class 4A. The Cubs, who have been ranked No. 1 all season, improved their record to 21-3.

Braves now have winning streak

Associated Press

The Atlanta Braves are still a long way from .500, but they're getting closer to respectability.

The Braves, who lost their first 10 games this season, beat the Houston Astros 5-4 Tuesday night for their second straight victory.

"I thought the sky was falling," said Ted Simmons, whose three-run homer in the eighth inning carried the Braves. "I've been through 12-game losing streaks before in my career, but nothing like this to start the season."

Bruce Sutter ended a personal year-long streak with his first victory since 1986. He missed the entire 1987 season after his third shoulder operation.

Sutter was not particularly effective, giving up one run on three hits in 1⅓ innings. Still, he got credit for winning his first decision.

"I'm happy because we won. I gave up some hits and a run, but we won and that's all that matters. How I feel about the way I pitched is for me to deal with and not for the newspapers," Sutter said.

Simmons homered off Jim Deshaies after Gary Roenicke reached on an error by shortstop Rafael Ramirez and Dale Murphy singled.

"He got into a 3-and-2 situation with me and he didn't want to walk me, so he threw me something I could hit," Simmons said. "It was a fastball a little bit inside."

Paul Assenmacher relieved Sutter in the eighth and got his first save. Assenmacher entered with runners on first and third and got Alan Ashby to ground into a double play. Assenmacher struck out three of the five men he retired.

Deshaies, 1-1, hurt himself with seven walks, including four during a two-run second. Simmons drew a bases-loaded walk and Hall had an RBI single.

Glenn Davis hit his sixth home run in the Houston fourth and Alan Ashby's two-run single in the sixth put the Astros ahead 3-2.

After Simmons' homer made it 5-3, the Astros scored in the bottom of the eighth when Billy Hatcher tripled and Davis singled.

National League

Pirates 3, Cardinals 0

Brian Fisher continued his hot hurling with his seventh straight win, while Barry Bonds kept up his torrid hitting with a double and single. Pittsburgh, in first place in the National League East for the first time since September 1983, won for the seventh time in the last eight games.

The Pirates took a 2-0 lead in the first against Danny Cox, 1-2, after Bonds doubled — his 13th consecutive extra-base hit — and scored on Jose Lind's double. Bobby Bonilla's hard-hit grounder went off first baseman Bob Horner's right arm for a single, scoring Lind. Horner was removed from the game and taken to a nearby hospital for X-rays that were negative.

The Pirates made it 3-0 in the second on Bonds' RBI single, which ended his extra-base hit streak and was his first run batted in without homering.

Fisher is 3-0 and unscored on in his last two starts. He won his last four starts last season and is 13-3 dating back to the 1987 All-Star break.

"Last year he'd get in trouble and he'd just try to throw the ball harder because he's a big, strong kid and he's always pitched that way," pitching coach Ray Miller said. "What made the difference for him is learning how to change speeds. He picked up a changeup faster than any pitcher I've ever had."

Reds 8, Giants 0

Dennis Rasmussen, like Fisher a former Yankee, pitched a four-hitter and Nick Esasky drove in four runs with a single and a homer.

Rasmussen, 1-1, struck out four in his second shutout in 107 career starts. His other was for the Yankees in 1986.

"They're few and far between," Rasmussen said. "I went 8⅔ innings four or five times the last couple of years. I've gotten all but the last out.

"I wasn't wild and I was keeping the ball down. I felt strong."

Esasky drove in three runs with a bases-loaded single and also had a solo homer, as did Barry Larkin leading off the game for the Reds.

Phillies 10, Mets 2

The Phillies won their second straight game at New York after a seven-game losing streak as Mike Schmidt and Lance Parrish each hit a pair of run-scoring singles, Von Hayes doubled twice and drove in two runs and Don Carman pitched a seven-hitter. Philadelphia has won four of five meetings with the Mets this season, led by Parrish, who is 8-for-18 against them. Eleven of his 13 RBI have come versus New York.

Schmidt, who entered the game batting just .191, went 3-for-4 in a 15-hit attack. He started a four-run fourth inning with an RBI single and his run-scoring hit in the fifth made it 6-1.

"We feel we can score runs against anybody," Hayes said. "It's just a matter of how many."

Expos 9, Cubs 1

Dennis Martinez pitched a six-hitter and Tim Wallach homered as Montreal took its fourth straight victory.

Martinez, 2-2, struck out five and walked none in his first complete game.

Wallach led off the second inning against Jamie Moyer, 1-1, with his second homer of the season and Montreal pulled away with seven runs in the eighth inning. Tim Raines and Mike Fitzgerald each drove in two runs.

Guzman ignites Rangers' victory

Associated Press

AL Roundup

Instead of letting the flu get him down, Jose Guzman used the cold weather in Cleveland Stadium to his advantage.

"I threw the fastball inside, because when it's cold, it's hard for hitters to hit the inside fastball," the Texas right-hander said Tuesday night after he threw six shutout innings in the Rangers' 3-0 victory over the Indians.

With temperatures in the upper 30s, Guzman, 2-1, allowed four singles, walked one and struck out three before tiring after six innings.

Rookie Jose Cecena gave up two hits in 2⅓ innings and Mitch Williams retired the final two hitters for his fifth save, giving the Rangers their second shutout of the year.

"I was feeling a little bit weak and just tried to go as far as I could," Guzman said. "I figured I didn't want to go farther and mess up everything I'd done."

The Indians, whose five-game winning streak ended, were not overly impressed with Guzman's work.

"It was lucky. We hit a lot of balls hard but they went right at people," said Scott Bailes, 1-1, who pitched his second complete game but became the first Cleveland starter to lose this season. "There are times when you're going to get shut out."

Bailes wasn't overwhelmed by his own work, either.

"I was getting behind in the count a lot," he said. "I was 3-0 on a lot of hitters. I really can't afford to do that. I only gave up three runs, but I never really felt like I was in control."

THE RANGERS scored twice in the first on a two-out, bases-loaded single by Larry Parrish after the inning was extended on a sloppy play by Cleveland second baseman Julio Franco. Franco misjudged a high pop-up by Pete Incaviglia that wound up falling into short right for a double.

"The ball was foul when it started," Franco said. "I broke one way and it just kept tailing and tailing. It's just one of those things."

The double sent Jerry Browne to third, and Pete O'Brien walked to load the bases for Parrish, who grounded a single to center for his only hit of the night.

"When you're hitting .080, 1-for-4 looks pretty good," Parrish said. "I didn't exactly drill it, but I hit it where nobody was."

Cecil Espy doubled, stole third and scored on Browne's single in the second for the Rangers' third run. It marked the first time this season the Indians have trailed by three runs.

They threatened to score off Guzman only once, when Franco walked and Willie Upshaw singled with one out in the sixth. Pat Tabler then hit a one-hopper that Guzman knocked down and threw to first for the second out. Joe Carter grounded out to end the inning.

"I felt we'd have beat him if Tabby's ball would have gone through," said Cleveland manager Doc Edwards. "Guzman helped his own cause there. He just threw his glove down and got it."

Guzman, whose ERA dropped to 1.57, hasn't allowed an earned run in his last 15 innings.

The shutout was the first against the Indians since Seattle's Mike Morgan blanked them 7-0 last Sept. 8. The loss was only their second in the last 13 games.

Red Sox 7, Tigers 3

Roger Clemens allowed seven hits and struck out 11 in eight innings as Boston beat Detroit and Jack Morris at Tiger Stadium.

Clemens, 3-0, struck out at least 10 for the third time in four starts and leads the AL with 44 strikeouts. It was the 24th time he has struck out 10 or more in a game in 108 career starts.

Marty Barrett, who went 3-for-5, broke a 2-2 tie with a two-run single in the fourth inning.

Blue Jays 12, Royals 3

In freezing temperatures at Toronto, Jesse Barfield hit a grand slam to cap a seven-run third inning and Jim Clancy tied a club record with 12 strikeouts to beat Kansas City.

Clancy, 1-2, tied the mark established by Pete Vuckovich versus Baltimore on July 26, 1977. Clancy pitched seven innings and allowed six hits. John Cerutti and Duane Ward finished.

Yankees 7, Twins 6

New York continued to pound Minnesota pitching as Rickey Henderson, Bobby Meacham and Mike Pagliarulo drove in two runs each in a six-run second inning at the Metrodome.

The Yankees, tied with Cleveland for the best record in the majors at 11-3, were coming off an 18-5 rout of Minnesota on Monday. In going 4-0 against the Twins, New York has outscored the defending World Series champions 38-14. The Yankees have scored 100 runs in 14 games, 7.1 runs a game.

White Sox 7, Mariners 2

Carlton Fisk hit two home runs and Chicago beat Seattle at the Kingdome for its fifth straight victory. The White Sox are in sole possession of first place in the AL West for the first time since June 20, 1985.

Starting in the fifth inning with the score tied 2-2, Kenny Williams, Ivan Calderon, Fisk and Harold Baines hit solo home runs in consecutive innings off starter Mark Langston, 0-2.

Fisk homered in the seventh and eighth and has 306 homers lifetime, tied for 55th place on the all-time list. It was the 21st time he has hit two homers in a games.

Athletics 8, Angels 3

Oakland's Dave Stewart survived three balks and seven California hits in seven innings and Terry Steinbach drove in three runs.

Reliever Rick Honeycutt got the first out in the eighth, and Dennis Eckersley finished up for his sixth save in six save opportunities. He has saved all four of Stewart's victories this year.

Stewart, 4-0, increased his season balk total to a major league-leading eight, three short of Steve Carlton's major league record for a full season. Stewart, a 20-game winner last season, was hurt by only one of the balks against the Angels.

Mets nip Travs in 15 innings

Associated Press

Angelo Cuevas singled home Marcus Lawton with the winning run in the bottom of the 15th inning Tuesday to give the Jackson Mets a 3-2 Texas League baseball victory over the Arkansas Travelers.

Lawton scored from second base with two outs as Cuevas delivered the game-winning single.

Lawton walked and advanced to second on a forceout at third by Alan Hayden to set up the winning run. Jackson scored single runs in the seventh and eighth innings to send the game into extra innings.

Mike Santiago was the winning pitcher. Howard Hilton was the loser.

Mario Monico extended his streak of reaching base safely to 12 straight with four hits to lead the El Paso Diablos to a 10-7 victory over the Wichita Pilots.

Over the past three games, Monico has had 10 hits. He also has reached base on two errors over that span.

Monico had three singles and a double and scored three runs Tuesday night.

El Paso collected 14 hits, including homers by George Canale and Greg Vaughn. Both homers came in the frist inning as Canale slugged a three-run homer and Vaughn had a two-run homer.

Gary Alexander hit a two-run double in the first inning, a three-run homer in the fourth, and an RBI single in the seventh to lead the Tulsa Drillers to a 13-5 victory over the Shreveport Captains.

Postal employees caught in Super Bowl contest fraud

NEW YORK (AP) — Most of the prize money from a Super Bowl "Pick the Score" contest last year went to postal workers and their friends who waited until after the game to submit their entries, using envelopes postmarked earlier, federal authorities charged.

Fourteen postal employees and three others were charged Tuesday with obstructing the mail in separate schemes from five area post offices, according to U.S. Attorney Andrew J. Maloney.

Seven of the defendants, including four postal workers, were among the 14 winners of the contest, sponsored by the Daily News, and they collected $35,000 of the $100,000 in cash prizes, authorities said. Two other postal workers were accused of splitting the $50,000 grand prize with its winner, Judith Febbraro, said U.S. Attorney Andrew J. Maloney.

When all you need is something special to accompany a favorite meat, chicken or fish dish, look to colorful Springtime Wild Rice, a light and fresh accompaniment that adds sparkle to any meal.

HERBED STEAK WITH BROWN & WILD RICE

- 1-1/4 to 1-1/2 pounds boneless beef flank or top sirloin steak
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh thyme leaves or 2 teaspoons dried
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 bay leaf
- 1 cup dry red wine
- 1 package (5 ounces) Brown & Wild Rice Mushroom Recipe
- 1-3/4 cups water
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 1 cup julienne zucchini or yellow squash
- 1 small tomato, chopped
- Cracked black pepper

Place beef in glass dish. Sprinkle with thyme, garlic and bay leaf; pour wine over all. Let stand at room temperature 20 to 30 minutes, or cover and refrigerate up to 8 hours, turning occasionally. Pour off marinade; place beef on rack in shallow roasting pan. Sprinkle with salt to taste. Place in preheated 425°F. oven. Immediately reduce heat to 325°F. Roast until meat thermometer inserted in thickest portion of meat reads 140°F. for rare, about 30 minutes. While beef roasts, combine contents of rice and seasoning packets, water and butter in saucepan. Bring to a boil. Cover tightly and simmer 20 minutes. Stir in zucchini. Cover and remove from heat. Let stand 5 minutes, or until desired consistency. Sprinkle with tomato. Slice beef across grain into 1/8-inch slices; serve alongside rice. Serve with cracked black pepper. Makes 4 servings.

GINGER-GLAZED HENS WITH CASHEW WILD RICE

- 2 Cornish game hens (about 1-1/4 pounds each), halved
- 1/4 cup prepared sweet and sour sauce
- 2 teaspoons shredded fresh ginger
- 1 package (6 ounces) Long Grain & Wild Rice Original Recipe
- 2-1/3 cups water
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 1 cup packed sliced spinach leaves
- 1/3 cup coarsely chopped cashews

Place hens skin side up on rack in shallow roasting pan. Sprinkle with salt to taste. Combine sweet and sour sauce and ginger. Brush over hens. Bake at 375°F. 40 to 45 minutes, or until golden brown and tender. While hens bake, combine contents of rice and seasoning packets, water and butter in saucepan. Bring to a boil. Cover tightly and simmer until all water is absorbed, about 25 minutes. Remove from heat, stir in spinach and cashews. Serve alongside hens. Makes 4 servings.

SPRINGTIME WILD RICE

- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 2-1/4 cups water
- 1 package (6 ounces) Long Grain & Wild Rice Original Recipe
- 1 cup 1-inch diagonally sliced asparagus
- 1/2 cup short, thin red bell pepper strips

Melt butter in medium saucepan. Add garlic and saute 1 to 2 minutes. Add water and contents of rice and seasoning packets to saucepan. Bring to a boil. Cover tightly and simmer 21 minutes. Stir in asparagus and red pepper. Cover and continue simmering until all water is absorbed, about 4 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

PATTIES AU POIVRE AND RED PEPPER RICE

- 1 package (5 ounces) Brown & Wild Rice Mushroom Recipe
- 1-3/4 cups plus 2 tablespoons water
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 teaspoon freshly cracked black peppercorns
- 1/2 cup short, thin red bell pepper strips
- 2 tablespoons dry red wine
- 1/4 cup sliced green onions

Combine contents of rice and seasoning packets, 1-3/4 cups water and butter in saucepan. Bring to a boil. Cover tightly and simmer 20 minutes. While rice simmers, combine beef, salt and garlic. Shape to form four oval patties about 3/4-inch thick. Press pepper evenly into both sides of patties. Saute in skillet over medium heat until desired doneness, about 3 minutes per side for medium. Remove to serving dish; keep warm. After rice has simmered 20 minutes, stir in red pepper. Cover and remove from heat. Let stand 5 minutes, or until desired consistency. Pour off drippings from skillet. Add wine and 2 tablespoons water to skillet. Cook and stir over high heat 1 minute. Pour over beef. Sprinkle green onions over cooked rice; serve alongside beef. Makes 4 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Prescription drugs: Use caution

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Yesterday I published a letter from a reader who requested a rerun of information about the interaction of certain foods with prescription drugs. She was wisely concerned that she might be "eating some foods that would be harmful to her medication."

Today I will deal with what you should tell your physician before he or she prescribes any medication:

■ If you have ever had any allergic reactions or side effects to certain drugs in the past.

■ If you are taking any medication on a regular basis, such as contraceptives or insulin, or if you use a non-prescription drug on a regular basis.

■ If you are being treated for a different condition by another doctor.

■ If you are pregnant, or a heavy smoker, or a heavy drinker.

■ If you are on a special diet or are taking vitamins and mineral supplements.

Some tips to help you use prescription drugs safely and effectively:

■ If a drug is not doing what it is supposed to do for you, check with your physician. You may need a different dosage or a different drug.

■ If you have an unexpected symptom — rash, nausea, dizziness, headache — report it to your physician immediately.

■ Don't stop taking your medicine just because you're feeling better. You may prevent the drug from doing its work completely.

■ Check drug labels for specific instructions or warnings such as, "Do not take on an empty stomach" or, "Do not take with milk."

■ Check the label, or ask your pharmacist, for storing instructions. Some drugs should be refrigerated; others must be protected from light.

■ Always keep medicines out of the reach of children.

■ Never let another person use your medicine, and never take medicine prescribed for anyone else. (This includes birth control pills.)

■ Never take medicine at night without turning on the light.

■ Do not transfer medication from the original container to another. The original container is designed to protect the drug. Also the instructions for taking the medication are on the original container.

Readers, for further information about prescription drugs, send for the free booklet published by the Food and Drug Administration in cooperation with the National Council on Patient Information and Education. To obtain this booklet, write to: RX Drugs, Consumer Information Center, Department DA, Pueblo, Colo. 81009. No stamped, self-addressed envelope is necessary, but please allow 30 days for delivery. When this hits print, the center will be deluged.

DEAR ABBY: My father and I have been debating about an issue for a while dealing with AIDS. I'm a 15-year-old girl and want to get my ears pierced. However, my dad seems to feel that I can receive AIDS from having this done, and insists that I go to a doctor to have a sterilized procedure done. But this is impractical and isn't worth the trouble and cost. I'm convinced sterilized earrings at the shopping mall are just as good as a sterilized needle. What do you think? Can I get AIDS from ear piercing? — NAKED LOBES

DEAR NAKED LOBES: As long as sterilized studs are used in the ear piercing, there should be no risk of getting AIDS.

Brownies baked in microwave

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

The chocolate lovers in our Test Kitchen weren't satisfied with their microwave brownie recipe until they came up with a version that tastes just as good as conventional brownies — but bakes in one-third the time.

Food in the corners of square baking dishes cooks quickly because it gets a double dose of microwave energy. If the corners of the brownies seem to be cooking too fast, shield with small pieces of foil. BUT don't use foil unless the manufacturer's directions for your oven recommend it.

TRIPLE-LAYER MICROWAVE BROWNIES

1 square (1 ounce) unsweetened chocolate
3 tablespoons margarine or butter
¾ cup quick-cooking rolled oats
⅓ cup all-purpose flour
⅓ cup packed brown sugar
¼ teaspoon baking soda
¼ cup margarine or butter
½ cup all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon baking powder
⅓ cup sugar
2 tablespoons water
1 slightly beaten egg
½ teaspoon vanilla
½ cup chopped nuts
Chocolate Frosting

In a microwave-safe mixing bowl cook chocolate and 3 tablespoons margarine, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) 1½ to 3 minutes or until melted.

In a mixing bowl stir together oats, ⅓ cup flour, brown sugar and soda. In a 1-cup measure cook ¼ cup margarine, uncovered, on high 45 to 60 seconds or until melted. Stir into oat mixture. Pat oat mixture into an ungreased 8x8x2-inch baking dish. Cook, uncovered, on 50 percent power (medium) 3 to 4 minutes or until surface appears dry, giving dish a quarter-turn after 2 minutes. Cool on a wire rack for 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, stir together ½ cup flour and baking powder. Stir sugar and water into chocolate mixture. Add egg and vanilla; stir gently until combined. Add flour mixture; stir until combined. Stir in nuts. Spread evenly over oat layer. Cook, uncovered, on medium 5 to 7 minutes or until done, shielding corners if necessary and giving the dish a quarter-turn every 3 minutes. Scratch the slightly wet surface near the center with a wooden toothpick. The brownies should be cooked underneath. Cool on wire rack. Frost with Chocolate Frosting. Cut into bars. Store in covered container. Makes 24.

Chocolate Frosting: In a small microwave-safe mixing bowl combine 1 square (1 ounce) unsweetened chocolate and 1 tablespoon butter or margarine. Cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 1½ to 2½ minutes or until melted. Stir in 1 cup sifted powdered sugar and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Stir in enough hot water (about 1½ tablespoons) to make spreadable.

Singles club for gourmets

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The lighting is soft, the food and wine exquisite, the conversation witty and sophisticated — ingredients for a perfect evening.

But the men and women at the elegant restaurant are more interested in salmon mousse than sizzling amour. Dalliance, though welcome, is not the goal of The Single Gourmet — a less romantic but frequently more satisfying pleasure lies behind the organization with about 10,000 members in North America.

"It's probably the best way to meet people," said Art Fischer, who began the club in New York in 1982. "It's not a dating agency. It's not a matrimonial agency. It's a dining club. We try to bring people together for good food and congenial conversation."

The organization's recipe, stirred by changes in courtship and fascination with the arts of the kitchen, has been successful. The New York branch has grown to 2,600 members, and 14 independent chapters have opened in the United States and Canada, Fischer said in a telephone interview.

Members pay up to $75 a year to join The Single Gourmet and $25-50, not including wine, for meals at restaurants or on other outings. Most are upper-middle-class professionals — lawyers, business executives, stockbrokers and doctors, Fischer said.

In keeping with the classy, low-key approach, members are not afflicted with name tags, but are identified discreetly at tables of six to 10 with placecards bearing only first names.

In San Francisco, about 35 members of The Single Gourmet recently enjoyed salmon tortellini, pear and parsnip soup, lamb with couscous and other specialities of California cuisine at Cafe Majestic, a popular restaurant in a restored Victorian hotel.

The chapter, about 18 months old, has about 270 members in the Bay area. One member travels from Nevada to attend its dinners, winery tours and other functions, which occur about twice a month.

Some regulars simply find The Single Gourmet a way to fit a social life into their busy schedules.

"It forces you to go out. For instance, I would not on a Tuesday night go out to Cafe Majestic or someplace like it," said Louis Sclafani, a designer in his 30s.

"It gives you a nice experience trying different restaurants and lets you experiment without, as a single man, having to go out on a date," he said.

Others, like Gary Sternitzke, first used the club as a way to learn about good restaurants and find friends in a new city.

Sternitzke, 35, credits the club for introducing him — a native of the Midwest raised on "meat-and-potatoes stuff" — to culinary adventure.

"I've tasted food I can't even say," he said. "And I've tried food when I've asked them not to tell me what it is until I've eaten it."

But all the diners agreed they hadn't joined The Single Gourmet as a singles club or dating service.

"I just enjoy meeting people. If it was single and married people, I'd probably join then, too," said Jeanne Swift, who began attending dinners six months ago.

"When you're eating lovely food, you want to look across the table and say, 'This is wonderful; you must have a taste,' " she said. "I don't care if it's with men or women."

But changing sexual behavior has definitely helped The Single Gourmet, members and coordinators said.

"It just seemed like an idea that came at the right time," Fischer said.

But while people may not be looking for love when they join, sometimes they find it anyway. The New York chapter has seen 28 marriages of club members in six years, Fischer said.

Fischer, a retired film importer, owns The Single Gourmet name and sells licenses for branches, which operate independently although members may attend dinners and other Single Gourmet events in other cities.

Hypochondria among major mental problems

By DENISE FORTINO
Associated Press

FEARS and PHOBIAS

You rush to the doctor at the first hint of any illness. Or maybe you suffer an upset stomach or back pain whenever job pressures become overwhelming. Or you're positively convinced your headache is a brain tumor — even after a battery of tests turns up no disease.

If any of these patterns sounds familiar, you may have a form of hypochondria, a most common mental health problem encountered by family physicians.

Some experts in the field have estimated that more than 75 percent of people who visit doctors with complaints have no organic illness at all, and that about 25 percent of the population as a whole are hypochondriacs.

People who are obsessed with their health fall into one of two categories, explains Dr. J. Ingram Walker, M.D., clinical professor of psychiatry at the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio. Most of them, known as the "worried well," are besieged by a recurring, often vague assortent of aches, pains and other symptoms, both minor and major. One month it may be a chest pain or shortness of breath, and another it may be a neck ache or what feels like an ulcer. "In each case, the patient seeks a cure and often undergoes a 'megabuck' medical workup in the process," Dr. Walker observes.

Usually the ills are the result of multiple, yet unacknowledged sources of stress in the person's life, including career or financial concerns, in-law tensions, a troubled marriage, loneliness or depression. Because he or she may find it too difficult or threatening to handle the underlying anxiety directly, it erupts as a physical problem. "Bodily defects are easier to deal with than emotional ones, and can be handed over to someone else to 'fix,'" Dr. Walker says.

None of this happens consciously, and most hypochondriacs strongly resist the idea that their condition is anything other than physical unless they are counseled for some time by an understanding physician or therapist. "What these people really need is a relationship, not a pill," Dr. Walker maintains. "A concerned professional should explain to them regularly that even while a thorough diagnostic exam has revealed nothing amiss, their illness is still very real. And they should be told that by handling the stresses in their lives, they can eliminate or be better able to deal with their physical complaints."

Hard-core hypochondriacs, a less common breed, are under the persistent delusion that they have a major, specific illness such as heart disease or cancer despite all contrary medical evidence. They simply think the doctors are wrong in their case and that their "disease" will show itself soon enough.

This condition usually stems from one ongoing unconscious conflict. For example, a single woman was left to nurse her father through colon cancer after all her sisters and brothers had married and moved away from home. Not long after he died, she became obsessed with the idea that she, too, had colon cancer and insisted that she was seriously ill even when all tests proved negative.

It turned out that she was harboring a great deal of hostility and resentment for having taken care of her father without any family help and for feeling abandoned after his death. With sensitive professional help, she was able to uncover this hidden emotional distress and eventually find relief from her morbid fears.

Physicians caution that for many chronic hypochondriacs, insight into the causes of their condition is often only a first step and that long-term, one-to-one counseling may be necessary.

"Any form of hypochondria may justify certain behavior, such as withdrawing from unwanted confrontations or avoiding intimacy and involvement with others," says Dr. Jeffrey Levinkron, assistant professor of psychiatry and medicine at The University of Rochester (N.Y.) Medical Center.

Sometimes circumstances can reinforce, if not create, a case of hypochondria, Dr. Levinkron suggests. For example, say a woman sustains a real back injury following an accident, and then her life changes significantly as a result: Her husband offers to play a more active role in caring for their baby and her boss also becomes more solicitous, allowing her to avoid some deadline pressures on the job. "Unconsciously, she won't want to recover and so will likely experience recurring back pain even after her injury heals," Dr. Levinkron explains. "The answer is to help her enjoy the same rewards or relationships in the absence of back pain."

■ If you or someone you know shows signs of lingering hypochondria, consider the likelihood that such behavior is a well-disguised form of stress: With the aid of an informal diary, keep track of the situations that either precede or follow the onset and relief of symptoms. Do you notice any pattern? Taking a close look at what else is going on in your life may help explain why you "hurt."

■ Some relaxation techniques, such as breathing from the diaphragm, muscle relaxation and concentrating on positive images can help dispel obsessive thoughts about health.

■ Don't wait for someone to be sick to offer your loving concern and attention — or else you may encourage him or her to use illness as a way of "reaching" you.

■ Don't allow yourself to overindulge a hypochondriac or be controlled and manipulated by his condition since this will only reinforce the problem and generate feelings of resentment.

■ Seek professional help if worries about health persist or become more intense.

Creativity results in salads fit to be tried

By BOBBI IGNELZI
Copley News Service

From time to time, the lettuce supply dwindles down to a pricey few, due to weather, insect incursions, what have you. When you see that tiny, colorless head of iceberg lettuce in the produce department and grumble over the price tag, don't get mad — get creative.

Or maybe you're just bored with the usual greens. Look past your grocer's lettuce bin. Check out the array of fresh vegetables, fruits and herbs that can offer a delightful change of pace from leafy greens, and more nutrition as well.

Elaine Heil, nutrition specialist, thinks cabbage is a good alternative.

"Cabbage is more versatile than people think. You can make a creamy coleslaw, marinate it in oil and vinegar along with other vegetables, or use it along with lettuce as an extender, to stretch your lettuce supply," she says.

OTHER SUGGESTIONS include slicing broccoli into thin strips or small flowerets and marinating; shredding carrots into a creamy sweet dressing; marinating cauliflower and red and green peppers for a tangy combination; or blending the crunch of pea pods, green beans and onions.

Spinach makes a delicious salad when combined with fresh mushrooms, fresh herbs, crumbles of crisp bacon and a warm bacon dressing. Or try experimenting with a variety of vegetables, such as bok choy, pea pods, sprouts, onions, and water chestnuts, all barely moistened with sesame oil, for an Oriental salad.

Heil also suggests creating or stretching salads with beans and grains. Partially cooked vegetables tossed with a light linguini or some little pasta bowties and your favorite dressing make a hearty pasta primavera.

Salads don't necessarily have to be mounds of lettuce and tomatoes. The following salad recipes offer a variety of vegetable combinations for a refreshing change of pace.

WILTED SPINACH SALAD

1 small red onion, quartered and thinly sliced
3 to 4 slices baguette per person, for croutons
6 tablespoons olive oil
8 to 12 Kalamata olives
1 pound bunch spinach
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
1 tablespoon mint leaves, finely chopped
2 tablespoons sherry vinegar
6 ounces feta cheese

Yields 4 servings.

Heat oven to 400 degrees. Cover onion slices with cold water and refrigerate until needed. Brush bread with some of olive oil and toast in oven until crisp and lightly browned, 6 to 8 minutes. Press olives to split open, take out pits, and cut or tear meats in two.

Remove spinach stems (or not, as you prefer) and discard any bruised or yellow leaves. Cut large leaves into halves or thirds; small leaves can be left whole. Wash spinach, using two changes of water if spinach is very sandy, and spin dry.

When you are ready to make salad, drain onions. Put spinach in large metal bowl and toss it with onions, garlic, mint, olives and vinegar. Break up cheese and crumble over spinach. Heat rest of olive oil until very hot but just short of smoking. Immediately pour over salad, turning leaves with pair of metal tongs so hot oil coats and wilts as many leaves as possible. Taste, and season with more vinegar if needed.

LENTIL SALAD

FOR THE LENTILS:
1 pound lentils
1 tablespoon coarse salt
2 onions, stuck with a clove
2 carrots, cut in half
16 peppercorns, tied in a cloth
Bouquet garni
FOR THE GARNISH:
4 medium carrots, diced
2 medium turnips, diced
3 medium leeks, white only, diced
FOR THE VINAIGRETTE:
5 tablespoons Dijon mustard
2 cups salad oil
⅓ cup wine vinegar
Salt, pepper
6 shallots, finely chopped
½ pound bacon, cut into ¼-inch thick strips and fried just before serving.
6 tablespoons finely chopped chervil or parsley

Yields 6 servings:
THE LENTILS:

Wash and drain lentils. Place them in a large saucepan with 2 quarts of cold water, add coarse salt, and bring to a boil. Skim off any foam that appears, then add onions, carrots, peppercorns, and bouquet garni. Lower heat and simmer for 30 to 45 minutes, or until lentils are tender but not mushy. Strain lentils and remove onions, peppercorns, carrots, and bouquet garni. Place lentils in a large mixing bowl, cover with aluminum foil, and keep warm while preparing the garnish.

THE GARNISH:

Cook diced carrots in a saucepan of lightly salted boiling water for 3 minutes. Drain and reserve water. Bring water back to a boil and cook the turnips for 2 minutes. Drain turnips and again reserve water. Place turnips in a bowl separate from the carrots. Cook the leeks for 5 minutes in the reserved water, drain, and reserve in a third bowl. Cover each vegetable with foil to keep warm.

TO SEASON AND SERVE:

Make a vinaigrette by whisking together in a bowl the mustard, oil, vinegar, and a little salt and pepper.

Season warm lentils with ¾ cup of the vinaigrette, stir in chopped shallots, and place some of the lentils on each plate.

Spoon a tablespoon of remaining vinaigrette over each of the 3 vegetables used as garnishes and place a little pile of each one on each plate around the lentils.

Place remaining vinaigrette in a bowl with crisped bacon strips, stir, sprinkle this over lentils. Finally sprinkle each salad with chopped chervil or parsley and serve barely warm.

CURRIED CARROT SALAD

1 tablespoon curry powder
3 garlic cloves, minced
⅓ cup white wine vinegar
Salt
Coarsely ground white pepper
3 tablespoons olive oil
6 medium-size carrots, peeled and grated

In small bowl, combine curry powder, garlic, vinegar, and salt and pepper to taste. Let stand 10 minutes for flavors to develop. Whisk in oil. Pour over carrots and mix well.

CUCUMBER SALAD

Salt
6 medium-size cucumbers, peeled and seeded
¾ cup sour cream
3 tablespoons minced fresh dill
Coarsely ground white pepper

Salt cucumbers lightly and let stand in a bowl for 30 minutes to 1 hour.

Combine sour cream, dill, and pepper to taste in a bowl. Just before serving, add dressing to cucumbers and mix well.

BEET AND CARROT SALAD

2 tablespoons rice wine vinegar
¼ cup Dijon-style mustard
⅓ cup olive oil
2 large carrots, peeled and cut into fine julienne
3 large beets, cooked, peeled, and cut into fine julienne

Blend vinegar and mustard, slowly add oil, and mix well. Add to vegetables and toss thoroughly.

FRUIT SALAD

2 firm medium apples, cored and cubed
2 bananas, halved lengthwise, cut into 1-inch pieces
8 dried apricots, coarsely chopped
4 dried pitted prunes, coarsely chopped
⅓ cup raisins
3 to 5 heaping tablespoons plain yogurt
⅓ tablespoon honey
Dash of nutmeg
1 to 2 tablespoons orange or apple juice or Grand Marnier
2 tablespoons coarsely chopped toasted almonds

Yields 4 servings.

Combine first 8 ingredients in medium bowl and mix well. Stir in juice or liqueur to taste. Cover and chill. When ready to serve, gently mix in almonds.

Tips on limiting risks of salmonella offered

By MARIAN BURROS
New York Times News Service

The egg, its once enviable reputation as a top-quality source of nutrients besmirched by its high cholesterol content, is under new scrutiny after a report last week implicating it in salmonella outbreaks.

According to the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, clean inspected Grade A eggs in their shells are responsible for an "epidemic rise" in salmonella infection in people in the East, including New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New England.

The centers recorded 2,119 cases and 11 deaths attributed to 65 outbreaks of salmonella in an 11-year period, according to the new report. Of the 35 outbreaks in which a food source was identified, 77 percent were caused by eggs or foods containing eggs.

Writing in the April 8 issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association, the scientists at the federal center said that the problem was especially worrisome because the bacterium involved, Salmonella enteritidis, might be in eggs and could be transmitted by the hen.

In the past, salmonella outbreaks have been associated with cracked or soiled eggs, suggesting that the bacteria was on the outside of the egg and that improper handling had contaminated the contents.

Salmonella is a severe problem in poultry. It is often found on freshly laid eggs, but proper sanitizing of the eggs before they reach the market kills the organisms on the outside.

ALL GRADE A shell eggs are washed and sanitized by spraying. The Agriculture Department grading program is voluntary. Buyers of ungraded eggs cannot be sure the eggs have been sanitized.

Salmonella is a ubiquitous bacterium that, if ingested in large amounts, can cause abdominal cramps, fever or diarrhea. In the very young, the elderly or those with weakened immune systems, salmonella can cause death.

The report that there might be salmonella in some eggs suggests that the consumption and handling of raw eggs might present similar health hazards to those associated with the consumption and handling of raw poultry and beef.

The lead researcher in the study, Dr. Michael E. St. Louis, an epidemiologist at the federal center, said in a telephone interview: "I've come to look at raw eggs the way I looked at raw chicken. I'm much more careful than I used to be."

St. Louis and his fellow researchers want the public to be more careful, too. In the medical journal article, they wrote that there was "limited public awareness that raw eggs, like other foods of animal origin, constitute a potential source of salmonella."

Americans eat raw or partly cooked eggs in many dishes: homemade mayonnaise, ice cream, eggnog, milkshakes, Caesar salad, hollandaise sauce, soft omelettes and eggs sunny side up, among others. They also like to lick batter from the bowl when cakes and cookies are being prepared. Now, the federal center's findings suggest that eating such foods falls in the same risk category as eating steak tartare or very rare hamburgers.

These are some of the ways to reduce the risk of salmonellosis from eggs both before and after they reach the consumer:

It is not uncommon to see dozens of unrefrigerated cartons of eggs stacked in grocery stores. Do not buy them. Eggs should be treated like other perishables and stored at 40 degrees Fahrenheit or below. Temperatures between 40 and 140 degrees provide fertile breeding grounds for salmonella. Eggs should not be left at room temperature for more than one hour.

At home, it is common to take eggs out of their carton and store them on an egg tray in the refrigerator. It is safer to leave eggs in the carton, and it also helps prevent them from picking up odors from the refrigerator.

Just as you would use four-day-old milk before milk purchased today, use older eggs first. St. Louis said he suspects that the fresher the egg, the less likely that it would contain enough salmonella to cause illness.

Consumers should use only clean, uncracked eggs. Last year, the American Egg Board, an association of producers, suggested using only clean unbroken eggs for dishes in which the egg is not cooked or is partly cooked.

MORE PRUDENT advice would be not to use dirty cracked eggs in any dishes. Even if the eggs are thoroughly cooked, the possibility of salmonella is greater, and so is the possibility of cross-contamination.

The especially prudent will not serve eggs sunny side up and will cook all eggs well done. The scientists researching the report recommended three minutes to a side. But who would want to eat an agg after that long? Unfortunately, no one can say with certainty that a shorter cooking time will kill the organisms.

When working with raw eggs, cooks should always wash their hands and use only clean utensils and equipment. They should use soap and water to wash all equipment and surfaces that have touched raw eggs.

Cooks should not hold cooked eggs at 140 degrees or higher any longer than 30 minutes. They should forget about preparing hollandaise sauce in advance and allowing it to sit in a double boiler on the back of the stove. Some people may wish to forget about eating hollandaise entirely.

Dishes with raw eggs should include some form of acid, such as a citrus fruit like lemon, to retard the growth of salmonella.

Celebrate spring season with food, friends

By MELANIE BARNARD and BROOKE DOJNY
Copley News Service

By now, no matter where you live, the daffodils should be jauntily displaying their sunny faces and the first tulips splashing color against the backdrop of newly awakened grass.

Though the evening may still be cool, and frost may still threaten, the days have a special fresh aroma and beauty, even through the mist of afternoon showers. Every year we are again overwhelmed by the awesomeness of nature in her rebirth, and invariably are inspired to celebrate the season.

For us, of course, every celebration includes food, and we especially like to share our meals with a few good and dear friends. This menu, which capitalizes on some of the wealth of ingredients classic to the season, is elegant enough to serve on your finest china, but easy enough to serve at the last minute to the most special of friends — your family.

The Broiled Lamb with Mustard and Rosemary is designed to be cooked indoors under a broiler, but it is equally delicious when grilled outside.

BUTTERFLIED LEG of lamb is a versatile, delicious, and always quick-to-prepare cut of meat, and we think it should never be cooked past medium rare to best enjoy the juiciness and delicate flavor of the lamb. Most food supermarkets will gladly bone, trim and butterfly the lamb for you.

In this recipe, generous amounts of Dijon mustard coat and flavor the lamb with a mellow smoothness accentuated by the sharpness and crunch of rosemary, garlic and cracked peppercorns.

Leeks with Vinegar Sauce is a perfect, soothing and ever-so-slightly naturally sweet accompaniment to the lamb. The butter sauce is bound together and flavored with balsamic vinegar, a mild and richly distinctive Italian vinegar that is now widely available and well worth adding to your condiment shelf.

Round out this meal with some steamed tiny red new potatoes in their jackets and perhaps some popovers if you are feeling especially celebratory. Finish with a simple dessert of sliced, sweetened strawberries spooned over the very best vanilla ice cream you can find and offer a plate of tiny chocolate cookies to enjoy with coffee.

BROILED LAMB WITH MUSTARD AND ROSEMARY

4-5 pound leg of lamb, boned and butterflied (boned weight will be about 2½-3 pounds)
¼ cup Dijon mustard
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 teaspoons cracked black peppercorns
2 teaspoons dried rosemary
½ teaspoon coarse or sea salt
2 tablespoons olive oil

Preparation and cooking time: 35 minutes.
Yield: 6 servings.
Preheat broiler.

Use your hand or mallet to flatten lamb to an even thickness.

In small dish, combine mustard and garlic and smear over all sides of lamb. In another small dish, combine peppercorns, rosemary and salt. Sprinkle lamb evenly with herb mixture and pat in with palm of hand.

Place lamb on broiler pan, drizzle with half of olive oil and broil about 6 inches from heat source for about 10 minutes. Turn, drizzle with remaining oil and broil for 10-12 minutes for medium-rare lamb.

Let lamb stand, loosely covered with foil, for about 5 minutes, then cut into thin slices across grain.

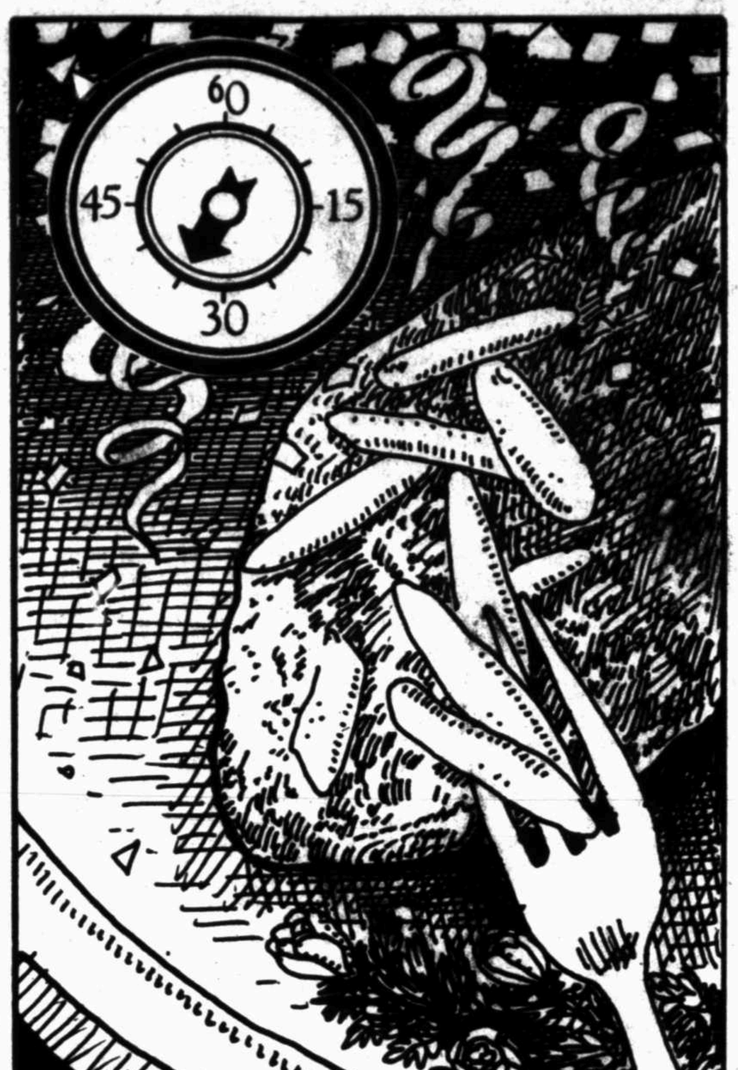
LEEKS WITH VINEGAR SAUCE

12 slender leeks (about ½-¾ inch in diameter)
1¾ cups chicken stock, approximately
3 tablepoons balsamic or sherry or good red wine vinegar
6 tablespons butter
Salt and pepper to taste

Preparation and cooking time: 20 minutes.
Yield: 6 servings.

Trim leeks and wash thoroughly. Cut, using about 1 inch of green part, into diagonal slices about 2 inches in length.

Place leeks in skillet just large enough to hold them in single layer. Add enough chicken stock to come about ¾ of way up leeks. Bring mixture to simmer, partially cover pan and cook over low heat, turning occasionally, until leeks are tender, 10-15 minutes.



CNS Graphic

Use tongs or slotted spoon to remove leeks from pan. Keep warm, covered with foil.

Pour off all but ⅓ cup cooking liquid. Bring to boil and cook 1-2 minutes until reduced by about half. Add vinegar and cook about 1 minute until reduced by half. Reduce heat to lowest possible. Cut butter into 12 pieces and whisk into the vinegar mixture piece by piece. Add another piece only as previous one softens and blend into sauce. Season sauce with salt and pepper.

Spoon butter sauce over leeks and serve immediately.

Sit-down meal seems waste of time today

By PHYLLIS BATTELLE
Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — In the late 1940s, a nutritional radical held a press conference and announced he had developed a pill which contained all the essential ingredients a human being would need.

By consuming the "one-a-day" pill, Americans would be healthy and slim. No one would need to cook, or wash dishes. Any hunger pangs would soon disappear, after a period of psychological adjustment. Think of the time and effort that could be saved, the scientist said, when cuisine was replaced with the wonders of chemistry.

The idea was soundly rejected by the media and the men and women on the street, not because they disbelieved the pill's nutritional promise, but because it was culturally abhorrent. In those post-World War II years, dining was a treasured social and family custom. Breaking bread — or better yet, home-baked cake — was an occasion for sharing. Parents and children gathered together for dinner. Women, not yet weaned from the home, felt guilty if they didn't provide meals for the family.

BUT IT seems that the one-meal pill was introduced four decades before its time. Today, according to two recently released studies, people no longer feel guilty if they don't provide a sit-down meal. Quite the reverse. "People feel guilty when they take the time to prepare, enjoy and clean up after a meal," says Anthony Adams, vice president of marketing research for Campbell Soup Company. It's considered a waste of time. "There's a general feeling these days that eating has to be combined with doing," he said. To make the most of that spirit, Campbell's is marketing soup products that can be eaten with one hand while driving a car or operating a computer.

Such products appeal to a segment of the U.S. population which another food company, Pillsbury, calls the "chase and grabbits." The largest and fastest-growing category of eaters, these "c-and-g"s far outnumber the smallest and fastest-shrinking segment, which Pillsbury calls the "happy cookers," people who still cook three meals a day, bake pies and make casseroles. Pillsbury, which analyzed data on American eating behavior from 1971 to 1986, finds that the happy cookers declined 35 percent over those 15 years, and now make up for only 15 percent of the population, whereas the number of chase and grabbits ("to whom even microwave popcorn can become a meal") leaped 136 percent in the same period.

WHEN THEY'RE not popping two-minute corn, this group relies on such quick consumables as muffins, bagels and snack cakes. "We found an unexpectedly large number of people," says Campbell Soup's Adams, "who told us that instead of eating, they'd rather just take a pill."

According to the Wall Street Journal — which reported on our chaotic eating in a report headlined "Are Square Meals Headed for Extinction?" — many health officials are concerned about our fragmented eating patterns. "Food producers are making it easy to skip meals," says the story. Frito-Lay, for instance, is now making 3-ounce sizes of its former 1.5-ounce potato and corn chip single servings, and RJR Nabisco has created Big Stufs, an Oreo cookie nearly five times larger than the original version. "And we see people eating Big Stufs three at a time!" one RJR marketer said in amazement.

If health professionals are worried, sociologists and psychiatrists are even more upset at the trend toward "get-it-fast, don't-sit-down-with-the-family" products. One astonishing study by a market-research firm in Long Island, N.Y., states that only 15 percent of last year's meals required the use of a standard oven.

PEOPLE INCREASINGLY are splurging at one meal, then skipping successive meals, or they're eating on weekends and then dieting all week. "As many as three-fourths of the population does this to some extent, and the long-term health implications are unclear," says Kelly Brownell, a University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine psychiatry professor who is studying the effects of such "yo-yo dieting" on our psyches.

And Lionel Tiger, a Rutgers University anthropology professor, notes that current eating (or non-eating) habits could have a profound effect on public health and family life. In most cultures, sharing meals validates the importance of the family and offers a sense of continuity. The loss of that daily ritual in many homes, he says, robs U.S. families of a forum of communication and access for children to their parents. "We don't know where the next meal will come from, or when, or with whom," he said. "And since sharing food is a critical element of a society, the demise of the meal signals a shift from the family to the individual as the basic societal unit."

If the trend continues, we'll be a lonelier people, undernourished not only nutritionally but socially.

Cookbook revised, updated for visually-impaired, blind

Company makes national offer of free copies in Braille or large type

From Staff Reports

Many people with 20/20 vision find cooking a challenge. Imagine what it must be like for the blind — working in darkness — in a kitchen where even those with sight are often cut, scalded, burned or worse.

The plight of blind and visually-impaired cooks first was addressed about 20 years ago when Campbell Soup Company issued a free cookbook in large-type or Braille. Because lifestyles and food preferences have changed a great deal since the printing of that book, Campbell has revised and updated it.

With a $10,000 grant from the Camden food company, the new cookbook, "Easy Ways to Delicious Meals," has been produced and will be distributed by the Associated Services for the Blind, Inc. Philadelphia. The organization is the largest provider of services to the blind in the Delaware Valley, offering rehabilitation and adjustment assistance, a radio information center, Braille production and jobs placement service.

The 45-page cookbook contains recipes ranging from Broccoli Soup to Spaghetti, some even utilizing the microwave oven. Because most of the recipes are based on convenience foods, the time it takes to prepare them is minimal — and so is the effort. This aspect helps reduce the fear blind cooks often have of cooking, while offering nutritional foods.

To coincide with National Consumers Week, April 24-30, single copies of the cookbooks are being offered free nationally. For a copy write Campbell Soup Cookbook, c/o Associated Services for the Blind, 919 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., 19107, or call (215) 627-0600. Specify Braille or Large Type.

THURSDAY, APRIL 21, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Sweeping changes will work to your advantage. Listen to advice, but make your own decisions, especially in matters of the heart. Good health is your own responsibility. Avoid taking unnecessary risks. Others may accuse you of showing favoritism in the workplace, but you know better. Follow your own conscience. New business opportunities deserve a close look. Investigate them all. Greater give-and-take is the only way to make a love relationship last.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Charles Grodin, comedienne Elaine May, actor Tony Danza, actor Anthony Quinn, Queen Elizabeth II of Great Britain.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are in no mood to have your word questioned. Go along with the crowd for a change. Let romance simmer while you concentrate on business. Cash in investments that are not producing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You have earned the right to more leisure time. Plan a vacation that will delight the whole family. Love shows you the way through a dark tunnel. Mate wants to share a special experience.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Give partners a chance to express their desires. A business decision may be out of your hands. Step back and take a better look at an on-again, off-again relationship. Mail brings good news.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Romantic opportunities increase as you socialize more. Those working in banking, securities and insurance should have an excellent day. An unexpected visitor will put you in a great mood this evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Choose the most difficult project available and go for it! You could ride it to the top of the career ladder. A love relationship will be enhanced by today's events. Be affectionate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New relationships are favored. Reach out to others. Improving your skills could lead to a better job. Avoid all forms of financial gambling. Romance will peak after sunset.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Give top priority to projects that will tax your mental prowess. Your intuition appears to be excellent at the moment. Aim high! Give yourself plenty of time to prepare for important meetings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Creative ideas bring professional advancement. Showcase your talents to best advantage. An exercise program could be the beginning of a whole new you. Help a loved one or neighbor in need.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Try to strike a better balance between work and pleasure. A short business trip helps you discover a way to fulfill your long-term ambitions. Seek experts' financial advice. Build savings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An unexpected encounter with a friend will open new doors. Your efforts are appreciated by those who matter most to you. Expect good news from relatives or friends overseas. Write more letters.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Tension can cause mistakes. Avoid buying non-essential items. Final plans are subject to change. Be patient and flexible. Higher-ups are impressed by commonsense attitude.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Check into new investments with experts. Real estate deals are favored so long as you know what you are doing. Fate steps in, helping you forge a wonderful relationship. Be receptive.

Opening lead: Ace of ♠

How often have you heard someone remark: "If only I knew the distribution!" On this hand, the exact lie of the cards was revealed at the third trick, and declarer put that information to maximum use to land an "impossible" contract.

North's jump to four hearts was preemptive. While East was tempted to act on his distributional hand, the vulnerability was against him—when you are vulnerable and the opponents are not, discretion is almost always the better part of valor.

West led his ace of spades and, despite East's encouraging ten, shifted to the ace of diamonds and another. To South's surprise, East discarded a spade on this trick.

It took declarer only a few moments to work out the whole hand. Since West did not continue with a spade but, instead, shifted to an unsupported ace in another suit, he had obviously started with a bare ace of spades. East's discard on the second diamond and his failure to ruff marked him with no trumps and only one diamond. Therefore, West's distribution was 1-3-5-4. That was all declarer needed to make one of West's trump tricks go up in smoke.

He cashed the ace-king of clubs for two spade sluffs from dummy. Then he ruffed a club, discarded a spade on the king of diamonds and ruffed a diamond. Another club ruff was followed by another diamond ruff in the closed hand, which reduced declarer, dummy and West each to nothing but three trumps. Declarer simply exited with his lowest trump. West won, but he was then forced to lead away from his king of trumps into declarer's ten-ace, so the ony losers were one trick in each suit except clubs.

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Carlotta Corpron, whose photographs are displayed at the Dallas Museum of Art, died Sunday at age 86.

Ms. Corpron, who purchased her first camera in 1933, graduated from Columbia University and taught at Texas Woman's University from 1935 until her retirement in 1967.

She was considered a designer with light. Her photos played light against inanimate objects to produce fluid, rhythmic compositions.

A collection of Ms. Corpron's work was displayed at Dallas' Avrom Gallery in 1965. Three of her photographs — "Light, White Paper and Glass," "Winds Between the Worlds" and "Solarized Calla Lillies" — are in the collection of the Dallas Museum of Art.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Five tumultuous decades have passed since Jerry Daniels last appeared with the Ink Spots and swing music has given way to punk rock, but Daniels showed some things never change.

Daniels, the last surviving member of the original Ink Spots singing group of the 1930s and 1940s, stepped again into the limelight at the Indiana Roof Ballroom on Monday night to harmonize with the current touring group.

"We're kinda like the Yankees," said the 72-year-old Daniels. "We just keep changing the players around."

The group originated in Indianapolis in 1930, playing on street corners for whatever spare change passersby would throw their direction.

Daniels left the group in 1936 over a money dispute, but he may soon be seen again. A video shot during Monday's concert is scheduled to be released nationally, along with a book and a new album of the Ink Spots' old songs.

NEW YORK (AP) — Her husband's biography is a best-seller and they've both got multiple millions in the bank, but Ivana Trump apparently hasn't left motherhood behind in life's fast lane.

Mrs. Trump was among seven women honored Tuesday by the National Mother's Day Committee for "contributions to the role of contemporary motherhood."

Mrs. Trump, who helps her husband, Donald, run a real estate empire, said they repeatedly emphasize to their three children, "No smo..ing, no drugs, no alcohol. Don't cheat and steal and lie."

The other winners were opera singer Regina Resnick; Rep. Constance Morella, R-Md.; NBC radio correspondent Judy Muller; Patti Ann McDonald of Malverne, N.Y., whose husband, Steven, was paralyzed by an assailant's bullet; Laura H. Pomerantz, corporate senior vice president of The Leslie Fay Co.; and Grace Sandness, a Minnesota mother of 15 who is a quadriplegic.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cedars-Sinai Medical Center is living up to its name "hospital to the stars." It's treating rocker Eddie Van Halen, actor James Garner, comic Sid Caesar and comedian Morey Amsterdam.

Garner, 60, and Van Halen, 33, entered the hospital on Monday, while Caesar, 66, and Amsterdam, 76, have been hospitalized several days, Ron Wise, spokesman at Cedars-Sinai, said Tuesday.

None was suffering from life-threatening ailments.

Van Halen had recently returned from Fiji when he was stricken by a tropical virus, said his publicist Elliot Sekular. He was expected to be released this week.

Amsterdam, best known as Buddy on "The Dick Van Dyke Show," had blood clots removed from each leg and is "doing very well," said Wise.

Caesar, who had hernia surgery two weeks ago, was being treated for a staph infection and was also "doing quite well," Wise said, while Garner was undergoing a series of tests prior to heart surgery Thursday for an aneurysm.

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Actor Lloyd Bridges, a goodwill ambassador for CARE International, is spending a week here for a tour of drought relief and development projects in eastern and central Ethiopia.

CARE distributes food to about 300,000 people in eastern Hararghe province, where it also has various development projects. In Northern Shoa, central Ethiopia, it helps provide relief food for an estimated 100,000 people in conjunction with the Baptist Mission of Ethiopia.

The drought victims are among 7 million Ethiopians needing help this year after massive crop failures in 1987. More than 3 million are in northern Ethiopia, where drought relief operations have been crippled by civil war.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge has refused to dismiss a lawsuit brought by comedian Joan Rivers against a magazine writer, saying "there are people who enjoy a good reputation even if they are caustic and insulting" on stage.

Miss Rivers sued writer Ben Stein for $50 million after Gentlemen's Quarterly magazine ran an article saying she wished her husband dead before his suicide.

Superior Court Judge Kurt Lewin on Tuesday denied a request by Stein to have the case dismissed, but did dismiss Miss Rivers' separate claim for emotional distress.

Is that you, Elvis?

Participants in a seance to contact the spirit of Elvis Presley sing to their knees as mentalist Kreskin plays "Love Me Tender" on a piano. Kresking staged the event Tuesday in a Nashville studio.

WHAT'S COOKING

Legal secretary's specialty Italian food

EDITOR'S NOTE: This series of "What's Cooking" interviews will feature non-profit organizations that have published cookbooks. This is the second article in a series of interviews with members of the Midland Legal Secretaries Association.

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO
Lifestyle Writer

Pam Kuch has been a legal secretary for 10 years, nine of which she has worked for Brockett, Cunningham and Bates. She also is president of Midland Legal Secretaries Association. Yet Ms. Kuch said she still manages to find time for cooking by planning weekly menus.

"It's easier to pick and choose what we're going to eat for seven meals rather than coming home from work and wondering 'what have we got to eat?' " she said. Ms. Kuch added that she favors meals that are easy to prepare, especially food prepared in the microwave.

Ms. Kuch said that after serving as MLSA president this past year — attending meetings and overseeing the officers and committee chairman — she will be "ready to step down" and enjoy being "just a member."

MLSA is an educational organization designed to keeps its members informed on diverse aspects of the legal field.

"The legal field is so specialized," Ms. Kuch said, "someone working in litigation might have no idea what goes on in probate. So, we have speakers and seminars for members to become knowledgeable in other areas of law."

Ms. Kuch, who has a deaf niece, is also involved with the organization Lighthouse, a hotline for the deaf, based in California, and with Dogs for the Deaf in Mississippi.

Despite her many activities, Ms. Kuch still enjoys cooking for herself and her husband, Mark, who she said is "a meat and potatoes man."

"Mark would be happy with mashed potatoes, gravy and a slab of meat every meal," she said.

"My specialty is Italian cuisine — spaghetti, lasagne and noodles — all which can be cooked in the microwave," Ms. Kuch said. "The lasagne can be made ahead and served with garlic bread, very quickly," she said.

Ms. Kuch said the MLSA recently had their Third Annual Softball Tournament, which is a fund-raiser. She said members in the legal field, including various law firms and the Sheriff's Department, participated.

"We had the judges serve as umpires," she said, smiling. "It saved a lot of arguing. Nobody is going to argue with a judge."

Ms. Kuch included some of her favorite, easy-to-prepare recipes.

Pam Kuch

MICROWAVE CUSTARD BREAD

⅓ cup sugar
2½ cups milk
⅛ teaspoon salt
Nutmeg
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 eggs, beaten

In small bowl combine sugar and cornstarch. Microwave milk in 4-cup measuring cup or bowl on High for 2-4 minutes until hot, but not boiling. Blend in sugar mixture mixture, vanilla and salt into eggs at low speed. Stir into milk. Sprinkle with nutmeg.

Place dish in baking dish; add ½-inch hot water around dish. Microwave on Medium for 7-12 minutes, until slightly firm but still soft in middle. Rotate ¼ turn every two minutes. Let stand at least 30 minutes before serving. Makes 6 servings.

MICROWAVE SHRIMP CREOLE

4-6 servings of rice
½ cup chopped celery
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon olive oil
¼ cup flour
2 16-ounce cans stewed tomatoes
1 teaspoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon cayenne pepper
1 12-ounce package of frozen quick cooking shrimp, peeled and deveined

Combine celery, green pepper, onion, garlic and olive oil in 2-quart casserole. Cover and microwave on High 3-5 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Drain ½ cup liquid from tomatoes into one cup measure. Blend in flour until smooth. Add tomatoes with remaining juice, flour mixture, lemon juice and cayenne pepper to vegetables. Cover. Microwave 7-8 minutes or until thickened. Rinse shrimp in water to break apart. Stir into sauce. Cover, reduce power to Medium. Cook for 10-15 minutes, stirring 3-4 times. Serve over hot rice.

MICROWAVE SPONGE CANDY

1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 cup dark corn syrup
1 tablespoon baking soda

Combine syrup and vinegar in 2-quart mixing bowl. Cover and microwave at High for 3 minutes. Stir well. Microwave uncovered at High 4½-10 minutes, until thickened. Test by dropping in cold water to form threads. If threads bend when lifted from water, cook a little longer; threads must be very brittle. Stir baking soda in quickly and mix well.

Mixture will foam up as soda is stirred in. Pour in buttered foil-lined 9x9-inch baking dish, allowing mixture to spread itself. Let stand firm. Remove and break into pieces. Makes one pound.

Note: This is a hard candy and needs to be made when humidity is low.

Beans alternately shunned, celebrated

Philosopher mathematician Pythagoras, a vegetarian, believed beans contained animal blood, and would not eat them.

But medieval Europeans were so fond of them they celebrated Twelfth Night by crowning a King and Queen of the Bean.

Cindi's Seafood Tips

Let's talk a little about sauces for fish. Too many people don't know where to go once they get past the basic tartar and red sauces. Most sauces start from simple foundations, with numerous variations. You really don't have to be a chef with a French name to make good sauces. First, the colors of sauces can really enhance your presentation. And, it is important to know what types of sauces work best with different types of fish. When making sauces, experiment a bit with some of your favorite flavors!

Delicate or rich, not overpowering sauces are best with delicate fish like flounder, sole, red snapper, halibut, etc. More assertive sauces made with lemon juice, vinegar or strong tomato bases are better when used on a fish that tends to declare it's own natural flavor, like mackerel, bluefish, mullet, etc. Herb sauces greatly compliment poached or steamed fish. Piquant and mayonnaise-based sauces work especially well with cold seafood.

Cindi's Tarragon Butter Sauce

Melt ½ cup butter in small sauce pan on low heat. Add 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon lemon rind, ¼ teaspoon white pepper, and 2 tablespoons finely minced fresh tarragon, or 2 teaspoons dried, crushed tarragon. Mix thoroughly and serve warm.

Cindi's Bernaise Sauce

In a small saucepan, mix 2 tablespoons water, 2 teaspoons finely minced fresh tarragon (½ teaspoon dried), 2 tablespoons finely minced green onion, 1 tablespoon minced fresh parsley, and 6 tablespoons wine vinegar. Cook slowly until it is almost a glaze. Set aside. In a blender, place 4 egg yolks, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and ¼ teaspoon cayenne pepper. Blend and gradually add ¾ cup hot melted butter slowly and steadily until thickened. Add herb mixture and beat well. Serve warm.

'Microbreweries' hottest thing in suds since pop-top can

Associated Press

The beer produced by nearly 100 new American "microbreweries" has become the hottest thing in suds since the pop-top can.

These boutique breweries, according to an article in the current issue of Harper's Bazaar, are converting American beer drinkers from supermarket sixpacks to labels that rival and compete favorably with imported brews.

A microbrewery is usually defined as one that produces less than 10,000 barrels a year. Though they brew less than one percent of the product right now, their dedication to quality has spawned legions of loyal drinkers.

Their most important quality is they are fresh.

"I have nothing but criticism for imported beer," said Matthew Reich, producer of New Amsterdam Amber Beer in Utica, N.Y., one of the pioneers of the microbrewery movement.

"The stuff on grocery shelves tastes stale, flat, old. It takes too long to get those beers into the distribution chain."

Freshness is not the whole story. The microbrewers use the best ingredients. In most cases they respect the "Reinheitsgebot," a German law of 1516 that called for nothing more than barley, hops, yeast and pure water to go into beer.

The new brewers don't try to turn out a beer for the broadest possible palate.

"The big guys are making a bland, homogeneous product," said Gary Heurich, president of Olde Heurich Brewing Co. in Washington. "Microbrews are a way to express your individuality."

Clear air forces boost natural gas

Symposium makes strange bedfellows

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — A tough new anti-pollution bill, pending in Congress, would offer opportunities for the stagnant natural gas industry, according to speakers at a Tuesday symposium sponsored by an unusual coalition of gas producers and environmentalists.

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, the matchmaker who brought the Sierra Club and American Gas Association together to cosponsor the meeting, said the essence of coalition building is that "there is something in it for everybody."

Mauro added that if natural gas "can help break the gridlock on energy policy, our national security stands to gain. And if natural gas can help attain our goal of an unpolluted atmosphere, the economies of producing states stand to gain."

Drilling new gas wells or uncapping those shut in because of a lack of demand for gas would provide thousands of new jobs in energy states, like Texas, still suffering from the 1986 plunge in oil prices, Mauro noted.

A recent analysis commissioned by Congress found that each new gas well creates 192 jobs. Mauro confessed to a "vested interest in expanding markets for natural gas." As land commissioner, he oversees production of 16,000 oil and gas wells on public education trust lands.

Mauro said the goal of the symposium is "to convince the lawmakers and their staffs, who will be fashioning the next Clean Air Act, to understand the benefits of natural gas and include it in future legislation as a way for cities and states to comply with the law's regulations."

Amarillo oilman Boone Pickens, U.S. Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., and Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro conferred on gas issues before beginning the symposium.

Panel: Cheap, plentiful fuel has vital role

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro says the natural gas industry has been timid too long.

It's time, he says, for natural gas producers to enter the political fray and start promoting their industry as a friend of the environment and cleaner air, a source of cheaper fuel and energy independence.

"The squeaky wheel gets the oil, but natural gas hasn't been squeaky enough," Mauro said. "It's not told its story loud enough."

Mauro came to the nation's capital Tuesday to forge an unlikely alliance of environmentalists, oilmen and politicians to lobby for a larger role for natural gas.

Oilman T. Boone Pickens, general partner of Mesa Limited Partnership, told the gathering that the domestic oil industry would never return to its former glory.

"But there is a lot of potential for the natural gas industry," Pickens said. "The gas is there to tap into; there's just no demand for the gas."

"We want to clean up the air, we want to create jobs in Texas. We want to clean up the air with natural gas," Mauro said.

TRC's Hance dismisses criticism

AUSTIN (AP) — Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance on Tuesday dismissed a State Department official's criticism of Hance's suggestion that Texas cut oil production and work with OPEC to shore up oil prices.

The official, who requested anonymity, said last week, "You can imagine what the State Department thinks about it.

"It's a cartel that does not operate in the U.S. interests."

Hance said Tuesday he did not take the comment as coming from the State Department or Reagan administration.

"I feel if it was something of major concern, Secretary (George) Schultz or someone else at a high level would have called me," Hance said in a telephone interview.

He said he would go, as planned, to a meeting Sunday in Vienna of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"My statement represents the people of Texas and not the State Department," Hance said. "I've never known the State Department to take up for the citizens of Texas, much less oil and gas producers or our economy."

Hance said since OPEC began setting world oil prices in 1973, "we've been on a roller coaster of boom and bust."

"Now is the appropriate time, as an advocate of the state of Texas, to point out that our experience" in oil and gas matters can provide stability.

"At least (getting involved) is worth a try. I'm surprised it's never been tried before," Hance said. "But it is somewhat unorthodox."

Hance, a former Democratic congressman, described himself as a "free-market Republican." But he said 89 percent of the world's oil reserves are located in countries that have nationalized the industry, and because of this, "There is no such thing as free enterprise."

"I don't necessarily agree with OPEC, but if there's no input there's no chance at results" that might help Texas, he said.

First City bailout finally complete

From Wire Reports

DALLAS — The much-delayed bailout of the First City Bancorp. of Texas was announced as complete this morning after the investor group headed by A. Robert Abboud agreed to buy securities tendered by a majority of First City's stockholders and bondholders on Tuesday.

The Abboud group agreed to complete the recapitalization plan after receiving "just under 68 percent," or $153.4 million, of $225.8 million in outstanding debt, said L. William Seidman, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Seidman said in an interview Tuesday evening from his home in Washington that details of the bailout being worked out tonight were "essentially as planned." He emphasized it included no changes in the FDIC's contribution, which includes $970 million in notes. The Abboud group was to invest $500 million.

In another development, the FDIC announced late Tuesday afternoon that First City's flagship bank in Houston, the First City National Bank, would assume direct control of the McAllen State Bank, in McAllen, Tex., one of 60 banks owned by the First City holding company.

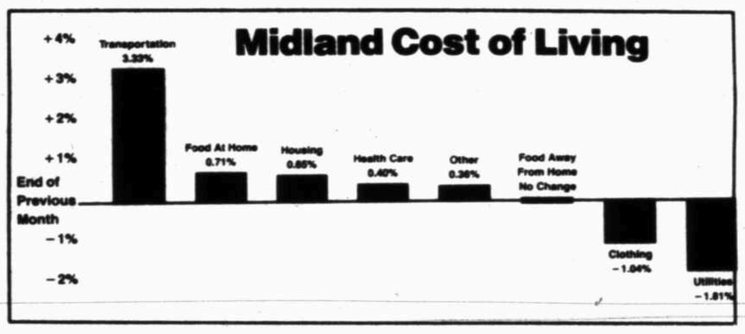
COST OF LIVING



Local living costs higher

From Staff Reports

The cost of living in Midland rose for the second consecutive month, according to figures released by ClayDesta National Bank. For March, the index was up 0.4 percent.

The rise was fueled by jumps the cost of food at home, transportation, housing and health care, which offset decreases in costs for utilities and clothing.

Utilities showed the sharpest decrease, dropping 1.8 percent in March after three months of increases. Electric bills rose 0.7 percent but were offset by a 6.8 percent drop in gas rates. Local water rates were stable for a fifth month.

Midland clothing costs reversed a February trend and fell 1 percent last month. A second month of higher price tags for children's wear was offset by lower prices for men's wear. Women's apparel also cost less, after two months of increases.

Higher gasoline prices fueled a 3.3 percent increase in transportation costs, ending a seven-month downward trend.

A second month of higher rental charges helped housing expenses show a 0.7 percent rise in March, the second consecutive rise.

Health care costs posted a 0.4 percent increase, the third month the category has risen. A third month of higher dental costs, combined with higher prices for non-prescription medicine, were responsible for the gain.

Costs for food away from home broke a two-month increase and remained stable during March.

After posting a decrease in February, food at home costs rose 0.7 percent, aided by increases for meat and produce. These increases offset decreases for alcoholic beverages and shelf items.

U.S. consumer costs rocket 0.5 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, propelled by a record rise in clothing costs, shot up 0.5 percent in March, the biggest increase since January 1987, the government said today.

Besides the 2.0 percent jump in apparel costs, retail prices were also driven upward by a 0.4 percent gain in gasoline costs, the first rise since August, and a 0.3 percent hike in food prices.

Taken together, clothing, food and transportation price increases accounted for half the March jump, which was more than double the 0.2 percent gain of February.

The overall gain — amounting to 6.4 percent on an annual basis — seemed sure to further economists' concerns that inflation may be rebounding. The Consumer Price Index had risen a moderate 4.4 percent last year and a tiny 1.1 percent in 1986.

Today's report blamed the sharp increase in clothing costs, the steepest one-month increase since records were first kept in 1947, on "substantially higher priced spring and summer merchandise, particularly women's clothing."

Indeed, prices for women's and girls' clothing rose 3.9 percent after falling in January and February. Prices for men's and boys' apparel were up 1.2 percent.

PERMIAN MATTRESS CO. which has manufactured mattresses for retail stores in West Texas and New Mexico since 1955, plans to open its first retail outlet in Midland.

"We want to provide the residents of Midland an opportunity to sleep on a mattress made in Midland by Midlanders," says Burt Herrin, owner.

Herrin says the location for the retail store — Midland Mattress Center — will be at Dellwood Mall adjacent to Kelly-Moore Paints. In addition to a selection of 15 mattresses manufactured by his firm, Herrin says the store will offer bed frames, head boards, brass beds and other sleep accessories. The store will also take special orders for custom mattresses for recreation vehicles and other uses.

"We want to cater to the whole market in Midland, and will offer an inventory from top-of-the-line to more economical lines," he said. The Mattress Center will be managed by Herrin's wife, Maryam.

Sunday begins American Home Week, designed to celebrate the freedom to own private property and emphasize the value of home ownership and importance of improving local property.

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas will help the Midland Board of Realtors mark the week by proclaiming April 24-30 American Home Week in Midland.

As part of the week's activities, local Realtors are holding a garage sale at the Board offices, 1001 W. Wall from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday.

Local Crime Stoppers coordinator Sgt. Keith Ward will man a booth at the garage sale, discussing crime prevention techniques. Proceeds from the garage sale will be donated to the local senior citizen complexes, according to Kathy McCain at the Board of Realtors.

In conjunction, the board and the American Red Cross will have a booth at Dellwood Mall, teaching cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) techniques and possibly the Heimlich anti-choking maneuver, answering questions and passing out brochures, according to Sue Jones, community services coordinator for the Red Cross. The booth will be from noon to 4 p.m.

Sunday, local Realtors will kick off the week with a series of open houses, to be featured in the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

The week concludes with Realtors participating in the Christmas in April project.

MARKETS

Oil prices fall below $18 level

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures continued lower, opening at $17.85, down 18 cents from Tuesday's close.

Profit-taking and technical factors sent oil futures tumbling Tuesday, continuing a price slide that began following Monday's short-lived rally sparked by Persian Gulf combat.

Contracts for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, closed down 49 cents at $18.03 per barrel in Tuesday's trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Among refined products, May contracts for wholesale unleaded gasoline ended at 52.14 cents per gallon, down 1.16 cents, while wholesale heating oil contracts closed at 49.68 cents per gallon, off 0.82 cent.

Analysts said traders grew increasingly bearish as prices failed to bounce back from Monday's lows.

Prices had surged early Monday amid reports that U.S. Navy vessels destroyed two offshore Iranian oil platforms, sunk an Iranian patrol boat and bombed two Iranian navy frigates, while Iran had fired on at least two U.S. vessels.

Nervous traders rushed to buy futures because of uncertainty over the fighting's ultimate impact on Persian Gulf shipments.

But by midday Monday the attacks ceased, and the tide turned. After the May crude contract — which had leaped 55 cents to $18.92 — failed to move higher, sellers took over and cut the gain to 15 cents by the close.

On Tuesday, that downward trend continued throughout the day.

Donald Morton, an analyst at the Boston office of Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., called Monday's early rally "a one-time deal, a Monday-morning panic-type situation."

"The market has more than likely seen its top," he said.

Dollar motionless in dull trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was nearly motionless in dull European trading late this morning. Gold prices rose.

Dealers said they didn't expect much movement during the rest of the session unless the report on the U.S. consumer price index (CPI), to be released at 1:30 p.m. (8:30 a.m. EDT), contains surprises.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.47 yen to a closing 123.90 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at 123.97 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Tuesday:

—1.6615 West German marks, down from 1.6625

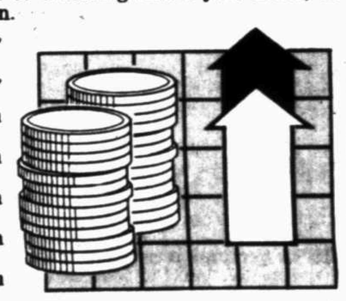
—1.3741 Swiss francs, down from 1.3752

—5.6440 French francs, down from 5.6465

—1.8636 Dutch guilders, down from 1.8642

—1,235.25 Italian lire, down from 1,235.75

—1.2297 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2337



In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.8950, stronger than $1.8930 Tuesday.

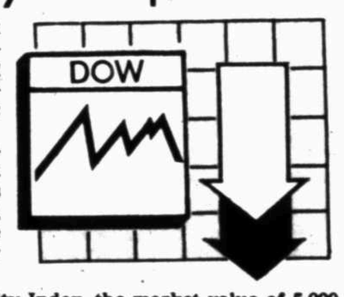
Gold opened in London at a bid price of $457.30 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $456.50. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $458.00.

In Zurich, the bid price was $457.80, up from $457.00 late Tuesday.

The Hong Kong closing gold price was not available.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $6.49 a troy ounce, up from Tuesday's $6.46.

Stocks fall as rally attempt fizzles



NEW YORK (AP) — A mild stock rally fizzled late Tuesday, overwhelmed by computerized selling strategies and anxiety that has afflicted investors since the historic crash exactly six months ago.

The Dow Jones average of 30 blue-chip stocks, up more than 32 points at midafternoon, slid in the final hours and finished down 8.62 to 1,999.50, back under the 2,000 level for the first time in two weeks. Most broader market indices also fell.

The Wilshire Associates 5,000 Equity Index, the market value of 5,000 NYSE, American and over-the-counter issues, was $2.58 trillion, off $7.81 billion from Monday.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the OTC market, totaled 192.30 million shares.

The NYSE composite index of all listed issues fell 0.60 to 146.17.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell 1.55 to 300.50, and S&P's 500-stock composite index fell 1.29 to 257.92.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 1 to 299.92. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 376.86, up 1.76.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Frost Brothers chain files Chapter 11

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Frost Bros., a 71-year-old chain of specialty stores, will close four Texas stores and a number of Delman and I. Miller women's shoe stores nationally as part of a Chapter 11 reorganization plan.

Larry Gore, named as president for Frost Bros. in one of two top management changes, blamed the company's problems on a sluggish Texas economy and the Oct. 19 stock market crash that ruled out an alternative method of raising needed cash.

The Chapter 11 filing was made Tuesday in U.S. bankruptcy court for the Southern District of New York.

Frost Bros., a San Antonio institution known for its high fashion, will continue to operate three stores in San Antonio, one in Austin and one in Houston, said Don Morris, named Tuesday as the company's new chairman and chief executive officer.

Western Company posts $9 million loss

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Western Company of North America reported a net loss of $9.6 million, or 21 cents per common share, for the first quarter of 1988.

However, the loss was an improvement over the $26.6 million loss, or 61 cents per share, that the company experienced for the first three months of 1987, company officials noted Tuesday.

The recent loss came on revenues of $51.6 million, compared with 1987 first-quarter revenue of $32.5 million.

MCorp earnings plunge $58 million

DALLAS (AP) — MCorp earnings plunged $58.2 million, or $1.47 per share in the first three months of 1988, partly due to bad real estate loans, a spokesman for the Dallas-based bank holding company said.

The company on Tuesday also announced completion of the sale of MTech, a data services company, to Dallas-based Electronic Data Systems, a wholly-owned subsidiary of General Motors Corp.

MCorp's first-quarter decline follows a $59.5 million loss for the last three months of 1987, and compares with a $10.2 million loss in the first quarter of last year.

State must address problems to maintain recovery, TU chief says

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Texas is recovering from the drastic economic decline of the past two years, Texas Utilities president and chief executive officer Erle Nye told his audience at Midland College Tuesday.

However, to enhance the state's economic recovery and better weather future downturns, Nye — who was participating in the college's Free Enterprise Lecture Series — said the state must address some problems. Among the problems he cited were growing state expenditures, which have strained tax sources, a young population that is straining the school system, and an inequitable tax system.

"If you want to grow, you must pay the piper," he stated, adding that a corporate income tax or a personal income tax could be necessary.

"It's a myth that industries are discouraged from relocating by a corporate income tax. They're against tax inequities." He stressed that he didn't advocate the taxes, but was keeping an open mind.

Despite these problems, Nye said the state has a number of positive features, including a good climate, productive workers with a strong work ethic, an efficient government, sound fiscal policy, generally favorable tax policies, good transportation, a positive attitude toward technological changes and research and development, and an adequate education system.

Noting that half the state's expenditures go to education, Nye commented that "Diversification rests on enhancing our education system. In addition, our business climate and quality of life will be enhanced when we put behind us the problems with our prison system and mental health departments. And now is not the time to slight our highway system and our water supplies."

He acknowledged that, during the recent downturn, many Texans called out for diversification. He pointed out that "We've lost 300,000 jobs in mining and manufacturing since 1986. With that loss, Texas' economy now almost perfectly matches the national economy in terms of job distribution. With our economy on a downward slide, we are more diversified."

Nye contended that, despite crises in the oil and real estate industries which trouble the state's banking system, the state's economy was basically strong, especially in the electronics field. He commended such efforts as the UTPB Center for Energy and Economic Diversification and attempts to get a foreign trade zone established at Midland International Airport.

He suggested Texans get used to the up and down cycles of the energy industry, which has fueled the economy for years, and seek out and develop the state's other strengths. "We need to dispel our doubts, tend to business and get back our confidence. We are an energetic, self reliant and committed people. If we don't panic and stay with our traditional values, our economy will be back.'

Fed sees few inflationary signs

WASHINGTON (NYT) — E. Robert Heller, a governor of the Federal Reserve, said Tuesday that he saw few signs of the kinds of pressures — rising inflation or a sinking dollar — that would persuade the Fed to raise interest rates.

Without explicit reference to interest rates, Heller said in an interview that last Friday's report of a quite large rise — 0.6 percent — for producer prices in March was "probably an aberration."

He said: "You really don't see strong forces building up. On the wage front, you don't see it at all. On the price front, you see only a subdued influence."

Heller, as well as Alan Greenspan, the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, and other Fed governors have warned frequently in their speeches and appearances before Congress of a need to keep inflation from rebounding. But Heller said he saw no more inflation for this year than the mild 3½ percent rate that the Federal Reserve forecast as the year began.

Declines in the dollar, like the one that accompanied last Thursday's 101-point plunge of the Dow Jones industrial average, and financial market suspicions that inflation is rising have fanned conjecture that the Federal Reserve was preparing to nudge interest rates up a bit.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Stock receives preferred dividend treatment

By BILL DOYLE

Q. In May 1968, I purchased 340 shares of preferred stock in a shoe company at a cost of $67 per share. This stock has a sinking fund clause and is redeemable at $100 a share. It was taken off the New York Stock Exchange because of inactivity, but the company's common stock is still listed there.

A securities firm recently offered to buy my stock at $76 per share. I ignored that offer. Can they stop paying me quarterly dividends?

Doyle

A. Until your stock is redeemed through the sinking fund you have no worries about your dividends being discontinued, unless the company stops paying dividends on its common stock. That's a basic feature of preferred stock. When a company has both preferred and common stocks "outstanding" — owned by investors — all dividends must be paid on the preferred before any dividends can be paid on the common.

When a preferred stock issue has a sinking fund provision the company is required to buy back and retire some of the shares each year. Those provisions vary widely from one preferred issue to another, but here is a reasonably typical arrangement. Ten years after issuing preferred stock, XYZ Corp. will start retiring 5 percent of the preferred shares annually through the sinking fund. As a result, all those shares will be called in and paid off 30 years after being issued.

The company in which you own preferred stock will buy back your 340 shares at the $100 per share sinking fund redemption price sooner of later.

I suspect that might happen relatively soon — and that's the reason the securities firm offered to buy your stock. By purchasing those preferred shares from you and/or other investors at $76 and getting $100 through a sinking fund redemption, the firm would turn a tidy profit. You really can't fault that firm for trying.

Even though that preferred stock no longer is listed on the NYSE, it undoubtedly trades in the over-the-counter market. Ask a broker to get a quote on it. My bet is it will be more than $76.

Q. In a recent column you wrote that, when preferred stock is called in for redemption, "The call price always is equal to or higher than the price at which the stock was issued."

I bought 100 shares of preferred stock on Oct. 21, 1982, at $33 per share. That stock was called for redemption on Feb. 2, 1987, at $30.40 per share. In accordance with your statement, shouldn't I have received at least $33 per share?

A. You would have, if you had purchased the 100 shares at the time that preferred stocks was originally issued. Obviously, that's not what happened.

It's clear that the stock was originally issued at a price of $30.40 per share or less. You bought your 100 shares at some later date, after its market price had risen to $33.

Q. You have explained that companies often buy preferred stocks of other companies for two reasons: 1. Most preferreds pay "fixed" dividends that never change. 2. U.S. corporations do not pay federal income tax on 80 percent of the dividends they receive from other domestic corporations.

Haven't the rules for that 80 percent deduction been tightened?

A. Yes, by one of the provisions of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 — that monstrous legislation Congress shipped to the president's desk just before the Christmas recess.

Under the new rules, the dividend received deduction is reduced to 70 percent if the company receiving the dividend owns less than 20 percent of voting power and value of the paying company's stock.

Spot inspection of Texas Air jets will take weeks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal inspectors have examined almost all of Eastern Airlines' 267 jets and found most in compliance with safety rules, but say they will continue ramp inspections and look at many of the aircraft again.

The FAA said the 508 inspections at airports around the country have covered all but 11 of Eastern's planes and found 43 cases in which jets had to be taken out of service to correct problems. In 33 of the cases flights were delayed as a result, the agency said.

FAA spokesman Bob Buckhorn said Tuesday he could not predict precisely when the plane-by-plane inspections would conclude. He said they would continue even after each of Eastern's jets is examined at least once, possibly another several weeks.

The FAA last week said it wanted to conclude the review of Eastern and analyze its findings within 30 days

Meanwhile, in a similar inspection at Continental Airlines, which like Eastern is owned by Texas Air Corp., FAA inspectors found one plane out of 15 examined in the first 24 hours that needed to be taken out of service.

One of the Continental jet's engines was found to be damaged from a "foreign object," Buckhorn said, adding that it is conceivable that the airline might have taken the plane from service even if no FAA inspector were present.

The deficiencies found with the 43 Eastern plans that briefly were sidelined included instances of leaking fuel and aircraft corrosion, and one case in which 19 rivets were found to have broken through an airplane's skin, Buckhorn said.

Philip Bakes, president of Eastern, characterized these problems as not unusual. "In most every case the plane would have been taken out of service" even if there had been no FAA inspector present, he said Tuesday at a news conference.

"Every day planes are being taken out of service" as a normal part of an airline's operation, he suggested.

BANK

He said rising losses "threatened to increase the cost" of the bailout to the Abboud group, and had been monitoried closely for several months. He described the transfer of assets to First City's Houston bank as a housecleaning maneuver that was needed to complete the restructuring plan.

Whitney referred further questions to a First City spokesman, James E. Day. Day said he was unable to explain why the transfer was necessary or how it would limit losses for the Abboud group.

Under the rescue plan, the Abboud group initially hoped to exchange 35 cents to 45 cents on the dollar for 90 percent of the debt, but reduced the figure to 70 percent on March 29. Seidman said the bailout plan was devised last summer so that Abboud could proceed if only 70 percent of the bonds were exchanged.

The $1.5 billion bailout plan, announced last Sept. 9, is currently the second largest in banking history, after the $4.5 billion rescue of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. four years ago by the FDIC. But it is believed that the rescue of the another troubled Texas banking company, the First Republicbank Corp., will eventually exceed the $1.5 billion.

Execution of the bailout plan was postponed five times since early March, with the final change coming last Friday. Seidman acknowledged that some investors in the original Abboud group were "nervous about staying in," but he could not say if any defected.

Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., the investment concern, agreed to raise $100 million for the Abboud group over the weekend after discussions with Abboud, Seidman and others last week in Los Angeles. Seidman said he was in Los Angeles at the time to address the annual gathering sponsored by Drexel for hundreds of investors who frequently buy high-yield, low-grade securities issued by Drexel clients.

"Obviously, Drexel Burnham's coming in to support the transaction was very important," Seidman said.

The huge first-quarter loss of $1.5 billion announced last week by First Republicbank, the second-biggest quarterly loss in banking history, contributed to investor jitters, he said, as well as a 101-point drop in the Dow Jones industrial average last Thursday.

Abboud's offer to bondholders involved two issues amounting to a total of $225.8 million. Analysts said professional traders on Wall Street assembled more than 30 percent of the bonds in bids to force a higher offer.

Although that effort failed, the bonds that were not tendered are likely to be sold for a profit because their prices should rise now that the bailout seems certain to be executed. That would amount to at least a partial victory for the arbitragers.

They apparently stood their ground in the face of veiled threats by Abboud and Seidman that the FDIC would force First City's parent company into bankruptcy, a step that would have forced a sharp devaluing of the bonds. First City's stockholders were nearly wiped out by the bailout terms, with their shares diluted by a factor of 100 to 1.

Seidman said the FDIC would change terms of future bailouts to avoid the potential of similar pressure from debtholders of institutions that are FDIC-bailout candidates. "I wouldn't say they made a lot of friends, but that's the marketplace at work," he said of the Wall Street brokerages who bought and held the First City bonds.

First City, with $11 billion in assets, is the fourth-largest bank-holding company in Texas. The banking organization, with headquarters in Houston, lost an estimated $1.1 billion last year, including $852 million in the fourth quarter.

First City reopens McAllen bank

HOUSTON (AP) — The McAllen State Bank, closed by state officials because of deteroriating financial conditions, reopened as a subsidiary of a Houston bank holding company that is in the midst of a federally assisted bailout plan.

State Banking Commissioner Kenneth W. Littlefield closed the McAllen bank Tuesday and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. was named receiver.

The FDIC's board of directors approved the assumption of assets and all deposit liabilities of the failed bank by First City National Bank of Houston, FDIC spokesman Alan Whitney said.

First City National Bank of Houston and the McAllen bank are owned by Houston-based First City Bancorporation of Texas Inc., the state's fourth-largest bank holding company.

McAllen State Bank reopened Tuesday afternoon as a branch of First City National and depositors of the McAllen bank automatically became depositors of the Houston bank, said Ernie Williams, chief executive officer of the new bank.

The failure marks the 20th Texas bank closing this year and the 54th nationwide, Whitney said.

First City Bancorporation announced Tuesday that enough debt holders had tendered their securities, paving the way for a $1.6 billion federal bailout plan.

The FDIC assistance plan, announced last September, provides for $970 million in FDIC aid and the infusion of $500 million in new capital in the bank holding company by a private group headed by Chicago investor A. Robert Abboud and a spinoff of $1.79 billion in book value of poorly performing assets.

Littlefield said the McAllen bank closing "was done to facilitate the reorganization and recapitalization of the Houston-based banking company."

"The McAllen State Bank was in an insolvent financial condition despite efforts of current management to turn the bank around. The bank's financial condition could not be stabilized because of the difficult economic environment in Texas."

At the time it was closed, McAllen State Bank had about $550 million in deposits, assets with a book value of about $590.7 million and $9 million negative equity, Whitney said.

The financial condition of the McAllen institution had deterioratad significantly in recent months, Whitney said. Losses and increased contingent liabilities had become sufficient to threaten the liability of the pending assistance plan for the subsidiary banks of the holding company, he said.

First City Bancorporation said in a statement released Tuesday that bank regulatory authorities informed the company that "no similar action is contemplated with respect to any other bank in the First City system."

Clothing prices normally rise in the spring. Last month's jump — 3.7 percent once the department's seasonal adjustment process is factored out — was even greater than analysts had expected, however.

The department gave these other specifics on March retail price activity:

—Gasoline prices rose 0.4 percent after falling 1.7 percent in February and 1.6 percent in January. From September through February, gasoline prices had fallen 5.9 percent.

—Grocery store prices rose 0.4 percent after falling 0.6 percent in February.

—New automobile prices rose 0.3 percent, but that increase was largely offset by a 1.4 percent drop in the cost of obtaining car loans.

—Home heating oil prices rose 0.8 percent while the cost of natural gas and electricity was down 0.3 percent.

—Public transportation costs climbed 0.5 percent, reflecting widespread airline fare increases.

—Medical care costs rose 0.4 percent. Such expenses gained 7.7 percent in the first three months of 1987 and were the fastest rising major segment of the consumer price calculation.

Overall, retail prices have risen at a 4.2 percent annual rate so far this year.

The March increase left the index at 116.5, meaning that a hypothetical market-basket of goods costing $100 during a 1982-84 base period would have cost $116.50 last month. Unlike most other figures in the report, the index is not adjusted for seasonal fluctuations.

The March pickup in consumer prices had been expected since the Labor Department reported that the companion Producer Price Index, which measures costs for goods one step before the retail level, had shot up 0.6 percent in March.

Inflation fears have already spooked financial markets, with interest rates climbing in recent days amid fears that the Federal Reserve is about to step in and tighten credit conditions.

"The good news on inflation this year is over with the upturn in energy and food costs," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co.

chairman of the House Subcommittee on Health and the Environment, and another bill recently reported by the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, would require operators of "fleets" of vehicles such as buses to use cleaner fuels like compressed natural gas or methanol in the most polluted urban areas.

In addition, the Waxman bill would require 30 percent of all vehicles in heavily polluted areas to be capable of using alternative fuels by the late 1990s.

"Both provisions would significantly expand existing markets for natural gas," said J. Michael McCloskey, chairman of the Sierra Club, one of the speakers at the symposium.

Pressure on Congress to act this year is great, because 100 cities face penalties, including loss of billions of dollars in federal funds, because they have not met standards set out in the existing Clean Air Act, the nation's main air-pollution-control law.

But the House Energy and Commerce Committee has been stalemated on the issue for six years because of competing pressures from Waxman, who represents one of the smoggiest districts in the nation, and chairman of the full committee John D. Dingell, D-Mich., who represents Detroit, the capital of the auto industry.

In the Senate, meanwhile, floor action on the tough bill reported out of the Environment Committee has been stalled by Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., who is reported to be concerned about the cost to his state's coal industry if alternatives to coal-fired utility plants are prescribed by the new law.

More than 100 cities face clean-air penalties on Aug. 31 because they cannot comply with the current law's standards. Among the cities are Los Angeles, San Francisco, New York, Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and Beaumont. Last year, Congress extended the deadline for compliance from December, 1987 to this August.

Frustrated by congressional inaction, nine moderate House Democrats have seized the middle ground with their own proposal, which has received tentative approval from Dingell and Waxman.

Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., a leader of the group which he called "the gang of nine," and chairman of the Government Operations Subcommittee on Environment, Energy and Natural Resources, told symposium participants: "No more extensions on clean air will be possible."

He advised the gas industry to "be constructive, not destructive" in winning passage of a renewal of the Clean Air Act that will contain realistic goals.

And he cautioned the environmentalists not to be a party to failure by insisting on unrealistic demands.

Pickens said the natural gas industry is geared for increased demand and has an oversupply. It costs about half the price of oil.

A Southern Methodist University study found that every additional use of 1 trillion cubic feet of gas creates 64,000 jobs, Pickens said. U.S. Commerce Department figures show a multiplier effect on those jobs should create 260,000 more jobs.

An official of the Environmental Protection Agency said the cheap cost of natural gas, the push to clean up the environment and a national desire for energy independence could foster a significant increase in natural gas use.

But he doesn't expect it before the end of the decade and probably not for at least five years.

Daniel Weiss, a representative of the Sierra Club, said his group would support the use of natural gas in legislation that cleans up the environment.

AIR

Frank Lorenzo, chairman of Texas Air Corp., the parent company of both Eastern and Continental, told reporters that he welcomed the federal inspections because they "will demonstrate once and for all that Continental and Eastern are safe — as safe as any major airline."

But in Miami, Charles Bryan, leader of the Eastern machinists union, criticized the FAA ramp inspection as a "whitewash" and charged that some of the FAA inspectors were only looking at log books without inspecting the aircraft. He also said FAA inspectors should "go into the shops" to observe maintenance of equipment.

"It may be the old fox watching the chicken house," said Bryan.

Lorenzo and Bakes reiterated the airlines' past charges that much of the turmoil about safety at both Eastern and Continental stems from the airlines' ongoing battles with organized labor, especially Bryan's machinists union.

"What is at issue is how far a union is permitted to go by weakening a company through harassment ... (and) misinformation," said Lorenzo.

Bakes blamed much of Eastern's problems on "a slanderous safety campaign" by the unions which he said are determined to block attempts by the airline to reduce labor costs.

He said the company would continue to push for a reduction of costs, including demands for wage concessions from the machinists union. The airline and the union have been involved in negotiations since the mechanics contract expired last December.

Lorenzo and Bakes promised to continue pushing for concessions from the unions, saying that was the only way to make Eastern profitable. Lorenzo said he had no interest in selling Eastern and accused the unions of waging a campaign of "misinformation" to depress Eastern stock.

Palestinians barred from Israel during commemorations

JERUSALEM (AP) — Soldiers blocked Palestinians in the occupied lands from entering Israel today as hundreds of thousands of Israelis gathered in cemeteries to remember the 16,450 troops who died fighting for the nation.

An army spokesman said Israel would be shut to Arab residents of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip through the weekend in an effort to prevent terror attacks during Memorial and Independence Day commemorations, which started Tuesday evening.

Israeli troops also maintained a curfew for a fourth day on 17 refugee camps and towns in the West Bank and six camps and towns in Gaza to prevent further riots over the assassination of PLO military commander Khalil al-Wazir.

Since al-Wazir was killed early Saturday, 20 Palestinians have died in clashes with Israeli troops. The killing has been blamed on Israeli secret service agents.

In a Memorial Day speech, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today told American Jewish fund-raisers in Jerusalem that what they were seeing in the 4½-month Arab uprising was "not demonstrations or sit-ins. It is war."

He also insisted that a public controversy over soldiers' duties in the West Bank and Gaza would not affect their resolve.

"I can tell that they know that what they are doing now is just as important for the country's future as anything they have done in the past and we're just as proud of them now as we were then," Shamir said.

Shortly after the speech, sirens sounded throughout the country for two minutes marking the start of ceremonies at military cemeteries to honor the 40-year-old nation's war dead.

Memorials also were held at thousands of elementary and high schools around Israel, where teachers held special classes and pupils laid wreaths and recited poems in honor of those who fell in battle and training accidents.

At Denmark High School, one of Jerusalem's largest Jewish secondary schools, bereaved parents and teachers urged pupils to learn from the patriotism of peers who gave their lives for their country.

"Everyone has to defend our homeland," Russian-born Moses Cyrus Weiler, 81, who lost two sons in Israeli wars, told 11th graders in one classroom. "If you continue in this path, there will be value to your life."

The Memorial Day observance ends tonight with a torch-lighting ceremony at Mount Herzl that starts the Independence Day celebration.

Security was intense, with military barricades blocking roads in the occupied lands. Officials said only Arabs with special permits would be allowed into Israel until the Independence Day celebrations end Thursday night.

Places of entertainment, including movie theaters and restaurants, were ordered closed for the day.

Authorities feared a renewal of Palestinian riots in the uprising that began Dec. 8 and has claimed 168 Arab lives. One Israeli soldier and an Israeli teen-age girl have been killed in the clashes.

Palestinians were calling for demonstrations involving al-Wazir's burial in Damascus, Syria, and deportations Tuesday of eight more Palestinians from the occupied lands to Lebanon, including six accused of the April 6 stoning attack on Jewish hikers in the West Bank village of Beita in which the 15-year-old Israeli girl, Tirza Porat, was killed.

The United States condemned the expulsions, saying they would exacerbate tensions in the territories Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

Police Commissioner David Krauss said extra police were posted throughout the country and about 1,000 officers would patrol Jerusalem until the Moslem sabbath ends Friday.

"There is information that terror organizations will try to carry out attacks," he told Israel radio.

The eight deported Palestinians arrived in Rashaya, Lebanon, aboard an Israeli army helicopter on Tuesday. They requested they be handed over to the International Red Cross, Lebanese police said.

The deportations brought to 16 the number of Palestinians expelled from Israel this month.

Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis gestures at a press session in New York. His landslide in the Empire State could raise the prospect of a unified party convention.

Dukakis win could lead to party unity

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Dukakis' landslide in New York makes him the undisputed front-runner in the Democratic presidential race and raises the prospect of a unified, peaceful, broker-free nominating convention that seemed wildly improbable a few weeks ago.

Jesse Jackson will press on with his remarkable campaign, but his slim chance of derailing Dukakis now grows slimmer with each passing week, particularly if Sen. Albert Gore Jr. halts his campaign as expected on Thursday.

"The Democratic Party's going to be unified and we're going to stop George Bush this November," said Gore on what must have been the most disappointing night of his campaign. Jackson has said he wants to "enable our party to win" and is determined to "play a role in making that happen."

Pennsylvania votes next week, and Ohio and Indiana after that, and none of them offers the large core of black votes that gives Jackson a secure base from which to spring an upset.

Gore's campaign suspension after a distant third-place finish in New York would mean Dukakis no longer had to divide the white vote with another white candidate.

The District of Columbia will be Jackson's on May 3. But it could well be his last victory, barring a late-season protest vote against a cautious front-runner — always a California possibility for the Democrats.

But the other primaries ahead offer Dukakis a chance to pad the lead he has begun amassing in nominating delegates.

Dukakis knows as much, too, even though he points out the nominating campaign will be contested until the last primary on June 7. Even as New York was according him his front-runner status he was making a sharp attack on Bush in the manner of a candidate who expects to be the nominee.

An Analysis

"This fall George Bush is going to be judged by a legacy of...pink slips for our workers, golden parachutes for high rollers, and greenmail for sharp operators on Wall Street," he said in Philadelphia.

"I want to make that American dream come alive again, not only in Trump Towers, not only in fancy apartments all over this country, not only in a few privileged neighborhoods."

Dukakis has managed to achieve his supremacy in the race without relying on the traditional Democratic party power brokers. The AFL-CIO hasn't endorsed him or any other Democrat, and Dukakis managed to pull off his double-digit New York victory without the endorsement of Gov. Mario Cuomo.

Gore almost certainly will exit the campaign preaching party unity, as he did when he congratulated Dukakis in a New York concession speech.

And he won't be the only one talking that way.

Neither Dukakis nor Jackson has shown much penchant for criticizing the other, and any campaign debate is likely to be long on Bush-bashing and short on Democratic bickering.

"We respect each other. We don't attack each other," Dukakis said. "You won't see either one of us attempting to hurt or cut up or otherwise cripple the opponent's campaign."

Still, Jackson has the most potential for creating mischief at the Democratic National Convention this year, and the question most likely to be asked from now to the opening of the convention on July 18 is "What does Jesse want?"

So far, his principal answer to that question has been to stress his determination to elect a Democrat the next president.

When a questioner at a New York breakfast asked Jackson what he would do if he didn't get the nomination, he replied that it was important to "put the nation first and party second and your role third."

And so far, not one word about wanting to be vice president, a prospect that sends terror through the Democratic party establishment.

That's the sort of behavior could make the Democratic convention very peaceful indeed.

Democrats are eager to put their nominating war behind them as soon as reasonably possible without offending Jackson and the millions of black voters who have joined his crusade.

Peter D. Kelly, chairman of the California Democratic Party, said many of the elected and party officials, designated as "super delegates" to the nominating convention, may be reluctant to jump too quickly onto the Dukakis bandwagon.

"They're going to want to be real careful about angering Jesse Jackson and his supporters," said Kelly. "I, for one, am very sensitive about offending that constituency."

Dukakis is unlikely to put any pressure on Jackson.

Instead, he will turn his attention to the upcoming primary states and to the task of enlisting the uncommitted elected officials, party leaders and uncommitted delegates to his cause. That will enable him to arrive at the nominating convention in Atlanta with the delegates needed to be nominated.

Bush predicts he'll face Dukakis in fall general election and win

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush predicts the winner of the New York Democratic primary, Michael Dukakis, will go on to win his party's nomination and face him in the fall general election.

At the same time, Bush rejected as "invalid liberal trash" suggestions that his acceptance of support from former Philadelphia Mayor Frank Rizzo might send the wrong signal to blacks and other minorities in November.

"Are you suggesting you only appear with civil rights leaders?" Bush asked reporters.

He made the comments aboard Air Force Two late Tuesday as he returned from a campaign stop in Philadelphia, where he shared the stage at a Republican rally with Rizzo. Pennsylvania's primary is Tuesday.

Bush said he had no hesitation in appearing with Rizzo, a former Democrat who is his Philadelphia campaign chairman. To not do so, Bush said, would be "a policy of exclusion. I don't do that."

The vice president, who has the Republican nomination essentially locked up, said it was a "good bet" that the New York primary victor would be the Democratic candidate.

"I do think that whoever wins this (New York primary) tonight, and this is my personal opinion, will get an awful lot of delegates and win the nomination."

Bush said he did not intend to criticize Dukakis right away. "I think I'll keep it generic until the convention," he said.

But he referred to Dukakis as "an old-world liberal Democrat."

Gore rethinking presidential race after weak showing in New York

Gore

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Albert Gore Jr. was reassessing his presidential campaign today after a weak third-place showing in the watershed New York Democratic primary. The word from back home was that he should "gracefully get out."

Gore, without a win to his name since Super Tuesday six weeks ago, scheduled an announcement for Thursday in Washington.

He told supporters in New York that he would be consulting with advisers "over the next few days...and we're going to decide among ourselves how best we can carry on the cause that we have been advancing."

Campaign manager Fred Martin said Gore had not decided whether to drop out.

As the New York votes were tallied and the scope of Gore's loss became clear, he congratulated Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, calling it "somebody else's super Tuesday."

"I want to congratulate Mike Dukakis for a really impressive victory. New York is a real marathon and he beat us by a mile," he said.

Gore talked about the prospects of Democrats in the fall, rather than his own uncertain future.

"I believe that together we are going to teach the Republicans a lesson they won't soon forget in November," the Tennessee senator told supporters gathered at a midtown hotel.

Meanwhile, Tennessee Gov. Ned McWherter, a key Gore adviser, said the senator was considering quitting the race.

"I told him he should gracefully get out and let this one conclude," McWherter said from Nashville, Tenn. He said Gore had called him from New York while awaiting primary results.

"The options are to continue campaigning and affect the dialogue with the party, to suspend the candidacy but remain a candidate or to withdraw," Martin said.

Gore congratulated the second-place finisher in New York, Jesse Jackson, praising his "tremendous showing."

Early today, Gore paid a "courtesy call" on Jackson to tell him of his plans for the next several days, said Gerald Austin, Jackson's national campaign manager.

Gore said his wife, Tipper, had gone on to Texas for a fund-raiser set for tonight "because we need the money." Gore said he planned to meet her there.

Gore's campaign is reported to be $1.6 million in debt, and he had needed to win 20 percent of the vote in New York to be eligible for federal matching funds.

Martin discounted reports Tuesday that Gore had begun recalling campaign workers from Pennsylvania, the next primary state. He blamed Gore's poor showing in New York on lack of money and name recognition and the perception by some that it was a two-person race.

Gore, at 40 the youngest candidate, joined the race June 29 at the urging of a group of wealthy Democrats convinced that only a Southerner could win in 1988.

He made some early forays into Iowa, but when the waters proved chilly, he declared Iowans had too much influence on the process and said he would risk skipping the crucial caucus state. When polls indicated a weak showing in New Hampshire, he left the North altogether and headed to his native South to make a stand on Super Tuesday.

Dukakis hopes momentum will lead to Pennsylvania win

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Democratic presidential contender Michael Dukakis, fresh from a solid win in New York's big primary, was looking to consolidate his strength with a repeat performance here next week. But rival Jesse Jackson warned not to count him out.

A prize of 178 delegates, the fourth-largest of any state race, is at stake in next Tuesday's primary here.

"Tomorrow, we take our message...to Pennsylvania and Ohio and Indiana," Dukakis said in a victory speech in New York. "And after that, we will take our message — the Democratic message — to every part of the country."

The Jackson camp offered congratulations, but said the New York primary didn't settle things.

"We continue to win. We have won," Jackson told supporters in New York. "Our campaign continues to grow."

"We think we're still in this race," said Jackson's campaign manager, Gerald Austin. Jackson was heading to Pennsylvania tonight.

Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr., who finished a distant third in New York, was considering abandoning his presidential bid.

On the Republican side, Vice President George Bush, who is virtually assured his party's nomination, campaigned Tuesday in the state.

A poll in today's editions of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette and Philadelphia Daily News indicated Dukakis led Jesse Jackson among likely Democratic voters primary by a 59-20 margin. The poll of 647 likely Democratic voters, conducted Tuesday through Sunday, had a margin of error of plus or minus five percentage points.

"The most likely scenario is that Dukakis uses Pennsylvania to solidify his front-runnership, his hold on the nomination," said Lt. Gov. Mark Singel, a Democrat who is neutral in the race.

Jackson supporters complained that Pennsylvania's delegate-selection system stacks the cards against their candidate. The state's popular vote is merely a beauty contest and the real winner in the primary must succeed in elections in the state's 23 congressional districts.

"We could win the state and lose 80 percent of the delegates," said Steve Cobble, Jackson's delegate coordinator, calling the process "one of the last vestiges of Republican-type politics in the Democratic Party."

"It ought to be done away with," Cobble said.

Jackson's strength is largely in three of the 23 districts, in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, where most of the state's blacks live. Blacks make up about 11 percent of state's voting-age population.

"Even in the best scenario, how he (Jackson) gets more than 30 delegates, I don't know," said G. Terry Madonna, director of the Center for Politics and Public Affairs at Millersville University. "If it's a two-man race, it could be 3-1 Dukakis."

Jackson has only 79 candidates for 116 delegate slots to be filled from Pennsylvania's 23 congressional districts. Another 62 pledged delegates will be appointed in June based on the delegate division Tuesday.

To fill in the delegate gaps, the Jackson campaign said Tuesday it has mounted a "Dropouts Turn To Jesse" program to recruit delegate candidates pledged to Democratic hopefuls who have left the field.

"It's going well," said spokeswoman Janice Fine. "We have a number thinking about it, no question."

She said the campaign already has commitments from 8 to 10 delegates and is working to fill other holes in Jackson's delegate field.

But he said the outcome in Pennsylvania would not dampen Jackson's continuing campaign.

State Democratic Chairman Larry Yatch said Jackson would carry Philadelphia. "The rest of the state, at least demographically, doesn't seem to bode well for Jackson," Yatch said.

Singel, the lieutenant governor, also predicted Dukakis would win, but said Jackson would do better than most Democratic officials believe.

"I'll make a prediction to you that Jesse Jackson will get between 35 and 40 percent of the popular vote in Pennsylvania," he said.

The Dukakis campaign has said it's ready for a fight in Pennsylvania.

"Mike is taking nothing for granted," said his Pennsylvania spokesman Pat McCarthy. He added, however, that a win in Pennsylvania could put Dukakis "over the psychological top."

Jackson's workers, however, remained upbeat.

"As far as I can see, everything is going fine. We've got great expectations in Pennsylvania," said Jamillah Muhammad, a national Jackson campaign staffer working in Pittsburgh.

Jackson, who won 16 percent of the vote and 18 delegates in a three-way primary race in 1984, hopes to court disaffected blue-collar workers in southwestern Pennsylvania, where unemployment still reaches double digits in some areas.

"We'll do better than in 1984, exceed expectations and give Dukakis a hell of a run for his money," said Ms. Fine. "We're very competitive in Pennsylvania."

Koch's attacks on Jackson may have hurt mayor's re-election

NEW YORK (AP) — At times, it almost seemed that New York's Democratic presidential primary had been reduced to a race between two men: Jesse Jackson and Mayor Edward I. Koch.

If so, Koch was clearly the loser.

"Mayor Koch made hysteria," said Jackson, after a strong second-place showing Tuesday night. "I made history."

Although Jackson lost the statewide race to Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, he won narrowly in New York City despite bitter attacks by Koch against Jackson. And the man the mayor endorsed, Sen. Al Gore Jr., fared miserably.

Koch, a man hardly given to humility, conceded Tuesday night that his attacks on Jackson were apparently a mistake, given Gore's defeat.

"I did my best and I failed, but the world ain't over," he said.

The world isn't over, but it may become a more difficult place for Koch, who reiterated his intention to run for re-election next year. Exit polls indicated that his hardball tactics may cost him in 1989.

Fifty-six percent of the voters surveyed in a CBS-New York Times exit poll said they disagreed with Koch's criticism of Jackson. And six of 10 voters polled by NBC said they don't want Koch to run for re-election.

The negative poll results also could have come from such factors as a corruption scandal that has hung over Koch's third term and racial tensions in the city.

"Ed Koch was certainly not a winner in this and he looks like a big loser," said Doug Muzzio, an ABC pollster.

Koch not only endorsed Gore, he campaigned alongside the senator from Tennessee tirelessly. And it was Koch who captured headlines with his strident attacks on Jackson.

But Gore captured only 10 percent of the popular vote statewide and nine percent in the city.

Koch criticized Jackson's positions on Israel, saying Jews would "have to be crazy" to vote for him. The mayor then called Jackson arrogant for failing to march in a Salute to Israel parade. The day of the parade, he said Jackson "can't stand stress, and then he lies under stress."

Jackson refused to comment on the attacks except to note New York's touchy state of race relations and compare Koch's comments to yelling fire in a crowded theater.

Asked Tuesday night whether he would make the same remarks if he could turn back the clock, Koch replied, "Obviously, I would not make them the way I did because, apparently, they were not helpful to Al Gore."

Later, appearing on ABC-TV's "Nightline," he added: "Apparently the word 'crazy' is not acceptable and I promise never to use it again."

Although Gore thanked Koch for his help, he also seemed to distance himself from the mayor's tactics. After congratulating Jackson for his showing, Gore said, "I didn't want to stop Jesse Jackson. I just wanted to start Al Gore."

Jackson's campaign chairman, California Assembly Speaker Willie Brown, credited Koch with improving Jackson's showing.

CARD OF THANKS

"CARD OF THANKS

Clem, Barbara, Bobby, Robby and Anita, the Ware family, wish to express our thanks for the prayers and thoughtfulness of the many friends of Marge Ware who were so kind to us in our darkest hour. We are especially grateful to the Reverend Gary Groves for his beautiful handling of our farewell to Marge, our beloved wife and mother, and to Mona Ruth Dickson for her beautiful rendition of Marge's favorite hymns. Thank you from the bottom of our broken hearts."

INVITATION FOR APPLICATIONS FOR SECTION 202 FUND RESERVATIONS FORT WORTH FIELD OFFICE

The Department of Housing and Urban Development will accept applications from nonprofit organizations for rental or cooperative housing under the Section 202 Direct Loan Program for Housing for the Elderly or Handicapped subject to the maximum number of units and loan authority identified below:

Fort Worth Field Office	Units	Loan Authority
Metropolitan Area	128	$5,335,000
Nonmetropolitan Area	102	4,254,000

Notwithstanding the maximum number of units identified above, this office has established a maximum unit limitation per individual application of 60 units for metropolitan areas and 40 units for nonmetropolitan areas. (See the Application Package for limitations applying to substantial rehabilitation and projects for the nonelderly handicapped.)

The Fiscal Year 1988 Appropriations Act specifies that 25 percent of Section 202 funds shall be used to provide housing for the handicapped. Also, Congress has expressed concern for the shelter needs of the homeless chronically mentally ill. Accordingly, sponsors serving handicapped individuals are especially encouraged to apply.

Appropriate instructions, forms and other program information are contained in an Application Package which may be obtained from the

This office will conduct workshops for interested applicants to explain the regulations and instructions governing the Section 202 Program, to distribute Application Packages and to discuss application procedures.

APPLICATIONS MUST BE RECEIVED IN THE FORT WORTH OFFICE BY 4:30 PM, JUNE 15, 1988. IF MAILED, THE POSTMARK DATE MUST BE NO LATER THAN THE FOREGOING DEADLINE, APRIL 20, 1988

*SR-1 Qualifies for GI/FHA financing or VA will repair to qualifying condition.
SR-2 No repairs by VA. Strictly "AS IS" condition.
SR-3 VA will make no repairs to swimming pool or related equipment.
SR-4 Foundation settlement - no warranty from VA on foundation.
SR-5 Flood insurance required.
SR-6 Water serviced by well. VA does not warrant water or well equipment.
SR-7 Sewer service - septic tank. VA does not warrant system.
SR-8 Liquefied petroleum gas service. VA does not warrant system.
SR-9 Property is condemned and does not meet city code. Property must be repaired to code or demolished.
SR-10 Maintenance assessment to be paid to homeowners association, not included in mortgage payments. (Information in listing)
SR-11 Water service is by community system. Purchaser must pay all fees, deposits, etc.
SR-12 _____ will be reinstalled at sales closing.
SR-13 _____ will be repaired/replaced at sales closing.
SR-14 On term sales only, for owner occupied properties, seller will contribute 5% down payment on behalf of buyer if offer is submitted at or above listed term price.
RO Reasonable offer will be accepted.
B A bonus will be paid to broker by VA at closing.

The offer which best serves the interest of VA will be processed for acceptance. The name of the successful offeror and sales broker will appear in subsequent publications. VA will accept cash offers up to 10 percent below the advertised term sales price. VA also will pay reasonable loan discount points and buyers' closing costs on cash offers. However, the combined loan discount points and buyers' closing costs may not exceed 10 percent of the advertised term sales price. Offers must be submitted at term listed price when buyers request a new GI loan with $1.00 move-in. Interest rate of available financing is 10 percent (APR 10.1 percent). VA has properties for sale statewide. If you desire to purchase properties in other areas, please contact any sales broker located in the area in which you are interested.

FORFEITURE OF EARNEST MONEY DEPOSIT

Prior to signing the offer, broker must deposit in broker's trust account at least $500 earnest money. Once a purchase offer has been accepted for processing by VA and is subsequently cancelled at the request of the purchaser, the Earnest Money Deposit WILL NOT be refunded and the broker will be required to forward the Earnest Money to the VA as liquidation expenses. There will be no exception to this policy. Therefore, the VA suggests that all brokers interview their buyers to assure they want the property, prior to submission of an offer to purchase.
VA pays 5% sales commission. Offers are subject to the provisions of VA Form 26-6705, Credit Statement of Prospective Purchaser and Contract of Sale, on which all offers must be submitted. VA Form 26-6705 must be submitted in duplicate to:

VA Property Management Section
