Fumes frustrate effort

An unidentified survivor, above, is hugged by a relative as rescue workers, right, carry the body of another man from a coal mine in Yubari on Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island. A gas leak and explosion Saturday killed 42 miners, with another 50 reported missing. Rescue efforts have been hampered by the presence of poisonous gases.

Fumes halt efforts to rescue miners

By JIM ABRAMS

TOKYO (AP) — Thick poisonous gas fumes and searing temperatures forced back rescuers in Japan's worst mining disaster Saturday, dimming hopes that 50 trapped coal miners were still alive.

Forty-three others were confirmed dead in the gas leak and fire at the Yubari coal mine 500 miles north of Tokyo. The body of a man previously listed missing was found Saturday, reducing those unaccounted for from 51 to 50.

Mine officials said rescue teams sent into the mine had to stop several hundred yards above the point where poisonous methane and carbon monoxide gas had gushed into the shaft Friday afternoon.

The teams said smoke from a fire sparked by the leak made visibility zero, and temperatures were 104 degrees.

The gas 1.2 miles below the mine surface is strong enough to put a man in a fatal coma within one or two hours, they added.

Trade and Industry Minister Rokusuke Tanaka, who heads the government investigation of the accident, arrived at the mine owned by the Hokkaido Colliery and Steamship Co.

"This accident will not be disposed of as a natural disaster," Tanaka said. "Something is very wrong with this mine."

Tanaka met with about 200 of the missing miners' relatives camped out in an office building at the mine, telling them, "Don't give up hope."

The families' frustration and tears had turned to anger when company president Chiaki Hayashi announced 14 hours after the accident that he had given up hope of finding survivors and was considering flooding the mine to prevent explosions or further fires.

"You're trying to kill them!" the families shouted.

If no survivors are found, the death toll at Yubari, a mining community of 40,000, will be the third worst since the end of World War II. In 1963, 458 people were killed in a gas explosion at the Mitsui Miiki mine in Fukuoka, southern Japan. Another accident in Fukuoka in 1963 claimed 237 lives.

The cause of the disaster has not been determined, although mine workers and the victims' relatives claim the heavily indebted company had sacrificed safety in its drive to increase production.

A labor official interviewed on television said new digging operations had been carried out in the area of the accident, about half a mile under the surface, despite heavy concentrations of gas detected.

"All they care about is making money," he said.

Media accounts said the mine's computerized gas detection buzzer was set to go off at a higher level than was safe and that it was common practice for miners to ignore the warning buzzer.

IRA bombing maims British marine officer

By ROBERT GLASS
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — The IRA struck in London for the second time in a week Saturday with a car-bombing that maimed the commandant of the British marines, Lt. Gen. Steuart Pringle, a former commando leader in Northern Ireland. The blast ripped the roof off his car and sent the hood flying over a house.

Pringle, 53, was rushed to King's College Hospital, where surgeons amputated his right leg below the knee. Doctors said they hoped to save his left leg, which also was torn. The general's dog also was in the car, but escaped unharmed.

In Northern Ireland, a stolen car booby-trapped with a bomb exploded in the parking lot of a golf course, slightly injuring one man, police said. No group immediately claimed responsibility for that explosion.

The outlawed Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility for the Pringle car bombing in a statement issued to news organizations by its publicity bureau in Dublin, Ireland.

Scotland Yard had warned of the possibility of a new IRA bombing campaign after the group's nail-bomb attack last Saturday on a busload of Irish Guards in London. Two people were killed and 37 others injured in that attack.

"Everyone should be careful, not just those who by virtue of their positions may be attacked," Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Saturday after learning of the Pringle car-bombing. "This will help break the threat and catch the perpetrators of these dreadful crimes."

Pringle's red Volkswagen Passat exploded as he drove off with his pet Labrador retriever from his home in West Dulwich, middle-class residential area of south London, a Scotland Yard spokesman said.

The impact of the explosion sent Pringle's car crashing into a parked car. The roof of the Volkswagen was torn off and its windows were blown out.

"The whole front of the car was in pieces," said Clifford Collins, who operates a nearby furniture store. He said a nurse who had been passing by in her car stopped to help Pringle.

Firemen freed him from the wreckage.

Mike Mullings, a 19-year-old airport customs agent, said he was waiting for a bus "when suddenly there was a big flash and I saw the hood of the car fly up over a house."

"I rushed to the car, and I could see the driver was still conscious but his legs were badly smashed and he was bleeding from the head," he said.

"I tried to calm him down but all he could say was, 'What about my dog?' " Mullings said. The dog was unharmed.

Police sealed off the area for fear of a second explosion, a tactic sometimes employed by the IRA in Northern Ireland in attacks on the province's security forces.

Commander Michael Richards, head of Scotland Yard's Anti-Terrorist Squad, said the explosion was caused by a bomb.

City seeks completion of sewage system study

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Damage to a sewer line incurred several years ago wasn't noticed until recent months when growth in east Midland had filled that line almost to capacity and the waste has been spilling out into streets and Scharbauer Draw.

City officials are aware of the problem and are planning to install another sewer line parallel to the old one. But before that work can be instituted, the city is awaiting results of a sewage system study being done by Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., an engineering firm, according to the man who deals daily with these problems.

That study will determine where troubles may be occurring in the city and where planned growth will put pressure on the system.

"The only real problem now," began Fred Baker, "is a 27-inch main trunk line from Lamesa Road along Fairgrounds Road to the sewage treatment plant" southeast of the city.

"THIS LINE WAS installed in 1954. It never had been at capacity. But with the growth now, it's reaching that point."

The director of public works said the line had been damaged by heavy trucks rolling over it when the bridge on Fairgrounds Road at Scharbauer Draw was built. But the damage "was never apparent until it was reaching a capacity load."

Additional damage was incurred when Scharbauer Draw was widened and deepened before 1968. The line runs parallel to the draw, Baker explained.

That sewage line is composed of vitrified clay with thick walls. "Hairline cracks can sit there for years and not be noticed until the water gets up there (to the top of the line) and seeps out. And it's apparent now that pieces of the pipe have fallen into the line," he said.

In addition to the leaks and the line reaching its capacity, Baker pointed out that bricks and pieces of concrete have been found in the line, causing blockages. Because of its age and the manner in which it was installed, cleaning out the line has caused additional difficulties for the city department, he noted.

"Part of the line was built with up to 1,100 feet between manholes," Baker said in pulling together the seeping puzzle. "Our cleaning equipment only goes 350 feet. We've had to install additional manholes and are now cleaning out the entire line and removing the debris dams."

THE CITY CREW has been working on a section of the line, which is in the middle of a cotton field. That area, said Baker, "is where we expect to find a lot of debris. A manhole cover was plowed up with a tractor and the line was open for debris to fall in. But we've been unable to get out in the field and that has delayed our work."

Although the cleaning job should ease some of the overflowing situations, Baker said the engineering firm is sizing the line that is needed for this area. Once their work is finished and turned over to city officials, the city then will install a new line.

When that line is in place, "we'll divert the flow and properly repair the old line to make it usable. It's impossible to repair the line when it's full of sewage. With both lines, it should be 20 years before they reach capacity," Baker stated.

Diameter of that new line should be about 36 to 42 inches while the current one is 27 inches, he added.

The city had been planning to install a new line there after a 1967 study recommended a 24-inch main would be needed by 1980. "But if we had put in a 24-inch line, we would be looking at putting in a third line soon. The 24-inch would be undersized" for the demands there, said Baker.

Unless costs go up higher than expected, the council should be able to pay for the job without a bond issue. According to Baker, $600,000 has been earmarked for this job.

But the city could find itself in a position of adding more than one line to the sewer system if Parkhill, Smith

Reagan says Congress has too much power over AWACS

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, voicing the frustrations each of his recent predecessors came to know in turn, says Congress is exercising too much power in its attempts to thwart his plans for selling the AWACS planes to Saudi Arabia and for cutting the budget at home.

The president also added, in a luncheon meeting Friday with a group of editors, that "there's evidence" that the courts have assumed powers that "properly belonged to the legislature."

Asked about the fight in Congress over his plan to sell Airborne Warning and Control System planes to the Saudis, the president said, "I think the Congress has gone too far." It was, he said, part of "the aftermath of Vietnam." Transcripts of the president's remarks were made available by the White House for release Sunday.

" ... The executive branch is more or less entrusted with foreign policy because you can't run foreign policy through legislation," Reagan said. "And while there may be some safeguards that should remain, I wouldn't be averse to that — we do have a multiple kind of government — I do think that the president has got to have some leeway with regard to negotiations. And some ability to say across a table, 'This is what we will do or what we won't do,' and those that he's dealing with know that he has the authority to say that."

Reagan's predecessor in the Oval Office, Jimmy Carter, used to say much the same thing when then-private citizen Ronald Reagan was urging the Senate to reject the Panama Canal treaties and the SALT II agreement, which had been negotiated by Carter. Reagan was not asked by the editors about the positions he had taken then, and a White House spokesman said he could not comment on them.

Western State Bank, Consolidated Bancshares announce agreement

Don Earney, chairman of the board of Consolidated Bancshares, Inc., and Eddie Dunn, president of Western State Bank, Midland, have announced an agreement in principal providing for the acquisition of Western State Bank by Consolidated Bancshares, Inc.

The agreement in principal provides that the shareholders of Western State Bank with a projected 295,750 shares outstanding at the merger date, will receive .78 shares of Consolidated common stock for each share of Western State. Consolidated will issue 231,227 of its common shares as a result of the transaction. Consumation of the proposd transaction is subject to the execution of a definitive agreement and requisite board, shareholder and regulatory approvals.

Western State had total assests at September 30, 1981, of approximately $34 million and deposits of aproximately $30 million. At Sept. 30, 1981, Consolidated Bancshares had total assests of aproximately $320 million.

Man killed when car falls off jack

A Midland man was killed late Saturday afternoon when the car he was working on apparently fell off a jack at a South Rankin Highway wrecking yard.

James Grady Randall, 28, of Route 3, died in the emergency room at Midland Memorial Hospital from injuries he suffered when the car he was working on at Green's Wrecking Yard, 2400 S. Rankin Highway, fell off a jack, crushing his chest, according to ambulance reports.

He was pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry. His body was taken to the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home, where services are pending.

Judge: 'Case has it all'

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Relaxing with reporters one day last week, the judge in the Vickie Daniel murder trial observed that "this case has it all."

In fact, said state District Judge Leonard Giblin, it sounds like a movie plot. For instance: money, murder, politics, sex, a small Texas town, an attractive blond defendant and a victim who once served as a Texas legislative leader.

And then on Friday, defense attorney Jack Zimmerman raised the specter of shoddy and maybe sinister investigative procedures.

He endeavored mightily to show that former Texas Gov. Price Daniel Sr. used his power and position to influence the investigation of his son's slaying.

And he got the chief investigator, Marvin Powell, to admit he would have conducted the probe differently without interference from unnamed outsiders.

Young Daniel, 39, who served a two-year stint as speaker of the Texas House of Representatives, was shot to death Jan. 19 in his spacious Liberty ranch-style home.

His second wife Vickie, 34, told medical aides that night she shot Daniel during an argument but said the shooting was an accident.

Later, during a sizzling six-week child custody trial, Mrs. Daniel said she could not recall firing the fatal shot but added, "I must have."

Mrs. Daniel's attorneys portrayed Price Jr. as a whiskey-drinking, drug-using womanizer with homosexual tendencies and a nasty temper.

They maintained he frequently abused both his wife and his children and that he beat Vickie a short time before the shooting.

Mrs. Daniel retained custody of the children, which include two young sons by Price Jr.

The elder Daniel was a three-term Texas governor, a U.S. senator, a state supreme court justice and Texas legislator.

Zimmerman sought to show that the Liberty County sheriff's office yielded to pressure from the Daniel family when it filed murder charges against Vickie.

The Houston defense lawyer insisted it is customary for the district attorney's office to file such charges often after a grand jury hearing.

Powell testified that Sheriff Buck Eckols filed the murder charge after two meetings with the elder Daniel and before the grand jury even considered an indictment.

Powell, who has resigned from the sheriff's office, contended he was not influenced by the Daniel family but said he met several times with Daniel and his daughter, Jean Murph. "Did you have the freedom to conduct the investigation the way you thought it should be done?" Zimmerman asked.

"No sir," replied Powell, the "case agent" in charge of the investigation.

"Were there people telling you what to do and what not to do?'

"Yes."

Judge says amputee can drive bus

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A federal judge says he will rule later on the constitutionality of a Texas Education Agency rule barring amputees as school bus drivers, but said he is satisfied that amputee Jose Angel Longoria can drive a bus safely.

Longoria, 37, of Harlingen, lost his right leg in 1969. He says he drove a school bus for the Harlingen school district from 1971 until 1974 but could not get his job back after he left to have an ill-fitting prosthesis corrected.

The school district told him he could not be rehired because of the new TEA rule, Longoria said. He says he accepted a lower-paying janitorial job with the school district, but decided to sue the school and the TEA over the rule.

U.S. District Judge Filemon B. Vela Thursday gave attorneys for both sides two weeks to file and then respond to legal briefs on the validity of the TEA rule. But Vela said he was satisfied Longoria could drive a bus safely.

Longoria's attorney, Jerry Garcia, said his client "is just asking that he have the opportunity, like anyone else, to show that he can do the job. The issue is whether there should be an absolute bar or whether people should be able to take a series of tests to prove whether they can handle the job."

Garcia said Texas Department of Public Safety troopers had examined Longoria and found he was capable of driving a bus safely.

Clements paroles convict

AUSTIN — Melvin Ray Heffington, convicted of burglary and theft in Howard County Dec. 16, 1980, has been paroled by Gov. Bill Clements on a recommendation of the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Heffington was paroled to Howard County after serving and earning one year and seven months of a four-year sentence.

Joe Delores Duran, convicted of sexual abuse in Midland County in 1979, had his parole revoked because of a new conviction.

Duran, who is serving a three-year sentence, had been on parole since Nov. 3, 1980.

ABC cleared of charge

DALLAS (AP) — The American Broadcasting Co did not violate a copyright when it produced the television movie, "The Trial of Lee Harvey Oswald," a jury has ruled.

A six-woman jury deliberated about an hour Friday before finding that the 1977 movie did not violate the copyright of Falcon International Corp. of Dallas, which made a movie with the same title in 1964.

Both movies speculated about the outcome of a murder trial had Oswald lived to face charges of killing President John F. Kennedy Nov. 22, 1963. Oswald was killed by nightclub owner Jack Ruby two days later.

To prove copyright infringement, Falcon International and its co-plaintiff , which bought rights to the film in 1976, had to prove the title was associated with their movie by a significant part of the consuming public.

Proposed amendment called 'effective tool' for managing state money

AUSTIN — Supporters of a proposed constitutional amendment to create a seven-member committee to handle some state budget matters during periods when the Legislature is not in session Friday called the proposal an "effective tool" for providing better management of state funds.

Don Cavness, a former state legislator and coordinator of the Sound Financial Management Committee for Texas, said the proposed constitutional amendment will provide the most effective way for the state to deal with federal block grants and emergency budget matters during the interim between legislative sessions.

Cavness appeared at a joint press conference with Paul Wrotenbury, director of budget and planning for the Governor's Office, to urge passage of the amendment, which will appear as Proposition 3 on the Nov. 3 election ballot.

The proposed amendment would create the seven-member committee composed of the governor, lieutenant governor, speaker of the house and the chairmen of four House and Senate committes dealing with budget and revenue matters.

Cavness said the proposal differs from a proposal defeated last year in that Proposition 3 does not grant additional budget powers to just one state official — the governor.

"This in no way can be construed as a concentration of power over the state's budget process because these committee members already are charged with that responsibility," said Cavness, who pointed out that six of the seven members already serve on the Legislative Budget Board.

The committee would have only those budget powers granted to it by the Legislature, Cavness said. the Legislature, by a rider in the 1981 Appropriations Bill, has already authorized the proposed committee to deal with allocation of federal block grants.

Wrotenbury said a new block grant concept being carried out by the Reagan administration will make it important for the state to have a mechanism to deal with such allocations without calling a special legislative session.

Wrotenbury said that federal grants previously handled with narrowly defined projects are now being blocked into larger grants, with states having more discretion over the use of those funds.

About $100 million in federal funds coming to the state in fiscal year 1982 will be in the form of block grants and, with full implementation, most federal funds will be in that form in the future, Wrotenbury said.

Delays in waiting for the Legislature to convene and allocate the funds could delay programs and cause gaps in funding, he said.

"In Texas, we have no agency, department or state official with authority to allocate block grants," Cavness said. "The legislature has chosen to delegate to this committee the power to handle funds during the interim and save the cost of special sessions when emergencies arise."

Cavness pointed out that the Legislature had to deal with eight emergency appropriation items during the special session this summer.

If Proposition 3 is defeated by the voters, the Legislature probably will have to return for another special session to deal with the block grant issue, he said.

Cavness countered statements by opponents of the measure that too much authority is being placed in too few officials.

"We're leaving control of state spending as close to the people as you can get," he said.

Democratic senator declares candidacy

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, became the first announced Democratic candidate for governor Saturday, telling party leaders he learned as a boy that the man who wins a fight is the one who hits the "first lick."

McKnight, 56, announced three weeks earlier than planned, apparently in an effort to discourage other conservative Democrats, such as former Gov. Dolph Briscoe, from entering the race.

"I'm just going to strike out on my own," said McKnight.

He had joined discussions of finding a consensus candidate to avoid the expense and divisiveness of a hotly contested Democratic primary. But that idea died when Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, who is expected to announce for governor next month, said Tuesday he would have no part in it.

"Growing up in the oil fields of East Texas, I learned that the man who won the fight was the one who got in the first lick," said McKnight, an independent oil producer.

He received a standing ovation from the State Democratic Executive Committee after making his announcement and saying he would support the party's nominee for governor, no matter who wins the primary.

Many Democrats attribute Gov. Bill Clements' victory in 1978 to Briscoe's failure to get behind former Attorney General John Hill, who beat him in the Democratic primary.

McKnight said that after four months of traveling the state and talking to thousands of Democrats, he had decided Clements could be defeated in 1982.

Democrats, he said, "don't want a rerun of the Briscoe-Hill bloodbath. But we do need a candidate that can raise the money to run a respectable race."

"I can run without splitting the party and can run a well-financed respectable race. You have my guarantee on that," McKnight told the SDEC.

He later said at a news conference it would take $5 million to $6 million to run a successful campaign for governor.

Clements, he said, is vulnerable on several points, including the fact that most of his appointees to state boards and commissions have been almost entirely Republicans.

"This is the first time we've had somebody who said you had to pass a litmus test and be a card-carrying Republican before you could be appointed," said McKnight, who is chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Nominations.

He also faulted Clements for unkept campaign promises, including the elimination of 25,000 state government jobs and the return of $1 billion in state taxes to the taxpayers.

Both unkept promises, he said, showed Clements' "lack of knowledge of state government."

McKnight said Clements governs by "fear and intimidation instead of cooperation" and is more interested in national affairs than state problems.

"I think he still thinks he is Dick Nixon's (deputy) secretary of defense at times. ... Our governor is more interested in spending time on the banks of the Potomac than on the banks of the Colorado," McKnight said.

McKnight classifies himself as a "conservative who has a feeling for the people, the individual, the underdog."

He has been a senator since 1973 and served one term in the House in the late 1940s after returning from service in the Army Air Corps during World War II. McKnight is a graduate of Texas A&M and a former member of the university's board of directors. He and his wife have two daughters.

Reagan, Mitterand confer at Yorktown

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and French President Francois Mitterrand will mark 200 years of U.S.-French accord today, but current differences will be as much on the agenda as the Revolutionary battle in Yorktown, Va., that once brought the two nations together.

The two presidents will confer for about one hour before adjourning for the nation's final round of Bicentennial festivities, which recall the victory of the revolutionary forces over the British — and the help provided by the French.

Senior Reagan administration officials said Reagan would send a "loud and clear" message that he is not pleased with France's resumption of arms sales, including military aircraft, tank transports and patrol boats, to Libya. There have been reports that France is prepared to delay the shipments, once frozen by Mitterrand but then freed.

"The president will make our concerns known about the actions of Col. Khadafy (Libyan leader Muammar Khadafy)," one official said.

At the same time, the U.S. president is likely to hear from Mitterrand about the French leader's anticipated effort to bring up "global negotiations" — opposed by Reagan — when they meet later in the week at the 22-nation summit of the world's richest and poorest nations in Cancun, Mexico.

Mitterrand favors massive financial assistance to the Third World and a series of new treaties to protect the prices of raw materials exported by underdeveloped nations.

It is Mitterrand's first visit to the United States since his Socialist Party swept out the Gaulist administration of Valery Giscard d'Estaing last spring, but Mitterrand and Reagan met last July at the Ottawa economic summit, and were said to have gotten along well.

Citing the symbolism of the meeting, a U.S. official pointed out that the leaders of "two relatively new governments" will be meeting "against the backdrop of more than two centuries of common endeavors."

"We are commemorating the ties that brought us together," he said, stressing the amicable side of the meeting rather than the potential disagreements.

Reagan's and Mitterrand's differences are greatest in the area of domestic economics: the U.S. president seeks to reduce government spending and the French president favors the opposite. Reagan is a champion of free enterprise and Mitterrand is committed to a policy of nationalizing certain industries.

The French and U.S. views are similar in the Middle East, where France seeks greater ties with Israel and supports the Camp David peace process, and in East-West relations, where Mitterrand and Reagan agree on the need to restrain the Soviet Union.

"We and the French are quite close," said one of the senior administration officials, who spoke to reporters under gound rules that prohibited identifying them by name.

But the United States let France know in no uncertain terms that it was displeased with the French and Mexican recognition of the rebels in El Salvador as a legitimate political force.

Describing this as an area of vital importance to the United States, one official said the French and Mexican effort gaye "legitimacy to elements that bring about subversion and violence."

Reagan and Mitterrand will first confer on the French Navy cruiser de Grasse, named after a French admiral, Francois de Grasse, who blockaded the York River and helped trap the British 200 years ago.

After lunch on the ship, they will meet again in Williamsburg before a dinner at the Governor's Palace in the colonial village, where palace staff members will greet the guests in colonial garb.

It was in Yorktown that French infantry, artillery and naval forces aided Gen. George Washington in defeating the British led by Lord Cornwallis in the decisive battle of the American revolution.

On Monday, Reagan and Mitterrand will watch a reenactment of the battle, before the French president heads for Mexico and Reagan returns to the White House for final briefings before he joins the other leaders in Cancun on Wednesday.

Midland plumbers agree storm sewers are a problem

By BILL MODISETT
Staff Writer

Midland plumbers agree on one aspect of the city's sewage system — there is a problem here, mainly when it rains.

Contacted in relation to work they are called on to do for sewer problems attributable to the city system, Joe Crowder, owner of Mr. Rooter, said, "We definitely do have a sewer problem."

Although the problem is fairly widespread, occurring generally throughout the city, Crowder noted that areas of the city through which an inverted crown street passes appear to be more susceptible. He speculated that is because the inverted crown streets — designed to carry accumulated water away in the manner of a storm sewer — carry large volumes of water mixed with gravel, tree limbs and other debris.

The mass then flows into the city sewer system, he said, and results in clogs.

"It just seems like every time it rains, we're going to have problems," Crowder added.

He said Wadley Avenue and Andrews Highway were two examples of inverted crown streets around which plumbing problems frequently follow rainstorms.

The plumber noted that residences and businesses constructed with a steep angle of slope are less likely to encounter sewer problems, like backups and clogs, than those structures at which the sewer lines lie basically flat.

Patty Chambers, office manager of Roto-Rooter, agreed that rainy periods appear to spark additional occurrences of sewer complaints. However, she noted, the large percentage of sewer problems still result from individuals putting something into the sewer system that does not belong there.

She said her company is averaging about 145 jobs per week now, but she did not believe that figure is unusual.

Both individuals contacted agreed that the prevalence of sewer-related calls here was attributable, in part, to the inability of the city sewer system to handle the volume of sewage here.

Jackson attributes longevity to respecting other leaders

LOS ANGELES — The Rev. Joseph H. Jackson has been president for 28 consecutive years of what is called the largest organization of black persons anywhere — the National Baptist Convention, U.S.A. Inc.

That is six more years than the late Roy Wilkins headed the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

And among noted U.S. black leaders this century, only A. Philip Randolph may have enjoyed longer sustained leadership — his 42-year presidency (1926-1968) of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

Jackson, believed to be in his 70s, has been re-elected president of the National Baptist Convention annually since 1953. The last time was during September's convention in Detroit that was attended by about 20,000 persons.

He leads, and may yet for years to come, a church body estimated at 6.3 million members in about 30,000 affiliated congregations — figures that place it among the largest Protestant denominations.

The Chicago pastor, brought to Los Angeles for a now-rare out-of-town talk early this week by the Baptist Ministers Conference of Los Angeles and Southern California, volunteered an explanation for his longevity.

"One reason is that I've learned how to respect other leaders," Jackson told the 800 persons at the meeting.

"Every pastor's a king and you don't mess with his crown," he said drawing laughter by alluding to the Baptist traditions of strong pastoral leadership in each congregation and each congregation's cherished independence.

Jackson's hold on the reins of the National Baptist Convention was challenged unsuccessfully in 1961 with disagreement flaring between Jackson and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. The Progressive National Baptist Conventin soon formed and included figures like King, the Rev. Thomas Kilgore of Los Angeles and the Rev. Jesse Jackson of Chicago.

Sewage system study awaited

& Cooper's report calls for it.

BAKER SAID THE engineers are investigating every smaller main line in the system to see if there are overloaded lines created by new subdivisions, or if new lines are needed to meet future growth.

And in light of new office developments the engineering firm also is reviewing the sewer demands on that sector.

The placement of buildings is one major factor in determining what is needed, Baker said, pointing out there is sufficient room in lines on the north side of Wall Street to handle the growth. But the south side lines could get jammed up if more high-rise office buildings than expected go up there.

Development in north Midland may depend upon sewer lines, too.

Land northeast of Green Tree Country Club has been purchased by a Canadian developer who is planning to turn the area into lakeside housing estates. But there are no sewer lines that far north and without sewer the development can't get off the ground.

Baker said the developer is offering to pay $500,000 to put in a large sewer to that area from Loop 250. "He would receive pro-rata refunds from the properties between them and the Loop. This is the amount they would have to spend on a waste disposal system to handle their development."

Even without the completed report, Baker said the city will have to put in some lines along Wadley Avenue. Cost of that project is expected to be $20,000 to $80,000, he said.

It wasn't just complaints about sewer service which prompted the city to undertake the major study. Baker attributed part of the reason to the jump in building permits.

"You realize the existing plan is outdated. The old report covered through 1990; we have already outlived that report."

Helmich eligible for parole in 10 years

By MATT BOKOR
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Confessed spy Joseph G. Helmich Jr. will be up for parole in 10 years, but the prosecutor who put him behind bars says that doesn't mean Helmich will ever go free.

"Eligibility for parole at 10 years only means that he is eligible for sentence review," U.S. Attorney Gary Betz said Friday after Helmich was given life in prison for selling military secrets to the Soviet Union while he was a warrant officer in the Army.

"We have something to say (about parole) in cases like this," Betz said, indicating his office would fight to keep Helmich in prison when the case is reviewed.

Helmich pleaded guilty Sept. 28. to selling U.S. code secrets to the Soviets beginning in 1963, when he was stationed in Paris with the U.S. Army Signal Corps.

In exchange, Helmich received $131,000 from the Soviets and was later congratulated by a Soviet general who kissed him on both cheeks and made him an honorary colonel in the Soviet army, witnesses said.

His plea came four days into his espionage trial, which Betz had said would show how Helmich's spy activities hurt U.S. military efforts during the Vietnam war.

"Congress has expressed its view of the seriousness of the crime," U.S. District Judge Susan Black said in issuing the sentence. Helmich, 44, should serve "the remainder of his natural life" in prison, she said.

Mrs. Black said that although it wasn't in her power to make such an order, she felt any profits Helmich might make in the future from books or movies should go to the U.S. government.

U.S. law allows for the death penalty for convicted traitors, but that statute is no longer enforced, Justice Department officials said.

During the trial, prosecution witnesses said Helmich, plagued by financial problems, went to the Soviet embassy there in January 1963.

Helmich then entered a conspiracy spanning 17 years in which he sold parts, manuals and code lists for the KL-7 Cryptosystem, a 'top-secret, typewriter-sized machine used to encode and decode messages, witnesses said.

According to testimony, he also made an agreement to warn the Soviets of any planned U.S. offensives against communist-bloc countries.

Betz said the United States wasn't aware the coding system had been compromised until 1980.

"The traitorous acts of Mr. Helmich were of the highest degree. The magnitude of the crime simply dwarfs any crime tht I'm aware of," said Betz, who charged that Helmich's cooperation with the Soviets may have been "very grave" for U.S. forces in Indochina.

Peter Dearing, Helmich's court-appointed lawyer, had sought leniency, saying Helmich had cooperated with FBI agents for a year before his indictment and would do anything short of going "on the rack" to cooperate further.

Helmich took the stand and told Mrs. Black he was ready for any punishment, but asked for a "light at the end."

"Punishment is justice for the unjust," Betz said, calling Helmich an "absolute traitor" and one of the most damaging spies in U.S. history.

He said a murder is a crime against an individual, but Helmich's crime "strikes at the fabric of our society."

Midland has first taste of autumn

With its first real taste of crisp autumn weather, Midland and the surrounding area will have sunny and mild days with cloudy and cold nights through Monday.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, the high today will reach into the upper 60s with the low tonight dropping into the lower 40s. The high on Monday will be in the middle 70s.

Winds will be from the northeast 10-15 mph today.

Saturday's high of 81 was 14 degrees cooler than the record high of 95 set for that date in 1964. The overnight low of 62 was 25 degrees warmer than the record low of 37 set in 1968.

Two convicted

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Two people have been convicted of arson for burning a yellow cloth in front of former Iranian hostage Victor Tomseth.

John J. Kaiser, 25, and Nancy A. Whitley, 29, both of Eugene, each face maximum 20-year prison sentences and $2,500 fines.

No sentencing date was scheduled.

Kaiser and Ms. Whitley, members of the Revolutionary Communist Youth Brigade, said they set fire to the cloth as a political protest. More than 1,000 people were inside a University of Oregon theater to hear a speech by Tomseth when the incident occurred Feb. 9.

Philosophers hold human rights conference

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — About 400 philosophers from 35 countries meet here Sunday to begin a week-long international human rights conference, the first held in this country since 1954.

As many as 1,000 delegates were invited, but some were barred from coming by their governments and others declined, said Florida State University Philosophy Professor David Gruender.

Gruender, organizing committee chairman for the Inter-American Congress of Philosophy, said a Chilean philosopher decided not to attend after his son's life was threatened.

"They don't play games down there," Gruender said. "He ran a newspaper advertisement to say he had nothing to do with it."

The session will mark the first time in 27 years that the Inter-American Society of Philosophy and the American Philosophical Association have held one of their periodic congresses in the United States. The last conference met in Venezuela in 1977.

Conference sponsors invited President Reagan, Vice President George Bush, Secretary of State Alexander Haig and former President Carter. City, county and state law officials began security planning, but relaxed when none accepted.

"I think we are pretty laid back and we aren't expecting any problems at all," said James Sewell of the Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

Law officials have prepared contingency plans because controversial Latin American figures are expected, including some delegates who have been targets of assassination attempts or threats.

Among those expected were three delegates from El Salvador, where left-wing guerrillas are battling troops of the ruling junta.

Also expected was Adolfo Perez Esquivel, the Argentinian architect and human rights activist who won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1980.

Railroad Commission staff will approve unprotested applications

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Rail-road Commission has eased its workload and paperwork by deciding to let its staff approve unprotested applications to deepen oil and gas wells or deviate from the usual well-spacing rules.

"Rule 37" applications, until now, had to be reviewed by the three commissioners, which had received 2,941 such applications between Jan. 1 and Sept. 30.

The commission said the new policy will speed up processing time by about two weeks.

Clayton names committee to deal with teenage pregnancy

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton has appointed a Select Committee on Teenage Pregnancy to seek ways of dealing with a problem he said affects one out of nine Texas teenage girls.

Rep. Mary Polk, D-El Paso, will be chairwoman, and Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, vice chairman. Other members are Reps. Buddy Jones, D-Hillsboro; Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice; and John Gavin, D-Wichita Falls.

Clayton said Texas ranks fourth among the states in the number of pregnancies involving girls aged 15-19 and has 10 percent of all pregnancies affecting girls 14 and younger.

"Four-fifths of all teenage pregnancies in Texas are not planned. One in nine teenage girls in Texas becomes pregnant," Clayton said in a statement.

He said the committee will conduct studies, receive public testimony, gather statistics and recommend legislation dealing with the problem.

"This committee can make great headway in preventing the incidence of unwanted teenage pregnancies and in reviewing services which can assist teenage girls in caring for their children," Clayton said.

Clements names task force chair

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has named Jack Lander of Houston chairman of the new Task Force on Foreign Investments in Texas.

The governor Friday signed an executive order creating the task force. Lander is chairman of the board of Merchants Park Bank.

The task force will report to Clements by Jan. 1, 1983.

"There have been a growing number of foreign investors interested in Texas' properties and businesses," Clements said. "I want this task force to take a look at the situation and advise me on what the state's policy should be with respect to these foreign investments."

Ten named to education committee

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements on Friday named 10 members to the Governor's Education Advisory Committee, which is headed by Dr. Willis Tate, former president of Southern Methodist University.

Chosen for the committee were: Paul McCash of Texarkana, president of the Texas Association of School Boards; Franklin Bass of Corpus Christi, ex-member of the Corpus Christi school board; Calvin Gross, superintendent of the Alamo Heights schools in San Antonio; Judy Matney of Missouri City, Texas 1980 teacher of the year; Chandler Lindsley of Dallas, former member of the Education Advisory Committee to the governor.

Also, Linus Wright, Dallas school superintendent; Higinio Cantu, principal of Corpus Christi Carroll High School; Molly Lassiter, president of the Fort Worth school board; Arlington McRae, Houston accountant; and Jim Deatherage, attorney for the Irving school district.

The group has the responsibility of determining the results of six education bills passed by the 1981 Legislature, including the curriculum "reform" bill and the bilingual education law.

Too many gators spoil the swamps

By RICK BARRETT
Beaumont Enterprise&Journal

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Just like too many cooks spoil the broth, state biologists are contending that too many alligators are making a nuisance of themselves in Southeast Texas. A limited hunting season on the gators may be opened as early as next year to curb the population explosion.

Alligators can't be hunted, however, until the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service removes them from the endangered species list, said Floyd E. Potter Jr., wildlife biologist with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

The department asked the service early this year to end the American alligator's endangered sspecies status in Southeast Texas — where gators sometimes leave their marshy homes and wander into city streets, swimming pools, drainage ditches and even freeways, sometimes causing minor traffic jams.

"They even find one in a doghouse once in a while with the dog gone," Potter said in an interview.

Wildlife officials have published a set of proposed alligator rules that eventually would be amended to establish a hunting season on gators.

Nominee says he'll change EPA evaluations

By JOANNE OMANG
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The man nominated to run the government's main controls over toxic substances Friday said he plans to change the ways that the Environmental Protection Agency evaluates health risks.

Although Dr. John A. Todhunter didn't say so, the changes will tend to find substances less dangerous than current procedures do.

The question of risk is thorny and central to all federal regulations, which in effect choose a level of risk and label it acceptable or unacceptable.

Todhunter, 32, told the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee that as EPA's assistant administrator for pesticides and toxic substances, he will make those choices using computer models that are different from the ones that guide those choices now.

Asked by Sen. Robert T. Stafford, R-Vt., chairman of the committee, about his views on using data from tests on laboratory animals, Todhunter said he would continue to rely on animal tests.

"What may change is that the agency has been in the habit of using only one of several available curve-generating computer models" to evaluate the tests, he said. "I will add the use of other models.

"Some of them agree (with each other), and where they do, you have greater confidence," he added.

The action could affect everything EPA does in the toxics regulation field. Laboratory animals are commonly exposed to the chemicals in tests in an effort to determine whether the substances are dangerous to people. But they are tested at such high doses and have such short normal life spans that relating the tests to human risk is a complex business.

Scientists use computer models to process the raw test information in order to be able to say, in effect, that if so many rats develop cancer when dosed with a substance in a certain manner, at a certain level and over a certain period of time, then the risk to humans is "X" at such-and-such a dose.

Todhunter's science adviser, Dr. Richard N. Hill, said the results would be different for each model, especially at the low levels of exposure that are usually the case for people.

Reagan gains vote on AWACS sale

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan added another vote to his side today as he moved closer toward Senate approval of his sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia.

The switch by Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., from the undecided group narrows the Senate lineup against the sale to 51-38, with 11 senators still saying they are undecided, according to the latest Associated Press count.

One fewer vote and the opponents will no longer have a clear majority. But Reagan has to get a majority of the senators present and voting to approve the sale, or at least get a tie vote.

Randolph, in a statement announcing his decision today, said the AWACS issue "is perhaps one of the most difficult I have encountered in my 37 years of congressional service."

"Approval of the sale is in the best interest of the security of the United States and the peoples of the Middle East," Randolph said. "It will strengthen our capacity to help bring peace and maintain stability in that troubled region."

Randolph's announcement came one day after Reagan met with seven senators in his personal lobbying campaign for the $8.5 billion arms deal. After meeting with the president Friday, one senator announced his support for the sale and two others who had been leaning against the sale said they were now undecided. Three opponents said they promised Reagan that they would keep open minds.

Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. said more senators will be declaring their support for the sale next week.

"We're still behind, but we're coming up and they're (opponents) coming down," Baker said.

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., who had been leaning for the sale, announced his support after a meeting with the president.

"If we turn it down we're lost," Johnston said. "But if we accept it, we can change our minds later" because the planes will not be delivered until 1985.

Sens. David L. Boren, D-Okla., and Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., who had indicated in the past that they were leaning against it, said they have since moved to undecided.

And Sens. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., Quentin N. Burdick, D-N.D., and Howell Heflin, D-Ala., said they remain opposed but promised the president during the meetings that they would restudy their positions or keep their minds open.

In addition, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., who has been listed as uncommitted, is working on a resolution of support for Israel that could lead him to vote for the sale, said his press secretary, Bill Kats.

"We are looking at resolutions, including possibly something of our own initiative, which would be a reconfirmation of our special relationship with Israel," Kats added.

Meanwhile, White House spokesman David Gergen confirmed that the AWACS sale is likely to be discussed next week when Reagan meets with Saudi Prince Fahd during a 22-nation summit conference at Cancun, Mexico.

But Gergen discouraged speculation that Reagan might win new concessions on the sale.

Boren said he decided to reassess his position and move to undecided "in light of the assassination of President Sadat. It increases the need to have other friends, strong friends, in the area."

Burdick and Leahy said they also are concerned about the risk of compromising the AWACS equipment. Leahy noted that AWACS planes were about to be sold to Iran just before its government fell to the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

DeConcini told reporters that he remains opposed to the sale but got some new information from the president "that of course I'll have to weigh.

"I told the president my door is never shut to any president on any foreign policy issue such as this," DeConcini said.

Burdick said he also remains opposed but promised the president to restudy the issue and "give it my prayerful consideration."

Heflin said "I'm still opposed but I'm open-minded and willing to listen to reason and any logic on what's overall best for the country."

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., said he remains opposed to the sale.

Gergen said the letter of assurances Reagan is drafting for the Senate will not be delivered until shortly before the vote the last week of October. The White House press office had suggested earlier that the letter would be sent to the Senate by next week.

Gergen said the letter essentially will contain no new Saudi concessions beyond those Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. spelled out to the Senate last month, although he said there will be "some new language."

"The critical point about the letter is that it does give concrete assurances from the president in writing on terms of the sale," Gergen said.

Mrs. L.H. Michaelson, Yorktown chairman for the Col. Theunis Day chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, puts the finishing touches on a Yorktown Bicentennial celebration display at the Midland County Library. Five Midlanders are attending the Yorktown celebration in Yorktown, Va., and several Midland churches will ring their bells Monday at noon in honor of the battle that ended the American Revolution 200 years ago. Yorktown battle relived on 200th anniversary

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

YORKTOWN, Va. (AP) — Grander armies than any massed here in 200 years swarmed over the trenches and fields of Yorktown on Saturday in a stirring recreation of the battle that ended the American Revolution.

On the hour and date that Lord Cornwallis waved the white flag in 1781, a modern day drummer boy beat the call to parley, just as a redcoat had done, to end the battle of Yorktown.

As the final Bicentennial pageantry reached a peak, Vice President George Bush and French President Francois Mitterrand joined the festivities to renew their nations' long friendship.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig met the French president at Langley Air Force Base in Hampton, about 30 miles from Williamsburg.

Mitterrand was welcomed by a 21-gun salute, a military honor guard and the playing of his national anthem. Bush arrived at Langley earlier and went on to Williamsburg for a formal welcome and dinner.

President Reagan arrives Sunday for a summit conference in Williamsburg with the French leader.

The martial display highlighting the four-day Yorktown Bicentennial was the largest 18th century military recreation ever held and one of the most colorful spectacles since the country's Bicentennial celebration began in 1975.

File upon file of brightly costumed troops marched into the ancient British fortifications, fired cannon and musket, fell back as new units moved in — all to the rap of drums and the skirl of bagpipes.

The midnight blue-coated Hessians wereon the right flank, the Green-frocked Jagers next. Then the kilted highlanders, the emerald-coated loyalist rangers and long lines of redcoats.

Across the grassy field, ringing batteries of Continental and French artillery answered in a booming reminder of the bombardment that brought Gen. Charles Cornwallis down.

Then a small boy mounted a parapet and — as it happened in the real battle — his drumming was drowned by the cannonade. But as Thomas Reinhart, 14, of Rahway, N.J., doggedly beat the call to parley, the guns fell silent. A redcoated officer with a white flag was blindfolded and led into the American lines.

The real call to parley on Oct. 17, 1781, had sent a message from Cornwallis to Gen. George Washington offering to negotiate the surrender of the cream of the British army. The surrender was completed two days later, effectively ending the American Revolution.

While half of bicentennial Yorktown bloomed with the brilliant red and blue of 18th century uniforms, another half sported the olive drab and khaki of the modern military.

On Saturday, Virginia Gov. John Dalton, Army Secretary John O. Marsh Jr. and Navy Secretary John Lehman inspected modern military units, some of which conducted exercises coordinated with the reenactment, including a Marine landing, an Army parachute demonstration, Navy hydrofoils and Army helicopters.

The final commemoration comes on Monday when Reagan and Mitterrand deliver speeches and 4,000 troops, camp followers, horses, wagons, cannon, drums and fifes re-enact the surrender ceremony.

Mitterrand's participation was partly in recognition of the 8,000 French troops and the French fleet that assured Washington's victory. But his visit also comes at a time when relations between the United States and France are strained by modern politics.

New 'Stealth' bombers to be developed by Northrop Corp.

By MICHAEL GETLER
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Air Force, in the first step toward what may become a $20 billion program to develop and produce a fleet of revolutionary "Stealth" bombers, announced Friday that it had selected Northrop Corp. as prime contractor for initial research and development work on the project.

"Stealth" is a top-secret and top-priority Pentagon project to develop a new type of bomber virtually invisible to enemy radar and thus able to carry bombs and missiles through heavy air defenses such as those ringing the Soviet Union.

The idea is to combine a variety of new aircraft shapes and designs with special materials that absorb rather than reflect the energy in radar beams so enemy gunners cannot "see" and shoot down the bombers.

Earlier this month, President Reagan announced that as part of a major new program to strengthen the nation's nuclear arsenal, he wants to build 100 new MX missiles and 100 new B-1 bombers. The B-1 would begin replacing aging B-52 bombers in 1986.

Reagan also announced his intention to pursue "a vigorous research and development program for an advanced technology bomber (Stealth)." Stealth would become operational in the early 1990s and is meant to ensure a continued U.S. ability to penetrate Soviet air defenses.

In keeping with Reagan's decision and the tight secrecy surrounding the project, the Pentagon statement issued Friday, after the stock market closed, said only that:

" ... The Air Force announces that Northrop has been selected as the prime contractor to proceed with initial research and development on advanced bomber concepts. Key members of the team include Boeing, LTV-Vought and the General Electric Aircraft Engine Group. All details are classified. No further comment will be made."

Northrop is based in Hawthorne, Calif.

The Northrop contract, which company president Thomas V. Jones said "will have a material impact" on the firm, is only for initial development work. If experimental models perform as advertised, a subsequent production contract would be awarded. Friday's announcement would appear to identify what that production team would be if things go well.

Yorktown: The view from the winner's side

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

EDITOR'S NOTE: The siege of Yorktown, 200 years ago, decided the American Revolution. Here's what it looked like from the winners' side.

YORKTOWN, Va. (AP) — A shadowy figure glided out of the mist and rain falling on no-man's land and approached a cluster of American soldiers shivering in the autumn chill.

They had been following French officers who were laying pine strips along the ground, marking the path of a great trench to be dug.

After a time the officers moved away to scout the path and warned the men not to move until they returned. At this eerie point, the tall stranger in a civilian overcoat loomed out of the darkness.

"We now began to be a little jealous for our safety, being alone and without arms and within 40 rods of the British trenches," their sergeant confessed.

"The stranger inquired what troops we were; talked familiarly with us a few minutes, when, being informed which way the officers had gone, he went off in the same direction," the sergeant said.

In a short time the officers returned with the tall stranger. After a while, "by the officers often calling him 'Your Excellency,' we discovered it was General Washington."

The evening's work done and the rain increasing, George Washington and his men withdrew to their camp. The curtain was rising on the drama of Yorktown, the siege that would win the American Revolution.

The next night, Oct. 6, 1781, hundreds of soldiers slipped into the mist with shovels and picks and began scooping the soft, sandy soil, throwing it into huge wicker baskets, creating at once a wall toward the enemy and a deep trench behind it.

The rain covered their sounds and clouds shaded the half moon that could have betrayed them to British eyes. "We were entrenching literally under their noses," one said.

Dawn revealed to the redcoats a cordon of earth pinning them to the Yorktown peninsula, the dirt palisades already high enough to cover the diggers.

British artillery railed at the fresh earth, but the allied soldiers labored without returning fire. They would keep their guns hidden until they could answer in concert. Shot and shell fell among them, but they toiled steadily, making themselves safer and the enemy's doom nearer with every spadeful.

By Oct. 9 the allied batteries were ready for action. The opening barrage was stupefying.

"The engines of war have raged with redoubled fury and destruction on both sides, no cessation day or night," an American surgeon recorded. "The bombshells from the besiegers and the besieged are incessantly crossing each other's path in the air," the doctor said.

USO tells Bob Hope: 'Thanks for the memories'

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The USO said "Thanks for the memories" to Bob Hope.

The ski-nosed comedian, master of the quick one-liner who girdled the globe over and over to entertain American GIs wherever they were was the guest of honor at a posh black-tie dinner to raisu funds for the United Service Organization.

Hope became the USO's benefactor before a field full of troops at the no-longer-existent March Field, Calif., south of Los Angeles, in 1941.

Subsequently, he entertained at military bases thousands of times and spent Christmas with the troops in three wars — World War II, Korea and Vietnam.

Hope was the weekend guest of old friends at the White House, the Ronald Reagans. The president was among the speakers at the dinner.

Other guests included Chief Justice Warren Burger and the newest member of the Supreme Court, Sandra Day O'Connor; House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill; former President Gerald R. Ford, a golfing partner of Hope, and other top Washington figures.

From the world of entertainment came Frances Langford and Lola Falana, singers who accompanied Hope on many of his overseas trips, and Jill St. John, Marie Osmond and Gretchen Wyler.

The tickets cost $1,000 or $2,500 each and the proceeds — expected to run in the millions— will be used to help build the $10 million Bob Hope USO Center in Washington and underwrite other USO programs.

'Black Friday' closes school

By BN TUCKER
Associ Press Writer

ALPENA, Mich. (AP) — Two hpeters played taps as janitors at Alpena High School lowered the Ameriflag. Students wearing black armbands watched quietly.

With the brief ceremony Friday Alpena School District became the first in Michigan since the Depressiogo broke and close its doors.

Voters in this Alpena County cnunity, located 230 miles north of Detroit, have rejected three proposals ire months to increase taxes, said Glenn McAdam, the schools' finance dtor.

As a result, he said, the distri penniless.

"There is a lot of tension in thalls," Principal David Clink said Friday. "Some of the anti-millage comns have really upset these kids who think people are just playing with theves."

The closing came on Homecog Day and a demoralized Alpena football team lost their game to Escanal5-0, Friday night.

Classroom doors will stay loclat least until Oct. 30, when voters in this town of 14,000 on Lake Huron hunder Bay consider two new millage proposals.

One asks renewal of a propetax rate to 20.25 mills — or a little more than 2 cents for each dollar of ased value — which would raise $15 million for operations; the second issueuests 3.45 mills to provide $1.2 million for programs such as transportatiothletics and libraries.

Two hundred students turned for a demonstration after school on what they dubbed as "Black Friday."

"This isn't a vacation; we're ed out," shouted one student.

Cynthia Wenzel, a senior and of the leaders of the Concerned Students For Better Education, used a born to urge her classmates to work for approval of the millage issues.

"Let's show this community e worth every penny they'll give us," the 17-year-old said, prompting a ch from the crowd.

She and other students spent final hour of Friday's classes draping a black banner below the main enice to the school. Others taped huge letters to the front windows spelling "ed."

"They're trying to show it dot hurt, but as I talk to the kids I find it's heartbreaking," said psychol teacher Michael Brinkman. "So many people simply say, 'They won't the schools close.' But it's happened."

Many students, especially sen, plan to attend schools in other communities if the millage request fails in.

Michael Waters, a senior whosther teaches in the district, said he plans to transfer to Mount Pleasant or and.

"The idea of transferring doesreally bother me," he said. "I'm tired of all the negativeness. It just doesn'tter when you know the community doesn't back you."

All district employees but thehool superintendent, three secretaries and two custodians are being laid one of those staying on the job is secretary Marge Cogswell, an employee 9 years.

"I don't know if I'm glad or s' she said. "Right now, I'm just numb."

Knotts Berry Farm workers file petition seeking unionization

BUENA PARK, Calif. (AP) — A coalition of 15 labor unions has filed a petition with the National Labor Relations Board in an effort to unionize workers at the Knott's Berry Farm amusement park, a longtime union resister said.

A spokesman for the coalition said Friday it met legal requirements by gathering signatures from 30 percent of the park's 1,400 employees seeking a union election.

Knott's has resisted unionization since it was founded by Walter Knott 61 years ago. Park spokesman Darrel Armstrong said Knott's was notified of the filing and will "continue to do business as usual."

Marines discharged following urine tests proving marijuana use

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A Marine Corps officer and 11 drill instructors were relieved of their duties after surprise random urine tests showed they were using marijuana at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, officials said.

Maj. Jim Seal said Friday the urine analyses were conducted Sept. 8 on 282 randomly selected marines. Results showed 52 Marines using marijuana, including the officer and drill instructors.

The disclosure was the first drug incident in four years at the recruit depot. In 1977, six marines were charged with possessing marijuana on the base.

Motel clerk identifies man as Jordon attacker

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — A motel clerk says she can identify avowed racist Joseph Paul Franklin as the man she saw at a motel here within days of an attempt on the life of civil rights leader Vernon Jordan Jr., the Fort Wayne Journal Gazette reported Saturday.

FBI agents Friday showed a 12-minute videotape of Franklin in a lineup to the clerk and two other people, including a reporter for the Journal Gazette, who said the clerk identified Franklin in his presence. The clerk's name was withheld.

Before the clerk identified Franklin as the man she saw, authorities were able to place Franklin in Fort Wayne only from a signature in a motel registration card that a handwriting analyst said was Franklin's.

Steven Thomma, the Journal Gazette reporter, wrote that he could not identify Franklin as the man he saw in Fort Wayne around May 29, 1980. The third person who viewed the tape, whose name also was not released, also could not identify Franklin, the paper said.

Thomma, the clerk and the third person were flown to Salt Lake City earlier this year to view Franklin, but Franklin refused to allow it.

Jordan, former executive director of the National Urban League, was gunned down May 29, 1980, by a sniper in the parking lot of the Marriott Inn, about five miles from Motel 6 in Fort Wayne. He had just been dropped off at the motel by a white woman, Martha Coleman.

Franklin, 31, of Mobile, Ala., was convicted last month of first-degree murder in the sniping deaths of two black men Aug. 20, 1980, as they were jogging with two white women in Salt Lake City. He was sentenced to two consecutive life prison terms.

He also has been convicted in U.S. District Court in Salt Lake City of violating the jogger's civil rights by killing them. He received an identical sentence in the federal case.

California radon levels high

MENLO PARK, Calif. (AP) — Radon gas, which some scientists believe may be related to earthquake activity, has been recorded leaking in abnormally high amounts from major faults along nearly two-thirds the length of California, researchers say.

Chi-Yu King of the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park confirmed Thursday that 70 to 75 special recording instruments have detected the gas along a 500-mile-stretch of the state.

King, a geophysicist in charge of the sample instruments network, said there has been disagreement within his agency as to what the leaking radon means. Scientists have refrained from saying it signals the advent of an earthquake.

"We really don't understand the implications of the radon, and there's been a difference of opinion among my colleagues about its significance," King said.

However, Soviet and Chinese scientists have noted that earthquakes are preceded by abnormal radon flows.

News of the extended radon leaking follows confirmation a week ago by California Institute of Technology researchers in Pasadena that the gas had increased dramatically in two Southern California wells and in ground sites around Santa Barbara.

Former U.S. President Jimmy Carter, left, the late Foreign Minister Moshe Dyan, center, and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, outside the White House in March 1978 at the conclusion of the U.S.-Israeli talks. Dyan, 66, died of a heart attack Friday. He played a critical role in bringing about Israeli concessions when Carter flew to Israel in 1979 in an effort to save the negotiatians with Egypt.

Dyan didn't view death as negative

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — "I don't see death as something negative or threatening...I don't approach it with suspicion," said Moshe Dayan five days before he died.

Israel Radio today broadcast an interview recorded last week with the soldier-statesman who suffered a fatal heart attack Friday at age 66.

"All through my life death passed close to me and it never worried me especially. If I die, I die," Dayan said in a weak and hoarse voice.

He recalled his first brush with death in 1941 on a mission guiding British forces behind enemy lines in Vichy-controlled Syria. A bullet shattered the binoculars he was holding, pushing glass deep into his left eye.

"My friends wanted to give me to the French for treatment, but I said 'No. If I die, okay, but I don't want to be a prisoner,'" he said.

The wound forced him to don the black eyepatch that became world famous as he led Israel to its 1967 war victory as Defense Minister and later negotiated peace with Egypt as Foreign Minister.

In later years he also developed cancer of the colon, but reportedly had the disease in check when his heart gave out.

"I am not fatalistic," Dayan said last week. "In combat if there is an artillery barrage I don't just walk into it saying nothing is going to hit me. That's nonesense. I will look to see where the shells are falling...

"I don't see death as something negative or threatening. In the end I will lie on the hill in Nahalal in the graveyard with my family and others. Sooner or later it will happen to everyone and that is what will happen to me. I don't approach it with suspicion," Dayan said.

A state funeral is set for today, with burial at Nahalal, the Jordan Valley collective farm that was his boyhood home.

Weinberger visits Swedish installations

By HARALD MOLLERSTROM
Associated Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger toured Swedish military bases Saturday after assuring Swedish officials the United States will sell sensitive jet technology to this neutral nation.

"There will shortly be agreement on security issues that will permit the sale to go through," Weinberger said Friday night at an official dinner. The defense secretary is here on a three-day visit.

Weinberger was scheduled to visit air force and infantry installations Saturday, and talked with Prime Minister Thorbjorn Falldin Friday, met defense officials, toured a cavernous submarine pen carved in the side of a mountain and rode a torpedo boat.

Sweden says it might buy parts to assemble sophisticated General Electric 404 jet engines for use in its fighters. But U.S. officials have been concerned that some of the top-secret technology might fall into Soviet hands.

Sweden angered the Pentagon last year by selling an advanced computer system to the Soviets for Moscow's airport over U.S. objections.

The Scandinavian nation is not a NATO member but is considered a strategic neutral buffer between the Western military alliance and the Soviet Union.

A U.S. official who asked not to be identified said a group of Swedish and U.S. representatives will work out a system to govern defense-related sales.

Dyan was larger-than-life hero

By WILLIAM CLAIBORNE
The Washington Post

JERUSALEM — Moshe Dayan, one of the last larger-than-life heroes in the 33-year history of Israel, and also one of its most enigmatic and controversial political figures, died Friday night in a hospital near Tel Aviv after being admitted for an apparent heart attack. He was 66.

Dayan, a member of Israel's parliament, the Knesset, for more than two decades and the holder of some of the highest posts in Israel'sgovernment, died as the head of small and relatively ineffectual opposition party he formed 1 1-2 years after resigning his job as Israel's foreign minister in a policy dispute with Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

His death nevertheless stunned Israel Friday night, partly because of its suddeness and partly because Dayan had become a political fixture, loved and admired for his role in the shaping of the modern Jewish state, but at the same time evoking emotional countercurrents because of his mercurial shifts in allegiance.

It was well known that Dayan was suffering gravely from the ravages of stomach cancer — his gaunt appearance left little doubt of that — but few Israelis were prepared for the abrupt announcement by Israeli radio of his death Friday night.

Dayan was admitted to the Sheba Medical Center near Tel Aviv in the early morning hours Friday, complaining of chest pains and difficulty of breathing.

In the first of three medical bulletins, Dr. Bolaslav Goldman, director of the hospital, said tests had shown that Dayan was not suffering from "the same problem" for which he was admitted in June 1979, when he was operated upon for stomach cancer. In a noon bulletin, Goldman reported that Dayan was sitting up and reading a newspaper and listening to the radio, but early Friday evening the hospital confined itself to reporating that Dayan was "stable" and making progress.

After the announcement of his death, there was no official explanation of the cause.

Dayan's death came on the eigth anniversary of the day that Israeli Army troops, under the command of then-Defense Minister Dayan, crossed the Suez Canal and turned the tide in the 1973 war with Egypt. Paradoxically, then-Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, commander-in-chief of the Egyptian Army and Dayan's chief protagonist in that war, was assassinated on the anniversary of the Egyptian crossing of the Suez.

Dayan's death also came hours after the Israeli government announced that it intends to declassify and publish the much-awaited Agranat commission report on Israel's military preparedness and conduct in the 1973 war, when Dayan was responsible for the nation's defenses. The widely held view in Israel has been that the Agranat report was critical of Dayan's role as defense minister.

Long after that bitter conflict, Dayan remained a central topic of debate in Israel. Many of his critics bitterly recall that he took credit for the 1967 six-day war victory that others had planned before he became defense minister only three days before the war started. The critics also have been relentless in pointing out that Dayan heaped blame on the highest military echelons for the enormous losses in 1973, and that after the Labor Party's first election defeat in 1977 he bolted the party without explanation and joined the Cabinet of the rightist government of Begin.

In keeping with his maverick image, Dayan quit Begin's Likud government in October 1979, saying he could not remain as foreign minister because he and Begin differed "fundamentally" in their concepts of the future political status of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Last April, Dayan formed a new election ticket, called the Telem (National Renewal) Party, and ran on a platform of unilaterally imposing autonomy on the 1.3 million Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. His party won only two of the 120 seats in the Knesset, and Dayan seemed to withdraw from day-to-day Israeli politics, devoting much of his time to writing and promoting a new book.

The Telem Party has shown little influence in the Knesset, and just a month ago there appeared a tentative effort on the part of some members of te Labor Party to invite Dayan back into the fold of the party he abandoned in 1977. However, the movement — begun by former members of the Rafi faction that in the 1960s remained loyal to former Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion after he left the party — was not able to enlist enough support to recall Dayan.

Dayan's death leaves former Finance Minister Yigael Hurwitz, who also quit Begin's Cabinet in a policy dispute, as the only Knesset member of the Telem Party. Former Likud Knesset member Zalman Shoval, who quit Begin's coalition after opposing the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, is expected to fill the Telem Party vacancy.

Before the June 30 election, Dayan, in a move that his critics said was typical of his shifting allegiances, was known to have indicated to the Labor Party that his faction would join Labor if opposition leader Shimon Peres promised Dayan control over administering the West Bank and Gaza Strip, and put him in charge of negotiating with Egypt and the Palestinians.

Two dead, 21 injured in Tijuana bush crash

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — A city bus loaded with commuters went off a highway bridge, killing two women and injuring 21 other passengers, authorities said.

Tijuana Police Chief Ernesto Bicaeno said the the driver had fallen asleep at the wheel Friday morning as the bus headed from downtown Tijuana to a suburban zone known as La Libertad. Tijuana is south of San Diego on the U.S.-Mexican border.

A similar accident occurred at the same concrete bridge on June 28, 1979, when 48 people were injured.

The driver of the bus in Friday's crash, Enrique Alvarez, 27, of Tijuana, could not be reached for comment, and it was not known if he was hurt. The victims were taken to the Tijuana General Hospital and to a Red Cross facility. At least one of the injured was in critical condition.

Both of the dead were elderly women. One was killed in the bus when her neck was slashed by a broken window. The other woman died at the Red Cross station.

Zimbabwe has restricted diplomats' movements, the size of embassies

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — Zimbabwe has ordered restrictions on the movement of diplomats and the size of the 60 embassies and consulates here, diplomats said Saturday.

The diplomats, who requested anonymity, told the Associated Press they now must seek permission 48 hours in advance from the government of Prime Minister Robert Mugabe every time they want to travel beyond a 25-mile radius of Salisbury, the capital.

They also have been instructed to limit embassies and consulates to a maximum staff of 20 diplomats, although this ceiling was said to be "negotiable," the diplomats said. The restrictions were ordered Friday, at the same time the socialist government published emergency regulations authorizing Home Affairs Minister Richard Hove to ban political meetings.

Tin Council sets new price on the metal

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — The International Tin Council agreed Saturday to a 6.9 percent increase in the floor and ceiling prices for buffer stocks of tin.

ITC Chairman Peter Lai, told a news conference the new price range will be $12.75 to $16.57 per kilogram. One kilogram equals 2.2 pounds.

The buffer stocks can have 25,00 tons of tin. Tin is sold from the stocks on the world market to lower prices if it goes above the ceiling price. Tin is bought and added to the stocks if the metal's market value falls below the floor price. The buffer stocks currently stand at around 4,000 tons.

Three more die in poisoned oil epidemic

MADRID (AP) — The deaths of three women Saturday brought to 161 the number of fatalities from poisoned cooking oil in Spain since May.

Spanish authorities said about 850 people are still hospitalized from the epidemic, which was caused by toxic rape-seed oil mixed into edible vegetable oil, Spanish authorities said.

The mixture was sold at below market prices as olive oil, which is widely used in Spain for cooking. Twenty olive oil brands have been banned after laboratory tests determined they contained rape-seed oil. More than 20 people arrested in the scandal are imprisoned awaiting trial.

U.S. Vice President George Bush addresses the 37th annual meeting of the Inter-American Press Association in Rio de Janeiro Friday.

Bush says Cuba, U.S.S.R. limit press freedom, stifle dissent

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Vice President George Bush says Cuba and its Soviet ally stifle dissent, limit press freedom and fear popular revolt.

"If the people of Cuba, or the Soviet Union, or any of the other unfortunately numerous totalitarian countries on earth were allowed to know what their rules were really like, then who can say?," Bush told the Inter-American Press Association Friday. "They might rise up and as they say in Dodger Stadium, 'throw the bums out.'"

Bush said the Reagan administration is proceeding with plans for a Spanish-language radio station aimed at Cuba to counter broadcasts by Premier Fidel Castro's government which took power in the 1959 revolution.

"Cubans, like all people, yearn for the truth," Bush said. "For the last 22 years, they have not been getting it. Now they will, and Mr. Castro is terrified at the prospect. Actually I have to confess the idea gives me enormous pleasure."

The vice president rebuked the Soviet Union, saying it "has crushed millions of its own citizens in trying to enforce its barbaric and primitive doctrines."

He said Castro has "in the course of 22 years of tyranny jailed and killed huge numbers of men and women who stood up to him."

He also accused Castro of bankrolling leftist insurgent movements in El Salvador, and other Latin American nations.

Bush left for Washington Friday night after two days of talks. He said a just-announced U.S. agreement to lift a ban on nuclear fuel sales to Brazil was done to promote friendship with South America's largest nation. His tour also included stops in the Dominican Republic and Colombia.

Renault executive is ambassador to U.S.

By EDWARD CODY
The Washington Post

PARIS — France's Socialist government is dispatching as its new ambassador to the United States a man likely to bring sharp changes in the style of French diplomacy in Washington — a nondiplomat reputed to be a homebody who has spent his entire career with the nationalized Renault auto company.

President Francois Mitterrand's choice of Bernard Vernier-Palliez, 63, demonstrates official confidence in an executive who has helped make Renault into Europe's leading automobile manufacturer and a paradigm that French Socialists point to repeatedly in explaining their reasons for nationalizing more French industry.

It also reflects a desire to underline the difference between Mitterrand and his predecessor, Valery Giscard d'Estaing, whose ambassador, Francois de Laboulaye, is, in the carefully chosen words of a French diplomat, "more of a society ambassador" than the party-shy Vernier-Palliez.

Officially, a Foreign Ministry spokesman explained that Mitterrand picked Vernier-Palliez "because he knows your country well" as a result of business contacts as chief Renault executive since 1976 and a steady career with the state-owned company that began in 1942 even before it was nationalized. The French press added that Vernier-Palliez's expereince makes him an ideal advocate in Washington of Socialist nationalization programs, able to argue from firsthand knowledge that nationalized business can work.

In a twist of humor, the daily "Le Matin" pointed out that the French Embassy in Washington also will be a good platform for selling Renault's latest model, the R9, for which company officials see a bright future on the U.S. market.

But a Foreign Ministry source emphasized that Mitterrand and Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson, both of whom know Verniez-Palliez personally, picked him as ambassador to Washington also as a gesture to mark a shift away from "the image of France as a country that sells perfume and has nice little women."

The burly Vernier-Palliez has made his reputation with balance sheets and production charts, acquiring a $350 million interest in American Motors and helping turn Renault from a sluggish state-owned behemoth into a decentralized money-earner that turns hundreds of millions in profits. In doing so, he followed a schedule that includes two days a week "on the ground" in Renault factories.

De Laboulaye, in contrast, is known as a smooth professional diplomat with equally smooth family connections that earned him entrance into France's ultraselect Jockey Club. His style and the image of France he represents, a Foreign Ministry official said, made him a likely target for Mitterrand and his Socialist government.

With his 65th birthday approaching next June, de Laboulaye was in any case scheduled for retirement, ministry officials pointed out. But sources said Cheysson has expressed willingness to leave him in place as long as possible to avoid the impression of chopping off heads in an unseemly way. Another consideration, they said, is that Vernier-Palliez is scheduled to remain as president-general director of Renault until the end of the year.

As chief executive at Renault, Vernier-Palliez has fled Paris society with determination. His associates say he enjoys opera in the evening and horseback riding on his days off but shies away from the demands of entertainment and social dinners.

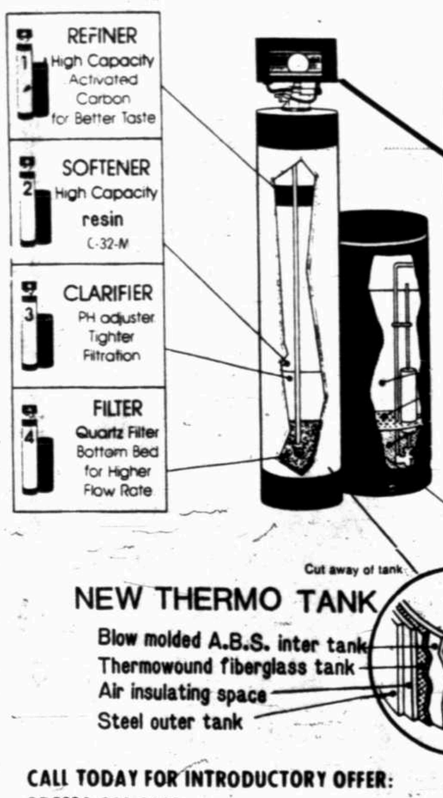

Although his appointment as Renault's top manager had to be approved by the government — Giscard's at the time — Vernier-Palliez has never been involved in politics, a Renault spokesman reported. Foreign Ministry officials said, however, that he knows Mitterrand and Cheysson from professional meetings and seminars in which the three participated.

French diplomatic appointments traditionally remain within the professional corps more than in the United States, although appointments outside of what the ministry calls "the career" are not extraordinary. Vernier-Palliez's appointment, expected to be announced officially after an agreement from Washington, thus aroused little open controversy here.

It came, however, as part of a shuffle that affected about 50 jobs, including some of the most prestigious that went to nondiplomats such as Vernier-Palliez. Among these is Francis Gutman, who has been in business since leaving the Foreign Ministry in 1957.

Workmen buff statues of Gen. Douglas McArthur and Philippines Brig. Gen. Carlos Romulo, currently foreign minister of his country. The statues are part of a memorial on the beach at Palo, the Philippines, where McArthur waded ashore in 1944 to keep a vow to recapture the island from Japan. On Oct. 20, McArthur and his allied troops will be honored.

McArthur is revered and idolized

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

PALO, Philippines (AP) — A lifelike monument of the late Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur wading ashore here in Leyte to liberate the Philippines from Japan in World War II usually attracts more Japanese war veterans than Americans.

But on Tuesday, when scores of Filipinos, Americans and Australians honor MacArthur and his 200,000 allied troops who started landing on this central Philippine island of Leyte on Oct. 20, 1944, only a small group of Japanese will take part in the program, including Japan's ambassador to the Philippines.

Some bitterness remains here after 37 years.

"There are hard feelings among those who remember the cruelty and now feel we are victims of the Japanese economy," said Gus Arnaiz, part owner of a newspaper in nearby Tacloban, the provincial capital where MacArthur set up his liberation headquarters and re-established the Philippines government under the late President Sergio Osmena.

Arnaiz drives a World War II vintage American jeep but recently had to replace its engine with a Japanese brand.

Younger residents, many two generations away from the war, have no memories of the Japanese occupation or the MacArthur landing, however.

"MacArthur? All we know is the name of Mac Arthur Park," said a 13-year-old Palo schoolgirl interviewed with her classmates in the front row of the town cathedral, site of a liberation hospital.

"We don't know the man," another girl added.

On a dusty corner across the street, the Palo public library has 3,170 books, most of them contributed by Palo's sister city, Palo Alto, Calif. But the library has no books about World War II, no pictures of MacArthur, no trace of Palo's one great moment in history.

The $1.3 million MacArthur memorial, completed by the government in 1977, is just a few steps from the Palo Beach, 350 miles south of Manila. It includes figures of MacArthur, Osmena and five other men, all 1½ times life size, caught in midstep in water. The monument is in a pool with a wave-making machine.

Not even the memorial's sculptor, Filipino Anastacio Caedo, can identify all seven figures. He did the sculptures from photographs of the landing.

Caedo said he wanted to make them of brass but there wasn't time or funds to get them ready for the 1977 anniversary, so he did them in reinforced concrete with a metallic olive-drab paint.

He also spent eight months building a giant landing barge for a backdrop as it appears in the actual photographs and had it shipped in pieces from his Manila studio. Imelda Marcos, the Philippines first lady, who is from the nearby town of Tolosa, ordered it torn down just before the unveiling because she said the monument should honor men not barges

Caedo, who friends say "cried like a baby" over the barge's destruction, said he still feels the memorial is not as good as it might have been.

"It's incomplete, as if they walked up out of the sea," he said.

One figure that can be identified is Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, now the Philippines' 82-year-old foreign minister, who appears in a helmet behind MacArthur.

Romulo, on MacArthur's staff as the general waited in Australia to fulfill his promise to return to the Philippines, is unable to attend the ceremony Tuesday because he will be attending the North-South summit with President Ferdinand E. Marcos in Cancun, Mexico.

The memory of MacArthur still pays dividends for U.S.-Filipino relations, Romulo said in an interview in New York.

"We owe him a debt of gratitude that we cannot forget. His name is revered and idolized in the Philippines," Romulo said.

He recalled that there were still Japanese snipers in the trees on the day of the landing but "that did not deter Gen. MacArthur from wading to the beach" where he broadcast his return via shortwave radio.

"People of the Philippines," MacArthur said, "by the grace of God, the American forces have returned to liberate you from the enemy."

Turkish political parties dissolved

ANKARA, Turkey — The National Security Council, which has been governing Turkey since a military coup last year, dissolved all political parties Friday and seized their assets.

The surprise action followed the announcement of the names of 160 members of the Consultative Assembly, which had been seen as the first step towards the promised restoration of democracy.

Although the military junta had suspended political party activities immediately after the Sept. 12, 1980 coup, only the extremist parties had been expected to be banned.

The conservative Justice Party, led by deposed Premier Suleyman Demirel, and he more liberal Republican Peoples Party, headed until the coup by Buelent Ecevit, had been expected to survive.

A decree issued Friday, said that the political parties could not be allowed to turn into institutions threatening the state's authority and power.

The decree, called the Law on the Dissolution of the Political Parties, said the parties were being dismantle- "following the adoption a climate suitable for a political life oriented towards the future and not towards the sterile bickerings of the past."

Gen. Kenan Evren, who led the coup, said that the conduct of parties leaders before and after the coup had made their dissolution necessary.

In a televised address, Evren said that the National Security Council was aware that democracy — which the army had promised to restore requires the existence of political parties. He said the promise would be honored.

"But as it is obvious that a new structure built with the debris of a tottered one is doomed to the same fate, we decided that the new and sturdy political structure we are going to erect requires a new constitution and new political parties," he added.

New parties, he said, should learn from the experience and mistakes of the past three decades.

The council's decision was apparently not influenced by the fact that the Republican Peoples Party was started by Kemal Ataturk, the revered founder of the Turkish republic.

Until now, political observers here viewed Ataturk's name as ironclad insurance for the future of the RPP, particularly because Ataturk's legacy of democratic reform is frequently pointed to by the ruling military junta.

The Turkish political scene had been dominated by four parties.

Besides the Republican People Party and the Justice Party, the Islamic fundamentalist National Salvation Party and the National Action Party had also dominated the Turkish political scene.

In all, 11 parties had participated in the last general election held in 1977, but the other seven were mainly pro-Marxist fringe parties left without any deputies in the 450-seat former National Assembly.

The formation of new political parties will probably not come before late next year, when the Consultative Assembly is expected to finish drafting a new constitution.

Iran attacks peace plan

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's foreign minister attacked Saudi Arabia's Middle East peace plan and claimed its supporters have been "charmed" by the United States and Israel, Iran's official Pars news agency said today.

"Unfortunately this plan was not only welcomed by the reactionary forces dependent on the United States but also by some psuedo-revolutionaries of the region as well," Mir Hussein Mousavi was quoted as saying in a Pars interview.

The reference to "reactionaries" was apparently directed at the Arab Persian Gulf states that have have endorsed the eight-point proposal unveiled by Saudi Crown Prince Fahd in August. "Psuedo-revolutionaries" appeared to refer to Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat, who has voiced limited support for the plan.

The statement followed meetings in Tehran between Iranian officials and envoys from Libya and Algeria, two hardliner Arab states that have rejected any acceptance of Israel's right to exist as part of a Mideast settlement.

The Saudi blueprint implies recognition of the Jewish state in return for Israeli withdrawal from all occupied Arab lands and creation of an independent Palestinian state with Arab Jerusalem as its capital. Israel has rejected the plan.

"Those who speak of peaceful coexistence with Israel are in fact charmed by the policies of the United States and Israel and have gotten along with them," Mousavi was quoted as saying.

Thatcher yields nothing to critics

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher yielded nothing to her critics at the ruling Conservative Party convention here, and one newspaper said her hardline stand could cost her the party leadership.

"Mrs. Thatcher's days as leader of the Tory Party are now numbered," Britain's leading business daily, The Financial Times, predicted today in an editorial summing up the convention which ended Friday.

Claiming she "made no attempt to bring the party together," the paper said, "Either she takes her Cabinet seriously or some of them will begin to think of deposition.

"Nearly all the best known names in the cabinet are against her," the paper said. It named Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington, Leader of the House of Commons Francis Pym, Environment Secretary Michael Heseltine and Northern Ireland Secretary James Prior.

The four Cabinet ministers have not directly criticized Mrs. Thatcher in public. But previous press reports have said they are unhappy to varying degrees with her economic policies.

The London Times took another tack, noting that "she made no concessions of substance to her critics," said it was evident throughout the four-day conference that "Mrs. Thatcher has the support of a large majority of (party) activists."

Mrs. Thatcher is half way through a five-year term with her popularity in the country at an all time low.

But she said in a keynote address to convention Friday that she will not turn back from the inflation-fighting tight-money policies which party dissidents fear could spell electoral defeat.

"I will not change just to court popularity," she told a cheering audience of 5,000 party members. "That's not obstinacy, it's sheer common sense."

Sadat leaves widespread legacy

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — An Israeli tennis player on an Egyptian court. An Egyptian musician in concert in Israel. Package tours to the Pyramids with kosher meals. The Egyptian newspaper Al Ahram on sale in Tel Aviv.

These are the first buds on the sapling of peace that Anwar Sadat planted in the wilderness of Arab-Jewish enmity by visiting Israel in 1977, and they may be the most tangible legacy so far of the Egyptian president who was assassinated Oct. 6.

Israelis line up daily at the visa section of the Egyptian Embassy on Basel Street, in residential north Tel Aviv. Twice a week a freighter of Israel's ZIM line sails for the Egyptian port of Alexandria with eggs or fruit, paper or furniture, metal goods or pharmaceuticals.

Israeli publishers have exhibited at the Cairo book fair, and manufacturers paraded goods at this year's trade fair.

The Egyptian contribution to what is known as normalization has been less spectacular, but even that would have been unthinkable four years ago — an Egyptian spending time on a kibbutz, Egyptian tourists in Jerusalem, Egyptian officials discussing agricultural cooperation with Israeli experts.

Some critics complain that Egypt is moving too slowly and reluctantly toward normalization since the two countries signed peace in March, 1979, and the Israelis began withdrawing from the Sinai Peninsula it conquered in the 1967 Middle East war.

For Israelis, normalization is the only nuts-and-bolts product of the treaty that can offset the withdrawal from the strategic Sinai and its oilfields. And despite Egyptian assurances to the contrary, there is widespread fear that as soon as Israel completes its withdrawal from the Sinai in April and has no more cards to deal in negotiations, normalization will disintegrate.

"From the start there was more talk than action," comments the Jerusalem Post. "Trade relations never seemed to get going. Cultural exchanges remained an Israeli idea. Even tourism resulted in many Israelis visiting Egypt, but few Egyptians coming to Israel."

The Israeli government faces a dilemma. On the one hand it knows it cannot rush Egypt into normal relations. On the other hand, Prime Minister Menachem Begin has banked his prestige on the peace process, and palpable gains from normalization are his only hope of selling peace to a skeptical Israeli public.

Dr. Eliahu Ben-Eliassar, Israel's first ambassador to Cairo, sees psychological barriers still to be overcome.

Greek elections will be close

By PHILIP DOPOULOS
Associated Press Writer

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The Greek national elections today will be a close race between left and right that will determine whether this Mediterranean nation retains its NATO membership and close ties with the United States.

Although Greece has 14 political parties, a revised proportional representation system, favors the two largest: the conservative New Democracy party and the Panhellenic Socialist Movement (PASOK).

Under the system, designed to prevent splintering, the number of parliamentary seats allocated do not correspond to the percentage of the popular vote won.

Premier George Rallis' New Democrats have campaigned during the 45-day pre-electoral period for keeping the nation's armed forces within the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, continued membership in the European Common Market and close ties with the United States.

PASOK leader Andreas Papandreou, 62, has pledged if elected to end Greek membership in NATO, hold a referendum to determine whether Greece should remain in the Common Market and shut down American military installations in Greece.

Greece provides a base for the U.S. Navy 6th Fleet.

Opinion polls published two weeks ago in newspapers opposed to New Democracy showed that PASOK would win an absolute majority in Parliament. However, pro-government dailies published results of a privately conducted survey Saturday showing New Democracy would win 44 percent of the popular vote — enough to form a government.

The pro-Moscow Communist Party of Greece (KKE) could play a deciding role if Papandreou is unable to win an absolute majority in the 300-member single chamber Parliament. But Papandreou, former chairman of the economics department of the University of California at Berkeley, has privately said he would not cooperate with the Communists to form a government.

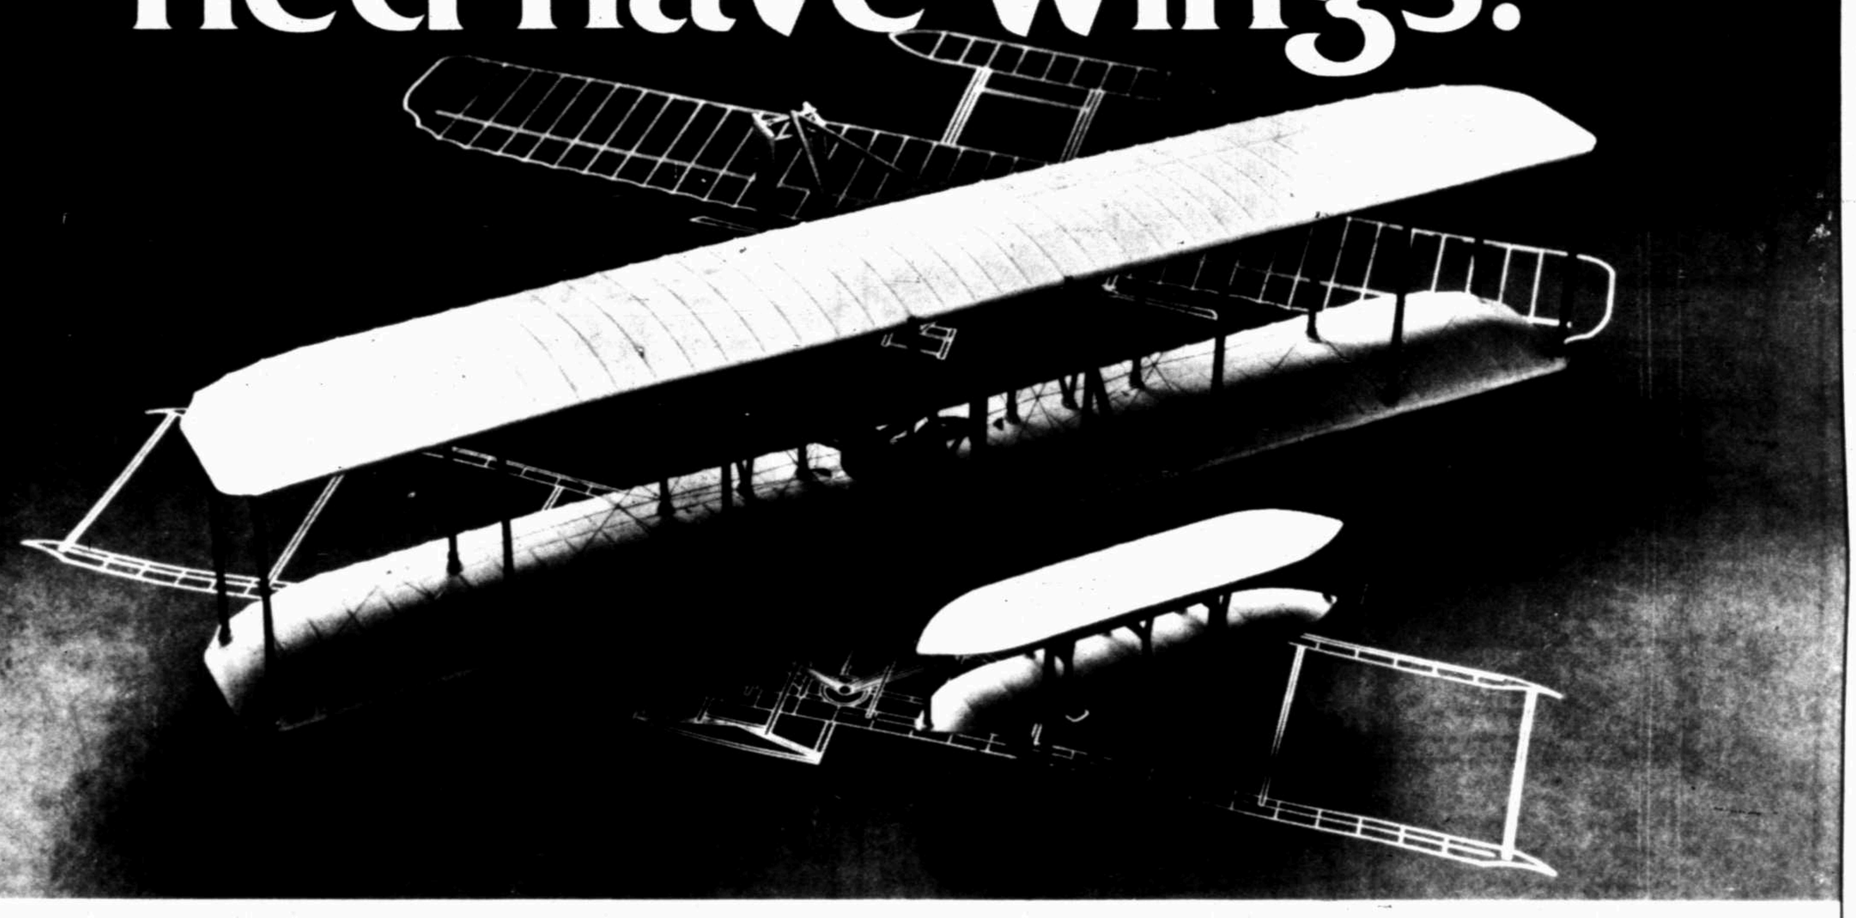

Rallis, 62, has predicted the New Democrats will either improve their chances at the polls or receive the same 42 percent of the popular vote they won in the 1977 elections to get 171 seats in Parliament.

Moderate or center parties are not expected to receive a significant share of the popular vote. The center disintegrated in the last elections, the first sign that Greek politics had become polarized.

In addition to choosing a new Parliament that will sit for four years, Greek voters will elect for the first time representatives to the European Parliament in Strasbourg, France. The honorary body is part of the Common Market, which Greece joined last January.

A heavy turnout was expected from the nation's 6.8 million registered voters. Authorities reported trains, planes and ships to the Aegean islands were fully booked as tens of thousands of Athens residents returned to the provinces where they are registered to vote.

Troops airlifted to Chad-Sudan border for self-defense measures

By LISETTE BALOUNY
Associated Press Writer

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Troops are being airlifted to Sudan's western border with Chad, where an estimated 12,000 Libyan soldiers have been entrenched for the past nine months, high-level government officials said Saturday.

"We have no intention of invading Libya, we are only taking self-defense measures," one official, who asked not to be named, told The Associated Press.

"We will have no problem with Libya if Libyan troops are withdrawn from Chad," he said. "Until they withdraw, we will continue to enforce self-defense measures."

Other defense measures cited by the officials were requests for accelerated delivery of arms from the United States and joint Sudanese-American military exercises planned next month.

The exact location of the maneuvers, in which U.S. paratroopers and soldiers are scheduled to train with Sudanese forces, has not been disclosed.

The maneuvers were proposed by President Reagan to demonstrate U.S. readiness to support allies in the Middle East against outside intervention.

Official Sudanese reports charge that Libyan warplanes have been bombing Sudanese border villages regularly as they chase Chadian rebels opposed to the Libyan-backed regime of President Goukouni Oueddi.

The reports said the Libyan planes fired 32 missiles Tuesday and Wednesday around two Sudanese outposts. No casualties were reported.

Sudan's official Suna news agency said Saturday that Sudan had no intention of attacking Libya and was acquiring arms only for defense.

"The current security measures are only for self-defense and the arms which Sudan will obtain from the United States are defensive weapons which Sudan had asked for a long time ago," the agency said.

Sudanese President Gaafar Nimeiri said in an interview Friday he would launch a "guerrilla war" against Libya if Libyan forces in Chad continued to attack Sudanese border villages.

The U.S. State Department said Thursday it was worried that escalating rhetoric would increase tension and the risk of war.

On Saturday, Daniel Arap Moi, chairman of the 50-nation Organization of African Unity, appealed to Nimeiri and to Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy to "exercise extreme restraint."

"War and confilicts among brothers are totaly unjustifiable and unacceptable," Moi said in his message. "It is in the interest of Africa that all necessary avenues for the resolution of this conflict must be explored fully and at any cost"

Most of Western Hemisphere doesn't have free press

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Most nations in the Western Hemisphere do not have a free press, the Inter-American Press Association concluded in its annual report on freedom of expression.

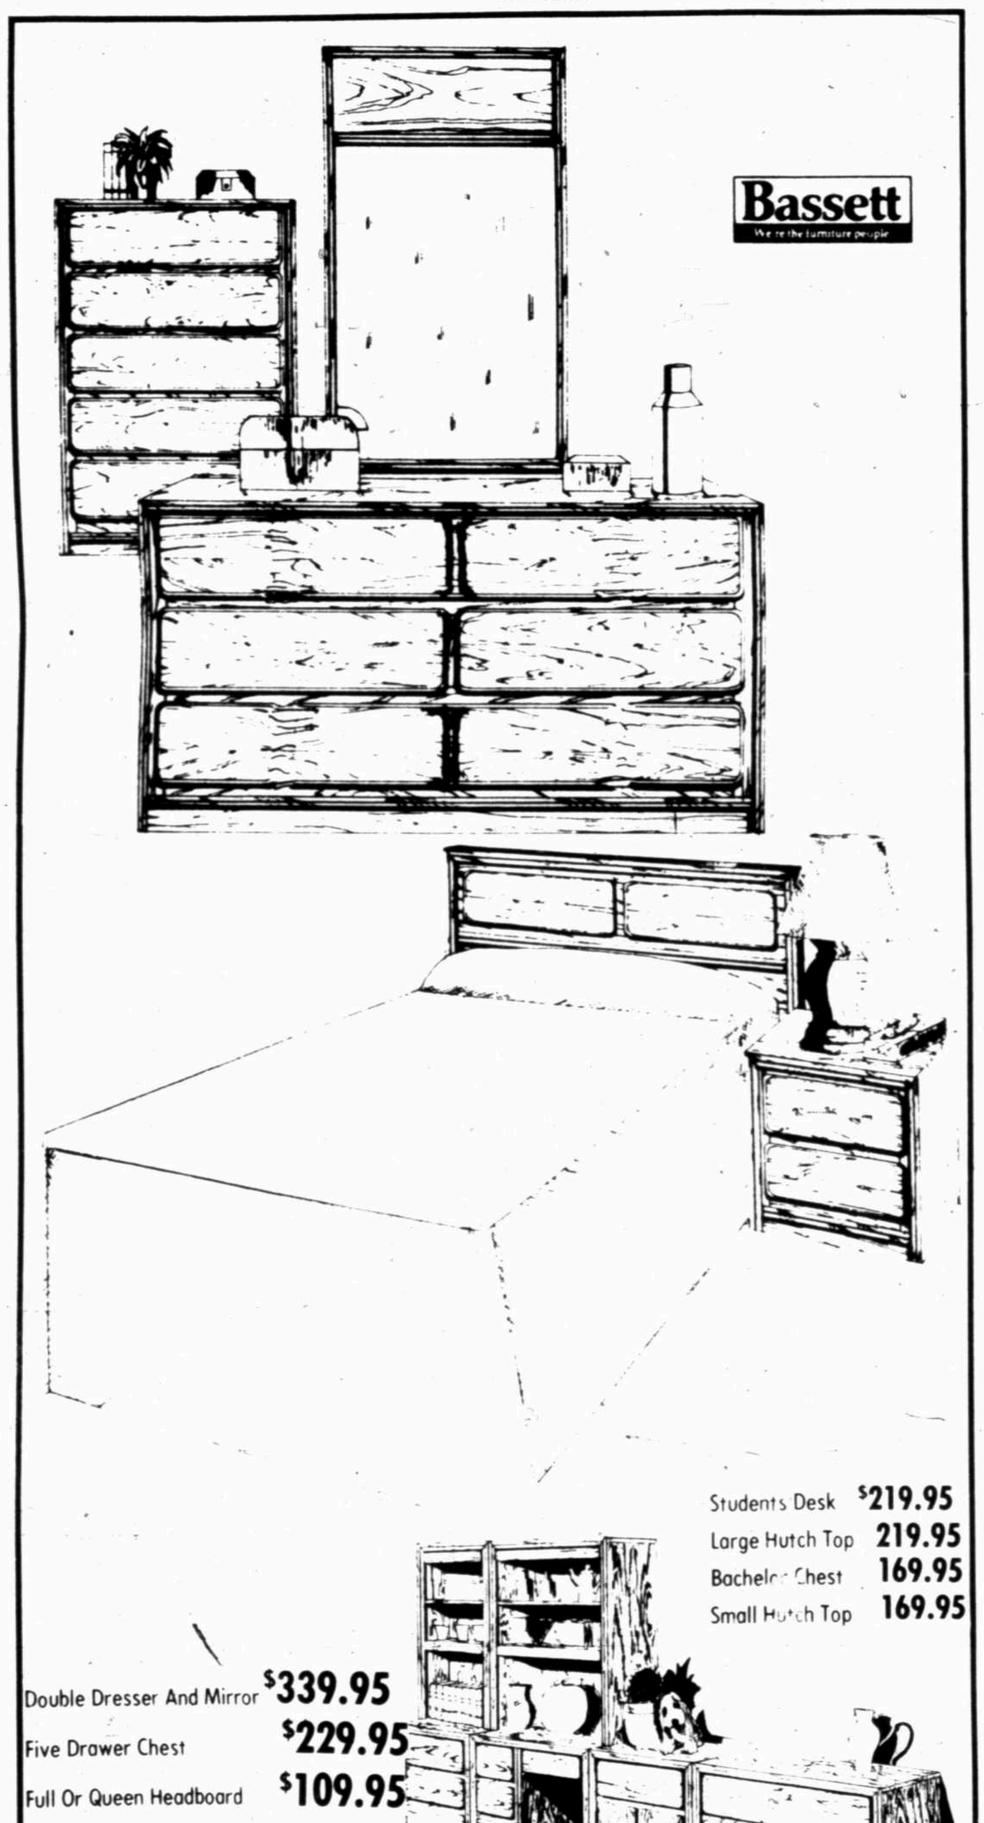

The IAPA issued the report here Friday at the end of its 37th annual meeting.

The IAPA found that many governments directly or indirectly muzzle the press, and that attacks on journalists are frequent in some Central and South American nations.

But even the United States and Canada are not totally free from concerns about restrictions on their press, the IAPA report says.

It expressed concern about the U.S. government's efforts to tighten the Freedom of Information Act, and said Canadian journalists feel their freedom is threatened by the Kent Commission, which they say would permit the government to interfere in editorial matters.

Criticism of the press in Latin America ranged from reports of outright censorship to self-censorship applied by journalists fearful of government retribution.

Hundreds of letters come through the U.S. Postal Service with an address that cannot be forwarded and sometimes cannot be returned for a better address. This letter is typical of the "nixie mail," the term used for the incomplete addressed letters that the Midland post office receives daily.

Special delivery: 'Nixie mail' gets extra attention

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

A little girl sits down to write her grandmother a letter.

She places the letter in a thin-skinned, cream-colored envelope.

It is stamped and addressed "Grandma — Midland, Texas."

This is the type of letter the U.S. Postal Service calls "nixie mail." It is mail that may have only a name, but no street address and no return address. Midland's post office goes to great lengths to forward this mail.

Stan Sartain, director of customer service at the post office, said four to five postal workers put in 40 to 44 hours a day sorting and forwarding mail. In addition, two to three hours a day are devoted to the nixie mail.

"In this particular case, you could see the writer's name through the envelope," Sartain said, referring to the "Grandma" letter. "I looked up the last name in the telephone directory — there were only three — and on the second call I found out the woman had a granddaughter by that name. The post office delivered the letter."

Although many letters come through the post office with just a name and no street address, Sartain said the most common type of nixie mail is the windowed envelope with the address on the statement or payment notice obscured.

"These cause us the most problems," he said.

He explained people will insert checks in the envelope and block out the view of the address on the statement card.

"If we have a bill like this one," Sartain said, holding up a statement with a green blank showing through the window of the envelope, "we can send it to the store because there is a logo. But, which one?"

Most businesses and utilities have a central office for their billing, Sartain explained, but in some cases there may be two or three different regional offices.

"And then people wonder why the business haven't received their payment," he added.

Sartain said banks, businesses and utilities also cause a problem for the post office because they are the "worst" when it comes to "bad addresses — failure to put the complete address."

Midland's post office handles mail for 60 cities and they are not allowed to open first class mail, Sartain said. Consequently, the addresses that cannot be determined are sorted individually by hand. Then it is sent to the "dead letter" section in Dallas. Here, Sartain said the letters are allowed to be opened to identify the mailer. The person who sent the letter is then charged 25 cents when the contents are returned.

"Another problem with this kind of mail is the failure to put postage on the letters," Sartain said. "It's amazing how many people fail to put on the postage."

The post office will not deliver mail without the postage, he said. At one time the utilities would accept bills without postage, "but the utilities were losing so much money they stopped — the sender must pay the postage," Sartain said.

Magazines also are a type of nixie mail, Sartain explained, because there are so many cases when the labels are not attached to the magazine and there is no way to find the owner.

"It mostly happens in the labeling process at the publishers and then in the bundling process at the post office," he said. "If the magazine cover is slick, the label will not stick if the glue is not just right. Too much glue or too little will cause the problem. If a corner is sticking up then it can get torn off," Sartain added.

When people miss their publications, some of them will come to the post office, but many don't. Magazines are kept in the post office anywhere from a few days to 30 days. The leftover magazines are then given to five non-profit organizations.

Physical fitness a part of local deputy's duties

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

"She's progressing well, and I'm very pleased she would put forth the effort to pass this test."

That's Sheriff Dallas Smith's assessment of jailer Josie Estrada — the first woman ever to complete the department's mandatory physical fitness program instituted by Smith in January of 1980.

As part of their job requirements, all members of the force — except clerical help and those 60 years old or more — must take the tests and score at least 70 out of a possible 100 points.

The tests include 40 pushups, 50 situps, running a mile and a half and carrying a person of equal weight a distance of 100 yards.

"A person who fails is given one more chance, then is dismissed — subject to a hearing by a review board composed of (their peers)," said Smith. "They can be harder on a person than we (management) are."

NEW EMPLOYEES must score at least 50 points and are given a year to reach and maintain the 70 mark, with a minimum 5-point gain required each time they take the tests during that year.

Should a doctor decree that a person — new or tenured — is physically unable to do one portion of the testing program or another, the employee is offered such alternatives as bicycling or swimming.

There are no weight or height requirements for employment with the department, but it's assumed a person who's overweight would have difficulty with the fitness regimen, which was put together using Dr. Kenneth H. Cooper's book the new aerobics as a guide and employing the advice of local cardiologist Dr. Brian Mohr.

"We expanded on Cooper's concepts and also consulted with the county attorney on the legality of making the tests mandatory," said Smith.

Due to women generally having shorter legs and less muscle structure, they're allowed to run in the next highest age bracket, according to Capt. Richard Sexton who is in charge of the program.

FOR INSTANCE, a 25-year-old woman would compete in the 30-39 age group. And owing to women being possessed of less upper body strength, the pushup requirement is reduced somewhat.

"We felt (most anyone) could gut out a mile," said Sexton. "So we added an extra two laps. That's the key."

Smith, 39, is considered a hard but fair man to work for and says he's not one to require that other people do something he wouldn't do. Consequently, he takes the tests every three months himself and does so in the youngest age group.

His best time to date on the mile-and-a-half course is 9 minutes, 45 seconds. The department record, set by a man who has since left the force, is 9 minutes, 17 seconds.

"This (the program) is not just to make a good appearance," he said. "It also reduces liability to the county. The risk of having to use deadly force is lessened if an (officer) is able to run someone down or physically restrain him.

"IT PROTECTS innocent bystanders and puts us in a better position to protect the public. The self-discipline involved also carries over into the field and the public sees a more professional officer."

If an employee gets injured or otherwise becomes medically unable to take the tests, he or she is not dismissed. Instead, they're given duties commensurate with their abilities.

About half the deputies spend their own money keeping in shape at a local downtown health spa.

On top of having to stay physically fit, deputies and other department personnel are required to be knowledgeable of current law and to keep abreast of the ever-growing volume of legislation that governs an increasingly complex society.

To wit, Smith also instituted periodic written tests designed to measure legal proficiency. Like the fitness program, the written tests are tied to a person's job.

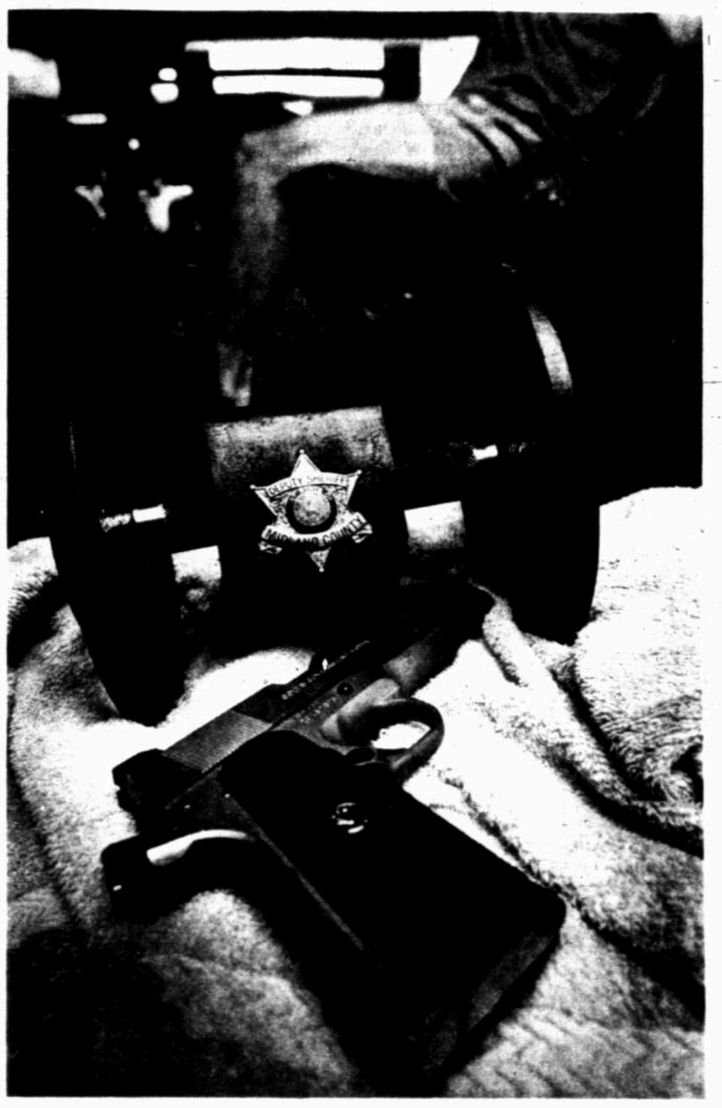

"IF THEY DON'T make the grade, they're out," he said. "We've lost some people over the programs. Some of them didn't want to pay the price. But if they didn't have the self-discipline for the programs, they probably weren't doing such a good job anyway.

"I think they're (the programs) one reason the commissioners and the public have supported pay increases. And knowing the law puts officers on a more even keel with lawyers and judges.

"Officers make fewer mistakes in the field and it's cheaper in the long run with men who know what they're doing.

"The tests aren't meant to make things difficult, but to improve job performance and give taxpayers a better return on their investment.

"I highly recommend that all law enforcement agencies have programs like these because there's such an obvious need for them."

A deputy's duties...

Gone are the days when someone could simply strap on a gun, don a badge and stride forth as a deputy sheriff in Midland County. They must now undergo periodic physical fitness tests, along with written exams on their knowledge of the law, to keep their jobs.

Staff Photo by Paul Gilbert

Although Department of Public Safety recruits go through rigorous training at the DPS Academy in Austin, post-graduation fitness training isn't required, according to Lt. Jimmie Rhoads, director of the agency's safety and education division in Midland.

"There's no real reason, except we're so spread out (across the state)," said Rhoads. "It would be hard to supervise and we don't have the facilities for it."

AND WHILE there's no mandatory fitness program for city officers, Nautilus-like equipment was installed at the police station about 45 days ago, according to Chief of Police Wayne Gideon, who said:

"It's excellent equipment that's available 24 hours a day and is working quite well on a voluntary basis."

Also, other than inservice training on changes in the law and tests to determine eligibility for promotions, DPS troopers and city police alike aren't required to take tests demonstrating their legal proficiency.

Said one ranking city officer:

"There's nothing on a routine basis."

With any kind of luck, this portion of East New Jersey Street near South Lamesa Road will never look this bad when the rains come again. City crews are set to rework the street Monday with gravel and a better grade of caliche after makeshift repairs last month failed to keep it from becoming a quagmire during recent heavy rains. This picture was made Oct. 7.

The name is mud in south Midland

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Heavy rains are of major concern to southside property owners because many of them live and try to do business along unpaved roads that turn into seas of mud during wet weather.

An example is East New Jersey Street near South Lamesa Road. The city recently assumed responsibility for maintaining New Jersey and took a stab at the job by smoothing it out with a layer of caliche last month.

But when the rains started coming two weeks ago, the street looked like something out of a movie depicting western life in the 1800s: muddy ruts six inches deep in places.

Assistant Public Works Director Mike Butler got a firsthand taste of the situation when he went out to check on complaints from business owners Oct. 7.

"Yeah, I got stuck and slid up and down for a while," he said.

One irate businessman commented: "Whatever they put out there was wrong. Just look at it."

According to Butler, the problem lay in the fact the city tried to get by with using low grade pit caliche until money became available for better road materials.

That money apparently has materialized, as city crews are scheduled to start re-doing the street Monday. "We'll try to stabilize it with gravel and better caliche to keep it from becoming a quagmire," said Butler.

Meanwhile, the only permanent solution for residential and commercial property owners who find themselves in similar ruts is to band together and partake of the city's assessment paving program.

"We're gearing up for another one now," said Butler. "There's still time to get in on it."

The program calls for residents to pay up to 75 percent of the cost of paving their streets, with the city picking up the remaining 25 percent. Owners of commercial property are required to pay 90 percent of the cost, according to City Engineer George Medley.

Residents and business owners alike get billed for the full cost of curb and gutter work, however. Both street and gutter work is billed according to how much frontage any given piece of land has along the street.

One-fifth of the cost is due on completion of the work. The balance can be paid out over a four-year period at 8 percent simple interest.

Although the city doesn't require a set number of requests for participation in any one area, Medley indicated that the more who agree to participate, the better chance they have of council approval.

Fun-filled festival

Festival attracts artists and craftsmen

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

To some, they are bookkeepers, carpenters, concrete workers, even grave diggers.

But don't let that fool you — for inside lurks a creative spark that sometimes explodes to reveal submerged qualities of the human experience.

Then they are no longer laborers; they are artists.

They came en force Saturday to Asbury United Methodist Church's Fall Festival at the Midland County Exhibit Building, displaying the manifestations of their creativity: quilts, ceramics, cakes, paintings, sculptures, photographs.

Their creations sometimes blossom as a result of hobbies, as in the case of L.H. Hight of Odessa, who saw in his regular backpacking activities an opportunity to delve into the arts.

"I do a lot of hiking and backpacking and photography sort of goes right along with that," said Hight, who displayed numerous color photographs of wilderness areas such as Guadalupe Mountains National Park and the Cloudcroft, N.M., area.

Hight backpacks the Guadalupes with frequency, and has captured on color film many of the rugged qualities that have made the national park such a hiking attraction.

"It's a lot of fun — a hobby to go along with getting out in the wilderness," explained Hight, who has photographed the outdoors for the past 10 years.

Pete Sander's creative urge, meanwhile, has found manifestation in hand-made knives. The Big Spring resident, who says he couldn't retire when he tried a couple of years ago because people kept wanting him to make items, displayed hand-crafted knives representative of his six-years' endeavor into the field.

"I started out making four knives, tempering my own steel and using deer horns for the handles," he explained. "I sold 'em and they seemed to work real well for hunting, because the buyers told their buddies about 'em and first thing I knew I had requests for more."

Because of the problems with tempering metal, Sanders now buys pretempered steel from which he forms blades. He describes the weapons as "real slow sellers" at the arts and crafts shows he and his wife frequent. But he has no plans for abandoning his enterprise.

"I tried to retire a couple of years ago but they keep calling me back," he said.

Dana Cox of Hobbs, N.M., meanwhile, is literally an artist whose worked his way up right from the bottom. Prior to the explosion that made him into a crafter of exquisitely designed seashell figures, his creativity lay dormant while he labored as a grave digger and builder of burial vaults. But nine months ago, that all ended, he hopes, and now he runs his own gift shop in Hobbs and sells his own creations.

In a short while his success in creating human-like figures from small seashells has given him confidence.

"If they can come up with the idea, I can make it," he said.

His first seashell creation was of a welder, done at the request of a welder's wife, while his second was of a rodeo rider astride a bucking bronc. His most ambitious project to date — a complete orchestra replete with instruments and musicians — was on display Saturday.

"It took me 40 hours' work," explained Cox, noting that the organ alone required 3½ hours. "Once the organ was on the base (of Brazilian manganita wood), there was just no problem. If you can relate the shells to the human experience, you have no trouble."

The orchestra composed of 30 different kinds of shells includes other instruments such as guitars, saxaphone, flute, drums, bongos, tuba and French horn.

"Everything on it's a shell except for the eyeballs and metal strings," Cox explained.

He has set his goals even higher — all the way to the top of the world. His next creation of shells, he says, will be a miniature Mt. Everest, complete with climbers, ropes and gear, all mounted on a chunk of lava.

But one shouldn't be surprised that his creative endeavors — like those of other artists — should seek the most lofty heights. After all, when you've lingered at the bottom of a grave for years, what other direction is there to go?

Firm not 'horsing around' with computer module

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

It tells everything you've always wanted to know about the sex life of a brood mare (*but were afraid to ask).

In fact, it may tell you more than you'd ever want to know, unless you're a quarter horse breeder who takes advantage of this miracle of modern-day technology — computerized horse breeding.

Developers of this copyrighted "horse management module," described as the only equipment-program package of its kind in existence, are O. "K." Brock and Cliff Buchanan of Superior Software Services, Inc., of Midland. And through it, they believe, the ill-defined notes, guesswork, chance and vague hopes for championship-caliber racehorses will evolve into a well-delineated system.

"The ability to take voluminous data and pull it together to give you an overall picture of a horse is the most important aspect to the horse breeder," noted Buchanan.

The genesis of SSS's horse management module — actually a computer program which sells outright for $20,000 or rents on a per-usage basis — occured in October 1980 when SSS was undertaking its primary business concern: performing data processing functions for oil and gas operators. Its client on that occasion was Circle Seven Production Company, which is active in quarterhorse breeding through its Circle Seven Quarterhorses, Inc. Buchanan and CSQ's Daryl Atkins began discussing possibilities of developing a horse module, and it evolved into a detailed, workable computer program system in time for the start of breeding season in February.

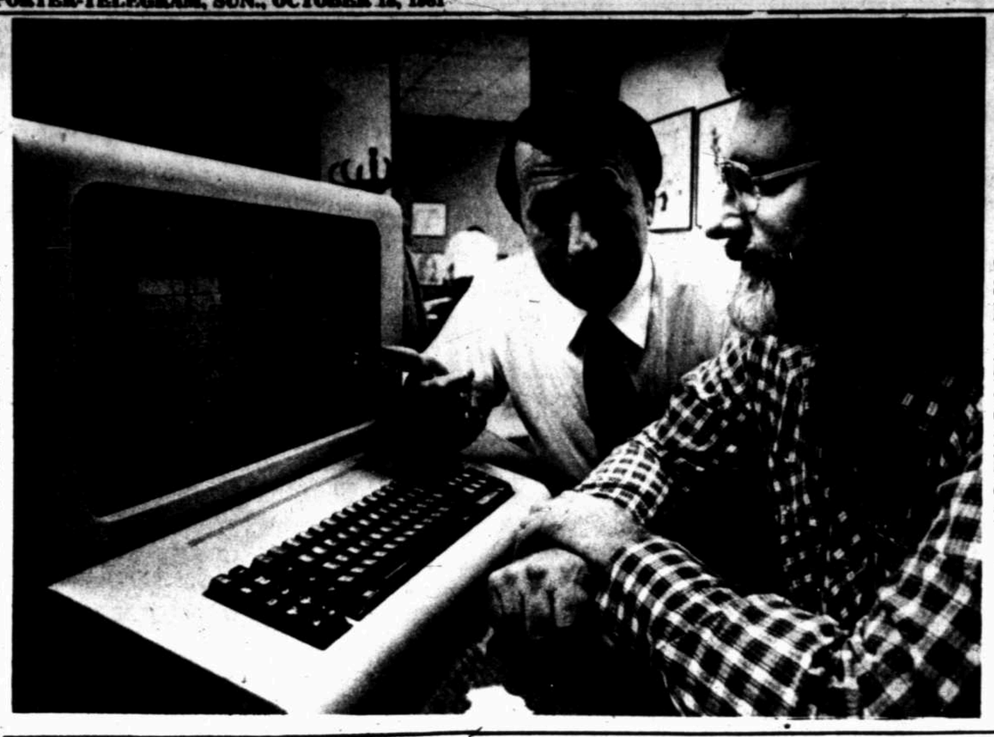

While in the past, many horse breeding operations have been based on sketchy records, SSS's module attempts to define it into an exact science that keeps clients who purchase it up-to-date on all aspects of a particular breeding mare's sex life.

Included in the module are bins which can contain information on a mare's registration and ownership record, health care record, palpation-teasing record, and fertility exam record. Furthermore, with the artificial insemination procedures that have come to rule quarter horse breeding in recent years, the computer can calculate just how many mares an individual collection of semen can inseminate effectively, as well as the volume of extender needed to be added.

Through such exact record-keeping available at the push of a few video display terminal keys, breeders are able to determine exactly when a mare should be inseminated.

CSQ is SSS's only horse management module client at present, but with the continued advance of the scientific age Brock and Buchanan see a great potential for expansion of the system. They note that even a small-time breeding operation situated in a remote area could make use of the module. All that is needed, they say, is a telephone line connecting a video display terminal at the breeding location to SSS's Midland-based IBM 34 computer.

"We feel like there's value here for people who are managing a sizable investment and...need exact record keeping," noted Brock. "We think the need for detailed information will continue to grow over the years."

O. "K." Brock, left, discusses Superior Software Services' horse management module with programmer Cliff Buchanan. The computerized system may revolutionize horse breeding operations in the future, they believe.

Bill Sanders, an Odessa teacher, demonstrates several of his classroom activities at one of the 20 table sessions of the Texas Council for the Social Studies convention held in Midland Center. The convention, which ended Saturday, drew around 460 participants from all over the state.

Social studies teachers' meeting ends with workshops, discussions

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

With around 460 teachers and administrators participating in the 29th annual Texas Council for the Social Studies convention, the theme of "Social Studies Education: The Fourth 'R', Responsibility" was concluded with several workshops, section meetings and table sessions Saturday.

Over 20 different tables were set up on the main floor of Midland Center by teachers from local and state school districts wishing to share projects and ideas that have been employed successfully in their classrooms.

The different exhibits ranged from films to an erupting volcano to a small black gerbil named "Dinky."

The gerbil, compliments of Midland teacher Nancy Trammel, was one of three such pets that reside in her Sam Houston kindergarten class. In her booth, titled "Your Best Bet: Own a Pet," Ms. Trammel displayed a story board her students made up telling how Dinky was walking through the woods when he was bitten by a snake. Dinky was rushed in a helicopter to a hospital where he was treated and released. The booth also contained a maze that was made entirely by the kindergarteners for their gerbils.

Bill Sanders, a fourth-grade teacher in Odessa, headed "Suggestions from Sanders." His table included salt maps of continents and islands that his students had made earlier this year. The students will make additions to the maps continuously throughout the year, he said. As the students learn about different characteristics of geographic regions, such as deserts and rivers, they will draw in the features.

Sanders also displayed a volcano that was made by his students during their study of mountainous areas. The volcano actually sparks and sizzles when ammonium dichromate is lit by a match.

Photographs illustrating a luau, complete with songs, dances and the eruption of three volcanoes, were displayed at Sanders' table. The students participated in the luau as part of their studies on Hawaii.

Simple slides easily used in a projector were made by his students on different areas in their studies and were presented in the classroom. The frames of the slides were made with the backs of Big Chief notebooks and the slide was simply drawn in with felt tip pens on onion-skin typing paper.

Vincent Becker, an Odessa sixth-grade teacher, demonstrated his way of teaching students the importance of handling money responsibly. At his table he showed how he divided his classroom into three "cities": Lockerville, Centerville and Windowville.

Students can buy different companies in the towns, such as the restroom, the library or the pencil sharpener. Each time a student wishes to do business with one of the companies, he must pay the owner a specified amount of "money."

Weekly and daily passes may be bought to allow the holder of the pass access to the facilities. The passes save the students money, but they may only be purchased in the morning before class.

The students earn money through the grades they make in class. Students are given dollar amounts instead of grades for their work. For example, Becker said if a child makes a 95 on a paper, he is given $95.

The students also can make extra money by building projects and selling them to other students. As an example, Becker displayed a pen holder that a student had made. According to Becker, students also are paid for "tutor services." If a child is having problems with his schoolwork, he can employ another student to help him.

Fines are issued by an elected police force for such crimes as a messy desk ($200), horseplay ($100) and fighting ($200).

The students learn how to write checks and also have a savings account. At the end of the semester, Sanders said the students are taught how to figure their income taxes, complete with a comparable interest rate.

Tax board to meet

The Midland County Tax Appraisal board of directors will be in session at 9 a.m. Wednesday to discuss personnel policies, and to open bids for janitorial services and for automobiles.

The board will meet in the Commissioners' Courtroom on the second floor of the Midland County Courthouse.

The board represents revenue concerns of the six taxing entities in the county and governs the operation of Chief Appraiser Virgil Jones Jr.'s 25-member staff office.

The appraisal office is headquartered in Dellwood Shopping Mall.

Session called

Midland County commissioners will call a special session at 2:45 p.m. Monday to meet with Midland Chamber of Commerce's Grant Billingsley on industrial revenue bond applications of the Midland Industrial Corporation.

The commissioners will be meeting on the second floor of the Midland County Courthouse.

Teachers urged to aid gifted students

'Einsteins of future' in educators' hands,' speaker says

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

With a warning that "the Einsteins of our future are here in Midland as in classrooms elsewhere," Dr. Irving Sato, director of the National/State Leadership Training Institute on the Gifted and Talented, stressed the importance of helping gifted students achieve their full potential.

"You must ask yourself, 'What will happen to that bright boy on the fourth row if I know he is gifted and I don't do anything to make any kind of significant changes in his life?'" Sato told the 800 people gathered in the Lee High School auditorium for the GEM inservice program Friday.

According to Sato, teachers must never assume that whatever program for the gifted the child is in is adequate. "The gifted child is in the regular classroom most of the time," he said. "We can't expect the kid to just turn on and off."

He defined a gifted child as one who excels consistently or shows the potential to excel consistently.

Consistency is the key term, Sato said. "Every human is special and unique, but there is a vast difference in saying every human is talented consistently."

A gifted person can be consistently talented in any or a combination of four areas: academics, creativity, kinetics and psycho-social.

Teachers must treat that student as a gifted child in terms of time and energy devoted to the student, Sato said. "The Gifted and Talented programs receive one-hundredth of the funds that the handicapped program receives from the federal government," he noted. "We must uncover, nurture and develop our most valuable source (for the future)."

These students could become outstanding psychiatrists, missionaries, or members of the Peace Corps, he said.

"The gifted have a tremendous compassion for their fellow man and they will give and give and give."

According to a recent survey, 20 percent of the high school dropouts are gifted and talented, Sato said. And that is where the problem is — not recognizing the abilities of these students.

Remember that things that are exciting or interesting to regular students may not be stimulating to the gifted students, he warned, adding that alternative assignments should be made for the talented students to keep them from becoming bored.

"Every one of us in this room has the potential for being the influencer (for these gifted children)," Sato said.

Besides being committed to serving the needs of the gifted students as well as those who are not, Sato said there must be communication between the gifted and their teachers and parents. As an example, he used a poem written by a young girl that ended with the line, "and the things I write are corrected, but no one reads them."

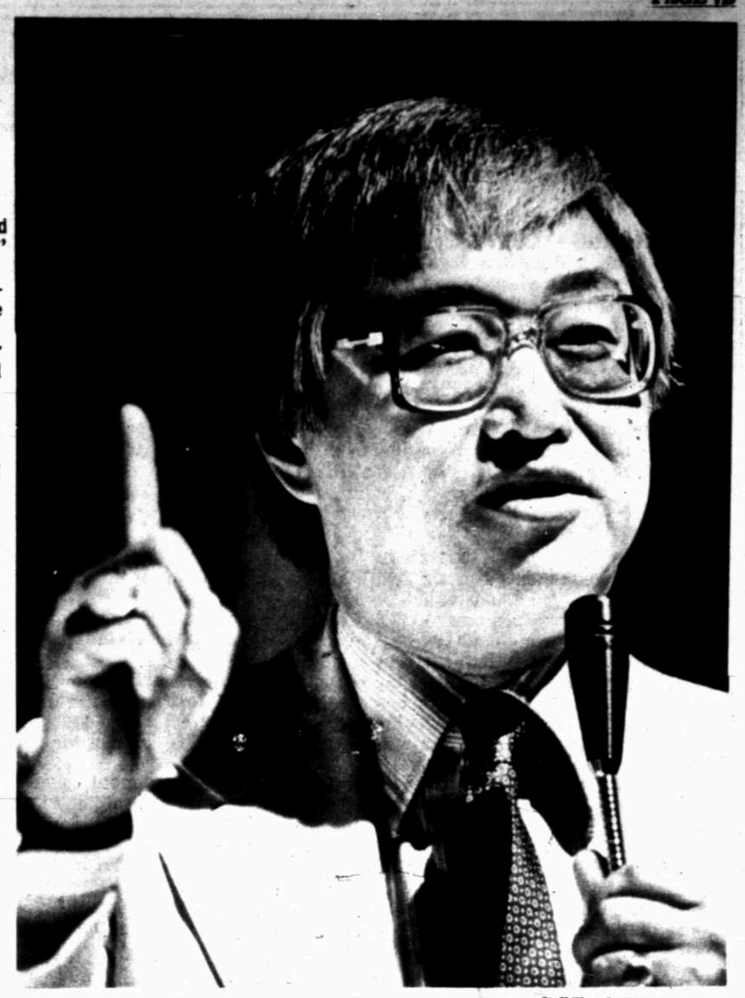

Sato said that, in effect, children possessing special gifts must have someone to direct them in putting these talents to use. "We must respond to help people with high potential," he stressed. "If we don't, who will?"

He said the thought that they can make it on their own is a myth. "For every Einstein we know of, there are several that don't make it."

But, he continued, "We need to back off and keep quiet some of the time.

"A false assumption is that unless we tell kids what to do (all of the time), they can't do anything," he said.

"Timing is so important."

Challenging the 800 Midland teachers and administrators who attended the GEM inservice program on Friday, Dr. Irving Sato, director of the National/State Leadership Training Institute for Gifted and Talented, stressed the importance of meeting the needs of the gifted students in regular classrooms. "For every Einstein we know of, there are several that don't make it," he said.

Cathy Ann Olsen, 17, a senior at Lee High School, has been named Junior Lioness of the Week by the Downtown Lions Club. Apartment group meets Wednesday

Wesley Schreiber of Dallas, a regional vice president of the National Apartment Association, will speak to the Midland Apartment Association when the group meets at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday in Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Schreiber has been in business for 25 years in Texas and has been involved in multi-family housing, commercial, residential offices and shopping centers.

He owns multi-family housing in Fort Worth, Dallas, Waxahachie, Waco and operates under Schreiber Investments, Inc.

Schreiber has been president for two years of the Heart of Texas Apartment Association, regional vice president for two years of the National Apartment Association, chairman for two years of the Texas Apartment Association membership committee, on the board of directors for five years of the National Association, and director of the National Association of Home Builders.

Further information about the meeting can be obtained by telephoning Sharon Howland, 694-1646.

State veterans group to gather in Lubbock

LUBBOCK — The Texas Department of the China-Burma-India Veterans' Association will hold its fall reunion at the Holiday Inn in Lubbock Oct. 30-Nov. 1.

The CBIVA is made up of members of the armed foces who served in the China-Burma-India Theater during World War II. There are a number of CBIVA servicemen who live in the West Texas area, but this is a statewide reunion.

The meeting will be hosted by the Lubbock chapter, of which Harry Herber, 4503 78th St., Lubbock, is commander.

The CD for All Savers...From First National

Now, First National offers a program for "all savers" to enjoy savings with high interest yield plus a tax benefit. It's called the All Savers Certificate of Deposit.

Here's how it works: From now until December 31, 1982, you may invest as little as $500 in a First National All Savers CD for a maturity of one year. During that year, interest earned by the CD may be excluded from your taxable income up to a maximum $2,000 for couples filing joint tax returns, $1,000 for those filing separately. The current annual rate is 12.14%.

The interest rate on the CD will change every 4 weeks, but the rate in effect at the time you invest is fixed for the full one year term. Although the interest rate is not compounded, you may receive interest payments monthly, quarterly or upon maturity. If the CD principal is withdrawn prior to maturity, the tax exclusion is forfeited and there is substantial penalty. Deposits are insured by the FDIC.

Compare First National's All Savers Certificate to other investment alternatives, consider your tax plan, then visit one of our CD representatives in our main lobby.

Wallace Ranch holding annual sale

BIG SPRING — The Wallace Ranch, which has been breeding Hereford cattle for 41 years, will hold its Eighth Annual Production Sale of quality livestock Saturday at the ranch 10 miles northeast of Big Spring off of Texas Highway 350 (Snyder Highway).

The sale will feature 48 registered Hereford bulls, two Longhorn bulls and a select group of Hereford heifers.

The sale begins at 12:30 p.m. Lunch will be served prior to the sale.

The Wallace Ranch is billed as producing "One of the Largest Straight Bred Herds in America."

Leland and Gerald Marie Wallace, who are hosting the sale, place emphasis on the Anxiety 4th blood line in their cattle at their 41st Anniversary Production Sale.

Horses 'big business' in area

Horses are big business in Texas and in Midland, according to Willie Stumberg, Midland County extension agent.

Midland County pastures 5,157 of the more than 62,000 horses in the 21-county area which makes up the Texas Agricultural Extension Service's Far West Extension District.

Throughout the United States, more than 8 million horses are in backyard pastures, country estates, ranches, rangeland, free territory, race tracks and breeding farms. The horse industry generates an estimated $13 billion business nationwide, and horse owners spend about $6 billion for feed, equipment, drugs and services.

In Midland County, the investment in horses and equipment, such as lodging, trailers, and riding wear and leathers is about $39 million. Store-bought feed, including hay and grains, and pasture forage amounts to more than $7 million.

The monthly feed bill for the county's 5,157 horses easily can run up to $644,000.

Horse owners are loyal to their equine friends, Stumberg observed, and the horses serve a special function in their lives and in the lives of others.

Risks of farming pointed out

COLLEGE STATION — When it comes to risk and uncertainty, farmer should be at the head of the line.

"Managing a modern farm operation in today's complex and risky world is no easy task," said Dr. James Ahrenholz, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "Farmers face ever-changing conditions in the weather, market place and their total environment that make their business a gamble."

Major sources of risk include production and yield risk, market and price risk, weather risk, business and financial risk, technology and obsolescence risk, casualty loss risk, social and legal risk and human risk.

"The key to coping with the uncertainties of agriculture is the risk-taking attitude of the farmer himself — how he views risk," said the economist.

Juicy season in store for citrus

AUSTIN — The 1981-82 citrus season promises to be a juicy one for Texas citrus growers, according to Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown.

Grapefruit production is expected to rise by 57 percent, and oranges should be up 25 percent over that of last year.

"Barring an unforeseen weather calamity, it looks like the citrus industry will be back on its feet this season," said Brown. Groves in the Lower Rio Grande Valley have been recuperating from a serious freeze which occurred in 1978-79 and from the 1980 Hurricane Allen which damaged some groves.

Orange production is projected at 3.3 million boxes. Valencias may yield 2.1 million boxes.

Recent rains help grain, hinder cotton

COLLEGE STATION — Recent rains will delay cotton harvesting but will boost small grains and range grasses, according to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Cotton yields in the Midland area and Far West Texas are projected at one-half bale to the acre.

Farm bill deliberation falls off

LUBBOCK — Sporadic on-again, off-again U.S. House of Representatives consideration of the 1981 farm bill plowed into another stump late last week.

The House leadership failed to secure passage of an "acceptable" peanut- and sugar-support program, gave up for awhile on getting a final vote and pulled the bill off the floor. Likely, the bill will be back before the Congressmen by Tuesday.

The Congressmen did agree on the cotton program, which would set the base loan each year at 85 percent of the median of the past five years U.S. spot-market price or 90 percent of the July 1-Oct. 15 average of Northern European prices. The loan would be based on the lower price.

The cotton bill parallels the Senate bill, as does a provision abolishing the disaster program in all counties except those where all-risk federal crop insurance is not offered.

Center issues weather reports

COLLEGE STATION — Texas farmers have an ally in the Agricultural Weather Service Center of the National Weather Service at Texas A&M University.

The center issues daily agricultural advisories over radio stations and networks to help farmers and ranchers cope with weather-related matters.

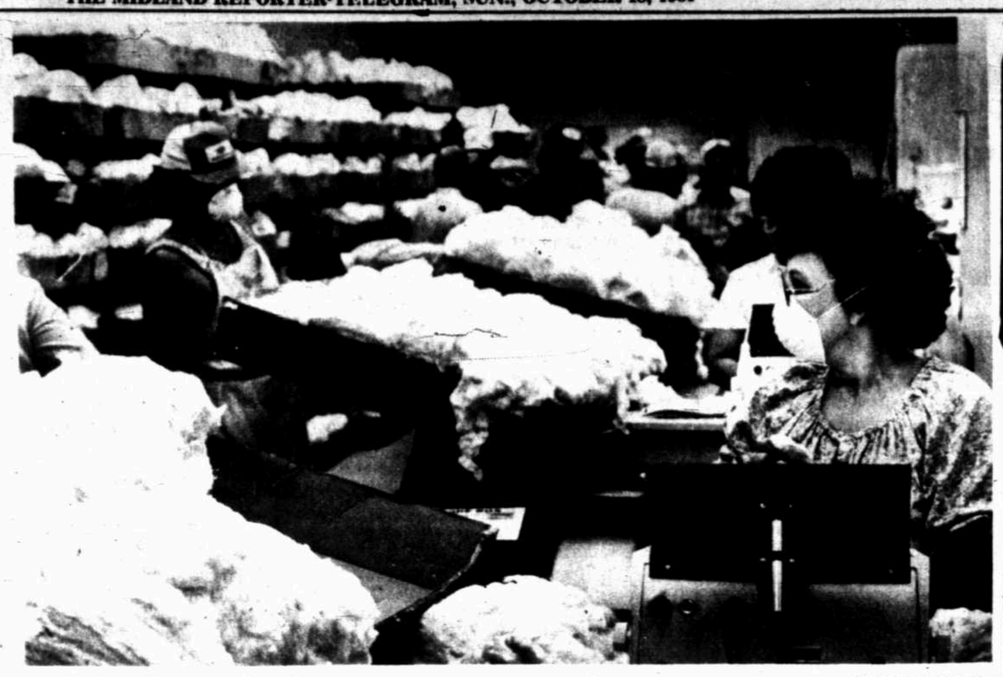

Advisories combine agricultural and weather data to inform producers about various operations such as planting, fertilizing, spraying, irrigating, and harvesting.

Retail food prices rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail food prices over the last two years rose the fastest in the South and West, says an Agriculture Department analyst.

From July 1979 to July 1981, prices paid for food bought in grocery stores nationally went up an average of 15.3 percent, says Paul G. Westcott of the department's Economic Research Service.

"Prices in the southern and western states rose 16 and 16.6 percent, respectively," Westcott said in a report Friday.

Area farmers won't be outclassed when it comes to classing cotton

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

ABILENE — St. Lawrence-Midkiff cotton farmers rightly figure that they can't do too much about the weather outside of praying.

But about 30 out of the 250 or so area cotton producers got together to try to do something more or less within their influence: classing cotton.

They took a trip to Abilene last Thursday to check out the government's wherewithal in classing and grading their cotton. Cotton classing, next to the marketplace, determines what the farmers get for their fluffy cotton lint, and the farmers want what they figure they deserve: more cash for their crop.

They rode over to Abilene to help themselves.

"Well, you can tell it's wet over at St. Lawrence," farmer Clifford Hoelscher told B.B. Manly Jr., area director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's cotton-classing office here. "We got nothing else to do."

AGRICULTURE

TRUTH WAS, the recent rains did put a damper on harvesting. And St. Lawrence-Midkiff farmers felt that looking over the government's cotton-classing operation might be a fairly productive thing to do on a rain-prone day.

Besides, as Frank Evridge, president of the St. Lawrence Cotton Growers Association, noted, this year the farmers — and not the taxpayers — are having to pay for the classing. And since the farmers are paying 60 cents per bale for the service, they reasoned that they had even more right than ever before to know what was going on.

The grade and class of cotton affects the price the cotton producers get for the fruit of their labors.

"We just had a lot more interest, because some felt that the federal government was short on grading some of this stuff," explained Evridge.

MANLY WAS OBLIGING and understanding. Hoelscher, who has earned the reputation as the farmer's farmer in West Texas, recognized that.

"Mr. Manly has been gracious over the years at our request...at (those) times when we have been concerned," Hoelscher said. The more farmers know about the classing of cotton, the better they are able toproduce top-quality cotton that will class high and bring relatively high prices.

Hoelscher asked Manly to explain the classing system "from the standpoint of what we can do to better help ourselves at home."

Manly was ready to give the farmers a quick course in cotton classing to satiate their curiosity.

"I always appreciate your coming," said Manly, who has logged 23 years with the USDA Cotton Marketing Service's Cotton Division. "I think it helps you and it helps us.

"And we're only human," Manly said. "We make mistakes. All we're trying to do is class cotton. We try to be as neutral as we can to describe a bale of cotton. We don't grow it or sell it.

"We don't put a price on it. We try to describe cotton, so that people who buy it will know what they are buying."

IN THIS FREE-ENTERPRISE system, buyers of cotton for textile mills and other markets here and abroad want the highest quality of cotton for their needs at the lowest possible price.

On the other side of the marketplace, farmers want the highest possible price for their cotton of whatever grade, staple and class. In theory, farmers know that the whiter, the stronger, the finer, the cleaner and the longer staple their cotton is, the high price it will command.

This year, though, even the highest-priced cotton may not net profits or even break-even yields for farmers. The downturn in the economy is causing a cutback on cotton orders. And the expected bumper crop may flood the marketplace with cotton and even further drop the price. The farmers will suffer.

That aside, Manly told the farmers the ins and outs of cotton classing and grading:

—Fiber Fineness: The electronic micronaire test determines fiber fineness and strength.

—Grade: The sight-feel judgemental classing by experienced classers determines the color rating, and color affects bleaching and dyeing properties of the fabric; the amount of trash (bits of leaves, bark, dirt) in the cotton sample; and the smoothness of the lint.

—Staple: Staple, which is the length of the cotton fiber, often determines the strength of yarn, as yarn strength increases with fiber length. West Texas farmers produce the short-staple Upland cotton which is widely used in denims and tucking. Longer staple cotton is used for the making of fine, strong yarns.

"It may not look like it," said Manly, "but cotton classing is pretty hard work."

His workers rate the quality of each bale of cotton on the basis of a six-ounce sample cut from a bale (about 500 pounds) of ginned cotton. In 1979, a bumper year, the office classed more than a million bales.

Today, the office, which is one of 21 USDA cotton-classing offices in the Cotton Belt, has 14 classers, who test cotton produced from the Anson-Abilene to the Midland-St. Lawrence areas.

"One of them (classers) was a farmer," Manly said, "but he got so prosperous, he doesn't work for us anymore."

Manly said he and his staff try to be fair. And samples of classed cotton routinely are sent to the USDA Memphis, Tenn., headquarters for spot testing against the USDA's standard. The cotton producer or the cotton buyer can request and get a re-testing of a bale.

And the St. Lawrence-Midkiff farmers figured that since they now are paying for the grading and classing of their cotton, then they ought to have some say-so in the "neutral" classing.

area in brief

Lamesa planning chamber banquet

LAMESA — Ray Renner, Lamesa's perennial and humorous master of ceremonies, will emcee the Nov. 9 Lamesa Area Chamber of Commerce banquet in which U.S. Congressman Kent Hance will be the featured speaker.

Hance, a lawyer who hails from Lubbock, was instrumental in passing President Reagan's economic package through the U.S. House of Representatives earlier in 1981.

A highlight of the 7 p.m. banquet in the Lamesa High School Student Center will be comments on Dawson County's petroleum activity by Wendell Strahan.

The $7.50 tickets to the fete are available from Round Up Club members and chamber personnel and directors.

Big Spring dinner to honor Stenholm

BIG SPRING — U.S. Congressman Charles Stenholm will be honored in a "non-partisan," $25-dollar-a-plate dinner at 7 p.m. Nov. 14 in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum here, according to John L. Taylor.

"This is strictly a non-partisan event and is our way of saying thanks to Rep. Stenholm for his help and for his service," said Taylor, who is general chairman of the event.

Tickets to the dinner may be obtained at the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, the State National Bank, First National Bank, Security State Bank and the Coahoma State Bank or by writing to the Stenholm Supper, P.O. Box 2271, Big Spring, Texas 79720.

Martin County 4-H'ers honored

STANTON — Martin County 4-H'ers Jonama Cox and Jill Simpson have been selected as winners of the 4-H Club Gold Star Awards for their achievements in the club and community and for their wholesome attitudes toward work and living.

Miss Cox is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Cox and is the third child in the Cox family to have earned the award. She has raised calves, lambs and hogs and has prepared meals and made garments in her roles as a 4-H Club member.

Miss Simpson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nolan Simpson, has had winning projects in garments and foods.

Club to honor museum's curator

McCAMEY — Mary Patterson, curator of the Mendoza Trail Museum, will be honored here at 4 p.m. Tuesday by the McCamey citizenry and the Woman's Study Club.

She has been the museum's curator since the late 1960.

"Always gracious and cheerful, always helpful to native and travelers alike, she has made many out of state visitors to the museum remember fondly, McCamey, the little West Texas Town with the friendly museum curator," said The McCamey News.

Andrews County rancher re-elected

ANDREWS — Andrews County rancher-business Ellison "Sonny" Tom Jr. has been re-elected to the board of directors of the Andrews Soil and Water Conservation District for Zone III.

I would like to know if there is anything the city or anyone can do about a home in an otherwise neat, clean neighborhood, which is perpetually cluttered with toys, lumber, trash, flower pots and other assorted eyesores.

I know that some of the neighbors have either hinted or complained outright to these people, but it hasn't done any good. Most people have a great deal of pride in the appearance of their front yards and other visible areas.

Perhaps some don't realize the damage they are doing to their neighbors and their community.

Can anything be done through legal means or other? — M.F.B.

ANSWER: Joe Nuessle, Midland city attorney, was contacted and he suggested that you contact J. B. Keaton, head of the Inspection Department of the city. He can be reached by dialing 683-4281.

A zoning inspector will look into the situation to see if there are violations of any city ordinance. There are ordinances against the accumulations of trash and water, which might be possible health hazards. There also is an ordinance, according to Nuessle, which prohibits dilapidated automobiles being parked in yards, etc.

I have an almond tree which is about three years old. Could you please tell me which month is best to pick the nuts or remove the outer shell?

Also, when are they best to eat? I mean so they are ripe or mature. Also, the best way to care for the tree.

I would like to sell my antique gun in a garage sale. If someone buys it and gets hurt with it or hurts someone with it, am I liable? — A.B.

ANSWER: Charles W. Green, Midland County extension agent — agriculture, reports that an almond tree should be treated as a peach tree, because they are "kissing cousins."

Green says the nuts usually are ripe this time of the year. He suggests shaking the tree, and if the nuts fall off easily, it is an indication they are ripe.

He also says you can remove the pulp and crack open the nut to see if it is ready to be eaten.

Like peach trees, the almond tree should be fed in the early part of the spring, with fertilizer especially high in nitrogen and iron. The tree branches should be thinned out in December or January. He also recommends plenty of water during the dry seasons.

It has been suggested by a Midland attorney, with regard to the sale of the antique gun, that you consult an attorney for the possibility of any liability on your part.

If you are unable, financially, to afford your own attorney, you might contact West Texas Legal Services.

I have heard about a new law governing the dispensing of prescriptions containing narcotics by physicians.

I understand, and know of several instances, where such prescriptions are renewed without the patient having to make another visit to the doctor for a new prescription.

It seems to me this makes it too easy for young people to obtain the drugs though visits to several doctors for prescriptions for the same drug, or taking drugs from the medicine cabinet without the knowledge of their parents.

Would you find out about the new law? I do hope it will eliminate indiscriminate prescribing of drugs. — Mrs. M.J.M.

ANSWER: Bob Joseph with the Department of Public Safety's Narcotic Service, says a new "triplicate law" goes into effect Jan. 1.

This law will require physicians to make prescriptions in triplicate, with one copy for them, one for the pharmacist and another which will be sent to the Department of Public Safety in Austin.

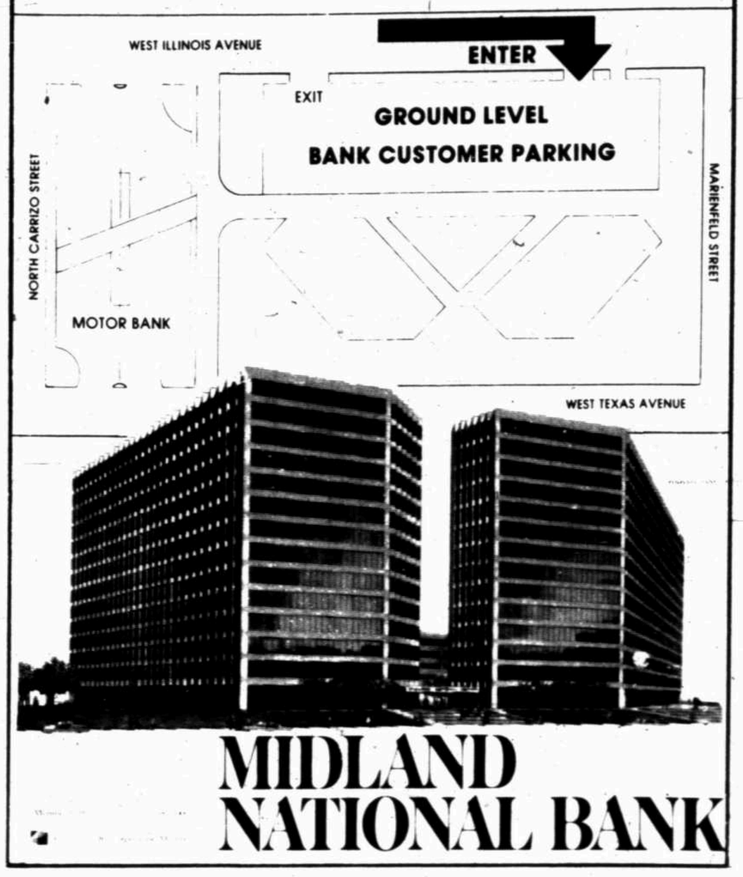

In Austin, the prescriptions will be entered into a computer system, according to Mr. Joseph. With this system, the unusual repetition of drug prescriptions can be determined and the cases investigated.

Of course, he pointed out, there are many cases where the patient requires continuous refills of medication.

Joseph said that additional information on the new law can be obtained from Helen Holloway with the DPS in Austin. Her telephone number is 512-465-2000.

Lamesa man dies in accident

LAMESA — One man was killed here Friday when a car and a Lamesa Independent School District bus collided.

Ernest Mathew Greer, 83, of Lamesa, was killed when the car he was driving collided with a school bus on its way to pick up students in Lamesa.

According to Lamesa police, the collision occurred when the vehicle driven by Greer collided with the school bus at the intersection of North 10th Street and Bryan Avenue at 2:37 p.m. Friday.

Reports indicate that Greer had turned right onto Bryan off of 10th when his vehicle crossed the double line, resulting in a collision with the school bus, which was traveling north on Bryan.

The driver of the bus, Jerry Lee Mason, 32, was uninjured.

Greer died after being taken to Medical Arts Hospital.

Purse reported missing

Midland— In light criminal activity reported to Midland police Saturday, Gladis Matlock, 805 S. Big Spring St., told police her purse and her mother's purse were missing from her residence Saturday morning. According to police reports, entry was apparently gained through a west door with a key. Total value of the contents of one of the purses was $254.

Bruce Riley reported 18 cases of beer and one two-wheel dolly were missing from a walk-in cooler after an apparent burglary at Suds Unlimited, 2511 W. Wall. Police indicated that employees may have left the cooler unlocked. Total value of the missing items was $216.70.

Cult deprogrammer jailed

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Cult "deprogrammer" Ted Patrick, convicted of kidnapping, violated the terms of his probation by trying to deprogram a woman allegedly involved in a lesbian relationship, a Superior Court judge ruled.

Patrick was ordered to jail.

Judge Norbert Ehrenfreund revoked Patrick's bail of $20,000 Friday on the grounds that Patrick had violated terms of his probation set 14 months ago. The judge said Patrick must begin serving a one-year jail sentence.

Ehrenfreund also set a bail review hearing for Patrick on Oct. 30.

Patrick, 50, was put on probation pending the appeal of his 1980 conviction. He was convicted of conspiracy to commit false imprisonment, false imprisonment, conspiracy to commit kidnapping and kidnapping of a waitress from Tucson, Ariz.

Chief Deputy District Attorney Richard D. Huffman said a declaration was taken from district attorney's investigator Patrick Russell that a woman identified as Stephanie Reithmiller was abducted in Norwood, Ohio, Oct. 8 as part of an alleged plot to deprogram her from an alleged lesbian relationship.

Aspirin possible gallstone cure

By LEW SCARR
Copley News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Stand by for another possible conquest by that "wonder" drug, common aspirin: prevention of gallstones, a problem affecting an estimated 10 percent of the United States population.

But understand this before you begin to pop aspirin pills indiscriminately:

Studies reported here yesterday show aspirin prevents gallstones in prairie dogs, not humans yet, and at doses so high that it would take 40 aspirin tablets a day to accomplish the same thing in humans.

At that high level, UCLA surgeons estimate, we humans would experience ringing in the ears, dizziness and eventually, probably, ulcers.

But Dr. Stephen Kuchenbecker and his associates, interviewed here at a meeting of the American College of Surgeons, believe their work is important because it has shown there is a compound that can prevent formation of gallstones in animals.

The next step, they say, is to find an agent to do the same thing in humans, perhaps even aspirin at a lower dose or something else without the side-effects of high-dose aspirin.

In experiments with prairie dogs, which develop gallstones in the same way as humans, the UCLA researchers were able to prevent the shutdown of gallbladder activity — a condition known as stasis — which appears to be a critical link in the formation of cholesterol gallstones.

The researchers, who included Dr. Jeffrey Doty, Dr. Henry Pitt and Dr. Larry DenBesten, earlier had shown that a slowdown in the emptying of bile from the gallbladder appears to be a key step in gallstone formation.

Cholesterol gallstones, the most common type, are generally believed to form when bile acids become saturated with cholesterol.

Like pouring too much sugar into a glass of ice tea, the cholesterol then forms tiny crystals which bunch together to form larger stones that can block the flow of bile acids to the intestines and cause great pain. These gallstones have to be removed surgically.

Bile acids, formed by the liver, are stored in the gallbladder. These acids are released to aid digestion when food enters the intestinal tract.

In the latest UCLA work, reported here for the first time, Kuchenbecker and his colleagues fed 12 adult male prairie dogs a rich 1.2 per cent cholesterol diet for 14 days. This is about 10 times the amount of cholesterol in the average human diet in this country.

This diet produced gallstones in about six weeks, DenBesten said.

Six of the animals were given daily doses of an aspirin derivative called choline magnesium trisalicylate.

Examination of the gallbladders showed that none of the six animals receiving aspirin had stones, while four of the six control animals developed cholesterol gallstones.

Some population groups are more likely to suffer gallstones than others. These include some American Indians (for genetic reasons), pregnant women and the very obese.

Likewise, there is a large group in this country who have been taking aspirin daily for years — millions of persons suffering arthritis.

DenBesten said this group should be surveyed in another study to see if they have a lower incidence of gallstones than the rest of the population.

Muscovites risk their lives whenever they get in a car

By MARC ROSSENWASSER
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — A cartoon in the Soviet satire magazine Krokodil shows a man passing a wall poster that declared: "Traffic safety month begins today."

The man is hobbling along, a crutch under his right arm, his left arm heavily bandaged and in a sling. "It should have started yesterday," he growls.

Officials in the Soviet capital mobilize thousands of traffic police daily in an effort to keep order on the roads, and frequently launch driver safety campaigns. To keep order at busy intersections policemen stand guard with megaphones, shouting angrily at careless pedestrians.

But police say their job keeps getting tougher as the number of automobiles grows, and Moscow officials this summer decided to post new speed limit signs — apparently because drivers were not heeding the smaller, older ones.

The same Soviet citizens who uncomplainingly endure long lines for food, clothes and other essentials show little patience as drivers and exercise almost no caution as pedestrians.

Never mind that it takes Muscovites as long as a year to buy a soviet-made Zhiguli or Moskvich automobile and that they cost the equivalent of three or four years of the average worker's salary.

It is standard practice to see drivers here darting in the compact cars from one lane to another, zigzagging between often-empty trucks and taxis that clog the center city, or racing above the speed limit of 37.5 mph to the jeopardy of often absent-minded pedestrians.

No one seems to pay attention to the law forbidding drivers to blow horns, either.

Still, there is a certain, unusual order to driving in Moscow.

The man who blasts his horn at a slow driver and then gestures angrily as he passes is almost sure to screech to a halt seconds later if the traffic light switches from green to yellow. Almost no one runs a red light here, probably because there are so many policemen on the street.

Though they maneuver freely on the city's broad avenues, as many as eight lanes across, Moscow drivers almost never cross into the far left lane. A solid white line separates the lane from the others, and it is reserved for official cars — medium-sized government Volgas or black limousines with curtains in the rear window for high government or Communist Party officials.

Fire engines, even those apparently on emergency runs, are sometimes stopped along with other cars to let a government limousine pass.

The politics of the country may tilt left, but it is virtually impossible to make a left turn on any heavily traveled road in the capital. Drivers often have to go well past their destination, make a U-turn at a specially designated spot, then circle back.

Only parking lights are supposed to be used at night.

Violators of traffic rules face an uncertain future after being whistled down by police who, a government newspaper acknowledged, are sometimes rude.

Russians can be fined on the spot or have a hole punched in their license. After a certain number of holes, the license is revoked.

Foreigners, whose cars bear special license plates identifying them by occupation and country, sometimes escape with little more than a harsh word.

Tinted windows are dangerous

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Pres Writer

Overheated drivers often are trying to keep cool these days by modifying car windows to screen out the sun, and authorities say the practice can be dangerous for the motorists themselves and for police who cannot see into automobiles they want to inspect.

Some states are trying to solve the problem with standards that require a minimum amount of light transmittance through car windows and set a maximum on reflectivity. The standards prohibit any type of interference with windshields and side windows which are important for driver visibility.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration regulates the tinting of car windows by manufacturers. Authorities agreed this kind of tinting, which generally involved only the top few inches of the window, is safe and even beneficial. "Tinted windows prevent accidents because they prevent glare," said Charles Vance of the National Safety Council.

But the federal regulations and limitations do not apply to individuals. "You can do whatever you like to a car once it's yours," said Roz Kaiser of the traffic safety unit.

What many people like, apparently, is a car with dark windows. Dairl Bragg of the Vehicle Equipment Safety Commission said drivers started adding "all kinds of materials," including plastic films, metal louvers and mirror-like reflecting surfaces. The problem, he said, was particularly severe in the South and the Southwest where the sun is strongest. "It's people's ingenuity," Bragg added. "They do themselves in."

Bragg said drivers "reduced the ability to see out as well as to see in." The reduction meant an increased risk of accidents. It also meant a danger to police who had to approach a stopped car and could not see the occupants. "There have been a number of law enforcement people kiled," Bragg said, but he could not provide any specifics.

The equipment safety commission, which is funded by the states and develops guidelines for them, issued a suggested standard on sun-screening devices late last year. Bragg said he expected the standard would be the basis for widespread action in state legislatures this fall and winter. "Many states are gearing up for next year," he said.

Four states, California, Florida, Michigan and New York, have enacted legislation setting standards for automobile visibility.

The commission standard prohibits any attachment to the windshield or the windows on either side of the driver which "would reduce light transmission or increase reflectivity." It sets specific levels of allowable restrictions on windows behind the driver.

There are no national statistics on the severity of the problem, on how many people have installed reflective or darkening devices.

"You're seeing more of it," said Robert Wilson of the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association, adding that he based his statement on personal observation. Like Bragg, Wilson said that police "are concerned" about the difficulty and potential danger of inspections, but he had no details.

Paul Hill of the Michigan State Police said the main problem came from reflective material — the mirrored kind you occasionally see on sunglasses. Hill said a law which took effect in Michigan earlier this summer bans the use of all such material on car windows. Asked about smoke or dark glass such as that used on many buses, Hill said, "We have not identified it as a problem."

NIH scientists support suspicion that cancer is caused by a virus

WASHINGTON — The long-held suspicion that viruses may cause human cancer has strong new support because of two new discoveries by scientists at the National Institutes of Health.

One group reports in Friday's issue of the journal "Science" that they have determined the exact, molecule-by-molecule structure of a cancer virus — a sarcoma virus — carried in the genes of mice.

At the same time, other NIH scientists have found sequences of the same family of viral genes, in this case viruses that cause leukemia, in human genetic material.

Together, these and other new discoveries add up to what many scientists call the best evidence yet that viruses are indeed a cause of human cancers.

Some scientists in recent years have cast doubt on this, despite the known involvement of viruses in cancers of many animals, including apes, cows, cats, mice and chickens.

Then, just over a month ago, NIH's Dr. Robert Gallo reported isolating what he and his co-workers strongly believe to be a human leukemia virus. Japanese doctors report finding the same virus in some of their patients.

Days later, scientists at three centers — Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory on Long Island, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Sidney Farber Cancer Institute in Boston — said they have found various "transforming genes" in human leukemia and colon, lung, breast and bladder cancer.

Viruses are simply strings of genetic material, like genes. In effect, they are genes that cause or help cause illness.

But the new, emerging concept of the role that viruses may play in human cancer makes these viruses much different from the simpler viruses that people "catch," such as flu or measles or polio viruses.

In cancer, what scientists call the "viral genome," the genetic material of the virus, may be only one player in a still little understood cellular drama that leads to a cancer. These viruses, or viral genes, may in some unknown circumstances interact with other genes to start making cancer cells in wild and uncontrolled numbers.

Though the whole drama is still little understood, new facts, and increased understanding of it, are emerging.

This is made possibe by genetic engineering, the new "recombinant DNA" technology that as scientists chopping up DNA and RNA — the chemical materials of genes and viruses — and manipulating them.

"For the first time," Dr. E. Premkumar Reddy said Friday, "we have the tools to manipulate genes, to totally sequence them (decipher their structure), to understand their molecular organization and to use them to transform cells and see what happens. "This is a new era. It is like the explosion of research in nuclear physics in the 1920s and '30s, research that totally changed the subject."

Reddy, Mary Jane Smith and Dr. Stuart Aaronson have deciphered the genome or genetic structure of the Moloney mouse sarcoma virus, a virus long known to cancer researchers.

The virus is a so-called Type C RNA retrovirus. The same kind of virus causes many known animal tumors and can be transmitted from parent to offspring in inherited genes.

It is Type C leukemia viral material that has been found in human DNA by a group led by NIH's Dr. Malcolm Martin. The Ma4tin work was reported in the Proceedings of the National Academy of ciences.

The mouse sarcoma virus, as described by Reddy, Smith and Aaronson is a string or chain of 5,828 "base pairs" or sets of individual nucleotides or basic chemicals whose exact order they now know.

The chain seems to have "hot spots" where it can combine with genes in cells to become the transforming genes that may lead to a cancer.

Deep space progam is doomed

By FRANK GREEN
Copley News Service

Don't call us, we'll call you.

That's the message that the Reagan administration is sending out to extraterrestrial beings — if they exist — according to astronomer William Kaufmann.

"It's mind-boggling," said the 38-year-old author, lecturer and expert on deep space, referring to the government's recent shutdown of its SETI (Search for Extra Terrestrial Intelligence) program. "Even if a life form only 1,000 light years away is sending us messages, we won't be there listening. It's a tragedy."

SETI is a six-year-old effort by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to develop antennae and computer programs that could distinguish intelligence-based signals from the flood of microwaves that constantly flow toward Earth from stars, galaxies, quasars, pulsars and other deep-space sources.

Last month, the program became a victim of the federal budget ax when the government disconnected the equipment that had been listening for these cosmic radio signals.

"Suppose the program had continued and had eventually been successful," mused the dapper, mustachioed scientist, who worked on NASA's Jupiter mission.

"Even if the life form in touch with us was only a little bit advanced, say, a million years — which isn't much on the cosmic scale — we would have access to technology that could solve all of man's problems. Unfortunately, that's the problem with most scientific programs — the payoff is always long-term, so they always get cut first."

Kaufmann, a professor at San Diego State University in San Diego and former director of the Griffith Observatory in Los Angeles, is a sort of pop astronomer along the line of Carl Sagan, the award-winning host of the Public Broadcasting System's "Cosmos" television series. Kaufmann is the author of a dozen books on astronomy, cosmology and relativity that have been written with the layman in mind.

Like Sagan, Kaufmann possesses a talent for simplifying complex scientific ideas for the general public. "I believe scientists have a profound moral obligation to tell the public just what's going on in their fields," he said. "Without an informed, sympathetic public, science is in trouble."

That's why, in the age of budget cuts and increasing social turmoil, Kaufmann is working extra hard at getting the message out about the importance of continuing America's space research.

One NASA program that is in imminent economic peril, he fears, is the Galileo mission, which involves sending a spacecraft to Jupiter and dropping a probe into that planet's atmosphere.

"It's an important project to me because the clouds of Jupiter seem to be a reasonable place to look for life," he explained. "The kinds of conditions in Jupiter's clouds are similar to earth's primordial atmosphere. It's a giant chemical factory with giant biological processes taking place there. The potential for new information is tremendous."

One of Kaufmann's specialties is black holes, those invisible, collapsed stars in space so dense and massive that neither light nor matter can escape from their gravitational field. These holes in space, he said, may have exotic properties, including that of acting as cosmic time machines.

"Perhaps, these black holes are actually one rotating hole that connects our universe with itself in a number of places," he said, his eyes widening with wonder. "These could be different places in space and-or time.

"In other words, by emerging into one of these other universes, you might actually be re-entering our own universe in the same place but at a different time. By plunging into a rotating (black hole) and by carefully piloting your spacecraft, you could re-emerge into our universe a billion years ago and visit Earth before the age of dinosaurs. Or you could re-emerge a billion years in the future and meet the creatures that eventually evolved from the lower life forms that today we call human beings."

Scientists are now studying quasars at distances of 10 billion light years with deep-space telescopes, he said, in an attempt to work back to the first few milliseconds following the big bang when the universe was an extremely compact, hot and condensed mass. (The widely held big-bang theory contends that the expansion of the universe began with a gigantic explosion.)

"A star's light that took 10 billion light years to travel to Earth tells us what that star looked like 10 billion years ago," he said. "It's a marvelous way to peer back into the universe."

Within 10 years, advances in deep-space telescopes will allow scientists to look much deeper into space, and possibly into "hundreds of billions of other galaxies — if the universe is infinite," Kaufmann predicted. "Then we can stand back and look at the big picture, at the preponderance of evidence."

Scientists believe the future of the universe lies in one of two directions, he said. It will either expand forever — as it has for 20 billion years after the big bang — or it will expand to a certain point and then begin to coalesce into its original compact state.

"Right now, scientists are straddling the issue. We just don't know what the outcome will be."

Kaufmann feels that the next 100 years will be the most crucial in the planet's evolution — if mankind doesn't destroy itself. "History shows that we are a viciously aggressive species that regularly goes about the business of slaughter. If you look back a million years, the humanoid creatures walking the Earth killed off all of their competition. Now, we have the capacity to reduce the entire Earth to a barren rock in three hours time. That is the real issue that faces us.

"If we can figure out how reality works, we can, in turn, manipulate it so that we can learn to cope in a non-violent fashion."

Ocean-drilling may solve climate puzzle

The key to unlocking the multimillion-year history of the Earth's climate may be a $22 million ocean-drilling project which could provide information useful in predicting future global weather conditions.

The latest phase of the decade-old Deep Sea Drilling Project could provide a long-term backdrop against which to frame short-term variations in worldwide weather, according to program director Dr. N.A. Peterson. The project headquarters is at the Scripps Institution of Oceanography in San Diego, Calif.

The knowledge could then be applied to projecting the effects of modern industrial society on the world's climate, cluing scientists, for instance, on the potential for carbon dioxide causing the so-called greenhouse effect, trapping Earth's heat, melting the polar ice caps and creating global floods.

The latest drilling project, recently approved by the National Science Foundation, calls for drilling deep into the ocean floor for core samples to gain clues to Earth's long-term climatic history.

Until now, Peterson told The Tribune, oceanographers have been limited to taking core samples that represent just a few million years of Earth's history.

Now, a new hydraulic-piston drilling system installed on the research vessel Glomar Challenger eclipses that limited capability.

"Now we can go back tens of millions of years," he said. "It's a much bigger window. We will get a much better look at the climate of the Earth."

This new system should provide scientists with a much better understanding of the fluctuations in global climate. They should be able to see the evidence of many Ice Ages, the resulting changes in oceanic circulation and possibly even the climatic effects of Earth's own erratic motions.

The latter problem is called the "Milankovitch effect" after the scientist who first suggested it. Earth wavers a small bit as it spins. This changes its attitude toward the sun.

Dr. Milutin Milankovitch, a Yugoslavian mathematician, suggested in the 1920s that these changes might be related to the onset of Earth's periodic Ice Ages.

No one has been able to prove or disprove Milankovitch's theory because there has been no way to compare the wobbles against the Ice Ages.

The new DSDP program may provide that comparison, Peterson said.

The Deep Sea Drilling Project has been in operation for more than 10 years. It has supplied modern science with a wealth of new information about the dynamic character of Earth, including the causes of earthquakes, vulcanism, mountain building and the creation of deep-sea trenches.

The program, financed largely by the National Science Foundation and a consortium of foreign nations, will also look closely at what happens at the boundaries of the giant crustal plates that make up Earth's skin, the thermal processes that occur at undersea spreading centers, and their relation to the formation of such minerals as copper, iron and manganese.

These latter studies, although they are being made in the deep ocean, may lead other scientists to areas closer to shore or on land where valuable mineral deposits may be located.

Fake deposit box nets lazy robber money

OCEANSIDE, Calif. (AP) — A lazy robber made some easy money by posting a sign directing bank customers to make their deposits in a bogus deposit box, police say.

"We won't know how much was lost until people realize their money wasn't deposited," police spokesman Bill Krungelevich said Friday.

Krungelevich said the thief put a note on the outside deposit machine at a First California Bank branch. The note said, "The night deposit is out of order — please leave your deposit in the box."

Branch manager Bill Reedy said two women who left their deposit cash in "a shabbily built wooden box" have complained to him.

Family changes mean good and bad news for male and female health

By DAVID BEHRENS
(c) 1981, Newsday

WASHINGTON — As the American family undergoes traumatic changes, the news is both good and bad for men and women worried about their health.

The average woman, for instance, will continue to live longer than the average man, despite the social upheavals she faces. But she also will face prospects greater loneliness and misery in her later years.

Women who never married — "once the pitied creatures of our society" — will continue to be the healthiest segment of females in American society.

Married men enjoy better health than single or divorced men, but all males will continue to suffer greater problems of heart disease and stroke as a matter of their biology, an irony in their evolution as the "stronger sex." Women who enter the same pressure-cooker job market as men still will be less vulnerable than their male colleagues to heart and stroke, "thanks to their extraordinary biology."

The women who will suffer the greatest medical problems are divorced women or those who are married and have no jobs outside the home.

These views were projected by Dr. Estelle R. Ramey, a physician and professor at the Georgetown Medical Center here and an expert on stress. In a symposium sponsored by the Washington Journalism Center, Ramey expressed concern about how men and women are reacting to stress in the changing family.

Ramey herself has been married for 40 years and had some tips for a healthy marriage.

A touch of dishonesty helps, she said. "We always find less honesty when people are trying to make marriage work, protecting each other's ego. But when a marriage is breaking up, they get very honest with each other. The woman will say, 'Of course, you nver kept a job, you shlemiel.'" And the man would answer,"and you thought you were so good in bed. .." And before you know it, they've stripped the skin off each other. "I never tell my husband any of the bad things about himself — and there are many — and I hope he does the same with me."

Tact, however, can't solve it all. Recent research shows that women's health has changed as the family has changed, and that some of the changes were "not anticipated."

Recent medical studies, especially research by Lois Verbrugge, formerly with the National Institutes of Health in Washington, show that men and women under stress are both more likely to have medical problems, ranging from colds to cancer, for car accidents to losses of normal vigor. Even appredectomies can be linked to stress."

While well-publicized changes in the family include an increase of married mothers working outside the home and the growing acceptance of divorce, an unexpected development is the strengthened image of the never-married woman. The notion is on the decline, Ramey said, "that the unmarried woman is a creature to be pitied."

"The spinster has been the most despised of all creatures. But unlike men who live alone, she generally takes better care of herself in terms of diet and hygiene, because she has been trained from childhood to provide these services for others."

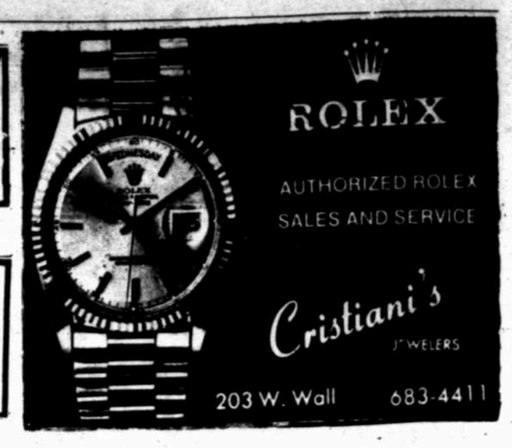

While more men are cooking, she said, "we're still finding that men who live alone tend only to cook for demonstration purposes, for parties. When they cook for themselves, they're much less likely to cook a decent, balanced meal." The finding is not surprising, she said, since parents still give traditional messages to daughters and sons.

"Growing up, girls are still much more likely to help their mother in the home, to learn how to cook and they learn a lot more about health care. Sexist, yes. But the advantage in the past, in learning to care for the sick," Ramey said, "is that women have learned to take better care of themselves.

"She also learned to be less afraid of some aspects of illness and was around more often when doctors were consulted. She also was allowed to admit being sick more easily." Boys ran the risk of being considered a sissy or "less of a man" for admitting sickness, Ramey said.

Los Angeles evens NL playoffs at two apiece

Garvey's home run ignites Dodgers to 7-1 win over Expos

MONTREAL (AP) — Steve Garvey's two-run home run in the eighth inning led the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 7-1 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday and evened their National League championship series at 2-2, forcing a deciding game Sunday.

Dusty Baker also provided a big offensive punch for the Dodgers, driving in the first run, then batting in two insurance runs in the Los Angeles' four-run ninth inning.

The Dodgers, who have never lost in a league championship series, will send rookie left-hander Fernando Valenzuela against Montreal's veteran right-hander Ray Burris today.

Montreal, which needed to go five games against the Philadelphia Phillies to win the NL East Division title, is seeking its first pennant in the 13-year history of the franchise.

The Dodgers won the West by beating Houston in three straight games after losing the first two at the Astrodome.

Saturday's game had been a pitchers' duel beween hard-luck Bill Gullickson of Montreal and Los Angeles' Burt Hooton, who got the win with relief help from right-hander Bob Welch with one out in the eighth inning, and left-hander Steve Howe, who worked the ninth. Hooton allowed all five of Montreal's hits.

Gullickson struck out Bill Russell to open the Dodger eighth, then Baker, who had doubled in the first Dodger run in the third, singled to left.

That brought up Garvey, the Dodgers' veteran first baseman and one of baseball's top clutch hitters. He hit Gullickson's first pitch over the left field fence for his first home run of the series to put the Dodgers in front 3-1 and send the series into the showdown game.

Hooton, who won 11 and lost six with a 2.28 earned run average during the regular season, won the first game in this series, 5-1, also working 7 1-3 innings. He appeared to be in control of his second win, using his key pitch, a knuckle curve, to work out of tough spots. Then in the eighth, the Expos knocked him out.

Rodney Scott started with a single to center, but was forced as Andre Dawson hit into a fielder's choice. Then Gary Carter singled to center, Dawson stopping at second.

That brought out Los Angeles manager Tom Lasorda, who summoned Welch.

Welch did the job. He struck out Larry Parrish swinging and got Jerry White, whose three-run home won Friday night's game, to fly out to center, ending the inning.

After being shutout through the first two innings, the Dodgers reached Gullickson for an unearned run in the third.

Russell was safe when third baseman Parrish fielded his grounder, but threw into the dirt at first and Warren Cromartie could not hold on to the ball.

Baker then doubled into the left field corner, scoring Russell for a 1-0 lead.

Montreal tied it in the fourth, also with an unearned run. Carter reached first with one out when third baseman Ron Cey bobbled his grounder.

After Parrish fouled out, White walked. Cromartie, hitting .167 in the series, then singled, scoring Carter.

White reached third on the hit, and Cromartie took second on the throw to the plate. Chris Speier was intentionally walked, loading the bases. But Gullickson took a third strike, and Hooton was out of the inning.

Just before the game Dodger outfielder Dusty Baker showed a verse from the Bible to Manager Tommy Lasorda.

"I thought it was worth reading to our players," said Lasorda after the Dodgers had beaten the Expos 7-1 to stay alive in the best-of-five playoff.

Lasorda held a clubhouse meeting. "I told them I believe more than anything in my life that we could come back," he said as he unfolded a scrap of paper containing Baker's message.

"I quoted them something from the Bible, something that expresses what we all feel," said Lasorda. "It's from Romans 5:1-5, it says, 'Tribulation brings about perseverance. Perserverance brings out proven character. Proven character brings about hope.' Hope is what we have today."

"I had a lot of faith," Baker said "I wasn't ready to go home."

The Dodgers wasted a number of scoring opportunities early in the game and that worried the players.

"When nobody is hitting and the runs aren't being driven in, it's very worrisome," said Baker. "You don't get many chances and when you miss them, they stand out in your mind. There just aren't that many chances out there."

Hooton knew just what Baker meant, "Seeing the opportunties we had and had wasted, it perturbed me at our own hitters."

Errors kill Raider comeback

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — A 26-yard Jesse Garcia field goal late in the third period and a two-yard Robert Lewis touchdown run 4:11 into the final period had whittled a 28-14 Rice lead to 28-23, so when Texas Tech gained possession moments later on a turnover at the Owl 18, it looked like the Red Raiders were on the brink of a come-from-behind victory.

Two plays later, a misplaced pitchout and an offensive pass interference penalty, Tech was back on its own 40 faced with a third and 52 and never again threatened as Rice hung on for a 30-23 victory before 30,073 here Saturday night.

A torrential downpour of yellow flags created such an offensive quagmire that it was surprising there was any score at all, let alone 53 points. The striped shirts dropped 27 flags for 248 yards in penalties.

JUST AS amazing was that Tech, playing with a cast of unknown strangers, ever made a game of it. Guided by fifth year senior Richy Etheridge, who once made Port Neches Groves a Texas prep power, but never called a play for Tech until last week when starting quarterback Ron Reeves was injured, Tech left the field tied at 14 with the Owls at half before quarterback Michael Calhoun changed all that in the third period as Rice drove 73 yards for one touchdown and converted a fumble recovery for an 18-yard TD drive.

Calhoun rolled right and found tight end Derron Miller picking daisies on a 12-yard TD pass and then, after the fumble recovery by Brian Hall, drilled a six-yard TD pass to Josea Fortune. It wasn't bad enough that Tech turned the ball over at the 18, but the Raiders had to contribute a personal foul and pass interference violation to the Owls' drive.

Rice added a safety in the final moments to nail down its third straight win, the first time that has happened since 1973.

Tech scored first after a short punt set up a short 41-yard drive in the first period. Robert Lewis scored from five yards out on a sweep right as fullback Gregg Lambert, the junior fullback from Odessa Permian, delivered the corner turning block. Two Etheridge to Curt Cole passes for 13 and 16 on third and longs set it up.

RICE RETALIATED with 7:49 left in the second period when Calhoun flipped a 16-yard pass to wide open wide receiver Fortune to culminate a 10-play, 70-yard drive.

Penalties-stymied Tech took advantage of a pass interception by Terry Baer at the Rice 28, but first had to overcome a 15-yard penalty on the interception, which made it a 43-yard drive. This time Lambert lugged it in from the four with 2:55 left in the half to give Tech a 14-7 lead.

Following the kickoff, three penalties kept Rice bottled up inside its 20 and eventually an interception gave Tech an opportunity to fatten its lead, but Garcia's 61-yard field goal try was short. When Rice took over at its 41 only 36 seconds remained in the half. It was plenty of time for Calhoun to take the Owls to the tying score in three passes, two of them completions to Miller, the first for 44 yards to the Tech 12 and then 12 over the middle for the score with 20 seconds to spare.

Despite three interceptions Calhoun wound up with a four touchdown night on 13 completions and 27 attempts for 180 yards. Etheridge was six of 19 for 89 yards and with Anthony Hutchinson sidelined by injury, Lewis carried the brunt of the rushing attack with 64 yards on 20 carries. However, the 135 yard total for Tech amounts what would have been a routine night for Hutchinson.

With the loss, the injury depleted Raiders slipped to 1-5 heading into the final phase of a season in which Washington, SMU, Texas and Houston still lie ahead.

No. 1 jinx strikes down Longhorns

Unranked Arkansas clobbers Texas 42-11

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — The Texas Longhorns became 1981's fourth victim of the No. 1 jinx Saturday, suffering their worst football loss to the Arkansas Razorbacks in 43 years.

Unranked Arkanas inflicted a 42-11 butchering on the previously unbeaten Longhorns before a regionaly television audience and long-suffering fans, who snapped an upright off a metal goal post at the game's end to celebrate the victory.

Arkansas only had to travel 24 yards to score 15 points as the spooked Longhorns suffered two costly fumbles and a bad center snap for a safety in the first quarter.

"We were ready and we were eager," said Texas Coach Freddie Akers. "I just can't explain it."

Texas' All-America tackle Kenneth Sims, noting the four interceptions and three lost fumbles by his teammates, said "We just kept pumping air in them all day ... just kept giving them everything."

Arkansas Coach Lou Holtz said "It was a great win ... I'm glad we're not playing them again tomorrow."

He added "It was a great victory. We have another important one in front of us, though. We've never defeated Texas and Houston back-to-back in the same year."

Holtz said he was amazed at the easy way the Razorbacks moved the ball on Texas.

"We've always moved the ball well against Texas ... but I was surprised we scored so much, even with the field position we had ... They have such a great defense," Holtz said.

Holtz concluded "I'm sure after today's game the rivalry (with Texas) will heat up."

Quarterback Tom Jones and running back Gary Anderson ignited the upset over the six-point favorite Longhorns.

"The key to the game was the way our offensive line dominated their defensive line," said Jones. "I really thought if we played well against Texas we would would win the game ... I thought it might not be close."

The loss to Arkansas, the worst since the Razorbacks won 42-6 in 1938, put Texas in the graveyard ranks of Michigan, Notre Dame and Southern California, who also had been listed No. 1 in The Associated Press poll then suffered an upset.

Arkansas is now 5-1 overall and 2-1 in SWC play while the Longhorns dipped to 4-1 and 1-1.

It was Arkansas' first victory over Texas in Fayetteville in 16 years and only the Razorbacks' third victory in 15 games against the 'Horns.

Arkansas pounced on an early fumble, cashed it in for a quick touchdown on a one-yard run by Jones, and the jittery Longhorns never recovered in the regionally televised game.

Arkansas was ahead 15-0 before Texas ever had a first down thanks to a safety on a bad center snap and a five-yard touchdown run by Anderson, his first score of the season.

The two teams traded field goals before the Razorbacks scored just before the half on a 19-yard touchdown pass from Jones to Anderson.

With 44,031 delirious fans in full-throated roar, Arkansas ran the count to 32-3 on a four-yard Jones scoring run and led 39-3 at the end of the third period after Darryl Bowles' 19-yard scoring gallop.

Bruce Lahay's 37-yard field goal with 9:32 to play gave Arkansas a 42-3 lead before Texas scored its only touchdown on an eight-yard Robert Brewer to Donnie Little pass.

Linebacker Jeff Goff was the defensive star for the Razorbacks, recovering a fumble and intercepting a pass which led to touchdowns. He also jarred the ball loose from a receiver on an apparent touchdown pass.

Cornerback Danny Walters had two interceptions in the rout.

It tied the second worst defeat in Texas' history. The Longhorns lost 46-0 to Texas Christian in 1956 and were defeated 52-13 by Oklahoma in 1973.

The Razorbacks scored all of their first half points after Texas miscues except for a 47-yard field goal by Lahay.

Texas quarterback Rick McIvor fumbled the snap on the 'Horns first play from scrimmage and Billy Ray Smith pounced on the ball at the 19. Anderson ran twice for short gains then caught a 14-yard swing pass from Jones to the one. Jones then sneaked it across. The extra point was spoiled by a bad snap from center Greg Garrison.

Arkansas quickly made it 8-0 when Texas center David Jones snapped the ball out of the Longhorn end zone in punt formation.

Goff alertly snared tailback A.J. Jam Jones' fumble at the Texas 5 and Anderson scored his first touchdown of the year on the next play to make it 15-0 in the first period.

After Lahay's early second period field goal mounted the count to 18-0 the Longhorns finally made their first first down after 16 minutes and 35 seconds of play.

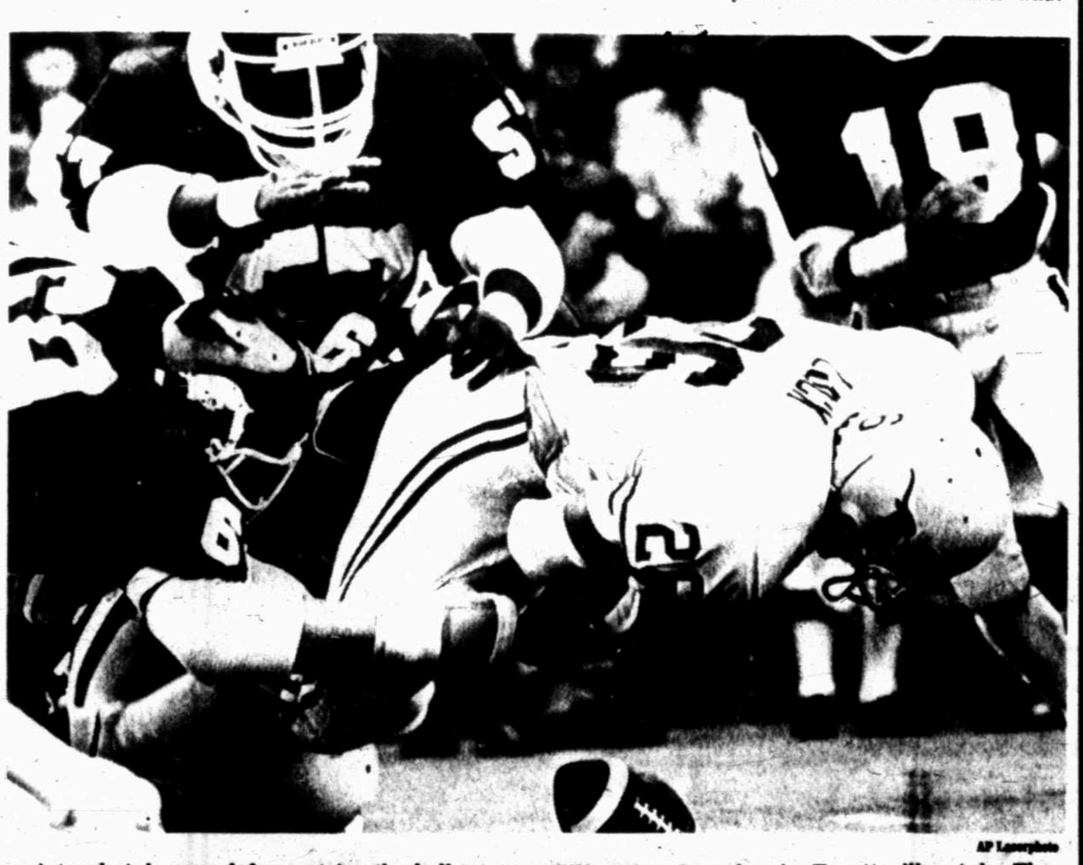

The 'Horns drove to the Arkansas 7 before Goff tipped away a third down pass, forcing Texas to settle for Raul Allegre's 24-yard field goal.

Free safety Kim Dameron's interception late in the first half provided the Razorbacks with their third touchdown. Working the ball from the Texas 36, the Hogs moved to the 'Horn 19. On third and 4, Jones found Anderson flying behind linebacker Doug Shankle and led him perfectly on a 19-yard touchdown pass with 20 seconds to go for a 25-3 halftime lead.

Texas was held to only four first downs in the first 30 minutes of play.

The Longhorns went into the game looking for their 600th collegiate victory but had to settle for their 16th loss in the 63rd meeting with Arkansas. There have been no ties in the series.

The Longhorns exceeded the school record of 38 passes in trying to overcome the Razorback blitz to no avail. McIvor was logged with 39 passes and suffered four interceptions.

The quotebook...

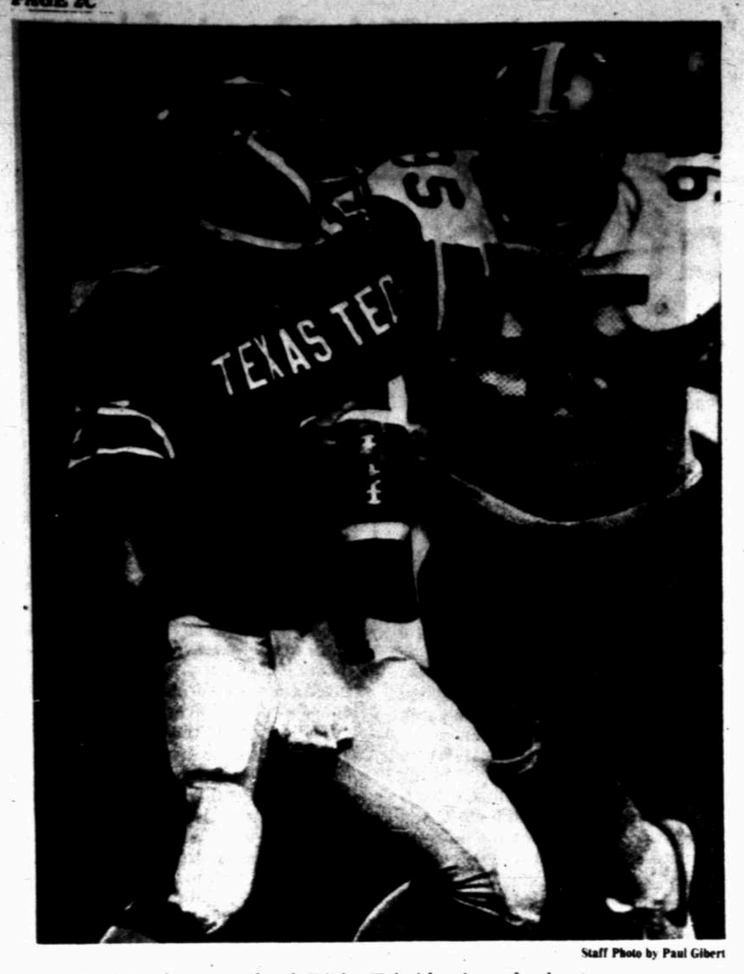

"We're not going with our best. One member of that crew is excellent. But the others ... the AL (American League) knows it's not going with its best umpires. These are the two best teams playing for the league championship. We should have our best out there. If Lee MacPhail tells me they're the best, then fine. You go ask him. I don't think he'll say that." — New York Yankees' owner George Steinbrenner, after witnessing what he thought was a sub-par performance by Marty Springstead's umpiring crew during the opening game of the AL Championship Series against Oakland.

"If Mr. Steinbrenner would concern himself more about security and fan control in the stadium and not worry about the umpiring, we'd all be better off." — American League President Lee MacPhail, the object of Steinbrenner's wrath, referring to several incidents of fan rowdyism that marred the AL Championship Series games at Yankee Stadium.

SMU rides Houston turnovers to win

HOUSTON (AP) — Southern Methodist safties James Mobley and Wes Hopkins returned interceptions 65 and 66 yards for fourth quarter touchdowns as the 10th ranked Mustangs took advantage of nine Houston turnovers Saturday night enroute to a 38-22 Southwest Conference football victory.

THE VICTORY propelled the Mustangs, 6-0, into the SWC lead after top-ranked Texas was beaten 42-11 by Arkansas earlier Saturday.

Mobley, who earlier recovered a fumble, broke the game open with 10:14 left when he intercepted a pass by Houston's Lionel Wilson at the SMU 35. Mobley's interception return was aided by safety Blaine Smith's blitz of Wilson.

It was Wilson's third interception of the game and Houston's seventh turnover as the error-prone Cougars dropped to a 3-3 season record and 1-2 in SWC play. The Mustangs are now 3-0 in the conference.

Wilson threw his fourth interception later in the quarter on Hopkins' 66 yard return. Wilson also fumbled twice, once into the end zone, costing the Cougars a touchdown.

Hopkins intercepted his fourth pass of the game to kill Houston's final drive with 19 seconds to play.

The Mustangs took a 10-7 halftime lead on a 37-yard field goal by Eddie Garcia and a 25-yard TD pass from Lanch Mcllhenny to tight end Norm Revis.

SMU TAILBACK Eric Dickerson, who rushed for over 100 yards for the eighth straight game, scored on a 31-yard run in the third quarter to give the Ponies a 17-7 edge and also ran for 1-yard in the foruth quarter.

The Cougars scored in the foruth quarter on Robert Durham's 11-yard run and Wilson's four yard pass to Mark Ford in the third quarter. The touchdown play was set up by Lonnel Phea's 71-yard punt return.

Wilson tacked on a 6-yard touchdown run with 44 seconds to play. He then passed to Phea for the two-point conversion.

The Cougar miscues started on the first play of the game when fullback David Barrett turned the ball over to SMU defensive tackle Harvey Armstrong at the Houston 24. That set up Garcia's field goal.

After Hopkins intercepted his first pass and Mobley recovered a UH fumble, SMU's Eric Ferguson fell on a fumble by Durham to set up SMU's second score. It took the Ponies only four plays to complete the touchdown drive with Revis' touchdown reception.

FIVE OF Houston's nine turnovers resulted in points for the Mustangs.

Dickerson, the No. 14 rusher in the nation, finished with 109 yards on 21 carries and running mate Craig James had 38 yards on 17 carries.

Despite his miscues, Wilson led Cougar rushers with 120 yards on 24 carries. He also completed 10 of 25 passes for 146 yards.

Port Arthur rolling

By The Associated Press

Despite losing quarterback Craig Stump and star defensive tackle Brent Williams to injuries, No. 1-ranked Port Arthur Jefferson ran all over Beaumont Charlton-Pollard, 48-0, in schoolboy football play Friday night.

Backup quarterback Clifford Landry passed for two touchdowns after he took over in the second quarter when Stump injured his knee. Before leaving the game, Stump passed for 106 yards, completing eight of 19 for a season total of 1,280 yards. Landry connected on nine of 13 for 158 yards, with one interception.

Port Arthur went into the game ranked first in The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll

Running back Bruce Miller scored three TDs, and wide receiver Paddy Doyle caught three TD passes of 21, 26 and 31 yards in the second, third and fourth quarters after Charlton-Pollard held TJ to only 12 offensive yards in the first period.

In other Class 5A action, unranked Stafford Dulles upset No. 3 Brazoswood, 3-2, with a 23-yard field goal by Travis King in the fourth period. Brazoswood failed to score a touchdown in district play for the first time since the school opened 13 years ago.

The Vikings' winning drive opened when Lupe Ruiz intercepted a pass by Buccaneer quarterback Dale Brannan, returning it 18 yards to the Brazoswood 32.

Jared Marks passed to Kevin Nelson, whose run put the Vikings on the 4-yard line. The Bucs pushed them back to the 7-yard line but King's field goal gave Dulles the lead with 9:19 left in the game.

Elsewhere in 5A play, No. 2 San Antonio Holmes whipped San Antonio Clark, 26-13; No. 4 Odessa Permian swamped Big Spring, 24-6; No. 5 El Paso Bel Air crushed El Paso Parkland, 47-7; No. 6 Bryan blanked Westwoods, 51-0; No. 7 Richardson Lake Highlands beat Newman Smith, 14-7; No. 8 Alice mashed Kingsville, 50-14; No. 9 Temple trounced Killeen Ellison, 14-7; and tenth-ranked Dickinson defeated Clear Creek, 33-7.

Jimmerson kicks Aggies

WACO, Texas (AP) — With the game on the line, Coach Grant Teaff of Baylor decided to go with Jay Jeffery, his all-SWC conference quarterback who had been benched. The substitution resulted in a 19-17 Baylor victory over Texas A&M.

"I just had a gut feeling about putting Jay in there and letting him use his expertise and ability to do the job in a pressure situation," Teaff said Saturday minutes after Jefferies set up a winning field goal of 21 yards by freshman Marty Jimmerson, with 22 seconds remaining in the game.

Jeffrey hit 2 of 2 passes for 26 yards and ran seven yards on the winning drive, dealing A&M its first SWC loss in three conference games.

Baylor's drive began after freshman linebacker Kevin Hancock recovered Thomas Sanders' fumble at the Baylor 28. Baylor, the defending SWC-champion, raised its conference record to 2-2.

Jimmerson said of his winning kick, "It wasn't a very pretty kick but it did the job."

Jimmerson, a first-year player from Houston Stratford, was on target four consecutive times after missing his first effort, a 30-yarder which sailed wide.

That miss wasted a Baylor recovery of a Sanders fumble at the opening kickoff at the A&M 17, but Baylor turned a fumble by Hector at the A&M 39 into Jimmerson's first field goal.

The Bears took a 10-0 lead on a 75-yard drive as Alfred Anderson pulled away from A&M linebacker Mike Little at the eight and fell into the end zone.

A&M struck back on the 41-yard toss to Whitwell, who pulled the ball in with his fingertips going full-speed at the two. It was the longest scoring play the Baylor defense has given up this year.

Baylor padded its lead as Jimmerson kicked his 20-yarder after a 78-yard drive had stalled at the A&M 2.

Brannan, a red-shirt junior, opened the game for Baylor and guided the Bears to 16 points in a relief role for Jeffrey.

Jeffrey was benched after Baylor failed to generate much offense with him in the game in a loss last Saturday to Southern Methodist.

Although A&M ranked 11 nationally in rushing defense, Baylor runners shredded the Aggies for 253 yards on the ground. Walter Abercrombie ran 28 times for 122 yards for Baylor, just eight yards short of what the entire A&M backfield got rushing.

Whitwell had five completions for 160 of A&M's 210 yards passing.

West Texas nips Shockers

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — West Texas State's Rob Clark kicked three field goals Saturday and the Buffaloes held off a late Wichita State rally to down the Shockers 23-17 in Missouri Valley football.

Clark booted a field goal in each of the first three periods, reserve quarterback Ricky Davis scored on a 1-yard plunge and tight end Milton Baker caught a 22-yard pass from Victor McGee to give West Texas State a 23-3 lead after three quarters.

Quarterback Prince McJunkins led the Shockers' belated comeback, capping fourth-quarter drives of 80 and 92 yards with touchdown passes of 15 yards to Kevin Murphy and 48 yards to Ruben Eckels.

West Texas State, 5-2 in all games and 1-1 in conference play, took a 3-0 lead on Clark's 28-yard field goal.

Lee JV trips Cooper, 12-7

ABILENE — The Midland Lee junior varsity football team scored a 12-7 victory over Abilene Cooper here Saturday afternoon to boost its season record to 4-2 on the year.

Lee got the victory on the second play in the fourth quarter when Paul Cox scored on a one-yard run to erase a 7-6 lead by Cooper. Lee went for two points but failed.

Lee jumped to a 6-0 lead in the first period when Tommy Joe DeWitt scored on a 44-yard run, but the point after kick attempt failed.

Cooper took the lead on a 55-yard run in the third period and added the point after for a 7-6 lead until the fourth period when Lee rallied to pull out the victory.

Mustangs rip New Life, 45-0

The Midland Christian School Mustangs raised their season six-man football record to 4-2 at Simon Field Saturday with a three quarter 45-0 victory over New Life Academy of Lubbock in the 1981 Homecoming game for MCS.

The Mustangs got off to a fast start when Kirk Hobbs hit Carey Brown with a 52-yard scoring toss and Johnny Blecher ran over the conversion.

The Mustangs put 14 points in lights in the second period when Belcher scored on a 53-yard run and Joe Gould got the conversion on pass from Hobbs. Hobbs then hit Dan Carter with a 31-yard pass and a Belcher conversion made it 21-0 at the half.

The 45-point rule went into effect in the third period as the Mustangs scored 24 points in that period. MCS got two touchdowns in the first three plays of the second half when Jim Crawford scored on a 60-yard kickoff return to open the period and Hobbs then scored on a 5-yard run after New Life fumbled on their first play at the five. Later Hobbs hit Crawford with a 48-yard scoring toss.

Belcher closed out the game with a 5-yard run with four minutes left in the third period and the 45-point rule went into effect.

Amy Ambler was named as Midland Christian homecoming queen during halftime ceremonies. The Mustangs will play Brooksmith at Blackwell Friday at 8 p.m.

Trojans hold on

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quarterback John Mazur threw for one touchdown and set up another and Steve Jordan kicked three field goals Saturday as seventh-ranked Southern Cal downed Stanford 25-17 in a Pacific-10 Conference football game.

Southern Cal led 22-3 at halftime and extended the advantage to 25-3 early in the third quarter, but the Trojans then had to hold off a fourth-quarter rally by Stanford that produced two touchdowns.

The Cardinals were able to hold Trojan tailback Marcus Allen below 200 yards rushing for the first time this season, as the senior from San Diego, who leads the nation in rushing, finished with 153 yards on 40 carries.

But Mazur, a sophomore, helped Southern Cal roll up a 22-3 halftime advantage as he completed 10 of 15 throws for 175 yards in the first two quarters.

Allen put USC ahead to stay when he dove 2 yards for a touchdown with 8:38 played in the contest.

Jordan hit a 37-yard field goal to make it 10-0 in the waning moments of the first quarter, then the Trojans' Dennis Edwards trapped Stanford quarterback John Elway in the Cardinals' end zone for a safety with 33 seconds remaining in the period.

Mazur's 8-yard touchdown strike to flanker Timmy White gave Southern Cal a 19-0 edge early in the second period. A 28-yard field goal by Stanford's Mark Harmon, his 11th in as many tries this season, cut the deficit to 16 points, but then Jordan extended USC's advantage to 22-3 when he kicked a 39-yarder 12 seconds before the intermission.

A 23-yard field goal by Jordan in the third quarter closed out the Southern Cal scoring. Stanford got its first touchdown on a 26-yard pass from Elway to Mike Tolliver with 9:32 remaining in the game.

The same combination clicked again on a 3-yard scoring pass with two minutes left, but the Cardinals lost their last chance as Southern Cal fell on an onside kickoff attempt.

The Trojans are now 5-1 and 2-1 in Pac-10 play. Stanford, suffering its fifth loss in the season, has just one victory on the year. The Cardinals are 1-2 in conference action.

BYU trip undefeated Aztecs

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Quarterback Jim McMahon fired three touchdown strikes and broke his 37th and 38th NCAA records Saturday as 17th-ranked Brigham Young whipped previously unbeaten San Diego State 27-7 in a Western Athletic Conference football game.

McMahon, returning to the BYU uneup after missing two games because of a knee injury, completed 27 of 42 passes for 349 yards as the Cougars raised their WAC record to 3-0 and their overall mark to 6-1.

It marked the 14th time that McMahon has passed for 300 yards or more in a game during his career, bettering the previous NCAA mark of 13 set by former teammate Marc Wilson.

In addition, McMahon broke the NCAA record for most points responsible for during a three-year career. His first touchdown pass Saturday meant he was responsible for 456 points, breaking the former mark of 453 set by Danny White of Arizona State.

The Aztecs dropped to 2-1 in WAC play and 4-1 overall.

Sacked twice on BYU's first possession, McMahon bounced back to guide his team on scoring drives of 82 and 74 yards on its next two possessions en route to a 21-0 halftime advantage.

Lee White romps

The Lee Freshman's unbeaten White team romped to a 40-14 victory over Midland Freshman Purple to go 6-0 on the year and highlight ninth grade football action Saturday.

Midland Gold (4-2) belted Lee Maroon (2-4) by a 41-0 margin in another all-city matchup. In Odessa, Bowie (2-4) defeated Bonham (0-6), 31-8, while Nimitz, also unbeaten at 6-0, curshed (2-4) Crockett, 28-0. Hood (4-2) shutout (1-5) Ector, 25-0.

In the eighth grade Midland-Odessa Conference, unbeaten Nimitz (5-0) blanked winless Alamo (0-6), 20-0, and Goddard, unbeaten with a 4-0-1 mark, got three safties to beat Blackshear, 12-6. San Jacinto, now 4-1, slugged Hood, 46-6; and Crockett (4-1-1) shutout Bonham (0-5) by a 26-0 count.

In the eighth grade city conference, leader Trinity (4-1) won a narrow 20-12 victory over San Jacinto (2-3) while Goddard A (3-1-1) took a 12-0 win over Goddard B (1-4).

In the seventh grade American Conference, unbeaten Goddard White (5-0) kept rolling with a 14-0 win over San Jacinto White (2-3), but San Jacinto Green (3-2) captured a close 8-6 decision over Alamo Grey (2-3). In the other game, Goddard Red (3-2) slipped past Alamo Scarlet (0-5) by a 14-6 margin.

UCLA, Cougars tie

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Washington State quarterback Clete Casper and his undefeated Cougars allowed the clock to run out in the final moments Saturday and settled for a 17-17 tie with UCLA in a Pacific-10 Conference football game.

Before 40,000 fans, the largest home crowd in WSU history, the 18th-ranked Cougars allowed the Bruins, 3-2-1, a fourth-quarter touchdown that tied the score with 4:53 to play.

The tie kept the Cougars, 5-0-1, in first place in the Pac-10 standings with two victories and a tie. UCLA is 1-1-1 in conference play.

TCU, Utah St. battle to tie

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Steve Stamp passed 26 yards for a fourth-quarter touchdown but the fans booed when Texas Christian then disdained a two-point conversion try and settled for a 13-13 tie Saturday with Utah State in intersectional college football.

Frog kicker Greg Porter missed a 51-yard field goal in a driving rain with eight seconds to play that could have one it for TCU.

Stamp's scoring toss to fullback Kevin Hanson, for an 89-yard USU touchdown in the second quarter, was equalled when spilt end Eric McPherson gathered in a tipped-pass from Aggie quarterback Doug Samuels and out-legged stunned Frog defenders for the score.

The tie left Utah State's record level at 3-3-1, while TCU posts a 2-3-1 ledger.

Aggie defensive tackle Shawn Miller figured in three turnovers, forcing one TCU fumble, recovering another and intercepting a pass to thwart three Frog drives.

USU kicker Dale Money hit on field goals of 27 and 29 yards, but missed tries of 28 and 24 yards that would have given State the win. Porter connected on field goals that covered 39 and a career-best 52 yards.

The Frogs moved the ball almost at will, but their own mistakes kept them out of the end zone during the first half. An alert play by the Aggies provided a 10-7 Utah State lead at intermission.

TCU drew five penalties and lost the ball three times on fumbles in the first half alone. One of those turnovers, a fumbled punt by John Thomas, gave Utah State the ball on the TCU six and set up Money's 29-yard first-quarter field goal. And another stopped a Frog drive at the Aggie 19 early in the second.

But the big play was the 89-yard accidental bomb. Facing second and 12 from his own 11-yard line, Samuels aimed a short pass over the middle for tight end Ken Brown. TCU linebacker Darrell Patterson slapped the pass into the air, McPherson ran under it at the 35 and raced for the score.

The troubles each offensive unit surrendered were capsulized in a three-play series early in the fourth quarter. There were three interceptions on three consecutive plays — two thrown by Stamp and one by Samuels — with the net result being a missed Money field goal, his third miss of the day.

Bulldog JV 2nd in tournament

BIG SPRING — San Angelo won the District 5-5A junior varsity district tournament here Saturday with a 15-6, 15-4 victory over defending champion Midland High in the finals.

MHS got to the finals with a 15-0, 15-6 win over Odessa High and a 12-15, 15-9, 15-7 victory over Odessa Permian.

Permian won third place with a victory over Midland Lee, but no score was available. Lee got to the third place game by defeating Abilene Cooper in the first round, but lost to San Angelo in the second round. San Angelo defeated Abilene High in the first round.

Cooper won consolation honors with a win over Big Spring in the final loser's bracket game.

Malavasi up for Cowboys

DALLAS (AP) — Los Angeles Coach Ray Malavasi admits he gets a special charge out of going against the Dallas Cowboys.

"I'm always excited to play the Cowboys," says Malavasi. "It's a great challenge to the team and to me personally. They are well coached."

Sunday night's National Football League game between the Rams and Cowboys also is a rather large challenge for Dallas.

The Cowboys have been put in the position of having to rebound against the Los Angeles Rams or watch the Philadelphia Eagles run away with the National Conference Eastern Division title.

The unbeaten Eagles are 6-0 two games ahead of the 4-2 Cowboys, beaten 45-14 by San Francisco last week.

Not since St. Louis blanked the Cowboys 38-0 in 1970 had they experienced such humiliation.

The Rams (4-2) are tied with Atlanta in the NFC West. They have won four in a row including last week's 37-35 win over the Falcons after opening with two losses.

The oddsmakers have made the Cowboys four-point favorites to bounce back in the nationally televised (ABC) matchup at 8 p.m. CDT in Texas Stadium.

Injured Ram quarterback Pat Haden will be available to start after suffering a leg injury against the Falcons.

It was first feared that Haden had suffered a broken leg but it was later diagnosed only as a contusion.

"Haden is ready to play," says Malavasi.

Buffs shock Cowboys

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Quarterback Steve Vogel passed 9 yards to split end Brad Parker with six seconds left, then hit Derek Singleton on the two-point conversion to lift Colorado to a dramatic 11-10 Big Eight football victory over Oklahoma State Saturday.

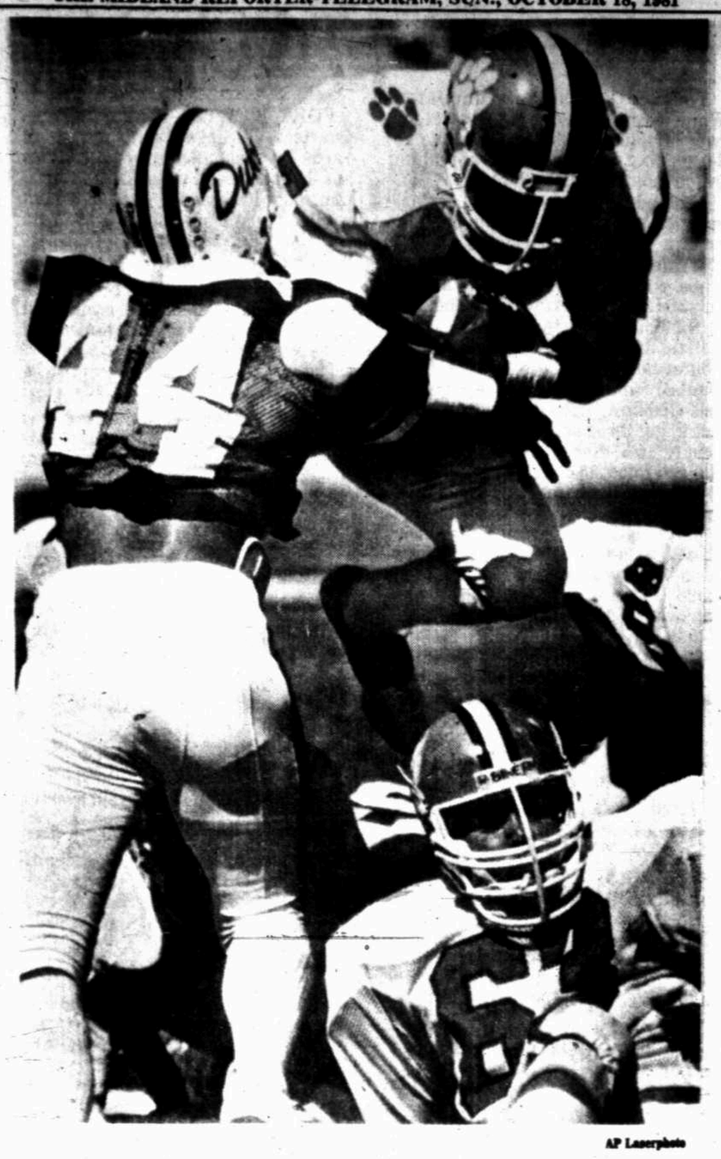

The Buffaloes, halting a four-game losing streak, marched 92 yards on 10 plays in the closing minutes, with Ricky Ward catching a pair of key passes and tight end Brad Hestera grabbing a 20-yarder and getting out of bounds to put the Buffs in scoring position.

Okalahoma State quarterback John Doerner had flipped a 45-yard scoring pass to flanker Terry Young early in the third quarter, breaking a 3-3 tie, and the OSU defense appeared to have preserved their victory by turning back three Colorado scoring threats in the final quarter prior to CU's winning drive.

Colorado had its scoring threats end on a busted play, an interception and a sack in the fourth quarter, but got the ball back one more time with 1:28 left.

The victory raised Colorado's overall record to 2-4 and conference record to 1-1, while the Cowboy's dropped to 3-2 overall and 1-1 in league play.

Clemson tailback Cliff Austin (7) follows the blocking of Tony Hill (63) to elude the tackle of Duke's Jimmy Tyson (44) as he dives in for a touchdown.

Clemson claws Duke

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Junior tailback Cliff Austin rushed 19 times for 178 yards and two touchdowns as sixth-ranked Clemson ran its season record to 7-0 with up a 38-10 victory over Duke in Atlantic Coast Conference football Saturday.

Austin, Clemson's season rushing leader, scored on runs of 15 and 2 yards. He also had a 27-yard scoring run called back by a penalty in the third quarter.

The Tiger offense had little trouble knocking the Duke defense off the ball. After gaining a 24-3 halftime lead, Clemson scored on its first two second-half possessions to put the game out of reach.

Duke squandered three second-half scoring opportunities. The first came when it was called for offensive pass interference in the end zone. It lost another chance when Bennett failed to get into the end zone on a fourth-down play. A fourth-quarter fumble squelched its final scoring attempt at the Clemson 19-yard line.

Duke saw its three-game winning streak end and its record fall to 3-3 overall. The Blue Devils are now 1-1 in the ACC.

Crimson Tide rolls over Vols

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Alan Gray passed for one touchdown and set up another score and two field goals as 15th-ranked Alabama smashed Tennessee for the 11th year in a row 38-19, handing Coach Paul Bear Bryant his 311th career victory.

The Tide surged to a 28-0 halftime lead in winning their fourth consecutive Southeastern Conference victory and lifting their overall mark to 5-1-1.

Gray fired an 8-yard touchdown pass to Jesse Bendross in the final minute of the half.

Alabama's other first-half scoring came on runs of 1 yard by Jeff Fagan and 10 yards by Linnie Patrick and field goals of 31 and 32 yards by Peter Kim, who added a 29-yarder in the third quayter.

The other Crimson Tide score came on a 16-yard halfback pass from Paul Carruth to Bart Krout, giving the Tide its biggest lead of the day, 38-7 late in the third quarter.

Byrant's 311th triumph leaves him three shy of the all-time record held by Amos Alonzo Stagg.

Steve Allatorre engineered three second-half scoring drives for the Vols, 3-3, and 1-2.

Allatorre combined with Willie Gault on a 75-yard touchdown pass play and ran 18 yards for another score. Doug Furnas got the other Tennessee touchdown on a 28-yard run.

Army rips Princeton

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Army quarterback Jerreyl Bennett threw two touchdown passes, including a 53-yard strike, and halfback Gerald Walker ran for a career-high 172 yards as the Cadets routed Princeton 34-0 Saturday.

Pitt topples FSU, 42-14

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Quarterback Dan Marino, wearing special pads to protect a bruised shoulder, passed three touchdown passes and set three school records to lead third-ranked Pittsburgh to a 42-14 victory over 11th-ranked Florida State Saturday.

Safety Tom Flynn also returned a punt 83 yards for a touchdown and linebacker Sal Sunseri returned a pass interception 22 yards for another score as Pitt, 5-0, avenged a 1980 loss to Florida State, 4-2, that cost the Panthers a possible national title.

Pitt tailback Bryan Thomas finished the scoring with a six-yard touchdown run with 2:14 left in the game, capping an afternoon in which he rushed for 217 yards on 23 carries.

Marino, sidelined the previous game with a bruised throwing shoulder, returned to action wearing a flak jacket and special shoulder pads. But he became Pitt's all-time career leader in passing yards and total completions, and his three touchdown passes boosted his season total to 16, another school record.

Marino finished with 15 completions in 27 attempts for 251 yards.

His career total of 4,360 yards broke the old Pitt record of 4,219 set by Rick Trocano and his 321 completions surpasses Dave Havern's previous record of 308.

In the first quarter, he and fullback Wayne DiBartola combined on a 22-yard touchdown pass play that gave Pitt a 7-7 lead.

In the second quarter, Sunseri intercepted a pass by Florida State quarterback Rick Stockstill and ran 22 yards for a touchdown that gave Pitt a 14-0 lead.

Midway of the second quarter, Flynn fielded a booming punt by Florida State's Rohn Starprinted 85 yards for another Panther touchdown, dodging Stark at midfield and outrunning another defender.

Florida State cut the margin to 21-7 before halftime on a one-yard touchdown run by Mike Whiting, but Marino threw a pair of touchdown passes to Julius Dawkins in a span of 1:30 early in the third period.

Marino and Dawkins combined on a 48-yard bomb. After a Florida State fumble, Marino hit Dawkins for an 18-yard touchdown.

Terrapins nip Wake Forest

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Quarterback Boomer Esiason threw three touchdown passes and reserve tailback John Nash scored three times to lead Maryland to a 45-33 win over record-breaking Wake Forest in Atlantic Coast Conference football Saturday.

The Terrapins scored twice in the fourth quarter to break a 31-31 tie and gain their second win against three losses and a tie.

Wake Forest fell to 2-5, despite tying or breaking over a dozen school and Atlantic Coast Conference records. The Deacons set an NCAA record with 24 first downs by passing.

Wake Forest quarterback Gary Schofield completed 43 of 62 passes for 504 yards and two touchdowns. That broke school and conference records for pass completions, attempts and yards gained.

Oilers sticking with Earl

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The Houston Oilers have been feasting since returning to their bread-and-butter offense of Earl Campbell's running. But the New England Patriots must guard against the side dish of Ken Stabler's passing.

The Patriots, 1-5 and off to their worst start in 11 National Football League seasons, try to steer back on the playoff road Sunday when they host the Oilers, who are riding a two-game winning streak.

Using a conventional mixture of passing and running, the Oilers split their first four games. Then they went back to the I-formation that worked well last season.

In the two games since then, Campbell has run the ball on 64 percent of the Oilers' offensive plays and gained 368 yards to take the NFL rushing lead with 698 yards. Houston has moved into a tie with Cincinnati and Pittsburgh for the American Conference Central lead.

But in last Sunday's 35-17 win over Seattle that gave Houston a 4-2 record, Stabler threw three touchdown passes, two to Ken Burrough.

"They want to lull you to sleep with that big guy coming through" and then pass into a surprised defense, said Patriots Coach Ron Erhardt.

"They play pass a lot out of the I," added New England free safety Tim Fox. "The problem is when they actually play action to him (Campbell) and then throw to Burrough upfield."

The Oilers also unveiled a shotgun formation against Seattle.

Houston Coach Ed Biles said he started the season with a more wide-open attack to get more diversity in the offense.

But that didn't work and "we went back to the basic guy and now we're trying to diversify from that," Biles said.

The Patriots also have gone back to an old hand, veteran quarterback Steve Grogan. He started the first two games, both losses, then gave way to Matt Cavanaugh, who started the next four.

AC nips LCC, 17-7

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Larry Shillings completed 20 of 34 passes for 241 yards as Austin College held off Lubbock Christian 17-7 Saturday in a Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association contest.

Lubbock Christian limited Austin College, now 5-1, to 91 yards rushing. Shillings hit Ricky Turner with a 52-yard pass in the fourth period for Austin's final score.

Lubbock, which has lost 22 straight games, got on the board with just seconds left in the game.

Alan Jones of Australia, in car No. 1, jumps in front of the pack going into the first turn of the Caesars Palace Grand Prix race Saturday. Jones went on to take the checkered flag in what may have been his last Grand Prix race.

Jones nabs Las Vegas GP

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Alan Jones won an easy victory in what may be his last Formula I race, and Brazilian Nelson Piquet claimed his first world driving championship with a fifth-place finish in the Las Vegas Grand Prix Saturday at Caesars Palace.

Jones, a 35-year-old Australian, started from the second spot on the 24-car grid, jumped past Williams teammate Carlos Reutemann at the start of the race and never was challenged the rest of the way.

MEANWHILE, PIQUET, driving a Brabham, dueled Reutemann and Jacques Laffite in the tense three-way battle for the world driving championship.

Piquet, 29, a winner six times in only two full years in Formula I racing, started the inaugural race on the Caesars Palace track trailing Reutemann by one point.

But he took two points for finishing fifth, moving past Reutemann, who wound up out of the points in eighth, one lap behind Jones. The final edge was 50-51.

Reutemann, from Argentina, fell back from his pole position to sixth on the first lap and never was in contention, apparently having severe handling problems all day. He was ahead of Piquet early in the 75-lap race, but fell one lap behind teammate Jones on lap 57 and wasn't able to give Piquet a real battle the rest of the way.

LAFFITE, WHO trailed Reutemann by six points at the start of the race, had to win to have a chance at his first world title. But the Frenchman never got his car past second place and eventually dropped off the pace after having to pit for a tire change on lap 51.

He passed John Watson of Ireland on the last lap to take one point for sixth place, winding up seven behind Piquet with 44 points on the season.

Frenchman Alain Prost, driving a Renault, was second, 20.048 seconds behind the flying Jones. Italian Bruno Giacomelli was third in an Alfa Romeo and Nigel Mansell of England was fourth in a Lotus.

Nine points are awarded for a Grand Prix victory, with six going for second place and third place through sixth getting from four to one point.

Jones, who averaged 97.992 mph, earlier this season announced his retirement from racing. But he hedged a bit going into the season finale, saying he might change his mind during the off-season.

THE SEASON was a frustrating one for Jones, the defending world champion. He had won just one race coming into the Las Vegas race, but now has won 13 in his career.

Jones, starting next to Reutemann on the first row, accelerated quickly and led the way into the first turn as the field got through the first lap without incident.

Frenchman Jean-Pierre Jarier was unable to start his Osella on the grid, so only 23 cars actually began the 75-lap race.

Patrick Tambay of France, driving a Talbot-Ligier, brought out the first yellow flag on the tight, 2.2-mile course, touching another car, spinning and slamming into one of the concrete barriers on the fourth lap.

The impact completely tore off the front of the car, but Tambay stepped out of the wreckage and hobbled away with only a bruised foot and elbow.

Meanwhile, Jones steadily built his lead and turned the inaugural Las Vegas race into a one-car show, leaving the spotlight to the three drivers battling for the world title.

Bulldogs tame Hurricanes

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Quarterback John Bond, plagued with passing problems most of the season, connected at key times to set up two scores as 16th-ranked Mississippi State upset Miami's 13th-ranked football team 14-10 Saturday.

Bond engineered a second-quarter touchdown with two crucial passes to bring the Bulldogs from behind for good. He hit on a 15-yarder to end Jerry Price that set up a 47-yard Dana Moore field goal, his second, as the half ended.

But in the end, it was the Bulldogs' aggressive defense that salvaged the victory. Mississippi State shut out the Hurricanes in the second half and thwarted a flurry of last-minute passes by Miami quarterback Jim Kelly, who connected on 20 of 41 for 267 yards.

Bond completed 11 of 20 for 151 yards, with seven of them for 110 yards coming in the first half when the teams wrapped up the scoring.

Miami forged ahead early in the second quarter with an 83-yard touchdown march featuring Kelly's passing. The rifle-armed junior accounted for 77 yards with three throws, with the payoff an 11-yard pass to wide receiver Larry Brodsky that produced a 10-3 lead.

The State defense nailed Miami deep in its end zone on the Hurricanes' next possession and produced a safety when Miami center Don Bailey snapped the ball through the end zone on a punt attempt.

Pate leads Pensacola by 4

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Hometown boy Jerry Pate charged into a 4-stroke lead and three of golf's biggest guns wheeled into position for a shot at golf's top money-winning spot Saturday in the third round of the Pensacola Open.

Pate, followed by a massive gallery of friends, relatives and neighbors, took command of the tournament title chase with a 7-under-par 65. Meanwhile Tom Kite, Ray Floyd and Bruce Lietzke, all involved in the chase for leading money-winning honors, moved among the leaders in golf's tightest money race in 17 years.

Tom Watson, however, all but took himself out of it. Watson, who swept Player of the Year and leading money-winning honors for the 4-year period 1977-80, shot a 69. At 209, was a distant nine strokes off Pate's leading 200 total going into today's final round of this, the last official event on the 10-month tour schedule.

Watson needs a victory — now a decided longshot — to overtake the absent Bill Rogers on the point list from which the Player of the Year is chosen. He needs a finish of no worse than second to have a chance to overtake Kite on the money list.

Kite, who leads the money list with $364,099, Floyd, with $354,926, and Lietzke, with $336,146, all stayed very much in contention, however. This tournament offers a total purse of $200,000 with $36,000 to the winner.

Kite, who made the cut for the final two rounds only by virtue of an eagle-2 Friday, came from the cutoff figure with an 8-under-par 64. That put him at 206, 10 under par for three trips over the 7,133-yard Perdido Bay Club course and six behind Pate.

"I'm much more comfortable," said Kite, who had one string of six consecutive birdies, the longest streak of the year on the pro tour.

"I got myself in position to be the determining factor in my own destiny," said the little man who has finished eighth or better in 16 of his last 17 starts.

Lietzke, who must win if he is to have any chance at the money title, also was at 206 after a 71, which he compiled while playing with his brother-in-law, Pate.

The veteran Floyd, only $9,173 back of Kite on the money-winning list and needing a victory — second place won't do it — to take Player of the Year honors, was one stroke better at 205 after a 67 in the bright, warm sunshine.

But Pate, a Pensacola resident and unofficial host for this tournament, is in the driver's seat for the title. Winner of the Memphis Classic earlier this season, he barged in front on the strength of a pair of 40-foot birdie putts on the back nine and a 60-footer that found the hole for an eagle-3 on the 11th.

"I think I'll have to play it three or four under tomorrow to win, but I think I'm capable of that.

"It all depends on the putting. I'm hitting the ball very well and if I can make some putts I feel like I can win."

Steve Melnyk, with a 68, and rookie Fred Couples, with a 71, shared second at 204.

Floyd was tied at 205 with Gibby Gilbert, Scott Hoch, Fuzzy Zoeller and George Cadle. Hoch had a 67, Gilbert 68, Zoeller and Cadle 69.

Penn State rips Orange

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Curt Warner rushed for a school record 256 yards on 26 carries Saturday, scoring on a 69-yard gallop and setting up four other touchdowns with his running and receiving as second-ranked Penn State romped to a 41-16 college football victory over Syracuse.

Warner, a 5-foot-11, 195-pound junior from Wyoming, W.Va., carried 13 times for 189 yards in the first half and went on to smash the 69-year-old Penn State mark of 250 set by Shorty Miller in 1912 against Carnegie Tech.

Todd Blackledge, who completed 10 of 11 passes for 120 yards, scored on a five-yard keeper and threw touchdowns passes of seven yards to Mike McCloskey and 12 to Vyto Kab, giving the Nittany Lions a 21-9 lead and offsetting field goals of 51, 50 and 44 yards by Gary Anderson of Syracuse.

Warner carried five times for 53 yards including runs of 16 and 26 yards as Penn State took the opening kickoff — Warner returned it for 21 yards — and stormed 78 yards in nine plays for a 7-0 lead.

Early in the second quarter, he turned a short pass from Blackledge into a 17-yard gain to the Syracuse 8. Three plays later, the Lions made it 14-3 on the Blackledge-to-McCloskey pass which the second-string tight end caught between two defenders.

Penn State, 5-0 for the season, scored two touchdowns and a field goal in the final 4:05 of the second period for a 31-9 halftime runaway.

Sooners bomb Kansas, 45-7

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Reserve quarterback Darrel Shepard and halfbacks Steve Sewell and Alvin Ross scored two touchdowns each as Oklahoma trounced Kansas 45-7 Saturday in a Big Eight Conference football game.

Shepard entered the game after the intermission when first-string quarterback Kelly Phelps sprained his ankle as the Sooners piled up a 17-7 lead.

Two other Oklahoma players scored as the lopsided victory became a training camp for the Sooners, who had a 1-2-1 season before Saturday and fell out of the top 20 rankings.

Quarterback Rod Pegues and other third-string players were sent into the game early in the fourth quarter.

Sul Ross romps

ALPINE, Texas (AP) — Fullback Andrew Hill bulled his way for two touchdowns to pace Sul Ross to a 24-0 victory over McMurry in a Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association game here Saturday.

Hill scored both his touchdowns on runs of two yards, Mitch Pritchett hit at 42-yard field goal and Joey Caceres ran four yards for the final Lobo touchdown.

Sul Ross is now 6-0 on the season, while McMurry dropped to 2-4

Hawkeyes boot Michigan, 9-7

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Iowa freshman Tom Nichol booted three field goals and the 12th-ranked Hawkeyes' powerful defense made them stand up for a 9-7 victory over fifth-ranked Michigan in a Big Ten football showdown Saturday.

Iowa's Dave Strobel recovered Evan Cooper's fumble on the game's first punt and the Hawkeyes moved in for a 20-yard Nichol field goal seven plays later.

The next time the Hawkeyes got the ball, Nichol concluded a 56-yard, seven play drive with a 36-yard field goal to give Iowa a 6-0 lead after one quarter.

Michigan put together its only drive early in the second quarter. The Wolverines marched 68 yards in 10 plays with Steve Smith passing 17 yards to All-American wide receiver Anthony Carter, who beat Iowa defender Lou King for the touchdown in the right corner of the end zone.

Michigan threatened late in the second quarter but Iowa defensive back Mel Cole intercepted a Smith pass intended for tight end Craig Dunaway in the end zone. The Hawkeyes went 67 yards in 12 plays with Nichol kicking a 30-yard field goal that put them ahead for good.

The victory left Iowa with a perfect 3-0 conference record and 5-1 for the season. Michigan fell to 2-2 in the Big Ten and 4-2 overall.

Huskers smother K-State

Curt Williams caught touchdown passes on Nebraska's first two possessions and Mike Rozier bolted 93 yards to score Saturday as No. 19 Nebraska breezed to a 49-3 Big Eight victory over Kansas State.

It was the second straight lopsided victory for the Huskers, 4-2, who overwhelmed Colorado 59-0 last weekend. Kansas State offered little resistance while falling to 1-5.

Turner Gill, a sophomore who tied a Nebraska school record with four touchdown passes in his first start last week, had the Huskers on top of K-State 14-0 with 3:35 left in the first quarter.

Williams, a 230-pound junior tight end, capped an opening drive by catching a 23-yard touchdown pass and a nine-yard scoring strike the next time Nebraska got the ball.

Huskies bury OSU

SEATTLE (AP) — Sophomore quarterback Steve Pelluer fired touchdown passes of 25, 4, 16 and 21 yards in the first half Saturday as the Washington Huskies overpowered outclassed Oregon State 56-17 in a Pacific-10 Conference football game.

Pelluer's four TD passes were two short of the Pac-10 record set by John Elway of Stanford against Oregon State last year and one short of Chris Rowland's Washington school mark set in 1973.

The defending Pac-10 champion Huskies improved their record to 5-1 and went 3-1 in the conference.

Before a crowd of 48,971 on a chilly, dreary day at Husky Stadium, the Huskies led 28-11 at halftime and then put the Beavers away with a three-touchdown burst in the third quarter.

Pelluer, starting his fourth game after a thumb injury to junior Tim Cowan, completed 15 of 23 passes for 159 yards in three quarters of work. He was taken out of the game late in the third quarter with Washington ahead 49-11.

Pelluer's touchdown passes were 25 yards to Anthony Allen and 4 yards to tight end Willie Rosborough in the first quarter and 16 and 21 yards to Aaron Williams in the second period.

In the second half, the Huskies piled up touchdown runs of 5 yards by Ron Jackson, 3 yards by Vince Coby, 9 yards by Brenno DeFeo and 4 yards by Sterling Hinds.

Oregon State, now 1-5 overall and 0-3 in the Pac-10, scored touchdowns on 1-yard runs by Randy Holmes in the second quarter and quarterback Jay Kirschenman in the final period.

Utah whips Rams, 24-13

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Tyce Ferguson threw two second-half touchdown passes and the Utah defense stopped Colorado State offense Saturday as the Redskins whipped the Rams 24-13 to stay in the thick of the Western Athletic conference race.

The victory raised Utah's overall record to 5-1, but more importantly gave the Redskins a 2-0 WAC record.

Colorado State is winless in six games. Three of those teams were conference encounters.

Ferguson threw touchdown passes to Tony Brahan and to Ray Elgaard in the third quarter to give Utah a 24-7 lead which proved insurmountable to the mistake-prone Rams.

The 18-yard TD pass to Brahan was set up when defensive tackle Steve Clark recovered a fumble by Troy Lindsay at the CSU 29-yard line.

The scoring pass to Elgaard capped a long time-consuming 85-yard drive late in third quarter.

Tulane runs by Falcons

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Tailback Marvin Lewis scored three touchdowns as Tulane used a potent ground game and four Air Force turnovers to defeat the Falcons 31-13 in college football Saturday.

Tulane with Lewis and fullback Reggie Reginelli doing the bulk of the running, rallied from a 13-3 halftime deficit to dominate the second half.

The tide turned quickly as Tulane opened the third quarter with a well-executed, 80-yard drive capped by Lewis' 5-yard touchdown run. Scarcely two minutes later, Lewis scored again on a 6-yard run after Tulane recovered an Air Force fumble on the Falcons' 23-yard line.

Georgia buries Vandy

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Flanker Lindsay Scott caught two scoring passes and All-American tailback Herschel Walker ran for two touchdowns Saturday to lead No.9 Georgia to a 53-21 Southeastern Conference football victory over Vanderbilt.

Scott, a senior from Jesup, Ga., set a school career receiving record when he pulled down a 48-yard scoring aerial from reserve quarterback John Lastinger. Earlier in the second quarter, Scott had combined with quarterback Buck Belue on a 6-yard touchdown.

Kevin Butler opened the scoring when he booted an 18-yard field goal after a 17-play Bulldog drive following the opening kickoff stalled on the Vanderbilt 2-yard-line.

The Commodores, forced to punt after the next series of downs, got a break when the ball rolled through Daryll Jones' hands and Vanderbilt's Bob O'Connor recovered on the Georgia 13.

On the next play, quarterback Whit Taylor found tailback Van Heflin alone in a corner of the end zone. Mike Woodard booted the extra point for a 7-3 lead for Vanderbilt, 1-5 and 0-3 in the SEC.

Walker, a sophomore who carried 39 times for 186 yards and set a Bulldog career rushing mark with 2,684 yards after 17 games, scored with 1:57 left in the first quarter when he capped an 80-yard, 10-play drive by scoring from the 3.

Georgia, 5-1 and 3-0, broke the game open from early in the second half, however, scoring three touchdowns, a safety and another field goal.

Cheating rocks angler tournament

Some say the good old boys who fish are the back-bone of the nation. And for the most part, that is probably correct.

OF ALL the silent majority, anglers are the most quiet and most solid. The only human possibly truer and more upright than a dyed-in-the-wool angler anywhere is one who wears boots and drawls. That is, he is "Southern Angler", and if he happens to be a Texas fisherman, he is indeed a man whose word is beyond question.

And since the most recent National Fishing Week was promoted his summer, we are reminded the sportsmen are perhaps the most influential force remaining when it comes to setting examples of honesty and integrity for our younger people.

MOST ATHLETES and politicians have failed miserably in being the true All-American boy, thoseput on this earth to set examples. About the only think left is the true sportsman, the fisher$and hunter people...to direct the young through thee stumbling times.

But there is always one o two bad apples in every eye. Even in the fishing ranks. And that's ashame.

The latest recorded atempt at cheating by fishermen wa logged at the wwigh-in of the Batle of the Lakes bass tournament. Headquartered in Longview, the ournament allowed anglers to fish or any one of several East Texas lakes or a certain period of time.

Contestants could weih bass only. First prize was $40,000; second was 5,000 and so on.

A COUPLE of fishindom's finest apparently had not rea all the rules, which called for both a physical examination of the winning fish and a polygraph test for wining anglers.

And obviously the weren't very innovative, trying the old lead-sinker-in-the-stomach ploy to increase the weight.

Examination by a biologist found the extra ballast and the fish were disqualified. The two fishermen were banned from future participation in this tournament.

Ironically, one of the fish weighed enough to cop the $5,000 second-place award without being leaded. So the attempt to cheat cost the angler more than just his reputation.

There were no awards, for instance, for winning any one of several divisions in the pretigious state bass tournaments. But the glory and publicity of winning the state and being recognized by your peers as a champion bass angler have been medicine strong enough to cause some cribbing.

ONLY IN recent years has polygraph testing been even a threat for State winners. It has remained optional, however, and largely unused because of the "embarassment" of the judges in calling for it, even if there is something suspicious at weigh-in.

Not too many years ago, I had a good friend who was in charge of a prestigious state-organized bass tournament. In his precautions before the tournament commenced, he and fellow workers examined all the boats and checked all livewells for fish. They had hoped that all the fish would be caught in the lake, not in the boat.

The lake was not announced previously, so they allowed it would not be possible for the entries to stake out previously-caught fish.

It was not until the weigh-ins were over and the winners announced that one of the also-rans pointed out the state of the gills of some of the fish on the winning stringer.

Much later, my friend learned that for this contest, the enterprising angler had made use of a "false bottom" to store fish to escape detection as the boats were launched. Only one thing, the fish were very dead when he got them out and moreso after he dragged them around all day.

Jim Plunkett odyssey leads to bench

By The Associated Press

Just about a year ago, a quarterback named Jim Plunkett began a National Football League odyssey that would wind up with him leading the Oakland Raiders to the world championship.

This Sunday, that same Jim Plunkett will be sitting on the Raiders' bench, watching a second-year quarterback named Marc Wilson call signals for the suddenly scoreless Super Bowl titlists, who host the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

The Raiders have been shut out the last three weeks and their 2-4 record places them fourth in the American Conference West. The last team to be blanked three weeks in a row was the 1943 Brooklyn Dodgers.

"After a while, you start wondering if you'll ever get in the end zone," said Wilson, who'll be making his first start in the NFL. "Then you start pressing."

Oakland has gained a total of 329 yards in the losses to Detroit, Denver and Kansas City. And the Bucs, who are 4-2 and tied with Minnesota for the top spot in the National Conference Central Division, have allowed a total of 30 points in their last three contests — all wins.

"The Raiders still have a good football team, with many outstanding players," said Bucs Coach John McKay. "Their streak just shows that anything can happen in this league."

Elsewhere Sunday, it's Buffalo at the New York Jets; Houston at New England; New Orleans at Cleveland; Philadelphia at Minnesota; Pittsburgh at Cincinnati; St.Louis at Atlanta; San Francisco against Green Bay at Milwaukee; San Diego at Baltimore; Denver at Kansas City; Washington at Miami; Tampa Bay at Oakland; New York Giants at Seattle, and Los Angeles at Dallas in a night game.

On Monday, it will be Chicago at Detroit.

While the Raiders are on a roll backwards, the Philadelphia Eagles and Minnesota Vikings are two of the hottest teams in the NFL. The defending NFC champion Eagles are the league's only unbeaten team and they'll put their 6-0 record on the line against the Vikings, who have overcome an 0-2 start with four consecutive victories.

"I'm very excited about being 6-0," said Eagles Coach Dick Vermeil. "It's the first time the Eagles have ever been 6-0 and now we have an opportunity and a challenge to go 7-0."

The Vikings edged San Diego 23-21 last week on Rick Danmeier's field goal as time ran out. That doesn't make them any more comfortable about playing Philadelphia.

"I guess you'd have to call this out of the frying pan and into the fire," said Minnesota Coach Bud Grant.

Washington lost its first five games before finally reaching the win column last week against Chicago. But the Redskins have the unenviable task of traveling to Miami to play a Dolphins team that lost its first game last Monday night.

"It's important to move forward and not fall back," said Washington Coach Joe Gibbs. "This is the third Super Bowl-type team we're playing.

Moon has affects on wildlife

ROD N. REELE

Does the moon affect the movements of fish and game? By knowing various phases of the moon, can you predict when fish will bite, when deer will leave their beds or when ducks will fly? If you have a picnic, will ants bother you more one hour than the next, or will mosquitoes be worse at certain hours?

Sports Afield has included a fishing forecaster among its pages since 1972, based on the gravitational forces of the moon, which reach four peaks each day. Proponents claim fish bite better, and deer are more apt to be moving during these peaks....

It takes a heckuva a fish to bite a plastic worm in half, but some of the debris present in the average tackle box can do the job quickly. Plastic worms, says SA, can be repaired easily when they become torn apart. Apply a match flame to a tear until it melts together or heat the ends of separate segments and hold until the joint cools. You'll have a new worm...

If your boat doesn't come equipped with a live well to keep your minnows spry and your bass healthy, don't fret. You can use an insulated chest and add one of those portable aerators to keep the water oxygenated. It works nickely and can be a good seat when those splintery old benches in your rowboat start to bother yours...

Hunting prospects in Texas are excellent, says the Texas Parks and Wildlife biologists. Favorable weather conditions with plenty of rain during the first half of 1981 boosted populations of deer, turkey and quail.

Deer are in excellent shape, but herds in some areas still are down somewhat in population after last year's severe drought, especially in south Texas. Deer and turkey seasons open Nov. 14.

In the Trans Pecos, this is a recovery year for the mule deer and white-tailed deer are found in significant numbers in Pecos and Terrell counties. Quail hunting also will be excellent.

Headline news for the Panhandle and South Plains will be the pheasant crop. The white-tail population is in good shape.

In the Permian Basin-Rolling Plains area, deer oucnts around Abilene, San Angelo and Big Spring are up this year. Turkey and quail should do well.

Spartans upset Wisconsin

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Bryan Clark passed for three touchdowns, two to Darryl Turner, as Michigan State upset 14th-ranked Wisconsin 33-14 in Big Ten college football Saturday.

Clark completed 18 of 30 passes for 291 yards and set up a touchdown with a 41-yard run as the Spartans won their first conference game in four tries.

Wisconsin, playing on the road for the first time this year, suffered its first Big Ten loss and fell from first place with a 1-1 conference mark. Overall the Spartans are 2-4, the Badgers 4-2. Michigan State's 33 points was the most scored against Wisconsin this season.

Clark also threw a touchdown pass to Otis Grant and Aaron Roberts scored on a one-yard plunge for the Spartans.

Wisconsin's points came on a blocked punt carried into the Michigan State end zone by Guy Bellaux and a three-yard touchdown pass from reserve quarterback Randy Wright to Jeff Nault.

Michigan State scored on its first possession of the game, controlling the ball for 11 plays before Morten Andersen booted a 23-yard field goal.

The Spartans picked up two more points the next time Wisconsin had the ball when a snap sailed over the head of punter David Greenwood and out of the end zone for a safety.

Stanley wins race in record time

NIAGARA FALLS, Ontario (AP) — Terry Stanley, a 29-year-old elementary school teacher from Eldred, Pa., outdistanced a field of 2,265 runners Saturday to win the Skyline Marathon in record time.

Stanley, who is also a part-time cross country coach at St. Bonaventure University, was first in a time of 2 hours, 18 minutes and 50 seconds. The mark beats the old record set in 1980 by 1 minutes and 40 seconds.

Bo is the closest thing to a sex symbol since Marilyn

By CHARLES CHAMPLIN
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Staring at the waves and thinking profound thoughts one afternoon last summer at the beach, I found myself wondering if Marilyn Monroe was a 10.

It was a rating system that was not in popular use when she left us in 1962; 36 came as close as any single number to summing up a male's eye-view of female perfection.

Both systems are dreadful and chauvinistic in the extreme; what can be said, faintly, is that the 10-count seems to suggest that more than measurements have been taken into consideration. That is not a profound breakthrough.

There probably had not been a sex symbol to compare truly with Marilyn until Bo Derek came along (and at present it is quite unlikely that Bo will haunt the popular imagination as Marilyn continues to do).

Farrah Fawcett has been, I've always thought, not so much a sex object as a sex ornament, a man's dream of someone to introduce to envious friends. Her blazing vivacity rather than any hints of smoldering sensuality and lurking animal drives was her early appeal. There has been something of the prom queen about her, not that scent of musk that men by the millions imagined they caught from Marilyn.

Now the hoorah has died down. Farrah has begun to be seen as a bright as well as beautiful woman with some potential as an actress, and thus still further removed from sex-queen status.

Bo comes closer, but she belongs both literally and symbolically to a much later generation. Her image — and this is about images, not the specifics of private lives — is of the free modern woman who is in charge of her own sexuality, not victimized by it.

She worked so brilliantly well in "10" because her role as a guilt-free sexual predator seemed perfection as casting. Her image in "10" and in "A Change of Seasons" was of the new woman who understands herself to be not a sexual object but a sexual partner, fully in charge of her half of the bargain and maybe a little bit more.

A history of reticence had been cast aside. The result was, or is, a sex symbol freed (in male eyes) from those lingering wisps of conscience or responsibility that took a little of the edge off the lusting after Marilyn.

Marilyn's winsome vulnerability was visible early; there was almost always — at least from the moment when she ceased to be an anonymous pinup — some perception that she needed protecting at least as much as she appeared to need or want a rousing romp in the alfalfa.

The reactions to Marilyn were very complicated, as they are not to Bo. Toward Marilyn, the wish to be both lover and father ran hand in hand with a sort of double vision of her as both wanton woman and waif.

(In Hollywood, the split vision translated as Marilyn maddeningly alluring and maddening to work with, because of her anxieties, insecurities and tumultuous life history.)

Bo answers that most powerful of male fantasies, the gorgeous sex donor who asks no questions, needs no lies and poses no post-pleasure problems. The cruel genius of Blake Edwards' "10" was its demonstration that heart's desire achieved can be a disaster.

There aren't many sadder and funnier scenes than the momentin "10" when Dudley Moore finds himself not the seducer but the attacked, his romantic dreams collapsing even as the long-distance object of his desire is racking up the volume on Ravel's "Bolero."

In a way, Bo Derek's role as a sex object seems even more limiting and out of date, nearly a quarter-century later, than Marilyn's was. Derek's modern woman may be an equal sexual partner, but there has as yet been no effective suggestion in her roles that she could be a dazzling partner in other areas, like conversation. She is as monofunctional as Marilyn was, and less interesting, because on screen she does not hint of Marilyn's emotional complexity.

It is paradoxically true that both women have conveyed a kind of innocence. In the women Bo has played, it is a kind of innocence by indifference or default, there being nothing to feel guilty about.

In Marilyn, you sensed to the end some guarded core of private innocence, some part of her that was not pleased by the things she had had to do until fame came. Later, as the reigning sex symbol, she innocently aspired to be something more, and that may have been the start of the long unraveling.

It is more than death that gives Marilyn an eminence Bo cannot yet challenge. The more Marilyn entered into legend, the more real she became and the more vulnerable she was perceived to be.

Bo is pretty in a less flashy way than Marilyn, upscale from Marilyn's beauty queen. At a guess, Bo, productively partnered with John Derek, is happier and more secure than Marilyn ever became. She is possibly less complicated and more resilient. She is far less a victim of the economic wars.

She is a perfect symbol of sex without consequences (although her character in "A Change of Seasons" seemed to be opting at last for love). She is also, until now, less interesting than Marilyn and maybe even less interesting than Farrah. Heart's desire is complicated, and there are many ways to count to 10.

Universal Studios under investigation

HOLLYWOOD — Universal Studios is under investigation by the U. S. Department of Labor for alleged discrimination against minorities in its hiring and promotion practices. The studio and MCA, Universal's parent conglomerate, stand to lose their federal contracts if the charges are substantiated.

One of the contracts threatened by the investigation is the federal license of New Ventures, an MCA subsidiary funded by the government to foster minority film projects. The discrimination complaint was filed with the Department of Labor's contract compliance office by a coalition of minority groups called the Intercultural Media Action Guild for Equity.

The coalition, comprising blacks, Latinos, Asian-Americans and Native Americans in the entertainment industry, charged that "racist and exclusionary practices" at Universal and elsewhere in the television and film industry had prevented qualified minorities from equal employment opportunities before and behind the cameras.

The complaint pertains to the film and TV industry in general, and to Universal and Paramount Pictures specifically. Department of Labor spokesman Steven Brown said an investigation of Paramount was pending determination of that studio's status as a government contractor.

That determination already has been made in the case of MCA-Universal, which manages federal parks through its recreational services division and which, through its New Ventures subsidiary, receives funds from the Small Business Administration.

Peters gives performances to remember

By GEORGIA TELE
Staff Writer

Six years after she began vo lessons, the late impresario Sol Hurok heard singing at her teacher's studio. He was so impnd, he signed her immediately.

She was 19.

Hurok arranged an audition her with Rudolf Bing, then general manager ne Metropolitan Opera.

Shortly after the audition, Erta Peters was signed by the Met.

She was to make her debut he Queen of the Night in Mozart's "The Magic F," however, due to the illness of a colleague twonths later, Miss Peters' first Met performance wne role of Zerlina in Mozart's "Don Giovanni."

In the 30 years since then, M Peters has performed over 500 times with the . She is perhaps best known for her coloratura roines of grand opera, such as "Lucia di Lammoor," Gilda in "Rigoletto" and Rosina in "Ilrbiere de Sivigl ia."

This week found Miss Peters Midland-Odessa for two performances with tMidland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra, directed Dr. Thomas Hohstadt.

Both were memorable.

The quality of Miss Peters' Monday night's performance, even after only "one rehearsal with the symphony," was such that some patrons went again Tuesday.

The only difference in the two performances was perhaps the volume of the symphony.

At one point during her performance Tuesday, Miss Peters, without missing a note, turned to the orchestra and indicated to them by waving her arm in a shushing motion, to play softer.

It was possible to see her do this even from the balcony. Those at Lee High Auditorium who saw her movement knew what she was attempting to achieve. The orchestra sounded as if it was competing with her rather than accompanying her.

Her action drew the necessary response. The orchestra played softer.

Otherwise her Midland performance, as was her Odessa one, was almost flawless. She knows how to use her voice to its maximun.

Wednesday before she left for a recital in Seattle, Wash., Miss Peters talked about her West Texas trip.

"I enjoyed working with the symphony very much," Miss Peters said. "In it are talented young people who could go far. They all tried very hard both evenings. If everybody is really pulling together; it comes off. My music is not easy.

"And what would we ever do without these women's committees (referring to the symphony's guilds)? They work so hard.

"Also a good manager is very important. I was very impressed with Sam (Woodward). He knows how to treat an artist," she said.

Another highlight of her trip was a tour of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and Library Hall of Fame.

"I learned so much," Miss Peters said. "I had a wonderful time. I saw it (the oil industry) from the beginning. That marvelous museum is beautifully laid out; it tells it very clearly."

Miss Peters tours extensively. For her, "two concerts in two days is a lot. If I can, I like to skip a day, but very often that is not possible."

Miss Peters said she likes to divide her engagements between recitals and performances with symphonys.

An avid tennis player, Miss Peters plays whenever she can. Those times on tour when she can't, she has a regular exercise routine she follows.

"It keeps me sane," she said laughing.

Her exercise, plus rehearsals and sleeping when she feels tired, are all part of how she maintains her health and her voice.

As she said in closing, "If you enjoy singing, you work. Otherwise, you're not going to sing very long."

Boston Symhony Orchestra celebrates 00th birthday

By HEL Q. HANEY
Assoed Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The Bo Symphony Orchestra, on the brink of turning a genteel age 100, is ting on a glittery $1,000-a-head concert Sunday to celebrate.

The black-tie concert is tirst of a week of musical events, including a free birthday renditio Beethoven's Ninth on Boston Common, before the symphony leaves a round-the-world tour.

Beneath this razzmatazz, ever, is a real concern about the symphony's ability to stay in the k. Players may fret about staying at the top of their musical form, the people who try to balance the symphony's books say a more derous threat is money.

This is why the good seat Sunday's Symphony Hall concert cost $1,000. The orchestra has m fund-raising a big part of its birthday party.

"Every year, the deficit garger because of the fixed costs of maintaining an international symny orchestra," said Assistant Manager Peter Gelb. "We're faced wigloomy picture as to where we'll find the money to meet our expenses

This year the symphony wake in $12 million but have costs of about $17 million, including fixedms like salary and traveling expenses for the orchestra. To build its endowment, the orchestra held the fund drive to go with the aersary, and Gelb says it will exceed its $15.7 million goal before thek is over.

Money is a relatively newncern for the Boston Symphony. Henry Lee Higginson, the philantlist who founded the orchestra in 1881, paid the annual deficit himsevery year until 1918. And he persuaded his friends to finance the conction of Symphony Hall, the orchestra's accoustically perfect home.lid not have to hold a public fund drive until 1967.

These days, people at thmphony don't speak much of making the orchestra better. Theye more concerned with keeping it as it is.

"A great symphony orchelike this is like a park, and I am the park keeper," says Seiji Ozawae music director for eight years.

Art Linkletter used to be every housewives' daytime favorite

Art Linkletter did his thing five days a week for 25 years, on shows like "House Party" and "People Are Funny," pioneer audience-participation shows. Linkletter, with his wide-angle wink and mop-and-glow smile, was every housewife's daytime favorite.

But interviewing the school kids — that was the bit that made him.

So simple. So sweet. So spontaneous.

"Without a doubt, it's what I'll be remembered for. Everywhere I go I hear it: 'Why don't you interview the kids again?' "

Art Linkletter laughs his private laugh.

"We found we couldn't invite the great kids back more than three times," he says.

Invite the kids back? Like performers?

"Three times was the limit — after that they lost it. They started thinking of themselves as stars."

Doesn't Art Linkletter say the darndest things?

"Here and there I'm sure we played a few kids cheap," he says. "No doubt about it...When you're a young, charging performer, you do it...Everyone who does an audience show is kind of making fun of people. Some of the early shows I cringe at. But don't forget, we were experimenting in television then. We were inventing this business as we went along. People like me and Ralph Edwards were, in effect, inventing the talk show. Only we never thought of restricting it to celebrities...Now I wouldn't do a lot of the things I did then. We hit people in the face with pies. We put them in tar and feathers. We dumped them in lakes...I got away with it because I wasn't squeezing people. I opened the door and people went down the chute. But I didn't do it with malice or glee.

Man arrested for harassing Caroline Kennedy with marriage proposals

NEW YORK (AP) — A man convicted of harassing Caroline Kennedy with marriage proposals says "I don't see how you can harass someone when you want to get married."

Kevin King, 35, of Palo Alto, Calif., was convicted Friday by Criminal Court Judge John Bradley of separate counts of criminal trespass and aggravated harassment of Miss Kennedy, 23, who lives in Manhattan.

Sentencing was set for Oct. 23. King faces a maximum one-year prison sentence on each count.

King wrote Miss Kennedy two letters and a postcard, telephoned her and approached her several times to tell her he loved her and wanted to marry her.

During the trial he told the judge, "if she has any interest in me, I'd still like to marry her."

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — If the Soviet Union and the United States had a nuclear exchange, half the American people would be killed while only 5 to 10 percent of the Soviets would die, says a physicist who helped develop the hydrogen bomb.

After destroying the United States, the Soviet Union "would have enough (nuclear fire power) left to terrorize the rest of the world," physicist Edward Teller said Friday.

"If there were a conflict today, it is very possible that the world would be ruled by the Soviet Union," said Teller, speaking during a New Mexico Press Association convention.

Teller said he came to the United States from Europe in the 1930s and foresaw the gathering forces that led to World War II. "I have the same feelings today that I had in 1935."

ATLANTA (AP) — Entertainer Sammy Davis Jr. has been awarded an honorary doctorate of literature from Atlanta University.

Davis joined historian John Hope Franklin in receiving the degree during charter day convocation ceremonies Friday.

"Everybody loves Sammy — toddlers, teen-agers, old folks, college kids, the commuter set, the cool, lukewarm and hot," said university President Cleveland Leon Dennard.

Davis, subdued after receiving the degree and white-and-crimson collar for his academic robe, noted that he never had a formal education.

"I will try my best never to do anything to embarrass my people, my country and this honor," he said.

Atlanta University is the oldest graduate institution in the nation serving a predominantly black student body.

Thomas receives Armstrong Award

NEW YORK (AP) — A special Armstrong Award for broadcasting has been presented to the late Lowell Thomas, a broadcaster, producer and author whose career spanned seven decades.

CBS broadcaster Douglas Edwards accepted the award on behalf of the Thomas family at ceremonies on the Columbia University campus Friday night.

The awards, established in 1964, are named after the late Edwin Howard Armstrong, inventor of FM broadcasting and key electronic circuits.

Newscaster John Cameron Swayze was host of the program. The top radio broadcasts of 1980 were selected from 23 finalists in six categories.

The winners were:

—WLIR-FM, Long Island, N.Y., for "Roadhouse Blues: A Tribute to Jim Morrison;" music.

—CBC, Toronto, for the series "Africa Week;" education.

—NBC News, New York, "The Source Report," for "Kent State;" news documentary.

—WITF-FM, Hershey, Pa., for "Virginia Wolfe and Company;" creative use of the medium.

—KNX News Radio, Los Angeles, for "The Busing Ruling Reports;" news.

—KTMC, McAlester, Okla., for "Is There a Justice;" community service.

Each winner received a bronze plaque.

In addition, certificates were given to finalists in the competition. They include:

—In music, South Carolina Educational Network, Columbia, S.C., second place; CHFI-FM, Toronto, honorable mention.

—In education, National Public Radio, Washington, D.C., second place; WNYC Radio, honorable mention, and WGBH-FM, Boston, honorable mention.

—In news documentary, National Public Radio, second place; WOR Radio, New York, honorable mention, and WAHT, Lebanon, Pa., honorable mention.

Friends of Music present 'Mostly Mozart'

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

Many remember the delightful opera presentations — "Little Red Riding Hood" and "Trial by Jury" — presented by Friends of Music at Theatre Midland last summer. Both were nicely done, offering Midlanders, whether they be 8 or 80, an opportunity to share a family outing at a very reasonable price. During the performances it was hard to tell who was enjoying themselves more, the audience or the cast members.

Well, the Friends of Music are at it again.

The setting this time is the First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave., when at 2:30 p.m. today the Friends of Music will present a "Mostly Mozart" concert. The performance is free and open to the public.

The concert's bill of fare includes the Friends of Music Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Brian Gum, performing "Symphony No. 29"; pianists Darryl and Nancy Knapp on two grand pianos playing "Two Piano Concerto, K. 365"; and soprano Kay Mathews singing "Exsultate, Jubilate (K. 165)." All are by Mozart.

This Friends' concert is "the result of a lot of orchestra players that want to do smaller scale more intimate chamber music in a more relaxed setting," Darryl Knapp said in a recent interview.

"They are not hard listening at all, in fact, they are all easy listening," said of the works to be performed. These are early Mozart works, written when he was about 10 or 12.

"We haven't had a genius quite like Mozart in a long time. He wrote piano sonatas at age 4 and 5 and died when he was around 34. The amount of material he wrote in 30 years was phenomenal."

This music was not designed to be performed for a "public or codified rehearsed performance," but rather for more of a "Sunday afternoon gathering type of affair." The music was "designed to put the audience at ease as well as the performer."

In Mozart's day, this type of performance was a pleasant way for the family to spend part of an afternoon, Knapp said.

It is the intent of the Friends of Music to offer Midlanders this same opportunity, Knapp said.

The concert is being held at the church because churches have historically provided an "umbrella or housing for the arts," Knapp said.

First Christian Church is providing the "housing" for this and other concerts in the Fall Concert Series. The performers pay the expenses.

The Nov. 8 concert will be chamber music presented at 2:30 p.m., featuring Nancy Knapp, Gloria Steelman, Vilia Walter, Brian Gum, Martha Davis and the Pro-Arte Chamber Singers of Texas. Dr. Stan Engebretson will be the conductor.

For Knapp and the others involved, the Fall Concert Series is a "labor of love."

Sunday, Monday, & Tuesday we're featuring the Great Alaskan King Crab Feast:

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Pregnancy may delay treatment

Dear Dr. Solomon: A cousin of mine has been told she has cancer. What makes it even worse is that she's pregnant. Is it possible for her to be given drugs to fight the cancer without harming the baby? — Gwen, Petersburg, Va.

Dear Gwen: If the life and health of the mother are in balance, chemotherapy may have to be started regardless of its possible effect on the fetus. However, drugs that may cause malformations in the fetus if given during the first three months of pregnancy, may not have that effect if withheld until the second or third trimester.

This does not mean that the drugs may not produce other harmful effects. According to Dr. Hugh R.K. Barber, of Lenox Hill Hospital in New York, chemotherapy administered even during the latter stages of pregnancy may cause spontaneous abortion, stillbirth and premature delivery. Moreover, the long-term genetic effect of the drugs is not known.

Doctors generally try to delay treatment until later in the pregnancy. As I've noted, however, if the mother's health and life are in danger, chemotherapy may have to be started regardless of the time.

Dear Dr. Solomon: At what age does a person generally begin to suffer from a narrowing of the arteries? — Bill, Baltimore, Maryland

Dear Bill: You are probably referring to the condition known as atherosclerosis, which begins early in life. It is estimated that in the United States, most people over 50 years of age, both men and women, have moderately advanced coronary atherosclerosis even though they may not have any symptoms. Because of the lack of symptoms, the condition often goes undetected, and many people who should be under a doctor's care are not receiving treatment.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My brother has had radiation treatment for prostate cancer, and it seems to have been successful. What I don't understand is how it works. Can you explain? — Kevin, Pittsburgh.

Dear Kevin: The theory behind radiation therapy is to attack the cancer with rays that destroy the cancer cells, but that do as little damage as possible to the healthy tissue that surrounds it. The radiation may come from a source outside the body, such as an x-ray machine, or, in some types of cancer, it may come from a capsule of radioactive material that is implanted in the body.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've heard that mothers who breastfeed their babies develop an immunity to cancer. Are there any indications that this is so? — Mrs. A.V., Detroit

Dear Mrs. V.: At one time it was believed that breastfeeding did help prevent breast cancer; however, more recent studies indicate that this is not so. Breastfeeding neither decreases or increases a woman's risk of developing breast cancer.

RINGING THE BELL

Black church becoming live model

With BOB TIEUEL

The Role of the Black Church: "Dear Bob — The role that the black church must play in the black man's struggle against racism, his struggle for liberation and total equality, is to become a live model on earth of what is happening in heaven. The black church must be the voice of God, and it must be the force of God in the black community. It must challenge black people to fight and struggle for liberation. It must be able to point out where the forces of darkness are.

The black church must make known that liberation is God's battle, that the liberation is God's objective, that it is not simply a civil rights struggle but a struggle of God. If the battle is going to be won, it must be on God's terms.

The black church can provide the moral leadership for a decaying society. To me the black church remains the only salvation, not only for black people, but for the white community as well...I believe the black church needs to be revolutionized. It needs to be cleaned out in the sense that the false prophets among us must be driven out, the racketeers must be driven out, and those who do not have divine credence for their authority as preachers and those who do not belong to the new community because they do not belong to Jesus Christ, must be weeded out.

The works of the devil are hunger, poverty, racism, war, militarism etc. All of these things are contrary to the standards of God. This new community must continue to make love to God and reconcile man to God. I remain, yours truly, Tom Skinner.

President Reagan recently signed a new Executive Order to help strengthen black colleges. The signing took place at a White House luncheon for black college supporters. It is established to improve and protect black colleges, increases black participation in federally sponsored programs; mandates government-wide coordination to ensure full opportunities for black college participation in federally sponsored programs; and calls on the Secretary of Education to encourage private sector initiatives in assisting these institutions.

Stated President Reagan: "Hundreds of thousands of young Americans received training at these institutions over the past 100 years, expanding their opportunities as individuals and laying the foundation for social progress...The future success of these schools will depend more than anything else on the efforts of black Americans. The future depends on an even stronger commitment to excellence and diversity in education."

CONSUMER TIPS

Prepare your furnace for winter

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau
of the Permian Basin, Inc.

As brisk fall days herald the approach of winter, the wise resident who controls his or her own heating system should get a head start on fuel economy by preparing the home furnace for heavy duty ahead. The Better Business Bureau suggests conducting a thorough furnace checkup before the first cold spell hits.

A furnace checkup can be a do-it-yourself project, but having the heating system checked by reliable technicians at the beginning of the heating season is a good investment. In either case, be sure the following steps are taken:

—Turn on the furnace well in advance of anticipated need, so that any trouble can be detected and corrected in a leisurely manner that allows time for thoughtful selection of a competent repair company.

—Check the air filters through which recirculated house air passes, and clean or replace them if they are loaded with dust or lint. Establish a schedule — every 30 days, for example — for washing permanent filters or replacing disposable ones.

—If the blower motor is of the type requiring oiling, put a few drops of oil in the oil cup at each end of the motor at the beginning of the season; re-oil in January or February. With a hot water heating system it is necessary to oil the motor on the circulating pump, located at the back of the heating boiler.

—On gas or oil furnaces, examine the venting pipe (flue) to make sure it is in good condition and firmly in place. Rust spots on the pipe or rust streaks running down from the chimney indicate that the chimney may be plugged up. Old chimneys are susceptible to blockage by deteriorated mortar falling off the sides and filling the flue opening. These fragments must be removed by loosening the pipe and reaching into the opening.

The burning of fuel often produces ashes that interfere with good heat transfer. Further, burning fuel efficiently requires a specific quantity of air for optimal combustion. For these reasons it is wise to have the heat exchange surfaces of the furnaces cleaned periodically, and to have the air combustion rate checked or improved by service professionals. Oil burners, for example, work best if the air in the flue contains at least 9 percent carbon dioxide. A technician usually can tune up or adjust the burner to achieve better combustion rates that result in more efficient and less costly fuel consumption.

Government studies have shown that many furnaces and boilers are oversized for the heating requirements of the houses they serve. A competent service technician, through a series of measurements and calculations, can make the furnace more energy efficient by reducing the fuel intake and modifying air-handling parts.

Having the service technician check and reset, if necessary, the on and off temperature settings on the furnace fan can conserve significant amounts of fuel. The fan should shut off when the furnace temperature is about 90 degrees Fahrenheit and should not go on again until the burner comes on and raises the furnace temperature to about 100 degrees Fahrenheit.

Fall is the prime time for bogus furnace repairs. Beware of itinerants who canvass neighborhoods saying they are furnace inspectors. Someone unwise enough to let such people examine his or her furnace is likely to be told that it has a crack or other serious deficiency and is extremely dangerous. Often the scheme involves an accomplice, posing as a safety engineer, who recommends installation of a new furnace at once.

Always check the reliability of heating repair companies by contacting the Better Business Bureau before signing a contract, paying out any money, or allowing the present furnace to be dismantled.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Monday, October 19, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Martha Jefferson, wife of Thomas Jefferson, third president of the U.S., was born on this date. Those celebrating birthdays today are idealistic, intuitive and fair-minded. In the year ahead, your personal relationships will have a direct effect on both your career and your financial status. Love is extremely important to your long-range happiness. Avoid all types of gambling between now and the end of the year. Your work responsibilities increase and so should your income. Do not be surprised if long-distance travel now loses its appeal. Short trips are more pleasurable and could aid your business plans.

ARIES (March 21—April 19): Someone may be contemplating joining the service. Avoid associating with an individual who drinks too much. Buckle down to work and financial situation will improve.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): You are now able to achieve some long sought goals. Member of opposite sex lends a helping hand. Realize what is most important to your happiness and set some new priorities.

GEMINI (May 21—June 20): If you are thinking of starting a new career, do not act impulsively. Give the ideal serious thought. Mate could feel neglected. Be observant and show more affection.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Work is sometimes tedious, but will ultimately prove rewarding. Welcome new challenges! Get your ideas on paper before seeing influential people. Romance improves.

LEO (July 23—Aug. 22): A relative's stubbornness tests your patience. State your views calmly but firmly. Keep in touch with old friends. Donate to a good cause even if you are inconvenienced.

VIRGO (Aug. 23—Sept. 22): Financial matters require careful handling. Seek expert advice if legal problems arise. Read fine print before signing documents. Reserve more time for loved one with special needs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23—Oct. 22): Associate's stubbornness is a real challenge. Diplomacy is your strongest ally. Extravagance could be your undoing. Follow the advice of helpful friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Creative work enjoys some very beneficial influences. You can make excellent progress where career or finance is concerned. Loved one will share an important secret.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22—Dec. 21): Productivity is what counts the most now. Concentrate on working out the details before starting new projects. Your curiosity about a stranger could lead to romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22—Jan. 19): Newcomers may not have the expertise needed to make teamwork productive. Help them get oriented. Seeing a former romantic partner could rekindle the flames.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20—Feb. 18): Small children can play an important role in your domestic affairs today. Keep in touch with those who have aided you in the past. They could help you solve a current problem.

PISCES (Feb. 19—March 20): Change your attitude regarding your co-workers and place of employment. You may have been on the wrong track. You must consider the feelings of others if romance is to succeed.

MOST POPULAR FEATURES

"Life In These United States"

Here's how America sees itself through amused and loving eyes. Here's the funny side of life with our neighbors, our friends and our families told in our own words, reflecting the heart of a people who have the greatness to laugh at themselves when their slips are showing. An all-time Reader's Digest favorite.

"Drama In Real Life"

Escape from a flooding underground cavern, landing a super sonic jet while blinded, locked in hand-to-hand combat...with a maddened bear three times your size... these are but a few of the real-life adventures coming to take your breath away. You are there in drama more exciting than television because you see it in your mind's eye the way it really happened.

"Most Unforgettable Character"

Into each life comes someone who has left an indelible impression like a burning brand on the memory. Sometimes such people are famous, sometimes they just should be. Always their stories are absorbing, transferring that certain magnificent spark to those who are priviledged to read about them.

"Humor In Uniform"

Catching our servicemen off guard is far from a serious matter when it comes to humor. This justly-popular Reader's Digest favorite shows there is nothing uniform about the fun and laughter of those who wear their country's olive, blue or gray. Even in civvies, their funny bones (and those of their wives and families) are never off duty as they relate their favorite anecdotes.

PLUS

"AMERICA INSIDE"

"There's got to be a better way..." that's what they're saying in communities all across the nation, and what's more they're finding it. Whether it be lightening the tax load, unsnarling traffic jams, saving energy or getting the kids to get better grades in school, here are the case histories of how it can be done. A mixture of elbow grease and good old American ingenuity, a do-it-yourself manual for spirited citizens who've had just about enough.

"THE ART OF LIVING"

The celebration of life on the pages of Reader's Digest is as much a part of its legend as its humor and its drama. There's always an inspiration, a guidepost, a consolation to be pondered and appreciated. Now, appearing weekly in this newspaper for our readers to enjoy.

1981 DATSUN TRUCKS. MORE POWER. LESS GAS. Stk. No. P49

The secret is Datsun's revolutionary NAPS-Z engine. 2.2 liter hemi-head powerplant that gives better gas mileage and over 18% more torque than last year's engine. Every 1981 Datsun truck has it. Take your pick and take a test drive. You've got to try it to believe it.

The Capp Finish-It-Yourself House™

Quality, Savings and a unique building concept.

Finish-It-Yourself™ means savings. By doing the finishing work on your new dream home you can save thousands compared to having an ordinary builder construct the same house on your lot. Capp Homes are custom built by skilled craftsmen using quality construction materials. The result is a home you'll take pride in for years to come. Here's how it works.

Custom Homes In Every Price Range

Your budget is our budget. Chances are it will go further with Capp than other custom builders. We can build from your plans, or you can customize any one of our many home designs. In 1980, 4 out of 10 Capp customers built their custom home from their own plans. Bring us your plans and we'll be glad to build yours too. Either way, your home will be completely personalized.

What We Do

Capp custom-builds your home on the lot and foundation you provide using quality construction materials. We install sub-flooring, interior stud partitions and exterior doors and windows. Your home is enclosed and ready for you to take over.

Brand Name Quality Throughout

Capp provides the brand name finishing materials for you to complete your custom home. All the products we offer are made by quality, name brand manufacturers to add special value to your home. There are exquisite kitchen cabinets, designer flooring and carpeting, appliances and light fixtures, windows and doors. And much, much more. And the choice is yours. They are all included in the Capp price.

What You Do

You decide which finishing jobs you want to do your self, to save as much as possible. Of course, the more you do, the more you save. The rest you manage by hiring local tradesmen, pocketing the markup a general contractor would normally charge. The savings is yours.

Financing — The Perfect Partner

Evans Financial Corp., a subsidiary of Evans Products Co., has various financing programs that are tailored to fit qualified customer's needs. A large down payment is not required—just a small deposit and your lot can get you started. See your Capp Representative for details.

Greeting autumn

"To every thing there is a season and a time to every purpose under heaven."

"So it is in the Southland," once said novelist James Kilpatrick of the above Biblical quote. "Winter is the waiting time, spring the planting time, summer the growing time. Now, in October, comes the harvest time."

And to many, harvest time—autumn—is the best time of all.

In Midland, the seasons overlap as comfortably as shingles. Here, the creeks rarely freeze and the snow rarely falls. We sometimes know it's fall only by watching Sunday afternoon television when those guys in silver and blue jerseys play it out on the football stadium floor.

But, still, the signs of a changing season are still there. Some symbols never change: an occasional fruit stand filled with vegetables and fruit; corn stalks, usually seen only at displays; a pumpkin moon in the sky; even a few glimpses of gathered pumpkins for sale.

Everywhere the signs of abundance..of labor done...tell the autumn story. It's told in roadside stands, in state and county fairs and in countless pantries. A sense of fulfillment imbues the land.

In West Texas, the signs are different from other parts of the country. Take fall bazaars, for example. They stand as a definite symbol of the season. There are hand made quilts, homebaked goods, hundreds of knicky-knackies, and newly-created cookbooks. The countless hours of work that go into one bazaar are all for one purpose—the name of goodwill.

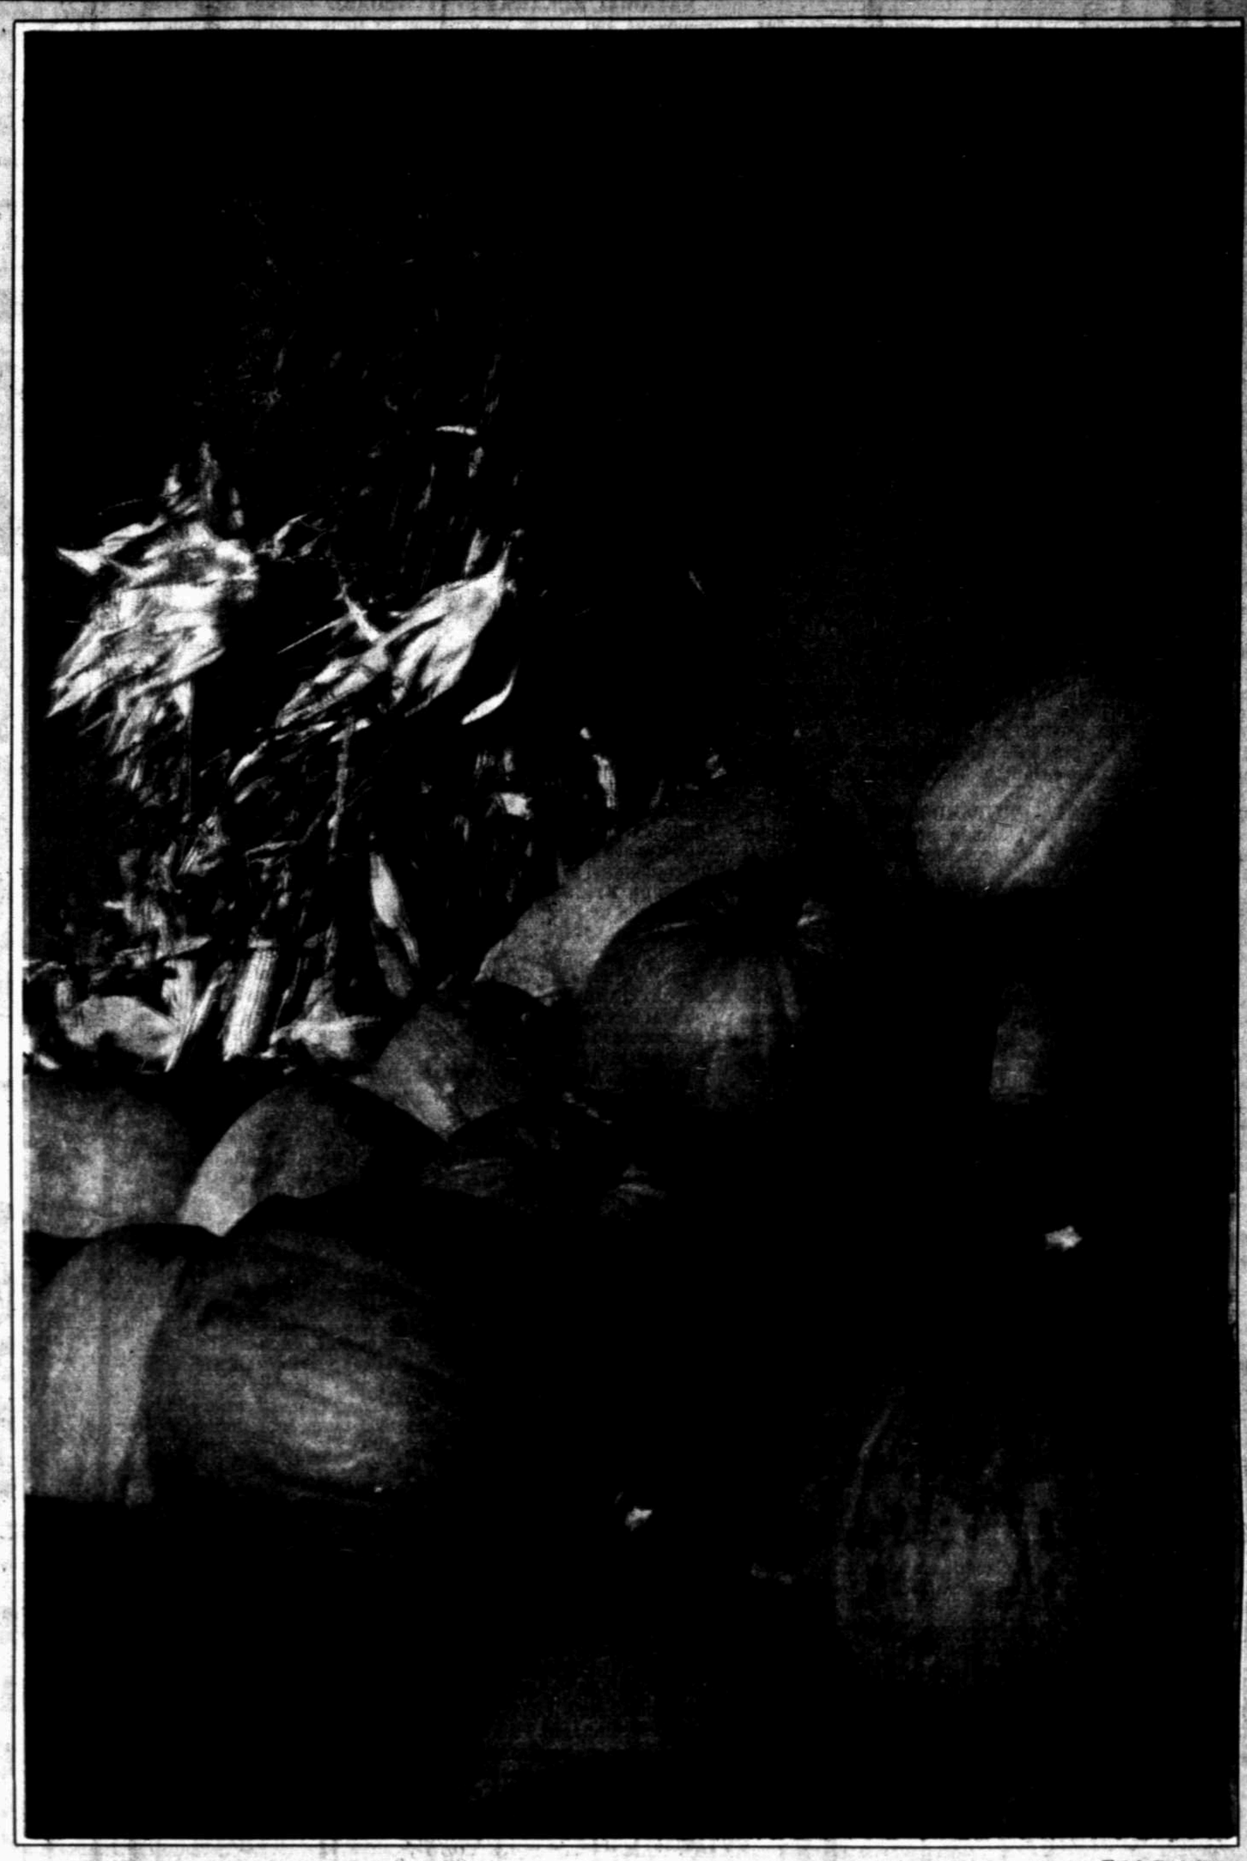

And school. It begins everywhere in autumn, but here in Midland it also means football. Intense rivalries are once again aroused and Friday nights are always reserved for the high school game—a pageantry of color and action.

For many, autumn simply means hunting. It can be anything from squirrels and rabbits to birds. But whether the purpose is for sport or game reward, hunting is a time for getting away from it all and getting back to nature.

And it wouldn't be fall if there weren't carnivals, Halloween hunts, costume parties and a heightened season of activity.

Yes, autumn days, however fragile they are in Midland, have arrived. And they pass too soon. The crispy days and brisker nights. The smells wafting from kitchen ovens. The vivid colors worn by man and nature.

It's a season to be savored.

Name game in jeans fashions

By JACK WILLIAMS
Copley News Service

In the men's fashion industry, manufacturers are playing a what's-in-a-name game. It's winner take fall.

Just sign up a household word — like Burt Reynolds, Kenny Rogers or Willie Nelson —and sew it on the backside of a pair of basic five-pocket jeans. Or the collar of a shirt.

Make your bid in the celebrity sweepstakes. And wait for the sales to soar. A star is worn, the thinking goes.

The late '70s and early '80s have spawned an era of designer wardrobes. Names sell clothes. They mean security. Consistency. Identity.

A suit is not a suit. It's a Pierre Cardin, an Yves Saint Laurent or a John Weitz. And what's that tie you're wearing? An Oscar de la Renta, perhaps? A Christian Dior?

The name game was hotter than ever at the biannual MAGIC (Men's Apparel Guild in California) exhibition for fall fashions.

The most obvious trend: Western clothing with superstar labels.

Everything from a Ewing Oil Co. hat with a J.R. liner to an official Burt Reynolds acetate and nylon shirt with gold "Bandit" lettering on the back and a "Bandit" monogram on the cuff.

Sales representatives say the names cost big bucks but more than make up for it in sales — especially since they are riding the crest of a Western wave.

Whatever, this star-spangled trend has sparked some competition. Bidding wars, you might call them, not unlike those characterizing major league baseball.

The roster of Western wear already includes most of the cast on the "Dallas" TV show, Loretta Lynn, Conway Twitty, the Gatlin Brothers, plus Nelson, Rogers and Reynolds.

Can Robert Redford and John Travolta be far behind?

Larry Lythgoe, vice president of sales and marketing for Karman Western Apparel Inc. of Denver, an industry veteran, views the current Western trend as the biggest of foehe's seen in 28 years.

"Each time it hits," he said, "it's bigger than before. It's become a basic part of the apparel spectrum. It used to be cultish. If you owned a horse, you wore Western clothing and that was it. Now it has the potential of reaching 99 percent of the market, compared with 15 to 25 percent before.

...Midland County Chapter of March of Dimes will host the annual Monte Carlo Night Saturday at Midland Center.

Activities will include gaming fun, a live auction, dancing to a live band and a cocktail buffet.

Over 140 individuals and companies here have agreed to sponsor the event which will benefit the March of Dimes' effort to prevent birth defects.

Last year's fundraiser attracted over 600 persons, according to a representative of the local chapter, with over 900 persons expected this year.

The March of Dimes' mission is to lead, direct and unify the fight to prevent birth defects, and to alleviate their destructive consequences until the fight is won. To this end the Midland County chapter locally supports professional, educational and medical services in addition to research and Texas Medical Service Grants...

...MIDLAND ALPHA CHI OMEGA Alumnae group will celebrate Founder's Day Wednesday with a luncheon at Green Tree Country Club.

The event begins at 11:30 a.m. Reservations and information about the alumnae organization is available by calling Joan Southerland at 694-0258 or Brookie Green at 694-2847. Alumnae new to Midland are encouraged to attend...

Midlanders participate in Texas Rose Show

Debra Dee Steele

Tricia Ann Jowell

Claire Elizabeth Aldridge

Amy Conger Davenport

Four young Midland women were selected as royalty to participate in the Coronation Court and parade pageantry of 1981 Rose Queen Kay Elizabeth Fair at the Texas Rose Festival held in Tyler recently.

They were Claire Elizabetgh Aldridge, daughter of Mrs. Charles Fraser and Charles C. Aldridge; Amy Conger Davenport, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCall Davenport; Tricia Ann Jowell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Jowell, and Debra Dee Steele, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John "Jack" Steele Jr.

Miss Aldridge, a graduate of Midland High School, is attending Southern Methodist University on an academic scholarship. She is majoring in child psychology and is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma.

At MHS, Miss Aldridge was a member of the National Honor Society, a varsity cheerleader, member of the Catoico Court 1980 and was secretary of her Senior Class. In 1979 she was a foreign exchange student in Greece.

Miss Davenport is attending The University of Texas-Austin where she is majoring in French. She is a member of Pi Beta Phi, Alpha Lambda Delta honorary scholastic fraternity, Phi Eta Sigma freshman honorary scholastic fraternity and Student Union special events committee.

She is an honor graduate of MHS, where she was a varsity cheerleader, member of the Student Council cabinet, was a varsity tennis letterman and was Homecoming Queen.

Miss Jowell, also a MHS graduate, is attending UT-Austin, majoring in advertising and public relations. She is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta. At MHS she served as a member of the Student Council, Senior Class treasurer, sweetheart of the golf team, was a Pack-Backer co-captain, Symphony Deb and was a member of Young Life and the Girl Scouts.

Miss Steele is attending Texas Tech University, where she is majoring in home and family life. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma and has been named to the Dean's List.

A graduate of Lee High School, Miss Steele was captain of the Rebelettes, a member of "Origin," member and officer of Chorale, a Symphony Deb and was named Miss Talented on the Rebelee Coronation Court. She was named two consecutive years to "Who's Who Among American High School Students."

The Midlanders wore gowns and robes which aided in depicting the pageant theme of "Gardens of the World," which was featured at the Queen's Coronation October 15 and 16. The four also were featured at teas and other social activities and rode on a rose adorned float in the Rose Festival Parade at 10 a.m. Saturday, October 17.

This was the 44th Festival and annually more than 100,000 persons attend. Included in the events were an exhibit of thousands of roses, tours of rose fields, the Queen's Coronation, the Queen's Tea and the Queen's Ball.

Art of socializing

By DIANE BRADFORD
Copley News Service

More and more women are coming into positions where out-of-office socializing with clients and other business associates is part of the job.

The etiquette of career-related entertaining — whether in restaurants or at home — can be a bit nerve-racking to novices at the expense-account game.

Keeping in mind a few simple guidelines can help crucial meals or cocktail appointments go smoothly, even the first few times. By then you should have developed your own easy style, your own sense of what's appropriate.

Above all, remember that if you relax and enjoy yourself, so will your guests.

When you're host in a restaurant:

— Establish yourself as host when you arrive by checking in with the maitre d'. Specify that the reservation was in your name.

— Be alert when the check arrives. If your guest reaches for the bill, be simple and direct. "Thank you, but this was my invitation and you are my guest."

— Pay by credit card. This may help make your guest more comfortable. A credit card implies a company expense account.

— When sharing a cab to your next destination, have money ready so that you can pay without further discussion.

— When you are entertaining, have plenty of dollsr bills and quarters for tips in a convenient place in your handbag or pocket.

— Be fast on the draw when it comes to tipping.

And when entertaining at home, one of the best ways is to invite associates over "for drinks."

For polished bartending, here are some general rules of thumb:

— Be sure to have the "b sic 7" in stock: Canadian whiskey, Scotch whisky, American whiskey, bourbon, rum, gin, vodka.

— If you are entertaining a group, plan to serve one to three drinks per person, depending on the type of entertainment and the inclination of your guests. For the standard 1.5-ounce drink, figure 750 milliliters equals 17 drinks, 1 liter equals 21 drinks and 1:75 liters equals 39 drinks.

— Bar measurements: 1 jigger equals 1.5 ounces, 1 teaspoon equals one-sixth ounce, 1 tablespoon equals one-half ounce, 1 cup equals 8 ounces, 1 pony equals 1 ounce and 1 dash equals 4 drops.

For more inside tips and techniques on successful business entertaining write to: V.O. Good Living Center (CPLY), P.O. Box 4377, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10163.

The Western look: It has become an international craze

By HAROLD MEYER
Copley News Service

The Western look, for men and women, is an international craze and shows no signs of diminishing.

From the fashionable sidewalks of the Champs Elysees to the smaller sidewalks of Paris, Texas, the uniform of the day — the "right" way to dress — is Western.

It's desirable to bring your own touch to the Western look so you don't look like a carbon copy. This is what fashion expert Mary Russell has done in her capacity as the first guest fashion editor in the Spiegel fall catalog.

Russell, born in the United States, was educated and has been living in France for the last 16 years, where she was the European editor for a number of important fashion publications. She is a photojournalist, both in New York and Europe, where she covers the fashion scene for American and European fashion publications.

Experienced in putting together a "look," Russell chose a number of items from the fall edition of the Spiegel catalog to give a sense of fun to Western dressing.

The cost of the individual components of a Western costume may indeed be illogical. For instance, a great belt can cost three times as much as jeans, or a single accessory can cost more than the whole outfit.

For example, a luxurious cashmere sweater can cost about $75 and a shearling lamb vest with fur inside and suede outside usually costs about $100. In contrast, the five-pocket corduroy jeans with straight legs only cost about $25. And they are all classics, to be paired with other parts of your wardrobe.

Add a pigskin Western hat (his and hers) with a bead headband. And, for the unexpected, wear rubber shoes instead of traditional cowboy boots.

However you do it, be sure to give your Western look a personal touch.

Boot wearers have 'tenderfeet'

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

URBAN TENDERFEET — Many urban cowboys indulging in the fad of wearing cowboy boots are learning the real meaning of the term "tenderfoot."

The American Podiatry Association reports that the result has been a sharp increase in cases of hammertoes, bunions, calluses and nail problems.

Wearing narrow, high-heeled boots can also cause pain in the ball of the foot by shifting the weight and may alter the wearer's normal gait, leading to posture problems.

Dr. Alvin Kanegis of the assocation said that some men with narrow feet can wear these boots without problems.

"If you're not among the lucky crowd, select boots larger than your normal shoe size and wear them only on special occasions," he suggests.

It's contest time!

It's time once again to dig up that favorite recipe of yours for The Midland Reporter-Telegram's annual recipe contest and cookbook section, "Recipes '81."

This year's edition will be published as a tabloid supplement to the newspaper Sunday, Nov. 8. It will features scores of recipes submitted by readers.

Valuable prizes and cash awards for winning entries will be given in each of eight categories. Watch the newspaper for details to be announced.

Categories of recipes will be (1) Salads; (2) Meat, Fish and Fowl; (3) Casseroles, Vegetables and Side Dishes; (4) Breads and Pastries; (5) Cakes; (6) Pies; (7) Candy and other desserts, and (8) Miscellaneous.

Winners will be announced in "Recipes '81" on Sunday, Nov. 8. Deadline for entries is Wednesday, Oct. 28. That's only a short time away, so don't delay in sending your entries.

All entries will be judged by a panel of professional home economists not connected with the newspaper.

Readers are asked to submit only one entry per category. Entries should be typewritten or clearly handwritten on 8 1/2 inch by 11 inch white paper, and all measurements and instructions clearly stated. Any recipe that is unclear will be disqualified.

Each entry should be clearly labeled at the top with the entrant's name, address, telephone number, name of the recipe and category entered.

Send recipes to "Recipes '81," P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas, 79702.

The contest is open to everyone in the Reporter-Telegram's retail trading zone except employees and agents of The Reporter-Telegram and their families.

Fur show scheduled

Koslow's, one of the must trusted names in furs in the Southwest, is bringing its collection of furs to Midland Oct. 23 to the Midland Country Club.

The firm has been based in the Dallas and Fort Worth area for a half century.

The luncheon is open to members of the Ladies Association only. For reservations, please call 682-4378. Cocktail hour bgins at 11:30 a.m. and will be followed by lunch at noon.

Makeup artist's advice: Brush away tacky look

By PATRICIA DIBSIE
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The best part is that you don't have to start out pretty.

It just happens, naturally.

Or something like that. Somewhere between the lotions and the creams, the powders and the brushes, a new look takes hold — one that's sure to please, if it's done right.

And doing it right isn't that hard, it just takes practice, according to makeup artist Rose Cartier of BeverlyHills Calif. and New York City.

Cartier is a facial artist with The Make-Up Center in New York City (the center cares for the faces of some of the world's most glamorous women — models, actresses and television stars).

The artist is better known for her makeup on magazine cover girls. Many of the models on the covers of Vogue, Glamour and Mademoiselle look to Cartier for her expertise.

Cartier has worked with Sally Struthers, Barbra Streisand, Cher, Liza Minnelli. ... The list goes on and on.

"It's not so much what colors you're using, but how they're being applied," Cartier said. "Most women never abandoned their sponge applicators for brushes — and in the end that's (using a brush) what makes the look polished."

She said that by using the sponge applicator, blotches instead of subtle coloring can be noticed over the eyelid. Tacky, at best. That goes double for splotchy blusher.

She exposed the usual admonitions:

"Start with a clean face, moisturize and then apply a foundation, not before.

"Another important selection, perhaps the most important, is the choice of coloring when selecting a foundation. Never go darker than the complexion.

"It's a dead giveaway and looks simply pathetic. It never seems to blend at the neck and makes the look totally unprofessional.

"Use a translucent powder to set the look. Put some powder in the palm of your hand, dip a brush in blush, shake the extra off and dip the brush into the powder. Then gently stroke the brush onto the face."

(Cartier uses a water mist to set the makeup.)

Cartier thinks a professional makeup application is in the budgets of most individuals — "It doesn't have to cost $100," she said.

But, too, she admits, most women can handle the job themselves with a little instruction. Some even copy the look from magazine covers.

Pastels, she said, seem to be big. And darker color, when combined with some lighter shades, can be converted, so there's no need to throw away the makeup already purchased.

"The idea is to look completely natural during the daytime," she said. "Evening parties may call for a more striking look, but never try to get away with too much makeup before 5 p.m.

"Eyeliner isn't like it used to be, it's softer," she noted. "Make the line underneath the lower lashes and take a cotton tip and smear it. Again with the top lashes."

Another mistake too many women make is in using cold cream, baby oil or petroleum jelly on lashes.

"It makes them stick together in clumps," she warned. "They're more noticeable, but for the wrong reasons. People stare and wonder why a woman would want to look that way. Stick with mascara."

Cartier also dislikes the look that false eyelashes gives — unless they're the individual lashes and then only a few to fill in the empty spaces.

"The idea is to look soft, natural and feminine," she said.

Local chapters of Delta Kappa Gamma host Texas Area 14 fall conference

Delta Kappa Gamma Society International, honorary society for women educators, held its fall conference for Texas Area 14 at the Midland Hilton. Host chapers were Epsilon Eta and Zeta Xi.

Ann Donaldson, president of Epsilon Eta, welcomed approximately 100 members from Odessa, Andrews, Monahans, Pecos, Fort Stockton and Big Lake.

Special guest at the conference was keynote speaker Ruth Williams, state president of Austin.

Group sessions were held which explored the Society's seven purposes.

Musical entertainment was provided by the School Belles, a singing group composed of Epsilon Eta and Zeta Xi members.

Charlene Gnagy served as registration chairman, and Pat Morgan and Virginia Pollard were decorations chairmen.

Woman established indigo industry

Eliza Lucas, who was running her father's plantation near Charleston, S.C., is credited with establishing an American indigo industry that by 1770 was shipping more than a million pounds of the dyestuff annually to Europe.

The Revolutionary War cut off exports, and by 1800 indigo as an export crop was dead.

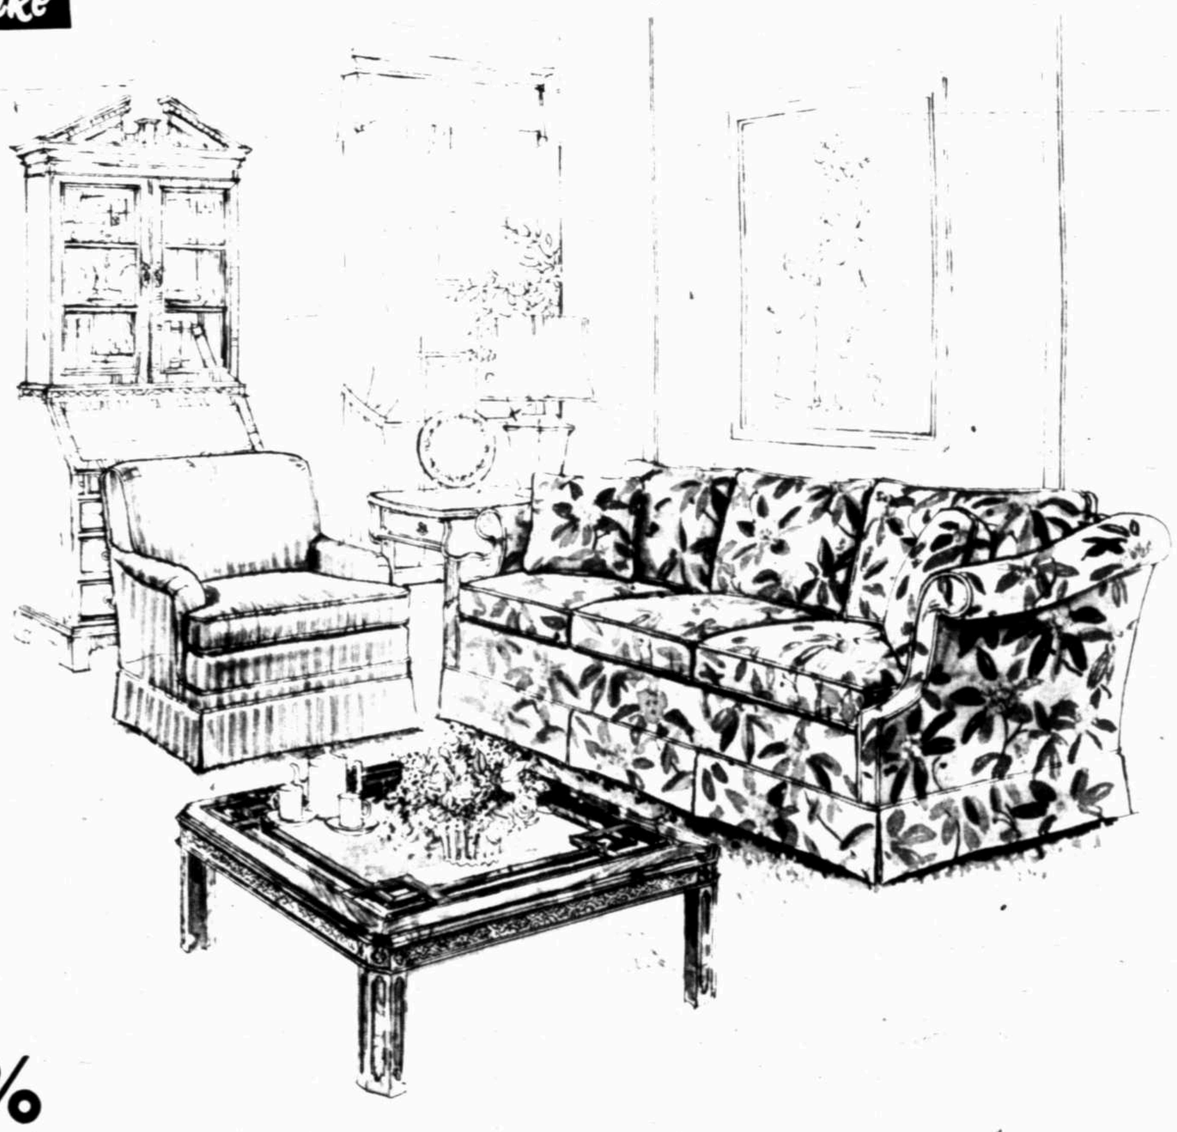

Indigo was commercially synthesized around 1900, and today production of natural indigo has virtually ceased everywhere. The main users of indigo nowadays are manufacturers of blue jeans and other apparel.

The 'Traditional Elegante' to be presented in CIA Parade of Homes

The "Traditional Elegante," designed by the Hails, is one of 22 homes to be presented in the Midland Homebuilders Association's 1981 Parade of Homes. Proceeds from the event, which is set ford Dec. 12-20, will benefit the Christmas in April program, Midland's volunteer housing repair project coordinated by the Human Relations Council.

"Elegante" features a spacious birch paneled living area designed to include a cathedral ceiling enhanced with twin skylights, beams and a decorator ceiling fan.

It has a custon designed double fireplace servicing the family room and game room, a wet bar with a sink in the living area, glass shelves and recessed lights which add versatility to the living room.

The kitchen includes custom cabinets, a brick archway cooking area with a drop-in Jenn-Air cooktop with a convection oven and a microwave oven. The "French Country" look is brought to life with an aspen wood ceiling and imported Italian marble tile flooring.

An elegant garden window over the sink is great for plants or for just enjoying the view. There's also a trash compactor, digital controlled dishwasher, music intercom and security system for maximum comfort and enjoyment.

The breakfast area features special lighting and designer wallpaper.

The master bedroom is designed around a chocolate color scheme. Off this room is a master bath with huge closets, large vanities and a marble-tub reminiscent of the Roman era. A tiled shower with a unique tile shampoo box are also part of the master bath's design.

The three-bedroom home has a variety of features that are noticeable right away. These include a planter box divider on the parquet floor, a redwood deck surrounding a hot tub, wall-washer lighting, central vacuum cleaner system, decorative mirrors and bookcases.

The home also has energy efficient styling utilizing thermopane windows, polysealant, R-30 insulation in ceiling and R-19 rated walls. A heat pump also adds savings to energy costs.

"Elegante" was designed by David Hail and was decorated by Design Craft, along with The Very Thing shop, owned by Joyce Coleman and Rita Miller.

Parade of Homes will be in the Skyline Terrace west addition in northwest Midland, located between Midland Park Mall and Midland Drive. Tickets arel $1 to tour all 22 homes. For additional information, call the Human Relations Council or the Midland Homebuilders Association.

Italian discovered bats 'see with ears'

Lazzaro Spallanzani, one of the greatest 18th century scientists, discovered in 1793 at age 64 that bats can avoid obstacles in flight when their eyes are covered or removed.

A few months later Swiss surgeon Louis Jurine determined that if a bat's ears were tightly sealed, the creature became helpless whether blinded or not. This convinced Spallanzani, an Italian biologist, that bats "see" with their ears. We now call this echolocation.

Mr. and Mrs. George D. Harmon

Couple observes anniversary with a trip to San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO — Mr. and Mrs. George D. Harmon of Midland were honored on their 50th wedding anniversary recently with a week-long sightseeing trip to San Antonio. The trip was a gift from the couple's children, Shirley Robinson and Glenda Newsom, both of Midland, and their families who accompanied them to San Antonio.

A special dinner party was held in the Harmon's honor on Oct. 10 at the Tower of America Restaurant in San Antonio.

Harmon and the former Ruby Lay were married on Oct. 10, 1931 in Midland, where they have lived since their marriage. Harmon retired after serving for 25 years with Midland County as a building engineer. They are members of Kelview Heights Baptist Church.

The Harmon's also have three grandchildren.

Keep facing from showing

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

No matter how hard we try, it seems the underside of pocket flaps, collars, lined pockets, cuffs and other parts want to peek out, showing when they shouldn't.

The reason? Almost always the outer piece and the facing piece are cut from the same pattern piece, therefore, they are the same size. Not good.

Take a pocket flap, for instance. After the facing, interfacing and flap are stitched together, trimmed, turned and pressed, the next step is to stitch the flap in place along the raw edges and then turn it down into position. The facing doesn't have as far to go as the top fabric and, therefore, "peeks out."

Solution: After you have cut out the facing and flap pieces, trim a tiny bit from the top raw edge of the facing piece. After the pieces have been stitched, trimmed, turned and pressed, bring the raw edge of the facing even with the flap, baste. This makes the facing piece a tiny bit shorter and prevents its showing.

This same trick can be used on cuffs, pockets, collars, etc.

The faster you sew, the faster your spool of thread spins on the spindle. Sometimes it can spin itself right off the spindle.

Watches make good accessories

Copley News Service

These days, a working woman needs a good suit, a practical briefcase and a charge card. One must be "businesslike," look professional, command respect.

But it's a mistake to think that these items are all you need. The look you achieve at the office is a sum of many parts. A feminine blouse can soften a classic suit. A perky bow tie can add flair to a man-tailored button-down. And jewelry can add an elegance and style all your own.

One piece of jewelry that is a necessary business tool is a watch. Could you get through your busy day without one?

A watch is a practical accessory with real fashion value. And as the lives of women become more and more varied, many are finding that they prefer to own two or three watches -- one for no-nonsense days at the office, one for leisure activities and one for evening wear.

But what if your budget makes an extra watch a luxury?

Well, you can either splurge (we all deserve a treat now and then) or you can look for a watch that can go either way and dress up or down.

Whatever your final buying decision, fashion consultants at Citizen Watch Co., a leading manufacturer of quartz watches, suggest you follow these tips to get just the watch you need.

WORK STYLE. If you work in a "creative" field, like advertising or publishing, you can get away with almost anything when it comes to dressing for work. You could wear a Mickey Mouse watch if you wanted to! But if you're employed in a more conservative field, such as accounting, law or banking, you'll want to choose a classically styled watch to complement conservative suits and surroundings. A traditional analogue (with face and hands) with a good-looking leather strap would be perfect. Does your job involve entertaining and participation in social functions after hours requiring you to change looks in a matter of minutes? Then a dressier watch, a sleek baguette or link-bracelet style, will work for you.

BODY SIZE. What's your body type? A small-boned ectomorph will be overpowered by a big, bulky watch, so select a small-faced watch with a slim band. If you've a dainty build but like the sporty, high-tech look of a digital watch, don't despair. Thanks to technology, they're now available with smaller faces to compliment smaller female wrists.

Women with larger bones can carry off a bold-styled watch with a sturdy metal or leather strap.

COLORING. Bear in mind your skin tone and hair color as well as key colors in your wardrobe. Dark-haired women look stunning in cool silver or gold. Blondes and redheads glow in gold. If most of the jewelry you already own is silver, by all means, buy a silver watch. And if you own a variety of jewelry, you should know that there are two-tone watches available. As for your wardrobe, silver looks great with black and the new spring pastels. Yellow gold complements warmer shades.

PERFORMANCE. When shopping, look for durability and quality.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodney O. Mason

Golden anniversary observed

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Rodney O. Mason honored their parents on their 50th wedding anniversary with a reception in the Fellowship Hall of Kelview Heights Baptist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Mason were married Oct. 10, 1931, in Dublin by the Rev. James Bradford. She is the former Nadine McCarty.

Mr. and Mrs. Mason reside at 2309 W. Kentucky St., having lived in Midland since 1959.

They have four children, who are the Rev. Robert D. Mason of Montgomery, Ala., Mrs. Shirley Jameson of Borger, Eddie Lee and John David Mason, both of Midland. There are 15 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. The entire family was present for the anniversary reception, with the exception of one granddaughter, who with her husband and three sons, are Baptist missionaries in Paris, France.

During the reception, the Rev. Robert D. Mason officiated as the elder Masons repeated their vows of 50 years before. An hour before the reception, a grandson and namesake, Rodney Brian Mason, married Sherry Lynn Johnson of Live Oak, Fla.

Among the out-of-city guests attending the reception were the Rev. and Mrs. Bob Mason, Montgomery, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Jameson, Rodney, Brent and Angela, Borger; Mr. and Mrs. Don Robert Mason, Springfield, Mo.; Mrs. Mildred Claitor and Laverne Harding, Stephenville; Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Mason, Marble Falls; Mr. and Mrs. J. O. McCarty and Mr. and Mrs. Jerry McCarty, San Angelo; Mr. and Mrs. Rodney "Jinx" Mason, Lorenzo; Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Welsh, North Platte, Neb.; Mr. and Mrs. Clovis Womack, Borger, and Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Martin, Odessa.

Menswear conservative

Copley News Service

Style changes in men's fashions are no longer so bold as they used to be.

Chances are, if you bought what was "in" for the fall of 1980, you won't be far out in the fall of 1981. Once again, conservative is the word. Along with classic and traditional.

Changes? Oh, there are a few, most of which are not discernible to the average shopper. Changes such as softer, more natural shoulders, a move away from polyester blends in fabrics for suits and sport coats and the continuing comeback of the sport coat.

The three-piece suit will continue to be big, manufacturers say, and muted plaids will begin to make inroads.

"The classic, muted plaid you couldn't give away a year ago will be back," promised David Hazan, a spokesman for Ratner Corp., the West Coast's largest producer of men's clothing.

Some of the patterns are so subtle, however, that the plaid is barely detectable.

"Another thing we're doing," said Hazan, "is modifying the shoulder slightly — going from a soft shoulder to more of a platform or rope effect.

"The trend is definitely toward investment clothing. That is, clothing that doesn't go out of style. The consumer wants something that he is sure won't be out of style in the next year."

That means pants, for the most part, will be straight leg and without pleats. Lapels, which shrunk to 2.25 inches two years ago, are leveling out at about 3 inches today.

As a concession to the Western trend, Ratner offers a subtly trimmed suit with suede trim "but nothing that would jump out at you from across the room," said Hazan.

Dr. Theodore R. Coleman demonstrates the use of a black light to determine the extent of restoration an oil painting has received when such work cannot be seen with the naked eye.

Let there be art

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

It was their most recent acquisition and the one in which they took the most pride. Obviously, this lovely landscape, circa 1880, should occupy the place of honor in their living room. And it did. It hung over the fireplace mantle.

Hollywood strikes again. Often movies and television programs show paintings hanging over fireplaces, especially in elegant old homes. What they don't show is the damage to oils when hung close to heat and drafts.

Once again, what may be assumed to be correct, may not be.

●

"Assumption —A statement accepted or supposed true without proof or demonstration. Presumption or arrogance."

— American Heritage Dictionary

●

On a recent Midland visit, Dr. Theodore R. Coleman, fine arts appraiser since 1974, talked about the art industry.

"The worst imaginable place to hang a painting is above the fireplace, unless you have adequate protection from your mantle," Dr. Coleman said. This is one of the major causes of "blistering" in paintings and can also cause paintings to accumulate soot. Since the "condition the painting's surface is in" is a major determinant of its value, this can have a detrimental effect on the appraisal.

DR. COLEMAN, who graduated magna cum laude from The University of Texas at Austin, has a master's degree in art history from Harvard University and a doctorate in fine arts from the University of Sussex in England.

Currently residing in Fort Worth, Dr. Coleman is a member of the American Society of Appraisers; the Association of Governmental Appraisers where he was National Education Chairman in 1979; the National Association of Certified Fine Arts Appraisers; and the Order & Medals Society of America.

He was named a Senior Certified Valuer by the International Institute of Valuers, which is "an honor granted as recognition of professionalism."

He also is a member of the honorary societies of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Delta Pi, Phi Alpha Theta and Mensa.

Some of the common mistakes Americans make in caring for their oil paintings are "open fires and gas heating," Dr. Coleman said. "Americans overheat their homes. The ideal temperature for oil on canvas is 70 degrees year round."

IN WEST TEXAS, the use of a humidifier assures the continued good state of a painting. The same certainly holds true for Indian textiles and even more for etchings and silk screens."

Another problem area which upsets Dr. Coleman centers around the many "examples of prints no more than 10 years old" that he sees which already show damage.

"Any framer worth his salt knows to use an acid-free rag (for backing)," Dr. Coleman said. Leaning forward, he said intently, "Masking tape — atrocious! Masking tape has acid as well.

"I have seen many older fine American prints that are foxed — little brown spots," Dr. Coleman said. Unfortunately "many 19th century things are actually backed with roof shingles. These should be immediately removed and the works properly framed.

"Paper restorations are a far more tedious situation" than restoring oils. Since the "paper (used in the actual prints) normally was of rag," the damage comes from improper mounting, he said.

"We have very expensive framers who do horrible jobs. That's why we see so few American lithographs in good condition."

Incorrect mounting also includes "prints that have been improperly cut down." These prints may have been cut to fit a mat or a frame and they may have acid burns.

IT IS ESSENTIAL in framing a print that nothing is used which is not acid free. All of these aspects, called "points of perfection," are considered in an appraisal, Dr. Coleman said.

He has seen expensive prints framed as recently as five years ago that already have "bad tape burns." When this happens, "40 percent of the value to a collector is gone," he said, adding most can be restored but it is an expensive process.

In assessing the value of oil paintings, a major determinant is the "extent of the restoration — how much of the artist's original intention is there."

In the past and as late as the 1960s, restoration was done directly on the work. Today, a painting is cleaned, coated with varnish and then restored. This allows a separation between the original paint surface and the restoration work, Dr. Coleman said.

Another major determinant in assessing value is the work's provenance — "where it came from." Any history, including bills of sale, newspaper articles, the mention of the particular piece in a book or the listing of it anywhere, helps to establish its value and authenticity.

WHEN DR. COLEMAN does an appraisal, he works up what provenance he can on each piece. And each of his appraisals carry the statement "I have no financial interest in these works of art, nor do I anticipate any interest therein in the future." He is not a dealer; he is an appraiser.

He does not authenticate works "unless the owner asks me to, or it is evident that the piece is bogus." Most appraisers will "accept the word of a reputable art dealer," Dr. Coleman said.

In starting a collection, "make yourself a specialist in a field that interests you, whether it's cigar boxes" or Old Masters.

Part of making yourself a specialist is learning the language. Here Dr. Coleman gives a few tips on understanding the art industry's fine print.

The statement " 'is signed' is much more affirmative than 'bears the signature of,' " which is neither saying yea or nay to the work's authenticity.

Also, " 'of the school of,' say Rembrandt, means Rembrandt may have had something to do with the supervision of the painting. Teachers were surrounded by disciples. 'In the school of' means probably produced without any supervision from him (the teacher Rembrandt, etc.). 'In the style of' is the bottom of the category." It means simply that the style was copied but the painter was not necessarily associated with the school or with those who were.

"The White Drawing Room Buckingham Palace" by H. Davis Richter
1874-1955

This British artist painted still-lifes, architectural subjects, interiors and figures. He studied at Lambeth and London Schools of Art under Brangwyn and J.M. Swan. Richter was an architect before becoming a painter.

HE ALSO recommended, for the purchaser who is planning to spend a sizable amount, "If you're going to pay a lot of money, it's the top pieces that seem to consistently retain their value."

Certain areas exist today that are "very affordable. Nineteenth century academic art is still within the range of the medium collector, the one who can easily afford $5,000 to $10,000" per item.

"As any market in a particular school of painting increases in value, the drawings and watercolors by those same artists are brought up in value. In the last 10 years, one of the most important markets has been 19th century academic art. Things you couldn't give away for $750, some you couldn't give away for $75, will bring 10 times as much today," he said.

He suggested buyers purchase works by artists "who have had a rigid grounding in technique; therefore, you are not only buying something that may be very attractive, but also has durability.

"Architectural renderings" can be a good investment because "the architects were expected to be very good draftsmen." Those who drew the cartoon "originals of World War II were marvelous draftsmen." Also "theatrical renderings" may be a good investment. All of the above represent markets of their own.

LOOK FOR artists "who went through an academy, who may have later on belonged to the academy and whose work is representational" of a particular period.

"One of my great complaints is this 'happening art.' The idea that 'art is an emanating spirit' and the artist doesn't have to know anything about the technical proficiency required to paint. Look for technical proficiency, whether it be abstract, realistic or geometric. Learn something about technical proficiency," he said.

Dr. Coleman is opposed to mixed oils, acrylics and mixed media in general. "I have seen acrylics that are decomposing before the eye," he said, adding he has seen relatively new work hanging in exhibitions in which the acrylic paints are actually flaking off the canvas.

"A whole school of conservation will have to be established to deal with acrylics," Dr. Coleman added.

As far as limited edition prints and lithographs are concerned, you have to be knowledgeable," he said. Using Salvador Dali as an example, Dr. Coleman said he didn't know "whether he (Dali) has become senile or he has become manipulated by a group of people around him.

"His works are supposedly sold in very small editions. The people who market Dali know how to package him. An edition of 400 actually becomes 2,000" when five markets around the world — North American Edition, Japanese Edition, European Edition, etc. — carry the same works in a limited edition of 400. "Two thousand is not a limited edition," Coleman said.

IN SITUATIONS such as this, whether it be Dali or some other artist, "to the unwary, the unsuspecting, a price is asked which may be twice as much as it's really worth," Dr. Coleman said.

When Dr. Coleman is asked to appraise the works, "My position is rather like the little boy in 'The Emperor's New Clothes.' " For those who don't remember this tale, the little boy is the one who voices what others refuse to see, "The emperor is wearing no clothes."

Dr. Coleman advises prospective buyers to avoid buying on impulse.

"If you can, buy at auction," he recommended. "We consider an auction held by a reputable auction house will produce a wholesale price simply because the majority of buyers are dealers."

The two tendencies to watch out for here are buying an item which is being bid up for some reason and auction fever — paying too much for an item because you get caught up in the excitement. Dr. Coleman advised buyers to decide their top price before the auction begins and to stick with their decision.

"If you have a respectable collection of anything, someone who is a professional should look at it about every three years. A scheduled fine art's policy is important because of inflation and because of the enormous increase in value."

AN APPRAISAL is necessary for insurance purposes, as each piece needs to be insured under a "fine arts schedule for 100 percent of value." It also helps, in case of loss, to have "still photos or a videotape of the belongings" in order to receive 100 percent compensation, Dr. Coleman said.

Too often at estate appraisals, Dr. Coleman said he sees this: one oil painting, artist name. "This tells us nothing. It's sad there isn't a good accompanying document to go with it."

As far as purchasing art as an investment only, Dr. Coleman said, "Art isn't produced en masse. It should strike some chord in you.

"Art has been so much touted as an investment," Dr. Coleman said. For him, "The boom in collectibles reflected the people's having lost faith in currency."

His "prediction" about the current money market is that it will "have a depressing effect on the art market."

National week for businesswomen

Carol Reinert, tax manager with Main Hurdman, has been named "Woman of the Year" by Uptown Chapter of Business and Professional Women's Club.

The award is presented annually during National Businesswomen's Week.

Among the criteria for the award are excellence in career achievement, technical and volunteer assistance to the community and contributions in assisting women in job and career efforts.

In addition to being tax manager, Mrs Reinert is a member of the Oil and Gas Specialty Team, the Estate and Gift Tax Specialty Team and the recruiting team.

She was a moderator for the "Women in Business seminar at The University of Texas-Permian Basin. She has participated in the community service "Teaching Taxes" program.

Mrs. Reinert is also active in church and community projects, including Vial of Life and Christmas in April. She is Altrusa Club's publicity chairman and a member of the Uptown Chapter, B&PW.

Judges were Thane Akins, Midland mayor; Joyce Lovett, office manager and vice president of Hanson Corp.; and Jamie Thompson, owner of Exploration Graphics, and herself a past recipient of the Woman of the Year award.

National Businesswomen's Week will be celebrated today through Oct. 24. B&PW members have observed Businesswomen's Week since 1928. Purpose is to honor women in the labor force, to show what business and professional women contribute to their chosen fields and to encouage general study of career opportunities.

The National Federation of B&PW Clubs sponsors research on issues of importance to women, awards scholarships to women who need further training to enter or re-enter the job market and lobbying efforts on key political issues. The National Federation has strongly support passage of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Carol Reinert

On the local level, the Uptown Chapter works in and contributes to various community projects, awards scholarships to women enrolled in a degree program and holds an annual Seminar for Women in Business and the Professions.

The seminar covers subjects on stress management, time management, investing on a small scale and career planning. The club also hosts a coffee honoring local businesswomen during National Businesswomen's Week.

Membership is open to all women in business and the professions. Interested women should contact Sam Guyton at 683-5591.

Mrs. Reinert's award was announced at Wednesday's meeting of the B&PW Club. Speaker for the luncheon meeting was Thomas M. Bruner, senior vice president and executive trust officer with Commercial Bank & Trust.

Bruner discussed investment opportunities, credit in Midland and opportunities available to women in banking.

WOMEN OUTBUY MEN

Until the late 1970s, single men bought more homes than single women.

In 1980, single women were buying slightly more homes than their male counterparts.

CREDIT RIGHTS

In 1980, more than 5,000 complaints about credit discrimination were filed with the Federal Trade Commission. Thousands more were reported to women's groups and consumer councils.

Clearly credit bias is still a problem and all too often women find out when it's too late ... after they've applied for credit and been denied.

Politics, power are good tools

By JEFF ROWE
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Kathy Farrell began her talk on organizational power and politics by asking the scattered audience to move together so as not to leave any "energy holes."

Her audience, the Association for Women in Computing, complied. They had come to hear Farrell tell them how to gain power within a company and how to use that power to win promotions and gain greater job fulfillment.

"Too many people end up unhappy in what they are doing for a living," she said. "They retire on the job."

Farrell believes such on-the-job unhappiness springs from a lack of understanding of how the system works. "We're taught how to do our jobs but not about politics and power," she said.

A former systems analyst, field manager and marketing manager, Farrell has spent years researching organizational power and now operates her own consulting and management research firm in nearby Marina del Rey.

For those who disdain the workings of corporate politics and power, Farrell offers some persuasive reasons for acquiring a knowledge of how they operate in every working place.

She told her audience about four workers for a major area company who traveled to work in a car pool. Several years ago, one was promoted to a high position. Now, all four are in management positions.

Score one for the value of friendships within a company.

Then there was the fellow in another firm who chose an office with a window when his company moved to new quarters. Although the view apparently was quite good, the office was located away from the power orbit in the firm.

He was never promoted.

Take office space in a closet if it provides access to the important people in the company, she advises.

Does your firm have a "company sport?" Most companies do, and Farrell advises finding out what it is and learning to play.

"A lot of things get discussed on the tennis courts and you don't want to miss out," she said.

"People often join causes, like United Way, or a country club because of the access to important people," Farrell said.

Understanding the overall goals of the organization is vital, she said. "Be aware of the organization's values and getthe odds in your favor. Put your energies into what's important to the company."

What's important means studying where a company is going. "Study the new technology," Farrell suggests.

Letting your achievements pass by your boss unnoticed is to overlook a valuable promotional tool, Farrell said. She quoted a survey that indicated 86 percent of executives who had been dismissed from a job had not aggressively called attention of their superiors to their achievements.

There are four sources of power within an organization, Farrell notes. There is the power that arises from expertise, personality characteristics (the charismatic leader) and opportunity to connect with powerful people. However, it is only structural power within a company that carries authority, she points out. The others simply enhance one's influence.

"You can never have power without being a manager," she advises. "Power is a tool to get things done."

For those who do aspire to managerial roles, Farrell talks about forming alliances with subordinates, peers and sponsors, "action plans" and "power-gaining activities."

Get homestead ready for winter

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's nearly time for the frost to rime the pumpkin and that means a variety of little chores that can get the homestead ready for winter and save you energy to boot.

Housing specialists at the Department of Agriculture suggest having your heating system serviced to make sure it is running efficiently.

Clean air ducts, change the filters and make sure that furniture and draperies are not blocking any of the air vents.

Keep the thermostat set as low as possible during the daytime when the sun helps heat the house, especially if no one is home. And for maximum efficiency try to change the thermostat setting as little as possible.

Wearing a sweater or other warm clothing indoors can help keep you comfortable at lower than normal settings.

Here's a fall-winter checklist of energy-saving ideas from the department's extension service.

—Weatherstrip around windows and doors and caulk cracks and openings around the house foundation and along door and window frames.

Lifestyle guidelines

The following are suggested guidelines for publication of stories in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday; or two days before publication in a daily paper.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within a week of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for engagement and wedding announcement stories.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Only the bride's picture will be used with both the engagement and wedding announcement.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of pictures and stories.

ACURIO-PAYKEN

Mary Ellen Acurio and Craig Lindsey Payken, both of Midland, exchanged wedding vows at 2 p.m. Saturday at Trinity Presbyterian Church in Midland with the Rev. John B. Danhof officiating.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs.. John Acurio of Strongsville, Ohio. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Payken of Jennings Missouri.

Best man was Richard Puckett of Midland. U.S. Army Capt. Diane Acurio of Lampertheim, West Germany attended her sister as maid of honor.

Bridesmaids were Joan Divens of Greenbelt, Md., and Charlotte Acurio of Strongsville, Ohio, both sisters of the bride; Barbara Voss and Carla Kucera, both cousins of the bride of Seattle, Wash.; and Karen Puckett of Midland.

Groomsmen were Mark Payken, brother of the groom of Overland, Miss.; Bud Divens, brother-in-law of the bride of Greenbelt, Md.; Ron Oba, Jack Rose and Wayne Barton, all of Midland.

The bride was graduated from Miami University in Oxford, Ohio in 1976 with a bachelor of fine arts degree. She is employed as associate director of the Marks Gallery in Midland.

Payken received a master of science degree from The University of Missouri in Rolla in 1976. He is employed as a petroleum engineer with ARCO Oil and Gas.

Superliner cars replace dome cars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two-level Superliner observation-lounge cars with wrap-around windows have replaced the dome cars on all of Amtrak's long-distance Western runs.

But the traditional dome cars, long an attraction on many U.S. trains, are not entirely gone from the rail scene.

The Alaska Railroad has leased four Amtrak dome coaches as well as two diners for use while its own equipment is being converted from steam to head-end power heating.

South Dakota's tourism is up

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — During June through August 1981, the peak months for the state's travel industry, South Dakota had an 11.45 percent increase in visitors compared with the same months in 1980, the Division of Tourism reports.

DEAR ABBY

Kids' privacy should sometimes become public

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You have consistently urged parents to respect their children's privacy and refrain from reading their diaries and letters and from listening in on their telephone conversations. But now that so many very young kids are doing drugs, has your viewpoint changed?

If a parent suspects that his teenager is into drugs, doesn't the parent have the right to violate his child's privacy to find out for sure whether his suspicions are warranted or not? And when the parent confronts the child and it becomes obvious that the child's privacy has been violated, then what?

Please comment, Abby. There are a lot of worried parents who need to know. — CONCERNED IN AMARILLO

DEAR CONCERNED: There is a vast difference between invading a teen-ager's privacy in order to read his mail or diary and attempting to learn whether or not a child is involved with drugs.

Involvement with drugs can make the difference between life and death, and parents have an obligation to learn as much as they can by whatever means possible. God will forgive them. And so will the children, eventually.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that I am sure is common to many parents across the entire nation. My youngest daughter, age 22, a recent graduate from Michigan State University, is living with her fiance, who is also a graduate of M.S.U.

What do I tell all of my friends when they ask me how my daughter is doing? I'm embarrassed to say that she is living with a man without being married. — NAMELESS, NATURALLY

DEAR NAMELESS: When you're asked how your daughter is doing, say, "She's fine, thank you." It's not necessary to disclose her lifestyle.

DEAR ABBY: My fiancee and I plan to marry next month. Although I know it is traditional for the wife to write the thank-you notes for wedding gifts, I see no reason for her to be saddled with that task — especially for gifts from my relatives and long-time friends.

Would it be improper for me to write a substantial number of thank-you notes myself? — GROOM-TO-BE

DEAR GROOM: Improper? Are you kidding? I think it's a wonderful idea, and not nearly as untraditional as you might think. Right on! Write on!

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (35 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.)

AT WIT'S END

A back-of-the-church militant

By ERMA BOMBECK

I heard a sermon the other week chastising those of us who sit in the back of the church when there is plenty of room up front.

The point that was made was that if we were attending a Broadway play, we'd pay scalper's prices to sit up front.

If it were a football game, we'd camp outside all night to get a front seat.

If it was a school play in which one of our children had a part, we'd kill to get a seat in the front row.

As I was sitting somewhere between the back door and the parking lot, the sermon made me very uncomfortable. Also quite defensive. It seems every single-issue group in the country is organized and has a spokesman except the back-of-the-church-sitters. Until someone comes along with their own Xerox machine, I'd like to take on the job.

People who sit in the back of the church are the most misunderstood group of people on this earth. Who knows them really?

Basically, we are humble people who believe the meek shall inherit the last parking place . . . the one that curves around the fire hydrant. It is our penance and we accept it gratefully.

We are people of extraordinary faith who put it on the line, so to speak, and give real meaning to "The first shall be last and the last first."

We are the caring compassionate people who turn around and say, "Shhhh," when someone is making noise in the hallway and disrupting everyone. We take out stray dogs that wander in and discover they are at the wrong service.

In our humble way, we keep the minister on his toes. If the sermon is of sedative quality, those in front can do nothing about it. We at the back can make a firm statement. It is called walking out.

As a back-of-the-church militant of many years, I find my group is a wonderful class of worshippers. When you're late they never judge or look disgusted when you ask them to move over. They're always ready for the collection plate because they see it coming. Through the miracle of sound they seemingly hear what everyone else hears.

Recipes for beauty masks

Copley News Service

The Make-up Center in New York City uses many beauty masks — some to moisturize, others to tighten the skin, according to makeup specialist Rose Cartier.

Many of these masks can be made at home in the kitchen, but there are important considerations to remember for beneficial results. If the ingredients in a mask require refrigeration before using, the mask will need refrigeration afterward, too. But keep it safe. Only make enough mask for one application, and then just before you intend to apply it to your face.

If softer skin is the goal, try a corn milk facial. Grate an ear of corn, gather the mash into a piece of cheesecloth (or gauze) and squeeze into a clean container. Apply the liquid to the face and neck. Add another application when the first one dries, gently massaging it into the skin.

After 20 minutes of repeated applications, allow the last layer to dry completely. Then rinse with warm water only.

Some swear this leaves a softer skin.

Buttermilk and natural yogurt are said to be skin bleachers. Apply either to the face and let dry. Again, rinse with warm water.

And then there's Cleopatra's tightening mask: Beat together one whole egg, one tablespoon of milk and one teaspoon of honey. Apply to the face and allow to harden. Let the mask remain for as long as possible. Rinse off with warm water.

And last, a wrinkle fighter: Beat an egg yolk until fluffy, add a tablespoon of olive oil, and apply to the face. Let stand for 15 minutes and rinse away. Variation: Replace the olive oil with two capsules of lecithin.

These and many other mask suggestions come from The Make-Up Center in New York City and are contained in a book by that name

Ruth Cockran of Midland was a guest when the Midkiff Bridge Club met in the home of Lou Midkiff.

Prize winners for the day were Mrs. Cockran, Evelyn Melear and Tennie Rosenbaum.

Club will meet next on Nov. 2 in the home of Mrs. Rosenbaum.

TWENTIETH CENTURY STUDY CLUB

Mrs. Robert J. Castor gave a program on "Budget Decorating" for the Twentieth Century Study Club meeting in the Midland Woman's Club.

She presented ideas for window and wall treatments, furniture ideas, wall hangings and ideas for inexpensive accessories. She also gave special hints for decorating children's rooms, vacation houses and small apartments.

Mrs. Robert O. Burkett and Mrs. Joe Reed were hostesses.

Guests attending were Mrs. W. H. Bond and Mrs. A. W. Hanley.

The October 27 meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. Richard Story, 2308 Auburn Place. The program will be on "Home Life: Family Living and Aging," with a presentation and discussion of the Hospice program.

PRECEPTOR ALPHA OMEGA CHAPTER, BSP

Elaine Conrad gave a program on Alaska when Preceptor Alpha Omega Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met in her home. Mary Rickert was a guest.

Ms. Conrad showed slides taken on a cruise through the Inner Passage, with stops at Ketchikan, Juneau, Skagway and Sitka, and cruising through Glacier Bay.

Jo Beverley reported on the recent area convention. The chapter's scrapbook received a third place prize.

Myrtle Russell gave the City Council report. The Harvest Ball will be Nov. 7 in the VFW Hall. The citywide council meeting will be Nov. 2 in St. Mark's United Methodist Church.

The chapter will be entertained by Xi Pi Kappa Chapter Thursday.

NEWTIMERS BRIDGE CLUB

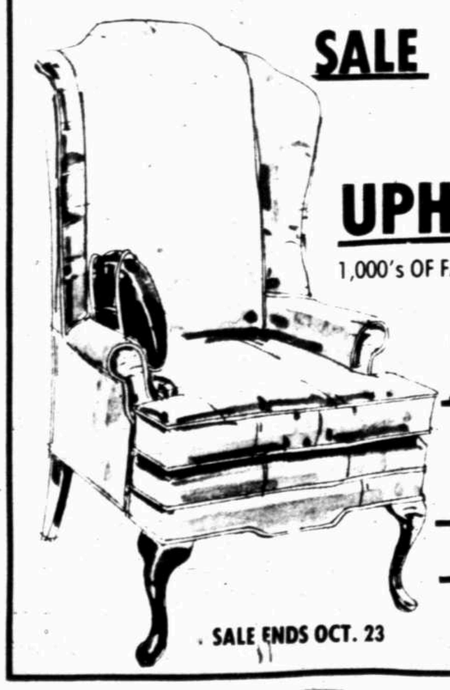

Mary Huff and Mary Speers were guests at a meeting of the Newtimers Bridge Club in Allison Bridge Center.

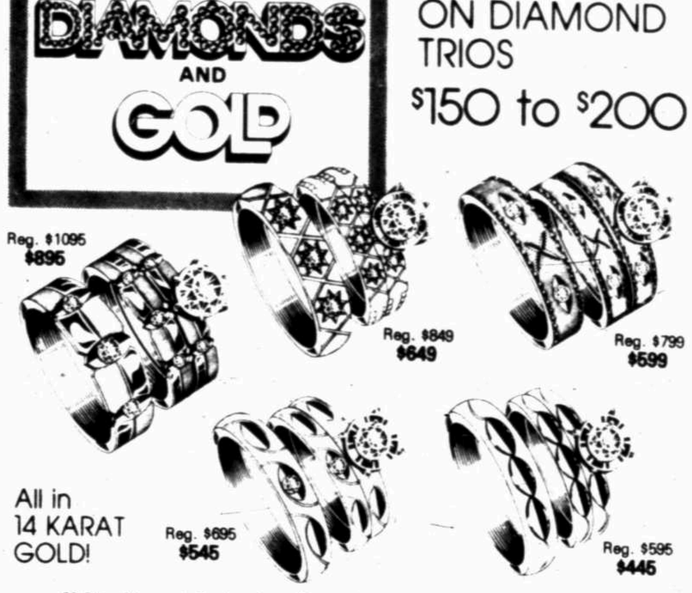

High scorers were Ann Edge, first; Naomi Boswell, second, and Martha McKitterick, third.

Helen Cantrell and Juanita Hodges bid and made a grand slam.

Bypasses available for the grossly overweight

By JOANN RODGERS
Science Writer
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO -After years of failure to find safe, surgical help for grossly overweight people, surgeons are reporting 85 percent success with an operation that reduces stomach capacity by 90 percent.

An estimated 50,000 of the operations, called gastric bypasses, are now performed in the United States each year on individuals at least 100 pounds over ideal weight.

A long-term study of 41 of them, conducted by researchers at New England Deaconess Hospital, Harvard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology has confirmed that weight loss is rapid, and safe and that most of the loss is unwanted fat, not vital muscle or protein.

"Right now, we can say that gastric bypass performed by the best surgeons on the right patients is the safest, most effective method to achieve rapid weight loss in the morbidly obese," according to Dr. Edward E. Mason, chief of general surgery at University of Iowa Medical School.

Mason, who pioneered gastric bypass in 1966, told the American College of Surgeons meeting here that refinements of the operation have resulted in an 85 percent long term success rate, few side effects and a less than one percent death rate.

Some nine million adult Americans, he said, might benefit from the operation because their bulk puts them at high risk for death by age 45 or 50.

At present, the most-used version of the gastric bypass is one that staples shut 90 percent of the stomach to form a small pouch. An opening is made in the pouch about one half inch in diameter and connected to the small intestine so that the stomach's contents empty directly into it. The bypass is permanent.

Patients receiving gastric bypass, or as it is sometimes called, stomach partitioning, feel full after a few bites. But they must limit their food intake drastically so as not to overfill and stretch the pouch.

A typical meal, for example, would consist of two small cubes of meat, a few vegetables and half a dumpling, with no liquid at all.

Gastric bypass is totally unlike another popular operation called intestinal bypass, done on an estimated 200,000 patients in the last twenty years.

In that operation, surgeons disconnect the stomach from the top of the small intestine and reconnect it to the bottom, bypassing 90 percent of the bowel that normally absorbs food.

Intestinal bypass patients could theoretically eat all they wished, and still lose weight.

However, a large series of patients followed for several years shows that most eventually develop severe or life threatening complications of the kidney and liver. Up to 5 percent die of its complications, a fourth require operations to reverse the procedure and less than 20 percent have an overall satisfactory result in terms of weight loss and safety.

Dr John D. Halverson, associate professor of surgery at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, Missouri, bluntly stated that "intestinal bypass should no longer be carried out for obestity. It has," he said, "been widely and wisely abandoned."

He also urged all patients who have had the operation to have "frequent, intensive" check-ups with their surgeon.

"These people should know that a majority will eventually develop complications and physicians should know that we are fearful of both the known and unknown complications these patients develop."

Most are "still walking around" with their operations and are at serious risk, agreed Iowa's Mason. "Stomach stapling has now replaced intestinal bypass."

At a panel discussion on the subject, several surgeons emphasized that stomach bypass patients must undergo strict dietary retraining and psychotherapy.

"A patient who eats carelessly and fails to follow diets after the operation will destroy the effect of the operation either by stretching the stomach, tearing out staples or stretching the opening through which the food goes out of the stomach," according to Halverson.

"The patients must learn that this surgery doesn't cure them, and that only they can help themselves by eating less. This operation gets them over the hump by making them feel full after only a few bites of food, but after that it's up to them."

Dr James Patrick O'Leary, a surgeon at the VA Hospital in Nashville, Tenn., said scientists have searched for decades for the "perfect" obesity operations because gross obesity is completely untreatable with medical or dietary means alone.

None of the early techniques stood the test of time, he said, including jaw and teeth wiring, supervised starvation, drugs to curb appetite or intestinal bypass.

"The logical next step was to make the stomach smaller and so far, the best results are with the bypass staple operation."

In November, Mason introduced a newer version of the bypass, which involves plastic "banding" of an artificial opening in the stomach wall to strengthen the pouch and keep it from stretching.

Dr Daniel Berson, professor of surgery at New York Medical College, has hopes for an even newer technique, which would compress the stomach with an inflatable balloon implanted inside the abdomen and strapped around the stomach.

Called balloon gastroplasty, it has so far been done only on animals. Mason and other surgeons are reluctant to consider it because implantation of so much "foreign material" in the abdomen has, in other kinds of operations, led to infection.

Loungewear offers economical alternative to expensive 'dress up' evening apparel

By SUSAN PHINNEY
Hearst Feature Service

Nancy Reagan has made it perfectly clear that dressing up for evening is "in." She offers few clues, however, to accomplishing it on a budget.

While she's favoring Adolfo and other pricey designers for ball gowns that sell for $1,000 and up, smart shoppers can head for the loungewear or at-home departments and get dressed up for a lot less.

David Brown, a California-based loungewear stylist ("Don't call me a designer because I've had no formal training," he says modestly) believes women don't realize the opportunities a loungewear department offers them. Most still regard them as a place to buy bath robes. "But a woman with any creative sense at all can make a $60 garment look like $600 with the right shoes, a piece of jewelry, or perhaps, a belt."

"I think women today, because they're out of the house so much, want to look feminine and glamorous at home," Brown says. "And with the cost of living and travel, people are going to be entertaining at home."

Brown believes in long, flowing garments of beautiful fabrics for evening. "I'm trying to keep women out of pants. I'm tired of them," he says flatly. He also believes in washable fabrics -- man-made silks from the Orient, Qiana polyester or the new machine-washable panne velvets.

In his fall collection, Brown has gold and silver fabrics spliced with black. He has brocades and black jersey flecked with gold.

Brown says a caftan is the most flattering garment of all. "Most women think they have to be fat to wear one. But there's an aura of mystery when you put a slim woman in a caftan. Women shouldn't associate caftans with full figures."

Brown travels for inspiration. The black, gold and bright colors he's used for fall '81, for example, are the result of a recent trip to North Africa. He says he picks up sleeve details, collar styles and other innovations he incorporates into his designs. And when he puts them together, he isn't thinking about the Nancy Reagans and other fashion leaders of the country. "I design for Mrs. America -- women with busts. I don't think of New York City women. I think of women in Albany or Omaha," Brown says.

Brown isn't the only designer or stylist making a name in the loungewear department. Bill Tice, makes loungewear for Swirl (the company that made snap-front Models Coats an American institution) that is so posh it could be sold in evening wear salons. He quilts silks, drapes togas and pairs harem pants with trendy jackets.

Among the fashions to be modeled at the Orgena's Club fundraising fashion show Nov. 25 at the Midland Hilton are these two outfits. Pictured left: The starting point for your fall collction is leather...soft, supple, lback lther, done in the manner of the bomber jacket, with wide shoulders and matching pants, worn over natural dark mink vest and hat. Right is the tailored look, with well defined matching stripes which makes this two piece ensemble a fashion standout. Mohair 7/8 length coat is worn over matching skirt and tied with obi like sash that's fringed. Evelyn Brown of Chicago is the designer.

Fashion show set Nov. 25 at Hilton

Sepia Fashion Revue sponsored by the Orgena's Club, a social and civic club, will be Nov. 25 at the Midland Hilton.

This is the second year the fundraising fashion show has been held in Midland. It will begin at 8 p.m.

Sepia is a traveling road fashion production, sponsored each year in major cities in the United States by civic and social organizations for charity events.

The 1981 tour, "The Snob Look," will tour 60 major cities. It premiered in Chicago, Ill., in September and will close in Los Angeles, Calif., Dec. 6.

Proceeds from last year's show enabled Orgena's to give a $1,100 scholarship to Cynthia Roberts, who is now attendig the University of Texas at El Paso. Proceeds from this year's show will also be used for a scholarship.

Pat Traylor is president of the local club. Other officers include Iris Hall, vice president; Delores Mitchell, secretary; Martha Chandler, treasurer; and Una Evans, financial secretary.

Main objective of the group is to support spiritual, educational, cultural and moral values in the community. In past years, the organization has donated to the Sickle Cell Foundation, presented scholarshps, made annual donations to area chuches, spnsored Easter Egg hunts for day nurseries and provided other charitable services that benefit the community.

Aerobic activity essential for women

By ANN MARSHALL
Copley News Service

When it comes to health, many career women follow a predictable path.

They emulate the stereotyped businessman. Their muscles become flabbier and their weight starts to creep up — all in the wrong places.

"Tension headaches become a part of daily life and climbing a flight of stairs can become hard work," says Sharon Barbano, a fitness consultant and adviser to the L'eggs mini-marathon in New York.

It used to be that women stayed home and men brought home the bread, butter and heart attacks. Today's woman, searching for equal career opportunities, is experiencing health problems that go along with the hard-nosed, day-to-day grind of the business world.

According to Barbano, women traditionally are accustomed to exercising in front of mirrors, using fancy machines and doing exercises designed to maintain their figures.

But this type of exercise doesn't strengthen the cardiovascular system. Women, like men, need to sweat. It is no longer considered dangerous or unfeminine for women to exercise vigorously.

Aerobic activity — exercise that promotes the supply of oxygen to the body — helps strengthen the heart and lungs. It also burns calories, resulting in weight loss, tones muscles and melts away inches. Aerobic exercise releases tension, claims Barbano, which can make you feel good, both physically and psychologically.

According to Barbano, the "big four" of aerobics are walking, running, swimming and biking. Aerobic activities build the heart rate up and keep it there through steady continuous exercise.

Barbano cites three key rules for smart, safe exercise.

1. Always warm up with 10 to 15 minutes of relaxation and stretching exercises. Start your activity slowly, gradually moving into a steady pace.

2. Exercise at a pace at which you can carry on a conversation. Train, don't strain.

3. Finish the workout by walking slowly followed by more stretching exercises.

SWIMMING — Swim at a steady pace for 20 to 30 minutes, taking brief breaks to catch your breath, if necessary, at first.

Playing with inflatable toys in the pool is NOT aerobic exercise. If you are looking for a place to swim in the city, try one of the YMCA or YWCA pools or find a health club or gym with a pool that offers time set aside for "serious" swimming.

WALKING — During the transit strike in New York City, many women adopted the habit of walking to work in running shoes, carrying their high heels along to change into at the office. This is the easiest way to start a fitness program — merely start to walk to and from work. Or, get off the bus a few blocks early and walk the rest of the way.

After work, change into comfortable clothes and walk briskly, pumping your arms, for 20 to 30 minutes. Gradually extend the length of the walk. Supplement this with brisk noon-hour walks to break up your business day and release tension.

RUNNING — After you are fit enough to walk briskly, you may wish to join the thousands of women who run for fun.

Ray Peterson and Martin Peterson have been elected president and vice president-drilling superintendent, respectively, of the newly organized, Midland-based, Peterson Drilling Company, a contract drilling firm.

R. Peterson

Ray Peterson received his masters degree in business administration from Georgia State University and a B.S. degree from New Mexico State University.

He previously worked for Landis Drilling Company of Midland, and was vice president of Sterling Drilling Company.

M. Peterson

Martin Peterson, a veteran of 20 years experience, was with Hondo Drilling Company for ten years in Lovington New Mexico.

Other officers are John J. Redfern III, chairman of the board, Byron H. Greaves, secretary and director, both of Midland; and Thomas A. Dugan, director, of Farmington N.M.

Peterson Drilling Company currently operates two rigs and has a third rig on order. Rig No. 1, a new OIME SL—750 rated to 14,000 feet is currently drilling for Bandera Energy Company in Lea County, N.M. Rig No. 2, a new Weiss W-45 rated to 8,000 feet is currently drilling for Flag-Redfern Oil Company in Ward County. Rig No. 3, a new Brewster N-46 rated to 11,000 feet will be delivered in February.

Reorganized

Scott C. Shelton has been elected Energy Group president for Perry Gas Companies, Inc. in a move to consolidate the activities of the pipeline group and the oil and gas divisior for the company.

Shelton

In the reorganization, Byron Johnston was elected senior vice president of business development for the energy group. Ed Welling will be vice president of operations and engineering. Gordon G. Marcum II will be vice president of the oil and gas division.

Johnston

Shelton joined Perry in August 1979 as vice president and general counsel. He has served as Assistant City Attorney of Midland and was in private practice of law before joining Perry.

Welling

Johnston joined the company in 1977. He has previously worked for Texaco, Inc., Lone Star Gas Co. and LaVaca Gathering Company.

Welling has assumed the duties of general management of operations and engineering.

Marcum

Welling gained experience in production, gas plant operations and engineering with Shell Oil Company in New Orleans and most recently with Southland Royalty Co. in Midland.

Marcum is responsible for the oil and gas division of the Energy Group. He has served as vice president and exploration manager for Olix Energy and Olix Industries Inc., prior to joining Perry in August 1981.

He was vice president of Marcum Drilling Company and worked for the state of New Mexico as director of oil and gas and minerals with the responsibility of managing nine million acres of mineral properties.

Hired

J.S. (Steve) Guyton, a former Midland resident, has been appointed to the new position of vice president exploration of Transierra Exploration Corporation, with offices in Dallas.

Guyton

Guyton will supervise Transierra's overall exploration activity as well s devote himself to new field activity in Texas, New Mexico and Louisiana.

Youngest Hunt not like those older bolder Hunts

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — J.R. he is not. Nor is he Nelson, Herbert or Lamar.

As a wheeler-dealer Texas oil mogul, he is not a Ewing, or even a stereotype Hunt. Nor does he want to be.

"If I could flip a switch and turn off my last name, I'd love it," Ray Hunt said once.

Ideally, he would enter his skyscraper office each day to be greeted only by glowing reports on his ever-expanding financial empire.

He would spend the day making nothing but profitable and privately acclaimed business decisions.

HIS ROUTINE would be uninterrupted by outside forces and uncluttered by any mention of the words silver or soybean.

No one would call him the "quiet" Hunt or the "nice" Hunt or confuse him with the more visible Hunts, his half brothers Nelson, Herbert or Lamar.

Finally, and most importantly, he would be home with his wife and five kids before dark.

"In many respects, I guess I'm kind of dull," smiled the "other" Hunt, Ray, 38, youngest son of rapscallion oil billionaire H.L. Hunt.

Dull is not the word, though he scrupulously avoids the lightning and thunder so common to the activities of his better-known brothers.

"I do find public exposure undesirable," he said. "If I could wave a magic wand...I would prefer that no one knows Ray Hunt even exists."

WITH A SHRUG and a sigh, he added: "Obviously, that's not the way the real world works."

Associates say the only son of H.L.'s second marriage is simply a devoted family man who is submerged in the far-flung operations of Hunt Oil Co.

That was the flagship firm of the patriarch Hunt, a crafty, cunning Commie-hater who supposedly parlayed a winning poker hand into a mammoth oil fortune.

That was in the 1930s, during the East Texas oil boom.

But when the old man died in 1974, he left what Forbes magazine described as a company that "had been creeping for years toward a slow death."

AT THE TIME, Herbert and Nelson were more interested in Placid Oil and Penrod Drilling and Lamar was absorbed with his sports franchises.

Ray, then 31, took over as president of Hunt Oil.

In 1975, the "other half" of the family broke away to form Hunt Energy Co., and in 1978 sold its remaining 18.5 percent interest in Hunt Oil to Ray's family.

Ray was relieved to have the empire split in two. "He figured the separation would shelter him from his half-brothers' publicity," a friend, who asked not to be identified, said.

Such was not the case, although the companies remain entirely separate and the families share no common assets.

NELSON AND HERBERT'S DARING but dubious attempts to corner the soybean and silver markets got generous news coverage, little of it favorable.

Unfortunately, the public tended to confuse Ray with his half-brothers or lump them all in together.

Hunt Oil and Hunt Energy do operate out of the same Dallas skyscraper, but a kind of running joke suggests that the two could "just as well be Mobil and Exxon."

Said one Hunt Oil official recently: "I think we're about to get the message across."

On behalf of himself, his mother and three sisters, Ray took control of family land and oil properties valued at perhaps $250 million and built an empire now worth an estimated $1 billion.

"RAY GOT HUNT OIL ROLLING again," said Jim Oberwetter, 36, the firm's trouble-shooting director of governmental and public affairs.

"When he took over, the company still had an excellent reputation with the oil community. He built on that."

The youngest Hunt reorganized, modernized, diversified, upgraded and hired a number of the business world's best and brightest young minds.

"We keep the lines of authority very short and response time for a decision very quick," he said.

His operations grew to include oil, real estate, ranching, farming, publishing and, most recently, insurance.

JUST WEEKS AGO, he bought Union Life Insurance of Little Rock, Ark., for a reported $68.7 million.

"We look to Union Life as providing a basis...for what we hope will become a very sophisticated financial services operation," he said.

Actually, you might find the Hunt brand on a charolais cow, a Texas cantaloupe, a home shampoo or an oil or gas well almost anywhere in the world.

The Hunt holdings include five cattle ranches in Texas, Montana and Wyoming and a 6,000-acre farm, Sharyland Plantation, in South Texas.

Domestically, Hunt Oil is active in 20 states and in federal offshore waters.

EARLY ON, RAY CHOSE to decentralize the company's oil and gas operations, dividing them into four exploration regions: Houston, Dallas, Denver and Billings, Mont.

If not totally autonomous, each has great latitude in day-to-day operations and authority to make often high-level decisions.

"I've always felt that when you have the right people, everything else tends to fall into place," said Ray, sounding more than a little like his father.

The old man insisted his greatest source of pride was the caliber of people he attracted to Hunt Oil.

"He always said they had created the successes he was getting credit for," remembered Ray. "That always made a big impression on me."

BUT IT WAS SOMETHING else his father said that struck home even more dramatically. Said he:

"Given the choice between luck and intelligence, always take luck."

In 1976, Hunt Oil took its first plunge into foreign exploration, an interest in a North Sea block near Scotland. It was a major discovery, called the Beatrice Field.

"We've really been more fortunate than we should have been," laughed Ray. "We have been lucky."

Now, Hunt Oil is operative in perhaps a dozen foreign countries and is a key player, with SEDCO International, in the so-called "China Project."

THAT INVOLVES GEOPHYSICAL work for the People's Republic of China, which, the patriarch Hunt long insisted, was the epitome of the Red Menace.

One evening, a Dallas columnist spotted Ray Hunt with "a delegation of Red Chinese" in a local steak house. Tongue in cheek, he wrote:

"This had to be an historical first, this breaking of bread between the sons of H. L. and the sons of Mao, comparable say, to the children of Cain and Abel calling a truce and going out together for a night on the town."

Ray Hunt's business philosophy offers an explanation for Hunt Oil's involvement in the China Project.

"I'm a big believer that a company is like any other living organism," he said. "It is constantly changing. If it ever ceases to change, it's dead.

"I STRONGLY BELIEVE THAT."

As he talked, the visitor was impressed with the physical similarities between the light-haired, slightly pudgy and boyishly handsome Ray and his father.

He went on:

"The second thing I believe very strongly is that while conditions change, the underlying principles which govern our actions seldom change.

"The oil industry changed quite a bit over the past 10 years. To remain successful and aggressive, Hunt Oil needed to change also. But we didn't change the principles that allowed us to get here in the first place."

Associations preparing to defend endangered oil tax cut legislation

Arden R. Grover, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, announced Friday, just prior to leaving to attend the Independent Petroleum Association of America meeting in Houston, that "the PBPA totally opposes efforts to rescind the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, and any plans to change the expensing of intangible drilling costs for the domestic independent petroleum operator."

Grover said, "the PBPA is so advising the White House, the Office of Management and Budget and the Texas-New Mexico delegations in the House and Senate. We are also calling on all other domestic independent petroleum associations to rise up united in oppposition to any such actfvities."

The association president pointed out, "If the United States is to achieve energy independence, these regressive actions must be stopped dead. The independent, drilling 85 percent of all domsetic wells in 1980 and paying Windfall Profits Excise Taxes on even more activities in 1981, will be neither drilling nor paying taxes, if these tax moves, particulary the Expensing of Intangible Drilling Costs change, take place.

"The consuming public and the domestic independent petroleum operators, not the major companies, are the ones who will be affected by such activities, and we are notifying our Congressional delegations in the House and Senate of our position, and calling on them for help. At the same time, we will alert our membership to the need for continued vigilance against such attempts."

The IPAA says the next attack on the recent amendments to the oil excise tax will occur in the U.S. Senate soon after October 14. Senator Thomas Eagleton (D-Mo.) as announced plans to amend the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 by eliminating the phase-down of the oil excise tax on newly discovered oil from 30 to 15 percent. He would establish a trust fund with the revenue involved for social security purposes.

Aside from losing the new tax relief, such action would set a dangerous precedent for the domestic oil producing industry. In essence, a special tax on it would be used for long term financing of the social security system.

The Missouri Senator claims his plan is aimed at big oil companies, but independent producers would receive the brunt of the proposed tax increase.

THE READERS' VIEW

The oil editor's blaming the Texas Railroad Commission for the unfortunate recent deaths caused by a pipeline explosion was completely unwarranted.

For a "bureaucratic" state agency, the Oil and Gas Division of the Texas Railroad Commission does an excellent and efficient job. In an effort to be efficient, I believe they try not to duplicate information already available to the public.

Those familiar with oil and gas operations should be aware that in order to lay a high pressure gas line an easement or right of way must be obtained. These "grants of realty" are recorded in the records of the county clerk in the county seat of whatever county the land the pipeline crosses is situated. Furthermore, prior to conducting drilling operations, prudent operators should be familiar with the particular land title on which the drilling will take place. This is the ususal and standard practice within the industry. Typically, a title opinion, which is written by a lawyer, cites any easements or right of ways to pipelines existing on the land examined. Given notice per the title opinion, the operating company can seek assistance from the pipeline company if the exact whereabouts of the pipeline is uncertain. (In my limited operating experience, I have encountered this problem and the pipeline company cordially assisted me in staking my location.) Also, in many areas where high pressure gas lines exist, there are posted notices.

To place full responsiblity for a tragic accident on our Railroad Commission is arbitrary. Many factors exist which cause accidents, and total reliance on a a state agency for the safety of the public breeds more irresponsibility.

C. Louis Renaud
Midland

I believe that David C. Sodamann conveyed a complete ignorance of the oil industry in his October 11 tirade at the duties and responsibilities of the Texas Railroad Commission. I have worked as an engineer in West Texas for 35 years and would never say that the RRC is negligent in approving locations. I don't consider it their duty to inform an operator where pipelines are located.

I don't believe that anyone can tell from the office just where a pipeline is. I'll bet that many times they are 100 feet from where they are supposed to be in the middle of a section. After all, I'm sure that the contractor took the route of the easiest ditching (proable acceptable because the survey stakes may have been 1,000 feet apart). Further, There are many lease lines that were laid at random with no records other than the beginning and the end. Any experienced oilfield personnel are aware of this and should take precautions. How can the RRC be responsible for all of this. To be closer at home, I don't know within a resonable distance where my sewer, water, and gas lines are. I doubt that Sodamann can do better with his!

The RRC is one of the few efficient government agencies that I know of. They are short of staff and unable to do all that they are supposed to (such as witnessing all plugging operations). They do the best they can with a limited staff. Let's not increase the cost of government by adding staff not needed.

The loss of life and injuries that Sodamann describes is regretabel. However, those men also had a responsibility for their own safety. Just check and see how many pulling units hit power lines while raising the derrick. It is mankind's trait to get lax in safety habits. Regretable, but true.

The operator should locate his well away from lines and check them on the ground when staking, the contractor should check for the safety of his crew, and the crew should check for disturbed soil and be very careful for the first few feet of digging. With all these checks, there will still be cases that pipelines will be found.

I suppose that Sodamann would have a RRC man with every dozer, grader and ditcher operating (are there enough people for this and the cost would be outrageous). Sodamann should work a year (without pay) with the RRC to see just what they do. The old saw "don't criticize until you have walked a mile in their shoe" should prevail here.

Energy page letters welcome

In order to broaden our format for reader input in the Reporter-Telegram, letters from readers concerning matters of interest to the petroleum industry will be published on this page. Letters expressing all points of view will be accepted.

Energy page letters are not intended to be a substitute for nor an extension of Letters to the Editor, which appear regularly on the editorial page, and readers wishing to express views on matters of general interest, not related to the petroleum industry, should address correspondence to "Letters to The Editor."

Letters to be published on this page should be addressed to: Energy Page Letters, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, 79702.

They must be signed and include the writer's name, address and phone number for possible verification. Letters should be no more than 300 words in length; and the right to edit libelous material and for length is reserved. Annonymous letters will not be considered.

RRC is in best position to stop deadly accidents

BY DAVID C. SODAMANN
Oil Editor

Since my comments on the Texas Railroad Commission appeared in last Sunday's edition, a number of knowledgeable and very experienced oilmen have phoned or written to tell me that I was wrong in blaming the RRC for the Martin County accident — and others like it which may happen in the future.

As a few have pointed out, oil operators do have access to pipeline records recorded in the county courthouses. A letter appearing on this page explains how the information is obtained, and why, in the opinion of the writer, operators bear the responsibilty for accident prevention.

I must admit I was aware that pipeline easements are recorded in the courthouses. However, my experience in the oil business has been in the dangerous and dirty end of it, rather than in the safe, clean end. I suppose it was because I have never had as an oilman any direct experience with county records that this angle didn't come to mind when I sat down to write my opinion. (I have researched records for other reasons.) I will acknowledge that my logic in this regard was faulty, but I still think my conclusion was valid. The Railroad Commission is in the best position to prevent accidents like the one in Martin County. It has the records needed to determine the danger and the authority to prevent dangerous work.

It is evident that some operators cannot be trusted to use the information gleaned from the courthouses to guard their employees lives. One caller, a vice president of a Midland oil company, told me one reason why. "They're too busy trying to make a buck to think about it," he said.

IN MY OPINION

But all the while, men are risking their necks. Lost money can be recouped. Lives lost are gone forever. Someone else needs to stand guard. The Railroad Commission is in the best position to do the job.

I realize that without access to elaborate devices, no one, including the RRC, can precisely identify the exact location of a buried line without first digging it up. But the RRC can use its maps to spot a pipeline close enough to recognize danger. They ought to start doing it. No one should be leveling a location and digging pits, drilling a well, or laying lead lines and such so near a pipeline that a few feet one way or another will make a difference.

We can argue forever about whose reponsiblity this last accident was, whose responsibility it is to prevent loss of life at the drillsite, and we will accomplish little. It should be decided before a similar accident happens who is in the best position to prevent it. As I see it, only the Railroad Commission has the clout.

We are looking at a problem which is difficult to handle. In theory, operators may be responsible for safety, but they are not bound indisputably to that responsibility by law. The RRC could do more to prevent accidents, but it doesn't. There are so many "who shoulds" and "what ifs" involved a final conclusion may never be reached.

But it remains, the chances are good that still more will die in senseless, preventable accidents. Can those lives be saved? It will be tough. It will take a big effort by a lot of people to get the job done.

In the meantime, I still think the Railroad Commission is in the best position to protect those who are exposed to the danger.

I won't be so foolishly bold as to suggest that my solution is the only solution to the problem, or the best solution, but I think it is a good solution that would serve until something better comes along. So far, trusting the "usual and standard practice of the industry," as the lawyers put it, has gotten people killed. It looks as if it may be time for a change. Anybody else got any better idea?

I know there are many who still disagree. I can even tell you how they will argue. They will say the oil industry already is plagued by too much of government's red tape, it doesn't need anymore RRC regulations. They will say it will cost too much to have the RRC do the job. The arguments are stock, everyone knows them.

Well, red tape is a badge of dishonor. It is used to hold things together that have gone bad. Despite how we all feel about it, today's regulation is the result of our predecessors' bad practices. New tape is applied when our good sense and virtue slips. Bellyaching won't ward it off; right conduct will. As for the cost, the answer is stock. Everyone knows it. "How can you put a price on a life?"

Rig count slipping

The Permian Basin rotary rig count approached record levels just a few weeks ago, but its sliding backwards now. According to a survey by Reed Rock Bit Co. the tally was 473 last week, down from 489 the previous week. There has been almost a month of decline since 506 rigs were counted Sept. 25.

The International Association of Drilling Contrctors reports a 4,368 rigs working nationally off the coasts and on land. The numbers indicate a hugh increase in the national count since Oct. 13, 1980 when 3,126 rigs were making hole.

According to the IADC count 1,359 rigs were working on shore in Texas Oct. 12. Another 137 were counted in New Mexico.

One year ago, 342 rigs were counted turning to the right in the Permian Basin.

INDUSTRY NOTES

Area

MGF Oil Corporation has announced the signing of a letter of intent with Bennie C. Griffin and Bennie L. Griffin, the two major shareholders of Griffin Petroleum Corporation, providing for the acquisition of 44 percent of Griffin common stock and futher providing for the intended merger of Griffin into MGF or a subsidiary of MGF.

R.O. "Jack" Major, president and chief executive officer of MGF and Bennie C. Griffin, president and chief executive officer of Griffin, said that MGF will acquire 7,500,000 shares of common stock of Griffin Petroleum (approximately 44 percent of the outstanding stock of Griffin) from the two major shareholders of Griffin for $17,250,000 ($2.30 per share) in cash and notes and proposed to acquire the remaining 9,440,000 outstanding shares, including approximately 2,500,000 shares held by those same two shareholders in an exchange of stock whereby one share of MGF common stock will be exchanged for each 4.45 shares of Griffin common stock. The timing of the exchange of stock will be subject to the effectiveness of a Registration Statement to be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

MGF is engaged in oil and gas exploration and contract drilling with headquarters in Midland, and Griffin is engaged in oil and gas exploration with headquarters in Aurora, Colorado.

Geophysical Systems Corporation, Pasadena, Calif., will soon open data processing centers in Midland and Denver. It now has a major data processing center in Houston.

The comapny recntly anounced the opening of its new technical center located adjacent to Geophysical's Corporate offices and manufacturing facilities in Pasadena.

The 18,000-square-foot building provides for expansion of the company's Pasedena's seismic data processing operations including the addition of two VAX 11/780 high speed computers as an expansion to an existing VAX system.

Geosystems is planning to add additional computers to the new facility to process data collected for clients by the company's seismic crews and certain purchasers of the 1,024 channel GEOCOR IV system. In addition to providing data processing services as the new facility, the compnay is engage in seismic system software development, and plans to conduct advanced research in other areas of geophysics.

State

The Exploration and Production Division of InterNorth, Inc., Houston, and Hart Exploraion and Production Company have announced the funding of the Hartex Anadarko-Permian Basin Partnership with an additional $60 million.

The additional funds bring to $100 million the total provided by Hartex for the development of current InterNorth oil and gas properties under a two-year drilling agreement. Earlier this year, Hartex had committed $40 million to the InterNorth drilling program over the two-year period. The $40 million is anticipated to be spent by the end of 1981, with the additional $60 million to go toward the 1982 drilling program.

The drilling agreement between Hart and InterNorth covers leases in Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma, and New Mexico. Under the terms of the agreement InterNorth determines the locations to be drilled and serves as operator. The Hartex Partnership then earns 50 percent of InterNorth's working interest ownership by paying 90 percent of InterNorth's share of the coast of each development well and 75 percent of InterNorth's share of the cost of each exploratory well. InterNorth retains the option to purchase the production.

Since the agreement was signed in Feb. 1981, 44 wells have been drilled under the program. Of that total 20 have been productive, 15 are drilling and nine are dry holes.

The Hartex Anadarko-Permian Basin Partnership consists of Denver-based Hart Exploration and Producion Company and Hambro Gas & Oil, a Minnesota corporation which is affiliated with Hambros Bank, Ltd. of London. As managing partner, Hart will earn a management fee from the partnership equal to three percent of all monies expended by the partnership and two percent carried interest in each successful well which is convertible to a four percent working interest after payout. Additionally, Hart will earn the right to participate for up to 25 percent of the partnership share in selected wells.

InterNorth is a diversified, energy-based company with five lines of business: natural gas, liquid fuels, petrochemicals, exploration and production and coal. The corporation's exploration and production activities operate from four regional offices, Houston, Midland, Tulsa, and Denver.

The executive committee of Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association has elected J. Avery Rush Jr., of Amarillo, president of Diamond Shamrock Corporation's Oil and Gas Unit, as its first chairman.

Rush, the association's 28th top officers, succeeds Edwin L. Cox, Dallas independent oil and gas producer. Cox served two one-year terms as head of the 4,000-member industry organization.

In other action taken during the asociation's 62nd annual meeting held Oct. 7 and 8 in Dallas, the executive committee named William H. Abington of Dallas, president; and Bill W. Barton of Austin, vice president.

Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corporation, Houston, a wholly owned subsidiary of Transco Companies Inc., has announced the company plans to issue $75 million of Debentures due in 1991.

The debentures will be entitled to a mandatory sinking fund commencing Oct. 1, 1986 of $75 million annually, sufficient to retire not less than 50 percent of the debentures prior to maturity. The debentures are redeemable at the option of the company at redemption prices declining to par for last year. The debentures are non-refundable at a lower interest rate prior to Oct. 1, 1988.

The offering is expected to be made later this month and will be managed by Lazard Freres & Co., Merrill Lynch White Weld Capital Markets Group and the First Boston Corporation. The net proceeds will be used for general corporate purposes, including funding a portion of its 1982 case requirements for capital expenditures and scheduled maturities of long-term indebtedness.

Nation

The Society of Exploration Geophysicists has reported the total number of seismic land crews and marine vessels searching for oil and gas in the U.S. and U.S. waters continued to increase during September. The September total of 744 marked 30 consecutive months of increases and set a new all-time record for active crews and vessels.

The September total of 744 represents an increase of 2 percent over last month, and a 32 percent increase over September, 1980, a 72 percent increase over September 1979, and 111 percent increase over September, 1978; a 133 percent increase over September 1977, and a 178 percent increase over September 1976. And it shows a gain of 172 percent over the same month in 1975.

The Federal Reserve Board has approved the common stock of Universal Energy Corporation for margin trading in the national over-the-counter market, the company announced.

The new status, official as of October 5, "will facilitate greater liquidity for present and potential investors," Robert A. Alexander, Jr., chairman of Universal, said.

Universal Energy has three main areas of interest: exploration and development of oil and gas reserves; the purchase and sale of oil field equipment and oil industries services.

Deep drilling in Anadarko, giant Arab reserves

Tenneco Inc., Houston, and nine partners have started drilling in the Anadarko Basin of Oklahoma the deepest well ever drilled by Tenneco Exploration and Production.

The exploratory well, the the Sadler Creek area of Washita County, is planned to 25,200 feet to test the Hunton formation and several other potential pay zones at various depths.

Tenneco Oil expects to finish drilling in late summer 1982 with the total cost estimated at between $12 million and $14.5 million.

The well is on a structure where Tenneco has interest in 11 sections. part of the area already has established gas production at depths to 26,600 feet.

Standard Oil Company of Indiana, recently began development in the United Arab Emirate of Sharjah, what appears to be one of the largest discoveries ever made by the company.

Extensive tests from the first three wells in the field indicate potential reserves of several trillion cubic feet of natural gas and recoverable condensate reserves in the hundreds of millions of barrels.

A five well development program, now underway, is expected to be completed in the summer of 1982. Initially, facilities will also be constructed capable of handling daily production of 250 million cubic feet of gas and 25,000 barrels of low-sulfur condensate.

****

Energy Production Co., Denver, recently announced it has successfully completed in the southeast Powder River Basin of Weston County, Wyoming three Muddy Sand oil producers in it first multi-well, company-operated drilling venture.

At the time of the announcment, the company had two wells producing — one at 50 barrels per day, the other at 45 — and a third was being tested.

Energy Production is begining a second Weston County drilling program this month. It will include three wildcat attempts and a diagonal offset to two wells that were plugged in the early fifties after successfully producing a sustained 20 barrels daily from the Muddy Sand.

****

Pel-Tex Oil Co., Inc., Houston, recently completed its Mermentau Minerals No. A-1 well in Cameron Parish, La. The well flowed at 9.5 million cubic feet of natural gas, and 29 barrels of condensate per day through a 14/64 inch choke.

Five pay sands are indicated in zones extending from 11,958 feet to 12,861 feet. Flowing tubing pressure was 8,160 psi. Shut in pressure was 9,081 psi.

****

Nobel Affiliates, Inc., Ardmore, Okla., recently completed a Devonian Discovery in Lea County, N.M.

On a drillstem test, the No. 1 SOC Speight flowed natural gas and 54.7 gravity crude to the surface in 32 minutes at the rate of 1,440 barrels of oil per day through a 1/2 inch choke, with no formation water.

The Devonian reef was topped at 12,106 feet, and the test was from 11,945 to total depth at 12,136 feet.

****

Gulf Oil Exploration & Production Co., Houston, has completed a new field gas discovery in Lea County, N.M.

The No. 1 East Hat Mesa State Unit was completedd in the Morrow formation with a calculated absolute open flow of 9.4 million cubic feet of gas per day. Maximum flow was five million cubic feet per day through perforations between 14,382 feet to 14,406 feet on a 16/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 3,300 psi. Total depth is 14,529 feet.

A drillstem test at 13,855 to 13,897 feet had a flow of gas estimated at two million cubic feet per day. Seven additional Morrow zones appear to have gas production potential.

Air/gas drillers given new method for determining correct volume

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — An air/gas drilling research project conducted at the University of Tulsa under contract from the U.S. Department of Energy has yielded a new, realistic method for determining the volume of air or gas needed for any given set of drilling conditions and depths.

The new method, a primarily graphical one which can be used at the well site and without access to a computer, is detailed in a report newly available from DOE's Bartlesville Energy Technology Center. Entitled "Experimental Determination of Solids Friction Factors and Minimum Volumetric Requirments in Air or Gas Drilling," the report covers work performed at the University by Carlos Jose Makado V and Dr. Chi U Ikoku, principal investigor.

Methods used up to now predict air or gas requirements are largely trial-and-error variety and are valid only over limited ranges of drilling conditions. There has been no one general correlation to calculate air or gas needs in the field. The new method, the researchers say, fills that void. The researchers are performing similar work on the transport of drilled cuttings produced when drilling with mist or foam. The results of that work will be published soon.

Crucial in the development of the new method were: (1) a complete evaluation of the total drilling-system pressure drop, and (2) development of a new group of empirical correlations to account for frictional effects of solids in the annulus during air or gas drilling. Solids used in the study were sandstones, limestones, and shales covering the range of partical sizes encountered in air and gas drilling operations.

Researchers considered actual drilling parameters — such as standpipe pressure, bit nozzle size, density and particle size of the formation to be drilled, and deviation factor and viscosity of the gas phase — to obtain results as accurate as possible.

The method, as well as determining volume requirements, also predicts the maximum depth that can be reached with a specific set of drilling conditions. It claims a high degree of flexibility in selection of standpipe pressures and volumetric flow rates — and thus in compressor specifications. It reduces the requirment for experience factors, complex calculations, and computer calculation of fluid volumes.

The research team cautions, however, that the volume requirments predicted by using the method must be verified in the field. The graphs and charts in the report were constructed from laboratory and computer data.

C. Ray Williams, BETC technical project officer, feels it unlikely that the trial-and-error methods currently used by drilliers will ever be replaced completely. The prime use of the new method, he says, will be to prevent the use of excess air or gas while the hole is still in gage. If this can be realized, Willams says, "problems such as hole enlargment, sloughing shale, and wellbore collapse can be minimized; and drilling costs will be reduced."

Single copies of the report are available from the Bartlesville Energy Technology Center, Attention: Bill Linville, P.O. Box 1398, Bartlesville, Okla. 74005.

Progressing Cavity Downhole Pumps from Centrilift-Hughes

Here is a sample of what the Centrilift progressing cavity downhole pump has to offer:

- Low cost. You get quick payback even in low volume wells.
- Immediate delivery.
- Simple installation.
- Variable speed drive.
- Clean low-profile appearance.
- Lifting capacity to 100 BPD from depths to 1500 ft.
- Ability to lift sandy or gassy fluids. No gas locks.
- 24 hour turnaround on parts and repairs.
- Operations with standard NEMA Type B. electric motors.
- Use of existing rod and tubing strings.

Even though progressing cavity pumps have been used in industry for many years, they are new to the oil patch. And Centrilift is the only company that can offer you the new idea and back it with oil field and submersible equipment experience.

And not only that, you'll be getting the promise of future developments in the progressing cavity pump. The Hughes Tool Companies will take the idea to its limits.

Contact us today. We'll bring out your progressing cavity downhole pump tomorrow.

Chancellor

In this capacity he will be reponsible for the operation of Tipperary's seven gas processing plants and associated with gas gathering systems in Texas, New Mexico and Louisiana.

Chancellor joined Tipperary in July 1979, as manager of gas supply. Prior to that he was employed 22 years by Cities Service Company and last served as manager of contracts for the Natural Gas Liquids Group.

Robert E. (Bob) Price has been appointed vice president-shaft and raise drilling for Drilco Industrial, a division of Smith International Inc.

Price

Price joined Smith International in 1964 as an industrial products sales representative with the Drilco division.

He served as OEM/Distributor sales manager from 1966 to 1969 and then as industrial products sales manager in 1974.

Price then moved to Drilco Industrial as sales manager-mining and construction. Between 1975 and 1980, he was promoted successively to marketing manager, vice president-marketing, vice president-international sales, and vice president-sales.

Brent Barker, engineer-pilot; Frank Johnson, landman; and J.B. Young, exploration geologist, have joined Fairchild Petroleum Corporation.

Barker is a Texas Tech graduate in charge of field operations and aviation.

Johnson manages the land work and holds a petroleum land managment degree fom the Universty of Texas at Austin.

Young is working on a masters degree from Texas Tech and is in charge of screen deals and generating propects, concentrating along the Eastern Shelf.

****

Kyle E. Posey has joined the Midland division of Cotton Petroleum Corporation, a subsidiary of United Energy Resources, Inc., as an exploration geologist.

Posey

Posey will be responsible for prospect generation in the southeast New Mexico area. He was previously employed by MAPCO Production Company in Midland.

Posey received a B.S. degree in geology from Oklahoma State University in 1980.

Company rides to success on boss' far-fetched predictions

By TOM FURLONG
Los Angeles Times

ORANGE, Calif. — About 10 years ago, a relatively unknown oil-drilling company executive named Earnest Hubert Clark Jr. — Hubie to his friends — was making a seemingly far-fetched prediction about the price of crude oil.

Clark, chief executive of a company named Baker Oil Tools Inc., was saying that the price of crude — a cheap, plentiful commodity in those days — was headed to $5 a barrel in three years, about double what it had been selling for since 1958.

It was Clark's belief that demand for oil services would soar as the nation's thirst for oil grew and utilization of drilling capacity approached 100 percent.

But because Clark wasn't well-known, "nobody listened to him," remembers Frank Scott, Baker's manager for investor relations.

History, of course, proved Clark correct — and made Baker and its chief executive among the best-known names in the oil services industry.

The price of crude not only doubled, but quadrupled as a result of the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo — setting off a mad search fo domestic oil that is still going on. Five years later, the price of crude tripled — this time because of the turmoil caused by the fall of the Shah of Iran. Imported crude today costs more than $30 a barrel — 10 times what it did when Clark made his first prediction.

Although the oil price increases spelled disaster for most of the economy, they proved a boon for Baker Oil Tools Inc. and the rest of the then-depressed oil services industry.

Baker — since renamed Baker International Corp. and headquartered in the city of Orange south of Los Angeles — should earn more this year — $216 million — than it generated in sales — $178 million — 10 years ago.

"As it turned out, I was a piker (about prices)," said Clark recently. "What had been a dream turned into a miracle."

In his 16 years as Baker's chief executive, Clark has transformed a conservatively run company with modest growth goals into an industry leader that thinks big and isn't afraid to gamble, industry observers say.

Under Clark's leadership, Baker has grown through acquisition and diversified heavily into the exploration side of oil services and the mining equipment business.

Some of Baker's main products include drilling fluids, rock bits used in drilling, pumping and casing systems used in production, and an entirely separate range of mining products.

About 50 percent of 1980 earnings came from drilling services, 40 percent from oil-well completion and production, 5 percent from mining and the rest from miscellaneous operations.

Profits in fiscal 1981, which ended Sept. 30, should set a record and be up 57 percent from the $139 million earned in 1980, the company estimates. Officials said income per share should rise to $3.40 from $2.11, while revenues should top $2 billion for the first time.

Clark says he doesn't expect 1981's sales and profit increases to be repeated, mostly because oil prices have stabilized. But he does expect average growth from 1981 to 1985 to exceed the 26 percent average annual rate experienced between 1976 and 1980.

"The present price of oil ran up so fast (in the 1970s) that even if prices were flat for the next five years, there would be enough revenues to do (the exploration and production that) needs to be done," Clark says.

Industry officials and analysts agree, however, that the boomtimes for oil services are starting to subside and more normal expectations are beginning to take over.

On Wall Street, those lower expectations means the infatuation investors used to have for oil service stocks has worn off — even though earnings growth rates of 30 percent and more continue to be commonplace in the industry.

The major oil service stocks have plunged from their 52-week highs in large part because of uncertainty about world oil prices and the lower profits of the major oil companies.

Oil industry earnings, the lifeblood of the oil service industry, are off from the 1979 and 1980 boom years, and the subsequent slide in Big Oil's stock on Wall Street has taken the oil service industry down with it, some industry observers believe.

The fact that crude oil prices are relatively stable in today's glutted market has further depressed prices of oil service stocks, analysts say.

Clark believes that prices set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will grow at an annual rate that is one to two percentage points above the rate of inflation. But some financial analysts question that assumption.

"I think Hubie is pretty optimistic about oil prices," says Herbert Hart, analyst in the San Francisco office of Los Angeles-based Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards Inc. "He's convinced the Saudis will be able to maintain control over them."

Industry analyst Fred Mills of Rotan, Mosle Inc. in Dallas believes Baker's profits will grow at an annual rate of about 20 percent over the next five years — well below the 30 percent predicted by the company — partly because Saudi Arabia has said it will keep a lid on oil prices.

Increased competition is another factor affecting Baker and the industry, says William Sallans, executive vice president of the Petroleum Equipment Suppliers Association, a trade group in Houston.

Sallans points out, for example, that last year only eight companies were making one type of pumping device that was much in demand. Now, more than 200 firms are making that product, and the industry is worried about an oversupply, Sallans says.

Analysts say Clark earned his high marks both by making astute predictions and then betting that those predictions would come true.

In 1971, Baker bought Milchem Inc., an oil drilling fluids firm, for $9 million. Today Milchem generates about 20 percent of Baker's revenues.

In 1977 and 1978, Baker embarked on a $500 million expansion program when it became clear to Clark that the Shah of Iran "was going to fall out of bed."

When Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi was toppled in January 1979, and crude oil prices again exploded, "we (had) a year's lead on the industry," Clark says. "That resulted in a better market share and better facilities. As volume increased, we could handle it more efficiently and quickly."

Youngest Hunt is different

SAYING AGAIN he'd rather be lucky than smart, Ray said Hunt Oil was fortunate to be located in the booming Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Several years ago, he founded Woodbine Development Corp. to manage more than 3,000 acres of land in and around the two cities. It, too, has prospered.

Woodbine spent $32.6 million to renovate what now is Fort Worth's Hyatt-Regency Hotel and is building a $71 million, 40-story office building nearby.

In Dallas, Woodbine's splashy Reunion, a land improvement and hotel-restaurant-arena project, represented a $120 million investment.

The 50-acre, long-neglected tract that became Reunion was owned jointly with the city, and the development dramatically reshaped the Dallas skyline.

Though profitable, such endeavors also reflect a civic spirit that rarely, if ever, moved the eldest Hunt.

But he does continue to honor one of H.L.'s business canons — refusing to take his company public. Declared he:

"We are aggressively not interested."

RRC to ease work load

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Railroad Commission has eased its workload and paperwork by deciding to let its staff approve unprotested applications to deepen oil and gas wells or deviate from the usual well-spacing rules.

"Rule 37" applications, until now, had to be reviewed by the three commissioners, which had received 2,941 such applications between Jan. 1 and Sept. 30.

The commission said the new policy will speed up processing time by about two weeks.

Second agency says there is enough gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — A second government energy agency Friday predicted that natural gas should be in adequate supply this winter.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, which regulates interstate pipelines, predicted that there would be no "significant disruption of natural gas service or supply, even if this winter is colder than normal."

FERC surveyed 28 interstate pipeline companies which transport 99 percent of the natural gas shipped in interstate commerce.

Earlier, the Energy Department also predicted that there would be no shortages of natural gas this winter like the ones which hit New England last year.

EXPLORATION—PRODUCTION—MARKETING—REFINING—TRANSPORTATION
WHAT'S A MILESTONE?
Milestone is a Denver based company that has — More than 5 million acres of oil and gas rights in the U.S.
— Reserves of more than 13 million barrels of oil and 27 BCF of gas.
— Net production of 7,600 BOPD.
— Operations from the Gulf Coast to the northern rockies in exploration, production, marketing, pipe-lines and refining.
— Current offices in Denver and Billings with a planned office in Houston before the end of 1981.
— A management and compensation program with incentives that believe in the future of exploration.
— Unbelievable potential.
In short, Milestone is a company that you will be hearing and reading about — but why just hear about us — why not join us and make your future with our future!
We are interested in discussing our current and future employment opportunities with petroleum exploration, land and engineering professionals with experience in the Gulf Coast, Mid-Continent, West Texas or Rockies. Current or future opportunities will be located in Houston, Denver and Billings. DIRECT CONTACTS WILL BE REWARDED UPON EMPLOYMENT
CURRENT OPPORTUNITIES
Denver Manager of Marketing — Requires responsible experience in managing the marketing of crude, natural gas and liquids, refined products as well as crude oil trading and refinery crude supply.
Denver Environmental and Safety Coordinator — Requires experience with petroleum environmental management, loss control and general safety administration.
Denver Geological Managers — Requires extensive exploration experience in either the southern Rockies, Oklahoma or west Texas.
Denver Land Manager — Requires extensive petroleum land management experience in either the southern Rockies, Oklahoma or west Texas.
Denver Geophysicist — Requires exporation interpretation experience in either the southern Rockies, Oklahoma or west Texas.
Billings Land Management — Requires responsible experience in petroleum exploration land management activities in Northern Rockies.
Billings Geophysicist — Requires petroleum interpretation experience preferably in Northern Rockies.
Billings Reservoir Engineer — Requires petroleum reservoir economic and performance evaluation experience.

A difficult course

There are signs — all kinds of signs — that the Congress is beginning to entertain second thoughts about President Ronald Reagan's economic recovery plan. Maybe it's time for a bit of a refresher course on the economics crisis this nation faces if its elected officials do not face up to the realities of the 1980s.

Back before President Reagan's budget cutting proposals even faced their trial by fire in the houses of Congress, the chief executive explained the problem to the people of the nation in easy to understand terms: The nation's government had been spending too freely, living beyond its means. Over a number of years the accumulated result was rapidly rising inflation and a host of other "symptoms" that were beginning to undermine the United States' financial integrity.

What the president stressed during that nationally televised address was the economic restraint essential for the nation to recover from the crippling effects of past practices, to become economically and industrially sound again so our role as leader of the free world would not be compromised. The plan offered by President Reagan called for a drastic break with the past and the start of an entirely new course for the country.

At the time of the address there was a mood in the nation that reflected the fears of all Americans' the fear of the U.S. losing its prestige, that it would become a second-rate power subject to the abuses enacted upon it by the revolutionary regime of Iran, that it would suffer economic collapse and the resulting calamity.

The evidence that a solid percentage of Americans heard — and believed — Mr. Reagan came in the form of an outpouring of public sentiment to the offices of representatives and senators. The message was loud and clear. Americans wanted action because they did not want to witness their fears turning into realities.

That initial outpouring later was translated into legislative action by elected representatives, action that meant victories for Mr. Reagan and the American people. But in recent weeks we have seen the steady decline of the resolve of elected officials in carrying out the economic mandate of Americans. Perhaps those elected representatives are fearful of the unknown, which is a major economic philosophy change, and the political consequences of legislating that change.

Particular hesitation has been evident in relation to the president's request for deeper budget cuts than those originally proposed. That's understandable; members of Congress are accustomed to talking about spending more, not less.

For the economic recovery package to be a success it's essential that our elected representatives do not fear this "mid-course correction," an alteration Mr. Reagan warned us early might become necessary. Before voting against the president's proposals, we would urge members of Congress to think back to March of this year or even to February, and to recall the fears that were so prevalent. Then they should ask themselves if they really want to resign the nation to more of the same.

The course is a difficult one, we realize. But it truly is preferable to the alternative.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Oct. 18, the 291st day of 1981. There are 74 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 18, 1867, the United States took formal possession of Alaska from Russia.

On this date:

In 1967, an unmanned Soviet spacecraft dropped instruments onto the surface of Venus, reporting that the planet's temperature is hot enough to melt metal.

In 1974, the Soviet Union and Egypt agreed to support the establishment of a Palestinian state.

In 1977, three West German terrorist leaders committed suicide in Stuttgart prison.

And in 1979, the Church of England said homosexual relationships may be justified, and recommended that homosexuals not be barred from the priesthood.

Ten years ago: Soviet Premier Kosygin was attacked — but not injured — during a visit to Ottawa by a man who shouted, "Long live free Hungary!"

Five years ago: Six Arab leaders signed a peace plan for Lebanon calling for a cease-fire and supervised troop withdrawal of warring factions.

One year ago: Iran's Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai said a decision on the fate of the American hostages was "not far away."

Today's birthdays: Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is 60. Greek actress Melina Mercuri is 56.

Thought for today: "Concealed talent brings no reputation." — Erasmus, Dutch scholar (about 1466-1536).

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Soviet ICBM advantage said staggering

WASHINGTON — Top-secret Pentagon documents explain why President Reagan feels an MX missile system is necessary — but also why the administration's scaled-down version borders on the ridiculous.

Jack Anderson

What it boils down to is that, without an enforced SALT II treaty, the United States would need something like 10,000 silos in which to hide our retaliatory intercontinental ballistic missiles to forestall a Soviet first strike. That's more than twice the number of shelters proposed in the Carter administration's "shell game" for 200 mobile MX missiles. It's many times the number of silos proposed by the Reagan administration for 100 of the MX missiles.

Simple arithmetic applied to figures in a top-secret report from the Joint Chiefs of Staff shows that even Jimmy Carter's MX proposal was inadequate — and that Ronald Reagan's more modest proposal is ludicrous. In fact, it may be impossible to build an impregnable missile system.

The simple arithmetic would make dull reading but for the fact that it involves the security of the United States — and quite possibly the future of the entire world.

The cold, hard figures suggest that the Russians have already achieved numerical superiority over the United States in intercontinental missiles. It was this assessment by the Joint Chiefs that persuaded President Reagan we needed to build up our retaliatory strength.

Here are the figures from the top-secret documents: At present, the Russians are known to have 1,398 ICBMs of all varieties. These include SS-17s with four nuclear warheads, SS-18s with eight to 10 warheads and SS-19s with six warheads.

To counter this strategic missile strength, the United States has a grand total of 1,052 ICBMs; 52 older, single-warhead Titan IIs, 450 single-warhead Minuteman IIs and 550 triple-warhead Minuteman IIIs.

Any schoolboy with a pocket calculator can figure out why the Joint Chiefs of Staff are worried: The U.S. ICBM force totals 2,152 nuclear warheads versus more than 5,000 in the Soviet arsenal. Each warhead is good for one target, whether an enemy missile silo or a military, industrial or population target. What this means, as our schoolboy's calculator will show, is that the Kremlin has enough warheads to knock out all 1,052 of our missiles in a first strike, and still have roughly 4,000 nuclear warheads left to take out submarines, bombers and other U.S. targets.

What's even more depressing is that these figures don't even take into account the Soviets' own submarines and bombers; the missile count refers only to land-based ICBMs.

The hopelessness of the situation should be obvious. But to make it even more clear, let me cite just one particular segment of the Soviet missile force as outlined in the Joint Chiefs' secret posture statement, reviewed by my associate Dale Van Atta.

The missile in question is the SS-18, known as the "monster missile." The SALT II treaty — now dead — would have limited the Russians to 308 of these blockbusters.

According to the top-secret Joint Chiefs report, slightly more than one-third of the Russians' SS-18s are "the highly accurate Mod-4, each with 10 (warheads)." The rest consist of Mod-2 missiles with eight warheads apiece and some single-warhead Mod-1s and Mod-3s, which will probably be fitted out with the sophisticated Mod-4 multiple warheads within the next two or three years. "When this retrofit is completed, assuming the Mod-4 is deployed in the 10 (warhead) version, there will be a total of 3,080 independently targetable (warheads) in the SS-18 force alone," the Joint Chiefs predicted.

All this is staggering enough. What makes it positively overwhelming is that the Russians are apparently limiting their "monster missiles" to 10 warheads only because they agreed to under the unratified SALT II treaty.

The Joint Chiefs' report says the Soviet SS-18 has been "assessed to be capable of carrying as many as 14 warheads" in a relatively short period of time. This would add another 1,200 nuclear warheads to just their SS-18 arsenal.

But there's worse yet: Most intelligence experts agree that the SS-18 monster missile could easily carry 20 warheads — possibly as many as 40. That's where the missile arithmetic goes right off the board.

The Russians' missile technology has made Jimmy Carter's 4,600-silo "shell game" for the MX missiles hopelessly obsolete. There is evidence that his SALT II negotiators realized this. Confronted with the potential of the Soviets' SS-18, the best they could come up with was testimony from the Pentagon's top research official, Dr. William Perry. It was pretty lame.

"We estimate that (the Soviets) will have in the early 1980s approximately 5,000 warheads deployed," he said. "Our strategic response to that was to determine to deploy a mobile ICBM which has 5,000 shelters protecting the missiles in it."

In other words, Perry was saying that the incredibly expensive MX system — which would take years to complete — would only neutralize the Soviets' current missile capacity. Then, conceding that U.S. estimates of the Russians' missile strength might be way off, "we would need to make some appropriate change," he said. He added: "The most obvious change we would make militarily would be to deploy 10,000 shelters instead of 5,000."

The idea of digging up enough of the West to put 10,000 MX silos into our "shell game" is preposterous enough. But by the time such a construction project could be completed — assuming the country wasn't bankrupted by the effort — the Russians' technological progress could easily require a network of MX silos stretching from the Mexican border to the Arctic Circle.

ART BUCHWALD

Performing a satellite's last rites

I know it doesn't sound important when you measure it against other budget cuts, but NASA is now considering abandoning the Voyager 2 spacecraft which, at this very moment, is on its way to Uranus and Neptune.

Art Buchwald

The estimated arrival time to Uranus was 1986, and if all went well it was supposed to make a pass at Neptune in 1989.

I happen to be a big fan of Voyager 2 and I know it would break the spacecraft's heart if they cut off all its controls after its magnificent performance to date. To me, it would be a human tragedy. How do you break the news to this magnificent satellite, which is now billions of miles from home?

"Hello, Voyager, this is NASA control. We are aborting your mission. Do you read us? We are aborting your mission."

"Are you crazy, NASA Control? Everything is going smoothly?"

"You are being riffed for budgetary reasons. Over."

"But my understanding was, when I took this mission, I would get to photograph all the planets. If I don't get to Uranus or Neptune we'll never know what makes them tick."

"We're sorry, Voyager, it's out of our hands. We've decided you're expendable."

"Now you tell me. I'm up here in nowhere barreling away from Saturn and you're going to leave me in the dark."

"Believe us, Vogager, it hurts us more than it hurts you. But David Stockman is adamant. You go out with the school lunches."

"I know what the problem is. You didn't like my pictures of Saturn. But it wasn't my fault. I developed a glitch in one of the movable instrument panels. It could have happened to anybody."

"The pictures you sent back were just great, Voyager. Believe us, we're all very proud of you. But the money isn't there to let you continue on your way."

"I'll go to Uranus and Neptune as a free-lance photographer and it won't cost you a dime."

"It isn't just you that's being riffed. The whole program has to be aborted. We can't afford the ground support to get you to Uranus."

"But where am I going to go? What am I going to do?"

"I guess you're going to have to keep tumbling along. But you can no longer count on any help from us."

"What are we talking about, moneywise?"

"Stockman figures we can save $220 million by canceling your trip."

"That's chicken feed compared to what you people can get out of it. "Playboy spends more than that to photograph a centerfold."

"Please, Voyager, don't make it harder on us than it is already. If we could have saved the mission we would. A lot of us on Earth are being riffed too."

"Yeh, but you have families to go home to, and you can probably find jobs in military space probes. I'm up here all alone with no one to talk to. If you would just let me get to Uranus, maybe I could get the money from Traveler's Aid to get me back."

"Sorry, Voyager, orders are orders. In 10 seconds we're cutting off all power. You're on your own. Is there anything you want before I press the abort button?"

"Yeh. I want to talk to a priest."

GEORGE F. WILL

What's next? A casket in red and green Gucci stripes?

WASHINGTON — It is inspiriting that, in an age of excess and in a nation not long on understatement, Bill Blass has given an example of almost Athenian moderation. Blass, a "designer" who has just given the world its first "designer chocolates" (candy with his initials on it), has rejected a request to bring forth designer caskets.

George F. Will

But perhaps it is immoral for such a promising field of enterprise to be left fallow. The living are denied the delicious anticipation of being laid to rest in a casket with green-and-red Gucci stripes, or with an Oscar de la Renta fragrance, or Yves St. Laurent emblem. Death where would your sting be then?

The most ubiquitous designer things are designer jeans. They raise this question: Why do millions of Americans pay a premium to turn their bottoms into billboards advertising Bill Blass, Calvin Klein and other entrepreneurs? John Brooks, a writer who senses hysteria beneath the skin of American consuming, suggests an answer in his book "Showing Off in America."

Brooks applies to contemporary America the categories of Thorstein Veblen's "Theory of the Leisure Class" (1899). Veblen argued that snobbery and social pretensions — "fighting with property" — play an especially large role in egalitarian societies. American society is ideologically and actually egalitarian, with upward mobility and no hereditary aristocracy. So status is tantalizingly up for grabs. For that reason, status is much more of an obsession than it is where it is limited and assigned.

Remember the 1950s? Books deploring "conformity" were mass-marketed — everyone was reading them. They expressd the perennial American anxiety about being submerged in an homogenous crowd. Today's "designer" products are little lifebelts for people eager to bob to the surface.

The proliferation of "designer" products serves what Veblen called "conspicuous consumption." It is the old business of seeking reputability through competitive display. But today, unlike earlier eras, the coveted display is of "style," not wealth. Brooks argues that today the most effective style of status seeking is a style that mocks status seeking. It is status seeking with a clear conscience, or at least with minimal embarrassment. It is seeking status in denim.

Societies are defined, in part, by their regularities. A regularity of our democratic civilization is regular elections; but another characterizing regularity is the annual model change in the automobile industry. It injects inequalities into one of the most egalitarian markets. Everyone can own a car, but you still have to hustle to keep up with the Jones' new model.

Jeans, too, are a democratic commodity. Or they were before they fell into the hand of Calvin and Gloria and the rest. Now jeans are instruments for competition involving gradations of style.

Jeans have given rise to sociology. Charles Reich, author of the worst book since the invention of printing ("The Greening of America" in 1970), saw jeans as symbols of Consciousness III, "the sensual beauty of a creative, loving, unrepressed life." Marshall McLuhan said, "Jeans represent a rip-off and a rage against the establishment."

What rot. Designer jeans (the "designer" element is, I gather, stitching on the back pockets) are a response of corporate commerce to the masses' desire for individuality.

I, like Brooks, am intrigued by magazine advertisements for Dewars scotch. You know the kind: "I'm Judy Jones, 28. I am your basic skydiving, Everest-climbing, Mozart-adoring, Proust-memorizing Boston astrophysicist, and I drink Dewars."

To whom are such ads supposed to appeal? Twenty-eight-year-olds? Bostonians? Mozart listeners? Proust readers? Mountain climbers? Sky divers? Astrophysicists? No, such ads are supposed to sell whisky to middle-aged businessmen in Duluth who read Luke Short westerns and listen to Dolly Parton and who (or so Dewars hopes) want to think they are like that paragon, Judy Jones.

I think — I hope — hell's bells, I know: Duluth businessmen have more sense. But there is a low hum of anxiety in America. It is too low for the ear to hear, but it is insistently felt by the American soul. It is the fear of not measuring up to shifting standards of style.

It is enough to drive a person to drink, perhaps even to drink Dewars, or to offer a friend chocolate candy adorned with the initials of a stranger like Bill Blass. That is something for the sober middle class to ponder as it grazes through Bloomingdale's in search of the Jordache look.

Attack, defend: Jail Standards Commission in crossfire

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Ten years ago this month, Dr. George Beto, former director of the Texas Department of Corrections, called county jails "the horror of our age" — institutions which are "fetid and medieval."

A number of people agreed with Beto — including a number of legislators, and in 1975, the Legislature created the Texas Jail Standards Commission, to set and enforce requirements for jails.

And now the commission is being attacked by the Texas Civil Liberties Union on grounds it hasn't been vigorous enough in enforcing standards intended to protect the constitutional rights of inmates.

TCLU attorney Mary Keller, who met recently with attorneys from throughout Texas who have been involved in jail lawsuits, says TCLU feels it's important to pursue the action against the commission because counties "are using the jail commission as a defense to substandard conditions."

The counties, Keller says, "are saying, 'Well, the commission isn't making us do that'...It's not just a benign inertia...It's becoming an obstacle."

"By their own admissions," she contends, the commission "is not enforcing the standards."

Why are the standards not enforced? TCLU doesn't know, she says.

"They don't have enough staff or funding," Keller says. "They also have an attitude that (strict enforcement) is not the right way to do it."

The commission, she argues, is "basically ex-police and law enforcement officers...trying to talk them (the counties) into it nicely."

That complaint may sound a bit odd to the commission, which has often found itself under attack for being too pushy and for trying to hard to enforce its standards.

In fact, the Legislative Budget Board recommended that the 1979 Legislature abolish the commission — partly because of complaints from county officials.

That meeting of the LBB heard

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

complaints that during three years, the commission hadn't approved any jail as meeting its standards.

"Even a Hyatt Regency hotel couldn't pass their standards," speaker Bill Clayton argued.

Similar complaints came from county officials, including sheriffs — with Lubbock County Sherrif C.H. (Choc) Blanchard contending that jails were "getting plumb away from punishment," and that the commission "has got to give administrators some rights, not the prisoners all the rights."

In 1977, Dallas County officials argued that the commission's standards were going to cost them $20 million — and aruged that while the county jail was under a Federal court order to improve conditions, the TJSC was demanding even more.

At that time, the commission reported only five of the state's 254 county jails met the minimum state standards — which had been in existence since 1958, before being incorporated into the law creating the commission.

In other words, the commission argued, it wasn't doing anything but telling the counties to do what the law said — and had said for over a decade.

Two years ago, TJSC Executive Director Robert O. Viterna wrote county officials to point out that the commission had been attempting to ease counties into compliance programs with a minimum of arm-twisting.

That, he indicated, would continue to be the policy towards counties which were making an effort to comply.

But Viterna noted that the commission had been criticized by the Legislature for not having pushed counties enough — and said the commission "reads the message loud and clear."

The Legislature, he noted, wants county jails "to comply with minimum standards of safety, cleanliness, and security, and it wants its laws enforced."

In fiscal 1980, TJSC issued 140 "notices of non-compliance" — telling counties what their problems are and what should be done to correct them — and issued four remedial orders, reducing the populations which could be housed in jails.

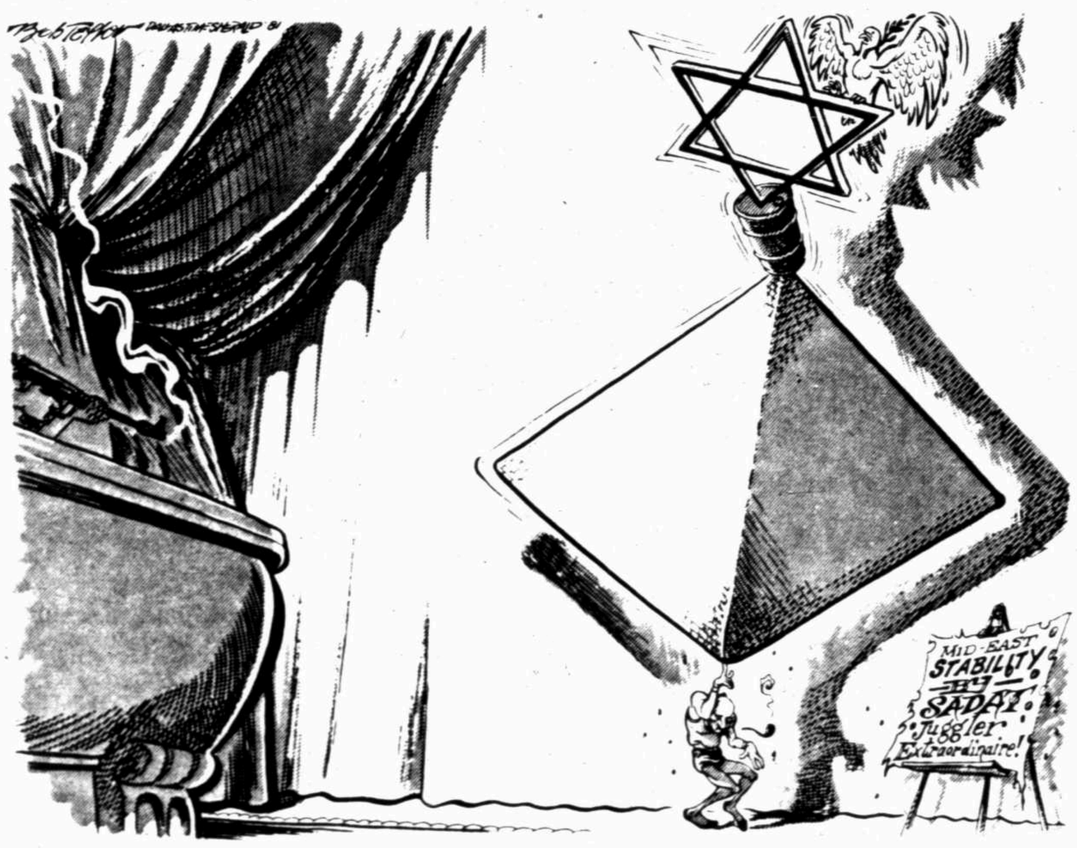

Those orders (there was one in August for Potter County) seem to be getting the attention of local officials.

One official told the commission during a meeting that the folks back home "don't really believe that you're down here, or that you mean what you say...I think they will now."

Improving jails isn't an easy program to sell to voters — most of whom never have the occasion to visit or use those facilities — and county officials don't really like to go to the voters to ask for money to make things better for inmates.

But the Legislature and the courts, in recent years, have decided that some improvements are going to be made.

And the current TCLU effort against the TJSC isn't so much a question of what will be done as simply how fast it must be done.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Give it a chance

To The Editor:

In reference to your editorial on Oct. 13, 1981, entitled "Unknown Waters Ahead." The editorial finished, "For now, our advice is twofold: Tighten belts and batten down the hatches."

How gutless! You questioned President Reagan's economic policy after he had been in office only 9½ months — his tax cut in effect for merely two weeks and you seem to already have given up.

It took the liberal economic policy 30 years of taxation, inflation and deficit spending to get us in our present mess. Won't you give President Reagan four years to correct it?

Eddie Mee
Midland

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper not only endorsed President Reagan but has supported his economic policies editorially on a number of occasion. The editorial to which you refer represented no change of opinion. Rather it pointed out that, due to past government policies, the present course in into virtually "uncharted waters" and that Americans should tighten thier belts and hold on tightly. The results of the Reagan program, support it though we do, could bring some rough sailing.

● Readers are invited to submit letters to be considered for publication.

An inhuman act

To The Editor:

What on earth is going on at the Midland City Jail? The picture that appeared on the front page of The Midland Reporter-Telegram, I found most inhuman.

Those men had on more chains than a 17th century slave. So the men were part of a non-violent disturbance...and this was the response they received? I admit that I don't have any back-ground information, but from all appearances a course in human treatment is needed here in the U.S. — forget Iran, South America and etc. We're lacking here, too.

I know this type of action takes place in Florida, Arkansas and Big Spring but I sure thought that Midland had more pride.

What do you, jailers, suggest these men do? They are in prison for no just reason to begin with and when they say so — this is the response due them?

Jean Polk
Midland

What's wrong?

To The Editor:

We hear everyday how today's youth is "going to the dogs." Let's take a closer look at who is really "going to the dogs." It's the parents! I am appalled by the actions and behavior of some parents.

Last spring our house was burglarized by three juveniles. These high school boys were later caught and they gave statements admitting to the burglary. Unfortunately, very, very few of our lost merchandise was returned to the police and consequently, to us.

The police then informed us that we must notify the parents if we were to get restitution for our losses. One parent has done the honorable thing and paid her son's share, one boy was permitted to leave the state, he is still on probation, and the third upstanding citizen has refused to cooperate in any form! He prefers to settle the matter in court.

How can we, society, expect our young people to behave with any form of moral standards when parents like these are responsible for teaching "morals" to their children.

So, the next time you ask "What's wrong with our young people?", you should be asking "What's wrong with our parents!"

Rose-y thanks

To The Editor:

This is to express appreciation to you and City Editor George Foulsham for your interest in the recent South Central District Convention and Rose Show which the Midland Rose Society hosted here in Midland. We, as rosarians wishing to share our rose hobby with others, have always found The Midland Reporter-Telegram to be very kind and cooperative where our rose publicity has been concerned. The only thing possibly better is when those with whom we are working toward that end take a personal interest and contribute their own ideas and imagination.

In addition, none could be more agreeable to work with than Paul Gilbert and Brian Hendershot for photographs nor Wanda Mouton and Richard Orr for their written words. Thanks to every one of them for a really fine job, each in their own area.

The color photograph on the front page of Saturday, October 10th, edition was very well done, effective in bringing more visitors to see the Rose Show, and greatly appreciated by all who love to see roses. The color photograph you ran for us last May was lovely, also, and we sincerely thank you for each of them.

From some of us who grow roses and who try to encourage others to bring a little more beauty into the world, we say thanks to The Reporter-Telegram and to each of your fine staff members for helping us as we work toward a more beautiful city — perhaps a city of roses on the prairie!

POSITIVE THINKING

Best answers come through quietness

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

"The quiet mind is neither frightened nor perplexed but marches on through fortune and misfortune at its own steady pace, like the ticking of a clock in a thunderstorm." So said a wise man.

Have you ever listened to the ticking of an old clock? Especially in the silence of night? We have such a clock at our farm. It is over 200 years old, purchased in England. How many people have lived and died to the ticking of that clock! It calmly goes on ticking time away. Listening to the measured ticking of a clock, one becomes quiet and peaceful; and in quietness is the time to get answers to problems.

I attended a Quaker meeting. At a Quaker service few words are spoken: Quietness prevails and the congregation sits motionless in meditation. I sat with the others "thinking spiritually" as the leader directed. At the time a problem was bothering me considerably. It was quite important and the answer just would not come, so this quiet time was used to drop the problem into the "pool of quietness" which the leader said we should create. Despite having Quaker ancestors activism has been my way of getting things done, but finally quietness was achieved first in body and then in mind and it was possible to put the problem into that "pool of quietness."

Slowly, like a steady light, came an answer — one which had previously been considered and rejected. But as this steady light continued it was evident this was the right answer. It was not exactly as anticipated, and the reason it had not been recognized before was because another outcome was desired. But this particular answer continued to glow in the mind and it proved finally to be a wise decision.

There are people who have little patience with getting anwers this way. But perhaps they are missing an important problem-solving technique. If you keep calm, remain imperturbable, right answers have a greater chance of coming through. Answers gained out of hectic and agitated minds should be regarded suspiciously.

Many practical people do practice this technique for getting answers to their problems. I visited a textile manufacturer and as we walked around his plant the deep bond of affection between him and the men was evident. The place was immaculately clean and beautifully lighted. He showed me an old unused machine in a corner, but even so it was polished and oiled. He put his hand lovingly on it.

"You seem to love that machine," I commented wonderingly.

"Yes," he answered, "we all do because it is the one with which we started business. We mortgaged everything to buy it. There are men working here today who joined me in putting money into this machine and they now own an interest in the business. In those days I used to stand here and visualize a long line of such machines — rooms filled with people operating them. And I used to talk with my partners every day about the great plant we would build in this community."

"Partners?" I interrupted. "I thought you had only one partner — Bill?"

"I've another," he replied, "and he is the one who really supplies the ideas. We couldn't get along without him. His name isn't on our stationery, but would you like to meet him?" He ushered me into a small room containing two chairs, and a table laid with pencils, memo pad and Bible. "It was in this room that this factory was born," he said. "Bill and I would come in here whenever we couldn't see our way clear, couldn't meet payrolls or loans at the bank. We would come in here, get quiet and talk to God about our troubles. We would talk to Him as our friend, partner and adviser. We would ask Him for insights and guidance."

I looked intently at this man. He was a two-fisted individual, 6 feet 2, a big head with abundant shock of hair — tie askew and sleeves rolled to elbows. It was both impressive and convincing to hear him say: "God is our third partner without whom we could never have built this business."

And do you know, there are many like him today? They don't go around talking about this practical faith but they have it just the same.

If you have a problem get quiet and calm. Remember those Biblical words: "In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength." Out of quietness and strength right answers come.

KINGSBURY-SMITH

Controversial weapon not needed?

By JOSEPH KINGSBURY-SMITH
National Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

LONDON — A technological development of far-reaching import for the defense of Western Europe has occurred which could greatly lessen the danger of nuclear war if the Soviet bloc launched a conventional force attack against the NATO allies on the Central European front.

The highly controversial neutron enhanced radiation weapon may no longer be needed to protect Western Europe against a massed attack by Soviet tanks from East Germany and other Soviet bloc countries.

This good news was given to The Hearst Newspapers by Dr. Joseph Luns, Secretary General of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The renowned former foreign minister of the Netherlands who has headed the NATO Council for 10 years said it is true there has been a revolution in anti-tank technology which could produce a non-nuclear anti-tank weapon which would be just about as effective against Soviet tanks as the neutron weapon.

"It would, however, cost a hell of a lot of money," he added in an exclusive interview with William Randolph Hearst, Jr., Editor-in-Chief of the Hearst Newspapers, and the writer.

"It might well be more expensive than the neutron weapon."

Asked whether he thought the European NATO allies would rather have the American neutron weapon, which President Reagan recently ordered produced, than spend the money on the new conventional anti-tank weapon, he replied:

"My feeling is that they would prefer the conventional anti-tank weapon, but whether they would be willing to spend the money for it will depend on economic conditions."

The availability of an alternative to the neutron weapon to protect Western Europe will pose an excruciating dilemma for the European allied governments. Most of them are now unwilling to meet their commitment to increase defense expenditure by 3 percent annually in real terms.

It should also pull the anti-American rug out from under the Soviet-inspired left elements, intellectuals and other anti-nuclear groups who conducted a vitriolic and at times violent campaign against the United States in 1977. President Carter offered at that time to produce and deploy the neutron weapon in Europe to discourage the Soviets from risking any conventional attack against the European allies with tank forces that out-numbered NATO tanks by 3-to-1.

Moscow launched what Dr. Luns later told us was one of its greatest propaganda attacks against deployment of the neutron weapon. Since it is an enhanced radiation weapon, it was described as a wicked method of killing people by radioactive poisoning. It was falsely described as a "bomb," although it actually is a short-range artillery shell.

The efforts of Dr. Luns and American officials to point out that the neutron weapon would be much less destructive of people, homes and other structures than existing nuclear weapons were largely ignored by the anti-nuclear forces who continued to be seduced by the Soviet propaganda.

So strong was the hysterical campaign against the neutron weapon in Europe and, to a somewhat lesser extent in the U.S., that President Carter decided in 1978 to defer production of it. Dr. Luns described this decison as one of Moscow's greatest propaganda victories.

With President Reagan's decision to proceed with production of the neutron weapon in case the European allies won't spend the money to equip their forces with the advanced conventional anti-tank weapons, the anti-neutron groups will be placed in a "put-up or shut-up" position.

If a realist is cynical, is he being realistic?

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

If the realist is a cynic, is he being realistic?

That, dear friend, depends on the point of view of the critical observer who scrutinizes the cynic-realist and the cynic-realist himself.

The premise taken by the cynic is that mankind is fraught with unconscionable selfishness: "Every last damnable soul in the human race is an ignorant twerp." That, it seems, is what the enlightened cynic would say to his realistic self, which would see nothing noble or worthy in a brand of selfishness which searches for the best for and in self. Being a realist embedded in distorted awareness, the cynic would acknowledge that he, indeed, is an infinitesimal part of the blessed human race and might have to reckon with the scoundrel in himself. He, too, is a twerp.

The cynic has mottos to reinforce his bias against his fellow homo sapiens.

Be selfish.

Put No. 1 first.

No one cares if you don't.

Remember the Tarnished Rule: Do it first before you've been had.

People are rotten.

Don't trust a soul.

Eat snips.

So what??!!

Cynicism can be a miserable state even if the cynic derives some degree of warped satisfaction from his supposed realistic stance.

Cynicism is a cold, dark state which hides from the warmth of light. There is a blindness in its vision.

"A cynic," wrote H.L. Mencken, "is a man who, when he smells flowers, looks around for a coffin."

Could he not as well envision wildflowers on scenic plains? Indeed he could. But, Mencken would have the cynic placing a wildfire, a stampede of wild buffaloes or an avalanche in the floral setting.

Cynicism, spiked with humor, nurtures the disenchanted spirit. Kindly review this line by Ambrose Bierce, the master of pithy cynicisms:

"Cynic: A blackguard whose faulty vision sees things as they are, not as they ought to be."

H.G. Wells apparently didn't see anything too wholesome about cynicism: "Cynicism is humour in ill-health."

"Cynicism is disappointed idealism," Harry Kemelman wrote less humorously.

Oscar Wilde surmised that "A cynic is a man who knows the price of everything and the value of nothing."

Realistically or not, Edgar A. Shoaff said this of the cynic: "A cynic is a person searching for a honest man with a stolen lantern."

The cynic is reality.

Versatile Ventarama available now at new Skylights of Texas in Midland

Skylights are the greatest room planning discovery in the building products field. They work for almost any room, any roof, and in any climate. Ventarama combines the qualities of a skylight with the features of a window. It gives maximum light with a minimum opening, at an economical cost.

You can open up a dreary room with light all day, the moon at night, and have a place for your favorite hanging plants. The ability to open and close creates natural air-conditioning for both room and house and in the most important levels.

Ventarama has a very special dome designed with deep molded sides. It is shatterproof, weatherproof, extremely durable, and insulated. There are solar values in summer or winter and power savings the year round. A Ventarama with its light-shaft to a room below is always practical and visually exciting; motorized units are available for high ceilinged rooms.

It should be worthwhile to consider that, in less than a day, a Ventarama can turn the ordinary into the spectacular.

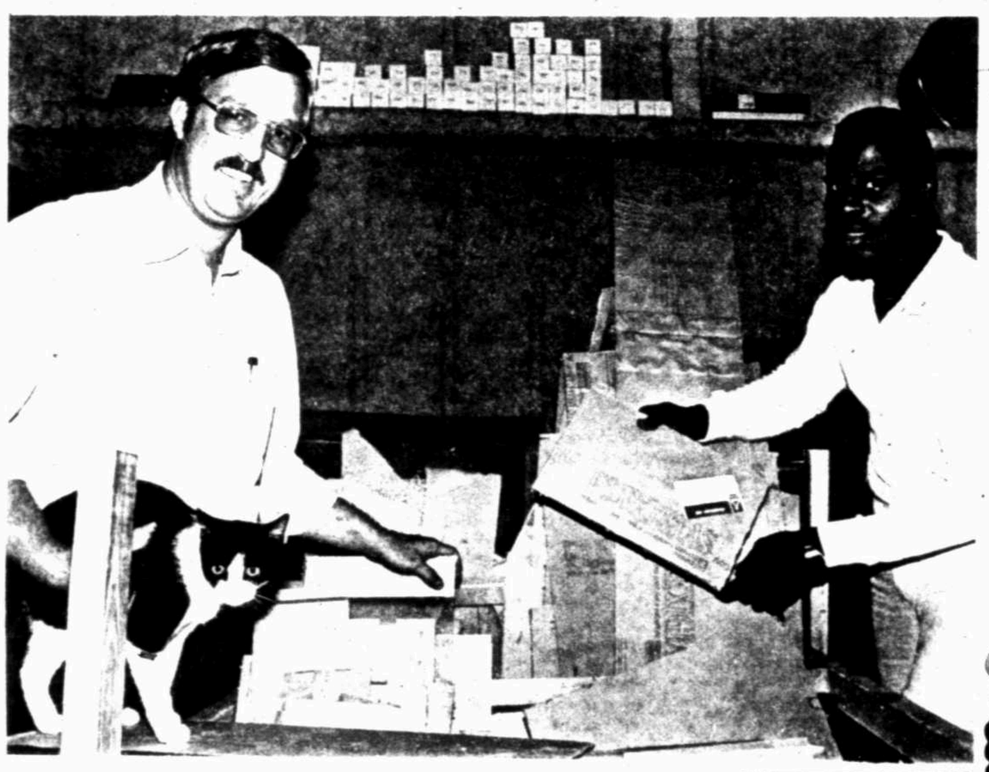

Ventarama skylights are distributed by Skylights of Texas. The firm has recently opened new offices at 1015 N. Midkiff; note their new phone number, 694-0880.

Skylights are energy efficient because they lower the cost of operation for your home. Ventarama skylights have a lifetime guarantee against leakage, breakage, and rust. All sizes are available, and homeowners may have a free home inspection upon request.

Skylights of Texas also sells Patton reversing ceiling fans in all colors and sizes, and Thermo-Rite brass fireplace screens. For any of these fine products, contact the people at Skylights, 1015 N. Midkiff, 694-0880. Keep in mind that the advantages of having a skylight in the home are just as applicable in winter as summer.

Skylights of Texas has moved to 1015 N. Midkiff. The new phone number is 694-0880. The staff at Skylights will be happy to answer your questions about the Ventarama skylight, which is screened and can be used open or closed for light, warmth, nnd fresh air — year round.

Those "cats" gathered around the PLEXIGLAS scrap bin at A-1 Plastics are looking for the right piece or pieces to make their wind-chime-cutting board-shelves or a new invention. Call Tim Bailey, manager, or James Green at 563-0185 for all your plastic needs.

A1 Plastics has full line of plastic products for home, hobby, industrial or office uses

A1 Plastics/Permian Basin, serving both Midland and Odessa from 204 Horseshoe Bend, is located in the D&S Industrial Park on the west side of OIME. Plastic products for the home hobbyist, industrial uses and office applications are available.

Do-it-yourselfers can make hundreds of items for the home from Plexiglas sheets, rods or tubes which are available in clear, white, or colors. Many projects can be made from plastic found in the scrap bin at reduced prices.

Working with Plexiglas acrylic sheet is fascinating and fun. It can be cut with standard power tools or by hand. It can be drilled, or heat-formed to interesting shapes, as well as solvent-cemented to produce strong transparent joints which allow the imaginative home craftsman to fabricate home furnishing with the "in" see-through look. Everything you need to begin your home furniture project is available at A-1 Plastics.

Any type of lighting lens to replace broken or yellow ones are available at A-1 Plastics. They also handle a full line of industrial plastics including delrin, nylon teflon, phenolics, and PVC in sheet, rod or tube form.

Polyethelene film in 4 or 6 mil. thickness, 6 ft. to 40 ft. widths and clear or black in color is in stock. This film can be used for garden covers, greenhouse covers, and oil rig pit liners.

For any plastic products in sheet, rod or tube form, any type of fabrication (skylights, domes or boxes) or if you are just curious as to what can be made from plastic, call 563-0185 or stop by 204 Horeshoe Bend.

'Wrap-up rating' warning issued

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Board of Insurance has issued a warning to agents and companies regarding so-called "wrap-up rating plans" and "owner-controlled" programs for large construction risks.

Wrap-up plans are defined as plans contemplating single workers compensation policies and single general liability policies issued for project owners — who usually pay premiums for general contractors and subcontractors.

Those parties would lose premium discounts and any earned dividends or retrospective returns to which they might be entitled.

Under the owner-controlled programs, a project owner would purchase workers compensation and general liability policies, while individual policies, written by the same insurer, would be issued to the general contractor and subcontractors.

The general contractors and subcontractors would retain their indentity by mantaining their own premium discount and retrospective ratings.

SBI ruled wrap-up plans illegal in August, 1974; owner-controlled programs were approved in February, 1978.

SBI cited "numerous inquiries and some complaints" regarding the plans as the reason for its warning — and noted that companies or agents soliciting or writing plans in violation of SBI guidelines could be subject to regulatory and legal penalties.

Texas Industrial Commission reports 46 of its 50 booths for the Petrovance 82 oil and gas exhibition in Mexico City Feb. 16-18 have been sold.

More than 200 drilling and exploration firms are expected to take part in the show; the exhibition two years ago resulted in more than $60 million in business for Texas firms, TIC says.

TIC also is looking at the possibility of a trade mission to Europe — probably Germany and France — but no firm decision has been made.

The Air Control Board has asked for industry comments on a proposed definition of capital cost to be used in the ACB's new permit fee system.

ACB members approved implementing permit fees in July, deciding to go with a system using "project cost" as the "most feasible alternative."

But while it was decided to use the capital cost of projects to set fees, it wasn't decided how capital cost should be defined — and industry comments on that are being taken.

Roger Wallis says the ACB should consider the results of its survey at the November or January board meeting.

"Generally," Wallis notes, "...there is a standard set of things that people include as part of a new project. We're proposing to use that...but not necessarily be limited to that."

Texas Credit Union Commissioner John (Pete) Parsons reports credit unions in the state are indicating that 15 to 20 percent of the money going into "all savers" certificates issued by credit unions is new money — with about half of the remainder coming from certificates of deposit, and half from shares.

Parsons says it appears that no major problems have arisen with the new certificates as far as the credit unions are concerned — adding that his office is receiving periodic reports from the Texas Credit Union League and national officials regarding the certificates.

Earlier this month, credit unions indicated they hoped for an increase of 10 percent or more in deposits from the all savers certificates — although most of the activity in all savers was expected with savings and loan associations and commercial banks.

SBI staff members and at least two insurance industry organizations are working on implementing the new law on mandatory auto liability insurance, which is to take effect Jan. 1.

Department of Public Safety has reported that its enforcement personnel will be instructed to accept as evidence of insurance the policy itself "or an instrument issued by the insurance company to be carried in the vehicle and confirming coverage."

Such an instrument, DPS says, should contain a statement that the coverage meets the minimum prescribed by law, and must include the name of the insurance company, the name of the insured, and the policy period and policy number.

SBI indicates that at this time, it has no plans to adopt a new form or instrument for showing compliance with the mandatory coverge law.

SBI and industry officials also are looking at implementing new legislation on use of certificates in lieu of an auto policy, which becomes effective Jan. 1.

Insureds will have the option of requesting complete policies; the change is intended to reduce costs in printing and mailing.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

You can get bumped from a bond issue

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Many times, when a new stock or bond is offered for sale, an individual investor like myself is unable to purchase any.

Here's an example. My broker phoned me and said his firm would be handling the offering of a new issue of bonds and recommended I buy some. About a week later, on the day the advertisement for that bond issue appeared in the newspaper, he called again and said he was unable to get any of those bonds for me.

My broker's firm was listed in the advertisement as one of the brokerage houses selling the bonds. To me, it appears unethical that I was unable to buy any. Can you explain this?

A. You ran into a situation in which all those bonds were sold to other customers — perhaps, better and preferred customers — of the brokerage firms handling the bond offering. As a result, no bonds were available for you to buy at the initial offering price.

When a new issue of bonds is in the works, a group — also called a "syndicate" — of brokerage firms buys the bonds from the issuer. The brokerage firms then sell the bonds to customers at a slightly higher price.

Even though the bonds in the new issue can't be sold until the date the offering becomes effective, brokers start calling customers in advance to get "indications of interest." If lots of customers say they want to buy, there won't be enough bonds to go around. And some customers won't be able to buy.

You don't say what answer you gave your broker in that first phone call. If you told him you wanted to buy some of the bonds, you probably would have been able to — especially if you're a good customer.

We have to face the fact that, when a new bond or stock issue sells out fast, brokers take care of their best customers first. When it sells slowly — as a "sticky issue" — brokers get on the phone to find buyers.

Q. As retired senior citizens who worked hard for our money, we are quite concerned about the news stories regarding the solvency of banks and savings and loan associations in which we have our savings. How can we obtain an impartial list of banks and S & Ls that are considered risky?

A. You can't. Federal regulatory authorities and some states compile such lists, based on constantly updated information. But those lists of "troubled" banks and S & Ls are closely guarded secrets.

However, you should be able to get a reasonably good fix on any institution at which you have a deposit, simply by walking in and asking for its latest financial condition statement.

But all this is really just an exercise in curiosity, as long as the bank is a member of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. or the S & L is a member of the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. FDIC and FSLIC cover each depositor at insured institutions up to $100,000.

●

Q. I am 33 and wish to establish a long-term retirement savings plan to supplement my current pension plan. Is there, or will there be, an individual retirement plan (IRA) paying tax-free interest and-or dividends high enough to offset inflation?

A. There are lots. Banks and savings and loan associations have programs through which you can put IRA money into savings certificates with yields much higher than the current inflation rate. Or, you can have an IRA with a high-yielding money market mutual fund or a number of other places.

Building, development firms open Midland headquarters

The most serious problem facing Midland is the lack of low-cost, minimum standard, transitional housing, says a Midland builder-developer who on Friday opened headquarters for his five construction-related firms.

Noting the phenomenal growth Midland has experienced during the past few years, John Salisbury, president of The John Salisbury Company, said, "We are told as homebuilders that we have to create 4,000 new residences in the next 18 months. That is a critical need.

"But the biggest problem facing Midland is the lack of low-cost, minimum standard housing — by minimum standard I mean no frills — during the transition period of high, rapid growth," Salisbury added.

The developer went on to note that "within the next 30 days" his company plans to announce a major project "that will substantially alleviate that problem."

Open house for the new headquarters of the Salisbury companies was held Friday at 2000 W. Front St., the former location of Reynolds Grocery Store. That facility has been remodeled to house the five companies — the John Salisbury Company, a Texas corporation serving as parent company for all the Salisbury enterprises; the Salisbury Company, a commercial remodeling firm; DEBCO, builder of the "Texas Classics" homes; Advance Framing, a full-service custom or volume framing company and Eagle Rock Masonry, a custom masonry enterprise.

Salisbury said meeting the challenges of the residential and commercial building needs in Midland is a joint effort. He noted his companies, in working toward solving the problem of low-cost, transitional housing here, "have received tremendous support from not only the financial community but also the city's Planning & Zoning Department, Building & Inspections, the health department and the fire department."

Among those present for Friday's open house were various representatives of the city government, the financial and legal community, representatives of numerous building firms, and others.

Norris and Barbara Holmes owners of Holmes Wireline Service, Inc. started their company in August of 1978 and are now on their way to a very productive fourth year. Holmes Wireline Service is located at 10100 Permain County Road in the Odessa-Midland area.
Norris has proudly brought 20 years of Production Logging experience to the Permian Basin. He has worked in the oilfield throughout different points across the Southwest and parts of Canada.
Recently Holmes Wireline purchased a new 1981 Chevrolet Logging Truck equipped with an air conditioned cab and logging compartment, adequate seating space for customers, and easy access to all the controls. SIE, Geosource of Fort Worth designed and built the truck according to Norris' own specifications. The truck is capable of holding 30,000 feet of .202 line and is equiped with a hydraulic drum and power plant. It has an all digital read out on the Temperature Panel and the Rate Meter and is also equipped for complete log interpretation on the well site.
Holmes Wireline specializes in quality Production Logging and has the equipment to run Oil-Water Entrys, Spinners, Calipers, and miscellaneous other surveys. They use the standard tools of 1 3/8" O.D. and are proud to be among the few companies who have 1" tools.
Norris and Barbara wish to express their thanks and appreciation to all who have helped make Holmes Wireline a success.

Two account executives move to Midland office

Two specialized account executives have transferred to the local Merrill Lynch office to augment service to investors in the Midland area, manager Landrum H. Henderson announces.

James F. Bell, a specialist in insurance-related investments, has come from El Paso, while John F. Wilson has served as a senior commodities account executive in San Diego.

Bell is pursuing a third career. He is a former state senator and assistant attorney general of the state of Illinois, and directed the state's Crime Victims Program. He also ran a successful insurance business in Joliet, Ill. Bell had been a Merrill Lynch customer himself before becoming an account executive in the firm's El Paso office in 1978. Bell, a graduate of the University of Illinois, will specialize in Merrill Lynch's insurance products, including the recently-announced "directed life" policy, which can be linked to various portfolios selected by the customer.

Wilson has specialized in commodities since joining Merrill Lynch in 1976 in San Diego. He is a graduate of the University of San Diego and holds a master's degree in business administration from Chapman College in Orange, Calif. He has served as golf coach at the University of San Diego and was a tournament player. He served in the U.S. Marine Corps during the Vietnam war and is a major in the Marine Corps Reserve.

Rogers becomes area Volvo dealer

The appointment of Rogers Ford Sales, Inc., 4200 W. Highway 80, to sell and service Volvo automobiles was announced recently by William T. Henry, district manager for Volvo of America Corporation in Dallas.

According to Henry, Rogers Ford now has the full line of 1982 Volvos. Prior to the grand opening Oct. 9, parts, service and sales personnel will receive factory training — some at the dealership and some at special training seminars at Volvo of America headquarters in Rockleigh, N.J.

Bill J. Rogers, a member of the Texas Motor Vehicle Commission, is president of the new Volvo agency. Neil Florer is general manager. Service department is under the direction of Jim Pruitt and the parts manager is John Kaplan. Doss Rogers is general sales manager.

All Volvo models have four-wheel power-assisted disc brakes, power steering, radial tires, tinted glass and full carpeting.

ON WALL STREET

Many more mergers made

By DAVID W. DEITCH
Hearst Feature Service

Two years ago this month the Federal Reserve Board announced its intention to quit controlling interest rates and focus instead on stabilizing growth in the money supply. That policy shift was the signal to begin what could become the greatest capital concentration movement — mergers, in other words — since the 1930s Depression.

Look at what's happened:

Last summer, Prudential Insurance acquired Bache Group, Inc., for $385 million in cash, while American Express bought Shearson Loeb Rhodes in a stock swap valued at about $1 billion.

Sears Roebuck & Co. within a week bought Coldwell, Banker & Co., largest real estate brokers in the U.S., for $175 million in cash and stock, and Dean Witter, the fifth largest securities concern, in a deal worth about $607 million. The Dean Witter transaction was the fifth Wall Street concern to be taken over by a massively capitalized entity outside the securities business.

Earlier this year, the Bechtel family of San Francisco bought a controlling interest in Dillon Read & Co., while Salomon Brothers, another old line investment banking house, merged into Phibro Corp., the international commodities concern. There is no question that these combinations are pressuring other Wall Street firms to link up with bigger financial interests.

By refusing to expand the money supply in order to satisfy the demand for low interest rates, the Fed has created conditions for more competition generally. Placing a ceiling on the money supply, rather than on interest rates, limits the amount by which prices, and profits, can go up. This means that there cannot be enough profit to go around.

The Fed's monetary policy is the equivalent of deregulation in the airline industry which, since 1978, has been concentrating rapidly. Asked why Sears wanted to become the nation's largest financial services operation, board chairman Edward R. Telling replied that the company wanted to get a head start before the Fed formally deregulated the banking industry.

Indications are that the Reagan administration will back plans to allow bank operations to cross state lines, among other things. The new Wall Street combinations also have made the commercial banks even more frantic to enter the investment banking trade, an activity barred to them since the 1930s by the Glass-Steagall Act separating commercial and investment banking.

Talk at the American Bankers Association meeting earlier this month reflected the anxiety growing in the banking industry. The 15,000 commercial banks now doing business in this country include perhaps 12,000 small operations, many of the latter family-owned. Obviously, the expected concentration will come at the expense of the non-competitive smaller enterprises.

At the same time that the Social Security System is coming under attack, private retirement plans are being liberalized. Social Security represents a pool of savings that can't be tapped by private borrowers, of course. When financial people talk about the need to increase savings in the economy, they mean private savings, hence the growing attraction of Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs).

The financial combines are coveting a piece of the estimated $25.8 billion that will pour into IRAs when the liberalized retirement legislation takes effect on Jan. 1. That stacks up against roughly $18 billion now shielded from government taxation. The bundle of new money is expected to come from the 44 million wage earners, previously barred from setting up their own IRAs, who will be free to do so next year.

With the merger movement taking on steam, it seems like a smart idea to buy the stocks of companies with low or non-existent debt and lots of equity and cash. These are the buy-out candidates, especially if the stock price undervalues the net assets.

NEW YORK — Merrill Lynch & Co., Inc., reported this week consolidated revenues for the third quarter of 1981 rose to $1.009 billion from $710 million in the equavalent 1980 quarter. Net earnings were $35.1 million, compared with $49.6 million attained in the record third quarter of the year before.

The revenue rise reflected a larger volume of operations throughout most of Merrill Lunch's expanding mix of investment and other financial services as well as higher interest revenue.

Major factors impacting earnings included the reduced trading level in the important listed-securities sector, pressures on interest margins in the volatile rate climate and inflation-aggravated earnings in virtually all expenses.

On a per-share basis, earnings for the quarter came to 88C compared with $1.36 on approximately 10PC fewer shares in the 1980 period.

For the first nine months of 1981, revenues rose to $2.9 billion from $2.2 billion. Net earnings of $148 million ($3.77 per share) fell 1PC short of the previous year's alltime high of $149.4 million ($4.10 on fewer shares).

ODESSA — Ann Brown, vice president, State National Bank, El Paso, will be addressing the meeting of the Permian Basin Chapter of the National Association of Bank Women on October 21 at Odessa Country Club.

Brown

Ms. Brown began her career in banking in 1975 in the State National Women's Department and helped institute the Gold Circle Club. Because of her experience and ability to get things done, Ann Brown is recognized in "Who's Who in American Women" and serves on state committees for the National Association of Bank Women and Texas Bankers Association. She is currently public affairs chairman of the Texas State Council Executive Committee of NABW.

With 28,000 members nationwide, the National Association of Bank Women is the largest individual membership association in the banking industry and the only one which represents the interests of women banking executives. Its services and programs encourage professional excellence and career growth for all women in the banking industry.

James Avery, a Hill Country craftsman who expresses his artistic design in silver and gold, has opened a retail shop in Midland Park Mall. It is the first Avery shop in the area.

James Avery strives to create jewelry with simplicity of design and integrity of workmanship. Avery's pieces are known for their distinctiveness.

In his own words, Avery explains, "I try to design things that people relate to. And generally our work is symmetrical simply because I think that symmetry over the long haul is the thing that's most satisfactory as far as jewelry design."

Avery's designs come mostly from religion and nature. Popular pieces include the sand dollar, butterfly, dove, rose and a vast representation of crosses. This and his reputation for quality have made him one of the largest religious jewelry manufacturers.

Other James Avery stores are located primarily in Texas with a few in Louisiana, Oklahoma and California.

Furr's Super Markets recently began a Trade-n-Tape promotion at each store location, according to Keith Anderson, vice president.

This special program enables individuals, families, clubs and organizations to collect Furr's register tapes and trade them in for a wide variety of gifts ranging from toys and appliances to a 1982 Chevrolet Sport Van. Over 100 gifts are offered including food, appliances, household goods, clocks, pens, watches, sporting goods, toys and tools. Furr's customers are invited to pick up a Trade-n-Tape Gift Catolog at any Furr's Super Market and to start saving for a gift. "Groups, clubs and other organizations are especially encouraged to participate," said Katherine Tewari, Furr's Trade-n-Tape coordinator. "We will be happy to set up a special program for any group desiring to save for an item not listed in the Trade-n-Tape Gift Catalog."

Levi Strauss & Co. made the first payment to field employees in its new profit sharing plan October 16. A total cash award of $2.3 million was distributed to Levi's employees throughout 75 field locations, and over $17,000 at the Midland facility.

At the Levi's plant in Midland, 137 employees are covered by the plan. Plant Manager Bob Loflin said, "with the new program employees are directly rewarded for the vital contributions they make to the company's profitable operations."

The amount each employee receives reflects individual performance as well as that of the company as a whole. Under the new program, awards are made in fiscal quarters when the company's net income exceeds pre-determined levels.

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp. says it lost $16.8 million during the third quarter of 1981, the automaker's sixth consecutive unprofitable three-month period.

The last time the firm was in the black was the first quarter of 1980 when it reported profits of $1.3 million.

AMC said Friday the July-September loss, which amounted to 32 cents per share of stock, was down sharply from a loss of $84.9 million, or $2.66 per share, in the July-September quarter of 1980.

"Our third quarter results, while improved over those of last year and the previous quarter, are primarily a reflection of stringent cost control measures and contributions by our International and AM General operations," said AMC Chairman Gerald C. Meyers.

Three promoted at Odessa bank

ODESSA — The board of directors of Western National Bank announced recently the promotions of Joe VanArsdall and Nancy Gray to vice presidents and Randy Watson to assistant vice president. The announcement was made by Mary Ann Bishop, senior vice president in charge of operations.

VanArsdall

VanArsdall will continue to serve as an installment loan officer, concentrating in the consumer lending department. He joined Western National in November 1977 after serving 12 years with Dial Finance. He became manager of the Odessa office in 1969 and served in that capacity until joining WNB. VanArsdall has been active in youth activities since moving to Odessa, serving as chairman of the Sports Committee of the Odessa Boy's Club and as a commissioner to the Pony and Little League Baseball programs.

Gray

He is a graduate of the Natiolnal Lending School in Norman, Okla., and the Intermediate School of Banking at Southern Methodist University.

Ms. Gray, who joined Western National in 1979, will continue as supervisor of teller operations, including the motor bank and the walk-in lobby, as well as the main lobby tellers. She has been active in banking in Odessa since 1972 after serving two years with a bank in Lubbock.

Watson

Watson, who joined WNB in September of this year, will assume responsibilities of the bank's loan review and compliance operations and will also serve as a commercial loan officer. He had served three years as an assistant national bank examiner with the Department of the Treasury in the Lubbock office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

He is a native of Pampa, and holds a B.B.A. degree in finance from Texas Tech University.

Shawn Mash, a clinical hypnotist, explains the damage smoking can do at a quit-smoking session at Health Clinics International at 2503 W. Health Clinics' hypnotist wants to help all failures Health Clinics International has recently opened an office in Midland at 2503 W. Ohio Ave.

Renown in Dallas as a foremost clinic to reduce weight and stop smoking, Health Clinics International offers a three-prong approach centered around hypnosis.

Shawn Mash, a clinical hypnotist for both the Dallas center and the Midland center, says Health Clinic's work is different from other "quit" groups. "We want all the failures," he said, "because we'll get them and help them."

Beginning with a free orientation session, the Clinic explains how participants will learn to help themselves in curbing appetites, cigarette addiction or anxiety attacks. The orientation helps the individual understand why he or she is addicted, why he or she started this habit and how he or she can control it.

Mash uses his "bull-rope of addiction" speech to show participants they must first break down the problem before they can begin to control it.

In the second session, participants are hypnotized as a group. Unlike theatrical hypnotism, Health Clinic's hypnotism processes do not force anyone to "act like a chicken." At Health Clinic, only certified professional hypnotists with at least 200 hours of instruction and practice will help you to get to your subconscious.

What's more, Health Clinics International offers a third step — behavior modification — for your continued progress. Providing a special diet, doing a personality study and teaching a mind-writing technique are but a few modifications done at Health Clinics.

"Mind-writing is used to ventilate the situation and it gives them the something to do," Mash explained. "Their thoughts tend to work themselves out of the body. It's the same system I developed for myself."

Himself a reformed smoker, Mash suffers from arterial phlebitis, which causes clotting in the circulatory system. He quit smoking through the techniques he teaches.

To learn more about Health Clinics International and what hypnosis and self-hypnosis can do for your or your company's personnel, give them a call at 686-0336, or come by 2503 W. Ohio Ave.
