Senate Debates Tax Cuts

WASHINGTON AP—The Senate is opening debate on whether to cut income taxes for individuals and increase levies on corporations and the wealthy.

Although such legislation must originate in the House, the Senate has decided to jump into the floor debate on the issue by attaching an amendment to a House-passed bill that would increase the national debt limit temporarily to $490 billion.

This bill was chosen since the legislation must be sent to President Nixon before June 30, when the debt ceiling would drop from $475.7 billion to $400 billion.

The House, with a full schedule of bills for floor consideration this week, will give its principal attention to its Judiciary Committee's inquiry into possible impeachment of Nixon.

The Senate leadership expects the tax debate to continue all week.

The major tax-cut proposal, offered by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., with many co-sponsors, would provide $6.6 billion of tax relief.

It would allow taxpayers an $825 personal exception for each dependent, instead of the present $750, or, alternatively, a $190 tax credit. In addition, it would provide government payments of up to $400 a year for low-income families.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., Finance Committee chairman, supports the amendment and predicts its passage. Administration officials have predicted a presidential veto.

Long says he doubts that a veto could be overriden, but predicts a White House-congressional "severe confrontation" before the debt limit issue finally is settled.

Nixon has said any major tax cut could be highly inflationary.

Its sponsors assert it is needed to prevent economic stagnation and to give consumers some more buying power to offset the rapid recent price rises.

Various liberals also plan to offer tax-reform amendments, including one to repeal the 22 per cent oil and gas depletion allowance.

Long opposes such repeal and said Sunday its demise would result in higher prices for home heating oil and gasoline. He said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" that repeal would discourage U.S. oil companies from providing more petroleum products.

But Long said he favors removing benefits from foreign oil, which he said was selling for $10 a barrel.

Some oil state senators have indicated they may filibuster against removal of the depletion allowance. They say this tax benefit is essential if the United States is to make any progress toward energy self-sufficiency.

Parliament Hit By Terrorists' Bomb

By JAMES R. PEIPERT
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — A bomb believed set by Irish terrorists exploded in an annex of the House of Commons during the morning rush hour today, setting Parliament on fire and injuring 11 persons, officials said.

There was considerable damage to Westminister Hall, oldest of the buildings in Westminster Palace, which houses Parliament.

It was the first such attack since Guy Fawkes' abortive gunpowder bomb plot in 1604.

Shortly before today's explosion a man with an Irish accent telephoned the Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, to warn that a bomb would go off in the House of Commons in six minutes.

Scotland Yard's bomb squad was racing to the building when they heard the blast.

Windows at the front of the hall were blown out, but the giant stained-glass windows at the other end appeared undamaged. However, it was feared there was considerable damage to the hall's unique 13th century timber roof.

A police spokesman said the bomb fractured a gas main and started a fire that sent flames shooting high above the 14th century St. Stephen's Chapel, near Westminster Hall. Dense smoke enveloped Big Ben for a time. The police said the bomb went off near a ground-floor canteen adjacent to the hall.

More than a dozen fire engines fought the blaze as hundreds of persons stopped on their way to work to watch. The fire was reported under control an hour after the bomb blast.

Exporters Near Decision On Oil

By BOB MONROE
Associated Press Writer

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Representatives of the world's leading oil exporting nations neared a decision on oil prices today amid reports they would continue a freeze on the posted prices for the next three months.

However, the representatives of the 13 nations in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Companies were reported still discussing a proposed tax increase that could raise the price of gasoline in the United States 2 or 3 cents a gallon.

The ministers met for three hours Sunday night, and Iran's finance minister, Dr. Jamshid Amouzegar, said they were near a final agreement.

OPEC's secretary-general, Abderrahman Khene, said the ministers would meet again today.

The proposal was a compromise between a demand by Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest oil exporter, to roll back prices and the other 12 OPEC members, which favor some form of price hike.

Under OPEC rules any policy decision must have unanimous approval. Both Venezuela and Iran were outspoken in opposing the Saudi move for price cuts.

Even if the ministers make no change in the posted price, an artificial figure on which the exporting states calculate their taxes and royalties, conference sources said they may approve an increase in their tax rates.

Either increase would cost the consumers money.

OPEC froze posted prices in January and extended the freeze for three months in March. Before the freeze, prices quadrupled in a year's time to $11.65 a barrel, bringing the cost of Persian Gulf crude to the oil companies to about $7.

The three-day OPEC meeting, which began Saturday, heard an appeal for some form of price relief from Guyana's foreign minister Shridath Ramphal, speaking on behalf of nonaligned, underdeveloped nations. He told newsmen he had offered specific ideas on how the OPEC countries could help the developing nations with their balance of payments problems caused by high oil prices.

The members of OPEC, who produce 80 per cent of the world's oil exports, are Algeria, Abu Dhabi, Qatar, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Libya, Iraq, Iran, Venezuela, Gabon, Ecuador, Nigeria and Indonesia.

Tractor Pull To Be Planned

Plans will be made tonight for a tractor pull contest to be held here July 4 in connection with the community Independence Day celebration.

The Snyder Chamber of Commerce and the Scurry County Board of Development have called a meeting for 8 o'clock tonight at the Snyder Savings and Loan Association for all people interested in the tractor pull.

The event was staged here for the first time last year at the July 4 event and it attracted considerable interest.

Israel To Get Same Type Of Nuclear Aid

By KENNETH J. FREED
Associated Press Writer

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — The United States today promised Israel the same help in developing nuclear power that it plans to give Egypt and reaffirmed its commitment to long-term arms shipments to the Jewish state.

President Nixon made the announcement in a joint communique with Israeli Premier Yitzhak Rabin in Jerusalem, then flew to Amman for talks with King Hussein.

The American President arrived on the last stop of his five-nation Middle East tour to the tightest security he has encountered in any Arab country.

Nixon and Rabin said their two governments "will negotiate an agreement on cooperation in the field of nuclear energy, technology and the supply of fuel from the United States under agreed safeguards.

"This agreement will in particular take into account the intention of the government of Israel to purchase power reactors from the United States" to provide electricity for Israel's rapidly growing economy, the communique said.

Israel has had an agreement with the United States covering joint nuclear research for the past 15 years, and the communique said a provisional agreement would be made this month "on the further sale of nuclear fuel to Israel."

The wording of the communique paralleled that of one three days ago in which Nixon announced in Cairo the United States would supply nuclear reactors and fuel to Egypt for peaceful purposes.

The agreement had been forecast earlier today at a news conference by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Kissinger also sought to quiet suspicions in Israel and the U.S. Congress that the Egyptians would use the American nuclear aid to produce nuclear weapons. He said the U.S. government would "make doubly sure there aren't any loopholes" in its agreement with Egypt.

The secretary said there never were any such questions about the similar agreements the United States has with nearly 30 other nations until India set off its first nuclear explosion last month. But Kissinger said India's nuclear program was aided by Canada, and Canada's safeguards are not as good as those of the United States.

Conviction Of Kerner Upheld

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to review the bribery conviction of former Illinois Gov. Otto Kerner Jr. and his argument that he could not be indicted while sitting as a federal judge.

The court declined without comment to interfere with the decision of the U.S. Circuit Court in Chicago upholding the convictions of Kerner and Thoedore J. Isaacs, former Illinois director of revenue. Justice Thurgood Marshall took no part in the case.

Both Kerner and Isaacs had appealed the conviction.

Kerner argued in part that the Constitution prohibits the indictment and trial of a federal judge prior to his removal from office by impeachment.

In other action today, the court:

—Ruled, in a case from Montgomery, Ala., that private, racially segregated schools may not be permitted exclusive use of public recreational facilities. However, the court declined to rule also that cities may not permit segregated schools to use such facilities in common with public schools.

—Upheld a California law preventing the payment of disability benefits to women who must miss work because of normal pregnancies.

—Ruled that indigents are not entitled to free legal counsel in the appeal of criminal convictions to the highest state and federal courts.

—Refused without comment to review a federal circuit court ruling that the California Highway Commission must follow federal environmental standards whenever it has received federal location approval for a project, even though no federal funds are used for the project. California officials said the case could affect state highway projects throughout the nation.

—Sent back to a federal district court a controversy over a Tennessee law requiring that textbooks which deal with theories of evolution give equal emphasis to Biblical accounts of creation.

—Affirmed a lower court decision invalidating a New Jersey law providing reimbursement to parents of children in private schools for purchase of secular textbooks and supplies.

Traffic Is Resumed By Site Of Fire

Rail traffic at Dermott and highway traffic on U. S. 84 have been restored following three explosions and a fire that followed a train derailment about 10 miles northwest of Snyder at 2:15 p.m. Friday.

Highway Patrolman Gary Brewer said the highway was reopened to traffic at 5 p.m. Saturday.

Santa Fe Railway Company officials said some trains "got through" Sunday, but that they had to go through at a slow rate of speed since repairs at the site are not completed.

A 56-car Santa Fe freight train derailed near Dermott Saturday. Some of the cars loaded with the chemical cyclohexane exploded and burst into flame following the drailment. There were three separate explosions and smoke billowed across busy U.S. 84. Highway Patrolmen sealed off the highway and routed traffic on a detour over the Polar Road until U.S. 84 was re-opened again at 5 p.m. Saturday.

No official cause of the derailment has been determined, but Santa Fe officials said they believe equipment failure could have been the cause. There have been no official estimates of the damage, but it will run into "thousands of dollars."

IMPEACHMENT INQUIRY

Only 5 Of Original 55 Allegations Still Active

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Judiciary Committee is nearing the end of its impeachment inquiry, with only about five of the original 55 allegations against President Nixon still under active examination.

The Watergate cover-up, Nixon's taxes and charges that the administration used the Internal Revenue Service for political purposes are the major areas still under review. The cover-up inquiry stems from the break-in two years ago today of Democratic National Committee headquarters in the Watergate building complex.

Use of wiretaps in domestic surveillance remains a concern for a sizeable number of committee members, and the search for a link between Nixon's decision to raise milk prices and campaign contributions by the dairy industry awaits the testimony of former White House aide Charles W. Colson.

Some members still question the legality of the secret bombing of Cambodia ordered by Nixon, but a majority appears convinced it is not an impeachable offense.

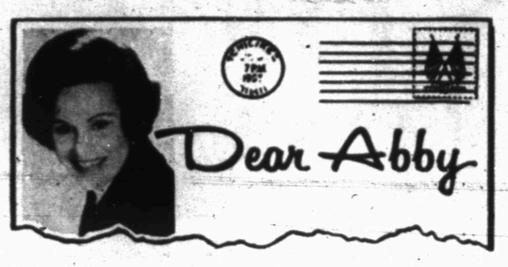
The presentation of evidence is expected to conclude this week with a wrap-up of the cover-up and an examination of Nixon's income-tax payments in 1969-72.

Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., has scheduled closed hearings for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday and said he will meet at night, if necessary, to conclude them this week.

Dozens of allegations announced as under investigation last March were dropped without any evidence even being presented, and many others were given only a passing glance.

Meanwhile, former Deputy Atty. Gen. William D. Ruckelshaus said Sunday there are other surprises ahead in the Watergate scandal. Ruckelshaus, who was fired from the Justice Department Oct. 20 after refusing to fire Archibald Cox as special prosecutor, was interviewed on CBS' "Face the Nation" program.

In the same interview, Ruckelshaus said he believes Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger should be cleared in the wiretapping controversy.



Wife swapping—new name for an old game

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Quite some time ago my husband asked me how I felt about wife swapping. I told him I hoped he was kidding because the thought of it made me sick. The subject was dropped.

The next thing I knew, Pete started bringing home some of those crummy underground newspapers and reading ads from couples who wanted to swap. I told him if he decided to go in for anything so lowdown he had better find himself another wife.

I then went out of town for some dental surgery. I was gone for five days. When I returned Pete told me that "just for the fun of it" he had looked up a few couples who had advertised themselves as swingers, and he thought it might be fun if we tried it.

Abby, the idea is absolutely revolting to me. My moral upbringing wouldn't permit me to do anything so vile. We've been married for 33 years and I can't imagine what's gotten into him.

Pete says times have changed, and everybody swings. I can't believe that. Please tell me, Abby. Am I out of step or is he? BEWILDERED

DEAR BEWILDERED: He is. Don't let him kid you. It's a new name for a very old game in which everybody loses. Ask your husband how he'd like to swing around to his doctor's for a checkup—from the neck both ways. He could be sick.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I go around with another young married couple who have been getting on our nerves lately because of something they do which we dislike.

They are always talking about how much money they make, how much their clothes cost them, how much they spent on their vacations, and they even bragged about how much they got back on their income tax. It's sickening.

What do you do about people like that without breaking up the friendship? HATES BRAGGING

DEAR HATES: I would see a lot less of them. But if you don't want to break up the friendship [this is a friendship?] tell them in a friendly tone that their constant talk about money is boring, so to please soft pedal it. And if you should lose their friendship, you'll not have lost much.

DEAR ABBY: To that woman who scouted all the churches in town in search of a man and finally found one, you said, "Some people go to church to pray,"—after which I thought you were going to add, "—and some people go to church to prey." ARDYTH ULLMAN

DEAR ARDYTH: Had I thought of it, I might have.

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to Happy in Houston, "Some people go to church to pray—others go to pray they meet someone," set me to thinking about the other reasons people may have for going to church.

Here is a list, which I think is complete:

1. Habit.
2. Training.
3. Fear of punishment from the Lord if they don't go.
4. To see who else is there.
5. To be seen.
6. To get spiritual inspiration.
7. To socialize.

Notice, Abby, I did not put down "to pray." One can pray anywhere. PRAYS A LOT

Man Held On Kidnap Charge

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — Texas authorities are holding an Amarillo man in connection with the abduction of 10-year-old Shelly Ann Haynes here Friday.

Authorities said Chad S. Tarpley Jr., would be arraigned today in Amarillo on a fugitive warrant charging him with kidnaping.

The girl was seized Friday morning as she walked two blocks from her home. She was released nearly 12 hours later a block from the point of abduction.

Shelly Ann and detectives retraced the route she and her captor had taken and it led to a service station near LaCygne, Kan., 50 miles south of here, where a station attendant provided a Texas license plate number.

He told police a man with a girl in his car stopped there Friday. He said the man was unable to pay for $6 worth of gas, but told him he would return with the money. The attendant copied the license tag number and gave it to police.

A warrant was issued for Tarpley and he was arrested Sunday afternoon when he returned to the home of his parents.

Tarpley's father said in a telephone interview from his Amarillo home that his son was mentally disturbed and had been under psychiatric treatment.

Authorities reported the girl apparently was in good health. Her father, Bud Haynes, said the abductor sprayed an irritant in the girl's eyes when he picked her up, temporarily blinding her. The same substance was sprayed in her face just before her release, he said.

Haynes said Sunday he had no idea why the kidnaper released his daughter.

"I am just grateful he did--we're very fortunate to still have a daughter," the father said.

Coins Taken By Thieves

Nuclear Test By China Is Reported

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India said China carried out a nuclear test above ground today in an explosion equivalent to one megaton of TNT.

The Indian Atomic Energy Department said the test was held in the Lop Nor region of western China and was picked up by the department's monitoring stations.

China made no immediate announcement of a test, which would be the first since it set off a hydrogen bomb in the atmosphere nearly a year ago on June 27, 1973.

The explosion would be China's 16th nuclear test since 1964 and comes the same day that the Australian government reported France had set off the first atmospheric test in its 1974 series in the South Pacific.

The explosions above ground have drawn heavy international criticism and coincide with a recent statement by Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev that the Soviet Union is ready to conclude an underground nuclear test ban with the United States. The two nuclear powers have already banned atmospheric tests.

India set off its first nuclear test at May 18 and as a result Canada suspended nuclear aid to India.

The reported Chinese and French explosions, coming on top of the Indian test, create a sensitive background for the atomic aid agreement reached between the United States and Egypt and Israel during President Nixon's Middle East trips.

While the United States stressed that the development programs were limited to peaceful uses of atomic energy, critics of the agreements have complained that that will increase the capability of the two countries to produce their own nuclear weapons.

China has rejected protests against its nuclear testing by saying the tests were necessary for its defense.

Flag Case Dismissed

DALLAS (AP) — Four years ago a Southern Methodist University student displayed a United States flag bearing a peace symbol. He was handed a 10-year probated sentence on a conviction for flag desecration.

Last year, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals reversed the conviction because of what it ruled were "repeated improper questions and arguments" from Dist. Atty. John Stauffer.

Last Friday, State District Court Judge R. T. Scales dismissed all charges against David Renn, now 24. The action came four year to the day after Renn's controversial protest of the Vietnam war.

Renn's lawyers said that under the 1973 Texas penal code it is not a crime to display a flag bearing a peace symbol instead of stars.

Four Nabbed In Burglary

CHAPPELL HILL, Tex. (AP) — Four persons were in custody in Washington County after an attempted burglary and a fire at the Farmers State Bank here Sunday.

Sheriff's deputies said burglars entered the bank's vault early Sunday and apparently set fire to the building when they could not open a safe. The bank was heavily damaged in the blaze, deputies said.

Three men and a woman were arrested in Harris County on a tip from a witness who saw a car leaving a variety store next to the bank. Officers said about $1,500 was taken from the store.

The lunar calendar is still used to set the dates for traditional festivals in the Republic of China (Taiwan), in Chinese communities around the world and in Vietnam where the calendar was in use for many centuries.

5 Bodies Recovered From Gulf

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Five bodies have been recovered and two men were missing today in the wake of an explosion and flash fire aboard an offshore oil and gas platform in the Gulf of Mexico.

Twelve men were on the Chevron Oil Co. rig near the mouth of the Mississippi River at the time of the blast Saturday. A company spokesman said seven jumped or were knocked into the 40-foot-deep water. The other five suffered burns.

Earl Albarado of Marrero, a Chevron employe who was on a nearby rig, said he saw an explosion that looked like a mushroom envelop the platform. His son Anthony, 19, had started work there only that morning.

"My first thought ... was to get my son," he said.

Albarado and others from the rig got into a boat, went to the damaged platform and "saw heads bobbing in the water."

The father said he heard Anthony yell, "Help me, Daddy, help me!"

He pulled his son into the boat and Anthony said, "Aw, Daddy, don't cry."

One body, that of Chevron construction foreman E. C. Davison, 56, of Mandeville, was found in the water Saturday.

Three bodies picked up Sunday by search boats were identified as J.J. Toups, 28, of Cut Off, a Chevron pumper gauger; Robin W. Normand, 19, of Gretna, a Chevron roustabout, and Larry M. Katrincic, 22, of New Orleans, an employe of Harvey Industries, Inc., a welding firm working on the platform.

The other body had not been identified.

Still missing were B. G. Powell, 23, of Buras and Carl G. Wedgeworth, 30.

DENVER (AP) — Guru Maharaj Ji's 22-foot cabin cruiser is back in the hands of the boat dealer.

Followers of the 16-year-old religious leader gave him the boat as a wedding gift last month, but couldn't find a bank that would lend them the rest of the purchase price.

The purchasers put down $2,000 in cash. The balance was $7,200, according to the manager of the firm that sold the boat. "But their bank wouldn't give them a loan on the boat and neither would ours," said Bud Treat.

Kissinger Stays In Background

By KENNETH J. FREED
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Since his Salzburg news conference at which he threatened to resign, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has stayed in the background during President Nixon's Middle East tour.

White House officials say that is the way Kissinger wanted it.

That's the customary place for a secretary of state when the President is attending summit meetings or making state visits. Kissinger has met with the foreign ministers of the countries visited; sat in on Nixon's sessions with his hosts and otherwise kept busy briefing the President and attending to State Department business.

Kissinger took the limelight only once, at the start of the trip, when he startled the White House party with his announcement that he would quit if not believed about his part in the wiretapping of certain Washington officials and newsmen.

That story soon died as far as the newsmen with Nixon were concerned, partly because Kissinger was generally not available to the traveling press corps. This was attributed to the party's busy schedule.

The secretary didn't talk to the newsmen until the flight from Saudi Arabia to Damascus Saturday, and then the conversation was vague.

However, every chief of state singled Kissinger out by name during toasts to Nixon for his key role in easing Middle East tensions.

White House officials denied that President Anwar Sadat slighted Kissinger deliberately when he took no notice of him during Nixon's arrival at the Cairo airport. They said it was oversight.

Sadat praised Kissinger later in the visit, just as Nixon did throughout his trip. Speaking in Jerusalem, the American president said of his secretary of state:

"When we speak of the programs for peace to which the United States is dedicating itself now ... a great deal of the credit goes to this man."

Schlesinger Sees Hope

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger said today there is "some possibility" that the United States and Russia will reach agreement in principle during President Nixon's Moscow visit on limiting deployment of new Russian multiple warhead missiles.

Schlesinger told a news conference that such an agreement would require "a method of verification satisfactory to the United States" to assure against cheating.

The Defense secretary said, as he has before, that he sees no likelihood of any comprehensive, permanent agreement at the Moscow meeting on limiting offensive missiles.

Some critics have said an agreement in principle would be meaningless because it would not include specific formulas for preventing the deployment of large numbers of Soviet multiple warheads big enough to threaten U.S. land-based missiles in a surprise attack.

Filly Is Given A Pat By Queen

The queen also happens to own Highclere, a filly that won the Prix de Diane by two lengths Sunday.

The queen is making her first visit to France since a 1972 state visit.

Recycling Contest Brings New Ideas

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

When you've used your lipstick, creams, fragrances, dusting powders and the like, what happens to all the pretty containers?

It's a thought that occurred to Valerie Jennings as she sat gazing at the rows of attractive bottles and jars on shelves in her office at Faberge, the cosmetics company. They just seemed too pretty to be thrown in a dump, she said.

The upshot of her ponderings — after she got permission from all the bosses — was a recycling contest within the company to see who would come up with the brightest ideas for new uses of still good metals, plastics, glass and the like. What they came up with can be applied to almost any cosmetics one might own.

In fact, Valerie was astounded by the little and big suggestions the employes and their families have been sending in to the Art-Eco contest.

"It illustrates you can find some use for just about any little container on the vanity table by giving some thought to its shape and dimensions," Valerie observed.

Some recycled articles are tiny — shiny metal bottle caps upended, with colorful straw flowers, that mey be set on a place card for a ladies' luncheon as suggested by one entrant. But then another contrived a long circus train which utilized everything from metal containers as "wheels" to an oval-shaped plastic see-through bath powder container sideturned with an animal placed in it.

One of the jolliest ideas is wind chimes, which require a minimum of labor, ideal for the girl who has a drawer full of old lipsticks. A number of the cases were strung up to a plastic (dusting powder) top (or use a piece of wood or cardboard). A meat skewer was used to make the little holes at the top of the case through which yarn was strung and attached to the top. A loop on top serves to dangle it from a porch or window for delightful tinkling sounds.

Another idea for those lipsticks is this one: attach them to a wall plaque with a mirror in the center so that they might serve as holders for scarves, men's ties, chains and the like. Nailpolish bottles sprayed gold may also be used for the same purpose.

Still another entrant had the man in the family in mind. Lipsticks became fish lures with the addition of a couple of cemented hooks, paint and feathered tails.

A see-through oval plastic top of a package was turned into a wall picture with the addition of backing on which was placed a little straw flower arrangement. Gold braid in a chain stitch was added to the rim where it joined with the backing.

Clear, rigid, plastic boxes initiated a number of ideas. Partitioned, they held various kinds of colorful beans for a kitchen wall decoration. Or their cut-out circles were used with family pictures within. Another entrant put ball-top bottle caps in the holes and used the item for a tic-tac-toe set.

In one instance many plastic boxes were integrated to be used as a desk unit for a variety of things — pencils, pens, paper clips. Others became salt and pepper shakers.

Bottles got some interesting treatment. Some had their necks chopped off to become vases or cordial glasses. Some metal ones became candle holders and others were egg cups. One tall one was decoupaged.

An ordinary paper fragrance box with a raised initial pasted on it was filled with sand or some other heavy material and gilded all over to make a handsome paperweight.

An enterprising Boy Scout, son of an employe, used some short cylindrical metal containers in his scout belt. He painted the containers green and filled them with useful things, turning one into a flashlight. In fact, several employes, made interesting flashlights.

Large dome-shaped plastic containers were turned into planters and bird houses, and some soap dishes became memory boxes and playing card holders. Powder puffs were turned into ear muffs, turtles and other animals, and the metal labels from men's fragrance bottles were used to make a handsome chain belt.

The contest's judges will include Cary Grant, Andy Warhol and Peter Max.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I pasted some photographs in an album about a year ago. Recently, when I attempted to rearrange them, I found it very difficult and in some cases impossible to peel off the pictures. I used the white rubber paper cement that I bought in an art store. I selected that kind deliberately because I had been told that the photos could be peeled off at a later date. What did I do wrong? I'd like to try again to move the photos. Also, I don't want to make the same mistake when I replace the photos in another album.

A. — You used the correct cement. Artists and layout men use it all the time and find that it works well. The instructions on the can of cement say to cement one surface and then press the two materials together. They also say that a more permanent bond is achieved by cementing both surfaces. It is possible that you put cement on both surfaces and thus joined them too well for your purposes.

The only chance you have now of separating the cemented pictures is to pry up a little of each photo, then apply a rubber cement solvent of the same brand as the manufacturer of the cement. You'll have to work slowly and carefully. If you recement the same photos in another album, be sure all the old cement has been removed from the backs of the pictures. This is done by rubbing the old cement with your fingers. You will find that the cement comes off quite easily this way.

Q. — In reading about mixtures for making concrete, I sometimes see the term "fine aggregate" and sometimes "coarse aggregate." I know that the aggregate refers to the ingredient that is mixed with the cement, but how do I distinguish between fine and coarse aggregate?

A. — When the expression "fine aggregate" is used, it usually refers to sand. "Coarse aggregate" means gravel and stone. Both materials should be free of foreign materials. The same goes for the water used in the mixture. Salt water should not be used.

Q. — I know that in using a paint brush, one must always start in a dry area and paint toward the wet area, making a small overlap. Is the same thing true when using a paint roller?

A. — Yes.

(The techniques of varnishing, shellacking, lacquering, paint removing, bleaching and staining are explained in Andy Lang's helpful booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 30 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743.)

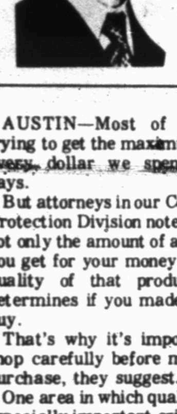
WHERE EVERY CUSTOMER IS IMPORTANT



The Consumer Alert

by John L. Hill
Attorney General

AUSTIN—Most of us are trying to get the maximum from every dollar we spend these days.

But attorneys in our Consumer Protection Division note that it's not only the amount of a product you get for your money, but the quality of that product that determines if you made a good buy.

That's why it's important to shop carefully before making a purchase, they suggest.

One area in which quality is an especially important criterion is when you are purchasing either ready-made clothing or fabrics by the yard for home sewing.

Some protection for consumers is offered by the Federal Trade Commission's Textile Fiber Product Identification Act, which requires all ready-made or yard-good items to have a label noting the fiber content.

In 1972, another FTC rule, the Care Labeling Trade Regulation, went into effect. This regulation requires all ready-mades and yard-goods to carry labels advising the consumer of proper fabric care. Typical labels may advise "Dry Clean Only," "Hand Wash in Cool Water," or give other specific instructions which make it easier for consumers to know how to care for fabrics after they get them home.

Most "store bought" clothes have been carrying such hang-tags for some time. The FTC Bureau of Consumer Protection reports, however, that some stores selling yard-goods have not yet begun to implement the FTC directives and that others do not routinely supply such care labels unless they are requested by the consumer.

And even these efforts do not assure the consumer that an item will stand up to normal wear-and-tear. Complaints about ready-made garments that have reached the files of many consumer agencies include: dress seams that pull out after one washing; buttons that fall off expensive suits; uneven hems; and trimmings that fade onto a garment.

Complaints about yard-goods include the tendency of some fabrics to "pick," "fuzz," or ravel; to trap body heat and not allow for evaporation of perspiration; and to stretch at stress points.

Garment industry experts suggest that persons planning to shop for ready-made clothes or to make their own familiarize themselves with the following marks of well-made clothing.

—Fabrics should be cut with, not against, the grain and fabrics featuring plaids, stripes, checks, or designs should be carefully matched at seams.

—Seams should be stitched securely, not just basted in, and should be wide enough for any alterations that may be needed in the future. Seam edges should be pinked, overcast, or taped to prevent ravelling.

—Linings, facings, and trimmings should take the same type of care as the fabric itself and should be securely sewn to the garment.

—Hems and facings should not be visible from thr right side of the garment.

Buttonholes should be bound or stitched securely and of the proper size for the buttons. Too-small buttonholes show wear quickly since buttons must be forced through them and too-large buttonholes may allow buttons to come undone.

—All closings such as buttons, zippers, snaps, and grippers should be firmly sewn in the proper spot. Zippers should work easily and should be inserted without rippling the fabric.

Our Consumer Protection attorneys suggest that you also (1) check all labels for fiber content and fabric care before purchasing, (2) try on all ready-made items for a correct fit, (3) get any guarantee in writing, and (4) check in advance on a store's return policy (some yard-goods, especially, cannot be returned.)

If you have a consumer problem, call our Consumer Protective Division, your county or city attorney, or your local Better Business Bureau.

Laura Jo Still In England

LONDON (AP) — While Prince Charles played polo, cameramen played Where's Laura Jo?

"You don't think I'd be fool enough to bring her here," the 25-year-old heir to the British throne told photographers Sunday.

The attention centers around Laura Jo Watkins, blonde daughter of American Rear Adm. James Watkins. She has been in London for a week at Charles' invitation.

She came to England from California to accompany Charles to a ball given by U.S. Ambassador Walter Annenberg. Neither attended the dance, however, because of official mourning after the death of Charles' great uncle, the Duke of Gloucester.

U.S. Embassy officials said on Sunday that Miss Watkins was still in England but they declined to disclose her whereabouts or her plans. She and the prince met when he visited San Diego earlier this year.

The St. Lawrence & Great Lakes Waterway, the largest inland navigation system on the continent, extends from the Atlantic Ocean to Duluth at the western end of Lake Superior, a distance of 2,342 miles.

Drama Bidding For New Attention Around Big D

EDITOR'S NOTE — Deep in the heart of Texas, drama is bidding for new attention. Professional grassroots writers of the Dallas Theater Center have produced eight new plays, disparate in subject and style. Director Paul Baker calls it "some strange and marvelous alchemy."

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Writer

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Most drama troupes do one or two new plays a year. Of course, most drama troupes aren't in Texas.

And at the Dallas Theater Center, some kind of record for professional grassroots creativity has now been set with a display of eight works — every one written by company members just to add emphasis to the achievement.

"In order to grow a forest," says center director Paul Baker, "you have to plant trees. In order to develop a theater, you have to nurture and support new plays.

Far apart in style and subject as in quality and future prospect, the scripts attest there's no monopoly on imaginative stagecraft in New York, Los Angeles, London and similar traditional centers.

"The most important thing about it all is that it is being done," commented one visiting showman. In an intensive two-plays-aday schedule, the works that previously had extended runs for season subscribers were reprised for an assemblage from afar of agents, established authors and critics.

Baker, whose calm mien conceals a powerful influence upon all members of the 15-year-old DTC, likes to talk about "this most important event" as a result of "some strange and marvelous alchemy."

Besides heading the center, Baker is also boss of the drama department at Trinity University in San Antonio. It's an interlocking setup that contributes to the energetic record maintained at the elegant Dallas theater designed by Frank Lloyd Wright.

By no coincidence, all of the budding authors on display were tutored in playwriting by Gene McKinney, who has been with Baker 27 years. Because of this year's impetus, McKinney now has about 25 more apprentice offerings to screen for a possible follow-up New Play Market later.

Ironically, the two plays generating the greatest visitor interest were written because the man assigned to assembling this exhibit 18 months ago was unhappy about a lack of Texas locales in submitted scripts.

So Preston Jones, 37, of Albuquerque, N.M., decided to do something about it. The results were "Lu Ann Hampton Laverty Oberlander," which traces its heroine from girlhood through disenchanted middle years; and "The Last Meeting of the Knights of the White Magnolia," about the break-up of a club slightly right of the Ku Klux Klan.

Both take place in a small town, with overlapping characters. He has now completed a locale trilogy, "The Oldest Living Graduate." The group is to be given unified presentation at the DTC next year.

Most elaborately produced of all were "Jack Ruby, All-American Boy," by John Logan, 34, of Houston, and Baker; and a rock musical of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," jointly composed by Randolph Tallman, 34, Shreveport, La., and Steven Mackenroth, 33, Boulder, Colo. It is already set for subsequent display.

The play about Jack Ruby, who gunned down President Kennedy's alleged assassin, is a multimedia experience which locally serves also as a kind of exorcism of community conscience. The company's director explains that he had felt that "as artists we have some day to make a statement."

The four other pieces range far from Southwest reality and Elizabethan fantasy to the remote boundaries of the avant-garde. Among them are "Getting to Know the Natives," by Daniel Turner, 26, of Sheybogan, Wis.

Teenagers Win Paris Net Crowns

PARIS (AP) — Chris Evert and Bjorn Borg, the teen-age stars who went unbeaten through two European clay courts tournaments, move to grass this week in preparation for the Wimbledon tennis show.

Miss Evert, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Sweden's Borg won the French women's and men's championships Sunday with blazing displays of shotmaking, repeating their triumphs in the Italian championships two weeks ago.

Miss Evert, 19, defeated Olga Morozova of Russia 6-1, 6-2 to become the youngest French Open winner since Christine Truman of Great Britain took the title in 1959 at age 18.

Borg, just 18 on June 6, is the youngest man ever to win a French championship in its 50-year history. He defeated Manuel Orantes of Spain 2-6, 6-7, 6-0, 6-2, 6-1.

Borg will play this week in the Nottingham tournament. to practice on grass, but said winning at Nottingham is not important. He's only looking forward to Wimbledon.

Miss Evert will play at Eastbourne in a women's tournament.

Borg, defeated by Roger Taylor of Britain in a five-set quarter-final match at Wimbledon last year, said the extra year could make a difference.

"I'm in very good condition. I feel so strong. Maybe I'm getting tougher mentally. Last year I could play two or three matches, then I got tired. Now I can go all through the tournaments."

Miss Evert lost to Billie Jean King in two sets in the 1973 Wimbledon final.

The 1974 French Open was marked by an unsuccessful court action by Jimmy Connors of the United States and Evonne Goolagong of Australia for the right to play, and a demand by Jan Kodes for a dope test on Francois Jauffret of France after Jauffret upset him.

Connors and Miss Goolagong were banned from the Italian and French tournaments because they have signed with World Team Tennis, whose schedule coincides with the European tournament dates.

Wadleigh Wins 3

The locals won three straight games without defeat to go into the finals, but were derailed by a strong San Angelo club in the battle for the tournament championship.

Don Head, Wadleigh pitcher, and catcher Pat Smith were named to the All-Tournament team.

Wadleigh Star Builders will be competing in the Snyder Invitational Softball Tournament this next weekend, along with several other Snyder teams and teams from Sweetwater, Tahoka, Lamesa, Stanton and Sterling City.

Irwin's Strategy Pays Off: Shoot Par, Wait

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — Ladies and gentlemen, introducing the new Open golf champion of the United States: Hale Irwin.

"Hale who?"

"I am not a birdie machine like Jack Nicklaus and Tom Weiskopf," said the clerkish-looking, 29-year-old from Joplin, Mo., after scoring one of the biggest surprises in the 83-year history of America's premier golf championship Sunday.

"I like courses where pars and birdies don't come easy. I just plug along and wait for others to make mistakes. I have something the others don't have and I hope to capitalize on it."

"That was a big tournament—winning it does a lot for my ego. But I'm not going to change. There will be a reckoning, a re-evaluation. Now that I've won one, I want to do something bigger. Like two major championships.

"Nicklaus has won 14. That's not a bad goal, is it?"

Patience and a low key defensive attitude enabled Irwin to survive while the greatest champions of the game struggled yainly and even collapsed in a four-day wrangle with a 6,961-yard monster called Winged Foot.

Irwin's final round 73 for a 72-hole total of 287, seven over par, was two strokes better than a second longshot, Forrest "Fuzzy" Fezler, who fired 70 for 289, with Bert Yancey and Lou Graham, following with 290.

What happened to Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and other titans of the game? Palmer, 44, starting the final round three shots off the lead, had seven bogeys and a single birdie for a 76. He finished at 292, tied with Jim Colbert and the 54-hole leader, young Tom Watson, who blew to a 79.

The reigning Masters champion, Player, who led after 18 and shared the lead at 36, never found the track and finished at 293. Nicklaus rallied with a last round 69 but posted 294, 14 over par, saying, "It's a great course, I just never got to playing well."

The defending champion, Johnny Miller, who electrified the game with a record 63 in winning a year ago at Oakmont, Pa., closed with a 77 for 302. Five former champions didn't survive the cut.

Only two players broke 290 and only 25 were able to beat 300.

Irwin played it cozy—never fretting, never fussing, never going in front until the ninth hole of the final round when he rolled in a weaving snake of 40 feet.

"That was the putt that turned it in my direction," he said.

Irwin's victory, with a first prize of $35,000 and perhaps a million in ancillary proceeds, came as no surprise to him. His only other tour victories were the Heritage Classic in 1972 and 1973.

"I had a dream about three weeks ago that I would win the Open," he told skeptical newsmen. "It's the Gospel truth.

Foster In Title Bout

By JACK STEVENSON
AP Sports Writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — World light heavyweight champion Bob Foster looks mean, acts loose and vows he'll knock out his younger challenger from South America, Jorge Ahumada, tonight.

While the two boxers who meet in the second part of a closed-circuit television show prepared for their meeting, two other 175-pounders engaged in an impromptu shoving match that could have erupted into a full-scale preliminary battle.

Foster, 35, making his 14th defense, was rated an 8-5 favorite over the 28-year-old challenger from Argentina. The champ's demeanor has been different this time. Staying at a local hotel, he has joked with fellow guests but in training he's been rough, showing the concentration that won him the title in 1968.

No other current champ has held the title that long and Foster vows it will be longer.

"I'll knock him out," the sheriff's sergeant vowed on the eve of his hometown fight at the University of New Mexico arena, which may attract 14,000 fans.

The television show starts in New York with former heavyweight champion Joe Frazier battling the No. 3 contender, Jerry Quarry, a Californian now fighting out of New York.

In Albuquerque to see the light heavyweights are such contenders as John Conteh of London, Victor Galindez of Argentina and Len Hutchins of Detroit.

Conteh and Galindez had the disagreement on a double decker bus making a tour of the city. They shoved each other but were quickly separated. One or the other probably will meet the winner of tonight's fight in the next championship bout.

Ahumada, who doesn't speak English, has declared he'll beat the aging champ but didn't predict a knockout.

Foster is 6-foot-3½, Ahumada 5-10. Foster's reach of 79 inches is five more than the South American's.

Over-all, Foster's record is 51-6; the challenger's is 40-5-1. Foster collects a $200,000 guarantee and Ahumada $25,000.

Trojans Win 5th Straight Crown

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Who says there are no baseball dynasties anymore? Just check out Southern California in the college ranks.

On the other hand don't ask Miami of Florida the same question.

After top-rated Miami defeated eventual College World Series champion Southern California in their first series meeting, a reporter asked one Miami player if the Hurricanes had any respect for the four-time champions.

"Their pitching is a little suspect," he replied. "Any team that has lost 20 games can't be that good."

Trojans' Coach Rod Dedeaux and pitcher Mark Barr saw the comment and tacked it on the team's bulletin board.

Saturday night the two met in the finals of the series before a crowd of 11,346 and one streaker, and Southern Cal took a 7-3 victory for its 10th series crown and an unprecedented fifth straight.

Yank Girls Beat Giants

The Yankees defeated the Giants 22-12 in a Miss Softball American game that was held here Saturday night. It was a makeup game of one that had earlier been rained out.

The Yanks collected 17 hits. Kim Harlin socked a home run, a double and a single. Pam Gray clouted a double and three singles. Martha Womack stroked four singles. Kayla Weems rapped two singles, and Le Ann McAteer, Glenna Dennis, Debra Kenney and Shauna Pate each hit one single.

The Yanks' Martha Womack and Kim Harlin handled the pitching chores, giving up only three singles—to Teresa Pevehouse, Carrie Hernandez and Kelly Jones.

Many Stocks Are Selling Below Their Book Value

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — You'd be very suspicious if a retailer claimed that he was selling all his goods at below cost. The profit system, as everyone knows, demands that everything be sold above cost.

On the stock market today, however, is a situation that roughly compares to that situation. Many stocks are selling for less than the book value of the companies they represent. And the list may be growing.

Standard & Poor's Corp. estimates that 55 per cent of the industrialcommon stocks on the New York Stock Exchange are in the "below book value" category. The corporate net assets actually exceed the market price of such companies.

Perhaps no other indicator illustrates more glaringly the indifference or suspicion or disaffection with which the stock market is viewed today. Stocks are in the same category as hot goods.

That this situation should prevail has less to do with the individual companies than with the stock market as a whole and the economy in general. It is in these latter areas that the suspicious reside.

The structure of the stock market itself remains to be determined, and until it is, the picture it projects is that of something shaky and timid, the precise opposite of the image it needs to display.

The economy is supplying very little of the stable, understandable, predictable environment necessary for healthy stock prices. At the moment, hope rather than conviction marks most forecasts.

For three weeks some stock market analysts have been preparing their clients for a substantial decline in the prime interest rate, but it hasn't come. Instead, business borrowing is rising again, and that could lead to even higher rates before any decline.

Those high rates are a double dose of poison to stocks. First, they raise the cost of doing business. Second, they draw money into bonds that otherwise would be supporting the market prices.

The latest ray of hope — one that you'll be hearing a lot about in coming weeks — concerns the possibility that oil rich nations will decide that the best way to use their money is to invest in corporate America.

While both the New York and American stock exchanges are attempting to make this hope a reality, so far there is little real activity that can be depended upon. It is still a wish.

Even if the oil money does gush into American stocks in volume, there remains the serious matter of bringing back all those individual stockholders who became disillusioned in the late 1960s.

And, no matter what is said and done, almost any enlightened observer of stock market activity will agree that the individual isn't coming back until:

1. He gets his own financial situation stabilized.

2. The nation's economy becomes more stable and predictable —That is, more secure for investors.

In summary, faith must be restored. When blue chip stocks are shunned as if they were shoddy goods you have to concede there is a great lack of faith in the future.

Big Bogus Bills

STRATFORD, Ont. (AP) — Provincial police Constable Fred Mueller said inflation-conscious counterfeiters are likely to turn their attention soon to making bogus $20 bills instead of $10 notes. He said continuing inflation may bring on phony $50 bills as well.

New Show Idea From Mexico

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It seems an unlikely association, but producer James Komack swears the idea for "Chico and the Man" began to come to him while directing in Mexico.

"Chico and the Man" is a new NBC comedy series about the stormy relationship between a high-spirited young Chicano and an embittered old Anglo who runs a garage.

"While I was in Mexico I began to learn to speak Spanish," Komack said.

"I came back here and discovered we live in a foreign land. This was Mexican land. I began to study the language, and it was easy because there's no place you can go here and not be able to speak Spanish.

"As I got more involved I discovered the barrio and finally I discovered Chico. What I did was put him with the old man."

The mixture is an explosively comic one in the vein of "All in the Family" and "Sanford and Son." The show will follow "Sanford and Son" on Friday nights in the fall.

The old man, played by Oscar winner Jack Albertson, is an Archie Bunker-type. He doesn't bother with Chicano when "spic" will do. Chico is played by Freddie Prinze.

"Our basic conflict is that the old man has given up on life. He looks at the world bitterly," said Komack, a one-time actor on Broadway and in "Hennessey" who also created "The Courtship of Eddie's Father."

The reaction of the Mexican-American community to the series has not been overwhelming. Not because of the content, but because Freddie Prinze is a Puerto Rican. A Chicano is, of course an American of Mexican descent.

Komack defends Prinze as the best actor for the role. He said, "In trying to find Chico, we held open auditions. We contacted all the activist groups and we auditioned every Chicano available. We narrowed it down to five people, two Chicanos, two Puerto Ricans and a Cuban.

"When we tested them the chemistry between Jack Albertson and Freddie Prinze was perfect. That's why he got the part. He and Jack made it happen.

"When the Chicanos saw the show they agreed that with experience and training Freddie would be a proper representative of the Chicanos."

Lions Recaptured

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Two lions escaped from a circus in an Amazon basin village, and citizens spent a tense night on guard against the beasts. The lions were found in the morning and the circus owner lured them back to their cages with live chickens.

Junior Editors' Quiz on ZEBRAS

ANSWER: The distinctive color pattern of the zebra, a horselike animal found in East and South Africa, is dark stripes on a light background. The striped coat serves as a camouflage since it blends with the background, hiding the zebra from hunters and animals, and protects it in its natural surroundings. It represents the horse family in Africa and has only one toe on each foot, encased in a horny hoof. It has a long tail with a brush of whiplike hair at the tip that is used as a fly swatter, a very necessary adjunct in a fly-infested country like Africa. It is a fast-running animal on hard-packed ground with a top speed of about 40 miles an hour.

Until about 100 years ago, great numbers of zebras lived over the eastern part of Africa. They were killed for their meat and for their hides, Their meat is said to have an excellent taste; their hides make a tough leather. Because some kinds were killed off, zebras are sparse in number today.

Watergate: It Happened Just 2 Years Ago Today

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police Sgt. Paul Leeper drew his gun and jumped onto a desk in Democratic National Committee headquarters.

"I looked over this glass partition. There were five men standing in front of a desk with their hands either raised above their heads or at least shoulder-high wearing blue surgical gloves ....

"We ordered them out from behind the desk and lined them up along the wall, facing the wall, hands on the wall, feet spread apart and at that time I informed them who we were, they were under arrest for burglary and advised them of their rights ..."

It was a heady time for Richard Nixon, who was relaxing that weekend in Key Biscayne, Fla. Earlier that year he had made his historic trip to China and he had every reason to be confident that the following November he would win a second four years in the presidency.

Former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell had taken command of the President's re-election campaign and was in Los Angeles. The campaign treasury was overflowing.

The Democrats seemed certain to nominate Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota, whom both Nixon and Mitchell were convinced would be their easiest opponent. That is, unless McGovern proved a stalking horse for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, the Democrat they feared the most.

Not even the break-in at Democratic party headquarters ruffled the outward calm of the Nixon campaign. "A third-rate burglary" not worth commenting on, said presidential Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler.

But as time passed that calm facade would crack, widen and reveal far more of the secrets of the Nixon administration than the burglars had succeeded in disclosing about the Democrats.

June 17, 1972, would become the most easily remembered date of Richard Nixon's presidency—and by the first anniversary of the break-in, no one was calling it a third-rate burglary.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., was starring on daytime television as chairman of the Senate Watergate committee hearings. Archibald Cox, the crewcut Yankee law professor with a fondness for bow ties, was the special Watergate prosecutor. And most of the men who had held the real power during the first Nixon administration had resigned, such as H.R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman and former Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst had resigned. But one, former White House counsel John W. Dean III, had been fired.

Dean had a story to tell.

Eight days after that first anniversary, he settled into the Watergate committee spotlight and in flat, unemotional tones related his belief that one of those who had conspired to cover up that involvement of Nixon campaign officials in the Watergate break-in was the President himself.

But how to prove whether Dean's story was true or false? The President declined invitations from Ervin and Cox to tell his side of the story. Testimony from Nixon loyalists conflicted with Dean's.

And then Alexander P. Butterfield told the Watergate committee of the existence of the White House taping system. Thus began the battle of subpoenas. It quickly became clear that Cox, a former solicitor general and legal scholar, represented the chief threat to the President's determination to guard the confidentiality of his discussions with aides.

Finally, on Oct. 20, 1973, after Cox had obtained two court rulings upholding his right to subpoena presidential tapes, Nixon fired the special prosecutor.

Within days, White House aides conceded they had misjudged the possible public reaction. Thousands of telegrams had poured into Washington demanding Nixon's impeachment. Three days after the firing, Nixon agreed to turn over the subpoenaed tapes.

But the impeachment process had begun. It was spurred on by the disclosure that two of the subpoenaed conversations did not exist and that a third was marred by an 18½-minute erasure that had wiped out the only discussion of Watergate.

A new special prosecutor, Leon Jaworski, took over. In March 1974, grand juries returned the major Watergate indictments. Facing criminal charges were those familiar names: Haldeman, Ehrlichman, Mitchell and former White House special counsel Charles W. Colson. With all his one-time closest advisers under indictment, the President suddenly appeared vulnerable.

The House Judiciary Committee joined the special prosecutor in demanding access to White House files. After a period of cooperation, the President drew the line. He had turned over the material needed for the full story of Watergate. He would turn over no more.

But Jaworski and Rep. Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., chairman of the Judiciary Committee, didn't let up in their demands. In a dramatic bid to quiet their demands, Nixon released edited transcripts of 44 presidential conversations, giving them not only to Jaworski and Rodino but to the general public.

However, the transcripts gave a picture of a President who had sought to "keep the lid on the bottle," to contain the Watergate investigations. His position on the payment of hush money proved ambiguous. He often came across as a bitter and cynical man who yearned for a chance to retaliate against political opponents.

But had the President broken the law? Had he done anything that could be considered grounds for impeachment?

On the second anniversary, those were unanswered questions. And because they were unanswered, they overshadowed all the other questions of guilt or innocence that would be decided in the courts.

But there was one certainty. John Dean was a poor prophet when he told the President Feb. 28, 1973, that the Watergate break-in would end up "in the funny pages of the history books."

Teresa Anne Jones, 13, was hit by a car and killed Saturday as she crossed a farm road after delivering a letter at a mailbox across from her home near Stephenville.

Virgil C. Reynolds, 27, of Comanche was killed and Leroy Adams, 25, also of Comanche, was injured Friday night in a one-car accident near that West Central Texas town.

Villagers Listen To Doctors

HAKEGORA, India (AP - "All you have to do is wear this stone around your neck," the village medicine man, Doctor Sukdha, told the people of Hakegora. "It will keep away any disease; no evil spirits will enter your body."

The 138 villagers still wear Sukdha's stones. But since 20 of them came down with smallpox in the past month, and four of them died, they are listening to other doctors.

One of them is Dr. S. K. Parida, a 28-year-old medical school graduate working with the World Health Organization in the fight against a smallpox epidemic that officials say has taken 25,000 lives this year in Bihar state, west of Calcutta.

Parida came to Hakegora this week with a team of vaccinators. He found two of the village's 32 mud huts turned into isolation wards for the smallpox sufferers. Nearly all have been children.

They lay on pieces of straw, their bodies pocked with sores that would crater the skin when the scabs fell off.

About a third of those who get the disease in Bihar die. Many survivors are blinded. All who survive are scarred.

There is no known treatment for the disease—only prevention by vaccination.

Bihar has reported 70,393 cases out of the world's total of 125,666 so far this year. To wipe out the disease, the World Health Organization and the Indian government are carrying on a "search and containment" campaign.

In mid-May, volunteers searched 1,200 villages within 30 miles of the industrial city of Jamshedpur.

Seattle Disc Jockey Is A Bundle Of Enthusiasm

SEATTLE (AP) — Sky diving bored him and so did white-water racing down an Oregon River. But climbing Mt. Kilimanjaro, ah, that was something else again. And so was swimming with a killer whale. Riding a bronco was frightening. And driving the Baja 500 was unforgettable, especially when the car broke down in the desert 100 miles from the finish line and he and his teammate were stranded for two days with only one gallon of water.

Then there was the skin diving expedition to collect sunken treasure off the coast of Colombia. Good trip. So was the gem-mining journey into the Rockies and leading a flotilla of 120 small boats to Alaska. So what if more than half of them hit submerged logs?

And sparring with heavyweight champ Joe Frazier sure beat watching television that Saturday night.

As they say in the beer commercial, you only go around once in life.

George Plimpton? No, the name is Robert E. Lee Hardwick, disc jockey at KVI in Seattle.

Hardwick, 43, is an intense, restless man whose name is a household word in the Puget Sound area where his listeners are legion. A Seattle native, he has been at KVI for 15 years.

Hardwick can whip up enthusiasm for almost any endeavor. When Seattle had a major league baseball team in 1968, he organized a mock fan club for Ray Oyler, who had the lowest batting average in the American League. He also led hundreds of taxpayers to Olympia one year to press for tax reform. And he has organized photography junkets to the South Seas, held seminars about mushrooms and led a group of fans on a motorbike tour of Europe.

In the broadcasting booth, Hardwick resembles a jumping bean in a Dixie cup. He wears tennis shoes and turtlenecks and a piece-of-eight recovered on the trip to Colombia dangles from his neck.

He stands throughout his four-hour show. His show includes fixtures such as "the news that didn't make the news" (a collection of offbeat items) and constant bantering and wisecracking between him and his receptionist "Veronica," who has built quite a following of her own.

Often he talks about his latest adventure or rehashes an old one. The music is what he describes as "contemporary middle of the road — the top 40 with the bubblegum music taken out."

Any subject can pop up on the show. On a recent morning Hardwick and Veronica got into prolonged discussions about how there are shops for big-and-tall men but not little fellows. That was preceded by a discussion on the merits of peanut butter.

But for all his gregariousness on the air and at public events, Hardwick remains a private person.

"I don't have many close friends at all," he said after his show one recent morning. "I suppose it's because I don't need them. That's an awful thing to say, but it's true."

Hardwick calls himself "a doer" and says lethargy is his enemy and curiosity his disease. He rises at 3:45 a.m. in his Juanita home where he lives with his second wife and two of his four children and heads for the station. He writes material for his show until he goes on the air at 6 a.m. Once the show ends, he usually either runs or lifts weights.

His pre-eminent position in Seattle radio gives him a salary (more than $30,000) and the freedom that makes him the envy of other DJs. Some people say his outspokenness almost got him killed once.

In October, 1963 he grew tired of hearing stories about organized crime controlling the city so he told his listeners to call in and anonymously unload any rumors they had to a tape recorder.

The next morning two shots were fired at Hardwick as he was parking the hearse he drove at that time as a promotional gimmick. He remains unconvinced that the shooting was a result of the radio show. But the experience as a target still chills him.

Hardwick unabashedly likes his job and is proud to say he is a happy man.

"I like what I do because it gives me the opportunity to express life as I see it and I don't know if it's an ego trip or what it is, I don't care. I'm able to learn about all the things I want to learn about. The disease is curiosity. It's an insatiable craving."

Production Slump May Be Ending

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's industrial production capacity shows signs of shaking off the slump brought on by the Arab oil embargo

The Federal Reserve Board reported on Friday that industrial output, boosted by a reviving automobile industry, rose for the second month in a row in May.

The latest rise was four-tenths of 1 per cent. Output rose three-tenths of 1 per cent in April after four straight months of decline.

Although output is strengthening, the May index of 125.4 stood four-tenths of 1 per cent above a year earlier, but below the 127.5 index for November when the impact of the embargo hit.

Federal Reserve analysts said production is still shaky on the important raw materials level, but the figures lent some hope that the administration is right in its expectation that current economic miseries are bottoming out, if they haven't already.

The current struggle for industry is to gear up its production to satisfy surging demand. Companies producing metals and other materials for durable goods like automobiles rose slightly. Auto production itself was up almost 3 per cent in May to an annual level of 7.7 million cars. Last year at the same time, the industry was humming along at a 10 million-a-year clip.

The increase in production for durable goods suppliers was offset, however, by a decline among the manufacturers who make the basic materials for clothing and other nondurable goods.

One of the earliest and most famous rulers who invaded Britain was King Canute, who ruled in London 1017-1035 A.D.

Convicted Killer Who Fled Prison Recaptured

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (AP) — A convicted killer who left prison last month on a four-hour social pass was shot and captured after police say he seized three vehicles and a total of five persons Sunday.

Carl C. Bowles, 33, was shot in the stomach by a policeman as he stood knee-deep in the Spokane River near this northern Idaho town. He was in critical condition today after undergoing 5½ hours of surgery.

Bowles had been the subject of a two-state search since he left the Oregon State Penitentiary May 17 under a temporary leave program for inmates and visited a woman at a motel in Salem, Ore.

Harry Button, chief criminal investigator for the Kootenai County sheriff's office, said Bowles was charged Sunday with escape and faced other possible charges.

Button said Bowles seized a mobile home, a car and a motorcycle Sunday and forced five persons to accompany him in his bid for freedom.

All were released unharmed, although an elderly couple were "slapped around a bit," another deputy said.

Before his escape, Bowles was serving two concurrent life terms stemming from a similar violent spree in 1965 in Nevada. He was convicted of fatally shooting a deputy sheriff and abducting the California finance director, Hale Champion, his wife and infant daughter, who were released unharmed.

Circuit Judge Edwin Allen, who sentenced Bowles in 1965, recommended that at no time should Bowles be considered for parole. Police said his record dated back to a truancy charge at age 12. He was convicted later of burglary, escape, assault and auto theft.

On May 17, James Muranaka, a counselor, escorted Bowles from the prison to a motel for a visit with Joan Coberly, 24, of Monrovia, Calif. The official returned later to find the two were gone.

Warden Hoyt Cupp of Oregon State Penitentiary said he authorized the pass because he felt Bowles was on the road to rehabilitation.

Oregon Gov. Tom McCall, who suspended Cupp after the escape, said he would not fire the warden because no one was hurt seriously.

McCall has said of 30,198 prisoners granted leaves last year, only 0.2 per cent failed to return to custody.

Cupp pledged Sunday night, "We will do anything in our power to make sure a thing like this does not happen again."

Bowles and Mrs. Coberly were not seen after the escape until Thursday when authorities in Eugene, Ore., were tipped by a grocer after Mcs. Coberly presented identification to buy some wine.

Surveillance was set up and Mrs. Coberly was arrested Friday and charged with giving aid and comfort to an escaped prisoner. But Bowles successfully evaded FBI agents at a roadblock and took an agent's pistol.

Butcher Has Best Mustache

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — Jay Nestle, a Colorado butcher who must be careful not to let his 24-inch handlebar mustache interfere with his work, is the winner of the second annual International Father's Mustache Competition.

Nestle said he plans to let his mustache grow until 1976, when Colorado celebrates its centennial. He estimates that by that time his mustache will have reached 36 to 40 inches.

So far, he has been able to cope with his extra-long handlebar while working at Chuck's Quality Meats in Broomfield, Colo.

"It hits the saw once in a while, but not the blade," Nestle said. "It interferes more with recreation than with work."

Nestle, 36, was invited to take part in the contest Sunday after his photograph appeared in a local newspaper.

There were about 40 contestants.

Nestle says he spends about 10 to 15 minutes a day on the mustache, and about three hours at least twice a week to shampoo and wax it.

His mustache also was awarded a first place in the "most kissable" category by Susan White, a local television personality.

Prizes also were awarded for the most fatherly, droopiest, most struggling, most bristly, most villainous, most debonair and bushiest mustaches.

Israeli Survey

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A government survey of 5,500 high school students found that 41 per cent of the boys and 16 per cent of the girls had "full sexual relations" by age 18. The survey found the young people know little about contraception.

Rites Set Today For Jody Parr

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP) — Jody Martin Parr was to be buried in Corpus Christi today five days after she took her own life during a long and bitter divorce action against her husband, Duval County Judge Archer Parr.

Funeral services were scheduled for 1 p.m., conducted by evangelist Lester Roloff, himself a controversial figure in South Texas. He has been involved in a legal battle to keep his South Texas children's homes from state regulation.

Mrs. Parr, an attractive 40-year-old blonde, shot herself in the head early Thursday morning at her Corpus Christi home after she apparently spent the night writing letters to friends and relatives. Most of the notes were pleasant, some even lighthearted and encouraging.

In one of the letters, released by her lawyer after her death, Mrs. Parr told Roloff, "Don't stop praying for me. I need all the help I can get, and I believe you have a straight line."

Mrs. Parr had been twice jailed and twice freed on contempt of court charges connected with the property settlement in her divorce. One of her lawyers, Jack Pope Jr., later said she had been the victim of "official oppression."

Her suicide was the third misfortune to befall the politically powerful Parr family in recent months. Archer Parr has been sentenced to ten years in prison on federal perjury conviction. His uncle, George Parr, nicknamed the "Duke of Duval,," was found guilty earlier this year of federal income tax evasion.

In several of her letters Mrs. Parr indicated she approved of the invstigations which led to the charges against her husband and his uncle. To one friend she wrote, "Duval County has always thought it was above the law."

"GET OUT THE PENNY CAMPAIGN"—Mrs. Gerald R. Ford and Mrs. Arthur Burns turn in some pennies at a Washington bank, doing their part to help increase the number of the coins in circulation. A lack of pennies in circulation because of hoarding prompted the U.S. Mint to organize the campaign. Bush 'Shook Up" By Transcripts, But Panel Finances Big Mailing

By DICK BARNES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although Republican Chairman George Bush said he was disturbed by portions of President Nixon's taped Watergate conversations, the GOP National Committee paid more than $10,000 to finance a massive White House mail campaign circulating a favorable interpretation of the transcripts.

Party headquarters has regularly processed and paid for White House mailings to interest groups and communications media. The transcript material was by far the most massive this year.

William J. Baroody Jr., special consultant to the President who deals with outside organizations, directed that a 15-page packet be sent to more than 28,000 persons from more than 40 mailing lists maintained by the GOP.

They ranged from leaders of veterans organizations to Chamber of Commerce officials; from 1972 Nixon campaign workers to members of the Teamsters union executive board.

The mailing included the text of Nixon's April 29 address in which he said he would give edited transcripts, but not original tapes, to the House impeachment inquiry.

A similar mailing ordered by Ken W. Clawson, White House communications director, went to 3,269 news organizations and publications.

Both mailings included brief transcript excerpts supporting Nixon's contention that he knew nothing of the Watergate cover-up until March 21, 1973.

Bush had said after reading the transcripts that their tone was disturbing and that he was "shook up" about some portions, although he said other segments tended to support Nixon.

A party official said there was no special discussion about the massive mailings and that they were sent out routinely, as were 37 other mailings for the White House this year.

Though most of the mailings Clawson and Baroody ordered this year have dealt with Nixon programs in such areas as energy, some concerned Watergate and related affairs.

One dealt with the ITT and milk investigations, another a speech by Vice President Gerald R. Ford strongly supporting Nixon. Three included articles from publications defending Nixon, two contained texts of White House briefings related to Watergate and another distributed a favorable public opinion poll.

Early in the first Nixon administration it was decided that the party would pay for such mailings to avoid any criticism that political material was being sent at government expense.

The party operates its own print shop, so precise costs for the mailings are not calculated.

Postage alone for the transcript material mailings, however, would have been more than $10,000. Paper and envelope costs as estimated by a GOP staff worker would have exceeded $1,500.

The GOP keeps name and address mailing lists in such categories as editors of daily papers, medical directors of insurance companies, religious leaders, heads of leading transportation companies, chairmen of university departments of sociology and black contacts.

One list of 292 persons could be considered a status symbol. It is entitled: Business-Community leaders—"Movers and Shakers."

Sea Law Conference Likely To Be Complex

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

The biggest international conference in history may also be the most complex and will be haunted by fear that although success will be hard to achieve, failure can spell disaster for the future of world stability.

A new dimension in global affairs takes shape as plans proceed for the opening Thursday in Caracas, Venezuela, of the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea. Delegates from nearly all nations on earth will consider an agenda of 100 or more items, among them issues serious enough in the past to have impelled men to war. So a new phase of ocean politics begins.

The conference objective is to revise concepts now several centuries old and compose complex differences on such matters as economic and political sovereignty. The going will be tough.

The delegates will be groping for agreement toward a treaty against a backdrop of oil crisis and developing world shortages of food and raw materials.

Since that sharpens interest in mining and harvesting the seas for petroleum riches, metals vital to industry and protein for the hungry, the situation heralds another phase of a swiftly developing clash between powerful "haves" and weak "have-nots." Yet, in the long run, failure to spell out workable rules as the need becomes more and more acute can mean future chaos.

A few examples of the conferees' major problems:

—Seabed resources and fisheries.

So much is at stake that even though the major powers hope for a treaty, they may be years trying to work out a pact acceptable to the majority.

As land resources are used up, the sea becomes vastly more important as the sources of immense amounts of oil and gas and such metals as copper, cobalt, nickel and manganese, although at present only the United States and a few other advanced countries have the technology needed to exploit all this. Conflicting concepts of sovereignty over seabed and coastal waters will complicate matters enormously.

—Territorial waters.

This troublesome issue also affects the prospects for agreement on exploitation of the seas' resources. How far out does sovereignty of a coastal nation extend?

There never was a universal standard. The traditional three-mile limit was simply the distance an 18th century cannonball could reach from shore.

At sea law conferences in 1958 and 1960, the United States opposed Soviet and Red Chinese attempts to establish a 12-mile limit, but things have changed radically since and national needs have overtaken ideology.

The Americans and Russians now can agree on a 12-mile limit, but many a developing "third world" nation with seacoasts, plus nations like Australia, New Zealand, Canada, Norway, Iceland, Spain and some others claim wide offshore control. Some Latin Americans claim a 200-mile limit. China, seeking to make capital, denounces the concept of the open sea, supports the 200-mile concept and insists the superpowers are colluding so that their ships can operate close to the shores of weaker nations.

The United States, the U.S.S.R., France, Japan and Britain want the fullest maritime freedom possible. An eventual compromise may involve distinction between an economic zone and the territorial sea, giving coastal nations a large measure of economic control while navigation remains free to all beyond 12 miles.

—The world's straits.

The doctrine of passage needs revision in the light of all the conflicting claims and interests, but important maritime nations, notably the superpowers, will resist strongly anything that might hinder free passage through straits. The world has about 100 of them, although only a relative few are of major importance.

More than one nation commands the coast in the cases of many a strait. In any case, for individual nations or groups of nations to assert exclusive control of such waters could threaten the peace of the area in question. For example: the 20-mile-wide Dover Strait sees 400,000 merchant ships annually. Gibraltar, nine miles wide, accommodates 150,000 ships a year. The Malacca Strait, between Indonesia and Malaysia, is enormously important to a nation like Japan. Bab El Mandeb, 15 miles wide, commands the entrance to the Suez Canal, soon to be reopened. Hormuz, 50 miles across, is vital to Persian Gulf oil traffic.

—Environment and pollution:

Recent experience shocked nations into pushing pollution of the seas to the forefront of universal problems. The seas' bounty is threatened not only by overfishing, but by a variety of dangerous pollutants, some from shipping, some from land-based industry. Toxic substances like mercury, lead and DDT severely damage the sea's food resources. So does oil spill or pumping of ballast from tankers or the dumping of solid wastes, or the outflow from sewage plants, and so on.

But the scope of controls and the machinery for enforcement can stir up wasps' nests in a world where national sovereignty as opposed to supernational authority remains a touchy subject.

True Or False Careers Quiz

Career Corner

by Joyce Lain Kennedy

For a change of pace, here are a few research studies that have crossed my desk recently. I've arranged them in a true-or-false format – see if you can guess the answers.

QUESTIONS

1. Employers should not tell employes that they are going to be laid off until the last possible minute because as a result of this knowledge, employes will be absent and tardy more often and not work as hard.

2. Women who enroll in graduate schools of business administration are independent, very self-assured, ambitious and quite capable of making decisions.

3. The cost of attending college has increased 40 percent over the last 4 years and will continue to rise next year.

4. Minority employment is now nearly 45 percent of total Federal workers.

5. There are instances where men are paid less than women for the same work.

ANSWERS

1. False, according to a study by R. Hershy of Bulova Corporation. Hershy says there is no significant change in absenteeism, lateness or production between employes who know they are going to be laid off, and other groups who are going to be laid off but don't know it. This raises questions about management's usual practice of keeping layoffs secret until nearly the last day to be worked. When management knows who must be laid off over a long period of time, Hershy suggests it would appear to be mutually advantageous to give employes as much notice as possible. It's certainly more humane.

2. True, says the Educational Testing Service report of a survey of 10,500 women who planned to take the admission test for graduate business study. Typically, a woman wants a business career because it offers some freedom in her work, outlets for special talents and leadership, and permits her to be treated equally with men.

3. True. A report by the College Entrance Examination Board notes average costs for commuting students are rising even more rapidly than for residential students. Average costs for commuting students at public 2-year colleges will rise to $1,922 per year, up 15.4 percent from last year. At private 2-year colleges, costs are up 27.3 percent to $3,287. At public 4-year colleges, the jump is 17.5 percent to $2,085, and at private 4-year schools, costs are up 16.5 percent to $3,683.

Average costs this fall for residential students will be $2,153 at public 2-year colleges, an increase of 6.4 percent; $3,617 at private 2-year schools, up 13.2 percent. Costs at public 4-year institutions will average $2,400, up 7 percent; and $4,039 at private 4-year institutions, up 9.4 percent. Total costs include tuition and fees, room and board, and expenses for travel and personal needs.

4. False. The U.S. Civil Service Commission says that as of May 31, 1973, minority group members held 515,129 Federal jobs, or 20.4 percent of the total. Minority employment rose by 10,000 in fiscal year 1973, despite an overall decline in Federal jobs of more than 50,000.

5. True. It's rare, but it does happen. In this year's annual salary survey by the American Marketing Association, it was found that female clerical supervisors in market research received 11 percent more than the average male on the job. However, women marketing research directors on the average take home only 81 percent of the $24,943 mean salary of male colleagues, and women junior analysts get 97 percent of males' average pay for the same work.

High Priced Tank Of Gas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — All Jose Serrano Rivera wanted was gasoline for his car. But because he chose an unconventional way to try to get it, he won't be needing any at all for the next six months.

Rivera, 27, from San Antonio, Tex. was sentenced Thursday to six months in Clark County jail and was placed on four years' probation. He had pleaded guilty to a charge of battery with the use of a deadly weapon.

Police said Rivera ran out of gas in a parking lot last Feb. 12 and apparently grew frustrated when no one stopped to help him.

Finally he pulled out a knife and ordered a woman to drive him to a gas station, they said. Her screams brought officers to the scene and Rivera was arrested.

Woman Dies On Search For Boy

MINIDOKA, Idaho (AP) — A young woman has died of sunstroke while taking part in a search for an 11-year-old boy missing for five days in the scorching southern Idaho desert.

Shirley Egans, 29 of American Falls, Idaho, died at a search camp Friday, officials said.

She was one of over 400 persons that have been combing a two-county area 20 miles northeast of here in a search for Jeff Hodgson, who became separated from a wilderness survival study group on Monday.
