Workers say no thanks

Americans reject Bush offer to cut withholding

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Large numbers of American workers are saying "no, thanks" to President Bush's election-year offer of a bit more take-home pay now in exchange for smaller tax refunds next year.

An informal survey by The Associated Press of large employers and payroll-preparation services shows that in some companies nearly half the workers are filing new W-4 forms to keep income-tax withholding at last year's level.

If that trend holds, it would do serious damage to Bush's idea of injecting an extra $2 billion a month into the economy simply by giving workers part of their tax refunds in advance.

"Something tells me a number of taxpayers may take me up on this one," Bush said when he announced the change during his Jan. 28 State of the Union message.

Families, he said, need the extra money now "to help pay for clothing, college or to get a new car."

Record numbers seek welfare aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — A record 13.4 million people are receiving money from the government's welfare program to help families pay for food, clothing and shelter. That is almost 2 million more than when the recession began in mid-1990.

Government figures obtained by The Associated Press show participation in the program has increased steadily, from 11.6 million in July 1990 to 13.4 million in December 1991, the most recent month available.

The rising tide of poverty and the accompanying public costs are focusing government attention on what do to about Aid to Families with Dependent Children. Republicans and Democrats agree that it does not help people become self-sufficient.

House might reveal rubber check writers

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A divided House ethics committee, in a move that sent shivers through the ranks of Congress, Thursday proposed publicly identifying 19 current and five former members who repeatedly wrote bad checks at the chamber's bank.

Dissenting Republicans said names of all 355 current and former members who wrote rubber checks should be released and vowed to battle for that position on the House floor next week.

Committee members, who have been using coded information and don't know the names of the offending lawmakers, voted 10-4 for the panel's recommendation. It would release account histories and name five former House members in addition to the 19 now serving.

The recommendation set the stage for an extraordinary public debate on a matter of political delicacy — whether House members should disclose some or all or none of a list of rubber check writers.

"The political ramification of this is absolutely awesome," said Rep. James V.

Officer breaks ranks in Rodney King trial

Jurors view videotape that shows motorist repeatedly beaten with nightsticks.

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — One of four white policemen charged in a black motorist's videotaped beating broke ranks with fellow defendants as the long-awaited trial got under way Thursday. His attorney blamed the others for being "out of control" in clubbing Rodney King.

Attorney John Barnett, who represents Theodore Briseno, said his client tried to stop the March 1991 beating that caused a national uproar against police brutality. Barnett had been trying to distance his client from the other defendants, but hadn't openly accused them until Thursday.

Barnett's dramatic opening statement came after the other three defense lawyers blamed King for inciting the attack.

Jurors viewed the videotape that shows King repeatedly beaten with nightsticks. A prosecutor called the beating unjustified.

"You will see . . . a man who was down, a man who was not aggressive, who was not resisting," Deputy District Attorney Terry White said. "And those blows . . . continued and continued for no reason."

He described one defendant swinging his baton at King's head "much as a baseball batter would swing at a ball."

But defense lawyer Daryl Mounger, representing Sgt. Stacey Koon, said the violence was triggered by King's bizarre behavior and his refusal to follow orders when he was stopped for speeding.

"The only person who was in charge of this incident was Rodney Glen King," said Mounger. "It is the suspect who controls what happens."

Koon, 41, is on trial with officers Laurence Powell, 29, Timothy Wind, 31, and Briseno, 39. All are charged with assault, and Koon and Powell also are charged with filing false reports.

They face eight-year maximum prison sentences, if convicted. Wind, a rookie on probation, was fired. The other officers were suspended.

Barnett claimed Koon, Powell and Wind lost control and Briseno was the only one who tried to stop the violence.

"Officer Powell, in a torrent of blows, continued to beat Mr. King on the

NEW YORK — Krusty the Clown was bad. Homey the Clown was worse. But Shakes the Clown, an alcoholic womanizer featured in a new movie, has wiped the painted smiles off clowns nationwide. They're angered by an outbreak of "clown-bashing."

Poe defends selection of Thomas for position

By Debbie Lincecum

Staff Writer

City Manager Fred Poe issued a statement Thursday defending the city's hiring of Mayor Carroll Thomas as economic development officer at Midland International Airport.

Thomas will take the job after his term as mayor ends June 1.

Poe said he wants to "set the record straight" about the choice, which has come under public criticism recently. The mayor was hired after an internal advertisement ran for seven days, available for city employees only.

Poe says the job was not new and funds were budgeted for it. His statement says the city was in a semi-freeze on hiring, in which all new hires required his approval. But, he says, the job was one of 32 vacancies in the city government at the time. Critics have suggested the job was created for Thomas, a trained geologist who now works as a stockbroker.

Before advertising the position, Airports Director Ken Day had implemented a "streamlin-

U.S attacks pain

WASHINGTON — The government recommended Thursday that doctors provide painkillers swiftly and aggressively to patients after surgery to decrease suffering and speed recovery. Federal health officials said myths about pain and its management cause half of the patients who undergo surgery in more than 23 million procedures each year to suffer unrelieved, unnecessary pain. In the first of a series of non-binding medical care guidelines, the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, a new agency mandated by Congress, called on doctors and nurses to "take more time to monitor and measure pain and to treat it aggressively with drugs, relaxation therapy and other means./2D

How to defend against the virus

Five million IBM-compatible personal computers could be affected when files stored on their hard disks are wiped out by Michelangelo, a time-bomb virus set for today. Some strategies for protection:

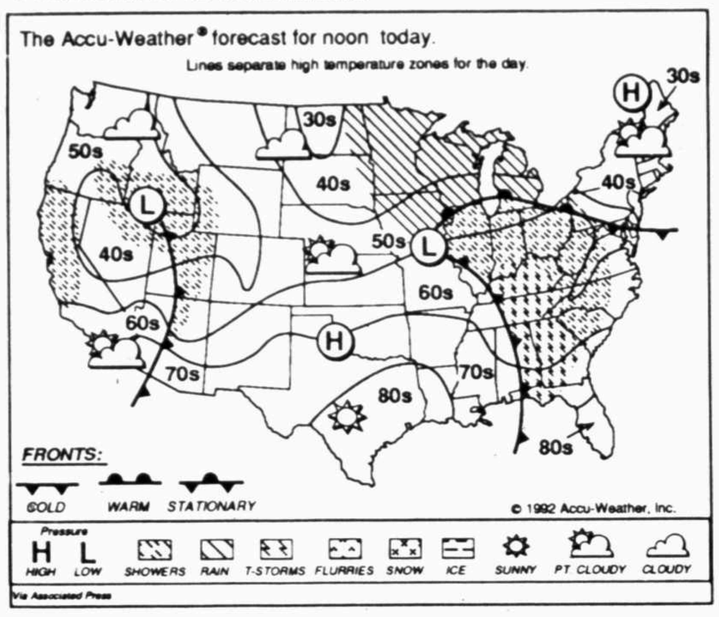

- Use one of the many anti-virus and protection programs available from software dealers or free from electronic bulletin-boards.
- Copy all files from your hard disk to back-up floppy disks and avoid starting or restarting the PC at any time today.
- In DOS version 3.3, setting the clock to March 7 and resetting it to the next proper date several days later may work but is not a sure cure. This does not work on 3.2 or earlier versions.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Be ready for sun, high 70s

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high around 75 to 80 and southwest to west winds at 15 to 20 mph and gusty. Tonight should be fair with a low around 45 to 50, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be mostly sunny and windy with a high near 80.

After an overnight low of 47, Thursday's high reached 72 compared with the record high for that date of 90 set in 1946. The record low for the date of 15 was set in 1989.

STATE

Sunshine filtered through scattered clouds across Texas on Thursday. However, showers and thunderstorms lingered in East Texas.

A weak Pacific front, or dryline, extended from west of Paris to Tyler to near Waco and then into South Texas.

Winds were from the southwest behind and from the south ahead of the line. Speeds were 10 to 20 mph with gusts to 30 in the west and 5 to 15 mph in the east.

Temperatures reached the 60s to 80s.

The forecast for North Texas was for clearing skies and higher temperatures. Increasing clouds on Saturday. High temperatures were to be 79 to 85 today and 76 to 85 Saturday. Lows tonight 52 to 62.

West Texas was expected to be mostly fair through Saturday. Highs were to be in the 70s Friday with mid-80s in the Big Bend lowlands. Highs Saturday were to be mainly in the 70s and 80s except around 90 in the Big Bend. Lows tonight from the upper 30s in the north to the lower 50s in the south.

Forecasters said South Texas would have fair to partly cloudy skies with highs in the 80s with upper 70s along the coast. Lows in the 40s to 60s.

NATION

Severe thunderstorms, accompanied by a tornado in one case, ripped across Louisiana on Thursday, dumping torrents or rain on New Orleans. Flooding worries plagued Texas, which was battered by golf ball size hail.

Winter-storm warnings or snow advisories were in effect overnight for much of the Sierra Nevada in California and Nevada.

Firece thunderstorms brewed a tornado that touched down near Forked Island, La. No injuries or damage were reported. A severe thunderstorm watch was posted over southern Louisiana and part of southeast Texas.

Hail measuring three-quarters of an inch in diameter fell at Texas City. Golf ball size hail fell near Houston.

Lower Mississippi Valley and eastern Texas residents watched rivers and creeks after rainfall during the past several days caused flooding and threats of flooding. No major flooding was reported Thursday.

A high-wind warning and a wind-chill advisory were posted over the Pribilof Islands of Alaska. Winds of 40 mph with stronger gusts could drive wind chills down to 35 degrees below zero at St. Paul and St. George islands.

At noon CST, rain and thunderstorms extended across the Gulf Coast and southern Atlantic states. Showers and thunderstorms also reached from southwest Kansas into southeast Colorado.

Rain extended from northern Kansas across the northern Plains, upper Missouri and Mississippi valleys, upper Great Lakes, lower Ohio Valley and the Tennessee Valley.

Rain also fell along the northern and central Pacific coast. Rain in the central Rockies changed to snow in the higher elevations.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at noon CST included 1.85 inches at New Orleans.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

TAX: Trend shows workers reject Bush offer

(From 1A)

The change generally took effect March 1. But it turns out that while a lot of families might be able to use a few extra dollars a week, they prefer to let the government hold it and send it back in a lump sum early next year.

The difference in refund — or in taxes owed at filing time — is about $172 a year for a single person, $345 for a married person and $690 for a two-earner couple.

"Large numbers of our workers are having their withholding changed to nullify the effects of the reduction," said Paul Allen at Eastman Kodak headquarters in Rochester, N.Y. "We can't quantify it yet, but the payroll department tells me it's the majority" of the 39,600 employees.

A significant number of DuPont's 20,000 employees in the Wilmington, Del., area won't accept lower withholding, a spokesman said.

Hallmark Cards employs about 6,700 at its Kansas City headquarters and as many as 40 percent of them have requested that last year's higher withholding rates be retained, said spokesman Adrienne Lallo.

"But the number of new W-4s is not as prevalent in our field offices, where they probably are not as aware of the change as we are at headquarters," she said.

Other employers and tax experts agree that millions of workers aren't aware that their withholding rates dropped automatically on paychecks issued after Feb. 28.

"Memos are going out to our hourly paid workers this week and to salaried employees in mid-March indicating the possibility they may be underwithheld" if they don't file new forms, said Jolene Woodlee at the Rayovac Corp. in Madison, Wis.

About half the more than 100,000 workers for 4,100 employers whose checks are prepared by Paychex Inc. of Fairfax, Va., are opting to keep taxes withheld at last year's higher rates, said spokesman Brian Toombs.

"We put out a communication a week or so ago to our employees, indicating the range of impact" if they don't file new W-4s, said Olan Jones, a payroll official at Tennessee Eastman in Kingsport, Tenn. "It's too soon to know" whether a lot of the 13,000 workers will choose to keep higher withholding.

Payroll experts say a flood of W-4s may be filed after workers receive their first March paycheck and notice the change.

The big problem, says Tom Bloch, president of H&R Block Inc. in Kansas City, will be for those workers who are unaware that the extra dollars now may have to be repaid at the end of the year.

CHECKS: Committee proposes releasing names

(From 1A)

Hansen, R-Utah.

All four committee dissenters were Republicans. The majority plan failed to pass "the smell test," one of the unhappy GOP members, Rep. Jim Bunning of Kentucky, told a news conference attended by those on both sides.

But committee acting chairman Matthew F. McHugh, D-N.Y., said the majority viewed its plan as a "compromise," which met the test of "reasonableness."

"I don't know how some of these folks slept at night," McHugh said, disclosing that 355 current or former members had written a rubber check on their House bank accounts.

The committee also decided to criticize management of the bank by House Sergeant at Arms Jack Russ, who failed to carry out reforms ordered by Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash. The committee found that Russ wrote 19 rubber checks in 1988-89.

Russ was shot in the face Sunday night as he walked his dog near his Capitol Hill home. Russ, who was released from the hospital Tuesday, told police he was accosted by three people and was shot after he was robbed.

All seven committee Democrats and three Republicans supported the majority view. Majority Democrats are expected by sheer numbers to suffer more than Republicans if all the names are released.

The committee proposal would name only repeated and routine abusers at the bank, which was closed last year because of the check scandal.

The committee would privately notify the worst abusers that they faced public disclosure so they could plead their cases before any list became public.

The members' bank, a prized perk for more than a century, didn't charge a financial penalty to lawmakers who wrote rubber checks.

It's unlikely that any House decision short of full disclosure will be the final word. Members will be under pressure from the media, political opponents and constituents to reveal how many bad checks they wrote.

The ethics committee, officially the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, has that information and members said it would be provided to any member who asked by Dec. 31.

The 24 names in the committee proposal were those who met a criteria adopted by the panel.

They wrote overdrafts totaling more than their monthly net pay at least 20 percent of the time in a 39-month period.

ground," Barnett said. "Officer Briseno saw the metal (baton) hit Mr. King in the face and when he saw the torrent of blows, he went over to Officer Powell, who was poised to hit him again and he grabbed the baton and pushed him away.

"His perception is they're out of control. He has to be mindful of his own safety."

The attorney said that explained why Briseno put his foot on King, an act the prosecution has described as stomping.

"He sees Mr. King moving and he wants Mr. King flat so Mr. King can be put into custody," Barnett said. "He wants the batons to cease."

Attorney Michael Stone, representing Powell, suggested to jurors who have seen the videotape on TV that seeing is not necessarily believing.

He showed jurors an enhanced version of the videotape and photos with transparent overlays designed to make clear what he said was King trying to attack Powell.

What is at issue, Stone said, is not what the jury sees but what the officers saw: a violent man behaving in a peculiar manner.

"It was the conclusion of every officer on the scene that they had a duster — a person under the influence of PCP," Stone said, referring to the powerful drug also known as angel dust.

White dismissed such claims. "Whatever Rodney King was or whatever he did, it did not justify what these defendants did," he said.

Drug tests conducted after the beating found no indications of illegal drug use by King.

POE: Airport position was not new, city manager says

ing plan" after the Oct. 31 departure of Marcy Blauvelt, an assistant director. She had handled some of the duties now ascribed to the economic development officer position.

Day said his plan was an attempt to save money by dividing Blauvelt's duties among others. Later, however, he said the workload had become too much, and some areas of the airport operation — including the foreign-trade zone and airline recruitment — needed additional attention.

Those are the areas Thomas reportedly will focus on in his job.

Poe's entire statement is as follows:

"The City Council has come under public criticism for the appointment of Carroll Thomas to a vacant city position. I would like to set the record straight.

"Since late October 1991 we have not had anyone to devote full time as an economic development officer. In mid-January 1992, we realized the necessity of having someone in this position to promote the development of the Foreign Trade Zone in conjunction with economic development of the Permian Basin in contacting airlines to provide needed service to Midland International Airport.

"Our policy is to advertise the job internally before opening it up to the public. Administratively, I made the decision to accept Carroll's application as an internal applicant.

"From Feb. 3 to Feb. 10, we ran internal notices for applicants for the position. On Feb. 17, Aviation Department Director Ken Day; Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor; and I interviewed four applicants, including Carroll Thomas, for the position. On Feb. 21, Ken Day announced the selection of Carroll Thomas.

"No member of the City Council sat in on the interviews nor were they involved in making the selection. Carroll Thomas was selected because of his qualifications for the job. We had three other applicants, all with good qualifications, but in the interview panel's opinion, Carroll had the most experience in the areas the job description named, and the best overall qualifications for the particular job.

"A job at this level with the city does not require council approval. Nothing below the department-head level requires their approval. At this level, the department head makes the selection with my approval.

"It has been mentioned that we have a hiring freeze on. This is a semi-freeze with the requirement that they have my approval to fill any vacancy. On the payroll of Feb. 20, we had 32 vacancies across the city with four of these being at the airport.

"A semi-freeze on hiring means we are going to leave as many jobs vacant as feasible, recognizing there are certain vacancies that need to be filled.

"No new job was created. Funds were budgeted for the position."

BASHING: Movie has nation's clowns seeing red

(From 1A)

That character, the clowns say, has nothing in common with the recent portrayals of grease-painted derelicts. The most recent example is "Shakes The Clown," an upcoming film starring comedian Bob Goldthwait as a boozing bozo with a coke-snorting pal named Binky.

"Shakes," which opens this month, has upset clowns from the Clown College in Venice, Fla., to the Clown Hall of Fame in Delevan, Wis. Goldthwait is not surprised he's upset some of red nose-white face set.

"It's pretty easy to step on somebody's toes when they're sporting size 32 longs," said Goldthwait.

Shakes is the latest in a rash of nasty clown portrayals on television and in the movies, said Barney, a member of the Stratford, Conn., chapter of Clowns of America International, a conglomeration of about 5,000 clowns.

Krusty the Clown, the pork-peddling kiddie show host on "The Simpsons," was shown in a recent episode as a heavy gambler. Homey the Clown, a recurring character on "In Living Color," is renowned for bopping his youthful audience on the head and telling them, "Homey don't play that." Pennywise was a clown who lured children to their deaths in the television miniseries "It."

"We used to be called 'Bozos,' which wasn't bad — kind of a generic name," Barney said. "But now, kids tend to be frightened, or they're all calling us 'Homey.' It's become much more difficult to perform in the '90s."

And now there's Shakes: "a chronic alcoholic who ... awakes each morning with a hangover as big as his painted-on smile," according to promotional material for the film.

"Naturally, we wish the clowns were portrayed in a better light," said Maura Nelson, public relations director for Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus. "But one portrayal of negative clowning is not going to taint us."

The head of the Ringling Bros. Clown College, Steve Smith, is no longer discussing the movie, Nelson said.

But Smith told Entertainment Weekly, "I never like to see anything that portrays this art form in a negative light. ... I do wish (Goldthwait) would wear the rubber nose with some responsibility and respect."

Goldthwait, who's taken to calling his film "The Last Temptation of Bozo," is not at all sorry about "Shakes."

"When I see clowns, I don't think, 'There's someone bringing joy into people's lives.' I think, 'There's a convicted felon. There's a guy with a past,'" Goldthwait said.

"I don't think clowns are funny. No kids think they're funny. That's why clowns are always playing hospitals — the kids can't get up and run away."

He does have one regret: not including more mime-bashing in his film. "I haven't heard from the mimes. That's the beauty of picking on them," he said.

AID: Record 13.4 million request welfare funds

are growing by about 12 percent a year. That is more than the state unemployment rate of 8.1 percent in February and four times its rate of population growth.

Gov. Pete Wilson, a Republican, is proposing that the state cut welfare payments by 10 percent. He also wants to nudge people off the rolls, cutting benefits by 15 percent after 6 months for a family with an able-bodied adult. Women having babies while receiving AFDC would not get a boost in their benefits.

"We're trying to encourage able-bodied individuals to help support their family," said Kassy Perry, a spokeswoman for the California Health and Welfare Agency.

If Wilson's plan had been adopted by the beginning of this month, the state would have saved $89 million by June 30, Ms. Perry said in a telephone interview from Sacramento.

Nationally, the cost to the federal government has risen as the recession has worn on: $13.5 billion in 1991, $15.1 billion estimated for 1992 and $15.5 billion estimated for 1993.

"We're hopeful that the trend of consecutive increases will end soon," said David Boomer, a spokesman for the Administration for Children and Families, the federal agency that oversees the program.

That depends on the state of the economy.

In Maryland and Arizona, studies by the American Public Welfare Association found that a majority of the new applicants for aid had held jobs, many within recent months. The association represents state welfare agencies, which provide about half of its money.

Twenty-five states responding to a questionnaire by the association said the sour economy was the main reason for the increased caseload.

Boomer acknowledged that the recession is having a big impact on the number of people seeking welfare, especially in the Northeast, but said there are other contributing factors.

He said some states have been aggressive in helping the needy sign up for welfare in recent years. There also has been a big increase over the last 20 years in the number of single-parent families, which are most likely to need aid, he said.

AFDC provides direct aid to the poor to help them get food, clothing and a place to live. The program is run by the states, which set eligibility requirements that include limits on income and assets and that there be children in the family denied the financial support of a parent.

Nearly 86 percent of the recipients also receive food stamps, a program also experiencing record levels of participation.

The number of families participating in AFDC averaged 3.8 million — or 10.9 million people — each month in 1989, rising to 4.7 million families — 13.4 million individuals — last December.

"We cannot ignore the structural deficiencies of AFDC itself," said Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio, chairman of the House Select Committee on Hunger. "We must look long and hard at any program that effectively discourages ambition and makes self-sufficiency an unattainable goal."

In his State of the Union address this year, President Bush said, "Welfare was never meant to be a lifestyle, it was never meant to be a habit, it was never supposed to be passed from generation to generation like a legacy. It's time to replace the assumptions of the welfare state and help reform the welfare system."

The administration proposed a 1 percent increase in spending for AFDC programs for 1993, not including $1 billion to help people train for jobs and go to work.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Be ready for sun, high 70s

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high around 75 to 80 and southwest to west winds at 15 to 20 mph and gusty. Tonight should be fair with a low around 45 to 50, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be mostly sunny and windy with a high near 80.

After an overnight low of 47, Thursday's high reached 72 compared with the record high for that date of 90 set in 1946. The record low for the date of 15 was set in 1989.

STATE

Sunshine filtered through scattered clouds across Texas on Thursday. However, showers and thunderstorms lingered in East Texas.

A weak Pacific front, or dryline, extended from west of Paris to Tyler to near Waco and then into South Texas.

Winds were from the southwest behind and from the south ahead of the line. Speeds were 10 to 20 mph with gusts to 30 in the west and 5 to 15 mph in the east.

Temperatures reached the 60s to 80s.

The forecast for North Texas was for clearing skies and higher temperatures. Increasing clouds on Saturday. High temperatures were to be 79 to 85 today and 76 to 85 Saturday. Lows tonight 52 to 62.

West Texas was expected to be mostly fair through Saturday. Highs were to be in the 70s Friday with mid-80s in the Big Bend lowlands. Highs Saturday were to be mainly in the 70s and 80s except around 90 in the Big Bend. Lows tonight from the upper 30s in the north to the lower 50s in the south.

Forecasters said South Texas would have fair to partly cloudy skies with highs in the 80s with upper 70s along the coast. Lows in the 40s to 60s.

NATION

Severe thunderstorms, accompanied by a tornado in one case, ripped across Louisiana on Thursday, dumping torrents or rain on New Orleans. Flooding worries plagued Texas, which was battered by golf ball size hail.

Winter-storm warnings or snow advisories were in effect overnight for much of the Sierra Nevada in California and Nevada.

Firece thunderstorms brewed a tornado that touched down near Forked Island, La. No injuries or damage were reported. A severe thunderstorm watch was posted over southern Louisiana and part of southeast Texas.

Hail measuring three-quarters of an inch in diameter fell at Texas City. Golf ball size hail fell near Houston.

Lower Mississippi Valley and eastern Texas residents watched rivers and creeks after rainfall during the past several days caused flooding and threats of flooding. No major flooding was reported Thursday.

A high-wind warning and a wind-chill advisory were posted over the Pribilof Islands of Alaska. Winds of 40 mph with stronger gusts could drive wind chills down to 35 degrees below zero at St. Paul and St. George islands.

At noon CST, rain and thunderstorms extended across the Gulf Coast and southern Atlantic states. Showers and thunderstorms also reached from southwest Kansas into southeast Colorado.

Rain extended from northern Kansas across the northern Plains, upper Missouri and Mississippi valleys, upper Great Lakes, lower Ohio Valley and the Tennessee Valley.

Rain also fell along the northern and central Pacific coast. Rain in the central Rockies changed to snow in the higher elevations.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at noon CST included 1.85 inches at New Orleans.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

(From 1A)

The change generally took effect March 1. But it turns out that while a lot of families might be able to use a few extra dollars a week, they prefer to let the government hold it and send it back in a lump sum early next year.

The difference in refund — or in taxes owed at filing time — is about $172 a year for a single person, $345 for a married person and $690 for a two-earner couple.

"Large numbers of our workers are having their withholding changed to nullify the effects of the reduction," said Paul Allen at Eastman Kodak headquarters in Rochester, N.Y. "We can't quantify it yet, but the payroll department tells me it's the majority" of the 39,600 employees.

A significant number of DuPont's 20,000 employees in the Wilmington, Del., area won't accept lower withholding, a spokesman said.

Hallmark Cards employs about 6,700 at its Kansas City headquarters and as many as 40 percent of them have requested that last year's higher withholding rates be retained, said spokesman Adrienne Lallo.

"But the number of new W-4s is not as prevalent in our field offices, where they probably are not as aware of the change as we are at headquarters," she said.

Other employers and tax experts agree that millions of workers aren't aware that their withholding rates dropped automatically on paychecks issued after Feb. 28.

"Memos are going out to our hourly paid workers this week and to salaried employees in mid-March indicating the possibility they may be underwithheld" if they don't file new forms, said Jolene Woodlee at the Rayovac Corp. in Madison, Wis.

About half the more than 100,000 workers for 4,100 employers whose checks are prepared by Paychex Inc. of Fairfax, Va., are opting to keep taxes withheld at last year's higher rates, said spokesman Brian Toombs.

"We put out a communication a week or so ago to our employees, indicating the range of impact" if they don't file new W-4s, said Olan Jones, a payroll official at Tennessee Eastman in Kingsport, Tenn. "It's too soon to know" whether a lot of the 13,000 workers will choose to keep higher withholding.

Payroll experts say a flood of W-4s may be filed after workers receive their first March paycheck and notice the change.

The big problem, says Tom Bloch, president of H&R Block Inc. in Kansas City, will be for those workers who are unaware that the extra dollars now may have to be repaid at the end of the year.

CHECKS: Committee proposes releasing names

(From 1A)

Hansen, R-Utah.

All four committee dissenters were Republicans. The majority plan failed to pass "the smell test," one of the unhappy GOP members, Rep. Jim Bunning of Kentucky, told a news conference attended by those on both sides.

But committee acting chairman Matthew F. McHugh, D-N.Y., said the majority viewed its plan as a "compromise," which met the test of "reasonableness."

"I don't know how some of these folks slept at night," McHugh said, disclosing that 355 current or former members had written a rubber check on their House bank accounts.

The committee also decided to criticize management of the bank by House Sergeant at Arms Jack Russ, who failed to carry out reforms ordered by Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash. The committee found that Russ wrote 19 rubber checks in 1988-89.

Russ was shot in the face Sunday night as he walked his dog near his Capitol Hill home. Russ, who was released from the hospital Tuesday, told police he was accosted by three people and was shot after he was robbed.

All seven committee Democrats and three Republicans supported the majority view. Majority Democrats are expected by sheer numbers to suffer more than Republicans if all the names are released.

The committee proposal would name only repeated and routine abusers at the bank, which was closed last year because of the check scandal.

The committee would privately notify the worst abusers that they faced public disclosure so they could plead their cases before any list became public.

The members' bank, a prized perk for more than a century, didn't charge a financial penalty to lawmakers who wrote rubber checks.

It's unlikely that any House decision short of full disclosure will be the final word. Members will be under pressure from the media, political opponents and constituents to reveal how many bad checks they wrote.

The ethics committee, officially the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, has that information and members said it would be provided to any member who asked by Dec. 31.

The 24 names in the committee proposal were those who met a criteria adopted by the panel.

They wrote overdrafts totaling more than their monthly net pay at least 20 percent of the time in a 39-month period.

TRIAL: Defendant says he tried to stop other officers

(From 1A)

ground," Barnett said. "Officer Briseno saw the metal (baton) hit Mr. King in the face and when he saw the torrent of blows, he went over to Officer Powell, who was poised to hit him again and he grabbed the baton and pushed him away.

"His perception is they're out of control. He has to be mindful of his own safety."

The attorney said that explained why Briseno put his foot on King, an act the prosecution has described as stomping.

"He sees Mr. King moving and he wants Mr. King flat so Mr. King can be put into custody," Barnett said. "He wants the batons to cease."

Attorney Michael Stone, representing Powell, suggested to jurors who have seen the videotape on TV that seeing is not necessarily believing.

He showed jurors an enhanced version of the videotape and photos with transparent overlays designed to make clear what he said was King trying to attack Powell.

What is at issue, Stone said, is not what the jury sees but what the officers saw: a violent man behaving in a peculiar manner.

"It was the conclusion of every officer on the scene that they had a duster — a person under the influence of PCP," Stone said, referring to the powerful drug also known as angel dust.

White dismissed such claims. "Whatever Rodney King was or whatever he did, it did not justify what these defendants did," he said.

Drug tests conducted after the beating found no indications of illegal drug use by King.

POE: Airport position was not new, city manager says

ing plan" after the Oct. 31 departure of Marcy Blauvelt, an assistant director. She had handled some of the duties now ascribed to the economic development officer position.

Day said his plan was an attempt to save money by dividing Blauvelt's duties among others. Later, however, he said the workload had become too much, and some areas of the airport operation — including the foreign-trade zone and airline recruitment — needed additional attention.

Those are the areas Thomas reportedly will focus on in his job.

Poe's entire statement is as follows:

"The City Council has come under public criticism for the appointment of Carroll Thomas to a vacant city position. I would like to set the record straight.

"Since late October 1991 we have not had anyone to devote full time as an economic development officer. In mid-January 1992, we realized the necessity of having someone in this position to promote the development of the Foreign Trade Zone in conjunction with economic development of the Permian Basin in contacting airlines to provide needed service to Midland International Airport.

"Our policy is to advertise the job internally before opening it up to the public. Administratively, I made the decision to accept Carroll's application as an internal applicant.

"From Feb. 3 to Feb. 10, we ran internal notices for applicants for the position. On Feb. 17, Aviation Department Director Ken Day; Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor; and I interviewed four applicants, including Carroll Thomas, for the position. On Feb. 21, Ken Day announced the selection of Carroll Thomas.

"No member of the City Council sat in on the interviews nor were they involved in making the selection. Carroll Thomas was selected because of his qualifications for the job. We had three other applicants, all with good qualifications, but in the interview panel's opinion, Carroll had the most experience in the areas the job description named, and the best overall qualifications for the particular job.

"A job at this level with the city does not require council approval. Nothing below the department-head level requires their approval. At this level, the department head makes the selection with my approval.

"It has been mentioned that we have a hiring freeze on. This is a semi-freeze with the requirement that they have my approval to fill any vacancy. On the payroll of Feb. 20, we had 32 vacancies across the city with four of these being at the airport.

"A semi-freeze on hiring means we are going to leave as many jobs vacant as feasible, recognizing there are certain vacancies that need to be filled.

"No new job was created. Funds were budgeted for the position."

BASHING: Movie has nation's clowns seeing red

(From 1A)

That character, the clowns say, has nothing in common with the recent portrayals of grease-painted derelicts. The most recent example is "Shakes The Clown," an upcoming film starring comedian Bob Goldthwait as a boozing bozo with a coke-snorting pal named Binky.

"Shakes," which opens this month, has upset clowns from the Clown College in Venice, Fla., to the Clown Hall of Fame in Delevan, Wis. Goldthwait is not surprised he's upset some of red nose-white face set.

"It's pretty easy to step on somebody's toes when they're sporting size 32 longs," said Goldthwait.

Shakes is the latest in a rash of nasty clown portrayals on television and in the movies, said Barney, a member of the Stratford, Conn., chapter of Clowns of America International, a conglomeration of about 5,000 clowns.

Krusty the Clown, the pork-peddling kiddie show host on "The Simpsons," was shown in a recent episode as a heavy gambler. Homey the Clown, a recurring character on "In Living Color," is renowned for bopping his youthful audience on the head and telling them, "Homey don't play that." Pennywise was a clown who lured children to their deaths in the television miniseries "It."

"We used to be called 'Bozos,' which wasn't bad — kind of a generic name," Barney said. "But now, kids tend to be frightened, or they're all calling us 'Homey.' It's become much more difficult to perform in the '90s."

And now there's Shakes: "a chronic alcoholic who ... awakes each morning with a hangover as big as his painted-on smile," according to promotional material for the film.

"Naturally, we wish the clowns were portrayed in a better light," said Maura Nelson, public relations director for Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus. "But one portrayal of negative clowning is not going to taint us."

The head of the Ringling Bros. Clown College, Steve Smith, is no longer discussing the movie, Nelson said.

But Smith told Entertainment Weekly, "I never like to see anything that portrays this art form in a negative light. ... I do wish (Goldthwait) would wear the rubber nose with some responsibility and respect."

Goldthwait, who's taken to calling his film "The Last Temptation of Bozo," is not at all sorry about "Shakes."

"When I see clowns, I don't think, 'There's someone bringing joy into people's lives.' I think, 'There's a convicted felon. There's a guy with a past,'" Goldthwait said.

"I don't think clowns are funny. No kids think they're funny. That's why clowns are always playing hospitals — the kids can't get up and run away."

He does have one regret: not including more mime-bashing in his film. "I haven't heard from the mimes. That's the beauty of picking on them," he said.

AID: Record 13.4 million request welfare funds

are growing by about 12 percent a year. That is more than the state unemployment rate of 8.1 percent in February and four times its rate of population growth.

Gov. Pete Wilson, a Republican, is proposing that the state cut welfare payments by 10 percent. He also wants to nudge people off the rolls, cutting benefits by 15 percent after 6 months for a family with an able-bodied adult. Women having babies while receiving AFDC would not get a boost in their benefits.

"We're trying to encourage able-bodied individuals to help support their family," said Kassy Perry, a spokeswoman for the California Health and Welfare Agency.

If Wilson's plan had been adopted by the beginning of this month, the state would have saved $89 million by June 30, Ms. Perry said in a telephone interview from Sacramento.

Nationally, the cost to the federal government has risen as the recession has worn on: $13.5 billion in 1991, $15.1 billion estimated for 1992 and $15.5 billion estimated for 1993.

"We're hopeful that the trend of consecutive increases will end soon," said David Boomer, a spokesman for the Administration for Children and Families, the federal agency that oversees the program.

That depends on the state of the economy.

In Maryland and Arizona, studies by the American Public Welfare Association found that a majority of the new applicants for aid had held jobs, many within recent months. The association represents state welfare agencies, which provide about half of its money.

Twenty-five states responding to a questionnaire by the association said the sour economy was the main reason for the increased caseload.

Boomer acknowledged that the recession is having a big impact on the number of people seeking welfare, especially in the Northeast, but said there are other contributing factors.

He said some states have been aggressive in helping the needy sign up for welfare in recent years. There also has been a big increase over the last 20 years in the number of single-parent families, which are most likely to need aid, he said.

AFDC provides direct aid to the poor to help them get food, clothing and a place to live. The program is run by the states, which set eligibility requirements that include limits on income and assets and that there be children in the family denied the financial support of a parent.

Nearly 86 percent of the recipients also receive food stamps, a program also experiencing record levels of participation.

The number of families participating in AFDC averaged 3.8 million — or 10.9 million people — each month in 1989, rising to 4.7 million families — 13.4 million individuals — last December.

"We cannot ignore the structural deficiencies of AFDC itself," said Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio, chairman of the House Select Committee on Hunger. "We must look long and hard at any program that effectively discourages ambition and makes self-sufficiency an unattainable goal."

In his State of the Union address this year, President Bush said, "Welfare was never meant to be a lifestyle, it was never meant to be a habit, it was never supposed to be passed from generation to generation like a legacy. It's time to replace the assumptions of the welfare state and help reform the welfare system."

The administration proposed a 1 percent increase in spending for AFDC programs for 1993, not including $1 billion to help people train for jobs and go to work.

Militants ignore latest cease-fire

AGDAM, Azerbaijan (AP) — Militants on Thursday ignored new calls for a cease-fire in the disputed enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh, and a prosecutor investigating a mass killing said 200 Azerbaijani bodies had been recovered.

The prosecutor also said for the first time that Armenia is holding hundreds of women and children hostage in the conflict.

Armenian and Azerbaijani sources reported overnight attacks left at least 12 dead on each side in this deeply divided region.

The deaths came despite a peace effort launched Wednesday by presidents Boris Yeltsin of Russia and Nursultan Nazarbayev of Kazakhstan.

Armenian President Levon Ter-Petrosian issued a statement welcoming the peace initiative. He asked for an emergency session of all commonwealth leaders to discuss the violence in Nagorno-Karabakh, the ITAR-Tass news agency said.

Before the massacre reports, at least 1,000 Azerbaijanis and Armenians had been killed in the fighting the past four years.

Nagorno-Karabakh, a mountainous region 1,100 miles southeast of Moscow, is populated mostly by Christian Armenians but has been controlled since 1923 by Muslim Azerbaijan.

The Azerbaijani president's office said 12 people were killed in overnight shelling by Armenians of the Azerbaijani village of Syrkhavend, 15 miles northwest of Agdam.

The independent Armenian news agency Snark said Azerbaijanis killed 16 civilians in the Armenian village of Kazanchi, also near Agdam.

There was no way to independently verify either report.

The disputed region's border is three miles west of Agdam, and fighting was moving closer to the city. Six tanks and an armored personnel carrier rolled out of Agdam toward Kazanchi, but no one would say what their mission was.

In the Azerbaijan capital, Baku, Parliament met in emergency session and President Ayaz Mutalibov said the main task was to strengthen the country's borders and form a well-equipped regular army, the Azeriform-Tass news agency reported.

That was a direct rejection of Nazarbayev's peace proposal Wednesday, which urged a moratorium on forming such armies by members of the Commonwealth of Independent States.

According to Azerbaijani radio, monitored in London, Mutalibov also said that "our lands and towns, which have been occupied by brigands, must be liberated."

Mutalibov said Azerbaijan's setbacks in Nagorno-Karabakh were due to a "rapprochement between Russia and Armenia on the basis of common strategic interests," according to Turan news agency.

Azerbaijan earlier accused the Russian-led commonwealth troops of participating with Armenian forces in the massacre in the Nagorno-Karabakh town of Khodzhaly. A commonwealth military spokesman denied the charge.

Outside Parliament in Baku, thousands of people drawn to a rally by the opposition Popular Front of Azerbaijan shouted for the resignation of the government leadership and a demilitarized zone in Nagorno-Karabakh. About 200,000 people reside in Nagorno-Karabakh.

Azerbaijan asked the United Nations Thursday to help resolve the dispute. In his letter to Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, Foreign Minister Gusain Sadykhov did not specify what action the United Nations should take.

Adil Agayev, the prosecutor leading an investigation into the killing of Azerbaijani civilians by Armenians in Khodzhaly, said Thursday that 200 bodies had been recovered from the hills and forests around the Azerbaijani town.

Many bodies cannot be retrieved because of snipers, Azerbaijani officials say.

Arab network beams news programming, not Madonna

LONDON (AP) — Taped readings from the Koran are beamed by satellite from a former spaghetti factory in the British capital across the Arab world. They are a call not to prayer but to the programs of the first all-Arabic television network.

The Middle East Broadcasting Center, or MBC, went on the air in September. It was launched amid high drama the night President Bush announced he had decided to send bomber planes to Saudi Arabia and other Persian Gulf states, with a threat of renewed hostilities against Iraq.

Aimed at one of the world's most quarrelsome regions, the young station backed by Saudi investors hopes to be "a catalyst for understanding," said the head of news, Stephen Marney.

"We stay away from toeing any particular line. We don't want to influence anybody one way or the other politically," Marney said.

To show its openness, MBC ran an interview with Israel's deputy minister, Benjamin Netanyahu.

Arab traditionalists may rumble about items like this and about the station's unveiled female news readers but, said Marney, most of his viewers accept these are the ways of the Western world.

Its glossy Western format hopes to provide a global view, an alternative to the dry, heavily censored output of the Middle East's state-run television stations, Marney said.

The idea was proposed four years ago "by a savvy group of (Saudi Arabian) business people," he said.

"We are liberals and we want to open up links in the Arab world, including trade links," says Dr. Abdallah H. Masry, a partner in the $300 million venture. "We also want to provide a link between (dispersed) Arabs and their homelands."

He denied charges that the station pushes liberal Saudi Arabian views.

"We give all Arab countries equal opportunity to celebrate their national events on television; we follow them doggedly to produce programs for us. This holds true for Yemen and Tunis as well as Syria and Iraq."

However, Saudi sources said MBC was banned in Saudi Arabia about six weeks ago because the network used bare-headed, fair-skinned female announcers.

No official explanation was immediately available for the ban though King Fahd gave MBC its first interview with an Arab leader, widely seen as a boost to the network.

Between news bulletins, the station runs upbeat features on Parisian haute couture, Hollywood films and travel to exotic climes, said executive producer of features, Margaret Sawdon.

"Because most of our audience is Muslim, we have to keep their sensibilities in mind," she says. "Alcohol is banned in many places so we wouldn't show boozy scenes. British television wouldn't show kids sniffing glue."

Some pop videos are out "because they are sexually provocative," she says.

"Obviously that rules out much of Madonna."

Gunman rings doorbell before killing victims

LUGANO, Switzerland (AP) — A gunman stalked through three villages in southern Switzerland, shooting residents as they answered the doorbell. Six people were killed in one of the worst mass murders in Swiss history.

Toting a semi-automatic rifle, the 37-year-old gunman burst in on one family as it ate dinner and shot other victims on their doorsteps during the two-hour spree Wednesday evening, police said.

The gunman surrendered in tears after the rampage in the villages of Rivera, Origlio and Massagno, which left six people wounded, some seriously.

The bloodshed marked the third time in as many years that this normally placid country has been rocked by a multiple slaying.

Critics have blamed gun laws so varied that in some areas submachine guns can be bought without a permit.

Lawmakers — under pressure from neighboring European countries and worried about increasing crime at home — are working on a bill that would give federal authorities the power to propose comprehensive gun laws for the first time.

Police said they had no idea what motivated Wednesday's killings and would not say if the gunman, Erminio Criscione, knew his victims. They said he lived in the Swiss canton (state) of Ticino, near the Italian border.

But villagers said he had worked in the butcher shop in Rivera about 13 years ago and had contacts with the people he shot. The six people killed were from two families in Rivera.

"We're numb with shock," said the manager of the Alpe Foppa restaurant in Rivera. "We all knew each other. My son used to go skiing with one of the men who died," she said on condition of anonymity.

Police said Criscione gave himself up without a struggle at a road blockade at about 9 p.m. He was crying as he stepped out of car, according to a police spokesman.

He began the rampage at about 7 p.m. by ringing the doorbell of an apartment in Origlio, then shooting in the foot the man who answered the door, police said.

He then drove to the Rivera near this picturesque southern Swiss town, and burst in on the family of Paolo Balerna, 35, as they ate dinner.

Villagers said Criscione used to rent an apartment from the family.

Balerna, his mother and step-father were shot to death and Balerna's wife and 5-year-old daughter were seriously injured. Two other family members were slightly wounded, while Balerna's 7-year-old daughter escaped.

Police said Criscione then went to a second home in Rivera, killing Dario Salco, 66, and his wife and severely wounding their 23-year-old son, who died later from his injuries.

Finally, he went to Massagno, where he rang the bell of an apartment and opened fire on a woman who answered, police said. She was badly wounded.

"I saw police cars and about seven ambulances race through the village but didn't know what was happening," one Massagno resident said. "Then we were told some madman was going around shooting," she said, her voice trembling.

Under Switzerland's decentralized government system, gun controls vary tremendously from canton to canton. Many cantons allow anyone, including foreigners, to buy submachine guns without a permit.

In May, a 42-year-old businessman killed all five members of his family before shooting himself in an Alpine chalet.

In August 1990, a jeweller ran amok, shooting five people and then killing himself. He left a recorded message blaming financial difficulties and a "hatred of banks."

Security chief admits killing 50 people, paper says

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A university security chief says he murdered at least 50 people for the school's director, who paid him $200 each for bodies to supply the medical school, according to news reports Thursday.

Fourteen guards at the Free University of Barranquilla, including security chief Pedro Viloria, have been arrested.

Accustomed as the nation is to decades of guerrilla war, drug war, political assassination and right-wing death squads, reports about the murder-for-medicine ring this week have shocked Colombia.

Pedro Viloria attempted suicide by swallowing insecticide after police found 11 bodies and the remains of 12 more in the university morgue on Sunday.

The Barranquilla newspaper El Heraldo quoted Viloria as saying from his hospital bed:

"I have clubbed some 50 people, but I received orders from the director of the university. I'm not the only guilty party."

"I wanted to kill myself because now they are going to blame me for everything," Viloria said.

University director Jose Ramon Navarro issued a statement Monday insisting that all cadavers used by the medical faculty were legally purchased at the Barranquilla Legal Medical Institute.

The medical institute denied that claim. Health ministry offical Luis Eduardo Gomez said none of the bodies had been purchased legally for use in science.

The Free University remained closed as police looked for more bodies.

Most of the victims at the morgue have been identified as poor people who earned their living collecting trash from the streets of Barranquilla, a Carribbean city of 1 million residents.

Police learned about the murders from street scavenger Oscar Hernandez, who was lured to the university Saturday night by security guards who asked him to collect a cardboard carton. Once there, two men began beating him with clubs, Hernandez told Bogota's El Tiempo newspaper.

The men, evidentally assuming Hernandez was dead, placed him in a tub of formaldehyde, from which he escaped early Sunday morning, the paper said.

Burma's junta moves to crush rebellion

Editor's note: The writer recently traveled to both the Burma-Bangladesh border and inside Burma with beleaguered Karen guerrillas.

By Denis D. Gray
Associated Press Writer

MANERPLAW, Burma — Burma's military junta has mounted a brutal campaign of unprecedented scale to crush one of the world's longest rebellions, say experts and victims of the fighting.

The fighting pits Rangoon's 300,000-strong forces against about 30 rebel organizations variously seeking greater autonomy for Burma's ethnic minorities and an end to decades of harsh military rule.

Waged in a country largely shut off from the rest of the world, some of the rebellions date to the late 1940s, when several ethnic groups felt betrayed by a central government that had promised them some degree of autonomy.

In recent months, the government offensives have inflamed Burma's borders with three neighboring countries, sparked large refugee flights and drawn sharp criticism from human rights organizations over alleged atrocities by the military.

On Thursday, Burmese forces shelled a camp of the Karen rebels near the Thai border, but for the third straight day Thai patrols retaliated with warning shots after some rounds struck a Thai village.

"This is the crucial year in the war," said Burma scholar Josef Silverstein, a professor at Rutgers University. "This is an all-out campaign to win some kind of victory."

If the army fails to deliver a decisive blow, he said in a telephone interview, it could be forced to negotiate with the rebels, or there could be an uprising by hard-pressed field commanders against their widely detested Rangoon leaders.

An estimated 35 percent of the population in large areas of the country is up in arms against a government that drains the resources of potentially one of Asia's richest nations to continue the fighting. Tens of thousands of people have been killed.

Students, Buddhist monks and some politicians have joined the guerrillas. Many fled to the country's interior after the military crushed a pro-democracy uprising in 1988.

Burma's leading pro-democracy activist, Aung San Suu Kyi, has been under house arrest since July 1989. She won the 1991 Nobel Peace Prize, an honor the government has refused to acknowledge.

With several months left in the dry season, when the Burmese military can operate in the generally rugged, insurgent-held terrain, the final outcome is still uncertain.

Using revenue from selling of oil, lumber and fishing concessions to foreigners, the military has stocked its arsenal with new weapons, most of them from China.

Jet fighters, naval patrol boats, tanks and other weaponry worth up to $1.4 billion began flowing in in late 1990 from Beijing.

Currently, several Burmese divisions are locked in bloody combat with the Karen National Union, one of the strongest of the rebel groups.

The military has taken aim at the rebels' headquarters, the town of Manerplaw on the border with Thailand.

The fall of Manerplaw would be a major blow to the general anti-Rangoon cause. The extensive jungle camp serves as a stronghold not only for the Karens but for political dissidents who have declared a "parallel government."

Meanwhile, about 500 miles to the northwest, Rangoon has moved as many as 90,000 troops to the Bangladesh border, saying it is trying to suppress several Muslim and other insurgent groups in Burma's frontier Arakan State.

Fighting also has erupted in recent weeks between the Burmese army and Naga tribes living in mountains along the remote Indian frontier.

Several thousand Karen have recently sought safe haven in Thailand, adding to the more than 60,000 other ethnic minority refugees in the country. The Nagas are reportedly fleeing into India; some 30,000 Kachin refugees remain in China, and in the most dramatic exodus more than 100,000 Muslims have streamed into Bangladesh.

U.S. pledges expansion of aid to Vietnam

BANGKOK, Thailand (NYT) — The United States pledged Thursday to expand its humanitarian aid to Vietnam in exchange for additional cooperation from Hanoi in resolving the fate of Americans missing from the Vietnam War.

At the same time, the United States said it was still not prepared to lift a 17-year-old trade embargo that has crippled the Vietnamese economy and angered American investors wanting to do business there.

The aid package was announced in Hanoi by Assistant Secretary of State Richard H. Solomon, the highest-ranking American diplomat to visit Vietnam in six years. Other diplomats said the aid package would provide Vietnam with at least $3 million a year in American assistance.

Solomon's trip to Vietnam came amid speculation, both in Washington and Hanoi, that the Bush administration would restore diplomatic relations with Vietnam shortly after the presidential election.

According to a dispatch from Reuters in Hanoi, Solomon quashed that speculation, saying at a news conference Thursday that the administration did not envision full diplomatic relations with Vietnam until the spring of 1993, when free elections are expected in neighboring Cambodia.

The United States is trying to keep Vietnam from meddling in the elections or in other elements of the United Nations-brokered peace process in Cambodia.

Solomon's Vietnamese counterpart in this week's talks, Deputy Foreign Minister Le Mai, was quoted as saying at the same Hanoi news conference that while the talks had been constructive, the trade embargo was a "hostile policy" against Vietnam. "We think the trade embargo is an abnormal thing in relations between nations," he said.

Diplomats said that under Thursday's agreement, American aid would be channeled to educational and medical programs in Vietnam.

In return, they said, the Vietnamese government has agreed to allow American investigators to travel on short notice to areas of Vietnam where there are reported sightings of missing Americans.

Hanoi said Thursday that it would also allow Defense Department investigators greater access to Vietnamese military archives, long a sticking point between the two nations.

During his trip to Hanoi this week, Solomon met with Prime Minister Vo Van Kiet and Foreign Minister Nguyen Manh Cam and, according to American diplomats, emphasized that the United States would stick to its year-old "road map" for normalizing relations.

Under the road map, the United States will withhold diplomatic relations and maintain the trade embargo unless Vietnam steps up assistance in determining the fate of missing Americans and works to insure that the peace process goes forward in Cambodia.

Last year, Washington resumed formal aid to Vietnam for the first time since the war with $1.3 million for programs to provide artificial limbs to Vietnamese soldiers and civilians.

In December, the United States lifted travel restrictions for Americans wanting to visit Vietnam, a move that could be worth millions of dollars a year to the Vietnamese tourism industry.

In the first meeting of the United States, Vietnam and Cambodia on the issue of the 2,267 Americans missing in Indochina, technical specialists are expected to meet Friday and Saturday in Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital, to discuss joint procedures to resolve the cases.

Clinton leads in most Super Tuesday states, polls show

Kerry departs race with style

WASHINGTON (AP) — On paper, Bob Kerrey was perfect presidential material. But in person, he often fell short.

The Nebraska senator ended his Democratic candidacy Thursday with wit and warmth that he didn't always show on the campaign trail, and with bottom-line honesty that did come through — often to his detriment.

Kerrey's credentials were unsurpassed: Vietnam Medal of Honor, self-made millionaire businessman, former governor, slayer of two Republican incumbents in a conservative state, former boyfriend of actress Debra Winger.

But the magic that worked in Nebraska was missing in his first national campaign. Kerrey admitted as much at a wistful and sometimes emotional news conference as he abandoned the race.

"A campaign depends upon the ... candidate's capacity to communicate and to establish trust," Kerrey said, "and I did not begin to do that until very late in the campaign."

Kerrey won a big victory Feb. 25 in South Dakota, but never translated his assets into widespread appeal outside his own region. He consistently finished at or near the bottom of the pack — and was the only Democrat without a first-place finish in any of the seven states that held primaries or caucuses earlier this week.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Polling in Super Tuesday primary states shows Gov. Bill Clinton in a tight race with former Sen. Paul Tsongas in Florida but leading him 3-1 among the more traditional southern voters of Tennessee.

President Bush, fighting a challenge from Patrick Buchanan, has support from roughly seven in 10 likely Republican voters in Florida, Tennessee and Oklahoma, according to polls taken last Friday through Sunday for newspapers and television stations by Mason-Dixon Political-Media Research.

Southern states dominate Tuesday's showdown, which also includes primaries in Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas and Massachusetts. In addition, Democratic caucuses are taking place in Delaware, Hawaii and Missouri.

In delegate-rich Florida, Clinton led 27 percent to 21 percent for Tsongas. Former Gov. Jerry Brown of California ran third with 8 percent. Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska, who dropped out Thursday, had 7 percent and Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa 3 percent.

But the Florida poll had three distinct drawbacks as an indicator of Tuesday's possible results. It was taken more than a week before the vote, a third of the 382 likely Democratic voters polled remained undecided and the margin of sampling error was plus or minus 5 percentage points.

Also in Florida, Bush led Buchanan 68 percent to 19 percent, with 13 percent undecided among 294 likely Republican primary voters. Since Bush and his record are well-known, analysts say the conservative columnist has the best chance to reap the bulk of the undecided votes.

In contrast to other southern states, Florida has higher percentages of voters who are white, Jewish, Catholic and over the age of 60. Exit polls by ABC News found 31 percent of Florida Democratic primary voters in 1988 had family incomes over $40,000, compared with 22 percent in Tennessee.

Tsongas, who runs best among the high-income voters, trailed Clinton 49 percent to 16 percent in the Mason-Dixon poll in Tennessee. Brown and Kerrey had 5 percent each, Harkin 2 percent, with 23 percent undecided.

Only 5 percent of Tennessee Republicans were undecided. Bush led with 74 percent, Buchanan had 17 percent and David Duke 4 percent.

Clinton polled only 45 percent in Oklahoma, even though Tsongas did not qualify for the ballot there. The second choice was "undecided" with 35 percent and Kerrey was third with 10 percent.

Adding Tsongas to voters' choices, the poll found he got 21 percent and the undecideds went down to 28 percent, still a formidable sign of volatility.

Perot enters Tenn. primary

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Petitions to qualify Dallas billionaire Ross Perot as an independent candidate for president were filed Thursday with the Tennessee Secretary of State.

If the 275 signatures — 25 for each of 11 electors — are found valid, Tennessee would be the first state in the nation to list Perot, 61, as a candidate in the November general election.

"We're going to see if it works. There will be no central effort in this thing. It either comes from the heart, the grass roots, or it doesn't come," Perot told the Nashville Banner.

He said he agreed to run only if a grassroots effort puts him on the ballot in all 50 states.

A spokesman for Election Coordinator Will Burns said it will take about a week to verify that each of the electors is a registered voter.

Perot is now chairman of Perot Systems Corporation, a computer services company based in Washington, D.C.

"Tennessee has been the first to kick the ball in. Now let's see what happens in the 49 other states," he said.

A Nashville real estate executive, Steve Fridrich, filed the petitions Thursday. He said volunteers are working on Perot's behalf in 44 states.

Thomas 'right;' process lacking

Midland City Council and, particularly, Mayor Carroll Thomas have become embroiled in a controversy since Thomas recently applied for and was accepted to head a new position promoting economic development.

This is no "tempest in a teapot," but rather a miscalculation that calls into question the way in which city appointments are handled. Another recent miscue on the part of the City Council had numerous Midlanders concerned when Bill Morrow was selected to fill a seat vacated by at-large member John Castro. The concern was not that Morrow was not a good choice (there is general agreement that he will do an excellent job), but that he was chosen seemingly at the last minute and others recommended for the position were not even given the consideration of being interviewed by the council.

On the Thomas selection, we have no qualms with his qualifications for the economic development position or with the need for serving in such a position. Many Midlanders recognize the importance of Midland International Airport to the city's further growth. Thomas has served the city well in the past, both as a city councilman and as mayor. He has good contacts at the state as well as national levels of government and "knows his way around" Austin and Washington, D.C. He will bring the important elements of leadership and political savvy to the position.

In fact, the economic development position could well be the most important in the city's future, and with that in mind Midlanders would surely want the best qualified individual in that capacity. The duties in relation to economic development formerly fell to Marcy Blauvelt, who served as assistant director of airports here before moving to Denver, Colo., in late 1991. Ms. Blauvelt's duties also encompassed other matters, but Thomas' job will be strictly economic development.

Thomas' past service for the city shows him to be qualified and experienced. He is a good choice for the job.

If the city can be faulted in this move, it is in the area of discontinuing the economic development position in the first place, dividing the responsibilities of the position between three other city administrative officials, dividing and distributing an $8,000 pay increase among them and then deciding the post was needed and hiring Thomas, although the job was only advertised among city "employees." Those outside city government in Midland weren't given the chance to apply.

In that regard, the City Council appeared to be proceeding in a manner that was in conflict with the course of good, open government.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, March 6, the 66th day of 1992. There are 300 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 6, 1836, the Alamo in San Antonio fell to Mexican forces after a 13-day siege. All 187 defenders of the mission compound — including Davy Crockett and James Bowie — were killed.

On this date:

In 1806, poet Elizabeth Barrett Browning was born in Durham, England.

In 1834, the city of York in Upper Canada was incorporated as Toronto.

In 1857, in its Dred Scott decision, the U.S. Supreme Court held that Scott, a slave, could not sue for his freedom in a federal court.

In 1933, a nationwide bank holiday declared by President Franklin D. Roosevelt went into effect.

In 1935, retired Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. died in Washington.

In 1944, U.S. bombers staged a daylight raid against Berlin during the World War II.

In 1957, the former British African colonies of the Gold Coast and Togoland became the independent state of Ghana.

In 1967, 25 years ago, the daughter of Josef Stalin, Svetlana Alliluyeva, appeared at the U.S. embassy in India and announced her intention to defect to the West.

In 1981, Walter Cronkite signed off for the last time as principal anchorman of "The CBS Evening News" after 19 years on the job.

In 1983, in a case that drew much notoriety, a woman in New Bedford, Mass., reported that she had been gang-raped atop a pool table in a tavern called Big Dan's.

In 1985, authorities in Mexico found the body of kidnapped U.S. drug agent Enrique Camarena Salazar and a Mexican pilot at a ranch east of Guadalajara.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Anybody besides Painter

Most of those who support Gary Painter do so because they believe in law and order. If they studied all the facts, they might decide that Painter is a threat to law and order.

Consider a hypothetical drug dealer. Of course, he would know other drug dealers and something about their comings and goings. If he wants to make some easy extra cash, he just calls Capt. McKinney and tells him where to make a bust. He knows that Capt. McKinney will give him 25 percent of the money confiscated, right off the top, no questions asked. The seized drugs go into the sheriff's warehouse. Then they are stolen.

This is not fiction. The Midland County Sheriff's Department has paid $300,000 cash to informants! These people are playing both sides of the line! And Gary Painter keeps talking about how much money he has made for the county. Sure enough, he has — by dealing with the devil.

Forget about the county line. Forget about "Bro" Seltzer. "Entrepreneurial law enforcement," embraced so enthusiastically by Gary Painter and Capt. McKinney, is a terrible idea. Gary Painter's former boss, Rick Thompson, is in jail for dealing cocaine. His former lawyer, Hal Upchurch, and informant, Ron Tucker, are under indictment for mishandling forfeited cash. The federal grand jury has been held over; look for more indictments in coming months.

Let's vote for law and order in Midland County. Retire Gary Painter.

Richard D. Bowdon

Painter does a good job

We have lived in Midland County since 1948 and I want to say first of all, we love this town. We have have seen our children and grandchildren grow up here, go to school, marry and begin their lives here. So none of us are new to the politics in Midland.

We are county residents, so therefore we know the value of having a good, dependable sheriff's department. We have seen sheriffs come and go. I can truly say I believe Gary Painter is the only one who has ever been interested in the needs of the people in Midland County.

At anytime day or night when we have called them, they are always here within five minutes. The officers are always respectful and concerned over our needs. We support our sheriff 100 percent. His sting operations have done more to eliminate drugs in Midland County than anything we have seen.

As far as housecleaning in Midland, we need to hit the county commissioners, city council and "Bro" Seltzer. The only thing I have seen from these areas is a lot of our tax dollars spent on their salaries and nothing put out in return.

Instead of trying to slow Gary Painter's job down and the good work he has done for this county, if Seltzer is really interested in the welfare of Midland County he should start working with Painter instead of against him.

I say let's vote all those people out who draw those checks each month for doing nothing. We would be lots better off without those people at all.

Gideon's skills in question

By writing this letter, I realize I will also be tagged as "sour grapes" as was Dallas Smith by republican candidate for sheriff, Wayne Gideon, but let the voters decide. In his news conference, Smith brought out documented instances of Wayne's qualifications as a manager. I would like to add a couple more.

Consider a situation when as chief of police, Gideon failed to advise personnel in his department about a city council change in the retirement-vesting requirement, from 20 years to 10 years ("City officials commit 'sin of omission'," Midland Reporter-Telegram, Aug. 16, 1981). This example of management technique cost several resigning officers a minimum of $30,000 plus any retirement benefits. Wayne just forgot to pass on the information.

Consider the incident involving a then-police officer with his department, who was accused of molesting a teenage couple he found parking, and the attempted coverup of the incident by his department. The incident was ultimately confirmed through a second investigation by an outside agency. The officer was charged with criminal offense and left the department. This incident can also be documented. Is this a manager you want for your sheriff's department?

I spent 16 years in the Midland Police Department, and under the 10-year tenure of Wayne Gideon saw this once highly respected agency become a mockery.

I respect other citizens who have brought some of the examples of management background of Gideon to the public's attention. Before casting your vote, check into the incidents cited. Ask an ex-officer, who worked for Gideon, what he thinks. Then make your decision. Midland County's future depends on your decision.

Painter lost the lawsuit

I am sure that most of the people in Midland are as tired as I am of hearing about the problems in the sheriff's office.

The commissioners court ordered the sheriff to stay in Midland County. The sheriff filed a lawsuit saying this order was illegal. The judge upheld this order. The commissioners court won.

Now Gary Painter is saying that he won the lawsuit and this is simply not true.

Immediately after the trial, Painter's attorney said that they would probably appeal the lawsuit. Why would you want to appeal if you had won?

It is time to bring this controversy to an end and this can be done my electing a new sheriff. I believe the man to elect is Reuben Richardson.

Bruner should be judge

We want the best qualified candidate to be elected district court judge. Tom Bruner has our vote because he is a fair and honest person.

Personally, we know that he has handled a variety of legal cases involving complex business matters. We feel confident that he would exercise good judgment and intelligently handle any issue coming before the 142nd District Court.

Tom Bruner is a giving, unselfish person who has served the Midland area in many worthwhile organizations, including Midland Senior Services, United Way and Junior Achievement. He currently serves on the board of directors of the Midland Downtown Kiwanis Club, Hospice of Midland, and the Midland Memorial Hospital.

It is time for a change

So Commissioner Wright cries foul! Longtime Precinct 1 County Commissioner Durwood Wright "doth protest too much" while attempting to lay a smokescreen to obscure the facts, aided and abetted by the county deputy treasurer in her fact-twisting letter Friday (letters, Feb. 28). Could it be "insurance" for appointment to the treasurer's office due to be vacated soon?

Commissioner Wright charged his opponent, Henry Goulet, with false figures about the pay raises they have voted themselves over the last several years.

Let's see him or the deputy county treasurer deny:

Fact 1: $40 per month voted May 1, 1988;
Fact 2: $63 per month voted Jan. 1, 1989;
c. Fact 3: $100 per month voted Jan. 1, 1991.

During 31 months the commissioners voted themselves annual pay raises totaling $2,436, while all other county workers only received a one-time $40 monthly raise. Commissioner Wright still claims that he only received a $1,200 raise. Even that incorrect sum is of small comfort to the other county workers with only a 2 percent (plus $25) raise!

We can, perhaps, excuse Commissioner Wright for inaccuracies in his personal finances. After all, 24 years incumbency is a VERY long time. Can we, however, excuse his inept handling of county business at taxpayers' expense?

Long tenure breeds familiarity and familiarity breeds contempt — contempt for every Precinct 1 voter.

Would Commissioner Wright like to discuss his use of expense money — or the impact of pay raises on his county retirement pension?

Has ANY other Midlander voted himself a $2,400 a year raise?

We are appalled at the taxes that Commissioner Wright takes from our pockets.

"Commissioner" Henry Goulet's first action is to roll back just the commissioners' pay raises. If the other commissioners refuse, he has promised to donate $2,436 a year to Midland Drug and Crime Prevention programs.

Elect Henry Goulet county commissioner of Precinct 1.

Price of law increases

Sheriff Painter has been criticized because his budget has increased since he took office. Whomever was sheriff in these years would certainly have had to increase his budget. Why? Because of the building of the new jail, its operations, and the fact that bunk space has more than tripled!

In 1985 the county commissioners and the city spent $121,468 on a site two and a half miles from Midland in anticipation of a $9.9 million jail being built on that site without voter approval. The Committee of Concerned Voters petitioned for an election and the taxpayers finally were given the opportunity to decide. They decided "no!" Instead, it was decided to renovate the old jail.

In 1988 taxpayers voted to build a new jail at a third of the cost of the previous proposal. It passed. Claims were made prior to the election by the commissioners that so far have not proven true. Commissioner Scott Welch challenged the commissioners court to back such claims. He said, "I, along with others who voted in the election, will be anxiously awaiting to see if the claims made in the last few weeks will develop as promised."

We were told that the jail would operate at virtually no cost to the taxpayers because of the plan to house federal prisoners. Thanks to the Texas Department of Corrections that hasn't happened — it is costing us. They predicted that it would solve our jail problems through the year 2000. We were told recently that we may need to add on soon to the jail. We were told that the tax bill per average Midland household would be $5.50 the first year and 50-cents in following years. It seems instead taxes have gone up.

The jail comprises 60 percent of the sheriff's budget. The building of the jail was supported at the time by people presently on the commissioners court — including the county judge. Why is the sheriff's office budget such an issue when it is clearly because of the jail that the budget has grown to its present size? The very people who are blaming the sheriff for his increased budget are on record as being in total support of the primary reason for that increase!

Devenport makes sense

As a longtime resident of Midland, I would like to speak out on the issue that faces all of us as taxpayers in Midland. I have lived through both economic good and bad times, and these are economic demanding times.

James Devenport's recommendation of a collection contract, concurrent with the present assessor contract with the Midland Central Appraisal District, not only would exemplify sound business judgement but would eliminate the necessity for costly duplication of records. The Midland County Taxpayers would enjoy over $100,000 cost savings and less confusion by receiving only one statement for all ad valorem taxes.

Let's bring efficient, cost-conscious service to Midland County.

Support Pat Buchanan

If you are dissatisfied with a president who:

- Takes us to war with three third-rate powers with the attendant loss of American lives and many more civilian lives to dispel his myth of being a WIMP.
- And if you are dissatisfied with a president who still lives Desert Storm, even though he left the ruler intact; the ruler who he compared to Hitler and,
- If you are dissatisfied with a president who blames everything wrong with this country on Congress, and
- If you are dissatisfied with a president who has absolutely no domestic policy and did not even know that this country was in a recession until he was told this by an aide,

Then you now have a choice. A vote for Patrick Buchanan will end such foolishness as now exists with our present president.

Teachers show they care

In recognition of Teacher Appreciation Week, March 2-6, I would like to express my appreciation for the teachers at Bush and Fannin Elementary Schools. These are the schools with whom I am associated and I know the teachers there to be the finest, most caring professionals who go the extra mile not only to teach but to nurture the students they work with.

They spend many hours beyond the school day working on committees, reviewing educational materials, talking with parents, and renewing their commitment as teachers. I wish that every parent could spend a day with a teacher and observe the myriad duties they perform. Teachers do not work on assembly lines or with machinery. We deal with humans and the human condition.

Please take time to support and thank a teacher this week.

Thank you again, Midland

Thank you Midland, once again, for the friendly and hospitable reception given to the members of Cast D of the UP WITH PEOPLE traveling group.

As always the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Big 2 and the Arts Assembly of Midland take great pride in being able to sponsor and present to you for your family enjoyment RHYTHM OF THE WORLD.

The way that our host families respond every two years to this special event is outstanding. And the media sponsors outdid themselves, and for that we are very grateful. Our Hispanic chamber office has been headquarters for these young people for the past six years and we are always amazed at the enthusiasm and charisma that they display. The host families, especially those of you that host the advance team for three to four weeks in your homes, are wonderful. God Bless You.

The rest of the host families and businesses that provide them with food or drinks or in-kind services, such as the use of a rental car at no charge and over 40 dozen donuts, just shows what a team of goodwill ambassadors our Midland citizens are.

We are looking forward to sponsoring the UP WITH PEOPLE once again in the year 1994; don't miss out on the beautiful exchange of the many cultures these young men and women bring to our city.

Plan asks consumers to pay for telephone taps access

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration wants you to pay a little more for telephone service to make it easier for the FBI or local police to listen in on the conversations of suspected criminals.

The Justice Department is circulating a proposal in Congress that would force telephone companies to install state-of-the-art technology to accommodate official wiretaps. And it would authorize the Federal Communications Commission to grant telephone companies rate increases to defray the cost.

A copy of the draft legislation was obtained by The Associated Press.

Attorney General William P. Barr discussed the proposal last week with Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, which oversees the FCC, according to congressional sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Justice Department spokesman Paul McNulty refused to comment on the proposal.

The bill was drafted by the FBI and the Justice Department in response to dramatic changes in telephone technology that make it difficult for traditional wiretapping methods to pick up conversations between two parties on a telephone line.

The Justice Department's draft proposal states that the widespread use of digital transmission, fiber optics and other technologies "make it increasingly difficult for government agencies to implement lawful orders or authorizations to intercept communications in order to enforce the laws and protect the national security."

The FBI has already asked Congress for $26.6 million in its 1993 fiscal year budget to help finance a five-year research effort to help keep pace with the changes in telephone technology.

With the new technology that is being installed nationwide, police can no longer go to a telephone switching center and put wiretap equipments on a designated lines.

The advent of so-called digital transmission means that conversations are broken into bits of information and sent over phone lines and put back together at the other end of the wire.

The bill would give the FCC 180 days to devise rules and standards for telephone companies to give law enforcement agencies access to conversations for court-ordered wiretapping.

The attorney general would be empowered to require that part of the rulemaking proceedings would be closed to the public, to protect the security of eavesdropping techniques used by law enforcement.

Phone companies would have 180 days to make the necessary changes once the FCC issues the regulations.

The bill would prohibit telephone companies and private exchanges from using equipment that doesn't comply with the new FCC technology standards.

Hepatitis A increases among gays, officials say

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal health officials Thursday reported outbreaks of hepatitis A among homosexual men, who have not historically been at high risk for the viral liver disease.

Researchers with the U.S. Centers for Disease Control said they fear the outbreaks in several cities could signal a resurgence of unsafe sex, a decade after concern over AIDS prompted changes in sexual behavior.

Hepatitis A typically enters the body orally, through lapses in hygiene that result in contact with fecal matter, such as in day-care centers or homes with children in diapers. But some forms of anal sex also could cause similar contamination, the CDC said.

From 1982 to 1989, fewer than 10 percent of hepatitis A cases occurred in homosexuals, the CDC said.

But in the first half of 1991, 115 cases of hepatitis A were reported in two heavily gay neighborhoods in New York's Manhattan. Only 17 cases were reported over the span there a year earlier, the CDC said.

In Denver, 24 cases of hepatitis A were reported among gay or bisexual men in the first half of last year, up from the typical incidence of zero to three cases.

And in San Francisco, the percentage of cases among gay or bisexual men rose by 10 percentage points in a year, although the numbers were higher to start with: 186, or 78 percent of male hepatitis A patients in the first 11 months of '91 identified themselves as gay or bisexual, compared with 64 of 94, or 68 percent, of male patients interviewed a year earlier.

The outbreaks "indicate a substantial shift in the ... risk factors for hepatitis A in several cities throughout the world," the CDC said, adding that outbreaks in gay men occurred last year in Toronto, Montreal and the Melbourne and Sydney areas of Australia.

There is no treatment for either form of viral hepatitis, which can cause fever, lethargy and pain.

California studies smog trading idea

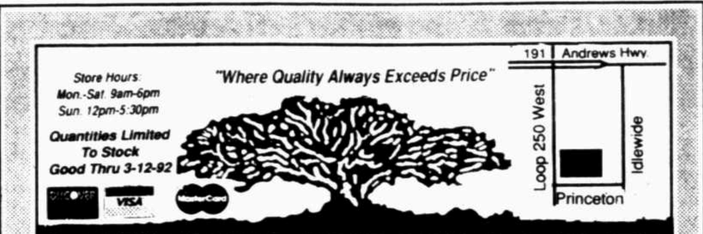

DIAMOND BAR, Calif. (AP) — Regulators in charge of cleaning Southern California's air gave consideration Thursday to opening a "smog exchange" in which dirty companies could buy pollution credits from cleaner ones.

The Air Quality Management District held a hearing to decide whether to order its staff members to spend a year designing the program.

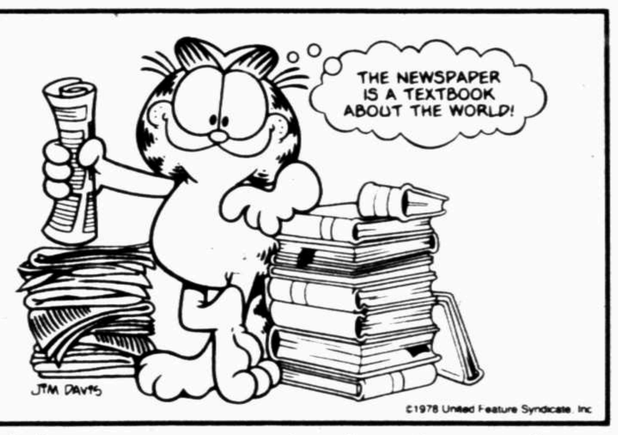

The 2,700-company exchange would be intended to give businesses financial incentives to meet clean-air goals rather than to order them to comply through specific regulations.

Businesses and environmentalists generally have supported the concept of a "smog exchange," but they both say a number of bugs have to be worked out before the system would really work.

Computer owners brace for Michelangelo virus attack

N.Y. Times News Service

The nation's personal computer users scurried Thursday to try to escape a malicious computer virus timed to erase data and programs Friday.

But despite a growing level of worldwide concern, computer experts say that until desk-top computer users actually switch on their machines Friday morning there is no reliable way of telling how widely the virus has spread.

The new virus, which was apparently first detected in Germany last year, was given the name Michelangelo because it was set to erase data on computers made by IBM and on compatible computers when the virus program detects the date March 6, the Italian artist's 517th birthday.

Computer users whose machines are infected with the Michelangelo virus will discover that they are victims when they turn their machines on for the first time Friday.

If they have a computer with a palm-size information storage device within the machine, or a hard disk, their disk drive light will stay on for an unusually long time, perhaps as long as a minute.

This indicates that the virus is writing random information to the disk, possibly erasing valuable data. A similar fate also awaits those who have a system that uses only disks inserted into the machine, or floppy disks, for information storage.

Reacting to the risk of widespread computer difficulties from the virus, an increasing number of computer designers, software experts and government officials said personal computers need to be redesigned to offer simple safety features that protect against future malicious programs and computer intruders.

Computer viruses are small programs that attach themselves to programs and data files or to portions of the computer operating system and then secretly spread, usually carried anonymously on disks that are shuttled from one machine to another.

Wednesday, FBI Director William S. Session issued a warning urging computer users to employ security measures to counteract the virus before it struck.

But a number of government officials said Thursday that while the threat is genuine, the virus has probably not spread as widely as has been suggested by some industry executives.

"It's a real thing that people have to be aware of, but the world isn't going to end tomorrow," said Kenneth Van Wyck, technical coordinator at the Computer Emergency Response Team, a computer security organization at Carnegie Mellon University that is financed by the Department of Defense. "It's not a very sophisticated program as far as the technology of software viruses."

Yet experts on computer viruses who have been following the Michelangelo program said that they had received reports of infections from hundreds of sites around the country, including the New Jersey Institute of Technology, the University of San Francisco, government agencies and offices ranging from Los Alamos National Laboratories to the U.S. House of Representatives, and corporations that include Genentech, Intel Corp. and American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Indeed, for those fighting the virus, it has been a long and sometimes frustrating battle because the program has frequently spread from personal computer hard disks to dozens of floppy disks that have been inserted into computers.

Once a floppy disk is infected it will continue to spread the virus each time it is used.

At Georgetown University in Washington an attempt to distribute anti-virus programs to detect the Michelangelo virus initially backfired.

Computer center administrators found their machines had become infected by the Michelangelo program after they let students, faculty and staff members insert disks in machines to make copies of programs designed to protect computers against the virus.

The threat of computer viruses has led to a thriving industry of small companies that sell products that detect and protect against such programs, but technical experts say that such anti-virus products offer only a Band-Aid solution.

Today's personal computers and operating systems, programs that handle a computer's basic tasks, were not designed with security in mind. But a new generation of computer systems could be engineered to rule out virtually all of today's viruses.

Panel: Citadel has racial ills

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — A committee says there is room for improvement in race relations at The Citadel military academy — like barring cadets from waving the Confederate flag at games, a newspaper reports.

That and limiting the playing of "Dixie" are among recommendations in a report by the panel, which has been studying the racial climate at the state-supported academy since last fall, a source told The Post and Courier.

Committee chairman Calvin Lyons said he could not discuss the report, approved Wednesday, in detail until it is officially released.

He said the committee found the school's racial climate, "compared to many institutions, is excellent. But there are positives steps we can take to make improvements."

Similar suggestions were made five years ago by the state Human Affairs Commission after a black cadet was subjected to hazing by five whites.

Council moves to cut builders' dumping fees

■ City asks utilities director to bring fee back to $8 a ton.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

While dumping at Midland's landfill recently became more expensive, the cost of leaving at least one type of debris at the facility is going down.

The owner of a local roofing company says it's about time.

Plans are under way to cut in half the per-ton dumping fee for construction debris, reducing it to the rate for other waste.

Utilities Director Ken Jones has been directed by the City Council to cut the fee back to $8 per ton, plus a $1.50 state surcharge.

Rates for dumping other waste were increased by $1 per ton late last year, from $7 to $8 per ton, and officials expect another increase may be on the way with new state and federal regulations.

Construction debris, however, has cost double the normal fee since the early 1980s. City officials said the charge was implemented because of a shortage of landfill space, but the dumping facility has since opened on a new site.

The question of the cost — now $16 per ton — arose recently when a roofing company owner complained. He noticed a dramatic difference in the dumping costs compared with other towns.

"It was really out of control, out of hand," said Craig Foster of Foster Roofing in Midland. He complained to At-Large Council member J.D. Faircloth when a worker from his company was charged $150 to dump a truckload of material.

"We could go to Odessa, Big Spring, anywhere else around and pay a lot less," said Foster, who has since contacted other roofers for support in asking the council to take action.

Odessa's rate for construction debris is the city's normal dumping rate — $8 per ton. Big Spring charges $1.75 per cubic yard for residential trash as well as most construction waste.

Calling the higher charge unfair, some council members said they feared it would result in illegal dumping.

"I'm really happy they're doing something about this," Foster said. "I definitely think it's unfair as is."

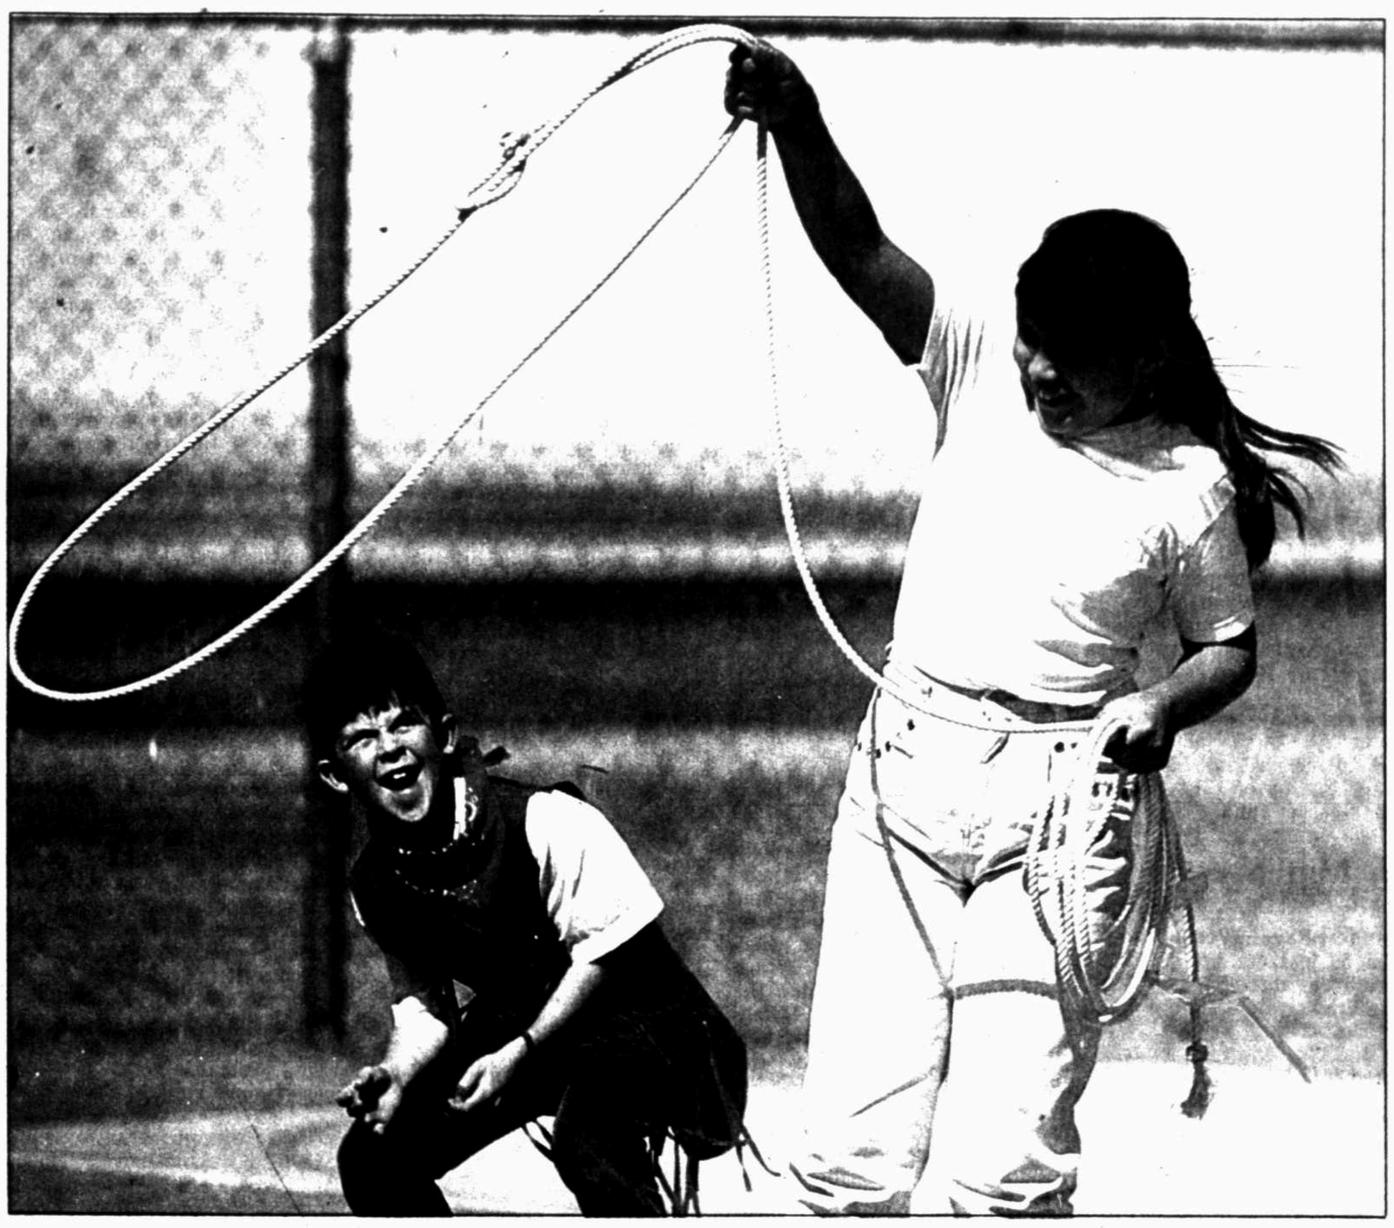

A resolution lowering the rate is expected to get approval by the council Tuesday, but the change will have an effect on the sanitation fund's budget.

Jack Burns, assistant director of utilities, said it is difficult to tell how much shortfall the lower rate would cause. He said the sanitation fund, which operates without tax money, will likely absorb the cost.

Within a few months, the department expects to have a better handle on such statistics and records. A new set of scales already budgeted for purchase will allow computerization of bills, charges and other data now recorded manually.

"They'll enable us to have digital read-out of the data. There won't be much waiting in lines, and we'll get an automatic printout of receipts and charges," Burns said. "There are so many regulations on us now we need to be extremely accurate in our reporting."

Late in March, the sanitation department may ask the council to accept a bid for the new scale system.

GISD students take a trip back to the Old West

■ Greenwood elementary pupils learned what it was like to be a Texas pioneer.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

GREENWOOD — Greenwood youngsters — gussied up in their best western garb — moseyed down a historic "Main Street" Thursday.

Because the rural community — located about 10 miles east of Midland — doesn't have a downtown area or historic town hall, Greenwood Elementary students transformed their school into the center of town with a Texas pioneer flavor.

"We've been studying Texas history for a month leading up to this," fourth-grade teacher Robin Farris said. "Every class had a different shop on Main Street."

The school classrooms were decorated to represent a jail, a general store, barber shop, town hall and a hanging post complete with a sign promising a "Hanging at 12:00 Daily."

Pupils designed "wanted" posters, including one stating: "Wanted, Elizabeth, for skipping lunch and stealing other kids' food."

Another read: "Wanted, Short Shootin' Jeremias. Known to shoot people and steal their money. He will hide easily because he is so short."

Another wall displayed "Texas Nursery Rhymes" written by pupils, including one take on "Little Miss Muffet" where the character's tuffet was replaced by a cactus pie. Getting a mouthful of cactus needles, she proclaimed "What a pin cushion am I."

During the morning, Burl Smithers, a 75-year-old cowboy, regaled youngsters with tales of "roughing it" on the range.

In the afternoon, students tried their hand at roping bales of hay and a metal "calf" that ejected in front of them on a spring apparatus.

They also joined in square dancing, watched a horse being shoed and viewed demonstrations by Emma Ulmschneider on a spinning wheel, and quilters with their handiwork.

Paul Cobb, 10, managed to rope a bale of hay on his first try.

"This is the first time I ever tried this," he said, noting

County dropped charges against Richardson four years ago, attorney says

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Four years ago, misdemeanor trespassing and assault charges against Reuben Richardson were dismissed, according to Schleicher County Attorney Thomas Giovannitti of Eldorado.

The charges were filed by ranch hand Mike Calcote after an altercation in 1988.

Richardson, 56, is one of four Republican candidates for Midland County sheriff.

"It was a plea-bargain (agreement)," Giovannitti told the Reporter-Telegram Thursday night. "And I made the decision" to dismiss the charges against Richardson and another law-enforcement officer, he said.

Giovannitti said Richardson, who in 1988 was a certified peace officer who did volunteer work for the Midland County District Attorney's Victims Assistance Program, and another lawman had permission to go hunting on a ranch near Eldorado in March 1988.

Eldorado is a ranching community south of San Angelo and is the county seat of Schleicher County.

But it was night when they got to their destination and they drove onto the wrong ranch, which was across the road from the ranch where Calcote worked, Giovannitti said.

"They had permission to be on a ranch (but) not the one they were on," Giovannitti said.

Calcote, a hired hand who was armed, got into an argument with Richardson and his friend, the attorney said.

Giovannitti said Calcote claimed Richardson struck him "pretty hard." And then, Calcote said, Richardson and his friend "ransacked" his pickup truck, "jerked" out his rifle, cast it away, and discarded his truck keys.

Richardson said he and his friend had "wandered onto the wrong property."

On Thursday he admitted that

Doctors suggest yearly eye exams

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

We depend on it to drive, to read, to work and to watch television, to name a few. It's our vision.

"Most people just believe that their entire ability to function in the world revolves around being able to see," said Dr. Tom Turner, a local ophthalmologist.

In light of this commonly held sentiment, this week has been proclaimed Save Your Vision Week, which has been dedicated by the president annually since 1927 to raise the public's awareness of the importance of vision and eye care.

Because most day-to-day activities are dependent on eyesight, people are generally good about eye care, Turner said.

When there is a change in visual acuity, someone is quicker to see a doctor than for other ailments, he said.

"I don't think that I find anything that strikes more fear in patients ... than losing their vision," Turner said.

'A regular annual eye exam is the best preventive maintenance.'

— Optometrist James Carpenter

As a preventive measure to protect an individual's vision, ophthalmologists and optometrists recommend regular eye check-ups and some common-sense precautions such as protecting against ultraviolet rays.

Turner advises having a check-up once a year, especially for people 35-40 years and older. Children should visit an eye doctor by 2-2½ years, he added.

James Carpenter, a local therapeutic optometrist, agreed on once-a-year visits.

"I believe in every 12 months considering a lot of things can happen in 365 days," he said.

"And not just for an eye exam but looking into the eye for pathological disease," Carpenter said. Looking into an individual's eyes can reveal other physical ailments such as diabetes, he said.

Regular exams are necessary for glaucoma screening as well, he said.

In addition, someone may have eye trouble and not have any pain, such as with a retinal problem, Carpenter said.

Dr. J.A. Mayans, a local ophthalmologist, agreed.

"The problem with a lot of disease in the eye like glaucoma and diabetes is that when they have symptoms it's much more advanced and should have been treated earlier," Mayans said.

Mayans said everyone should have regular exams at least every two years and once a year for people over 50, preschool children, diabetics and anyone with a family history of eye disease.

When it comes to eye care, a check-up is the best prescription.

"A regular annual eye exam is the best preventive maintenance," Carpenter said.

Vogler, KMB to plant trees at airport and CAF

Staff Report

A Midland civic leader and the city's foremost beautification organization are teaming up for work at two places that welcome visitors — Midland International Airport and the Confederate Air Force headquarters.

Ed Vogler, a local tree enthusiast and chair of the city's airport advisory board, is working with Keep Midland Beautiful Director Sharla Hotchkiss for a continuing beautification project in the two areas.

"We're going to plant more trees, shrubs and greenery," said Vogler, who started the first airport beautification several years ago. He is raising money for another round of plantings around the airport entrance, as well as work at the CAF.

"These are the primary spots because they welcome people to Midland," Hotchkiss said. "The CAF is the focal point for large events and so many people come there who have never been to Midland. If it's bare and windswept, that's what they're going to think of our city."

Vogler estimated that about $10,000 would be spent on each project.

Alamo's a favorite stop on campaign trail

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

SAN ANTONIO — The usual presidential candidates' pilgrimage to the hallowed grounds of the Alamo has just begun.

Democrat Paul Tsongas spoke here Wednesday night, and insurgent Republican Patrick Buchanan is expected to hold a news conference on the same spot this morning.

Both candidates are hitching onto the legacy of the nearly 200 Texans who died here at the hands of Mexican Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna following a 13-day siege in the Texas war for independence in 1836.

The Mexicans conquered the Alamo, but they lost the war. Santa Anna's forces fell just six weeks later to Sam Houston and his Texas freedom fighters at the Battle of San Jacinto, leading to the Lone Star State's independence from Mexico. Texas entered the Union in 1845.

Ever since, politicians have been trooping here, the very site where Lt. Col. William Barret Travis, the Alamo's commander, perished, along with Jim Bowie, Davy Crockett and the others, far outnumbered by Santa Anna's 4,000 Mexican regulars.

Alamo historian Henry Guerra said the celebrity visits began with President Benjamin Harrison, who spoke here in 1891. Teddy Roosevelt, who recruited his Rough Riders in the historic Menger Hotel next door to the Alamo, also held rallies in front of the monument. Franklin Roosevelt, too, made a pilgrimage here, Guerra said.

"We've had so many candidates who stopped to make a speech in front of the Alamo," Guerra said. "They can always find lots of themes to talk about."

No one from the Bush-Quayle team has visited the Alamo this year, prompting state GOP Chairman Fred Meyer to say, "This shows that Buchanan and the Democrats don't know much about Texas. There weren't any survivors at the Alamo."

For Mexican-Americans, the Alamo's symbolism is less than glorious, said Andy Hernandez, president of the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project.

Hernandez said that when he visited the site as a high school student, "I got the clear message that the good guys won and the bad guys lost, and the bad guys were the Mexicans. On some level, I think the history of the Alamo helps explains continuing second-class citizenship of Mexican Americans.

"The Alamo," he said, "is a symbol that belongs to the Anglos, not to us."

Yet the history is more complicated, Guerra said, because of recent revelations that as many as a dozen Mexicans, or "Tejanos," fought on the losing Texas side.

Asked about Buchanan, Hernandez said the shrine makes a perfect foil for the combative columnist, who has often denounced immigration from Mexico and other countries.

"The joke among Mexican Americans," Hernandez said, "is that if Buchanan had been president of Mexico in the early 1800s, there wouldn't be a Texas today, because he would have prevented the Anglos from settling there."

Guerra, who said he is "half-Mexican and half-Italian," predicted that "Buchanan won't get many votes here."

Some candidates have learned the hard way that the Alamo doesn't always work out as a political backdrop. During his unsuccessful 1976 election effort, then-President Gerald Ford posed for cameras as he tried to eat a tamale without first removing its husk. The Texans whose votes he was courting were greatly amused.

"What did he know about tamales anyway?" Guerra asked.

Politicians cannot make speeches inside the Alamo, though, because the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, which guards this cradle of Texas liberty, won't allow them to.

"They have to do it outside," Guerra said. "And if it rains, too bad."

Judge extends court order in Tilton case

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal judge said Thursday he would extend a temporary court order prohibiting the state from pursuing records of television evangelist Robert Tilton.

U.S. District Judge Sam Sparks said he needed more time to sift through the numerous legal arguments before making a decision on a permanent order. He said he would make a decision by March 21.

"I felt like we finally had someone fair, intelligent to listen to us," Tilton said after the hearing. "None of us have anything to hide, but we don't like to get undressed very easily ... especially with millions of people watching."

Sparks' announcement from the bench capped two days of lengthy, often stormy testimony in which Tilton accused the state of trying to shut down his Word of Faith World Outreach Center Church, which according to Tilton's wife grossed $65 million last year.

Tilton accused Texas Attorney General Dan Morales of feeding a media frenzy that had resulted in his 8,000-member church losing 1,000 members. He also claims that Morales' investigation is unwarranted.

Joe Crews, chief of the Consumer Protection Division of the attorney general's office, denied Tilton's accusations.

"It's not now and never has been," the state's intention to takeover Tilton's church, Crews said.

Crews said "serious allegations" based on complaints and critical television reports had surfaced about the Dallas-based ministry. The records were sought, Crews said, to evaluate "the relationship between the church finances and Tilton's finances."

Much of the controversy about Tilton erupted Nov. 21, 1991, after a broadcast about his ministry on the ABC television show "Prime Time Live."

Ole Anthony of Dallas, a homeless advocate and television evangelist watchdog, said he told state officials that he had found prayer requests from Word of Faith members that had been unanswered and dumped in the garbage.

"We had information that would sustain that there were aspects of fraud in Robert Tilton's ministry," Anthony said.

Tilton's attorney J.C. Joyce of Tulsa, Okla., accused Anthony of forging those documents. "This man doesn't know how to tell the truth," he said.

Another complaint from Tilton was that the attorney general's office notified the media when it ordered Tilton to produce 55 types of financial, marketing, and administrative records.

Sparks said he was "perturbed" about the attorney general releasing that order. The state said it did so because of a request by a reporter for the order under the Texas Open Records Act.

Rose Ann Reeser, an assistant attorney general, said releasing the order "was not an act of bad faith. We will brief that issue because I think it is an issue that is important to the judge."

Sparks said there were numerous questions to consider in the case, such as whether the state can investigate a church under the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Act.

CHARGES: Richardson got into argument, attorney says he struck the man once in the head "to disarm him" of a handgun and he discharged the gun into the air. He said he searched Calcote's pickup after he had removed a .3030-caliber carbine from the truck's cab and ejected the shells.

Richardson said he l. attempted to file criminal charges against Calcote with the Tom Green County District Attorney's Office in San Angelo but the office declined to accept his complaint.

However, Giovannitti did accept Calcote's complaint and filed the misdemeanor charges against Richardson and the other peace officer, whom Giovannitti did not identify.

Later, after talking with Richardson's attorney, Giovannitti said he decided to dismiss the charges against the men.

"I was real impressed with the lawyer and I made the decision," Giovannitti said. "I do what I think (is right.) A prosecutor's job is to seek justice not just a conviction. The two (justice and conviction) can be the same. Justice is my goal."

"According to their attorney," Giovannitti said, "they were very contrite for their behavior. The indication to me was that they worked in the law-enforcement community."

Later in 1988, Richardson was hired as an investigator for the Midland County Attorney's Office

Richardson and his friend "admitted" that the conflict with Calcote was "their fault, so I did dismiss" the charges after Richardson and his friend had paid Calcote more than $400 in restitution, Giovannitti said.

Giovannitti said Richardson and the other officer "never personally admitted" their contrition to him "but (did so) through their attorney. I'm not legally allowed to talk directly with a defendant once they are represented by an attorney," Giovannitti said.

Calcote's reasoning for conviction wasn't as persuasive as was Richardson's attorney's argument for dismissal," Giovannitti said.

"Mr. Calcote is still mad at me" for dismissing the charges, Giovannitti said. "When I do something, it's done. I live with my decisions."

"Mr. Calcote said he wasn't in favor of it (dismissal)," Giovannitti said. "And he's not. But under Texas law, the victim doesn't get to decide the outcome of a criminal case. They can have their input, but they can't decide."

Cody Davidson, 9, brought his own rope for the event and said roping a stationary bale of hay was an easy endeavor for him.

"I'm used to moving cattle," he said. "We work on a ranch and rope our cattle out on the open range."

Cody — who never missed his target with his rope — said roping skills "are all in the wrist action."

He said he brought his rope from home to let his peers practice roping on the tennis courts.

"Some students are used to roping, others had never tried it before today," Ms. Farris said.

Several youngsters said the best part of "Pioneer Day" was the chuckwagon luncheon. Others said they were annoyed by the cowboy hat races.

"You see," one fourth-grader said when a gust of West Texas wind blew his hat off and carried it away as several youngsters ran to catch it. "That's what we mean by hat races," the bare-headed youngster said.

KMB: Trees to be planted at airport

"We're really going to see a blooming area of West Texas," said Vogler, adding that landscaping, like many things, is contagious and never-ending. "You always have more you could do," he said. "The Highway Department did their share, now we're back."

For the airport project, some funding came through a grant from Keep America Beautiful, as well as in-kind donations from Turf Specialties and Lanham's Nursery and private citizens.

Single-vehicle accident kills 2

Staff Report

Two people died at the scene of a one-vehicle pickup accident 3½ miles west of Higginbotham Road on Farm-to-Market 1757 in Gaines County late Wednesday night, Department of Public Safety officials said.

Twenty-seven-year-old Rohn Parnell Smith and Rosa Garcia McBeth, 28, both of Denver City, were pronounced dead at 10:35 p.m. by Justice of the Peace Fred Connally of Gaines County.

Smith was driving his 1989 Chevrolet pickup east on FM 1757 at a "high rate" of speed when it ran off the road to the north causing Smith to overcorrect to the right, according to DPS.

The vehicle then went into a skid and overturned six to eight times. Smith, who was not wearing a seatbelt, was ejected from the truck and the vehicle rolled over him, DPS said.

Ms. McBeth was wearing a seatbelt.

Houston motorists search for abandoned vehicles

HOUSTON (AP) — Thousands of Houston motorists spent Thursday looking for their vehicles after they were forced to abandon them on several highways deluged by flash flooding, while other residents dug out homes damaged by the rising waters. At least one death may be connected to the flooding.

An unidentified man was found lying headfirst in a ditch near Halls Bayou in northeast Houston about 5:30 a.m. Police said the man may have been a pedestrian who was swept into the water by strong flood currents. An autopsy was being conducted Thursday.

At least 100 homes in the lower Green's Bayou area and near the San Jacinto River below Lake Houston still had water inside by Thursday afternoon, said Frank Gutierrez, shift leader for the Harris County Flood Control District.

"The river has crested and it is receding, but there is still a lot of water out there," said Gutierrez, who had worked at the emergency center through the night.

Frank Bridges, who came to the area to rescue his brother and young nieces, said the home had four feet of standing water. "It's pretty gol durn bad," he said.

Thousands of residents who weathered the late afternoon storm Wednesday spent hours retrieving cars abandoned on Interstate highways 10 and 45, U.S. Highway 59 and other low-lying roadways.

"We're trying to take two or three calls at a time," said JoAnn Braches, a receptionist for the Houston Police Department, who helped motorists locate vehicles in lots throughout town.

"When they call them in, we put the lot in the computer and the license plate number so that when the owner calls, we can tell them where to find them," she said.

Wrecker services worked throughout the night to clear the highways. On Interstate 10 alone, hundreds of cars were left submerged after flash flooding turned the 10-lane freeway into a river.

"When you get 8 inches of rainfall in a seven-hour period, that's what happens," Gutierrez said. "You start adding that up with the rain we've already had and it doesn't take long. Some of those underpasses have pumps under them, but I guess it wasn't enough."

All but one highway area — Interstate 10 at Shepherd Street — was cleared of high water and scraped of mud by daybreak in time for early morning rush hour. Gutierrez said that road reopened by 9 a.m.

Jack Herr of the American Automobile Association said many owners were expected to find their cars irreparable.

"A little water might be halfway up the door, but it all depends on how quick they get to it. With all the electronics we have today, you could have problems six months from now because of all the saturation," Herr said.

At least two schools cancelled classes for the day as workers moved in to take up flooded carpeting and remove damaged furniture and other materials.

The State

Mayor Bob Lanier early Thursday asked state and federal officials to declare the city a disaster area. After an afternoon flyover, Lanier said: "What impressed me is how well, on a whole, the city is draining."

A flash flood watch remained in effect Thursday afternoon for most of southeast Texas.

Houston Independent School District planned to honor a bus driver and a Houston Police Department dive team who rescued four children with cerebral palsy when the mini school bus they were riding was swept off the roadway by swirling water Wednesday. Within minutes, the Burbank Elementary bus was nearly totally submerged.

"I said, 'I can't let my babies die. Master, you're not going to take me and these babies now,'" bus driver Luvenia Blackmon, 34, said Thursday.

All four children, who ranged in age from 5 to 11, and Ms. Blackmon were treated for minor injuries. Two children remained in the hospital Thursday. Gustavo Carranza, 7, was listed in fair condition at St. Joseph Hospital. Dora Florez, 6, who suffered respiratory problems, was in fair condition at Ben Taub Hospital.

Bush's Texas home reopens after floods force evacuation

HOUSTON (AP) — The hotel President Bush calls home reopened Thursday after being evacuated during flash flooding a day earlier, and inn officials say they are ready to receive the first couple.

"Anytime they're ready, we're ready for them," said Jude Powell, marketing director for the Houstonian Hotel and Conference Center.

The hotel in the upscale west side of Houston near the Galleria shut down Wednesday when heavy rains brought Buffalo Bayou out of its banks and into the hotel's power plant. About 200 guests were relocated.

The water knocked out electricity in the complex and flooded the lower levels of its parking garage.

The hotel was reopened at 8:30 a.m. Thursday, Ms. Powell said. "We just have some clean-up to do in the garage," she said.

The president and first lady Barbara Bush last visited the hotel last weekend. Ms. Powell said the Bushes are not expected to return before all repairs have been made.

Sharp gives Congress state-audit testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress may be looking for economic hints from Texas and a handful of other states that are turning state government upside down in an effort to cut costs and improve services.

Texas Comptroller John Sharp, the architect of a state performance audit that identified more than $4 billion in cuts last year, testified Thursday before the Joint Economic Committee.

Also testifying were the authors of "Reinventing Government," a book used as a model for economic change by municipalities across the country, and states including Massachusetts, Oregon and Arkansas.

Sharp and authors David Osborne and Ted Gaebler told committee members the main problem is that government is out of touch.

"I think we all understand our governments are in deep trouble today," Osborne said. "We are using outmoded ways of doing business in the public sector."

Committee members said they are aware a problem exists.

"It seems to me the old answers from the left and the right aren't working and the public knows it," said Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn.

"People are angry at government but ultimately they know they need government."

The committee's vice chairman noted that cities and states have seized on the concepts outlined in "Reinventing Government" much more readily than federal officials.

"The federal government has been all but absent from this debate," Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., said.

Sharp detailed for the committee how his audit eventually resulted in $2.6 billion in cuts and a streamlined state bureaucracy. But Sharp was doubtful Congress and the Bush administration have enough "guts" to duplicate the changes on a national scale.

Sharp said a crisis is one of the required elements for massive change.

Events reached boiling point in Texas last year when the Legislature was confronted with a possible $4.6 billion deficit in the 1992-'93 budget. Faced with having to enact a personal income tax, lawmakers approved $2.6 billion of the cuts recommended by Sharp's auditors.

"It only passed because they didn't have a choice," Sharp said in an interview before the hearing.

The other necessary ingredients included secrecy during the audit process, during which nearly 100 auditors spent 54,000 hours examining government agencies; and then massive publicity when the audit was presented to lawmakers.

The secrecy, Sharp said, was needed to prevent special interests from torpedoing cuts early on. Media attention was then needed to keep pressure on lawmakers to adopt the changes, he said.

The 975 recommendations included merging some agencies, combining many of the more than 600 state bank accounts and eliminating about 1,000 of the 226,000 state jobs.

But, perhaps most of all, the sweeping changes required courage on the part of state officials, Sharp said.

The audit process has not ended in Texas. It will be conducted on a permanent basis until the day when there are no more budget deficits, Sharp said.

School bus, auto collide; motorist dies

GARCIASVILLE (AP) — A car rebounding from a collision with another vehicle Thursday morning crashed into a school bus that was stopped while students were loading, fatally injuring one motorist and sending other victims to the hospital, officials said.

Cynthia Annette Lopez, 28, the driver of the first vehicle struck in the chain reaction collision, sustained severe head injuries. She died shortly before noon at Starr County Memorial Hospital, hospital administrator Thalia Munoz said.

The children sent to the hospital, all students at La Union Elementary School near Rio Grande City, were released after being treated for minor injuries, Ms. Munoz said.

At least 19 of the 29 children on the bus were transported to the hospital, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

"The kids are fine. Nothing serious happened to them besides the fright," said Ruben Saenz, interim superintendent of the Rio Grande Independent School District.

Bruno Alfonso Ochoa-Aramenta, the driver of the car officials believe caused the accident, was in stable condition at Starr County hospital, Ms. Munoz said.

His passenger, Alberto Jil-Depracet, was transported to a McAllen hospital. Ms. Munoz said she did not know the extent of the men's injuries.

An Oldsmobile driven by Ochoa-Aramenta rear-ended Ms. Lopez's vehicle, which had been stopped in the eastbound lane of U.S. 83 to wait for all of the students to board the bus, officials said.

The Oldsmobile then went into a slide, striking the bus — which was stopped in the westbound lane — on the front left corner then again on the left panel, according to DPS officials.

Officials said Ochoa-Aramenta had failed to control his speed, but it was not immediately known if he would be cited in the accident.

FAMILY MATTERS

New relationship should not be 'quick fix'

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I have a good friend who is in the process of getting a divorce and is already involved with another man. Her soon-to-be ex-husband is a real rat (wouldn't work, other women, drinking), so I'm glad that she has someone to talk to. I'm just worried that she's jumping into something too fast. She swears that there's nothing going on with her "friend," but she slipped last week and said something about marriage. After my reaction she's not talking to me like she was.

May

Is there anything that I can do to help convince her that she needs more time to lick her wounds before going right back into another relationship? I'm so worried that she will just take up with another guy on the rebound and be in trouble again. — WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: You have good reason to be concerned. The attempt to "fix" a problem with another relationship can create even more problems. However, trying to convey that concept to someone in your friend's situation is very difficult. I try to talk more in terms of remarriage and the need for making such a decision slowly and carefully.

Dr. Georgia Witkin, in her book, "Quick Fixes and Small Comforts," reports that remarried women do not rate their new marriages as happier than their old marriages. However, remarried men and never-divorced married women reported the most life satisfaction. This may lend support to the idea that women do not have as good a selection of available men the second time around. Your friend needs to take a careful look at her new man and potential problems.

Dr. Witkin also states that she has found that the biggest difficulty women face in remarriage is "no script to follow." They are faced with unknown extended family dynamics, undefined and often unknown expectations, and an unpredictable life events course.

Encourage your friend to consider the "child situation." Reports suggest that child rearing is the most difficult problem for the husband and wife in remarriage.

Share these thoughts with your friend, but do not be too disappointed when she does not listen. You may want to encourage her to attend one of the divorce support groups or workshops offered by Golf Course Road Church of Christ, First Baptist Church or First United Methodist Church. Anything that slows down the process will help.

DEAR FAMILY: I hope you can read this because I'm so mad that I could scream. I just hung up from talking to my mother and she chewed me out for my boyfriend. I am 32 years old and have been divorced for almost three years. I have two girls (teenagers) who live with me. Their father lives in another state and rarely has anything to do with them. I have had to raise them the last three years by myself without any break or any in-town help.

I met this really good man four months ago and we started dating. He is divorced but is very good with his 6-year-old daughter. We have decided for him to move in with us. My daughters really like him and both said it was fine with them.

Everyone is happy. Then I made the mistake of being too happy and telling my mother. She said I would be living in sin and it was wrong. She said that my dead father would be so disappointed if he knew what I was doing. At first I felt real guilty but now I'm really mad. Don't I have a right to be happy? Can't I do what I want to do if it doesn't hurt anyone? What can I tell her? ANGRY

DEAR ANGRY: Please consider your decision more carefully. You definitely have a right to your own happiness and I want you to be happy. The life of a single mother is trying at best. However, you have two daughters who are at an age when they are aware of their own sexuality and are struggling with rules for appropriate sexual expression.

You are a role model for your daughters. Your decision to allow a man to move into your home without benefit of marriage is a clear and powerful message about what you consider to be appropriate sexual expression. I am sure this is not your intention, but it is a weighty matter on your daughters' developmental agenda. Please consider other options. Moral teaching is a very important responsibility of parenting.

Teaching children cash management is important

By Marianne Daniels Garber, Ph.D., Stephen W. Garber, Ph.D., and Robyn Freedman Spizman

N.Y. Times News Service

Kids need practice with money. Most parents teach their children to recognize coins, count dollars and make change, but then the buck stops. An allowance is often given when it's convenient. When the money runs out before the week is up, someone pays the bill.

To learn how to manage cash, adopt a habit of saving and gain an appreciation for money, children need experience with budgeting, saving and making spending choices. For your child to gain some fiscal awareness and learn that money doesn't grow on trees, consider these suggestions:

Determine a meaningful allowance. With your child, decide the weekly allowance. Discuss what things he is expected to pay for and what you feel is your responsibility. Identify an amount needed for lunches, school supplies, snacks, charity and so forth. Add to that an amount that your child will have control over and talk about the ways those funds might be spent or saved or given to charity.

Discuss money. In many families, money is a hush-hush subject until it becomes part of a loud discussion. Instead, talk to your child about how you manage the family finances. Show him your checkbook (not the balance) and explain how credit cards work. Open a savings account for the funds he accumulates.

Encourage being a smart consumer. Involve your children in clipping grocery coupons and teach him how to buy wisely.

Make a wish list. Encourage your child to save for a wanted item. Tape a picture of it on a sheet of paper and draw a bar graph depicting the cost. Attach this to a special piggy bank set aside to accumulate funds for this item. Establish a savings plan, and let your child color the graph as the coins accumulate.

Provide ways to earn money. Family members should be assigned chores. This teaches responsibility and makes every family member equal.

Choose rewards carefully. Adults are paid for their jobs and can earn commissions or bonuses for improved performance. If a child needs added incentive for school work, identify problem areas and the means to improve.

Rather than paying for grades, identify nightly study goals such as how many pages read, minutes of extra study time and percentages of problems done accurately. Identify daily privileges that might be earned for working consistently and a long-term reward that could be earned for improvement.

Avoid punishing your child by taking away allowance. Occasionally, it might be appropriate to fine your child some portion of the discretionary part of his allowance. Be careful that you only do this as a logical consequence of a major misdeed.

DEAR ABBY

Marine stationed overseas says wives should learn to 'tough it out'

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: As a platoon commander stationed in the Far East, I see firsthand the effects of separation on a relationship. None of my young Marines are permitted to bring wives or family with them on a standard one-year tour.

Van Buren

It would seem that the wife would understand this time apart as an unfortunate reality of the job. However, a week does not pass that a Marine doesn't receive a "Dear John" letter or phone call. I have nothing but contempt for these women. If they could only be here to see the anguish these men endure. These wives and girlfriends must show the same courage their husbands and boyfriends do every day, and tough it out.

Whatever happened to good old-fashioned loyalty and commitment? What's a man to do? — SEMPER FI, JAPAN

DEAR SEMPER: Unfortunately you see only the anguish the men endure; be assured there are a great number of wives and girlfriends "toughing it out" and waiting faithfully until their men come home. And by the way, Semp, there are female Marines "toughing it out," too.

DEAR ABBY: As a child, I did as I was told, followed all the rules and was a model student. I went a bit astray as a teen-ager. I gave myself to my boyfriend in every way. I turned my back on my family — especially on my mother, who raised me alone since my father had died many years before.

After seven years of mostly heartache with that boyfriend, I jumped into a relationship with a man who turned out to be both mentally and physically abusive. I was scared and embarrassed, and didn't want anyone to know the terror I was living in. When things got so bad that my life was in danger, I literally escaped from that terrible man. Guess where I went?

I went back to my mother. We did a lot of talking and I did a lot of apologizing. Together, we worked at rebuilding the bridges I had burned. During the next four years, we developed a wonderful relationship, and my mother became my best friend.

When she retired (after three and a half of those four years), I didn't have enough money to give her a big gift, so I gave her an invitation to have lunch with me every Tuesday. (By then I was working full-time and living on my own.) This gave us guaranteed time together on a regular basis. As it turned out, the "gift" I thought I was giving my mother, I gave to myself. My mother died suddenly six months after she retired. The memories I have from our lunches together are treasures to me.

I live in peace now — at peace with myself for having "righted" things with my mother, and at peace with my caring husband and two beautiful children. -- DAUGHTER, HAMPTON, MASS.

DEAR DAUGHTER: Though you learned it rather late in the life of your mother, you finally learned that the best gift a person can give is a part of themselves: time alone and one's undivided attention.

This one's for everybody, from teens to seniors! IT'S YOUR LIFE

Elderly parents' health concerns families

By Steve Edwards

QUESTION: Why is primary responsibility of a parent with a chronic illness or other severe problem such a difficult task for families to handle?

Edwards

ANSWER: Unfortunately, the problem most families encounter in building a support system is their differences of opinion. Bickering, tension and stress often occur when families are suddenly forced to cope with a situation.

When deciding who should take responsibility, the attitude of most families is for the daughters to assume physical care of a parent while the sons traditionally have taken on the role of being the financial or moral support.

The process should change, as the individual personalities are extremely important in how responsibility is assumed. Extra care may be willingly accepted by a child who feels close to a parent while other family members may resent having to give extra care.

In another situation, a child with an extreme amount of past guilt may suddenly respond as a caregiver. Burdened with feelings of neglect for the parent or a lack of devotion, the child may literally act to win approval from a parent.

A self-centered child may find it easy to break away from the care of a parent. However, very few children ever turn their backs on parents completely.

Family support is urged — not family quarrels. Hasty family decisions are usually bad and have negative results. Seek out opportunities over a long period of time to weigh possibilities and options.

QUESTION: Why is financial planning so important?

ANSWER: The fact that retirement living represents almost one-third of your lifetime should be a prime motiviating factor in carefully planning to meet these concerns. But invariably, many individuals choose not to think about this responsibility or spend only a token amount of time laying out financial goals and plans.

Why the failure to plan? Ten basic reasons would include:

■ Procrastination

■ Failure to establish attainable goals

■ Failure to understand the compounding effects of money

■ Uncontrolled ego

■ Failure to understand or take advantage of tax laws

■ Failure to pay yourself first

■ Failure to understand how to overcome the effects of inflation

■ Desiring something for nothing

■ Lacking persistance and enthusiasm

■ Being overly influenced by the opinions of others

More people fail to fulfill their financial plans because of procrastination than for any other single reason. Yet putting things off is an unseen force that eats away at your future financial dignity.

QUESTION: What is "reality orientation?"

ANSWER: A standard procedure in caring for most elderly is "reality orientation." This procedure helps aged, homebound persons to keep up with current events, or "real" events that are happening around them. This regular enforcement helps elderly people remain aware of their surroundings.

Reinforcement of things such as the month, day and time, the weather, the names of people who come to visit and events that happen during the day will help elderly people remember or clarify things they might have forgotten.

While this approach does not offer a cure to the deteriorating or confused mind, it is reassuring to know that good results have been achieved with reinforced ideas.

This method will not work for all cases and should not be continued if results are not evident.

QUESTION: My parent's dependency is increasing. When should a parent be moved to a supervised senior residence or nursing home?

ANSWER: Most professionals agree that it's not the best idea to wait until a parent is sick and old to make such a move. If at all possible, plans should be made ahead and the move facilitated while the parent is still functioning normally.

Because parents need to be involved in making this decision, these thoughts, difficult as they may be, should be done at a time when they can visit retirement or nursing facilities and take part in the planning.

It is important to help the parent make a decision while they are still capable. When the individuals exhibit initial symptoms of deterioration, a more structured environment might be required. At this time alternative living situation should be examined and initiated.

'Silver and gold' twins are favorites in Japan

By Elaine Kurtenbach

NAGOYA, Japan (AP) — Kin and Gin, silver-headed identical twins, have captured the hearts of millions of Japanese just by sitting on cushions and laughing.

And by surviving, faculties firmly intact, for a century.

For most of their lives, Kin Narita and Gin Kanie lived quietly, farming and raising 16 children between them.

Then last fall, they debuted in a television special on Respect the Aged Day, a national holiday. Duskin Co., an Osaka-based maker of doormats, hired them soon afterward to appear in a television commercial.

And last week they released their first cassette disc — adding their "hai, hai's" (yes, yes) to a collection of nursery songs sung by kindergarten children.

Hardly a day goes by without a glimpse of the mirthful, kimono-clad women on TV. They have charmed millions of Japanese nostalgic for close-knit, extended families and the serene, traditional world the ladies represent.

Most of all, people agree, the twins are cute, and that's enough to make them superstars of the moment.

"Kin is 100, 100," Kin says in the commercial for Duskin, whose toll-free customer service line includes the numbers 100-100.

"Gin is 100, 100," says Gin, perched beside her sister on a plush cushion.

'Big families are the best. I think people are holding back just a little too much these days. Families of just two or three kids are really pitiful.'

— Gin Kanie
100-year-old twin

They turn to each other and burst out laughing.

LIKE ABOUT 40 percent of elderly Japanese, Kin and Gin are living the traditional ideal of old age: They live in extended families. They are coddled and respected, but still able to dress and bathe themselves.

"They are living just as they believe they ought to be," says Gin's daughter Mineo Kanie, 57.

The sisters were born Aug. 1, 1892, but say they're already 100 years old because in those days babies were reckoned a year old at birth.

Japanese have the world's longest average life expectancy: almost 81.81 years for women and 75.86 years for men. Centenarians are not rare — the government counted a record 3,625 last year — but 99-year-old twins are.

Kin, whose name means gold, and Gin, who is silver, laugh off questions about their secret for longevity.

Like the wars, typhoons and arranged marriages that determined their fates in the past, they are taking fame in stride. Instead of making money out of their newfound celebrity, they donated their $31,000 earnings from the commercial to government welfare funds.

Both were enthusiastic about meeting their first foreigner. They made kind comments and self-deprecating jokes:

"We're just people from the old days," says Gin. "There's lots of things we don't understand."

BUT KIN, a pro wrestling fan, and Gin, who enjoys watching legislative proceedings on television, say plenty about the changes in Japanese society since they were young, especially the shrinking of most families to just one or two children.

The eldest of eight children, Kin and Gin spent their childhoods looking after younger siblings, sometimes alternating days at school so one could stay home. When they reminisce, it's their brothers and sisters — only one of whom survives — they remember most.

"Big families are the best," says Gin. "I think people are holding back just a little too much these days. Families of just two or three kids are really pitiful."

But the sisters aren't overly critical.

"Young people today are pretty smart, aren't they?" Gin jokes. "In the old days there were just more stupid people than there are now."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, MARCH 6, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A partnership demands the lion's share of your attention now. Stick to business during office hours. A romance may fade once the initial attraction wears off. A long-term real estate project could prove profitable next summer. Going back to school will boost your standing with influential people. November is the best time to supervise a major reorganization at work. New social and business alliances will make next December a whirlwind of activity.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: artist Michelangelo, TV personality Ed McMahon, director Rob Reiner, baseball great Willie Stargell.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Good fortune smiles on you because of your generous nature. Rejoice! Old debts or favors are repaid. Be careful not to alienate a potential ally.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Family members look to you for leadership. Be firm but fair. An age gap only makes a romantic relationship more interesting. Accept a last-minute invitation tonight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Drawing attention to your own achievements is not the way to win support at work. Instead, point out your co-workers' contributions. Higher-ups applaud your generosity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Studying certain accounts may help you find hidden financial assets. Confidential chats lead to swifter career advancement. Learn from an older person's experiences.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Look out for your health by taking steps to reduce everyday tension. Developing better rapport with your loved ones could add years to your life! The financial picture will brighten late this month.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not let a lack of funds stifle romance! Eat at home and rent a video. A telephone call brings welcome news from the folks at home. Examine your beliefs and values.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Happiness is assured on the home front today. A family reunion adds to your sense of well-being. Be cautious if someone wants to rekindle a romance. You deserve much more than empty promises.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A day when loose lips can sink ships in the business world. Remain true to your ideals. Do not repeat office gossip. Keep your head down and duck the spotlight for a while.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A clash of wills could tarnish someone's image. Emphasizing teamwork puts a star by your name. Listen to your closest friends when it comes to romance. Go slow.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be feeling frustrated or nervous. Be careful not to let it show! Teamwork will succeed where a solo effort would fail. Someone gives your ideas a rave review.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Hidden resentments could surface at home. Lie low until you see which way the wind is blowing. Do not drift away from your post. By tonight, you know where you stand.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Guard against stormy scenes at work. Someone who sounds furious is just letting off steam. Once the dust settles, you can get plenty of work done. Find time for fun tonight.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are peace-loving, patient and intellectual. They dislike arguments and tend to go along with whatever their friends or co-workers decide. Conscientious and trustworthy, these Pisces will be popular with both their peers and authority figures. Encourage these impressionable offspring to choose companions who share their sound values and high ideals. Falling in with the wrong crowd could be a disaster!

Finessing is not as simple as it seems. We would wager that many players would never even consider that they have a choice of finesses on this hand.

With 12 cards in the minor suits, North was not thrilled by South's insistence on spades—certainly justified by the solid suit. However, since there was no guarantee of a better spot anywhere, North wisely passed.

West led a low heart, East rose with the ace and returned the jack. Declarer covered with the queen just in case. West's king won and a heart came back to East's nine. Now East continued with a fourth heart. Declarer ruffed low, drew trumps in four rounds and was at the crossroads.

Since South has a singleton diamond, many would lead a diamond to the ace and then run the queen of clubs—down one. No, not unlucky. Declarer did not make the most of the hand.

Rather than rely only on the 50 percent possibility of the club finesse, declarer should have taken into account that there was a finesse available in diamonds as well. Best is for declarer to try to drop the king in one minor and, if that doesn't succeed, to take the finesse in the other minor.

With nine clubs in the combined North-South holding, the chances of finding a singleton king of clubs are obviously far greater than a singleton king of diamonds, in which suit declarer has a combined holding of only six cards in the two hands. Therefore, after drawing trumps declarer should have cashed the ace of clubs.

As the cards lie, the king would have come tumbling down and all would have been well. And if the king had not dropped, declarer can then fall back on the diamond finesse, discarding the club loser on the ace of diamonds if the finesse of the queen succeeded.

Burt Reynolds hurt by friends' reactions during convalescence

NEW YORK — Burt Reynolds said he was deeply wounded by vicious rumors and friends who abandoned him when he was bedridden for two years after shattering his jaw in 1984 while making a film.

In the forthcoming Parade magazine, Reynolds said he even advised Loni Anderson, now his wife, to leave him.

"I told her she was young, that I'd probably be an invalid all my life, the career was over, the money would go. Leave me. Find someone else. She never left my side," Reynolds said.

The accident occurred while Reynolds was making "City Heat." He was hit on the temple with a chair. "It shattered my jaw, the ... joint cracked like an egg." He couldn't chew. Light and sound were unbearable.

"And then the rumors started. The AIDS stuff. The gay stuff. I was incredibly hurt. But what amazed me were the friends who abandoned us."

Since his recovery, Reynolds and his wife adopted a son. Reynolds won an Emmy and a Golden Globe award for his CBS series, "Evening Shade."

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — It's been 16 years since John Goodman pledged loyalty to Sigma Phi Epsilon at his alma mater, Southwest Missouri State University. Now, he'll finally get to join.

Goodman

The actor, a 1975 graduate, said he couldn't afford full frat membership.

"I ran out of money," Goodman said.

Goodman, who plays the husband on the ABC sitcom "Roseanne," will be initiated Saturday in a private ceremony, fraternity President Tim Mueller said.

Goodman said he pledged Sigma Phi Epsilon as a student because "they're a great bunch of guys. A lot of guys from my high school are brothers."

STILLWATER, Okla. — Jeanne White said the legacy of her son, Ryan White, is better attitudes about AIDS.

J. White

"Ryan was an inspiration, not to just people with AIDS, but to everyone who has ever been in a minority that has been feared or not understood," Ms. White said Wednesday at Oklahoma State University.

"Every time I speak at a college or high school I see what he has done," she said. "I meet so many people who learned something and were touched by Ryan."

Ryan White was a hemophiliac who died in 1990 at 18, one of the first reported cases of AIDS infection through blood transfusion when he was diagnosed more than five years before.

His battle to stay in public school in Kokomo, Ind., drew hate mail and sympathy. The family later moved to Cicero, Ind., where he was welcomed.

CONWAY, Ark. — Whether there will be another "Star Trek" sequel is a mystery of the show biz universe to actor James Doohan, who played chief engineer Montgomery Scott, as in: "Beam me up, Scotty."

"It's very difficult to understand what Paramount is doing," Doohan, 72, said Tuesday at the University of Central Arksansas.

In any event, Doohan said the last sequel, "Star Trek VI" is the best of the lot.

"Everybody loved it," he said.

LOS ANGELES — NBC said Wednesday that reporters Arthur Kent and Deborah Roberts will join the staff of the network's upcoming news magazine show, "Dateline NBC."

The show, which premieres March 31, will be anchored by Jane Pauley and Stone Phillips.

Kent will be based in Rome, contributing international segments. Roberts, an Atlanta-based NBC reporter, will relocate to New York.

WASHINGTON — Rep. Marge Roukema, R-N.J., is all shook up about the new Elvis stamp scheduled for issuance next year.

"Elvis Presley's drug and alcohol abuse was widely recognized, and I do not believe the U.S. Postal Service should honor such a negative role model by placing Elvis' likeness on a postage stamp," the congresswoman wrote Postmaster General Anthony M. Frank.

"Many children collect postage stamps. I certainly do not want young people to mistakenly assume that the United States government condones Elvis Presley's behavior," she continued.

A Postal Service spokeswoman said the agency was not addressing Elvis's private conduct. "We're honoring ... his accomplishment with music. It has nothing to do with his lifestyle," Robin Minard said Thursday.

In an interview, Mrs. Roukema said she was also indignant that in a time of tight money, the Postal Service would spend taxpayer dollars so Americans could pick between likenesses of the young singer from Mississippi and the jumpsuited, older resident of Graceland in Memphis, Tenn.

Doctor calls for Houston law on safe storage of weapons

HOUSTON (AP) — Thirty-five children under 17 were killed by firearms in Houston last year — more than double the number only two years before — prompting the city's director of emergency medical services to seek a local ordinance on the safe storage of guns and ammunition.

Statistics show 103 children have been killed by gunfire since 1988 — 27 of them accidentally — and children age 14-17 are three times more likely to be shot than adults.

Those figures led Dr. Paul Pepe, director of Houston's emergency services, to ask the City Council Wednesday for a new law that would punish adults who fail to keep guns out of children's reach.

"When we see these children coming in (to hospital emergency rooms) with gunshot wounds, it really is just heartbreaking," Pepe said. "And it shouldn't be happening."

Parents of the slain youths say they plan to apply pressure until Houston gets an ordinance similar to laws in Florida and California that penalize adults for allowing their children access to firearms.

Possibilities could include forcing gun owners to use trigger locks, store weapons behind locked doors or keep them dismantled when not in use, or pass a safe-storage certification test.

Council member Sheila Jackson Lee asked the city legal department to start developing such an ordinance, saying, "We must at least make a statement to our community that we have to protect our children."

But Mayor Bob Lanier questioned whether such an ordinance would help. He said Wednesday that he would have city officials study the matter.

"If we can't find something that works, I would not be in favor of doing something merely for appearance," Lanier said. "A large part of this is going to have to be done by the families themselves."

Police Chief Sam Nuchia also was less than optimistic, saying any enforcement probably would come after a tragedy, such as an accidental child shooting.

"It might tighten awareness, but if a gun is kept in the house, there's very little way to enforce something," Nuchia said.

Dianne Clements, whose 13-year-old son, Zachary, died last August when a hide-and-seek playmate accidentally blasted him in the chest with a 12-gauge shotgun, said she thought the law would help.

"A dog owner is responsible when his dog bites someone, but you allow a child to have a loaded pistol and the parent is not responsible. This law would be a deterrent," she said. "We're not asking that guns be taken out of the home, just that they're managed safely in the home."

Any changes proposed for Houston will be fought by the Texas State Rifle Association, the group's legislative director, James Brown of Austin, said.

"This is another form of Big Brother government," Brown said. "A parent will feel bad enough if there is an accident ... if it's rat poison under the sink or a swimming pool or a lawn mower. A little training of gun safety to children is the best way to go."

Kiam in debt

BOSTON (AP) — New England Patriots owner Victor Kiam will have to turn the team over to the NFL and could lose control of Remington Corp. because he is more than $100 million in debt, according to a report published Thursday.

The Patriot Ledger of Quincy, using unidentified "closest associates and sources close to the team," said if the Patriots are transferred to the league, Kiam will turn over majority interest in Remington to a New York investment group.

Kiam allegedly used Remington stock for collateral on a Patriots loan, the Ledger reported, and that stock would be released once the team is transferred to NFL stewardship.

League owners are scheduled to meet March 15 to vote on a proposal that would give the NFL control of the Patriots until a suitable owner is found.

MC plays longshot Leopards

■ Midland College opens the Region V basketball tournament against a Temple team that lost four first-semester players, including two starters.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

WACO — Kirby Johnson says he's in a positive frame of mind, "at least until Saturday."

As head basketball coach at Temple Junior College, that's when Johnson will lead his Leopards into opening round Region V tournament action against the Midland College Chaparrals, at Waco's McLennan Community College. Tip-off is 8 p.m.

■ Final Chaparral stats, standings/3C

The Leopards, 20-10 on the season, finished in third place at 11-5 in the Northern Texas Junior College Athletic Conference. The Chaps were runners-up in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference with a 22-8 overall, 12-4 league mark.

Temple has all the ingredients of a team that was destined to fall apart, but hasn't. In fact, team chemistry is what Johnson credits with keeping his club going.

"At midterm we lost four players, two of them were starters," Johnson said. "It was a different team that came back from the first semester and I didn't know what to expect."

The least of Johnson's expectations might have been winning 11 of their final 14 conference games. One was an overtime loss to No. 11 ranked McLennan, the NTJCAC's No. 1 seed at the regional tournament.

"They've rallied around each other and played really well," Johnson said of the nine players left on the Leopards' roster.

The starting five include 6-5 sophomore off guard Eric Jones who leads the team in scoring (19.1 ppg) and rebounds (7.6 rpg); Yohance Nicholas, a 6-8 freshman forward averaging 12 ppg and 6.5 rpg; Steven Grimes, a 6-7 forward aver-

Rice keeps UT from title tie

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Rice's Marvin Moore scored a career-high 26 points and the Owls took advantage of foul-prone Texas for a 103-97 victory Thursday night that kept the Longhorns from clinching a tie for the SWC basketball title.

The Longhorns' loss left them tied with the Houston Cougars for first place in the conference with a 10-3 record.

Texas, 20-10 for the season and seeking its first outright league title since 1974, plays Texas A&M on Sunday, while Houston plays Southern Methodist. A 3-way tie for first is still possible, should both Texas and Houston lose and Texas Christian (9-4) beat Texas Tech on Saturday.

The Owls, with an identical 20-10 season record, reached the 20-victory plateau for the first time since the 1953-54 season. With their 8-6 league mark, the Owls have the No. 4 seed in the post-season conference tournament.

Rice, trailing 46-45 at the half, scored the first six points of the second half and battled to a 69-69 deadlock on a pair of free throws by Torrey Andrews with 9:50 left in the game.

From that point, the Owls outscored the Longhorns 19-7 and took an 88-76 lead with 4:36 left to play. Rice's Kenneth Rourke hit three straight baskets during the run.

Rice's charge was aide by the Longhorns' foul troubles. Benford Williaams fouled out with 4:55 to play and Dexter Cambridge and Albert Burditt played the final nine minutes with four fouls each.

The Owls had to overcome a career high 36 points by B.J. Tyler, whose 3-point shooting helped the Longhorns to their halftime lead.

Stanton prepares for first regional tournament game since 1966 loss

■ The Stanton Buffaloes take on defending Class 2A state champion Abernathy at 6 p.m. tonight in the Region I semifinals.

Staff Report

ABILENE — You can't blame the Stanton Buffaloes for being a little giddy over reaching Class 2A Region I boys basketball playoff status.

After all, the last time the Buffaloes got this far in the playoffs was back in 1966 when they lost to Gruver in a one-point game.

Well, it has taken 26 years to get back to this spot and two victories short of a Final Four berth in Austin.

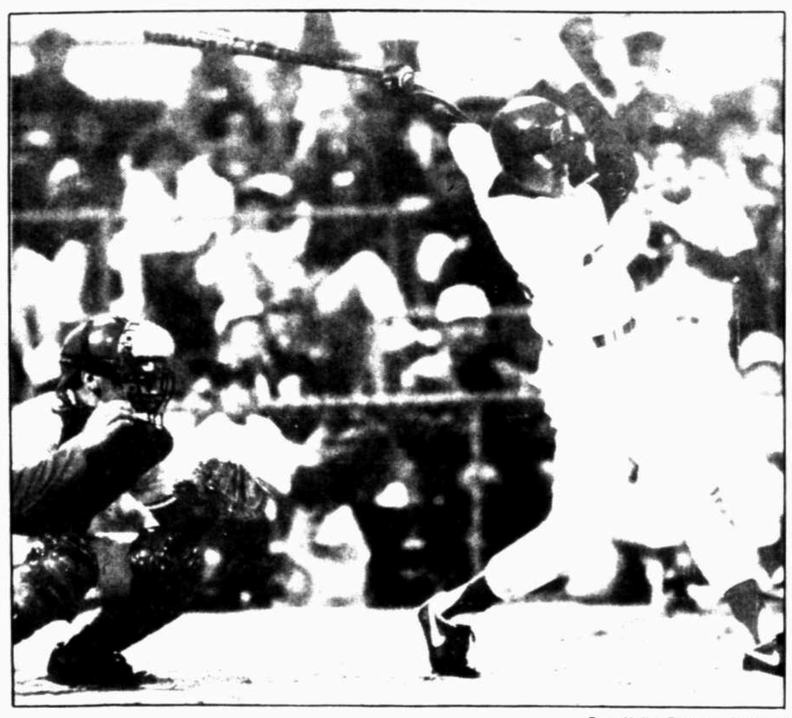

The Class 2A Region I tournament will be conducted in Abilene today and Saturday at Abilene High. And the Buffs have a tough task right off the bat.

Stanton, 25-6 for the season, meets 22-8 Abernathy at 6 p.m. Abernathy just happens to be the defending state Class 2A champion. The other semifinal game will pit Hale Center, 23-5, against Stamford, 29-3, at 8 p.m.

Today's two winners will meet at noon Saturday for the Region I title.

The Buffs defeated Hamlin, 63-60, Tuesday to gain Region I entry. Stanton had four players hit double figures. Junior Jeremy Stallings, known more for his double state championship in the 800 and 1,600 meter races last year at the state track meet as a sophomore, led the Buffs against Hamlin with 21 points. Senior Kenny McAllister had 15 points while John Wykoff added 13 and Grant Woodsin 11.

Abernathy got to the tournament with a victory over Amarillo Highland Park. Stamford defeated Coahoma and Hale Center won over Panhandle. All those area games were Tuesday.

Bulldogs, Plainsmen open T-of-C with wins

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Midland High benefited from six unearned runs in the first inning and Dewayne Culpepper tossed a complete game as the Bulldogs breezed to a 9-3 victory over Del Rio to cap the first day of the Tournament of Champions baseball tournament Thursday at Angels Stadium.

In the first game of the tournament, Heath Andrews sparked a four-run fourth inning with a two-run single and the Lubbock Monterey Plainsmen went on to a 7-5 win over El Paso Del Valle.

The double-elimination event continues today and Saturday, with the title game set for 3 p.m. Saturday and any "if" game to follow.

Midland Lee, which drew a bye in the first round, meets Monterey at 12:30 p.m. today. MHS takes on the winner of that game at 5:30 p.m. Del Rio and Del Valle meet in a 3 p.m. game, and the winner of that one faces the Lee—Monterey loser at 8 p.m.

5A Region I tournament opens today

Staff Report

Three-fourths of last year's Class 5A Region I boy's basketball tournament field will be back at Chaparral Center tonight for another Final Four Austin berth, including annual participant Fort Worth Dunbar.

Dunbar, 32-2 on the season, will defend the championship it won a year ago and will be going for its third consecutive Region I title.

You have to mention Dunbar just about any time you talk about the Region I level of the state playoffs. The Wildcats have won nine Region I titles in the past 15 years and six of 11 titles since the Region I tournament moved to Midland in 1981.

Dunbar will have to cross much of the same ground it did last year to win the title since the Wildcats again draw 27-3 El Paso Coronado in today's semifinals at 8 p.m. Dunbar destroyed the T-Birds by 21 points in the semifinals last year.

The other semifinal at 6 p.m. pits 28-6 Lubbock Monterey against Region I newcomer 15-13 O.D. Wyatt of Fort Worth. Monterey is also making a return appearance to the Region I tournament, losing in the semifinals last year by 11 points in overtime to Arlington Sam Houston.

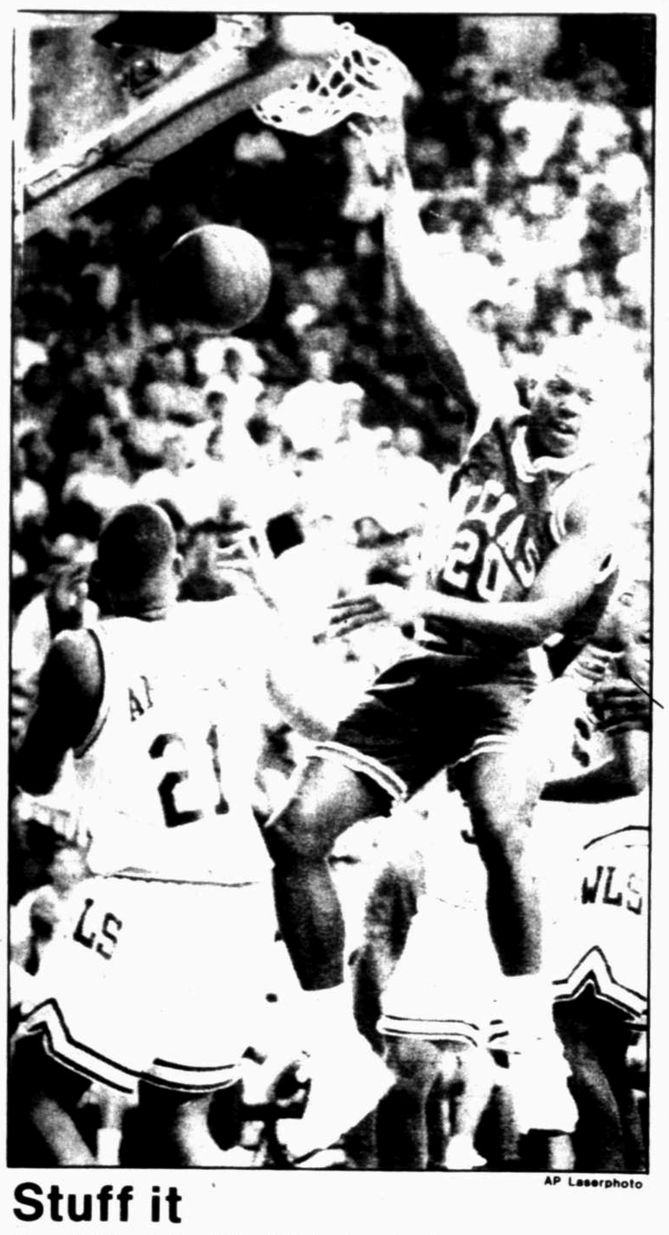

If you have to pick favorites for the 11 a.m. championship game Saturday, you have to go with Dunbar and Monterey. Since the Region I tournament moved to Midland in 1981, teams from only two districts, the Fort Worth Independent School District and teams from District 3-5A, have produced Region I championships.

However, Region I teams have not fared well at the state tournament over the years, winning only one state title since 1981. That came from Amarillo High in 1986.

It's strange that Dunbar rules the roost, so to speak, at the Region I level,

NBA Roundup

HOUSTON — Otis Thorpe had 23 of his 25 points in the first half and Vernon Maxwell hit seven of 10 from 3-point range, leading Houston to a 114-93 victory over Miami on Thursday night.

Hakeem Olajuwon had 13 of his 22 points in the fourth period, and Kenny Smith added 20 points and nine assists. Maxwell finished with 25 points.

Reserves Brian Shaw and Kevin Edwards led Miami, which has lost four straight. Shaw had 20 points and Edwards added 17.

Houston now is 6-2 since interim coach Rudy Tomjanovich took over Feb. 18.

The Heat narrowed the gap to 66-60 on Rony Seikaly's layup with 4:21 left in the third period. Olajuwon scored nine of Houston's first 11 points in the fourth quarter, and Maxwell hit three straight 3-pointers, putting the Rockets ahead 97-79 with 4:24 remaining in the game.

Maxwell leads the league with 103 3-pointers, and has had six or more 3-pointers in a game five times in his career.

Houston held a 29-16 lead with 1:34 left in the first period on consecutive 3-pointers by Matt Bullard and Maxwell. Thorpe also hit all seven of his shots in the opening period.

Edwards came off the bench for Miami and scored five straight points, pulling the Heat to 31-24 early in the second period, before Houston scored eight straight fast-break points off two steals and two layups by Smith.

The Rockets, who led 55-40 at halftime, assisted on 20 of their 22 first-half field goals.

Bullets 119, Mavericks 109

LANDOVER, Md. — Washington snapped a five-game home losing streak and handed Dallas its 16th consecutive road loss behind Pervis Ellison's 21 points and 10 rebounds.

Ledell Eackles scored 23 points for the Bullets and Michael Adams had 20. The Bullets, who hadn't won at the Capital Centre in more than a month, are the only team in the NBA with a better record on the road (11-19) than at home (9-21).

The Bullets never trailed after the first period, but led by only six points after Dallas reserve Mike Iuzzolino hit a 3-pointer early in the fourth quarter. Washington then made five straight free throws to take a 90-79 lead with 7:24 left, and the Mavericks never got closer than nine points.

Derek Harper led Dallas with 30 points and Rolando Blackman added 21. The Mavericks have lost seven of nine overall and are winless on the road since beating Houston on Dec. 23. It's the second-longest road skid in franchise history, behind the 19-game streak in 1980-81.

After the Mavericks grabbed a 13-8 lead, David Wingate had six points in a 13-3 run that put Washington on top for good. It was 36-29 midway in the second quarter when the Bullets reeled off seven straight points to go up by 16 points.

After Dallas cut a 54-44 halftime deficit to 56-50, Adams had two 3-pointers and a foul shot in a 9-0 run that made it 65-50. It was 71-56 before the Mavericks battled back to close to 79-72 entering the fourth quarter.

Knicks 101, Clippers 91

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing broke out of a scoring slump with 31 points, and the New York Knicks held Los Angeles to one field goal in the first 11 minutes of the fourth quarter.

The victory was the 12th straight by the Knicks over the Clippers, who last beat New York on Feb. 23, 1986.

Los Angeles led 83-79 on Ken Norman's jumper with 8:32 left, but the Clippers didn't score for the next 4:27, while the Knicks had 11 straight points to take the lead for good, 90-83.

The Clippers made five of six free throws to close to 91-88 with 2:38 left. But Ewing, who had a season-low four points in his previous game and five straight outings without scoring 20, then hit two baskets in a 6-0 run that put the Knicks ahead 97-88 with 1:06 left.

Ron Harper scored 23 points and Danny Manning 18 for the Clippers, who scored just 11 points in the fourth quarter. Mark Jackson had 18 points and 16 assists for the Knicks, who have won 23 of 30 games at Madison Square Garden this season.

New York started the game with an 8-0 run before the Clippers got moving, tying the score four times before a dunk by Charles Smith gave them their first lead, 30-29, with 10:22 left in the first half.

John Starks kept the Knicks close in the first five minutes of the second quarter, scoring seven of their nine points and passing to Anthony Mason for a dunk.

There were 12 ties and seven lead changes in the first half, which ended with Los Angeles ahead 56-55.

Harper and Manning each had 15 points in the first half for the Clippers, including seven each in the final 4:23 to account for all the team's scoring.

Neither team led by more than four points in the third quarter, which ended with six lead changes and two ties in the final 3:08.

Bulls 113, Timberwolves 100

MINNEAPOLIS — Michael Jordan scored 10 of his 33 points during an 18-0 third-quarter run as the Chicago Bulls rebounded from a rare home loss with a victory over the Minnesota Timberwolves.

Playing almost as poorly as they did Tuesday, when they blew a 22-point first-quarter lead and lost 103-101 to Indiana, the defending NBA champion Bulls trailed expansion Minnesota 67-61 with 7:51 left in the third period.

But Chicago, which has lost to only two sub-.500 teams all season, snapped out of its stupor behind Jordan.

Jordan made a pair of three-point plays, hit a 17-foot jumper and capped the 18-point surge with a thunderous dunk for a 79-67 lead with 4½ minutes remaining in the third quarter. The league's top scorer had his 31st game of 30-plus points this season.

Will Perdue added a career-high 16 points and 11 rebounds off the bench for the Bulls, who have the NBA's best record (49-12) and best road mark (23-8).

Pooh Richardson scored 22 points for the Timberwolves, who haven't beaten Chicago in six tries since entering the league in 1989-90. Minnesota, the league's worst team overall (11-47) and at home (7-23), has lost seven of its last eight games and 21 of 25.

The Timberwolves shot just 44 percent in the first half but still trailed only 53-52. Minnesota, which has outrebounded its opponent only 11 times all season, had a 30-24 halftime edge — including 13-3 on the offensive boards.

Chicago attempted only one first-half free throw, and that when the Wolves were whistled for their second illegal defense with under a minute left. The Bulls finished with only 9 free throws in 12 tries.

Suns 118, SuperSonics 105

PHOENIX — Kevin Johnson scored eight of his 24 points during a 17-3 third-quarter run as Phoenix beat Seattle.

The Suns were outrebounded 38-21 in the first half, but took control of the boards 19-7 in the third quarter when their five-minute burst brought them from four points down to an 81-71 lead with 2:48 left.

Johnson, who had 12 assists, capped the spurt with two free throws, a 17-foot jumper at the end of a fast break, and an assist on a basket by Jeff Hornacek.

Phoenix led 90-80 at the end of the third period and put the game away with an 11-2 run at the start of the fourth quarter.

Tom Chambers led Phoenix with 27 points, while Dan Majerle added 25.

Ricky Pierce scored 23 points for the Sonics. Dana Barros added 19, while Shawn Kemp had 18 points and 19 rebounds.

Warriors 116, Cavaliers 108

OAKLAND, Calif. — Sarunas Marciulionis matched his season high with 29 points as the Golden State Warriors beat the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The Warriors forced the Cavaliers into 18 turnovers that led to 30 points for Golden State, which has won its last five home games against Cleveland.

Cleveland had a season-low seven turnovers Wednesday in a 109-108 win over Sacramento.

The Cavaliers were led by Larry Nance and Brad Daugherty, who had 20 points and 10 rebounds each.

All five Warriors starters were in double figures along with Marciulionis, who came off the bench. Tim Hardaway had 19, Chris Mullin 18 and Billy Owens 15.

Golden State entered the final period leading 87-77.

Top 25 Roundup

TUCSON, Ariz. — Sean Rooks scored 16 points and Chris Mills 15 as fourth-ranked Arizona continued its quest for a fifth straight Pacific-10 Conference title, defeating California 100-75 Thursday night.

Arizona (23-4, 12-3), used defensive pressure and superior height and experience to crunch the Golden Bears (8-17, 2-13), who started three freshmen.

The Wildcats trailed league coleaders UCLA and Southern Cal by one game entering the contest. The Wildcats finish their Pac-10 schedule at those schools next week.

The Wildcats, with six players in double figures, led by as many as 26 points in the first half, during which they shot 61 percent, and were ahead 57-33 at intermission.

They held 29-point leads three times in the second half before going up briefly by 30 when Deron Johnson's layup made it 98-68 with 1:52 remaining.

Arizona set the tone by making its first five shots, including 3-pointers from Mills and Matt Othick, in taking a 13-5 lead.

Lamond Murray's 3-pointer drew the Golden Bears within 21-18. But the Wildcats scored 12 straight points during an 18-5 run in which they hit four 3-pointers — one each by Othick and Khalid Reeves and two by Damon Stoudamire, for a 39-23 lead.

To show the kind of night Cal had, late in the first half coach Lou Campanelli was called for a technical after objecting to a call made when Rooks was fouled. The officials let Othick take the technical foul shots first, which he made, then disallowed them. Rooks hit his two foul shots, and then Othick shot — and made — the technicals again.

Reeves and Stoudamire finished with 14 points apiece, Othick 11 and Johnson 10.

Murray had 17 points and Alfred Grigsby 12 for Cal.

The win was Arizona's sixth straight at home against Cal, and its 10th win in the last 11 games with the Bears.

No. 8 Southern Cal 75, Washington 63

SEATTLE — Despite a poor shooting night, Harold Miner scored 21 points and No. 8 Southern California beat Washington to stay atop the Pacific-10.

The Trojans (21-4 overall, 13-2 Pac-10) beat the Huskies (12-15, 5-11) for the second time this season. Rich Manning led Washington with 21.

Leading 39-36 at halftime, Southern Cal turned on a pressure defense that made it tough for the Huskies' guards to get Washington into its slow-down, half-court offense.

Miner scored 11 of his points in the second half, but wound up hitting just seven of 18 shots overall.

USC freshman Lorenzo Orr shattered a glass backboard while dunking in practice about an hour before the game and sustained a cut above his right eye. He played despite having six stitches and scored 10 points, all in the first half.

No. 13 Michigan State 72, Northwestern 55

EVANSTON, Ill. — Shawn Respert scored 20 points and Mike Peplowski added 17 to lead 13th-ranked Michigan State to a Big Ten victory over Northwestern.

The Spartans broke open a tight game with a 19-4 run sparked by Peplowski midway in the second half.

The victory was the fifth in the last seven games for the Spartans (19-6, 9-6). Northwestern (8-17, 1-14) lost its seventh straight.

Kevin Rankin led Northwestern with 18 points and Cedric Neloms and Todd Leslie had 13 each.

Michigan State led most of the first half and went ahead 23-18 before Leslie hit a 3-pointer and Rankin scored four straight points to give the Wildcats a 25-23 lead. A 3-pointer by Kris Weshinskey between baskets by Stephens gave the Spartans a 30-29 halftime lead.

Neither team took more than a three-point lead in the second half until the Wildcats, after going ahed 39-37, hit a four-minute dry spell.

Trouble not over for UNLV

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — The specter of NCAA penalties may hang over the troubled UNLV basketball program for years because of a landmark federal lawsuit on the due process issue scheduled to begin next week.

"Once again, UNLV is the unwilling test case for intercollegiate athletics," UNLV legal counsel Brad Booke said Thursday.

The NCAA filed suit in Nevada challenging the constitutionality of a law passed by the 1991 state Legislature that would force the agency to provide due process in NCAA enforcement proceedings.

Attorneys on both sides say the issue is likely to be challenged all the way to the Supreme Court.

Booke said Thursday that 40 infractions allegations the NCAA has raised against UNLV will remain in limbo until the due process issue is settled.

That means it could be years before the NCAA Infractions Committee hands down a penalty on alleged violations at UNLV dating back to 1986.

"There's a distinct possibility the legal battle could go on for years," Booke said. "All the while, of course, UNLV suffers the de facto penalty that occurs whenever an infractions case is pending, because it's used against the university in recruiting."

UNLV is no stranger to serving a penalty years after the violation.

This year's Rebel team, 26-2 and ranked No. 6, cannot participate in postseason play as a final resolution of a battle between former coach Jerry Tarkanian and the NCAA dating back to 1977.

The long delay in resolving the infractions case is the latest in a series of problems at UNLV.

Tarkanian resigned last June, effective at the end of this season, following publication of photos showing three former players with convicted sports fixer Richard Perry.

Pascual Perez misses practice, may have another drug violation

Associated Press

Pascual Perez finally arrived at spring training last week. But he didn't stay long.

The New York Yankees pitcher didn't show up for practice Thursday at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., because he failed a drug test, according to a source close to the player. Perez could be facing a one-year suspension.

A spokesman at the commissioner's office would not comment directly on the drug test result, but said a statement would be made concerning Perez's status on Friday. The spokesman said Commissioner Fay Vincent was en route from the owner's meetings in Rosemont, Ill. to Florida.

The Yankees would neither confirm nor deny that Perez had failed the drug test.

On April 17, 1984, as a member of the Atlanta Braves, Perez was suspended retroactive to April 3 through May 15 following his Jan. 9 arrest in the Dominican Republic on charges of cocaine possession.

Perez also spent two months in drug rehabilitation while a member of the Montreal Expos prior to the 1989 season.

To avoid suspension in 1989, Perez agreed he would be suspened for a year if the second test — from the same urine sample — is also positive. He would also have to apply to the commissioner for reinstatement.

Baseball and the Major League Baseball Players Association agreed to a joint drug program on June 21, 1984, after owners backed off their demand for random testing. The owners, however, terminated the agreement on Oct. 22, 1985 and began to demand for drug-testing clauses in individual contracts.

Arbitrator Thomas Roberts voided the drug-testing clauses in a grievance decision during 1986, saying the matter had to be collectively bargained.

The owners announced their own drug plan on March 15, 1988, but the union has not agreed to it.

Baseball Roundup

Whenever a drug issue arises, penalties and rehabilitation are negotiated between the player's agent, the union and the owner's Player Relations Committee.

The source close to Perez, who asked not to be named, told The Associated Press that representatives of the pitcher had yet to meet with the players association.

"We are pursuing all the facts, and until we have all the facts we will not comment," manager Buck Showalter said. "It's something we will be able to address better tomorrow or the next day."

"I'm not going to say anything now," general manager Gene Michael said. "We're looking into it."

His absence was especially disturbing to the Yankees because they are concerned about Perez's rehabilitation from an arm injury that forced him to miss 247 games the last two years.

Last week, Perez acknowledged that he didn't work out in the offseason.

"I didn't do anything all winter," he said. "I started touching my glove and ball in January."

Perez, 34, is entering the final season of a three-year, $5.7 million contract. In his first two years with the Yankees, he pitched only 87 2-3 innings and compiled a 3-6 record.

Hobbling slugger Bo Jackson showed up for Chicago's exhibition opener against Pittsburgh and went 2-for-2 to help the White Sox win 6-1. But he once again limped around the bases, a clear sign that he may never fully recover from his hip injury.

"There are some days when I get the best of it, and then there are some days, weeks, when it gets the best of me," Jackson said. "It's probably going to get worse as time goes on. There will be some days when I'm not able to play."

Thon delights Rangers in intrasquad scrimmage

Associated Press

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. — Veteran shortstop Dickie Thon, signed by the Texas Rangers during the off-season, quickly made himself welcome in spring training camp.

Leading off and playing short during the club's first intrasquad game, Thon hit a single to left off Jeff Robinson to open the game. He ended up with a 2-for-4 night.

"I feel ready to go. I'm in great shape physically," Thon said. "I think I'm gonna get a chance to play here. Ideally, I want to play every day."

The Rangers hope Thon can help improve their defense. The Rangers committed 134 errors last season to 116 for the opposition and turned 17 fewer double plays.

"It's a help to any team to have a veteran anchoring the middle defense," Rangers pitching coach Tom House said. "With Dickie, we've got the savvy veteran to complement Jose Hernandez, the young guy with the potential.

"It can only help our pitching if the defense improves behind it. And if we can get our pitchers to throw strikes and stay healthy, it could be our year."

Thon signed a one-year free agent contract with the Rangers, coming off three healthy, productive seasons with the Philadelphia Phillies.

His best major league season was 1983 with the Houston Astros, when he made the National League All-Star team then went on to hit .286 with 20 homers and 79 RBIs.

But his baseball future was in jeopardy after a beaning the fifth game of the 1984 season. He took a fastball from the Mets' Mike Torrez in the temple. Complications from the beaning caused swelling in the back of his eye, impairing his vision. Into 1987, Thon was still experiencing vision problems.

His exhaustive rehabilitative efforts seemingly not paying dividends, Thon's Astros career ended in 1988, and he spent one year in San Diego, appearing in 70 games.

But from 1989-91, with the Phillies, Thon hit .271, .255, and .252. In 1989, he topped National League shortstops with 17 homers and tied as the top RBI shortstop with 60. Over three seasons in Philly, he averaged over 140 games at shortstop.

Bo needs own rule

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — What the Chicago White Sox really need is the Bo rule — the designated hitter gets a designated runner.

Because, as Bo Jackson showed in Thursday's exhibition opener, he still can hit. He went a sharp 2-for-2 with a two-run double and a walk in a 6-1 victory over Pittsburgh.

But, he can't run. He limped badly into second base on his double, which likely would've been a triple before his hip injury, and later barely hobbled home on a wild throw.

Baseball owners, however, did not approve any rule changes in Jackson's favor at their meeting this week. So, he wants to change his status.

"I was raised to work hard for my pay and at this point in time, I don't think I'm earning my keep," Jackson said. "I don't feel I'm able to give the White Sox a full 100 percent right now.

Recorder at issue in Switzer trial

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A former colleague of newspaper reporter Jack Taylor Jr. has testified that he provided an Oklahoma football player's girlfriend with a tape recorder but said he didn't tell her to record the player's phone conversations.

Dan Langendorf, a former Dallas Times Herald sports writer, testified via videotape Thursday in the trial over Taylor's lawsuit against former Oklahoma football coach Barry Switzer.

Taylor is suing for libel, slander and invasion of privacy, contending that he was falsely accused in Switzer's book "Bootlegger's Boy" of being involved in a scheme to plant drugs on an Oklahoma football player.

Previous witnesses have testified that the woman living with the football player — Brad McBride — was given a tape recorder by Langendorf. The woman used the tape recorder to record telephone conversations with Sooner football players about drugs and ticket scalping.

Langendorf said he had several conversations with McBride's girlfriend, Janeeo Dior, concerning scalping and the buying and selling of drugs by Sooner players.

Couples leads PGA Doral Open

Associated Press

MIAMI — Fred Couples converted the momentum of a victory in Los Angeles into a share of a four-way tie for the lead Thursday in the first round of the Doral Open.

"I usually feel very comfortable right after winning," said Couples, who scored a playoff triumph last weekend.

"Bogeys don't bother you. I feel very relaxed. I don't get too edgy no matter what happens."

That relaxed, easy-going attitude was enhanced by par-saving putts of 20 and 30 feet in a bogey-free round of 66, six under par on the Blue Monster course at Doral.

He shared the lead with Australian Steve Elkington, who had an eagle-3 in his effort, and journeymen Loren Roberts and Mike Smith.

The group at 67, five under, included 49-year-old Ray Floyd, Curtis Strange, Ben Crenshaw, Jim Gallagher, Duffy Waldorf, Bobby Wadkins and Fred Funk.

The exceptionally low scoring, the leaders agreed, was the result of the best greens they've seen this year.

"They're so good you can't imagine missing" a putt, Roberts said.

"Fifty percent better than anything we've seen this year," Elkington said.

"Perfect. The best I've ever seen here," Couples agreed.

No one, however, was happier with the putting surfaces than Floyd, a two-time winner of this title who will join the Senior PGA Tour later this year.

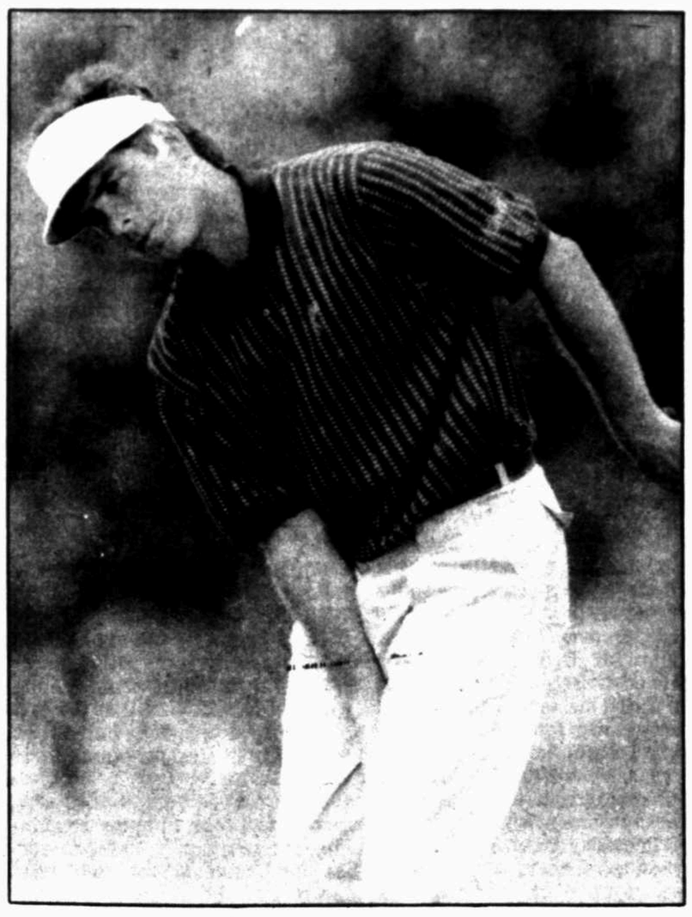

"The greens are marvelous, the best I've ever played here," he said.

And he made the most of them, one-putting 13 times.

"I love it. I love it. I made more putts than in many a moon," Floyd said before rushing off to meet with the architect handling the rebuilding of Floyd's home, destroyed by fire two weeks ago.

While delighted with his mastery of the greens, Floyd was puzzled by the deterioration of his tee-to-green game.

"Overall, it was easily the worst round I've played this year," he said. "And it was my best score of the year."

Andrews birdies to join 5-way LPGA Inamori tie

Associated Press

POWAY, Calif. — Donna Andrews birdied her final hole for a 69 to join a five-way tie for the lead Thursday after the first round of the LPGA Inamori Classic at StoneRidge Country Club.

Judy Dickinson, Dana Lofland, Val Skinner and Barb Thomas also shot 69s. Dawn Coe, winner of last week's Kemper Open, and defending LPGA and U.S. Women's Open champion Meg Mallon were among seven players tied at 2-under-par 70.

Defending champion Laura Davies was at 73.

Andrews, who started on the back nine, made her only bogey on No. 10 when she missed an 18-foot putt. She finished even par through nine holes after sinking a 3-footer for a birdie on 17.

Her score went to 2 under with consecutive birdie putts of 10 feet on No. 2 and six feet on No. 3. She closed her round with an 18-foot birdie putt on the ninth hole.

"I hit the ball very well," Andrews said. "I hit 16 of 18 greens and 11 of 14 fairways. It was my best ball-striking day of the year."

Dickinson started on the back nine, sinking a 3-foot birdie putt on her first hole of the round. She also had birdie putts from 5 feet on No. 6 and 6 feet on No. 7 during a bogeyless day.

"I felt pretty good," said Dickinson, who tied for second in the tournament last year. "I played really steady. I made the birdies and pars when I needed to."

Lofland started fast with birdies on three of her first six holes. She sank putts of 25 feet on No. 3, 10 feet on No. 4 and 8 feet on No. 6.

She began the back nine with a 15-foot birdie on No. 10. However, she suffered her only bogey by missing a 15-foot putt on the 16th hole.

"I hit 17 greens," said Lofland, who finished fourth at last week's Kemper Open. "Generally, that has been the strong point for me."

T-of-C: Culpepper goes distance for MHS against Del Rio starter Joey Gomez. A two-out error with the bases loaded kept MHS alive in the first inning, and Richie Greth's single put the 'Dogs in front 3-0. Gomez walked the next four MHS batters — three with the bags full — and he never finished the frame as 12 Bulldogs batted in the inning.

Reliever Oscar Rios — who got the final out in the first — had better luck. He held MHS to three runs on six hits in 5⅓ innings, but the Rams came up short against Culpepper (1-1), who mostly scattered 10 hits in going the distance while MHS evened its record at 3-3.

"I was really excited with Dewayne's performance. We've been tired and he had a good solid seven innings," said MHS head coach Rick Wood, whose Bulldogs ended a three-game losing skid with the win.

"It's just nice to win again. I think the kids were really focused. They were hitting the ball well."

MHS collected nine hits in all. Adrian Mills doubled, tripled and scored twice and Adan Saldana's RBI single keyed a two-run second inning. Jimmy Stanton's sacrifice fly in the fourth inning pushed Mills home with MHS's only earned run of the game. The Rams committed four errors in all.

Culpepper was knocked around a bit in the third when Del Rio managed four hits, including Justin Wilson's two-run double into the left-field corner. But the MHS southpaw gave up just two hits and a walk over the next three innings. When Del Rio threatened with two baserunners in the fourth, MHS third baseman Renato Saldana started a bang-bang double play that ended the inning.

The Rams tried to rally with back-to-back singles leading off the top of the seventh, but Culpepper fanned pinch hitter Jesus Chavez with the bases loaded to complete the win.

Steven Reed helped ignite Monterey's offense in the tourney opener. Reed punched an RBI single in the first inning and he added a solo home run to left field in the third to back the pitching of junior lefthander Chris Shuffield (1-0), who hurled 5 innings for the win.

Rick Roberts suffered the loss as the Conquistadores fell to 2-3 for the season.

Leading 7-4 and with relief pitcher Britt Carmichael on to work the seventh, Monterey flirted with disaster when Charlie Nieto was hit by a pitch and Del Valle catcher Raul Silva tripled. Silva's aerial was barely fair deep down the right-field line. Nieto scored easily on the hit and Silva tried to follow him home when he noticed Reed, the rightfielder, still trying to recover the ball.

The play at the plate might have been a close one, but the ball got past catcher Joey Gonzales...and Silva fell down eight feet shy of the plate.

Carmichael was backing up on the play and he relayed the ball to Gonzales before Silva managed to regain his feet. Silva, had he scored, would have made it a one-run game with one out. But Carmichael got Carlos Malfavon to ground out next and it ended the game.

Geiberger off to good start

OJAI, Calif. (AP) — Al Geiberger decided to turn mean this year.

"Not nasty mean, just aggressive mean," Geiberger said. "I've let some good chances for wins slide away, but now I'm getting tough."

Geiberger's off to a good start, winning the Senior Tournament of Champions in January, his seventh victory on the seniors tour, and ranking high on the money list.

He will join defending champion Chi Chi Rodriguez, Arnold Palmer and Dave Stockton in the field for the GTE West Classic tournament beginning Friday at Ojai Valley Inn and Country Club.

Looking back to last year, Geiberger said the Senior U.S. Open was one of the tournaments he let slip away.

In the final round, he missed birdie putts from inside 10 feet on No. 15 and No. 17, then bogeyed the final hole to fall one stroke short of joining Jack Nicklaus and Rodriguez in a playoff.

Geiberger, a native of nearby Santa Barbara, has won more than $2 million on the seniors tour, including $519,526 last year.

Stockton, a rookie on the tour for players 50 and older, said he has two goals for the tournament.

"I'd like to make a good showing in my first appearance at Ojai and I want to prove that I belong on the senior tour," Stockton said.

Stockton was captain of the winning U.S. Ryder Cup team last September, as the Americans ended a losing streak dating back to 1983.

"That was the greatest thrill I've ever had in golf," he said. "I devoted a year and a half of my life to the Ryder Cup team and it was the fulfillment of a dream.

"Now I have another chance to give something back to golf."

Canyon slips past McGregor in 3A semifinal, 45-44

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Sandi Stevens hit a running 15-foot jump shot with 4 seconds remaining to give Canyon a 45-44 victory over McGregor in a Class 3A state high school semifinal game Thursday at the girls state basketball tournament.

Rosaland Wilkerson probably could have given McGregor the victory by hitting her free throws with 11 seconds to play and her team leading, 44-43.

But she missed the first shot of a 1-and-1, and Stevens flew down court and made the shot that gave Canyon the victory, instead. The loss was only the second in 35 games for McGregor.

Canyon (29-8) will play Winnsboro (36-3) in Saturday's Class 3A state championship game.

"Every night after my prayers, I think '3 ... 2 ... 1 ...' I knew it was in when I let it go," said Stevens, a 5-4 junior guard.

Stevens and Wilkerson both finished with 20 points. Wilkerson tied a three-year-old state record by making five 3-pointers in the game.

Wilkerson scored the first eight points of the second quarter to help McGregor build a 19-13 lead.

Midway through the third quarter, Canyon trailed, 29-19, before Stevens took over, scoring 16 of Canyon's final 22 points. McGregor was held to its lowest point total of the season.

Class 3A Semifinal
Winnsboro 66, Yoakum 60

Mandy Hale scored 13 of her 21 points in the second half, leading No. 1-ranked Winnsboro past Yoakum.

Girls State Tournament

The loss overshadowed a 27-point performance, on 12-of-20 shooting, by Yoakum's Kristen Cibrowski. Kim Jetter added 19 points and 14 rebounds for Yoakum.

In a rematch of last year's semifinal game, won 59-48 by Winnsboro, the Lady Raiders fought back from a an early 10-point deficit to secure their place in the final game for the second straight year.

Jetter's steal and bucket gave Yoakum a 41-31 lead with 5:39 left in the third quarter.

However, Winnsboro went on a 20-10 run over the next seven minutes to tie the game, and Hale scored a basket that gave Winnsboro the lead for good, 53-51.

Winnsboro (36-3) lost to Tulia, 58-39, in the 1991 Class 3A state championship game. Yoakum ended its season at 31-6.

Class 4A Semifinals
Canyon Randall 66, Austin Westlake 50

Amanda Sandlin scored eight points during a 14-0 run over the last four minutes, sending Canyon Randall past Austin Westlake in a Class 4A semifinal.

Canyon Randall, winners of it last 19 games, will face Georgetown on Saturday for the Class 4A title at the 42nd annual University Interscholastic League tournament.

But the game, albeit rough and sloppy, was close until early in the fourth quarter.

Georgetown led 44-42 after three periods. The game was tied at 48 when junior center Zandra Baldwin tried breaking the press with a cross-court pass.

But Baldwin's pass hit the backboard and rim, and deflected into the hands of Randall's Sandy Parker. Parker's jumper put Randall ahead 50-48, beginning a dominant final six minutes.

Randall improves to 32-2 while Westlake ends the season 28-5.

Georgetown 59, Kaufman 44

Guard Shawna Ford scored 30 points, including a state tournament record six 3-pointers, leading Georgetown past Kaufman.

The victory was the 29th straight for Georgetown, which improved its record to 33-2. Kaufman ended its season at 27-8.

Georgetown lost to Dallas Lincoln last season in the semifinals.

Ford, a 5-6 senior guard who was 2-of-6 from outside the 3-point arc in the tournament a year ago, was 6-of-8 Thursday night. She also had 4 assists and 4 steals, with three of those coming on consecutive plays.

Lanae Jones, a 6-4 senior who has signed to play for the University of Oklahoma, led Kaufman with 29 points, 12 rebounds and 8 blocks.

After leading Georgetown to a 31-19 halftime lead with 14 points, Ford came out and scored the first 12 points of the second half on four consecutive 3-pointers. The Eagles enjoyed their biggest lead of the night, 47-24, midway through the third quarter.

Jones had 13 points in the fourth quarter, leading Kaufman in a rally that cut Georgetown's lead to 13 points with 2:58 to play.

Class A Semifinals
Brock 58, Claude 53

Brock came from 11 points behind in the second half to defeat Claude in a Class A semifinal behind the 16 points and 7 rebounds of Elisha Walker.

Brock will play for the Class A state championship Saturday against Celeste (36-0).

Brock, which withstood 28 turnovers, improved to 33-4. Claude ended the season 33-3.

Walker was perfect from the field on five shots.

Shalmarie Stoffle led Claude with 23 points, 12 rebounds and 8 steals.

Using a full-court press, Claude sprinted to a 23-12 lead at the end of the first quarter, but Brock reeled off 13 straight points for a 25-23 advantage.

Brock slipped behind 52-45 with more than four minutes remaining, but went on a 13-1 run and limited Claude to one field goal the rest of the game.

Celeste 73, North Zulch 34

Shalonda Enis scored 44 points to lead unbeaten Celeste past North Zulch.

Enis' output is the most points scored in the state tournament since Texas girls switched from six-on-six basketball to five-on-five in 1979. Karen Thompson held the previous mark, scoring 42 for Pflugerville in 1979.

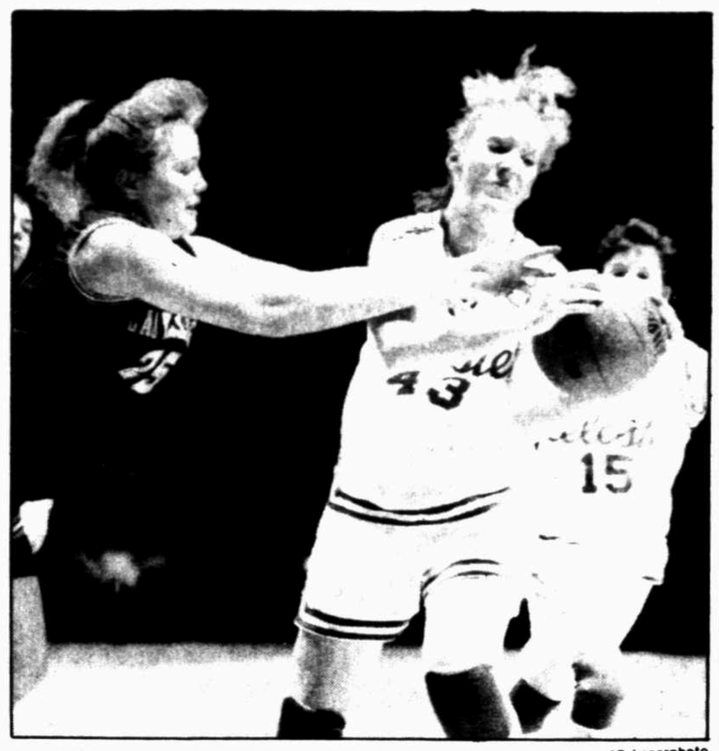

The all-time mark is 68 by Juvean McWhorter of Class A Collinsville in 1956.

Enis, a 6-foot junior, connected on 19-of-29 shots and ripped down 12 rebounds as Celeste improved to 36-0 on the season. North Zulch, which unseated tournament mainstay Moulton in the regional finals, bows out at 32-5.

Celeste is trying to become the first undefeated champion in Class A since Nazareth went 33-0 in 1985.

Mika Jeffries had 11 for North Zulch.

Enis built a 30-point cushion in the third quarter as it outscored North Zulch 19-8. Enis scored the first 16 points in the quarter.

Texas Tech women savor SWC championship

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — For 10 years, Texas Tech women's basketball coach Marsha Sharp chased the mighty Texas Lady Longhorns.

Now the Lady Red Raiders are on top of the Southwest Conference and Sharp hopes it's not a fleeting visit.

"Come fill the stands at the conference tournament so we can outcheer the folks in the burnt orange," Sharp told supporters, minutes after Tech defeated Texas A&M 84-62 on Wednesday night to clinch its first ever SWC regular-season championship.

Drenched in ice water poured by her jubilant players and clutching her freshly cut piece of basketball net, Sharp recalled all the times she watched Texas coach Jody Conradt hold the conference trophy.

"Texas has been what you shoot for for the past 10 years. I am not necessarily pleased to be on top of them, but I am happy that we can get in the arena and compete with them," Sharp said.

"Maybe now we have some of the same weapons, like crowd support, experience and confidence. Those were the intangibles Texas has always had. I would like to think we have them now too and can build for the future."

Tech, which will be the top seed in the SWC postseason tournament next week, becomes only the third school to win the regular-season title.

Texas won eight consecutive SWC crowns beginning in 1983 before Arkansas won the title last year.

"It's not every day you win a conference championship," Sharp said. "Sometimes it takes you 10 years. I hope it won't take as long for the next one. Hopefully we can meet here next year with another trophy."

The No. 15 Lady Red Raiders (22-4, 12-1 SWC) wept at midcourt as SWC commissioner Fred Jacoby handed the players their golden trophy.

CHAPS: Green expects a a pressing foe in Leopards aging 15.5 ppg and 5.5 rpg; Mark Washington, a 6-2 sophomore off-guard averaging 9 ppg, and point guard Tom Booth, a sophomore from Temple averaging 9 ppg.

(From 1C)

Among the starting five, Jones and Nicholas are considered the prime picks.

Temple averages 104.5 points per game offensively while their defense yields 94.5 ppg.

MC head coach Steve Green says he knows Temple to be "a pressing, uptempo type team that will force action on offense more than on defense."

Green' brother Kelly led his Western Texas team to a 13-point defeat of the Leopards. Howard also got the better of Temple while Odessa College split a two-game series.

"All that was first semester," Green noted. "I think they're probably a different team the second semester."

On the other hand, the Chaps appear to be a force gaining in confidence and desire.

"If we're playing good, I don't think it would be boasting to say we'll be tough to beat."

Green said he felt his Chaps have shaken the effects of a late season slump where the team's losing streak reached three.

"It's like we gave away the league," Green said of the perception of the Chaps' slide. "It was never ours. We just happened to be positioned in front because we had done a better job for 13 games. I just think it all caught up with us.

"The only game we lost all year long that we had better players than they did was against Western," a 71-70 loss, Feb. 20. "I'm stuck for a reason we lost that game, other than it came in the aftermath of a disappointing loss." Johnson said he expects to face a team similar in nature to the Howard College team Green coached in last years regionals. That, however, might not be what he winds up facing.

"We've become such a half-court team this year that we kind of quit running up and down the floor (in practice)," Green said. "We became so regimented having to attack with a half court defense, what we do now in practice is just run up and down the floor, relax and try and get some easier baskets. And I think we're going to have to do that against Temple, because they're going to press you all night long."

Last year, Temple, in its first year in the NTJCAC, won the conference. Two years ago, the Leopards were in the South Texas JCAC.

"We used to be the northernmost team in the southern conference," Johnson noted. "Now, we're the southernmost team in the northern conference."

The switch in leagues came about when the Temple girls started playing basketball and needed a conference with which to become affiliated. Since there wasn't a girls' league in the southern conference, Temple voted for the move north.

"We've got kind of a laid back atmosphere here," Johnson said. "Hopefully we won't get too uptight at the tournament. We can come out and score some points, though."

Added Green: "Basically, this is an opportunity to showcase their individual skills. Guys come to junior college for a second opportunity and secondly, to better themselves. There's no better place to go than the regional tournament to get themselves marketable."

NOTES: All Midland College and Odessa College regional tournament games can be heard on KCRS (550-AM); pre-game begins 15 minutes prior to tip-off. ... Prices slip

NEW YORK — Oil prices settled mixed Thursday in uneventful trading.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in April, which slipped 1 cent on Wednesday, settled at $18.55 a 42-gallon barrel, off 8 cents on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Subsequent contract months also declined.

Lower-grade sour crude for delivery in May settled at $15.86 per barrel, down 10 cents.

Trading was quiet. Dealers said activity was technically driven, with no fresh fundamental news to influence the market.

In natural gas trading, the April contract lost 1.1 cents to $1.180 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar gained against major world currencies Thursday but finished below its highest levels of the session in uneventful trading.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell to a closing 132.00 Japanese yen from 131.50 yen at Wednesday's close.

The British pound fell in London to $1.7165 from $1.7240 late Wednesday.

Macy stores close

R.H. Macy & Co. said Thursday that it would shutter five of its 24 I. Magnin outlets and 52 other specialty stores by June, its first announcement of closings since the retailer filed for bankruptcy in late January.

Analysts said that while the move would have little impact on Macy's finances, it signaled that management was taking necessary steps to focus its operations by selling off less profitable stores.

Macy has also acted to bolster the standing of Myron "Mike" E. Ullman 3rd, vice chairman, by giving him the additional title of chief operating officer. The change was disclosed in recent bankruptcy documents, which said Ullman's new title and a sweetened employment contract were "a response to a legitimate offer" from another undisclosed company.

Stocks retreat

NEW YORK — The stock market declined broadly for the second straight session Thursday, weighed down by increasing doubts about the chances for any further credit-easing by the Federal Reserve.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 27.06 points to 3,241.50 on top of Wednesday's 21.69-point drop.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by nearly 3 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Chevron to lay off 700 workers

■ Company to cut work force at Port Arthur refinery by 30 percent in May.

Associated Press

PORT ARTHUR — Chevron U.S.A. Products Co. announced Thursday it will lay off 700 workers at its Port Arthur refinery to eliminate inefficiencies and save millions of dollars in retooling costs.

The layoffs, beginning in May and feared for months at the nearly century-old refinery, will trim the 1,900-person work force by about 30 percent as one of two production lines is eliminated.

"The new configuration will bring our refinery's average equipment age to 15 years instead of 30, making it one of the most modern, competitive refineries in the Gulf Coast region," Lance Gyorfi, the refinery general manager, said. "I'm confident that the plan we have developed jointly with employees, union leaders and the local community will be effectively implemented, avoiding closure of the refinery and a reduction of hundreds of additional jobs."

San Francisco-based Chevron U.S.A. Products Co. announced in January it was considering closing, selling, downsizing or finding a joint-venture partner for its Port Arthur refinery, the company's largest, as part of a 5 percent company-wide reduction of its 50,600-member workforce.

"It's unfortunate, but at least they're not shutting the whole thing down," said Kathy Schwartz, a spokeswoman for the Texas Department of Commerce. "That would have been worse for the whole community. It's certainly unfortunate that 700 people will lose their jobs. Hopefully they can be placed elsewhere in the community."

According to terms of its contract with the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, workers to be cut will be given 60 days notice.

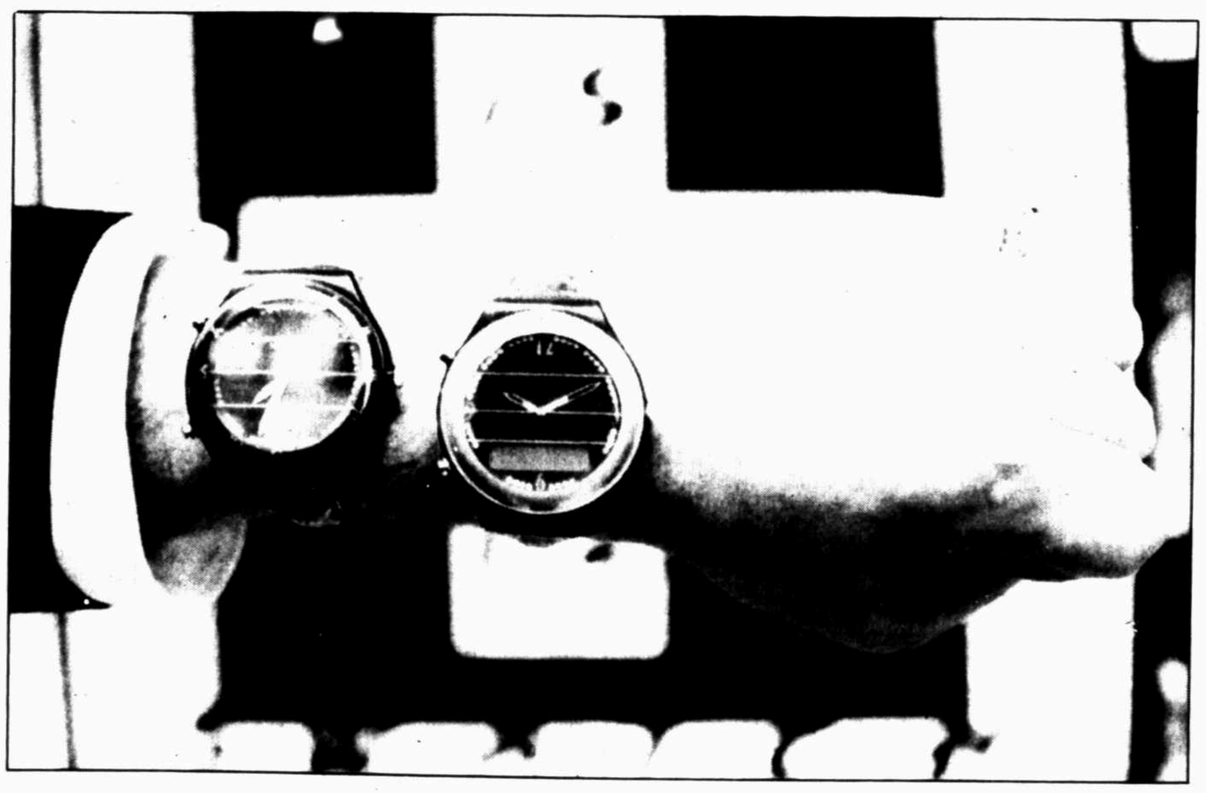

A secretary at the Local 4-23 of the union said the union's top officers were out of town Thursday and were not available for comment.

Chevron announced Jan. 15 a series of changes designed to trim expenses as it faces spending more than $2 billion in the next five years to bring its eight refineries into compliance with new environmental regulations.

The oil company said at the time that at the very least about 500 of the Port Arthur plant's 1,900 jobs could be cut as the plant goes to a single line operation for processing crude oil.

The company has said it hopes the corporate changes will save $600 million a year by 1993 by reducing operating costs 50 cents per barrel.

At Port Arthur, Chevron said its yield from processed crude oil would improve by about 10 percent, while net margins will improve by about $2 per barrel.

Retail industry shows improved February sales

■ Figures strengthen for second straight month.

By Joyce M. Rosenberg
Associated Press writer

The prolonged consumer spending slump showed further signs of ending Thursday as the nation's largest storeowners reported sales strengthened in February for the second straight month.

Retailers in all segments of the industry reported gains, and even expensive merchandise like furniture and major appliances sold well. Some storeowners said sales were better than expected, but many cautioned that their recession-battered businesses weren't home free yet.

"It might be the beginning of a recovery," said Jean O'Neil, a retail industry analyst with the investment firm Kidder, Peabody & Co.

Karen Sack, a retail industry analyst with Standard & Poor's Corp., said: "There were some nice surprises. ... People seem to be coming back, a little nibbling here and there."

Discounter Wal-Mart Stores Inc., the nation's largest retailer, continued to lead the pack, with a 20 percent gain at its established stores, those open at least a year.

Merchants were pleased but wary. While business began to improve in January and continued to pick up in February, these are the least significant months of the retail year.

"We believe it's too early to predict any trends," said Stephen E. Watson, president of Dayton Hudson Corp.

Allen Questrom, chairman of Federated Department Stores Inc., which reemerged from bankruptcy last month, said his company's sales were stronger than expected.

Nonetheless, he said, "we think it will be into the fall season before we see any significant or sustained improvement in levels of consumer activity across all areas of the business."

The first big test of consumers' willingness to spend is expected in March and April, when shoppers begin buying spring clothes. The bulk of spring purchases are expected to take place in April, since Easter arrives later this year than in 1991.

Some of the February sales appear stronger because they are compared to the very weak results of a year ago, when consumers were preoccupied with the Gulf War and spent little time shopping.

Insurers rebound in '91 despite insolvencies

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite the high-profile failures of a few of insurance giants that shocked policyholders in 1991, the industry overall enjoyed an extremely profitable year, new data shows.

An analysis of the regulatory filings of 75 large life insurers — which represent 55 percent of the industry's total assets — showed an 18.5 percent jump in surplus capital last year, said Townsend & Schupp Co., a Hartford, Conn.-based consulting firm.

Surplus capital is the amount of money an insurer has in addition to the reserves required by state regulators. Surplus is set aside to meet excessive policyholder claims and is the primary measurement of an insurer's financial strength.

Of the companies Townsend & Schupp reviewed, only four of 75 reported declines in surplus capital; in 1990, 32 of 107 reported lower surplus.

Among the strongest gains last year, Jackson National saw its surplus rise 66 percent to $838 million; Nationwide's rose 50 percent to $754 million, and Transamerica Occidental's jumped 36 percent to $759 million.

The companies reported profits and net capital gains totaling $6.5 billion.

"Nineteen ninety-one was one of the strongest years in the past decade," said the firm's Frederick Townsend.

American tops year's airline performance ratings

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Airlines turned in the highest quality performance in the skies last year while three airlines with serious financial troubles ranked last, an aviation research institute said on Thursday.

Southwest Airlines nudged past two industry giants, Delta and United, for second place in airline quality as rated by the Wichita State University National Institute for Aviation Research.

Trans World Airlines, which recently sought the protection of the federal bankruptcy laws, was rated in last place.

Using a variety of government and publicly available data, the institute compiled the ratings based on many factors, including on-time performance, accidents, customer service, the age of each airline's fleet, lost and mishandled baggage, overbookings, and financial stability.

"Being on time, not losing bags, having a fair pricing system," all of those things play a part," said Dean Headly, who helped produce the study.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Lower mortgages cut GNMA fund's supply

By Bill Doyle

Q. My wife and I, both retired and in our middle 60s, are mainly invested in a GNMA (Government National Mortgage Association) mutual fund. Our individual retirement accounts are in the same fund. The fund's per-share asset value has moved from about $9.50 in January 1990 to $10.22 today.

Doyle

What effect will lower home mortgage interest rates and refinancing of existing mortgages have on GNMA funds?

A. The major impact will be — and already has been — lower dividend payments by the funds to their shareholders. A second result might be declines in share values at some GNMA funds, resulting from investment mistakes by fund management.

Think this through and you will realize why.

A GNMA mutual fund invests in Government National Mortgage Association securities. Each of those securities is backed by a pool of mortgages. The interest homeowners pay on the mortgages is passed along to fund shareholders as dividends. With interest rates down, it's natural for those dividends to decrease.

As homeowners refinance and pay off their mortgages early, that money goes to GNMA securities and on to mutual funds holding those securities. The funds have to reinvest that money in newly issued GNMA securities, which pay lower interest. That aggravates the funds' dividend problems.

As the result of mortgage refinancing, a fund might receive less principal from a GNMA security than it paid for the security. That happens because the fund paid a premium price — higher than the remaining principal amount of the mortgages involved — for GNMA securities that were paid off early. That falls under the heading "investment mistakes."

Based on its share value, which increased 8 percent in 13 months, your fund seems to have suffered few investment mistakes. Stay with it.

Q. I have noticed that the share prices of all GNMA mutual funds respond to the market about the same each day, even though their individual holdings vary. Is this a correct assumption?

A. It is, unless managements of some funds make the investment mistakes mentioned in this column's preceding answer.

After all, other than the interest rate each pays, there is no real difference among various GNMA securities. Those interest rates, which range from 7.5 percent to 12.5 percent, determine the market value of the securities.

A 7.5 percent GNMA security currently trades at about 97 percent of the unpaid principal of the mortgages backing that security; a 12.5 percent GNMA at approximately 116 percent of that principal amount.

Q. With interest rates falling, I have been moving my money out of certificates of deposit as they mature and into mutual funds — $40,000 in a GNMA fund and $30,000 in a short-term bond fund.

But I wonder what to expect when the economy improves. Will these types of funds reasonably hold their values as interest rates rise?

A. The GNMA fund should, for the reasons outlined above. Assuming it's well run, the short-term bond fund shouldn't suffer badly.

An improving economy, of course, results in more demand for loans and higher interest rates. When that happens, the market values of previously issued debt securities go down. Long-term bond prices plunge, because they will not be paid off for many years.

But the prices of short-term bonds normally drop a bit — not drastically — in periods of falling interest rates. The reason is simple. The owners of those bonds know they will be able to redeem the bonds at face value not too far down the pike. Those bond owners are not about to unload at fire sale prices.

This carries over to mutual funds holding bonds. When interest rates shoot up, the share values of funds invested in long-term bonds dive; short-term bond funds hold up reasonably well.

Psychologist to speak at seminar

Staff Report

Sports psychologist Jack Llewellyn is the keynote speaker for the seventh annual Sports Medicine Seminar at Midland College on March 28.

Llewellyn

Atlanta Braves' pitcher John Smoltz credits Llewellyn with turning around his slumping career. At the 1991 All-Star break, Smoltz had a 2-11 record with a 5.16 earned run average. That's when Atlanta general manager John Schuerholz approached Smoltz about talking with Llewellyn. For the remainder of the season, Smoltz posted a 12-2 record and a 2.62 ERA and he credits Llewellyn with the difference.

In fact, Smoltz ended up pitching in the 1991 World Series. Llewellyn has worked with the Houston Astros, the Montreal Expos, the Detroit Lions, several professional boxers, and some members on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

He'll be the luncheon speaker at the Sports Medicine Seminar, talking on "Winning vs. Surviving." The seminar is co-sponsored by Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, Midland College, Region 18 Education Service Center, and Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

Fee for the event, including lunch, is $25. Checks should be made payable to Midland College and directed to its Continuing Education Department. Deadline for registrations is March 23.

Program chairman for the seminar is Raj Reddy, M.D., of Midland. Program topics and presenters include: Injuries of the Knee and Diagnosis, Maureen Finnengan, M.C., orthopedic surgeon, Department of Orthopedic Surgery, Dallas; Spinal Injury, Raj Reddy, M.D., Midland; and Injuries to the Shoulder, Jim Montgomery, M.D., Dallas.

Concurrent sessions include: Evaluation of Athletes Using MRI's, Scott Sheward, M.D., Midland; Rehabilitation of the Shoulder, James Dodson, RPT, Midland therapist; Rehabilitation of the Back, Tom McKelvy, RPT, Director of Rehab Services, MHMC, Midland; and Rehabilitation of the Knee, Tim O'Connell, trainer, Midland.

Persons interested in registering should visit the Continuing Education Office, Administration Building, or call 685-4518.

Holyfield, Holmes stage news conference

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Larry Holmes and Evander Holyfield worked out before a news conference Thursday to formally announce their heavyweight championship fight.

No blows were thrown, but some lines were blown.

The workout was a rehearsal for a skit the fighters presented in a ballroom at a mid-Manhattan hotel.

As high as the corn was, it should have been held in a field.

Top banana Bob Arum, who will co-promote the bout with Dan Duva, gave Holmes a big buildup, then conferred on the former heavyweight champion the degree of Doctor of Pugilism.

"I've been waiting for this for a long time," said the 42-year-old Holmes, who donned a cap and gown. "I didn't think I would get it in boxing."

After making brief remarks, Holmes left the dais and went to a small stage, on which were a blackboard and a desk on which were a glove, three books, a stapler, a coffee cup inscribed "teacher" and an apple.

The doctor then picked up a pointer and conducted a slide show on a movie screen.

Slide I — Holyfield, with hands down, about to launch punches. "He can't fight me with his hands down there like that," Holmes said.

Slide II — Holmes throwing a right to the head. "That is the Holmes Hammer," the doc noted.

Slide III — Holyfied getting hit. "This is Bert Cooper landing a right hand to the noggin of Evander Holyfield," said a smiling instructor.

Slide IV — Mercer getting hit by Holmes. "This man, I presume, can take a better shot that Evander Holyfield," said the honoree, ending his lecture and returned to the dais.

Then it was Holyfield's turn.

First was a slide of Holmes on the canvas after being knocked down by Mike Tyson, which is what the champions plans to do to Holmes. His only other slide showed a tropical beach, where, Holyfield said, "I will spend my summer vacation.

"Larry Holmes is a great teacher," Holyfield added. "In my grade-school years, we always brought an apple to a great teacher. So I brought an apple today for a great teacher."

As a smiling Holmes reached for the apple, Holyfield turned and handed it to George Benton, who trains the heavyweight champion.

Bring on the fight. Please!

As for a second title defense against a 40-plus challenger — he outpointed then 42-year-old George Foreman last April 19 — Holyfield simply said that Holmes deserved the chance after his 12-round unanimous decision over previously unbeaten Mercer Feb. 7.

Biondi, Jager finish 1-2 in 50 meters

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Matt Biondi won the sprinters' showdown with Tom Jager at the U.S. Olympic swimming trials Thursday night, and they set a date for the next race in their eight-year rivalry.

July 31 in Barcelona.

That's when they'll meet again in the 50-meter freestyle with a gold medal at the Olympics, not just a berth in them, at stake.

Biondi, who won it at the 1988 Olympics, and Jager, who finished second in Seoul but holds the world record, finished one-two to qualify for the event at the Summer Games.

Biondi's winning time of 22.12 seconds was two-hundredths of a second faster than his time in Seoul but far off the record of 21.81 Jager set in 1990. The top two finishers in each event qualify for the Olympics.

"I'm excited that we can keep this rivalry going," Jager said. "I want a rematch with Matt. Obviously, he took it to me in Seoul. ... I want a chance to get back at Matt and have another shot at the gold medal."

Jager, 27, had won six of the last seven meetings with Biondi and had a 15-7 lifetime advantage dating back to 1984. They held the top two spots in 18 of those 22 races and set world records in six of them.

Biondi, 26, said Jager deserves an Olympic berth "as much as anybody. We've had such a great rivalry over the years and quite a great friendship.

"The fact that I made it and that Tom and I are going to represent our country in this event that we've done so well in in the past is the best possible outcome."

Both already had qualified for the team, Biondi by winning the 100 freestyle and Jager by finishing fourth in that race, thus making the 400 freestyle relay team along with Biondi.

In Thursday night's other finals:

— Janet Evans, a three-time gold medalist in Seoul, qualified for her second event by winning the 800 freestyle in 8:27.24. Erika Hansen was second in 8:30.05. They also finished in that order in the 400 freestyle. Evans holds the world record in both.

— Melvin Stewart swam the second fastest 200 butterfly in history, finishing in 1:55.72.

Reading is to the mind what exercise is to the body

— Sir Richard Steele

As a publisher, the alarming rise in the rate of illiteracy across North America is of deep concern to us.

Today, 27 million Americans are functionally illiterate.

They can't read directions on an aspirin bottle. They can't read the ingredients listed on packages of the food they eat. They can't even read this ad.

As a publisher, we support the need to read. We want to keep our circulation strong by exercising your mind.

Dawson County extension agent receives honor

Dawson County Extension Agent John F. Farris has been named the first agent to receive the Hoechat-Roussel Cotton Extension Education Award from the Cotton Foundation.

Kiker

The award, which includes a $10,000 cash prize, was presented at the Beltwide Cotton Conference in Nashville. The awards, funded by a grant from the Hoechat-Roussel Agri-Vet Co., have been presented annually since 1976. They were expanded this year to recognize the outstanding county agent from a cotton-producing state as well as an extension specialist or team making outstanding contributions to the U.S. cotton industry.

Farris, who serves the leading cotton-producing county in the state, was honored for conducting educational programs ranging from production to marketing. He also has been named "Mr. Cotton" by the Lamesa Cotton Growers Inc., and received the Superior Service Award of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Texas A&M University System Award in Excellence for his educational programs.

Three programs singled out in the Hoechst-Roussel Award were Farris' development of a computer software accounting program for producers, establishment of a county marketing club to teach producers how to best market their crop, and establishment of the Agricultural Complex for Advanced Research and Extension Systems (AG-CARES), a 160 acre research and demonstration farm in Dawson County.

Farris "seems to have a real talent for embracing the most significant new technology available, or helping develop it, and then educating others about it," says Dave Nix, president of Lamesa Cotton Growers.

Citing Farris' knowledge of cotton production, James Supak, Extension Service cotton agronomist, says "his real expertise is in economics and marketing. His programs always stress the importance of budgets, financial management and the effects of inputs on 'the bottom line.'"

Supak calls AG-CARES "a unique, timely project that will have major impacts on cotton production systems in Dawson County and the Southern High Plains of Texas."

Farris obtained a $100,000 commitment from Lamesa Cotton Growers and support of the Experiment Station, Extension Service and Dawson County Commissioners' Court to establish the research validation farm. It includes studies of irrigation efficiency, conservation tillage and other tilling techniques, cotton growth regulators, harvest-aid chemicals, chemigation, water quality and alternate crops. He supervises the daily operation of the project, in addition to his other duties.

Farris, 45, was born in Alabama but grew up in Lamesa and Lubbock. He received bachelor's and master's degrees from Texas Tech University. From 1971-75 he taught vocational agriculture at Dimmitt. He joined the Extension Service in 1975 as assistant county agent in Dawson County. From 1977-82 he was county agent in Lamb County. He has served Dawson county as extension agent since 1982.

Another extension agent was also recently honored for his accomplishments. Rick Minzenmayer, extension pest management entomologist for Tom Green and Runnels counties was honored recently as the state's outstanding pest management agent.

One award is given annually by the Texas Pest Management Association. Texas Commissioner of Agriculture, Rick Perry, presented the honor during the Presidential Luncheon at the Association's annual meeting last month in Austin.

Minzenmayer was picked for this extensive and successful cotton pest management work in the countries he serves. His citation read: "In grateful appreciation for outstanding service and sincere dedication to the integrated pest management program and producers of Texas."

The 2000-plus member association is a producer organization run by producers. Its purpose is to encourage the implementation and coordination of pest management activities across the state.

Minzenmayer and his wife, Mary, live in Ballinger with their two children. He has served in Tom Green and Runnels counties since 1988. Prior to his move to Runnels County he was extension pest management entomologist for Midland, Martin and Howard counties.

Year not so sweet for beet farmers

By Chip Brown
Associated Press writer

HEREFORD — In farming circles, the sugar beet is considered among the most durable of crops, a tank among jeeps in a battlefield of hail barrages and whipping rain storms.

Unlike its West Texas aboveground neighbors — cotton, wheat and corn — the football-sized sugar beet is tucked safely beneath the earth, capable of weathering the slashing winds notorious to this region.

But the sugar beet has no defense for a freeze.

And on Oct. 28 the same cold snap that zapped the South Plains cotton crop, took the sweetness out of what looked to be a bulging sugar beet harvest.

"As the temperatures dropped, our hopes dropped with them," said Bill Cleavinger, president of the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association and a beet farmer in Deaf Smith County. "It just knocked us out. And I know many growers were expecting strong yields."

Agriculture experts say about 10,000 of the 42,000 acres of sugar beets grown in a nine-county area in the western Panhandle and eastern New Mexico were simply left in the fields.

THE FALLOUT is expected to cost area economies more than $15 million.

Coupled with cotton losses and a sluggish year for cattle prices, that may cause farm loans to tighten up at some banks this year, officials said.

"We are just now getting into available lines of credit, and there will definitely be an impact," said Don Graham, president of First National Bank of Hereford.

"We don't see it as any kind of a disaster, but, yes, there are some of our customers who will be a little thinner financially next year," Graham said.

Cleavinger says this year's harvest, which concluded Jan. 16, is the worst in 23 years.

"In 1969, we had a similar year. We've had some trying years in between, but we've always been able to get every beet out of the field," he said.

Dennis Printz, left, agriculture manager of the Holly Corp., and Bill Cleavinger, president of the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association, said the Holly Sugar beet processing plant in Hereford closed down a month early this year because the beet harvest was ruined in an early frost in October.

Dennis Printz, the agriculture manager for Hereford-based Holly Sugar Corp., said "the freeze ruptures the cell wall in the beet and it simply turns to mush."

"NORMALLY THE growers stack the beets in huge piles after digging them out of the ground and then trucks pick them up over the course of several weeks," Printz said. "But once the beets started to collapse in the ground, that became impossible."

Holly Sugar contracts with about 475 area farmers, who harvest the 42,000 acres. The company processes the beets, typically paying out well over $40 million annually. Growers will receive about $25 million this year.

Ted Peabody, Deaf Smith County director for the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, said most growers will not be able to cover losses with insurance.

"In order to qualify for insurance, the farmer had to show a 65 percent loss," Peabody said. "Most were able to harvest more than 40 percent of their crop."

Farmers are now left with trying to use their beets still in the ground as cattle feed, Cleavinger said.

As bad as the harvest was, many farmers believe it could have been worse if not for the heroic efforts of dozens of farmers in the Plainview area and in eastern New Mexico.

Several days of snow and rain followed the freeze, making it impossible for diggers and trucks to get in the soggy fields to harvest through much of November and December.

BUT HOLLY Sugar's processor needed 3,500 tons of beets a day to keep going, and company officials feared they would have to shut down nearly two months ahead of schedule if more beets could not be harvested and trucked to the plant.

So farmers in Kress, Nazareth and Plainview as well as growers in the Clovis, N.M., area worked night and day beginning Jan. 1 to keep the harvest alive.

Gaylan Schumacher, who farms about 150 acres with his brothers and father just south of Plainview, was one of many who tied tractors to trucks to help pull the massive rigs through a half foot of mud while collecting beets.

"We tore a couple bumpers off of the trucks pulling them through the fields," Schumacher said. "But everyone pitched in — even the wives and kids, who made lunch and dinner and brought it to the fields."

Farmers from all over the Panhandle knew if they could help the Schumachers harvest enough beets, they might be able to keep Holly Sugar's processor going long enough to allow their own fields to dry for harvest.

Cleavinger said the teamwork allowed an extra 100,000 pounds of sugar beets to be harvested, bringing in an additional $3 million.

But for some farmers, the weather never broke long enough for their fields to dry.

"WE WERE one of the hardest hit. We were limited because it was so wet," said Kenneth Schlabs, who farms about 500 acres of beets with his two brothers and father in Hereford.

Schlabs said his family could only harvest 200 acres before Holly Sugar's processor shut down.

"You just hope for a better year," Schlabs said. "It's hard to take. You have got to make a lot of changes to get by for another year.

"I guess in the long run it will make you tougher. But in the mean time, you have to be a lot leaner."

Use more painkillers, officials suggest

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The government recommended Thursday that doctors provide painkillers swiftly and aggressively to patients after surgery to decrease suffering and speed recovery.

Federal health officials said myths about pain and its management cause half of the patients who undergo surgery in more than 23 million procedures each year to suffer unrelieved, unnecessary pain.

"We can do more, and we can do better, to control pain after surgery," the health and human services secretary, Dr. Louis W. Sullivan, said at a news conference. "This guideline discusses the actual physical damage which a patient can sometimes suffer as a result of pain, and it shows that inadequately managed pain can inhibit recovery, prolong hospitalization and thus potentially contribute to higher-than-necessary costs."

In the first of a series of non-binding medical care guidelines, the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, a new agency mandated by Congress, called on doctors and nurses to take more time to monitor and measure pain and to treat it aggressively with drugs, relaxation therapy and other means.

It is no longer sufficient to give pain medication "as needed," or only after the patient complains, said the guidelines. Doctors should work with patients before and after surgery to plan medication and other treatment to keep patients as pain-free as possible, they said.

To aid in this, doctors should make it common practice to have patients rate their pain, such as using a simple 10-point scale, to track progress in managing it, the guidelines said.

The guidelines said numerous studies show it is easier to control pain before it starts, or when it is at a low level, than to wait until the patient is suffering. "Prevention is better than treatment," said the guidelines. "Pain that is established and severe is difficult to control."

"When doctors simply call for injections of such painkillers as morphine and codeine 'as needed,' the results are often undermedication and unnecessary pain in roughly half the patients," said Dr. James O. Mason, head of the Public Health Service, of which the new agency is a component.

Mason said part of the problem was myths about pain "that have become part of our culture" — such notions that pain is necessary to build character, that infants do not feel pain, that elderly patients have a higher pain tolerance and that narcotics used for post-operative pain are often addictive.

The post-operative pain guidelines are the first of many planned by the new health policy and research agency, which is charged with developing advice for doctors and other professionals concerning health practices that may be the center of uncertainty, and improving the quality and efficiency of patient care.

Unlike similar consensus conferences on health issues sponsored by other government agencies and private groups, the new agency's work focuses on more extensive examinations of medical literature concerning practices that are in wide use, said Dr. J. Jarrett Clinton, administrator of the agency.

After gathering further information from other sources, such as public meetings and interviews, expert panels assembled by the agency develop treatment guidelines.

Clinton said a big difference between these guidelines and those from other groups is that they are being tested at hospitals and clinics before they are released.

In coming months, the agency hopes to release similar sets of guidelines concerning such problems as treating cancer pain, senility, urinary incontinence and patients who are infected with the virus that causes AIDS but who have not yet developed symptoms.

Mason said that the guidelines were voluntary and were not an attempt by the government to dictate medical practice. The guidelines should be viewed like those on immunization or AIDS care issued by the federal Centers for Disease Control, or the recommendations of panels from the National Institutes of Health, which are generally accepted by doctors nationwide, he said.

Dr. James Todd, executive vice president of the American Medical Association, and Dr. Barbara Redman, executive director of the American Nurses Association, immediatedly endorsed the pain guidelines.

"They do not dictate treatment and must never be viewed as 'cookbook medicine,'" Todd said at the news briefing. "These are guidelines, which we prefer to called parameters because they define a range of options available for doing something. It's still individual care."

Televised Democratic debate turns into battle

By A.L. May

N.Y.Times News Service

The candidates tailored their appeals to Southern voters, including Tsongas twice touting his endorsement earlier this week by the Atlanta Constitution and Brown aiming to shake Clinton's strong appeal to black voters in Georgia's primary on Tuesday.

DALLAS — Four Democratic presidential candidates turned a nationally televised debate into free-for-all Thursday night, with Paul Tsongas accused of being a "trickle-down" Republican and Bill Clinton under fire as a "colonial master" for posing with black inmates.

It was clear from the tone of the debate that the former Massachusetts senator and the Arkansas governor have emerged as the two contenders in the race for the nomination. The two challengers, former Gov. Jerry Brown of California and Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa, went on the offensive to keep their campaigns alive.

The ABC-TV debate, taped in the studios of a Dallas television station, was also marked by the empty spot of Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska, who withdrew after Tuesday's first big round of primaries in Georgia and five other states. Clinton quickly laid claim to one of Kerrey's favorite phrases by calling for "fundamental change."

The Democrats fourth nationally televised confrontation came five days before much of the South, including the large states of Texas and Florida, vote on Super Tuesday.

The candidates tailored their appeals to Southern voters, including Tsongas twice touting his endorsement earlier this week by the Atlanta Constitution and Brown aiming to shake Clinton's strong appeal to black voters in Georgia's primary on Tuesday.

The taping of the 90-minute show, which aired during the late-night "Nightline" slot, even started 45 minutes late after campaign managers haggled over format disputes. The debate featured ABC Anchorman Peter Jennings moderating a free-flowing exchange that witnessed the candidates waving newspapers and campaign literature.

At one point, the passion of Brown rose to the point that Clinton said, "Jerry, chill out." Brown, who won his first primary in Colorado this week, was also a target of attack by some of the candidates.

Clinton accused Brown of being a "born-again insurgent," and Harkin reminded viewers that Brown only recently was the chairman of the California Democratic Party who raised large amounts of the political money he now condemns.

Much of the time was spent on a sometimes esoteric wrangle over economic philosophy, with Tsongas forced to defend his opposition to a middle-class tax cut and his support for giving a capital gains tax cut for long-term stock investment.

"While we're having this discussion, in Japan they are investing," Tsongas said. "In Germany they are investing. The net result is that the Japanese working man and the Japanese working woman is going to have a job. And that is true in Germany as well."

"That's really trickle-down," said Harkin. "And that's what we've seen for the last 12 years. We take your tax dollars and give it to the few at the top, deregulate business and trust them to do what's right."

Clinton piled on by saying Tsongas wants to be "the best president Wall Street has ever had." He argued that Tsongas's capital gains cut was too broad and would only benefit the wealthiest Americans who prospered in the 1980s.

"We tripled the stock market in the 80's we can't do any better," Clinton said.

Tsongas, who is running a self-proclaimed economic truth teller, was more than usual demure self, often petulant during the debate as he objected to interruptions.

The candidates also differed on the death penalty and traded jabs over who has received the most special interest money.

But the toughest shot came from Brown, who took Clinton to task for appearing with Sen. Sam Nunn at a Georgia state correctional camp Monday, posing before a platoon of mostly black inmates.

Holding up the picture, Brown suggested it was a racial appeal similar to the Willie Horton issue that President Bush raised in 1988.

"You are presenting yourself as the friend of minorities," he told Clinton, but he said the picture of the event looked like "almost a bunch of Willie Hortons.

"I want to know what kind of message you were trying to send," he said.

Clinton defended the program as an opportunity to young, mostly nonviolent offenders to"put their lives back together" in a military-style boot camp.

Government to hire Russian fusion experts

N.Y. Times News Service

The federal government is hiring more than a hundred scientists from Russia to help America harness the vast energy of nuclear fusion. Russia pioneered the field, in which powerful magnetic fields are used to try to tame for constructive use the kind of thermonuclear fire that lights the sun.

The deal is the first known case in which the government has tapped Russia's scientific talent, although private industry has already done so.

Russian scientists, desperate amid a crumbling economy, can now be hired for a pittance by Western standards. In a one-year $90,000 contract, the United States will buy the services of 116 Russian scientists. While this amount comes to only $65 a month per scientist, it equals 6,500 rubles a month, or more than seven times the unofficial national average monthly wage of 900 rubles.

The fusion research is to be done by scientists at the Kurchatov Institute of Atomic Energy in Moscow on a type of fusion reactor known as a tokamak and the findings are to be sent to the United States. The work is sponsored by the United States Energy Department, which finances similar research in the United States.

"This will advance the U.S. program at a cost that is very modest," Dr. N. Anne Davies, head of fusion research at the department, said on Thursday in an interview.

The Russians invented the tokamak reactor and over the decades have built a number of the giant machines at the Kurchatov Institute in an attempt to perfect the method. A Tokamak, whose name is derived from the Russian acronym for a toroidal, or doughnut-shaped, magnetic chamber, uses magnetic fields to "bottle" extremely hot thermonuclear reactions. This type of reactor is principally being used by scientists around the world in trying to achieve fusion.

The ultimate aim is to fashion machines that would produce a new kind of nuclear energy that is cheap, clean and virtually inexhaustible some time in the 21st century.

The federal government sees the Russian research as inherently peaceful, and apparently has no qualms about aiding it. In contrast, the Bush administration has quietly blocked the purchase of missiles, rocket engines, space reactors, and other aerospace goods from the former Soviet Union in an attempt to cripple the Russian military complex so it poses no future threat to the United States.

The fusion deal is also different from the recent effort to redirect Russian nuclear bomb designers. The administration has pledged $25 million to help establish an institute to keep them occupied with peaceful scientific work.

In contrast, the fusion initiative is an attempt, at least in part, to sample the cream of Russian science and technology.

The contract will buy the equivalent of millions of dollars' worth of fusion research in the United States, said Dr. Thomas C. Simonen, director of tokamak programs at General Atomics, a private company in San Diego that will direct the Russian work.

Fusion produces energy by fusing, or welding, the atoms of light elements. In contrast, the nuclear fission reactors now in operation around the world make energy by breaking apart the atoms of heavy elements like uranium.

A major attraction of fusion is that the main fuel, deuterium, a heavy form of hydrogen, can be easily extracted from water in nearly endless quantities. In theory, fusion could produce far more energy from the top two inches of Lake Erie than exists in all the Earth's known oil reserves.

Despite the allure, the efforts of thousands of scientists and the expenditure of many billions of dollars over nearly a half century, the goal of controlling fusion has remained elusive because of its intrinsic difficulty.

The closest natural example is the sun, where temperatures at the core are 14 million degrees centigrade and gravitational pressures are crushing. There, atomic nuclei are driven so close together that they fuse and release vast energy.

In a fusion reactor, the temperature must be higher, around 200 million degrees centigrade, since the fusion fuel undergoes far less compression than materials at the center of the sun.

For years, the twin goals of fusion research have been to boost the temperature of fuels and to create proper magnetic fields to hold them. The fuels are so hot that they would instantly melt any metal, ceramic, or glass vessel.

Russian scientists have made major strides in achieving both goals. They pioneered the most widely accepted magnet design for a reactor, the doughnut-shaped tokamak, and invented innovative ways to heat fuels with beams of microwave energy.

But they have now fallen on hard times. Most fusion equipment at the Kurchatov Institute is said to be idle for lack of funds.

Virginia delays making payment on syndicate lottery ticket

RICHMOND, Va. (NYT) — An Australian syndicate that tried to corner a $27 million Virginia Lottery game handed over a pink ticket bearing the winning numbers Thursday. But state officials here said they would not pay the prize until they investigate the ticket's validity.

The Lottery Department said Thursday night that it would rule on the matter by the end of next week. Kenneth W. Thorson, the Lottery director, said that if the prize were not paid to the investment group, the money would go toward a future jackpot.

Lottery officials said that the International Lotto Fund, based in Melbourne, Australia, bought 5 million of the 7 million possible numerical combinations in the Feb. 15 game. The game requires a player to pick the six correct numbers between 1 and 44.

Just one ticket was printed with the winning numbers: 8, 11, 13, 15, 19 and 20. Presenting that ticket would customarily be all that was required to receive a check for $1,026,000, the first installment of the prize after taxes were withheld.

Lottery regulations require that each lottery ticket be paid for at the lottery terminal. But the group's claim is in question because the tickets were paid for at the headquarters of Farm Fresh Inc. in Norfolk, and the winning ticket was issued at a store in nearby Chesapeake.

"The perception that this is changing the rules is really a misunderstanding," Thorson said. "The rule was always there."

Paula I. Otto, a Lottery Department spokeswoman, said that the department would investigate who bought the ticket and how.

Australian officials have said that the fund has about 2,500 investors who put up a total of $7.5 million. Most are from Australia, but some are from the United States, Europe and New Zealand, the officials said.

Ms. Otto said that lottery investigators also must research the tax implications of the prize, since it is the first time a foreign corporation has claimed the money.

A BIT OF IRISH LUCK
A country home with an assumable loan. This very nice three bedroom brick home has affordable financing. You need to see this . . . $45,000.

It doesn't take A POT OF GOLD to put you in a Large home in a great neighborhood. Very close to Parker Elementary. So many "extra little touches" added by the builder, Marlin Simpson, make this home stand out. But, you have to see it to appreciate how quiet, spacious and inviting it is . . . $72,000.
You might just make A POT OF GOLD when you decide to buy a duplex. We have two great duplexes that are perfect for the person who wants to live in one side and rent the other. Two price ranges. Call for details.
It appears that the builder spent A POT OF GOLD putting in all the extras and added storage and closet space in this custom home just south of Bluebird Lane. But, the current owners have cut the price and you get to reap the rewards. There is just so much to see here. Call for details . . . $114,900. Original design.
