Deadline for registering to vote is April 12

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

April 12 is the deadline for registering in the May 12 school and city elections.

The State Legislature is also proposing a Constitutional Amendment concerning ad valorem school taxes. The amendment would reduce ad valorem taxes for people over 65 and the disabled.

Pampa voters have two unopposed city officials on the ballot and one contested race. Mayor Lonny Robbins and Commissioner Brad Pingel, in Ward 1, are running unopposed. Teresa Henson and Robert Dixon are running for the Ward 3 slot on the Pampa City Commission. The incumbent from Ward 3, Lana Miller, is not running.

The city commission is elected at large. Anybody registered voter in the city can vote for any of the candidates. The commissioners, however, must live within the wards they represent.

The Pampa city and school board elections are combined, but there are no contested races for school trustee.

Incumbent Joe Martinez re-filed for Place 6 on the school board and has no opposition. Mark McVay filed for Place 7 after Greg Brown chose not to run again. McVay is unopposed. McVay and Martinez, therefore, have been elected by acclamation.

McLean has two women battling it out for mayor and two women running for two of the three alderman positions.

Betty Taylor and Peggy Sharp Baer are running in the mayoral race in McLean.

Molly McDowell filed for one of the alderman slots while Pattie Brass was a late filer for one of the others. The extended filing deadline for the second alderman position is April 11. The third alderman will be appointed after the election.

Lefors has six candidates vying for three places on their city council. Shane Johnson, Billy McBee, Karen Noble, Melanie Ray, Susan Oldham and Cindy Stubbs-Scully are all running for Lefors City Council.

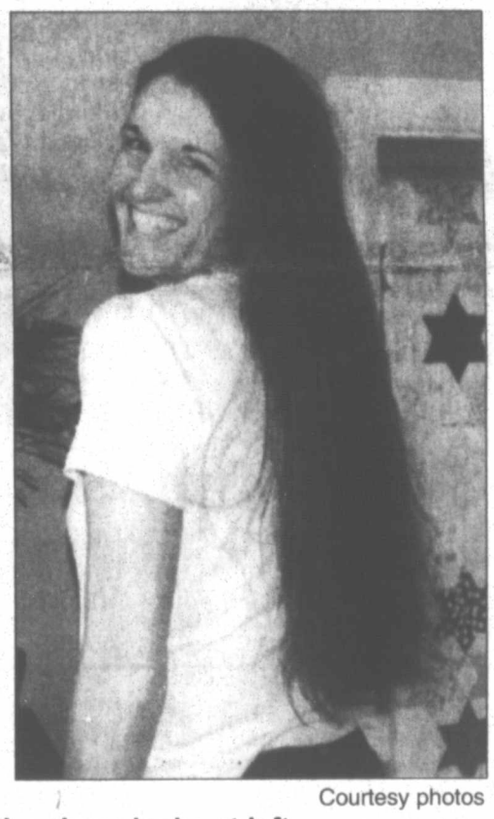

There are five candidates running for three seats in the Lefors Independent School District race. Barry Jackson, Chris Kerbo, Garry C. Davis and Sandra Pairsh are running for the Lefors school board.

McLean, Lefors, Miami and Fort Elliot are each asking voters to Brenda Cook, composotion supervisor at The Pampa News, has been growing her hair for at least three years to get it all one length and long.

She made a difficult decision this week to cut off 10 inches of her hair and donate it to "Locks of Love" in honor of a good friend who was diagnosed with cancer 12 1/2 years ago. This non-profit organization takes human hair donations and manufactures wigs, or hair prosthetics, for financially disadvantaged children under age 18 who suffer from long-term medical hair loss.

Rose Ann Hughes, who Cook met at the newspaper when they worked together 25 years ago, was supposed to be the maid of honor in Cook's wedding. During a routine physical, a doctor discovered a mole on her leg that was suspect. Tests revealed that Hughes had melanoma, a type of skin cancer. She was admitted into the hospital for surgery and consequently was unable to attend Cook's wedding.

"I didn't want anyone but Rose Ann to be my maid of honor," Cook said. "So, I made the decision not to have an attendant. Someone like Rose could never be replaced. Johnnie, my new husband, was so understanding of our friendship. After the ceremony, he drove me to the hospital to see her."

Chemotherapy, radiation and several surgeries had to be endured by Hughes. Cook said her friend was always strong, positive and

Local panel to take a look at bullying

By KERRI SMITH
Staff Writer

Community Planning Meetings have been held recently in Pampa and a cross section of individuals has attended.

Representatives from the district attorney's office, Tralee Crisis Center, Pampa Independent School District, CASA of the High Plains, Gray County Juvenile Probation Department and Pampa residents met and tried to identify specific criminal justice issues in the community.

This year, the committee chose bullying as their main focus. The agencies are working together to collect information and present it to the public so this problem may be easier to identify and combat.

What is bullying? According to the Pampa ISD Student Code of Conduct, it is "Written or verbal expression or physical conduct that 1) has the effect of physically harming a student, damaging a student's property or placing a student in reasonable fear of harm to the student's person or of damage to the student's property; or 2) is sufficiently severe, persistent or pervasive enough that the action or threat creates an intimidating, threatening or abusive educational environment for a student."

Bullying is an aggressive behavior that is intentional and involves an imbalance of power or strength that is typically repeated over time. It can take many forms, such as physical, verbal, emotional or cyberbullying.

More specific examples are punching or shoving to inflict physical harm, calling someone names, keeping certain people out of a group, teasing or getting others to gang up on others.

The newest form of bullying is cyberbullying. This can happen online through e-mail, instant messages, blogs, or Web sites such as "My Space." It can also take place over cell phones, either verbally or by text messaging.

According to the Web site www.stopbullyingnow.hrsa.gov, studies show that between 15-25 percent of U.S. students are bullied with some frequency and 15-20 percent report that they bully others.

The U.S. Department of Education reports that statistics show school violence has declined 4 percent in recent years, but behaviors like bullying have increased by 5 percent between 1999 and 2001.

Children who bully their peers regularly may be impulsive, easily frustrated, lack empathy, have difficulty following rules and view violence in a positive way to achieve what they want, according to the stopbullingnow Web site.

On the other hand are consequences of being a victim of bullying. These may include being depressed, lonely, anxious, having low self-esteem and feeling sick much of the time. Kids who are bullied normally fear going to school and riding on the school bus.

The Stop Bullying Now Web site says that bullying can be a sign of other serious antisocial or violent behavior. Children and youth who frequently bully their peers are more likely than others to "get into frequent fights, vandalize or steal property, drink alcohol, smoke, drop out of school and carry a weapon."

Being a bully as a child may lead to the same behavior as an adult. That person may bully coworkers on the job or may be physically abusive to people they have relationships with.

The answer of why kids bully may be because they see others doing it. Many children either witness bullying and do nothing about it or participate if some-

SMU profs upset at upcoming intelligent design conference

DALLAS (AP) — Science professors at Southern Methodist University have written letters of protest to school officials to complain about an upcoming conference about intelligent design.

Members of the school's anthropology department demanded the school shut down the "Darwin vs. Design" conference, cosponsored by the SMU law school's Christian Legal Society. The conference will argue that a higher power is the best explanation for aspects of life and the universe.

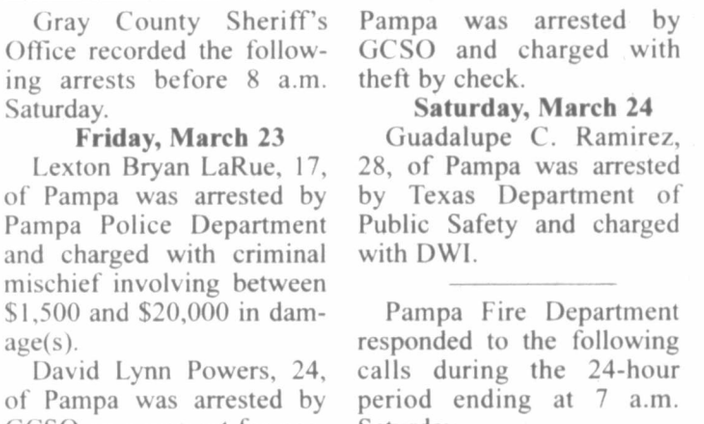

"These are conferences of and for believers and their sympathetic recruits," a letter from the anthropology department said. "They have no place on an academic campus with their polemics hidden behind a deceptive mask."

The biology and geology departments sent similar letters.

The university does not endorse the event but won't cancel it, interim provost Tom Tunks said Friday.

"Although SMU makes its facilities available as a community service, and in support of the free marketplace of ideas, providing facilities for those programs does not imply SMU's endorsement of the presenters' views," according to a statement from the school.

SMU professors say the "Darwin vs. Design" conference could send a message that scientists at the school support intelligent design as an explanation for how life forms evolved.

Man collects musical instruments for orphans

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — George Stuart reckons he sold hundreds of instruments in the 15 years he owned Stuart Music Co. in Bryan. Some of them were cast aside in favor of new infatuations such as sports or dance.

Stuart would like to recycle smaller horns and wind instruments that are idle in the Brazos Valley for use by an orphanage band in Odessa, Ukraine.

"Instruments last a long time. I still have the cornet my parents bought me when I was 9," said Stuart, who calls himself an "old codger" but refused to disclose his precise age. "At church last week, a guy came up and told me I could have the cornet from his closet."

Stuart's goal is to return to Odessa in two months with enough instruments for his students and enough money for his expenses. He hopes to receive donations of trumpets, cornets, clarinets, trombones, saxophones, flutes and French horns. "I'm not a string person, and I don't know if I could find someone to teach strings."

His unlikely story starts in 2001, when Stuart accompanied his elder son, Randal, to Odessa to meet his son's future wife, Olena.

During that first visit to Odessa, George Stuart taught music and English to kids in a Presbyterian church. Through the church's youth minister, George Stuart, met Paul Becker, whose organization, Project Heritage House, helped support Internat No. 4, an orphanage 45 minutes from Odessa.

New Orleans residents arming themselves

By MARY FOSTER
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Sixty-four-year-old Vivian Westerman rode out Hurricane Katrina in her 19th-century house. So terrible was the experience that she wanted two things before the 2006 season arrived: a backup power source and a gun.

"I got a 6,000-watt generator and the cutest little Smith & Wesson, snub-nose .38 you ever saw," she boasted. "I've never been more confident."

People across New Orleans are arming themselves — not only against the possibility of another storm bringing anarchy, but against the violence that has engulfed the metropolitan area in the 19 months since Katrina, making New Orleans the nation's murder capital.

The number of permits issued to carry concealed weapons is running twice as high as it was before Katrina — this, in a city with only about half its pre-storm population of around 450,000. Attendance at firearms classes and hours logged at shooting ranges also are up, according to the gun industry.

Gun dealers who saw sales shoot up during the chaotic few months after Katrina say that sales are still brisk, and that the customers are a cross-section of the population — doctors, lawyers, bankers, artists, laborers, stay-at-home moms.

"People are in fear of their lives. They're looking for ways to feel safe again," said Mike Roniger, manager of Gretna Gunworks in Jefferson Parish.

Citizens, the tourism industry, police and politicians officials have been alarmed by the wave of killings in New Orleans, with 162 in 2006 and 37 so far this year. A Tulane University study put the city's 2006 homicide rate at 96 slayings per 100,000 people, the highest in the nation.

National Guardsmen and state police are patrolling the streets of New Orleans. In neighboring Jefferson Parish, which posted a record 66 homicides in 2006, the sheriff sent armored vehicles to protect high-crime neighborhoods.

In New Orleans, police have accused the district attorney of failing to prosecute many suspects. Prosecutors have accused the police of not bringing them solid cases.

Some people are losing faith in the system to protect them.

Earnest Johnson, a 37-year-old chef who lives in Kenner, bought his first gun recently and visits a shooting range regularly. "Things are way worse than they used to be," he said. "You have to do something to protect yourself."

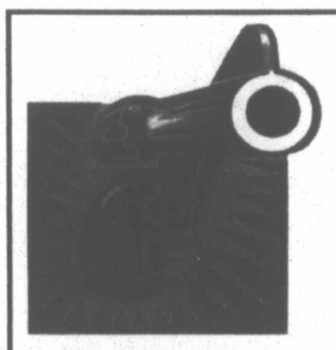

Kevin Cato, a 41-year-old contractor, bought a .45-caliber handgun for protection when he is working in some of the city's still-deserted areas. "But it's not much safer at home," Cato said. "The police chased a guy through my yard one time with their guns out."

In New Orleans, the number of concealed-carry permits issued jumped from 432 in 2003-04 to 832 in 2005-06. In Jefferson Parish, 522 permits were issued in 2003-04, and 1,362 in 2005-06.

Mike Mayer, owner of Jefferson Indoor Range and Gun Outlet in suburban Metairie, said that despite the dropoff in population, sales are up about 38 percent overall since Katrina.

Just how many guns are out there is anybody's guess. Gun buyers in Louisiana are not required to register their weapon or obtain a concealed-carry permit if they keep the gun in their house or car.

In a measure of how dangerous New Orleans is becoming, guns are finding their way into criminal hands at an alarming rate. The federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives' "time-to-crime" analysis of the interval between the legal sale of a gun and the time it is seized in a crime investigation is five years on average around the nation, said ATF spokesman Austin Banks.

Locks

full of laughter. The only time she knew of her friend crying was when her hair started falling out from the treatments.

"Her hurt was so deep and there was nothing I could do except love her," Cook said. "I remember how hard it was for her to loose her hair," Cook said. "I started doing some research about Locks of Love and made the decision to cut off my long hair and donate it so a child who lost their hair due to illness or cancer treatments could have a wig made."

Ken McGuire, from Ken's Hair and Hobbies, has been trimming Cook's hair over the past few years. She knew the time and effort it took Cook to get her long locks, so McGuire contributed to the cause by cutting off the needed length for donation and styling her hair for free.

"Ken has been my hairdresser for years and she's walked this journey, of growing my hair long, with me," Cook said. "When it came time to make the cut, Ken got a little emotional and wanted to make sure I was ready to do this. When she made the cut, it felt liberating. Of course, it felt good to have the long heavy hair off, but mainly it felt good to donate it to such a worthy cause."

For moral support, Cook's two daughters and grandson accompanied her to the beauty shop. Her grandson did not want her to cut off the long hair that he liked to play with while sitting on her lap, but after it was explained what would be done with the hair, he was OK with that decision.

Cook followed the instructions on hair donations from the Web site www.locksoflove.org. There are a few requirements that have to be met. Hair must be a minimum of 10 inches long, bundled in a ponytail or braid, clean and dry and can be colored or permed. The organization needs hair from men and women or all ages and races. Hair cannot be bleached, chemically damaged or swept off of the floor. Hair that is short, gray or unsuitable for children is separated from the ponytails and sold at fair market value to offset the cost of manufacturing.

The ponytail or braid is then placed in a plastic bag and put in a padded envelope. A hair donation form can be downloaded and printed off of the Locks of Love Web site and sent with the hair if possible, but it is not required. Hair should be mailed to Locks of Love, 2925 10th Ave. North, Suite 102, Lake Worth, Florida 33461.

"I hope that by sharing my story, more Pampa people might consider donating their hair," Cook said. "I'm honored to be able to donate to such a worthy organization. These children are going through enough with their medical problems. They shouldn't have to worry about their appearance.

"Hopefully, I'll be able to grow long hair again. Next time, my goal is to raise the needed funding to pay for the manufacturing of the wig."

Cook is going to visit Hughes this weekend, who is currently in the hospital in Oklahoma.

"I'm looking forward to seeing Rose Ann this weekend and showing her my shorter hair style," Cook said.

Defending yourself, common sense laws and heart news

There used to be a tongue-in-cheek saying in Texas that if you killed someone on your property to be sure and drag the body into your house so you could claim intrusion.

That will not be the case anymore.

The Texas Legislature has passed the Castle Doctrine bill which the National Rifle Association says brings common sense self-defense protections to law-abiding Texans.

An NRA news release said Texas is the first state to pass the Castle Doctrine legislation this year, which makes it the 16th state to recognize victims' rights.

The bill basically says that if someone breaks into your home, your vehicle or your place of business, you have the right to use any manner of force against that person and do not have the "duty to retreat." The bill also provides protection for persons using force authorized by law from any liability for injuring their criminal attackers.

The bill was sponsored in the Senate by Sen. Jeff Wentworth and in the House by Rep. Joe Driver.

More legislation that makes sense is being pushed by U.S. Rep. Mac Thornberry.

Thornberry called the five legislative proposals he has co-sponsored or introduced a "common sense package that would significantly improve accountability for federal spending."

"I always try to remember that every dollar spent by the federal government is taken out of the wallet or purse of an American who earned it - a taxpayer who is also trying to feed a family, pay for health care, or send a child to college," Thornberry said.

According to a news release from Thornberry's office, the congressman from Clarendon has become a cosponsor of the following bills:

Dennis Spies
Editor

• H.J. Res. 1, the Balanced Budget Amendment - Constitutional Amendment requiring the federal government to balance the budget annually;

• H.R. 689, the Legislative Line Item Veto Act - Allows the President to propose wasteful earmarks for elimination with the up or down approval of Congress;

• H.R. 510, the Tax Code Termination Act - Sunsets the entire federal tax code; forcing Congress to debate and act upon a new tax code that is fairer and more equitable, and;

• H.R. 411 - Permanently extends successful 2001 and 2003 tax relief measures like the teacher tax credit, child tax credit, state sales tax credit, and marriage penalty relief.

• In addition, Thornberry has introduced H.R. 1586, a bill to permanently repeal the death tax.

Thornberry explained that Congress passed a tax bill in 2001 that would phase out the death tax over a number of years. In 2010 it will be eliminated. But the bill only applied to 10 years, so in 2011, without further action, the death tax will resume to its pre-2001 level.

Thornberry's legislation would permanently repeal the death tax.

Sounds to me like good news for the regular guy and bad news for the bureaucrats.

I mentioned in a previous column that I was going to have a bunch of tests done on my heart because of a spike in blood pressure.

I spent more than five hours at Northwest Texas Hospital a few weeks ago and visited with the cardiologist last week.

He said all the tests came back positive and everything looked good — everything, that is, except my blood sugar and cholesterol.

So those are the nagging things I have to deal with at my age, and I am thankful that I do not have to have any heart procedures done.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, March 25, the 84th day of 2007. There are 281 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On March 25, 1965, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. led 25,000 marchers to the state capitol in Montgomery, Ala., to protest the denial of voting rights to blacks.

On this date:

In 1634, Maryland was founded by English colonists sent by Lord Baltimore.

In 1807, Britain abolished its slave trade.

In 1865, during the Civil War, Confederate forces attacked Fort Stedman in Virginia, but were forced to withdraw by counterattacking Union troops.

In 1894, Jacob S. Coxey began leading an "army" of unemployed from Massillon, Ohio, to Washington to demand help from the federal government.

In 1911, 146 immigrant workers were killed when fire broke out at the Triangle Shirtwaist Company in New York.

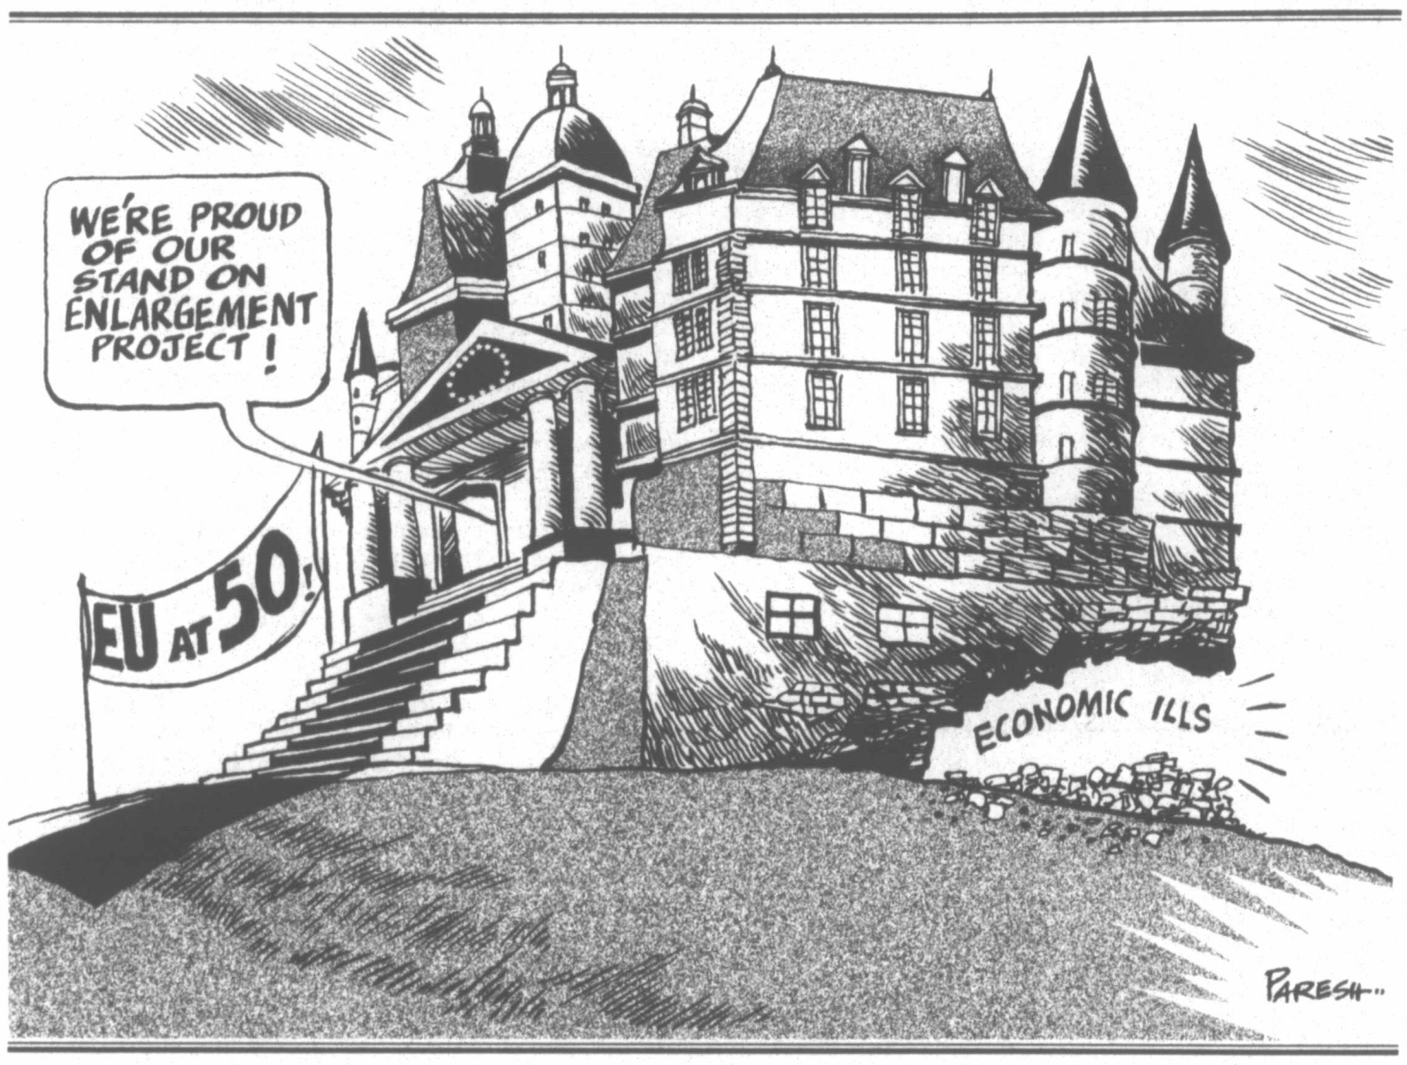

In 1947, a coal mine explosion in Centralia, Ill., claimed 111 lives.

In 1957, the Treaty of Rome established the European Economic Community.

In 1975, King Faisal of Saudi Arabia was shot to death by a nephew with a history of mental illness. (The nephew was beheaded in June 1975.)

In 1990, 87 people, most of them Honduran and Dominican immigrants, were killed when fire raced through an illegal social club in New York City.

In 1996, the redesigned $100 bill went into circulation.

Trash talk proliferates in our fair city

Has anyone else noticed the sudden explosion of "trash talk" from the teenagers here in Pampa? Even more disturbing, it seems to be directed specifically at adults.

It all began about a year and a half ago, with insults mumbled from a distance. Before long, it had escalated to insults shouted from a distance. Now, it has reached a point where groups of teens are actually confronting adults, as they spit their venom.

The worst incident just occurred in Highland Park. There, juveniles were hurling hatred at every adult that they encountered, including some construction workers, who were berated for using a "porta-potty."

Is this what these kids are being taught in the local schools? If not, where are they getting it? I have never seen anything like this, and I grew up in a rough neighborhood. What's next? Columbine here in Pampa?

Idle American: The promises of radio …

Don Newbury
Columnist

They're well beyond outlandish, the promises made on non-traditional radio. I'm talkin' about the stations with signals bouncing off satellites before hitting receivers full blast in the deepest swamps and on tallest mountains.

Brags include high definition – whatever that is. And this new-fangled radio promises more features than we could have ever dreamed of as recently as the tail-end of the 20th century. Some stations will do everything for us except take out the trash; others will bring it in.

* * * * *

And a particular claim I heard a while back is enough to shiver the strongest of timbers.

The announcer, his voice deep and resonant, seemed totally confident as he made the assertion: "All music you have ever heard is imbedded somewhere in your being."

Does this prospect give you the willies, too?...

* * * * *

Imbedded, it seems to me, is a mighty strong word. Oh, it has its place. Imbedded wisdom teeth paint a picture of a burly dentist reaching for the biggest of tongs.

Journalists imbedded with troops in wars conjure up thoughts of media folks just as dedicated to delivering the news as postal employees are for the mail to go through.

Imbedded in most minds are Social Security numbers, blood types, addresses, phone numbers and certain other vital information. But I take umbrage at the thought of all music we've ever heard being "imbedded somewhere in our being." If this be true, someone can make a fortune with the invention of a delete button that will send much of this imbedded music to the trash bin.

* * * * *

The thought of music being imbedded in my being seems to be lodged in my busiest brain lobe.

Surely I'm spared, thought I, certain that much of the music has merely sailed through my ears – in one and out the other.

The imbedded thought won't dislodge, though, no matter how much I want it to vamoose. Immediately my mind floods with repugnant song titles. Eureka! If such titles come to mind, maybe they really are imbedded. …

* * * * *

How about you? Do you want to sign up for a delete button, too? I thought so.

It's one thing to have our beings imbedded with melodies like "Climb Every Mountain," "Wind Beneath My Wings," George Beverly Shea belting out "How Great Thou Art" and Kate Smith stirring our souls with "God Bless America." Let's also make room for Guy Lombardo's "Auld Lang Syne."

Feel free to make your own list of songs that you think should be included in your permanent file. This is the American way. …

Texas Thoughts

By The Associated Press

A sample of editorial opinion around Texas:

■ March 19

The Dallas Morning News on child rapists:

Well, in defense of child rapists ...

There's really no good way to complete that thought. And even if someone made one up, you wouldn't read it here. Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst has it right when he calls adults who would sexually abuse children "monsters."

"Not in Texas," he says.

Yet that doesn't mean Mr. Dewhurst and the Legislature should rewrite Texas law to punish these monstrous acts with the death penalty, a punishment reserved for the most heinous crimes that result in a victim's death.

The "give 'em the needle" provision embedded in Jessica's Law inspired by a convicted sex offender's horrendous abduction and murder of a 9-year-old Florida girl, Jessica Lunsford might be satisfying to say, but it's constitutionally unsupportable. You don't have to tolerate child rape to see that.

For one thing, the death provision requires skipping past a whole class of crime, the vast majority of murders in Texas that are punished by something less than death.

Wherever you stand on the death penalty, we hope you would agree that it should be applied fairly and consistently and reserved for the absolute worst crimes. Child killers. Police officer killers. Multiple killers. Armed robbery killers.

For another, what leads you to believe a death penalty for a child sex abuser who does not kill will survive U.S. Supreme Court review?

If anything, the high court has been narrowing the window on capital punishment. In 2002, it ruled against the death penalty for the mentally retarded. Three years later, it voted down death for those who killed as minors.

And in the 1977 Coker v. Georgia case, the Supreme Court ruled that death was a disproportionate punishment i.e., unconstitutional for the rape of a 16-year-old.

That's why Texas should not join the five states that allow death penalties for

AMNESTY?

Dems face hurdles in passing immigration legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats may have support from President Bush on immigration, but they face other obstacles in getting a bill through Congress.

The Democrats lack enough votes within their party and must overcome lingering Republican disdain for what some consider "amnesty" for some people in the U.S. illegally, as well as union opposition.

The difficulty of their predicament is showing.

The bill's Senate sponsors couldn't agree and gave up their alliance on joint legislation, while its House sponsors introduced their own version, knowing its prospects are heavily dependent on Bush.

"We need to get a bill and he needs to start twisting a few arms," said the Senate majority leader, Harry Reid, D-Nev.

Although Bush supported last year's Senate bill, he also signed a House Republican bill calling for a 700-mile fence on the U.S.-Mexican border. And he did little to persuade Republicans to negotiate an immigration bill.

Originally, Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and John McCain, R-Ariz., planned to introduce a sweeping immigration reform bill with their House partners, Reps. Luis Gutierrez, D-Ill. an Jeff Flake, R-Ariz.

McCain's enthusiasm withered as he faced a mounting challenge from former New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani and conservatives on the presidential campaign trail unwilling to accept anything less than deportation of illegal immigrants.

In response, McCain broke with Kennedy and said he is looking at proposals that could pass, including one requiring illegal immigrants to self deport and apply for jobs in the U.S. through private employment centers set up in certain countries.

"Both parties are clear where they need to be on a bipartisan bill and a realistic bill, but the politics of getting there is not easy and the clock is running," said Deborah Meyers, senior policy analyst with the Migration Policy Institute.

Gutierrez and Flake have gone forward with the bill they began drafting with Kennedy and McCain, and have made it the starting point for debate in the House.

> 'Both parties are clear where they need to be on a bipartisan bill and a realistic bill, but the politics of getting there is not easy and the clock is running.'

> — Deborah Meyers
> Policy analyst with the Migration Policy Institute

They hope to lure Republicans and provide some cover for Democrats elected on tough immigration platforms with a provision requiring illegal immigrants to leave the country at some point during a six-year period and return legally.

Even so, "there aren't enough Democrats in the House to pass comprehensive immigration reform. There aren't enough senators, Democratic senators ... to pass it," Gutierrez said.

On the House side, Several Democratic freshmen campaigned against so-called amnesty to help their party win control of Congress.

Among them was Rep. Nick Lampson, D-Texas, who won the conservative Republican district once held by former Majority Leader Tom DeLay.

"He would not support a bill that has a road to legal residency for illegal and undocumented workers who are already here," said Lampson spokesman Bobby Zafarnia.

During his recent visit to Mexico, Bush pledged to intensify his push for a comprehensive immigration bill. He said he would work to reject "protectionist sentiments" that are bogging down the debate, and named Kennedy as his key ally in the effort.

child rape, although HB 8 has cleared the House and companion SB 68 is headed to the Senate floor.

Louisiana is the only state that has sentenced a child rapist to death no state has carried out the penalty and that case probably will be the one that reaches the Supreme Court.

And when it does, we hope the Legislature hasn't left a ticking time bomb in the Texas Penal Code that will go off when the high court rules such punishment however well intentioned unconstitutional.

that are bugging me, now that I realize they may be flopping around somewhere in the flabs of my being. I want them gone at the earliest possible time.

The list is far from complete, but so far some of the ringers include "99 Bottles of Beer on the Wall," "Who Let the Dogs Out?," all songs by the Chipmunks (Alvin, Simon and Theodore), "Dad Gave my Hog Away," "Grandma Got Run Over by a Reindeer," "Don't Let the Stars Get in your Eyes," "Yellow Polka-Dot Bikini," "Blue Suede Shoes," "Mule Train," "Tip Toe Through the Tulips," "The Streak" and all songs attempted by Chill Wills.

Some of the titles are worthy of recall from time-to-time, but imbedded? Never.

* * * * *

If these radio boasts bode true, let us likewise hope that treasured radio programs – those heard before TV came into our homes – are likewise imbedded.

I'll always remember Henry Aldridge, who, when called to start each show, answered, "Coming, Mother."

And Fibber McGee and Molly...Lux Radio Theatre...Jack Benny...The Great Gildersleeve...Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy...Groucho Marx and his brothers...Bob Hope...George Burns and Gracie Allen...and Red Skelton, whose twinkling eyes seemed to glisten on the radio waves as he ended each show with "God Bless. ..."

* * * * *

Finally, it hit me. We want thoughts imbedded that make us better people.

Such will make those in our circle of loved ones and friends want to keep us in the circle!

Let's pray that permeating our being – never to be deleted – are the words found in the Good Book, including Philippians, fourth chapter, eighth verse: "Finally, brethren, whatever is true, whatever is honorable, whatever is right, whatever is pure, whatever is lovely, whatever is of good repute, if there is any excellence and if anything worthy of praise, let your mind dwell on these things."

Amarillo Youth Orchestra turns two decades old

AMARILLO — The Amarillo Youth Orchestra celebrates its 20th anniversary with a free concert at 3 p.m. April 1 in the Globe-News Center for the Performing Arts.

Each of the Youth Orchestra's three ensembles will perform: Amarillo Youth Sinfonia, a string ensemble for students with at least one year of playing experience; Amarillo Youth Philharmonic, an intermediate string ensemble; and Amarillo Youth Symphony, an advanced string orchestra.

Conductor Dr. Douglas Morrison heads the Amarillo Youth Symphony. Jill Bradford, orchestra director at Austin Middle School, leads Sinfonia and Philharmonic.

Morrison will lead the Youth Symphony in the same repertoire it will perform on March 30-31 with the Amarillo Symphony in a side-by-side concert: Prokofiev's "Lieutenant Kizeh Suite" and Brahms' Hungarian Dances No. 1 and 6. Bradford's program will be announced at a later date.

The concert also will feature performances by cellist Cole Craven and saxophonist Christopher Carter, division winners of the Amarillo Symphony Guild's annual Young Performers Competition.

Craven, a Tascosa High School sophomore, was the winner of the competition's string division. Carter, an Amarillo High School senior, was the winner of the woodwinds/brass/percussion division.

The Symphony considers the youth orchestra an integral part of its educational mission.

"This is the power-hitter of the Symphony's education lineup. By partnering with local and regional schools, the Youth Orchestras work to complement the outstanding work of classroom music teachers," said Nathan Newbrough, the Symphony's executive director. "It's a chance for young players to get together with their peers in a full symphony orchestra experience, and to learn from the finest performer/teachers our area has to offer. It's amazing to see: Every young person who commits himself working in this ensemble shows tremendous improvement as a musician, and as a person."

The former Amarillo Symphony Youth Orchestra was founded in 1987 through the collaboration of the Amarillo Independent School District, Amarillo College Division of Fine Arts and the Amarillo College Suzuki String Program.

As part of Amarillo's centennial, music lovers and educators decided to revive a then-dormant tradition of an area-wide orchestra for junior high and high school students. The orchestra's first concert was held April 12, 1987, in the lobby of Amarillo College's Music Building.

The Amarillo Symphony was involved in the program from the beginning, with then-Music Director Robert Bernhardt serving as the youth orchestra's conductor. The Symphony's formal partnership with the youth orchestra began in 1990.

Sports Day

Rainy weather: Varsity baseball game rescheduled

The Pampa Harvesters were originally scheduled to face off against San Jacinto in Amarillo on Friday, but rainy weather forced administrators to call the game off.

Rather than being canceled, it was decided that the game be rescheduled for Friday, April 6.

Volleyball tournament girls

The Pampa Rockets volleyball team recently competed in the Club Amarillo Qualifier. They placed 2nd in pool play, and then went on to the gold bracket where they placed 2nd out of 32 teams in the 15-year-old division. They defeated all of the teams in their bracket and are now ranked 8th out of 23 teams in their age division. Cancer-free 53-year-old still doing death-defying dives

HOUSTON (AP) — Bill Brown's blond hair wafts in the breeze as he climbs the wiry tower to the perch 80 feet above the circular pool.

Wearing nothing but a red Speedo, Brown stops about 20 rungs from the top and peers at the spectators below, most of them wide-eyed children.

"Higher!" they scream. "HIGHER!"

Still tanned and toned at 53, Brown clambers onto the square plank, strikes a perfectly postured pose and waits for the children to count down — "5, 4, 3, 2, 1!"

Without hesitation, Brown springs into a somersault before straightening his body and piercing the water like an arrow.

The crowd hushes until Brown splashes out, a giddy smile across his face.

"How was that?" he yells to the cheering throng.

Brown brought his Orlando, Fla.-based team of acrobatic divers to the Johnson Space Center recently to put on a show that he's taken all over the world. He's dazzled Chinese children, Saudi Arabian princes, even one of the greatest bands of all time.

"I love what I do," Brown said. "It's thrilling enough that it keeps me in shape. And then, look at the things I've done and the places I've seen. I mean, unbelievable stuff."

Brown has been high-diving for almost four decades and is still taking fearless leaps off the cliffs in Acapulco made famous by the "Wide World of Sports."

He also still does a show-stopping "fire dive," donning a flame-resistant suit doused in gasoline, setting himself ablaze and diving off a 10-meter platform into the extinguishing water.

He burned a hole in his back doing that one once. Singed his eyebrows a few other times.

But when you've beaten cancer after doctors gave you a 5 percent chance to live, what could possibly scare you?

"In life, there's risk in everything you do," he said. "What I do, I think about the worst-case scenario all the time. Since I know what that is, I calculate the risks, and feel like I have control of the end result."

It doesn't always work out that way.

Brown broke his leg making a high dive on a rainy day in Florida in 1993. Another time, he landed on his back and spit up blood after plunging out of a helicopter into a volcanic lake in Chile.

He wasn't expecting that rhino to bolt after he climbed onto its back, either. But that's another story.

"Divers are a crazy bunch," he said. "We're always looking for some crazy thing to do."

Brown discovered the sport when he was 15, thanks to his high school guidance counselor, who also happened to be the swim coach. Brown dove at a Florida community college and won a few meets along the way, but never quite reached the elite level.

"The Olympics, they only take two people out of how many thousands who try?" he said. "I wasn't one of them, and I knew it."

After college, one of his old coaches asked if Brown would dive in a show at a safari park in Austria. That's where Brown mounted the rhino.

He spent eight summers there, worked in Hong Kong for a few years after that, and eventually found his niche organizing traveling stunt-diving shows.

He was heading on another trip in 1994 when a doctor told him he had a melanoma tumor on his lip.

At the time, Brown considered it nothing more than a nuisance.

"I said, 'OK, what's that?' He said, 'Well, those are kind of treacherous,'" Brown said. "I'm like, 'Well, you're the doctor, you're the man. Let's take care of it.'"

Murder investigation opened into Pakistan cricket coach's death

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — The genteel sport of cricket was dealt a brutal blow when Jamaican police said Pakistan's national coach was murdered in his hotel room a day after his team suffered a humiliating World Cup loss.

Bob Woolmer, 58, was found unconscious in his blood- and vomit-splattered hotel room in Jamaica on Sunday after his team's defeat to Ireland on St. Patrick's Day sealed Pakistan's ouster from the tournament.

He was later declared dead at a hospital. Police said at the time that initial tests didn't indicate how he died.

But Police Commissioner Lucius Thomas said Thursday in a statement that the pathologist report found Woolmer's death was due to "asphyxia as a result of manual strangulation." Police said they were reviewing security cameras at the Jamaica Pegasus Hotel and urging witnesses to come forward.

"It is our belief that those associated with or having access with Mr. Woolmer may have vital information to assist this inquiry," Thomas said in the statement.

There was no evidence of forced entry, police said. No arrests have been made and there were no suspects in the case.

Mark Shields, the deputy police commissioner, said police were investigating if more than one person could have been involved.

"Because Bob was a large man, it would have taken some significant force to subdue him, but of course at this stage we do not know how many people were in the room," he told a news conference Thursday night. "It could be one or more people involved in this murder."

Woolmer's death prompted much speculation among followers of cricket, a sport that breaks for tea and makes baseball seem fast-paced. Despite its gentlemanly manner, the sport generates tremendous passion in Britain and its former colonies.

Protesters in several Indian cities, for instance, burned effigies of their national cricket players and destroyed portions of one player's half-built home after the team was beaten Sunday by Bangladesh.

"I couldn't have imagined even in my dreams that it could turn out to be a murder case," Pakistan's 1992 World Cup winning coach Intikhab Alam told The Associated Press in Pakistan. "You can't have more shocking news than this."

Shields declined to comment when asked about local media reports describing the condition of Woolmer's body. "There are some issues surrounding marks on his body, but for the moment I would rather we stick to the cause of death, which is asphyxia," he said.

Pakistan's team spokesman Pervez Jamil Mir said the players were shocked by the news Woolmer had been killed. "I've spoken to the chairman and he's totally devastated. He can't believe it. He's very, very distressed. The team is distressed. Everybody is absolutely in a state of shock," he said.

Earlier in the day, Pakistan's cricketers were fingerprinted and interviewed by police, then allowed to travel across the island to Montego Bay. Mir said Jamaican police were not preventing the team from leaving the country and they would depart for Pakistan on Saturday.

Assistant Police Commissioner Les Green said the team was fingerprinted as part of standard procedure "to eliminate persons from fingerprints which would be found in the room."

"After a thorough investigation, fingerprints not belonging to Mr. Woolmer were found in the room," he told the AP.

Nasim Ashraf, who tendered his resignation as chairman of the Pakistan Cricket Board soon after the team's defeat to Ireland, said Friday that the players were not facing any restrictions on their movements and would return home soon.

"The Bob Woolmer case is under investigation, but I want to make it clear that there is no suspicion on the Pakistani team," Ashraf said in the northwestern city of Peshawar.

An outspoken Pakistani player speculated that gambling interests had it in for Woolmer. The coach's widow said he was depressed about losing the game, but would never have committed suicide. She said an irate fan might have killed her husband.

Georgetown's Roy Hibbert benefiting from games vs. former Hoyas

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — For Roy Hibbert, one of the perks of playing center at Georgetown is the summer pickup games.

When Hibbert walks into the gym, he never knows who'll be there. Alonzo Mourning, Dikembe Mutombo, Michael Sweetney and Patrick Ewing are a few of the former Hoya big men who have given the 7-foot-2 junior a taste of the NBA.

"It has helped me out a lot," Hibbert said Thursday on the eve of the NCAA East Regional semifinal against Vanderbilt. "Whenever Alonzo comes by, he pulls me aside and talks to me. Big Pat will talk to me. Mike Sweetney will give me a call at times. Dikembe came by a year ago and we went one-on-one."

During a recent game, Hibbert blocked a shot by Mutombo, and did his own little finger wag.

"I don't know if he is going to get back to me on that one," Hibbert said. "It's fun. Obviously, there is a tradition there and I take pride in being a Georgetown center and hopefully I'll be remembered in the same light at those guys."

Hibbert can enhance his place in Hoyas history Friday night when No. 2 seed Georgetown (28-6) takes on No. 6 seed Vanderbilt (22-11) at the Continental Airlines Arena.

A win would advance the Hoyas to the round of eight for the first time since 1995-96.

If there is an advantage for Georgetown against Vanderbilt, it's inside. The Hoyas beat the Commodores 86-70 earlier this season, getting 19 points from Big East player of the year Jeff Green, and 18 points and 10 rebounds from Hibbert. It was one of nine double-doubles for the center, who has posted consecutive double-doubles in the NCAA tournament.

"I feel when I can dominate the post, it brings more attention to me and I get Jeff or DaJuan (Summers) a shot because they are double-teaming me," Hibbert said. "I feel it's my responsibility to get going early so we can open up things for the rest of my teammates."

Vanderbilt, which switched to virtually a four-guard offense after an injury to Alan Metcalfe in the second game, doesn't have a player bigger than 6-9 in its starting lineup.

"These aren't two big slow guys down in the post that you have to try and just front," Vanderbilt guard Dan Cage said of Georgetown's front line. "These guys get out on the 3-point line. They pass the ball, they dribble the ball well, and they are extremely versatile and athletic and quick. They run the floor. So they present some unique matchup problems for us."

The same could be said of Vanderbilt's smaller lineup, which boasts swingman Derrick Byars, the coaches' pick as the Southeastern Conference player of the year.

After three somewhat disappointing seasons, Byars went to work in the offseason, taking 20,000 shots, adding 15 pounds of muscle and increasing his bench press by 50 pounds.

Bulldogs: Not just happy to be here

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Every response from Todd Lickliter appears to indicate the Butler coach is just happy to be in the final 16 of the NCAA tournament.

Is he concerned about the Bulldogs' matchup against Florida — the defending national champion, the third-ranked team in the country and the top seed in the Midwest Regional — and in a domed stadium no less?

"I asked them to move it. And they wouldn't do it," he said. "We'd play outside to be in the Sweet 16."

How difficult will it be to guard Florida's Al Horford?

"Why would you want to bring that up?" he asked. "I was having a nice afternoon."

Were the Bulldogs in the running for several top-tier Indianapolis players that got away to A-list schools?

"We invited them all," Lickliter responded.

Beyond the aw shucks pose, Lickliter knows the Bulldogs (29-6) belong. Butler is far from a Cinderella story, ranking 21st, rating a No. 5 seed with a school-record 29 victories and making its second appearance in the final 16 in the last five years.

The biggest item lacking is a power conference affiliation. Butler was co-champion of the Horizon League and is the first member to make it to the final 16 twice.

"We're thrilled to be in St. Louis," Lickliter said. "We're thrilled to be in the tournament, and I'm proud of the way the guys have played.

"They've earned the right to be here."

Butler is among a handful of mid-major schools who've become perennially dangerous NCAA teams, joining the likes of Gonzaga and Southern Illinois. Typically, he puts a positive spin on mid-major.

"I've got to say that I think labeling is an individual thing," Lickliter said.

DOCTOR'S DAY
MARCH 30, 2007

March 30 was chosen to commemorate one of the greatest discoveries in Medical History. On this day in 1842, Dr. Crawford W. Long, the famous Georgia physician, first used ether as an anesthetic agent in a surgical operation, thereby providing mankind with the blessedness of freedom from pain and suffering during surgery.

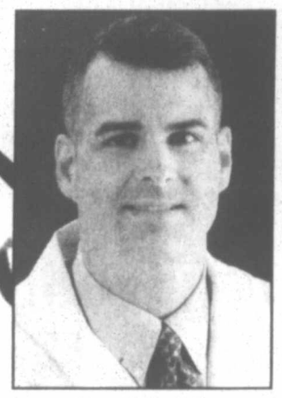

The red carnation is the symbol of Doctor's Day. It was adopted in 1949 as the official flower. The flower means divine & rejoicing.

Mystery safe's contents not needed

MONROE, Conn. (AP) — The mystery what a locked antique safe found behind a historical society's furnace might hold had this town abuzz until a locksmith got it open. Its contents: the safe's long-lost combination.

"Like we need this now," Monroe Historical Society President Nancy Zorena joked after the 450-pound safe was unlocked Thursday.

The Victorian-era safe was discovered in an old building owned by the society. Its manufacturer was long out of business, and nothing was available to indicate who had owned the massive iron chest before the town donated it to the historical society decades ago.

The safe itself is worth about $300 — likely more than its contents.

APRIL IS SEXUAL ASSAULT AWARENESS MONTH

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I work in a public library, where I deal with a lot of children and process many library card applications. I have a question for today's parents and was wondering if your readers would respond. Why do so many parents give their children first names they don't like to be used? At least once a week, I run into a parent who, when I call her child "Mary," will get angry and snap, "We don't call her that!" and order me to call the child by his or her middle name or some completely different name. I mean, if you don't like the name or don't want your kid to be called that, why give them that name? I understand with older kids it can be a matter of choice, or with "Juniors" and others, it's a way to distinguish a father from a son. But this happens too often, and I dislike being snapped at because I called their son or daughter by his or her first name. So why is it such a common practice? -- CONFUZZLED IN FLORIDA

DEAR CONFUZZLED: I'm sure my readers will gladly chime in, but I have a hunch that many of them will tell you that their children were named to honor deceased parents, grandparents or other relatives despite the fact that those names may no longer be in "vogue." And that's why their child is called by a middle name or nickname. However, the parents you describe are rude and abusive. Rather than snapping at you, they should have their children's library cards issued in the name the child uses.

DEAR ABBY: Twelve years ago, when I was in high school, I made friends with a girl who had just come from Europe. (I'll call her Cheri.) We became close friends and did the usual high school things together. I was the first of our group to be married and asked Cheri and several other girlfriends to be my bridesmaids. All went nicely. I soon had a baby, and I asked Cheri to be the godmother to my daughter, which she accepted. A year later, Cheri became engaged and asked me to stand up for her at her wedding. By that time I had two little ones, my husband was earning an hourly wage and money was tight. I leveled with her and told her I didn't have the money to buy a bridesmaid's dress. Cheri was hurt and asked her sister to do the honors. I wasn't even invited to the wedding. Now I'm thinking about the friendship we once had, and I miss it. Was I wrong to be truthful about my money situation, or should I have gone into debt to buy the necessary bridesmaid's apparel? -- WONDERING IN OHIO

DEAR WONDERING: You did the right thing in telling your friend the truth that buying the bridesmaid's dress was beyond your means. Considering the circumstances, it would have been foolish to go into debt. I can understand Cheri's disappointment, but she reacted like a spoiled child. ("If you don't do what I want, you can't come to my party!") Because you miss her, give her a call and see if she has grown up by now.

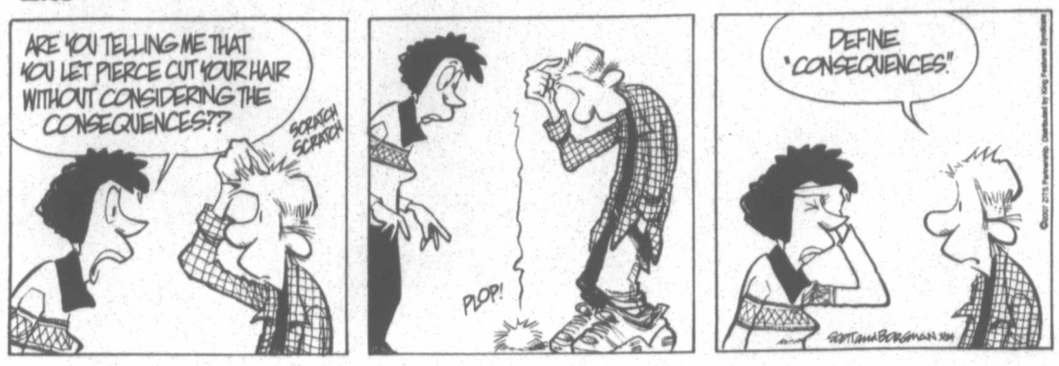

DEAR ABBY: I have a 4-year-old sister who drinks a lot of beer. My dad lets her drink it. What should I do? -- BIG SISTER IN SANTA MARIA, CALIF.

DEAR BIG SISTER: You appear to have more common sense than your father, who apparently does not realize that when children drink alcohol they can more easily become dependent upon it than adults. Because your father is not likely to stop if you tell him that giving liquor to a child is wrong, you should tell a trusted teacher at school what you have told me. The teacher can see to it that your father recognizes the error of his ways.

CANYON — The Bivins family is an integral part of the history and development of Amarillo, and one of two concurrent exhibits at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum will present clothing worn by the Bivins women.

"Building a City: The Bivins Family and the Development of Amarillo" showcases the clothing styles of Lee Bivins' wife Mary Elizabeth Gilbert Bivins as well as her granddaughter Betty Bivins Childers and granddaughter-in-law Betty Teel Bivins Lovell.

A suit, a dress with matching coat, and an evening gown will be among the collection in the textile gallery March 31 through Sept. 9.

"Off to Work We Go: Office Furniture" will feature a walnut, roll-top desk that once belonged to pioneer rancher, oilman and civic leader Lee Bivins. The desk later belonged to and was used by his nephew Albert Richard "Dick" Bivins.

Other significant pieces from PPHM's office equipment collection, including an 1870 Physician's Examination Chair, a 1935 Permanent Wave Machine, and a 1929 Cash Register, open in the exhibit March 30 and continue through Oct. 7.

Women ride into the sunshine of Texas trail history

CANYON — Celebrate Women's History Month and meet some of the amazing women of the frontier through stories told by contributors to the book "Texas Women on the Cattle Trails."

The symposium is planned for Saturday, March 31, from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the Hazlewood Lecture Hall of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum.

Jean Stuntz, Fran Vick, Bruce Shackelford, Joyce Roach and Sara Massey share the lives of Cornelia Adair, Molly Goodnight, Bettie Mathews Reynolds, Minta Holmsley, Lizzie Johnson and other women on horseback.

Cost is $25 for PPHM members and $35 for non members. A luncheon is included and a book signing will follow. RSVP by March 26 to (806)651-2258 or e-mail ecunningham@pphm.wtamu.edu.

Exhibit blog relays a weekly journal of early 1900s cowboys

CANYON — Stories worthy of a western film comprise a new blog named Cowboys, Broncos and the JA Ranch. The blog was created in conjunction with the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum exhibit "JA: The Paloduro Ranch," and depicts life on a western ranch through the experiences of the cowboys and their wives who worked on the ranch.

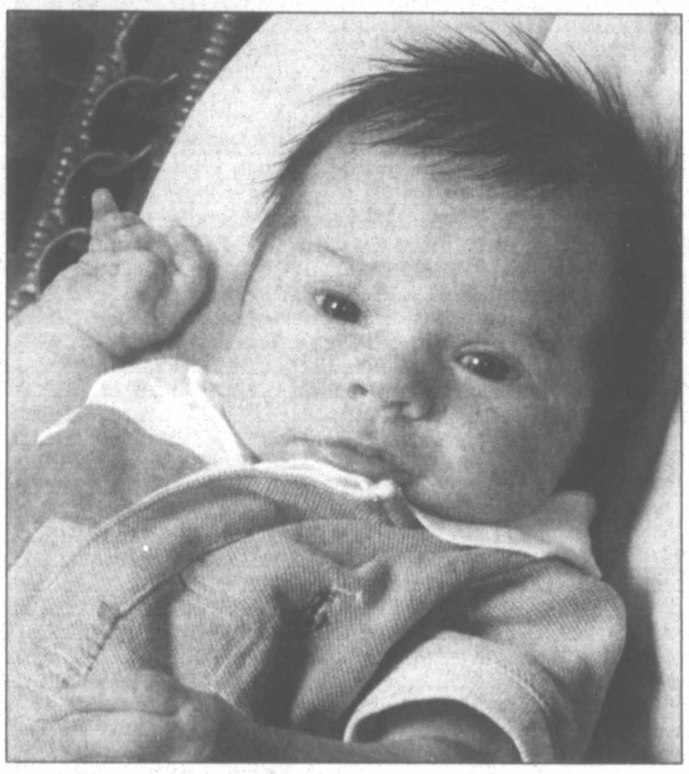

The blog can be viewed at http://panhandleplains.blogspot.com.

Here is a sample posting:

"Colonel Goodnight told of his having gone to Dodge City to meet a friend of Mrs. Adair who was coming to the JA ranch for a visit from England. On the way they passed through a gate and Mr. Goodnight remarked that it was the gate to his front yard. After driving twenty-five miles further the Englishman asked, 'Well, for God's sake, how large is your front yard?'"

Weekly postings on Monday will be jocular as well as factual recitations of duties performed and living conditions on the Texas plains. All postings are from the museum's archival material either written by or transcribed from the JA cowboys.

"JA: The Paloduro Ranch" exhibit and blog continue through Aug. 19.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, March 26, 2007:
This year you have drive and a destiny. The unexpected happens frequently. As a result, you gain quite a few insights. Friends play a role in your life, more so than usual. You need to frequently pull back and gain a perspective. A different vision might be uncomfortable but does point to new choices and ideas. If you are single, you might have difficulty developing the type of nurturing bond you would like. What you are seeking this year might not be suitable for your life. You will be somewhat of a homebody. If you are attached, your sweetie will react to you and want to nestle in more. Travel and understanding could cause some tension. CANCER feels comfortable with you.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Nurturing in the classic context is not your style. You learn more effective ways of expressing your feelings, for better or worse. Examine your options before closing a door or running in the opposite direction. Tonight: Head home. Isn't there a movie you want to see?
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ You will have a tendency to say what you think and not really worry about others' reactions. Consider your options carefully. You might be surprised by another's intentions. A friend helps you hit a home run. Tonight: Hang out.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Expenses could be building, and you might be far more frantic than in the past. Your ability to read between the lines emerges, allowing new vistas and a different perspective. Stop and think before you react. Tonight: Pay bills first.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Your smile is a sure-bet winner. You'll come out ahead. You are on top of your game. You have certain issues that you need to work through financially or regarding a partner. Tonight: The world could be your oyster if you so choose.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Slow down and take your time. You might feel awkward and out of sorts. Frustration could accompany these feelings. Remain centered, understanding your expectations and direction. Today might not be the right moment to move forward. Tonight: Try out the role of loner for a change.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Zero in on what you want. You might want to touch base with friends who really do understand your cause, choices and directions. Listen to others and their opinions. Stopping and assessing other perspectives wouldn't hurt. Tonight: Zero in on yourself.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You are on top of the world. Though you might be all smiles, someone else, or many people, could be difficult. Understanding takes you in a new direction, allowing good will and more friendship in your life. Tonight: Expect a late night.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Your ability to read between the lines might make not only a partner uptight but also those in your daily life. Make your own decisions and don't allow others to get involved or give you feedback you don't want to hear. Tonight: Feed your mind.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ You could feel awkward, as you are dealing with a partner who tests your strength and mettle. You'll come out on top if you don't push yourself too hard. Expressing your opinions draws reactions. You make waves. Tonight: Happy as a cat.
CAPRICORN (Dec.22-Jan 19)
★★★ Others will test your indulgence and determination. Some of you, and for good reason, might decide to head in another direction or do something very different. Examine your options rather than walk away. Tonight: Do your own thing.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ You might want to think before you leap into action. Zero in on what you want. Your imagination and high energy could possibly backfire. Unexpected spending could point in a new direction; friendships help. Tonight: Easy does it.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Your creativity helps you see life with a renewed interest. You are on top of the world. Your intuition comes forward, and you follow through with determination. You are in charge of your decisions. Tonight: Out and about.
