Highest In Six Years...

Jobless Rate Is 8 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The jobless rate soared to 8 percent of the labor force last month, the highest rate in nearly six years, surpassing the recession peak of 1980, the Labor Department said today.

More than 8.5 million Americans were out of work in October, the largest number of people without jobs since 1939. Department analysts noted, however, that the 8.5 million figure must be weighed against a labor force that has expanded sharply in the last four decades.

The Reagan administration, which had predicted unemployment would peak at 8 percent, said after today's report that "the rate could move somewhat higher over the next few months before declining as the economy strengthens in 1982."

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said the rate rose half a percentage point, from 7.5 percent to 8 percent, from September to October.

And it said the unemployment rate among blacks reached 16.7 percent, the second consecutive record monthly high.

Although the jobless rate reached 8 percent overall, it was still far below the 9 percent high registered in May 1975.

Administration officials and other economists say unemployment will worsen as the economy enters its second recession in as many years.

"The October statistics reflect a substantial deterioration in the labor market," Janet L. Norwood, commissioner of labor statistics, said in testimony prepared for delivery today to the congressional Joint Economic Committee. "The negative signals from so many important indicators provide clear evidence of a substantial weakening in the employment situation."

Ms. Norwood said, "The number of persons working parttime because their hours were cut back or because they were unable to obtain fulltime work reached a record 5 million in October."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the administration plans no "quick-fix measures" to try to bring the rate down but will rely on Reagan's economic plan.

"The rise in unemployment is a natural short-term consequence of unwinding the deeply rooted inflation that is imbedded in the economy," Speakes said.

Later, James Burnham, a spokesman for the president's Council of Economic Advisers, said because of the new figures, the administration raised its jobless estimate for the recession. He said the forecast is for peak joblessness in the "8 percent-plus range."

Administration economists believe the recession will persist into the first half of 1982, but that a strong recovery should be underway by summer. The administration predicts the recession will be short and mild, but recent evidence suggests a longer and deeper one.

The October rate was the highest since the 8.2 percent figure registered toward the end of the 1974-75 recession, in December 1975, which was brought on in large part by the Arab oil embargo.

Unemployment had spurted from 7.2 to 7.5 percent from August to September this year, and overall black unemployment reached a record 16.3 percent in September.

Department analyst Deborah Klein said that while more Americans were out of work last month than at any other time since 1939, "it is important to remember that millions more people are in the labor force" and looking for work now.

During last year's recession, the unemployment peak was 7.6 percent. joblessness this year has ranged from 7 percent to 7.5 percent.

Private economists said Thursday that a persistent slump in many U.S. industries, such as autos and home-building, could force unemployment up further by year's end, with no significant hiring resulting from the traditional surge in retail business during the holiday shopping season.

The Labor Department said today the number of unemployed increased by 550,000 last month, pushing the overall jobless total to 8.5 million, compared to 7.9 million the previous month.

Typifying the jobs picture was a surge in unemployment among adult men, whose jobless rate jumped from 6.2 percent to 6.7 percent.

"For the second straight month," the department said, "a sizable rise in unemployment took place among blue-collar workers, whose October rate of 11 percent was at its highest point this year."

Unemployment rose last month in every category covered in the government's household survey — whites, 6.9 percent; teenagers, 20.6 percent; and fulltime workers, 7.7 percent.

Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of President Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers, has said the administration expects the unemployment rate to go up to 8 percent by the end of the year.

Change Shuttle's Oil

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Technicians on round-the-clock shifts changed the dirty oil in Columbia's troubled power units today, hoping this would be enough to put the shuttle back on track for another attempt at launch next week.

If the units, which forced a scrub of the flight Wednesday, are flightworthy, the space shuttle could lift off as early as next Wednesday. If they have to be replaced, an attempt cannot be made until the following week, said launch director George Page.

NASA spokesman Mark Hess reported that the power unit work, which began Thursday night, was "going very well." But he said no decision on a new launch date was expected before Saturday, when analysis of the three auxiliary power units is to be completed.

Meanwhile, launch pad crewmen inspected the external fuel tank, solid fuel rocket boosters and other elements of the shuttle, making ready to start a renewed countdown at 11 p.m. EST Sunday if the decision is made to launch at 7:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Brady To Appear

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidental press secretary James S. Brady will make his first public appearance since he was wounded by gunfire last March when he returns to the White House on Monday to help reopen the refurbished press room.

Except for a few daytime trips home or visits to friends, Brady has remained at George Washington University Hospital since he was critically wounded in the attempted assassination of President Reagan on March 30 outside a Washington Hotel. Brady's family hopes he will be released in time for Thanksgiving.

The press secretary's top deputy, Larry Speakes, told reporters today that Brady will help Reagan cut the ribbon formally opening the new briefing room and working quarters in the White House West Wing.

Exercises In The Mideast Announced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon formally announced today that U.S. ground, air and naval forces totaling more than 6,000 men will conduct wide-ranging military exercises for more than a month in Egypt, the Sudan, Oman and Somalia, the biggest such military drills in Middle Eastern countries so far.

The exercises, called Bright Star, come as the United States is attempting to demonstrate to nations in the area and to the Soviet Union that this country intends to protect its friends and its interests in that region.

Many of the details of the impending exercise this month and next have already become known and the Pentagon announcement represented formal confirmation.

Defense officials have said that the exercise, a follow-up to a much smaller maneuver in Egypt a year ago, was in the planning stage before the assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat Oct. 6 and that the plans have not been expanded since then.

Troops will be flown from the United States, with the first combat units due to arrive in Egypt next Monday.

Ask Us

Q.—I understand why driver's lincenses are requested when cashing checks in a store, but am wondering about giving them my credit card numbers. Is it safe to give out these numbers?

A.—It is up to you. Stores may set their own policy in such matters, since they are not required to cash checks. We are told that credit card numbers are required by some stores because they regard a credit card as an indication that a person is a good risk.

Keeping tab on our neighbors:

Walter Buckel of the Lamesa Press-Reporter asks where was the quietest spot in the Big Apple, other than the 5th Ave. Mortuary?

"It would be a three-way tie," Buckel says. "Between the Yankee dugout in the final game with the Dodgers out front, 8-2, George Steinbrenner in his private booth, and Howard Cosell in the broadcast booth.

"Cosell was utterly appalled and astounded at the inefficient and inept performance of the great Yankee pinstripe machine from Newwww Yok.

"But we must credit Cosell with the classic statement of all late in the final game: 'Credit is due the Newwww Yok fans for their extraordinary behavior in this series.' He meant that no fire bombs, no beer bottles or other missiles were tossed at (Pedro) Guerro for breaking the Yankees' back with his hitting and defensive skills."

We couldn't work up much enthusiasm for baseball in late October.

Taking note of Walter Grubbs' plans for challenging Bill Heatly in the new 78th Lesiglative District next year, Orlin Brewer of the Vernon Record says it could mean the end of Heatly's legislative career.

"He (Heatly) runs a risk of being defeated in an almost totally new district that now contains only 17,000 of his former constituents," says Brewer. "Or, he may simply choose to retire without seeking re-election in another tough campaign."

We have heard since the redistricting board's action that there is speculation in Austin that Heatly will not run again, but it is mere speculation at this point.

If you are upset about the latest increase in postal rates, Speedy Nieman of the Hereford Brand says you can still feel fortunate to live in the USA.

"Even with the new rate increases, the U. S. will have the lowest mailing rate of all major industrialized countries," says Nieman. "Canada, which has traditionally held its rates just below those of the U. S., plans to raise its first class rate to 30 cents (Canadian) Jan. 1. That's equivalent to 25 cents in the U. S.

"In a comparison of 14 nations, the first unit of domestic letter postage ranges from 20 cents to 29.5 cents. Sweden tops the list at 1.65 krona, or 29.5 cents."

Joe Carter Is Named Month's Photographer

Photographs by Joe Carter will be featured in a new exhibit opening Sunday in the Scurry County Museum at Western Texas College.

Carter, professor of science at WTC, has been named the second Scurry County Amateur Photographer of the Month. His photographs will remain in the museum through Dec. 4. Also being featured in the museum currently is an exhibit of oriental rugs.

Photography has been one of Carter's hobbies since he was a student at New Mexico State University in Las Cruces. His first photographs were made in conjunction with his wildlife courses and he continues to enjoy photographing wildlife and nature. Most of his work is done with a single lens reflex Canon 35mm, and he usually shoots slide film because they are suitable for classroom use. He has put together about 12 slide-tape programs which can be used by his students or by others interest in the subject matter.

The museum exhibit will include about 15 photographs, both color and black and white. Among them will be Carter's favorite picture, mouth-watering, freshly-baked biscuits in a dutch oven.

Carter was reared in Garden City and attended Howard College at Big Spring after graduating from Garden City High School. He received both the bachelor of science and the master of science degrees from NMSU. His mother, Mrs. Willie Carter, still lives in Garden City.

Joe and his wife, Carolyn, live nine miles southwest of Snyder on the Big Spring Highway. They have three children, Philip 15, and twin daughters, Kristi and Kerri 10, all students in Ira Schools. They enjoy country life and family vacations are most often spent on camping trips, which, incidentally, give them opportunities for photographing nature close up.

Carter was one of the winners in the museum's first West Texas Amateur Photography competition and has also won awards in the photography division of the Scurry County Fair.

PHOTOGRAPHY EXHIBIT—A golden desert sunset will be among photographs exhibited by Joe Carter in the November Amateur Photographer of the Month display in the Scurry County Museum. Carter will be showing about 15 photographs in the museum through the month.

In Dispute...

Railroad Board Will Not Intervene

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission has made it plain its Railroad Service Board is not in any hurry to step into the dispute between the Oklahoma-Kansas-Texas Railroad and the Rock Island Railroad trustee over services for the north-south line.

And OKT officials indicated hope was fading for continuation of service past Nov. 30.

The government board announced late Thursday it granted the OKT authority to provide the service through Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas for only two more months. The board failed to set compensation, it was reported in Oklahoma City.

Before the ICC could even consider stepping in to cut the OKT's costs of providing the service, the OKT would have to show it had negotiated in good faith with Rock Island trustee William Gibbons for a price to provide that service, said Melvin Clemens, transportation analyst with the ICC's office of consumer protection.

Harry Dimmerman, vice president of the OKT's parent company, the Missouri-Kansas-Texas railroad, said, "If that's true, we're disappointed."

He said the Katy has not received official confirmation of the ICC's action so he could not say whether it will continue providing service.

Katy officials contend they cannot afford to continue paying Gibbons $415,000 a month for the privilege of operating the Rock Island tracks, particularly since Gibbons turned down the Katy's bid to buy the line. Gibbons is under court order to liquidate the Rock Island.

Dimmerman said the OKT has lost about $4.5 million in the 16 months it has been operating the Rock Island service.

Clemens said under the law, the ICC can't step in to set a rate for providing service on the Rock Island until the trustee and an interested carrier have tried and failed to reach agreement.

He said even if the Katy and the trustee negotiate, the commission probably wouldn't take up any such request until after Dec. 1 and even then "it's not necessarily a short process."

"The thrust (in the ICC) is to let the free market have more of a role. We are inclined to say, 'You guys work it out.' Only in extreme situations should they come to the commission for assistance" in setting a price for service, Clemens said.

Clemens acknowledged there was "little likelihood" Gibbons would voluntarily agree to cut his price to the OKT for providing the service.

"It would appear the trustee would be right in his position of saying no. He could say, 'I have no interest in having you on my line. That's not my job. My job is to liquidate the railroad, not be a landlord to a bunch of railroads who want to operate on my lines with the cheapest possible rent," Clemens said.

Asked what customers along the line and the OKT were to do when the trustee rejected OKT's purchase bid, Clemens said, "I honestly don't know." He acknowledged that the trustee "has not been as flexible as we like him to be."

Brooke Shields Wants No Photos Distributed

NEW YORK (AP) — Teen-age beauty Brooke Shields says she wants a photographer stopped from peddling nude photos of her taken when she was 10 because she has to set a good example for other teen-agers.

"For young children to see these photos, I think it would confuse them as to what I really am," the 16-year-old actress-model said Thursday in court testimony punctuated by sobs.

Miss Shields and her mother, Teri Shields, are seeking a permanent injunction against commercial distribution of photographs taken by Manhattan photographer Garry Gross.

The photos, taken in 1975, appeared in "Sugar and Spice," a book published by Playboy Press. They show the child posing naked in an old-fashion bathtub and a contemporary marble tub.

Mother and daughter contend that further distribution of the photographs would cause Miss Shields irreparable harm because they would damage her professional image and therefore her career.

Gross has asserted that Miss Shields' reputation cannot be damaged by the pictures because she has been "portrayed as a young vamp and a harlot" and as a "Lolita."

Miss Shields disputed that Thursday, saying that her nude appearance in the role of a young prostitute in the film "Pretty Baby" only lasted "two or three seconds," and that stand-ins took over when her two latest films, "Blue Lagoon" and "Endless Love," called for nude scenes.

Miss Shields testified that in addition to posing nude for several seconds in "Pretty Baby," she posed semi-nude once for photographer Francesco Scavullo for a book on beauty.

The actress also has appeared in sexy advertisements for a line of blue jeans.

Also at issue is whether releases signed by Teri Shields limited use of the photographs to the book or whether Gross may continue to use them, as he claims is his right.

The trial was to continue today and was expected to last several days.

Miss Shields said she is more embarrassed by the nude photographs now than she was when they were taken.

"Those pictures are not me now," she said when questioned by Justice Edward Greenfield. "I've become more conscious of myself, my body and my friends." She said she wouldn't want her friends to see the pictures.

"My main audience are teen-agers and I have to set a certain role model for teen-agers," Miss Shields told a packed courtroom in Manhattan state Supreme Court.

New Voices For Coke Machines

ATLANTA (AP) — Don't be surprised to hear a polite "thank you" the next time you buy a Coke from one of those bright-red vending machines.

No, the Coca-Cola Co. isn't hiring people to greet users of their drink dispensers. But it's doing the next best thing: providing machines that do their own talking.

It's all part of an attempt by the Atlanta-based company to maintain its leadership in the highly competitive soft-drink industry.

The first 100 models of the Talking Vendor, developed in conjunction with Sanyo Manufacturing Corp. of Japan, already are on their way to bottlers in Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Tennessee, Michigan and Texas.

"Hi. I'm the Talking Vendor machine from Coca-Cola," the machine declares through a small speaker above the selector panel as the unwary customer plops in change.

Before the bewildered buyer gets over that, the machine chimes in with other bits from its synthesized repertoire, such as: "You need to put in more money"; "Make your selection, please"; or "Sorry, sold out."

For the absent-minded buyer comes a reminder, "Don't forget your change."

Coca-Cola USA officials say several thousand of the loquacious devices will be chattering away across the nation by the middle of next year.

So far, in trial tests in Atlanta, New Orleans, Detroit and Houston, customer reaction has ranged from "passive acceptance to wild disbelief," said company spokesman Tony Tortorici.

The Talking Vendor — which aside from its speaker looks like any other soft drink machine — costs only about $100 more than its non-talking counterparts, the company says.

...researchers discovered naval ... have been amused and fascinated for 20 years by a "silly-putty" metal called Nitinol.

This is the doggonedest stuff! It's a nickel-titanium alloy which at room temperature is strong as steel.

Dunk it in cold water and it turns soft and pliable.

Bend it—and it stays bent.

But then...

Dip it in hot water—and it "comes to life" in your hands.

What earthly good is a piece of metal that won't hold its original shape?

Warm, it relaxes into any shape; cold it reverts to its original shape, rigid.

What good is that?

That's what researchers have asked themselves by accident in 1958.

A Navy scientist had just lit his pipe and the heat from his lighter caused a nearby piece of crumpled Nitinol wire to spring out straight.

But, so what?

So Nitinol remained a scientific curiosity, nothing more.

Until some other scientists at Lawrence Lab in Berkeley determined that the miracle metal, with only a change in temperature, can release a force as great as 50 TONS PER SQUARE INCH!

Now, "Science Digest" tells us, they have harnessed that energy to create a working model of a Nitinol engine.

A wheel with extended loops of Nitinol wire rotates through a bath of hot water. As the heated loop snaps open it pushes the wheel. Then the heated loop cools, relaxes, in time for the next rotation.

Nobel laureate Edwin McMillan witnessed what he sensed was a historic demonstration, made some hurried calculations, determined that this engine—however primitive—was producing half a watt of mechanical power.

The machine was kept running continuously with no evidence of metal fatigue; it became more efficient rather than less.

Now we have much more complex and powerful Nitinol engine prototypes. They work; we still don't know why.

But as surely as we have learned to apply electricity without knowing what it is, so we are learning to adapt Nitinol to the generation of energy.

Four hundred reports of separate worldwide Nitinol research projects have been submitted and more are being prepared.

More than 100 patents have been granted or are pending.

Nitinol's response is unique in thermodynamics.

Unlike any other substance we know of, the force needed to bend Nitinol when it is cold is much less than the force it releases when it goes straight again.

In other words, it produces more energy than it consumes—cleanly, safely, endlessly.

Perpetual motion at long last? If you like.

You'll be hearing more about Nitinol—lots more!

Your Birthday

November 7, 1981

This year, you could be luckier than usual in enterprises that are imaginative or creative. Your best opportunities will come from things you originated.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're capable of handling efficiently most conditions you will encounter today. The one area where you may reveal a weakness is the management of your resources. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph, which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Friends are likely to go out of their way and do things for you that they won't do for others. Feelings could be hurt if you brag about this.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Accept friends today for what they are, with all their little flaws, and they'll treat you the same. If you probe for their faults, expect similar treatment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Major achievements are possible today, provided your goals are realistic. Excursions into the realm of dreams and wishes may not work out too well.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Schedule important assignments early in the day when your chances for success are excellent. Your luck is apt to lessen a bit if you let too much time slip by.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your hunches regarding material things are on target today, but your perception as to why others are motivated to act as they do could be erroneous.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This should be a fun day, provided you don't get involved with friends who like intrigue. Pals with devious aims spell trouble.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There are specific responsibilities to attend to today and you know what they are. Don't let another sway you from the call of duty.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're a good manager and delegater today, but there's a chance you may set a poor example where performing the actual work is concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The drive you have to make things better for those you love is admirable, but be careful you don't try to change them in your image.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Once you decide to do something today, pursue the course your decision dictates. Being indecisive or wishy-washy could be your greatest handicap.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Conditions look encouraging today for things relating to personal gain. However, uncharacteristically, you may not be too willing to share what you get.

Olivia Likes Time Off

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Some musicans and singers want to be touring and cutting records all the time. Others are happy taking time off.

Olivia Newton-John is one of the latter. She has a new album, "Physical," on MCA Recods. The single, "Physical," is No. 26 and climbing on the best-selling chart of Oct. 24.

She says, "It has been two years, maybe three, I think, since I made an album. The 'Xanadu' album was after it but that wasn't strictly mine.

"I knew I was supposed to have done an album last year but I didn't do it. So this year I knew I had to do one. We started in March and it took a while, partly because the producer, John Farrar, was doing his own album.

"I haven't toured for three years now. I didn't feel like I wanted to. I don't miss it yet. I'm very fortunate I don't have to tour. I appreciate that.

"It's fun once you get going. But I've been having such a nice time being at home, I didn't want to leave for a length of time."

She lives on a small ranch near Malibu, Calif., and has five horses, eight dogs and a cat.

She wrote one song on the new album, "The Promise," subtitled "The Dolpin Song," to state her belief that dolphins shouldn't be caught in tuna nets and killed, in fact that man shouldn't destroy other species.

On an enjoyable day at home, Miss Newton-John says, she likes to make breakfast and [illegible] to bed with the newspaper. She swims, then deals with mail and phone calls. Then she rides, checks her property, picks fruit and generally putters around. Then she'll visit a friend or have someone over.

Choosing songs for an album, Miss Newton-John says, is a matter of listening to hundreds of tapes. "You usually end up with friends. You ring up friends and ask if they've written anything." The new album is her most rock oriented, to give the singer a change of pace.

John Farrar wrote or cowrote five of the 10 songs on "Physical." Miss Newton-John says, "He has written most of my hits, 'You're the One That I Want,' 'Hopelessly Devoted to You,' 'Magic,' 'A Little More Love.'" She says that "You're the One That I Want" probably has been her biggest hit.

Miss Newton-John was born in Cambridge, England, and was 5 when her family moved to Australia. She thinks of herself as Australian and, she says, when she saw the movies "Breaker Morant" and "Gallipoli," she walked out saying proudly to herself, "I'm an Aussie."

She says, "I'm supposed to do a movie in Australia next year, a straight drama, based on a book D. H. Lawrence wrote when he was living in Australia."

Miss Newton-John's recording career started in England. She toured, early on, with Cliff Richard and became a regular on his TV show. She won her first Grammy Award in 1974. Her biggest career leap forward was starring in the movie "Grease."

"All I knew was I got sent a script," she says. "I did have an agent, but this came about another way. It happens like that sometimes. John Travolta now tells me he was plugging for me from the beginning, thinking I was a perfect Sandy.

"I thought John was going to be a big star. 'Saturday Night Fever' was not out yet, then. I saw he had charisma and knew he was going to make it. Acting was a big step for me. I'm glad I took it.

"But when I do something new, I'm a nervous wreck until it comes out. It was a year after we finished that film until it came out. It was a long wait." Both she and Travolta are scheduled for cameo parts in "Grease II."

Seven no trump is a pretty good contract with the North-South cards. All declarer requires is a 3-2 diamond break and even if diamonds don't break there is a slight extra chance. If the man with four diamonds is the only player who can stop clubs he will be squeezed.

Diamonds don't break and the squeeze isn't there so that any North-South pair that bid seven no trump was down one for a bad score. Even in the Life Masters' Pairs only a quarter of the field reached seven and most of those in seven were in spades.

The bidding in the box is instructive. South's club opening on a three card suit is normal in standard American. He is too strong for one no trump and too weak for two. After that start the bidding could proceed in any number of ways, but we like that shown in the box.

South won the spade with his eight and led the deuce to dummy's 10. Then he stopped to see the best way to guard against a 4-1 diamond break. He cashed dummy's ace of clubs and his three hearts while discarding two clubs from dummy. Then he ruffed his last low club with the ace of trumps and drew trumps and claimed.

The club ruff had been his 13th winner.

Big Smoker Given Tour

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.—Donald Evans, a retired textile worker, says he has smoked one pound of pipe tobacco per month for the past 50 years. This amounts to more than a quarter ton of tobacco.

He started pipe smoking in 1928 when his grandfather introduced him to George Washington pipe tobacco in honor of Washington, R.I., where he lived at the time.

Recently Evans and his wife were treated to a tour of the R. J. Reynolds tobacco plant here where the product is manufactured. He was on a trip from Nevada, where now lives, when he stopped in to introduce himself.

Items Prepared For Club Bazaar

The Twentieth Century Club met in the home of Mrs. Chas. Tyer for a workshop Nov. 3. Christmas ornaments and other articles were made for sale in the Martha Ann Women's Club Bazaar, Dec. 5.

Mrs. Guy Stoker, president, presided over the business meeting. Mrs. Lester Moore and Mrs. Stoker reported on the Mesquite District Fall Board Meeting in Clyde, which they attended. Several suggestions were made there for programs and projects which might be included in next year's plans. A scholrship is to be awarded in Mesquite District this club year. Instructions for submitting applications can be obtained from the District Scholarship Chairman.

Mrs. Stoker reminded members that annual reports are due before February 1st.

A Halloween party in the B.J. Bartels home brought members and guests together for dinner and games. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Guy Stoker, their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Billy Huddleston, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Moore, Mr. and Mrs. H.O. Beard, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Dupree, Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Key, Mrs. Lois Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Key, and hosts, Mr. and Mrs. B.J. Bartles and granddaughter Shelly, who served the trick or treaters.

No Choo Choo In Chattanooga

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn—"Chattanooga Choo Choo" was a hit song around the time of World War II. It became somewhat of a misnomer when train service to this city was stopped in 1970.

Now more people than ever are reported to be visiting the Terminal Station where the "Chattanooga Choo Choo" is on display.

Store Ice Is Harder

BUCYRUS, Ohio—Do you know the difference between ice made from distilled water and ice made in your own freezer?

The clear commercial variety from distilled water is harder, it doesn't melt as fast, and it allows your drink to get colder, because there is no air in the ice. This also means there will be less dilution of the drink.

"Ice from home freezers is usually cloudy, because it contains air," said Edward J. Dager, president of the Bucyrus Ice Company here.

For Gasoline...

Pesky Milkweed May Be Useful

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Farmers, who for years have been fighting the pesky milkweed that chokes their crops, one day may be growing the plant and producing gasoline from it.

"We would call it petroleum farming," said Dr. Frank [illegible] operator at [illegible] ico State Agricultura[illegible] sion office i[illegible]

Matta said he was optimistic that an acre of milkweed would produce nearly 400 to 500 gallons of gasoline a year.

The milkweed project, started in June 1979, should be completed by 1986, Matta said. But now money is a problem, he said, because financing for [illegible] chers had harvested and compressed their first crop of tumbleweeds into "tumble logs," which mostly will be for home use.

Foster and his fellow researchers said they hoped to have about 10,000 logs for a test market in Tucson this winter. He said research was also being conducted on tumble pellets for industrial use.

Like tumbleweed and milkweed, jojoba and guayule require little water for growth and are being studied as energy sources.

The jojoba is a low, green shrub that bears seeds containing oil nearly identical to the oil from the endangered sperm whale.

Jojoba oil is actualy a colorless wax and can be used in a wide range of products, including cosmetics, fertilizer, candles and specialized lubricants.

Guayule (pronounced why OO lay) is a bush-like plant that produces a form of rubber.

Guayule grows to maturity within three years, then is ready to prune. Harvesters then trim the plant's branches and take them to a processor where rubber is extracted.

The plant produces high-quality rubber, uses less water than conventional crops and can be grown on marginal land.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Troubled by skipped beat

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 73-year-old male. I'm relatively active during spring, summer and fall taking care of my lawn, shrubs and garden. I'm 5 feet 2, and weigh 140 pounds. I have maintained that weight for the past 15 years. I have not smoked for the past 20 years.

Lately I have developed an irregular heartbeat. At times it skips a beat and at other times it has a quick but weak beat. The doctor examined me and gave me an electrocardiogram. He merely said it was OK and not to worry, that an irregular heartbeat is not unusual. Could you enlighten me further on this matter?

DEAR READER — You were right to have an examination and your doctor was right in saying that it is not uncommon. Such flip-flops and skipped beats often occur in people who have no heart disease at all. In other instances they are caused by coronary artery disease and other problems. The only way to judge their significance is through an examination.

We all probably have an occasional skipped beat, one that occurs early. But we don't notice them. Almost all the astronauts had an occasional skipped beat and we knew it because we had records on them for hours and hours and even days.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-12, Heart Irregularities, Skipped Beats, Tachycardias, to give you more information. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

There are things which will even increase them in normal people. Cigarette smoking is one. Most heart specialists suggest people troubled with these should not smoke and should stop all coffee, tea and colas. I know you don't smoke but you might want to stop coffee and tea if you use them.

People who are active, particularly athletes who run or jog every day, sometimes gradually develop a low potassium level. That may contribute to the problem. A glass of orange juice a day usually takes care of that. Since you work a lot perhaps you should be sure to get some good fruit every day. Finally, if the skipped beats bother you too much your doctor can give you some medicines to control them.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My daughter, who is in her late 20s, recently was diagnosed as having cat scratch fever. The only symptoms were swollen lymph glands in the groin and acute tenderness in that area. This started nearly three months ago and, though improved, she still has the problem. She has taken antibiotics for two months. How long does the disease last? I had never heard of it before.

DEAR READER — There are probably at least 2,000 cases of cat scratch fever each year in the United States. It is believed to be transmitted by cats in 90 percent of the cases, either through a scratch, saliva or contact. It is not transmitted from person to person and the cat itself is healthy.

The disease is as you have seen in your daughter. There may be a mild fever of less than two weeks and a mild flu-like reaction, but the swollen lymph glands may persist for months. The agent that causes it is not known but it is presumed to be a virus. Since it is not caused by a bacteria, antibiotics are useless. Your daughter will recover spontaneously.

Dear Abby

Facts Will Serve Child Better Than Fiction

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: How does one explain "Daddy" to a 3-year-old child who has never known her father and in all probability never will?

She's a bright, perceptive, warm, loving child, and although she has never actually asked, "Where is my daddy?" the time is near when we must explain this to her.

We are her grandparents and are raising her. Her mother (our eldest — age 23) is unable to provide a stable home for her at this time due to an alcohol-drug problem that she is attempting to resolve through counseling and A.A. (She is also gay.)

Our grandchild talks to her mother on the phone once a week and sees her about once a month. Her "daddy" is a man our daughter knew casually and never married. He doesn't know about the child and our daughter doesn't want him to know. She says she never wants to see him again, doesn't know where he is and probably couldn't locate him if she tried.

Abby, we love this child dearly, but need to know what to tell her. Can you suggest an explanation that would be appropriate for a 3-year-old?

MISSOURI GRANDPARENTS

DEAR GRANDPARENTS: Stick to the truth, as cruel as it may seem. Inasmuch as the child's father doesn't even know she exists, and the child's mother has no intentions of locating him, simply tell her that you don't know where her father is. (None of this, "Daddy is far away and is coming back one day.") Do not say that he is "dead," because he may surface one day.

As the child grows older she can be told that her parents were not married. It will be easier for her in the long run if she grows up knowing the facts. She may feel cheated, but she will never feel deceived.

DEAR ABBY: I suppose this will sound like a dumb (or made up) letter coming from a 23-year-old married woman, but it is a very real problem, and if I asked other people they would think I was crazy.

I'm happily married to a very sweet guy (he's 27) who I thought I knew well, but I got the surprise of my life on our honeymoon. This 6-footer is afraid of the dark! When he goes to sleep at night, he has to have a light on in the bathroom with the door half-open so he won't be in total darkness. Abby, I can't sleep with the room half-lighted, but he can't sleep if it's dark.

Don't suggest separate bedrooms. I enjoy cuddling and falling asleep in his arms. Can you, or any of your readers, come up with a solution? Don't use my right name. He'd never live it down.

SLEEPY TIME GAL

DEAR SLEEPY: You have two choices: Eye shades for you, or behavior modification for him. The latter will mean some sessions with a therapist who will try to condition your man to tolerate darkness slowly by degrees.

DEAR ABBY: Is it correct to be addressed "Mary Jones" (not my real name) now that I am a widow?

I do not know if etiquette has changed, but it has really upset me! I want to be addressed as "Mrs. Richard Jones," but how can I tactfully let my friends, lawyer, banks, etc., know this without offending them?

I think it is a shame for people to drop the "Mrs." After all, I was a very happy "Mrs." for 49 years, so why do friends and other people immediately address my mail to "Mary Jones"? I am not a divorcee, and I do not want to forget that I was ever married. And I also dislike being addressed as "Mrs. Mary Jones." Please print your answer, as I am sure there are lots of people who need to learn this.

MRS. RICHARD JONES

DEAR MRS. JONES: You are Mrs. Richard Jones as long as you live — unless you marry again. And please do not hesitate to correct those who address you incorrectly.

Doesn't Want Mascot Nearby

NANAIMO, British Columbia (AP) — Gordon Santics wants a new home for Canada's unofficial national mascot, the beaver — anywhere but near him.

Santics said a beaver family near his Vancouver Island home has chomped down an apple tree, a couple of rows of raspberry canes and a willow tree.

With recent heavy rains and the buildup of beaver dams, Santics says nearby Long Lake has risen nearly two feet.

He's even written an advertisement to publicize the problem:

"Beaver family wishing to relocate. Capable of raising lakes by 24 inches in a mere overnight job. Loves apple trees, weeping willow, most ornamental trees and raspberry canes. Eliminates fall pruning and selective logging entirely. Interested countries or out-of-province parties please contact Gordon Santics."

He claims the problem has worsened in the past two years because of residential development around the lake.

Editor May Go To Jail...

Refuses To Disclose Sources

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass. (AP) — It started with an anonymous tip scribbled on a postcard: "Why don't you check the mess in the hospital?"

The postcard was sent to [illegible] Grapevine, a small weekly newspaper in this island community off Cape Cod. He checked out the "mess" at Martha's Vineyard Hospital and soon found himself in the middle of a court battle over safeguarding a reporter's sources — his own.

Kelly's year-long investigation centered on the appointment of Edward Hanify Jr. as chief administrator of the hospital in September 1979.

After checking with several sources and looking into the records at Western Massachusetts Hospital in Westfield, where Hanify once worked, Kelly wrote a series of articles questioning whether the 38-year-old Hanify had all of the qualifications listed on his resume.

The Grapevine stories, based on information from unnamed sources, led to Hanify's dismissal from his $40,000-a-year hospital job in September 1980.

Hanify pleaded no contest to a charge of "falsely claiming in writing" to have a masters degree from the University of Massachusetts. His attorney, Martin Tomassian Jr., however, insists that his client did not intentionally falsify his resume, but that UMass made clerical errors in Hanify's transcript.

Hanify fired back with a $1 million damage suit against four doctors at the hospital, accusing them of libel, slander, interference with an employment contract, interference with future employment and invasion of privacy.

His major witness: a most reluctant Gerald Kelly.

Tomassian submitted a 20-page list of questions for Kelly to answer and also asked the editor to bring [illegible] resumes, postcards, original documents and correspondence regarding the stories to a pretrial hearing.

When Kelly refused to comply, Superior Court Judge Eileen Griffin ruled last month that he must cooperate — or face contempt of court proceedings and a jail sentence.

Tomassian gave Kelly a final chance Thursday, but the editor again refused to answer questions about his sources, citing a constitutional guarantee of freedom of the press.

Tomassian said Kelly has no such guarantee. He predicted he would succeed in obtaining a contempt citation in Superior Court against Kelly.

"A hospital is a very vital thing to a community," Kelly said in an interview at his office here. "We only have one hospital on the island, and it's not terribly trusted. People have to know they can trust us when they send us information.

"It's already had a chilling effect. People just stop talking to you. The whole issue is very widely known, and we've gotten more of a response to this issue than any other in the 10 years of The Grapevine.

"It's not just The Washington Post that fights these kinds of issues," Kelly continued. "But we're not a big operation. We can't put together enough money to mount a massive legal defense." The Grapevine has a circulation of about 5,000.

Kelly is 51, a bearded author who came to the island 15 years ago to write. After completing a second book, he "needed something to do [illegible] and started a weekly newspaper to compete with The Vineyard Gazette, an island institution, established in [illegible]

"We're not much in the [illegible] tabloid, put out by a staff of eight from offices atop a second-hand store, "but it's a viable operation that we feel presents the year-round [illegible] perspective."

Tomassian conceded in an interview that he could get the same information Kelly has by taking depositions from hospital employees. But he says that would be too costly and time-consuming.

"The court has specific rules on how discovery shall take place. ...The court also has the power to not make the discovery process too burdensome to either party," he said. "If Mr. Kelly is successful, what it does is permit Mr. Kelly to determine — and not the court — how the discovery shall take place."

Massachusetts is one of about 25 states which have no "shield law" to help protect the confidentiality of a reporter's sources. Several recent court cases have gone against journalists.

"I don't understand what his claims are," Tomassian said. "He has no privilege in Massachusetts. He claims First Amendment rights and cited the federal constitution and state constitution. But he has no rights. It's pure and simple — there are no gray areas."

One of Kelly's lawyers, James Gillis Jr., acknowledged that state law offers no legal protection to reporters, but said "federal court decisions have been much more liberal in affording some constitutional protection under the First Amendment. We plan to try to get the case transferred to the federal court as soon as possible and argue it on First Amendment issues."

[illegible] said he just tries to put out his paper each week and forget about the legal problem. Asked about the prospect of winding up in jail, he said, "I think about it on occasion — but as little as possible."

Canadians Write Constitution

CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

Ten Canadian "Founding Fathers" — Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and nine of the 10 provincial premiers — have finally patched together an agreement to establish an all-Canadian constitution.

But the process may give a boost to those in Quebec who want to shrink the nation by taking the French-speaking province out of the 114-year-old Canadian confederation.

Rene Levesque, Quebec's separatist leader, was the only premier to reject the accord reached Thursday, on the fourth day of a conference in Ottawa, after more than a year of wrangling between the federal and provincial governments.

The agreement calls for the British Parliament to surrender control of the colonial-era constitution after first inserting a charter of rights and a formula for ratifying future amendments.

The fiery Levesque, speaking in French on national television as the conference closed, accused his fellow French-Canadian and longtime political foe Trudeau of having "deliberately chosen to obtain the consent of the English-speaking provinces as a way to reduce the rights of Quebecers."

In an ominous statement to reporters later, he said the effect of a constitutional deal without Quebec's support "could be incalculable" for all of Canada.

Levesque denounced the charter of rights as an attack on provincial autonomy. Its guarantee of minority-language education, for example, would nullify a Quebec law restricting English-language education. He also opposes the charter's guarantee that Canadians can seek work anywhere in the country, a provision that would override provincial laws limiting the hiring of outsiders.

Carla Jones Chosen To Be In Chorale

Letters To The Editor

To The Daily News:

On behalf of the Youth Coop for Christ, the United Methodist Youth, and the world's children, I would like to express our most heart-felt thanks to the residents of Snyder for their generous support of our recent "trick-or-treat" and party to benefit UNICEF.

With the help of the community, we were able to forward a check in the amount of $1,050.79 to the U. S. Committee for UNICEF. The money we raised will enable UNICEF to expand its assistance to suffering children in the countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America.

For those who missed our campaign and would like to add their contribution to the community total, please send your donation, as a check or money order payable to the U. S. Committee for UNICEF, to Mark Gaskill in care of First United Methodist Church, 2700 College Ave., Snyder 79549.

Every contribution to UNICEF helps where it is needed most in the developing world. Anyone in the community wishing to have more information on UNICEF's work for children is invited to write me.

Once again, Snyder, on behalf of UNICEF volunteers and the children helped by UNICEF, thank you!

Dear Abby

Facts Will Serve Child Better Than Fiction

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: How does one explain "Daddy" to a 3-year-old child who has never known her father and in all probability never will?

She's a bright, perceptive, warm, loving child, and although she has never actually asked, "Where is my daddy?" the time is near when we must explain this to her.

We are her grandparents and are raising her. Her mother (our eldest — age 23) is unable to provide a stable home for her at this time due to an alcohol-drug problem that she is attempting to resolve through counseling and A.A. (She is also gay.)

Our grandchild talks to her mother on the phone once a week and sees her about once a month. Her "daddy" is a man our daughter knew casually and never married. He doesn't know about the child and our daughter doesn't want him to know. She says she never wants to see him again, doesn't know where he is and probably couldn't locate him if she tried.

Abby, we love this child dearly, but need to know what to tell her. Can you suggest an explanation that would be appropriate for a 3-year-old?

MISSOURI GRANDPARENTS

DEAR GRANDPARENTS: Stick to the truth, as cruel as it may seem. Inasmuch as the child's father doesn't even know she exists, and the child's mother has no intentions of locating him, simply tell her that you don't know where her father is. (None of this, "Daddy is far away and is coming back one day.") Do not say that he is "dead," because he may surface one day.

As the child grows older she can be told that her parents were not married. It will be easier for her in the long run if she grows up knowing the facts. She may feel cheated, but she will never feel deceived.

DEAR ABBY: I suppose this will sound like a dumb (or made-up) letter coming from a 23-year-old married woman, but it is a very real problem, and if I asked other people they would think I was crazy.

I'm happily married to a very sweet guy (he's 27) who I thought I knew well, but I got the surprise of my life on our honeymoon. This 6-footer is afraid of the dark! When he goes to sleep at night he has to have a light on in the bathroom with the door half open so he won't be in total darkness. Abby, I can't sleep with the room half lighted, but he can't sleep if it's dark.

Don't suggest separate bedrooms. I enjoy cuddling and falling asleep in his arms. Can you, or any of your readers, come up with a solution? Don't use my right name. He'd never live it down.

SLEEPY TIME GAL

DEAR SLEEPY: You have two choices: Eye shades for you, or behavior modification for him. The latter will mean some sessions with a therapist who will try to condition your man to tolerate darkness slowly by degrees.

DEAR ABBY: Is it correct to be addressed "Mary Jones" (not my real name) now that I am a widow?

I do not know if etiquette has changed, but it has really upset me! I want to be addressed as "Mrs. Richard Jones," but how can I tactfully let my friends, lawyer, banks, etc., know this without offending them?

I think it is a shame for people to drop the "Mrs." After all, I was a very happy "Mrs." for 49 years, so why do friends and other people immediately address my mail to "Mary Jones"? I am not a divorcee, and I do not want to forget that I was ever married. And I also dislike being addressed as "Mrs. Mary Jones." Please print your answer, as I am sure there are lots of people who need to learn this.

MRS. RICHARD JONES

DEAR MRS. JONES: You are Mrs. Richard Jones as long as you live — unless you marry again. And please do not hesitate to correct those who address you incorrectly.

Doesn't Want Mascot Nearby

NANAIMO, British Columbia (AP) — Gordon Santics wants a new home for Canada's unofficial national mascot, the beaver — anywhere but near him.

Santics said a beaver family near his Vancouver Island home has chomped down an apple tree, a couple of rows of raspberry canes and a willow tree.

With recent heavy rains and the buildup of beaver dams, Santics says nearby Long Lake has risen nearly two feet.

He's even written an advertisement to publicize the problem:

"Beaver family wishing to relocate. Capable of raising lakes by 24 inches in a mere overnight job. Loves apple trees, weeping willow, most ornamental trees and raspberry canes. Eliminates fall pruning and selective logging entirely. Interested countries or out-of-province parties please contact Gordon Santics."

He claims the problem has worsened in the past two years because of residential development around the lake.

Editor May Go To Jail...

Refuses To Disclose Sources

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass. (AP) — It started with a ... scribbled on a postcard: "Why don't you check the mess in the hospital?"

The postcard was sent to Gerald Kelly, editor of The Grapevine, a small weekly newspaper in this island community off Cape Cod. He checked out the "mess" at Martha's Vineyard Hospital and soon found himself in the middle of a court battle over safeguarding a reporter's sources — his own.

Kelly's year-long investigation centered on the appointment of Edward Hanify Jr. as chief administrator of the hospital in September 1979.

After checking with several sources and looking into the records at Western Massachusetts Hospital in Westfield, where Hanify once worked, Kelly wrote a series of articles questioning whether the 38-year-old Hanify had all of the qualifications listed on his resume.

The Grapevine stories, based on information from unnamed sources, led to Hanify's dismissal from his $40,000-a-year hospital job in September 1980.

Hanify pleaded no contest to a charge of "falsely claiming in writing" to have a masters degree from the University of Massachusetts. His attorney, Martin Tomassian Jr., however, insists that his client did not intentionally falsify his resume, but that UMass made clerical errors in Hanify's transcript.

Hanify fired back with a $1 million damage suit against four doctors at the hospital, accusing them of libel, slander, interference with an employment contract, interference with future employment and invasion of privacy.

His major witness: a most reluctant Gerald Kelly.

Tomassian submitted a 20-page list of questions for Kelly to answer and also ... all records, notes, letters, resumes, postcards, original documents and correspondence regarding the stories to a pretrial hearing.

When Kelly refused to comply, Superior Court Judge Eileen Griffin ruled last month that he must cooperate — or face contempt of court proceedings and a jail sentence.

Tomassian gave Kelly a final chance Thursday, but the editor again refused to answer questions about his sources, citing a constitutional guarantee of freedom of the press.

Tomassian said Kelly has no such guarantee. He predicted he would succeed in obtaining a contempt citation in Superior Court against Kelly.

"A hospital is a very vital thing to a community," Kelly said in an interview at his office here. "We only have one hospital on the island, and it's not terribly trusted. People have to know they can trust us when they send us information.

"It's already had a chilling effect. People just stop talking to you. The whole issue is very widely known, and we've gotten more of a response to this issue than any other in the 10 years of The Grapevine.

"It's not just The Washington Post that fights these kinds of issues," Kelly continued. "But we're not a big operation. We can't put together enough money to mount a massive legal defense." The Grapevine has a circulation of about 5,000.

Kelly is 51, a bearded author who came to the island 15 years ago to write. After completing a second book, he "needed something to do to stay here" and started a weekly newspaper to compete with The Vineyard Gazette, an island institution established in ...

"We're not much in the black," Kelly said of his tabloid, put out by a staff of eight from offices atop a second-hand store, "but it's a viable operation that we feel presents the year-round islander's perspective."

Tomassian conceded in an interview that he could get the same information Kelly has by taking depositions from hospital employees. But he says that would be too costly and time-consuming.

"The court has specific rules on how discovery shall take place. ...The court also has the power to not make the discovery process too burdensome to either party," he said. "If Mr. Kelly is successful, what it does is permit Mr. Kelly to determine — and not the court — how the discovery shall take place."

Massachusetts is one of about 25 states which have no "shield law" to help protect the confidentiality of a reporter's sources. Several recent court cases have gone against journalists.

"I don't understand what his claims are," Tomassian said. "He has no privilege in Massachusetts. He claims First Amendment rights and cited the federal constitution and state constitution. But but he has no rights. It's pure and simple — there are no gray areas."

One of Kelly's lawyers, James Gillis Jr., acknowledged that state law offers no legal protection to reporters, but said "federal court decisions have been much more liberal in affording some constitutional protection under the First Amendment. We plan to try to get the case transferred to the federal court as soon as possible and argue it on First Amendment issues."

Kelly said he just tries to put out his paper each week and forget about the legal problem. Asked about the prospect of winding up in jail, he said, "I think about it on occasion — but as little as possible."

Canadians Write Constitution

CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

Ten Canadian "Founding Fathers". — Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and nine of the 10 provincial premiers — have finally patched together an agreement to establish an all-Canadian constitution.

But the process may give a boost to those in Quebec who want to shrink the nation by taking the French-speaking province out of the 114-year-old Canadian confederation.

Rene Levesque, Quebec's separatist leader, was the only premier to reject the accord reached Thursday, on the fourth day of a conference in Ottawa, after more than a year of wrangling between the federal and provincial governments.

The agreement calls for the British Parliament to surrender control of the colonial-era constitution after first inserting a charter of rights and a formula for ratifying future amendments.

The fiery Levesque, speaking in French on national television as the conference closed, accused his fellow French-Canadian and longtime political foe Trudeau of having "deliberately chosen to obtain the consent of the English-speaking provinces as a way to reduce the rights of Quebecers."

In an ominous statement to reporters later, he said the effect of a constitutional deal without Quebec's support "could be incalculable" for all of Canada.

Levesque denounced the charter of rights as an attack on provincial autonomy. Its guarantee of minority-language education, for example, would nullify a Quebec law restricting English-language education. He also opposes the charter's guarantee that Canadians can seek work anywhere in the country, a provision that would override provincial laws limiting the hiring of outsiders.

Letters To The Editor

To The Daily News:

On behalf of the Youth Coop for Christ, the United Methodist Youth, and the world's children, I would like to express our most heart-felt thanks to the residents of Snyder for their generous support of our recent "trick-or-treat" and party to benefit UNICEF.

With the help of the community, we were able to forward a check in the amount of $1,050.79 to the U. S. Committee for UNICEF. The money we raised will enable UNICEF to expand its assistance to suffering children in the countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America.

For those who missed our campaign and would like to add their contribution to the community total, please send your donation, as a check or money order payable to the U. S. Committee for UNICEF, to Mark Gaskill in care of First United Methodist Church, 2700 College Ave., Snyder 79549.

Every contribution to UNICEF helps where it is needed most in the developing world. Anyone in the community wishing to have more information on UNICEF's work for children is invited to write me.

Once again, Snyder, on behalf of UNICEF volunteers and the children helped by UNICEF, thank you!

Snyder Claims District Volleyball Top Spot

ANDREWS -- Coach Joyce Elrod didn't exactly come out and say it, but last night's District 2-4A volleyball championship victory over Monahans here was almost predetermined.

"There wasn't a kid who went out on that court that felt we weren't going to win it," said Elrod. Assistant Patty (assistant coach Patty Grimmett) before the game, 'We're going to win this one'."

The teams had traded home victories earlier in the season, but the playoff was really no contest as Snyder's Tigers floored the Loboettes 15-13 and 15-2 to put the lid on their sixth straight district volleyball championship. And though Elrod didn't mention it, experience under pressure may well have been the key.

"I think a lot of it (the win) was mental," noted the coach. "Our girls knew this was for the district championship. They weren't trying to beat Monahans because it was Monahans, they we're going after the championship. I think that had a lot to do with it. We were more relaxed and confident."

As 2-4A champs, the Tigers will represent the district in the Nov. 14 Region I Tournament, to be held at Lubbock High Gym in Lubbock. Other district champions from the region were unknown this morning, but a draw will be held next Tuesday to determine pairings for the event.

Monahans gave the Tigers a tough battle in the first game last night as the 15-13 score indicates. Snyder never trailed, however, and led by 7-3 at one point and 11-7 at another. The Loboettes' only lead in the two-game match came with the first point of the second game, 1-0. Snyder tied it quickly, however, and raced out to a 5-1 advantage before Monahans could get another point - its final of the match.

Becky Harrell served for 9 points, Toni Elrod for 6, Kathy Northcott, Sabrina Robinson and Shana Koonsman for 4 each and Sherri Rich for 3.

"That (points on serves) pretty much tells the individual playing in the game," said Coach Elrod. "All the girls played a great ballgame. They really didn't do anything wrong. Our serving was good and our defense was tremendous."

"Monahans has some power hitters and they were hitting the ball down, but our kids just kept picking it up and getting it back over."

Elrod praised every player on the team, Harrell for her "outstanding play on the front and back line", Robinson for front line, Northcott for "an excellent hitting game", Rich for a great hitting game and defense, Koonsman for "great defense", and Toni Elrod for "a fantastic job setting and running our offense". She added, "That was probably the best game Shana has played for us. She played some of the smartest offensive ball I've had the opportunity to coach."

Tickets for the Region I Tournament will be $2 for adults and $1 for students. First-round games for Class 4A will be held at 10:15 and 11:30 a.m. Finals are scheduled for 3:15 p.m.

Snipes Will Get Chance

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Larry Holmes had just predicted he would knock out Renaldo Snipes in defense of the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship tonight when a member of Snipes' camp shouted, "Promises, promises."

Holmes turned and faced the heckler, then said, "Don't worry about it, I keep mine."

The champion is such a strong favorite so there is no betting line on the fight.

The 25-year-old Snipes has won all 22 of his pro fights, 11 by knockout, but he was a controversial winner of a split decision after being knocked down twice in his last bout against Gerrie Coetzee Aug. 9. And he is at big disadvantages in both general experience and experience in a big fights to Holmes, who was 32 Tuesday.

During the official weigh-in Thursday - Holmes, 6-foot-3 weighed 213¼ and the 6-2 Snipes 215¾ - the fighters exchanged jibes, leading one bystander to remark that he hoped the fight had as much action.

Because Holmes, who is getting $1.1 million, could blow a $10 million payday against top-ranked Gerry Cooney in March by falling victim to a major upset, promoter Don King has billed the fight as "Imminent Danger."

That piece of hype also stems from the fact that Jersey Joe Walcott, a 6-1 underdog making his fifth bid for the title, knocked out Ezzard Charles in the seventh round at old Forbes Field here July 18, 1951.

Pittsburgh's first heavyweight championship fight since the Walcott-Charles bout will be held in the 17,000-seat Civic Arena. A spokesman for the Civic Arena Corporation said he hoped for a crowd of at least 12,000. A crowd of 13,000 reportedly was needed for the arena to break even. Tickets were scaled from $200 down to $20.

Holmes' 11th defense of the title he won from Ken Norton on a split decision June 9, 1978, was to be televised live by ABC, as was a 10-round bout featuring Michael "Dynamite" Dokes. The telecast was scheduled for 8 p.m. to 10 p.m., CST.

Ira Hosts Fellowship

IRA—The Ira Booster Club has scheduled an after-game fellowship following tonight's football game between the Ira Bulldogs and Trent.

It will be the last football game of the season, and all backers of the Bulldogs are invited to attend the event, which will be held in the school cafeteria.

At 8 O'clock Tonight...

Tigers Test Loboes For Sixth Time

MONAHANS -- Snyder and Monahans meet on the gridiron tonight for only the eighth time as each school begins to wind down the 1981 season.

Snyder owns the series by a scant 5-3 margin. The teams first played in 1951 when Snyder took the Loboes 6-0.

Monahans plays the host role tonight, bringing in an impressive 7-1 victory to Lobo Stadium. Andrews, in a 21-14 victory, was the only team to knock off the District 2-4A pre-season favorite. Snyder is 1-7 for the campaign, with its lone victory coming against Lamesa.

Both teams conclude their regular schedules next Friday; Snyder entertains Fort Stockton while Monahans travels to San Angelo Lake View.

The Loboes, boasting the No. 1 passer and punter, and the No. 2 rusher and receiver, are heavily favored in the contest, which is scheduled for an 8 o'clock start. Tickets are $4 for adults and $2 for students at the gate.

Monahans ranks third in the district in total offense, averaging 341.3 yards per outing. Snyder ranks seventh with a 211.4 output.

Defensively, the Loboes rank fifth, allowing 233.7 yards; Snyder ranks eighth, allowing 290.5 yards.

The Loboes are led on the ground by 6-4, 220 junior Ricky Boysaw, who eclipsed the 1,000-yard mark last weekend and is the district's third leading scorer with 60 points. Monte McGuire is the loop's top passer, yardage-wise, with 1,227 yards and 12 TDs. He's also the top percentage passer with a 71 of 128 figure and only five interceptions.

Another key for the hosts is slot (wingback) Merv Scurlark, who is the team's primary breakaway threat on the run or pass.

Snyder relies heavily on the running of senior fullback Raymond Jeffrey, who as 696 yards and four touchdowns on the season. The QB is junior Brent Beck. His figures in the passing category are 30 of 76 for 397 yards, two touchdowns and nine interceptions.

Texas Heads For Astrodome

by The Associated Press

The fifth-ranked and preseason favorite Texas Longhorns take their Cotton Bowl hopes to Houston Saturday night where a dream has turned to a nightmare the Astrodome.

The Longhorns were rated a field goal favorite over the Cougars who are 1-4-4 against Southwest Conference foes on their home turf.

Houston has never lost to more than one SWC foe in the Astrodome in one season. The Cougars have already been beaten at home by SMU this year.

Texas is 3-1, a half game behind SMU in the SWC race. The Cougars are 3-2 and tied for third place with Arkansas, Texas A&M, and defending SWC champion Baylor.

The 10th ranked Mustangs (4-1) were 24-point favorites over Rice on homecoming in Texas Stadium in a day game.

Baylor was an eight-point underdog to Arkansas in a night game at Little Rock.

In the only other SWC game, Texas Tech, 0-5 and still trying to get Coach Jerry Moore his first SWC win, was a one-point pick over crippled Texas Christian, 1-4, in Lubbock.

Texas has beaten Houston the last two years.

"There's not much you can say about them that hasn't already been said simply the best group of athletes from one end of the line of scrimmage to the other," said Houston Coach Bill Yeoman.

"I hear the NFL scouts say they could spend a week just looking at the Texas senior group alone."

Yeoman said the Cougars must quit fumbling to have a chance.

"Our kids have to learn that it is a thousand times more dangerous on our side of the 50-yard line," he said. "Last week we gave TCU two scores by fumbling on our end.

"Show me a mistake free football team and I will show you a winning team everytime."

Yeoman said he is having trouble figuring out the wild, wild SWC race.

"Week after week it gets even more complicated," said Yeoman. "I guess we can help mess it up even more Saturday night...or make it a lot simpler."

Ranger Invades Duster Domain

Coach Joe Cushing's Western Texas Dusters go hunting for their second season win here tonight as they welcome Ranger Junior College into Snyder High School Gym at 6.

The Dusters opened the season Monday with a 67-61 victory over Cisco Junior College.

Tonight's contest is the last time the Dusters will be at home until Dec. 30 when Howard Payne comes to visit. Meanwhile, the "Mean Green" will play at Weatherford and at Ranger, and compete in tournaments at Cisco and Big Spring.

"I watched Ranger scrimmage Howard (Big Spring) and they are improved over last year," said Cushing. "It should be a good test for us Friday."

WTC's Westerners played their second game of the season Friday, defeating McMurry JV 92-84 in Abilene. That victory, which left the team 2-0 for the campaign, began a four-game road stint which takes the team to Cisco, Dallas and Oklahoma City before it returns here Nov. 17 to host Ranger.

Texas Christian Placed On Light Probation

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - The National Collegiate Athletic Association has placed Texas Christian University on one year's probation for an alleged basketball recruiting violation, but the school's chancellor terms the evidence "circumstantial."

Chancellor William Tucker said his investigation of the allegations was "inconclusive" and that he found the evidence to be "circumstantial and not incontestable."

The NCAA infractions committee Thursday imposed the one year's probation without sanctions after it concluded several of its rules were violated in the spring of 1979, Tucker said.

"I want to emphasize that the allegations leading to the announcement were made by one unhappy player who failed to make his grades at TCU and left campus almost three years ago," he said.

Although the university would not name the player, The Fort Worth Star-Telegram identified him as Darrell Lovett. Lovett told the newspaper Wednesday night that assistant basketball coach Charles Fenske broke the rules when he recruited him and again when he enrolled at the university.

Fenske denied all charges Thursday.

Tucker said he reluctantly took action against Fenske after being asked to by the NCAA infractions committee. Fenske will not be allowed to recruit off campus and will have his salary frozen during the year of probation, he said.

The NCAA infractions committee took into account TCU's unblemished record as an NCAA member the past 45 years. Tucker said. The no-sanction penalty - considered a slight slap on the wrist - does not prevent TCU from playing on television or in post-season tournaments.

Tucker said that although the evidence does not prove Fenske's guilt, he is taking steps to insure that the transfer of student athletes to the university will be monitored more closely.
